TRC on embargo

AUSTIN — The U.S. trade embargo against Iran will hurt some Texas companies and likely cost more Texans than Iranians their jobs, says the chairman of the state agency that regulates the oil and gas industry. Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Barry Williamson said Tuesday that Iran shouldn't have any trouble finding new buyers for its oil, which he said has accounted for about 7 percent of daily U.S. consumption./ 2B

Budget, taxes

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Senate Budget Committee plans to unveil a deficit-reduction proposal next week that omits — for now — the tax cuts so strongly supported by many Republicans. To the ire of some conservatives and the skepticism of Democrats, the budget proposed by Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., would instead let Congress trim taxes only after lawmakers approve spending cuts./6B

House endorses gun bill

Narrow OK sends legislation to Senate panel

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The House gave final approval Tuesday to a concealed-gun bill that would allow Texans to vote on the issue. But the bill's author vowed to remove the referendum or fight to kill his own legislation.

"I would not be supportive of the bill if it had a referendum," Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, said after the House returned the bill to the Senate on a voice vote.

Patterson said he would reject House changes and call for a House-Senate conference committee to work out differences.

"You don't have referendums on the First Amendment, the Second Amendment, the Fourth Amendment or the Fifth Amendment," Patterson said. "It's not subject to a popularity contest."

Local Salvation Army Capt. Harold Tracy, returned Tuesday from the Salvation Army's massive assistance campaign at the Oklahoma City bombing site.

Tracy and other Salvation Army personnel across the state and the southern United States were called to the disaster site Thursday to help maintain the operation.

"I was called in as a second wave of support," Tracy said.

Salvation Army personnel at the scene provided food, drinks and counseling as needed for more than a thousand rescue workers searching through the rubble for survivors.

"That's our basic function — to give support to these people," he said.

FBI captures two in Missouri motel

■ Investigators also pursue leads in Arizona, Oklahoma, Kansas; grand jury hears testimony in Timothy McVeigh case.

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — FBI agents hunting the elusive "John Doe 2" raided a Missouri motel Tuesday, capturing two men who traveled a path of cheap motels from Arizona to Oklahoma that paralleled the movements of bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh.

Gary Alan Land and Robert Jacks — objects of an FBI all-points bulletin — were arrested at daybreak in Carthage, Mo., as material witnesses in the Oklahoma City bombing.

A driver's license photo of Land, a 35-year-old drifter with a record of petty crimes, bore a passing resemblance to the heavyset, square-jawed figure in the FBI sketch of John Doe 2, wanted in the nation's worst domestic terrorist attack.

Foster makes his case: 'I am a doctor who delivers babies'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blending poignant details of a life in medicine with a firm defense of his integrity, Henry W. Foster tried Tuesday to salvage his nomination as surgeon general. "I am a doctor who delivers babies," he told a Senate committee eager to question him about abortions.

After two months of controversy, Foster slid into the witness chair with a pledge to "set the record straight." He conceded earlier understating the number of abortions he performed in four decades as an obstetrician, but said it was an "honest mistake" made without a complete review of the records.

"There was never any intent to deceive," he said. "I had no reason to do so."

Early voting for May 6 election ends with a low overall turnout

By Michael Kashgarian

Early voting for local elections ended Tuesday with a low overall turnout.

"It really has seemed awfully slow," said Pat Eastup, elections administrator.

At the end of early voting Tuesday, only 1,593 Midlanders had cast ballots. In addition, the election administration office received 29 mail-in ballots.

On election day — Saturday — votes can be cast between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. only at designated precinct polling places. Voting will not be offered at the Election Administration Office.

This election voters are being asked to decide on two at-large City Council positions, and a place each on the Midland and Greenwood school districts.

Issue of whether to ban bomb recipes turns volatile, poll finds

From Staff Reports

Callers who responded to this week's Community Pulse Poll are evenly split on the issue of banning books that outline how to make homemade bombs.

Those who took part in the non-scientific poll were asked the question "Should books that detail how to make a bomb be banned, or would doing so infringe upon Americans' First Amendment rights?"

Fifty-three percent felt such books should be banned; the remaining 47 percent were against such a notion.

"Even though I respect the judgment of the rank-and-file Midland citizen, I see no positive use for books detailing how to make bombs," Jerry Crooker said. "I feel such literature should be restricted to high-ranking government or military personnel who have a — quote — need for it."

Cityline Community Pulse

An anonymous caller agreed, saying, "When the First Amendment was passed, man had not conceived that Americans could and would do such horrible acts against innocent people."

Mark Barnett, who identified himself as a native of Oklahoma City, was against any sort of book ban.

"Once you open that Pandora's box," Barnett said, "it is a definite violation of America's First Amendment. What's next? Banning chemistry books detailing how chemical reactions occur? Even reading the paper in the last couple of weeks a person could learn how to make a bomb. You're talking a Hitler regime to even conceptualize doing something like (banning books)."

H.W. Kirby also agreed that outlawing would not solve the problem.

"Refer to the prohibition days and the attempted ban of alcohol in the speakeasies that operated," Kirby said. He said the answer to the problem should begin with enacting laws and then "making our courts stand behind the laws they enact to punish."

"If it interferes with our First Amendment rights," Dr. Urmila Gupta said, "then maybe we need to look again at those First Amendment rights."

Another anonymous caller said, "Our forefathers could never have meant for the First Amendment to be a flag for a negative cause."

Suspected militant's death in Israeli detention stirs anger of Palestinians

By Dan Perry
Associated Press

HEBRON, West Bank — Hours after being seized by Israeli Shin Bet agents who suspected he was a key Islamic militant, Abdel-Samad Harizat lay mortally wounded in an Israeli hospital. An autopsy suggested he was tortured.

Israeli officials say tough interrogation methods are necessary in the effort to stem suicide bombings by Islamic militants.

Palestinians dispute whether Harizat, a 29-year-old computer operator who stood only 4-foot-7, was a senior activist in the fundamentalist Hamas group. They say his death deepens hatreds at a time when the peace process is in trouble.

"What happened to Harizat is an execution," said Nabil Abu Irdeineh, the spokesman of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. "Israel is not only killing Palestinian prisoners but I think they are killing the whole peace process."

Evidence suggests Harizat may have been politically active.

He spent three months in Israeli prison in 1993 and was fined $1,350 for distributing Hamas leaflets.

His employer, a Hebron publishing house known as a center of fundamentalist support, was closed by Israel and has since reopened under another name.

Manager Jewad Said said Harizat supported the fundamentalists but kept politics out of the office. He was "a simple but educated person, very nice to customers," Said said.

Abdallah Harizat, 32, said his younger brother had no links to Hamas. But his mother Fatma, 60, conceded that if he did, he would have likely kept them hidden.

"But how can somebody so small destroy Israel?" she asked, weeping and clasping her hands together as she received relatives offering condolences Tuesday at her home on Hebron's outskirts.

A top security official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, maintained the agency had several leads that Harizat was deeply involved in plans for a car bombing in Israel.

Fatma Harizat said Israeli troops seized her son at the family home after midnight on Saturday, April 22, blindfolding and beating him. Family members were then locked in a room while troops searched the house, she said.

Security sources said Hamas leaflets were found.

Abdallah Harizat said Israeli agents returned Sunday to summon him and his mother to Jerusalem's Hadassah Ein-Karem hospital, where they were told his brother had been admitted Saturday. The prisoner was unconscious, legs shackled. Two days later the hospital declared him dead.

The Shin Bet has denied Harizat was tortured.

But in an affidavit published this week, Derrick Pounder, a Scottish pathologist who participated in Harizat's autopsy at the family's request, said he died of "trauma to the brain" caused by "violent shaking."

Reflecting Palestinian anger, the Arabic-language Al-Manar weekly wrote that the incident "will only deepen the hatred between Israelis and Palestinians."

Israeli legislators called for a reassessment of interrogation practices and the Justice Ministry and Shin Bet both launched inquiries. Harizat's two investigators were transferred to desk jobs and one of them was suspended.

The Haaretz daily said in an editorial that Israel's pressing security needs did not justify torture.

U.S. pushes for breakthrough with Japan in talks on auto trade

■ American side has hinted broadly that it is prepared to roll out record-setting sanctions if there is no headway soon.

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The Clinton administration insisted Tuesday there must be a breakthrough this week to resolve America's biggest trade headache with Japan. But the atmosphere coming into the latest round of auto negotiations has been decidedly chilly.

The U.S. side, frustrated that the talks have made so little progress after nearly two years of bargaining, has been hinting broadly that it is prepared to roll out record-setting trade sanctions against Japan if there is no headway soon.

The Japanese, already unhappy because the administration has done so little to brake the precipitous drop in the U.S. dollar, are complaining of high-handed U.S. tactics. One official even complained last week that America's ultimate economic goal was to make his countrymen slaves.

Japanese Transport Minister Shizuka Kamei later said he regretted using such "figurative" language but his comment revealed the trade tensions that exist between the world's two largest economies.

Against this backdrop, negotiators from both countries met in this Canadian Pacific city on Tuesday for a second day of talks in advance of negotiations today between U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto.

On his arrival Tuesday, Hashimoto told reporters that his country did not plan to waiver in its opposition to a U.S. demand that Japan's automakers increase their "voluntary" targets for purchases of American-made parts.

If the United States does not back down from this demand, a "deal is impossible," Hashimoto said. "The cards are on the U.S. side."

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition that his name not be used, said the administration was adamant in its view that voluntary purchase agreements have to be part of a final agreement.

The administration, which has made expanding trade one of the hallmarks of its foreign policy, is desperate to achieve a successful market opening agreement with Japan in autos and auto parts, which last year accounted for nearly 60 percent of America's record $66 billion trade deficit with Japan.

The United States wants to increase the number of Japanese dealerships that carry American vehicles; to relax Japanese regulations governing repairs and inspections that keep out U.S.-made spare parts; and to obtain new commitments from Japanese automakers that they will increase their purchases of parts for new vehicles.

But the Japanese, who see the auto sector as the crown jewel of their industrial might, have accused the United States of seeking managed trade and of trying to bring pressure by allowing the dollar to fall to record lows against the Japanese yen.

Sunny skies, low 80s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and west winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low between 50-55, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 56, Tuesday's high reached 79, compared to the record high for that date of 96 set in 1965. The record low was 36 set in 1967.

NATION

Thunderstorms rattled the southern Atlantic coast on Tuesday, while rain fell on much of the Northeast. A storm front moving through the Great Basin brought heavy snow to parts of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming.

The thunderstorms brought high wind, large hail and heavy rain to some sections of the South. Charlotte, N.C., received 1 3/4 inches of rain during the morning.

Rain also fell on Boston; Washington, D.C.; and parts of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and southern New England.

There were scattered afternoon showers and thunderstorms across the Plains from Nebraska south to the Texas Panhandle.

Heavy snow fell in the mountains of northern Utah, Idaho and western Wyoming, and nearly an inch of rain fell in the suburbs of Salt Lake City.

The weather was dry and pleasant from the Great Lakes region south to the lower Mississippi Valley and in most of California and Nevada.

A few lingering showers in the Pacific Northwest were all that remained of the storm that swept through the region Monday.

It was windy in Southern California, with gusts of 60 mph or more in the Mojave Desert east of Los Angeles. Strong winds were also reported in the Tehachapi Pass north of Los Angeles.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

MISSION: Donations still needed, captain says

(From 1A)

The Salvation Army contingent provided three hot meals a day, plus snacks, to rescue workers. The teams also provided some rescue equipment such as boots, face masks, knee pads and other such items.

Salvation Army workers also had a separate vehicle, serving drinks and water only, positioned about 40 feet from where the actual digging was taking place, Tracy said.

Workers retained hope of finding more people alive, even while body after body was carried past this forward canteen. "That's when we saw the genuine emotions from the workers," Tracy said.

A veteran of Florida's Hurricane Andrew campaign and numerous tornado disasters, Tracy said he had never witnessed total destruction on this scale. "I've never seen anything on this magnitude," he said.

Tracy said the tough, experienced men and women serving as rescue workers were greatly affected by the tragedy. "They broke down and cried," he said.

The announcement Monday that the rescue effort would be terminated because of the hazards and the ever-diminishing chance that anyone was alive in the rubble was a further blow to the rescuers, he said.

The weather added to rescuers' trauma, since the adjacent buildings were made unsafe by the blast and offered no shelter. "There was a lot of wind and a lot of rain," he said.

Rescuers, working 10- to 15-hour-a-day shifts, had little time for in-depth counseling from Salvation Army personnel. "Just drinking a Coke with these guys and asking 'how are you doing?' made the biggest impact," he said.

Helping family members through the arduous process of waiting for word of their loved ones, identifying bodies and making funeral arrangements was where the Salvation Army counselors were hardest tasked.

Salvation Army personnel helped with travel arrangements and even paid for some funerals, Tracy said.

Tracy said he was impressed by the solidarity of the Oklahoma City people, as well as the professionalism and effectiveness of the Oklahoma City Fire Department and Police Department.

Donations from the rest of the city were sufficient to provide for the rescue effort, as well as the needs of survivors. "This community really pulled together — it was overwhelming," he said.

By Salvation Army staff and volunteers provided 56,354 hours of service by Friday. The 897 workers on site had served almost 100,000 meals, drinks and snacks from five mobile kitchen units and counseled more than 1,200 victims and family members.

Tracy said monetary donations are still needed for victims and families. For more information, contact Tracy at 683-3641.

VOTING: One candidate says he has withdrawn

the Reporter-Telegram he has withdrawn from the race. Bobby Lynn Alexander said he was bowing out of his challenge against incumbent James Fuller for the District 1 seat on the Midland Independent School District board of trustees.

Low turnout thus far may be attributed to the at-large council position and the Greenwood school board being, essentially, the only contested races. This election comes during a year when there are no races on the ballot for Midland College board or the Midland County Hospital District board. In fact, residents in five precincts are outside the city limits and applicable school districts and therefore don't vote this election.

Generally, Midland shows good turnout during early voting, especially when there's a state or national race on the ballot. When only local races are on the ballot — as the case this election — between 15 percent and 25 percent of Midlanders registered to vote typically vote early. And, based on past elections, about half those who vote do so early.

There are 56,112 people registered to vote in Midland County. Registration has increased during recent months in part due to the National Voter Registration Act, which took effect Jan. 1.

The act requires state agencies to solicit visitors to register to vote. As a result, about 500-600 addition names per month have been added to the roll of registered voters. But increased registration doesn't necessarily mean increase in the number of voters, officials pointed out.

Contested races on ballots will be:

— Two at-large City Council positions are being pursued by five people: incumbent Jose Cuevas, Dale Brown, Tom Dollahite, David G. Roberts and Gary Franklin. At-large representative Bill Morrow is not seeking re-election.

The two with the most votes fill the positions.

— Place 1 on the Greenwood Independent School District board of trustees is being vied for by two people: Stephen Wardlaw and Donny Thornton. The incumbent, Tim Outlaw is not seeking re-election.

In addition, there are several unopposed races this election. On the City Council are incumbents Pat Schneider, District 1, and Juluis Brooks, District 2. On the MISD board is District 7 incumbent Michael Dobey; and on the GISD board, Place 2, is incumbent Johnny Womack.

The polling places for election day are:

■ 102, 103 — Alamo Junior High School, 3800 W. Storey Ave.

BOMBING: Investigators might have to release 2

(From 1A)

muscular, tattooed John Doe 2, FBI spokesman Dan Vogel said: "We don't know that. We have not determined whether he is or not."

Later in the day, a law-enforcement source in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said federal investigators might release Land and Jacks because authorities were having trouble finding grounds to hold them.

Meanwhile, the death toll from the April 19 explosion reached 141, including 15 children. About 40 people were missing.

Investigators pursued leads in Arizona, Oklahoma and Kansas, and a federal grand jury investigating McVeigh's case heard testimony in Oklahoma City.

Among those testifying were Ed and Linda Paulsen, owners of Paulsen's Military Supply in Antigo, Wis. The Paulsens were linked to the case when one of their crumpled business cards was found in the police car that took McVeigh to jail.

"We told them what we've been saying all along, that we have absolutely no association with the man," Paulsen told The Associated Press.

At a federal court hearing for McVeigh's buddy James Nichols, FBI Special Agent Randall Farmer testified that an informant heard Nichols bragging that "the technology existed for a super bomb that could blow up a federal building."

The conversation took place about six years ago, Farmer said.

The testimony came at a hearing on a motion to dismiss charges against Nichols, who's being held in Milan, Mich.

He's charged with conspiring with his brother, Terry Nichols, and McVeigh to make and detonate bombs on his Michigan farm. The Nichols brothers aren't charged in the federal building bombing and McVeigh isn't charged in the Michigan case.

Nichols was ordered held in federal custody until a preliminary hearing May 12.

Also charged in the Michigan bomb case is Nichols' brother, Terry, who is being held in Wichita, Kan., as a material witness in the Oklahoma City case. Terry Nichols' attorney said he would appeal an order transferring his client to Oklahoma City to appear before a grand jury.

McVeigh and the shadowy John Doe 2 are the only people named as suspects in the Oklahoma City bombing.

The FBI has described John Doe 2 as a possible weightlifter. Land's neighbors in Mesa, Ariz., said he was often seen lifting weights outside his trailer.

Attorney General Janet Reno would only say Land was sought because he "possessed information about the bombing." She said Land and Jacks were cooperating with the FBI, and she cautioned against speculation that Land might be John Doe 2.

"I would ask everyone to let the investigation proceed and not jump to conclusions," she said.

Dozens of state and federal officers in riot gear and armed with shotguns and automatic weapons surrounded the Kel Lake Motel, 20 miles east of the Oklahoma line, at 6 a.m. They evacuated the other rooms, then called Land and Jacks on their room phone, telling them to come out.

"As the door opened, I could hear one of the officers yell, 'Put your hands in the air! If you make a move, we'll blow you away!'" said Lee Snyder, who was delivering newspapers across the street.

The two men, who had been under surveillance since Monday night, surrendered without a struggle and were whisked away.

Investigators earlier traced the two to a Vinita, Okla., motel 40 miles southwest of Carthage. They raided the site Saturday night with a strike force that included a helicopter. The pair had left four days earlier.

The movements of Land and Jacks appear to shadow those of McVeigh in the hours immediately after the bombing.

The pair first checked into Deward and Pauline's motel in Vinita, a small town 180 miles northeast of Oklahoma City, on the afternoon of the bombing. Motel manager Tom Crafton said the men left the next day, then checked back in later that same day and stayed until April 24.

The two were seen in Perry, a city 60 miles north of Oklahoma City, on the evening after the bombing. Mike Umstead, manager of the Dan D Motel, said Land and Jacks checked in between 7:30 and 9 p.m., paying cash in advance. He believes the pair left sometime the next morning.

McVeigh was arrested on the morning of the bombing on weapons and traffic offenses and was jailed in Perry. The 27-year-old former GI wasn't identified as a suspect in the bombing until two days later.

Crafton has given conflicting descriptions of Land, saying at times he looked like John Doe 2, telling others he bore no resemblance. Umstead said Land did not look like the sketch of the fugitive being circulated by the FBI.

