Retains Auto Tax

School Board Appoints Assistant Principals

By Jeri Curtis
Staff Writer

Hereford Independent School District business was delayed about 25 minutes while the board waited for enough members to seat a quorum Tuesday night at its regular meeting.

With members Sallie Strain, Bill Townsend, James Gentry and R. C. Hoelscher present the board primarily dealt with routine matters and named two elementary school assistant principals.

Teri Morgan was named as assistant at Bluebonnet Elementary and Tommy Rosson was appointed assistant at Tierra Blanca.

Morgan has taught physical education at Shirley Elementary for two years. She is a graduate of Harding College in Searcy, Ark. She takes the post held by Leslie Paschel, now to be at Northwest.

Rosson joined the Hereford Schools in 1969 as a high school science teacher after six years of teaching in Morton. He is a graduate of Texas Tech University. He is moving into the position formerly held by John Dominguez, now at Shirley elementary.

The annual resolution to sustain an auto tax was passed unanimously. The tax provides for six to seven percent of the district's tax base.

Collection on property taxes is at 93.89 percent for the district. Last month's current collections were $50,515; delinquent taxes were at $1,668.

Mrs. Strain made a motion to bid on three insurance policies due for renewal in August, workman's comphrensive, transportation fleet and comprehensive general liability.

The board voted to send James Gentry to the Texas Association of School Boards convention in the first week of October. Gentry previously has attended the meeting.

Margaret Bell reported that a leadership workshop for faculty representatives would be held in Hereford Aug. 10. She added that the Texas State Teachers Association chapter would now be under the name of Hereford Educators Association as affiliate of TSTA and Nation Educators Association.

Mrs. Paschel and a Pegasus student, Dale West, gave a curriculum report on the mentor program of gifted students. The seventh grade was added to the program this year.

The board viewed a video tape of the students' project reports. Each student spent time with a professional in the field of his choice before preparing the tape.

West presented his complete report to the board using a home computer and television.

Jail Fire Smoke Victim

Handcuffed Virgil Lucero was one of three persons treated for smoke inhalation after a fellow prisoner set fire to a pile of belongings Tuesday night. Joe Benavidez, in what lawmen say was a last ditch effort to escape before transport to the penitentiary, ignited the pile and resorted to the jail shower only to be foiled by a jailer who discovered the fire before smoke alarms went off. Other prisoners were evacuated to the courthouse hallway. Lucero, Benavidez and jailer Darrell Carroll were treated and released at Deaf Smith General Hospital. See story below for details. Siren Test Set Friday

The city of Hereford will test the severe weather and tornado warning sirens at 10 a.m. Friday according to civil defense coordinator Jay Spain.

In case of inclement weather the tests will be postponed until conditions are favorable Spain said.

Block Promises News Soon on Disaster Help

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block has renewed his pledge to lawmakers from Texas and New Mexico to decide soon whether to release direct disaster relief payments to farmers hard hit by hail and rain last month.

Block renewed his promise Tuesday during a meeting with Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and U.S. Rep. Joe Skeen, R-N.M, and later in a telephone call to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

The lawmakers have toured farms in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico where violent spring storms destroyed much of the cotton, wheat, sorghum and corn crops.

"Nothing equals or parallels this devastation. The crops have been more severely damaged than by drought. It is not just the farmer being hurt, but every business that depends on agriculture," Tower said.

The lawmakers have urged Block to use discretionary authority given him by the 1981 Farm Act to make disaster payments.

"These people need help, and they need it now," said Tower.

Bentsen said he was amazed by the crop destruction he saw.

"Six-foot stalks of corn, just growing into tassels, looked just like broomsticks, standing there without any leaves at all. And cotton was completely leveled," Bentsen said.

"Two million acres of cotton were completely destroyed, and substantially more than that was severely damaged. Wheat, corn and sorghum crops are just as bad, and it's too late to replant," Bentsen said.

Bentsen said Block also told him that he had met with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige about the sale of U.S. agricultural products to other countries.

Bentsen urged President Reagan recently to appoint a Cabinet-level task force to help Block focus attention on agriculture problems.

"At least some informal action along that line has been taken, and I'm encouraged by that," Bentsen said.

The task force Bentsen recommended would include the secretaries of treasury and commerce.

Iran Invades Iraq; Urges 'Mutiny'

By The Associated Press

Iranian forces have invaded Iraq and captured "hundreds" of Iraqi soldiers in a drive to topple the regime of President Saddam Hussein, Tehran radio reported today.

The official Iranian broadcasts, monitored in London, did not elaborate on the claim. If true, it would be the first time Iranian forces crossed the Iraqi border since Hussein's army launched the Persian Gulf border war by invading western Iran almost two years ago.

"Our Islamic army is coming to liberate you," Tehran radio said in an address to the Iraqi people urging them to "mutiny."

"Our forces will not lay down their arms until this infidel agent regime and all symbols of treason in Baghdad have been toppled."

In a later Arabic-language broadcast at 4 a.m. EDT, Tehran radio claimed that hundreds of Iraqi soldiers had been captured in the offensive begun Tuesday night.

An Iraqi military communique reaching London said the push was directed at Basra, Iraq's main port located about 15 miles west of the Iranian border in extreme southeast Iraq. It did not say if Iranian forces crossed the frontier.

"The Iraqi armed forces and people will repulse and crush this new offensive of the Iranian enemy," it said.

Tuesday night, Tehran radio broadcast excerpts from an Iranian military communique saying Iranian troops were "advancing after crushing the first resistance put up by Iraqi forces" and had "crossed successfully the first bunkers of the enemy."

Canadian Press, in a dispatch from Tehran, said the communique reported heavy fighting in Iran's oil-rich southwestern province of Khuzistan, but did not give the precise location.

The news agency quoted the communique as saying Iranian troops would use the "liberation of Iraq" as a step towards their goal of freeing Jerusalem "from the claws of the aggressive, criminal (Israeli) Zionism."

Khomeini's Islamic regime opposes Israel's occupation of Jerusalem and does not recognize the Israeli government or its proclamation of the city, holy to both Moslems and Jews, as its capital.

Excerpts of the Iranian military communique monitored in London said the offensive, code-named Ramadan after the Moslem fasting month, was to "prevent further Iraqi and other U.S. lackeys' aggression, and to keep at a distance the Iraqi fire from cities of the Islamic homeland (Iran)."

The offensive was launched at 9:30 p.m. Tehran time (2 p.m EDT) Tuesday, the communique said.

In an earlier announcement, the Tehran government had said Iraqi troops still were in Iran despite Hussein's announcement at the end of June that all his forces had withdrawn. Claims by either side cannot be verified because they do not allow foreign journalists to cover the fighting regularly.

The government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has been threatening to invade Iraq for several weeks, according to press reports from the Persian Gulf. The Iranians have scoffed at Hussein's declaration last month of a unilateral cease-fire and have complained that Iraqi artillery continued to shell across the border.

Iraq invaded its neighbor in September 1980, to gain full control of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, part of the southern Iran-Iraq border and Iraq's only shipping outlet to the Persian Gulf. After losing large pieces of territory to Iraq, Iran launched a tide-turning offensive this spring.

None of the communiques indicated how many troops were involved in the renewed battles. Hussein said in an interview Tuesday with The Times of London that Iran was concentrating "massive

Industrial Development Corp. Okays Swift Bond Application

BY BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR

The re-opening of the idled Armour & Co. meat packing plant here came another step closer to reality Tuesday afternoon with the acceptance by the Deaf Smith County Industrial Development Corporation of an application by Swift Independent Packing Co. (SIPCO) for industrial revenue bonds.

The application filed by SIPCO, the first received by the development corporation since its formation in 1979, requested bonds in the amount of $8.2 million initially, with plans for expenditures of an additional $1.8 million in the near future.

SIPCO reached tentative agreement for the purchase of the packing plant with Armour & Co. recently. The company estimates an annual payroll of $8 million for 387 hourly wage earners and 52 management personnel.

Four of the six DSC Industrial Development Corp. board members were present at the meeting Tuesday afternoon, and gave the request unanimous approval. Board members Bob Gentry, president, Mike Carr, Tom Burdett, and Dick Montgomery were present at the meeting, with members Jim Sears and Craig Smith absent.

According to SIPCO application, the bonds will be used to finance and pay for the acquistion of the packing plant.

The tax-exempt bonds will be issued in one or more of series, with an interest rate of between 60-75 percent of the current prime rate. A decision as to whether the bonds will be offered at public or private sale has not yet been made.

The bonds may be used only for capital expenditures, and not for operating expenses.

SIPCO requested to use their own bond counsel concerning the issuance of the bonds, which was approved by the board. The local board will have their own bond counsel or review purposes, however, at the expense of SIPCO.

The next step in the issuance of the bonds is delivery of a review report from the development corporation's bond counsel.

A resolution approving the issuance is necessary from the Deaf Smith County Commissioner's Court, with final approval to come from the Texas Industrial Development Commission.

Carr said that since much of the groundwork has already been done in the past 45 days., that the bonds may be issued within a 60-day period.

Gentry said he was "really excited" about what SIPCO can mean to the community. "And, it's likely, through this aciton, that the local business community will begin to take advantage of this program," he said.

The board president pointed out that the development corporation may issue revenue bonds to local businesses, not necessarily those who are making a move into the area.

Burdett commented that "it's very commendable that we had the foresight to be formed two years ago. We can be proud of Mike (Carr) for having us prepared for this occurrence, and I think that an $8.2 million figure on our first application is significant."

Prisoners, Jailer Treated After Fire

In an apparent last ditch escape effort, Joe Benavidez, awaiting transport to the Texas Department of Corrections for his third felony sentence, set fire to a pile of his own belongings in his Deaf Smith County jail cell Tuesday night, sending himself, another prisoner and the jailer to the hospital for smoke inhalation treatment.

Thirty prisoners were evacuated to the hall of the courthouse to avoid the smoke, caused mostly by a smoldering mattress with a fire resistant cover.

Virgil Lucero, who escaped with Benavidez in April and lived several months downstate under an assumed name, was treated and released for smoke inhalation at Deaf Smith General Hospital. Jailer Darrell Carroll, who discovered the fire before smoke alarms buzzed, was also treated and released.

According to Sheriff Travis McPherson, $200 to $300 in damages resulted.

Jay Spain, fire marshall, said Benavidez put all of his belongings on the bed and lit them. He said the mattresses in the jail have fire retardant covers, but will eventually smolder and burn.

Deputy Eva McKnight said Benavidez had gone into the jail shower after setting the fire, apprently planning to sneak out in the commotion.

Bill Henderson was booking a prisoner and Carroll discovered the fire while assisting Henderson.

Seven units from the fire department reported to the call at 6:39 p.m.

Benavidez pleaded guilty last week to the April escape. He received a life sentence for the robbery of a convenience store in December. He had two previous felony convictions.

Lucero also pleaded guilty to the escape and to the robbery of a store in January. He recieved 20 years on each count.

Safety Board Urges FFA To Replace Flight Recorders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators, disturbed by the quality of information from recorders aboard Pan Am Flight 759, say the equipment used to monitor the final seconds of a doomed jetliner is often outdated and unreliable.

The National Transportation Safety Board urged the Federal Aviation Administration on Tuesday to require that cockpit voice recorders used by most of the nation's airlines be replaced over the next two years because the model has been proven unreliable.

The safety board also said the so-called flight data recorders used by most of the industry dates back 30 years and monitors fewer aircraft functions than could be recorded if a more modern "digital" version were used.

"What the safety board is seeking is to be sure that we don't go into the 21st Century with technology for accident investigation that originated in the 1950s," declared James Burnett, the board's chairman.

Burnett said the problems are hindering accident investigation and may prevent the discovery of information that could prevent future accidents.

"If we do not move now to correct the problems with the cockpit voice recorders and improve the quality of the flight data recorders that we have many lives will be lost because of the failure to get the information from the accidents that happen," Burnett said.

The two recorders, encased in orange boxes able to protect against intense heat and great impact, are housed near the tail section of commercial jets and almost always withstand a crash.

They are the most vital instruments aboard an airplane for accident investigation.

But in the case of the Pan American World Airways jetliner that crashed Friday at Kenner, La., outside New Orleans, the so-called "black boxes" have caused frustration for investigators. The death toll from the crash stands at 154, including some people killed on the ground.

The cockpit voice recorder, which monitors conversations among crew members on a continuous 30-minute loop tape, is distorted, fluctuates in speed, and contains "background conversations which apparently came from

Second Quarter Sales Slump

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

Economists counting on consumers to pull the economy out of recession were dismayed by the government's latest report on retail sales, which showed many shoppers stayed home in June.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that retail sales, including those of cars, plunged 1.5 percent in June from the month before. It was the sharpest drop since October and followed a revised 2.7 percent sales gain in May. Auto sales declined 6.9 percent.

"It's not an encouraging sign," said Robert Gough, vice president of Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., consulting firm. "If July and August follow suit with new declines, then I'd say we're in trouble."

A week ago, several of the nation's major general-merchandise chains said business was sluggish in June. The largest, Sears, Roebuck and Co., posted a 1 percent drop in sales compared with June 1981, and No. 2 K mart Corp. said sales dropped 1.2 percent from the month a year before.

Poor June sales were reflected in disappointing second-quarter earnings released Tuesday by several companies.

One of the sharpest profit declines was suffered by International Paper Co., North America's largest private owner of forest lands and the world's largest producer of paperboard, paper and pulp products. Profits tumbled 51 percent on a 9 percent drop in sales.

GTE Rates To Be Set By PUC Today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The three-member Public Utilities Commission planned today to review a hearing examiner's report recommending a $49.1 million rate increase for General Telephone Co.

GTE, which serves 1.3 million Texans, wants $110.6 million in increases.

The company request includes $30 million in increases in long-distance tolls and $43 million more from basic monthly residential service.

Specific increases in residential service would vary by city. In Garland, the largest city served by GTE, the company wants $17.05 a month for the service that now costs $11.15. The hearing examiner recommended $16.90 a month for Garland household service.

The company also wants a 20-cent charge for directory assistance calls above three per month.

The San Angelo-based telephone company filed for the increase in January.

Today's rate hearing opened with testimony from GTE customers who said the company provides poor service. Hearing Examiner Jacqueline Holmes agreed there are "many problems."

Oilman Indicted In Scheme To Underwrite Dry Well

HOUSTON (AP) — An oilman has been indicted for allegedly defrauding three investors of $21,000 to underwrite a dry well in Kentucky, prosecutors said.

Harris County grand jurors on Tursday charged Salvatore Deloro, 55, with theft. If convicted, Deloro could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Deloro allegedly told investors the well, located near Bowling Green, Ky., had struck oil and that other wells in the same area would be developed, said Prosecutor Russel Turbeville.

