Week in Air Not All Hardship and Worry Notes From Two Fliers Reveal

FORT WORTH, May 25.—A week in the air isn't all hardship and worry.

Reg Robbins and Jim Kelly, Fort Worth endurance flyers, are having their fun as they go about the serious business of setting new world's endurance flying record.

So reveals a log of the flight as pieced together from notes scrawled by the two aviators and thrown off at Meacham field.

The attempt started Sunday, May 19. The flyers began their seventh day in the air at 11:33 a. m. Saturday.

Robbins, author of most of the notes, wrote the first day up without the facetitiousness which characterized his latter messages. He was air sick. There was a note dropped at 11 a. m., May 20, addressed to Field Manager W. G. Fuller—"Bill, I can't get well. Send me up some medicine tonight."

Later in the day the flyers requested parachutes.

Outside of notes dropped setting down the amount of gas and oil needed, most of the subsequent notes were full of wise cracks:

"May 21. — "I am wondering how I can divide this time in the air up and sell it for passenger hops, like the farmer sold the old well for post holes."

"May 22. — "Oh boy! Good night. I got six hours sleep, Kelly four. Everything is OK."

"May 22.—(1:29 p. m.)—"4,400 feet over Dallas, just fooling around. Someone from Love Field just came up to look us over."

"May 22.—(4 p. m.)—"Every once in a while I think I smell meat frying. I look and Jim will show me the back of his hand where he hit the exhaust pipe which is red hot all the time."

May 23—(9:30 a. m.)— "I started flying last night about 8 p. m. Jim kept saying something about his wife. Wished he was there with her and a lot of sweet talk. He fell out of the hammock at 9:15 on the gas tank. Said he almost broke a rib."

May 23.—"I am afraid the end is near. Kelly has a date now and is thinking of his wife. I can't refuel alone."

May 23.—(4 p. m.)—"Are we the only endurance flyers in the air now?"

May 23.— "The tachometer shaft broke yesterday. Would like to have another."

May 23.—"Kelly has me so damn high I am about to freeze. He is getting in some practice flying through clouds."

May 24.—"Lots of things we would like to tell about but don't have time, Kelly is reading the paper and flying through clouds at the same time, I am not so hot for it."

May 24.—"I can't do much thinking now. All we are trying to do is just keep going."

Seek to Reopen Dry Raid Killing Case

AURORA, Ill., May 25. — A petition seeking to reopen the investigation of the dry raid killing of Mrs. Lillian De King will be filed in Kane county circuit court Monday, according to Albert J. Kelley, Aurora attorney.

Kelley, who said he was acting on advice from the legislative committee which investigated the case, declared he would seek to have a special grand jury impaneled to conduct futrher investigation.

COULDN'T KEEP HER ON GROUND

"Womes's rights" extend to traveling across the Atlantic ocean in an airship so far as Mrs. Mary Pierce, Park avenue society woman, of New York, is concerned. For though Secretary of State Stimson himself interceded to restrain her in accordance with the anxious protests of her wealthy broker husband and relatives, she boarded the Graf Zeppelin at Friedrichshafen, Germany, just before the dirigible started the trans-Atlantic voyage it failed to complete due to the failure of its motors. The storm encountered by the zeppelin while in its crippled condition and the nerve-racking experiences that attended its battle with the elements failed to dissuade her from her purpose and she declares she will be with the big airship when it starts for America again.

Program for Dedication of New Eastland County Court House Is Complete Except for the Speakers

The committee to arrange a program for the dedication of Eastland county's new courthouse on May 30—Memorial Day—has completed all arrangement with the exception of the matter of speakers. This will be decided within the next few days, according to Earl Bender of Eastland, a member of that committee.

The parade, which will form at 9 o'clock a. m. at the Prairie Oil & Gas company building on South Seaman street and start moving at 10 a. m., will be a long one, numerous entries having already been made in the contests in which cash prizes will be paid the winners. The parade will be in charge of Major Harry Breisford of Eastland.

The band concerts will be one of the features of the program. Five bands have already been signed for the program and it is possible that others may come in later.

Many people of the county, who have not had an opportunity to inspect the county's new courthouse, will avail themselves of the opportunity to do so while the dedication program is on. The county officials have gladly agreed to remain in their offices and keep "open house" during the day of the 30th in order that the people who desire to do so may see inside the new courthouse as well as the outside.

There will be another meeting of the general program committee—in fact a meeting of all com-

GETS FREEDOM WHEN BAIL IS SET AT $20,000

Trial Is Scheduled to Take Place on June the 13th.

AMARILLO, May 25. — The appeal of Judge R. H. Hamilton for release on bond pending his trial on a charge of murder in the shooting to death of his son-in-law, Tom Walton, Jr., was allowed in criminal district court here this morning. His bail was set at $20,000 and Judge Hamilton was released from jail after signers had been found to go bail for him.

Ever since the shooting in Judge Hamilton's office here May 3, the aged jurist has spent the days and nights in a common cell, contemplating his fate and planning for his defense. His trial is scheduled for June 13.

Hearing of his application for release on bond commenced Friday and reached a dramatic climax when Theresa, his 19-year-old daughter, widow of young Walton and a student at the University of Texas, appeared in court and told of the romance and secret marriage which resulted in Walton's death

Torn by conflicting fealty to her dead husband and her father in this hour of his greatest need, Theresa threw all the weight of her girlish devotion into her story, which may save her father from imprisonment or perhaps even worse—the electric chair.

She said she married Walton against the wishes of her father, who requested that the wedding be delayed until Walton had finished school and found a job. But Cupid took a hand and they were wed. It was while Walton confessed the secret wedding to his father-in-law that Judge Hamilton flew into a rage, drew a gun from his desk and shot the youth three times.

The hearing also brought out that Hamilton's life had been threatened on various occasions. A letter, purported to have been written by young Walton to Theresa, was introduced and said in part:

"If I can't have you and if I go, he will go before I do."

The letter, according to Hamilton's counsel, was a threat against the jurist's life.

Upon entering the court room Theresa gave a public demonstration of her devotion to her father and her decision to fight for him when she kissed and embraced him.

Two witnesses were examined in the hearing this morning. Mrs. Lorene Hill, pretty brunette elevator girl in the Amarillo building, where the shooting took place, testified she took "Tommy" Walton to the second floor.

She heard the shots, she declared, and immediately afterwards heard a voice which sounded like Walton's say "Oh, Oh," or "No, No, don't shoot."

Everett L. Smith, jeweler and sporting goods dealer testified that Judge Hamilton and his partner, Hendricks, came to his office about a week before the shooting and asked for an adjustment on a pistol.

Smith loosened a screw, he said, to make the trigger work easier, and also cleaned and oiled the weapon. He declared he was asked if the gun was "loosened so it would fire."

TO ATTEND CONVENTIONS.

Dr. G. M. Stephenson will leave Thursday for Dallas to attend the International Rotary convention for one day before going to Fort Worth for the convention of the State Osteophathic association meeting Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Strangely Slain

The body of Walter Treadway Huntington, above, 21-year-old junior of Harvard College, was found laid out near a roadside in Windsor, Conn. He had been shot behind the left ear, and the weapon was not found. County detectives, however, with no other clues to support the murder theory, expressed the belief that the student had slain himself.

"FORT WORTH" FLIERS BREAK WORLD RECORD

FORT WORTH, May 25.—Reg Robbins and Jim Kelly, piloting their reconditioned Ryan monoplane "Fort Worth" established a new world's record for sustained flight at 7:13:38 tonight, surpassing the record established by the army plane "Question Mark" by one hour at that time. The plane was still going strong and it was believed to be the intention of the two pilots to remain aloft for 300 hours or until the motor of their ship wears out.

The ship at 6:30 took on 110 gallons of gasoline and expected to take on 110 more Sunday at 6:30. When the plane soared past the record mark every whistle and siren in Fort Worth cut loose with deafening noise.

Says Cisco Needs More Signs on Road

Cisco needs more signs out on the highway for the benefit of tourists, said Mrs. P. D. Morris, who with her husband, former judge of the second judicial district of West Virginia, recently took charge of the Mobley hotel here. Many tourists are passing through Cisco who did not know that this splendid little city existed until they were within its limits, she said.

Judge and Mrs. Morris are making considerable improvements in the Mobley. While making an effort to attract tourists trade they do not intend to neglect commercial travelers who are always welcome, they said.

ABOUT THE SAME.

No improvement noted Saturday in the condition of R. A. St. John, who has been ill at his home at 609 West Seventh street for some time. Mr. St. John, whose condition was serious for several days shortly after he was taken ill, rallied about a week ago and since then has remained practically the same.

The Randolph College band and orchestra under the direction of Russell Wiley will play its farewell concert for this school year at the First Christian church this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The public is invited.

Business Men See Better Times for Cisco Ahead With Relief in Sight for Employment Situation

Ever since the recent increase in the price of crude oil a better feeling has been manifest among the businss men of Cisco. Spirits in general have taken a decided upward trend and optimism is freely expressed. The effects of this price increase are yet to be realized but there are already evidences of a "loosening up" in conditions and a freer money circulation.

The effect of the price increase is mainly psychological though that is not to say that the effects will be none the less concrete. Business conditions are more than ever, in these days of rapid transportation and distribution of commodities, determined by the state of mind of the public, so that any event which has a depressing effect is certain to be rfelected in a lowering of the volume of buying. The reverse is true in the case of a cheering incident.

With the excellent rains which have visited this section during the past week or two and the happy increase in the prices of crude oil the business outlook is brighter now than it has been in Cisco for a long while. This is the concensus of Cisco business men who have stated their views frankly, and for the most part, without knowledge that their opinions would appear in print as part of a general survey.

