Mobile home destroyed

RESCUED — Donna Knight holds two kittens and a puppy that were rescued from a mobile home which burned to the ground at 12:17 Sunday afternoon. Two Big Spring fire Department units and one Jonesboro Fire Department truck responded to the blaze, which was located outside the city limits on North Birdwell Lane. Firefighters said the home, which they said belonged to Sandra Searfoss, apparently caught fire after the front porch burned from unknown causes. No one was at home at the time of the blaze, but fire department members said at least two dogs perished in the blaze.

Fighting in Beirut heavy

By The Associated Press

Israeli artillery blasted Palestinian guerrilla positions near the Beirut airport today and PLO gunners responded with barrages of Katyusha rockets and mortars in the heaviest fighting reported around the besieged Lebanese capital in more than a week.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Baldwin reported from a vantage point overlooking the battlefield that the fighting began at dawn in the Haddeth neighborhood, a quarter-mile north of the airport and just south of the Bourj el Barajneh refugee camp, a PLO stronghold that had been an Israeli artillery target over the weekend.

The renewed fighting came after Israel flatly rejected a reported offer by Yasser Arafat to evacuate most of his Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from Lebanon, leaving behind a token military force and a political mission.

There were no reports of dead or wounded in the fighting, which Baldwin said was the heaviest since the Israelis were hit by strong Palestinian fire near the village of Khalde 10 days ago as they thrust northward toward Moslem-controlled west Beirut.

Israel, which invaded Lebanon on June 6 to crush the PLO, has trapped an estimated 8,000 guerrillas and 500,000 civilians in predominantly-Moslem west Beirut, which has been sealed off since Saturday by an Israeli blockade of access routes across the "Green Line" frontier to Christian-held east Beirut.

While Israeli artillery fire poured in on Haddeth from the hills today, guerrillas in the rubble launched a barrage of rocket-propelled grenades, mortars and small-arms fire, Baldwin said. The Palestinians also fired Katyusha rockets from deep inside their west Beirut redoubt, striking Israeli positions east of the airport, he reported.

Other witnesses reported that Israeli artillery fire hit Bourj el Barajneh Sunday in what one Israeli officer called "tightening the screws" on west Beirut.

Perfect shuttle landing helps celebration

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield relaxed at home today, hailed by President Reagan as Fourth of July heroes for a near-flawless shuttle voyage that cleared the way for Columbia to begin flying for pay this fall.

Columbia's fourth and final test flight ended in glory on the nation's 206th birthday with a pinpoint landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and a flag-waving, cheering, singing celebration of America.

In the central moment of a stunning display of U.S. technological skill and stirring showmanship, the astronauts brought Columbia from space to a dead center landing on a concrete runway while Reagan and more than 500,000 other spectactors watched with awe.

"Unbelievable...just magnificent," Reagan said of the landing. Later, he told the astronauts, "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember."

Columbia even provided fireworks — a double sonic boom swept across the desert valley, heralding the approach of the speeding craft on its graceful descent to Earth.

The perfect touchdown ended a seven-day, 112-orbit mission. The craft will be ferried to Florida, reconditioned and launched again in October or November with a four-man crew and will deploy two satellites.

Reagan used the occasion to call for "establishing a more permanent presence in space." The White House issued a directive favoring deployment of an anti-satellite weapon and improvements in systems giving early warning of nuclear threats.

The message stopped short, however, of endorsing expansion of the space shuttle fleet or construction of a manned space station, moves favored by the space agency and by the Air Force.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials added to the drama of the day by assembling its entire fleet of the black-and-white, stubby-winged space shuttles.

As the President spoke, Columbia, still warm after its return from space, sat on the desert runway. Challenger, second craft in the fleet, was perched atop a 747, preparing for a ferry ride to Florida and an eventual space voyage next year. And Enterprise, the nonorbiting test ship and first of the line, formed a Presidential backdrop.

CROWD OF ADMIRERS — President Reagan and the Columbia astronauts address a large crowd of admirers at Edwards Air Force Base Sunday, after the successful landing of the Space Shuttle Columbia. In background is the Enterprise, the first shuttle in the series.

As Reagan finished his remarks, he ordered a jumbo jet carrying Challenger to take off. The mated craft leaped into the clear desert air, circled and made a low, flyby over the assembled spectators.

Mattingly and Hartsfield later boarded a NASA Gulfstream jet and flew to Ellington Air Force Base near the Johnson Space Center here. They arrived minutes before the ferry craft landed for an overnight refueling stop.

Officials estimated that 500,000 people gathered to welcome home the astronauts and to look at the Challenger.

Mattingly, speaking to a gathering that included fellow astronauts and Mission Control flight controllers, declared the day "a first-class way to go" on July 4th.

"There was real regret in coming down," Hartsfield said. "We thought about turning off the radios and doing another rev (orbit) or two."

On Tuesday, the spacemen start the paperwork. They'll spend the next few weeks preparing a report on their mission. But to many experts the results of the fourth and final test flight of Columbia are already in.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, head of NASA's shuttle program, said the craft was in excellent condition and ready for operational missions. He said the heat-resistant tiles covering Columbia's hull "fared much, much better than on earlier flights."

Reagan and his wife arrived at an Edwards Air Force base reviewing stand overlooking the runway just minutes before Columbia landed.

Four astronauts from previous Columbia flights stood with the president. Mrs. Reagan, wearing a white skirt, red jacket and a blue scarf, sat under a parasol.

Mattingly and Hartsfield fired powerful rocket engines while the winged spacecraft was 203 miles high over the Indian Ocean, half a world away from the California landing site. The craft slowed and started its long gliding plunge into the atmosphere, its heat shield glowing red from friction.

Columbia flashed across the California coast, over the towns of Fairmont and Lancaster, and powerful cameras picked up its image against the crystal blue California sky.

Two sonic booms rolled across the Antelope Valley desert where spectators strained for a glimpse in bright sunlight.

Mattingly swung the Columbia left and right, slowing its speed, and then turned its guidance over to a computer. The craft banked gracefully over the desert and lined up for its first landing ever on a concrete runway. Computers precisely glided the craft to 2,500 feet when Mattingly resumed control.

Moments later, the landing gear popped into position. Then the wheels touched with a wisp of smoke and Columbia was home.

"Welcome back to Earth," said Mission Control. "That was beautiful."

"That's quite a ride," said Mattingly.

Columbia coasted to a stop, precisely in the middle of the 300-foot wide runway, and well short of its end point. The landing came at 9:09:40 a.m. Pacific Time, within seconds of the predictions.

Milestones during the flight included the first landing on a paved runway and the highest orbit for Columbia. Two of the spacecraft's earlier landings were on the sand of the dry lakebed at Edwards; the third flight ended in the New Mexico desert.

NASA officials said Mattingly and Hartsfield completed virtually every job assigned them and a flight director called their mission "the cleanest flight we've had to date."

Q. How much does it cost for electricity to run a television 12 hours a day?

A. Twelve cents. According to a spokeswoman at Texas Electric Service company, a color solid-state TV set would cost a penny an hour. A black-and-white solid-state set would be a third of a cent per hour. Tube sets would cost even less, the spokeswoman said.

Longest eclipse of moon to take place

By The Associated Press

In a nocturnal spectacle visible from half the world, the moon will go into its longest eclipse of the century early Tuesday morning as the Earth passes between its satellite and the sun.

The eclipse, the longest since 1859, will occur when the Earth's shadow blocks the sunlight that causes the moon to "shine."

The Earth's penumbra, or lighter area of shadow, will begin to cover the moon at 11:22 p.m. CDT. But the moon will appear no different until it moves into the Earth's darker shadow, or umbra, at 12:33 a.m. The moon will be totally eclipsed from 1:38 a.m. to 3:24 a.m., a period of an hour and 46 minutes.

The moon will not disappear during the eclipse, according to Larry Ciupik, associate astronomer at the Adler Planetarium of Chicago. He said the moon "could appear copper-colored, or orange, or even brick-red."

The eclipse may be more spectacular than usual because of a huge cloud created by the March 29 eruption of the Chinchonal volcano in Mexico.

Brian Toon, a climatologist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Mountain View, Calif., said last month that the cloud — which girdles the northern hemisphere — could paint the moon's aura with color.

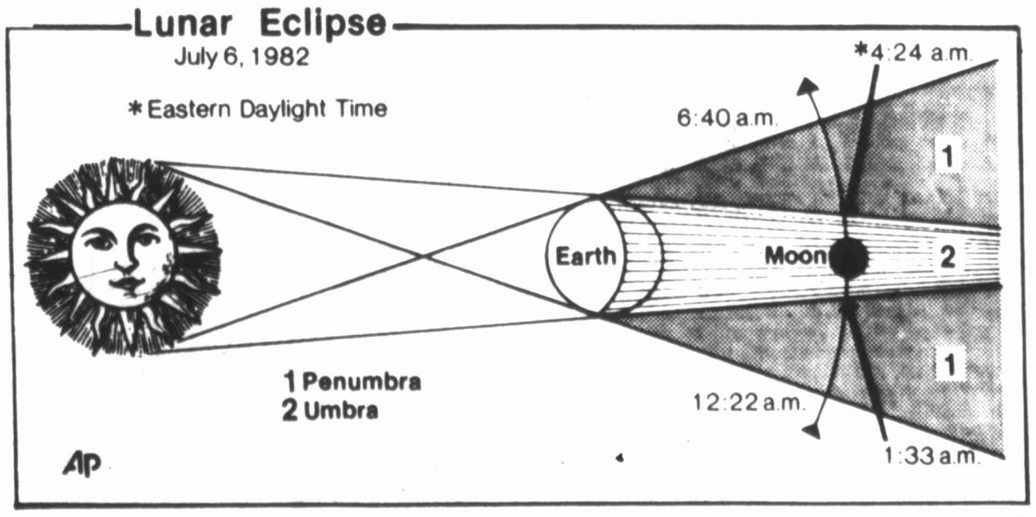

Unlike a solar eclipse, the lunar eclipse can be viewed safely with the naked eye, although binoculars are recommended for a better view. For photographers, at least a 200mm telephoto lens is recommended.

Scientists say one reason the eclipse will last so long is because the moon is near the most distant point it ever reaches in its orbit around the Earth. The farther the moon is from the Earth, the longer it takes to pass through the Earth's shadow.

The long duration of the eclipse also is attributed to the fact that the moon will pass through the center of the Earth's shadow. Usually, it passes through a smaller areas of shadow above or below the center.

As the total eclipse nears its end, the moon's eastern edge will brighten first. By 4:29 a.m. the moon will appear "normal," even though the final phase of the eclipse will not end until about 5:40 a.m., when the moon moves out of the prenumbra.

For a total eclipse to occur, the Earth must be between the moon and the sun, with all three bodies in a straight line. A lunar eclipse can occur only when the moon is full, because that is the only time the moon is in a position opposite the sun.

LUNAR ECLIPSE — Sketch, explains the lunar eclipse which will take place Tuesday morning. Light shadow is the penumbra, while the dark shadow is the umbra of total eclipse area.

Second British rail strike threatens chaos

LONDON (AP) — The second rail strike in as many weeks forced hundreds of thousands of British commuters into their cars today, threatening a repeat of the chaotic rush-hour nightmare that gripped London and other major British cities last week.

"We're expecting a great deal of congestion," said a spokesman for the British Automobile Association.

Engineers of British Rail, the financially-ailing state-run railroad, began the open-ended strike Sunday. But the first major impact was expected today, the first workday of the week.

The 11,000-mile rail network serves about 2 million Britons a day during the workweek, including 400,000 commuters who work in the capital

The strikers, who belong to the 27,000 member Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen (ASLEF), are protesting the railroad's plans to institute a new system of flexible work schedules today in an effort to cut overtime costs.

Rail officials said about 100 of the network's 15,000 passenger and freight trains were run Sunday by engineers opposed to their union's strike or by men from a rival union.

British Rail officials said they would have to wait to see if enough engineers show up today to provide skeleton service, or whether operations must be shut down completely.

The railroad was struck last Monday and Tuesday by another union in a pay dispute.

David Howell, the transport minister in Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, denounced the new strike as "immensely damaging" to the future of the railroad, already expected to lose the equivalent of $240 million this year. But Howell said the government will not intervene in the dispute.

At issue is a series of six productivity improvements, the most controversial of which is the change from the current eight-hour standard shift adopted in 1919 to a flexible shift of seven to nine hours.

