U.S. attacks Iranian oil platforms

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, left, and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, give a Pentagon briefing this morning after U.S. Navy ships attacked Iranian oil platforms in retaliation.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. Navy today destroyed two offshore Iranian oil platforms, sank a defending Iranian patrol boat and bombed an Iranian navy frigate. Iran attacked oil facilities off Sharjah and fired on at least two U.S. vessels.

The American attack on the Persian Gulf oil platforms came in retaliation for a mine explosion that tore a hole in an American frigate last week, injuring 10 crewmen.

Also today, Iran said the United States had entered the Iran-Iraq war, charging that U.S. helicopters supported an Iraqi land offensive in the Faw Peninsula. There was no immediate response from Washington.

The White House said three U.S. warships ships blasted each Iranian platform. No American casualties were reported in the U.S. attacks, and the Iranians fled prior to the shelling, the White House said.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said an American helicopter also was fired upon during the raid but was not hit.

One U.S. warship fired missiles at two approaching Iranian jet fighters, but the fighters reversed course and it was unclear whether they were hit, Carlucci said.

He said an Iranian patrol boat fired on the U.S. cruiser Wainwright, which took part in the attack on one of the platforms.

The Wainwright was not hit. He said the U.S. frigate Simpson returned fire and sank the patrol boat.

About seven hours after the oil platform attack, the 310-foot Iranian frigate Sahand "was noticed closing rapidly upon three U.S. warships," said Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

The Iranian warship then fired upon three U.S. aircraft on patrol in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf.

The aircraft, A-6 Intruders, "returned fire with two Harpoon missiles and a number of laser-guided bombs. Shortly thereafter, the USS Strauss, a destroyer, engaged the Sahand with an additional Harpoon," Howard said.

He said the Sahand was on fire and "the smoke is so heavy that it's difficult to do a further assessment at this point."

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the U.S. warships first struck the Sassan platform in the southern gulf at 9 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT).

Gulf fighting causes jump in oil prices

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Increased hositilities in the Persian Gulf caused posted prices in the Permian Basin to jump a full dollar today, as crude oil futures prices also climbed sharply.

Marathon was the first to announce a dollar increase, from $16.50 to $17.50, in the posted price early today, and was quickly matched by Permian Corp. By press time six of 24 crude oil pruchasers indicated they had increased the posted price by one dollar, with most other crude buyers expected to hike posted prices by day's end.

The futures price of crude oil opened at $18.37 on the New York Mercantile Exchange and jumped to $18.81 near midday, on news of the hostilities, marking two straight weeks of oil price increases.

"There was certainly room in the market for upward movement of the posted price, even without the outbreak of hostilities," said Bill Rigney, crude oil representative for Permian Corp. "A lot of positive factors have been coming together for the past few weeks to push the prices upward."

Frank Wynn, area supply director for Phillips Petroleum Co., one of those to raise prices, said he had expected posted prices to increase today, when the market opened at Friday's close of $18.37.

Among refined products, May contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline were up 1.04 cents at 53.65 cents per gallon, while wholesale heating oil contracts were up 1.05 cents at 50.80 cents per gallon.

Analysts say "war talk" is mainly responsible for the jump in oil prices today, because traders are worried that escalating hostilities could restrict supplies. But jitters over a scheduled April 26 meeting between OPEC and non-OPEC producers is also listed as a reason for increasing prices.

Iran says U.S. copters attack troops

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said today U.S. helicopters attacked Iranian troops to support an Iraqi offensive that reportedly recaptured the southern Faw peninsula.

The charge was made hours after American warships destroyed two Iranian platforms in the Persian Gulf in retaliation for a mine blast that holed a U.S. frigate last week.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a Supreme Defense Council statement as saying: "In direct, open and practical support for the Iraqi regime, American forces have entered the war."

The statement was issued after Iraq reported its troops, led by units of the elite Presidential Guard, recaptured Faw. Iran, which seized the peninsula two years ago, denied Iraqi had retaken it.

The Supreme Defense Council, which determines Iran's war strategy, called on all Iranians to join the military and brace for a "holy defense" of their country.

Tehran Radio said U.S. helicopters attacked Iranian troops in southern Iraq "several times" on Sunday.

There was no immediate reaction to the allegation from Washington.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said today that during the U.S. attack on the two oil platforms, Iran patrol boats fired on an American vessel and a helicopter, but they escaped unscathed.

U.S. warships sank the patrol boat, Carlucci said.

Soon after the platform attack, the Iran gunboats fired on a U.S. tugboat, but it too was not hit. Iranian gunboats also attacked three facilities in the Mubarak oilfield off Sharjah, an emirate in the southern gulf.

Iran also accused Kuwait, the closest Arab state to the war zone, of aiding the latest Iraqi attack and warned of retaliation. Kuwait denied the charge.

Hostage wants Kuwait to give into demands

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A member of Kuwait's royal family, held hostage aboard a jumbo jet, said today he wants his government to give in to the hijackers' demand and free 17 terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait.

Speaking extremely slowly and in a tired voice, a man identified by the Arab hijackers as Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah said: "I hope Kuwait releases all the prisoners." He then mumbled something unintelligible, and added "Thanks to God."

The control tower at Algiers Houari Boumedienne Airport asked in English that the statement be repeated. One of the hijackers then got on the radio and replied: "He doesn't want to talk."

Reports from a hostage freed earlier said that Al-Sabah was in very bad condition, apparently suffering from a nervous disorder. Two other members of the royal family, Al-Sabah's sisters, also are aboard Kuwait Airways Flight 422.

The Thailand-to-Kuwait flight was hijacked April 5 with 112 people aboard and forced to land in Mashhad, Iran, where 57 were released. On April 8, the jet flew to Cyprus, where two passengers were killed and 13 freed. Since landing in Algiers one passenger has been freed, leaving about 35 hostages, including the three members of Kuwait's extensive royal family.

The five to eight hijackers are demanding the release of the 17 men jailed for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in 1983. Kuwait has refused the demand.

The Shiite Moslem hijackers are armed with grenades and guns and have threatened to blow up the plane.

Algerian officials privately expressed hope the gunmen might free one or more of their estimated 35 hostages early today as a gesture of goodwill to mark the beginning of the monthlong fast of Ramadan, traditionally a period of reconciliation for devout Moslems.

The hijackers demanded a special Ramadan meal before dawn, but no hostage had been released when the fast began at daybreak.

On Sunday, a passenger radioed a message to the control tower saying that the hostages faced certain death if the 17 pro-Iranian prisoners were not freed by Kuwait.

A man aboard the jet, who identified himself as Suleiman Farhan Doukhi, said in the message: "All the passengers are in good health. I hope the Kuwait government will act quickly to liberate the 17 young prisoners. Otherwise, we all face a black end."

Three other passengers have made similar statements since the plane landed in Algiers early Wednesday.

During the night, Algerian negotiators repeatedly went to the plane. Around 2 a.m. (9 p.m. Sunday EDT), three Algerian security vehicles shuttled across the tarmac, going separately two and from the aircraft.

Algerian television cameras caught one of the hijackers coming down off the plane during the night to negotiate with unidentified persons in a car near the jetliner.

The Algerian camera showed a hooded man coming to the bottom of the stairs and, after a few minutes, returning to the plane and coming down again with a second man. They stayed in the car about 15 minutes.

Contacts intensified Sunday between President Chadli Bendjedid of Algeria and other Arab heads of state. Saudi Arabian King Fahd, Kuwaiti ruler Shiek Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah and Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi all reportedly spoke by telephone with Bendjedid during the day.

Radio report says captors killed Higgins

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Christian-controlled radio station reported today that U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins has been killed by his pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem captors.

The Voice of Lebanon said Higgins was "killed and buried by his captors" early this month in Siddiqine, a village in south Lebanon.

The Beirut-based Voice of Lebanon has a record of frequent inaccuracies concerning the foreign hostages in Lebanon. Its report on Higgins could not be independently verified.

Timur Goksel, the spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in south Lebanon with which Higgins was serving when he was abducted, said of the report: "We can neither confirm nor deny the report or anything related to it."

He spoke by telephone from the U.N. group's headquarters in Naqoura on the Lebanese-Israeli border.

"We have no such information, and therefore we cannot comment on the radio report," Goksel added. "We have checked with our sources, and everybody was surprised when they heard about the report."

Nurse compares El Salvador economy with pinata

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

An American nurse working in El Salvador compared that nation's economic situation with a pinata.

"A few people have all the goodies," said Val Liveoak, a registered nurse and lay missionary who has spent the last two years working in a rural Catholic parish. Sometimes, "for whatever reason, they decide to share the goodies with the (poor) people."

But this "sharing" resembles what happens after a pinata is broken open, showering the crowd with gifts.

"Those who scramble and fight hard get the goodies and a lot of people don't get anything," she asserted during a talk at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, Saturday night.

"And if they resent anybody, who do they resent? They resent the other poor people who happen to get more."

Although Ms. Liveoak is a Quaker, she works with American and Salvadoran Catholics to promote health and literacy in rural areas.

She lives in the parish's major town, with a population of about 7,000 people. Another 7,000 people live in 15 or 20 small villages scattered within a 5 to 10 mile radius of the town. As in all of El Salvador, more than 60 percent of the population is under the age of 12, she said.

By U.S. standards, conditions are primitive. The nicer houses in town have latrines or cesspools, although the rest of the wastewater drains into the streets, Ms. Liveoak said. In the poorer parts of town and most rural areas, people just use a corner of the yard as a "bathroom."

Ms. Liveoak and her coworkers, which include an American nun, live in an "average lower-middle-class home."

"We don't have a car. We don't have servants. We want to live as much as we can in the style of the people."

In the countryside, many dwellings are built of mud, with thatched roofs. Most of the more substantial houses of brick or adobe have been paid for with funds sent by relatives in the United States, Ms. Liveoak said.

A family may have a pair of oxen, some chickens and maybe a few pigs.

"Whenever I see an oxcart, I say 'There's the family car,'" she said.

Although buses and pickups carry passengers and cargo in town, many villages lack any kind of transportation.

Ninety-five percent of the town's residents and 100 percent of the country people make their living from agriculture, she added.

A good wage for an agricultural laborer is $1.60 for an 8- to 10-hour day. Tenant farmers have to pay cash to rent a plot of land to raise food for their families, she said.

While the men hire out their labor, the women spend hours every day preparing food.

"They rely on hand mills or stone to grind the masa (corn) to make tortillas," Ms. Liveoak said. These are then cooked on clay grills fueled by firewood.

"For a family of six to 10 people, it takes an average of four to six woman hours every day to produce the tortillas. That doesn't have anything to do with the time spent carrying the water and getting the wood."

The time expended in these daily tasks makes it difficult for the peasants to "better themselves," she said.

"What are they going to sacrifice? You can't save up the work...There's no slack in the system."

Even if they learned ways to work together — to pool labor and resources — and could make time to "create a product, there's no market to sell it in," she noted.

The almost 10-year-long civil war has severely depressed the economy and money is scarce, especially in the countryside.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies have been predicted by the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low is expected to be in the middle 40s with northwest winds blowing at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday's forecast is calling for sunny skies with the high to reach near 80. Winds will shift and blow from the southwest at five to 15 mph.

Sunday's high of 74 was 23 degrees cooler than the record high of 97 set for that date in 1975. Today's low of 51 was 14 degrees warmer than the record low set for this date in 1937.

STATE

A weak Canadian cold front had pushed across the central plains into the northern part of the Texas Panhandle Monday morning.

Heavy spring thunderstorms moving through the state generated funnel clouds and tornado watches throughout the weekend, but little damage and few injuries were reported.

Tornado watches were issued Sunday for the portions of the area northeast of the line of thunderstorms. Much of Central and North Texas was under a severe thunderstorm watch Sunday afternoon.

Light rain fell over the Panhandle along and ahead of the cold front while rain also dampened the Permian Basin near Odessa. Scattered showers and thunderstorms developed over the south central part of the state between San Antonio, Austin and College Station.

Pea- to marble-size hail was reported at Stephenville and heavy rain to marble-size hail was reported at Stephenville and heavy rain at Decatur.

Meanwhile, patchy areas of dense fog had formed over parts of the Coastal Plains, south central and eastern Texas. Visibility approached zero in a few spots.

Skies were mostly clear in the Red River valley, north central texas, the Edwards Plateau and the Rio Grande plains. Partly to mostly cloudy skies covered the rest of the state.

Strong north winds breezed the Panhandle at 30 mph and lake wind advisories were posted for the region.

Forecasters predicted decreasing clouds Monday night, becoming sunny to partly cloudy statewide tuesday. Overnight lows will dip into the 40s in some sections while highs Tuesday are expected to range from the 50s to the 90s.

NATION

New Hampshire dug out from more than a foot of snow today and Idaho cleaned up debris left by two tornadoes as much of the nation was hit by scattered showers and heavy thunderstorms.

A storm turned New Hampshire's north country into a winter wonderland Sunday, dumping up to 14 inches of snow in the lowlands and more than 33 inches atop Mount Washington.

Meteorologist Chris Norcross said Mount Washington's 6,288-foot peak received 33.5 inches of snow, with light snow likely to continue for several days. Pittsburg, in northernmost New Hampshire, reported 14 inches, Dixville Notch 12 inches and Crawford and Pinkham notches 8 inches.

Thunderstorms spawned tornadoes in Idaho on Sunday night. One tornado touched down near in the southeastern town of Ririe, destroying a shed and carrying a telephone pole across a field. The second tornado struck south of nearby Roberts.

Meanwhile, thunderstorms moving slowly across the lower Mississippi Valley produced 1-inch sized hail and damaging winds in Louisiana on Sunday. The winds downed numerous trees in Bienville County.

But skies were fair over the southern and mid-Atlantic states early this morning, as well as over the northern Plains and upper Mississippi Valley.

The forecast for today called for showers and thunderstorms across the Southeastern, the Tennessee Valley and the Carolinas into the central Appalachians and mid-Atlantic states; showers from the upper Ohio Valley, New England, the Pacific Northwest, and south into the central inter-mountain region and Arizona; and snow across Michigan.

Pentagon gives account of fighting

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Iranian navy frigate was attacked and set afire by U.S. planes and an American destroyer today after the Iranian ship fired missiles at the U.S. aircraft, the Pentagon said.

The confrontation occurred in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the Persian Gulf, around 8:30 a.m. EDT, about 7½ hours after the United States bombarded and destroyed two Iranian offshore platforms, said Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

The battle with the Iranian frigate appeared to provide fresh evidence that Iran intended to respond militarily around the gulf to the U.S. attack on its offshore platforms.

Howard gave this account of the latest fighting:

The Iranian frigate, a 310-foot warship named the Sahand, steamed out of the naval base at Bandar Abbas earlier this morning and "was noticed closing rapidly upon three U.S. warships."

"The Sahand ignored repeated warnings from a U.S. E-2 (early-warning) aircraft to turn away or to be considered hostile. About 8:30 a.m. (EDT), the Sahand fired upon three A-6 Intruder aircraft on patrol in the area off the USS Enterprise.

"The Intruders returned fire with two Harpoon missiles and a number of laser-guided bombs. Shortly thereafter, the USS Strauss, a destroyer, engaged the Sahand with an additional Harpoon. All the ordnance appears to have hit the frigate and it's heavily damaged.

"It's on fire at the moment and the smoke is so heavy that it's difficult to do a further assessment at this point."

Howard added that the Strauss had been patrolling the area in and around the Strait of Hormuz along with two other ships, the destroyer O'Brien and the frigate Jack Williams.

Neither the A-6 attack jets nor the U.S. warships sustained any damage and there were no reports of any American injuries or casualties, the spokesman said.

Howard revealed the battle with the Sahand this morning a bit more than an hour after Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci and Adm. William Crowe, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, appeared at an early-morning briefing to discuss the U.S. attacks.

The destruction of the two Iranian offshore platforms was ordered by President Reagan on Sunday night in retaliation for the mine strike that almost sank the frigate Samuel B. Roberts last week, Carlucci said.

Carlucci said there was no doubt the mine field in which the Roberts became entrapped had been laid recently by Iran. Mines discovered in the area carry the same type of serial numbers as those captured last year aboard an Iranian mine-laying ship, Carlucci said.

According to Carlucci and Crowe, today's operation began around 1 a.m. EDT with two groups of Navy warships attacking two oil platforms in the central Persian Gulf.

Both of the platforms were ultimately destroyed — one by naval gunfire and the other by planted explosives, the two said.

But in the process of attacking one of the platforms, the so-called Sassan platform, the U.S. ships came under fire from a machine gun on the facility, Crowe said.

And immediately after the attack on the second platform, the Sirri platform, an Iranian patrol boat roughly 150 feet in length began advancing on the three American warships and ignored warnings to keep its distance, the admiral continued.

"It (the Iranian boat) acknowledged the message but continued to close," Crowe said. "After several warnings, we engaged and he fired at us simultaneously with a missile.

"The Simpson fired three Standard missiles, two of which hit the (Iranian vessel). The Wainwright fired one, which hit the (Iranian). We subsequently closed on it and fired another missile and it sunk. We found no people in the water."

Crowe said that the cruiser Wainwright was the target of the missile fired by the Iranian boat, but that the Wainwright managed to escape the missile by firing chaff.

Carlucci said a Navy helicopter assigned to the Simpson also came under fire during this period, apparently from a smaller Iranian patrol boat. The helicopter was not hit.

And at another point, the Wainwright detected two Iranian F-4 jet fighters closing on its position, Crowe said.

"It fired two missiles at those aircraft," the admiral said. "They subsequently turned away and we do not know if they were hit or not. They dropped off our scope."

GULF

Twenty-three minutes later they attacked the Nasr platform at nearby Sirri Island, IRNA said.

An Iranian warship later shelled the Mubarak oilfield off Sharjah, an emirate in the southern gulf, shipping executives said.

Targeted in the attack were the Scanbay drilling rig, the 112,744-ton British tanker York Marine and a storage facility.

The executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the York Marine was set afire and that its crew had abandoned the vessel. The Scanbay reported it was under attack by four gunboats, they said.

The Iranians also fired on the press helicopter of the NBC television network, but did not harm the aircraft or its passengers, executives said.

