Council favors 'pay-as-you-go'

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

The City Council seems to be uniting behind a "pay-as-you-go" plan for capital improvements that calls for nhigher tax rates, no new bond issues and continued dips into the city reserve fund over the next three years.

"I think the public has told us they'd like us to 'pay as you go,'" said council member Bill Williams, referring to voter rejection last September of $13.1 million in city bonds for street, drainage and park improvements.

The new plan, developed by Williams and City Manager Fred Poe and presented during a Tuesday council work session, calls for tax rate increases in 1990 and 1991. Rate hikes each year would provide 7.99 percent more in revenues than the previous year, under the plan.

However, money generated by higher tax rates would not be applied to capital improvement projects such as street and drainage work.

Money for those projects would come from the city's reserve fund, which currently stands at $12.1 million, but would fall to $7 million by the end of the third year of the plan.

The council already has earmarked $1.3 million for capital improvements during the current fiscal year. In the juggle of city funding, that money comes from bond money already approved by voters and currently in hand.

In addition, a dip into the city's reserve fund already is planned for the current fiscal year to make up for a projected $1.8 million shortfall in operating revenues.

While the city over the succeeding two years also would pull from surplus to balance its operating budget, those amounts would become progressively smaller.

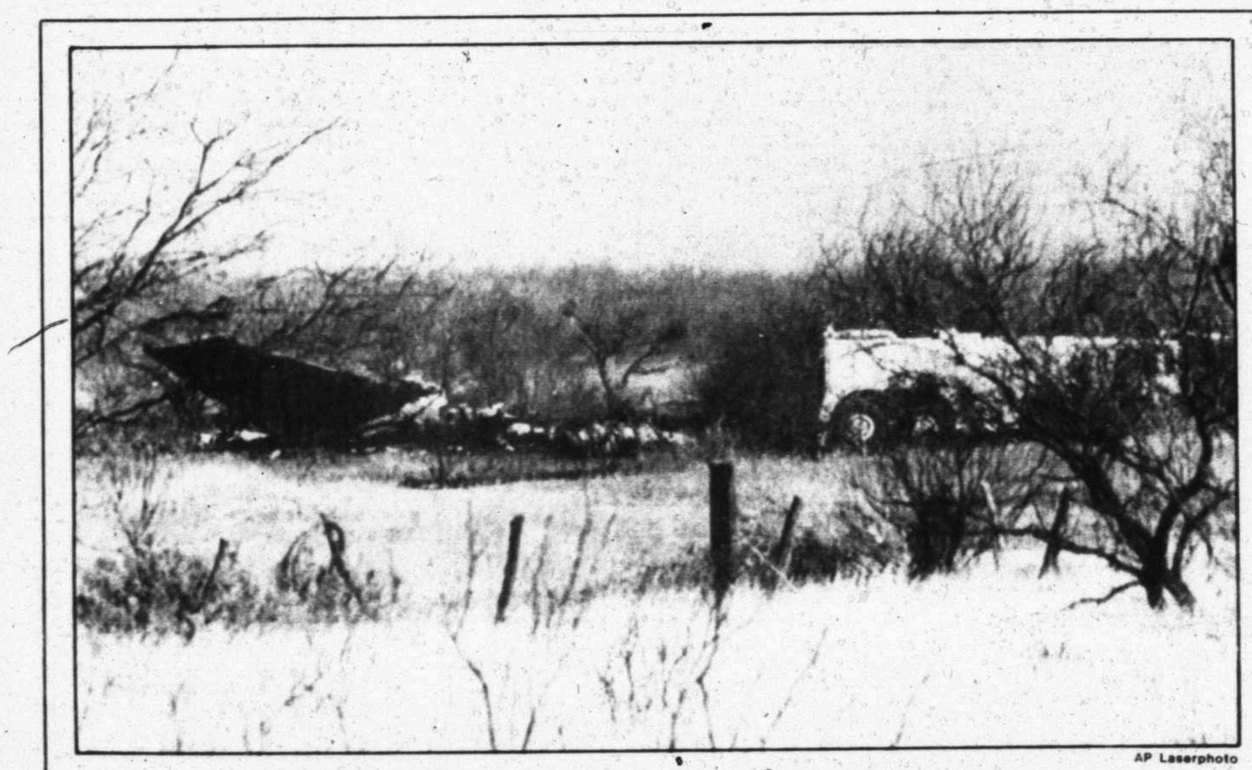

In 1990, the city would apply a little over $1 million from surplus to its operating budget, while in 1991, that amount would decrease to $600,000. Both years would see tax rate increases of 7.99 percent over the previous year, under the plan.

Meanwhile, during the same two years, the city would take an additional $1.75 million from surplus to fund those capital improvement projects deemed most needed.

After the end of the third year, the surplus balance would stand at $7 million, a figure about 23.5 percent of that year's projected operating revenue of $29.8 million.

Williams explained that his projections are based on very small increases in city expenses: 1 percent in 1990 and 2 percent in 1991.

Jet appeared to veer from homes before crashing near Abilene

ABILENE (AP) — A military refueling jet that crashed on takeoff, killing all 19 aboard, appeared to veer away from a cluster of houses before tipping onto the ground and exploding, witnesses said.

"It couldn't have been more than 50 or 60 feet off the ground," said Skeet Jackson, who witnessed Tuesday's crash of the Hawaii-bound KC-135A from his back yard. "That left wing hit the ground and (crashed) just like these pictures of atomic bombs you've seen."

Members of the Air Force's Accident Investigation Board were expected to arrive at Dyess today. However, their investigation could be hampered by the fact that no flight data recorder was aboard the modified Boeing 707, said 1st Lt. John Ames, deputy chief of public affairs at Dyess. Ames said he didn't know if a cockpit voice recorder was aboard.

Sawyer officials said the plane's maintence files were aboard before it crashed, which also could hurt the investigation. "Some were duplicated, but not all," said Capt. Paul Bicking, Sawyer's chief of public relations.

The tanker was scheduled to refuel F-16s in the air as part of a training mission before flying nonstop to Hawaii, Ames said. The flight was to go from Hawaii to Andersen Air Force Base in Guam for a Pacific training exercise, Sawyer officials said.

Ames said it was unclear how much fuel the plane was carrying, but added it was enough to complete the mission and make the eight-hour flight to Hawaii.

The flight manifest showed 17 passengers from K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base near Marquette, Mich., where the flight originated, and two from Dyess, said Master Sgt. Al Doster, another Dyess spokesman. Seven were crew members, four were active duty military members, four were retired military, and four were dependents, including one child, Ames said.

Names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Doster said it was not uncommon for dependents to fly "space available" aboard a military flight.

But Ames said, "If they can get there by commercial jet ... there are certain regulations that prohibit civilians from flying military aircraft. There are certain exceptions to that rule."

The plane crashed shortly after noon Tuesday near the end of the Dyess runway, near U.S. Highway 277 six miles southwest of Abilene. The wreckage was scattered over 2 square miles, Air Force officials said.

Officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said initial reports forwarded to Air Force commanders at the Pentagon and at the Strategic Air Command suggested the problem occurred during takeoff.

"It was toward the end of the roll, and he apparently had no choice but to press on," said one official in Washington.

Freezing Arctic front sweeps toward Texas

Associated Press

A strong Arctic cold front roared southward into Texas today, bringing with it the threat of an extended period of sub-freezing weather for northern and western portions of the state.

The arrival of Arctic weather was expected to send temperatures plunging to freezing or below by tonight, a sharp contrast to the summer-like weather the state has enjoyed for the past several days.

An upper level disturbance over Baja California was expected to begin moving towards Texas today, bringing with it the threat of freezing rain, sleet or snow into western portions of the state tonight and Thursday.

The front was previously not expected to reach Texas before the start of the weekend, but the front, bearing what has been described as some of the coldest weather of the century, began moving rapidly southward at 40 mph.

Forecasters said the front was expected to cross the Red River from Oklahoma about 9 a.m. today and was expected to move through the Dallas-Fort Worth area by noon.

In West Texas, the front was expected to move over the entire Panhandle by noon and spread into the South Plains by late afternoon. Forecasters said the front will not reach the El Paso area until Friday.

south than earlier forecast due to unusually high pressure rises to the north of the front, the National Weather Service said.

Temperatures in West Texas by early Thursday will be in the teens in the Panhandle and in the 20s in the Concho Valley.

Forecasters said very cold Arctic air will settle into North Texas 18 to 30 hours after frontal passage.

There is a slight chance of sleet or freezing rain in western portions of North Texas tonight and in central portions of North Texas Thursday.

Temperatures were expected to range from the mid 20s over northwestern portions of North Texas to the 40s over the southeastern portion of North Texas by early Thursday.

In West Texas, temperatures were expected to plunge from the 60s into the 20s by late afternoon and a north wind gusting to 35 mph was expected to drop the wind chill factor to zero by late today.

Forecasters said the Permian Basin and Concho Valley will have one more warm and very windy day before the arrival of the Arctic air.

Teens held for carrying gun

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Three Midland teen-agers were in custody this morning facing criminal charges for allegedly carrying a loaded gun on to the Midland Freshman High School campus, police said.

Midland Police Department spokesman Cpl. Jim White said the two boys and one girl — ages 14-15 — were arrested about 1:45 p.m. Tuesday on the school campus and were transferred to Culver Youth Home pending the outcome of a juvenile detention hearing.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said that hearing was tentatively set for 11 a.m. today in juvenile court where charges of unlawful possession of a weapon on school grounds — a third-degree felony — were expected to be filed against the trio.

Since the students are under 18 years of age, police and Midland Independent School District officials were refusing to release their names.

Ted Miller, MISD coordinator of communications, said the school district has recommended that the students be placed on "home-based instruction." He added that they also are subject to further disciplinary actions once the adjudication process is complete.

Knowledge of the gun-toting incident came about after MFHS Principal Ricardo Torres met with several students who had witnessed the suspects passing the weapon — a nine-shot, .22-caliber pistol — amongst themselves, Miller said.

After a counseling session with the students, Torres notified juvenile police officers who arrived on campus and confiscated the gun, he added.

White reported that there apparently were no threats made by the suspects against any of the school's faculty, students or administrators.

The incident is the second of its kind to have occurred on a Midland school campus in the past two weeks.

Two Crockett Elementary School sixth graders were suspended last week for allegedly bringing a loaded .25-caliber chrome-plated automatic pistol to that school campus Jan. 13.

One of the boys was charged with carrying a firearm on school property and reckless conduct and the other was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon.

As the result of that incident, MISD officials announced their intent to review the district's disciplinary procedures.

According to MISD Superintendent, the study will address punishments students face for misbehaving at school and on the bus.

A cross-section of principals, teachers and parents will review the plan this spring and suggest changes that may be needed.

Judge could hold ABC newscaster in contempt

Oliver L. North

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Iran-Contra trial of Oliver L. North said today he was considering a contempt-of-court citation against an ABC News correspondent who presented excerpts of North's immunized testimony to Congress on television Tuesday night.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell suggested the action "appears to be a deliberate effort to obstruct" the selection "of a jury in this case."

Gesell said that on the broadcast, ABC correspondent Tim O'Brien "took pains" to tell viewers that if they looked at his broadcast of excerpts of testimony North gave Congress in 1987 under immunity, they would not have to serve on the jury.

Gesell said he has "not made up my mind" as to whether the incident provides an "appropriate basis for a contempt action."

O'Brien was not in the courtroom as Gesell spoke.

"I really am quite puzzled by it," ABC's Washington bureau chief, George Watson, said of the judge's statement. "Tim O'Brien reported fairly and accurately what has been said in public, in public testimony by Col. North. And last night we and other news organizations reported that in explaining the case and how it came to trial."

"Our only deliberate effort is to accurately and fairly report on the trial of Col. North," Watson said.

Immediately after Gesell's comments, the judge disqualified a woman who was employed at a Sears, Roebuck store in Washington from being a potential juror in the North case because she worked in the basement where dozens of TV sets were turned on when North was testifying to Congress in July 1987.

The woman said she "heard something" about North shredding documents, but it was unclear from her answer whether she had actually seen those references as North testified or heard news accounts of it later.

Defense attorney Brendan Sullivan said he shops at that particular Sears store and that there are "hundreds of TVs" in the basement where the woman works.

Meanwhile, North's lawyers say any jury in the Iran-Contra case should be kept in isolation for the entire time the fired White House aide is on trial, which could be for five months.

A request to sequester the jury was made by Sullivan on Tuesday, the opening day of North's trial, as Gesell qualified seven people to be part of a pool of potential jurors.

Sullivan said that "in the event a jury can be empaneled, it should be sequestered immediately to minimize the potential for exposure to immunized testimony and to protect Lt. Col. North's constitutional rights."

■ As in Watergate trials, jurors hard to find — 3D

At a Jan. 9 hearing, prosecutor John Keker estimated it would take six to eight weeks to present evidence against North while Sullivan estimated it would take two to three months to present the defense's case.

North faces 12 felony counts including lying to Congress in 1985 and 1986 to cover up Reagan administration assistance to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a period in which Congress had banned U.S. aid to the insurgents.

North's lawyers have said that no jury can be empaneled that would provide him with a fair trial because the former National Security Council aide later testified about his activities in nationally televised hearings before Congress in 1987.

In that testimony, North detailed many of his activities, such as shredding documents and cashing travelers' checks intended for the Contras, for which he is now accused of crimes.

"There has been repeated, widespread dissemination of Lt. Col. North's immunized testimony for more than 18 months," said Sullivan.

Springlike days shoved back to winter

Associated Press

Record-cold arctic air trapped over Alaska finally broke loose and barreled into the lower 48 states, dropping a bitter winter into the laps of springlike northern cities in a matter of minutes.

Temperatures plunged by nearly 80 degrees in a day, with one town reporting a 23-degree drop in one minute. High winds preceding the cold front blew a toddler down a street in Lander, Wyo.

The polar air outburst, accompanied today by blizzards driven by winds over 100 mph, stunned residents throughout the northern Plains and Midwest, where ski slopes and ice festivals had been abandoned for golf courses and tennis courts.

The frigid air, no longer trapped by a warm-air jet stream that had strayed farther north than usual and left record-high temperatures in 64 cities Tuesday, promised frigid weekend weather for the East Coast and as far south as Arkansas, the National Weather Service said.

"We're going to make up for the party we've been enjoying," said meteorologist Rick Brumer in Chicago.

The party ended quickly on Tuesday, as arctic air rushed into the balmy northern Plains, including Nebraska, North Dakota and Wyoming, dropping temperatures to 10 to 20 below zero. High winds and blowing snow knocked out power in Washington state and parts of northwest Montana.

Valentine, Neb., reached a record high of 70 degrees and dropped to zero degrees within 10 hours. The mercury plunged 33 degrees in one hour after the cold front passed Valentine.

In a 24-hour period beginning Monday morning, temperatures fell 79 degrees at Great Falls, Mont., from 62 above to 17 below zero. The state braced for even colder weather today as the system continued southward.

"It's the coldest air mass in the last five years, since December of 1983," said Bruce Thoricht, a weather service meteorologist at Billings.

In the town of Cut Bank, about 100 miles north of Helena, a Federal Aviation Administration official said the temperature plunged 23 degrees in one minute, and 103 mph winds dropped the wind chill to 75 below zero.

"It was a drastic drop, really fast," said Glacier County Undersheriff Bill Barron.

In Lander, winds gusting up to 86 mph dragged a 2-year-old boy down the street, said his mother, Pamela Roberts, who chased after him. The toddler was not seriously hurt.

"He fell and the wind dragged him along on his face," said Roberts, 27. "I was trying to hold him and trying to open the door."

Blizzards hit northwest Minnesota, southeast North Dakota and southern Montana. Cut Bank had 5 inches of snow and Helena 4. Blowing, drifting snow dropped visibilities to almost zero in parts of Montana and Minnesota.

Snow also fell in Washington state, where Snohomish and Spokane got up to 5 inches.

Where snow didn't fall, high winds fanned a prairie fire in western Nebraska that consumed 8,000 acres of grassland and burned several farm buildings, but destroyed only one house.

The cold air had been trapped over Alaska by a dome of extremely high atmospheric pressure. The barometer at Northway, Alaska, rose to a North American record high of 31.74 inches of mercury, the weather service reported Tuesday.

Before the warm jet stream shifted south and freed the arctic air, high-temperature records were broken or tied in 64 cities from Colorado to Ohio and from northern Texas into southern Minnesota. Dodge City, Kan., soared to 80 degrees, surpassing the record of 76 set in 1911; Chicago climbed to 65, breaking its 1877 record of 56; Louisville, Ky., hit 67, also breaking a 112-year-old record; Detroit climbed to 60, breaking the mark of 54 degrees set in 1890; Grand Island, Neb., reached 72; and Fort Smith, Ark., hit 77.

"The upper air wind patterns are normally different than they would be this time of year," said Brian Smith of the National Weather Service Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"Normally we have the jet stream across the continental U.S. It's been further north. ... Weather systems couldn't move through."

Finally, he said today, "we've had a buckle in it."

Authorities reported no deaths or injuries directly attributable to the cold. However, on Tuesday the body of a man whose skiff was swamped by high seas and strong winds off the coast of southeast Alaska was found on a beach.

Michigan base awaits crash list

GWINN, Mich. (AP) — Personnel at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base waited solemnly for a fatality list after one of the base's planes crashed on takeoff at a Texas base. All 19 people aboard were killed.

Tuesday's fiery crash was the third such accident in four months involving the small northern Michigan base. Seven of the victims were crew members from Sawyer, 10 were passengers from Sawyer and two passengers were from Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene, Texas.

Passengers included four active-duty military personnel, four military retirees, and four dependents, including one child, said 1st Lt. John Ames, Dyess deputy chief of public affairs.

Names were withheld pending notification of families. At Sawyer, where nearly 1,900 families live, some base residents gathered late Tuesday at the chapel to await news of who was killed, said a Sawyer spokeswoman, Sgt. Anita Bailey.

"We're a very small, tight-knit community," Bailey said. "Part of the anxiety is knowing that these are the people you trained with, went to school with, and work with."

Reaction to the crash was mixed in Marquette near the Michigan air base. "It's another plane crash," George Smith said at an area coffee shop.

Others were shaken.

"With three of them (crashes), there's got to be a problem. It's a concern to the community," said Bernard Niemi, a retired Marquette construction worker who helped build the base.

"It's the shock, because I knew three people on there," said a Marquette man who declined to be named. He said two family friends, both retired military personnel, had boarded the plane with their 4-year-old nephew to Hawaii. "It's a terrible thing."

The mood at Sawyer was silent and tense, people there said.

"It's pretty quiet here. The mood is not good," Michelle Clark said from the Sawyer NCO Club, where she works. "They've got the news on in the back, and everyone is sitting back there, just watching and listening and not talking."

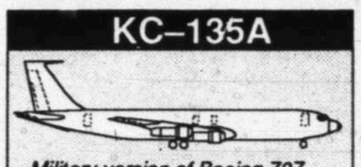

Air Force officials said the KC-135 Stratotanker crashed about noon as it took off for Hawaii's Hickam Air Force Base on what was described as a training mission.

"I think everyone's going to know somebody who was on that plane," said Clark, whose husband is stationed at Sawyer. "My husband wanted to go on that mission. Now I'm glad he wasn't picked."

Sawyer personnel have been involved in two other fiery crashes, including the explosive crash of another KC-135 trying to land at a sister installation, the Paul B. Wurtsmith Air Force Base near Oscoda, Mich., on Oct. 11.

Six Wurtsmith crew members died in that crash, but all 10 Sawyer personnel aboard were able to leap clear of the burning plane. The tanker had been ferrying Sawyer personnel to Wurtsmith so they could inspect the base's nuclear facilities.

Tanker jet usually reliable, officials say

DALLAS (AP) — Military officials say the Boeing KC-135A Stratotanker that crashed at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene has been an integral part of the Air Force's fleet for more than 30 years.

Aviation experts said Tuesday that, with modifications, the Stratotanker is expected to continue its military service beyond the year 2020.

As the military version of the Boeing 707, the first commercially successful jet airliner, the Stratotanker has earned a reputation as a workhorse that is generally considered safe to fly.

But aviation experts and former crew members said the plane is not without its faults.

"For 30 years, the KC-135 has been unquestionably underpowered, and it has been particularly vulnerable to engine failure during the takeoff roll, particularly while either extremely heavyweight or extremely lightweight," said Robert S. Hopkins III, an aviation writer and historian who is writing a book about the Stratotanker.

Documented cases have shown that Stratotankers "exceptionally full of fuel" have on takeoff "never become airborne or once they did, never had enough airspeed to fly and crashed with catastrophic results," said Hopkins.

Maj. Suzanne Randle told The Associated Press the Air Force considers the Stratotanker a reliable plane.

"We've been flying (KC-135) tankers since 1956," she said, adding the plane's accident rate is .78 per 100,000 flying hours.

The accident rate refers to Class A mishaps, in which damage exceeds $500,000, a fatality or permanent disability is sustained by a crew member or the craft is destroyed.

Older Stratotanker models, such as the one that crashed at Dyess on Tuesday, are powered by four Pratt & Whitney jet engines that use a water-injection system to increase thrust.

Ms. Randle said the fleet's average age is 29 years. There are 498 tankers in the USAF fleet, she said, with a total of 291 of the older "A" models in the Air Force inventory. Many Stratotankers have undergone upgrades.

Before Tuesday's crash, 72 KC-135s had been involved in Class A mishaps, said Capt. Harry Edwards of the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb.

Investigation won't be made public

ABILENE (AP) — There will be thorough investigations into the crash of a Boeing KC-135A Stratotanker that crashed at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, but the public will not be told the results of the investigations.

The results will be kept secret by the military unless there is a deviation from past crashes involving military planes.

Some information normally made public by the National Transportation Safety Board after the crash of a civilian aircraft will be kept secret by the military. The NTSB has no jurisdiction over military crashes.

Actually, military investigators will conduct two investigations, a safety investigation and a "collateral" investigation.

Military officials say they keep the results secret in order to identify possible safety risks by encouraging full disclosure to investigators. Witnesses are not required to take an oath and by their participation are, in many cases, shielded from disciplinary action. Autopsy reports are routinely withheld.

Memory of ill son led to 40 years of caring

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A father's memory of being worried sick about his injured son but too poor to pay the hospital bill inspired a newspaper column that has raised millions of dollars over the past 40 years to help care for needy youngsters.

The father — and the columnist — was Bill Gold of The Washington Post. He is now 76 and retired, missing one kidney and forbidden to smoke his beloved cigars after open-heart surgery. "God, I miss 'em," he says.

But Gold still likes to tell funny stories, and he still cherishes his favorite charity.

He and Bob Levey, who succeeded Gold in writing the daily column eight years ago, were hosts at a thank-you party Tuesday night for some of the thousands of readers who answered their appeals for donations to Children's Hospital over the years.

Among the guests was Bonnie Biermann of suburban Alexandria, Va., who spent five months in the hospital in 1964-65 as a 13-year-old undergoing extensive brain surgery.

Bonnie, who is confined to a wheelchair, recently mailed Levey a $7 check, "which I hope will help in a small way."

Also at the party was John Reed, 8, who will undergo his 15th operation at Children's next Monday for multiple birth defects. "We've spent our life savings on surgery," said his mother, Dianna Reed of Silver Spring, Md. "If we ever get him through this, we'll contribute freely."

Officials at Children's Hospital say the private, non-profit facility in northeast Washington provides $25 million in free medical care each year to children whose parents are too poor to pay the full costs of treatment.

Without $4.5 million in voluntary donations last year, officials said, the hospital would have shown a deficit.

Gold's column, "The District Line," a chronicle of hometown happenings that never make Page One, first appeared in the Post on Jan. 13, 1947. Not long afterward, a woman wrote to advertise some giveaway pets and enclosed a dollar "for your favorite charity."

Gold searched the city for a worthy cause. He said he was impressed by Children's Hospital, partly because it was chartered in 1860 — before the Civil War — to provide medical care for "indigent children of every race and creed."

Gold said he recalled an earlier time, when he was the hungry young news director of a Cincinnati radio station and rushed his 2-year-old son to the local children's hospital. It was so dilapidated it had been condemned by the fire marshal, he said.

Standing in the similar disrepair of Children's Hospital 40 years ago, Gold said, "it was very easy to remember when I didn't have two quarters to rub together and was afraid my kid had a fractured skull. It made me feel that this is where I belong."

The column has raised some $6 million for the hospital since then.

Although he's on "everybody's sucker list" and must turn down some charitable appeals, Gold said "it's very difficult to say I need this money more than Children's Hospital. Anyone who can't respond to the needs of sick children is a pretty sad character."

Hearst bureau to have new chief

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles J. Lewis, Washington bureau chief for The Associated Press, has been named to head the Hearst Newspapers bureau in the nation's capital, effective March 1, it was announced Tuesday.

As bureau chief, Lewis will head the Washington news staff which serves all Hearst newspapers, including the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Lewis, 48, has served in executive positions in Hartford, Conn.; Los Angeles and New York in a 14-year career with the AP.

He succeeds Robert E. Thompson as Hearst bureau chief in Washington. Thompson, who is retiring, will continue an affiliation as a columnist for the Hearst bureau.

The announcement was made jointly by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation, and Robert J. Danzig, vice president and general manager of the Hearst Newspapers.

CITY

Even with tax rate increases of 7.99 percent, future city councils may have to consider reductions in city services should expenses rise beyond those percentages, he said.

The 7.99 percent projected rise in tax rates is keyed to state law, which holds that voters may petition for a tax rollback election should rates rise 8 percent or above.

Williams noted that one of the plan's strengths is its flexibility, an important consideration given a probable change in council personnel after city elections in May.

City Manager Poe said he foresees "a better than 50-50 chance" that three new council members will be elected at that time. Three council members whose terms are up this year, Williams, Katie Heck and Gordon Marcum, have indicated the may not run again.

The new council "could say, 'To heck with this whole plan. Let's go for a bond issue,'" Poe said.

Both Ms. Heck and Marcum voiced their support for the plan by noting that their visits with constituents indicate continued uncertainty in the local economy, despite recent oil prices of $18 per barrel or more.

"They don't see a stabilization in our economy yet to justify going to the voters for a year or two-year (capital improvements) program," said Marcum.

According to Poe, the council for the past three years has pulled from surplus funds to help balance its operating budget.

The council members were confident that reducing the surplus even further — to a point nearly 25 percent of operating expenses — is a prudent use of those funds.

"It's rainy day money," said Ms. Heck, "but it's been raining for a long time."

Oil slick from ship threatens Antarctica

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An Argentine supply ship sank in heavy seas after running aground off Antarctica, and authorities in the region said oil from the ship had created a 10-mile slick that was killing wildlife.

No one was injured in the sinking late Tuesday of the 400-foot Bahia Paraiso, which began leaking diesel fuel after striking rocks Saturday, the government news agency Telam reported, citing a navy communique.

Peter Wilkniss, director of the Antarctic program of the U.S. National Science Foundation, said it wasn't known how many gallons of oil had spilled but that it could be an "incurable disaster."

The foundation has said the Antarctic could face ecological calamity if all 250,000 gallons aboard the ship spilled.

"The ship rolled over, is lying on its side almost fully below the water," Wilkniss told ABC's Good Morning America today.

"This is a very enclosed area. It's a bay ... bounded by a glacier and some islands and our (research) station. So if the oil goes into the area then it will have an effect on the shoreline, on the ice, on the animals, the organisms, on the sediments," he added.

The depth of the water was not immediately known.

Officials from the National Science Foundation, Greenpeace, and a U.S. research facility near the wreck said leaking fuel had killed krill, a shrimp-like crustacean that is the main food of the baleen whale and a vital part of the Antarctic food chain.

"The krill are dying; they are literally jumping out of the water," the New Zealand Press Association quoted Greenpeace spokesman Peter Bogart as saying. "Seabirds attracted by the krill are diving into the slick ... It's a real environmental disaster in no uncertain terms."

Bogart said the information was relayed by an officer at the U.S. Palmer Research Station, two miles from the wreck. A station spokesman, talking to The Associated Press by telephone on condition of anonymity, said leaking oil had caused a 10-mile slick.

More than 300 tourists and crew were evacuated from the ship after it ran aground about 600 miles south of Cape Horn. Salvage efforts were hampered by 50 mph winds.

The ship was carrying supplies including jet fuel, gasoline and canisters of compressed gases to the Argentine Esperanza station near the tip of the peninsula, the National Science Foundation said in a statement released in Washington.

The tourists on board were to visit the research station, Wilkniss said.

"It is an extremely dangerous passage to negotiate. There are many islands, there are icebergs at times, there are many shoals and rocks on the water," Wilkniss said.

Smiling Soviet soldiers head for home

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soviet soldiers smiled and waved as their convoy left Kabul for home today on the strategic Salang Highway, an Afghan government spokesman said. Heavy shelling could be heard just up the road.

