Miracles
Visit fruitful for Mary Mendoza

Mary Mendoza recounts a vision she saw during Monday's Feast of the Assumption celebration at St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Lubbock.

For at least one parishioner of the Sacred Heart Parish in Big Spring, a visit to Lubbock's Saint John Neumann Catholic Church yielded a miracle.

Mary Mendoza, a secretary in the civil division of the Howard County Sheriff's Department and a leader of the Blue Army in the Sacred Heart parish here, made the journey to Lubbock's charismatic Catholic church Monday.

Some 35 to 50 persons attend the weekly Thursday night meetings of the Blue Army, she said, which studies the history of the Virgin Mary and of the rosary. Sacred Heart pastor Rev. James D. Delaney said, "It's a religious organization, blue being the color of the Blessed Mother. It's not an army, but a pious association."

"This is nothing new to us. The Blue Army has been involved since 1917," she said. "What we witnessed yesterday was almost similar to the miracle of the sun in 1917, when the great miracle of the sun occurred in Fatima, Portugal, which was witnessed by over 70,000 people."

Mendoza reached the Lubbock church after 6 p.m., she said. "The rosary had just ended, and Mass was beginning.

"During the Mass, the father, Monsignor Joseph W. James, was leading the Mass when all of a sudden he stopped the Mass. That is very unusual, because the Mass, once it is begun, cannot be stopped.

"He later explained to the people that as he was saying the Mass, before him he saw the peoples' faces in the colors of the rainbow, and that astonished him. He couldn't believe that he saw a rainbow on the people.

"During that pause, while the Mass was stopped, they (the worshippers) were singing and saying praises to the Lord, and they saw the sun change colors.

"I witnessed that," she said. "We could see the sun with no harm to our eyes, and the sun turned all the colors of the rainbow, the pinks, the bright yellows and blues, and we could look at it with no harm.

"There was a dark circle in the center of the sun, as if to protect our eyes, and there was a rainbow around the sun," she said.

Mendoza also saw a change in the appearance of the moon during the celebration of Mass. "During the Mass when the people were about to receive the Holy Communion, which is the body of Jesus Christ, the moon turned red, and this was witnessed by all the people (present). The moon changed to a brightish pink, almost a complete red."

Afterward, she said, worshippers remained to pray the rosary, rather than departing as is customary at the end of Mass.

"To me, the greatest miracle was being able to be present to witness the miracle of the sun and moon, which was witnessed 71 years ago by 70,000 people, and just being present."

"One of (Mary's) strongest messeges has been that God is mad," she said. "God is furious, like a mother bear in search of its cubs. Giving us all these messages means she realizes she has lost so many of her children . . . and she's just trying to bring us back closer to her son before it's too

Thousands of worshipers flock to church

LUBBOCK — More than 10,000 people came to St. John Neumann Catholic Church hoping for a miracle, and after a dramatic evening Mass during the Feast of the Assumption, most weren't disappointed.

Shortly after Monday's mass began, some worshipers gasped and pointed skyward. Others looked and began shouting, "It's Jesus, look!"

As the excitement brought the Mass to a halt, scores of pilgrims cried and applauded, claiming to see apparitions of Jesus and the Virgin Mary.

"I knew there would be a miracle, I just knew it," said Mamie Fertitta of Beaumont, crying and pointing to the sky.

She said the saw the sun pulsating and then saw Jesus.

A dozen priests standing on a rooftop altar and 600 Eucharist ministers turned their backs to the crowd to look at the sky and wave. After minutes of silence, the pastor, Monsignor Joseph James, facing the West where people were pointing, began to sing "Amazing Grace."

People in the audience whipped out cameras to photograph the clouds and light.

Paula Mitchell, 13, of Dallas, said she saw Jesus and Mary as the sun burst through the clouds.

Jesus "had a grayish-white beard and he's got some kind of cape on. Mary's wearing a crown," she said.

"I saw baby Jesus for an instant in the sky," said Koreth Vargahese of Houston.

For the estimated 12,000 people, the pilgrimage was prompted by reports that a miracle would occur on Monday's Feast of the Assumption, the day Catholics celebrate Mary's assumption into heaven.

The charismatic parish has been the focus of national attention after three parishioners began reporting receiving messages of peace and hope from the Virgin Mary this spring.

While many cried and pointed skyward, not everyone saw an apparition in the sky.

"I didn't see anything, but some of the other priests did," said Deacon Joe Richard.

Before the Mass, thousands streamed onto the church grounds despite temperatures in the high 90s as busloads brought pilgrims from around the country.

Many of the worshipers were handicapped, who came seeking healing.

Lubbock Bishop Michael Sheehan had originally planned to preside over the feast day Mass, but decided not to after the publicity about the messages. He has urged people to treat the messages with caution.

Exit Reagan, enter George

By TERENCE HUNT

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush took off today for a Republican convention ready to launch him on an uphill struggle for the White House and eager to learn the still-secret name of his running mate.

Bush, waving to onlookers and accompanied by family members, left Andrews Air Force Base near the nation's capital, heading for a brief public meeting with President Reagan outside New Orleans and then a rousing welcome in the convention city.

By the time of his arrival, Bush should have decided who will fill the No. 2 spot on the ticket, aides said. However, they predicted he will not immediately reveal the name, keeping the pot boiling perhaps until Thursday.

Speculation centered on Sen. Bob Dole, his wife Elizabeth, Sens. Dan Quayle, Pete Domenici, Alan Simpson, Atty. Gen. Richard Thornburgh, former White House chief of staff Howard Baker and Rep. Jack Kemp. Also churned up by the rumor mill were the names of Sens. John Danforth and Christopher Bond of Missouri.

Bush, after watching the convention on television in Washington, was flying here to pick up the torch from Reagan. Trailing in the polls, Bush pledged to "do my level best to fill those big shoes of President Ronald Reagan."

Reagan and Bush, political partners for nearly eight years, were crossing paths at a military airport, pausing together for photos and then traveling their separate ways — Reagan on his way out of town en route to a long vacation in California and Bush heading for a triumphant welcoming rally in this colorful convention city.

"George, I'm in your corner," Reagan declared in an emotionally charged valedictory speech to a Superdome audience packed to the rafters. "But George, just one more personal request: Go out there and win one for the Gipper."

Sounding one more time a battle cry for conservative causes, Reagan said, "We can never let the fire go out or quit the fight, because the battle is never over."

Delegates were prepared to give Bush a conservative platform on which to challenge Democrat Michael Dukakis.

Awaiting approval today — probably unanimously — was a

Bush — 'I made my decision'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush said he decided today on a running mate for the fall campaign, but warned he would not "play the game of 20 questions" to fuel speculation about whom he had chosen in advance of an announcement later this week.

As Bush flew from Washington here on Air Force Two, the incumbent vice president said the long process of selection was over.

"I had hoped to do it by the time I got on this airplane and I have," Bush told reporters aboard the plane. "The decision will be announced before Thursday night."

He said the final phase in the process came "just before I climbed onto this plane. Today, with finality."

"I want an opportunity to properly notify the person I will nominate,' Bush said.

Trading shortfall increases

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit suffered a major setback in June, swelling to $12.5 billion, the government said today. The deterioration followed three straight months of improvements.

The growth in the trade balance — a sharp 28.5 percent worse than the May imbalance of $9.8 billion — was likely to jolt financial markets.

June's trading shortfall was the worst since February's $14.4 billion deficit, which triggered a 100-point plunge in the Dow Jones industrial average when it was announced in April.

The June deficit, as reported by the Commerce Department, was substantially worse than had been expected. Most economists had anticipated a deficit of around $10.9 billion as analysts expected that a rise in imports would be partially offset by continued growth of exports.

However, exports fell by 2.4 percent in June to a seasonally adjusted $26.8 billion while imports surged to an all-time high

Questions remain in Demo plans to fill Shaw ballot slot

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Questions remain about the Democrats' spot on the Nov. 8 ballot to oppose Republican candidate Troy Fraser for the 69th District state representative seat.

The final decision will apparently lie with the office of the Texas secretary of state, according to one assistant secretary.

Larry Don Shaw — citing the low pay he receives as a state representative — resigned Thursday and said he will move to Austin to become a member of the staff of Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, effective Sept. 1.

Shaw, D-Knott, said his new position, special assistant for appropriations, will enable him to work directly with Lewis on financial decisions.

Texas Assistant Secretary of State Randy Erben said Monday he has still not been formally notified about Shaw's resignation or whether Shaw has moved from the district he has represented for eight years.

Democrats maintain they can appoint a representative to fill the position Shaw has vacated, but Troy Fraser, Shaw's Republican opponent, said he believes the 69th District seat is his.

"What he (Fraser) said in the paper (Friday's Herald) is a bunch of hooey. He's talking about something he knows nothing about." — County Demo Chairman M.H. Boatler.

"We're not going to say anything is legal or not legal until we have heard something from Mr. Slagle or Representative Shaw. We will then research the matter. We are looking forward to receiving some kind of formal documentation," Erben said.

Ed Martin, public information officer for state Democratic chairman Ed Slagle, said Slagle will send a letter today to the secretary of state's office notifying them that Shaw is ineligible for the 69th District seat.

"If they want to start playing hanky-panky, they will start doing it then," Martin said.

Howard County Democratic Chairman M.H. Boatler, Big Spring, said Monday he was contacted last week by state party chairman Bob Slagle, who told him he will call a special meeting of Democratic chairmen of the 13 counties in Shaw's district.

The 69th District is composed of these counties:

Howard, Borden, Glasscock, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Winkler, Ward, Loving, Reeves, Jeff Davis, Culberson and Hudspeth.