However, the first well, which never struck oil, was not licensed and subsequent wells were never built, Turbeville said.

Judge Orders $200 Reward Reimbursed

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — With a bit of a twist on the adage "crime doesn't pay," a state judge ordered a man convicted of a marijuana charge to reimburse the organization that paid a $200 reward for his arrest.

District Judge Earl Smith ordered Kevin C. Gill, 25, to reimburse the Crime Stoppers program for the $200 it paid to an informant.

Tom Green County Assistant District Attorney Dick Alcala said the state will be seeking reimbursement for Crime Stoppers rewards "on a regular basis" in cases where defendants are found guilty.

Gill, of San Angelo, was arrested March 19 with Eugene Caswell, 30, after police searched their home after a telephone tip to the anti-crime program. He was sentenced to three years probation and fined $250 in addition to the reimbursement.

Oil Thiefs Sentenced To Prison, Fined

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A Gregg County district judge has sentenced three people convicted of conspiring to steal oil from an East Texas oil field to five-year prison terms and fined them $10,000 each.

The trio are W.S. "Bull"Barber, 63, and his son, B.S. "Buddy" Barber, both of Kilgore, and Jean Brown, 63, of Sapulpa, Okla. They were sentenced Tuesday by Judge Marcus Vascucu.

The three were convicted earlier this month of engaging in organized crime in connection with the theft of oil from the East Texas Oil Field near Longview.

Before the sentencing, Vascocu heard three hours of character and medical testimony that included letters from physcians who said the defendants were in poor health.

Wheelchair Climbers Face Hotter Weather Higher Up

GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Four paraplegic mountain climbers have pushed their wheelchairs more than three miles up Texas' tallest peak and are ready for their final ascent today, park rangers said.

The climbers wheeled two miles Tuesday to a camp a mile and a half from the summit of 8,751-foot high Guadalupe Peak.

But the toughest part of the gruelling climb lay ahead, a park ranger said.

Rangers had expressed concern about how well the climbers would handle the trail and 90-degree temperatures Tuesday. Two colleagues dropped out of the expedition Monday with physical problems.

But Ranger Bill Dunmire said Tuesday evening that the men had reached a shaded, forested area of the trail and covered two miles of the 4¾-mile climb during the day.

"They're in good shape, they're in good spirits and they feel they have a good shot at it. We felt today would be a good test. They've sure passed it as far as I'm concerned," Dunmire said Tuesday.

The men camped Tuesday night at 7,500 feet, 1,700 feet above their starting point.

Rogers was left with the leadership role after two more experienced climbers withdrew Monday when the climb began.

Climbing with Rogers were Dave Kiley, 29, of Los Angeles, Bobby Leyes, 30, of Raleigh, N.C., and Joe Moss, 32, of Dallas. Moss lost his legs in the Vietnam war and the other climbers are paralyzed from accidents.

Expedition leader Michael "Shorty" Powers, 30, of Dallas dropped out when he developed muscle spasms. John Galland, 31, of Mound, Minn., was suffering a kidney infection and didn't start the program.

Dunmire said the park rangers are patrolling the gravel horse trail that winds its way to the summit. He said the climbers preferred to be on their own without park ranger assistance.

"They really picked up today," Dunmire said Tuesday. "They found the going better. They reported that the trail wasn't quite as steep as that early part."

On Monday, the climbers traveled over cactus and mesquite for 1¾ miles, Dunmire said. Although not as steep, the trail the men covered Tuesday ascends at a 10 to 12 percent grade, Dunmire said.

Dunmire predicted today's leg of the climb will be the toughest because the men will have to leave their wheelchairs and crawl to the top as the trail becomes too tough to climb even for horses.

The climbers are members of an organization called Paraplegics On Independent Nature Trips, or POINT, founded by Powers.

The expedition is benefitting the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, a non-profit corporation that operates therapy centers in Abilene, Snyder and San Angelo. Contributors are donating up to 10 cents for every foot that the climbers ascend, with all of the money going to the rehabilitation centers.

PLO Will Surrender Troops If US Recognizes Group

By The Associated Press

The Palestine Liberation Organization, its trapped forces outgunned by massive Israeli firepower and abandoned by Arab nations, wants U.S. recognition before agreeing to leave Lebanon, PLO and Lebanese sources say.

The sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said Tuesday that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat would order his 8,000 fighters cornered in west Beirut to surrender their heavy weapons and evacuate by sea under U.S. 6th Fleet escort if Washington recognizes his guerrilla group.

U.S. agreement to this demand would be a stunning setback for Israel and a triumph for the PLO, which has teetered on military defeat since Israel launched its massive invasion of Lebanon June 6 to crush the guerrillas.

Washington has refused to recognize the PLO until the group acknowledges Israel's right to exist and agrees to U.N. frameworks for a Middle East peace.

The Jewish state has threatened to invade west Beirut unless the PLO leaves Lebanon, but no Arab governments have offered refuge to the guerrilla organization. An emergency Arab League meeting on the crisis was scrapped Tuesday because not enough members wanted to attend.

Lebanese officials and war correspondents said Israel moved more tanks and troops Tuesday to positions outside the besieged PLO enclaves, but a cease-fire arranged two days earlier by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib appeared to be holding.

The sources estimate between 35,000 and 40,000 Israeli troops backed by 300 tanks and up to 500 armored personnel carriers surround west Beirut, where the guerrillas have blended with the estimated 500,000 civilians. An attack would mean bloody fighting and heavy casualties on all sides.

Publicly, PLO leaders said they would be more open to a political solution if they received U.S. recognition, but stopped short of offering to evacuate.

"We are fighting for that, to force the United States to recognize us," Arafat's political adviser Hani al-Hassan said Tuesday.

"I am sure that if there were direct talks between the PLO and America through Philip Habib, it would be a very important step for the PLO, and the PLO would be ready to be more flexible and rethink a lot of things," he said.

In Washington, Secretary of State-designate George Shultz said at his Senate confirmation hearings that the Reagan administration is following the policy that has banned negotiations between the PLO and the United States. But he said "representatives of the Palestinian people" should be represented in the Middle East peace process.

The United States and Israel claim the PLO has never explicitly recognized Israel's right to exist. But the PLO says it formally recognized Israel's right to exist in 1981, when it endorsed a Soviet Middle East peace plan that called for secure boundaries for the Jewish state.

Man Second N.M. Plague Fatality

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — State health officials hoped to determine today if a northern New Mexico man who died of plague contracted the highly contagious pneumonic form of the disease.

The unidentified man, whom officials say lived alone in the northern New Mexico community of Vallecitos, died Monday night and was the state's second plague fatality within a two-day period.

"We do not know if this man had the pneumonic form of the disease or not," said Dr. Jonathan Mann, chief of the Communicable Disease Control Division.

The pneumonic form of the disease can be transmitted from person to person.

"In the meanwhile, we've identified...the contacts in the hospital and ambulance service who would have had exposure to the man just before he died," Mann said. "These people are going to be placed on preventive medication and surveillance."

Mann said about 15 people, most of them hospital personnel but also some residents of the community where the man lived, had been placed on preventive medication and would be kept under surveillance.

"There does not appear to be any spread, but we will carefully monitor the situation for the next week," Mann said late Tuesday.

"We do not expect there to be any problem with person to person spread of the disease," Mann said.

Mann said the man died Monday night at the Espanola Hospital emergency room. Mann said the man became ill on Saturday and the diagnosis was confirmed by the state laboratory Tuesday.

The plague case is the fourth confirmed in New Mexico this year. Two the cases resulted in death with the two other victims recovering, health officials said.

On Sunday, an 11-year-old boy from McKinley County died of bubonic plague, the most common form of the disease in New Mexico, Mann said.

Mann also emphasized there was no connection between the two fatal cases.

"They have nothing to do with each other," Mann said. "They are from different parts of the state."

A symptom of bubonic plague is a painful swelling of the lymph glands, usually in neck, groin or armpit.

Analysts Interested Only In Profits, Not Reviews

Even before he saw "Annie," Hoffman described it as "an overproduced spectacular." "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" won't come out until Friday; it'll be a debacle, he says — again without having seen it.

It's not that this guy pans everything. He'll allow that a movie has "good demographics," is "a break-even prospect" or, like the latest Disney movie, "Tron," "on the edge of reasonable risk."

Hoffman is a Wall Street stock analyst. He's no critic. He doesn't care whether he likes a movie or not. All he cares about is: Will it make money?

Wall Street's buttoned-down analysts are increasingly finding themselves cast as critics of Hollywood's creative offerings. Their opinions, while of little interest to the movie-goer, can influence a substantial audience in the financial community — and, as a result, the price of a movie company's stock.

"The question I have to ask is: Are the regular moviegoers going to get excited about this film? And will it bring out the people who only occasionally go to movies?" says Hoffman, of A.G. Becker Inc.

But he shrugs off the title of critic. "The whole business of us being film critics is ludicrous," he says. "If a film had to depend on drawing people from my demographic group, it'd be in trouble."

Securities analysts all pore through trade journals, but Hoffman and about a dozen others like him even search the gossip columns for tidbits about film production problems (could mean higher costs, lower profit) and box office stars.

Last week some negative words from investment analysts about "Tron" sent Disney stock spinning down $2.50, to $56.37, in one day of trading.

Theodore James Jr., of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, advised clients to sell Disney stock until the price dropped to $52 a share because the $20 million film told a "seriously flawed, disjointed story."

Several other analysts predict the film won't do well. But they say it won't hurt Disney's overall financial condition.

"I didn't think 'Tron' was all that great, but I never thought it was going to be a major contributor to the company's overall financial situation," says Harold Vogel, of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. Vogel cut his profit estimate by a nickel, to $3.45 a share, after the screening.

"I've been saying to buy this stock aggressively if it comes down, and I still feel that way," he adds.

"We got an undamaged tape. The problem, we are convinced, was in the quality of the recording," Burnett told reporters.

At the same time, investigators said the flight data recorder used aboard most U.S. aircraft, including Flight 759, fails to provide some critical information that could be preserved by a more modern "digital" instrument.

The safety board, which has only power to recommend, urged that the FAA require that the current recorders be replaced by the digital version.

Six U.S. carriers already are using some digital recorders and a number of foreign aviation agencies already require them, the safety board said.

Policy development changes were handed out to be reviewed before the next meeting. Guidelines are included for selection of salutatorion and valedictorian and on graduation requirements.

Approved for employment were Renee Novak, Jan Petree and Kelly Irlbeck.

Breathing Device That Warms Air For Lungs

BARRINGTON, R.I. (AP) — Ray Hanlon, a former Providence College track coach and year-round jogger, thought there had to be a way to warm air before it reached the lungs, preventing the irritation caused by cold-weather exertion.

Although he doesn't fancy himself as an inventor, Hanlon's experimenting and testing led him to design a small plastic mouthpiece he says makes running — or almost any cold-weather sport — less painful.

Preliminary tests show the device does what Hanlon claims.

The 57-year-old associate professor of education got the idea after years of watching runners experience upper respiratory irritation following cold-weather workouts.

"I do a lot of running in upstate New York and also coached teams there. When you get through running in cold weather, you cough ... it hurts ... it's very uncomfortable," he says.

Hanlon has applied for design and mechanical patents, and plans to begin marketing his Hanlon Air Conditioner for $10 through his International Track Club Inc. in October.

The HAC is a molded piece of plastic about three inches long, an inch wide and flared at one end. When the opposite end is placed in the mouth, Hanlon claims it raises air temperature by about 14 degrees.

A string attached to the HAC is worn around the neck to prevent it from being accidentally inhaled.

"I used to run with a sweat sock across my mouth just to kind of pre-heat the air. But the sock would freeze because the moisture got trapped.

After much experimentation, Hanlon came up with the design for the heat exchanger last December, he says. Because his patents are pending, he won't discuss exactly what's in the HAC or how it works.

Dr. Richard Gonzalez, an associate professor at the non-profit S.B. Pierce Foundation at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., tested the HAC on six athletes ranging from long-distance swimmers to biathlon contestants.

He says the HAC moisturizes cold dry air, the cause of the pain Hanlon was trying to prevent.

"The preliminary results have been very dramatic," he said.

CBS No. 1 In Prime Time For Third Straight Week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, with five of the week's 10 top-rated shows, including "M-A-S-H" in first place, won the networks' ratings race for the third straight week, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

It was also the third consecutive week for "M-A-S-H" as the No. 1 show in prime-time, although the audience for the CBS comedy was the lowest for any winning program in the last year.

CBS' rating for the week ending July 11 was 12.6 to 11.9 for ABC and 10.8 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average minute of prime time during the week, 12.6 percent of the country's homes with TV were watching CBS.

The rating for "M-A-S-H" was 19.3. Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the program, 19.3 percent of the nation's television-equipped homes with were tuned to CBS.

Audience levels normally decline during the summer, but "M-A-S-H" was the first of the No. 1 shows in the weekly ratings to register less than 20 percent of the potential viewers.

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington have estimated as many as 200,000 Iranian troops were moved up to the frontier. An Iranian parliament member, Ayatollah Musavi Tabrizi, told a news conference in Istanbul, Turkey, that Iran "may launch a major attack against Iran."

Prime Minister Hossein Musavi of Iran on Tuesday rejected a U.N. Security Council resolution proposing that U.N. observers be sent to the battle zone to oversee a cease-fire. In a Tehran radio broadcast monitored in Beirut, Musavi called the resolution a "vote of confidence" by the United States and Soviet Union for Hussein.

Iran has demanded as its price for peace the payment of $150 billion in war reparations by Iraq and an acknowledgement by the Baghdad government that it was the aggressor.

Iran also has demanded the overthrow of Hussein, but the Iraqi president said Tuesday that Iran's official demands did not include his resignation.

Scholarships Renewed For Lawson, Paschel

WTSU – Scholarships for two West Texas State University students from Hereford have been renewed for 1982-83 based on the students' academic performance.

Receiving the President's Honor Scholarships for the second year are Willa Bess Lawson, a sophomore computer information systems major from Route 4, and Jill Paschel, a sophomore music education major and daughter of Larry Paschel of 131 Greenwood.

The $100 scholarship recipients received President's Honor Scholarships when they entered WTSU as beginning freshmen. Recent contributions from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation of Amarillo have made possible the scholarship renewals.

Renewals are based on the student's ability to maintain a 3.0 or better grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Of the 28 Don and Sybil Harrington President's Honor Scolars who received the scholarships as freshmen, 26 have maintained the requirements necessary for renewal.