At dawn, the convoy moved through a checkpoint about two miles from the capital, en route to the Soviet border 250 miles away, said an interior ministry spokesman who identified himself only as Hamad.

The spokesman said the convoy, mostly made up of trucks carrying up to 50 soldiers each, took 50 minutes to pass through the checkpoint.

"They were happy to be leaving. They were smiling and waving," he said.

Hamad said artillery fire heard about six miles up the road came from guerrillas hiding in the mountains that surround the highway, the only land route home for Red Army troops in Kabul.

Afghan soldiers refused to allow any non-military vehicles up the road, citing the possibility of heavy shelling. But crowded buses traveled south down the highway, with people riding on top dressed in ragged shawls and turbans that flapped in the winter wind.

Hamad declined to say when the next convoy would move out, but said convoys have been leaving every other day in recent weeks.

Tuesday, Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, commander of the Red Army forces in Afghanistan, would not say how many Soviet troops remained in the country or when the withdrawal would be completed.

Gromov also denied U.S. allegations that the Soviets were conducting a "scorched earth" policy as their last units leave Afghanistan in advance of a Feb. 15 deadline.

In neighboring Pakistan's capital of Islamabad, Western diplomats said all Soviet forces were expected to be out of Kabul by Feb. 6, nine days before the deadline set by a U.N.-mediated withdrawal agreement.

Spokesmen in Islamabad for the guerrillas, who began fighting after a communist coup 11 years ago, said four long-range Soviet missiles killed 70 people this week in villages near the Salang Highway.

According to the Western diplomats, the increase in attacks by Soviet and government forces appeared aimed at pressuring the insurgents toward a political settlement. The guerrillas have refused offers of such a settlement from both the Kremlin and its client government in Kabul.

Six Ilyushin 76 transport planes dropped flares to deflect missiles as they landed at midday Tuesday. Each was followed by a camouflaged military helicopter dropping flares.

Guerrillas supported by the United States and Pakistan control the hills and mountains around Kabul and often fire heat-seaking missiles at aircraft near the airport.

They also have attacked supply convoys bound for Kabul on the Salang, causing severe food and fuel shortages that made the Soviet airlift necessary.

Soviet and Western diplomats estimate the number of Soviet soldiers still in Afghanistan at 15,000-20,000. Red Army soldiers arrived in Afghanistan in December 1979 and an estimated 115,000 were in the country when the pullout began May 15.

Some military advisers will remain in Afghanistan in keeping with a Soviet-Afghan agreement, Gromov said. The United States contends such a presence would violate the Geneva agreements of April 14, under which the withdrawal is being conducted.

"I want to underline the Soviet Union will fulfill its commitments under the Geneva agreements," Gromov said, adding, "We don't intend to bomb the territory of Afghanistan from Soviet territory after the withdrawal of Soviet soldiers."

Heavy fighting has occurred between Soviet and Afghan troops and the guerrillas of Ahmed Shah Masoud along the Salang Highway.

Masoud, one of the best insurgent field commanders, controls the Panjshir Valley through which the highway runs.

In Moscow, Col.-Gen. Bronislav Omelichev, first deputy Soviet chief of staff, said Tuesday: "Our troops deliver strikes or engage in combat operations just to secure the safety of the withdrawal of our troops to the territory of the Soviet Union."

Gromov said the Afghan government had negotiated with Masoud to make the Salang Highway safe, but he rejected the offer and began attacking Afghan army outposts Jan. 23.

Israeli minister backs talks with Palestinian leaders

Hearst News Service

JERUSALEM — In a move that sets himself apart from the rest of the Israeli government, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin has now suggested talks could be held with Palestinian leaders without insisting that the "intifadeh," or uprising, end first.

Rabin, under criticism for his tactics aimed at putting down the 14-month-long uprising in the occupied territories, made the suggestion days after he released a senior PLO operative from jail. Rabin now believes that military measures are not sufficient to stop the conflict.

"The time has come for Israel to declare to whom it is willing to talk and what it is willing to talk about," Rabin said this week. "We cannot restrict ourselves to a policy of merely confronting the violence in the territories with force."

Rabin's initiative, aides say, also reflect a conviction conviction that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir is unable or unwilling to offer a meaningful proposal of his own.

"(Rabin) is sitting on a fire," said Yaron Ezrachi, a political theorist at Jerusalem's Hebrew University. "As long as the uprising continues, it remains a symbol of his failure as defense minister. Shamir and the others can look at the fire and wait. Meanwhile, Rabin is getting his bottom burned."

Under Rabin's plan, elections would be held in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip after three months of calm there.

The elections would be followed by an undefined period of Palestinian autonomy, during which Israel will be responsible for security and for existing Jewish settlements. Palestinian residents would then be able to choose between confederation with Jordan, Israel or both, and their elected representatives would work out the details in joint negotiations with Jerusalem and Amman.

"I'm willing to talk to an elected authority, in essence a political body, which would enjoy equal status with Israel and with Jordan for the purpose of negotiating the political solution," Rabin said.

Critics have been quick to point out the flaws in Rabin's proposals.

Communications Minister Gad Yaacobi, a member of Rabin's Labor Party, said conditioning elections on three months of calm gives effective veto power to Palestinian radicals who are opposed to any political solutions.

Palestinian leaders say Rabin is attempting to create a local leadership that bypasses the leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization outside the territories — a notion that has been flatly rejected by PLO loyalists here. PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat called Rabin's plan "unworthy of comment."

Defense Ministry sources say Rabin is not discouraged by the public reactions to his plan. In private conversations with several leaders, Rabin stated he is fully aware of the support the PLO enjoys in the territories and is willing to allow local leaders to seek advice from the PLO abroad.

Shamir may withdraw troops from territories

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today offered to withdraw Israeli troops from some cities in the occupied territories if Palestinians accept autonomy as a step toward solving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

It was Shamir's most conciliatory statement yet on Israel's future role in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"At a certain stage, when there is autonomy, the army will leave several urban centers and be focused in some other areas," he told a group of visiting American rabbis.

Shamir pointed out that autonomy is called for in the U.S.-brokered Camp David accords, which he supports.

The 1978 accords call for electing local Palestinian representatives to hold peace talks with Israel, along with representatives of Egypt and Jordan.

There would then be a five-year period of autonomy, followed by further negotiations on the final status of the territories.

The PLO and many Palestinians in the territories occupied in the 1967 Middle East war reject the Camp David accords and the concept of autonomy, maintaining these ideas are intended to circumvent the PLO and contradict Palestinian demands for an independent state.

Shamir said the most crucial step in the peace process is to begin negotiations. "Once we get to this stage, positive results will come," he said.

But he reiterated that Israel will not speak to the Palestine Liberation Organization and will not accept an independent Palestinian state.

Shamir outlined his views as paralleling the Camp David accords, which led to Israel's peace treaty with Egypt.

"The peace process will be comprised of two stages," he said. "First an interim condition and this will include full autonomy. In the second stage (there will be) direct negotiations without preconditions between Israel, Palestinian Arabs and Arab countries."

Shamir's government has been under increasing pressure to pursue a peace initiative because of international criticism of its strong policies in putting down the 13-month uprising in the occupied territories and PLO chief Yasser Arafat's latest diplomatic initiative.

At least 370 Palestinians have been killed, most by Israeli army gunfire, since Palestinians began their rebellion against Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arafat made a series of statements last fall saying the PLO accepted Israel's right to exist and renounced terrorism.

Exiled Nicaraguan Indian hijacks plane to Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A Nicaraguan Indian exiled in Colombia hijacked a domestic airliner with 122 aboard to Costa Rica Tuesday by threatening to set a passenger afire with gasoline, officials said.

A passenger said the copilot overpowered the hijacker, who was carrying two orange juice cartons of gasoline with wicks, just before the plane landed.

An anti-terrorist squad arrested the hijacker, and three other people were detained after the Ace airline Boeing 727 touched down at an airport near the capital, said Interior Minister Carlos Disanti, who declined further comment.

The Red Cross treated some passengers for shock, officials said, but no other injuries were reported.

Public Security Minister Hernan Garron said the hijacker was identified as Alvin Antonio Siu, a Miskito Indian living on San Andres Island.

A Public Security Ministry statement said Siu would be turned over to Costa Rican judicial authorities and formally charged with hijacking the plane, which officials in Colombia said had 116 passengers and a crew of six.

The hijacker commandeered the flight about 11 a.m. EST, 10 minutes after it took off from the island on a flight to Medellin, Colombia's second largest city. It landed in Costa Rica about noon.

"The hijacker during the flight told the pilot, Jaime Perez, he would burn a passenger alive if he did not divert the flight to Costa Rica," said Costa Rican air traffic controller Carlos Paniagua.

Humberto Campos, who was sitting toward the front of the plane, said passengers noted something was wrong when a man carrying orange juice cartons spoke nervously with a flight attendant.

"Then he spoke with the captain and told him to divert the plane to any Central American country, Jamaica or Miami, but the captain convinced him to land somewhere close because of lack of fuel," he said. He said the cabin door was open and passengers could hear the conversation.

When the man, clad in jeans and a blue shirt, looked out one of the cabin windows shortly before landing, the copilot overpowered him and took the cartons away, he said.

"We can say that at no time were there negotiations ... since our position was drastic and strong," he said at a news conference at Juan Santamaria airport, 8 miles north of San Jose.

Garron called the solution of the case "one of the fastest in the history of this type of actions, since we managed to resolve it in 45 minutes."

Radio Reloj, a Costa Rican radio station, said it received an anonymous telephone call saying the hijacker was seeking the freedom of an American and several Colombians under arrest in Costa Rica on drug charges.

The anti-terrorist unit and trained dogs searched the plane and baggage for explosives. Airport traffic controller Carlos Paniagua said the plane left for Medellin at 4:35 p.m.

Filipino troops kill at least 32 Moslem rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops killed at least 32 Moslem rebels in their biggest battle with the insurgents since 1986, the army said today. The guerrillas had attacked a remote village in the southern Philippines.

Field reports radioed to army's headquarters in Manila said at least 11 other people — eight civilians, two militiamen and a soldier — were killed in Tuesday's fighting.

The casualties brought to at least 62 the number of people killed in fighting in Mindanao island's Zamboanga Peninsula since Saturday.

Military officials said 18 communist New People's Army guerrillas and one soldier were killed in six battles Saturday and Sunday in Zamboanga del Sur and Zamboanga del Norte provinces.

The area has a mixed Moslem and Christian population and is roamed not only by rebels but also by bands of outlaws.

Col. Antonio Nale, a brigade commander who led the government troops, said the daylong battle began after about 300 rebels attacked the village of Kulasian in Zamboanga del Sur, 510 miles southeast of the capital, burning three houses.

Nale said the rebels, members of the Moro National Liberation Front and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, were avenging the deaths of friends. He did not elaborate.

The two rebel groups have been fighting for Moslem rule on Mindanao and other southern islands since 1972, but the fighting was reduced to occasional skirmishes during much of the 1980s. Rebel leaders signed a cease-fire with President Corazon Aquino in 1986.

Officials say more than 50,000 people were killed at the height of the fighting in the mid-1970s.

In his report, Nale said that shortly after hearing of the attack, military officials sent gunboats to the coastal village to prevent a sea escape by the rebels. Eight hours after the initial rebel attack, Nale reported he was aboard a helicopter gunship which strafed rebel positions and inflicted "heavy casualties."

On the ground, a company of soldiers encountered 35 rebels and killed one guerrilla in a brief firefight.

Far-right party's win reveals Berliners' anti-Turkish feelings

By TERRENCE PETTY

BERLIN (AP) — Turks and Germans nod politely to each other on the streets of West Berlin's predominantly Turkish neighborhood, but a current of mistrust sometimes runs beneath the outer friendliness.

That uneasiness seems to have intensified now that a far-right party which suggests foreigners do not belong in West Germany has won seats in the city's Legislature — its first electoral victory on the state level.

Turks and other non-Germans living in this city are worried by the Republicans' sudden emergence as a serious political party.

"The Republicans did not win so many seats in the Legislature, but we are very concerned they could become stronger in the future," said Zafer Oeztuerk, a university student from Turkey.

West Berlin has a reputation for a liberal attitude toward the non-Germans who stream into the city, and many Berliners took to the streets to express dismay after the Republicans captured 7.5 percent of Sunday's vote, or 11 of the Legislature's 134 seats.

An estimated 15,000 people protested outside City Hall on Monday, demanding the outlawing of the 5-year-old party, whose national chairman is former Nazi SS soldier Franz Schoenhuber.

Many conservative West Berliners, however, say they have nothing against foreigners but believe it unfair to give non-Germans jobs and apartments when the city has a housing shortage and 11 percent unemployment.

Analysts think the Republicans were able to pick up so many votes because the governing Christian Democrats have failed to address their conservative constituents' concerns about the growing number of foreigners — mostly Turks — who are competing with Germans for jobs, housing and social services.

"It appears that the vote for the Republicans was more of a protest vote," Richard Stoess, a political scientist at West Berlin's Free University told the Berlin Morgenpost newspaper.

An estimated 262,000 foreigners live in West Berlin, a city of 2 million residents surrounded by East Germany. More than half are Turks.

Many of the Turks live in Southeast 36, a section of the huge working-class Kreuzberg district that a visitor might mistake for Istanbul if not for the German cars and tavern signs advertising local beers.

Women draped in traditional shawls ply the sidewalk outside drab shops and ethnic food stores, bantering with clerks and customers in Turkish.

Turks who live in West Berlin say they were shocked when they heard the Republicans had won seats in the Legislature, and angrily defend their right to live in the city.

"We couldn't believe this happened," said Tuncay Yueksel, who runs a Turkish bakery. "I am a German, and so are my wife and children. We belong here," he said in fluent German.

Yueksel said Germans and Turks live alongside each other in Southeast 36 and get along well, a feeling echoed by a German man at a neighborhood cafe.

But a middle-aged German grocer said "there are too many foreigners"

She said she had voted for the Republicans.

"This neighborhood was once all German, but they started moving out when Turks started moving in. We've become foreigners here, in our own neighborhood," she said.

"Look, I am certainly not a Nazi, and the Republicans are not Nazis either. I was only a child when Hitler was in power, but I know those were bad times," said the woman.

"But the Republicans were saying the right things. It's not right when foreigners collect social assistance that we provide with our taxes."

The woman refused to give her name, saying, "That could be bad for my business."

The election has unified West Berlin's non-Germans.

"I think it's really odd that so many conservative Germans travel to Turkey for their vacations, get their suntans and then return home saying the Turks have to go," said Abdel Nasser Assal, a young Egyptian taxi driver.

He also rejected suggestions that foreigners are stealing jobs from Germans:

"The foreigners who come here have to take jobs the Germans don't want," said Assal. "It's rare that you find Germans lining up for work as maids, dishwashers and domestic servants. Those jobs are left to the foreigners."

Press group urges probe of Peruvian reporter's killing

LONDON (AP) — The International Press Institute is urging the Peruvian government to investigate the murder of a journalist and do more to safeguard other threatened members of the press.

The respected London-based organization, in a message to President Alan Garcia Perez Tuesday, called violence against journalists a "gross violation" of their right to work.

The institute's director, Peter Galliner, wrote that the institute is "extremely concerned" at the lack of any investigation into the murder of Hugo Bustios, 34, a local correspondent for the Lima news magazine Caretas.

Bustios and another journalist, 27-year-old Eduardo Rojas, were shot by gunmen in November while traveling by motorcycle on the outskirts of the Peruvian city of Huanta. Rojas was seriously wounded.

"Furthermore, we deplore the recent increase in violence against journalists in general," the message says.

"Whilst we are aware of the current complex situation in Peru, we would remind you that such attacks are a gross violation of the right of journalists to gather information and the right of people everywhere to receive information," it says.

"We strongly urge an immediate and rigorous enquiry into the murder of the Caretas' correspondent and that your government acts at once to ensure that journalists may pursue their work without interference or fear of their physical safety," it says.

Peruvian officials said they had not determined whether Bustios' murder was carried out by the Shining Path insurgency, a Mao-inspired group which has been fighting to overthrow the government for eight years, or a new anti-rebel death squad called the Rodigo Franco Command.

British offer to buy deadly guns

LONDON (AP) — The government is offering to buy Kalashnikov assault rifles and other high-powered guns that become illegal today under a new firearms law.

Owners have until April 30 to apply for the $265 payment, Home Secretary Douglas Hurd said Tuesday. The sum is based on the price such rifles fetched at auction before parliament took up the measure in September 1987.

Under the new law, the penalty for possessing a prohibited weapon is up to five years in jail or a $3,500 fine.

The Firearms (Amendment) Act was introduced after Michael Ryan killed 16 people as he strolled through the small town of Hungerford in August 1987 before taking his own life. It bans the private use of high-powered self-loading rifles like the Kalashnikov, which Ryan used in the massacre, and other weapons including short-barreled, smooth-bore guns.

Foreign 'trekkers' turning region into 'human zoo'

By DENIS D. GRAY

CHIANG MAI, Thailand (AP) — Armed with cash and cameras, foreign trekkers by the thousands are scouring the hills of northern Thailand for unspoiled tribal people, turning the region into "a human zoo," critics say.

Thai officials, Christian missionaries and others interviewed say these increasingly popular treks by Western Europeans, Americans and Australians are hastening the erosion of traditional culture among 500,000 tribal people already reeling under rapid modernization.

Villagers are selling their colorful costumes, jewelry and other heirlooms or exchanging them for jeans and other Western goods offered by trekkers. And intruding brusquely into village life are some Westerners who, as former tour operator Bill Young recalls, "run around with their breasts hanging out."

"Nothing is free now. Their traditional hospitality has been corrupted," says American missionary David Morse. "Before they would offer food and lodging to strangers. Now they no longer accept people for who they are. They have become hardened, less open."

According to the government's tourist authority, tribal trekking has grown from a handful of hikers in the 1970s to more than 100,000 last year.

Most sign up with tour companies in this major northern Thai city, then make their way by jeep, bamboo raft, elephant, motorcycle or foot to the hill villages of the Akha, Karen, Hmong, Lisu, Lahu and other tribes.

The trekking companies capitalize on the region's natural beauty and the lure of the exotic and notorious — the area is part of the so-called Golden Triangle of opium fields and warlord armies.

"Padaung hill tribes now available," reads one typical advertisement, which has prompted critics to charge that the tribal people are being marketed like animals on a safari or in a zoo.

Young, a longtime American resident of northern Thailand, says trekking agencies vary greatly.

Some, he says, educate clients about local cultures while others may offer an "opium experience" and provide opportunities for "authentic" photographs by getting tribesmen to smoke their opium pipes or engage in courtship rituals.

Some trekkers have died of drug overdoses. Violence and robbery against tourists — once unheard of — are on the rise as cultures clash and cash is haphazardly injected into primitive economies.

Suppakit Apasil, director of the government's tourism office in Chiang Mai, says part of the trouble stems from lack of controls over the mushrooming agencies and the trekking industry.

ANC wants teen group disbanded

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress has asked anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela to disband her group of teen-age bodyguards, which has been accused of kidnapping and engaging in gang feuds.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and community leaders in the black township of Soweto support disbanding the group, known as the Mandela United soccer club, saying it hurts the campaign to end white minority rule.

Several newspapers have reported continuing allegations that the youth group has engaged in unlawful behavior have become a source of friction between Mrs. Mandela and her husband Nelson, South Africa's best-known black leader.

Nelson Mandela has been imprisoned since 1962 for his ANC activities.

"Winnie can't afford to have the Mandela name dragged through the mud by associating with these people," Tutu said in New York, the Johannesburg newspaper Business Day reported Tuesday.

At the Lusaka, Zambia, headquarters of the outlawed ANC, spokesman Tom Sebina said Tuesday that the message about Mandela United was sent to Mrs. Mandela after discussions among the organization's leaders.

Jury to decide if fetuses are 'art'

LONDON (AP) — A jury at the Old Bailey criminal court will decide whether earrings made of human fetuses are art or obscenity.

Exhibit One, in a glass case, is a mannequin's head with a black curly wig, a scarf and a pair of human fetuses, of three to four months' gestation and freeze-dried, attached to its ears.

Police seized the head Dec. 1, 1987, opening day of an exhibition of 40 items at the Young Unknowns art gallery in Waterloo, south London. The show was called In Animal.

Canadian sculptor Richard Gibson, 36, the creator, and gallery owner Peter Sylveire, 43, were charged with outraging public decency and causing a nuisance.

They pleaded innocent, and this week a jury of 10 women and two men began listening to lawyers argue whether the work is art.

Geoffrey Robertson, who represents Sylveire and sees the case as an important test of obscenity laws, said in court Monday one purpose of art is "to shock and jolt the public from its complacency."

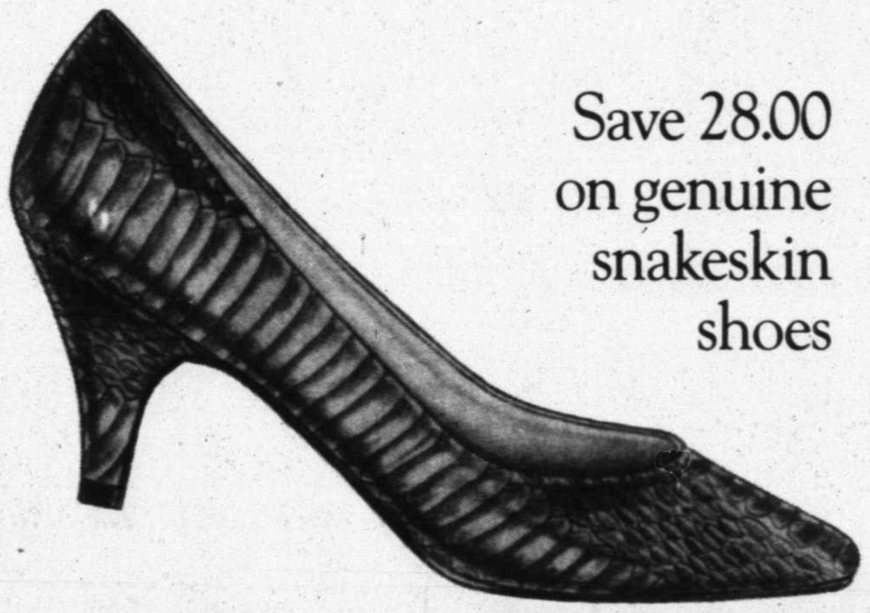

He said the fetal sculpture could be seen as demonstrating that "women wear abortions as lightly as they wear their earrings."

Prosecutor Michael Worsley said Tuesday the issue was not artistic merit or lack of it, but whether the earrings would shock, disgust or revolt a decent member of the public.

'Effective' tax rates reformed

All sorts of watchdog groups try their hand at calculating what are the "effective" income tax rates paid by American corporations — the real rates, if you cut through all the fancy footwork and just divide a company's taxes by its profits. Because there are so many different ways to massage those numbers, rarely do any two analysts come to precisely the same conclusion. But there was broad agreement before the federal Tax Reform Act of 1986 that in many industries, effective tax rates were shockingly low.

As a matter of fact, some of the most profitable companies in the country were paying no income tax at all. And there is general agreement now that in 1988, the first year in which the new tax laws operated, effective tax rates have significantly increased.

Averaged out, the effective tax rate paid by the nation's top 1,000 corporations went up from 21.5 percent in 1987 to 24.7 percent in 1988 — according to one of the most respected of the watchdog groups, Tax Analysts. That may not sound like a big change, but for an averaged number it is pretty impressive. It has produced an additional $7.6 billion in federal revenues. And the improvement appears to be due almost entirely to tax reform; higher corporate earnings seem to have had only a small impact.

Even more important, variation in effective tax rates from industry to industry seem to be leveling off. There are still differences, but tax reform has generally lowered the effective rates paid by those who used to pay disproportionately, and it seems to have all but eliminated the number of high-profit companies paying little or no taxes.

To the extent Congress and the Reagan administration got the blame for the inequities, both deserve credit for seeing the error and enacting the reform that seems to be correcting the problem.

Another racing honor

Alysheba, the renowned racehorse owned by the Clarence Scharbauer family of Midland, added yet another impressive honor to his impressive list of trophies Saturday when he was voted thoroughbred racing's Horse of the Year for 1988.

The horse has been rolling up awards since 1987 when he won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness before being beaten in the Belmont Stakes, as he attempted to win the Triple Crown. Those two impressive victories catapulted the horse into thoroughbred racing's spotlight and he was named the champion 3-year-old of 1987.

Alysheba, who is now retired to Lane's End Farm in Versailles, Ky., only won 11 of 26 career starts, but was an impressive seven of nine in 1988, including victories in the Santa Anita Handicap, the Woodward Handicap and the Breeder's Cup Classic. The horse had career earnings of $6,679,242.

Without a doubt, Alysheba will be remembered for years in racing circles. As far as honors are concerned, the horse was noteworthy. It isn't every day that a horse of that quality comes along.

Congratulations to the Scharbauer family on another outstanding honor for Alysheba. The horse helped bring attention to Midland once again!

We enjoyed your pictures of the three Lee High School Band girls "seen in the company of some noble gentlemen": George Washington, Abe Lincoln, and "Tim Christensen, a member of the honor guard at the U.S. Capitol."

Tim's family and friends were disappointed that you did not mention that Tim is a Midlander!

Tim moved to Midland with his family when he was 2-years-old. He was captain of his DPS Explorer Scouts for two years and worked with the troopers. Tim graduated from Midland High School in 1987 and attended Midland College before entering the U.S. Air Force in April 1988.

Tim is an Air Force Presidential Honor Guard and will be in Washington, D.C. for two years.

In reply to the article published Jan. 26th entitled, "Senior citizens against group being moved," written by Rick Brown, we would like to make it clear that the Rev. We are very sorry about the statement that was made. The community is very, very fortunate to have a person who cares for the needs of all people.

A better name?

By a four to three vote, the local school board has recently approved the naming of our new school for President George Bush. It seems a name that would merit a unanimous vote of the board should be required. Besides, if we want a name to really remind us of what George Bush has done for Midland the last eight years, F.D.I.C. Elementary School would be much more appropriate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1989. There are 333 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 1, 1862, the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," a poem by Julia Ward Howe, was published in the Atlantic Monthly.

On this date:

In 1861, Texas voted to secede from the Union.

In 1898, the Travelers Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., issued the first auto insurance policy, to a Dr. Truman J. Martin of Buffalo, N.Y., for $11.05.

In 1920, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police came into existence as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police merged with the Dominion Police.

One year ago: Denying any wrongdoing, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said he didn't recall a portion of a memo concerning a proposed Iraqi pipeline project that referred to a plan to bribe Israeli officials.

Defense fumbles bribery investigation

WASHINGTON — There are plenty of top-notch investigators at the Defense Department. But last year the wrong crew was assigned to check out an anonymous tip that a former Navy surgeon may have bribed his way out of jail.

Jack Anderson

The investigators first assigned to the job botched things so badly that a mop-up crew is now struggling to salvage what remains.

The case involves Donal Billig, the former heart surgeon at Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland who was convicted in 1986 of involuntary manslaughter and negligent homicide in the surgery deaths of three patients. The Court of Military Review overturned the conviction last March. A month later, an anonymous caller told the Defense Department hotline for whistleblowers that Billig, working with a bagman, bribed one or more of the judges on the panel, according to an affidavit filed in court by the Defense Department.

We already reported that Defense Department investigators recently subpoenaed the banking records of Billig and his wife. Subpoenas are usually the last step in wrapping up a bribery probe. Seasoned criminal investigators often begin by nosing around quietly to find someone involved in the alleged bribe who can be scared into testifying against the others.

But this probe is barely off the ground and the subpoenas are just about the only option left to the Defense Department. The ball was dropped by Special Inquiries, a group in the Defense Department inspector general's office that does not normally handle criminal investigations.

Several sources close to the probe told our associate Stewart Harris that the man who commands Special Inquiries, Stephen A. Whitlock, spilled the beans about the allegations to judges on the Court of Military Review. Whitlock reportedly tipped his hand during a meeting with the judges last spring, shortly after the tipster called and before investigators had a chance to make quiet inquiries.

The judges responded by challenging the right of the inspector general to investigate them. Then they appointed their own investigator who, in an interim report, said he found no evidence of wrongdoing.

Early attempts by the Defense Department to verify the tipster's allegations met with "mixed results," according to court papers filed by the government in support of the bank record subpoenas. Those subpoenas may now be the best chance the government has to resolve the case.

Normally, investigators try to rattle weak links in a suspected bribery scheme. If someone talks, a plea bargain is struck in exchange for testimony against the key players. Prosecutors also can capitalize on the divisiveness and confusion that often breaks out among nervous conspirators.

"If you subpoena records, all you are going to get is records. Witness testimony is the best evidence," said one Defense Department source who is disgusted with the way the inquiry was handled.

Inspector General June Gibbs Brown declined to say why the Special Inquiries team was put on the sensitive Billig case from the outset.