"I was busy watching television about the explosion and didn't pay too much attention to them," Umstead said.

The pair's movements also matched those of McVeigh's in the months leading to the bombings.

Land and Jacks, 60, lived at El Trovatore Motel in Kingman, Ariz., from Nov. 3 to April 3, according to managers Bill and June Terranova. When the two men left, they said they were headed for Oklahoma. McVeigh stayed at two nearby motels during that period: the Hilltop from Feb. 11-17 and the Imperial from March 31 to April 12.

FOSTER: Embattled nominee tries to salvage bid hope for approval on three uncommitted Republicans, including the chairwoman, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas. That would only move the 61-year-old former medical school dean over the first hurdle, though.

In a nomination caught up in presidential politics, Sen. Phil Gramm has threatened a filibuster, and Majority Leader Bob Dole — a rival for the GOP nomination for the White House — has said he might keep the nomination off the floor altogether, citing questions about Foster's credibility rather than abortion.

Win or lose, some Democrats believe they will benefit politically if the Republican-controlled Senate can be depicted as rejecting a nominee for performing abortions only sparingly, and always legally.

Foster strode into the committee room accompanied by his wife, St. Clair, and White House aides working to salvage his nomination. The audience included several members of the "I Have a Future" program he founded in Nashville, Tenn., to reduce teen pregnancy. Outside in the rain, about a dozen anti-abortion demonstrators carried signs objecting to the nomination.

Kassebaum and Sen. Edward Kennedy, senior Democrat, stepped off the dais to greet him, and Foster bowed lightly as he shook hands with Kassebaum, a supporter of abortion rights.

Foster, she said later after gaveling the hearing to order, "has been made a pawn in our abortion debates. I believe he deserves to be judged on his whole record, his life experience and his current views."

For his part, Kennedy, D-Mass., later held up a framed copy of a letter President Bush had sent Foster bestowing a "Point of Light" citation on the anti-pregnancy program.

Foster choked back tears as he recalled how his Grandma Hattie had worked as a domestic in Arkansas to make sure her two children would attend college.

Under prodding from Kennedy, he recalled conditions in the Tuskegee, Ala., area where he practiced as a young obstetrician. "I have worked 40 hours straight and got not one wink of sleep," he said. Busy doctors in some locations might deliver 250 babies a year, he added, but he was responsible for the delivery of many times more in rural Alabama.

"The service that I ran in Tuskegee — we delivered 2,300 babies a year, and I was the only obstetrician," he said.

Records were a problem, so he began using carbon paper, and handing the patient a copy to give to the hospital when she arrived. Transportation was a problem, as well — until he persuaded the local funeral homes to lend their hearses to women needing rides to the hospital. "Their patients could wait," he said to laughter.

As surgeon general, he said, "I will focus on the full range of health challenges facing this nation," including AIDS, heart disease, mental health, aging and other concerns.

First, though, he sought to resolve the controversy over abortion and the conflicting answers he provided at the time of his nomination.

"In 22 years at Meharry Medical College I am listed as the physician of record on 39 abortion cases," Foster said.

HOUSE: Gun bill goes to panel

(From 1A)

ceiled guns, easily passed the Senate in March but faced a tougher time in the House.

The measure was amended during an almost nine-hour debate Monday to make it more restrictive and to allow Texans to vote on the issue in November.

The statewide referendum would be nonbinding, meaning it would not affect the bill's implementation should it become law.

However, some have suggested that lawmakers would have no choice but to overturn the law if voters were to reject the gun bill in such a referendum.

"This is about as disingenuous as you can get," Patterson said. "Many of the folks who voted for that referendum are folks who didn't have the courage just to vote 'no' on final passage because of fear of political repercussions, so they're trying to give themselves some cover.

"That's not the way to do business," he said.

Rep. Sherri Greenberg, who sponsored the referendum amendment, said opinion polls have shown the public is divided on the issue and that voters, therefore, should be able to vote on it.

She acknowledged that a vote against the gun bill — even in a nonbinding referendum — could carry the weight needed to change lawmakers' minds.

"I think at that time, it would just be up to those in leadership positions ... to decide what they thought would be in the best interest," said Ms. Greenberg, D-Austin. "I think that the opinion of the people is meaningful."

There's no way to tell whether House and Senate conferees will approve the referendum, which was narrowly adopted by the House, 74-70.

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who appoints half of the conference committee members, said: "The members (of the House) have expressed very tightly what they would like to see. I don't know what the feelings of the conferees will be."

RECIPES: Issue of banning bomb books divides callers

(From 1A)

that thought: "I don't think back in the days of our Founding Fathers, they had taken into consideration today's society. I don't believe that in their idea of the First Amendment there was any consideration given to publishing books that would lead to people killing people. We have overstepped the boundaries of good taste, and the First Amendment has been taken too literally. I don't agree with many of the freedoms we do have."

Another female caller added: "I am so sick of hearing about the rights of criminals being protected. Who cares about their rights when obviously all they want to do is make bombs that will hurt or kill people."

James Beatty said, "If you're going to ban books, you might as well ban the teaching of chemistry, too. Any intelligent student can figure out how to build a bomb after passing chemistry class. There are a lot of chemicals that will react violently when mixed together. Banning books would not solve any problems."

U.S. must be willing to make sacrifices

President Clinton's decision to end U.S. trade and investment with Iran really was little more than official recognition of what most Americans have known for years: Iran is a terrorist state that has in the past pledged to wage war against the United States and the American way of life. Thus, Iran is an enemy of the United States and doing business with an enemy is crazy under these circumstances.

While the decision will mean the loss by U.S. companies and their subsidiaries of Iranian oil — that loss is expected to be minimal, oil experts say. Besides, the simple fact that Iran, Iraq and Libya have been waging a virtual religious war against the United States for years reaffirms the validity of Clinton's decision to increase the sanctions against Iran.

"I am convinced," said Clinton in announcing his decision, "that instituting a trade embargo with Iran is the most effective way our nation can help curb Iran's drive to acquire devastating weapons and support terrorist activities."

While Clinton's desire to deny the Iranians money to continue their quest for weaponry is highly commendable, he should concentrate his efforts on convincing Russian President Boris Yeltsin and Chinese leaders to cancel their reported nuclear deals with Iran. Those deals will serve the same purpose as continued U.S. trade with Iran or the $1 billion deal Conoco had planned with Iran. They could have been used to underwrite more terrorism, more worldwide chaos, more destruction.

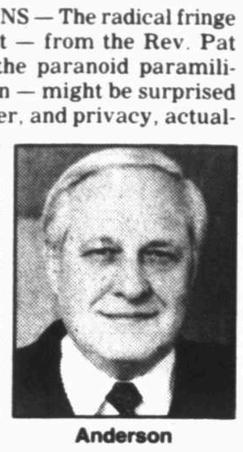

In making his announcement, Clinton stressed that "if we are to succeed in getting other countries to make sacrifices in order to change Iran's behavior, we, too, must be willing to sacrifice."

He's correct. This is a sacrifice we must be willing to make.

JACK ANDERSON

Diplomacy is not what radicals see it as

UNITED NATIONS — The radical fringe of the far right — from the Rev. Pat Robertson to the paranoid paramilitaries across the nation — might be surprised to learn how little power, and privacy, actually is granted the head of the United Nations.

Anderson

The "new world order," Robertson charged in a 1991 book on the topic, might compel "the government of the United States to defer to the United Nations." Mark Koernke, a Michigan militia leader and radio talk show host, takes things a step further. He recently suggested that the new world order might lead to "the conversion of the United States into an asset for the United Nations."

According to U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who sat down for a long and far-ranging interview with us recently, the reality of world diplomacy is quite the opposite. One of his main complaints is the lack of privacy and candor in conducting world affairs.

"You have 185 permanent representatives here," Boutros-Ghali said. "Their mission is to write reports on what happens in this house. If I send a secret mission somewhere, hours later it will be known. Here secrecy is more difficult. It is a real glass house."

As the foreign minister of Egypt, he recalled, it was far easier to conduct affairs without the glare of international attention. He cited one exception: A column we wrote in 1990 describing his pivotal, behind-the-scenes efforts to secure the release of Nelson Mandela from his South African prison cell.

"How did you know about that matter?" he pressed us. "I always denied the involvement before. When I got involved ... it was agreed from the beginning that it will never be mentioned." He then outlined a series of secret meetings he had all over the globe that helped pressure the South African government to release Mandela.

The meetings were so clandestine that his boss, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, began using a jocular cover story that Boutros-Ghali had a mistress in Paris (he didn't).

"I used to phone Mubarak, 'I am leaving.' He'd say, 'What, again? Where are you off to — to see your mistress in Paris?' He pretended I had one. And I said, 'No, I am going to see the man of the South.'"

That is why, he said, the column we wrote was such a surprise. "For me, it was a mystery how it was known — I never mentioned this to Nelson Mandela. And we are very good friends. We have never talked about it."

The only good diplomacy, he stressed, is a "very discreet one, even though you are tempted to speak of it. You are proud; you want credit." Often, the peacemaking diplomat is supposed to disappear so that the two conflicting parties can boast that "we have solved this problem by ourselves," he added. But in the case of a failure, "you (the diplomat) will be the scapegoat, and both of them will blame you."

The most frustrating thing about his job as secretary general, he says, is that he often cannot respond to his critics. He is "employed" by 185 member countries. If any of them criticizes him publicly or in the press, he is expected to hold his tongue.

Boutros-Ghali spent 14 years as Egypt's top diplomatic official, serving Mubarak and Anwar Sadat. In that capacity, he said, "You are supported by your government. And when you are attacked, you can counterattack.

"Here, you cannot (counter). I cannot say publicly to the government of country A, 'You are wrong.' You have to keep quiet. If you don't, it will cost you a lot because you need them. They are your bosses. Here, rather than one Sadat, I have 185 Sadats. The important ones are 40 or 50, the active ones. But still, they are there. So it is a handicap."

All in all, he added, it is not easy to stand up to them, even behind the scenes. "They are so powerful and you are very weak. You have no army; you have no money; you have no political power. Everything comes from them (the member states). But you must be able to tell them at times, 'I disagree with you.' And here is the (greatest) difficulty."

If this is the new world order, Robertson and his brethren have little to fear.

Streamline Social Security now before big crunch hits

Social Security wants eventually to move all retirees with bank accounts into direct-deposit programs. There's no reason for delay.

About half of Social Security's more than 40 million benefit recipients get monthly payments deposited directly into checking and savings accounts.

The rest receive checks by mail at the beginning of the month.

The administration proposes staggering payment dates to eliminate the system's bottleneck and rush at the post office. It would also relieve telephone lines that get jammed with questions and complaint calls and even out the staff's workload.

That makes sense as an interim step, but why stop short?

The administration would save money on the cost of printing and mailing checks. An electronic funds transfer system would also help it reach its goal of trimming its 66,000 person work force by 4,500 positions over the next four years. ...

Streamlining the Social Security Administration now, before Baby Boomers start claiming benefits, is smart. All the administration needs to do is follow through on Vice President Al Gore's quest to cut back on bureaucracy, red tape and paperwork.

School system, personal lifestyles must change

"What is happening to our country?" We all seem to be asking this question more and more these days. Of course there is no single, simple or quick answer, but it appears to be more apparent that we have got to start changing, not only our legal system, but our school system, as well as our own personal lifestyles.

Did any of you, with small children, watch the talk show on national television (with Peter Jennings) a few nights ago, on which the city and schools of Roswell, N.M. were featured? I thought it was quite an eye opener! It told how the entire city had bonded and were working "together" to try to start a "turnaround" in the attitudes of "everyone" — not only the children, but parents as well. The superintendent of schools, principals of each of the schools, the teachers, some of the judges and attorneys, the churches, and other interested entities were all involved.

We can't change the entire country or even our own city overnight, but we can start right in our own homes where the problems begin. Our children grow to be what we make them (of course, there are exceptions, as we all know). When our children are in danger of going to school, there's something very wrong. Maybe some concerned parent could contact the superintendent of Roswell schools and look into starting a similar program, to not only "save our children" but also "save our country."

Community support is reassuring to team

On behalf of the members of the National Engineering Design Challenge team from Midland High School, I want to extend my sincere appreciation to all of the companies, groups, and individuals that contributed to the completion of our project and our trip to Washington, D.C. for the national contest. It is reassuring to witness the widespread community support we received for this educational program. As the "coach" of this unique and talented group of students, I was proud of their effort, dedication, and presentation. I think you, too, would have been proud of the way they represented our state, city, and school district.

The highest praise belongs to the students themselves: Regine Rusk, Rodney Knous, Denise Earles, Tara Toliver, Miles Hartmann, Austin Cropper, Josh Coody, and Brad Rhoden. Their preparation before the contest, poise during the event, and sportsmanship displayed at the conclusion were extraordinary. A huge debt of gratitude is also owed to the parents of these students for their support and encouragement.

To publicly name and thank all the individuals that helped our team would make this letter too long. You know who you are; so do we. Thank you very much.

Agency should review purpose, start overhaul

Since this is "Child Abuse Prevention Month" why not hear the "rest of the story." Child Protective Services (CPS) was established to help prevent child abuse and neglect. In an article printed on April 27, it was reported that two children die weekly in Texas alone due to child abuse or neglect. Did you know that 50 percent of those children would have been saved had CPS not returned them to their mothers after removal from the home? CPS believes that "the best place for a child is with its mother." The two children that die weekly are with their mothers, so how can this be? I believe CPS needs to take another look at its purpose for existence and start a major overhaul, beginning with their impassive caseworkers. A community-based child facility review team does not prevent deaths. It reviews them.

Matthew 18:10 states that the angels of all children have constant access to the Father. May His judgment be swift, certain and severe for those who could have prevented these tragedies.

Patterson article is insult to all animal-lovers

In response to the article, "Differences between cats, dogs numerous" by Jimmy Patterson on April 24, first of all what was the purpose of this article? Was it supposed to be amusing, funny, or by chance, did I just take it the wrong way? I don't think so.

Being an animal lover myself, this article was insulting and made me realize that some human beings don't possess a great deal upstairs either and that if a character flaw exists it's within the person who wrote this article.

Secondly, I know that this is America and people are free to speak and feel as they want about these creatures that God created. But, it just seems a little insensitive especially in times when animals are used to help humans overcome illness, search for people after a massive bomb or just be a loving companion in general. I feel so sorry for a person who has this low of an opinion of animals. Because I know that this blatant disregard comes from a person who hasn't stopped to smell the roses.

Trustees act "put out" at citizen's questions

For some reason the Midland Independent School District (MISD) board still surprises me. At the April 25 school board meeting, after most other business was handled and the majority of the public had left, Dr. Baressi and the trustees were quietly discussing a letter to our state legislators. Out of order, I asked them to clarify what they were discussing. I was told I could come by Dr. Baressi's office the following day and get a copy of "the letter." I said that was fine, but I wanted to know now what the letter said. They all acted put out that it had to be explained to me, but Dr. Baressi went on to explain it was a letter from our MISD School Board trustees (and MISD administration?) telling the Texas legislators they were against items in Senate Bill 1 or efforts to allow school board trustees to be "recalled." Trustee James Fuller added "as well as term limits." The letter also states that MISD is against school "vouchers." Trustee Dianne Anderson said she was not signing the letter. Dr. Baressi was under the impression all the trustees were going to sign it and then asked if any of the other trustees had changed their minds, before he had the letter re-typed. All of the other trustees said it was okay and they would sign it.

My suggestion to the Midland taxpayers...is your school board trustee representing your feelings on these topics? If not, I suggest you do two things: one — contact your trustee and tell them you do not agree and do not appreciate them sending letters to the legislators on behalf of MISD; two — contact your Texas state legislators (Rep. Tom Craddick and Senator Teel Bivins) and tell them how you stand! From what I gathered, the Texas legislators will be making decisions on school-related items sometime prior to Sept. 1st. I know the Texas Education Department was sunsetted (to become non-existent on Sept. 1 so something will have to be done by the legislators quickly.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

Rwanda puts its own soldiers on trial for crimes against civilians

■ 9-month-old government is anxious to persuade world it is serious about rebuilding its justice system.

Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — The grim-faced prisoners shuffled slowly into the bare-bones courtroom Tuesday dressed in sandals and fatigues stripped of military insignia, guarded by fellow soldiers.

In blood-soaked Rwanda, traumatized by last year's genocide of 500,000 people and accusations of a recent new massacre of thousands of Hutu refugees, the proceedings were an attempt by the government to restore faith in the country's justice system and respect for human rights.

The 9-month-old government is anxious to persuade the world that it is serious about rebuilding its justice system. It has been warned by the international community that desperately needed aid will be cut if human rights are not respected.

Justice Minister Alphonse Marie Nkibito looked on Tuesday as the Tutsi-led Rwanda Patriotic Army inaugurated its first tribunal to prosecute crimes by its own soldiers against the civilian population.

Nkibito called the session an important milestone in Rwanda's attempt to restore normal life to a nation sickened by killing.

"Now it is the responsibility of our army to judge its own and to discipline such persons," he said. "It is the beginning of a process."

The issue is especially sensitive following the slayings of hundreds of Hutus by Rwandan soldiers at the Kibeho refugee camp on April 22 and the subsequent accusations of a coverup. The United Nations says at least 2,000 people died. The government insists the number was only about 300.

The deaths, which occurred as the government was trying to shut down the camp and return its occupants to their home villages following last year's civil war, caused a wave of international criticism. Belgium and the Netherlands suspended non-humanitarian aid, and the European Union is reviewing its aid program.

Neither of the two cases in the spartan courthouse Tuesday dealt with the 1994 genocide by Hutu extremists that wiped out hundreds of thousands of Tutsis, or the alleged scattered incidents since then of Tutsi soldiers taking revenge.

In the first case, a captain and five soldiers were charged with invading and robbing the Tanzanian Embassy in Kigali in October, killing two of its civilian guards.

In the second, five soldiers were accused of a murder-for-hire in which a powerful local businessman was abducted and strangled to death at the behest of a business rival who has since fled the country.

The men all face execution by firing squad if convicted by a six-judge military panel.

Presiding Judge Lt. Col. Charles Kayonga, a lean former guerrilla commander whose only previous judicial experience was disciplining soldiers in the field, said a verdict would be reached after reviewing the defendants' written and oral statements and the testimony of witnesses. The first verdict could be as early as Friday, he said.

"It is the aim of this court to help create a disciplined army," Kayonga said.

Nkibito, the justice minister, said about 500 Rwandan soldiers are incarcerated awaiting trial for crimes against the civilian population, including many Hutus.

Serbs target Zagreb's streets with rockets, kill at least five

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Serb rockets slammed into Zagreb's teeming streets Tuesday, killing at least five people, wounding 121 and terrorizing residents who hadn't seen such carnage since the 1991 civil war.

The rocket attack came in response to a Croatian army offensive Monday in which the Zagreb government claimed victory in routing Serb rebels from a key swath of territory they had occupied since the 1991 war.

But the triumph could be a mere prelude to a new and more dangerous round of Balkan warfare. In neighboring Bosnia, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic threatened to send help to rebel Serbs in Croatia, underlying the dangers that the two conflicts could merge.