The London-based LLoyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit reported a U.S. tugboat and supply vessel, the Willi Tide, also was fired on off Sharjah but was not hit.

They said unidentified warplanes swooped low over the attacking Iranian boats, chasing them away from the 283-ton vessel, operated by Tidewater Inc. of New Orleans.

Shipping executives later reported Iranian gunboats attacked and set fire to a Cypriot bulk carrier in the Strait of Hormuz.

The freighter, which was not immediately identified, reportedly was carrying fertilizer.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since 1980, and the war has produced repeated attacks on neutral shipping. Last July, the United States reflagged 11 Kuwaiti tankers and gave them U.S. Navy escorts to protect them against Iranian attack.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Cyprus, said U.S. helicopters attacked Iranian troops in southern Iraq "several times" on Sunday.

The Iranian report was issued after Iraq said its troops, led by the Presidential Guard, recaptured Faw. Iran, which seized the peninsula two years ago, denied Iraqi had retaken it.

The White House said today the oil platform attacks were "a measured response to Iran's unlawful use of force."

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States raided the platforms because Iran was responsible for the "mine attack" on the USS Samuel B. Roberts.

Fitzwater said he did not know how many people were aboard the platforms, although they normally hold about 20 to 40 men. They are manned by Iranian Revolutionary Guards. He said they were given several minutes warning, and some were seen leaving.

The White House spokesman said the frigates Simpson and Bagley and the cruiser Wainwright attacked the Sirri platform.

Egypt accuses Iran of provoking hostilities; Britain supports U.S.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt today accused Iran of provoking a new round of military hostilities in the Persian Gulf and said today's American attacks on two Iranian oil platforms were justified.

Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid said Iran invited the American retaliation by laying new mines in the gulf. He urged the Tehran government to desist from an "unsound and unwise" policy.

"Iran's return to mine-laying in the gulf damaged a U.S. military vessel on April 14 and, in doing so, Iran initiated a new wave of military confrontation in the region," Abdel-Meguid said.

"We understand the American response and we urge Iran to stop its policy of provoking others."

Britain, meanwhile, backed the U.S. strike against the platforms and deplored a subsequent Iranian gunboat attack on a British tanker in the waterway.

The Foreign Office said Britain was seeking information about the attack on the 60,184-ton York Marine off the southern gulf emirate of Sharjah.

"We deplore it obviously," said a spokesman, who requested anonymity.

Gulf-based shipping executives said the fully-loaded oil tanker York Marine was on fire and its crew had abandoned ship.

Washington said the attack was launched to punish Iran for the mine that blew a hole in the U.S. frigate Samuel B. Roberts. The explosion Thursday injured 10 crewmen.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher supported today's U.S. attack.

"We are satisfied from the evidence we have that the mines were laid by Iran and that the U.S. reaction was entirely justified as a proportionate response," she told reporters.

Britain has two destroyers and two minesweepers in the gulf. It said it had not been informed the York Marine was in the waterway but would have given it protection if asked.

Attacking ships include cruiser, destroyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American warships used to attack two Iranian oil platforms early this morning included a cruiser and two destroyers in addition to smaller frigates, according to the Pentagon.

The attack on the Sirri oil platform in the gulf was led by the cruiser Wainwright, a 547-foot warship commissioned in 1966 that carries a variety of missiles in addition to a five-inch gun.

The Wainwright attacked along with two frigates, the Simpson and Bagley. The Simpson is a so-called Oliver Hazard Perry-class ship — identical to the Samuel B. Roberts, which hit a mine last week. The Bagley is a much older vessel, commissioned in 1972.

The Pentagon said the Sassan oil platform was attacked by two destroyers — the Merrill and the Lynde McCormick. The two warships were accompanied by the amphibious landing ship Trenton.

The Trenton carries helicopters, but it was not immediately clear whether they had played any role in the attack.

IRAN

Iranian officials, quoted by IRNA, said Kuwait allowed Iraqi troops to use its Bubiyan Island as a launching board for the offensive.

In Washington, the White House said the U.S. Navy attacked the offshore Sassan and Sirri platforms in retaliation for a mine blast that damaged the American frigate, Samuel B. Roberts, and wounded 10 crewmen last Thursday.

Washington said Iran laid the mines in the Persian Gulf. Tehran has denied the charge.

Iraqi gunners, meanwhile, today fired four long-range missiles into Tehran, the holy city of Qom and Isfahan, capital of the 16th-century Persian empire.

The Iranian agency confirmed the three cities were struck by missiles, claiming civilian casualties. But it did not give any figure.

The official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the 7th Army Corps and the Presidential Guard, "destroyed all enemy forces in the Faw triangle," which the Iranians overran in an offensive in February 1986.

It said "small groups" of Iranian soldiers were entrenched in a few positions, facing "death, imminent defeat or captivity."

The Iraqi offensive, codenamed "blessed Ramadan," began Sunday, on the eve of the beginning of Islam's holy month of fasting.

It was the first time that Iraq has taken the initiative in the ground war since mid-1986, when it overran the abandoned Iranian town of Mehran.

The Faw peninsula is 50 miles southeast of Iraq's major port city of Basra. The Iranians had held 120 square miles of the peninsula for two years. Tehran reportedly has used Faw to launch anti-ship, Chinese-made Silkworm missiles at Kuwaiti ships and oil facilities.

Algerian authorities abruptly expelled hundreds of reporters Sunday from the section of the VIP lounge where they had been staying for nearly a week.

One official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the lounge was needed for Arab ambassadors expected to come to the airport for a possible expansion of the negotiations. The official declined to provide any details.

Algerian officials said that Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat was expected in Algiers but declined to say when he would arrive or whether he would play a role in the negotiations.

The gunmen, who have threatened to fly the jet out of Algeria "to settle our score with Kuwait somewhere else," agreed on Sunday to delay their departure to pursue negotiations.

There has been no indication of where they might go if they left Algiers.

NURSE

Despite these hardships, the Salvadorans are generous and hospitable, Ms. Liveoak said.

"People are constantly giving us gifts. At first, we had a hard time accepting this..."

"We're slowly learning that accepting their gifts is accepting them."

The spiritual dimension of their work is important, Ms. Liveoak said.

With just a political or social motivation, "you're drawing on limited assets," she continued. "When you feel you're doing God's work, you're drawing on unlimited assets — drawing on unlimited strength."

One part of this spiritual work is teaching the people to relate the biblical word to today through Bible study and prayer, she said.

Using the resources of Caritas, an international Catholic relief organization, Ms. Liveoak has helped set up a food distribution center about 4 miles outside the main town.

Although the main town also has such a center, this one is reaching peasants in more remote areas, she said.

Food is distributed in rations (one ration equals 10 pounds of food) twice a month at the centers. El Salvador — which has about 5 million people — is allotted 250,000 rations; Ms. Liveoak's diocese of more than 350,000 people gets 25,000 rations.

Giving away food does foster dependency, but it is sometimes necessary.

Showing a slide of one of the women at the center , Ms. Liveoak said, "this woman is willing to walk 4 kilometers (about 2½ miles) carrying her baby and taking her two small children in order to take 30 pounds of food home because she thinks she needs it."

Ms. Liveoak also is training health promoters who can show parents how to take care of sick children and organize communities to work together to solve problems such as poor sanitation.

These health workers use seven or eight commercial medicines and herbal medicines to treat about 20 of the most common diseases, she said.

A fund has been set up to buy some of these medicines, she continued. The health promoters will be able to repay the initial investment and maintain the fund by charging patients small fees.

In another three or four years, Ms. Liveoak hopes to have trained three groups — one each year — of 25 health workers. Then she wants to leave the project in the hands of the workers themselves.

"I just feel privileged to have lived with them (the Salvadoran people)," she said.

Americans should remember one thing about Salvadorans, she continued.

"They're people — they're not 'geo-political realities.'

"People will struggle for freedom" and control over their lives, she asserted. "That's what we — Americans — believe. People need freedom and if they have to, they'll struggle for it."

HIGGINS

The radio said Higgins was killed hours before pro-Syrian militiamen of Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Amal militia captured Siddiqine from Hezbollah supporters, apparently to keep Amal from claiming credit for his liberation.

Amal and Hezbollah spokesmen in Beirut made no comment on the report. The two groups have been at odds since Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., was kidnapped near the southern port of Tyre on Feb. 17.

Siddiqine, 10 miles southeast of Tyre, was a Hezbollah stronghold before Amal crushed its Shiite Moslem fundamentalist rivals in a four-day crackdown early this month.

Amal supports the presence of the U.N. peace-keeping force in predominantly Shiite south Lebanon. Hezbollah, or the Party of God, opposes it.

Amal has charged that Hezbollah masterminded Higgins' abduction to undermine Amal's control of south Lebanon.

Hezbollah is a pro-Iranian extremist group that is believed to be an umbrella for factions holding most of the 22 foreign hostages in Lebanon. Hezbollah has not claimed to hold any foreign hostages.

Higgins' abduction was claimed by a group calling itself the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, which charged that he was a CIA spy. Both the U.S. and U.N. have denied the charge.

PUC expected to rule on controversial 976 numbers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission plans to consider this week a rule that would ban all 976 services or allow telephone customers to call them by subscription only, options that have drawn a deluge of letters.

More than 20,000 Texans have written letters urging the three-member panel to ban controversial 976 services, including so-called "dial-a-porn" numbers.

"To be telling our children and grandchildren to 'just say no' to drugs and alcohol, then making this type of material readily available — it is simply not right," wrote Mary Brumley of Lufkin. "These messages are, in reality, another type of drug. Let's say 'no' to this, also."

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has suggested limiting 976 numbers to "honest entrepreneurs" who provide non-controversial programming and moving objectionable calls to a different prefix on a subscription-only basis.

The 976 service allows a phone customer to call a number — beginning with the prefix 976 — and listen to a recorded message for a fee. The messages feature such things as adult entertaiment, jokes, prayers, sports information or news.

Opponents want an outright ban on the service.

PUC spokesman Bill Dunn said the 976 issue has generated more public outcry than even the most controversial of rate cases handled by the regulatory commission.

"It's a different kind of issue for us. It's way beyond 'are the rates too high?'" Dunn told the Dallas Morning News. "It's real unusual that we get an issue that goes beyond dollars and cents and cuts into the social fabric."

The PUC postponed action on a 976 ban after a February public hearing. At that hearing, representatives of the Texas Parent-Teachers' Association and several church groups urged an end to the telephone information industry.

Meanwhile, sponsors of sports information lines, time-and-temperature numbers and fledgling soap opera-information services pleaded not to be put out of business.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Dave Lopez said the company has tried to deal with public concern over message services such as "dial-a-porn" by offering free blocking to customers who do not want 976 numbers called from their phones.

In addition, the long-distance telephone companies AT&T, MCI and U.S. Sprint have provided "blocking" of long-distance 976 calls between Texas cities, Dunn said.

Although "blocking" prevents local and long-distance calls within Texas, customers can still call 976 services in other states.

Although Southwestern Bell would not contest an outright ban by the PUC, company attorney Jon Dee Lawrence warned that such a move could result in years of lawsuits by the operators of 976 services.

Meanwhile, the 976 companies probably would move to other forms of communication on the telephone network, Lawrence said.

Wolf fans fight animals' bad image

DeSOTO, Texas (AP) — Ever since Little Red Riding Hood spoke those immortal words, "My, Grandma, what big teeth you have!" wolves have had to contend with a truly crummy public image.

The Three Little Pigs didn't help any, whining about being gobbled up and all.

Someone has always been trying to "keep the wolf from the door."

In short, said Scott Carruth of DeSoto, wolves have taken a big, bad rap.

Carruth and his wife, Teresa, a veterinarian, own Willow Run Kennels on Parkerville Road. The Carruths raise wolves for sale, and last week he and a few other wolf fans in the Dallas area formed the Aniwaya Wolf Club, the area's first organization for wolf breeders.

Carruth, who also raises Labrador retrievers, says he sells wolf cubs, for $450 each, faster than he sells dogs. The buyers are among a growing number of people who realize wolves aren't the vicious beasts depicted in literature and Lon Chaney movies, Carruth says.

"They make great pets," Carruth says. "They're real social and structured animals. And they're very intelligent."

They're also as playful as any dog. Witness Nakaiya, a 9-week-old black Canadian timber wolf who loves to romp with the Carruths' cat, Max, and their miniature schnauzer. She also enjoys being held like a baby and licking Teresa Carruth's face.

Nakaiya, like the four other wolves the Carruths are raising, isn't 100 percent purebred. But she's close, 97 percent, Carruth says.

"Wolves are considered an endangered species, so it's against the law to own a purebred wolf. You could get sent to prison if you're caught," Carruth says.

Nevertheless, there are commercial breeders who will breed purebred wolves with dogs, usually malamutes, huskies and sometimes German shepherds, to come up with the ideal mixture of wolf and dog.

Except for Nakaiya, the Carruths' animals are one-half to 75 percent wolf, Carruth said.

Wolves' colors range from white to black. "They're all sizes and shapes," Carruth says. "Some are kind of rangy. There are 27 different strains in North America. The Asiatic wolf will get to about 50 pounds, and a McKenzie Valley wolf could grow to 175 pounds."

AP Laserphoto

Vicky Decker of Midlothian moves in close to her nearly purebread timber wolf Yukon. A few wolf fans have formed to fight the animals bad image.

Alex, a cross between a McKenzie Valley wolf and a malamute, weighs about 125 pounds and, upright, stretches higher than 6 feet.

Despite his size and regal bearing, he shrinks from strangers.

"Wolves are timid," Carruth says. "They're not displaying submission, they're just timid. They're not that way around dogs or other wolves, just around people. I think that's one of the reasons they have survived in the wild, by shying away from people, the people who try to kill them."

Brought up correctly — that is, taught early and regularly to socialize with humans and other animals — wolves make excellent companions and are good with children, Carruth says. "But I would really not want to put an adult wolf in a family with children."

Adult wolves, in demand for breeding purposes, often bring $1,500 to $2,500 apiece, Carruth says, although he sometimes sells them for as little as $600. "My main interest is in finding them a good home," he says.

Investigation begins in murder case after child found near Plano

PLANO, Texas (AP) — Laura Proctor, who hoped for more than two years she would find her missing daughter, says she is convinced that her child, Christie, is dead.

"There is no chance anymore. There isn't any hope of getting my daughter back alive," Mrs. Proctor said Sunday after a meeting with the Collin County medical examiner's office to confirm the identification of her daughter.

Mrs. Proctor reviewed X-rays of her daughter and remains found in a field as well as a tennis shoe and other pieces of clothing found at the site.

"This is the toughest part, realizing I don't have a child to search for anymore. At least not my child," she said.

But she said she now wonders what child she has been tracing for the last two years through California and Nevada.

Christie disappeared Feb. 15, 1986. The remains were positively identifed Saturday by Collin County Medical Examiner William Rohr and an anthropologist. The cause of her death was listed as undetermined homicidal violence.

The identification prompted police in Dallas and Plano to upgrade their investigation surrounding the disappearance of the 9-year-old girl from a kidnapping to a homicide.

A meeting is scheduled this week for officials from the two departments to pool evidence and determine the direction of the investigation. Mrs. Proctor also will help Monday by going to the field where the remains were found and search for more clues.

"The whole case is very bizarre. I don't think she's been in the field for the last two years. We searched that very area the week after she disappeared," Mrs. Proctor said.

Rohr said the case will continue to baffle investigators unless more remains are found.

On Sunday, the name of Christie Proctor was put on a wall along with the names of other murdered children at the Missing Children Help Center in Tampa, Fla. The organization is one that Ms. Proctor has worked with since her daughter disappeared. She has helped other parents and has become an unofficial spokeswoman of the organization.

Ms. Proctor said the two-year search for her daughter has been exhausting, revealing to her the emotional turmoil and legal hurdles that must be overcome by the many parents of missing children in this country.

Teacher fears job in jeopardy due to race

CRANE, Texas (AP) — A girls' volleyball coach who is the only black faculty member at Crane High School says she fears her job is in jeopardy because of her race.

Last Thursday, the Crane County School Board tabled a decision to renew Marian Bennett's contract on a 3-3 vote with one board member absent.

"I've never been called in by the school board," Ms. Bennett said. "I've never had a written or oral reprimand of any kind."

Saturday night, Ms. Bennett said she received three anonymous calls telling her to get out of Crane, a town of 3,000 residents about 30 miles from Odessa.

Ms. Bennett was recruited to Crane three years ago after a 60-game winning streak and a string of seven district championship seasons by volleyball teams at Burges High School in El Paso.

Ms. Bennett, 34, earned a bachelor's degree in health and speech from Sul Ross State University in Alpine and is working on a master's degree in counseling at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin in Odessa.

The decision to review her contract individually came as the board voted automatic renewal of all other teaching contracts at the school, Ms. Bennett said.

School board Chairman Charles Barrett said Sunday that he had no idea why three board members voted against renewing Ms. Bennett's teaching contract. He acknowledged the move came after the April 1 deadline mandated by Texas law for ratifying teachers' contracts.

"One thing is for sure," Barrett said. "We were wrong in what we did because it was late. It should have been done last month.

"As far as I can tell, she was already automatically hired," Barrett added, "but I didn't think of that Thursday night at the meeting."

Barrett called a special school board meeting tonight to clarify Ms. Bennett's situation.

Barrett said he was dismayed about the threatening calls Ms. Bennett said she received.

But he said he doubted race was the cause of Ms. Bennett's problems.

"Most people in Crane work in the oil fields," he told the El Paso Times. "There are black people that work with me in the oil fields and with everybody else, and I don't remember it ever being a problem in Crane."

However, Alma Marshall of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association in Odessa called Crane "a typical West Texas good ol' boy community.

"What they're trying to do now we don't really understand," Marshall said, "but as far as we're concerned it's against the law."

STATE IN BRIEF

Services scheduled for slain siblings

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Residents shaken by the grisly weekend stabbing deaths of three sisters and their brother are responding to the slayings with flowers and funds.

Funeral services were scheduled today at 2 p.m. for Jennifer 19; Shannon, 17; Martha, 15; and Ernest Mann, 11, at Mission Park Funeral Chapel, followed by a burial.

