Looking cool

Prices up .2 percent, government reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, reflecting an across-the-board moderation, inched up 0.2 percent last month, the government reported today, buttressing analysts' predictions that 1985 will be a fourth straight year of modest inflation.

Gasoline prices were off a sharp 1.4 percent, their steepest decline in six months. Since March 1981, those prices have fallen 15.2 percent.

Food prices rose just 0.2 percent, despite some late-month increasess in fresh fruit and vegetable prices stemming from the Florida freeze, which promises to have a more pronounced effect on February's price activity.

The January overall figure compared to a revised 0.3 percent rise in December and a 0.2 percent gain in November.

Inflation for all of 1984 was 4 percent, a slight deterioration from the 3.8 percent performance of 1983 and the culmination of the lowest three-year inflation rate since the late 1960s.

With the exception of the "other goods and services" category, which was up 0.9 percent, all major components of the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index were either unchanged or showed only modest gains last month. A 2.2 percent jump in tobacco prices was largely responsible for the 0.9 percent increase.

Detailing January's price activity, the department reported these seasonally adjusted changes:

—The 3.2 percent increase in fresh fruit and vegetables prices was offset a 13.6 percent drop in egg prices. Beef and veal prices also were off. Prices for pork, poultry and fish rose for a second straight month, however.

The costs of meals eaten outside the home and of alcoholic beverages were unchanged.

Overall, the 0.2 percent food price gain was half the 0.4 percent gain in December.

—Housing costs rose 0.1 percent, following a 0.2 percent gain in December. Prices rose 0.2 percent for homeowners and 0.4 percent for renters last month.

—Energy prices overall declined for the second month running, down 0.3 percent. Fuel oil prices fell 2.9 percent and were 15.4 percent under their peak of April 1981. Prices for natural gas and electricity, however, rose 0.2 percent and 0.5 percent respectively.

—Overall transportation costs rose 0.3 percent. New cars prices rose 0.3 percent while used car prices rose 1.8 percent.

—Medical care costs rose just 0.3 percent. Such costs are up 5.9 percent for the year.

—Clothing prices held steady.

—Entertainment costs were up 0.3 percent.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

If last month's 0.2 percent increase held for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 2.3 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

In all, the Consumer Price Index stood at 316.1 in January, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $31.61 last month.

A companion index, the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, also rose 0.2 percent last month and for the last 12 months showed an increase of 3.3 percent. The annual change in this index is used to figure cost-of-living increases in many wage contracts.

The calculations released today follow two earlier reports of good inflation news.

The Labor Department reported in mid-month that prices at the wholesale level held flat in Juanary for the third time in five months.

Last week, the government reported that an inflation index tied to the gross national product rose 3.8 percent last year, up slightly from an earlier calculation, but still matching the 1983 rate.

Polish diplomat expelled from U.S. in retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angered by the expulsion of an American diplomat from Poland, the Reagan administration is retaliating by expelling a Polish diplomat and warning the incident will cool relations between the two nations.

That message was conveyed late Monday to the Polish charge d'affairs, Zdzislaw Ludwiczak, who was summoned to the State Department and informed that the Polish military attache, Col. Zygmunt Szymanski, had been declared persona non grata and ordered to leave.

It followed by just hours Poland's expulsion of a U.S. military attache, Col. Frederick Myer, who was accused of taking photographs in a military zone.

"It's definitely reciprocity because they kicked our guy out on baseless charges," said a U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified. "So we're kicking their guy out. They treated our guy abysmally."

Meanwhile, the State Department warned that "any repetition of such an outrageous action (will) have an even more serious impact on our relations."

White, Nigh warn tax simplification plan would shrink U.S. oil reserves

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. Mark White and Oklahoma Gov. George P. Nigh warned Monday that the Treasury Department's "tax simplification" plan would cause U.S. oil reserves to shrink, threatening the nation's economy.

The governors, here for the National Governors' Association Conference, said the suggestion that the federal government might end favorable tax treatment for oil producers already has cut production as investors take their money out of the oil business.

Middle East oil producing and exporting countries will raise prices just as soon as they think they can get away with it, White said.

Their opportunity will come when U.S. reserves dwindle and motorists are standing in line at service stations, as they did in 1973 when OPEC slapped an embargo on oil shipments.

Nigh said American dependence on foreign oil is similar to "chemical dependencies" of drug addicts. He cautioned that oil shortages could make the president's military build-up meaningless. "What do you think airplanes fly on?" he asked.

White answered: "Not cord wood."

Midlanders favor bond election for new library, survey indicates

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

More Midlanders than not would be willing to "suffer" through a bond election to support a new Midland County Public Library, Clara Usrey, chairman of the library's advisory board, told the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday.

Marketing consultant Guy McCrary's Bridgewater Report on the library indicated that 58 percent of 920 Midlanders contacted in a scientifically conducted random survey would vote for a new library, Ms. Usrey said.

The commissioners had planned to build a new library in a financial arrangement drafted by The First National Bank of Midland in 1981 at peak of the oil boom. But the boom faded, the bank suspended its proposal in the spring of 1983 and then collapsed on Oct. 14, 1983. Visions of a new library faded.

And the county commissioners decided to make do with the existing downtown library, which was built in the 1950s.

But Commissioner Durward Wright cited a publication which suggested that counties may have to "return to basics" and "get out of the library business" due to the rising costs of running county governments. Counties may be forced to limit their affairs to the constitutionally mandated duties of providing "courts, jails and tending to the roads," Wright said in citing the article.

Director of MidTran resigns

From Staff Reports

MidTran Director Doris Velasquez resigned effective Monday, and the Midland City Council today was considering a transit system from Fort Worth to operate the city-owned transportation system.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said Mrs. Velasquez turned in her resignation Friday and "left yesterday" and gave "personal reasons" for leaving, he said.

"We can hire someone to fill the position," McGregor said, "but we saw this as an opportunity to bring in McDonald Transit, which manages several transit systems in the state, and it's something that has been talked about in the past."

The City Council is considering hiring McDonald Transit on a 90-day basis "to give us time to evaluate future federal subsidies."

Mrs. Velasquez had been an employee of MidTran for about five years, and was promoted to director about two years ago. The bus system was launched in 1980.

Bail bondsmen to be regulated by board

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland County Bail Bond Board to regulate bail bondsmen, to rid the county of "fly-by-night" bail-bond operators, and to help "restore the people's confidence" in the bail-bonding system is to be organized here, according to District Attorney Al Schorre.

"This bail-bond board has seemed to work successfully in other counties," Schorre said Monday. "The system that we have had has been very unstructured."

He noted that the board would ensure that the county "gets its money" if a bond is forfeited after a defendant fails to show up for court.

"It's a good program," Schorre said. "I think it will help restore the people's confidence in the bonding system...(and) in the criminal-justice system."

The board would screen bondsmen and would ascertain their financial responsibility and means to pay off forfeitures. A bondsman, for example, would deposit with the county treasurer his basic bond money or the deed of trust to an unencumbered piece of property to guarantee the bonds. Schorre noted that Midland County lost an estimated $200,000 last year by failing to collect on forfeited bonds.

"THAT'S NOT TO SAY they threw $200,000 away," he said. "I'm not saying they threw it in the garbage can."

The board is to be organized at 9 a.m. Friday, March 8, in the Midland County Courthouse.

On the board would be the district attorney, the sheriff, the county judge or a county commissioner, a state district judge, a justice of the peace, the county court-at-law judge and a bondsman.

"It's a very cost-effective system," Schorre said.

"I definitely think it's for the good of all," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

Louisiana's long-reigning senator won't run again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell Long, heir to a Louisiana political dynasty and the Senate's second-ranking member, says he announced his decision not to seek a seventh full term simply because it was time to retire and give would-be successors plenty of time to fight for his seat in 1986.

Long, 66, who served as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee for 15 years and is still its ranking Democratic member, said Monday during a hastily called news conference that he had made his surprise decision to retire with mixed emotions.

"The Senate's been been my life for 36 years and I love this body," Long told reporters. "But after 36 years here, I've decided that that is enough."

"At some point I think if the good Lord permits you to live a long life and if the people are good to you, a senator ought to consider at what point he ought to retire — and that's my decision," Long said.

"I am making this statement at this time so that anyone interested in running for the job will have ample time to consider it and to raise funds to conduct a campaign," he said.

But the decision caught most senators unaware and unprepared.

"It comes as a genuine shock and disappointment," said Long's Louisiana colleague, fellow Democrat Bennett Johnston.

"He has been one of the greatest senators of this century. He will leave office at the height of his capabilities and influence and his absence will leave a huge void which will be difficult to fill," Johnston said in a statement.

Johnston aide Claire Miller said Johnston had no advance notice of Long's plans and was taken completely by surprise.

Shortly before making his announcment, Long met privately with Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, according to Byrd aide Linda Peek. Byrd was apparently one of the few Long colleagues to get even that much advance notice.

"I do not know what I shall do when I leave the Senate, either in the short run or the long run," Long told reporters.

"But one thing I know for sure," he said. "My interest in this government and people will continue. So long as I live, I shall take an interest in public affairs and do my bit to sustain the government of this, the greatest free nation in history."

Long was just one day short of his 30th birthday — the legal minimum for serving as a senator — when Louisiana voters first sent him to Washington in 1948 to fill an unexpired term, which began when he was of legal age to serve.

Now, after seven election victories, only Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who was first elected in 1947, outranks him in seniority.

Long's original appeal lay in the political magic of his last name, not his experience.

His father, Huey P. Long, "the Kingfish," became Louisiana's governor in 1928, and U.S. senator three years later, building an enduring emotional hold on the state and a claim to national political attention before his assassination in the state capitol at Baton Rouge in 1935 at age 42.

Rose O'Connell Long was appointed to serve out her husband's term, making their son the only person ever preceded in the Senate by both his father and mother.

Members of the Long family have been elected to high political office in Louisiana ever since and the senator won an uninterrupted string of seven elections, three times in uncontested races.

Long had his toughest re-election battle in 1980, winning by 59 percent of the vote — his lowest margin by far. His challenger claimed Long had lost touch with the state and ignored the wishes of his constituents by voting to ratify the Panama Canal treaties.

In the Senate, Long built a reputation as a strong committee chairman, wielding great influence on the federal tax code which one colleague says he knows "as well as the Pope knows the Lord's Prayer."

Long is known to have been frustrated by the election upset that gave Republicans control of the Senate in 1980 and cost him his chairmanship.

In 1983, as he presided over a dinner in which friends chipped in $1 million to help Democrats regain control of the Senate, Long made his ambitions clear.

"I'm running for chairman of the Senate Finance Committee," he said then. But the Republicans retained control of the Senate, leaving Long as the committee's ranking minority member.

Long probably knows more about Senate than anybody

WASHINGTON (AP) — Probably nobody in the Senate knows more about tax law than Russell B. Long, the canny, conservative senator from Louisiana. Nobody knows more about the Senate and how it works, either.

It is said that Long, 66, who announced Monday that he will retire in 1986, at the end of his seventh term, is one of the few senators who can change the outcome of a vote with arguments.

And he probably has no peer in keeping an issue from coming to a vote, if he's of a mind to.

One thing is sure. Long can be a stickler for accuracy.

Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee for 15 years, noted in 1979 that President Jimmy Carter had quoted him as saying Congress would pass a windfall tax on excess oil profits with which Carter would be happy.

"Now there's a shade of difference," said Long. "I said 'pleased,' I didn't say 'happy.' Next thing I know they'll say 'proud to sign.' I didn't say that. I said we'd give him a bill he'd be pleased to sign."

Another time a gossip columnist wrote that on a flight from New Orleans to Washington, Long was seen removing his shoes and his baggy, fuzzy socks and putting on a silky pair.

Wrong, said Long. He always wears two pairs of socks when he comes north. "I'm a Southern boy from the tropics," he said. "But that's nothing. Grandpa Long always wore nine pairs of socks."

In his 36 years in the Senate, he compiled a conservative record. He voted for President Reagan's tax cuts, his budget, his balanced budget amendment, aid to El Salvador, the sale of AWACs planes to Saudi Arabia, to ban abortion and to ban court-ordered busing.

Long is the only senator who was preceded to that chamber by both parents.

His father, the legendary Huey "Kingfish" Long, was assassinated in 1935, three years after being elected to the Senate; his mother, Rose McConnell Long, served out the rest of her husband's term.

Russell Long said his father was the greatest man he ever knew and he liked to think of himself as a populist like his father. But there was a profound difference.

Huey Long wanted to use taxes to redistribute wealth; he argued no family should be allowed to own more than $5 million.

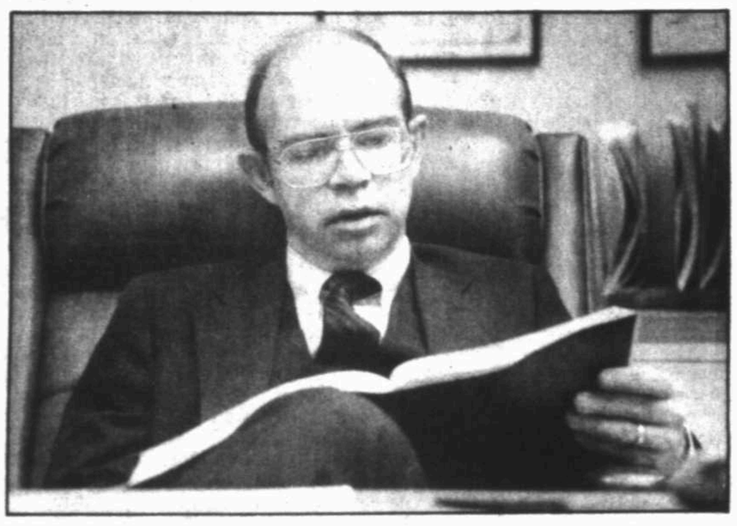

Russell Long is a millionaire from his trust fund and oil royalties, and his allegiance has been to oil interests.

"He wanted to tax it away from those who had it," Long has said of his father. "I wouldn't keep anybody rich from getting richer."

When Long leaves the Senate, a political dynasty of Longs will end. His uncle, George, served in the House from 1953 to 1958. Another uncle, Earl, was governor of Louisiana three times. A cousin, Gillis Long, was an influential member of the House for 22 years. He died Jan. 20.

Russell Long couldn't follow his parents into the Senate immediately; he was too young. But in 1948, a day before reaching a senator's minimum age of 30, he was elected to the Senate with a 10,000-vote margin.

That was about as close as anybody ever got to beating him. Only one current senator, John C. Stennis of Mississippi, has served longer — by a year.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre says creation of a Bail Bond Board here will help "restore the people's confidence" in the bail-bonding and criminal-justice systems.

BOARD

"It regulates the bail-bond system," noted bondsman Joe W. Carr, a former Midland detective. He was joined by bondsmen Ed Brown and Thomas Epperson in supporting creation of the board here.

"I'm pleased with the proposal," Epperson said. "I'm not pleased with the current effectiveness" of the system. "There are no checks and balances." He said some people are tempted to get into the business "for purely personal gain."

Epperson, co-owner of M&M Bail Bonding Service, said he has detected some "dissension among the group" of Midland bondsmen "rather than their working together." He said he would view the board as "a tool to bring them together" in a spirit of harmony.

CURRENTLY, 14 Midland and Odessa bail bondsmen are "approved" by the sheriff to write bonds on defendants held in the Midland County Jail, said Sheriff Gary Painter.

"I think it's a great deal," he said of the board, which is required by law for any county of 110,000 or more people and is optional in other counties. "It's a way of self-regulation by the bondsmen" and ensures that they "abide by the law and follow the rules and regulations set forth by the board."

Schorre noted that under the board's regulations, a bondsman may write any number of bonds for up to 10 times the amount of bond money he has on deposit with the treasurer. However, any single bond may not exceed the amount on deposit.

"They're playing the odds," Schorre said. "They may have some forfeitures, but they are not going to have 100 percent bond jumps — no shows."

A bondsman, for example, who writes bonds on $5,000 may write any number of bonds totaling up to $50,000. "They can't write any one bond for more than $5,000," Schorre said. An individual may post his own bond or a judge may set a defendant free on a personal recognizance bond — a promise to show up for court.

Under the present system, there is no limit on the total amount of bonds which a bondsman may write. He may write $1 million in bonds and only have $5,000 to guarantee his obligation.

"IT REALLY WORKS out to everybody's benefit, including the bondsmen," said Schorre.

The system does tend to "knock out the competition," especially the "fly-by-nighters," he said, "and encourages bondsmen to be financially responsible." At the same time, the system is "non-discriminatory." It requires that a prospective bondsman pass three criteria: have no felony convictions, have committed no crimes involving moral turpitude, and show "financial responsibility."

Schorre said that "professional bondsmen" are "going to take care of their business...They are going to make sure they (defendants) show up for court."

County Attorney Mark Dettman said the bail-bond system in Midland County works "pretty smoothly" now. Depending on the risk, a bondsman may charge his client between 10 percent and 25 percent of the amount of bail to "go on" his bond and get him out of jail.

Dettman said there are "some abuses in the system."

Nevertheless, bondsman are generally "good business people," he said.

"They are helping the criminal-justice system; they are not blocking it. They ensure a defendant is here for trial," Dettman said.

"It's a business like any other business, only the clients are different. It can be a lucrative business, but you've got to be a good businessman to succeed."

PRICES

The low inflation comes as the economy is showing signs of a healthy rebound from sluggish growth in late summer and early fall and prompting analysts to call for steady economic growth this year.

The Reagan administration projects economic growth of 4 percent for 1985 and many private economists agree that is a reasonable expectation.

Michael Evans, president of Evans Economics Inc., a Washington consulting firm, said in advance of today's report that he expects inflation for all of 1985 to be in the neighborhood of 4 percent — largely the product, he said, of the Federal Reserve Board's willingness to tighten the money supply at the first sign of significant inflation.

And economist Donald Ratajczak predicted an even lower 1985 inflation rate — about 3.5 percent — although he says the monthly rates are likely to rise a little in February and perhaps March before settling back down as longer-term moderating forces in the economy take hold.

Along with the January price report, the Labor Department today recalculated retail price activity in December, raising the previous 0.2 percent gain to 0.3 percent.

OIL

The U.S. has spent billions on developing high technology aircraft that can penetrate Soviet defense systems, White said. "But OPEC doesn't care one thing about that."

A new report by the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, released by the governors at a news conference, estimated an $11 billion national reduction in drilling expenditures, accompanied by the loss of 560,670 jobs, from repeal of expensing of intangible drilling costs as recommended by the Treasury Department's tax simplification proposals. Under current law, intangible drilling costs are defined as expenditures that do not have salvage value, such as wages, fuel and supplies used in drilling or completing wells. In contrast, the costs of steel goods and other equipment with salvage values are considered tangible equipment and must be capitalized for tax purposes. Under the Treasury plan, intangible drilling costs also would be capitalized, requiring tax deductions for these expenditures to be spread out over the productive life of the well.

The report contrasted tax benefits and loss of tax breaks under the Treasury plan with those under the "flat tax" proposals being advocated by a Democratic team of Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri and a Republican team of Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Sen. Robert W. Casten of Wisconsin and found the plans similar in many respects.

In Texas, repealing of intangible drilling costs would have the following results, on average, during the 1986-91 period: Drilling expenditures would be reduced by $3.5 billion annually; 175,556 jobs would be lost because of reduced drilling; 60,698 fewer oil and gas wells would be drilled; drilling rigs operating would be reduced by 380 yearly; additions to domestic oil and gas reserves would by reduced by 1.7 billion barrels of oil equivalent; daily oil and gas production would fall by 237,185 of oil equivalent; annual revenues from oil and gas sales would fall by $1.7 billion, and state tax receipts from oil and gas production would fall by $102.7 million annually.

The impact of removal of percentage depletion stripper oil wells — those that produce less than 10 barrels a day — operated by independent producers, would result in "significant adverse impact on the Texas economy," the study found.

Under current federal tax laws, independent oil and gas producers and royalty owners are allowed to deduct 15 percent of the gross revenues from a limited amount of their oil and gas production. Percentage depletion must be taken in lieu of cost depletion.

The study found that removing percentage depletion on stripper wells would have the following results in the first year alone: 9,713 stripper wells would be abandoned because they would no longer be economic to operate; domestic oil production would be reduced by 25,625 barrels a day due to premature abandonment and by 779 barrels per day due to decreased drilling; oil and gas revenues would be reduced by $250 million; royalty payments would fall by $37 million; severance tax payments would drop by $11.5 million; oil and gas drilling would be cut back by $100 million, and 22,803 jobs would be lost in the petroleum and related industries.

In addition, the study forecasts a negative impact on enhanced oil recovery operations if federal tax proposals become law. Enhanced oil recovery is the production of incremental oil from a petroleum reserve by injecting water or gas, under pressure, into oil formations at substantial additional costs.

Treasury's recommendations would change depreciation schedules and repeal the deduction for tertiary injectant expenses and the investments tax credit. The study found that while the proposal would lower the marginal tax rate and repeal the Windfall Profits Tax, these favorable changes would be more than offset by increased taxes resulting from the other changes.

In Texas, the reduced after-tax cash flow to producers under the Treasury proposal would affect enhanced oil recovery in the years ahead as follows: oil production from EOR projects would be reduced by 465 million barrels; royalty payments would drop by $1.5 billion; property and severance tax payments would fall by $567 million; reduction in payments to suppliers of goods amd services would equal $9.6 billion; equivalent purchases would fall by $432 million, and intangible drilling costs for EOR wells would decrease by $408 million.

FDIC liquidator: Former FNB had problems in 1983

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s managing liquidator for the defunct First National Bank testified in federal court today that the bank in early 1983 had "severe problems but obviously not severe enough to fail or it would have failed."

The liquidator, Stanley Clark, testified in the FDIC-Eagle Properties Ltd. trial before the judge to determine if any fraud was committed in the sale of the 24-story FNB building to raise capital to keep the bank afloat and to reflect a profit for 1982.

The seven partners in Eagle Properties claimed the bank committed fraud by representing the bank was "in sound financial condition when, in fact, it was in an extremely serious financial condition" at the time of the sale in December 1982.

FDIC, however, said the seven partners were in default enough since the $25 million note from the building was overdue. The seven partners, who are Midland-Odessa oil operators, had agreed to purchase the bank building for $75 million.

After the bank collapsed Oct. 14, 1983, the FDIC assumed the bank's assets and liabilities. Shortly afterward, RepublicBank of Dallas bought the former FNB's assets for $50.1 million. RepublicBank set up business in the FNB building.

Eagle attorney Seagal V. Wheatley noted that FNB had sold the bank building for $75 million "in order to show a profit for 1982." He cited an FDIC report which indicated the bank was in a "precarious" posture in early 1983.

"I disagree," said Clark.

However, in 1983, the bank was given a Composite 5 FDIC rating "which is the worst that you can have," said Wheatley. Clark acknowledged that FNB was a problem bank.

"What is a problem bank, Mr. Clark?" asked Wheatley.

"It is a bank that has problems," said Clark.

"That's pretty good," said U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

FDIC is liquidator of the $1.2 billion assets of the defunct bank. Clark testified that by "our best estimates at this time, the FDIC had lost $360 million in liquidated assets."

FDIC, which took over the old FNB loans and notes, demanded $25 million of the $75 million agreed purchase price of the bank building.

"They (FDIC) love their reputation for being merciless," Wheatley said when the suit was filed in February 1984. He said the demand was "very unwarranted and without any basis. The FDIC, in all good conscience overstepped their bounds."

Wheatley had said FDIC was aware that the "bank was going to go under" at the time of sale and if the seven Midland-Odessa investors had been advised of that, they "would not have participated" in buying the building.

LIBRARY

"And libraries may have to be funded on a user basis," said Wright.

County Library John Deats said such an approach "goes against the concept of free public education."

Wright noted that he was not advocating that Midland County withdraw its support of the library but merely was citing the gist of an editorial in the February 1985 issue of "Texas County Progress," official publication of the County Judges and Commissioners Association of Texas.

The editorial, written by Roger Summers, said some county officials "long have felt county library contributions should be stopped...

"They (unnamed county officials) say the county needs the money it has for doing the job it is constitutionally mandated to do, such as operating a jail and running some courts and building and maintaining county roads and bridges and more."

About 6.5 percent — $833,116 — of Midland County 1985's budget of $12.9 million is invested in the public library.

"There are an awfully lot of people who do care (about the library)," Ms. Usery said.

"We already are making efforts to increase public awareness of library services," Deats said.

Ms. Usery presented a list of immediate, intermediate and long-term goals to the commissioners:

— Immediate goals: draft a time table for a new central library, establish a branch library, expand and improve library services, continue maintenance of the library building, improve public awareness of library services, encourage support of Casa de Amigos book station, conduct a study of additional book stations, establish more book-drop locations, and increase liaison with other community agencies and planning groups.

— Intermediate goals: review and update architectural programming, effect a building program to include financing and site determination, open additional book stations, and investigate computerization of the library.

— Long-term goals: build a computerized central library. To pay off the 20-year indebtedness incurred in building a $4.2 million library of 55,000 square feet, the county would have to increase the tax rate by one-half cent, according to the Bridgewater Report. That hike, for example, would increase by $5 a homeowner's annual taxes on a $100,000 house, according to the Bridgewater Report.

Of the objectives, Ms. Usrey recognized that the county is setting up a branch library in Midland Park Mall. That proposed 15,000-volume "Midland Centennial" library is being attained by the county in concert with Melvin Simon & Associates, owners of Midland Park Mall; the Friends of the Library; the Library Advisory Board, and the Midland Centennial Commission.

