More than 2 inches recorded this week

Hereford gets an inch of rain; more to fall today

Strong thunderstorms dumped heavy rainfall across a vast area of West Texas during the night, triggering flash flooding in the Panhandle and South Plains, according to Associated Press reports.

Amarillo got more than two inches of rain that triggered flash flooding. Flash flooding was also reported in and north of Littlefield in Lamb County.

Hereford had .95 of an inch, according to a report from KPAN, official weather station here. While the station recorded .17 of an inch Sunday, 1.02 inch Monday and .01 of an inch Tuesday, some areas of the county have received more rainfall. Reports Monday ranged up to 3 inches of rain west of Hereford.

Forecasts call for the showers and thunderstorms to continue tonight and Friday. Locally heavy rainfall is possible over the Panhandle, South Plains, Permian Basin and in extreme West Texas tonight.

Some patchy light rain fell across western portions of North Texas early today. Most of the rain was confined to a small area from Bowie northeastward to the Red River.

Forecasts call for a chance of thunderstorms to continue in western sections of North Texas tonight and in eastern portions on Friday.

There is a chance of isolated to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms in South Texas through Friday.

It will be partly cloudy over the entire state.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s in West Texas, the 70s in North Texas and in the 70s and 80s in South Texas.

Highs Friday will be in the 80s and 90s in West Texas, ranging upward to near 105 in the Big Bend area and in the 90s elsewhere across the state.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s in West Texas and in the 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 65 at Amarillo to 81 at Beaumont.

Unaffected by weather

Celeste Louder, 8, and her brother, Nathan, 6, didn't let a little rain get in the way of their playing on Wednesday afternoon. The two simply grabbed a couple of umbrellas to escape the sporadic rains that fell during the afternoon and kept riding their bikes near their house. The 0.95 of an inch of rain that fell here yesterday brings to more than 2 inches the total rainfall this week. Celeste and Nathan are children of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Louder.

Flooding worse in Midwest as rain continues to fall

DENTON, Texas (AP) - As torrential rains continue to pound the Midwest, worsening flooding and dampening spirits, federal disaster workers are taking up to 4,000 calls a day from families seeking assistance.

Since Minnesota, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, and Illinois were declared federal disaster areas, calls have been pouring into the Federal Emergency Management Agency's national teleregistration center in Denton.

The center takes calls from around the United States for federal assistance whenever the government declares a major disaster.

"We are the initial entry point into the disaster relief system," said Glenn Garcelon, director of the center.

Garcelon said Wednesday about 300 staff members have been called in to help answer phones. Usually, about 30 people would handle the workload.

"We've registered about 6,300 families for assistance and taken approximately twice the number of calls," Garcelon said.

Anyone with disaster-related damage, regardless of personal income, is eligible for assistance, Garcelon said.

The most available type of relief is in the form of low-interest loans. However, grants are also available for people who cannot repay a loan, Garcelon said.

Under one program, if a house is damaged so much that people cannot live in it, the government will pay the rent for a temporary residence.

"Our purpose isn't really to make people whole or to take them back to the point where they were before the disaster, but to give them what they need to put them back on their feet," he said.

Garcelon said the time period in which flood victims will begin receiving assistance differs, from three days for certain grants up to 60 days for loans.

Damage estimates have put the flood's cost in the $3 billion range - about $2 billion for destruction of crops and $1 billion in other property damage. In addition, more than 30,000 people have been flooded out of their homes.

Although many callers have lost their homes, livelihoods, and even family members in the devastation, Garcelon said most have remained positive and upbeat about their situation.

"It's a real pleasure dealing with these kinds of people," he said. "We have all kinds of people who are at the end of their rope, and as the days wear on, those will increase. But at the moment, everyone is still real positive.

"These people have water up to the gutter on their roofs, and they want to say they were one of the lucky ones."

Dissatisfied customer sent to pen for hitting waitress

HOUSTON (AP) - A man who didn't like the way a cheeseburger was prepared has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for striking a waitress with a ketchup bottle so hard that it broke her jaw.

Donnis Ray Hancock, 24, received the sentence Wednesday. He won't become eligible for parole until 1995 because jurors ruled that the ketchup bottle was a deadly weapon.

Hancock, a former convict, was arrested Feb. 26 following an incident at a Houston restaurant. Authorities said Hancock, his common-law wife and their child were at the restaurant and ordered a cheeseburger for the child.

Prosecutor Vanessa Velasquez said Hancock first had the sandwich sent back to the kitchen because it had the wrong kind of cheese. Then it was sent back again because it didn't have onions. The third time it was sent back was because it lacked pickles.

The first waitress then left and was replaced by Tiffany Loraine Davenport, 17, who then became the object of Hancock's wrath.

Ms. Davenport said Hancock told her: "I need some ketchup, bitch."

The waitress said she pointed to a nearby condiment table, and when Hancock came back with a bottle of ketchup, she asked him, "Did you get what you needed."

"Don't cop an attitude with me, bitch," Hancock told her, the waitress said.

"I'm not a bitch, and I don't have an attitude problem," she said she responded.

The prosecutor said that Hancock then smashed the bottle into the left side of her head, breaking her jaw and driving her pearl earring so deeply into the side of her face that it had to be surgically removed.

The waitress said she lost six weeks of work and had to have her jaws wired together so the broken bones could heal.

Two sentenced to prison time in 222nd court here

Two defendants were sentenced to prison during hearings in 222nd District Court Wednesday.

Maria DeJesus "Mary" Castillo will serve a seven-year term in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division on revocation of her probation. Her original conviction was for aggravated assault.

After pleading guilty to two charges of felony driving while intoxicated, Raymond Dennis Martinez, 29, received 10-year sentences on each charge. He was committed to the TDCJ substance abuse punishment facility.

AHA calls for health efforts along border

WASHINGTON (AP) - The president of the American Health Association says health conditions along the U.S.-Mexico border are a "ticking time bomb" and that efforts to combat the Third World diseases found there are long overdue.

The AMA and its head, Dr. Joseph Painter, Wednesday endorsed legislation that would create a binational health commission to coordinate disease prevention efforts along the 2,000-mile border.

Without such a commission, health conditions will not improve in a region marred by poverty, pollution and inadequate infrastructure, Painter and several lawmakers said at a Capitol news conference.

"The public health consequence of drastic population growth and poor environmental conditions are staggering," said the bill's author, Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso. Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., is sponsoring the measure in the Senate.

"Hepatitis is three to four times more prevalent in the border region than it is in the rest of the country," said Coleman, who chairs the Congressional Border Caucus.

"Tuberculosis, shigellosis, rabies and even leprosy are real public health threats in the border region of our country."

Painter, whose organization four years ago identified the border area as a "virtual cesspool and breeding ground for infectious disease," said the implications are national.

Outbreaks of salmonella infections in Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey and several Canadian provinces in 1991 were traced back to produce from the Rio Grande Valley. Similarly, an outbreak of measles in Washington state was traced back to Mexico.

"We can already see vestiges of what is happening with the rates of diseases such as hepatitis, dysentery, tuberculosis rising on our side of the border as well as across the border," Painter told reporters.

"We can see sporadic outbursts that are occurring across this nation of similar diseases as people travel to other parts of the country and spread the disease."

Said Rep. Bob Filner, D-Calif.: "This is an American health problem."

Dr. David Smith, commissioner of the Texas Department of Health, said that the medical community alone cannot reverse the border's health woes.

"We need to have business at the table, we need to have universities and others," he said. "Because if we just play in the health sandbox, we won't fix this problem. We're too myopic."

Smith, who was a National Health Service Corps physician in Brownsville for several years, said that conditions won't improve unless the underlying factors are corrected.

Judge continues Baby Jane case again; sets another hearing July 27

Declining to appoint a special investigator to seek the parents of Deaf Smith Baby Jane, Judge David Wesley Gulley Monday set a hearing for July 27 to determine if full custody of the infant will be placed in the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

Since last spring, Judge Gulley has conducted hearings at specified intervals to fulfill legal requirements before ruling on the petition of the state to terminate the rights of the unknown parents of the infant, found in an incinerator on March 18.

Judge Gulley announced Wednesday that he would hold a hearing on the merits of the state's petition at 9:30 a.m. on July 27, expecting to rule on the matter at that time.

Attorneys appointed by the judge the represent the interests of the unknown parents, R.C. Hoelscher for the mother and Jerry Smith for the father, indicated they need more time.

Hoelscher urged the judge to appoint an independent investigator although the Deaf Smith County sheriff's department is continuing an investigation in an attempt to determine parentage of the infant.

