Troop withdrawal goals debated

The battleship USS New Jersey cruises just off the coast of Beirut on Thursday. The New Jersey is part of the sixth fleet task force supporting the U.S. Marine contingent in Lebanon.

Mideast 'mechanisms' on agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, in a race to prevent Lebanon from plunging once again into chaos, say they need to show progress toward a troop withdrawal within a month.

Going into today's second round of meetings here with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, officials said the two sides were trying to find "mechanisms" to make the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement work.

Both President Reagan and Gemayel reaffirmed their support for the agreement at meeting here Thursday. Gemayel planned to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other senior officials today.

U.S. and Lebanese negotiators avoided saying they were seeking to modify the agreement in order to make it more attractive to Syria, which has rejected it.

Syria won't withdraw, and Israel says it won't pull out until the Syrians do. Israel also has said it won't agree to change a word in the accord.

One official said the administration is planning a series of diplomatic and political moves aimed at encouraging Syria to withdraw while also maintaining a strong military posture by the multinational peacekeeping force and the Israeli occupation forces.

Another official told reporters at the White House that one aim of the conversations is to agree on "a series of steps" that the Lebanese government can undertake, with U.S. help, to build confidence and extend its authority in Lebanon, first in unoccupied territories and later in occupied territories.

Both officials insisted on anonymity.

The officials said Gemayel brought some ideas with him to Washington to discuss and that U.S. officials have ideas of their own. Gemayel is being encouraged to work more closely with the Israelis, who U.S. officials now believe can play a positive role in helping build a strong Lebanon.

"We would like the Lebanese to communicate more closely and more regularly with the Israelis than they have," said one of the officials.

He said some consideration has been given to urging the Israelis to undertake a unilateral partial withdrawal from part of the southern coast of Lebanon as a good-faith gesture that might entice Syria to cooperate.

But the official said the focus remains on "how can we get the Syrians to move, to get the Syrians to agree to a simultaneous withdrawal. That is our policy and that would be our preference."

The official at the White House, who holds a senior position, said there is a sense of urgency to achieving progress in getting foreign troops out of Lebanon, even though it is likely to still take some time.

But he said "the first step" has got to be found within the next month. The sense of urgency reflects the worry of American officials that Beirut is on the brink of chaos again. The September cease-fire is technically still holding, but violations grow worse almost daily.

One note of encouragement, the senior officials said is that Syria appears to have adopted "a new tone" toward the Gemayel government in that it now seems to recognize it as a legitimate government and will negotiate with it. But he said it was too early to say whether this would be translated into greater willingness by Syria to withdraw.

He also said Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations continue to argue that if Israel will pull out its troops, they can prevail on the Syrians to leave. But the official said that argument "just is not persuasive."

Area's growth detailed in draw hearing

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Growth within the city of Midland and surrounding areas has "been of considerable magnitude" since the oil boom of 1980, including areas south of the city near Monahans Draw, a city official said Thursday at the Texas Water Commission.

The TWC is conducting a hearing on the renewal of two waste discharge permits held by the City of Odessa. Effluent from the water reclamation plants is discharged into Monahan's Draw, which cuts through Midland County.

Monahan's Draw flows about five miles south of I-20, where residential development is occurring, said Richard Hennesey, director of planning and development for Midland. Although the subdivision plats are currently not within the city limits of Midland, Hennesey said the city has legal authority to annex the land.

"It's within territorial jurisdiction (of the city)," said Hennesey, who noted the "available water supply in this area would be groundwater."

Under questioning from attorneys representing Odessa, Hennesey said proposed sewage disposal facilities for the subdivisions "would be of a septic tank nature," adding such a determination "would be a matter of joint concern for the county engineer and the county commissioners court."

Hennesey said he did not know if Midland had any septic tank regulations, or if the city would have to expand its existing sewer system if the area was annexed and sewer service was provided. "We have not done any studies of that nature."

Other testimony Thursday was given by Ed Reed, chairman of the consulting firm of Ed L. Reed and Associates, Midland, who said he believed oil companies used "surfactants" to conduct recovery projects.

Traces of surfactants - chemicals used in detergents - have turned up in Monahan's Draw and nearby wells, which opponents to renewal of the Odessa permits say indicates effluent flow from the plants has affected the quality of the groundwater. Reed said he did not know if it is the normal practice of the oil industry to use surfactants in projects.

The hearing continues today at the TWC.

County's complaint called 'almost irrefutable'

Durward Wright

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners monitoring the Monahans Draw hearings in Austin this week said that Midland's case against Odessa discharging effluent waste water into the draw has been sound and "almost irrefutable."

"But I won't guarantee victory," Commissioner Durward Wright said today.

Wright and Commissioners Win Brown and C. Wallace "Wally" Craig have taken turns in monitoring the week-long hearings.

"I feel very positive about it, really," Brown said upon his return from Austin. Craig was still in the state capital today.

The city and county of Midland are contending that the treated sewage waters dumped into the draw are contaminating the underground water along the draw, are endangering public health, are breeding grounds for mosquitoes and are causing a lowering of property values in Midland County.

The draw cuts eastwardly through Midland County and south of the city.

Midland is asking the Texas Water Commission (TWC) not to renew Odessa's discharge permits and to order the neighboring city to find other means to dispose of the effluent.

Odessa claims its current method is safe and is not detrimental to the environment.

"We feel that our case has been made and is strong enough where it cannot be ignored," Wright said. "But what we fear, possibly, is the politics and the unknowns of the current board makeup and the degree of concern for the ecology."

Estes requests immunity in death case

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes is seeking immunity from prosecution for information in the mysterious 1961 death of a U.S. Agriculture Department official, The Abilene Reporter-News reported today.

Estes, a former friend and financial supporter of Lyndon Johnson, met in Abilene with U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples for two hours Thursday to discuss the unsolved case, the newspaper said.

Henry Marshall, 51, of Bryan, a U.S. Agriculture Department employee, was found dead June 3, 1961, on his ranch 13 miles northwest of Franklin in Robertson County. Marshall was found shot five times in the abdomen with a .22-caliber bolt-action rifle.

Marshall's death has been ruled a suicide, but Peoples said Marshall had been beaten and found to have a lethal amount of carbon monoxide in his body.

Marshall was described a year after his death by then Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman as a "key figure" in the investigation of Estes' affairs.

Estes, who was paroled to Abilene last month after spending four years in prison, was convicted of fraud in 1963 in connection with a multi-million dollar fertilizer tank scheme, but stayed out on appeal until 1965.

Man 'throws book' at judge

MIAMI (AP) — Bloodied and a bit shaken, Dade Circuit Judge Robert Newman couldn't conceal a certain grudging amusement.

Never before, he conceded Thursday, has the defendant thrown the book at the judge. At least in Newman's court.

A 25-year-old man arrested on shoplifting charges seemed in no position to pick a fight with the judge. But when Newman refused to release him without bond, Ray Williams, 6-foot-3 and 160 pounds and clutching three paperback Bibles, let the books fly.

One Bible hit Newman in the forehead, opening a gash above his eye.

But the judge will get the last word. Williams goes back in his courtroom today to face charges of battery and contempt.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain through Saturday for the Southeast and Pacific Northwest. Warm weather is expected across the southern states, while northern areas of the nation should be colder.

Cold, drizzly weekend possible

A cold and drizzly Friday night and Saturday morning are in store for Midlanders, but the chance of rain should drift off by Saturday afternoon.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight's 60 percent chance of rain will decrease to 20 percent Saturday morning.

Temperatures are expected to drop into the middle 30s tonight, climbing only into the lower 50s Saturday.

Winds should become northerly at 5-15 mph tonight through Saturday.

Thursday's high of 44 was 35 degrees cooler than 1950's record high of 79 degrees. The overnight low of 41 missed the record low of 20, set in 1979, by 21 degrees.

Temperatures fall to 11 below zero

By The Associated Press

Bitter temperatures dipped to 11 below zero in the Northern Plains early today as more snow socked the Northern Rockies and show showers drifted across the Great Lakes, the Ohio valley and into New England.

An inch of new snow covered Pocatello, Idaho, and Madison, Wis., during the six hours ending at 1 a.m. EST, and as much as 2 to 8 inches was predicted for the mountains of Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and down into Arizona and New Mexico, changing to rain later in the day in southern areas.

Arafat seeks U.N. supervision

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's Moslem sector shut down today in a general strike to protest the assassination of Lebanon's top Druse religious judge, and Yassar Arafat said he would evacuate his PLO fighters from Tripoli if U.N. supervision was arranged.

Arafat, who is under seige by Syrian-backed Palestinian rebels, said he was willing to leave northern Lebanon with his loyalist guerrillas aboard ships provided by the United Nations. There was no immediate word on how the rebels, who want to oust him as Palestine Liberation Organization chairman, would respond.

In predominantly Moslem west Beirut, schools, businesses, and restaurants were closed today and the state radio canceled regular programs to broadcast verses from the Koran, Islam's holy book, to mourn the assassination Thursday of Druse Sheikh Halim Takieddine, a political moderate.

The killing disrupted efforts to arrange for the reopening of Beirut's international airport, bombarded Wednesday and closed since then. Leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt's anti-government militia claimed responsibility for the shelling and vowed to keep the airport closed until the Sept. 26 civil war cease-fire is stabilized.

In Washington, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel — who is conferring with U.S. officials — called Takieddine's assassination an "ugly crime" and said it was an attempt to disrupt efforts to bring about a national consensus in his divided nation.

A lone assassin shot the 60-year-old Takieddine in the head with a pistol at the judge's house in west Beirut's Sanayea neighborhood, prompting the army to impose a dusk-to-dawn curfew to avert sectarian revenge killings.

No retaliation was reported in the capital or elsewhere in Lebanon today, and there was no claim of responsibility. But Jumblatt blamed the killing on the Druse' rightist Christian rivals.

The rightist Christian Phalange Party issued no response to Jumblatt's accusation. But its Voice of Lebanon radio station suggested the murder may have been part of a dispute between Druse factions, to avenge the recent abduction and subsequent killing of a right-wing Druse sheikh.

The 200,000-strong secretive Druse sect, an offshoot of Islam, has a long-standing blood feud with the country's 800,000 Maronite Catholics, who dominate Lebanon's political structure.

In Tripoli, Arafat's spokesman, Ahmed Abdul-Rahman, said the PLO chaimran outlined his conditions for evacuating loyalists from the port city in a letter to former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami. Abdul-Rahman said Arafat wanted U.N. supervision of the departure.

"Chairman Arafat wants ships provided by the United Nations to take his forces to the Arab countries they came from and U.N. forces to guard, to oversee the entire withdrawal operation," Abdul-Rahman said.

He listed the Arab countries as Tunisia, Algeria, Sudan, Iraq and Jordan.

He added, however, that about 2,000 of what he said were more than 4,000 Arafat loyalists had come from east Lebanon's Bekaa valley, driven out by the Syrian army.

Abdul-Rahman said Arafat has asked Karami, currently in Damascus, to find out whether Syria would allow these forces to return to the Bekaa. If not, Arafat asked Karami to seek out countries who would take the guerrillas.

The rebels captured the Baddawi and Nahr el-Bared Palestinian refugee camps on Tripoli's outskirts in their four-week-old drive to evict Arafat from his last Middle East stronghold. They contend that Arafat has been too moderate toward Israel, while Arafat says the mutiny is part of a Syrian drive to take control of the PLO.

In Washington, Gemayel planned a second round of meetings today with President Reagan to find ways of withdrawing all foreign forces from Lebanon.

U.S. sources said the United States had pressed upon Gemayel a plan for a phased Israeli pullback from southern Lebanon with Lebanese troops taking over relinquished positions.

A U.S. official, briefing reporters Thursday, said "a series of steps" was required so that the Lebanese leader could show he was expanding his control over the country.

Israel, which invaded Lebanon 18 months ago to smash the PLO, has more than 15,000 troops in southern Lebanon, about one-third of the nation's territory. More than 30,000 Syrian troops control northern, eastern and parts of central Lebanon, about one-half of the country.

With Arafat's loyalists and Syrian-backed mutineers engaged in a a civil war in the northern port of Tripoli, Gemayel's authority actually is limited to the capital of Beirut.

Gemayel's Washington visit followed one by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

Standing outside the Farmers Branch police department, complete with fingerprint sheet, in Toby Loughney. She was arrested for failure to return library books.

Police decided they'd 'book' her

DALLAS (AP) — Toby Loughney had no idea where the best-sellers "Looking out for No. 1" and "I'm OK, You're OK" would get her when she checked them out from a suburban library, but they did her little good last week.

Three years after she failed to return the books to the Farmers Branch library, she was arrested, handcuffed, fingerprinted and had her car impounded. She was released after paying $55 in bail and $32.50 for the release of her car.

Miss Loughney, a 29-year-old nurse, is the target of an obscure Texas law known as the Farmers Branch ordinance. The law makes failure to return city library books a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $200, not including the overdue library fees.

"I had no idea until I was arrested that this was on the books," she told the Dallas Times Herald. "I was stunned by the whole thing."

On Wednesday, Miss Loughney, a nurse, pleaded innocent. A trial is set for Jan. 18.

"They handcuffed me and took me down to the police department, fingerprinted and impounded my car," she said, adding "that was a little too much."

Miss Loughney said she remembers checking out the books but doesn't know where they are.

Among the books she checked out were best sellers from the 1970s, including "Games People Play," "I'm OK, You're OK," "Passages," and "Looking out for No.1."

"I have my stuff together now," she said.

Miss Loughney was taken to jail last Friday after police stopped her for an alleged speeding violation in Richardson, a Dallas suburb. A routine check of computerized police records showed she had an outstanding warrant from Farmers Branch, where she lived before moving to Dallas.

Nancy Schram, public affairs officer for the Richardson police, said the officer was following standard procedure for any person arrested on a warrant from another city.

Farmers Branch has issued hundreds of similar warrants since the ordinance was adopted in 1973. Lt. George Campbell said at least 238 other library patrons are subject to arrest on outstanding warrants.

Police started enforcing the law about four years ago because librarians noticed more and more books leaving but not returning to the library, said Betty Kelley, director of the Farmers Branch Public Library.

Miss Loughney said she never got notices from the library.

"I've moved from apartment to apartment ... but always with forwarding addresses," she said.

Nicaragua rejects talks, frees Indians

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government has freed hundreds of imprisoned Miskito Indians as part of a new amnesty program but firmly rejected a proposal for peace talks with anti-Sandinista rebels.

"We do not speak to mercenaries or foreign powers who kill our people every day," Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Thursday. "We do not talk to puppets. We would rather talk to the puppeteers."

His comment, in a videotape interview made available to The Associated Press, referred to the Reagan administration's support for some of the rebels.

In Panama, President Reagan's Central American envoy, Richard Stone, said Thursday he would try to arrange talks between the Nicaraguan rebels and the Sandinistas. He said he met with leaders of four guerrilla factions at their request.

"We asked Ambassador Stone to facilitate a dialogue between us ... and the Sandinista regime to seek the democratization of Nicaragua, to seek peace in Nicaragua," said rebel leader Adolfo Calero, who heads the Nicaraguan Democratic Force fighting in northern Nicaragua near the Honduran border.

In Washington, a senior American official said the rebels told Stone they would stop fighting if the Sandinista junta takes specific steps toward establishing democracy as it promised shortly before overthrowing rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

But Calero said other Latin American countries should be allowed to send observers to guarantee fair, free elections. On Sunday, the Sandinistas are expected to announce an election date for sometime in 1985.

U.S. officials say they do not believe the estimated 10,000 to 12,000 rebels have enough strength to topple the Sandinistas. But they believe rebel pressure could force the junta to moderate its internal policies and reassess its ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union and its alleged support for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Meanwhile, about 300 Miskito Indians were brought from a Managua-area prison farm Thursday night to a release ceremony where the amnesty program was announced. Junta coordinator Daniel Ortega read the release order in Spanish, then it was read in Miskito.

The amnesty decree said it extends to all Nicaraguans guilty of "crimes against public order and security" in isolated North Zelaya province on the Caribbean coast during the past two years.

It also covers Nicaraguan citizens other than Miskitos who have been involved in "criminal deeds" in the province but does not cover most of the rebels fighting the Sandinistas in northern and southern Nicaragua.

The Miskitos have generally resisted the leftist government. Hundreds have taken up arms against the Sandinistas.

Congressmen vow they'll re-enact vetoed aid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats say they will oppose further military aid to El Salvador, perhaps by a Senate filibuster, until they have re-enacted a bill vetoed by President Reagan that would tie assistance to progress on human rights.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, the Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also criticized the veto Thursday and predicted that the measure would be revived in the session of Congress that starts Jan. 23.

Percy stopped short of saying what position he would take on the bill in light of the veto, although he noted that he has supported it in the past and said he was disappointed at the president's action.

Most of the reaction to the veto, however, came from Democrats, who said it would encourage right-wing terror squads in the Central American country and cripple diplomatic efforts to bring about more humane treatment of dissidents.

"I would presume that this is going to be perceived as a green light by those involved in the death squads and the security forces who support the death squads," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., the original author of the vetoed measure.

Dodd said the administration was telling the Salvadoran regime, 'It doesn't matter what you do. You can count on the U.S. for all the military aid that we can convince Congress it should support."

Snow buries Wyoming, heads for Colorado

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A fourth snowstorm packing up to 8 inches of snow closed down long stretches of Wyoming highways today and bore down on Colorado, just hours after weather-weary Denver residents got their first glimpse of bare streets in two weeks.

In the East meanwhile frigid Canadian air surging over the eastern Great Lakes whipped snow squalls around motorists digging out their cars from storms that dropped 22 inches of snow Thursday on Lancaster, N.Y., and 6 to 8 inches along the Lake Erie shores in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Nationwide, the death toll in the series of snowstorms since Nov. 21 climbed to 83 — 42 this week — including traffic fatalities, people who froze to death in their cars and those who collapsed of heart attacks while shoveling snow.

The season's fourth Pacific storm settled into Colorado and New Mexico after walloping Utah with 15 inches at Tremonton in the Wasatch Mountains, and blanketing southern Idaho with 10 inches of snow that closed schools in a half-dozen towns.

"It's a white Christmas — three weeks early," said Harry Gordon, meteorologist at the government's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Forecasters said today's relief in the northern Rockies would likely be brief — another Pacific system is hovering off the Washington coast and threatening more snow over the weekend.

Drivers in Wisconsin and southern Michigan were cautioned to watch for icy patches under snow falling in those regions.

December's opening salvo at normally arid Utah followed a November of record precipitation. The National Weather Service said 143.5 inches of snow fell at the Alta Ski Resort southeast of Salt Lake City, bettering the previous record of 118 inches for the area set in 1847 and the average November snowfall of 60 inches.

Much of the snow found its way into the Great Salt Lake and pushed its level to 4,205.3 feet above sea level — up 10 inches just since late September and the highest level since 1888.

Today's snow in Colorado was mostly in the mountains and was sparing Denver, where a major effort was under way to unclog streets from three storms' worth of snow that left 2 feet on the ground.

Mayor Federico Pena planned to send 60 heavy garbage trucks through the streets to pack the snow down and ordered police to keep towing cars illegally parked on designated snow routes.

The northern fringes of the storm lingered over Wyoming early today, whipping 3 inches of fresh snow across highways and forcing state police to close the central section of Interstate 80 — the major east-west route across the state — as well as Route 30.

At the storm's height Thursday in Idaho, Boise police reported 50 accidents in that city. Two tractor-trailer trucks and four cars piled up Wednesday night on U.S. 93 near Twin Falls.

"I'm telling everyone to stay home," said a sheriff's dispatcher in Elmore County. Idaho state police also issued warnings not to travel unless absolutely necessary.

A deep freeze kept its lock on the northern Plains and upper Midwest today. At Havre, Mont., where the temperature dropped to 11 below zero Thursday, it was minus-11 today, while Huron, S.D., shivered at minus-4. Montana's warmest spot Thursday was 34 degrees at Gardiner, with highs of 7 above at Great Falls and Glendive.

U.S. skeptical of Sandinista overtures

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — As Sandinistas continue to talk about liberalization and negotiation of the withdrawal of Cuban military advisers from Nicaragua, a highly skeptical U.S. policy official said "we have not yet seen any fundamental changes" by the Marxist regime.

He suggested that the Sandinistas' talk of easing their oppressive regime and halting aid to guerrillas in other countries was "designed to improve their public relations image."

Speaking on a non-attribution basis, the official told a diplomat-media seminar here that the United States has adopted a course of "coercive diplomacy" vis-a-vis Nicaragua, because economic assistance and offers to negotiate had failed to convince the Sandinistas to make good on the democratic promises they made after overthrowing the Somoza dictatorship a few years ago.

The United States ended aid to Nicaragua in 1981 and the Sandinistas rejected American offers to negotiate in 1981 and 1982, he asserted.

When the Sandinistas began exporting their "revolution without borders," the Reagan adminstration approved CIA support for anti-Marxist Nicaraguans, known as "Contras."

The official said the Sandinistas have been doing a lot of talking lately, but have not followed it up with action.

"They talk about the withdrawal of military advisers," he said. "They say there are 200 Cuban military advisers in their country. We think there are 2,000. They imply that the normal rotation of Cuban school teachers involves military personnel leaving."

In addition to guerrilla attacks by the Contras, the Sandinista regime has other big problems. The Nicaraguan economy is in bad shape; there is growing unhappiness within the country and its neighbors are seen to be determined to resist any Nicaraguan-supported revolutions.

He conceded that the U.S. demonstration of will in Grenada, the show of military/naval force off Central America, and U.S.-Honduran joint exercises have also had a sobering effect on the Sandinistas.

Commissioners discuss complaint

Serving on the three-member TWC are Paul Hopkins, commission chairman, and John D. Stover and Lee B.M. Biggart.

Wright said he was encouraged by the fairness and conscientiousness of the TWC's hearing examiner, Kaylene Ray. Evidence from the three-part hearings will be compiled, condensed and presented to the TWC by way of the Texas Department of Water Resources staff, which is to make a recommendation on the Midland-Odessa dispute. Wright said he doesn't expect a ruling until the Spring of 1984.

