Common site picketing loss means bill's death for future

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would have strengthened the hand of striking construction unions is dead not only for this year but for the foreseeable future, a dejected sponsor says.

In a stinging defeat for organized labor and the House Democratic leadership, the common situs picketing bill went down to a surprise defeat Wednesday night on a 217 to 205 vote.

Although it directly affected only the building trades, the vote was the first test of organized labor's strength in the new and heavily Democratic Congress.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said today that an antiunion campaign led to the bill's defeat. But a leader of the campaign to defeat the bill, Chairman R. Heath Larry of the National Association of Manufacturers, promptly denied the effort had an anti-union motivation.

Marshall's remarks came during a question-and-answer session at a conference sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers, in response to a questioner who had hailed the defeat as a victory for common sense.

"I do not think it's a victory for common sense," Marshall replied. "I think it's a victory for emotion."

Marshall, who described himself as surprised at the defeat, said he believes the defeat was the result of a strong campaign "motivated more by an anti-union animus than the issue involved."

Marshall did not identify the architects of the campaign, but he was clearly speaking of the Manufacturers Association as one. That prompted Larry, who was seated at the speaker's table beside Marshall, to rise and put his arm around the labor secretary's shoulder.

Larry said he feels U.S. Steel Corp., of which he is vice chairman, has a record of cooperating with unions. And he told Marshall his organization "fought common situs as hard as we could, not from any antiunion feeling but because we thought it would lead to their own self-destruction."

The bill's prime sponsor, Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said the vote killed the legislation for the foreseeable future. He also said the outcome bodes ill for labor's campaign against right-to-work laws.

Conservatives and business lobbied intensively against the bill, which would have allowed a union to shut down an entire construction site in a dispute with only one subcontractor.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he had never seen organizations lobby as hard as the picketing bill's opponents. Before the vote, a pessimistic O'Neill chided labor for not mounting an effective drive to muster support for the bill.

The House passed a similar bill in 1975, 229 to 189. It was vetoed in January 1976 by then-President Gerald R. Ford.

"When you get careless along the line, the train goes off the track," O'Neill said. Despite the speaker's efforts to keep Democrats in line, 88 voted with 129 Republicans against the bill. Only 14 Republicans voted for it.

The majority was fashioned out of a coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats, including all nine from President Carter's home state of Georgia.

Carter, who won with overwhelming labor support in a narrow contest against Ford last fall, stayed out of the fray. Carter had said merely that he would sign the bill if Congress passed it.

Ford initially backed the common situs bill in 1975, but vetoed it.

House approves pipeline, malpractice, drug bills

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas House quickly passed today the coal slurry pipeline, medical malpractice and generic drug bills that had forced them into long work days all week.

Representatives approved the coal slurry pipeline bill on a non-record vote, returning it to the Senate for action on amendments.

They passed the malpractice bill 135-1, sending it to the Senate.

Lawyers and most medically related lobby groups had accepted the House bill as a workable compromise, but the Texas Medical Association said it didn't go far enough. The TMA can be expected to work for Senate approval of changes the House refused to accept.

The generic drug bill was passed 86-48. It also goes to the Senate, where chances for passage are believed to be slim because it will take a two-thirds vote just to bring up the bill. Doctors and drug manufacturers oppose it.

Also sent to the Senate was a bill giving self-government to Southwest Texas State University, which now falls under the board of regents of the Texas State University System.

The bill giving coal slurry pipelines the power to condemn land for right-of-way was tentatively approved in the House by a 111-34 vote late Wednesday afternoon after an all-day debate.

Under the coal slurry bill, companies building and operating such pipelines would have the power to condemn land for right-of-way. A slurry pipeline could not be built, however, without railroad commission approval.

A coal slurry pipeline planned by Houston Natural Gas would bring a mixture of crushed coal and water from Colorado and New Mexico to Angleton. The coal would be extracted for use in producing electricity.

Senators must decide whether to accept the numerous changes made by the House. Most likely to arouse objection is an amendment that would stack attorney fees on top of jury awards in condemnation cases. Ordinarily, a lawyer just gets a cut of what the landowner receives.

Efforts to make a guaranteed supply of water a condition for a railroad commission permit failed. But the House voted to limit pipeline right-of-way to 50 feet in width and to require that the lines be buried at least three feet deep.

The generic drugs bill, first debated Monday, would enable pharmacists to substitute cheaper but chemically equivalent drugs for name brand products prescribed by doctors — unless the doctors scrawl "dispense as written" on the prescriptions.

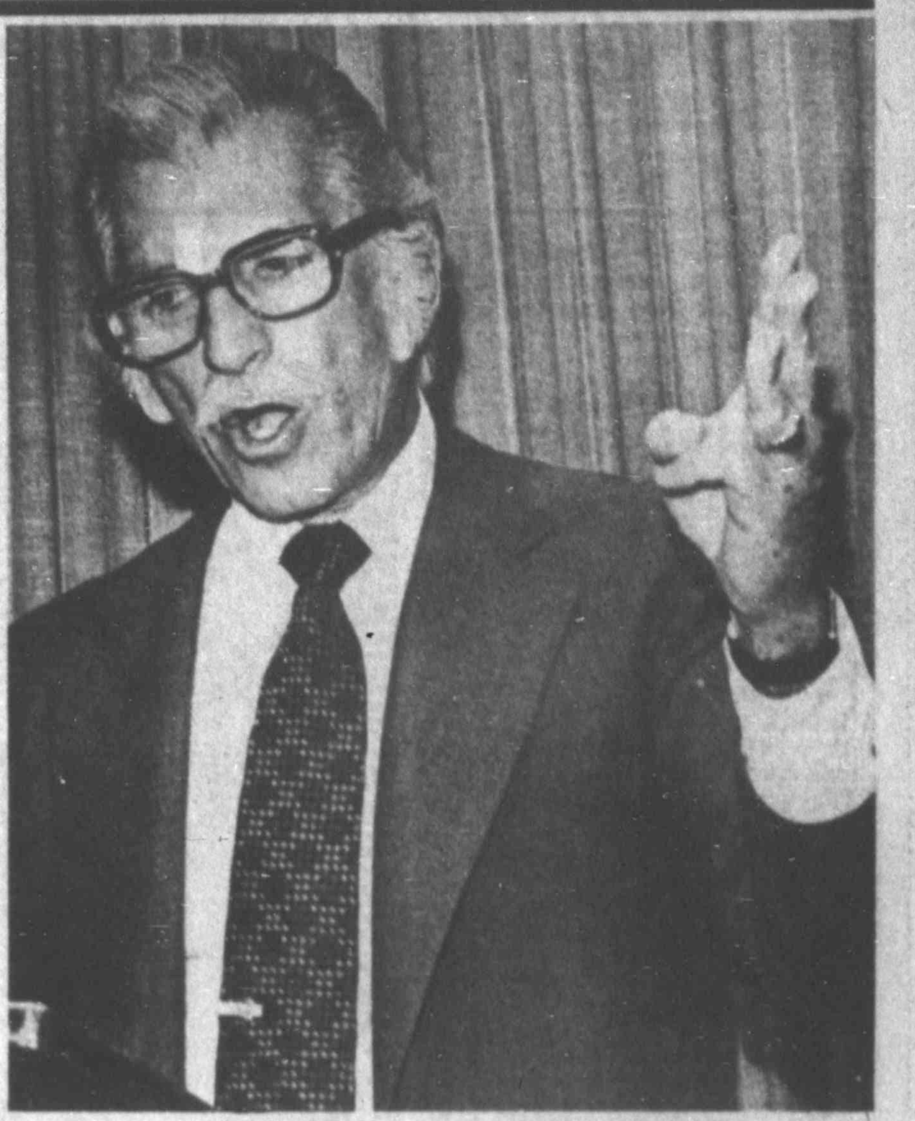
It specifies more than 100 drugs for which there are no substitutes and establishes a state formulary commission to ascertain which drugs are equivalent.

The medical malpractice bill tied up the House all day Tuesday. It is designed to provide doctors and patients some relief from sky-high malpractice insurance rates.

Major features of the bill place a $500,000 ceiling on malpractice judgments, with additional amounts allowed if medical expenses run higher and require all suits to be screened by panels of three doctors before they are filed.

Senators passed and sent to the House on Wednesday a "living will" measure that would allow Texans to write legally binding statements to keep their lives from being artificially prolonged by machines.

They also passed to the House two bills that are in Gov. Dolph Briscoe's anticrime package.



Michael T. Halbouty makes a point

Halbouty drills energy dilemma

By JOE SALMAN

More than 350 landmen and their guests Wednesday night heard the nation's congress, "our hideous bureaucracy" and even the President of the United States taken to task for the U.S.' deplorable energy situation.

Michael T. Halbouty, a Houston independent oilman, one of the nation's outstanding earth scientists and petroleum engineers, and a strong fighter for the oil industry, talked long, loud and often soft as he went into the ills and failings of our country — especially in the task of supplying domestic energy.

Those persons in the audience who had come to hear Halbouty tear into the nation's anti-oil, antinuclear congressmen were not disappointed.

The occasion for Halbouty's speech was the annual Executive Night meeting of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association in the Midland Country Club.

Halbouty is a past president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

The speaker was in good form.

In such good form, from the standpoint of an all-out tirade against those who harm the oil industry and the nation, that all of his presentation, or almost all of it, follows:

When I accepted Cecil Ellis' invitation to be here tonight, I gave considerable thought to the subject matter of my presentation.

Well — I said to myself — I could talk about our confused and destructive Congress — the bumbling bureaucrats — the harsh winter — the overall energy situation — imported oil — OPEC — and since I am a devoted free-enterprise thinking Republican, I figured I could also throw in some few barbs at the dangerous Democrats in Washington.

It was evident that all those items would give me a lot to say — in such a short period of time — and it also brought to my mind the quote made by that famous philospher Yogi Berra, who said: "Before I say anything I've got something to tell 'ya."

And I really have something to tell 'ya!!

Since this event is being held bet-

Desai may end Russian ties

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Morarji Desai, 81-year-old leader of the successful fight to unseat the government of Indira Gandhi, was sworn in today as India's fourth prime minister and immediately signaled a possible end to this country's special links with the Soviet Union.

At a news conference after taking the oath of office, Desai said the 1971 Indian-Soviet friendship treaty "must not come in the way of our friendship with any other state.... We won't have any special relations with any country."

Morarji Desai

Desai, a veteran of the Indian independence movement and a former leader of Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party, said his government would adopt a foreign policy of "proper nonalignment."

His 59-year-old predecessor, Indira Gandhi, was not present for the the three-minute ceremony in the ornate Ashoka Hall of the presidential palace. But she was one of the first to send congratulations to the longtime foe who led his new Janata party to a stunning election triumph over her and the Congress party last weekend.

Having lost her seat in parliament in the election, Mrs. Gandhi became a private citizen. However, her successor as the Congress leader in Parliament, Y. B. Chavan, said she would continue to take a leading part in the party.

Acting President B. D. Jatti swore in Desai as head of the new government three hours after the members of the new Parliament from his party unanimously approved him as their leader.

"The people have high hopes and the government will try to fulfill them," said Desai. "This has been a nonviolent, new revolution by the Indian people."

He was chosen prime minister by the spiritual leader of the anti-Gandhi opposition, Jayaprakash Narayan, who canvassed the members of the new Parliament from the Janata and two allied parties, the Congress for Democracy and a regional Sikh party.

The Janata has 270 seats, the Congress for Democracy 28 and the Sikh party eight in the 542-seat lower house of Parliament.

Desai's only opponent for the post was Jagjivan Ram, 68, head of the Congress for Democracy. Both men are former Congress party leaders who broke with Mrs. Gandhi — Desai eight years ago and Ram last month.

Ulrich seeks hospital solution

By JUDY JOHNSTON

Midland Memorial Hospital administrator Wayne Ulrich this morning said he has been in contact with other Texas hospitals concerning the acceptance of Midland accident victims, after a statement by Ector County Judge Joe Connally that Odessa Medical Center will not accept Midland indigent patients.

Hospitals contacted include ones in Lubbock and Dallas, Ulrich said.

"It is a difficult situation when evaluating the medical needs of patients in light of the time available to get them to treatment," Ulrich said.

The statement by Connally that Ector County would not accept Midland patients mainly will affect accident victims with chest and head injuries, who now must be sent to Odessa, where there are thoracic surgeons and neurosurgeons and equipment for such surgery.

"In the event that the statement by Judge Connally is enforced, it will be necessary to utilize other hospitals," Ulrich said, adding that transportation of patients to other hospitals would be "by the most expeditious means" — either by ambulance or aircraft. The hospital was prepared to utilize whatever method was necessary, Ulrich added.

Whereas the statement by Connally specified indigent patients, Ulrich said that if a patient comes to the hospital with head or chest injuries, the hospital employes do not make an assessment as to whether or not the patient is indigent, adding that the hospital is not prepared to make such a financial assessment on emergency patients nor does it wish to.

Judge Connally this morning said Ector County could not accept indigent patients from Midland County.

"It is against the law for us to take out-of-county patients unless the commissioners' court has worked out some sort of contract," he said.

Connally contended that Ulrich broke the contract of Sept. 22, 1976, when he refused to admit indigent maternity cases referred from Ector County. The contract states that the Midland Memorial Hospital agreed to treat patients from Ector County.

"We no longer have an agreement to treat each others' indigent patients," Connally said.

After Ulrich broke the agreement, Connally said, it was up to Ulrich to "come to us and renegotiate a contract," but that he had heard nothing from Ulrich.

The county-supported Medical Center had treated accident victims from Midland County for 20 years, Connally said.

He got less than he bargained for

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen Aaron Jackson enlisted in the Army to be trained as an automobile mechanic. Instead, at 21, his body was cut in half by a tank.

A federal court on Wednesday said it "deeply sympathizes" with Jackson, but it can't order the government to pay damages to him.

Jackson had sued for breach of contract, claiming he was promised two things by a recruiter: he would get mechanic's training; he would not be assigned to dangerous duty.

The Army says there was no such promise, at least not in writing. And even if there had been, the recruiter had no authority to make it and therefore it's not binding.

In May 1974, four months after he enlisted, Jackson took part in maneuvers at Ft. Riley, Kan. A tank ran over him. The lower half of his body, navel on down, had to be amputated.

Jackson's lawyers could not sue for negligence; the Supreme Court has said it knows of no law that permits a soldier to recover damages on that ground. The lawyers chose the unusual claim that there was breach of the enlistment contract and asked $5 million damages.

The U.S. Court of Claims on Wednesday issued its decision in case No. 259-76, Allen Aaron Jackson v. The United States.

The court said it made a thorough, careful and comprehensive review "in view of the shocking severity of the plaintiff's injuries," but said it could find nothing in the enlistment papers that prevented the Army from using Jackson in training exercises.

"The court deeply sympathizes with the plaintiff for the severe injury he received while serving our country in the United States Army," said the judges. "However, the court is without jurisdiction, authority or power to grant him any relief."

Red measles precautions started

Midland City-County Health Department is starting a screening process to locate students in junior and senior high school in Midland who might need to be vaccinated against rubeola or red measles.

Only one case of the measles has been reported in the Midland area, said Dr. Stuart I. Draper, director of the Midland, Ector and Howard County health units.

The precaution is being taken after an outbreak of the disease reached epidemic proportions in Big Spring, ere more than 100 cases of rubeola have been confirmed, Dr. Draper said

The problem was incorrectly reported as rubella in other area newspapers, Dr. Draper said. Rubella is an acute, short course form of measles, commonly known as German measles.

Rubeola, or red measles, however, involves a fever of more than four days and causes purplish spots on the mucous membranes of the mouth in addition to a rash, Dr. Draper said.

The four indications which health unit employes will look for in screening the junior and senior high school employes, Dr. Draper said, are as follows:

— If the student was given an inactive vaccine between 1963 and 1967;

— If the student received a vaccine before the age of 13 months;

— Or if the student has had a history of measles.

A certain number of students who received an activated vaccine with gamma globulin also may have to be revaccinated, Dr. Draper said.

A similar screening process is being started in Big Spring, Dr. Draper said.

Dr. Draper said that it will depend on the number of students receiving revaccination as to whether the vaccine will be distributed within the schools or at the health department, located in the basement of the Midland Memorial Hospital.

Children below the seventh grade generally are well protected against rubeola, Dr. Draper said, because state law requires vaccination for children through the sixth grade.

About 95 per cent of students through the sixth grade are vaccinated with effective vaccine, said Payton Cook, director of pupil personnel of the Midland Independent School District.

Panel approves Snelson's bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—A bill by Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland to recognize Sudden Infant Death Syndrome has been approved by the Senate Human Resources Committee.

Senate Bill 821 would give official recognition to the disease and would provide for autopsies of victims.

Dr. Mary Micah of Austin told the committee that they syndrome was officially recognized in the United States in 1973, but was still referred to often as crib death. She said it affects one in 300 live births in the U.S.

Micah and several mothers of SIDS victims praised portions of the bill which called for counseling for parents. All testified that the trauma and guilt feelings associated with the sudden death of a seemingly healthy baby were difficult for a mother to cope with.

Several pediatricians also endorsed the bill.

The committee also approved a SB 823 by Snelson to allow certain individuals between 18 and 21 years old to remain at Texas Youth Council facilities.

Mark Hoffman, representing the TYC, said that many individuals are attending high school or college when they become 18 and are forced to leave the facilities. The bill would allow them to finish their schooling before being required to leave.

The bill was unanimously approved and recommended to the calender committee for the local and uncontested calender.

Proposed hospital district bill explained

Midland County residents may have the opportunity to decide if the operations and ownership of Midland Memorial Hospital should be controlled by a hospital district and also whether a $10 million bond issue should be passed to pay for planned expansion and renovation of the hospital.

Martin Allday, Midland Chamber of Commerce member and a hospital trustee, discussed the possible future of the hospital at Wednesday's board meeting of the chamber. Chamber President Harrell Feldt has backed new hospital facilities for Midland as one of his prime goals during his term as president.

"It seems to me the chamber should be the moving force to get this hospital district," said Allday.

Allday said State Senator Pete Snelson and State Representative Tom Craddick will soon introduce legislation, which if passed, would permit Midlanders to vote on whether the district should be formed and the bond issued passed.

The attorney said an initial board of directors has been formed for the proposed district made up of Frank Cowden Jr., W. P. Franklin, Ed Magruder Jr., Robert Pendleton and Decker Dawson, all of whom are prominent area businessmen.

Although the district could still raise money for the hospital if the bond issue fails, Allday said he doubts the trustees would turn over the ownership and operation of the hospital to the district if the proposed bond issue were defeated.

Fred Tyler, executive vice president of the chamber, said advertisements have been placed in several newspapers in the Southwest informing the public of Saturday's jobs fair to be held near Midland Regional Air Terminal.

"Our phones have been ringing off the hook from people inquiring about the jobs fair," said Tyler.

He said that with Texas Instruments coming to Midland the need for the hiring project is especially important. Tyler said the firm will have need for several job openings in Midland and either a company representative or an official of Texas Employment Commission will be at the fair to interview prospective employes.

West Texas Chamber of Commerce President W. H. "Bill" Collyns invited the Midland chamber members to the WTCC's convention, which will be held April 14 to 16 at the Midland Hilton.

"We want this to be one of the best conventions in Midland or West Texas," he said.

Rubeola outbreak reported

BIG SPRING — Rubeola, or red measles, has struck Big Spring residents in epidemic proportions, the city-county health department said.

More than 100 cases of rubeola have been authenticated in Big Spring, Dr. Stuart Draper, director of the Big Spring-Howard County Health Department said.

The health department is offering free vaccine to anyone between the ages of six months and 18 years from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Age groups hardest hit by the epidemic are high school and junior high school, Draper said.

Big Spring High School reported 222 absences out of an enrollment of 1,767 Tuesday and 199 absences Wednesday. About 60 of those students had measles, schools superintendent Dr. E. H. McKenzie said.

He said the situation is not serious enough to close the schools.

Symptoms of rubeola couch, rash and fever lasting at least four days.

Health officials are suggesting vaccine for persons who were vaccinated before they were six months old, who were vaccinated with "Kill-Virus" vaccine between 1963 and 1967 or who have had a history of the disease between the ages of six months and 81 years but have never been vaccinated.

Pickett hears pleas, hands down sentences

Robert Dean McClain pleaded guilty Tuesday in 142nd District Court to charges of unlawful possession of cocaine.

Judge Perry D. Pickett sentenced McClain to eight years of probation for the incident which occurred April 7, 1976.

Evaristo Hernandez Monday pleaded guilty to charges of burglary and was sentenced to 20 years in the Texas penitentiary. The charges stem from an incident March 23, 1976, in a building belonging to Leodis Hernandez.

Charges of murder against Herman Wortham were dismissed but he was sentenced to 10 years in the Texas penitentiary after he pleaded guilty last week to charges of voluntary manslaughter for the Jan. 5, 1976, death of William McGruder.

Archie Lee Collins was sentenced Monday to two to five years in the Texas penitentiary and had his probation revoked after pleading guilty to charges of burglary stemming from an incident March 24, 1976.

Richard Earl (Wood) Hemphill had two charges of burglary dismissed last week after he pleaded guilty to a lesser offense of felony theft for an incident Sept. 21, 1976, in which 600 pounds of copper wire were stolen from John Cappadonna.

Charges against Samuel Menefee of forgery by possession with intent to pass were dismissed last week because Menefee already was serving a sentence in the penitentiary. The charges stemmed from an incident April 9, 1976.

Cotton growers' meeting set

LAMESA — The annual meeting of the Lamesa Cotton Growers will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Dawson County Community Building.

A speech on dust standards as they relate to farmers and ginners will be given by Tony Price, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Ginners Association and chairman of the National Cotton Ginners task force on cotton dust.

Price will also present the National Cotton Ginner of the year award.

Cook-off slated

ODESSA — Chili chefs from the area will gather Saturday to test their skills in the second annual University of Texas of the Permian Basin Championship Chili Cook-Off.

Citizens group forms to back park bonds

A citizens group has been formed to promote passage of three of the four bond issues to be voted on by Midlanders April 2.

Mary Garay, chairman of the Committee to Improve our Neighborhood Parks, held a news conference in Fasken Park Wednesday afternoon to announce the group is urging Midlanders to vote approval of bonds to finance $1.2 million for a recreation center, $900,000 for expansion of Hogan Golf Course and $1.9 million for new parks acquisition and existing park improvements.

The organization is not channeling its efforts into passage of a $3.25 million zoo bond issue because the Midland Zoological Society is promoting passage of that issue, Mrs. Garay said.

Other members of the citizens' organization include Robert Koen, John Redfern III, James Humphreys Mrs. Robert Koen, John Redfern III, Mrs. James Humphreys, Mrs. Tim Thompson and LaDoyce Lambert.

Although the group has gotten information from the Midland Parks and Recreation Department that it will use to promote the bond's passage, Mrs. Garay said neither the department or any parks and recreation commission members are backing the citizens group.

Mrs. Garay said it would cost homeowners $1.87 a year per $10,000 of tax evaluation on their house for passage of the $1.2 million bond, $1.42 per $10,000 for passage of the $900,000 bond, and $3 per $10,000 for passage of the $1.9 million bond. The total cost to a homeowner for passage of the three issues would be $6.29 per $10,000 of tax evaluation on their houses.

"This is an investment, but it's not a very high cost compared to the benefits," Mrs. Garay said.

Mahon talk to highlight WTCC meeting at Hilton

Speakers discussing a wide variety of subjects will be featured April 14 to 16 when the 59th annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce meets in the Midland Hilton.

U.S. Rep. George Mahon will be the principal speaker at the April 15 banquet. Speaking on the American Free Enterprise System at the luncheon that day will be Donald L. Bryant of New York, vice president of Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Jim C. Langdon, member of the Texas Railroad Commission, will speak on "West Texas and the Nation's Energy;" Alberto Magnon of Laredo, executive vice president, Laredo National Bank, will talk on "West Texas and Mexico" and a representative of the White House staff will talk on "West Texas and the Carter Administration" during the morning session.

Registration will begin at noon April 14, with committee meetings scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m. A Midland hospitality hour will start at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame for WTCC members and guests. Museum hostesses will conduct special tours after the hospitality period.

The annual WTCC business session at which officers for 1977-1978 will be elected, 1978 convention site selected and award presentations made, is scheduled the afternoon of April 15.

The Quota Buster Breakfast at 7:45 a.m. Saturday will conclude the convention activities.

Goals to be revealed in survey

What do Midland residents want the priority goals of the school district to be?

Results of a survey of both parents and non-parents are expected to tell board members what Midland wants from its schools.

Meetings will be held at each elementary school. A sample equal to 5 per cent of the Midland school population, 750 persons, has been selected using a table of random numbers, Dr. Douglas Brown, assistant superintendent of schools, said.

These people have been sent invitations to participate in the survey. But, other citizens may attend the meetings and fill out questionnaire forms there, he said.

At the meetings, principals and other school administrators will explain the development of the questionnaire and assist participants in filling out their forms, Brown said.

The questionnaires list a variety of goals for the school district, compiled from suggested goals of administrators, faculty and citizens. Participants will be asked to list those goals which are most important.

Each meeting will be at an elementary school for residents of that area of the city. Each will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday or Thursday night.

Meetings are scheduled for Monday at Bonham, Crockett, DeZavala, Jones, Milam and Travis elementary schools.

Tuesday, meetings will be held at Burnet, Emerson, Fannin, Houston, Lamar, Pease and Washington elementary schools.

On Thursday, meetings are scheduled to be held at Bowie, Henderson, Long, Rusk, South and West elementary schools.

Cotton dust hearing scheduled

DALLAS — A public hearing on a proposed health standard that would reduce worker exposure to cotton dust will be held by the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) in Lubbock May 10.

Reduction of permissible dust exposure will be a key provision. Specifically, the proposal calls for reduction of the permissible exposure limit from 1,000 micrograms of total dust per cubic meter of air to 200 micrograms.

Persons wishing to reserve time should file a notice of intention to appear, postmarked on or before April 1, with Tom Hall, OSHA Office of Committee Management, U.S. Department of Labor, 3rd and Constitution Ave., N. W., Washington D. C. 20210.

UT announces Abbott to build on school's land

The University of Texas Wednesday announced it will have Abbott Construction Co. of Midland construct a warehouse and office on land the university owns in Midland Industrial Park. The announcement was made at a board meeting of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The tract was recently annexed into the city and is located near the Department of Public Safety office.

The warehouse will be used to store equipment used in several experimental and research projects now underway. The projects include a plant nursery, chemical control of mesquite and strip root plowing.

Mild weather due to continue

Continued partly cloudy skies are predicted for Friday with a high temperature expected in the mid-70s and the low falling in the upper 40s.

Wednesday's high was 65 degrees and the overnight low was 37 degrees at 7 a.m. today.

High thin clouds and slightly warmer temperatures were reported early today at Odessa, Rankin, Andrews, Stanton, Crane, Lamesa, and Big Lake.

Wednesday afternoon's top marks ranged up to 79 at Presidio in far West Texas.

Alyeska 'interfered' with pipeline probe

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT

The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — The company building the trans-Alaska pipeline has heavily censored records and the transcripts before turning them over to an Alaska state agency investigating cost overruns on the huge project and has attempted to delay the investigation, The Los Angeles Times has learned.

Documents and letters obtained by The Times charge that the company, Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., has "directly interfered with and prevented" the Alaska Pipeline Commission's inquiry from proceeding on schedule.

A member of the commission, Robert A. Breeze, confirmed Wednesday that many records subpoenaed as long ago as last November have not been surrendered. He said also that "critical portions" were deleted from those that have been delivered.

"It reminds me of the Nixon tape transcripts," said Breeze, referring to missing portions of transcripts given over by former President Richard M. Nixon in connection with the Watergate burglary investigation.

"We don't understand what could be so sensitive that Alyeska would go to the trouble of specifically excluding portions of transcripts given over by former President Richard M. Nixon in connection with the Watergate burglary investigation.

"We don't understand what could be so sensitive that Alyeska would go to the trouble of specifically excluding portions of documents."

Contacted by The Times, Alyeska, through a spokesman, said it has been "attempting to cooperate with the Alaska Pipeline Commission and with numerous other federal and state government agencies in regard to all aspects of the pipeline project and we will continue to do so in good faith and to the best of our ability."

But the spokesman added that the company deems it "inappropriate" to comment publicly on legal matters or to "engage in public debate or otherwise publicly respond to charges and allegations from public officials and others."

Earlier, the company, in documents filed with the commission, contended that the state agency lacks jurisdiction for its investigation, is making unreasonable demands for records and has allowed insufficient time for proper responses.

E. L. Patton, Alyeska's chairman, told a Seattle reporter earlier this month, "We expect to get a lot of demagoguery about the cost of the project in the next nine to 10 months. But we think the project has been wisely managed. We have not deliberately spent money that we haven't had to spend."

The commission launched its investigation of the pipeline's swelling costs late last year amid reports that the project had been plagued with mismanagement, fraud, union featherbedding, large-scale theft and waste.

State investigators have reason to believe, for instance, that major equipment totaling in the millions of dollars has been "lost or stolen" from the project. One item believed missing is a $5 million crane.

Among the targets of the state's investigation is the pipeline's central supply warehouse in Fairbanks, which has been a focal point for reports of theft and other criminal activity along the 798-mile pipeline route.

The Times disclosed more than a year ago that the warehouse was of paramount concern to Alaska law enforcement officials because of a concentration there of what one official described as "some of Alaska's toughest hoodlums." Most are members of the powerful Alaska Teamsters Union.

Cost of the pipeline was estimated at less than $1 billion when it first was proposed in 1969, but Alyeska now is estimating the final cost at $7.7 billion, much of it attributable to inflation. Breeze contended the final cost likely will be closer to $10 billion.

Absentee voting continues

Absentee voting in the April 2 Midland school board election continues, with 142 persons casting ballots by Wednesday afternoon.

Balloting will continue today, Friday, Monday and Tuesday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the school administration building at 702 N. N St. Mail absentee ballots will be sent out through Tuesday, also. Completed mail ballots must be postmarked by midnight April 1 and received by 1 p.m. April 2.

Police end man's 13-year falsehood

DALLAS (AP) — Robert Lee Beatty, who spent 13 quiet years as Buddy Lee Haley, was in the Dallas County jail today awaiting extradition to Oklahoma following his arrest as an escapee from the Oklahoma state prison hospital.

Beatty, 39, was arrested at his home by police officers on a fugitive arrest warrant issued by the Oklahoma Bureau of Investigation. Beatty, who had worked for 13 years as a self-empioyed roffing contractor in Dallas, at first denied his identity.

But later at the police station, after his fingerprints were matched with those provided by Oklahoma authorities, Beatty reportedly admitted his identity to Dallas police officers.

A Dallas police spokesman said he had no record in Dallas "At least not as Robert Lee Haley."

Beatty's wife, Edna told newsmen "Yes, I'm glad it's over. I'm glad to get it taken care of so maybe we can return to being a normal family. But I don't know what we will do now."

Beatty was wanted for escaping from the Oklahoma State Prison Hospital at Norman, Okla., while serving a 10-year prison term for theft of a horse, police said.

Rob Pyron, a spokesman for Oklahoma Gov. David Boren, said it is possible that Beatty might be freed on parole within 30-45 days and allowed to return to his family in Texas.

"He is a rehabilitated man. We are not after a pound of flesh. It's just that Mr. Beatty owes the state of Oklahoma a little time," Pyron said.