Police search for missing prof

By S.J. GUFFEY

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP) — A young man being held for suspicion of murder led Mexican police on a fruitless search through the sunbaked foothills north of here for a grave that may contain the body of a missing University of Colorado professor, authorities say.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Thomas Johnson, who flew to Mazatlan on Sunday from Mexico City, said additional searches were planned today.

Johnson also said Mexican police had launched an intensive hunt for a second suspect in the disappearance of Nicholas Schrock.

"The other suspect, they're looking for him all over the area. It's a rather large manhunt," Johnson said Sunday night.

The suspect being held for suspicion of murder and armed robbery was described by Johnson as being in his late teens or early 20s. He was identified as a service station attendant from nearby Coyotitalan.

The second suspect was described as a recently released inmate of the Mexican federal prison at Isles Marias, an island off the coast of Mazatlan.

Schrock, an economics professor, has been missing since May 30 when he disappeared while driving a truck to a summer job in Guadalajara. The truck reappeared last week and the man in custody has told State of Sinaloa officials that he and another man buried Schrock's body in a shallow grave somewhere in the arid hills.

Schrock's wife, Ruth, arrived Saturday in Mazatlan, expecting to identify a body. But repeated searches turned up no grave, no body

Man holds wife, daughter

HOUSTON (AP) — Police today surrounded an apartment where a 29-year-old man with three pistols was holed up with his wife and 6-year-old daughter, authorities said.

Sgt. Fred Black said nearby apartments were evacuated and police negotiators were trying to talk the man into surrendering.

He said the standoff began about 5:30 a.m. after a family argument.

Pope may visit Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Pope John Paul II would like to visit Central America next year, including El Salvador, Acting Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas said.

He did not say if a decision on the trip actually has been reached.

The pope "is very concerned (and) in a gesture of pastoral charity wants to visit the Central American countries next year," the Roman Catholic prelate said in his Sunday homily. "If his word already encourages and gives us hope, what will his presence be even if it is only for short hours in this capital city?"

It was Rivera y Damas' first sermon since returning from a three-week trip to Western Europe that included a visit to the Vatican.

In his message, the prelate expressed concern over reports that Honduran army troops were helping Salvadoran soldiers fight leftist guerrillas.

"We are each time closer to a clear foreign intervention and the feared internationalization of the conflict," Rivera y Damas said.

Salvadoran officials interviewed by The Associated Press last week claimed troops from neighboring Honduras had recently crossed the border to help Salvadoran troops fight rebels seeking to topple the rightist regime.

Traffic toll hits 35

The Texas Department of Public Safety predicted the death toll from traffic accidents this Fourth of July holiday weekend would rise sharply today as travelers head back home on the state's highways.

The DPS, which had estimated that 47 people would die in traffic accidents this weekend, reported today that the state death toll had reached 35.

"We are not optimistic that we will be under the estimate," DPS spokesman Larry Todd said.

The counting period began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight today.

Last year, 54 people died in traffic accidents during the holiday weekend and the death toll reached 63 later when more people died as a result of injuries suffered in accidents during that weekend.

The deaths reported by the DPS this weekend include:

—Rodney Garrit Vugteveen, 23, of El Paso, who was killed when the motorcycle he was riding hit a car head-on at 8:15 p.m. Saturday three miles east of El Paso on U.S. 62-180.

—Leroy Woodson O'Neal, 53, of Tyler, who was killed in a two-vehicle accident at 9:45 p.m. Saturday at Loop 323 and American Legion Road in Smith County.

—Agustin Bermea, 24, of Uvalde, who was killed at 10:45 p.m. Saturday while walking about 1 mile south of the intersection of U.S. 57 and F.M. 117 in Batesville in Zavala County.

Reagan outlines shuttle policy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — President Reagan, in a far-reaching directive, has firmly committed the United States to use its newly operational shuttle system to forge strong defense operations in space and blunt a growing Soviet military presence there.

The directive, issued Sunday as Reagan led the cheers for the returning shuttle Columbia, calls for deployment of an anti-satellite weapon, protection for manned and unmanned spacecraft and improvements in early warning systems to guard against nuclear threats.

The Soviets already possess an operational killer satellite, the only space weapons system now in existence.

The directive was classified "secret" and only a six-page summary was released.

The president's action cements a somewhat awkward marriage between the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which developed the shuttle, and the Air Force, without whose desires, needs and help the vehicle would not have been built.

The president, at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., also called for "establishing a permanent presence in space." But he did not endorse a fifth shuttle vehicle or a $9 billion manned space station, both sought by NASA and the Air Force.

Those decisions will wait the recommendations of a newly created government space policy group heavily laden with defense and national security officials. It is headed by Reagan's national security adviser, William P. Clark.

NASA officials were encouraged by Reagan's support, many confident his commitment to a "permanent presence" could mean only one thing, a space station.

"We are hopeful," said Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, head of the agency's shuttle program. Abrahamson is one of more than 150 Air Force officers transferred into NASA as the shuttle has matured through four test flights.

The Air Force has booked more than 20 of the shuttle fleet's first 70 operational flights, starting in November and extending into 1987. The congressional General Accounting Office estimated recently that the Defense Department will require 114 of 234 shuttle flights expected through 1994.

Pentagon officials have testified frequently before Congress that the Soviet Union also is developing a credible manned military capability out there, using the Salyut platforms as testbeds for sensors and military techniques. The Soviets have said they expect to have a 12-to-14-man space station in orbit by 1985, and the Pentagon brass is convinced it will grow and become a military space command post.

As for the civilian part of the space program, the goals, as set by the directive, were described as preserving U.S. leadership in space science, applications and technology; expanding knowledge of the Earth, solar system and universe; continued international cooperation and increased private investment.

Non-running Texan wins Good Ol' Boy No-run Run

SCOTTSBORO, Ala. (AP) — The entry instructions were short but sweet: "No jogging, no running, no sore muscles." The finish line was only 33 feet from the start. And the timekeeper was taking a snooze.

It was the first "Good Ol' Boys No Run-Run," and a man who didn't even know he was entered was the winner Sunday, by proxy. A sluggish stand-in entry strolled and meandered for about three hours before breaking the tape.

The competition was "a backlash against all those healthy, ruddy-faced people who are always panting up and down the streets. It appeals to people who think joggers are a little strange," said Olivia Brewer, director of the Jackson County Council on Tourism.

Serious runners were barred. "Anyone who came in Nikes were asked to remove them," she said.

The timekeeper fell asleep in a hammock, so there was no official time.

About 8,000 spectators gathered to watch as 300 non-runners dilly-dallied their way to the finish line.

Those who thought the competition too strenuous bought $10 "patron" tickets, which allowed them to sit in lawn chairs beneath a shady tree, sip lemonade and watch the non-runners.

The race was sponsored by the Jackson County Heritage Center to raise funds to renovate a 19th century house as a museum. The idea was sparked by a book called "The Official Non-Runners Handbook," explained Walt Hammer, the official race starter.

Officials dedicated the event to the memory of Calvin Coolidge, former president and July 4th birthday boy who once said, "I do not choose to run."

Bill Clopton of Houston was declared the winner. An unidentified volunteer was entered as Clopton's proxy by his father, John Clopton of Scottsboro. The proxy took longer than anyone else to finish the "10,000" — 10,000 millimeters.

"You mean I won something for coming in last?" said a bewildered Clopton, contacted by telephone.

Mrs. Brewer said lots of people entered by proxy. "We had a non-running team from Wichita, Kan., called the 'Lethargic Racing Team' who entered on the same basis," she said.

Among the proxied entrants was a "track coach" who sent a copy of his training schedule — a blank sheet of paper.

The racers, some holding parasols to ward off the sun, "were just a blur of bodies" as they lagged along, Mrs. Brewer said. Some covered the course in wheelbarrows.

Race officials had suggested that participants take no longer than an hour to finish, but one man carried the hint to extremes, taking only 45 seconds. "We weren't especially pleased with that," said Hammer.

Mrs. Brewer said a second no-run run will be held next July 4.

Participants, who paid $5 to enter, were given official T-shirts depicting a man lying in a hammock with a television on his stomach. The grand prize was free parking in Scottsboro for the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. — about 170 miles away.

New phone books due out

Tips for consumers are offered in the new 1982 telephone directory to be distributed between now and the end of July to Big Spring customers, said Clay Styles, district manager for Bell.

One copy of the directory will be delivered to each residential phone customer, he said.

A total of 40,473 books are being printed. Of that number, 22,608 will be delivered to area residents by the end of the month.

Styles said the extra books are for new customers moving to Big Spring throughout the year. Businesses and customers sometimes wear out their books and need replacements, he added.

"Distributing the new directories is a huge job," Styles said, "and will take several weeks to complete. We ask customers to be patient during this time and not call us until after several weeks if they do not receive new directories."

Shuttle landing leads July Fourth festivities

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

From space shuttle Columbia's big bang over California to the Capitol in Washington, D.C., where a Soviet emigre's baton led the National Symphony, Americans celebrated their 206th birthday with picnics, festivals and fireworks from coast to coast.

Cannon greeted the dawn at the Battery in New York City, roaring a 50-gun salute Sunday to the Statue of Liberty. But the biggest Fouth of July firecracker rang out over the California desert when the shuttle crashed through the sound barrier, sending two sonic booms rolling across the Antelope Valley.

"Unbelievable...just magnificent," said President Reagan, among the 500,000 people to watch the landing. "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember," he told astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield.

With gasoline plentiful and cheaper than a year ago, many Americans took to the road.

In Jackson, Miss., dozens of ballet dancers from around the world mingled with their U.S. counterparts as a display of sparklers and Roman candles capped the two-week International Ballet Competition.

On the west lawn of the Capitol, Soviet emigre Mstislav Rostropovich conducted the National Symphony Orchestra before 145,000 people.

Police in Washington estimated 400,000 people gathered to watch fireworks near the Lincoln Memorial. In New York City, a rowdy crowd estimated at 250,000 watched colorful bombs burst over New York Harbor.

But St. Louis claimed the biggest gathering. Police estimated 2 million revelers jammed the Mississippi waterfront on the first two days of the Veiled Prophet Fair.

Elsewhere on the muddy Mississippi — in Hannibal, Mo. — a boy from Rochester, Miss., out-whitewashed 14 others at the 26th annual Tom Sawyer Days. Doug Zmolok, 11, won the contest judged on quickness, workmanship and costumes recreating the Mark Twain character.

Americans also held balloon races, turtle races and at least one no-run race, in Scottsboro, Ala. The "winning" runner dawdled through a 33-foot course for about three hours until finally finishing last. A spokeswoman explained the race as a contest for people who consider joggers "a little strange."

Meanwhile, a gathering of another sort was taking place in Council, Idaho, where about 6,000 people got together in a mountain meadow with drugs, song and a prayer for peace.

Mistaken arrest

Stigma of wrong drug charge hurts student

DALLAS (AP) — Two years ago, Jeffrey Covington was identified as a drug dealer and hauled away in handcuffs from Bryan Adams High School. It was a case of mistaken identity, but the stigma and the whispers changed his life.

Covington was 16, an honors student and a candidate for the school council. But because of mistakes later acknowledged by the Dallas Police Department, he was identified as a drug dealer and arrested.

And by the time police acknowledged the mistake and apologized, Covington had been suspended from school, barred from the student council race, flunked in all his courses and banned from taking final exams. He also lost a part-time job at a country club.

Covington is now 18 and will attend Stephen F. Austin University this fall. He has not forgotten his ordeal and worries that others never will.

"Right up to graduation, he'd walk away from a group of people and they'd wonder if he still does drugs," said a friend, Steve Thomas.

Two weeks ago, Covington lost his federal court suit seeking $2 million in damages from the city and from the police department.

"We had a straight-out case of negligence," said his lawyer, Paul F. Carnes. "But the law says a police officer is entitled to an 'honest mistake' and he shouldn't be held liable for that.

Covington received $4,200 in an out-of-court settlement with the Dallas Independent School District, but his mother, Joyce Thurman, said that covers only one-third of the expenses the arrest caused.

"We are still angry," she said. "You don't just say, 'Hey, I'm sorry this happened.' When a 16-year-old goes through an ordeal like Jeff did, that's hardly compensation."

According to police records, patrolwoman Janice Jenkins, one of two undercover officers posing as students at the high school, said she bought a handful of methaqualone pills in the school parking lot from students she knew only as "Jeff" and "Tim."