Many people in the community are "enthusiastic" about the branch library, Ms. Usrey said.

"So are we," said Wright.

DIPLOMAT

Szymanski apparently was given 48 hours to leave the country, just as Myers was given 48 hours to leave Poland.

In addition, the administration said it was postponing talks on a science and technology agreement that were scheduled to begin this week, and delaying the return to Warsaw of the U.S. charge, John Davis, who had been in the United States for consultations and was to return to Warsaw on Monday.

The administration also issued a strong protest over what it called the outrageous treatment that Myer and his wife, Barbara, received at the hands of Polish security officials. Polish government spokesman Jerzy Urban promptly denied the allegations.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the United States had sent a note of protest to Polish officials.

Following the session at the State Department with Richard E. Combs Jr., director of East European affairs, Ludwiczak told reporters he'd received a "sharp, unwarranted reaction" from the U.S. government.

Urban said Polish authorities had rejected the U.S. protest note, which complained that after being detained by police, Mrs. Myer was forced to undress. Urban asserted it was libelous and contained "false facts."

Denying Mrs. Myer had been mistreated, Urban said, however, that she was searched by female police officers to determine whether anything was hidden in her clothing.

"These strange suggestions concerning undignified treatment are meant only to divert attention from activities which run counter to diplomatic status," said Urban.

"It is appalling that such questions are taken up by the authorities of a country whose diplomats take along wives for spying missions," he added.

Kalb said there was "absolutely no justification for the actions taken by Polish officials against Myer and his wife." He said the note of protest complained that the behavior of Polish security officials was "entirely unacceptable."

"We expect the responsible officials to be disciplined and expect that such behavior will not occur," he added.

Polish security officers detained Myer and his wife Thursday after they were observed taking photographs from their car in a "prohibited military zone" near the town of Przasnysz, 60 miles north of Warsaw, Urban said.

Kalb said the expulsion represents "a most serious violation of the Vienna Convention on diplomatic relations" to which the United States and Poland are signatories.

Jason Miles, Anthony D'Alessandro and Louis Fancher III (left to right), pleaded guilty to hazing charges in connection with the death of Bruce Goodrich Monday. The three were each fined $250, given 90 day probated jail terms and are required to serve 100 hours of community services. Negligent homocide charges were dropped in the case.

Cadets plead guilty

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Three former Texas A&M University cadets who had been charged with negligent homicide in the forced exercise death of another cadet pleaded guilty to reduced charges and were given 90-day probated sentences.

Louis Fancher III of San Antonio, and Jason Miles and Anthony D'Allesandro, both of Houston, pleaded guilty Monday to charges of hazing.

The former A&M students, all 20, had been charged with criminally negligent homicide in the death of Bruce Goodrich, 20, a transfer student from Webster, N.Y., who died of a heat stroke on Aug. 30 after being forced to participate in "motivational exercises."

The homicide charges were dropped as part of a plea bargain.

County Court-at-Law Judge Carolyn Ruffino sentenced Miles, D'Alessandro and Fancher to a probated deferred adjudication sentence of 90 days, a fine of $250 and ordered them to perform 100 hours of community service.

The three also were to contribute $750 to an A&M scholarship fund established in memory of Goodrich.

Under terms of the deferred adjudication rule, the criminal charges will be removed from court records if the terms of the probation are carried out.

Brazos county attorney Jim Kuboviak and defense attorney Hank Paine of Bryan agreed to drop a hazing charge against a fourth former cadet, Gabriel Cuadra, 21, of Houston. Cuadra had been convicted earlier of tampering with evidence and was given a probated sentence.

Mrs. Lynn Fancher, mother of Louis Fancher III, said the outcome was "not a matter of fairness. It's politics."

She said the three former cadets were "scapegoats paying for 108 years of tradition."

The father of Fancher said university officials "had washed their hands" of the whole matter.

Kuboviak said he agreed to drop the homicide charges after talking repeatedly with Wade Goodrich, the father of Bruce Goodrich.

Senators introduce computer crime bills

AUSTIN (AP) — The booming computer industry has lead to a rise in computer-related crimes, prompting two lawmakers have introduced a computer-crime legislation package.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock and Rep. Barry Connelly are sponsoring identical versions of a computer crime bill they say would snare computer criminals who are now getting off scot-free because of the vagueness of laws.

"We need a sophisticated way of handling this," Montford said.

As many as 30 states and the federal government have enacted laws specifically designed to curb computer crime. More businesses are storing valuable information in data banks, making themselves more vulnerable to information-age versions of trespass, breaking and entering and theft.

The Montford-Connelly bill covers unauthorized or harmful access to a computer, breach of computer security and computer fraud.

A recent House committee hearing drew favorable support from attorneys and representatives of the computer industry.

Many computer crimes clearly fall under laws already in the books. Last month a Houston man allededly used a personal computer to get inside a credit bureau's computerized files and to steal the credit records of rich Houstonians.

Police say the man then used the information to apply for and obtain credit cards, which gave him access to the rich people's bank accounts through automatic teller machines. He's charged with stealing $100,000.

Such a case can be prosecuted under existing theft laws, but many computer crimes cannot.

Police report they arrested a man they say copied software while employed at an Austin-based company. The man was allegedly planning to use the software in competition with The Continuum Company.

Since copied software have no tangible dollar value, police said they charged him with theft of trade secrets.

"I don't know how well that charge is going to fly in court," said Sgt. Roger Ansley, the Austin police officer who investigated the case.

If the Continuum case is problematic, Ansly says there are plenty of situations that seem like crimes but can't be prosecuted because no state laws fit them.

Law enforcment officials say the chances of convicting a suspect in a computer case is usually so slim that prosecutors won't even bother to take it on.

Mattox unhappy with attorney's attitude

AUSTIN (AP) — A Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer's conduct so irritated Attorney General Jim Mattox in 1983 that he told another member of the firm to "get your lawyer there under control" and also said the firm couldn't expect "special treatment" for its bond work.

Both statements were made in a tape-recorded phone call on June 20, 1983, between Mattox and Fulbright & Jaworski's bond chief, Wiley Caldwell. The tape was played Monday at Mattox's trial.

Charged with commercial bribery, Mattox is accused of threatening to withhold his needed approval of the bonds unless Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer Thomas McDade stopped trying to question his sister, Janice Mattox, in another case.

On the tape played Monday, Mattox told Caldwell that McDade's efforts to question Miss Mattox were improper and unethical. The legal maneuvering took place in a case involving the state, wealthy South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and McDade's client, Mobil Oil.

Mattox told Caldwell he was disappointed that agreement couldn't be reached on McDade's actions.

"It just doesn't look like we've made any real progress," Mattox told Caldwell. "I asked for a few simple things that could have been handled in 30 minutes."

Several times, Mattox said there was "no embargo" on bond issues handled by Fulbright & Jaworski, but said McDade's actions had branded all of the firm's lawyers.

"There's no general embargo," Mattox said. "But because of his conduct, we're just going to have to exercise the utmost caution. All these (bond) transcripts are going to have to be individually reviewed."

Later, Mattox told Caldwell the scrutiny was "because I can't trust the lawyers" and advised him that "you're not going to receive any special treatment like you've received in the past."

Caldwell — who alleges that Mattox in an earlier call threatened to put the firm out of the bond business — pressed Mattox about the $350 million-plus in bonds his firm had pending in the attorney general's office.

"Your bonds will be approved after they've received careful, conscientious review," Mattox said. "We're not going to give F&J the special treatment (as) in the past when we thought we could trust the lawyers."

The tape was made by Arthur Mitchell, who in 1983 served as Mattox's special counsel. Mattox was in Mitchell's office for the call.

Mitchell said he decided to record conversations with McDade because he thought McDade earlier tried to change terms of an agreement made with Mitchell and Mattox.

Manure cleaning causes $16 million exports stink

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An argument over who has responsibility of cleaning manure out of cattle trucks has caused a $16 million roadblock for West Texas cattlemen and customs brokers who want to take advantage of newly allowed exports of U.S. cattle into Mexico.

The U.S. Agriculture Department has been requiring trucks returning from Mexico — even after only a few hours — to be cleaned to avoid introducing cattle fever ticks or other parasites and diseases into the United States.

Local cattlemen and customs brokers said the rule means they either must hire a Mexican carrier to pick up the cattle in El Paso and take them to Juarez, or they must find a place in Juarez to wash their own cattle trucks.

"This is American manure on these trucks. Why, when we finally have a chance to sell cattle to Mexico, are they putting up fences?" Pete Araujo, owner of the ABACO customs house, told the El Paso Times.

He said shipments of Mexican cattle into the United States, which have been scaled down, were loaded into trucks in Juarez that were unloaded in El Paso and then sealed for their return to Mexico.

Araujo said he has asked Texas legislators for a similar procedure for U.S. cattle exports to Mexico. It would allow the trucks to be sealed after unloading in Juarez, then to return across the border for cleaning at places cattle shippers already have established in the United States.

He said he had to delay 17 trucks of cattle in holding pens at Canutillo last week because of the Agriculture Department restriction. He arranged to have five trucks cleaned in Juarez, but he said it took two days because of weak water pressure.

Hudgens said he also hired a Mexican carrier to pick up four more truckloads in Canutillo and take them across to the Juarez stockyards.

He said he is talking now with the Juarez Fire Department about the possibility of using their high-power water hoses to clean the trucks.

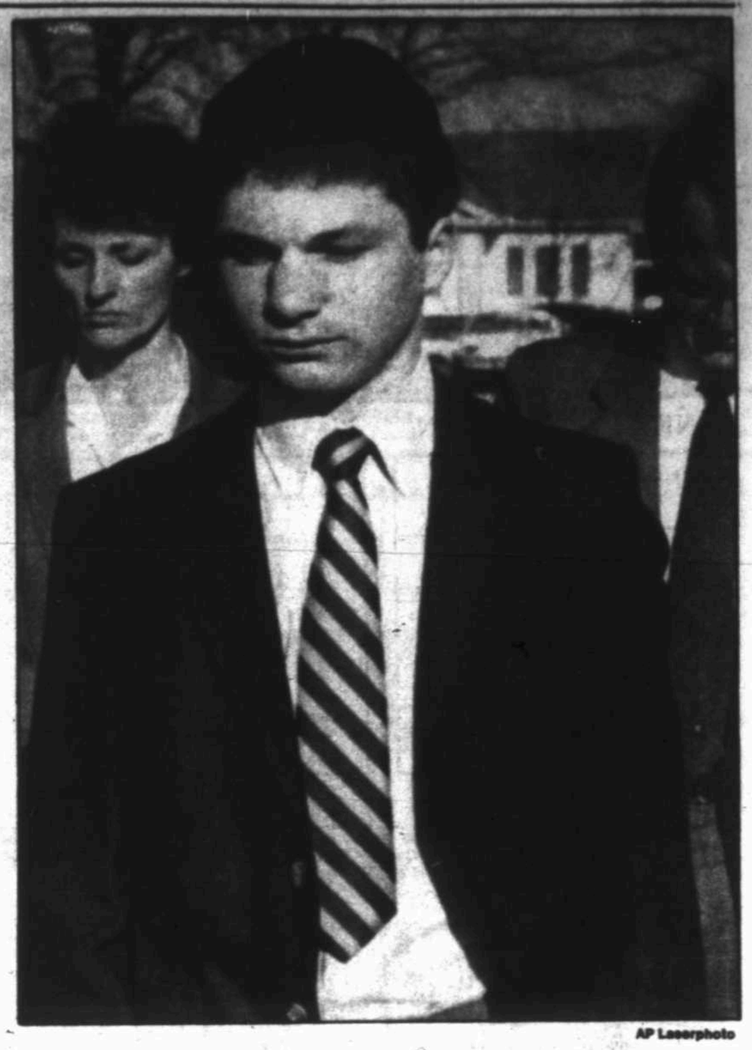

Dr. S.G. Couger, assistant veterinarian in charge at the agriculture department in Austin, said cattle shippers elsewhere along the Texas border are complaining.

"If a U.S. truck goes into Mexico, it must be cleaned before coming back. It is to protect us from any parasites or diseases that might be coming in with a dirty vehicle," Couger said. "How do we know where those trucks have been?"

Beetle sacred bug

The scarab beetle, sacred to the Egyptians, was a strangely protected symbol that survived for centuries as an amulet protecting against disease and misfortune.

Until recently in some parts of Africa, women wore it as a guarantee of fertility. It also was said to ward off malaria, the evil eye, snakebite.

Port trial to begin

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — David Port's father and stepmother, who drew national attention when they refused to testify against him before a grand jury, weren't on hand for the start of his murder trial.

But his natural mother, Janice Biggars of Dallas, was in the courtroom when jury selection began Monday.

Port, 18, is accused of killing Houston mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz June 7 and dumping her body in a remote area northwest of Houston.

Police found blood stains, spent cartridges, undelivered mail and several weapons at the Port's home after Ms. Schatz, 23, disappeared.

Odette Port was the first to arrive at their fashionable home in northwest Houston after her son and the mail carrier disappeared.

She and her husband, Bernard Port, refused to testify against David before a grand jury. They were cited for contempt of court and jailed for several months.

Both have since been released and their names do not appear on any subpoenas for the trial.

The younger Port has remained free on $20,000 bond.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmerman said Ms. Biggars was on hand because "she loves her son."

He would not say if Bernard and Odette Port would appear in the courtroom.

The trial was moved to New Braunfels, 175 miles northwest of Houston, because of extensive publicity about the case.

Judge I.D. McMaster and defense and prosecution attorneys spent most of Monday questioning potential jurors about their exposure to news reports of the case.

Of 46 who were called for jury duty, 32 said they had heard some news reports about the trial.

McMaster began questioning the jurors behind closed doors, saying he was not going to have a tainted jury.

But later he opened the questioning and asked reporters not to divulge the questions being asked the potential jurors.

"I cannot order you to do so but I would appreciate it if you could refrain from going into the specific questions asked in this proceeding," McMaster said to reporters sitting in the gallery.

"We're simply trying to pick a fair jury — fair to both sides," he said.

Zimmerman objected to opening the hearing until a new group of about 40 potential jurors arrive for jury duty Tuesday.

"It's got the potential of messing up everything they've done so far," Zimmerman said.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

It is not always easy to spot the extra chances that are available to you. On this hand from a rubber bridge game, South made the most of his opportunities.

The bidding was old-fashioned textbook. The opening bid showed a balanced hand of 25-27 points, and North had no reason to look for another contract.

West led the top of his heart sequence, won in the closed hand. Obviously, if the ace of diamonds was guarded no more than once, the contract was a cakewalk. However, if the defenders could hold up the ace for two rounds, declarer had only eight tricks. And the only place to develop the ninth was in clubs.

At trick two declarer exited with a low club. West won and continued with a heart. Now declarer tried the ace of clubs, felling the queen. Suddenly, South could assure the contract provided clubs were 3-3 or East held the king.

Declarer continued with the king of diamonds, and West had to hold off. Next came the jack and, when West ducked again, declarer overtook with dummy's queen to gain an entry to the table. Now he led dummy's remaining club and, as long as East followed, the ninth trick was sure.

If East produced a low club, declarer would insert the jack and, if that lost to the king, the 13th club would be high. And if East came up with the king of clubs, the jack would be the fulfilling trick. Easy, isn't it.

Success has nothing to do with winning Grammy award

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Top contenders for the Grammy Awards tonight include Cyndi Lauper, Prince and Tina Turner, each with hit albums, hot styles, lots of fans, critical acclaim and five nominations — guaranteeing them nothing.

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, whose three-hour awards show is set to begin before CBS-TV cameras at 8 p.m. EST, has a 26-year voting recording that rewards cautious music and easy-listening lyrics.

The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, the Beach Boys and Elvis Presley have a cumulative career Grammy total of nine. Easy-listening king Henry Mancini has 20.

The Beatles, as a group, could only convince academy members that they deserved four Grammys.

In the 1965 awards, the band won best performance by a musical group for "A Hard Day's Night," and best new artist. In 1967, the Beatles' "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" won album of the year and best contemporary album. And that was it for John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison, and Ringo Starr as a group.

The Rolling Stones, rocking since 1963, are unlisted in Grammy annals. Not one trophy for a crew that has sold millions of records and can still fill baseball stadiums on a 22-year-old reputation as rock's bad boys.

Academy members apparently don't like to be rattled by lyrics. Bob Dylan was ignored by the academy in the 1960s when he was writing million-sellers such as "Blowing in the Wind," "Like a Rolling Stone," and "Just Like a Woman."

Facing the vagaries of academy voters tonight are Miss Lauper, nominated in a rare sweep of the academy's "Big Four" categories: album, record and song of the year and best new artist.

Her album "She's So Unusual" has sold 4 million copies and generated five hit singles, including "Girls Just Want to Have Fun," nominated for best female pop vocal and record of the year.

Prince, the 26-year-old superstar from Minneapolis, has four nominations with his group Revolution, including album of the year for the 9-million seller "Purple Rain," the soundtrack from the top-grossing summer movie.

"Purple Rain" also was nominated for best rock group performance, best film score recording and producer of the year. Prince also has a best rhythm and blues song nomination for writing the Chaka Khan hit, "I Feel for You."

Miss Turner's "Private Dancer" is nominated for best album of the year. She also has Grammy nominations for the single "What's Love Got to Do with It," which earned her nominations for best record of the year and best female pop vocal.

Two other tracks, "Better be Good to Me" and "Let's Stay Together," are nominated for female vocal nominations in the rock and rhythym and blues categories, respectively.

Bruce Springsteen's "Born in The USA" and Lionel Richie's "Can't Slow Down" complete the album of the year nominees.

Also in the record of the year category are Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark" and "The Heart of Rock & Roll" by Huey Lewis and the News.

Jagger admits affairs, has no plans to marry current girlfriend

LONDON (AP) — Rock star Mick Jagger says he has affairs with other women and has no intention of marrying his current steady, model Jerry Hall, according to an interview published in today's Woman's Own magazine.

"There are casual relationships which everyone always has, especially in city life," the 41-year-old Rolling Stones singer said.

"I'm a very citified person, and lots of these casual relationships come up. You can't just stop having affairs if they come along, but there's a difference between that and trying to be with every girl you meet."

Jagger and Miss Hall have lived together for seven years and have a baby daughter, Elizabeth Scarlett.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana is "fairly scared" of her mother-in law, the queen, and doesn't get along well with Princess Anne, but she has struck up friendships with other members of Britain's royal family, says a former valet of her husband, Prince Charles.

Princess Diana

In an interview published today in Woman Magazine, Stephen Barry, the prince's valet for 12 years, said the 23-year-old princess has become friends with Queen Elizabeth II's sister, Princess Margaret, and "adores" Prince Andrew, the younger brother of her husband.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said: "I cannot comment on this except to say that like all employees in the royal household, Mr. Barry signed an undertaking of confidence."

• • •

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Britain's Princess Anne, touring India on a 10-day visit as president of Save the Children Fund, laid the foundation stone for a building for printing technology at a university in southern India.

The ceremony took place Monday at Anna University in Madras, the United News of India news agency reported.

Princess Anne arrived in India on Feb. 19 and is expected to meet Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and his wife, Sonia, before leaving Thursday.

Princess Anne

The 34-year-old princess has visited vocational and medical centers in eastern and southern India, including Mother Teresa's home for the destitute in Calcutta.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Peter Sellers' last movie, "The Trail of the Pink Panther," was "an appalling film" made in defiance of the late actor's wishes, his widow, actress Lynne Frederick, claims in a lawsuit brought against the picture's makers.

The trial of the suit opened in High Court on Monday.

Sellers died during production of the movie, which was completed using discarded clips from previous "Pink Panther" films and released in October 1982.

The 29-year-old actress's suit names director Blake Edwards, United Artists and Lakeline Productions, which is owned by Edwards' wife, actress Julie Andrews.

The defendants say they hold full copyright and were not contractually banned from making the film.

• • •

CHICAGO (AP) — Playboy Enterprises President Christie Hefner says the ABC movie "A Bunny's Tale" presented a distorted view of what it's really like to be a Playboy Bunny.

Christie Hefner

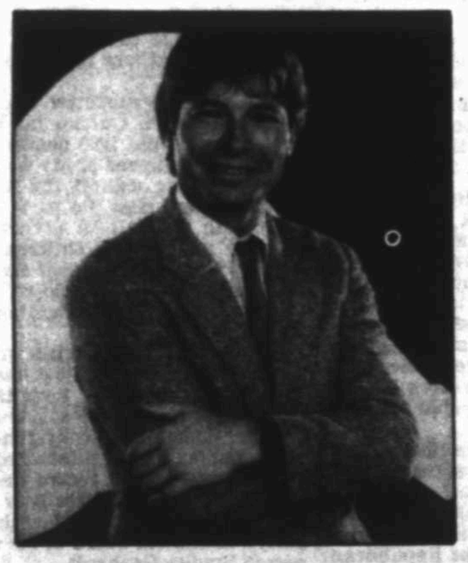

In an interview published Monday in the Chicago Tribune, the daughter of Playboy founder Hugh Hefner said the film reflects feminist Gloria Steinem's subjective view of women's roles in society in 1963, after Steinem's 17-day stint as a Bunny.

The film shown Monday night is based on a magazine story by Ms. Steinem.

Ms. Hefner also said it was "not very kosher" for ABC to "take advantage of the tremendous commercial appeal of Playboy and make a film about it" while not paying for the right or consulting with Playboy. She said Playboy chose not to take legal action, but "I think over time (the matter) will be litigated."

Ms. Hefner said she didn't expect the men in the movie to be depicted as unlikeable "yahoos."

Day to remember

This is a particularly special week in Midland, the kind that comes along only once in a hundred years. Midland County passes the century mark this year and the city's Centennial celebration officially gets under way with a kickoff rally in Midland Center Wednesday.

For most communities, a Centennial celebration traditionally attracts ample numbers of special dignitaries. The celebration kicking off Midland's Centennial observance will, of course, attract any number of dignitaries, too, including oilmen and ranchers who came to this part of the state in the early years and stayed to find wealth and happiness. We're glad to have all of them here, celebrating.

But there will be a couple of guests present at the kickoff celebration who formerly called Midland "home" and who have gone on to bigger and greater callings. They still have family in Midland and they visit here occasionally. Their presence will help to make Midland's Centennial kickoff an occasion that will be long remembered by residents of this area.

We're talking about Vice President George Bush and his wife, Barbara, who graciously consented to taking part in the ceremony that recognizes Midland County's creation a century ago.

Few communities can boast of having a Vice President of the United States attend their centennial celebration and that fact makes the Bushes' visit even more special. Of course, the Vice President and Mrs. Bush lived here from 1948 until 1959 and still count numerous Midlanders as their close friends.

In addition to their attendance at the kickoff rally, Mrs. Bush will speak at a Thursday luncheon in Midland Center that will benefit Midland's Need to Read program. Mrs. Bush's interest in programs promoting literacy is well known and illustrated by the fact she serves on the national board of Reading Is Fundamental and is a sponsor of Laubach Literacy International, a worldwide program committed to eradicating illiteracy, in addition to other literacy affiliations.

We join all Midlanders in warmly welcoming the Vice President and Mrs. Bush back to the city. Their interest and participation in this celebration will help to make it one for the history books.

Another View:

Advertising trouble

Baseball caps askew, the guys belly up to the bar for a cold brew. Back slapping and good-natured kidding ensue. The foamy stuff flows freely. "Welcome ... to Miller time."

Or: Bikini-clad coeds and gorgeous hunks frolic on a sandy beach, then reach for a Stroh's. (Or is it a Bud?)

If millions of Americans now consider beer indispensable to good times, television ads like those are probably one of the reasons. But do the commercials contribute to alcohol abuse?

Yes, insists an unusual coalition of consumer, parent-teacher and temperance groups. They want Congress to ban all beer and wine commercials from the airwaves, just as cigarette advertising was snuffed from TV screens 14 years ago.

In our view, that would be an unwarranted erosion of the First Amendment, as would a requirement that broadcasters air more public service announcements warning of the dangers of drinking. True, the Supreme Court has upheld the TV ban on cigarette advertising, but the court has also recognized that "commercial" speech deserves some protection.

Even if an ad ban in this case could pass constitutional muster, it would not necessarily be wise. If government can outlaw one form of speech that some people find distasteful, why not others? And if a product can be legally sold, why can't it be advertised?

Unfortunately, less attention has been paid to those questions than to the alleged link between advertising and alcohol abuse. If the proponents of an ad ban are not wholly persuasive on that score, neither are the beer and wine makers.

They contend that TV ads don't encourage excessive drinking, merely influence brand preference. But it seems obvious that the industry's financial health depends in part on its ability to lure new, younger drinkers. Why else do ads associate beer and wine-drinking with sex appeal and personal success?

The best way out of this debate would be for advertisers and broadcasters, mindful of the threat of government intrusion, to show more restraint and responsibility. Temperance leaders, in turn, should devise more imaginative ways of getting their important message across.

For example, as an antidote to those beery good times, how about a spot showing a broken-down baseball player fighting off the ravages of alcoholism in a sanitarium? His warning could go something like this: "When you've having more than one, think where you could end up. Like me."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, February 26, the 57th day of 1985. There are 308 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On February 26, 1919, Congress established Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

In 1870, the first New York City subway line was opened to the public.

In 1942, during World War II, Navy flier Donald F. Mason sent a four-word message from the Pacific to the U.S. Navy in Washington: "Sighted sub, sank same."