Deputy Coby Lassiter testified Wednesday morning that several leads have been followed. He said an attempt is being made to obtain telephone records to trace a call that was made to an answering machine in Dimmitt.

However, if the call was within the Dimmitt exchange, no record will be available, he said. Only records of long distance calls are kept, he said.

Smith asked for information which Lassiter indicated was confidential, related to informants he has talked to. He also asked about possible grand jury involvement in the case.

Judge Gulley reminded that grand jury work is secret and said he believes it is "not appropriate to get into criminal investigation" in a civil matter.

Smith suggested that "we (attorneys appointed by the court) are being short-circuited in our representation" because all the information is not available to them.

Hoelscher asked Lassiter for the name the deputy had been given of a woman at a truck stop who might have information, saying that the media could be of assistance by announcing her name.

Again, Judge Gulley interceded by suggesting that names may be confidential to the investigator.

Jim English, assistant criminal district attorney for Deaf Smith County, is handling the case for the Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

"I think we've gone the extra mile and the case should be set for trial," said English.

Larry Canada, appointed to represent the baby, said he is in favor of acting "as quickly as possible."

Before calling Lassiter to testify, English questioned a TDP&RS specialist, Lauri Paetzold, about the health and well-being of the infant, who was abandoned on March 18 and found by two workers in an animal clinic incinerator just outside the Hereford city limits.

The specialist testified that the baby is growing satisfactorily and has had no illnesses. The baby is in foster care in a home outside Deaf Smith County.

She also said that information had been given to a "locator" service operated by the Texas Attorney General in a further attempt to identify the baby's parents.

Clinton pledges quick action on question of gays serving openly in U.S. military

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton is promising a quick decision on the contentious issue of homosexuals serving openly in the military as White House and Pentagon officials work out the final details of a proposal.

"My sense is there's still some difference of opinion even among the service chiefs about what they want. But I hope they'll come up with something that everyone can agree is fair," Clinton said Wednesday.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin and White House advisers David Gergen and George Stephanopoulos conferred late into the evening at the Pentagon over Aspin's impending recommendation.

Today was the deadline imposed by Clinton six months ago for a Pentagon proposal on how to end the 50-year ban.

The president said his final decision "won't take long at all" once he has received the proposal. Clinton, who spent Wednesday touring flooded regions of the Midwest, spoke in an interview on Cable News Network.

Aspin has told White House officials that the Joints Chiefs of Staff will only accept a policy that allows homosexuals to serve as long as they refrain from public or private declarations of their sexual orientation, according to sources in the gay community.

The policy would allow some latitude for gay service men and women to confide in close friends, said the sources, who received their information from senior Defense Department officials.

That's similar to the "don't ask, don't tell" policy put forth by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who has been a leading defender on Capitol Hill of the current ban.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff voted two weeks ago for a policy that retains the current statement that "homosexuality is incompatible with military service."

But Aspin reportedly has decided on a slightly different wording that describes "homosexual conduct" as incompatible with military service, but would recognize that gay people have served honorably and will do so in the future.

Clinton faces strong congressional opposition to any plan that lacks the support of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and top military leaders.

Meanwhile, four members of the House Armed Services Committee urged Clinton to reject any compromise proposal that contains the provision that homosexuality is incompatible with military service.

Brothers kill father for abuse of sister

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Lonnie Dutton's children stuck together, sometimes squeezing in four to a seat on the school bus.

This week, the two oldest boys, ages 12 and 15, acted as one again, deciding it was time to put an end to their father's alleged sexual abuse of their 10-year-old sister.

One held a deer rifle to his sleeping father's head, the other pulled the trigger, a lawyer for one of the youngsters says.

"Probably both were so scared neither one knew what to do separately," said Robert Perrine, the 12-year-old's court-appointed attorney.

Several times authorities had been to Dutton's rural home outside Rush Springs, a town of 1,200 about 50 miles southwest of Oklahoma City, to investigate relatives' allegations the unemployed, divorced man was abusing his three sons and his daughter.

On Monday, they found the 39-year-old dead on his couch, killed by a shot fired at close range.

The two boys are in the custody of juvenile authorities and probably will not be tried as adults, Assistant District Attorney Richard Van Dyck said. The state has turned their sister and 8-year-old brother over to an aunt.

Van Dyck said he could not otherwise comment on the case because it involved minors. But Sarah Evans, a lawyer for the 15-year-old, said the four were sexually, physically and emotionally abused, and the sexual abuse of their sister particularly disturbed the older boys.

The children were apparently too afraid of their father to say anything to the authorities who came to their home on a secluded, brushy piece of property to try to help, said Bill Chambers, the principal at the oldest boy's school.

A member of the football and basketball teams, the teen-ager gave no hint of problems at home, Chambers said. The principal said the only time he had to take the 15-year-old to task was when he heard the boy was throwing a basketball on the bus. The boy stopped.

"He was just an all-American, apple pie little boy," Chambers said.

The children had been isolated since school let out for the summer, forbidden by their father to bring friends over or to go to friends' homes, Chambers said.

"His dad taught him to stay to himself," Chambers said of the oldest boy. "I guess when it came to handling his problem, he solved it himself, just like he had been taught."

People in town remark on the similarity to a case 15 miles away in Cement last summer. Fifteen-year-old Billie Joe Powell was put on probation for shooting her sleeping father to death after years of sexual abuse. Townspeople raised the money for her bail.

People in Grady County appear as supportive of the Dutton boys.

"A lot of people are saying, 'If he did what they said he did, something needed to be done,'" said Joe Tunnell, football coach at Rush Springs High.

Former county road chief admits to crimes in Clovis

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) - Former Curry County road superintendent Jack LaMay has pleaded guilty to a racketeering charge after being accused of rigging bids and receiving more than $20,000 in bribes and kickbacks.

LaMay, 58, who entered the plea Tuesday, could receive up to 12 years in prison and be ordered to pay a $20,000 fine and restitution.

He agreed to cooperate with the state in its ongoing investigation of the county's road department, and in all federal investigations, said his plea and disposition agreement that was approved Tuesday by state District Judge Stephen Quinn.

Sentencing will be delayed to allow him to help investigators, and he is free on $10,000 bail. He was road superintendent from 1989 until April 1993.

Prosecutors agreed not to bring charges of solicitation of bribes, receiving kickbacks, fraud in excess of $2,500, criminal conspiracy, criminal solicitation and submitting false public vouchers, according to the agreement.

The road department probe began April 22. LaMay was demoted April 6 from superintendent to construction foreman and resigned May 24.

"There are many other aspects of the investigation that have to be addressed," said Jim Skinner, chief investigator for the district attorney's office in Clovis. He declined to elaborate.

Special prosecutor Fred Smith of Santa Fe said Wednesday that a Curry County grand jury was empaneled Tuesday, and prosecutors would present evidence, which he declined to discuss.

County records show the road agency was $1.14 million over budget during the time LaMay ran the department.

Skinner said in a criminal complaint that LaMay was associated with questionable acts including "misuse of public monies in building caliche roads, unauthorized use of county road equipment, alleged procurement code violations and other procedures committed within the Curry County Road Department."

LaMay had "confessed that he had committed several felony crimes, including rigging bids with certain vendors for equipment sales to Curry County," the complaint says.

He also admitted to soliciting bribes and receiving kickbacks and writing equipment and service bids to ensure that certain contractors were awarded contracts, the complaint says.

He also admitted "falsifying the reports of services rendered by certain contractors to Curry County, to enable the contractor to be paid a larger amount than actually earned," the complaint says.

"LaMay stated that he had received in excess of $20,000 in total, in the form of kickbacks and bribes while employed as the Curry County Road Department superintendent," the complaint says.

The contractors or vendors were not identified in the complaint .

The complaint says that on one occasion in 1989, LaMay acknowledged participating "in rigging a bid with a particular company, in which he helped this company obtain a contract to sell several vehicles to Curry County for over $100,000."

"LaMay related that he also conspired with the company to ensure that they received a contract on another bid that Curry County let in the spring of 1990," the complaint says.

O'Leary tours Pantex

WASHINGTON (AP) - Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary will tour Pantex in one of her first visits to a nuclear weapons complex plant operated by her department.

She will tour the plant Thursday at the invitation of Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, and local officials. Located about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, Pantex is the nation's primary assembly and disassembly plant for nuclear weapons.

"This represents a real key to our efforts to expand the scope of Department of Energy operations at Pantex by getting Secretary O'Leary to Amarillo to view first-hand the facilities and activities that are conducted here," Sarpalius said.

In addition to touring Pantex, O'Leary will meet with DOE employees there and will attend a meeting of local citizens and officials interested in the plant's activities.