Nick Nicklas, of the Savoy Cafe, believes that the oil price increase will do much toward relieving the situation with regard to employment. "There is going to be plenty of work here during the next few months," he said. As a consequence he is looking forward to a stimulation of business conditions in general.

"Our business is increasing right along," P. B. Glenn, of the J. C. Penney company said. We are already ahead this month on the basis of the same month for last year and the outlook at the present time is mighty good."

H. S. Drumwright, of the John H. Garner's store, is also optimistic. His business has not yet felt the effect of the oil increase but he places responsibility for that upon the weather conditions which have hindered the general movement of people. "I feel certain that we will be materially benefitted, however," he said. "That there has already been a decided revival of good feeling is obvious."

Oil Man's Opinion

"The increase," said W. W. Wallace, superintendent of the Humble Oil and Refining company here, "simply indicates that the health of the oil industry is improving and that it is gradually returning to normalcy. I do not think that it will bring about any extensive wildcatting campaign. Let's hope it will not, because in that circumstance we are apt to get right back where we started. As the price is fixed now the oil man is in a position where he may conduct his business sensibly with a reasonable expectation of profit.

"The oil industry long ago passed the experimental stage. It is a business pure and simple and controlled by the same conditions of supply and demand that control other interests. The past two or three years it has been 'in the dumps' as one would say. Right now it appears to be recovering from this depression and approaching a stable basis. With a proper reaction to this condition normalcy can be brought about.

"Of course the effect of the increase upon business conditions in general wil be very favorable. It will stimulate trade through stimulation of optimism. We want that stimulation to be permanent."

"We have already felt the effects of it," said F. A. Blankenbeckler, of the B. & H. Motor company. "Our week's business has shown a favorable upward trend while tension seems to be relaxing rapidly. During the next few weeks we look

SENTENCE OF BOY, ONLY 6, IS SET ASIDE

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., May 25. — Circuit Judge Frank Bailey today issued a writ of prohibition setting aside the 15-year reformatory sentence imposed upon Carl Mahan, 6, who was sentenced for the killing of Cecil Can Hoose, an 8-year old playmate.

Judge Bailey ruled that County Judge J. W. Butcher who sentenced the boy, "exceeded his authority when he sentenced a lad of these tender years" to the reformatory.

The case was unprecedented in Kentucky.

After sentence was pronounced a motion for a new trial and a petition for the writ of prohibition were filed.

Judge Bailey held that under the common law a child under seven years of age was not "legally or morally responsible" and that no child under 10 could be sentenced to the reformatory.

SHALL THE PRESS BE MUZZLED?

Are the people of the United States entitled to know the truth about public business?

Are the rank and file of our citizenship, who pay the taxes in time of peace and who fight the battles in time of war, to be kept in the dark about the doings of the members of the United States senate whose salaries are paid by the people?

Shall a gag be placed upon the free press of America?

These are the questions that are involved in the barring from the floor of the United States senate of Paul Mallon, representative of the United Press, because he printed the way the senators voted on the confirmation of Lenroot.

Mallon had a right to get this information and he had a right to print it.

The senate of the United States has no right to censor the press of this nation. The newspapers are the judges of what they will print—and not the senate. Once let the precedent be established that a majority of the senate can say what shall and what shall not go into the columns of the press, and all bars are down.

Millions upon millions of citizens depend upon the United Press for news of what is happening in Washington and throughout the world. An attempt to discipline the United Press is a blow to the hosts of readers who rely upon the "U. P." for their information. And that they rely rightly upon that organization is shown in the present instance, which manifests the enterprise and zeal of the corps of the United Press. And no matter what action the senate may take, the United Press will continue to get the news.

In fact, newspapers who use other news services and who took occasion to "banner" on the barring of the United Press representative from the floor of the senate did not feature the significant fact that all press representatives have been so barred. This is not the battle of an individual nor of a single news association. It is a fight in which the rights of all newspapers are on the same side and those rights are involved whether they will or no.

The history of America is filled with instances where one man or a set of men have sought to interfere with the press. And history records the story of the downfall that those meddlers came to in the end.

The senate says that the vote should have been kept secret. That is a senate rule and may be binding upon members of the senate but not upon anyone else.

Are those aggrieved senators ashamed of the way they voted or afraid for the people to know how they cast their vote? If so, they should resign and let the positions be filled by fearless men who vote their convictions with the staunchness of a Carl Schurz or a Sam Houston.

Much has been said by some senators about the Constitution. We wonder if those senators ever read the provision of the Constitution which guarantees freedom of the press?

Why He Resigned

A district police commander handed in his resignation at Kansas City because 729 gallons of confiscated alcohol mysteriously disappeared from police storage. Perhaps it was a case of evaporation.

Plans of the Administration

Pres. Hoover and the congressional leaders of the republican administration have let it be known that they are going to put over a farm relief bill shorn of the export debenture plan; they are going to put over a tariff measure acceptable to the president; they are going to put over a reapportionment measure and then the flag will fall on the special session of congress.

There is a republican majority of 10 in the upper house; there is a republican majority of 100 in the lower house. Indeed, the administration is republican from the top to the bottom rails. Practical politicians backed by big business in this big business age are behind the program and the chief publicity agent of the administration, Dr. Mark Sullivan, predicts that the president and his supporters will win in a walk.

Liberty Defeats Road Bonds

Liberty county voters defeated a road bond issue of $2,500,000 by a small majority. This is the second defeat for road bond proposals. There is a highway which covers the territory from Houston to Beaumont with a gap in the county of Liberty. It will not be a complete highway until the tax paying voters of Liberty come out of their trance and declare themselves to be citizens of the new Texas and a new civilization. It will come some day but why should the pullbacks delay its coming?

OIL NEWS OF SOUTHWEST

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 25. — With eight test wells drilling below the 6,400 foot mark and nearing the "big pay," royalties in the Oklahoma City oil field have started skyward again.

A price of $3,500 an acre has been put on some of the acreage. Very few changes are being made, however.

Approximately 64 per cent of Oklahoma's crude oil production has a gravity of between 38 and 38.9 degrees. Under the recent rise in price schedules, the crude will bring from $1.55 to $1.60 a barrel. Under previous posting, the average price for Oklahoma crude was $1.25 to $1.30.

In proportion Kansas has profited more than Oklahoma by the crude oil price hike. The new schedule makes one day of Kansas production worth $176,782.05 compared to $142,891.95 before the raise. Three portable compressors are being moved into the new Asher field and No 1 Laster, of Slick-Prairie will be put on the lift immediately. No. 1 Laster flowed 2,105 barrels in the last 24 hours. The well is down to 3,679 feet.

No. 1 of the Simms Oil company —the discovery well—declined to 3,315 barrels in the last 24 hour period.

WICHITA, Kan., May 25. — The Kratz test in Sumner county, seven miles west of Arkansas City, in which 15,000,000 feet of gas was encountered at 1,555 feet, will be saved as a gasser, Dickey & Shaver, operators, have decided. Another offset to the Schwartz producer, will be started immediately. The big gasser is the first in that area to be completed at that level.

GREAT WHEAT CROP INSURED BY GOOD RAINS

STAMFORD, May 25.—"The recent rains in the Panhandle and South Plains sections of west Texas practically insures a great wheat crop. Conservative estimates place the crop at thirty million bushels in 1929 as against twenty-two million bushels in 1928."

The above statement was made by Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas chamber of commerce, in a letter to U. S. Pawkett, traffic manager, in which Wade gave instructions to the traffic department to urge the common carriers to provide sufficient rolling stock to afford prompt movement of this great crop.

"The advent of the combine in the harvest of grain places a new situation upon the movement of the grain crop," declared the head of the regional organization, in that the work of harvesting is accomplished in a much shorter time than under the old way, hence the necessity of prompt and vigorous efforts upon the parts of the railroads in handling this immense crop."

TRAFFIC TIED UP BY WRECK ON T. AND P.

A spectacular fire which destroyed two tank cars filled with naptha and tied up traffic on the main line of the Texas & Pacific railroad for several hours broke out at 1:15 Friday afternoon, between Ranger and Tiffin.

Three cars—two loaded with naptha and the other with cotton —were derailed at 11 o'clock Friday morning. They were a part of an eastbound freight. As workmen were trying to clear the track, friction caused the naptha to ignite.

The cars had leaked and the liquid that had flowed down a ravine caused flames to crackle for a distance of 75 yards, it was estimated, and a heavy pall of smoke added to the spectacular effect. The fact that the cars were derailed not far from a tank farm, with its 55,000-barrel tanks, did not create an added menace however as men who viewed the fire said the flames did not threaten the big tanks.

The car of cotton was saved. No estimate could be obtained as to the extent of the loss though it was considered that both the tank cars and their contents were virtually a total loss.

Telegraph wires were burned down. One passenger train was delayed about three hours and another train was delayed about two hours.

Tourist Business Is Major Industry

The tourist business has become probably our largest business. It is estimated that tourists, chiefly Americans, spend nearly $3,500,000,000 annually. The competition for this money, Nation's Business says, is as keen as in all other lines of modern business. Mere publicity is no longer enough to attract travelers. There must be a selling campaign. If you want some of the business, you must promote a desire to travel, and then turn that desire toward your community.

When you receive an inquiry for information—that is an opportunity. The person inquiring is, as yet, merely looking in the show window—yours and a lot of other windows. He or she must be sold.

Since the war Europe has made a determined drive for American tourists, and so successfully that the number attracted abroad has about doubled in five years.

European steamships, hotels, resorts and governments are spending several million dollars a year in advertising and Europe has many of the reasons folks leave home.

