Midland, Odessa seek one district

■ Representatives from Midland and Odessa urge redistricting committees to group cities together in one Texas Senate District and one U.S. Congressional District.

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — In a show of unity, representatives from Midland and Odessa spoke to the joint committee on redistricting Friday, urging that the two cities be grouped together in one Texas Senate District and one U.S. Congressional District.

The joint meeting of the redistricting committee of the Texas House of Representatives and the redistricting committee of the Texas Senate met in Lubbock on Friday.

The meeting was one of nine public hearings being held across Texas to allow citizens to voice their concerns to the committees that will be redrawing the legislative lines in April.

The legislative committees will be drawing district lines for congressional districts, state House and Senate districts and State Board of Education districts.

Buddy Sipes, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce board, spoke to the joint committee asking that Midland and Odessa be grouped together during the next redistricting.

Sipes said, "It's not fair that our area is grouped into three congressional districts."

According to Sipes, Odessa and Ector County officially have supported this stance and the city of Midland previously has shown its support as well.

Sipes argued that the economies of Midland and Odessa and surrounding counties are unique because of their mutual dependence on the oil and gas industry.

Upton County plans to use West Texas winds to their advantage

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The strong winds that frequently annoy West Texans are now being harnessed to provide economic development to the area.

On Friday, Austin-based Cielo Wind Power Co. announced a major wind power project on King Mountain just outside of McCamey in Upton County, a $150 million capital project that will place about 160 wind turbines, each 200 feet tall and able to generate 1.3 megawatts or, said Cielo President Walter Hornaday, enough to power 100,000 homes. The three-bladed turbines, with blades 150 feet long, will be manufactured in Denmark, sailed to Houston and trucked to West Texas.

The company, he said, has signed a contract to provide 200 megawatts generated by the turbines to Reliant Energy's American operations in Houston, a deal Hornaday said is the largest single buy of wind-generated electricity in the world. Austin Energy, the city of Austin-owed electric utility, will purchase 20 to 80 megawatts from the project.

Construction will begin by the end of the year and take about 14 months, creating 300 to 500 construction jobs, Hor-

TEA upgrades Pease's status to 'academically acceptable'

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Dozens of Pease elementary teachers and parents crowded into school board chambers Tuesday night and waited until past 10 p.m. to speak out in favor of their students and the long hours spent counseling, tutoring and mentoring disadvantaged children in the south Midland neighborhood. They pleaded with the board and audience to think about the "rest of the students," and the "rest of Pease's accomplishments," when contemplating the recent low performing status assigned by the Texas Education Agency. They spoke in support of their kids and teachers and displayed buttons supporting the campus.

Friday afternoon, their support was justified. Their campus's previously reported low performance was overturned, and their school vindicated, when Pease Principal Bill Maurer received a fax from Texas Commissioner of Education Jim Nelson saying that the campus's rating for the 1999-2000 school year had been upgraded to academically

Gallery favorites? Always bet on long hitters

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Hank Kuehne knows why his galleries are as big as anyone's even during the weeks when he's not in contention.

■ Related stories/1B

It is the same reason his friend Tiger Woods called him the longest player he'd ever seen.

People have a fascination with the long ball hitters— always have, always will.

"They like to see things they can't do," Kuehne said. "They can come out here and watch guys that they hit it the same distance as and they might win the tournaments, but people like to watch John Daly and other guys play. We hit shots they can't hit. There's not many guys on tour that can hit those shots. There are only three or four in the game that can hit them."

That is exactly the reason Buy.com Permian Basin Open Tournament Director Bob Glast offered Kuehne a sponsor's exemption for this week's event. Like watching Woods, Daly or even some of his contemporaries at this week's PBO, he turns a driving range into a sideshow when he pulls out his Taylor Made driver.

He tees the ball up ... bang, 300 yards.

He tees the ball up ... boom, 330 yards into a slight breeze. He got a hold of that one.

Yes, driving ranges have no defense, just like par 4s and par 5s. Just ask the folks at Augusta National (site of the Masters) in Augusta, Ga. At the end of the 285-yard driving range at golf's mecca,

CAMPAIGN 2000 IN BRIEF

■ Ad blitz gives clues to campaign strategies

Al Gore and George W. Bush are pouring tens of millions of dollars into an unprecedented summer ad blitz, yielding clues with every new TV commercial about how — and where — the presidential campaign will be fought.

With their ad buys this week, both Gore and Bush reveal their strengths and weaknesses in several states, including:

■California, where Bush has promised to compete on Democratic turf. The Republican Party aired a few education ads in July, but Bush's first ad campaign ignores the Golden State.

■Kentucky, a state won by President Clinton in 1992 and 1996. It is now leaning toward Bush, though the Democratic Party spent more than $1 million for summer ads.

■North Carolina, Georgia, Nevada and New Hampshire — the four states airing GOP ads and nothing from Gore. The vice president's campaign says New Hampshire is a Democratic state that will eventually swing their way.

■Florida, where Bush's brother Jeb is governor. Won once by Clinton in 1996, the state should be in Bush's column by now but Gore has battled him to a dead heat.

■Illinois, a battleground state that Gore hopes to drive Bush from by mid-September. However, polls suggest the race is tight and the Bush campaign says it will spend $400,000 there this week. Democrats say the figure is closer to $300,000 and they are watching the Chicago market — where Bush is spending at least $160,000 this week — for signs that the Texas governor is pulling out resources.

■ Bush pushes free trade, blasts Castro

George W. Bush pledged on Friday to breathe new life into stalled free-trade negotiations with Latin America if elected president, and to retain all current sanctions on Fidel Castro's Cuba.

In a speech at Florida International University, Bush said one of his first acts as president would be to try to persuade Congress to re-enact so-called fast-track authority.

That would enable his administration to resume suspended free-trade talks with Chile and other Latin American nations, Bush said.

This authority — the ability to negotiate trade agreements that Congress can only pass or reject, not amend — expired in 1997. Clinton failed to persuade the GOP-led Congress to renew it.

Strong opposition by organized labor to an extension of fast-track has made it difficult for the administration to rally support among Democrats.

The United States already has free trade with Mexico and Canada as a result of the North American Free Trade Agreement. Bush proposes extending this zone throughout the hemisphere, excluding Cuba.

"The leadership of Cuba has not even begun the journey" toward democracy, Bush said.

"So I challenge the Castro regime to surprise the world and adopt the ways of democracy. Until it frees political prisoners, and holds free elections and allows free speech, I will keep the sanctions in place," Bush said.

■ Anti-Semitic Graffiti

Someone scrawled an anti-Semitic message in the local Gore-Lieberman campaign headquarters in Chico, Calif., a Democratic Party activist says. Bob Ray said he arrived at the office and found "No Jew in the White House" written in ink in big letters across two large erasable boards and a planning calendar. Police Lt. Mike Simpson said investigators were told a campaign worker left the office unlocked Wednesday night, and there were no suspects. Ray said he plans to keep the message up to remind them of the importance of the election. Chico is 100 miles north of Sacramento.

■ New ads aimed at senior Americans

George W. Bush's campaign introduced a new TV spot today about Social Security, Medicare and prescription drugs into 21 states they had already targeted as the campaign ad war heats up. In addition, the Republican Party is set to start next week with an ad buy worth millions of dollars in just nine states. Says Bush in the ad: "We will make prescription drugs available and affordable for every senior who needs them. . . . President George W. Bush will keep the promise of Social Security. No changes. No reductions. No way." The ad is a blend of Bush's comments with scenes of older Americans.

■ Bushes high on Florida chances

George W. Bush rounded up $1.5 million for Florida's Republican Party at a closed-door reception in a private Coral Gables, Fla., enclave. "I intend to contest this state," Bush said as he arrived at Miami International Airport. "We have a good chance of winning." Looking around and not seeing his brother, Gov. Jeb Bush, the candidate joked, "I'm a little disappointed the chairman of my campaign is late." The Bushes are confident that they can carry Florida, where Democratic presidential candidates have prevailed only three times in 50 years. But the Democrats are making a full-court press for the state.

■ Kosher meal at fundraising dinner

Al Gore pulled in more than $1.25 million at a pair of fundraising dinners in Washington for the Democratic Party. The first dinner drew 30 people, most of them Indian-Americans. The second dinner drew about 60 people, most of them friends of Joe Lieberman, who also attended. Both dinners were served at the Mayflower Hotel, but the second was a Glatt Kosher meal, the pure form of Kosher food, blessed by a rabbi and provided by a restaurant, Dahan of Washington.

■ GOP's 'soft money' flows freely like oil

The Republican National Committee collected almost $800,000 in unregulated "soft money" donations from energy companies after George W. Bush tapped Halliburton CEO Dick Cheney as his running mate. The $791,100 in energy contributions during the last week of July were part of the $25.2 million in soft money that the RNC took in last month. Some energy companies had not given any soft money this year until Cheney joined the ticket. Cheney headed the oil services company for five years after serving in Congress and as secretary of defense; Bush also is an ex-oil executive.

■ Clinton's monuments made to topple?

Dick Cheney raised the possibility that some of the new national monuments created by President Clinton could be reviewed and possibly rescinded if he and George W. Bush are elected in November. "Of course it's not my decision to make. It's the president-elect who has to make the decision," Cheney said. He said Clinton has used his executive authority "willy-nilly all over the West" to create national monuments covering nearly 4 million acres without considering the desires of the people affected. Many fear it could harm the Western economy by removing land from uses like grazing, logging and mining.

■ Cutting away on Bush's tax cut plan

Rick Lazio, Hillary Clinton's Senate opponent in New York, moved to distance himself from George W. Bush's tax cut plan by offering a package that is nearly 40 percent smaller than Bush's. Lazio's proposal includes a call to allow taxpayers to deduct Social Security payments from their federal income taxes. Lazio said his total proposal would save the average New York family about $3,000 a year. This week, Bush has found himself defending the fiscal prudence of his $1.3 trillion, 10-year tax cut, in the face of attacks by Democrats and polling data suggesting that the idea has not stirred much voter interest.

■ More Texas inmates getting out on parole

The July parole rate in Texas reached its highest point in any month since George W. Bush became governor in 1994, but the parole board head, Gerald Garrett, says politics played no role. Nearly 29 percent of eligible convicts were approved for parole in July, statistics show. A year ago, the figure was 18 percent. The Texas Department of Criminal Justice said July's parole rate was the highest for any month since July 1994, when the board approved 31.8 percent of cases considered. Top lawmakers and state officials have said Texas's $610 million budget overruns are in part to blame on a higher prison population in county jails because of tougher parole rules.

Tire investigation highlights slow pace of federal probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first lawsuits alleging some Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. truck tires suddenly lost their tread were filed nearly a decade ago, but the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration didn't start investigating until May.

And that was nearly a year after Ford Motor Co. replaced Firestone tires on its vehicles in parts of Latin America, Asia and the Middle East.

Critics say the case illustrates a fundamental problem with the agency responsible for auto safety: NHTSA largely depends on manufacturers to police themselves and notify it when problems are uncovered.

"This has been going on for some number of years and the company (Firestone) never notified the agency, and that to me suggests a failure in the agency's program," said Joan Claybrook, president of watchdog group Public Citizen and a former director of NHTSA.

Some safety experts say NHTSA isn't to blame, but that Congress needs to grant the agency greater authority.

"NHTSA's doing as good a job as the authority and the weak teeth that they have," said Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety. "They can only do what Congress gives them the authority to do."

The Center for Auto Safety is suing Bridgestone/Firestone and Ford to expand the recall to all ATX, ATX II and Wilderness brand tires. Ditlow said the group filed suit this week because it believed it could force a wider recall faster than NHTSA, which often takes several months to complete an investigation.

Bridgestone/Firestone announced a "voluntary" U.S. recall on Aug. 9 of 6.5 million P235/75R15 size Firestone ATX, ATX II and Wilderness AT tires, often found on Ford Explorers. The recall came three months after NHTSA opened the investigation.

NHTSA is monitoring the recall and continuing its investigation into 62 deaths — all reported since February — and more than 100 injuries that occurred in accidents where the Firestone tires may have been a factor. Since the recall began, at least two other deaths have been reported.

Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater and NHTSA Administrator Sue Bailey this week defended the agency's handling of the case. They say as soon as they found out the tires may have been responsible for fatalities, they began an investigation.

"I'm proud of the agency," Slater said. "I think the agency has done a tremendous job and continues to do a tremendous job."

Still, Slater said he is considering proposing a rule that would require manufacturers to report to NHTSA when they are sued or have received repeated complaints about a possible defect.

"We can't monitor every court in the United States looking for private lawsuits related to a safety defect," said NHTSA spokesman Rae Tyson. "That's not practical. But on the other hand, there's nothing preventing a trial lawyer from contacting us."

NHTSA officials say Ford did not tell them about the recalls in Venezuela, Ecuador, Thailand, Malaysia, Colombia and Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon and other Middle Eastern countries.

Ford spokesman Mike Vaughn said the Middle Eastern recall started in August 1999, followed by Malaysia and Thailand in February and the South American countries in May.

Vaughn said there were many reports of tread separation on vehicles in those countries. He said Ford officials did not report it to NHTSA because they didn't see the same problem in the United States and attributed it to different environmental and usage patterns.

"It's very hot, people in these markets tend to drive very fast, full-throttle, for extended periods. We also saw poor repairs and overloading," he said. "In the United States, you don't see the same usage patterns."

Slater said NHTSA "should have known about the recalls in other countries," but he resisted criticizing Ford or Bridgestone/Firestone for not coming forward earlier. He said NHTSA must work with manufacturers to protect citizens and the "blame game" would hinder those efforts.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., plans to chair hearings starting Sept. 6 at which NHTSA officials can outline their actions. A McCain aide said the hearings would explore what policy changes could help NHTSA identify problems earlier.

Claybrook and other safety officials say NHTSA should be granted the authority to levy harsher penalties. The agency now can fine companies $1,100 per violation, but only up to $925,000.

In the Firestone case, "that's pennies per tire," Ditlow said.

The Clinton administration asked Congress this year to allow NHTSA to fine companies up to $4 million, but no lawmaker took up the cause.

Sean Kane, a researcher with Strategic Safety, a group working with lawyers suing Ford and Bridgestone/Firestone, said he hopes the case prompts changes for NHTSA.

"If nothing else comes out of this whole Firestone issue, we hope these gaps are going to be filled and the agency will get some tools to help prevent some of these deaths and injuries from occurring," Kane said.

Scientist's colleague, friend puts livelihood on line for his freedom

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Don Marshall stepped out of the relative obscurity of being a private citizen and into one of the country's most visible national security cases when he pledged the deed to his home in exchange for the release of his longtime friend, Wen Ho Lee.

Marshall, 57, and his wife, Jean, have been named custodians for Lee as part of the conditions for the fired Los Alamos scientist's release from prison on bail — meaning the Marshalls essentially will baby-sit Lee for the federal government.

