Nation Pays Homage of Grief To Dead King Ferdinand

LAST RITE FOR RUMANIAN KING HELD SUNDAY

Thousands Shed Tears At Bier of Dead Monarch

TINY KING PRESENT

Five-Year-Old Successor to Throne Is Puzzled by Ceremony

CURTEA DE ARGES, Rumania, July 24. (AP) — King Ferdinand, founder of new Rumania, was laid at rest today alongside his great uncle, King Carol, the first builder of old Rumania, while the nation poured out its sorrow, love and devotion.

After an impressively solemn and moving orthodox religious service over the body of the dead monarch in the royal chapel adjoining Cotrocani palace on the outskirts of Bucharest, in which William S. Culbertson, United States minister to Rumania, and special ambassadors participated, the body was borne by a special train over the 150-mile route to this little mediaeval town, where the bodies of Rumania's ancient sovereigns are interred.

Burial on Sunday

The government's decision to bury King Ferdinand on Sunday enabled hundreds of thousands of peasants and toilers to forsake their wonted tasks and witness the funeral. As the cortege passed through the picturesque countryside, peasants dressed in pure white pajama-linke garb and bare feet, prostrated themselves on the ground and repeatedly made the sign of the cross, while others emptied flasks of holy water on the funeral train. Everywhere there were emblems of mourning.

Only once before had Aumania witnessed such a magnificently solemn event—that was when King Ferdinand and Queen Marie were crowned at Alba Julia five years ago. The state, the church, the army, and the people combined to give King Ferdinand a fitting funeral not only because they felt he was a great and wise monarch, but also because he was a good, kind, honest man. Touching tributes to his unselfishness, modest and self-effacing character were expressed everywhere.

Queen Reveres Him

"He was a saint upon earth," said Queen Marie to the correspondent of the Associated Press, who had known both sovereigns fifteen years. "I would gladly have given my own life if he could have been spared, for after all, the country needs a king more than a queen. But it is a great satisfaction to know that he died only after all the useful ends of his life had been fulfilled and he achieved the great goal of his life—unification and pacification of Rumanians under one flag."

Asked if the state or family intended to erect a monument to King Ferdinand, Queen Marie replied: "His greatest monument is greater Rumania and the affection of his people. They will endure when every marble memorial crumbles.

Marie Fights Grief

Throughout the burial service Queen Marie struggled valiantly to keep her composure, but the strain obviously was too great for her. She frequently buried her face in her hands and sobbed aloud. During the actual interment she kept her eyes riveted on the coffin as if her very heart was going into the grave with her dead consort. Princess Ileana, and Prince Nicolas, who accompanied Queen Marie on her tour of the United States, were completely overcome, their bodies shaking convulsively with grief.

Little King Michael stood beside his mother and watched the ceremony at the grave with dazed and confused eyes. His tender years made it impossible for him to realize the solemnity and importance of the events which he was witnessing.

Little King Innocent

"The poor little chap does not know what it is all about," said Queen Marie to the correspondent of the Associated Press. "He only knows he has lost the dearest relative, who loved him with the same devotion as if he were his own child. It was the king's habit to give his grandson a little present every day, but now that has ceased forever."

The church services at Catrocent palace were majestic in their simplicity and beauty. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated by the patriarch of the Rumanian orthodox church, assisted by a score of other prelates. The famous Gregorian chant was sung by the priests while members of the royal family knelt beside the coffin.

Queen Marie Faints

At the end of the services Queen Marie, her features expressive of agony and grief, stepped forward and kissed the pale, wasted face of her dead consort and then fell into a swoon. Little Princess Ileana, who seemed to be the bravest member of the family, soothed and consoled her mother.

ELEVATOR MAN ILL AT HOME OF RELATIVE

W. R. Andrews Located At Grandfield, Oklahoma, On Sunday.

WILL FACE CHARGE

Electran Will Reply to Grain Embezzlement Accusation.

W. R. Andrews, manager of the Farmers Elevator company of Electra, against whom a charge of embezzlement over $50 has been filed with the district attorney's office here, will return home to face the charge as soon as physically able to do so, The Record News was told Sunday by Homer Andrews, his son.

Mr. Andrews was located in Grandfield, Okla., Sunday by The Record News. He is now under the care of a physician at the home of R. T. Reagan, city manager of Grandfield, and brother-in-law of Mr. Andrews.

Visit for Health

In a long-distance telephone conversation with Homer Andrews, The Record News was told that the Electra man went to the Oklahoma city in an effort to regain his strength, and that he has no intention of trying to avoid service of a warrant charging him with conversion of the proceeds of the sale of wheat over the value of $50.

His father will return to Electra as soon as able to do so, Homer Andrews said. Mr. Andrews was too ill to come to the telephone for a statement, his son said. R. T. Reagan, at whose home Mr. Andrews was staying, went to Electra Sunday, it was stated.

Difficulties involving the Farmers Elevator company became known Saturday with the appointment of J. Milton Erwin of Wichita Falls as trustee for the company. An assignment of assets to Mr. Erwin has been made by Mr. Andrews on behalf of creditors, it is understood. Claims against the company were estimated by Mr. Erwin at approximately $43,000, including grain stored at the elevator by farmers in the Electra area.

Charges Filed Saturday

The charge against Mr. Andrews was preferred Saturday by Dan Nengwasser, farmer living near Electra. Mr. Nengwasser presented receipts showing claims of 467 bushels of wheat stored in the elevator, Assistant District Attorney Frueschte said.

At the Andrews home in Electra Sunday afternoon, Mr. Reagan said that he had no statement to make, and neither confirmed nor denied that Mr. Andrews is in Grandfield.

Reagan Andrews, another son of W. R. Andrews and former bookkeeper of the elevator company, declared there "is no statement to be made."

"The business affairs of the company are now in other hands," was the only statement made by Reagan Andrews.

Cinderella Feet Now Merely Myth Survey Of College Girls Reveals

By Universal Service.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 24.—Cinderella feet are steadily becoming more of a rarity among college women, a survey made here indicates.

The survey shows that the average shoe size for co-eds of the University of Missouri had increased from 4-C to 5-B in the last five years. The merchants also report that women are manifesting greater honesty in regard to their shoe sizes and, as a result of this, the old-style system of numbering is returning. Until a few years ago women who wore number 5's always demanded number 3's, the merchants say, and this led to the blind system of shoe numbering. Co-eds here now frankly ask for number 5's and even for 6's and 7's.

Athletic instructors here say the larger shoe sizes demanded by university women are due largely to the increased participation of women in college athletics, particularly golf, tennis, hiking and hockey. The women now even have their own track meets.

While the co-ed's foot has been growing the university man's foot has remained stationary, his average size being 8 1-2. This size holds for athletes as well as the average man student. Coach Gwinn Henry says that an 8 1-2 shoe will fit the average member of the Tiger football squad, although in one or two exceptional cases, No. 13's have been made to order.

Bud Stillman To Wed Lena Wilson Despite Quarrel Between Parents

Bride-To-Be Quits Home Of Her Parents and Takes Up Residence With Bud's Mother

GRANDE ANSE, Quebec, July 24.—The secret of the feud that has sprung up around the romance of the Cinderella of the north country, Lena Wilson, and her prince charming, James "Bud" Stillman, was revealed today. And, country to reports, religion is not to blame. Mrs. Stillman's interest in the wedding of her son and the little daughter of the forests, has caused the rift between the two families.

Due to the fact that the music, food and other necessities for the wedding fete would undoubtedly make a hole in the Wilson pocketbook, Mrs. Stillman took command of the arrangements. Handsomely engraved invitations had already gone out, to a number of people prominent in American society and a general invitation to the event had been broadcast throughout the north woods. And Mrs. Stillman is determined that everything shall be provided for the occasion.

Bride's Parents Irked

The bride-to-be's mother and four sisters resented this intrusion and as a result have announced that they will not attend the ceremony. However, it is hoped that a reconciliation will be brought about before the wedding Tuesday.

But Stillman declared today that there was never any disagreement about Lena's religion.

"I gladly signed the necessary papers, giving my consent to have any children that may come to us brought up in the Catholic faith," he declared today.

"Bud" and Lena were the guests of the Rev. Father Lamy at Grande Piles last night. The open hostility of Lena's relatives and fear that an attempt would be made to separate them caused them to seek the protection of the priest who will perform the wedding ceremony.

Lena attended confession today at the little Grande Piles church where she received hold communion. Bud accompanied her but he declared that he will remain a communicant of the Episcopal church.

And with it all arrangements for the biggest event the north country has ever seen are going forward with rapidity. For Grande Anse is going to play host Tuesday to social celebrities of Canada and the United States as well as to the lumberjacks and French-Canadian girls of the forest.

Bud Escorts Bride

The reports that Bud had been compelled to kidnap his bride from her mother's home drew a smile from the son of the famous New York banker.

"Lena does not look as though she had been kidnaped, does she?" he asked. Miss Wilson rewarded his sally with a radiant smile.

Meanwhile guests are assembling here from many parts of Canada and the United States. It was explained that under the Quebec law it was necessary for Miss Wilson's mother to sign her consent to the wedding since her daughter is a minor.

The religious differences are an aftermath. Young Stillman and Miss Wilson, however, were of such a mind and heart that neither would consent to allow these to separate them. Lena's mother, Mrs. John Wilson of La Tuque, Quebec, is expected to arrive at Grande Anse tomorrow with Lena's four sisters.

State to Ask Death For Trio in Brutal Murder of Louisiana Man

FRANKLIN, La., July 24.(AP)—While defense attorneys remained cloaked in secrecy the state was ready tonight to start its effort to send three persons to the gallows for the alleged murder of James J. Lebouef, superinendent of the Morgan City branch of the Louisiana public utilities company.

Trial of the three defendants, Mrs. Ada Bonner LeBouef, widow of the victim; Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, prominent Morgan City physician, and James Beadle, fisherman and trapper, is expected to begin tomorrow at 10 o'clock in the St. Mary parish court house.

Dr. Dreher, according to the announcement of Sheriff Charles Pecot, confessed that he participated in the crime but he accused Beadle of firing the fatal shots. Mrs. Lebouef, the sheriff said, confessed to witnessing the crime, but claimed she did not recognize the assailants.

Beadle has remained silent throughout except to insist that he knows nothing of the slaying and to declare that any one who says he killed Lebouef is a "liar."

The slaying is alleged to have taken place July 1, while Lebouef and his wife were out riding in two boats. The state contends that Dr. Dreher said Beadle approached in another boat and that Lebouef was fatally shot at the time. His body was split open to keep it from floating it is explained and cast into the waters of Lake Palourde weighted down with two heavy angle irons.

