Reagan preparing for talks with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, believing he has strengthened his economic and military bargaining power, is preparing for "some serious negotiations with the Soviets," administration officials say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not to be named, said Reagan's recent decisions to add Soviet specialist Jack F. Matlock Jr. and arms control specialist Ronald F. Lehman to the National Security Council staff "point to more White House involvement in the U.S.-Soviet relations area."

The president, one official said, is anxious to build on the new strength he perceives in the wake of his recent congressional victory that won money for the MX missile, the growing signs of economic recovery and statements of unity from the Western allies at the Williamsburg summit.

"He believes we now have the economic and military strength for some serious negotiations with the Soviets across the board," the official said.

He noted the first sign of that may come later this week when Reagan decides how he will modify the U.S. negotiating position for the resumption of the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) with the Soviets. Reagan was said to have studied various negotiating options while at Camp David for a long weekend.

After Reagan and his wife returned from the Maryland mountaintop retreat, they drove to the suburban home of Secretary of State and Mrs. George P. Shultz for a private dinner.

The prevailing view in the administration, one source said, is that the United States has improved its leverage at the negotiating table with its recent successes and that the time has come to seek concessions from the Soviets on a variety of arms control and economic issues.

But the official made it clear he was talking about a long-range plan, perhaps extending into a second Reagan term, should the president seek re-election.

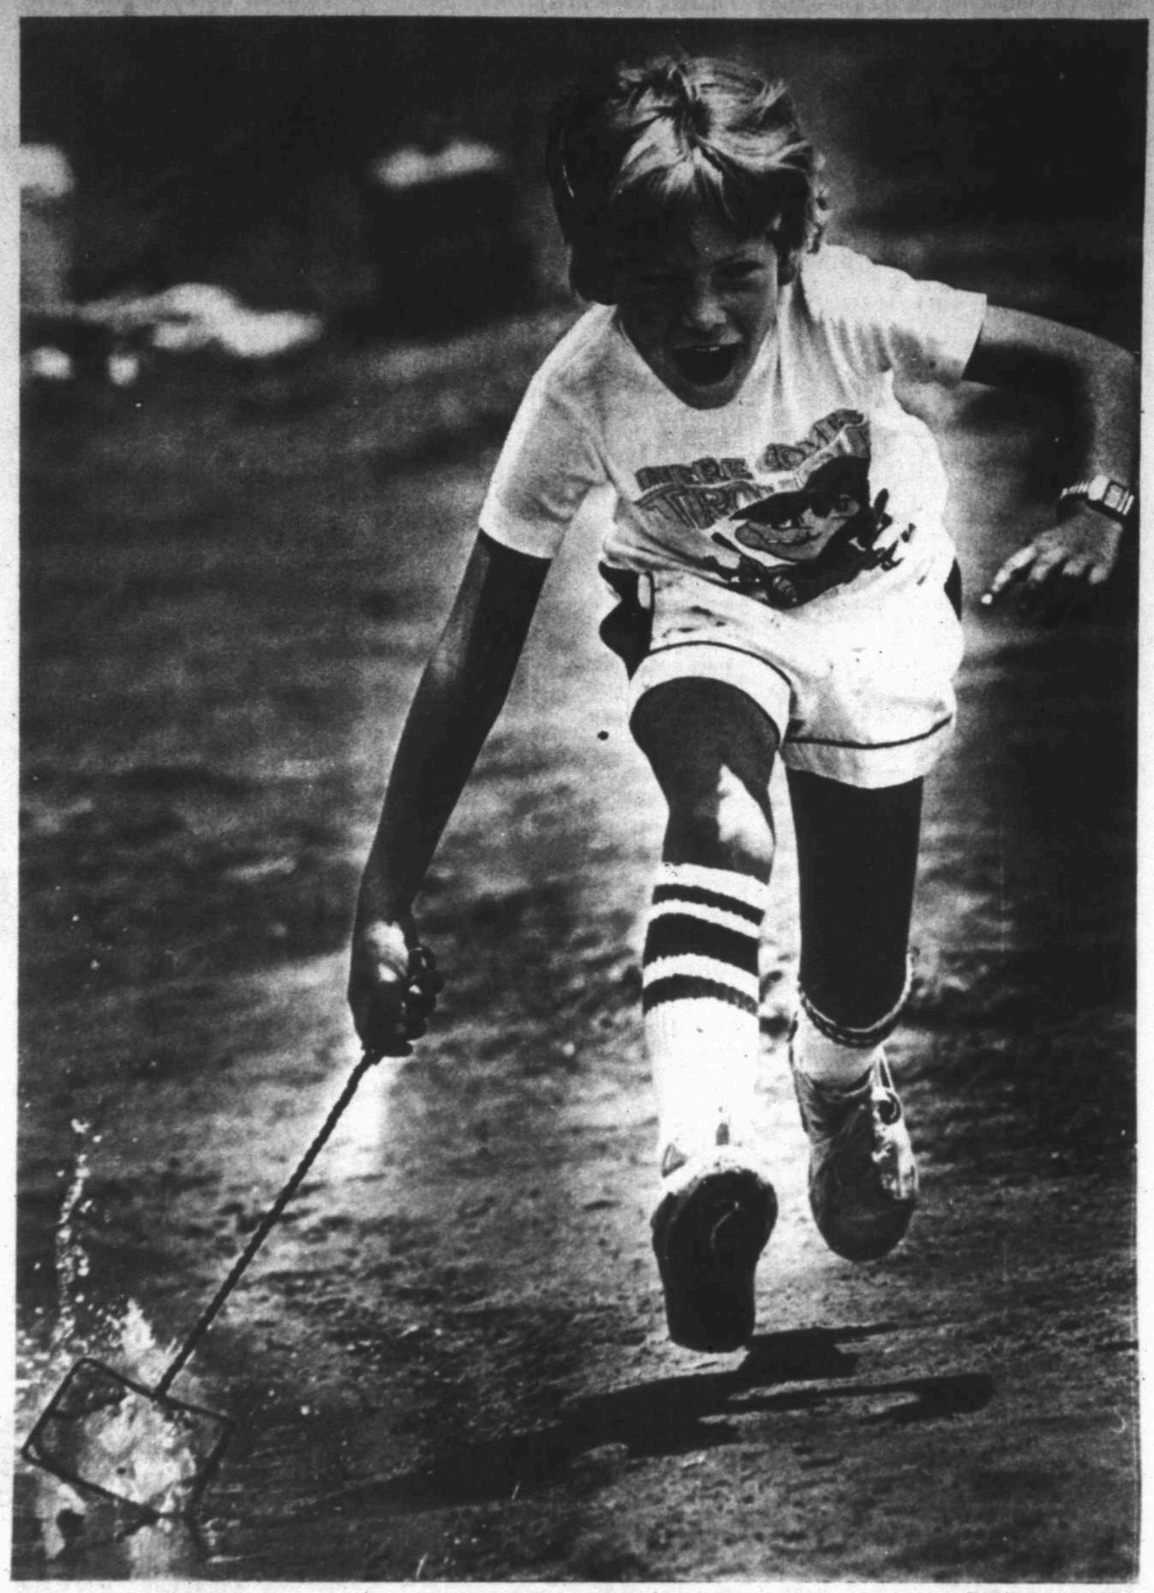

Reagan came into office saying the United States needed to build its strategic nuclear forces in order to negotiate from a position of strength, the official recalled, and the president now believes he has accomplished that. He cited Reagan's decision to resume production of the B-1 bomber, press development of the Trident nuclear submarine and missile system and get congressional approval for the MX.

The appointment of Matlock, the present U.S. ambassador to Czechoslovakia who has devoted much of his career to Soviet and East European affairs, as senior director of European and Soviet affairs on the NSC staff was disclosed over the weekend, although no formal announcement has been made. The White House announced last week that Lehman, a former deputy assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, had been named senior director for defense programs and arms control.

The appointments, one source said, "are an indication of the level of interest (national security affairs advisor William P.) Clark and the president will be giving to the U.S.-Soviet policy area."

Although the State Department continues to play an active role, the buildup of people on the NSC staff is one of the first moves toward a re-emphasis on U.S.-Soviet issues in coming months, the officials said.

Mourners honor sheriff slain in shootout with Kahl

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark. (AP) — Mourners honored a sheriff killed while trying to apprehend tax protester Gordon Kahl, as North Dakota authorities searched for people who helped hide the militant fugitive.

A man tentatively identified as Kahl was killed along with Sheriff Gene Matthews in a gun battle Friday night at a remote farmhouse in northeastern Arkansas.

Kahl, 63, was wanted in the slayings of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota four months ago. He was a member of a militant, survivalist, anti-tax group called Posse Comitatus and was on probation for a 1977 conviction for failure to file federal income tax forms.

Matthews, who was buried Sunday, was the first officer to enter the farmhouse and the only one of 28 officers to be shot. He was wounded in the chest and died three hours later from a loss of blood, the state medical examiner said Saturday.

The body believed to be Kahl has not been identified positively because it was badly burned when the munitions-filled house caught fire during the gun battle. Authorities were waiting for the arrival of his dental records.

Tentative identification was made based on Kahl's physical description, including surgical scars and a bullet fragment found in a hip, said Arkansas state medical examiner Dr. Fahmy Malak.

Malak said after autopsies on Matthews and Kahl on Saturday that there is a "great probability" that the body was Kahl's.

"I think the sheriff shot Kahl and Kahl shot the sheriff," FBI Agent Ray McElhaney of Little Rock said Saturday.

More than 500 people crowded a small Methodist church on Sunday at the funeral for Matthews, 37, of Walnut Ridge.

Trooper Mike Coy of the Arkansas State Police was one of 200 law enforcement officers who attended Matthews' funeral. "He was not afraid to pay the price," Coy said.

PDAP joins United Way

United Way agencies total 22

The announced admission Monday of Palmer Drug Abuse Program into United Way of Midland fulfilled a funding need, PDAP executive director Bob Savage said at a news conference.

"It was rather timely, because we saw the long-range difficulties of funding the program," he noted. "(The program) is ever-growing and it's about tripled in the last four years. We pretty much figure we've leveled out in growth, but just perpetuating the program (created a need for) some additional assistance, since we don't take any state or federal funds."

"(The program) is ever-growing and it's about tripled in the last four years. We pretty much figure we've leveled out in growth, but just perpetuating the program (created a need for) some additional assistance, since we don't take any state or federal funds."

Paul Rea, United Way board member, said United Way officials "feel that the Palmer Drug abuse program is one of the outstanding programs in this area."

A study undertaken last year explored the current and future needs of the community, said United Way board member George Irish. "One of the needs that the study showed was the need for drug and alcohol abuse programs, particularly for education and education particularly directed to the youth," he explained.

The admission of PDAP to United Way came at a board meeting May 26. It brought the total number of agencies receiving United Way funding to 22. PDAP will be included in United Way's fall fund-raising campaign for 1984.

Organized in Midland in August of 1979, PDAP was the culmination of efforts of community leaders and parents seeking help in dealing with a growing drug and alcohol problem.

Severity of that problem, said Savage, is difficult to pinpoint.

"Since you're dealing with primarily an undercover or an illegal-type activity, it's real hard to pin down," he said. "But I would say that we're not any worse or better than any other city. I would say that at least 15 percent of the overall population is affected by drugs or alcohol."

Savage said PDAP reaches an average of 6,000 persons a year. "At our meetings we are working primarily with adolescents," he said. "We do have an adult program; we do have a program for the parents, so we are a family-oriented program. We do individual counseling but a lot of our work is done in the school.

"Our goals are to continue this program as it is, to reach more needs, to reach down into some educational levels...as low as ages five and up from there. So I think we're going to be able to do this in a long-range plan now with the help of the United Way Agency."

Constitutionality of windfall profits tax upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld the constitutionality of the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil which produces billions of dollars in annual revenue.

The 9-0 ruling removed a cloud of uncertainty from the tax, which had been declared unconstitutional by a lower court.

The government was allowed to collect the tax despite the lower court ruling, pending the outcome of today's case.

The levy produced an estimated $26 billion in revenue as of last Oct. 1 and is expected to yield over $40 billion more in the next five years. By 1990, government officials expect the tax to bring in a total of $225 billion.

The decision was particularly significant coming in a period of record federal deficits.

In another case the court ruled today that waste disposal risks do not have to be considered every time the federal government considers approving a nuclear power plant license.

By a 8-0 vote, the justices reversed a lower court victory won by environmentalists. The court said the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission does not have to weigh the issue of waste disposal risks in each individual licensing proceeding.

In the windfall profits case, U.S. District Judge Euing T. Kerr ruled last Nov. 4 in Cheyenne, Wyo., that the three-year-old tax was unconstitutional. He said it exempts new oil produced above the Arctic Circle, with the exception of the giant Prudhoe Bay field on the North Slope of Alaska.

Kerr said the Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform throughout the nation.

But Justice Lewis F. Powell, in his opinion for the Supreme Court today, said, "Congress may take geographic considerations into account in deciding what oil to tax."

Powell continued that the Constitution does not prevent Congress "from considering geographically isolated problems."

He said, "Congress clearly viewed 'exempt Alaskan oil' as a unique class of oil that...merited favorable treatment. It had before it ample evidence of the disproportionate costs and difficulties — the fragile ecology, the harsh environment, and the remote location — associated with extracting oil from this region."

The government said that the exemption for Alaska was necessary to encourage exploration in a remote area.

Government lawyers argued that discovering and producing North Slope oil entailed risks that were far greater than those involved with developing domestic oil properties elsewhere.

The original lawsuit against the tax was filed by a small oil company, Calvin Petroleum Corp. of Fort Lupton, Colo., and three Wyoming royalty owners. More than 30 other parties joined the challenge, including the major oil-producing states of Louisiana and Texas, which contend the law violates states' rights.

The 1980 tax was imposed on oil when decontrol on prices was accelerated. The tax is actually applied to sales prices rather than to oil industry profits. The oil tax takes as much as 60 percent of each price increase above 1979 levels.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cooler temperatures forecast

After a weekend of temperatures flirting with the 100 mark, the National Weather Service is calling for partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures tonight and Tuesday.

According to the NWS forecast, tonight should be partly cloudy and cooler with the low in the upper 50s and winds easterly at 5-15 mph. Tuesday is expected to be partly cloudy and a bit warmer with the high in the low 80s and winds southeasterly at 10-15 mph.

The NWS recorded a trace of rainfall at Midland Regional Airport during the 24 hours ended at 6 a.m. today. The monthly and yearly precipitation totals remain at a trace and 2.17 inches, respectively.

Although many West Texans are anxiously searching the sky for that "good rain," Mother Nature has failed to cooperate. Around Midland County, .20 of an inch of rain was reported this weekend at the Midland Farmers' Co-op in east Midland. In south Midland, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum reported only about .10 of an inch. A farmer in northeast Midland County reported his rain gauge was "dry as a bone" this weekend.

By about 7:30 a.m. today, downtown Midland was receiving a moderately heavy shower. Several area cities, including Andrews, Lamesa, Big Lake, Big Spring, Crane and Stanton, reported sprinkles or drizzle this morning.

Sunday's high of 96 fell a half dozen degrees short of the record 102 set in 1974. The overnight low of 61 compares with a record low for this date of 56 set in 1973.

Sunset tonight will be at 8:52 p.m.; sunrise Tuesday comes at 6:42 a.m.

'Cats' captures seven Tony Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — "Cats," a $5 million Broadway extravaganza based on poems by T.S. Eliot, garnered best musical among its seven Tony Awards, while the surprising "Torch Song Trilogy" took home two awards, including best play.

Forty-nine Broadway shows were eligible for awards for the season that ended May 15. The Tony Awards, equivalent to Hollywood's Oscars, honor the choices of nearly 700 theater professionals.

"Cats," a British import and the most costly Broadway show ever, also won best book of a musical. The award was accepted by Valerie Eliot, whose late husband's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats" poems provided its lyrics.

"Tonight's honor would have given my husband particular pleasure," Mrs. Eliot said during Sunday night's show, which was televised live on CBS from the Uris Theater, renamed the Gershwin Theater during the evening.

Eliot was born in St. Louis, became a British citizen in 1927, and died in 1965. His widow lives in London.

Eliot and composer Andrew Lloyd Webber shared a Tony for best score of a musical. "Cats" director Trevor Nunn won as best director of a musical. Webber also wrote the music for "Evita" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" also now on Broadway.

Betty Buckley, who sings "Memory" in "Cats," won as featured actress in a musical. John Napier and David Hersey won for "Cats" costume and lighting design, respectively.

Harvey Fierstein won twice for "Torch Song Trilogy," for writing the best play and as best actor in it.

The play also is somewhat autobiographical. Its leading character is an entertainer who, dressed as a woman, works in a homosexual nightclub. Fierstein did that at age 16. He turns 29 today.

Fierstein, holding his two Tony Awards, said, "It is just the most marvelous thing in the world. We're like off-off-Broadway, doing theater out of our hearts, minds and lives. To get this kind of response from Broadway professionals is wonderful." Fierstein leaves his acting role June 11, to work on adapting the movie, "La Cage aux Folles," for stage.

John Glines, one of the show's six producers, said on TV, "I want to thank my producing partner and lover, Lawrence Lane, who never said it can't be done." Asked later whether he meant to shock the viewing public, Glines said, "Broadway producers get accused of not being daring."

Jessica Tandy, who turns 74 on Tuesday, was named best actress in a play as the Appalachian woman in the now-closed "Foxfire." She said her husband, Hume Cronyn, who co-wrote the play, "gave me a bit of an edge by writing such a wonderful part for me."

Another senior performer, 72-year-old Charles "Honi" Coles, who has been tap dancing professionally for 52 years, won for best featured actor in a musical, "My One and Only."

Tommy Tune and Thommie Walsh won the choreography Tony for "My One and Only" and Tune won a Tony for best performance by an actor in a musical.

Natalia Makarova, the Kirov Ballet ballerina who defected to the West 13 years ago and now plays a Russian ballerina in "On Your Toes," won as best actress in a musical. She included thanks to "my husband, who didn't help much but stayed out of the way."

"On Your Toes," with music by Rodgers and Hart, won as outstanding reproduction of a play or musical.

Gene Saks won as best director, for "Brighton Beach Memoirs." Neil Simon, who wrote the play, was not nominated for his work.

Matthew Broderick, 21, who stars in "Brighton Beach Memoirs," won as best featured actor in a play. Broderick dedicated his Tony to "the honor, appreciation, love and memory" of his father, actor Jimmie Broderick, who died after his son was cast in the role but before the play opened.

Judith Ivey, won as best featured actress in a play for her role in the now-closed "Steaming."

Ming Cho Lee won as best scenic designer for building a Himalayan mountain in "K2."

A special Tony for regional theater was presented before the telecast to the Oregon Shakespearean Festival Association.

The Tony Awards are named for the late Antoinette Perry, who worked in the American Theater Wing during 1947, and for the last 17 years by the League of New York Theaters and Producers.

Libyan diplomat gunned down

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police have arrested a 21-year-old Lebanese leftist and charged him with shooting Libya's top diplomat in Lebanon seven times in an assassination attempt, state and privately owned radio stations reported today.

The radios quoted unidentified police officials as saying Khaled Osman Alwan confessed he shot Libyan charge d'affaires Abdel-Khader Ghoka on Sunday night.

After the shooting in his hotel lobby, the diplomat underwent six hours of surgery and was in critical condition today at the American University Hospital, the radio stations said.

The police sources were quoted as saying Alwan, a Sunni Moslem, told police interrogators he was a member of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a leftist Lebanese group that advocates the incorporation of Lebanon into a "Greater Syria."

The party is staunch ally of the Palestine Liberation Organization.Party spokesmen were not available for comment on the report.

The Beirut office of the French news agency Agence France Presse said it received two telephone calls claiming responsibility for Ghoka's shooting.

One claim was made on behalf of the Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners, a shadowy rightist group that had claimed responsibility for several bombing attacks against leftist and PLO targets in Lebanon in the last two years, AFP said.

The second call came in behalf of Al-Jihad Al-Islami, an underground Shiite Moslem group loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini which had claimed responsibility for attacks recently on the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut, the agency said.

But all Lebanese radio stations ignored these claims and concentrated on reports attributed to police that Alwan was a member of the Syrian group.The stations did not explain why a leftist would shoot a Libyan diplomat. They said the suspect was being interrogated in "utmost secrecy."

Earlier, the Voice of Free Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party's "Lebanese Forces" militia identified Alwan as the man in police custody. The radio claimed Alwan was working for Fatah, the PLO's main guerrilla group.

There was no confirmation of the reports about Alwan from police.

The Phalange Party is a bitter foe of the PLO and Fatah, which have been at odds recently with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy. Khadafy last month accused Arafat of plotting with the CIA to assassinate him and declared Libya's support for a dissident faction within Fatah.

The state radio quoted police sources as saying the assailant walked into the Napoleon Hotel, in mostly Moslem west Beirut, where he asked to reserve several rooms. He then walked out, returning a short time later as Ghoka entered the hotel.

While Ghoka was at the desk asking for his key, the man pulled out a pistol and shot him seven times, wounding him in the neck, chest, abdomen, thigh and arm, the radio quoted the sources as saying.

The man was described as stocky, of medium height, with brown hair and wearing blue jeans. The radio said he fled from the hotel, brandishing his gun, and that hotel employees told officials the gunman spoke Arabic with a Lebanese accent.

Ghoka had been living at the hotel since the Libyan embassy building was badly damaged during the siege of Beirut by Israel last summer.

The assassination attempt came on the eve of the first anniversary of Israel's invasion of Lebanon, and at a time relations are strained between Libya and Lebanon because of Lebanon's troop withdrawal accord with Israel.

The two Arab countries have recalled their ambassadors from each other's capitals and Khadafy claimed the agreement made Lebanon an Israeli satellite.

Khadafy last week called for a "popular war" to be mounted from Lebanon against Israel and declared he would finance, train and arm volunteers from throughout the Arab world.

Roman debts paid with 'pound of flesh'

Under early Roman law, creditors who couldn't obtain satisfaction from a debtor were allowed to cut up his body and divide the pieces. The Romans also let creditors spare a debtor's life and sell him into slavery.

Galveston's 'glory days' may return

GALVESTON (AP) — Until 1957, people flocked to this coastal resort community to drink, play cards, roll dice or bet on the horses.

This was the place for high rollers. Thousands paid a quarter to ride the Interurban train from Houston, hoping to turn their dimes into dollars.

Governors, mayors, police chiefs and sheriffs looked the other way.

But the jackpot didn't last forever. The big bust came when Texas Attorney General Will Wilson got the winning hand. Obtaining dozens of civil court injunctions, Wilson closed gambling establishments all over the county.

The gamblers came back for a while, but old-timers say the end finally came in 1961 when Hurricane Carla devastated the city. Galveston had to rebuild and its beaches and historical buildings became bigger drawing cards than the gambling tables.

Now, some residents want to bring back the "glory days" — legally.

The City Council last week agreed to hold a non-binding straw vote to see what citizens want. State Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, also said he would introduce a bill to authorize local-option gambling elections — if he is convinced the community supports it.

But no one's taking any bets.

At a two-hour hearing on the straw vote, opponents warned of the dangers of wagering. They predicted increased street crime, prostitution and official corruption as well as financial ruin for many families.

Those who favor gambling don't talk about the moral aspects, instead emphasizing that the casinos would give the island's economy a much-needed shot in the arm.

Harry Levy Jr., who was a president of the Galveston Chamber of Commerce during the gambling days of the 1930s, 1940s and 1950s, told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Sunday the economy was such an important factor that business and civic leaders accepted the benefits and looked the other way.

The out-of-town people who came to gamble were big spenders. They were good customers and they paid their bills. For small businessmen, the thousands of slot machines all over the island kept the red ink in the desk drawer.

"There was a hesitancy to oppose (gambling) too strongly," Levy said.

Fire related to electrical problem

CINCINNATI (AP) — Survivors of a choking fire on an Air Canada DC-9 stayed alive by breathing through wet washcloths, tissue and even a man's vest during a harrowing 11-minute descent as the plane filled with smoke, investigators say.