To be designated as President's Honor Scholars, entering freshmen must have scored at least 28 of a possible 36 on the American College Test and 1,220 of a possible 1,600 points on the Scholastic Aptitude Test college entrance examination.

President's Honor Scholarships are administered through the WTSU Development Office.

Ann Landers

Simple Exercise Helps

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Because of childbirth and the natural aging process, many older women suffer from embarrassing incontinence. To put it bluntly, we wet our pants when we laugh heartily, cough or sneeze.

When we consult a physician, we are told it's "natural" and we will just have to put up with it, or resort to surgery which might not be successful. Why is it that doctors who are supposed to be knowledgeable never tell us about the Kegel method of exercising the pubococcygeous muscle? These simple exercises require very little time and they not only help solve the wet-pants problem but can lead to greater sexual enjoyment for both husband and wife.

Please request your physician-readers to learn about the Kegel method if they don't already know. Many women – both young and old – will be extremely grateful. – Newly Alive In Rochester.

DEAR ALIVE: I have suggested the Kegel method in this space at least twice in the last few years. It may not solve severe problems of incontinence, but it certainly will be helpful to many. And your claim regarding increased sexual enjoyment is correct. If your gynecologist does not know about the Kegel method, he or she hasn't been keeping up. Find a new doctor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, print this letter, since it may be our only hope for a peaceful future. We are all faithful readers of Ann Landers.

My husband, daughter and I recently moved here from our home town. We have lived here four months and have had exactly one weekend without my in-laws.

We know they are crazy about their only grandchild, but they don't realize what a strain their presence has put on our marriage. They invite themselves to every outing we plan. None of our friends or relatives can visit us because they are always here. We love them and get along fine, but enough is enough. How do we get liberated? – Trapped In London

DEAR TRAPPED: Your husband must talk to his parents in a loving but forthright manner. If he is unable to do so, he shouldn't blame them for imposing It's his fault for permitting the imposition.

I've said it before and I'll say it again – it takes two types to create the situation you describe: parents who have the insensitivity to assume that their married children want to spend all their free t... and a weak, ... or daughter ... maturity and co... a declaratio... dependence.

GTE Rates To Be Set By PUC Today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The three-member Public Utilities Commission planned today to review a hearing examiner's report recommending a $49.1 million rate increase for General Telephone Co.

GTE, which serves 1.3 million Texans, wants $110.6 million in increases.

The company request includes $30 million in increases in long-distance tolls and $43 million more from basic monthly residential service.

Specific increases in residential service would vary by city. In Garland, the largest city served by GTE, the company wants $17.05 a month for the service that now costs $11.15. The hearing examiner recommended $16.90 a month for Garland household service.

The company also wants a 20-cent charge for directory assistance calls above three per month.

The San Angelo-based telephone company filed for the increase in January.

Today's rate hearing opened with testimony from GTE customers who said the company provides poor service. Hearing Examiner Jacqueline Holmes agreed there are "many problems."

Oilman Indicted In Scheme To Underwrite Dry Well

HOUSTON (AP) — An oilman has been indicted for allegedly defrauding three investors of $21,000 to underwrite a dry well in Kentucky, prosecutors said.

Harris County grand jurors on Tursday charged Salvatore Deloro, 55, with theft. If convicted, Deloro could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Deloro allegedly told investors the well, located near Bowling Green, Ky., had struck oil and that other wells in the same area would be developed, said Prosecutor Russel Turbeville.

However, the first well, which never struck oil, was not licensed and subsequent wells were never built, Turbeville said.

Judge Orders $200 Reward Reimbursed

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — With a bit of a twist on the adage "crime doesn't pay," a state judge ordered a man convicted of a marijuana charge to reimburse the organization that paid a $200 reward for his arrest.

District Judge Earl Smith ordered Kevin C. Gill, 25, to reimburse the Crime Stoppers program for the $200 it paid to an informant.

Tom Green County Assistant District Attorney Dick Alcala said the state will be seeking reimbursement for Crime Stoppers rewards "on a regular basis" in cases where defendants are found guilty.

Gill, of San Angelo, was arrested March 19 with Eugene Caswell, 30, after police searched their home after a telephone tip to the anti-crime program. He was sentenced to three years probation and fined $250 in addition to the reimbursement.

Oil Thiefs Sentenced To Prison, Fined

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A Gregg County district judge has sentenced three people convicted of conspiring to steal oil from an East Texas oil field to five-year prison terms and fined them $10,000 each.

The trio are W.S. "Bull"Barber, 63, and his son, B.S. "Buddy" Barber, both of Kilgore, and Jean Brown, 63, of Sapulpa, Okla. They were sentenced Tuesday by Judge Marcus Vascucu.

The three were convicted earlier this month of engaging in organized crime in connection with the theft of oil from the East Texas Oil Field near Longview.

Before the sentencing, Vascocu heard three hours of character and medical testimony that included letters from physcians who said the defendants were in poor health.

Wheelchair Climbers Face Hotter Weather Higher Up

GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Four paraplegic mountain climbers have pushed their wheelchairs more than three miles up Texas' tallest peak and are ready for their final ascent today, park rangers said.

The climbers wheeled two miles Tuesday to a camp a mile and a half from the summit of 8,751-foot high Guadalupe Peak.

But the toughest part of the gruelling climb lay ahead, a park ranger said.

Rangers had expressed concern about how well the climbers would handle the trail and 90-degree temperatures Tuesday. Two colleagues dropped out of the expedition Monday with physical problems.

But Ranger Bill Dunmire said Tuesday evening that the men had reached a shaded, forested area of the trail and covered two miles of the 4¾-mile climb during the day.

"They're in good shape, they're in good spirits and they feel they have a good shot at it. We felt today would be a good test. They've sure passed it as far as I'm concerned," Dunmire said Tuesday.

The men camped Tuesday night at 7,500 feet, 1,700 feet above their starting point.

Rogers was left with the leadership role after two more experienced climbers withdrew Monday when the climb began.

Climbing with Rogers were Dave Kiley, 29, of Los Angeles, Bobby Leyes, 30, of Raleigh, N.C., and Joe Moss, 32, of Dallas. Moss lost his legs in the Vietnam war and the other climbers are paralyzed from accidents.

Expedition leader Michael "Shorty" Powers, 30, of Dallas dropped out when he developed muscle spasms. John Galland, 31, of Mound, Minn., was suffering a kidney infection and didn't start the program.

Dunmire said the park rangers are patrolling the gravel horse trail that winds its way to the summit. He said the climbers preferred to be on their own without park ranger assistance.

"They really picked up today," Dunmire said Tuesday. "They found the going better. They reported that the trail wasn't quite as steep as that early part."

On Monday, the climbers traveled over cactus and mesquite for 1¾ miles, Dunmire said. Although not as steep, the trail the men covered Tuesday ascends at a 10 to 12 percent grade, Dunmire said.

Dunmire predicted today's leg of the climb will be the toughest because the men will have to leave their wheelchairs and crawl to the top as the trail becomes too tough to climb even for horses.

The climbers are members of an organization called Paraplegics On Independent Nature Trips, or POINT, founded by Powers.

The expedition is benefitting the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, a nonprofit corporation that operates therapy centers in Abilene, Snyder and San Angelo. Contributors are donating up to 10 cents for every foot that the climbers ascend, with all of the money going to the rehabilitation centers.

PLO Will Surrender Troops If US Recognizes Group

By The Associated Press

The Palestine Liberation Organization, its trapped forces outgunned by massive Israeli firepower and abandoned by Arab nations, wants U.S. recognition before agreeing to leave Lebanon, PLO and Lebanese sources say.

The sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said Tuesday that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat would order his 8,000 fighters cornered in west Beirut to surrender their heavy weapons and evacuate by sea under U.S. 6th Fleet escort if Washington recognizes his guerrilla group.

U.S. agreement to this demand would be a stunning setback for Israel and a triumph for the PLO, which has teetered on military defeat since Israel launched its massive invasion of Lebanon June 6 to crush the guerrillas.

Washington has refused to recognize the PLO until the group acknowledges Israel's right to exist and agrees to U.N. frameworks for a Middle East peace.

The Jewish state has threatened to invade west Beirut unless the PLO leaves Lebanon, but no Arab governments have offered refuge to the guerrilla organization. An emergency Arab League meeting on the crisis was scrapped Tuesday because not enough members wanted to attend.

Lebanese officials and war correspondents said Israel moved more tanks and troops Tuesday to positions outside the besieged PLO enclaves, but a cease-fire arranged two days earlier by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib appeared to be holding.

The sources estimate between 35,000 and 40,000 Israeli troops backed by 300 tanks and up to 500 armored personnel carriers surround west Beirut, where the guerrillas have blended with the estimated 500,000 civilians. An attack would mean bloody fighting and heavy casualties on all sides.

Publicly, PLO leaders said they would be more open to a political solution if they received U.S. recognition, but stopped short of offering to evacuate.

"We are fighting for that, to force the United States to recognize us," Arafat's political adviser Hani al-Hassan said Tuesday.

"I am sure that if there were direct talks between the PLO and America through Philip Habib, it would be a very important step for the PLO, and the PLO would be ready to be more flexible and rethink a lot of things," he said.

In Washington, Secretary of State-designate George Shultz said at his Senate confirmation hearings that the Reagan administration is following the policy that has banned negotiations between the PLO and the United States. But he said "representatives of the Palestinian people" should be represented in the Middle East peace process.

The United States and Israel claim the PLO has never explicitly recognized Israel's right to exist. But the PLO says it formally recognized Israel's right to exist in 1981, when it endorsed a Soviet Middle East peace plan that called for secure boundaries for the Jewish state.

Man Second N.M. Plague Fatality

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — State health officials hoped to determine today if a northern New Mexico man who died of plague contracted the highly contagious pneumonic form of the disease.

The unidentified man, whom officials say lived alone in the northern New Mexico community of Vallecitos, died Monday night and was the state's second plague fatality within a two-day period.

"We do not know if this man had the pneumonic form of the disease or not," said Dr. Jonathan Mann, chief of the Communicable Disease Control Division.

The pneumonic form of the disease can be transmitted from person to person.

"In the meanwhile, we've identified...the contacts in the hospital and ambulance service who would have had exposure to the man just before he died," Mann said. "These people are going to be placed on preventive medication and surveillance."

Mann said about 15 people, most of them hospital personnel but also some residents of the community where the man lived, had been placed on preventive medication and would be kept under surveillance.

"There does not appear to be any spread, but we will carefully monitor the situation for the next week," Mann said late Tuesday.

"We do not expect there to be any problem with person to person spread of the disease," Mann said.

Mann said the man died Monday night at the Espanola Hospital emergency room. Mann said the man became ill on Saturday and the diagnosis was confirmed by the state laboratory Tuesday.

The plague case is the fourth confirmed in New Mexico this year. Two the cases resulted in death with the two other victims recovering, health officials said.

On Sunday, an 11-year-old boy from McKinley County died of bubonic plague, the most common form of the disease in New Mexico, Mann said.

Mann also emphasized there was no connection between the two fatal cases.

"They have nothing to do with each other," Mann said. "They are from different parts of the state."

A symptom of bubonic plague is a painful swelling of the lymph glands, usually in neck, groin or armpit.

Analysts Interested Only In Profits, Not Reviews

Even before he saw "Annie," Hoffman described it as "an overproduced spectacular." "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" won't come out until Friday; it'll be a debacle, he says — again without having seen it.

It's not that this guy pans everything. He'll allow that a movie has "good demographics," is "a break-even prospect" or, like the latest Disney movie, "Tron," "on the edge of reasonable risk."

Hoffman is a Wall Street stock analyst. He's no critic. He doesn't care whether he likes a movie or not. All he cares about is: Will it make money?

Wall Street's buttoned-down analysts are increasingly finding themselves cast as critics of Hollywood's creative offerings. Their opinions, while of little interest to the movie-goer, can influence a substantial audience in the financial community — and, as a result, the price of a movie company's stock.

"The question I have to ask is: Are the regular moviegoers going to get excited about this film? And will it bring out the people who only occasionally go to movies?" says Hoffman, of A.G. Becker Inc.

But he shrugs off the title of critic. "The whole business of us being film critics is ludicrous," he says. "If a film had to depend on drawing people from my demographic group, it'd be in trouble."

Securities analysts all pore through trade journals, but Hoffman and about a dozen others like him even search the gossip columns for tidbits about film production problems (could mean higher costs, lower profit) and box office stars.

Last week some negative words from investment analysts about "Tron" sent Disney stock spinning down $2.50, to $56.37, in one day of trading.

Theodore James Jr., of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, advised clients to sell Disney stock until the price dropped to $52 a share because the $20 million film told a "seriously flawed, disjointed story."

Several other analysts predict the film won't do well. But they say it won't hurt Disney's overall financial condition.

"I didn't think 'Tron' was all that great, but I never thought it was going to be a major contributor to the company's overall financial situation," says Harold Vogel, of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. Vogel cut his profit estimate by a nickel, to $3.45 a share, after the screening.

"I've been saying to buy this stock aggressively if it comes down, and I still feel that way," he adds.

Breathing Device That Warms Air For Lungs

BARRINGTON, R.I. (AP) — Ray Hanlon, a former Providence College track coach and year-round jogger, thought there had to be a way to warm air before it reached the lungs, preventing the irritation caused by cold-weather exertion.

Although he doesn't fancy himself as an inventor, Hanlon's experimenting and testing led him to design a small plastic mouthpiece he says makes running — or almost any cold-weather sport — less painful.

Preliminary tests show the device does what Hanlon claims.

The 57-year-old associate professor of education got the idea after years of watching runners experience upper respiratory irritation following cold-weather workouts.

"I do a lot of running in upstate New York and also coached teams there. When you get through running in cold weather, you cough ... it hurts ... it's very uncomfortable," he says.

Hanlon has applied for design and mechanical patents, and plans to begin marketing his Hanlon Air Conditioner for $10 through his International Track Club Inc. in October.

The HAC is a molded piece of plastic about three inches long, an inch wide and flared at one end. When the opposite end is placed in the mouth, Hanlon claims it raises air temperature by about 14 degrees.

A string attached to the HAC is worn around the neck to prevent it from being accidentally inhaled.

"I used to run with a sweat sock across my mouth just to kind of pre-heat the air. But the sock would freeze because the moisture got trapped.

After much experimentation, Hanlon came up with the design for the heat exchanger last December, he says. Because his patents are pending, he won't discuss exactly what's in the HAC or how it works.

Dr. Richard Gonzalez, an associate professor at the non-profit S.B. Pierce Foundation at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., tested the HAC on six athletes ranging from long-distance swimmers to biathlon contestants.

He says the HAC moisturizes cold dry air, the cause of the pain Hanlon was trying to prevent.