Authorities said 11 rocket-propelled cluster bombs hit the city and its outskirts. Six rockets slammed into Zagreb's very heart, downtown streets filled with shoppers and a park where people were taking a mid-morning stroll.

On sidewalks, blood stains mixed with glass shards from smashed shop fronts. Covered bodies lay on a street close to the twin-towered cathedral. Cars burned near downtown Zrinjevac Square, a prime location and site of the U.S. Embassy and the Foreign Ministry.

At least five people died and 121 were wounded, the Interior Ministry said.

The attack was a chilling reminder for Zagreb's 1 million residents that this week's offensive hasn't removed Serb gunners who are just 30 miles away.

Among the wounded were two schoolchildren, including a 12-year old with shrapnel in her spine, hit when a rocket landed in their schoolyard. The city's schools were closed until further notice.

An employee who answered the telephone at the U.S. Embassy, only about 50 yards from the blast, said embassy workers were sent to shelters. The embassy later evacuated dependents and advised U.S. citizens to leave Croatia.

The Zagreb rocket attacks were "tantamount to a declaration of full-scale war" by the Serbs, U.S. Ambassador Peter Galbraith told Cable News Network.

Five missiles landed close to the airport, south of the city. Military sources said the rockets were fired by Serb forces close to Zagreb's southern outskirts.

Two air raid alarms sounded later in the day but no more missiles hit, although residents still feared further possible Serb reprisals.

The Croatian offensive began Monday to seize a section of the key Zagreb-Belgrade highway and isolate one of the four large chunks of territory captured by Serb rebels in the 1991 conflict.

Croatian fighter planes struck twice Tuesday at a key bridge connecting Serb holdings in Bosnia and Croatia across the Sava river at Bosanska Gradiska.

Convicted murderer pleads for execution because of brain disease

■ Keith Zettlemoyer to be first person put to death in Pennsylvania in 33 years.

Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. — Keith Zettlemoyer begged the courts to let him die, pleading that "brain disease" made his life in prison hell.

After more than a decade of appeals, Zettlemoyer recently fired his attorneys and faced his fate Tuesday night as the first person to be put to death in Pennsylvania in 33 years.

Up to 12 witnesses — six reporters and six chosen by the Department of Corrections — were to watch Zettlemoyer get strapped down to a gurney in a 10-by-14 foot room and receive an injection of barbiturates and paralytic agents designed to kill swiftly and painlessly.

Zettlemoyer was convicted of the 1980 murder of a friend who planned to testify against him in a robbery trial. His victim's mother supported a last-minute appeal, saying she could not abide by the death penalty under any circumstances.

■ More national news/ 5B

Zettlemoyer, 39, has been diagnosed with post traumatic stress disorder. He complained in court of an unspecified "brain disease," though doctors said they could find nothing physically wrong.

"I see my execution as an end of suffering to my imprisonment — a blessed, merciful release from all these health symptoms that I'm constantly suffering with," he testified Saturday in U.S. District Court.

Attorneys for the Pennsylvania Post-Conviction Defender Organization argued that Zettlemoyer was not mentally competent to decide his own fate.

Three psychiatrists testified that Zettlemoyer was sane.

"I'm not crazy. I'm not loony. I understand perfectly what's going on with the execution and everything," Zettlemoyer said.

Zettlemoyer was convicted of murdering Charles DeVetsco. DeVetsco's 79-year-old mother, Aldona, joined with the defender organization to try to stop the execution. She did not return several telephone messages from The Associated Press.

Elmo Smith was the last inmate to die in Pennsylvania, in 1962. Since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume the death penalty in 1976, Pennsylvania has scheduled 34 executions.

Judge resentences convict to 16 years

■ Midland man gets same sentence of 16 years for robbery, extortion and blackmail.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland man convicted by a federal jury of robbery, extortion and blackmail in 1993 was resentenced Tuesday on a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that his sentence did not meet federal guidelines, according to court officials.

George Wendell Maxey Jr., 24, was resentenced by Senior U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton to the same sentence of 16 years in prison for his role in a Nov. 6, 1992, attempted bank robbery.

Maxey was found guilty by a jury of conspiracy to extort money from Midland American Bank, use of a weapon during a crime and possession of a weapon during the commission of a crime.

He broke into the home of a MAB employee and attempted to get her to open the bank vault for him. Evidence in the case showed he tied the woman up and held her there for two hours.

Andrew Gruzins pleaded guilty to the charges and during Maxey's trial in October 1993, admitted he and Maxey committed the crime. Maxey maintained his innocence throughout his trial.

Before Bunton sentenced him in December 1993, Maxey underwent a pre-sentencing investigation conducted by a federal probation officer, as required by federal law.

The probation officer interviews the defendant and others related to the case and then recommends to the judge what range of punishment is appropriate for the offender, according to federal guidelines.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery asked that punishment be enhanced because the bank employee was a "vulnerable victim."

Beery said she was vulnerable because she lived alone and because of her position with the bank.

Bunton departed upward from sentencing guidelines because of the vulnerable victim argument. But the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled the sentence was not appropriate because the woman was not a vulner-

Carver students learn how immigrants influenced U.S.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Flags of many countries, the aroma of exotic dishes, and colorful costumes filled a classroom at Carver Center Tuesday during the sixth- graders' "Cultural Fair."

Judy Umberger's social studies students in the gifted program explained their displays and traditional foods.

"It was a real chance for me to learn more about my heritage," said Crystal Fonesca, serving pizza while standing in front of the display on Italy.

Crystal said she learned that cappuccino originated in Italy. "And I never knew there were so many kinds of pastas until we started studying about Italy," she said. Since Italy is also known for its fine wines, Crystal noted that grape juice was being substituted for the student cultural event.

Brian Welsh sported Viking horns and described politics in Denmark. He said popular snap-together blocks were invented in Denmark.

David Bakal, who has a Lebanese grandfather, served up Hashwah, a spicy rice and ground meat dish popular in Lebanon.

Several students eyed the artichoke at the display on France, but opted for pastries instead.

"Our primary emphasis has been on how immigrants influenced American culture," Ms. Umberger said. "We even re-enacted immigrants arriving on a steamship to Ellis Island (in New York). I told students that the culture in America is like a big quilt and each ethnic group brought a little patch of it."

After a semester of research, writing projects, and trying out recipes, several students allowed that a "big feast" was a fine way of wrapping up the unit.

But even with all of the research, a couple of younger Carver pupils wandering into the classroom were surprised to see the guacamole and tortilla chips sitting in front of the display of Mexico. "Excuse me," said one youngster, but aren't those supposed to be Texas foods?"

Three West Texas hospitals link up, expand outreach

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The recent affiliation of three West Texas hospitals in Midland and Lubbock is designed to bring about a "strategic alliance" and mutual support and assistance in the competitive health-care market.

Linking up to broaden and intensify each hospital's outreach and realm of influence are Midland's 60-bed Physicians & Surgeons Hospital and the under-construction 101-bed Westwood Medical Center and the 920-bed Lubbock Methodist Hospital System.

"The affiliation with Lubbock Methodist Hospital System is a major step in achieving our goal of providing access to health-care services on a regional basis," said Mike Potter, president and chief executive officer (CEO) of Physicians & Surgeons Hospital. "Methodist Hospital is a highly-recognized provider of tertiary services across West Texas."

The 1964-built Physicians & Surgeons Hospital and the $30-million Westwood Memorial Medical Center, which is to be completed in October, are owned by the Houston-based Champion Heathcare Corporation, which owns and operates nine hospitals and one skilled-nursing facility in seven states: Texas, Louisiana, Missouri, Alabama, Virginia, Utah, and North Dakota.

All told, the Champion Healthcare system operates 1,348 licensed beds. The expanding company, which was established five years ago, is listed on the American Stock Exchange.

Westwood Medical Center's affiliation with the Lubbock hospital will afford the Midland hospital with the "ability to further expand services and the advantage of a strong regional partner for exploring other health-care ventures in West Texas."

Potter said Champion Healthcare has not yet decided the fate of its Physicians & Surgeons Hospital building once Westwood Medical Center is in business.

Methodist Hospital President-CEO William D. Poteet noted that Physicians & Surgeons is a "good strategic partner" for the Methodist Hospital System.

"With completion of Westwood Medical Center in October, we see Midland as an outstanding and growing medical community. Together, I feel confident that we will be able to continue providing the highest level of tertiary support for West Texas, Eastern New Mexico and beyond."

Through its Regional Services/Rural Health Network, the Lubbock Methodist Hospital System has extended its influence to more than 40 affiliates in Eastern New Mexico and West Texas cities and towns, including Big Spring. Midland's 335-bed, regional Memorial Hospital and Medical Center has laid plans to extend its outreach via a health-care clinic in Big Spring.

Of the Lubbock-Midland connection, Potter said "There are things that we have available at Physicians & Surgeons in Midland that would be of benefit to the Lubbock Methodist Hospital System, and there are things that Lubbock Methodist Hospital System has and does in areas of West Texas that we think would be of benefit to us.

Potter said Champion Healthcare has "the capability to serve both inpatients and outpatients in Midland, which their (Lubbock Methodist Hospital) system does not currently have," Potter explained. And they have affiliations with facilities in West Texas that we don't currently have."

Chairman: Embargo to hurt U.S.

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. trade embargo against Iran will hurt some Texas companies and likely cost more Texans than Iranians their jobs, says the chairman of the state agency that regulates the oil and gas industry.

Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Barry Williamson said Tuesday that Iran shouldn't have any trouble finding new buyers for its oil, which he said has accounted for about 7 percent of daily U.S. consumption.

"It's not going to hurt Iran, but it's going to hurt some businesses in Texas," Williamson said. "We'll lose more jobs than they will."

On Monday, the United States urged other nations to sever commercial ties with Iran and join the United States in the embargo, meant to punish Tehran for supporting terrorism and pursuing nuclear weapons.

Williamson, a Republican, said a better plan would have been for Clinton, a Democrat, to work with other countries and through the United Nations before making a unilateral move "that only hurt us."

"A worldwide ban would have sent Iran a strong message, but Clinton's unilateral move will simply hurt American companies," he said.

In Texas, the effects will be felt by oilfield supply firms, oil companies, steel manufacturers, pipeline companies, refineries and others, Williamson said.

Williamson expects foreign companies to move quickly to pick up business lost by American firms because of the embargo.

PUNISH: Judge gives convict same sentence able victim.

On Tuesday, Bunton said other issues regarding the case were allowed to be considered in the sentencing.

Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Edith Jones said Bunton was free to depart upward in sentencing because of the psychological trauma of the victim as a result of the crime and the two-hour physical restraint.

Before handing down the sentence Bunton asked Maxey if there was anything he wanted to add to the letters from his family requesting leniency in sentencing.

Maxey said he was adjusting to prison life as a Christian and was doing everything he could to improve himself. He credited the Lord and his family with supporting him and said it would be unbearable without them.

He said he was tutoring inmates who are studying to get their GEDs and said he does his best in church and on his jobs. He spoke of a sister who recently had a baby and about not getting to be there to help his nieces and nephews.

Despite Maxey's letter to the court claiming defense attorney Tom Hirsch was incompetent in his counsel, Hirsch told the court Maxey "is one of those people who can actually benefit from any situation he's in ... and I'm convinced he'll get an education and I'm convinced his family will assist him in any way they can."

Bunton told Maxey he knew he was a from a Christian background and a Christian family and called the crime a "terrible thing."

"I don't think you realize the negative impact you had on (the bank employee.)" Bunton told Maxey.

The judge recounted the evidence at the trial that lead jurors to convict Maxey of breaking into the woman's apartment, tying her up, threatening her for two hours, as well as telling her lies and terrifying her.

The woman sent a letter to the judge explaining she had to move because of the incident and said the crime is interfering in her relationship with her grandchildren.

"This had altered her life for the rest of her days ... she was taken hostage, you and (Andrew) Gruzins restrained her, left her tied up face down on her bed, scared out of her wits. She'll remember this every night," Bunton said.

Members of Maxey's family maintain his innocence and claim he was denied due process because requests were denied for a DNA test on the ski mask used in the MAB case, a lie detector test and a voice test.

Hirsch requested that he be released from Maxey's defense; Bunton approved and said a public defender will be appointed for Maxey's appeal.

Maxey pleaded guilty in January to burglary charges in state court. He was sentenced to 17 years in prison to run concurrently with his federal sentence of 16 years.

That burglary occurred Oct. 23, 1992, when he broke into a man's house, tied up the resident and ransacked the house — essentially the same thing he did to the MAB employee, according to court officials.

Gruzins pleaded guilty to the same offense and was also sentenced to 17 years in prison. He is serving five years for the federal charges.

Senate votes for public school tuition, fee increases

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to raise tuition at public universities and allow them to increase various fees was passed unanimously Tuesday by the Texas Senate.

The measure would continue a $2 per semester-hour annual increase in undergraduate tuition for Texas residents until fiscal year 2001, when it would hit $40 per hour.

"It'll still be one of the best bargains in America," said Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, who is sponsoring the bill with Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo.

Bivins said the increase would bring the share of education costs covered by a student's resident tuition to about 20 percent.

The bill also directs that tuition for students from outside Texas be raised to the level charged by the other five most populous states. That would mean an increase from $171 per semester hour to an estimated $222.

"As we face the continuing demand on our state resources ... we had to face up to the hard call that we need to require out-of-state students to pick up a greater share of the cost of education," Bivins said.

The measure would allow the state Higher Education Coordinating Board to set a lower tuition rate for nonresident students if petitioned by an institution within 100 miles of Texas' border with another state.

State law already allows for in-state tuition rates to be charged to Mexican citizens who attend border institutions, Bivins said. The bill would add Texas A&M University in Kingsville to that program.

Law school tuition also would be raised under the bill, which earlier passed the House and returns to that chamber for consideration of Senate changes.

Resident law school students would pay $75 per hour, up from $60, while those from out of state would see an increase from $150 to $200.

The bill also would allow universities to raise tuition for optometry and pharmacy students.

In addition, Bivins' bill includes authorization for fee increases by various universities, with limits. For example, a fee may require a student vote to take effect or be tied to tuition rates.

The bill would allow Texas A&M University to raise the medical services fee; Texas Tech University to raise the university center fee; Texas State University System institutions to increase their recreational sports fee; the University of Texas at Austin to charge $1 per semester fee for a Martin Luther King Jr. statue and scholarship program; and all public universities to raise their building use fees.

The bill also would create a tuition and fee exemption program for up to 150 Texas National Guard members enrolled in ROTC programs per year if they agree to accept a Guard commission upon graduation and serve four years. The students also would get a two-year exemption from paying room and board.

The Legislative Budget Board estimates that the bill overall would save the state general revenue fund $58.8 million over the next two-year budget period, and increase local university funds $20 million over the same time period.

The National Guard program is estimated to cost the state $550,000 in fiscal year 1996, increasing to $860,000 in fiscal year 2001.

The Senate also unanimously approved a bill by Sen. David Cain, D-Dallas, and Rep. Tony Goolsby, R-Dallas, to allow the University of Texas board of regents to charge students at UT-Dallas a recreational facility fee. A student election would be required.

Before approving Cain's measure, senators tacked on the fee increases contained in Bivins' bill. The measure earlier passed the House and returns to that chamber for consideration of Senate changes.

Mr. Tom Dollahite

Midland, TX 79707

Dear Mr. Dollahite:

Thank you for your inquiry. For your information, Southwest Airlines has been opposed to the city of Midland's plan to construct a new airline terminal building since the city first proposed the project in December of 1990. On numerous occasions, we have taken the opportunity to voice our opposition to the project with City Leaders, Midland Airport Executives, and the Federal Aviation Administration. Our objections have been completely ignored by everyone and at all levels.

Moreover, during the relevant time period, Midland has lost, not gained, air service.

Since 1990, the airline industry as a whole has been plagued by persistent financial weakness. Every carrier in America has embarked upon a plan to reduce costs. Midland has suffered as airlines have cut or reduced service. If the airport and the city were serious about enticing more service, it would develop a plan to provide better Customer Service to its tenants (who pay the user fees to sustain the airport) at lower costs. We do not need a new airport. We need an airport which is well-run, well-maintained, and which charges lower rates than its competitor airports. That is the best way to make your airport more "attractive" to airlines. Perhaps a more reasonable course for Midland to follow would be to use the accumulated passenger facility charge funds to renovate the existing terminal building and keep it in proper repair in the future, and place the construction of a new terminal on hold until a real need can be shown.

Thank you for your interest.

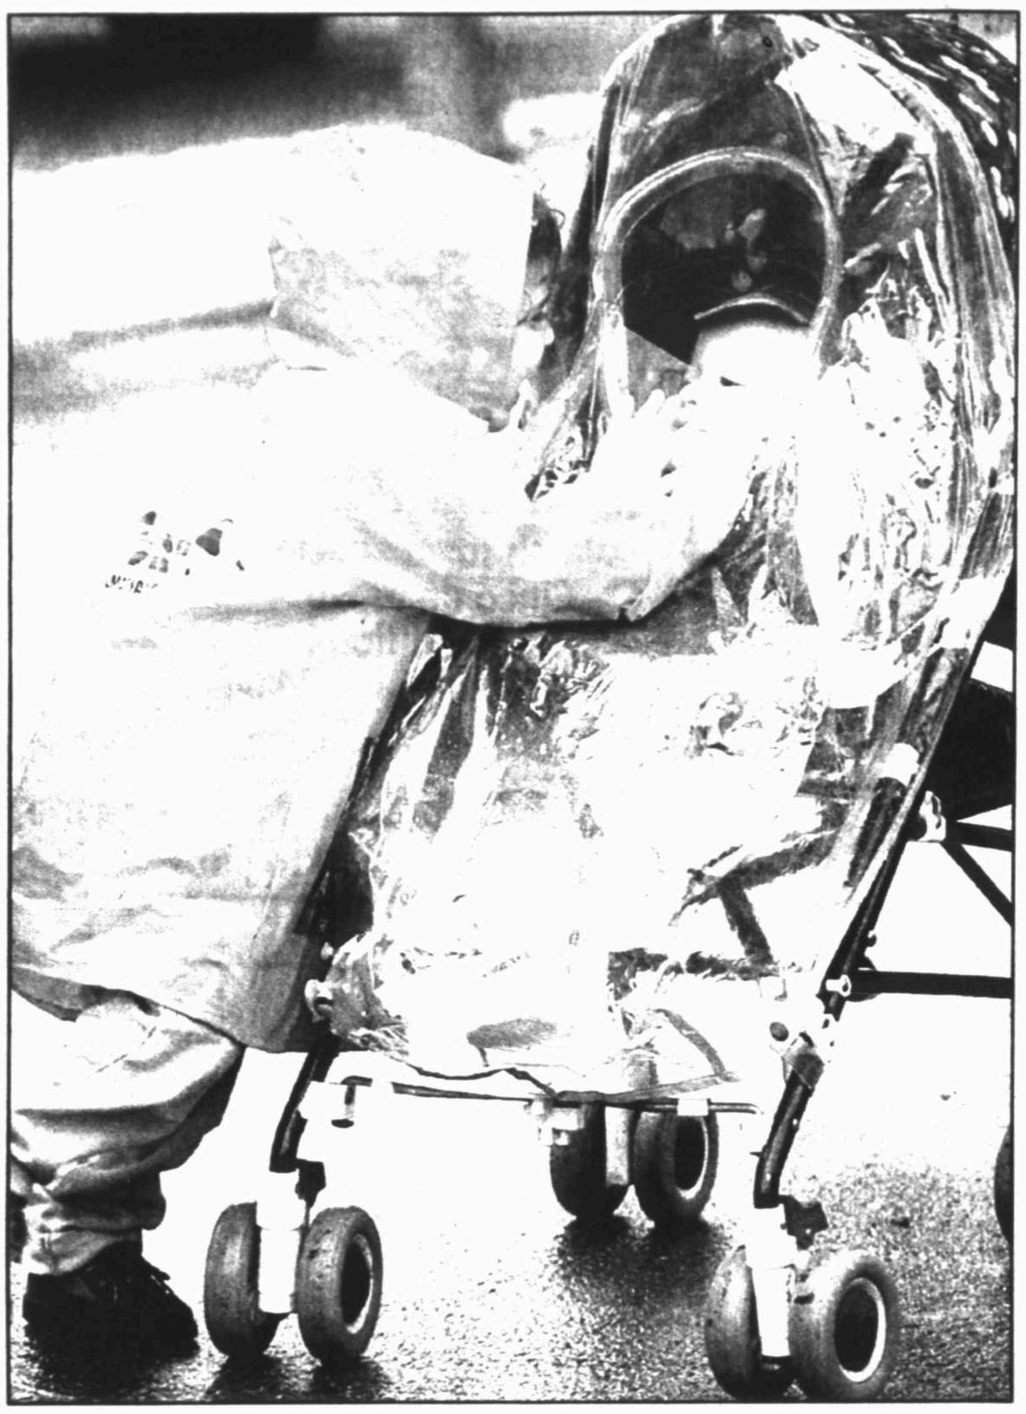

Best regards,

Herbert D. Kelleher

Scientists trace scaly skin disease symptoms to body's immune system

N.Y. Times News Service

More than 5 million Americans suffer from psoriasis, a disfiguring skin disease that can cause a lifetime of suffering and in some severe cases may lead patients to becoming social recluses.