Boatler said he was informed by Slagle that he expects to be contacted sometime today about when the meeting will be held.

Boatler said Slagle told him a committee will be formed to appoint a replacement for Shaw.

"What he (Fraser) said in the paper (Friday's Herald) is a bunch of hooey. He's talking about something he knows nothing about," Boatler said.

Fraser told the Big Spring Herald Friday that it would be illegal and a manipulation of the system for the Democrats to replace Shaw on the ballot.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Fraser said he is still awaiting a definitive ruling from the secretary of state on Shaw's

More comics, less drill, suggests panel

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN — Increased use of comic books, coupled with decreased use of workbooks, could get more young Texans interested in reading, according to a panel of the Select Committee on Education.

"Light reading is OK — comic books, teen romances, etc.," a subcommittee said Monday in a draft report presented to the full committee.

In its recommendations, the panel said school districts should "increase dollars spent for books, including even comics and recreational reading books."

The theory is simple, according to Allan Odden, a University of Southern California education professor serving as a consultant to the special committee. Children are more likely to read books of their own selection than those assigned in class, he said.

"It turns out they are good motivational tools. It got them reading," Odden said of books that students pick for themselves. "Anything you can do to get kids to read is good."

The report from the subcommittee on student performance and quality said, "When children read materials they select on their own, the impact equals or exceeds that of basal readers."

The full committee took no vote on the proposal, but no major objections were voiced. Chairman Larry Jenkins urged careful wording of the proposal, cautioning fellow committee members that it "conceivably could be misinterpreted."

The select committee plans to wrap up its report to the Legislature in October.

In addition to the call for more money for recreational reading material, the subcommittee called for reduced money for "workbooks (and) drill-and-skill materials."

The subcommittee also recommended that the state consider requiring all students to become proficient in two languages before they graduate from high school.

Committee members called it an excellent, if unrealistic, goal.

"I hate like the devil to waste state money on that program when we have an awful lot of children who are not learning English at all well," said Will Davis.

Texas scientists study remote beach

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Researchers say a submerged island rose to the surface of the Indian Ocean before sinking again and leaving one of the world's most remote shell-strewn beaches a half-mile below water.

The island west of Australia and an underwater mountain range are part of the record of how the Indian subcontinent "migrated" after breaking from Antarctica, according to researchers with the Ocean Drilling Program at Texas A&M University.

Evidence of the beach at the edge of the island proves the island was once lifted to the surface by geological forces before sinking again, the researchers say.

More than a mile of core samples taken by the drillship JOIDES Resolution earlier this summer also revealed additional evidence of the worldwide mass extinction about 65-66 million years ago, said Philip Rabinowitz, ODP director and a Texas A&M oceanographer.

"Evidence from this site is particularly valuable because the sediment at Broken Ridge (site of the drilling) accumulated rapidly, giving scientists an expanded record of how species evolve in response to newly created ecological niches," he said.

Earlier study by ODP scientists showed that the Himalayas were uplifted by forces at least 20 million years ago — 10 million years earlier than researchers previously thought — and that the enormous body of sediment from the erosion of the Himalayas was even larger and thicker than realized.

The Bay of Bengal in the northeast Indian Ocean is the world's largest sediment accumulation, the result of such erosive forces, the scientists said. Sediment estimated to be between five and 10 times the volume of the Himalayas visible today is contained in that area.

Researchers with the drilling program, for which Texas A&M acts as scientific operator, have been studying the Indian Ocean for more than a year, and will end the 18-month campaign in December, Rabinowitz said.

Scientific planning and ODP expertise is provided by the Joint Oceanographic Institutions for Deep Earth Sampling, which includes Texas A&M, and the program is managed by a 10-member research consortium known as Joint Oceanographic Institutions.

Drought losses high

AUSTIN (AP) — The drought of 1988 has cost Texas $1.36 billion in crop and livestock losses, according to the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Mike Moeller, deputy state agriculture commissioner, said Monday that livestock has suffered the most with losses of $555 million. The drought's effect on livestock could continue next year even if rainfall returns to normal, he said.

"We've had major herd sell-offs in a good portion of the state. You just don't build that back overnight. It could be two to four years before we get back up to where we were," Moeller said.

The crop losses were calculated by the Texas Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Cotton has been the biggest loser with total yield down 394 million pounds for a loss of $300 million, according to Moeller.

The state's hay value has dropped by $125 million and feed grain values are down $30 million.

Northeast Texas and the South Texas area near Laredo continue to be hard hit, Moeller said.

However, the Panhandle and South Plains have had sufficient recent rainfall to guarantee a good winter wheat crop, he predicted.

"In terms of dollars, I'm sure this is far and away the biggest annual loss we've ever experienced as a result of a drought," said Mike Moeller, deputy commissioner of the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Teen to remain in detention

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge rejected a family's pleas to allow a 15-year-old accused of killing a man at a southwest Houston mall t return home.

State District Judge Robert Lowry ordered Monday that the teen-ager remain in juvenile detention pending another hearing in 10 days.

The boy left the courtroom in tears, and defense attorneys said the decision compounded the tragedy that happened Aug. 2 when Khanh Quoc Bui, 18, was shot and killed outside Sharpstown Mall.

Attorney Mike DeGuerin said the boy comes from a loving family and is a good student who is scheduled to start his sophomore year at Madison High School.

But Assistant District Attorney Karen McAshan said two of the boy's brothers knew the youth bought a .22-caliber revolver a week before the shooting and had not told the parents.

Testimony at the detention hearing showed the youth, his 13- and 17-year-old brothers and a friend got into an argument in the food court area of the mall with a group of five Vietnamese youths.

"It was an argument between two groups of boys," Nugent said. "Because one of the children had a gun, it turned into this."

City legalizes garage sales

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It's now legal to sell unwanted items at bargain prices out of a garage or front yard in San Antonio.

Under the new ordinance, passed earlier this month by the City Council, residents are limited to two sales a year, at a cost of $2.50 per sale. Charity groups can have as many as 12 sales without paying the fee, but must pay a $25 state fee and collect and report state sales tax for each sale after the first.

The new ordinance is aimed at cracking down on people who continually hold sales. It had been illegal until Monday to hold a garage sale in residential areas of San Antonio and city inspectors had staged periodic raids, shutting down garage sales.

More than 100 permits were issued on Monday, the first day for legalized, but regulated garage sales, city officials said. There were 103 of the permits issued on the first day.

Postal carriers warned

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — All properly addressed mail will be delivered, even so-called third-class junk mail, the U.S. postmaster general warned the nation's letter carriers.

Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank's comments came while addressing more than 2,000 postal supervisors at their 51st biennial national convention.

"Non-delivery of any properly-addressed mail is totally unacceptable and illegal," Frank said. "All properly-addressed mail will be delivered, and those who think otherwise don't belong in the postal service."

The U.S. Postal Service has acknowledged that sometimes third-class mail does not reach its destination, either because of a postal carrier's negligence or for other reasons, including incorrect addressing by the sender.

Frank said that the postal service has initiated an employee education program to emphasize the importance of third-class mail.

Knife maker objects to replica

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A Texas knife maker is going to court over what he says are shoddy replicas of a machete he made for the Arnold Schwarzenegger movie "Predator."

Jack W. Crain of Weatherford, Texas, in a $3 million suit filed in U.S. District Court, contends the copies distributed by Frost Cutlery Co. of Chattanooga have hurt his efforts to sell more expensive replicas.

Crain, who has made custom knives for such films as "Commando" and "Die Hard," said he made the machete as part of a three-knife set specially designed for "Predator."

Americans with adjustable mortgages are in for a shock

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans with adjustable mortgages and other variable-rate loans are in for further shocks this year if the Federal Reserve keeps up its anti-inflation campaign as many economists are predicting.

Many Americans already have seen their credit costs rise this year because of credit tightening on the part of the central bank.

As Fed policy-makers gathered to map monetary strategy behind closed doors today, some economists were predicting that the central bank already has decided that even higher rates are necessary to slow an economy being buffeted by rising inflationary threats.

The meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee comes one week after the Fed, in a surprise move, boosted its discount rate by one-half percentage point to 6.5 percent, its highest level since July 1986.

An increase in the discount rate, the interest the Fed charges to make loans to commercial banks, is the most dramatic signal the central bank can send of its intention to push interest rates higher as a way of dampening demand and thus fighting inflationary pressures.

The timing of the discount rate increase was a surprise for many economists who had expected the all-Republican Fed board, led by Chairman Alan Greenspan, to shy away from such an overt credit-tightening move in an election year.

While analysts said they don't expect another boost in the discount rate until after the November election, they said the Fed very likely will continue tightening credit by more subtle means.

Since late March, the Fed has been reducing the reserves banks have available for making loans, driving up a variety of short-term interest rates. The federal funds rate, which is the interest banks charge to make overnight loans to each other, has now risen to 8 percent and many economists predicted it would climb by another one-half percentage point in coming weeks.

Major banks followed the Fed's lead last week and boosted their prime lending rate from 9.5 percent to 10 percent, a three-year high. Analysts predicted that with further Fed pressure, the prime rate will climb to 10.5 percent in the next two months.

"I am looking for further tightening steps based on a perception by Fed policy-makers that the economy is growing too strongly," said David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer.

Because the prime rate is used to calculate a wide range of consumer loans, from adjustable mortgages to home equity loans, the rate hikes will be felt quickly by consumers, analysts said.

They also predicted further increases in traditional fixed-rate mortgages. A national survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said fixed-rate mortgages jumped to 10.57 percent at the end of last week, up almost a percentage point from their February low.

Analysts pointed to a variety of recent statistics which indicate inflation is a growing problem.