Meanwhile, National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Dave Engen said Sunday it was "highly probable" that the fire, which killed 23 passengers, was related to the electrical system in the rear lavatory area of the plane.

Eighteen passengers and all five crew members escaped after the burning DC-9, en route from Dallas to Toronto, made an emergency landing last Thursday at Greater Cincinnati International Airport in northern Kentucky.

Federal officials, tentatively ruling out the possibility that the fire on Flight 597 was set, said they are focusing on circuit breakers which tripped during the flight, indicating an electrical problem or an electrical response to another problem.

"The cabin attendants passed out wet washcloths to passengers," Engen said at a Sunday news conference. "All those who survived were breathing through some cloth of some kind. One person used a Kleenex. Another man used his vest."

Those who died were overcome by heat and smoke, Engen said.

Investigators were trying to determine the content of the smoke, after Boone County Coroner Don Stith said the dead passengers were overcome by carbon monoxide poisoning as well as smoke inhalation.

Engen said tests on the plane's fuel lines found no leaks. He also said the casing on the motor for the rear lavatory toilet was partially melted, but the source of the heat evidently was something other than the motor.

The first sign of trouble during the flight came when three circuit breakers for the rear lavatory popped in the cockpit and couldn't be reset, Engen said. Later, a passenger reported smoke at the back of the plane, and First Officer Claude Ouimet went to investigate.

"He felt the (lavatory) door was hot," Engen said. "He didn't open it. He put his hand on the forward bulkhead; it was less hot, but it was still hot."

Capt. Donald Cameron, flying at 33,000 feet, obtained clearance for an emergency landing at Cincinnati. Flight attendants moved passengers forward from the rear of the cabin and passed out washcloths.

Engen said oxygen masks weren't deployed for fear of feeding the fire.

"The smoke came from the aft lavatory area and began moving forward in the cabin ..." Engen said.

"Things really began to go to pieces rapidly aboard the airplane as the pilot descended," Engen said. "He was losing one system after another. He was having circuit breakers pop rapidly (because of the fire). The cockpit was beginning to fill with smoke."

Cameron put on smoke goggles and an oxygen mask, Engen said.

Immediately after Cameron landed the plane, the crew deployed front escape chutes. Passengers opened emergency exits over the wings and calmly started toward the doors, Engen said.

"There was no panic in the cabin. It was amazingly quiet, to quote some," Engen said. "No one pushed. No one pulled. The flight attendants were issuing directions to the passengers. ... I think the absence of any panic enhanced the escape a great deal."

When the doors were opened, "there was a surge of black smoke and heat that passed from the aft of the fuselage to the forward part," he said.

"It literally forced (the pilot and first officer) back into their seats. It stunned them, the heavy dark smoke and its heat," Engen said.

Ouimet climbed out through the cockpit window. On the ground, he saw a dazed Cameron still inside and had rescue workers shoot extinguishing foam at him, Engen said.

The foam apparently drove the captain out of his seat and then he fell out the window, hung by one hand and dropped to the ground.

Flash flood watches posted for Texas

By The Associated Press

Flash flood watches and warnings were posted today for parts of North and South Texas following a night of showers and thundershowers that dumped heavy downpours on wide areas of the state.

Rain covered much of the northern two-thirds of Texas before dawn.

It was not clear what or how much Reagan expects to gain, but he has often spoken about his goal of nuclear arms reductions, rather than simply limiting the size of existing arsenals.

The White House also announced recently its willingness to resume discussions on an long-term agreement for the United States to sell grain to the Soviets. Moscow readily accepted the offer.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Reagan's key advisers are waiting for a "positive signal" from the Soviet Union that they believe could lead to a summit meeting between the president and Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov within the next 10 months.

One administration official quoted by the newspaper said such a signal would have to be "substantive" — something more than a new grain agreement or an expanded cultural exchange program.

The official said a substantive signal would be the Soviets' "stepping back" in Afghanistan or Poland, making a new arms control proposal, or easing up on military support for Marxists in Central America.

"We are watching...for a sign, and there are those who think that the Soviets may give us one," one official was quoted as saying. "If this happens, the president would be more than willing to meet with Andropov."

Sheriff slain in shootout mourned

The couple who owned the bunker-like farmhouse where the shootings occurred were charged Saturday with capital murder in Matthews' death. Leonard Ginter, 63, and his wife, Norma, 60, who had filed lawsuits challenging tax laws, were arrested outside the house before the shooting began.

In North Dakota, U.S. Marshal Chuck Kupferer said Sunday that authorities are continuing to seek those who may have harbored Kahl.

Kupferer declined to discuss what led authorities to the rural Arkansas farmhouse in their search for Kahl. He added that a special federal task force formed after the Feb. 13 shootout near Medina, N.D., would disband in the next several days.

The North Dakota marshals killed in that gunbattle had been trying to serve a parole violation warrant on Kahl. Three other marshals were wounded.

Kahl's son, Yorie, 23, and an associate were convicted of two counts of second-degree murder. Kahl's wife Joan, 56, was found innocent of conspiracy and harboring a fugitive.

In Heaton, N.D., a friend of Mrs. Kahl said Sunday that she felt it was inevitable that Kahl would be killed on the run. Mrs. Kahl declined to be interviewed.

"She's taking it pretty good," Martha Geier of Heaton said after visiting Mrs. Kahl. "It's hard, of course. She's real shook up. But she felt something like this was inevitable."

Mrs. Kahl had said after the marshals were killed that she never expected to see her husband again.

"Time travelers" in San Angelo this weekend, members of the Fort Concho Infantry, look a little out of place as they stall highway traffic. The troop, area residents who re-create military activities of the 1870s, are participating in a week-long "encampment" and training session.

Many Texans lack basic skills of reading, writing

DALLAS (AP) — About one in five adult Texans do not read or write well enough to perform everyday tasks and an even larger number cannot determine the change they are due when they pay for merchandise with a $20 bill, a University of Texas study concluded.

The study found about 2 million Texans — or 21 percent of the adult population — lack the basic reading, writing and computation skills necessary for everyday tasks. Another 30 percent are "marginally literate" and 2.7 million cannot figure their change from a $20 bill.

"It is surprising, perhaps even shocking, to suggest that approximately one of five Texans...are functionally incompetent or function with difficulty and that about an additional one-third of the adult population in Texas is...not proficient in coping with everyday tasks of skills and knowledge," the UT report states.

The Texas illiteracy rate, the study found, is higher than the national average of 19.7 percent.

Dr. Lois DeBakey, a literacy expert and professor of scientific communication at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said low teacher salaries, undisciplined students, drug abuse, deterioration of the family and even country and western music lyrics have contributed to the decline of literacy in Texas.

Many Texas classrooms are "war zones or holding tanks for undisciplined students and drug abusers" who are not interested in literacy, she said.

She also said illiteracy will flourish until writers are regarded on a level equal to athletes.

"Can you give me one incentive for students to learn to read and write? The media focus on the superstars; they are lionized and fawned over," she told The Dallas Morning News. "They are entertained in the White House and even given honorary degrees, and many of them are dropouts from grammar school. They are semi-literate, and these are the people who are honored as our heroes."

Ms. DeBakey also claimed there was "flagrant, flagrant open cheating" by some of 3,200 Houston teachers during a recent competency test.

"Now, if teachers can't pass a minimal competency test, how do you expect students to learn anything from those teachers?" she asked.

The state's literacy problem also is reflected by the number of students in adult education or developmental English classes, education experts said.

About 133,000 Texans attend adult education classes, and many are struggling just to learn to read, said Deborah Stedman of the Texas Education Agency.

"The state of illiteracy in Texas and the United States is a whole lot larger than we assume it is," she said.

Forty-one percent, of about 600 of the entering freshmen, enrolled in the University of Houston's developmental English program last fall, with most of them reading at the fourth- to sixth-grade level, Ms. Stedman said. More could have been enrolled if there had been additional space and teachers, she added.

About 9 percent of the freshman class at Texas A&M University and about 8 percent of Southern Methodist University's freshman class last year had to attend remedial English classes, educators said.

Despite their numbers, illiterate Texans take great pains to hide the fact that they can't read.

"People would rather admit to killing their mother than to admit that they can't read because of the stigma associated with illiteracy," said Carolyn Cribs, who teaches an Operation LIFT reading class at First Presbyterian Church of Dallas.

One of her students, 43-year-old Jerry Mefford, said he must learn to read because he has health problems and needs a job that is not physically demanding.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Montford's spirits dampened by rejection of water plan

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, was unquestionably an angry man the last night of the Legislature's regular session.

Montford spent many of the final hours trying to work out an agreement to salvage the Senate's "Water for Texas" program, of which he had been a leading sponsor.

Montford has pronounced the legislation dead days earlier, and has blasted Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, as being responsible for the demise of the package.

Montford later explained his irritation to include conferees, the committee's attorney and river authorities, and was preparing to make his unhappiness known in a personal privilege speech to the Senate when Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, launched a filibuster against legislation to put farm and ranch workers under worker's compensation coverage.

Montford wasn't alone in his wrath.

Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, sponsor of SB 1026, the bill which apparently doomed the Senate's plan, wasn't very pleased with the performance of the House, and indicated unhappiness that Speaker Gib Lewis didn't make a sgtrong effort to swing House members, including Craddick, to the Senate's view.

Montford argued the eight bills and proposed constitutional amendments passed by the Senate needed to be considered as a package in order to address the water conservation, water development, water quality and environmental considerations involved.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby played a major role in developing the water proposals, which closely tracked a five-part program he had announced last year.

Hobby, Montford and other Senate members contended their approach was based on addressing the state's overall water needs, and doing so in a practical manner.

Failure to do that in the past — with "grandiose schemes" for water import — has resulted in voters rejecting previous proposals at the polls, they said.

The measures proposed by the Senate included creation of a loan program for farmers to purchase water-serving equipment, requiring political subdivisions to develop water conservation programs as a condition of state assistance, an additional $300 million in bonds under the existing Water Development Fund program, a bond guaranty program and protection of water in connection with oil and gas activities.

That last proposal drew considerable opposition from some oil and gas industry representatives.

But it was Sharp's SB 1026, providing for maintenance of freshwater inflows to bays and estuaries, that seemed to encounter the greatest opposition during both House and Senate floor action.

Senators approved the bills and amendments except for SB 1026 at one time, with Sharp having to overcome opposition from Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, who contended the bill would prevent construction of any more reservoirs in Texas.

That, Montford said, simply wasn't true.

"Nobody's a bigger reservoir man than I am," Montford says. "I think we ought to build them everywhere."

"But that's what the House conferees kept saying, that it would stop all the reservoirs."

"I started quizzing them, and you could tell that they hadn't even read the bill," Montford adds.

The opposition to the provisions, which (in the Senate version) would have given the Texas Water Commission authority to require some freshwater inflows to assure continued productivity of bays and estuaries, seemed to be from the river authorities.

In the past, efforts to require such protection — in order to prevent destruction of the sport and commercial fishing industries —have drawn resistance from river authorities which have argued that someone must pay for such releases.

The countering argument has been that the water currently is going to those areas as it has since the time rivers first began to run to the seas.

Some river authorities — such as the Guadalupe-Blanco, based in Traeger's home town — have publicly commended Craddick for his opposition to SB 1026.

Montford is well aware of the river authorities' attitude and he's not happy with it.

"Our biggest problem,"he says of water legislation, "is overcoming regionalism."

The river authorities, Montford comments, "have carved out their own little fiefdoms, and I think it's time the Legislature should deal with that."

Texas, he says, will never solve its water problems except on a statewide basis, "and right now, we're back to square one."

Hill Country town has public services, doesn't pay public servants

WIMBERLEY, Texas (AP) — The 5,500 residents of this community in the wooded hills of Central Texas have found a way to enjoy the essential services usually provided by government without the headaches of city budgets, taxes or zoning.

The unincorporated Hays County town, located between Austin and San Antonio, is one of the fastest-growing communites in the Hill Country chiefly because it has no municipal government.

Residents have fire protection, water, ambulance service and a library, provided almost entirely on the donations and volunteer work of the townspeople.

"We all work to keep Wimberley going," said Cindy Meeks, who helps her father operate the Rio Bonito Resort on the Blanco River. "Our community ... supports itself and gets behind things that need to be done."

Bill Johnson, 60, is president of the Wimberley Chamber of Commerce and is the closest thing the town has to a mayor. He said the town has no need to collect taxes.

"Anyone who wants to move here should be prepared to join the party and help with the activities and not sit back and say 'they' ought to do thus and so," said Johnson.

"It's not 'they here, it's 'we'.'"

Services often are done by volunteers or paid for by street dances, covered-dish suppers, flea markets and festivals. Community decisions are made at village meetings.

Although it is unusual for a community so populous to be unincorporated, Wimberley is not alone in its anti-government approach. Dick Brown, executive director of the Texas Municipal League in Austin, estimated that 25 percent of the towns on the Texas highway map have not incorporated.

"Our state laws are pretty much (designed) to let the people back home do what they want with or without government," said Brown. "Really the only thing they can't do is tax."

The chamber, organized in the late 1940s, arranged to have street lights and dial telephones installed in the community.

Hinckly won't make reunion

DALLAS (AP) — The Class of 1973 at Highland Park High School had its 10-year reunion over the weekend, minus its best known graduate — presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr.

Hinckley, acquitted by reason of insanity in the 1981 shooting of President Reagan, is confined to St. Elizabeth, a hospital for the mentally ill in Washington.

But Hinckley, like most of the 350 in his graduating class, responded to a questionnaire sent to all members. His comments were included in a booklet distributed at the reunion.

"I just want to say that I have fond memories of Highland Park and wish I could be at the reunion," Hinckley said. "I often think about my old high school classmates and wonder how they're doing. As for me, I'm doing well and looking forward to the day I can see some of my old friends again. Please send me a reunion book."

Reached in Denver, where he is chief executive officer of the Vanderbilt Energy Co., John Hinckley Sr. said of his son, "We think he is making progress. We hope he is.

"It's a long way from Highland Park High."

Despite his absence, Hinckley's attack on Reagan was a topic on the minds of many of his classmates, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

"He was like everyone else in this room — normal," said Craig Morris, who also attended Texas Tech University with Hinckley, losing touch with him after their freshman year.

"He was a business major, so I assumed he would work for his dad. But after our sophomore year in college, something happened. I haven't figured it out, myself."

Fay Smith Kohler, another classmate, described Hinckley as "the nicest guy in the world, real quiet. I don't know what happened to him."

Class president David Wildman said he and Hinckley went to elementary, junior high and high school together.

"I played sports with him," Wildman said. "He had a quick wit. He was a heck of an athlete."

Daughter dies; Inmate hangs self

DALLAS (AP) — A 43-year-old man distraught over his daughter's death in a hit-and-run accident hanged himself in the old Dallas County Jail, authorities said.

Theodore Joseph Bristow was found dead in his cell at 3:45 a.m. Sunday, according to sheriff's Detective W.L. Mayes.

Bristow's daughter, 17-year-old Gwendolyn Cook of Dallas, was struck by a car late Friday while walking along a Dallas-area road with her husband, investigators said. She died of head injuries and multiple internal injuries less than an hour later.

'Newhart' successful program

NEW YORK (AP) — It's hard to follow one hit role with another. Just ask this past season's losers: McLean Stevenson, Bea Arthur, Sally Struthers and Rock Hudson. But Bob Newhart has done it by giving viewers what they wanted — Bob Newhart.

"Newhart," the most popular program introduced by the networks last fall and the only new series brought back for another season by CBS, was successful because executive producer Barry Kemp and Newhart himself didn't tamper too much with success.

They didn't make Newhart an oaf, a wild-and-crazy bachelor, or have him preside over a real variety show — as he did in 1961 in a vehicle that lasted just eight months.

But they did allow Newhart to assert the same cool, calm, comedic face, which audiences had found so comfortable. In changing from Bob Hartley to Dick Loudon, Newhart remained the same. Only the situations, settings and foils changed.

"Bob is a laid-back, everyman kind of character with soft, subtle comedy," says Kemp.

Constructing a new show around an old personna, and making it look fresh, is not easy. "The Bob Newhart Show," in which Newhart played psychologist Bob Hartley, went off the air in 1978 and still is seen in rerun. Kemp couldn't do that show again, yet he couldn't stray too far, either.

"We didn't want to be intentionally different just to be different," says Kemp.

In Kemp's discussions with Newhart and the production studio, MTM, the idea of Newhart as a blue-collar worker was raised. "The public wouldn't accept that," says Kemp. "Bob's strength is being the voice of reason, and in the way he reacts when everything else is out of control."

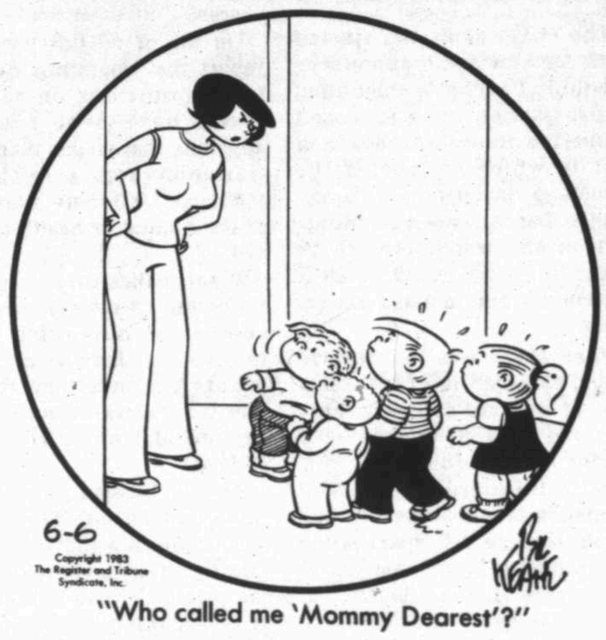

Newhart wanted the new series set in the Pacific Northwest. Kemp wanted New England. "At least we were talking about America," says Kemp.

Newhart suggested a hotel setting. Kemp resisted because that locale had not worked in the past. (Ms. Arthur's failed series this season was in a rundown hotel.) But then Kemp recalled the play "George Washington Slept Here," and the movie "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dreamhouse," and thought, "It would be a good marriage of ideas."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ83 ♡95 ◇AK7 ♣A1093
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	3 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A.—Almost surely, your side can defeat three spades. It is also possible that you can make three no trump. But what would you like to do about either possibility? Partner is a passed hand. A double by you would be for takeout not penalties, and you have neither the shape nor the strength for that. And to bid three no trump risks a substantial penalty if West, and not your partner, has most of the missing strength.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡KQJ107642 ◇93 ♣72
Partner opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?

A.—With eight tricks in your own hand, there is a distinct temptation to bid four hearts. Suppress it! Since he made a non-vulnerable preempt, partner cannot possibly have two tricks for you. Also, there is a real danger that, if you bid four hearts, partner will retreat to four spades, opening the door for a penalty double.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1095 ♡AQ107 ◇82 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—So far you have not promised more than a minimum opener, so you should be delighted to cooperate with partner's slam effort. Unfortunately, you have no first-round control to cue-bid. You could make a general slam try of five hearts, but we prefer the more specific effort of a cue-bid of five clubs. That denies any side-suit first-round control but promises second-round control of clubs, probably the king.

Q.4—As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠K87 ♡AK53 ◇763 ♣962
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have two-and-a-half quick tricks, but there the matter ends. You have a flat distribution and a hand riddled with losers. To make game opposite a simple raise of your suit by opener would require a miracle. Pass while you still have a chance for a plus score.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♡KQJ72 ◇QJ92 ♣Q54
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has made a high reverse, showing a very good hand. However, because of your partial misfit you want to dampen his ardor a little. Bid three no trump. To bid the fourth suit here would show a hand much stronger than yours, since it is dollars to donuts that partner can't have a diamond fit.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠95 ♡7 ◇KQ8763 ♣AJ82
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Beware of the probable misfit. If you bid three clubs now, it would be forcing to game, and you certainly don't have the strength for that. Despite the fact that you want to bid again after starting with a two-over-one response, this hand is the exception. Pass. Any other action could get you into trouble.

Trouble in Russia

A series of unflattering pictures of life in Soviet Russia managed to elude the Communist censors over the past couple of weeks to chip away at the nice, orderly and happy image that the government would like to perpetuate in the West. If Yuri Andropov and his colleagues are not now concerned by these assaults on the myth, they soon should be.

The chain of events started with Moscow radio announcer Vladimir Danchev's celebrated improvisation on a newscast about the Russian-Afghanistan war in which he labeled the Soviets as "invaders" and "occupants." Danchev has since disappeared and is reported to be under an investigation which is certain to result in harsh punishment.

Then there was the debacle which followed the ceremonial visit of a group of British anti-war (and anti-U.S.) women to the Soviet Peace Committee. This was made to order for Soviet propaganda purposes but the whole scheme fell apart when Communist officials objected to the presence in the delegation of one of Moscow's dissident pacifists. The Reds blew their tops and thereby incurred the hostility of the group.

And now Russian workers have gone on strike against the construction of the new U.S. Embassy building in Moscow on the grounds that X-ray equipment employed to test the structure for flaws is hazardous to their health. The irony of this argument is not lost on a world which knows how the Soviets bombarded the existing building with microwave radiation for years.

On top of all this comes the report that operating and sanitary conditions on railroad trains have been found so appalling that no less than 38,641 transit workers were fined in 1982 and 7,000 more were fired at the request of health authorities.

What makes these incidents, following so closely upon one another, so interesting is that they seem to indicate a growing dissatisfaction among the formerly subservient masses with the conditions they daily endure.

Are the Russian people at last finding their voice to speak out against the lies they have been told by their government over the past 65 years? If that voice grows in volume it could eventually topple the house of cards erected by their Soviet masters.

Playing the market

Government officials should not profit financially from their public positions. At any time when there is a conflict of interest between public responsibility and private profit, the government official should either put the public interest first or resign before reaping the private reward.

Central Intelligence Agency Director William Casey has released a financial statement that shows he traded heavily in stocks and other securities in 1982. Casey is a former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He was a Wall Street lawyer. He has the stock market in his blood.

Last year, when the stock market began to move upward, it would have been hard for a man who followed the ticker tape by instinct not to buy and sell. There is nothing wrong in making a profit; our system is based on it. But there is something wrong with trading stocks on inside information gained from employment by the government.

As CIA director, Casey sees all kinds of secret documents regarding sensitive negotiations and contracts that could influence stocks. Anyone who has traded in stocks knows that it is difficult to remember when such information, buried in the memory, may surface as a hunch to buy this or sell that stock.

The problem, at minimum, is the appearance of conflict of interest. Casey's two immediate predecessors as CIA director, Stansfield Turner and George Bush, put their portfolios in blind trusts. Casey should follow their example or, if he prefers to play the market, do so as a private citizen.

Another View:

Ending restrictions

The Federal Aviation Administration wants to restore air traffic to unrestricted levels by the end of the year. The National Transportation Safety Board says that's trying to do too much too soon and that it shouldn't be permitted until the nation's air traffic control system is again fully staffed by experienced personnel. The FAA believes it will reach that level of competence by the end of the year, even though more than half of the air traffic controllers at that time will still be trainees, and supervisors will still be doing some of their work.

Sound judgment says the safety board should prevail. Although the air traffic control system has performed with a good safety record during the rebuilding of its personnel following the controllers' strike two years ago, there has been a growing number of reports of aircraft passing closer to one another than regulations permit. The safety board, the Air Line Pilots Association and the Aviation Consumer Action group believe those operational errors are attributable to the FAA's recent easing of restrictions at several airports, and that the safety margin has narrowed too much already.

Before the strike, in the course of which some 11,000 controllers were fired, there were 17,000 air controllers. FAA officials said then that this was about 3,000 more than actually were needed, while the controllers and pilots argued that in many places controllers were overfatigued and suffering stress ailments because of short-staffing and long hours. The FAA plans to have 14,000 controllers working by year's end, but acknowledges that the complement of fully trained and experienced personnel the safety board says is needed won't be reached until the middle of next year.