Police in Memphis, Tenn., arrested Beatty June 10, 1964 under an assumed name, but he was released before his true identity could be established.

Robert Lee Beatty

Mrs. Beatty said her main concern was to arrange for legal assistance for her husband of 19 years.

"I don't think of him as a criminal," she said adding that since his escape, "We have just lived our life and tried to live it good, the best way possible. He has been a good person and father."

She said the couple's five children did not know of their father's past.

When told of their father's past, she said "They all cried. He had been a good father to them and they really loved him," she said.

Three of the children, she said, were born after the Beattys assumed the name Haley.

Quick action on water relief likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Quick action on President Carter's drought relief program is being predicted in Congress, despite grumbling about his plan to charge farmers 5 per cent interest on loans to buy water.

"Obviously the President shares my own sense of urgency regarding the severe drought," Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said after the program was unveiled Wednesday.

"I am in substantial agreement with the proposals outlined in his message to the Congress and am confident the committee will act expeditiously on this urgent matter."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, also said he was pleased with parts of Carter's message, but added there were "some problems ... which will have to be reviewed very carefully."

He said that "in light of the emergency," the farmers should receive grants, not loans at 5 per cent interest.

At a House hearing on drought relief, Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus said Congress has provided for 5 per cent loans to farmers in other types of disaster relief programs and the Carter proposal was in line with this policy.

Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash., chairman of the House Interior subcommittee on water and power, said this seemed "untoward."

He added, "I suggest you rethink the entire approach of 5 per cent interest on disaster."

Carter asked Congress to approve a program of loans and grants totaling $844 million for farmers, businessmen and communities in the drought-stricken West and Midwest.

"If we are to be of real help to the people afflicted, time is of the essence," the President said.

Carter also said he had asked the Interior and Agriculture Departments to make additional federal land available for grazing.

Some congressional sources predicted this would arouse opposition from environmentalists who have argued that public lands are grazed beyond their capacity already.

The Carter package also contains:

—Temporary authority to allow the Economic Development Administration and the Farmers Home Administration to grant $150 million and loan $300 million to communities for emergency improvements to their water systems.

—A Small Business Administration program providing $50 million in low interest loans to small businesses in drought areas.

—A program that could provide $100 million in 5 per cent loans to farmers and ranchers in the drought areas to cover prospective losses.

U.S.-Vietnam talks to focus on economics

WASHINGTON (AP) — New talks between the United States and Vietnam will focus at first on establishing an economic relationship, probably starting with an end to the American trade embargo, State Department officials say.

President Carter announced Wednesday that a U.S. delegation will resume talks with Vietnamese officials in Paris in an effort to establish friendly and normal relations between the two nations.

In making the anouncement, Carter cited success by the commission sent to Vietnam to look into Americans still listed as missing in action. He said the talks also were being resumed at Hanoi's request.

"There are no preconditions requested and there will certainly be no preconditions on our part," the President said of the new talks.

But State Department experts say development of relations with Vietnam will be in careful stages similar to the process under way with China.

By that outline, full diplomatic contacts will be the last step "and are a long way off," one official said.

No date has been set for the Paris talks and the chief U.S. delegate has not been selected. However, the officials said the meetings may begin "in a matter of weeks, although it could be longer."

Initial talks will deal primarily with a range of economic matters, including direct U.S. aid, increased assistance from international financial organizations and potential American business investments.

But the sources said the trade embargo probably will be the first matter to be settled. In fact, one administration official speculated that Carter might end the boycott even before the Paris talks start.

The United States and Vietnam have met in Paris on an irregular basis for several years, but the talks were limited to the issue of determining the fate of those still listed as missing in action.

The President's announcement came as he released a report from the MIA commission, which returned Tuesday from Hanoi. Carter also disclosed that one of the 12 bodies the commission brought back from Hanoi was not that of an American serviceman.

Laboratory tests revealed the corpse was a Vietnamese about 50 years old. Both Carter and commission chairman Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, said the error was unintentional.

Both said Hanoi officials "have acted in good faith" and will continue to cooperate in identifying and retrieving as many as possible of the 2,546 Americans missing from the Vietnam war.

Moss reportedly pollution aid

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston scientists say Spanish moss gathers toxic metals from the air and could be a good gauge of air pollution.

Dr. Stanley M. Pier and Jimmy L. Perkins, both of the University of Texas School of Public Health, reported their findings Wednesday at a meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

The two scientists explained the picturesque moss is an epiphyte—meaning it takes all its nutrients from the air.

Justice charges Austin with school segregation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department charged Wednesday that the Austin, Tex., school system's policy of sending children to neighborhood schools has been used deliberately to segregate blacks and Mexican Americans from white students.

In a brief filed in the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the department asked that the federal courts order "an appropriate desegregation plan."

The brief did not specify what form the plan should take. However, those involved in the case agree that any significant change in the racial balance of Austin schools would require extensive busing of pupils throughout the city.

The government's action marked the latest turn in a case that has been bouncing up and down in the fedreal courts since 1970, when the Justice Department first sought a court-ordered desegregation plan in Austin.

Last May, the Fifth Circuit appellate court ruled that Austin's neighborhood schools policy, when considered against a background of residential segregation, amounted to unconstitutional discrimination. The court ordered a crosstown busing plan that would have involved as many as 25,000 students.

But, on Dec. 6, the Supreme Court nullified the busing decree and sent the case back to the Fifth Circuit for reconsideration.

Mother of missing girl just wants to hear something

DALLAS (AP) — "This constant not knowing has really gotten to me," Mrs. Barbara Baughman says after waiting five weeks for some word on the fate of her 7-year-old daughter, Ladina.

"My plea to whoever has gotten her is to just let me know how she is, whether she's alive," said Mrs. Baughman whose daughter disappeared Feb. 11 while on her way to school.

"They don't have to tell the police, or reveal who they are. Just how she (Ladina) is. I've got to know. I can't go on like this."

"It just seems like forever. It is easier to deal with something if you know what it is," she added, her voice breaking.

Dallas police this week officially declared the case a kidnaping, thus bringing the FBI into the investigation.

"The FBI here in Dallas had been working with police on the case."

Jury hears more Johnson facts

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Asst. U.S. Atty. Jim Rolfe said evidence and testimony concerning the affairs of a missing North Texas grain dealer is being presented to a federal grand jury here.

The grand jury reconvened in Abilene Wednesday after listening earlier this year to testimony from several witnesses at Wichita Falls concerning the disappearance and financial affairs of Robert M. Johnson of Iowa Park.

Johnson allegedly drowned when he disappeared from a pleasure boat in the Gulf of Mexico off Port Aransas Jan. 3. Port Aransas Constable Ben Cash said last month, however, that he had evidence Johnson faked the drowning and was alive in northern Mexico.

Following an investigation by state officials into Johnson-operated grain elevators in Wichita Falls and Iowa Park, authorities said several thousand bushels of grain were missing.

A federal warrant charging Johnson with transporting stolen grain from Oklahoma to Texas was issued last month.

The grand jury is not expected to continue its meetings concerning Johnson beyond Saturday, Rolfe said.

Better hold the line

It is difficult to understand the thinking and actions of those members of Congress and others who would repeal laws against the use of marijuana.

Yet there is a strong movement right now to do that very thing.

And judged by the progress made by advocates of such legislation in recent years, the marijuana lobby must be as strong and as potent as the "weed" itself.

Well-documented evidence has been presented time after time by opponents of liberalization of marijuana laws pointing out the fact that marijuana definitely is harmful, often permanently, to the mind and body of users.

Then one reads of opposite views voiced at congressional hearings and elsewhere by persons referred to as "authorities" in the matter.

This quite naturally confuses some persons, but if there is any doubt in one's mind regarding the harmful, terrifying effects of marijuana on continued users, he or she has only to visit with members of the narcotics divisions of the Midland Police Department, Sheriff's Office or Texas Department of Public Safety to get the true facts, supported by unquestionable evidence. Law enforcement agencies anywhere can furnish like information. They have to deal with the problem continuously and they know firsthand the horrors of drug abuse.

We wish that everyone, particularly young people, could see the series of slides on drug abuse and its effects shown by Gayland Hurst, a state narcotics officer, at a recent meeting of the Midland Downtown Lions Club. The slides are not at all pleasant to see, but they tell a most convincing story.

The slides should be shown in Washington, D.C., for viewing by all members of Congress, particularly those on committees holding hearings on liberalization of marijuana laws. They could change some minds and thinking on the subject.

A familiar tune

A footnote very well could be added to the adage that the poor will always be with us. So, it appears, will there always be the issue of reforming the welfare system that is . supposed to look out for the poor.

Former President Nixon made his move toward welfare reform in 1969, proposing a "Family Assistance Plan" carrying a federal guarantee of a minimum income for every American. It went down a blind alley in Congress and disappeared. The welfare system today is as controversial and crying for reform as ever, and getting more expensive by the year. It is now costing $50 billion a year for nine different programs that make one out of 10 Americans a recipient of some kind of welfare assistance.

President Carter called for "complete overhaul" of the welfare system in his campaign.

The Nixon plan met political resistance on grounds it failed to offer a credible incentive for people to try to earn enough to get off the welfare rolls. That remains the challenge in proposing a substitute for programs which now create administrative headaches and opportunities for abuse but attempt to prescribe exact conditions for welfare eligibility.

Mr. Carter also called in his inaugural address for government action that would "strengthen the family" rather than weaken it. He may have had the welfare system in mind. Should the present administration and Congress succeed in writing new welfare laws that bolster the sense of family responsibility, it will be an achievement that has eluded the government for a generation.

BIBLE VERSE

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his own works." — Mat. 16:26,27.

ART BUCHWALD

Where did all of Howard's money go?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — A group of us who were expecting to be included in Howard Hughes' will were sitting around in our lawyer's office the other day when the news broke that an appraisal of Hughes' wealth showed that, instead of being a billionaire, his estate was worth only $168,834,615. You can imagine the shock that went through the room.

Our lawyer spoke first. "Why that isn't even enough to pay my legal fees."

One of the women started to cry. "I knew I should never have bought two cans of coffee until the estate was appraised."

It isn't easy when you discover that an estate you were told was worth between two and three billion dollars turns out to be only a paltry $168 million.

"Howard was living a lie," I said. "No wonder he didn't want to see anyone during all those years. He knew what he was worth but he couldn't admit it to anyone else."

"The poor guy," someone else said. "It must have finally gotten to him. He put on this multibillionaire front when in fact he was really nothing more than a multimillionaire."

One of the distant relatives was angry. "Why should we feel sorry for him? What about us? Do you realize how little there will be to cut up if the $168 million figure holds up in court?"

"Don't forget my fees," the lawyer said.

"Maybe," someone said hopefully, "Howard squirreled a billion dollars away somewhere so we couldn't find it."

"That would be just like him," I said. "I'll bet you somewhere out there in the desert, between Las Vegas and Los Angeles, Howard buried the bulk of his fortune."

"Does that mean we can't get our hands on it?" asked a gas station attendant who was slated to get one-third of the estate.

"Knowing Howard, I'm sure he'll have someone deliver a clue to the Mormon Tabernacle," I said. "He'll probably send us on a treasure hunt for years."

"I can't wait for years," the lawyer complained. "Do you realize what it costs to probate a will these days? You have to pay legal secretaries, light bills, telephone charges, not to mention what it costs to buy a notary public stamp. If I'd had any idea that the estate was only worth $168 million I would have turned the whole thing over to the Legal Aid Society."

"Does that mean you're not going to handle our claim to the will any more?" I asked.

"I'm not in this business for my health," the lawyer said bitterly.

"I know it's not much," said one of Hughes' bodyguards, who was hoping to get 25 per cent of the estate, "but you can't bow out now. No other lawyer will take it when he discovers there's only $168 million involved."

"I could turn it over to a law student in the office," the lawyer said, "but I can't devote any more time to it."

All of us were in despair. We saw our dreams of being on easy street going up in smoke.

One of the heirs, a waiter from the Bahamas, said, "I'm sure Mr. Hughes had more money than that. Maybe he did have a billion dollars, but when he got his lawyer's bill for drawing up his will he was left with only $168 million."

"Of course, that's the answer," I said. "All of us are mad at Howard when it's really his lawyers we should be suing."

We all turned to our lawyer. "Do we have a case?"

"I'm afraid not," the lawyer said. "For argument's sake, let's agree that Howard had a billion dollars. If a lawyer charged him $832,000,000 to draw up his will, it would just about be in the ballpark."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Story implicates Mafia chieftan

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most feared mobster in the underworld is Florida's Mafia chieftan, Santos Trafficante. House investigators approached his Miami hideawey, therefore, with some apprehension.

He appeared at the screen door to accept their subpoena. "Shove it under the door," he said softly. They peered through the screen. The sinister Trafficante was pale, and his hands were shaking.

He may have had reason to quake. The House Assassinations Committee had taken a sudden interest in the murder last July of mobster John Rosselli. Before he died, the flamboyant Rosselli hinted that he knew who had arranged President John F. Kennedy's assasination. Carefully hedging, he told an incredible story that implicated Trafficante.

The New York Times reported on the front page that Roselli was murdered as a "direct result" of his Senate testimony about the Kennedy assassination.

According to the New York Times, Rosselli was lured aboard a private boat by his executioners on July 28.

The Times reported that Rosselli settled down to a glass of vodka with two gangland associates. One unobtrusively slipped behind him and held a powerful hand over Rosselli's nose and mouth. The 70-year-old Rosselli, who had emphysema, was easily strangled. Then the murderers sawed off his legs so the body would fit in a metal drum.

They cut holes in the drum so it would fill with water. As an added precaution, they weighted the drum down with heavy iron chains. Roeselli should have disappeared forever, in efficient Mafia fashion, on the bottom of Biscayne Bay.

But apparently the gases from his body caused the container to rise eerily from its salt-water grave. The drum, with its grisly contents, washed upon the shore, where it was found by fishermen.

Obviously, the unfortunate Rosselli had been the victim of a gangland execution.

Why would the Mafia knock off a retired racketeer? The fact that he had appeared before the Senate normally would have deterred the crime lords. They would rather not risk antagonizing the federal government by murdering a celebrated witness unless there were some compelling reason.

The experts doubted the Mafia was upset over Rosselli's confession that, as a hit man for the Central Intelligence Agency, he had attempted to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

We furnished the committee with a more likely motive for the murder. We got the story from Rosselli himself, bit by bit, over the past six years. He had come to trust us during our investigation of the CIA plot to kill Castro. Whenever Rosselli was in Washington, he dropped by. His associates, knowing of his trust in us, called us ahead of the authorities about his disappearance.

The CIA had figured that the Havana underworld must have killers who could eliminate Castro. The CIA, therefore, spoke secretly to billionaire Howard Hughes' chief honcho in Las Vegas, Robert Maheu, about the project. Maheu recruited Rosselli, then the Chicago mob's debonair representative in Las Vegas.

Rosselli looked upon the assassination mission as an opportunity to gain favor with the U.S. government. But he lacked the stature to deal with Santos Trafficante, who controlled the Havana underworld. Rosselli enlisted his own superior, Chicago godfather Sam Giancana, to approach Trafficante.

Giancana flew down to Miami to make the arrangements with the Florida racket boss. Then, with Trafficante's blessing, Rosselli used the Havana underworld to plot Castro's demise. The assassination squad tried to plant poison pills, supplied by the CIA, in Castro's food. Castro became ill but failed to die.

Rosselli told us the rest of the story as his own "speculation." But it was his habit to pass us tips in the form of conjecture. There is a good chance he was not merely speculating but had picked up information inside the mobs. At least, here's his startling story:

Rosselli heard that Castro had tortured the would-be assassins and had learned about the plot on his life. It would be the sort of irony that Latin-Americans appreciate, Rosselli suggested, for Castro to use the same plotters to retaliate against the U.S. president. According to Rosselli's speculation, Castro may have used these underworld elements, most of them Cubans from the old Trafficante organization, to arrange the assassination of Kennedy.

They may have lined up Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin or may have used him as a decoy while others ambushed Kennedy from closer range. Once Oswald was captured, the mob couldn't afford to let him reveal his connection with the underworld. So Rosselli speculated that Jack Ruby, a small-time hoodlum with ties to the Havana underworld, was ordered to eliminate Oswald.

This sort of "speculation" might have induced the mob to silence John Rosselli.

NICK THIMMESCH

Of C-130 and crocuses and the chirp of a robin!

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Americans understandably are more interested these days in the appearance of spring than they are in Africa's complexities. As for presidential initiatives, they are far more interested in Dial-A-President (Walter Cronkite is a bonus) and a Carter Town-Meeting-Tonight than in the intricacies of his human rights thrust.

Still, the world whirls on, and the United States does get involved with it. So while the robins return and the cherry trees blossom, Zaire lights up with trouble. President Mobutu is incensed when what he calls Cuban-led mercenaries invade his country and threaten Shaba Province with its copper riches.

Suddenly, we read a headline which takes us back to L.B.J. or Nixon-Kissinger days: U.S. Airlifts Military, Medical Supplies to Zaire. Are we back in it again?

No, no, says secretary of state Cyrus Vance, whose waffling is inferior to Kissinger's lying. TheUnited States is only accelerating delivery of military aid already committed. He emphasizes that the aid is not in the form of lethal equipment, that it is really in the line of basic necessities like communications gear, backpacks, combat rations and medicine.

Some skeptics say, well, that's "war supportive," but I am sure Mr. Carter and Vance could dismiss such irreverence as "just semantics." The President and the secretary of state in subsequent communications with congressmen professed to have inadequate information on the Zaire situation. Could it be that the CIA is really slipping?

Anyway, Vance appeared before the House International Relations Committee last week and confronted a set of faces which seemed ready to fall asleep, with one exception, that belonging to Don L. Bonker, Democrat, of Olympia, Wash.

Bonker's track record includes one successful joust with the Ford Administration over CIA financing of our side in the Angolan civil war, and he certainly isn't afraid of Vance. Bonker believes Zaire could become another Angola, and that we had better watch our DC-8s and C-130s. Bonker wanted to know how come aid to Zaire escalated from $3.5 million in fiscal 1975 to $30.2 million now, and how come Mobutu's 40,000 troops can't handle 1,500 invaders?

Poor Vance had to fudge that one, and sidestep a question on how come the Carter Administration is hawking human rights like cotton candy at the circus and still dropping large amounts on regimes like Mobutu's? (He doesn't pass the good-guy test.)

"It's almost a rerun of Angola," Bonker told me. "The Administration regards it as a crisis. Mobutu is vulnerable. I saw Henry Kissinger last night, and he says the United States should draw the line, otherwise the Soviets will take advantage of us. I still don't see why the United States should get politically involved."

On the Senate side, Dick Clark of Iowa says his government, meaning Mr. Carter's, "would have been better off to limit aid to Zaire to the humanitarian kind," presumably meaning bandages for the wounded and food for civilians. "I think President Carter will be more careful in the future," Clark says, "because there is concern whether we become critically involved in the internal affairs of Zaire."

From Sens. George McGovern and Hubert Humphrey, usually wary of any presidential actions on behalf of beleaguered states like Zaire, nothing by way of comment. They wait and watch. So do the others on The Hill who screamed to heaven every time Kissinger muttered something about backing our loyal friends with a little ammunition now and then.

His successor, Vance, would hardly ask for ammo. He has trouble enough explaining human rights. After excommunicating Uruguay, Argentina and Ethiopia from Mr. Carter's Human Rights congregation, and cutting their AID money, Vance had to explain that South Korea, the Philippines and Zaire could remain in church because they are needed for security reasons. This sort of reasoning can cause Billy Carter to burp while he sings "Amazing Grace."

Meanwhile, the United States benefits the Soviet Union with a modest amount of economic development, while our President writes an encouraging letter to one of its celebrated dissidents; an American delegation exchanges pleasantries with Hanoi's henchmen, brings back a dozen of our airmen in cut-down metal boxes; Cambodian Communists slaughter thousands of people and the old antiwar gang remains mum; the recipient of the largest amount of foreign aid, Israel, gets modest faulting in a State Department report on human rights, while it is revealed the Israelis incarcerate hundreds of prisoners who endure limbo status.

"I favor the thrust of the President's human rights campaign," Sen. Clark says, "but admit the methodology is difficult. There must be some gradation, or it could be a bucket of worms. Do we start from torture and work our way up?"

There are some souls in this town, and they don't want to be quoted in the present atmosphere, who say that Zaire is only a serious symbol of the feckless condition of the United States in the world, that the vulnerable and bullies alike realize now that the United States will not show strength, and both make their plans accordingly.

It all sounds mushy, and it is. The only firm statement of conviction I've heard this week came from Bonker who declared: "Andy Young, as U.N. ambassador, is unrealistic about South Africa. He talks like the black caucus. He is miscast in his present job, and he might be encouraging, by his statements, more Cuban intervention." Amen. The robins chirp. Is that a crocus I see?

Mark Russell says

Barry Goldwater is back in the headlines. All I can say is, if Goldwater was ever linked with the mob, then the Godfather must have been William F. Buckley.

•

There are two avenues of recourse open to Goldwater. He can sue the reporters for libel. Or he can put out a contract.

•

There is talk of another Carter radio call-in show. In order to qualify to talk to him, you must be holding at least two hostages.

•

Do you realize we have never gone this long without either Bob Hope or Billy Graham visiting the White House? Who says America doesn't have dissidents?

Tribalism now proving African disaster

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — A Nairobi University student was stopped for a traffic violation on Mama Ngina Street here the other day. The policeman took out his citation book and asked, "What tribe are you?"

In Lusaka, Zambia, a young man applying for a job was told to report to the personnel manager. He leaned over the receptionist's desk and asked, "What tribe is he?" Told that the manager was a Mashona, the applicant replied, "Then I'll never get the job."

And in Gulu, Uganda, an army sergeant decided recently, after a long discussion with his family to flee to Kenya. The reason: They were Acholis, and President Idi Amin's ruling tribe, the Kakwas, had marked many of the distrusted Acholis for death.

The phenomenon is called tribalism. To the Westerner, it is one of the most difficult of African concepts to grasp. To many, it conjures up images of savagery and warfare, or warriors and customs that belong to another era.

To most Africans, tribalism merely means loyalty of the staunchest sort to one's ethnic grouping. It is a force with many subtle implications that can be both divisive and cohesive. For example, the solidarity it engenders vaguely resembles — but runs far deeper than — the fraternal fidelity that the Irish display for their south Boston community.

Modern African politicians publicly deplore tribal divisions. Kenya's Vice President Daniel Moi calls it "a cancer that threatens to eat at the very fabric of our nation." Yet it remains perhaps the most potent force in day-to-day African life.

By definition, it implies sharing among members of the extended family, insuring that one's own is looked after.

To give a job to a fellow tribesman is not nepotism, it is an obligation. For a politician or military leader to choose his closest advisers from the ranks of his own tribe is not patronage, it is good common sense. It ensures security, continuity, authority.

In Kenya, President Jomo Kenyatta's Kikuyu tribe dominates business and politics. Eight of the 21 cabinet posts, including the most important four, are filled by Kikuyus. Some members of parliament are trying to change the constitution so that the presidency passes to a Kikuyu on succession.

In Uganda, Amin's small and backward Kakwa tribe fills almost all the highest governmental and military positions. In Burundi, the minority Tutsi tribe holds the Hutus in virtual serfdom. In Angola, Ethiopia and Nigeria, the bloodshed of the past decade can be explained at least in part through tribal divisions.

There are more than 2,000 tribes in black Africa. Each has its own language, its own customs, its own names and physical characteristics that make one of its members almost immediately recognizable to an individual from another tribe. In many or most cases, individuals are fiercely proud of their tribal heritage, regardless of their level in society.

Some critics say that the colonial administrations were responsible for perpetuating tribalism through their practice of "divide and govern." The British in Kenya, for example, permitted the nomadic Masai to go their own way, favored the Kamba in the army and distrusted the Kikuyu, which played the dominant role in the Mau Mau rebellion against British rule in the 1950s.

Chief Curtis has everything, including debt

Newsday

WASHINGTON — Kenneth Curtis is the Democratic national chairman who has everything.

He has the White House, the House, the Senate, the state legislatures and most of the governors' mansions. "If the only purpose of a political party was to win elections, the job would be fairly well completed," Curtis said in an interview. "But we've got more things to do now than ever before."

The biggest thing the former governor of Maine has to do is to retire a $4 million campaign debt. But then there is this plan to go back to the precincts — not to win approval of elections, but to win approval of President Carter's programs.

"We've set up a field division here that will operate like a political campaign," said Curtis, who was the personal choice of Carter to head the Democratic National Committee. The division, he said, will develop a list of contacts on local levels all around the country to set up meetings on Carter's programs.

Curtis hopes to get these views computerized in a way in which "hundreds of thousands of opinions" can be reduced into "20 or 25 different points of view." Carter then will have an electronic analysis of what the people think of each of his proposals.

"Before the President finally sends legislation to Congress, we can tell him what we are hearing on the street corners of the country," Curtis, who meets with him once a week, said. "We can create a network where precinct chairmen can explain legislation."

Right now, the Democratic National Committee is so closely tied to the President that it is quietly hunting for new quarters so that it can be closer to the White House — now a 10-minute walk away. Such a concern is a rare luxury for a chairman of a major party. Usually, the worry is about the opposition. But the current state of the Republicans gives Curtis some breathing time.

Indeed, he said: "We're certainly concerned about the two-party system. We wish the Republican party well. I certainly think the Republican party ought to take a look at itself."

Nixon starts Frost tapings

The Los Angeles Times

LAGUNA NIGUEL, Calif. — Former President Richard M. Nixon took the first step out of seclusion Wednesday when he began taping a television interview with commentator David Frost at a private home on the shores of the Pacific about 10 miles northwest of his San Clemente estate.

The show could not be taped at his Casa Pacifica residence in San Clemente because of interference from an adjacent Coast Guard radar station.

Frost hunted around and managed to rent a residence in the luxurious Monarch Bay subdivision. The taping is taking place at the home of Harold H. Smith at No. 1 Monarch Bay Drive.

A public relations man said the shows will be taped in two-hour segments and shown over a 118-station independent network starting May 4. Each of four shows will run 90 minutes.

Nixon arrived about 10:00 a.m. for the first taping. He had visited the residence Tuesday, however, for a dry run with Frost.

About 20 technicians were transported to the taping in a bus parked just inside the guarded gate of the Monarch Bay community.

The Smith family was not present during the day. The living room had been converted to an office for the production.

The taping is expected to continue in 12 two-hour sessions over the next month and then be edited down for the actual screening.

Undersecretary of HEW okayed

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved Hale Champion's nomination as undersecretary of Health, Education and Welfare, an appointment held up for a week in a dispute over whether HEW officials had delayed an investigation of a California health care fraud case.

Champion's nomination had been put off by Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (D-Ga.), a committee member who contended there were contradictions between Champion's testimony and a version supplied by HEW's former chief investigator, John J. Walsh.

Walsh said in an affidavit last week that he quit HEW after Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. ordered him to clear all investigations, including the California inquiry, with the department's general counsel.

Summoned to testify Wednesday, Califano said Walsh had misunderstood his instructions during a Feb. 4 meeting at which the investigation of a Medicare-Medicaid fraud case involving a California businesswoman was discussed.

Califano said he had not intended to delay that investigation. Walsh had said he stopped the investigation temporarily after Califano ordered the general counsel to develop a new plan for carrying it out.

Califano said it was "utter nonsense" to contend he had tried to block the investigator's case. "I think Mr. Walsh misunderstood what I was saying that morning," he said.

Walsh agreed that the dispute may have been "an honest difference of opinion" with Califano and said he had not intended to accuse him of "any improprieties."

Several members agreed it was all a misunderstanding. "I don't know what the shooting is all about," said Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.).

In his affidavit, Walsh had said Califano told him that all investigations had to be cleared through the general counsel's office and that he did not want HEW personnel "investigating a bunch of innocent people."

Since the comments were made during a conversation about the California case, Walsh said he interpreted them to mean he should call off that inquiry and abide by Califano's instruction to let the general counsel prepare a plan for the investigation.

Califano said Wednesday he had called in Walsh in order to be sure the California inquiry was proceeding.

Brock builds from bottom to thwart foes

Newsday

WASHINGTON — For Bill Brock, there is nowhere to go but up.

The new national Republican chairman, who was ousted from his U.S. Senate seat from Tennessee last year and named to the post as a compromise candidate between the Ford and Reagan camps following the election, sits in a building on Capitol Hill surrounded by Democrats, looking out on an electorate that by all polls is overwhelmingly out of his party.

The Democrats control the House and the Senate and the White House. Only 18 per cent of the voting population considers itself Republican. Even worse for the future of the GOP, 80 of the 99 state legislative houses are in Democratic hands.

It is the state legislatures that do the redistricting, and Democrats certainly will be drawing lines to best assure their continued domination. That fact is of particular concern with the approach of the 1980 census, which will trigger a round of reapportionment and redistricting.

So Brock is starting with the basics — electing aldermen and city councilmen and state legislators. His concern is grass roots, he says, and he is pouring $1.7 million of Republican National Committee funds into hiring an organizational director for each state.

The 50 directors will become talent scouts for the Republican party. They will be assisted by 10 regional teams and two divisions designed specifically to concentrate on state legislatures.

"We will seek out, recruit, train and support local and state legislative candidates," Brock said recently. "That's our largest single new program." This, he said, could have three benefits: to mitigrate Democratic influence in redistricting; to rebuild the Republican base, and to create a stable of new faces for higher office.

Not that he doesn't spend considerable time with the national luminaries of the Grand Old Party. Each week, he talks by telephone with prospective 1980 hopefuls such as former President Gerald R. Ford, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, former Texas Gov. John Connally and former Treasury Secretary William Simon. He meets two or three times a week with Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, who also wants the nomination, and with House GOP Leader John Rhodes of Arizona, who does not.

Brock said that both Ford and Reagan, despite the latter's age (66), might well be doing battle again for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980. "I think it's very possible," Brock said of Ford. "He hasn't ruled it out." Reagan also "has not ruled it out," Brock said, adding: "I don't know what age means anymore."

According to Brock, it is no accident that Ford is appearing on college campuses these days. A still-private GOP poll claims that young, college-educated voters favored Ford over President Carter in last November's election. On the campuses, the poll shows, Ford was the winner as well. And Brock says that while Ford's current appearances aren't political, others late this spring may be.

For now, Brock is spending a lot of time on the telephone, calling his Republican national committeemen, calling GOP state chairmen, trying to raise money for the party. There were speeches to make to the National Conference of Mayors earlier this month and to the Florida state finance committee and meetings of his executive committee to preside over. But most of all, he said, he will be trying his best to get Republicans elected at the local level.

"Local campaigns are generally very personalized," Brock said. "The candidate knows most of the people in the district. It draws new people into the process."

Local campaigning is something the 46-year-old millionaire candy fortune heir knows well. After working for his family's candy company in Chattanooga, he successfully ran for Congress in 1962. Then in 1970 he took on Albert Gore, a three-term U.S. senator whose support across the state was undercut by his vocal opposition to the Vietnam War. Brock arrived with a well-oiled, well-financed and well-organized campaign, and Gore's Senate career was ended.

Panama hires aides for PR

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Panama has hired former presidential campaign aides of Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) to plan and execute a nationwide public relations drive backing a new Panama Canal treaty.