The body was found five days later in the lake by frog hunters.

Cripple Swims Shark-Infested Sea

Daring Feat Wins Aged Beggar Reward

By Universal Service.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, July 24.—A beggar who has no legs and but one arm swam a mile through shark-infested waters here today, doubly risking his life to get money to provide medical attention for his sick daughter.

Spectators jeered Juan B. Vinagre as he slipped into Santiago bay, but his bravery turned ridicule into dismay when scoffers realized that he was in earnest.

Jeers changed to cheers long before he was half way across. The people then stood in anxious silence as Vinagre struggled through the last hundred yards of water. When at last he half rolled and half pulled himself up on the beach, he was almost smothered in the congratulatory rush.

Vinagre's heroism so won the crowds that immediately they collected several hundred dollars for him and his daughter, whose recovery is now expected.

GANG LEADER MUST DIE FOR MAN'S MURDER

Two Associates Convicted With Birger Given Life Terms

By Universal Service.

BENTON, Ill., July 24.—Charles Birger, notorious gunman of southern Illinois, was found guilty today of the murder of Major Joe Adams of West City and sentenced to hang.

Art Newman and Ray Hyland, Birger's confederates, were also found guilty but escaped the death penalty. Their punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

The jury deliberated 24 hours before reaching its verdict.

It was on a Sunday afternoon last November that Birger and his co-defendants drove a big automobile through the streets of West City and turned a machine gun loose on Major Adams. And it was on a Sunday afternoon that the jury convicted them for the crime.

Birger was one of the leaders of the Shelton-Birger band of gunmen that for more than two years spread terror through towns and cities in the southern part of the state. They were identified with beer running, labor terrorism and scores of crimes that are writen on court records of a dozen counties.

Birger is the first man to be sentenced to death in Franklin county.

Although Illinois has adopted the electric chair as the courts have ruled that hanging will be the form of punishment in cases where the death penalty is fixed in charges that were committed prior to July 1, this year.

The jury deliberated 22 and 1-2 hours.

Birger Turns Pale.

Birger, once the jaunty ex-cavalry man, turned pale when he heard Judge Charles H. Miller read the sentence which was handed him by the jury foreman. He sat immovable, for a few minutes, but when about to be returned to the jail, he jumped to his feet and attempted to talk to his sister. Restrained by deputies he said loudly: "Don't worry, Bis, forget it."

Hyland gulped when sentence was pronounced. Newman gave no sign of emotion. As the defendants were passing from the court room, an elderly woman rushed at Hyland, threw her arms about himand cried: "Oh, my God, that's my boy." Deputies separated the pair and the march to the jail began. Attorneys said the woman was a Mrs. Mautz, mother of Hyland, who had not seen her son for years and who had not previously appeared at the trial.

Jurors were sworn to secrecy as to their deliberations. It was learned, however, that Birger was found guilty on the first ballot and all three defendants were found guilty on the second ballot, taken two hours after deliberations began.

The jurors agreed on the death penalty for Birger without much difficulty but they found a stumbling block in trying to decide on punishment for Newman and Hyland. One juror said the final verdict was a compromise. The state had demanded the death penalty for all three.

To Ask New Trial.

Attorneys for Birger announced they would file a motion for a new trial and if that were denied would appeal to the state supreme court. Attorneys for Newman and Hyland said they were undecided whether they would ask for a new trial.

Charles A. Karch, an attorney for the gang leader, attributed the verdict to "outside atmosphere." He declared sentiment in Franklin county was so antagonistic to Birger that any other verdict was impossible.

Robert E. Smith, another Birger attorney, said it was the first hanging verdict returned to 181 murder cases in which he had participated.

MANY FOLKS DOUBLE FACED

Put Best Jaw Forward Before Camera

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 24.—It's the rare man—or woman—indeed who is not two-faced.

Lincoln, Bryan, Edison, Shaw, Byrd, even President Coolidge—all two-faced. Their photographs have found them out.

But only from the photographers viewpoint are they that. These famous ones are merely shining examples of what the camera has discovered about the human countenance.

Study any man's face and you can easily see that the left side is not the right side. The mouth may curl toward the right in laughing. The left eye may be a bit higher than the right. One side may have "character lines" more deeply engraved than the other.

Expert Explains It.

Alva Townsend of Lincoln, Neb., president of the Photographers' Association of America, which begins a convention here next week, bringing to town thousands of picture-taking men from all over the United States and Canada, explained it all today.

Mr. Townsend himself is two-faced. His straight nose leans a little to the left and his pleasant smile is a bit crooked

"Studying men as we do, photographers get to notice peculiarities of each that comes to them," he said.

"One side of a man's face may express strength of character and the other a lighter phase of his nature. Often one side says the whole thing and the other nothing at all.

"Abraham Lincoln was one of the best examples of a two-faced man in history. One side told everything about the stern stuff of which he was made, his executive ability, his mental power, the other had its lines traved into a picture of his generosity, his gentleness, his humanness.

Shaw Is Two-Faced

"George Bernard Shaw has long known he has a double face—and he's very proud of it, boasts of it, in fact. Williams Jennings Bryan, expressed different things through his two cheeks.

"And President Coolidge is said to insist that the same cheek be turned to every camera. The sad thing is that this is the 'wrong' side for the photographer. The president would take a much better picture turned the other way."

The story was told among the master photographers gathered about Mr. Townsend today how a portrait of Thomas A. Edison was ordered from a famous artist.

Finished, the portrait was admired by everyone except a photographer called in to inspect it.

Shows Wrong Cheek.

"Mr. Edison has the wrong cheek turned," said the photographer. "The portrait is terrible. It does not look like him."

And so, the story goes, that same artist is working on another portrait of the electrical wizard, this time with the head turned the other way.

And just recently at the welcoming dinner given to Commander Byrd, a noted photographer sitting near studied the flier's face while he was talking. The picture man wanted to discover, if he could, whether Byrd was a hero born and bred or was the recipient of the "lucky breaks."

"Lucky breaks," said the photographer to himself, viewing the left side of Byrd's face. He moved over to the other side of Byrd, looked again, and declared, "No, a hero through and through."

A man's character is not a mystery to his photographer, according to Mr. Townsend.

Bond Market Moves In Steady Channel

NEW YORK, July 24.(AP)—Quiet but steady progress marked the movement of the bond market last week. Prices were generally firm, but this was attributable to particularly easy credit, due to the presence of an abundance of investment money, rather than any sharp development of demand. Buying in the listed market had an atmosphere of caution about it, indicating that the large surplus of recent new issues still exerted a considerable influence.

Boy Scout News

TROOP TWO.

Troop Two, the Red Devils, held their regular meeting Friday night at the First Methodist church. The meeting opened with the scout oath, scout laws and the pledge of allegiance to the flag, led by Assistant Scoutmaster John Weller.

The Scoutmasters Bulletin was read by Bill McClure, scoutmaster, and discussed by the entire troop.

Camp was discussed and it was found that quite a few scouts out of Troop Two will attend camp.

A Roman relay race was won by Ed Dunn and a game of poison was won by Rogers Kelly. For chair relay races Jack Denton and "Hub" Cheshire chose sides and Jack's side was victorious. Grab the stick was another favorite game.

The meeting closed with the scout oath and laws.

The tennis game that was to have been played last Sunday with Troop Three was called off, none of the Troop Three players appeared.

Melvin Giles, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is back into troop activities and was given a hearty welcome Friday night.

SCOUT CAMP.

Proof that the scouts out at camp are enjoying themselves is given in the fact that 32 of them have reserved places for the next period of camp. Besides these, 12 reservations have been made for six boys from Archer City, 40 from the First Methodist church troops, 15 from Thrift, and 10 from different Wichita Falls troops.

The scouts at camp say they are having a wonderful time and learning something new every day. The eats are splendid and each boy gets all he can possibly "hold."

All the boys are specially interested in the handicraft projects. Boomerangs, Indian moccasins, bows and arrows, and leather work are keeping the boys pretty busy; the ones that don't have the energy for handicraft are kept busy dodging boomerangs and arrows.

TROOP 16.

Troop 16, Kenneth Erwin, scoutmaster, had a supper hike Friday night instead of the regular meeting. The boys met at their troop meeting place and hiked to their official camping grounds about two miles out on the river.

After a delicious supper, each boy cooking for himself, games of I spy and spy and sharpshooters were played.

Nolen Hale, who has been Troop 16's efficient scribe for some time, has announced his intentions of resigning in order to take assistant patrol leadership of the Silver Fox patrol. The troop will vote on this next Friday night.

JAMBOREE.

The scout quarterly jamboree, which was postponed on account of rainy weather, will be held Friday, August 5, at Bellevue park. This will be in between the second and third periods of camp.

The events will be held as announced heretofore.

TROOP THREE.

Troop Three, Lee Loeffler, scoutmaster, opened their meeting Friday night with the scout oath and laws, led by the scoutmaster.

Patrol inspection followed, the Black Bear patrol winning. Dues were collected and the Scoutmasters Bulletin was read and reviewed by the scoutmaster.

Chief Creighton showed the moving pictures of Troop Four and they were enjoyed immensely by Troop Three members.

He then discussed doings at camp and answered a regular catechism regarding them. Chief Creighton gave Troop Three as their project at camp the building of a council fire ring. The troop plans making this the very best looking thing around camp.

Thirteen boys from Troop Three are registered for the second period of camp and the troop expects to have 16 or 20 reservations before the second period starts Tuesday. The boys who have registered are: Charlie Aston, Bob Dixon, James Lee, Hal Roper, Herman Givens, Will McKinney, Travis Lee, Oscar Thornton, Billy Mowery, J. C. Daniels, William Allen, Homer Lee and Paul Pendleton.

The Raven patrol put on a game of blowing marbles. Travis Lee of the Lion patrol won and was presented with a lollypop. The Black Bears gave a demonstration of pyramid building as their patrol stunt.

Troop Three had as their visitors Friday night, Rev. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the First Methodist church, and Chief Creighton, scout executive.

The scouts formed the never-ending circle of friendship and were dismissed with the scoutmasters' benediction.

For the first time in 10 days he was able to take a few breaths without tubes through his throat, or through a hole in his ribs—a few natural breaths, like normal children.

The boy suffered from congested lungs, a condition that called for immediate surgical aid. Oxygen was administered through a tube in his throat and through another tube to his lungs.

RIGID TESTS FOR AVIATORS

91 Students Eliminated in Army School Quiz

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 24.—Hopes of becoming military aviators were blasted for more than half of the class of 172 candidates who reported at Brooks Field July 1 before they ever climbed into an airplane to make a flight, records at the primary flying school disclose.