Thus, the issue boils down to a difference of approximately six months — a time span of financial importance to the airlines, which are pressuring the FAA to lift restrictions, but surely short enough to counsel a decision weighted on the side of safety. The dispute will be aired before a House transportation subcommittee in Washington, D.C., next week. The lawmakers should demand that the FAA meet this sizable burden of proof before approving the return to unrestricted air traffic, whether this year or next.

CHARLEY REESE

Reagan repeating mistakes

President Reagan is making the same mistakes in Central America his predecessors made in Vietnam, although I'm not talking about the same mistakes his liberal critics talk about when they raise the specter of Vietnam.

Charley Reese

First, he is being inconsistent and you can't sell a policy riddled with inconsistencies to the American people. Most of us may not be loaded down with credentials but we do have common sense.

It is inconsistent to argue that a Marxist-Leninist government in El Salvador would represent a threat to the United States, but not Marxist-Leninist governments already established in Cuba, Nicaragua and Grenada. If a Soviet military presence in the Caribbean is a threat (and I think it is), then it's a threat wherever it is located and most assuredly it's most dangerous location is Cuba. If the United States remains committed to protecting the Soviet base in Cuba, refuses to overthrow the pro-Soviet regime in Nicaragua, then it is futile to spend even a penny in El Salvador.

That is the same basic inconsistency that eventually eroded support for the Vietnam War even among the hawks. It never made sense to pay so high a price to confront Communism in South Vietnam while protecting it in Cuba and trading with it in Eastern Europe.

The second mistake Reagan has made is to fall into the altruistic trap. The United States Constitution does not authorize anyone to institute land reform or to install a democratic government in El Salvador. The only justification for any foreign aid to any country is to serve our interest, not theirs. If in protecting our own interest, we also help them, so be it, but somebody else's welfare can never be our main objective.

In El Salvador, our sole legitimate interest is to prevent the territory from becoming a platform for Soviet weapons and staging area for Soviet troops and terrorists. Our legitimate interest, if we have any at all, is in defeating a Marxist-Leninist insurgency. What other kind of government El Salvador may have is their business, not our.

Reagan, however, didn't have the guts to simply state our interest. He has to play the game of us going to the rescue of good guys being assaulted by bad guys. The result is he spends most of his time defending his "chosen good guys" in the Congress.

To put us on the side of the El Salvadoran government as opposed to putting us merely on the side of defeating the insurgents, makes the policy hostage to the character of the government. We do not have the right, the authority, or the ability to install benign, humane governments in every country where we might wish to prevent a Communist victory. Certainly we would never find one anyway that would satisfy the liberals in Congress. They don't like their own government; why should they like anything the people in El Salvador might produce?

The liberal myth that you can prevent a Communist victory only by installing a democratic socialist government is stupid nonsense. Whether an insurgency succeeds or fails has nothing to do with the economic conditions of the country or with the benign character of the government. It has only to do with the efficiency of the counter-insurgency effort.

Finally, the third mistake Reagan is repeating is to practice gradualism. Gradualism does not work in war, especially when the government trying to practice it is a democracy. Public opinion is too fickle. It will not stay the course on a long, drawn-out affair where there appear to be no clearly defined objectives. Time is always on the side of the guerillas.

The North Vietnamese didn't win militarily. They were defeated militarily. They won the psychological war by simply persisting until Americans grew tired of what seemed to them an endless conflict.

In war, you should go in with maximum force, get the job done, and get the heck out. If El Salvador's forces can't defeat the guerillas, then our forces should do the job, but here again, to do that job without taking out Cuba and Nicaragua would be a total waste of lives and treasure.

As it stands now, Reagan has no sound policy, no public support, no support in Congress, and no hope for success in Central America. Playing politics and muddling about won't cut it. If the American people are content to allow the Soviet Union to turn the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico into Soviet lakes, then we'll just have to suffer the consequences. There are no free lunches in this world.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Government didn't trust Einstein

WASHINGTON — Albert Einstein, the physicist whose genius led to development of the atomic bomb that helped his adopted country win the war with Japan, was never fully trusted by the U.S. government.

Jack Anderson

In 1940, the Army denied Einstein clearance to work on the Manhattan Project — which, ironically, grew out of his famous letter to President Roosevelt suggesting that a nuclear bomb was possible and should be built before Hitler's scientists developed one.

After World War II, Einstein was the constant subject of "internal security" investigations by the FBI, Army intelligence, the State Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In dealing with the man whose theory (Emc2, energy equals mass times the speed of light squared) was the fundamental concept of nuclear energy, the government gumshoes devised a formula of their own: Das2, disloyalty equals association times suspicion squared.

Einstein was both a pacifist and a "joiner." He lent his name to a number of groups and committees he believed were sincerely trying to promote world peace. Several were officially regarded as subversive, and his association with them was enough to arouse investigators' darkest suspicions.

The sordid, self-contradictory and almost laughable reports on Einstein comprise a file of some 1,800 pages in the FBI files. It took my associate Dale Van Atta more than three years to pry all but about 300 pages out of the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act.

— Eternally suspected of communist sympathies, Einstein in 1946 was offered a chance to work in the Soviet Union and have "whatever funds, laboratories, buildings, equipment, books and assistance he might need," according to a report from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Einstein's response was a letter — in Hebrew — to Josef Stalin, expressing appreciation for the offer, but asking: "Why are Jewish scientists not permitted to hold prominent posts? Why are apparently unnecessary obstacles placed in the way of Jewish scientific and research workers? Why were certain Jewish professors of medical science... not elected to the recently created Medical Academy?"

The implicit charges of anti-Semitism were at first denied, and the Soviets repeated their offer to Einstein. But Stalin had his secret police investigate the scientist's charges, with astonishing results: "Certain high Soviet officials were discharged for anti-Semitism. The professors named by Einstein were elected to the Academy."

— Another "Russian connection" set the FBI agents on one of their many fruitless Einstein trails in April 1949. An informant told the G-men that the Einstein family was "scared to death over the fact that a son is in Russia and may be held as a hostage to force some particular action on the part of Prof. Einstein."

This story was repeated in many FBI reports, and wasn't laid to rest until six years later, when the FBI learned that one Einstein son was in this country and the other was in a Western European mental institution. Neither had ever been to Russia.

— Army intelligence agents dutifully ran down an accusation by a former Berlin dress shop owner who claimed Einstein was a communist. The agents reported that the woman "did not make a favorable impression as to her reliability." In fact, she was an "amateur mathematician" who was miffed because Einstein hadn't replied to her letter asking his help on a system that would enable her to win a Berlin gambling pool.

— Another wild goose chase began when an informant told the FBI that "the Dr. Einstein of the theory (was) the brain that was setting up Hollywood in the 1930s for the big communist push." The best the G-men could produce on this was a 1954 report on Einstein's friendship with Charlie Chaplin and architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

It wasn't until July 27, 1955, that the FBI issued a final recommendation after "all logical investigation had been conducted."

It was high time. Einstein had died three months before at the age of 76.

INSIDE REPORT:

Gramm collecting veto ammo

WASHINGTON — Backing for President Reagan's coming battle of the vetoes is taking the form of advance assurance that at least 146 votes will always be available in the House to sustain his vetoes of top-heavy appropriations bills.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

It takes one-third of the House (or the Senate) plus one vote to prevent overriding a veto. Rep. Phil Gramm, newly elected as a Republican last winter after resigning his seat as a Democrat, is collecting names for the promissory note, aided by party whip Trent Lott and other Republicans. With the expected help of perhaps a dozen Democratic conservatives, the names on the promissory note will go to the president possibly next week.

The move should be a powerful psychological weapon for Reagan's veto strategy if, as expected, Congress fails to agree on a budget resolution and starts passing piecemeal money bills far above the president's budget. White House aides are helping develop Gramm's overall strategy. One worry: With next year's election looming, signers of the promissory note to Reagan may find it agonizingly difficult to keep their promise on some vetoed measures with special appeal to voters back home.

FRITZ ON THE FRITZ?

Adding insult to the injury of those polls showing him only nip-and-tuck with Sen. John Glenn, former vice president Walter F. Mondale was forced to make a deal with Sen. Gary Hart in an effort to block a Wisconsin surge by Sen. Alan Cranston that threatens further embarrassment to Mondale.

Mondale discovered to his consternation that Cranston, whose national standing as a Democratic presidential candidate is barely above the zero mark, might top the field in the presidential straw poll of nearly 3,000 delegates to be taken at the party's June 11 state convention. Mondale operatives, with the quiet backing of Hart, who has campaigned hard in Wisconsin, got the ground rules changed by the margin of a single vote of the party's Executive Committee so that alternate delegates will also be able to vote in the straw ballot.

That broadening of the base was designed to avoid a humiliating loss by Mondale in the state long considered as Minnesota's backyard. The Democratic front-runner has other problems. Larry Hansen, his chief of field operations, has quietly been relieved of his duties at his own request. Hansen, one-time aide to former senator Adlai Stevenson, will stay with the Mondale campaign with reduced responsibilities centered on Illinois.

FIRING THE MX

Fearful that Congress might discover secret arrangements for the first test-firing of the MX missile before Congress actually voted to approve the giant 10-warhead weapon, Air Force Gen. Charles A. Gabriel ordered that no preparations of any kind were to be made.

Chief of Staff Gabriel's worry was political. If anti-MX congressional liberals or fence-sitters learned of secret Air Force preparations to test-fire the missile before the climactic vote, it could influence that vote negatively.

That delays the actual first test of the missile to June 26 at the earliest. Working at maximum speed, it takes 30 days to prepare for the test. Gabriel disagreed with advice that the MX should be tested immediately after the vote in view of the fact that the original target for the first test was Jan. 1 — and the Soviet Union is testing new long-range missiles at a rate of almost one every two months.

H. HUMPHREY THE SECOND

The expected decision of Mark Dayton, who spent close to $7 million in a vain campaign for the U.S. Senate last year, not to run in Minnesota against Republican Sen. Rudy Boschwitz next year, will open the way for another Hubert Humphrey, son of the late vice president and Democratic Party leader for a generation.

Dayton, a department store heir and Rockefeller spouse, has agreed to join Gov. Rudy Perpich's cabinet, convincing party operatives that he almost certainly will not run for the Senate again next year. That opens the door to Humphrey, who was elected attorney general last year and has long eyed the Senate seat occupied by his father from 1948 to 1964.

But despite the pulling power of his political name, "Skip" Humphrey will have to fight for the nomination, probably against Democratic Rep. James Oberstar, before he gets a chance to run against Boschwitz, a popular millionaire Republican moderate.

SCHMIDT MEASURES NIXON

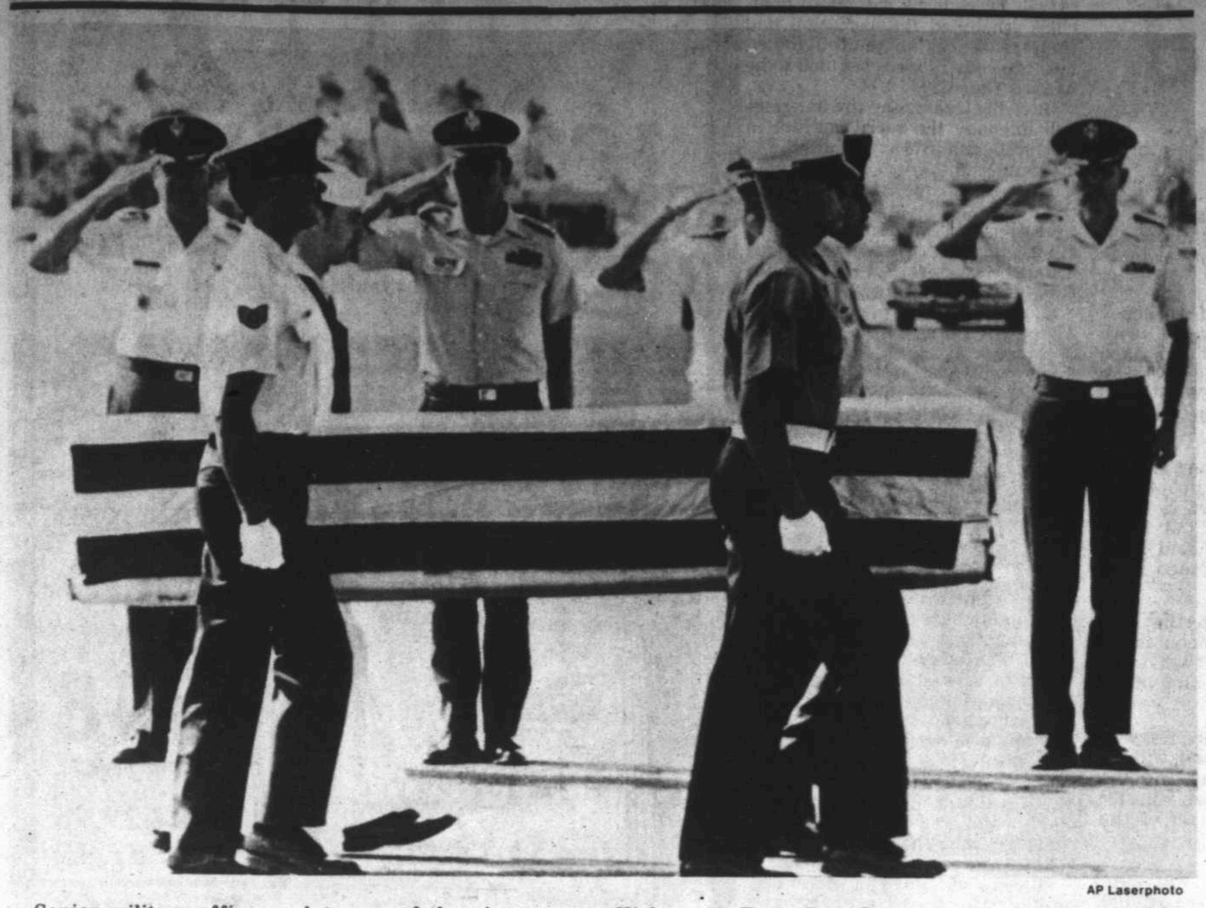

On a visit to Manhattan 10 days ago, former West German chancellor Helmut Schmidt expressed amazement that the disgraced Richard Nixon seldom gets credit for what Schmidt calls the "intellectual brilliance" of his foreign policy from 1969 to 1974.

Nixon is routinely ignored at one convocation after another honoring Henry Kissinger, his national security adviser and then secretary of state.

After one such occasion, the outspoken Social Democrat who has made a fetish of criticizing and sometimes ridiculing American presidents, notably Jimmy Carter, privately expressed his bewilderment that Nixon's grasp of national security affairs seemed to have been totally forgotten. Kissinger's achievements, said Schmidt, were built in the first instance on Nixon's intellectual brilliance.

State broke on anniversary

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Five years after residents of California slashed their taxes by $7 billion a year with Proposition 13, the state is broke, and Howard Jarvis is trying to overturn court rulings that limited his pioneering tax cut initiative.

Today marks the fifth anniversary of voter approval of the measure which cut state property tax bills in half for 4 million homeowners and more than 1 million businesses.

Proposition 13 is still overwhelmingly popular among California voters, and few politicians criticize it, even if they condemn the revenue loss and spending cuts it prompted.

Immediately following Proposition 13, California also cut the state income tax, abolished the business inventory tax, and later did away with the inheritance tax, piling another $4 billion in annual tax savings on top of the $7 billion of Proposition 13.

BUT TODAY, with the effects of cuts becoming more obvious — one major school district formally bankrupt and others warning they face the same fate — different ways of raising revenue are being sought.

In January, the state gasoline tax was raised for the first time in two decades, and in the past month, a $700 million tax increase for schools was approved by the state Senate, and an $840 million school tax bill was approved by the Assembly — both by two-thirds majorities.

The fate of both school measures is still in doubt, but the principal question in the state Capitol is not whether taxes will be raised this year, but by how much, and what it will be called to make it more palatable.

Even Gov. George Deukmejian, a conservative Republican elected last year on promises not to raise taxes, has endorsed a $700 million measure he says merely closes "tax loopholes." While Deukmejian insists he is not calling for a tax increase, his proposal would boost sales and property taxes.

While some foes of Proposition 13 predicted that the liberal California Supreme Court would find the initiative unconstitutional, the court surprised them and upheld all of the measure's major provisions.

THE PROPOSITION cut property taxes to 1 percent of 1975 market values, and limited increases in assessments to 2 percent annually unless the property is sold, when the new owner would start over at 1 percent of current market value.

However, court rulings have weakened the Proposition 13's stringent limits on subsequent tax increases, allowing majority votes for many new local tax proposals instead of the two-thirds vote specified in 13.

As a result, Jarvis is organizing a new initiative campaign for 1984 ballot proposition to reverse those rulings.

Jarvis rejects suggestions that he is plugging loopholes in Proposition 13. He accuses the court of deliberately misinterpreting it.

"There were no loopholes at all in 13. We just didn't anticipate the Supreme Court would change the definition of words like 'tax,' " Jarvis says. "We underestimated the crookedness of politicians and the incompetence of (California Supreme Court) justices."

The deep spending cuts that Jarvis intended were delayed and softened because the state had a $5 billion surplus in its treasury to give cities, counties and schools to cover most of the lost tax revenue.

AS A RESULT, most local governments were able to reduce their programs and payrolls slowly, by not replacing employees who retired or quit, so that today the average cutback statewide over the past five years is about 8 percent.

Today the state has 233,387 employees for a net growth rate that is still slightly greater than population growth. But California today is still profoundly different than it was in 1978.

—While government payrolls have not been trimmed nearly enough to satisfy Jarvis, annual pay raises for teachers and other state and local government employees have fallen to zero or a fraction of the inflation rate. Similar cuts have been made in annual cost-of-living increases for welfare recipients.

—The $5 billion surplus in the state's treasury in 1978 has long since been spent to bail out local governments. Instead, the state is in debt by $900 million to a group of banks that kept it from going broke in February with a series of loans.

—City governments have been stripped of power because many of the decisions that were previously made by local school boards, city councils and boards of supervisers now are made in the Capitol. As the state provided money to replace lost property tax revenues, it also imposed conditions on how that money was spent.

Crews labor to clear blocked channel

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Explosives, backhoes and fire hoses have been pressed into service by city flood control officials to clear an underground aqueduct before hot weather forecast for midweek steps up the melting of mountain snows.

A weekend of cool, dry weather provided a breathing spell from flood fighting throughout northern Utah. Some areas are hoping the worst is over while Salt Lake County officials say peak flows are yet to come.

An autopsy today was to determine the cause of death of a man found floating face down in a flooded Salt Lake City basement Saturday, possibly the city's first victim of the 1983 floods.

In Davis County, where 100 people remain homeless as a result of mudslides and flash floods, officials believe the mountain runoff has peaked, though mudslides remain a threat.

But in the Salt Lake area to the south, higher mountains with greater snowpack ave yet to reach peak flows.

"We had a little reprieve, but now we're on our way back," said Terry Holzworth, county flood control director.

Stream flows by mid-week may be up to 20 percent higher than during their worst point last week, Holzworth said.

He said the county was getting better cooperation from frightened residents who saw last week's rampaging streams.

"There were some neighborhoods that wouldn't let us in with equipment (last week) and are begging for it now," he said.

Salt Lake City officials were unable to unsnarl Army red tape to have a demolition team help unclog one aqueduct, running under North Temple Street. The aqueduct is the normal channel for carrying water from City Creek to the Jordan River, where it empties into Great Salt Lake.

Last week the flow was divided between the aqueduct and a sandbag river built along the downtown's major north-south thoroughfare, State Street. From State Street the water emptied into storm drains running west to the Jordan River.

But with silt and debris blocking the aqueduct, and silt building up in one of the storm drains, crews extended the half-mile sandbag river another half mile during the weekend to make use of more storm systems.

Traffic already has been snarled by sandbag canals along State Street and 1300 South. Bridges constructed Sunday over the State Street canal may be torn down as early as Thursday if the aqueduct is cleared, said Paul Barber, assistant to the mayor.

"Our problem is going to be commuter traffic, and we think it's vitally important to downtown access and the economic well being of the city to construct those bridges," said Al Haines, a city administrator.

Barber said the city has been spending $200,000 to $300,000 a day in battling flooding, "but it is estimated we saved at least $80 million in damages."

An Army demolition team with plastic explosives waited at the North Temple site for hours Saturday, while city officials sought to obtain authorization.

The 6th Army headquarters in San Francisco refused to approve the work, Barber said.

A civilian contractor tried to loosen the blockage with several dynamite blasts, then crews went to work Sunday with backhoes, jackhammers and high-pressure fire hoses.

Barber said the work was going "as well as possible," but may take days.

Police Lt. Robert Braman said an autopsy would be performed today on the body of a man found floating face down in his flooded basement Saturday. Police said electrocution or drowning were possibles causes of death.

Baker sees 50-50 chance of compromise

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Sunday that there is only a 50-50 chance that Senate and House negotiators will be able to reconcile their differences on spending and tax priorities for the 1984 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Baker said that there is as much "internal dissension" over the budget resolution as over any issue he has faced as Senate majority leader and that "huge differences" still exist between the two houses, calling into question any settlement on the budget.

The resolution, which must be passed by both houses of Congress and does not require presidential approval, sets guidelines for Senate and House appropriations committees to follow in their actions on revenue and spending. Congressional negotiators are scheduled to try to hammer out a compromise this week.

In addition, Baker predicted that Congress will reject any major tax changes this year, despite fears of record-high deficits and some sentiment for repealing or modifying the third installment of the president's tax cut, scheduled to take effect July 1, to lower projected red-ink spending.

"I am adamantly opposed to the repeal of the third year of the tax cut or a modification of it ... at a time when the economy is just recovering," Baker said in an interview on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation." "I do not think this is the right time to have a major tax package and I do not think we will have one this year."

He said the House-approved version of the budget resolution calls for $18 billion more in taxes, $20 billion more in domestic spending and about $6 billion less in defense spending than the version passed by the Senate.

"Those are huge differences in terms of the possibility of reconciliation between the two houses ... and I think it sharply diminishes the chance you'll get a budget," he said. "We may still do it. But right now the odds are no better than 50-50."

Baker said failure to approve a budget plan does not mean that the government will shut down its operations. But, he added, the lack of a resolution "would be too bad, because I think it would call into question the efficacy of the budget process and our will and determination to get the budget under control."

At issue in the debate over the budget resolution is the question of how to deal with federal deficits that threaten to exceed $200 billion a year for the remainder of this decade unless spending cuts or tax increases are approved.

O'Neill wants limits on spending, taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., saying the nation's economic recovery is weak, today called for a 5 percent ceiling on military spending increases and a cap on this summer's tax cut.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the annual Washington conference of the American Stock Exchange, O'Neill, D-Mass., acknowledged that the economy is bouncing back from recession.

But "the recovery is too weak to stop the fiscal hemorrhage that is currently sinking the federal government in a sea of red ink," he added.

O'Neill also noted that interest rates likely will remain high because of "the prospect of staggering mega-deficits in the budget of the United States for the rest of this decade."

The speaker blamed President Reagan's economic program for the budget deficits. "He is seeking the biggest tax cut in history on July 1 at the same time that he is giving a blank check to the Pentagon," O'Neill said.

And he chastized Reagan for not helping to fashion a bipartisan budget on Capitol Hill.

"I believe the president is positioning his party for the next election by moving away from bipartisanship" and toward confrontation with Congress, O'Neill said.

"The administration is seeking the high ground politically not fiscally," O'Neill said, adding Reagan is "sitting in the stands giving the budget process the thumbs down sign. Because of this, it's thumbs up for deficits and thumbs down for lower interest rates."

The economy's needs "are too great this year to wait and risk aborting the recovery," O'Neill said.

In order to pare budget deficits, O'Neill called for a series of measures.

Reagan has asked for a 10 percent increase — after accounting for inflation — in defense spending.