"It's going to be close," Wright said. Midland has presented documented evidence to bolster its case, while Odessa has mostly argued without benefit of concrete evidence, he said.

As did Wright, Brown said he was impressed with the "professionalism" on part of the Midland County's counsel, Midland lawyer Ted Kerr, and the county-hired hydrologists, Ed Reed and Joe Reed of Midland.

"I am very pleased with what is going on," Brown said. "I am impressed with the professionalism on the part of Ted Kerr and the Reeds. The Reeds have done a beautiful job...If this doesn't blow them (Odessa) out of the saddle, I don't know what will. It's very professional."

Evidence presented by the city and county of Midland "is strong," Brown said. "I feel the evidence is by far in our favor."

Brown said he is hoping for a ruling favorable to Midland.

"I'm going to get real unhappy about it, and I'm going to blow my stack and call a spade a spade" should the decision be against Midland.

"There's no justification for them (Odessa) dumping that stuff down the draw...I hope we don't have to go past the water board and into court."

Computer smuggling route calculated?

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Customs officials who impounded tons of U.S.-made computer equipment are convinced they have broken up a major route for smuggling illegal high-technology exports to the Soviet Union.

"Our intensified searches the last two weeks are paying off and the recent new finds in Malmo and Stockholm indicate there will be more to come. We are on to something big," Karl E. Rydberg, deputy customs director general, said Thursday.

But Rydberg said it will not be known until next week, when Swedish experts thoroughly check out the seized equipment, whether the three shipments had strategic importance as claimed by U.S. authorities. The equipment is stored under tight security at Helsingborg customs in south Sweden.

The formal decision to classify the shipments as "war material" will be made by the war materials inspector. If so classified, the equipment probably would be returned to the United States, officials said.

The first and largest haul was made at the south Swedish port of Helsingborg a few weeks ago. Four containers with 32 crates of sophisticated U.S.-made computer hardware were seized after arriving by a Swedish freighter from Hamburg, where West German authorities had removed three containers with computer components on U.S. insistence but overlooked the others.

The computer, Digital Equipment Corp.'s powerful VAX 11-782, according to U.S. intelligence reports, can be used by the Soviets for strategic command and control of nuclear missiles. It was first shipped legally to South Africa and then to Sweden, where according to shipping and customs sources, it was most likely to be moved east to the Soviet Union via Stockholm and Finland.

"This route for illegal shipments has apparently been in use for some time, and it is highly likely that previous such transit shipments have slipped past spot checks in the past," Ake Spanier, the head of customs at Malmo, said.

Computer goods also were discovered at Malmo and, at the end of last week, two shipments of U.S. computer programs arrived separately in Stockholm by land and sea, officials said. It was believed they were intended for use with computers illegally headed for the Soviet Union.

According to reports from Washington about 10 more crates of sensitive computer equipment, being chased by U.S. customs in its "Operation Exodus" to stop strategic high-tech smuggling to the East, is still at large. It is believed some may already have reached the Soviet Union.

Peking's dog owners given three more weeks

PEKING (AP) — Dog owners today were given three more weeks to get rid of their pets before a citywide ban is enforced to prevent rabies, although 200,000 dogs already have been reported clubbed or drowned by teams of volunteers.

The ban was to have taken effect Thursday, but Shen Hanping, spokesman for the Peking Municipal People's Government Foreign Affairs Office, said today, "From Dec. 1 to 20 or so, we'll still try to conduct propaganda work so that the masses will willingly kill dogs themselves."

Shen said that after that deadline, "actions will be taken to deal with those who stubbornly refuse to obey the regulations. We will announce in due course what actions we will take against them."

Asked what people should do with their dogs, Shen said, "It is up to them to decide. They may transfer them to areas where dogs are permitted or give them to their relatives and friends."

The ban, first announced Oct. 11, says people keeping dogs without authorization will be subject to a fine of up to $25, the equivalent of three weeks' pay for the average urban worker.

The ban applies only in the 6,400 square miles of the Peking municipality, which extends into open countryside beyond the Great Wall but which is surrounded by rural areas.

Some dogs will be exempted from the ban, provided they are inoculated and registered, including those kept by army or police units, used for scientific research, performing in acrobatic troupes, raised on dog-meat farms or kept as pets in foreigners' compounds.

Health officials have complained that "dogs run about wildly, urinating everywhere and causing difficulties for municipal sanitation."

Eight die in anthill collapse

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Eight schoolchildren were killed and two were injured when an anthill tunnel collapsed on top of them in southern Zimbabwe, police said today.

The children, aged nine to 16, were digging Wednesday for soil to make mud floors for their school in the Mberengwa district, according to a police spokesman, who said they suffocated when the tunnel collapsed.

Shoppers flee smoky store

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of year-end shoppers fled from an Osaka department store today after smoke from a small fire billowed into the bottom two floors of the store, police reported. There were no injuries.

Police said the fire broke out in a first floor women's toilet of the Daimaru Department Store shortly before noon. The blaze was quickly extinguished by store employees, but thick white smoke filled the bottom floors, setting off fire alarms and sending shoppers scurrying toward the exits.

Police said there were 6,000 shoppers, twice as many as normal because of the approaching year-end, and 2,000 employees in the store at the time.

Missile conference scheduled

MOSCOW (AP) — Three top Kremlin officials, including the military chief of general staff, will hold a news conference Monday about the NATO deployment of U.S. missiles in Western Europe, the Foreign Ministry announced today.

Presiding at the conference will be Marshal Kikolai V. Ogarkov, chief of staff and first deputy defense minister; Georgi M. Kornienko, first deputy foreign minister; and Leonid M. Zamyatin, the top Kremlin spokesman.

Johnson forgotten in midst of Kennedy nostalgia

By MIKE FEINSILBER

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — In all the spate of tears and nostalgia about John F. Kennedy during the 20th anniversary of his murder, one figure was forgotten, just as he almost was forgotten at the time.

He was the president of the United States — the new president.

Looking back, one can sympathize with Lyndon B. Johnson. He assumed the presidency under shattering circumstances. He was bound to be met with hostility: he was the only person in America whose station in life clearly benefitted from the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

Fate was cruel, too, in another way. It was in Lyndon Johnson's Texas that Kennedy was killed. He'd gone to Texas on a political fence-mending mission at Johnson's behest.

Somehow, to many, Johnson almost became the villain. Those who loved Kennedy and mourned him were not so generous to concede that Johnson had to take over quickly. For this president, there could only be an awkward transition.

So everything he did those terrible first days was measured against impossible standards.

Wasn't it unseemly for Johnson to insist that the presidential oath of office be administered on Texas soil a mere hour and a half after Kennedy's death? That the oath be given on the presidential airliner with the curtains drawn? That the new president insist that Kennedy's widow, still wearing her bloodstained clothes, be a witness to the transfer of power?

No, it wasn't unseemly. Lyndon Johnson had every reason to be both cautious and frightened that afternoon in Texas. No one knew the killer or his motive; no one knew if the assassination were an act of madness or an act of war.

Suspicion between a vice president and his coterie and a president and his associates is nothing new in American politics, but suspicion had extra reason to exist in the Kennedy-Johnson camps.

Lyndon Johnson had been Kennedy's rival for the presidential nomination three years earlier.

Johnson, a product of the Congress, a master of the Senate — truly king of the Hill — held Kennedy in minimum high regard, as they say in the Capitol. He saw Kennedy as a young, well-born, rich, cultured and ambitious dilettante who had no Senate accomplishments.

Kennedy had shocked everyone, especially his younger brother, Robert, by offering to make Johnson his running mate.

Garfield high on booklist

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Women at exclusive Mount Holyoke College prefer Gentleman's Quarterly magazine, while elsewhere in the Berkshire Hills "college belt" Garfield the cat is high on the reading list.

With more than 30,000 students at the University of Massachusetts, and Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst and Hampshire Colleges, books have always sold well in this corner of the Connecticut Valley.

But, according to a recent survey of area bookstores by the Daily Hampshire Gazette, college students have their minds on more than academics these days.

John Bowen, manager of the Mount Holyoke College Bookstore, says students at the nation's oldest women's college prefer fashion magazines to fiction. Bowen says he sells 115 copies a week of such glossies as "Cosmopolitan," "Mademoiselle," "Glamour" and "Gentleman's Quarterly" compared to about 20 copies a week of news magazines.

"Gentlemen's Quarterly" at a women's college?

"They like to look at the guys," Bowen explained.

In Amherst, "The Color Purple" by Alice Walker, a Pulitzer Prize winning novel about a black woman's life in the South, tops the list at the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop across from Amherst College. Other best sellers are "Motherhood — The Second Oldest Profession," by comedian Erma Bombeck; "Growing Up," columnist Russell Baker's autobiography, and "Poland," a piece of historical fiction by James Michener.

But "Garfield Sits Around the House," one in a series of cartoon books starring a fat feline, is also popular with the college crowd, said storeowner Howard Gersten.

George Orwell's "1984" and "Animal Farm" also sell well at the Reading Remedy, and C.S. Lewis' fantasy "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe," is especially popular with students, said clerk Susan Rich.

"Christine" by Stephen King — a horror story about a car that kills — is the top seller at the University of Massachusetts bookstore. Isaac Asimov's science fiction thriller "Foundation's Edge" is second on the list, followed by "Space," a fictional account of the space program by Michener.

Also among the top 10 are Shakespeare's plays, a French-Polish Dictionary, "The Elements of Style" by William Strunk Jr. and E.B. White, and a preparation guide for the Graduate Record Exams.

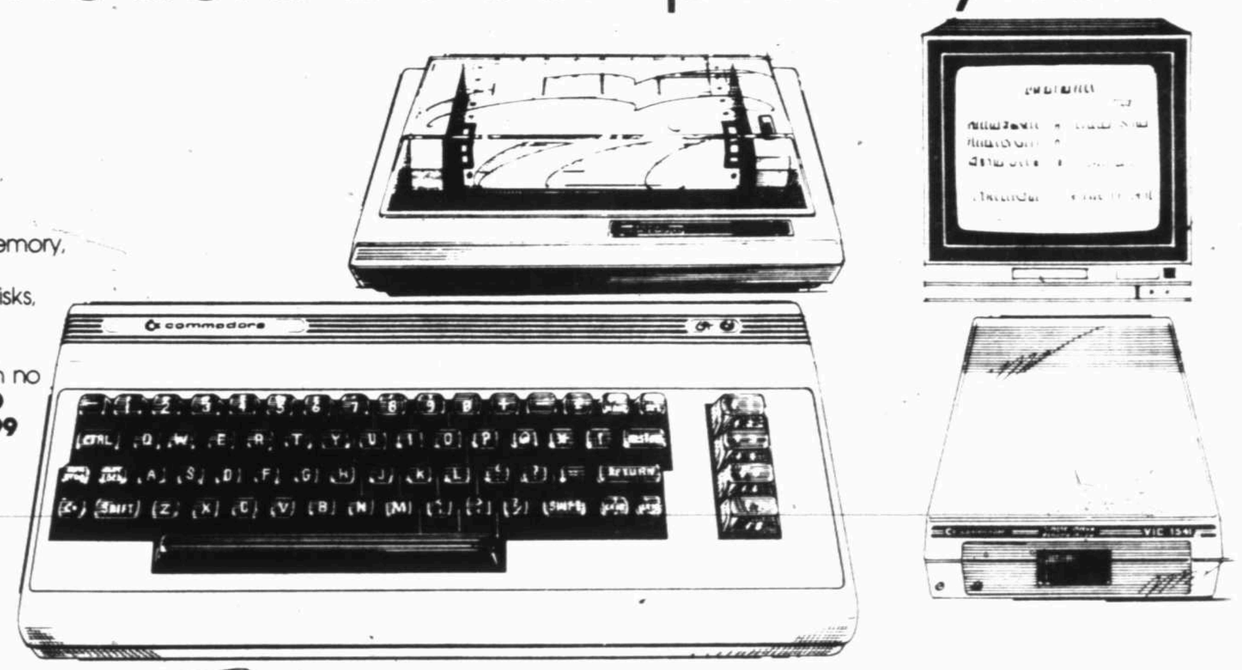

Grenada raid still disputed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two leading Democrats disagree on when or how America should use its military power, especially as it was used in the invasion of Grenada.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to President Carter, said earlier this week the invasion was justified but former Sen. Frank Church said it was not.

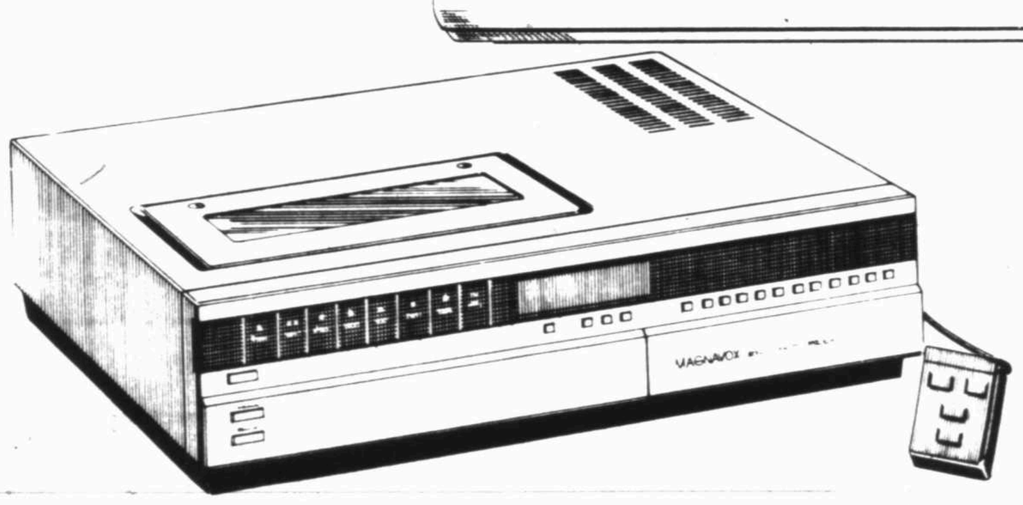

To Church, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Grenada invasion was an unjustified excuse for the Reagan administration to "rout" Democrats politically.

THE BETTER HALF

"They're offering a new service for bored, lifeless marriages. It's the Argument of the Month Club!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, December 3, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: George Washington's official portrait painter, Gilbert Stuart, was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: director Jean-Luc Godard, singer Andy Williams, Seattle slugger Pat Putnam and country singer Ferlin Husky. Your charm gets you as far as your talent does in the months ahead. Listen carefully to what your loved ones have to say. Money spent to sharpen your skills or increase your knowledge is a wise investment. Romance is fast-paced and glamorous. Be careful not to reveal too much too soon. A persistent student finds a scholarship or grant. Make the most of a new business opportunity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A love relationship is strengthened by today's events. Tension over money fades away. Forget halfway measures. Go all out to help a young person stand on his or her feet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A habit proves easier to correct than you thought possible. Family members deserve to know your plans. Level with them before the weekend is over. Take advantage of a chance to exercise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Underdogs enjoy an advantage today in both sports and romance. Focus on changes that will make your lifestyle healthier. A trip with friends adds zest to your weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A last-ditch effort to salvage a relationship is successful. You receive money for something you did long ago. A new diet proves easier to follow than you anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not panic on discovering that you have misjudged a situation. Your quick mind will come up with a solution that saves the day. Keep romantic partner guessing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have been too much of a recluse for your own good. The companionship you want is only a phone call away. Meet your financial obligations on time. Children make new demands.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get household chores completed early so that you can take the children on a special outing. Family affairs and property matters are in the spotlight. You receive an unexpected offer of financial support!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A weekend job could be answer to a temporary cash shortage. Handmade Christmas gifts will be appreciated more than bought ones. Cook and freeze some special holiday goodies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The social scene is very business this weekend. Entertaining at home may hold more appeal than going out. Invite people from different walks of life. Someone pays you a wonderful compliment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day for household projects, family entertainment and neighborhood get-togethers. You get an unexpected chance to demonstrate a special skill. Show what you can do! Loved ones applaud.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Domestic affairs continue to hold your attention. A slower pace will help you complete bothersome chores without becoming exhausted. Someone offers to baby-sit while you do some Christmas shopping. Show your gratitude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By all means, indulge your loved ones. A young person is looking forward to the holidays. Go slow where romance is concerned.

Swit cast in holiday story

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six little devils showed up one day to participate in the church Nativity play, and there wasn't much Mrs. Bradley could do about it.

The Herdmans, the meanest kids in town — and among the poorest — were drawn to the church first by visions of brownies and cookies and cocoa. But they stayed to play roles in a version of the Christmas pageant the church had never seen before.

Loretta Swit stars as Mrs. Bradley, the harassed pageant director in this ABC special that will make you feel good about the Christmas season. It's called, what else, "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever."

"I was packing to go to Europe when the script arrived," said Miss Swit. "I was getting ready to leave for New York and then on to Europe. I read the script and said this gives me something to come back to."

Miss Swit, who spent 11 years as Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan in the smash hit CBS series, "M*A*S*H," filmed the one-hour special in Vancouver, Canada. It was in the middle of summer, but Miss Swit said she had no problem feeling festive. "I'm a pushover for Christmas," she said. "All you have to do is sing a carol and I'm gone."

"The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" is based on the tale by Barbara Robinson, who wrote the screenplay. It was originally published in McCall's magazine and then in a book that sold 800,000 copies.

"The story is that these six little urchins, these hoodlums, take over my Christmas pageant," Miss Swit said. "They bully everybody, including me. But the spirit of Christmas takes over. They have a unique approach to the Christmas story."

At one point in the TV holiday special, Miss Swit, as Mrs. Bradley, is trying to explain to the children what the pageant is about. "I pick up a Bible and read a passage from Luke that the Angel of the Lord came unto them," she said. "The little girl jumps up and yells, 'Shazam!' The angel to her is the Masked Marvel. They relate the Three Wise Men to the welfare people."

In fact, the youngsters never stop relating their lives to the pageant. "When I tell them the gifts to Jesus include frankincense and myrrh, they think that's stupid. So they dig into their Christmas welfare basket and bring baby Jesus a ham."

Mrs. Bradley nearly goes into shock when she's first confronted by the Herdmans. The other kids are terrorized and the Herdmans cast themselves as Mary, Joseph and the Three Wisemen; nobody objects. The kids all smoke cigars, including the girls.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

To succeed at bridge, you have to do more than just "get there firstest with the mostest." You have to select the right course as well.

North-South have more than enough points to contract for three no trump. If you rely on point-count alone, the contract should be a laydown. But declarer has to proceed with caution to make his nine tricks.

When dummy appears, declarer can count eight sure tricks, with many chances for a ninth. The only danger to the contract is a 4-1 club split combined with a losing diamond finesse and spades 5-3. Since this is well within the realm of possibilities, declarer should adopt countermeasures.

If South blithely goes about setting up his longest suit, he can be defeated. Suppose declarer wins the spade lead and bangs down the king of clubs. As the cards lie, East wins and knocks out declarer's remaining spade stopper. When the clubs don't break, declarer must fall back on the diamond finesse.

Correct technique is for declarer to cross to dummy with the ace of hearts to lead a club from there. If West holds the ace of clubs, declarer must hope that the suit will break. If East holds the ace, he cannot afford to fly in with that card, because in so doing he will set up the suit for declarer.

Therefore, East must duck. Now declarer is a tempo, and a trick, ahead. He abandons clubs in favor of diamonds. Even though the finesse loses, declarer has nine tricks — two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and a club.

Liberty's helpers

In July the Reporter-Telegram carried an editorial that described the deteriorating condition of the Statue of Liberty and urged "teachers, students, parents and former students" to get involved in the expensive restoration project. Well, a lot of Midland youngsters did exactly that.

The other day, Midland Christian School teacher Mrs. James Wade told how her two preschool classes got involved in the project. Mrs. Wade had read the editorial which described how French schoolchildren originally paid for most of the cost of Miss Liberty as a symbol of friendship and out of admiration for our form of government. That editorial went on to note that it would be fitting if students got involved in the restoration project, which will cost an estimated $25 to $30 million.

After reading the editorial, Mrs. Wade said, "I thought, we could do that." So, she took a gallon jar to class at the start of this year's school term and sent a note home with each of the children in her two classes urging parents to let their children earn money to bring to school for Miss Liberty.

The children saw a news report of the national project on television, she said, and became very excited. "It was a big thing to them that they were able to help."

Coins and bills in the jar kept mounting until eventually $140 had been collected. The students went to RepublicBank First National of Midland to have the money counted by machine and then earlier this week went to the downtown post office to mail the money to the statue restoration fund. As an extra treat, the students even toured the post office.

Praising the benefits of the restoration project, Mrs. Wade said, "The children learned to be unselfish. Their parents are proud of them and I'm proud of them."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Sonja Brittain, who conducted a collection for the Statue of Liberty in her second grade class at Trinity School. Her class knew about the statue restoration, she said, because it attempts to keep up with current events. The students wanted to do something to help the project and decided to do chores around their homes to earn money.

Since the class learned about the statue's original construction and trip to America from France, and since French is the second language the students are studying this year, the project was particularly appealing, said Mrs. Brittain. Through the project, students learned the value of working to earn money and then contributing that money to a special project, she added.

Conducted over a month's time, the effort by the students at Trinity raised a total of $50. "The parents were very cooperative and the children were most helpful," said Mrs. Brittain.

Yes, the lessons learned by these and possibly other Midland schoolchildren in collecting money for the restoration of Miss Liberty are valuable ones that will last a lifetime. They are to be commended for their unselfishness and their high degree of patriotism in becoming involved in a project that will ensure Miss Liberty's cherished torch of freedom will continue to be the symbol of hope for people throughout the world.

Beware of the yoke

The future of the tiny island of Grenada, occupied by U.S. forces since Oct. 25, is being debated in a number of forums: the Commonwealth Nations, conferring in India; the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, which had requested the U.S. action, and, of course and perhaps more importantly, within the counsels of the British and U.S. governments. There is a good deal of consensus that there is a need for outside help, especially in the forms of policing and security, to prevent reversion to the anarchy that led to the invasion.

In those deliberations, two things should be clear, and held above all other considerations: The longer any U.S. presence is on the island, except for orthodox diplomatic representation, the greater the danger of turning the entire affair into a disaster for American interests.