Pantex is under consideration for possible expansion or elimination under an Energy Department plan to clean up, downsize and modernize the plants that once produced America's nuclear arsenal.

The University of Texas System, Texas A&M University System and Texas Tech are proposing creation of a statewide research consortium to lure more work to Pantex. The consortium would research peaceful applications of weapons technology.

Surprise testimony ends case against Bustamante

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Surprise testimony from a former San Antonio city councilwoman has concluded the government's case against former congressman Albert Bustamante and his attorney wife, Rebecca.

Now, Bustamante says, he wants to tell his side of the story.

U.S. District Judge Ed Prado said he would rule today on a defense motion asking for an acquittal. Defense attorneys were preparing to present their case if the request is denied.

"We'll be ready," Bustamante said.

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday after former city councilwoman Maria Berriozabal testified Bustamante tried to influence her on a vote to award a delinquent tax collection contract to Heard Goggan Blair & Williams, the law firm where Rebecca Bustamante works.

Prosecutors claim Bustamante received "illegal gratuities" in the form of payments to his wife from the firm, which received the delinquent tax contract though Ms. Berriozabal voted against it.

Bustamante, who lost his re-election bid last year after eight years in Congress, is charged in a 10-count indictment alleging he received $344,000 in several illegal schemes. Mrs. Bustamante is charged in seven counts with aiding and abetting her husband.

Prosecutors allege Mrs. Bustamante did no work for more than $275,000 she received from delinquent tax contracts with the city and the South San Antonio School District.

Ms. Berriozabal, whom Bustamante described as a "surprise" government witness and "my friend Maria," was a city councilwoman for 10 years until her unsuccessful run for mayor in 1991.

She testified that before the delinquent tax collection vote in May 1985, Albert Bustamante called her and discussed the contract during a five-minute telephone conversation.

"I thought he was calling from Washington," she said. "He just told me the firm of Oliver Heard (Heard Goggan Blair & Williams) was a good firm, it would do a good job for the city."

Ms. Berriozabal said at the time she did not know Mrs. Bustamante was a lawyer in the firm and that Mrs. Bustamante had not approached her about the contract. Ms. Berriozabal said she told Albert Bustamante she opposed having a private firm collect delinquent taxes.

During questioning by defense attorney Tony Canales, Ms. Berriozabal said she did not consider the phone call unusual and that Bustamante "was calling about people he knew."

"Is there any evil suggested by that call from Albert Bustamante to you?" Canales asked.

"Uh, no," Ms. Berriozabal replied.

"Were you influenced by Albert Bustamante?" Canales asked.

"In that vote, no," she said.

Ms. Berriozabal agreed with Canales that the events and time that have passed since 1985 "could very well cloud your memory."

Bustamante later said outside the courtroom he called Ms. Berriozabal about a federal grant involving the city when he mentioned the delinquent tax contract.

"I said, 'By the way, on that hot potato, Oliver Heard's firm is a good firm,' " Bustamante said to reporters.

"What did I do? Did I lobby?" he added.

Bustamante said the long-running federal investigation figured into his election defeat and that he now is ready for his day in court.

"My family, they've suffered for four years," Bustamante said. "I've been called a crook."

Besides the tax contract allegations, Bustamante has been accused of:

-Receiving $35,000 for trying to help a friend's company renew an Air Force food service contract. Evidence shows Bustamante paid the money back.

-Accepting $30,000 through his wife from a subsidiary of a company run by the politically connected Jaffe family of San Antonio.

-Accepting a no-risk loan in an unsuccessful television station deal.

Navy Seaman Michael S. Drumm, son of Marcy A. Varner of 512 Avenue J, recently participated aboard the amphibious command ship USS Blue Ridge, flagship for the U.S. Seventh Fleet, forward deployed to Yokosuka, Japan in a port visit to Shimoda, Japan, and took part in commemorating the city's 54th annual Blackship Festival.

The Shimoda Blackship Festival is a three-day celebration featuring parades, one of the world's largest fireworks displays, and ceremonies reenacting the historic visit of Commodore Matthew C. Perry to Shimoda on July 8, 1853. It was Perry's visit with four U.S. Navy ships that began a series of negotiations which opened the door to trade between Japan and the Western World.

The term "Blackship" came about when the local residents thought the mysterious steam-powered black ships were piloted by barbarians coming to invade their land.

USS Blue Ridge is an amphibious command ship which has served as the flagship of the Seventh Fleet since 1979. One of only two in its class, USS Blue Ridge was designed to provide amphibious command and control in major amphibious operations.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Barbra Streisand went "Back to Broadway" and scored her first No. 1 record in eight years.

Miss Streisand's new album enters the Billboard chart this week in the top spot, bumping Janet Jackson out of the No. 1 place she's held for six weeks with "janet."

"Back to Broadway" was released June 29 and sold an estimated 120,000 copies in its first week. It was Miss Streisand's first album to reach No. 1 since her 1985 "The Broadway Album."

Visiting heart specialist seeing referred patients

Dr. Joaquin Martinez-Arraras is staying busy on his trips to Hereford, it was reported this week by Ron Rives, CEO of Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Dr. Martinez, a heart specialist from Amarillo, sees patients referred by Hereford physicians. He sees about 15 to 20 patients each time he has office hours here, every other week.

"Bringing this specialist in has worked well for our physicians and our patients," said Rives. "Our patients are saved a trip to Amarillo to consult a cardiologist, and our phuysicians have a specialist that they can confer with easily."

Dr. Martinez only sees patients referred by their family physician. "We appreciate our medical staff's support of this program," said Rives. "The success of this visiting specialist will make it easier to expand the program to include a variety of specialists in the future."

Dr. Martinez, who is bi-lingual in Spanish and English, was born in Madrid, Spain. He received his MD degree in Spain and completed internal medicine and cardiology residency and training in the U.S.

Over the past decade, the U.S. death rate from asthma rose by nearly 50 percent, according to recent reports from the Centers for disease Control and Prevention. About 12 million Americans suffer from the suffocating disease, including 2.7 million children.

Joe Don Cummings named as best Toastmaster speaker

Joe Don Cummings was selected as the best speaker when the Hereford Toastmasters Club met July 8 at the Ranch House. His topic, "The Greatest Fear," was evaluated by Sharon Cramer.

Cramer was named best evaluator and Ed Gilbert was chosen best topic speaker.

Rick Jackson, who presided over the meeting, led the pledge and Bob Lohr gave the invocation.

Joe Weaver served as Toastmaster; Art Gonzales, timer; Dee Hamilton, "ah" counter; Ed Gilbert, wordmaster; Ralph Barndt, grammarian; and "thwart", the chosen word.

Jackson was topicmaster at the meeting and topic speakers included Winget, Hamilton, Clint Savoini, Barndt, Dave Kimmel and Gilbert.

Lohr gave the reading entitled "The Greatest Quotes That Never Were Said." Hamilton told the joke and Kimmel served as the general evaluator.

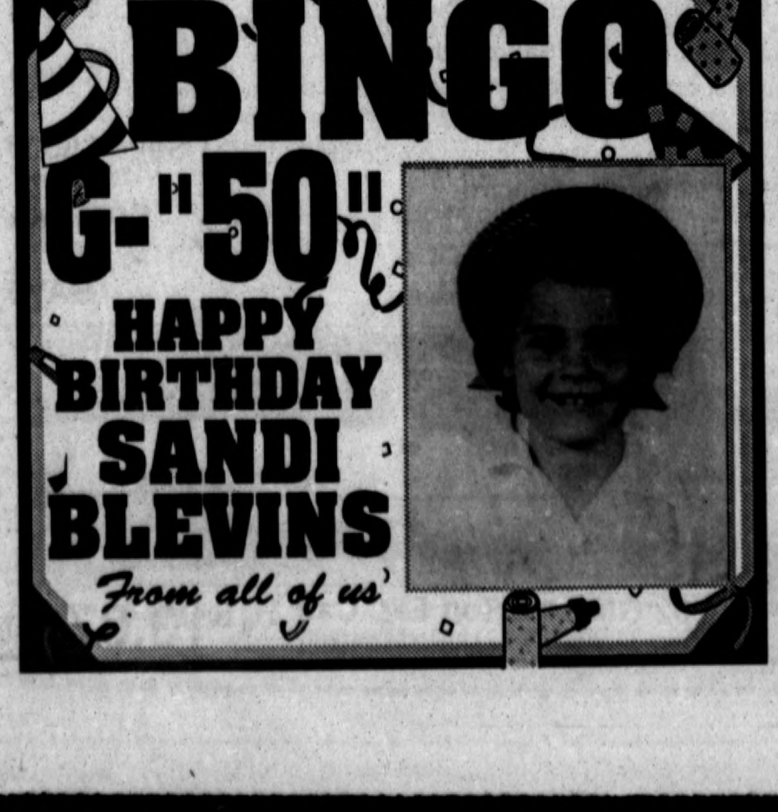

Guests included Paul Owen and Muhammad Arshad.