American communities are in competition with this advertising, but there is no reason to be downhearted about it. Europe is persuading people to leave home. After they have made up their minds to travel, they must still decide where to go. We must compete for that decision with advertising skill and salesmanship. In the end, European competition by encouraging the travel spirit probably helps us more than it hurts. When people get that spirit they may go to Europe. But eventually they will get around to us.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

NAN CARROLL is secretary to Attorney JOHN CURTIS MORGAN. His present case is the defense of the former telephone operator of a fashionable country club who has been indicted for blackmailing club members. Nan with a quick, logical mind, is able to make valuable suggestions which Morgan incorporates in his plans for the defense.

While they are working, IRIS MORGAN, haughty and beautiful wife of John Curtis Morgan, enters the office accompanied by little CURTIS MORGAN. She peevishly demands a large check for a shopping expedition, and at last departs, leaving Nan to act as nursemaid to little Curtis.

Nan bitterly resents being thus treated as a menial. At 5:30 when WILLIS TODD calls Nan to go to dinner with him, she is almost hysterical from the afternoon's strain. After dinner they go to Nan's small apartment where for the fifth time, Willis proposes marriage to her. She tells him that she is almost ready to take her bar examination and that she cannot give up her career for marriage. When Willis accuses Morgan of selfishly overworking Nan, she flies angrily to the defense of her employer.

Willis, stung to the quick by her defense of Morgan, tells her she is in love with Morgan and that it is he who has come between them. Nan blanches at his accusation. To save her life she cannot tell Willis it is a lie. When he leaves her, she is desperately lonely, afraid, stunned by the force of the discovery she has made about herself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I'm more than a private secretary and you know it, Willis Todd!" Nan's voice broke on a childish sob, which made her still more angry. "You know good and well that I've studied night after night so that I could become a lawyer. You know I'll be ready to take my examinations to be admitted to the bar by next june—"

"Yes, and then what?" Willis interrupted vehemently. "You'll be right on working for Morgan as his private secretary, or, at best, as a female Blake at $50 a week. But please, honey, don't let's quarrel. I love you and I want to marry you. If you love me, you want to marry me and—let's start a regular, old-fashioned family. Doesn't it sound sane and sweet, a little attractive, honey-girl? Our own home, instead of a light-housekeeping one-room apartment and an office where you're treated like a servant by your employer's wife. Your own husband to boss around and inspire and urge into a big man—as you're now doing for another woman's husband—"

As she listened, Nan's face had grown tender and wistful, but at the last words anger flooded her face with rich color and she sprang to her feet, tearing her hands out of his grasp. "You make me sick!" she stormed, clenching her hands and blinking at him rapidly through tears. "Just when you've got me all mushy and ready to say 'yes' to anything ,you have to spoil it all by saying something hateful about—about Mr. Morgan. Don't make fun of you and you don't accuse YOU of toadying to anyone—"

"No," Willis interrupted her quietly, his young mouth very grim, "because you know I'm not on a par with him. The relationship is purely that of buyer and general manager—"

"Oh!" Nan gasped, retreating from him slowly, her brown eyes widening enormous with horror. "Oh, Willis Todd! How dare you say a thing like that to me?"

Willis rose and followed her, his face closing firmly upon her shoulders, his eyes, not so many inches above hers, narrowing as they searched her scarlet face. "If you'll tell me it isn't true, I'll apologize, Nan, and I'll never hint at such a thing again."

"Just what do you mean—just what isn't true?" she challenged him furiously, shrugging her shoulders to rid the mof his hands, but succeeding.

"Are you in love with John Curtis Morgan?" Willis asked bluntly, but his voice quivered and a muscle jerked in his suddenly pale cheek.

Childishness and the red tide of anger fled from Nan Carroll's face as if she had been stricken deadly ill in that instant. Her eyes were like great black disks of pain and horror as they clung to his face, unable to tear themselves away. She stood quite still, her shoulders no longer aware of the hurting pressure of his hands. "You see!" Willis Todd turned wearily away. And like an intolerably wounded small boy he flung up an arm and bowed his head against the crook of it.

That gesture of his awoke Nan from her trance of horror, did something to her heart. Taking a quick, jerky step toward him, she slipped her arms gently about him, pressed her cheek against his bowed head.

"Nan's sorry," she crooned, in an apathetic, breaking, but comforting little voice. "Please, Willis, I said we weren't to quarrel. Don't—and if you want me to very much, I'll marry you, dear—"

His head came up with a jerk; his gray eyes swept over her face wildly, incredulously. She smiled through her tears, nodding slowly, like a child that has been scolded and is to be reinstated.

"Then you don't love Morgan?" he blurted out joyfully. "Say it, Nan! Say it, darling—oh-h, I see. You can't say it. Then why do you want to marry ME?" he demanded violently, because his pain was so great.

"I think," Nan began steadily, "that you can't realize how insulting you are. I should have thought it would be sufficient for me to say I would marry you."

"And I," Willis told her, not at all steadily, "don't want you to marry me if you love another man. The words have been said between us at last, Nan. I've been in an agony of jealousy for two years, and now that I've admitted it at last, you'll have to answer my question. I'm sorry, Nan, but it would be no good pretending I'd never asked you and you'd—evaded the question. We'll be so happy, darling, if you say, 'I love you, Willis, I don't love Morgan.' Can you say it, Nan?" he insisted, his hands clenched at his sides.

"I refuse to answer a question you have no right to ask me," Nan blazed. "I never dreamed you had such ugly thoughts about me in your mind these two years. I'm lucky to have found out in time."

"Listen, Nan," he urged miserably. "Face the truth, no matter how much it hurts. When I proposed tonight for the fifth time you were going to refuse me again—did, in fact, on the score of wanting to keep on with your career. But as soon as I made you realize that you were in love with John Curtis Morgan, a married man, you wanted to hide from the truth, run away from it into my arms. You're naturally to fine and good to bear the thought of being in love with another woman's husband. But—I love you with all my heart, and you've got to love me that way, or we shan't ever be married. Am I right, honey? All you've got to do is to deny it all—and mean it—"

But he could not go on, with those despairing, horror-stricken eyes fixed upon him. He turned away from her, lurched like a drunken man to the table upon which he had laid his hat, snatched it up and lurched on toward the door.

Nan wtached him go, the back of one trembling hand crushed against her mouth, as if to stifle a cry. When the door closed sharply upon him, she ran toward it, leaned against it, panting, her eyes terrible with fright.

"Oh, Willis, come back! Don't leave me alone! You've always been so sweet to me, Willis! You can't be so cruel as to leave me alone NOW! If you leave me alone, I'll have to think—and I don't want to think, I don't dare to think! Oh, Willis!" But her voice was only a husky, terrified whisper that the man who was plunging down the hall could not possibly have heard.

For a long minute Nan Carroll crouched stricken against the door which had closed upon Willis Todd. Then the necessity for action drove her in a frenzy about the room. She swept the cushions from the couch into a big armchair; tore off the cretonne cover and folded it with none of the loving care and pride which was the usual portion of the pretty thing; turned back the pale yellow, fluffy blanket and the hemstitched sheet; raced to her clothes closet and returned, sobbing, with pillow, nightdress, negligee and slippers.

"Willis Todd's crazy—crazy with jealousy!" she panted, still in that husky, terrified whisper with which she had tried to call him back. "But I won't think about it! I won't!" she repudiated the subject furiously as she ran to her dressing table and began to undress.

She scurried, as if pursued by devils, into the tiny bathroom, turned on the hot water, and while the tub filled cleansed her face of makeup, savagely massaged it with two-dollar-a-box "skin food," brushed her teeth as violently as if she bore a grude against their white-bleaming regularity.

When the tub was full of almost unbearedly hot water, Nan stretched her small body in it and fiercely courted relaxation. "I WILL relax!" she told herself angrily. "I WON'T let that idiot upset me so that I can't sleep. Imagine the nerve of him, saying—but I won't think of it! I hope that Fleming woman hasn't skipped town. I'll bet she knows Mr. Morgan has guessed her secret. Lots to do tomorrow. Got to relax and sleep—relax and then sleep and sleep," she forced herself to repeat slowly, drowsily, as the warm water lapped against her white flesh.

When at last she was ready for bed, negligee thrown to the foot of her couch, a thick volume on criminal law on her bedside table, to be used shamelessly but somewhat profitably in reading herself to sleep, she suddenly remembered something.

"Cream bottle!" she whispered. "I've got to pay him, too. Let's see—where's his bill?" And she pattered swiftly in dark-blue satin mules to the secretary-bookcase which dominated the best-lighted corner of her one-room apartment.

"There! That shows I'm not upset, doesn't it?" she triumphed. "I wouldn't remember to set out the cream bottle and pay the old milk company if I was upset by Willis' foolish—oh!" She stopped short as she jerked on the light in the reading lamp upon the opened secretary, for the sudden illumination had forced upon her attention something which she would have given a week's salary not to have seen that night.

It was just a snapshot framed in beaten silver, but it had the power to break her hard-won control. A newspaper photographer's picture of a short, slim girl and a very tall, thin man, caught in the act of walking down a flight of white marble steps, each carrying a briefcase, each grinning triumphantly into the camera. The snapshot was nearly two years old, taken at the successful conclusion of one of Morgan's biggest murder trials. The caption under the picture as it had appeared in the afternoon paper was: "Attorney John Curtis Morgan and his charming secretary, Miss Nan Carroll, leaving the courthouse a few minutes after the lawyer had won freedom for his client, 'Big Joe' Connors, acquitted of the murder of 'Bos' Powers."