When flying instruction started last week, only 81 student fliers were on active duty. Ninety-one others had been sent home or were awaiting elimination on account of failure to pass orientator and personality tests and physical examinations.

The present class marks the official adoption of tests that have been carried on in an experimental stage for the past two or three years by William Guy Rurgles, inventor of the orientator, and flight surgeons at the school.

Records of a recent class reveal that only three students out of 115 who failed to pass the orientator tests, graduated from the advanced flying school at Kelly Field.

$908.85 RAISED TO AID WICHITA FALLS TOTS

Record News Closes Milk and Ice Fund Appeal As Total Raised Satisfies Needs of City's Poor Children for Summer

With funds on hand and promised estimated to be sufficient to insure milk and ice until after September 1, The Record News Milk and Ice fund was discontinued Saturday for the present year as one of the most successful charity movements ever undertaken in Wichita Falls.

Contributions on Saturday brought the total amount contributed since the fund was opened in June to $908.85, which is considerably more than was shown at the conclusion of the 1926 fund.

In addition to the amount mentioned above hundreds of dollars worth of milk and ice was contributed by local concerns and many hours of work given by friends of the poor youngsters and aged persons of Wichita Falls.

A contribution Saturday was $6, the proceeds of a lawn carnival at the home of Mrs. L. L. Boardman. Giving the carnival were Maurine Boardman, Lee Allen Boardman, Lena Mae Lesley and Evelyn Edmiston. A cash donation of $12.50 was also received Saturday.

With Oral Jones, cashier of the City National bank, trustee for the milk and ice fund, its administration is being carried out by Miss Myrle Neely, secretary of the Children's Aid society, and Mrs Effie McHam, executive of the Family Relief association.

Miss Rosalie Hankins, Red Cross nurse, has been in charge of distribution of supplies at the North Side community house and Miss Mary Sutherland, Red Cross nutritionist, has given much of her time in the work.

Every application for aid under the milk and ice distribution has been thoroughly investigated and it is believed supplies have been distributed only to deserving persons, said Miss Neely Saturday.

The people of Wichita Falls vicinity have given generously and with their characteristic spirit of whole-hearted unselfishness that makes life more a thing worth living. The Record News is glad to express in a measure the thanks of the unseen benefactors of this generosity, and adds an appreciation of the manner in which all have received the 1927 milk and ice fund movement.

Appreciation Voiced

Miss Neely, in expressing the appreciation of welfare officials for the generous contributions and personal assistance of citizens, declared that recipients of the supplies are practically all deeply grateful for the helping hand given them during the hot months.

Never a day passes, Miss Neely stated, that some old person or child does not try in some unique manner to drive home a message of sincere gratitude. One little girl a few days ago presented Miss Neely with a withered holly-hock. When asked where she obtained the flower the little girl broke into tears and said.

"I got it out of a lady's yard, but I wanted to bring it to you."

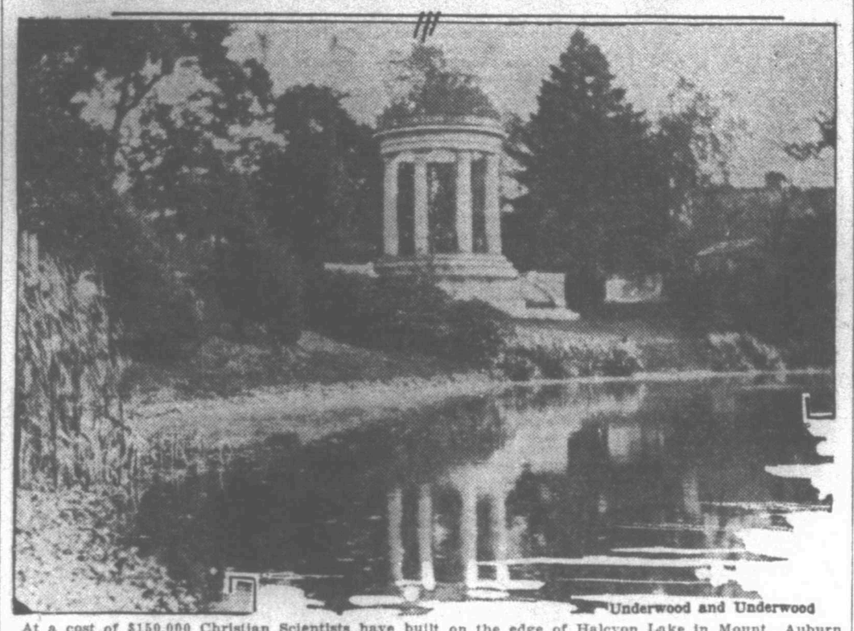

Those concerns giving supplies to supplement the cash contributions were the Producers Creamery, which delivers 100 gallons of skim milk daily to the two stations and gives a third discount on all whole milk purchased from it; James Brothers creamery which delivers 40 gallons of butter milk daily; Chapman Dairy, which gives 10 gallons of skim milk each day in addition to other donations of milk.

The Peoples, Wichita and New Ice companies each extended a one thrid discount on the price of ice purchased from them and the New Ice company donated ice books good for 6000 pounds of ice.

Many Give Aid

Women who have voluntarily assisted in the work of distributing the supplies at the two stations are Mrs. C. C. Basham, Mrs. R. E. Basham, Mrs. Mary Brown Basham, Vera Hale, Ethel Moran, Mrs. Ralph Dilliday, Mrs. Margaret Noble Haynes, Mrs. Minor, Icy V. Larkin, Iva Willis, Mrs. G. C. Murray, Mrs. L. B. Holland, Mrs. W. P. MAKING MODERN MENUS

Mrs. Jones: "I'm always so pleased when I run across new recipes for cooking vegetables."

Mrs. Brown: "I know, they're so good for one, but it is tiresome always fixing them the same way."

Mrs. Jones: "Read these, they sound good, don't they?"

Beet Jelly.

Two tablespoons gelatine
Half cup cold water
Half cup vinegar
Two cups boiling water
One and a half teaspoons salt
Quarter cup sugar
One cup minced beets
One minced onion.

Soak the gelatine in the cold water and the vinegar. Add the boiling water, preferably the water in which the beets were cooked, sugar and salt, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Stand in cold water, and when the mixture begins to thicken add the beets and onions and place in the ice box to set. Unmold on lettuce or cabbage leaves.

Escalloped Lima Beans

Soak two cups of lima beans over night. Discard the water in which they were soaked, wash them again and put on to boil. Cook until tender, drain well and add salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne. Place in a casserole, cover the beans with sweet cream or with whole milk and bits of butter, sprinkle the top with dried bread crumbs, cover the dish and bake in a moderate oven (325 F.) for one hour, removing the cover the last 15 minutes.

As a varfation one cup of finely diced salt pork may be used with the milk in place of the butter. The gives an especially good flavor.

Coolidge and the West

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE picked South Dakota for the summer capital of the republic. This had never happened before. Theodore Roosevelt was the only president of the republic that had ever really known the west. Tis true that Ohio furnished the republic several presidents but only one of these ever journeyed to the midwest or the Black Hills country in mid-summer time.

For vacation purposes Calvin Coolidge established the precedent and set the pace. He picked the Black Hills, and the Black Hills is a huge part of an insurgent republican state. Its governor is an insurgent republican. Its senators are insurgent republicans.

Now the republican politicians or leaders of South Dakota have promised the president the delegates from that state in 1928 and have assured him that the west will be for him not only at the national convention but on November election day.

There is going to be another farm relief bill. President Coolidge is to sign it. It will not be a price fixing bill. Outside of this it will contain all the provisions or clauses that the farmers demand.

As for the Dakotas the wheat and corn crops are heavy and the bankers and financiers of the two states are predicting rare prosperity not only this fall but the coming year.

Coolidge has been the luckiest man in American politics. He accepted a vice presidential nomination when Borah sneered at it and three or four other outstanding republicans kicked the prize aside. Calvin caught it. He was delighted.

He was elected on the ticket with Harding. Harding died. Coolidge stepped into his shoes. Then the republicans nominated and elected him. Now he is confident that he will be re-nominated and re-elected next year.

He is not only lucky in politics, but he is one of the most astute politicians that the country has known. He didn't pitch hay in Vermont this summer. He journeyed to South Dakota and ran with the ranchmen, the wheat growers, the corn growers, the cowboy and he selected a young American Swede as his Sunday preacher.

There are a million voters of Scandinavian origin in the northwest. Many of the leaders of the republican party are of Viking stock. Many of the insurgent republicans are of Viking stock. Peter Norbeck is of Viking stock.

Calvin Coolidge isn't of Viking stock, but he knows how to play the political game, he knows when to keep his mouth shut and he knows when to turn his messages loose. Calvin the cowboy has his party to play and he is playing it.

Cowmen Seek Coolidge

A GROUP of western livestock raisers had a message for President Coolidge and they carried it to the South Dakota State Game Lodge where the president is summering. In their message they declared against "the domination of cattlemen by Chicago and Omaha packers, and their Wall street affiliations."

According to an Associated Press correspondent it was a straight from the shoulder message. President Coolidge listened to reason, but he kept a padlock on his tongue.

Paul B. Martin, president of the Western Stock Marketing association delivered the message. This is what he thundered in the ear of the president, "What we want is to have the government teach and help us to organize co-operative marketing societies through which we can borrow enough money to keep our cattle on the ranges and to compel the packers to come to the ranges and bargain for them."

President Martin did not stand in awe of President Coolidge. He never stuttered and he never stammered. He told the president of the United States if cattlemen were compelled to ship their livestock to Omaha and Chicago where "we must take any price the packers may give."

He added that food and freight bills charged up against them "will eat up a car load of cattle a week and that they cannot afford to ship them back home to await a better price."

Another complaint was there seems to be no competition among packers. They pay the cattlemen about the same price. And then President Martin, head of the Western Livestock Raisers, declared the difference in price when shipment begins at home and ends at Omaha or Chicago "is so great a drop that our profits are wiped out."

Where do the livestock raisers of the southwest come in? Have they grievances or complaints? Are they satisfied with prices or conditions. President Coolidge has the floor. Chicago and Omaha packers have the floor. There is a presidential election coming next year.

An Army of Tenant Farmers

PRESIDENT CALLES of Mexico is a land reformer. He has dispossessed the owners of 11,000,000 acres of fertile lands of their holdings and apportioned it out among the peons of the district where confiscation prevails. A bulletin issued by the United States department of agriculture tells its own story. This survey was based on the 1920 census and a special survey made by the bureau of agriculture economics. It shows that 47.9 per cent of the farms of the United States are operated by managers or tenants.