An official at the funeral home, who declined to give his name, said a large number of flowers have been sent and he has received many calls.

"People are calling to see what time the services are," the official said. He didn't know how many people would turn out for the services.

"We always expect a large crowd in these cases," he said.

Meanwhile, friends of the children's parents, Ernest and Rebecca Mann, have set up two funds to defray the funeral expenses. The parents are facing $10,000 in costs.

Crime prompts action

HOUSTON (AP) — The city's lower Westheimer street becomes the top teen-age cruising ground on Friday and Saturday nights.

As traffic slows, noise and crime increases. Fights, stabbings, drug deals and prostitution are common during the busy weekend nights.

Guns, barricades and guard dogs also are becoming a more common site in the quaint tree-lined streets of the lower Westheimer area as residents try to protect themselves against the weekend lawlessness that is moving into their neighborhoods.

Within the past year, crime from the lower Westheimer strip has begun to spill into the bordering neighborhoods, residents say. So they have started packing pistols, installing burglar bars and stopped taking walks on their shady sidewalks. Some have even moved.

Houston police are trying to cut crime. In about two weeks, some 30 extra officers on motorcycles and horses will begin patrolling the strip in an effort to curb crime and halt the growing street theatrics.

The new patrols are expected to spread over several blocks above and beyond Westheimer itself.

Chief denies role in probe

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. and some of his senior assistants are angry at what they consider interference by top police officials in the investigation of a now-disbanded police tactical unit, a published report says.

Accusations aimed at Houston Police Chief Lee P. Brown and his senior staff include claims that members of the disbanded Southeast Tactical Response Unit were tipped off they would be targets of an internal investigation before the inquiry was under way.

The Houston Chronicle reported Sunday that a source in Holmes' office accused Brown or his staff of hindering the investigation by bogging down investigators with excessive paperwork and by blocking the payment of reward money to Grant.

Brown also is being criticized for allowing investigators to be pulled off the case before it is completed.

But the police chief denied he has interfered in the probe and said he has assigned more officers to it.

Father shoots children

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man who died in a car accident after shooting and injuring his daughter and nephews was distraught over a pending divorce, police said.

Three children were injured Sunday when Alfred Collins, 33, fired a semiautomatic weapon at the sleeping children.

Injured were Tiffany Collins, 12, and her cousin, Charles Collins, 8, who were treated at local hospitals Sunday and released. Howard Collins, 10, was in serious condition at Brooke Army Medical Center, said Capt. Kenneth Weber.

About an hour after the shootings, Collins, 33, died in a head-on collision on a rain-slick road, according to a Bexar County Sheriff's office report.

Punishment phase begins

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Houston animal trainer could receive a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine when jurors decide punishment for his lion's attack on an 8-year-old girl last October.

Gary Durkovitz, 35, showed no emotion Friday when jurors convicted him of injury to a child in the mauling of Roxanne Hernandez at the Texas Flea Market in Houston.

The punishment phase of his trial begins today.

Durkovitz' lion, "Samson," was on display at the fair when it grabbed the child by the head on Oct. 10, 1987.

The lion bit into the girl's skull, exposing her brain. Roxanne has undergone reconstructive surgery and faces more operations to correct part of a missing skull and a bald spot on her head.

Democrats battle for high stakes

Associated Press

The Democratic contenders thundered into the home stretch of the New York primary campaign today, spurring on their supporters in a contest that could carry considerable weight in deciding which of them will win their party's presidential nomination.

"Too Close To Call," blared a New York Daily News headline. A poll published by the newspaper on Sunday, along with other surveys, indicated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis was ahead of Jesse Jackson, with Sen. Albert Gore Jr. trailing.

But the polls suggest Dukakis' lead has narrowed, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said he "wouldn't be surprised" by a Jackson victory. Observers said turnout could be the crucial factor.

"The race is getting closer and turnout is the key," said New York pollster Lee Miringoff. He said a low turnout would favor Jackson, whose supporters are seen as generally being more fervent than those of the other candidates, and thus more likely to follow through and vote.

Cuomo said Sunday a high turnout "should make us all happy...but I'm not sure there's going to be one."

Dukakis was staging a get-out-the-vote rally in lower Manhattan today with cousin Olympia Dukakis, who won an Academy Award last week for her role in the movie "Moonstruck." Dukakis said then he hoped her triumph was a good omen for him in New York.

Gore was making a series of subway stops with a big-name backer, New York Mayor Edward Koch, who has made a splash with harsh attacks on Jackson. Koch took the offensive again Sunday, suggesting on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that Jackson, when under stress, was "not capable of telling the truth."

Jackson was holding final-day rallies in East Harlem, Harlem and Chinatown.

Polls by The Washington Post-ABC News and USA Today-Cable News Network indicated the race was becoming tighter.

The Post-ABC poll, based on interviews Friday and Saturday nights and pubished today, showed Dukakis with 46 percent support, Jackson with 40 percent and Gore with 11 percent. The survey, with a margin of error of 8 percentage points, was based on telephone interviews with 183 registered Democrats who said they planned to vote in the primary.

The USA Today-CNN survey taken Friday, Saturday and Sunday found Dukakis with 46 percent support, Jackson 34 percent and Gore still far behind at 9 percent. The survey questioned 846 registered Democrats who said they were certain to vote Tuesday and had a margin of error of 3.5 percentage points.

Dukakis and Gore marched Sunday in a "Salute to Israel" parade, while Jackson held a meeting with community leaders that was set up by a prominent Jewish supporter. An estimated 25 percent of New York Democrats are Jewish, and issues concerning Israel have loomed large in the primary campaign.

Continental faces $1 million in fines, plane checks

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continental Airlines faces possible fines of nearly $1 million for various safety violations dating to late 1986, government officials say, prompting a plane-by-plane inspection beginning today of the country's fourth largest air carrier.

Transportation Secretary James Burnley announced Sunday that the Federal Aviation Administration would expand its special safety probe of Eastern Airlines, announced last week, to Continental as well because of the alleged violations already found.

Both airlines are subsidiaries of Texas Air Corp., the nation's largest airline holding company which itself is facing a review by the Transportation Department to determine whether its management and finances meet federal standards.

Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air, said Continental would cooperate with the investigation, as has Eastern, and that he expects the findings will show the airlines are being operated safely. He blamed the two airlines' problems on union leaders who he said are "trying to bring the company down" by raising safety concerns.

Last week the FAA slapped Eastern, which is the sixth largest airline, with a $823,000 civil penalty because of safety violations found last year. The agency also began ramp inspections of Eastern jets.

Burnley said about 200 of Eastern's 267 aircraft have been inspected and 19 were temporarily kept from flying until problems were corrected.

"We're going to extend the ramp inspections, intensive inspection, that we began on Eastern last Wednesday to Continental as well, beginning tomorrow," Burnley said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" on Sunday.

"We'll have people who'll be walking around the planes and through them and talking to the maintenance personnel and the folks in the cockpit and making sure that anything that can be readily identified is correct," he said.

Burnley said the action was taken because a review of FAA files showed that various FAA offices around the country have "almost a million dollars in proposed penalties against Continental" that are in various stages of enforcement action or under negotiations.

Some of the violations, which cover a period of more than a year, date back to November 1986 and include the period in early 1987 that Continental absorbed the operations of New York Air, People Express and Frontier Airlines, according to FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn.

Buckhorn said the violations, including some in "noncritical categories," included problems in operations, maintenance and airport security. While some of the infractions were identified by FAA inspectors, others were brought to the attention of the agency by Continental, officials said.

"We're going to extend the ramp inspections, intensive inspection, that we began on Eastern last Wednesday to Continental as well, beginning tomorrow."
— James Burnley, Transportation secretary

The airline has been notified of the penalties, according to Burnley, and is considering whether to pay them voluntarily.

Lorenzo defended the operations at both Eastern and Continental.

"There's nothing wrong with our operation. The only thing wrong with our business is the fact that we're trying to adjust and have to adjust" costs at Eastern which has lost $900 million since the deregulation in 1978, Lorenzo said on "Meet the Press."

When asked about Eastern's various problems including those with the FAA and its poor on-time record and high number of consumer complaints, Lorenzo complained about "trying to run an airline when you have two fifth columns within — one the pilots and one the machinists union."

Lorenzo accused the unions at Eastern of being "out just to tear the airline down." The unions have accused Lorenzo of siphoning off Eastern's most valuable assets to the detriment of Eastern, an allegation Lorenzo denies.

Lorenzo said despite Eastern's problems he has "no plans or intentions" to sell Eastern, saying "the door is closed" on that option.

Texas Air Corp. had record losses of $466 million last year, including $241 million at Eastern. Lorenzo has sought major concessions from employees at Eastern to reduce costs, but the unions have balked.

In addition to Eastern and Continental, the Houston-based airline company also owns Rocky Mountain Airways, Britt Airways, Bar Harbor Airlines and Provincetown-Boston Airlines.

U.S. pilot injured when F-16 crashes

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Air Force F-16 fighter jet crashed today in a field near the West German border with Luxembourg, slightly injuring the pilot when he ejected, an Air Force spokeswoman said.

It was third crash of a fighter plane over the densely populated country since March 30. A U.S. Army helicopter also crashed earlier this month.

"A U.S. Air Force F-16C crashed near Erzberg at 9:10 a.m. (3:10 a.m. EDT)," staff Sgt. Linda Brandon said. Erzberg is a small village located near the West German border with Luxembourg. She said the aircraft "was on a low-level training mission at the time of the crash."

The pilot ejected safely before the craft plowed into an open field. Brandon said he was taken to the U.S. Army's Landsthul hospital near Kaiserslautern in southwestern West Germany.

"He suffered no serious injuries but is being kept for observation," Brandon said. The pilot was not immediately identified.

Brandon said the aircraft was assigned to the 86th Tactical Fighter Wing, based at Ramstein Air Base near Kaiserslautern.

It was the second crash of a U.S. Air Force fighter since March 31, when an F-16C went down in the town of Forst, 12 miles north of Karlsruhe.

That crash killed the pilot, 24-year-old Lt. Thomas Edward Doyle of Oroville, Calif., and a West German on the ground.

A day earlier, a French Mirage crashed less than one mile from a nuclear power plant in Bavaria, killing the French air force pilot.

On April 5, a U.S. Army lieutenant and West German employee of the Army died when an Army helicopter crashed. The American was identified as 1st Lt. Glen P. Adams, 28.

Contras say proposal rejected because democratization ignored

WORLD

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebel leaders said they rejected a government proposal for a permanent truce because the document failed to spell out the democratic reforms the Sandinistas would adopt.

Government negotiators offered the plan Sunday during the third day of cease-fire talks, the first held in Managua since fighting broke out in 1981.

Although the rebels rejected the government offer, both sides returned to the bargaining table and met Sunday night and into today behind closed doors at the Camino Real Hotel on the outskirts of Managua.

Before talks resumed Sunday, the Contras said the Sandinistas must take steps — or at least guarantee them — to return Nicaragua to democratic, elected rule. "We reject the Sandinista proposal because it speaks only of cease-fire and no other issues, such as the true democratization of Nicaragua," said Adolfo Calero, head of the rebel delegation.

"For us, the permanent truce should come about simultaneously with the process of democratizing Nicaragua, and that is why the Sandinista proposal is a regression," Calero said.

"It is dangerous," said another Contra leader, Alfredo Cesar. "It does not mention how the cease-fire will be implemented."

The defense chief, Gen. Humberto Ortega, described the proposal in a news conference as "reasonable, mature and flexible."

As soon as a permanent truce is signed, he said, eight leaders of the Contra umbrella organization known as the Nicaraguan Resistance can join representatives of the 14 legally recognized opposition political parties in a "national reconciliation" dialogue with the Sandinistas.

The defense chief, President Daniel Ortega's brother, claimed the Sandinistas had already defeated the U.S.-supported Contras, but were not demanding unconditional surrender. "Only in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movies is war ended by smashing the enemy with a club," he said.

Modern wars, he said, are ended "by negotiating political and other matters to arrive at an accord. That is the way it was in Vietnam."

After receiving the government plan, the Contras discussed it before calling a news conference to announce they had rejected it.

The two sides agreed on March 23 to a preliminary peace plan that called for a 60-day cease-fire to give the negotiators time to work out a permanent truce. The cease-fire calls for the rebels to gather in seven zones. But the two sides have not yet been able to work out such details as how the rebels will be resupplied, whether they can keep their weapons and how the truce will be verified.

Graham preaches first sermon in China

BEIJING (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham preached his first sermon in China, a fundamentalist teaching on the meaning of the cross, to more than 1,500 believers in a Beijing church Sunday morning.

"I would like to bring greetings to you from Christians all over the world," Graham said at the start of his hour-long sermon, which was immediately translated into Chinese.

"Christians all over the world know about the church in China. They think about you and they pray for you," he said.

The 69-year-old Southern Baptist minister arrived five days ago for his first visit to China at the invitation of the China Christian Council and the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries.

He will travel to Nanking, Shanghai and Canton before leaving for Hong Kong at the end of the month.

Church workers at the Chongwenmen church in central Beijing said Graham's appearance was not announced beforehand to the congregation and said Graham is known to very few Chinese Christians.

But the church's main and side sanctuaries were full, and latecomers had to stand at the back, in the aisles and in the foyer.

Some were Chinese who usually worship at other Beijing churches, but many were foreigners, including a group of 27 Taiwanese Presbyterians from Brazil.

The Chinese, many of whom nod off during the hour-and-a-half-long sermons by Chinese pastors, listened attentively to Graham's message.

"I think he was very good," said second-year seminary student Hu Qiuqiu. "What he said hits right to the heart."

Her classmate, Zhao Guoxiong, said: "He lifted up the name of God. His message was Jesus Christ."

Graham preached that a person's heart changes when he becomes a Christian.

"You have a great modernization program in China," he said. "It is my prayer that there will be a great moral modernization program also because that goes right to the heart."

Soviets testing religion's waters

For the millions of Americans who attended church services Sunday, religious freedom is an absolute that is deeply rooted in Western democratic values. In the Soviet Union, however, the open practice of religion has been rigidly controlled by an atheistic state for the last seven decades. Believers are prohibited from joining the Communist Party, are barred from many professions and some have been imprisoned in labor camps for such official offenses as the teaching of Hebrew.

Why, then, is the Kremlin encouraging elaborate celebrations this spring to commemorate the 1,000th anniversary of Christianity's birth in Russia?

Perhaps the answer lies in Mikhail Gorbachev's attempt to unleash the energies of Soviet citizens in order to revitalize a stagnant society.

The repressive hand of government, applied in the past to nearly all aspects of Russian life, has stifled individual initiative and thereby stunted the economic, intellectual and cultural development of the U.S.S.R. Allowing greater participation in religious activities is perhaps regarded by the Soviet hierarchy at this time as somehow helpful to the intended revival of the nation.

Throughout most of the last millennium of Russian history, the Russian Orthodox Church has been a positive moral force that united broad sectors of a highly diverse country. In fact, Prince Vladimir's embrace of Byzantine Christianity in 988 was aimed chiefly at unifying the differing Slavic peoples of pagan Russia.

Since Gorbachev's rise to power, a number of churches and monasteries have reopened and a few religious prisoners have been freed. But the 7,000 churches that are now active are only a fraction of the tens of thousands that flourished before the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

Many Russian churchmen believe the current moment offers an unparalleled opportunity for a religious renaissance under Soviet rule. Can it be that the Kremlin has rejected Karl Marx's view of religion as the opium of the masses and adopted instead Napoleon's famous admonition: "Treat the Pope as though he had an army of 200,000 men"?

Another View:

Chinese straitjacket

In 1979, determined to bring China into the modern world, Deng Xiaoping began sending bright students to learn abroad. Now China's leaders have apparently concluded that not all the new ideas thus gained are attractive and that not all the students will be returning. The leadership has sharply cut back the program. Such pinched timidity can only set back the course of reform.

New regulations will limit the number of students who may go abroad, the percentage who may come to the United States and the time a student may remain abroad. While 8,000 new Chinese students came to the U.S. in each of the last two years, the new limit will be 600 a year. At present, 68 percent of all Chinese students abroad are studying in the U.S.; the new limit will be 20 percent. The maximum period of study will be five years.

China is hasty in assuming that students now in the U.S. will not return. It was only in 1984 that large numbers of students began to come, so that most have been here less than four years. Finishing a doctorate so quickly is hardly possible for anyone who begins with a limited command of English. Yet Chinese leaders have apparently already concluded that many students are so seduced by American life styles that they've decided never to return.

Why, indeed, would a student living a nice life in Cambridge return to a crowded cold-water flat in Beijing? For one good reason at least: Those who believe they can use their talents and knowledge to help shape China's future might well prefer that challenge to the comfort of central heating.

Unfortunately, returning students find something else again. Professors find courses and course content dictated by Communist Party officials. Scientists find little freedom of intellectual inquiry. Social scientists find their work censored. Decision-making and the dispensation of funds and resources are centrally controlled by narrow-minded officials with little knowledge of the affected disciplines.

China's leaders say the problem is that returning students have been "Westernized." But as protests by students in Beijing recently show, China's intellectuals don't have to leave home to become dissatisfied with academic life in China. It is the leaders' own contradictory goals that are really to blame. They insist on maintaining Communist Party power and control even as they seek economic change. Economic vitality cannot long thrive in a political and cultural straitjacket.

The most effective cure for a brain drain is to create opportunities for the gifted and well educated at home. China's leaders seem to have decided that it is easier to close off opportunities elsewhere. That tells promising Chinese already abroad that the straitjacket is as tight as ever.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 18, the 109th day of 1988. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 18, 1775, Paul Revere began his famous ride from Charlestown to Lexington, Mass., warning the American colonists that the British were coming.

On this date:

In 1906, a devastating earthquake struck San Francisco, followed by raging fires. About 700 people died.

In 1923, the first game was played in Yankee Stadium. (The Yankees defeated the Boston Red Sox, 4-1.)

In 1934, the first self-service laundry (called a "washateria") opened, in Fort Worth, Texas.

In 1942, four months after Pearl Harbor, an air squadron led by James H. Doolittle bombed Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

In 1942, the U.S. Armed Forces published the first issue of The Stars and Stripes, which began as a weekly newspaper, then became a daily the following November.