Troop withdrawal debated on anniversary of Israel's invasion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Parliament opened a crucial debate today on the Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement, while several parts of Lebanon were paralyzed by strikes marking the first anniversary of Israel's invasion.

Troops in armored personnel carriers teamed with red-bereted police squads in sealing off all approaches to the Parliament building as a clause-by-clause discussion of the May 17 agreement began.

The committees for defense, foreign affairs, justice and economy met in a joint session behind closed doors to study the U.S.-mediated accord and recommend a full meeting by Parliament for final ratification, the state radio said.

Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and Foreign Minister Elie Salem attended the joint session to defend the agreement, which is strongly opposed by neighboring Syria. Salem put off a private visit to Washington to be on hand for the debate.

Although Parliament unanimously gave President Amin Gemayel the go-ahead to sign the agreement last month, final ratification is constitutionally required after the signing.

Several Lebanese leftist groups called for strikes and a day of mourning today to mark the anniversary of the invasion, an anniverary which arrived as tens of thousands of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops remained entrenched across a tense cease-fire line in Lebanon.

There was a new burst of violence in Beirut, when a gunman critically wounded Libya's charge d'affaires in Lebanon with a volley of seven bullets from a pistol Sunday night.

Response to the call for a general strike varied in mostly Moslem west Beirut. Schools and businesses were closed in several low-income neighborhoods, but activity was normal in the main commercial centers of the Moslem sector, as well as in Christian-dominated east Beirut.

Police said the strike was widespread in the port city of Israeli-occupied Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

Police said there was a total shutdown in northern and eastern Lebanon, which are controlled by Syrian forces and PLO guerrillas.

Syria has vowed to undermine the withdrawal agreement, claiming it turns Lebanon into an Israeli colony and endangers Syria's security.

A rebellion also continued within the ranks of the Palestine Liberation Organization, but Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov and officials of Algeria and Saudi Arabia joined efforts to to mediate the dispute, which has threatened Yasser Arafat's leadership.

In an effort to defuse the mutiny, which began May 7 in eastern Lebanon, Andropov sent letters to Arafat and Syrian President Hafez Assad that were delivered over the weekend by Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Youkhine.

Diplomatic sources said Andropov told Assad he was "unhappy" with the split within the PLO and asked Syria to help end the crisis. The Palestinian news agency WAFA said Andropov told Arafat he had full Soviet backing.

On Saturday, the mutiny erupted into open warfare as pro-Arafat groups clashed in eastern Lebanon with rebels led by PLO Col. Saeed Mousa. Lebanese police said seven were killed and 18 wounded in an hour-long battle.

The mutineers are protesting Arafat's appointment of two commanders in east Lebanon and what the rebels perceive as a softening of his stand toward Israel.

Israel marked the anniversary of the invasion in a glum mood, with its Cabinet torn by acrimony over the conduct of former Defense Minister Airel Sharon, the architect of the war.

The campaign which was supposed to last a few days, cost 100 Israeli deaths and restrict itself to south Lebanon is a year old, with the death toll close to 500 and steadily rising in a nettlesome war of attrition.

Three blacks to hang

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three black nationalist guerrillas scheduled for execution had their sentences commuted today, but three others are scheduled to be hanged Thursday.

Guerrilla leaders say the hangings will intensify the racial conflict in this white minority-ruled nation.

Church and human rights groups had led a campaign for clemency for the African National Congress members. As has happened in other cases, state President Marais Viljoen granted a reprieve, but this time for only three of those on death row.

Simon Makana, a member of the ANC national executive, told The Associated Press that the government "will be making a political decision" if it goes through with the hangings. He said the ANC will be forced to retaliate.

"Here you have these people sitting in prison. They can't do any harm. So the people will say, 'Why should you chop off their heads?' We get our tune from the masses and to the masses these men are heroes," Makana said.

Thelle Simon Mogoerane, Jerry Semano Mosololi and Marcus Thabo Motaung are scheduled to be executed Thursday. They were convicted of several attacks on police stations and other targets in which four policemen were killed.

There have been no executions of ANC members since Solomon Mahlangu was hanged April 6, 1979. Former President Jimmy Carter and other world leaders appealed for a reprieve, and the execution provoked worldwide protests.

Viljoen commuted to life imprisonment the death sentences of Anthony Bobby Tsotsobe, Johannes Shabangu and David Moise. The three were involved in attacks on a police station, a constable's home and a fuel installation.

U.S. advertising spices up British campaign

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

LONDON — American-style political advertising and image building has made a big and controversial entry into this year's British election campaign.

And the slick nationwide advertising is being underwritten by large campaign warchests: The Conservatives have an estimated $15 million to $20 million, mostly from big business; the Labor Party $4 million, mainly from big unions, and the Social Democratic-Liberal alliance an estimated $2.5 million, mainly from individual voter contributions.

"The Adman Cometh," headlined an editorial in the Daily Mirror, one of the few newspapers to support the opposition Labor Party.

The Mirror said that it does not censor political advertising in its pages but commented on a recent ad for the Conservative Party, devised by the company of Saatchi & Saatchi, Britain's hottest agency: "That ad is not a complete tissue of lies, but it is not far from it. It reduces serious issues to squalid distortion."

The ad, with no graphics, cautioned that "putting a cross in the Labor box is the same as signing this piece of paper" and then listed 14 Labor policy points in the most negative way. For instance:

"I HEREBY GIVE UP the right to choose which school my children go to and agree to abide by any decision made by the state on my behalf.

"I empower the government to borrow as much money as they wish from other countries and I agree to let my children pay the debt.

"I am prepared to see the police force placed under political control even though it could undermine their capability to keep law and order." And so on.

Saatchi & Saatchi made its mark in the 1979 general election with its hard-sell posters, newspaper ads and TV spots declaring: "Labor isn't working." At the same time, the Conservative Party imported a British-born, California-based public relations man, Gordon Reece, to soften the harsh image of Tory leader Margaret Thatcher.

Reece got her to modulate her strident voice, especially on television, to darken and change her hair style, to fix the gap in her front teeth, and advised her to slim down and wear more stylish clothes.

THIS TIME AROUND, Reece is back at Conservative headquarters, convinced that the main Tory worry is that, with public opinion polls showing a Thatcher landslide, Conservative voters may stay home out of apathy — or even vote for the Social Democratic-Liberal alliance in a gesture for the underdog.

To counter this, Mrs. Thatcher has urged her supporters and campaign workers to keep up the pressure right through polling day next Thursday, and Reece has targeted in his advertising for the last days of the campaign the SDP-Liberal alliance's alleged lack of a broad and detailed program.

For its part, the Labor Party has hired a political consulting concern, Wright & Partners. So far, Labor's advertising campaign has centered on the slogan "Think positive, vote Labor."

Labor is following up the unemployment issue with the questions, "Are you going to vote yourself out of a job?" and "Are you going to vote for retirement at 16?"

The SDP-Liberal alliance has hired the ad agency of Gold Greenless Trott, which has saved its big splash for this final week of the campaign. It is stressing humor.

FOR INSTANCE, it shows Margaret Thatcher as the tin man in the "Wizard of Oz" with the caption, "If only I had a heart," while Labor leader Michael Foot is depicted as the scarecrow with the words, "If only I had a brain."

The agencies are channeling the bulk of their advertising expenditures into newspapers because, under British law, they are forbidden to advertise on commercial television.

However, each of the two major parties is granted five 10-minute segments on television without charge, with the alliance being apportioned four such periods during the campaign.

With the adman's presumed know-how, though, the Thatcher strategists are using only five-minute segments, except in the final spot, because they believe 10 minutes is simply too long and bores the voters.

A British campaign law is designed to limit expenditures so that rich or well-heeled candidates for Parliament cannot buy their seats. However, the law is fuzzy and relates mainly spending for individual candidates in their constituencies.

Thus, in a rural constituency, the limit might be around $9,000. That limit, however, does not apply to nationwide advertising on behalf of the party as a whole. And with Britain increasingly shifting into a "presidential" style campaign, in the manner of the United States, voters are really voting for the party and its leader rather than for the personality or quality of the local candidate for Parliament.

THE RESULT IS THAT millions of dollars are being poured into the British national newspapers, hawking the virtues of the respective parties — rather than those of individual candidates.

In the past, parties stuck to simple slogans and plastered their posters in public places around the country. The Conservatives usually had the better locations because companies let their premises be used to carry the message.

This time, the SDP-Liberal alliance is trying to counter this by placing its posters on sound trucks that drive slowly through key voting areas.

St. Louis finally deals Braves right 'Cards'

Cardinal pitching 'stupifies' Atlanta's bats

Montreal catcher Gary Carter shows umpire Dick Stello he has the ball after tagging out Giants' pitcher Mike Krukow at the plate, Friday night.

By The Associated Press

John Stuper was glad to be part of the St. Louis Cardinals' gentle reminder.

By pitching seven solid innings, and getting 16 hits in support, he not only raised his record to 7-2, but he also gave the St. Louis Cardinals their first victory over Atlanta in seven games this season. Sunday's winning score was 8-3.

In fact, it was the first victory over the Braves for the World Series champion Cardinals since they swept Atlanta in the National League Championship Series.

"Losing gets old," said Stuper, who left after giving up Dale Murphy's leadoff homer in the eighth. "We needed to remind people that we are still the world champions."

Willie McGee drove in two of St. Louis' runs, including one in the Cards' four-run ninth inning, and Ken Oberkfell and Darrell Porter had three hits each.

"In the other games, they got the key hits and scored the runs," Oberkfell said. "Today, we did. We were aggressive today because we had guys on base. In the six games we lost to them, we had no opportunity to be aggressive."

One of Oberkfell's hits snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning, and the Cards led the rest of the way, although Atlanta kept the game close until the ninth inning.

An RBI single by David Green in the sixth made it 3-1, but Atlanta got an RBI hit by Claudell Washington in the seventh to pull within one. McGee drove in the eventual winning run in the eighth with a sacrifice fly before Murphy's homer sent the game into the ninth inning with the Cards leading 4-3.

"Everytime we thought they were going to catch them, they scored another run," Atlanta third baseman Bob Horner said. "They got the key hits."

NL Roundup

Expos 12, Giants 9

Andre Dawson went 5-for-5 for the second time this season, Al Oliver added four hits and Tim Wallach drove in three runs as Montreal put together 20 hits to beat San Francisco.

Dawson homered and had two doubles and two singles.

San Francisco hit five home runs in the game, two apiece by Jack Clark and Chili Davis and one by Joel Youngblood, but four of them came after they trailed 9-1.

Dawson's performance raised his average to a league-leading .347.

Astros 6, Reds 3

Houston scored four runs in the seventh inning to erase a 3-0 Cincinnati lead and drop the Reds into last place in the NL West. Kevin Bass, pinch hitting for winning pitcher Vern Ruhle, drove in the first two runs of the inning with a double and later scored the go-ahead run on Tim Tolman's sacrifice fly.

Reds right-hander Charlie Puleo had allowed only a bunt single by Terry Puhl before walking the bases full in the seventh.

Dan Driessen homered for the Reds.

Cubs 3, Pirates 1

Jay Johnstone homered to lead off Chicago's fifth inning, sparking a three-run rally that helped the Cubs to their fifth straight victory. The loss was the sixth in a row for the Pirates.

The homer was Johnstone's third of the year and 99th of his career. It was followed by a single by Steve Lake. Lake scored when Pirates center fielder Lee Mazzilli misplayed Larry Bowa's single for an error, and Bowa, who had gone to second on the miscue, scored on a single by Mel Hall.

The rally gave Craig Lefferts his first major league victory.

Mets 4, Dodgers 2

Mookie Wilson's eighth-inning single snapped a 2-2 tie, and the Mets center fielder robbed Pedro Guerrero of a three-run homer in the second inning to lead New York over Los Angeles.

After Wilson singled home pinch runner Daryl Strawberry, he stole second, continued to third on catcher Steve Yeager's wild throw and came home on Bob Bailor's infield hit.

With runners on first and third in the second inning, Wilson leaped high above the center field fence, turning Guerrero's sure homer into a long sacrifice fly. Wilson also made a diving catch of Yeager's sinking liner to the gap in left-center in the ninth inning.

Mets right-hander Scott Holman worked 8 1-3 innings to beat Jerry Reuss.

Phillies 2, Padres 1

Philadelphia ended a six-game losing streak with the help of home runs from Garry Maddox and Joe Morgan and three innings of one-hit relief by Al Holland.

Holland was working in relief of starter Charlie Hudson, who yielded a fourth-inning run on Steve Garvey's RBI single.

Maddox homered to open the third, and Morgan's eight-inning homer snapped the 1-1 tie, ending San Diego's three-game win streak.

Ed Whitson took the loss despite yielding only five hits in eight innings.

Miller wins LPGA in sudden death

WHEELING, W.Va (AP) — What the West Virginia LPGA Classic may be lacking in some areas, it is more than making up for it in dramatic finishes.

For five straight years the champion of the tournament, played on the hilly, grueling, 6,100-yard Speidel course, has been decided in a sudden-death playoff, an LPGA record.

Alice Miller, a five-year pro from Marysville, Calif., joined the winner's circle Sunday by rolling in a 10-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of sudden death to win a three-way playoff with Debbie Massey and Lori Garbacz.

"The way I look at it, I've already had a successful year," Miller said after her first tour victory, worth $22,500. "I didn't know how my nerves would hold up. I went to the locker room before the playoff to settle down and go for pars."

The three golfers, tied after regulation with even-par 216s, parred the first two holes of the playoff before Massey was eliminated when she shot a par-5 while Miller and Garbacz birdied.

On the final hole, Miller hit her tee shot to the left, then used a wedge to get within 10 feet of the pin. Garbacz, who shot a final-round 69 to move into contention, three-putted the green for a bogey.

"From regulation I knew the putt would break and it went right in the hole," Miller said.

The final-round drama heightened when five golfers moved to within two shots with three holes remaining, including two-time defending champion Hollis Stacy.

Stacy shot a 2-under 70 on the final round to finish at 1-over 217, one shot behind the leaders.

First-round leader LeAnn Cassady was 2-over for the tournament, as was Anne-Marie Palli.

Patty Sheehan, seeking to win the tournament and a $450,000 bonus after a victory in the Corning Classic the previous week, finished three shots behind the leaders.

Couples enjoy Kemper win

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Deborah Morgan-Couples was playing in a tennis tournament in California when she learned that her husband, Fred, had a chance to win 1983 Kemper Open golf tournament. She took the "red-eye" all night flight east to be next to him.

Debbie, a tennis teaching pro, didn't realize, however, it was going to take Fred until the second hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday to beat four others in the extra action and pocket the $72,000 first prize.

"When I saw him on television, I could see the confidence," she said after Couples had scored his first Tour victory. "He had the eye of a tiger."

Couples, a 23-year-old three-year pro who plays out of LaQuinta, Calif., nearly lost the championship in regulation to Scott Simpson, who missed a four-foot putt on No. 18 that sent the outcome into extra holes.

"I misread it," said Simpson as he hurried out of the dressing room. "I read it straight and it broke a lot." Simpson had a 77 in the final round.

Simpson, Couples and T.C. Chen, a rookie from Taiwan who closed with a 76, made up the final threesome, and it took them more than five hours to complete the round — finishing an hour after group ahead of them.

After Simpson missed the putt, he and Couples, along with Barry Jaeckel, Gil Morgan and Chen, all of whom finished the four rounds with 1-under-par 287s, began the sudden death on the 554-yard, par-5 15th hole at the Congressional Country Club Course.

All but Jaeckel, who, with Morgan, had finished regulation play two hours earlier with 70s, parred the hole.

On the 211-yard, par-3 No. 16, Couples hit his 5-iron within 18 inches and the tournament was all but over.

"All it take is one good shot and that's what I did on No. 16," said Couples, who shot a 5-over-par 77 Sunday after earlier rounds of 71-71-68.

"I would have loved to have shot 72 or 73 and won by five or six, but that's not the way it is," he said. "We definitely backed up the field."

His wife Debbie, however, was positive her husband, who she met at a football game at the University of Houston was going to win the Kemper.

Despite his sudden-death victory, Couples wasn't resting on his laurels. He was up early this morning to try and qualify for the U.S. Open later this month.

Simmons cheats Angels; Tigers beat Rangers in ten

By The Associated Press

Ted Simmons cheats. He admits it. He also admits he got caught at it. But he made up for it in a most unusual way — with his bat.

His baserunning in the seventh inning cost Milwaukee a run, but he got that one back — and the game-winner as well — with a homer in the bottom of the ninth that boosted the Brewers to a 5-4 victory Sunday over the California Angels.

"If we had lost this game, I would have been in a big-league mess," the lead-footed Simmons said. "My mind tells me what to do, but sometimes my legs try to do something they can't."

In the seventh inning, Simmons' double cut California's lead to 4-3 and reached third on a grounder to short when Tim Foli's throw, which had him beat by a good 20 feet, sailed over Doug DeCinces' head.

But when Ben Oglivie flied out to Reggie Jackson in right field, Simmons took off an instant before the catch. The Angels appealed and Simmons was called out.

"There is so little time in between, they usually give you two feet. I cheated three feet," the Brewers' catcher admitted. "It was a smart thing to do because you always have to cheat. They give you that — but I cheated a little too much and they called me out.

"I don't deny that I started early," Simmons said. "It was good baserunning. It just turned out bad."

In the ninth inning, after Robin Yount singled, Andy Hassler served up a breaking pitch and Simmons hit his fifth homer. Moose Haas went the distance for the victory, scattering eight hits, two of them homers by Jackson and Fred Lynn. The homer was Jackson's ninth and the 900th extra-base hit of his career. Ned Yost also homered for the Brewers.

AL Roundup

Mariners 8, Yankees 7

Al Cowens, playing so poorly earlier this season that the Mariners gave rookie Ricky Nelson a shot at right field, responded to the platooning by hitting a home run and a triple and driving in three runs against the Yankees.

"It's been a real rough year for me. I've had my problems," Cowens said. "I tried 99 different stances and nothing worked. Now I've dropped my hands and it seems to have helped...I hope this is a good start for me."

Cowens hit a two-run homer in the second inning to give Seattle a 4-0 lead. The Yanks went ahead 5-4 on homers by Ken Griffey and Dave Winfield, but the Mariners went ahead to stay with a four-run fifth.

Twins 10, Red Sox 4

Gary Ward found his new position in the batting order very much to his liking. "I needed to switch things around to get some offense going," Manager Billy Gardner explained after he dropped Ward from third to fifth. Ward responded with a triple and a two-run homer and drove in three runs.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

The Blue Jays walked past Baltimore, leaving Toronto, Boston and the Orioles in a virtual three-way tie for first place in the East.

Four Blue Jays walked in the sixth inning and three came around to score in a five-run uprising. "Those walks will kill you," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli.

Four of the runs scored on Buck Martinez' grand-slam homer. "The last one I hit was in 1967 in Sacramento, in an amateur game," he said.

Tigers 5, Rangers 4

Buddy Bell of Texas kept the Rangers' hopes alive with a game-tying, two-out, two-strike home run in the bottom of the ninth inning — but Kirk Gibson of Detroit countered in the top of the 10th with his third hit of the game and third run batted in, a leadoff homer.

Gibson also doubled for one run, hit an RBI grounder and scored once.

A's 8-9, Indians 3-2

Oakland's batters pounded Cleveland's pitchers for 23 hits in their sweep, striking for all eight first-game runs in the ninth inning, then getting homers from Wayne Gross and Rickey Henderson in the finale.

Mike Heath hit a two-run double and Garry Hancock, in his second at-bat in the inning, added a two-run single in the opening-game explosion. Gross hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning, Mike Davis had a two-run single in the fifth and Henderson hit his three-run homer in a fourth-run sixth to blow away the Indians in the second game.

Royals 7-2, White Sox 5-5

Four-run eighth innings were pivotal in both the Royals' opening-game victory and Chicago's nightcap triumph.

In the first game, U. L. Washington hit a three-run homer for Kansas City, then Tom Paciorek hit a three-run double for the White Sox in the second game. Floyd Bannister of the White Sox pitched six perfect innings in the opener before Willie Wilson's leadoff single triggered a two-run seventh.

Ramsey to Townsell express leads LA win

By The Associated Press

Jojo Townsell may be brand new to the United States Football League. But he's no stranger to Los Angeles Express quarterback Tom Ramsey.

Townsell, who joined the Express just last week, caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from Ramsey with 2:38 to play Sunday to give Los Angeles a 17-13 win over the Arizona Wranglers and a tie for the lead with Oakland in the USFL's Pacific Division. The touchdown came on a play the two had practiced often as teammates at UCLA.

"Tom Ramsey and I have thrown this pattern before," said Townsell, who signed with the Express last week after spurning the National Football League New York Jets, who made him their third-round draft choice.

"The play was called and I just beat my man and the coverage was wide open."

In other USFL games Sunday, the Philadelphia Stars moved closer to becoming the first team to clinch a playoff berth, topping the Michigan Panthers 29-20, and the Tampa Bay Bandits swamped the Birmingham Stallions 45-17.

USFL Roundup

Los Angeles' win, before a crowd of only 13,826 in the Los Angeles Coliseum, was keyed by its defense, which had nine sacks.

In Philadelphia, only 19,088 people showed up in 76,000-seat Veterans Stadium to watch Chuck Fusina complete 24 of 32 passes for three touchdown passes in an opened-up Stars' offense. Philadelphia ran its record to 12-2 and will clinch the Atlantic Division title if Boston loses to Chicago tonight.

In Tampa, the Bandits bounced back from a 36-point loss to Michigan to whip Birmingham before a crowd of 35,623 and take a half-game lead over Chicago in the Central Division. Jimmy Jordan, who returned at quarterback after missing a month with an injury, passed for 223 yards and four touchdowns.

Noah wins French Open, brings fellow countrymen a day of glory

PARIS (AP) — The importance of the French Open title match in this nation of tennis addicts was summed up in a Paris headline with these patriotic lines from the national anthem La Marseillaise: Le Jour de Gloire.

The day of glory arrived in France Sunday when Yannick Noah became the first Frenchman in 37 years to win the world's No. 1 clay court tournament by defeating 18-year-old Mats Wilander of Sweden, the defending champion, 6-2, 7-5, 7-6.

It was the first Grand Slam title for Noah, a 23-year-old who is ranked sixth in the world and is the best-known athlete in France.

When the 6-foot-4, 180-pound Noah won the third-set tiebreaker 7-3 to wrap up the title, the 16,500 fans at Roland Garros Stadium broke into chants of "No-ah, No-ah, No-ah" as they waved flags and wore sun hats bearing Noah's name.

Overcome with emotion, Noah jumped over the net and ran into the arms of his father, who had traveled from his home in the west African nation of Cameroon to watch his son play.

"In the past, everytime he's come here to watch me play, he's gone back to Cameroon with more gray hair," Noah joked. "Maybe he won't get so many this time because I won."

Playing aggressively at the net against Wilander's baseline strategy, Noah overpowered his younger opponent in two hours, 24 minutes. The fans became so excited in the tense third set that the umpire frequently had to ask for quiet.

"I thought the crowd was going to be like it was," Wilander said after his defeat. "A crowd like that doesn't really help me win a match. Maybe it helped Yannick a little."

The defeat marked the first time Wilander has ever lost a match on the slow Garros courts. Last year, the Swede made tennis history in Paris when he became the youngest man to win a Grand Slam title. In 1981, Wilander won the French Open junior crown.

"I think he is one of the top players in the world," Wilander said of Noah. "I think he can win on any surface."

But there is one surface the French champion will not try this year. Noah, who dislikes playing on grass, says he will skip Wimbledon, which begins June 20.

His hair plaited in scores of braids, Noah says one of his goals this year will be to do well on the hard courts at the U.S. Open in New York. His victory in Paris proved that an aggressive serve-and-volley game can triumph on these slow courts where baseline players like Sweden's Bjorn Borg have long dominated the title matches. Borg, a six-time French open champion who retired from tennis in April, was here as a television commentator.