Tenant farms in the United States in 1920 averaged 107.9 acres in size and $9630 in value. In other words almost half of the farm lands in the United States are farmed by tenants or croppers, and the verdict rendered that farm landlordism is increasing in all sections of the republic. What would happen in the United States if Calles became president of the republic with a congress and a supreme court ready to do his bidding?

Insanity as a Defense

"PROTECTION of society demands that the insane slayer be locked up just as it demands that sane slayers be either locked up or executed," editorialized the Dallas News. And then it makes this addition to its argument, "the jury ought not have to decide whether any man is insane or not. It is the technical question which is beyond the pen of the ordinary juror. This is true. Whether sane or insane, a slayer criminal should be placed where he will do society the least harm.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, July 24. (EFS)—Hot weather promotes informality. Sleeveless girls, stockingless girls, girls without underslips, wander blithely along. Nor is it an uncommon sight to see men parading along Fifth avenue, the promenade of promenades, with ties hanging loosely down, shirts with collars open at the neck, and with coats slung across the arm. Hatless and collarless men, indeed, are as frequent on Fifth avenue nowadays as are men wearing top hats in the winter time.

Pity the children of Broadwayites! These unfortunate children are pampered to the extreme; they are dressed beyond their years in imitation adult modes; they have no home life whatever; they keep abnormal hours and are continually in the worst sort of atmosphere. They can be seen in the lobbies of flashy hotels of the cheaper variety near Broadway, painfully sophisticated, wan, bored, having none of the natural fun or natural children in natural surroundings.

These poor kids don't even learn to play any games. They have no playmates. Their contacts are with adults almost altogether. They imitate these adults, and unhappily the models are not always what they should be.

One of these unfortunate children created quite a stir on the street the other evening. She was only about five years old, and was walking with a slightly faded, but very much made-up blonde, who was apparently her mother. The child wore a white flannel dress, a close-fitting blue sailor jacket, and a little white felt hat—built on the snug lines of the current style. The child was obviously made-up, her cheeks rouged and her lips painted; her eyebrows touched up, and hen finger nails polished like those of a manicurist of especially bad taste. Her long curls hung about her shoulders and she swung a swagger stick as smartly as she walked.

Everyone turned to look at her. But each one, I think, with pity.

Imogene Wilson arrived in New York one day last week under the name of Mary Nolan. She was on her way to Europe. Miss Wilson, a beautiful Follies girl, achieved newspaper publicity by the circumstances of her love affair with Frank Tinney, the comedian. Among these circumstances was the fact, according to Miss Wilson's own admission in police courts, that Mr. Tinney beat her enthusiastically whenever he felt in the mood for exercise.

These circumstances, it seems, were very horrifying to the chemically pure souls in the movie business. It seems that Miss Wilson screens well, and the Hollywood people would give her a chance in the fillums but not until she changed her name and signed a contract not to allow herself to be swatted in the eye by Mr. Tinney. Hence her adopted name of Mary Nolan.

Miss Nolan has gone to England to be filmed in "Sorrell and Son."

READ THIS FIRST

SALLY JEROME, 20 and pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who has been separated from her mother for nine years.

The family consists of MRS. JEROME, the twins, BEAU, who's the apple of his mother's eye, and MILLIE, a young siren; and Sally, herself. Mrs. Jerome is an invalid, so Sally does the housework mornings and works in MR. PEEVEY'S office downtown afternoons.

In the flat just below the Jeromes' flat lives young TED SLOAN, who's in love with Sally. Sally, however, has small interest in him except as a dancing partner. She adores dancing.

The only man she is sentimentally interested in is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peavey's office. She barely knows him, however.

On a hot Monday in August Millie drops into Sally's office with the news that she's had to quit another job because another employer tried to make love to her. This is always Millie's story, but Sally knows that the real reason for Millie's quitting is because her employer did not make love to her. Beau's best girl, Mabel Wilmot, has told her that Millie "just won't work around an office where there's nobody attractive enough to give her a thrill."

Millie gets a glimpse of young Mr. Nye and decides to run over and ask him if he needs a good stenographer, by any chance. Sally is dreadfully afraid that she will. She hates the thought of the siren, Millie, working for John Nye all day, six days a week.

But later that afternoon Nye tells her that his secretary has been married, and asks her if she knows of a girl who would do for him. Sally unwillingly tells him about Millie and promises to send her down next morning. Millie is out when she gets home for supper. Beau's ill, and Mrs. Jerome is in bed, worn out with the heat. Ted Sloan helps Sally get some food ready for them, and casually asks her to marry him. When Mrs. Jerome hears about it she cries, and Sally promises never to marry Ted.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V

Mrs. Jerome dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief that fairly reeked with cologne. She bathed her forehead with cologne whenever she had one of her sick headaches, and all of her clothes and her bedroom smelled of it from one year's end to another.

"Sally," she said forlornly, buttering a little piece of the Bohemian rye bread and popping it into her mouth. "It isn't only that I'm afraid you'll marry Ted Sloan. I don't want you to marry anybody—at least, not for a long time. What on earth would I do without you, sick as I am? And, anyway, married life isn't all rose-leaves and sugar pills, either! Don't you be in a hurry to jump into it. Look at me! I wish I'd never heard the word 'marry'!"

Sally began to set the bedside table to rights—brushing up the crumbs on it, smoothing down the dog-eared pages of a book, putting the medicine bottles and the pill boxes in a neat row along the back of it. Her hands moved quietly, quickly, deftly, like the hands of a trained nurse.

"I can't think married life is so terrible, Mother," she said firmly, after a minute or two. Her blue eyes were serious and thoughtful. "Or so many people wouldn't get married and live together, would they?"

Mrs. Jerome's face began to pucker up again, and Sally saw that for some reason or other she was going to cry again.

"Of course, that doesn't mean that I want to get married," she hurried to say, because I don't—and there isn't a chance that I'll marry for perfect ages, if I ever do. Ted Sloan's practically the only man I know except Beau and Mr. Peevey—and I wouldn't marry Ted if he were the last man on earth."

"Well, I'm glad to hear you say that, at any rate," her mother answered with a long sigh. "Turn off that electric fan before you go out. Sometimes I think it makes my headache worse."

Mrs. Jerome's sick headaches were the family tragedy. They had begun nine years before, soon after her husband had left. And they had been growing worse ever since.

The only person in the family who did not take them seriously was her sister-in-law, Miss Emily Jerome, a smart spinster who lived alone in the ramshackle Jerome homestead far out on the River road. Aunt Emily only sniffed when she heard about the headaches.

"Of course she has them!" she was wont to say in her tart way. "My head would ache too if I lived the way she does! Lying around in bed half the time with her nose in a book, and eating herself to death! If she'd get up and stir around she wouldn't have so many aches and pains. She's no more sick than I am. And I certainly am not. . . . She's got the dry rot, that's all!"

There was a good deal of truth in what Aunt Emily had to say on the subject. Mrs. Jerome wasn't half so sick as she was unhappy. She was filled with a deep disgust with life, and had been ever since she had lost her husband.

Now that her children were grown and no longer needed her, she had no interest in life except the books in which she buried her humiliation and her sorrow. Her sickroom was a kind of safe harbor from the world. There she hid herself from the people who pitied her, month in and month out, year after year.

She was, as Aunt Emily said, "no more sick than I'm sick." But she was broken-hearted. And that, after all, is the worst of all the ills that we mortals are heir to.

Sally leaned over the bed and kissed her on her soft cool cheek. "Dear, you'd like some more of that rye bread, wouldn't you?" she asked. "I'll get you some right away."

"I'll have a little of that applesauce we had last night for supper, too, if there's any of it left," her mother called as she left the darkened room, with its over-powering smell of cologne and camphor.

Ted Sloan was still sitting on the corner of the table when Sally went back into the kitchen for the apple sauce.

"You still here, old thing? she asked him with light carelessness. "I'm sorry I'm busy right now. But I am—and after I take this applesauce to Mother, I've got to get supper for Beau and myself. So if you've anything to do, you'd better not wait for me."

"I've all the time in the world," he answered slowly and deliberately. "I can sit here 'til morning if necessary."

"But it isn't necessary!" Sally's voice was sharp all at once. "And, honestly, I can't do a thing with you sitting there, staring at me like an owl. You make me nervous. . . . Go on home like a nice boy and then I'll go out dancing with you tomorrow night—maybe!"

The thing that first had drawn Sally to Ted Sloan was his dancing. She never had liked him very well until one night when he had come upstairs to teacher her the "Charleston." That had been two years before, and since then they had danced together once or twice a week. Ted's mother said they were "dancing fools" and sarcastically advised them to get a job on a vaudeville circuit.

He got up now to go downstairs to her. "Well, if I'm to be kicked out I'd better hit the skids myself," he said, and went, banging the screen door behind him. "See you tomorrow. I want to talk to you—seriously."

Beau came shuffling into the kitchen in a pair of old tennis slippers. His blond hair was rumpled, and his eyes looked as if he needed sleep.

"Thought you were going to get me some chow," he grumbled. "And instead of that, you'r out here chewing the fat with Sloan! What's the big idea, anyway?"

"The big idea is that I couldn't get rid of him!" cried Sally, cheerfully, defending herself. She was always explaining herself and making apologies to the family.

"You slice that cold roast beef in the ice-box and I'll make you some sandwiches as soon as I give Mother this applesauce," she went on. "And I must take her some more bread, too. I almost forgot that."

Beau took a step towards the ice box. But just at that instant the telephone rang and he rushed to answer it. From the tones of his voice Sally could tell that he was talking to his Mabel.

"Say, listen, Mabel wants to throw a party here," he said to her an hour later, when they had finished their supper and were doing the dishes.

Every now and then Beau would help with the work around the house. And when he did, it always meant that he had an ax to grind—a favor to ask. So Sally was not surprised now.

"When does she want to have it?" she asked, hoping that Mabel wasn't going to "throw" a party in this broiling August heat.

But it seemed she was.

"Tomorrow night," Beau answered, watching his sister from the corner of his light blue eye. "Not a big party. Just a few people in to have some sandwiches and ice cream, or something. She said you'd know what to order."

"Does she want me to order the food?" asked Sally, scalding the tea cups. "Because I don't know what she wants, or how many people she's going to have. . . . I'd better call her up."

"No, you don't have to. She won't have more than ten. She said so," Beau assured her. "I don't see why she doesn't have them at her own place—but she always says you know how to do everything so well."

This was perfectly true, Mabel was always telling Sally what a good housekeeper she was, and how nicely she did things.