In 1945, war correspondent Ernie Pyle was killed by Japanese gunfire on an island in the Pacific near Okinawa.

In 1946, the League of Nations went out of business.

In 1949, the Irish republic was proclaimed.

In 1955, physicist Albert Einstein died in Princeton, N.J.

In 1956, actress Grace Kelly married Prince Rainier of Monaco in a civil ceremony. (A church wedding took place the next day.)

In 1986, a Titan rocket carrying a secret military payload exploded seconds after liftoff from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate voted 68-32 to turn the Panama Canal over to Panamanian control on Dec. 31, 1999. President Jimmy Carter, who had staked his prestige on passage of the Panama Canal treaties, called it "a beautiful vote."

Five years ago: Sixty-two people, including 17 Americans, were killed in a blast set off by a suicide bomber who drove an explosives-laden van into the U.S. Embassy in Moslem west Beirut.

Bush faulted on civil rights record

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush will have a hard time convincing voters he is a strong advocate of civil rights. He has not convinced the highest-level black serving in the Reagan administration, Samuel R. Pierce, Jr., the secretary of housing and urban development.

Jack Anderson

Pierce is the only Cabinet member to have observed Bush from the inside for the entire two terms of the Reagan administration. Unlike every other Cabinet position, HUD has had just one secretary for both terms.

Pierce's concern about Bush's civil rights stand was expressed to us by knowledgeable sources familiar with Pierce's private discontent about the vice president's hands-off attitude. He distanced himself from civil rights issues until the presidential campaign heated up last year. At that point, our sources say, he began courting Pierce's support.

Bush was lambasted by Democrats, some Republicans and black leaders recently when he took his familiar place in Reagan's shadow on the issue of the Grove City civil rights bill. The bill, which had overwhelming support in the Senate and House, filled a loophole arising out of a 1984 Supreme Court decision in Grove City College v. Bell. The court ruled that a private organization, such as a university, had to apply anti-discrimination rules only to programs receiving federal funds, rather than to the whole institution.

Congress passed a law sewing up the loophole in March, but Reagan vetoed it. Congress overrode his veto.

Slavishly loyal to his president, Bush supported Reagan's veto. It is that kind of coattail politics that has guaranteed him the Republican nomination. But Bush apparently wants it both ways. His aides insisted that Bush is not anti-civil rights and that he would have signed the bill if he had been president. They pointed to a positive civil rights record during the four years Bush served in the House.

But other Bush observers — not with the campaign — reminded the public that Bush opposed the landmark 1964 Civil Rights Act while campaigning for Congress. Later, while vice president, he opposed sanctions on South Africa to try to force it to end its apartheid policy.

Cabinet sources say that in most cases, when Bush was asked by other Cabinet members to help craft policies that were supportive of civil rights, he ducked out.

A high-level Cabinet source told us Bush steered clear of the controversy over Bob Jones University in 1981 and 1982, calling it "too dangerous politically." (The university in Greenville, S.C., restricted black enrollment and banned interracial dating and marriage.)

Pierce's own reservations about Bush's civil rights commitment were leaked to us after he wrote us a letter on Feb. 26 citing four examples of Bush's positive involvement in the Reagan administration. None of the examples had anything to do with civil rights.

We had sent a letter to 33 former and current cabinet members, including Pierce, asking them for concrete "examples of policy decisions or actions in which the opinion or work of Mr. Bush has made a difference over the past seven years." We have previously reported on the lackluster response.

One knowledgeable source told us Pierce has been "very disturbed with Bush's deliberate distance from civil rights issues in the administration until he needed Sam (Pierce) and other blacks to support him. But Sam is a gentleman." Faced with our request, Pierce took the diplomatic approach, listing the things he admired about Bush and leaving the rest unsaid.

Pierce was one of only five Cabinet members in our survey who came up with concrete examples of Bush's work.

He noted that Bush headed the presidential task force on regulatory relief and said the task force did "an excellent job."

He praised Bush's work with the Narcotics Border Interdiction System dealing with drug smuggling and the Southwestern Border Initiative to stimulate the economies of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Finally, Pierce noted Bush's activity in foreign affairs where "his visits strengthen relations with friends and allies and help lay the groundwork for progress toward a mutual understanding of issues with the Chinese, the Soviets and other Eastern Bloc countries." Bush apparently was particularly supportive of HUD's work in increasing joint ventures with the Soviets and American construction firms, a HUD effort we have previously lauded in this column.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Education Secretary William Bennett has run up against a formidable foe in the National Education Association. Neither Bennett nor the NEA appears willing to back down even in the waning months of the Reagan administration. The NEA has fought Bennett's attempts to get tuition tax credits or vouchers for parents who send their children to private elementary and secondary schools. This is a fight not over your children but over money. Bennett recently made his pitch again to Catholic educators, urging them to take in poor children and then ask the federal government for tuition compensation. Predictably, the NEA squawked again. But until we see some evidence that public schools are doing the best job for kids, especially poor kids, Bennett will continue to make sense. The constitutional separation of church and state shouldn't be used as an excuse by educators opposed to the voucher system for parochial schools. Creative academicians should be able to come up with a constitutionally sound way to get a decent education for the poor.

BIBLE VERSE

Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Luke 12:32.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Six steps sure to make you quit smoking

Since I wrote recently of my successful effort in quitting smoking, I have had many letters and calls.

They fit into two categories:

■ One group said, "You lying sleazebag. You didn't quit smoking."

■ The other group wanted to know, "How on earth did a weak individual such as yourself find the self-control to quit smoking?"

Grizzard

I will address the first group by saying, "Yes, I did quit smoking. I still want a cigarette, I dream about cigarettes, and if anybody comes out with a cigarette that won't kill me, I'll start smoking them again."

I want to answer the second group by replying, "Even the weakest individuals, such as me, can quit smoking, too, if they follow my step-by-step stop-smoking plan, which is absolutely free, doesn't involve chewing any gum, or taking any shots or medicine or getting hypnotized."

Here is how to quit smoking, my way:

■ STEP 1: Get aboard some type of public conveyance that doesn't allow smoking and light up a cigarette. When nonsmokers begin to harass you, ignore them and keep on smoking.

Nonsmokers are violent, revenge-bent people. At some point, one of these people will come over to you, take your cigarette out of your mouth, crush it on the floor and hit you somewhere in the region of your head.

Also realize it won't be that much longer until nonsmokers will begin shooting smokers in the streets. Now you're on the way to being smoke-free.

■ STEP 2: Soon, the stitches are out, and your bruises are healed, but you're getting the urge to smoke again.

Buy a pack of cigarettes, take one out of the pack and light it. Now, instead of putting the unlit end in your mouth, do it the other way. It will take those blisters on your tongue weeks to heal and during that period, you won't want a cigarette.

■ STEP 3: The next time you get the urge to smoke, go buy a pack of Larks. I'm not even certain they make Larks anymore, so if you can't find a pack try smoking a piece of shag carpet instead — it's about the same thing.

■ STEP 4: Invite Surgeon General Koop over for dinner. After eating, light up a cigarette and explain how much casual sex you've been having lately, and how you think condoms are a silly waste of time. The surgeon general will begin screaming at you and breaking up your furniture. This man is serious about cigarettes and condoms.

■ STEP 5: Recall that John Wayne smoked; and cigarettes got him when 8 zillion Japanese couldn't.

■ STEP 6: The final step. Before going to bed one evening, open a beer and drink half of it.

Then, light a cigarette and smoke it and throw the butt into the half-empty beer can. In fact smoke a couple more cigarettes and put them out in the beer can.

Let it sit overnight.

The next morning before you do anything else, find the can and take a big swallow of the warm beer with the soggy cigarettes in it.

If you still want to smoke after that, then there's nothing I, or anybody else, can do for you, Pilgrim.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans need to set limit on power to tax

The most important domestic task facing Americans in my judgment is imposing on governments at every level a limit on their taxing powers.

This is not a personal gripe. I don't personally feel unfairly taxed. I console myself by imagining that I am at least paying for a case or two of rifle ammunition or perhaps part of one fin on a small tactical missile. The only time I get the mean reds is when it occurs to me that I may be financing some congressman's bar bill on a Parisian junket.

Charley Reese

No, my belief in the necessity of tax limitations is just based on 30 or so years of observing how government works. If not forced to restrain itself, it won't. And if it doesn't, pretty soon we will all be in the poor house.

There is, you see, a natural limit on taxes but it is painful in the extreme when you reach it. Taxes can get high enough to make economic activity unprofitable and when that occurs, economic activity has a tendency to flee — either underground or overseas. It never stops because only intellectuals and government employees can exist without doing any useful work. But it can come awfully close to stopping.

Government at all levels should not consume more than 10 percent of people's income. If 10 percent is good enough for the Lord, it certainly ought to be enough for government. Right now, if you count state and local and all the hidden taxes, it is pushing toward the 50 percent mark.

And the trends are all up. There is no limit to human ingenuity and to human desires and imagination so there is no limit to the needs for tax dollars people can think up. Unless the people impose limits, the same process will go on and on — a never-ending game of more money for more programs followed by new crises and new needs for new money.

Do not be fooled by the balanced budget idea. A balanced budget simply means income and outgo match. Admittedly that's better than outgo exceeding income. Nevertheless you can have balanced budgets and annual tax increases, too. A lot of state and local governments which boast of balanced budgets actually engage in deficit spending disguised in the form of bonding. This not only disguises the true state of affairs but eats up millions of dollars to pay interest costs.

It would be nice if our elected representatives could withstand the pressure to spend and set sensible priorities. I don't think they will. Therefore, the people must force on them limits to the amount of money they can collect and spend. Then, they will have no choice but to set priorities.

In the 50 states, these limitations can be incorporated in the constitutions and some states already have them. Putting a limit on federal taxing power is more difficult. If the Congress refuses to pass a constitutional amendment so the states can decide to ratify or reject it, the only alternative is for the states to call a constitutional convention.

I'm flat against this. I don't care how many lawyers say you could limit a convention to one issue. I think if we ever had a convention, the whole Constitution could get rewritten and I like the one we've got even if few people pay any attention to it.

In a moment of anger I wrote recently that people ought to vote against every Democrat but I think I was wrong to say that. I think people should vote against every incumbent, regardless of party. It would be worth losing the few good ones just to send a shock wave through the political establishment.

I have observed in the past that there seems to be in reality only two parties — politicians and us. I have observed lately a growing belief on the part of too many politicians that they are immune from any accountability to the voters. They have fooled us so many times and gotten away with so much they are beginning to gloat.

Election defeat is an effective, legal way to wipe the smirk off their faces.

Hospitals made $2 billion on unneeded stays, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators have compiled evidence suggesting the nation's hospitals are making billions of dollars extra by admitting patients who could be treated better and cheaper without hospitalization.

A draft report prepared by the inspector general's office of the Department of Health and Human Services concludes that hospitals probably were paid about $2 billion by Medicare in 1985 to treat patients who should not have been hospitalized in the first place.

"Although an estimated $939 million would have been spent providing care to these patients in other medical settings, reducing unnecessary admissions to hospitals is one of the most effective ways of saving Medicare dollars," says the report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press.

The analysis was based on 7,050 patient records at 214 randomly selected hospitals from October 1984 to March 1985. It concluded that 740 admissions, or 10.5 percent, were unnecessary.

There is potential financial incentive to admit patients who do not need hospitalization under a plan established by Congress in 1983 which sets a fixed payment for each of 475 diagnosis related groups — or DRGs, as they are known in the industry.

A hospital receives the same payment for each admission for a particular diagnosis regardless of the actual services provided or length of time a patient spends in the hospital.

"Hospitals retain a profit when patient care costs less than the DRG payment, but must absorb losses when costs are higher."

Against that background, the study found that the average length of stay for the unnecessary admissions was 4.4 days, compared with 7.6 days for necessary admissions.

"Most of the unnecessary admissions needed medical attention, but not in an acute care setting," the report said. It placed nearly 78 percent in that category, but concluded that almost 12 percent of the patients did not require immediate treatment of any kind when they were admitted.

Most of the other medically unnecessary admissions were classed as either "social admissions," such as temporarily hospitalizing an elderly person because he or she did not have any other place to stay, or instances of frail people being hospitalized when they should have been admitted to a nursing home instead.

Only 25 of the 214 hospitals studies had no unnecessary admissions, according to the report, but there was wide variation in the rates of unnecessary admissions for the others. For example, at least half the admissions were judged unnecessary at two hospitals and at least a third at eight other institutions. Twenty percent or more of the sampled admissions at 34 hospitals were found unnecessary.

No individual hospitals were named in the study.

The overall 10.5 percent unnecessary admissions rate for the cases sampled is far higher than the maximum 2.5 percent unnecessary admission rate reported to the Health Care Financing Administration by any of the state peer review organizations the federal agency pays to police hospitals.

One of the major recommendations in the report is that the Health Care Financing Administration, which oversees Medicare and Medicaid, determine why those peer review organizations identify a substantially lower rate of unnecessary admissions than the inspector general's survey found, and require them to adopt more effective screening techniques.

Mourners call slain Marine a peacemaker

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Cpl. Ricardo Villahermosa, killed accidentally by fellow Marines in Panama last week, had said before he left for that Central American nation that he "wasn't coming back," friends said at his funeral.

The corporal, who was eulogized as a peacemaker for his efforts on behalf of his country, was saluted with a three-gun volley and taps during the services Sunday.

The Rev. John Flood, minister of Whitakers Baptist Church and the grandfather of Villahermosa's wife, Titina, said the 25-year-old Marine was part of a "God-ordained force to protect. "Without that protection, we are loose for the enemy to destroy."

After the service, friends of the Camp Lejeune Marine said he was "fun to be with" but that he "didn't seem right" and had said that he didn't expect to come back.

Villahermosa, a weapons platoon squad leader, was part of a 12-man security patrol guarding a petroleum storage area near a U.S. military base. He was shot in the abdomen last Tuesday by fellow Marines who thought they were firing at intruders.

Villahermosa's 3-year-old daughter Victoria sat on her mother's lap throughout the memorial service, playing with a strand of beads around her mother's neck.

During burial services Sunday for Marine Cpl. Ricardo Villahermosa, a Marine hands 3-year-old Victoria Villahermosa her father's flag. Her mother, Titina, held her during services.

Villahermosa's family flew to North Carolina from Puerto Rico and California for the service at Johnson Funeral Home in Rocky Mount. Villahermosa was buried at a family cemetery near Sharpsburg.

A Marine handed the corporal's folded flag to Victoria. A second flag went to Villahermosa's father, Augustine, of Puerto Rico, who flew to North Carolina for the service.

Villahermosa's brother, Hendrick, of California, was also at the service. Villahermosa's mother, Juanita, was ill and could not make the trip from Puerto Rico, friends said.

After the service, friends of the family remembered Rick as a happy, friendly man.

"He was fun to be with. If you were down, you could go to him," said Diane Lamm of New Bern. "If you didn't have a brother, you had one in him. He most surely died a hero."

Cynthia Marker, who was a neighbor of Villahermosa at a mobile home park in Bridgeton, said she saw Villahermosa the night before he reported to Camp Lejeune. "He just didn't seem right. He told me he wasn't coming back. I thought he was kidding," she said.

Flood said he received a similar impression from talking to family members.

"I don't think he was looking to come back," Flood said.

Suit challenges Catholic church's tax-exempt status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the Roman Catholic Church are asking the Supreme Court to kill a lawsuit aimed at stripping the church of its tax-exempt status because of its anti-abortion lobbying.

The justices were hearing arguments today on a key procedural point that will determine whether the suit can proceed.

At issue is whether "pro-choice" organizations and individuals have the required legal standing to sue the federal government in hopes of forcing revocation of the church's tax exemptions. A decision is expected by July.

The pro-choice coalition sued in 1980, accusing the government of helping to subsidize the church's anti-abortion lobbying through tax breaks.

The federal tax code generally bars tax-exempt organizations from spending money on political activities.

A federal judge in New York City held the church in civil contempt in May 1986 for refusing to supply records to those suing the government. The judge ordered the church to pay $100,000 a day until it supplied the documents.

But the contempt ruling has been put on hold pending the outcome of the church's appeal to the Supreme Court.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year ruled that the pro-choice groups and individuals have legal standing to sue the government.

> The court said pro-choice forces claim failure to enforce the tax code places them "at a competitive disadvantage with the Catholic Church in the arena of public advocacy."

The appeals court said the pro-choice forces claim the government's failure to enforce the tax code places them "at a competitive disadvantage with the Catholic Church in the arena of public advocacy on important public issues."

The Reagan administration has taken the church's side. Government lawyers argue that allowing the suit to survive would encourage other suits by those dissatisfied with the tax treatment given groups with opposing views.

Even if the suits eventually fail, Justice Department lawyers have told the court, they would give people unwarranted access to the courts and a means of forcing adversaries to reveal sensitive information.

The case is U.S. Catholic Conference vs. Abortion Rights Mobilization, 87-416.

Sea-Tac pilot says he had only one chance to save passengers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The pilot of a commuter plane that crashed in flames shortly after takeoff at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport said he knew he had only one chance to save himself and the 39 others aboard.

"There wasn't much time available," said Carl Carlson, who headed in for an emergency landing even though he knew he was too high and going too fast.

The burning Horizon Air plane stopped after it collided with a concourse passenger ramp Friday and the crisis ended in a shower of firefighting foam.

All 40 people aboard Flight 2658 from Seattle to Spokane, Wash., survived. Only three of the 19 injured remained hospitalized early today, one in serious condition.

Carlson, 38, and co-pilot Mark Hilstad, both of the Portland area, were interviewed here Sunday by National Transportation Safety Board investigators.

Neither man, nor the NTSB investigators, would comment to reporters after the closed meeting. But in remarks overheard by reporters outside the meeting, Carlson said he first knew the plane was in trouble when he experienced an "overall sense" of decreasing responsiveness in the plane's controls.

Instruments then indicated the right engine was losing from 40 percent to 60 percent of its torque, the pilots said.

Carlson said he immediately radioed for permission to return to the airport and began a series of three turns to bring the twin-engine de Havilland Dash 8 back in line with the runway.

As he was heading into the final turn, Carlson said, Hilstad lowered the landing gear and then shouted that the right engine was on fire.