The contract between Panama's United Nations Mission and Public Affairs Analysts, a New York firm, became effective in January. F. Clifton White, who was the architect of Goldwater's 1964 bid for the White House, is president of the firm. Joseph Napolitan, who was the Humphrey campaign's media director in 1968 and has worked on many other political drives, is chief executive officer of the firm. Former Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien is an owner of the firm, though not active on a day-to-day basis.

Napolitan, in a telephone interview, estimated that Public Affairs Analysts would charge Panama $150,000 to $200,000 for its services over the first six months. He said the firm will send pro-treaty information to a list of 6,000 influential politicians, journalists, academicians and businesspeople as well as monitor the activities of groups opposing a canal treaty. He said the firm will not engage in lobbying or "propaganda" activities.

Panama's new public relations advisors represent only one facet of growing activity by groups on all sides of the canal issue, which may well become one of the major political controversies of 1977. The Carter administration is seeking to conclude negotiations with Panama on a new treaty by this summer, hoping for Senate ratification before 1978, an election year in which the controversial treaty could become an issue.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston (Calif.) has been conducting a quiet headcount since Carter identified the canal treaty as a high-priority matter in a talk with legislators before Inauguration Day. Cranston said Wednesday that 22 to 25 senators are "apt to be negative" to a new treaty, 38 senators are "firmly for a sensible treaty" and up to 20 more senators appear amenable to consideration of a new treaty, with the positions of the rest unknown.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) last year mustered 38 senators on an anti-treaty resolution, more than the one-third of the Senate which can block ratification of a treaty. Cranston's figures show improved chances for treaty ratification but still a tough political battle likely.

Garrett to run department

ODESSA — Jim Garrett, 32, will assume duties of the director of Odessa's Convention and Visitors' Department April 18.

The Convention and Visitors' department board of directors unanimously approved Garrett for the directorship Monday afternoon during a regular monthly meeting.

The appointment was presented Tuesday to the city council.

Garrett has worked as director for the convention and visitor bureaus of both Houston and Fort Worth and had worked in production for a number of radio and television stations.

Nine new courses scheduled at college

Midlanders who want to learn bridge, brush up on shorthand or typing learn the fine art of backgammon will find course offerings to fill the bill among the nine new short courses which begin next week at Midland College.

Bridge I begins Monday. The course, taught by Katie Marley, is designed for beginners with no experience. Bidding, leads, play of hands and scoring using the Goren method will be covered. Class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays for four weeks. Registration will be in room 104 occupational-technical building. Fee is $16.

Also beginning Monday is defensive driving. The college is a cooperating agency approved to teach this National Safety Council course. Eight hours of instruction will qualify students for a 10 per cent savings on insurance. The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Larry Freeman is instructor and registration is in room 100 OT. Cost of the course is $10.

Typing brush up, a refresher course for persons wishing to improve typing skills, will be taught by Thelma Stalcup. Class will meet from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays for six weeks in room 151 OT. The keyboard, machine parts, typing techniques, tabulating problems and spacing rules will be taught. Speed and accuracy drills will be given each night. Books may be purchased at the college bookstore. Cost of the course is $20.

Backgammon I, taught by Tony Nohutcuoglu, is a beginner class. Students will learn the history, use of double and cube in the game. Each lesson will involve student participation. Class is limited to 10 students and will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays for six weeks. Fee is $24 and students will register in 104 OT.

Karate II begins Tuesday. This continuation of karate I will be taught by Lee Yoo Sun. At the end of the course, participants will be classified as advanced students in karate training. Class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays through May 10 in the gym. Fee is $32.

Petroleum land course I, taught by Clem Ware, will cover ownership, record checking and keeping, trade analysis, operating and unit agreements, division orders and other subjects. The course is designed for basic land support personnel, including secretaries. Class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays for 10 weeks. Cost is $10 and registration will be in room 100 OT.

Points, primes, tournament play and defensive moves will be covered in backgammon II, taught by Nohutcuoglu for intermediate students. Class is limited to 10 students and will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. for six weeks. Fee is $24 and registration is in room 100 OT.

Petroleum land II begins Thursday. It is a continuation of the beginning course and will cover land department function, testing well promotion agreements, operating units and gas contracts. This course is designed for advanced land support personnel such as geologists and independent operators. Class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursdays for 10 weeks. Fee is $30 and students will register in room 106 OT.

More information about the courses may be obtained by contacting the department of community services at the college.

Hunter found innocent by jury

A nine-man, three woman jury returned a verdict of innocent Wednesday on William Hunter on charges of burglary.

The jury deliberated a little more than one hour, a district attorney office spokesman said.

The charges of burglary stemmed from an incident March 2, 1976, on property owned by Henry Baldwin Lockwood at 500 S. Lee St.

Norell recital slated Monday night at Tech

LUBBOCK — Acclaimed harpsichordist Judith Norell will play works by Johann Jacob Froberger, Domenico Scarlatti, William Byrd, J. S. Bach and Giovanni Picchi when she presents a special recital here Monday night.

The 8:15 p.m. event, free to the public, will be in the recital hall of the music building-University Center complex on the Texas Tech University campus.

In addition to performances in New York's Carnegie Hall and Washington's Kennedy Center, Miss Norell has given recitals at the Smithsonian Institution and the Library of Congress, has participated in the famous Tanglewood and Aspen music festivals and has made recordings for the British Broadcasting Company and Vox Records.

Miss Norell began her music career as a pianist but eventaully devoted more and more time to the harpshichord and, while residing in England, left her piano studies to devote full attention to the harpsichord. In Britain, she studied with noted South American harpsichordist Rafael Puyana and later had advanced study with Albert Fuller at the Juilliard School in New York City.

Judith Norell

Her repertoire now includes the major 17th and 18th century masters as well as many of the lesser-known composers. Her Monday night recital will be played on the Kingston harpsichord which was specially-built for the TTU department of music.

Special film scheduled

"Maximilian's Journey," a motion picture depicting the exploration of the Upper Missouri River in 1833-34, will have a series of presentations in the city this week and next.

"Maximilian's Journey" recreates the famous expedition of Prince Alexander Philip Maximilian and Swiss-born artist Karl Bodmer up the Missouri River from St. Louis to near the site of the present Great Falls, Mont. The prince was the first trained scientist-naturalist to follow the trail blazed by famed Lewis and Clark 30 years before. Bodmer was the first artist of great skill to visit the area. He painted the northern plains, its inhabitants, terrain and wildlife, with a realism that equaled or surpassed that of the camera in later years.

The Maximilian-Bodmer collection is on permanent display at the Joslyn Museum in Omaha, Neb. The current film was produced under sponsorship of Northern Natural Gas Co., to share the knowledge of this important and exciting expedition with a greater audience.

The film will have its showings in Midland under auspices of Northern Natural Gas Co. The schedule includes a presentation at San Jacinto Junior High School Friday, at Midland College Monday, at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium in Haley Park on Tuesday, at Alamo Junior High on Wednesday and at Goddard Junior High next Thursday.

Fiesta del Arte opens

ODESSA — Fiesta del Arte, one of the Permian Basin's leading art and craft exhibitions, opens at 11 a.m. Saturday in Odessa's Ector County Coliseum. The show will continue through Sunday afternoon.

Seventy artists and craftsmen from throughout the area, the state and neighboring states have been invited to exhibit their creative specialities in the 1977 show. Approximately half of the participating artists and artisans have been invited back to the festival for the second or third year, or more. All price ranges will be represented in the upcoming show, making it doubly popular with the public.

In conjunction with the regular Fiesta del Arte, a children's fiesta will be offered in another part of the coliseum to provide supervised care of young children while their parents browse through the art and craft stalls. The children's event will offer face painting, fortune telling and other entertainment.

Another special feature of the annual fiesta will be the food booths offering a tempting variety of Mexican foods, in addition to homemade pies, cakes, cookies and candies available for take-out. The Latin Trio, a mariachi ensemble, will provide musical entertainment at intervals during the two days.

The fiesta will open with an invitational preview party Friday evening, planned by the board of directors of the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center which, along with the Fiesta del Arte Guild, sponsors the annual event.

Proceeds from the fiesta will be divided between the Rehabilitation Center for its operating budget and the Fiesta del Arte Guild's fund for a proposed new art museum in Odessa.

Saturday's visiting hours will be 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday hours will be noon to 6 p.m. Admission will be $1 per person. Admission to the children's fiesta also will be $1.

'Coronation' slated by HGO

HOUSTON — The Houston Grand Opera is continuing its current season with one of the earliest works in operatic literature, Claudio Monteverdi's "The Coronation of Poppea."

This 17th Century opera will open Friday night in Jones Hall for the Performing Arts in downtown Houston. Additional performances will be Sunday afternoon and next Tuesday and Friday nights. All performances will be in Italian.

Noelle Rogers, the young soprano who in a few short years has dazzled audiences throughout the U. S. and Europe, will be in the role of Poppea, with baritone Alan Titus as Nero. They will be recreating the roles they sang to critical acclaim in the Opera Society of Washington's 1973 production of "Coronation."

Contralto Maureen Forrester, who has achieved widespread fame in the U. S., Canada and abroad through her work in opera, recitals and in concerts with orchestras, will be making her HGO debut in the Monteverdi opera, singing the role of Arnalta. The role of Octavia will be sung by mezzo soprano Delia Wallis who is a frequent guest artist with the Covent Garden, Glyndebourne, English National and Cologne operas. Basso William Wilderman, a veteran performer with the Metropolitan, Chicago Lyric and Stuttgart operas, will be singing the part of Seneca in his HGO debut.

Singing other roles in the opera will be Sheri Greenawald (Drusilla), Kathleen Battle (Virtue), Martha Williford (Damigella), Brent Ellis (Ottone), Kenneth Hicks (Fortune), John Ferrante (Amor) and Dale Smith (Valetto).

Tickets for the series of presentations are now on sale at the opera box office in Jones Hall, 615 Louisiana St., and seats may be reserved by telephoning HGO at 713-227-5277.

MCCA sells all subscriptions

The "Sold Out" sign has gone up for Midland Community Concerts Association's 30th anniversary season beginning next fall.

MCCA concluded its 1977-78 membership campaign last weekend with the announcement that the 30th anniverary year, featuring five entertainment attractions, has been fully subscribed.

The season will offer the Czech Folk Ballet, the New York Vocal Arts Ensemble, the Dubrovnik Festival Orchestra, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band from New Orleans, and Les Brown and His Band of Renown.

Following conclusion of the membership drive, MCCA held its annual meeting at which new officers were elected to serve during the 1977-78 season.

Tom Johnson is the new president of the association, succeeding Dorothy H. Perkins who has served the last two seasons. Other new officers are John Norris, first vice president; Russell Stipp, second vice president and membership chairman; Mrs. George Gobel, third vice president and publicity chairman; Mrs. Robert Boykin, secretary, and George DeHart, treasurer. James Buchanan will serve as concerts chairman.

Student Art Festival continues

The second segment of the annual Student Art Festival opened Wednesday at Museum of the Southwest.

That segment, presenting art works done by elementary school students in the city, will remain on view through April 10 in the museum's Turner Memorial Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, 2 to 5 p.m. each Sunday. Admission is free at all times.

The annual festival, showcasing the creativity of art students in Midland public and private schools, is sponsored by the museum, the Midland Independent School District, the City Council of the PTA, and the Junior League of Midland Inc.

Trinity School operetta set

The Trinity School of Midland is preparing its annual spring musical production.

The production, Gilbert and Sullivan's famous operetta, "Trial By Jury," will be performed at 7:30 p.m. March 31 in the school's St. Francis Commons. Liz Pennebaker is directing, with Mrs. Stanley Williams as musical director.

"Trial By Jury" will feature a cast of Upper School students at Trinity, plus a group of Trinity faculty members and several guest performers.

The presentation will be free but advance reservations are necessary inasmuch as seating is limited. Reservations may be made by telephoning 697-3281.

'Andrea Chenier' next from Met

NEW YORK — "Andrea Chenier," Umberto Giordano's four-act opera, will be Saturday's broadcast over the Texaco Metropolitan Opera Radio Network.

The broadcast will begin at 1 p.m. CST and will be carried over Station KCRS in Midland, Tex.

The opera, set during the French Revolution, will feature tenor Placido Domingo in the title role, joined by soprano Martina Arroyo as Maddelena, mezzo-soprano Lili Chookasian as Madelon and baritone Cornell MacNeil as Gerard. The performance will be conducted by James Levine.

"Opera News on the Air" will be a feature of the first intermission, presenting British musicologist John Culshaw in another of his enlightening "reflections," this one titled "Reflections on 'Andrea Chenier'." During the second break, another in the popular "Opera Quiz" series will be presented, with panelists to include Dallas critic John Ardoin, concert pianist Ivan Davis, musicologist and writer William Weaver, and Terry McEwan of London Records. The third intermission will present a special feature to be announced.

'Spring Gala' lacks gaiety

Permian Civic Ballet's traditional spring rite-of-passage, known as "Spring Gala," is over and done with for another year. Always, it is as welcome as the first tender blooms or the first timid leaves on the trees.

But this year's gala, while it offered many delightful moments, did not wholly live up to its name and failed to generate as much excitement as it might have. Certainly it did not seem to be up to the standards of some previous spring programs.

This year's event, presented Tuesday night in Lee High School auditorium, had lustrous guest stars, talented featured performers and a hard-working and dedicated corps de ballet, but, in truth, there seemed to be little lightness and gaiety about the evening — and shouldn't a spring gala have both lightness and gaiety?

I am ascribing much of this lack to the fact that the entire ensemble of performers simply had insufficient time to rehearse together, to become accustomed to each other and to blend and grow into a cohesive, viable entity. It is lamentable that with a regional or civic non-professional ballet organization, such must be the case, with guest stars (experienced and secure in their roles) arriving on the scene at the last minute, over-shadowing (and possibly over-awing) the local dancers. I don't know what the solution is.

One thing, though, which may very well serve to bridge this gap is having previous members of the Permian Civic Ballet company (those now studying at university level or at professional ballet schools, or those launched on professional dance careers) return as guest performers. Permian Civic had a former member as a guest performer last spring, who gave quite a good accounting of herself, and had another capable former member, Mary Motter, in this year's event. Well and good, of course. But there are other former dancers who should be invited back as well, and I think Permian Civic Ballet Association will be making a mistake if it does not do so. Permian Civic Ballet is a young organization, it still has few established traditions, and this could well become one of the nicest traditions imaginable. Besides, I am confident that Midlanders continue to be interested in these gifted young dancers even though they are no longer in our midst. And I think these former members might also be a kind of inspiration-toward-excellence

Joining Miss Motter and another talented young guest dancer, Glenn Edgerton, in the Tuesday event were guest stars Hilda Morales and Bill Martin-Viscount. Miss Morales is a leading artist with American Ballet Theatre and Martin-Viscount is a widely-known free-lance dancer who has been Permian Civic's artistic adviser and artist-in-residence for the past several seasons.

The big work of the evening, Michel Fokine's celebrated "Les Sylphides," staged here by Martin-Viscount, featured Miss Morales and Martin-Viscount in the nocturne and pas de deux as well as in separate solo segments. Also presenting solo performances were Miss Motter in the prelude and Kathleen Dean in the waltz. Betsy Halvorsen and Kelly Walker also were featured. Backing the dancers were members of the corps de ballet who did some creditable ensemble work.

"Les Sylphides" was definitely enhanced by fresh new costumes and an attractive scenic backdrop.

A new work in Permian Civic's repertoire, the "Rossini Pas de Trois," choreographed by Martin-Viscount to music by Rossini, was admirably performed by Edgerton and Permian dancers Betsy Halvorsen and Sandra Huxman. The young ladies were very capable in their respective variations, I thought, and Edgerton did some expert partnering.

The "glamor" work of the evening was the Black Swan grand-pas de deux from Tchaikovsky's famous "Swan Lake," featuring Miss Morales and Martin-Viscount, and it did indeed have glamor and no little drama.

The two guest stars worked exceedingly well together in this piece and provided an impressive display of professionalism. It seems to me that Miss Morales does not possess the sheer lyricism that some of Permian Civic's previous guest stars have had, but she has great style, fine technique and a fluidity of movement that may well serve her better. It was a delight to watch her. Martin-Viscount was strong and sure in his partnering, and adroit and skilled in his solo segments.

The concluding work, "Czerny Exercises," staged by Martin-Viscount, was in some respects the most effective and entrancing offering of the evening. It is a simple, understated, uncomplicated work from Permian Civic's repertoire and it was delightful.

The work is a kind of pictorial representation of a dancer's life, from rigorous early training to the ultimate fusion of balletic art and technique. The piece utilized junior company dancers demonstrating five basic positions of ballet at the barre, with senior company members demonstrating dance virtuosity.

Junior dancers included Carrie Beck, Candy Baimbridge, Kathy Scott Bird, Elise de Compiegne, Mark Gillaspia, Karen Eberly, Laurie Hoskins, Julie Lauterbach, Leslie Hohstadt, Beth MacCurdy, Kristi McClatchy, Jimmy Caruthers, Mary Catherine McGee and Bobby Carruthers. Senior company members were Margaret Anguish, Kathleen Dean, Betsy Halvorsen, Sabrina Hicks, Anne de Compiegne, Joni Brittain, Karen Keaton, Lynne Nance, Petty O'Neill, Dru Anne Perry, Sandra Huxman, Tina Stewart, Kelly Walker, Patti O'Neill, Ann Stroh. Guest dancers Mary Motter and Glenn Edgerton provided an excellent adagio.

Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny, center, gives Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere the traditional Russian bear hug as Nyerere greeted him Wednesday at the Dar es Salaam Airport.

Podgorny visits touchy southern Africa region

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
The Washington Post

DAR ES SALAAM — President Nikolai Podgorny of the Soviet Union was officially welcomed to Tanzania Wednesday by President Julius Nyerere, making the first state visit by a top Soviet leader both to this country and the explosive southern Africa region.

His two-week African tour, which includes Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique, is widely regarded as a clear indication of the growing importance that the Soviet Union attaches to this part of the world as well of its increasing influence both with the so-called front-line states and the African nationalist movements fighting to overthrow the white-ruled states of southern Africa.

But his formal arrival statement seemed aimed primarily at allaying the fears of many african states, including some of the front-line ones, that the Soviet Union may have ulterior motives in seeking to expand its presence in this region of growing racial conflict.

Even before the Soviet President had descended from his plane, Soviet officials were distributing a prepared statement stressing that: "The Soviet Union does not seek concessions or military bases or some special privileges, neither in African countries nor anywhere else.

"We seek friends and equal cooperation. We are guided not by interests of selfish profit but by our unswerving adherence to the cause of peace, to the cause of freedom and progress of people," he said.

The Soviet Union, President Podgorny assured his Tanzania hosts, favored the "lessening of international tension" and the "elimination of hotbeds of conflict" to help young African states strengthen their political and economic independence. "We come to the African continent with warm and friendly feelings," he said.

The 74-year-old Soviet President was welcomed to the Tanzanian capital by large crowds at he airport, along the highway into town and in the downtown area that showed distinctly more curiosity than enthusiasm. By contrast, Cuban President Fidel Castro received a slightly smaller but far more emotional welcome when he arrived here last Thursday.

There was little shouting of Podgorny's name and only sporadic, polite hand-clapping as the visiting Soviet leader, accompanied by 120 officials, went through the arrival ceremony that included a review of several colorful Tanzanian drum and dancing troupes.

Western sources here said the Soviet leader's state visit had been under discussion for nearly 2 1-2 years but repeatedly put off at Nyerere's request. His carefully planned and oft postponed trip stands in sharp contrast again to that of the Cuban leader who came at his own request on a few days notice to see Nyerere.

There has been speculation in diplomatic and press circles here that Castro's visit was intended to pave the way for that of the Soviet President, but this seems unlikely given the risk of an unfavorable comparison for the Soviets between the receptions given the two Communist leaders.

Tanzanian officials have been signaling Western correspondents covering the Podgorny visit that the government views the Soviet Union as a rich superpower with little in common with poor Tanzania compared to Cuba. "Cuba is a very genuine friend. She has given everything possible to aid our development," said one Tanzanian source.

"We have never worked very closely with the Soviet Union," he remarked. "Their aid to us is negligible."

Callaghan holds on; party rips

LONDON (AP) — An unprecedented alliance with the Liberal party saved Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government from defeat on a no-confidence motion, but the Labor party's left wing rebelled today against the linkup.

Some 80 left-wing Laborites signed a letter to Callaghan declaring they would not be bound by his agreement to give the middle-of-the-road Liberals a voice in shaping government policy during the four months remaining in the current session of Parliament.

The deal also split Callaghan's cabinet. At least four ministers opposed it, including leftist Energy Secretary Tony Benn and Environment Secretary Peter Shore.

Labor'e left wing has been increasingly critical of the government's restraints on wages and its curtailment of government spending, both policies that the Liberals favor. Labor's left is also traditionally opposed to pacts with other parties.

The Liberals' 13 votes in the House of Commons gave Callaghan the margin he needed Wednesday night to defeat a Conservative motion of no confidence 322-298. Had the government lost, it would have had to resign and call a general election, and recent public opinion polls indicate that the Conservatives would win a majority.

It was believed the Liberals agreed to support Callaghan because they don't want to face an election any more than he does.

Incensed Conservatives called the Labor-Liberal partnership a "shotgun wedding" and vowed to intensify parliamentary pressure on Callaghan's troubled administration.

China eyes Beethoven death date

Agence France-Presse

PEKING — China will mark the 150th anniversary of the death of German composer Ludwig von Beethoven on Saturday — a sign of the change in arts policy since the ousting of Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching.

Beethoven was one of the composers criticized most harshly during the campaign to disparage Western music in 1974 and 1975.

Zaireans flee own troops

The Washington Post

MUTSHATSHA, Zaire — Peasants and villagers in Zaire's richest province, now under attack by invaders, are leaving towns along the front lines almost deserted as they flee — not from the invaders but from the Zaire troops, representatives of a government they do not recognize.

Here in Mutshatsha, a town of 5,000 people only a few miles from the fighting, the residents shun the government troops. They scatter and hide when they see a government soldier and they refuse to provide food for the army.

Like the residents of many towns in Shaba Province, formerly called Katanga, they do not consider Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko their leader. Mobutu is not popular here. The accepted leader is Daniel Tshombe, brother of the late Moise Tshombe, who led an unsuccessful Katangan secessionist movement in the 1960s.

The Zaire government charges that the Katangan invaders, after crossing into Zaire from Angola, are getting local support, mainly food and shelter, from the same towns that spurn the government soldiers. This comes as no surprise to observers aware of the long dispute over authority in the area.

The current tensions here reflect the depth of one of the biggest problems on the African continent: tribalism. Zaire is one of the chornic cases, with an estimated 200 tribes and subtribes and more than 700 local dialects.

The Lunda tribe, which dominates in this southeastern section of Zaire, is fiercely independent. It has opposed the government since the former Belgian Congo gained independence in 1960.

The Lunda have never recognized Zaire's national boundaries. For centuries their "nation" has been a 15,000-square-mile area that spreads across parts of Zaire, Angola and Zambia.

The Zaire government charged last week that the Katangans are traitors because they fled to Angola after the failure of the secessionist movement and allegedly became Angolan citizens. The Lunda do not agree. They contend that they have always moved freely in and out of countries, following tribal, not international boundaries.

Two weeks ago this picturesque town deep in the heart of Zaire's rich mineral belt was bustling with activity, most of the residents working on corn, manioc and peanut crops, or at the railroad station on the Benguela line, one of Africa's most important railways.

Now the town is almost deserted. There are more army troops than residents. The main activities center around the battle a few miles away.

The dramatic change is due to a surprise attack this month by men who used to police the area for Gov. Moise Tshombe. For 14 years, since the end of Tshombe's attempt to secede from Zaire, these men, known as the Katangan gendarmes, have lived in exile in neighboring Angola.

On March 8 they came back, in another attempt to claim control of the region.

The African peasants who fled do not fear the militant Katangans.

Cuban military influence builds

Newsday

The Cuban military presence in Africa, the major stumbling block to improved U.S.-Cuban relations, is expanding rapidly and has become the major military factor on that continent, U.S. intelligence sources say.

Additionally, the sources say, the Cuban military groups are now becoming involved in the Middle East, including the stationing of troops in Syria and training of Palestinian guerrillas in Iraq. The Cuban military involvement, the sources say, has been proliferating much faster than Pentagon and State Department officials had anticipated, and the current tour of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro throughout Africa presages further Cuban involvement.

According to intelligence sources, the Cubans are now militarily involved — either with combat troops or military advisers — in at least a dozen African nations. About 16,000 Cuban military personnel are aiding the forces of various Marxist regimes and several revolutionary groups opposed to pro-Western or white majority regimes, plus an estimated 2,000 civilian advisers.

The Cuban involvement, considered by State Department officials to be the vanguard of increased Soviet efforts in Africa, is the main reason for the Carter Administration's caution on improving U.S.-Cuban relations.

"It's been laid out for him (Carter) the extent and danger of Cuba's efforts in Africa and the capacity for mischief that they represent," said one U.S. intelligence official.

Lion Tamers give aid

By PATSY GORDON

Mrs. Lester Van Pelt Jr. heads the Lion Tamers Club, the auxiliary to the Midland Downtown Lions Club, one of the largest Lions club in the United States and the world.

The Downtown Lions Club with a membership of 325 ranks number three in the U.S. and number eight in the world as far as total members are concerned.

Mrs. Van Pelt joined the auxiliary 15 years ago to "meet the other wives and to participate in service projects for the Tall City community." The auxiliary also aids the Downtown club on their numerous projects.

MEET THE PRESIDENT

"Our main job is to help Lions with all decorations for installation and Christmas banquets." The women also spent a day and a half wrapping 10,000 plastic knives, forks and spoons for the recent 19th annual pancake jamboree, sponsored by the Downtown group.

Other activities of the group, which meets regularly once a month for a luncheon and a program, includes a summer backyard party for husbands, one big garage sale and games and a punchbowl for residents of Leisure Lodge.

Many worthy projects, individuals and organizations benefit from money given by the Lion Tamers. Contributions are made to the Youth for Understanding program, Lions Crippled Children's Camp at Kerrville, gifts and cookies to West Texas Boys Ranch at Tankersley, Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, Casa de Amigos, Midland Council for the Retarded, Christmas in April project, retina research program, food baskets and clothing for needy families and the Green Horizon project. Scholarships also are given for the licensed vocational nurse program at Midland College.

Mrs. Van Pelt said the auxiliary members aid on "anything that needs extra hands. We work with the auxiliary members of other local Lions clubs in doing decorations for District 2-A1 conventions when they are held in Midland."

The president's other club activities involve being a member of Demolay Mothers Club, of which she is a past president; Midland Lutheran Church Women, Midland Lutheran Church Council, Kappa Gamma chapter of ESA, Morning Literature Group of the American Association of University Women. She will be secretary of the AAUW during the next club year, is a life member of Parent-Teacher Association and has been treasurer of her Sunday School class 14 years.

Female pharmacist jogs around at lunch

BROOKS AIR FORCE BASE, Tex. (AP) — Capt. Mary Ann Hodgson thinks jogging four or five miles around the base is one of the most pleasant ways to spend a lunch hour.

"When I run about 30 or 40 minutes I get loosened up and relaxed. It's a natural way to cool off and think about the day," says the Brooks AFB pharmacist. "When you run that distance, you get a release of adrenalin in your system — it's almost a natural high."

But during last year's New York Marathon, in which she participated, Captain Hodgson's only thought was to finish the 26.2 mile race. She was not out to break any records. Her goal in her first marathon was merely to complete the course.

Prior to this race the most she had run at one time was 16 miles. At the 23-mile point she "hit the wall" — she believed her legs couldn't carry her any farther.

"I felt that if I stopped, I'd never finish," she said. "At that point I couldn't even walk — I was in a shuffle. Then I saw the final mile sign and thought 'Well, there's only one more. I'll shuffle a little bit more.' When I knew there was only two-tenths of a mile left, I got that last spurt."

She finished in four hours and 30 minutes — an excellent time for a beginning marathon runner. The winner of the race ran it in approximately two hours and nine minutes, while the winning female entry crossed the line 30 minutes later.

Captain Hodgson, 31, began jogging in 1968, while still a student at South Dakota State University, but winter running was out of the question because of cold weather. After she graduated in 1969 she was too involved with becoming a registered pharmacist to run regularly.

"I wanted a chance to work on my master's degree and to travel, so I decided to join the Air Force," she said. In the spring of 1976 she began running regularly, building toward the October marathon.

Now she is running at least four or five miles at lunch and 7 to 14 miles a day on weekends, working toward cooling her "marathon fever" by entering the biggest, the Boston Marathon, this spring.

"When I was younger, women in running or sports of any kind just hadn't been sanctioned," said the officer. "It wasn't 'their place' or men didn't think it was feminine. But I can name a lot of women in sports who are extremely feminine."

Boston fern dies, despite life-sustaining efforts

By ERMA BOMBECK

My Boston Fern is dead!

At 4:59 p.m. yesterday, I pulled out the life-sustaining water tubes, thus ending an eight-month vigil. It leaves behind a $24.95 stand, $2.49 worth of fertilizer, a $3.59 watering can, $1.50 trowel, $4.59 volume of "Roots" (an anthology of a Boston Fern that traced its ancestry back to the Garden of Eden) and a carpet full of shredded brown leaves.

Okay! Okay! So I was in over my head. Don't you think I knew that? I guess I got a little overconfident with the success of my dieffenbachia and figured I could handle it.

It wasn't that people didn't try to warn me about Boston ferns. Mayva pushed me into a chair one afternoon and pleaded, "Don't do it. I've given ferns the best years of my life. There were 1967, 68, 69, 71, 73 and 74."

"What happened to 70 and 72?" I asked.

"I didn't have time for a fern those years. I had children."

"Are you saying they take a lot of fiddling around?"

"I'm saying you're laying yourself open for an alienation of affection suit."

But I didn't listen. Last June, I plopped down $23 for one of the most beautiful Boston Ferns I had ever seen in my life. Never had I paid that much for a plant before.

The investment did strange things to me. While on book tour, I called home every night. As I told the operator, "I want to call person-to-fern."

My son answered, "Hi, Mom, where are you?"

"My plane is leaving. How's the Boston Fern?"

"We're fine and so's the fern. We miss you."

"Don't waste your time on me," I said angrily. "Mist the fern. If you miss a day misting, I'll know you missed."

"Do we have a bad connection?"

"Listen carefully. My three minutes are almost up. On Friday the fern gets a haircut. Put it in the bathtub and cut away the brown fronds."

"You saw the Fonz?"

"Get your father, this is important. Water the fern through the crown, do you hear?"

But by the time I got back, it was too late. The fern had deteriorated. As I told my husband, "I'm not blaming anyone. It's just hard to say goodbye to a plant."

"You just have to put it out of your mind," he smiled.

"I paid $23 bucks for it," I said sadly.

I had never seen a full-grown man give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a leaf before.

"Do You Know Your Bylaws?" was topic of the presentation by Mrs. K. D. North at a meeting of the Permian Basin Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians at Midland College.

Mrs. Harold Lovett, vice president, presided during the absence of Mrs. Mona Deland, president, who was in Austin as unit representative of the nominating committee of the Texas State Association of Parliamentarians.

Mrs. J. Howard Hodge outlined plans for an April 2 institute to be sponsored by the unit and The University of Texas-Permian Basin. The institute will be held at UTPB, Room 292, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Registration begins at 9 a.m. Instructors are officers of TSAP: Lee Clanton of Garland, Mrs. L. D. Connolly of San Antonio and Mrs. Lovett. All are professional registered parliamentarians. Additional information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Hodge.