The government reported last week that wholesale prices shot up at an annual rate of 5.7 percent in July, compared with an increase of 2.2 percent in 1987.

And on Monday, the government said industrial output climbed 0.8 percent in July, the biggest increase since last October and an advance which put further strains on many industries.

"Who better to prepare us for the second coming of Jesus than she who gave him life?" Mendoza asked. "And his second coming is near.

"We do not question our faith. It is to believe."

The Blue Army chartered a 47-passenger bus for the journey; Mendoza said today that so many people called Sunday and Monday after hearing about the bus that "I could easily have filled another one."

"I couldn't begin to get close to the church."

Crowds had been drawn to St. John Neumann, according to published reports, after three parishioners — Mary Constancio, Mike Slate and Theresa Werner — reported visions of the Virgin Mary, who referred to herself as the queen of mercy and brought warnings of God's anger and the nearness of Christ's return to earth.

She explained that the great miracle of the sun to which she referred in describing her vision took place during a mass worship in Fatima, Portugal, Oct. 13, 1917.

"At that time, as they do today, people doubted," she said.

Three shepherd children had reported seeing and speaking with the Virgin Mary, she said, and one, a girl named Lucia, sought a miracle "so that people would believe."

Her request was answered on a rain-soaked morning when thousands climbed a barren hill, Mendoza recounted, and the child and her two companions witnessed an appearance of the mother of Jesus, whereupon Lucia asked Mary to perform a miracle.

The crowds were panic-stricken when the sun burst through the clouds and began to dance, Mendoza explained. "The sun came down near the people, and they panicked. They screamed and yelled and thought it was the end of the world, that it was a punishment from God.

"But what was happening was that when the sun was coming down, it was drying the mud, the people and their clothes."

Convention

40,000-word platform that pledges no tax increases, calls for a constitutional amendment to ban abortion and promises "rapid and certain deployment" of the Star Wars missile defense plan, also known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The document embraces Bush's campaign proposals by endorsing child-care tax credits for low-income families, increased spending on Head Start and a new "merit schools" program, and tax-free savings bonds to pay for college. There was not a single dissenting report for the full convention to debate.

Criticizing the platform offered by the Democrats, Mrs. Dole told GOP delegates that the other party's document was long on platitudes and short on specifics. "We're not running against Bentsen and Dukakis, we're running against Bentsen and hedges," she said.

For his part, Dukakis remained at home, shrugging off attacks from New Orleans. "I don't think it's going to do any political damage," the Massachusetts governor said. "In the last analysis, people are going to be looking at me and Mr. Bush and they are going to be looking at which one of us has the leadership."

The GOP wasn't the only party in this town. There were evening cruises on the Mississippi River, performances by jazz trumpeter Al Hirt, and scads of brunches, buffets and open bars at all hours for delegates and hangers-on.

The biggest guessing game here — the only one, really — was whom Bush would put on his ticket. Bush's staff already has chartered a campaign plane for the unknown nominee and has assembled a speech-writing staff to produce "generic" remarks that can be tailored at the last-minute to fit the man or woman picked.

Dole, the tart-tongued minority leader of the Senate, surprised some people Monday by criticizing Bush's drawn-out selection process. "I don't care for it, frankly." Aides quickly said Dole was not criticizing Bush.

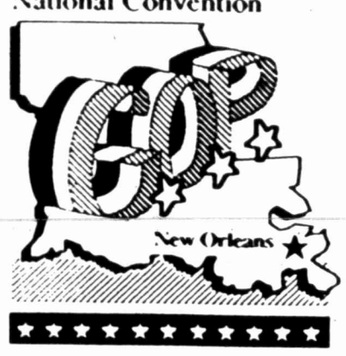

Some candidates played up their hopes, others played them down.

Emphasizing that he doesn't consider himself in the running, Simpson said: "I've said it clearly as I can. I guess they want me to jump on a chair and make an obscene gesture or something."

On the other hand, Kemp told his supporters, "I was a good second-string quarterback and I can be a good second-string quarterback for George Bush." Quayle said that if Bush picks him, "I'll be there with bells on."

Overnight, the huge Superdome was spruced up, workmen removing the thousands of balloons that cascaded down after Reagan's farewell to a party that twice put him on the road to landslide White House victories.

Republican National Convention

Acknowledging the tumultuous reception that embraced this New Deal Democrat turned Republican, Reagan declared, "Nothing could be hotter than the spirit of the delegates in this hall, except maybe a victory celebration on Nov. 8."

To the "Where was George?" taunts of Democrats in Atlanta, Reagan assured Republicans that Bush was a valuable adviser. "George was there," Reagan said.

The delegates immediately seized on his remark, chanting "George was there. George was there."

Reagan recalled the "economic chaos" he inherited eight years ago, recounted the change wrought by his administration and warned against letting the Democrats back in power. "Without George Bush to build on those policies, everything we have achieved will be at risk," he said. "All the work, sacrifice and effort of the American people could end in the very same disaster that we inherited in 1981."

There was lavish praise for Reagan's speech.

"What a way to launch Bush. It was just marvelous," said North Carolina delegate Katherine Kinney. "It's a tearjerker too. It's sad, isn't it? He was a great president, but we're going to have another one."

Democrats

resignation, but is resolute in his conviction that he has won the 69th District seat.

"As far as I'm concerned, until something changes, I have won. We've both gone through the primaries and he has dropped out. I think it's real unfair for the Democrats to try to put someone else in," he said.

By attempting to replace Shaw, Fraser charged, the Democrats are "totally circumventing the election process."

"If they are successful in appointing a replacement for Shaw, I think that candidate would totally lack credibility in the November election," he said.

No matter what ruling the secretary of state makes, Fraser said he will continue to campaign in the district until the election.

"I want to get a grassroots feel for what's going on," he said.

Martin said Tuesday that the district county chairmen and Slagle will meet soon to select Shaw's replacement, although a meeting has not yet been scheduled.

"Frankly, I think he (Shaw) will be declared ineligible because he has moved out of the district. That's clearly the law that was changed a couple of legislative sessions ago," he said.

In a recent poll of swing precincts that are "35 to 70 percent Democratic," Shaw was receiving 65 percent support, Martin said.

"I'm aghast that Mr. Fraser has annointed himself as the winner of that seat. I think the voters would like to have a choice," he said.

A native of Big Spring, Shaw graduated from Texas Tech University. Following graduation, he returned to work in the family cotton business and at Lazy S Cattle Co.

He decided to run for the Texas House in 1980 and succeeded in upsetting incumbent Mike Ezzell for representation in the 63rd District.

During his first term in the legislature, a redistricting plan left him representing a district that stretched 300 miles west to El Paso County.

Deficit

of $39.4 billion.

The deterioration pointed up the problem facing U.S. policy-makers, who have struggled for most of this decade to find ways to reduce soaring trade deficits.

While U.S. exports have shown improvements because of a substantial decline in the value of the dollar, imports have stayed at stubbornly high levels despite the fact that a weaker dollar is now making foreign goods more expensive for American consumers.

The 5.7 percent jump in imports in June was laid to a sharp rise in imports of clothing, office equipment and heavy machinery.

The report said that shipments of foreign capital goods shot up by $900 million in June while shipments of consumer goods rose by $700 million.

The weakness in exports reflected declines in shipments of American capital goods, agricultural products and autos.

Even with the deterioration, the U.S. trade deficit for the first six months of the year was running at an annual rate of $140 billion, down sharply from the record deficit of $170.3 billion set in 1987.

America's foreign oil bill declined slightly in June to $3.6 billion, compared to $3.9 billion in May, as the average price per barrel fell to $16.19, down 21 cents from May. An average of 7.36 million barrels of oil were imported daily, down from 7.76 million barrels daily in May.

As usual, the largest overall deficit was with Japan, an imbalance of $4.4 billion, up from $4.1 billion in May.

The deficit with Canada, America's largest trading partner, climbed to $1.40 billion. The deficit with the countries of Western Europe rose to $1.9 billion while the deficit with the newly industrialized countries of Taiwan, South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore rose to $2.7 billion in June.

Coahoma ISD increases budget

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The Coahoma Independent School District board of trustees approved an actual tax rate of $1.54 per $100 market value — the same tax rate as last year — during its regular meeting Monday night.

The board also approved the district's 1988-89 budget of $4,611,686.

The $1.54 tax rate is based on a district property evaluation of $197,114,788.

The budget represents an increase of approximately $185,000 over last year, said Gary Rotan, superintendent.

The district has secured about $185,000 more in state and federal monies than last year to fund the additional expenditures, he said.

Payroll costs — $2,811,314 — represent more than half the budget. Other expenditure areas are:

- Purchased and contracted services: $453,505.
- Supplies and materials: $365,477.
- Other operating expense: $152,700.
- Capital Outlay: $123,440.
- Debt Service: $705,250.

The district projects collecting $2,944,500 in taxes, based on its $154 actual tax rate, 197,114,788 tax roll and a 97 percent collection rate.

The district projects receiving $1,346,261 in state revenues and $151,425 in federal revenues.

In other business, the board:

Approved Policy Update 32, which is provided by the Texas Associations of School Boards Policy Service to ensure the district remains in compliance with federal and state statutes, court decisions and State Board of Education and Texas Education Agency regulations and policies.

Approved the resignation for relocation purposes of Marcella Crenshaw, junior high reading teacher.

Rotan informed the board that Dr. Jane Rider, a San Angelo pediatrician, will be the featured speaker at a parent/teacher attention deficit disorder meeting August 26.

The parent's meeting will begin at 10:15 a.m. and the teachers will meet at 1 p.m.

Attention deficit disorder is a learning disorder characterized by inattention and impulsivity.