"Basically, if you are going to be a good friend, you are called on to do things that under other circumstances you would not be involved in," Marshall told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Friday from his home in White Rock, N.M., next door to Lee's one-story, wood-frame home.

Lee, 60, is charged with 59 counts alleging he transferred restricted data to unsecured computers and tape at Los Alamos National Laboratory. He was fired last year and has been in jail since his arrest Dec. 10. His trial is set for November.

Prosecutors have fought to keep him behind bars, fearing the Taiwanese-born scientist could flee and pose a threat to national security.

U.S. District Judge James Parker, however, ruled Thursday that information presented by the government in the case "no longer has the requisite clarity and persuasive character necessary," to keep Lee in jail pending trial.

Lee has not yet been released, and Parker proposed restrictive conditions when he is freed — he will be under constant surveillance — and required that Lee's bond be secured by his property and that of his brother and sister-in-law and the Marshall's.

Marshall, a colleague and friend for 20 years, described Lee as a gentle man with a sense of humor, a passion for gardening and fishing and a love of classical music and novels. He said he had not talked to Lee in months — Lee has been held in solitary confinement — and that he missed his friend.

Marshall said many of Lee's neighbors also are looking forward to his return.

"We're happy that he's going to be released," Marshall said. Marshall and his wife have had to make some changes, including answering questions from reporters, since becoming entangled in the case. But Marshall said they're willing to put up with the scrutiny for a friend.

Third-party custodians, such as the Marshalls, serve as intermediaries for the court to ensure that conditions of release are met, said Jerome Weger, chief of Pretrial Services for the federal court in Albuquerque. There is no training, but custodians sign paperwork that lists what's required. Custodians can be held in contempt of court if they don't inform the court of violations, Weger said.

UPGRADE: TEA vindicates Pease with ruling

acceptable.

The reversal is the result of an appeal filed by the campus and district officials. "We submitted an appeal to Commissioner Nelson because we felt there were some student data that had been coded or entered into the PEIMS (Public Education Information Management) system inaccurately," said Maurer. "As a result of that appeal our passing rate has been upgraded."

Maurer said the inaccurate data had negatively affected just one accountability group. With the data corrected, the rate was raised to above 50 percent passing and Pease was raised to academically acceptable. Further the campus raised itself from the stigma of being deemed low performing.

Joe Cummins, executive director of administrative services for MISD, said the low performing status had represented the data and testing information of just one student.

"It was evident at our school board meeting Tuesday evening that the Pease staff has a great deal of pride with the children they work with in that neighborhood. And the label of low performing was not earned," Cummins said Friday.

Maurer added that there still is some concern and need for improvement with having only 50 percent of students in any accountability group not passing the TAAS. However, "My concern and one of the tragedies of that low performing rating is the attention it gets," Maurer said, adding that the result is so many positives are overlooked when the title is applied.

As an example, Maurer pointed to several successes at the campus that were not as widely publicized as the low performing rating.

For instance, for the first time ever, all third-grade bilingual students at the campus took the test in English. Ninety percent of those children, whose native language is Spanish, passed the TAAS. One of the students even received special recognition for high achievement.

One sixth-grade class at the campus had 100 percent of its students pass the TAAS and the campus improved its third-grade reading scores by 25 percent over the previous year.

"We believe that is significant too. We just wish and hope our successes are recognized," Maurer said.

MISD is scheduled to host a press conference Monday at 10 a.m. in the Pease library to announce the news of the upgraded rating.

WIND: McCamey welcoming diversification

(From 1A)

naday said. After completion, 20 permanent jobs operating and maintaining the turbines will be created. As the company becomes more active in West Texas, he said, Cielo will look to establish a regional office in Midland.

"We are pleased to have it in our area," said Sherry Phillips, mayor of McCamey. "We welcome diversification."

With last year's downturn in energy prices, she said, her town of about 2,500 residents "has been left high and dry. I hope this will give us a boost, and I think it will. We're getting ready, we're making the town cleaner and neater."

She said the town — founded 75 years ago with the discovery of the McCamey oil field, began to flounder in the 1980s when the first price collapse devastated the energy industry. And as oil reserves depleted, she said, more producers lost interest in the area.

"We were left with lots of service units trying to get that last drop of oil," she said.

Hornaday said his company has been active in the Panhandle and West Texas for a number of years, and when the contract with Reliant came available, what made Upton County attractive was not only the availability of wind but officials' willingness to work with the company.

"We made an arrangement with Upton County to use as many local contractors as possible and they adjusted the tax rate," he said.

He explained that wind power projects are three times as costly as a traditional gas plant, so Upton County agreed to reduce the property tax by a third.

"That's a big part of our expenses, and that concession was how we were able to complete the contract with Reliant and Austin," he said.

Reliant, based in the United Kingdom, has extensive experience in wind power generation, he said, since the alternative energy is more prevalent in Europe than in the United States.

Lester Baker, customer service representative with Cap Rock Electric, said "It looks like a good project for the area. Being involved in the electric utility industry and seeing the impact natural gas prices are having on electrical costs, this could be an answer to the swings in fuel costs."

Hornaday agreed that the alternative energy source will be one way utilities can hedge against soaring natural gas prices.

The project will also be beneficial, he said, because it is environmentally friendly, creating no air emissions and requiring no water, which could also help communities with limited water resources attract other projects.

The project, to be located on 200 acres, is not expected to interfere with ranching or hunting operations in the area, he said.

GROUP: Cities often work together

(From 1A)

Midland and Odessa were combined into a single Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) following the 1990 census. Together, the MSA has a population of more than 240,000 people.

Sipes also mentioned that the two cities often work together, citing the Midland Odessa Transportation Network (MOTRAN), which promotes improved highway transportation.

Sipes said his recommendation is not based on dissatisfaction with the current representation. "We don't care who ends up representing us, we just think we will have more of a voice if we have one person representing us together."

Jim Butler, chairman of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, agreed with Sipes. "The Odessa City Council and the Ector County Commission have passed resolutions to support this goal," Butler said. "Despite what some may think, there is not an iron curtain between Midland and Odessa."

Butler also said that although the joint committee members had a hard job ahead of them, they would find an equitable solution.

Marvin Wynn, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said he believed there was universal support for the resolution.

"We've worked with the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, and this resolution will be on the Midland City Council's agenda in September."

Midland is currently represented in the U.S. House of Representatives by Henry Bonilla, Larry Combest and Lamar Smith.

Midland is represented in the Texas Senate by Teel Bivins and in the Texas House of Representatives by Tom Craddick.

Odessa is represented in the U.S. House of Representatives by Larry Combest and Henry Bonilla.

Odessa is also represented in the Texas Senate by Teel Bivins and Robert Duncan and in the Texas House of Representatives by B. Turner and Buddy West.

Redistricting takes place every 10 years, after the U.S. Census is completed. In Texas, there is a redistricting committee from the House of Representatives and a redistricting committee from the Senate. A simple majority of both branches is needed to approve the plan. The plan then goes to the governor for his approval or veto.

According to a press release from the Texas House of Representatives committee on redistricting, if the Texas Legislature cannot reach an agreement on a plan, a redistricting board would have the responsibility of drawing the congressional lines. The board would consist of the lieutenant governor, speaker of the house, the attorney general, the land commissioner and the comptroller.

If this board is unable to come to an agreement, the decision would go to court.

It is generally accepted that Republicans should reap the political benefits of the 2001 redistricting effort because four of the five members of that redistricting board are Republicans. Only House Speaker Pete Laney is a Democrat.

Still, in 1971, 1981 and 1991 the task of redistricting went through the Legislature, the board and had to go to court. In 1991, a federal court had to determine the redistricting plan for Texas.

GOLF: Kuehne having hard time with putts

(From 1A)

there is a 65-foot high net. When Kuehne took out his driver, he didn't hit the net, he flew it.

He did the same with his 3-wood. Remember 285 and 65. That is unreal.

At least, that is what the tournament committee at the Masters thought. They slapped a "no woods" rule on Kuehne when he was at the driving range, because he was putting cars in a nearby parking lot in danger.

Again, it is length personified, and that makes Kuehne the top long ball attraction this week, albeit not the only one.

The Buy.com Tour not only has a reputation for developing golf's next superstars, but for being the home to golf's longest hitters. Of all the long hitters on the PGA and Buy.com Tours, eight of the top 10 are playing on the Buy.com Tour, and that list does not include Kuehne, who has not played enough on either tour to qualify.

They hit them out of sight, and not much has changed in West Texas. If anything, it has only made the golfers that much longer.

"The main priority is getting it down there," said Hiroshi Matsuo, who is averaging 321.2 yards on his measured drives this week. "I am hitting it down there so far that I can hit a wedge at it."

Matsuo is second on the tournament leaderboard behind Kevin Johnson.

Dan Olsen, who bombed his drives all day Thursday and Friday, also ranks among the leaders in driving distance this week.

"If there is no rough, I am taking the short cut," said Olsen, who is averaging 341 yards on measured drives this week. "This course is rewarding the guy who can let the air out of it and place it."

And plenty of players are. There are 50 players, averaging 314 yards on their measured drives, so far this week.

The fact is that just being able to drive the ball halfway to Midland is not going to automatically translate into a PBO championship. Just ask Kuehne.

This week, he blistered the course to tie for the tournament lead in driving distance (346.8 yards) before giving numerous strokes back on and around the green. Friday, he hit 16 greens, but shot an even-par 72.

How does Kuehne miss the cut?

It was the same reason Woods was blowing out the field at the World Golf Championships-NEC Invitational.

"Length is great, and there are guys who are long, I mean it is spooky how long they are," Johnson said. (But) "You still have to hit good wedge shots and make the putts."

It was the classic case of driving for show and putting for dough. Johnson is leading the tournament in putting. Kuehne isn't anywhere close.

"It doesn't matter if you can't make the putts," Kuehne said. "I putted horrible. I 3-putted three times in two rounds and only played the par-5s in two-under. That sums it up. You've got to get the ball in the hole, and that comes down to putting it in. I putted not just bad, I putted terrible."

But he is still fun to watch.

Ismael Herrera found guilty on 3 drug counts

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Ismael Holguin Herrera, 50, was convicted on three felony drug counts Friday in U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson's court.

The guilty verdicts came after the jury deliberated for three and a half hours Friday afternoon. The jury received the case at 1:10 p.m. and by 4:45 p.m. had reached a verdict.

Herrera, the ex-manager of the Herrera Law Firm, was convicted on: one count of conspiring to deliver cocaine; one count of attempting to possess with intent to distribute cocaine and one count of being a cocaine user and or addict illegally possessing a firearm.

After the reading of the verdict and setting of the sentencing hearing, Herrera was taken into custody because the first two counts require mandatory detention. According to Assistant U.S. Attorney John Klassen, Herrera most likely will remain in custody until the sentencing hearing scheduled for Oct. 26 at 1:15 p.m.

Herrera faces up to five years each on the first two counts.

"I'm extremely disappointed," said Warren Heagy, Herrera's defense attorney. "I didn't think the government's case was that strong. And when all government's witnesses testified my client was not a drug dealer, I felt like we were in pretty good shape."

Heagy said he did not yet know if the defense would appeal the case.

Bankrolled by pizza mogul, new Catholic law school to begin classes

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Assembling auto parts in Tennessee, Elizabeth Hopkins considered herself in a rut. Then she read about a Roman Catholic law school planned by the Domino's Pizza founder, and her life was changed.

"I really believe it's providence to do this," says the 25-year-old Catholic from Franklin, Tenn., a Loyola University fine arts graduate who will be one of Ave Maria School of Law's first students when classes begin Monday.

Ave Maria is among various conservative Catholic causes bankrolled by Tom Monaghan, who sold his controlling share in Domino's in 1998 and has pledged to spend his hundreds of millions promoting his faith.

He is devoting $50 million to the law school, hoping to meld legal theory with staunch Catholic theology while addressing his concerns that Catholic education has been watered down.

Other reasons he has cited: "The lack of God in our society, the breakup of families, the low legitimacy rate, abortion — the list goes on."

Ave Maria opens with 77 students — nearly twice its initial goal — drawn from 218 applicants in 44 states, admissions chief Michael Kenney says.

The class' median score on the national Law School Admissions Test was 158, on par with many of the law schools ranked among the nation's top 50 by U.S. News and World Report.

Some critics say they believe that Monaghan seeks to create ultraconservative, religiously radical lawyers. Others question whether his money would have been better spent on any of the more than 20 existing Catholic law schools nationwide.

"For him to come along and say (Catholic colleges) are not doing well and 'We're going to have a truly Catholic law school,' that's presumptuous," says the Rev. Robert Drinan, a law professor at Georgetown University, a Jesuit school. "There appears to be a political agenda."

To Jane Benshoof of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, Monaghan's mission is "to train a cadre of lawyers who will do advocacy and lobbying" to change the Constitution, namely a woman's right to have an abortion.

"They're not training lawyers; they're training advocates for a point of view, to push a certain theocratic view through their legal work," says Benshoof, whose nonprofit legal and policy advocacy group promotes women's reproductive rights.

Ave Maria's governing board includes the fervently anti-abortion U.S. Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill.; Helen Alvare, director of planning and information for the Pro-Life Secretariat of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops; a Catholic archbishop and cardinal, two Notre Dame law professors and an appellate judge.

Monaghan wasn't available for further comment. But Bernard Dobranski, Ave Maria's dean, says critics' views are exaggerated.

"We're not a seminary; we're a law school" that will discuss Catholicism when it's "relevant or appropriate," he says. While believing law and morality are linked, "we never lose sight of the fact that our primary responsibility is to train people to be good lawyers."

Former Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork says he plans to teach "Moral Foundations of the Law" at Ave Maria, not preach Catholicism. After all, he says, he's not of that faith.

"I know they intend to bring a Catholic perspective in at some level, but I don't think it will interfere with the straightforward teaching" of such legal issues as contracts and torts, Bork says.

To Hopkins, who had worked at a variety of jobs after graduating from Loyola University in New Orleans, Ave Maria looked like her calling.

"It talked about appealing to the moral foundations of law, which I found fascinating," she says.

Patrick Laurence, a 26-year-old Catholic from Pasadena, Calif., had believed "that by becoming a lawyer you had to lose a little bit of your soul." Now, he hopes Ave Maria will teach him "to be a Catholic lawyer, how to hold onto your principles."

"It might be pie in the sky, but I hope this school does something to introduce something in our country to put back our moorings," he says.

Kelly Bremigen, a 22-year-old Catholic from Albany, N.Y., said she hopes her Ave Maria studies make her an anti-abortion attorney, "even if I can't afford to put food on the table."

Ave Maria will have to win provisional accreditation from the American Bar Association so that its first graduates can sit for the state bar exam, Kenney says.

Its yearly tuition of $19,750 compares to $25,092 at the Catholic University of America's law school, which Ave Maria's new dean had headed. In Ave Maria's back yard, the University of Michigan's law school — ranked seventh by U.S. News — costs in-state residents $19,116 a year, $25,086 for students from outside the state.