Mrs. Ada M. Spivey reported for the special bylaws committee.

Mrs. Deland and Mrs. Taylor E. Bowers were elected delegates to the TSAP convention to be held May 20-22 in Dallas. Mrs. Auline Brasuel and Mrs. Jo Johnson were named alternates. Mrs. Bowers was elected representative to the 1978 TSAP nominating committee.

Trinity School's third graders entertain Towers' residents

The third grade class of Trinity School, under the direction of Jill Williams, presented "The Emperor's New Clothes" at the monthly birthday party at Trinity Towers.

The song playlet was adapted from the Hans Christian Andersen story by Ruth Norman and Hardy Wieder. The students made their instruments in art class.

Residents honored were Robert Alexander, Henri Norton, Lula Martin and Inez Newby. They received gifts made by the decorations committee.

The centerpiece was prepared by Tejas Garden Club, and the birthday cake was furnished by Circle "L" Class of the First Presbyterian Church.

Guests were Mrs. Betty Melton, Mrs. Woodrow Echols, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Newby, Mrs. Nancy Rogers and Jack Hawkins.

Volunteers assisting Wilma Maley, chairman, were Helen Luff, Lydia Wilkinson, Evelyn Heard, Susie Nobles, Edna Keith, Helen McCrary, Betty Hawkins, Oweta Cornelius, Mary Made and Ralph Hickman and Vaughn Maley.

(Fri., March 25)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: a good time for you to get into whatever matters face you that require a considerable amount of ingwnuity and resourcefulness. Do them as quickly as possible and you reap long-reaching benefits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Improve your position in life by putting new ideas to work and getting into new projects that are profitable. Spend some time with friends.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Carry through with the practical affairs that are important to your welfare now, and improve them. Plan repairs that are needed and add to value and comfort of property.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Decide what means the most to you and go about attaining it at this time. You get good results. Safeguard your reputation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle private matters cleverly and get good results now. Show loved one you are truly devoted and have more mutual happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Understand what your true aims are and then plan how to obtain them. Good time for taking care of social errands. Avoid a confirmed liar.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good time to get in touch with the influential and gain their backing for whatever is important to you. Make others aware of your talents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You now have time to get into new conditions and out to new places that appeal to you and get good results. Try to improve lifestyle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do something thoughtful for a good friend and deepen the relation ship now. Good time for more rapport with business associates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) listen to suggestions of those who are close to you and follow them where possible. Reconciling with a dissenter is now possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study the work ahead of you and plan how to get it done efficiently. Talk matters over with coworkers and get their oooperation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You feel exuberant and can get a lot done now. You can take some chance with little trouble following. Put finest talents to work.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do those things that will make home life more harmonious and pleasurable, confortable. Entertain at home, but invite only those who are truly congenial. Don't waste time on trivia.

Must play slowly in certain hands

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

If you compete in the North American Championships at the Pasadena Convention Center this week, you will play quickly whenever you can, hoping to trap an opponent into playing carelessly. But watch out for the kind of hand in which it is important to play slowly.

Opening lead — ♡ Q

Declarer took the ace of hearts and saw that he would eventually lead a low spade. If West played low, South would have to guess whether to play dummy's king or jack.

The solution to South's problem depended on the fact that the hand was played in the Master Individual Championship and that all four players at the table were experts.

South led three rounds of trumps, one omre than necessary, to make sure that the opponents knew the trump situation. He then slowly ran his four clubs, discarding the heart from dummy.

COUNTS HAND

South wanted West to count the hand. West would read South for six diamonds, four clubs and presumably two hearts—since he had taken the trouble to discard the "losing" heart from dummy. This would account for 12 of the 13 cards in the South hand.

Then South led a spade. "You're not playing with children," West snapped as he stepped up with the ace of spades. He thought that South was trying to steal an overtrick with the king of spades.

This was, of course, exactly what South had in mind. He wanted West to relieve him of the guess in spades.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with two hearts, forcing to game, and the next player passes. You hold: SQ876; HK10652; D84; C103. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid 2 NT, the negative response. Your first duty is to tell your partner that you have a very weak hand. There will be time to show your excellent heart support later.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's funeral for her dog doesn't make sense to reader

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My friend's Chihuahua died, and I attended the funeral, and I've got to ask somebody if I've led a sheltered life or not. I'm 50 years old, and until this week I never knew they had funerals for dogs and cats.

My friend's dog (Jimmy) was buried in a satin-lined casket no bigger than a shoe box. (It cost 6900.) Jimmy was laid out in the "slumber room," and a "minister" actually held a service for the dear departed dog. The "funeral" (sans casket) cost $500.

That's not all. Jimmy was driven out to the pet cemetery in a limousine just as a deceased person would be. There were little tombstones all over the cemetery, and my friend says she is having one made for Jimmy—to the tune of $850.

When I think of all the hungry children that could be fed with that kind of money I want to scream.

What are your thoughts on this, Abby? It makes absolutely no sense at all to me.—DAZED

DEAR DAZED: To each his own. And only a pet lover can understand the sense of putting away a beloved pet in such extravagant style. To them, their pets are their "children."

DEAR ABBY: Do you think our son has a problem: He is 16, a junior in high school and an average student who has always had a good relationship with his family and friends.

While cleaning his room I found (under his bed) an unfinished 6-page "story" he had written. It contained some very descriptive accounts of "his" sexual experiences—all made up. But what shocked me was the fact that he had written this in the first person as though he were a girl.

I showed it to my husband, and he was even more upset than I was.

Please guide us, as we want to do the right thing.—CONCERNED.

DEAR CONCERNED: All adolescents fantasize, and it's not unusual for them to imagine themselves to be of the opposite sex while fantasizing. Unless your son shows signs of being disturbed or abnormal, there's little cause for concern.

DEAR ABBY: I want to say something in defense of women who go out in public with their hair in curlers. I do, and I'm sick of being put down because of it.

My hair is very delicate and easily damaged, so permanents and hair dryers are out for me. In order to look halfway decent, I have to set my hair every day and let it dry naturally without intense heat.

My husband works days, and it's more important for me to look nice for HIM when he comes home than for some joker I never saw before who happens to be in the corner store.

Please print this, Abby. There are a lot of us women in the same boat.—WAUKEGAN WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I understand your plight. If you feel there is no need to apologize for your appearance—don't apologize.

Inns get 'clean' surprise

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Officials of Holiday Inn were surprised at the response to a plea for the return of towels "borrowed" by guests.

"After all, how many people are willing to walk in and admit they stole one of our towels?" said Rick Schneider, manager of special events for Holiday Inns.

About 4,300 towels were returned to some 300 Holiday Inns on Saturday, and almost $1,100 is being donated to the Easter Seal Society in return.

UTPB women set meeting

ODESSA — The University Women of The University of Texas-Permian Basin will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the UTPB Management Suite.

Charles McCalley will speak on "Storytelling Man."

All women of UTPB, Odessa and Midland Colleges are invited to attend.

Chapter has new officers

Xi Epsilon Epsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi had a progressive dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Manzel, Jr. and Mrs. Bob King and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Shepherd were host couples.

During a recent meeting, ritual ceremonies were conducted for Mamie Miller, Myrtle Stovall and Katie Williams.

Officers elected were Jean Wilson, president; Kathy York, vice president; Geneva Sewell, treasurer, and Stovall, secretary.

Comedienne finds laughs over leg amputation

By JERRY PARKER
Newsday

Mostly, she laughs about it. Now and then, she admits, in the privacy of her bed she will "cry and cry and cry, scream and cry." Then that is over, and she realizes "it is much more painful to cry." So she laughs about it.

She does not laugh alone. Anyone who wonders if there is anything funny about a one-legged woman has not been exposed to Totie Fields since her left leg was amputated last year.

At a recent Beverly Hills luncheon given in her honor by Variety Clubs International, the 47-year-old night club and television commedienne convulsed a crowd of 1,300 people with her account of shopping for an artificial limb.

"The worst moment," Fields said, "came when they brought me my new leg. I looked at this thing. It was ugly. It was grotesque. It was the worst thing I had ever seen. And then, I put it on, and do you know it was exactly like the other one! It shows you," she said, "that my loss was not a great one."

The same laughing-through-catastrophe style prevailed a few days later when Fields received a visitor in her 25th floor Century City apartment in Los Angeles. Apparently a lot of funny things have happened to her in the last year, and she is eager to share them all.

The other day, she said, she and her secretary were out for a walk, and the leg began to squeak. "We didn't know where the noise was coming from," Fields said. "We stopped, the squeak stopped. We're going crazy until I finally realize it's my ------- leg." leg."

Then there was the party she went to when the leg was very new. Cary Grant was there, lavishing her with kisses and compliments. She wafted through the room "like I was on a cloud — and then I see these horrified looks on people's faces. I look down and discover the damn leg is hooked on a rug. I am dragging an entire area run right out the front door with me. I swear it's true!"

The diminutive, once-portly comedienne (she has lost 73 pounds during her illness) has recently gone back to work for the first time in more than a year. A raspy-voiced kewpie doll, Fields on stage found laughs in her girth, her Jewishness, her enthusiasm for sex and shopping.

She achieved national prominence on the Ed Sullivan Show in the mid-1960s and in recent years has earned as much as $100,000 a week as a Las Vegas night club attraction.

The leg stories will now be a part of the act.

"I have to use it," she said, "becuase I've had so many funny things happen because of it. Because the audience knows it's there. It's like when I was fat," Fields said. "You tell the audience you're fat. You know it and they know it, so it becomes a joke. Well, it's the same thing with the leg. It's what life is, unfortunately, and you laugh about it."

Fields' laughter is all the more remarkable for the fact that her ordeal came about through a whim of vanity. She checked into a Connecticut hospital last March for what she thought would be a simple, cosmetic surgical procedure, the removal of pouches from beneath her eyes.

The comedienne, who had a history of diabetes, high blood pressure and vascular problems, developed a circulatory crisis during the operation. A month later, her left leg was amputated above the knee.

The entire nightmare took Fields through six operations in Hartford, New York, Las Vegas and Los Angeles over a period of seven months. The blame may be decided in a whopping damage suit, and so for legal reasons Fields and her husband, George Johnston, who is also her musical director, refuse to discuss the medical specifics.

Fields' own summary is this: "I am a very vain woman. I decided one day my eyes didn't look good, so I went in to have them fixed, and I came out without a leg."

She remembers, clearly, the moment the New York doctor told her it would be necessary to amputate her leg to save her life. "Can I just live to be with my husband and my children?" she asked. "Can I have a normal life?"

Except for that one, indelible scene, she remembers very little of the first three months of her illness. There's a hazy memory of a plane being sent by Harrah's of Reno to transport her from New York to Sunrise Hospital in Las Vegas.

There are imprecise recollections of excruciating pain, of "phantom pain" in the leg that wasn't there anymore, of "lying there in bed in the middle of it all, singing songs and saying to myself 'This is what I'll do in my act.' " It's crazy, but it's the only thing that kept me sane."

On May 21, the 25th wedding anniversary of the former Sophie Feldman and George Johnston, who met when she was singing in a Boston night club and he was the comic on the bill, was observed at her hospital bedside with her two daughters, Jody, now 25, and Debbie, 22. She has no memory of it. She does remember Jody's wedding, early that month, held in the hospital room so the mother of the bride could be present.

In the fall she was out of the hospital and learning to walk again. The process goes by stages — wheelchair to crutches to prosthesis-with-cane to prosthesis alone. Just now, she is making the transition to prosthesis-with-cane, and confident she will be walking without a cane in a matter of months.

Fields is a picture of contentment and affluence, sitting in a wheelchair in her green and white living room. She was dressed, during a recent visit, in white sweter and pants, stockings, and shiny brown patent leather loafers. A gold ankle bracelet adorns her newly acquired leg.

A maid, her secretary, her husband and her daughter, Debbie, ran to bring her coffee, mail, whatever. But when luncheon was served, Johnston put a hand under his wife's elbow to help her to her feet, and she walked, leaning lightly on a cane, to the table.

Fields says that she wondered, for a time, whether she could be funny. "My first time out, we went to the (Don) Rickleses and the (Buddy) Hacketts the same night. I was worried, sitting there in a wheelchair, surrounded by my funny friends.

"But the same thing happened at both places. I was working. I was on. I was sitting in a wheelchair and I was on. I was so funny. But, don't you understand, they turn you on."

Occasionally, someone gets serious about it, as did comedienne Rose Marie at the luncheon. "Totie has had to realize," she said, "that maybe her purpose is not just to make people laugh. She can do more."

Drivers need to get aid following auto accident

NEW YORK (AP) — One out of every five licensed drivers in the United States was involved in an auto accident in 1976, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

With the chance of involvement in an accident running so high, the Institute urges every driver to be aware of certain steps that should be taken following an accident. These include:

—Stop, identify yourself and summon aid for the injured, as required by the law.

—Write down the other driver's name, address and driver's license number.

—Obtain the names and addresses of all passengers involved in the accident and anyone who witnessed the mishap.

—Tell the basic facts to the police officer who investigates the accident, but do not admit to fault under any circumstances. Make a note of the officer's name, badge number and jurisdiction.

—Refuse to sign any liability waivers or assurances that you are uninjured since accident injuries are not always immediately evident. Even if you only suspect you are injured, you should consider seeing a doctor.

—Take notes on the circumstances surrounding the accident, including time, place, weather and road conditions, any evidence of a law violation, approximate speed of both cars and other relevant details.

—Make as accurate a diagram as possible of the scene of the accident, including the precise placement of cars and people.

—Report the accident to your insurance representative promptly, since most policies require such notification within a specified period. In order to speed the claims settlement, include your policy number and all the details of the accident in your report.

In addition, every state requires that you report in writing to a specified state agency all accidents involving damage which exceeds a predetermined dollar amount. This amount and the time period allotted for filing the report vary from state to state. Police can give you the information for your state and provide you with the report form.

Beard creates versatile recipes using no exotic ingredients

By KAY JARVIS
Copley News Service

Though James Beard is often called the "dean" of knowledgeable food people, his recipes are outstanding in that they can be accomplished without outside help, without importing exotic ingredients from peculiar places and without destroying a month's food budget.

Beard feels that rice salads are "a way of taking traditional eating patterns out of depressing culinary ruts."

To demonstrate this versatility, Beard created a range of salad recipes for service now and through the warmer months.

They can be prepared ahead, making them marvelous for buffet service, and can be used as main dishes for lunches or light suppers.

He warns against allowing the rice to cook to a sticky or mushy state, suggesting the uncooked (not instant) rice for these dishes. The cooked kernels should be fluffy with each kernel separate.

Beard says the secret of preparing the cooked rice for a salad is to "toss it with a little salad oil with two forks (not a spoon) so that the oil coats the cooling rice."

Later, just before serving, add chopped vegetables for flavoring — onion, garlic, celery, green pepper or tomato — and the other ingredients.

A distinctive dressing for the bland rice is a must and Beard favors creative variations to the classic vinaigrette, selected to enhance the particular ingredients.

The selection of recipes given here uses some high-cost ingredients, of course, but the rice extender adds to the servings gained.

For a change of pace, James Beard's Nicoise salad combines rice, tuna, olives and vegetables. It is served with a garlic-basil vinaigrette. (Copley News Service Photo)

JAMES BEARD'S NICOISE SALAD

1 cup uncooked rice
Garlic-basil vinaigrette (recipe follows)
1 (6.5- or 7-oz.) can tuna, drained and flaked
One-half cup pitted black olives, coarsely chopped
One-half cup celery cut in julienne strips
6 green onions, cut in one-inch lengths
One-half small green pepper, chopped
1 cup cut green beans, cooked and chilled
6 anchovies, chopped
Crisp salad greens
Chopped hard-cooked eggs
Tomato wedges (optional)

Cook rice according to package directions. While hot, toss with garlic-basil vinaigrette; cover and chill well. Add tuna, olives, vegetables and anchovies; toss lightly. Serve on salad greens. Garnish with chopped egg.

If desired, tuna, olives and vegetables may be arranged on a lettuce-lined platter or plates around rice salad mixture and garnished with anchovy fillets, tomatoes, if desired. Makes six servings, about six cups rice salad.

GARLIC-BASIL VINAIGRETTE

One-half cup olive oil
2 tbsps. vinegar
1 tsp. salt
One-half tsp. freshly ground black pepper or 1 tsp. dried basil
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about two-thirds cup.

SPINACH RICE SALAD

1 cup uncooked rice
Garlic and soy sauce vinaigrette (recipe follows)
One-fourth lb. fresh spinach leaves, cut in julienne strips.
4 green onions, finely chopped
1 small zucchini, cut in julienne strips
One-half cup celery, cut in julienne strips
Three-fourths cup pine nuts or chopped walnuts
Crisp salad greens

Cook rice according to package directions.

While hot, toss with garlic and soy sauce vinaigrette; cover and chill well. Add vegetables and nuts; toss lightly. Serve on salad greens.

Makes six to eight servings, about eight cups rice salad.

GARLIC SOY VINAIGRETTE

One-half cup olive oil
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 tbsp. soy sauce
One-half tsp. freshly ground black pepper
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about two-thirds cup.

Cooking school grows as second career

DRAWING FUNNY FACES on bread and rolls has been the hobby of Stavros Cosmopulos, a Boston advertising executive. He finally sold the idea to a bank for an advertising campaign.

By BARBARA RADER
Newsday

GREAT NECK, N.Y. — Al Balaban feels this way about cooking: "With cooking, you get immediate gratification. You see the results almost at once. With therapy, on the other hand, the gratification is long-range, and the results are not quickly available."

Balaban is a psychiatrist who cooks, and, although he acknowledges that cooking can be threrapeutic, he describes his experiences in the kitchen as "just great enjoyment."

Actually, the cooking part of Al Balaban's life started before he launched his psychiatric career. "When I was 12, I'd watch my grandmother cook. I loved working with food even then. In the Army I was the one who doctored up the K and C rations to be edible. I seemed always to be in the kitchen, and, even when I was studying (in medical school), I'd manage to cook even if it was on a hot plate. About 10 years ago, when my wife and I were active in a charity organization, I cooked dinner to raise money. Last year in our Fire Island house I cooked a huge Labor Day party. Someone suggested that I start a cooking school, as a sort of second career. So this is it."

Balaban put a notice in the local paper and got four students, all male. "They just happened to be men; it's not a men-only cooking class. I geared the class to their needs, which were for basic cookery," he said.

The school is in the Balaban's compact but beautifully equipped kitchen here. His class, "Cooking for Novices," recently ended its second four-week term with a lesson on making French-style bread, a Chinese chicken brast stir-fry dish and fried pastry puffs.

Over the weeks they learned how to make chicken soup, roast chicken, brokled chicken, meat loaf, roast beef, london broil, veal goulash, veal piccata, broiled fish fillets and fillet of sole amandine, to name a few of the basic dishes.

Sam Grabin, one of the students, gained enough confidence, he said, to cook a brunch for his wife and 10 friends. "I was always curious about cooking, but working with Al gave me the confidence to try a meal on my own," he said. Sam's brunch of "frittata," an Italian omelet, and meatballs turned out recently to be a social success. No one ate the purchased smoked salmon he'd brought just in case his cooking didn't turn out well, he said.

As for cooking being a therapeutic experience, Balaban said it was certainly therapy for him. "This has slowly evolved into another career for me. I've started with this one cooking class, I'm teaching in the Great Neck adult education program and I look forward to having more classes."

He learned cooking by experimenting, by reading cookbooks, by visiting fine restaurants in Europe. "And, since my wife doesn't care about cooking (his wife, Barbara, agreed), I now do most of the cooking." The Balaban children are grown and either working or in college, so the kitchen is pretty much Al's domain.

The name of the school, Owl's Cookery, is a takeoff on a nickname given Balaban years ago by a child who mispronounced Al. There are owl pictures, owl statues made of wood, metal and ceramic all over the house. His Saturday morning courses are $135 for eight sessions, including materials.

Here are some Balaban recipies:

OWL'S BREAD

2 1-4 cups warm water
1 tablespoon honey
1 package dry (or compressed) yeast 5 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
1-2 cup whole wheat flour
1-2 cup rye flour
1-2 cup wheat germ
1 tablespoon salt
1-2 tablespoon vegetable oil
White cornmeal

1. In large bowl, mix honey with water, sprinkle yeast over, stir. Wait 5 to 10 minutes until yeast starts to bubble.
2. Add remaining ingredients, except cornmeal, and mix until rough mass forms.
3. Empty onto flour board. Knead vigorously 5 to 10 minutes, until smooth and elastic.
4. Return to bowl, pour oil over top, turn to coat sides of bowl.
5. Cover bowl with clean dish towel and leave in warm place about three hours until dough triples in bulk.
6. Punch down dough and turn out onto floured board. Knead a few times, cut and shape.
7. To make french bread, cut into 4 or 6 equal pieces. Roll each piece into rope shape about 12 to 14 inches long. Sprinkle pans or cookie sheet with cornmeal to provide a light layer; place "ropes" on pans. Cover with towel. Let rise 1 to 1 1-2 hours, until double in bulk.
8. Preheat oven to 400 degrees at least 15 minutes before baking bread. When breads have risen, make three slashes on top with sharp razor blade, slanting across the surface. Place bread pan on middle shelf of oven. Spray breads with water mister. Repeat misting three more times at 5-minute intervals. Bake total of 25 to 30 minutes until nicely browned. Remove from pans and cool on racks.
9. To make sandwich bread, cut dough into two equal pieces. Place in lightly greased bread pans covered with towel. Let rise 1 to 1 1-2 hours, until double in bulk. Bake on middle shelf of 400-degree oven about 45 minutes until browned and hollow-sounding when bottom is tapped. Remove and cool on racks.

CHICKEN WITH STRAW MUSHROOMS

2 whole chicken breasts
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons sherry
1 tablespoon light soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons peanut oil (or more)
1 slice ginger root, peeled
1 can (8 ounces) straw mushrooms, drained
6 ounces fresh snow peas or 1 package (6 ounces) frozen snow peas, thawed
1-2 cup chicken stock
3 stalks scallion, sliced into rounds

1. Skin and bone chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch squares. Place in bowl, toss with cornstarch. Add sherry, soy sauce, garlic and 1 teaspoon oil. Stir to blend, then set aside.
2. In wok over high flame, heat remainder of the oil and ginger. (Or use a large, heavy skillet). When ginger browns, remove and discard.
3. Add chicken and stir-fry for 3 to 5 minutes until opaque. Drain chicken, reserve.
4. If necessary, add more oil to pan. Add mushrooms and snow peas and stir-fry about 1 minute. Return chicken to pan, stir a few seconds, add stock, cover. Cook 1 to 2 minutes more.
5. Place in serving bowl; scatter scallion pieces over top. Serve over hot rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Culinary jewel lists many uses among talents

By LEIGH FENLY
Copley News Service

Its tales are many and its talents vast. It is versatile, pungent, aromatic. A veritable culinary jewel, it is the onion that gives incomparable flavor to roasts, casseroles, salads, vegetables, soups and stews.

Although you may think of onions as yellow, white, red or green, onion farmers divide them into two distinct types: spring and winter onions. Yellow, white and green onions are grown in spring and winter. Red onions are generally spring onions.

Spring onions are softer and more spongy than winter onions.

But the important thing to know is that winter onions are stronger than summer onions. Whites, yellows, greens — all are going to be sweeter in summer.

Another thing to know about onions is the progression of strength. The powerhouse among onions is the yellow Spanish onion, that turns almost brown-skinned in winter.

Milder are the white waxy-looking Bermudas, although few farmers grow a true Bermuda anymore because it doesn't produce all that well. Whites, today, are mostly hybrids.

Milder yet are the red Italian-type onions — the ones that long for a hamburger to sit upon. These nice, sweet onions are mostly available in summer, and are usually grown locally since they don't ship well.

Dry onions should be kept in a cold, dry, well-ventilated place in a single layer. They will keep, uncooked, anywhere from one to four weeks.

When preparing your onions, peel under running water to avoid the tears. (Grandma's remedy for tears is to chew a piece of bread while you chop. Fair warning, it may be just a diversionary tactic.)

And — if you worry about such things — onion odor can be removed from a knife by rubbing with a raw potato, or from a hand by rubbing with salt, lemon or celery salt.

ONION CONFETTI RELISH

2 cups chopped sweet Spanish onions
One-half green pepper, seeded and diced
3 tbsps. diced pimiento
One-half cup vinegar
One-fourth cup water
One-fourth cup sugar
2 tsps. caraway seeds
One-half tsp. salt

Combine onions with diced green pepper and pimiento. Combine vinegar, water, sugar, caraway seeds and salt. Bring to a boil and simmer five minutes. Pour over onions. Refrigerate several hours before serving with grilled or broiled hamburgers. Makes about two and one-half cups.

SAVORY ONION TOPPER

3 cups chopped sweet onions
3 tbsps. butter
One and one-fourth cups chili sauce
One-fourth cup bottled meat sauce

Saute onions in butter until tender. Add chili sauce and meat sauce and heat through. Serve over grilled or broiled hamburgers. Makes about three and one-half cups.

CRISPY FRENCH FRIED ONION RINGS

2 sweet onions
1 cup pancake mix
Three-fourths to one and one-fourth cups beer
Oil for deep frying
Salt

Peel onions and cut into one-half-inch slices. Separate into rings. Combine pancake mix and three-fourths cup beer, adding more beer if necessary to make a smooth, thick batter. Dip onion rings into batter.

Fry a few at a time until golden brown in deep oil heated to 375 degrees. Drain and sprinkle with salt. Keep hot in oven until all rings are fried. Delicious with hamburger steak sandwiches.

Liberated women heat up frozen food purchases

By CECIL SCAGLIONE
Copley News Service

The liberated woman is making frozen food a hot item again.

"There's no doubt about it," said Tom Harris. "With more and more women working — 44 per cent of married women have jobs today — and spending less time in the kitchen, frozen food sales are increasing."

For the first time since 1973, frozen food sales increased last year over the previous year, according to Arnie Katz, associate editor of Chain Store Age Supermarkets magazine in New York.

"When food prices went helter-skelter in 1974, people just quit buying and began making more things from scratch in their kitchens. Now they're starting to buy frozen food again because they see they can get value for their money. I don't think you can make a meal similar to a frozen food meal for the same price," Katz said.

"And certainly women are spending less time in the kitchen. Besides the women's liberation movement, we also have a breakdown in the family meal. Members of the family just don't eat at the same time anymore and frozen food packages are more convenient," he said.

Harris, information director for Frozen Food Action Communications Team, added:

"Don't forget that women who don't have jobs are spending more time on outside interests today, things like adult education, charities, tennis and crafts.

"Women are busier today and aren't spending their time in the kitchen like they used to.

"My wife is a realtor and she doesn't have time to make a spinach souffle in the evening, so we buy a frozen one and it's good. I like it," he said.

Frank Miles, assistant public affairs director with the Chicago-based Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, agrees with the impact women's lib has had on frozen food sales.

"A couple arrive home in the evening and toss a meal into a microwave oven to thaw. By the time they've finished their first martini, dinner's ready," he said.

Miles has not noticed any increase in the sale of freezers during the last 12 months to accommodate frozen foods, but "there do seem to be more people buying refrigerators with bigger freezers."

Miles echoes the feelings of some industry spokesmen when he says freezer sales increase in direct proportion to the growth of consumer fears that food prices will rise. "With food prices stable, freezer sales dropped back to about 1.5 million units last year, the same total as in 1972," Miles said. "In 1973, freezer sales jumped to 2.4 million and in 1974, our biggest year, freezer sales totaled 3.2 million. They dropped to 2.4 million in 1975." Harris and Miles said the increasing use of microwave ovens plays a large role in growing frozen food sales. "I don't think the frozen food industry has experienced the full potential growth we can expect when microwave ovens get wider use," Harris said.

He said sales of microwave ovens topped gas range sales for the first time in 1975 and "we anticipate 20 per cent of the kitchens in America will have microwave ovens by 1980."

The frozen food industry is adjusting its packaging methods to accommodate microwave ovens; many frozen food items already include instructions on how to thaw and cook them by microwave.

U.S. frozen food sales totaled $9.5 billion last year, Harris said. Of this, $3 billion went to food service outlets, such as restaurants, hotels, schools, hospitals, airlines and in-plant cafeterias.

Katz expects the 1977 figure to jump about 9 or 10 per cent and expects the same rate of growth annually wel' into the 1980s.

Cotton

NEW YORK(AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were lower in midday dealings. Talks that there are increasing indications that India might buy cotton stimulated some buying of contracts by some previous short sellers as well as speculative demand.

The average price for strict low middling 1 116 inch spot cotton declined 61 points to 77.65 cents a pound Tuesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were $1.85 to $3.15 a bale lower than the previous close. May 81.65, Jul 81.37 and Oct 76.80.

American Stock Exchange Noon Index: 112.12 —0.17

Prices sag

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged again today, continuing the decline that began more than a week ago.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 3.24 at 939.08, after a drop of more than 25 points in the five preceding sessions.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 7-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In addition to persistent inflation and interest-rate worries, analysts noted concern over the prospective shape and impact of the energy plan President Carter is scheduled to outline on April 20.

Wall Streeters were looking for some possible advance information on the program in Carter's press conference this afternoon.

Sony, the most active NYSE issue, slipped ⅛ to 10¼. Blocks of 234,000 and 100,000 shares o the stock traded at that price.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .16 to 54.36. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .17 at 112.12.

Volume on the NYSE came to 7.91 million shares over the first two hours, against 8.19 million in the like period Wednesday.

Eastman Kodak dropped 1 to 68⅞, hitting a new low since 1975. The company introduced 17 new products on Wednesday, but a camera model that a number of analysts had been expecting was not among them.

Strauss employe gifts reported

Employes of Levi Strauss and Co. of Midland donated gifts totaling $1,300 to three area non-profit groups.

The employes donated $800 to buy wheelchairs for the Midland Cerebral Palasy Center. The Midland Junior Baseball Association received $250 to provide equipment for needy children wishing to participate, and $250 went to provide coffee, drinking cups and sugar for Senior Citizens of Odessa.

Funds were raised during a Valentine sweetheart contest in which each section of the plant raised money to promote its candidate for sweetheart. Bernice Brown of the assembly section was the winner.

The employes are raising more money to support Christmas in April.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Better fill those gaps

Dear Dr. Solomon: What exactly happens about vaccinations once you are grown up? When I was a kid in school, I remember that people always seemed to be checking on what you had got and what you hadn't—and whether you needed another shot. But now here I am, 28, and I don't honestly know if I'm supposed to have any more shots or boosters. As a matter of fact, I don't even remember where I left off as a kid. Is there some way of checking what's needed?—Joel C.

Dear Joel: A very useful checklist was provided in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association by Drs. Jack Hickman and Louis Barness of the University of South Florida They pointed out that pediatricians are usually meticulous about immunization programs, whereas general practitioners tend to let the whole matter drop with their adult patients—and they shouldn't. See if you can dig up answers to these questions (check with your family, your old school, your pediatrician) and then see your present doctor about filling in any gaps and getting any boosters.

Diphtheria, pertussia (whooping cough), tetanus: Did you get the entire series? When was the last booster?

Polio: Did you get the entire series? Was it oral or inactivated? When was the last booster?

Measles: Did you get it? When? Was there any reaction?

Rubella (German measles): Did you get it? When? Was there any reaction?