Opinion

Marcos offering insult to country

It is typical of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos that he should offer a bribe to return to the country from which he was ousted. From a man who lived in palatial splendor while his people lived in crippling poverty, an attempt to buy his way home should hardly be surprising.

Marcos reportedly offered to give $5 billion to the Philippines and support the government of President Corazon Aquino if he is permitted to return from his exile in Hawaii and be exempted from criminal prosecution, according to those familiar with the negotiations.

One source close to the talks said Marcos "doesn't want anyone to think he's buying his freedom," adding: "It's his love for the Philippines, his desire to go home. He wants to help restore the Philippine economy, and if his personal resources can do that, he wants to do that."

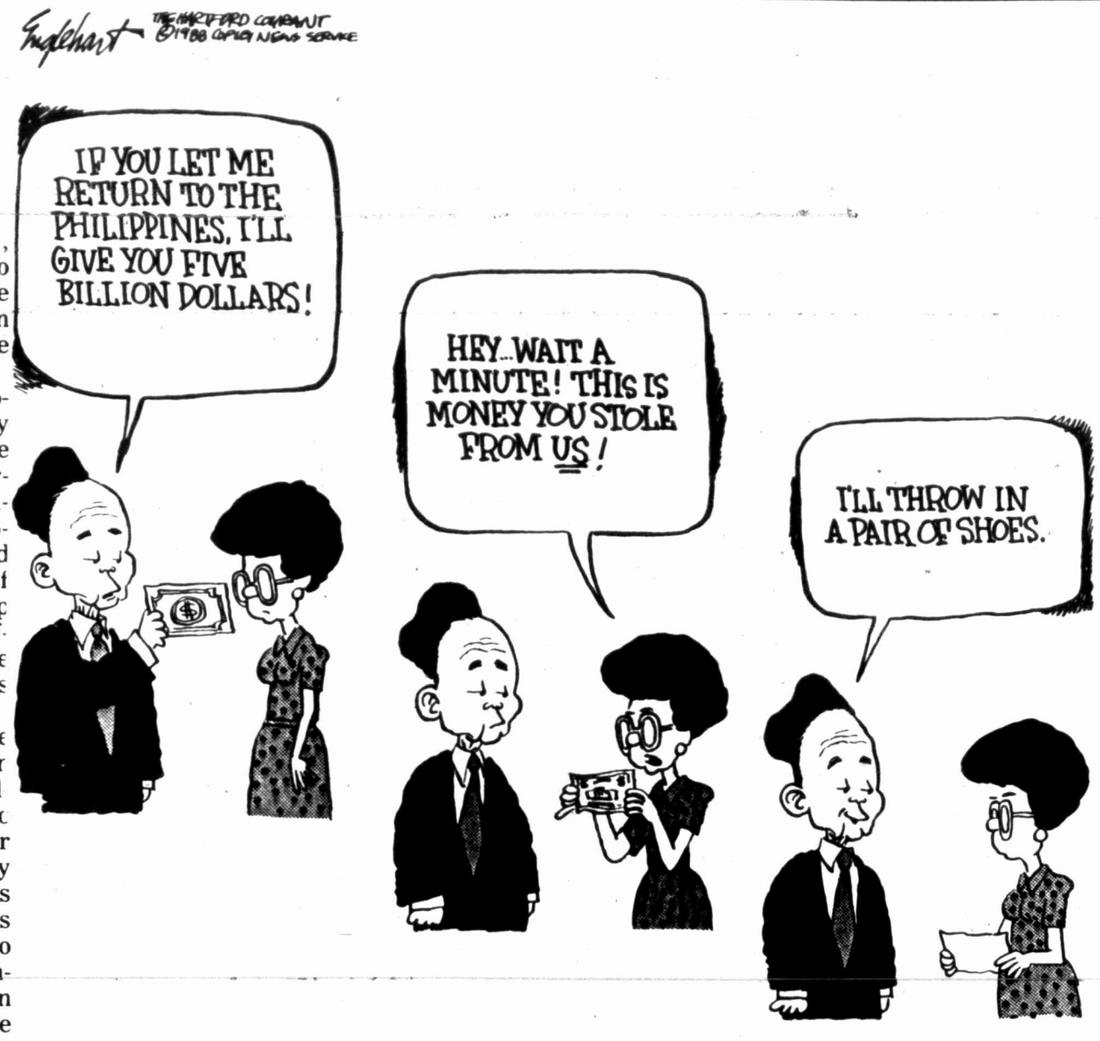

Fine. If Marcos wants to help the country he betrayed, let him pony up the $5 billion, plus whatever else he may have stolen from the people he was supposed to have served. Then, after making restitution and satisfying the claims of the law, if he wants to return home, let him contritely seek permission. But the reported offer is attempted bribery, and it's not surprising that Philippine diplomats are appalled at Marcos' arrogance.

A Marcos spokesman denies any deal involving money, but is the denial plausible? Marcos, remember, is the man who ridiculed suggestions that he stashed away a fortune in overseas investments before he fled his country.

His alleged use of Philippine government funds to buy art and American real estate while concealing their ownership forms the basis of recommendations by U.S. prosecutors that he be indicted for fraud and conspiracy. If Marcos is able to come up with $5 billion, it will be difficult for him to claim he didn't loot his country's treasury.

U.S. officials have more than a prosecutor's interest in Marcos. This country annually pays nearly $500 million to the Philippines in return for the use of two major military bases there. Rebel groups have made sporadic attacks on U.S. citizens assigned to those bases. A stable government and a viable economy in the Philippines are therefore matters of direct concern to the United States.

But Marcos' personal problems are his own business. If the corrupt ex-ruler has billions available for the purposes of bribery, then authorities in the United States and Philippines ought to learn the amount and its whereabouts, and try to determine how much of it was stolen. Only when Ferdinand Marcos pays what he owes will he deserve a seat in a Manila-bound airliner. Until then, he will be what he is now and has been: a political pariah.

Jaws has something to say

By ART BUCHWALD

CAPE COD — How bad was the ocean pollution along the East Coast recently? I'll tell you how bad it was. The sharks no longer consider it safe to go into the water.

Perhaps that's an exaggeration. The truth is that the sharks were swimming around, but nowhere near the shore. A submarine picked up on sonar the conversation of a school of sharks about 200 miles off Cape Cod the other day. The sonar operator identified the sharks as Jaws I, Jaws II, Jaws III and Jaws IV.

The transcript that follows has just been released:

Jaws I: Don't go near Long Island. All the beaches have been turned into cesspools.

Jaws II: Ditto for New Jersey. Every bit of medical garbage known to man has been dumped into the water there, including blood contaminated with AIDS.

Jaws III: How can anyone live like that? Even squid don't poison their own water.

Jaws IV: I don't mind eating garbage but I'm not going to swim through the other stuff they're pumping into the sea.

Jaws I: I hear that it is so bad off Far Rockaway that you can get violently sick just by nuzzling your head against a swimmer's leg.

Jaws II: The people are not only releasing raw sewage from the land, but they are pumping it from their boats as well. There is no way we can go near the beach without getting herpes.

Jaws IV: Maybe we shouldn't stay here. The ocean currents could bring the stuff out to where we are now.

Jaws I: I would lilke to bite the arm off the person responsible for dumping all the medical swill into the sea.

Jaws II: I would, too, but only if I could hear him scream a lot.

Jaws III: And thrash around in helpless agony....

Jaws IV: That's all well and good, but what do we do about food? All the marine life in the area is now contaminated. Even the people on the beach are unsafe to eat.

Jaws I: That's outrageous. No one should be permitted to contaminate human beings. They're our meal ticket.

Jaws II: I can't believe that people who would dump all their waste into the sea would make sharks the heavies in the movies. For old times' sake, why don't we take one fast swim into shore and scare them to death?

Jaws III: We can't scare them if they are not allowed to go into the water.

Jaws IV: I hate to swim in red algae.

Jaws I: Just when we thought it was safe to go into the water we got sucked in by chemical waste. I guess we have to scratch Long Island as a good place for lunch.

Jaws II: It's not just Long Island. The whole ocean tastes funny. I say that all sea creatures pronounce the entire East Coast off limits until people can get their anti-pollution act together.

Jaws III: I hear it's not even safe around Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket either.

Jaws IV: Could we be declared an endangered species?

Jaws I: But we are not an endangered species, and these people are throwing all their bilge into the sea just to save money.

Jaws II: And to think people call us sharks.