"The preliminary results have been very dramatic," he said.

CBS No. 1 In Prime Time For Third Straight Week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, with five of the week's 10 top-rated shows, including "M-A-S-H" in first place, won the networks' ratings race for the third straight week, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

It was also the third consecutive week for "M-A-S-H" as the No. 1 show in prime-time, although the audience for the CBS comedy was the lowest for any winning program in the last year.

CBS' rating for the week ending July 11 was 12.6 to 11.9 for ABC and 10.8 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average minute of prime time during the week, 12.6 percent of the country's homes with TV were watching CBS.

The rating for "M-A-S-H" was 19.3. Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the program, 19.3 percent of the nation's television-equipped homes with were tuned to CBS.

Audience levels normally decline during the summer, but "M-A-S-H" was the first of the No. 1 shows in the weekly ratings to register less than 20 percent of the potential viewers.

"We got an undamaged tape. The problem, we are convinced, was in the quality of the recording," Burnett told reporters.

At the same time, investigators said the flight data recorder used aboard most U.S. aircraft, including Flight 759, fails to provide some critical information that could be preserved by a more modern "digital" instrument.

The safety board, which has only power to recommend, urged that the FAA require that the current recorders be replaced by the digital version.

Six U.S. carriers already are using some digital recorders and a number of foreign aviation agencies already require them, the safety board said.

gold surged more than $16 an ounce in U.S. trading Tuesday, despite higher short-term interest rates. The rates pushed the dollar's value higher against most major currencies.

Also, the rate of six-month Treasury bills climbed two-fifths of a percentage point to 12.37 percent.

Stockholders of Continental Airlines overwhelmingly approved a merger with Texas Air Corp. Earlier Tuesday, the shareholders of Texas Air, parent company of Texas International Airlines, approved the proposal.

Continental and Texas Air lost money last year and in the first quarter of this year.

A vice president of Braniff International said federal agents are investigating fuel-purchasing practices by the failed airline.

The airline requested the investigation, said Braniff Vice President Sam Coats. FBI officials, asking anonymity, told the Dallas Morning News the investigation involved a possible jet fuel kickback scheme.

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington have estimated as many as 200,000 Iranian troops were moved up to the frontier. An Iranian parliament member, Ayatollah Musavi Tabrizi, told a news conference in Istanbul, Turkey, that Iran "may launch a major attack against Iran."

Prime Minister Hossein Musavi of Iran on Tuesday rejected a U.N. Security Council resolution proposing that U.N. observers be sent to the battle zone to oversee a cease-fire. In a Tehran radio broadcast monitored in Beirut, Musavi called the resolution a "vote of confidence" by the United States and Soviet Union for Hussein.

Iran has demanded as its price for peace the payment of $150 billion in war reparations by Iraq and an acknowledgement by the Baghdad government that it was the aggressor.

Iran also has demanded the overthrow of Hussein, but the Iraqi president said Tuesday that Iran's official demands did not include his resignation.

Scholarships Renewed For Lawson, Paschel

WTSU – Scholarships for two West Texas State University students from Hereford have been renewed for 1982-83 based on the students' academic performance.

Receiving the President's Honor Scholarships for the second year are Willa Bess Lawson, a sophomore computer information systems major from Route 4, and Jill Paschel, a sophomore music education major and daughter of Larry Paschel of 131 Greenwood.

The $100 scholarship recipients received President's Honor Scholarships when they entered WTSU as beginning freshmen. Recent contributions from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation of Amarillo have made possible the scholarship renewals.

Renewals are based on the student's ability to maintain a 3.0 or better grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Of the 28 Don and Sybil Harrington President's Honor Scolars who received the scholarships as freshmen, 26 have maintained the requirements necessary for renewal.

To be designated as President's Honor Scholars, entering freshmen must have scored at least 28 of a possible 36 on the American College Test and 1,220 of a possible 1,600 points on the Scholastic Aptitude Test college entrance examination.

President's Honor Scholarships are administered through the WTSU Development Office.

Ann Landers

Simple Exercise Helps

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Because of childbirth and the natural aging process, many older women suffer from embarrassing incontinence. To put it bluntly, we wet our pants when we laugh heartily, cough or sneeze.

When we consult a physician, we are told it's "natural" and we will just have to put up with it, or resort to surgery which might not be successful. Why is it that doctors who are supposed to be knowledgeable never tell us about the Kegel method of exercising the pubococcygeous muscle? These simple exercises require very little time and they not only help solve the wet-pants problem but can lead to greater sexual enjoyment for both husband and wife.

Please request your physician-readers to learn about the Kegel method if they don't already know. Many women – both young and old – will be extremely grateful. – Newly Alive In Rochester.

DEAR ALIVE: I have suggested the Kegel method in this space at least twice in the last few years. It may not solve severe problems of incontinence, but it certainly will be helpful to many. And your claim regarding increased sexual enjoyment is correct. If your gynecologist does not know about the Kegel method, he or she hasn't been keeping up. Find a new doctor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, print this letter, since it may be our only hope for a peaceful future. We are all faithful readers of Ann Landers.

My husband, daughter and I recently moved here from our home town. We have lived here four months and have had exactly one weekend without my in-laws.

We know they are crazy about their only grandchild, but they don't realize what a strain their presence has put on our marriage. They invite themselves to every outing we plan. None of our friends or relatives can visit us because they are always here. We love them and get along fine, but enough is enough. How do we get liberated? – Trapped In London

DEAR TRAPPED: Your husband must talk to his parents in a loving but forthright manner. If he is unable to do so, he shouldn't blame them for imposing It's his fault for permitting the imposition.

I've said it before and I'll say it again – it takes two types to create the situation you describe: parents who have the insensitivity to assume that their married children want to spend all their free time with them, and a weak, tongue-tied son or daughter who lacks the maturity and courage to issue a declaration of independence.

Featured in Mini-Pageant

Meeting Features Pageant, Musical Program

A large number of members and guests attended the Women's Division July quarterly meeting Tuesday evening at the Hereford Country Club.

Highlighting the meeting were the introduction of the Little Miss Hereford winners, Miss Hereford contestants, and a program of original musical compostitions by Mrs. Tom Burdett.

Women's Division President Carolyn Canon welcomed everyone and then recognized committee chairmen for their services this year. She welcomed special guests, Tom Burdett, and friends of the couple from out of town.

DeeAnne Trotter was master of ceremonies for a mini-pageant featuring the four little Miss Hereford winners and 15 of the 18 Miss Hereford contestants, as well as Dana Ulibarri, the reigning Miss Hereford. The girls wore costumes of their own choosing.

Those present were invited to attend the Miss Hereford pageant Aug. 14 at the Hereford High School auditorium. The girl who is chosen to be Miss Hereford will reign as queen during the Town and Country Jubilee the following weekend.

Mrs. Canon then introduced Carlie Burdett, who began composing music when she was in school. She performed the first piece she composed as a piano solo, followed by a trio made up of Randy Vaughn on flute, Chris White on snare drum, and Jan Walser on piano.

Mrs. Burdett then accompanied Vaughn in a flute and piano duet, after which she played another piano solo. Mrs. Walser performed a piano solo with narration and then accompanied Joyce Allred as she sang the first compostition to which Mrs. Burdett wrote words.

The program was then turned over to Bill Devers and a group of ten Hereford Chamber Singers who performed five of Mrs. Burdett's choral numbers, accompanied by Elva Devers.

After the program, Mrs. Canon reminded everyone of the Town and Country Jubilee, Aug. 20-22. Several special attractions were noted, including the rodeo, the chili cook-off, and the parade.

Musical Entertainment

A group of the Hereford Chamber Singers, under the direction of Bill Devers and accompanied by Elva Devers, performed several choral numbers composed by Mrs. Tom Burdett during the July quarterly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Women's Division. A musical program made up entirely of Mrs. Burdett's compositions was presented Tuesday at the Country Club.

Shareholders Approve Of Merger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The acquisition of Continental Airlines by Texas Air Corp. has been approved by stockholders of both companies, capping a long takeover battle staged by the Houston-based airline.

Stockholders overwhelmingly approved the merger Tuesday at separate meetings in Los Angeles — although objections were raised at both meetings.

Texas Air, parent of Texas International Airlines and New York Air, acquired 51 percent of Continental last year after a fierce takeover battle that saw the employees of Continental frustrated in an effort to take ownership of the Los Angeles-based airline.

Continental's former president, Al Feldman, committed suicide during the takeover fight after it became apparent Texas Air would prevail.

Management officers of both companies tried to put the struggle behind them in presenting an optimistic report to the shareholders. But both companies posted substantial losses last year, with Texas Air losing $47.2 million and Continental $60 million.

Frank Lorenzo, president of Texas Air and the prime mover in the takeover battle, contended that the merger would create a much stronger joint company.

Continental and Texas International will operate separately in the future, but both will seek to feed each other passengers. A new marketing approach also is being studied for Texas International.

Lorenzo said the merged companies would be particularly powerful in the Denver and Houston areas.

He said Texas International's fleet of 39 DC-9s were efficient for medium length routes while Continental's 727s and DC-10s were best for longer routes.

The combination also is expected to save both companies money by eliminating duplicated costs and expenditures.

"We are very confident about the wisdom of a combined TI-Continental," Lorenzo said, adding that he intended to seek major concessions from Continental's unions as well as other costs reductions.

"Continental has a very, very severe productivity problem and a cost structure does not fit into today's marketplace," Lorenzo told Continental's shareholders.

Continental President George Warde, who followed Feldman as president, noted that the airline has almost reached agreement with its lenders to restructure its long-term debt.

"The amount involved are $199 million for Continental and $96 million for Texas International," Warde said. "This is an important step along the path to long-term profitibility for both airlines."

Warde noted that Continental also has sold its headquarters building and several gates at the Houston airport that will net it $26.5 million this year.

Warde said Continental still was attempting to implement its so-called "prosperity plan" and would continue to seek concessions from pilots and other unionized employees. He said both companies would seek other economy measures.

"We're going to reduce costs in a number of ways," he said. "We can provide services to each other that we now are buying from outside vendors. We will eliminate duplicate facilities. We can reduce inventory levels and cut administrative costs."

Warde and Lorenzo also confirmed that Continental has several aircraft up for sale.

Lorenzo said the companies' route structure would be changed gradually to complement each other's systems.

"You're not going to wake up one morning and find there's been an abrupt schedule change," he said. "We expect to continue operating the airlines as two different entities."

Lorenzo fended off complaints from several stockholders who criticized terms of the merger and the slump in the prices of both companies' stocks.

Violent Winds, Payload Cited As Probable Causes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Pan Am jet crash that killed 154 people probably was caused by a combination of violent winds and an almost capacity load of passengers, baggage and fuel, a New Orleans newspaper reported today.

A National Transportation Board spokesman, Brad Dunbar, said, "We don't comment on that sort of thing," when asked about the copyright story in The Times-Picayune, The States-Item.

The story quoted unidentified federal investigators.

Pan Am Flight 759 crashed Friday afternoon shortly after takeoff from New Orleans International Airport in a torrential rainstorm on a flight from Miami to San Diego, via New Orleans and Las Vegas.

The death toll aboard the plane was 146, including an unborn 7-month-old fetus added Tuesday by the Jefferson Parish coroner. Eight people on the ground died when the Boeing 727-200 slammed into Kenner in suburban New Orleans, destroying or heavily damaging more than a dozen homes in the second-worst U.S. air accident.

The first three lawsuits in the crash were filed Tuesday, asking for a total of $88.5 million.

The NTSB says two wind shear advisories were broadcast shortly before the jet took off.

'Hostage' Cat Back With Owner

DICKINSON, Texas (AP) — A cat held "prisoner" for a month spent his first day at home since the surgery that left his owner and a veterinarian feuding over the bill.

"He's fine, he's purring," said Sharelle Overton, 19, who won back her cat, Tobias, at a 2½-hour trial Tuesday. The orange-and-white feline attended the proceeding but seemed restless in his carrying cage, scratching against the door and crying.

The veterinarian who yielded the cat rejected a cash offer of $125 from Miss Overton to settle an unpaid surgery bill for the cat's operation.

Instead, Dr. Ron Ludwig told his attorney he wants to sue to collect the $275 bill and possibly more for boarding, post-operative care and attorneys' fees.

"Whatever happens, that's fine," said Miss Overton as she hugged her cat outside Justice of the Peace Willim T. Fuhrhop's court in this community south of Houston. 'I've got my cat back, and that's all I care about."

Miss Overton filed the lawsuit against Ludwig last month, when the veterinarian refused to return Tobias because Miss Overton had not paid the $275 he demanded for emmergency surgery to remove some fishing line the cat had swallowed.

"It is the judgment of this court that Tobias the cat be returned to its owner at this time," ruled Fuhrhop at the close of Tuesday's hearing.

The obviously healthy cat purred after Miss Overton took him from the cage and hugged him.

The controversy began last month when Miss Overton and four friends picketed Ludwig's clinic in nearby League City, Texas.

Ludwig testified he agreed to perform the surgery for an unspecified fee — with the operation itself costing $125 but not including medicine, X-rays and hospitalization.

Miss Overton contended Ludwig agreed to do the operation for no more than $125 but then demanded the higher price when she came to get Tobias on June 12.

It was revealed during Tuesday's hearing that Tobias had been held "prisoner" at a veterinary clinic in Houston, 45 miles away, owned by a friend of Ludwig's.

Fourteen cab drivers in Topeka, Kan., who read about the controversy in a newspaper sent a $275 check to Ludwig's lawyer hoping to free the cat. Ludwig's attorney, Rusty Verkin, said after Tuesday's hearing he would send the check back to the cabbies.

British Police Accused Of Being Incompetent

LONDON (AP) — British newspapers accused Buckingham Palace police today of ignoring noisy alarm calls by Queen Elizabeth II when a grubby intruder crept into her bedroom, and said a chambermaid helped her get rid of him.

The respected Daily Tegegraph said the 56-year-old queen was furious over the security breach last Friday when the man shinned up a drainpipe, climbed through a window, wandered around corridors and sneaked into her second-floor room.

Reports said the monarch awoke to find a man sitting on her bed brandishing a broken ashtray and dripping blood from a gashed hand onto the royal bedcovers.

Michael Fagan, a 31-year-old vagabond, was arrested after the incident. Fagan's lawyer Maurice Nadeem told reporters Tuesday after visiting him in London's Brixton jail that his client spent "just over 10 minutes" talking with the queen about the royal family.

Nadeem said Fagan had been to the palace "twice — no more," despite reports in the Daily Express and Sun tabloids that he broke into the royal residence as many as 12 times.

The Daily Telegraph quoted unidentified Parliament members as saying that Fagan set off an alarm in the palace but that police there ignored it, thinking it was a faulty mechanism.