Mumps: Did you get it? When? Was there any reactions?

Tuberculin test: Did you have it? When? What method? Was there any reaction? If so, what was the follow-up—chest X-ray, drugs, testing of family and contacts? Were you vaccinated with BCG?

Dear Dr. Solomon: In reference to your column in which you discussed the National Cooperative Gallston Study of chenodeoxycholic acid for the dissolution of gallstones: there are 10 treatment centers throughout the country. We would be happy to discuss the program with any patients who make inquiry to you, and to provide any additional information that would be useful to them.—Robert A. Schaefer, M.D., associated director, National Cooperative Gallstone Study.

For J.J., New York: I suggest you write to Dr. Robert A. Schaefer (see above letter) regarding how you might have your gallstones dissolved by medicine rather than by surgery. His address is: The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, 525 E. 68th St., New York City, 10021.

Midlanders receive bachelor degrees

AUSTIN — Several Midlanders received bachelor of business administration degrees at the end of the fall semester from The University of Texas at Austin.

They were David Preston Donnelly of 5 Winchester Court, Kim Ann Freeman of 2504 Seaboard, Matthew Charles Lutz Jr. of 2810 Auburn Drive, Rebecca Anne McCuistion of 1607 W. Shandon Ave. and Ralph Howard Scott and Terry Floyd Scott, both of 3232 Cimmaron St.

Odessans John Carroll Pearcy, Richard Andrew Whiddon and Richard Cooper Wortham also received degrees.

132 wildcat, field tests scheduled in Basin areas

The location project count in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, was up five sites, with the staking of 32 wildcat and 100 development tests.

Two weeks ago a total of 127 applications were filed.

Last week Texas Railroad Commission District 7-C at San Angelo led in projected wildcatting, with 12 scheduled. The Midland RRC office led in the pool development category with 37 slated projects.

District 8-A, with offices in Lubbock reported five wildcat and 27 field tests.

Extender finals

Pecos County gained a Permian gas discovery and a reentry project in an oil zone.

Four C Oil & Gas Corp., Dallas, has completed No. 1-A Sibley as a Permian gas pay opener in the Four C area, nine miles east of Imperial.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 1.3 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 3,707-3,921 feet. The pay section had been acidized with 2,000 gallons and fractured with 20,000 gallons and 23,000 pounds.

Drilled to 4,120 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set at that depth, and it is plugged back to 3,990 feet.

Tops reported were Yates, 1,165; Queen, 1,783; Grayburg, 2,046; San Andres, 2,326; Glorieta, 2,939; Clear Fork, 3,395; lower Clear Fork, 3,745; Tubb, 3,572 and Wichita-Albany, 4,050 feet. Elevation was unreported.

Location is 467 feet from north and west lines of section 14, block 2, H&TC survey.

Texaco Inc. intends to reenter and plug back to 2,010 feet at No. 1-A J. J. Eaton, for recompletion attempt as a third Yates oil well and location southwest extension to that pay in the T.C.I. field of Pecos.

A former San Andres well in the field, it spots 3,003 feet from northeast and 1,662 feet from northwest lines of section 13, block 3, H&TC survey.

PENNZOIL WELL

Pennzoil Co., operating from Midland, has announced the completion of its No. 1 Petrey as a 1¼-mile west extension to Ellenburger production in the Reeves County part of the Mi Vida field.

Calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 26.778 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, producing through perforations at 18,579-19,037 feet, after treating the formation with 25,000 gallons of acid.

The project failed to indicate production in the Fusselman, recovering only water blanket and water on drillstem tests from 15,922-16,088 and 15,926-16,190 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from northeast and northwest lines of section 7, block 4, H&GN survey, nine miles northwest of Pecos.

Wildcat trio set

Exploration is slated for Winkler and Crane sectors.

Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., Midland, will drill No. 1-G Sealy-Smith, a 9,300-foot venture in Winkler, ⅝ mile northwest of the Paladin (Pennsylvanian) oil field.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 30, block A, G&MMB&A survey.

Gulf Oil Corp. will attempt to open Strawn production in the McElroy, North field of Crane, with the reentry and plugging back to 9,000 feet at No. 9-G McElroy Ranch Co., former Devonian well, 8½ miles north of Crane.

It spots 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 18, block 42, T-5-S, T&P survey.

Also in Crane, Texaco Inc. will plug back to 2,200 feet for testing as a wildcat at No. 27 Richard King, producer in the Crane-Cowden field.

It spots 1,320 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of section 85, block X, CCSD&RGNG survey, seven miles south of Crane.

J.A. directors hear 2 finalists

Addresses by the two finalists in Midland Junior Achievement's Best Speaker Contest were heard by directors of J.A. Wednesday at their March meeting held in the organization's Business Center.

The speakers were Becky Hodges and Doug Sandrige, who were presented by Jerry Caddel, executive director of Junior Achievement. The winner of the contest will advance to regional and national contests.

The financial report for the month was submitted by Thomas Bruner, treasurer.

Eugene Abbott reported on progress to date in the annual fund-raising effort.

Caddel said that the J.A. program for the year now is in the contest stage, and that testing as to economic knowledge gained by the Achievers during the year also is under way.

Vice President W.C. Hayes presided at the meeting in the absence of President W.F. Ortloff.

Garden tools need care

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Garden tools need more attention than those used only in the home workshop. They often are wielded carelessly, sometimes for purposes for which they were not intended. And they are left outside in all kinds of weather, resulting in a variety of ailments, including rust, splits and dry rot.

The easiest way to keep such tools in good condition is to clean them immediately after they have been used and to take them inside and keep them in a special place. All of us know that, of course, but what so often happens is that we are so tired after working in the garden that all we can think of is to sit down and take it easy. No matter how well we take care of the tools, though, the natural rough usage that they get takes its toll in various ways. When this occurs, lots of extra wear can be obtained from most tools if they are repaired before being used again. Repeated use of something that is damaged can make it irreparable as well as unsafe.

One of the most common problems is a split wooden handle. It can usually be put back in working order again by applying some waterproof glue to the split portions and then taping it well. In doing this, it is important to avoid splitting the handle even further when applying the glue. After the tape has been wound around the repaired part, the tool should not be used for 24 hours to allow time for the glue to dry properly. This type of repair will do for most breaks of this kind, but if there is a necessity for an even stronger remedy, follow the gluing and taping with the drilling of two holes in the handle and the inserting of carriage bolts into them. Get the roundheaded kind and place nuts on the other ends.

Should a handle break so badly that it cannot be repaired, buy a new handle if the rest of the tool is in good shape. Since handles are attached in different ways, take the tool to the store with you to be sure you get the proper type. Such handles are sold by hardware stores, building supply dealers, do-it-yourself centers, lumber yards and garden supply establishments.

A rivet that comes loose can be removed by splitting one end and then pulling it out. It can be replaced with a new rivet or a simple bolt and nut. Rust and caked dirt will yield to a wire brush and steel wool. Shovels, spades and hoes that are out of shape can be hammered back to usefulness by placing them on a hard surface. To resharpen the edges, use a rough metal file followed by a fine-toothed file. In any kind of sharpening, always follow the lines of the original edges. Tools with moving parts, such as pruning shears, should be lubricated occasionaiiy. Be certain to wipe off any excess oil.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By NANCY HUDSON,
LIZ RUWWE,
and LORI JONS

Your MYC report here bringing you the latest Midland Youth Center news, sports and weather.

The Midland and Lee Youth Centers have joined forces to present to you Danny Davis and The Nashville Brass! The show will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in the Lee High Auditorium. Tickets may be purchased at the door, at either Youth Center, or from any Youth Center Board member. All proceeds go to support the Youth Centers. Don't miss this terrific show!!

Student Council office elections were held at MHS Tuesday. Naminations for the offices of president and vice president closed Monday afternoon. This year's ambitious candidates include: for president: Hal Coon, John Hurt, Kell Cahoon, Marvin Longabaugh and Steve Kennedy, and for vice president: Morgan Kennedy, Rick Foster, Kiffy Hickey, Emily Legg and im Wood. We'll have those results in next weeks chatter.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes meets tonight at 7 in the cafeteria. All members are urged to come.

The Junior Rotarians this week are Steven ennedy and Peggy O'Shaughnessy. Congratulations, you two!

And now for a glance at this week's sports events—

The Midland and Lee swimming teams brought their seasons to a close last weekend as they competed in the state swimming and diving championships in Austin. The girls beat Lee by one point while our guys tied. Congratulations go to Sid Glenn, Pat White, Travis Dillon, Hal Rasmussen, Clay Spears, Brigitte Coon, Kelly Dowdle, Joan Salman, Morgan Kennedy, Nancy Hudson, Richie O'Neill, Sheldon Skinner and coach Jesse Marsh for a job well done. Lee swimmers Wendy Williams and Curt Burthman also did an excellent job.

The MHS netters did it again last weekend as the walked off the courts at Lubbock with first place honors. We're all looking forward to another victory next weekend as they head for Abilene. Good Luck tennis team!

The baseball team is getting off to a slow start this year with a 3-9 record. However, the team has been playing only the toughest teams our area has to offer. So, things are sure to be looking up soon.

The track team will be busy this weekend as it competes in the Del Rio relays. Good luck striders!

One last sports item—MHS athletes are invited to participate in the Bulldog Super Star Competition. The contest will involve a variety of events including diving, two swimming events, bench press, shuttle run, two track races and basketball free throws. Ask your coach or Coach Marsh for further details.

Finally—a quick look at the weather. Spring has definitely arrived here at MHS. This is not only evident by our beautiful 70-degree afternoons but also by the playful "spring fever" attitudes of MHS students. As warmer weather and Senioritis set in, desire for school work fades out quickly.

A further note on the weather. Midland set a national record high temperature of 91 degrees a week ago today. Yes, our warm-weather community was finally recognized on national television last Friday when the "Today Show" announced this tremendously significant fact. How about that!

Well, that's about it for today, folks. Please join us next week for the latest news at MYC.

Elbow has Rose thinking

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A persistent arm problem has Cincinnati Reds holdout Pete Rose doing some deep thinking.

Rose, hitting only .200 while appearing in four of the Reds' 13 exhibition games, has not been able to shake a recurring elbow condition.

MANAGER SPARKY Anderson said Wednesday that the next 10 days would determine whether the Reds would carry a backup third baseman in case Rose was forced to enter the season nursing a sore throwing arm.

The 36-year-old third baseman received a cortisone shot Wednesday in hopes of clearing up the inflamed elbow.

"I can't fire the ball to first," he said after a 2-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers. "There are limited throws in your arm, and I intend to save them for the season. If the arm doesn't feel 150 per cent, I'm not going to fire a pea to first," he said.

ROSE GROUNDED out as a pinch hitter, leaving him 2-for-10 in exhibition play.

He explained that the elbow has troubled him for the past two years. He said he received the maximum five cortisone shots last year when he hit .323 and led the National League with 215 hits, 130 runs scored and 42 doubles.

"It's the opposite of tennis elbow," he said, tenderly touching the bottom of his right elbow.

Rose, in his 15th major league season, said he aggravated the elbow against the New York Mets early last year and played the remainder of the season with discomfort.

"It happened when I fielded a bunt, I snapped a side-arm throw to first and I heard something pop in there," said Rose, who has batted .300 or better in 11 of the past 12 years.

WHILE HE contends he is not alarmed, he does not discount the thought that the Reds might be resisting his salary demands due to his uncertain physical condition.

"It might be the holdup in the contract talks," he said. "I was honest with them and told them about it."

Rose is seeking a multi-year contract at a reported $400,000 per year. But the Reds have held firm at their offer of an estimated $250,000. Rose could play out his option, since his contract was automatically renewed two weeks ago.

IF THE elbow does not respond soon, Anderson likely will keep Ray Knight as a utility man instead of Joel Youngblood, who spent last season with the Reds, hitting .193.

Rose has played in 490 consecutive games and has missed only one game in the last seven years.

Orioles, A's receive top baseball attention

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball owners, with the exception of Oakland's Charles O. Finley, assembled for their annual spring meeting today amid rumors that Finley's A's as well as the Baltimore Orioles are up for sale.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday night that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has been involved in talks concerning the possible sale of the Orioles.

Meanwhile, George Heideman, owner of the Jenkintown, Pa., Steel Co., told The AP he has held a number of talks with Finley about buying the A's.

Neither Heideman nor Finley is expected to attend today's owners' meeting. Heideman, who came close to buying the old Washington Senators in the 1960s, said he was invited but can't make it. And Finley said he won't be here because he fears a move by the other owners to buy up his team.

"I don't want to hurt their feelings, but I'm afraid they might try to buy my club," Finley said Wednesday from his Chicago home. "I'm not going to Tampa and I'm not sending anyone to represent me."

Later, Finley confirmed having talked with Heideman. He also told The AP that he would sell his team to his fellow major league owners "with one stipulation—that they agree to keep the club in Oakland for at least 10 years."

Such a sale, he added, would have to be "signed in blood."

Informed sources told The AP that if either club is sold, it would be moved to Washington, D.C., and switched from the American League to the National, with limited interleague play beginning in 1978.

Details of the possible sale of the Orioles were extremely sketchy and the report was denied by club officials. But it was believed that board chairman Jerold C. Hoffberger wants to unload the club.

Kuhn was unavailable but The Baltimore Sun talked to Bob Wirz, director of public relations for the commissioner's office, who quoted Kuhn as saying: "I would deny that. I have not been involved in any such discussions."

Frank Cashen, former general manager and currently a member of the board of directors, said he has "no knowledge of any plans to sell the club."

General Manager Hank Peters said: "I can't comment officially on it because anything like that would have to come from Mr. Hoffberger, but I haven't heard a word about it, and I mean that sincerely. If anything were going on, I think I'd know about it."

Another report has baseball buying the A's from Finley, keeping the team in Oakland this season, then selling the franchise to Ed Cole, former chairman of the board of General Motors. The rumored price tag is $6 million, although Heideman indicated Finley's price is in the $8 million range. Cole would then move the franchise to Washington, satisfying a long-standing promise by Kuhn.

The franchise would switch to the National League, balancing the two leagues at 13 teams apiece. Presently, the AL has 14 teams and the NL has 12.

The Philadelphia Phillies have been adamant in their opposition to expanding the NL beyond the existing 12 teams. But they apparently have softened their position somewhat.

"Our opinion," said Bill Giles, executive vice president of the Phillies, "is that if most people in baseball feel it is critical to put a team in Washington because it would help politically, we would go along.

"But they would have to convince us. We don't think that is so."

Finley's situation, under the heading of "franchise relocation," was one of the topics on the agenda of the owners, who were to meet in separate league sessions before joining for a general get-together.

Three-division play was another subject for discussion, with the AL virtually certain to approve it for 1978 and the NL having a better than even chance of accepting it.

"I think it has a better than 50-50 chance," said Giles. "I haven't heard anybody who is 100 per cent against it."

"We have enough votes to pass it," said one AL owner, who requested anonymity.

Giles outlined the proposed three-division plan for a 12-team NL.

Bob Risch tames wind to gain AGT distance

The winds continued to blow with powerful force Wednesday afternoon, but Bob Risch never seemed to notice as the Diamond Bar, Calif., resident put even more distance between himself and the rest of the field after the second round of the American Golf Tour tournament at Hogan Park.

Risch, the only two-time winner on the AGT tour this season, fired a two-under par 68, and coupled with his opening day 66, gave him a 134 total and a comfortable four stroke lead over Gary Jacobsen, Rio Verde, Ariz., and Jim Mundell, San Angelo, who both stand at 138.

Five strokes off the hot pace of Risch entering Thursday's final round in the 54-hole event are Ken Ellworth, Sun City, Calif.; Paul Wise, Lawndale, Calif.; and Chuck Moran, Palm Springs, Calif. All stand at 139.

Steve Willis, Carlsbad, N.M., who shot an opening round 68 and was second to Risch, fell to a four-over par 74 Wednesday, and is well down the list at 142.

Risch had five birdies on the 6,615-yard Tall City layout Tuesday to power him to his sub-par round. Three bogies hurt him on the front nine, but birds on two, seven and eight prevented him from losing any major share of the lead. He came down the stretch without any more bogies, and two more birdies on fourteen and seventeen put him six-under for the tournament, and in comfortable position.

Both Jacobsen and Mundell matched the 69's they shot Tuesday to remain within striking distance.

Final round action began Thursday morning at 8:15 a.m.

134 — Bob Risch, Diamond Bar, Calif.

138 — Gary Jacobsen, Rio Verde, Ariz.; Jim Mundell, San Angelo.

139 — Paul Wise, Lawndale, Calif.; Chuck Moran, Palm Springs, Calif.; Ken Ellworth, Sun City, Calif.

140 — Ken Cody, Tom Tatum, Sale Omohundro, Jon Fiedler.

141 — Duke Butler.

143 — Marsh Shumaker, Larry Webb, Ronnie Rosson, Tony Carnpregher, Scott Spence, Guy Walkingstick, Doug Righter.

Rebel coach avoids investigation talk

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian, coach of fifth ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, would just as soon skip the subject of his basketball team's investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Asked Wednesday if he thought word of the investigation leaked out of NCAA headquarters in hopes of hampering the Rebels's bid for the national championship, Tarkanian said, "I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best that I don't express any of them."

And he didn't.

ASKED IF it might affect his team in the NCAA tournament, he replied, "I don't think so."

He seemed more concerned with No. 4 North Carolina, his opponent Saturday in the 4:15 p.m. EST nightcap of the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta's Omni.

"I've never seen a team that did so many things and did them well," Tarkanian said Wednesday during a telephone news conference involving the coaches of the four semifinal teams.

He especially expressed concern about the Carolina "four corners" offense, a delay game often employed by Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith late in a game when his club is nursing a lead.

"A LOT of teams are running the four corners," Tarkanian said. "It's not a matter of running it, it is how well you run it. It'll be new for us because we haven't seen anyone run it as well as Carolina.

"It would be nice if we got ahead and didn't have to worry about it."

"We get too much attention on our four corners," Smith said. "We also believe in the fast break. But no one does it any better than Vegas. We think we are surely facing the toughest team in the West. It will be one of the toughest tests we have faced."

The Tar Heels carry a 27-4 record into the game. Las Vegas has the top mark of the final four, 28-2.

SATURDAY'S OPENER matches upstart North Carolina-Charlotte, 28-3 and ranked 17th, against No. 7 Marquette, 23-7.

UNCC also will employ the fast break, although the well disciplined Sun Belt Conference champions also demonstrated considerable patience in rolling to victories over Syracuse and No. 1 Michigan in last week's Mideast Regionals.

Marquette, which loses veteran Coach Al McGuire to retirement after this tournament, is a defensive-minded club that likes to control the tempo of a game.

McGuire said he though Charlotte's strong point was its "underdog type of attitude—all for one and one for all. I think this is the greatest asset you have."

HE SAID he was sure UNCC had outstanding players and that he had read about Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who "just seems to be a charming young guy. He seems to be the type of guy that can lead you to the national championship."

Maxwell is Charlotte's 6-foot-8 center, a silky-smooth operator who is averaging more than 20 points per game and also is used to take the ball down court against an opponent's full-court press.

"Maxwell does all phases of the game well," said 49er Coach Lee Rose, who took his team to the finals of the National Invitation Tournament last year, but still didn't figure to be one of the finalists in the NCAA event.

ROSE WAS asked if he feared his team might have "peaked out" in last week's victory over Michigan.

"I think the four teams left have extremely tough games," Rose said. "I'm not concerned about peaking against Michigan. If we peaked out, we just did it."

Chaps defeat Frank Phillips

AMARILLO — The Midland College men's and women's tennis teams took a pair from Frank Phillips College Wednesday afternoon, as both Chap units were 6-0 winners.

The victory gives MC a 2-0 Western Junior College Conference record, and they still have yet to lose a single set. Everyone once again was a straight set winner Wednesday.

Garden tools need care

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Garden tools need more attention than those used only in the home workshop. They often are wielded carelessly, sometimes for purposes for which they were not intended. And they are left outside in all kinds of weather, resulting in a variety of ailments, including rust, splits and dry rot.

The easiest way to keep such tools in good condition is to clean them immediately after they have been used and to take them inside and keep them in a special place. All of us know that, of course, but what so often happens is that we are so tired after working in the garden that all we can think of is to sit down and take it easy. No matter how well we take care of the tools, though, the natural rough usage that they get takes its toll in various ways. When this occurs, lots of extra wear can be obtained from most tools if they are repaired before being used again. Repeated use of something that is damaged can make it irreparable as well as unsafe.

One of the most common problems is a split wooden handle. It can usually be put back in working order again by applying some waterproof glue to the split portions and then taping it well. In doing this, it is important to avoid splitting the handle even further when applying the glue. After the tape has been wound around the repaired part, the tool should not be used for 24 hours to allow time for the glue to dry properly. This type of repair will do for most breaks of this kind, but if there is a necessity for an even stronger remedy, follow the gluing and taping with the drilling of two holes in the handle and the inserting of carriage bolts into them. Get the round-headed kind and place nuts on the other ends.

Should a handle break so badly that it cannot be repaired, buy a new handle if the rest of the tool is in good shape. Since handles are attached in different ways, take the tool to the store with you to be sure you get the proper type. Such handles are sold by hardware stores, building supply dealers, do-it-yourself centers, lumber yards and garden supply establishments.

A rivet that comes loose can be removed by splitting one end and then pulling it out. It can be replaced with a new rivet or a simple bolt and nut. Rust and caked dirt will yield to a wire brush and steel wool. Shovels, spades and hoes that are out of shape can be hammered back to usefulness by placing them on a hard surface. To resharpen the edges, use a rough metal file followed by a fine-toothed file. In any kind of sharpening, always follow the lines of the original edges. Tools with moving parts, such as pruning shears, should be lubricated occasionally. Be certain to wipe off any excess oil.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By NANCY HUDSON,
LIZ RUWWE,
and LORI JONS

Your MYC report here bringing you the latest Midland Youth Center news, sports and weather.

The Midland and Lee Youth Centers have joined forces to present to you Danny Davis and The Nashville Brass! The show will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in the Lee High Auditorium. Tickets may be purchased at the door, at either Youth Center, or from any Youth Center Board member. All proceeds go to support the Youth Centers. Don't miss this terrific show!!

Student Council office elections were held at MHS Tuesday. Naminations for the offices of president and vice president closed Monday afternoon. This year's ambitious candidates include: for president: Hal Coon, John Hurt, Kell Cahoon, Marvin Longabaugh and Steve Kennedy, and for vice president: Morgan Kennedy, Rick Foster, Kiffy Hickey, Emily Legg and im Wood. We'll have those results in next weeks chatter.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes meets tonight at 7 in the cafeteria. All members are urged to come.

The Junior Rotarians this week are Steven ennedy and Peggy O'Shaughnessy. Congratulations, you two!

The Midland and Lee swimming teams brought their seasons to a close last weekend as they competed in the state swimming and diving championships in Austin. The girls beat Lee by one point while our guys tied. Congratulations go to Sid Glenn, Pat White, Travis Dillon, Hal Rasmussen, Clay Spears, Brigitte Coon, Kelly Dowdle, Joan Salman, Morgan Kennedy, Nancy Hudson, Richie O'Neill, Sheldon Skinner and coach Jesse Marsh for a job well done. Lee swimmers Wendy Williams and Curt Burthman also did an excellent job.

The MHS netters did it again last weekend as the walked off the courts at Lubbock with first place honors. We're all looking forward to another victory next weekend as they head for Abilene. Good Luck tennis team!

The baseball team is getting off to a slow start this year with a 3-9 record. However, the team has been playing only the toughest teams our area has to offer. So, things are sure to be looking up soon.

The track team will be busy this weekend as it competes in the Del Rio relays. Good luck striders!

One last sports item—MHS athletes are invited to participate in the Bulldog Super Star Competition. The contest will involve a variety of events including diving, two swimming events, bench press, shuttle run, two track races and basketball free throws. Ask your coach or Coach Marsh for further details.

Finally—a quick look at the weather. Spring has definitely arrived here at MHS. This is not only evident by our beautiful 70-degree afternoons but also by the playful "spring fever" attitudes of MHS students. As warmer weather and Senioritis set in, desire for school work fades out quickly.

A further note on the weather. Midland set a national record high temperature of 91 degrees a week ago today. Yes, our warm-weather community was finally recognized on national television last Friday when the "Today Show" announced this tremendously significant fact. How about that!

Well, that's about it for today, folks. Please join us next week for the latest news at MYC.

Orioles, A's receive top baseball attention

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball owners, with the exception of Oakland's Charles O. Finley, assembled for their annual spring meeting today amid rumors that Finley's A's as well as the Baltimore Orioles are up for sale.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday night that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has been involved in talks concerning the possible sale of the Orioles.

Meanwhile, George Heideman, owner of the Jenkintown, Pa., Steel Co., told The AP he has held a number of talks with Finley about buying the A's.

Neither Heideman nor Finley is expected to attend today's owners' meeting. Heideman, who came close to buying the old Washington Senators in the 1960s, said he was invited but can't make it. And Finley said he won't be here because he fears a move by the other owners to buy up his team.

"I don't want to hurt their feelings, but I'm afraid they might try to buy my club," Finley said Wednesday from his Chicago home. "I'm not going to Tampa and I'm not sending anyone to represent me."

Later, Finley confirmed having talked with Heideman. He also told The AP that he would sell his team to his fellow major league owners "with one stipulation—that they agree to keep the club in Oakland for at least 10 years."

Such a sale, he added, would have to be "signed in blood."

Informed sources told The AP that if either club is sold, it would be moved to Washington, D.C., and switched from the American League to the National, with limited interleague play beginning in 1978.

Details of the possible sale of the Orioles were extremely sketchy and the report was denied by club officials. But it was believed that board chairman Jerold C. Hoffberger wants to unload the club.

Kuhn was unavailable but The Baltimore Sun talked to Bob Wirz, director of public relations for the commissioner's office, who quoted Kuhn as saying: "I would deny that. I have not been involved in any such discussions."

Frank Cashen, former general manager and currently a member of the board of directors, said he has "no knowledge of any plans to sell the club."

General Manager Hank Peters said: "I can't comment officially on it because anything like that would have to come from Mr. Hoffberger, but I haven't heard a word about it, and I mean that sincerely. If anything were going on, I think I'd know about it."

Another report has baseball buying the A's from Finley, keeping the team in Oakland this season, then selling the franchise to Ed Cole, former chairman of the board of General Motors. The rumored price tag is $6 million, although Heideman indicated Finley's price is in the $8 million range. Cole would then move the franchise to Washington, satisfying a long-standing promise by Kuhn.

The franchise would switch to the National League, balancing the two leagues at 13 teams apiece. Presently, the AL has 14 teams and the NL has 12.

The Philadelphia Phillies have been adamant in their opposition to expanding the NL beyond the existing 12 teams. But they apparently have softened their position somewhat.

"Our opinion," said Bill Giles, executive vice president of the Phillies, "is that if most people in baseball feel it is critical to put a team in Washington because it would help politically, we would go along.

"But they would have to convince us. We don't think that is so."

Finley's situation, under the heading of "franchise relocation," was one of the topics on the agenda of the owners, who were to meet in separate league sessions before joining for a general get-together.

Three-division play was another subject for discussion, with the AL virtually certain to approve it for 1978 and the NL having a better than even chance of accepting it.

"I think it has a better than 50-50 chance," said Giles. "I haven't heard anybody who is 100 per cent against it."

"We have enough votes to pass it," said one AL owner, who requested anonymity.

Giles outlined the proposed three-division plan for a 12-team NL.

Bob Risch tames wind to gain AGT distance

The winds continued to blow with powerful force Wednesday afternoon, but Bob Risch never seemed to notice as the Diamond Bar, Calif., resident put even more distance between himself and the rest of the field after the second round of the American Golf Tour tournament at Hogan Park.

Risch, the only two-time winner on the AGT tour this season, fired a two-under par 68, and coupled with his opening day 66, gave him a 134 total and a comfortable four stroke lead over Gary Jacobsen, Rio Verde, Ariz., and Jim Mundell, San Angelo, who both stand at 138.

Five strokes off the hot pace of Risch entering Thursday's final round in the 54-hole event are Ken Ellworth, Sun City, Calif.; Paul Wise, Lawndale, Calif.; and Chuck Moran, Palm Springs, Calif. All stand at 139.

Steve Willis, Carlsbad, N.M., who shot an opening round 68 and was second to Risch, fell to a four-over par 74 Wednesday, and is well down the list at 142.

Risch had five birdies on the 6,615-yard Tall City layout Tuesday to power him to his sub-par round. Three bogies hurt him on the front nine, but birds on two, seven and eight prevented him from losing any major share of the lead. He came down the stretch without any more bogies, and two more birdies on fourteen and seventeen put him six-under for the tournament, and in comfortable position.

Both Jacobsen and Mundell matched the 69's they shot Tuesday to remain within striking distance.

Final round action began Thursday morning at 8:15 a.m.

The second round leaders in the American Golf Tour tournament being held at Hogan Park Golf Course:

134 — Bob Risch, Diamond Bar, Calif.

138 — Gary Jacobsen, Rio Verde, Ariz.; Jim Mundell, San Angelo.

139 — Paul Wise, Lawndale, Calif.; Chuck Moran, Palm Springs, Calif.; Ken Ellworth, Sun City, Calif.

140 — Ken Cody, Tom Tatum, Sale Omohundro, Jon Fiedler.

141 — Duke Butler.

143 — Marsh Shumaker, Larry Webb, Ronnie Rosson, Tony Carnpregher, Scott Spence, Guy Walkingstick, Doug Righter.

Elbow has Rose thinking

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A persistent arm problem has Cincinnati Reds holdout Pete Rose doing some deep thinking.

Rose, hitting only .200 while appearing in four of the Reds' 13 exhibition games, has not been able to shake a recurring elbow condition.

MANAGER SPARKY Anderson said Wednesday that the next 10 days would determine whether the Reds would carry a backup third baseman in case Rose was forced to enter the season nursing a sore throwing arm.

The 36-year-old third baseman received a cortisone shot Wednesday in hopes of clearing up the inflamed elbow.

"I can't fire the ball to first," he said after a 2-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers. "There are limited throws in your arm, and I intend to save them for the season. If the arm doesn't feel 150 per cent, I'm not going to fire a pea to first," he said.

ROSE GROUNDED out as a pinch hitter, leaving him 2-for-10 in exhibition play.

He explained that the elbow has troubled him for the past two years. He said he received the maximum five cortisone shots last year when he hit .323 and led the National League with 215 hits, 130 runs scored and 42 doubles.

"It's the opposite of tennis elbow," he said, tenderly touching the bottom of his right elbow.

Rose, in his 15th major league season, said he aggravated the elbow against the New York Mets early last year and played the remainder of the season with discomfort.

"It happened when I fielded a ... bunt, I snapped a side-arm throw to first and I heard something pop in there," said Rose, who has batted .300 or better in 11 of the past 12 years.

WHILE HE contends he is not alarmed, he does not discount the thought that the Reds might be resisting his salary demands due to his uncertain physical condition.

"It might be the holdup in the contract talks," he said. "I was honest with them and told them about it."

Rose is seeking a multi-year contract at a reported $400,000 per year. But the Reds have held firm at their offer of an estimated $250,000. Rose could play out his option, since his contract was automatically renewed two weeks ago.

IF THE elbow does not respond soon, Anderson likely will keep Ray Knight as a utility man instead of Joel Youngblood, who spent last season with the Reds, hitting .193.