In 1951, the 22nd Amendment to the Constitution was ratified, limiting a president to two terms in office.

In 1962, Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill announced that Britain had developed its own atomic bomb.

In 1962, after becoming the first American to orbit the Earth, astronaut John Glenn addressed a joint session of Congress. Glenn told the lawmakers, "exploration and the pursuit of knowledge have always paid dividends in the long run."

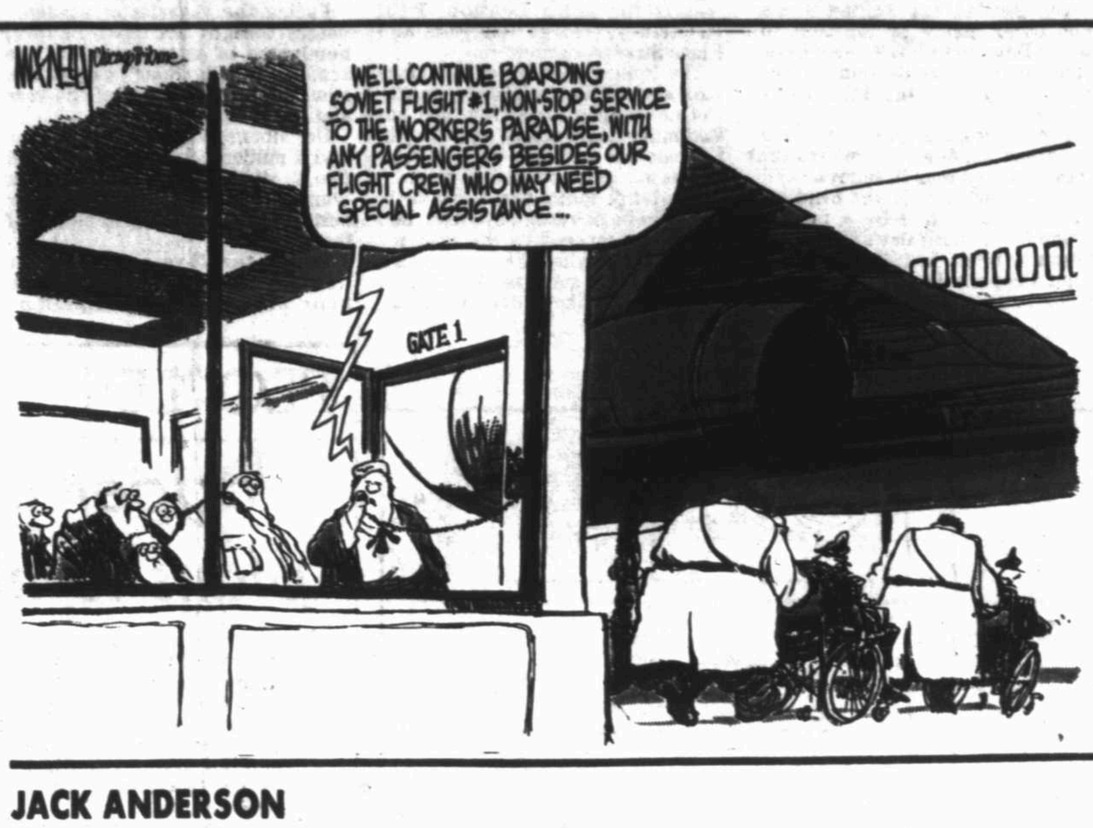

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford held a news conference in which he urged Congress to move faster toward approving a tax cut designed to stimulate the economy.

Five years ago: In the New Hampshire primary, Ronald Reagan won a landslide over George Bush in the Republican contest while President Jimmy Carter defeated Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy on the Democratic side.

One year ago: Two days before the New Hampshire primary, Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson acknowleged that during a private conversation he used the word "Hymie" to refer to Jews.

Today's birthdays: Actress Madeleine Carroll is 76. Actor Robert Alda is 71. Actor-comedian Jackie Gleason is 69. Actor Mason Adams is 66. Actor Tony Randall is 65. Actress Betty Hutton is 64. Singer Fats Domino is 57. Columnist Robert Novak is 54. Singer Johnny Cash is 53.

Thought for today: "There is one thing stronger than all the armies in the world; and that is an idea whose time has come." — Victor Hugo (1802-1885).

JACK ANDERSON

Readers help Ethiopian relief

WASHINGTON — Americans are probably the most generous people in the world, especially where children are concerned.

Jack Anderson

The same spirit of good will that made our soldiers heroes to war-ravaged kids in foreign conflicts has been activated again by the plight of children stricken by another disaster: the famine in Ethiopia.

Any cynic who thinks Americans today are motivated only by selfish interests — the "me" generation — will be astonished by the response to a column of mine on a little-known but respected relief organization, the International Rescue Committee.

My associate Dale Van Atta checked into the IRC's operations and found that it spent only 5 cents of every dollar in contributions for administrative expenses — a remarkably low figure for any charity.

I reported the IRC's heroic efforts to make a dent in the human tragedy that is engulfing hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians fleeing their drought-shriveled homeland for food and medical care in neighboring Sudan. I suggested that contributions to the IRC would be an effective way for individuals to help the helpless and feed the starving.

The outpouring from readers was overwhelming: Over $150,000 was donated in a matter of days. The checks, many of them clipped to copies of the column, ranged from $1 to $10,000.

"In the days immediately following the publication of the column," wrote Al Kastner, an official of the relief group, "IRC was flooded with calls from people all over the country asking how they might help — businessmen, workers, professionals, students, homemakers, doctors, nurses, schools, church and community groups. Thousands of letters carried the same messages of caring and compassion — most of them with contributions."

Kastner, who has been with IRC for 18 years, added, "We've never received this kind of dollar response before from an article." Take a bow, readers.

The most gratifying response came from youngsters across the country who thought of ways to raise money for the starving Ethiopians.

Six-year-old Claire Swann of Delmar, N.Y., for example, insisted that, on invitations to her birthday party, her parents request that guests "bring no gifts, but instead bring gift-equivalent donations for the relief of children and families of Ethiopia and the Sudan."

Claire's birthday netted a $154 for IRC.

In a cover letter to the relief agency, Claire's parents, Dr. John Swann and Dr. Martha Pierson, wrote that "overwhelmingly, the response from parents at our daughter's school was in favor of this modified sort of birthday party — no more plastic and tinsel tokens to be given and received at birthday parties!"

Your contributions were put to good and immediate use. After only the first few days' rush of letters, Kastner wrote: "The contributions received so far from your readers will pay for 20 IRC doctors, nurses, feeding specialists and relief workers in the Sudan for a six-month period. One cannot even guess how many lives they will save, how many children on the edge of death will be made well."

The IRC workers are concentrating on the smallest children, who have the least ability to survive slow starvation, and on nursing mothers who cannot feed their babies. This requires a special nutrition program.

A cable from the Sudan reports that "the IRC is working miracles on the border," its staff making its rounds till 1 a.m. or 2 a.m. each day.

If you want to add your contribution, IRC's address is 386 Park Ave. South, New York, NY 10016.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Environmental Protection Agency has given its "applause" — but no meaningful help — to a group of Massachusetts contractors who think they could save Uncle Sam nearly $400,000 and the Bay State an additional $104,000.

EPA gave the town of Westboro, Mass., a multi-million-dollar grant to build a sewage treatment plant. The town awarded the construction job to the lowest-bidding general contractor. But some subcontractors charged that they could have done part of the work at a savings to the federal and state governments of roughly $500,000.

Under Massachusetts law, EPA could require the contractor to use cheaper subcontractors, but in a letter to the unhappy businessmen, an EPA official explained why it wouldn't:

"Your letter indicates that the decision failed to take into account Massachusetts law and resulted in the federal government paying $390,225 more for the electrical, heating and plumbing work than was necessary. Although I applaud your effort to save the federal government money, our regulations do not require that we request grant recipients to force general contractors to use the lowest price subcontractors."

Maybe EPA should soften its applause and toughen its regulations.

UNDER THE DOME: Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., is reportedly a mysterious man to work for. He offers his staff little guidance and is as slow to praise as he is to land on someone who guesses wrong on what he wants.

"Working for Dole," said a source, "is like reading tea leaves."

EVANS & NOVAK

Cuomo seeking better label

NEW YORK — The route to the White House chosen by Gov. Mario Cuomo was clearly marked when he wrote AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, protesting the heavy hand of organized labor raised against him.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

AFL-CIO political operatives had threatened reprisals when Cuomo swung the New York state delegation against Paul Kirk, labor's choice for Democratic national chairman and the ultimate winner. In writing Kirkland, the country's finest political rhetorician detailed his pro-labor record and asked how in the world the AFL-CIO could justify an anti-Cuomo stance. Only "a whore" would have surrendered to labor, Cuomo told us.

The governor's conduct belies his pious public assertions that a Cuomo presidential candidacy is no more likely than his heading Citicorp or playing center field for the Yankees. More important, he paints himself as the antithesis of Walter F. Mondale: a non-liberal who can run in the West and South and is not beholden to labor and other special interests.

Consequently, he and his political advisers bridle when he is described as a throwback to the New Deal. Those descriptions are natural considering Cuomo's inclination toward conventional Democratic policies and his suspicion of the neo-liberal Bradley-Gephardt flat tax.

But not to Cuomo. He was furious when The New York Times put a New Deal label on what he intended as a fiscally conservative State of the State speech last month. "Believe me," a Cuomo adviser told us, "Mario never has been a liberal." The governor explained at length that he has not changed policy positions rejected by New York liberals when he first sought public office in 1974.

Behind spurning the liberal label is Cuomo's conviction that Democrats never can regain the presidency without inroads into the South and West. To the Cuomo inner circle, a third straight Republican landslide would be assured if Sen. Edward M. Kennedy were nominated in 1988.

This Southern and Western imperative prompted Cuomo's unexpected intervention in picking the party's national chairman. He backed Californian Nancy Pelosi and, when she failed, North Carolinian Terry Sanford. To Cuomo, a Boston-Washington lawyer with ties to Teddy Kennedy and Lane Kirkland was not right for party leadership.

Kirk's victory against Cuomo and the South was interpreted by one Kennedy insider as the senator's first primary victory of 1988. But the governor's camp feels he gained much more than he lost, displaying to Southerners that he could oppose Big Labor as Fritz Mondale never did.

Nor is Cuomo shy about it. If he had followed AFL-CIO orders to keep labor at-large members on the national committee to vote for Kirk, the governor told us, "that's called being a whore." Instead, Cuomo twisted arms to convert New York committee members from pro-Kirk to anti-Kirk.

As a Mondale supporter vital for his nomination, Cuomo is chary about blasting the 1984 nominee ("I think he campaigned pretty well. He was the wrong man at the wrong time"). Nevertheless, he parts company with Mondale in advocating reduced middle-class entitlements. "I asked Mondale to say that early in the campaign," Cuomo told us, "but he chose to do it with taxation. It was suicide."

Austerity for middle-class voters achieved by spending cuts is less suicidal than increasing their taxes, but it may prove politically unmarketable. Cuomo intuitively flinches at the flat-tax model: substantial tax rate reduction amid record budget deficits. Whether he likes it or not, Cuomo positions himself with his party's liberal old guard in his coolness to Bradley-Gephardt.

The more immediate problem bothering the governor's advisers is how to get re-elected in 1986 without hurting his presidential prospects. Like Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's advisers 24 years ago, they are obsessively and excessively concerned that a narrow victory would diminish the governor's national credibility.

Meanwhile, Cuomo avows no interest in presidential politics, and did so with such intensity at last week's New York Post Forum that an adviser later accused him of being unduly "sanctimonious." In truth, Cuomo insiders believe that in 1988 the governor can jump in and wipe out competitors who will have been campaigning, Mondale-style, for three years. That requires a non-liberal label for this New Yorker to be the candidate of the West and South.

CHARLEY REESE

Stockman isn't worth protection

Basic training in the military services is a rite of passage. The transition is from a self-centered individualist to an expendable part of a larger unit.

Charley Reese

For that reason, it is particularly beneficial to American youth who tend to think the world is a nice place especially constructed for their comfort and safety. Nothing matures an individual so quickly as the discovery that the world is in fact a hazardous place and that 99.44 percent of the people in it don't give a hoot if you survive or not. No one teaches that lesson so well as a sergeant, a drill instructor or a chief petty officer.

We Americans have always had ambivalent feelings about our military because it is the opposite of our civilian ideals. The military is authoritarian, not democratic, and self-sacrificing, not individualistic. The military functions as a unit. The unit is more important than the individual. The mission is more important than the unit. Sacrificing for a larger good is not theory in the military — it's standard operating procedure.

Another aspect of the military which makes Amerians uncomfortable is its purpose. It has only one: to destroy the personnel and property of the enemy. The enemy is whoever the civilian government says is the enemy. A military establishment is nothing more than a vast engine of destruction.

You would think, of course, from watching the recruitment advertising that the military is a vast vocational school and social institution for individual improvement. You can learn skills. I learned how to shoot a tank gun. And the experience does improve provided you don't get killed or maimed in the process. Nevertheless, all the job skills and all the efforts to mold the individual are for the single purpose of honing and improving the destructive power of the war machine.

We even changed the name of the War Department to the Defense Department. Still, the only function of the Defense Department is to prepare for and to wage war. In other words it's a war department no matter what we call it.

I disapprove of this candy-coating of reality but it seems to be part of the American way of life. I suppose it makes it easier for one generation to savage our enemies and for the next generation to savage our military.

Hence, David Stockman, the budget director who is a constant reminder that President Reagan has his faults, has seen fit to question the patriotism of career officers. Perhaps Stockman is feeling guilty about not serving during the Vietnam War. He sorely missed the maturing process which is part of military training.

I note again for the several hundredth time the hypocrisy of liberals. Let anyone suggest however obliquely that some leftwing politician is anything less than a patriot and they scream their heads off. They have greeted Stockman's insults of our military officers with dead silence.

No one who has served in the military has any naive notions that is is a perfect institution. It has the same mix of folly and fools as any other human institution. To question the patriotism, however, of men who have chosen to place their bodies between this country and its enemies is not only stupid but an unforgiveable slander.

President Reagan ought to have fired Stockman on the spot and it's a mark against him that he hasn't. Stockman ought to spend a little time in Veterans Administration hospitals and in the national cemeteries to see how better men than he will ever be have put their love of country on the line.

A man would have to love his country to think a jerk like Stockman is worth protecting.

NATION IN BRIEF

$11.5 million awarded to family of TSS victim

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — An $11.5 million award to the family of a woman who died of toxic shock syndrome will encourage tampon manufacturers to settle an estimated 300 to 400 such suits across the country, an attorney says.

Attorney Mark Hutton's comment came after a federal jury on Monday decided for the family of Betty O'Gilvie, who died in April 1983.

The U.S. District Court jury found Playtex International 80 percent liable for the damages. Wichita Dr. Tom Hays was found 20 percent liable, but was not a defendant and thus cannot be required to pay damages.

Playtex attorney Larry Wall refused to comment on the verdict.

Cadets plead guilty

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Three former Texas A&M University cadets were sentenced to 90 days probation each after they pleaded guilty to reduced charges of hazing in the death of a fellow cadet last summer.

The three 20-year-olds were also sentenced on Monday to each pay a $250 fine, perform 100 hours of community service and donate $750 to an A&M scholarship fund established in memory of Bruce Goodrich, 20, of New York.

Jason Miles, Anthony D'Alessandro, both of Houston, and Louis Fancher III of San Antonio, had been charged with criminally negligent homicide in the Aug. 30 death of Goodrich, who had been forced to do "motivational exercises."

Teen slays grandparents

DOUGLAS, Mass. (AP) — A judge sent a 15-year-old boy to state hospital to determine if the teen-ager is mentally fit to stand trial for the slayings of his mother and maternal grandparents.

Joseph Perkins pleaded innocent on Monday to charges of delinquency by reason of murder.

Prosecutors said they would seek to have Perkins tried as an adult on murder charges in the shootings Friday night and Saturday morning of the boy's 36-year-old mother, Charlene Nunez, 60-year-old grandmother, Marcella Holmes, and 58-year-old grandfather, Robert E. Holmes Sr.

Perkins was arrested after the bodies were found in their home Sunday.

Survey results in lawsuit

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The city of Tulsa will file a $26 million federal lawsuit against Cleveland State University over a survey that mistakenly listed it as the nation's worst city in two areas, the mayor said.

The report released in January listed Tulsa as worst for racial minorities and for people interested in the quality of community life, government and schools. The error was revealed Feb. 15.

The suit to be filed today names the Ohio school's board of trustees and the study's author, associate professor of political science Joel A. Lieske, Mayor Terry Young said at a news conference Monday.

Lieske apologized for the mistakes earlier this month and said they were due to a keypunch error by a student.

Boy witnesses killing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal and state conservation officials presented a $2,000 reward to a 10-year-old boy whose call to authorities resulted in the arrest of three men who killed an endangered loggerhead sea turtle.

Ritchie Lewis of Elon College on Monday received the check and plaques for his action June 3, when he and his father saw the killing while on a fishing trip.

"You heighten all our consciences about what we should do to protect our wildlife," said W. Vernon Bevill, the state Wildlife Commission's executive director.

The three men were fined a total of more than $6,500 after they pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges in September.

Testing ends in Canada

GRAND FORKS AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. (AP) — The second free-flight test of an unarmed cruise missile in Canada was a success and ended such testing in Canada for the year, Canadian and U.S. officials said.

The missile completed a 1,500-mile, 4½-hour journey that began over the Beaufort Sea in northern Canada on Monday when it landed on a frozen lake at the Primrose Lake Evaluation Range in Alberta at 12:55 p.m.

The first free-flight test Feb. 19 sparked protests by anti-nuclear activists on both sides of the border, but none materialized Monday, said Capt. Luigi Rossetto of the Canadian Department of National Defense.

The B-52 bomber that carried the missile was based at Grand Forks.

Attorney won't prosecute accused gunman

NATION

NEW YORK — The U.S. attorney in Manhattan said Monday that Bernhard Goetz cannot be prosecuted for violations of the federal civil rights laws.

The attorney, Rudolph W. Giuliani, said that an investigation by his office developed no "facts or allegations which raise questions under one or more of the required criteria" to prosecute Goetz in federal court in the shooting of four young black men on a subway train on Dec. 22.

Goetz, who has made a statement admitting the shootings, is under indictment in State Supreme Court on charges of felony and misdemeanor weapons possession. If convicted of the top count, he could serve a maximum of seven years in prison.

According to Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, the grand jury that voted the weapons charges refused to vote any charges in the wounding of the four men.

Giuliani said that, in reaching the decision, federal prosecutors and FBI agents had reviewed all the evidence and interviewed attorneys for Goetz and the four victims.

"It should be emphasized that this conclusion does not in any way suggest that Goetz acted lawfully or unlawfully under state law," Giuliani said. "Nor should it be seen as an endorsement of Goetz' conduct."

Giuliani said that when black leaders asked him to conduct the investigation, he told them that it appeared there probably was no federal case against Goetz. His decision provoked no surprise among those involved in the case.

One of Goetz's attorneys, Barry Slotnick, said of Giuliani's decision, "The result was the correct one."

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry, who was among the black leaders who met with Giuliani three weeks ago and asked him to investigate, said, "We're not terribly disappointed, given the prevailing racial and political climate, and the way the law is written."

Daughtry said that he was encouraged that as a result of the meeting, Giuliani had established a task force to deal with incidents of racial violence.

Ron Kuby, an attorney for Darrell Cabey, whose spine was severed in the shooting, said, "It's disappointing." Kuby said that while he believed that a case could be made, he said that the civil rights laws are narrowly drawn in this context.

A spokesman for St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan, Laurie Mahler, said Monday that Cabey's condition "has shown slight improvement and it has been upgraded from critical to serious. He is slightly more responsive and now considered to be in a semicomatose state. However, doctors indicate that he still suffers from significant brain damage and his neurological prognosis is guarded."

Giuliani said that under two of the federal laws, it would have to be shown that Goetz was either part of a conspiracy to shoot the men or that he was a peace officer.

"It is clear that Goetz acted alone and as a private citizen," Giuliani said.

Under a third law, it would have to be shown that. Goetz intended to stop the men from using a federally assisted facility – the subway.

Promises of prizes snares 32 in Michigan

Associated Press

In Michigan the bait was a "new and exciting product," in California the hook was a seafood "sting" operation. The net result was the arrest of 32 people wanted on a variety of charges and 24 alleged poachers who sold six tons of fish to undercover agents.

"It was a class operation," boasted Grand Rapids, Mich., police Chief William Hegarty. "The 'new and exciting product' was the arrest warrant, and the prize was an escorted, all-expense paid trip to the jail."

In California, authorities said their phony fish store reeled in only a small fraction of the salmon, steelhead, striped bass and sturgeon that was being caught illegally and sold to black market retailers and restaurants.

Faced with hundreds of outstanding arrest warrants, Grand Rapids police decided to rely on that element of human nature which cannot resist the offer of something for nothing.

They sent letters to more than 500 people wanted for everything from traffic violations to assault with intent to commit murder. The bait was a show by New Dimensions Promotions and the chance of winning a 1985 Lincoln Town Car, a Cadillac Seville, cash or trips.

About 100 people responded. Among the 32 who were curious enough to show up at a downtown Grand Rapids building Saturday night was Donna Collins, wanted for ignoring a year-old $55 traffic ticket.

"There were chaperones ... who escorted you upstairs," said Ms. Collins, a 37-year-old mother of three who left a baby shower to see if she won anything. "Coffee, doughnuts, cakes were set up. The escorts were nice. They told you what you might win."

"There was a car sitting out front (of the building) with New Dimensions stickers on it," she said. "But as soon as you turned the corner, they (plainclothes police) grabbed you. ...

"I felt real stupid," she said. "At first I laughed. I couldn't believe it."

The California sting consisted of a fake fish market in Oakland staffed for six months by agents of the state Department of Fish and Game.

When people sold fish to New China Specialty Foods, they were paid and secretly videotaped, officials said. At least two of the fish were saved from each sale.

The result: six tons of illegal fish and 24 arrests.

"There seems to be an unending market for fish, and a declining supply," said Jack White, a spokesman for the department.

Authorities believe as much as 90 percent of the illegal catch was bought by restaurants "from California to Canada" and by black market retailers, White said.

Warrants were issued for 12 people in San Francisco, 11 of whom had been arrested, said San Francisco District Attorney Arlo Smith. Thirteen residents of the Hoopa Valley Indian Reservation northeast of Eureka also were in custody, records indicated.

Some of the fish were taken from waning populations of salmon and steelhead in the Klamath River, and striped bass and sturgeon in San Francisco Bay.

Under federal law, it is legal for Hoopa and Yurok Indians to catch salmon and steelhead in gill nets in the Klamath for food or ceremonial use, but not for sale.

"We knew pretty much who they were, but we had no way of infiltrating their ranks," White said of the alleged poachers.

A Fish and Game officer just out of the academy managed to crack the black market operations, he said. "She just left the word around that this market would buy the fish and not ask too many questions."

"We have to keep her under wraps until the trials are over," he said of the officer, explaining that some suspects had threatened her.

Heinz says patients discharged too fast

By MARGARET SCHERF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medicare patients are being discharged from hospitals "quicker and sicker" under a new payment system that sets treatment rates in advance, says the chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said many elderly patients are "being sent out into a no-care zone, without access to the health care they so urgently need."

Heinz made the comments Monday in releasing a preliminary report he requested from the General Accounting Office on the impact of Medicare's new prospective payment system on post-hospital care for older Americans.

Because of the new payment procedures, patients are being discharged "quicker and sicker, and some may even be discharged prematurely," Heinz said.

Under the system, which was enacted in 1983, hospital payment is based on the average cost of care for a particular diagnostic related group (DRG). If a hospital can treat a patient for less than that amount, it can keep the savings. If the treatment costs more, the hospital must absorb the loss.

"Recent data on the use of hospitals under Medicare appear to show that hospitals have in fact responded by reducing lengths of stay," the study said.

"The average length of stay per PPS (prospective payment system) discharge in fiscal year 1984 was 7.5 days. The average length of stay per discharge in fiscal year 1983 (pre-PPS) was 9.5 days," the report said.

"While reducing the length of a hospital stay may not affect a patient's need for follow-up care, it is also possible that some patients may be discharged at a time in their illness when they have substantial needs for care," the report said.

The GAO said it talked with representatives of hospitals, nursing homes and home health agencies as well as consumer advocates in Pittsburgh; Orlando, Fla.; Richmond, Va.; Seattle; Adrian, Mich., and Corpus Christi, Texas.

In each community, the GAO said, "the view was expressed in at least three groups ... that patients are being discharged from hospitals after shorter lengths of stay and in a poorer state of health than prior to PPS," the report stated.

"We were told in site meetings with providers and advocates that beneficiaries are upset and confused about their Medicare benefits and how PPS had affected them," the report said.

"We heard reports that some patients are being told, improperly, that they have to leave the hospital because their Medicare coverage has run out," it added.

Heinz said Medicare does not specify the number of hospital days allowed under the new system.

"Any hospital that dumps a patient because the 'DRG has run out' either doesn't understand the system or is misrepresenting the design intentionally out of greed," he said.

Dennis Siebert, director of the office of public affairs for the Health Care Financing Administration, said the agency would have no immediate comment because it had not seen the report. The agency oversees Medicare in the Department of Health and Human Services.

Clay Mickel, a spokesman for the American Hospital Association, said the group would have no specific comment on the report until it has been read.

But he said "we have seen no indications ... that the system is resulting in a serious diminution of quality."