But though the symptoms are clear — rough, red, scaly lesions that can cause the skin to grow so that it is five to 10 times its normal thickness at the site of a lesion — the cause of the disease has been a puzzle.

About 10 years ago, most dermatologists considered psoriasis a disease of skin cells, a growth abnormality that made these cells proliferate and form lesions.

In the lesions, skin cells that normally move slowly from the skin's innermost layer to the surface move instead so quickly that they do not have time to fully develop before they are shed.

In addition, blood vessels in the lesions grow to allow extra blood to course through the skin, making it red and inflamed. White blood cells infiltrate the area. These myriad symptoms seemed to rule out a simple explanation.

But what then, dermatologists asked, is the primary cause? What is the basis for this skin disease?

Now a new study by Dr. James G. Krueger of Rockefeller University and his colleagues indicates that the symptoms may have a single simple cause: a group of activated white blood cells of the immune system.

By destroying only these cells, called CD-8 cells, the investigators were able to make patients' lesions disappear. It provides "a new way of thinking about psoriasis," Dr. Krueger said.

Others agreed. Dr. David Norris, a psoriasis expert who is professor of dermatology at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver, said the work was "very important" and "it's going to change the way we think about psoriasis."

In the study, published in the May issue of the journal Nature Medicine, Dr. Krueger and his colleagues gave patients with severe psoriasis, whose lesions covered essentially their entire bodies, an experimental therapy that consisted of diphtheria toxin hooked to a molecule that made it home in on a specific group of white blood cells.

The aim was to knock out a group of white blood cells that the investigators hypothesized were responsible for the disease.

Eight of 10 patients improved, four substantially and four moderately. Dr. Krueger said that whether a patient responded seemed to depend on whether the drug, a large protein molecule, was able to infiltrate the psoriasis lesions.

In the two patients who did not respond to the treatment, the drug never got to the lesions. Dr. Krueger said he was now giving higher doses of the drug and was seeing a 100 percent response rate.

But the point of the experiment was to determine whether these activated white blood cells were causing psoriasis. And the answer, Dr. Krueger said, is a resounding yes.

Dr. Krueger's study grew out of a decade of work by his group and others. When the work began, researchers had just found by chance that the immunosuppressant drug cyclosporine helped some psoriasis patients.

Then Dr. Alice Gottlieb of Rockefeller University noticed that psoriasis lesions contained activated T cells, which are a class of white blood cells of the immune system.

Normally, T cells are in a resting state. But when they encounter a foreign body, like a virus or a fungus, they become activated, secreting chemicals that signal them to proliferate, attack and destroy the invader wherever they encounter it.

The finding suggested that T cells might be reacting against something in the psoriasis lesion, perhaps contributing to the pathology of the disease.

Dr. Gottlieb and Dr. Krueger began collaborating, studying these activated T cells and noticing that one of the chemicals the T cells secrete, interleukin 6, makes skin cells overgrow. They reasoned that the T-cell reaction could account for the proliferation of skin cells in the lesions.

Woman files lawsuit over alleged sexual orientation discrimination

NEW YORK (NYT) — A woman has sued the Metropolitan Opera Company for discrimination, charging she was dismissed from her job as an assistant stage director because she is a heterosexual woman.

The woman, Martha Ellen Brennan, 48, said the executive stage director for the opera, David Kneuss, was prejudiced against heterosexuals and people over 40, while he favored younger homsexual men and women.

Ms. Brennan, who was dropped by the opera in 1993, said Kneuss consistently gave better assignments to homosexuals, refused to hire heterosexuals, gave her an unfair share of undesirable work and often made demeaning remarks about her sexuality.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan on Wednesday, Ms. Brennan claimed that she was dismissed in February 1993 shortly after she objected to several lewd pictures of half-dressed men that had been put up in the workplace.

A spokesman for the opera, David Reuben, said he could not respond to the charges Monday afternoon. "We are not going to have any comment until we have had a chance to review the case thoroughly," Reuben said.

Through her lawyer, David Scott, Ms. Brennan said: "I was horribly wronged by the defendants. I believe the objectionable practices are invidious and should not be allowed to continue."

Ms. Brennan began working for the opera in 1986 as an intern for the stage director at the time, Phebe Berkowitz. She rose quickly in the organization, becoming an administrative assistant for the executive stage director in 1989 and then an assistant stage director in 1990.

In court papers, Ms. Brennan said that her superiors gave her high marks for her work, but when Kneuss took over the helm of the stage direction department in 1989, the workplace became extremely uncomfortable for her.

Two Americans in Iraqi prison hospitalized, U.S. officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Americans imprisoned in Iraq for the past seven weeks have been hospitalized with chest pains, the State Department said Tuesday.

Spokesman Nicholas Burns said a Polish diplomat who represents U.S. interests in Baghdad has been asked by the administration to visit the hospital immediately.

"We believe that on medical grounds alone there is every reason to release these two guys," Burns said.

The State Department learned about the hospitalizations of the two Americans, William Barloon and David Daliberti, from family members.

There was no word on the exact nature of their ailments. Daliberti is known to have a heart condition.

Barloon, 39, and Daliberti, 41, were arrested March 13 after crossing into Iraq from Kuwait, where they worked for U.S. defense contractors. Although they said they had strayed over the border inadvertently, they were sentenced March 25 to eight years in prison.

Until the wives were first allowed into the maximum security Abu Ghraib prison outside Baghdad, the men had had no link to the outside world for two weeks.

Polish diplomat Ryszard Krystosik had tried to see the prisoners but was turned away repeatedly without explanation. Poland handles U.S. contact with Baghdad in the absence of U.S. diplomatic relations with Baghdad.

Iraqi authorities allowed Linda Barloon and Kathy Daliberti into the prison for a second visit Monday, but again withheld letters and packages from the men, Burns said.

Clinton to allow Cubans at Guantanamo into U.S.

■ Other refugees who flee Cuba, however, to be forcibly returned home, president says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a sudden reversal, President Clinton agreed Tuesday to allow some 20,000 Cubans into the United States after months of detention at Guantanamo Bay. But he said any more Cubans who flee their country will be forcibly returned home.

Cuban-American leaders expressed delight that people detained at the U.S. naval base in Cuba would be permitted to migrate, but they complained bitterly that future refugees would be turned away.

Some Republicans accused Clinton of shutting the doors on a safe haven that for 35 years has beckoned Cubans fleeing Fidel Castro's communist state.

"It's a very lamentable decision," said Republican Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, who represents the Miami area.

"How sad it is that the United States is now viewed as an accomplice in Castro's repression of the Cuban people," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Responding to the Republican complaints, White House press secretary Mike McCurry said: "The question is, Do they propose to let these folks rot in Gauntanamo or be reunited with their families?"

"Or do they propose to open the doors in Florida and accept thousands of new immigrants? They have to answer to the strain that would be placed on communities throughout the South," McCurry said.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said on the Senate floor that Clinton's decision "was a difficult one." While endorsing Clinton's policy, Graham said the return of future refugees to Cuba "causes great concern to many people, including myself."

There were indications of a serious rift in the administration over the new policy. Dennis Hays, the State Department's coordinator for Cuban affairs, and his deputy, Nancy Mason, asked to be reassigned in protest of the decision to repatriate fleeing Cubans, officials said.

Hays headed the U.S. delegation to three rounds of talks with Cuban officials on migration issues, most recently two weeks ago in New York. He is known as a strong supporter of the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba and to have close ties to conservative Cuban-American lawmakers.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher called Hays and expressed regret about his decision and said he understood his reasons. Christopher also said he would recommend that Hays be reassigned expeditiously to another post in the Latin America bureau.

The decision to admit refugees from Guantanamo stemmed largely from fears of civil disturbances by Cubans frustrated by their captivity and angry about a policy that until now excluded them from the United States. U.S. officials say 20,916 Cubans are now being held at Guantanamo.

Some 6,000 American troops are stationed at Guantanamo, and the administration said it was increasingly concerned about their safety.

Moreover, it has been costing the United States $1 million a day to guard the Cubans and the administration was facing a $100 million bill to upgrade the camps.

The White House said that "relatively few" of the Cubans in Guantanamo would not qualify for admission to the United States; those deemed ineligible will be returned to Havana. The remainder will be gradually admitted to the United States under a policy that allows up to 20,000 legal entrants each year from Cuba.

The new policy was struck in secret talks between Underscretary of State Secretary of State Peter Tarnoff and Ricardo Alarcon, a former diplomat who is now Cuban National Assembly president, a State Department official said.

Los Angeles Police Department forensic chemist, Gregory Matheson, holds up a card used for blood samples, Tuesday, during the O.J. Simpson double-murder trial.

Simpson jury hears testimony on blood trail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The prosecution opened its bag of scientific evidence Tuesday against O.J. Simpson, revealing a sock stained with his ex-wife's blood type and a drop of Simpson's blood type found on a path leading from her body.

Outside court, a stressed-out woman released from the jury was hospitalized, and broadcasters played portions of the audio tape of Simpson's interview with police the day after his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman were slain.

During the tape, Simpson told investigators: "I know I'm the Number 1 target, and now you're telling me I got blood all over the place."

A prosecutor used vivid death photos and testimony from police chemist Gregory Matheson to head off two expected defense claims: that a mystery killer's blood — not Simpson's — was under the fingernails of Nicole Brown Simpson, and that some of Simpson's blood is missing because police used it to frame him.

Matheson, while saying there was a "great likelihood" the fingernail blood was that of the victim, said he could not rule out other possibilities because the blood apparently was degraded before it was tested.

The prosecution showed pictures of Ms. Simpson lying in a pool of blood, of her bloody, well-manicured hands and of her fingernails, clipped from her body and caked with blood.

Simpson gazed toward a courtroom wall rather than at the 7-foot screen where the pictures were projected. Some spectators said it appeared Simpson had tears in his eyes.

Matheson testified that a sample of Ms. Simpson's blood tested as type BA, but the blood under her fingernails was type B, which matched neither Simpson's nor the victims'.

Matheson showed jurors how blood can degrade and register differently on serology tests.

Matheson, chief forensic chemist at the police serology laboratory, also testified that blood consistent with Ms. Simpson's type was found on a sock at the foot of Simpson's bed.

Matheson said Simpson's blood also was consistent with a drop found next to a bloody shoeprint leading from Ms. Simpson's condominium. Matheson testified that based on the prosecution's testing, fewer than one-half of one percent of the population — 0.43 percent — would match that blood drop, and the victims wouldn't be in that group.

Outside court, the juror who told Judge Lance Ito last month "I can't take it any more" and was dismissed Monday, was carried out of her house on a stretcher under a white sheet and taken by ambulance to a hospital. Tracy Hampton, 26, was listed in stable condition.

Budget plan of Senate panel chief omits tax cuts — for now

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Budget Committee plans to unveil a deficit-reduction proposal next week that omits — for now — the tax cuts so strongly supported by many Republicans.

To the ire of some conservatives and the skepticism of Democrats, the budget proposed by Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., would instead let Congress trim taxes only after lawmakers approve spending cuts that the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office certifies would balance the budget by 2002.

Once that is achieved, Domenici's measure would allow about $170 billion in tax reductions over seven years — more than President Clinton has proposed, but less than approved by the GOP-controlled House. That figure represents the "economic bonus" Republicans say the government would enjoy as a result of balancing the budget, thanks to lower interest rates and increased economic activity.

Pushed by conservative rivals in his race for the Republican presidential nomination, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has said the Senate will approve tax cuts this year. But Congress is now moving from talking about the budget to working on it, and Domenici's language seeks to balance the demands of senior Republicans like himself who see deficit reduction as their top priority, and conservatives eager to also slash taxes.

"You've got to complete the primary task of balancing the budget," Domenici said in an interview. "I don't believe the people I'm in contact with want a tax cut before you get a balanced budget."

But Domenici is being fought by conservative Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of Dole's presidential rivals and a member of the Budget Committee.

In an interview, Gramm said Domenici's approach would not deliver the tax cuts Republicans promised during last fall's election campaign. Under the figures Domenici is using, just $79 billion of the $170 billion in seven-year tax cuts could occur in the first five years, and only $24 billion could take effect in the first three years.

"It would provide virtually no tax relief until well into the next administration. That's not acceptable," Gramm said.

Gramm said he would try to add tax reductions, and spending cuts to pay for them, to Domenici's plan either at the Budget Committee or later on the Senate floor.

Democrats said they were suspicious about cutting taxes on the assumption they would be paid for by an economic bonus resulting from elimination of the deficit.

"I'm very fearful of falling back into the familiar scenario of the early 1980s, when Ronald Reagan gave us a scenario of a balanced budget in four years and having a tax cut," said Sen. James Exon of Nebraska, senior Democrat on the budget panel. "The worst vote I ever cast in my life was in support of that."

Mainstream economists from both parties agree that a balanced budget would allow interest rates to drop slightly, which would mean reduced borrowing costs for the Treasury and would probably lead to increased economic activity. But many of them say there is no way to predict how much extra money that would mean for the Treasury, since the economy reacts to many different factors.

Domenici plans to present his deficit-reduction package to his committee Monday for the first time. It will mark the beginning of Congress' effort to deliver on Republican campaign promises to balance the budget.

The House Budget Committee plans to vote on its package May 11, and it is certain to reflect the five-year, $189 billion tax cut already approved by the House. Clinton has proposed $63 billion worth of tax cuts over five years.

Oil price sinks

Oil futures prices rocketed higher then plummeted Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid waning fear that a planned U.S. embargo on Iran will affect crude oil supply and demand.
The losses in crude came despite expectations that American Petroleum Institute data, released after the close, would show a moderate drop last week in U.S. crude inventories.
Petroleum futures products also posted losses but fared better than crude on expectations for promising API numbers.
WTI crude oil for June delivery settled 41 cents lower at $20.09 a barrel; June home heating oil fell .15 cent to 50.94 cents a gallon; June unleaded gasoline fell 0.50 cent lower to 63.65 cents a gallon; June natural gas fell 2.9 cents to $1.666 per 1,000 cubic feet.
Energy futures prices soared Monday in response to President Clinton's weekend announcement that he would ban all American trade with Iran.
But most other countries said they had decided against joining the ban for now.
"It become pretty apparent today that most of our allies were not going to go along with ban," said analyst Andrew Lebow of E.D. & F. Man International Futures Inc. in New York.
"That means realistically, when you look at it, oil is going to leak out of Iran," said George Gasper, oil analyst with Robert W. Baird & Co. in Milwaukee. "Some way, that oil is going to get to the market."

Dollar weaker

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar weakened against the mark and other key European currencies Tuesday, hurt by uncertainty over U.S.-Japanese trade talks and political anxieties in France that increased demand for the German currency.
By late afternoon in New York the dollar fetched 1.3777 marks, down from 1.3905 at the same time Monday. The dollar also fetched 83.60 yen, up from 83.50 yen late Monday.

Dow hits high

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue-chip stocks mustered enough strength to push the Dow Jones industrial average to another new high Tuesday but the market generally gave an uninspiring performance. Several broadly based market gauges also managed to nose past their previous records despite a session that lacked a decisive trend.
The Dow average dug out of deficit in the afternoon as selective buying offset modest profit-taking. It added 12.80 to 4,328.88, which was above the prior record reached Friday of 4,321.27.
In moving ahead, the market confounded analysts who have been predicting that stocks would pause after climbing to ever loftier peaks for months.
Apparently, though, investors still hungry for stocks are regarding any decline in the market as an opportunity to satisfy their appetites.

Local firms honored for CNG efforts

■ Wagner & Brown and Eddins-Walcher are recognized for innovation and enterrprise.in alternate fuels

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Wagner & Brown Ltd. and Eddins-Walcher were among eleven Texas firms honored Tuesday in Austin for their contributions to the alternative fuels industry.

The awards were presented at the at the Sixth Annual Alternative Vehicle Fuels Market Fair and Symposium by Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro who organized the event in 1989 in an effort to help promote Texas natural gas industry and clean air.

Wagner & Brown was chosen for expanding Compressed Natural Gas (CNG) technologies, while Eddins-Walcher and J.W. Operating were given a special award for construction of an innovative alternative fuel refueling station in Sonora, Texas.

The unmanned refueling station is the first in the natiion to sell propane, natural gas and CNG, and was made possible through a unique cooperative relationship between Eddins-Walcher and J-W Operating. The catalyst for getting the CNG facility built was Meridian Oil Co. who agreed to convert its vehicles to CNG and use the facility.

All three Texas Railroad Commissioners and the Texas General Land Office were represented at the opening ceremony of the facility.

Wagner & Brown has long been a leader in advancing CNG technology and has developed a CNG compressor that permits fast-fill operations at refueling stations. The company has also recognized for converting 20 of its fleet vehicles to CNG with plans to convert an additional 23 in 1995.

"We are proud that we made the conversions without the threat of any conversion mandate by government," said Drew Diggin, Wagner & Brown manager for alternative fuels research.