But our sources tell us that Special Inquiries was assigned because Deputy Director Derek Vander Schaaf wanted a quick turnaround on the case. Special Inquiries is supposed to handle allegations of non-criminal improprieties within 30 to 45 days. Vander Schaaf calls it his "tiger team." But the team is a pussy cat when it comes to hard core criminal investigations.

One source told us the "front office" — Brown or Vander Schaaf — failed to correctly gauge the criminal potential of the case in the beginning. Early last fall, the case was finally handed over to the team that should have had it from the beginning, the Defense Criminal Investigative Service.

MINI-EDITORIAL — North Vietnam kept no American prisoners of war after 1973, if you believe a report issued by the Defense and State departments on the final day of the Reagan administration. Also, searching for the remains of missing Americans is a lost cause, the report concludes. That's an easy solution to a ticklish problem. If the United States accepts that as fact, it won't have to keep pestering Vietnam for bodies. Out of sight, out of mind, just like the current prisoners of another undeclared war. We can see a day in the future when another administration will issue a report saying there are no American hostages being held in Lebanon. It's so much cleaner to tie up loose ends that way.

Resurrection of 'Mayor Daley' offers change

CHICAGO — The probability that Richard M. Daley will belatedly follow his famous father into the mayor's office this year is a deadly blow to Republicans in Illinois and new life for centrist Democrats everywhere.

Politicians here agree that Daley, longtime state's attorney for Cook County, would have to self-destruct to avoid ousting Mayor Eugene Sawyer. Not likely to do that, he thus would become the first white ever to defeat an incumbent big-city black mayor, breaking an iron rule of irreversibility.

The advent of Richard II at City Hall halts the hemorrhage of Chicago's white Democrats into the Republican Party. Considering the GOP's desiccated condition downstate, the party looks forward to indefinite minority status in Illinois. Nationally, what's happening here heartens Democrats who want to shake off Jesse Jackson, working frantically to defeat Daley.

This transformation looked impossible little more than a year ago. Following Mayor Harold Washington's landslide re-election in 1987, nobody expected ever to see another white mayor in a city with 50 percent white voters. That provoked less white flight to the suburbs than white flight to the GOP. William Daley, his brother's astute political adviser and a Democratic operative of national reputation, was gloomy.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

How long would it be, he wondered, before ethnic white voters of Chicago converted from Reagan Democrats to plain old Republicans?

But nobody expected Mayor Washington's fatal heart attack 13 months ago — or its political aftermath. The black community was split when Sawyer, helped by white regulars, was elected by the City Council over Alderman Timothy Evans. Daley preempted the field as the only viable white candidate, building a coalition even down to his father's old reform enemy, ex-Alderman William Singer. Ed Vrdolyak, the former Democratic leader who turned Republican, wrote himself out of contention by losing successive political races.

Thus were the tables turned from 1983, when Daley and Mayor Jane Byrne divided white voters to elect Washington. The 10 percent white plurality in the Feb. 28 primary against Sawyer and in the April 4 general election against Evans should easily elect Daley — unless he is foolish enough to depart from his bland campaigning diet.

That promises more than another Daley in City Hall. "He makes it respectable (for white ethnic voters) to be a Democrat," brother Bill told us. To such savvy Republicans as State House Minority Leader Lee Daniels, catastrophe looms.

The reason George Bush had so much trouble carrying Illinois against Michael Dukakis is a steady Republican decline downstate, especially in the state's southern third. Not one legislative seat is held south of Springfield. What has given Republicans a fighting chance in Illinois is the commensurate shift of Chicago Democrats. Daley ends that.

Why, then, are such notable Republicans as Governor James Thompson and Cook County Sheriff James O'Grady unabashedly in Daley's corner in the absence of a party-backed GOP candidate? Thompson has been eagerly thrashing Sawyer and his ally, State House Speaker Michael Madigan, on a deal leasing the hotel at O'Hare Airport.

"The governor just plain likes Richie Daley," one GOP leader told us. Thompson never has been a party man in winning election as governor four times amid steady Illinois Republican decline.

O'Grady is another matter. Politicians of both parties echo each other in saying he is "a Democrat at heart," his conversion to Republicanism no deeper than seeking the only available way to become sheriff.

O'Grady and his political lieutenant, Cook County GOP Chairman James Dvorak, no longer are viewed by old-line Republicans as the quick route to the party's ascendancy. The resurrection of Richard II comes too quickly for permanent grafting of Chicago ethnic Democrats onto the Republican body. The party has to rely on its hard core, in Chicago suburban "collar" counties, such as Don Totten, bounced as county chairman by Thompson to make room for Dvorak.

Nobody pretends Richard M. Daley can replicate the iron rule in Chicago and pervasive political influence elsewhere exercised by Richard J. Daley. Nor would he try. But his election, reversing long-building trends in American politics, should cause deep dismay by Republicans and Jesse Jackson alike.

Moving toward leisure in Japan's hard work

According to Mr. David Sanger of The New York Times, the Japanese are having a very difficult time persuading their workers to put in a five-day week. For years everyone was content to work six days, so trying to adjust to five has not been easy.

Art Buchwald

This campaign for a reduction in hours is meant to encourage more leisure time, as well as allow the worker to spend a lot more yen in the homeland. Japanese institutions, from the banks to the unions, are trying to force a radical change of life style, and there has been great resistance to the proposal. According to Sanger, 30 percent of the Japanese people are in favor of a five-day work week, and 70 percent are against it.

Using leisure time to its utmost is one area where Americans excel over the Japanese. In fact, we spend twice as much time being laid back (figuratively speaking) as our trading partners across the seas.

Therefore, the Japanese are hiring American firms to convince the workers in Japan that a 40-hour week is better than a 48-hour one, no matter what their bosses tell them.

One U.S. consulting firm, called TGIFIJ (Thank God It's Friday In Japan), is run by Lawrence Bathgate II, and his company has landed a major contract with the Japanese.

Lawrence told me, "This is the toughest job I've ever had. Every time I try to get the Japanese to relax, they jump up and start welding another bumper onto a car while singing the Toyota fight song."

"How do you know where to start?" I asked.

"I've been sending over students from the U.S. to teach them a thing or two. If anyone knows how to take life easy, it's the American youngster."

"What approach do the students take?"

"As soon as they set foot on Japanese soil, they go to the beach. Our goal is to persuade the people of Japan that they can get as much pleasure from suntanning as they can from screwing the back onto a Sony Walkman. American kids are great when it comes to teaching others how not to lift a finger."

"How do you convince the Japanese that a five-day week is better than a six-day one?"

"We have advised the government that they cannot do it unless they build more golf courses. People can't be expected to take the weekend off if they have no golf courses to play on."

"I hope that they have responded positively."

"Yes, they're building golf courses as fast as they can. The trouble is that while they're waiting to tee off, the workers keep heading for the factories because they want to build just one more microwave oven."

"Is there anything you can do about that?" I asked Bathgate.

"My people are only attempting to teach the virtues of leisure. We try to impress upon the Japanese that it is more productive to go to a department store than it is to produce a hand-held typewriter which also doubles as a fax machine. Our message is that the only road to true bliss for the Japanese workers is to acquire as many material goods as their houses will hold. We also tell them that there is more happiness to be found on the ski slopes of Mount Fuji than in all the skyscrapers in Osaka."

"Are they buying the message?"

"Not too well. The male workers are very worried that if you cut them down from a six-day week to a five-day one, it will mean spending two days at home with their families. They are afraid that their wives would then make them do chores around the house. That very fear is what drove them to work six days a week in the first place."

"I can see it's not easy to make people relax in a country where the work ethic is so powerful."

"You don't have to remind me. The officials who hired my firm have ordered us to work six days a week until we come up with a solution to the problem."

Soviet minister arrives in China 'full of hopes'

BEIJING (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said today he was "full of good expectations and great hopes" as he arrived to discuss a summit to heal the 30-year-old China-Soviet breach.

"We are starting our negotiations fully aware of the scale of the forthcoming event," Shevardnadze said in a statement distributed by the Soviet Embassy. "The title theme of the Soviet-Chinese dialogue is peace and development."

Shevardnadze arrived on a special Aeroflot plane that landed at Beijing's old airport, now used only by top Chinese and foreign leaders. He was met by his Chinese counterpart, Qian Qichen. The two shook hands warmly as they stood bareheaded in a biting wind.

Shevardnadze told reporters before stepping into his limousine he was carrying a letter from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to Chinese leaders. He did not reveal the contents.

Scientist defects to Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Soviet Jewish scientist who disappeared in Paris and was reported as a defector by French diplomats has arrived in Israel, the Foreign Ministry said Tuesday.

"All I can say is that Mr. Yakov Kogan has arrived in Israel a few days ago. I am not aware of the circumstances of his arrival," Foreign Ministry spokesman Alon Liel said.

French diplomatic sources said Tuesday that Kogan, a member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences who had been in Paris for a seminar on telecommunications, dropped from sight over the weekend and was seeking asylum in Israel.

Liel declined comment about Kogan's reported defection and said he did not know where Kogan arrived from.

Radio Shalom, a Jewish FM station in Paris, said Kogan is a mathematician who participated in a seminar sponsored by the French Foreign Ministry and disappeared Sunday. He was to have returned to the Soviet Union on Tuesday.

Overcrowded boat unfit

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The navy Tuesday reversed its position and said the tourist boat that sank on New Year's Eve, killing 55 people, was overcrowded and not fit to venture into sea waters.

A two-week examination of the boat, which was hauled from the sea floor in mid-January, showed the Bateau Mouche should have carried not more than 62 when it capsized and sank with at least 150 revelers aboard, a navy report said.

The report said the popular sightseeing craft was badly maintained, had a waterline above the basement portholes, had a second-floor addition that affected the boat's stability and was full of loose, heavy tables and chairs.

Days later, the Navy Ministry released a report that declared the boat was fit for 153 people and seaworthy, according to port authority guards.

But the navy and police investigating criminal responsibility in the sinking have been under constant pressure from civic groups.

You may not usually associate these words with life or home, but they suggest emotional dangers that can exist within families and have real meanings to those involved. These dangers, however, are usually more subtle, slower to develop and sometimes difficult to recognize.

Upset-minded Chaps take aim on South Plains Thursday

From Staff Reports

Riding a four-game win streak and a big victory over Howard College, the Midland College Chaparrals head for Levelland 8 p.m. Thursday with visions of upset dancing in their heads.

The Chaps took a 102-93 win over the Howard's Hawks Monday to move into third place in conference standings. Next is second place South Plains College Plainsmen in Levelland and a chance to play havoc with the standings.

The Chaps are 6-3 in conference play and 15-7 overall.

South Plains has lost two games this season by a total of three points. The Plainsmen lost to Jacksonville College, the No. 2 in the nation, 84-82, at the Chaparral Classic, then fell 81-80 to Odessa College last month in Odessa.

Midland avenged its 84-81 overtime loss in Midland to Howard College and hopes to do the same thing to SPC, which rolled over a Chap squad that was in some disarray by a 95-82 mark.

But the Chaparrals aren't the same team they were in December. They have two less players, but more intensity and a sophomore guard who's become a scoring machine.

"We lost two sophomores last fall we were counting on, lost another for the spring session because of grades and didn't have another for six games," MC coach Reggie Franklin noted. "Howard College slipped up on us and South Plains just beat us. But we took care of Howard over there and would like to do the same at Levelland."

Sophomore point guard Charles "Smokey" McCovery took charge of the team at the four-game Mesa, Arizona, tournament. For the first nine games of the season, he was in double figures just four times. In the last 13 games, he's been held below 10 once. In the last four games, McCovery is averaging 30.25 points per game. He had a team record 47 against Clarendon, 27 against Western Texas, and 37 against Howard.

But the Chaps have five players averaging in double figure. Tim Owens, Fred Campbell, and Darryl King are the big players inside, with Kethus Hanks also averaging in double figures while playing the two guard spot.

South Plains has two inside players, Jeff Stern and Keith Stewart, who tend to control the game in the paint, plus a flock of guards who can hit well from outside.

"At Levelland, we have to shoot like we did against Howard, try to neutralize their big men, and control their guards. So far as personnel, they are at least as good as Odessa and the score when they played showed that. But we've shown we are capable of playing well. Since South Plains beat us in December, we've won three of four games in Arizona and five of six in conference play in January," Franklin said.

Since that two-point loss to Odessa, the Chaps have been over 100 points three times. In those four games they have averaged 101.75 points while holding their opponents to an average of 80.0 points.

After the South Plains game, the Chaps return for two home games next week against foes from New Mexico. They host New Mexico Military Monday and New Mexico Junior College Thursday. The NMJC game is Midland's Homecoming event.

Permian girls bury Bulldogs

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

It was more of the same for the Midland High girls basketball team Tuesday.

That wasn't good news for the Lady Bulldogs, since they've had a putrid season to begin with. But Coach Jane Young's team may have set new heights of futility with a 61-38 loss to Odessa Permian at the MHS gym.

To start with, MHS shot 30 percent from the field — 17-of-57. Compounding matters was the fact that Permian's half-court press prevented the hostesses from setting up many offensive opportunities, even though Permian's offense sputtered in the early going.

ILLUSTRATING the success of its press, Mojo took 40 first-half shots to 22 for Midland High. Though the Panthers made only 35 percent of those shots, it was enough to build a 28-13 halftime lead.

MHS built a 7-2 lead with 3:10 left in the first period on two-pointers by Anita Montez and Richelle Beck, and a three-pointer by Tina O'Neal. Permian then ran off 14 unanswered points to take a 16-7 lead by the end of the period. The Panthers ultimately held the Bulldogs scoreless for almost four minutes before Kim Jackson finally got on the board with a layup 46 minutes into the second period.

Rebel girls clinch 2nd tie

By DEENE EHLIS
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA — It was one of those games where the final score was not an indication of how close a contest it was. The Midland Lee girls clinched a second place tie in District 4-5A with a hard-fought 67-51 win over Odessa High Tuesday night.

Tuesday's Lee win, coupled with San Angelo Central's 54-51 overtime upset of front-running Abilene Cooper, gives the Lady Rebels a chance to tie for first place — slim though it may be.

Though a Lee win over San Angelo is certainly within the realm of possibility, Odessa High must also upset Cooper for the Lady Rebs to have a share of the lead.

Tuesday's game featured 50 fouls and 68 free throw attempts between the two teams. It was as if the Rebels had the home court advantage as they attempted more free throws than Odessa, 43-25, and committed fewer fouls, 22 to 28 for the Bronchos. Odessa lost four girls to five personal fouls, including their two key inside players late in the third quarter. The Bronchos played the game's final 1:24 with only four girls.

With their 43 free throw shots, Midland Lee converted on 27. Lady Rebel Mary Ann Isom went to the line 19 times, hitting 13. In the final period, she was five of ten from the charity stripe. Odessa finished at 11 of 25 from the free throw line.

Permian snuffs out Bulldogs

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

ODESSA — What do you do when you're down by a bucket with time running out? You feed the ball to Greg Lewis down low for the easy money jump shot, right?

Half-right.

At least Lewis was down under and waiting. Unfortunately for Midland High, Lewis' patented jump shot from about three feet out — with just 14 seconds remaining — fell lamely off the rim and the Odessa Permian Panthers scored a 64-62 win over the visiting Bulldogs.

The loss leaves Midland High reeling with a 12-14 overall record, 4-4 in district. MHS remains 1½ games out of a second-place playoff chance with four games remaining in the regular season. The present runner-up San Angelo Bobcats defeated Abilene Cooper, 66-64, Tuesday night and are 5-2 in district.

BEFORE LEWIS' shot missed, the Bulldogs had failed to convert another opportunity which would have garnered them at least a tie.

With 34 seconds remaining, Bulldog guard Scott Melzer quickly forced a turnover at Midland's end of the court and passed underneath to Tracey Bascus. Bascus, too, missed what is normally a gimme lay-up with just a half-minute left on the clock.

The Bulldogs were obvious favorites coming into the contest, but struggled from the beginning in their efforts to take a secure lead.

The Panthers held a 24-23 lead at the end of the first quarter and would not give MHS the lead back until 4:50 remained in the fourth.

"We played dead-legged," MHS head coach Jack Stephenson said. "I just don't know why they beat us so bad on the boards."

THE PANTHERS out-rebounded Midland High 46-32, and it was Mojo's first-half boards that brought about the Bulldogs' subsequent demise.

Although Permian led in rebounds by only a 24-19 count in the first half, they brought down the key rebounds, turning many into points.

Greenwood's Rangers swept both ends of a doubleheader against Colorado City Tuesday night, the boys winning 70-46 and the girls scoring a 61-52 victory in 3A district action.

Greenwood remained atop the 7-3A standings with a 6-0 record and went to 15-10 for the season.

Greenwood's girls bounced back from a Friday loss to Coahoma to beat the Wolves, 61-52. Vanessa McMullen provided the big punch with 32 points while Robby McCullum added 10.

The win give the first half champions an 18-9 record for the season and a 5-1 district record.

Broncos rally to beat Rebels

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Odessa High's Ira Young took over in crunch time at Chaparral Center Tuesday night to help lead his Bronchos to a 61-58 come-from-behind District 4-5A basketball victory over the Midland Lee Rebels.

Young, who had 15 points on the night, hit a key three-point basket, pulled off a big assist and hit two free throws with eight seconds left in the fourth quarter to ice the game.

During the stretch, Young hit an unconcious three-point bomb and so did Kevin Skinner.

As late as 1:34 in the game, Lee held a 58-57 lead on a free throw by Darren Dortch, who had 16 points and seven of Lee's 13 points in the final quarter.

BUT OHS' George Collins took a feed from Young inside the paint for a 59-58 Broncho lead and Dortch followed by missing a short eight-foot jumper at the other end with 20 seconds left to play.

Young then hit two free throws for the final three-point victory with eight seconds left.

"I was comfortable at the line. I just wanted to put it up and put the game away," said Young. "We were a little frustrated early because we were missing the easy shots, but our press turned it around for us in the fourth quarter."

OHS coach Keith Thompson said of Young's free throws, "I was glad to see them go in. It sure eased up the coaching strategy in that situation when you go up by three points.

"It was just a good game, but there is no question that the 10-point run in the fourth quarter helped. We changed defenses four times during that run and got some turnovers."

The loss buried a fine performance of Lee's Torval Crisp, who had a game high 25 points, hitting 12 of 18 from the field. But it was another second half loss and that seems to be piling up on the Rebs. Lee is now 2-6 in the race while OHS is 4-4.

Saved from boredom by a performance to be remembered

Battles

As a game, outside of the opening minutes when impending disaster hung like a mushroom over Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, it wasn't something you'll file away in the memory bank.

This wasn't Joe Montana, in the locker room blue with cold as Notre Dame came back to the field against Houston in the world's coldest Cotton Bowl, returning in the fourth period, his team trailing by 21 points, to extract victory at the gun.

This wasn't Lorenzo Charles finding himself alone under the basket for the dunk that gave North Carolina State victory over a Houston team it had no business beating and with it the NCAA championships.

NO, AND it wasn't Villanova defying gravity by beating Pat Ewing and Georgetown in another NCAA final.

And for baseball fans, it wasn't the Orel Hershiser pitching and Kirk Gibson playing Robert Redford against the overwhelmingly favored New York Mets and Oakland A's in the baseball playoffs.

This, once it got pointed in the right direction, was a rout, despite the final 102-93 margin. Midland College beat Howard College from Big Spring to Midland on this particular night.

IT WASN'T the kind of game to stir the hackles. But it was the kind of game to be remembered, like Dicky Moegle in Rice's Cotton Bowl runaway against Alabama back in 1954. Moegle simply averaged 25 yards per carry, a major bowl record that still stands. What's more that 25-per-carry average doesn't include the punt return that made the game famous, the one where Tommy Lewis came off the bench to tackle Moegle on what would have been a 95-yard return.

THIS was the Redskins Doug Williams in the second period of the 1988 Super Bowl game against Denver. Surely Bronco fans will remember that one.

Monday's game will be remembered for the same kind of individual performance. Charles "Smokey" McCovery was never better....has any Chaparral ever been any better?

For any who may have wondered why the University of Oklahoma added the Garland sophomore to their growing list of Midland discoveries, McCovery confirmed that Sooner bird dogs still retain a sensitive nose for talent.

A one sided game, yes, but 37 points, 16 assists, nine rebounds, four steals are the stuff of which Mookie Blaylocks are made. All this, yet five-of-six three-point baskets would have been enough to make this performance extraordinary.

A FEW DAYS ago, Coach Reggie Franklin's statement that he had confidence in his Chaps. Confidence that beating South Plains and Odessa College was not beyond their capabilities and, if so, maybe they yet could win it all. It sounded like the kind of wishful thinking one might expect from a extreme optimist out of touch with reality.

Thursday the Chaps head for Levelland and a South Plains College team that seemingly has a lock on second place in the WJCAC.

Another night from McCovery like Monday and the Chaps could have the combination to that lock.

PERMIAN

The Panthers' successful defensive play was highlighted not just by their play off the glass. The way Permian completely shut down Lewis was perhaps the single most important factor in the win.

"We made the adjustment at halftime to keep the middle covered," Permian coach Charles Pattillo said, "and I think we did a good job."

Good job?

Good job?

Lewis finished the night with 11 points. Eight of those 11 came in the first quarter. The other three came in the second quarter.

In the second half, Lewis only had three field goal opportunities. He was precisely 0-for-3 in the final 16 minutes.

Good job. Effective. Tough defense. Perfect.

WHATEVER the term, it applied concerning the Mojo defensive effort against the 6-4 senior. Just one other time this season — against El Paso Hanks in November — has Lewis, who averages 20.6 per game, been held to just 11.

Lewis also had 12 rebounds, seven of which came in the first half.

With Lewis shut down and cut off, Stephenson's alternative was to go to Dexture Young in the clutch. Young, though, again had trouble connecting on what is at times his specialty — the three-point shot. Young hit only 2-of-8 from long range but did finish the night with key play inside with six rebounds and 19 points.

Melzer, a non-starter, played by far the most physical game of any Bulldog. Although he finished with just 12 points, he hit 5-of-7 of his shots from the field and 1-of-1 from the line.

Pattillo added that he thought one of the keys was the Panthers' ability to regain the lead after they gave it up in the fourth quarter.

Although it was a game decided by just one basket, it was not that close of a game for most of the night. Midland High always seemed within striking distance but could never quite push it over the top with the exception of their short-lived leads in the fourth quarter. For most of the night, Midland fought from the disadvantage of having to come from behind.

"Our defense was so bad," Stephenson said. "Straight-legged, dead-legged. We didn't work that hard yesterday. (Permian) did a good job on defense. They played a whole lot better."

REBS

"WE didn't have any luck and we got in a hurry in the fourth quarter and made some key mistakes," said Stueckler. "But I tell you, Odessa had some luck. I swear that one of those three-pointers in the final quarter that the kid never even looked at the rim. He just turned around, put it up and it went in."

Collins had 13 points and Skinner 12, but Lee held leading Broncho scorer Patrick Brown to six points.

Lee by seven points, 18-11, in the first half and led by seven points once in the third period. Lee had leads of seven points three times in the final period and reached hits 53-44 zenith with just 5:39 left to play.

"That was tough. We've lost a lot of games by just a few points," said Lee's David Meade.

The Rebels now travel to meet second place San Angelo, 5-2 in the league chase, Friday while OHS draws Abilene Cooper.

In junior varsity action, Lee took a 58-48 victory Mike Connally hitting 14 points. He was aided by 12 from Rob McMaryion and 11 each from Jeff Garrison and Brian Rippee. Freddie Given had 13 for OHS.

Thomas Hears vs. Sugar Ray Leonard.

Sugar Ray, Hit Man sign for another dance

NEW YORK (AP) — In a dim corner of the Roseland ballroom, where lonely ladies with sequined high heels often sit, a cynical wag ventured: "Now, there's hope for reuniting the Beatles."

On the same stage after more than seven years, stood Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns, who picked a dance hall, of all places, to sign for their June 12 rematch in Las Vegas.

"I'm still hanging around. Tommy's still hanging around. We figured we'd better get it on before Father Time got both of us," the 32-year-old Leonard said, flashing his smile by Steinway.

Leonard is the only fighter ever to hold world championships in five weight classes. Hearns had four world championships and could make it five with Leonard's World Boxing Council super middleweight belt, which will be at stake at the Caesars Palace outdoor stadium.

"He avoided me as long as he could," the 30-year-old Hearns said. "He can't avoid me, anymore. He must show up.

"This is the one thing that's lingered on my mind, getting back into the ring with Leonard," Hearns said. "Nobody else has stayed on my mind like him. I feel I had the (first) fight won all the way, and I still don't think it should have been stopped."

Leonard and Hearns originally met on Sept. 16, 1981 at Caesars Palace. Leonard stopped Hearns in the 14th round of a fight that could have gone either way, unifying the world welterweight title.

The fight marked the end of Leonard's active period. After the fight, he sustained a detached retina and retired in November, 1982. He came back with a lacklustre knockout of Kevin Howard in 1984 and didn't fight again until April 1987, when he won his third title, the WBC middleweight belt, with a 12-round decision over Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

"I've taken a lot of criticism for not giving rematches," Leonard said, "but I had the eye injury, and we just went our separate ways. Now just seemed like the right time for the rematch."

While Leonard said that he expected to see a highly motivated Hearns this time, "and that means a dangerous Tommy Hearns," Leonard also admitted he thinks Hearns has slipped.

Hearns last fought on Nov. 4, scoring a 12-round decision over James Kinchen in Las Vegas. Three days later, Leonard won his fourth and fifth world titles — WBC super middleweight and WBC light heavyweight — by stopping Donny Lalonde in nine rounds in Las Vegas.

"I'm not defending Tommy," Leonard said. "I think he's totally shot."

Advised of Leonard's remarks, Hearns said: "He's just as shot as I am, maybe more shot. He's older than I am. Look at his last fight. He fought a total nobody, and he couldn't knock him out."

Leonard has a career record of 35-1 with 25 knockouts. Hearns is 46-3 with 38 knockouts. The fight will be televised to closed circuit locations and on a pay-per-view basis to homes.

Cavs home fire is still burning

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Brad Daugherty exploited the middle of a Philadelphia defense weakened by the absence of Charles Barkley to score 31 points and Ron Harper had a triple-double Tuesday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Philadelphia 76ers 118-103.

The victory was the 13th straight at home for Cleveland, whose 32-9 record is the best in the NBA. The Cavaliers played without Larry Nance, who has a strained tendon in his left calf.

The 76ers, who had a three-game winning streak stopped, were led by Hersey Hawkins' 22 points.

NBA

Bullets 110, Celtics 103

LANDOVER, Md. — John Williams and Mark Alarie each scored eight points as Washington erased a nine-point deficit in the fourth quarter. It was the fifth straight home-court victory for the Bullets, who won all three games with the Celtics at the Capital Centre. Boston, which has dropped five straight on the road, made only five field goals in the fourth period and went scoreless from the floor for more than seven minutes.

Knicks 120, Pacers 111

NEW YORK — Reserves Gerald Wilkins and Kenny Walker scored New York's first 11 points of a 16-5 second-half spurt that carried the Knicks to their 15th consecutive home victory. The win gave New York an 18-1 home record and a 10-6 mark in January, the first time since February 1984 the Knicks won 10 games in a month.

Pistons 104, Bulls 98

CHICAGO — Dennis Rodman and Bill Laimbeer sank clutch baskets after pulling down offensive rebounds in a roughly played overtime as Detroit beat the Chicago.

Chicago's Michael Jordan had his third triple-double of the season — 21 points, 12 assists, 10 rebounds. Jordan, who fouled out late in regulation play, has eight career triple-doubles.

Rodman, who had five of his 14 rebounds in overtime, put the Pistons ahead to stay 96-94 after Isiah Thomas missed a shot. Laimbeer, playing with five fouls, then pulled down a missed shot and got an easy layup for a 98-94 lead with 2:08 left. Laimbeer clinched the victory with a long jumper with 55 seconds left.

Jazz 99, Mavericks 84

DALLAS — John Stockton made eight consecutive shots, including four during a 17-10 run to open the third quarter, and Utah moved into undisputed possession of first place in the Midwest Division.

Stockton, who scored 30 points, helped the Jazz to a 74-57 lead after three quarters with 10 points during the 17-10 run. Karl Malone added 22 points for Utah. Derek Harper led Dallas with 25 points.

While Utah was taking a one-game lead over Houston, the Mavericks finished January with a 4-11 record, their worst month since going 2-6 in April 1983 and their most defeats in a month since a 5-12 mark in March 1983.

Spurs 117, Nuggets 111

SAN ANTONIO — Vernon Maxwell scored 26 points and Greg Anderson added 17 as San Antonio snapped a three-game losing streak. Alex English paced the losers with 28 points and Fat Lever contributed 25.