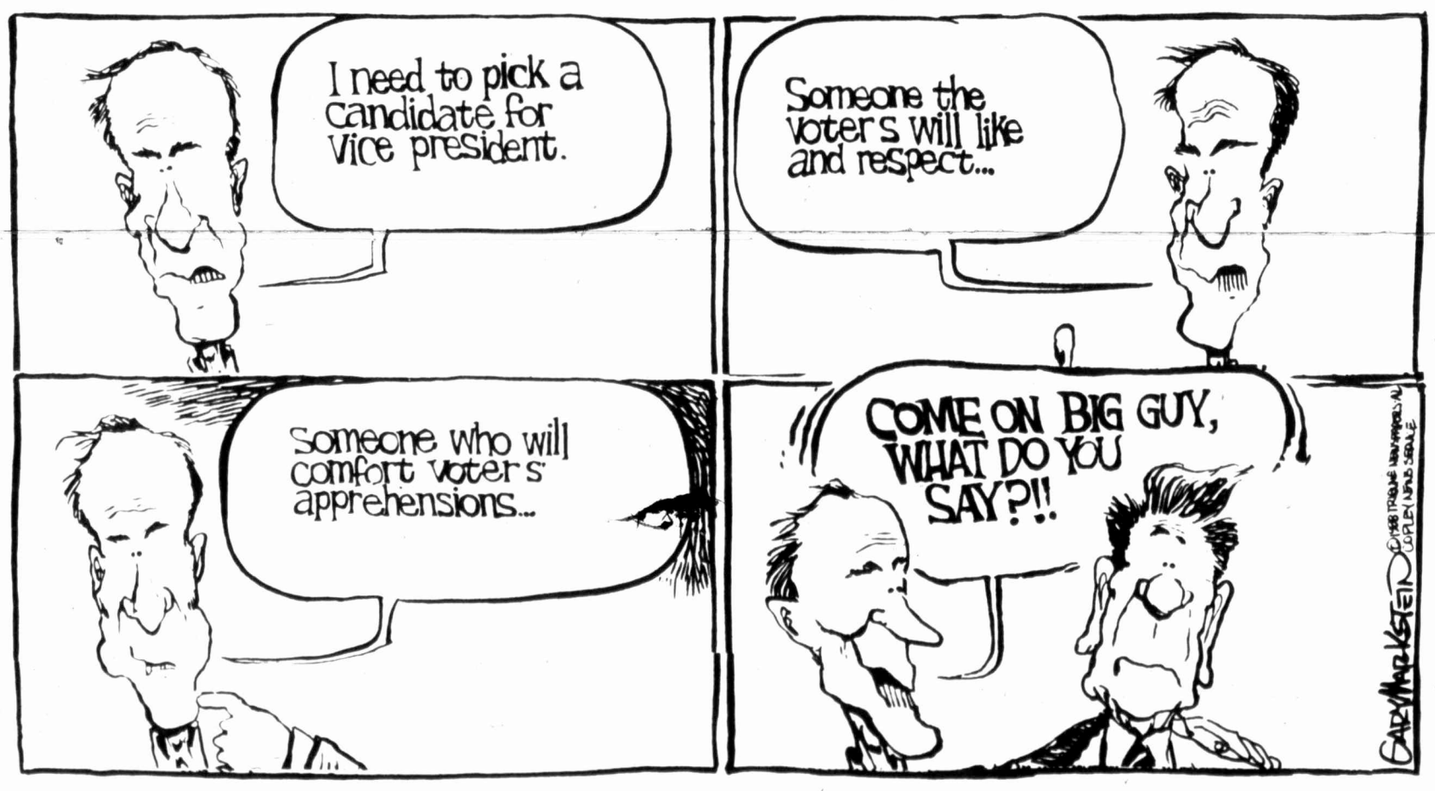

Quotes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Here are comments on the presidential race as the Republican National Convention continues in New Orleans.

GEORGE BUSH, after President Reagan's address to the convention Monday night: "Now I will go to New Orleans and spell out my hopes for America and do my level best to fill those big shoes of President Ronald Reagan."

RONALD REAGAN, on his future plans: "When I pack up my bags in Washington, don't expect me to be happy to hear all this talk about the twilight of my life. Twilight? Not in America!"

PAUL LAXALT, a co-chairman of the Bush campaign, on Bush's movement into the spotlight: "I do think that come Thursday night after he delivers his speech, George Bush is going to be liberated of sorts. He's lived in the shadow for all these years now . . ."

GOP party factions grow clearer at convention

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The Republican Convention in New Orleans is predicted to be a mind-numbing experience for a fun-loving city. But the Republicans are showing signs of division that could cause sparks at the convention.

The line between moderate and conservative party factions is becoming sharper as the Reagan era closes. Vice President George Bush falls on the moderate side of that line and the arch-conservative, who enjoyed a heyday with Reagan, see their influence waning.

The moderate wing may have taken steps to clip the conservative stronghold before the convention. It was rumored that Sen. Jesse Helms was closed out of the platform committee. But a spokesman for Helms said the ultra-conservative senator from North Carolina will not attend the convention because of previously scheduled minor surgery.

The conservatives don't need Helms around to remind them of the things they dislike about Bush. A typical irritant is Bush's endorslement of the presidential AIDS commission report, which opposed discrimination against AIDS patients in federal employment.

What serves as a natural source of disunity is Bush's choice of a running mate. If he picks Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas or Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, he could further alienate the conservatives.

Former White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker has earned mixed reviews as another possible running mate. Many say he brings nothing to the ticket. His pro-choice leanings and his advocacy of the Panama Canal treaty in the 1970s are baggage the Republicans don't need.

At least two names are mentioned by conservatives as Bush's best options — Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois. Kemp is said to be a viable vice presidential pick for the same reason that Dukakis picked Lloyd Bentsen — opposites attract voters. Bentsen satisfies the moderate Democrats who think Dukakis is too liberal. Kemp would please the conservative Republicans who think Bush has sold out.

Hyde would bring to the ticket the Midwest appeal that Dukakis lost when he cast off John Glenn as a running mate. Hyde also has blue-collar and Bible-belt appeal.

Kansas Sen. Robert Dole has been touted as the Midwest connection that Bush needs. Dole couldn't financially sustain his presidential campaign, but the polls during the primary showed him to be a strong opponent against Dukakis. His hot exchanges with Bush, however, hurt his chances of being chosen for the ticket.

The powerful role of Jesse Jackson, who ignited the Democratic Convention, may turn out to be a plus for Bush. If Bush wins in November, says Howard Phillips of the Conservative Caucus, it's not because people are wild about Bush, but because they are afraid of the Jackson-type policies that have charmed the Democratic Party.

Sequel to name game asks ideas

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

More on the "Dump The Steer" campaign — or The Name Game, Part II:

Reaction to date to my semi-humorous attempt to change the Big Spring High School mascot has been surprisingly mild. I somewhat expected a riotous mob to storm the Herald, demanding my head and/or various other parts of my body.

How dare you, Reagan!! The Steer has been the vaunted mascot of dear ol' BSHS for eons; through good or bad, sickness or health, wars and famine, pestilence or wealth — and you want to change it? What are you; stupid as well as ugly?

Why, we'd rather cut off our very limbs than part with our beloved Steer, you . . . you . . . slimy, no-good, Commie pervert!!

That, however, hasn't been the case.

To be sure, I have had several responses, but there's been nary a bomb or death threat among them. In fact, some of them have been supportive about my idea to change my alma mater's mascot.

This is not to say they cared for my suggested replacement one whit.

Granted, Reagan, an emasculated bull isn't the manliest symbol BSHS could have, but Lords of Death? Boy, are you growing mushrooms in your back yard or something?

For one thing, Steve-o, if we change the name to Lords of Death, we can kiss the District Sportsmanship Award goodbye. For another, if we have some fool running around in a death's-head and swinging a scythe, people might get the wrong idea.

I mean, before you know it, Dan Rather will be down here doing an expose on the blood-thirsty maniacs at Big Spring, and how it's all because of the water or because they were neglected as babies or Lord knows what — and that we don't need, Reagan.

So, for Pete's sake, boy, calm down!

OK, OK. I get the message.

But other than that, we agree with you, Steve — but you missed one thing.

What's that?

The girls' teams, Reagan. They're called the Lady Steers. Now, just what the heck is a Lady Steer, huh?

I dunno, what?

We don't know, either! There's no such thing as a female steer! It's an oxymoron. You do know what an oxymoron is, don't you?

Yes, I do — it's a combination of contradictory words, like liberal Republicans. I did a column on that once, you know.

Yeah, we know, but we'll talk about that later. The point we're trying to make is this: BSHS needs a new mascot, sure, but not something so macabre as Lords of Death. We need something that's virile without being bizarre.

Any suggestions?

We're glad you asked. We put it to a vote and the consensus was that something along the lines of Devil-Dogs would fit the bill nicely, and besides . . .

Wait, wait, wait! This has gone far enough. There has to be some sane way to go about this name change business.

Gadzooks! I think I have it! We're a democracy, aren't we? And we're having an election this year, right? So, what better way to choose a new mascot than by having a vote on the issue?

You might have something there, Reagan.

You're darn right I do. Readers, it's in your hands now. I need all of you devoted Beyond The Realm readers (Realmies?) to come to my rescue.

Simply put: Do we dump the Steer and, if we do, what do we put in its place? Results will be published in this space at a later date, along with excerpts that a panel of judges (me and whoever else I can pull into this cock-eyed scheme) deems worthy of publication.

Address your opinions to Dump The Steer Poll, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas, 79720. Please limit your opinions to less than 200 words (after all, I have other work to do, folks).

Oh, and one more thing — keep it clean, huh?

Nation suffers heat wave

By THEASA TUOHY
Associated Press Writer

Football coaches cut back on training, utilities from Maine to Virginia cut back on power, and the homeless sought shelter in air-conditioned buildings as record high temperatures were set in 26 cities.

Grain and soybean futures posted their strongest gains in a week Monday in response to predictions that crops in the drought-weary Corn Belt would bake for most of this week.

In New York City, Monday's record 97 degrees caused Consolidated Edison to impose a brownout on at least 250,000 tenants, leaving them without air conditioning and no way out — elevators to their high-rise homes were shut down.

At least 10,000 other tenants suffered a blackout, scores of businesses without power had to close and two hospitals voluntarily switched to backup power.

Monday's record high temperatures for the date included 104 degrees in Des Moines, Iowa, breaking a 102-year-old mark by two degrees; 97 in Louisville, Ky., and Wilmington, Del., respectively breaking 114-year-old and 93-year-old records by a degree.

All 48 contiguous states had temperatures of 87 degrees or higher and 100-degree temperatures were registered in 22 states and the District of Columbia, the National Weather Serivce said.

Today's forecast called for much of the same, with temperatures above normal from central New England across Georgia and west through the Plains.