"Oh, how sweet your table looks!" she would twitter sometimes when she came to Sunday dinner and found fresh flowers on the clean table with its shining glass and silver. Or "Oh, what perfectly darling cushions you've made for your porch chairs! Sally Jerome, you smart thing!"

And Sally, like most of us human things, was not flattery-proof.

So now she said: "All right, Beau, I'll get some kind of lunch ready tomorrow night. Only I can't be here, I've a heavy date to go dancing with Teddy."

A swift look of relief passed over Beau's handsome face, but Sally did not see it.

"How about fruit punch instead of ice-cream?" she asked, and he said that would be "the cat's whiskers."

Beau was always calling things "the cat's whiskers" or "the cat's pajamas" or "the cat's bathing suit." He would use a slang phrase until it was worn thin and threadbare—until everybody else in the world had forgotten it. But he always said it as if it was something brand-new — something that had just popped into his brain.

Mabel, who was as sharp as a needle, called him "Beautiful-but-dumb" to his face.

"You're a simp and a cuckoo, but I love you anyway," she would say to him. "And I'm going to marry you even if I have to keep on working to pay the grocery bill!"

At midnight Millie came home with her hair wind-down, her eyes misty and dreamy, and a large bunch of common white-and-yellow daisies pinned on her breast.

"Picked these in a field along the road," she said sweetly to Sally, who was still awake and reading in bed. "Johnny Davidson took me driving for millions of miles to a roadhouse called The Red Mill. Ever been there?"

Sally shook her head. She barely heard what her sister was saying. "How pretty she is!" she was thinking, 'particularly when she's been out in the air, and the wind has blown some of that rouge and powder off her face. John Nye is sure to fall in love with her. Sure to! Sure as fate."

Aloud she said: "Millie, I know where they's a good job that you can have if you want it."

She began to tell her about John Nye and the position in John Nye's office.

SUMMER EXAMINATIONS OF CHILDREN.

Most parents object to their children being examined by school doctors and still in some sections, in the large cities, this seems to be plan for calling the the only effective attention of the parents to the defects of their children.

During the school year children are so busy with their studies that parents often neglect sending them to their physician or dentist for periodic examinations which might disclose disease in the incipient stage. Summer time is a good season of the year to have such examinations made. Even if your child appears to be healthy it is the better part of wisdom for you to find out the truth and face the facts boldly so your child will not grow up with handicaps which can be blamed upon your negligence. Maybe some of the following figures will prove interesting, and urge parents to do as I have suggested:

There are approximately 20,000,000 pupils in the schools of North America. Two per cent have organic heart disease, 5 per cent now have or have had tuberculosis of the lungs, 5 per cent have spinal curvature, flat feet, or show other deformities serious enough to interfere with health.

Over 5 per cent have defective hearing, 25 per cent are suffering from malnutrition, over 30 per cent have enlarged tonsils, adenoids, or swollen glands, over 50 per cent and as high as 95 per cent in some schools have defective teeth which sooner or later prove detrimental to health.

Several millions of these children possess two or more of the above handicapping defects.

It will be seen that over 75 per cent, or over 22,000,000 of the school children of this country need attention to defects which may be partly or completely cured. Young children can always be cured of such troubles as defective hearing, swollen tonsils and adenoids; and tendencies to tuberculosis can always be overcome through proper training and treatment.

Have your children examined this summer, and then learn how to corect their defects and bring them into a condition of normal health.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUESTION: Mrs. J. B. B. writes: "I read your advice every day and think it is wonderful. Will you please tell me what causes the feeling as if there is a lump in one's throat? My doctor tells me it is nervousness. The ten years I have had this trouble have been terrible to me."

ANSWER: The nervousness you are suffering from and the lump in your throat are doubtless caused by some form of thyroid derangement, perhaps a small goitre. Another cause of a choking feeling in the throat comes from pelvic disorders, such as metritis, enteritis, or from rectal trouble.

QUESTION: R. J. writes: "When fasting on orange juice can one drink during the day, water in which vegetables have been cooked?"

ANSWER: If you wish to take the vegetable juice diet you should not do so while taking orange juice. You might try the vegetable juice one day and orange juice the next.

QUESTION: Mrs. Brown writes: "Will you please tell me the food elements of gelatin?"

ANSWER: Gelatin is a form of proteid, very beneficial to the body as a food. Those in health will find it advantageous to include it in the diet quite often, and it is tremendously helpful to those inclined to nose-bleed on account of its blood-congulating powers.

QUESTION: "Thank You" writes "I have used cocoa butter for four weeks for a thin face, but it has not helped. Can you suggest anything better?"

ANSWER: There is not much you can do for a thin face except through increasing the circulation through the tissues you will be able to make a "shapelier" face. This applies to either fat or thin faces.

Many Good Sports Forget Code Of Fair Play With Parents

Of Course, You're "a Good Sport" All Modern Young People Are—But Do You Play Fair With Your Parents?—Do You Pull Your Weight in the Family Boat?—Are You a Real Sport at Home?

There is nothing that you young people vaunt yourselves so much upon as upo nbeing good sports Sportsmanship is your religion, and this being the case, why do you not practice a little of the faith that is in you in the home circle and adopt a sporting attitude toward your father and mother?

Do you treat your parents that way? They have spent a lot of time and money and anxiety on you. There were years and years when you were little and helpless when you would have died of starvation if they had not cared for you by making a thousand sacrifices of their own comforts and pleasures. There have been weary days and night when they watched sleepless over your sickbed. Years in which they slaved for you. There has never been a day since you were born when they have not put your welfare above their own.

Father and mother have gone shabby and worn cheap hand-me-downs in order that you might be as well dressed as the boys and girls with whom you associate. To send you to college and to give you educational advantages that they never had, father has dug in a little deeper into his work and put the last ounce of strength he has into straining on the collar and mother has cut down her household budget to the bone and her personal indulgences to nothing and has worn the same old hat for three years.

Do you think it is playing the game to take all that your parents have done for you to make no return whatever? Don't you think you are a pretty mean grafter when you take the clothes off persons' backs and the food out of their mouths without even so much as "Thank you?"

Do you think that you are giving father and mother a show for their white alley when you let them work themselves to death and deny themselves the common comforts of life to send you off to expensive schools where you spend your time playing instead of studying and come back with nothing but a fraternity pin and a college yell and a contempt for those on whose bowed backs you have climbed a rung or two up the social ladder?

The only way you can repay your debt to your parents is by showing them some affection and appreciation and gratitude and making the most of the opportunities they gave you. A cheap way to settle a great debt, God knows. Yet how many of you even pay an installment on your account by handing your father and mother a few kind words?

And don't you think that sometimes when your parents look at you and see how selfish and egotistical and self-centered you are and what an ingrate you are that they feel like hanging their heads in shame because they have brought such miserable little tinhorn sports into the world?

The real sportsman pulls his weight in the boat. He does his part. Do you do that at home or do you leave mother and father with the bag to hold?

That boy is no sport who is too temperamental to work and idles around home and lets father and mother support him while he waits for some congenial occupation to turn up that will have a large fat pay envelope and no labor attached to it. He is the worst sort of a quitter.

That girl is no sport who lets mother do the cooking and sit up half the night making her frillies while she is out at night clubs dancing out the chiffon stockings that mother has to darn. Nor does she sit up and manicure her pink fingernails while mother washes the dishes and scrubs the floors.

Unless you put your strong, young shoulders under the family burden and do your best to lift it off the tired old shoulders that have borne it so long—unless you are ready to pinchhit for father and mother, you haven't drop of sporting blood in you.

An infallible test of sportsmanship is the ability to take punishment without whining, to acept whatever fate sends, be it bad or good, with a smile. Do you do that at home?

Suppose your parents are not able to give you the things that rich people have. Suppose you can't have as many pretty dresses as Miss Astorbilt has. Suppose dad can't give you a sport car like the one young Croesus has. Suppose you do have to work instead of playing golf and going to tendances, How do you take it?

Do you run poor old hard-worked dad into debt with your extravagance? Do you nag him into buying things for you that you know he cannot afford? Are you surly and grouchy and pevish and fretful in the family circle because you can't have every wish gratified? Do you go about with the air of one who has been done a deadly wrong by being brought into the world by parents who are not millionaires?

If you do, you are yellow all through. The girls and boys who are real sports do not reproach their parents for not having presented them with ready-made fortunes. They do not expect anybody else to play their game for them. They are out to win on their own and they have the high heart and the courage to snap their fingers in the face of poverty and hardship and to get more fun out of the fight than they ever will out of the victory.

There is no slogan of sportsmanship that you hear oftener than this: "I'll try anything once." Well, why don't you try listening to your parents' advice at least once?

They have lived a long time. They have had lots of experience. They have seen many things happen, and life doesn't change as much as you think it does.

Father started as a poor boy without a penny in his pocket and has worked up to being the head of a big business. Mother has known love and courtship and marriage and motherhood. Perhaps they could tell even flaming youth how to walk wearily among the pitfalls and how to avoid making some of the tragic blunders that wreck lives. Anyway, the experiment is worth trying. So be sport enough to listen to the older people once.

It's a fine thing for a boy or girl to have a pride in being a good sport, but don't exhaust all of your sportsmanship on the outer world. Save part of it for home consumption. DOROTHY DIX.

The ONE-MINUTE PULPIT

A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.

For he arms of the wicked shall be broken; but the Lord upholdeth the righteous.

The Lord knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be for ever.

They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they eshall consume; into smoke shall they consume away.—Psalm 37:16-21.

MODISH MITZI

It Can't Be She's Angry!

By JAY V. JAY

The Goofer isn't being given the attention he deserves. After dashing madly up here leaving heaven knows how many coupons uncut all he gets from Mitzi is an absent-minded: "Oh, hello," Aside from that he has a good view of hats, mostly of the backs of hats. The young woman to the left is wearing a ballibunt! with a brim wider at the sides than in front. Mitzi owns a large paillasson straw trimmed with velvet. Polly looks charming in a summer-weight felt with a brim turned up on the side. Next is another felt, last a velvet combined with straw.

Everybody is concerned with the plans for the charity bazaar to be held in the hotel Saturday night. Everybody wants to know who the Veiled Prophetess can be. Everybody but the Goofer. He wants to know where Mitzi has gone and isn't even interested in Polly's dress made all of pleated chiffon.

The Goofer saw Mitzi in the middle distance but before he can even put in a tactiful word of admiration for her two-piece frock with its jacketlike blouse of printed silk (coral and black) Mitzi looks at her wrist watch and murmuring something about an engagement hurries away! What does it mean?

WELL?