Other companies honored for their contributions include:

--- Ford Motor Co. for providing a clean-air option on its F-Series pickups,

--- Liquid Carbonic LNG (liquid natural gas), for building the first dedicated LNG plant in the world to produce LNG as a fuel.

--- Southwestern Electric Power Co. for building the first natural gas refueling station in East Texas, converting 50 vehicles to natural gas, and planning to build a second facility.

--- San Antonio's Parks and Recreation Dept. was recognized for converting the River Walk barges to CNG and building a public CNG refueling station downtown.

--- East Texas University was selected for its successful conversion of 30 vehicles to CNG.

--- Harlingen Independent School District received an education award for its program to utilized dual fueled buses.

--- El Paso Natural Gas and Jobe Concrete received awards for their efforts to improve air quality in the El Paso-Juarez area.

McNopoly

McDonald's Ronald McDonald and Monopoly's Rich Uncle Pennybags ring the bell to open trading at the American Stock Exchange in New York Tuesday. The characters were promoting May as Monopoly Month at McDonalds, where customers can win 50 million prizes, including two $1 million awards by playing McDonald's version of the Parker Brothers game. This year marks the 60th anniversary of the Monopoly game and the 40th anniversary of McDonalds.

New home sales make effort at recovery

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New-home sales rose 3 percent in March but could not recover from February's 12.5 percent plunge as high borrowing costs plagued the housing market.

The Commerce Department report Tuesday was the latest evidence Federal Reserve interest-rate increases have been successful in slowing the economy to avoid any surge in inflation.

Just a day earlier, automakers reported sales of cars and light trucks dropped sharply in April from a year ago.

"Despite some mixed data during the past week, on balance signs point to a weaker second quarter than first quarter," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch & Co.

"The economy has made a necessary downshift toward cruising speed," agreed Assistant Secretary Alicia Munnell, speaking to the Treasury Department's Borrowing Advisory Committee.

The government reported earlier the gross domestic product advanced at a 2.8 percent annual rate from January through March, much slower than the 5.1 percent rate posted during the final three months of 1994.

The GDP is the total output of goods and services produced in the United States and the broadest measure of the nation's economic health.

Sales of new single-family homes totaled 577,000 at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up from a revised 560,000 in February, the Commerce report said. February sales originally were estimated to have fallen 14 percent, to a 551,000 rate.

But despite the March gain and the upward revision in February, sales during the first three months of 1995 still were 15.3 percent below those of the same period a year ago.

"Overall, we're going to have a decline of over 10 percent in 1995 from 1994," said Michael Carliner, an economist with the National Association of Home Builders, which is predicting a total of 599,000 sales this year.

Texas Amigo salsa goes international

SAN ANTONIO — Last summer, Amigos Canning Co. quietly began shipping its picante sauce to grocery stores in Norway and Sweden.

Interested in expanding the company's international business, management thought Scandinavia could be a lucrative new market, but only now is its potential being fully realized.

Today, Amigos is averaging shipments of 200,000 cans a month to those two countries, bringing the total so far to more than 1 million. In September, it will begin shipping to Finland, too.

Those far-away lands might seem an unlikely market for the product sold there under the "Mexican Revolution" label, but officials at Amigos aren't questioning their good fortune from the northern exposure.

"Maybe it keeps them warm," quipped Beverly Velasco, vice-president of marketing.

To be sure, it's helped keep Amigos' sales hot. The business abroad helped push privately held Amigos' revenues close to $5.2 million at the end of 1994.

Together, the two companies employ about 70 people, and project revenues of $10 million this year.

That's a far cry from the tiny tortilla maker opened as La Vencedora Tortilla Co. in 1925.

After putting tortillas on area store shelves for four years, the next big change at the company came in 1929, when the Velascos became one of the earliest producers of tortilla chips.

After that, not much changed until 1954, when the company began to produce fresh tamales, and then added a flour-tortilla line the next year. In 1966, the company was renamed Amigos Food Co.

Its progression hasn't always been so smooth.

In 1989, the company lost almost $500,000 on sales of $2.13 million.

Concerned, management brought in a national sales manager, Bob Henderson, who Velasco credits with bringing a new sophistication to the company's appeals to markets in outer realms.

By the end of 1995, Amigos' international business, which includes Canada, could account for about 10 percent of revenues. Potential markets now include countries in the former Soviet Union and parts of Europe.

Amigos first international contract came from Germany in 1982, but it currently is not shipping product there or to Mexico, or Saudi Arabia, where it shipped products to U.S. soldiers during the Persian Gulf War.

Velasco and his management team's plans for the next five years are to continue growing the business steadily. And that includes domestic business.

The company currently is packaging its products under the Food Lion name, for the sizable Salisbury, N.C. supermarket chain, and recently got a contract to develop its Mexican-food products for H-E-B, the San Antonio-based grocery giant with 227 stores in Texas.

The products for H-E-B will be sold under the chain's Hill Country Fare label.

"With everything that's going on, we might need to expand our facilities," said Velasco, whose two plants together occupy about 40,000 square feet. The older of the two facilities is at 206 Wilmot St. The newer one is at 224 Wilmot St.

"We could upgrade them and make them more efficient in the next few years," he said.

Although it has resisted buyout offers so far, the company that has financed its growth via a credit line at Groos National Bank and three Small Business Administration loans, will remain a family operation for now.

"Our first SBA loan came from Lyndon Baines Johnson," Beverly Velasco said. "We got another, for about $800,000, last fall and we're doing just fine."

So it will stay that way for now.

"We're in such a good growth position that we have to continue up that incline before we would consider selling," she said, "Unless someone offers us $1.2 billion like they did Pace."

In January, Camden, N.J.-based Pace Foods Ltd. acquired Pace Foods Ltd., a picante sauce maker, for that amount.

Still, Mike Harris, president of the San Antonio Manufacturers Association, said family-owned companies comprise much of the manufacturing employment sector in the city.

HOME: Sales show slight improvement

(From 1C)

Still, Carliner noted that mortgage rates have begun to fall recently and said, "by summer, we'll start to see some of the effects of lower mortgage rates ... but we don't expect to see a real rebound."

Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.45 percent in March, down from 9.15 percent in January and the lowest since 8.43 percent last June, according to surveys by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The monthly payment on a $100,000 mortgage with an 8.5 percent rate is $769, while the payment on the same loan at 9 percent is $805, a difference of $36.

A seasonally adjusted estimate of 349,000 new houses remained for sale in March, the most since 350,000 in July 1990. The backlog represented a supply of 7.3 months at the current sales rate, down slightly from 7.5 months in February.

Analysts have attributed a three-month string of declining housing starts to the inventory pileup.

Albert Costello named new W.R. Grace president

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Former American Cyanamid Co. chairman Albert Costello was named Monday to lead W.R. Grace & Co., the troubled chemical and health care company.

Grace has been in upheaval since chief executive officer J.P. Bolduc was ousted over sexual harassment allegations and J. Peter Grace Jr. was forced out as chairman. He died a month later at 81.

Costello was chosen to become president and chief executive officer by a committee of five outside directors. The company said he also will be elected chairman at a board meeting following Grace's May 10 annual meeting.

Grace stock fell $1.375 to $52.25 a share in late trading.

Thomas Holmes, chairman of the selection committee, called Costello "the right person to lead the continued global growth" of Grace.

A chemist by training, Costello, 59, left American Cyanamid Co. in December after 37 years when the health care and farm chemical company was taken over by American Home Products Corp. for $9.6 billion.

After taking charge at American Cyanamid in April 1993, Costello cut costs and shed unprofitable divisions to transform the company from a slow-growing chemical concern to one more rooted in pharmaceuticals.

Costello was in the company's New York office for the announcement and will fly to the corporate headquarters in Boca Raton to meet Tuesday with the management team.

He said Grace's existing businesses have "a tremendous potential" for growth.

WAC heads to Vegas

LAS VEGAS — A $1 million guarantee was enough to convince Western Athletic Conference athletic directors to have Las Vegas host the conference's postseason basketball tournaments beginning in 1997.

Las Vegas tourism officials promised to pay the conference $1 million a year for the two-year contract for the men's and women's tournaments, with the city holding an option for 1999.

The agreement, which still must be approved by the WAC Presidents Council, was approved Monday by WAC athletic directors meeting in San Diego.

WAC Commissioner Karl Benson said the package offered by Las Vegas Events, a promotional arm of the city's tourism agency, was hard to resist.

"The financial potential that exists was a key, no question," Benson said. "It can make the WAC basketball tournament the most successful in history."

Las Vegas has hosted the Big West Conference basketball tournaments the last two years.

But, with UNLV leaving the Big West to join the expanded 16-team WAC next year, the city decided to go after the WAC tournament.

Other sites which made bids for the tournaments were Albuquerque, Dallas and Denver.

DiEdwardo said Las Vegas bid on the tournament because it markets itself to areas represented by the different schools. The city is within a day's drive of seven of the WAC's 16 schools.

Las Vegas also bid $1 million a year to host the WAC football championship, but athletic directors made no decision on that event.

Captains cast anchor

SHREVEPORT, La. — The Shreveport Captains are for sale again after a deal with two Austin, businessmen has fallen through.

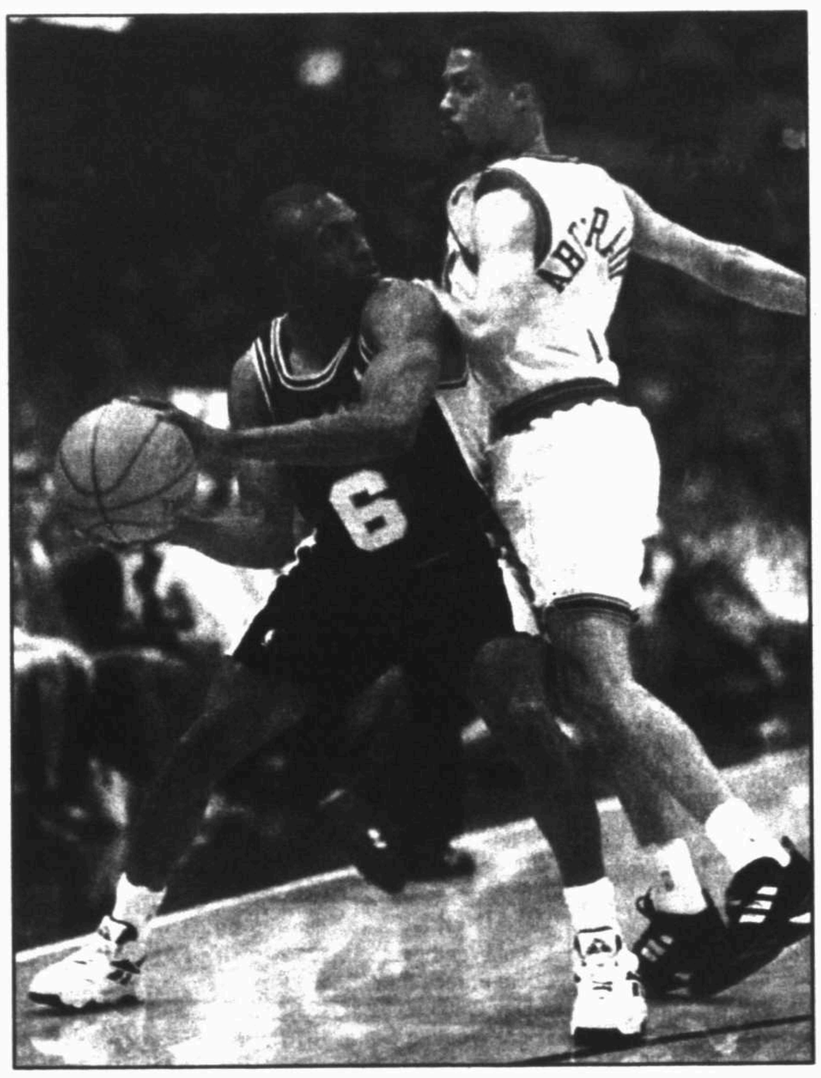

Captains president Taylor Moore said Monday he has not talked to anyone else about buying the Texas League team.

Moore reached a buy-sell agreement with Austin real estate developer Bill Pohl and his partner, Ray Culp, last December. Pohl and Cope, along with four other investors, agreed to buy the team for $4.3 million.

But the deal was put on hold this spring when the Triple-A Phoenix Firebirds decided to move to Austin after Phoenix was awarded a major league franchise.

Spurs make clean sweep of Nuggets

By Aaron J. Lopez
Associated Press Writer

DENVER — In a game marred by flagrant and technical fouls, Sean Elliott hit a driving layup with 33 seconds left Tuesday as the San Antonio Spurs beat the Denver Nuggets 99-95 to complete a three-game sweep in the best-of-5 playoff series.

San Antonio, which overcame a ferocious fourth-quarter Denver comeback, advanced to the second round of the NBA playoffs, where they will meet the winner of the Seattle-Los Angeles Lakers series.

After Elliott's basket, Denver's Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf missed a desperate 20-foot shot, and the Nuggets fouled Avery Johnson, who hit one of two free throws with 9.9 seconds left. Denver got the rebound, but Reggie Williams passed up a 3-point shot with the Spurs leading 96-93 in favor of a Dikembe Mutombo dunk.

Trailing by one, Denver fouled Elliott, who hit 14 of 16 free throws, with 2.7 seconds left. Elliott made the first free throw and iced the game when he rebounded his own miss on the second shot.

David Robinson and Johnson scored 24 points each to lead the Spurs, who beat Denver for the seventh straight time this season. Elliott finished with 18 points.

Bryant Stith and Rodney Rogers scored 18 points each to lead five Nuggets in double figures.

The Spurs, who blew out Denver in the first two games of the series, seemed to be on their way to another easy win, leading 83-71 at the end of the third quarter. But the Nuggets battled back and finally tied the game on Dale Ellis' 3-pointer with 37.1 seconds left.

In addition to seven technical fouls and 63 total fouls, Denver coach Bernie Bickerstaff was ejected in the second quarter, prompting fans to throw objects onto the court.

San Antonio coach Bob Hill was hit in the head the debris but was not injured, and the Spurs stayed calm and held the Nuggets at bay down the stretch.

Bickerstaff was ejected shortly before halftime by referee Joey Crawford. The ejection followed a technical foul on Denver forward Brian Williams with 1:32 left in the second quarter.

Ellis drew a fourth technical after Bickerstaff's ejection and Elliott hit four straight free throws — the last one with cups, paper and other objects falling at his feet.

Pacers quell Hawks, sweep series

By Ed Shearer

ATLANTA — Reggie Miller scored 32 points Tuesday night as the Indiana Pacers advanced to the second round of the NBA playoffs with a 105-89 victory over the Atlanta Hawks, sweeping their first-round opponent for the second straight year.

Last season, the Pacers swept Orlando in the best-of-5 series, then beat the Hawks 4-2 in the conference semifinals. In the second round, Indiana will met the winner of the New York-Cleveland series, which the Knicks lead 2-1.

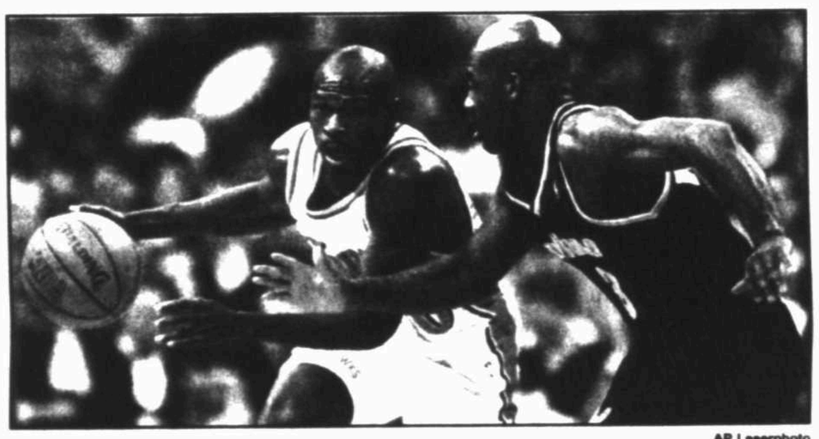

Miller scored 12 of his points in a decisive 26-5 second-half run.

Former Midland College standout Mookie Blaylock led the Hawks with 20 points.

Atlanta took a 67-63 lead on Stacey Augmon's free throw with 5:46 left in the third quarter, but the Pacers took control at that point. Mark Jackson, who had 19 points, hit a driving layup, and Antonio Davis followed with two free throws to tie it at 67.

Andrew Lang's two free throws put the Hawks back in front with 4:49 to play, but Rik Smits scored on a dunk off Miller's feed and Miller quickly followed with a 3-point basket and a three-point play to give Indiana a 75-69 lead.

Indiana kept up the pressure, leading 85-72 after three quarters and getting the first two baskets of the final quarter for a 17-point advantage. The Pacers' bigest lead was 93-74 with 9:15 left.

Mariners explode by Rangers

■ Seattle breaks open 2-2 game in eighth inning for seventh straight win at 'Ballpark.'

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Tino Martinez's two-run single triggered a 13-run barrage in the final two innings as the Seattle Mariners beat the Texas Rangers 15-3 Tuesday night.

Martinez's hit with the bases loaded broke a 2-2 tie as the Mariners beat the Rangers for the seventh straight time at The Ballpark. A crowd of 17,983, the smallest at The Ballpark in Arlington since it opened in 1994, saw Seattle beat the Rangers for the 13th time in its last 14 games.

■ Baseball Roundup/5D

Jay Buhner and Joey Cora each drove in three runs. Ken Griffey Jr. went 1-for-2 with four walks, including three in the last two innings.

Seattle loaded the bases with one out in the eighth against Wilson Heredia (0-1) on Cora's leadoff double, an intentional walk to Griffey, Buhner's sacrifice bunt and an intentional walk to Edgar Martinez.

Tino Martinez's single off Darren Oliver made it 4-2, and Alex Diaz followed with an RBI single. Pinch-hitter Rich Amaral added a two-run single, Cora had an RBI single and Buhner contributed a two-run single.

Mariners starter Randy Johnson pitched six innings of four-hit ball, striking out eight with three walks. Johnson, who has won four straight over the Rangers and is 8-3 career against Texas, left with a 2-1 lead.

Seattle scored five runs in the top of the ninth on two-run singles by Cora and Doug Strange, and an RBI by Buhner.

Missions set mark in miscues, Angels win

■ San Antonio commits eight errors as Midland pulls to within two games of the Missions for the Western Division lead.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

San Antonio put on another exciting, record-setting performance Tuesday in a 10-8 loss to Midland. But it wasn't the kind of excitement the team was looking for. And the Missions could have easily done without the record setting either.

San Antonio began its five-game set with Midland (13-13) coming off a team record seven errors in Monday's 6-4 loss to Wichita. The Missions got the bumble bug again Tuesday, breaking the short-lived mark with eight miscues against the Angels. The errors helped Midland overcome an early 5-0 deficit and win for the seventh time in 11 games.

The game deteriorated to the point where every fly ball the Angels hit was an adventure. The climax came in the sixth when the Angels, trailing 7-6, scored three runs on a single by Jovino Carvajal that got past Mission centerfielder Dwight Maness for a three-base error to put Midland up 9-6.