Senate Democrats push farm credit bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm-state senators, in a showdown with Sen. Majority Leader Robert Dole, are seeking approval of emergency legislation to bail out farmers so deep in debt banks won't lend them money for spring planting.

The credit-relief measure, headed for a vote perhaps as early as today, was introduced Monday as an amendment to a bill authorizing $175 million in non-food drought aid to African nations.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., provides $1.85 billion in federal guaranteed farm loans in addition to $650 million already available for 1985.

It also eliminates a requirement that farmers show they can generate a profit before obtaining such loans, and authorizes the Farmers Home Administration to provide $100 million to "buy down," or induce banks to lower interest rates.

"This bill doesn't create any new bureaucracy. It merely calls for cooperation among the government, lenders, and farmers," said Zorinsky, ranking Democrat on the Senate Agricultural Committee.

"Not all farmers will be saved by this, nor should they be," he continued. "This measure is crucial for farmers who are fighting for economic survival."

Zorinsky, who was backed by Sens. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said the measure won't cost much because federal money would be spent only when a borrower defaults on a guaranteed loan. Historically, the default rate for FHA loans is about 5.5 percent, Zorinsky said.

Dole, R-Kan., reluctantly agreed to allow amendments to the African aid bill to end a filibuster on Saturday by farm-state Democrats against Senate confirmation of Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

On the Senate floor Monday, Dole — unwilling to give more ground to Democratic adversaries — said attempts to alter this year's farm aid package are unnecessary.

"We have a good, solid farm program already in place," Dole said. "I don't believe we do the American farmer any good by advancing more loan payments to him. We would be accomplishing more by concentrating on the nation's top priority — getting the deficit down."

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., was preparing an amendment similar to Zorinsky's to be offered in the event that the first measure is tabled, or put aside without a Senate vote.

All day hundreds of farmers, state legislators, and governors from the Farm Belt testified at hearings and met with congressmen to plea for federal help.

"Some farmers took bad risks and got themselves into credit trouble, but most farmers didn't get into crises on their own," South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow told a House-Senate farm caucus chaired by Zorinsky.

"It is our government policy of deficit spending which increased interest rates and overvalued the dollar. The farmer isn't to blame for that," said Janklow, a Republican.

At a hearing of the Joint Economic Committee, 10 legislators from farm states testified about the impact of the farm credit crunch.

"Since the first of the year, in the state of Iowa, we've closed three banks and we believe many more may follow," said state Rep. Bob Skow. "Agriculture's economic problems have brought our state to its knees."

Many farm-state senators who support the Zorinsky amendment want to make sure the Senate also has a chance to vote on a broader measure expected to be approved next week.

Bridge league goes to court over sex-bias suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Contract Bridge League has been named defendant in a $1 million sex-discrimination suit for allegedly refusing to permit male and female partners in a tournament divided into men's and women's divisions.

"There is no rational, legitimate or demonstrable relationship between gender and a person's ability to play bridge," said the Superior Court suit.

The suit filed Monday claims sex-segregated tournaments violate California's Unruh Civil Rights Act, which forbids sexual discrimination in public places and business establishments.

Plaintiffs in the suit are Jillian and Robert Blanchard and professional bridge players John Mohan, Kay Schulle and Drew Casen. All five live in New York.

The league refused to let the Blanchards play as partners in a November 1984 national championship in San Diego, and the couple said that "unfairly disadvantaged" their attempt to represent the U.S. in the quadrennial world bridge championship.

The other defendants also allege that they have suffered significant losses because they have been unable to play with partners of the opposite sex in some major tournaments.

In addition, the suit alleges that men-only tournaments are treated as superior and that the women's divisions "are often relegated to inferior playing space, with fewer directors, without the same amenities as are provided to other events."

Robert Kelly Jr., local attorney for the Memphis, Tenn.-based bridge league, said the nonprofit organization hadn't yet been served with the suit and hence had no comment.

Heart-liver transplant underway

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Fort Worth teen-ager today was undergoing a heart-liver transplant — only the third such operation of its type — at Presbyterian University Hospital.

The double surgery on 17-year-old Mary Cheatham began about 6:30 p.m. Monday after a donor — who was not identified — was located.

Officials said the double operation was expected to take 20 to 24 hours, barring complications.

The University of Pittsburgh transplant team was unsure late Monday whether it would be able to perform both the heart and liver transplant, according to Cara East, one of Miss Cheatham's doctors at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas.

East said doctors feared both operations together could be too long.

But as of 7 a.m. EST, the surgery was continuing, said hospital spokesman Mark Shelton. He declined to elaborate.

Miss Cheatham was born with a rare genetic disorder that inhibits her liver's ability to gauge cholesterol levels in her body and remove the excess. Cells then produce too much of their own cholesterol, clogging the arteries of the heart.

The surgery is the third such double transplant performed. Stormie Jones, a 7-year-old Texas girl, underwent the first operation on Valentine's Day 1984. The second heart-liver transplant was performed last November on a 2-year-old Alabama girl who died from complications related to the surgery.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Slight chance of showers predicted

Midlanders may need their umbrellas Wednesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport forecasts a 20 percent chance of rain for the area.

Tonight will be cloudy and cool with lows in the mid-40s becoming cloudy and mild Wednesday as temperatures warm to the lower 60s. Tonight's southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph will increase Wednesday to less than 15 mph.

Monday's high of 70 was 13 degrees below the record set in 1950. This morning's low was 26 degrees above the 1934 record of 14.

STATE

A cold front nudged into the Texas Panhandle early today, but weather forecasters said little change in the mild weather would be obvious elsewhere.

High temperatures today were expected to be in the 40s in the Panhandle, but in the 60s and 70s elsewhere across the state.

High clouds were common across the state this morning. A few low clouds dotted the lower Rio Grande Valley. Otherwise, dense fog reduced visibilities to one half a mile or less at times in the southeast, where a travelers advisory remained in effect.

A light south wind breezed most of the state, although southwesterly winds of 10 mph were reported in parts of West Texas.

NATION

Gusty winds whipped up snow and combined with falling temperatures to produce rugged conditions in Wyoming, the Dakotas and Minnesota today, while rain was widespread from the mid-Atlantic Coast into the Deep South.

Snow was falling across much of Colorado, where up to 6 inches was expected in the mountains.

Wyoming, the Dakotas and northern Minnesota had scattered snow, gusty winds and falling temperatures, many in the single digits and teens.

Blowing snow and slick roads prompted travelers' advisories in eastern North Dakota and northwest Minnesota, and a stockmen's advisory was posted in northeastern South Dakota.

Rain spread from the mid-Atlantic Coast across the Virginias and North Carolina. A rain band also extended across western South Carolina, northern Georgia and southern Alabama.

Fog was widespread early today from southern Kentucky to the Gulf of Mexico.

Today's forecast called for rain over the mid-Atlantic Coast states, the Carolinas, northern Georgia and the northern Pacific Coast.

Scattered snow was predicted from upper Michigan across eastern Wisconsin and in central Colorado.

Highs were expected to be in the 20s to 30s from the Rockies to the upper Great Lakes and in northern Maine; in the 60s to 70s across California, the desert Southwest, southern and eastern Texas, the central Gulf Coast states and the south Atlantic Coast states; and in the low 80s over much of Florida.

Floods rage throughMidwest

Associated Press

Floods that claimed at least four lives continued to plague the Midwest and New York state today, while blowing snow in Minnesota caused more than 100 autos to run off the road, authorities said.

In Fort Wayne, Ind., Mayor Winfield Moses issued an urgent plea for volunteers Monday night in an around-the-clock effort to fill and stack sandbags in an effort to stave off three rising rivers.

The National Weather Service issued travelers' advisories this morning warning of slick roads and blowing snow for eastern North Dakota and northwest Minnesota. It said snow also was falling in Wyoming and much of Colorado today.

Chaparrals put final nail in championship

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland College's Chaparrals give the sign with meaning following Monday's 84-71 victory over Odessa College to win the WJCAC basketball title.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

In planning his offense for Odessa College, Coach Jerry Stone told the team, "The off side post just might be the most important man in the game. The way he played, it looked like Tony Wright took it to heart."

Wright scored from the opening tip off and rammed in four baskets as Midland College raced to early 14-0 and 16-4 leads on the way to an 84-71 win before a rocking crowd of 4,200 at Langford Chaparral Center Monday night.

And don't underestimate the power of the crowd. "Every time you started to drag and feel tired, you'd look up in the stands. And that crowd would make you want to go," said freshman Ricky Grace, who, after missing his first six shots, wound up the night as the Chaps' high scorer with 19.

"That was the difference tonight over the first game," chimed in 6-9 Teviin Binns, who had an 18 point night, "Home, the crowd and we also were prepared a lot better this time."

Part of that preparation was rotating Binns to the outside in the offensive pattern, where he frequently wound up with the ball in the first half. "Coach wanted them to come out with me to give Tony, Chuckie (Graves), Eddie (Frazier) and Derrick (Lewis) shooting room inside."

It worked to the extent that MC got 34 points out of those "off side" post men with Wright and Frazier leading the way with 12 each.

AND ONCE again, it was the Chaps' bench that played a decisive role as MC clinched its fourth Western Junior College Athletic Conference title in five years. Wright and Vernon Coleman picked up two early personals. Coleman came back only briefly before intermission and Wright didn't appear again until the final half, yet the Chaps still were up 39-27 at intermission.

MC, now 15-2 in conference with only a date against Western Texas College at Snyder Thursday left, raised its overall record to 25-4. Odessa College slipped to 13-4, but the Wranglers have second place locked up and with it an automatic spot in the Region V tournament.

And while this decided the WJCAC champion, the teams probably will meet again, if all goes the way it should, in the Region V tournament. And that would be the most important game of all.

AS IT turned out, the game was decided on that opening salvo. "They came out and pushed us good early in the game," agreed Archie Myers, OC coach. "That was the difference. I was proud of my kids though. It's a 40-minute game and they didn't panic and made a good comeback. But tonight we got outplayed."

Take away that opening charge and it was an even game the rest of the way. Although OC never got in front, the Wranglers never lost their poise and kept the pressure on until the closing moments.

Hitting 10-for-10 from the field to start the second half, the Wranglers whittled MC's lead to 48-44 with 13:55 left, but that was as close as OC was to come.

One reason OC never caught up was Grace, although after going 0-for-his-first-six shots, he looked like he'd fallen off another motorcycle. "The important thing was that I didn't lose confidence. I knew I could make the shots I was getting," he explained.

He did that, hitting his last seven in a row and nine of his last 10 while contributing seven assists.

"I wasn't discouraged," said Stone of Grace's slow start, "He always plays well in big games. I knew he'd come around."

Grace drove for two and then hit an outside jumper to keep OC at bay, 52-46, during that tenuous period and Coleman bombed away with a 20-footer before Binns, off a Coleman feed, converted a twister from the baseline and added the accompanying foul to make it 57-48. The Chaps maintained their distance the rest of the way. But with a team that shoots like the Wranglers, you never really breathe easy.

BINNS HAD five blocks, three in the awesome early run, and also was credited with three assists and three steals in addition to those 18 points, 12 of which came in the crucial last half.

For OC, Mark Benoit scored 19, 11 in the second half, and Pat Fairs had 27 while 6-7 Dewayne Chism was held to seven.

The Chaps have never been more intimidating than in the game's first seven minutes.

What was billed as a Shootout started out more like a Blowout. MC ran off 14 straight points with Wright driving to the basket on the tip. Zeak Williams fed Wright on a steal and Chuckie Graves set up Binns on a beautifully timed alley-oop dunk. Graves hit a 15-footer and Williams soloed on a theft before Graves and Wright completed the run. Four minutes had elapsed and OC not only hadn't scored, but had managed just three shots.

CHAPSTYQUES—Since his second season at MC, Stone's Chaps have won two regionals, finished runnerup twice and third once...Before starting a run of three straight titles, MC had third and second place finishes, but that second place Regional team in 1979-80 could well have been the second best team in the nation. Unfortunately, MC played in the same league as Western Texas' national champs...The Area Coaches registered their traditional win over the Media, only this time it was closer, 87-70, which means either the Media is getting better or the Coaches are getting older...

OC winds up against Clarendon Thursday...OC is 25-5 after the loss...

MC freshmen shine in title game

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For a brief span down the stretch of Midland College's 84-71 win over Odessa College Monday night, the 4,200 fans in attendance at the Chap Center may have gotton a glimpse of the Chaps' future.

It was a short look, perhaps only two minutes long, but when sophomore center Teviin Binns picked up his fourth foul with 5:26 to go, 6-foot-6 freshman Eddie Frazier entered the game, joining fellow frosh Tony Wright and Ricky Grace.

The three, combined with forward Derrick Lewis, could form a tight nucleus to help Stone next season after graduating four of Monday's starters and the injured Lawrence Chumbly.

"We don't get the chance to play together very much, but when we do, we sure do like it," Frazier said of his front court partner Wright.

EVEN STONE was impressed with the play of his freshmen.

"Those freshmen really are coming around," Stone admitted. But the eighth-year head man added, "We're still recruiting some more, you can never rely on everybody to carry over."

Grace, a 6-3 guard from Wilmer-Hutchins in Fort Worth, led the bunch with 19 points and

Cowboys, Redskins take over Chap tonight

From Staff Reports

One of the National Football League's most heated rivalries will be resumed at 7:30 p.m. today when the Cowboys play the Redskins, on the basketball court at Langford Chaparral Centerl.

The benefit game will match the Dallas Cowboys Hoopsters vs. the Redskin D.C. Warriors in the RepublicBank-First National "Scalp the 'Skins" Challenge.

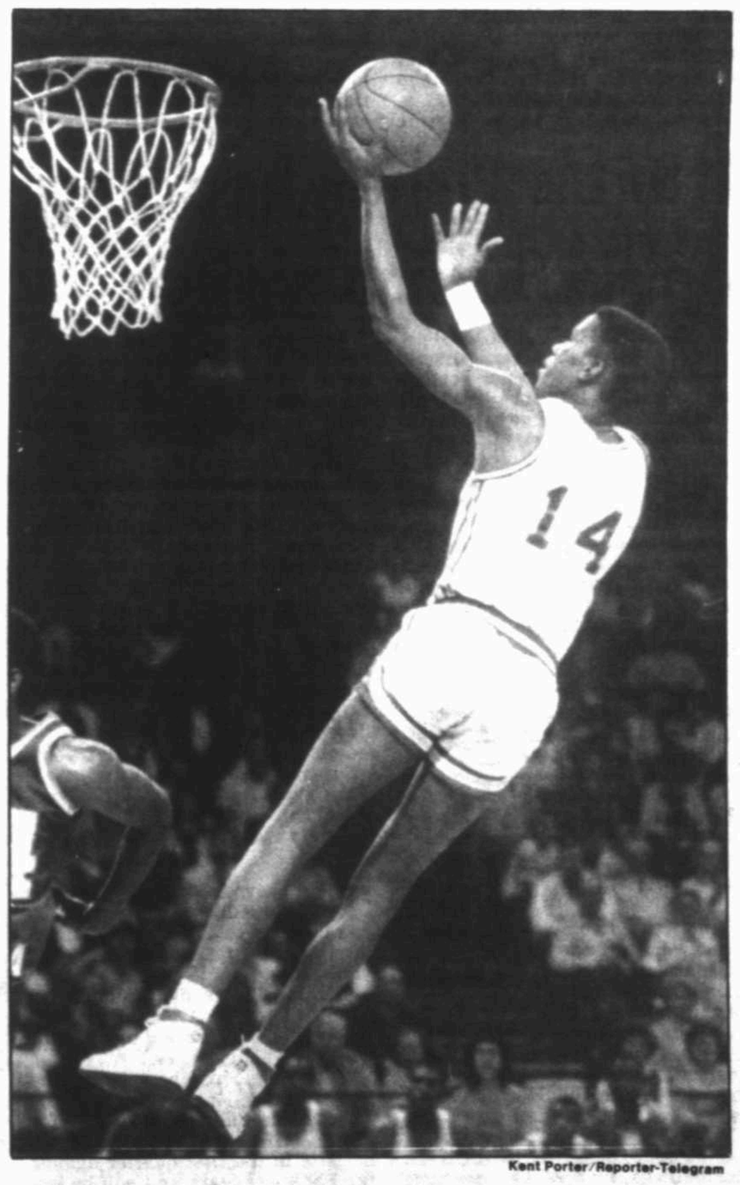

The Cowboys will be captained by running back Tony Dorsett, a Dallas favorite ever since he came off the University of Pittsburgh campus as a Heisman Trophy winner and joined the Cowboys in 1977. Also on the Cowboys' roster will be defensive backs Bill Bates, Everson Walls, Michael Downs, Dennis Thurman and Dextor Clinskcale; wide receiver Tony Hill; tight end Doug Cosbie and defensive lineman Ed "Too Tall" Jones.

Art Monk, the record-setting receiver, captains the Warriors and will have for teammates defensive backs Curtis Jordan, the Texas Tech ex, Tony Peters, Ken Coffey; wide receivers Charlie Brown and Calvin Muhammad, tight end Mike Williams and Anthony Jones; defensive lineman Perry Brooks and punter Jeff Hayes.

The game is being presented by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, KNFM/KMND radio and KMID-TV with special promotional consideration by Holiday Inn Country Villa, Gardski's Restaurant, Bill Williams Tire Company, Bud Light, Lamar Advertising and Delta Air Lines.

At halftime of the 48-minute game, an array of Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins items will be auctioned off with the proceeds going to a local charity. For each point scored in the game, $5 will be given in the name of RepublicBank-First National Midland to a charity to be named.

Tickets are $8 and $6 at the Chaparral Center and Endless Horizons.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Night they shot Lee's Rebels

And we thought the Wild West was dead. Pistol whipping was supposed to be behind us with the passage of Jesse James, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, Billy The Kid and the Daltons.

But now the infamous Don Coleman of Lubbock goes down as one of the meanest and badest gunslingers of our time. It was his pistol whipping of the Midland Lee Rebels last Friday night in the Lubbock Coronado gym that brought us back to the days of Wild West remembrance.

In this case, however, it was Coleman's lack of shooting skill that killed the Rebels in the 62-61 overtime bi-district basketball loss to Amarillo Palo Duro.

COLEMAN'S misfiring track pistol surely caused a stink — and he's still walking the streets as a free man. Where is Liberty Valance when you really need him?

Coleman says he tried to end the game by firing his track pistol prior to a true shot by Lee's Anthony Dickens. The gun only hit an empty cylinder and about two seconds later, Coleman managed to fire his smoke — after a referee had signaled Dickens' shot as good.

Lee had time to celebrate a victory before Coleman had time to announce to the officials of the error. Then Lee had to stage a quick funeral service as playoff death was announced. What a way for a season to end.

Coleman's true guilt may lie in the fact that he was using a pistol in which he knew there was an empty chamber — "somewhere." He admitted that much, but he also says that Dickens' shot was late and that's the "bottom line."

It was a disturbing night for Lee coach Paul Stueckler, who admitted, "I've been coaching 31 years and I've never lost a game like that. There was no chance to talk with the officials. A policeman had them out of there even before we could talk with them."

AND TO make matters worse for the Lee boss, he looked at the game tape on Saturday morning. He hurt even worse after that experience.

"You can hear the gym buzzer in the background and all I can say is that the shot was good. It was taken in time. You can also hear the gun about two seconds later. I really didn't need to see that game tape. It made me feel bad all over again," said Stueckler.

It is the "Phantom Pistol" that will go down in Lee basketball history as the straw that broke this particular camel's back, but Stueckler said there was another part of the game that was even worse in his viewpoint.

With 4:28 left in regulation play, another strange occurance happened. Lee was called for a foul, Palo Duro huddled at the free throw line and Sammye Campbell came out to shoot the free throw. He missed the shot and action headed down court where a foul was called against Palo Duro.

Dons' coach Ed Smith was waving his arms at the officials as play stopped and told officials that Campbell was not the man that should have been at the line. One official agreed and sent Glenn Hayes to the line while Lee's Tim Hill had to wait at the other end of the court for his chance to shoot free throws. Hayes hit both shots, Hill missed both of his and Palo Duro had a 46-45 lead.

"I still don't understand all that," said Stueckler. "It was a planned thing by Palo Duro. They knew No. 44 wasn't supposed to shoot because they huddled and then sent him out. When he missed, they said No. 20 (Hayes) should be up there and the official agreed. The tape clearly shows that neither was fouled. It was No. 12 (Terry Perkins) who was fouled. That's a big play in the game."

PERKINS DIDN'T score a point in the game and never was at the free throw line.

"I asked the officials how they knew that No. 20 (Hayes) was supposed to be at the line when they had already let No. 44 shoot (Campbell). To me this was the worst decision in the game. I do think the guy with the gun (Coleman) was shocked and confused when his gun didn't fire, but I really don't understand this foul thing. And we got no explanation."

It was all part of this Steven Spielberg ending for the Rebels. It was only fitting. Lee was last seen being sucked into TV screen.

There is no way to really know if it had any bearing, but a cup of water was spilled at the scoring table during the overtime period. Are Gremlins real?

'Boats ground 'Slingers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Gunslingers didn't know which to be more in awe of — Memphis quarterback Walter Lewis and his backfield mates or the Showboats' defense.

Enroute to Memphis' 20-3 victory Monday night in the opening game for both teams in the United States Football League 1985 season, Lewis passed for three touchdowns and running back Leonard Williams gained 136 yards.

At the same time, the Showboats' defense held San Antonio without a touchdown for the first time in the Gunslingers' two-year history.

"Memphis is to be complimented," San Antonio Coach Jim Bates said. "They did an excellent job on both sides of the ball. They ran the ball better than anyone we've seen."

Williams' rushing total and the Showboats' 243 yards and 22 first downs were the most ever racked up by a San Antonio opponent.

Lewis passed 25 yards to wide receiver Greg Moser for a second-period score and connected on a 35-yard scoring play to wide receiver Derrick Crawford in the third period.

Lewis' last scoring pass went to tight end Gary Shirk for 4 yards with just 35 seconds gone in the final quarter.

The score came four plays after linebacker Lemont Jeffers recovered a fumble by San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel on the Gunslingers' 15.

It was Lewis' second strong showing in as many years against the Gunslingers. Although he had trouble much of last season, when Memphis ranked 15th among the 18 USFL teams in passing, Lewis shredded the Gunslingers in 1984 for five touchdown passes and 221 yards.

Bucs' Frobel fights for job

Associated Press

Doug Frobel was expected to step into Dave Parker's shoes as the right fielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates. Now Frobel might be following Parker's footsteps out of town.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said he plans to keep only six outfielders this season and that Frobel will have to earn a spot with the Pirates during spring training.

"He doesn't have a job. He must win one," Tanner said of Frobel, who batted only .203 last season with 12 home runs and 84 strikeouts in 275 at-bats in 1984.

"I turned into a brutal player last season," Frobel said. "I'm ready to fight for a job. If I don't win a regular job, I'm prepared to come off the bench and help the team."

FROBEL'S dilemma was shared by many players taking part in early workouts Monday at baseball spring training sites in Florida and Arizona.

Another player attempting to overcome a disappointing 1984 is New York Yankees infielder Andre Robertson. He spent much of last season in the minors in a continuing effort to overcome the affects of a 1983 auto accident. Although he is still experiencing some pain in his right shoulder, he threw effectively during a workout Monday at the Yankees' Fort Lauderdale, Fla., training facility.

Cincinnati Reds outfielder Cesar Cedeno reported to the clubs' Tampa, Fla., camp on Monday, three days after pleading no contest to a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Spring Training

Cedeno entered the plea in a Houston courtroom in connection with a Jan. 23 auto accident. No one was hurt in the crash, in which Cedeno's car crashed into a tree. He was fined $400 and ordered to pay $7,000 for damage to property. He also received a suspended 120-day sentence and was placed on two years' probation.

Rookie Manager John Felske opened the Philadelphia Phillies camp at Clearwater, Fla., by welcoming seven catchers and 21 pitchers. The first workout involving the entire team is slated for Sunday.

The club announced the signings of pitchers Kevin Gross and Rocky Childress, catcher Mike Diaz, infielders Francisco Melendez, Rick Schu and Ken Jackson and outfielder Randy Salava.

Still unsigned are pitchers Charlie Hudson, Mike Maddux and Rodger Cole, catcher Darren Daulton, and outfielders Jeff Stone and Chris James.

Jerry Remy and Dave Stapleton, veteran Boston Red Sox infielders who missed much of 1984 with knee injuries, began their respective comebacks Monday at Winter Haven, Fla.Remy, 32, and Stapleton, 31, participated with batterymen in the muscle-stretching calisthenics and worked out in the infield, but skipped batting practice.

New York Mets pitcher Ron Darling, overshadowed last year by fellow rookie Dwight Gooden, said he hopes to ring up some Gooden-like numbers this season.

"I want to pitch at least 225 innings, complete a minimum of 10 games and cut down on my walks," said Darling, who won 12 games for the Mets as a rookie last season, but only two after the All-Star break.

Third baseman Paul Molitor, out last year following elbow surgery in May, made his first batting appearance as the Milwaukee Brewers staged a workout at Peoria, Ariz.

"It was kind of a strange feeling after not being in there for nine months," said Molitor. "It was a good feeling."

ANOTHER VETERAN on the mend is Detroit pitcher Milt Wilcox, who is trying to overcome a shoulder injury and reclaim a spot in the starting rotation for the World Series champions.

"He's coming along fine," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "The only thing we want to make sure of is that we don't rush him."