Her report said Jeff and Tim were friends and habitual drug dealers. To determine Jeff's last name she went through a school yearbook looking for someone with "funny teeth," her records say. She spotted Covington's picture and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

STIGMA REMAINS — Jeffrey Covington stands in front of Dallas' Bryan Adams High School where he was a B-plus honors student two years ago. As a result of a series of mistakes by the Dallas Police Department, Covington was arrested and branded as a drug dealer. Now, two years later, the case is finally closed. Conington was cleared, but all he got from the police department was an apology.

The investigation led to a roundup of drug suspects beginning May 15, 1980 — a Thursday. Arriving at school the following Monday, Covington was summoned to the principal's office and told police were on their way.

Two plainclothes police led him through the hallway in handcuffs. Most students were in class, said Covington, "but when I walked to the police car, there was a class across the courtyard. They all learned of it then."

Covington repeatedly denied any involvement with drugs, to no avail.

"I had heard about people getting put in jail for stuff they didn't do. I was afraid I wasn't going to get out of it," he recalled.

Mrs. Thurman went to Covington's father for help in getting details on the accusations against their son. Ira Covington was an officer with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Some inconsistencies emerged.

The teen-ager was home sick the day Ms. Jenkins said she had bought drugs from him. Ms. Jenkins said he drove a Pontiac Trans Am; he drives a Chevrolet Camaro. And the suspect named Tim told Mrs. Thurman he had never before seen her son.

Mrs. Thurman presented that evidence to Assistant District Attorney Gary Arey, who arranged a face-to-face meeting between Covington and Ms. Jenkins.

"When we first brought Jeff into the room, she kept scrutinizing his face," Carnes said. "Then she asked him to speak.

"After he spoke a sentence, she thought just a second. 'No, that's not the right Jeff.' She never said, 'I'm sorry.' Her superiors apologized."

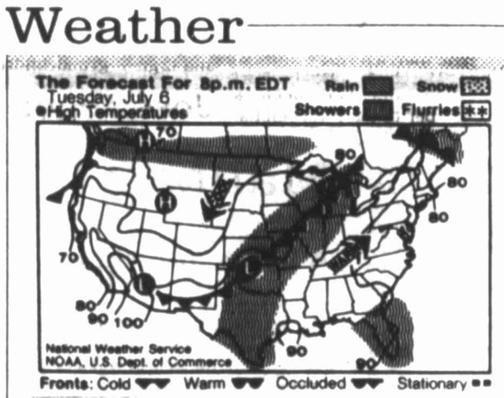

Ms. Jenkins left on vacation after the jury verdict and could not be reached for comment.

A police spokesman says several procedures have been changed as a result of the confusion in Covington's case.

"We made sure we had the officer look at the person face-to-face and we made sure that we did it in every case," said police Capt. John Milliken. "Why we didn't do it at Bryan Adams I don't know. There was a lot of confusion."

Said Covington, "There were a lot of loose ends that should have been tied up. They should have had their facts straight on everybody — not just me, but on all the people they arrest. I mean, they're supposed to protect the innocent as well as the guilty — probably even more so."

Donovan forgets 'the ugly past'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raymond J. Donovan is vowing to remain as secretary of labor for as long as he and President Reagan "feel that I'm productive. And that could be six and a half more years."

In his first wide-ranging interview since a special prosecutor concluded there was "insufficient credible evidence" for indictment on allegations of past ties to mobsters, Donovan said he and his family want to forget "the ugly past."

But Donovan, 51, also acknowledged in the interview in his Labor Department office late last week that members of the Senate Labor Committee are unlikely to let him put the ordeal behind him.

Asked about the planned resumption of Senate hearings on his case, President Reagan's embattled Cabinet officer replied:

"If they feel their duty is not done, that's their judgment to make. I intend to be secretary of labor and do this job well and get on with the business of helping the president turn this country around."

Donovan would not discuss the allegations in the interview, describing his confrontation with unnamed accusers and disbelieving congressmen as "most grueling."

But he did say that with Reagan's fresh vote of confidence, he's optimistic about chances for surviving the firestorm resulting from the allegations involving his conduct as a New Jersey construction executive before coming to Washington.

"I have never felt insecure," he said. "The president's words, nevertheless, were extremely encouraging to me and my family. He once and for all, in my view, has made it clear that I am his secretary of labor."

All 46 Democrats in the Senate demanded recently that Donovan step aside until the cloud hanging over his office was removed. The Democrats did not withdraw that plea last week, even though a special prosecutor in New York issued a thousand-page report concluding there was insufficient evidence to indict the labor secretary.

Sen. Daniel Quayle, R-Ind., has said, "If he (Donovan) stays on, we have no alternative" but to continue the investigation.

Mexico's government party wins

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Government party candidate Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado was elected president of Mexico, the Interior Ministry announced today. Opposition parties said they did not dispute the victory, but complained of isolated irregularities at the polls.

"We can announce that Miguel de la Madrid took a lead over the other candidates in such a way as we are certain that he has obtained a majority by a wide margin," said Enrique Olivares Santana, the ministry's secretary.

However, officials said election returns were arriving too slowly to provide statistics on the scope of the victory.

The opposition cited reports of stuffed ballot boxes and election violence, including the alleged kidnapping of four poll watchers and the shooting of another. But none disputed the ruling party's victory in Sunday's election.

"These violations were not particularly grave because they were isolated," said Jose Minondo Garfias the opposition National Action Party's representative on the national electoral commission.

"The election was not a farce," said Carlos Sanchez Cardenes, the socialist coalition's commission delegate. "It was a serious and important step toward a more democratic system."

De la Madrid agreed in a videotaped statement issued shortly after his victory was announced.

"The overwhelming majority of voters demonstrated their decision to fortify democracy," he declared.

He said the turnout was abundant and the election "peaceful and clean."

The evolution of our flag

If you have the flag of the United States floating above your home, school, work place or other institution, consider yourself fortunate.

During the harshest days of the Revolutionary War, George Washington wrote to the Continental Congress asking for "drums, fifes and standards." Two years later he was still asking. When the standards were finally delivered, the war was over.

The flag, as we salute it today, did not thrust itself in its entirety upon the Founding Fathers. Rather, it was an emblem that evolved through various stages, varied designs and assorted appearances. Isn't that the way much of life unfolds?

As a matter of fact, although Congress in 1818 approved a flag design basically similar to the current pattern, except for the number of stars, non-conforming emblems flew over federal installations virtually the entire 19th century.

NOW WE HAVE a familiar flag that symbolizes a united democracy. It is recognized throughout the world as a badge of freedom, independence and might.

Initially, the chief purpose of the ensign was to identify American vessels at sea. John Paul Jones flew it proudly in warfare against the British sloop Drake in 1772. The "American Stars" fluttered triumphantly for the first time.

But there were far-seeing people in the 18th and 19th centuries who could visualize a much wider objective for this piece of bunting. These included Francis Hopkinson, a musician, author and government official; Rep. Peter Hurcules Wendover of New York City, a member of the 15th Congress, and Navy Captain Samuel Chester Reid.

Hopkinson submitted to Congress in 1780 his design for a national emblem which he presented as original. But although Hopkinson was widely respected, Congress never acknowledged his effort.

But several decades later Wendover performed the legislative spade-work, pointing out that five states were not represented on the national flag and that there were obviously more states to come. In 1818 a measure was enacted calling for a banner with thirteen alternating red and white stripes representing the original colonies. One star was to be added to the blue field for every new state.

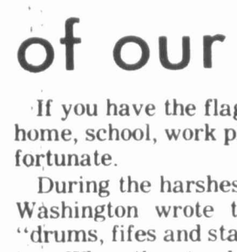

Captain Reid then presented to Congress his concept of how the new flag should appear and won formal approval. Mrs. Reid handstitched the emblem which was hoisted above the Capitol dome on April 13, 1818.

THROUGH THE YEARS, as Wendover had foreseen, the number of stars increased. Their growth reflected the burgeoning eminence of the United States.

New generations tended to accept the national symbol as their birthright. For them the colors had always been there and always would be.

But sometimes the emblem was a symbol of a struggle. The heroic raising of the banner at Iwo Jima helped to impress on millions that the flag could not be taken for granted. This deed might be likened to the steadfast determination of those who withstood the bombardment of Fort McHenry in 1814. Both were courageous ways to honor America.

Our flag is magnetic, as delightful to look upon as a splendid spring morning when flowers blossom and trees turn green. To many it signifies new hope and new life.

No tears here

The Equal Rights Amendment died last Wednesday with more of a whimper than a bang. Nobody seemed surprised and the ERA didn't even grab much newsplay as it faded slowly into history.

I'll miss the back-and-forth bantering of supporters and opposers of the measure. I like to see people fight for a cause they believe in, because in this day and age apathy is far too much the national pastime. Now that ERA is dead in the water I'll have to turn my full attention to the anti-nuclear protestors.

I was never a staunch ERA supporter nor was I one to rail against the amendment. I was like most people, which was confused. People never really understood what the ERA was all about because of its vagueness.

Some pro-Era people said the law would give women equal pay and eliminate discrimination on account of sex; and some anti-Era people said women would be drafted into the army, and the traditional family as we know it would be destroyed. With all these stories floating around a person never knew what to believe. And there never seemed to be any concrete facts to guide our thinking, so most of us were always in the dark about the ERA. Now we'll never know if any of those speculations would have come true.

THE ERA started out great in 1972 with 30 states ratifying it by 1973, but then the amendment really turned into a hot politicial issue. And when anything become a hot political issue, much like social security has today, politicians handle the controversy carefully, which usually means they do nothing. They want to keep their jobs. Anyway, since 1973 only five states have ratified the ERA leaving it three states short of becoming law.

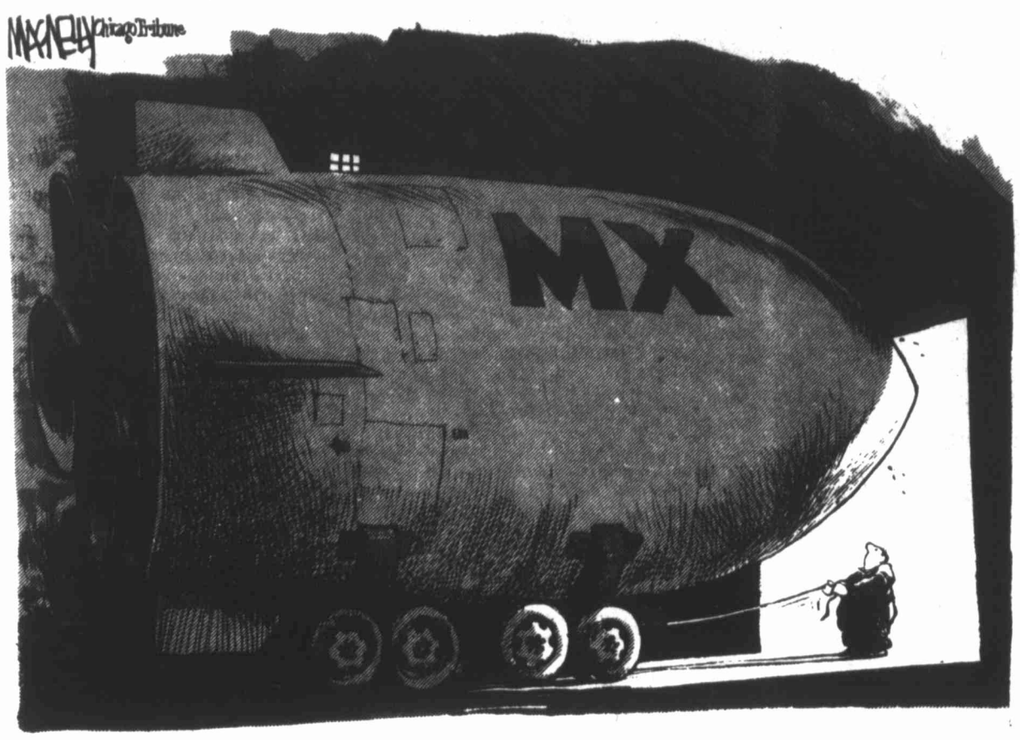

The politicians lack of activity on the subject plus heavy lobbying against that the ERA hurt it, but what ultimately may have killed the ERA was a loss of interest by the public. Ten years is a long time to keep the American people interested in anything. It is a fact we forget quickly.

ANOTHER FACTOR which caused the ERA's failure was people's belief the measure wouldn't change things all that much. We have laws against discriminating on the basis of age, race, color, creed — and Texas even has its own ERA law, but everyone knows there are ways around those laws. The unwritten law of prejudice and ignorance is stronger than any law the courts can pass.