Why had she framed it and cherished it these two years? Because it was an amusing, even flattering picture of herself, or—because the photographer had happened to catch the John Curtis Morgan that she liked best—a boyish, friendly, eager Morgan shorn of his courtroom dignity and austerity?

A tiny voice deep within her heart whispered: "You framed it and kept it before you these two years because it shows you and him together. Silly girl! Didn't you know?"

"It's not true!" Nan denied hotly. "I'll tear the thing up—see!" But her fingers refused to obey her. Sobbing, she thrust the framed picture into a little drawer of the secretary, jerked out the light and ran back to bed. She had forgotten the cream bottle and the dairyman's bill—

She made no further pretense then; did not open the heavy book on criminal law; jerked the chain of her bedside lamp and crushed her face into her pillow, to intensify the darkness. For shame had claimed her for its own.

"In love with a married man!" The ugly phrase leaped at her in the darkness, and other ugly phrases, which had only waited for darkness, came hurtling after it. There was a queer comfort in letting the ugly things claw at her, for the very pain and disgust kept her from complete realization. But when the unequal battle was over and her hear thad abjectly accepted every arrow that shame held in its quiver, Nan found that not so easily was she to be let off. The love at which the arrows had been so savagely thrust was still alive in her heart, amazingly alive and growing with every moment, now that its existence had been acknowledged.

"This can't be me!" She struck her breast sharply, as if to kill the thing that was growing so rapidly in her heart. "Not Nan Carroll! Why, I'M proud! I'M honorable! I've always been as square as a man. Nan Carroll simply can't be in love with another's woman's husband—but, oh, I am, I am! Not with Iris Morgan's husband—no, no! She makes him silly and small, calls him jack—no, no! I don't love HIM! It's my own John Curtis Morgan that I love, the John Curtis Morgan I've helped to make the man nobody knows but me.

"Is it such a sin to love him when I helped make him? She doesn't know him at all—my John Curtis Morgan. Three years—three years—and all this time I've been loving him and didn't know it."

And then, because she couldn't help herself, she thought back over those three years in the new light of knowledge that had been forced upon her tonight. She saw herself again as she had been then—a deadly serious, high-minded girl of 21, just graduated from the state university, where she had learned stenography along with more lofty academic subjects.

A thin little girl, brown eyes shadowed with grief over her father's death, long brown hair wrapped in heavy braids about her small head, a Phi Beta Kappa key shamefacedly hidden away in her trunk along with her diploma. The dean himself had given her a letter of introduction to Morgan, who was just beginning to add luster to the university as district attorney of the state's largest city.

Since she was an alumna of his own university, Morgan had treated her with grave respect and friendliness from the very first: had quickly made a place for her in his office as a typist, and then, within three months, had promoted her to the post of private secretary to himself.

"I must have been in love with him even then," she whimpered against her pillow. "What a ninny I was not to know it! Did I—show it? Do I show it now?" The thought struck her with such sharp new terror that her sobs were stifled in her throat. Shame made her body burn so hotly that she tossed off the blanket.

"And I prided myself so on my interest in law!" she gibed at herself mercilessly. "Worked like a slave, worked till all hours of the night—because I was so interested in my work! Idiot! Fool! Running after him all that time, and didn't have sense enough to know it! Hoping he'd pat you on the head and tell you you were a nice little girl, to work so hard! Hoping he'd stay at night and work, too—just you and he! Oh, oh!"

The worm turned then, however. Her self-respect reared its bruised head. "You may have been in love with him all this time, Nan Carroll, but you loved your work for its own sake, too. You worked until all hours of the night, not just to please him, but because you were vitally interested, because there was work to be done and you'd rather die than shirk. Don't make yourself out worse than you are."

"But that's bad, bad!" Nan's shame answered her self-respect. "I've always despised girls who made sentimental fools of themselves over their bosses. And now I'm worse than the worst of them. I love him so terribly that I'd die happy if he would kiss me just once—as he kisses HER."

And then she would have given anything to banish the picture which her last words brought up: Iris Morgan, arrogant, beautiful Iris, casually, even boredly accepting Morgan's passionate adoration. During three years of necessarily intimate contact as the lawyer's private secretary, Nan had been forced to witness Morgan kissing his wife on a number of occasions—leave-takings, arrivals from journeys, and, occasionally, kisses for which there was no extraordinary occasion, except that the man's overwhelming love for his wife made him forget that an office was no place for the demonstration of passion, even though it was marital.

"Why didn't I realize every time I saw him kiss her that I would have given my life to be in her place?" the girl marveled in her misery. "I thought I flinched because I hate her, because she's unworthy of him, but it was because I was jealous! Jealous of a man's love for his wife!" she taunted herself, taking a cruel satisfaction in hurting herself.

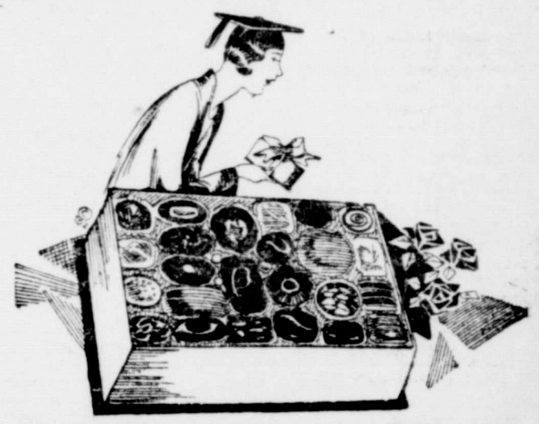

"Probably she's all right, and I'm the one that's been all wrong. Maybe she's fine and sweet and gracious, and I've been unable to see her clearly because of my jealousy. But no, no! She isn't good! She's mean and cruel and selfish. She takes everything from him and gives him nothing not even respect. She despises him because he loves her so abjectly, but she doesn't hesitate to take advantage of his fame and his big fees. But—he's hers. And he loves her. Oh, what am I going to DO! Oh, dear God, what am I going to do?"

"Hot Shot" Marriages Will Be Thing of the Past When Notice of Intention Law Goes in Effect

By RAYMOND BROOKS.
Daily News Austin Correspondent.

AUSTIN, May 25.—"Hot Shot" marriages will be a thing of the yet past less than three weeks hence, according to authors of the "three day notice of intention to marry" law which will go into effect along with many other major laws of the regular session, on June 12. All the "90-day" bills of the regular session become effective on the same date as the marriage law, which requires public notice of intention to marry, and requires the prospective bridegroom to furnish a physician's certificate of his freedom from social diseases.

Blanks have been sent to all county clerks on which to register the public banns of marriage after June 12. Some of the other general laws which will go into effect June 12 are:

Authorizing self-paying dormitories at University of Texas.
Creates rural credit unions.
Large banks may increase number of directors to 25.
Create dairy experiment station near Waco.
Theft of cotton or cotton seed a felony.
Civil appeals courts may hear cases involving $100 judgment.
Unlawful to drink in airplane or common carrier.
School teachers must be American citizens.
Sale of real estate for delinquent taxes only on foreclosure.
Specifying bond of executors and administrators.
Validating La Feria water control and improvement district No. 3, Cameron county.
Pay for Republican presidential electors.
Civil service for counties over 150,000 population.
Deer season Nov. 16-30 west of the Pecos.

NEW BUICK TO BE INTRODUCED NEXT SATURDAY

Buick dealers are preparing to entertain the largest crowds in their history here next Saturday, June 1, when the Marquette, new six cylinder automotive creation which Buick is introducing into the medium priced field, will go on display throughout the entire country.

Pleasing in appearance, masterful in performance, the Marquette is in every sense a quality product—designed, styled, and manufactured with the same care and precision that has typified Buick products during the 25 years of the company's existence.

There are six models in the Marquette line, the two-door sedan, four-door sedan, business coupe, special coupe, roadster and phaeton. They will be offered in exquisite color combinations which have been scientifically developed with a view to serviceability.

During the coming week Buick dealers throughout America will prepare their salesrooms for displaying the Marquette. Public interest in the new product has become exceedingly keen and Buick officials therefore believe that all previous records will be shattered when the Marquette is shown to the motoring public for the first time next Saturday.

With the initial display of the Marquette many features, new to the automotive industry, will make their frist appearance. The new line, built by Buick, will be priced within the reach of millions.

OIL ACTIVITY STIMULATED IN COLEMAN

(Special to the News.)

COLEMAN, May 25.—Since the advance in the price of crude oil and the discovery of profitable shallow gas wells in the area, section 72, G. H. & H. Ry. company survey, purchased recently from the Overall estate by C. E. Shore, is at this time getting one of the most active drilling plays in Coleman county. The entire section is leased in several tracts to Kiester & Stepp, E. H. Stepp, Jameson, Pollard, Forster, Guardian Oil company, Atlantic and the Independent Oil & Gas company.

Kiester & Stepp have just completed a two million foot gas well in a sand found at 780 feet. The gas show, by test, a gasoline content of 2.64 gallons per thousand feet and the sand has been correlated with the shallow Burkett production formation. Since the well was blown it shows a light spray of oil. It is located in the northwest portion of the north-east 100 acres of the section.

E. H. Stepp's No. 1 well, 750 feet from the west line and 450 feet from the north line of the section has been completed as a three million foot gasser two feet in the sand found at 925 feet The gas in this well shows a gasoline content in excess of two gallons per thousand feet and the sand is correlated with that found on Babington to the north.

Kiester & Stepp have completed a well in the 780 foot sand in the northwest eorner of their 100 acres. It is showing for as good, or better, than well No. 1. E. H. Stepp has moved on a rig for his No. 2 test between his No. 1 and the Kiester & Stepp well now being completed.