Bucks 117, Kings 104

MILWAUKEE — Jay Humphries scored 23 points and Ricky Pierce had 13 of his 21 in the fourth quarter as the Bucks score their 13th consecutive triumph over the Kings.

Terry Cummings had 20 points for the Bucks, who have won 16 of their last 20 games. Ed Pinckney scored 21 points and LaSalle Thompson 20 for the Kings, who are 3-20 on the road.

CLINCH

The Broncho bench was also whistled for two technical fouls during the course of the game.

All that would make you wonder about a home court advantage for Odessa Head Coach June Owen. She did more wondering than maybe anyone else present, keeping here criticism of the referees short and to the point. "These officials are just not consistent, " said a frustrated Owen after the game.

Both Owen and Midland Lee Head Coach Shirley Stephenson agreed on the difference between victory and defeat for their teams. It was the loss of Bronchos Gina Messman and Kori Morris in the third period because of five fouls on each.

According to Owen, "We were right in it until those two fouled out, then the height of Lee took over." Late in the third quarter, Odessa led 39-36. Lee would then go on a 13-0 streak that carried into the fourth period and a comfortable ten point advantage.

Coach Stephenson agreed, saying, "I'm sure that (losing Messman and Morris) made a big difference. We went inside more when they lost their two big players. We were able to hit our post players."

Concerning the 50 fouls whistled on the night, Stephenson was not surprised, "At Lee, I think we had 55 fouls...both teams are quick, both teams move, and both teams are going for the ball all the time so you are going to get a lot of fouls."

All the free throw shooting and fouls almost made one forget the outstanding individual performance of Lee postperson Monica Ramirez. Despite foul trouble that eventually led to a seat on the bench, Ramirez poured in 25 points and grabbed 16 rebounds. Lee dominated on the boards, 41-26, as a team.

Isom was also a standout for Lee with 17 points. What the statistics don't show is that Mary Ann did an outstanding job handling and passing the ball. The Lee defense was keyed by Gina Navarrete, her quickness leading to many Odessa turnovers.

Midland Lee is now 8-2 in district play, 19-6 overall. Odessa High stands at 2-7 in district and 8-16 overall.

In the junior varsity game Tuesday night, Odessa held off a furious Lee rally, the Bronchos JV winning 65-64 with Rosalba Carrasco scoring 28 and Imalda Navarette 22 for Odessa. Lee, led by Sheena Parker's 20 points, outscored the Bronchos 30-19 in the final quarter. A last second shot that would have won the game was off target for the Lee JV squad.

Ugly offseason for the Red Sox

By DICK SCANLON
N.Y. Times News Service

LAKELAND, Fla. — Their four-game demise in the American League Championship Series proved to be a mere prelude to the ugliest offseason the Boston Red Sox have had in a long time.

A month before they are due back in Winter Haven for spring training, the Red Sox are a public mess. They are coming across as a loose collection of bickering malcontents with an almost comical variety of problems.

Of the four best players on last year's AL East championship team, one is gone, one is threatening members of the media, one is considering a holdout and one is worrying about the April edition of Penthouse magazine.

Do you believe in the year after, Joe Morgan?

The eye of the storm has been above Fenway Park in the office of General Manager Lou Gorman, who a year ago was basking in the glow of last winter's best deal — Lee Smith for Calvin Schiraldi and Al Nipper. This winter has been more than chilly enough to extinguish that glow.

.....Jean Yawkey wants Boggs gone, and has ordered Gorman to trade him as some sort of statement on what is morally unacceptable...even for superstars.

FIRST, BRUCE Hurst turned down Boston's $5.5 million offer and left for San Diego. Gorman is convinced Hurst had his mind made up to leave Boston before the free-agent bidding even started. "He just didn't know how to say goodbye," Gorman said.

Probably assuming that Hurst's departure meant it was open season on the organization, Roger Clemens blasted the Red Sox. His list of complaints included such things as occasionally carrying his own luggage, having to leave the clubhouse to make personal phone calls, and lack of a lounge at the ballpark for players' wives.

What Clemens failed to take into account was that such petty griping would elicit little sympathy from the folks who pay to see him pitch. So it all blew back in Clemens' face, and he has spent much of the winter trying to explain-alter what he said. And the more he tries to wiggle out with half-hearted apologies, the deeper Clemens sinks.

"I think he wants to say the right thing, but he always ends up saying the wrong thing," Gorman said.

IT IS ONLY a matter of time before Clemens decides not to give any interviews, and under the circumstances, that may be the wisest course. Word is that if his current case goes all the way through the arbitration process, Clemens has decided to leave the Red Sox a la Hurst once he obtains his free-agent rights (after the 1990 season).

As if that weren't enough to plunge his popularity to previously unthinkable depths, the frustrated Clemens made some remarks in a Boston television interview which could be — and have been — interpreted as threats to reporters.

It would be good public relations for the club, and especially for Clemens, to settle his contract before it gets to the arbitrator.

"We're very close on a one-year contract," says Gorman, "but we want a three-year contract. They want to sign for one year and then wait until later on."

MIKE GREENWELL, who has yet to earn arbitration rights, is taking the opposite approach. Greenwell is willing to trade his first year of arbitration rights (1990) for the security of a two-year contract. The Red Sox would prefer to sign him for one year and take their chances with arbitration next winter.

After finishing second in the American League MVP vote, Greenwell wants nearly twice as much as the Red Sox are offering, which is $1.2 million (plus incentives) for two years. And since he has less than three full years of major-league service, Greenwell's only leverage is a spring holdout, the same tactic Clemens used two years ago.

"The problem we've got is he just doesn't accept that he doesn't have arbitration rights," Gorman says. "He keeps bringing up (the contracts of Don) Mattingly and (Darryl) Strawberry, but those guys have played long enough to take their clubs to arbitation.

"When Mike made his original proposal, I was speechless, dumbfounded. I just didn't know what to say. I told him we were so far apart that we could sit there for eight days, talking 14 hours a day, and we wouldn't get it done.

"He's one of my favorites on the club, but he's got to understand where the marketplace is. I said to take one year and if he has a good year, he can go to arbitration and make more money."

Greenwell is one of the most genuine, unassuming young players in the game, and it is a shame to see him alienated by this process which doesn't seem to benefit anyone.

Last season's well-publicized scandal involving Boggs' extramarital affair with Californian Margo Adams left a lot of people nervous. Now that Adams is scheduled to appear on the pages of Penthouse and name names, dates and other kinky details, people are getting nervous all over again.

One popular theory is that Jean Yawkey wants Boggs gone, and has ordered Gorman to trade him as some sort of statement on what is morally unacceptable on her club, even for superstars. For a five-time batting champion, Boggs' name has come up conspicuously often in Hot Stove trade talk. Houston wants him badly, and Gorman says he has had offers from at least five clubs.

Gorman isn't saying his third baseman is untouchable, only that he wants dollar-for-dollar value in return.

"Wade Boggs is a future Hall of Famer," he says, "and I'm not going to give him away."

Lubbock Christian claims district

From Staff Reports

Lubbock Christian clinched the district title with a 40-30 victory over Midland Christian Tuesday night, but the Mustangs girls, 3-2 and 14-6, still have hopes of making the playoffs.

MC travels to Amarillo for a Friday night game with Alamo Catholic and then meets Amarillo Christian Saturday, games that hold the Mustangs' playoff fate.

Lubbock went to 6-0 with the victory.

Christie Boles scored 12 points to lead MC while Elizabeth Coffman added another eight points.

Tribe returns to old uniforms

CLEVEAND (AP) — Cleveland is returning to the Cleveland Indians' uniform in the 1989 American League season.

The Indians last wore Cleveland on their uniforms during the 1985 season. Since 1986, both home and road jerseys displayed only Indians across the front. In the coming season, the home white uniform will have Indians on the jersey and the road gray uniforms will show Cleveland.

Colorado hosts World Alpine ski championships

BEAVER CREEK, Colo. (AP) — The World Alpine Ski Championships are not the Olympics, and that's fine with Canadian downhiller Rob Boyd.

And these championships are being contested in Colorado, not Canada. That, he said, is even better.

"Yeah, when you look back on it, we did put a lot of extra pressure on ourselves for the Olympics" last year at Calgary, Boyd said. "Here, it's nice and relaxed for us, and we have the time we need to concentrate on the race."

Saddled with his own gold-medal hopes, not to mention those of millions of Canadians, Boyd managed only a 16th-place finish at Calgary. It was a bitter disappointment for Canada's top downhiller, the man who had won the rugged Val Gardena, Italy, downhill in 1986 and 1987.

"I can't believe a course can change from one year to the next like this one has. The whole bottom is different," said Boyd, who had strong finishes of sixth and fifth over the old track last year in World Cup races.

On Tuesday, he was 4.78 seconds behind Switzerland's Pirmin Zurbriggen on the first run, and 3.22 seconds back of the Olympic downhill champion on the second. Of course, times don't mean much because skiers are looking for the best line down the mountain for race day.

Economic gauge posts healthy rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge rose a healthy 0.6 percent in December after having fallen during the previous month, the Commerce Department said today.

The December jump in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, which is designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in the future, followed a 0.2 percent decrease in November and a 0.5 percent rise in October.

The index has alternated between dips and gains for the past nine months, which many economists believe is a signal the economy is headed for a slowdown in growth that would help keep inflation in check.

The economy grew a robust 3.8 percent in 1988, but the slowest quarterly performance in two years was recorded during the October-December period, when the increase in the gross national product was held to an annual rate of 2 percent.

Although President Bush plans to adopt his predecessor's forecast that the economy will grow at a 3.2 percent rate in 1989, many private economists believe the Reagan administration's predictions for growth, interest rates and inflation were too optimistic.

Six of the nine available components of the economic index contributed to December's increase, while two detracted from it.

The biggest boost came from an increase in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods. Other business barometers that contributed to the increase were: rising stock prices, more orders for new plants and equipment, rising prices for raw materials signaling a strong demand, increased demand for business permits and growth in the inflation-adjusted money supply.

The indictors that made a negative contribution were a shortening in the length of the average work week and an increase in weekly unemployment claims.

One indicator, the time needed for companies to receive deliveries from vendors, was unchanged.

December's increase left the index at 194.6 percent of its 1967 base of 100. That was up 2 percent from the same month a year earlier.

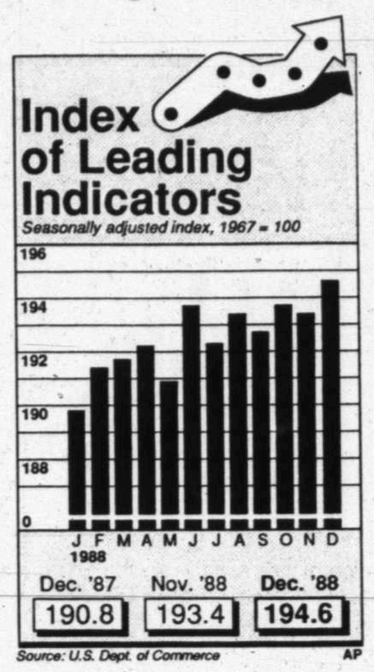

An easing of economic strength without the threat of recession would be a welcome development for many economists who believe slower growth is needed to keep the economy from overheating and causing a flare-up in inflation.

Economist Cynthia Latta of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said in advance of today's report that the jagged performance of the leading index indicates "growth is certainly going to slow, but it doesn't seem to be predicting any recession at this point."

"The fact that it's see-sawing says that the real risk of the economy overheating ... isn't really there anymore," she said. "On the other hand, there's no downturn that extends across the economy."

Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm, said before the report was released that if inflation stays under control, "I don't see anything else on the horizon that would terminate the recovery."

"There is some evidence of slowdown in the economy but not very much," Evans said. "It's the so-called soft landing approach, which appears to be working effectively."

Senators say FSLIC may need cash infusion

By BILL MINTZ

Gramm

WASHINGTON — Members of a key Senate committee suggested Tuesday that the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. may need an emergency infusion of money to cut the mounting losses in the nation's 350 insolvent thrift institutions.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., acknowledged at a Senate Banking Committee hearing that it will take several months to approve legislation to reform the savings and loan industry and agree on a way to finance the insurance fund's rescue.

He said Congress should give regulators about $2 billion immediately so they can liquidate some institutions rather than rescuing them with tax breaks, promissory notes and guarantees against fu ture losses.

"I have to believe that an immediate infusion of about $2 billion for the next six months or so would save us money in the long run," he said.

Regulators and other officials have estimated the insolvent thrifts are losing between $500 million and $1 billion per month.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he prefers an interim bill that would allow FSLIC to raise an additional $5 billion. He also wants the FSLIC to have the authority to borrow money with the full faith and credit of the federal government, which would lower the interest rate paid by the agency.

"I think that would recharge FSLIC's batteries and allow the Bank Board to continue addressing the problem," he said.

Odessa's last Gibson's scheduled to close

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The last Gibson's store in Odessa will close in about three weeks, or whenever all "non-food" items in the store have been liquidated at price reductions ranging from "30 percent to 50 percent," according to a company spokesman.

However, whether the Gibson's store building, 2419 West County Road, will be abandoned or converted to a Bag & Save store is a decision still being considered at the Furr's headquarter offices in Lubbock, said Kenneth Mangus, district manager, this morning.

A hand-lettered sign posted in the window of the Gibson's store near the front entrance announced that, "Beginning Feb.1, we will have a clearance sale on all non-food items."

The sign further stated that "we will no longer have market, produce or grocery items for sale. Please shop Furr's, 1613 West County Road, or Bag N Save, 7504 W. University, for your grocery needs."

Gibson's Pharmacy and records have been moved to the Furr's West County Road store.

As of Tuesday, shelves containing food items were being stripped. All meat, produce and dairy products had been moved to the West County Road Furr's.

When the store opened this morning, the only items remaining for sale were non-food items, such as hardware, cosmetics and linens, etc. First-day discounts were supposed to be 30 percent, with the discount increasing to 50 percent beginning Thursday.

Furr's Inc. bought the financially troubled Gibson's discount stores after the chain's Midland store had been closed. The Furr's management closed the Grandview Avenue Gibson's store in May 1988 and transferred the pharmacy to the Furr's store near the intersection of East University Boulevard and North Grandview Avenue.

According to Mangus, the West County Road Gibson's store employed about 38 people. Some will be transferred to other stores operated by Furr's in the Odessa area. Others are expected to be rehired as openings become available.

Gas producers see prime decontrol opportunity

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Local gas producers and others in the natural gas industry are preparing for what many consider to be a prime opportunity to decontrol the last 30-40 percent of domestic gas.

Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Indiana, has indicated that he is interested in sponsoring a bill that will remove remaining controls on wellhead gas prices, under certain circumstances, according to Midland gas consultant Robert K. Anderson.

Among the conditions Sharp has set on his involvement with a decontrol bill are that the bill have industry consensus behind it and that the bill be as simple as possible.

Anderson is skeptical that true industry consensus can be reached. "I don't know if it ever has been. But the perception of a consensus is what we need.

"Even on repeal of the Fuel Use Act, where there was perceived agreement within the industry; there were corners of the industry — cogenerators, for example, who are part of our industry — who had reason to oppose the repeal," Anderson said.

"Whether we reach consensus or not, I'd say we have about a 50-50 shot of convincing Congress that we have."

As chairman of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's natural gas issues committee, Anderson has recommended that the organization back Rep. Sharp's efforts.

Craddick plans gas bill

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland said Tuesday he is ready to introduce a bill designed to give producers tax relief on gas being routed into "suspense accounts" by pipeline companies.

The proposed bill originated with the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and other local producers concerned with having to pay the 7½ percent state severance tax on Texas gas production within 30 days of its being produced, whether it has been sold or not.

The problem has grown in recent months because of growing volumes of gas being assigned to "YY and U" accounts by El Paso Natural Gas Co., the major westbound pipeline for Permian Basin producers.

Gas assigned to those accounts is not sold — title has not been transferred and it has not been paid for. However, existing provisions of the state Tax Code require that severance taxes be paid on the gas within 30 days of the time it is taken from the ground.

The bill Craddick expects to introduce early next week, was drafted by the natural gas and state regulatory issues committees of the PBPA, and is currently undergoing final drafting in Austin, the local representative said.

Local gas producers attempted to alleviate the situation through administrative channels before the legislature convened, according to PBPA state regulatory committee chairman Hans Hansen.

However, State Comptroller Bob Bullock told the PBPA in a letter last month that granting severance tax relief cannot be done through administrative rule and that "a legislative solution" would be required.

As a remedy, the PBPA has proposed amending Chapter 201 of the Tax Code to allow for paying the severance tax within 30 days of the month in which the gas is sold, not to exceed 12 months from the time of production. That would ease the financial and administrative burdens associated with paying the tax and estimating the eventual market value of gas when it is finally sold, said PBPA gas committee chairman Robert K. Anderson.

The natural gas committee, along with the PBPA's legislative affairs committee have drafted as position paper backing the proposed bills, but insisting on three key issues:

- A specific implementation date — not at contract expiration — be included in the bill;
- Gas contract sanctity be maintained; and
- The bill does not address additional issues which could complicate its passage.

As a separate issue, the PBPA committees have determined in order for producers to enjoy the benefits of decontrolled prices if a bill were passed, that abandonment of the gas must be granted. To achieve this, the position paper calls for congressional ratification of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission Orders 451 and 490.

The PBPA's board of directors will vote on accepting the committees' report on Feb. 16.

Anderson, who is also president of the Natural Gas Producers Association, said he expects that group's board of directors to consider a similar position paper in the coming weeks.

Industry observers are giving Sharp's efforts a good chance of succeeding for a couple of reasons. One, as a long-standing opponent of deregulation efforts, Sharp — chairman of the Energy & Power Subcommittee of the House Energy & Commerce Committee and a non-producing state representative — appears to be above the partisan politics historically associated with decontrol bills.

Also, with the majority of gas decontrolled in 1987 without a fly-up in prices, there is less consumer fear and controversy surrounding the issue today, Anderson said.

Oil prices recoup some losses

From Staff and Wire Reports

Prices had declined Tuesday due to weather and other factors as investors awaited new statistics on domestic petroleum supplies.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the March contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 26 cents to close at $17.03 after falling 45 cents on Monday.

Among refined products, the February contract for unleaded gasoline lost 1.16 cents to settle at 47.72 cents a gallon, while domestic heating oil slumped 0.31 cent to a settlement price of 52.28 cents a gallon. The prices of other contract months also declined.

Traders said the reopening of the Alaska pipeline after a partial closing on Monday due to subfreezing temperatures, contributed to the drop in heating oil prices. Near-month contract prices had jumped on Monday as investors anticipated a surge in demand due to the partial shutdown as well as the blast of cold temperatures that hit the United States.

Heating oil and gasoline prices also lost ground as investors adjusted their positions on the last day of the February contract, analysts said.

Jim Fiedler, chief energy broker for E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc., said the decline in crude prices was due partly to technical corrections following several weeks of steadily rising prices since November's agreement by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Traders said they also anticipated a buildup in energy stocks when the American Petroleum Institute released its weekly report after the close of trading on Tuesday.

Strong dollar lowers gold prices

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mostly higher in light, early European trading today, and its strength pushed down gold prices, currency and bullion dealers said.

European currency dealers attributed the dollar's rise to comments by U.S. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan on Tuesday that current exchange rates were tolerable.

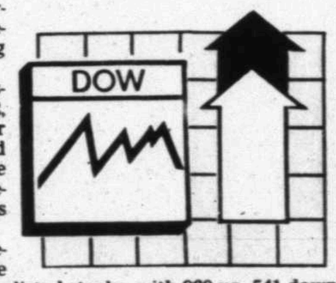

In Tokyo, the dollar surged 1.27 yen to a closing 130.40. Later, in London, it was quoted at 130.00 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $390.20 a troy ounce, down from $394.25 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $392.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.81 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.85.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 2-to-1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 960 up, 541 down and 493 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 194.05 million shares, up from 167.83 million in Monday's session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market rose $20.97 billion, or 0.72 percent, in value.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 2.08 to 401.30. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 323.02, up 1.14.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Six task forces to battle securities fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said six task forces have been created in major cities to combat "crime in the suites" by fighting against securities and commodities fraud.

The attorney general, flanked by U.S. attorneys from New York, Chicago and Kansas City, announced the creation Tuesday of six securities and commodities fraud units in those cities as well as in Los Angeles, Denver, and San Francisco.

The announcement came just weeks after disclosure that federal investigators in Chicago had conducted a two-year undercover operation that turned up widespread evidence of fraud by commodities futures traders at the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Convicted trader to return profits

NEW YORK (AP) — A former junior securities analyst convicted of insider trading in a major fraud scandal will pay back more than $127,000 in illegal profits under an agreement approved by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Richard Owen approved a final settlement Tuesday in which Stephen Wang, without admitting or denying wrongdoing, agreed to pay $127,585 to satisfy claims arising from his role in what the government has called one of the biggest inside trading frauds in history.

Deductions on LBO debt gets qualified OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady gave a qualified endorsement to limiting tax deductions for interest payments on debt incurred in leveraged corporate buyouts, if the resulting revenue were used to reduce taxes on stock dividends.

"If you're going to make a change — and clearly we're not suggesting one — we would suggest that you look in the area of perhaps limiting interest deductions and using that money to give a break to corporate owners of stock," Brady told the House Ways and Means Committee on Tuesday.

Prices for produce, livestock higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers get for raw products began 1989 with a 1.4 percent increase from December to January and were up 12 percent from a year ago, the Agriculture Department said.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said Tuesday in its first price report of the year that higher prices for cattle, hogs, tomatoes and wheat were partly offset by lower prices for strawberries, grapefruit, peanuts and oranges.

Business leaders like, fear foreign investment

NEW YORK (AP) — Foreign investment in the United States helps the economy, creates jobs and increases U.S. productive capacity, a majority of corporate leaders said in a survey.

But one in five of those responding said the current acceleration in foreign investment threatens U.S. social and cultural foundations, said the survey released Tuesday by the accounting and consulting firm Touche Ross & Co.

Sandwich shop nears completion

By MELLA McEWEN

Progress continues on the new SUBWAY SANDWICHES & SALADS, expected to open in Midland Park Mall in just over a week.

The restaurant will feature a variety of sandwiches, from meatball, ham and cheese, roast beef to tuna to a cold cut combo featuring three kinds of turkey meat. In a concession to the Southwest, there will also be a fajita sandwich. The sandwiches come on wheat or white bread. Salads range from an antipasto said to a subway chef to turkey breast salad.

Franchise owner Kennen Lamb, who comes to Midland from Lubbock, said Midland seemed to be an attractive location for the restaurant. He owns a different franchise in Lubbock and says Connecticut-based Subway's strong performance attracted him. Subway has been ranked the top fast food franchise, the fastest growing franchise of any type, and was ranked first out of the nation's top 500 franchises by "Entrepreneur" magazine.

After 30 years with Knorr Furniture, interior designer Mack Thomas has struck out on his own, opening MACK THOMAS INTERIORS in the Colonnade at Polo Park, Loop 250 and Garfield.

"I want to bring the unusual to Midland," he said. He carries Fortuny fabrics and is the exclusive carrier of Karaston carpets for Midland and Odessa. He is also participating in a pilot program for Drexel Heritage, handling their furniture as a designer, which allows him to pass savings along to his clients.

Though he has a number of decorator items such as pillows, prints and vases in his shop, Thomas says 90 percent of his business is special order. "I want to work for young people without a large budget as well as those with a large budget."

DR. RANDELL BELL, D.D.S., is preparing to move to his new location in the medical complex at 2400 W. Illinois.

Bell and his staff will move over the week-end and open Tuesday. As a result of the move, they will have a new phone number: 687-0041.

The economic outlook for Albertson's Inc., the supermarket chain which has two locations in Midland, appears bright, according to company reports.

The chairman of the stores says sales and earnings over the next five years are expected to double.

Speaking at the dedication of a new 550,000 square foot warehouse in Gresham, Idaho, Warren E. McCain, company chairman and chief executive officer, said all gains will be within the chain's existing 17-state operations. He said sales for the year will total $6.7 billion, up 14 percent from $5.87 billion last year.

Clements: Tax hike would hurt economic improvements

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements stressed cooperation rather than confrontation in his final "State of the State" address to the Texas Legislature Tuesday.

But while the 71-year-old Republican governor said he was willing to work with the Democratic Legislature on major issues such as education, economic development and criminal justice, he also ruled out any tax increase, or continuation of more than $500 million worth of temporary taxes that are due to expire in September.

Creation of jobs remains his top priority, Clements said, as he noted that 329,000 more Texans were working now than two years ago, and unemployment has dropped 2.5 percentage points since December 1986, to 6.2 percent. "We can and we will do better," he said, but another tax increase would hurt that effort.

In other economic development suggestions, he endorsed a tax exemption for goods in transit and accelerated phase-out of sales taxes on machinery and equipment, while he would establish funds for rural economic development, export loans, new product development and workforce development incentives.

The main feature of his education plan would reward school districts for progress in student performance as well as drug and alcohol abuse programs and dropout intervention.

He drew applause when he said the state did not "dodge the bullet" when an appellate court decision upheld the state school financing system as constitutional, but it "reaffirms our responsibility to focus directly on the issue."

On criminal justice, Clements called for adding 11,000 more beds for state prisons, financing the construction with bonds, but he also said the state should pursue alternative measures such as "boot camps" for youthful offenders, alternative sanction centers for technical parole violators and increased use of intensive supervision in parole and probation.

STATE

To increase efficiency, he proposed merging the Department of Public Safety and the Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education into a Department of Law Enforcement and five agencies dealing with corrections into a new Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Other agencies also could be merged, he said, such as the current Department of Highways and Public Transportation and the Texas Aeronautics Commission into a Department of Transportation. He also proposed a Texas Finance Commission to oversee the banking, savings and loan and consumer credit industries and the establishment of uniform accounting and payroll procedures for all state agencies.

In addition to endorsing the proposed merger of South Texas universities with the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems, he said the Legislature should consider giving boards of regents the authority to set tuition at their respective institutions.

He supported the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board's $36 million request to pay for remedial instruction for incoming college freshmen who fail in a basic skills exam, starting next fall.

There is room for bipartisan negotiation on the budget, starting with the Legislative Budget Board's $25.5 billion proposal for general revenues, but he added, "We must live within available revenue."

Use of bonds to pay for prison construction would free $200 million for other programs, such as education and health care, he said.

There was a "strong possibility" that a portion of $1.5 billion set aside for pending lawsuits could be used for general revenue, along with other "innovative accounting changes" Comptroller Bob Bullock has proposed in lieu of additional taxes, as he reaffirmed his opposition to any more taxes, he said.

"I thought it was a positive speech," said Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, chairman of the House Republican Caucus and a member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee. "We have to look at the development of the state's economy and hold the line on taxes."

There were no major surprises in the speech, Craddick said, but the tone was indicative of a willingness to work with the lawmakers.

"I think he's been more willing to listen all during the interim," he said. "The governor has been real loose this session. He's just been firm that he's not going to do another tax bill."

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said the budget-writing committee will continue looking at alternatives to the issuance of long-term revenue bonds to pay for prison construction, adding that he does not believe a majority of House members would support the bonds.

"Today I would say no," he said. But he added, "If the speaker puts his weight behind it, you've got a majority."

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, a member of the Appropriations Committee, was hopeful Clements would keep working with the Legislature.

"We're just going to have to make appropriations with existing funds and then hopefully there will be additional funds where we can add to higher education and some of those other programs," he said.

Constituents' answer to pay raise is tea bags, scathing letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen are finding tea bags and scathing letters in their mail as they answer House Speaker Jim Wright's poll on whether they really want to vote on a $45,500 pay raise.

Until Tuesday, Wright and other House Democratic leaders had indicated there would be no House vote on the 50 percent pay raise before Feb. 8, meaning it would take effect automatically and boost their salaries from $89,500 to $135,000.

But now Wright is seeking the advice of House members, asking them to "Tell me how you really feel," and promising to be faithful to their wishes while keeping the answers confidential.

"Sure he's feeling the pressure, sure he's feeling the heat," says Rep. Ralph Hall, a Rockwall Democrat who has signed on to seven bills against the pay raise. "He's a speaker, he's a Texas speaker, and he's been a friend of mine for over 50 years. I don't think he ought to fade all the heat. He might as well give us a vote and that would take the heat off of him."

■ Related story — 4D

"It's no time for a pay raise," says Hall, whose mail is running nine to one against the raise.

Hall said it would be "poetic justice" in the eyes of the people in his district if Congress lets the pay raise take effect, then bans honoraria, worth up to $26,850 to the House rank and file, and then rescinds the pay raise. That would leave congressmen who accept speaking fees earning less than when the furor over the pay raise started.

The storm of controversy started when a presidential commission recommended the pay raises and former president Ronald Reagan endorsed the package.

A Democratic staffer who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wright's poll has created a firestorm for members who had been outspoken in favor of the raise.