If a person wants a woman, or anybody else for that matter, to have equal rights he will see that the woman gets a fair shake, but if he doesn't want the woman to be equal, there will be a way to do that too. The ERA couldn't have changed the latter form of thinking.

ERA supporters shouldn't be too sad. The amendment helped to get the women's movement rolling and women are figuring much more prominently in our society than ever before. We now have more women doctors, lawyers, mayors, etc., than we ever did in the 1950s and '60s. The ERA, although it was never passed, also has allowed in many cases for a woman to receive the same pay as a man when working at a similar job.

The ERA did leave its mark in history and I think it will be shown as an enlightened movement. Its general essence allowed for growth and recognition of women that was long past due.

Recovery and Reaganomics

WASHINGTON — In its quiet way the Federal Reserve Board appears to have modified the policies that allowed interest rates to go through the roof. In addition, a kick in consumer spending promises some relief from recession.

But neither bit of good news fits the ideological prescriptions of the Reagan administration. Moreover, the whole economic picture may turn very sour very soon. So the Treasury, with an apparent eye to blaming the Fed, has instituted a study of what went wrong.

Reaganomics is the most obvious candidate for blame. The President came to office promising a return to prosperity through a rise in business investment. To that end his economic program featured tax incentives for business, which the Congress passed retroactive to January of last year.

Capital for investment was supposed to flow from private savings engendered by the huge three-year cut in income taxes also passed last year. To sweeten the pot further for investors, the Fed was encouraged to break inflation by holding down growth in the money supply — no matter what the consequence for interest rates.

MAJOR BUDGET deficits were threatened by the huge tax cut and proposed rises in defense spending. But the administration promised to cover the deficit by, first, cuts in non-defense spending; and, second, an extreme supply-side theory. The theory held that even if tax rates declined, business activity would be spurred to the point where total revenues would actually be enhanced and the budget balanced in 1984.

In fact, aside from a drop in inflation, no part of that scenario materialized. High interest rates forced the whole economy into recession. Business investment stayed flat. Unemployment rose to a postwar high of 9.5 percent. Tax receipts plunged and the deficit took off, with forecasts of $100 billion to $200 billion becoming almost casual.

A chance for a midterm correction presented itself with the 1983 budget, which the President served up to the Congress in January. But Reagan refused to raise taxes significantly and stood firm against defense cuts. The Democrats held out against big reductions in non-defense spending, especially Social Security. After months of negotiations, the Congress finally adopted last week a budget resolution backed by the votes of Republicans and conservative Democrats.

The resolution provides explicitly for a deficit of $104 billion. The view in financial circles is that the actual figure will far exceed that projection, with consequences that are unpredictable. So, as the budget resolution took shape during the past six weeks, there occurred a worldwide lurch for financial liquidity.

The Federal Reserve, apparently concerned that sky-high interest rates might cause mass bankruptcy, has accommodated the special push for liquidity. Since mid-May it has let the main measure of the money stock drift above the established targets. It held the rate at which banks borrow funds every day about even. Interest rates moved down to 16 and then up again slightly. Presumably the Fed is prepared to hold interest rates in that range for the immediate future, while allowing money supply a little more play.

A SECOND consequence of the budget is that consumers will enjoy a shot in the arm from lower taxes and higher Social Security payments beginning next month. That combines with a drastic winding down of inventory over the past few months. So, thanks to consumer spending, the recession that has dogged the economy since last fall now appears to be bottoming out.

The net impact of all these developments is relatively small. Unemployment will stay high. So will interest rates, especially since inflation has started to rise a little. As a result, the recovery will almost certainly be short-lived, and there could be, in 1983, another recession.

Still, something relatively positive has occurred. The danger of financial debacle would have been much greater if the Fed had held to its money-supply targets and let interest rates rise even higher. Recovery from the recession, however anemic, takes some of the pressure off hard-hit regions and industries. So the normal reaction should have been two cheers, and a warning about the need to continue the long hard fight against inflation.

But the Reagan administration does not enjoy a recovery led by consumer spending, a Keynesian notion that flies in the face of supply-side theories. Neither does it like easing on money supply, which runs counter to its monetarist doctrine. So Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has instituted a major review of all policy options, including the independence of the Federal Reserve Board.

The review plainly aims at fingering the Fed for the bad times past, and, maybe, yet to come. That case will be hard to make, and there seems to be little chance tht the independence of the Fed will be seriously compromised. But the inquest may succeed in drawing attention away from the true source of all the difficulty — the bankruptcy of Reaganomics.

Old ideas in Philly

The Constitutional Convention is meeting in Philadelphia to write a Declaration of Independence. In the hallways are lobbyists for special interest groups, working to water it down.

Thomas Oglethorpe representing, the English Tea Industry, buttonholes Thomas Jeferson and says, "Tom, I have to talk to you."

"I'm awfully busy now. I have to put the finishing touches on the abuses that George III has heaped on us."

"It will only take a few moments," Oglethorpe says, grabbing Jefferson's arm and steering him around the corner. "Do you realize that your Declaration is going to play havoc with the tea industry?"

"Well, George III shouldn't have put a tax on it without consulting us."

"I'm not talking about tea, Tommy. I'm talking about jobs. Do you know how many people will be laid off in the colonies if you people go ahead with this declaration."

"That's just too bad. George is not going to tax us without our consent."

"Tommy, bend down, I want to whisper something in your ear. I've been authorized to spend five million pounds by the English Tea Political Action Committee to take care of our friends in the Continental Congress. We'll buy six tables at your next fundraiser if you eliminate the tax protest from the document."

"I can't take it out. It's a key sentence in the Declaration and the one thing that has the colonialists all up in arms."

"Tommy, the Society of English Tea Exporters is meeting in Toronto next month. How would you like to be the keynote speaker? We'll pay you 5,000 pounds, and take you there and back in the East Indies Private Horse and Carriage."

"Oglethorpe, I have to go."

"All right, Tommy, we can play hard ball too. We're going to pour 100,000 pounds into Virginia to see that you don't get elected."

Jefferson turns to leave when he is stopped by General Cornwallis. "Tommy, I'm glad I ran into you. The Joint Chiefs in London are very upset that your declaration won't let us quarter our troops in people's homes here. If it passes, we're going to have to build barracks for them, and it's going to cost us a fortune that we planned to spend for flintlocks."

"I can't worry about the military. My concern is that your troops are moving in on our homes without any consent."

"That's no way to treat our boys in uniform. After all, we're keeping the French from making a pre-emptive strike on Boston."

"We don't see it that way. We consider you a foreign army."

"Tommy, if you take the quartering sentence out of the Declaration, we'll build three forts in your state, and a naval base in Portsmouth, which will add 20 million pounds a year to Virginia's economy."

"No soap, General. It stays in as I wrote it."

Cornwallis says, "Okay, Tommy, but don't come to us when you want our engineers to build you a dam."

Jeferson walks down to his office, where he is stopped by a fundamentalist minister from the Royal Majority.

"Tommy, do you realize what you're doing? This declaration is heresy against the mother church. God wants us to be part of the British Empire. You're encouraging sin, abortion and homosexuality. We have to get the colonists to go back to the old values when people respected their king."

"Thanks, but no thanks. I worked too hard on this document to scrap it now."

"Okay, Tommy, if that's the way you want it. But if you ever run for President, the Royal Majority aren't going to leat you forget this. We have the Lord on our side."

Does heaven have gold streets?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What do you think Heaven is really going to be like? Are the streets really paved with gold? — T.H.

DEAR T.H.: The Bible sometimes uses physical descriptions to give us an idea of what Heaven will be like. You may be thinking of the description of the heavenly Jerusalem found in Revelation, for example: "It shone with the glory of God, and its brilliance was like that of a very precious jewel ... The foundations of the city walls were decorated with every kind of precious stone ... The street of the city was of pure gold, like transparent glass" (Revelation 21:11, 19, 21).

Some Biblilcal scholars see these descriptions as only hinting at the true splendor of Heaven, and we must not get sidetracked into trying to imagine exactly what Heaven will look like. The main thing is that Heaven will be far, far greater and more magnificent than anything we could ever imagine or know on this earth. But more than that, the greatest thing about Heaven is that there will be no sin or evil there, and we will have full fellowship with the Lord. There are no greater words in the Bible about our heavenly hope than these: "Now the dwelling of God is with men, and he will live with them. They will be his people, and God himself will be with them and be their God. He will wipe every tear from their eyes. There will be no more death or mourning or crying or pain, for the old order of things has passed away" (Revelation 21:3-4).

Remember too as part of this that all who know Christ will be changed into his likeness. We will be given new, perfect bodies, and we will be changed into his image or likeness: "Dear friends, now we are children of God, and what we will be has not yet been made known. But we know that when he appears, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2).

A poem in response

Dear Editor:

In response to J. Walter Unger's letter to you on June 23, 1982 I would like to submit the following poem:

Let time evolve a peaceful heart
To beat within our breast.
Let all the selfish strivings
Be quietly put to rest.
And let us seek a brave, new world
Where men are truly blest
With global understanding
And every man receives his rightful best.

Crash diet leads to Amenorrhea

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I suppose I am one of thousands of girls who have gone through this. When I was about 14, I was very heavy (180 pounds). I was happy and carefree. But I got tired of the teasing and feeling uncomfortable, so I went on a crash diet. I went down to 110. I got very tired, very irritable, and I lost my period. When I gained weight back I got my period back. This went on for a few years. Then many months ago I went on another crash diet. I lost 86 pounds. I still felt fat, and felt like I was going crazy. I had all the symptoms of anorexia nervosa, which I have read up on.

I haven't had a period since this last time. Could it mean something serious? I enjoy not having my period, frankly, but could this mean something later on? I am only 23. Should I get checked? — C.

Yes, you should be checked.

It is true that women who get very thin may experience a loss of their periods (amenorrhea). Women must have a certain amount of body fat in order to menstruate. Very athletic females, who may develop a disproportionate muscle-to-fat ratio, sometimes experience this. The loss of fat affects hormone production, specifically the hormone that regulates ovaries, and hence periods.

Now ordinarily, when the body fat returns so do the periods. This is what happened to you those other times. Why it has not this time, I cannot say. You certainly would be unwise to assume that your present thinness is causing this longstanding absence of periods. There are many other potential causes. You have to see a doctor so that he can investigate them.

You do not tell me your present weight or height. But if you are still overweight you should avoid crash diets. You should retrain yourself with regard to eating habits and lose gradually that way.

(And on the same subject):

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I guess I just learned what anorexia really is. My daughter is 20, and for three years her eating habits have been bad. Now I have found she eats, then goes to the bathroom to vomit. She has been to the doctor, but doesn't change, and I am so upset. She does not menstruate. She is 5 feet, 1inch and weighs 90 pounds. She is afraid she will get fat. She runs five miles a day and lives in saunas. Please, is there a special kind of doctor, or someone who could talk to her and make her understand how harmful all this is? — S.M.

Your daughter needs expert help soon. She has this distorted image of her body, and her eating habits are affecting her health. She may have more than anorexia. She may have the sister ailment — bulimia. That is the practice of following an eating binge with forced elimination of food. Both these conditions accompany an obsession with thinness.

Even when people become thin (read C's letter above) they still view themselves as fat. They continue to diet and may indulge in punishing physical exercises and sauna baths. That adds to their problem, which is basically a psychological one.

You should take action soon. Ask her doctor to recommend a psychiatrist who is interested in these problems. She needs this kind of guidance. The problem can be overcome, but it can take a long time. The sooner the first step is taken, the better for her.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: With regard to high blood pressure, is too much salt the only thing that causes it to stay high? Is it normal for a reading to be very high one day, then almost normal in a day or two? — Mrs. M.R.

Too much salt is not the only things that leads to high blood pressure. It is one of the important factors causing it to stay high. Aging, itself, can cause pressure to rise somewhat. For this reason, slightly higher readings are, to some extent, expected as we get older. Obesity leads to the problem, so can lack of sufficient exercise. We are just scratching the surface in our knowledge about this problem.

Pressure is never static, changing from morning to evening, day to day, even hour to hour. Emotional stress can cause it to rise. I cannot guess, in any individual case, what would cause it to rise unexpectedly, then drop. For a person experiencing this, getting a checkup would be the prudent thing to do.

Hayworths have reunion

The Hayworth Reunion was held at the Signal Mountain Room of the Coahoma State Bank, June 25-27.