Kiester & Stepp and E. H. Stepp have made several new locations in the section to be started in a few days and Jameson, Pollard, Forster and the Guardian Oil company will do test work on their acreage adjoining the Kiester & Stepp and E. H. Stepp leases during the early summer.

Jamison, Pollard & Foster have made locations for a 2,300 foot test in section 11, G. H. & H. Ry. company survey on the John J. Hutchins land. The location is in the northeast 80 acres of the section 200 feet from the west line of the 80 acres and 200 feet from the north line. It is 1,500 feet southwest of the Cheney, Anzac, Midwest & Continental No. 11, which is one of the largest and most consistent producers in the county. The test will be started on or before June 15th.

A million foot gasser has been reported on the Gill ranch in a 40-foot sand at 815 feet. The well is near the center of the Midwest Exploration company's holdings on the Howard Samuell block. They are setting 6 5-8 casing at 865 for deeper drilling to test sand expected at 1,000 feet. If the sand is missed the well will be plugged back for a gasser.

GOOD INTENTION FAIL TO PREVENT $40 FINE

WORCESTER, Mass., May 25.—When Joe Ryan, 21, appeared in court, charged with misappropriating an automobile, he admitted having taken the car but said he "didn't mean any harm."

"I don't know that Cain had any intention of doing Abel any harm—but he killed him," observed Judge Utley in fining the defendant $40.

IMPRISONMENT REWARDED.

BANGOR, Me., May 25.—Gideon Poulin and Fred Lizotte were paid $212 each by Penobscot county for 106 days they spent in jail. They were held as material witnesses in a case in which the defendant eventually was exonerated. Officials decided they should be paid $2 for every day they were kept behind the bars.

CISCO ELKS PREPARE TO ENTERTAIN VISITORS TODAY

CARAVAN DUE TO REACH HERE AT 2 O'CLOCK

Plenty of Cars Are Needed for Transportation.

Cisco Elks are working energetically in the preparation of their plans for the entertainment of their visiting brothers who will be here this afternoon at the conclusion of an oil belt tour which ends the state convention at Breckenridge. While the rain has placed their arrangements in a somewhat problematic state the Cisco club is confident that, given fair weather for the afternoon, they will be able to carry out an entertainment which will be just the thing for delegates tired out with the ordinary run of convention programs and eager for a change.

The plans for this program are in the hands of a committee consisting of Hoyt Agnew, chairman, J. A. Bearman, Mike L. McGannon and Hugh White. Mr. White is an ex-officio member by virtue of his being exalted ruler of the Cisco lodge. Assisting the committee is J. E. T. Peters, of the chamber of commerce, which organization has pledged its support to the club in this matter.

The number of visitors who will be in Cisco, exclusive of Elks from Breckenridge, Eastland, Ranger and other oil belt towns, is problematical. Estimates range from 200 to 300.

To be certain that all who wish to make the tour will be comfortably taken care of the Cisco committee has issued an appeal to all Elks who can take their cars with the caravan which is to leave here this morning for Breckenridge. The cars will be assembled in front of the Judia building from which point they will leave at 8:30, arriving at Breckenridge in time to start the oil belt tour from that point at 10:30 o'clock.

From Breckenridge the caravan will go to Ranger for an informal reception at the Elks club and a visit to a big natural gasoline plant. Leaving Ranger it will proceed to Eastland for a second reception and a visit to the Leon River plant of the Oil Belt Power company.

After this they will come to Cisco, scheduled to arrive here around 5 o'clock. The visitors will be taken on a drive over the city and then to Lake Cisco where the Elks call for their entertainment with a barbecue, swimming, boating and other sports. If the weather prevails the barbecue will be served at a point some distance up the lake to which the entire party will be transported in cars under the present arrangement.

The Cisco high school band will furnish music under the direction of G. W. Collum.

All available boats at the lake will be needed to carry the party from the landing to the site of the barbecue. These boats should be at the landing by 2 o'clock.

I. P. Inaugurates New Merchandize Service

The Texas and Pacific railroad on May 4 established a fast merchandise schedule which it has maintained continuously since except for two occasions when unforseen interference prevented.

Under this arrangement the 38 package merchandise cars operated on regular schedule, are placed for loading at Dallas and Fort Worth at 8 a. m. daily, except Sunday, closed and pulled from the house at 4:30 p. m. and moved to the Lancaster yards at Fort Worth where they are classified for station order. At 9:30 they are picked up by a special package merchandise train moving nothing but merchandize, at 1.44 a. m. the train reaches Cisco. Here the cars destined for this city are placed for unloading at 6:45 a. m. bill revised and freight bills made out for delivery at 7:30 a. m.

"ANTI-SCANDAL" CLUB.

LONDON, May 25.—The founder of England's "National Anti-Scandal club" has decided to change the name to "The Fellowship of St. George." The Rev. Hank Melville, Vicar of Exhall, has declared war on scandal and is organizing clubs over the country to combat slander by "word, voice or pen."

SPEAKING OF OPERATIONS—

Don't worry, girls; he'll get well, all right. At the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore, he is registered as "E. C. Brimmer, of New York City," but even under the operating robe and stubbly whiskers, he's plainly Richard Dix. The screen star, in ill health for some time following injuries received in a dare-devil picture, underwent a major operation. Dix figured it would bring unfavorable publicity to allow his identity to be known, but here he smiled when an NEA Cisco Daily News photographer found him.

No Need of More Rain Here Now; Almost Inch and One-Half Falls in Cisco Thursday and Saturday

Whe, but a short while ago Eastland county farmers, stockmen and business men were crying a need of more rain they are now as loudly crying "Enough." When it rains it pours is a phrase applicable to the present weather conditions here. Two heavy rains which fell during the period between Thursday and Saturday poured almost an inch and one-half of moisture upon Cisco and its trade territory.

The rain Thursday night, according to the guage at the city hall, measured one-half an inch while that which fell Saturday morning registered seven-eighths of an inch.

The past two weeks have seen frequent showers of about the same character. The total precipitation for the week ending Saturday, May 18, was 2.3 inches.

NEW WELLS TO START NEAR STINNETT 1.

Ramsower Area, North of Cisco, Sees New Activity.

Two wells will start immediately in the vicinity of the Stinnett No. 1 which recently extended the Ramsower pool a mile west. The Belva Oil company will drill the No. 2 Good, 600 feet east of the extension well and the Arnold No. 1, a quarter of a mile north of the Stinnett well, will start at once. The pool is 12 miles west of Ranger.

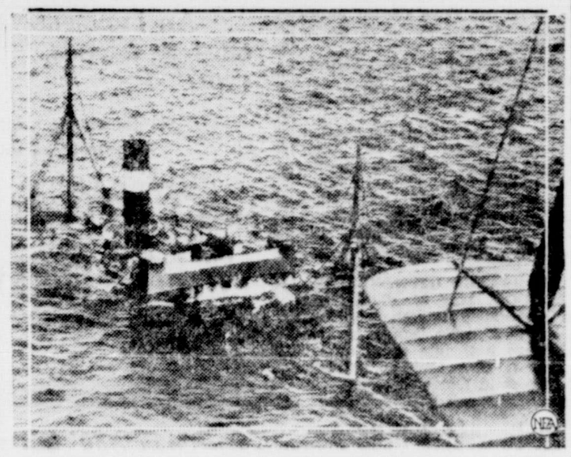

In the meantime, the new producer—which is owned by the Belva Oil company and the Braden Oil company—is making 7,500,000 cubic feet of gas a day and a big output of oil. Tuesday, the well made 325 barrels but the oil sand has been drilled into only a foot and a half and the flow is expected to prove much greater when the sand is further penetrated. Its best performance was 55 barrels in one hour.

How valuable a big gas well is may be realized from the fact that the value of the gas from the Stinnett is estimated at $500 a day or $15,000 a month—besides the value of the oil from this well.

A line is being laid to take care of the gas. The Arab Gasoline corporation will take the gas.

For three years, the Stinnett No. 1—which was owned by the Braden company—produced at 3,259. Then the rig burned down and plugging the well was contemplated. But the Belva agreed to deepen the well for an interest so the derrick was re-built and the well was drilled less than 250 feet deeper to the Bond sand. The total depth at present is 3,503 feet.

FREIGHTER IN SUBMARINE ROLE

What!—a submarine with a smoke stack? No, but this photo is just as unusual, for it shows an ocean freighter on its way to Davy Jones' locker after a collosion off the coast of England. Within five minutes after the Danish S. S. Doure rammed the Swedish steamer Kajsa, the latter craft had completely submerged. This airplane view shows the Kajsa just before the final dive. All of the crew were saved.

FRAZAR FARM IS A GREAT CISCO ASSET

A man remarked the other day that one of the outstanding Cisco institutions was the Frazar Poultry farm. The standard of quality which this concern is fostering is very much in keeping with the ideals of Cisco citizenship—"The best that can be obtained."

Situated on the outskirts of Cisco on the greatest highway in the world—the Bankhead with its hundreds of tourists every day of the year—this farm with its thousands of young chicks and pure bred hens has a great advertising value for Cisco. And the observer does not need to be told that the favorite pen is headed by a 313 egg hen and a $250 cock, in order to know that there is quality in the strain. The fine silky appearance of the live, wide-awake fowls tells the story to the passerby.

And how times and methods do change! It was not long ago that one thought a big range necessary to the proper growth of chickens. Now Mrs. Frazar will lead one into a room 14x20 with a 12-foot ceiling and if she can get one's attention, will explain that all that live, young, energetic aggregate of baby chicks numbers the unbelieveable sum of 5,400—all in this small room. Some of them are a few days old while others are three weeks old, and all in excellent health. She will explain that they may be raised to broiler sizes without any range at all. Of course she uses every known device for sanitation.