Rose has played in 490 consecutive games and has missed only one game in the last seven years.

Rebel coach avoids investigation talk

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian, coach of fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, would just as soon skip the subject of his basketball team's investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Asked Wednesday if he thought word of the investigation leaked out of NCAA headquarters in hopes of hampering the Rebels's bid for the national championship, Tarkanian said, "I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best that I don't express any of them."

And he didn't.

ASKED IF it might affect his team in the NCAA tournament, he replied, "I don't think so."

He seemed more concerned with No. 4 North Carolina, his opponent Saturday in the 4:15 p.m. EST nightcap of the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta's Omni.

"I've never seen a team that did so many things and did them well," Tarkanian said Wednesday during a telephone news conference involving the coaches of the four semifinal teams.

He especially expressed concern about the Carolina "four corners" offense, a delay game often employed by Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith late in a game when his club is nursing a lead.

"A LOT of teams are running the four corners," Tarkanian said. "It's not a matter of running it, it is how well you run it. It'll be new for us because we haven't seen anyone run it as well as Carolina.

"It would be nice if we got ahead and didn't have to worry about it."

"We get too much attention on our four corners," Smith said. "We also believe in the fast break. But no one does it any better than Vegas. We think we are surely facing the toughest team in the West. It will be one of the toughest tests we have faced."

The Tar Heels carry a 27-4 record into the game. Las Vegas has the top mark of the final four, 28-2.

SATURDAY'S OPENER matches upstart North Carolina-Charlotte, 28-3 and ranked 17th, against No. 7 Marquette, 23-7.

UNCC also will employ the fast break, although the well disciplined Sun Belt Conference champions also demonstrated considerable patience in rolling to victories over Syracuse and No. 1 Michigan in last week's Mideast Regionals.

Marquette, which loses veteran Coach Al McGuire to retirement after this tournament, is a defensive-minded club that likes to control the tempo of a game.

McGuire said he though Charlotte's strong point was its "underdog type of attitude—all for one and one for all. I think this is the greatest asset you have."

HE SAID he was sure UNCC had outstanding players and that he had read about Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who "just seems to be a charming young guy. He seems to be the type of guy that can lead you to the national championship."

Maxwell is Charlotte's 6-foot-8 center, a silky-smooth operator who is averaging more than 20 points per game and also is used to take the ball down court against an opponent's full-court press.

"Maxwell does all phases of the game well," said 49er Coach Lee Rose, who took his team to the finals of the National Invitation Tournament last year, but still didn't figure to be one of the finalists in the NCAA event.

ROSE WAS asked if he feared his team might have "peaked out" in last week's victory over Michigan.

"I think the four teams left have extremely tough games," Rose said. "I'm not concerned about peaking against Michigan. If we peaked out, we just did it."

Malone enjoys birthday

By The Associated Press

Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy gave the Houston Rockets a present for Malone's birthday—combining for 48 points as the Central Division leaders became the first team to clinch a National Basketball Association playoffs berth.

The Rockets did by beating the Portland Trail Blazers 109-104 Wednesday night as Malone accounted for one point for each of his years—23—and Murphy had 25.

Nine of Malone's points came in the fourth quarter at the expense of Portland's Maurice Lucas.

"I like to play against Maurice," said Malone, "because he doesn't play defense that well."

Portland closed within 102-101 against Houston with 2:08 to play. But Trail Blazers' center Bill Walton, who played most of the second half with five personal fouls, fouled out with 1:15 left. Malone sank the two free throws for a 104-101 Houston edge.

"I don't know if we would have won if he hadn't fouled out," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay. "All I know is that we're a much better team with him playing."

Walton scored 26 points.

Jazz 95, Pistons 89

Pete Maravich scored 31 points, 25 in the first half including six crucial points in the final 90 seconds, helping clinch a third straight victory for New Orleans. The Jazz blew a 19-point lead in the third period as Detroit spurted for 21 points to New Orleans' eight and hit the first four baskets of the fourth quarter, making it 74-72. But shortly after the Pistons gained an 85-81 lead, the Jazz went on a 10-0 binge in 4½ minutes, reclaiming control of the game.

Kings 107, Nets 96

In a game played under protest after New York's Mike Bantom was ejected, former Nets Brian Taylor and Jim Eakins gave Kansas City its ninth victory in 11 games. Taylor, traded by the Nets last summer, scored 29 points, while Eakins had 14, all in the final period. Bubbles Hawkins had 22 and Jim Fox 21 for the Nets, who dropped their sixth game in a row. Bantom was called for a personal foul, then official Don Murphy called a technical foul, saying, "You should have heard what he called me."

Bullets 95, Cavaliers 90

Wes Unseld scored a basket, then fired a long pass to Elvin Hayes for a fast-break stuff shot that put Washington ahead 83-75. Cleveland rallied within 92-89, but the Bullets held on.

Celtics 103, Hawks 96

Sidney Wicks' 19 points boosted him past the 10,000-point career total and helped Boston overcome Atlanta's first-half lead. In the first 7½ minutes of the second half, the Hawks scored only four points.

Warriors 128, 76ers 120

Rick Barry scored 37 points for Golden State as the Warriors handed Philadelphia its first loss in five games. The 76ers were ahead most of the game but fell behind after a layup by Golden State's Phil Smith. The lead changed hands twice thereafter, but eight points late in the fourth quarter put the Warriors ahead for good. George McGinnis scored 34 for Philedelphia and Julius Erving added 28.

Lakers 105, Pacers 97

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Cazzie Russell 25, helping Los Angeles withstand a fourth-quarter Indiana rally. The Pacers closed within 86-84 with 7:39 remaining, but were thwarted by baskets by AbdulJabbar and Earl Tatum and two free throws by Don Ford. Billy Knight led the Pacers with 28 points.

Spurs 122, Nuggets 120

A key steal by San Antonio's Mike Gale cut off a late rally by Denver, and George Gervin hit 38 points, offsetting some hot shooting by the Nuggets' David Thompson. Thompson finished with a season-high 44 points. Gale's steal came as the Nuggets tried an inbounds pass to Thompson with eight seconds remaining. The Spurs' guard raced in for a layup, putting San Antonio ahead by four points.

Lucrative net tourney gives Casals Broadway

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven years ago, eight women—organized in part by an indignant Billie Jean King—played tennis in an unusual women's tournament. The prize money was $5,000 and the winner, Rosie Casals, received $1,600.

The eight women basically were the top women in professional tennis. Their little tournament emerged from their anger over the meager prize money offered women as compared to men.

Tonight, eight women stage another first, this much more lucrative—a series of round robin matches at Madison Square Garden.

Miss Casals will be among them, an unseeded player, and even if she loses, her share of the $150,000 tournament will be $9,000.

"It's like we've finally made it to Broadway," says Miss Casals.

"Tell people that someone's going to win $2,000 and nobody much cares. Tell them $50,000 and everyone snaps to attention."

Top seeded for the championship of the prestigious women's tournament is Chris Evert. She is followed by trimmed-down Czechoslovakian defector Martina Navratilova, and Britons Sue Barker and Virginia Wade.

The other contenders, top players on the circuit on the basis of points won during the season, include Miss Casals, of Sausalito, Calif., Betty Stove of The Netherlands, Kristien Shaw of New York and Mima Jausovee of Yugoslavia.

The championship event, following 11 tournaments around the nation, is sponsored by Virginia Slims.

The draw placed Miss Evert, Miss Casals, Mrs. Wade and Miss Jausovec in the Gold group.

Colts look for talent

S.C. Perez, general manager of the Midland Colts of the West Texas-New Mexico Baseball League, announced there are still a few openings on the 1977 edition of the club.

Any player interested in trying out for the semi-pro club may call Perez at 684-8905, or Lupe Perez, the coach of the team, at 683-7160.

MC netters face big test

This weekend's schedule for the Midland College tennis teams is a busy one.

Today, both the men's and women's teams will play dual matches against Mary Hardin Baylor College in Belton at 1 p.m. Friday and Saturday both teams are entered in the Schreiner College Spring Team Open at Kerrville.

Both teams are coming together after splitting up and capturing two titles last weekend. The men captured the B Division title in the Rice University Invitational in Houston while the women took the singles and doubles crowns in the Navarro Junior College Invitational at Corsicana.

The Chap netters won their conference openers two weeks ago against Howard College without the loss of a set.

PLAYING FOR the MC men are Derek Edmonds, Reg Luttrell, Tony Luttrell, Denis McKeown and Ron Cetrone. The women are Jana Hanks, Ann Layman, Blanca Barriga, Karen Schuchard and Joanne Hall.

Cowboys find ultimate joke with Hartman

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Jack be nimble, Jack be quick, the Cowboys couldn't make your contract stick.

Tears of despair turned to cries of joy at Kansas State.

At Oklahoma State, shouts of joy are turning to angry mutterings.

Was this the ultimate Aggie joke?

AND IN Atlanta, Ga., for a national coaches meeting is a very embarrassed Jack Hartman, K-State's former, present — and presumably future — head basketball coach.

"I made a mistake — a turnover, if you will," the chagrined Hartman explained Wednesday. "I acted too quickly."

The successful, enigmatic coach, who has had only one losing season in 22 years as a head coach, ended weeks of speculation Monday night when he announced he was resigning from K-State and accepting the head coaching job at Okahoma State, where he starred for the Cowboys in football and basketball in the late 1940s.

Then, Wednesday afternoon, Hartman stunned both campuses and sent ripples of applause through the Kansas Legislature when he announced a change of heart.

"Due to personal reasons, and having time to reflect on my past seven years at Kanas State, I realized I had made a hasty decision under pressure," he told a news conference in Manhattan, Kan. "I've asked to stay as basketball coach at Kansas State."

THE SCHOOL band struck up the K-State fight song.

"Jack Hartman is back at Kansas State," a lawmaker said on the floor of the state senate. "All is right with the world."

"I don't think he should do all this and wind up quitting," said Olus Holder, an Oklahoma State player. "He just shouldn't do it. I know I'll remember it next year when we play him."

Why? What caused Hartman to reverse himself?

Mike DeArmond, a sports writer for the Kansas City Star, intercepted Hartman at the airport Wednesday on his way to Atlanta and posed the question.

"It was a matter of too much emotion, too much tension," Hartman said in the Star's copyright story today.

"IT WAS not having enough time to back off from the situation after the season. I wasn't in any shape to be assessing that kind of a move, to evaluate the situation.

"We recognize a mistake on the floor and then we try to correct it. The only way I know how to correct a mistake is to look it in the eye and try to amend it as quickly as possible."

Hartman had flown to Stillwater, Okla., Tuesday to meet with the OSU players and appear at a news conference.

"I got on that plane to fly to Oklahoma State and for the first time I felt really alone and able to make some pertinent evaluations about what I was doing," he said. "In the back of my mind was that the feeling wasn't right. The flight back then confirmed all the thoughts I had on the flight down."

Some highly personal reasons were also involved, sources close to the situation indicated.

"It was a combination of a lot of things," Hartman said. "It was just an unbelievable day."

"I REALIZE the decision I made on Monday was both inconveniencing and embarrassing, and I'm thinking mainly of myself when I say embarrassing."

Hartman said Kansas State did not offer any further incentives for him to remain, and that Oklahoma State had not reneged on any of its promises.

SPORTS CHATTER

Sutton bellows sour grapes

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Just a few sporting thoughts on a busy spring day, and was that really Bowie Kuhn and Chuck Finley I saw on the Gong Show singing "Side by Side". . .

If Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton would have just shut his mouth like a good loser should after the Hogs' first round demise at the hands of Wake Forest in the NCAA regionals two Saturdays ago, I would have had a lot more respect for the man. But he didn't, and I don't.

After the defeat, he began spouting verbal abuse at Wake Forest and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"WE'D BEAT them the next three times we'd play them," the man said, as if that was going to do him a helluva lot of good. Then, he went after the entire ACC. "That conference isn't half as strong as they make it out to be. The press build it way out of proportion," he explained to anyone who would listen.

Eddie, as I'm sure someone has told you by now, the NCAA tourney isn't a quadruple-elimination event. Your personal opinion of what you could do to Wake Forest the next three times you play them won't even buy you a pound of pork chops back in Fayetteville. So keep it to yourself, huh.

As for the ACC's questioned strength, how can you knock a conference that had three teams (North Carolina, Clemson and Wake Forest) ranked among the top 12 in the country until the last week of the regular season? N.C. State won the national championship just three years ago Ed. Maryland is perennially in the top ten. Duke, considered the weak sister of the league, just landed a kid naned Banks from West Philadelphia High School, who was the most highly-recruited teenager in the nation next to Albert King. And to top it all off, Virginia, the team everybody forgets about, seems to be able to beat them all.

So keep the sour grapes to yourself Eddie. You'll be a better man for it. A coach with any class, who has almost his entire squad coming back next season like you do, would let results do the talking for him. . .

URGENT NOTICE to Midland College President Al Langford and the school's Board of Trustees: If Larry Burgin isn't on the top of your list of candidates for the vacant MC tennis coaching position, then you're not really trying to get the best man available. . .

How long will it be before somebody is actually killed in a hockey brawl? The TV-movie last week, "The Deadliest Season," is all too true, I'm afraid. Fans and much of the press are glorifying the violence in the sport, and it makes you wonder for a moment, what's happening to us. . .

I bet 6-foot-5 U.S. volleyball star Flo Hymen would like to have a penny for every time someone has asked her: "How's the weather up there?". . .

The Can-Am Challenge motor racing series, featuring the team of Brian Redman, Carl Haas and Midland's Jim Hall, has settled on their opening day race. It will be in Mosport on June 12. The Sports Car Club of America will co-sanction the series along with the Canadian Automobile Sport Clubs. . .

The real antagonist on the New York Yankees this season isn't going to be Reggie Jackson, but Mickey Rivers. Training camp was no sooner underway than Rivers was crying to be traded back to California because the Yankee organization was picking on him. He's quieted down for the time being, but it's not going to last. . . With ABC and CBS buying the television rights to fighters like Sugar Ray Leonard, Leon Spinks, and Howard Davis, it's got to make you think. With the money and publicity they're sinking into their "watch them rise to the top" investment, how far would they go to insure victory. All three will be legitimate title contenders in a couple of years, but would the network gamble millions of dollars on anything but a sure thing?

IT SHOULDN'T surprise anyone that the Philadelphia 76ers aren't winning everything in sight. A team full of superstars isn't necessarily a winning combination on a basketball court. Five great shooters aren't going to do you a helluva lot of good if you don't have a playmaker and rebounders. The team that's going to win the NBA championship will be the one featuring five players who can play together as a cohesive unit. That doesn't mean the team with the five best individuals. Who's my money on? Boston, if Charlie Scott is back by playoff time.

Quote for the day: When you call on a thoroughbred, he gives you every ounce of strength and heart and courage in him. When you call on a jackass, he just kicks and brays.

Rankin seeks double money

RANCHO SANTE FE, Calif. (AP) — Judy Rankin will be trying to nearly double her earnings for the season in the 72-hole Kathryn Crosby Ladies PGA golf tournament that began today.

Mrs. Rankin, winner of $150,000 last year, already has earned $27,540 in three tournaments this season. The winner of the Crosby collects $22,500.

The Crosby is being played over the par-72, 6,400-yard Whispering Palms Country Club course that last was the site of an LPGA event in 1975.

With the second-largest purse of the season, the Crosby has attracted 109 professionals, the largest field of any LPGA tournament in history except for the U.S. Women's Open. Six amateurs also are entered.

Mrs. Rankin also holds a big lead over among the women pros in per-round average this year. In three touranments, she is averaging 69.8 stroks per round. Sandra Palmer is next at 74.7.

Rebels, Bulldogs travel for Queen City Relays

DEL RIO—Midland Lee and Midland High will face another strong field here Friday night as the eighth annual Queen City Relays unfolds in a one-day format.

San Angelo, San Marcus, Eagle Pass, Seguin, Laredo Martin and Kerrville will join the two local schools in Division I. Big Lake, Ozona, Sonora and Bracketville make up Division II and junior varsity squads from both divisions will run in Division III.

Preliminaries will begin at 1 p.m. Friday with all finals set for 6:30 p.m.

One of the feature races of the day will be the 880-yard dash where six of the top 10 in West Texas will square off.

SAN ANGELO'S Ed Bruning heads the field with a 1:58.3, but Lee's David Skinner, who is improving weekly, owns a 2:00.4 and Midland High's Chuck Stump has a 2:00.9. Arthur Pertile of Lee has a 2:01.3 while Lee's Charles Hamilton has a 2:03.0.

Bruning, Skinner, Stump and Pertile set those marks last week in the Tall City Relays in one of the best 880 fields assembled this year. San Angelo's Kirk Calhoun has a 2:02.1 to add to the field.

The mile run features five of the top 12 West Texas runners, but Midland High's Robert Wilson, with a 4:25.3 this year, heads the list. The Bulldogs will be aided by Pat Darden, who has a 4:35.5. San Angelo's Lon Albert, Tony Pena and Arthur Rangel range from 4:28.3 to 4:34.5.

ANOTHER BIG matchup will come in the 100 and 220 dashes where Midland High's Alvin Price goes against San Angelo's Roy Young. Young defeated Price in both races last week, but Price's 22.1 in the 220 is the best time recorded in West Texas this year. Price has not won a 220 this year, however, since his best mark came in the prelims at Pecos three weeks ago. He has won one 100 race with a 9.8.

Lee's Jamie Berry ranks ninth in the 440 this year in West Texas after a 52.0 last week, but San Angelo's Stanley Slate and Kerrville's Gary Kaiser own better times, and both will be in the 440 field.

Midlanders continue to improve in the shot put. Three locals went over 50-feet for the first time last week, and two moved into the top 10 West Texas list.

LEE'S JEFF McCowan, a sophomore, had a 53-9 last week for a second place and Midland High's Brian Booker managed a 52-1 for a third place. McCowan rates fifth in West Texas while Booker stands seventh. San Angelo's Harold Ledet, however, will be in the meet, and he owns a 62-2½ toss to rank first.

Lee's Rooney Taylor, another sophomore, had a 50-3¼ in the junior varsity division for his first win last week. Midland High's Frank Driskill also has a toss of 50-8 this year. Neither are ranked, however.

Tiant makes mound debut

By The Associated Press

Luis Tiant, signed and sealed, is starting to deliver.

The veteran right-hander, still touchy about his age and still insisting he is only 36, made a belated spring training debut Wednesday and hurled two innings as the Boston Red Sox bowed to the Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

IT WAS only Tiant's sixth day in camp following a contract hassle, and he threw 30 pitches, allowing one run and two hits— singles by Mark Belanger and Ken Singleton plus Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly—while walking one and striking out two.

"I felt good," Tiant said. "I'm just trying to get into shape to pitch nine innings. I'm not going to kill myself trying to get hitters out here. I know what I have to do. I don't have to impress the manager. I don't have to prove myself. I just have to get into shape.

"Last year I only pitched 20 innings down here but I was ready when the season started. I think I'll be ready when the season starts this year, too."

But someone brought up the touchy subject of Tiant's age. The cagey right-hander is so sensitive about it that two years ago, when he was 34, he threatened to punch out a sportswriter who referred to him as "Boston's 2,000-year-old man." The line was meant as a compliment.

"What has age got to do with my pitching?" Tiant snapped. "It doesn't make any difference how old I am as long as I can get batters out."

BEFORE TAKING the mound, Tiant finally signed his newly extended contract. Terms were not disclosed but it was believed his $180,000-per-year contract was extended through 1978, with an option for 1979.

After Tiant left the game, Tom House allowed two decisive runs on a single by Belanger, a double by Singleton and a single by Murray.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers, who hope to challenge Cincinnati's world champions in the National Leaue West, scored twice in the first inning on RBI hits by Reggie Smith and Rick Monday and nipped the Reds 2-1 behind the sevenhit pitching of Doug Rau and Charlie Hough.

The American League West has been conceded ... to none other than the Oakland A's ... by none other than owner Charles O. Finley.

"We're going to have a very representative team and we should win our division title," Finley said. "We've got a good pitching staff and I'll guarantee you that before the season begins we'll have an even better team than we have now."

THE A's, however, were not listening. They dropped a 9-8 decision to the Chicago Cubs, who rallied for three runs in the ninth inning on Gene Clines' triple, an error, Joe Wallis' single and Dave Rosello's tworun double.

The San Diego Padres hammered three Seattle pitchers for 20 hits, including five triples, and needed all of them to beat the Mariners 17-15.

The Milwaukee Brewers outhomered California 6-5—Gorman Thomas hit a pair—and edged the Angels 10-9. Steve Brye, recently purchased from the Minnesota Twins, homered and doubled.

The Twins could have used some of Brye's hitting. They bowed to the Montreal Expos 4- 1 as Tony Perez drove in two runs with a single and double.

THE CLEVELAND Indians suffered a pair of losses. They will not mind the 9-5 exhibition setback to the San Francisco Giants, but outfielder John Grubb suffered torn ligaments and a dislocated knee in batting practice and may be lost for three months.

The Atlanta Braves also suffered two losses, but neither was costly. John Ellis tied the game with his second home run and Tom Grieve followed with the winner as the Texas Rangers beat one squad of Braves 9-8. Another group of Atlantans dropped a 10-inning 5-4 decision to the Houston Astros.

HOUSTON STAR Cesar Cedeno suffered a torn ligament in the ring finger of his left hand when he fell on it while trying to escape a high inside pitch during batting practice. He might have to go on the disabled list.

The St. Louis Cardinals unleashed an 18-hit attack and pounded the New York Mets 8- 1, Brian Downing drove in five runs as the Chicago White Sox unloaded 18 hits and drubbed the Toronto Blue Jays 14-4 and Jason Thompson's two-run single highlighted a three-run eighth inning rally as the Detroit Tigers edged the Kansas City Royals 3-2.

Graig Nettles' three-run homer capped a six-run ninth inning that enabled the New York Yankees to beat the University of Florida 10-9, and Tim McCarver had three hits as Philadelphia turned back its Oklahoma City farm club 4-2 although Jim Kaat of the Phillies pitched for the minor league team.

Stockton rips Harold Solomon

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — Dick Stockton defeated Harold Solomon 6-3, 6-4 Wednesday in the $100,000 World Championship Tennis tournament here, which runs through Sunday.

Stockton had his serve on target, kept Solomon on the defensive and won the match in less than one hour.

Earlier in the evening Vijay Amritraj of India upset Manuel Orantes of Spain 1-6, 7-6, 6-2. Orantes looked unbeatable in the first set but, after Amritraj pulled out the second-set tiebreaker, the Spaniard succumbed easily in the third.

"This is a great win for me, especially after a sluggish first set," said Amritraj. "I didn't build up a full head of steam until the second set. He is not the Orantes of two years ago, but you can't make too many mistakes with him."

Also Wednesday night, Italian Corrado Barazzutti defeated Ray Moore of South Africa 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 in a generally dull match.

Rangers to host track meet

GREENWOOD—Greenwood High School will host a Girls Invitational Track Meet here Friday.

The Greenwood girls are fresh off of a victory in the Borden County Relays last week when Cindy Kay Kimbrow led the way with 42 points.

Miss Kinbrow took firsts in the 100-yard dash, long jump and triple jump, and was second in the 440-yard dash. She also anchored a second place mile relay team. Cindy Brewer won the shot put and discus while Donna Pyle had a third in the 80-yard hurdles.

Joining Greenwood in the 3:30 p.m. finals will be Dawson County, Grady, Paint Rock, Meadow, Garden City, Forsan, Eldorado, Coahoma, Sterling City, Denver City, Rankin, Spur, Sundown, Ira, Ozona and Alpine.

Roger Calvin takes lead

SINGAPORE (AP) — Roger Calvin of the United States and Taiwan's Hsu Chi-San shared the lead with four-under-par 67s today in the opening round of the Singapore Open Golf Championship.

Baylor advances in AIAW

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Immaculata, Baylor, Louisiana State, Mississippi College, Kansas State, Tennessee, Southern Connecticut and defending champion Delta State took first-round victories in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) basketball tournament Wednesday.

Immaculata rallied for an 8373 victory over Tennessee Tech; Baylor eliminated St. Joseph's, Pa., 85-75; Louisiana State defeated Western Washington 91-53; Mississippi College ousted California StateFullerton 97-84; Kansas State bombed Utah 70-32; Tennessee defeated Michigan State 76-62; Southern Connecticut topped Missouri 80-64 and Delta State routed host Minnesota 87-43.

In Thursday's quarterfinals, Delta State plays Southern Connecticut, Tennessee meets Kansas State, LSU plays Baylor and Mississippi College meets Immaculata.

5-4A golf comes to Hogan

District 5-4A golfers move into Midland for 18 holes at Hogan Park, the second of five rounds to determine the champion.

Midland Lee holds a four-stroke edge over San Angelo after last week's opening round at Big Spring. The Rebels, led by Steve Wise's 64, shot a team score of 293.

Joe Terrazas shot a 72 to lead San Angelo to its 297 while Midland and Abilene Cooper are tied for third place with 302s.

Mike Mahan of Midland and Midland Lee's Billy Sitton are tied for third place in medal competition with 73 while Midland's Russ Brown is at 74.

The four low scores from each five-man team serve as the team total. In individual medal play, each golfer may deduct his high round and his low four rounds during the five-week meet serves as his total.

Starting for Lee's first unit Friday will be Wise, Sitton with Kyle Rowland, Wendell Fallin, Buddy Gieb and Jeff Lott candidates for the other three spots.

For Midland, it will be Mike Mahan, Brown, Shayne Berry, Kelly Eng and Paul Littlefield, although Richard Minnix, who had a 74, and Tommy Walker, 78, might bump starters.

COM sends 22 tankers to TAGS Dallas meet

The City of Midland Swim Team left early this morning for Dallas, where they will compete in the state short course championships (TAGS).

Twenty-two members of the COM squad will make the trip, and many of them will be trying to establish qualifying times for the Junior National Swimmimg Meet, which will also be in Dallas, on April 15.

At the junior nationals, Wendy Williams will swim in the 200-freestyle and 200-backstroke. Curt Buthman made his qualifying time in the 100-backstroke last weekend at the high school championships in Austin.

A girls relay team led by Williams, Bridgette Coon, Gretchen Koch and Heather Dunbar are only 11/100 of a second off the junior national qualifying time.

Trevino to skip Masters

By The Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino is skipping the Masters again— and this time it's not his idea.

"He did this on doctor's orders," a spokesman for Trevino's office in El Paso, Tex., said Wednesday, confirming a report by The Associated Press that the flamboyant Trevino— deeply troubled by a bad back—had withdrawn from the presitgious Masters, the first of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

IN EARLIER years, Trevino had created a national furor by boycotting the esteemed Masters because, he said at the time, the Augusta National Golf Club course was not suited to his game.

Since winning the PGA national championship in 1974, however, Trevino has called a Masters title one of the prime goals of his career.

"I've got a chance at becoming only the fifth man in history to win all the Big Four," he said. "I'd be foolish not to try to make it. After all, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player make pretty good company."

They are the only players ever to win all four major titles—the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA. Trevino, one of the game's premier players and among the most popular players golf has ever known, won the U.S. Open in 1968 and 1971 and the British Open in 1971 and 1972.

HIS AILING back forced him out of a shot at the Masters, April 7-10 in Augusta, Ga. this year.

"Following doctor's orders, Mr. Trevino is at home (in Santa Teresa, N.M.) resting and taking whirlpool treatments," his office said. "He is not available for comment."

His office confirmed, however, that Trevino sent a telegram to Masters officials last Friday withdrawing from the tournament.

"Mr. Trevino plans to compete next in the Tournament of Champions," in Carlsbad, Calif., the week following the Masters, his office said.

TREVINO UNDERWENT major back surgery last year and did not play until the Jackie Gleason-Iverrary Classic Feb. 24.