For that reason, Wilcox took part only in an exercise session Monday. He might get the go-ahead to throw next week, Anderson said.

The San Francisco Giants hope that coach Chuck Hiller's misfortune isn't an omen for the upcoming season. The former Giants second baseman was struck in the back of the neck by a batted ball during a workout at San Francisco's Scottsdale, Ariz., camp. Hiller stepped from behind a protective screen near second base to pick up a baseball and was struck by another ball. He suffered facial cuts when his glasses broke.

USFL's Usher hedging on 1986 fall switch

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Harry L. Usher, the new commissioner of the United States Football League, said he isn't sure 1986 is the right time for the league to switch to a fall playing schedule.

"I'm convinced that fall is the right decision. My only doubt is when, not whether," Usher said Monday at a press conference.

He said he will try to make the change work because team owners voted for it. But he said he would suggest alternatives if the change from a spring schedule by 1986 "is not workable."

Discounting suggestions that players such as Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie would be the "savior of the USFL," Usher said the league most needs "the ability to compete for network time."

ABC's telecast of Sunday's Birmingham-New Jersey game, when Flutie made his pro debut, received a much larger rating share than NBC and CBS programs in the same time slot, Usher said.

"The USFL is rapidly approaching the point when it will be on an economic and competitive par with the NFL," Usher said.

USFL quarterbacks hit both highs, lows

Associated Press

Jim Kelly sizzled, Doug Flutie struggled, and Brian Sipe and Chuck Fusina were sidelined. Those were among the quarterback fates on the first Sunday of the United States Football League season.

Kelly, the Houston Gamblers' quarterback, woke up Sunday morning with a sore shoulder, took two pain-relief tablets, then threw for 574 yards — an American professional record — including five touchdowns, in a 34-33 comeback victory over the Los Angeles Express.

"I've been in comebacks before, but never anything like that," said Kelly, the league's most valuable player last year when he tossed for 44 touchdowns. "Pulling out the that win was the best feeling I ever had in my life."

Houston had trailed 33-13 in the final quarter. Kelly completed 35 of 54 passes, hitting three TDs in the final 10 minutes. Ricky Sanders' 39-yard reception and Toni Fritsch's conversion decided the game.

Flutie, the rookie Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, got off to a shaky start, throwing nine straight incompletions and two interceptions against the Birmingham Stallions, but rallied the New Jersey Generals, who wound losing 38-28 after trailing 31-7.

"I wasn't nervous or uncomfortable," Flutie said. "I knew the offense was ready to play, but I was playing poorly for nearly three quarters. I couldn't get any rhythm started. I couldn't get a first down, and the biggest disappointment was we didn't have the ball very much."

Flutie's pro debut figures were: 12 completions in 27 attempts, three interceptions, two touchdowns, 189 yards.

"I think I'm ready," said Flutie, owner of the NCAA total yardage record. "I didn't prove it today, but I believe I will next week."

Meanwhile, Sipe, the veteran who was traded by the Generals to the Jacksonville Bulls to make way for Flutie, suffered a separated shoulder late in the first quarter against the Baltimore Stars, and will be lost for at least six weeks and possibly the season.

Robbie Mahouz, who started six games for the Bulls last season, replaced Sipe and completed 17 of 24 passes for 132 yards and one touchdown in Jacksonville's 22-14 victory over the Stars.

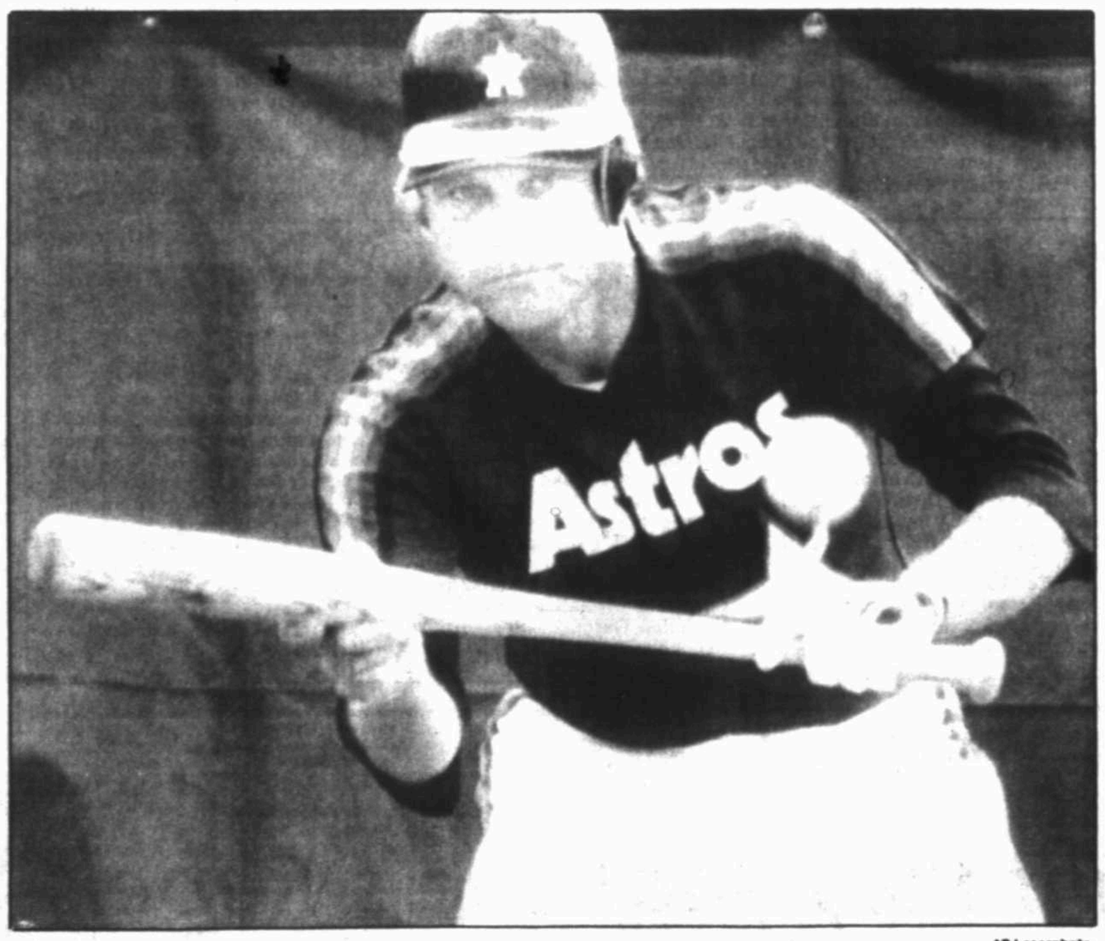

The status of Fusina, Baltimore's quarterback, will be determined this week. He injured his right throwing hand early in the third quarter.

Oakland Invaders' quarterback Bobby Hebert had a big day, tossing four TDs in a 31-10 victory over the Denver Gold. He connected on 15 of 26 tosses for 233 yards. He had one interception.

Portland, a 9-7 loser to Arizona, will be without running back Marcus Dupree, who suffered left knee ligament damage, and was undergoing tests Monday and faced possible surgery.

Dr. Jim Schader, Portland's team physician, called the injury serious.

Dupree was injured with 2:07 left in the game after rushing for 69 yards on 17 carries, including an 11-yard touchdown run.

Astros face same old problem

Houston still needs righty power

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have a new spring training address and shorter fences in 1985, but they'll still be plagued by an old problem when the full team begins workouts in Florida this week.

The Astros made no off-season trades in their efforts to obtain right-handed hitting power. They failed to sign free agent Sixto Lezcano, once again leaving Manager Bob Lillis to his creative devices in figuring out a starting lineup.

Jose Cruz in left field and Bill Doran at second base at least know the positions they will play and Craig Reynolds is the likely shortstop because of the uncertainty of Dickie Thon's comeback after being struck in the eye by a pitched ball last year.

Terry Puhl is another certain starter but he may be shifted from right field to center field to allow Lillis to platoon Jerry Mumphrey in right field, possibly with Kevin Bass.

After that, the lineup picture gets fuzzy.

Lillis may platoon Denny Walling and Phil Garner at third and the first base possibilities include veteran Enos Cabell, Harry Spilman or Glen Davis.

Then there is catching. Lillis flatly says that the catching duties will be decided in spring training. Mark Bailey and veteran Alan Ashby are the front-runners.

Bailey has power potential at the plate and that's a key qualification for Lillis in his search for a steady catcher.

Joe Niekro, Nolan Ryan and Bob Knepper are solid as starting pitchers if they are healthy. Knepper is recovering from knee surgery and Ryan, 38, was slowed by several injuries last season.

The Astros will need to choose fourth and fifth starters from among Mike Scott and Mike Madden, who had inconsistent performances in 1984, and Jeff Heathcock, who is recovering from a serious knee injury.

The bullpen could be Houston's strongest area with Dave Smith, Frank DiPino, Bill Dawley and Joe Sambito as prominent figures.

The Astros have shortened the Astrodome fences by 10 feet down each foul line and six feet in centerfield to help the power shortage. Astros hitters like it and the pitchers, whose margin for error is shortened, don't.

"It's something they should have done a long time ago," Puhl said.

No one argues about the team's move from their delapidated training facility in Cocoa, Fla. to a new, $5.5 million facility at Kissimmee, Fla.

The Astros have started 0-9 and 1-6 over the last two seasons and part of the blame is placed on the lack of practice time caused by flooded practice fields.

The new facility at Kissimmee is a drainage system that automatically goes into operation when it rains.

FROSH

seven assists in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference title-clinching victory. Included were a pair of buckets with the Wranglers threatening the MC lead at 50-44 and 52-48 midway through the second half.

But it may have been Wright and Frazier, the beefy front line combination, that put the most fear into OC.

During the deciding 14-0 spurt to open the game, Wright, the most physically dominating Chaparral, took the opening tip right to the basket and layed in the first two of his 12 points on the night. It wasn't long before the sky-high Wright picked up his third and fourth. The next time down the floor, after a picture-perfect steal and feed by guard Zeak Williams, Wright muscled along the baseline for another pair.

"I told our players the inside play might decide the game," Stone said. I guess Tony took it to heart."

TO GO with his point production, Wright contributed five rebounds, and four assists — perhaps a hidden part of Wright's game.

Despite his size and bulk, he weighs about 230 pounds, Wright played some guard in high school and sees the floor as well as a playmaker.

"Me and Eddie play well together, I see him a lot when he's open," Wright said. "And he's such a good rebounder, I don't have to rebound as much and can move around the floor."

Stone would rather he not move around too much — he's too valuable as a scorer and rebounder underneath.

"He can do that, he's got ball-handling ability," Stone said, but added with a smile, "we told him we didn't want him to tonight."

AS FOR Frazier, the other half of the "double-beef" combination, when Wright got into foul trouble, Frazier came on to score all seven of his points in the first half and keep the Wranglers at a safe distance.

Lewis, the thin man in the Chaps' future front line at 6-7, 185 pounds, also saw considerable playing time and contributed three points, five rebounds and three assists as well as providing some solid defense.

Although most MC followers are gearing up for the Region V tournament March 7-9 in Snyder, it's never too early for a look at the 1985-86 edition of MC basketball.

If it's anything like Monday's sneak preview, Chaparral fans could be in for a treat.

Baylor players support Wheeler

WACO, Texas (AP) — Thirteen of the 14 members of the Baylor basketball team, the team manager and its trainer Monday issued a statement of support for former backup center John Wheeler, who has been linked to a university investigation that led to the resignation of head Coach Jim Haller.

The players also said they have spoken to university officials about improprieties in the Baylor basketball program and said Haller's resignation was "inevitable" without Wheeler's participation in the investigation.

"John has been made out to be a disgruntled player seeking revenge, but in reality he represents a disgruntled team seeking justice," said the statement, released to the Dallas Times Herald, and television stations KTRK in Houston and KWTX in Waco.

Haller, 39, who has coached at the Southwest Conference school for eight years, turned in his resignation Friday, effective the end of this week. The night before, Dallas television station WFAA released portions of a tape-recorded conversation between Haller and Wheeler.

In the tape, Haller was heard discussing a check for $172, which Wheeler claimed were for car payments but which Haller later said involved holiday expense money for players.

On Sunday, Baylor President Herbert Reynolds confirmed that the university is continuing its investigation of the basketball program.

Byrd inks agreement

From Staff Reports

Midland High running back Keith Byrd has signed a scholarship agreement to play football with Central Florida University, a school based in Orlando, according to Midland High football coach Doug McCutchen.

Byrd rushed for 517 yards on 117 carries for a 4.4 yards per carry average as a senior on Midland High's 5-5 grid team. He also caught 11 passes for 121 yards. He scored 26 points for the Bulldogs.

"Central Florida is very high on academics and I think this will be a good choice for Keith," said McCutchen.

Memphis State gaining praise

Associated Press

Memphis State has been making believers out of opponents all season long. The latest is Southern Mississippi Coach M.K. Turk.

"There's no doubt in my mind Memphis State is one of the best teams in the country," Turk said Monday night after the fourth-ranked Tigers scuttled Southern Mississippi 78-63 to wrap up the Metro Conference's regular-season title.

"They really dominated the backboards both offensively and defensively," Turk said. "They really shut down our inside game and their big people were really intimidating inside."

Forward Baskerville Holmes scored 17 points and grabbed six rebounds and center William Bedford added 15 points and 10 rebounds as Memphis State ran its record to 23-2.

IN ANOTHER game, 17th-ranked Virginia Commonwealth got 18 points from Calvin Duncan in a 78-66 triumph over Old Dominion that gave the Rams the Sun Belt Conference regular-season title. Alfrederick Hughes scored 25 points and Andre Battle added 21 to boost No. 20 Loyola of Chicago, the regular-season Midwestern City Conference champs, to an 86-77 victory over Oral Roberts.

Southern Mississippi, 7-19, knew it had to slow down the pace if it had any hope of beating Memphis State, so Tiger Coach Dana Kirk was glad to see his team in a running mood.

"We knew we had to up the tempo because if the tempo wasn't up, we would be playing into their hands," Kirk said.

Thanks to its deliberate style, Southern Miss managed to cut a nine-point halftime deficit to 39-33. But Memphis State went on a 9-0 spree that ended all doubt about the outcome.

The balanced Tigers also got 12 and 10 points, respectively, from guards Vincent Askew and Andre Turner to compensate for the poor outing by forward Keith Lee. The 6-foot-10 Lee hit only one of six shots from the field and finished with eight points.

Top Twenty

Virginia Commonwealth, 22-5,

College Roundup

used a 14-1 spurt in the first five minutes of the second half to take command against feisty Old Dominion. The Rams charged to a 46-34 advantage and never looked back.

"VCU did a good job of defending our inside game, and that forced us to shoot even more shots outside," Old Dominion Coach Paul Webb, whose club wound up 17-10 overall and 9-5 in the Sun Belt, three games back of Virginia Commonwealth.

"We kept them from doing what they had done all year," said VCU Coach J.D. Barnett. "We wanted to make them beat us from the outside."

Mark Davis led Old Dominion with 18 points while Kenny Gattison added 14 points and 18 rebounds.

Loyola had a tussle on its hands before chalking up its 13th consecutive victory. The Ramblers broke away from a 50-50 deadlock to forge a nine-point second-half lead, only to have Oral Roberts cut the deficit to 74-71 with four minutes to play. But Loyola got four free throws down the stretch from Carl Golston to keep the Titans at bay.

Oral Roberts Coach Dick Acres was looking forward to the league's post-season tournament and another chance at the Ramblers.

"We'll play them a third time and they better be ready to play," he said.

Mark Acres, the coach's son, was a standout in defeat with 32 points, including 15 baskets in 22 shots from the floor.

Unranked Teams

In other games, Tennessee Tech clinched the regular-season crown in the Ohio Valley Conference by defeating runnerup Youngstown State 64-54; East Coast Conference regular-season champ Bucknell beat Lehigh 75-58; Southern Conference champion Tennessee-Chattanooga beat Appalachian State 64-59; Southwestern Athletic Conference titleist Alcorn State ripped Prairie View 104-86; Connecticut shaded Boston College 74-68 in the Big East; Holy Cross nipped Fairfield 58-56 and Virginia Tech beat South Carolina 78-67.

NC State makes AP Top 20 poll

Associated Press

The memories of the 1983 NCAA basketball championship are still fresh in North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano's mind, but he'll be proud of his 1985 team even if there are no banners to hang from the rafters of the school's gym.

The 1983 season was the dream season for Valvano, when his team came from nowhere to defeat Houston for the national crown.

But if 1983 was a dream, 1985 has been something of a nightmare.

"This team has been given a lot of adversity and they've been able to focus on the job at hand," Valvano said Monday after the Wolfpack moved back into the college basketball rankings at No. 16. "If they have anything in common with the 1983 team, it's that they don't quit."

Valvano has suffered through the loss of freshman center Chris Washburn, a highly recruited player who was dismissed from the team after he was arrested on charges of stealing a fellow athlete's stereo. He has been criticized for spending too much time promoting cookbooks and doing television commentary, and not enough on coaching the team.

BUT MONDAY, as he oversaw practice, he could smile because NC State once again was ranked. He smiled because his team has beaten Southern Methodist, Duke and North Carolina, which were all ranked in the Top 20 at the time. He smiled because it was about time.

"I don't believe there is a legitimate Top 20," Valvano said. "There are so many good basketball teams, that we probably need a Top 40. But it's nice."

The Wolfpack is riding a six-game winning streak and is tied for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead with North Carolina at 8-4. Once 7-2, the Wolfpack fell to 9-5 after losing three straight to St. John's, Maryland and Kentucky.

"We've made some readjustments," Valvano said. "We were too high after wins and too low after losses. But basketball tends to give you another opportunity.

"Given that we were ranked in the Top 20 during preseason, and then were deemed banished, it feels good," Valvano said.

NC State was as high as ninth on Dec. 10 and was last ranked in the Dec. 31 poll, coming in 17th.

Valvano is reluctant to draw too many comparisons between the 1983 championship team and the present squad. Though forward Lorenzo Charles, center Cozell McQueen, and guard Terry Gannon were members of the 1983 team, Valvano says the situations they have faced have been markedly different.

In 1983, hot-shooting guard Derrick Whittenburg broke his foot in January and was lost until late February. The Wolfpack slipped to 9-7 and finished the regular season at 17-10 before defeating Virginia and Ralph Sampson in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

But Whittenburg did return. Chris Washburn won't be back this year.

"That kind of adversity (in 1983) brought the team together," Valvano said. "The kind of adversity we've had this year can tear a team apart. I have special pride in this team. I'm probably more proud of this group."

TWO NEW teams in the Top 20 were Arizona, which is 19th, and Loyola, Ill., which came in No. 20. Arizona, 20-7 is tied for the Pac-10 Conference lead with Southern Cal. Loyola already has clinched the Midwestern City Conference regular-season title with a 20-6 mark.

St. John's and Georgetown — who meet this week — remained Nos. 1 and 2. For the first time this season, the 24-1 Redmen were a unanimous choice.

St. John's, which holds the nation's longest current winning streak at 19 games, received all 64 first-place votes from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Redmen, undefeated in 14 Big East Conference games, face Georgetown, 25-2 and 12-2, which was named second on every ballot, Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden.

Michigan, 21-3, and Memphis State, 23-2, remained third and fourth, respectively.

Duke and Oklahoma switched places from last week. The Blue Devils, 20-5, had 934 points and Oklahoma, 22-5, fell to sixth with 901 points.

Louisiana Tech, 24-2, made the jump from 10th to seventh as it clinched the Southland Conference regular-season title. North Carolina made an even bigger leap as the Tar Heels, 21-6, climbed from 13th to eighth.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 22-3, improved from 11th to ninth, while Georgia Tech, 19-6, was 10th.

Kansas, 22-6, leads the Second Ten followed by Syracuse, Southern Methodist, Georgia, Tulsa, North Carolina State, Virginia Commonwealth, Illinois, Arizona and Loyola of Illinois.

Selective IRS audits paying off in taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service decision to become more selective in the tax returns it audits is paying off.

Although the number of returns audited is declining each year — it was 127 of each 10,000 filed last year, compared with 150 per 10,000 in 1983 — additional taxes and penalties assessed as a result of those examinations are up. The IRS assessed $14.3 billion extra last year, 4.3 percent more than a year earlier.

Audits of the most-complex returns (including corporations) resulted in additional taxes and penalties averaging $11,584 per return, up 13 percent from 1983. The most-common audit, in which a taxpayer is ordered to bring records to the IRS office and talk with an auditor, produced an average increase of $1,314, up 33 percent. And audits conducted entirely by mail resulted in an average 119-percent boost in added taxes and penalties, to $692.

"We are getting better audits," said IRS spokesman Wilson Fadely, emphasizing the agency's targeting of returns filed by large corporations and by individuals investing in suspicious tax shelters.

The IRS audits 71 percent of corporations with assets of $100 million and more; 4 percent of individuals with incomes above $50,000 and 5.3 percent of those who report profit or loss from a business with gross receipts of $100,000 or more.

The percentage of total returns audited has declined from 260 per 10,000 in 1976, due in part to the increasing complexity of the tax laws and the lag in modernizing IRS computers. The Congressional Budget Office estimates each $1 spent to increase audit coverage would produce $8 in revenues. But CBO also suggests such action would "impose additional compliance burdens on all taxpayers — including honest ones."

For most people, April 15, 1985, is now the absolute deadline for making a contribution to a 1984 Individual Retirement Account. Despite that rule change, you still may claim an IRA contribution and not make the deposit until you receive your tax refund — as long as that is no later than April 15.

Even if you get an extension on filing your return this year, the IRA deadline is still April 15.

Recent tax bills introduced in Congress would:

—Declare that non-profit community crime prevention organizations are charities qualifying for tax deductible contributions. This would include groups that patrol neighborhoods and those that provide instruction in self-defense and crime prvention. (By Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.)

—Deny a tax deduction for any food, lodging or entertainment purchased for business purposes from any facility that limits access on the basis of race, sex or religion. (Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn.)

—Impose a tax on elevators and escalators and use the money to finance an earthquake engineering research center. (Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif.)

—Prohibit Americans from using the foreign tax credit — which reduces U.S. taxes $1 for each $1 paid to another country — to offset taxes paid to South Africa. (Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y.)

Suing the IRS in Tax Court may be a little more expensive starting May 1. The court says the filing fee for any suit will be $60.

The change affects only "small tax cases," those involving a tax deficiency of no more than $10,000 in any year; these cases may not be appealed. A taxpaper without funds may ask a waiver of the fee. The $60 fee already applies to regular cases.

Midland firms are able to inspect a fully fur nished mock-up of corporate jet.

Gulfstream IV corporate jet mock-up on display

A full scale mock-up of the Gulfstream IV corporate jet measuring almost 60 feet in length and 8 feet in width went on display Monday at Memphis Aero, Midland Regional Airport.

The fully-furnished aircraft cabin is being shown to prospective customers and principals of the Midland-Odessa business community in private showings hosted by Gulfstream Aerospace Corporation, the aircraft's manufacturer.

Gulfstream management considers Midland one of the most important stops of a 21-city tour across the United States. The tour will end next May with the Gulfstream IV's shipment to France for the international Paris Air Show. This will be the mock-up's first showing on the European continent.

When the first of the intercontinental Gulfstream IVs flies late next year, it will be the fastest (almost 600 mph), longest range (approaching 4500 miles) business aircraft in the world. Its predecessor, the current-production Gulfstream III, holds world performance records for fastest flight around theworld, first business aircraft flight over both poles in one continuous mission, longest nonstop business flight, and numerous speed between two cities records.

The Gulfstream IV will be capable of flying at altitudes up to 45,000 feet and carrying up to 19 passengers and a crew of three in a cabin measuring 1709 cubic feet of volume, plus galley, lavatory, and baggage compartments.

The Gulfstream IV's range allows it to fly Chicago-to-Zurich or Miami-to-Buenos Aires nonstop. Power comes from advanced Rolls-Royce Tay engines burning 15 percent less fuel than earlier Rolls-Royce business jet engines, while still providing the extra performance and range.

PBPA calls for import fees, quotas

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) has issued a resolution calling for Congress to place import fees and/or import quotas on all imports and to eliminate foreign tax credits on all imports.

The resolution was drafted in opposition to the Treasury Department's proposed tax reform and simplification plans, and was offered as an alternative to the elimination of the domestic petroleum industry's tax incentives with percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs.

In the resolution, PBPA said that the tax incentives of depletion and intangibles had been utilized by the industry for over 70 years to expand and conserve the crude oil and natural gas reserves of America, and the removal of the incentives would greatly impact the national economy, banking system, and national security.

It said the strength of the independent producer which drills 95 percent of all wildcat wells and finds 70 percent of new oil and gas reserves would be seriously diminished by the elimination of the incentives and thousands of wells would be prematurely plugged and abandoned as a result.

Supercomputers now available

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists at small colleges and large universities alike will soon have access to the number-crunching power of supercomputers used by their counterparts overseas, the National Science Foundation says.

The government said Monday it will distribute $200 million over the next five years to establish and operate four National Advanced Scientific Computing Centers for the nation's academic researchers.

The NSF said federal money for the centers should attract matching funds from state and local governments, as well as industry, to help plug the supercomputing "gap" at American institutions.

The centers will be located at the University of California, San Diego; the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana; Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., and the John Von Neumann Center near Princeton, N.J.

NSF Director Erich Bloch told reporters that the institutions, which were selected from more than 20 applicants, will be linked together through satellite communications and are expected to be available for research late this year or early in 1986.