When asked if she ever doctors a sick chick she said she did not. Since she raises breeders, she wants them to be hardy and does not care to sell a chick that is not sturdy—a kind of survival of the fittest, she says. She has many letters from patrons telling of their satisfaction with her breed of chicks—a 95 per cent maturity is not uncommon. Some raise the entire lot without loss of any.

BUY WEIGHING MACHINES.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Siam not only leads all Asiatic countries but of all nations is the sixth largest importer of American built coin operated automatic vending machines, according to a recent survey of the National Geographic society. It is believed the machines are not used merely for decorative purposes, but rather, are performing services similar to those in America — weighing Siamese beauties and dispensing sweets to the crowds who frequent religious fairs, temples and shrines.

IMPORTANCE OF NONSENSE.

LONDON, May 25.—Nonsense is an exceedingly important element in life and people lacking in nonsense are not quite right, according to J. Dover Wilson, professor of English in London university.

Salmon May Go Up in Elevators

LONDON, May 25. — Mr. and Mrs. Salmon have joined the de luxe class of the fish family. It has been practically decided that they shall have electric elevators to assist them in negotiating high river dams.

This scheme was brought forward in the house of lords when it was pointed out that the salmon could not jump over the proposed 100-foot dam to be built in the Farrar river, Scotland.

If the salmons want to get over that dam they merely swim into a large box and are automatically lifted to the top of the dam and dumped on the other side. The electric elevator works day and night and will be of sufficient capacity to care for all the salmon who wish to be transferred over the dam.

Plans for Event Next Thursday About Completed.

A special invitation is extended all ex-service men in Eastland county, all gold star mothers and fathers, veterans of all wars in which the United States has participated and the members of all oganizations such as the U. D. C. and D. A. R. to attend the ceremonies of dedication of the Eastland county court house and Memorial day services at Eastland Thursday, May 30, it was announced by C. E. Yates, of Cisco, a member of the executive committee for the event. Special places will be reserved for them at this ceremony, Mr. Yates said. They will also be provided with special badges.

Plans for the dedication have about been completed, Mr. Yates stated. These include dedication ceremonies, which will occupy about 30 minutes, to be followed with a brief memoral for deceased ex-service men; a parade; band concerts; a mammoth picnic lunch to be spread upon a table 3,000 feet long and addresses by a number of prominent Texas citizens.

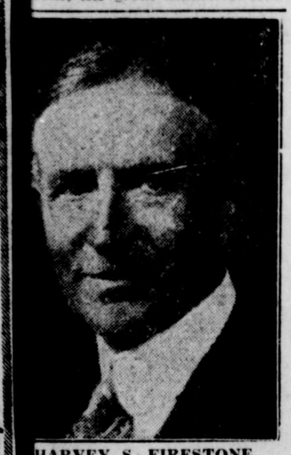

The expense of the event is being prorated among the legion posts in the county. Cisco's quota is $50 which has already been raised. The dedication is expected to attract between 10,000 and 15,000 people.

FLOATS NEEDED.

Cisco floats are needed for the parade to be staged as a feature of the court house dedication ceremonies at Eastland next Thursday, said E. H. Varnell, a member of the parade committee. Mr. Varnell said that the committee wants every Cisco organization represented and has asked that those who intend to enter floats or decorated cars notify the chamber of commerce at once.

FIRESTONE TO BE REFEREE AT AUTO DERBY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—It is particularly fitting that Harvey S. Firestone, the great industrial leader from being largely responsible for the present low prices of rubber due to his unceasing and successful efforts over a period of years to repeal the British rubber restriction act, Mr. Firestone is regarded as being the leader who conceived, perfected and introduced the balloon tire some years ago, officiating at the Indianapolis speedway May 30, Mr. Firestone will not be on unfamiliar ground. On the contrary, he has watched the triumph of his tires in leading the winners to victory for the last nine years at this great sporting and proving event of the automotive world.

HARVEY S. FIRESTONE.

Noted pioneer for the last 29 years in the development of tires for automotive purposes, should be the logical selected to serve as referee at the famous Indianapolis Sweepstakes— 500-mile auto race, May 30.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 25. — Sam Lambert, vice president of the Wright Aircraft Engine company, one of the subsidiaries of the recently organized Allied Aviation Industries, may lay claim to the title of world's champion commuter. Every morning and evening he commutes by airplane between his home in St. Louis and his office, a distance of 204 miles by air or about 314 by automobile. At 7:30 each morning he hops off from the Lambert-St. Louis field, arriving at his plant in Moline two hours later.

Oil Price Increase Brings Optimism to Local Business Men

for a great improvement in business conditions."

Dewey Moore, of the Moore Drug company: "While the effects of the increase have not yet revealed themselves in our business we find a much more optimistic outlook before us. Within the next 30 to 60 days there is going to be a general stimulation of business conditions."

"The public is feeling good and so are we," said J. T. Elliott, of the Corner Drug store. "Things are looking better. We don't look for any spectacular developments but there is certain to be a gradual bettering of conditions. Business isn't bad at all."

Outlook Improving.

L. W. Hilgenberg finds the business outlook to be improving. Mr. Hilgenberg is proprietor of the Cisco Motor company.

"I have talked to large numbers of men who are in positions to judge conditions here and I have found them almost unanimously of the opinion that the outlook following the oil price increase is favorable," said Hugh White, of the Southwestern Motor company. "The situation is very optimistic, I find."

"There is going to be plenty of work this fall for everybody who wants to work," was Leon Maner's comment. Mr. Maner is proprietor of the City Drug store. "That is all we could ask," he added. "The immediate future looks unusually optimistic."

"We have been here but a short while but our business is steadily growing and we expected to feel the effects of the oil price increase in a more rapid growth," said O. W. Statham, of the Statham Drug store. "Things are already beginning to look better."

"I think the oil price increase is going to help our situation here materially," said Alex Spears, cashier of the First National bank. "I have talked to a number of independent oil men who tell me that the increase means for them the difference between a profit and a loss in the operation of their holdings. One can readily see what the rejuvenation of the oil industry will have a positive effect upon business conditions here."

L. P. Kuykendall, of the Everready Transfer and Storage company likewise expressed himself as more optimistic over conditions since the oil price increase. It will take from a month to 60 days to determine the true effect, however, he said.

C. L. Black, of the Acorn store, finds a better spirit manifest among the people who enter his place of business. He feels that there will be considerable improvement in employment conditions and in business conditions as the result.

E. P. Crawford, president of the chamber of commerce, who deals in real estate and insurance, said that in his opinion the increase in employment that is expected to be brought about with the oil increase will be of far more value to Cisco than the difference in the money which will be paid for the oil produced. "There is no doubt but that the increase will stimulate business here and I feel sure that the increase will continue in force."

C. H. Gober, of the City Grocery, finds that collections are picking up since the oil increase was announced. He looks forward to steady improvement in business.

W. K. Johnston is likewise optimistic. Mr. Johnston is proprietor of the Johnston Grocery. He finds a better spirit manifest locally and anticipates a material improvement in his own business.

Asa Skiles, of the Skiles Grocery, said that there is no doubt but what the effect of the oil price increase would be beneficial. He doesn't look for anything sensational nor does he expect any sudden improvement. He finds increasing optimism on the part of his patrons, he said.

Nick Miller, of Miller-Lauderdale is another merchant who feels that the effects of the oil price increase will be beneficial to local business. "It will have the tendency of loosening up money circulation by giving operators a chance to determine what they are going to do. They will be more inclined to spend and in consequence the general public will feel so inclined."

FORD SHAKES OUT GOLD.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., May 25.—A wheezy old Ford is shaking down riches for its owner here. It is shaking out $48 to the ton of slag from the smelter. The slag contains a moderate run of gold which John E. Hanson, an engineer in the Klondike gold rush, mines at the rate of 20 tons an hour.

Nocona is installing a white way which will cost about $15,000.

GIL ACTS TO END STRIKE OF STUDENTS

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—President Emilio Portes Gil intervened in the Mexican national university student strike today in an effort to reach an agreement between the students and the faculties and end the disturbances of this week.

The president ordered guards withdrawn from the national university buildings and informed the students they might use them for their meetings if they promised on their honor not to destroy the property.

Gil apparently hoped his action would put the students in a mood to consider favorably his later offer of a conference between strike leaders and faculty members aiming at a settlement.

Although students circulated a manifesto last night claiming six were killed in Thursday's disturbances, there was no official confirmation that there was any dead. On the contrary, denial was made that the two post office clerks were shot to death as they watched police and students fight.

"DESERT SONG" SHOWS RANGE OF VITAPHONE

In no other picture has there been so convincing a demonstration of the possibilities of the Vitaphone as in "The Desert Song," which opens at the Palace theater today, and which will go down in screen history as the first musical play to be transferred in its entirety to the motion picture screen.

Other "all-talking" pictures had already been made by Warner Brothers, and also many which included singing, but when they undertook the production of "The Desert Song" they were confronted with a new problem—the inclusion of a large chorus for the ensemble numbers, with its members grouped all over the settings which constitute the scenes of the play.

How well they met this situation is indicated by the fact that the chorus consists of one hundred men and women, and that they bring to the screen's first operetta the most glorious ensemble work ever heard in America.

Many of the singers were soloists who had never before worked in chorus, or who had graduated from that estate into principal parts, and so great was the number of these that the ensemble of "The Desert Song" might also be described as a chorus of principals. Sigmund Romberg's lilting music is played by the Vitaphone Symphony orchestra.