Noah was the first Frenchman to win the French Open since Marcel Bernard took the title 37 years ago in 1946. The last time a Frenchman reached the final at Roland Garros was in 1972, when Spain's Andres Gimeno defeated Patrick Proisy, now Noah's brother-in-law.

In Sunday's title match, Noah dominated throughout. He had five aces to Wilander's two, six service breaks to the Swede's two and only double faulted once while Wilander failed to get his serves in twice.

Longhorns take on Cowboys tonight in NCAA world series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Stanford used the pitching of Steve Cottrell and Kevin Kunkel, and pitcher Doug Henry's one-hitter and Barry Bonds' bat lifted Arizona State as they stayed alive in the NCAA College World Series baseball tournament here Sunday.

Stanford eliminated James Madison, 3-1, while Arizona State sidelined Maine, 6-0, in losers bracket games in the double elimination event.

Fifth-ranked Arizona State and the second-ranked Cardinal advance into Thursday night's games against losers of Monday's Texas-Oklahoma State and Tuesday's Michigan-Alabama winners bracket games, respectively.

Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward and Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson view their respective baseball teams with mutual respect, if not fondness since their meetings generally are dogfights.

"I have a lot of respect for Cliff and his ball club," said Ward. "We recruit a lot of the same kids so we know a lot about each other.

"Cliff is kind of a legend in college baseball. His ball clubs always have defense and speed to take advantage of that artificial surface they play on at home, and the center of that is pitching. They always have just outstanding pitching."

Ward remembers too well about Texas' pitching. Last year, Longhorn fireballer Roger Clemens handcuffed the Cowboys in a 9-1 whipping.

Gustafson will throw Clemens again Monday night.

"It just worked out that way," he said. "(Calvin) Schiraldi has been our best pitcher all season long and that's why he started our first game."

Schiraldi tossed a five-hitter against James Madison Friday.

"They're (the Cowboys) a very balanced ball club," Gustafson said. "I hated to see either one of them (Stanford or Oklahoma State) win because I hated to play either one."

Gustafson also praised Ward's pitching staff, saying either Gary Kanwisher (9-3) or Eric Schmidt (7-0) would be tough to face Monday.

In the other winners bracket battle, Alabama Coach Barry Shollenberger said jokingly, "It has the makings of a great football game...the Wolverines against the Tide."

It has the makings of an excellent baseball game as well, with the two winningest teams in the CWS facing off.

Alabama's victory Saturday night marked the Crimson Tide's first appearance at the CWS since 1950, the first year the tournament was held in Omaha.

It also marked the first loss in the last seven opening games for CWS regular Arizona State.

"We've played a lot of good teams getting here," said Alabama first baseman David Magadan, who tied a CWS record with five hits in the opening game.

Magadan, who led the nation in hitting with his .523 average, listed defending champion Miami, Southeast Conference opponent Mississippi State and nationally ranked Florida State.

LCC tops Lewis-Clark, 4-3

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Top-ranked Lewis-Clark State had hoped to be home by now — enjoying the championship of the NAIA World Series.

But a rainout Saturday and some hitting heroics Sunday by Lubbock Christian's Steve Coleman have set up a championship game tonight.

Coleman hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to give LCC a 4-3 win — and a chance to play for the title. Lewis-Clark could have wrapped up the tournament with a win.

It was the first loss for Lewis-Clark in the double elimination tournament and the first of the year to another NAIA team.

Coleman went three-for-four Sunday and his homer erased a 3-2 Lewis-Clark lead and gave LCC the win.

Bob Hinson allowed Lewis-Clark just six hits Sunday to get the win. Rich Medina got the loss while allowing just five hits. However, he walked seven and three of those runners scored.

Lubbock Christian is now 55-27 for the season. Lewis-Clark is 69-10 for the season and 49-1 against NAIA teams.

CLEC clucking about profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Profits for the nation's 24 largest producers of natural gas have risen excessively since the government began lifting price ceilings in 1978, says a new study by a group that wants to reimpose controls.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition said in the study released Sunday that the profits of two dozen producers responsible for nearly half the nation's supply of gas increased from $4.3 billion to $10.1 billion over the past five years.

Robert Brandon, the coalition's executive director, said that only the beverage and oil service and supply industries have enjoyed larger percentage increases in profits since 1978.

"Under the Natural Gas Policy Act gas producers have enjoyed windfall profits far greater than reasonable," Brandon said.

The coalition, an organization of consumer groups and labor unions opposing President Reagan's efforts to remove all controls on gas, said the average wellhead price jumped 165 percent nationwide while drilling costs rose only 87 percent during the past five years.

The Natural Gas Supply Association, an organization of producers, called the coalition's study "misleading" and said it failed to adequately address the risks and returns on investments required to explore for gas.

"There's some money being made on natural gas; there's no doubt about that," said Mike Waters, a spokesman for the association. "But there also are producers out there going bankrupt because they cannot sell their gas."

The coalition's study was based on Census Bureau and Energy Department data and reports filed by the 24 companies with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

While drilling and sales have declined recently because of a supply glut, the coalition said, the largest natural gas producers have been able to maintain their profit margins because of high prices.

Because many of those producers also are the nation's largest oil companies, the coalition said the SEC reports "do not really allow for a reliable analysis of return on investment or stockholders' equity" for natural gas alone.

But it said the financial reports of two large independents who rely on natural gas for the bulk of their revenues demonstrate that partial decontrol under the 1978 law has produced "an extraordinarily high level of profits and profitability on domestic natural gas production."

Between 1978 and 1982, the coalition's report said, return on stockholders' equity rose from 13 percent to 31 percent for Mesa Petroleum and from 9.3 percent to 26.8 percent for Southland Royalty.

Waters said he doubts that the coalition's study "could withstand the test of analysis by recognized economists or financial experts."

"There are 12,000 drillers out there," he said. "You can't look at two companies and extrapolate from that what 12,000 of them are doing."

MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

BORGER, Texas (AP) - Along with the rowdies and roughnecks and boomtown crazies, Ace Borger and Frank Phillips came to the Texas Panhandle at the birth of the oil frenzy.

Ace, a banker-businessman, would give this prairie town its name. Frank, an oilman, would give it its future. That was more than half a century ago, during the Roaring Twenties.

Now, for the next week or so, the city of Borger is honoring the Phillips Petroleum Co. and its thousands of employees, past and present.

They're billing it as the "Borger '66' Celebration," a spinoff on the energy giant's 66th anniversary.

Likewise, no one here is unaware that the company's "trademark of excellence" is its widely recognized red, white and black Phillips 66 shields.

The brand name, incidentally, stems in part from nearby U.S. Highway 66, once envisioned as the backbone of the company's marketing area.

Whatever, the "66" gala includes fish fries, sports events, parties, dinners, speeches, receptions, air shows, industrial exhibitions, arts and crafts shows, carnivals, tours, armadillo races, dancing in the streets and finally, on Friday, a pair of concerts by sultry C&W singer Sylvia.

"Everybody in town is getting involved in this," says Maree Johnson of the Borger Chamber of Commerce. "There has been a partnership between Phillips and Borger ever since Borger was founded in 1926.

"One has grown with the other. We're certainly big boosters of Phillips Petroleum and they're certainly a big booster of Borger."

Touching on the latter, the multibillion-dollar company, though headquartered in Bartlesville, Okla., has more than a casual impact on this city's economic wellbeing.

Phillips:

—Employs 2,646 people in Hutchinson County, about a sixth of the total work force.

—Reports an annual payroll of $93 million, not counting independent contractors and construction firms hired to work at its various facilities here aand the adjoining sister community that bears Phillips' name.

—Paid $4.9 million in taxes to governmental entities within the county in 1982 and expects to pay $6 million this year.

—Donates heavily to such projects as a new community activity center now under construction.

—Awards more than a dozen $4,000 scholarships annually to area students.

—Recently completed a $400 million refinery expansion program that, said company spokesman Don Kremer, suggests that "Phillips is in Borger to stay."

Roughly half the county's 38,000 residents live in Borger, about an hour's drive north of Amarillo and a couple of million light years removed from its lusty past.

The town that Ace Borger founded in the mid-1920s was a bawdy, brawling oil boomtown that reputedly grew "overnight" to nearly 30,000 people, give or take a hooker and a hijacker and including more than a few Texas Rangers.

It was Ace Borger himself who once proclaimed:

"The secret of success in the oil town business is being ahead of the rest of the crowd a few hours or a few days."

Those early arrivals included a substantial number of honest oil men but also a vast following of gamblers, con men, fallen angels and unsavories of all ilks.

"Many undesirable people came to Borger, giving it the name of the toughest city in the United States," wrote one historian in 1930. "There were people of every description and from every state ... seeking riches or adventure.

"The task of organizing an incorporated town out of all these (black) gold-seeking prospectors, with the evil and vice that follows, was indeed a colossal one."

Twice the town was placed under martial law before the Rangers brought things under control.

At one point, wrote roustabout-author Slim Jones, "Two-Gun Dick Heirig" ruled Borger with an "iron hand ... placing his trust in his six-shooter ... and his faith in his police dogs."

Wrote Slim:

"At that time there was eight hundred and twenty-four joints running wide open under Dick's urisdiction. Eleven hundred and twenty-one slot machines; one thousand, two hundred and eighty wild women ...

"Dick was to collect $18 a week from each of these women. The money that was collected other ways by his hi-jackers or robbers was fifty-fifty."

Laughs Maree Johnson today: "Borger was born a wildcat, but she's fast becoming a lady."

Chances are good that Ace Borger and Frank Phillips would be poud of their respective namesakes.

Let the games begin.

Westerners biggest spenders, figures show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western states lead the nation in average retail sales, with residents spending $3,619 each, according to government figures.

Average annual retail spending was $3,291 for Americans in 1977, according to the Census Bureau's survey of trade, which used the most recent statistics available.

The North Central states were second in spending at $3,370 per person, followed by the South at $3,177 and the Northeast, $3,093.

"The Western states have higher spending because their incomes are higher," said Martin Lefkowitz of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

While the Northeast is second in income, it fell behind in retail spending. Lefkowitz said the Northeast contains many large cities, and their residents tend to spend more on rent and utilities and less on items which show in the retail statistics.

Thus, the presence of large urban populations pushed such states as New York and Rhode Island well down the retail list, along with Southern states where lower incomes reduce money available for retail spending.

Alaska, where higher prices are the main factor, topped the retail list.

Here is a state-by-state listing the 1977 average annual retail spending, per person:

1. Alaska, $4,607; 2. Nevada, $4,526; 3. Wyoming, $4,019; 4. New Hampshire, $3,885; 5. Oregon, $3,832; 6. Montana, $3,692; 7. Colorado, $3,644; 8. California, $3,627; 9. Hawaii, $3,597; 10. Delaware, $3,595;

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today after an early advance faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 3 points in early trading, was down 2.10 at 1,210.94 by noontime.

Gainers held a slim lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Friday the Federal Reserve reported a $400 million decline in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended May 25. That broke the pattern of the past weeks, during which the money supply figures consistently showed faster-than-expected growth.

Meanwhile, a monthly survey of corporate purchasing executives indicated that economic activity continued to improve in May, although at a slower pace than it set in April.

Texas Gas Resources jumped 7½ to 46 after a delayed opening, and Coastal Corp. fell 1½ to 26¼. Coastal offered to buy 52 percent of Texas Gas's outstanding stock for $45 a share, in what it described as a first step toward à takeover.

Coleco jumped 6½ to 57½ amid interest in the company's new Adam home computer system.

Woman fights for Reagan's policies

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — One of the most remarkable women in the high echelons of the Reagan administration is the widowed mother of two teenage boys and a 10-year-old girl who is playing a major role in promoting public support for the president's policies and re-election.

As assistant to the president for public liaison, Faith Ryan Whittlesey meets frequently with public and special interest groups, ranging from labor to business, women to blacks, and religious lobbies to farmers.

She is credited with having helped win union support for the MX missile. She is now striving to enlighten these organized groups on what is at stake for America's security in the Soviet-Cuban support of revolutionary movements in Central America.

She thinks the theory of falling dominoes applies to Central America just as it did to the Vietnamese communist conquest of South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos after the U.S. pulled out of the Indochina war. She shares the president's fear that if the communist-oriented revolutionists seize power in El Salvador, then Guatemala will fall and Mexico will be the next prime target. She doesn't want her two boys to be called on to fight, and possibly die, on the Mexican border when the potential threat to America's security can, she believes, be stopped in Central America with military and economic aid to the anti-communist forces in those countries.

ON DOMESTIC ISSUES, she is fully aware that if the president runs for re-election, as she is convinced he will, the Democrats will probably try to make unemployment a major issue in the campaign, portraying the president as lacking concern for the working classes. She ridicules this as political rhetoric and a lack of understanding of the president's compassion for the underprivileged bred from the misery of his own poverty-stricken family's experience during the great depression of the 1930's. She, too, came up the hard way. Her dock-working father never made more than $100 a week, and she remembers her mother braving the wintry weather of Buffalo, N.Y. to walk to a nurse's aid job to earn money to help educate her two children

The views of the candid, articulate and dynamic 44-year-old woman were made clear during a luncheon conversation with the writer.

Confident that workers, even many of the unemployed, like President Reagan and understand that he is trying to bring about sound economic recovery, Mrs. Whittlesey hopes to prove it when he starts to campaign openly for re-election. She wants him to concentrate on visiting workers in factories, mines and office buildings as well as farmers, with less attention devoted to appearances at wealthy fundraising dinners.

BECAUSE SHE IS so frank, intense and outspoken, the granddaughter of an immigrant Irishman has become a controversial figure in White House circles since she succeeded Mrs. Robert Dole as public liaison director last March. It was assumed by some White House advisers she would devote her attention to women's issues but she quickly let it be known she was not interested in doing that. She points out that she has never been deeply involved in women's issues. She has alienated feminists by opposing the Equal Rights Amendment and anti-abortionists by favoring individual choice.

White House aids who fear she might become a political liability have already started leaking stories about her alleged indiscretions at staff meetings and predicting her role in policy decisions on the sensitive women's issue will be curbed.

However, she is said by others in the White House to have the strong support of the president, to whom she delivered in 1980 the votes of Delaware County, a key suburban county near Philadelphia. At that time, she was a member of the Pennsylvania legislature and one of the most successful Republican women activists in the state. She helped him draft the Republicans' 1980 defense policy plank.

AFTER HE WON the election, President Reagan rewarded her with the post of ambassador to Switzerland. The Jersey City-born graduate of Wells College studied law at the University of Pennsylvania, took a post-graduate course at the Academy of International Law, The Hague, taught in Philadelphia public schools, and served as special assistant to the attorney general in the Pennsyl

Newspaper quotes source in bomb report

READING, Pa. (AP) — The Reading Eagle, quoting a U.S. intelligence source, says recent reports from the Middle East indicate that Libyan Col. Moammar Khadafy has five crude atomic bombs, but no system to deliver them accurately.

The newspaper, in a copyright story that quoted the unidentified "highly reliable" source, said if the report is true, Libya would be the first of the Islamic nations to obtain nuclear weapons.

The existence of atomic devices in Libya's arsenal was "brought to light in recent days by agents operating in the Middle East," the newspaper said Sunday. But the Eagle quoted its source as saying the Libyans have not developed a system to deliver the bombs on target.

Anson Franklin, assistant White House press secretary, said Saturday night, "We don't comment on intelligence reports." The State Department also declined comment.

A CIA press spokesman did not return phone calls Saturday night, the Eagle said, and attempts to reach the Libyan mission in Washington, D.C., Saturday night were unsuccessful.

State Department press officer Sondra McCarty told The Associated Press on Sunday that "I don't have anything on it."

"We really don't have anything at this point on it," press officer Capt. Jim Santana at the Defense Department told the AP.

According to the Eagle, Libya obtained the bombs through Pakistan after investing more than $100 million in a Pakistani project. Libya also provided Pakistan with uranium from Niger, the newspaper said.

The source also said that Israel, while publicly denying it has developed a nuclear option, is believed to have a sophisticated arsenal of nuclear weapons with refined delivery systems, the newspaper said.

New president to be elected

PEKING (AP) — The nearly 3,000 members of China's National People's Congress convened with in pomp-filled ceremonies today to elect the country's first president in 14 years and endorse the modernization plans of leader Deng Xiaoping.

Premier Zhao Ziyang, opening the session with the annual government report, said the nation of 1 billion has made great progress in modernization. He said political life "steadily is returning to normal."

Zhao outlined China's economic and foreign policies and its social and cultural achievements since the last Congress in 1978. He said the current tasks are economic development and social advancement, including better treatment for once scorned intellectuals and scientists.

Since 1978, he said, China has readjusted its economy while maintaining a fairly high growth rate.

Zhao delivered his report, equivalent to a state of the union address, at the Great Hall of the People. The main auditorium was draped with China's red five-starred flags and decorated with roses and potted trees.

The 164 members of the presidium sat on a red-carpeted stage, and behind them hung the red and gold national seal. Many of China's aging leaders were helped to their seats by attendants.

For the third consecutive year, reporters are being permitted to attend the opening and selected sessions of the 17-day parliament session.

The new congress will elect China's first head of state in 14 years and elect a State Military Commission intended to improve the organization of the armed forces and take daily administration away from the Communsit Party.

The President — there is only one candidate nominated by the party — will be 78-year-old Li Xiannian, an economist and financial expert. The major function of the largely ceremonial post will be receiving foreign visitors.

China's last president, Liu Shaochi, was removed from office and died in prison in 1969. He was jailed for criticizing the Great Leap Forward and other unsuccessful economic policies of Chairman Mao Tsetung.

The presidency was abolished in 1975 but it was restored in the new constitution adopted last December.

This is the first session of the Sixth People Congress, China's highest legislative body whose members are elected for five-year terms.

Achievements of summit credited to compromise

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

PARIS — At the conclusion of the summit conference last week in Williamsburg, Va., the Times of London headlined its account of the proceedings: "Reagan Sheds Cowboy Image." But many European commentators credit the success of the talks not to Reagan but to a general atmosphere of compromise.

The Paris weekly l'Express said, "White House aides in Williamsburg were openly hailing the performance of their president, but within the French delegation the phrase was repeated, 'Nobody won, nobody lost,' in order to explain, if not justify, a conference that ... ended without major disaster but also without brilliant success."

The Economist of London, while noting that Reagan's "insistence on informality had much to do with a pleasing success," gave major credit for the outcome to President Francois Mitterrand of France and Premier Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan.

"Both did their utmost," the Economist said, "to ensure that the weekend in Williamsurg was a cozy and friendly affair, helpful for the re-election of both the American and British leaders — Mr. Nakasone by sounding more like a NATO member than do most NATO members; Mr. Mitterrand by sounding as eager a fiscal conservative as the rest, and by backpedaling furiously on calls for fixed exchange rates."

Mitterrand came back to Paris feeling better about the conference than he did when he departed, largely because he found that he did not argue all by himself with Reagan over high U.S. interest rates. The Americans heard that argument from all sides, and Mitterrand, in fact, waited until last to speak on the subject and then only supported what others had already said.

REACTION IN West Germany has been mixed, though government spokesmen have characterized the talks as a success.

The main success in Washington's view was the declaration that reiterated the determination of the seven governments involved — the United States, Canada, Japan, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy — to support the basing of new U.S. intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe. But Mitterrand is now plunged into an internal argument with France's Communist Party, which supports his government, for agreeing to the declaration.

Hence neither Mitterrand nor French commentators are talking much about a "Reagan success" at Williamsburg. They are brooding over whether Mitterrand had a success or a defeat.

Representatives of the British press who were present at Williamsburg were more inclined to see the talks in terms of positive results. The Times of London commented:

"It will be remembered as the occasion when President Reagan emerged as an international leader of stature, finally managing to shed his cowboy image and show that he is capable of mastering the niceties of diplomacy as well as the complexity of the global economy. It was Reagan's personal summit from the start, and many feared it might turn out to be a disaster."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH said that Reagan's "performance has further strengthened his as yet unannounced candidacy for re-election as president in 1984."

Although West German leaders appeared to be pleased with the outcome of the talks, opposition leaders expressed disappointment.

Hans Heinz Hauser, deputy floor leader in Parliament for Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Union and its Bavarian ally, the Christian Social Union, described the summit talks as successful.

Khadafy's arrival creates turmoil for summit

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's unexpected arrival created turmoil in preparations for the 19th Organization of African Unity summit and could delay the official opening of the meeting scheduled for today.

African leaders met informally behind closed doors today and delegates, who declined to be named, said the meetings focused on the Western Sahara dispute, which has paralyzed the OAU since last year, and on who should replace Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi as chairman.

Some delegates said Khadafy, who arrived here Sunday night, planned to claim the chairmanship which was denied him because of the failure to convene two OAU summits in Tripoli last year.

One delegate from a moderate African country which frequently has been at odds with Libya said he believed Khadafy had "a better than 50 percent chance" of becoming chairman, provided he doesn't try to hold another summit in his capital.

The delegate said this would cause "alarm and concern among many people," particularly moderate African leaders who stayed away from Tripoli because of hostility to Khadafy's radical policies.

Khadafy had not been expected. In recent years, he sent lower-level delegations and the last time he attended an OAU summit was in 1975.

Khadafy's arrival, presumably to play a personal role in the Western Sahara dispute, threw preparations into a state of confusion. The Sahara conflict, involving debate over OAU membership for the Polisario guerrilla movement, threated to scuttle the summit for a third time in a year.

Some delegates predicted a delay in the opening of the schedueld six-day conference to allow time for more behind-the-scenes negotiations over the Polisario Front, a leftist group backed by Libya and Algeria which has been fighting Morocco for control of the Western Sahara.

The Western Sahara issue and the question of who should legally represent Chad torpedoed the two attempts to hold a summit at Tripoli last August and November. There was speculation Khadafy still wants to become OAU chairman — a position denied him when the two planned summits collapsed.

The Western Sahara issue came to the forefront of OAU affairs in February 1982 when Secretary-General Edem Kodjo of Togo decided to seat the guerrillas as the 51st OAU member. They took the name the Saharan Arab Democratic Republic.

Morocco led a boycott of 19 countries at that meeting, and the boycotters have since kept the OAU from officially meeting by preventing a quorum of 34 countries.

The second attempt to hold a Tripoli summit in November was plagued by the civil war in Chad. Khadafy, as host of the meeting, wanted to seat Goukouni Oueddei, a Libyan protege who had recently been ousted as president of Chad, instead of Chad President Hissene Habre.

The Chad question was not expected to be a problem this time, but the Western Sahara issue seemed still far from resolution.

A spokesman for Polisario, Moulad Said Suliman, noted the Saharan Arab Democratic Republic had been officially invited as an OAU member and said, "We will attend the meeting. We will not negotiate that."

Writer keeps money in diary case

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The reporter who supplied the forged Hitler diaries to Stern magazine kept most of the $3.75 million the magazine paid for them, the Hamburg-based Bild am Sonntag newspaper said.

"The proof that we have found with (Gerd) Heidemann basically makes further statements from witnesses unnecessary. We have almost everything in writing," Bild am Sonntag quoted an unnamed investigator in the Hamburg state prosecutor's office as saying.

The prosecutor found an "explosion" in Heidemann's assets after 1981, when he took the first payment for the diaries from Stern, the newspaper said Sunday.

Heidemann had claimed to have passed along all the money to Konrad Kujau, the Nazi relics dealer who has admitted forging the bogus books.But Kujau has said he only received about $1 million.

Allegations of arms supply denied

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir has denied allegations in an Italian parliamentary report that Israel offered to supply Red Brigade terrorists with arms.

The report charged that the extremists had refused an Israeli weapons offer in 1974, but received arms shipments from the Palestine Liberation Organization four years later.

Shamir spoke to reporters at Ben-Gurion Airport Sunday after arriving from Rome, where he completed a week of talks with West European leaders. He said that during his meetings with Italian leaders, he was "asked about these reports and denied them outright."

Police ask about child murderer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police are asking the public for any information about the mysterious gunman who last week burst into a classroom and killed three children, a teacher, a traffic policeman and then himself, a spokesman said.