Researchers at colleges, universities and private research organizations nationwide will have access to the centers either through use of remote terminals or visiting the sites.

Those scientists chosen to use the facilities will be allocated time on the computers, but will not have to pay to use the devices, officials said.

Bloch said he hoped to set aside some computer hours, perhaps 2 percent or more, for promising new researchers who either have no computer experience or come from very small schools with no computer programs.

"Everyone should have the opportunity for access," he said in an interview. "You never know where the next brilliant idea will come from."

The idea of having centers stocked with the latest, high-speed supercomputers followed several studies that showed the country's science and engineering researchers needed better computers to keep up with their counterparts in competing countries.

Bloch said the foundation, which supports much of the country's academic research, discovered that "access to supercomputers was either inadequate or non-existent for most of our academic research community."

Astrophysicist Larry L. Smarr, an early promoter of the supercomputer center idea who will direct the facility at the University of Illinois, said he has had to travel to West Germany to use an American-made supercomputer for his work.

"When I came home, I really felt embarrassed for the United States of America," Smarr said Monday.

The machines, which can cost between $12 million and $15 million each, are too expensive for most colleges and universities to buy and operate individually.

Each of the four centers will receive awards of between $7 million and $13 million annually during the five-year period.

Officials said cost-sharing provisions of the awards require that state and local governments, industries and research institutions contribute money or services that should double the foundation grants.

Supercomputer schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of the institutions that are members of two consortia that have received National Science Foundation grants to build and operate supercomputers.

The following institutions are members of the San Diego consortium: Agouron Institute, San Diego; California Institute of Technology; National Optical Astronomy Observatories, Tucson, Ariz.; Research Institute of Scripps Clinic, San Diego; Salk Institute for Biological Studies, San Diego; San Diego State University; Southwest Fisheries Center, San Diego; Stanford University; University of California, Los Angeles; University of California, San Diego; Scripps Institution of Oceanography, San Diego; University of California, San Francisco; University of Hawaii, Manoa; University of Maryland; University of Michigan; University of Utah; University of Washington and the University of Wisconsin.

Members of the Von Neumann consortium include: University of Arizona; Brown University; University of Colorado; Harvard University; Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N.J.; Massachusetts Institute of Technology; New York University; University of Pennsylvania.

Kendavis firms avoid petitions

Involuntary petitions under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code were filed against only Kendavis Holding Co. and Kendavis Industries International, Inc., on February 21, according to Allen Eyler, director public relations for Kendavis Industries.

Eyler said no had been filed against any other Kendavis company, and all the companies remain unaffected by the involuntary filings. He also said that operations for all companies will be "business as usual" despite news reports to the contrary.

Record dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar left another day's records in shards today as dollar-hungry traders went on a European buying spree that more than made up for a selloff in the Far East. Gold prices stabilized after Monday's collapse.

The U.S. currency, which has now set records on 16 of 18 business days this month, hit a patch of profit-taking when trading began in the Far East. It closed in Tokyo at 260.85 yen, down more than two yen from late Monday's 263.05.

But when markets opened in Europe, the dollar rallied in trading delears called "hectic" and "unruly." In London, the U.S. currency recovered to 261.55 yen.

The dollar also set new standards against the British pound, Italian lira and French franc and reached a 13-year high against the West German mark.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0460, compared with $1.0560 Monday.

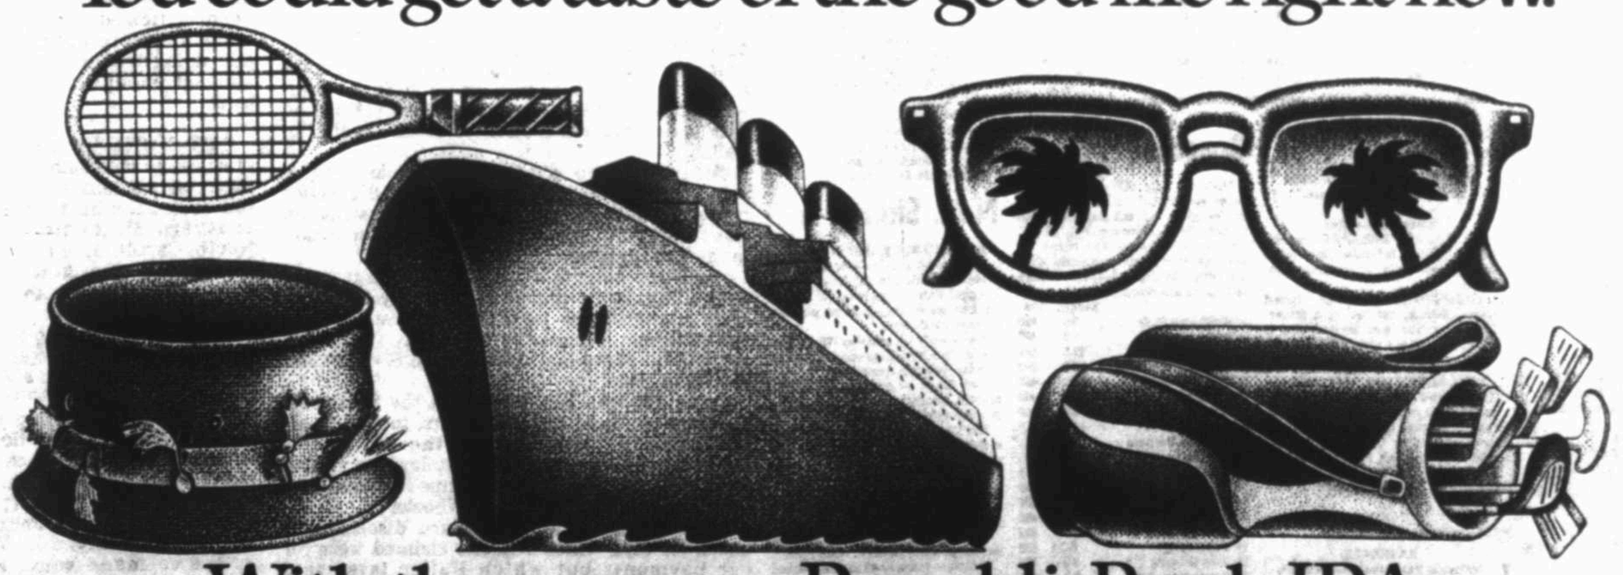

"The one-dollar pound must be a very real target in the market's mind," said a London dealer. "Parity is possible within the next few days."

Selective IRS audits paying off in taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service decision to become more selective in the tax returns it audits is paying off.

Although the number of returns audited is declining each year — it was 127 of each 10,000 filed last year, compared with 150 per 10,000 in 1983 — additional taxes and penalties assessed as a result of those examinations are up. The IRS assessed $14.3 billion extra last year, 4.3 percent more than a year earlier.

Audits of the most-complex returns (including corporations) resulted in additional taxes and penalties averaging $11,584 per return, up 13 percent from 1983. The most-common audit, in which a taxpayer is ordered to bring records to the IRS office and talk with an auditor, produced an average increase of $1,314, up 33 percent. And audits conducted entirely by mail resulted in an average 119-percent boost in added taxes and penalties, to $692.

"We are getting better audits," said IRS spokesman Wilson Fadely, emphasizing the agency's targeting of returns filed by large corporations and by individuals investing in suspicious tax shelters.

The IRS audits 71 percent of corporations with assets of $100 million and more; 4 percent of individuals with incomes above $50,000 and 5.3 percent of those who report profit or loss from a business with gross receipts of $100,000 or more.

The percentage of total returns audited has declined from 260 per 10,000 in 1976, due in part to the increasing complexity of the tax laws and the lag in modernizing IRS computers. The Congressional Budget Office estimates each $1 spent to increase audit coverage would produce $8 in revenues. But CBO also suggests such action would "impose additional compliance burdens on all taxpayers — including honest ones."

For most people, April 15, 1985, is now the absolute deadline for making a contribution to a 1984 Individual Retirement Account. Despite that rule change, you still may claim an IRA contribution and not make the deposit until you receive your tax refund — as long as that is no later than April 15.

Even if you get an extension on filing your return this year, the IRA deadline is still April 15.

Recent tax bills introduced in Congress would:

—Declare that non-profit community crime prevention organizations are charities qualifying for tax deductible contributions. This would include groups that patrol neighborhoods and those that provide instruction in self-defense and crime prvention. (By Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.)

—Deny a tax deduction for any food, lodging or entertainment purchased for business purposes from any facility that limits access on the basis of race, sex or religion. (Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn.)

—Impose a tax on elevators and escalators and use the money to finance an earthquake engineering research center. (Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif.)

—Prohibit Americans from using the foreign tax credit — which reduces U.S. taxes $1 for each $1 paid to another country — to offset taxes paid to South Africa. (Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y.)

Suing the IRS in Tax Court may be a little more expensive starting May 1. The court says the filing fee for any suit will be $60.

The change affects only "small tax cases," those involving a tax deficiency of no more than $10,000 in any year; these cases may not be appealed. A taxpaper without funds may ask a waiver of the fee. The $60 fee already applies to regular cases.

Midland firms are able to inspect a fully fur nished mock-up of corporate jet.

Gulfstream IV corporate jet mock-up on display

A full scale mock-up of the Gulfstream IV corporate jet measuring almost 60 feet in length and 8 feet in width went on display Monday at Memphis Aero, Midland Regional Airport.

The fully-furnished aircraft cabin is being shown to prospective customers and principals of the Midland-Odessa business community in private showings hosted by Gulfstream Aerospace Corporation, the aircraft's manufacturer.

Gulfstream management considers Midland one of the most important stops of a 21-city tour across the United States. The tour will end next May with the Gulfstream IV's shipment to France for the international Paris Air Show. This will be the mock-up's first showing on the European continent.

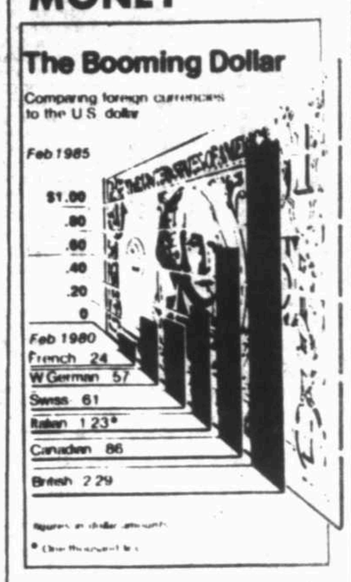

When the first of the intercontinental Gulfstream IVs flies late next year, it will be the fastest (almost 600 mph), longest range (approaching 4500 miles) business aircraft in the world. Its predecessor, the current-production Gulfstream III, holds world performance records for fastest flight around theworld, first business aircraft flight over both poles in one continuous mission, longest nonstop business flight, and numerous speed between two cities records.

The Gulfstream IV will be capable of flying at altitudes up to 45,000 feet and carrying up to 19 passengers and a crew of three in a cabin measuring 1709 cubic feet of volume, plus galley, lavatory, and baggage compartments.

The Gulfstream IV's range allows it to fly Chicago-to-Zurich or Miami-to-Buenos Aires nonstop. Power comes from advanced Rolls-Royce Tay engines burning 15 percent less fuel than earlier Rolls-Royce business jet engines, while still providing the extra performance and range.

Record dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar left another day's records in shards today as dollar-hungry traders went on a European buying spree that more than made up for a selloff in the Far East. Gold prices stabilized after Monday's collapse.

The U.S. currency, which has now set records on 16 of 18 business days this month, hit a patch of profit-taking when trading began in the Far East. It closed in Tokyo at 260.85 yen, down more than two yen from late Monday's 263.05.

But when markets opened in Europe, the dollar rallied in trading delears called "hectic" and "unruly." In London, the U.S. currency recovered to 261.55 yen.

The dollar also set new standards against the British pound, Italian lira and French franc and reached a 13-year high against the West German mark.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0460, compared with $1.0560 Monday.

"The one-dollar pound must be a very real target in the market's mind," said a London dealer. "Parity is possible within the next few days."

PBPA calls for import fees, quotas

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) has issued a resolution calling for Congress to place import fees and/or import quotas on all imports and to eliminate foreign tax credits on all imports.

The resolution was drafted in opposition to the Treasury Department's proposed tax reform and simplification plans, and was offered as an alternative to the elimination of the domestic petroleum industry's tax incentives with percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs.

In the resolution, PBPA said that the tax incentives of depletion and intangibles had been utilized by the industry for over 70 years to expand and conserve the crude oil and natural gas reserves of America, and the removal of the incentives would greatly impact the national economy, banking system, and national security.

It said the strength of the independent producer which drills 95 percent of all wildcat wells and finds 70 percent of new oil and gas reserves would be seriously diminished by the elimination of the incentives and thousands of wells would be prematurely plugged and abandoned as a result.

Supercomputers now available

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists at small colleges and large universities alike will soon have access to the number-crunching power of supercomputers used by their counterparts overseas, the National Science Foundation says.

The government said Monday it will distribute $200 million over the next five years to establish and operate four National Advanced Scientific Computing Centers for the nation's academic researchers.

The NSF said federal money for the centers should attract matching funds from state and local governments, as well as industry, to help plug the supercomputing "gap" at American institutions.

The centers will be located at the University of California, San Diego; the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana; Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., and the John Von Neumann Center near Princeton, N.J.

NSF Director Erich Bloch told reporters that the institutions, which were selected from more than 20 applicants, will be linked together through satellite communications and are expected to be available for research late this year or early in 1986.

Researchers at colleges, universities and private research organizations nationwide will have access to the centers either through use of remote terminals or visiting the sites.

Those scientists chosen to use the facilities will be allocated time on the computers, but will not have to pay to use the devices, officials said.

Bloch said he hoped to set aside some computer hours, perhaps 2 percent or more, for promising new researchers who either have no computer experience or come from very small schools with no computer programs.

"Everyone should have the opportunity for access," he said in an interview. "You never know where the next brilliant idea will come from."

The idea of having centers stocked with the latest, high-speed supercomputers followed several studies that showed the country's science and engineering researchers needed better computers to keep up with their counterparts in competing countries.

Bloch said the foundation, which supports much of the country's academic research, discovered that "access to supercomputers was either inadequate or non-existent for most of our academic research community."

Astrophysicist Larry L. Smarr, an early promoter of the supercomputer center idea who will direct the facility at the University of Illinois, said he has had to travel to West Germany to use an American-made supercomputer for his work.

"When I came home, I really felt embarrassed for the United States of America," Smarr said Monday.

The machines, which can cost between $12 million and $15 million each, are too expensive for most colleges and universities to buy and operate individually.

Each of the four centers will receive awards of between $7 million and $13 million annually during the five-year period.

Officials said cost-sharing provisions of the awards require that state and local governments, industries and research institutions contribute money or services that should double the foundation grants.

Supercomputer schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of the institutions that are members of two consortia that have received National Science Foundation grants to build and operate supercomputers.

The following institutions are members of the San Diego consortium: Agouron Institute, San Diego; California Institute of Technology; National Optical Astronomy Observatories, Tucson, Ariz.; Research Institute of Scripps Clinic, San Diego; Salk Institute for Biological Studies, San Diego; San Diego State University; Southwest Fisheries Center, San Diego; Stanford University; University of California, Los Angeles; University of California, San Diego; Scripps Institution of Oceanography, San Diego; University of California, San Francisco; University of Hawaii, Manoa; University of Maryland; University of Michigan; University of Utah; University of Washington and the University of Wisconsin.

Members of the Von Neumann consortium include: University of Arizona; Brown University; University of Colorado; Harvard University; Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N.J.; Massachusetts Institute of Technology; New York University; University of Pennsylvania.

Kendavis firms avoid petitions

Involuntary petitions under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code were filed against only Kendavis Holding Co. and Kendavis Industries International, Inc., on February 21, according to Allen Eyler, director public relations for Kendavis Industries.

Eyler said no had been filed against any other Kendavis company, and all the companies remain unaffected by the involuntary filings. He also said that operations for all companies will be "business as usual" despite news reports to the contrary.

Stock market mixed

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest-rate worries kept the stock market on the defensive Monday, although a few blue chips managed a modest rally.

Trading set its slowest pace in seven weeks on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 6.18 points last week, recovered 1.66 to 1,277.50. But many other, broader measures of market trends finished with clear-cut losses.

Volume on the Big Board came to 89.74 million shares, down from 93.68 million Friday and the lightest total since an 86.19 million-share day on Jan. 7.

Business people say US dollar 'overestimated'

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — It unites Democrats and Republicans, conservatives and liberals, monetarists and fiscalists, and academics and business people.

It is the contention that the U.S. dollar is "overvalued," and that because it is, the United States is unable to compete forcefully in many international markets and is losing jobs to foreign manufacturers.

Huge federal budget deficits are said to be a primary cause of the problem. High interest rates are said to reflect it. And a $100 billion-plus trade deficit is said to be proof of it.

That is the consensus — so complete, it sometimes seems you can't even get a good argument about it. Nor can you easily find anyone to contest the notion that the way to get the dollar back in line is to lower the deficit.

And yet, says economist Edward L. Hudgins, the consensus is based on myths. The dollar, he says, is valued highly because the U.S. economy is strong. There is no problem; no solution is needed, he says.

Yes, you can get an argument from Hudgins, a Heritage Foundation fellow who has listed at least 13 myths lying at the base of the dollar consensus.

The dollar, says Hudgins in a paper that seeks to debunk the popular assumptions, is high because "the United States today is viewed by investors as a safe haven, and the dollar as a secure store of value."

And that business about the deficits keeping interest rates high and that these rates account for the dollar's strength is also nonsense, according to Hudgins. There is no hard data to support such a contention, he says.

If there were a causal link between deficits and interest rates, he asks, how do you account for the relatively depressed value of currencies in France, with a 12 percent prime rate, and Italy, with a rate of 18 percent?

The fact is, says Hudgins, that the current value of the dollar is not unprecedented, as the consensus seems to believe. Indeed, he points out, the dollar barely has regained ground lost during the 1970s.

True, he says, there has been a recent surge in the dollar's value, but if you measure by a certain International Monetary Fund benchmark "the dollar in 1984 merely equalled its 1970 strength."

Hudgins is relentless.

The strong dollar has not hindered the recovery of European economies; it is the sluggish European economies that make the U.S. economy look so good, he says.

The strong dollar is not the sole cause of worsening Third-World debt; the high-priced dollar makes it easier for the Third World to sell goods to the United States, he says.

It isn't true either, he argues, that the strong dollar has hurt the U.S. economy by luring low-cost foreign goods to the U.S. market.

Those inexpensive goods, he says, keep U.S. inflation down. And doesn't that leave Americans with more money to spend on domestic goods and services?

Don't blame the high-priced dollar for U.S. unemployment either, as the consensus does, because Hudgins is ready for that argument too.

"The evidence is to the contrary," he writes in a paper for the foundation, a conservative think tank.

He notes that "as the strength of the dollar in foreign exchange has increased, unemployment in the United States has decreased."

The U.S. economy has created over 7 million jobs since 1980, he states, while in Western Europe, as many as 3 million jobs have been lost in the past decade.

Hudgins concedes that some U.S. jobs have been lost because of the dollar's negative impact on exports, but "industries using imports have fared well," he says.

The root of the job problem, he asserts, is that workers in many heavy industries are making wages much higher than the market can handle. "In these cases the strong dollar is only one cause of the problem, at most," he states.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Contractual plans' result in little or no profitable earnings

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We have made 87 payments of $20 each — a total of $1,740 — into a mutual fund plan and have reinvested all our dividends and capital gains distributions. Enclosed are two recent statements from the fund organization, showing we own 978.459 shares valued at $5.31 each. That makes the total value of this investment $5,195.62.

My husband started this mutual fund plan in April, 1961, "for our future." The "future" is now here. We are in our early 60s. Thank God we have other assets. Was this a good investment for almost 24 years? Should we cash in these mutual fund shares and put this "fortune" in a certificate of deposit?

A. I suspect you already know the answer to your first question. Although your mutual fund investment wasn't the worst in the world, there's no way it can be called "good."

Your total cost is the $1,740 you paid in, plus all the dividends and capital gains distributions you reinvested. The difference between that total cost "basis" and the amount you would receive by redeeming your shares — $5,195.62, according to your last statement — would be either a profit or a loss.

Because I don't know your total cost basis, it's impossible to say whether you will have a profit or a loss. I suspect you will have a small profit — no great financial reward after 24 years.

The major reason your investment turned out far less than great is that you've been putting money into a mutual fund "contractual plan." Such plans, which fell out of favor years ago, levied commission charges of up to 50 percent on the first 12 or 13 payments. That meant you had virtually no chance of "getting whole" for a long period of time. Maybe never — unless the value of the fund's shares increased.

Council proposes charter changes

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A "Minor change" and "Perkins provision" were among the alterations to the city charter considered Monday by the Odessa City Council.

A citizen committee unveiled 13 proposed changes to the city charter. During today's meeting, the council was expected to set an April 6 election date to poll registered Odessans on the proposed revisions.

The "Minor change" would be made to recall provisions in the current charter that stalled attempts to recall Mayor John Minor last April. An attendance policy for council members may be added to the charter in the aftermath of Councilman Thomas Perkins' six-month absence from his elected seat.

In May, disgruntled citizens moved to collect enough signatures to have a recall election following Minor's involvement in a highly publicized altercation at the home of a onetime girlfriend.

In the words of Catherine Halford, who organized the ill-fated recall efforts, the altercation "put the cap on it for a lot of people."

When elected, Minor had a suit pending against the city, which has not been settled. The suit was Minor's response to being fired from his job as municipal court administrator after he filed charges that led to the arrest of two high-ranking city officials.

But no recall election could be called without collecting signatures from 20 percent of Odessa's registered voters, half of whom had to have voted for Minor. Since only 8,152 people voted in the election, all but about 130 of the people that voted for Minor would have had to sign the recall petitions.

The proposed change would drop the requirement that half of those signing the petitions had voted for the mayor or councilmember subject to the recall. Rather than 50 percent of the entire electorate, signatures would be required from 50 percent of those who had voted in the regular election.

Charter Revision Committee Chairman John Mason hesitated to directly link the recall changes in the charter to the efforts to unseat Minor. "That's when it came to everybody's attention," he said.

Perkins, who was absent from the Monday work session, was the subject of controversy during six months he was absent from his district. From the time of his re-election in April by 8 votes through October, Perkins was serving in Washington D.C. as an intelligence officer with the Military Traffic Management Command of the U.S. Army.

A five-member committee of residents appointed by the other council members was to be formed to represent District 1 while Perkins was absent. But this group never materialized and the district was without their council representation until Perkins' return.

Mason also hedged on linking the absence rules to Perkins, but noted "No one thought it could happen before."

Under the proposed regulations calling for the council member to be replaced after missing 50 percent of meetings over a six-month period, Perkins would have lost his seat. He made only a few appearances at council meetings during the six-month military stint.

Once the absent member had been removed, the remaining council members would elect the short-term successor and set an election for voters to choose a permanent replacement, under the proposed policy.

Another change would add a councilman, bringing the number to six.

Noting trends toward increasing minority representation with single-member districts, Mason suggested this might be interpreted as a "move in the wrong direction" for the city's minorities. Adding an at-large position would be "diluting minority representation," he said, which could prompt lawsuits.

Also, bringing the voting council to six members would give the mayor the tie-breaking vote in many situations. "It would make it a very powerful position," Mason said.

Former Mayor A.P. Brown, a committee member backing the revision, said adding an at-large council member would cutdown on "partisanship" and make the mayor's job more important.

A run-off provision was also proposed. The committee presented the council with 13 propositions. After more discussion and revision, Odessans will be asked to cast their ballots for or against these changes to the city charter.

In the throes of love, Alfredo and Violetta create a scene at a lavish party from Verdi's romantic opera "La Traviata." Texas Opera Theater is bringing this production to Midland High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday. The event is sponsored by Midland Opera Theater.

Opera scheduled

From Staff Reports

The sensual, romantic and dramatic opera written by Verdi, "La Traviata," will be on stage Thursday night for one performance sponsored by the Midland Opera Theater.

Starting at 8 p.m. in Midland High School Auditorium, the opera will be sung in English and performed by Texas Opera Theater, featuring some of America's most promising singers. Tickets or information can be obtained by calling 684-4101.

The opera was based on Alexandre Dumas' story, "La Dame aux Camelias." It is a tale of family mores and tragic misunderstandings that stand between the beautiful courtesan Violetta and her gentleman suitor, Alfredo. Their love endures and ultimately only death can separate the couple.

West Odessa gets ambulances

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County Commissioners Court met Monday morning and tentatively agreed to establish ambulance service in far West Odessa.

Ken Nunley, from the Westside Council committee that studied the need for locating an emergency medical service unit in West Odessa, said 30,000 of the county's 130,000 people live in the western portion of the county outside the city limits.

Over the past 93 months, approximately 22 percent of all emergency calls to the Odessa Fire Department came from areas outside the city limits, according to the committee report.

"Of that 22 percent falling outside the city limits of Odessa," he said, "approximately 95 percent originate from West Odessa."

West Odessa citizens and businesses are primarily served by EMS units located at West University and Golder Ave. and West 8th St. and Santa Rosa under the current agreement between the city and county.

Statistics accumulated over the 93-month period show ambulance response time within the Odessa city limits is 3.1 minutes. "The response time for runs outside the city limits averages 7.5 minutes," he said.

Under the proposal, the county would fund an ambulance and paramedics stationed at the West Odessa Volunteer Fire Department.