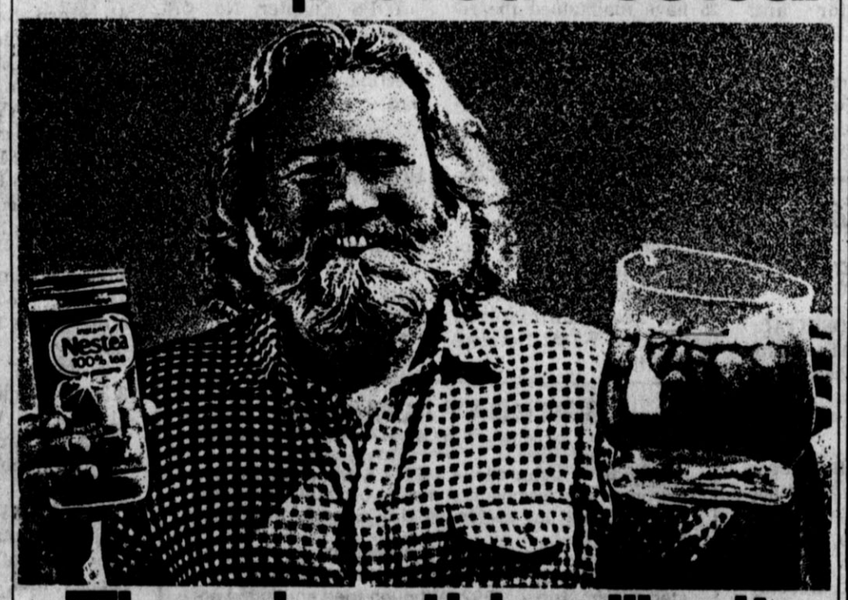

"It was also disclosed that they did not understand when the Queen telephoned to tell them the intruder was in her bedroom, the paper quoted the Parliament members as saying.

NL Uses AL Formula for 4-1 All-Star Win

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — For the last 11 years, the National League has found a way to win the All-Star Game. This year, the American League supplied the formula.

The frustrated Americans had pledged to win with speed on the bases, tight defense and tough relief pitching. That combination, spiced by Cincinnati shortstop Dave Concepcion's two-run homer, was just how the Nationals built their 4-1 triumph Tuesday night.

Two vital statistics spelled doom for the AL, which now trails this series 34-18 with one tie and has lost 19 of the last 20 games.

Manager Billy Martin's club struck out 10 times against NL pitchers Steve Rogers of Montreal, Steve Carlton of Philadelphia and Mario Soto of Cincinnati, and left 11 runners on base.

"We had enough opportunities," Martin said. "We just didn't capitalize."

Concepcion did, though, hitting a hanging slider from Boston's Dennis Eckersley into the left-field seats in the second inning to earn the game's Most Valuable Player trophy.

The AL took a 1-0 lead in the first against Rogers, scoring on hits by Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who had three singles, and George Brett of Kansas City, a wild pitch and a long sacrifice fly by California's Reggie Jackson.

"Reggie was a little under that ball or it could have been 3-0," Rogers said.

Boston's Eckersley mowed down the first five NL batters but was having some control problems. He walked Dale Murphy of Atlanta on four pitches, bringing up Concepcion.

"I felt I had lost a little," the Eckersley said. "I gave Concepcion a fastball and he fouled it back. Then I went to a slider and it was good-bye."

"I was looking for an off-speed pitch," Concepcion said. "I guess I got the head of the bat out on it."

In his last batting-practice swing, Concepcion had smashed a line drive into Olympic Stadium's lower left field seats. Eckersley's pitch wound up in almost the same spot.

"He yanked it," Eckersley said. "I was hoping it would hook foul. You know it's a bad pitch when you throw it. You say to yourself, 'Break!'"

Concepcion, who has only one home run this season, had put the NL in front and Manager Tommy Lasorda of Los Angeles thought the timing was every bit as important as the runs.

"When you have two men out and nobody on base and then you get two runs, well, that's a big lift," said Lasorda, 3-0 as NL manager streak. "It came at a very opportune time."

An inning later, the NL was back for more. Pinch-hitter Ruppert Jones of San Diego led off with a triple that bounced off the base of the wall in right-center.

After Montreal's Tim Raines walked and stole second, Jones scored on Pete Rose's sacrifice fly, sliding across just ahead of Jackson's strong throw and tagging the plate with his hand as Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk lunged to make the tag.

That made it 3-1 and Carlton relieved Rogers for the NL. He struck out the side in the fourth, stranding two runners he had walked. In the fifth he surrendered a single to Henderson but then started a double play on Kansas City's Willie Wilson, as the NL erased two of baseball's fastest runners.

Soto relieved in the sixth inning and the AL trend continued — runners left on base and batters striking out. He permitted a leadoff single by New York's Dave Winfield but mowed down the next three hitters, finishing the inning by striking out Boston's Carl Yastrzemski. But the Cincinnati right-hander saved his best show for the seventh.

The Nationals had increased their lead to 4-1 in the sixth on a double by Al Oliver and an RBI single by Gary Carter as the two Montreal teammates gave the hometown crowd of 59,057 — third largest in All-Star history — something to shout about.

Detroit's Lance Parrish opened the seventh with a double for the AL. Soto then struck out Kansas City's Frank White on a changeup. Henderson stroked his third single and promptly stole second. But Soto fanned Wilson and Texas' Buddy Bell.

"I threw three changeups to White," Soto said. "I started Wilson with a fastball and then went back to the change. Bell, I threw him three or four changeups straight.

"When I'm in trouble, I go back to my change. I'm a fastball, change-up pitcher. My change-up is my second best pitch and I have confidence in it."

The AL wasn't done quite yet. In the eighth, Fernando Valenzuela walked two batters and San Francisco's Greg Minton relieved. Parrish hit a slow chopper over the mound. St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith, who had replaced Concepcion, dashed in and made a dazzling play to end the inning, stranding the ninth and 10th AL runners.

No. 11 came in the final inning when Henderson walked with one out. Lasorda went to his bullpen for the Dodgers' Steve Howe, who retired rookie Kent Hrbek of Minnesota. Then Tom Hume of Cincinnati came on to get Bell, ending the game.

Afterward, Lasorda talked with Oakland's Martin for a moment.

"I told him the victory would be a lot sweeter if we could have beat somebody else," he said. "That's because he's such a nice guy and a friend of mine."

Concepcion Offers Pieces Of Trophy to Those Who Helped

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

MONTREAL (AP) — David Ismael Concepcion cradled the MVP trophy as if it were made of solid gold — it represented a dream of many years — but he hinted he'd like to chop it up and pass some of the pieces around to others.

They all had a part, he said, in the second-inning, two-run homer that gave the National League a 4-1 victory over the snake-bitten American League in Tuesday night's 53rd All-Star baseball game.

There was, for instance, his wife, Dillia.

"When I was elected to the All-Star squad, my wife told me, 'Dave, this is your 13th season, when are you going to win an MVP?'" he said. "I had that on my mind."

Then there was Luis Aparacio, the great American League shortstop of the 1950s and 1960s, a fellow Venezuelan on hand Tuesday night as part of a "Salute to International Baseball."

"I was so happy to see Luis," Concepcion said. "He is the greatest shortstop who ever lived. I told myself I should do something big for Luis."

Across the field in the enemy camp was Sparky Anderson, now Detroit manager and an American coach under Billy Martin. Sparky was manager of the Cincinnati Reds' "Big Red Machine" which under him won five divisional titles, four pennants and two world championships in the 1970s.

"Sparky was always nice to me," Concepcion said. "He encouraged me every way he could. I am sure he was proud of me even though we beat his team."

The white-haired Sparky, one of baseball's all-time winningest managers, had mixed emotions.

He despaired for his newly-adopted American Leaguers, now losers of 11 in a row and 19 of the last 20 All-Star games, but he puffed with pride over the performance of Concepcion.

"From the time I first saw him, I knew he was marked for stardom," Sparky said in the AL's dejected locker room afterward. "This guy could be the greatest shortstop of all-time. He always rises to the occasion."

No One Could Beat Frank McDougal

By DAVID LEESON Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — No one could beat Frank McDougal.

He was the man to place your bets on anytime he faced an opponent across the felt-covered slate. At one point in his life, pool sharks clamored for the chance to play him. The more he played, the more pool hall hustlers he put away with his cue stick, the farther his reputation spread.

Soon, nearly every serious pool player between Louisiana and New Mexico had heard of him and yearned to play against McDougal. But, as he readily admits, no one ever beat him — until 1976 and again in 1978.

He was 52 years old when Rocky Sherman of Wichita Falls beat him for the first time in 1976, followed by Gary Cee of Oklahoma two years later.

Now, at 58 and owner of the Golden Nuggets Billiard Hall, he says, "I was just outclassed."

McDougal boasts that he has never lost except for those games.

"It's not that there weren't others that could do it. They just didn't show up," he said with a sheepish grin as he shuffled his feet across the cement floor.

One unfortunate man lost about $5,000 over a period of nearly three months playing against McDougal.

"He didn't get mad about it since he was the one who asked for it," McDougal said while sitting at a domino table near the back of the room.

But McDougal said he's just a "pretty good old country pool player" who enjoys the game — not a pool hustler or shark.

"They really wanted to get their licks in on me, but didn't too many of them make it," he said. "I never did try to trap any of the boys. I told the if they could beat me, they could go out in the clubs and make money."

He paused briefly, while his thoughts seemed to drift. "Yeah ... that's what I told them," he said, glancing down.

McDougal's reputation was such that he didn't have to travel in search of competition. Hustlers on the road quickly learned of his skill with the pool cue and sought him out.

But family life was more important to McDougal than the traveling life of a pool shark. He said he never tried to make a living shooting pool, although he says he could easily make $50 to $100 a night playing clubs.

Instead, he worked for 27 years in the newspaper business doing "any or all of it."

But if McDougal is remembered as a family man instead of for his skill with the pool cue, it won't be because he didn't sink nearly as many opponents as he did wooden balls into corner pockets. Once, McDougal said, he played an opponent for 15 to 20 hours in one set "without letting up."

Gazing across the room, McDougal casually watched two young men playing pool. The two metal swinging doors at the entrance were propped open, pouring light onto the scene.

He turned back to the table, breathed a sign and said, "Yeah. Not too many really good players come by anymore."

AL Needed Less Hopes, More Hits

By HOWARD ULMAN AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — The American League had plenty of hopes. A few more hits might have been more useful.

For the 11th straight time and the 19th in 20 games, the AL fell to the National League in baseball's All-Star Game Tuesday night.

"You think about the streak, but really, tonight, everybody wanted to win and we were intent on winning," California's Reggie Jackson, the American League's starting right fielder, said after the 4-1 setback. "You hope you'll win."

Could it be that the National League relies more on hard work than hope, he was asked.

"When you've lost 18 of 19, you start hoping," Jackson replied.

He kept the American League from being shut out for the first time since 1968 when he lifted a sacrifice fly in the first inning that scored Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who had singled. The AL had eight hits and plenty of other chances but capitalized on none of them.

"Their pitchers pitched well tonight when they had to," said American League Manager Billy Martin of Oakland. "We didn't get the hits at the right time."

Eleven American Leaguers were left on base, and in five innings runners were stranded in scoring position.

"We could have easily scored two or three runs in the first inning or at other times," said Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk. "I don't have any particular theory (about the streak). We had a chance to win this game."

The mood of the American League players was one of disappointment but not extreme sadness. Several players said they weren't embarrassed by the perpetuation of the streak, and Fisk said there was no defeatist attitude on the bench.

He said he didn't think that as the game went on with the American League still trailing, his team, anxious to snap the streak, began pressing.

"I never thought, 'Oh, no. Here it goes again,'" he said.

New York's Dave Winfield, who replaced Jackson in right field, agreed that the American Leaguers didn't feel extra pressure as the loss came closer.

"Maybe teams that lose a lot get down when they're losing, but these guys are all good players and are used to winning," he said. "One swing can change the game. So we were in it down to the wire."

He was at a loss to explain the NL's dominance of the midsummer classic.

Nets Ensnare Spurs' Center

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs may lose the services of towering center Dave "Lumberjack" Corzine, a free agent who has agreed to the terms of a reported multi-million dollar offer by the New Jersey Nets.

A Nets spokesman confirmed Tuesday that Corzine had signed an offer sheet. She declined to discuss terms of the offer that three San Antonio newspapers reported was a five-year contract for $650,000 a year.

Corzine's agent, Herb Rudoy of Chicago, said the New Jersey offer would be sent to the Spurs in "the next few days." But he said Spurs president Angelo Drossos has shown little enthusiasm for matching the offer.

"We're going to have to have a cap on salaries or complete revenue-sharing so that the teams in smaller markets can compete," Drossos complained after hearing reports of the high salary offer by the Nets.

The 6-foot-11, 265-pound Corzine averaged 10.1 points and 27 minutes a game as starting Spurs center George Johnson's backup. He led the Spurs in rebounding with 7.8 a game.

Drosses reportedly refused to discuss with Corzine a $400,000 contract renewal last fall. He would not comment on whether the Spurs will match the Nets' offer in the 15 days allotted.

"I'd rather wait and see this infamous, or famous, offer before I make a comment," the team president said.

Corzine, earning a reported $100,000 with the Spurs, became a free agent at the end of last season and said he was disappointed that the Spurs did not try to keep him.

"I really would have preferred to say in San Antonio. I'm not anxious at all to leave," Corzine said. "He (Drossos) hasn't stayed in contact with us. He hasn't made an offer since last summer. We have no idea what he's thinking."

The Phoenix Suns, Cleveland Cavaliers and Chicago Bulls also indicated an interest in Corzine, who excelled for the Spurs during the NBA playoffs.

Babe Ruth Stars Rip Friona, Face Dimmitt

Hereford's 13 year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars find themselves just one game away from a rematch with Plainview Blue today after clipping host Friona 12-2 Tuesday night in the District Tournament.

The Plainview bunch handed the Hereford stars their only loss of the tournament in a 9-4 decision last Saturday. Tuesday evening Plainview crunched Dimmitt 17-0 to enter the tounrey finals, and will await the winner of tonight's Hereford-Dimmitt game.

Hereford coach Mike Dodson attributed "heads up base-running" to his team's big win over Friona Tuesday night. And, another sterling pitching performance from Todd Shire didn't hurt the Hereford cause either.

Shire, who had cruised to a 17-1 win over Muleshoe in the tourney opener last Friday, notched his second win with a four-hit effort against Friona. Shire struck out eight Friona batters while walking five in a five-inning stint in the mound.