Any aid that is forthcoming should be implemented in such a way as to make it undebatable that it carries with it no echo of the colonial past, no hint of reimposing European white rule over a post-colonial state, however small and needful it may be.

Already, the American forces, welcomed by many Grenadians as liberators, have stayed too long. The euphoria, however sincere, and there is ground for debate about that, cannot last long. Inevitable frictions will develop, and from them expectation of greater friction. The situation then will be an open invitation, an irresistible one, for demagogues and genuine nationalists alike to exploit.

A similar danger would be set up if American police and security advisers were replaced in any significant presence or number by British forces. However valuable and however well-intentioned they might be — and there is no reason to doubt they would be — the colonial yoke and the scars and callouses it left are too fresh a memory to be laid to rest.

If outsiders are necessary, and there is strong ground for believing they are, it would be far the best for the interests of Grenada, the United States and all others — except, of course, the Soviet Union and the Cuban government — if such forces come from other former colonies, which can exemplify progressive post-colonial responsibility and lead in the convincing establishment of a stable, democratic and secure Grenadian nation.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Pentagon nearly helped with film

WASHINGTON — The grim depiction of a nuclear holocaust in the television movie, "The Day After," caused consternation at the White House because it may undercut administration efforts at deterrence-through-strength instead of a nuclear freeze.

Jack Anderson

The White House reaction to the film was not surprising. What is astonishing is that ABC came close to getting the Pentagon's full cooperation in shooting the film.

Defense Department documents reviewed by my associate Tony Capaccio indicate that official cooperation may have depended on a few seconds of dialogue that many viewers could easily have missed in the two-hour, 15-minute show.

ABC first approached the Pentagon's audio-visual division in May 1982 with a draft script. The network wanted the military to provide National Guardsmen, helicopters, troop carriers, jeeps and pickup trucks — plus permission to film on military bases.

"The story takes no political position on the nuclear controversy," an ABC representative assured the Pentagon.

The first draft of the script was turned over to a veteran analyst. "In general, I like it," he wrote. "The exposition is fairly well balanced, with very little overstatement or misstatement. What errors are there are largely subliminal and easy to correct."

The analyst listed 21 scenes that should be modified for reasons of either accuracy or policy.

The Pentagon analyst noted the most serious "technical" problem was "misleading portrayal of important policy positions." Specifically, he cited the remark of one character on the deteriorating situation in Europe early in the film: "What worries me if its gets out of hand at all is our damned 'launch-on-warning' policy."

"Launch-on-warning," the analyst wrote, "is definitely not a U.S. policy."

ABC modified this sequence to the Pentagon's satisfaction.

Another problem in the first draft was a scene in the closing minutes showing a military firing squad executing a man by the side of the road. "The military firing squad scene is a gross error," the analyst wrote to the film's producer, "particularly since it appears at a place in the scenario where civil authority has been re-established."

The scene — only a few seconds' long — was changed to make the firing squad civil militia, a distinction that was probably lost on most viewers.

The eventual stumbling block to Pentagon cooperation was a sequence involving a radio report that NATO armored units had invaded East Germany, followed by Soviet retaliation. A memo dated June 7, 1982, expressed the opinion that the ABC script was "edging more toward an accurate portrayal of the anti-NATO unilateral disarmament freeze position current in Soviet propaganda than toward an accurate portrayal of U.S. positions."

Pentagon officials suggested that the sequence of events described in the radio broadcast be reversed — Soviet planes violating West German air space before the NATO armored strike against East Germany.

ABC inserted a new introductory sentence in the fictional radio broadcast. But the thrust of the radio broadcast — that NATO forces had made the first move — remained intact.

A letter drafted to inform ABC that it would not get Pentagon cooperation said: "Despite the addition of a new introductory sentence, scenes still convey the impression of a NATO offensive against East Germany followed by a defensive Warsaw Pact response."

The letter was never sent. Instead, ABC was notified by telephone.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: The Federal Emergency Management Agency is responsible for government planning for national disasters such as nuclear war. But it is also concerned with less catastrophic matters. In a recent internal memorandum, the agency's inspector general issued a stern warning against padding expense accounts. The memo was given the ominous title, "Fraud Alert."

INSIDE REPORT:

Taxes plus lobbyist equals power

WASHINGTON — Chairman Dan Rostenkowski delivered a November pep talk to Democratic members of his House Ways and Means Committee behind closed doors that unveiled the essence of power politics on Capitol Hill, in this instance creating turmoil for one of the nation's leading industries.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Before Congress adjourned, Rostenkowski urged his colleagues to stand firm against efforts by the Rules Committee, traffic cop for legislation reaching the House floor, to shape the ill-fated 1983 tax revision bill. "If we give in," the Chairman said, "we can expect in the future that all tax bills will be written by the Rules Committee."

To some of his congressional buddies, Rostenkowski's message was clear: If you yield, the deep-pocketed tax lobbyists who infest Capitol Hill will lavish their affections on the Rules Committee. That danger of losing special access to campaign money may explain solidarity in their chairman's behalf by Ways and Means Democrats, even those who disagreed with him over the tax matters in dispute.

After a three-week deadlock, Rostenkowski prevailed against the Rules Committee but was defeated on the House floor in the session's closing days. That meant no tax bill this year, posing uncertainty for specific taxpayers — mainly the life insurance industry. But dollars-and-cents considerations were subordinated to power politics on Capitol Hill.

Critics blame this on Danny Rostenkowski, a child of Chicago ward politics who disdains legislative details. Actually, the fate of this year's tax bill is explained by the system that has evolved in the House, particularly over the past decade, into this equation: taxes plus lobbyists equals power.

Scarcely a night goes by when Congress is in session that some lawmaker is not pouring cocktails and serving hors d'oeuvres in some congressional committee room in return for campaign contributions. Nearly all contributors are lobbyists, who find themselves bombarded by telephone calls from congressional offices — often from congressmen themselves — imploring their presence. Since even lobbyist funds are finite, they must pick and choose among congressional requests.

But the 35 Ways and Means members form an elite. The mere arrival of a letter from one of them announcing a fund-raiser elicits the obligatory $1,000, without need for a follow-up phone call. Legislation considered there is a matter of financial life or death, guaranteeing that its members never need want for campaign money.

This game is played vigorously by Rostenkowski, whose district in Chicago's "Polish Corridor" is a Republican-free zone. Lobbyists have been invited to the Northern Virginia home of free-lance lobbyist Duffy Wall to dine with the chairman — in return for $5,000. For serious lobbyists who want to be part of the Ways and Means scene, that is pocket change.

This member-lobbyist relationship helps perpetuate the practice, established in the '70s, of lumping together in grab-bag bills disparate proposals that in bygone days would have been handled separately. Rostenkowski in particular believes lobbyists who succeed in getting something for their client in the grab bag should pitch in to support less popular parts. That tactic doomed the 1983 tax bill.

From the start, there was no chance for massive tax increases favored by some Republican senators. Rather, the 1983 act was supposed to deal with limited problems — especially long-simmering tax troubles of the life insurance industry. At last, the industry this autumn negotiated a new system that achieved long-range stability at a cost of higher taxes.

However, it was part of a package that included a restriction, engineered by Rostenkowski's staff, on tax-free industrial development bonds (IDBs). Outrage by governors, mayors and the Democratic establishment led to demands that the Rules Committee permit the House to vote on IDBs.

That is where the chairman drew the line. Restriction of tax-free bonds would not be expected to excite his passions. What bothered him was the prospect of lobbyists — and their checkbooks — short-circuiting Ways and Means to lubricate the Rules Committee. Demanding that lobbyists who wanted various provisions in the bill support his IDB scheme, he won the battle in the Rules Committee but lost the war on the House floor. That leaves the insurance industry uncertain about the future, not merely about its tax liabilities but whether it can offer "universal life" policies.

The villain is not Rostenkowski but the system he inherited, however joyously, upon his accession to the chairmanship in 1981. A partial answer might be found in his Republican counterpart, Rep. Barber Conable of New York, who from his first election in 1964 never has accepted a campaign contribution exceeding $50. Fifty bucks from a tax lobbyist does not generate much power.

CHARLEY REESE

Newspapers should seek only truth

"Editor & Publisher" is a respected trade magazine in the newspaper field. In a recent edition, it moaned in its editorial that the American press is facing a credibility crisis.

Charley Reese

"Editors can speculate forever about the reasons for the erosion of press credibility and acceptability ... but they must face up to the stark and horrible fact that the crisis is now and something must be done about it," the magazine said.

I've been banging this same drum for a long time. It's nice to have company. The facts are indeed plain. The latest Lou Harris poll revealed that only 19 percent of the people "have a great deal of confidence" in the press. And that number is up from 14 percent the year before.

The fact that the people overwhelmingly supported the Reagan Administration on the issue of barring the press from Grenada stunned some of my colleagues though it didn't surprise me at all.

Circumstances have given me the perspective to see the crisis early. For one thing, I left the newspaper business for a six year period and saw what it looks like from the outside. More newspaper people should do that. They would be in for a shock.

Secondly, I am, more or less conservative, in a more or less consistently liberal environment and it is easy for me to spot the liberal bias that leaks into editorial decision-making. One of the failings of the liberal mind in the 1980s is its arrogant certainty about the rightness of its own views and its genuine intolerance of dissenting views.

People are a great deal better informed than they were 30 years ago and they can easily spot it when the press is playing unfairly on an issue.

A more fundamental cause is generational. The youngsters coming into journalism and who have come into it in the last 15 years or so are by and large from upper middle class families. They have a different value system. They tend to be disdainful of Main Street America, contemptuous of such things as Rotary Clubs and fundamentalist preachers and cops on the beat. Because most of them are exceptionally ignorant of economics, they tend to be hostile toward business. All the mundane activities so necessary to maintain a decent community bore them to the point of frustration.

Many of them are spoiled by the Watergate Syndrome. They itch to discover scandal. This itch sometimes causes them to pounce on an honest mistake or a minor gaffe and blow it all out of proportion.

Fortunately, however, most public officials are honest. Most of the time in most places government works as reasonably well as can be expected. Most businessmen are honest. There simply isn't enough genuine scandal to go around which is why a professional muckraker like Jack Anderson, with a large staff to help him, ends up dealing mostly in gossip and exaggeration.

Newspapering is basically dull work. It is not like the television series, "Lou Grant," nor is like, "All the President's Men." It is the gentle business of recording the day to day affairs of our communities, accurately, in perspective, and with compassion. That is challenge enough for any journalist.

The best journalism today is being practiced in the hinterlands and the worst, in Washington, and especially by the television networks. Unfortunately, it is the latter which are most visible to the public and it is the latter which most young journalists aspire to imitate.

This credibility crisis is a serious business. The First Amendment rests on the foundation of public support. If we destroy public support for a free press by making a free press seem more a liability than an asset, then we will lose it. And if we lose a free press, we will lose our political freedom.

American journalism has a great responsibility and a great challenge. the talent and the brains are there. Maybe this rattle public criticism will shake the press out of its delusions of grandeur so we can go back to doing what we do best — seeking the truth instead of power.

Spacelab astronauts want to stay in orbit another day

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Spacelab's astronauts focused cameras on the heavens and Earth and ran through a mixed bag of experiments today while awaiting NASA's decision on whether they will stay in orbit an extra day.

The six orbiters were in agreement — they'd like their journey extended from 9 to 10 days. That would bring the space shuttle Columbia and its Spacelab cargo back to a landing in California on Dec. 8.

"That sounds good to me," mission specialist Owen Garriott said.

Mission Control told the crew Thursday that no decision on the extension would be made for a day or two until experts review the supplies on board and study weather forecasts for the new landing date. But "everything looks good" for another day in space, officials said.

One factor will be a large number of Columbia maneuvers planned in the next two days as commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw twist and turn the shuttle to permit Spacelab's four scientists to aim their instruments at Earth and outer space. These maneuvers burn fuel, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration wants to to be sure there is an adequate margin for an additional day.

Round-the-clock experiments were continued today by mission specialists Garriott and Bob Parker and payload specialists Byron Lichtenberg and West German Ulf Merbold.

Spacelab carries the largest and heaviest astronomy instruments ever taken into space, and the astronauts were using their unique platform above the obscuring veil of Earth's atmosphere to observe the sun, stars and mysterious energy and radio sources such as quasars and pulsars.

Sophisticated telescopes and cameras were gathering information about vast regions of the sky not observable from Earth, recording stars of differing brightnesses, solar activity and radiation as scientists seek more knowledge about the universe.

Women officeholders have more experience than men

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Women elected to office bring more political experience to their jobs than their male counterparts and tend to be more liberal than male officeholders, say studies presented at a nationwide conference of women lawmakers.

The research also showed large majorities of women officeholders considered spousal support a key element in deciding whether to run, and that minority women are more likely to be appointed than elected to positions of power.

The studies were released Thursday as 370 female state legislators from 46 states, plus 300 representatives of business, education, politics and women's organizations, convened for the four-day National Forum for Women Legislators.

In workshops and general meetings, the delegates will focus on campaign finances, the increasing percentage of women among the nation's poor, pensions and insurance and violence against women and children.

Vice President George Bush will deliver the keynote speech Saturday night, and Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado will join a Sunday morning panel.

"There will be partisan differences and tensions emerging, as they do in any bipartisan meeting, but our goal is to facilitate a productive dialogue," said conference organizer Ruth Mandel of Rutger's University's Center for Woman and Politics.

The center released a two-year study on the political "gender gap" showing that while women make up more than half the population, they account for just 994, or 13 percent, of the 7,438 state legislators; 22, or 5 percent, of the 435 members of the House of Representatives; and two, or 2 percent, of the 100-member Senate.

But, said a companion report, while women in state legislatures are slightly less likely than male lawmakers to have held previous elective office, "they are more likely to have held appointive government positions, worked in political campaigns, and worked on staffs of public officials."

Former EPA official convicted of felonies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita Lavelle, who insisted all along that she had told the truth and never tried to obstruct a congressional inquiry, says she is "very, very disappointed" that a jury believed otherwise.

The former Environmental Protection Agency official was convicted Thursday night on four of five felony counts lodged against her. She will be sentenced Jan. 9 and faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of $19,000.

After an eight-day trial, the federal court jury convicted Ms. Lavelle on all of the counts alleging she lied about her dealings at the EPA with her former employer, Aerojet-General Corp.

She was found innocent on one count of lying when she denied playing politics with the $1.6 billion hazardous waste cleanup fund she managed.

Ms. Lavelle, 36, remained composed while each guilty verdict was read but began crying after the jury had left and she was alone in the courtroom with her lawyers.

"I am very, very disappointed," she told reporters outside the courthouse. "Unfortunately, that is about all I can say at this point."

Asked if she would appeal, her attorney, James Bierbower, said, "Who knows?"

Defense attorneys had called Ms. Lavelle a "scapegoat."

No more talking: Shootout II is looming

Mojo 'just another game'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Saturday's 1:30 p.m. Jones Stadium Shootout II between Odessa Permian and Midland Lee has captured the sports imagination of the Permian Basin, but to the Lee football team, this is just another game in the overall scheme of things.

"I understand the interest that this game has generated, but it's really no bigger than the one we played last week. If we hadn't won last week, we wouldn't be playing in this one," said Lee head football coach Spike Dykes.

"We've been telling our kids all year that we have to play one week at a time and I really think our kids are not taking this one any differently.

"WE'VE HAD our backs to the wall all year and our kids have responded every time. We lost to San Angelo and came back with a big win over Permian. We had one of those nights against Abilene Cooper and that loss put us in a must win situation. We've been in that situation since the Cooper loss. We had to beat Midland High or sit at home and then each playoff game is the same thing all over again. Our kids have responded to the challenge each time."

Despite the fact that Lee has beaten Permian only three times since the series started in 1961, one of those victories came this year with Lee winning 20-7. Many think that Permian will be tougher to defeat this time around when you add in series tradition and playoff tradition, which both point to a Permian comeback.

Dykes, however, feels that past history will have little to do with Saturday's meeting between the two schools.

"This is the game this week. What happened when we beat them the first time doesn't count. You just put the football on the field and play," said Dykes.

But does Dykes expect something new from Permian this time around?

"Teams have new wrinkles for every game and I'm sure Permian will have some for us," said Dykes. "But I don't expect them to change much. After all, their offense has gone crazy this year, setting a school record (455 points) for scoring. I hope they do change things up."

BOTH TEAMS have been high scoring teams. Lee has scored 390 points. Defensively, both have been stingy. Lee has allowed only 95 points in 13 games while Permian has given up only 138 over the same span.

"They have had shutouts in two of their last three games and that says something about Permian's defense when the shutouts came in the playoffs," said Dykes.

Permian will carry a 12-1 record into this quarterfinal matchup while Lee has an 11-2 reading. The winner Saturday will advance to the state semifinals next week against the winner of the Plano-Klein matchup. After Saturday, only four teams will remain in the state championship hunt and one of them will be from District 4-5A.

In the first meeting of the two clubs, Permian coach John Wilkins felt the kicking game played an important role. Lee maintained field position on Permian the first time around and two shanked punts by Permian was a major key.

"The kicking game is always the difference in close games," said Dykes. "I don't expect that to be any different in this game. You can't ignore the kicking game and if the other team performs well in that department, you have to make up for it with consistency on offense."

The other big key in Game 1 was Lee fullback Isaac Garnett, who rushed for 132 yards on 28 carries for three touchdowns. Garnett since has become Lee's first 1,000-yard rusher and now has 1,727 yards rushing, 273 yards shy of the 2,000-yard mark.

HOWEVER, IN the playoffs, Lee has shown its ability to run outside with halfbacks Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman. Jones has 738 yards rushing and Thurman 496 this year. Jones is 262 yards short of becoming Lee's second 1,000-yard rusher. It appears that Jones and Garnett will need at least two more playoff appearances to knock down those coveted marks.

Like Permian, Lee has some bumps and bruises. The most serious loss for Lee this week is safety Andre Mayfield, who had a knee operation this week after an injury against Trimble Tech. He is out for the season. However, Earl Davis will be inserted into Lee's secondary and the junior had a key interception against Tech last week.

Panthers gear to settle up

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — There are only two situations that could make this Odessa Permian-Midland Lee rematch in the quarterfinals a bigger game than it already is: meeting in the semifinals or meeting for the state title.

However, with the way the playoff brackets are set up this year, quarterfinals is as far as both can go. This is it! The first District 4-5A playoff loss is imminent. Which team will go on and which will stay home will be decided Saturday at 1:30 p.m., here at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium.

Since winning the 4-5A title for the fourth straight year, the Panthers have rolled to three easy playoff victories. They defeated Hereford 40-13 in bi-district, blanked El Paso Eastwood in the Area game and scored a second shutout against Wichita Falls Rider in regionals, 28-0. Midland Lee has posted equally one-sided victories: 30-3 over Amarillo High, 48-14 over El Paso Irvin and 23-6 over Fort Worth Trimble Tech. Does that mean that this district is playing superior football this year?

"I don't think there's any question about that," said Permian head coach John Wilkins. "Both of us went through the first three games easily. I don't think either coach (Wilkins and Lee's Spike Dykes) would admit it before the game, but we've beaten better teams than we've faced in the playoffs."

Not only is Lee the best team Permian has faced in the playoffs, it is also the only team to beat Permian this year, 20-7. The Panthers have a 12-1 record while Lee is 11-2. That victory over Mojo leaves Wilkins with a lot of respect for the Rebels.

"Lee has an excellent football team," said Wilkins. "Realistically, and I think their coaches would agree with this, they should be undefeated right now. They gave it away against (San) Angelo and against (Abilene) Cooper it was just one of those things that happen."

Wilkins feels field position, an off night in the kicking game and the front lines were the major keys to the Panthers' only loss.

"It was a game of field position the first time and we were hurt by it," he said. "They had field position all night and on the kicking game we weren't very good. They also dominated the line of scrimmage, both offensively and defensively. I think they deserved to win the game."

Defense is where Wilkins sees the key to Saturday's rematch. "A good defensive team, which Lee has, is going to shut down 99 percent of an opponent's offense. It was true in the first game, whoever played the best defense was going to win. I think that will be true this time, too."

Offensively, both teams have the capability of scoring mega-points. The Panthers are led by quarterback Rex Lamberti and fullback Britt Hager, providing the best passing-rushing combination in the district.

On the year, Lamberti has completed 96-of-159 passes against seven interceptions (60 percent) for 1,538 yards and 20 touchdowns. He also rushed for 345 yards and scored seven times. Hager, a bruising runner, has gained 1,016 yards and scored 17 touchdowns. After looking at Lee's stats, led by fullback Isaac Garnett with 1,727 yards and 21 touchdowns, it's hard to figure why both coaches expect a defensive game.

In stopping Lee's offense, the Panthers have their work cut out for them even though Wilkins said, "I don't think they're going to air the ball out on us," referring to Lee's almost non-existent passing attack. "They're going to try to do what they've been doing all year. I wouldn't change a whole lot as successful as they've been with it. Their offensive line is as good as I've seen in high school football and I've seen some great ones. Average backs, and their backs are well above average, would get a lot of yards. Their line is big and aggressive with a lot of mobility and that's what impresses me about them."

The Panthers are entering the game about as healthy as a team can be at this stage of the season. "Marcus Hudgins (the starting tailback) is going to be out and possibly (guard/kicker) Alfred Clark may be out also," said Wilkins. "Hudgins has a rib injury. He was speared in the Rider game on the second play of the game. Clark has an ankle injury."

Dal Watson, a 180-pound junior, will step in for Hudgins and Kirk Strahan, punter/flanker/cornerback, could step in and do the kicking for Clark.

Turning the quarterfinal corner

McCamey tests unbeaten Morton

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

And then there was one.

When the state football playoffs began November 11, the McCamey Badgers were not considered the team to beat among class AA entrants.

After all, the Badgers needed a 31-6 win over Stanton on the last night of the regular season just to gain a playoff berth. In the playoffs, and especially considering the Badgers opened at Marfa, McCamey seemed destined for a short visit.