Authorities searching for a motive for the bloodbath have found no one who knew the 34-year-old killer, Karel Charva, well enough to give them any meaningful clues, police spokesman Karl-Heinz Wagner said.

"It seems he had no friends. He was not married. He was totally alone," he said.

Australia to maintain relations

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Australia will maintain economic and diplomatic relations with South Africa for the present, but will re-examine air traffic and sporting contact between the two countries, Foreign Affairs Minister Bill Hayden said.

Hayden said in a statement Sunday that a code of conduct on employment standards would also be set out for Australian companies operating in South Africa.The decisions followed a general Cabinet review of Australia's relations with the white-minority government, he said.

Ayatollah criticizes countries

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini criticized the United States, the Soviet Union and France for what he claimed was their support of Iraq in the Iran-Iraq war, the official Iranian news agency said.

Khomeini's speech was read by his son Sunday at a Tehran demonstration by hundreds of thousands of Iranians honoring the anniversary of the 1963 uprising against the former Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, IRNA said.

On June 5, 1963, Moslem clergymen demonstrated against programs proposed by the shah for land reform and women's suffrage. The shah's army killed 100 people in the uprising and deported Khomeini, who went into exile in France and Iraq and returned to Iran in 1979 after the fall of the shah.

CHOCOLATE CULINARY CUES:
A CHOCOLATE LOVERS' GUIDE

Luscious chocolate cake, chocolate chip cookies, and creamy chocolate ice cream are among the most tantalizing of chocolate desserts. Although chocolate is a common term for candy and dessert items, there are really only three basic types: unsweetened, semi-sweet, and milk chocolate, which perform very differently in different applications. To understand chocolate and the various types available, it is imperative to know its origin.All pure chocolate is derived from the cocoa bean, the seed of a tree that grows in tropical climates. After harvesting, the beans are shelled, processed, and ground to form a dark, syrupy substance called chocolate liquor (it contains no alcoholic content.) Chocolate liquor, when poured into small molds and allowed to harden, forms baking or unsweetened chocolate. It is very bitter and is best used for cooking and baking. If, during manufacturing, the cocoa butter is separated from the chocolate liquor, cocoa is made. Cocoa, which imparts rich chocolatey flavor, is excellent for cake, cookie, and brownie baking, as it measures easily from the can and readily blends with dry ingredients for mixing. The Chocolate Bundt Cake featured here is a delectable cake made with unsweetened cocoa.

Sweetened chocolate, including both semi-sweet and sweet varieties, has sugar added to the chocolate liquor processing. Both can be eaten as is, but are also excellent for mousses, candy making, and specialty desserts. The semi-sweet type is available in 1-ounce blocks for cooking. It is also frequently formed by the manufacturer into chips for making the ever popular chocolate chip cookies.Chocolate Chips are available in two sizes: regular and small or Mini Chips. Because of its small size, Mini Chips are more versatile than their larger size counterpart; they are great stirred into pancake batter, muffins, quick breads, brownies, and some cake batters with a thick consistency. The Mini Chip bonus - they disperse evenly throughout the batter for baking. They also stretch further than regular chocolate chips - try using less Mini Chips for the same effect in your cookies.

The third form, milk chocolate, contains extra cocoa butter, sugar and concentrated milk solids. Generally, it is not recommended for baking because of its high milk solid content, and should not be substituted in recipes. It is best eaten as a candy bar or confection.From the three basic chocolate forms, other varieties are also made. For example, chocolate flavored syrup is a product made from cocoa and corn syrup. It is frequently used for chocolate beverages, frozen deserts, and topping for ice cream or desserts. The dark color, mild chocolate flavor, and pourable consistency are due to the manufacturing process and additional ingredients.

As a general rule, it is best to use the form of chocolate as written in the recipe. But there are several exceptions to this rule. For example, semi-sweet and sweet cooking chocolate are almost always interchangeable, and semi-sweet chocolate chips or squares can be substituted in recipes calling for melted semi-sweet chocolate. For baking and cooking purposes, cocoa can be substituted for unsweetened chocolate in recipes by using 3 tablespoons cocoa plus 1 tablespoon shortening or oil to equal 1 square of unsweetened chocolate.Different kinds of chocolate have vastly different flavors and uses. The favorite recipes included here not only show the versatility of the types of chocolate, but perhaps will whet your appetite for a taste of one of America's favorite flavors - chocolate.

Perkins: Role resembles his life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Tony Perkins, who recreates the role of Norman Bates in the movie "Psycho II," says the film character's anxiety and turmoil shows some resemblance to his own life.

"I became abnormally close to my mother and whenever my father came home I was jealous," Perkins, 51, said.

Perkins, who played the mother's boy maniac in Alfred Hitchcock's terror film "Psycho" 22 years ago, said he no longer is a loner. Things are different and better, he said, since his marriage in 1973 to former photographer Berinthia "Berry" Berenson.

"Marriage is a full life, and it needs full commitment," Perkins said in this week's issue of People magazine about life with his wife and their sons Osgood, 9, and Elvis, 7.

About his sons, Perkins said, "The time to be a parent is when they're still children. I pay attention now because I want no self-reproach later."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Actor Eddie Albert, honored for contributions to America's older generations, says the nation is losing a great resource by ignoring its elderly citizens.

"The old age of an eagle is better than the youth of a sparrow. We are missing out on a great resource for getting things done in our society by not tapping the experience of older Americas," Albert, 75, said Saturday night.

He was appearing at a reception before the Fourth Annual Evergreen Awards ceremony of the National Association of Mature People.

The non-profit organization, which supports and serves people over 40, claims 100,000 members nationwide.

Nixon's boat finds home in Nebraska

OGALLALA, Neb. (AP) — The Soviet hydrofoil Viktoria, built as a gift for President Nixon, will skim the waters of a Nebraska reservoir this summer as officials try turning the government surplus oddity into a tourist attraction.

The late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev gave the craft, capable of speeds up to 50 mph, to Nixon in 1972. After its presidential tour, the Viktoria — named for Brezhnev's wife — was used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to chase poachers and was up for grabs after being declared surplus in 1981. Nebraska won it.

The boat now is docked at Lake McConaughy, a 25-mile-long, 4-mile-wide oasis on the Nebraska plain. Ogallala officials are determined to turn the vessel into a promotional treasure.

"We don't have anything in western Nebraska that has anything to do with the history of the president of the United States, so we hope this will be an attention-getter," said Bill England, executive vice president of the Ogallala Chamber of Commerce.

"Ogallala is a fairly historic old cattle town, but we thought this might add to the attractiveness of our city," said Scott Brown, a chamber member who helped procure the boat from the General Services Administration.

"We've had a lot of criticism about what a piece of junk it was," Brown said Saturday. "But it's helped promote Ogallala already, and I think it's been well worth the money.

The 28-foot, aluminum speedboat has splashed into service on Lake McConaughy only twice since being christened last summer.

Jurors' discussion continues

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury in the "60 Minutes" slander trial spent part of the weekend reviewing videotapes of the controversial episode that brought the case to court.

The panel of nine women and three men resumes deliberations today, after reviewing the key "60 Minutes" segment on Saturday as well as several outtakes of film that was recorded for the show but never used.

They also listened to some audio recordings before returning to their closed deliberation room, where they talked until recessing about 4 p.m. Saturday.

Superior Court Judge Jack Swink gave the jurors Sunday off.

Lawyers in the case, as well as the plaintiff, Dr. Carl Galloway, and one of the defendants, producer Stephen Glauber, paced the courthouse hallways or sat in the courtroom throughout the day, waiting for a decision.

Galloway sued CBS, "60 Minutes" and television newsman Dan Rather over a December 1979 segment entitled "It's No Accident."

Dioxin tainted market reopens

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A farmers' market ordered closed after officials found high levels of dioxin a block away has reopened, but outdoor sales were banned to avoid any chance of exposing food to the toxic chemical.

About 40 merchants were back in business — indoors — on Sunday at the Newark Farmers Market, which supplies fresh and frozen food to stores in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

The market was closed Thursday by Gov. Thomas H. Kean after officials found dioxin at an abandoned chemical plant a block away.

Promoter wants smaller festival

DEVORE, Calif. (AP) — As US Festival '83 closed with country music, the computer wizard who financed the four-day event said he hopes for a scaled-down festival next year — without spending his millions to do it.

Steve Wozniak, the Apple home computer designer who helped finance the four-day outdoor music show, said Sunday's country segment drew 35,000 paying customers at most and said any profit would come from sales of concert videotapes.

"I cannot put more of my own money into it, but UNUSON (the corporation set up to pay for the festival) has its own resources left from this show, plus the possibility of getting outside financing ... so I definitely think there's going to be more shows," Wozniak said.

Fire causes $30,000 in damage

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The latest of 10 suspected arson fires during the last six weeks caused an estimated $30,000 in damage, but no injuries, authorities said.

A fire Sunday at the Lindsay Water Conditioning plant in this central Missouri city was started in cardboard boxes, said Fire Marshal Don Christian.

A task force is investigating the fires, which have caused an estimated $2 million damage to mostly downtown businesses and homes since April 26. Coincidentally, a conference of state arson investigators was scheduled to begin here today.

Boy gets death wish of 'Jedi'

FONTANA, Calif. (AP) — A special showing of "Return of the Jedi" in a hospital basement was the answer to a special birthday wish for 6-year-old Stanley Reid, who died two days after viewing the space thriller.

The boy, who suffered from Burkitt's lymphoma, died early Sunday, but managed to stay alert at Friday's screening at Kaiser Foundation Hospital, said Martha Borgerding, a hospital spokeswoman.

The showing was arranged after family friends learned of Stanley's birthday request last week.

Protesters arrested at nuclear site

SHOREHAM, N.Y. (AP) — More than 100 protesters were handcuffed, photographed and carried or dragged to buses to answer charges of violating a court order against demonstrations at a nuclear construction site.

Most of the 138 demonstrators seized Sunday by Suffolk County police and taken to police headquarters at Yaphank were given tickets for later appearances on charges of disorderly conduct and trespassing.

But 35 protesters remained in court custody after they refused to identify themselves.

The $3.2 million plant of the Long Island Lighting Co., scheduled to open next year, is now involved in a controversy over plans for evacuating the 130,000 people living within a three-mile radius of the plant.

In 1979 police arrested 571 people for blocking gates to the construction site, and a 1980 demonstration led to 169 arrests.

Sunday's mass arrests followed a "Nowhere to Run" rally by 3,000 people on a nearby Long Island Sound beach Saturday.

After demonstrators had blocked two gates and an access road to the plant for nearly three hours Sunday, LILCO officials asked police to enforce a permanent injunction obtained by the company last year which bans sit-ins and blockades at the plant.

"We waited for them to get it off their chests. They were here for one thing only, to do interviews," said Jan Hickman, a LILCO spokeswoman.

At first, utility officials read portions of the court injunction, warning the demonstrators they faced criminal and civil contempt citations.

Then Lt. John Triandafils of the Suffolk County police announced: "We wish to open this road. Your failure to move will result in your arrest."

Most of the demonstrators refused to move, but about 20 were caught in nearby woods.

Each person arrested was handcuffed with two heavy-duty plastic ties, then photographed along with an arresting officer.

LILCO employees also took a photograph of each demonstrator arrested. "We don't see any good reason for their taking these pictures," said Murray Rosenblith, spokesman for the Stop Shoreham Campaign. "LILCO has their own surveillance and intelligence operation whether they admit it or not."

Miss Hickman denied the charge and maintained the photos were taken for possible future legal action in connection with the injunction.

The Suffolk County Legislature has voted not to participate in any evacuation plan for the Shoreham plant, and the county government has refused to participate in any federally supervised drills.

LILCO says it will train 1,300 of its employees to fill the county-worker roles, the first time a nuclear plant operator has offered to assume responsibility for carrying out any evacuation.

Last month, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said it would consider the utility's unusual offer. Hearings are slated for this summer.

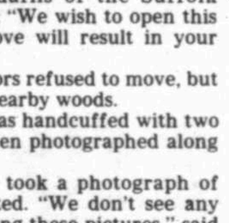

Sailor pleads innocent

MOMBASA, Kenya (AP) — U.S. Navy fireman James William Tyson pleaded innocent today to a charge of murdering a Kenyan woman, Lucy Kabura, two months ago.

The day before the killing, 9,000 sailors from the USS America, including Tyson, and eight other U.S. Navy ships were put ashore at this Indian Ocean port for a six-day visit.

Kabura was apparently strangled in a Mombasa lodging house

Toxicologist: I warned officials of contamination

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — An environmental toxicologist says that he warned federal and Missouri state officials two years ago about potentially hazardous dioxin contamination in Missouri and that his concerns still have not been addressed.

Dr. James W. Singmaster, a toxicologist at the University of Puerto Rico, said in an interview Sunday that he wrote Missouri officials in June, 1981, warning them that thousands of gallons of waste from a chemical plant in Verona, Mo., had never been accounted for.

The plant, now closed, was the source of much of the dioxin-contaminated chemical waste that was mixed with oil in the early 1970s and sprayed over hundreds of miles of dirt roads in eastern Missouri.

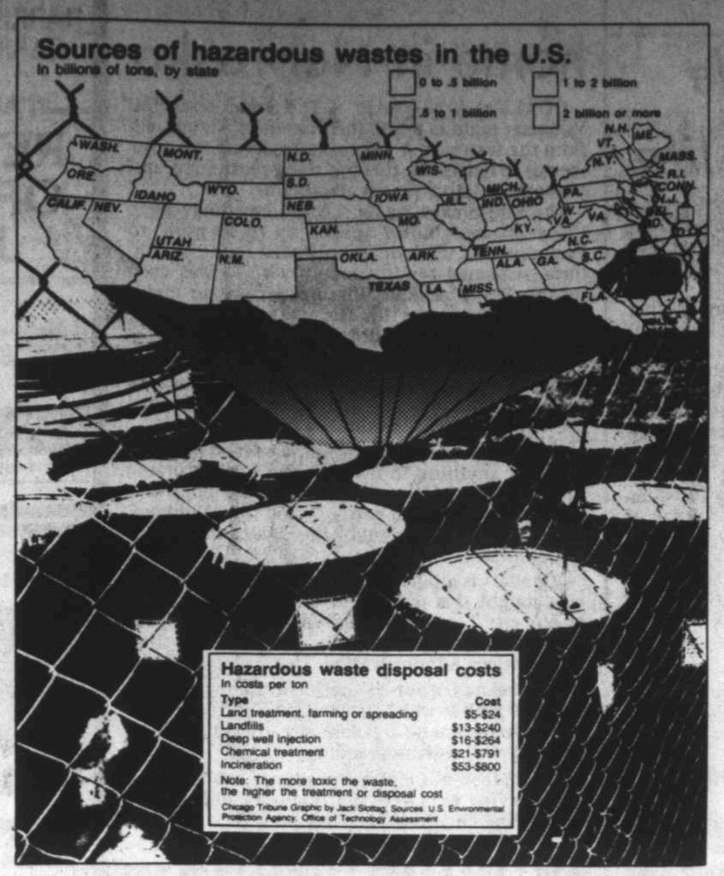

In August 1981, Singmaster said, he expressed the same concerns to Environmental Protection Agency officials, including then-Administrator Anne M. Burford.

"I got back answers which indicated they didn't understand the problem at all," he said.

THE "PROBLEM," as Singmaster sees it, is that while health officials are busily testing soil and water samples for the presence of dioxin, a potentially deadly byproduct of some chemical production processes, no one has satisfactorily accounted for the waste products from chemical companies that produced the contaminated chemicals.

According to Singmaster, some of those wastes contain dioxin stripped from chemicals in "cleanup" operations and may contain dioxin at far higher levels than the contaminated chemicals themselves.

"There are at least 250,000 gallons of waste that need to be accounted for," he said. "It may be as high as 1 million gallons." Singmaster said that his estimates are based on the output at the Verona plant, which produced 20,000 gallons of waste a year.

"They'll find it eventually," he said, "because they'll find high levels of dioxin in some dump somewhere — levels of 20 or 30 parts per million."

The federal government's unprecedented buy-out of Times Beach, Mo., came after tests showed dioxin contamination 100 times less concentrated than that, at 300 parts per billion. The federal Centers for Disease Control considers a level of 1 part per billion to be cause for concern.

SINGMASTER, who initially worked from a 1980 EPA document that listed more than 100 plants where chemicals suspected of dioxin contamination were made, blended or shipped, said that he wrote to state officials in New Jersey in April, after talking to a chemist who had formerly worked at the Diamond Alkali Corp. plant in downtown Newark.

That plant site was ordered quarantined Thursday after tests showed dioxin levels ranging up to 500 parts per billion.

Singmaster said that the chemist, whom he declined to identify, told him about two explosions at the plant and widespread health problems among its employees.

"I suggested to New Jersey that they should look to find information about the explosion. A Seveso-like effect could have occurred," Singmaster said, referring to a widely publicized industrial accident at a drug manufacturing plant in Seveso, Italy, in the mid-1970s that resulted in a rain of dioxin-contaminated ash.

NEW JERSEY OFFICIALS could not be reached for comment Sunday, but a spokesman for the regional EPA office in New York had said earlier that no one in the office had seen or heard of Singmaster's letter.

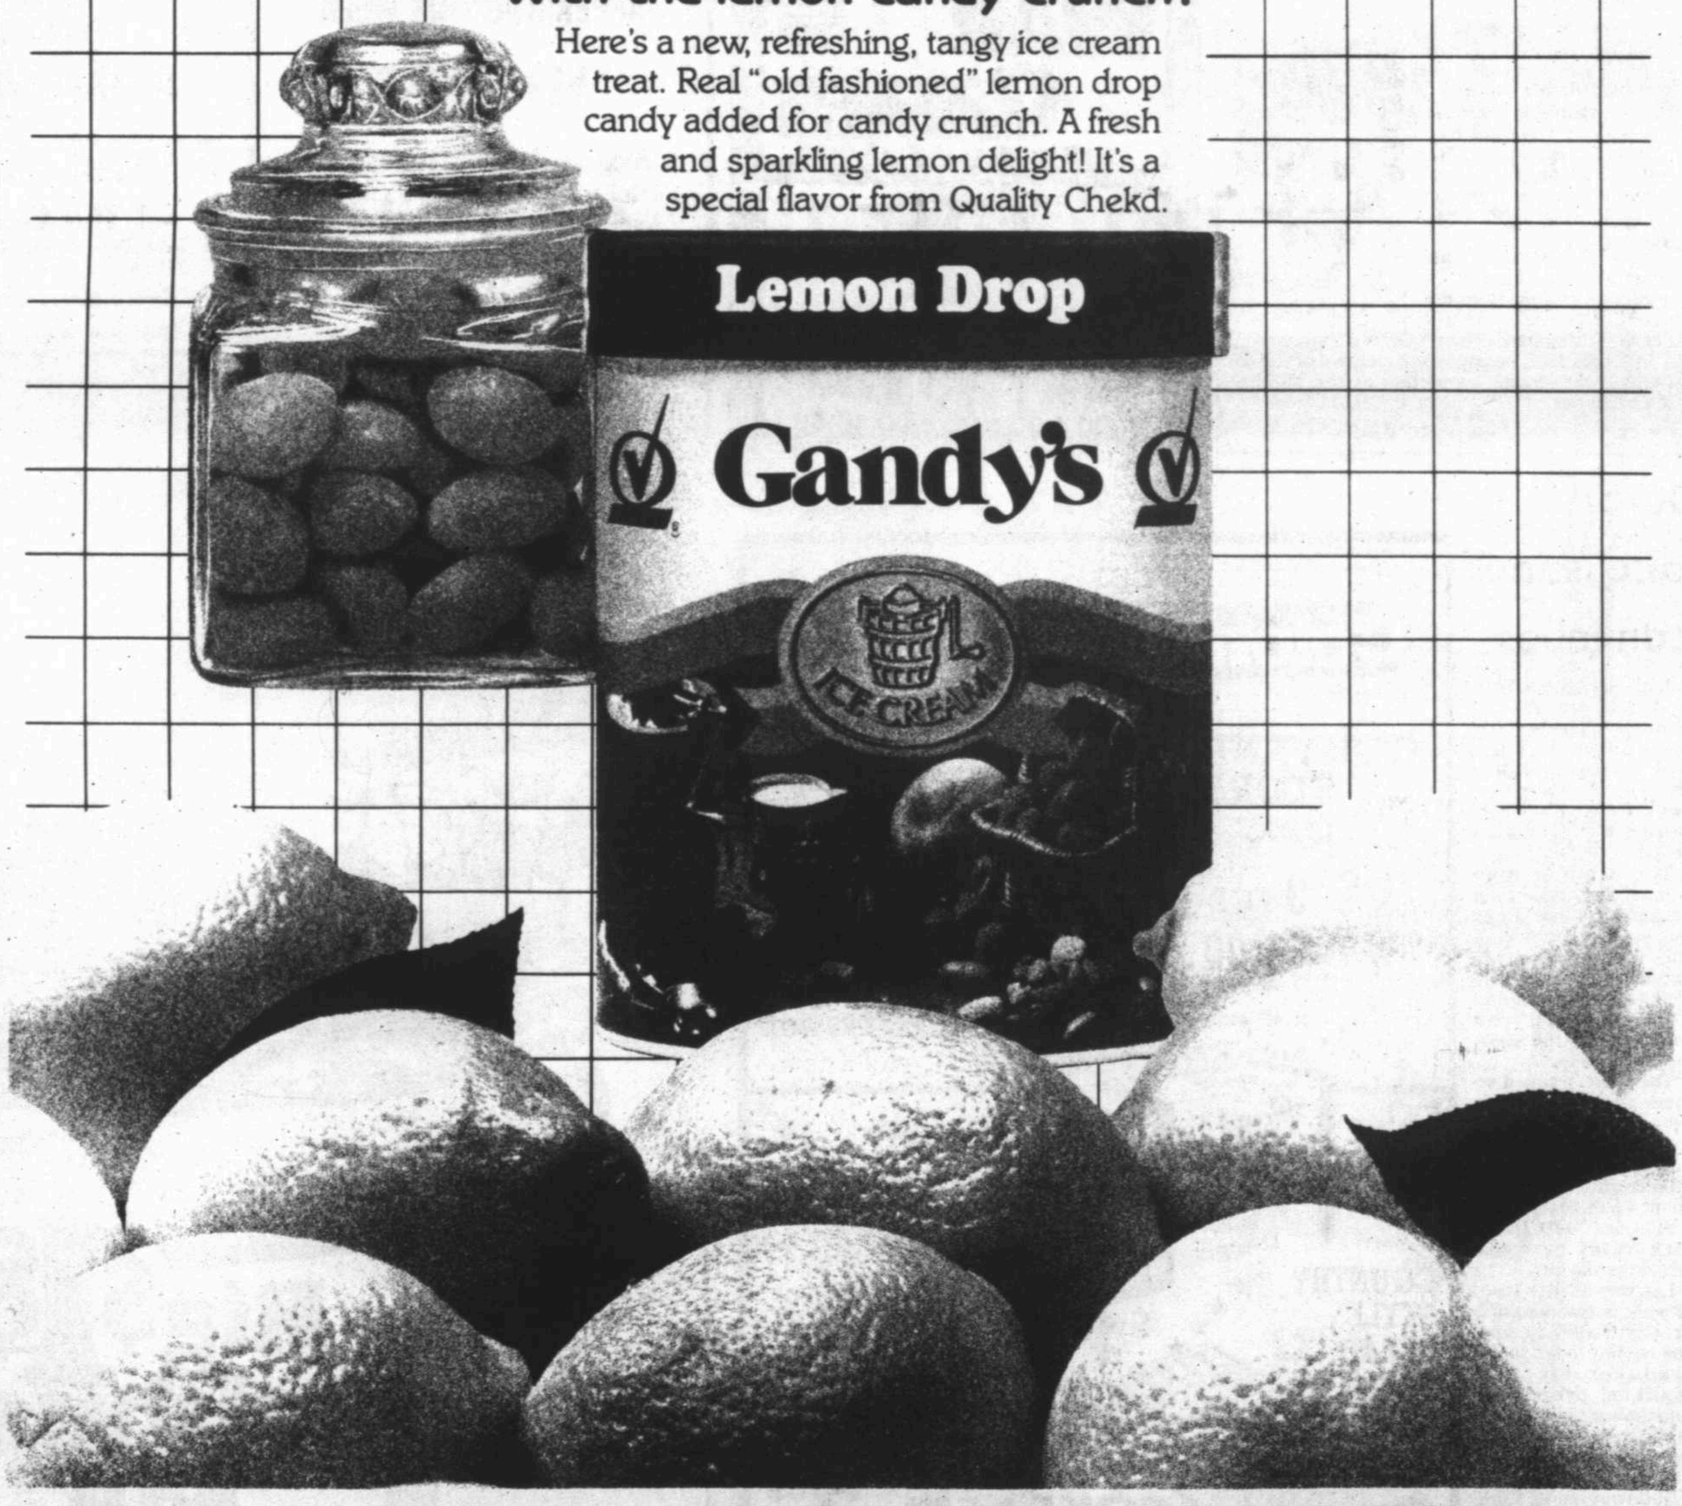

By April, however, New Jersey had established a dioxin task force, prodded into action by Missouri's mounting dioxin problems. The Diamond Alkali site was the task force's first target.