"They can't put the phones down," the staffer said. "It has created a tumult." Staff in some offices are "going banshee."

Several Texas Democrats, including Reps. Martin Frost and John Bryant of Dallas and Charlie Stenholm of Stamford, said they were pleased to see the speaker's poll. All agree the 50 percent increase is excessive.

"I think he wants to know what people's true feelings are and I think he's getting mixed signals from the membership," Bryant said. "His role in this has been one of attempting to do what's right for the institution. He's been getting so much conflicting advice he wants an honest statement from each member."

"There's going to be a vote. There is no way to avoid a vote on this issue," predicted Stenholm. "We can run but we can't hide. I don't want to do either."

Frost said Wright has been taking "all the criticism" but with the poll "he'll be able to find out for certain what a majority wants."

Frost says he's getting "a fair amount" of mail and the sentiments are intense and strongly expressed. There's been a tea bag or two, too.

Rep. Dick Armey, a Copper Canyon Republican, has received about 1,000 letters — 98 percent against the raise — and as many as 60 tea bags protesting taxation without representation — and pay raises without votes.

"I'll be glad when it's over," Stenholm said. "I'm ready to get on with dealing with the problems of the country. This has superceded and overshadowed everything to this point, so as soon as we get this away from us, the better."

STATE IN BRIEF

Woman has quadruplets

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A set of quadruplets has been born to a couple who fought a nine-year bout of infertility and fulfilled their wish of having a large family.

The healthy children — two boys and two girls — were delivered by Caesarean section over a two-hour span at Northeast Baptist Hospital Monday.

The babies were conceived by Nancy Quimbaya, 30, and Duberlay Quimbaya, 32, with the help of a fertility-enhancing procedure at Methodist Hospital. Even then, the likelihood of such a quadruple birth was estimated at no better than one in 100,000.

The quadruplet delivery is only the third delivery of its kind in Bexar County in 14 years.

The babies are Duberlay Jr., 5 pounds 5 ounces; Isabel, 4 pounds 4 ounces; Maribel, 3 pounds 8 ounces; and Ancizar, 4 pounds 5 ounces.

Although they were born 1½ months prematurely, only Duberlay Jr. required assistance with oxygen because of a minor problem with breathing, said Dr. Marilyn Vanover, who led the operating team. The infants will go home in about three weeks.

$4 million given to school

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Smith College officials said a $4 million gift they received from a Texas couple is the largest cash donation in the history of the 118-year-old women's college.

The donation from Anne Thaxton Bass, a Smith graduate, and her husband, Robert Bass, of Fort Worth, Texas, will be used to help finance an $18.5 million renovation and expansion of the college's science center, officials said.

"It's super, and they are the kind of people who understand the need to boost people in the pipeline," Elizabeth Ivey, a physics professor, said Monday.

"We think it's important that Smith is taking a leadership role in providing significant opportunities for women in science," Mrs. Bass, who majored in art history at the college, said in a prepared statement.

She is a trustee of the World Wildlife Fund/Conservation Foundation and the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History.

Her husband is an investor and founder of the Robert M. Bass Group.

Cases of rabies rising

EDINBURG (AP) — A rabies outbreak in Hidalgo County is outpacing stray animal control, so the top health official has advised rural residents to shoot and bury suspected rabid animals invading their property.

Dr. Charles Wilson, county health director, said Monday he recently recommended that a woman shoot what she feared was a rabid dog in her garage.

The Lower Rio Grande Valley county's 14th case of rabies in the past four months was confirmed Friday in a dead dog found in Alton, north of Mission, Wilson said.

He said his shoot-and-bury advice pertained only to residents of unincorporated areas who are unable to drive off threatening animals, in cases where no human exposure is involved.

The county has no means of providing animal control in rural areas, Wilson said.

Humane Society officials, however, said such advice could trigger the wholesale destruction of animals, including those that might help trace the spread of the rabies epizootic.

Doctor to visit Honduras

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. Mike McKinney plans to travel to Honduras next month as a medical missionary and unofficial representative of Texas.

The mission is voluntary and is in association with the Central America Medical and Dental Foundation Inc., according to a Tuesday statement. The foundation is a non-profit organization with the goal of providing volunteer medical, dental and optometric care to the needy people of Central America.

McKinney, D-Centerville, a physician, will render medical service while gaining first-hand knowledge of the problems people face in Honduras, the statement said.

Ads will praise state

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Commerce will spend $7 million this year for network television spots and print advertising of it's newest tourism campaign that touts the state as "a whole other country."

The ad campaign will be carried on the network affiliates beginning in mid-March, and on cable and regional stations early this month. The print ads will begin in March and April. The ad program started in April 1988.

"It's clear that many people still think of Texas as a desert with cowboys," said Bill Taylor, deputy director for advertising. "The new advertisements will be seen with frequency nationally, and they will help change our image and inform potential visitors of our many and varied enjoyable attributes."

Bill would halt bond sale

AUSTIN (AP) — A state legislator, protesting a $500 million bond sale, introduced a bill that would repeal the statute creating the Texas Water Resources Finance Authority.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Chrisit, on Tuesday said the sale of $500 million in revenue bonds by the Texas Water Resources Finance Authority "will be made without any public or legislative input."

Seventh graders using inhalants, report shows

AUSTIN (AP) — More seventh graders abuse inhalants than do high school seniors, who most often drink beer, according to a report on alcohol and drug abuse by Texas secondary school students.

The report, issued by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, says a survey of seventh graders showed 28 percent used inhalants, compared with 17 percent of high school seniors.

The report also said of those seventh graders, 31 percent reported their first use at age 10 or younger.

But, the commission also found that more than 60 percent of Texas students have never used any illegal substance.

These and other findings were presented at a meeting Tuesday of health and human services, education and criminal justice agencies the commission called together "to address the myriad of needs brought to light" by the report.

"The data from this historic youth survey holds powerful implications," said Bob Dickerson, executive director of the commission.

He said the survey results "call for coordination among not only the chemical dependency and education fields, but among all other systems in Texas" affected "by this generation."

The report says 12 percent of high school seniors have attended school while drunk at least once during the past year, and that seniors who drink consume an average of 41 alcoholic beverages per month, 31 of which were beers.

Seventy-six percent of all Texas secondary school students and 86 percent of seniors have used alcohol, with 43 percent reporting use in the last month, the study says.

The survey was conducted through voluntary interviews with students and was organized by the Texas Education Agency, Dickson said.

"If we can help them before they become adults, we will be making a crucial step in beginning to reduce the extent of substance abuse," Dickson said.

He added that "we should take heart" in knowing that a large percentage of students are not involved with drugs, according to the survey.

Dickson said the report was presented to the TEA, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the Texas Youth Commission and the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission.

Also included were the Texas Department of Corrections, the Texas Adult Probation Commission, the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, the governor's office, the Criminal Justice Division, and other statewide organizations.

Funeral plans interrupted by police raid

SOUTHLAKE (AP) — Gerald Andert says he and other grieving members of his family were planning his wife's funeral Monday when a bunch of armed men, wearing gas masks kicked in the front door of his daughter's home, waving guns and screaming as they stormed inside.

The armed intruders were Grapevine Police, Southlake Police and members of the Tarrant County Drug Task Force raiding the house because, police said, they suspected the home was being used as an amphetamine-manufacturing laboratory.

Andert suffered the wound, he said, when an officer he couldn't see struck him on the head with a nightstick after he stood up.

"I just stood up and raised my arms in the air, and he hit me," said Andert. "After he hit me, that's when I saw the silver pistol. He stuck it right in my face."

Grapevine Police spokesman Wayne Eichel said Andert was injured because he grabbed the pistol held by a Grapevine officer.

"I'm not going to call these folks a bunch of liars," Eichel said. "All we're going to say is that the reason this man got injured was that he made an attempt to grab the weapon from the officer."

"They had gas masks on and shields. They were pointing guns at the little kids and screaming," Andert said. "It only dawned on us later that this was a raid."

Andert said he plans to file suit against Southlake officials.

"I don't plan to let this thing go," he said.

"No drug lab was found, no arrests were made," Southlake City Manager Curtis Hawk said Tuesday.

"As a standard procedure, we are in the process of conducting a post-operation critique," Hawk said. "Until that critique is completed, it would be inappropriate for me to say anything more..."

Kevin Lealos, 35, Andert's son-in-law, said that police told him they had smelled a pungent odor coming from the house, owned by his wife, Jerri, earlier Monday while investigating a burglary at a nearby house.

"The door's open all day, kids riding in the yard, 'House for sale' sign in the yard — I mean, these people just cannot have been thinking very well," Lealos said.

Saying only that the raid was "based on police intelligence," Hawk declined to elaborate.

Andert and Lealos said the raid occurred as family members were planning a funeral for Andert's wife, Marie, 62, who died Saturday after a three-year bout with cancer.

Lealos said the officers pointed guns at everybody, including his 8-year-old son and 13-year-old daughter.

"I told the guy when we were lying there that we had just lost our mother, and they said, 'Shut up,'" Lealos said.

Andert and Lealos also said police did not identify themselves when they started the raid.

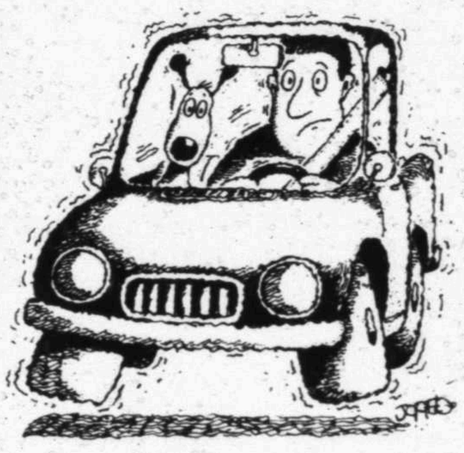

Eichel said the police identified themselves when they ordered the family members to lie down. He also said that Grapevine SWAT team uniforms say "Police" on the right front and have shoulder patches on both shoulders, and that the clear shields carried by SWAT team members say "Police" in red letters.

Worth a thousand words

Text by LINDA ANDERSON

Thanks to good old American ingenuity — not to mention marketing techniques — many of our more favorite advertising symbols are recognizable on their own, even when the names of the products they represent are nowhere in sight.

For example, who would fail to recognize the chubby-cheeked, apron- and chef's hat-wearing Campbell's kids? Celebrating their 85th birthday this year, the kids were first drawn in 1904 by Philadelphia artist Grace Drayton, who was quoted in a 1926 interview for Hal Morgan's "Symbols of America" as saying she modeled the kids' faces after her own: "I used to look in the mirror and then with a pencil in my round, chubby fingers, I would sketch my image as I remembered it. My playmates were always delighted with the results — and they always recognized me."

Of course, since the turn of the century, health professionals have determined that fat children are not always healthy children, so in 1966 the Campbell's kids lost a lot of weight.

Today they are depicted playing soccer and basketball, and doing gymnastics on the labels of different soup cans. Their bodies may be more slender and their activities more athletic than they were in 1904, but the faces are still the same.

Another popular advertising cherub is the Gerber baby. Found on various boxes, jars and bottles of Gerber baby food products, this infant is the picture of precious babyhood. The Gerber baby was a real baby, according to a representative of the company, and the original picture drawn in 1928 is the same one that is still in use.

The baby, Ann Turner Cook, is now a retired school teacher and mother of four grown children who lives in Florida.

"The artist was Dorothy Hope Smith," the company representative said. "She did an unfinished charcoal sketch of the neighbor's baby." The company liked it so much "they decided to leave it unfinished."

This baby "has appeared on every Gerber package and every Gerber ad" since it became the company's official trademark in 1931.

ANOTHER FAMILIAR personality that became a company symbol in the '30s is Elsie the Cow, whose likeness has graced Borden Milk Co. products for more than 50 years.

Elsie's image was born May 11, 1936, in New York City's Macy's Department Store, said Raymond Sessom, branch manager for Borden's in Midland. "She was sort of a mannequin display," he said. "The live Elsie did not come along until a few years later." Elsie still makes personal appearances across the country, but the company "usually replaces her every few years to keep her looking the same. She's a Guernsey. They are rich milk producers."

The cartoon drawing of Elsie began appearing on Borden's cartons a year or two after she made her first appearance in Macy's, he said, and her family members have been added gradually over the years. Today her husband, Elmer, lends his name and face to Borden's line of school glue products.

Elsie actually has some round-about roots with Texas, even though neither she nor the company she represents are Texan. The Borden Company was founded in 1857, Sessom said, by Gail Borden, who was "the first newspaperman in the state of Texas. ... He covered the Alamo. ... I think he lived down around Galveston then."

Both Borden County and the town of Gail are named after Gail Borden, Sessom said, although he probably never visited the area. The Borden Milk Co. was founded after he left Texas and moved back north. "He invented condensed milk. ... His first contract was with the Union Army."

The Pillsbury Company is the home of two popular advertising characters — the Pillsbury dough-boy and the Jolly Green Giant.

"The dough-boy was created in 1965 ... for the refrigerated dough line," said Marlene Johnson, manager of product communication for Pillsbury. He is done in 3-dimensional format using a "specially constructed doll" and stop-action photography, she said.

"Over time, he has come to represent all Pillsbury products," she said, including some new microwave cakes and cookies.

THE JOLLY Green Giant began life in 1925 as the symbol of a company called the Minnesota Valley Canning Company, Ms. Johnson said. When the company decided to add peas to its line of canned goods, it imported a type of large, tasty pea from Europe and called the pea "the green giant."

The original green giant, which was used to represent the giant green peas the company canned, was not the pleasant character he is today, Ms. Johnson said, but rather he was hunched and ugly.

Eventually the giant was made more attractive by being stood up straight, colored green all over, and given a leaf suit and a smile. "In 1950 the Minnesota Valley Canning Company became the Green Giant Company," she said; in 1961 the giant became the star of several television commercials, and "he was joined in 1973 by the Green Sprout. ... In 1979, Pillsbury acquired the Green Giant."

One of the newest — and undoubtedly one of the most popular — symbols represent themselves. The California Raisins, although found in other products including cereals, advertise the California raisin industry. The raisins wear tennis shoes and sunglasses, play musical instruments and incorporate a sense of humor in their promotions, such as sponsoring the mini-series "Fresno" a couple of years ago, which used the raisin industry to spoof prime-time television soap operas.

Other supermarket symbols with personalities of their own include the Kool-aid pitcher, the Quaker Oats Quaker, Aunt Jemima (see related story, Page 3C), Uncle Ben, Chef Boyardee, Tony the Tiger from Kellogg's, Charlie the Tuna, Morris the Cat and the Morton Salt girl.

Of course, not all easily-recognized corporate symbols are found in the grocery store.

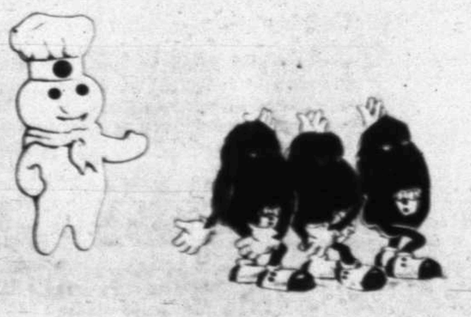

Perhaps one of the most famous symbols in the fast-food industry is the Golden Arches of the McDonald's fast-food chain. From a single hamburger stand in the '50s, McDonald's has grown to a corporation of thousands of fast-food restaurants in every state and several foreign countries. One wit, living in Alaska several years ago, said he knew civilization had arrived in Fairbanks when the first McDonald's was built.

THE BELL Telephone System's bell, Reddy Kilowatt of the electric company, and the walking fingers of the Yellow Pages are symbols of utilities and public conveniences.

Mercedes, BMW and Chevrolet are some of the most easily recognized symbols in the world of transportation (although the Mercedes' divided circle resembles the peace symbol made famous by the '60s generation). And for public transportation, few have not sen the Greyhound Bus Company greyhound, for those who want to leave the driving to somebody else.

And of course, the most famous American symbol is Uncle Sam, symbolizing the United States itself. Without him, would any of the other symbols exist?

Chicken versatile meat choice any time of year

By MELANIE BARNARD
and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

Chicken is far and away America's most often served main course. And why not? It is readily available, relatively inexpensive, generally light in fat, and comes in all sizes and guises.

In the summer we love simple barbecued chicken. In the spring, we enjoy the lightness of quickly cooked chicken breast cutlets or stir-fry. In the autumn we favor the fragrance of a whole chicken roasting in the oven. But in the dead of winter, hearty skillet chicken dishes fill the bill for many of our suppers.

Quick Brunswick Stew is a rustic dish originally featuring squirrel and other small game. Its origin is claimed by various Southern counties named Brunswick. Though the North Carolina citizens present a good case, Virginia has an equally credible claim. It seems most likely, however, that the forerunners of Brunswick Stew predated all of these Colonies since the Indians were known to often stew wild game and vegetables together.

This updated version is every bit as hearty as a country-style stew. We like it with mashed potatoes, noodles or biscuits for sopping up the juices. Add a green salad and the meal is complete.

Mole is a rich and complex Mexican sauce usually served with poultry. It was reputedly developed centuries ago by a group of nuns in an obscure convent who needed to prepare a last-minute meal for an unexpected visit from the bishop. We think this far simpler and quicker version would impress your unexpected guests, too. Serve it with plain white rice, buttered warm corn tortillas and orange sherbet for dessert.

Chicken cooked "on the bone" and with skin intact results in a most flavorful dish. However, in order to trim calories, pull off and discard any excess skin and fat on the chicken pieces before cooking.

For quickest cooking, a chicken cut into eight parts (two breast halves, two thighs, two drumsticks and two wings) is best. The butcher will cut the chicken for you and some supermarkets package a bird in this way. If you have room in your freezer, save the necks and back to make a simple chicken stock when you have accumulated four or five carcasses.

Don't crowd the skillet when browning chicken. If necessary, you can either do the job in two batches or, to save time, use two skillets, then combine the chicken in one skillet to complete the dish.

QUICK CHICKEN MOLE

1 tablespoon sesame seeds
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 pound boneless chicken thighs (4 thighs)
Salt and pepper to taste
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground coriander
1 (14- to 16-ounce) can tomatoes in juice
½ cup water or chicken stock
1 teaspoon sugar
½ ounce unsweetened chocolate, chopped

Preparation and cooking time: 35 minutes.

Toast sesame seeds by stirring in large skillet over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes until golden and fragrant. Remove from skillet and reserve.

In same large skillet, heat oil. Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Saute chicken over medium heat for 8 to 10 minutes, turning once or twice, until golden brown. Remove chicken from skillet and pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings.

Add onion to skillet and saute over medium-low heat for 4 minutes. Add garlic, chili powder, cinnamon and coriander and saute 1 minute, stirring. Stir in tomatoes, breaking up with side of spoon. Stir in chicken stock, sugar and chocolate. Bring to boil, then lower heat and simmer, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Return chicken and accumulated juices to skillet, spooning some sauce over chicken.

Simmer, partially covered, for 5 to 8 minutes until chicken is cooked through.

QUICK BRUNSWICK STEW

¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 frying chicken (about 3½ pounds) cut in 8 pieces
3 tablespoons butter
1 onion, thinly sliced
1 (14- to 16-ounce) can tomatoes in juice
½ cup water or chicken stock
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 cup frozen baby lima beans
1 cup fresh or frozen okra, trimmed and cut in ½-inch pieces
1 cup fresh or frozen corn kernels
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon Tabasco sauce or more to taste
1 tablespoon Madeira or sherry, optional

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation and cooking time: 45 minutes.

Combine flour, salt and pepper on a shallow plate. Dip chicken in seasoned flour to coat completely, then shake off excess.

Heat butter in large skillet (or use half of butter in each of 2 skillets, if necessary, to cook chicken without crowding) and brown chicken over medium heat for about 10 minutes, turning once or twice, until golden brown. Remove chicken from skillet. Pour off all but 3 tablespoons drippings from skillet.

Add onion to skillet and saute over medium-low heat for 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, water and thyme, breaking up tomatoes with side of spoon. Return chicken and any accumulated juices to skillet and spoon some liquid over chicken. Bring just to boil, then cover pan, lower heat and simmer 20 minutes.

Uncover and add lima beans and okra to skillet. Simmer, partially covered, for 12 minutes. Add corn and simmer 2 to 3 minutes until lima beans and okra are tender. Stir in Worcestershire, Tabasco and optional Madeira.

WHAT'S COOKING

Midlander Aunt Jemima's niece

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Pancakes are a popular food; so popular in fact that a National Pancake Week was designated to recognize the history and continuing popularity of pancakes. This year, the week is Feb. 5-11 and, according to Chase's Annual events, is sponsored by Bisquick Baking Mix, a part of General Mills Inc.

But Bisquick is not the only product associated with pancakes. In fact, Aunt Jemima and her pancakes, waffles and syrup are probably even more famous in the world of pancakes than Bisquick's mix. And Midland has a claim to fame concerning Aunt Jemima.

Although none of the women who portrayed Aunt Jemima for the Quaker Oats Company actually lived in Midland, the niece of the last woman to personify the company's trademark has called Midland home for over 35 years.

Mary Ann Pate of Midland is the niece of Rosie Lee Moore Hall — a native of Hearne, Texas — who represented the Quaker Oats Company as the last living persona of Aunt Jemima.

"I grew up with her in the same house," Mrs. Pate said.

Mrs. Pate lived with her grandparents, Ms. Hall and her aunts and uncles in the Pin Oak Community, between Hearne and Wheelock.

"I was 7 when Rosie married and left the house," Mrs. Pate said of Ms. Hall's marriage to Ollie Chambers. "She stayed on in the community awhile and then, when her marriage broke up, she left."

(Coincidentally, Chambers second wife, Sue Chambers, now lives in Midland.)

For 19 years, Ms. Hall lost contact with her family, during which time she made her way to Oklahoma City and was working for Quaker Oats in the advertising department, according to Insite magazine. While working there, she learned that the company was searching for a new Aunt Jemima. She applied and got the position.

"When she first told us she was Aunt Jemima, I though she was fibbing," Mrs. Pate said.

Many people believed that the face of Aunt Jemima on the pancake boxes was a composite drawing, similar to those of Betty Crocker, and currently it is. But originally, Aunt Jemima was a real live person used as a trademark. Nancy Green, Anna Robinson and several others assumed the role of Aunt Jemima prior to 1950 when Ms. Hall took over to continue the tradition.

Ms. Hall traveled the country, showing off her ability to make mouth-watering pancakes at state fairs, charity functions and anywhere else the Quaker Oats Company sent her.

As the oldest girl of 14 children, her annual visits home for Christmas were always exciting for her family. During these visits, she would talk about her experiences as Aunt Jemima and she would cook some of her famous pancakes for them.

"I moved to Oklahoma City around 1940 or '41 — when we were stationed at Tinker Air Force Base — for about two years," Mrs. Pate said. "I would cook for Auntie Rosie all the time. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, I would fix her hot water corn bread, collard greens and fried catfish."

Although Ms. Hall was often described as outgoing and jovial, Ms. Pate remembers her aunt as a very private person and a church-goer, "when she wasn't working."

"She made friends easily though," Mrs. Pate said. "She was bashful, but she came out of it after she left home (and began representing Aunt Jemima).

"She was about 5 foot 7 and had long, beautiful hair, down to her shoulders," Mrs. Pate said remembering her aunt.

"She loved to go fishing with her husband," Mrs. Pate said.

"I remember she used to love to go to the Indian Reservation, too. She had some friends there and she would take me where they made things like necklaces and jackets," Mrs. Pate said.

Ms. Hall's last visit to her hometown of Hearne was Christmas of 1966. Family members remember her as the picture of health.

However, in 1967, two months after her Christmas visit home, Ms. Hall suffered a fatal heart attack on her way to church. There was an elaborate funeral in Oklahoma and then she was returned to Hearne for another funeral and was buried without a grave marker in the family graveyard, Colony Cemetery, near Wheelock.

Ms. Hall's reign as Aunt Jemima is particularly significant because she was the last real person to represent the trademark.

In the 1960s, during the midst of the civil rights movement, there was a feeling that the design of Aunt Jemima was denigrating to blacks in general. Therefore, after Ms. Hall's death, the Quaker Oats Company stopped using real models as trademarks and resorted to an artist's conception of what a black woman who cooks pancakes should look like.

As a result, the new conception of Aunt Jemima lost over 100 pounds, became 40 years younger, got a new headdress and moved from the Higbee Plantation to New Orleans. Basically, Aunt Jemima was transformed into a savvy Creole cooking instructor instead of a caricature of a black mammy.

However, the black mammy image was what originally brought about the name Aunt Jemima. According to the article in Insite magazine, the original meaning of the name was coined during slavery when young white children were cared for by black slave mammies. When the children would call these women "mama," the women would reply, "ain't ya mama." The term survived the slave era and eventually became "Aunt Jemima."

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Mary Ann Pate

During the heyday of the Aunt Jemima promotions, the company distributed four million salt and pepper shakers, 200,000 plastic dolls, 150,000 cookie jars, more than one million plastic syrup pitchers and the coveted Aunt Jemima rag dolls, all of which are now considered collector's items.

As a keepsake of her aunt's fame as Aunt Jemima, Mrs. Pate has a small figure of Aunt Jemima, "from way back." She also cherishes a few old photographs of her "Auntie."

Because of her popularity in the Hearne community, she has not been forgotten. In fact, in May 1988, the Hearne Heritage League, operating under the auspices of the Robertson County Historical Commission, placed a grave-marker and a historical marker in the cemetery commemorating Ms. Hall's reign and her accomplishments as Aunt Jemima.

So in honor of Aunt Jemima and her famed pancakes, or in honor of Bisquick's National Pancake Week next week, the following are a few suggested recipes to celebrate with. Feb. 5-11 was selected for the week-long recognition to coincide with Shrove Tuesday — also known as Pancake Tuesday — a centuries-old custom of eating pancakes on the last feast day before the 40-day Lenten observance.

Stack three pancakes, spreading 1 tablespoon preserves between each layer; repeat five times. Top stacks with Fruity Maple Syrup. Six stacks.

NOTE: For No-cholesterol Peanut Butter and Jelly Pancakes Stacks, substitute skim milk for the milk and three egg whites or ½ cup frozen (thawed) cholesterol-free egg product for the eggs.

No adjustments are necessary for high altitude baking.

Pumpkin doughnuts sell like hotcakes

By LINDA LEE
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Around 2600 B.C., the Egyptians figured out how to make leavened bread. Making a great leap forward, the Dutch in the 16th century developed the "olykoek," or oily cake, a doughnut without a hole.

Moving closer to home, a Maine sea captain named Hanson Gregory, in 1847, punched a hole in his mother's dough to create the modern doughnut.

In the history of the Chatham (N.Y.) Bakery and Coffee Shop pumpkin doughnuts, nothing much happened after that until the fall of 1973, when Wally Steward, the owner, pulled a clipping out of a three-by-five box.

"It was a recipe for pumpkin doughnuts I'd found years before in an old bakery magazine," he said. "I fried up a few and they were real grease-laden, old-time sinkers.

"I made them for about six weeks and they didn't sell very well. So the next fall I started experimenting: a pinch of this and a pinch of that and a little bit of love."

By 1975, Steward was making 100 dozen of the moist, pumpkin-flavored doughnuts rolled in granulated cinnamon sugar. This fall he plans to make 4,300 dozen doughnuts over a 10-week season.

THIS DOES NOT mean that each of the 3,000 Chathamites eats a dozen doughnuts starting in early September, moving on through the traditional show of pumpkins at Halloween and ending with the deer hunting season in November.

Rather, weekenders and "leaf peepers" have found their way to the bakery on the corner of Route 66 and Route 203 in Columbia County, about 110 miles north of mid-Manhattan.

"People come through on their way to Vermont to watch the turning of the leaves," Steward said. "They'll come in looking for the doughnuts. If we're out, they'll be real disappointed. They'll say, 'We're coming back in two days, save some for us.' "

One man from Connecticut was buying a miniature horse from Steward's wife, Shirley, who breeds the horses at their farm in Ghent, N.Y. To guarantee that he could bag a large number of doughnuts in addition to his livestock purchase, the man scheduled his transaction during pumpkin doughnut season.

Then there are the people who call from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York City and ask bakery employees to put aside 10 dozen or so, at $3 a dozen, or 25 cents for one.

(The price was raised this year, from $2.40 a dozen, but Steward said the increase has not affected demand.)

Ten dozen doughnuts? "They're good keepers," Steward said. "And people freeze them. I have people call up at Easter time and tell me, 'We've just had our last pumpkin doughnut.' "

Steward, 59, started his working life as a teen-age farmer. Then, in 1949, he married Shirley Vail, a baker's daughter from Monroe, N.Y. His father-in-law, Steward said, was an old-fashioned baker who "trained me good: doughnuts, cream puffs, eclairs, cream pies."

THE STEWARDS moved to Chatham to start their bakery in 1959, and to their present location in 1972.