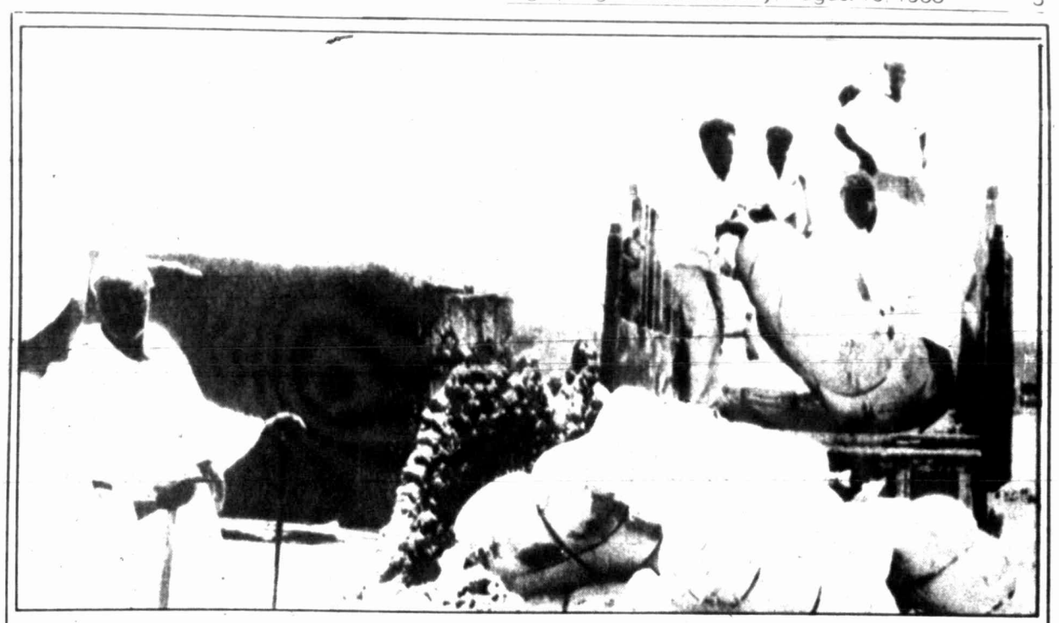

In Pierre, S.D., where the nation's record high temperature was a staggering 114 degrees Monday, a big concern was for livestock. With the heat expected to continue today, the weather service's livestock safety index was predicted to reach the emergency category across most of the state through this evening.

In New Hampshire, where air-conditioners have been sold out across the state for a month, ice skating spelled relief. Concord's Recreation and Parks Department is giving residents a chance to get back into the cold tonight by offering free ice skating.

The Salvation Army in Atlantic City, N.J., which runs an overnight shelter for the homeless, said they have started to allow people to stay during daytime hours because of the heat.

"We've had an increase in the number of people we're serving this summer," Cadet Scott Kelly said. "Normally summer is our slow time but we've been pretty busy."

At least 10 elderly residents with heat-related complaints had to be carried down from New York City high-rises by police and paramedics, but most of the tenants seemed to have concerns for food spoiling in rapidly defrosting refrigerators.

Highway fight results in death

VELVA, N.D. (AP) — Twins who were fighting on a darkened highway were hit by a car, killing one of the brothers and leaving the other in critical condition, authorities said.

The state Highway Patrol said Martin and Roger Baluski, 24, were fighting on State Highway 41 just south of Velva when they were hit by a southbound car Sunday night.

The Baluskis, who were riding together in a pickup truck, stopped the vehicle and turned off its lights before the scuffle began, said Patrol Capt. Doyle Schultz.

Martin Baluski was killed, Schultz said. Roger Baluski was listed in critical condition late Monday at St. Alexius Medical Center in Bismarck, said Mike Mabin, a hospital spokesman.

The patrolman did not know what the men were arguing about.

The driver of the car was not hurt and summoned authorities to the scene, Schultz said.

Baptist split prompts new church

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The leader of a breakaway Baptist church says his new congregation is the first of what will be a growing split between moderate and fundamentalist Southern Baptists.

"We have taken the first step," the Rev. Bill Jenkins said. "We are the first church aligned with the Southern Baptist Alliance that is not a part of the Southern Baptist Convention."

Alan Neely, executive director of the Southern Baptist Alliance and a professor at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, N.C., also said Jenkins may be the first U.S. case of a pastor making a public break because of recent denominational events.

The Southern Baptist Alliance is a national group made up primarily of moderate Baptists. Moderate members have dissented publicly against the denomination's fundamentalist leaders. The Southern Baptist Convention is the denominational unit that manages the educational and missions programs of about 36,000 churches. It is the nation's largest Protestant denomination and has an estimated 15 million members.

Jenkins resigned as pastor of Biloxi's Bay Vista Baptist Church last month because of policy disagreements with Southern Baptist Convention leadership.

He said about a dozen Southern Baptist families met for services in a rented Gulfport hall last week.

State jury subpoenas Brawley

NEW YORK (AP) — A special state grand jury has voted to subpoena Tawana Brawley, the black teen-ager who says she was raped by whites but refuses to cooperate with an investigation, a newspaper reported today.

The vote, against the advice of Attorney General Robert Abrams, was taken last week in Poughkeepsie but was not announced, said The New York Times.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, a Brawley family spokesman, said Miss Brawley will continue her refusal to cooperate with the grand jury.

"We may decide to let her be serviced (with a subpoena) and then fight," Sharpton said, adding that he would hold a news conference today to discuss Brawley family options.

Miss Brawley is out-of-state with her mother, Glenda Brawley, who was subpoenaed but refused to testify, causing her to be sentenced to 30 days in jail. She has avoided jail by first staying in churches and later leaving the state.

Baby girl born after mother shot

FAIRMONT, W.Va. (AP) — A baby girl was delivered alive after her 8½-month pregnant mother was shot and killed in front of the police station by her boyfriend, who police said later shot himself to death.

"It's just a miracle that the baby is alive. It's just amazing," a nursing supervisor said Monday night at Fairmont General Hospital, where the baby was delivered by Caesarean section.

The baby was in critical condition early today.

The 33-year-old mother, Sandra Johnson, was shot five times Monday afternoon by Zachary Lewis as she sat in her car, police said. The Fairmont woman was shot in front of her teen-age daughter, sister and niece, who were in the back seat, police said.

Lewis, 34, of Barrackville, was believed to be the father of the baby, said Police Lt. Ted Offutt.

The baby was in critical condition, a Ruby Memorial nursing supervisor said.

Surprise

NEW ORLEANS — President Reagan and wife Nancy share a laugh after he made a surprise appearance at the Republican National Convention's tribute to Mrs. Reagan Monday.

GOP convention sparks romance

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It wasn't exactly love at first sight. They are, after all, both conservatives.

But what started as rhetoric blossomed into romance for Alvin Kukuk, a Robertson delegate, and Janet Rungtranont, who was for Kemp.

They met following a Michigan Republican convention, exchanged phone numbers at a delegates' meeting, and courted at a Conservative Union conference. What better place to pop the question, Kukak thought, than at the biggest shindig of them all, the Republican National Convention?

The mingling of love and politics in New Orleans seemed especially fitting to Kukuk, inspired as he was by the nation's first married vice presidential prospects, Bob and Elizabeth Dole.

And so it came to pass, on a Mississippi riverboat, with jazz music playing softly in the background and the entire Michigan delegation on board, that Kukuk, a 51-year-old township supervisor, picked Rungtranont, a 45-year-old college registrar, to be his running mate.

The morning after the big night, they strolled through the Superdome in matching Styrofoam campaign hats. There was no shortage of people taking the same walk in the same hats, but somehow, you just couldn't miss them as they floated along bumping into the walls, each of them displaying a yard-and-a-half of teeth.

"When you get to be 51, you're so set in your ways," said Kukak, who's been single for 20 years. "It gets harder and harder to find someone who'll put up with you."

"When you get to be 45, the odds of finding someone who's right for you diminish greatly," said his fiancee. "I never thought I'd find the right man."

They first met at a seafood restaurant, then again at a delegates' meeting, where they arranged to attend the conservative conference. By this point, Rungtranont's interest was no longer purely platonic. "I probably wouldn't have driven down to Detroit if I hadn't been getting interested," she said.

After the conference, they had dinner. They talked mostly of politics.

She had a feeling the proposal was coming. "He dropped some pretty broad hints," she said. The "hints" included telling a reporter on board the boat that "something big might happen tonight."

Something did. Al took Janet to a quiet corner and presented her with a gold-and-diamond engagement ring. The rest of the delegation was off listening to the jazz musicians. "All we heard was the flutter of the wind and the whoosh of the water," he said.

That and the pitter-pat of their hearts.

Zoo director denies zoo hunger

BEIJING (AP) — The director of the country's largest zoo denies a Chinese newspaper report that inflation has stopped his tigers from eating live chicken and his elephants from munching bananas.

Beijing Zoo director Feng Youlian was quoted in Tuesday's edition of the Guangming Daily as saying his animals have "never known hunger."

He criticized an Aug. 8 report in the official, English-language China Daily, that said the 3,000 animals, birds and fish at the zoo have fallen on lean days because of inadequate funding and sharp rises in food prices.

Bus plunge proves fatal for 18

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — At least 16 passengers were killed and 21 injured today when a bus plunged into a 300-foot ravine in the western state of Maharashtra, the United News of India reported.

The news agency said the accident occurred on a highway near the city of Pune, 75 miles southwest of the state capital, Bombay.

The state-owned bus started from Bombay on Monday on a trip to the district of Sangli, UNI said. Sixty two passengers were on board.

The dead included the driver of the bus, UNI said.

Curfew defied, Palestinian killed

BUREIJ, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Palestinian youths defied a curfew confining 650,000 Gaza Strip residents to their homes, dashing out from behind street corners to shout "We want a state!" and hurl stones at Israeli troops.