In all, San Antonio had only one more put out — nine — than errors. Leading the way was the Mission outfield with Maness committing two fielding goofs and right fielder Tito Landrum booting two balls. The upside for San Antonio, if there is one, is that they have collected 15 errors in the last two games and lost both by only two runs.

The Missions (15-11) stay in first place in the Texas League Western Division even with he loss as second-place El Paso fell to Wichita 9-5.

San Antonio got three runs in the first inning with RBIs by James Martin, Landrum and Dan Melendez. And by one and 1/3 innings Angel starter John Snyder had walked a batter, thrown a wild pitch, committed an error and hit a batter. But the Angels came back with three runs in the fourth inning and got a total of six in the sixth.

Mission starter Eric Weaver had handled the Angels for the first three frames, shutting them out on two hits. But the Angels broke out in the fourth with a rally that started with a single by Tim Harkrider and a Landrum error. The Missions made a total of three miscues in the inning and Midland got three hits to cut San Antonio's lead to 5-3.

In the Midland sixth the Angels came up with their six runs on six hits and two Mission errors. Bryan Harris picked up the win in relief and Mike Schooler got a save. Schooler faced only seven batters in two innings and struck out the side in the ninth.

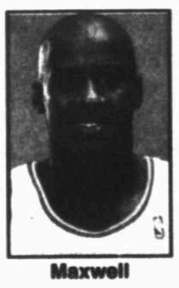

League president Tom Kayser made the trip from San Antonio to watch the Missions play. He had watched San Antonio

Rockets de-fuse 'Mad Max,' place on leave

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The ongoing feud between the Houston Rockets and disgruntled guard Vernon Maxwell came to a head Tuesday, when Maxwell was placed on indefinite leave of absence.

Maxwell

The team said Maxwell would not return to the court this season as the Rockets attempt to defend their NBA championship. Houston is tied 1-1 in its best-of-five first-round playoff series with the Utah Jazz.

"We want only the best for Vernon and we understand that this is in his best interest," Rockets vice president Bob Weinhauer said.

The team refused to elaborate on the leave of absence or say whether the guard will be paid for the rest of this season. Maxwell did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press Tuesday.

"We feel very uncomfortable about this whole situation but we're just going to let it go as it is and we'll address it at a later date," Weinhauer said.

"It's always a challenge to find a new piece to the puzzle in the middle of a playoff series like this but they played the last game with the players they had and (coach Rudy Tomjanovich's) been pretty good putting in new pieces to the puzzle not only this year but in other years."

Maxwell played only 16 minutes during Game 1 of the Jazz series last week, and later argued with Tomjanovich.

He complained of a hamstring pull Friday and was sent back to Houston for treatment Saturday, just before the Rockets' 140-126 victory in Game 2.

Maxwell did not attend practice with the team either Monday or Tuesday, and the club said he was receiving treatment for the hamstring.

There has been widespread speculation, however, that Maxwell's injury was not severe enough to keep him away from practice. The Rockets have declined comment on Maxwell's health.

Maxwell has had troubles both on and off the court since punching a fan in Portland in February. The NBA suspended him for 10 games, and before he returned, the Rockets traded forward Otis Thorpe to the Trailblazers for guard Clyde Drexler.

Then last month, Maxwell was diagnosed with iron-deficiency anemia on the same day as teammate Hakeem Olajuwon. Both players missed eight games.

About that time, Maxwell began to express his displeasure about losing his starting job to Drexler.

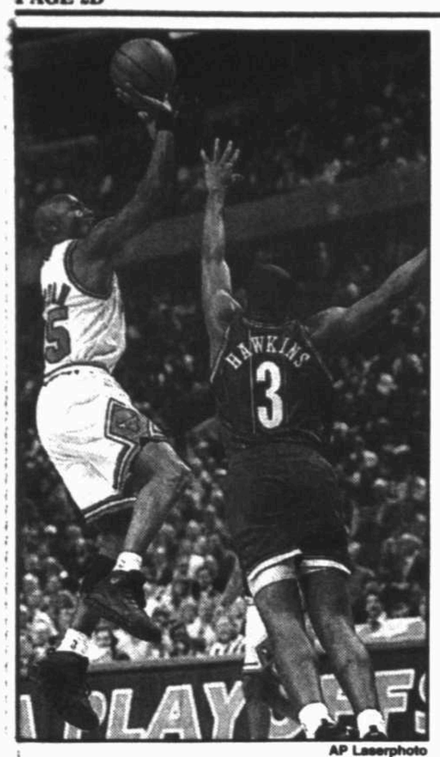

"In the back of my mind, I was frustrated," Maxwell told the AP last month. "But I don't want to cause any more turmoil at this time. I just want to finish up the season and then just get out of here."

Houston will be forced to continue through the playoffs with only 11 players on its roster. NBA rules prohibit roster moves after postseason play begins.

"Whenever you lose a player in your rotation, it's a loss, definitely," Tomjanovich said. "The way the season's been going we're conditioned for things like this. I'm sort of numbed by all the things that have happened over the year."

Tomjanovich said Mario Elie was likely to get more playing time in Maxwell's off-guard spot beginning with Wednesday night's game against the Jazz at The Summit. Forward Carl Herrera is also due back Wednesday from a shoulder injury, which frees Elie to play more in the backcourt.

Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan goes up for two of his 25 points over Charlotte's Hersey Hawkins during Tuesday's Eastern Conference first round game at the United Center in Chicago.

Bulls flex board muscle, take 2-1 series lead over Hornets

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan was everywhere — swishing 3-pointers, energizing the crowd with soaring slams, defending 5-foot-3 Muggsy Bogues on the perimeter and double teaming 6-10 Alonzo Mourning under the basket.

With Mourning not a factor, the Chicago Bulls attacked the boards, negated the Charlotte Hornets' only real matchup advantage and took a 2-1 lead in the first-round playoff series.

Jordan scored 25 points, including 13 during a 19-4 run that spanned the end of the second quarter and start of the third, as Chicago won 103-80 Tuesday night.

"This is one game, and that's all you can say. Momentum has to be built next game," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "But one thing we do know is that we're now in the driver's seat in this series."

Chicago, 14-1 at home against Charlotte since the Hornets entered the NBA in 1988, can wrap up the series Thursday night at the United Center.

Mourning, dominating in Game 2 with 23 points and 20 rebounds, was missing in action most of Game 3. He had two points and one rebound in the first half and finished with 13 and seven. When he did get in position to score, the Bulls committed hard fouls or tore the ball from his grasp. He committed six of Charlotte's 22 turnovers.

"They made the adjustments," Charlotte coach Allan Bristow said. "They put Michael ... on Muggsy and double-teamed off that. It gave us problems in the post and we could not get offense out of our big men."

■ Eastern Conference

Jordan said guarding Bogues "was one of those suggestions I came up with at practice. I thought it would give us a little more rebounding and let us help out on (Mourning). We were trying to get to him before he made his move, just keep a hand on him, steal the ball, knock the ball down, just not let him get any rhythm."

Rather than crediting the Bulls' defense, Mourning criticized the officiating of Terry Durham, Steve Javie and Mike Mathis.

"Any time you are away from home and things aren't going well for you and you are working as hard as you can and calls are against you, you're fighting a losing battle," said Mourning, who missed seven of his nine shots. "It's frustrating playing against not just five but eight guys."

Outrebounded 45-34 in Sunday's 106-89 loss, the Bulls had a 38-26 advantage Tuesday to hand Charlotte its worst playoff loss in franchise history. They pulled down 13 offensive rebounds to Charlotte's eight, helping them shoot 58 percent.

NBA stars must live up to big names in big playoff games

By Ron Rapoport
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — I wonder if there has ever been an opening round of the NBA playoffs quite like this one.

An opening round with more great players and more suspect teams, I mean.

Take a look with me and let's decide which teams currently in the playoffs have absolutely no chance to win the championship.

Is it out of the question that Cleveland could win? It is not. Indiana? A good longshot pick. Houston? I don't care what the Rockets' regular-season record was, they are still the defending champions and they still have Hakeem Olajuwon.

Orlando? San Antonio? Phoenix? Utah? Chicago? The Knicks? Are you certain they have no chance to be there at the end? I'm not. And before they started struggling against the Lakers, would you have bet the farm against the Sonics? I wouldn't have. Forget about the NFL, it's the NBA where parity has surfaced with a vengeance.

What's so interesting about this phenomenon is that you would think it indicates a rampant case of mediocrity throughout the NBA. It wasn't that long ago, remember, that in any given year just a few teams made up the class of the league and everybody knew which ones they were.

Lakers and Celtics. Pistons and Bulls. Year after year. Hey, this is easy.

But mediocrity, at least on an individual level, has nothing to do with what's going on in the NBA these days. Never, in fact, have there been more great players throughout the league and never — this is the important point — have there been more players hungry to cap their careers with their first NBA title.

David Robinson? You don't think he wants to wear a championship ring, do you? Charles Barkley? Nah, he doesn't care.

I like San Antonio to win the whole thing, by the way. Beating Indiana in the Finals.

Bulls defense slows 'Zo, Hornets

By Rick Gano
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Everywhere Alonzo Mourning turned, there was a body leaning against his, a hand swiping for the ball, a sandwich forming around his every move, someone ready to contest his every shot.

Mourning's misery Tuesday night was compounded by his own foul problems. Little went right for the Charlotte center, who managed just 13 points on 2-for-9 shooting and seven rebounds in the Hornets' 103-80 loss to the Chicago Bulls.

"They started double-teaming all over the floor," Mourning said. "I thought there were a lot of illegal defenses that should have been called, could have been argued.

"They played good defense. We broke down offensively and didn't react the way we should have."

Mourning entered the game averaging 27.5 points and 16.5 rebounds in the first two games, including a 23-point, 20-rebound performance in Sunday's Game 2 when the Hornets evened the series with some physical inside play.

But this time, the Bulls were ready and took a 2-1 series lead.

The Bull started Luc Longley, four inches taller than the 6-foot-10 Mourning, at center, and they double- and sometimes triple-teamed Mourning. They fouled him, they forced him to take off-balance shots or zip the ball to the outside, where Charlotte's starting guards made just seven of 18 shots.

They also sent Michael Jordan out to guard 5-foot-3 Muggsy Bogues in the second quarter, making it easier to fall off and double up in the lane.

"We needed Longley to keep Mourning out of the lane, even if he got into foul trouble early," said Bulls coach Phil Jackson. "Luc did the job we asked him to do."

Mourning's frustration began to show in the closing minutes. First, he got into a jawing match with Jordan and Scottie Pippen. Later, he was called for a technical foul when he made a motion as if he was going to throw the ball at Will Perdue.

Mourning said he didn't do anything to merit a technical foul. He admitted he was getting frustrated.

"Anytime you are away from home and things aren't going well for you and you have been working as hard as you can and calls are being called against you, you are fighting a losing battle regardless of how hard you are working," he said.

State Senate tries to contain booming sports business with legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate approved a bill Tuesday that would allow state tax dollars to be used for building or renovating professional sports arenas.

The bill by Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, would allow cities to create sports authorities that would receive tax rebates to help pay for stadium projects.

West said the bill was an investment in successful businesses.

"I am convinced that the economic impact that these sports teams have is something that we need to make sure that we keep in the state of Texas," West said.

Citing 1993 statistics from the comptroller's office, West said Texas' professional sports franchises contributed about $860 million a year in revenue for the state.

Approved on a voice vote, the bill would let cities set up a sports authority that could then designate a "sports facility enterprise zone" no larger than a mile and a quarter in radius.

City sales and use taxes collected in such a zone would have to be reinvested in building, expanding or rehabilitating a stadium, arena, coliseum or speedway. In addition, 80 percent of the state sales and use taxes in the zone would be reinvested into the project.

Under the bill, city leaders would have the option of calling a voter referendum on the designation of such a zone. In Houston, a referendum would be mandatory under an amendment by Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston.

An amendment by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, would limit the number of enterprise zones to six statewide.

"This thing has got to be contained," Montford said, adding that his amendment would keep the annual cost to the state at about $33 million.

West's bill began as a local effort to keep the Dallas Mavericks basketball team from leaving the city. Other cities then decided they wanted to be included.

Amendments were passed to include Fort Worth rodeo events and minor league baseball in Austin.

Some senators expressed concern that the bill sent the wrong message.

"I have a very strong feeling that there are other priorities that should be addressed when we're talking about dealing with $35, $40 and $50 million a year," said Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, adding that he was more interested in public school and health science facilities.

West said the bill would keep businesses in the state, expand the tax base and create more money with which the state could fund other projects.

The bill had the support of all the state's professional sports teams, excluding the two major league baseball teams, which West said were not interested in the legislation.

Six professional sports franchises making up the Texas Professional Sports Association released a letter pledging to use minority-owned businesses in the projects made possible by the sports facility enterprise zones.

When asked why the state should help teams that are financially healthy improve their facilities, West answered, "That may very well be a question that has to be debated.

"What we have attempted to do is to say that we value business in the state of Texas. ... We want to do everything possible to maintain businesses in the state of Texas that are contributing to this economy."

Dodgers squander stellar effort from Nomo, 4-3

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Hideo Nomo pitched five scoreless innings of one-hit ball in his heralded debut for Los Angeles, but the Dodgers blew a three-run lead in the 15th and lost to the San Francisco Giants 4-3 Tuesday.

Nomo, the first Japanese player in the majors in three decades, struck out seven. He also walked four, including three straight in the first inning before fanning Royce Clayton.

Reggie Williams broke the scoreless tie with an RBI single in the Dodgers 15th and Eric Karros followed with a two-run double for a 3-0 lead.

But the Giants rallied against Rob Murphy when Jeff Reed walked with two outs and Darren Lewis singled. Robby Thompson met reliever Greg Hansell (0-1) with a three-run homer that tied it.

Barry Bonds followed with a single and scored when Matt Williams doubled past center fielder Reggie Williams.

Chris Hook (1-0), the eighth Giants pitcher, was the winner. Hansell was the ninth Dodgers pitcher.

Phillies 6, Reds 0

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds fell to 0-6, matching the worst start in modern franchise history, as the Philadelphia Phillies batted around in the second inning.

The Reds' only other 0-6 start this century was in 1950. They are the only winless team in the major leagues.

Curt Schilling (1-0) allowed just three singles in seven innings. The Phillies took control with four runs in the second inning off Jose Rijo (0-2). Jim Eisenreich had one of his three hits in the rally.

Shortly after the game started, fans draped a sign in left field that said: "Strike's Over, Start Playing Ball!" The crowd of about 12,331 booed louder and louder as the first five Phillies reached in the second.

Braves 7, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Greg Maddux held Florida hitless for 5 2-3 innings, and teamed with three relievers for a three-hitter to help Atlanta win.

Maddux, who missed most of spring training with the chicken pox, improved to 2-0 in two starts with a 1.69 ERA. The three-time Cy Young winner struck out four, walked two and threw 86 pitches.

Marquis Grissom's two-run single in the fifth against Mark Gardner (0-2) broke a scoreless tie. Javier Lopez later hit a bases-loaded triple.

Expos 9, Mets 6

MONTREAL — The Montreal Expos, given a rare and rousing ovation during a rough week for baseball, rewarded a sell-out crowd with a win over New York in their home opener.

In a season when attendance is down at many major league ballparks and fans have acted more like European soccer hooligans, the crowd of 46,515 stood and cheered their stripped-down team from the start of pregame introductions.

Moises Alou homered, doubled and drove in three runs and Rondell White also homered for Montreal. Mets rookie Carl Everett hit his third home run and Todd Hundley hit his second homer.

Alou, Tim Laker and Cordero each drove in two runs during a six-run third inning, chasing Jason Jacome (0-1).

Jeff Fassero (2-0) was the winner and Mel Rojas got his third save. Jason Jacome (0-1) was the loser.

Astros 5, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Craig Biggio stopped an 0-for-19 skid with his first two hits of the season, helping the Houston Astros beat Chicago.

Biggio's RBI single tied it at 2 in the seventh, and the Astros scored the go-ahead run later in the inning.

Biggio doubled in the ninth, and scored on a wild pitch by Larry Casian. Derek Bell added an RBI grounder in the ninth.

Jim Dougherty (1-0) threw one pitch and got one out for the win. Todd Jones pitched two scoreless innings for his first save. Mike Walker (0-1) was the loser.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — The Pittsburgh Pirates finished a frustrating first week with a come-from-behind win as Jeff King homered and drove in three runs against St. Louis.

The Pirates scored eight runs in their first five games, four of them losses, and were a pitiful 1-for-31 with runners in scoring position before scoring five runs in the seventh inning off Danny Jackson (0-2).

Mike Dyer (1-0) was the winner and Jim Gott got his second save.

Rockies 6, Padres 5

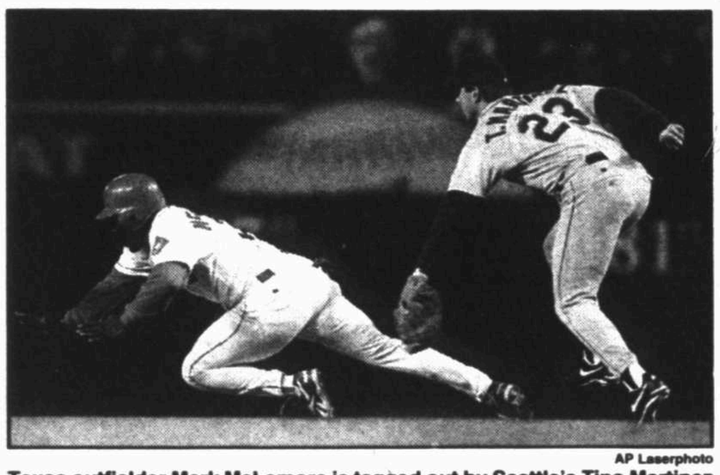

DENVER — Joe Girardi singled off pitcher Brian Williams' bare hand in the 11th inning, lifting the Colorado Rockies over San Diego.

Roberto Mejia led off the 11th with a double and was sacrificed to third by Vinny Castilla. After a walk to Walt Weiss, Girardi hit a grounder that grazed the right hand of Williams (0-1) and squirted behind the mound.

Rookie Roger Bailey (1-0) pitched a perfect 11th inning to win his first major league decision.

Andres Galarraga homered and drove in four runs for the Rockies. Brad Ausmus had three RBIs for the Padres before a crowd of 38,387.

Jays rally from five runs down to win, 9-8

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Roberto Alomar led off the ninth inning with his first home run of the season as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied from a five-run deficit for a 9-8 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Tuesday night.

After the Blue Jays scored three runs in the eighth to tie, Alomar homered on a 1-1 pitch off reliever Isidro Marquez (0-1).

Midlander Mike Timlin (1-0) pitched two shutout innings for the win.

With Kirk McCaskill pitching in the eighth, pinch-hitter Mike Huff led off with a single, and one out later, pinch-hitter Lance Parrish drew a walk.

Devon White then hit an RBI single, and with two outs, Paul Molitor and Joe Carter hit back-to-back RBI singles to make it 8-8.