Babe Ruth All-Stars rained out

The recent steady rains may have been good for farmers, but not for baseball players.

Wednesday's action in both Babe Ruth regional tournaments in this area was canceled because of rain. Coaches wouldn't know until this afternoon if games would be played tonight.

Hereford's 13-year-old All-Stars, playing in the tournament in Canyon, were rained out for the second straight night. Hereford, with one loss in the double-elimination tournament, needs two wins when play resumes to win the tournament. Plainview 2 hasn't lost yet, and could clinch the championship with just one win over Hereford.

Hereford's 14- and 15-year-old All-Stars lost on Tuesday in the opening game of the regional tournament in Plainview.

Five win scramble with 29

A fivesome composed of Cal Garrett, Steve Stevens, Dave Hopper, Dewayne Robbins and Lois Jones won the Wednesday Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course yesterday with a 29 on the front nine.

Second place with a score of 30 went to the team of Dave Workman, George Atridge, Mary Shelton, Charles Hoover and Charlotte Clark.

Two teams shot a 31. Winning third prize on a scorecard playoff was the team of Jeff O'Rand, Hugh Blakey, Tony Edwards, and David and D.R. Bone. The other 31 score was posted by Craig Nieman, Leland Shelton, Speedy Nieman and Cal Mitts.

The winning team last week was composed of Paul Hubbard, Lynn Jones, Perry Ray, Martha Jones and Jeff Torbert. Second place was won by Steve Sanders, Hugh Blakey, Herbert Castillo, Robert Kubacak and Rose Marie Robinson. Finishing third was Carlos Mendez, Speedy Nieman, Leland Shelton, Dave Bone and Lillie Shipman.

Golf pro Dave Kaesheimer reported the following golfers were leading the point totals for season: Steve Stevens 24, Paul Hubbard 20, Dewayne Robbins 18, Charles Hoover 18, John Robinson 17, Speedy Nieman 16, Robert Kubacak 15, and Perry Ray 15.

Junior-Senior golf tourney set

The Junior-Senior Tournament will be played Sunday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Each two-man team must include one player older than 50 and one player younger than 50.

The tournament is flighted by total handicap. There will be a shotgun start at 1 p.m.

The $20 entry fee does not include green fee or cart. Call the Pitman pro shop at 364-2782 to sign up or to get more information.

Rains ease conditions at British Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SANDWICH, England (AP) - Overnight rains and continuing showers today changed the nature of the course and invited an American move early in the first round of the British Open.

But while Larry Mize, Paul Azinger and other early starters took advantage of the more favorable scoring conditions, the rain clogged and delayed traffic.

With tens of thousands of automobiles winding through 11-foot wide medieval lanes in Sandwich and Deal, and over the similarly narrow farm roads leading to Royal St. George's, a 20-minute drive became an hour trek.

At their destination, spectators dressed in rain gear, rubber boots and sporting umbrellas, found a quagmire of slick, slippery mud around the clubhouse and exhibition tents.

Unpleasant and inconvenient as it may have been for the hardy spectators, however, the chilly, wet weather was nothing but a benefit to the 156 men chasing the title in the oldest of all golf's championships.

And the principal beneficiary was the American contingent, which has won only one of the last nine British Opens.

The rain changed, softened and eased the old course spread out on sandhills overlooking Pegwell Bay on England's east coast and the customarily strong winds subsided into gentle breezes.

Fairways that in practice rounds were firm and fast and sent shots skittering through the short grass into the knee-deep stuff, became softer, more forgiving. Shots hit into the proper places tended to stay there.

Hard, fast greens that demanded the run-up approach common to British golf, absorbed the rain and, instead of rejecting the high approach, became soft and accepting.

In short, a traditional British course took on a much more American character: the bump and run approach gave way to target golf.

The change, however, did absolutely nothing to blunt the seemingly inexorable move of defending champion Nick Faldo.

The English star birdied three in a row beginning on No. 5 and played the front nine in 3-under 32.

Mize, who earlier this year recorded his first victory since the 1987 Masters, was out in 31. Azinger was one shot back at 32.

Mark Calcavecchia, the last American winner in the tournament, and Duffy Waldorf each played the front in 33.

John Daly, the massive hitter who stunned the British when he cut the corner and drove the green on the 421-yard, par-4 fifth hole in practice Wednesday, was unable to duplicate the feat in actual competition.

Daly again cut the corner, but didn't bite off quite so much this time and was about 80 yards short with his drive. He pitched on, then three-putted for a bogey.

Other early pace-setters included Peter Senior of Australia, 31; Gary Evans of England, 32; and Jesper Parnevik of Sweden, the winner of the Scottish Open last week, 32.

The rain eased nearing mid-day but the forecast called for heavy rains and possible thunderstorms in the afternoon.

Saints' cancer-stricken GM quits

By MICHAEL FLAM
Associated Press Writer

Jim Finks took over as president and general manager of New Orleans seven years ago, fighting for the Saints' football respectability. One year, a 12-3 record and a playoff berth later, Finks won that fight.

On Thursday, he resigned from the NFL team to spend his energies fighting for his life.

Finks was diagnosed with lung cancer in early May, and his roles in the front office were assumed by owner Tom Benson. Benson will continue in those capacities as Finks continues his reovery.

"I have received good reports from my doctors," Finks, 65, said Wednesday in a statement issued by Benson. "There is an opportunity for me to fight this disease, and that's what I intend to do."

Finks, who came within three votes of becoming NFL commissioner in 1989, will continue to serve as a consultant to the Saints and as a member of its board of directors.

"I've got seven-plus years of blood, sweat and tears invested with the Saints," Finks' statement said. "I'm proud to continue to be involved, and very proud of the people now running the organization."

Benson said "the door would be open" if Finks decided later to return to the club in some capacity.

San Francisco 49ers

Steve Young became the NFL's highest paid player when the team and his agent reached agreement on a five-year contract worth $26.5 million.

The two sides reached the accord after a lengthy negotiating session wednesday between Leigh Steinberg, Young's agent, and club president Carmen Policy. The talks were held at the club's headquarters in Santa Clara.

Dallas Cowboys

Alan Veingrad, veteran offensive lineman, he has decided to retire.

Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said Veingrad, an eight-year veteran, called him and said he has decided to go into private business.

The 6-5, 280-pound Veingrad played both guard and tackle in a backup role during the 1992 Super Bowl season. He was obtained in 1991 from the Packers through Plan B.

Padres new general manager has heard plenty of criticism

By BERNIE WILSON
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - San Diego Padres general manager Randy Smith, who continues to take heat for trading All-Star third baseman Gary Sheffield, knows all about criticism. After all, he spent some time in the peanut gallery, too.

Smith had the unique opportunity of learning the baseball business from his father, Tal, a former front-office executive who spent more than five seasons as general manager of the Houston Astros.

One of the lessons Smith learned from his dad - one he's trying to get Padres fans to understand - is that trades have to be made, for whatever reason.

"There were times when I thought he was making a mistake, but he turned out to be right the majority of the time," Randy Smith recalled.

The deal that stands out is the one in which Tal Smith sent left-hander Floyd Bannister to the Seattle Mariners for shortstop Craig Reynolds in December 1978.

"I'd been preached to and preached to that the only way to win in the Astrodome was with pitching, speed and defense," the younger Smith said. "He had a left-handed power pitcher that he traded for a shortstop I wasn't familiar with. Reynolds was the guy that cemented the infield and gave us a team that won in 1980. He was the missing link."

Said Tal Smith, "He had his opinion on things and he was a big critic of some of my deals. But for the most part, he didn't intrude. He was a model son in that respect. He had great interest but deferred comment in most cases, and would ask questions for his own enlightenment."

All that interest paid off for Smith, who became the youngest GM in major-league history when the Padres hired him on June 9, six days before his 30th birthday. He traded Sheffield to the Florida Marlins on June 24, and has tried to shake off criticism ever since.

"I think all the fans want in San Diego is a winner," Smith said. "If we produce and put a winner out there, all this stuff will be forgotten and we'll go on."

Smith has been exposed to baseball since he was a toddler. Even when his playing career was derailed by an arm injury as a high school senior, he knew exactly where he was heading.

"I wanted to be an executive and eventually become a GM. That was the only thing I ever wanted to do," he said.