"I quickly saw the red fire warning light," Carlson said, adding the flames were not visible from his side of the cockpit.

Hilstad described the fire as a big reddish ball of flame protruding forward from the wing. He said it appeared while the plane was at about 2,000 feet, going 205 to 230 mph.

NTSB investigators have said that an initial review of tapes of tower communications with the plane indicated the first mention of fire came from another aircraft that was not immediately identified.

Carlson and Hilstad said they remembered hearing the warning over the radio as they discovered the problem themselves.

Hilstad said he triggered two fire extinguisher bottles but they had no effect.

Carlson said he quickly experienced trouble with the controls.

As they were starting down, the pilots said, they realized they were too high and were going too fast but they had no choice except to land.

"I felt like it was wallowing, teetering, going to stall," Hilstad said.

Carlson said he thought he was still in a comfortable range to maneuver the plane to a stop. He and Hilstad applied full force to the brakes and rudder and locked the emergency brake, but could not avoid ramming a runway identification sign and hitting the passenger ramp.

"I remember the Horizon ramp going by at blinding speed," he said. "The next thing I knew we were being showered by foam."

Both men said their preflight checks showed nothing wrong with the airplane, and everything was normal through the takeoff.

Joseph T. Nall, an NTSB investigator, said Sunday night at a Seattle news conference that a passenger spotted fuel on the plane's wing before the blaze.

Shelter for homeless obstructs Miami's plans

MIAMI (AP) — While workers put the finishing touches on this city's new pastel-pink basketball arena, about 700 ragged, hungry men a block away cling to the gate of a homeless shelter waiting for the day's only meal.

For five years, city planners have tried to move the shelter in the Overtown section — scene of the 1982 riots — for fear families venturing downtown to watch NBA stars like Larry Bird or Magic Johnson will be hassled by vagrants, beggars and drug addicts.

"I'm sure the shelter is doing fine work, but some of the clientele tend to congregate on the sidewalk all day," said Matthew Schwartz, deputy director of Miami's Department of Development. "It's an environment that's simply not conducive to the arena, the area development or any kind of business."

Most of the homeless who gather at the Camillus House shelter for the 3 p.m. soup line know little about the $52.5 million Miami Arena, the city's fledgling NBA franchise or the planned $150 million project to rejuvenate the blighted area. But they are painfully aware they have never been a part of the big plans.

"It's another roundup," said C.C. Williams, a 28-year-old ex-convict who spends the night in abandoned warehouses and sometimes finds day-labor jobs. "The police came and took us away before the Orange Bowl and when the pope came through. This is the same kind of thing."

"People drive through here on their way back from work and they stare at us like we're animals at the zoo," said Terence Radd, a 22-year-old Detroit native who says he has turned to petty crime for survival. "I know we're probably an embarrassment — but we've got a little pride, too."

Brother Paul Johnson, who operates Camillus House for the Brothers of the Good Shepherd, says he is not opposed to progress, but doesn't want to see the homeless get a raw deal.

"I love basketball just like everyone else, but since when do the recreational needs of the wealthy become more important than the basic needs of human beings?" he asserted.

The city has offered just over $1 million for the half-block Camillus House property.

"We've been here 30 years, it wasn't our idea to move," Johnson said, adding that he thinks it's worth $2 million.

But Schwartz said: "That figure is out of line. ... The city has limits as to what it can pay."

Under public acquisition laws, the city has the right to condemn Camillus House and take the property. But Johnson said if that happens he will sue for the true value of the land plus hefty damages, a suit Schwartz acknowledges the city probably would lose.

With the 16,500-seat arena set to open in July, Schwartz says the arena's operators and owners of the Miami Heat basketball franchise are putting subtle pressure on the city to move Camillus House.

The Heat, which tips off its National Basketball Association schedule in the arena in November, has publicly steered clear of the homeless controversy for fear it could hurt the team's image. Team owners Lewis Schaffel and Zev Bufman refused comment.

The arena is the centerpiece of a city plan to turn the Overtown slum into a thriving middle-income community with four residential complexes, hotels, shops and a cultural center. Nearby are the year-old Bayside festival marketplace and newly opened Bayfront Amphitheater.

The Camillus House has plans of its own if it is bought out. Johnson has already purchased a 1.8-acre lot on the other side of downtown near the city police station to serve the homeless, who he said number 8,700 in summer and 10,000 in winter in Dade County.

"The city just seems to think that if it ignores these people long enough, they will go away," Johnson said.

Trapeze performer falls to her death

HIALEAH, Fla. (AP) — A trapeze artist slipped during a solo performance 17 feet above ground and plunged headfirst to her death as 900 spectators watched in horror, witnesses said.

Belinda Amandis, 31, of Sarasota, who was so proficient she once performed while suspended from a helicopter, died instantly Sunday night at the Circus USA show, authorities said.

Ms. Amandis was about five minutes into her act, balancing on her back while performing without a net. She slipped when she attempted to slide down the bar and hang on with one knee.

"The spotter down below made a jump to try and break her fall, but he was too late," said 27-year-old Tom Gonzalez, who also was among the 900 spectators packed into the sweltering big top.

"She hit the ground on her face. It was probably the worst way she could fall."

Corps begin program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine Virginia school teachers will become Peace Corps Volunteers in Ghana for a year as part of an effort to double the number of volunteers abroad, the Peace Corps announced today.

The new one-year program — volunteers normally serve for two years — will help teachers in Ghana develop new courses, said Peace Corps Director Loret Miller Ruppe.

She said the Peace Corps, which hopes to increase its volunteers from about 5,000 to 10,000 by 1992, has requests for more teachers from many of the 60 countries where volunteers now serve. More U.S. educators will be enlisted under the new Leadership for Peace program, Ms. Ruppe said.

The first assignments in the program resulted from a cooperative effort involving the Peace Corps, the National Education Association and the Commonwealth of Virginia. A Peace Corps news release said Virginia has been taking steps to internationalize its education, using former Peace Corps volunteers to help make teachers and students more aware of other peoples and cultures.

Swaggart gets $20,000

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A woman handed Jimmy Swaggart a $20,000 check during church services, prompting the disgraced evangelist to joke "I didn't bilk her."

The woman, introduced by Pastor Jim Rentz only as Anna, was singing in the choir Sunday when she walked to the pulpit and said Swaggart helped her find Jesus. The woman then gave him the check, which he quickly handed to another minister on the stage of the Family Worship Center.

"For the benefit of all the news media, I didn't bilk her out of it," Swaggart said.

Veterans open museum

MIAMI (AP) — A museum and library filled with old photographs and the now-rusted guns of the men who stormed Cuba's Bay of Pigs was dedicated Sunday on the 27th anniversary of the failed invasion.

"Future generations must know what happened at the Bay of Pigs. They must know we fought and many died," said Juan Perez Franco, president of those who served in Brigade 2506.

Many of the 400 who walked through the hall and central room were Brigade veterans who pointed to photographs of people they had known before their friends died in battle.

"We knew we could have lost out lives, but we didn't believe we would lose the battle," said Dr. Carlos Garrido, who was captured and held 22 months after the April 17, 1961 landing.

The museum, nestled in the heart of the Little Havana section in central Miami, contains bitter memories for many of the people who live nearby. It recalls the day when President John F. Kennedy canceled U.S. support of the CIA-backed mission and left the exiled Cuban volunteers stranded on the beach of the Cuban bay.

'Little America' shaken by bombing

By STEPHEN R. WILSON

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — The "Little America" colony was shaken by the bloody terrorist attack on the USO club here, but the U.S. Navy says its 10,000-strong community in Naples won't be driven away.

The car bombing that killed four Italians and one American servicewoman was the first known terrorist act against the U.S. Navy in this southern port city that serves as center for 6th Fleet operations in the Mediterranean.

The Thursday night blast also injured 17 people, including four American sailors. Two Islamic groups claimed responsibility.

Italian investigators say the attack was carried out by Junzo Okudaira, a notorious terrorist of the Japanese Red Army, which is tied to Arab terrorist groups in Lebanon. Police say he had at least two accomplices, Fusako Shigenobu, the woman leader of the Japanese gang, and a Middle Eastern or North African man.

Chief investigator Romano Argenio on Sunday said he had no new leads in the case.

Security measures have been tightened at the extensive American Navy facilities here, but officials and dependents say their lives and activities haven't changed much.

"The first couple of days there is apprehension but it wears off real fast," said Lt. David Morris, a Navy spokesman. "You have to get on with life."

"We are all devastated, but you can't live in a shell of fear," added his wife, Deirdre, mother of an 11-month-old child.

The car bomb exploded as dozens of sailors from the visiting frigates USS Paul and USS Capodanno were at a party inside the USO club. The frigates have since left Naples, but five ships from the 6th Fleet's amphibious task force are due to arrive here Wednesday on a routine port call.

In addition to welcoming visiting servicemen from 6th fleet ships, Naples is home to about 10,000 Navy personnel and dependents.

Some are stationed at NATO's Southern Europe Command, but most serve at the Naval Support Activity Base in the Naples' suburb of Agnano. The 55-acre complex has been the administrative headquarters for the 6th Fleet since 1963.

The 6th Fleet flagship, the USS Belknap, is based in Gaeta, 60 miles to the north.

The Agnano complex could pass for a small American town. It is equipped with a supermarket, bar, restaurant, club, movie theater, bank, hospital, church, post office, school and gymnasium. The base also has a weekly newspaper, a local English-language radio station and a TV station which receives American programs by satellite.

But the Americans are not completely isolated. Since only a limited number of enlisted personnel is provided housing, most people rent apartments in the local community.

Most live in the western part of the city in an area known as Little America.

The American presence has been an economic boom for Naples, pouring some $250 million a year into the local economy.

The newspaper La Repubblica summed up the feeling of Naples' residents following the USO attack as: "Italians, Americans what's the difference? For us it is a tragedy in the family."

Still, many Neopolitans say they have little direct contact with the resident Americans.

The U.S. community "is almost an invisible army, a community that lives like a colony, closed in its own world," commented the newspaper Il Messaggero. "The women rarely venture out into the city. They hate the traffic, they are not able to adjust, they are afraid of muggers."

Morris said there are some Americans who can't adjust to Neopolitan ways and rarely leave the Navy complex.

"But most people serve here for two years and that mentality wears off after a while," he said. "I don't think there is a fortress attitude."

However, he said, Navy personnel are constantly aware of the possiblity of terrorist attacks and take sufficient precautions.

While Americans in Naples had never been terrorist targets before, U.S. military figures have been attacked elsewhere in Italy. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier was kidnapped by the Red Brigade in Verona in 1981 and rescued 42 days later. Leamon Hunt, the Rome-based head of the U.N. observer force in the Sinai, was assassinated in 1984. The Red Brigades, an Italian terrorist group, claimed responsibility for his killing.

"We try not to draw a lot of attention to ourselves," said Lt. Cmdr. John Marchi, another Navy spokesman. "Naples is a very big city and we kind of melt in."

Bombs go off at Jewish center, Saudi airlines

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Bombs exploded today at the Jewish Community Center and a Saudi Arabian airline office, and police suggested the blasts may have been staged by the same attackers. No injuries were reported.

Police said there were no immediate claims of responsibility for the two attacks, which caused extensive property damage.

"It would take less than 10 minutes to drive from the Jewish Center to the Saudi airlines office at that time of night when there is so little traffic," police spokesman Karl-Heiz Wagner said.

The first bomb went off at the Jewish Community Center in the residential West Side just after midnight. At 12:18 a.m. (6:18 p.m. EDT Sunday), the second bomb exploded at the office of Saudia Airlines, about a mile away, police said.

The Jewish Community Center, a modern, marble-fronted building which houses conference rooms, a gymnasium, restaurant and other facilities, was opened in September 1986.

Security at the center is tight, with frequent police patrols. Investigators at the scene reported tens of thousands of dollars of damage.

A Volkswagen bus parked in front of the Jewish Community Center was destroyed, police said. Police said a caretaker was inside the community center at the time of the blast but was not injured.

No one was inside the airline office when the explosion occurred there, police said. Wagner said there was no immediate estimate of damage at the airline offices. The blast also damaged the adjacent offices of Air Canada.

Worshipers cheer as priest denounces regime

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest told worshipers on Sunday not to be intimidated by riot police who the day before had crushed a violent demonstration against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noreiga.

Hundreds of people gave standing ovations and cheered repeatedly during the homily by the Rev. Javier Villanueva.

"There is no suffering, no blow from a truncheon or a stream of poisonous water, nor an insult, nor criticism, nor pain that does not form part of the suffering of Christ," he told about 500 people at Christ the King Church.

On Saturday, police trucks equipped with water cannons fired a mixture of tear gas and water at about 400 demonstrators, most of whom were members of an opposition women's group, during a march on the north side of Panama City.

Riot police also fired tear gas canisters and birdshot to scatter the protesters, who threw rocks and blocked streets with flaming barricades of tires and trash.

Noriega, chief of Panama's 15,000-member Defense Forces and the country's strongman, is under indictment by a grand jury in federal courts in Florida on charges of drug trafficking and money laundering.

The Reagan administration has imposed economic sanctions on Panama, including freezing Panamanian assets in the United States, in an effort to oust Noriega. The measures have caused an acute cash shortage in Panama that has helped spur anti-Noriega protests.

Jose Manuel Faundes, a lawyer for the independent Human Rights Commission, said six people were arrested during the three-hour demonstration Saturday. No one was reported injured.

The rally, which followed a church service, was organized by the Union of Civic Women.

Before Sunday's Mass began, a young man handed out photocopies of a cartoon published last week in the pro-government newspaper La Republica. The cartoon depicted Catholic Archbishop Marcos G. McGrath on a cloud and as a Nazi.

"Get off that cloud and come here to reality," said the caption.

The man said he was a member of the National Civic Crusade, a coalition of 200 political parties, business, labor and student groups formed last June to try force Noriega out.

But people waiting for the Mass grabbed stacks of the cartoons, tore them up and threw them away. They also screamed, "Toad," a term used in Panama for people who spy on the opposition for the Defense Forces.

Some Latin American leaders asked McGrath last month to mediate the conflict, but several days later the archbishop said his efforts had failed and he blamed Noriega's "intransigence." Since then the pro-government news media has repeatedly denounced McGrath.

Army takes action in wake of assassination of PLO leader

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army restricted travel today in most of the occupied territories and clamped a curfew on about 20 refugee camps in an effort to halt widespread protests after the assassination of a senior PLO commander.

Israeli leaders refused to comment Sunday on the slaying of Khalil al-Wazir in Tunisia. But Israeli sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the attack on Saturday in a Tunis suburb was carried out by the Israeli Mossad intelligence service, the navy and a commando unit.

Al-Wazir, 52, also called Abu Jihad, was the most senior Palestine Liberation Organization official assassinated since Fatah, the largest guerrilla group in the PLO, was founded in 1964. He was PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's closest aide, led the group's main army, and supervised military operations inside the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank.

Rioting was far less intense in the occupied lands on Sunday than it was on Saturday, when 17 Palestinaisn died in the bloodiest day of rioting in four months. Arab reports said Israeli troops shot and wounded nine Arabs on Sunday. The army confirmed two wounded.

Journalists and non-residents were barred from major roadways and towns after the army declared them closed military areas, an army spokeswoman said. A curfew began Sunday and continued today for about 400,000 Palestinians living in towns and refugee camps in the occupied lands.

The army spokeswoman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said about 15 of the 19 refugee camps in the West Bank were under curfew, requiring residents to stay indoors indefinitely. Also under curfew was the town of Anabta and Nablus, the large city in the West Bank with 120,000 residents.

In the Gaza Strip, an Arab journalist said six of eight refugee camps and one village were under curfew. Burning tires dotted streets in Gaza City, and most people stayed inside, honoring a PLO call for three days of mourning for al-Wazir.

Graffitti on a wall in Gaza City said: "Revenge on the Mossad for killing Abu Jihad," the code name of al-Wazir.

In the West Bank camp of Jelazoun, Israeli soldiers turned back a U.N. convoy carrying food and other supplies on Sunday, despite complaints of severe shortages during a 33-day curfew. An Israeli soldier guarding the camp told U.N. officials their convoy posed a security threat.

At least 166 Palestinians have been killed since the Palestinian uprising began Dec. 8. An Israeli soldier and an Israeli settler also have been slain.

Palestinian leaders declared three days of mourning beginning Saturday for al-Wazir. Black flags and green, red, black and white Palestinian flags fluttered over the roofs of houses throughout the occupied lands on Sunday.

On Sunday, most of the 100,000 Palestinians working in Israel stayed away from their jobs, merchants kept their stores shuttered and drivers attached black ribbons to the antennas of their cars.

Thousands of Palestinians filed into mosques to usher in the holy Moslem month of Ramadan and attend memorial services for the slain commander.

The Palestinians blamed Israel for the assassination.

"All the people in the occupied areas and outside...are extremely shocked by the assassination," said Faiz Abu Rahmeh, al-Wazir's cousin and a leader of the Gaza Strip's 650,000 Palestinians.

Several army officers and Israelis who were victims of guerrilla attacks planned by al-Wazir said they were pleased the Palestinian commander was dead.

"Something great has happened, I have closed a circle and I'm happy," the daily Hadashot quoted Eli Ben Yair as saying. Ben Yair's wife was one of three people killed after Fatah guerrillas hijacked a bus near Beersheva on March 7.

Israeli leaders refused to comment on the assassination. Israel radio quoted Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir as telling Cabinet ministers he heard about the attack on the radio.

But the sources confirmed it was an Israeli operation, carried out jointly by the Mossad, the navy and an elite commando unit. They said it had been postponed several times before Saturday.

In other developments Sunday, Israel threatened to shut down two Arab-owned weekly magazines in Israel-annexed east Jerusalem. The papers are published by the owners of the Palestine Press Service, a news agency which was closed for six months by the army earlier this month.

Israel radio reported the army has sentenced two more reserve soldiers to jail for refusing to serve in the occupied territories, bringing the current total of resisters to 19.

Injured Demjanjuk carried into court to hear verdict

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk was carried into court feet first by six police officers today to hear the verdict in his Nazi war crimes trial after he said he was unable to enter on his own, apparently due to a back injury.