The school's building — the former headquarters of a public health company — is to include a library with more than 200,000 volumes, nearly three times what the bar association requires for accreditation.

Navy probing allegation of misconduct

In a brief written statement, the Navy said it is looking into an allegation of inappropriate conduct by a group of service members during an encounter in the Nugget Hotel in Sparks, Nev., with a civilian couple .

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just when the Navy had restored ties to the Tailhook Association of naval aviators, it is facing a new allegation of "inappropriate conduct" by service members attending a Tailhook convention in Nevada last week.

Though much less sensational than the 1991 Tailhook sex scandal that shook the Navy at its highest levels, the latest allegation has triggered a probe by the Navy's inspector general, officials said Friday.

Details were sketchy and the Navy would not release the name of the person who made the complaint.

In a brief written statement, the Navy said it is looking into an allegation of inappropriate conduct by a group of service members during an encounter in the Nugget Hotel in Sparks, Nev., with a civilian couple who were staying at the Nugget but were not attending the Aug. 17-20 Tailhook convention.

The Navy's chief spokesman, Rear Adm. Steve Pietropaoli, said the Navy would not release the name of the individual who lodged the complaint on a telephone hot line that had been set up after the 1991 incident. He also would not say what day the alleged incident took place. He said it came to the Navy's attention "early this week."

Pietropaoli said the man reported that he and his wife were in a crowded hallway in the hotel and that when the man asked the people — apparently service members attending the convention — to make room for the couple to pass, "inappropriate comments" were made to him and his wife.

The man also reported that someone in the group made inappropriate physical contact with his wife, although Pietropaoli was not more specific.

Sparks Police Sgt. Sherman Box said the department received no reports from or calls to the Nugget in connection with Tailhook.

Lonnie McClung, a retired Navy captain and president of the Tailhook Association, said in a telephone interview Friday that his organization was surprised to hear about the complaint.

"As far as we knew the guys were fairly well behaved," he said. "This taints it a little bit."

McClung said he had no information to confirm the allegation, which he said was made on Tuesday. He said there were about 1,200 military members among the 2,000 who attended the convention and that hotel officials told him there were only two noise complaints during the four-day convention, both on Aug. 18.

"The hotel told us our behavior was exemplary," he said.

McClung said he did not believe the incident, if verified, would affect his group's relationship with the Navy.

"If this was Navy people involved, it's a Navy issue," McClung said. "The Navy should deal with it the way they see fit."

Just this year the Navy restored full ties to the association, and last week's convention in Sparks was the first time Navy and Marine Corps aviators were officially sanctioned to attend the convention since 1991.

Last year the Navy sent several senior representatives to the Tailhook convention as part of a review to determine whether the Navy should restore ties to the organization. Navy Secretary Richard Danzig announced in January, "We've concluded that the time is right to restore ties." He said he was convinced that Tailhook's leaders had made a commitment to avoiding trouble of the kind that happened in 1991.

The Tailhook Association is named for the hook on an aircraft that snags an arresting cable on the landing deck of an aircraft carrier. As of last year, it had about 10,000 members, down from a 1991 peak of about 16,000.

Besides its annual conventions, which include professional seminars, the group sponsors college scholarships for children of former naval aviators and publishes a magazine on carrier aviation called Hook.

In the 1991 incident, dozens of female officers were groped by aviators attending parties during a three-day conference at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel. The Defense Department inspector general implicated 117 officers in various offenses, ranging from sexual assault to indecent exposure and other acts, and faulted the Navy's leaders for failing to stop the behavior.

The episode triggered the resignation of Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett and the early retirement of Adm. Frank B. Kelso, then the chief of naval operations. It also led to lawsuits, multiple investigations and changes in the Navy — including more emphasis on ethics and sexual harassment awareness and an opening of more aviation opportunities for women.

Emmy ballot forgets Chris Rock show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The joke was on Chris Rock: His Emmy-nominated comedy special was left off ballots for next month's television awards.

The error, which the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences scrambled to correct in the days after the ballots went out to voters, is one of several that have beset entertainment awards shows in 2000.

Oscar statuettes were swiped last spring, videocassettes intended to curry Emmy votes for the sitcom "Everybody Loves Raymond" went missing and a hip-hop music awards show was shut down by an audience melee this week.

"There have been an awful lot of gremlins at the Hollywood awards this year," said Thomas O'Neil, author of "The Emmys."

The glitches reflect the detail involved in the awards process, said John Leverence, Emmy Awards director.

"Anything as complicated as the Normandy landing or the Primetime Emmy Awards is bound to have within it opportunities for things not to go right," Leverence said Friday. Because of safeguards, he said, the voting outcome was not compromised.

The omission of HBO's "Chris Rock: Bigger and Blacker" from the variety, music or comedy special ballot was brought to the academy's attention by one of the 120 academy members eligible to vote in the category.

"We called everybody, notified them there was a problem and got them a new ballot or, if they preferred, let them write it (Rock's show) in," Leverence said.

The ballots, which went out in June and were due back by Aug. 21, are all accounted for and complete, he said. A ballot has to have five nominees listed to be counted so there was no chance for an incomplete form to slip through, Leverence said.

A handful of ballots were affected, he said. In a statement, Rock expressed confidence that the mistake would be rectified.

"I'm not worried. I'm sure the Academy will handle it accordingly," the comedian said.

Rock's special, which has a total of six nominations, is competing for the variety, music or comedy special trophy with "72nd Annual Academy Awards," ABC; "Cirque du Soleil — Quidam," Bravo; "Eddie Izzard: Dress to Kill," HBO; "Saturday Night Live: The 25th Anniversary Special," NBC.

Speculation abounds over slaying of Minnesota reverend in Nairobi

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — In his last few hours, the Rev. John Kaiser — described by colleagues as a fearless man — appeared nervous and agitated for the first time in his decades-old crusade for social justice in Kenya.

It was as if the Minnesota native knew what was coming.

When the 67-year-old priest's body was found along a highway with a gunshot to the back of the head, Kenyan human rights activists immediately called his death a political assassination — and a clear warning to those who would follow in his footsteps.

"He was worried about his safety," said Brother Martin Van Leeuwen, who last saw Kaiser on Wednesday at a mission in Nairobi belonging to the Mill Hill Missionaries, the religious society to which they both belonged.

"Since this time he came to Nairobi he was different from the other times, restless, worried. He did not express his fears, but you could see he was different," said Van Leeuwen, who had known and worked alongside Kaiser for a quarter century.

An outspoken critic of the Kenyan government's human rights record during his 36 years as a missionary in the East African nation, Kaiser had recently been involved in a rape case brought against a prominent politician.

On Wednesday evening, a visibly agitated Kaiser left Nairobi, despite pleas from Van Leeuwen to stay and leave in the morning.

The last time Kaiser was heard from was when he reached the residence of the bishop of the diocese of Ngong, 15 miles west of the capital.

He left there between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesday to make what should have been a six-hour drive to his mission in Lolgorien, 150 miles west of Nairobi.

Twelve hours later, police found his body lying beside his pickup near Naivasha, 40 miles north of Ngong, his head virtually blown off by a shotgun. His blood was still fresh and the shotgun was found beside him.

"Police told us there had been a struggle, he had tried to save himself ... and the car had been forced off the road by another car," Van Leeuwen said in an interview. "With hindsight, he did not feel safe any place where he was."

When news of Kaiser's death reached Nairobi, speculation was rife about who was responsible.

Since the mid-1990's, the priest's life had been surrounded in controversy, mainly due to his vocal criticism of President Daniel arap Moi's government.

"Who in Kenya was desperate to kill Father Kaiser and why now? They could only be very powerful people who saw him as a moral thorn in their evil flesh," Kenya Human Rights Network said in a statement Friday, condemning what it called a "political execution."

In testimony before a special government commission earlier this year, Kaiser accused two Cabinet ministers of fomenting bloody tribal clashes between 1991 and 1997 in the Rift Valley, adding that the ministers had stolen land from those forced to flee the violence.

In recent months, Kaiser had actively supported two young women parishioners who had brought rape accusations against Julius ole Sunkuli, a close Moi ally and minister of state who is widely considered the president's chosen successor.

Kaiser advised the women, both under the age of 18, to consult a lawyer.

Sunkuli, who was accused in court of statutory rape June 23, is expected to appear in court again on Aug. 31, when a judge will decide if there is enough evidence to bring him to trial. It was not known if Kaiser would have been called as a witness or if his recent fears were related to the case.

The slaying has shaken human rights activists, who consider it a warning, said Elna Mwau of the Coalition of Violence Against Women, which has also supported the rape victims.

Kaiser had known for a long time that there might be a price on his head, but treated it in a "semi-jokey" manner — until recently, according to Mill Hill's East African representative, Father Cornelius Schilder.

"On this last visit he was much more serious," Schilder said in an interview. "It's a terrible blow to our aspirations because peace and justice to us is of prime importance and John Kaiser was our spearhead of all this.

"He spoke out on the Sunkuli case and the land clashes ... it's an enormous set back."

Kaiser, described as a hard-working man dedicated to his congregation who wore ordinary, often patched-up clothes, helped the girls simply because they were his parishioners, Van Leeuwen said.

"He was working for the people when these things came up in the framework of justice and peace," Van Leeuwen said. "He was a martyr for the faith."

Kaiser was raised in Underwood, Minn., and attended St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn. A former wrestling champion and pole vaulter, he enlisted in the Army in 1954 and became a paratrooper, achieving the rank of sergeant.

In 1960, he graduated from St. Louis University and later studied philosophy and theology at St. Joseph's Seminary in Mill Hill, England.

His sister, Carolita Mahoney, said her brother did not enter the priesthood right away, bypassing the large Benedictine monastery at St. Johns. "He always had this calling, this longing, to be a priest, even though I think he tried to fight it," she said.

Mahoney said he later visited St. John's again, where he met an elderly missionary priest from the Mill Hill order and decided that was the place for him. "John has always had a great regard for the welfare of people, especially the poor. He's dedicated his life to that," she said.

An autopsy was to be carried out Saturday and a memorial service was planned for next week. Kaiser will be buried in Kenya as he would have wished, Van Leeuwen said.

Russian navy demonstrates it's still expert at blocking information

MURMANSK, Russia (AP) — Throughout the Kursk submarine crisis, the deteriorating Russian navy demonstrated it has preserved at least one skill from its powerful Soviet past: keeping the media in the dark.

Except for one crew from state-run RTR television, no Russian or foreign journalists were allowed near the site where rescuers fought for days to reach the submarine. Saying it had military secrets to preserve, the navy barred journalists from the northern naval base where the warship was based, and where families of the 118 sailors stayed through the harrowing ordeal.

The policy quickly backfired, as independent Russian newspapers and broadcasters turned against the naval command and government leaders, pointing out contradictions in the official statements and the state-run media coverage.

"The only good news from the Kursk submarine tragedy has been the work of the Russian press," media observer Robert Coalson wrote in the Moscow Times on Friday.

In a key departure from the Soviet era, the media and public anger shocked the government, forcing it on the defensive. The Kremlin led a frenzied effort to preserve President Vladimir Putin's image as a take-charge, competent leader amid attacks that he was slow to respond. Putin said on national television that he felt "responsible and guilty" for the disaster.

Still, his comments were aired in a careful interview on state-run RTR television.

The navy kept silent about the Aug. 12 accident for two days, and then lied about when it happened and falsely claimed to have had radio contact with the ship after it sank.

The evasiveness has cast doubt on the navy's repeated insistence that the submarine's two nuclear reactors switched off and pose no threat. While Norwegian sensors that have been monitoring the site daily have not reported any increase in radiation levels, Russian experts sought to allay any remaining fears Friday.

"The reactors shut down within one minute after the catastrophe, and their safety systems fully prevent any danger of a radioactive disaster," said Alexander Kiryushin, who leads a team that designed the Kursk's reactors. He said the reactor model used on the Kursk has a fully automatic safety system which kicks in without crew involvement even in extreme conditions.

While the world anxiously waited for news on the fate of the Kursk, the first news conference in Murmansk, where the Northern Fleet is headquartered, came six days after the submarine sunk. It was a stunning flop.

As dozens of reporters from around the world crammed into the briefing room, navy spokesman Igor Babenko recited a brief official report about the number of vessels taking part in the rescue operation and about the weather on the Barents Sea, and left without answering a single question.

"Don't you know that this is a briefing? I am not authorized to answer even one of your questions," Babenko said.

The state-run RTR TV crew that was allowed to go to the rescue site received permission only several days after the accident, and after Putin's interference. RTR ran regular live reports from the rescue site, giving comprehensive, factual accounts that were picked up by television broadcasters around the world.

Reporters from other media who pressed the navy for access to the site of the rescue operation received a firm answer from the Northern Fleet's chief spokesman Vladimir Navrotsky.

"You don't have a chance," he told a news conference in Murmansk.

'The only good news from the Kursk submarine tragedy has been the work of the Russian press.'

— Robert Coalson, media observer

As relatives of Kursk sailors arrived in Murmansk over the past two weeks, the navy whisked them away to military bases, which are traditionally closed to outsiders, including reporters.

But even as the naval command was trying to keep information from the press, it relied on the media to break the tragic news about the Kursk to the relatives. Wives, parents and siblings of Kursk sailors said they only learned of the submarine's sinking from television or newspaper reports.

And when the navy finally concluded that there was little chance of survivors aboard the Kursk, it did not notify the anguished relatives. Instead, they heard the news on television.

Media was largely banned from meetings between the angry families and Russian officials. At one such meeting, a local television crew filmed an extremely distressed mother shouting at Deputy Prime Minister Ilya Klebanov, with navy officers surrounding her and trying to calm her down. A woman stood nearby holding a syringe, although the video never showed her being injected with anything.

Navy officials dismissed claims they were using drugs to subdue critics, saying that only medical aid was administered. Medics were called in to care for anguished relatives, and ambulances attended a mourning ceremony at which two women fainted.

Connoisseurs pinch noses, sample 300-year-old bottle of wine

ALMERE, Netherlands (AP) — The connoisseurs held the ruby vintage up to the sunlight, swirled it in their glasses, and put their noses to the rim.

"It smells like cow dung!" one exclaimed.

"It won't be easy to swallow this one," another said.

But so strong was the temptation to sample a 300-year-old bottle of wine recovered from a 17th-century Dutch warship that none of the experts on the panel was able to resist Friday.

Indeed, they were in for a flavorful surprise.

"There's a hint of fruit in it — of orange peel, marmalade and caramel. It's surprisingly good," said wine commentator Lucette Faber, swishing the liquid in her mouth as a fetid odor wafted through the tasting room.

The stout-bottomed, musty green flask was found by divers July 7 in a sunken wreckage off the coast of the Wadden Sea, a shallow sound between the Dutch coast and the North Sea.

Strong currents had recently left the cannon frigate exposed on the sandy bottom near Texel Island, said Arent Vos, head of the crew that undertook the mission for the Netherlands Institute for Ship and Underwater Archaeology.