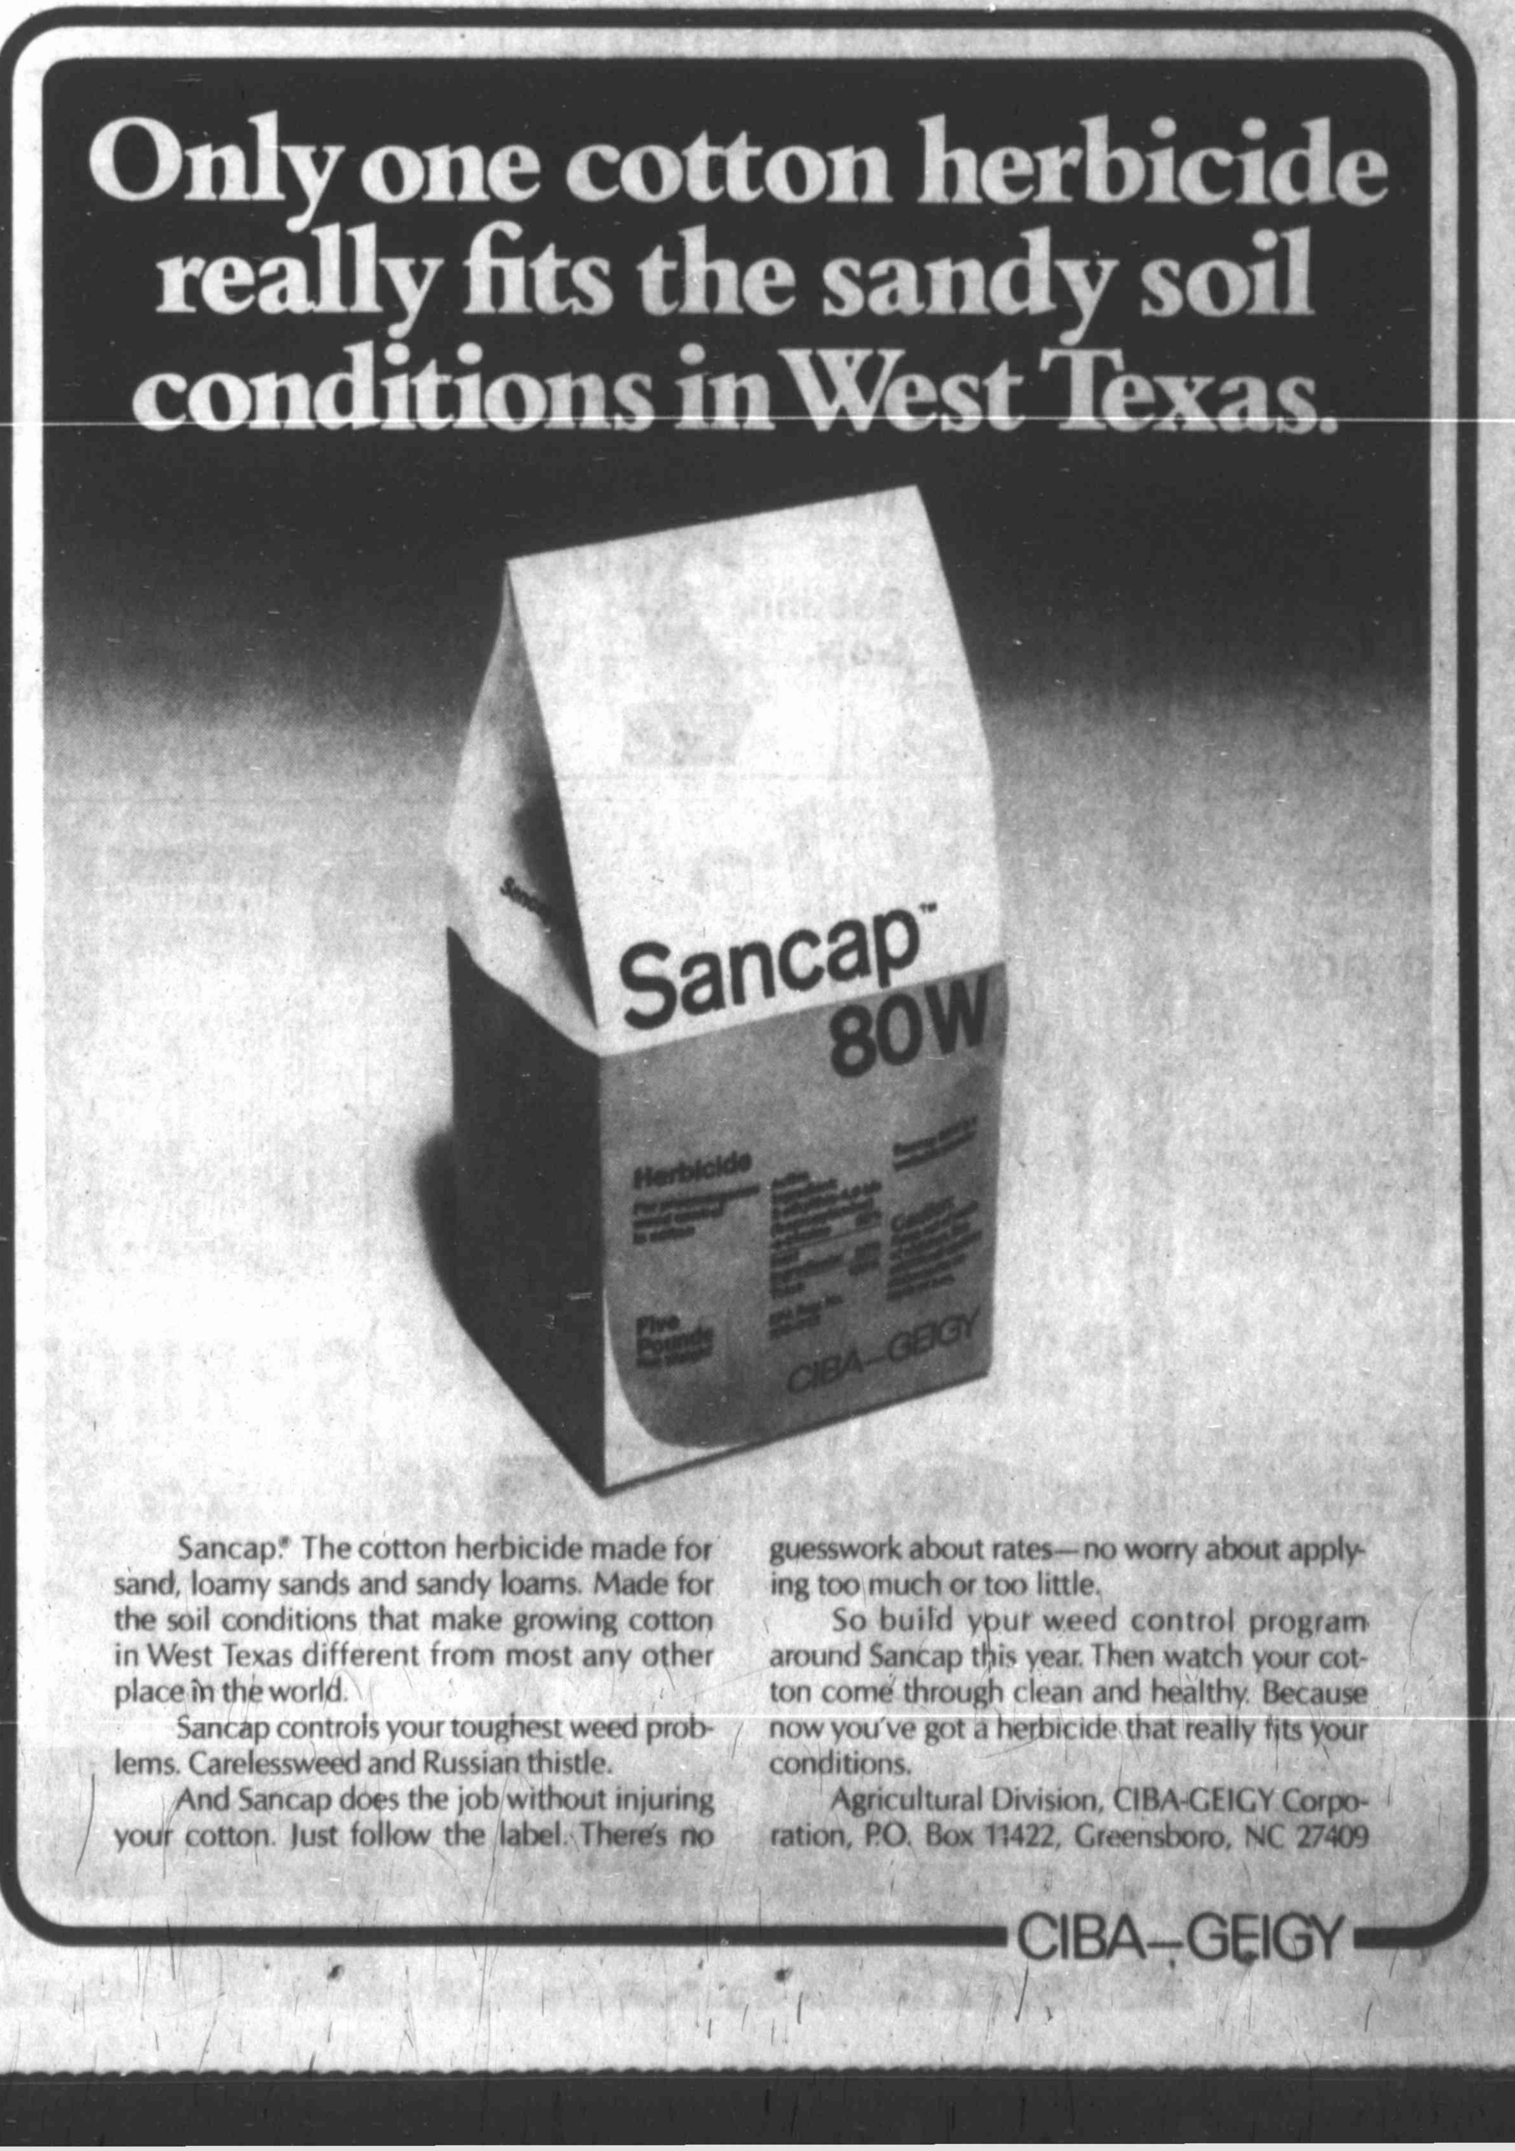
Lee's Rebels face Plainsmen

LUBBOCK — The Robert E. Lee Rebels face the Monterey Plainsmen for the third time today and Coach Ernie Johnson hopes the third one is a charm.

Monterey beat Lee, 11-2 in the Tournament of Champions and blanked the Rebs, 6-0, last week in Midland.

Johnson plans to call upon either Doug Schmidt or Pat Moore to face the Plainsmen, who are 10-3 on the year after losing to Class AAA Snyder Tuesday, 3-0.

First pitch is set for 4 p.m. at Lowery Field. Then Lee returns home Saturday for a date with the San Angelo Bobcats.



Only one cotton herbicide really fits the sandy soil conditions in West Texas.

Sancap® The cotton herbicide made for sand, loamy sands and sandy loams. Made for the soil conditions that make growing cotton in West Texas different from most any other place in the world.

Sancap controls your toughest weed problems. Carelessweed and Russian thistle.

And Sancap does the job without injuring your cotton. Just follow the label. There's no guesswork about rates—no worry about applying too much or too little.

So build your weed control program around Sancap this year. Then watch your cotton come through clean and healthy. Because now you've got a herbicide that really fits your conditions.

Davis in pin lead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Veteran Dave Davis of Atlanta, Ga., holds a 127-pin lead after three rounds of the $100,000 Bowling Proprietors Association of America U.S. Open here.

Davis has led the competition since the first round of this, the only major championship he has failed to win.

His third-round games of 214, 233, 210, 235, 228, 188, 264 and 235 combined for a block of 1,811 and a 226 average.

Tennis merger set

PARIS (AP) — Men's international tennis is set to gather its rangy arms and legs into the single body of the Grand Prix series of tournaments and its new $10 million super circuit for 1978.

The Men's International Professional Tennis Council announced Wednesday it had ended six years of strife and that the World Championship of Tennis would incorporate into the Grand Prix.

The agreement provides for $3 million more in prize money than this year and provides a central authority for scheduling various competitions.

WCT agreed to drop its system of contracts with players. The contracts of Jimmy Connors of the United States and Adriano Panatta of Italy expire at the end of this year. But Ilie Nastase of Romania will continue to be paid until the end of his contract which lasts four more years.

Very odd name attached to even stranger body

By KENNETH DENLINGER
The Washington Post

Everyone begins somewhere. Naismith started with an idea; Maryland restarted with Len Elmore and Tom McMillen. And the latest collection of letters to make a significant impact on college basketball, UNCC, was fueled initially by an odd name attached to an even stranger body.

"Robert Blue," said the man mainly responsible for North Carolina-Charlotte being in the NCAA finals this week. "He was 6-6 1-2 and weighed 149 pounds, and no one but us thought he could play a lick until we had him. He left us at 149, too, but also with every scoring record in the book."

UNDERSTANDABLY, Bill Foster cannot avoid an occasional "us" when discussing UNCC. Even though he has been head coach at Clemson for two years, he recruited nearly every player who lifted UNCC to prominence, including four of the five starters this season.

"When we first got there seven years ago," said Foster, "we had to get us a game plan, because there was no gym, no players, no anything except we were going Division 1 — right away. What we decided to do was not miss anyone in the state."

At first glance, even that would seem an impossible way to win what with so many fine basketball schools already so close to Charlotte, among them North Carolina and N.C. State, Duke and Wake Forest and Lefty Driesell's old power just down the pike, Davidson.

EXCEPT THAT nearly all of the above once did nearly all their recruiting out of state. Even this season, State had only two native sons on its roster and Duke's best players were from Connecticut and New Jersey. Only such as Phil Ford, Walter Davis and Rod Griffin got so much as a wink from the ACC snoots.

Which meant that while Davis was being wooed by Carolina, his nephew, Lew Massey, was unnoticed by nearly all but the Charlotte hustlers. And while most scouts were watching Ford score 22 points during a high-school all-star game, Foster noticed the other guard, Jeff Gruber, score 23 and signed him. He is the 49ers' sixth man.

The point guard for UNCC against Marquette Saturday in Atlanta, Melvin Watkins, was a 6-3 center in high school who did the recruiting bit in reverse; he called Foster.

"Shows you how smart we were," Foster said. "We had to have a meeting before we took him."

In fact, every UNCC starter, including the other guard, freshman Chad Kinch, and the small forward, Kevin King, was a center in high school. Kinch, recruited by the current coach, Lee Rose, averaged 18 rebounds per game.

If all the UNCC teams, from Foster through Rose, have been dotted with players most schools overlooked, the all-time sleeper is the center who remained a center, Cedric (Cornbread) Maxwell. Blue gave UNCC its early lift and Maxwell sent it soaring, to the NIT final last year and the NCAA Final Four this year.

Maxwell was unnoticed early, and by the time he sprouted three inches between his junior and senior high school years, Foster still was the only coach to keep regular company. Later, when the major factories snapped to attention, pens and scholarships in hand.

HE SAID no to everyone but Foster.

"This team's idea of a good time in the summer is to pile into a VW and shoot off for a pickup game somewhere," said Foster. "The game might be in Columbia, S.C., or Atlanta but they didn't mind. They'd just pile in and go, and they drove back when the game was over.

"They thought that was a helluva night."

When UNCC began to flex its muscles, Foster and his staff began to slip out of North Carolina for players. They saw King play at least 20 times in his hometown of Lakewood, N.J. They tried to coax Brian Magid to Charlotte, but Maryland was more persuasive.

"Magid might well be averaging 20 a game for a team in the final four," said a Foster aide at the time. "But he was caught up with 'image,' like a lot of other kids who said no to us over the years."

Namath, Rams agree

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath, the flamboyant and controversial quarterback of the New York Jets for the past 12 years, has agreed to play for the Los Angeles Rams, the New York Times reported today.

The newspaper said the injury prone Namath, who led thee Jets to the National Football League's Super Bowl championship in 1969 in a stunning upset over the Baltimore Colts, agreed to join the Rams Wednesday night.

However, the deal reportedly may take a while to complete.

Namath's lawyer, Jim Walsh, told the Times from California that he would talk to the Jets today and tell them: "We'll go along with whatever deal the Jets and Rams can make."

When the clubs work out a trade, the Rams would have 30 days to sign Namath, who earned $450,000 last season. Namath was in the option year of a two-year contract. If the Jets and Rams could not conclude the deal, then New York would have had the choice of picking up Namath's option year. If they did, they would have had to pay him $495,000 for the 1977 season under the terms of the NFL's new player agreeement.

Jets General Manager Al Ward said he expected to begin talks with the Rams next Monday when the NFL meeting opens in Phoenix, according to the Times.

Namath's contract is scheduled for renewal with the Jets April 1 and if a deal is not completed by that date, New York would be in the position of not being able to get anything of value for Namath.

The Times quoted Walsh as saying:

"They (the Rams) are asking Joe to take a substantial cut. It's difficult for me to make an argument with them about how he'll draw in Los Angeles, even though I know what he can do at the box office. But they're in the position of saying, 'Take it or leave it.' They're a very powerful organization."

The Rams announced a few days ago that any quarterback they hired would be paid $150,000 to $200,000. However, some insiders felt that Namath's salary would be higher.

"It used to hurt Joe to watch the Rams," Walsh told the Times, "and see how good they were and yet they were not able to go all the way. He used to tell me that if he were with them he might be able to do it."

The Rams have been in the playoffs four straight years but have never been to a Super Bowl. The Jets have been on the decline ever since Namath led them to their Super Bowl upset.

Besides Namath's Jets salary, he also has a solid base for commercial operations in New York. He was involved in a numbeer of advertising ventures and reportedly receives $250,000 annually from Fabergee for promoting men's cosmetics.

Walsh noted Namath's offthe-field business opportunities when he told the Times:

"Joe hasn't suddenly developed a fond love for LA. A lot of people think there are so many opportunities for him out here, that's why he'd come. But I'll tell you—they haven't moved Madison Avenue to LA.

Houston triumphs

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston has won the Les Bolstad golf tournament for the 14th straight time.

The Cougars finished the two day tournament Wednesday with a team total of 738, which was 41 strokes better than runner-up Texas Tech. Minnesota was third at 787.

Cedeno injured

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros outfielder Cesar Cedeno was to begin treatment today for a ligament tear on the ring finger of his left hand.

Cedeno suffered the injury Wednesday during batting practice in spring training camp at Cocoa, Fla.

Houston Astros General Manager said a decision on whether or not to place Cedeno on the disabled list will be determined after he is examined by team doctors. If he is placed on the disabled list he will be sidelined for at least 15 days.

People running to nowhere common African sight

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI — Like nearly 2 million other Africans, Stephen Kiwanuka is on the run to nowhere. He is uprooted and uncertain, a man on a journey that leads neither home nor to a place of his choosing.

Kiwanuka, a 30-year-old Ugandan college graduate, is testimony to Africa's unenviable record on human rights. One of every 130 African adults is a refugee in self-imposed exile from his homeland. Most are blacks who fled from black regimes to escape the terrors of war, tribal conflicts and political oppression.

There are, for instance, 50,000 living in refugee camps in Tanzania, and 5 to 10 a day cross the border from white-ruled South Africa to black-ruled Botswana. They melt into the anonymity of the cities, surviving on their wits.

On the streets of Nairobi, Kiwanuka passes other Ugandan refugees he has known for years with no nod of recognition. He tells no one he is a Ugandan. To publicize his origins would only invite expulsion from Kenya or, far worse, seizure by Ugandan undercover agents who roam the favorite haunts of refugees.

Kiwanuka, who drove across the border to Kenya four years ago under the pretense of visiting a brother, committed a sin in Uganda: he publicly sympathized with the 40,000 Asians that President Idi Amin kicked out of Uganda in 1972. By that small commission he could well have signed his death warrant.

"I can't say for sure that there's a file on me in Kampala," Kiwanuka said. "But if there is, I'm sure I'd be killed if I returned. Uganda is still my home. My family is there. Some day I want to go home — after the political situation changes."

Africa's refugee problem has steadily worsened since the independence period began 20 years ago, making new states of old colonial empires. Today it is the worst in the world and growing monthly — a troublesome portent for the 19 African nations that grant asylum to refugees from neighboring countries and whose own meager resources often already are overtaxed.

For instance, desperately poor Tanzania has given refuge to 120,000 Hutu tribesmen who escaped the tribal genocide in Burundi five years ago. More than 40,000 nomadic Arabs fled to Algeria when Morocco and Mauritania divided up the Spanish Sahara last year. An estimated 200,000 Ugandans have run from Amin's rule of terror, and in Equatorial Guinea many thousands of Bubis have fled the regime of President Francisco Macias Nguema, which has systematically executed in recent years about two-thirds of the country's legislators and nearly all its top civil servants. Tens of thousands of Sudanese have escaped to neighboring Ethiopia and about equal numbers of Ethiopians have escaped to the Sudan.

"In Africa," said a Nairobi-based refugee expert, "if you choose the wrong side you usually don't get the chance to make a second choice. To say that many independent governments are more repressive than the former colonial governments is a subjective judgment but I would grant you that Africa's record on human rights and its tolerance of opposing views is not very good."

Last September, Amnesty International charged that human rights are violated as a matter of course in many African countries. "Major political trials," it said, "are weighted heavily against the accused. Torture and the death sentence have all continued to be featured as aspects of government in many African states. Very few are without at least one of these evils."

A few weeks later, a Nigerian political leader, Obafemi Awolowo, said many black governments are far more brutal than the colonial governments they replaced.

"The apparent calm that pervades Africa today," he said, "has been induced by fear and suppressed resentment and not by any kind of voluntary acquiescence."

The repression and resultant flight of refugees is not surprising, authorities say. They point to Africa's political instability and its history of governmental nepotism.

Carter's rights statements turn eyes on Mexico

By MARLISE SIMONS
Special to The Washington Post

MEXICO CITY — President Carter's focus on human rights is serving to draw attention to the plight of hundreds of Mexicans held in military and civilian jails for political reasons.

A group of lawyers and a Committee of Former Political Prisoners and Relatives have begun to campaign for a presidential pardon or amnesty for 244 detainees, many of whom have spent up to six years in jail without being brought to trial.

At the same time lawyers of the state University of Guerrero have listed the names of 257 persons who have "disappeared" in Guerrero state during the past four years as the army combed the mountains for guerrilla leader Lucio Cabanas.

The missing persons, according to the lawyers, are either held incommunicado by police or military or have died in detention.

In an apparent move to forestall a major human-rights debate, the attorney general promised March 14 to drop political charges against 76 prisoners, 46 of whom have been detained without trial since 1971.

Mexican governments routinely deny the existence of political prisoners or the use of torture. By acting as a safe haven for persecuted South American leftists and through much-repeated leftist rhetoric, recent administrations have also carved out a progressive image that has lent credibility to these denials.

In a human-rights report to the U.S. Congress covering 82 countries, the State Department said that although Mexico has a "long tradition of civic freedom," human-rights violations such as "cruel and degrading treatment are not infrequent.."

"Arbitrary arrests and detentions occasionally occur of political oppositionists accused of illegal activities," it added.

In recent days five Latin American nations have rejected U.S. military aid to protest American assertions of human-rights violations. But Mexico receives no material military assistance, accepting only U.S. scholarships for military personnel.

The Mexican army, which has disbanded the country's most powerful leftist guerrilla groups, has always denied holding civilians for any length of time in its jails. Prisoners transferred last year from military to civilian jails, however, told reporters that they had seen as many as 300 detainees in Mexico City's military camp No. 1.

There is well-documented evidence that leftist activists — and often their relatives and friends — frequently are kidnaped by the authorities rather than arrested, are kept incommunicado, are severely tortured during interrogation and held without trial indefinitely.

During interviews, seven political prisoners said that torture by the military or by members of the Federal Security Directorate included intimidation, beatings, electric shocks, cigarette burns and being pushed under water until near suffocation.

Five Mexico City lawyers who defend political prisoners without fee — "We're dealing with political, not legal problems," one of them explained — say there are several categories of political prisoners:

—Extreme leftist guerrillas, accused of terrorist actions. There are said to be almost 100 persons jailed.

—Those charged with political crimes such as "conspiracy" and "incitement to rebellion." The lawyers say there are close to 100 such prisoners.

—Friends or relatives of the above, held for questioning or as moral pressure, for long periods.

"WAKE ME UP IF WE SHOULD LAND ON THE MOON... I WOULDN'T WANTA MISS IT"

Special officers battle to protect Bronx elderly

NEW YORK (AP) — Detectives Jerry Keegan and Donald Gaffney slide into their squad car, a retired yellow taxi cab that starts with a groan and runs with a death rattle.

There's no shotgun, no siren, no radio. They take a folder of crime reports, a book of mug shots, a fingerprinting kit and a camera.

They're part of the Bronx Senior Citizens Robbery Unit, a prototype police group that investigates crimes against people over 60 who are attacked in buildings.

They use the taxi because it's unobtrusive. It looks like a lot of other taxis in the Bronx. Many old people are embarrassed to be pinpointed as crime victims by the presence of a potice car. Some fear reprisal.

Keegan and Gaffney cruise the Grand Concourse, a stately canyon of buildings that has become a combat zone for old people and young muggers.

"See that park?" Gaffney asks. "In nice weather, the old people come out and sun themselves. You can see the kids watching them, circling at a distance, picking out their quarry.

"You can spot it right off. Like cats watching birds. It's unnatural for young people to be that interested in old folks."

Wearing civilian clothes, the two hefty veterans are on their way to interview crime victims. They also take pictures of injuries, useful evidence if the victim recovers by the time the case goes to trial.

In most other robbery cases, the victim is asked to go to a precinct to view suspects' pictures. But Keegan and Gaffney visit victims at their homes or hospital beds.

Individual attention is the key to their approach. After an attack, old people are especially distraught.

Perhaps they will have a cup of tea, look at a family album or listen to stories about life in gentler days.

Their unassigned duties include contacting relatives, stopping mail delivery, freezing bank accounts and taking victims to and from court.

"Most are so amazed anyone takes an interest," Keegan says. "We still get Christmas cards from people we've visited."

They enter the hospital room of 79-year-old Sarah (she doesn't want her real named used) whose spine was broken by three burglars she surprised in her apartment. She had just returned from buying birthday cards for her grandchildren.

Gaffney and Keegan take her fingerprints to compare with those they lifted in the apartment.

Lying there large, pale and fragile, she tells them she had two rolls of pennies in her little bank. Did they break her Japanese vases? Was there a tin of papers from her cedar chest?

She puts her inky fingerprinted hand to her forehead and cries.

"Oh, why don't they leave us alone? We don't have much longer to live. I've been in that apartment 40 years. But I can't go back now. But where can I go?

"When you're old, nobody wants you."

There's nothing much to say. They think they've got good prints of the attackers. "We think we'll get someone," says Gaffney.

With a small burst of fire, Sarah says: "They should do to them what they did to me." She sinks back.

On the way out, they shake their heads. Gaffney mentions his own mother. He wants her to move out of her neighborhood, but, like many old people, she's very independent.

Back in the taxi, Keegan says: "This beating will change that woman's life, all her patterns and her outlook. If it happened to us, we would get over it. She won't.

"And, you know," says Gaffney, "there's really nothing we can do for her. It's done. We just hope we catch someone and prevent this happening again."

They estimate that each person they arrest is responsible for 60 crimes against old people a year.

And, say the cops, most are remorseless. They go to court, get slapped on the wrists, get out and do it again.

The taxi rumbles past blocks of rubble and gutted tenements, blocks of housing developments.

"Look. It's no wonder," says Gaffney, pointing to one highrise. That one building housed eight kids who committed crimes against old people who later died of injuries.

They head toward another hospital, another old lady, Lottie. "I'd really like to get the guy who did this one," Keegan says.

Lottie, who also is afraid to have her real name in print, has no family, just a cousin in New Jersey. They're visiting her to say that her mail will be held at the post office — and to give her a little company.

She's 88, a tiny, outraged mass of bruises. Her nose is broken, her eyes are blackened, her neck is purple, her hands are wounded.

She was pushed into her apartment when she opened the door. She was beaten with her own walking cane. She was tied to a steam pipe.

"He kept beating me and asking, 'Where is the money? Where is the money?' I told him I didn't have any, just the $5 in my pockets, but he thought there was more," she said.

Lottie feels the bumps on her head and points to her nose. "Oh, why did he have to break my nose? Now I'll look like a prize fighter. I don't care how old I am, I don't want to have a broken nose.

"I hope you get him." She keeps pounding a fist into her palm. "I know I can identify him. Please get him."

Keegan and Gaffney leave, sickened, despite all the years of bruises and beatings they've seen.

They get back into the taxi. Another case. Another old lady. Another mugging.

Possible complicity in extortion to be investigated

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill has ordered an investigation into possible implication by unnamed Texas officials in a scheme in which a Kentucky man was forced to pay Mexican authorities $14,000 in exchange for the release of his son.

Hill, in Mexico City for a meeting with Mexican Atty. Gen. Oscar Flores Sanchez, said Wednesday Mexican authorities told him it was possible that officials on the Texas side of the Rio Grande may have been involved in the extortion plot. Federal authorities in Mexico have arrested 15 persons, including three high-ranking police officers, in connection with the plot.

Although he would not disclose anything about the information he received, Hill said he had telephoned his office in Austin to order an immediate investigation.

On another matter, Hill said Flores Sanchez has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting of border law enforcement officials to be held in San Diego, Calif., April 21.

The meeting is to deal with the drug smuggling problem and other law enforcement topics involving the two nations. Officials from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California also will attend the conference.

Flores Sanchez' office arrested three high-ranking Mexican police officers and 12 policemen last week after Perry Lee Greer of Lexington, Ky., paid $14,000 to get his son, Perry Lee Greer Jr., released from custody in Matamoros, just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

Mexican authorities returned the money to Greer, apologized for the actions of the accused extortionists and invited Greer to spend a week in Mexico at the expense of the Mexican government.

Young Greer, a student at Southwest Texas State University, said he was in Mexico on a "spring break" vacation at the time his automobile was stopped at a roadblock. He claimed Mexican officers planted some marijuana roots in the automobile, arrested him on charges of possession of marijuana and confiscated his automobile.

Hill said that Flores Sanchez told him Mexican authorities will crack down on corruption among Mexican officials.

"He said that where charges of corruption are substantiated, he will follow through with arrests and prosecutions. We assured him that the problem is not totally limited to Mexico, and we will have to be alert to that problem on our side of the border also," Hill said in an interview after a meeting with Flores Sanchez.

U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell will deliver the keynote address at the California conference on the drug smuggling problem.

In addition to the four states and Mexico, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Department of Justice, U.S. Customs and U.S. Border Patrol are also going to be represented at the meeting, where the No. 1 topic of discussion will be heroin smuggling from Mexico.

Hill said Texas has "become one of the central states in the distribution of Mexican heroin to the United States and we are very concerned about this."

The Texas attorney general had a 90-minute talk with Flores Sanchez. "We covered a number of items during the talks," Hill said. He added that the illicit drug problem predominated in the discussion.

"Mr. Florez Sanchez indicated he would favor very much attending the conference and would give us a final answer very soon," Hill said. "He said he will bring some of his staff people with him."

"He also suggested we invite state and federal proecures from the six northern Mexican border states. I will pass the suggestion on to the other American state attorneys and I'm sure those invitations will be issued," he added.

Hill said he did not discuss the illegal alien issue with the Mexican attorney general.

Supreme Court upholds discrimination claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a decision described as "important for Texas," the U.S. Supreme Court has overturned the conviction of a Mexican American by ruling that there was not enough representation by persons with Spanish surnames on the grand jury that indicted him.

In a 5-4 decision returned Wednesday, the court upheld the claim of Rodrigo Partida that there was "purposeful discrimination" in the make-up of the grand jury, even though Mexican Americans constitute a "governing majority" of Hidalgo County, Tex.

Partida was indicted in March 1972 for burglary of a private residence at night with intent to rape. He was convicted by a state jury and sentenced to eight years in prison.

His claim of discrimination stemmed from the fact that over a 10-year period the agerage percentage of Spanish surnames on grand juries was 39 per cent, in a county where 79 per cent of the population was Mexican American.

The state will now have to decide whether to seek a new indictment of Partida.

"It is going to be an important decision for Texas," said lawyer David Hall of Weslaco, who argued the case before the high court.

Hall, a lawyer with Texas Rural Legal Aid, said he believes the problem concerning grand jury makeup exists in several other areas of Texas. "The problem is not unique in the (Lower Rio Grande) Valley," Hall said.

Hall said that a bill introduced in the Texas Legislature to change the system to a random selection system "may reform the selection system."

The majority decision, written by Justice Harr of purposeful discrimination "faided to rebut the presumption of purposeful discrimination by competent testimony."

But Justice Lewis Powell, writing the dissent, said he felt a sense of unreality that justices in Washington were using inferences from statistics "that the Mexican Americans who control the levers of power in this remote border county are manipulating them to discriminate against themselves."

He noted that the state judge who appointed the jury commissioners and presided over the trial, and a federal district judge who had rejected Partida's claim, are both Mexican Americans and familiar with the community.

That dissent, in turn, brought comment from Justice Thurgood Marshall that Powell's "assumptions about human nature, plausible as they may sound, fly in the face of a great deal of social science theory and research."

Moore bill tentatively approved

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, usually gets what he wants in the Senate — even when senators don't know what he wants.

They tentatively approved a Moore bill Wednesday authorizing "recall, initiative and referendum" in cities with populations of 2,540 to 2,560.

Asked in debate what city the bill applied to, Moore said, "I don't know."

Asked which senatorial district the city was in, Moore said he did not know.

Several senators laughingly admitted after the bill had been approved on voice vote that they had no idea what city might be affected.

Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland, tried to amend the bill to make it apply to all cities, but the amendment failed, 8-20. "I'm merely trying to make your bill constitutional," said Clower.

The eight votes for the amendment indicated, however, that Moore did not have enough to suspend the rules and win final passage, and he did not try to do so.

Asked later if he didn't know what city the bill affected, Moore replied, "I honestly don't."

"I always tell the truth on the floor," Moore said, "because it always comes back to haunt you."

Moore seemed surprised that the 1970 census lists six Texas cities — Hooks, Kirby, Lacy Lakeview, Piney Point Village, Reese and San Saba — with popslations in the 2,540-2,560 bracket.

He said he sponsored the bill for a friend, and "I don't think I ought to divulge his name." The friend, he said, does not live in his district.

New Mexico counties report assortment of oil exploration

Chaves County, N.M., drew a wildcat site and a small oil strike was completed. Also, field extenders have been finished in Eddy and Lea counties.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 1-HR Riverbend-Federal has been scheduled as a 9,100-foot wildcat in Chaves, two miles southeast of Lake Arthur.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 33-15s-26e, five miles northwest of the Lake Arthur (Pennsylvanian) gas field.