Griffin, the money clouter, never would have come up in that ninth inning yesterday and slammed over a victory if the first man at bat hadn't been a catcher. Anyhow, so grouches the great LaFayette. It's generally agreed a catcher can't run. Therefore when Lapan got on second and LaFayette singled to right, it was natural Pete should be thrown out at the plate where almost anybody else, even a pitcher, would have scored and ended the game right there and then. So George didn't get to be a hero although he put in a heroic punch for victory. But Pete stole home once.

In 16 base hits combed by the two teams during the first game, only one went for an extra base. That was a double by Gill. However, Griffin's single against the upper tier of the left field fence in the last half of the ninth would have traveled for two bases any other time. Steengrafe scored from third on the blow, ending the game before the clout could develop proportions of a two-bagger.

The Shreveport half of the eighth inning was rather unique. Steengrafe got three balls on Maderas, first batter, and then flogged in three strikes, whiffing him. He pitched two balls to the next two hitters, each lifting the first toss to Jenkins in left field.

Pete Turgeon's first name isn't Pete. That's a nick-nomer. How they came to tag the monicker on him nobody knows. The home folks know him as Eugene Joseph Turgeon.

The Shreveport team runs more to half pints than any other club over the circuit. Elliatt, the catcher, is a regular midget. Maderas at short and Kilduff on second both aren't much bigger than fleas. Chink Taylor in left field is below the caverage in size. Distel isn't any big guy by a long shot. Williamson and Thompson are lightweights and Dugan Phelan himself is no heavyweight.

Turgeon robbed Taylor of a hit in the seventh inning of the second game with a lightning stop of a bullet blow burned almost right at second. It was the kind of a liner that hits the dirt just a few feet from an infielder and usually takes a dirty skid on through into virgin territory.

Spudders and Sports played to one of the largest Sunday crowds of the season recorded at the Gardner emporium. There were 4513 paid admissions, a half a hundred or so cops who got in free (or, at least, so it looked) and as many again season pass bearers, to say nothing of a squad of impecunious newspaper people who crashed the gate, also.

J. Doak Roberts himself is expected in town Monday morning. The venerable Roberts comes to give us the lowdown on how to run a Dixie series and what is expected of Wichita Falls in the matter by the rest of the league.

CATS-STEERS SPLIT.

FORT WORTH, July 24. (AP)—Pinch Hitter Dock Smith's home run in the ninth inning gave Fort Worth the first game of the double header with Dallas, 5 to 3, but in the second game the Steers rallied in the eighth inning to win 5 to 3 Sunday. Two men were on and two out when Smith clouted his pinch blow over the right field. Jimmy Walkup and Snipe Conley were the opposing hurlers. Guy Williams worked the second game for the Cats. Owens and R. Love divided the duties for the Steers. The score:

CUBS 17, BUFFS 2

WACO, July 24.(AP)—Ray Benge, the Cubs steady right hander, held the Houston Buffs to seven hits here today while his teammates pounded Whitworth and Grabowski for 19 hits, to defeat the visitors 17 to 2. The Buffs played erratic ball to help the Cubs' cause, while Windle hit for the circuit with one on and West smashed out two homers. Score:

Steengrafe Cops Mighty Battle From Williamson

Spudders Win Opener, 2—1, But Thompson Shades Payne, 2—1, In Second Game Of Twin Bill

Milton Steengrafe, giant Spudder righthander, retained his position at the top of Texas league pitchers Sunday afternoon by hurling Wichita Falls to a 2-1 victory over Shreveport in the first game of a double-header. The Spudders came back in the ninth inning and broke a 1-1 deadlock with Francis Griffin, center fielder, producing the money punch. Williamson of the Sports chunked airtight ball with exception of the sixth, when the Spudders scored a run, and the ninth.

Lefty Thompson nudged out on the veteran George Payne, rubber-arm righthander, in a seven-inning afterpiece, holding the Spudders to six hits and one run while the Sports managed to tag Payne for eight safeties and a brace of markers, winning by a 2-1 score.

Wichita Falls by splitting the bargain bill, incidentally, which was played before a capacity house, while Waco was running wild against the Houston Buffs gained a half game on the second-place Mathes outfit.

The Spudders stand 11 games ahead of Houston today.

Shreveport tapped Steengrafe for the only enemy marker in the opener during the third round, Harris walking, advancing to second on Taylor's sacrifice and scoring on a single to center by Moore.

Griffin Again

Wichita Falls tied the score in the sixth. Turgeon drew a base on balls and dashed to third when Taylor juggled Griffin's single between short and third. Lamb grounded out to short with no advance. Jenkins was purposely passed and Benton followed with a single over first base, scoring Turgeon. Swenson bounded out to short. Lapan opened the ninth with a single to left and went to second on sacrifice bunt by Steengrafe. Milt was safe when Williamson threw poorly to first base. LaFayette dropped a one-baser into right and Lapan was cut down at the platter, Gill to Elliott. Steengrafe went to third and LaFayette to second on the throw-in. Turgeon was walked purposely and the great Griffin followed with the victory smack against the upper layer of the port palisades, scoring Steengrafe.

Steengrafe after realizing a little trouble in the first when Taylor and Maderas singled and an error cropped up with a base on balls, had slight worry the rest of the way, barring the third when that Shreveport marker was shoved across. Williamson chunked a nobby brand of ball, but let the home gang cluster on him in the ninth.

Payne in Hard Luck

Payne bucked a bunch of hard luck in the aftermath. He had so much stuff that at times players and arbiters alike cracked an idea he was doctoring the ball and said just as much. Harris' single and a double by Taylor gave the adversary a run in the third. Infield bingles by Maderas and Gill figured with an infield out for the other Sport tally in the fourth. Our side scored its only run in the fourth, also. The boisterious Turgeon bumped a triple to right and checked in on a single to center by Griffin. Griffin plopped a two-cushioner in the sixth with one away, but it didn't mean anything. Thompson was just in too rare fettle.

Hitters fared not so well against Sunday's pitching, all four throwers being in top form. Taylor and Elliott split Shreveport slugging laurels in the opener, each pumping a pair of bingles. LaFayette and Griffin constituted the large smoke on the Spudder firing line, each with a brace of blows. Harris of the Sports copped the walloping crown in the nightcap with three singles. Maderas poked a pair and Griffin continued his giddy batting pace with two hits in three trips.

RUTH CLOUTS HOMER NO. 31

Yankees Defeat Pale Sox In 3-2 Contest

CHICAGO, July 24. (AP)—Babe Ruth's heavy hitting gave the Yankees a 3 to 2 victory over Chicago today in a pitchers battle between Al Thomas and Pigras. Ruth scored the first run on his triple in the first inning, followed by Gehrig's single. Metzler made a great catch of Ruth's drive against the centerfield wall but fell after taking the ball. The White Sox protested that he had held the ball long enough to declare Ruth out, but Umpire Evans overruled them. In the third inning Ruth smashed out his 31st home run, the first circuit drive he has made into the remodeled Chicago stands this season.

BEAUMONT, July 24.(AP)—Jim Lindsey allowed the Exporters only five hits in the first of today's double header, the Bears blanking the locals 5 to 0. Newman was not so good in the second, however, and Beaumont evened it up 5 to 2. In the sixth inning of the aftermath the entire San Antonio team protested Umpire Gaddy's ruling on Smith's steal of third. Sears was eventually put out of the game and as he was being escorted from the field Catcher Long took a flop in the dugout on account of the heat and because of a bruised finger injured an inning before. Gorman Meets Reed Here Next

San Angelo Welter "Heated" Over Mike's Boast

Jack Gorman, the San Angelo welterweight wrestling flash, will clash with Mike Reed of Los Angeles in "grudge" match Friday night preliminary to the Hassen-Yaqui Joe match, it was announced yesterday by Matchmaker A. B. Ross following receipt of a letter from Gorman declaring Reed has been making spurious charges against his ability as a wrestler and asking for a match with the Bulgarian as soon as possible.

Reed declared here a week or so ago that he can beat Gorman any time twice within half an hour. Gorman was informed of the statement and straightaway began pawing the atmosphere, so to speak, and asking for a shot at Reed. The San Angelo athlete is pretty hot headed.

TEX RICKARD TO GET BUSY

Next Big Fight Will Be Held in Chicago

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, July 24.—George L. "Tex" Rickard, America's premier boxing promoter, is expected here this week, possibly Thursday. He will go into a series of conferences immediately following his arrival with Mayor William Hale Thompson, George Getz, chairman of the mayor's civic activity committee, and the Illinois state athletic commission.

All of the minor details of the proposed heavyweight championship bout, involving Gene Tunney, the world's title holder, and Jack Dempsey, the old champion and conqueror of Jack Sharkey, will be disposed of during these conferences.

Announcement Soon

The natural supposition, it would appear, is that the formal announcement of the bout at Soldier memorial field for either September 15 or 22 will follow these conferences.

Chicago and the nation has taken it for granted that the fight will be staged here despite the fact that formal announcement may not be forthcoming until August 5, the date Rickard has set for that procedure. At all events, requests for tickets are already coming in.

Dempsey, it is believed, will pitch his training camp in either Michigan City or Benton Harbor out of deference for his old Pal, Floyd Fitzsimmons. Either of these cities make an ideal training site.

Tunney, it is said, will seek a secluded spot for his conditioning work. It is a well known fact that the champion does not appreciate the plaudits of the "mob" during his training sessions. Lake Geneva is being mentioned prominently as the Tunney training camp.

107,000 in Bowl

A check-up on the official attendance figures at the army and navy game at Soldier Field last fall reveals that 107,000 spectators attended this grid classic. Thus it is quite likely that in excess of 150,000 customers can be jammed into the inclosure. There is every reason to believe that the fight will draw a gate in excess of $2,000,000, the largest in ring history.

Rickard, it is believed, will make it appear that Chicago, New York and Philadelphia are engaging in a strenuous bidding contest for the bout as long as possible so that he can keep the "contest" constantly before the public. As soon as either Dempsey or Tunney begin training he will no longer need that sort of publicity. This state of affairs may explain his present refusal to confirm the fact that the bout will be staged here.

Fighters to Help

A Dempsey or a Tunney in training for a championship match, of course, would eliminate any other source of publicity. A Dempsey, resting in Los Angeles, and a Tunney, hobnobbing in the seclusion of his summer home, are not what would be expected to produce Rickard ballyhoo.

The fact that George Getz let the "cat out of the bag" in an interview in Detroit Saturday may cause Rickard to come out flatfooted and announce the match following already mentioned conferences.

Mission Theater Stage Displays Lassies

By STEVE STEVENSON.

If action is what you crave, take in the Honey Girl show, which opened Sunday at the Mission theater.