THAT WAS four weeks ago. Now the 10-3 Badgers are all that remain among area playoff squads after Crane suffered a 33-11 walloping from Post last week. McCamey makes their drive for the final four playoff spots tonight in Andrews.

The Badgers advanced with a 13-3 win over Haskell last Friday in Big Spring. The game was brutal, and the hitting on both sides was tremendous. The Badgers need an equally strong effort tonight when they take on unbeaten Morton, 13-0.

"They are by far the most talented team we have seen," said Badger coach Buster Leaf. "They've got the best talent of any AA team in the state."

Not exactly the kind of team one wishes to face in a big game. Morton has been successful because of an offense Leaf calls "explosive."

"We've got a pretty good picture of them and they are an excellent offensive team," said Leaf, in his first year at McCamey after a 25-6-1 showing in three seasons at New Deal. "They run the option and throw the football very well."

Evidently. Morton's offense is guided by the passing combo of quarterback Ron Kuehler and split end Don Kuehler.

The seniors are quite related, and the longball passing has probably been going on for the last several years. Ron has netted over 1,800 yards aerially, and brother Don gas been the recipient of most of the action.

Also seeing action on both ends of the passing game is junior reciever Ricky Williams. Williams backs up the Kuehlers at both positions when needed.

And when Morton runs the ball, fullback Venie Evans has been productive. Last week, Morton smashed a good Hamlin team in the regionals, 38-20.

"THEY HAVE excellent recievers everywhere and we haven't faced anybody that can throw like they can," said Leaf. "On defense they like to put eight or nine men up on the line and put a lot of pressure on you. They're a big play team both offensively and defensively. They're very well balanced. What they do is keep you honest."

Since honesty is the best policy, McCamey has a few players, too.

Freshman tailback Rodney Terry, a 5-6, 150 pound flyer, and sizable fullback Robert Day, 6-2, 200, have nabbed most of the headlines for the Badgers on offense. But the most vital cog has undoubtedly been quarterback Ray Zarate, an all-district choice in 1982 as a junior and a likely candidate in '83.

Zarate doesn't usually turn in big numbers offensively, but his contributions come in subtler fashion. Against Haskell, Zarate often was wiped out on the option play, McCamey's bread and butter. But Zarate runs the option as if his parents teethed him on a football. Against Haskell, defenders got their hits in on Zarate, but rarely did he have the ball.

ZARATE IS the focal figure. If he can get the Badgers cranked up, McCamey is capable of scoring on anybody, and against Morton the Badgers will need points. "They've scored a minimum of 20 points per game," Leaf said of Morton. "Against Wall, they gained over 500 yards of offense."

Wall won the Badger's district 8-AA with a 7-0 edging of McCamey.

Leaf knows Zarate's importance to McCamey's game. "He understands the option. We knew he could do the job." Tonight Leaf hopes Zarate does the job again.

Cartwright shoots down Bullets

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cartwright learned that life without Jeff Ruland is pretty easy.

Pumping in a game-high 25 points in three quarters, the New York Knicks' center used his four-inch height advantage over 6-foot-10 Ricky Mahorn and led his team to its third victory in three nights by defeating the Washington Bullets 127-93 in a National Basketball Association game Thursday night.

"I was ready to take advantage," said Cartwright, who hit 11-of-14 from the field, hauled down 10 rebounds, and blocked two shots. "I was ready to win."

Before the start of the game, several Knicks heard that Ruland, a moose of a man at 6-11, 240 pounds and Washington's leading scorer and rebounder, would sit because of a sore left hand.

Cartwright's first reaction was joy, then he felt some apprehension.

"I was worried about a psychological letdown," said Cartwright. "It's easy to say to yourself, 'Well, this is going to be a piece of cake.' But you have to fight that. I still had to go out there and get the job done. I never let up."

New York, winning 10 of its last 12 games and boasting a string of seven consecutive home victories, dominated the boards, outrebounding Washington 67-33 and setting a team record for offensive rebounds in the current Madison Square Garden with 29. Seven Knicks grabbed five or more rebounds.

Warriors 106, Kings 95

In Oakland, Calif., Purvis Short scored a season-high 35 points and Darren Tillis, playing for injured center J.B. Carroll, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked four shots to lead Golden State over Kansas City.

After the Kings closed to within three, 83-80, Short hit a baseline jumper and Floyd made a layup to point the Warriors toward an easy victory.

Upsets in N.J.: Maryland, Spartans take tumble

By The Associated Press

This is supposed to be tuneup time for both Michigan State and Maryland as they prepare for their respective conference basketball races in about a month or so.

But both national powers ran into some unexpected opposition Thursday night at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

Unheralded St. Peter's of New Jersey stunned the 11th-ranked Spartans of the Big Ten 73-66 in the opener of a doubleheader before Ohio State upset the sixth-ranked Terrapins of the Atlantic Coast Conference 72-68.

The last two minutes of the opener "was like an eternity" to St. Peter's Coach Bob Dukiet after he watched his team lose most of an 18-point first-half lead.

"It's a scary feeling," Dukiet said. "You hate to see a game go out from under you when you've been in control so long."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 12 Louisiana State tripped Washington 51-48, No. 14 Arkansas defeated Southeast Missouri State 98-69, No. 17 Fresno State trimmed California-Davis 92-49 and No. 20 Virginia Commonwealth routed Johns Hopkins 94-46.

Tommy Best's 22 points and 20 by Shelton Gibbs led St. Peter's first-game shocker over a supposedly vastly superior opponent. The Peacocks' early 18-points lead was whittled to 28-21 at halftime. But they built it to 17 twice in the second half before Sam Vincent, who scored 30 points for Michigan State, triggered a comeback for the Spartans that fell short.

Six points by Gibbs in the final 35 seconds, including the conversion of a two-shot technical foul, clinched the victory from the little Jesuit school from Jersey City.

"I think we lost the game in the first 10 minutes," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "Their overplaying, aggressive defense really bothered us. I take nothing away from them. I give them credit."

"We knew they weren't going to quit and give up a victory," Best said of Michigan State. "In the final minutes it was flowing in my mind the possibility that this one would get away. But I had confidence in our guys."

Tony Campbell, a 6-foot-7 senior from nearby Teaneck, led the way for Ohio State in the second game with 32 points, while freshman Curtis Wilson hit five free throws in the last 23 seconds to nail it down for the Buckeyes.

"We pretty much took it to them," said Campbell, whose Buckeyes converted 82 per cent of their floor shots in the second half and 57 per cent overall. "We played the way we wanted to play and take control."

Campbell's 23rd point came on a layup with 48 seconds remaining, giving the Buckeyes a 67-64 advantage. Maryland's Adrian Branch then hit a jumper to reduce the margin to 67-66 before Wilson scored his only points of the night.

Top Twenty

Don Redden sank a pair of free throws with 10 seconds to play to help LSU stem a Washington comeback. Derrick Taylor led LSU with 16 points and was the only Tiger player in double figures. Redden finished with six — all in the second half.

Joe Kleine scored 19 points and Alvin Robertson tossed in 18 to pace Arkansas over Southeast Missouri State. The Razorbacks were ahead 39-31 at halftime, and erupted for 59 points in the second half.

"We played fairly well considering we were only three days back from Alaska," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, whose team opened the season in the Great Alaska Shootout. "Usually it takes four or five days to get your body back.

"Our effort was tremendous. We had several opportunities to break the game open early, but lost our patience on the offensive end. We were pleased to be able to play so many players. Our young players got a feel for the game and for playing in Barnhill Arena without having pressure."

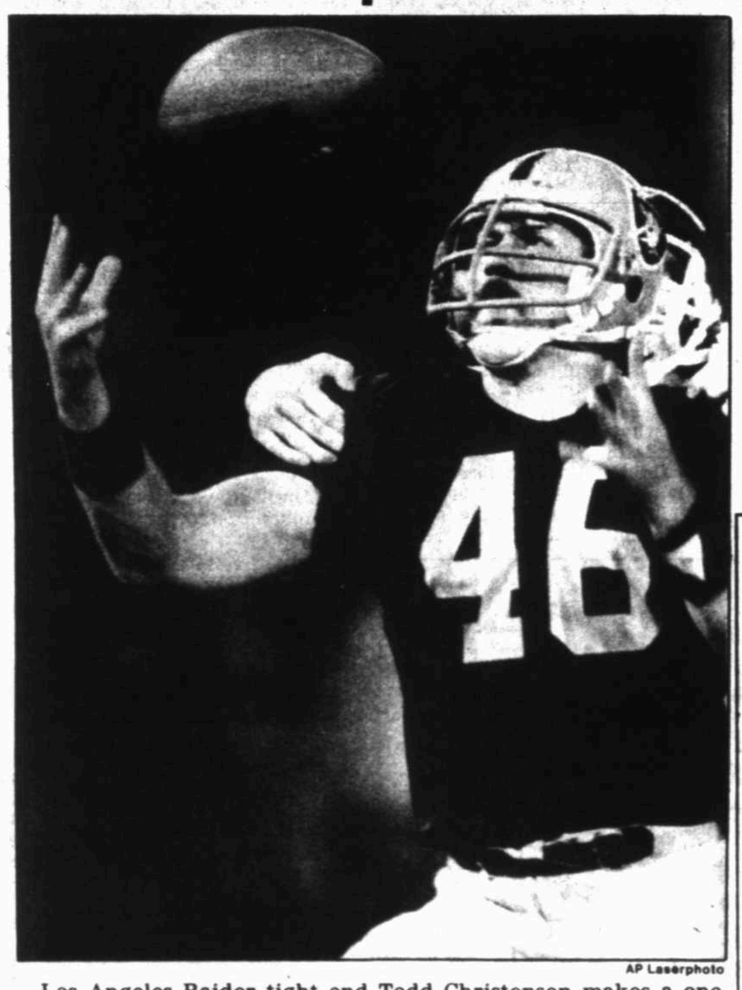

Ron Anderson and Scott Barnes scored 14 points apiece as Fresno State defeated Cal-Davis. The Bulldogs broke the game open early in the first half, scoring 20 straight points and taking a 33-9 lead.

Rolando Lamb and Robert Dickerson hit 15 floor shots without a miss between them as Virginia Commonwealth routed Johns Hopkins. Lamb wound up hitting nine of nine from the floor for 18 points and Dickerson was six of six for 12.

Unranked Teams

In other action, Charlie Smith scored 17 points and Keith Thomas had 16 to lead Old Dominion to an an 80-62 victory over Fairleigh-Dickinson; Army converted 24 of 26 free throw attempts, including seven in the final minutes by Randy Cozzens, to capture a 68-62 decision over Holy Cross; Steve Harris scored 28 points and Tulsa rode a first-half surge past Oral Roberts for an 87-81 victory and Carl Henry scored 22 points to lead Kansas to a 67-63 victory over St. Louis University.

Raiders plaster Chargers, 42-10; clinch AFC West

AP Laserphoto

Los Angeles Raider tight end Todd Christensen makes a one-handed grab of a pass for a touchdown in Thursday action against the San Diego Chargers. Christensen caught three TD's in the 42-10 win.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Things weren't going well for Jim Plunkett and the rest of the Los Angeles Raiders in their quest for a another divisional crown.

After 28 minutes of football Thursday night, the Raiders had gained but 72 offensive yards. Only 14 of the Raiders' 26 plays had gained yardage. Quarterback Plunkett was chugging for his life in the face of an inspired San Diego pass rush.

The Charger offense, meanwhile, had scored on Dan Fouts' 5-yard swing pass to Chuck Muncie and on Rolf Benirschke's 24-yard field goal.

At moments like these, all eyes turn to the sidelines for guidance. And when they did, Coach Tom Flores came up with the play that turned the game around and led to a 42-10 National Football League rout the Raiders.

"It was an ideal call on his part," running back Marcus Allen said of the 43-yard option pass he threw to Todd Christensen with 1:50 left in the first half. "It was the right time for a play like that."

That score signalled the beginning of a stunning eight minute, five-touchdown symphony of offensive and defensive dominance by the Raiders.

With the victory, the 11th in 14 games for Los Angeles, went the AFC West crown, the Raiders' ninth in 12 years. San Diego, meanwhile, sank to 5-9.

The Raiders didn't appear poised to score — indeed, didn't seem to be doing much of anything — when Allen took a handoff from Plunkett and headed for the left sideline.

Suddenly, Allen screeched to a halt and threw back to his right to a sprinting Christensen, who was running free at the Charger 10.

"I felt pretty confident throwing the ball," said Allen, a former prep quarterback, "but he was so wide open that I was a little concerned about overthrowing it."

"He's an excellent passer," Flores said of Allen. "We felt their defense overreacted, and we executed perfectly."

"We're notorious for being slow starters," said Christensen. "It took us awhile to get going but it was only a matter of time."

Brought to life by the Allen-Christensen strike, the Raiders needed only five plays and 26 seconds to move 65 yards for the go-ahead touchdown. It came 32 seconds before the half when Christensen made a one-handed grab of a feather-soft 25-yard pass from Plunkett.

Frank Hawkins ran 21 and 1 yards for touchdowns early in the third period before defensive back Rod Martin made it 35-10 with a 29-yard pass interception return at the 8:33 mark.

On Sunday, it will be Buffalo at Kansas City, Chicago at Green Bay, Miami at Houston, New Orleans at New England, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, Atlanta at Washington, the Los Angeles Rams at Philadelphia, St. Louis at the New York Giants,Dallas at Seattle, Tampa Bay at San Francisco, Cleveland at Denver and the New York Jets at Baltimore.

Minnesota is at Detroit Monday night in a battle for the top in the NFC Central. Both teams are 7-6.

Lee linebacker Reggie Ellis also has a shoulder problem and defensive lineman David Jackson has a sprained ankle. Both went through workouts this week.

"Considering the point of the season we are in, I feel we are in pretty good shape as far as the team is concerned," said Dykes.

The massive exodus from the Permian Basin to the Staked Plains of Lubbock is expected to begin early Saturday morning. Ticket sales in both Odessa and Midland have been good, as expected. Some are predicting a crowd of around 30,000 or more, depending on Saturday's weather. Around 25,000 from the Petro-Plex cities are expected.

Although ticket sales were to close in Midland and Odessa at 1 p.m. today, tickets may still be purchased at Jones Stadium Saturday. All tickets at the gate will be $6 each.

"If this one doesn't send chills up and down your spine, you don't need to be associated with football," said Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski, who once coached with Wilkins over at Permian. "Please tell the last one to leave from Midland and Odessa to turn out the lights."

EVEN THOUGH the two teams are only 20 miles apart, the two coaches opted for Jones Stadium as a neutral site for the game because of the seating in Midland's Memorial Stadium.

If Wilkins and Dykes had decided on a home-and-home coin flip and Dykes had been the winner, then the game would have been played in Midland. It was a chance that Wilkins didn't want to take because "We'd have been allowed only 2,500 tickets and we have 5,500 regular season ticket holders. There would have been a mass blood-letting to get those tickets. It wouldn't have been fair to the fans."

With the game being played at 47,000-seat Jones Stadium, the only fans who won't be able to see it are the ones unwilling to travel the extra hundred miles. Since the game is being played in Texas — where distance is measured by how many days it takes to get there — what's an extra hundred miles or so?

Holmes ponders Coetzee bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes could be a busy man next week, though not in the ring.

Holmes will be at a news conference next Wednesday, where he says he definitely will not announce his retirement from boxing. He's also been invited to Las Vegas next week to speak at the World Boxing Council convention.

"I'm going to talk about everything," Holmes said in a telephone interview from his hotel in Philipsburg, N.J., which will be the site of the news conference at noon EST next Wednesday. "I'm gonna talk about business."

And business means money to the WBC heavyweight champion, who has signed a contract to meet Greg Page, the WBC's No. 1 contender, but is balking at the purse.

"I'm going to quit if I don't get the right kind of money," he said Thursday. "Take all the money away from Greg Page and give it to me and let him fight me for free."

WBC President Jose Sulaiman said Thursday in Tokyo he would ask Holmes to attend the WBC convention to discuss the WBC's wish that the undefeated champion fight Page.

"I am asking him to be there and discuss with us his intentions. The WBC cannot and will not allow any other world title defenses" except with Page, Sulaiman said.

Sulaiman said if Holmes does not fight Page within 90 days of the Las Vegas convention, he will be stripped of his title.

There also is the possibility Holmes won't fight again. Asked about a definite retirement date, however, he said, "I need leeway."

Holmes again talked about a possible fight with Gerrie Coetzee, the World Boxing Association champ from South Africa.

Nordiques explode on Montreal

By The Associated Press

The Montreal Canadiens had a two-man advantage and led Quebec 3-1 midway through the second period. That was the turning point — for the Nordiques.

The Canadiens failed even to get off a shot during the power play, Dale Hunter scored twice within a two-minute stretch late in the period to tie the score 3-3, and the Nordiques went on to a 6-3 rout Thursday night in the National Hockey League.

"That was the turning point, for sure," Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron said. "Our guys killed that penalty so well they didn't get a shot on net. It was a really big lift for us."

Alain Cote scored the tie-breaker at 7:19 of the third period when he picked up a loose puck in front of Montreal goaltender Richard Sevigny, and Bo Berglund added a goal at 13:10. Peter Stastny scored into an empty net with 26 seconds left to make it 6-3 as the Nordiques won their fourth straight.

"I don't know how we can play two first periods like we did and have it taken away from us," Montreal Coach Bob Berry said. "Well, actually, I don't think we had it taken away. I think we just gave it to them."

Bobby Smith scored twice for the Canadiens.

In other NHL games, Boston clobbered Vancouver 7-1, Minnesota defeated Pittsburgh 6-4, Washington downed New Jersey 8-4, Calgary beat the New York Islanders 6-2 and Winnipeg defeated Los Angeles 6-5 in overtime.

Bruins 7, Canucks 1

Keith Crowder scored two goals and assisted on another to move Boston back into first place in the Adams Division with 15 points. Boston outshot Vancouver 34-18.

Crowder's first goal gave the Bruins a 3-1 lead midway through the second period, and he capped Boston's scoring with a goal early in the third period.

North Stars 6, Penguins 4

Tom McCarthy snapped a 4-4 tie with his second goal of the game at 1:02 of the final period, and Willie Plett gave Minnesota a two-goal lead 6:15 later. The victory was Minnesota's eighth in 11 games, while Pittsburgh has lost four in a row.

McCarthy's winning goal, his 15th of the season, came on a rebound of a shot by Dino Ciccarelli.

Capitals 8, Devils 4

Chris Valentine and Dave Christian scored two goals apiece, and Washington rallied twice in the first period before routing the Devils, who have lost 12 consecutive road games.

The first period ended in a 3-3 tie, and Bengt Gustafsson scored the tie-breaker at 8:13 of the second period.

Flames 6, Islanders 2

Jim Peplinski and Doug Risebrough scored two goals apiece as Calgary continued its mastery this season of the defending Stanley Cup champion Islanders. The Flames have beaten New York in both meetings this season.

Ed Beers and Steve Bozek also scored for Calgary, while Butch Goring and Bob Bourne had New York's goals.

Jets 6, Kings 5

Defenseman Tim Watters scored his first goal of the season with 2:19 left in overtime to boost Winnipeg over Los Angeles. Jim Fox of the Kings had sent the game into overtime when he scored with 3:02 left in regulation.

Charlie Simmer scored three goals for the Kings, who were unable to get a shot on goal in the extra period.

NBA refs get fan as mediator

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A Washington Bullets fan who attends a dozen or so National Basketball Association games a year will try to help settle the lingering NBA-referees dispute.

"I've been to two games so far this season," said federal mediator Ed McMahon, who was assigned to the case Thursday after the league agreed to accept mediation. "I'm clearly familiar with the issues."

The call for mediation came last week from the referees, who have been locked out by the league since Sept. 1, when their collective bargaining agreement expired.

The league decided Thursday to accept the suggestion, but rejected Philadelphia mediator Robert Kyler, who was first assigned to the case by the Federal Mediation Service. The NBA's objection to Kyler was apparently because he is from the same city where the referees union is headquartered. McMahon, based in Washington, was the replacement.

"I've been trying to get a meeting but I have not been successful," he said. "The union is ready to meet but it looks like it won't be until early next week. Management is saying it is unable to come to Washington and they would like to do it in New York."

The move to mediation came after some progress was reported by the union in talks that resumed earlier this week.

"We seemed to have made significant progress at a session in New York on Tuesday where their committee and (outgoing Commissioner Larry) O'Brien and (incoming Commissioner David) Stern and three owners on their advisory committee were present for the NBA," said union counsel Richie Phillips.

Being teen-age tennis whiz has drawbacks

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Kay McEnroe didn't rear her eldest son to become the world's greatest tennis player, but that's what she got — plus some extras.

John McEnroe stormed into the Wimbledon semifinals at 18, won two Wimbledons and three U. S. Opens before he reached age 25 and became labeled a sulking, temperamental genius who could erupt at the slightest touch of a tender nerve.

Journalists and fans the world over labeled him a spoiled brat. They said his father should turn him over his knee and spank him and his mother should send him to bed without his supper.

Kay McEnroe was asked if anyone had ever made the suggestion to her personally.

"Not to my face," she replied wryly.

"Of course, I hear it from the stands sometimes and read it in the papers. I don't let it upset me. He is still my son. He has accomplished a great deal. I am proud of him.

"When he was growing up, I told him I had two ambitions for him — one, that he would go to a good college and the other that he would some day play on the Davis Cup team. After he had done both (one year at Stanford University), he came to me and said, 'Mom, now may I lead my own life?' "

Kay McEnroe attended a luncheon in New York this week to announce site and dates of the 1984 Head Easter Bowl tournament for juniors, in Tucson, Ariz., April 16-22, and to explore some of the inbred problems of teenage tennis.

As mother of the world's most famous product of this highly competitive, pressurized assembly line, she was naturally the center of attention.

She vigorously denied that John was pampered at home or developed arrogant and undisciplined habits on the tough junior circuit.

"When growing up, if he failed to obey or acted sassy, which wasn't very often, he got his spankings as any child," she said. "I traveled with John when he was playing junior tournaments. I never saw an argument or outburst on the court. You know, juniors called their own lines. John bent over backwards rather than make a call in his own favor."