Bobby Medina, Vincent Brown, Keith Anderson, and Joe Fuentes all had a pair of hits for Hereford, while David Manchee added a single in the 9-hit attack. Anderson will be on the mound as Hereford plays Dimmitt at 8 p.m. in the tourney's single contest tonight.

A win against Dimmitt would send Hereford a 6 p.m. game against Plaiview Blue Thursday with a second game at 8 p.m. if necessary in the double - elimination event.

The winner of the district tourney qualifies for the State Tournament to be held in Graham beginning next Monday.

Nicklaus, Watson Ready For British Open Duel

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, on the list of the walking wounded earlier in the week, are on the mend and ready to hook up in another duel, this time in the 111th British Open golf championship.

The ancient event begins its 72-hole run Thursday on the Royal Troon Links, stretching some 7,067 yards through gorse and heather along the Firth of Clyde. The most international of all the world's major events, it has drawn a field of 150 players from 27 nations.

Aside from the host British, the largest contingent, 32, is from the United States, the nation that has dominated this event in the years since World War II.

Leading that deeply talented contingent are Nicklaus and Watson, who engaged in a final holes confrontation for the U.S. Open only four weeks ago, with Watson winning on a dramatic, chip-in birdie on the 71st hole.

And, it would be no surprise if, when the British Open comes down to its last few holes Sunday afternoon, it is still another Nicklaus-Watson matchup.

Recent history says it's very likely. Either Nicklaus or Watson has been first or second in six of the last seven British Opens and, in 1977, only a few miles down the coast, engaged in that incredible shootout at Turnberry, with Nicklaus playing the last two rounds 65-66 and losing to Watson's closing 65-65.

Britain's legal bookies agree it could happen again. On the eve of the championship, Watson was installed as the 4-1 favorite and Nicklaus listed as the second choice at 5-1.

Each is seeking a fourth British Open title, which would match the most by an American. And each comes into this one with his game in order, with confidence and enthusiasm high and despite a scare early in the week with no physical problems.

Watson skipped practice Sunday with the recurrence of a chronic problem with the little finger on his left hand. He couldn't grip the club.

"Everything's fine now," he said Wednesday, however. "I just took some aspirin and it cleared up. I've been able to play practice rounds the last two days. No trouble."

Nicklaus, too, had some physical problems.

"I had a touch of the flu over the weekend," he said Wednesday. "I'm over it now. Just a little weak, and that's clearing up, too." Watson, now the winner of six major professional titles, has taken three American events this season, is second on the year's money-winning list and is chasing a fifth Player of the Year title.

Nicklaus, 42, has collected a record 17 major professional titles.

Former Champs Tourney Upsets

WATERWOOD, Texas (AP) — Former champions are having a hard time keeping pace in the 82nd annual Women's Western Amateur Golf Championships at Waterwood Country Club.

Former champions Lancy Smith and Kathy Baker were upset Tuesday in first-round championship flight play in the oldest continuously-played women's tournament in the country.

Smith, the 1974 champion, led all qualifiers with a 2-under-par 71 Monday, but was defeated Tuesday by Laurie Burns, Gainesville, Fla., 5 and 4. Baker, the 1980 titlist, was beaten by Cindy Figg, Mount Pleasant, Mich., 3 and 2.

Smith, Snyder, N.Y., and Baker, Clover, S.C., both are members of the United States Curtis Cup team.

Defending champion Amy Benz of Clearwater, Fla., survived a qualification scare and won her first-round match over Terrie Berto of Delphi, Ind., 4 and 3.

Benz shot an 84 Monday, then won a berth in the championship flight in a sudden-death playoff early Tuesday.

Cathy Hanlon, Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., and Leslie Shannon, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the other Curtis Cup representatives in the touurnament, also advanced.

Hanlon defeated Jeai Cavanagh, Paradise Valley, Ariz., 2 and 1. Shannon won by 2 and 1 over Tanna Lee, Fort Smith, Ark.

Two of the nation's most experienced amateurs met in another featured first-round match with 1981 Texas state amateur champion Mary Ann Morrison, Houston, defeating Alice Dye, the current Women's Western seniors champion, 1 up.

Kay Cornelius, Phoenix, Ariz., 15, the youngest golfer in the tournament, was defeated by Beth Berry, Mobile, Ala., 1 up. Carey Ruffer, Conroe, Texas, who recently won the Women's Western junior championship, was eliminated by Cathy Reynolds, Chapel Hill, N.C., 4 and 3.

Second round match play resumes Wednesday with the tournament scheduled to end Saturday. A total of 118 golfers are participating in the six-day event.

Rogers Admits Drug Mistake

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Rogers, the New Orleans Saints' No. 1 draft choice and the National Football League's Rookie of the Year, admits he has used cocaine but won't do it again.

"I made a mistake and it will never happen again," Rogers told a news conference Tuesday in his first public response to reports of his drug use.

"I am sorry for what I did," he said. "I made a mistake, and I have to live up to that."

Rogers, who led the NFL in rushing and set a rookie record with 1,674 yards for the Saints last season, said he underwent testing and treatment for drug abuse last week at a Florida clinic.

His attorney Ed Holler and Saints Coach Bum Phillips also appeared at the news conference, but neither would answer any questions regarding the cocaine scandal surrounding the team and the NFL.

Phillips said it was probably the most important news conference he had ever attended.

"I've been to a whole lot of press conferences in my years in sports — some bad, some good," he said. "I've never been to one as important as I think this one is.

"I think it's important for this football team, this town, the NFL.

"But it's more important for a bunch of individuals who have made a mistake — but not a mistake that can't be rectified."

Holler described Rogers' involvement with the drug as "a brief recreational use of cocaine."

Published reports last month quoted unnamed sources as saying Rogers told a federal grand jury in New Orleans he spent $10,000 on cocaine last season.

U.S. District Judge Veronica Wicker has issued a gag order for anyone who might be involved in a cocaine case involving former Saints running back Mike Strachan.

Strachan is scheduled for trial Aug. 30 on charges of distributing cocaine. A number of current and former Saints players were called to testify before the panel that indicted Strachan.

Players' Union Considering Extension of Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — A request by National Football League club owners that the current contract be extended beyond Thursday's deadline was being considered by union leaders as the two sides met for a second day in a row.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council and the club owners chief negotiator, said if there is no extension, no unsigned player will be allowed into training camp.

Donlan said at last count there were 99 rookies and 71 veterans who had not been signed. The Baltimore Colts will be the first team to open camp on Friday, with the others to open next week.

Union negotiators made no immediate response to the extension request, and said it would be discussed at today's session.

Ed Garvey, the union's executive director, said as he understood management's position, unsigned veterans could agree to accept a team's latest offer, or 110 percent of last year's salary, even after the July 15 deadline and still attend training camp.

Rookies could also accept a team's last offer after July 15 and report to camp.

"But all the players have to have signed contracts before they start working out," Garvey said.

The team owners at Tuesday's session, the first in more than a month, presented a package of proposals for a new contract.

Management offered to liberalize the game's free agent system, increase both minimum salaries and postseason pay and provide improved insurance benefits.

Players representatives, however, did not like the offer.

"It's totally insulting," said Gene Upshaw of the Oakland Raiders, president of the players association.

Dick Berthelsen, general counsel for the union, said the offer was "essentially the same as they gave us in Miami in Feburary." He said that according to his side's calculations, the new offer would result "in the owners spending less on the players in 1982 than they did in 1981."

Donlan, meanwhile, saw the offer as a good place to start bargaining.

"We took the existing contract and built upon it," said Donlan, after presenting the package of proposals during the first of three planned days of negotiations. "We feel this proposal is a basis for a settlement, but the response from the union was very distressing."

The owners' pay proposal, a $50,000 minimum salary for a fifth-year player and $30,000 for a rookie, is far less than than $140,000 for fifth-year players and $75,000 for rookies that the players want.

Geothermals

Geothermal energy literally is "earth-heat." In some regions, heat from the earth is great and close to the surface. To be of use, the source must be in, or near, permeable rocks. They must contain enough water to transfer the heat to the surface — either along fractures or through drill holes.

Spinach

Spinach is exceptionally high in nutritional value. Since the 1920s, spinach has been in demand for its wealth of calcium and iron — along with vitamins A and C. But research has found spinach is also rich in oxalic acid, which prevents the calcium from being used by the body.

Vilas Having Tough Week

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — So far, this just hasn't been Guillermo Vilas' week. He's already lost a tennis tournament in Switzerland and been fined $1,000 in Massachusetts.

And there's still four days to go.

The top-seeded Vilas was extended to three sets by Australia's Brad Drewett 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the opening round of the $200,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships Tuesday.

The hard-fought victory came just two days after the Argentine was beaten by countryman Jose-Luis Clerc for the Swiss Open championship.

And Vilas encountered all sorts of problems Tuesday in his first Longwood appearance since 1976. He argued with officials over calls and, was later fined $1,000 for failing to appear at a post-match press conference.

He showed up at the press tent nearly 1½ hours after the match, but Volvo Grand Prix supervisor Keith Johnson later announced the fine for violation of the circuit's code of conduct, requiring players to appear for post-match interviews unless physically disabled.

"It's a misunderstanding," the 30-year-old Vilas said. "There have been many changes since I was here last. I didn't really know where the press tent was."

Vilas, who has won nearly $300,000 this year, said it took 14 hours to fly from Switzerland to Boston. And, after a five-year boycott of Longwood, he said the only reason he returned here was "because I'm obligated to play in 10 (Grand Prix) tournaments."

Drewett, winner of only $27,000 this year, shocked Vilas with a service break in the second game en route to winning the first set.

However, Vilas breezed through the second set and then took the third, rallying after Drewett had taken a 3-1 lead. He broke the Australian in the sixth and 10th games to wrap up the 2-hours and 6-minute match.

Second-seeded Ivan Lendl, a 1982 millionaire from Czechoslovakia, third-seeded Eliot Teltscher, and fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France also advanced into the second round.

Lendl, winner of 92 of his last 96 matches, whipped Steve Meister 6-4, 6-4, Teltscher downed Chris Mayotte 7-6 (7-4), 6-2, and Noah ousted John James of Australia 6-3, 6-1.

Trap Shoot Scheduled July 24

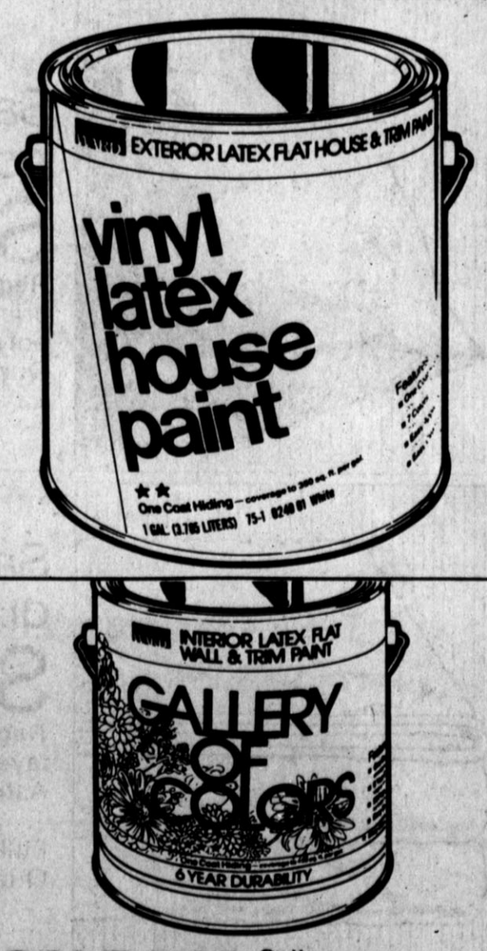

Deaf Smith County 4-H Shooting Sports Club is hosting a trap shoot to help prepare panhandle 4-H'ers for the State Trap Shoot.

The contest will be July 24 at the Hereford Gun Club Range located at the airport east of town on Highway 60, at 10:00 a.m. The 1982 State 4-H trap rules will apply for age roups, teams and individuals.

Awards will be given to the top teams and individuals. There will be a $3 charge per round.

Character actor Sidney Greenstreet's first movie was made in 1941 when he was 61 years old. It was "The Maltese Falcon."

FARM NEWS

USDA Not Responding To West Texas

AUSTIN - Senator Lloyd Bentsen said last week that he is disturbed by the continuing failure of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to respond to the farm disaster confronting Texas.

Bentsen, at a press conference in Austin said the farm economy is in bad shape across the state, but the situation in West Texas is especially bad in the wake of "a deadly and sustained barrage of hail, rain and high winds."

"I am advised that if help is not forthcoming, many West Texas counties will lose half or more of their farmers this year," the Senator said.

"The Department of Agriculture sent an investigator into West Texas several days ago to look into the disaster and report back to Secretary of Agriculture John Block with recommendations."

"We have repeatedly gone to the department for help over the past several months – seeking a declaration of economic emergency from the Farmers Home Administration, for example – and have been turned down flat every time."

"Now, with the investigator back in Washington from West Texas only a few days it looks as though the department is getting ready to turn us down again."

"Aides to Secretary Block have been telling reporters that they are concernced that giving disaster aid to West Texas farmers will be harmful to their new Federal Crop Insurance program."

"They maintain that if farmers can get disaster assistance the farmers will have no reason to purchase crop insurance next year."

"I want to say that the Federal Crop Insurance program is one of the most poorly administered programs operated by the federal government – and that's saying a lot!" Bentsen said.

"I have today written Secretary Block, urging that he take immediate action, urging that he not take seriously the concerns being expressed by his aides about the effect disaster assistance would have on Federal Crop Insurance," Senator Bentsen said.

USDA Estimate Of Soviet Grain Harvest Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts have reduced their estimate of the 1982 Soviet grain harvest by another 15 million metric tons.

Unusually hot, dry and windy weather in the major producing area east of the Ural Mountains is blamed for the reduction, the analysts said Monday in the monthly Soviet grain update.

They now predict the crop will total 170 million metric tons, down from June's 185 million metric ton estimate. That's 68 million metric tons short of the Kremlin's harvest target for this year and marks the Soviets' fourth straight poor crop and the worst by U.S. estimates since 1975.

"The crop has failed to develop sufficiently to reflect the vigor shown even in 1981," the report said.

The Agriculture Department estimated the 1981 Soviet harvest at 175 million metric tons, but unofficial Soviet statements have placed last year's harvest as low as 160 million.

Limited grain production in recent years has hit hard the Soviet livestock industry and created meat and milk shortages.

Earlier Monday, Agriculture Secretary John Block, emerging from a White House meeting with President Reagan, said Reagan remains undecided about resuming negotiations with Moscow on a new long-term grain sales agreement to replace the one expiring Sept. 30. Reagan halted the talks after December's military crackdown in Poland.