Around 1700, during a lull in northern European sea battles, there was an upsurge in the import of French, Spanish and Portuguese wines to the Low Countries, according to the wine experts. They guessed the recovered wine was an early variant of a dry Port that had been colored with a small amount of elderberry juice.

'I had four gulps and I can still taste it. People said I shouldn't do it, you never know what's in it. But I was extremely curious.'

— Lucette Faber, wine commentator

"This must have been a very good wine at the time," said Faber, who headed the panel of seven experts at Friday's tasting. She noted that most wine at the time was shipped in vats and only the best vintages would have been bottled.

"I had four gulps and I can still taste it," she said. "People said I shouldn't do it, you never know what's in it. But I was extremely curious."

Before the tasting, scientists carefully drilled a hole in the soft cork and transferred part of the contents into vacuum-sealed vials for laboratory tests.

Initial results estimated alcohol content at 10.6 percent and acidity levels comparable to modern wines.

Wine experts had feared sea water could have seeped in and spoiled the contents. But remarkably, almost none did. The scant accumulation of algae only on the neck indicated the flask had been protected beneath sand.

And while the smell — a strong rotten egg odor that hung around for about an hour, though lessening in intensity — was off-putting at first, the experts said that was to be expected after 300 years.

But despite the foul smell, almost no oxidation had taken place, so that when the bottle was uncorked the taste was preserved reasonably well considering the wine's age, said Theunes Braaksma, a Dutch wine quality consultant who took part in the tasting.

"The taste improved as it mixed with oxygen," he said, then added: "Of course, it wouldn't do well compared to a wine you could find in a supermarket today."

And while the experts called the bottle "priceless," they declined to compare its value to commercial wines whose provenance is known.

Overwhelmed by troubles, Nigeria pins hopes on Clinton's visit

WARRI, Nigeria (AP) — The highway leading to this crowded port city is fraught with danger. Burned, twisted vehicles are evidence of car wrecks caused by huge potholes, and surrounding forests conceal armed bandits who ambush passing cars.

Blessed with oil riches but battered by violent crime and enough poverty to threaten a young elected government, many Nigerians hope President Clinton's weekend visit brings a cure-all of U.S. investment and debt relief to Africa's struggling giant.

Nowhere are those expectations higher than in the southern Niger Delta, a web of mangrove swamps where American and European firms drill for the crude that makes up one of the world's largest oil and gas reserves.

Here, in shantytowns overshadowed by oil rigs and short of schools, clinics and roads, frustration frequently erupts into violence and ethnic clashes. Angry youths sabotage oil company pipelines and kidnap workers.

Thousands have been killed and thousands more have died when vandalized pipelines exploded while villagers were scooping out fuel to sell along dirt roads.

Successive military leaders bear much blame for squandering the region's oil wealth. Yet many residents also have grown impatient with President Olusegun Obasanjo's inability to improve their squalid living standards since winning elections last year.

"Our families are hungry and angry and they want President Clinton to see that," said Peter Alele, an advertising executive in Warri, a polluted, crowded city of several hundred thousand, where shantytowns bump against the walled compounds of oil executives. "Development is a right and not a request."

Nigeria's foreign ministry says Obasanjo and Clinton will discuss the $30 billion in foreign loans accrued by Nigeria's corrupt former rulers. Obasanjo's government has argued that unless the debts are forgiven, his country will be unable to alleviate Nigeria's poverty and stem violence.

Speaking to Nigerian journalists by satellite linkup on Tuesday, Susan Rice, the U.S. assistant secretary for African affairs, cautioned Nigerians not to have "exaggerated expectations" of the trip. But she also said it would deepen cooperation and improve trade and investment between the two countries.

American aid to the 110-million-strong West African country is growing rapidly.

After leaving Nigeria, Clinton plans a short stop in Arusha, Tanzania, to participate in Burundi peace talks mediated by former South African President Nelson Mandela.

Peace prospects for Burundi, where hundreds of thousands have died in a seven-year war, look increasingly dim, as both extremist Tutsis and Hutu rebels oppose a power-sharing agreement that Mandela hoped would be signed on Monday in Arusha with Clinton in attendance.

President Pierre Buyoya has unsuccessfully pleaded with Mandela to postpone the signing as rebels launch fresh attacks. Even without a signing, though, administration officials say Clinton will go to Arusha to show support for Mandela.

Clinton's visit comes two years after he first toured Africa to signal what he said was a growing U.S. commitment to the continent. Nigeria was kept off the agenda then to register American displeasure with its dictator, Gen. Sani Abacha, whose death a few months later ushered in rapid democratization.

Elsewhere on the continent, the political situation has been just as fluid. Several African leaders who won Clinton's praise in 1998 have since become embroiled in bitter wars, while others complain that Clinton's promises of aid and trade have fallen short.

White House officials see Obasanjo's government as a key to stability in Africa. The Nigerian leader has worked hard to battle diseases such as AIDS and to restore peace in war-ravaged Sierra Leone.

The United States has responded by preparing a team of U.S. soldiers to train Nigerian U.N. peacekeepers and has set up a fund to help pay for AIDS prevention and care on the continent.

Clinton is expected to confine his visit to Abuja, the capital.

By Friday, white banners with pictures of Clinton and Obasanjo were strung along Abuja's main roads, along with American and Nigerian flags. Workers had coated bridges and government buildings with fresh paint.

Radio stations blared welcoming songs in Yoruba and Hausa, two widely spoken Nigerian languages, hailing the arrival of "Bily-O, the president of America."

Rebel arrests threaten Philippine hostage release

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines (AP) — Muslim rebels threatened to call off a deal to free six hostages after police arrested two men carrying bundles of money believed to be part of a ransom payment, officials said Friday.

The two suspected Abu Sayyaf rebels were arrested Thursday while trying to convert $240,000 into Philippine pesos at a bank in the city of Zamboanga, police said.

Abu Sayyaf commander Ghalib "Robot" Andang earlier agreed to release six foreign hostages — three French women, a South African woman, a German man and a Finnish man — on Saturday. But he told a go-between late Thursday that he would not free them unless the two detained rebels were released, an official close to the negotiations said.

A lawyer was attempting to obtain bail for the two suspects.

Police Supt. Angelito Casimiro said the two men were detained on suspicion they were Abu Sayyaf rebels after they tried to exchange bundles of $100 bills at a government bank.

The military says the rebels were paid more than $5.5 million for the earlier releases of nine Malaysians and a German.

Zamboanga, a southern port city, is about three hours by ferry from Jolo, the impoverished island where the rebels are holding their hostages.

The Abu Sayyaf kidnapped 21 people from Malaysia's Sipadan diving resort on April 23. Most have been released for ransom, but three French, two Germans, two Finns and two South Africans remain.

The rebels are also holding three French television journalists who visited their hideout and 12 Filipino Christian evangelists who came to pray for the hostages.

All are imprisoned in primitive mountain camps on Jolo, 580 miles south of Manila.

The rebels say they are fighting for an independent Islamic state in the predominantly Roman Catholic Philippines, but the government says they are a group of bandits who thrive on kidnapping and piracy.

Asked whether the hostages would be released Saturday, President Joseph Estrada replied, "I don't know yet."

New Mexico explosion ignites concern about old Texas pipeline

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas Land Commissioner David Dewhurst said Friday that he was "scared" by similarities between a natural gas pipeline that exploded in New Mexico last weekend and an old pipeline that may be reopened to transport gasoline from Houston to El Paso.

"Similarities between the ... pipeline that blew out ... and the Longhorn pipeline, quite frankly, scare me," Dewhurst said, even though the two pipelines are designed for different commodities.

On Thursday, Dewhurst visited the site near Carlsbad, N.M., where 11 people were killed and another person critically injured Aug. 19 when the pipeline operated by El Paso Natural Gas Co. exploded near their campsite.

Both pipelines, he said, are about 50 years old.

"In the pipeline business, that's not a good thing," he added. "There have been six major pipeline blowouts (in the United States) since 1985. Like Longhorn, all six of these blowouts have involved pipelines that were installed in the 1950s and the 1960s — old pipes."

Most of the Texas pipeline, owned by Dallas-based Longhorn Partners Pipeline, was built in 1950 to carry crude oil from West Texas to refineries in Baytown near Houston. It has been inactive since 1995.

Dewhurst also said that both the El Paso pipeline that blew up and the Longhorn pipeline run through areas of high salinity, which contributes to corrosion, the second leading cause of pipeline explosions.

He said that a draft environmental assessment of the Longhorn pipeline found that the pipeline's corrosion-control practices were "questionable."

A preliminary investigation found corrosion in one section of the blown-out pipeline.

Dewhurst toured the site of the New Mexico blast with National Transportation Safety Board Chairman Jim Hall.

"It was not a pretty scene," Dewhurst said. "Apparently the fireball was 1,200 degrees. It reached 350 feet in height. Sand turned to glass. Concrete turned to powder. ... It's a scene I'll never forget."

On its 700-mile proposed route across Texas, the Longhorn pipeline would pass through or near residential neighborhoods in Houston, Austin and several other communities and would cross the environmentally sensitive Edwards Aquifer, from which drinking water is drawn, in Central Texas.

Dewhurst said that 42,000 people in the Houston area's Harris County alone live within 1,250 feet — less than one-quarter of a mile — from the Longhorn route. Two elementary schools in Harris County, he said, are located within 200 feet of the line.

The Longhorn proposal has drawn heavy opposition from landowners, environmentalists and public agencies. Dewhurst said he will continue to work to block the Texas pipeline until he is convinced it can be operated safely.

Longhorn said in a written statement that a federal regulatory review of its pipeline proposal, which is now under way, will produce "one of the most extraordinarily safe and environmentally sensitive pipelines in the world."

This was the second time that the land commissioner had publicly raised questions about the Longhorn pipeline. In March, he announced that he would not sign easement documents necessary for the pipeline to operate across six Texas rivers.

Dewhurst said Friday that he hoped the Longhorn pipeline could eventually be put into operation, and he said he was willing to work with the company to make sure all his concerns about safety were adequately addressed.

"At the end of the day, the pipeline should and can be safe," he said.

Dewhurst said he will discuss with federal officials how much of the Longhorn pipeline should be replaced and whether part of the line should be rerouted to bypass heavily populated and environmentally sensitive areas.

Among other points that still had to be worked out, he said, were assurances that pipe bends, which are often difficult to inspect, had been adequately inspected for corrosion.

In its statement, Longhorn said that it was confident a safety and environmental study now being conducted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of Transportation's Office of Pipeline Safety "will incorporate the newest and most stringent standards for pipeline."

"I think he (Dewhurst) is going to be greatly relieved when the final (federal) approval with its mitigations (improvements) is issued because just about every concern he's expressed will be addressed in that document," added Longhorn spokesman Al Erwin.

Erwin also said that part of the pipeline may be replaced, but he didn't know how much.

If approved, the Longhorn pipeline would eventually compete with entrenched West Texas gasoline suppliers, including New Mexico-based Navajo Refining Co. Navajo is fighting the project and has helped to fund some of the citizen opposition to the pipeline.

Johnson sizzles with pair of 64s, takes four-shot advantage in PBO

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Temperatures soared, records fell and the course is way beyond defeat. It has been demolished.

And it's only day two at the Buy.com Permian Basin Open.

Friday was the kind of day which saw Guy Boros, son of legend Julius Boros, tie the PBO record with a career-best 10-under-par 62 and still trail at the end of the day by five strokes. One reason was low scores were the rule, not the exception at The Club at Mission Dorado.

Another reason, Kevin Johnson, one of four tied after the first round, continued to lead by example. He fired his second straight 64 for a two-round total of 16-under-par 128. It is a 36-hole record for the PBO and one shot off the all-time Buy.com Tour record.

"I don't think there are too many people in the world who have shot 16-under for two days," Johnson said.

Johnson did. He birdied eight holes, including five straight, starting at hole No. 11 (his second hole). The longest putt during that stretch was 15 feet.

The rest were just outside of gimme range. Johnson happens to lead the tournament in putting.

"I wasn't trying to shoot 64 again," said Johnson, winner of the 1999 South Carolina Classic. "I just got it rolling. You don't go out and play it safe out here. Guys are going to shoot low. You've got to have total offense. You've got to come out and fire at the flags."

Because if you don't, someone else will. That is the way it is this week at Mission with the lack of rough and wind.

Hiroshi Matsuo carded a career-best 64 although he must have

MIDLAND LEE FOOTBALL PREVIEW

Rebels try to keep rolling

Good news and bad news: Lee offense returns only one starter

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

OK, let's get this out of the way quickly. Midland Lee's Cedric Benson is playing football for the Midland Lee Rebels in 2000.

Football 2000

This is the sixth in a series of high school football previews. The remaining ones will run in this order:

Midland Lee	Saturday
Midland High	Sunday
Garden City	Monday
Stanton	Tuesday

That's the happening of District 4-5A football. There's just no getting around that. Benson, now bigger in name and size, will set a team and 4-5A record every time he records positive yardage in the 2000 football season. In just two years, this phenom has rewritten the league record book.