So while others his age were playing college ball or struggling in the minors, Smith was helping his dad, by then a consultant, researching salary arbitration cases and reading scouting reports.

"In his early 20s he probably knew as much or more about arbitration than most people in the game," Tal Smith said.

With the exception of 1 1/2 years as the Colorado Rockies assistant GM, Smith has spent his entire career with the Padres.

He started as an administrative assistant at Class AA Beaumont, Texas, when he was 20, and joined the big-league front office in September 1984. He rose from assistant director of scouting and minor leagues to scouting director, and thus signed many of the players currently in the Padres' system.

Smith was San Diego's top choice when Joe McIlvaine stepped down as GM.

"I've spent 30 years around the game and 10 years of it at the club level," Smith said. "I feel I was ready for the challenge."

So does his dad.

"He had to battle the age and nepotism labels, which frankly, I think is a burden," Tal Smith said. "The name may help you get your foot in the door, but after that it's tough. I think he's handled that very well. He's worked hard to get where he is."

Smith said he's consumed by baseball, even more so now that the Padres are rebuilding from within. For him, a 12-hour day is "a fairly short day."

"I like to work. I love the game," he said. "It's really the only thing that I ever talk about.

"If something happened and they said, 'There's no such thing as baseball anymore, what are you going to do?' then geez, I'd be in trouble."

Ryan pitches simulated game

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers will have to wait and see how Nolan Ryan feels after throwing 95 pitches in a simulated game before deciding when he'll come off the disabled list.

Ryan took part in the five-inning simulated game at Arlington Stadium Wednesday.

Earlier, Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy had projected a start for Ryan on Monday night at home against the Milwaukee Brewers if all went well in the simulated outing.

"He had no problems physically or anything, but the bottom line is that no determination has been made yet on whether he will pitch Monday," said John Blake, Rangers' vice president for public relations.

Blake said that after his stint on the mound, Ryan fielded ground balls for a while, again with no physical problems.

Ryan went onto the disabled list earlier in the season for arthroscopic knee surgery, and came back for one start before going back onto the DL with an injured hip. While rehabilitating from that injury, he cut his foot when he stepped on the blade of a water ski.

Eight players hit off Ryan in the simulated game - Jeff Frye, Jeff Huson, Jon Shave, Butch Davis, Geno Petralli, Mario Diaz, Doug Dascenzo and John Russell.

Blake said the Rangers didn't put a radar gun on Ryan to see how hard he was throwing.

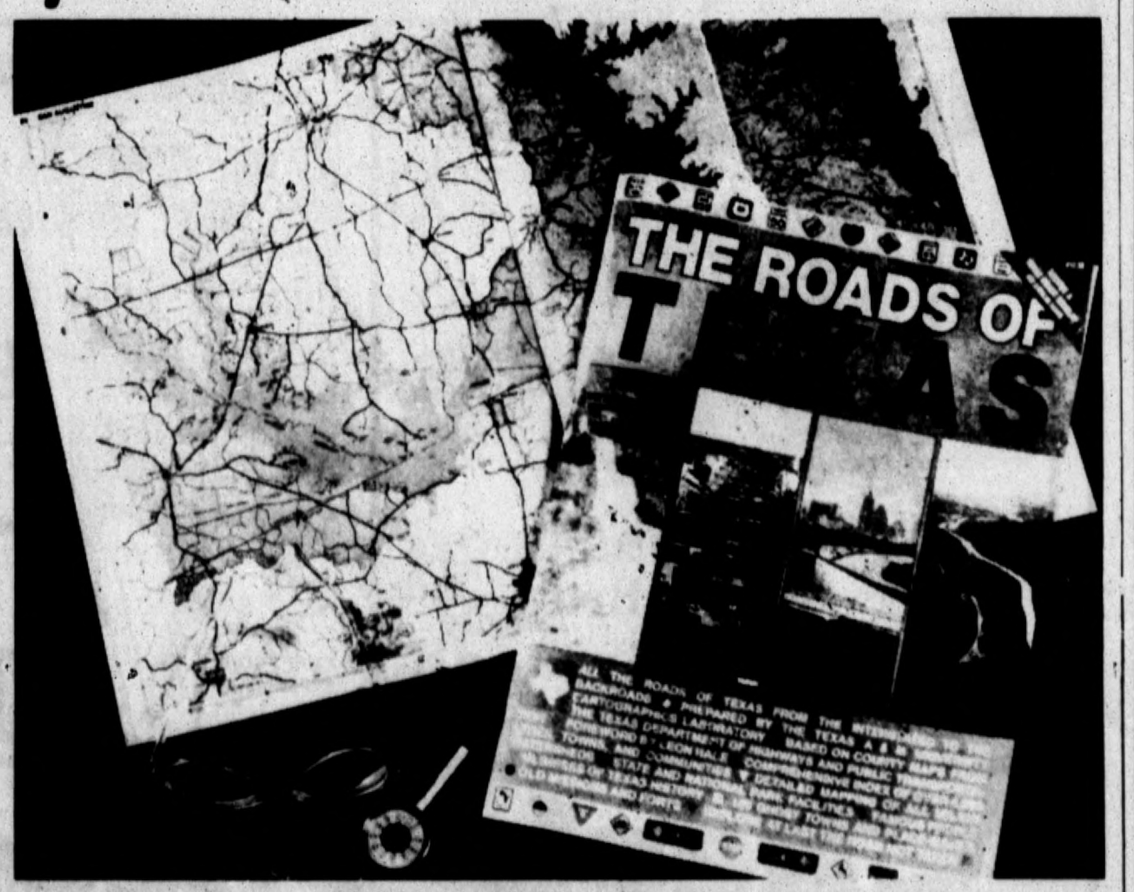

In a roster move after the workout, the Rangers activated infielder Jeff Huson from the 15-day disabled list and optioned Shave, also an infielder, to Oklahoma City of the American Association.

The Texas Rangers and Cleveland Indians are scheduled to play in new stadiums in 1994.

In 1992, the average length of a game in the American League was two hours and 53 minutes.

The average length of a game in the National League in 1992 was two hours and 45 minutes.

Foreman's new TV show reflects his real life

By W.H. STICKNEY JR.
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) - George Foreman the boxer has packed away the tools of the trade, for a while at least, and now is preparing for some really serious work - acting.

OK, don't double up with laughter, but remember, acting is serious business. Of course, the new job means Big George probably won't break more of a sweat than he ever did during two successful careers in the ring.

But he should keep you laughing. That is, if the plan for Foreman's new ABC-TV sitcom follows true. "It's going to be funny, real funny," Foreman says. "I promise you that. It's one big joke.

"Whenever you get me in front of the camera and have people in the background giggling, I can go. I think that's been my problem in boxing. You never want to get serious in the ring when people out in the crowd are giggling."

The series will make its debut in the fall and is scheduled for Saturdays at 8 p.m. Taping was originally scheduled to begin next week but has been postponed until late August. When taping begins, Foreman said they will put 13 episodes "in the can."

Foreman was in Hollywood this week to receive a Jim Thorpe Award as one of the legends who has made a tremendous career contribution to the field of sports. By the end of November, Foreman said, his commitment will be complete. Then, perhaps, he can get back to what he does best - "punching peoples' lights out."

There aren't enough hours in the day, Foreman said, to meld the two careers once taping begins.

"The producers are trying to make me swear off boxing," Foreman said. "I guess they want to do a lot of investing (of time and money) in the sitcom.

"But I'm a truthful man. I haven't got this stuff out of my blood yet."

Tony Danza, star of "Taxi" and "Who's The Boss," is executive producer of the new sitcom.

"It's called 'George.' I know, that's an odd name for this show, huh?" the 44-year-old Foreman said.

"It's about this ex-boxer, George Foster, who's made a lot of money, retires and has nothing to do but sit around the house all day. His wife is a counselor at an inner-city middle school.

"So he follows her to school a few times and gets hooked on the kids. He enjoys talking to the kids and sees how much of an impact an ex-fighter can have on their lives, a positive influence.

"George opens a community center where all the kids can come and play games after school, lift weights, box, listen to guest speakers who tell them about living right and growing up to be good citizens."

The story line sounds familiar. "Yeah, I guess you could say I'm playing myself," Foreman says with a laugh. "But I'm not retired.

"I'm not going to use that word. When one of the champions decides to give me another shot at the title, I'm going to hustle back into the ring in a hurry. I'm not through yet."

Foreman's last fight was at Las Vegas on June 7 when he lost a unanimous 12-round decision to Tommy "The Duke" Morrison in "The Star Spangled Battle," a fight for the vacant World Boxing Organization heavyweight championship.