Block said the United States, which has huge grain surpluses, is ready to sell the Soviets all the grain they have cash for, but he wants a new long-term agreement to add stability to U.S.-Soviet trade. Without an agreement, the Kremlin will be able to buy as much or as little American grain as it wants after September, just like any other foreign customer.

The United States has offered to sell the Soviet Union up to 23 million metric tons of grain during the year that ends Sept. 30, but the Soviets have purchased only 14 million metric tons.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The Kremlin announced this spring a major food program that calls for $222 billion to be spent on agricultural development through the 1980s. But analysts say even with that plan, Soviet grain imports will run between 25 million and 35 million over the same period.

Last month, the Agriculture Department said the Soviets would import a record 46 million metric tons of grain during the year that ended June 30.

Most Explosions In Elevators Preventable

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A National Academy of Sciences report says the nation's grain elevators have been rocked by more than 400 explosions since 1960, many of which could have been prevented by dust collection devices and better housekeeping.

But a trade organization says the report overlooks many efforts the grain industry has made to curb explosions, and a labor leader says the study falls short of getting at the basic causes.

Dust, which can be highly explosive under certain conditions, is caused by moving wheat, corn and other grain from one place to another, particularly when it is elevated or shifted from bin to bin.

Nearly 200 deaths have been reported in U.S. grain elevator explosions since 1960, including five in western Iowa three months ago.

A special study panel of the academy's National Research Council suggested several priority actions which it said could eliminate more than 90 percent of grain elevator dust explosions "if implemented either voluntarily or through federal regulation."

The recommended actions call for automatic suction and manual cleaning systems to remove dust within closed elevator spaces, other systems to reduce potential ignition sources, and safety training for employees.

Dust control was found to be the "most important and cost-effective step to reduce explosion hazards," the report said.

The report, which was released Wednesday, said many elevator employees who were interviewed after explosions "showed amazing ignorance about how dust explosions occur," and that "in almost every case, someone, generally an employee, does something that contributes directly to the occurrence of the explosion."

Employees of large grain-handling companies were much better informed than those at smaller facilities, the

Holly Sugar Repurchased Shares

COLORADO SPRINGS – Holly Sugar Corporation announced today that it has repurchased 198,000 (approximately 12.5 pecent) of its outstanding shares from five individuals for $32 per share, or an aggregate of $6,336,000.

Tobacco Crop Yield Down 12 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that this year's flue-cured tobacco crop is expected to yield 1.03 billion pounds, down 12 percent from 1981.

Officials said the reduction was due to a smaller acreage this year and prospects for a smaller yield per acre — 2,089 pounds against 2,162 in 1981.

The department's first estimate of total tobacco production in 1982, including burley, will be issued on Aug. 11.

Grain-Fattened Lamb Favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that if Americans would develop a taste for grass-fattened lamb, it might help solve part of the nation's soil erosion problem.

But Americans prefer lamb chops from young sheep fattened on grain prior to slaughter. That grain is usually corn, a crop often grown in soil easily carried away by wind and rain.

Terry B. Kinney, administrator of the department's Agricultural Research Service, said Wednesday the erosion problem is one reason agency scientists are doing research on forage crops such as alfalfa for sheep production.

Another goal is to boost sheep output, which fell from 25 million animals in 1965 to half that by 1979. There have been small annual increases since then, which has brought encouragement to the U.S. sheep industry.

But one of the biggest challenges, he said, is that Americans generally have not accepted lamb to the degree they have accepted beef and pork, and they prefer animals fed grain.

Two research scientists at the University of Minnesota, Gordon C. Marten and Robert M. Jordan, are trying to develop lower-cost cropping systems aimed at reducing soil erosion and yet appeal to potential sheep producers.

If that can be done, Marten said, "We may be able to reduce the cost of producing sheep, increase production and consumption of lamb, and create markets for forages."

Marten acknowledged, however, that American consumer preference for grain-fattened lamb will be a major problem.

"In Australia and New Zealand, lamb producers simply market forage-fed lambs at a young age when meat is tender," he said. "The lamb has nationwide acceptance. We hope this degree of acceptance can be achieved in the United States."

Reagan Urged To Provide Immediate Relief Funds

AUSTIN – Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has urged President Ronald Reagan to cut through federal red tape to provide immediate relief funds for West Texas farmers whose crops were devastated recently by natural disasters.

If the federal funds are not released immediately, hundreds of farmers in the Panhandle and South Plains regions will face certain economic ruin, Hobby said in a letter to the President.

"The need of farmers in West Texas is urgent," Hobby said in the letter. "More than 50 percent of them face economic ruin if disaster relief funds are not provided immediately. Even if action was taken today, it would be too late for three out of ten of these farmers."

Hobby said that in 24 West Texas counties, 2.3 million acres of cotton, 420,000 acres of corn and 1.79 acres of wheat were lost due to hail, wind and rain.

"Not only are the farmers suffering, but also the service industries and others that depend upon agricultural production face a severe crisis," Hobby said. "The economic impact upon the smaller communities of West Texas will be devastating, and eventually all of Texas and parts of our neighboring states will be affected by higher unemployment among farm workers and higher prices at the grocery stores."

In an earlier letter to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block, Hobby urged Block to use his authority granted by the Farm Act of 1981 to immediately release funds to the disaster-stricken farmers. Block reportedly is reviewinn the findings of a special task force and will make a recommendation this week.

Zachary Taylor was the first career soldier to rise to the Presidency without having held any other civil post.

Winter Wheat Harvest Still Capable To Set 1982 Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winter wheat harvest prospects have suffered in parts of the nation, but the crop still is robust enough to set another record in 1982, says the Agriculture Department.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday that, based on July 1 indications, the harvest could yield 2.12 billion bushels. That would be seven million bushels less than forecast last month but still 1 percent larger than the 1981 harvest of 2.1 billion bushels, the previous high.

Based on indications as of July 1, the winter wheat yield was estimated at 36 bushels per acre, compared to 35.8 bushels in 1981.

"Wind, rain and hail damaged some Kansas fields," the department's Crop Reporting Board said. "The condition of the Nebraska crop continued to decline as harvest neared and losses from disease became more apparent."

The July report also provided the season's first USDA estimates of oats and barley output, two of the major feed grains.

Oats production was estimated at 580.3 million bushels, up 14 percent from last year, and the barley harvest was indicated at a record of 478.8 million bushels, slightly larger than the previous high set in 1981.

Over the past 10 years the July wheat estimate was below the final production figures in six years and above in four, the report said.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following spring and summer. It makes up about three-fourths of the total U.S. wheat production.

The remainder of the annual crop is planted in the spring and harvested later in the same year. The first USDA estimates of spring-planted wheat, corn, soybeans, cotton and other crops will be issued on Aug. 11.

Although winter wheat is grown in most states, the Great Plains is the major area and Kansas is the leading producer. The 1982 Kansas crop was estimated at 478.8 million bushels, compared to the June forecast of 488.4 million and 305 million harvested last year.

The 1982 winter wheat harvest, based on current estimates, is the third record crop in a row, indicating further growth in the U.S. grain stockpile. The Reagan administration earlier this year announced acreage curbs for 1982, hoping to hold down production of wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton.

In order to get federal price support and related benefits on their crops, farmers had to agree to reduce 1982 acreage, including a 15 percent cutback for wheat, rice and cotton, and a 10 percent reduction for feed grains.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says he plans to announce the 1983 wheat program later this week. It is virtually certain to include another round of cutbacks in acreage for next year's harvest.

Although the total 1982 U.S. wheat figures will not be ready for another month, department experts have projected the crop at around 2.72 billion bushels, down from last year's record 2.79 billion.

The economists, however, caution that the projection could vary by as much as 200 million bushels either way.

Based on the projection of 2.72 billion bushels, however, that would mean wheat supplies would gain further in 1982-83, totaling an estimated 1.33 billion bushels left over when the current wheat marketing year ends next May 31.

That would compare with the carryover of 1.16 billion bushels at the beginning of the year on June 1.

The indicated production of grain and average yields in 1982 by major producing states, based on July 1 prospects, included:

Winter Wheat

Alabama, 25,500,000 bushels and a yield of 30 bushels per acre; Arkansas, 68,640,000 and 39; California, 74,000,000 and 74; Colorado, 79,300,000 and 26; Georgia, 47,360,000 and 32; Idaho, 46,920,000 and 51; Illinois, 69,090,000 and 47; Indiana, 47,520,000 and 44; Kansas, 478,800,000 and 36; Kentucky, 26,325,000 and 39; Michigan, 28,160,000 and 44; Mississippi, 39,900,000 and 38; Missouri, 81,400,000 and 37; Montana, 76,475,000 and 35; Nebraska, 103,250,000 and 35; Ohio, 52,500,000 and 42; Oklahoma, 224,000,000 and 32; Oregon, 58,300,000 and 53; South Dakota, 36,300,000 and 33; Tennessee, 34,965,000 and 37; Texas, 163,800,000 and 25; and Washington, 117,760,000 and 46.

Meanwhile on Monday, Agriculture Department analysts reduced their estimate of the 1982 Soviet grain harvest by another 15 million metric tons, citing continued poor weather conditions in the Soviet Union.

They now predict the crop will total 170 million metric tons, down from June's 185 million metric ton estimate. That's 68 million metric tons short of the Kremlin's harvest target for this year and marks the Soviets' fourth straight poor crop and the worst by U.S. estimates since 1975.

The greatest distance between any two points in the United States is the 5,850 miles from Elliot Key, Fla., to Hawaii's Kure Island.

Bechtel Group Inc. 'Foreign Policy' Centered On Profits

By EVANS WITT Associated Press Writer

Dealing with foreign governments is an everyday enterprise for the Bechtel Group Inc., the secrecy-shrouded corporate complex that may be the world's largest construction firm.

Whether building a new city in Saudi Arabia, a half-billion-dollar resort in Malaysia or a nuclear power plant in Taiwan, Bechtel pursues a "foreign policy" of its own, a policy centered on profits, not on national interests.

Profits and foreign policy create a volatile mixture for all multinational corporations. The nomination of George Shultz, president of Bechtel, as Ronald Reagan's secretary of state raises questions about Bechtel's operations around the world and Bechtel's effect on future U.S. policies.

But Bechtel officials don't see the Shultz nomination as having a major impact on the company's role.

"I don't think Bechtel will have any more influence than in the past," Harvey Brush, the company's executive vice president, said in an interview last week.

Many questions at today's Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on the Schultz nomination will focus on Bechtel's long and profitable relationship with Saudi Arabia and other OPEC members. In Saudi Arabia, Bechtel is now building a $3 billion airport at Riyadh and a whole new city at Jubail that could cost as much as $20 billion.

Its Middle East links have gotten Bechtel entangled twice with U.S. policy and politics.

Last year, the then-manager of Bechtel's Washington office sent a letter to members of Congress advocating the sale of AWACs, advanced radar planes, to Saudi Arabia.

Recently, Bechtel's effort to sidestep U.S. law prohibiting compliance with the Arab-backed boycott of companies doing business with Israel was set back by the U.S. Supreme Court. The court refused to free the company from a consent decree barring it from taking part in the boycott.

Partly at Shultz' urging, Bechtel has also attempted to create more favorable attitudes toward its clients among the American public. It has underwritten at least one film, a book and a traveling cultural exhibit, all of which portray Arabs and the Saudis in particular in a favorable light.

With Shultz at State and former Bechtel executive Caspar Weinberger at the Defense Department, critics have asked whether Bechtel's views will sway the course of American foreign policy on Israel and the Arab countries.

The government's Mideast policy is only one area that affects Bechtel. Others include:

—U.S. policy on nuclear proliferation. Bechtel helped build nearly half of the nuclear power plants in the United States. It would like to build more around the world, but U.S. policy has put a damper on such efforts. Bechtel has said it is pushing for changes in that policy.

—The area of trade sanctions as a foreign policy weapon. Shultz has spoken out in the past against the use of trade sanctions, which could limit the company's foreign sales.

Some of Bechtel's public problems arise from its immense size, involvement in dozens of countries around the world and its penchant for secrecy.

Bechtel reported 1981 revenues of $11.4 billion, which would make it the 26th largest industrial company on the "Fortune 500" list if it were included. One trade magazine ranked it as the largest construction firm in world in 1981. But Bechtel is privately held, with all the stock owned by 58 people, officers or directors of the company. It does not report its profits, although one published estimate put the 1981 figure at $150 million.

Now the company has 113 major projects — each worth more than $50 million — under way in 21 countries. Bechtel, with a current workforce of 119,000, has built major projects in more than 100 countries. It played a major role in building the Hoover Dam, the Alaska pipeline, the San Francisco and Washington subways and the San Francisco Bay Bridge.

Bechtel often works directly for foreign governments, another potential source of problems.

"Outside the United States, a good bit of what we call industry is government-owned. So the governments become our clients," said Brush, now the No. 2 Bechtel executive, directly under Stephen D. Bechtel Jr., whose grandfather founded the company in 1898.

With the slowdown of the nuclear power industry in this country, about half of Bechtel's business now comes from outside the United States, up from only about 6 percent in 1970.

Bechtel executives like to say their company is a service company, providing the people and services needed by their clients, including the foreign governments.

"I don't think you can say we have a foreign policy in the same way as a government does,' Brush said. "We look for business in any area of the world. And when you get business, you have to be a good neighbor."

Spinning The 'New Girl' Network

NEW YORK (AP) — Men have been doing it for years: trading stock tips on the golf course, discussing promotions on the tennis court, sharing insider views of corporate life over drinks at the club.

It's the "old boy network," a web of social tips and advice that passes from generation to generation, company to company, and is as venerable an institution as the boys' night out.

"Men have always been taught to be part of the team and help each other," says Deane Laycock, founder of the Boston Luncheon Club and the National Alliance of Professional and Executive Women's Networks. "Women were taught to be nice and have friends, and went their separate ways, especially after getting married."

But now more women are playing the corporate game, and forming their own teams. "Old" and "new girl networks" are cropping up as women begin to look at a resource they never thought they had.

Connie Greaser is a founder of Women in Business in Los Angeles, an early network that grew out of a university seminar in 1974. "The initial purpose was socialization and finding one another and realizing we weren't the only ones having trouble," she said.

"So many of us were isolated," says Mrs. Laycock, who works as a trust officer at Fiduciary Trust Co., and founded the Boston Luncheon Club to find other women in banking.

In the last three years, two books on networking, one by Mary Scott Welch and the other by Carol Kleiman, have hit the market.