The White Sox scored four unearned runs in the first inning on two errors by rookie shortstop Alex Gonzalez.

Ray Durham led off with a single, went to second on a fielder's choice and, one out later, Chris Sabo and Robin Ventura walked to load the bases.

Mike Devereaux then hit a grounder that Gonzalez bobbled, allowing one run to score and leaving the bases loaded for Lance Johnson.

Johnson hit another grounder to Gonzalez, who bobbled it and threw past first baseman John Olerud, bringing home three more runs.

Shawn Green and Randy Knorr hit RBI singles in the second inning to trim Chicago's lead to 4-2.

In the fifth, Frank Thomas led off with a walk, went to third on Chris Sabo's double and both scored on Ventura's double. Craig Grebeck added an RBI single two outs later.

In the bottom half, Alomar hit a two-run single and Green followed with a run-scoring grounder after Gonzalez and Carter reached base on two errors by Durham at second base.

Tim Raines added an RBI single in the seventh to make it 8-5.

Chicago starter Alex Fernandez gave up five runs — only two earned — in five innings while walking two and striking out four.

Red Sox 8, Yankees 0

NEW YORK — John Valentin and Mo Vaughn hit grand slams an inning apart, and Boston starter Vaughn Eshelman won his major-league debut for Boston.

The Red Sox tied a major-league record, accomplished 41 previous times, with the two grand slams in the same game. It was the seventh time it was done by the Red Sox.

Eshelman (1-0), who spent last season with Class AA Bowie, allowed three hits in six innings.

■ AL Roundup

Sterling Hitchcock (0-1) allowed Valentin's homer in the third, and Vaughn hit his grand slam off Brian Boehringer in the fourth.

Royals 4, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Before the smallest Metrodome crowd in nine seasons, Pat Borders hit his first home run with Kansas City.

Though Tuesday's game before 8,862 was the fifth in Minnesota this season, it was the first time fans were charged full price for tickets. In the Twins' four-game series with Baltimore last weekend, Minnesota cut ticket prices in half and drew an average of 21,996.

Phil Hiatt and Gary Gaetti also homered for Kansas City, and Mark Gubicza (1-0) allowed one run in six innings.

Indians 11, Tigers 1

DETROIT — Cleveland hit four home runs in a victory, but the crowd at Tiger Stadium was the talk of the day as objects were thrown and fans repeatedly ran on the field.

At least 20 fans were taken off the field by security. The crowd, announced at 39,398 but probably about 5,000 less, was the smallest for a Tigers' home opener since 1972.

Before the game, fans threw magnetized schedules onto the field. They then delayed the action with a barrage of beach balls and toilet paper. Indians center fielder Kenny Lofton complained in the fifth after a what appeared to be a golf ball was thrown.

Jim Thome had a three-run shot in the first and Manny Ramirez, Paul Sorrento and Carlos Baerga also homered. Dennis Martinez (2-0) gave up one run and seven hits in seven innings.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The work pace quickens. Count on the summer months being especially busy. As business accelerates, so will your socializing. Overseas travel holds strong appeal in early fall. Review the benefits accruing from your job; it may be possible to obtain additional perks. A chance meeting early in 1996 could lead to a happy romantic connection. Follow your heart.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Godfather of Soul James Brown, basketball player Jeff Hornacek, magician Doug Henning, actress Betty Comden.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A sudden change in plans or a missed connection could cause dismay. Keep your temper in check; issuing an ultimatum could backfire. Financial transactions require careful attention to detail.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep an eagle eye on investments. Mistakes can occur. A word dropped in the right place will open important doors. You and a relative may discuss going into business together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not let a conservative streak keep you from looking at innovative ideas. A new approach could improve the quality of your work. Your love life is on the upswing. Look ahead with pleasure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are now entering a period of increased activity and energy. A career change is likely to be discussed in the days ahead. Creative self-expression revitalizes your sense of purpose. Promote intellectual pastimes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new enterprise can be launched today. Be prepared to travel. Joining a special group could bring you financial or psychological benefits. Do not underestimate the value of teamwork. A pilot project will succeed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your social contacts could help you land a loan or business contract. Show your appreciation in a tangible way. Be cautious when making long-term agreements. Romance on the rebound could be short-lived.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain expectations may be unrealistic. Avoid making promises you cannot keep. Do not sacrifice security just to be "nice." Conservative investments help you prosper in business. Entertaining at home tonight will save you money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Adopting a more flexible approach will help you make swifter progress at work. Listen to what co-workers have to say. Humor and understanding will go a long way towards patching up a squabble.

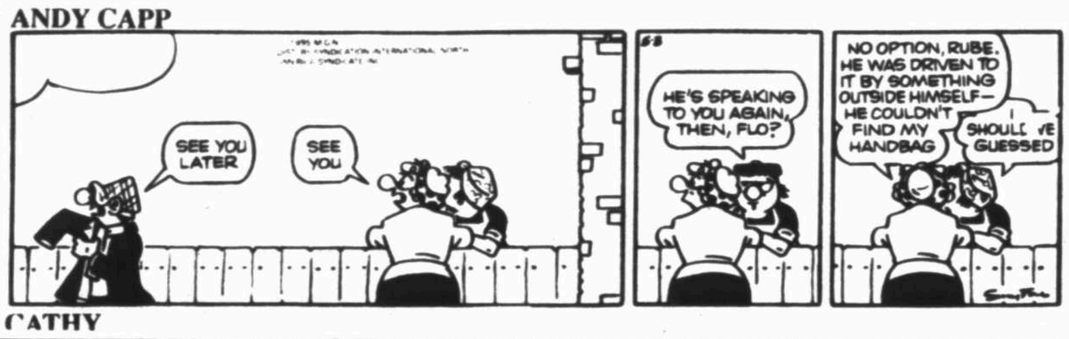

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spend time alone with a loved one who has felt neglected lately. Comparison shopping helps you save money when purchasing a major appliance. Dress simply but elegantly if going out tonight. Steer clear of gossips.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Life seems full of promise. Reward someone's efforts to please you. If in love, make your honorable intentions known. Discussions about religion or politics are best avoided this evening. Emphasize shared interests and values.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go ahead with a business project and other gainful pursuits that will boost your income. Those who pass out the benefits are open-handed. Emphasize serenity on the home front. A mellow approach works wonders.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Quickly scale the ladder of success when the going is smooth, but pause when it is not. Check occasionally to see what the competition is doing. Let your optimistic side show when promoting a project.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

The key to success on many hands is entries. If you have the means to move from one hand to another, you can often choose how you want to establish your tricks. So before embarking on a line, be sure you have access to both hands to collect your tricks.

We like North's decision to jump to three no trump on the second round of the auction. The hand was surely the equivalent of an opening bid, the king of spades fortified partner's control of that suit and the hearts were a source of tricks. There was no point to pussy-footing around.

West's lead of the jack of spades was most effective — it removed one of dummy's entries at the opening gun. A careless declarer might lead the king of hearts at trick two. As long as East holds up the ace one round, that would limit declarer to two heart tricks, and eight overall, as the cards lie. Try it.

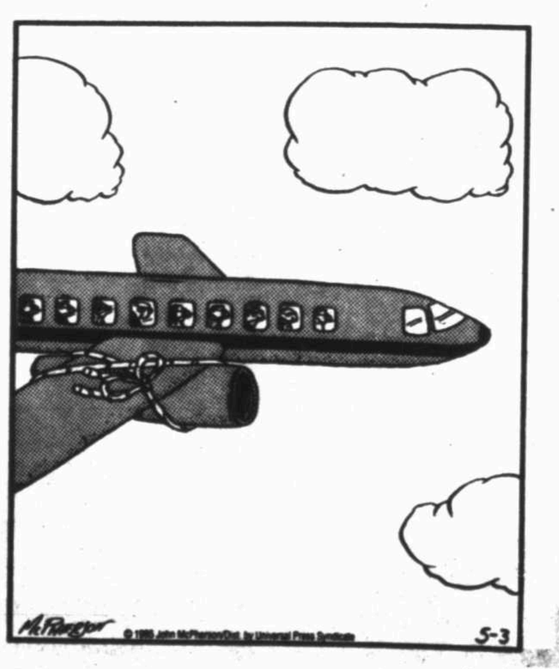

Fortunately, declarer knew that the percentages favored a 4-2 heart split, in which case two entries would be needed to set up and cash a long heart. There was a simple way to accomplish that. At trick two declarer led a low heart from the table!

East won that trick cheaply with the nine and reverted to spades. Declarer's ace won, and declarer still had a heart to lead to the king and force out the ace. When declarer regained the lead, a diamond to the king was the entry to cash dummy's hearts. In all, declarer scored three spades, three hearts, two diamonds and a club.

Actor, kickboxer Sasha Mitchell faces charges of beating his pregnant wife

VENTURA, Calif. — Sasha Mitchell, who plays spacey Cody on ABC's "Step by Step," faces trial next month on charges that he beat his pregnant wife.

Mitchell, 27, pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge Friday and a trial was scheduled for June 7. If convicted, he faces up to a year in jail.

Jeanette Denise Mitchell, married to the actor and kickboxer for five years, told police she was two months pregnant with the couple's fourth child when her husband slapped her and kicked her in their Westlake Village home April 21.

When deputies asked Mitchell if he slapped his wife, sheriff's reports said the actor responded: "I slapped her hard across the back of the head."

Ms. Mitchell told sheriff's deputies her husband has repeatedly beaten her and her eardrum ruptured three years ago.

Mitchell's attorney, David Dudley, said the actor has never struck or kicked his wife.

"We just deny completely these allegations," Dudley said.

NEW YORK — Yoko Ono invoked the words of her late husband as she donated $100,000 Tuesday to an AIDS research group.

Yoko donates $100,000 to an AIDS research group.

"AIDS has affected all of our lives and it's time for us to work together, pray together and come together," the widow of John Lennon said, borrowing the title of a Beatles song.

The donation coincided with the release of Ono's "New York Rock," the soundtrack to her off-Broadway play last year, and a video Peter Bogdonavich directed of the album's ballad "Never Say Goodbye."

The money given to the American Foundation for AIDS Research comes from Ono's record company, Capitol Records, and its parent company, EMI Records. Ono said her royalties from the album will also go to AmFAR.

TORONTO — Comedy writer Marjorie Gross is determined to keep an upbeat attitude as she fights ovarian cancer. Her new job writing for "Seinfeld" is just what the doctor ordered.

"Stress is the killer and I have to avoid it. ... The people on this show have been the best I've ever worked for," said Gross, who learned in January that her cancer had returned.

"I know that sounds like sucking up but it's not. It definitely comes from the top down. Jerry and Larry David (the show's executive producer) don't like stress or conflict and they've created an atmosphere where the writers can work at their best," Gross said.

Gross, first treated in 1993, is undergoing chemotherapy for a second time and shaved her head as a pre-emptive strike against hair loss.

"I have a good-looking head," she said.

LOS ANGELES — Maybe something was lost in the translation.

Kevin Kline said he got a rude surprise when he met his "French Kiss" co-star, Meg Ryan.

Kevin Kline got rude surprise when he met Meg Ryan.

"I'd seen her work and I thought she was nice and pleasant and attractive," he told "Entertainment Tonight" in an interview for broadcast Tuesday.

He added, with a laugh: "Then, I met her at the first rehearsal without make-up. And you know, she was a shrew and kind of a dog!"

"French Kiss" opens nationwide Friday.

LONDON — Who by fire, who by water, who by helicopter?

Such contemplations forced Kirk Douglas closer to his Jewish faith four years ago after he survived a helicopter crash and two others didn't.

"That helicopter crash brought to the surface what had been under the surface for all those years," Douglas said Monday at a London fund-raiser for the Jewish National Fund, Britain's Press Association reported Tuesday.

"Who shall survive a helicopter crash, as I did, and who shall be killed?" said the star of "Spartacus" and "Lust For Life."

Douglas said that his only connection to Judaism for years had been to fast on Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, and to remember its central prayer, beginning "Who by fire," a contemplation of those who will be written into the book of life and those who won't.

Krone hopes to ride to racing throne

■ Julie Krone has overcome injuries, male dominated sport to brink of horse racing history.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The 16-year-old hotwalker was perched on a barn roof along the Churchill Downs backstretch when the field thundered by.

It was Julie Krone's first job at a racetrack and her first Kentucky Derby. The year was 1979.

"I saw a lot of that race," Krone said. "I thought, 'Boy, I'd like to ride for a trainer like that some day.'"

The trainer was Bud Delp, who won the '79 Derby with Spectacular Bid.

After she became a jockey, Krone rode for Delp, and she's ridden for many other top trainers. On Saturday, she'll ride Suave Prospect for Nick Zito in the Kentucky Derby.

"I guess Nick knows how to get a horse ready for the Derby," Krone said after working Suave Prospect last weekend. "He gives me real confidence. I can't think of anybody better to go to the Derby with than Nick Zito."

Zito will be trying to win his third Derby in five years. He's won with Strike the Gold in 1991 and with Go For Gin last year.

The 31-year-old Krone, who went back to New York on Monday and is scheduled to return to Louisville on Thursday night, is excited about her second Derby.

One reason is that Suave Prospect, runner-up in both the Florida Derby and Blue Grass Stakes, is considered a legitimate contender. Krone became only the fourth woman to ride in the Derby when she finished 14th in 1992 on Ecstatic Ride, a member of the seven-horse mutuel field.

Another reason for Krone's excitement is that it's "the Kentucky Derby," she said. "It's like chocolate frosting, or something. Everybody likes it. If you love horses, you love the Derby."

Krone, who grew up loving horses on a Michigan farm, likes to say,

■ Kentucky Derby

"I'm just a jockey."

Should Suave Prospect win, Krone would be looked upon as more than just a jockey.

She would be, as ABC sportscaster Jim McKay said in a Derby preview last Saturday, "the first human female to win the Derby."

"That's cute," Krone said when told of McKay's comment.

Krone already is the first woman to ride a winner of a Triple Crown race — Colonial Affair in the 1993 Belmont Stakes.

Krone is a first-class professional jockey, tough enough to overcome prejudice in the male-dominated world of racing and bounce back from injuries that threatened to end her career. She is steel.

Since riding in her first race on Tiny Star on Jan. 30, 1981, at Tampa Bay Downs, the 4-foot-10 1/2 Krone has won more than 2,800 races and her mounts have earned more than $58 million. She twice rode six winners on a single card and has won meet titles at such major tracks as Belmont Park, Gulfstream Park, the Meadowlands and Saratoga.

It was at the Meadowlands and at Saratoga that Krone's career almost ended because of severe injuries.

Krone

She broke her left arm in a spill Nov. 24, 1989 at the Meadowlands. The injury required a plate and seven screws.

Then on Aug. 30, 1993, she was thrown, had her chest stepped on in a three-horse mishap at Saratoga. She shattered her right ankle, punctured the inside of her left elbow and suffered a cardiac contusion.

On May 26, 1994, she returned to racing at Belmont Park.

Earlier this year, Krone broke a finger in a spill at Gulfstream.

When she returned eight weeks later to ride In Her Glory, she was cheered by the crowd during the post parade.

"One of the most amazing things and one of the most emotionally touching things is when the fans cheer for you in the post parade," Krone said at the time. "It makes me get all choked up, and I feel very special."

Imagine how the fans would react and how Krone would feel if Suave Prospect were to win the Kentucky Derby.

Texas swagger amuses Tubbs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Former Oklahoma basketball coach Billy Tubbs, who now heads the Texas Christian program, is having a good time with what he sees in the early development of the Big 12 Conference.

The Big 12 is the approaching union of Big Eight Conference schools and four former Southwest Conference members. The conference is to begin play in football and basketball during the 1996-97 school year.

"I think the whole thing is kind of interesting," said Tubbs, who was featured speaker Monday at Creighton University's annual athletic fund-raiser. "The Texas schools think they're going to totally dominate the league.

"I always wanted the Big Eight Conference (headquarters) to move out of Kansas City. The Texas schools just know that the Big Eight basketball tournament will be in Dallas. So will the football game. I don't think so, but I'm just going to sit back and laugh and watch them. Gosh, Nebraska will even have to play some out-of-town games now, won't they?"

Actually, Tubbs said, the Big 12 will be good for basketball in Texas.

"With all the schools in Texas either going to the Big 12 or the Western Athletic Conference, we're going to be able to keep a lot of the good players in the state who had been leaving," he said. "It's really different, but I think we have a chance to really do well. It's a great area to recruit to."

Tubbs said TCU signed two of the top four players in Texas this year.

"I think the new league helped us this year," said Tubbs, whose school will join the WAC in 1996-97. "We'll be recruiting against the Big 12 schools some, but I don't see us having a real problem there. For one thing, we won't be playing many of their teams."

Tubbs's first TCU team was 16-11 and finished tied for third in the Southwest Conference. The Horned Frogs were 7-20 in 1993-94, leading to Moe Iba's departure as coach after seven seasons at TCU.

Tubbs' 14-year stay at Oklahoma produced 333 victories and four Big Eight Conference championships. But the Sooners finished fifth in the league in Tubbs' final two seasons and didn't make the NCAA tournament. After his last Oklahoma team finished 15-13, Tubbs accepted TCU's offer to replace Iba, a former Nebraska coach.

West Texas climate and sandy soil are fine for growing such basic hot sauce items as onions, tomatoes, cilantro and jalapeno peppers, as shown in this photo.

Hot or mild, you can grow your own salsa

By LoAna M. Gonzales
Associated Press

WACO — Whether you like salsa hot or not, you don't have to pick up the bottled stuff anymore.

Growing home-grown hot sauce, or salsa, ingredients is possible in many areas of Texas.

The basic ingredients for most salsa recipes are tomatoes, onions and any of a variety of peppers. Other commonly used items include cilantro, chives, garlic, celery and lemon or lime juice.

Reid Lewis, manager at the Organic Nursery in Waco, says even people with little room for a garden can grow these ingredients. "You can grow as much as you have room for," he said.

Onions should be planted now in Central Texas, while the prime time for planting tomatoes and peppers is quickly approaching, Lewis said.

Since tomatoes and peppers require warm weather and a lot of sunlight, it is best to plant these after the last frost date.

Lewis added that tomatoes should be evenly watered — never soaked and never too dry. They should also be fed once or twice with fertilizer.

Also important when growing tomatoes is to keep an eye out for bugs.

Fortunately, onions are not as picky, Lewis said. A rich soil is about all onions need to thrive.

The soil's richness is an important factor to keep in mind for any garden plant.

"The more you do to your soil, the better your plants," Lewis said, explaining the need for compost and a good fertilizer.

BUTCH TINDELL, with the Homestead Farm near Gholson, said the farm grows the ingredients for picante sauce without the use of man-made additives.

"We grow ours without the use of synthetic insecticides, fertilizers or herbicides," he said.

Tindell, a member of the Koinonia community, said the salsa made at the Homestead Farm is then sold at the Homestead Heritage Visitors Center.

"It's not on the shelf for a long time," he said of the homemade salsa. "You control your product and you know you're putting in premium products."