Descendants of John A. and Sarah Hayworth of Mambrino, Texas have met each summer for many years. The reunions are held alternately, one year at the old Hayworth Tabernacle in Hood County and the next year in Big Spring.

John A. Hayworth was born September 3, 1859, in Missouri; he left an orphan in the Civil War and raised by relatives. By the age of 17, he was driving ox wagons on freight lines to Texas. It was during one of his rides that he met Sarah Wheeler. They were married in 1878 and eventually settled in the Mambrino area of Hood County, Texas.

John and Sarah had eight children — Allen, John William "Bill," Rufus "Bum," Cordelia "Delia," Marcus "Bart," Jacob, Horace, and Dennis "Den." During the years of the late '20's and '30's, some of the children came to West Texas seeking work. The children who came to Big Spring were Delia, Bart, Horace, and Den; thus, the family became the "West-Texas Bunch" and the "Hood-County Bunch."

Activities during this year's reunion included an auction on Saturday night, a worship-memorial service on Sunday morning, a business meeting, and enjoying Hayworth cooking and visiting. Lila Hayworth of Big Spring was recognized as being the oldest woman in attendance, Tuff Hayworth of Amarillo was the oldest man, and Raymond Hayworth of California was recognized as having come the farthest. There were several states represented as well as many parts of Texas. From Horace Hayworth's family, there were five generations with four in attendance.

The next reunion will be the last weekend in June of 1983 in Mambrino, Texas.

Overnighter held for daughters, fathers

Fifty-nine Brownie Girl Scouts treated 58 dads to a Special Brownie-Dad Cookie Overnight at Camp Boothe Oaks near Sweetwater, June 23, 25-26. The brownies earned this privilege by selling seven or more cases of cookies in the 1982 cookie sale of the West Texas Girl Scout Council. The June 25-26 Special was the third and last Brownie-Dad event for 1982.

Brownies and dads attending from Big Spring were Loral and Neal Abernathy, Jaylon and Don Davis, Sunny and Troy Fraser, Pattie Roa and Jack Howard, Jobie and Jerry Dalton, and Melissa Shelton and father. Don and Denise Bethel of Lamesa also attended.

Fresh vegetables are plentiful

COLLEGE STATION — The "fresh approach" is the in-thing this year. Fresh vegetables are plentiful in Texas now, so make sure you get your share.

"Ask for fruits and vegetables grown in Texas," suggests Tom Longbrake, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "You'll be supporting Texans who earn their livelihood from growing your groceries."

Texas supplies broccoli, cabbage, carrots, spinach, lettuce, potatoes and sweet potatoes in April and May. May also brings cantaloupes, cucumbers, honeydews, squash, peppers and tomatoes. Blackberries, plums and early peaches will be available in late May.

"Buying vegetables direct from growers at 'you-pick' operations and roadside markets is increasing in Texas," notes Longbrake. "Cost savings can be passed on to consumers by farm markets who sell locally grown produce through reduced costs in transportation, packaging and refrigeration."

Tomatoes are the most popular vegetable bought at roadside markets followed by watermelons, peaches, blackeyed peas, okra, squash, new potatoes and green beans, says the horticulturist.

"If you're in the cost-cutting mood, consider buying fresh produce by the bushel for canning or freezing at home," suggests Longbrake.

So get fresh with Texas produce. Local radio and newspaper ads can tell you where fresh produce is available.

Perfect parents doesn't mean happiness

"Superparents" are a myth, says Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist.

Even if parents were perfect, it would not guarantee the happiness of children, she adds.

Ms. Taylor is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dear Abby

It's son's wife, not daughter

DEAR ABBY: We are still having an argument that began on Mother's Day. Perhaps you can help us settle it.

On Mother's Day I received flowers with a card that read, "To Mother on her special day." It was signed by both my son and his wife, whose mother is still living. I later learned that my daughter-in-law's mother also received flowers with a card signed by both my son and his wife.

I say that the card that came with my flowers should have been signed by my son only. After all, I carried him under my heart for nine months, gave him life and raised him to manhood. I am his mother — and not the mother of the stranger he married.

My son's wife has her own mother, but she is not the mother of my son!

I know if you print this, you will receive many letters from mothers saying, "As long as I am remembered on Mother's Day, I don't care who signs the card." However, that is not the point. The point is that being called "Mother" is a sacred privilege that belongs only to the woman who has earned it. A person can have many wives — or husbands — during a lifetime, but only one mother. What do you say?

MOTHER OF ONE

DEAR MOTHER: Obviously, a person can have only one mother, but when people marry, they create a new "family," and their spouse's relatives become their relatives, traditionally as well as by law. Don't split hairs, Mother, less you split families.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and just finished 11th grade. I flunked one semester of social studies, so now my dad had to pay $80 for me to go to night school to make it up. I didn't want to go to night school in the first place, but he says if I don't go, I can't drive, and you know how important driving is to a kid my age.

Anyway, get this, Abby, my dad is making me pay back the $80. Do you think he is being fair?

MAD

DEAR MAD: Yes. And wise, too.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: This is concerning the 13-year-old girl who thinks she's a "freak" because she has two different-colored eyes. I'd like to help her by telling her that I, too, was born with two different-colored eyes, and I was always extremely proud of them. One was green like my father's, and the other was brown like my mother's.

Many famous people had eyes of different colors. The beautiful Kay Francis, the late Gracie Allen, who was married to George Burns, Lionel Stander, the housemman on the TV series "Hart to Hart,' and many others.

Never mind getting contact lenses to look like everyone else. My husband said he fell in love with my unusual eyes.

ANNA C. IN SANTA MONICA

DEAR ANNA: Since that letter appeared in my column, a surprising number of readers wrote to say that they, too, were born with two different-colored eyes. In any case, I agree, it's nothing to be embarrassed about. (We see eye to eye.)

BUS HIJACK COUPLE ADVANCES ON POLICE BARRICADE — A Jasper, Ark., couple identified by authorities as Keith and Kate Haigler, who told reporters they were the children of the messiah, move toward police lines from the bus they hijacked Saturday afternoon. Shortly after this picture was taken, sharpshooters wounded them and Kate killed her husband and herself. They expected to be resurrected in 3½ days.

Couple held 14 passengers

Bus hijackers 'decided to die' authorities say

JASPER, Ark. (AP) — A self-proclaimed messiah refused to assist police after two of his disciples hijacked a bus and held 14 passengers hostage, a sheriff says. The 4½-hour drama ended in a shootout that left the couple dead.

Newton County Sheriff Ray Watkins said Sunday that Emory Lamb refused two requests to come to the bridge where Keith and Kate Haigler had commandeered a Continental Trailways bus Saturday.

"I think Lamb could have made a difference," Watkins said. "They were his followers. If they thought he was the messiah, he could have stopped it."

Lamb, contacted early today, denied that he "could have changed the situation."

"I thought for a minute and I thought I'd rather not go because it was a police situation and I thought they would be better able to handle it," Lamb said.

He said he knew the Haiglers well and didn't think he could have persuaded them to give themselves up.

Witnesses, including television and newspaper reporters, said the couple begged to be killed so they could rise from the dead in three days. They first shot at police, and police then returned the fire, wounding both, witnesses said.

Mrs. Haigler then shot her husband in the face with a .38-caliber pistol, and when he faltered trying to shoot her with a .22-caliber handgun, she shot herself in the chest, the observers said.

State police Sgt. Jim Thomas said it was possible no one could have convinced the two to surrender. "They were so firmly wrapped up in their religious belief — that today was the day they were going to die — they wanted to be shot," he said. "But their 'messiah' didn't want to get involved."

The Haiglers, who released the bus passengers unharmed, demanded to be interviewed by the news media. After discussing their beliefs with a TV reporter from Springfield, Mo., they left the bus, knelt and fired toward a police barricade at the north end of the Little Buffalo River Bridge, police said.

Haigler, 27, died on the bridge. Mrs. Haigler, 25, died en route to a hospital near this north Arkansas town 125 miles from Little Rock.

The Haiglers belonged to the Foundation of Ubiquity, a small religious sect based in the Jasper area. The sect worships Lamb as its messiah. Haigler was known as Baby Fou, an acronym for Foundation of Ubiquity. Lamb is called Daddy Fou.

Lamb, 53, said he knew nothing of the Haiglers' plan and took no responsibility for their deaths.

"If they would have told me about it, I would not have approved," he said. "I am the long-awaited messiah that can let people know about the father that lives within me."

The Haiglers said they based their beliefs on a Biblical passage which refers to two witnesses who will prophesize for 1,260 days, be slain and rise from the dead after 3½ days. Haigler said Saturday was the 1,260th day from the time he saw a vision.

Identity of man killed by police is mystery

HOUSTON (AP) — The identity of a man killed by police who were chasing him after a purse snatching remained a mystery late Sunday.

"We just wish we had some idea," said a spokeswoman for the Harris County medical examiner's office who declined to release her name.

Police officers from two independent towns within the Houston city limits say the man, who was suspected of stealing a purse from the passenger seat of a van, fired twice at them as he fled.

W.W. Snitkin, chief of police in West University Place, said one officer from his department and one from the Southside Place department shot the man several times after he opened fire from behind a brick wall.

Snitkin said the incident began about 9 a.m. Saturday when a purse was stolen off the seat of a van that a woman was driving out of a carwash.

The man fled on a bicycle, Snitkin said, and the woman flagged down Southside officer Andy Anderson. Anderson was joined in the chase by Bernie Kammerman of the West University Place police.

Snitkin said the two chased the man into an apartment complex, where the man fired twice at Anderson. Anderson returned the fire, and the man leaped a wall and landed beside Kammerman, Snitkin said.

Both officers fired on the man, who was carrying a small-caliber handgun, Snitkin said.

LULAC president keeps political goal

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Despite rejection of a proposal intended to make the League of United Latin American Citizens a powerful Hispanic political force, Tony Bonilla vowed not to let the organization return to a "Mexican-American Country Club" image.

"As long as I am national president, we are going to remain steadfast on our goals and objectives," he said. "There is no reason to be discouraged."

During the so-called "Brown Power Movement" of the 1960s, activist groups such as the defunct Raza Unida Party called LULAC "the Mexican-American Country Club" because it insisted on steering clear of politics.

Bonilla's proposal to create the first national Hispanic political action committee was shouted down by sharply divided delegates at a tumultuous closing business session at the LULAC national convention Sunday.

"We have liberals, conservatives, Democrats, Republicans, independents, and I think we have some idiots," Tony Bonilla said. "I think if we had a roll call vote, the resolution would have been accepted."

The resolutions chairman declared the PAC resolution was approved Sunday in a close voice vote, but Bonilla overruled him amid catcalls and ruled that it was defeated.

Bonilla blamed defeat of the PAC measure on "old guard" and "loyal opposition" LULAC members who were defeated by Ruben Bonilla in 1979.

Hit and run suspect arrested

SAN AUGUSTINE, Texas (AP) — East Texas sheriff's officers arrested a 16-year-old youth Sunday in connection with a weekend hit-and-run accident that killed two boys on a rural road and put another in the hospital.

"We were able to locate him after intensive searching," said Sheriff N.L. Tindall of the San Augustine Sheriff's Department.

He said the boy's name was being withheld because he is a juvenile.

Killed about 1:30 a.m. Saturday were Emory Roberts Jr., 13, and Robert Parks, 11.

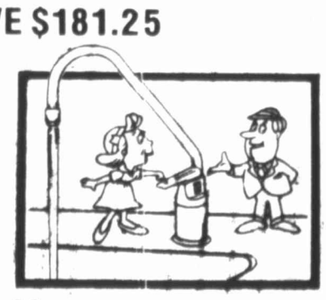

Tindall said the boy in custody could face involuntary manslaughter charges.

Connors captures Wimbledon title

Jimmy Connors leaps high as he beats title holder John McEnroe, to take the Wimbledon Men's Singles Championship title today. He won 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe began separated only by a net and 78 feet of worn green grass. They ended more than four hours later, separated by the gulf between a champion and a runnerup.

"Neither one of us was going to roll over and die. It was kill or be killed out there," Connors said Sunday in the aftermath of his 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 triumph over the defending champion to capture the All-England tennis championship at Wimbledon. "That's why we have great matches."

And, it had to be great, if only to eclipse all the troubles that had plagued the 96th installment of Wimbledon.

With five of the top 10 ranked men players — including four of the top six — absent for a variety of reasons and rain that fell nearly every day of the fortnight, the prestige of both the tournament and the All-England Club was in need of saving.