Honey Hank Harris furnishes the laughs, assisted by Rose Harris. And when Hank and Rose fail to pull the giggles, something's wrong, someplace.

There's plenty of music and a flock of dancing, with practically every member of the cast being able to hoof to the best of anybody's ability.

One of the hits of the presentation Sunday night was Zoe Frazell. She stopped the show and deserved to do it. When it comes to singing, "I'm a Wild Woman and Not Looking for a Tame Man," Miss Frazell takes first prize in anybody's "blues" contest and she succeeded Sunday night in gleaning plenty of laughs from the customers.

Joyce Culbertson demonstrated that she is in a class by herself as a dancer and she hoofed her way into the good graces of gate crashers and those who paid.

Other members of the company, Fat Houghton, Tim Moore and Harry Dale contributed to the success of the presentation.

The chorus composed of Kate Riggs, Louise Mason, Fern Mason, Aileen Dunbar, Hazel Brennan, Johnny Mae Baggot and Kelline Leslie is one of the best "lines" that has ever appeared in Wichita Falls.

Scottish Pipers Split Twin Bill

Plumbers Trounce Oilers; Lose to Steers

The Scotland Plumbers took off a big bite Sunday afternoon at Katy park when they tackled the two league leaders, the Continental Oilers and Panhandle Longhorns. They carried through in great style in the first game and handed the Oilers a 9 to 3 drubbing, but the giant Roy Cannon had them on his hip in the nightcap and held them to one lone single while his maters hammered out a 7 to 0 victory for the Panhandle Longhorns.

Gabe Harris and Slim Ethridge were plugging along in a brilliant hurling dual in which the score was knotted 2 to 2 when they went into the seventh inning, but the Monkey wrenchers got to Harris for four runs in that inning and put the game on ice.

Ethridge hurled great ball all the way and struck out five men. Only seven scattered hits were made off him, three of these being bunched in the first inning.

Paianter Dixon and Gerard Boone had a great day in the field and seemed to have some sort of a wager from the way they were handling many hot, hard and often chances in th infield. Painter Dixon also led the hitting attack with three singles.

A single by Dixon over short in the fourth inning was the only base knock that was made off the great Roy Cannon, Panhandle giant right hander.

Wild Bill Hoehn's catch of Belcher's grounder in the first inning which knocked him backward was one of the high lights of the game. Hoehn then threw wild to first after the man.

Hubert Maddox, Tode Graves were hitting stars of the game. Maddox hit a triple and a home run along with a single in three times at the bat. Graves hit two doubes and a single in three times at the bat.

Handsome Flingers On Spudder Hill Today

Lefty Fred Fussell and Harlem Joe Kiefer will be the two that will chunk for the ladies this afternood at Spudder park in the double bill carded for three bells with the Shreveport Sports. Following this game the Spudders will take to the road on a trip in which they will play every team in the league except Fort Worth before returning home. The team makes their first stop in Dallas before hopping off into the South Texas towns.

Dugan Phelan could not be found Sunday night by telephone and it could not be ascertained who would do his chunking, but by a rough guess we would say that Homer Blankenship will work the first game with Brown, Wilkins and Karpp to select from the nightcap.

Hassen scored a one-fall victory over Joe in Dallas and the Yaqui is out for revenge. "He lucky that time., I get him," said Yaqui upon arrival in Wichita Falls Sunday.

They are to wrestle to a finish.

One Man Knifed During Attack On Parade

GRAND PRAIRIE, July 24.(AP)—Two men were under arrest here today in connection with a disturbance last night during a Ku Klux Klan parade and speaking. Several persons who participated in the melee nursed minor injuries. The trouble was precipitated when a spectator made a remark to a woman in klan regalia, marching with the klansmen.

A klansman, who took exception to the remark, and the spectator started the fight and nearly a score were in it when seven deputy sheriffs from Dallas arrived and terminated the affair.

Sidney Burk of Grand Prairie was the most seriously injured, he being cut with a knife. A pistol was displayed in the affray, but most of the fighting was with fists.

The klansmen and klanswomen, numbering about 250, said to be from Dallas, paraded the streets unmasked and a woman klansman addressed a large crowd. It was as the parade ended and the speaking began that the disturbance occurred.

ART OF MAKING FRIENDS — By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't Expect Each Acquaintance to Become Suitor

By Beatrice Fairfax

"HOW can I get better acquainted?"

Betty, in a letter she begs me not to print, because it "isn't very sensible," states this sensible and practical problem of friendship.

She met a "nice young man," about three years older than herself, a while ago. Betty is seventeen.

The two were introduced at a dance. Her newly-made acquaintance asked to take Betty home. Betty consented because she could tell he was a young man "who could be trusted."

There the acquaintance ended. Betty has met him since on the street, but the two merely smiled and nodded.

Naturally, we all wish to make as many good friends as we can. While friendships require mutual interest and enthusiasm, and a one-sided friendship is an absurdity, still, a girl would be foolish not to make a sensible effort, directly or indirectly, to attract and interest a young man who seemed to her on first acquaintance worth while as a friend.

How, then, can Betty go about to attract and interest this young man—let us call him Bob—without overstepping the bounds of dignity and good sense, without forfeiting his respect or her own.

"I know where I could see him," said Betty in her letter, "if I went to a certain place on a certain day. But I think he would notice this very soon. I really love him, but I simply can't do that.

"We are both good church members, but attend different churches of the same religion."

You are quite right, Betty, in ruling out the idea of obviously running after Bob. But are you not mistaken in assuring yourself that you love him? In the first place, you don't really know him well enough to know whether you love him. The attitude of love after an acquaintance of an hour or two is sheer sentimentality.

Wait until you are well acquainted with each other and have learned whether you are congenial and suitable, before you even think the word "love." A girl who is too impressionable, too ready to sentimentalize over a man, often scares him away by her attitude, which shows in her expression and manner, even if she does not express it in words. A man may not wish to get drawn into a serious affair, so he may fear to go further with what might otherwise have proved a delightful friendship, perhaps deepening gradually to love.

Therefore, if you wish to get better acquainted with Bob, keep the acquaintance on the level of jolly comradeship. Make yourself interesting and entertaining—a ready talker and a sympathetic listener. But don't sentimentalize. Over-emotionalism is a cheap and shoddy mental characteristic, which has killed many a good friendship and honest affection.

On the other hand, sincere friendliness is fine. Why didn't you invite Bob to call on you when he escorted you home? The chances are he waited for some such invitation from you. You might have told him how much you would like to have him meet your parents.

Do your share toward encouraging friendships if you wish to make and keep friends and attract love. Lonely girls are oftentimes lonely merely because they will not put themselves out to gain the attentions for which they long.

There are girls who do not even trouble to speak first when they meet a young man who is an acquaintance. Then they complain because he failed to speak. A young man cannot politely speak or bow to a woman until she gives him permission by recognizing him with a bow or smile. Do your part graciously toward cultivating acquaintances and friendships that promise to be congenial and enjoyable.

You will find it is necessary to go half-way in this world. Invite a little group of friends to your home now and then for a game of bridge or an informal Sunday afternoon tea. Make them feel at home and comfy—see that they have a jolly time.

When invitations come from young men, try to get that "love" idea out of your mind, supplanting it with the friendship and pal idea. Do not turn down a man's invitation because he does not fascinate you. If he is trustworthy and suitable, go about with him and give yourself a chance to become better acquainted and like him.

Know about what you want in the way of friendship material—choose those friends who are likely to satisfy your expectations and "wear well." Then earn their friendship with your own attractive charm and loyalty.

If you build up a circle of staunch friends and comrades among worthwhile girls and young men, and do your share toward the good-humored good times of the "crowd," you will find love will take care of itself and you will, in all probability, win for yourself the deep and unchanging affection of a man who is truly suitable as your fiance and husband.

Use Wisdom in Gaining Child's Confidence

By L. Lamar Matthews

ELIA'S mother is greatly distressed over the girl's attitude toward her.

"She never wants to be with me," the mother declared. "If she is in the house she is reading or sleeping or telephoning. I have asked her a hundred times to sit and talk with me, but she always has some excuse that takes her out of the house or to another part of it."

L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

The mother unwittingly gave the reason for Elia's indifference to her in that statement, "I have asked her a hundred times."

The girl is one of those perverse creatures who unconsciously recoil from doing the things that they are urged to do.

For instance the mother decides that Elia should see a certain person in regard to a business matter. Elia agrees that it is a good suggestion. Next day the mother inquires if Elia has seen the man. No, not yet. After that, when the subject is brought up Elia draws that elusive mental veil over her face and presents a masked countenance.

Elia announced recently that she was going every day to a gymnasium and take some exercises that she especially needed. Her mother greeted the announcement with delight and proceeded to talk about it at length. Elia immediately lost interest, and her mother is still talking and wondering why her daughter is so stubborn about doing anything that is for her own good.

In order to retain her popularity among her friends and her success in business, the girl is obliged to be agreeable. Besides outsiders don't give a hang whether she looks after her own welfare or not.

If the mother had the sense and the will power to turn the tables on Miss Elia she would soon notice a change in the girl's attitude. If she were always too busy to bother with Elia's conversations or her errands; if she expressed neither pleasure nor disapproval about the girl's business and social affairs she would soon have the girl seeking her attention and her counsel.

Most people have a streak of perversity in them. Some have more than their share of it; but it is a thing that feeds and grows on arguments and scoldings.

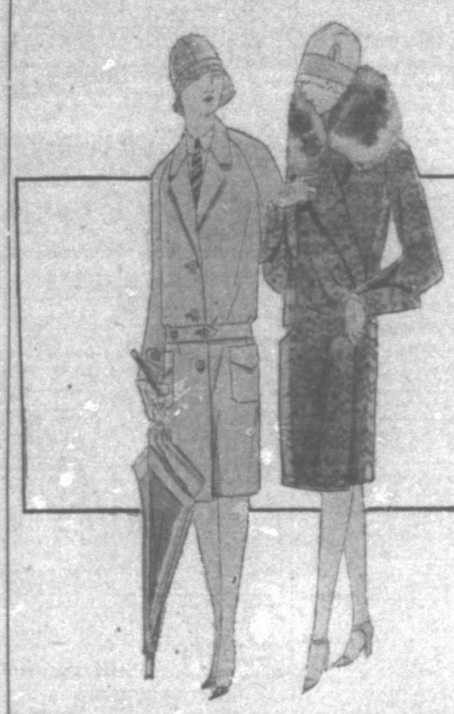

When a child is possessed with this maddening quality a parent often has the impulse to slap it out of him. But that can't be done.