Steward starts mixing ingredients for his other bakery items — cinnamon bread, white bread, cakes, pies, buns and regular doughnuts — at 10 or 11 each night. From 1 a.m. to 3:30 a.m., he makes 70 to 80 dozen pumpkin doughnuts.

Jealously guarding the recipe, he allows only his eldest child, Jeffrey, 37, who owns the bakery with him, to help. ("I've had requests for the recipe, but I would not divulge it because there are bulk ingredients a housewife can't buy," Steward said mysteriously.)

He mixes the dough in an 80-quart mixing machine, but "the doughnuts are mostly handmade with a crank machine," he said. His fryer holds only 18 doughnuts at a time. "They are very frail," he said. "If I leave them in too long, they get greasy. I've got to be careful with them."

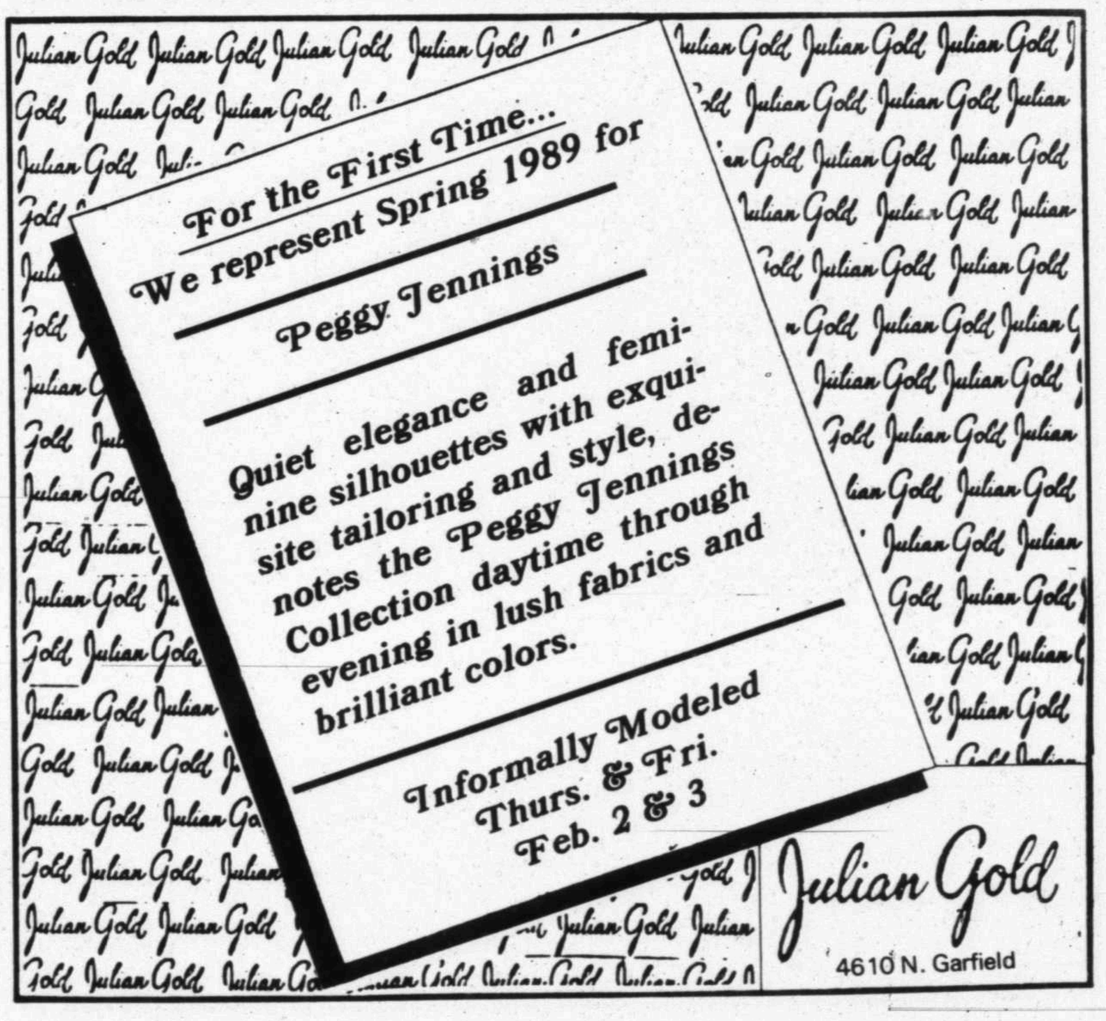

Late at night, when the bakery is otherwise closed, the local constabulary — members of the Chatham Police Department, the Columbia County Sheriff's Office and the New York State Police — stop by. "At night, if someone needs a cop, they'll call here," Steward said.

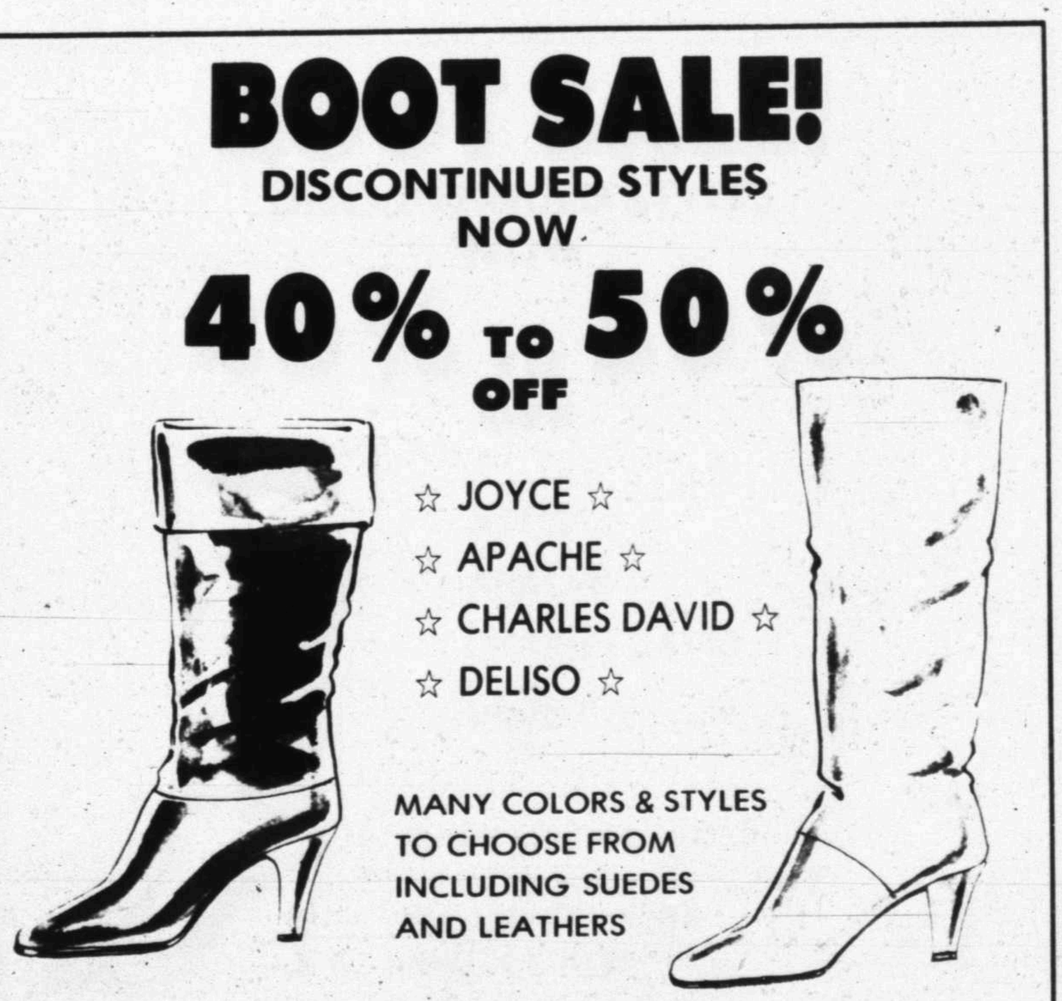

"They pay, too," he said. "They put money in a little box on top of the refrigerator. And they put more money in than if I was charging them."

Caught up in the manufacture of pumpkin donuts until early morning, Steward will not finish baking his other items until 6 or 7 a.m. The bakery opens at 5 a.m.

As much a sign of autumn in this upstate town as out-of-state license plates and hunters in red plaid jackets, the doughnuts will remain a seasonal item.

"I look forward to making pumpkin doughnuts," Steward said, "because I know it makes people happy. But if I made 'em all year long, people would get tired of 'em."

While studying romance languages in Europe, Timmy had won a place on his temporary home's Junior European Championship team. What's more, he was showing some signs of being a chip off the old block, as this hand shows.

West's three-club overcall promised a red two-suiter. North intended his double as a request to let him have the right of way, but Timmy interpreted it as showing club values; hence his jump to four spades based on presumed fillers for his side suit.

Ace of diamonds and another would have resulted in a one-trick set, since East must come to two more black-suit winners. The club lead, however, gave Timmy a chance he was quick to seize. He captured the queen with the ace and learned the bad news when he cashed the ace of trumps. He took dummy's three top hearts, discarding diamonds from hand, then ruffed a diamond as East discarded a club.

Now Timmy exited with a club. East won but, down to nothing but trumps, he had no choice about his exit card. Declarer's eight was good enough to win the trick, and he exited with another club. East was forced to ruff and lead away from his jack of trumps, allowing declarer to score his ten. In all, Timmy made six trump tricks, three hearts and the ace of clubs for his contract.

Death reveals jazz man was woman

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Billy Tipton lived his life as a man, performing as a jazz musician, appearing to have a wife and adopting three sons. But his death at age 74 revealed to fans, friends and family that Billy Tipton was a woman.

Donald Ball, director of Ball & Dodd Funeral Home, said Tuesday that Tipton, who died this month of a bleeding ulcer, was a woman.

Ball said he privately informed Jon Clark, one of Tipton's adopted sons, that his "father" was really female so Clark would not have to learn it from the death certificate.

"I was just trying to break it to him gently," Ball told The Associated Press on Tuesday night. "I just didn't want him to find out in a public office. It's been a very difficult thing to handle."

The Spokane County coroner was not available Tuesday for comment, the coroner's office said.

"I'm just lost," Clark told the Spokesman-Review newspaper. He said he learned the truth last Wednesday, four days after Tipton's death.

"No one knew," said Kitty Oakes, the woman that Tipton had said he married in 1960. Ms. Oakes, who separated from Tipton 10 years ago, refused to talk about her life with Tipton, saying he died with the secret and that should be respected.

"The real story about Billy Tipton doesn't have anything to do with gender. He was a fantastic, almost marvelous, and generous person," she said.

"He'll always be Dad," Clark said. "But I think that he should have left something behind for us, something that would have explained the truth."

Ms. Oakes told funeral directors that Tipton was born Dec. 29, 1914, in Oklahoma City and was raised in Kansas City, Mo.

The newspaper said Tipton apparently began appearing as a man to enhance his chances of success as a jazz musician.

Tipton, a saxophone and piano player, performed with the Jack Teagarden, Russ Carlyle and Scott Cameron bands, then formed the Billy Tipton Trio in the 1950s and played nightclubs throughout the West.

Dick O'Neil, who played drums with the trio for 10 years, recalled some listeners made cracks that Tipton, with a baby face and a high singing voice, looked too feminine to be a man.

"But I would almost fight anybody who said that," O'Neil said. "I never suspected a thing."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Cybill Shepherd and her husband have separated after two years of marriage.

Miss Shepherd, who plays the witty detective Maddie Hayes on TV's "Moonlighting," and Bruce Oppenheim, a chiropractor, were married March 1, 1987. They have year-old twins, Ariel and Zachariah.

The separation was announced Tuesday by Miss Shepherd's publicist, Cheryl Kagen. No reason for the separation was given. Ms. Kagen said the custody of the children wasn't being disclosed.

Miss Shepherd, 39, lives in Los Angeles and has custody of her 9-year-old daughter, Clementine, from a previous marriage.

The model-turned-actress appears with Ryan O'Neal in the movie "Chances Are," due for release March 10.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Clint Eastwood, who won a Golden Globe for best director, isn't among the nominees announced for the prestigious Directors Guild of America achievement award.

Their nominations mark the five directors as favorites for Academy Awards in March. Only three times in motion picture history has the DGA award winner failed to go on to win the Oscar for best director.

The nominees are: Alan Parker, for the civil rights saga "Mississippi Burning"; Charles Crichton for the crime-caper comedy "A Fish Called Wanda"; Barry Levinson for the brotherly love story "Rain Man"; Robert Zemeckis for the semi-animated detective spoof "Who Framed Roger Rabbit"; and Mike Nichols, for the corporate comedy "Working Girl."

"I was hoping Clint Eastwood would be nominated this year, but (his film 'Bird') wasn't," said Steven Spielberg, who announced the nominations Tuesday. "I thought 'Bird' was an outstanding directorial accomplishment."

The winner will be announced March 11. All 9,000 guild members were eligible to vote on the nominations, and all are eligible to vote for the winner. The guild includes film and television directors and their assistants.

The little girl who sang "Tomorrow" in the show from 1977 to 1978 is now 25 years old and appearing in "Singin' In The Rain," at the Claridge Casino Hotel.

"I don't think anybody would be lying if they said they were tired of the vehicle that started their recognition," she said. "I don't know anybody who's bitter about the thing that made them a hit."

She said it's nice to know she's old enough that she'll never again be asked to play "Annie."

"I don't feel any different really," she said. "I'd like to say I'm more mature, but I guess I'm not."

She is married to record producer Edd Kalehoff, and they have a 5½-month-old daughter, Alexis Paige Kalehoff.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television producer George Schlatter, creator of "Laugh-In" and "Real People," was honored with a sidewalk star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Dudley Moore, Sarah Purcell and Dinah Shore were among 250 people standing in front of the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel on Tuesday to witness the unveiling of the walk's 1,885th star.

"George has eluded his keepers for years," quipped Miss Shore, whose "Dinah Shore Chevy Show" was produced by Schlatter.

Throughout his career as a producer, director and writer, Schlatter has been responsible for more than 1,000 hours of television.

Early Southern cooking developed by women, blacks

By NATHALIE DUPREE
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Southern cooking was developed by women and blacks as their only creative outlet in a society dominated by white men. It is fitting that two Southern women, one the descendant of a slave and the other a descendant of Margaret Mitchell's grandmother, have written books that set a new standard for the South. Both are strong, silent women who learned survival through food.

Years before I met Margaret Lupo, I would eat at her Southern restaurant — Mary Mac's — when I yearned for home cooking after teaching puff pastry all day at Rich's Cooking School.

I started taking visiting food writers there in the late 1970s to hear their rave reviews, and I've been going there steadily ever since. Her food soars with flavor, yet meets the pocketbook of the more than 1,000 people who depend on her to nurture them daily with the food they love.

She's an indomitable woman, a descendant of the Fitzgerald women described so well by Margaret Mitchell, particularly in the scene when the gypsy foretells that all the men will die young. She was raised by her mother; her father died when she was 3. Her homeplace was the Fitzgerald home, after which Tara was patterned.

Margaret was also the first Atlanta restaurateur to start taking traditional Southern cooking and turning it into New Southern cooking in a responsible way, with the flavor of the South and the calories of the '80s.

She cooks her turnip greens in chicken stock now, rather than with fat back or streak-o-lean. That doesn't mean she's given up fried okra or biscuits, of course, or that you won't find corn bread on her table and in her recipes.

She's just found the perfect combination of old and new, with her inimitable down-to-earth style, and that mental recognition that comes from understanding a cuisine and its changes. People who love the South won't want to miss Margaret Lupo's "Southern Cooking from Mary Mac's Tea Room" (Dell Publishing, $9.95).

Nor will they want to miss the book of another top woman restaurateur. Edna Lewis, author of "In Pursuit of Flavor" (Alfred A. Knopf, $18.95), is a good match for Mrs. Lupo. Edna, like Margaret, is a shy, unassuming lady. Now chef of a New York restaurant, she is bringing to it the flavors she grew up with as a small child in Freetown, Va., where her grandfather moved with several former slaves to start a community. Edna's book incorporates foods and ideas as old as time and as young as the flavor of fresh herbs.

It's interesting to contrast the flavors and styles of these women, and to see the way they interweave flavors and food, thumb their noses at fads but make sure their food tastes good. If you want to know what the South is about, read these books.

MARGARET LUPO'S CORN PONES
1 cup yellow cornmeal
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
2 teaspoons melted fat

Mix together 1 cup yellow cornmeal and ½ teaspoon salt and add 1 cup boiling water. Shape into 3 pones (small ovals) and place on hot greased skillet. Brush well with 2 teaspoons melted fat. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Bake for about 20 minutes.

From Margaret Lupo's "Southern Cooking from Mary Mac's Tea Room."

EDNA LEWIS'S WATERCRESS SOUP
3 bunches watercress
6 cups chicken stock
½ cup finely chopped onion
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1½ cups heavy cream (not ultrapasteurized)
Unsweetened whipped cream

Open the watercress bunches and wash with lots of water. Drain well, and set aside 2 cups of the leaves. Chop the whole watercress coarsely, then chop the leaves. Put the chicken stock in a 4-quart pot and heat. Add the chopped whole cress and onion, and simmer for about 15 minutes. Strain the soup and discard the watercress and onion. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and add the heavy cream and the reserved chopped leaves. Mix well and set aside until ready to serve. When ready to serve, reheat without boiling. Garnish each bowl with a teaspoon of unsweetened whipped cream and serve.

From Edna Lewis's "In Pursuit of Flavor."

Donate dollars to charity carefully

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know what I want for Christmas next year: a bigger mailbox. Never have I received so many begging letters. I would also like to know if all these "causes" are on the up and up. How does one know? I am familiar with the usual ones for cancer, diabetes, kidney, heart and lung but now we have so many new causes — help the starving children in Asia and Africa, for instance.

There also are needy nuns, homeless people sleeping on our streets, and catastrophes in other parts of the world, such as the earthquake in Armenia.

I know the need is legitimate, but how much of my dollar will actually go to help the victims? And how much will be spent on office expenses and advertising to raise money? — BLITZED IN BOSTON

DEAR BLITZED: Before you send any money anywhere, if your only contact with the charity has been through a telephone call, a solicitor on the street, or a radio or TV appeal, ask for information in writing.

Look for: A clear statement of the organization's purpose, what it does and for whom; an audited financial report that shows how much was spent on each of the organization's main activities, plus management and fund-raising; a list of board members or trustees, preferably with some identifying information about each. (All this information should be in the organization's annual report.)

When you give, if possible, make your gift by check or money order. This will help both you and the charity to maintain an accurate record of your gift.

Be sure to get a receipt for cash and do not give your credit card number to a solicitor whom you do not know.

Up to three reports on individual agencies are available free on request by writing to: National Charities Information Bureau, 19 Union Square West, New York, N.Y. 10003-3395. This is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long (business-size), self-addressed stamped envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I have another point of view concerning whether or not to tell a person that he or she has a terminal illness.

I have been an ambulance operator for 14 years and have transported hundreds of patients to clinics for their appointments.

Quite often I have been met at the door by family members who will confide that the patient has a terminal illness, then they instruct me to please not mention it because they do not want the patient to know.

Then when the patient and I are alone for a few minutes, the patient will say, "Please don't tell my family that I know I have a terminal illness." — GERALD E. CHILDS, TORONTO

DEAR GERALD: What a sad and useless game that is. I'm sure that many who read this will have played that game. I know; my sisters and I have.

DEAR ABBY: Why are some people so inconsiderate of baby sitters? Do they really think young people have unlimited free time and no feelings?

I wish I had a dime for every time my 16-year-old daughter has been called at the last minute to be told, "We changed our minds; we're not going out after all, so you don't need to come."

Don't they realize that she may have had an opportunity to do something else, but she saved the time to baby-sit in order to make a little spending money?

Another thing that upsets me is when parents provide something to eat for their children, but nothing for the sitter who will be sitting during the dinner hour.

Baby sitting is hard work, and these young poeple need respect as well as money. Parents would be in a tough spot without sitters. I sure wish they treated them better. — A SITTER'S MOM

DEAR MOM: When sitters politely refuse to tolerate such inconsiderate treatment, the situation will change. And not until. As the saying goes, "The squeaky wheel gets the grease."

DEAR ABBY: If you can stand one more letter about how little attention some doctors pay to their patients, please consider this:

Some years ago, my sister's mother-in-law wasn't feeling well, so she went to her doctor. After he examined her, he said, "Well, the first thing you need to do is have all your teeth taken out," so she took her teeth out — both upper and lower plates — and laid them on his desk. — TRUE STORY FROM FRANKFORT, KY.

East famous for johnnycakes

By MAUREEN CLANCY
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

ADAMSVILLE, R.I. — The scene is straight out of "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

There is a weather-beaten, gray-shingled cottage, a millpond where ducks drift lazily and unkempt acres of autumn-hued trees.

Then there's a tall, gawky, baby-faced lad dressed in tattered blue work shirt, suspenders and high-laced boots, riding an old bicycle and looking, for all the world, like a Halloween apparition.

Tim McTague is perpetually enveloped in a heavy film of flour — from the top of his tousled, dark brown hair to the tip of his well-worn shoes. It mats around his hairline and eyebrows, forming a ghostly mask from which peep his wide, guileless brown eyes.

"People are ordering our johnnycake meal from everywhere," says the 30-year-old miller with the enthusiasm of a kid on Christmas morning. "It's really been outrageous."

Indeed, mail orders for the special cornmeal, made from Rhode Island white flint corn, are flowing in from all over the country, prompted by articles in publications ranging from Yankee Magazine to The New York Times.

WELL-KNOWN CHEFS such as Jasper White in Boston and Johanne Killeen and George Germont in Providence, R.I., not only feature johnnycakes, the light, airy pancakes for which Rhode Island is famed, but note on their menus that the cornmeal comes from Gray's Grist Mill.

McTague's success is, in part, a result of the nation's love affair with regional American food and in part a result of his own skill and commitment to excellence.

"Everything I know I learned from John Hart," says McTague of the 85-year-old gent who inherited the mill. (Hart married the granddaughter of Philip Gray, the man who bought the mill in 1880.) In the late 19th century, there were about 50 mills operating in this southeastern slip of Rhode Island. Most were used only by the village people, with the miller taking corn instead of money for his services. Gray's is the only village mill of the era that survived. (McTague says the original mill was built on the site in 1675.)

"Hart brought this mill into the 20th century," McTague says. "He kept it going out of the goodness of his heart. I don't think he ever made any money."

McTague's interpretation of "bringing the mill into the 20th century" must be taken with a grain of salt.

The picturesque cottage is little changed. Inside, a single large room, spare and clean, houses the two original granite millstones, brought from France and weighing a total of two tons. ("Originally, one was used for animal feed; one for food," explains McTague. "Of course, at this point I only use one, to grind people food.")

The cottage's original timbered ceilings are home to flour-filmed cobwebs; the pine floors are stained by time and traffic. Two beat-up bicycles, a few antique tools and some bins of grain are the room's only distractions, other than the captivating view of the Westport River from a tiny paned window.

ONLY THE METHODS of running the mill have changed over the years. For centuries, water from the millpond across the road turned the water wheel and gears that, in turn, turned the heavy stones. In the early 1950s, when the water power began to be unreliable (today, the pond is almost dry much of the year), Hart ingeniously parked a 1946 Dodge truck under the floorboards of the cottage and let the truck's motor turn a belt pulley, which ran the gears of the mill.

In 1980, Hart sold the mill to Ralph Guild, a New York City businessman who found McTague, a Canadian-American, restoring old houses in the area and took him as a partner.

The old Dodge is still going strong, though corroded and missing many parts. McTague climbs under the house each day to flip the car's ignition switch and start the gears that will grind his cornmeal and wheat and rye flours. (The corn, which McTague says has a richer, sweeter taste than regular corn, is specially grown and crib-dried for Gray's by a local farmer.)

McTague also packages a Brown Bread and Muffin Mix, made of corn, wheat and rye ground together, and a Pancake Mix that is the same blend with baking powder and a pinch of baking soda added.

McTague and johnnycakes may be on their way to becoming a household word in sophisticated gastronomic circles (the savory cornmeal cakes show up on menus in many restaurants), but McTague takes the fuss with typical Yankee calm.

"I'm still pretty much a one-man operation," says the man who grinds the flour, weighs it, packages it, sells it to walk-in business and wraps and ships it to mail-order customers.

HE ALSO TAKES great pleasure in doing business with the locals. "My biggest payoff of all is working with these guys who were born into the tradition," McTague says. "Abe Quick is 78 years old. He taught me how to grow the corn. When he shows up, I'm more than happy to do his custom grinding for him."

When the day's grinding is done, McTague sets out on his dilapidated Raleigh to deliver cornmeal and flour to a few local shops and to check the post office for his mail.

"This is my post-office express," he jokes, referring to the bicycle. "In a small New England village, you can't go around in a Datsun or Subaru."

Folks in Rhode Island take cornmeal and johnnycakes very seriously. And serious johnnycakes are always made with white flint corn that's been stone-ground, milk, water and a touch of salt and sugar. But there the agreement of local cooks ends.

Debate rages on the size of the cakes — plate-wide and paper-thin or pillowy, silver-dollar-size morsels.

"The people in South County pour boiling water on the meal, then make the johnnycakes (thick) like potato pancakes," explains McTague with a hint of disapproval. "In Newport County, we make them thin.... We don't like to scald all the pep out of the meal."

And the debate doesn't die down once the cakes are lifted from the traditional black iron skillet.

"Some people like syrup on them. In the old days, the locals mocked these people, saying you could tell a year-rounder from a summer person by whether or not he used syrup."

The following recipes are from "The Great New England Food Guide" by Kathy Gunst and John Rudolph (Arbor House $14.95).

These cakes can be served with melted butter and maple syrup. If you want to get fancy, you can use them like crepes — top them with whipped cream and fruit preserves, creme fraiche, smoked salmon and dill sprigs, or a simple lemon-herb butter.

THIN JOHNNYCAKES

1 cup johnnycake meal or other cornmeal
½ teaspoon salt (optional)
1 teaspoon sugar (optional)
1 cup milk
1 cup water

Yields 10 to 12 cakes.

Combine dry ingredients in bowl. Add milk and water, and mix thoroughly.

Grease large skillet with butter, margarine or bacon fat, and place over moderate heat. Pour a few tablespoons of batter into skillet to form a cake 2 to 3 inches wide. Fry until edges of johnnycakes are brown, then flip.

Keep batter thin, adding more milk as necessary.

Serve the following with lots of butter and maple syrup. Rhode Islanders also serve thick johnnycakes with stews instead of dumplings.

THICK JOHNNYCAKES

1 cup johnnycake meal or other cornmeal
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon molasses (optional)
1 cup boiling water
⅛ cup milk

Yields 6 cakes.

Combine dry ingredients and molasses in bowl. Pour in boiling water, and stir until dough is stiff. Let stand for 5 minutes. Thin batter with milk. Drop cakes onto skillet greased with butter or margarine. Cook slowly for 10 to 15 minutes on each side.

Gray's Rhode Island Johnnycake Meal, whole-wheat flour, rye flour, Brown Bread and Muffin Mix and Pancake and Waffle Mix can be ordered by phone: (508) 636-6075, or by mail: P.O. Box 422, Adamsville, RI 02801.

Cows becoming more productive

Copley News Service

Average milk output per cow has more than doubled in the last 30 years, reaching nearly 13,800 pounds in 1987. U.S. farmers produced a near record 142.5 billion pounds of milk in 1987 with only about half the number of cows in production in the mid-1950s.

Dairy farming accounts for a major portion of farm income in the United States. Only beef cattle account for more. In 1987, dairy farmers grossed nearly $18 billion from milk marketing, about 13 percent of total farm cash receipts.

U.S. consumers spend more than $50 billion a year for dairy products, about 12 percent of total expenditures for all food.

After 2,000 years, it's still the same old story.

It's a Bible story, but it could just as easily be from the Torah. Or the Koran. Or the pages of yesterday's newspaper.

Because, unfortunately, it's also a parable for the 20th century.

Today the average family with an income under $5,000 contributes nearly 5% to charity. Between $50,000 and $100,000, giving drops to just over 1%. In other words, the people who can afford the least are still the ones who give the most.

So think about it.

If all of us gave that same 5%, our collective contribution would come to more than $175 billion a year.

And, with that, we could give our 20th-century story a far happier ending.

What you give is five. What you get back is immeasurable.

Southwestern puffed omelet all its cracked up to be

By MELANIE BARNARD
Copley News Service

Has every weary, hungry working person in every corner of the land peered into the refrigerator to discover its total edible contents to consist of the tinned fruitcake from last Christmas, a bit of cheese — and, bless us, a carton of eggs?

Isn't it reassuring to know that an otherwise bare larder can almost always produce the makings for an omelet supper?