A variety of peppers can be used when making hot sauce. Tindell and Lewis agreed that the most popular selection for salsa

Latin-style accents such as cilantro, pepper sauce and lemon juice are combined with diced papaya and cheese for a salsa that is excellent over grilled swordfish.

Papaya-cheese salsa adds tangy taste to swordfish

Associated Press

In the following recipe, grilled swordfish steaks are served with a Mexican-style salsa. The salsa is made with diced papaya, Monterey Jack cheese, red onions and seasonings.

GRILLED SWORDFISH STEAKS WITH PAPAYA-CHEESE SALSA

FOR THE SALSA:
2 cups ½-inch diced papaya
1 cup ½-inch diced Monterey Jack cheese
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons minced red onions
1 tablespoon minced cilantro
1 teaspoon honey
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper

In medium bowl, combine papaya, cheese, lime juice, onion, cilantro, honey and cayenne pepper. Cover and allow flavors to blend.

FOR THE MARINADE:
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons olive oil
4 teaspoons minced onion
4 teaspoons chili powder
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon salt
5 drops red pepper sauce
4 swordfish steaks, ½-inch thick

In a small bowl, combine lemon juice, oil, onion, chili powder, garlic, cumin, salt and red pepper sauce.

Place swordfish in a glass baking dish or plastic bag. Add marinade, turning to coat fish. Cover; refrigerate and marinate for 2 to 3 hours or overnight.

Grill fish over medium-hot coals for 5 minutes, turn and grill for additional 2 to 3 minutes or until fish flakes easily with a fork. Serve with Papaya-Cheese Salsa. Makes 4 servings.

Enjoy Cinco de Mayo with light fare

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle Editor

Cinco de Mayo — or May 5 — is a popular holiday in Mexico and is becoming increasingly popular in the United States. The holiday commemorates the 1862 battle of Puebla de Zaragoza in which Mexican forces were victorious against overwhelming numbers of French invaders. It is celebrated in many ways, including parades and festivals with mariachi bands.

Food also is an important part of the celebration. And because the weather is getting warmer each day, many prefer a light traditional Mexican meal that could be eaten at an afternoon picnic in the park or at home. The folk at Tabasco have created three dishes with their new jalapeno sauce, a milder green pepper sauce, that could be perfect for Cinco de Mayo.

The Mango Salad uses an unusual combination of mangoes, Jicama, red pepper and red onion, with a dressing that blends the sweetness of the orange juice concentrate with the smoothness of the cream and milk with just the right zip from jalapeno sauce. The tacos are filled with a shrimp-olive mixture topped with crisp chopped cabbage in a creamy dressing.

Jalapeno Green Rice is rice that is first sauteed in oil and then cooked in chicken stock seasoned with a puree of mild poblano chile, onion, parsley and garlic. Jalapeno sauce adds color and flavor.

If you like, add a Jalapenorita or the traditional margarita with a spicy twist and toast the Cinco de Mayo holiday.

WHAT'S COOKING?

'British Night' comes to visit West Texas

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

The minute Chris Kirk speaks, you know he's not originally from around here. Born and raised in Leicester, England, Kirk lived most of his life in that area, which is about 100 miles north of London.

Then what is he doing in Midland? He's serving a one-year pastoral internship at First United Methodist Church, where he has become a favorite of the congregation.

The common language — well, most of it is similar anyway — and the United State's English roots make many people fascinated with all things British, Kirk said, and because of that interest, he and his wife, Heather, are presenting British Night at 5:30 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church. The public is invited. Call the church at 682-3701 for details.

The event, which will include quizzes, games and videos, as well as some traditional English dishes, will be in the church's Fellowship Hall.

The couple decided to host British Night "partly because there's so much interest in Midland and West Texas in the United Kingdom," Kirk said. "People here have a lot of questions about ... the British Isles. People just have a wonderful fascination for British culture, ... so we organized a night where people can literally have a taste of England."

Although when he was in school, he had spent a summer working in New Jersey, "I'd never been to Texas before" coming to be intern pastor at First United Methodist Church. "My first reaction was (to notice) how flat it was. England is very hilly."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Posing in front of England's flag, Chris Kirk of Leicester, England, is serving a one-year pastoral internship at First United Methodist Church. He will be sharing some of his country's traditional recipes and culture during "British Night" tonight at the church.

The next thing he noticed about West Texas, Kirk said, is the distance between cities and/or towns — the wide open spaces.

And of course, "the heat was a big shock. We came at the beginning of August. A heat wave in England is whne it gets into the 80s."

But more important, "I was thrilled to find how friendly Midland is."

That friendliness has led to tonight's event, which will feature an English menu of Lancashire Hot Pot, Roast Leg of Lamb and Mint Sauce, Fish and Chips, Roast Beef, Yorkshire Pudding, Toad in the Hole (sausages in batter),

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Philly Free is different, but tasty

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

Like many other people, my family is trying to reduce our intake of dietary fat. We've read all those articles about high-fat diets and what a health hazard they are, and while we aren't willing to get rid of everything high-fat (chocolate, for instance, is a dietary keeper), we are interested in cutting back.

That's why we were entirely ready to try Philadelphia Free Fat Free Cream Cheese — and the fact that the company sent a coupon in the mail was an extra added incentive.

According to company information that came with the coupon, Kraft had a noble purpose in developing the product: "In response to consumer demand for better-for-you products, Kraft Foods has introduced a new fat free cream cheese in brick form, specifically designed for cooking and baking. The product is made from skim milk.

"Philly Free Brick offers consumers the luscious creaminess of cream cheese without the fat, and contains 25 calories per one-ounce serving. The new product can be substituted for Philly Cream Cheese in recipes to lower the fat content. For example, cheesecake (YES!!!) made with the new fat free brick cream cheese has 140 calories and only 2 grams of fat per 104-gram slice (why do they give us measurements in grams? It might as well be in Klingon, as far as I'm concerned. Can't understand either one), great news for health-conscious dessert devotees!"

Also according to the company, suggested retail price for an 8-ounce brick of the fat free cream cheese is $1.29. Since they sent me a coupon, I got mine for free. No fat, no cost — what a deal!

Now I love cheesecake. Next to chocolate, it's my favorite dessert. However, in spite of all this information about how wonderful cheeseca ke made with fat-free cream cheese is, we conducted the taste-test on the product itself. And here's what we found:

Fat free cream cheese is just as smooth as regular cream cheese, and about the same texture (just a little bit goo ier). It spreads about the same but doesn't melt quite the same.

And it tastes a little different. I can't decide what the difference in flavor is, exactly — I think the fat free is a little sweeter and not quite as tart are regular cream cheese. I don't know why using skim milk would make it taste that much different, but it does. It doesn't taste bad at all — in fact, it's really tasty — but it does taste different.

Wouldn't that make a difference in the way cheesecake made with fat free cream cheese tasted? I may have to make one to find out.

(From 1E)

Chicken and Leek Pie, Cornish Pasty, and such desserts as Treacle Tart, Trifle, Jam Sponge, Shortbread and Maids of Honor (almond tarts). The recipes for a few of them follow, courtesy of Kirk:

TOAD-IN-THE-HOLE
Sausages baked in batter
Serves 4

1 cup all-purpose flour
2 eggs
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 pound small, fresh pork sausages

To make the batter in a blender, combine flour, eggs, milk, salt and few grindings of pepper in blender jar and blend at high speed for 2 to 3 seconds. Turn off the machine, scrape down the sides of the jar and blend again for 40 seconds. (To make batter by hand, beat eggs and salt with whisk or rotary or electric beater until frothy. Slowly add flour, beating constantly.) Pour in milk in thin stream and beat until mixture is smooth and creamy.

Refrigerate the batter for at least 1 hour. Preheat over to 400 degrees. Place sausages side by side in heavy 10- to 12-inch skilled, and prick each one once or twice with fork. Sprinkle sausages with 2 tablespoons of water, cover pan tightly and cook over low heat for 3 minutes. Remove cover, increase heat to moderate and continue to cook, turning the sausages frequently with tongs or spatula, until the water has completely evaporated and the sausages have begun to brown in their own fat.

Arrange sausages in single layer in baking dish about 6x10x2-inches and moisten with 2 tablespoons of drippings. Keep them at least an inch apart. Pour batter over sausages and bake in center of oven for 30 minutes or until pudding has risen over the top of the pan and is crisp and brown. Serve at once.

SHORTBREAD
Makes about 2 dozen triangles

1 pound (4 sticks) plus 1 tablespoon unsalted butter, softened
1 cup superfine sugar
5 cups all-purpose flour, sifted before measuring

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Using pastry brush, coat large baking sheet with 1 tablespoon of softened butter. Set aside.

With electric mixer, beat pound of butter and cup of sugar together at high speed until mixture is light and fluffy. Reduce speed to medium and beat in flour, a cup at a time; continue beating until mixture is smooth. (To make by hand, cream the pound of butter and sugar together by beating and mashing them against the sides of a mixing bowl with large spoon until mixture becomes fluffy. Add flour, a cup at a time, beating well after each addition. If the dough becomes too stiff to stir, knead in the remaining flour with your hands.)

On lightly floured surface, roll dough into rectangle roughly 10x8x½-inches. With ruler and pastry wheel or sharp, small knife, cut rectangle lengthwise into four 2-inch wide strips and make criss-crossing diagonal cuts at 2½-inch intervals across them to form small triangles. Prick pieces all over the a fork, making an even pattern of tiny holes on the surface. Arrange triangles on baking sheet and bake in center of the oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until firm to the touch and delicately browned. With wide metal spatula, transfer triangles to cake racks to cool completely. Shortbread will keep 2 to 3 weeks in tightly covered jars or tins.

NOTE: Shortbread dough may be baked in various shapes. Sometimes it is rolled and cut into rectangular cookies, sometimes it is rolled out into one large round cake and the surface is marked with a knife tip so it can be divided into individual wedges.

FISH AND CHIPS
(Deep-fried fish and potatoes)
Serves 4

BATTER:
1 cup flour
1 egg yolk
2 tablespoons beer
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons milk combined with 3 tablespoons cold water
1 egg white

TO PREPARE BATTER: Pour flour into large mixing bowl. Make well in center and add egg yolk, beer and salt. Stir ingredients together until they are well mixed, then gradually pour in combined milk and water. Continue to stir until batter is smooth.

For light texture, let batter rest at room temperature for at least 30 minutes (although may be used at once). Beat egg white until it forms unwavering peaks on the beater when it is lifted from the bowl. Then gently but thoroughly fold into batter.

CHIPS:
Vegetable oil or shortening for deep-fat frying.
2 pounds baking potatoes, sliced lengthwise into strips½ inch thick and½ inch wide

TO COOK CHIPS AND FISH: Heat 4 to 5 inches of oil or shortening in deep-fat fryer to 375 degrees on deep-fat-frying thermometer. Preheat oven to 250 degrees and line large shallow roasting pan with paper towels.

Dry potatoes thoroughly and deep-fry in three or four batches until they are crisp and light brown. Transfer to lined pan to drain and place in oven to keep warm.

FISH:
2 pounds fresh firm white fillets such as haddock, sole, flounder or cod, skinned and cut into 3x5-inch serving pieces

Wash pieces of fish under cold running water and pat completely dry with paper towels. Drop 2 or 3 pieces of fish at a time into batter and, when well coated, plunge into hot fat. Fry 4 to 5 minutes or until golden brown, turning pieces occasionally with spoon to prevent them from sticking together or to the pan.

To serve, heap fish in center of large heated platter and arrange chips around them. Traditionally, fish and chips are served sprinkled with malt vinegar and salt.

SALSA: Choice of peppers is most important decision in creating salsa recipes is probably the jalapeno pepper.

(From 1E)

Cayenne and green chilies are other popular choices.

"People are really interested in peppers," Lewis said, noting their popularity in recent years.

The choice of what peppers to use is probably one of the most important decisions to be made when creating homemade salsa.

Lewis said choosing your own peppers is also a benefit.

"You decide how hot you like it," Lewis said. "You go with what you like or don't like."

HOT SAUCE RECIPES

Whether you grow your own ingredients for hot sauce or buy them at the farmers market or grocery story, making salsa yourself allows you to adjust the flavor and spiciness to your own taste.

Following are two salsa recipes. The first one, provided by Charlotte Talley, home extension agent with the McLennan County Extension Service, features the hotness of jalapeno peppers. The second recipe, which uses bell peppers, has a mild flavor.

PICANTE SAUCE

4 qts. ripe tomatoes
½ to 1 cup jalapeno peppers
2 cup white vinegar
2 c. chopped or ground onions
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon celery salt

Peel, core and chop ripe tomatoes. If tomatoes are juicy, drain in a colander.

Slice, then grind, jalapeno peppers.

Place all ingredients in large saucepan and heat to boiling; lower heat and simmer 20 to 30 minutes. Pour into jars, seal and water bath for five or 10 minutes

Recipe from Charlotte Talley, home extension agent with the McLennan County Extension Service.

For those unfamiliar with the water techniques necessary for this sauce, booklets on home canning are available at most local Extension service offices.

MILD BLENDER SALSA

2 large, skinned tomatoes, the juice and seeds pressed from them
1 medium onion
1 green pepper, seeds and membrane removed
¼ cup celery or 1 teaspoon celery and/or dill seeds
2 tablespoons chopped parsley or chives
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine ingredients in blender container and blend. Chill sauce for about half an hour. Makes about 1 cup.

Handshakes hard to handle for some arthritis suffers

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about your response to "Unshakable in Milwaukee," the woman who asked how to avoid handshakes, which caused her great pain in her arthritic hands. You suggested, "... very quickly say, 'No handshake, please. I have arthritis.'"

Van Buren

Abby, she may not want to announce to someone she's just meeting that she has arthritis. Also, many people won't hear her quickly enough, as handshakes are automatic.

My suggestion would be to take a cue from Sen. Robert Dole, who carries a felt-tipped pen in the hand of his paralyzed right arm: Always carry something in your right hand. And when someone tries to shake your hand, offer your left hand — but horizontally, with your palm facing the floor.

This works well for a man I know at church. People automatically clasp his left fingertips from below with their already extended right hands, rather than squeezing his knuckles together from top to bottom.

I hope this helps "Unshakable" and others. And please don't use my name, because I don't want it publicized that I'm getting arthritis either! — GETTING ARTHRITIS AT 38 IN TEXAS

DEAR GETTING: Thanks for the suggestions. I'm printing your letter for everyone who needs to palm off an unwanted handshake.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 and a bride-to-be. "Charles Smith" and I are being married soon. Charles wants his parents' names on the wedding invitations as well as the names of my parents. He says it's to show respect.

Abby, my parents are paying for the entire wedding. It will be traditional and quite formal. The Smiths not only did not give us an engagement gift, they're not giving us a wedding gift. My parents feel that since the Smiths failed to honor my fiance and me, they don't deserve to have their names on the invitation.

Charles' parents are mad because we decided against having an engagement party. They feel "tradition" dictates that we have one. None of Charles' family has given us gifts. They said, "If we give you a gift, we should get a meal!" Shouldn't people send gifts because they are happy for the couple, not because they are going to get a meal? All of my family sent gifts.

This has been very upsetting. Tradition states that the bride's parents announce the "giving" of their daughter in marriage; therefore, traditionally only the parents of the bride are listed on the wedding invitation. This is causing a huge problem. Please help. — STUCK BETWEEN RESPECT AND TRADITION

DEAR STUCK: According to Emily Post's "Complete Book of Wedding Etiquette," the bride's family usually pays for the wedding and reception. They are the hosts, and the invitations are issued in their names. If, however, the bridegroom's family shares in the wedding expenses, their names should also appear on the invitations. Since your fiance's parents are not co-hosting the wedding, their names don't belong on the invitations.

Names on wedding invitations have nothing to do with respect — they simply indicate who is hosting the celebration. Your future in-laws are not the first to find this tradition confusing.

For your sake, I hope this settles the issue, and eases pre-wedding tensions.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I decided to go hiking. When we arrived at the trail, the parking area was full, and a car filled with young men was right behind us. We pulled out of the lot and parked by the side of the road.

As we approached the parking area again, I noticed the young men were out of their car. I commented to my friend that since there was no room for them to park, I wondered what they were doing there. By the time we reached the spot where we had seen them, they had driven off, and we realized that they had tried unsuccessfully to break into an alarmed car! We should have notified the police immediately; instead we went hiking as though nothing had happened.

Four hours later, when we returned to my car, we found that my stereo was missing, and a speaker was ruined!

Abby, my message is this: If you suspect strangers are up to no good, report them immediately. Don't wait until they hit on you. By then, it will be too late. — TOOK A HIKE IN PORTLAND

DEAR TOOK A HIKE: Thanks for the reminder that although crime is our No. 1 problem, people who don't want to get involved run a close second.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Over 1,000 people attend annual Parade of Homes tour benefit

Staff Reports

Lines of people streamed from four Midland homes Sunday, braving the winds that kicked up that afternoon, just to get a peek inside. But the desire to peruse these homes wasn't just idle curiosity, it also was a desire to help the Midland Junior Woman's Club with their 26th annual Parade of Homes fund-raiser.

This year, over 1000 visitors helped the event gross over $25,000, from which the proceeds will be distributed to D.A.R.E., ADDAPT, Stop D.W.I., and the Allison Cancer Center Texas Breast Screening Project.

The four homes featured in the 1995 Parade of Homes belonged to David and Cheryl Albin, Charles and Rosanne Blankenship, Max and Ginger Comer and Randy and Miriam Prude. Tickets were $10 per person.

Members of the Junior Woman's Club attended the traditional Candlelight Tour of the homes Saturday evening.

Approximately 65 members of the organization worked at the four homes during the Parade informing guests of interesting facts about each home and watching for the safety of the visitors and the homes. Midland D.A.R.E officers volunteered their time to see that each home was secured during the Candlelight Tour and Parade of Homes.

MEMBERS OF the Parade of Homes committee were Stacy Yadon, chairman; Lee Ann Hedges and Jackie Quain, co-chairmen; Jo Anne Friesen, sponsorship chairman; Anne Bickham, sponsorship co-chairman; Suzanne Cates, ticket chairman; and Sherry Hillman, ticket co-chairman. Home chairmen were Janie Dyer, Gina Courter, Janis Langford, Michele, Shannon, Vikki Naylor, Angie Fields, Cindy Dillinger and Laura Herricks.

Sponsors for the Parade of Homes were Joel and Norma Castello, Discovery Operating and Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc. Patrons were Chesapeake Interiors, Crouch Well Service, Joe and Bonnie Feagan, Gary and Gaye Glasscock, Jim and Paula Henry, The InWest Group Inc., JAR Investments, Modern Appliance, Norwest Bank-Midland, Pat Paxton/Langston Realtors, Don and Debbie Smith, Jay and Sara Solansky, Stewart and Woodside, Van Stavern Interiors, Walsh Petroleum and Paul West Construction. There also were 84 contributors who assisted in raising funds for Parade of Homes.

Others who assisted with the success of the event were KCRS, KODM, KGEE, KIOL, KNFM, KMID, KOSA, KWES, Associated Arts Printing, Classical Greenery, Curry's Hallmark Cards and Gifts, Flowers by Ron, D.A.R.E., Expressions, Lisa S.