Patoil Corp., Midland, No. 1 Cecil Johnson has been finaled as a small San Andres oil discovery in Chaves, seven miles north of Dexter.

The 24-hour potential test gauged four barrels of 27.5-gravity oil and one barrel of water, producing on the pump through perforations at 1,125-1,199 feet. Drilled to 1,277 feet, operator set 4½-inch casing at total depth.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 8-12s-26e.

EDDY ACTIVITY

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, has scheduled No. 2-CX Federal, a one-mile south outpost to the three-well Morrow gas area of the Richard Knob multipay field of Eddy.

It spots 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 7-18s-25e, six miles southwest of Artesia and it is slated for a bottom depth of 8,450 feet.

McClellan Oil Corp., Roswell, No. 4 Hinkle-Federal has been finaled as a second gas well and location southeast extension to that pay in the High Nitro (Premier) field of Eddy, nine miles west of Loco Hills.

It finaled natural from open hole at 2,356-2,358 feet for a calculated, absolute open flow of 2.211 million cubic feet of dry gas per day.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from north and 330 feet from east lines of section 9-16s-29e.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Roswell, has completed two extensions to Morrow gas production in the Little Box Canyon field of Eddy, about 27 miles southwest of Lake Wood.

No. 2 Box Canyon Unit, third well and location northwest extension, was completed to flow 9.97 million cubic feet of gas, plus 70 barrels of 51.7-gravity oil in 24 hours, through a ¾-inch choked and perforations at 8,110-8,238 feet.

It is 2,080 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 13-21s-21e.

No. 1-GS El Paso-Federal, fourth producer and 1¼-mile northwest extension, was finaled for 1.552 million cubic feet of gas per day, no condensate reported, on a ½-inch choke and through perforations at 6,080-6,090 feet.

(More oil Page 9B)

It is 1,930 feet from south and 2,080 feet from east lines of section 11-21s-21e, 22 miles southwest of Lake Wood.

Yates Petroleum also has completed No. 2-EP Stonewall-State, a Morrow link producer in an undesignated area of Eddy County, 10 miles north of Carlsbad.

It had a 24-hour preliminary flow of 24.5 million cubic feet of gas and 140 barrels of condensate, flowing through a ¾-inch choke and perforations at 11,060-11,070 feet. Gas-oil ratio was 102,900-1, and condensate gravity is 58 degrees.

Drilled to 11,500 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set at 11,458 feet, and is plugged back to 11,415 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 19-20s-28e, 10 miles north of Carlsbad.

LEA PROJECTS

The Kemnitz field of Lea gained its third Morrow gasser and a ¾-mile southeast extension to that pay with completion of Elk Oil Co., Roswell, No. 2 Northeast Kemnitz, 6½ miles north of Buckeye.

It flowed 800,000 cubic feet of gas per day on preliminary completion test, through an unreported choke and perforations at 13,240-13,386 feet.

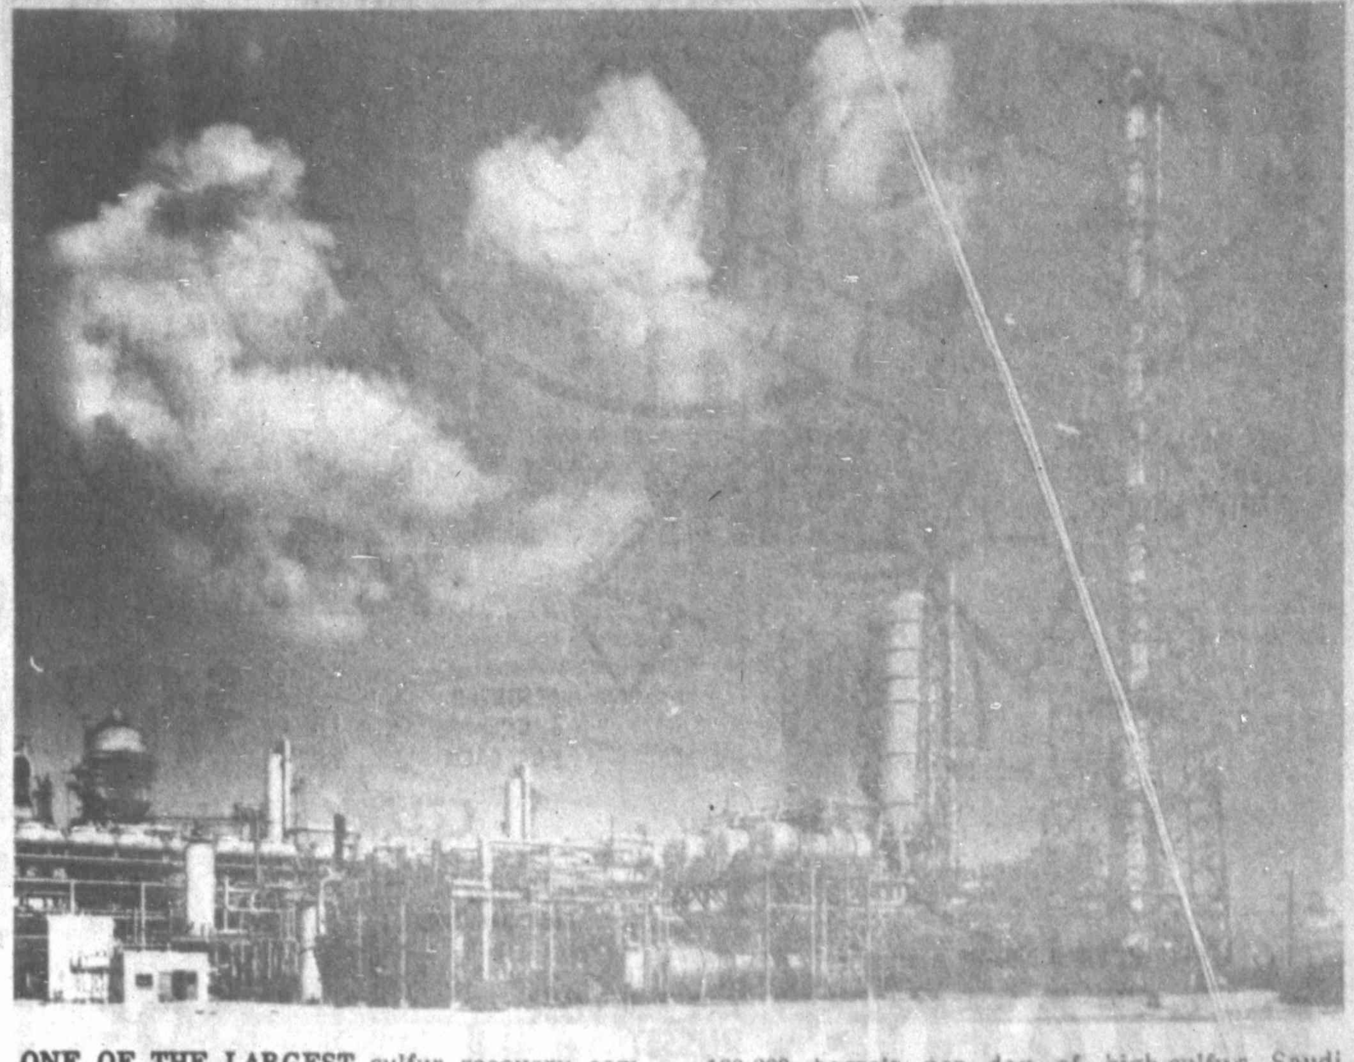
Drilled to 13,450 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom. It is reentry project, originally drilled by Exxon Co. as No. 2-BB State, and plugged and abandoned in July, 1960.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 22-16s-34e.

Wallen Production Co., Midland, No. 2 Wallen-Tonto, has been completed as a ⅝-mile south extension to the Tonto, South (Yates) oil pool of Lea.

It was finished on the swab for 68 barrels of 32-gravity oil in 24 hours, from open hole at 2,901-3,095 feet, after a 3,000-gallon acid treatment.

Wellsite is 1,650 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of section 30-19s-33e. It is about five miles northeast of Halfway.



ONE OF THE LARGEST sulfur recovery complexes in the country is now on stream at Amoco's 333,000-barrels-per-day refinery at Texas City. The equipment will recover elemental sulfur from 160,000 barrels per day of high-sulfur Saudi Arabian crude. The complex includes an amine treating unit, two 200-tons-per-day sulfur recovery units and a tail gas treating unit.

West Texas sectors gain wildcat sites

Wildcat sites have been staked in Upton and Runnels areas and a reentry is planned for a Sutton project. Outposts are slated for Schleicher and Irion fields.

Gulf Oil Corp. will drill No. 1-I W. C. Corbett Jr., et al, a 12,500-foot wildcat for tests of the Ellenburger in Upton, eight miles south of Rankin.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 5, block B-2, GC&SF survey, 2⅜ miles southeast of Ellenburger production in the depleted Corbett field.

RUNNELS ACTIVITY

Tex-Am Drilling, Inc., Abilene, has scheduled No. 2 Rufus Allen, a 4,450-foot prospector, one location northeast of its No. 1 Rufus Allen, Runnels Gardner lime prospect.

No. 2 Allen spots 2,400 feet from north and 2,100 feet from west lines of section 44, block 63, HT&B survey, seven miles southwest of Winters.

Operator has set 4½-inch casing at 4,382 feet, total depth, at No. 1 Allen, which recovered 1,000 feet of oil and 200 feet of oil-cut salt water on a drillstem test in the Gardner lime at 4,362-4,38 feet.

The Dorman, West pool of Runnels gained a southeast extension to Goen production with completion of E. B. Fletcher, Dallas, No. 1-A Gilbert Minzenmayer, 10 miles west of Winters.

Fourth Goen well for the field, it had a 24-hour flowing potential of 137 barrels of 45.4-gravity oil, and gas-oil ratio measuring 664-1. Production was through a 13-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,452-4,460 feet.

Wellsite is 6,036 feet south of the northwest corner of John L. Lynch survey 442, thence 3,150 feet east to location.

SCHLEICHER WORKOVER

Enserch Exploration, Inc., operating from Bridgeport, has filed application to reenter and plug back to wildcat depth of 2,407 feet for tests of an oil zone at No. 2-B M. H. Faulkner, former 2,800 Canyon oil well in the Fort Terrett Ranch field of Sutton, about 33 miles east of Sonora.

It originally was drilled by Lone Star Producing Co. (now Enserch) and completed in 1966, at total depth of 2,802 feet.

Location is 1,950 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 81, block A, GWT&P survey.

IRION STEPOUT

Union Texas Petroleum Corp., Operating from Midland, plans to drill No. 1-57 Farmar as a ⅜-mile southeast and northeast stepout to the four-well Rock-Pen (Canyon) oil pool of Irion, 5½ miles west of Mertzon.

Drillsite for the project, slated to 7,400 feet, is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 57, block 1, H&TC survey.

SCHLEICHER OUTPOST

Gulf Oil Corp. scheduled No. 1-A O. Dean, a 1½-mile northwest outpost to Canyon gas production and 2¼-mile northwest outpost to the Strawn gas opener in the Velrex, South field of Schleicher

Location is 467 feet from south and 2,500 feet from east lines of section 33, block TT, TCRR survey, 14 miles northwest of Eldorado. It is slated to 7,800 feet.

The Strawn pay opener, Gulf No. 1 W. E. DeLong, finaled in November, 1976 for a calculated, absolute open flow of 4.8 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 7,257-7,301 feet. It was a former Canyon and Pennsylvanian conglomerate well.

STERLING SITES

Western Petroleum, Inc., Dallas, has slated three stepouts to the current three-well Jameson, Southwest (Strawn) pool of Sterling.

All are in section 198, block 2, H&TC survey, 10 miles northeast of Sterling City, and are scheduled to 7,500 feet.

No. 1-B R. C. Bynum Estate, a ¾-mile east stepout is 2,180 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of the section.

No. 2 R. C. Bynum, 1,200 feet south, is 948 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of the section.

And No. 3 R. C. Bynun, one location southeast, is 2,184 feet from south and 1,667 feet from west lines.

Halbouty rips anti-oil Washington

ween the two anniversaries of Texas Independence and the Battle of San Jacinto — two dates Texans always remember and celebrate, I felt inspired to begin tonight by briefly referring to the document which declared Texas' independence from Mexico.

The Texas edict — proclaimed March 2, 1836 — 141 years ago — contains a statement on the nature of government, a list of grievances and a final declaration of independence. The Declaration began with a brief philosophical argument as to why the separation from Mexico was justified which was follwed by a list of grievances submitted to an impartial world.

The final grievance — which charted that the Mexican government continually exhibited every characteristic of a weak, corrupt, and tyrannical government hits hard at what we have in our national government today!

It is unfortunate that the strength of our nation today has drastically weakened in so many ways and there seems to be no end to the continual erosion of the people's freedoms.

The tyranny of government is everywhere. There are no mass executions of people but there is a mass execution of people's rights.

I don't remember a single national political campaign like the last one where the trivial was so important and the important was so trivial.

After the election results I reflected on the opening lines of Charles Dickens' Tale of Two Cities which began with: "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdon, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us."

The circumstances of which Dickens spoke are with us again today, as we are caught in the cross-currents of contradiction and confusion. The compass is hard to read and the nation's course is far from clear.

There is a strange mood in Washington, and nobody has any sense of certainty. The prevailing attitude is one of "wait and see," but we must ask how long we are to wait and wonder what we shall see.

President Carter boldly led the march down Pennsylvania Avenue, but nobody can yet tell where the parade is heading.

He indicated there would be a basic difference in the nation's political philosophies which could mean a drastic change in the principles of our democracy.

In his campaign, he offered much. Promises upon promises were made which are impossible to keep.

In his inaugural address, he specified little — saying: "We must adjust to changing times and still hold to unchanging principles." Words which offer nothing nor have any meaning.

He was elected by a broad cross-section of the people, but he seems to be determined that he shall be beholden to none.

Seldom has a candidate gone to greater lengths to reveal his inner personality, but I cannot recall a man in public life who remains more of an enigma.

For all of us, Republicans and Democrats alike — it is a time of reassurance and disquiet.

Our nation's problems are many and we must resolve to be equal to the task of betterment.

Let us review tonight just a few of those problems and how they are affecting the lives of every American.

There is no question that unequivocally there are situations, and conditions in this country of ours which are becoming increasingly crucial and of great concern to millions of Americans — and damn little has been done and is being done to rectify them.

In order to present the full spectrum of what is transpiring, I will use the petroleum industry as an example of the asinine restraints imposed on it by a self-serving, highly politically motivated, socialistic Congress — and its mis-deeds implemented by a gargantuan and hideous bureaucracy which, in turn, has drastically affected the economic and strategic welfare of this nation.

More important, by these negative actions, the Congress is precariously juggling and playing around with the very existence of civilization — as the final solution to our energy needs could be war and the probable destruction of mankind.

Before continuing with this presentation, I want to make it perfectly clear that when I malign Congress — which I certainly intend to do throughout this presentation — I am excluding those who are dedicated to the preservation of those ideals and principles which formed this country into a great nation, and, of course we all know who those senators and representaives are.

The exploitation, exploration, development, and the artful manipulation of energy has been an essential component of man's ability to survive and to develop society.

Today, we have reached a stage at which there is a serious shortage of power, a frantic search for new sources of energy and fuel, and a growing realization of the dangers inherent in the waste products of all currently feasible energy and power-producing systems.

To solve this critical shortage and the problems associated with it, has created challenges of the greatest magnitude.

I speak not of challenges for Texas — but of the monstrous challenge confronting the entire United States — Texas is but a cog in a wheel that is gradually, but surely, turning slower and slower for lack of grease to keep it steadily moving ahead. ,PD And herein lies the tragedy of a powerful nation which has miserably failed — through its regulatory processes — to adopt and implement a much needed workable, constructive and viable energy policy.

Not for the benefit of the petroleum industry, but for the benefit — and only for the benefit — of the people of this nation.

Indeed this one prerequise is a tremendous factor in determining our nation's destruction or continued survival.

So I ask, which shall it be?

I want to underline and strongly emphasize that the most important, the most demanding, the most serious, the most urgent domestic issue in this country is energy and the quicker the people as well as the legislative, judicial and executive branches of this government realize this, the better our future will be.

Our energy dilemma is being compounded by the growth of our energy needs which has precariously affected the economy of of the nation which is being gradually strangled because of the continuous growth in imports.

We are placed in this untenable position because it is an indisputable fact that energy is the life blood of industrialized nations. Without it, most other resources are impotent.

Our petroleum industry supplies approximately 80 per cent of this country's energy requirements. Therefore, when so much of our strength depends on this one industry,

Proposed wages hike disappoints AFL-CIO

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration recommended today that the minimum wage be increased 20 cents an hour as of July 1, 50 cents short of the proposal by the AFL-CIO.

The administration also proposed that the minimum wage be tied in the future to a set percentage of average manufacturing wages.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall told a House Labor Standards subcommittee that the Carter administration proposes increasing the $2.30 an hour minimum wage to $2.50 an hour as of July 1.

The administration also proposed that beginning in July 1978 and each year thereafter the minimum wage be set at 50 per cent of the average straight-time, hourly wages of manufacturing workers. This proposal is known as indexing.

The AFL-CIO had recommended a $3.00-an-hour minimum wage immediately upon enactment of the bill with indexing beginning January 1978 at 60 per cent of the average manufacturing worker's wage.

Labor lobbyists in the crowded hearing room appeared shocked by the Marshall proposals and one lobbyist for the garment workers remarked that "labor might have backed the wrong candidate," a reference to labor's support of President Carter.

An AFL-CIO spokesman said that when subcommittee chairman John Dent left the White House after a meeting with Carter Wednesday, he had the impression Carter had agreed to an indexing level of 55 per cent of the manufacturing wages. The labor spokesman said Carter's top economic adviser Charles Schultze "is the guy who shot it down."

Marshall said the administration's proposal would eliminate the wage differential between employes who have been covered in stages by the minimum wage act.

He said the administration had "carefully reviewed" the proposals by organized labor which closely parallel those recommended by Dent. He said the Carter administration "believes that in light of current economic conditions, a somewhat different approach is warranted at this time."

He said the administration would support the concept of indexing future minimum wage increases to "eliminate the irregular pattern which has characterized the history of minimum wage adjustments.

"It would enable the business community to more accurately anticipate and adjust its wage costs by providing a system for increasing the minimum wage at regularly published intervals," Marshall said.

Under the administration proposal based on its economic predictions, the minimum wage would be $2.50 on July 1, $2.73 on July of 1978 and $2.92 on July, 1979.

The AFL-CIO had testified earlier that the minimum wage would have to be $2.65 right now to cover the inflation that has reduced the value of the dollar since the tast series of staggered increases in the minimum wage began.

Babies going to gym class

LOS ANGELES (AP)—They have a long way to go to the age when they have to worry about their extra pounds, but some members of the diaper set are regularly exercising at a gym here.

The fitness classes for babies and children are being offered by Dave Rabb, who has worked with emotionally and physically handicapped children and developed exercises for young pediatric patients.

Babies from four months to nine months old, for example, go through a routine of stretching and limbering up with the help of a parent. They also work on individual challenges such as gripping the parent's finger with their thumbs and pulling themselves up to sitting positions or to their feet.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION
APPENDIX A STATEMENT OF NON-DISCRIMINATION

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., has filed with the Federal Government a Compliance Assurance, in which it assures the Rural Electrification Administration that it will comply fully with all requirements of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Rules and Regulations of the Department of Agriculture issued thereunder, to the end that no person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be otherwise subjected to discrimination in the conduct of its program and the operation of its facilities. Under this assurance, this organization is committed not to discriminate against any person on the grounds of race, color or national origin in its policies and practices relating to applications for service or any other policies and practices relating to treatment of beneficiaries and participants including rates, conditions and extension of service, use of any of its facilities, attendance at and participation in any meetings of beneficiaries and participants in the conduct of the operation of this organization.

Any person who believes himself, or any specific class of individuals, to be subjected by this organization to discrimination prohibited by Title VI of the Act and the Rules and regulations issued thereunder, may by himself or a representative, file with the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, or the Rural Electrification Administration, Washington, D.C. 20250, or this organization, or all, a written complaint. Such complaint must be filed not later than 180 days after the alleged discrimination, or by such later date to which the Secretary of Agriculture or the Rural Electrification Administration extends the time for filing. Identity of complainants will be kept confidential to the extent necessary to carry out the purposes of the Rules and Regulations.

Oilman rips anti-oil Washington

it would be assumed that the government of that nation would do whatever possible to encourage that particular industry to provide greater supplies so as to sustain that nation's strength, growth and welfare.

So, let's see what this country, the United States of America, has done and is doing, in this regard to the one industry which fits that category — the petroleum industry.

Our petroleum industry developed for this great nation the most efficient, the most economic oil and gas production, pipeline and distribution system on earth. The availability of these hydrocarbons enabled our industrial potential and free enterprise system to astound the world with our standard of living, our industrial productive capacities and our financial strength.

We were able to accomplish this because our oil and gas industries were formed and developed within an environment characterized by hard, tough competition which fits and works in a free economy. The industry attracted the free-spirited individualists, the risk takers that, unfortunately, are largely missing from the scene today.

And, wildcatting and creating new field development and techniques were adventures that challenged and excited the souls of men.

Therefore, it is simply unbelievable and amazing that there are some congressmen, federal economists, and other federal bureaucrats, who have become politically dedicated to tear down, rip asunder, and punish the oil and gas companies, large and small, majors and independents, that provided the energy foundation on which this country built itself into a nation once envied by all.

Because of these political upheavals, and the constant flow of regulations and controls which are causing the gradual strangulation of all our industrial might and, in turn, the gradual destruction of the free-enterprise system, the desires of the people have swung the other way.

At one time the spirit of America was a combined effort of achievement and of competition but it isn't any more. The goals for individuals have been rearranged.

Security is pursued, without regard for achievement — stifling controls are rampant in every sector of our economy — individuality is smothered and stereotyped and the profit incentive is scorned in favor of the will-of-the-wisp sociological scenarios.

Therefore, just when we need to open up the oil and gas business, stimulate them with incentives that will again draw the free-thinking individualists and risk-takers, and unchain our oil and gas companies so they can rebuild domestic oil and gas supplies, there is a movement by some who are part of the most ineffective congress in our history to do just the opposite.

When you stop and think about it it is incredible that the congress has not accomplished one thing nor passed any law since the 1973 embargo to increase the domestic reserve supply of petroleum by even one barrel of oil and one cubic foot of gas.

Instead this highly socialistic and politically dominated congress has given us counter-measures which have only produced more destructive restraints.

We should all pause and wonder what our country would be today if the current regulations and controls now imposed on all of our industries were placed in effect 50 years ago.

My answer to that is — we would not have had a petroleum industry, we would not have had the steel industry, nor the chemical industry, nor the transportation industry, nor the automobile industry, nor any other large industries. We would have lost World War II.

In fact, we would not have had the strength to enter it; and, we would have long ago turned into a strongly centralized, aggressively nationalistic government which is nothing more than fascism.

Therefore, just stop and think about what kind of a society we will have and what shape our nation will be in a decade from now, two decades from now or three decades from now if we continue to live and be dominated by more and more regulations and controls and the punitive legislation imposed upon us by those in congress who are determined to undermine the basic structural foundation of this county.

It is ironic that the congress had the audacity to publicly ask the people to participate energy-wise in Project Independence. Ever since that declaration, this same segment of our government has been working on, and, believe it or not, succeeding in establishing Project Dependence.

It is unbelievable that in six years there has been an eight-fold increase in imports. Simultaneously, there has been a 30 per cent decrease in our domestic production.

I never in my most fantastic and wildest dreams ever anticipated that this formidable nation of ours would depend on such a large percentage of crude oil from foreign sources, and the dependency is increasing at a suicidal rate.

At today's rate of crude imports, this nation's industrialized strength is virtually in the hands of foreign rulers who can, without warning, immediately create an economic disaster from which we could never recover.

Oil and gas reserves are dwindling much faster than anticipated and what new reserves we are finding are far short of even maintaining a status quo condition.

As long as the petroleum industry is imposed upon, harassed, and vilified by the anti-petroleum and anti-energy members of congress, we will never solve our energy problems, and those problems along with the OPEC countries will continue to haunt us until we are drowned in the stew which was formented in the chambers of congress and implemented in the halls of our horrendous bureaucracy.

In a 12-month period two separate acts of congress drained over 7.5 billion dollars per year from the petroleum industry and this tremendous back-to-back drain of vital capital funds, together with threats of greater tax penalties, has drastically affected our exploration efforts — fewer and fewer wildcat wells are being planned and drilled — consequently, less and less oil and gas are being discovered.

It is remarkable how the conspiracy to dominate the petroleum industry is gradually being manipulated in Washington.

For example, there is a movement by some congressmen to pass a legislative monstrosity which would break up the large oil companies into small segments which conforms to the old, but true, adage of "divide and conquer."

Destroying the largest oil companies would cause us to be more dependent on insecure foreign oil — it would be catastrophic to and a rip-off of the consumer by unwarranted price increases — it would add another two million to our unemployment rolls and it would virtually eliminate any chance for active defense of the OPEC cartel.

And we can all say goodbye forever to the free enterprise system.

It is really unbelievable that there is such a movement in the congress to destroy the domestic petroleum industry.

Of course, it is very obvious that if this happens to the petroleum companies it certainly would not be long before it is also imposed on all large companies, irrespective of the industries they represent.

It is unfortunate that the people of this country are victims of the same venomous tactics of some of those in congress who would solve the nation's energy problems by instigating more destructive tactics, more government agencies producing only "barrels" of paperwork and by approving and implementing the wang-brained theories and philosophies of anti-business professors and basket-case economists.

There will not be one additional barrel of oil or one cubic foot of gas developed from political theories, studies, investigations, economic forecasts, Capitol Hill discord, computer printouts, or massive statistical exercises which try to explain how in the hell we got in the shape we are in.

This nation is rich in energy potential. It is a national disgrace that we ever became dependent on foreign sources for as much as a barrel of oil.

I believe we still have many billion barrels of oil and trillons of cubic feet of gas yet to be found that will take us well into the next century, but they will forever remain trapped in the rocks until discovered by the drill.

These large reserves exist in areas which have not been thoroughly explored such as the eastern offshore, the Alaskan Gulf, the Alaskan North Slope, Lower Alaskan Cook Inlet, the outer offshore areas in the Gulf of Mexico, and California, and the onshore in the Western Frontier comprising the states of Arizona, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and northern California.

Irrespective of how it is analyzed, as we become less self-sufficient in energy, our military effectiveness and our confidence in our military capability to respond to the challenges correspondingly declines.

The most alarming news event of the last few years is the dramatic shift in the strategic balance of military power from the United States to the Soviet Union and even more alarming is the tremendous petroleum reserves that the Soviet Union has to back up its military strength.

This change in military and energy strength is definitely associated with the abuse in this country of our basic principles by those in the congress who are like the three stone monkeys — they don't want to see what's good for the nation — they don't want to hear what's right — and they don't speak up for the preservation of personal industrial freedoms.

They have ignored the fact that America is the only country in the world's history which was solely created and built on the exhilarating truthful principle of human freedom.

Yet, this principle is in great jeopardy and is in the slow but sure process of erosion.

Our country was built on the established principle of individual freedom, individual responsibility and the least possible government.

We no longer have a government "of the people, by the people and for the people" — what we do have is a government in regulation of the people.

The greatest danger to the nation is the preponderance of obstructions imposed on the big industries, which are gradually destroying the work force and economic viability of the country. Fortunately, the people are beginning to ask why is all of this happening.

They cannot understand why congress regulates the price of domestic oil at $7.66 per barrel but is willing for the American people to pay $15 a barrel for a continually increasing volume of imported oil.

They cannot understand why our energy reserves are perilously low and still dropping.

They cannot understand why there are some in congress who still want to further control gas and oil when it is so obvious that deregulation is the answer to discovering greater reserves.

So they ask, who is responsible?

Is it those congressmen who promoted excessive imports and kept the price of oil at a minimum?

Is it those congressmen who promoted and then failed to remedy the evil of artificial price controls on natural gas?

Is it those congressmen who have prevented the drilling of the wells offshore and the building of refineries and other facilities along the East Coast?

Is it those congressmen who paint themselves as political heroes to their constituents who were instrumental in passing and creating every conceivable type of obstacle and roadblock toward our own energy self-sufficiency?

Is it those congressmen who have used, and continue to use demoguery to rouse the emotions of the masses against the nuclear and petroleum industries?

Or is it those congressmen who vote on key issues by using misinformation supplied them by their uninformed and inexperienced staff without checking out the real facts from reliable sources?

Now take your choice.

The question my be asked, "What has happened to free enterprise?" or that question may be paraphrased into "What has happened to freedom?"

There is no question that today we have a political econometric system. We no longer live in a nation controlled by its strength — instead, we live in a political world where politics dominates, controls and tyrannizes.

For those of you who are not aware of it, I will inform you now that our country is moving towards complete Socialism faster than Russia did towards Communism.

I place the blame squarely on those in our lop-sided congress who have forgotten what made this nation strong and who for some reason have set out to destroy the very essence of the strength of this country.

Midlander's take part in exercise

NEW ORLEANS, LA. — Members of a Midland-based U.S. Marine Reserve unit are participating in a 16-day exercise near here which is the largest Marine Corps Reserve Unit mobilization exercise since the Korean conflict.

That Midland group — totaling 36 men — is a unit of the 6th Motor Transport Battalion.

On March 12, more than 3,000 regular and reserve Marines began the "Iron Hand" Mobilization Test conducted at Cat Island, off Gulfport, Miss.

"The reserves have become increasingly important to our national defense," Major General E. J. Miller, commanding general of the 4th Marine Division said.

"The 'total force' policy of the Department of Defense calls for selected reserve units to be prepared to be mobilized in the event of war or national emergency and, on short notice, join in the regular forces," Miller added.

Police hunting killer

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — More than 200 detectives today searched for a well-educated "trusted individual" who smothered an abducted boy only a few hours before his body was found in a roadside ditch.

Discovery of the body of 11- year-old Timothy King of Birmingham, who was abducted from a neighborhood drugstore March 16, marked the seventh child abuction-murder victim in the last 14 months in Oakland County.

Police believe the boy's killer also killed at least three of the other six children found slain in Detroit's northern suburbs.

Medical Examiner Dr. Werner Spitz of Wayne County fixed the time of death for the boy at between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tuesday. The body apparently was placed carefully, not thrown, by a Livonia roadside, and was discovered at 10:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Spitz said marks on the youth's body indicated his hands and feet had been bound at times during his apparent captivity. He said the boy had been sexually molested.

Spitz said the autopsy showed the boy was fed a fried chicken dinner shortly before his death and added that the boy's body was clean and may have been bathed recently.

Police attached some significance to the chicken dinner, for the boy's mother, Mrs. Marian King, wrote a letter to a newspaper Sunday in which she begged the killer to free her son so he could come home to a chicken meal.

Four of the seven slain children, including King, disappeared while walking to or from their homes. Another vanished after she ran away from home. A sixth disappeared while hitchhiking. The seventh was killed while babysitting for her sister.

A psychological profile and an artist's sketch of the suspect police seek show the kidnaper as a white male, 20 to 35 years old, well educated and intelligent. He is a white collar worker who lives or works in Oakland County.

Police say the suspect is attracted to children aged 10 to 12, sexually assaults the boys but not the girls and leaves his victims clean and in funeral positions on quiet roads.