The junior circuit has been called a "jungle" because of the competitiveness of the kids and the jealousies and intensities of doting parents.

"While you're losing, you're playing for fun. As soon as you win a tournament you enter a brand new world," said Seena Hamilton, founder and director of the Head Easter Bowl event and well-known promotional consultant.

As soon as a kid shows promise, he is usually adopted by a sectional association. He gets a special coach. Manufacturers fight to give him rackets, balls and all necessary attire. He is launched on a special development program. The same goes for the girls.

Julie Bonder, a tennis mother from Ann Arbor, Mich., said she drove 120,000 miles and spent $160,000 in two years with her daughter, Lisa, now 18, and regarded as a comer in the ladies' division.

"We didn't have the same problems," said Mrs. McEnroe. "We lived only 15 minutes from the Port Washington (NY) Academy where John could take lessons from two of the best — Harry Hopman and Tony Palafox.

Could it be that young John sometimes tosses a tantrum because it's now expected of him?

"Show biz," said Kay McEnroe, with a wink.

Chaps lose at buzzer

CLARENDON— The Midland College Chaparrals found the road an unhospitable place Thursday and dropped a heartbreaker, 62-61, to Clarendon in a Western Junior College Conference game.

The Chaps and Clarendon battled practically to a draw throughout the contest. The Chaps lead by a point with six seconds to play, but Clarendon's Kent Foltz rebounded a missed shot and tapped it back in as the buzzer sounded. The basket was Foltz' only score of the game.

The Chaps drop to 9-4, 1-1 in WJCC play. Clarendon is also 1-1 in the loop. The Chaps were lead by Teviin Binns' 14 points, while fellow freshman Jerald Wrightsil of Big Spring chipped in a dozen.

MC returns home Monday for a game against South Plains College. Before the game at Langford Chapparal Center the Chaps will unveil their new mascot.

Public Notice

In order to implement the Modified Final Judgement entered in United States v. American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and the Plan of Reorganization which was approved by the United States District Court on August 5, 1983, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., have jointly filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas an Application for and Notification of the Transfer of Facilities and Voting Stock.

This application affects the provision of interLATA service throughout the State of Texas. Effective with the implementation of this transfer of facilities, which is expected to be on January 1, 1984, Southwestern Bell will offer telephone service only within certain geographical areas defined as LATAs (intraLATA) in Texas. Concurrently, interLATA communication service presently provided by Southwestern Bell will be provided by AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc.

For purposes of this application, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., has filed a Tariff with the PUC containing rates applicable to all of its services in Texas at the same level as Southwestern Bell's current Tariffs. Certain adjustments necessary to implement divestiture have been made to the structure of the Tariffs.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso al Publico

A fin de cumplir la Decisión Final Modificada registrada en el caso de los United States v. American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (Compañía Americana de Teléfonos y Telégrafos) así como el Plan de Reorganización que fue aprobado por la Corte de Distrito de los Estados Unidos el día 5 de Agosto de 1983, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. y AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., han presentado en forma conjunta ante la Public Utility Commission of Texas (Comisión de Servicios Públicos: PUC) una Solicitud y Notificación de la Transferencia de Instalaciones y Acciones Votantes.

Esta solicitud afecta la suministración de los servicios interLATA en todo el estado de Texas. Con vigencia desde el cumplimiento de esta transferencia de instalaciones, presuntamente el 1° de Enero de 1984, Southwestern Bell solamente proveerá servicios telefónicos dentro de ciertas áreas geográficas, denominadas LATAs (es decir, servicio intraLATA) en Texas. Concurrentemente, los servicios de comunicación interLATA que actualmente provee Southwestern Bell serán provistos por AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc.

Para el propósito de esta solicitud, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., ha registrado un Arancel ante la PUC (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) que incluye las tarifas aplicables a todos sus servicios en Texas, al mismo nivel que el Arancel actual de Southwestern Bell. Se han realizado algunos ajustes en la estructura arancelaria, por ser necesarios para llevar a cabo el desposeimiento.

Toda persona que desee intervenir en el proceso o comentar la demanda debe dirigirse a Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, o llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223 o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para sordos.

Customer traffic is increasing at Midland Park Mall as the hoilday shopping season gets underway. Area retailers are encouraged with early sales figures.

Midland retailers expect higher Christmas sales

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

As Midland retailers begin tallying up sales for the traditional first week of Christmas shopping, all are very pleased to see customer traffic and spending increasing over last year's holiday buying season.

Nationally, industry analysts are predicting this year's Christmas sales will be approximately 15-20 percent better than last year. Analysts say Christmas sales generally account for as much as 40 percent of the year's total business. Locally, area retailers, crediting an improving economy, predicted more conservatively, that sales through the Christmas season would be up 5-15 percent over 1982.

Bill Warner, manager of Dillards, said, "We have been experiencing increases in sales. I think we've definitely had much more traffic this year than last year."

While Warner was not able to release specific projections for Christmans sales, he did say, "As far as this store is concerned, we're pretty much running along as targeted."

Warner said Dillards was mostly selling traditional Christmas items.

"In this store, there's nothing unusually different this year. However, there has been one shift this year; We're not doing anything in the electronic game business per say but we are doing a real good home computer business which has been a complete shift in the last year."

Sales at Sakowitz so far are "excellent," said Richard Rettinger, store manager, and were "up in double figures," over last year's. He also said Sakowitz's transactions are up which indicates greater traffic in the store.

Ken Plotner, manager of Dunlaps, said customers were beginning to get in the Christmas spirit.

"People are out and they're spending money. Our sales right now are about 12 percent ahead of last year."

Linda Hodges, of Peyton's Toys, said "Sales were up quite a bit and customer traffic seemed to be higher than last year."

Like retailers across the nation, the most requested items at Peyton's are the "Cabbage Patch Kids" dolls and "Care Bears." And like most retailers, Hodges said, Peyton's was currently out of both items.

Sales and customer traffic at Gibsons has been increasing all year said Steve Walker, store manager.

"We started noticing a difference in sales the week before Thanksgiving. I think everybody decided to stop saving their money and go out and spend some. We've had three excellent weeks so far."

Gibsons is predicting an increase of 15 percent over last year's sales and if current sales are any indication, Walker said, they'll have no problem making it. Tape recorders and telephones, he said, were popular with his customers.

Bob Jackson, manager of Bealls, said Christmas sales since Friday were "in a word, super!

"Friday and Saturday were the best two days, after Thanksgiving, we've ever had — far beyond our expectations. The Lord has blessed us, and I don't mean that facetiously. The economy is suppose to be down but we've been blessed all year long," he said.

Jackson expects sales to run about 15-20 percent higher than last year. The biggest item of the year, he said, was sweaters.

"Sweaters have not been real big and strong for several years and now they're back. Men's wool sport coats are very, very good and gold jewelry is just blowing off the racks. We've had to call twice in the last two weeks to have shipments flown in."

Mike Milligan, manager of Sears, said sales have been good since the start of the Christmas buying season. However, he was concerned Saturday's football game between Midland Lee and Odessa Permian in Lubbock would have an adverse affect on this weekend's sales.

Milligan expects sales to be up only about 5 percent over last year's holiday season because of the drop off in major appliance buying.

"With the decline in the number of new home starts, major appliances are just not selling."

Sears' most popular items, Milligan said, were home computers, microwaves, televisions and telephones. While they may not be a traditional Christmas item, he added, coats sales have increased significantly.

As expected, last Friday was the busiest day of the year, for Midland's K-Mart, said Jack Ferguson, merchandise manager.

"We'll have busier days. Usually Saturdays are our biggest days of the week and the Saturday before Christmas will be the year's busiest for us."

Ferguson expects this years sales to be up 10-15 percent. Toys, especially the "higher ticket" ones — such as bicycles, he said, are popular with K-Mart customers this season. Ferguson also said name brand watches were also very popular.

Grand jury probes oil lease deal

AUSTIN (AP) — A former state land commissioner has been questioned by a federal grand jury wanting to know how a West Texas oil company won a lucrative drilling lease on state land, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

In a settlement negotiated by current Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, West Texas Mineral Interests Inc. was given the right to drill on a 160-acre tract of state-owned land in Eastland County.

The company filed a claim to explore the land under Texas' old prospecting law, even though Dallas oilman Alan Balser had won the right to drill there in an October 1982 lease sale, the News reported.

Mauro said Thursday that he is not concerned about the grand jury's investigation.

"There were a number of rumors associated with what was happening in Eastland County, all of which started eight months before I got into office," Mauro said. "I'm glad the grand jury is looking into it and taking care of any problems."

West Texas Mineral Interests filed a claim under the state's turn-of-the-century prospecing law on the Eastland County land in 1982, several months before Balser won the lease bid under a 1939 law generally thought to have repealed the prospecting statute.

Former Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong refused in late 1982 to recognize West Texas Mineral Interests' claim, saying the Legislature had repealed oil-drilling rights under prospecting claims.

The company, based in Eastland, filed suit in state district court in October 1982 and Judge Jim Wright ruled in the company's favor a few weeks later, granting an injunction against the awarding of the drilling rights to anyone else.

Armstrong and the attorney general's office appealed the ruling.

California - Midland oil pipeline plans awaiting approval

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — A 1,200-mile crude-oil pipeline that would stretch from California to Texas through the San Bernardino County desert is set to begin construction late next year, the project manager said.

"It will be the first major west-to-east crude oil pipeline in the United States," Ron Hinn of the All American Pipeline Co. said.

But permits from more than 50 government agencies must be approved if the project is to proceed, U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials said Tuesday.

Hinn and representatives of the bureau and the state Lands Commission appeared at a public meeting to explain the project.

After gathering comments from people living near the proposed pipeline route, federal and state land officials will prepare an environmental impact study on the project. Permit approvals will then be sought.

The 30-inch-diameter pipeline is designed to transport 300,000 barrels of oil a day. It will begin west of Santa Barbara in Las Flores Canyon and end in Midland.

The oil, heated by natural gas at furnace stations, will pass north to Bakersfield, then southeast through Tehachapi Pass and into San Bernardino County along Highway 58 through Barstow. From Barstow, the oil will flow along old Highway 66 to Cadiz and then southeast through Blythe in Riverside County.

All American will build the line from Bakersfield to Texas.

The line from Santa Barbara to Bakersfield will be constructed by Celeron Pipeline. Both firms are subsidiaries of Celeron Corp., a subsidiary of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

The project was spurred by recent oil discoveries in the Santa Barbara Channel, Hinn said.

Gulf, Pickens ready for face-to-face showdown

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp., maneuvering to retain control of its future, confronts its chief opponent, Mesa Petroleum Co. Chairman T. Boone Pickens, face-to-face for the first time today.

Gulf management, under pressure from the Texas oilman to set aside oil and gas reserves as a royalty trust, hopes to stymie Pickens' aggressive plan by reincorporating under Delaware laws.

At a special shareholders meeting here, the nation's fifth-largest oil company is to complete balloting on whether to move the corporate charter from Pennsylvania. The results will not be certified for at least two weeks after the meeting at the David L. Lawrence Convention Center.

By reincorporating, Gulf could restrict shareholders' ability to call special meetings and would eliminate their rights of cumulative voting.

Otherwise, Pickens could elect three members to Gulf's 13-member board of directors next May with the 12.5 percent of Gulf stock he said he controls.

"It's a defensive move," said Arthur L. Smith of Oppenheimer & Co. Inc. of New York.

Under Pickens' plan, royalties from Gulf's oil and gas production would flow directly to its shareholders and would not go to the corporation for dividends and other corporate uses.

Pickens claims the combined value of shares in a Gulf royalty trust, plus shares in what remains of Gulf, would exceed the current price of Gulf stock.

Oppenheimer, reporting independently of Gulf and Pickens, said the estimated combined market values of the two stocks would range between $50 and $75 per share. Gulf stock has been trading in the mid-$40s.

"Since mid-July we've been suggesting that Gulf represents one of the best values in the oil industry. Obviously, the Mesa-Pickens group saw the value first," Smith said Thursday.

But Gulf Chairman James Lee has said royalty trusts would deny his company the revenue needed to finance the exploration for oil and gas, and would subject individual shareholders to new taxes on income from the trust.

He and other Gulf officials have been criss-crossing the country lobbying large shareholders with management's message, while two proxy solicitation firms have been hired to augment the company's campaign.

For management to win authorization for the reincorporation, at least 50 percent of Gulf's approximately 165 million shares must be voted in favor of the move.

Since a share not voted counts as a vote against the move, management needs a heavy vote turnout to overcome the 20.6 million shares controlled by the Mesa group.

The Mesa group bought 705,400 shares this week for about $31.3 million and intends to buy more stock, Mesa said.

The paper proxy ballots will be entrusted for verification and counting to CT Corp. of Delaware, said John Boros, a Mesa Petroleum vice president.

In addition, Pickens' central issue of whether a royalty trust is appropriate for an integrated corporation of Gulf's size won't be addressed today. Debate was to be limited to the merits of reincorporation in Delaware.

The merits of a Gulf's royalty trust could be taken up at a subsequent special shareholders meeting that Pickens could call providing he stops management's reincorporation plan.

Otherwise, the debate might have to wait until Gulf's annual shareholders meeting next May.

OIL FACT

1920

Sam Remo Oil Agreement signed between Britain and France on April 24 and 25. Britain assigned protective mandate over Palestine and Mesopotamia, and France granted mandate over Syria and Lebanon. France awarded 25 percent interest in Mesopotamia petroleum, and French are to permit construction of two pipelines from Mesopotamia through French-mandated territories to the Mediterranean.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 247 taxable funds)		39	8.49	8.53

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 247 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $563 million to $162.5 billion for the week ended November 30, 1983. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.49% from 8.54%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 8.53% from 8.56%. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 39 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Yields on the taxable funds slipped in all categories this week, reflecting the significant dip in short-term interest rates at the end of October. This week's asset decline of $563 million marks the third consecutive week of declines. The 3-week total outflow of $1.2 billion is approximately half the $2.3 billion total increase experienced by the funds from early October thru mid-November.

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability.

Fighting fire

The Midland Fire Department responded Thursday night to a fire at the home of Mike Roark at 1413 Bedford at 9:18 p.m. The fire department's six vehicles responding to the blaze managed to extinguish the flames, but the home sustained extensive damage to a hallway and bedroom and smoke damage throughout.

More people rely on home health care

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With the rising costs of medical care and the inconvenience of hospitalization, an alternative is allowing more and more patients to remain in the comforts of their homes while cutting costs.

Home health care agencies, which provide medical personnel and equipment in the home, are growing in number and many insurance companies are beginning to recognize the benefits and cover the expenses.

From the elderly — the original target of home health care — to children, home services are provided for those who are terminally ill to those who are temporarily laid up.

"If you have quality nurses to take care of the patient's needs, the family can have time to enjoy the family member and not have to worry about the clinical aspects," said Shirley Kirkpatrick-DuPont, manager of Quality Care in Midland, which also serves Odessa and other area towns.

Working closely with the patient's physician, local agencies provide experienced nurses and other personnel to tend to the patient's medication and health needs on a schedule adapted to the patient's needs.

Occupational and physical therapists, dieticians, nurses aides and companions also are available to assist the other needs of the patient and family.

Therapists can work with the patients and show families how to continue carefully planned exercise routines. Occupational therapists assist disabled patients in relearning ways to dress, eat and function and speech therapists are beneficial to many stroke victims.

Nurses aides are available to bathe patients, change linens and help the patient in and out of wheelchairs.

"You're there where they need you," said Jean Cooper of We Care Home Health Agency, Inc. "And it's the extras that our people do that really mean a lot to our clients."

Many of the agencies not only provide medical personnel, but also help around the house. Whether the person serves as a companion who reads to the patient, a cook who helps the family with meals or as an errand-boy, freeing up the family so they can remain home with the patient, it all adds up to personal care.

We Care Home Health Agency received a letter written by a woman who had observed the care one patient and her family received from two of the We Care employees. The two women provided "peace and cleanliness out of chaos," she wrote. "It was marvelous to see the loving concern surrounding this family at such a difficult time."

While the personnel are hired by the agencies, many of the extras they do are on their own time. Taking home laundry and items that need mending as well as preparing casseroles and soups to take back with them on their next visit are not uncommon.

"I think one of the main reasons that everyone has gone into (home health care) is it seems like there has been an increase in the concern about nursing homes," said John Schmidt, owner and director of Contact Medical Services.

The company has been in business since 1977, but originally was working more along the lines of temporary staffing of nursing homes and hospitals.

"But from a business standpoint, we've seen a turnaround," Schmidt said. "Over the past six months to three years we've seen a change. It's been heavily home health vs. staffing."

He said the shift in emphasis stems from the economy, with more staffs staying at nursing homes and hospitals rather than "job-hopping" as they did in the past.

And because many patients and their families are opting for individual home health care out of concern about receiving skilled care in institutions, home health businesses have blossomed.

Majors, independents need united front

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

The oil and gas industry — independents and majors — must present a united front if they are to successfully combat political, environmental and economical forces opposing its future growth, said John E. Swearingen, recently retired board chairman of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

The majors and independents, whose ultimate objectives are the same — operating productively and profitably — must put aside destructive differences in order to achieve their goals, Swearingen told an audience of about 250 people at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Thursday at the first H.B. Fuqua Distinguished Lecture Series.

The series, established this year in honor of the retired chairman of Fort Worth National Bank, is supported by the Sid W. Richardson Foundation, Fort Worth. It will bring authorities in the fields of history, earth sciences, petroleum and museum sciences to Midland four times each year.

"Although we now face real and troublesome problems in the oil business, we always have. We cannot allow concerns of the moment — serious though they may be — to overshadow our vision and plans for the long term," Swearingen said.

The industry, he added, is being threatened by government intervention and the independents along with the majors "must meet this threat together." He also said what the two industry groups "share in common is infinitely more important than what divides us."

"Our industry needs both types of operators. In general, independents drill about 80 percent of the wells and the major companies discover about half the reserves. The major companies provide the trained manpower, the technology and the financial capabilities for the most part and the independent companies certainly provide the willingness to take risks."

Although the industry was unified in fighting for decontrol of crude oil prices, Swearingen said, it has been much less unified in fighting for decontrol of natural gas. He predicted the natural gas issue would not be settled for another 10 years.

"After all, 1984 will be an election year and I think it unlikely that Congress will act in an election year on a subject as emotional and controversial as natural gas price regulation."

Zack's freezes out runaway franchisees

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Yum Yum's is once again Zack's.

The frozen yogurt parlors underwent a name change and a royalty dispute earlier this year but these have been resolved by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

He ordered Yum Yum's owners — Travis Bennett of Midland and Eben D. Warner III of Odessa — to abide by their 20-year franchise agreement with Zack's Famous Frozen Yogurt and to pay the Metairie, La.-based Zack's $55,000 in past-due royalty payments.

The franchise agreement, which Warner and Bennett had tried to cancel after alleging Zack's had not fulfilled its part of an advertising-service contract, called for the holders of Zack's franchises to pay Zack's corporate offices 5 percent fees on the gross revenue. As of August, Zack's had 24 franchise outlets in five states.

Both Zack's and the Warner-Bennett partnership claimed breach of contract.

In January 1983, Zack's president, Sam Holt, in a memorandum to Zack's franchisees wrote that "our responsibility is to you," but the corporate Zack's "at times become frustrated because we cannot serve you at the level we would like to. We are a small company...Our intention is to serve you first and then make a profit."

Warner and Bennett discontinued paying franchise fees in mid-1983, dropped the Zack's name by advertising "Zack's is now Yum Yum's" and notified Zack's president of their cancellation of the franchise agreement.

In August, Warner and Bennett through their HH&M Development Co. filed suit in federal court for a declaratory judgment on the cancellation of the franchise agreement.

In turn, Zack's lodged a countersuit and said Warner and Bennett had no legal right to cancel the franchise agreement.

Bunton ordered Warner, Bennett and their HH&M Development Co. "to cease activities in contravention of or inconsistent with the Zack's" franchise agreement of May 26, 1981, and pay the back royalties from two Yum Yum's parlors in Midland, one in Odessa and two in San Antonio. In addition, the court order said Bennett and Warner as franchisees would not operate, own or have interest in "any restaurant," other than additional Zack's, serving yogurt as its primary menu, without Zack's written permission.

MISD to argue against annexation of land

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Attorneys for the Midland Independent School District and petitioners residing in the Ridgewood subdivision were to present arguments this morning before a Texas Education Agency hearing examiner. The dispute concerns the proposed annexation of 4,189 acres of land in west Midland County into the Ector County School District.

Representatives from Midland Independent School District, Midland College, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland County and Midland City Council PTA and State Rep. Tom Craddick were also expected to attend, but not testify at, the hearing.

After arguments are presented, the examiner will make a recommendation to Commissioner of Education Raymond Bynum, who is not expected to render a decision for several weeks.

The Ridgewood residents and HBF Corporation, developer of the nearby Mission Estates, are seeking to have 6.5 acres in Midland County annexed into the ECISD. Midland officials oppose the move and contend it cannot be done without their consent.

BULLETIN: Today's planned TEA hearing, scheduled for Austin, was cancelled due to poor weather in the state's capital.

Residents began looking into the possibility of annexation when ECISD proposed charging tuition for Midland County students. More than half the students in the area attend Odessa schools, which are about 10 miles closer than Midland schools. A majority of Ridgewood residents signed the petition requesting detachment of the land, much of which is already within Odessa city limits, from MISD.

While ECISD and the Ector County Commissioners approved the request for annexation, the Midland school board, county commissioners, college board and hospital board oppose it. Annexation would result in an immediate loss of $17 million from the school tax base, they say.

The petitioners contend section 19.261 of the Texas Education Code provides for such detachment and annexation. Midland officials say the code applies only to school systems within the same county.

Whatever the ruling, both sides have indicated they will appeal to the State Board of Education.

Historic Odessa house to 'pioneer' park

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It was one of a mere handful of houses crowding the Texas Pacific Railroad on the West Texas prairie in 1887.

The White-Pool house, it's called now, one of the last vestiges of 19th Century Odessa.

And now, it appears to have a destiny that will carry it far into the 21st Century and beyond.