Indecency trial delayed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The indecency with a child trial of a former Midland school teacher and Boy Scout master was postponed once again today and attorneys for both sides were instructed to not disclose the reasons.

According to Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, a formal motion was not made by defense attorney Vernon E. Reichle for a change of venue. Sources said Reichle Monday had mentioned filing a motion because of pre-trial publicity last week about the case of his client, Joseph Gallagher.

The Midland County Grand Jury indicted the 37-year-old Gallagher Dec. 12 on charges of indecency with a child he met at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains. Gallagher is alleged to have committed indecent exposure with the 11-year-old boy when the child spent the night with him July 22.

Wichita Falls police to transport man from jail

From Staff Reports

A man who barricaded himself for two hours in a westside house Saturday night which SWAT team members and Midland Police Department officers surrounded remained in city jail this morning.

Larry Dunn, 42, is expected to be transported by authorities in Wichita Falls later this week. Dunn and his wife, Anna, 27, were arrested after the two barricaded themselves in the house of a friend at 4209 Pleasant, police said.

Officers had gone to the house to serve six warrants, including possession and delivery of narcotics, out of Wichita Falls on Dunn, according to reports.

Ms. Dunn was taken to Midland County Jail Sunday. She was released Monday on a pre-set bond for misdemeanor charges of hindering apprehension, a county jail spokesman said.

A 20-year-old Midland man police say they caught Monday morning inside a southside convenience store after responding to a burglar alarm was arraigned Monday afternoon for burglary of a building.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail for Willie Earl Hudson at $20,000.

Hudson, who gave police an address at 1303 E. Cuthbert Ave., was found sitting on a walk-in cooler inside Freddie's Instant Shopping, 1301 E. Front St., by police dogs, officers said. The police coaxed the man down before arresting him. Two cigarette lighters identified by store owner Freddie Calderon were found on the man, according to reports.

James Lister, 1914 Morgan Way, reported Monday afternoon the burglary of his 1977 Dodge van, parked at the Highway Wrecking Co. garage, 200 S. Lee. Burglars reached through an unlocked vent to unlock the door between 7 p.m. Sunday and noon Monday, reports said. Taken were stereo equipment valued at $3,600 and a $675 guitar.

Angelia Lambert, 1905 N. D St., told police Monday morning her 1977 Ford Maverick was stolen from in front of her residence between midnight Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday. The locked car, which did not contain keys, was valued at $1,950.

A house at 3502 Canemont was burglarized between 7 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday, according to a report filed by Ron Lynch, 4905 Sherwood Drive. Entry apparently was gained through a door in the garage. Taken were $800 worth of items, including a hot water heater, vacuum, drill and a box of door knobs. A wall sustained $200 damage when the hot water heater was ripped from it.

Felecisima Collins, 1406 Chestnut, told police her house was entered and a lawn mower, stereo component and portable television set valued at a total of $900 were taken. Entry was gained between Friday and Monday by ripping off a screen door and breaking the glass above a door with a dead bolt, reports said.

A $400 microwave oven and a $350 cable television converter box were reported stolen from the Billie Caldiren residence, 2200 S. Lamesa Road No. 28. According to reports, entry was gained between 4:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Monday through an unlocked front door.

Thomas Eliason, 1615 Monterrey, told police a $200 equalizer was stolen from his unlocked 1985 Honda Accord while it was parked at his residence between 9 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. Monday. The carpet sustained $300 damage when the equalizer was pulled from the floor, according to reports.

Four wire-wheeled covers valued at a total of $300 were reported stolen Monday from a car believed to have been left outside in the lot at Village Lincoln-Mercury-Dodge, 3915 W. Wall Ave., reports said. According to the victim, Rose Marie White, 708 Osage, the 1981 Lincoln had been towed to the garage Thursday afternoon after it had stalled at a convenience store. The burglary was discovered at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Women not the only victims of Playboy

Last night I watched a made-for-TV movie about Playboy Bunnies.

Normally, of course, I restrict my TV viewing to PBS documentaries about polar bear migrations, and other such intellectual fare. But this movie was no mere jigglefest — it was all about journalism and the dawn of the feminist conciousness.

Kind of.

It was based on an article Gloria Steinem wrote in 1963 for Show Magazine. She infiltrated the New York Playboy Club by getting herself hired as a Bunny, then wrote an expose about working conditions in the hutch. In the process, she began to see how the women were being victimized by the same Playboy mystique that had attracted them in the first place.

I enjoyed the movie, though probably for all the wrong reasons. And I must concede that Hugh Hefner, that pipe-smoking, pajama-clad sybarite, has done women no favor by elevating lechery to an art form. But not all of Hefner's victims are female.

Let me tell you about my friend Dave.

We worked together several years ago in a failing Los Angeles market-research firm, and since there was little real work to do, I spent most of my time researching Dave. He proved to be a fascinating subject.

Dave, you see, was one of those people who had peaked too early. At 12, he was on top of the world: class president, teacher's pet, the apple of his parents' eye.

But after seventh grade, it was all downhill for Dave; the onset of puberty shuffled him to the bottom of the deck. Adults still liked him, but that was now a social handicap; the last person an adolescent wants to hang around with is someone their parents actually like. Dave needed a new blueprint for social success, and eventually he found one between the covers of Playboy.

Now, an adolescent boy's discovery of Playboy is as significant as his first date, and considerably more romantic. I remember the first time I dared to actually buy a copy: It was a crowded drugstore, and I was desperate to avoid attention. I skillfully slipped the copy out of its holder and up to the cash register without anybody noticing, nonchalantly put down a dollar and picked up my change, then casually sauntered to the door, where I realized to my horror that I'd left the magazine back at the register.

"Hey kid, you forgot your Playboy!" yelled the sadistic clerk, just to complete my humiliation.

Ah, the rites of manhood. But I didn't make Dave's mistake; I never bothered to actually read the magazine. I just looked at the pictures. Dave, however, bought the Playboy editorial myth lock, stock and stapled navel.

Every magazine has an editorial myth. With Time and Newsweek, for example, the myth is that you can really know what's going on in the world by reading the magazine. The Playboy myth appeals directly to the male libido: if you read the magazine and absorb the subtle nuances of Hefner's philosophy, you too can live in a Hollywood mansion with a private harem, just like Hef.

Unfortunately for Dave, the Playboy myth lost its cachet not long after Ms. Steinem wrote that article back in 1963. Smoking jackets and suavely lecherous double-entendres survive only in James Bond movies, and Dave was no Sean Connery to begin with. Yet there he was, telling mildly smutty jokes he'd memorized from the Playboy jokes page with the same smirking expression he'd seen on the faces of the men in Playboy cartoons as they accepted the advances of various wanton women.

But in real life, the most wanton of women remained virtuously immune to Dave's technique, and he couldn't understand it. He wore English Leather, he drove a Porsche, he had Ravel's "Bolero" permanently cued on his reel-to-reel, yet he remained mired in wimpdom, unable to recapture the lost glory of his pre-adolescent years. What to do?

The solution was obvious. He joined the Playboy Club, where he could harass the Bunnies to his heart's content, and they still had to laugh at his jokes.

Maybe it's time Gloria Steinem wrote another article.

Guadalupe Lopez

BIG SPRING — Guadalupe Lopez, 7, of Big Spring died Saturday in a Houston hospital.

Rosary will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel. Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Miss Lopez was a member of the Catholic church and was a lifetime resident of Big Spring.

TRIAL

The case, which has had "Priority 1" status since January, was scheduled to go before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin last Tuesday. Because he was ill, Baskin postponed the trial to Wednesday and Thursday before deciding to schedule it for Monday.

Sources said Monday a jury for the trial was not selected because of confusion over when it was scheduled. Baskin usually begins jury trials on Tuesdays.

But this morning, after a delay in the appearance of the defendant, the Gallagher case took a back seat to the burglary of a habitation trial of Edward Lopez.

Sandy and Victor Torres, who are representing Lopez, told the jury panel during voir dire this morning that their client would plea guilty and the jury would be asked to assess punishment. Depending on the number of witnesses and how long it takes jurors to deliberate punishment, the trial could finish by late this afternoon.

If the Lopez trial finishes today, Gallagher's case could be presented to a jury Wednesday morning.

"There were several jury trials scheduled during this week and the Lopez trial went first," said Administrative Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan, who will prosecute the Gallagher case. He declined to comment further under the judge's orders.

Lopez is charged with the burglary Nov. 27 of the Deborah Roberts residence. Prosecuting the first-degree felony case, punishable by five to 99 years or life in prison and a fine of up to $10,000, are First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado and Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades.

Also scheduled to go before a jury today was the aggravated robbery trial of Tommy Ramirez, 23, of 2105 N. Benton.

Ramirez is charged with robbing two teen-agers Oct. 13 as the couple left their car in the parking lot to go into a movie at the UA Cine' IV, 3207 W. Cuthbert Ave.

According to police reports, Ramirez was apprehended by a suspicious undercover officer with the Alcohol and Beverage Commission who was on duty in the parking lot where Midland youth gather on weekends. A second suspect in the robbery escaped and has not been apprehended.

The couple claims the robbers had a knife but no weapon was recovered. That testimony is expected to be a key factor in the case.

A jury was expected to be picked at 1 p.m. in 238th State District Judge Vann Culp's courtroom. Prosecuting the case is Schorre and Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors.

OPERA

Verdi first presented the opera in 1853 in Venice, when the situation of the two lovers was an unprecedented subject for Italian opera. At first, the performances were given in a 17th century setting and eventually they evolved to a mid-19th century Paris setting.

Texas Opera Theater is an offshoot of Houston Grand Opera. All its performances are sung in English and feature some of the fastest-rising opera talent, according to an official with TOT. The group has won national acclaim, receiving the Award for Service to American Opera from the National Institute for Music Theater.

For "La Traviata," several principal cast members are performing duplicate roles and each person has to learn to do the opera with various singers.

TOT's music director is Daniel Lipton, who has spent several years around the world building an international career. He has served as conductor of the National Symphony of Columbia and artistic director of the Opera de Columbia. He also has conducted operas, symphonies and ballets worldwide, including London, Paris, Madrid, Zurich and Venice.

"I've worked with most of the major stars," Lipton said, "and there is not much I can contribute to them. Young singers, who have natural talent; to discover them, give them an opportunity to grow and prepare them for the future and, hopefully, great careers, that's exciting."

Lipton said he was attracted by TOT's mission to bring quality professional opera, sung in English, to new audiences. "I think it's very important to bring operas to communities that don't have their own companies and, hopefully, in the future to collaborate with a community's opera company and to help them grow."

ODESSA

Precinct 4 Commissioner Willie Hammond asked Nunley how the cost of contracting with a private company would compare with having the county provide the service under its contract with the city.

Nunley said the committee did not explore the cost aspect of the proposal because it felt that was the county's responsibility.

The ambulance would be housed at the existing station, located near West University and Tripp St. The facility will be modified to accommodate the paramedics and ambulance.

Odessa fire officials assured the committee that, with some modification, the facility would be suitable to house an EMS facility, Nunley said.

The additional ambulance would be added to the city's system, with West Odessa calls handled by fire department dispatchers.

County Judge Jan Fisher appointed Commissioners Gerrid Bowen and Bill Tolbert to meet with city representatives to negotiate changes to the current contract.

Faster ambulance service was one of the prime concerns that emerged from a January town hall meeting in West Odessa.

Average ambulance response time on runs outside the city limits is nearly two and a half times greater than inside the city, according to the report presented to commissioners. Ambulance calls to the outer boundaries of West Odessa can run upwards of 18 to 20 minutes.

Arriving at a hospital five minutes sooner for treatment can mean the difference between life and death in life-threatening situations, Nunley said.

The Westside Council is an arm of the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce. It was formed last year to provide a forum for West Odessa residents.

Public meetings held so far by the council have identified water supplies, neighborhood schools and trash collection, as well as shorter ambulance response times, as areas of primary concern to West Odessans.

Municipal water district lines serve only portions of West Odessa, mostly south of West University. The Odessa City Council has been reluctant to extend the lines to serve additional areas because of prior commitments and the uncertainty of water supplies in the future.

The opening of Murray Fly Elementary School last year partially resolved complaints that residents were being short-changed on school construction.

Trash collection has been a continuing problem in West Odessa, with collection service provided only by privately operated companies.

POLICE

Clyde Hall Thompson, Star Route A Box 5, told police a $275 watch was stolen the evening of Feb. 19 from his gym bag at the Golden Life Physical Fitness Center, 3200 Andrews Highway. The report was not filed for a week because Thompson was hoping the staff would locate it, he said.

In complaints filed Monday with the county sheriff's office, Bob Wallace, Route 2 Box 178, reported the burglary of Wallace Grocery at the corner of U.S. Highway 80 and County Road 1130.

According to reports, entry was gained between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday by breaking a window. Taken were less than $750 worth of cash and miscellaneous items, including three belt buckles and three boxes of cigarette rolling papers.

R.H. Ray, 2800 Maxwell, reported to sheriff's officers that a two-wheeled trailer valued at $7,020 was stolen from Southland Royalty Co., No. 21 Desta Drive, sometime Thursday.

Police seek two men

From Staff Reports

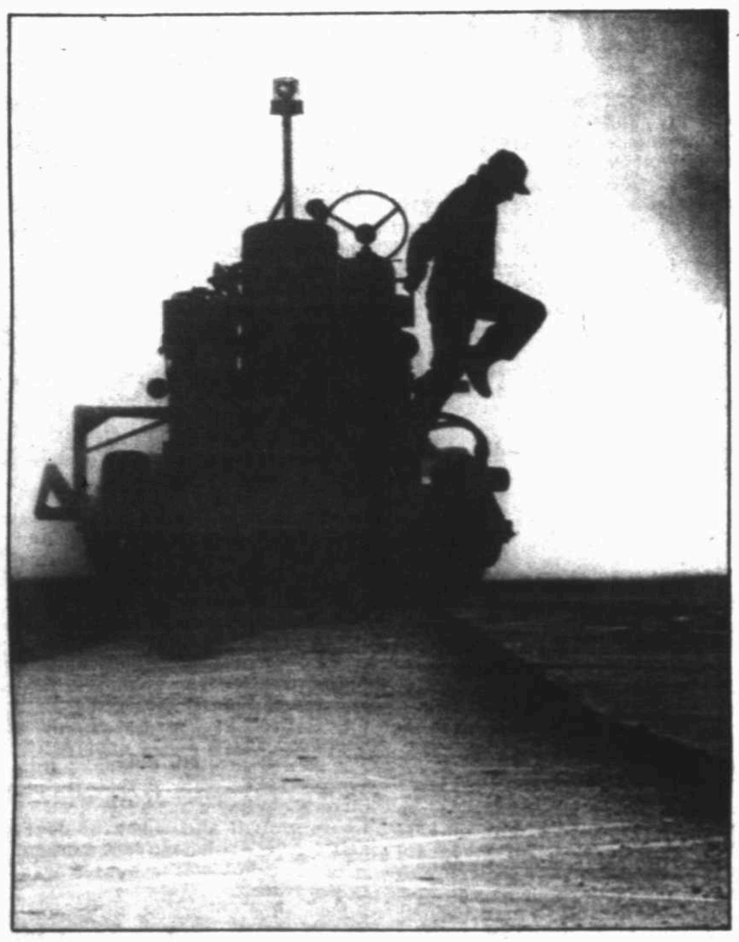

ODESSA — Police are looking for two men who robbed an Odessa man of an estimated $2,000 in cash early today at his residence.

Roy Leverich, 4402 San Jacinto, reportedly was atacked from the rear as he left the residence for work about 5:15 a.m. Police said one suspect grabbed Leverich from behind while the other reached in his coat pocket and grabbed the wallet containing the money.

According to Police Lt. Rusty Baker, the suspects fled north on San Jacinto toward 45th Street in a full-size pickup believed to be light blue over dark blue.

Police described one suspect as being in his 20s, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and 165 pounds, with brown hair. Police were unable to describe the other suspect.

Leverich was taken to Medical Center Hospital for treatment of minor injuries. He was treated and released.

Alleged free killer only trying to scare

DALLAS (AP) — A man accused of killing a commuter on a Dallas expressway was trying to scare off the motorist and a companion who had harassed him for several minutes, the man's attorney said.

Jack Vaughn, 38, of Fort Worth, was killed Feb. 18 as he and his stepson were riding to work. Deno Victor Loredo was arrested Feb. 20 and later charged with murder. He is being held in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Bill Rice, Loredo's attorney, said Monday that Loredo told him the victim and his companion swerved several times toward his car then pulled ahead and braked abruptly, making Loredo fear for the life of his wife and 1-year-old baby.

Loredo, 27, was pointing the gun toward the front of the victim's car when it accidentally discharged, Rice said.

"The gun went off. He had no intention of killing anybody," Rice said. "His only intention was protecting his wife and child."

Police said after the shooting that they believed it was random and unprovoked, but since have said they are investigating reports that a traffic altercation preceded the incident.

Larry Evans, the victim's stepson who was driving, said neither he nor Vaughn noticed the gunman's car until Vaughn said, "That guy has a gun," and the shot was fired.

Evans denied Monday that any provocation preceded the shooting, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

Rice said that his client told him that when he first encountered Evans' car several miles before the shooting occurred, it was going very fast and "came up right behind and it looked like it was so close that the bumpers were touching."

Loredo told Rice that he changed lanes and each time, Evans' car changed lanes behind him, flashing its bright lights and staying close behind. Then Evans' car swerved toward Loredo's car, almost forcing it off the road, according to Rice.

Rice said Loredo displayed the gun hoping to scare off the pair but they only laughed and made obscene gestures, Rice said. Loredo pointed the pistol at the front of Vaughn's car and it accidentally went off, the attorney said.

"He (Loredo) was there. He shot the gun. But he's not guilty of any crime," Rice said.

MIDLAND CRIME STOPPERS 694-TIPS

Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of fugitives. In Midland, call 694-TIPS. In Odessa, call 333-TIPS. All callers can remain anonymous.

Austin extends school day

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin school board has voted to lengthen the elementary school day by half an hour.

The plan approved Monday will mean a seven-hour day for all elementary school children beginning next fall.

The change will cost an estimated $2.5 million with most of it going to pay salaries for 80 additional teachers for art, music and physical education. Kindergarteners now do not have special teachers.

The longer day is designed to follow Texas Education Agency curriculum reforms.

Train hits Texan

ALTOONA, Kan. (AP) — A Texas man was killed, the Kansas Highway Patrol said, when he ignored flashing lights and drove around automatic guard-arms into the path of a train Monday afternoon.

The victim was identified as Charles Andrew Arnold, 49, of Temple, Texas. The patrol said he was alone in the car.

The accident occurred around 1:30 p.m. at a crossing on U.S. 75 about nine miles north of Altoona in southeast Kansas.

The patrol said the Santa Fe train consisted only of two diesel engines and a caboose. No one aboard the train was injured.

Pretty stuffed bunnies, chicks, and lambs are waiting at Doug's for someone's Easter egg basket.

When the pictures are over and it's time to go play, there's sportwear at Doug's to take on your way.

For traveling along you'll find New Century car seats with one handed locks, it's instant, you see. The Century Commander's just perfect for toddlers at just $23.

To help you visualize how a nursery will look with various styles of furniture, Doug has a number of vignette's set up. Each vignette is accented with colorful, padded wall hangings of ballons, trains, rainbows, and hearts. Lamps and other accessories complete the vignettes.

Doug's Stork Club will help you with baby showers. For years, people have depended on bridal registries to help them select wedding gifts. Now, Doug introduces the Stork Club. This baby shower registry allows the expectant mother to select items from the nine categories that Doug has. Those categories include: feeding (fancy bibs, food grinders, cup/dish sets, heated feeding dishes, high chairs, bottle warmers, etc.), bath (Washclothes, hooded bath towels, toilet trainers and much more), nursery (birth announcements, mobiles, diaper pails, cribs, changing tables, etc.), books (record books, snapshot books, and more), going out (backpack carriers, diaper bags, strollers, and auto seats), play (rattles, musical toys, dolls, plush animals, swings, and more), miscellaneous (pacifiers, teethers, toiletries, silver spoons, and banks), basic bedding and fashion bedding (sheets, quilts, pillows, canopies, dust ruffles, and too many other things to list).

Now, no one has to wonder if the gift will be duplicated or if the color is wrong. Doug keeps up with all of that. Doug's Baby Store also giftwraps and delivers the gifts the day of the shower at no extra cost.

Doug has a couple of gifts which he would like to give expectant mothers. Stop by and he will give you a pair of mittens which will keep your newborn from scratching himself (or herself). He also offers complimentary copies of babytalk. This informative magazine is full of articles on subjects which interest new parents. In addition, be sure to ask for one of his new bumper stickers- "Precious Passenger! Please keep a safe distance."

Protek cosmetic car care specialists return to Midland

Protek Shine Shoppes, the "cosmetic car care specialists," have returned to Midland. Now Midlanders can roll into the Protek center at 4402 W. Illinois and drive away with their car looking perfectly splendid.

It's absolutely astonishing! Protek will make your exterior shine forever, the interior spotless, and your entire car really sharp.

Protek is the trade name for a fine line of protective car care products which originated right out here in West Texas. Richard Dennard, president of Protek Shine Shoppes, doesn't balk at placing a guarant on his products. With Protek Shine Shoppes national franchise headquarters in Odessa, this native Odessan knows his products will hold up to the West Texas sun.

PROTEK DIAMOND SEAL keeps your car's finish "showroom fresh." The Protek Teflon Seal seals out rain, salt, detergents, dust, and harmful chemical. Your car's finish will shine on and on without you ever picking up another can of wax.

Even your vinyl top will sport its original vibrant color when you let the Protek professionals guard it with PROTEK VINYL SHIELD. Protek covers the subject from top to bottom, from vinyl protectors to tire sealants.

PROTEK TYRE-KARE protects you from those dasterdly road hazards by sealing tread punctures. It even extends your tire life and improves mileage.

When Protek specialists have completely protected your car's exterior, they feel like they've only gotten started on the job. The interior needs equal protection against sloppy spills, noise, and the sun.PROTEK FABRIC PROTECTOR gives you the best of both worlds. It protects velour and cloth upholstery against spotting, staining, and permanent soiling, yet allows you to enjoy the natural luxury, warmth and beauty that only fabric can provide. It's a spray on seat cover that's guaranteed.

Likewise, the guaranteed PROTEK SOUND SHIELD UNDERCOATS completely coat the underside of your car, giving you a quiet ride by greatly reducing interior road noise, squeaks, rattles, and vibration caused by poor road conditions. On top of that it helps insulate your car, keeping it cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter.

To protect your car's interior from ultra-violet rays which fade upholstery, Protek specialists install Spectrum Solar Control Film. This high grade film is designed to reject the sun's heat at the window, reducing heat flow by as much as 70 or 80 percent and affording you miles of cooler driving. At the same time it provides shade, giving relief from both the sun's glare and glare from the roadway and passing vehicles. Even 96 to 98 percent of solar radiation in the form of ultra-violet rays that fade upholstery is blocked out and windows are shatterproofed when Protek professionals adhere Spectrum solar film to the windows of your car, office, or home. Mr. Dennard points out that many tints are available, and the film doesn't have to be dark to be effective.

Protek knows how to protect your car, but that's not all. Pinstripes Plus, a division of Protek can add a really sporty touch. Whether you are looking for sport pinstripes, custom boldstripes, rally names and flairs, window louvers, moldings, or door edge guards, these are the professionals to see. They even do the popular sports car birds. Recently they go to do some custom work on a jet.

Protek Shine Shoppes is more than a detail shop. It's a shop full of perfectionists such as Midland manager Vince Zabuski. Go by their shop this week at 4402 W. Illinois (corner of Illinois and Midland Drive), or call 699-5477 and ask Vince for an estimate.

Vince Zabuski, manager of Midland's Protek Shine Shoppes, invites you to come by by their new location at 4402 W. Illinois and find out how they can keep your car looking like new.

A CLUB YOU CAN'T JOIN WANTS YOU TO PAY YOUR DUES.

When you support the Boys Club, you don't become just another member of just another club. You become a member of a special group of people. A group of people who not only care about the problems and promise of kids, but care enough to do something. A group that knows kids need a place to grow besides the street.

You see, a Boys Club is a lot more than just a club. It's a place where kids learn everything from health care to nutrition to job skills. A place that not only gives kids personal guidance, but a chance to be leaders today, so they can grow to be constructive contributors to society tomorrow. A place where over 1,200,000 kids connect with the promise of a future.