Two Palestinians were wounded in Gaza Strip protests Monday, while in the occupied West Bank troops fatally shot a Palestinian and wounded another.

Palestinians and Israeli officials traced the protests to the arson deaths of three Gaza workers who were trapped in a shed set on fire near Tel Aviv last week. Police said Jewish extremists may have been involved.

The third worker, a 34-year-old man, died early today of his wounds, Israel army radio reported.

In annexed East Jerusalem, Arabs threw rocks at policemen and an Israeli bus near the walled Old City, slightly injuring three American tourists and two policemen, police and hospital officials said.

Burma frees 51 demonstrators

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Authorities in Burma today released 51 people who were arrested during last week's anti-government demonstrations in the capital of Rangoon, state-run Radio Rangoon said.

Student groups meanwhile distributed leaflets in Rangoon calling for street demonstrations Wednesday to demand an end to 26 years of authoritarian rule, diplomats and journalists said.

Radio Rangoon said of those detained on Aug. 8-9, 51 were freed from Insein Prison and handed over to parents and guardians. The broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, said 47 of those released were students.

It did not identify those freed. Because of the dates given, it was doubtful that among those released were Burma's leading dissident, Aung Gyi, and the Burmese correspondent of The Associated Press, Sein Win. The two were among 10 people detained July 29-30.

Lawyer says Mandela has TB

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Jailed black nationalist Nelson Mandela has tuberculosis, his lawyer said today after visiting the African National Congress leader at a hospital.

Ismail Ayob, the lawyer, said Mandela's family was urging President P.W. Botha to allow an independent medical examination of the 70-year-old prisoner, South Africa's best-known black leader.

Calls for Mandela's release have intensified since he was transferred Friday from Cape Town's Pollsmoor Prison to nearby Tygerberg Hospital. The ANC accused prison officials of "callous neglect" in responding to Mandela's ill health prior to the hospitalization.

Doctors say Mandela has an imflamed left lung and is in satisfactory condition following removal of a drainage tube from the lung. They have not confirmed publicly that Mandela has tuberculosis, but Ayob said doctors confirmed the diagnosis during his visit today.

Fires: Fight continues

By the Associated Press

Firefighters today moved toward reopening the west entrance of Yellowstone National Park, where blazes involved more than 240,000 acres, and battled a wind-whipped forest fire in Montana to keep it from some evacuated homes.

Fires also continued to char parts of Colorado, Utah, Oregon and Idaho.

"It's kind of a helpless situation," fire information officer Jerry Chapman said in Montana.

At Lame Deer, Mont., a rash of thunderstorms with winds up to 50 mph hit the fire on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation on Monday night, causing the blaze to rush three to four miles northward in a few hours, Chapman said.

"It just blew (the fire) in about every direction imaginable," he said.

Chapman said pumpers were stationed at homes near Lame Deer and at other homes near the fire.

At Yellowstone, firefighters today planned to use a special aircraft known as a "flying fishbowl" to get a good look at the fires.

The British-built aircraft has a range of vision of 270 degrees vertically and 340 degrees horizontally.

Park spokeswoman Amy Vanderbilt said officials hoped to open the two roads today, a day after they were closed by a 53,000-acre fire. Winds gusting to 40 mph pushed the fire toward the road to the Old Faithful geyser area.

In Colorado, a 50-acre brush fire started by an errant bullet at Stone Canyon was contained Monday night as about 50 firefighters battled the blaze.

The fire that had threatened a residential area and Indian burial ground. Jim Busse, 44, of Boulder, said he and his 17-year-old son, Bryan, were target shooting on his land when a bullet from his .22-caliber pistol ricocheted off a rock, sparking the blaze.

Busse and his son tried to put out the blaze with shovels but failed.

Woman praises McDonald's

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: All airport terminals, bus and train depots are required by law to have ramps for wheelchairs, but the lavatories in planes, buses and trains cannot accommodate people in wheelchairs!

Knowing this, four members of our family (we are all retired) decided to see America by car. My husband is wheelchair-bound. Ted has had both legs amputated above the knee, but he's able to transfer himself from wheelchair to commode (unaided) if he can just get through the bathroom door. We stayed in a brand-new motel in Las Vegas, but the facilities to accommodate the handicapped were not yet completed. After hearing our problem, the manager had the bathroom door removed for us. Most motel builders would do an enormous favor for people in wheelchairs if they would just add six inches to the width of the bathroom doors.

However, the answer to all our eating problems from Florida to California was McDonald's. We knew that Ted would be able to get into the bathroom in any McDonald's in the country, so we had breakfast, lunch and dinner at a McDonald's every day!

Please print this, Abby. I believe in giving credit where it is due. You may use my name, and I hope you do.

EILEEN LOFF,
GEORGETOWN, FLA.

DEAR EILEEN: So do I. Here's your letter.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 14 years old, and I guess I'm physically mature for my age. Well, the other day I brought a summer dress home. It was like the ones they wear in Hawaiian movies — strapless with a wraparound skirt.

My problem is my mother. She won't let me wear it in public. She says it wasn't made for a 14-year-old. I think she is being old-fashioned and outdated. Do you think she's right, or do you think she should be more modern and open-minded, and let me wear it in public?

She told me to write to Dear Abby and whatever you say goes.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

DEAR TIMES: I agree with your mother. Times have changed, but the standards of appropriate attire for 14-year-old girls have not. Trust your mother's judgment, honey. She will never steer you wrong.

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful 1-year-old son. His father ("Boyd") and I were high school sweethearts — but never married. We broke up after Greg was born. Boyd went into the Army right after he finished high school.

I have met a wonderful man ("Chuck") and we plan to marry soon. I gave Greg his father's last name because I thought it was the right thing to do. Although Boyd pays child support, he never calls or sends his son a card at Christmas time or his birthday. The boy does not even know this man.

Chuck is crazy about Greg and wants more than anything in the world to adopt him. Boyd says, "No way — he is my son."

Abby, how can a man be so cruel and mean? He wants nothing to do with his son, but doesn't want another man to have anything to do with him either. I need your advice.

CALIFORNIA QUESTION

DEAR CALIFORNIA Q: The state of California will very likely grant adoption under these circumstances after you and Chuck are married. So go ahead with what I hope will be happy a life

Smith installed as governor

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

Billy T. Smith, Big Spring, was installed as governor of the Texas-Oklahoma District of the Kiwanis International Saturday at the Lubbock Civic Center.

Smith — who joined the Big Spring Kiwanis Club Feb. 16, 1968 — has a 20-year perfect attendance record.

He served as secretary/treasurer, a position he has held for the past 17 years; was distinguished lieutenant governor, Division 22 — which includes the area from Snyder to Alpine — in 1978-79; and was honored by his club as Kiwanian of the year in 1979 and again in 1985.

Smith has served on the the Membership Roundup Committee, and the Governor's Special Project for the past 10 years; was associated with the new club building and KIARS; was trustee of the Texas-Oklahoma District Foundation; and served on the board of directors of the Past Lt. Governors Association.

He has attended 11 International Kiwanis Conventions, and 13 Texas-Oklahoma District Conventions.

Smith, past governor-elect, is a member of First Baptist Church, where he serves as a deacon, past chairman of deacons, church treasurer, and taught Sunday School for 35 years.

He served nine years on the board of trustees for the University of Mary Hardin Baylor, Belton and was a member and chairman of the Howard County Tax Appraisal Board from 1979 to 1987. He serves as treasurer of the Big Spring Baptist Association, a position he assumed in 1965.

As governor, Smith said he and his wife, Margaret, will make one official visit to all 41 divisions in Texas and Oklahoma; they will attend three district-wide meetings; and will attend the International meeting in Indianapolis, Ind. in September.

BILLY T. SMITH

Smith will oversee the 500 clubs in 41 divisions, which has a membership of 17,000, including the 7,000 women who have joined Kiwanis since 1987 when the club voted to accept women as members.

"Most of our wives don't belong to the club — but they're vitally involved in everything we do," Smith said.

In January the Smiths will attend the meeting of Regional Governors in Salt Lake City, Utah; and will attend the International Covnention, Orlando, Fla.

Smith said his personal goals are: To support at least one new needed project in each club; to increase membership; and to see that there is more friendship among members.

After owning and operating an accounting practice for more than 20 years, the Smiths are both retired. They will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Oct. 15.

If anyone is interested in joining the Kiwanis, contact Smith at 267-6479.

Anniversary

Elvis fans gather at Graceland

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley's ever-faithful fans filed slowly past his grave in a candlelight procession, and sent stands of flowers shaped like guitars and hearts to mark today's 11th anniversary of his death.

"Elvis, we miss you tonight. We will love you today, tomorrow and forever," June Klein of North Lewisburg, Ohio, said during a memorial program that began a late-night procession past the singer's grave at his Graceland mansion.

The stands of flowers lined a walk beside the grave. Many of the dozens of Elvis fan clubs around the country traditionally schedule their floral arrangements to arrive on Aug. 16, the day Presley died.

The procession, which began at 10:30 p.m. Monday, was expected to draw more than 5,000 participants. Police estimated a crowd of 3,000 at the Graceland gates waiting for the affair to get under way.

Laurie Cousins of Winnipeg, Canada, arrived at the gates at noon Monday to be first in line. She said the long, hot wait in the 99-degree temperature was worth it.

ELVIS PRESLEY

"It's an honor to be first, and to look back and see all those candles lit is just unbelievable," she said.

Also in the crowd were Ray and Angela Campione of New York, and their 5-year-old son, Paul Elvis Campione, who wore a white, bejeweled jumpsuit and struck Elvis poses to the delight of the other fans.