The all-star cast includes John Boles, Carlotta King, Louise Fazenda, Johnny Arthur, John Miljan, Myrna Loy, Jack Pratt, Marie Wells, Edward Martindel, Robert E. Guzman and many others, and was produced under the direction of Roy Del Ruth. Harvey Gates adapted the book of the operetta to the screen.

The desert scenes are exceptionally beautiful.

"The Desert Song," the Warner Brothers' Vitaphone screen version of this remarkable successful singing play, is the first operetta ever brought to the films in its entirety, including both dialogue and music. It comes to the Palace theater today.

Huge German Flying Boat Is Ready for First Voyage Across the Atlantic Ocean

Hops Off June 1 With a Freight Cargo of 2,000 Pounds.

BERLIN, May 25.—Although airplanes have spanned the Atlantic ocean a number of times during the past two years, the first strictly commercial airplane crossing is now scheduled to begin on June 1, when the big German Rohrbach flying boat, "Rostra," takes off from Lisbon, Portugal, for New York, carrying a cargo on which freight charges will be $3 an ounce. Final tests have been completed and everything is in readiness.

If this flight results as it is expected to, it will inaugurate a regular commercial trans-Atlantic service, with lower freight charges, which will bring Europe and the United States within three days of each other.

German Ace Is Pilot

Hermann Steindorf, former World War ace, who will pilot the "Rostra," has not yet decided which of two routes he will follow. Steindorf was a bomber in the German army.

One route would take him from Lisbon to the Cape Verde islands, thence to the tiny island of Fernando Po, off the Brazilian coast, and northward from there to New York with a stop in the West Indies.

The other, 2,000 miles shorter but calling for longer jumps over water, would go from Lisbon to the Cape Verde islands and thence to Barbados and then to New York. It is considered likely that this is the route that will be adopted.

No effort is to be made to set any records for speed or duration. The object of the flight is to prove the commercial feasibility of trans-Atlantic airplane service; and, naturally, the first thought is for the safety of the plane and its crew. No risks will be taken that can possibly be avoided.

Built Like a Boat

Thus, to begin with, the "Rostra" is strictly a seaplane. Its hull is built like the hull of a regular boat. It is divided by numerous watertight bulkheads, and if forced down should be able to keep the sea for days, even in rough weather.

It carries a jury mast and sail, so that it could proceed to port like any other sailing vessel if its engines should become disabled. Even the great all-metal wings are constructed as hollow-box girders, and will float in an emergency.

There are five rooms, besides the cargo space, in the big flying boat.

The pilot house, where Steindorf will sit at the controls, is slightly above the level of the other rooms and is fitted with all instruments in duplicate so that no harm will be done if an instrument should suddenly fail.

In front of the pilot house, on the right side, is the radio room, nearly sound proof. When the plane is in flight there is a towing aerial which will enable the radio operator to send and receive messages over long distances. If the plane alights on the water, a telescopic mast carrying a secondary aerial can be run up.

Besides the radio room, on the left, is the navigation room, fitted with a map table and supports for instruments which service for astronomic position finding. Back of the pilot house is the crew's quarters; in the very bow is the "collision room," as it is called, where all such sea equipment as anchors, hawsers, boat hooks, signal flags, safety belts and the like are stowed.

Five people will make the trip. Steindorf will have Hans Niemann as his navigator, and is now preparing to select a mechanic and an assistant pilot. And there will be one woman aboard.

Mildred Johnson, an American girl, will make the flight as custodian of the cargo. A special "office" is being fitted up for her in the freight compartment. She will occupy this room, spending her spare time en route writing the story of the voyage.

Two thousand pounds of cargo will be carried on the first trip, although on subsequent trips it is planned to use the ship's full carrying capacity of 9000 pounds. Once the idea of regular trans-Atlantic plane service is demonstrated to be dependable, as the backers of this flight believe the initial trip will demonstrate it the "Rostra" should be a money maker.

Expenses wil not be heavy. It will take about $600 worth of gas and oil to get the ship across the ocean. Other expenses, such as crew's pay, maintenance, repairs, insurance and the like, will not average much more than the same charges for over-land flying. Carrying 9000 pounds of cargo at $1 an ounce—for the rate is to be reduced after regular service is established — the ship would have an operating income of around $144,000 per one-way trip.

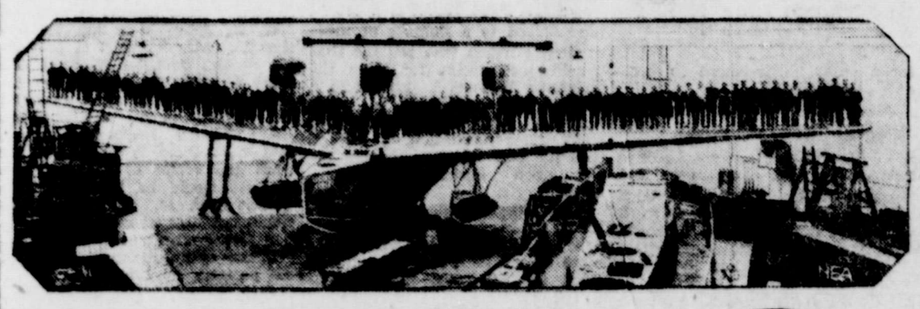

Tests Are Successful.

Recently Steindorf and Dr. Aoif Rohrbach, the designer, have put the ship through stiff tests at Travemunde, Germany. Steindorf took the ship, loaded with 9,000 pounds of freight to an altitude of 9,500 feet, and has attained a speed of 135 miles per hour with that load aboard. Since only 2,000 pounds will be carried on the first trip, it is expected that a cruising speed of 125 miles an hour can be maintained easily.

Already it has been demonstrated that the "Rostra" can fly, fully loaded, with only one engine. It can land and take off when 15-feet waves are running. It can proceed handily with its jury mast and sail while on the surface.

American airplane engine builders have a special interest in the "Rostra's" flight, as the original European motors were recently removed and replaced by American Pratt and Whitney "Hornets." These are air-cooled engines of 575 horsepower.

NEW FREIGHTER OF THE SKIES

NEW COMPANY MAKES BUYING OF FORD EASIER

One of the developments of the past year which created national interest in both automotive and financial circles was the organization of Universal Credit company for the purpose of financing exclusively the time sales of Ford products throughout the country. Ultimately service of a similar nature will be provided in all countries where Ford products are sold.

Universal Credit company is a specialized financial institution created to provide uniform and authorized time payment plans at low cost for the purchase of Ford products on an installment basis. The company in the first year of business just closed has made sound and gratifying progress. The reception accorded the authorized Ford Finance Plans by the public and Ford dealers in the 21 large cities where branch offices have been established is indeed impressive.

Today UCC has purchased installment contracts in excess of $75,000,000 which establishes a new record in installment financing for an institution which has only been in operation for one year. It is anticipated that the volume of business handled will exceed $25,000,000 monthly from now on. In the short space of a year, the UCC organization has grown from an organization of ten people to one employing almost a thousand.

Already there has come a realization that the Universal Credit company was created principally for the sound financing of the Ford dealer and the purchaser, and not with the primary object of profit. Its establishment is thus squarely in conformity with the reiterated Ford policy of creating and developing every possible economy from mine to consumer, for the benefit of the public.

The purpose is to reduce the cost of credit, to the individual who buys on time, commensurate with sound business policies. This reduction in the cost of credit is made possible by the many economies that arise from the operation of an authorized plan, on the basis of nation-wide volume, and dealing exclusively with the Ford dealer organization. Simplicity of forms special bookkeeping and statistical machinery and general uniformity of procedure all under centralized control and management, are constantly contributing to cut these costs.

This cost of credit is just as vital as the cost of any other material that goes into the building of the automobile. It is in every sense a commodity which becomes a part of the completed article before it is ultimately sold to the public.

Thus the Universal Credit company's low finance charges are equivalent to a price reduction on the Model A car and other Ford products.

Then there is the important matter of good will. A buyer delights in dealing with an organization that gives him prompt, courteous service, that deals fairly with him, that maintains scrupulously the standard of its product and that is constantly instilling in that buyer a sense of reliability and confidence and appreciation of the seller and his product.

UCC is serving a still greater purpose in the economic and social phases of our national life. In addition to adding to the advan ment of organized industry, UCC at the same time contributing s stantially to the happiness a contentment of society. By exte ing credit at the lowest possi cost, UCC is helping to bring gre er health and happiness to a la group of American people, heads families as well as their childr In the process of transition fr the crowded city to the healt country districts, UCC is aid the American family to establi itself with economic advantages more desirable locations and thus helping to raise the standa of American living conditions.

HAGEN'S FOURTH BRITISH OPEN WIN.

A heavy gale blew up over classic Muirfield Downs, Scotland, but Walter Hagen didn't. Steadily, cautiously, the American veteran fought his way to the British Open Golf championship with a score of 292, defeating a brilliant field of English and fellow American stars. It was the fourth time Hagen had won the tournament, and above you see him, at the left, smilingly accepting the victor's trophy from Capt. A. W. Robertson Duncan, British golf impressario. Hagen had one record-breaking round of 67, and he is pictured below on the 18th green when he sunk the final putt that hung up a new course mark.

Tilden to Leave International Tennis at the End of This Year He Writes in Magazine Article

NEW YORK, May 25. —"The ear 1929 sees the end of my in- rnational tennis," writes William Tilden, II, nine times ranking nnis star of the United States nd mainstay of American Davis up teams since 1920, in the cur- nt issue of Liberty.

Announcing his retirement from ternational competition "big ll" states he will remain an mateur and continue to play nnis "as long as my two wob- ling legs will function and my ged and enfeebled arm will wing, as long as my age-dimmed yes can see a ball."