A subway and railroad strike cut even deeper into the gate, which totaled 320,000 through the two-week-long tournament, a drop of more than 37,000 from last year's meeting.

And, who was better for the job of saving the tournament than Connors, the 1974 champion, who was in need of a little saving himself.

Since winning the 1978 U.S. Open title, the world's third-ranked player had failed to reach the final of a Grand Slam tournament — the Australian, French and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon — having lost eight times in the semifinals and twice in the quarterfinal bracket of those events.

"I did it in 1974, and once is fine and dandy if you want to be a one-timer. But I'm not a one-timer," he said of the Wimbledon title. "I had the chance to do it three times since then (1975 against Arthur Ashe; 1977 and 1978 against Bjorn Borg) and it slipped by me.

"I had another chance today. I was going to do anything to stop that chance from slipping by me again, and that means fighting to the death."

But at the opening of the match — fittingly on Independence Day, the first all-American final since 1975 — it appeared the only struggle would be against boredom.

Connors broke through in the opening game to build a quick 3-1 edge, only to have McEnroe capitalize on his opponent's lackluster play by taking the next five games and the set.

Then it was McEnroe's turn to err, with Connors using breaks in the second and fourth games to win the second set by an identical 6-3 score.

But slowly their instincts began to take over and the tension mounted as the third set got under way. Sporadic urging by the isolated spectators swelled into cheers from the enter crowd at Centre Court.

Connors gained another break in the first game, pushed it to 5-4, and was serving for the set. At 30-30, he delivered the sixth of his eight double-faults in the set.

No.7 came at break point. After an exchange of serve, the set went to a tiebreaker.

"I said to myself, 'You're out of it if you don't get straight. You've got to slow down and cut out the errors.'" recalled Connors.

Although his serve was never broken from that juncture on, Connors would have to wait for his payoff. McEnroe's sixth ace of the match — he would finish with 19 — gave him a set point in the tiebreaker, and a service winner gave him the third set.

By the fourth set, umpire Bob Jenkins was forced to call repeatedly for the capacity crowd of 14,000 to "let the gentlemen play."

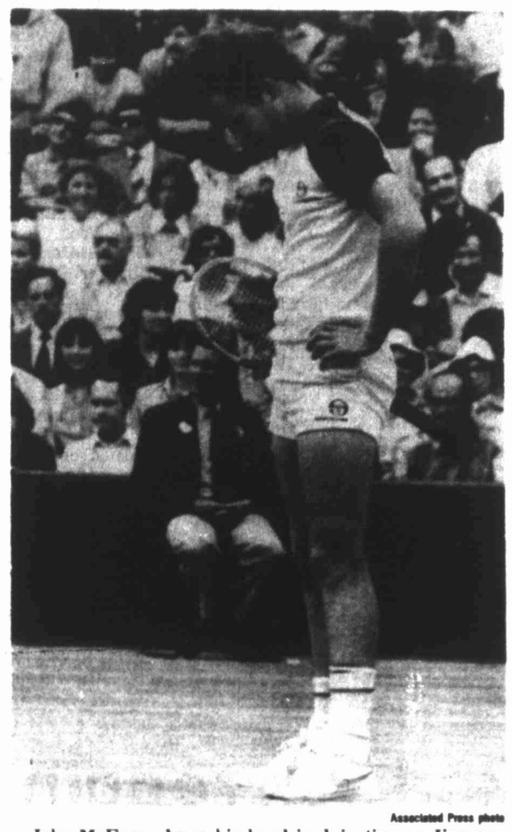

And play they did.

"I thought I would hold on to the title after the third set," said McEnroe. "I feel bad I didn't win, but I had a better time this year than last. It was tight all the way through, but he won the bigger points at the end."

The fourth set followed serve despite the fact that McEnroe drilled 10 aces, two of them during a love game to force a second tiebreaker. He rocketed yet another ace to take a 4-3 lead in the tiebreaker, only to have Connors rip off the next three points and capture the set with a service winner.

Connors gained the winning margin with a service return down the line for a break in the third game. After the two held serve to 5-4, the 29-year-old Belleville, Ill., native served his 13th double-fault of the match.

But he finished the match with a service winner, leaped into the air as he made his way to the net, then walked to the end of the court, where his wife Patti met him.

Jimmy likes being 'good guy'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors finds it much more pleasant to win Wimbledon as a "good guy" than as a "bad guy."

So, he bowed to all of the old All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club's amenities after beating favored John McEnroe Sunday in the rousing 4 hour, 14 minute duel on Centre Court.

He got a babysitter for his young son, Brett. Then he donned a tux, got wife Patti to put on her prettiest party dress and hied off to the traditional Wimbledon Ball.

GOOD GUY — Holding the Wimbledon Singles Championship trophy, Jimmy Connors hugs his wife, Patti, after he defeated fellow American John McEnroe for the title, in London, Sunday.

This was a contrast of the action of McEnroe when the latter won a year ago. Peeved over fines totaling $10,000, later rescinded, for his tantrums, Mac the Strife spurned the party. The stuffy All-England Club promptly denied him the virtually automatic membership which goes to all champions.

"I don't like to look back," Connors said when he was reminded that Wimbledon galleries booed him when he crushed the beloved veteran Ken Rosewall in the 1974 final.

Also he was roundly criticized for what the British called a "snub" of the Queen and Wimbledon when he declined to attend the Centenary Celebration on Centre Court in 1977.

Instead, he practiced on an adjacent court, further offending British sensibilities.

Connors never picked up the gold medal given out at that occasion to past champions.

He indicated he might correct the oversight this week.

Now, eight years after his first singles victory, Jimmy Connors finds himself the idol of the Isles, the most cheered champion since Jaroslav Drobny, the stateless Czech, finally won the championship at age 32 in 1954.

He also undoubtedly will emerge as a new American hero for the grit and guts displayed against the 23-year McEnroe in what certainly should go down as one of Wimbledon's most historic finals.

The millions who watched on television must have been equally intrigued by the combativeness and unshakeable poise of this 29-year-old former court king who had been regarded as on the downside of life's hill.

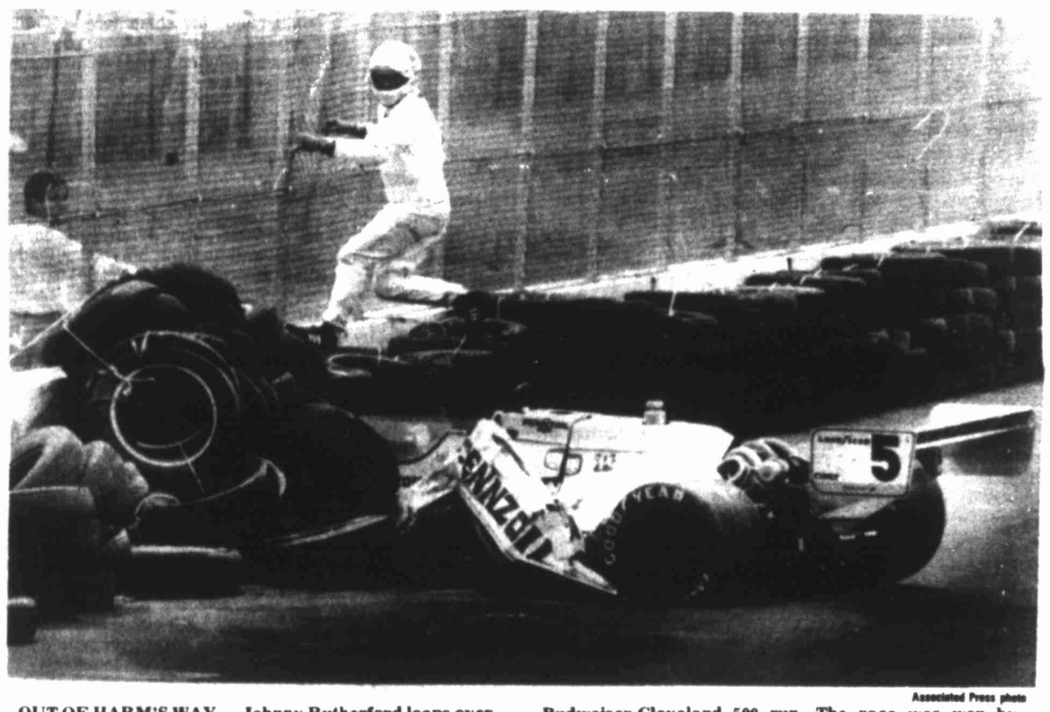

Connors, in his maturing years, has become a very laudable competitor, made of the tough fibers that turns sports champions into legends.

With his Prince Valiant hairstyle, he presents the image of a Pete Rose in short pants instead of baseball threads. Almost every move on the court has a quality of the fierce pride and drive of the scrappy Philadelphia Phillies first baseman who in his 40s is zeroing on more of Ty Cobb's records for hitting consistency and durability.

He grunts. He scratches. He digs. He runs down every ball. He never quits fighting.

At 5-foot-10 and 150 pounds, he has none of the natural instincts and weapons of the innately gifted, bigger and younger McEnroe.

Yet, he makes the most of the hard-earned skills at hand. He almost digs divots in the court when he lunges at a ball. He is a human flying missile, hitting most shots while literally throwing his body at the ball.

OUT OF HARM'S WAY — Johnny Rutherford leaps over a tire barrier and onto a retaining wall to avoid oncoming cars after running into the wall Sunday during the Budweiser-Cleveland 500 run. The race was won by rookie Bobby Rahal who edged out Mario Andretti.

Haynie captures Jackson classic

TORONTO (AP) — Sandra Haynie now has distinction of being the first player to win the three designated major tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

She she captured the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic in dramatic fashion Sunday to go with her previous victories in the LPGA Championship and the U.S. Women's Open.

The 39-year-old Texan ran in an eight-foot uphill putt on the 18th hole to stave off a late charge by Beth Daniel, who came from three strokes back on the 13th by shaving two strokes from par on four of the toughest finishing holes the women see this year.

It wasn't an easy finish for Haynie. Her second shot on the 18th wound up at the back of the fringe because she was forced to go for the pin from a difficult lie when she pulled her tee shot into trees along the fairway. Haynie said she was shocked by the distance the ball went past the hole on her first putt from 30 feet above the hole.

It was the fourth time since 1975 the LPGA stop has been played at the 6,071-yard St. George's Golf and Country Club layout, and for good reason.

"I thought, when I had that birdie at 13 to go three strokes up, all I had to do was play par from there because nobody has made up strokes on those finishing holes," said Haynie. "Like we've been saying all week, they're the toughest finishing holes we'll play all year.

"But, you saw what Beth did out there today. She took two strokes from par, which just goes to show that anything can happen."

Weiskopf wins Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — It was an out-of-character Tom Weiskopf who won this year's Western Open golf title. He credits Ken Venturi, Jack Nicklaus and himself for the change.

"'Be patient, be patient, be patient,' I kept telling myself. 'Let it happen.' That's always been a problem for me. I try to force things," said Weiskopf after his victory Sunday.

Usually a bold player, Weiskopf turned conservative on the last nine holes at the Butler National course.

"I didn't shoot at a pin on the backside, except 11, until I got to 18. I was shooting for the middle of the greens. I usually fire at the pins," he said.

Weiskopf paid tribute to Venturi and Nicklaus for his 15th career victory, a feat that lifted him into fourth place on the game's all-time money list with $2.1 million.

He said he reviewed a 1970 note from Venturi on golf swing fundamentals. "I took it to the practice tee and worked with it the last three weeks," Weiskopf said of the advice from the former U.S. Open champion.

He said he learned patience from watching Nicklaus, his old Ohio State buddy, play in the U.S. Open.

Still, Weiskopf needed a swing of two shots on the last hole to win the $63,000 first prize with a 2-under-par 70 for a record Butler National total of 276, 12-under-par.

He birdied from seven feet. Larry Nelson, leading Weiskopf by a single shot going to 18, bogeyed by three-putting from the front fringe.

"There's destiny in everything," Weiskopf said. "This is a game of mistakes and Larry made one there."

Nelson finished second place with 71-278. He earned $37,800.

"I'm happy for him, but not very happy for me. That's the way it goes. I played as well as I could," said Nelson.

Nelson admitted a spectator yelled as he was preparing to hit his approach shot to the 18th green. "It threw me off," he said.

Nelson stepped away from the ball, addressed it again and hit his five-iron in the fringe, 35 feet short of the hole.

"I didn't hit that good of a putt, but it was difficult. You couldn't charge the hole. And the second putt I didn't hit as hard as I should have," he said.