The 68-year-old former Ohio autoworker, his legs flailing slightly and his head upright, was taken to a holding cell next to the courtroom, from where he listened to the opening of today's session.

Demjanjuk's defense team and family said he should lie flat on his back because of a back injury.

Presiding Judge Dov Levine responded: "The medical opinion submitted to us clarifies that the accused is capable of sitting in the courtroom...but we will comply with the request of the defense."

Reading excerpts of the 450-page judgment could take many hours, and observers said it could go into a second day. Levine recessed for a lunch break after 3½ hours.

During the break, defense attorneys said based on what they had heard so far, they were pessimistic about the verdict. "There seems to be an emphasis on the credibility of shaky witnesses," said defense attorney John Gill.

Levine indicated the judges gave great weight to the testimony of five survivors who identified Demjanjuk as the notorious Nazi death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

The question of identity has been key during the 14-month trial. Demjanjuk denies he is "Ivan" and defense attorneys questioned the memory of survivors.

But Levine said survivor testimony had convinced the court "these experiences are deeply ingrained on their memories, the horrors are a deep part of them, the sights are before their eyes and the stories are true and accurate."

Demjanjuk's wife, Vera, 62, was seen crying and wringing her hands during the lunch break. "I can't even sit down," she said.

Holocaust mastermind Adolf Eichmann, the only other Nazi war criminal to be tried in Israel, was convicted and hanged in 1962.

If convicted, Demjanjuk could receive the death penalty. He would be sentenced at a later hearing.

Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic, said Demjanjuk would appeal a guilty verdict. Nishnic visited the defendant in prison on Sunday and said Demjanjuk was "optimistic, even though he's been let down before."

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk is charged with war crimes, crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity for allegedly operating gas chambers that killed 850,000 Jews at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland in 1942 and 1943.

Demjanjuk, who lived in a Cleveland suburb before being extradited to Israel in February 1986, claims he is a victim of mistaken identity. He says he was a Nazi prisoner-of-war during the period in question.

Nishnic, who raised more than $650,000 in defense funds, said he was so convinced Demjanjuk would be acquitted he was carrying the defendant's air ticket to Cleveland in his pocket.

The prosecution's case against Demjanjuk has rested largely on the memories of the five Treblinka survivors.

A pivotal piece of prosecution evidence was Demjanjuk's alleged Nazi identity card, provided to Israel by the Soviet Union.

The document, issued at Trawniki, a training facility for death camp guards in Nazi-held Poland, does not mention Treblinka but states that Demjanjuk was posted at the nearby Sobibor death camp.

Six prosecution experts authenticated the card's paper, ink, photograph and signatures, and an equal number of defense witnesses said the document was forged. Demjanjuk claims the Trawniki card was fabricated by the Soviets to punish him for fighting in an anti-communist unit organized by the Nazis at the end of World War II.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Demonstrators disrupt tree-planting ceremony

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — About 50 masked anti-Israeli demonstrators disrupt a tree planting ceremony marking the 40th anniversary of the Jewish state's founding and this city's role in the Zionist movement.

The protesters on Sunday shouted pro-Palestinian slogans, set off firecrackers and waved a Palestinian flag during a speech on a city square by Israel's ambassador to Switzerland, Moshe Rivlin.

Police dispersed the protesters after several minutes.

The ceremony included the planting of 40 cedars donated by Israel to the city of Basel, host of the first Zionist World Congress in 1897.

At a separate rally, local leftist politicians and activists charged the city was endorsing Israel's Arab policies by accepting the gift.

At least 166 Palestinians have been killed in four months of violent Arab protests in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Rioting inmates surrender

ENSISHEIM, France (AP) — More than 250 prisoners who rioted and took two hostages at Ensisheim Prison surrendered and freed their captives unharmed.

The prisoners, who were protesting what they called inhumane conditions at the prison, gave up Sunday afternoon and freed a nun who worked as a volunteer at the prison, Sister Francoise, and a guard who was not identified.

Nearly all 260 inmates at the prison in eastern France were involved in the riot that began Saturday. Ten of the prisoners were injured.

Five leaders of the riot talked for several hours Sunday morning with negotiators. French authorities said they made no concessions, but would take into consideration the convicts' complaints.

Ethiopians request asylum

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — An Ethiopian air force plane flew into southeastern Sudan and two of its nine crew members requested asylum.

A government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said on Sunday the aircraft landed in Suki, 240 miles from the capital of Khartoum. After the landing Saturday, the crew members were questioned in Khartoum, he said.

The official declined to say if asylum would be granted to the two crew members who requested it or what would happen to the other seven men.

6 people die in crashes

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A single-engine plane crashed outside Brisbane, and police said all three people aboard were killed.

Also Sunday, a helicopter crashed into a paddock and burst into flames 25 miles west of Sydney, and police said the three people aboard were killed.

No further details on the crashes were immediately available.

All six victims were Australian, police said.

Shades of yesterday

Billy James, at left, handles a cord at the base of a lamp brought in for repair to the Midland Lamp and Shade House, 1611 W. Wall Ave. James specializes in repairing custom-made lamps and can make a light that lasts out of a fire extinguisher, a musical instrument — or just about anything else. Below, Ethel Shelton stands framed by the shades, lamps, antiques and other items in the front room of the shop she has operated since the late 1940s. This porcelain figurine, which adorns a lamp base, right, is an example of the unusual and distinctive items available at her cluttered shop.

A trek to Ethel Shelton's Midland lamp shop is like a visit to another world, a house of hundreds of lamps, bulbs and cords, plugs, shelves, vases and antiques seemingly sprouting everywhere.

The Midland Lamp and Shade House, 1611 W. Wall Ave., was established by Mrs. Shelton and her husband in 1949. Since 1971, when her husband Q.M. Shelton died, she has been the sole proprietor.

The business started almost by accident, she says.

"We went to the unclaimed freight sales in Houston, and they would usually have them in the railroad depots," Mrs. Shelton said, seated in a chair in one of the dozens of crowded corners of her shop.

"We'd buy lamps for the parts then. Some friends suggested we order the lamp journal instead to get catalogs for suppliers. Later, the salesmen started calling on us for lamp shades."

The house on Wall Avenue was built in 1938. At the time, Shelton was in the glass and mirror business — and at one time had a contract cutting glass for use in airplanes, Mrs. Shelton said.

"We decided that if we tried to carry both businesses, we would create more work for ourselves and have to hire more help," she recalled.

So, the glass and mirror business was sold.

The operation — which in large part consisted of collecting lamps and shades, any lamps and shades — took up one room, two rooms, then three and more. After Shelton died in 1971, his wife almost sold the business.

But, "I guess the good Lord knew I needed something to do," so she stayed open, she says.

She kept living quarters in the back of the home until a year or so ago, when "I finally got crowded out." She moved to a nearby apartment.

With two regular employees, and an inventory of lamp shades she estimates at 3,000, she still serves a regular clientele.

"I like for people to have a selection," she says. "And not just one or two designs.

She regularly buys inventory from studios in Brooklyn, Los Angeles, and Montebello, Calif.

Her repairman, Billy James, also will accept almost anything a customer may bring in and make a lamp out of it.

"We'll make lamps from anything they can bring in," she says with a laugh. "Anything, except maybe a Cadillac."

In one corner of the shop testifying to the odd items James will convert is a painted fire extinguisher with a light bulb sticking out of it.

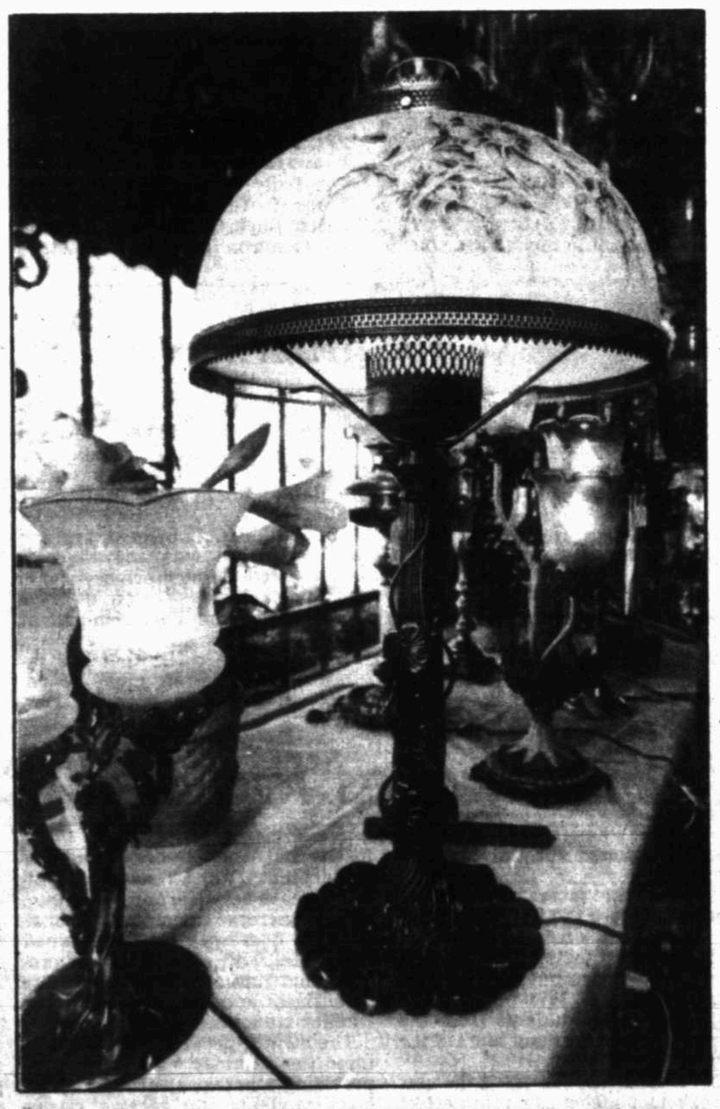
Mrs. Shelton — who demurred when asked about her age — fidgeted constantly with two ball point pens, perhaps the sign of a person used to working with her hands.

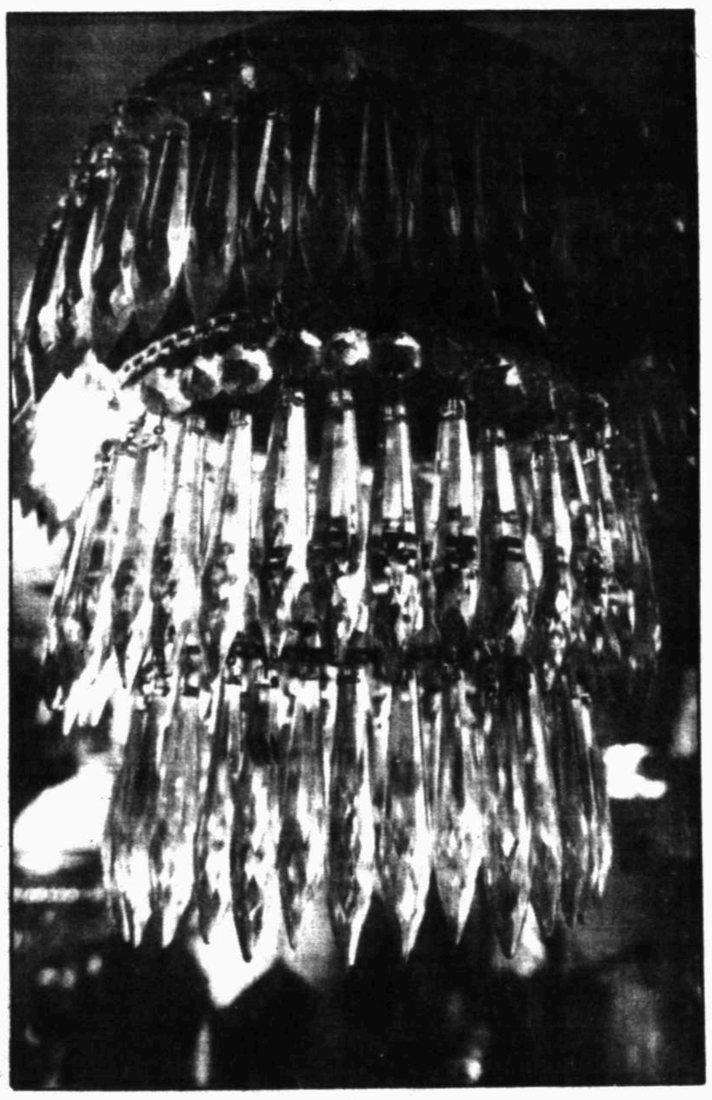
Business has been steady through the years, but the oil bust has touched even this small industry, according to Mrs. Shelton.

"'87 was pretty fair," she said, looking forward to a hopeful 1988. "And I guess '83 was the worst year. In '84, '85, and '86, I was really working for nothing."

Mrs. Shelton — who may have to have cataract surgery soon — says she will retire "one of these days, I guess."

"And I keep thinking I'll have the business redesigned — but at my age, I figure whoever buys me out, let them do it," she added.





A sparkling crystal chandelier, above, hangs above the jumble in the shop. Once a living area, the front room welcomes customers with an array of furnishings and even an easy chair when browsers get weary. The front window of the shop, at left, sports a long table crowded with rows of glowing lamps. Some of the pieces are new, some custom-made, while many are antiques, including vases from foreign countries such as Denmark.

Suspect under attempted murder indictment

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The man suspected of Sunday's stabbing which left a 31-year-old man in critical condition was under indictment for the attempted murder of a 18-year-old man in August 1987, according to state district court records.

Enrique Lara, 3817 Cobb St., was listed in critical condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital with multiple stab wounds, hospital spokeswoman Sue Ristom said.

Lara was attending a birthday party and family reunion at a residence near the intersection of County Road 1165 South, south of CR 146 East, according to Midland County Sheriff's Department reports.

Officers were dispatched to the MMH emergency room about 1 a.m. Sunday to check on a reported stabbing. When they arrived, the victim was too badly hurt to be interviewed. But after witness interviews were conducted, the name of the suspect was discovered and located, reports said.

After the suspect was interviewed and gave investigators a statement, he was booked into Midland County Jail on aggravated assault charges, according to reports.

He is expected to be arraigned later today before a justice of the peace, reports said.

Lara was stabbed at least twice in the chest and side with a pocket knife, according to reports.

In the August incident, 18-year-old Eduardo Salcido, 309 E. Cuthbert Ave., was seriously injured after he was beaten and stabbed by several other youths, according to police reports.

On Aug. 16 last year, police were called to the 700 block of North Dallas Street just after 11 p.m. When they arrived, paramedics were at the scene treating Salcido. Reports said he had been kicked several times, suffered puncture wounds in his back and a puncture wound to the base of his head.

Salcido's brother, Valdemar, said he and his brother were walking their dog when several youths confronted them. A fight then broke out, police reports said.

One of the youths allegedly pulled a knife and stabbed Salcido, then the others began kicking him in the head.

He was paralyzed by the attack, and remains a quadriplegic, according to prosecutors.

After an investigation by police, the suspect was arrested. He was charged with aggravated assault, and released Nov. 4 on a bond, according to court records.

He was indicted March 9 for attempted murder and aggravated assault by the 142nd State District Court grand jury, according to court records.

Flower power leaves Piney Woods upset

ZAVALLA, Texas (AP) — Twenty years after the hippies of Haight-Ashbury were wearing love beads and tripping on LSD, flower power is about to meet the quietly reserved Piney Woods.

An estimated 20,000 members of the Rainbow Family, a loose-knit group of nature lovers, will descend on the Angelina National Forest in July to conduct the group's 17th annual "Gathering of the Tribes."

Billed as a weeklong celebration of peace and love, the gathering already has stirred emotions among Zavalla's 700 residents.

"You take 20,000 people like that and put them near a town of 700 like ours — you're going to have bedlam," said Keith Harris, an insurance man and lifelong resident of the area.

Zavalla, about 200 miles southeast of Dallas, has no police department — only an elderly constable and a part-time deputy from the Angelina County Sheriff's Department.

"We've heard that nothing embarrasses them — going to the bathroom out in the open, having sex in public," said Van Johnson of Van's Grocery and Feed.

But one longtime Rainbow member, Stephen Principle, a political activist from Washington, D.C., denied such rumors. "In the 16 years we have gathered, no community has ever been raped or pillaged or burned," he said.

"Most of the people that come don't want to hang out in a town. They come to get away from that, to get into the woods," Principle said. "Most of us come to practice our belief of communing with nature."

Principle said the campouts, which attract members like attorneys and doctors worldwide, are well-organized, with communal kitchens, water supplies and privies.

The gatherings have featured wandering minstrels, craft workshops, political discussions, rock bands and even a traveling circus with monkeys and a high-wire act.

Principle said some participants go nude and use some drugs, primarily marijuana. Still, he said, when 12,000 Rainbow members met in Nantahala National Forest in North Carolina last year, fewer than a dozen members were arrested for drug possession.

But the U.S. Forest Service said last year's gathering severely damaged a valuable national wilderness area in North Carolina.

Forest service officials in Lufkin said last week they will require the Rainbows to get a permit for their meeting.

Mike Lannan, supervisor for the four national forests in Texas, said the federal agency "is fully prepared to initiate whatever legal action is necessary" to keep the Rainbows out of the forests if they fail to get a permit.

To obtain a permit, the group will have to present a plan showing they will meet all health and safety standards required for such a mass gathering, he said. That would include proper drinking water and provisions for medical problems and disposal of trash and human waste.

But the Rainbow Family is loosely organized with no leaders and believes they have the right to gather in a national forest whenever and wherever they want — with no interference from forest rangers and other law enforcement officials.

"The Constitution is the permit for people to gather on public grounds," Principle said. "It is not the forest service's land, it is the people's land," he said.

Principle agreed to discuss the forest service concerns at a Rainbow Family council meeting later this month in one of the national forests. The council will try to narrow the list of sites for the gathering, using reports from Rainbow scouts who have been in the area for several weeks.

Meanwhile, law enforcement officials from towns in this East Texas area are worried, in part because of a videotape taken by forest service employees of last year's gathering.

"It's unbelievable," said Rick Wilson, police chief in nearby Huntington, who recently saw the film. "They'll be naked, they'll be doping, they'll be doing it all."