Following are recipes for two distinctly different types: the standard rolled omelet and the puffed omelet (which is sort of a cross between an omelet and a souffle). Add a green salad and some crusty bread and you have a supper in a flash.

We have filled our rolled omelet with fontina cheese and prosciutto, but you can use all manner of savory ingredients, including leftover cooked vegetables, meat or fish, and all kinds of cheeses. Omelets are delicious flavored with delicate herbs such as parsley and chives. Just let the contents of your refrigerator be your guide!

The Spectacular Puffed Omelet, Southwest-Style, is for when you're in the mood for drama. The egg whites are beaten separately, folded into an egg yolk base and the omelet bakes in the oven to a lovely, airy, puffed, golden spectacle. It then gets sprinkled with mellow Monterey Jack cheese, folded over and served with one of the delicious chunky bottled salsas marketed nationwide.

Beat the eggs for a rolled omelet only until the whites and yolks are combined. Overbeating produces a tougher omelet.

FONTINA AND PROSCIUTTO OMELET

8 eggs
3 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon black pepper
2 tablespoons minced parsley
2 tablespoons butter
6 ounces sliced or grated fontina cheese (1½ cups)
2 ounces prosciutto or smoked ham, chopped (½ cup)

Yields 4 servings.
Preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes.

Break eggs into large mixing bowl. Add water and pepper and whisk gently until eggs are combined but not frothy. Stir in parsley.

Heat 1½ teaspoons butter in a 7- or 8-inch omelet pan or skillet set over medium heat. When butter foams, add ¼ of egg mixture (about ½ cup). Shake skillet with short back-and-forth motion and as soon as bottom of omelet begins to set, lift edges with small spatula or fork and tilt pan to let uncooked egg run underneath. After about 30 seconds of cooking, the omelet should be nearly set. Sprinkle ¼ of cheese and ¼ of prosciutto over eggs. Use spatula to roll one-third omelet into center. Then tilt pan over serving plate and use spatula to slide omelet onto plate, folding over other one-third as omelet slides out.

Wipe out pan with paper towel and continue to make 3 more omelets in same fashion, using remaining ingredients.

Note: Fontina is a flavorful semi-soft cheese that slices or grates best if well-chilled. The domestic or Danish variety is usually more readily available than the Italian fontina. A good substitute would be Gouda, Edam, or Jarlsberg.

SPECTACULAR PUFFED OMELET, SOUTHWEST STYLE

6 eggs
⅓ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon butter
4 ounces shredded Monetery Jack cheese (1 cup)
1 cup bottled, chunky Southwest-style salsa (medium hotness), warmed

Yields 4 servings.
Preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Separate eggs, placing yolks in mixing bowl and whites in bowl of an electric mixer. Add water, salt and pepper to yolks and whisk until well-blended. Beat whites to soft peaks. Pour yolk mixture over beaten egg whites and gently but thoroughly fold the two together.

Heat butter in 12-inch skillet with ovenproof handle. When butter foams, pour in eggs and smooth top. Cook, uncovered, over low heat for 2 minutes. Then place skillet in center of preheated oven for 8 to 10 minutes until omelet is puffed and set and top just begins to color.

Remove omelet from oven and sprinkle cheese over top. Using large spatula, make crease down center of omelet and then fold omelet in half, pressing it down gently but firmly for a few seconds until it stays folded. (Be sure to remember to use a pot holder for this procedure because skillet handle is still hot!)

Transfer folded omelet to serving plate and spoon salsa over. Or cut into 4 wedges in pan and serve directly onto individual plates, passing salsa at the table.

High-tech low-cholesterol eggs a big break for egg lovers

Copley News Service

What's new on the horizon for America's food supply?

High-tech low-cholesterol eggs!

What a break for all of us egg lovers with high-cholesterol leanings who often long for the good old-fashioned platters of scrambled eggs, creamy custards and rich eggnogs of yesteryear.

New technologies are now able to remove as much as 90 percent of the offending cholesterol from egg yolks, and in addition improve their shelf life as long as two months.

Eggs that can be kept on store shelves that long are the result of a process that was developed at North Carolina State University. It's a pasteurization that kills harmful bacteria such as salmonella. It liquefies the eggs, but does not cook them.

The low-cholesterol processing was developed by food scientists at the Univeristy of Wisconsin, who revived a 109-year-old technique. (Who worried about cholesterol then?)

The plan is to combine the cholesterol-stripping process with the pasteurization process to produce low-cholesterol eggs with long shelf life. Michael Foods, a small company in Minneapolis, apparently has cornered the rights to these technologies and believes that the new eggs will create a multi-billion-dollar market. (No, this isn't a stock tip.)

Marketing high-tech eggs may present some problems, not the least of which is packaging, since they don't come in shells.

Taste is also an unknown factor, though the researchers say the liquefied eggs pass the current standard tests. How they are judged in cakes, custards and other products will depend on the palates of consumers.

Big fast-food companies and popular restaurants who emphasize "fresh" eggs on their menus may balk at high-tech eggs. Given their obvious health advantages, however, many companies may be willing to switch or at least give their customers a choice.

Nutrition is a high priority consideration today for a lot of food companies and food service companies. Claiming healthier food while cutting spoilage costs are compelling reasons for them to climb aboard the high-tech egg bandwagon.

Large fast-food companies have been supplied with extended shelf life milk and ice cream mixes for quite awhile and, of course, they predate the high-tech eggs.

"We are talking to mass feeders," said Richard G. Olson, president and chief executive officer of Michael Foods.

While he didn't identify his customers, the director of menu planning and development for a major hamburger chain agreed that "anything that can be done to minimize the amount of cholesterol that people are exposed to is definitely of interest."

A spokesman for one fast-food chain appeared cautious of the new developments, stressing the "image" of the company as far more important than any health benefits to his patrons. The image he valued so highly was the fact that they promise "fresh eggs" every day!

It's no secret that the fast-food chains are the mass feeders of America today. Some of them are really beginning to update their attitudes away from how many billions of hamburgers sold to meeting their considerable responsibility of providing healthful foods for American consumers.

Some chains are going even further by supplying nutrition information on various entrees for their customers. Not everyone needs to be on a low-cholesterol diet, of course, but giant steps toward improving the nutritional quality of foods we all eat is a national necessity. Mass feeders who blindly ignore overwhelming evidence of how pollution of excessive fat and cholesterol in our foods contributes to the high death rate do not deserve our patronage.

February chock full of holidays

Copley News Service

After the hoopla of all those end-of-the-year holidays, you would think things would settle down for a while, but noooooo.

The February lineup begins with Groundhog Day Thursday. This is a New World variation of the British Candlemas Day, which also falls on the second.

Tradition says that if the weather on Candlemas Day is fair, then winter is more than half over, but if it's foul, there is lots more to come.

In the United States, Feb. 2 is still a day to prophesy the weather, but here, the prediction is based on the behavior of the furry burrowing groundhog, and a sunny day does not bode well.

If the critter can see his shadow on emerging from his burrow, then he scurries back into it for another six weeks of winter. But if the day is cloudy and shadowless, then winter has almost run its course.

The day after Groundhog Day is Boy Scout Day (Friday). If you're friends with any of these little guys, you might use this as an excuse to bake up a batch of your favorite cookies. Or honor the boy scout in your life by preparing M-B-C Dogs.

The birthday of one of our most beloved presidents, Abraham Lincoln, follows on the 12th, then close on its heels is Valentine's Day (Feb. 14).

IF YOU'RE looking for something sweet to tempt the heart (and tastebuds) of the one you love, try Church Street Truffles. Deliciously rich and crunchy, these microwave in only minutes. Place each truffle in a small paper candy cup and arrange in a pretty box for your Valentine's Day presentation.

Finally, Washington's birthday arrives on Feb. 22.

Remember Washington's honesty with a pie named in his honor — Washington Cherry Pie. This fast and easy recipe uses a prepared, store-bought shell. Bake the shell in conventional oven according to package instructions.

M-B-C DOGS

2 hot dog buns
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 tablespoons shredded cheddar cheese
2 slices bacon
2 hot dogs
1 tablespoon sweet relish
2 teaspoons minced onion

Split buns; spread with mustard and sprinkle with cheese. Set aside.

Place bacon on paper plate between 2 layers of paper towel. Microwave on HIGH setting about 2 minutes, until bacon is partially cooked.

Slit each hot dog lengthwise, cutting almost all the way through. Fill with sweet relish and onion. Wrap partially cooked bacon strips around hot dogs, then place hot dogs in prepared buns.

Wrap in paper napkins and microwave on MEDIUM-HIGH setting 1 to 2 minutes, or until piping hot. Let stand 1 minute before serving.

CHURCH STREET TRUFFLES

1 cup semisweet chocolate chips
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup coarsely chopped toasted almonds
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon brandy
½ cup shredded coconut
½ cup chopped dates

Yields about 2 dozen.

Combine chocolate chips and butter or margarine in 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Microwave, uncovered, 1 to 2 minutes, or until melted. Stir until smooth.

Stir in half of almonds, then add sugar, brandy, coconut and dates, blending well. Roll mixture into ¾-inch balls, then roll in remaining chopped almonds.

Store in refrigerator.

WASHINGTON CHERRY PIE

1 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 (16-ounce) cans pitted tart red cherries (water-pack), drained
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1 (9-inch) prebaked pie shell
½ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
2 tablespoons coarsely grated bittersweet chocolate

In medium-size microwave-safe mixing bowl combine sugar, cornstarch and salt; toss with fork. Add cherries, lemon juice, lemon rind and vanilla. Stir gently, then microwave, uncovered, 8 to 12 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, or until mixture is translucent.

Let cool several minutes, then turn into prepared pie shell. Refrigerate several hours, until filling is well-chilled and firm.

So who cares?

We all do.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Shmuel Ben-Shmuel, an Israeli consul on a two-day whirlwind tour of the Permian Basin, said he begins speeches the same way.

"I always say 'Shalom, y'all," he said smiling, with a not-too-convincing Texas drawl on the "y'all."

"I think it helps."

The consulate's visit to Midland and Odessa — designed to promote the relationship between the United States and Israel — included stops at a Midland Republican Party lunch as well as media interviews.

"Our major goal is to sell Israel to the local people, here and elsewhere," Ben-Shmuel said. "Basically, it is a p.r. job. We try to meet media people, politicians, the movers and the shakers. We want to improve Israel's image in this region, and we want to give out as much information about Israel as we can."

Ben-Shmuel has been a Houston resident for the last four years, where he works at the Consulate General of Israel for the five-state area of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico and Louisiana. Texas — especially West Texas — has been a traditionally strong area of support for Israel, he says.

"Frankly, there is a basic sympathy in this area," the consul said. "It is a more conservative area, more religious; it is more supportive of Israel and less sympathetic to some of the Arab states, which are perceived as Soviet clients and terrorists."

Ben-Shmuel said his government is confident that the United States will continue its close relationship with Israel under the Bush administration.

"Generally speaking, we don't anticipate any major change in the excellent relationship we have had in the last few years of the Reagan administration, and even before," he said.

"Basically, there is bi-partisan sympathy in the U.S. toward Israel."

"If there were no Israel in the Middle East, the U.S. would have to maintain a strong military presence to protect its interests from strong radical elements. Most of the oil reserves are in relatively small and weak Arab countries — countries that are historically being threatened by more radical neighbors."

Israel's presence "prevents the spread of radicalism," and keeps the U.S. from having a large military presence in the area, he noted.

"In Europe, the U.S. has to keep 300,000 troops at a cost of $50 to $60 billion a year, and in Korea, the U.S. keeps 40,000 troops at a cost of $20 to $30 billion a year, which includes the naval presence," he said. "In comparison to that, $3 billion in foreign aid to Israel is a bargain."

Trade and tourism between the two countries — and between Israel and Texas — are healthy, according to the consul.

"Israel buys a lot of industrial and electronics equipment from the U.S., and Israel sells all kinds of products, especially high-tech," he said, noting the trade agreement is worth "billions."

TIE — the Texas-Israel Exchange — is a recent agreement in which the two entities will share information about agriculture, and is an example of Israel's eagerness to trade with the Lone Star State, Ben-Shmuel said.

"We have developed a very vast technology in agriculture with an emphasis on developing desert areas, which is the major part of Israel," he said.

"These towns are like the open communities in Israel," he said. "The people are very kind, very willing to assist you in anything."

If more West Texans visited Israel, and more people from his country visited West Texas, the relationship between countries would be better understood, he said.

"People here should not anticipate deserts, and camels and terrorists in the streets," in Israel, Ben-Shmuel said. "It is much safer than many cities in the U.S."

Teacher named to board for accreditation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A Midland junior high school teacher has became the city's first appointee to one of the nation's most prestigious teacher education accreditation boards.

Gilbert Garcia, a mathematics teacher at Goddard Junior High School, will represent the National Education Association during a three-year stint on the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Garcia's appointment was made public by Charles Beard, president of the Texas State Teacher's Association.

"I'm excited," said Garcia, who is expected to travel extensively in his new position with frequent visits to colleges and universities across the country.

During his travels, Garcia will inspect education programs at various institutions of higher education to determine if they meet NCATE's standards.

"Maybe this means I'll have some direct input over what aspiring educators should know before they get out of college," he said.

NCATE is the only non-governmental agency recognized by the U.S. Department of Education that accredits institutions providing professional education for teachers and other school specialists.

At least 500 teacher education programs carry the NCATE seal nationwide.

Currently in his 19th year with the Midland Independent School District, Garcia serves as chairman of the Goddard Junior High School Mathematics Department.

He also is actively involved in the National Education Association — the country's largest teacher's union.

As a member of the Midland Education Association — an affiliate of the NEA and TSTA — Garcia has served as president, treasurer and chairman of the Human Right and Legislative Committees.

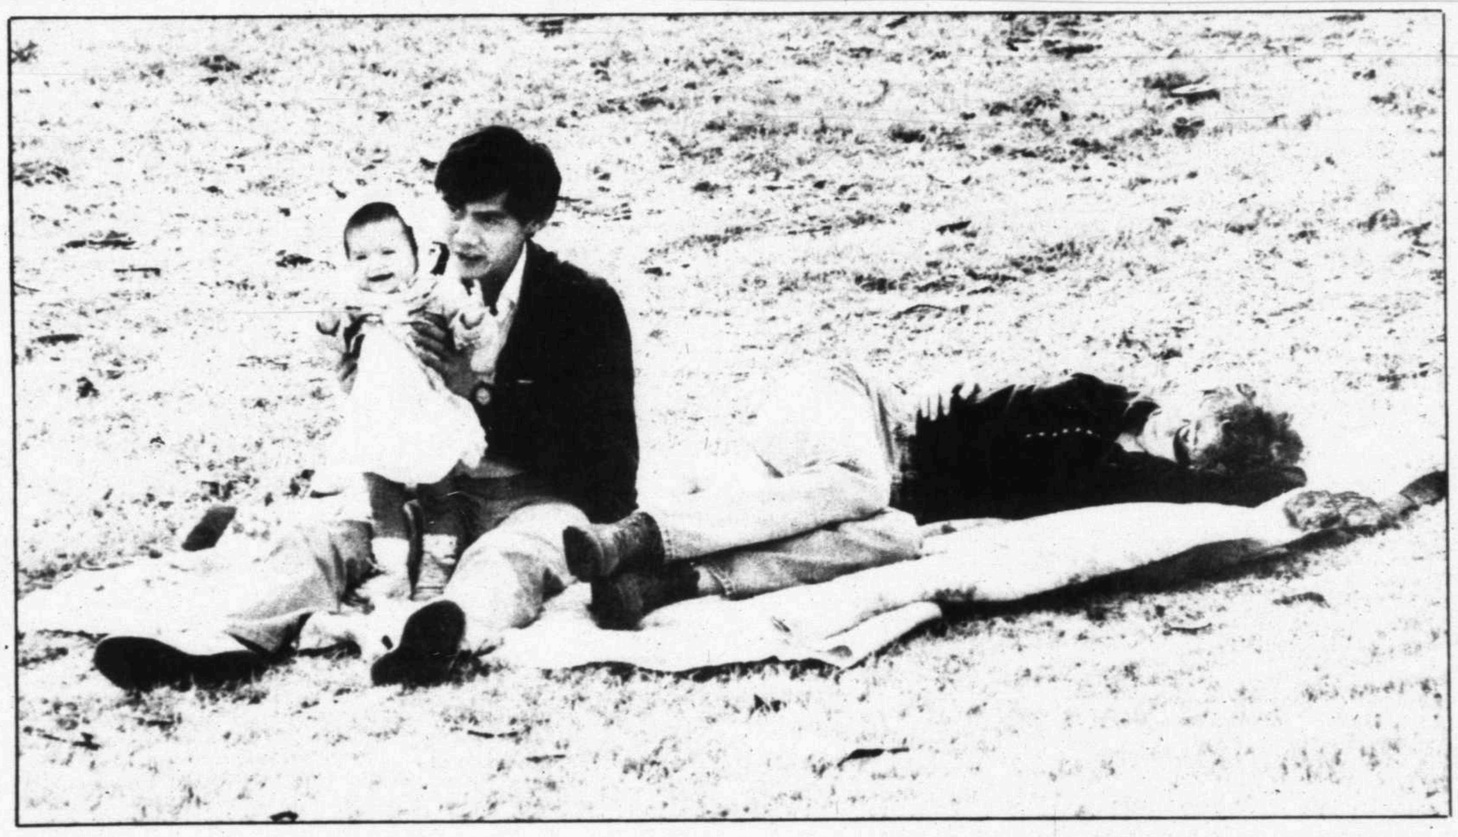

He also worked on behalf of TSTA, fulfilling terms on the Public Relations and Legislative Committees.

Midlanders honored for community service

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Three Midlanders who are "unselfishly" devoted to law enforcement were honored Tuesday by the Midland Crime Prevention Commission for service to the community.

Neal Meares and Jackie Hamilton, two long-time advocates of law enforcement, and Al Schorre, the county's district attorney, received the awards at the commission's annual banquet.

"Jackie Hamilton and Mr. Meares have been outstanding citizens who have volunteered a great amount of time to support crime prevention endeavors and law enforcement in general," Police Chief Richard Czech said. "They are true friends of the law enforcement community.

"Al Schorre we feel is an outstanding prosecutor," he continued. "He has the welfare of the community in mind and goes above and beyond his normal duties in working with law enforcement in many community programs."

Czech said he "felt honored" to personally know the recipients.

Maxine Hannifin, a member of the Crime Stoppers board and member of the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers' Standards and Education, presented Ms. Hamilton at the banquet, and saluted her "oversized heart."

"It is a heart that's not only deeply concerned but ferrets out ways to improve the lives of Midlanders by making it a better, safer, cleaner place to live," Ms. Hannifin said. "Jackie is a lifelong daughter of Midland and truly a credit to it."

Meares, a Midland insurance executive, founded Neighbors Against Burglars and Drugs and has worked "tirelessly" for law enforcement, according to long-time friend and former school board member Betsy Robinson.

Through NABD, Meares was instrumental in informing the community of the relationshiop between narcotics use and crime in Midland, and helped attract the Drug Enforcement Administration to the city, Ms. Robinson said.

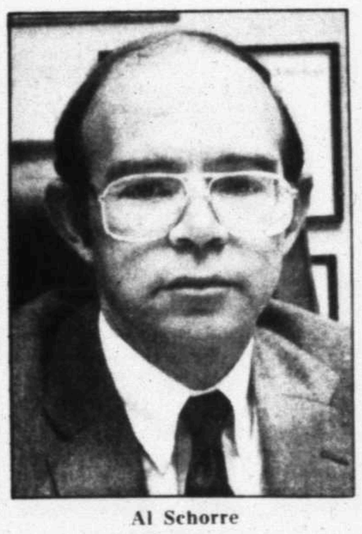

"He is a fine citizen and has done a tremendous amount to help the community," Sheriff Gary Painter said of Meares.

Neal Meares

Al Schorre

Ms. Robinson also credited Meares' wife Cheryl, the head of the commission, for her efforts with Neighborhood Crime Watch and National Night Out.

Schorre, a former Bell County prosecutor now in his second term as district attorney, is a member of Gov. Bill Clements' Criminal Justice Task Force known for his toughness on narcotics offenders.

"Al has donated a lot of his time, and has made a lot of inroads during his term as district attorney," Painter said.

Ruling will allow immigrants to travel for next 20 days

By ROY BRAGG
Hearst News Service

BROWNSVILLE — A tidal wave of illegal immigrants is expected to surge through South Texas in the wake of a federal judge's ruling Tuesday that asylum applicants be allowed freedom to travel outside of the Rio Grande Valley for the next 20 days.

That wave could become a flood Feb. 20, straining local services and recreating the crisis that put 10,000 refugees in pastures and on street corners last month, as U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela's temporary restraining order against the Immigration and Naturalization Service expires.

"We would certainly urge people with the means to do so to file their asylum applications here and enjoy the continuing opportunity the court has provided," Robert Rubin said after a two-hour hearing here.

Added co-counsel Linda Yanez: "I think it's crucial that the local community get themselves prepared because it's very obvious the immigration service is going to revert to the former policy."

Allen Hausman, the INS lead attorney, said he expects a rush for the border.

Tom Brown files for personal bankruptcy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Thomas C. "Tom" Brown, Midland independent oil and gas producer who has been beset by the oil slump and bank failures, has filed for personal bankruptcy under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Brown, chairman of the board of Tom Brown Inc. and executive vice president of TMBR/Sharp Drilling Inc., listed more than $27 million in personal debts in his bankruptcy case filed in federal court in Midland.

"It's just something I can't do anything about," Brown said this morning, "but it has no bearing at all on Tom Brown Inc. or TMBR Sharp Drilling — period. It's me personally, and that's it. I had no choice," he said. "That's obvious from the numbers."

His personal financial woes largely were tied to the decline in petroleum exploration and production due to the oil crash and events leading up to the 1983 crash of Midland's First National Bank in October 1983.

Of the claims against Brown, $23 million was incurred in 1983 or before, when Brown was a shareholder of the now-defunct First National Bank of Midland. FNB was Texas' largest independent bank. He was an FNB advisory director.

The 93-year-old institution folded under debt pressure and soured loans in wake of declining oil prices. FNB had assets approaching $2 billion.

Brown, who was a principal partner in Eagle Properties in a sale-leaseback deal involving the 24-story FNB Building, had lost a lawsuit filed against him and other Eagle partners by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), which became FNB's receiver in October 1983.

That suit has been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The sale-leaseback arrangement was made to raise funds for the troubled bank and to help the ailing bank reflect profits for the last quarter of 1982.

In December 1982, FNB sold the FNB Building, parking garage and motor bank for $75 million to Eagle Properties, which was organized explicitly for the $75-million transaction.

U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton in 1985 had ordered the Eagle partners, including Brown, to pay FDIC $25 million.

Bunton said that Brown's share was $6.25 million plus $1.7 million in interest.

Other claims against Brown include $3.5 million by Shearson Lehman Hutton stock-brokerage company and $200,000 from NCNB Texas National Bank.

From Staff Reports

MARFA — U.S. Border Patrol agents have arrested two Mexican nationals for allegedly attempting to smuggle electronic equipment into Mexico, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Jose Antonio De Jesus Rodriguez De La Fuente and Jose De Jesus Vanegas-Sanchez, both of Nuevo Leon, were arrested January 27 on State Highway 385 near Big Bend National Park, Border Patrol spokesman Lewis Reynolds said.

The duo had driven to the U.S.-Mexico border, near San Vicente, in separate vehicles, and were stopped on the U.S. side. The agents found the equipment in one of the vehicles, according to a report.

Border Patrol agents then contacted agents of the U.S. Customs Service in Alpine, which took over the investigation, Reynolds said.

According to agents, the men said they had been instructed by a Monterey, Mexico, man to pick up the equipment in San Antonio and deliver it to him.

A Customs spokesman said microchips in the seized satellite equipment, which was described as "high-tech," can be removed and used for military purposes. The spokesman declined further comment.

Rodriguez De La Fuente and Vanegas-Sanchez appeared before U.S. Magistrate Katherine Baker in Alpine, and bond was set at $150,000 for each.

The men are also being held for investigation of their immigration status, Reynolds said.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Fish pleads guilty to disorderly conduct

From Staff Reports

Former Midland City Councilman Kelly Fish, accused of impersonating a Lubbock policeman last February, has pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct charge, records show.

Fish was originally charged with false identification as a peace officer, but those charges were dismissed in lieu of his plea on the lesser misdemeanor, a spokeswoman in the Lubbock County District Clerk's office said.

He was fined $210.50, she said.

Fish had been accused of attempting to pass himself off as a Lubbock policeman in a dressing area of the bar.

Last March, Fish pleaded guilty to felony theft and was given 10 years probation after admitting he had made illegal profits as a landman at Getty Oil Co.

His plea Jan. 16 to the misdemeanor charge will not affect his probation because the Lubbock incident occurred prior to his felony theft plea, officials have said.

DA drops drug charges

Garrison said this morning successful prosecution of the cocaine possession cases against Truman "Ike" Isaacs and his wife, Ana Elisa, hinged on the testimony of a police informant of questionable credibility.

In addition to questions about credibility, he said, "We can't even find her."

Isaacs and his wife are currently appealing convictions on 1987 drug charges. Isaacs was sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1988 on a charge of cocaine delivery and his wife drew a five-year sentence for cocaine possession.

Testimony by Lisa Kay Hendrix, a police informant, revealed she had been a drug addict and shoplifter.

She also admitted to having had a sexual relationship with Harold Thomas, an Odessa police corporal who induced her to participate in a drug buy-bust operation and later testify in the trial.

Further testimony by Ms. Hendrix revealed Thomas, in exchange for her help, had offered to intercede with Ector and Midland County authorities in an effort to gain leniency for her misdemeanor charges against her in the two counties.

Murderer to be sentenced

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury this morning was scheduled to begin hearing arguments in the punishment phase of the trial of a 19-year-old man found guilty of murder.

Jurors deliberated about two hours late Tuesday afternoon to find Gabino Sanchez guilty of murder in the April 12, 1988 stabbing death of Noe Urias, 20, 814 Fall Ave.

Sanchez could be sentenced to as much as 99 years in prison.

A dispute between Sanchez and Urias that began with gestures made across the street, escalated to a verbal confrontation that ended with Urias being stabbed in the chest, according to testimony.

According to police, officers found Urias lying on the living room floor of his home. He was transported to Medical Center Hospital and pronounced dead by Peace Justice J.E. Pressly.

3 elementaries honored

Three Midland Independent School District elementary schools — Crockett, Washington and De Zavala — received citations from the Texas Commissioner of Education, W.N. Kirby, and State Board of Education chairman Jon Brumley for exceptional gain on student achievement on the Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills, (TEAMS).

To be eligible for the award, the mastery rate on both portions of the TEAMS test must have improved a minimum of 30 percent for the campus.

In their letter of notification to Superintendent Joe Baressi, Kirby and Brumely stated, "We know that this caliber of student performance is related to effective leadership in the district and within inidividual campuses, and you are to be commended for your contribution."

On receipt of this notification, Baressi said, "It is gratifying that the efforts of Midland's instructional team-teacher, aides, principals, administrator — and parents — has been recognized by the state. Our goal is not just to raise scores; but these marked gains are indicative of the quality learning occurring in Midland public schools."

TEAMS Pep Fest planned

In an effort, to emphasize the importance of academic excellence and relieve any possible test stress, several Midland Independent School District schools will be participating in a TEAMS Pep Fest. The 30-minute pep rally is scheduled for 3:10 p.m., Friday at Santa Rita Elementary, 5306 Whitman.

TEAMS, the state mandated Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills, is administered to students in all odd-numbered grades each year. The test was a part of the education reform legislature in the mid-1980's.

The TEAMS Pep Fest will feature Santa Rita fifth graders, junior varsity cheerleaders from Lee and Midland high schools, mascots from both local high schools, and other secondary school student leaders.

Julie Nerby, fifth grade teacher at Santa Rita Elementary, explained the impetus for the rally, "It's to build self-esteem for low achievers, promote confidence in taking the TEAMS test, and help children recognize the importance of being a hard-working, successful student."

Odessans to visit Austin

ODESSA — In an effort "to put Odessa first," the Odessa Chamber of Commerce is taking Odessa to Austin.

While the legislators are still in sessions, chamber officials, board members and area businessmen will make the trip to Austin "to put Odessa in the minds of Texas politicans as a city to host their meetings and conventions," according to a press release from the Odessa Chamber.

The reception will from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Feb. 22 at the Caswell House in Austin.

TEAMS test to be given

Administration of the TEAMS test for Midland Independent School District students in grades 3, 5, 7, and 9 is scheduled for Feb. 7-9.

The writing portion of the test will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 7. Reading will be tested the next day. Testing will conclude on Thursday, Feb. 9 on the mathematics skills.