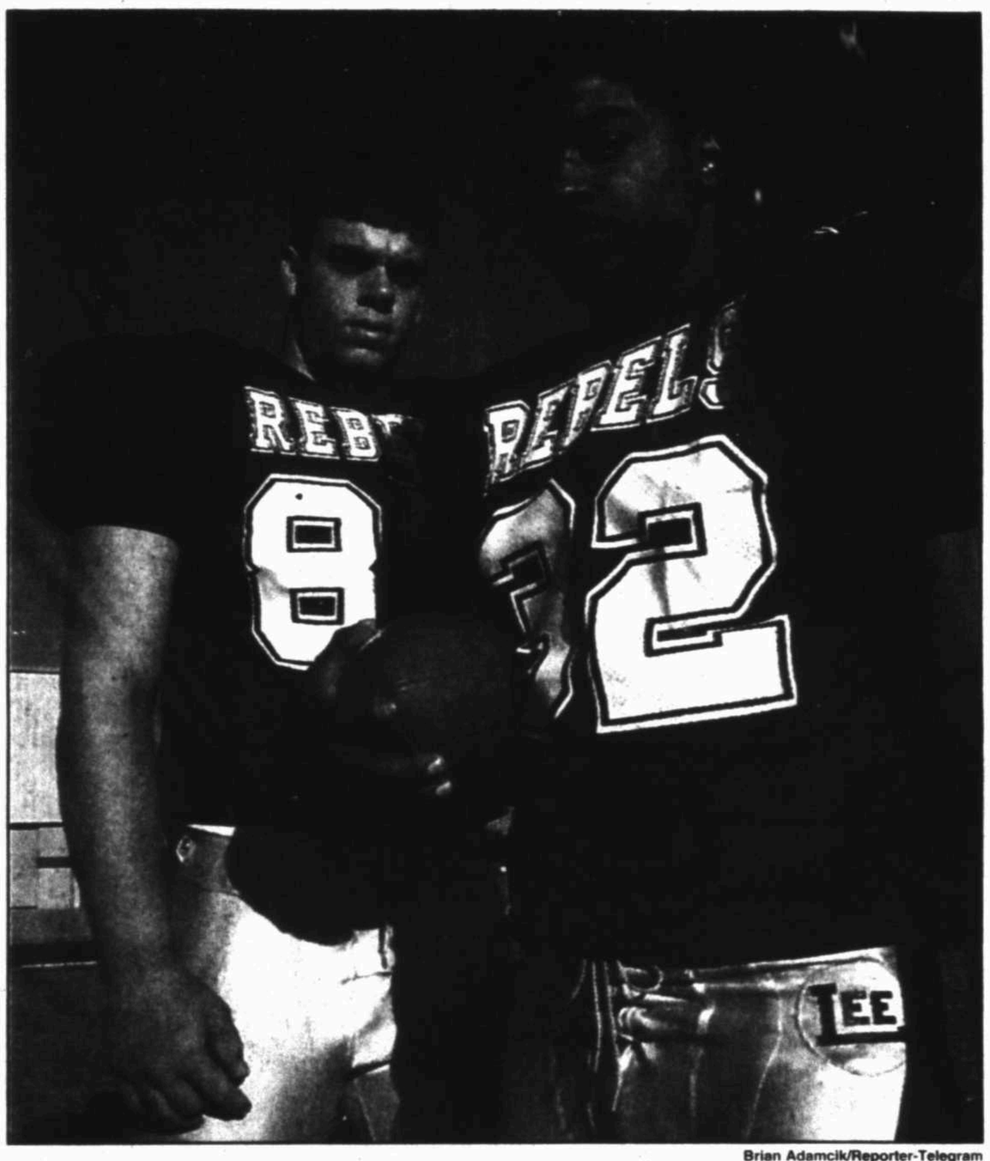
There is no question that Benson is the heart and soul of the two-time defending state champions. He is being hailed by some simply as the best high school running back in America.

His 3,526 yards rushing last season made him the first back in 4-5A history to ever crack the 3,000-yard mark. His 5,552 career rushing yards is unchartered waters. His four 300-yard games last season is the most ever by a Class 5A back in state history. And, of course, he's the cover boy of Texas Football Magazine.

Yes, that's just scratching the surface, but you've read, talked about and seen this story many times before. Now is the senior season of Cedric Benson and West Texas, the state and nation are watching. It's the last chance to see what will surely be West Texas lore in just a few short years.

"I don't have any individual goals," Benson says as he enters what may be the most anticipated season ever in the Permian Basin. "If the team does well, then all that other stuff will come with it. If we win games, I don't have to worry about statistics. Whatever the team does is how I will know if this is a good season or not."

And as good as Benson is, it's a solid fact that Lee didn't win back-to-back state championships with only one good player. They won't win this year by just putting Benson on the field. And no one knows that better than Lee head coach John Parchman.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Cedric Benson, right, Midland Lee's record-smashing running back, is the only starter that the Rebels have returning from last season's offense. But tight end Eric Winston, left, brings offensive experience, as well as an imposing presence at 6-foot-7.

"Cedric is absolutely the best back I've ever coached or seen," Parchman said. "I'm very glad that he isn't on the other side of the ball going against us. But our team has to realize that we can't win with just Cedric Benson. We have to do it as a team."

So, the real question at Midland Lee isn't about how good Benson will be, but how good are the players around him.

Benson is the only returning starter back on offense, so that is a major concern. Even with good talent, the experience level will be low heading into the season next Saturday in the HEB Classic in the San Antonio Alamodome against Victoria Memorial.

The huge 6-foot-7, junior Eric Winston got his feet wet a year ago on both offense and defense and should be ready to claim star status of his own this season and the next.

"Winston is a big time player," Parchman said.

Benson makes committment to Longhorns

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Cedric Benson, who is being hailed in some quarters as the top high school running back in America, may be wearing Burnt Orange next fall.

Willie Long, Benson's stepfather, told the Reporter-Telegram that Cedric has made a verbal commitment to play for the University of Texas Longhorns next fall.

■ Midland Christian, Trinity win openers/6B

"I came in and his mother (Jackqueline) just got off the phone and she said that he had commited to Texas," Long said. "I don't ask too many questions, and I said that it doesn't mean all that much. He could still change his mind. The phone has been ringing off the hook here today."

Benson could not be reached for comment since he was with the team traveling to El Paso for a scrimmage with El Paso Riverside on Friday.

Lee coach John Parchman said recently that he felt Benson would make a decision soon.

Benson told the Reporter-Telegram earlier this week that, "I'll have to make my grades first before I commit to anyone."

Parchman was quoted this week in the Arlington Morning News that, "His top three are Texas, Texas and Texas. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he committed soon. It's unofficial, but I think he's close."

Suzanne Haliburton of the Austin Statesman-American said Friday, "We're hearing through several Internet services that he committed to UT late Thursday night. UT will not comment on that fact since it's just an oral commitment, but then again, at this point, they won't even comment on injuries to the press. You won't hear anything out of them."

If Benson has verbally committed to the Longhorn program of coach Mack Brown, it really isn't binding. Players cannot sign until the first Wednesday of February. Players are not bound to any college program until they sign on the dotted line.

However, a verbal commitment usually stands the test of time. This can be viewed as a statement of intention more than a commitment.

If Brown has landed Benson, it will be the 13th

Winless preseason doesn't concern Cowboys' Campo

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys aren't concerned about their 0-5 preseason record, and not all that worried about the lack of touchdowns by the first-team offense.

While coach Dave Campo is disappointed by the failures to get into the end zone, he insists the revamped offense accomplished its main preseason goal: to be ready for the real season that begins Sept. 3.

"Not getting the ball in the end zone, that's the only critical part," Campo said Friday. "Other than that, we've done everything I'd like to see as far as guys doing things.

"The first unit moved the ball extremely well and has done well during the preseason. I'll be excited to get them together for four quarters and see what we really have there."

The starters — minus running back Emmitt Smith, who was held out of the entire preseason — were held without a touchdown in six series the last two games, including a 24-17 loss to St. Louis on Thursday night. But the first team scored on nine-of-15 preseason series, with four touchdowns and three field goals in the first nine.

"Other than stumbling blocks here and there, it's gone pretty well. The first-team offense has made first downs and moved down the field. I think we should be optimistic," center Mark Stepnoski said.

During the offseason, the Cowboys brought back former assistant Jack Reilly as coordinator and installed an updated version of the timing-based passing game that was used during three Super Bowl championships in first half of the 1990s. It is a variation of an offense in which quarterback Troy Aikman has had much success.

Dallas Cowboys head coach Dave Campo, right, shakes hands with St. Louis head coach Mark Martz, left, after their exhibition game Thursday night in Irving. The Rams won, 24-17, leaving the Cowboys with an 0-5 record in preseason games.

"For what we did and the daunting task ahead of us when we were installing it, you couldn't have asked for us to execute at the level we are executing now," said Aikman, who is in is 12th NFL season. "We put in a lot of stuff in a short period of time."

Not all of it has been shown.

"There are a lot of things we haven't put out there," said Joey Galloway, the speedy receiver the Cowboys acquired in the offseason. "The first team has moved the ball well, and we need to carry that into the regular season."

Raiders, Lobos ready to debut new offenses

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech expects the fine-tuning of its new pass-based offense to continue during its first game Saturday against New Mexico, when the Red Raiders debut a new game plan and a new head coach.

Of course, not everything will be new when the Red Raiders take the field — veteran running back Ricky Williams is returning to the gridiron after suffering a knee injury, which kept him out for most of last season.

Two years ago, Williams finished fourth in the nation in rushing with an average 143.82 yards per game. He rushed for 1,582 yards on 306 carries.

After getting injured in last year's opener, Tech coach Mike Leach says Williams is looking forward to running again during the Transamerica Hispanic College Fund Classic, which benefits Hispanic college students and gives both teams 12 games to play instead of the normal 11.

"The best teacher you get is the first three games," Leach said.

Tech had its seventh winning season (6-5, 5-3 Big 12) under former coach Spike Dykes last year, but didn't go to a bowl game.

Woods stays on hot streak at NEC

Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — The major championships are done for the year. Tiger Woods is not.

In a performance even more dominant than his record-setting victories in the majors, Woods tied the course record Friday with a 61 in the NEC Invitational and set a standard on the PGA Tour with an opening 36-hole score of 125.

Woods pumped his fist and smiled when his 6-foot par putt on the 18th at Firestone Country Club dropped in the hole, as if he were aware his 9-under 61 tied the course record set by Jose Maria Olazabal in 1990.

Only that wasn't the case.

"I didn't want to finish with a bogey for the second day in a row," he said. "I'm just trying to hit good, solid shots. I just want to get the 'W.'"

That shouldn't be too difficult. Woods had a seven-stroke lead over Phil Mickelson, the largest 36-hole margin of his career and the largest on the PGA Tour since Olazabal led by nine strokes at Firestone in what was then the World Series of Golf.

"He's been playing so well, it's not like we're in shock," said Jim Furyk, who played with Woods on Friday — or at least walked in the same fairway as Woods.

Mickelson finished one stroke behind Woods in the NEC Invitational last year. And while Woods appears invincible this week, Mickelson wasn't about to declare the tournament over.

"A little disappointing you would even bring that up," said Mickelson, who had a 66. "One of my thought processes was, 'Listen, if I can make some birdies, I can get in the final group.' I think there's some real benefits to that."

Justin Leonard had a 67 and was at 133, while Furyk had a 69 and was another stroke back.

The 37-man field is for Presidents Cup and U.S. Ryder Cup team members, plus the top 12 Europeans from the European tour money list. But once again, it's looking like Woods in one tournament, and everyone else in the B-flight.

PBO: Johnson leads

felt like he was standing in place. He holds sole possession of second place, four shots behind Johnson.

There is a tie for third at 11-under which includes Vaughn Taylor, Rocky Walcher and Dan Olsen. All three were tied were tied for the lead after the first round, but they also lost ground, shooting 69s.

Also tied for third were Boros, who shot the lowest round on the Buy.com Tour this year, and Mark Hensby, who fired a second-round 65. Hensby, in particular, is a golfer to watch. He is the tour's leading money winner in 2000. Brian Wilson is at 10-under and alone in eighth place.

Former Midland Lee standout John Adams moved up the leaderboard from a tie for 42nd to a tie for 20th. Adams is 7-under going into the weekend, thanks to a 67 on Friday. Although talking to him, it was a five-under round to forget.

"It was bad," Adams said. "If you can't birdie any of the par 5s, you are losing track."

You didn't need two decades worth of PGA experience to know birdies were at a premium.

"When you have guys with the amount of talent that they have out here and give them 12 sand wedges or pitching wedges for 18 holes, they will make eight or nine birdies," said Boros, who had his best-ever score in 470 rounds on the PGA and Buy.com Tours.

Boros made 10, thanks to approach shots which zeroed in on the flag. Of his 10 birdies, eight were within 10 feet.

"I haven't played well all year," said Boros, the winner of the 1996 Greater Vancouver Open. "I played with a bad attitude and didn't look forward to coming to the course all year."

An equipment change recently helped Boros' game and inspired a new outlook.

"I switched drivers and have a different attitude," Boros said. "I look forward to coming out in the morning. Now, I feel confidence overflowing to the rest of my game."

Matsuo is a slender, Buy.com rookie still seeking to make his mark and his first big check on tour. So far this week, that means hitting it deep, no matter the direction.

"I told my caddie that fairways are not a priority this week," Matsuo said. "In all honesty, I have hit five or six fairways in the last two days. The main priority is getting it down there and getting a short iron in my hand."

PBO NOTEBOOK: Bob Gaus' round of 65 included a low-nine of 29... Ahmad Bateman shot his 22nd straight round under-par... The cut was 4-under-par... Sixty-eight players made the cut and will be playing this weekend... Some of the notables missing the cut were Chad Campbell, Hank Kuehne, Gary Hallberg and Keith Fergus... The past champions turned in an up-and-down performance — Hugh Royer III is 7-under, Bruce Vaughan 5-under, Paul Gow 4-under, Michael Christie 1-over, and Stiles Mitchell even. Defending champion David Berganio withdrew Thursday... The course at Mission is playing to a stroke average of 70.992. The hardest hole is still the par-4, 14th (4.196 stroke average). The easiest is the par-5, 15th (4.637)... Friday there were 56 sub-70 rounds, 84 below par and 101 at par-or-below...

Area Notables: John Adams was not the only area player to make the cut. Andrews' native Derrick Pursley turned in a 69 for a two-round total of 137 (5-under). Two other former Andrews standouts — Chad Campbell and Brett Boynton — both missed the cut. Campbell missed by a stroke. Boynton was even after two rounds... Midland's Chris Carpenter, Green Tree Country Club's head professional, turned in a 74 Friday to fall to 2-over... Abilene's Jaxon Brigman, a former standout at Abilene Wylie, is minus-7 going into the weekend...

Stat Leaders: Todd Barranger and Hank Kuehne are tied for the tournament's lead in driving distance. Both averaged 346.8 yards per measured drive during the first two days... Kevin Johnson, the tournament leader is leading in putting, averaging 1.389 putts per hole (50 total). John Adams is tied for fourth. He has 52 putts over the two days...

Rebuilding effort for offensive line centers on Stovall

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

During Midland Lee's two state championship runs in football, the Rebels were blessed with a massive offensive line that could blow holes in doors. That line must be rebuilt in 2000.

Even though Lee did not hold spring training, the Lee coaching staff started one major experiment that promises to return some big dividends. Senior Brad Stovall was moved to center in the offensive line.

A year ago, Stovall kicked around the offensive line as a tackle and a guard, or just about anywhere he was needed. That earned him the tag as a "utility" player. When he was asked to step in at the center slot last spring, it was music to his ears.

"Coach P (Parchman) asked me last year if I would move to center," Stovall said. "I had never played center before, but I thought it was a great idea. It's been good, actually great for me."

Lee has always tried to put a good athlete at the center position.

"Brad is an athlete," says Lee line coach Randy Smith. "He could play a lot of positions for us. He was a fullback in the ninth grade and then he didn't even play when he was a sophomore."

Stovall adds, "I was a quarterback in the seventh grade and Cedric (Benson) was the tailback. I was handing the ball to him.

"I really thought I was going to be a baseball player, so I decided not to play when I was a sophomore. I still went to all the Lee football games and I was the most miserable fan of all.

"When you go from your ninth grade year to your junior year without playing, it's a big difference. Missing the year really hurt me and I spent all of last season trying to find a place to fit in.

"I've had trouble finding a place on this team and I think this (center) is it."

In fact, Stovall relishes the idea of being in the middle.

"When I was asked to play center, I really felt it was an honor because Lee has turned out so many great centers and offensive linemen over the past," he said. "That also means I have a lot of shoes to fill this season and that's an exciting challenge for me."