Asked why he's an Elvis fan, the child replied, "He's a nice man, and I like his music and he gives to the poor children."

Presley died of heart disease at Graceland in 1977, and the faithful return by the hundreds each year to mark the anniversary.

The graveside procession is the largest event of a nine-day celebration called "Elvis International Tribute Week," organized and promoted by managers of Graceland. More than 35,000 people are expected to tour Graceland during the week.

With Elvis recordings playing in the background, the fans queued up to touch candles to a torch lighted by an eternal flame and to walk single file up a winding, 200-yard driveway past Presley's grave beside the Graceland swimming pool.

"It helps keep his memory alive," said Gene Carothers of Gnadenhutten, Ohio, who sported an Elvis pompadour and a 6-inch wide leather belt with dangling loops of chain.

David and Goliath?

SAN DIEGO — A catamaran leased by the New Zealand America's Cup Challenge passes the the giant sloop New Zealand off Point Loma during trials recently. New Zealand will race Stars and Stripes, the U.S. defender similar in design to the catamaran, for the America's Cup next month.

At 40, Plunkett's finally at end of long NFL road

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Ten years ago, the San Francisco 49ers released quarterback Jim Plunkett, a move which seemed to signal the end of the 1970 Heisman Trophy winner's NFL career.

What it turned out to be was a beginning. The real end came Monday when Plunkett, at 40 the NFL's oldest player, was released by the Los Angeles Raiders.

After being let go by the 49ers, Plunkett was picked up by the Raiders in September 1978. He was selected the NFL's Comeback Player of the Year in 1980 and was named the Super Bowl MVP for his performance in the Raiders' 27-10 victory over Philadelphia in January 1981.

Three years later, he was at the controls when the Raiders overpowered the Washington Redskins 38-9 in the Super Bowl.

"If history books are written, certainly Jim Plunkett will be a part of the history of the National Football League, the great history," said Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner. "I think he has to be one of the great comeback stories of our time, at least the last three decades."

Davis said Plunkett will leave with "a lot of great memories. We're proud of him, proud for him and proud he could be associated with us."

Plunkett learned of his release after breakfast Monday when first-year Coach Mike Shanahan, nearly five years his junior, told the quarterback that he didn't fit into the team's plans.

"Jim Plunkett was one of the greatest players of all time," Shanahan said. "There aren't enough adjectives to describe what he has accomplished and meant for this organization. He's what I consider a prime example of what I would call a 'man's man.'"

Plunkett played in his last official game for the Raiders in December 1986 when, despite a torn rotator cuff, he finished the season as the first-string quarterback.

He had surgery on his throwing arm in February 1987 and didn't play last season, spending what turned out to be the last of his 17 NFL seasons on injured reserve.

Plunkett got his last chance to make the Raiders in the second half of Saturday's 27-17 preseason loss to Dallas, but he appeared tentative and uncomfortable in the club's new offense.

He completed eight of 19 passes for 80 yards with one interception and a long gain of 18 yards. But the Raiders gained only 97 yards in the half and didn't score.

"This was no big shock," Plunkett said, showing little emotion. "I just didn't think it would be this quick. It's unfortunate, because I really wanted to be a part of this club."

Asked if he might find a job with another team, Plunkett laughed and said, "I don't think there's too much demand for 40-year-old quarterbacks."

Plunkett didn't play in the Raiders' preseason opener, a 24-10 loss to San Francisco.

"Jim was not going to be in our number one or our number two quarterback rotation," Shanahan said. "Therefore, we were going to go in another direction.

"Jim came into camp in excellent shape, as good as you can possibly ask (in terms of) his endurance and arm strength. But anytime you're in a camp that throws as much as we do, it's hard to maintain the velocity that you have at a younger age. He lost a little zip on the football, and that was one of the reasons he will not work in our number one or number two rotation."

Plunkett completed 1,943 of 3,701 attempts for 25,882 yards and 164 touchdowns, with 198 interceptions. He quarterbacked the Raiders to a 38-19 record in 57 regular-season starts and an 8-2 mark in postseason games.

"Obviously, I would rather be here. I just came to give it another shot," Plunkett said.

"But I have no regrets about my 10 years here. They were a lot better than my first seven (five at New England and two at San Francisco)."

Plunkett was the first man picked in the 1971 NFL draft by New England after winning the Heisman Trophy during his senior year at Stanford. He was traded to San Francisco after the 1975 season.

The Raiders' plans for 1988, not yet revealed by Shanahan, seemed to call for three quarterbacks, with Steve Beuerlein and Vince Evans being the top two. It has been speculated often since the end of the 1987 season that the team would trade for another quarterback.

Astros mixing old, new faces in drive

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros are relying on a combination of young players and some old faces in the National League West pennant race.

Nolan Ryan combined with Danny Darwin to scatter 11 hits and Terry Puhl drove in two insurance runs to lead the Astros to a 7-3 victory over the San Diego Padres Monday night.

Gerald Young and Glenn Davis, two of the younger players, also played key roles in the victory.

Ryan, a 21-year veteran and baseball's all-time strikeout leader, won his 270th game to tie Burleigh Grimes for 26th on the all-time list.

An overpowering fastball and sharp-breaking curve have been Ryan's trademarks throughout his career, and even when neither is quite right, his experience is often enough to see him through.

"Nolan pitched a great game," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "We needed a good outing from him."

Ryan struck out just two batters in his seven innings of work and the Padres were able to compile three runs on nine hits. But when the big pitch had to be made, Ryan knew just what to do.

"He made the pitches he had to make," said San Diego right fielder Tony Gwynn, who collected three hits and two RBI off Ryan. "That's the mark of a veteran pitcher."

"We got beat by a pretty good pitcher," San Diego Manager Jack McKeon said. "He can intimidate you with his experience and know how."

The victory snapped Ryan's personal three-game losing streak and improved his record to 9-10.

"My job is to keep us in ball games," Ryan said. "We've been flat for the past week. But we got some key hits and we hadn't been doing that.

"Puhl is swinging the bat as good as ever. As far as I'm concerned, he's as good as anybody in the league right now."

Puhl, who has hit in 34 of his past 48 games and .388 over the last week, went 2-for-3 and added a two-run single to cap a four-run seventh and break a 3-3 tie.

"We have to score some runs for our pitching staff," said Puhl. "Believe me, we'll win a lot of games if we score seven runs."

Puhl, a 12-year veteran with the Astros, figured in all of Houston's scoring.

Puhl walked with two out in the bottom of the first before Davis unloaded his 23rd home run of the season into the left-field seats to give the Astros a 2-1 lead.

The Padres, who had taken a 1-0 advantage in the first after Roberto Alomar tripled and scored on Tony Gwynn's infield hit, regained the lead, 3-2,in the third on Gwynn's run-scoring grounder to first and Keith Moreland's single to left.

But Puhl rallied the Astros again, this time with a triple to right off starter Andy Hawkins, 10-10, to lead off Houston's fourth.

Davis, who entered the game 0-11 in the four-game series with the Padres, lined a sacrifice fly to right to tie the score.

Bruno predicts he'll 'murder' Tyson

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WEMBLEY, England — In boxing terms, Frank Bruno's challenge to heavyweight champion Mike Tyson might be considered a classic David and Goliath confrontation. In this case, however, David is four inches taller and about 15 pounds heavier than Goliath.

"I know I have a lot of knockers but I know my capabilities," the 6-foot-3 Bruno said Monday during his first news conference since the Oct. 8 fight against Tyson was announced. "I have been watching videos of Tyson and I have spotted quite a few weaknesses."

The fight is to take place at Wembley Stadium, and a capacity crowd of 60,000 is expected. Gate receipts are estimated at $7.65 million, making the fight Britain's most lucrative sporting event.

During a visit on Monday to Cleveland, Tyson said he had firmly committed to the fight, although it appeared only the purse amount was in question.

Bruno, who makes up for suspect mobility with a powerful knockout punch, has halted 29 of his 30 victims. His two defeats were by knockout against Tim Witherspoon, who stopped him in 11 rounds two years ago in a previous world title bid, and James "Bonecrusher" Smith.

Bruno said he had improved considerably since the defeats and had found the force to take away Tyson's titles.

"People are making Tyson sound like a monster," Bruno said. "But no man is unbeatable and I am a stone (14 pounds) heavier than him. This fight is all about power."

Bruno's handlers were just as excited about the fight, which took several months to nail down after a series of delays and cancellations.

"In no way will Frank Bruno be a lamb to the slaughter," John Morris, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, said. "It is definitely not outside the bounds of possibility that we could have the biggest boxing upset of all time here."

Terry Lawless, Bruno's manager who has guided four of the challenger's countrymen to world titles, said his man was not simply fighting for the money. Reports have estimated that Bruno will receive $1.7 million. Tyson is expected to gross a minimum of $4 million.

"It would be very easy for any fighter to go in and take the money against Tyson," Lawless said. "But Frank has desperately wanted to fight Tyson since they first met. I have never known anyone so desperate to fight someone. It's a pride fight for Frank."

Bruno, at ringside to watch Tyson's last fight, a 91-second demolition of previously unbeaten Michael Spinks in June, insisted he would not be going the same way.

"He's going to get murdered, not me," Bruno said.

The Briton said he had the advantage of having sparred with Tyson several years ago.

"I'm the only one who's actually been in the ring with him. All his other opponents had only watched him on TV," Bruno said. "He doesn't scare me."

Bruno, rated the No. 1 challenger by both the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association, will not have fought for a year when he steps into the ring at midnight local time to face one of the most awesome champions in boxing history.

Bruno said he didn't want to get involved in too much pre-fight hype, and preferred to just get on with the job.