"You know, it's funny," Foreman said. "I've gotten a lot of fan mail since then from people who watched the fight. And none of them say that I lost. They tell me how much they love me.

"You put that together with another boxing show, these fellows that are champions, they can't overlook that. I'm still right in the hunt."

For much of the last eight months, Foreman has sandwiched his boxing career between planning and working toward launching the sitcom.

In December, while preparing to fight South African Pierre Coetzer at Reno, Nev., Foreman was in Hollywood filming the sitcom pilot.

He had a makeshift gym constructed on a back lot and worked out between taping sessions.

"We built the gym in a vacant rehearsal hall, next to where we worked and called it 'Big George's House of Pain,'" says Danza, a former professional fighter before he turned to acting.

"Given George's popularity and given the show is pretty good, I think we have a good shot at making this thing a big hit."

The series is set in Houston. A film crew has already visited the Bayou City taking shots of the Astrodome, NASA and other Houston landmarks that periodically will be used on the air.

"OK, I know what you're going to ask. No, none of my kids are going to be in the series," says Foreman, whose 18-year-old son George is a freshman at Prairie View A&M.

"I get asked that all the time. The kids have been in several commercials I've made. But there's only one real actor in the family. You know who that is."

Danza got the idea for the sitcom while watching Foreman in a guest appearance on "The Tonight Show" before Johnny Carson retired.

Foreman admits to being consumed by stage fright during the initial moments the pilot was being filmed.

Even the cast, most of them youngsters, noticed his discomfort. "They were watching me read," Foreman said. "They were like, 'Boy, he's not going to do well.'

"But as the days got closer and closer, I started knowing their parts. We got to the filming and they were saying, 'Man, you're something else.' After about 12 days, I owned that situation.

"I was the only one in the position who could learn. When you're in a position to learn, everybody gives you a lot. When you know it all, I guess you can just go down from there.

"But I was just like a guy picking grapes everyday, gaining something sweet. Everyone would pull me aside telling me this, that and the other. That's why I know I'm going to do good.

"That's because I know I need to know."

Rehearsal may have been time for the jitters. But the minute a live audience was brought to the set, the butterflies flew out the window. The big bay window of the 260-pound ex-champion, that is.

"For a while, he had trouble," Danza says, "but when we brought in the live audience, it was as if a light went off in him. He's in every scene and you just can't take your eyes off him."

Rangers pick up McDowell

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers have signed one of their former first-round draft choices, outfielder Oddibe McDowell, to a minor league contract with the Tulsa Drillers.

He had not played since breaking his collarbone last year. The Rangers said Wednesday that McDowell, 30, will join the Texas League team for workouts this week.

The Rangers' first-round draft choice in 1984, McDowell was promoted to the majors the following May and became the team's rookie of the year that season.

But McDowell went to the Cleveland Indians in 1989, and played with the Atlanta Braves in 1989 and 1990. He was with California last season, but the Angels released him at the end of the season.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago, my husband and I moved into this house and spent our life's savings remodeling it. The problem is our neighbors.

The houses on this block are fairly close together. We don't know any of our neighbors, because my husband and I are very private people, and we keep to ourselves. Among the five houses that surround us, there are 14 barking dogs. We contacted all our neighbors, and most of them have taken care of the problem. All but one.

After listening to this neighbor's four dogs bark five hours a day for seven months, we finally took them to court. The judge ruled in our favor. They were fined $300 and instructed to keep the dogs in the garage while they are at work. Finally, we have some peace and quiet.

Now these neighbors want vengeance. We've had paint balls and super glue thrown onto our driveway. Last week, the woman screamed a string of obscenities at me as I was getting out of my car. Their teen-age boys have thrown cola bottles over the wall into our yard. Yesterday, I received an anonymous letter telling me that my husband was "seeing a young lady behind my back."

Ann, I realize there is nothing you can say that will stop this harassment, but please tell me how I can relax in my own home and not worry about what these neighbors are going to do next. We can't afford to move.

If people can't live next door to each other without trying to make their neighbors miserable, how can we possibly have peace in the world? Please print my city and state, Ann, but not my name.--Tucson, Ariz.

DEAR ARIZONA: Paint balls? Super glue? Bottles over the fence? Obscenities? Anonymous letters? Those folks sound potentially dangerous. I suggest that you file a report with the police.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been living with the girl of my dreams for 10 months. It was love at first sight. I was 26 years old and a virgin until I met "Gina."

She is now four months pregnant. I've always had a feeling that there was someone else in her life besides me. A month ago, I finally got the truth out of her. Gina has been cheating on me with a man at work.

She claims the baby is mine, but I'm not sure it is. I have a hard time making love to her, because I keep picturing her with that other guy. I know Gina is taking advantage of me, Ann, but I love her with all my heart and can't bring myself to throw her out. I just don't trust her anymore. Buy the way, she is 18 years old. Do you have any advice for me?--Confused in Sacramento

DEAR SAC: Stuck is stuck, and that's exactly where you are until the baby is born. The tests to determine paternity are now extremely accurate, so you must wait and see if this child is yours.

Meanwhile, I suggest joint counseling. Gina sounds very immature, and so do you. You both need professional guidance to help you grow up.

DEAR ANN: Recently, you printed a Gem of the Day that caught my eye. It went like this: "Character is defined by what you are willing to do when the spotlight has been turned off, the applause has died down, and no one is around to give you credit." It occurred to me that the same could apply to a nighttime burglar.--Tony K.

DEAR TONY: Please don't mess up a good Gem with your criminal mentality.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Test your cat care I.Q.

Are you sure-footed when it comes to questions about keeping your cat healthy? Taking this little test can help you tell.

1. Cats can't get rabies. (a) True (b) false?

2. Feline Panleukopenia can only be caught from an infected cat. (a) True (b) false?

3. There's no way to protect a cat from Feline Leukemia. (a) True (b) False

4. You should only take your cat to the vet when he or she seems sick. (a) True (b) False?

5. There's no point in getting a cat vaccinated once it's past kittenhood. (a) True (b) false?

ANSWERS

Also known as Feline Infectious Enteritis and Feline Distemper, it's caused by a resistant virus that may remain infectious for more than a year at room temperature on inanimate objects. It's fatal some 70 percent of the time, but can be prevented by vaccine. 3. (b) False. Until recently, there was no vaccine available to fight this usually fatal disease, but a recently developed inactivated virus vaccine can protect cats. 4. (b) False. You and your veterinarian should set up a schedule of regular examinations and vaccinations. 5. (b) False. NO cat is too old to be protected against disease.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - K.T. Oslin feels some kinship with the late Janis Joplin: Both started out as rather unsuccessful folk singers before finding the music they were meant to sing.

The two met in the early 1960s when both were part of the Texas folk-music scene - Oslin in a trio that included Guy Clark (later an acclaimed songwriter) and Joplin as a solo act.

"Janis was not happening yet," Oslin recalled in a recent interview. "She was still struggling to find where she belonged."

Carillonneur rings bells from vantage point in Tech tower

By JAMIE YEATTS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - As on-lookers watch from the ground, twilight reveals the performer's silhouette in the cathedral-style window of Texas Tech University's West Bell Tower.

Though she is hidden from the audience that has gathered on the campus grounds below, Arla Jo Anderton knows that her listeners are there - hearing every brilliant or velvety tone that her hands and feet cause to ring from the 36-bell carillon.

To play the carillon bells, she guides her loose-fisted hands along the instrument's keyboard, which consists of a double row of wooden batons that correspond to the black and white keys on a piano.

With her feet, she applies pressure to the instrument's pedals, which are coupled to the lowest two octaves of the baton levers. The pedals enable a carillonneur to play more elaborate music and the leg muscles are better able to control the clappers on the carillon's bigger bells.

Ms. Anderton, who began learning to play the instrument in 1985, since has been a regular performer in Lubbock's annual Summer Carillon Recital Series. She was intrigued with the instrument when she attended a local recital several years ago, she said.

The 1993 carillon series is under way and features and 8:15 p.m. recital each Sunday through Aug. 15 on the Tech campus. Listeners are invited to gather in the university's Memorial Circle area or on the grounds near the administration or chemistry buildings for the recitals.

Although Ms. Anderton passed the playing examination to become a member of The Guild of Carillonnuers in North America in 1986, she said, "I still get nervous in front of audiences."

She acknowledged that being out of the direct sight of her listeners is one advantage of playing the carillon - at least for her. However, she does play to her audience, and she knows they hear all when it comes to the musical sound of the bells.