Parchman says of Stovall, "Brad is smaller (6-foot, 210 pounds) than what we have had at center in the past, but he is also quicker and he has a lot of athleticism. He can get out on a linebacker and we need that from our center."

Stovall has continued to play baseball. He started in right field for the playoff bound Rebels last spring.

Now, he is a starter on the football team — and not as miserable as he once was.

Trinity romps in 1st 11-man game

Staff Report

AMARILLO — The beginning of a new era for the Trinity football team and the return to the sidelines for a West Texas coaching legend couldn't have gone much smoother than it did Friday night.

Trinity, playing its first season of 11-man football after winning the TCAL six-man championship last season, acted like it had been doing so for years, as the Chargers ripped Amarillo San Jacinto 47-7 to open their first 11-man season. It was also the first victory in 15 seasons for new Trinity coach John Wilkins, the former Odessa Permian coach who took over the team this season in its transition to 11-man.

Trinity was dominant on both sides of the ball, outgaining San Jacinto (playing its first football game ever) by a 435-108 margin. Nathan Pirtle set the tone by scoring on first quarter runs of 13 and 2 yards on his way to gaining 160 yards on 11 carries and four touchdowns.

"The kids played really well," said Wilkins. "We had just one turnover. We had too many penalties (nine for 95 yards) so that was a concern."

Other than the penalties, the Chargers were as dominant as many of the Permian teams under Wilkins were. They took a 20-0 lead in the first quarter before San Jacinto scored on a deflected pass in the second quarter.

Trinity had a balanced attack, as quarterback Matt Midkiff completed 8-of-13 passes for a pair of scores.

"We moved the ball really well even though we broke down a couple of times," said Wilkins. "This was great for our first game at this level, but (San Jacinto) was also playing their first game here. I think that was to our advantage."

Trinity will return home next Friday at 7:30 p.m. to host more established Fort Davis. Wilkins thinks a stronger overall effort is needed to repeat the success of the debut against San Jacinto.

"We've got to get a better pass rush for one thing, and then eliminate the penalties or at least cut them down anyway," said Wilkins.

Mustangs blow out Garland in opener

Staff Report

GARLAND — The Midland Christian football team opened the season by trouncing Garland Christian 52-0 Friday night in the season opener for both teams.

Midland Christian dominated the game on both sides of the ball, racking up 523 yards (322 yards rushing and 201 yards passing). Josh Gunter led the way with 168 yards and three touchdowns.

Also, David Guerrero caught two touchdown passes, and Nick McAdams added one. Throwing touchdowns came from MCHS were Phillip Prude (two) and Jamie Beeghley (one). Thomas Minihan added the final score.

"We did a lot of good things," Midland Christian head football coach Greg McLendon said. "Josh Gunter showed some spark running the ball, and both quarterbacks (Phillip Prude and Jamie Beeghley) played well.

Defensively, MCHS held Garland Christian to nine yards. That included negative six yards on the ground.

Garrett Hellums had a blocked punt.

"Our defense also swarmed to the ball," McLendon said. "They (Garland Christian) never came close to scoring."

Next week, Midland Christian will travel to Wall.

"With the schedule coming up, we have no time to pat ourselves on the back," McLendon said. "We play a tough Wall team, and they don't care what we did this week."

LEE: Defense should be a strength

(From 1B)

"He should give us a big boost on the offensive line where we have to grow a lot this season."

Senior Brad Stovall (210) has been moved to center where he will try to make you forget his baseball numbers. He has never played this position before. Senior Jacob Gosch (250) and junior Lorenzo Orosco (207) step in at the guard slots while senior Heath Jones (235) and junior Chad Owens (210) take over at the tackle positions. It's easy to see that this line is much leaner in the weight department, but line coach Randy Smith is hoping that added quickness will pay dividends.

Roan Moreno, who started all 15 games last year in the offensive line, left for Midland Christian last spring.

Other than Benson, Lee's skill positions will also need retooling. Here lies the secret to Lee's success in 2000.

Junior Nick Hand, who led Lee's junior varsity to an undefeated record last year, is the best bet at quarterback, but sophomore Cody Grasnick and junior Fletcher Pendergrass are pushing for playing time. Pendergrass is a move-in from El Paso Coronado. He has a good arm, but is new to the Lee system.

Juniors Jacoby Kendrick and Freddie Jones are the fullback hopefuls after Allen Griffith was dismissed from the team last spring and Jorge Salgado elected not to play. Both sophomore Jacoby Hartley and junior Jody Walser will vie for time at wide receiver. The wingback slot will be manned by both junior Phillip Coleman and senior Matt Ratliff.

"We're still asking our tailback, quarterback and fullback to each bring 100 yards a game to the table," Parchman said. "We don't have a quarterback like Jon Rogers, but our quarterbacks can still produce 100 yards a game. They don't have to do it all with the pass. We could get 40 passing and 60 rushing."

Defense was supposed to be the weak link a year ago when Lee rolled to a perfect 15-0 season. This year, however, the defense should be stout.

Senior tackle Fred Thrweatt (276), senior linebacker Robert Rogers and senior cornerback J.R. Brown are all back. Senior David Dakil, who was at linebacker last year, is now at a defensive end slot. Senior Dwight Washington also is back at defensive end and has more endurance this season and should be on the field more.

Two hard hitting twins also appear ready to step in for a big season with linebacker Mark Gonzalez and safety Paul Gonzalez. Junior Matt Pillado (252) is a newcomer at tackle while senior Landon Little is at linebacker. Junior Ashley Jackson is the other safety.

Tim Norman, the younger brother of former Rebel and current Texas Tech standout Antwan Alexander, is set to stand in at the other cornerback position.

"We have a chance to be better on defense than we were a year ago," says Lee defensive coordinator Kelvin Ratliff. "We've got a little experience and some good aggressive kids."

The kicking game is also in good hands with Michael Wynn, who has already committed to Texas Christian University.

Lee has two games in pre-district play that will draw statewide attention. The game against Memorial is the first next week. You have to be invited to participate in the HEB Classic and that three-game weekend draws fans from across the state. The other is Sept. 22 when Lee travels to Monroe, La., for a game with Louisiana state power West Monroe.

"No one can say we back off of playing people," Parchman said. "We've always tried to bring our team along at a slow pace and be ready for district play, but with our schedule this year, that may not be an option. We may hit a bump or two in the road, but I still think we can become a good football team."

And any "bump in the road" would cost Lee its winning streak, which now stands at 23. It's that kind of season.

TECH: Leach era begins

(From 1B)

New Mexico isn't sure what to expect from Tech's new passing offense but expects the Red Raiders will be taken back by the opponent's new offensive look, as well.

The team boasts of a new quarterback, Jeremy Denson, who "can threaten as much with his legs as he can with his arms," fullback Ted Iacenda said.

The Lobos said they won't let Tech's new passing game throw them and plan to keep an eye on Williams and his running back counterpart Shaud Williams, as well as quarterback Kliff Kingsbury.

"We're planning that at least half the time they'll have three receivers with two running backs in the backfield because two of their most explosive guys in the open field are their two running backs, Shaud and Ricky Williams," New Mexico coach Rocky Long said. "Both of these guys are not very big, but they're real quick and fast."

Last year, the Lobos were 3-8 and 4-7. They hope their new offense and defense will help them overcome those losing records.

They plan to find opportunities to sack Tech's quarterback, which the Lobos admit might be easier said than done with the short passes they expect Kingsbury to throw.

"If we can make him hold the ball and if he cannot throw it on time, we will sack him," Long said.

However, Leach's offensive system has proven itself hard to slow.

Before joining Tech, Leach worked as Oklahoma's offensive coordinator. He transformed the Sooners from a running team into a pass-based team. Under his guidance, they improved from 101st offensively to 11th in the nation and averaged 427 total yard a game.

Long sees none of that as a threat his team can't overcome.

"They're probably a little more talented than we are, but the gap isn't so much that we can't win the game," he said.

COWBOYS: Power out

miss being a badly underthrown ball to Galloway that was intercepted at the goal line.

One more thing the Cowboys will have in the regular season opener at home against Philadelphia is Smith back on the field. The NFL's leading active career rusher was held out of preseason games, mostly as a precaution, because of a strained right calf that followed a big toe injury early in training camp.

Campo said Smith would be back on the practice field Saturday, as will fullback Robert Thomas and receiver Jason Tucker, who are also returning from injuries.

Notes: Players got the day off Friday while Campo and his staff evaluated film while preparing to make necessary roster moves. The Cowboys have to cut 17 players by Sunday to get to the league-mandated opening day roster of 53. ... Those evaluations were slowed Friday because of a one-hour power outage at the team's Valley Ranch facility. ... Campo said tight end David LaFleur, held out of the first four preseason games because of strained groin muscles, "came through with flying colors" after starting Thursday's game. ... The Cowboys will practice for just more than an hour Saturday, get Sunday off, have another short practice Monday and then get another break Tuesday.

BENSON: Running back decides — for now

verbal commitment for the Longhorns from the Class of 2000 and there hasn't been one UIL high school game played as of yet. The season opens next weekend.

Actually, Benson isn't the first Rebel to make a verbal commitment for next year. Kicker/punter Michael Wynn committed this summer to Texas Christian University.

Wynn told the Reporter-Telegram that he made an early commitment to get the recruiting process over quickly.

"I knew where I wanted to go, so that was the thing to do for me," Wynn said.

Midland High kicker/punter Justin Smith committed before the season a year ago to the University of Texas and is now with the Longhorns. Smith was the first verbal commitment to a university before the start of a season in Midland history. Benson would now be the third.

Benson, who has 5,550 yards rushing, owns just about every District 4-5A rushing mark after just two seasons.

The High School Xtra web site is reporting that Benson "made a commitment to play football for the Texas Longhorns."

On the web site, Eric Striever said, "Cedric has also made it clear that he wants to play baseball for UT. He was the starting centerfielder last year for the Midland Lee Rebels. Look for Cedric to see some playing time for Augie Garrido's UT baseball team."

Arkansas homers put halt to RockHounds win streak

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Home runs were the big difference Friday night, and they ended the seven-game winning streak for the Midland RockHounds.

With two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning, Andy Bevins singled, then Chris Haas followed with a home run off Midland reliever Tyler Yates, giving the Arkansas Travelers a 9-7 win over the 'Hounds, ending their longest winning streak of the season.

The homer was the fourth of the evening for the Travelers, who also got blasts from Luis Saturria, Cordell Farley and Eddie Pearson. The shot by Haas spoiled a valiant relief effort by Yates, who saved the game in the ninth inning.

Arkansas trailed 7-5 entering the bottom of the ninth against 'Hounds' reliever Leo Vasquez when Pearson led off the inning with a homer. Vasquez and Randy Niles couldn't retire anybody, and when Mike Mitchell lined a bases loaded single against 'Hounds reliever Ray Noriega, it tied the game at 7-7.

However, Yates came in and retired all three batters he faced on groundballs, forcing extra innings.

Midland got most of its offense in the fourth, when it posted six runs to take a 7-4 lead. Mike Lockwood's two-run double gave the 'Hounds a 6-4 lead, then Lockwood scored on a single by Oscar Salazar for what would be Midland's final run of the game.

Texas' Davis outduels Wells

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Doug Davis matched David Wells for eight scoreless innings and Rusty Greer's RBI single in the 11th gave the Texas Rangers a 1-0 win over the Toronto Blue Jays on Friday night.

Wells allowed eight hits and one walk in eight scoreless innings, but failed to become the first 19-game winner in the majors when the Blue Jays couldn't score off Davis.

The rookie allowed four hits and five walks in eight innings before turning it over to John Wetteland.

Bill Haselman led off the 11th with a single off Billy Koch (6-3). Pinch-runner Scarborough Green went to second when Koch hit Mike Lamb with a pitch while Lamb was attempting to bunt.

Koch then was unable to field Scott Sheldon's bunt, which went for a single to load the bases.

After Luis Alicea grounded into a force play at the plate, Greer hit line drive over the head of a drawn-in Shannon Stewart in left field to end Toronto's three-game winning streak.

Mike Venafro (2-1) pitched a scoreless 11th for the victory.

This was only the second game in the majors this season to be scoreless after nine innings. San Diego and Florida also failed to score after nine innings on Aug. 12, before the Padres won 2-1 in 10 innings.

Astros 3, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Chris Holt pitched 7 1-3 strong innings and Richard Hidalgo went 3-for-5 with a two-run single to lead the Houston Astros to a 3-1 win over the struggling Montreal Expos on Friday night.

Astros catcher Tony Eusebio went 2-for-4, singling in the second to extend his career-best hitting streak to 21 games.

Holt (6-12) allowed one run and seven hits to win his second straight decision. He struck out four and walked none. Houston has won nine of its last 11 games. Octavio Dotel pitched the ninth for his 10th save.

Montreal has lost four straight overall and nine straight at Olympic Stadium. The Expos have won just twice in their last 15 games and have lost 24 of 30.

Felipe Lira (3-4) allowed five hits and three runs — two earned — over five innings in his second start since joining the Expos' rotation.

Lira walked Roger Cedeno to lead off the third. Julio Lugo hit a grounder to third baseman Geoff Blum, whose throw was dropped by second baseman Jose Vidro for an error.

Jeff Bagwell singled to load the bases and Hidalgo followed with a two-run single to put Houston ahead 2-0.

'Radio for the soul'

Group heeds sign, starts station as a 'gift to Christ'

■ Open house is scheduled for Sunday at station KJBC, which is housed at 1903 S. Lamesa Road.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

A group of lay Catholics began operating a radio station last month in response to Pope John Paul II's call for greater efforts of evangelization during the Jubilee Year.

Station KJBC, 1150 on the AM dial, is a joint venture between La Promesa Foundation and Queen of Peace Radio.

An open house and tour of the facility, 1903 S. Lamesa Road, is planned for 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Len Oswald, who was involved in starting the station, said it is not associated with the Diocese of San Angelo, but is the work of a lay apostolate.

"When we started La Promesa Foundation over four years ago, we wanted to build a Marian Peace Center, but we had the vision of one day buying a radio station that would broadcast bilingual programming for the Catholic faithful and others seeking to know God," said Oswald.

"Our goal was to have 'radio for your soul' operating in the year 2000 as our gift to Christ."

Initially, the goal was little more than a vision and took a back seat to the building of the Marian Peace Center, which lends books, tapes and videos to those seeking greater knowledge of God.

Meanwhile, the group continued to pray for direction and waited for a sign. It came in the form of a first-time visitor to the Marian Center, a woman who talked at length of her dream of a radio station.

"Her vision and ours were the same and we knew it was time for us to begin looking for a station," said Oswald.

For the first few weeks, their search proved elusive because none of the available stations were within the boundary of what the group thought they could raise for the purchase. But they didn't give up. They felt the rightness of the timing, and they trusted the sign.

"And we remembered St. Maximilian Kolbe evangelized through the media," he said.