TEAMS, the state mandated Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills, is administered to students in all odd-numbered grades each year. The test was a part of the education reform legislation in the mid-1980's.

Make-ups for students absent on any of the test days are planned on Feb. 10, 13 and 14.

In order for each student to perform to their best potential, parents are encouraged to see that their children get plenty of rest and a hearty breakfast each test day.

Hearing on books canceled

The public hearing scheduled for Thursday by the Midland Independent School District has been canceled.

The public hearing was to give the public an opportunity to examine textbooks to be used by the school district.

However, it was canceled due to the lack of a request for presentations regarding the new textbooks.

Y to launch fund raising

tyrant — (noun) A "tyrant" is an absolute ruler unrestrained by law or constitution. "Tyrant" is based on the ancient Greek word "tyrannos," which originally meant a person who would seize or take power. Contrary to the modern-day meaning of "tyrant," which often associates the word with oppression or brutality, in ancient Greece, "tyrants" had good intentions and were not necessarily considered bad. "Tyrants" often represented the common people who were unfairly ruled by aristocrats. However, aristocrats wrote the history books and they had no qualms about giving "tyrants" a bad name — a meaning that persists today.

INS

"Within a matter of hours, if not days, people in lots of towns and communities in many countries in Central America are aware of things that impact on their ability to come into the US illegally," he said. "I'm sure in fairly short order they wil be aware of the decision."

William Joyce, another INS attorney, said the agency can now do its job:

"I spoke to the commisioner (INS Commissioner Richard Thornbourgh) and he feels we were vindicated and that the immigration laws of the United States have to be enforced."

All was not rosy for the INS in court however.

Previously, applicants could file their requests, then travel freely. Vela on Jan. 9 issued the order reinstating freedom of travel.

"We're not going to tolerate that again," he told Hausman of the crisis conditions. "I'm not going to just sit back and view that kind of disaster and (the) problems that were created because of this policy."

He also said he'd issue an injunction again if necessary.

After the hearing, Hausman said taking care of refugees, other than those arrested, wasn't INS' job nor were their poor living conditions the agency's fault.

"You have to distinguish between the things the United States government has the capacity to do in basically responding to a situation that people from the other side of the Rio Grande are creating," he said.

Two hundred people packed Vela's courtroom, including local shelter movement opponents and a gaggle of children from the Casa Oscar Romero shelter who sat in the front rows.

Hausman argued the travel rule wasn't a ban but instead an attempt to relieve pressure on other, overworked INS offices. Other goals were to speed up asylum processing time and weed out frivolous asylum applications.

Frivolous applications, he said, mainly include those from individuals seeking work and who aren't in fear of political persecution in their native lands.

The ban on travel outside the Valley, he said, didn't rob anyone of their rights to apply for asylum.

"They have the right to apply for asylum — that right is unaffected," Hausman said, adding they just have to do it in Harlingen.

Rubin disagreed.

"This wasn't intended to discourage frivolous applications," he said. "It would've more narrowly drawn. This policy was a policy designed to steer persons out of the asylum process."

By making life for applicants difficult, they were discouraged from pursuing asylum, Rubin said.

He also argued that the INS neglected to give required notice of the rule change, thus causing more distress for applicants.

Bush to propose exploration incentives, child-care credit

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several major campaign promises by President Bush are likely to be missing or significantly scaled back in the budget proposal he will make to Congress next week, administration officials say.

Campaign pledges for a major expansion of Medicaid and increased funding for several education programs are among those likely to fall victim to concern about the federal deficit, said the officials, who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity.

Bush does plan to propose several tax breaks, the officials said, but the scope of a proposed capital-gains rate cut remains undecided.

Bush has long advocated a reduction in the capital gains tax — the tax on profits from the sale of homes, stocks and other assets — to a maximum of 15 percent. But senior aides said Treasury officials are having a hard time coming up with a formula, and the final proposal could call for lower rates for one category than for another.

Bush campaign promises on education including a $500 million National Merit scholarship program, an expansion of the Head Start program and a $50 million increase in school experimentation may be pruned back considerably, the officials said.

They also said Bush's campaign proposal to expand Medicaid coverage to more lower-income Americans and to allow low-paid workers to purchase it is being given a low priority in budget preparation talks.

Budget constraints make fulfillment of such promises unlikely, the officials said.

"The two have to be reconciled," said a senior White House official who insisted upon anonymity.

Bush has promised to propose a budget that does not contain a tax increase while meeting the Gramm-Rudman law requirement for reducing the deficit to $100 billion or less.

The officials said that Bush's budget, to be unveiled Feb. 9 when he addresses a joint session of Congress, will include these proposals:

■ A child-care tax credit of up to $1,000 per child for low-income families, generally those earning less than $10,000 a year.

■ New tax incentives for oil and gas exploration, likely coupled with a call for removal of all remaining price controls on natural gas, now affecting about 40 percent of production.

■ A proposal for tax-free "enterprise zones" to be established in some inner city areas to promote commercial growth, a program championed by Bush's nominee for Housing and Urban Development secretary, Jack Kemp.

Administration officials are still wrestling with terms of a package to help bail out troubled savings and loans, and it appeared likely that some variation on a proposal for an increased fee for deposit insurance would be part of the new Bush budget plan.

Bush himself has said that a proposal for a reduced capital-gains tax rate will be part of his Feb. 9 rewrite of the $1.15 trillion budget President Reagan submitted last month for fiscal 1990.

However, sources say there is still disagreement over exactly what form the tax cut should take.

Bush and other advocates of a lower capital gains tax say it would boost the economy by increasing business investment. Opponents say it would be a tax break for the rich that also would worsen the federal deficit.

Capital gains are currently taxed at the same level as other income, at 15 percent, 28 percent or 33 percent, depending on overall income. Bush would like to lower the rate to a flat 15 percent.

Bush claims that, instead of costing the government money, such a move would spur investment and generate up to $4 billion a year in new revenue.

However, many leading economists, including the bipartisan Congressional Budget Office, say lowering the tax would have the opposite effect — reducing revenues and further worsening the deficit.

That's because some capital gains — such as the profits raised from the sale of private homes or objects of art — are unlikely to be funneled into business investment.

FAA orders inspections for all Boeing jetliners

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 700 Boeing jetliners operated by every major U.S. airline must undergo a comprehensive inspection for cross-wiring and cross-plumbing in their safety systems, after problems were discovered in 17 aircraft.

The Federal Aviation Administraton, in issuing the "airworthiness directive" late Tuesday, also noted that Boeing is studying its design, production procedures and testing of airliner emergency systems to see if changes are needed.

The newly ordered tests are not expected to disrupt airline schedules and can be completed anytime over the next 3½ weeks while the airliners are undergoing routine maintenance.

The order affects 741 newer jetliners flown by U.S. carriers. It applies to all Boeing 737s, 747s, 757s and 767s built after Dec. 31, 1980. Most foreign airliners using the planes also are expected to comply, although the FAA has no jurisdiction over them.

"The comprehensive (directive) will require functional testing of the engine and cargo compartment fire detection, warning and extinguishing systems, both electrical and plumbing to insure that crossed wiring or plumbing does not exist," said the FAA announcement.

"The comprehensive (directive) will require functional testing of the engine and cargo compartment fire detection, warning and extinguishing systems..."
— FAA announcement

No accident or emergency has resulted from faulty wiring or plumbing found in airliners in recent weeks after the FAA issued limited directives applying to only specific systems in certain types of aircraft.

But the foulups, including cross-wiring, cross-plumbing, incomplete wiring and other problems, could have caused shutdown of the wrong engine in the event of fire, activation of the wrong sprinkling system in a cargo hold or lack of any response in emergency systems.

The concern arose with speculation that the pilot in a Jan. 8 British Midland Airways 737 crash that killed 44 people in England may have been deceived by faulty wiring into shutting down his only good engine. Cause of the crash is still under investigation.

The crash led to similar inspection orders in Great Britain. Airbus 320s also were included in the British order, although problems have been found only in Boeing aircraft.

Jack Gamble, Boeing spokesman, said Tuesday night that the directive is based on service bulletins Boeing has been putting out in recent months and years. Service bulletins are sent out each time a problem of some sort is found with a model of a plane to all carriers using that model and to the FAA. Checks of planes are voluntary after a service bulletin is issued.

But if the FAA sees a pattern in the bulletins, it is likely to issue a directive, making checks of the airliners mandatory.

"It's a preventive and precautionary check," he said.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the latest order, which gives airlines 25 days to comply, would not disrupt regularly scheduled flights. He said planes whose systems were already tested under previous orders need not retest under the new order.

Boeing's Gamble said "a lot of the '57 and '37 stuff already has been done."

The FAA estimated the inspections would cost airlines a total of $222,000. Airline analysts say, however, that actual cost of FAA-ordered inspections is generally two or three times higher than the FAA estimates.

It said the order is a "precautionary measure" triggered by newly discovered problems with three 757s and a 737. Farrar said he did not know which airlines reported the latest cases of faulty wiring.

On one plane, an overheat indicator would have shown a problem in the wrong engine. In two others, fire extinguishers would have been triggered in the wrong engines. In the fourth, an incomplete circuit would have prevented a fire extinguisher from firing.

The first cross-wiring directive applying only to two 737 models found no problems. A second triggered by reports of cross-wiring in two 757s, resulted in discovery of five more miswired aircraft.

Earlier directives followed discovery of improperly installed plumbing in two 767s. The inspections exposed four other aircraft with similar problems that, in the event of a fire in one of two holds, would have routed extinguishing fluids to the hold that was not burning.

The inspections would cover 472 Boeing 737s, 33 Jumbo 747s, 123 757s and 113 767s, the FAA said.

Tower hearing centers on conflict of interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee planned to examine potential conflicts of interest in John Tower's business dealings after members questioned allegations the Defense secretary-designate is a womanizer with a drinking problem.

The committee, reviewing Tower's selection, held a closed session Tuesday with Tower and conservative activist Paul Weyrich, who testified earlier in the day that "on a number of occasions" he had seen the nominee publicly drunk and in the company of women other than his wife.

In other confirmation proceedings Tuesday, the Senate approved the nomination of Robert Mosbacher as Commerce secretary, Samuel Skinner as Transportation secretary and Carla Hills as special trade representative. The vote was 100-0 on all three nominations.

Also Tuesday, the White House asked for a rare delay in confirmation hearings for Louis Sullivan to be health and human services secretary, and said it had nothing to do with the flap over the nominee's views on abortion.

The Armed Services Committee was to resume its closed session today, then hold an open session on conflict of interest questions that were not raised in hearings last week.

Tower said last week in two days of testimony that he received fees of more than $1 million for consulting work for seven defense contractors, including such industry giants as Rockwell and Martin-Marietta.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the committee, said he was hopeful that the panel could finish its work today. Nunn said he was unsure when a vote on the nomination would take place, but Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., said next week was possible for a decision.

The committee has been expected to approve Tower to head the Defense Department, and there was no immediate indication that Weyrich's remarks would change that.

Soviets use Western money to curb deficit, book says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is trying to finance its reforms with loans from the West while postponing tough decisions needed at home to curb its budget deficit, says the author of a new book on the Soviet economy.

Author Judy Shelton has joined a chorus of skeptics, including many on Capitol Hill, who worry that Western banks and governments are extending credits to the Kremlin without reviewing the strategic implications.

Shelton's new book, "The Coming Soviet Crash: Gorbachev's Desperate Pursuit of Credit in Western Financial Markets," includes a detailed analysis of published Soviet budget data.

She concluded that Kremlin accountants have been fudging the country's economic figures for years, steadily reporting budget surpluses when in fact there were growing deicits. The Soviets finally admitted to a budget deficit last October.

The foremost spokesman in Congress on the issue, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., has cautioned that giving the Kremlin easy credits could undercut U.S. interests and harm rather than help the reforms of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Nevertheless, said Shelton, under Gorbachev the Soviets have turned increasingly to the West for financing.

As part of the reforms, the Soviets are publishing many previously secret economic statistics, but Shelton and others question the data.

One respected Soviet economist, for example, has said the deficit is three times higher than the Kremlin has acknowledged.

Last August, in a prospectus for its first foreign bond issue, the Soviet government said it had a budget surplus, putting the figure at 3 billion rubles, or $1.8 billion.

"It was revealed three months later that the Soviets had been running a deficit for years," Shelton said. The revelation, she said, did not prompt a protest from the Swiss bank that sponsored the loan or from those who bought the issue.

Quayle to meet with Latin American leaders

New York Times News Service

Quayle

Quayle, taking his first trip abroad since assuming office less than two weeks ago, will find himself sharing the spotlight with Cuba's Fidel Castro and Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega. However, he has scheduled no meetings with the two Latin leaders.

Quayle will make a brief stop Friday in war-torn El Salvador on his return to Washington.

Along with the Latin heavyweights, the Soviet Union has sent the president of the Supreme Soviet, Middle Eastern countries have sent their OPEC oil ministers and Spain has sent its prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez. Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter also is slated to attend, and is scheduled to meet privately with Perez.

The White House appears to be purposely trying to assure that Quayle has a low risk, low profile maiden overseas voyage as vice president.

Over the weekend, Quayle's office decided against arranging for a second jetliner to carry reporters wishing to cover his visit. The move was widely viewed by news organizations as a White House attempt to lessen coverage.

There had been plans to have him also stop in Mexico on his way home, but they were abruptly abandoned shortly before his trip was officially announced last week.

The cancellation left Mexican officials miffed and puzzled, since preparations had already progressed to the point that a meeting had been scheduled between Quayle Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and other officials.

Quayle aides said the Mexico stop had been dropped after it was determined that it could not be adequately planned on such short notice.

Watergate jury selection model for Oliver North's trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate cases of the mid-1970s could provide a road map for selection of a jury in Oliver North's trial that will not be biased by pretrial publicity, legal experts say.

"I would say Watergate is your best guide. From what I can understand the Iran-Contra hearings won't exceed publicity of that," says Professor William Greenhalgh of the Georgetown University Law Center.

There are important parallels between the prosecution of the leading Watergate defendants and North's case, Greenhalgh said Tuesday. Most notably, he said, the trials in both instances were preceded by congressional hearings that attracted vast television audiences.

A federal appeals court upheld the Watergate convictions, saying the defendants' rights were protected by the careful questioning of prospective jurors to guard against prejudice from pretrial publicity.

"That's what (U.S. District Judge Gerhard) Gesell is doing now," Greenhalgh said. "He has a road map. And if he's following it I think he'll be all right."

Professor David Robinson Jr. of George Washington University agreed. "We have an imperfect system that stumbles through," he said. "It's not an impossibility to get a jury" in the North trial that will be unbiased.

Robinson also said it is easier to guard against prejudiced jurors in federal cases because the judges generally do the questioning in empaneling jurors. In the state courts, he said, the quizzing is done by the lawyers on each side.

As North's trial began Tuesday, Gesell said there may be problems finding an impartial jury as required by the Constitution because so many people have seen or read of North's testimony in congressional hearings.

Only 16 of the first 54 prospective jurors indicated on questionnaires that they weren't exposed to North's congressional appearances, the judge said.

North, a former White House aide, testified to House and Senate investigating committees in 1987 under a grant of limited immunity. The immunity grant meant the congressional testimony itself could not be used to prosecute North, although independent counsel Laurence Walsh was free to develop the same information independently.

Gesell noted that North's trial on charges of lying to Congress, shredding evidence and conspiring to commit tax fraud comes after intense publicity, and the judge said the spotlight will remain on throughout the trial.

Gesell said he will rule Wednesday on how much exposure to such publicity ought to be allowed before a possible juror is disqualified.

North himself has contributed to the attention his trial is receiving. In recent months, he has been giving speeches for $20,000 fees.

The justices' most recent ruling on the issue was in 1984 when, by a 6-2 vote, they reinstated the murder conviction of a Pennsylvania high school teacher for raping and strangling a student.

The court stressed in that case that the conviction came years after the offense occurred, allowing ample time for the community's sense of outrage to cool.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said the trial judge has broad discretion to decide whether prospective jurors are biased.

"Under our system it is that judge who is best situated to determine competency to serve impartially," Powell said.

The high court in 1961 provided some guidelines for permissible pretrial publicity.

Justice Tom C. Clark, writing for the court then, said it is not necessary for jurors to "be totally ignorant of the facts and issues involved." He said requiring them to know nothing would amount to an "impossible" standard.

Survey: 62 percent of House would oppose raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey on a controversial 50 percent pay raise for members of Congress and top federal officials concluded today that about 62 percent of the House would oppose the increase if it came up for a vote.

The survey, by groups opposed to the pay raise, was released as House Speaker Jim Wright conducted his own questionnaire on the pay issue that left open the possibility of a House vote.

Wright, who had planned to allow the increase to become law Feb. 8 without a vote in the House, now says members can have a vote if they express that view in the survey. But the speaker said he expected members to tell him what they already communicated privately: they want the raise without a vote, even if the Senate defeats the pay hike as expected this week.

The raise would become law Feb. 8 unless both houses vote to stop it.

The new survey said 270 House members, or about 62 percent, said they would oppose the raise if it came to a vote. Forty-seven, or about 11 percent, said they would support the raise; 75 members, about 17 percent, declined to state a position, and 41 members, about 9 percent, declined to respond.

Of those willing to take a position, 85 percent said they opposed the raise, according to the survey, conducted by Public Citizen, a consumer advocacy group founded by Ralph Nader; the National Taxpayers Union, a non-partisan organization of fiscal consdrvatives; and Coalitions for America, a conservative organization headed by activist Paul Wey;rich.

"A failure to vote on this issue would be a fundamental breakdown of democracy," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen.

Wright said Tuesday he ordered his survey to prove he is not a dictator preventing a vote, but a leader who is following the private wishes of members.

While House members were sending their survey answers to Wright, who promised to follow their wishes, opponents of the raise were to testify today before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Tuesday, supporters of the pay plan urged that the increase at least be approved for judges and top federal executives, even if lawmakers are unwilling to raise their own salary.

The raise will become law a week from today unless both houses vote to stop it. Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said senators will vote Thursday or Friday, and an Associated Press Survey indicates at least 88 of them will oppose the raise.

Should the raise become law, the House and Senate would each vote immediately afterward on measures to bar outside income, including speaking fees, according to congressional leaders.

While opponents said they would try to have Congress rescind any raise that became law, they would have a rough time convincing colleagues to take such action once the speaking fees, known as honoraria, are banned. Lawmakers would be reluctant to accept the net loss of income if their raise and honoraria were taken away.

House Democratic leadership sources, speaking only on condition they not be named, said Wright acted on his own to order the survey, with Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., apparently cool to the idea.

"He (Wright) became the lightning rod" for editorial writers and voters who criticized a no-vote strategy, even though the tactic had quiet, bipartisan support, said one leadership source. "He's been concerned about the misconception the speaker is preventing a vocal majority of members from voting on something they want to vote on."

In fact, Wright told reporters: "Over the past several weeks, I have heard from many members on both sides of the aisle. I have a pretty good idea of how they feel. They support 'regular procedure,'" a term that means a lengthy process that would make it impossible to vote by next Wednesday.

But when asked if he would permit a vote should members surprise him and demand one, Wright said, "If the members want it, yes, of course."

NATION IN BRIEF

Woman to lead parade

NEW YORK (AP) — The "First Lady of Irish Radio" has been chosen as the first female grand marshal of the St. Patrick's Day parade in its 226-year history.

And Dorothy Hayden Cudahy — who accepted the honor with smilin' Irish eyes, not tearful ones — says it's about time.

Mrs. Cudahy, 66, had been passed over in favor of a man in three previous years before she was elected Tuesday night to lead the 200,000 marchers in the nation's largest and oldest St. Patrick's Day celebration.

"Like everything else, men run it but women do all the work," she said of past parades.

"When I march up there, ladies and gentleman, girls and boys will remember my mother and your mother and all the Irish women who came over here and did so much," Mrs. Cudahy said. an, but I'm so happy."

Steinberg to appeal conviction

NEW YORK (AP) — Joel Steinberg will appeal his manslaughter conviction by arguing that the judge in the child-killing case was prejudiced from the start, an attorney said.

Attorney Ira London said Tuesday he remembered that state Judge Harold Rothwax predicted at a pretrial bail hearing that Steinberg was "probably guilty, probably would be found guilty and probably would be sentenced to life in prison."

London said Rothwax used prejudicial rulings and inflammatory evidence to coax the jury toward a conviction on a more serious charge so he would not seem wrong.

"After all," London said, "if there were a second-degree manslaughter conviction here, it certainly would have made his earlier opinion look foolish."

Jury awards woman $800,000

DENVER (AP) — A jury awarded nearly $800,000 to the survivor of a 1987 Continental Airlines jetliner crash in Denver but dismissed a claim for millions in punitive damages and found no gross negligence on the carrier's part.

Continental welcomed the verdict and said it would be a key in resolving 18 other outstanding lawsuits stemming from the crash. The case was the first from the accident to go to trial.

Twenty-eight people were killed and 54 were injured when the Continental DC-9 bound for Boise, Idaho, crashed during takeoff at Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

After four days of deliberations, the jury awarded $779,000 to Karen Johnson of Boise, Idaho, who lost an eye and suffered permanent nerve damage, and gave her husband, Bob Cook, $21,000 for loss of consortium.

The jury cited Continental for "reckless and willful misconduct" and for misleading advertising that falsely underscored the airline's concern for safety. But the six jurors returned no finding of gross negligence or punitive damages.

Chairman reviews pay increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House subcommittee that oversees federal courts says he will review proposed big pay raises for senior judges who do no legal work.

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., "believes he will have to look further into the senior judge question," staff member Mary Dixon said Tuesday.

Dozens of federal judges who technically are semi-retired but who do not hear cases stand to gain large pay raises unless Congress rejects a government salary package due to take effect a week from today. The Associated Press reported earlier this week that as many as a fifth of the federal judiciary's "senior judges" no longer hear cases but are in line for the increases anyway.

Ms. Dixon said Kastenmeier plans to review the matter soon with the subcommittee's lawyer, but "believes he has at least a month to figure out a way" to scuttle the salary increase even if Congress does not vote it down by the next week.

11-year-old arrested with crack

NEW YORK (AP) — An 11-year-old showed up for class carrying a bag stuffed with 411 vials of crack that he claimed to have brought from home, police said.

"It looked almost like a lunch bag," housing police Officer Joseph DeLuca said after the boy's arrest Tuesday.

It was unclear whether the boy was being used as a drug courier or simply took the crack to the Bronx school to show his fifth-grade classmates, housing police Capt. Samuel Hellman said.

"I got it from home," DeLuca quoted the boy as saying.

Several students saw the boy take the bag from his coat and slip it into a desk drawer, said Principal Joseph Cordasco.

AIDS protest closes Golden Gate Bridge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 80 demonstrators demanding more commitment to stopping AIDS closed the Golden Gate Bridge during Tuesday's morning rush hour, stalling thousands of commuters in a traffic jam.

The fog-shrouded bridge was closed for 46 minutes while Highway Patrol officers arrested 26 protesters affiliated with a group called "Stop AIDS Now Or Else." The demonstrators were cited on charges of trespassing and creating a public nuisance and then released, officials said.

A spokeswoman for the group said they chose the bridge for the protest because it would be "the most disruptive to people."

"AIDS is disrupting our lives and until people's lives are disrupted, they don't pay attention," said Daria Rucker, spokeswoman for the group of AIDS victims and friends of AIDS patients.

"We don't have the time to wait. My friends are dying all around me."

The demonstrators closed all the traffic lanes by spreading a banner that read: "AIDS = Genocide; Silence = Death; Fight Back," according to Highway Patrol officers, who called for police vans to cart off those arrested.

Some motorists stuck along U.S. 101 north and south of the bridge expressed anger at the demonstration and traffic tie-up.

Ruth Wheeler, of Larkspur, said she veered off the highway in Marin County, parked at a Safeway store and queued up with some 20 people to use five public telephones.

"People at Safeway were very upset. They said it was going to defeat their (the protesters') cause," said Wheeler, who finally arrived at her destination about 9:30 a.m. "The people said, 'Hey, if they think I'm going to be for them, doing something like this, forget it.'"

One motorist whose trip into San Francisco usually takes a half-hour finally parked his car and took a ferry across the bay. Although he beat most of the traffic, he said it took him two hours to reach his office.

Leaflets that the protesters distributed to motorists criticized the government's handling of the AIDS crisis, quoted several AIDS victims and urged motorists to "Get out of your car and join us."

"Are you sick and tired of being stuck on this bridge? So are we!" the leaflet said. "Are you wondering how long it will be? So are we! Are you wondering 'Why me?' So are we!"

A caller to The Associated Press bureau in San Francisco said the group was protesting "the inactivity of the government the last eight years and telling George Bush we're not going to remain inactive."

"We're going to continue to put pressure on Washington to do more for people with AIDS," the caller said, refusing to identify himself.

Desperate aliens rely on smuggling rings

By DARREN DOPP

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — She had come thousands of miles and her journey was nearly over. One last barrier separated the young Asian woman from her husband in the United States.

But the Niagara River was too swift and too cold — too great an obstacle for a small woman in a flimsy rubber raft — and she died in its icy waters on Jan. 5. As many as four others may have died with her.

The tragedy below Niagara Falls has provided shocking testimony to what federal immigration officials have long known: that the swift 40-mile-long river between Canada and the United States has become a northern crossing point for growing numbers of illegal aliens.

Little is known about the young drowning victim, whose body was found in the river near the town of Lewiston. Investigators have determined that she was in her 30s, carried two suitcases and a passport that did not belong to her, and had come from a small town in Malaysia.

Like many others, authorities said, she apparently entrusted her fate to a smuggling ring that brought her to Toronto, and then was to bring her to her husband in New York City.

Benedict Ferro, regional director of the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, said his agents have identified half a dozen organized rings involved in smuggling people across the border. One ring is thought to have brought in more than 250 Chinese last year.

Police in Lewiston caught five Chinese immigrants last summer who apparently had crossed the border in a rubber raft.

"When you have a group of wet Chinese walking around the streets of Lewiston, you're going to attract some attention," said Dennis Peruzzini, head of an INS anti-smuggling unit.

Peruzzini said the aliens were natives of Fukien Province in China who had made their way from Hong Kong to Vancouver, British Columbia; Toronto and then Niagara Falls with the aid of a New York-based smuggling ring.

Their destination was New York City's Chinatown, where they would have tried to find work as laborers, he said.

Ferro said the leaders of the smuggling rings, called arrangers, are usually based in New York City and sometimes smuggle drugs or other contraband. The arrangers have an elaborate system of contacts in cities in several countries.

"You just don't tell a person in Hong Kong to buy a plane ticket and leave it at that," Ferro said.

The arranger will provide false passports, escorts, safe houses in Toronto, the means of getting across the border. The methods vary: Aliens sometimes are squeezed into the trunks of cars or false compartments in tractor-trailers, inched across the towering superstructures of bridges or put in flimsy boats.

Fees of more than $2,000 per alien make it a lucrative business, Ferro said.

Ferro described aliens transported illegally across the border as victims of the smugglers. "They don't realize the risks involved. They are simply being preyed upon because of their desire to improve their economic situation," he said.

Unlike many illegal Mexican immigrants who cross the Rio Grande with the intention of returning home, those crossing the turbulent Niagara channel want to stay in the United States permanently, officials said.

Fugitives' suit hoped to stop 'oppression'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A battle that began a year ago today when two Indians took over a small-town newspaper to draw attention to alleged corruption remains unresolved, now has led to the two fugitives suing the state.

Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, who were acquitted in December on federal hostage-taking charges in connection with the siege in Lumberton, filed the lawsuit Tuesday, alleging the state was harassing them by filing separate charges.

The lawsuit also was filed by the Robeson County Defense Committee, a group of Indians and blacks formed during the past year to voice concern about "oppression."

"No longer will they sit by and take the reign of terror and the oppression, and this lawsuit reflects their changed attitude," said Pitts.

Hatcher says he doesn't see an end to the standoff.

"Just because I'm not in North Carolina doesn't mean I'm not in their hair," he said in a telephone interview from Idaho, where he is seeking sanctuary with the Shoshone-Bannock Indians.

Brandishing sawed-off shotguns, the Tuscarora Indians walked into The Robesonian newspaper office in Lumberton, and took up to 20 hostages.

They said they had evidence of law enforcement involvement in drug trafficking in Robeson County, whose population is evenly divided between blacks, whites and Indians. Hatcher also said federal officials were repeatedly presented with information concerning racial injustice and police corruption in Robeson County over the years, but failed to rectify the problems.

Hatcher and Jacobs were charged with federal firearms violations and hostage-taking, held in a federal prison at Butner, then moved through a series of county jails while awaiting trial.

They were denied bond three times before a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals ordered their release in July. The full appeals court later agreed to reconsider that decision and ordered them back to jail.

After a three-week trial, a federal jury on Oct. 14 acquitted the two of all charges.