Davis cup competition will know o longer the smashing cannon- all service and amazing all- round tennis of the greatest layer of modern times. In the uture, Tilden says, he will play s an individual, not as a member f any American team.

"I have had a grand time, but must hereafter write and speak my triumphs and failures in orld tennis in the past tense, for am through," the Philadelphian rites.

"Not through with the game, t through with the international mpetition. My future status will ntinue to be amateur. I have thought or intention of turn- g professional."

Tilden, who has been ranked o. 1 in American tennis since 20, has had frequent squabbles ith the United States Lawn Tennis association, and spent the winter of 1928-29 in involuntary retirement. He makes humorous, but rather dignified reference to his differences with the U. S. L. T. A. in announcing his withdrawal from international competition.

"Quite possibly I am flattering myself that I could still make the Davis cup team," Tilden continues. "It is quite likely that inability rather than intention is the deciding factor, but I am taking no chances. My tennis days are over. The 'aged net star,' that patriarch of United States tennis, bids official farewell to international play.

"However, that rising youngster, William T. Tilden, 2nd., the individual himself, in person not a picture, will still in leisure moments miss his passing shots, volleys and smashes with even greater regularity than usual.

"I hope to be able to play for years in exhibitions at schools and colleges or in the public parks where I feel I am aiding in the development of our future champions.

"Not only have I no chance but I have no burning desire to sit in the seats of the mighty in the councils of the U. S. L. T. A. My views are at variance with the traditions of the association but not with its ethics. I fear I would want to see too much progressiveness and liberalism in its administration. I am for the players, first, last, and all the time."

GOLF GOAT GETTERS

COPYRIGHT 1929 BY NEA SERVICE INC

By VERNE WICKHAM

These cup-hunting golfers who are are always winning low net trophies with the aid of an oversized handicap have the wrong idea.

You'll find one, or more, in every club. They think they are smart golfers. They turn in cards at the professional shop on their bad days, but when they shoot their good scores they keep that to themselves and so, as far as the handicap committee is concerned, they have high handicaps. Then along comes a tournament and watch them go!

It should be a part of a golfer's creed to have his handicap right. The golfer knows his scores and should be able to keep his own handicap. You'll find the handicap table used by several state golf associations about right. Establish your own handicap by this table and you won't be far wrong.

Average score is arrived at by the three lowest scores made over a three-month period.

Here's the table:

Score 74—Handicap 4.
Score 74-75—Handicap 5.
Score 76-77—Handicap 6.
Score 78-79—Handicap 7.
Score 80-81—Handicap 8.
Score 82-83—Handicap 9.
Score 84-85—Handicap 10.
Score 86-87—Handicap 12.
Score 88-89—Handicap 14.
Score 90-91—Handicap 16.
Score 92-93—Handicap 18.
Score 94-95—Handicap 20.
Score 96-98—Handicap 22.
Score 99-101—Handicap 24.
Score 102-104—Handicap 26.

Proposal for Six Day Week Is Made

MOSCOW, May 25.—A proposal for establishing a six-day week in place of the traditional one of seven —made recently by the press here —has been taken up with unexpected seriousness by some Soviet scientists.

Thus Prof. A. I. Kaigarodoff, writing in Izvestia, defends the proposal as altogether sensible and useful. Five working days and one day of rest, he says, is a much better arrangement than the present one of five and a half or six days with a lot of miscellaneous holidays.

The six-day week, by turning the year into 61 instead of 52 weeks, would give nine additional days of rest. This would justify the elimination of all legal holidays—except of course the great revolutionary holidays, May 1 and November 7.

January 1, 1930, has been set by the advocates of this reform as a goal for beginning the new arrangement. They claim that the economy of the country would run more regularly if working and resting time were thus reorganized.

The temptation to tamper with the calendar has touched other people. In Tomsk certain schools and organizations have abolished Sunday, in the sense that Wednesday has become the official day of rest.

A CAT MAY LOOK—

LONDON, May 25. — Recently the Prince of Wales was attending a ceremony at Church House, Westsminster. When the prince finished his speech and started to sit down he found that a tiny brown and white kitten had curled up on his seat. The prince and the kitten became immediate friends and before the hour and half ceremony was over the kitten was fast asleep in the prince's arms.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

Henry L. Farrell

Thought He Was Dead

FIVE or six years ago it was the frequent duty of sport writers to inform their public that some disabled ball player or fighter had gone to Youngstown to be cured by the celebrated Bonesetter Reese. Many of them went to him and most of them were cured.

But in recent years there has been scant mention, if any, on the sport pages about the miracle man of muscle and bone. Ball players and fighters began going to other specialists.

Early in the spring in St. Petersburg, Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, was asked why he didn't send Herb Pennock and his lame arm to Bonesetter Reese for treatment.

"Reese?" he replied. "Why, he's dead, isn't he?"

Athletes Won't Obey

THE Bonesetter is not dead. Recently he celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday and he did what he seldom has done before. He submitted to an interview. He said that he had retired from the spotlight in the athletic world because he didn't care to continue treating athletes.

"They expect too much of you, especially ball players." Quoted at greater length by one of his friends, he said: "I have treated hundreds of ball players and admonished them to stay out of the game for a week or so and rest the injured member. Then the next day or two I would pick up the paper and see their names in the box score. Of course when the disability returned they didn't blame themselves for the failure of the treatments and they would come back.

"I had another reason, too, for getting out of the athletic field of work. It attracted too much publicity to me and it led clients to feel that I should guarantee a sure cure. I have enough work to keep me busy without treating ball players. Many times I have appointments two weeks ahead. I don't work on Thursdays, Fridays or Saturdays and my clients necessarily must be limited."

Have to Fool Him

HIS friends say that he will not give an appointment to an athlete and those who do get to him for treatment have to do it by a ruse.

They tell a story about Chick Lang, one of America's greatest jockeys. Lang had been almost totally disabled with wrist trouble. There were lumps about the size of a quarter on each wrist and he couldn't hold the reins. He went to Youngstown and was shocked to learn that Reese wouldn't treat an athlete.

He went to one of the Bonesetter's friends who promised to get him an appointment but he told him not to dare mention that he was a jockey and to say that he fell down stairs and hurt his wrists.

Reese looked at the lumps, then grabbed hold of the wrists and gave them a sudden twist. Lang said the pain took him to the floor.

"Weeping sinews, you had," Reese told him. "Caused by turning the wrists when they were under a strain."

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

THEY say it was just a blind when the American League magnates met in Cleveland and announced that the valuable player prize had been abolished . . . And that the real purpose of the meeting was to consider means of "getting" Judge Landis . . . And that E. S. Barnard, president of the league, is toiling to keep his magnates from an open rebellion against the commissioner . . . The Washington players jockey their new kid pitcher by calling him Liskavitz . . . Deal, an Alabama football player, has six inches of skin peeled from his thigh and grafted on his back . . . So his shoulder could be loosened . . . Bob Jones says that British golf was set back six years because of the war . . . And that the big golfers over there are just getting back . . . McGraw put Babe Ruth fifth on his list of the greatest players of all time . . . Behind Wagner, Cobb, Keeler and Eddie Collins.

MEXICO TAXES DRINK TO AID T. B. CAMPAIGN

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—Mexico will campaign against tuberculosis with money paid by the drinkers of pulque, the country's national beverage. Effective May 1, a tax of one centavo (a half-cent in United States currency, was imposed on each litre of pulque sold to the public.

Since pulque is consumed by millions of the poorer classes, it is expected that the revenue from this source will be fairly large. Thousands of small cantinas throughout Mexico are known only as pulque shops because they sell almost nothing but pulque and other cheap native drinks.

Besides using the new source of funds to fight tuberculosis, Portes Gil also has another object in view. This is to cut down if possible the consumption of pulque along with all other intoxicating liquors. The president early in April announced that he was undertaking a country-wide anti-alcoholic campaign in an endeavor to make Mexico dry "by education."

So far the presidential drive has met with considerable success, at least outwardly. A majority of the governors have promised to support it and the regulations concerning the sale of liquor have been made more rigid in all sections.

In his latest decree fixing the tax on pulque, President Portes Gil points out that 10,000 die annually in Mexico because of tuberculosis. The ambition of Mexico, the president says, should be to reduce this mortality to something like that of the United States where the death rate has been cut 46 per cent in 20 years.

DE LEON, May 25.—At a meeting of school superintendents and coaches in this, football district No. 10 interscholastic league, D. M. Russell was re-elected as chairman at a meeting held at De Leon high school building on May 14. Fifteen schools are included in the district, all or part of the following counties being included: Hamilton, Comanche, Erath, Shackelford, Callahan and Palo Pinto. Fifteen superintendents were present at the meeting.

The purpose of the meeting was to arrange football schedules for the coming fall. A committee was elected composed of D. M. Russell, De Leon; Supt. O. B. King, Dublin; Supt. W. G. Barrett, Comanche; Supt J. M. Macon, Gorman, and Supt. W. O. Willingham, Albany, to work out details. Committee was instructed to complete the schedule by September 20.

A Question For Every Tire Buyer

When sweeping claims conflict and generalities abound—

When the same arguments have been repeated by a dozen tire manufacturers to win your business—

When every sales scheme has been tried to make you think that you alone are the one who gets the big bargain—

When you have discovered by experience that the only test of a tire is its performance on the road—

County Judge C. L. Garrett has been requested by the program committee to issue a proclamation dealing with the dedication of the new courthouse to the World war veterans. It has also been suggested that the mayors of the incorporated towns in the county issue proclamations calling upon the citizens of their respective towns to observe the day, May 30—Memorial Day — as a holiday and where possible, attend the dedication services at Eastland.