They prayed for his intercession and they fasted. The third day, they found a radio station, a house and storage buildings on some acreage in south Midland. They formed a fund-raising committee for "Project Millennium" and the public responded, not only with their donations but with offers of prayers for the work.

While the project was still in its infancy, La Promesa entered an agreement with Queen of Peace Radio of Jacksonville, Fla., to operate as a joint venture.

Oswald said the partnership with Queen of Peace was a huge blessing, as was the advice of the couple, Don and Shirley Kennedy, who sold them the radio station.

"They had so much experience and technical knowledge, and they helped us through places where there were countless pitfalls," he said. "We had two people come over for

The Rev. Partrick Payton, pastor of Stonegate Fellowship, gives his sermon from the stage of the cafeteria at Abell Junior High School. Stonegate was organized a year ago as a mission of First Baptist Church and meets at the school. After Sunday, Stonegate will be autonomous and will be searching for a permanent home.

Mission to separate from First Baptist

Stonegate Fellowship

This time last year, they were pioneers, stepping out in faith with a brand new pastor, new surroundings and no place to call home except for heaven and the haven of their hearts.

At an evening service on Aug. 14, 1999, members of First Baptist Church joined hands and encircled the core group of about 70 of their families — including some long-time members — who had agreed to start a new congregation.

At that ceremony, they told their stories, gave moving testimonials to their faith and spoke of their love for First Baptist and their confidence in God's guidance. Then they took their place inside the circle, where they were prayed over by the members who were staying behind. After that, as is customary for Christians, they all shared a meal.

On Sunday, the little group, which has now grown four-fold, will meet with First Baptist once again, this time to formalize their separation and their autonomy as a Baptist church. They'll take their last official vote as a part of the body of First Baptist, and when they leave, they'll leave as a separate entity.

Stonegate Fellowship still doesn't have a physical home — they hold Sunday services at Abell Junior High School's cafetorium — but they have established and proven themselves as a church. There are some 24 different ministry teams doing everything from moving three trailer-loads of church furnishings and equipment in and out of Abell every Sunday, to child care. The youth program has grown from 30 to more than 100 members.

Stonegate Fellowship may be a new listing in the telephone books, but it has been long awaited and worked for by members of First Baptist.

Stonegate pastor, the Rev. Patrick Payton, said the congregation of First Baptist had wanted to start a mission in the 1980s, but postponed the idea because of the economy.

"Then in the 1990s, the economy wasn't all that much better, so they thought about it, and decided to go ahead with it anyway," he said.

Meanwhile, Payton, who was living in Oklahoma at the time, was struggling with in indescribable need to make some life changes.

"I had gone into the restaurant brokerage business right out of college and I was really doing very well, but I just felt a call to change directions. I left the business and went to Southern Seminary in Louisville, Ky."

He had a wife, Cindy, and two children, Chase and Madison. A third child, Chapman, was born while he was in seminary. He thinks his move to Midland was God-directed.

"I had a close friend who had moved to Midland about the same time I took off for Louisville. Just about the time I was finishing seminary, he called and said he had been put on the pulpit-search committee for this new church in Midland, and would I be interested in coming to serve.

"All I'd ever heard about Midland was West Texas football. I came out here for three visits, and on Feb. 14, 1999, they called."

Payton, 33, said that unlike many pastors in start-up missions, he didn't have to go around knocking on doors to build a congregation.

"Long before I arrived on the scene, there were people working to make this happen. They had traveled to other places to find out what it would take to start a church, and had done demographic work. And the 70 families making up the core congregation were already in place when I came on board in March of 1999.

"We spent about 13 weeks getting to know each other, and Aug. 15, 1999, we had our first service with a little over 200 people. This is the largest intentional start-up in the history of Texas Baptists," Payton said.

"Normally, there will be 10 to 15 people, and they just go out and knock on doors. We were warned that probably half the people who came originally would have left by now, but this hasn't happened at Stonegate. Our core group has stayed with us, and (two Sundays ago), we had more than 800 people in attendance. Many of them are people who had quit going to church at all before we came into the area."

Payton said he is often asked whether Stonegate is traditional or contemporary, a question he finds hard to answer.

"We're both. David McReynolds, our music minister, has done a wonderful job of blending both traditional and contemporary music, and we don't do things quite that different in the service, although certainly we don't have a pipe organ.

"We try to incorporate a lot of things that are relevant to what people are going through today.

"We did a sermon series recently called, 'This

Small congregation remains loyal to slave-founded church

AZLE — Inside tiny Wesley Chapel Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, a choir of six children boldly sings: "Watch ye, therefore, you know not the day that the Lord will call your soul away."

From the pulpit, the Rev. T.M. Berry listens carefully to the melodic voices, most of which belong to his grandchildren. His daughter, Sheryl Kimble, almost rocks the church with her forceful piano playing.

Never mind that only 10 people are in the congregation this scorching summer day. That's regular attendance at Wesley Chapel, the only African-American church in Azle, with only about 20 members on its rolls. So small is the congregation, it gathers only twice a month, the first and third Sundays.

Never mind the storied megachurches with tens of thousands of members, state-of-the-art audiovisual equipment and multimillion-dollar budgets. Members of the small white brick church in a grove of trees are fiercely loyal, faithful and dedicated.

"I love my church," said 73-year-old Margaret Crump of Azle, the oldest member of the nearly 100-year-old church. "It ain't but a few of us, but I come on anyway."

On this particular Sunday, half the worshippers at the 11 a.m. service are guests. Most of the members are in their 40s or older.

With so few members, congregants have to double up on duties or bear assignments alone.

On the recent Sunday, Berry doubles as Sunday school teacher, the only one needed for the class of four. During church, a single usher greets worshippers at the door, and at the appointed time, Ms. Crump quietly rises to pass the offering plate.

From its beginning as a worship place for ex-slaves, Wesley Chapel has been small but has served as the spiritual center for the few blacks who live in and around Azle.

Ex-slaves are responsible for founding the entire denomination. In 1870, 41 delegates, angry over the interracial Methodist Episcopal Church's refusal to condemn slavery, created a separate denomination, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. It became Christian Methodist Episcopal Church in 1966.

In October, Wesley Chapel will celebrate its 100th anniversary. The church began in a brush arbor across the street from its current location and has twice served as a school. This is the second church at the present site.

Glenda Smith, who has lived in Azle all of her life and attended Wesley Chapel during that time, said her grandparents helped found the church. Ms. Crump is her aunt.

The coming anniversary helps her to remember the struggles of those who went before her.

Loving thy neighbor involves showing kindnesses to strangers

Williams

In the Dark Ages of the 1950s, I started school with a Roi-Tan cigar box filled with crayons, new pencils, scissors, a pink eraser, and gooey white paste that smelled good enough to eat. And paper.

Last week, I forked over around $150 for school supplies for two children. The lists were so complicated, I almost couldn't read them (a graphing calculator? What is that? Why wouldn't a regular old calculator do?)

Grumbling to myself, I thought — did Socrates need all this stuff?

How complicated can life get?

On vacation this summer, I re-read a book that had shaped my teen years. "Through the Valley of the Kwai" is the story of Ernest Gordon's experience in a Japanese death camp and his conversion to Christianity. In a jungle where disease, starvation, torture, and hopelessness reigned, men welcomed death as the only means of escape.

The book had not lost its power. Why? If you can stand to read about the dysentery, the charnal house, the open sores, the skeletal bodies, and the law-of-the-jungle greed as men fought over their daily handful of rice, you will get to the part where the Holy Spirit enters this abysmal hole on earth. Just when you think hope cannot live in such a place, the life of the camp is transformed as men who accepted Jesus died for each other, washed each others' wounds, learned to make anesthetics from plants, started a 40-piece orchestra, a library, a university — and a church.

At the end, the author makes a fascinating point. After the war, these men found an even greater challenge than in the death camp. The return to their British culture "meant flight from God and descent into the hell of loneliness and despair." Christian love became lost in red tape, sedatives, meaningless cocktail parties, advertising and dry souls.

In the death camps, Christ's love was stark, the issues black and white. The post-war world had become like a "find the hidden picture" page: Christian love is embedded in a mass of lines delineating the world's values in the broader, more readily apparent picture.

We, of course, have inherited that world and convoluted it even further. Anyone who has dealt with an insurance dispute, gotten caught in any huge city's smoggy traffic, or interfaced with a government agency (trust me, I used to work in one!) understands that clarity of Christian love has joined the butterfly of happiness in its elusiveness.

So what to do? I can change little about the externals of life in America, even in my tiny corner. Therefore, simplicity must be an inside job. When I'm tangled in red tape, I can still pray. Loving our neighbor does not involve the life-and-death drama of a prison camp, but rather showing small kindnesses to other harried sojourners — surly clerks, stonewalling colleagues, angry drivers, or tedious committee members.

Christ's love hasn't changed, nor His commandment for us to love each other. Our prayer is for a different kind of survival, a different kind of enemy.

RADIO: Station hopes to broadcast all day an entire week, staying at the station until almost midnight, to help us get started. Our first day in operation was July 19."

The station operates approximately 12 hours a day, from sunrise to sunset. The programming includes both music and talk formats, with segments in Spanish and English. Some days there is up to three hours of live call-in programming for interaction with featured speakers.

Oswald said the group hopes to be broadcasting 24 hours a day at full power within the coming year.

"We'll have to send an engineering study to the FCC to get an engineering license first, which will take about four months."

He said program offerings will vary in order to appeal to a wide spectrum of listeners, with particular programs timed to reach the age group most likely to be tuning in.

So far, response has been very encouraging, not just from the Catholic faithful, but from listeners of all religious persuasions who are impressed with the positive quality of the content, Oswald said.

This has pleased the former owners, he said.

"The station will soon be celebrating its 50th year in operation, and the Kennedys wanted its continuation to contribute in a positive way. We felt we were led to them by the Lord, and they have said they felt the same way."

MISSION: Stonegate has made offer to buy land to build new church

ain't the Brady Bunch,' about blended families. Over 50 percent of our congregation is made up of blended families, so we needed something relevant to their lives and needs.

"We're getting ready to do a series on the seven habits of ineffective homes, just touching on where people are.

"I would stop short of saying we're contemporary, but I wouldn't call us traditional."

Jane Thomas, a First Baptist core member who now attends Stonegate with her husband, Bill, agrees that this church does not easily fit a category.

"There are tons of people who are unchurched who are real comfortable in a church setting and we're making an effort to create a style that is comfortable."

Ms. Thomas, who leads youth Bible studies, and her husband, who leads a disciple study, said the classes are geared to the needs and backgrounds of the participants, and that the response has been huge.

"It's amazing to me how we had a Bible study that grew to one every day of the week, and were able to do it all without having to order curricula.

"That's the beauty of not being strapped into a structure."

Ms. Thomas said that when the call went out from First Baptist, she and her husband quickly responded, in part because they had previous experience with new church start-ups.

"We lived in Midland from 1982 to 1986, and went to First Baptist, then went to Corpus Christi and joined First Baptist there, where they started a new church in the area where we lived, and we volunteered to go there.

"We learned a lot about starting churches with that experience, and then when we moved back here, we hoped we'd have the same opportunity. We went to First Baptist a year, and then started (Stonegate). We didn't have to struggle at all with our decision. I guess we're just pioneers at heart."

Stonegate presently maintains offices in a house on Cuthbert Avenue that is owned by First Baptist. Payton said the congregation plans to move closer to the area around Abell Junior High by October.

"We've put down an offer for some land out there to build a church on, and we'll know by September whether we'll get it or not. We need to be in the area where we serve.

"We're also planning to start having two Sunday morning services by October. We're currently just too crowded at our 9:45 services to be comfortable, often with standing room only."

CONGREGATION: Pastor's assignment has become family affair

(From 1C)

they wore to keep the church doors open," Ms. Smith said. "My mother told me that when you go to church, go prepared. You never know when you're going to be on program. My mom was president of the Mission Society up until the day she died."

Ms. Smith reminisced about a time when "dinner on the grounds" meant tables of food outside, underneath the trees — not in the church cafeteria, as it is today.

Ms. Crump said she also remembers a simpler time in Azle.

"There was a time when you had to yell across the way to your neighbor," she said.

Azle once had two predominantly black churches, Wesley Chapel and a Baptist church, which has since folded.

With so few African-Americans around Azle, young people move to find more diverse communities, Ms. Smith said. Of the 9,750 Azle residents, an estimated 0.8 percent are African-American.

"When kids grew up and began to see we didn't have things like the other churches, some began to move to Fort Worth," Smith said.

Ms. Crump said she, too, has spent her life living between Fort Worth and Azle.

"I love my church," she said. "It's the only church I've ever belonged to. Just like when a child leaves his parents, they always come back."

Ms. Crump said she knew Berry long before he was appointed pastor 10 years ago.

Berry was assigned to Azle at a life stage when many ministers are enjoying retirement.

A man with graying hair and glasses, Berry wears a simple black suit with a gold lapel pin that reads "Try God." When greeting members and guests between services, he often hugs them.

Berry's assignment to Wesley has become a family affair.

"I like to come out here to praise the Lord," said his 13-year-old granddaughter, Cnae Gray of Fort Worth. "I like the openness and I like to support my grandpa."

However, even those who are not related to Berry say Wesley Chapel members feel like family.

A few, such as Jearlene Releford of Fort Worth, said they have regular churches but like to visit the tiny Azle church.

"I feel like it's a family-oriented environment," said Ms. Releford, who has visited Wesley Chapel for about 20 years. "You can adjust better than going to a church where the minister doesn't even know your name."

The church rolls contain only the names of African-Americans, but white Azle residents also visit.

Economists say Mexican president-elect's outlook too rosy

DALLAS (AP) — Mexico's incoming president Vincente Fox says his country's workers can achieve income parity with American workers, setting the stage for an open border between the two countries, but economists on both sides of the border are skeptical.

Lucinda Vargas, a Federal Reserve senior economist in El Paso, Texas, said, "I do believe Mexico is going to keep advancing in income and wages, but I don't think (income parity) is achievable in 10 years."

Economists cite many factors that could hinder growth in Mexico, including a low savings rate, weak laws on enforcing contracts and debt agreements, and the inability of many small and medium-size businesses to borrow from banks. But the first reason they cite is education.

"Mexico has to focus a lot on education to make its labor that much more qualified," Vargas said, who studies the Mexican economy. But especially during Mexico's recession, of the mid-1990s, she said, many poor families sent their children to work instead of school.

Without a more educated work force, Mexico cannot hope to keep up with American productivity, economists say.

"We need to invest substantial amounts of money and time in human capital," said Raul Feliz, head of macroeconomic studies at the Center for Economic Teaching and Research in Mexico City.

With more attention on education and training, Feliz said, Mexicans could probably achieve income levels of typical U.S. blue collar workers "in 10 to 25 years," but won't approach the incomes of American information-technology workers.

Mexico's economy has grown steadily since the country emerged from a currency crisis and recession in the mid-1990s. Since 1997, its industrial production has grown 20 percent while the larger industrial sectors of Brazil and Argentina have been nearly flat.