Singmaster's letter was not the first warning the state received about the site, however. The Associated Press reported last week that a former owner of the site told state officials in July, 1981, that the area was heavily contaminated with dioxin.

The former owner, G. William Mitchell, also told the AP of his concerns, which reported that it was unable in 1981 to get any state or federal officials to confirm that a problem existed in Newark.

Singmaster said Sunday that his intent is not to raise additional public concern about dioxin but to refocus attention on what he considers "the biggest problem, which hasn't been addressed, yet. Where are all the wastes from these plants?"

Martin and Rosenell Meissner stand outside what has become a landmark in Midland — their pink and green house on the corner of Louisiana Avenue and A Street.

In the pink (and green)

The Meissners and their office staff go about their business in what was once the house's front room. It's finest feature is the parquet floor.

Along with its pink and green exterior, Meissner's garage boasts another unusual feature — doors which slide sideways on a U-shaped track.

Some traditional furnishings adorn a rather non-traditionally shaped bedroom.

This bathroom, added by Vickers Petroleum Co., is tiled in green ceramic. Not surprisingly, the original bathroom is tiled in pink.

b. Kermit the Frog wearing a tutu.

c. The "Pepto-Bismol House" on the corner of Louisiana Avenue and A Street.

d. A seasick elephant as seen by a wino.

Who in their right mind would paint a house pink and green?

a. Laurel and Hardy and/or Abbott and Costello.

b. Midlanders Martin and Rosenell Meissner.

c. A guy who would wear a yellow and black leisure suit to the symphony.

d. Carmen's Colorblind House Painters and Shoe Repair, Inc.

Why would anyone paint a house pink and green?

a. Because it was there.

b. To get to the other side.

c. To slow traffic on bordering streets.

d. Because the paint store was fresh out of violet and orange.

Perhaps more than even the First National Bank building, Clayton Williams' Aggie banner or "Texas' Largest Drugstore," the pink and green house on the corner of Louisiana Avenue and A Street has achieved landmark status in Midland.

Gawkers, picture-takers and the color-coordinated curious double- and triple-take as they pass 724 W. Louisiana, with its rambling stucco fence and Spanish-style frame wrapped in pastel pink and green.

Martin and Rosenell Meissner — who've made their home and office at 724 W. Louisiana for the past 22 years — were recently asked the question which haunts many Midlanders: "All right, what the heck's the deal with the pink and green?"

The Meissner's answer, it turned out, was colorful in its good-natured simplicity: "That was the color it was."

"When we bought the house, the outside was pink and green like it is now," said Meissner, 52, an independent insurance agent and lifelong Midland resident. "We thought that color was this house. We just couldn't see changing the color and ruining the neighborhood."

"The house just lent itself to the pink," echoed Mrs. Meissner, 51, who added the original colors were altered somewhat — to the present Rose of Sharon and Aqua Marine — when they performed their first paint job on the house in 1969. "The original was a more bluish-green than it is now," she said.

Meissner concedes "there's been quite a bit of speculation among the people of Midland as to why we've left it this color. I've never had any special feeling one way or the other. We thought it was kind of distinctive."

The house, which they purchased on Oct. 15, 1960, "was already a little bit of a landmark then," he said. "Really, we didn't think we were doing anything real daring because it was this color. We just tried to preserve the historical notoriety that it had."

Through official records and conversations with other Midlanders, Meissner traced the "historical notoriety" of 724 W. Louisiana back to about 1936, when architect Frank Aldrich built the home.

Aldrich included several special touches — including 11-inch thick walls, 9-foot ceilings, a ¾-inch oak parquet floor in the living room, cedar-lined closets — and offered tours to prospective home builders. "This was a house ahead of its time," said Meissner, noting that the house was supposedly featured in an issue of House Beautiful magazine during the early 1940s.

On Oct. 21, 1947, after the house was owned by another man for a short time, Vickers Petroleum Co. bought it to lodge its company president. Vickers added a bathroom, bedroom, garage and converted a carport to living area — doubling the size of the home to about 2,000 square feet.

Meissner said he's been able to trace the house's pink and green hue at least as far back as the time it was owned by Vickers. In fact, the bathroom added by the oil company was tiled in green ceramic. The ceramic tile lining the original bathroom is (you guessed it) pink.

The soft-spoken, easy-smiling Meissner said he has no idea why Vickers favored pink and green. Nor could he say why the next owner, drilling contractor Walter M. Wilkinson, decorated the entire interior in various shades of green.

In 1960, the Meissners were searching for a larger house at the same time Wilkinson, who had moved to Kansas, was selling his rental home in Midland.

"We had driven by this place many times and thought it was an attractive house," Meissner recalled. "Little did we think we would someday buy it.

"I came over and looked at the place and we decided we liked it. So we wrote him and asked if he'd sell it to us. They wrote right back and said yes, and I think we closed that thing out in about 15 days."

Since 1960, the Meissners have suffered countless questions, comments and inquisitive looks with good humor.

One caller — his courage bolstered by fellow party goers — phoned at midnight to learn the unvarnished truth about the pink and green paint. Mrs. Meissner said a family friend for more than 14 years only recently got up the nerve to ask "Why do y'all have it pink?"

The Meissner's 24-year-old son, Edward, said he once spent several minutes listening to an architecture student describe Midland's "yucky" pink and green house. When she finally learned it was his home, "her face just fell off," he said.

Mrs. Meissner said her son Ivan, then 8, announced to his parents that pink is "a delightful color." Ivan, now 21, said growing up in a pink and green house "was a lot of fun. This is the easiest place to locate in Midland."

"I get a bang out of watching people drive by and you try to read their minds," Mrs. Meissner said. "They'll just give it the weirdest look and just keep on looking."

Surprisingly, Meissner said he has yet to adjust an auto insurance claim in the intersection bordering his eye-grabbing home.

He said they lived in the house more than 20 years before a vandal sprayed "Pepto-Bismol" in pink paint on the green fence. Although the prank didn't really bother him, at the insistence of a lady who lamented "what they did to your beautiful house," Meissner reported the incident to the police.

When the patrolman arrived to survey the damage, "he kind of halfway giggled, kind of halfway not. And when he found out it was no big deal to me, well he thought it was as funny as I did."

Meissner said children are especially attracted by the house's fairy tale paint job. "They call it 'ice cream and candy house' or 'cotton candy house,'" he said.

Grown-ups, he said, "either generally like it or they think it's way too loud, outlandish."

Contrary to what some believe, the pink and green paint is not an advertising gimmick for Meissner's insurance business.

"Really, that wasn't our purpose," he said. But he added that "it became a way of telling people where our office is. We say 'We're in the loudest house in Midland, on the corner of A and Louisiana.'"

They've repainted the house twice since 1969, each time striving to approximate the proper pink and green tints.

Meissner observed, chuckling, "Every time we repaint it, it appears to people that we've repainted it louder."

Testimony begins in suit

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Testimony was to begin at 1 p.m. today in a $1 million federal civil rights suit against five current and one former officer of the Midland Police Department.

They, along with the City of Midland and Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, are alleged to have violated the civil rights of 19-year-old Walter Sowell, a furniture store employee who says he was beaten after his arrest on public intoxication and disorderly conduct charges the night of Oct. 16, 1981.

Sowell was treated for head injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital, but police contend he injured himself by hitting his head against the window of a door as he was being led to an upstairs cell at city jail.

Prior to being placed in the cell, a videotape of the booking procedure showed Sowell being struck by Officers Terry Lowe and Terry Garner. Both those officers were temporarily suspended from the force and Lowe later resigned.

The city attorney's office declined to prosecute the disorderly conduct complaint against Sowell, and a Municipal Court jury acquitted him of the public intoxication charge.

The civil rights trial, which is being presided over by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in Midland's Federal Courthouse, is expected to last two days.

Jury selection began late this morning and had not been completed by presstime.

Odessa police seek two suspects

ODESSA — Police are searching for two suspects who beat two women at the women's home early this morning.

In the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital today with severe facial injuries were 42-year-old Jeannie Galloway and her 18-year-old daughter Yvonne, both of 2415 W. 10th St. They were reported in critical condition.

Police were called to a home at 1000 Alameda about 3:35 a.m. by a resident who said there was a nude woman beating on the door. The woman, Mrs. Galloway, told officers two black men had broken into her house and assaulted her and her daughter.

The daughter was found lying on a bed in the home and both women were taken to the hospital. Neither woman appeared to have been sexually molested and police speculate the men broke into the house through a bathroom window in an apparent burglary attempt.

ARC nominates honorees

The Association for Retarded Citizens/Texas (ARC) has nominated George Ann Powers, a special education teacher in the Midland school system, and the 4th Military Police Group of the Texas State Guard as award recipients for outstanding work with the mentally retarded.

Powers began her involvement with the retarded as a 9th grade member of the Midland Teens Aid the Retarded Society. After majoring at Texas Tech in special education, Powers became a full-time special education teacher in Midland. Powers has maintained her active involvement in ARC as well as her roles as Region 13 Coordinator for Special Olympics and coach of the local bowling team.

The 4th Military Police Group, under the direction of Col Ken Dawson, has been the backbone of Midland-ARC's annual Hike-Bike-Ride for the past four years. Using the Armory as a base of operations, Guard volunteers have patrolled the routes, controlled traffic, administered necessary first aid, and acted as check point personnel, ensuring the safety and enjoyment of all participants.

The proposed facility would contain four operating rooms, an eight-bed recovery room, a recovery lounge, limited laboratory and radiology areas and other ancillary/support space.

Purchase of fixed and movable equipment is also proposed.

According to the commission, Medicare certification as an ambulatory surgical center will be sought for the facility.

Those wishing to protest the application must file with the commission by 5 p.m. July 11.

Anti-crime rally slated

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Bishop Louis Calvin Browning and his red, white and blue Youth Crime Prevention League Inc. van will be at Washington Park at 2 p.m. Tuesday for an anti-crime and anti-drug rally aimed at Midland's young people.

The rally will feature speakers, including Browning, a Midland Baptist minister and a Midland businessman. Refreshments will be offered and all Midland young people, parents, teachers and others interested are invited to attend.

"We hope that this will be among the biggest anti-crime rallies," Browning said Monday. "We're asking all churches — regardless of race, creed or kind — and the Boy Scouts, the Boys' Clubs and the Little Leaguers to see to it that they take advantage of his big, anti-crime rally."

The Youth Crime Prevention League van will also be dedicated to several deceased Midland religious and education leaders, including I.M. Woodward, H.F. Doyle, W.M. Knapp, J.H. Shelton, Bishop J.E. Alexander, Sister Mary Bass, A.S.B. Jones, B.H. Reece, Washington D. Danistry, Amos Taylor, Mrs. A.I. Woodard McNeal and L.S. Jackson.

Browning, 76, has been traveling the country since 1957 preaching racial harmony, stressing the importance of education and denouncing crime and drug abuse among the nation's youth. From a platform on the back of his van, he's preached to more than 500,000 young people in 16 states.

The Youth Crime Prevention League is headquartered at 109 S. Judkin St. in Fort Worth. Browning has also started "Crime Stop" and "Crime Watch" programs — designed to help prevent and report crime in communities — during his 25 year anti-crime and anti-drug effort.

Browning said donations will also be accepted at the rally, a third of which will remain in Midland for anti-drug and anti-crime programs. He said the remaining money would go to fund Youth Crime Prevention League activities.

Story of son's death 'told itself'

By GERALDINE SATTERWHITE

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — It's the story Terry Pringle couldn't stop telling.

He first told it to Dr. Dan Pope, a couple of minutes after feeling the last few beats of the little heart.

Pope, who became much more than doctor to the Pringles during the 20 months since Eric was diagnosed at age 4 as having leukemia, was not surprised. He had been with the family earlier in the day.

"Did he die in his sleep?" he asked.

"You've got to be kidding," Pringle answered. "For the past two hours I've been watching the fight of the century."

In his book, "This Is the Child," Pringle recalled his 5-year-old son's last moments, in which Eric said God was telling him to hold his breath, but that he couldn't.

"What impressed me so much was not that God was talking to him," Pringle said in an interview, "but that he wasn't going to just stop breathing. He could go out easy, or he could fight. After that I was no longer afraid.

"That's what I've always considered Eric's gift to me. He removed any fear I had."

It's also the story Terry Pringle couldn't stop writing, once he began. "This Is the Child" was published in May by Alfred A. Knopf in New York.

"I started writing primarily because I wanted to tell the story of Eric," he said. "But in writing the book I found myself telling how a parent feels in this situation, of watching a child die.

"But I've never seen it as another book about a dying child. I do see it as essentially the story of Eric, a child who knew how to live his life."

The book was easy to write, he insisted.

"It wrote itself. I had to tell about Eric. I can remember thinking within a couple of days after he died, I've been practicing writing for about 12 years, and I finally have a story."

Writing was not therapy for working through his grief, he said.

"I never started dealing with the loss of Eric until I stopped writing the book. As long as I was writing, I still had him."

Written throughout in the present tense, the book would not have been possible without the careful notes of his wife, Brenda, who recorded the 21 trips to Houston, the spinal taps, bone marrow aspirations, the many forms of leukemia therapy — experimental and otherwise — and the dates Eric's hair fell out and grew back.

The book is the story of family coping, admirably at times, not well at all at others; of a brother, Michael, just a year older than Eric, who sometimes felt neglected.

It was Michael, a little boy who had trouble with his "r's," who tagged his brother E. It was a name everybody, including his doctor, picked up.

When Eric tired easily and bruises appeared on his body after Christmas 1979, his mother took him to the family doctor. The leukemia was diagnosed on Jan. 29, 1980, and life was never to be the same.

Area women to be polled on child care, expectations

DALLAS — John E. Reeder, Jr., director of the Bureau of the Census Regional Office in Dallas, announced today that information on child care, number of children and birth expectations of American women will be collected during the week of June 20-25 from a sample of households in the Midland area.

The questions are in addition to those usually asked in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor.

Results of this survey provide a continuing measure of economic conditions in the nation and help indicate the future growth and composition of the nation's population.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Mary Hammond, left, Gloria Dellenback, Leonora Slusher and Al Buehler brush up on their bridge skills in preparation for the Unit 209 American Contract Bridge League June 10, 11 and 12.

Tall City annual bridge tourney deals the deck this weekend

Unit 209 of the American Contract Bridge League will hold the annual Tall City Duplicate Bridge Tournament at the Holiday Inn Country Villa on June 10, 11 and 12.

Friday events are as follows: unmixed pairs, two women or two men, at 1:30 p.m., master pairs, 20 plus master points, at 7:30 p.m. and non-master pairs, 0-20 master points, at 7:30 p.m.

On Saturday open pairs, qualifying, play at 1:30 p.m., open pairs, final, play at 7:30 p.m. and consolation, open to players who could not play in the afternoon, at 7:30 p.m.

Sunday the Swiss team of four will play at 11 a.m.

The entry fee per session for Friday and Saturday is $5 and $7 on Sunday.

Duplicate bridge is a form of relaxation and competition played by many people throughout the country and players from all over the West Texas area and New Mexico are expected to attend this tournament.

The league emphasizes bridge is not a game played by "little old ladies"., Approximately one-third of the players attending the tournament will be men and young people.

Of particular interest to players new to duplicate bridge will be the non-master event scheduled Friday evening. Anyone interested in participating should call 697-1390, 694-2817 or 682-1976. If a player needs a partner, the club will try to find one.

Anorectics obsessed with food but unable to eat when starving

By BONNIE POWELL ROBINSON
The Los Angeles Time-
Washington Post News Service

In an age when most Americans struggle with being overweight, it is hard to understand the epidemic of young women or men who are anorectic, as I was — underweight by a choice that involved literally starving myself nearly to death.

Many people assume that anorectics are all adolescents, and that somehow anorexia is connected with rebellion. People also assume that the anorectic just doesn't like to eat, doesn't eat much of the time, prefers diet or vegetarian foods such as cottage cheese or yogurt. Many also assume that the weight just falls off.

Any or none of these assumptions may be true of a particular sufferer. One thing is certain, as I can attest: the weight is never lost without a lot of suffering.

Many anorectics love food and eating, and are as obsessed — or even more obsessed — with food than an obese person. Many binge and gain weight, which may or may not be lost. As a former anorectic, I am aware of the constant obsession with food, yet I was unable to let myself eat when I was starving. People around me — my husband, relatives, friends — watched me struggle through the problem, and were unable to understand my need to stay so thin.

Most people focus on the thinness itself, and not on the often-complex emotional problems masked by the disease. In the following "conversation" between the anorectic with the crazy habits that I used to be, and the friend — the person I am striving to be now — I try to explain what being anorectic is really like, and what the actual process of starving does to the body.

Friend: I just don't understand what this fear of gaining weight is all about. I mean, you've almost always been thin. And I've known you for 10 years now. What would be so tragic if you gained weight?

Anorectic: Well, there are real food fears, and there are fears that are more nebulous. When your weight drops really low, the body can't maintain its fluid and electrolytic balance, especially if you are not eating enough bulk, as few anorectics do. You may eat two or three cookies and find the next day you have gained a couple of pounds.

When I've been gaining weight I've panicked; I'm afraid that I'll never be able to stop gaining and will zoom up to 155 or 160 pounds. You probably don't remember, but I've been that heavy. I'm afraid that I'll get stuck there and never be able to lose again.

On a more symbolic level, I think I was afraid that if I lost control over my weight, I would lose control over my other impulses. Impulsivity, in whatever form (drinking, gambling, suicidal impulses), is always bad.

Friend: You've always been an anxious, tense person. Come to think of it, you were a very tense cook, even though you are a gour met cook. I remember all the wonderful meals at your house. How could you et those fears of food overwhelm you in your most enjoyable hobby? How do you get over them?

Anorectic: Well, for one thing, I found out that I didn't know anything about eating until I went to a nutritionist, who was recommended by the therapist I was seeing, who dealt in anorexia exclusively. She began to teach me how to eat, all over again, with all the basics. I get terrified when I go outside her guidelines. Yet I often crave to go outside those guidelines. I do go outside of them. Sometimes I gain a lot of weight, sometimes a little, sometimes none, if I have lamb instead of fish, or a taste of cheesecake. My body still isn't used to food and my metabolism is still low from years of binging and starving.

I didn't vomit. I could never get into that. But I would cook a wonderful gourmet meal and then, after I ate it, I wouldn't eat for three days.

Friend: Do you think you're learning?

Anorectic: It's very hard. When you're starving you think about what little bits of food you're going to let yourself eat all the time. Just like my sisters, the bulimics who go through repeated cycles of binge and vomit as many as five to 10 times a day, and the obese, I think about food all the time. I fill my empty time with thoughts of food and eating. I'm trying to learn to fill up my empty time with other thoughts, but it's really hard.

I used to have cravings for all those white fattening things like pasta, potatoes, rich cream sauces and whipped cream. A lot of people with eating disorders binge on junk. I don't eat junk. But I do crave exotic food, like Indonesian, Philippine, Chinese and, of course continental and nouvelle. If I want eggs benedict, I always have more of the eggs — only the whites, the yolks are too high-calorie — a tablespoon of hollandaise, no bacon and just half of the English muffin.

Friend: Are these fears the ones that got your started on all these weird little habits you have in regard to food?

Anorectic: Yes. I could tell you a million different things I do with food, still trying to protect myself. Even though I fail, I can't seem to stop these habits I've gotten started on.

I eat very, very slowly, and not because it's good for the body, but because I'm afraid of eating too much if I eat too fast. That's a left-over from when I was eating three 100-calorie meals a day. When I found out (via a basal metabolism test) that my metabolism would allow me to eat up to 1,000 calories per day, I was excited. After 300 a day, 1,000 seemed like a lot. Now 1,000 seems like very little.

I can have two cups of vegetables every day, so I concentrate on them. I have to have certain vegetables every week, so I tote them up every week: broccoli, cauliflower, spinach, artichokes, asparagus, beans and peas, all green. If one is missing at the end of the week, I panic. I like exotic vegetables, like arugula, escarole, endive, raddicchio; ocassionally I'll have eggplant or zucchini. I have to have mushrooms and tomatoes every day. If I have cheese with my vegetables, I can only have one ounce, so I save it for my last two bites.

All forbidden foods — rich foods — get left for the last two bites. My entire meal is divided into sections, so that each bite is "perfect" — has a bite of every element of the dinner with it. For instance, one bite of broc coli, one taste of tomato, one bite of mushroom, etc., except for the last two bites, which, as I said, contain the rich foods.

Everything must be weighed and measured. For instance, bread is 80 calories an ounce, so that gets measured and toasted and put aside for the last two bites.

Friend: You let yourself have desserts?

Anorectic: I have to have my cake and ice cream. My nutritionist told me that cake has 30 calories per square inch. Angel food is best, because it has more protein and less fat than regular cake, since it's made of egg whites. I have low-calorie yogurt, or Weight Watchers ice cream. Or Tuscan yogurt.

I really have been obsessive about sweets. I used to have to have chocolate, cheese, nuts, bananas, red fruit, cake and ice cream every day for dessert. Very small amounts of each thing, so that it would fit into a tablespoon (except for the ice cream). I used to go to all these bakeries and buy slices of cake and throw it all away, except for the "best" square inch. Very wastful, I suppose, but I was crazy and had to have my cake.

I used to run all over New York, looking for the best gourmet carryouts, buying food, bringing it home, weighing and measuring it and throwing it away. I flushed it down the toilet, since I had no disposal. I couldn't trust myself to keep it around; I might go through the garbage and get it.

Boys add extra touches to carpeted treehouse

By DICK WANNER

MILLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Frank Lloyd Wright would be very proud of Andy Chunko and Dave Wagaman, a pair of 13-year-old designer-builders from Lancaster County.

In the Chunko back yard, the two have taken Wright's concept of "organic architecture" to new heights.

Before his death a decade ago, Wright had become one of America's most renowned architects of the 20th century. His home in the Arizona desert, Taliesin West, was a wood and canvas creation that seemed not so much to be built upon the desert floor as to have risen from it.

While it may never receive the same recognition as Taliesin West did, the house in the tree built by the Millersville duo is true to the Wright principle.

The basic building material was 6-inch solid oak, scavenged by Andy's father, Tom, when he realized the boys were serious about nesting in the maple tree.

"At first we were only going to make a little lookout," said Dave, seated comfortably on the soft carpeting that covers the floor of the treehouse.

"I had an old crate in my back yard, and we used that to put a floor up here. But then we decided to put up walls and a roof. And we talked about adding a second story."

Tom Chunko, of course, took note of the goings-on in the sugar maple and climbed up one day to take a look.

"He thought we needed some more braces," said Andy, "so he figured out just how to make sure everything was solid. We've got solid oak braces running this way and that way ... this house isn't going anywhere."