With Community Development funds, private donations and the work of volunteers, Ector County is restoring the historic brick home and plans to landscape an adjoining lot to create a museum and Pioneer Park.

Restoration of the exterior of the structure was completed in March, while interior work is hoped to be finished by next spring.

"The house is going to be a living museum; we want it used," said Bobbie Klepper, research chairman of Ector County Historical Commission which is acting as trustee of the property. "I've got actual items that were in the home in 1887...Part of the rooms will reflect the ranching frontier period, parts of the house will reflect the oil boom era and some of the rooms will be furnished in the period but with redaptive re-use...In the dining room, small groups could hold luncheon meetings."

The house was built in 1887 on the highest knoll in south Odessa — now at 112 East Murphy St. just south of the railroad tracks — by Indiana native Charles White and his two adult sons.

"He was a courageous man," said Mrs. Klepper, who has conducted extensive research into the house's history. "He was in the neighborhood of 60 when he pulled up and came to this country."

The house originally sat within a 640-acre plat owned by White, who was a merchant and is known as the founder of agricultural effort in Ector County. White's agricultural endeavors included establishing a peach and pear tree orchard. The pioneer also tried his hand at growing sorghum cane until arid conditions persuaded him to abandon his efforts.

White eventually sold all but 50 acres of the original plat, and sold that remaining parcel and the house in 1923 to Oso William Pool, who still lives in Odessa. Pool converted it into a rent house during the initial oil boom of 1927.

The house was donated to the county in 1977 and was last occupied in 1979.

J.L. Moore Construction Company is serving as contractor for the restoration project, while architects are Bell, Klein and Hoffman of Austin. A spokesman for that firm indicated that if the house lasted a century in its original condition, "in its restored state it will be around at least five times as long."

The exterior work will cost approximately $150,000, while a similar amount is pegged for restoration of the interior.

The White-Pool House at 112 E. Murphy in Odessa is being restored to its 1887 splendor in a project that ultimately will see it as part of a pioneer park.

DEATHS

Lee A. Brown

Services for Lee A. "Pete" Brown, 56, of 1601 W. Louisiana, were to be at 3:30 p.m. today in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Roy Carley, assistant minister of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Brown died Wednesday in Tulsa, Okla., while on a business trip.

He was born Sept. 17, 1927, in Ochiltree County and grew up in Spearman. He received a degree in business administration at North Texas State University in 1957. He married Wanda Allen Oct. 5, 1956, in Denton. He was associated with the Fire Prevention and Engineer Bureau of Texas. He moved to Midland in 1966, from Lubbock. He was an independent landman at the time of his death.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Todd Albert Brown of Midland; three daughters, Bonnie Dee Brown of Los Angeles, Calif., Joni Lee Brown of Dallas, and Ami Lou Brown of Midland; and a brother, Jerry M. Brown of Midland.

Pallbearers were to be Les Dunlap, Bob Nelson, Gaylon Strickland, John Weldon, John Ellis and John Murphy.

The family requests memorials be sent to the estate of Lee Brown, 1601 W. Louisiana, Midland, Texas 79701.

Robert F. Meyer

Memorial services for Robert Fredrick Meyer, 67, of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church. Burial will be at Wichita Park Cemetery in Wichita, Kan.

Meyer died Wednesday at his home.

He was born Oct. 12, 1916, in Wichita, Kan. He studied geology at Wichita State University and was employed with Darby Petroleum Corp., in Wichita, Kan. In 1947, he transferred to Midland and was a district geologist with Kerr-McGee Oil Corp. He later was a district geologist for Bell Petroleum Co. For the past nine years, he was an independent consultant. He married Mary Louise Baughman. Ranchers, researchers talk over range management

Three-hundred Texas ranchers, researchers, government conservation agents, range students and professors are participating in the 33rd annual meeting of the Texas Section of the Society for Range Management (SRM) this weekend in Midland.

The event, keyed to the theme "Ranching in the Southwest," is being held in the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Featured speaker in the 7 p.m. banquet today will be Alpine rancher Hallie Stillwell.

Sessions earlier in the day were to include:

—"Ranching in the Southwest," by Dr. Gerald Thomas, national president of SRM and a New Mexico State University faculty member.

—"The Savory Grazing Method Under Arid Conditions," by Dr. Stan Parsons of Ranch Management Consultants in Albuquerque, N.M., and conductor of a school on "Ranching for Profits."

—"Optimizing Wildlife Resources of Arid Range," by Dr. Sam Brownlee of the General Land Office.

—"Application of Prescribed Burning Under Arid Conditions," by Dr. Henry Wright of Texas Tech University.

—"Poison Plant Management on Southwest Rangelands," by Dr. John Reagor of the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratories.

—"Predator Control Update," by Dr. Dale Wade of TAEX.

—Discusion by an oil-and-gas panel of L.C. Dawson of Dawson Geophysical, C.F. Lawrence of C.F. Lawrence & Associates and Robert C. Dyer of Mobil Oil Corp.

In addition to tonight's talk by Ms. Stillwell, range-management awards will be made at the banquet. Other awards were to be made at noon and still others are to presented on Saturday.

Saturday's program will include:

—Discussion by a chemical-update panel of Jim Bob Grumbles of Dow Chemical USA, Keith Duncan of Elanco and Clarence Wessels of DuPont, 9 a.m.

—"Ecology Management and Control of Sand Shinnery," by Dr. Russ Pettit of Texas Tech University, 9:30 a.m.

—"Control of Plants That Cause Economic Losses to Ranchers in the Southwest," by Dr. Darrell Uecker of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

—"Woody Plant Control in the Southwest," by Dr. Pete Jacoby of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Others scheduled on the program include Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins; Billy Carr of University Lands in Midland; Gary Westmoreland, James Alderson, Sam Coleman, Steve Nelle and Mark Moseley, all with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service; Dr. Jim Nelson of Sul Ross State University; Dr. Don Sosebee of Texas Tech University; Dr. Bob Ragsdale and Dr. Rod Heitschmidt of TAEX.

Zack's freezes out franchisees

Warner, an Odessa lawyer, and Bennett, a Midland businessman, in September 1982 bought the single Zack's franchise at LaVillita shopping center in Midland for $149,500 from an Amarillo couple, Norman J. Hand and his wife, Lottie Fern Hand, according to court records. They purchased the franchise in buying stock's in Mr. and Mrs. Hand's HH&M Development Co.

Court records also indicated that a third investor, Van W. Carson, had paid an additional $55,000 for shares in the company.

Further, court records reflect that the then single Zack's outlet in Midland had grossed more than $56,000 in one month, August 1982, and more than $34,000 in April 1983.

In its countersuit, Zack's said that the Hands originally had bought the Zack's franchise for $15,000 in 1981 "to provide them with income during their retirement." After the business was launched, the volume of yogurt sales was "greatly beyond their expectations" and the Hands "were being overworked."

After sale of the franchise, Warner and Bennett in September 1982 paid Zack's $5,000 for an option to open a Zack's franchise in Santa Fe Square in Odessa. Later, they opened a Yum Yum's yogurt parlor in Westwood shopping center in far west Midland and bannered that "Yum Yum's Is Here" and in smaller letters noted "(Formerly Zack's)."

The three Bennett-Warner-owned Zack's franchises in Midland and Odessa reportedly are up for sale and a sale is imminent, according to a Zack's corporate representative.

More people being treated with home health care

"Midlanders are a little more affluent and can afford to have someone come in and take care of them," he said. However, the services his company and others provide are not limited to wealthy individuals.

Contact Medical Services is involved with the Midland Gold Program, which allows patients to receive discounts if they are over 65 years old or are handicapped and have qualified for a Gold card.

"I think it's well-worth doing," he said of the program. "We get so many calls from people who say, 'I just can't afford home health care.' They can."

At the Midland office of UpJohn Healthcare Services, the nation's oldest and largest private provider of home health care services, a contract with the Department of Human Resources was made allowing intermittent home health care for many less affluent individuals.

State Medicaid programs under Title 19 and 20 were designed to assist the elderly in remaining in their homes, said Peggy Abel, UpJohn director of the public sector. Up to 20 hours a week can be spent in a person's home helping him or her bathe, keep house, shop or pay bills. "Anything to help them maintain their house," she said.

"If they have medical needs, we go in with Title 18 and provide skilled nursing that won't be a duplication of services (provided under Titles 19 and 20)," Ms. Abel said.

"Everybody thinks you have to be rich to have health care in the home. If there is a need, they ought to do everything they can to fit into one of our programs."

Most of the local agencies will check potential clients' insurance policies to find out if they are covered for home health care. All services provided are under the orders and supervision of the patient's physician.

With changes in Medicare laws for hospitals, "we're going to be seeing earlier discharges," she said. "People are going to be going home from the hospital with more of a need for services than previously."

A burn victim was in a hospital only four days before he was dismissed. Because he still needed medical care, he was eligible for home health care.

Graham Blue, director of Nurses Unlimited Health Care Services, said the man received care at home — such as changing his sterile dressings — by Nurses Unlimited personnel for five weeks.

"They are receiving the same care at home that they do in the hospital and it's freeing up those hospital beds for the acutely ill," Blue said.

At Nurses Unlimited, skills ranging from those provided by nurses aides to critical care nurses are available. Also, Blue said, education is stressed.

The company videotapes seminars and holds sessions in hospitals and nursing homes throughout West Texas. "That helps upgrade the quality of health care not only here, but throughout the state," he said.

The family of a patient receiving home health care also is instructed on how to better care for the patient, he said.

"We give a holistic approach. We don't only care for your mother, but we teach you about your mother's illness so that you can better take care of her, too."

"Home health care gives people the option of staying around and enjoying the comforts of home surroundings," Ms. Kirkpatrick-DuPont said. "And it's a lot cheaper to care for people at home than in institutions."

More jobs forecast

The Labor Department predicts that total U.S. employment in the 1980s will rise from 101.2 million to more than 120 million, or by at least 17 percent, a gain of 17 million to 18 million new jobs.

Majors, independents must work together

Swearingen also said the industry has another goal — the security and economic well being of the nation. The nation cannot allow itself, he stressed, to become overdependent again on foreign sources of crude oil supplies.

"This objective requires an increase in oil and gas production and I am confident that working together, we can achieve that goal. If we intend to increase production we must drill deeper and open new frontiers in remote and hostile regions of the globe. We must also explore all potential areas under U.S. jurisdiction."

In reference to the Gulf Investors Group, led by Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens, and its attempts to force Gulf Oil Co. to a pay its shareholders royalties from producing oil and gas properties, Swearingen said the move was not good for the country.

"A royalty trust distributed to shareholders of an oil company conveys income from liquidation of oil and gas properties directy to shareholders and curtails reinvestment to maintain reserves. The net result would be a substantial reduction in efforts to find new oil and gas supplies. The same result could be achieved by a simple decision to stop exploring and pay out income to stockholders and ultimately go out of business."

Swearingen said the oil and gas industry had the strength and the flexibility to withstand the changing times. While conceding the mood in the industry is currently pessimistic, he predicted it would rebound.

"There is no doubt that the oil industry is currently caught in the grip of its own recession. But the 1980s are not the first time this has occurred — and it won't be the last."

The oil business, he added, is a cyclical, feast-or-famine business which is heavily influenced by external factors and events over which it has little control. During the 1980s, he said, the pendulum would swing the other way, carrying the industry back to a condition of surplus capacity in all aspects.

"I cannot predict how long this condition will prevail, for that will be determined by many variables, among them geopolitics and national and international economic conditions.

"Increasingly, today's world demands vision, flexibility, change and growth as the price of survival; and we expect to measure up to these demands in the future as in the past."

Swearingen retired from Standard Oil in September after 44 years of service. Standard Oil, headquartered in Chicago, has several subsidiaries in the Permian Basin which carry the Amoco name.

Cameras need special winter care

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

Now that it's beginning to get chilly, may of you have probably put your camera away with the lawn furniture and forgotten all about picture-taking outdoors.

I'm certain you'll take a few pumpkin pie-gift-opening photographs while you're comfortably ensconced in your home. But there really is a whole lot going on outdoors during the winter months to take pictures of if you're prepared to take a few simple precautions with your equipment.

As for keeping yourself warm, I do have one suggestion — wear a front-opening parka or jacket large enough to get your camera inside. Whenever your camera isn't in use, zip it up inside your jacket

It's also a good idea to replace your zinc-carbon batteries with alkaline batteries. Experienced winter photographers who plan to spend long periods of time outdoors will usually carry extra sets of batteries in an inside pocket where they stay close to body temperature.

In the winter, you also need to work just a bit slower than you did in August. When film gets cold, it also gets brittle, so rapid, jerky film advancing just might cause a break.

Rewinding your film also calls for reduced speed — if you rewind rapidly, chances are you'll generate static electrcity that will show up on your processed film as little lightning bolts. The electricity won't harm you or your equipment, but you will have to explain those funny little marks along the edges whenever you show your pictures.

Just as photographers get cold when they are out in the low temperatures for extended periods of time, so do lenses. However, there is one major difference, when the photographer goes inside to warm up, he doesn't get water condensing on the inside. Now if that lens is taken back outside before it's completely dry, that condensation could freeze and damage something. The way to avoid this problem is to make certain you warm your lenses slowly.

When it's time to take real pictures in the snow, with bright sunlight, there will be such a wide tonal range between sunlit areas and the shadows that no film can record it properly. If you're using through-the-lens metering or if you have an instant camera where the available light is read by a metering eye, unless you take some precautions, you'll find most of your photographs have been underexposed.

Here's how to avoid that situation. If you can adjust the ISO-ASA settings on your camera, use one-half the actual film speed. For example, if the film in your camera has an ISO-ASA rating of 100, set your camera's ISO-ASA dial at 50. On instant cameras, set the exposure control for two marks lighter than normal.

FDA: Diet pills useless

By The Associated Press

A pill a day melts the pounds away!

Nonsense, says the government agency in charge of regulating the nation's drug supply.

"There no way to melt off pounds," said Bill Grigg, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration.

Grigg said Americans spend $228 million a year on over-the-counter reducing aids like diet pills. (They spend an additional $51 million on synthetic sweeteners.)

One of the most popular pills to come along in recent years was something called a starch blocker. The manufacturers said the pills blocked the body from absorbing starches. When the FDA banned the pills, the makers argued that since they were made from kidney beans, they should be classified as a food not a drug. The FDA disagreed and, so far, has been upheld in court. The starch blockers are no longer on the market.

In its ongoing review of over-the-counter drugs, the FDA has found only one diet-pill ingredient that was classified safe and effective as a weight-reduction aid. It's called phenylpropanolamine hydrochloride or PPA and is an appetite suppressant. "It doesn't do anything directly," said Grigg, "but it does tend to reduce the appetite."

However, the Health Research Group, a consumer organization founded by Ralph Nader, says PPA can cause adverse reactions, including heart and kidney problems. The group says: "The use of these drugs has no place in weight reduction."

Another ingredient called benzocaine, which is included in some lozenges marketed to would-be dieters, also was found safe and effective by the FDA, but it is not directly related to appetite. It is an anesthetic and is simply designed to reduce sensations in the taste buds.

Closet called 'key' to style

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever get up in the morning, stumble to the closet, stare into it for 10 minutes trying to figure out what to wear, then pick the same old thing because you're in a hurry?

If that scenario describes your morning routine — and it seems to for many — you are squandering time, energy and control of your life. So says Emily Cho, an image consultant who thinks any woman can learn to be organized.

The "key," she insists, is the closet.

And the trouble is that many closets contain much too much — mistake purchases from years past, the designer dress that cost too much and didn't look right, fads and trendy clothes that went out of style, outfits that seemed like you five years ago but look like someone else today.

"I would think that in most closets, you can only wear half the clothes," said Miss Cho, who studies her clients' closets, determines the image the client wants to project, and then finds the clothes to match it.

Women may be reluctant to get rid of the clothes that are no longer right because it seems like throwing away money or because the wearer has gained weight and still hopes to fit eventually into that old, smaller size.

When the seasons change, says Miss Cho, those are the women who rush out to buy new clothes, forgetting what's already in their closet and ending up with a lot of what she calls "repeats."

"They just buy haphazardly, helter skelter," she said.

Miss Cho offers a service that can help — although be prepared to pay a minimum of about $2,000 to be turned out properly. That includes a preliminary visit, closet inspection, research fee, shopping trips and the price of the new clothes.

Women who can't afford such an exotic solution can still benefit by her advice, some of which is contained in Miss Cho's recent book, "Looking, Working, Living Terrific 24 Hours a Day."

The first thing to do is clean out the closet and be ruthless about it.

"Put your makeup on, get your stockings on, spend half a day, really block out the time and just approach it like a project that has to get done. The rewards are tremendous," Miss Cho says.

Deaf 3-year-old 'hears' electronically

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Even though 3-year-old Ian Patterson has been stone deaf since birth, his mother was certain he realized something big was up.

"He's been pressing me to the limit the last couple of days," she said. "I know he knows something's doing. It'll be a long night."

She was right. Ian got up at 2 a.m. Monday morning and, using hand signs, said that he wanted some pudding. His mother, Amber Patterson, could not refuse and stayed up with him until 4:30, for it was possibly the most important day of Ian's life.

At about 10 a.m., Ian was hooked up for the first time to a recently developed and controversial hearing device.

Ian had undergone a "cochlear implant" in September. A crescent-shaped incision was made behind his left ear and doctors at the institute implanted a small coil of wire under his skin. On Monday, the device was attached to the auditory nerve, which transmits sound senstations to the brain.

The operation, which is controversial for children so young, was financed by a community fund-raising drive last summer, which began after the family's health-insurance company refused to pay. Without the help of the fund-raising, the family could not have afforded the $10,000 operation, she said.

Deaf adults who once could hear say that the "sound" Ian had heard is like a radio that is not tuned well enough to be distinct.

But for Ian, who has never heard anything, the "sound" could be enough to help him learn to read lips and perhaps learn to speak, some audiologists say.

And for Ian's parents, the "sound" was a glimmer of hope that their son, already tested at a high IQ, might be able to fully use his intelligence.

"The brightest of kids like Ian seldom learn to read above the fifth-grade level," his mother said.

Like everyone else at the institute who had counseled the Pattersons, audiologist Laurie Eisenberg warned the family not to expect too much. Often children show no reaction at first, she said.

Ian sat eagerly at the tiny table. The profusion of toys camouflaged the presence of the electronic monitor nearby. The child made no protest when Eisenberg attached the processor's coil to the skin over the implanted coil.

She encouraged Ian to talk, and he responded with some shouts. She pointed to the monitor, attached to the sound processors, where the sound being sent to Ian's head was visible as twitching lines on the screen. His attention was riveted. He shouted and watched, shouted and watched. Was he hearing the sound? No clear indication.

Eisenberg turned up the power a bit and brought out a board with bicycle bells and horns attached. Ian rang them, too, watched the screen. But still no firm indication.

She turned up the power again and brought out cymbals and a flute and chimes to make sounds and again turned up the power. With hand signs, she asked, "Do you hear me talking to you?" Ian nodded yes, but did he really understand?

More power, then Eisenberg began a chant that Ian could say but had never heard. It was a series of abrupt, staccato sounds: "Ba ba ba ba ba."

Ian, who was looking down at the toys, looked up and smiled. Eisenberg said the chant again and the boy smiled again. Then he answered: "Ba ba ba." It was an unmistakable response to sound.

Coach tries to teach more than tennis

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bill Johnson used to take children with him to tennis courts, but only because he thought they could help him con court officials into giving him more playing time. Then a funny thing happened: he got interested in the children.

For the past 15 years, Johnson has coached inner-city youngsters on his own time, all year long, free of charge. He calls himself a weaver of dreams — not only about tennis, but about education, about life.

Some of the dreams are spun in a dark old cavernous structure in central Philadelphia called Memorial Hall, where Johnson finds practice space for his students next to stone pillars and around a statue of Rodin's "The Kiss."

But they learn to win. Johnson's teen-agers have been ranked by the National Junior Tennis Association as tops in their age group in the state and the region.

Johnson is 53, around 6 feet tall, a city bus driver, a storyteller, a singer and a maker of dandelion wine. When it comes to kids, he's somewhat of a magician.

"I was trying to teach my kids tennis in the park and I was getting nowhere," recalls Delores Hamilton Davis, whose four children are among Johnson's students. "Then this man came over — a complete stranger — and started talking to them, and telling me I should make tennis a game. In a few minutes, he had them playing."

Johnson didn't start swinging a racket until he was about 30 years old, after his father had given him one, and his one claim to fame was the top ranking in Charlottesville, Va. But his career ended abruptly, he said, after he saw the home movies his children took of him in action.

"I just didn't believe I was that lousy," he said. "I said to myself, 'Well, I can see you're never going to be a tennis player, Billy, but maybe you can help these kids.'"

He found children who needed attention and guidance. Many from the inner city, many of them black, had not been exposed to the world of tennis. Johnson gave them confidence, combining firm discipline with a sense of humor.

They must maintain their grades in school, practice hard, and help each other, or he won't take them to tournaments.

Johnson searches the playgrounds for tennis prospects. "I really look hard at kids 10, 11 and 12," he said. He has also started a class for preschoolers, including his own grandson, and has about 42 students in all.

"I know Billy's had other offers to coach for money, but he's turned them down," said Michelle Wreen, a 17-year-old who has been ranked as the top high school female tennis player in the city.

"He gives us confidence. Everything I have, I owe to him."

The way they hold their racket, Johnson tells his students, is not as important as the way they plan their lives. He regrets not going to college, and he doesn't want them to make the same mistake.

"One night, about six years ago, I had nine or 10 kids in the car and I was taking them home. They were all 12 or 13, and I said, 'I know you all want to go to college,'" he related.

Sourdough challenge takes a lot of crust

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It is not a good time for landmarks in this city of landmarks.

Chinatown and Fisherman's Wharf are all right, to be sure, and quirky little Lombard Street still has every last crook that makes it the crookedest street in the world.

But the beloved cable cars are idle, and a two-year project to rebuild their tracks has turned several of the finest streets into treacherous washboards to be traveled only by the most fearless commuter or the most foolish tourist.

And the Golden Gate Bridge, which at 46 is older than many of the people who use it, is having its original, corroded, concrete roadway replaced with a space-age composite.