Nelson left his first putt 12 feet short, forcing him into the runnerup spot. His second one slipped to the left of the cup, forcing him to settle for into the runnerup spot.

Bob Gilder, the winner of the Westchster Classic last week, finished third, closing with a 69 for 278. Gilder, the hottest current player in golf, is 29 strokes below par for his last eight rounds.

Bill Rogers, the 1981 PGA Player of the Year, and non-winner Jim Thorpe shared fourth place with 280s. They shot 70s in the hot, humid weather on this 7,097-yard suburban Chicago layout.

Astros' Ryan blanks Dodgers, 3-0

LOS ANGELES (AP)– Nolan Ryan, the Houston Astros' flame-thrower, recalled the early days of the 1982 season, when he lost his first four decisions.

"I guess people would look at that in the paper, and know I'm 34, and they'd say, 'Hey, he's lost it,' " Ryan drawled with a grin. "But I haven't lost it . . . and I certainly don't anticipate losing it."

Ryan certainly hadn't lost anything Sunday when he struck out 10 and allowed only four hits in pitching the Astros over the Los Angeles Dodgers, 3-0, his 48th career shutout and the major league-record 140th time he's fanned 10 or more in a game.

"I've thrown harder, but for consistency with all my pitches and maintaining command, this was probably my best game this year," said Ryan, 8-8.

It marked Ryan's first-ever win in Dodger Stadium after losing his first six decisions.

"I've pitched some good games here," he said. "Once when I was with the Mets, Drysdale beat me, 1-0, here. I just hadn't won."

Houston Manager Bill Virdon said Ryan "has been throwing well lately."

"He's throwing strikes, that's the main thing," he added.

Ryan actually was a question mark starter after suffering a cut on his pitching hand the night before. But he struck out the first two Dodgers and was on his way. He struck out the side in the fourth inning, but also gave up two of the four hits he allowed. After striking out Ron Roenicke, Ryan gave up two singles, then balked to put runners at second and third. Then he fanned Jorge Orta and Steve Garvey.

The shutout was the second pitched against the Dodgers, and the first they've suffered at home. It ended a 3-4 homestand which had followed a 10-3 road trip, enabling them to return home only 5 1-2 games out of first place.

"I expected us to do much more on the homestand," said a disappointed Dodger manager Tom Lasorda.

"Now we're going back out on the road again and it's a very important trip. We need to win. We can't get any further behind. We've got to get back into business.

Jerry Reuss, 9-6, who had won four straight decisions, took the loss Sunday.

Rangers rout Oakland, 11-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Texas Ranger right fielder Larry Parrish has served notice he's out of his slump.

After spending two weeks on the bench last month because of poor batting, Parrish hit a pair of home runs Sunday night to lead the Rangers to an 11-4 victory over the Oakland A's.

He exploded with a club record seven RBIs on a three-run homer and his second career grand slam.

Parrish was taken out of the lineup on June 20 by manager Don Zimmer after striking out three times against the Minnesota Twins.

What followed was two weeks on the bench.

"I didn't want to get too down on myself," Parrish said. "I just went about my business and did my work — the running and extra batting practice. I've had good years before and I figured I'd get in a groove sooner or later."

Pirates split with Montreal

By KEN RAPPOPORT

It wasn't a good day for pitchers at Three Rivers Stadium.

"You had to keep your helmet on," deadpanned Pittsburgh relief pitcher Kent Tekulve after a fireworks display by the Pirates and Montreal Expos that included a total of 36 runs and 57 hits Sunday.

The Expos won the first game of the doubleheader 16-6 before the Pirates came back to win the nightcap 10-4.

"We just took a good country whipping (in the first game) — but we came back," said Pittsburgh's Mike Easler, who hit a two-run homer along with Jason Thompson in the second game.

The split gave the Pirates their fourth victory in five games with the Expos and 10th in their last 13 games. After a slow start, the Pirates have moved within 3½ games of the first-place Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East.

Warren Cromartie hit a home run, triple and double and drove in five runs to lead a 21-hit attack for the Expos in the opener. The Pirates had 15 hits themselves, including a home run by Dale Berra.

Easler had a double and a sacrifice fly along with his homer in the second game. The victory was a welcome birthday present for Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, who was born on the Fourth of July 53 years ago.

The Expos, meanwhile, have dropped nine of their last 12 games.

Montreal's Al Oliver suggested the Expos simply ran into a hot Pirate team, playing its best baseball of the season.

Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia beat New York twice, 9-7 and 7-2;

National League

Houston blanked Los Angeles 3-0; St. Louis stopped Chicago 7-2; San Diego edged San Francisco 4-3 and Atlanta turned back Cincinnati 4-1.

Phillies 9-7, Mets 7-2

Steve Carlton struck out 13 and George Vukovich and Mike Schmidt hit home runs as Philadelphia beat New York in the first game of their doubleheader.

Despite his high strikeout total, Carlton, 11-7, struggled throughout. He scattered 11 hits, walked three and survived a two-run flurry in the ninth when the Mets scored on RBI singles by George Foster and Joel Youngblood.

Ivan DeJesus drove in three runs with a triple and a single and Mike Krukow scattered nine hits as Philadelphia won the second game. It was the third doubleheader sweep for the Phillies over the Mets in nine days.

Astros 3, Dodgers 0

Nolan Ryan fired a four-hitter for his 48th career shutout as he pitched Houston over Los Angeles. The 35-year-old Ryan struck out 10, the fifth time this season he has struck out 10 or more in a game, to extend his major league record to 140 such performances.

The victory for Ryan, 8-8, was his first ever in Dodger Stadium. He had lost six previous decisions to the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

Jerry Reuss, 9-6, was the loser.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 2

Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece and Lonnie Smith scored four times as St. Louis beat Chicago and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Winner John Stuper, 3-1, scattered six hits before needing Bruce Sutter's last-out relief help in the ninth, when the Cubs scored on a bases-loaded walk to Larry Bowa. Sutter gained his 18th save.

The Cardinals turned the game around with a three-run burst in the fifth helped along by two Chicago errors.

Padres 4, Giants 3

Terry Kennedy's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth scored Dave Edwards with the winning run to lift San Diego over San Francisco.

The Padres were trailing 3-1 against Atlee Hammaker, 5-5, in the seventh inning whe-hander Dave Dravecky, 1-1, pitched the final 32-3 innings to earn his first major league victory.

Braves 4, Reds 1

Bob Horner hit two home runs and Bob Walk and Steve Bedrosian combined on a five-hitter as Atlanta defeated Cincinnati and extended the Braves' winning streak to five games.

Horner, who now has 16 homers for the season, cracked a two-run shot in the third inning and hit a solo blast in the fifth, giving him five homers in the last four games. With the second homer, Horner moved past Darrell Evans on the all-time Atlanta home run list with 121. Hank Aaron holds the club record with 335.

Walk, 7-6, allowed a first-inning run on two hits and blanked the Reds until he was replaced by Bedrosian with two on and two outs in the eighth inning. Bedrosian retired the final four batters for his fourth save.

Red Sox regain one game lead

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Baseball lore dictates that the teams in first place on July 4 will win the pennant. Maybe so, but two of the three holiday leaders in the American League are no longer there on July 5.

In the AL East, Boston and Milwaukee were tied for first after a record-tying two-week barrage of home run fireworks by the Brewers — 35 in 15 games — but the Brewers were tamed Sunday by Dennis Eckersley, who fired a six-hitter as the Red Sox rolled to a 4-1 victory and regained a one-game lead over Milwaukee.

"This gives us some confidence because those guys had been hammering us," said Boston catcher Gary Allenson. "Now we're in first place ourselves. If they had swept us here, it might have meant a psychological edge for them."

Kansas City did sweep in the AL West. With Amos Otis hitting two solo homers and Bud Black and Mike Armstrong holding California to two hits, the Royals handed the Angels their fifth consecutive setback 6-1 and nosed past them to the top by one-half game.

In other AL games, the Seattle Mariners turned back the Chicago White Sox 3-1, the Detroit Tigers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 6-1, the New York Yankees edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2, the Texas Rangers routed the Oakland A's 11-4 and the Minnesota Twins nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3.

While Eckersley was silencing Milwaukee for his third consecutive triumph, Tony Perez rapped a pair of RBI singles. The Red Sox, who broke a four-game losing streak, gave Eckersley all the support he needed with a pair of runs in the third inning on two-out singles by Jerry Remy, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Perez off

American League

Mike Caldwell. Perez also singled a run across in the seventh.

Royals 6, Angels 1

The Angels arrived in Kansas City with a 2½-game lead, but were outscored 19-5 in the three games and have dropped five in a row. Otis was the Royals' big gun, going 4-for-4 with two singles to accompany his homers.

Otis opened the scoring with an inside-the-park home run leading off the second. Center fielder Bobby Clark seemed too have trouble finding the drive in the bright, cloudless sky. Clark banged into the wall as the ball fell and Otis easily circled the bases. John Wathan added a two-run single off loser Geoff Zahn in the third, Willie Wilson singled two runs across in the fifth and Otis hit his second home run in the sixth.

Mariners 3, Chisox 1

Dave Henderson singled home two runs in the first inning and Gary Gray doubled home another in the eighth. Floyd Bannister allowed six hits but left after six innings when he jammed his pitching hand diving for a ball. The White Sox scored in the fifth on singles by Bill Almon, Ron LeFlore, and Tom Paciorek. Larry Andersen pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh and Bill Caudill retired the last three batters, striking out three, to record his 15th save.

Tigers 6, Orioles 1

Lance Parrish and Mike Ivie homered to back the three-hit pitching of Dan Petry and lead Detroit to only its fourth triumph in the last 20 games. Detroit tied the score in the fifth when Ivie hit his 10th homer. An inning later, Whitaker and Lynn Jones singled and Parrish homered off Mike Flanagan for a 4-1 lead. Tom Brookens singled home two more runs in the seventh.

Yanks 3, Indians 2

The Yankees trailed 2-1 and had managed only one clean single and two scratch hits off John Denny when Oscar Gamble drew a leadoff walk in the eighth. Dave Winfield's double and a walk to John Mayberry loaded the bases and Graig Nettles singled off Denny's pitching hand to tie the score. One out later, Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly scored pinch runner Dave Collins, giving New York its fourth straight triumph.

Rangers 11, A's 4

Larry Parrish, who had only eight runs batted in all season, drove in a club record seven runs with a three-run homer and a grand slam as the Rangers routed the A's.

Parrish drove his three-run homer off Matt Keough, 7-11, in the third inning to give the Rangers a 5-3 lo, Parrish cleared the bases for only the second time in his career with a long drive into the left-field bleachers.

Twins 4, Jays 3

Gary Gaetti led off the bottom of the ninth with his 10th home run of the season, only the fifth Minnesota hit but pinning the loss on Toronto starter Dave Stieb. Gary Ward hit a two-run homer for the Twins in the second inning, while Lloyd Moseby and Buck Martinez homered for Toronto. Moseby's homer was his sixth of the season and third in as many games.

Navratilova now reigns No. 1

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova can finally lay claim to being No.1 without adding any qualifications.

The powerful left-hander is No.1 on the Women's Tennis Association computer, she has won 54 of 55 matches this year, she is far and away the biggest money winner on the women's tour this year. Still, there was the spectre of Chris Evert Lloyd.

Navratilova erased that obstacle Saturday by capturing the women's singles title at the All-England Tennis Championships, defeating Lloyd 6-1, 3-6, 6-2 in a match that tested all the strokes in Martina's arsenal.

"She played well under pressure," Lloyd said her conqueror. "I thought she might crack there for a while. But she had to win the match. I didn't give it to her."

It was Navratilova's 19 consecutive final and her 14th victory. It was those losses that made observers wonder.

She crushed Tracy Austin in the opening set of the U.S. Open finals last year, only to lose in three sets. She lost to Austin again in Stuttgart, West Germany, and to her for a third time in the Toyota Championships in East Rutherford, N.J. Lloyd then beat her during the women's Australian tour.

But the Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova, who became a U.S. citzien last year, beat Lloyd in the Australian Open and ran roughshod though the Avon winter tour until the championships in March, which she lost to Sylvia Hanika of West Germany.

Since then, she's been unbeatable.

Andrea Jaeger was her victim at both the Family Circle Cup and the French Open. But there was still Lloyd, the reigning queen of women's tennis who picks her spots to play and usually wins.

"Martina kind of choked that match," Chris said of last year's U.S. Open finals. "When she's been in a tough situation in the past, Tracy or I have come out better. But she won this match."