The house creaks, it sways, but it does, indeed, stay solid. The friends can comfortably weather not only stiff breezes, but plummeting temperatures.

There's a heater, running water, a small TV which they haul up and down with them, a coffeemaker that's used to make hot chocolate, mattresses for backrests during the day and slumber at night. Two sleeping bags and a generous supply of blankets are stashed in the closet.

The closet?

"Yes," said Andy. "We have a little closet there for storage. It's actually big enough to crawl into."

The cost for the Chunko-Wagaman Hilton-in-the-Tree?

"Well, we've got maybe $50 in it all," said Andy. "And $20 of that was in the carpet."

Saw blades not worthy of sharpening second time

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I bought a saber saw — the ortable kind — about two years ago. The four blades I got with it are getting dull, but I lost the instructions on how to sharpen them. Can you help?

A. — It would be surprising if the brochure that came with the saw also gave instructions for sharpening the blades, since they are relatively inexpensive and would hardly be worth the time and trouble to resharpen.

Q. — My mother tells me the best way to keep the sink drain from getting clogged is to pour coffee grounds down it every once in a while. Since I use instant coffee and ordinarily do not have grounds, I do not want to buy regular coffee just to get them. But I will do so if I am postive they will keep the drain from getting clogged. What's your opinion?

A. — The story about coffee grounds has been around for many years, but every reliable authority on plumbing says they are of no help and, in fact, can cause clogging under certain conditions. Flushing out the drain periodically with scalding water is of definite aid in preventing clogging, but nothing is better than not permitting grease and other messy material to go into the drain in the first place.

Q. — I have to put new plugs on several lamp cords. I have heard there is a correct way to attach the wire strand to the screws in the plug. Can you advise me about this?

A. — When each wire is wound around the terminal screw, do it in a clockwise fashion. Then, when you tighten the screw, clockwise as it should be done, the wire will be tightened into place. If you place the wire around the screw in a counterlockwise fashion, it will come undone as you tighten the screw.

DEAR ABBY

Cousin relations confusing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As the mother of 10 children, grandmother of one, aunt of 20, great-aunt of two, and cousin of everybody west of the Mississippi, I have spent years explaining to my offspring the difference between first, second and third cousins, first cousins once-removed, etc. Since my children read "Dear Abby" faithfully, I now have to start all over again.

You told "All Mixed Up" that according to Webster's New International Dictionary, "the child of one's first cousin is properly called 'first cousin once-removed' but often popularly 'second cousin.'" I wish you had gone on to explain that while that may be "popular," it is not correct.

As you (if not Mr. Webster) know, your first cousin once-removed (one generation removed) is the child of your first cousin; second cousins would be your child and child of your first cousin. As second cousins are children of first cousins, third cousins are children of second cousins. A first cousin twice-removed would be your first cousin's grandchild (who would, of course, be your grandchild's third cousin, and your child's second cousin once-removed).

Abby, when you're trying to marry off 10 children, and you're related to everybody west of the Mississippi, you have to know these things. -- TERESA BLOOMINGDALE, OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR TERESA: Thanks for telling me in words instead of sending me a genealogical chart. That's where I got into trouble in the first place. I was doing splendidly with my chart until I came upon cousins removed once, twice and a third time, and then I was ready to be removed! That's when I naively turned to Mr. Webster, where I learned a useful lesson: Don't believe everything you read.

DEAR ABBY: I run a small restaurant in Heathsville, Va. We specialize in soft-shelled crabs, which are always fresh and delicious at a reasonable price.

Most of the customers ask for toothpicks. Abby, I was taught as a little girl that it wasn't proper etiquette to pick your teeth in public, so I don't have toothpicks on hand to give out.

Please write back and tell me what I should say to these people who ask for toothpicks. I promise to frame it and put it up where people will see it. Thank you. -- MARTHA CURRY

DEAR MARTHA: You may not want to frame this: If you want to succeed in business, your first concern should be to please your customers. Never mind etiquette. If a customer asks for a toothpick, cheerfully provide one. Many small restaurants (and some large ones) keep a container of toothpicks at the register.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I read the letters from all the "virtuous" virgins who are saving themselves for marriage, I think of my own situation. I, too, saved myself, and so had my wife until we were married nearly 40 years ago. The only difference was that she kept on "saving herself" -- or at least she rationed it out like wartime tires. She maintained that sex was sinful unless used for procreation, and nothing would budge her beliefs. I even showed her an article by the bishop (we're both Catholic) on the proper joys of sex within marriage. She dismissed him as a heretic. After our family was complete, it was total abstinence. If I felt the urge, I could say a rosary or two.

Of course, she helped by becoming frumpy, dumpy and dowdy. She knew she was not in shape, but her excuse was that "it was sinful for a woman to try to be alluring to any man -- even her husband."

All went well for 16 years, during which time I became a workaholic. Then a very nice woman my age seduced me. I'm not proud of it, but I don't feel guilty either. I'm not carrying on an affair, and I do manage to stay celibate most of the time, but it sure taught me a lesson in tolerance. I am far more understanding of other people when they show a bit of tarnish. -- BIG A. IN VAN NUYS

Summer fun creates big appetites so keep your children busy making their own snacks such as Chocolate Cookie Pretzels and Peanut Butter and Chocolate Ripple Pops.They will learn cooking fundamentals and have fun at the same time.

Recipes for kids to learn beginning cooking skills

Hiking, biking, swimming and baseball all stimulate children's summer appetites. Next time your youngsters ask for a snack, why not encourage them to help in making their own? It's an excellent opportunity for Mom and kids to share in a fun project that can be a learning experience as well.

Cooking creates good skills, great times, and fond memories.

Mom or a favorite aunt can help interpret the recipes, answer any questions, and show how things are done. Everyone can have an enjoyable time measuring, mixing, baking and eating.

What junior chef wouldn't enjoy shaping Chocolate Cookie Pretzels? Once the dough is made, the process resembles working with clay. The nice part is there is a tasty treat to eat after baking. Sprinkle the cooked pretzels with powdered sugar.

CHOCOLATE COOKIE PRETZELS

2½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
½ cup unsweetened cocoa
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 eggs
confectioner's sugar

Assemble ingredients. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt in small bowl. Set aside. Cream butter, sugar and vanilla in large mixing bowl until light and fluffy. Add eggs and blend well. Gradually stir in dry ingredients to creamed mixture and blend thoroughly.

Divide dough into 24 pieces and shape into balls 1½ inches in diameter. To form twisted pretzels roll each piece into a 12-inch rope on lightly floured surface with hands. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Cross left side of rope over to middle, forming a loop. Fold right side up and over first loop to form pretzel shape. Place about 2 inches apart on cookie sheet. To form pretzel sticks: Roll piece of dough into an 8-inch rope.

Bake at 350 degrees for 8 minutes until set. Cook for 1 minute on cookie sheet and remove to wire rack.

Sprinkle cooled cookies with confectioner's sugar if desired. About 24 pretzels or 30 pretzel sticks.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Moist philodrendrons thrive

By ELVIN MCDONALD

If we learn best from our mistakes, this letter from a Minnesota reader offers excellent material:

"Please advise what to do with a large split-leaf philodendron that does not expand because all new shoots quickly wither and turn yellow or brown. I was told to let it get bone dry before watering, which I have done and nothing helps.

"I fertilize occasionally alternating with spikes and diluted liquid. The plant is in a large pot and couldn't be rootbound."

Printed here in black-and-white in broad daylight, the answer seems clear: Water more.

I can't always be so sure but in this case letting the philodendron become bone dry between waterings is bound to discourage new leaves and cause premature drying of the old ones.

The lesson here is this: Don't let any leafy plant routinely become bone dry between waterings.

These general rules of green thumb also help: In low light and cool temperatures, as in fall and winter, water less and don't fertilize.

In high light and warm temperatures, as in spring and summer, water freely and fertilize regularly.

Avoid extremes of wet and dry. Even desert plants may die if soil in pots stays bone dry and only a few such as Chinese evergreen, cyperus and white calla-lilies in active growth can tolerate standing in water.

Finally, a plant in trouble seldom needs fertilizer. Wait until new shoots appear strong.

For the philodendron in question, keep the growing medium in a range between nicely moist and slightly on the dry side. Check by pinching a half inch or so of the surface soil between your fingers.

More light may also be needed. Philodendrons have become a household word in barely 50 years because they keep well in dark corners, adapt to low light, thrive with direct sun indoors part of the day — and hardly ever die.

Any philodendron can be given a new lease on life with a little grooming: Shower or wipe the leaves clean, both sides, with lukewarm water.

If philodendrons and their relatives such as caladium, anthurium and scindapsus or pothos fascinate you, join the International Aroid Society by sending $10 annual dues to Box 43-1853, S. Miami, Fla. 33143.

Waitress with mastectomy fired for not baring skin

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES -- Surely 40 years working as a waitress qualifies one for sainthood. Clare McNutt got fired for refusing to show a little cleavage.

The 69-year-old widow had no cleavage to show. A breast was removed 10 years ago because of cancer.

She filed a $10 million suit charging Love's family barbecue restaurant, her former employer in Chatsworth, Calif., illegally fired her because of her age, sex and surgery.

One of the defendants named in the suit, restaraunt manager George Zuks said he fired McNutt, although she told him of her mastectomy, on orders from his supervisor because "she (didn't) lower her uniform like the other girls." He referred further questions to the International House of Pancakes Inc.

"This has really upset me. I'm crying all the time, and feel like that I'm not wanted," McNutt said Friday in a telephone interview. "In 40 years, this was the first time I was ever fired off of a job. It's just like they opened the door and threw me out like trash."

"They did me in. I have been so deeply hurt. I think that they did me a very big wrong, and they knew it. That was the worst thing."

A year ago the restaurant's management ordered its waitresses into sexier uniforms.

"I had worn that uniform -- it was a Heidi type of a uniform, you know - and all of a sudden, they decided that everyone had to show a cleveage. We were all told to lower our uniforms, " McNutt recalled.

McNutt explained to her boss that she'd had radical masectomy surgery for breast cancer. "I have no cleavage, " she told him. Two days later, he fired her.

McNutt had worked at Love's for more than six years, with an unmarred record, she said.

Doctor's deposition says she fired nurse accused in child's death

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A nurse accused of killing a infant was fired by a Kerrville physician two days after the doctor found needle marks in a vial of muscle relaxant, the San Antonio Light reported.

The newspaper, in a copyright story Sunday, said Dr. Kathleen Holland said in a deposition that she fired vocational nurse Genene Jones after finding the needle marks in the vial of succinylcholine.

Ms. Jones, 32, was indicted in Kerr County for murder in the death of Chelsea Ann McClellan and for the injury of six other children. She pleaded innocent to the charges and her bond was set at $50,000 on the murder count and $25,000 on each injury count.

The newspaper said the doctor gave the deposition last month at the request of Houston lawyer James Perdue, who represents the parents of the 15-month-old girl that died en route to a hospital from Dr. Holland's office.

The parents, William and Petti McClellan, have filed a $7 million wrongful death suit against Dr. Holland and Ms. Jones.

A Bexar County grand jury here also is investigating a string of infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit at Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982. The two women were employed by the county-operated hospital during the period being investigated.

Perdue had asked Dr. Holland during the deposition about her use of succinylcholine, which is deadly when used improperly or in large doses, causing paralysis of the respiratory system.

The Kerr County indictment alleges Ms. Jones used a drug to kill Chelsea Ann and to induce respiratory seizures in six other infants.

The child arrived at her clinic last Aug. 24 with a mild nasal dicharge and a bluish coloring around her mouth, the pediatrician told Perdue.

That day, she suffered the first of several respiratory seizures that eventually ended in her death, Dr. Holland said.

She said Ms. Jones was in the ambulance, en route from Kerville to San Antonio, with the child when her heart stopped beating.

The doctor said Ms. Jones later wrote on office records: "I would have given my life for her. Goodbye, Chelsea."

Texas lost oil lease revenue

DALLAS (AP) — Texas lost $1.1 million in potential revenue from oil and gas leases negotiated by South Texas-rancher-businessman Clinton Manges because of a "loophole" in state law, The Dallas Morning News has reported.

The newspaper, in a copyright story Sunday, said Manges received more than $2.2 million from leases on about 3,000 acres of potentially rich oil and gas land on Manges Duval County Ranch.

The state owns the mineral rights on the leases, and by law the state is supposed to share equally in leasing revenue. But Texas, the newspaper said, collected only $51,000 because of a "loophole" in the state law.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and his predecessor, Bob Armstrong, told the newspaper in a copyright story Sunday, that they believe the leasing transactions are legal.

But Mauro said he would file suit if he finds that Manges intentionally used the lease agreements to deprive the state of its share of the revenue, which by law is earmarked for public education.

State could become dealer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A landmark program that could be implemented as early as this summer will make the State of Texas a major natural gas dealer in direct competition with private energy companies, the San Antonio Light has reported.

The newspaper reported in a copyright story Sunday that under Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's program the state would offer large volumes of low-priced gas for sale to municipal utilities and state facilities.

Mauro estimated Texas may earn an additional $50 million a year. Most of that money would go to the Permanent University Fund and the Permanent School Fund.

Kucel expected to testify

HOUSTON (AP) — A New Orleans businessman who pleaded guilty to conspiring to evade taxes on more than $7 million in income is expected to testify this week at federal trial of an associate indicted on similar charges.

Norman Johnson, board chairman of Houston-based Lucey Products Co., said he conspired in the scheme with company president Richard J. Kucel, and pleaded guilty last month in New Orleans and was sentenced to 14 monts in prison.

Morales might as well be invisible

NEW YORK (AP) — He has stumps for hands. He is nearly blind in his left eye. His mouth is twisted in a perpetual grimace.

An explosion at a Queens bomb factory marked William Morales for life, but for four years — from the moment he escaped from a hospital's prison ward to his arrest last month in Mexico — he might as well have been invisible.

Morales' scarred face was on post office walls coast-to-coast. He was a premier fugitive — bomb expert for the Puerto Rican terrorist group FALN, and thus perhaps one of the most active bombers in recent U.S. history, say authorities. But he eluded law enforcement authorities entirely.

"We know absolutely nothing about where he has been," said Kenneth Walton, deputy assistant director of the FBI's New York office, in an interview last week. "Exactly nothing."

But Morales always has been a shadowy figure. When he was arrested after the July 1978 explosion, authorities did not know who he was. He had no fingers for fingerprints, and his face was so mutilated that he was beyond recognition.

DAYS PASSED before a positive identification could be made. In his hospital room, Morales sketched out words in the air with his toes to confess his role in the air with his toes to confess his role in the blast as well as ownership of the explosives and weapons.

But he did not admit to membership in the FALN — Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puertoriquena, or Armed Forces of National Liberation for Puerto Rico. Even today he denies he is a member.

"He was never affiliated or associated with any organization that fought for Puerto Rican independence," asserted Suzanne Garcia, a spokeswoman for the National Committee to Free Puerto Rican Prisoners of War.

He was born in East Harlem on Feb. 7, 1950, the son of two laborers. He graduated from P.S. 121 in Harlem and then from Morris High School in the Bronx.

His scholastic record was a good one, his family says. He studied political science at the City College of New York for two years, and then attended the School of Visual Arts to study film editing.

He joined a group of Puerto Rican filmmakers, says Ms. Garcia, and at the time of the explosion and his arrest he and the other members of "Cine Puebla" — "People's Film" — were working on a documentary project on Puerto Rican life on the island and on the mainland.

HE TOOK a wife, Dylcia Pagan, later sentenced to 55 years in prison on conspiracy charges involving the FALN. They had a child.

"My son is a good boy, a good son, a good husband, a good father, a good student," said his mother, Lucy Morales.

"The man is not what he is painted to be. He's a serious, quiet man," said Ms. Garcia, whose group seeks Morales' release and the release of other reputed members of Puerto Rican terrorist groups.

The picture painted by authorities is very different. They say Morales joined the FALN at about the time that the organization was formed in 1974, with the aim of bringing independence to Puerto Rico.

In October of that year, five bombs went off in Manhattan banks. Two months later another blast injured a policeman. And on Jan. 24, 1975, a bomb at historic Fraunces Tavern in the Wall Street area killed four people and injured 50.

Since its start, authorities say, the FALN has claimed reponsibility for more than 100 bombings causing $3.5 million in damage and five deaths.

MORALES' ROLE is not clear. Walton says Morales was "one of several bomb experts." Others claim he had a more prominent role.

He was making a bomb in the Queens apartment when it blew up in his face, authorities say. Nearby, they found 66 sticks of dynamite, more than 350 pounds of incendiary chemicals and powders, blasting caps, 1,000 pounds of ammunition, pipe bombs, a sawed-off shotgun and three other weapons and hundreds of bomb components.

"There's nothing to be sorry about...," Morales said, before he was sentenced to prison. "I will apologize if this country apologizes to my people."

"They're not going to hold me forever," he swore.

A month later, he escaped. In a document revealed last week, federal authorities alleged that his lawyer, Susan Tipograph, smuggled a bolt cutter to the convict in his room in Bellevue Hospital's prison ward. She denies it.

Apparently, authorities said, he used the tool to cut through a screen. Despite his handicap, he shimmied three stories down a rope of bandages.

AND THEN, silence. Authorities are not the only ones who say they did not know where he was; his mother, too, claims she had no contact with her son. FALN bombings tapered off, until this past New Year's Eve when three policemen were injured in four blasts at government buildings.

The circumstances of his arrest in Puebla remain vague more than a week after it occurred. Three people died, including one police officer and a woman who was at first described as Morales' common-law wife.

Juan Manuel Ibarra, director of the Federal Judiciary Police in Mexico, said Morales and at least six others were plotting to bomb a meeting of American and Mexican legislators in Puebla.

He used the alias Ramon Ramirez Ayala and the nickname "Chucho," relying on the help of the area's large Puerto Rican community.

Morales, in a jailhouse news conference, would only say that he had been in Puebla "a few days." As for the rest of the four years, he was silent.

Maternity leave denied for adoption

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Delighted with her new baby girl, Carole Fezar had hoped to take some time off from work to enjoy her new role as a full-time mother.

But the dream disappeared after her employers denied a request for maternity leave because her 4-month-old daughter, Kristin Marie, is adopted.

"I don't feel I'm less of a parent. I feel I'm more of a parent. It's an honor to be able to adopt a child. We're not second-class citizens," Mrs. Fezar said Sunday night.

"In a way, we're hurt. It's just unreal," said her husband, Michael.

The Fezars got Kristin Marie, their first child, early last month after waiting several years on an adoption list.

Mrs. Fezar, 39, a clerk at the tax office in the nearby borough of Ambridge, said she contacted her supervisor about receiving an unpaid maternity leave.

Mrs. Fezar, a borough employee for 18 years, said she expected no problems.

But at a borough council meeting Tuesday, her first full day at home, Mrs. Fezar's bid for maternity leave was denied by a 4-2 vote.

Mrs. Fezar, a member of Local 1015 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, filed a grievance against the decision two days later.

"I just want a guarantee of my job in case something unforeseeable should happen to my husband," she said.

Her contract provides for a six-month maternity leave which is renewable for another six months, she said.

"My present supervisor for the past 10 years said in a letter of recommendation (for adoption) many good things about me, including that I was a hard worker, thorough, conscientious and that he felt privileged to recommend me," she said. "I can't understand why they're doing this to me."

Councilman Roy Stubbins, who voted against Mrs. Fezar's request for maternity leave, said he had no complaints about her work, but feared the case would set a precedent.

"...Maternity leave in the contract meant if a female borough worker conceived and became pregnant, was too ill to work, took maternity leave, went home to bed, stayed off her feet, and went back to work," he said.

Stubbins said he feared bachelors in the borough's street department might make similar requests if they married women with children. The borough of 11,000 residents, just north of Pittsburgh, has 18 municipal employees, excluding the police and fire departments.

"No one here is questioning anybody's right to have a child or to love a child. That's absurd," said Councilman Richard Towcimak, who also voted against the maternity leave.

But another council member, Elizabeth Smetanka, disagreed.

"The baby is a Fezar, it's her child. I think it's a disgrace to deny (the request)," Mrs. Smetanka said.

Stubbins said Mrs. Fezar's maternity leave would cost the borough $3,000 a year in benefits, but Fezar said his wife would be covered under his insurance policy.

"We will take no benefits from the borough. We just want a guarantee that the job is there," said Fezar, 45, a chemistry professor at the Community College of Allegheny County.

Union officials have joined the Fezars in their battle.

"I'm going to fight the grievance right along. We've got a winning case," said Edward Gadomsky, the local's foreman.

Journalist recalls Lebanon invasion

By FERESHTEH EMAMI

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — My husband and I set out for our honeymoon in south Lebanon just as waves of Israeli planes began bombing the Beirut sports stadium used by Palestinian guerrillas as a supply depot.

It was Friday, June 4, 1982, and the bombs were falling so close to our moving car that I could feel the heat of the blasts that were throwing gusts of fire and smoke into the air.

The next morning we were in south Lebanon, where Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies were hitting northern Israeli settlements with artillery fire. The Israelis were answering with their own artillery and air raids on guerrilla positions.

We took shelter in the headquarters of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) in Naqoura, less than two miles north of the Israeli border on the Mediterranean coast.

We were stuck in the middle of the artillery duel for two days with Israeli forces firing from the sea, land and air while the PLO fired from strongholds around the port city of Tyre, 11 miles north of the Israeli border.

On Sunday, June 6, at 11:07 a.m. the first Israeli column of 11 British-made Centurion tanks rolled through a Dutch-manned U.N. checkpoint 2.5 miles north of Naqoura. From the roof I could see the bombardment of Tyre, where great clouds of white smoke billowed into the sky hour after hour.

For the next five days we were trapped in Naqoura. That was my honeymoon. On the second day of the invasion, an Israeli tank ran over the main water pipe into Naqoura, cutting off the supply to the headquarters. We brushed our teeth with liquids ranging from Coca Cola to mineral water.

We watched as an incredible array of self-propelled artillery and armor rolled past UNIFIL's windows and moved north towards Tyre. Every tank and armored personnel carrier was draped with a bright orange plastic sheet to identify it for Israel's own aircraft.

There was no way to count all the tanks, jeeps, ambulances and armored personnel carriers.

Moving house end to battle with market

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — The wood-frame bungalow sits marooned amid acres of asphalt and cars, the last rampart in a two-year legal battle between its owner and the nation's largest supermarket chain.

Bernice Hensley was the only homeowner on her block who refused to sell her property to Safeway Stores Inc. two years ago to make way for a supermarket. The other structures were leveled.

After her home of 57 years was surrounded by a fence, Mrs. Hensley took on the chain with a $10.5 million lawsuit. In an out-of-court settlement in February, she agreed to vacate the property in return for a reported $220,000.

"I've lived here most of my life," said Mrs. Hensley, 63, standing on her porch, which is now surrounded by the Safeway parking lot. "I'm sentimental. This is where my children were born."

Under terms of the settlement, she said, she must vacate the property by June 15.

"I'll move when I'm good and ready," she said. "I'll move in time before they sue me."

But she says she won't leave the house behind. Instead, Mrs. Hensley plans to tow the home away, but won't say where she plans to move.

The retired beauty shop owner said she lost almost 30 pounds since Safeway first asked to buy her land.

"My health is really gone," she said. "All I do is cry."

Her suit claimed Safeway "maliciously" erected an 8-foot fence around her house and in the process destroyed a tree that "holds great sentimental value."

The fence blocks most of the light and air from her home, she said.

Before they put up the fence, contractors cut away half of a two-car garage she had shared with a neighbor, Mrs. Hensley said.

The suit also claimed contractors who built the parking lot trespassed on her property with bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Safeway bought 18 pieces of property, including several businesses and more than a dozen houses, and cleared 4 1-3 acres to make way for the store.

Mrs. Hensley's attorney, Lloyd Larkin of Tulsa, would not disclose the amount of the settlement but said it was several times the $45,000 that Safeway officials offered to buy the house.

Safeway representatives would not comment on terms of the agreement.