'Picket and Picnic' set for Wednesday

From Staff Reports

In honor of National Volunteer Week, United Way and the Volunteer Center have jointly organized a "Picket and Picnic."

The event will take place this Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at Volunteer Park, located at the intersection of Big Spring and Marienfeld. Parking is available on the northwest side of the park.

The event is designed to give recognition to all the volunteers who give their time and energy to support United Way, the Volunteer Center agencies and the community.

Staff and volunteers from the agencies will gather — with picket signs in hand — to positively "picket" their agency.

The public is invited to take part in the activities. Those attending are asked to bring a sack lunch.

Police search for men who robbed store

From Staff Reports

Midland police are searching for two men who robbed a local convenience store at gunpoint early this morning.

The two men fled with only $40 cash from the holdup, which occurred just before 2 a.m. at the 7-Eleven store, 900 S. Big Spring, according to police reports.

The store clerk said a man walked into the store, showed him a small-caliber handgun, and ordered him to a back storage room, reports said.

Another man then walked into the store, and was seen walking toward the cash register, the clerk told police.

The first suspect was described as a white man in his early 20s, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing between 120 and 130 pounds. He had shoulder-length blonde hair and was unshaven, and wore a white shirt, blue jeans and a blue jean jacket, according to reports.

The second suspect was described only as a white man with long blonde hair.

Court says Texas blood bank must reveal donors' names

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let a Dallas blood bank withhold the names and medical records of its donors from a woman who says her husband contracted AIDS after receiving tranfusions.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that donors' privacy rights do not override Patty Jo Baker's need to learn their identities for her wrongful-death lawsuit.

Although today's action sets no national precedent, the justices twice in two months have rejected arguments that "the national interests in a viable volunteer blood system" are jeopardized by releasing donors' names in such circumstances.

George W. Baker underwent surgery at Lewisville Memorial Hospital in Dallas in 1984, and received several transfusions during and after the operation. He died in 1986 of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

His widow, charging that at least one of the transfused blood units was contaminated with the AIDS virus, sued the hosital, the operating surgeon and two blood banks that supply the hospital.

As part of the pretrial "discovery" proceedings, Mrs. Baker's lawyers sought the identities and medical records of all blood donors whose blood had been used in Baker's health care.

The defendants objected, arguing that complying with the requests would violate donors' privacy rights and that such information was protected under the physician-patient privilege.

A trial judge ruled that the requested information must be released, and a state appeals court agreed.

The appeal acted on today was filed by one of the sued blood banks, known as the Blood Center at Wadley. It is based in Dallas.

Lawyers for the blood bank said courts in Florida and Iowa have barred the release of blood donors' names in similar cases.

"The blood banks are a nationwide operation," the appeal said. "A blood donor's freedom from intrusive questioning and disclosure of the most intimate details of his life should not depend upon which state the donor chooses as his place of residence or where his blood is sent."

University of Texas black graduates look toward future

AUSTIN (AP) — About 200 black graduates of the University of Texas returned to the campus last weekend for a reunion that looked more toward the future than the past.

Onay, the second annual reunion organized by the Black Alumni Advisory Committee of the Ex-Students' Association, focused on ways to expand opportunities for black students at the university and after graduation.

Closer ties between UT and the alumni as well as the rest of the black community in Texas are needed in order to improve recruitment and retention of black students and faculty, said John Chase, a Houston architect who is chairman of the advisory committee.

"We need to just keep doing what we're doing now, constantly getting the word out and the university being more a part of the community," said Chase, who enrolled at UT soon after the 1950 Supreme Court decision that opened the university to blacks.

"I think the more we do those things, the more the barriers are going to break down."

The reunion included an update on minority recruitment and retention by President William Cunningham, visits with students from the alumni's hometowns and tours of the campus.

The alumni also discussed the new admissions policies going into effect in the fall, the minority outreach centers that UT and Texas A&M University have set up around the state, ways to increase the amount of business UT does with minority-owned companies, and a new alumni program that aims at providing mentors in business and the professions for current students.

The mentor program will be organized this summer with the goal of providing a network through which black students can receive career guidance from alumni and others, said Tyrone Freeman, a 1981 marketing graduate and an assistant vice president at Bright Banc in Austin.

The program also will help students find role models and establish a "social support network," Freeman said.

Alumni in law, business, accounting, nursing, engineering, education and many other fields filled out information sheets that will be used to match them with students.

DEATHS

She died at a Midland hospital early Sunday morning.

TRINITY SCHOOL: Growing Up

What if you could send your son or daughter to a fine, independent college preparatory high school without putting him or her on an airplane to get there? You can, you know, now that Trinity is adding a high school. With its historically careful approach, Trinity is adding the high school grades a year at a time. The first tenth grade class will be on campus in September of 1988, the eleventh grade in 1989, and the twelfth grade in 1990. Because of the high marks given Trinity by the Independent Schools Association of the Southwest evaluation team this year, Trinity's new high school will be automatically accredited for several years by this prestigious group which is also the accrediting agency for such well-known independent schools as St. Mark's, Greenhill, and Hockaday in Dallas; Kinkaid and St. John's in Houston; Albuquerque Academy in New Mexico; and Holland Hall and Casady in Oklahoma. This kind of accreditation presents a challenge to maintain, and Trinity thrives on challenge.

Trinity's high school faculty will be composed of some of the excellent, qualified teachers already a part of the staff with the addition of other talented instructors available in this community that is known for its high level of education. Because the curriculum is to be geared toward preparation for college, Trinity will make not just college entrance but college performance its goal as it educates for leadership. When the entire student body is working toward the same goal, specialists can make the goal tenable for them.

Wouldn't it be exciting to be a part of this new venture? It is an opportunity that does not often come to students of this age: to come into a family and be the head of the family right away with responsibilities for establishing traditions and setting patterns for those who follow - in short, learning to lead.

Consider letting your child spend his or her high school career in an environment where there are choices, but they are all healthy choices. Consider letting your child be a part of a school that is experiencing planned and healthy growth. He or she can do the same with the careful instruction, professional direction, and intellectual stimulation available on this campus.

Come see how fine a school can be.

For more information about Trinity - its curriculum, its philosophy, its admission procedure, its financial aid program - call 697-3281, come by, or write Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley, Midland, Texas 79707.

Bachelor auction benefits Big Brothers/Big Sisters program

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Neither West Texas wind nor potential thunderstorms nor tornadoes in neighboring counties could keep Midland women from flocking to the second annual Big Brothers/Big Sisters benefit Bachelor Auction Saturday night at the Midland Hilton.

About 400 enthusiastic bidders attended the event, according to Linda Macias, executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland.

"We have 33 of the most eligible bachelors in the Permian Basin," said Master of Ceremonies Skip Baldwin, of KMID-TV, before the bidding started. "We're going to auction them off to the highest bidder." Successful bidders won specific date packages with the bachelors of their choice — some to such exotic places as Chicago, Horseshoe Bay, Dallas and Ruidoso, N.M.

"We're going to have fun!" Baldwin continued. "All the proceeds will go to the kids (of Big Brothers/Big Sisters) and that's what it's all about." Baldwin's co-master of ceremonies was Janet Storie of KPTX-TV. Dennis Black was auctioneer.

The bidding was lively — and became even more so as the evening wore on. Bids of $600 were not unusual — Baldwin himself was "bought" for $1,650.

Bachelor Joe Sitzman, who is going to Dallas with his date, said he was asked to be one of the auctioned bachelors last year, but was unable to participate at that time. "They called back this year. I thought it was a good cause — but the truth was that I wanted to see 400 single women" in one room, he said.

Ruth Nelson, Sitzman's date, said she "came to spend some money. But after I saw his red bow tie, I just lost it" and knew he was the one she wanted to bid on. Ms. Nelson not only supports Big Brothers/Big Sisters through the auction, but she herself has been a Big Sister "two years in November," she said.

This year's auction turned out to be more successful that last year's, said Ms. Macias, executive director. "Last year we grossed $19,200, and ended up netting $16,000. We're hoping for $20,000 (gross) this year." This morning, Ms. Macias reported that the auction had, in fact, grossed $21,500.

Funds raised will help provide Big Brothers and Big Sisters for Midland children. "We have 120 children on the waiting list," Ms. Macias said. "Some have waited one, two and three years." Money raised by the auction will be used to recruit volunteers to become Big Brothers and Big Sisters for these children. "We have a strict screening process to insure quality volunteers.

"It's estimated there are about 4,000 to 5,000 single parent children in Midland," she said. "As the program gets more widely known, we get more referrals. And we lose volunteers because of the economy." Currently there are 132 active Big Brothers and Big Sisters in Midland.

The 1988 auction has proven itself more successful than last year's in another way, too. For the first auction last year, the agency had some difficulty finding bachelors who were willing to participate. This year, Ms. Macias said, so many men volunteered that many had to be turned down. "We kept a list of some bachelors that we might want to use next year," she said. "We were turning away bachelors up to last week."

Members of the auction committee were Len Musgrove, chairman; Pam Brickey, assistant chairman; Ms. Macias, Marc Skeen, Jeff Wikstrom, Diane Newland, Tony Farish, Harper Estes, Vicki Moore and Cindi Reece.

DEAR ABBY

Girl feels collared by guy who treats her like a dog

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from the 19-year-old girl who signed herself "Second Thoughts in Moline, Ill." Abby, I could have written that letter myself. I'm also 19, have gone with a guy for nearly three years and we plan to be married soon, but I, too, have second thoughts for the same reasons. He's jealous, doesn't trust me, accuses me of going out with other guys, and we fight a lot about stupid things. I like people and enjoy having friends, but he always wants to be with me alone. Lately he has cursed me, accused me of going out on him and has hit me. Then he cries, begs me to give him another chance and swears he'll never do it again, but he does.

My friends tell me I'll be sorry if I marry him, but, Abby, I truly love him. Can you tell me why women go right on loving guys who treat them like dogs? — SECOND THOUGHTS IN TEXAS

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: First, what's to "love" about a guy who treats you like a dog? And what's to love about a guy who doesn't trust you? Many human emotions are involved in what we call "love." First, there's a strong sexual attraction, there's pity ("I hate to hurt him"), and security ("finding another guy may not be easy").

Also, there's the addiction factor. Being with someone exclusively can become a habit. My advice to you is to have second, third and fourth thoughts. Then say goodbye. It's a major mistake to marry a man who is physically abusive. He will only get worse.

DEAR ABBY: I have what is known as a "strawberry birthmark" on my face, but mine is purple. It's very noticeable, and people who have just met me ask me if it's some kind of rash or if it is permanent. I am 16 years old and I'm told I am a pretty girl, and this mark bothers me.

Someone told me that you recommended something several years ago to cover blemishes and birthmarks like mine. I would appreciate it very much if you could tell me the name of it, and where to buy it. Thank you. — MARCIE

DEAR MARCIE: It's Lydia O'Leary Cosmetics' "Covermark" — a cream that's waterproof, easy to apply and completely covers the most conspicuous birthmark or discoloration. It's available through your pharmacist or the cosmetic department in many department stores.

If you can't find it, the toll-free number is: (800) 524-1120. The address is: Lydia O'Leary Cosmetics, "Covermark," 201 Route 17 North, Rutherford, N.J. 07070.

DEAR ABBY: I would like you to settle a major family dispute once and for all. I am a 20-year-old college student who comes from a working-class family and grew up in a blue-collar community. The dispute is this:

Is there a distinct difference between a "profession" and a "trade" (job)? My family says a person with a trade is a professional in that area, so there can be no distinction between the two.

I disagree. I say lawyers, doctors, teachers, etc. are "professionals" and roofers, auto mechanics, construction workers, etc. are "trade people." Is there a difference? — PROFESSION OR TRADE, RIVER ROUGE, MICH.

DEAR P. OR T.: I agree with you, and so does Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, which defines a profession as "a calling requiring specialized knowledge and often long and intensive academic preparation."

A trade, on the other hand, is defined as "an occupation requiring manual or mechanical skill."

DEAR READERS: Here's a powerful message that I think deserves a national audience:

"Every father is diminished when his daughter is denied a fair chance. Every son is a victim when his mother is denied fair pay. But when we lower barriers, open doors, and free women to reach wherever their dreams will take them — our talents are multiplied, and our country is stronger."

Who wrote those words? Betty Friedan? Gloria Steinem? Lily Tomlin?

None of the above. Give up? Try Geraldine Ferraro.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Tinkertoys has 75th birthday

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Introduced at the 1913 American Toy Fair in New York, Playskool Tinkertoys is celebrating its 75th birthday this year, with more than 100 million sets sold since then.

The construction toy is the invention of Charles Pajeau, a stonemason from Evanston, Ill., who was inspired by watching children play with pencils, sticks and empty spools of thread. He developed several basic wooden parts which youngsters could assemble in a variety of three-dimensional abstract ways.

Authors' lives read like fiction

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

A young woman from Synder meets a man, falls in love and marries him in Odessa in 1956. They move to San Antonio and have four children. The woman is content and fulfilled in her role of housewife and mother. One day her daughter finds a manuscript her mother has written that reads like a romance novel. Her daughter types it up and sends it in to a publisher. Six weeks later the woman gets a call from New York: her novel is accepted. Five years and 16 novels later, she has become a bestselling historical romance novelist known under the pseudonym of Constance O'Banyon.

Another young woman begins writing while in the ninth grade at a Beaumont high school. After graduation, her family moves to San Antonio, where the woman attends college and graduate school before becoming a teacher. She marries, has twin sons, teaches school and writes novels on the side.

She sends a book to a publisher, and then tragedy strikes. Her husband has a heart attack and falls into a coma. While he is in the hospital, the woman's mother ends up in intensive care unit of the same hospital. The woman is sitting by her husband's bedside when she receives a phone call from Dell publishers in New York. Her novel is accepted and three days later she has a contract with the publishers. It is the beginning of a writing career for Emma Merritt which will result in 16 novels, some on bestsellers' lists.

TEXAS AUTHORS, Ms. O'Banyon and Ms. Merritt, have both had lives which read like fiction — a virtual dream come true for any aspiring writer. Neither author published before the age of 40, and neither had an agent when first published. Although it sounds like a combination of luck and fate which landed them in their enviable positions, it is pluck and dedication which keeps the authors' names synonymous with profits for their publishers.

At a Romance Novel Workshop at Odessa College's Annex, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, the authors spoke at length about the hours of research and writing needed to survive in the romance market. Forty-five aspiring writers from the Permian Basin area attended the workshop, according to Dorothy Williams of Odessa College's Continuing Education Department, which hosted the workshop.

Although Ms.O'Banyon, who said she "looks at the world through rose-colored glasses," attributes her success to her ability to "dare to dream," she also admits to spending hours writing and researching under pressure. Ms. O'Banyon reinforces the image of the unkempt appearance of the writer on deadline, brought to screen by Kathleen Turner as romance writer Jane Wilder in the movie "Romancing the Stone."

Ms. O'Banyon, neatly coiffed and impeccably dressed in a gray and black herringbone jacket and skirt, said, "Sometimes I barely have time to run a comb through my hair. I stay up nights long after every reasonable person is in bed and I pass the mirror and don't recognize that person in the 'perspiration suit' — not sweat suit," she said. "Everyone knows heroines don't sweat, they perspire."

MS. O'BANYON SAID the glamour of success is dispelled when your agent calls and says, "I just saw your cover and it's gorgeous," and the cover is for a book you haven't yet written. "Talk about pressure," she said.

The pressure is on for writers, Ms. O'Banyon said, because "What used to be a writers' market in 1980, has become a publishers' market today. With so many lines, like Candlelight Ecstasy, closing down, there are more writers than needed."

One of the ways to stay on top in the historical field, according to Ms. O'Banyon, is to pay scrupulous attention to detail. "Know your facts," she said," because if you don't — believe me — your readers will." She described an instance of inaccuracy where another author had mentioned the "magnificent mountains of Fort Worth."

"The pen is mightier than the sword only if the pen is as accurate as the sword is sharp," Ms. O'Banyon said.

Ms. Merritt agreed with the need for authors to be accurate. "If you are writing about American Indians in the 1500s, you can't have them riding in on horses which haven't been introduced to the Indians, yet," she said.

Ms. Merritt, a former school teacher, employed diagrams and handouts in her presentation on plotting, and also on preparing proposals for editors. She discussed methods which "worked" for her, and said, "Don't let any tool that anyone gives you be a stumbling block to your creativity."

Ms. Merritt explained the differences in writing category or mainstream romance fiction. Like most romance writers, who admit to "writing for love and money," Ms. Merritt said, "I am a commercial fiction writer. I am content writing for the mass market and make no apologies for it. But, just the same, romance writers must grow and not be satisfied with the status quo."

BOTH WOMEN peppered their speech with a Texas flavor and explained the most complex literary techniques in the simplest forms. In discussing the use of narrative detail, Ms. Merritt said, "Don't describe every flower along the roadside or every locked bathroom in the course of life." Speaking of employing personal philosophy into fiction, Ms. O'Banyon said she instills her own views of being a "flag waving, dyed-in-the-wool American" in her heroines' personas.

Both women said that historical romance novels with a Texas flavor are "selling like hotcakes." The authors, who met several years ago at an autograph party in Houston, recently collaborated on the novel "Texas Dreams," a saga of power and politics, under the nom de plume Micah Leigh.

Several of Ms. Merritts novels have been located in Texas and "Wish Upon a Star," scheduled to be released Christmas 1989, is a contemporary romance set in San Antonio.

Another trend in romance fiction is that the sexual content of the torrid prose has been affected due to a changing morality because of AIDS, according to Ms. Merritt. "We are writing popular fiction affected by the times. During the Victorian era, 'legs' became 'limbs' and 'chicken breasts' became 'white meat.' Likewise, sex has become less graphic in contemporary (written in the time period of 1918-present) romance novels, while graphic sex still exists in the historical (pre-AIDS) novels."

SPEAKING OF SEX scenes, Ms. Merritt said most were pure fantasy. "Could you live one day in the shoes of your heroine?" she asked the audience. "No," she answered, " but it gives women a chance to live out the fantasy by reading about it."