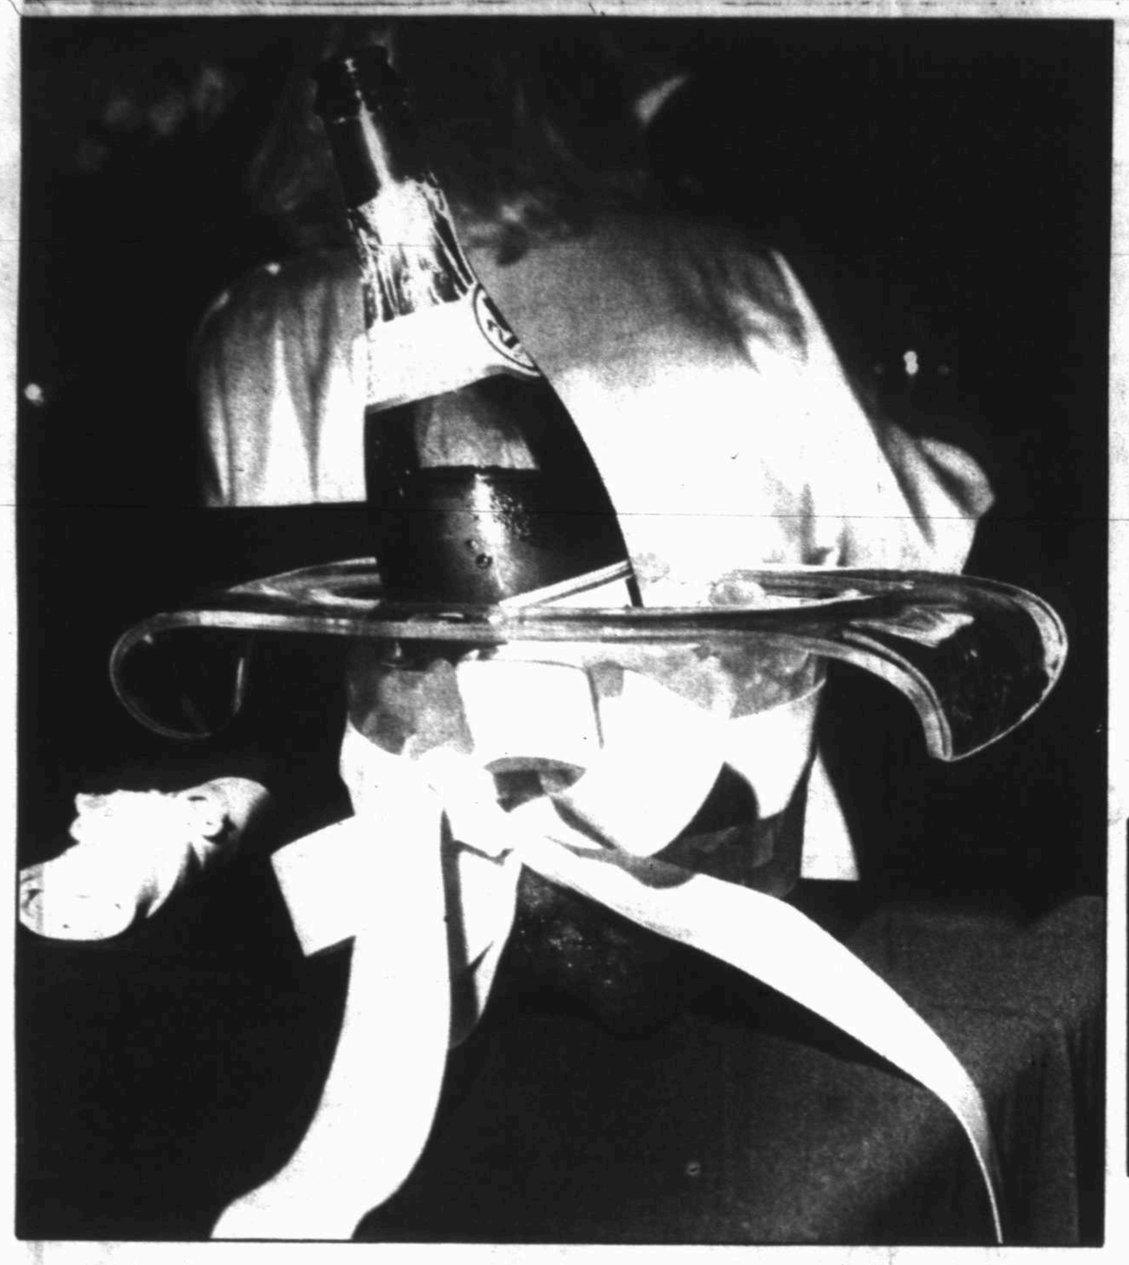

That's why a Boys Club really is so much more than just a club. But without your help, it wouldn't be much of a Club at all. After all, Boys Clubs operate almost entirely on private voluntary contributions. Clubs all across the country need business and community volunteers like you to support them, lead them—help them to thrive.

So you see, a Boys Club isn't like any club you can join. But with your help today, the kids in our Club may be joining yours tomorrow!

Cowboy hat ice buckets and yellow roses carried out the Charity Ball's Texas theme in table deocrations.

Charity Ball glows with Texas pride

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

If Friday night's Charity Ball had been magically transported to some other location, residents of the new area would have no trouble determining its point of origin.

The ball, sponsored by the Junior League of Midland Inc., was purely Texas.

Themed "The Yellow Rose of Texas," the ball featured a contemporary West Texas theme in decorations, music and menu.

Against a backdrop of a giant, flashing Texas flag a la Willie Nelson, The Levee Band and First Crossing played a mixture of contemporary, waltz and good ol' Country and Western music, such as "You Picked a Fine Time to Leave Me, Lucille" and "Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song."

Flashing oil derricks — sometimes called "Christmas trees" — dotted the floor. The central bar area was topped by the largest of these flashing oil rigs.

Ice buckets shaped like cowboy hats and, of course, centerpieces of yellow roses decorated the tables.

A buffet, catered by Don Strange of San Antonio, featured both traditional Texas favorites such as fajitas, tacos and beef with barbeque sauce, and non-traditional favorites such as fried mushrooms, egg rolls, fried won ton and avocados stuffed with caviar.

"Walking ads" — League members dressed in black tights and leotards, glittering hats and boots, and sandwich boards in the shape of Texas with sponsors' names emblasoned across the front and back — mingled with the crowd.

This year's event was the 34th annual Junior League Charity Ball. Proceeds from the first ball were $732.83. Proceeds from the 1985 ball are expected to be about $80,000. Funds raised by the Charity Ball support the League's community projects of adult basic education, As Parents Grow Older, audio visual screening, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, Children's Dental Clinic, Directory of Community Services, Exploratory Experiences for the Gifted and Talented, Haley Library and History Center docent program, Hearthstone emergency shelter, Hospice, Junior League Singers, Next-To-New Shop, Perinatal Clinic, Tape Lending Library and Young People's University.

Sponsors of this year's ball were Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Reginald F. Hyer, special sponsors; and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Evans Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Boles, Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Brock, Judge and Mrs. Vann Culp, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Curle, Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Dillard Jr., Mr. and Mrs. G. Arthur Donnelly III, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Grimes, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harvey Herd, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Hover, Mr. and Mrs. Bob L. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Jowell, Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Tony A. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. O'Shaughnessy, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Redfern Jr., Mrs. Jack Samples, Mrs. John W. Starr, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Wageman and Mr. and Mrs. Jack B. Wilkinson Jr.

Junior League of Midland Inc. president is Mrs. John Woodside. Mrs. Robert B. Houser is Charity Ball chairman. Mrs. Chris Scharbauer is decorations chairman, Mrs. Sam Bakke is assistant decorations chairman and Mrs. Tom Craddick is sponsor chairman.

Shirlee Locker, left, and Nancy Coleman were two of the "walking ads" who mingled with party-goers at Friday's Charity Ball.

Country music and a flashing Texas flag kept the dance floor crowded during the Charity Ball.

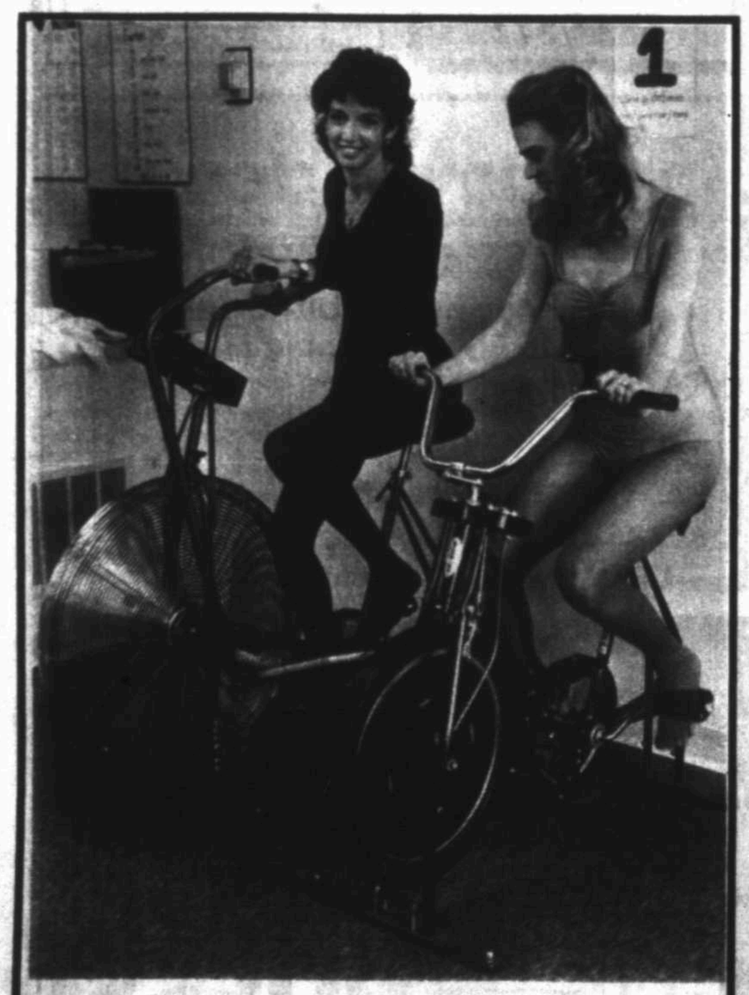

About 1000 Midlanders enjoyed dining and dancing at the 34th annual Charity Ball, sponsored by the Junior League of Midland Inc.

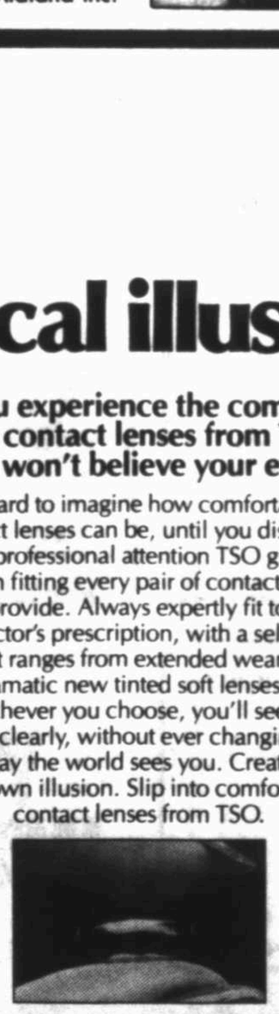

Smoked turkey and other traditional favorites were featured at the Charity Ball's buffet dinner.

DEAR ABBY

Form thank-you note draws mixed responses

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Appalled" sent you the form thank-you note, and you ran it, saying that you, too, were appalled.

Abby, have you lost your sense of humor? That photocopied thank-you letter had me in stitches! And in case you didn't realize it, it was supposed to be a gag!

Why should anybody be offended? The givers received a "thank you" for their wedding gift, although it was not in the traditional stuffy style to which they were accustomed.

You will probably find this letter equally appalling and toss it in the trash, but at least I've had my say. — IN STITCHES IN YAKIMA

DEAR IN: If you were "in stitches" over that form thank-you, you will split your seams over this one:

DEAR ABBY: We are also newlyweds. We sent the following thank-you note for our wedding gifts, and over 50 percent of the recipients are still speaking to us, so there!

Dear ( ) Friends:
( ) Relatives:
( ) Others:
Thank you for the:
( ) toaster
( ) check
It will go beautifully in our:
( ) bank account
( ) home
( ) storage room
( ) other
So far, our marriage has been:
( ) restful
( ) tiring
( ) boring
( ) a mistake
It was wonderful seeing you at:
( ) our wedding
( ) the reception
( ) the supermarket
( ) traffic court
If you're ever in the neighborhood, please give us:
( ) a call
( ) a break
( ) two weeks' warning
( ) Love,
( ) Best regards,
( ) Very truly yours,
— (Signed) JIM AND NANCY

DEAR ABBY: That mass-produced thank-you note for a wedding gift was one of the most deliciously funny things I've ever read. What a wonderful takeoff on tackiness. I'm still laughing as I write this! If I had received such a hilarious note, I would cherish it forever.

The next time I have occasion to write thank-you notes, I am going to use that delightful idea. It's fast, unusual and lets people know their gift was received. But best of all, it spreads the wondrous gift of laughter among all who have the good sense not to be appalled.

Knowing how important laughter is for us, you did a great public service by printing it. Thanks. — PAULETTE IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR PAULETTE: You're welcome. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You should have told the reader who received a photocopied thank-you note for her wedding gift that when the bride has her first baby, she should photocopy a $10 bill and send her a note (also photocopied) that reads:

So happy that you and ( ) have just had a little ( ). I was thinking only the other day how nice it would be if you and ( ) had a ( ).

Since I don't know what you need for ( ), please use the enclosed to buy something for ( ). — ALSO APPALLED

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Golden age set by driver's license

By ERMA BOMBECK

Women who are exhausted from the rigors of motherhood often ask, "When does it get better?"

Is there a Camelot where children clean their rooms without being threatened ... clear the table without demanding a check ... and look upon their homework as a privilege instead of extreme and inhumane cruelty?

There is indeed. And the magic number is age 15. Remember it and know that when it comes, a metamorphosis will take place. Life will never be as good to you again as each day you will be bottle-fed with the milk of human kindness from this wonderful child who will smother you with love and concern. Why?

THIS KID WANTS TO DRIVE YOUR CAR!

It is the strongest motivation for goodness that has ever been measured in the human spectrum. In the beginning, he will be subtle. Out of nowhere he will say, "Sit still, Mother. I'll get your glasses from the kitchen where you left them. I'll also bring you a cold drink of water. You look wonderful in that dress. Is it new?"

Later, he will not be so subtle. When he climbs in the car he will say, "I hate dragging you out in the cold to run me to the library. It'll be nice when, in 186 days, I can drive myself and you can stay in where it's warm."

With each day he will impress you with his dependability, his responsibleness and his respect for law and order. It's like living with George Shultz. He will pretend he doesn't know the carload full of boys who pull up to the traffic light next to you and offer to drag. Instead he will shake his head and say, "They're disgusting! Lucky you and Dad taught me that cars are not playthings."

By the time he is 15 years and 11 months, you will swear he is monastery material. His grades are higher than they have ever been. He has stopped punching out his brother's headlights because he has "nothing to do" and he changes underwear every day. He is someone you'd like to have father your car.

On his 16th birthday as he drops you off at the curb after his test, savor the moment. You will never see him or your car again.

You will hear it as it screeches around the corner on your radial tires that you are still making payments on. You will hear it as your radio blares in the wee hours of the morning while he brings it to rest in the driveway. You will hear it as it "idles" for ten minutes while he changes clothes for his next social event.

What happened to Camelot? Was it Merlin invoking his magic in a puff of smoke? Or was it your son in a leather jacket with a winged serpent on the back driving off in a cloud of blue exhaust from your muffler with the hole in it?

'Mummy' dresses hug body

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The draped-to-the-body dress was one of the strongest fashions at the recent Paris haute couture showings for spring and summer. Emanuel Ungaro devoted the major part of his collection to these styles, which were immediately dubbed "mummy" dresses because of the tautness of the drapery. Some referred to the styles as the bandaged look. The snuggest were those wrapped in a basket-weave effect, clearly outlining the body and not obfuscating any curves.

For Ungaro, short skirts were almost obligatory with these dresses, which represent the opposite side of the fashion coin from the severely tailored masculine look that dominated the fall season. To heighten the femininity, he frequently showed them in strong colors such as red and purple.

Ungaro wasn't alone with his shirred and draped styles. Almost every couturier showed his share. Gerard Pipart for Nina Ricci tended to develop a taut midriff through shirring and to drape the hipline in rounded folds. Other designers, such as Rosette Mett for Torrente, concentrated the draped effects on the bodice, which frequently was strapless. Dramatic floral prints were often used for draped dresses by all the designers.

In the couture collections, these designs were suggested for late-afternoon or early-evening wear. But they are bound to focus attention on dressy styles for dinner and later, in ready-to-wear collections shown in this country as well as abroad.

Beautiful opals reputed unlucky

Hearst News Service

Few jewels are as beautiful as the opal — and no gem in history has so bad a reputation.

At least part of the opal's bad name, according to an article in a recent issue of Connoisseur, may derive from a physical flaw that makes them prone to cracking — which certainly is unlucky for the owner.

The idea that opals were unlucky goes back to the Teutons, but it was Sir Walter Scott who put a hex on them. In 1829 he wrote "Anne of Geierstein," in which the central character wore an opal that responded to her mercurial personality. When she died, wearing her opal, her body turned to ashes.

Queen Victoria tried to improve the opal's public image by presenting each of her daughters with a set but it didn't take. In the Orient, opals are considered "anchors of hope."

The opal is a solidified silica gel flecked with impurities. The spheres of silica act like a prism, reflecting light. An opal is judged by its play of color, says gemologist Peter Schneirla, manager of the estate department at Tiffany.

What makes opals less valuable than some other gems is their water content, as high as 21 percent. They are subject to dehydration, and when this happens opals crack, or "craze," producing hundreds of tiny lines.

A woman said to be more than 100 years old votes Monday in Islamabad. Despite scattered violence and a boycott by the opposition, Pakistanis voted Monday for a national legislature

Pakistanis elect legislature

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq dissolved the Cabinet today after four of his ministers were defeated in National Assembly elections. The initial results were seen as setbacks for Zia's military regime.

The general, who had hundreds of opposition leaders arrested before Monday's vote, had said the election for the 217-seat assembly — the first in eight years — would be the first step toward ending martial law and returning to democracy.

Pakistani oposition leaders called the vote a farce because of the ban on political activity. In the days leading up to the balloting, officials of Zia's regime said 369 people were arrested, but the opposition claimed the figure exceeded 2,000.

There were reports of scattered violence and at least four deaths, but voting generally was reported orderly.

Nine members of Zia's 17-member Cabinet were running for election. The defeat of four at the hands of almost unknown rivals was seen by political analysts as a sign of voter unhappiness over the neglect of local issues and problems the electors face in their constituencies.

In the biggest upset, Defense Minister Alhaj Mir Ali Ahmed Khan Talpur was bested by Qazi Abdul Majid Abid, a provincial minister from Sind, in a contest among five candidates.

Labor Minister Ghulam Dastagir Khan was beaten out by businessman Mohammad Mansoor in a contest between six candidates in the industrial city of Gujranwala.

Culture Minister Col. Arbab Niaz Mohammad lost in northwestern city of Peshawar to a lawyer, Mohammad Salim.

Information Minister Raja Zafarul Haq was defeated by retired air commodore and millionaire construction contractor Khaqan Abbassi in the Murree Hills constituency. Haq, called by Zia "the opening batsman of my Cabinet team," held the posts of religious and minority affairs as well as information and broadcasting.

Two other high officials were also defeated. State Minister for Social Welfare Mahmud Ali lost in Lahore while Zia's adviser on internal trade, Sheikh Ishrat Ali, lost to a former student leader in Rawalpindi.

Communications Minister Mohayuddin Baluch and Railway Minister Abdul Ghafoor Khan Hoti won election to assembly seats. Two other Cabinet members ran unopposed: Industries Minister Ilahi Bukhsh Soomro and Local Bodies Minister Mir Zafarullah Khan Jamali.

Results of a close contest involving another Cabinet member, Power and Natural Resources Minister Raja Sikander Zaman, have yet to be disclosed.

An official spokesman today said Zia asked eight ministers from the dissolved 17-member Cabinet to stay on "until the formation of a new government."

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the nine ministers who ran for seats in the National Assembly would go out of office whether they had won or lost their electoral contests.

The Election Commission announced that initial returns showed a heavy turnout. Zia said he hoped at least 40 percent of the nation's 35 million voters would take part. Full results were not expected until later today.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Experts collect remains of missing World War II airman

PEKING (AP) — U.S. experts invited by China to collect possible remains of a U.S. airman missing since World War II have brought lists of flight plans and bombing runs to help determine his identity, the U.S. Embassy said today.

Spokesman Leon M. Slawecki said the experts, who arrived Monday night, will visit a gravesite in the east central province of Shanxi later this week and take the remains home for identification.

China and the United States were allies during the war, and U.S. warplanes based in southwest China bombed Japanese-held positions in the north and east sections of the country.

Slawecki said the Chinese believe the remains are that of a bomber pilot shot down by Japanese gunners and protected by local peasants in Shanxi, which was then behind Japanese lines.

He said according to the Chinese account, the airman lived for a while and was buried by his Chinese protectors, who reported the grave to local public security officials last year. "I don't know why it took that long to report it," Slawecki said.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A cloud of ammonia gas poisoned 18 workers at a nitrogen factory in nearby Pancevo, the national news agency Tanjug reported.

Most of the injured were firemen and warehouse workers, and their lives were not in danger, the report said. The leakage occurred Monday because of problems in the cooling section of the plant, the report said.

BLAYDON, England (AP) — The deputy headmaster at an elementary school has been sentenced to six months in prison for forcing 10-year-old pupils to strip and pose naked during photo sessions.

Bernard Longhorn, a 47-year-old bachelor who had worked in the education field for 25 years, admitted two charges of inciting children to commit acts of gross indecency.

He was sentenced Monday at Blaydon Magistrates' Court in northeast England to six months in prison.

Prosecutor Ian Walker told the court that Longhorn ordered a boy and a girl to fondle and spank each other while he photographed them on a mattress in the living room of his home.

Longhorn ran a camera club at the Newcastle Upon Tyne Primary School.

Dog killer gets jail term

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A man convicted of throwing his pet dog 14 floors to its death has been sentenced to three months in jail.

Noel Lipsett, 48, was also banned from ever again keeping a dog by Birmingham Magistrates Court.

"This is the worst case that I have ever heard in all my years on this bench of cruelty to an animal," said Magistrate Horatio Growcott.

The dog's body was found on a concrete canopy at the foot of an apartment building last August with multiple fractures and internal bleeding.

Lipsett denied causing unnecessary suffering and said the dog jumped from his apartment after having fits.

But Growcott said: "We believe you beat this dog and callously threw it out of the window."

Opposition leader arrested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A court has ordered opposition politician Aquilino Pimentel arrested when he returns to Manila from overseas speaking engagements, says the Philippine News Agency.

State prosecutors filed a charge of rebellion against Pimentel Jan. 11 when he left for Europe and the United States, on the grounds he gave $6 to a Communist guerrilla.

The news agency said a provincial court in Pimentel's hometown of Cagayan de Oro city on southern Mindanao island issued the arrest warrant Monday, but that the judge set a bond for his provisional release.

Pimentel heads an opposition group, the Pilipino Democratic Party, which calls for the removal of U.S. military bases from the country.

Blacks given right to move

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government has proposed legislation to give blacks living near cities the right to move to other municipalities without losing jobs or the privilege of working in white areas.

Currently, if a black has the documents needed to work in Johannesburg, for example, he or she could not work in Cape Town or Durban. When blacks left their particular work area, they would surrender rights to live and work anywhere else except in impoverished tribal homelands.

The legislation would affect about 4 million of the nation's more than 22 million blacks, who are dominated and denied the vote by 5 million whites.

Under pressure at home and abroad, the governing National Party says it is reforming some aspects of apartheid, its system of racial separation. Critics say the changes are cosmetic and actually entrench white domination.

There was no indication when the legislation would become law after being debated in the Parliament, which is controlled by the National Party.

Guerrilla dies in custody

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's national police say a leftist guerrilla suspect arrested last week died in their custody after suffering respiratory problems.

The victim, identified as Carlos Godoy Etchegoyen, 22, was the second political prisoner to die in police custody this month. His death was reported Monday in an official announcement of 13 arrests at what the police called a leftist guerrilla training center.

Police said the suspects were picked up in a raid on a house in the Pacific coastal town of Quintero last Wednesday and taken to a police station.

Hernan Quintana, president of the independent human rights commission in Vina Del Mar, the nearest city, said he had no information about Godoy's death. But relatives of three others arrested with Godoy said those prisoners showed signs of beatings when they were visited at the police station, Quintana said.

Chile's military government is ruling under a state of siege to break up opposition political activity.

Defense has right to disagree

TORONTO (AP) — The lawyer defending publisher Ernst Zundel, who claims there was no Holocaust during World War II, says his client's "right to disagree in a free society" is at stake in the case.

Zundel, a native of Germany with landed status in Canada, is charged with knowlingly publishing false information likely to cause social or racial intolerance. Conviction carries a maximum sentence of two years in prison.

Zundel, 46, has pleaded innocent to the charge.

The prosecutor, Peter Griffith, will present his final argument today and District Court Judge Hugh Locke then will advise the jurors on points of law before they withdraw to consider a verdict.

The charge was filed in connection with two booklets he published. The booklets claim accounts of 6 million Jews being killed by the Nazis in concentration camps were a "hoax" and part of a Zionist plan to win reparations from Germany.

In his final argument Monday, defense lawyer Douglas Christie said, "When you can't maintain your right to disagree in free society, there can only be silence or violence. Our country is free because we tolerate other people's points of view."

He told the court that Zundel, before he published the booklets, had sought guidelines from the Ontario attorney general on what would constitute hate literature. But there was no response from then-Attorney General Roy McMurtry, he said.

"The attorney general is afraid to say what censorship he is trying to impose by fear," Christie said. "If he is going to invoke censorship, he'd better write it down and say so."

He said people have been "brainwashed" into believing the Nazis killed 6 million Jews and asked, "How many Canadians died in the war, how many Catholics, how many French-Canadians?"

"But ask how many Jews, and everybody knows that because of the brainwashing. The Holocaust is the biggest single brainwash of anything that had to do with the war," Christie added.