The only way to battle with perversity is to treat it with indifference. Ignore the question that brought on the balking and ignore the youngster for a while. When a child—little or big—realizes that he is free to follow his own sweet will in a certain matter, but that he will also take the consequences undisturbed, he is not quite so anxious to follow the said sweet will.

It is rather unusual to suggest the use of wiles and cunning in the management of children, but it never does any harm to be "as wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove."

Two Smart Overcoats

Republished by Special Arrangement with Good Housekeeping

THE girl who is planning a Fall wardrobe that will be smart, practical and inexpensive, cannot do better than to have two coats of the type pictured here. They will serve almost any purpose and always look well.

The one at the left is the indispensible bad-weather coat. It is rubberized, lined in plaided silk and has two large patch pockets.

The dress coat is of a tweed mixture. It has deep pockets, deep slit cuffs and a soft fur collar. It is lined in satin and buttoned on one side. It would be most attractive in tan, green, gray or rose mixtures.

TAKE courage! Any craven soul can help to fill the world with dole, can make lament, can sigh and doubt and all hope's happy fancies flout. Oftimes it is an easy thing to dim the emerald joy of Spring, to mute the meadow lark's refrain with man's insistent fear and pain. With fear and pain, that sombre pair who ever as their burden bear a weight to crush away all good, a shade to dull the brightest mood. Take courage! Any craven heart can play the shrinking coward's part; but, ah, how few indeed are they who face what comes, serene and gay! Wear courage like a crimson rose or amulet kind fate bestows, and learn how it can charm away the doubts and sorrows of the day!

Fashion Fads and Fancies

By Mildred Ash

STRANDS of golden glory used to be a poetic way of describing the beauty of a woman's hair; but now it is equally applicable to her costume jewelry. Among the smartest novelties is a set of earrings, necklet and bracelet created from numerous strands of gold. The broad choker and the cuff-like armlet, each has a huge, brightly-colored semi-precious stone in its clasp.

Festively Fashionable are quilted bags of flowered, glazed chintz, when carried with light Summer frocks. The tiny floral pattern shows each individual flower like a square or quilting. These underarm bags are flat, large and rectangular.

Paris Grows Primitive in her playful hours, for evening wear, she dons hose that are practically invisible—so evenly are they matched to the bare skin. To blend with tones of neck and arms for Summer evenings, the sunburned shades, with a softening touch of rose, are very smart. Paler colorings, such as fresh or pearl blush, are also greatly favored.

"Wild and Wooly" are the latest sports suits of English woolens in the sprightliest new shades, known as "tango tangerine." This bright color, on the tomato tone, is most flattering to brunettes.

Aiming at Animation, the newest colored effects show pleats made of separate sections or slashed so as to hang and move like fringe. These unique swinging pleats are seen on many of the imported frocks.

True to Blue, Parisian stylists are using a very rich, deep, bright shade for the unlined evening wraps to be worn for formal use during the Summer.

Cheering Cherry Time welcomes is sounded for the artificial as well as the real variety. Not more delicious appear the cherries in the fruit stores than those worn in clusters as boutonnieres. Not only are red cherries the rage, but those of black, green, white and other colors are "among those present."

Paris Prefers Plain Pumps for tailored and for afternoon wear. No buckle is used, but the severity is sometimes relieved by inserts of contrasting leather. The heels are leather-covered and slender. Kid in beige, brown, gray or navy, reptile skin and patent leather are the leathers used for these plain pumps that French women are now choosing for daytime wear.

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Bonnie Asks for Help

"MY wife's maiden name was Hartley and she came from the western part of the United States," said Roy Scarlett.

ANN LISLE

It was hard to tell who looked more relieved, he or Folly, Duane. "Jill's mother was a Hathaway and of an English family," she repeated. She no longer tried to seem light and gay and to act as if the whole thing were highly amusing. Roy no longer seemed afraid to meet her eyes and still more afraid not to. He began to laugh. He turned to Bonnie Clair and said almost stridently:

"We four came down to Atlantic City to have a good time, not to sit around in stuffy grills. We'll have to start right after lunch tomorrow to make dead sure of your being at your club on time, Bon Bon Bonnie. Let's go out and have a look at the ocean, or dance on one of the piers or something. Come on boys and girls. I feel a hunger for the ocean breezes."

He seemed to have undergone a great change. He was so relieved that he was gay and prankish. But he didn't seem to feel the same need of Bonnie. It was as if she had gone back to her place as a mere incident in his life.

Bonnie's eyes were more than ever like incandescent lamps as she turned them on Folly. And the next day she managed a few moments alone with the little blonde.

"The kid's name isn't really Hathaway, is it?" she asked suddenly, linking her arm in Folly's and dragging her off for a stroll on the boardwalk while the men went around and got the car ready for the return trip.

"What are you talking about?" Folly laughed nervously.

"The thing I had on my mind to discuss with you when I told the boys to let us have these last few minutes of ocean breeze," Bonnie said carelessly. "I have a hunch that if the truth about Roy Scarlett's wife were known, he might not think her such a—wonderful partner for a man on his way up in the world—"

Folly laughed and her china blue eyes were hard and staring as she said carelessly:

"Want to marry Roy Scarlett, Bonnie?"

"Why not? Wouldn't you be glad to land Sam?"

There was a moment's silence, and then Folly said curtly: "I'm happy as I am. Sam likes me. I like him. No use stirring things up. Leave things as they are, when they are pleasant. That's my motto. Why do you have to be trying to destroy things, Bonnie? Why not leave Roy Scarlett's wife in peace. She doesn't interfere with you, does she?"

"Yes," said Bonnie fiercely. "I hate her."

"Love him much?" Folly asked.

"None of your business."

Folly's laugh tinkled. "Listen, Bonnie, you think Roy is safe and reliable and going ahead in the world and that you could do worse. But it don't pay to steal a man from his wife. The kind you can steal—can be stolen. The man who cheats his wife and quits her for another woman and all that stuff isn't the kind she can count on in a pinch. I'd leave Roy Scarlett alone if I were you."

"Take your own advice. Leave Sam alone."

"I—can't," Folly said breathlessly. "I've got to have something beside work and responsibility and poverty and trying to look out for Jill—"

"Whose real name was Hartley like Roy's wife's name," Bonnie asked, returning suddenly to the attack.

"Her name was just what I said," Folly replied stiffly. "Hathaway. From England. And Mrs. Scarlett was a Hartley from the West. No connection."

"Then why do they look enough alike to be sisters—or—mother and daughter?" Bonnie asked fiercely.

Her intention was clear. Her hope was just as evident. If the girl Jill could be used to drag Vivian Scarlett down, Roy would probably not stand by. He was on his way up. He wasn't the sort to stand by and let himself be splashed with the mud Bonnie wanted Folly to sling lavishly in Vivian's direction. And if his wife disgraced him and he had to cast her off, what a sympathetic role Bonnie could play. . . . Folly knew all about that game. She had played it herself. She had plenty of reason to be willing to play it now.

"I've no reason to consider Mrs. Scarlett," she said half to herself, and with the hint of a sneer. I don't owe her a good turn."

"Then you'll help me—get rid of her?" Bonnie asked avidly.

"Get rid of her," Folly repeated slowly, thoughtfully. After a moment she gave an odd laugh. "What a strange word to use. It sounds positively—murderous. How can I help you, Bonnie? You got ahead of me. You see what was worrying me was that Mrs. Scarlett might be one of Jill's family—have a claim—take my little ward from me. . . . But now that I know she was a Hartley—I'm simply not interested in her. She's nothing to me for good or ill. Nothing," she added fiercely and as if she might be trying to convince herself.

Psychology of the Child Who Will Not Eat

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOUR child may be one of those, to whom I have repeatedly alluded, who will not progress in diet from milk to solids.

CHARLES A.L. REED, M.D.

This is nearly always purely a psychological problem. At least there is always a purely psychological element in the case.

One type of these children is hanging back because he is afraid to go forward.

He is suffering from what some writers call a "fixation," meaning a fixation of habit.

Milk is the easiest food to ingest. His parents urge him to eat to grow big. But the child's parents are to him an awful example of what he can expect to be like when he grows up. It is not surprising that in his unconscious self he shrinks from growth. Growth is symbolised for him by the new kind of food, which is therefore too terrible to have anything to do with. He will resist it with all the resources of devilry at his command. If he is overborne by force, he will vomit it and have the last word in the argument. Punishment is quite useless and artificial pacifiers are extremely harmful.

The truth is that the child is not to blame.

At that age he has practically no self-determination and is moulded entirely by the influence of his caretakers. They are solely responsible, not only for his apparent loss of appetite, but for the whole series of anti-social tendencies and abnormal manifestations which are known to psychologists as "negativism." The child does not need a doctor. He needs new parents or the parents require reformation. Of ten mothers one on an average can be brought to see the error of her ways; the rest pass from doctor to doctor and their children pass into adult life nervous, finicky, egotistical, self-centered, introspective and permanently unhappy.

The other type—the can't-eat and won't-eat child—is slightly under-nourished, more or less anaemic and often constipated and nervous. He sleeps badly and is disturbed by dreams. He bites his nails, eats all kinds of strange things and is addicted to a number of bad habits. He stands badly and has several very bad bodily conditions, such as a sagging belly, flat chest, stooping shoulders, winged shoulder blades, sprung knees and flat feet. Often he is forced to drink large quantities of milk in the hope that it will fatten him. Sometimes he prefers milk and will drink nothing else. His condition, although physically he has more ailments to show than the well-nourished type, is due to much the same errors of temperament.

There are certain things an intelligent mother can do for this psychological difficulty—but she must have firmness as well as judgment, just good sense, to make it effective.

No food should be given at bedtime, and under no circumstances should force, threats or promises be used. The child should be made, if possible, to have his meals with other children. The caretaker should offer him small portions and not judge what the child's appetite should be by her own. Refusal to treat him as an individual with an individual appetite may be the beginning of the trouble. A measure which sometimes helps is to get the child to rest in bed for about two hours in the afternoon. He need not necessarily sleep, but may play or read, or be read to. Postural treatment is necessary, for bad posture tires the child and increases the tendency to become worse. The remedy is sufficient mental and physical relaxation.

Correct MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

"Passing the Salt"

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I am a bride, and, like most brides, I am struggling with questions of a limited budget. But I do want my table to look nice. I am confronted with the problem of buying salts and peppers for my table. Is it necessary that I have one set for every person?

Thank you for answering this problem. A BRIDE.

NO. As a matter of fact, it is oftener arranged now that there shall be one set for every two people. That is, the set is placed between alternate covers.

And one of the great advantages of this is that it begins many a conversation among guests. Talking of the weather and "passing the salt" are the two greatest conversation-compelling items of social intercourse, I believe.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)