Now, as if that were not enough, San Francisco's legendary sourdough bread is being challenged for the hearts and palates of discriminating diners by a cadre of sweet continental contenders: French bread, French rolls, even (gulp!) French croissants.

Mon Dieu! What are loyal Golden Gate gastronomes to do?

Sourdough forces, such as the big, established bakers like Louis Gallaudo of Boudin Bakeries, say that San Francisco diners are holding fast to their traditional tangy fare. "People love it. People want it," Gallaudo said.

But the French legionnaires — local branches of national chains, or low-volume independent bakers like Lionel Robbe-Jedeau of Bakers of Paris — are mounting an impressive assault with a most powerful weapon: deliveries seven days a week.

For years, the union representing bread-truck drivers has enforced a strict five-day work week that typically left diners to gnaw on day-old sourdough on Wednesdays and Sundays, just before and after the weekend rush.

That was a sticky problem indeed in a city that prides itself on the quality of its restaurants. It is often said — and sometimes actually believed — that true San Franciscans simply do not eat bread on Wednesday or Sunday.

At least not until recently.

With the non-union challengers offering a non-stop alternative, dining habits in this wonderfully tradition-bound town appear to be changing.

And some believe that union rules and bakery customs may soon follow.

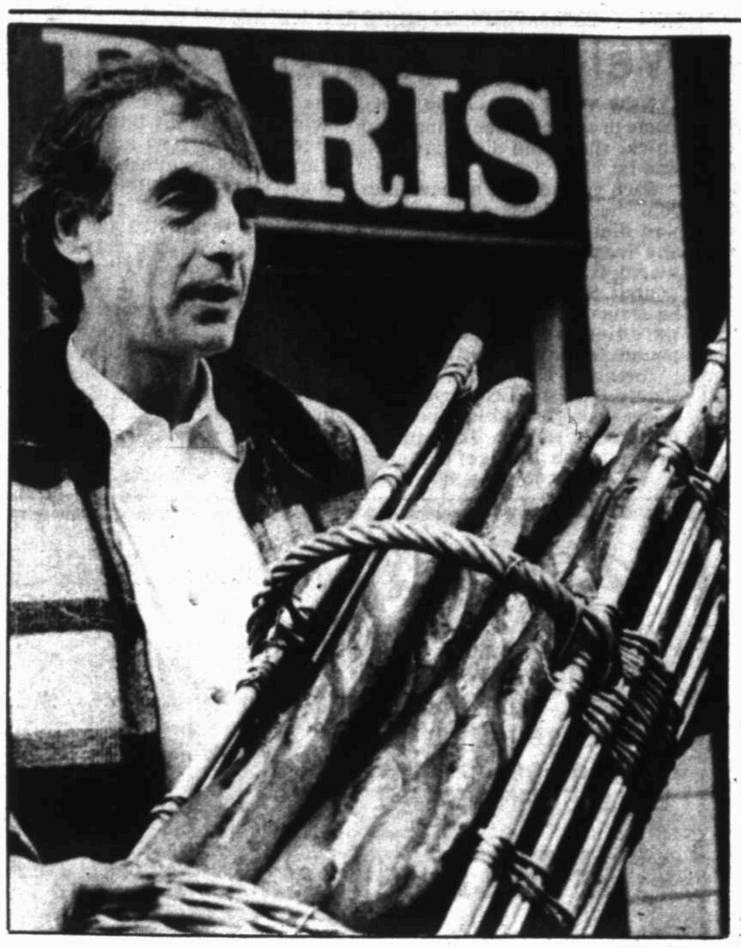

Gallaudo, whose family owns Boudin Bakery, the oldest among the upper crust of Bay Area bakers, said he already has approached the Bakery Wagon Drivers and Salesmen Union with the notion of resuming daily deliveries, but only with wage concessions by the drivers.

Adding two more delivery days would increase overhead by 38 percent without appreciably increasing sales, he said, and pay cuts are the only way some bakeries can stay afloat.

Not surprisingly, the union is cool to Gallaudo's proposal and has instead concentrated on preserving five-day-a-week deliveries. That battle has focused on Bakers of Paris, which broke the five-day-a-week rule with its first rack of French bread in 1980.

As soon as the first baguette hit the streets, drivers' union pickets accusing the company of paying substandard wages sprang up in front of the bakery's most prestigious customers, including some of the finest hotels.

At the time, however, the bakery's only driver was Robbe-Jedeau, one of the partners. The National Labor Relations Board ordered the picketing stopped.

LAT Photo

San Francisco's legendary sourdough bread is being challenged by French-style baked goods. Lionel Robbe-Jedeau, a partner in Bakers of Paris, is one of the newcomers, who also is challenging the unions by offering seven-day-a-week delivery instead of the union's five.

Bighorn Roundup: Finding them a new home

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Dick Weaver held up part of a 100-foot-long net, with mesh holes of about 10 inches.

"In a sense, this is a dry-land gill net," he said. "The sheep run into it, get tangled, then we go to work."

Weaver is a big game biologist for the California Department of Fish and Game, with a special interest in desert bighorn sheep. He and 25 or so other biologists, veterinarians, game wardens, volunteers and a helicopter pilot gathered recently at a Mojave Desert campsite.

The mission: Operation Bighorn. The goal: to live-trap 20 to 25 bighorns from two nearby mountain ranges with a surplus and move them to another range with suitable habitat but no bighorns.

THE CAMP WAS on flat land a mile or so from a trans-desert freeway and less than a mile from the range where the first trapping would be attempted. Call it Range A. DFG biologists, concerned about poachers and other possible human disturbances to bighorn populations, asked that the ranges not be identified.

At noon, project leader Vern Bleich, held a meeting under an 80-foot-wide cargo parachute, hung up for shade. The temperature was well over 100, but a breeze made things tolerable.

Bleich lectured the group on how to avoid heat-related illnessess. Trap-site crews would be working hard in sun-exposed areas.

Another theme: safe handling of bighorns.

"The key words are quiet, efficient and keep 'em cool," he said. "I don't want any loud talking while we're handling sheep, at the trap site or here in camp. I don't even want unnecessary noise while they're in the trailers.

"I WANT EVERYONE to understand exactly what his assignment is so we have no delays during handling.

"It's important we keep the animals cool, with water, at the trap site and at camp. They'll be stressed. Remember, they're wild animals that have never been handled. We'll keep a close watch on their body temperatures during handling."

The key figures in the transplant operation — the first ever attempted in California of desert bighorns, were:

—Bleich, a DFG desert biologist.

—Weaver, Sacramento, Calif.-based biologist.

—Bill Clark, specialist in the capturing and transporting of big game animals in two specially designed trailers.

—DAVE JESSUP, DFG veterinarian in Sacramento.

—Don Landells, helicopter pilot.

Bleich gave a reporter a rough outline of the strategy:

"There are several ways to catch desert bighorns. The safest is to bait an area with water or apple pulp under a stationary net, give the sheep several weeks to use it, then drop the net over a group of them.

"Another technique is to bait a corral for several weeks. When sheep are inside, you detonate bolts holding up a gate. "Another way is to bait a site, wait until sheep are present, then drop a large net over them from a helicopter.

"The drawback there is money. A net-firing gun for a helicopter costs around $15,000. Those first two techniques work best when water is scarce, and sheep congregate near water. But in our case this week, there's no shortage of water. There have been storms. Sheep are dispersed. So what we'll do is string up several hundred feet of net in a mountain pass and herd sheep into it with the helicopter."

CATCHING AND MOVING sheep is expensive. For this operation, 29 hours of helicopter flight time cost $10,150, paid by the Sacramento Safari Club. It also paid for $5,000 worth of radio collars.

At mid-afternoon, Bleich, Weaver and Clark boarded the helicopter for a reconnaissance flight over the nearest range, to find sheep and select a trap site. An hour later, they returned.

Weaver: "They're pretty well dispersed. We saw a group of eight, but mostly they were individuals or pairs. The rain has pretty well filled up the potholes. We found a good trap area in a pass. It has a high saddle where we can put up the nets. They (the sheep) won't know they're (nets) there until we run them right into them."

The transplant operation was based near two ranges, both with a surplus of bighorns. A decision was made a year ago to remove some bighorns from Range B, 50 miles from the camp. At that time, it was believed Range A had only a dozen or so animals.

However, Bleich made an aerial survey last January that yielded astonishing results. "I counted 83 sheep," he said. "We were amazed. We had no idea the range had anything like that number. That gave us two close-by ranges to take sheep from this month."

AT ROUGHLY THE time the DFG decided to move sheep from Range B, the Bureau of Reclamation decided to reintroduce bighorns to a range near the Colorado River. Call it Range C. Bighorns existed there for centuries before the 20th century but are believed to have been killed off by turn-of-the-century settlers along the Colorado.

Weight loss books abound

NEW YORK (AP) — Diet books come in assorted shapes: long and thick, short and slim, medium and fat.

Each year, dozens of new titles join the hundreds of diet books and diet cookbooks already on the market. Some are serious attempts to help readers shed pounds. Some offer fad diets and exercise programs. Some are parodies, poking fun at the pounds-for-profit industry.

"Breaking Up With Your Last Candy Bar," by Lizi Boyd, Pantheon Books, is a $3.50 paperback offering, in cartoon form, tips to overcome the pitfalls of dieting.

"Set up a booby trap in front of the refrigerator," one drawing says. "Use peanut butter as an ointment," offers another. A third cartoon counsels: "Make your rewards inedible. Choose poisonous flowers."

If it's a specific diet you crave, the local bookstore or library offers a geographical cornucopia: "The Bronx Diet," "The Complete Scarsdale Medical Diet," "The I Love America Diet," "The Hempstead Plan," "The Big Apple Diet," "The I Love New York Diet," "Massachusetts General Hospital Dietary Dept. Diet Manual," "The Southampton Diet," "The Beverly Hills Diet" and "The Beverly Hillbillies Diet."

Center examines dentistry concept to lessen pain

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE — Deep inside a red-brick building, insulated from the hurly-burly of the city streets, is a room of soft lines, muted colors and hushed voices.

With its pebble gardens and Shoji screens, it could be the entrance to a fashionable Japanese restaurant. But it's not.

It's a dental school.

More specifically, it's the Center for the Study of Human Performance in Dentistry, a $300,000 experimental adjunct of the University of Maryland dental school that opened recently.

WITHIN ITS WALLS, doctors hope to develop and apply a new concept of dentistry that would take much of the strain (and perhaps some of the pain) out of the ancient art for both dentist and patient.

The center, 3,200 square feet of enclosed serenity on the second floor of the dental school in downtown Baltimore, consists of three components: a "performance-simulation unit," complete with lifelike manikin heads with teeth, tongues, jaws and lips for students to practice; a clinical research unit for studying and evaluating new dental equipment and techniques, and an "optimum management unit," where students work with patients in five offices, or "operatories," set in architecturally soft surroundings of curved lines, potted plants and subdued beige walls.

It is the only such center in the United States, and one of only two in the world. The other, designed and built by an American dentist living in Japan, is the prototype on which the Baltimore center is modeled.

THREE OTHER COUNTRIES, Canada, Syria and Thailand, have training simulators built or planned, but without the additional research and "real-patient" components.

The Baltimore center, plus the programs in the other three countries, were designated by the World Health Organization as "collaborating centers" for future evaluation as possible models for wider use, especially in Third World countries where dental service is limited.

The University of Maryland dental school hopes to open its program to the first pilot group of 10 freshmen dental students in January.

"It's really an exciting venture," says Dr. Michael M. Belenky, director of the center and a fervent believer in "performance logic," the underlying concept of the center's program.

Developed by Japanese based American dentist Daryl L. Beach, performance logic in dentistry is best described as the arrangement of physical work and movements "in their most natural way," says Belenky, including the spatial relationship of the dentist to his patient and equipment. The idea is to minimize physical movement and, thereby, to increase the dentist's precision and contorl, he said.

BASED ON 30 years of research by Beach and others, Belenky said, it involves a wide range of considerations from the posture of the dentist and the optimal or "logical" positioning of fingers and thumbs around a patient's face to the design of the dental office and the use of soft colors and lines.

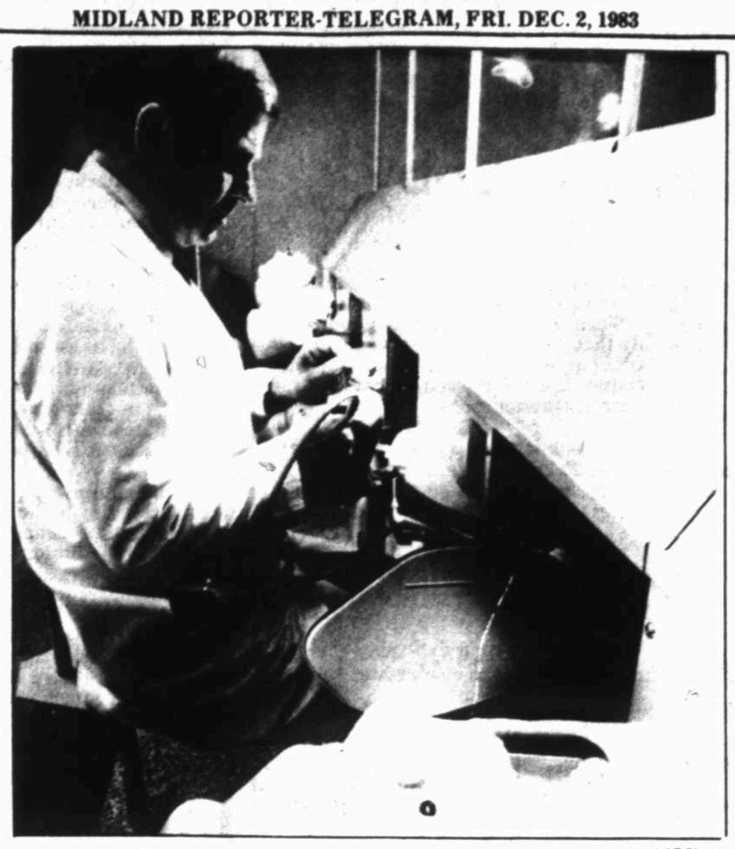

"The result is an incredibly gentle, warm and human approach to the patient," Belenky says. "...No more rough wrenching open of the mouth and jamming the mirror in."

The research included studying how hundeds of dentists and dental students hold their instruments and position themselves in relation to their patients. The results showed that many dentists customarily stand at awkward (illogical) distances from their patients, Belenky said, and must twist or stand off balance to do much of their work.

This in turn creates unnecessary stress for dentists, decreases their precision and control and diminishes the quality of their work, he said.

THROUGH PERFORMANCE LOGIC, he said, researchers found an ideal "balanced reference posture" with the dentist sitting (not standing) in a "physically centered" manner with his abdomen literally against the head of the patient who is lying (not sitting) on a special dental bed. The dentist's tools — picks, drills, mirror — are placed on trays, not at a distance, but "at a forearm drop" from the dentist, Belenky said.

"It's all based on natural movements and positions," says Dr. Warren Morganstein, senior associate, dean of the dental school.

Drug research beneficial

WEST POINT, Pa. (AP) — American research and development in pharamaceutical technology may often have important health benefits for people of underdeveloped nations.

A disease called "river blindness," prevalent in Africa, is the second leading cause of blindness in the world, according to Merck Sharp & Dohme research laboratories here. Now, early research indicates the disease — caused by parasitic worms — may be treatable with a new drug called ivermectin, now in use in the U.S. to cure parasitic roundworm diseases in horses and cattle, it says.

DEAR ABBY

Problem drops in with new baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my husband and I had our first child, which happens to be my parents' first grandchild.

Two months before I was due, my mother called and said she wanted to be with me during the delivery. (She and Dad live 1,200 miles away.)

I thanked her and said that I preferred that she wait until the baby was at least 2 weeks old. She pouted, her main concern being, "What will I tell my friends?"

After the baby was born, I called to tell her and Dad that they were grandparents of a healthy girl and to come in about two weeks. The very next day they flew to be with me!

Maybe I had better explain that my mother and I were never close. She is a perfectionist who found something wrong with everything I ever did. I really love her, but we can't get along.

Mom and Dad stayed at our small home for eight days. She tried to take over caring for the baby and made a total wreck of me, so I finally had to ask her to please go home and come back in a few months when things were calmer.

All she could say was, "What will my friends think of me flying all that way for only eight days?"

Now she's angry with me. It's been three weeks and she refuses to speak to me. How can I reach her, Abby? This silence is very painful. -- NEW MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Write and tell her that you really love her and want to have a good mother-daughter relationship, but she must realize that even though you are her "child," you are a grown, mature woman - and a mother yourself now - and she must treat you like an adult.

Counseling (here we go again!) from an objective professional could do wonders for her.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a mother who, when she drives her kids around, never bothers to tell them to buckle their seat belts?

When I say something to her about it, she says her children are "covered by prayer" - that if anything did happen to them, it would be "the will of God." I am these children's aunt, and I am ... WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: Inform the woman that seat belts are now mandatory in most states because statistics show that they have saved many lives and prevented serious injuries.

And tell her that if she fails to provide her children with seat-belt protection and something were to happen to them, she could attribute it to her negligence - not God's will.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me set my mind straight. Our 20-year-old son and his 19-year-old cousin were always very close. We thought nothing of it until one day they came to us and said they were in love and wanted to marry.

Since there is no insanity in our family that we know of, we thought it was OK, but we soon found out that first cousins are not allowed to marry in the state of Massachusetts.

We talked to a lawyer, and he said about 20 states permit first cousins to marry, so they will go to one of those states to get married.

Here's my question: After the kids get married, will they be living in sin if they live in Massachusetts? - KATHLEEN

DEAR KATHLEEN: No. A valid marriage is valid in every state.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Anna in Ashtabula," who requested a rerun of that poem, "Thank God for Dirty Dishes," if she had as many dirty dishes to wash as we have, she'd thank God for paper plates! - RHONDA AND BARBARA

Women smokers risk heart attack

NEW YORK (AP) — In a study of heart attacks in middle-aged women, researchers have found that those who smoke are five times as likely to have heart attacks as those who don't.

Sixty-five percent of heart attacks in women under 50 could be prevented if the women gave up smoking, the researchers wrote in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

In a separate report published in the same journal, researchers said smoking reduces the blood flow to the brain, possibly increasing a smoker's chances of having a stroke.

Researchers found that women under 50 are subject to many of the heart attack risk factors identified in other groups — high blood pressure, elevated blood cholesterol and a family history of heart attacks at relatively young ages, for example.

Smoking, however, is the most prominent risk factor, according to the study conducted by Lynn Rosenberg and colleagues at the Drug Epidemiology Unit at the Boston University School of Medicine, in collaboration with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine.

The researchers studied 255 women under 50 who had had heart attacks and 802 women who had not. The relative risk of myocardial infarction (or heart attack caused by damage to heart muscle) rose with the amount smoked.

In women who smoked 35 or more cigarettes a day — almost two packs — the risk of heart attack was 10 times greater than in non-smoking women.

Almost 600,000 Americans suffered heart attacks from various causes in 1980, according to the most recent figures available from the American Heart Association.

In the other report, researchers from the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the Houston Veteran's Administration Medical Center measured brain blood flow in 192 volunteers, 75 of whom were cigarette smokers.

London theaters more musical than ones on Broadway

By MATT WOLF

LONDON (AP) — London theaters, once thought the province of straight drama, are doing more musicals this season than Broadway.

By Christmas, 16 musicals will have opened here since the fall, compared with a projected handful across the Atlantic.

"It has to do with the recession," said actress Jane Lapotaire, star of "Dear Anyone" and a Tony Award-winner for her Broadway performance in "Piaf" three years ago.

Playing a "Dear Abby" type of columnist who advises others but has troubles of her own, she said audiences today "want something happy, light-hearted, not too taxing, with tunes you come out humming, a few gags you can laugh at and wonderful costumes."

The classically-trained, 38-year-old actress said one reason "Piaf" wasn't a bigger Broadway hit was because audiences seem to want lavish, frothy musicals.

"If you're going to spend the best part of $200 in a recession, you want to make...sure you have a good time," she said. "I'm not saying 'Piaf' wasn't a good time, but people didn't want to be provoked, to be made to think, to be depressed."

The actress, who says "Dear Anyone" is the happiest experience of her working life, has a Broadway clause in her contract and will have first refusal on the role of Mercedes if the musical heads for New York.

Directed by an American, David Taylor, and co-starring American performer Stubby Kaye, "Dear Anyone" has attracted interest from Broadway producers because, Miss Lapotaire says, "there is very little product on Broadway now. Producers in New York always look to London."

The fact they look to London now for musicals as well as straight plays is largely due to "Cats," the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical that remains a hot ticket in New York and London.

Permian Civic Ballet's 'Nutcracker' opens tonight

Permian Civic Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker" opens tonight at Lee High School Auditorium.

Featured performers for this year's ballet will be former Midlander Cheryl Jones Mitchell, Greg Mitchell and Sandra Huxman of Midland. The production is choreographed by Permian Civic Ballet's artistic director for the 1983-84 season, Nancy Schaffenberg-Cross.

Tickets, priced at $15 for reserved seating, $10 general admission and $5 for senior citizens and students, may be purchased at the door for today's 8 p.m. performance. Tickets for Saturday's 2 p.m. matinee performance are priced at $5.

Mrs. Mitchell, who is currently studying in New York with Gabriella Taub-Darvash, graduated valedictorian from National Academy of Arts, Champaign, Ill. Her teachers there included, among others, Anthony Valdor, Nina Popova, Gwynne Ashton and Buzz Miller.

Mitchell is a graduate of Juilliard School where he was awarded "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." A principal dancer with the Eliot Feld Ballet for six and a half years, Mitchell has worked under Rudolf Nureyev, National Ballet of Canada. He and Cheryl Jones were married this past June.

Ms. Huxman is a 1982 graduate of Texas Christian University. While at TCU, Ms. Huxman danced with the Fort Worth Ballet.

Mrs. Schaffenberg-Cross was director of the Prepatory Ballet School at TCU. She and her husband, Joe Cross, are directors of their own school, The Schaffenberg-Cross School of Ballet, in Dallas.