The National Association of Female Executives was founded 10 years ago by Wendy Rue as a "positive support system." In each issue of its publication, The Female Executive, it lists the names and phone numbers of women throughout the country who want to start a network.

"The looser the network, the more it works," said Elaine Moore, a Mary Kay Cosmetics sales director and president of the associations' Career Exchange in Cincinnati. "It's sharing experiences and getting support. It's knowing someone else is there."

Many organizations, like the Financial Women's Association in New York and Women in Business in Los Angeles, make sure employers have the name of at least one woman on every list of people for every job opening and recommend women for corporate boards.

Gulf Oil Corp. recently compiled a list of 1,500 business owned by women, and it became a corporate bestseller. Women in Busines in Los Angeles put together a similar list.

Ms. Greaser worries that while older women are eager to help younger women, younger women "have had it easy. They don't see the need to help other women. They have everything going for them and they don't support other women."

"We may be going backwards," she warns, "unless women realize they have to support each other for a long time. We're still not considered equal out there."

Reagan's Pension Questioned By Critics As Unconstitutional

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's $22,444 California pension has been questioned by critics who contend it's an unconstitutional "emolument." But the Justice Department says it's a perfectly legal arrangement.

Either way, the on-again, off-again debate centers on one of those often overlooked sections of the Constitution offering little firm proof of which side is right.

The head of the Sacramento (Calif.) Urban League, for one, notes that the Constitution bars U.S. presidents from getting any state or federal emolument other than their salary.

An emolument, says Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, is a "profit from office, employment or labor; fees or salary."

But the Justice Department, in a legal opinion, insists the intent of the men who drafted the clause in the 18th century was to bar payments that could influence presidential decisions.

And that problem is absent, the department says, because Reagan will get the pension money from his days as California governor regardless of what he does in the Oval Office.

A 1973 Library of Congress guide to the Constitution lists no disputes over the presidential "emolument" clause.

Major law school textbooks do not probe the true meaning of the provision, which likely will remain in the ranks of some of the other obscure parts of the Constitution.

Federal officeholders need the consent of Congress to accept any "present, emolument, office or title" from "any king, prince or foreign state."

The Justice Department says it has received inquiries about Reagan's pension from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and at least two other congressman.

And George Dean, president of the Sacramento Urban League, says he informed Attorney General William French Smith by letter that paying the pension as long as Reagan is president is unconstitutional.

Dean, whose group advocates the rights of minorities, says he's asked California officials to stop payments, now set at $22,444 annually, pending an independent legal review.

The debate over the pension may stay just that — a war of words.

Court challenges may be impossible. If, as is likely, the president keeps on receiving the pension in addition to his $200,000 salary there's a major question of who could go to court to try to stop him.

And in the absence of any court challenge, the Justice Department's approval of the pension arrangement last year is almost certain to stand as the last official word.

"The pension is not an emolument within the meaning of the Constitution ... or within the meaning of the laws of California," says Justice Department spokesman Mark Sheehan.

Businesswomen On The Road

NEW YORK (AP) — Wendy Reid Crisp spent 17 years as one of the "invisible women" in America on the road to do a job. She remembers that it was little things that made her travels a trial.

"Restaurants gave you bad tables and at breakfast, waitresses would whisper, 'I'll serve the men first. They're busy.' There was an automatic assumption you weren't really there on business," recalled Ms. Crisp, who worked in industrial public relations and computers before becoming editor of Savvy magazine.

"There were problems with room service. Hotels eyed you funny and thought you were a hooker if you went to your room late at night. Your credit cards took longer to check through. Car rentals always thought you were someone's wife."

Little things. "It wasn't anything you could raise your hand and say, it's an insult," she said.

But in much of the United States, the days of the "invisible woman" are gone — or going. "The travel industry has been more sensitive than most about accommodating women," said Ms. Crisp. "There are more women in business suits and carrying briefcases."

Twenty-five percent of the travel market is female, says the Air Transport Association of America, up from 19 percent four years ago.

The numbers parallel results of a 1979 Travel Pulse survey, which found that individual women travel less frequently than men and tend to travel to meetings and conventions rather than on a regular basis.

What it means is a lot of business dollars.

At United Airlines, 15 percent to 17 percent of all business travelers are women, more than five times as many as a decade ago. And the airline notes that women's travel is increasing at a time when air travel in general has declined.

"Stewardesses no longer treat you like a second-class citizen," said Karen Schecter, a products manager for Fieldcrest.

(United spokesman Chuck Novak says this change may have more to do with civil rights and economics than conscious airline policy. Since rules against married stewardesses were eliminated in 1966, the women who work on airplanes have gotten older.

("The average stewardess has been on the job 12 years and more than half are married. The old average was 26 months ... It used to be a flirty kind of job for young women. Now, the work force is older, more mature," he said.)

A 1980 Ms. magazine survey said about 3 million businesswomen spent 32 million nights on the road in 1979.

Sitcom 'Adams House' Airs Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — If CBS really does have better series than "Adams House" on its fall schedule, then the network can look forward to another season of preeminence.

Tonight's "Adams House," starring Karen Valentine, is a likable little sitcom about social workers in a privately funded community center in Chicago. CBS says the program might be a mid-season replacement series.

The pilot shows potential, even though it spends a disproportionate amount of time wallowing in put-down humor against one character.

Gilbert Spencer, played by Earl Boen, is the show's foil. He's more aware of his shortcomings than Ted Baxter, the pompous anchorman from "Mary Tyler Moore." He also doesn't have as big a mean streak as Maj. Frank Burns, the original villain on "M-A-S-H."

Every sitcom and every office has one of these by-the-book blockheads whose lack of imagination, sensitivity and humor has them placing rules above people. All the show's characters take turns dumping on Gilbert.

A running gag is Gil's tie, described by one co-worker as neon. Another character says the tie is "interesting. Where do you keep the batteries?"

Although some of this is funny, it takes up too much time in the 30-minute show. The strength of this sitcom would seem to be in the more serious characters and their relationships, something producer Alan Katz and director Jay Sandrich did so well when working on "Mary Tyler Moore."

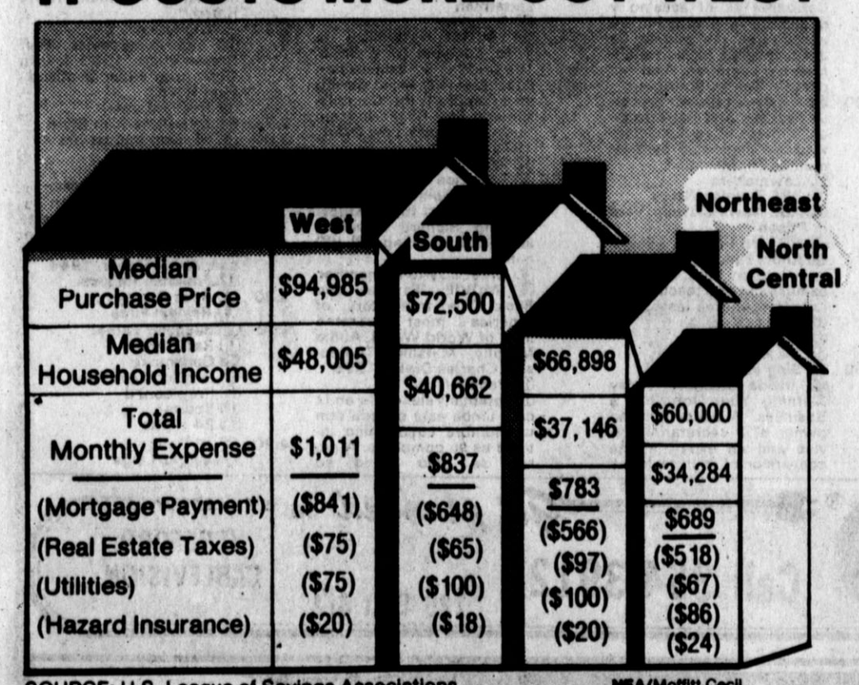

In between the mudslinging, the story involves the efforts of Chris to find housing for Frank Gallagher (Lloyd Nolan), a crotchety old man whose home has been condemned to make way for a highway. Good acting by Nolan and Miss Valentine make their scenes together touching and, for the most part, believable.

Miss Valentine, who won an Emmy award for her role in "Room 222," is one of those female stars who gets by more on spunk and charm than knockout looks.

Casting executives are always harping about actors' eyes being the key features for audience appeal. And the eyes have it for Miss Valentine.

IT COSTS MORE OUT WEST

SOURCE: U.S. League of Savings Associations NEA/Moffitt Cecil

Almost everything costs more for Western home-owners. But they are better able to afford it with a median income for new home buyers higher than any other region. Figures are taken from a 1981 survey by the U.S. League of Savings Associations. Taxes — included with mortgage costs, utilities and insurance in total monthly expenses — represent one-twelfth of the annual bill.

HEALTH Anxiety causes symptoms

Lawrence E. Lamb,M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I went to see my doctor because I was feeling nervous all over. I could feel my heartbeat in my neck. My arms felt lifeless. My stomach was nervous and I had diarrhea. I had trouble breathing. She treated me with Valium and Donnatal. Then she asked me what I was worried about. I told her nothing. She stopped giving me Valium and Donnatal. I still feel the same. She checked my heart and thyroid and everything was OK. I don't understand what causes this. The only time I don't feel like this is when I am asleep. I feel like someone scared me very badly.

DEAR READER — You are describing anxiety. Probably everyone has some anxiety part of the time. It is a first cousin of fear. People become anxious about many things, including personal affairs, family affairs, financial security, or fear of loss of health. You may be surprised to know the real cause for many of the symptoms that send people to the doctor is anxiety.

Anxiety can cause a variety of symptoms just as you have described. It often causes an increased release of adrenalin, which causes trembling and shakiness and that anxious feeling you describe. It can be a near panic reaction.

Some people do not know what causes their anxiety. It can be from unconscious problems that require psychiatric help to solve. The real help for anyone who has anxiety comes from knowing what the real problem is and then trying to solve it. Not all problems can be solved, such as the anxiety that comes from knowing you have a serious untreatable disease, or knowing your mate is going to divorce you. But even these situations can be helped.

I think it is important to eliminate factors that increase adrenalin production. That means eliminating cigarettes and also caffeine as found in coffee, tea and colas. I think the general public would be far calmer if caffeine and nicotine were completely eliminated.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A plastic surgeon has advised me he will use a lot of collagen on my face in the near future and also again in four or five years. Is it safe to eradicate lines in the brow and forehead and also to lift drooping jowls four or five years hence? Will it do the job and for how long?

DEAR READER — Collagen injections are being used now and in selected cases they work. Collagen is protein from tendons and connective tissue. It is injected under a wrinkle or scar to raise the tissue level. Literally by filling the valley (wrinkles and scars) the surface becomes smooth. The collagen is incorporated into your own tissues because it is a tissue protein in the first place. It is safe and does not pose the hazards of silicone injections.

While collagen can be used for small wrinkles and scars it will not replace the use of cosmetic surgery to solve sagging jowls from a real excess of skin. Whether to use collagen or surgery will depend entirely on what needs to be done in each case.

KFDA To Air MD Telethon

KFDA-TV, Channel 10, Amarillo, will broadcast the Jerry Lewis Extra Special Special, the Labor Day Telethon to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA), announced MDA National Chairman Jerry Lewis. The program will air Sunday, September 5, at 8 p.m. and continue to 6:30 p.m., Monday, September 6.

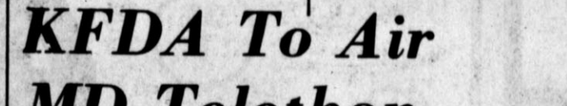

"I'm delighted to welcome KFDA back to our 'Love Network,'" said Lewis. "Not many people realize the crucial job that our 'Love Network' stations and hosts like Mark Robertson - Baker and Debra Lane do in terms of fund raising. We provide a whole season's worth of entertainment in our 21½ hours on the air, but if it weren't for the tremendous efforts of stations like Channel 10, we couldn't possibly accomplish our goal of raising the funds necessary to continue the battle against nueromuscular diseases.

This year's show, the 17th annual Labor Day Telethon for MDA, will be broadcast live from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas with anchorman Ed McMahon and will be carried by some 200 local programming at 41 different intervals throughout the 21½ -hour telecast.

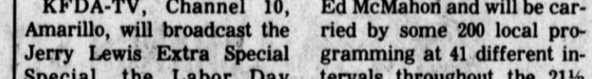

Lewis noted that the local stations also serve an educational function, showing members of their communities just how money is donated to put to use locally. MDA maintains 240 clinics around the country and more than 600 individual research projects world-wide. In the Panhandle area, the MDA clinic is staffed by two neurologists, Dr. Rush Snyder and Dr. Michael Ryan. Local MDA research projects are being conducted at Texas Tech University. MDA also operates a local summer camp at the Episcopal Church Conference Center.

Last year's Telethon raised over $31 million in pledges and garnered an audience of more than 93 million viewers, second only to the Superbowl in audience ratings.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher

Garden bonanza

DEAR POLLY — My neighbor recently acquired a pony. Can I use the manure (which she has offered to me) on my garden? — MRS. G.T.

DEAR MRS. G.T. — By all means, yes. However, fresh manure should never be put on a garden that is already planted or growing because it can burn the plants. The manure must first be composted or well-rotted. Just mix the fresh manure into your regular compost pile (and if you don't have one, start one!) along with all kitchen vegetable waste, weeds, garden waste, grass clippings, etc. The rotted compost can be used safely as side dressing around plants and in preparing seed beds without fear of damaging the plants. Fresh manure can be worked into the soil of the empty garden in the fall where it will rot naturally over the winter, turning the soil into a nutrient-rich loam. It can also be applied in early spring, a few weeks before planting. In any case, all that free manure is a bonanza for your garden which I hope you won't pass up. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I was cooking bean soup the other day and I had no bacon or side pork to put in for flavor. I did have some imitation bacon bits for salads, however, so I added these. They worked out very well and tasted fine. — PEARLE

DEAR POLLY — When a recipe calls for cooling something on a rack, I take a burner top off my gas stove and put it on the countertop. Then I put the pie, cake or whatever on it to cool. — MINNI

DEAR POLLY — New mothers, you can save a lot of money by investing in an inexpensive "baby food mill" (five or six dollars). Use it to puree and strain fresh fruits, canned fruit and canned and frozen vegetables, then freeze them for future use. My little guy loves his fresh strained strawberries mixed with his cereal. He also loves frozen broccoli with cheese sauce. Also, if you dread making the prepared baby oatmeal (it's so messy and sticky), just purchase a regular creamed rice or wheat cereal. They are less costly than the brand made especially for babies, and they'll bring lots of baby smiles and smacking lips from your little one. — LESLIE