Mexico ranks 71st in per capita income, according to 1999 World Bank figures, at about $4,400 annually in 1999, compared to $30,600 in the United States.

Also, 15 percent of the country's population lived on less than $1 a day between 1990 and 1996, according to the UNICEF report, "The State of the World's Children 2000." And about 30 percent of Mexico's population lived in poverty in 1997, according to the United Nations Development Program report, "Overcoming Human Poverty: UNDP Poverty Report 2000."

'We all know Mexican labor is absolutely critical to the functioning of both the Texas and U.S. economy. We desperately need the labor. We need to rethink our immigration policy . . . but I don't know that I would call it an open border.'

— Bernard Weinstein, a University of North Texas economist

Fox has a long way to go to convince U.S. labor unions and politicians to adopt his vision of open borders and a European Union-type compact among the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Republican presidential candidate Gov. George W. Bush said he believes efforts to stop illegal immigrants from Mexico should be strengthened. In April, the House voted for a bill that would allow the deployment of U.S. troops to guard the border.

Fox hopes that raising Mexican wages and income to U.S. levels would ease political and public opposition in the United States to an open border.

Feliz, the Mexico City economist, said Fox knows that American politicians won't go along with an open border or North American income redistribution but raised the issue to appease liberal supporters.

Bernard Weinstein, a University of North Texas economist, agreed with Fox that the United States should make it easier for Mexicans to work in this country. Because of the aging of the U.S. population, labor will become a scarce resource and the country will rely on immigrants to keep the economy rolling, he said.

"We all know Mexican labor is absolutely critical to the functioning of both the Texas and U.S. economy," Weinstein said. "We desperately need the labor. We need to rethink our immigration policy . . . but I don't know that I would call it an open border."

Even with greater trade and cooperation among the three North American countries, Weinstein said it would take a long time for Mexico to narrow its income gap with the United States.

"Even within the United States, you still have disparities of 20 to 30 percent if you compare Connecticut and Mississippi," he said. "It's taken us 70 years to narrow the regional income disparity. With Mexico and the United States, it's not going to happen quickly."

Labor board files complaint on behalf of Wal-Mart union

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — The general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board has filed a complaint on behalf of the United Food and Commercial Workers union with Wal-Mart Stores Inc. for refusing to begin negotiations with meat department workers at an East Texas store.

A federal court in New Orleans earlier this month granted final certification to the Jacksonville Wal-Mart workers, but Wal-Mart missed an Aug. 18 deadline to respond to a union request to begin negotiations, said UFCW officials.

The union filed a complaint with the NLRB accusing Wal-Mart of being in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

Wal-Mart has tried every step of the way to prevent employees from organizing, said Greg Denier, director of communications for the UFCW in Washington.

"Wal-Mart is hoping by all of these stalling tactics that the local employees will get tired of fighting, or that they will move on to other jobs, and that eventually there will be no one left to establish a union," Denier said.

In February, the Jacksonville meat cutters became the first Wal-Mart workers to vote for union representation. Wal-Mart later announced it would end meat-cutting operations in Jacksonville, and nearly 180 other stores in six states, and sell only prepackaged meat at those stores. The company said the move was unrelated to the union votes.

Wal-Mart spokeswoman Jessica Moser said the union improperly influenced the outcome by taking a worker to a strip bar and giving him cash and alcohol.

She told the Jacksonville Daily Progress that Wal-Mart "will exhaust all of our legal options."

"Wal-Mart is pro-associate. We are trying to learn from our mistakes and take care of our employees so they will not feel the need to seek third-party representation."

Jacksonville meat department employee Maurice Miller said union members have several issues to bring to the bargaining table, including low wages and insurance costs, along with restoring the store's butcher department.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 26, 2000:
You will have many opportunities dropped on you this year. You know what you want, and you know how to proceed to make it real. You are unusually attractive and draw many toward you. You have choices, so be open to them. Professionally, you gain as long as you stay focused on the long term. Don't get frustrated by lots of work. If you are single, romance knocks on your door. A friendship could become a lot more. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from time away together. Plan frequent romantic weekend getaways. LEO reads you cold.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Relax at home. You clear an important project and feel very good about yourself. A loved one chips in and makes your day even mellower. Once you're free of a responsibility, you kick up your heels like a kid. Romance blooms. Tonight: Naughty and nice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Speak your mind and share your feelings. Don't always assume that another knows everything about your feelings. Sharing improves the bonding that exists. Browse a flea market or favorite store. Talk and relax with a loved one or a friend. Tonight: Throw a party.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Finances could stop you from doing what you want, but they don't have to. Express your concerns and allow others to pitch in with ideas. Others like being a bigger part of your life. Visit with friends and get together with others later in the day. Tonight: Chat the night away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Your smile warms others. Try to bring a sister or brother out of the doldrums. You don't need to do much to make others happy. Treat another to a late lunch or dinner. Don't limit yourself by negative thinking. Stay optimistic. Tonight: Have dinner out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Take your time getting started. You deserve a day off from the hectic pace. Lounge and enjoy yourself. Another wants to treat you to a good time. Accept the gesture. You draw much more of what you want when you relax and don't push. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Aim for what you want. Friends seek you out, and your popularity soars. Join friends early on for a game of golf or tennis. As the day progresses, you will want time with a special friend. Take a walk or drive. Talks thrive in a different atmosphere. Tonight: Do only what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Finish off any work and clear out responsibilities. Once you manage to do what you must, take time with a loved one or special friend. Remember, you don't have to make everyone else happy at the cost of depriving yourself. Gather with friends and enjoy life's positives. Tonight: Make yourself happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Take off for an outing at the beach or some other favorite summer resort. You might not be sure of a loved one's or friend's reaction. Yet there is no other way than expressing yourself. Others prove to be far more responsive than you had anticipated. Tonight: A must show.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ One-on-one relating opens doors and puts a smile on your face as well as another's. Taking time with a loved one encourages a better flow. Take off together in the later afternoon. You might want to explore a new area or go to a fair. Tonight: Keep exploring!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Friends surround you with their own sets of plans. They all want you! Make decisions that you will enjoy, rather than pleasing others. Downtime with a loved one recharges your relationship. Make time to be with a loved one or a dear friend. Tonight: You'll need your air conditioning.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Finish up an errand or two. You will relax better if you clear out something you feel you must do. Allow your sense of humor to come out with others. A child benefits from your insight. Accept an invitation for the late afternoon. Tonight: Let the party begin.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Allow your playful side to emerge with others. You bring out the spring in their step. Share a favorite pastime or hobby. A loved one responds to your overtures and thoughtfulness. Listen to a parent who might be morose or out of sorts. Tonight: Let others do for you, for a change.

Wayans' wife files for divorce

LOS ANGELES — The wife of entertainer Damon Wayans filed for divorce to end the couple's 16-year marriage.

The Superior Court petition filed Thursday by Lisa Wayans cited irreconcilable differences as the reason for the split and said the couple have lived apart since May 21. She lives in the couple's Beverly Hills home, and he lives in Santa Monica.

She is seeking spousal support and joint custody of their four children: Damon Jr., 16, Michael, 15, Cara Mia, 13, and Kyla, 9.

Wayans' movie credits include "Beverly Hills Cop," "Roxanne," "Mo' Money," "Colors" and "Blank Man."

He also appeared on "Saturday Night Live" and the TV comedy "In Living Color," which brother Keenen Ivory Wayans created.

LOS ANGELES — The folks who hand out Academy Awards want first crack at buying Judy Garland's honorary Oscar, which is now in the hands of a memorabilia dealer.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, vigilant in protecting the Oscar, filed a lawsuit Thursday against Marcia Tysseling.

"The award is tarnished — and the incentive to achieve the academy's purpose is diminished — by distribution of the statuette through commercial efforts rather than in recognition of creative effort," the lawsuit said.

The lawsuit claims Tysseling isn't honoring a 1958 agreement signed by Garland that states the academy must first be given the chance to buy back the Oscar for $10. The honorary Oscar was given to Garland in 1940.

Tysseling supposedly got the Oscar from Garland's ex-husband, Michael Sidney Luft, who the academy said consigned it to Star Wares, which Tysseling owns.

The academy claims that Garland notified the organization in 1958 that the original Oscar given 18 years earlier was missing and she wanted a new one. She was given a replacement and signed the $10 buyback agreement.

Garland eventually found the original Oscar. Luft got the original and duplicate when Garland died.

A telephone message left Friday for Tysseling at Star Wares wasn't immediately returned.

GENEVA — Madonna is fighting for the Internet domain name madonna.com.

The singer has lodged a complaint with the United Nations, asking its World Intellectual Property Organization to order the handover of the site, owned by New Jersey entrepreneur Dan Parisi.

Anyone can register a domain name for a few dollars, which has led cybersquatters to file for famous names in order to make a fast buck — in some cases millions.

The WIPO system allows those who think they have the right to a domain to get it back without having to fight a costly legal battle.

Parisi previously used the Web site for pornographic material but has now removed it. He claims Madonna, whose full name is Madonna Ciccone, has no more right to the domain name than anyone else with the same name.

"We do not believe that because Ms. Ciccone named her act after the Virgin Mary that gives her the right to stop any other party from using the word 'madonna' as a title of their Web site," he said.

Madonna's publicist, Liz Rosenberg, said she thought the singer should fight for the domain name.

"She happens to be the most famous Madonna in the world, so I think she certainly has every right to try to protect a Web site called Madonna," she said.

The WIPO arbitrator is due to rule on the dispute in mid-September.

NEW YORK — Mary Tyler Moore is on a mission to protect the city's carriage horses, a popular tourist attraction.

The actress has teamed up with the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to drum up support for proposed legislation they say would protect the horses.

"Forget your visions of romance and nostalgia," said ASPCA President Larry Hawk, who was joined Thursday by Moore on the steps of City Hall. "Current city law allows these animals to work and live in deplorable conditions."

Moore, who keeps nine horses of her own on a farm in upstate New York, said she hadn't ridden a city horse-drawn carriage since a scene she did years ago with Dudley Moore in the movie "Six Weeks."

"If I had known what these horses were going through, I would have balked. I would not have participated in that," she said.

Sophisticated fun:

2000 MERCURY COUGAR COUPE

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Forget everything you ever knew about the Mercury Cougar. As one of the first vehicles to apply the automaker's advanced New Edge design, the Mercury also benefits from an international effort, evident throughout the car. The four-seat, front-wheel-drive sports coupe was the first to signal the new course for the Mercury brand – unique cars and trucks that appeal to younger customers who want to set trends and stand out in a crowd.

Built by AutoAlliance International, a joint venture between Ford and Mazda in Flat Rock, Mich., the new coupe is derived from the underpinnings of the Ford Contour/Mercury Mystique. If you think the Cougar is no more than warmed over soup, guess again. The sheetmetal is all new, with powertrain and suspension components revised and retuned for optimal performance. Consumers have a choice of the Zetec 2.0L four-cylinder or the Duratec 2.5L six-cylinder engines with either the five-speed MTX75 manual or four-speed CD4E automatic transaxles.

On the road, the four-cylinder Mercury delivers so much power, you may have to stop and make sure you aren't driving the six-cylinder model instead. This combination has what it takes to tackle any type of pavement you crave – from midwestern Interstates to twisty mountain ribbons.

The suspension works well with the chassis to deliver a controlled ride. The front suspension consists of an independent strut type front-drive with strut-mounted coil springs, lower control A-arm and cast steering knuckle connected to a rubber-mounted sub-frame.

The rear suspension is a Quadralink strut with coil spring on shock strut, mounted to a rigid mounted subframe with an anti-roll bar. Four nitrogen gas-pressurized hydraulic shocks at each wheel work with the P205/60R15 tires to keep the Mercury coupe firmly on the road.

Inside the cabin, you can be persuaded to believe you are sitting in a precision German automobile. Displays and controls are excellent and easy to read and operate. The most impressive thing about the new Cougar is that although it looks like a coupe, it is actually a hatchback. Its body integrity is so solid, you will never know that until it is time to open the rear hatch.

The 50/50 split rear seat adds to the already impressive cargo area.

By the numbers

Engine performance statistics are as follow: 2.0L Zectec I4 – 125 hp at 5,500 rpm and 130 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm; 2.5L Duratec V-6 – 170 hp at 6,250 rpm and 165 lb/ft of torque at 4,250 rpm. EPA fuel economy numbers range from 24 city/34 highway for the four-cylinder to 20 city/28 highway for the 2.5L V-6. Both engines use regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easy to reach.

Standard safety/security equipment for the Cougar includes: dual front airbags, steel alloy door beams, and Securilock – a passive anti-theft system. Six-cylinder models add four-wheel disc brakes. Optional safety equipment includes: four-wheel anti-lock brakes, $500, side impact airbags, $375, and traction control $235, (V6 models only).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Mercury Cougar begins at $16,540 for the four-cylinder and $17,040 for the six-cylinder models. Destination charge adds $450. Dealers report decent inventories of the Mercury coupe.

2000 HYUNDAI ACCENT SUBCOMPACT

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Introduced in 1995 as the replacement for the Excel, the Hyundai Accent has carved out a place in the brutally competitive subcompact market. Low priced and equipped with features found in more expensive offerings, Accent sheetmetal was freshened for the 1998 model year and is all-new for 2000.

The wheelbase has been extended 1.6 inches to 96.1 inches and width increased by nearly 2 inches to 65.7 inches. These changes result in additional headroom, hip room, and legroom for driver and passengers.

Available in three door hatchback and sedan body styles, the Accent is available in L, GS (hatchback) and GL trim levels (sedan). A 1.5L SOHC 12-valve four-cylinder engine is the only powerplant offered. Consumers can choose between the standard five-speed manual gearbox or electronically controlled four-speed automatic.

One of the Accent's major buying considerations is the automaker's "Hyundai Advantage" warranty. This is comprehensive protection, with limited bumper-to-bumper coverage for five years/60,000 miles, 24-hour roadside assistance, limited powertrain coverage for 10 years/100,000 miles and best of all, no deductible. No wonder the Accent appeals to people on a tight budget who want a brand new car with up to date safety features and generous warranty coverage. Built in South Korea, I found high quality fit and finish throughout the vehicle.

The use of supercomputers have resulted in Accent's basic structure becoming stronger and more rigid. The reinforced A and B pillars are now stiffer and stronger for additional protection. Foam has been injected into the pillars to add additional protection and reduce noise and vibrations. Similar improvements have been made to the cowl cross bar, side still, center panel and roof.

On the road, the standard five-speed manual delivers the most performance out of the engine. Engaging the air conditioning does not worsen the vehicle's drivability. The small Hyundai is shod with 175/70R13 tires with the upside being better traction in mud, rain and snow. The rear wiper/washer is a nice touch on the GS hatchback.

Inside the cabin, attractive interior materials and a well thought out array of displays and controls await. Seating is comfortable front and rear. Even the rear cargo area is pleasantly finished, with lots of cargo space for such a small car.