'Messiah Sing-in' set for Sunday

Midland's second annual "Messiah Sing-in" will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Illinois Avenue and H Street. The concert is sponsored by Friends of Music.

The Christmas section of George Frederic Handel's Messiah will be sung by community chorus singers, high school students, community church choisters and anyone else who wants to participate rather than listen. The singers will be accompanied by full orchestra.

Soloists for the event include Dr. Michael Jordan, Bert Bostic, John Roberts, Pamela Bristol, Debra Patchell, Lee Harley, Jane Parker and John Fleming. Conductors for the afternoon concert will be Dr. Stanley Engebretson and Darryl Knapp. Knapp is music director for the Friends of Music.

All community singers are asked to bring their own scores. Scores will be available at the door free of charge for those who do not have their own.

A special section in the church will be reserved for audience and "music lovers" as well as the roped off sections for each vocal classification.

The public is invited to attend.

Tadpoles recognize half-brothers

Tadpoles spawned by a species of frog called Rana Cascadae — a native of Washington and Oregon — recognize not only their brothers and sisters but their half-brothers and half-sisters. Tadpoles raised in isolation just after they hatch can recognize their kin days and even weeks later.

Zoologist A. R. Blaustein of Oregon Stte University commented, "Never has such finely tuned kin recognition been pinpointed in a creature other than a mammal."

Man enjoys good life despite grubbiest, meanest job in county

BONHAM (AP) — Le Roy Price is feeding his "babies," 41 head of cattle. Off deep in the woods, the autumn leaves are aglow in all their glory.

"When I want to meditate I go back into the woods where the squirrels come out, and the hoot owls hold a convention. I just grin from ear to ear, and think, 'Oh, how good the Lord has been to me. I don't deserve it but I sure enjoy it.'"

Price has the grubbiest, meanest job in Fannin County of North Texas. He is the deputy sheriff that serves all the civil and criminal complaint papers for the courts.

He works a good 14 hours a day, day and night. It makes no difference what his hours are, those are the ones he works.

So many people, he explains, work out of the county and he can't find them to serve until dark falls.

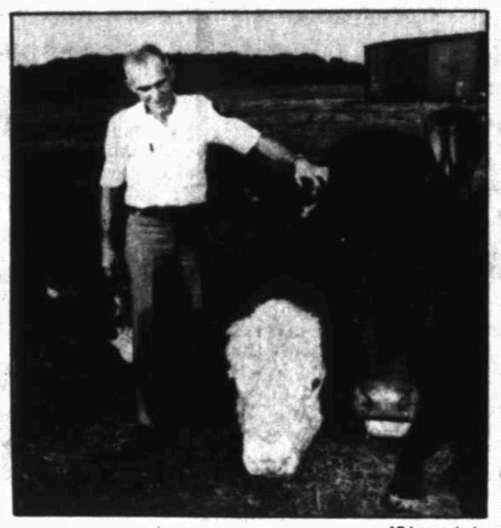

About half of the papers he serves in the daytime. He is wiry, weighing 125 pounds.

He owns 144 acres of land in various plots of FM 898. He planned always to return to Fannin County and farm and ranch some, open a real estate office and just stay busy. He returned six years ago when he retired from the post office at Hereford after 35 years.

He bought his land, made his plans for years. He bought the land for $150 an acre. It's worth $1,000 an acre now.

He bought his cattle. He admits he really doesn't know how many he owns, and they are all pets. Punjab, a monster of a Brahman bull, will lie down to be petted. There there is Black Mama, an Angus cow he nursed back to life after a veterinarian said she would die.

The hardest thing he has to do each year is sell off stock. "I don't make any money off them," Price says, as he grips his pipe in his teeth. "But all this is just so much enjoyment to me. I love it."

AP Laserphoto

Le Roy Price feeds some of his cattle on his land near Bonham. When he is not serving complaints, he likes to spend time on the farm.

"As long as a man keeps himself busy, he has a lot of hobbies, he never grows old," he says.

Price was born in Bonham, the son of a jeweler. "Everybody was about to starve to death here in the late '20s," Price says.

"My grandpappy gathered up his clan and we moved to Black. That's about 15 miles from Hereford."

Panel cites violence at state hospitals

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal court review panel says violence among patients is still a problem in the eight state mental hospitals involved in a 11-year-old lawsuit questioning their operations.

"Approximately 37 percent of the hospitalized patients had engaged in violent behavior during the 45-day period reviewed," said a report released Thursday by the three-member panel.

"Almost all of the staff's interventions around violent behavior are crisis-oriented and aimed at bringing an already volatile situation under control."

The three-member review panel appointed by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, Dallas, made a half-way report Thursday in settling the lawsuit which alleged inadequate treatment and conditions in the state hospital system.

The settlement gave the Texas Department of Mental Health and Retardation 36 months to make corrections.

The panel report specifically pointed out that the state agency had not obtained the funding the panel thinks necessary to fully implement the settlement.

"That progress most directly beneficial to patients has been the effort of state hospital personnel toward the effective and appropriate management of the use of psychotropic medications," the panel's report said. "The dosage ranges and guidelines are in place, the hospitals are monitoring their medication practices and compliance in this area has been, for the most part, acceptable."

However, the report said, "there is general failure to provide individualized treatment programs, there is a high degree of violence among patients, and there is inadequate staffing in the hospitals."

The report noted that "where there is a lack of meaningful programming, there is likely to be a higher incidence of unacceptable patient behavior. And where staff is being overwhelmed by the demands of keeping order, it is not surprising that treatment would be relegated to the format of large group programs aimed at the least common denominator in the group."

The report said state hospitals have also made progress in improving their physical plants and in developing the settlement provision for 30 hours of programs per patient per week.

Parents sue city over death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The parents of a 12-year-old boy have filed a $7 million negligence suit against the City of San Antonio stemming from the death of their son, who drowned after tumbling into an uncovered manhole.

The body of Raul Perez was recovered Nov. 4, more than a day after he fell into the weed-obscured hole while chasing a soccer ball during physical education class.

The youngster's body floated through more than eight miles of gas-filled underground tunnels before being raked into a sewage treatment plant.

The suit was filed by the family Thursday in the name of the sixth-grader's estate.

Cause of bus accident may be hard to determine

LIVINGSTON (AP) — A lack of witnesses and extensive damage to a Trailways bus may make it difficult to determine the cause of an accident which killed six people, a federal investigator says.

Patrick Bursley, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board's team examining the wreck, said Thursday he is sure the bus had no mechanical difficulties which could have caused the wreck.

The bus, carrying 11 passengers and a driver, smashed into the rear end of a truck north of the Southeast Texas town of Livingston about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday. The bus barreled through a guardrail on a bridge, flew over a stream and smashed into the creek bank.

Bursley refused to speculate on a state trooper's comment that the bus driver may have been speeding and a report from a passenger who said he noticed the driver dozing.

"There have been a number of hypotheses, but we have not cross checked," he said. "The speed of the bus will be a very significant finding to our investigation."

The bus suffered considerable damage in the crash and emergency crews dismantled the wreckage further to free two people — including driver Ed Perry of Houston — who were trapped for 90 minutes.

"This is not going to be an easy shot," Bursley said. "In terms of writing off the accident, the bus hit the truck. But we think there's more than that."

Bursley, who arrived from Washington on Wednesday evening about 12 hours after the 5 a.m. wreck, said a preliminary examination shows the front corner of the bus hit the rear corner of the empty flat-bed truck on U.S. Highway 59, about five miles north of Livingston.

The bus was on a regular run from Shreveport, La., to Houston, about 75 miles away.

People were hurled from their seats, four were thrown from the bus and seats were ripped from their moorings, adding to the difficulties in reconstructing the moments before the crash, Bursley said.

"We're probably going to have some trouble there in trying to place where various people were," he said.

Buses are not equipped with seat belts. Bursley said it was questionable whether passengers would use them, but he said belts could have kept passengers from getting thrown out of the bus.

U.S. protects insects, plants

In 1981, for the first time, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service acquired land to help protect jeopardized insects and plants, a 55-acre tract of the Antioch Dunes near San Francisco that was made a national wildlife refuge.

Singaporean accused of writing subversive epitaph

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LAT Photo

Singapore authorities say an epitaph on a tombstone of executed Communist Party member Tan Chay Wa in a Buddhist cemetery is subversive and have arrested Tan's brother for erecting it. His attorney says it may be the first time in history a tombstone has been listed as a subversive document.

SINGAPORE — He may never rank with the likes of Benedict Arnold but, in the eyes of officials here, Tan chu Boon has committed an act of treachery against their tightly controlled little country.

Tan, a 39-year-old tropical fish breeder, is scheduled to be tried this month on charges of threatening national security by erecting an allegedly subversive tombstone on his brother's plot in a local cemetery.

If convicted, he could be senteced to five years in jail.

"I think you can safely say that this is the first time a tombstone has been listed as a subversive document," said J.B. Jeyaretnam, Tan's attorney and the only opposition member in Singapore's Parliament.

Tan placed the tombstone to mark the final resting place of his younger brother, Tan Chay Wa, who was hanged in Malaysia in January after being sentenced to death for possessing illegal firearms.

COVERED WITH wax begonias and purple marigolds, the grave is a peaceful enough spot. From a distance, the only thing that might set it apart from tens of thousands of others in sprawling Chua Chu Kang cemetery might be its headstone of finely polished black marble. Most of the surrounding graves are marked with stones of white marble.

But it was the carving on the stone, not its unusual color, that made the authorities see red. The 305-word inscription, etched in Chinese characters, extols the younger Tan as a Communist martyr and refers to his "boundless confidence (in) the victory (of) the motherland's revolution."

The epitaph has resulted in two indictments against Tan Chu Boon. The first, dated May 28, accuses him of having "under your control a subversive document, to wit, the tombstone of your deceased brother, which (has) a tendency to advocate acts prejudicial to the security of Singapore."

The second, dated June 3, accuses him of possessing another allegedly subversive document, a piece of paper with the same message as that on the tomstone.

Tan pleaded not guilty to the charges and was released on bail of nearly $4,800. It was an act of leniency on the part of the government, which under the anti-subversion laws can deny due process and hold people indefinitely without trial.

Tan's attorney declined to discuss the specifics of the case. He said he will not do so until the matter is disposed of in court. He also refused a request to interview his client.

BOTH TAN brothers were charged under sections of the Internal Security Acts, legal relics of the British colonial era enacted in the 1950s to fight communist insurgencies threatening what were then the protectorates of Malaya and Singapore.

Both retained the laws after becoming independent, even though the Malaysian communist threat has dwindled significantly in recent years and Singapore has become one of the wealthiest and most stable countries in the Third World.

Critics contend that leaders of the two countries use the laws to silence dissidents, and human rights groups such as Amnesty International have called for the repeal of the laws. Malaysia is believed to hold more than 300 prisoners charged under the Internal Security Acts. Last year, the Singapore government acknowledged that it was holding 17 persons, though some have since been released.

Even without resorting to the Internal Security Acts, Singapore's way of dealing with ideas out of the mainstream might seem unusual. Unabashedly devoted to wide open capitalism, the government does its best to choke off the expression of unorthodox thought, which is tolerated and even encouraged by many democratic governments.

Little in the way of criticism of officialdom ever leaks into the press here. Overt political opposition of any kind is rarely exhibited in public. Jeyaretnam's election in 1981 marked the first time in 16 years tht someone outside Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew's ruling People's Action Party had been elected to parliament.

While disagreement is strongly discouraged, talk of communism is anathema. The party is outlawed, and even praising it could be construed as a violation under the law.

THE TOMBSTONE put up by Tan described his brother as a district committee member of the Malayan National Liberation Front, a group led by the Communist Party of Malaya.

"He contributed all the money that he managed to save to the organization, thus manifesting amply the noble quality of a revolutionary warrior," the inscription says.

It says further that Tan Chay Wa was arrested in southern Malaysia in June 1979, and that he was tortured by prison authorities before his hanging last January. It also quotes a poem he is said to have written moments before his death:

"With heart filled with righteous indignation,

"I stand at the gallows and forcefully pen this poem with blood.

"I want to air my grievances for a hundred years, unable to tell all the wrongs with blood.

"When will this gallows be destroyed to bring about a new heaven?"

Tiburcio Martinez wages a one-man war against grafitti by painting — for the fourth time — a recreation center near his Los Angeles home.

Painter does his best to hide building's grafitti

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — While three of his five young children played nearby, Tiburcio Martinez, 52, laid out a dropcloth, opened a five-gallon bucket and began applying a fresh coat of beige paint to the cinder-block walls of a small city recreation center near his home.

Since last January, Martinez has painted the outside of the recreation center in South-Central Los Angeles four times.

Martinez keeps applying fresh paint because kids — grammar schoolers and teen-age gang members — keep defacing his work with spray paint cans, crayons and marker pens. Neighborhood residents called the police when one woman, described as being in her late 20s, turned a spray paint can on the walls Martinez recently repainted. The police caught the woman.

"Since I bought my house a block from here seven years ago I have tried to make this a nice neighborhood," Martinez said as he ran his paint roller up and down the walls. "Maybe this neighborhood is just a little bit, what should I say, a little bit wild and this writing on the walls does not help. This," he added, nodding toward the wet paint that was covering over the latest graffiti, "makes my community look a little nicer."

Leticia Fontenot, who has lived across the street from the center for 22 years, said that graffiti was rarely seen on the building until a few years ago.

"When I saw kids over there spray-painting the walls I used to call the police, but by the time they come the kids are always gone," Ms. Fontenot said, "so I just play policeman myself. I just come over and threaten to beat them to death and I take their spray paint cans away. One boy had the can in his hand but he looked right at me and said, 'I didn't do it.' I told his mother, but his parents are divorced and his mother doesn't care about him, so it didn't do any good.

"This man here has been just wonderful, but there's only so much he can do for the playground — and what about all the other recreation centers where there's nobody like him?"

The painting began after Martinez, a Los Angeles native, committed a traffic violation last year. In lieu of a cash fine or other penalty, a judge ordered him to rake leaves and do other unskilled work at another city recreation facility for 90 hours. Martinez, a union painter, said that he looked at that project and thought he could do something more significant — and lasting.

> "Since I bought my house a block from here seven years ago I have tried to make this a nice neighborhood. Maybe this neighborhood is just a little bit, what should I say, a little bit wild and this writing on the walls does not help. This makes my community look a little nicer."
> — Tiburcio Martinez

"I went back to the court and asked if I could paint the recreation center near my house and they said that was fine," Martinez said.

Martinez hired his brother to help and also paid $50 to a neighborhood teen-ager to assist them for two days. The center got a fresh coat of paint inside and out.

Soon new writing on the wall began marring the Fred Roberts center, which is named for the mortician who was the first black legislator in California history. Roberts served 16 years in the state Assembly before he died in 1952.

"Within a few days I saw the first few words here and there," said Betty Grey, a city recreation worker for 27 years who has run the Fred Roberts center the last three years. "In about three weeks it was as bad as before Ted painted it."

Martinez got out his cloth, roller and brush and in a few hours the graffiti was covered over.

Before long, everyone could see the writing on the wall, again. After a few months, Martinez came back. This time his work was recognized by the city Recreation and Parks Commission through a letter of commendation that came in the mail one day.

Martinez said that so far he has spent about $475 of his own money trying to keep the center properly painted. When he arrived to do his fourth paint job recently, Grey told him that the city had decided to provide five gallons of paint to cover the graffiti.

And what will happen when the latest coat of paint is dirtied with graffiti? "I guess I'll have to paint it again," Martinez said.

Artists and siblings, Lew, left, Marvin and Dianne Harris, stand in the yard of their Los Angeles home, which is filled with the sculptures that they make from trash.

Artists sculpt abstract pieces from factories' discarded metal

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — "At first we thought it was an eyesore. But now we love it. It's an eye-catcher," truck driver Ken Roberts, 49, said.

The Harris home is not much different from other modest homes on the block — except for the front yard.

A constant parade of cars full of gawkers passes by each day to see it.

The yard is a jumble of sculpted abstract art pieces created by the two brothers and their sister from discarded scrap materials they collect in industrial areas.

"Idle time gave birth to Harris sculptures," explained Lew Harris, 43, a truck driver before he became a sculptor.

"Idle time and the abundance of material thrown away by factories. We do factories a service. They pay to have their trash hauled away. We haul it away free."

Everything in their front yard is for sale. You name a price. If it's agreeable, it's yours.

"So far the most we've got is $500 for a piece. But we're not too well known yet," Dianne Harris, 32, said. "Most artists starve early in their careers."

The front-yard sculptures include a soaring 20-foot-high case-hardened cylinder with spiral arms and a global crown, one work called "Mamas, Papas and the Babies" and a cluster of imaginative shapes formed and welded from castaway steel casings.

"These big pieces are ideal for corporate headquarters, but the corporations haven't discovered us yet. They will," Lew Harris said with conviction.

Children from nearby elementary schools come to see the Harris sculptures on field trips.

"We explain the statues to the kids when they take a tour of the front yard. We show them the busts created by Dianne on exhibit inside the house," Marvin Harris, 28, said.

"And we show them the backyard."

The backyard is filled with tons of factory scraps, material for future art work.

Marvin and Lew are self-taught artists. Dianne majored in fashion design at Los Angeles Trade-Tech. Her busts are fashioned from clay and Lucite picked up in the factory trash bins.

She sculpts from newspaper and magazine photographs of her subjects — Princess Di and her new baby, Marilyn Monroe, Sophia Loren, Anwar Sadat's widow, Muhammad Ali, Martin Luther King Jr., Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and many others.

"Most people never think of going through the garbage like we do to get our materials. Pride would stop them," Lew Harris said. "We forget our pride. You can't spend it anywhere.

"We use the latest and best of materials. And, it costs us nothing."

But pride is what Harris sculptures are all about. "Their front yard gives the neighborhood distinction," Roberts said.

Playwright Simon hospitalized for painful back condition

Simon

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Neil Simon — author of "Only When I Laugh" — may be hurting every time he moves.

Simon, 56, was in an unidentified New York hospital Thursday night with a painful back condition.

The problem is nothing new, dating back about 10 years, said Simon spokesman Albert Da Silva. "It kicks out every so often and it kicked out a few days ago."

Ropes and 15-pound weights were being used to help stretch the back, a process Da Silva described as painful.

Among Simon's other plays are "The Goodbye Girl," "Brighton Beach Memoirs" and "Chapter Two."

Fellini

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Federico Fellini and Bernardo Bertolucci are among the film directors who will receive the "Mark of Silver" award, a new Italian-sponsored prize for European cinema.

In a ceremony Saturday, leading European film directors and actors will be awarded the prize sponsored by Florence's Institute of Cinematographic Science.

Fellini's films include "La Strada," "La Dolce Vita" and "The Clowns." He is 63. Bertolucci, whose films include "Last Tango in Paris," is 43.

Others slated to receive for the prize include Yugoslavia's Veljko Bulajic, director of the film "Great Transport" and Ben Kingsley, who starred in the Oscar-winning "Gandhi."

The announcement was made at a news conference in this Tuscan city Thursday by Italy's Culture and Tourism Minister Lelio Lagorio.

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Actors Clint Eastwood and James Garner have donated 350 acres worth $2.7 million in Carmel Valley to the county for development into housing for the elderly and a public park.

The northern part of the property known as Carmel Valley Overlook is next to Jacks Peak Regional Park, which already has hiking and riding trails and picnic areas.

At least 300 of the 350 acres of the donated land will be used for park development while the remainer will be taken up by low-cost housing, said Bruce Moore, executive director of the Housing Authority of Monterey County.

Moore said of the donation, it was "a very generous thing for them to do."

Carter

NEWPORT, Ark. (AP) — On a return visit to Arkansas former President Jimmy Carter is combining duck-hunting and speech-making.

Carter, 59, arrived in Newport by chartered plane with former press secretary Jody Powell Thursday night, and they were going hunting with former U.S. Sen. Kaneaster Hodges today.

Carter made a similar visit to the state last year.

"Arkansas is different from Georgia in that there are no rice fields or ducks in Georgia, just quail," said the former president. "It's nice to back."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Menopause occurs at ages 40-55

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am approaching my 50th birthday and am still not in the menopause; yet other women my age are. Is the delay in my case something that I should be concerned about? — Mrs. G.E., Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Mrs. E.: The average age for menopause to occur is about 50 years. If it happens before age 40 it is considered premature; if it happens after age 55 it is considered late. You have not yet reached that point.

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has not been sleeping well since he was laid off from his job. Since he has a real reason for being down in the dumps, I wonder if there is any treatment that might help. — Mrs. N.H., Pittsburg

Dear Mrs. H.: Psychological problems are the most common cause of insomnia, amounting to about one-third of all cases. Drug therapy is often successful in relieving insomina due to anxiety or depression. I suggest your husband contact his physician so that he can get some help with his condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine went to her dentist. After examining her, he said she should see her doctor because he thought she might need treatment. It turned out she had oral cancer, and what I would like to know is what are the signs of oral cancer. — Mrs. B.P., Cincinnati

Dear Mrs. P.: Dr. Irving Meyer, of Tufts University, lists the following signs of oral cancer: whitish or reddish patches, any sore that fails to heal and bleeds easily, a lump or thickening, chronic sore throat, and difficulty in chewing or swallowing. An individual who has any of these signs should see his or her dentist or doctor without delay.

Dear Doctor Solomon: They say that when you hit bottom, there's no place to go but up. I think my husband has hit bottom with his drinking and is ready to go for help. Having gotten him to this point, I want to make certain he gets the best there is. What kind of treatment would be best for someone who has been drinking heavily for years? — Mrs. E.D., NYC

Dear Mrs. D.: Different people may benefit from different forms of treatment, so it is not possible to recommend a single form of treatment that would be best for everyone. In fact, the Office of Technology Assessment, a nonpartisan agency that furnishes analytic information to the Congress, reports there is little evidence to suggest that one form of treatment is better than any other; it adds, however, that any form of treatment for alcoholism is better than no treatment at all.

Your husband might start by attending a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous or, if your circumstances permit, discussing with his physician a referral to a psychiatrist. A discussion with his minister might also prove helpful.