"I was expected to win here," Martina said. "I was the favorite. But it's always hard to win in that position."

By capturing both the singles and doubles at Wimbledon, Martina increased her 1982 earnings by $578,268.75. That includes $65,625 for taking the singles title, $12,643.75 for teaming up with Pam Shriver to win the doubles and a $500,000 bonus from the Playtex company for sweeping the first three events in the four-event Playtex Challenge.

She will receive another $500,000 bonus if she wins the final leg of the Playtex Challenge, the U.S. Open, in September.

"I didn't ralize that until two minutes after the final," she said of the huge bonus. "But I would rather give up the half-million and win Wimbledon. I'd give Chris the money if it meant winning here."

Romeo leads lady pro bowlers

HOUSTON (AP) — Robin Romeo held on to her lead in the Ladies Pro Bowlers Tour Columbia 300 Classic here after four rounds of play, but saw one of her records fall.

Romeo, 25, lost her first match to challenger Nikki Gianulias, but won the next seven to build a 205-pin lead at Big Texan Lanes here Sunday night.

She had built six consecutive three-game series of 700 or higher in tour play, including four in one day on Saturday, but failed to keep up the string Sunday.

The Beverly Hills, Calif., resident had a total of 6,206 pins — including bonus pins — after 26 games. Gianulias, the leading money winner on the women's pro tour, was at 6,001.

The Vallejo, Calif., resident had closed to within three p. s of Romeo after the first match game.

In third place was Cindy Coburn of Buffalo, N.Y., at 5,928, followed by Cheryl Daniels of Detroit at 5,766 and Vicki Fischel of Westminster, Colo., at 5,694.

Another record ended when Pat Costello of Fremont, Calif., finished in a tie for 40th, ending her streak of 48 consecutive times of qualifying for the final 24.

The $25,000 tournament ends tonight, when the winner will claim $5,000.

World Cup Soccer match scheduled

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Poland and France are in the semifinals of the World Cup soccer championships. West Germany, England, Brazil and Italy were hoping to join them.

Poland, much to the delight of the crowd in Barcelona, tied 0-0 with the Soviet Union Sunday, clinching a semifinal spot for the second time in three World Cups.

The result left Poland atop Group A for the second round, and the Soviets were eliminated from the world's most prestigious soccer tournament.

France reached the semifinals with a far more impressive performance — a slick 4-1 win over outclassed Northern Ireland. Alain Giresse, the smallest player in the game, and Dominique Rocheteau, both scored twice for the French, who reached the semis for the second time and the first since 1958.

They did so in style.

The result ended Irish hopes of reaching the semis for the first time, but the unseeded squad was far from disgraced.

The French were hoping to play England in the Final Four. The English scored a 3-1 triumph over France in the first round and Hidalgo's squad is eager to reverse that result.

England's chances of advancing to play Thursday in Seville depended on whether it could beat host Spain decisively enough today.

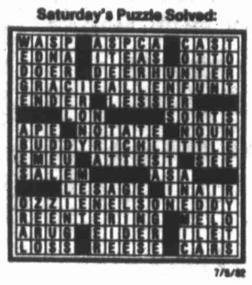

Ron Greenwood's team needed to defeat already-eliminated Spain by two goals — or by a one goal margin if it scored more than two — to advance.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JULY 6, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Quick action is needed to put in motion the decisions you've made the past several days. Unexpected conditions arise and you can easily display your talents at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Put those fine ideas to work quickly and gain the aims that mean much to you. Follow your hunches, which are good now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make long-range plans to add to present abundance. Being more cooperative with co-workers brings fine results now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to please associates with whom you've had some difficulty in the past and come to a better understanding.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study how to improve your social standing in your community and gain added prestige. Don't waste time foolishly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) The planetary aspects will give you an opportunity to accomplish a great deal today. Use modern methods at work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Money matters could be depressing early in the day but clear up later if you use good common sense. Be more confident.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find out what expectations of close ties are and try to please them more. Plan to spend more time at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your monetary affairs well and know how to improve them in the near future. Show that you have ability.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more concerned with personal problems instead of doing so much for others at this time. Avoid extravagance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Analyze every phase of a new plan you have and then you can make it operate most successfully. Be an optimist.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The planets make it possible for you to be your most gregarious self at this time. You can easily gain your aims.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make allowances for loved one who could be in a bad mood now. The evening can be a most happy one. Don't neglect bills.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will most articulate and should have the education directed along lines where this gift can be used to advantage, such as teaching. Your progeny will study varying philosophies of life and will profit by them.

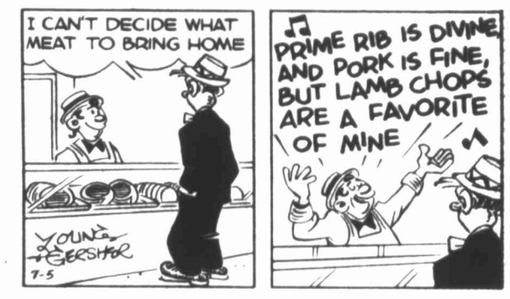

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Shoppers gloomy about future, survey indicates

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supermarket shoppers are more worried about rising unemployment than they are about rising prices, but they still say it is harder than ever to make ends meet and many are gloomy about the future, according to a recent industry survey.

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associates Inc., for the Food Marketing Institute, a trade association whose members account for about half of all grocery store sales. It was one of a series of annual studies commissioned by the institute beginning in 1974 to measure public attitudes about the economy and the grocery business.

Almost two-thirds of those questioned in the latest survey — 63 percent — said that if they had to choose between higher unemployment and rising prices, they would select joblessness as the more serious problem; 24 percent said inflation was more serious. In a similar survey last year, 50 percent said unemployment was more serious and 37 percent said rising prices were a more severe threat. (The remainder of the survey participants in both cases said they were not sure whether unemployment or inflation was worse.)

Sixty percent of the shoppers surveyed said they were finding it harder to make ends meet and 34 percent said there was no change in their personal financial situation. Only 6 percent said it was easier to make ends meet today.

The number of people who believe that prices are rising faster than they were a year ago declined from 1981 to 1982, but a substantial segment of the public still worries about the increases.

Forty-five percent of those questioned in the latest survey said prices were rising more rapidly today, compared to 72 percent of those polled a year ago. Twenty-nine percent of this year's respondents said, however, that prices were rising AS rapidly as they had been.

About their personal economic futures, 28 percent said they expected their financial situation to improve in the coming year. Almost as many — 25 percent — said they expected a worsening of personal finances; 43 percent predicted no change and 4 percent were not sure.

The latest survey was based on telephone interviews during January 1982 with a representative nationwide sample of 1,003 men and women shoppers. Among other findings:

—Utility costs and supermarket prices are the areas of greatest concern for shoppers. Fifty-seven percent of those questioned said they expect sharp increases in utility bills and 30 percent said they anticipated big boosts at the supermarket.

—When asked "Whom do you blame most for high food prices today — or don't you blame anyone," the biggest chunk of respondents — 44 percent — replied, "No one." Fourteen percent blamed the government, 10 percent singled out middlemen, 5 percent cited the economy in general and 4 percent said unions were responsible. The remaining survey participants were split among supermarkets, the public itself, farmers, the weather, oil companies, wholesalers, manufacturers and others.

Dignitaries remember Roosevelt

CAMPOBELLO ISLAND, New Brunswick (AP) — U.S. and Canadian dignitaries, marking the centennial of Franklin D. Roosevelt's birth, visited the wartime president's summer home and praised him as "the "dominant political figure" of the 20th century.

Two flag-decorated warships floated off Roosevelt Campobello International Park as visitors and family members gathered on the back porch of the Roosevelt cottage Sunday to honor Roosevelt.

"That Franklin D. Roosevelt was the dominant political figure of this century — that he stood astride its first half like the Colossus itself — will not be in doubt," said economist John Kenneth Galbraith.

Former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, the chairman of the park commission, opened the ceremony, which drew more than 400 visitors. The observance was scheduled for the summer, rather than Roosevelt's birth date of Jan. 30. "We thought the Fourth of July would be an appropriate time to do it," park Superintendent Harry Stevens said.

"FDR would have loved this back porch crowd. — especially in an election year," Muskie said. "FDR spent most of his first 40 summers here. He will soon be consigned to history where no one remembers him as a human being. But this place shows him alive."

The cottage, overlooking Maine from Passamaquoddy Bay, was a wedding present from their family to Roosevelt and his wife, Eleanor. It was here that Roosevelt was stricken with polio in 1921, at age 39.

Roosevelt's son, Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., led visitors on an impromptu tour of the cottage and grounds which contains mementos from Roosevelt's childhood and his years as president.

A Canadian destroyer and a U.S. guided missile frigate were anchored off the island and open to tours by the public.

A special cancellation of the FDR commemorative stamp was presented by U.S. postal officials. The stamp, issued last Jan. 30 at Hyde Park, N.Y., was the first special cancellation of a U.S. postage stamp on international property, said Stevens.

ALBINO WALLABY — The first albino wallaby believed born in captivity in the United States explores its surroundings at the Jackson, Miss., Zoo. "Snowflake," as he is called, was born about three months ago but only recently ventured outside the pouch of mother (background).

Clint Eastwood's 'Firefox' a classic summertime movie

Clint Eastwood is back.

At least, we think it's Clint Eastwood. It could be Mitchell Gant or any one of his numerous Russian aliases. Whoever Eastwood is supposed to be at different points in the movie "Firefox," he keeps his audience on the last thread of their cushioned seats as he tries to outwit Soviet intelligence in this summer superthriller from Warner Bros.

Eastwood has made a legend of himself, first from his roles as the West's toughest hombre in such films of "High Plains Drifter." Then came "Dirty Harry" and its sequal other tough cop movies. He even outwitted the cops in a reversal of roles, playing a smart con in "Escape from Alcatraz."

Now, after a change of stride in the "Every Which Way But" series, Eastwood's back in his natural habitat, the adventure movie. He produces and directs this story about an American pilot, our nation's best, sent on a "mission impossible" to Russia to steal the Firefox, that nation's best.

The movie has a traditional start as high military officials plan the whole thing out and then ask Major Gant if he would like to volunteer. Actually, they don't ask him, they tell him, and he has no choice in the matter at all. But Gant, intrigued with flying the sophisticated craft, goes along with the plan.

The Firefox is Russia's newest "toy." They send it out one day and it flies into the West and back without anyone knowing about it. It's radar-proof and only through their Soviet contacts do the NATO powers learn that it flew at all. They are horrified, to say the least.

The only option is to get it before the USSR can mass-produce its latest weapon. The man for the job — Major Grant.

Posing as an American businessman Gant gets into Russia and through his contacts and various aliases, his mission is to reach the Firefox's airfield, get into the craft and fly it out of the country. A piece of cake.

It spoils no endings by saying here that Gant does make it to the Firefox. The question left for the audience in the remaining hour or so of the movie is can Gant get out of the Soviet Union.

The movie mostly follows typical Eastwood fashion. However, there's no romance, with the only important female role coming as a scientist at the Firefox hangar. The movie is strict adventure with Major Gant having to do some clever talking, occasional roughing up of KGB officers and some good driving while he's in the sky battling every conceivable Russian attempt to abhort his mission.

There's a good humor in the right places. And Air Force friend of his back in the States is asked if Gant can pull the mission off. "General, I have no idea," he answers.

After he's been through a nightmare of checkpoints where he's questioned on his papers, a Russian contact advises him to "stay calm." Sweat is pouring down the poor major's face all this time.

Eastwood is dry in his humor. The same contact asks him if he can recally fly the Firefox. "Yeah, I can fly it," Gant drolls.

And just before he's about to steal the aircraft, he learns of new complications. "It can be done, can't it? I'm not walking back," Gant says.

It's a classic summertime movie, giving the audience a chance to gasp, cringe and cheer. The special effects supervised by John Drykstra are great as we see just what the Firefox can do. It's like Star Wars" coming to Earth.

Another good thing about the movie. It's Americans against the Ruskies. It's fun to watch the Russians cringe when they've been outwitted by the good guys.

The film contains some comment on the dedication of Russians against Communism. Gant is amazed on how his comrads are willing to die for him to succeed. He is told fighting for freedom is worth the cost. The comment is not overplayed as Eastwood sticks to the adventure aspect of the movie.

"Firefox" is playing this week at the Ritz Twin downtown. It's a movie for the whole family, with zero nudity and very little — if any — foul language.