"If a carillonneurs makes a mistake, it goes on forever," Ms. Anderton said. "I can't see the audience when I'm playing, but I know they're there. And we can hear the people clapping."

When carillonneurs move the batons and pedals with their hands and feet, they are controlling the clappers - the only parts of the bells that move. The bells are bolted rigidly to steel or wooden beams. Carillon bells have no dampers - once struck, a bell rings until its sound dies away naturally.

After the recital, Ms. Anderton isn't as shy about facing her audience.

When the performer takes her turn on the recital series, she usually provides refreshments for concert-goers in the area outside of the administration building.

"We look forward to showing off the carillon and giving tours of the bell tower after the recitals. We even offer people the opportunity to try playing they instrument if they want," she said.

Ms. Anderton explained that most people who come to the recital find the carillon's music intriguing, partly because they can hear the bells ringing, but they can see only a few of the bells through an opening in the tower.

"The recitals are a great way to spend a Sunday evening - some people bring popcorn and sandwiches - it's just a great time," she said.

Tech's Charles and Georgia Robertson Baird Memorial Carillon was bequeathed to the university by Ruth Baird Larabee in memory of her parents.

Ms. Larabee, who came to Lubbock in 1964 to attend Tech, traveled extensively while a resident of the city and relatively was an unknown to the local people, according to a written history of Tech's carillon. She died in London in 1969 at the age of 65.

Her father gave the Charles baird Memorial Carillon to the University of Michigan and donated a set of Westminster Chimes to the University of Missouri.

The lower 14 bells of the Tech carillon were cast in South Carolina by Harry Van Bergen Sr. and the remaining trebles were cast by Pacard Fonderie de Cloches in Annecy-le-Vieux, France.

Judson Maynard, music professor emeritus at Tech, was in Lubbock when the university carillon was installed in 1976. He learned to play the instrument and has been the primary caretaker of the carillon since its installation.

"I have played for 35 or 40 years now, but I kind of got serious about it after we got the carillon," said Maynard, who holds a Final Diploma in carillon playing from the Netherlands Carillon School and is a member of The Guild of Carillonneurs. "The bells are just a pleasant sound - everyone likes the bells."

No one at Texas Tech University or in the community receives payment for the playing of the university's carillon. Local individuals who play in the recital series or for other special events are volunteers, Maynard said.

He added that Tech has no official budget for the carillon. Campus maintenance personnel have helped with maintenance of the instrument through the years and Maynard has done much of the work himself. Expenses incurred for upkeep and repairs have been paid by individuals and by the university, he said.

Maynard, who began a tradition of playing the Tech carillon at noon each Friday, said the carillon is an expressive instrument.

"It's a rare instrument - a beautiful thing," he said. "There are only 14 carillons in Texas and 175 on the North American continent, but there are 150 in Holland alone. I think the carillon brings a touch of class to the campus and town."

Senator Hutchison continuing to stress roll as taxpayers' defender

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In her first month as the nation's newest senator, Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison hasn't strayed far from her campaign message: "It's the spending, stupid!"

She has cast herself as the defender of the taxpayer's money in her first floor speech, amendment, bill co-sponsorship and votes. Even a swap of furniture with a senator in a neighboring office is billed as a sign of her fiscal responsibility.

Matters of urgent concern to Texas also consumed much of the new senator's time. Within days of being elected, Mrs. Hutchison was pressed into service to defend Texas military bases, the super collider and Space Station Freedom.

"That didn't leave a lot of room for eating bonbons," she said in a recent sit-down session with Texas reporters.

Mrs. Hutchison's status as a star of the Republican Party - engendered by her drubbing of Democrat Bob Krueger - shows little sign of waning.

Of the Senate's six GOP freshmen, she is the only one addressing Friday's Republican National Committee meeting in Chicago. Party leaders, who suggest her victory is a bellwether the GOP will recapture the Senate next year, also are asking her to help recruit female candidates.

"We're very proud of the fact she won that seat and has been very vocal about her message, which is 'Cut spending first,'" said RNC spokeswoman Anne Gavin.

Others are less enthused.

President Clinton took a jab at Mrs. Hutchison last month, telling a Dallas radio station that her campaign rhetoric could jeopardize the future of the super collider and space station. Those comments didn't deter Mrs. Hutchison from appearing with Ross Perot at the foot of the Capitol when he urged Congress to adopt spending cuts before tax hikes. The Perot news conference came just hours before the House debated the future of the super collider - and voted to kill the $10 billion project.

Mrs. Hutchison stresses that her emphasis on spending cuts should not endanger the super collider and space station, which she says should prevail "on the merits."

A legislative snapshot of the new senator's first month includes:

-Introduction of her first amendment: Designed to reduce federal overhead spending by 5 percent in each of the next two fiscal years, the measure failed by two votes. Introduced as an amendment to the deficit-reduction package being considered by the Senate, Mrs. Hutchison plans to reintroduce the measure as a freestanding bill.

-Co-sponsorship of her first bill: She attached her name to legislation that would establish an independent commission, similar to the base-closing commission, that would identify the spending cuts necessary to balance the budget by 2000.

-Her first floor speech: Delivered June 23 during debate of the Democratic deficit-reduction package, it focused on her opposition to new taxes included in the measure. "Let's don't talk about tax increases at all. Instead, let's talk about spending cuts that are fair," she said.

-Her first big votes: She voted against the deficit-reduction package narrowly passed by the Senate, favoring instead a GOP alternative with greater emphasis on spending cuts. She also voted against a Democratic campaign finance reform package, which passed the Senate. And, she favored unsuccessful measures to strip hikes in the gasoline tax and Social Security from the budget package.

The Travis County grand jury investigation of possible official misconduct at the state treasury, which Mrs. Hutchison headed until her Senate election, hasn't clouded her first weeks, she maintains. "I'm really not involved in it," she told reporters last week, adding that she had not had any communications with prosecutors.

"I'd much rather talk about the grand jury," she joked, when a reporter mentioned her impending 50th birthday on July 22. "I have no plans except for draping the office in black net."

Aside from her busy schedule, Mrs. Hutchison found time to buy a house a block from the Capitol despite being cautioned that the area has a high crime rate. In fact, Texas' senior senator tried to warn her away from Capitol Hill. "Phil Gramm delicately said that he hoped he didn't find my brains on the sidewalk," she said.

Mrs. Hutchison had a scant nine days between her special election victory and her June 14th swearing-in as the nation's 1,815th senator to transition out of the state treasurer's position and into her new job.

"I tell you what, there is a reason that people are elected in November and go in in January," she said. "And I am finding out why."

Weeks into her tenure, staff and equipment remain scarce and the kinks are being ironed out.

Aides vying for use of the office's lone fax machine sometimes send out faxes from Sen. Lauch Faircloth's office, which is next door. Faircloth, R-N.C., received Mrs. Hutchison's leather office furniture in exchange for his cloth floral print couch and chairs. "Sen. Hutchison embarked on a mission to find the furniture she wanted without spending a dime of taxpayers money," trumpeted a press release on the swap.

Mrs. Hutchison also has borrowed staffers from other Republican congressional offices to man her reception area and telephones.

Aides grumble that the transition wasn't helped by the way in which Krueger's staff left the Washington offices and the offices in Austin, Dallas and Houston. In Washington, the television sets, copiers and office supplies were gone, the computers were blank and printers were disconnected. A desk in the Austin office had a skull-and-crossbones figure drawn on it.

Officials with the Secretary of the Senate and the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, two of the bodies that regulate the chamber's internal affairs, said there is no set procedure regulating the transfer from one senator to the next. But they point out it's typical for the office equipment and supplies to be returned for inventory.

Glitches aside, Mrs. Hutchison is enjoying her new job.

NEW YORK (AP) - David Cassidy, the one-time teen singing idol on "The Partridge Family," has been trying for some 20 years to put that image behind him. Now, he says, he finds himself defending the show from critics.

"I've starting feeling over the last couple of years very protective of 'The Partridge Family,'" Cassidy said in Sunday's New York Newsday. "People don't remember just how successful it was and what a well-crafted show it was for what it was."

The hit comedy, about a family-turned-rock-'n'-roll-band, aired on ABC from 1970 to 1974.

Cassidy, 43, is writing a book about his experiences on the show. And he's preparing a concert tour celebrating the 1970s, "since that was the last decade dedicated to having a good time, having a party."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - It's a stretch for Joe Lando to play Byron Sully, the rough-hewn, emotionally wounded Tarzan of the Prairie on "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman."

Sully is a sun-bronzed creature who loves the land. Lando is pale beneath the heavy makeup and hates having dirt under his fingernails.

"That's one of my pet peeves," Lando says in the July 17th issue of TV Guide. "It drives me nuts."

While Sully lives in harmony with nature, Lando is allergic to almost everything, from grasses and pollens to the dog that plays his pet wolf.

Sully goes bareback with ease and throws his tomahawk only when necessary. Lando, 30, needs to ice his back after a ride.

Jane Seymour, who plays Dr. Quinn, said her brief relationship with Lando has affected their chemistry on the set.

Eating for two is out

If wives' tales and free advice were taken at face value, pregnant women would always believe they should eat for two, forget coffee, skip fast food meals and live with bloated bodies after their children are born.

Not true, says Bridget Swinney, a registered dietitian whose own pregnancy and counseling experiences recently prompted her to write a practical guidebook about nutrition during pregnancy..so Eating Expectantly: The Essential Eating Guide and Cookbook For Pregnancy was born.

A 1984 graduate of Texas Woman's University, author and nutritionist, Swinney says that eating for two is out, eating out is in and eating healthy is a necessity before, during and after pregnancy. She explains, "Healthy eating is a challenge. And in a society where we often don't eat three meals a day--healthy or otherwise--making good choices about food is even more difficult.

Nutrition is a key factor in healthy pregnancies--before, during and after the process, according to Swinney. Healthy mothers and fathers tend to have healthy babies, and moms who eat properly find that losing weight is an easier task after a child is born.

"An important tip to remember--and most people don't know this--is to eat well before becoming pregnant," says Swinney. "Eating a variety of healthy foods helps a woman obtain appropriate amounts of folic acid, which is needed for all new cell production and amino acid synthesis. Inadequate levels of folic acid in a woman's system can lead to neural tube defects (that can result in spina bifida, for example) during the first few weeks of pregnancy.

"A man's diet is also important before his partner's pregnancy because it affects the DNA in his sperm," adds the TWU dietitian. "The burden has always been on women's shoulders, but now men also need to watch what they eat."

Swinney says, however, that it is never too late to eat right when a woman is pregnant. She should begin eating properly as soon as she is aware of her condition--and eating healthy does not have to be boring either.

During pregnancy, women should add more calcium to their diet, as well as fruits and vegetables. "We live in a meat-and-potatoes society," says Swinney, "and most people don't eat enough fruits and vegetables under normal circumstances."

Women who take prenatal vitamins should seek additional sources of calcium, vitamins, minerals and fiber from the foods they eat as well. Swinney bases her advice on interviews she did with 50 pregnant women concerning their eating habits, plus her years of counseling pregnant women. She found that most did not drink enough milk or eat enough fruits and vegetables. By drinking more milk, eating more cheese or yogurt, or by consuming broccoli, kale or spinach, women can introduce more calcium into their diets.

For those whose systems cannot tolerate lactose and who cannot meet their calcium needs from other food sources, she suggests asking their doctors about calcium supplements, Many of which are available in over-the-counter form.

During pregnancy, Swinney tells readers to add exercise to their schedules and to make it a permanent part of a healthy lifestyle. "Do what you can to exercise during pregnancy," she says. "The book contains tips on what you can do to exercise without thinking about it: take half of your lunch hour and walk; go dancing; walk the dog; shop until you drop; or try aerobic lawn mowing."

While exercise and good eating habits help the baby as it grows, they also help mothers stay in shape and maintain a healthy weight range that is based on their size and previous weight, according to Swinney. Women who are within their normal weight range should gain 25-35 pounds during pregnancy; those who are overweight should add 15-25 pounds instead. Petite women should gain approximately 25 pounds.

"Pregnant women who have been on diets all their lives may find it hard to gain their weight. If they are 20 percent or more under weight, they should probably gain 28 to 40 pounds. Others,who are overweight should gain 15 to 25 pounds, as well as those under five feet, three inches tall," explains Swinney. "However, a woman should always discuss her weight-gain goal with her physician. Weight gain is directly related to birth weight," she adds. "A healthy birth weight usually means a healthy baby."

But what happens when concerned parents and friends tell pregnant daughters or acquaintances that they need to eat for two, boycott caffeine and learn to accept the weight they have gained as a permanent part of their lives? Use common sense, says Swinney, and talk to a doctor when questions arise. Don't eat for two and don't take old wives' tales for granted. Remember that balance, variety and moderation are the keys to a healthy diet.

"As soon as a woman knows she's pregnant, she starts eating for two. While it is true that she does require some additional nutrients, a woman only needs 100 extra calories per day during the first trimester and 300 extra calories per day after that time," she explains. Literally eating for two can cause a weight problem after pregnancy, although Swinney's book includes sections on losing weight post partum--and even 20 years later, for women who never lost weight after their last child was born.

HELP YOUR HEART RECIPES

American Heart Association

This recipe is intended to be part of an overall healthful eating plan. Total fat intake should be less than 30 percent of your total calories for a day — not for each food or recipe.

Oven-Barbecued Chicken

- Vegetable oil spray*
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- 1/4 cup water
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 cup white or cider vinegar to taste
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil (canola or safflower)
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion (optional)
- 1/2 cup chili sauce or ketchup
- 1 2 1/2- to 3-pound frying chicken, cut into serving pieces, skinned, all visible fat removed
- 3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

Preheat oven to 350° F. Lightly spray a large baking pan with vegetable oil.

Combine all ingredients except chicken in a saucepan over medium-high heat. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Set aside.

Rinse chicken pieces and pat dry; then arrange in prepared pan. Pour half of the barbecue sauce over chicken and bake, uncovered, 50 to 60 minutes, basting with remaining sauce every 15 minutes.

Optional Cooking Method: Immerse chicken briefly in sauce, then cook over charcoal. Boil remaining sauce and use it to baste chicken frequently.

Makes 4 servings.

*Do not use vegetable oil spray near an open flame or a heat source. Read and follow directions on can before using.

Tips for checking inhaler technique

More than 24 million Americans have asthma and chronic bronchitis. To help treat their symptoms, doctors often prescribe pocket-sized inhalers.

When used properly, inhalers deliver a puff of medication directly where it's needed - to the lungs. The trouble is that inhalers are often used incorrectly.

In a Gallup Poll released in 1992, doctors said that they believe only about half of their patients with asthma or chronic bronchitis use their inhalers correctly every time. Studies have shown similar results.

How do you know if you're using your inhaler right? The guidelines below can help you identify problems with inhaler use.

-Do you begin inhaling before you press down on the inhaler, or after the inhaler's pressed down all the way? The recommended method is to press down on the inhaler to release medication as you start to breathe in slowly. Doctors surveyed in the Gallup Poll say that the most common problem people have in using their inhalers is pressing down on the canister and inhaling at just the right moment.

-Do you breathe in faster than normal when you start to use your inhaler? If you breathe in too quickly, the full dose of medication may not make it to your lungs. Most doctors suggest taking a slow, steady, deep breath for the best results.

-Do you hold your breath for less than 10 seconds? Inhaler users are usually instructed to hold their breath for 10 seconds to allow the medicine to reach deeply into the lungs.

-Do you feel the inhaler spray land on your tongue, or see it in the air? If yes, the medication may not be delivered to your lungs, where it's needed.

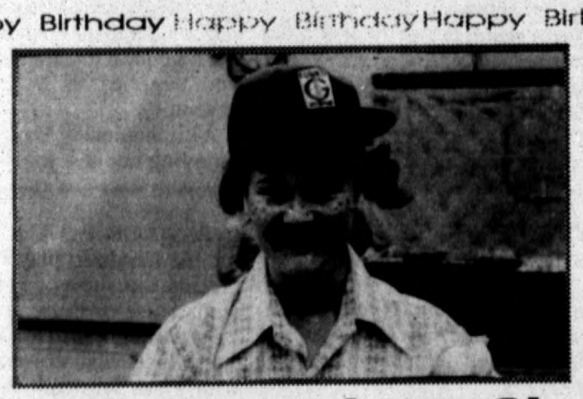

-Do you almost always take more puffs of medication than your doctor has prescribed? If so, your breathing problem may have changed, or you may need a refresher lesson in inhaler technique. Inconsistent inhaler technique may mean you're getting only a partial dose of medication. The result? You may take too many puffs to relieve your symptoms.

-Do you "fire" your inhaler into the air before using to see if the aerosol spray comes out? When used correctly, inhalers deliver the proper amount of medication. There should be no need for "test firing." If you're concerned about wasting medication or about being sure that your inhaler is working properly, talk to your doctor or pharmacist.

If you answered "yes" to any of the questions above, your doctor or pharmacist can review your inhaler technique with you to help make sure you get the medicine you need.