The authors said that teaching workshops were secondary to writing. Ms. O'Banyon said she would only attend three workshops this year. Although the authors used to attend quite a few autograph parties, they currently attend very few. "I don't know whether we are attending less autograph parties because we are moving up in the world or if the world is changing," Ms. Merrit said.

Both writers said they are happy in their niches, though Ms. O'Banyon said she would like to write a mainstream novel to be published in hardback. Ms. O'Banyon, who prefers not to reveal her real name because she "treasures" her private home life, said "Writers are a breed apart ... my wish for you (the audience) is that you could all get published."

"Writing books is one of the best things that happened to me," Ms. Merritt said. "And it happened to me at a good time."

Although their heroines are often the images of "flaming youth," both women reminded the participants at the workshop that it is "never too late to begin writing."

"Not only did we not get published until after after age 40," Ms. Merritt said, "But Constance and I were speaking on the airplane on the way to the workshop, and I said, 'do you realize that AARP (American Association for Retired Persons) is sending us mail?"

Cost of the workshop was $35 and each participant received a paperback novel from Ms. Merritt and Ms. O'Banyon.

Books by Ms. O'Banyon include "Ecstasy's Promise," "Rebel Temptress," "Enchanted Ectasy," "Golden Paradise," "Velvet Chains," "Moontide Embrace," "September Moon," "Golden Paradise," "Savage Desire," "Savage Splendor," "Savage Autumn," "Savage Summer," "Savage Winter," and "Savage Spring." Scheduled for release in 1988 are "Lavender Lies," and "Dakota Dreams."

Books by Ms. Merritt, also writing as "Emma Bennett (her grandmother's name)" include "That Certain Summer," "By Passion Bound," "River Enchantment," "Beneath the Willow Tree," "Loving Brand," "With Each Passing Hour," "With All My Heart," "Passionate Ultimatum," "Loving Persuasion," "Autumn's Fury," "Emerald Ectasy," "Satin Secret" and "Restless Flames." Future releases are "Lone Star Lovesong," "Golden Secret" and "Wish Upon a Star."

Majority of phobics can be helped, cured

FEARS and PHOBIAS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a nine part series.

By DENISE FORTINO
Associated Press

Insidious, baffling and often bizarre, they are the most common mental health disorders in the United States — yet also among the most frequently overlooked and rarely treated. Up to 24 million Americans — about one in every 10 people — are afflicted by phobias of varying severity at some point during their lives. They can sometimes be so disabling that their victims are virtually imprisoned, unable to carry on normal, everyday activities.

A phobia is not just a very intense fear, but rather an entirely different experience, observes Dr. Manuel Zane, M.D., director of the phobia clinic at The White Plains (N.Y.) Hospital Medical Center and co-author of "Your Phobia" (Warner). While fear is a normal, appropriate response to some real or imagined danger, a phobia is a persistent, overwhelming and uncontrollable dread of an object or situation in the absence of any threat.

Phobic people are gripped by feelings of "total emotional disorganization, a sensation that they are going out of control, that they are at the edge of final, irrevocable disaster," Dr. Zane explains.

Sometimes phobias develop after a series of sudden "panic attacks." They become bouts of intense anxiety that strike with a barrage of frightful physical sensations — rapid, shallow breathing, palpitations, trembling, sweating, dizziness, nausea and weakness or tingling in the limbs. Panic attacks may be provoked by a specific phobia or they may occur spontaneously, for no apparent reason.

IN EITHER case, the symptoms are so unnerving that budding phobics soon learn to fear their recurrence. Ruled by anticipation anxiety, they imagine themselves going berserk, fainting, screaming hysterically or even dying when confronted with whatever terrorizes them.

"For many people, it's really not the place or circumstance that sets off future panic attacks, but rather the fear of fear itself," notes Dr. David Paskewitz, a psychologist at the University of Maryland Medical School in Baltimore. If their original outburst occurred in a shopping mall or while crossing a bridge, for example, panic-stricken people are likely to shun these and similar settings the next time to avoid experiencing the same physical reactions and tormenting thoughts. Ultimately, the areas or things that they consider off limits may be spread by association until their range of activities becomes very restricted.

According to The American Psychiatric Association, phobias fall into three main categories: simple, social and agoraphobia. As its name suggests, the first kind is usually aimed at something fairly concrete, such as cats, insects, thunderstorms, elevators or flying.

SOCIAL PHOBIAS involve a dread of being watched and evaluated by other people and inviting their ridicule or disapproval. Thus, "public" activities, including reading aloud, making a speech, attending parties, eating out or performing even trivial tasks in front of strangers, will create extreme anxiety.

Agoraphobia, the most pervasive and crippling of all, is a feeling of panic and entrapment in places away from home or any area perceived as "safe." While it is usually referred to as a dread of open spaces, it can erupt almost anywhere, whether crowded or deserted, high up or close to the ground, in a bus, store or street.

Phobias often begin in early childhood, but their onset can occur at any age — and overall, both men and women are equally vulnerable, reports Dr. Douglas Hunt, M.D., author of No More Fears (Warner). In some cases, a phobia may surface within a year after a major emotional stress, life change or trauma, such as the death of a loved one, divorce, serious illness or career change.

Interestingly, many phobics are reported to have higher than average intelligence, along with sensitivity, creativity and imagination. They frequently pride themselves on being very poised, controlled and having it all "together," and tend to be overconscientious about pleasing other people.

The good news is that between 75 and 90 percent of people with phobias and panic disorders can be significantly helped, if not cured outright. A combination of techniques is most often used, including short-term group and individual psychotherapy, behavior modification, relaxation exercises and special drug therapy to treat the disquieting symptoms.

This 10-part series will cover some of the most prevalent and persistent fears and phobias, including those of public speaking, flying, health (hypochondria), heights, dental visits, taking school tests, along with claustrophobia, agoraphobia and a special report on childhood phobias, including fear of darkness.

Norman rally captures Heritage golf

From Wire Reports

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Greg Norman, accompanied by a gravely ill teen-ager whose wish was to watch him play, came from four shots back Sunday to score his first American victory in two years, a one-shot triumph in the Heritage Classic.

Jamie Hutton, a 17-year-old leukemia patient whose wish it was to see Norman play, walked every step and watched every stroke as Norman emerged from a four-man scramble with a bogey-free final round of 5-under-par 66—274.

Lopez putt pays

LOS ANGELES — Nancy Lopez rolled in a 3-foot par putt to defeat Marta Figueras-Dotti on their second playoff hole Sunday and win the $400,000 Ai Star-Centinela Hospital tournament.

The victory was the second of the year for Lopez, the wife of Detroit Tigers infielder Ray Knight and mother of two. Lopez earned $60,000 for her Los Angeles victory, making her only the fourth player in LPGA history to top $2 million in career earnings.

No. 5 for Martina

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — Martina Navratilova used a strong serve-and-volley game to defeat Gabriela Sabatini 6-0, 6-2 to win the $300,000 Bausch & Lomb Championships. For the seconnd-seeded Navratilova, it was her fifth straight tournament title this year and the second time in as many weeks she has defeated Sabatini in a final.

Labonte cashes in NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Terry Labonte took advantage of Dale Earnhardt's misfortune to take the lead with 11 to go and win the $351,845 400 NASCAR Winston Cup race Sunday. Earnhardt was comfortably leading the race on the five-eighths-mile oval until a right rear tire went flat with less than 20 laps remaining. Labonte passed the two-time defending Winston Cup points champion with 11 laps remaining and went on to win by 1.49 seconds over Ricky Rudd in a Buick.

Earnhardt, despite the third-place finish, increased his lead in the points standings as he seeks his third consecutive title. The Mooresville, N.C., resident has 1,059 points through seven races and leads Wallace by 53 points.

Another toughie for Bulldogs Tuesday

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

They did it in dramatic fashion, those clever Midland High Bulldogs.

They also almost gave it away.

The 'Dogs defeated San Angelo 7-6 Saturday when Eric Boyt hit a double to the wall driving in Tony Perez in the bottom of the seventh.

It was too close for comfort as MHS pitched itself into a seventh inning jam after being up 6-4 with two outs in the frame. Boyt walked in the sixth run, but thanks to his double, he was given credit for the victory, his third against one loss.

Tuesday afternoon comes yet another tough test, when the Bulldogs travel to Abilene for a 4 p.m. game with the always hard-to-predict AHS Eagles. According to Bulldog head coach Tim Whalen, all the advantages go to the Eagles.

"If I had to give someone an edge, it'd have to be them," Whalen said. "They'll be well rested (Saturday, AHS was idle), we're playing down there. They just have to go through their routine and walk onto the field ready to play and we'll have to travel three light years just to get there. But if our kids can rise to the occasion, they're going to win."

Boyt gets the nod as the starter as he tries to improve his record to 4-1.

With three games remaining, MHS, at 7-2, holds a one-half game lead over Abilene Cooper, 6-2. Also still in the hunt for a playoff spot are the Eagles, in third place with a 5-3 mark. Lee and Odessa High are tied for fourth, both at 4-5, while San Angelo (3-5) and Odessa Permian (1-8) round out the district.

WITH SATURDAY'S 10-1 loss to Abilene Cooper, the season is all but over for Midland Lee. Lee would have to win its three remaining games and hope that two of the top three teams also lose their last three.

"We're just ... we're not very good and the kids are discouraged," Lee head coach Ernie Johnson said. "The Odessa game (which the Rebs lost 6-5) really took something out of us."

The team gets a much needed rest Tuesday, but resumes play Saturday when it hosts Permian.

The losing streak now numbers three for Lee, and in that time they have hit .230. More importantly, the key hits haven't fallen in for the Rebs.

"We're not playing well enough to win," Johnson said. "I've never had a team hit this poor. We're not getting enough hits or driving in enough runs."

Before the skid, Lee was tied with Midland High for first place as the second half of the season got under way.

"We've just got to finish the season," Johnson said. "Try as hard as we can."

Angels play home opener tonight

From Staff Reports

Michelle Royer, Miss USA 1987, will throw out the first pitch when the Midland Angels open their home Texas League season at 7 p.m. today against the San Antonio Mission.

The Angels have been on the road for 10 days and bring home a 3-7 record after Sunday's third straight loss at El Paso, 12-6, Sunday afternoon.

The sight of familiar surroundings should help the club get going in the right direction, except that for most of the Angels there's nothing familiar about Angels Stadium. Last year, most members of this year's team played at Palm Springs and Quad Cities, in A and those 1987 members of the Angels returning may not recognize the ball park.

During the off season the outfield fence was double-decked as the 34-year-old park received a facelift.

The Angels will be home through Friday and then go back on the road.

A three-run fifth and four-run sixth wiped out a 4-2 Midland lead and propelled the Diablos on the way to victory and a 4-1 edge in the series.

For the second game in a row, the dugouts erupted into fist-swinging melees after a high-inside pitch, this time in the seventh following a home run.

For Midland, Jeff Manto hit his fifth homer of the season and Lee Stevens belted his first. Stevens had 19 homers last season at Palm Springs. Manto needs just two homers to equal his 1987 total at Palm Springs.

Wichita broke out of a batting slump with 14 hits and Mike Costello shut out San Antonio on three hits as the Pilots beat the Missions 5-0 in a Texas League baseball action.

In other games Sunday, Shreveport shut out Jackson 9-0.

For Wichita, Chris Knabenshue had three hits and drove in two runs. The Pilots raised their team batting average from .214 to .232.

Costello ran his record to 2-1 while Missions starter David Eichhorn fell to 1-1.

Shreveport pitcher Trevor Wilson surrendered only two hits in seven innings of his first Class AA start.

HALO HOOPS— The San Diego Chicken will make his first of two appearances at Angel Stadium April 29....Ms Royer, a 22-year-old resident of Fort Worth who was crowned Miss USA in Feb. 1987 in Albuquerque, will be on hand to sign autographs throughout the game....Among the improvements at Angel Stadium will be the sound. The system underwent a $300,000 renovation that should produce an evenly distributed sound.....

HOUSTON (AP) — Jackie Ball's ninth-inning homer over the centerfield fence gave the Baylor Bears a 4-3 win over Houston Sunday in completion of a Southwest conference game delayed by rain a day before.

The game-winning hit came on a Woody Williams pitch.

The Bears improve to 4-8 in SWC play and 19-25 for the season. Houston falls to 4-8 and 30-15-2.

Alysheba does it again

Ferdinand beaten by a nose

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Midland-owned Alysheba did it again, Sunday, edging Ferdinand by a nose in the $530,000 San Bernardino Handicap at Santa Anita, third meeting of the two Kentucky Derby champions.

Argentine-bred Good Taste finished a surprisingly close third, another head back.

Alysheba, owned by Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer of Midland, Texas, has now beaten Ferdinand twice, after also winning the $1 million Santa Anita Derby last month. Ferdinand won in the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic last November at Hollywood Park.

With Chris McCarron riding Alysheba and Bill Shoemaker on Ferdinand, the two battled head-to-head down the stretch in the 1⅛-mile race.

Good Taste, with Gary Stevens aboard and holding a 14-pound weight advantage, came on strong to challenge in the final sixteenth.

Good Taste set the early pace with Alysheba and Ferdinand close behind. The two passed the Argentine on the far turn with first Alysheba and then Ferdinand taking to the lead.

At the three-quarter mile mark it was Alysheba, then Ferdinand edged into the lead only to lose it again.

Although the difference was officially a nose, the photo verified that only a couple of inches separated the two thoroughbreds, as the 1987 Kentucky Derby champion edged the 1986 winner.

The winner, timed in 1:47 1-5, returned $3.60, $2.20 and $2.10. Ferdinand paid $2.20 and $2.20 and Good Taste paid $2.20. The crowd of 47,839 had estalished Alysheba as the slight favorite at 4-5 with Ferdinand at even money.

Alysheba earned $350,000 to boost his career earnings to $4,045,642. Ferdinand earned $80,000.

Nostsalgia's Star and Foreign Legion, the others in the race never were in contention as they finished fourth and fifth.

For the first time in their three meetings, the Kentucky Derby champions carried the same weight — 127 pounds. Good Taste had 113.

In the Breeders' Cup Classic last Nov. 21, Ferdinand was assigned 126 to 122, and in the $1 million Santa Anita Handicap March 6, he carried 127, one more than his younger rival.

During the tremendous stretch drive of the Classic, Ferdinand outdueled Alysheba to win by a nose and was later named Horse of the Year.

In the second meeting, the strategy for Alysheba changed. He was off to a fast start, and Ferdinand failed by a half length.

This time they stayed close to each other and close behind the pacesetter.

The San Bernardino, a Grade II event, originally was scheduled as a $250,000-added event. But the purse was boosted to $530,000 with the two Kentucky Derby champs entered.

Angels finally home with an almost all new look

Battles

The Midland Angels face defending champion the San Antonio Missions, the Dodger farm club, tonight at Angel Stadium in the season's first game here.

The gnawing question is "What took them so long?"

Here's April heading down the homestretch, the first half pennant race approaching its crucial stage and the Angels still haven't played a home game.

The team already has been on the road for 10 games. And Saturday the Angels go back on the road for five more games. How fair is that for a schedule. The California farmhands may never catch up.

General Manager Bill Davidson says don't panic, pointing out "we all play the same number of home games," reasoning which admittedly seems to offer a certain amount of logic.

DAVIDSON, as a matter fact, likes the schedule. "We're on the road the early part of the season and miss all the bad weather." We'll see, Bill.

"Not only that, but we get the July 4th weekend home and that's something we haven't had for several years, now."

And a club that is reaching for 150,000 in attendance will welcome any advantage offered. If the Angels make it, that will be an increase of some 13,000 fans over last year's fourth annual record gate.

Manager Max Oliveras returns for a second year as Midland manager, but brings back few of the cast who made last season so exciting.

This team won't have the muscle of the last year's club (Doug Jennings, Joe Redfield and Stan Holmes and their 90 homers and 318 rbi), but what Midland club ever had this kind of offensive clout. That's not belittling the past in any way. Midland clubs usually are one-two in Texas League homers. But last year was truly exceptional.

WHAT THE team is expected to have is stronger starting pitching, encouraging, but who can forget that bullpen of a year ago?

While the arrival of the Angels has been awaited for what seems like eons, the Haloed Ones must share the limelight tonight with the ball park, which underwent an extensive face lift during the off season.

During the winter, Midland pitchers got a big morale boost when the outfield fence was double-decked. And after the recent series in El Paso, the high fences will be a welcome sight to Angel hurlers.

Still, the suspicion lingers that the prevailing wind will carry balls over the left field barriers with traditional regularity. Right field always broke a lot of hearts.

EVEN BEFORE the double-deck wall, lefthanded batters saw their best shots encounter that invisible crosswind barrier and fall harmlessly into some outfielder's glove.

But that's probably the last thing the fans will notice. Splinters are a thing of the past now that the aluminum grandstand seats replaced the well-weathered wood. Also there will be more parking, twice as much, I understand, and when attractions such as the Chicken, later this month, are booked, fans won't have to park out on the highway and walk.

Also there will be an extra concession stand and a picnic area for fan-groups.

And, lo, the exasperation that comes with overcrowded press boxes has perished forever. During the off season the press box was doubled in size. I hope I won't have trouble finding someone to talk to up there.

Ordeal is over, Braves win one

From Wire Reports

The Atlanta Braves ended their record 10-game losing streak Sunday and are ready to take on the world.

Zane Smith pitched a four-hitter and Damaso Garcia hit his first National League home run as the Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 on Sunday.

NL

The Braves lost 7-4 to Los Angeles on Saturday to set an NL record with 10 straight losses at the start of a season. The major league record is 13 by Washington in 1904 and Detroit in 1920.

The Braves' victory leaves the Baltimore Orioles, 0-12, as baseball's only winless team.

"Hopefully, this is the start of something good for us," Atlanta manager Chuck Tanner said.

Smith, 1-2, gave up a run in the third inning, when Rick Dempsey walked with one out and scored from second on a two-out single by Steve Sax, who came to the plate mired in a 1-for-26 slump.

Garcia, who missed the entire 1987 season with torn ligaments in his left knee, hit two-run homer off Don Sutton, 0-2, with one out in the sixth to put the Braves ahead.

Astros 5, Reds 3

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan struck out nine and broke a tie with a two-run single as Houston beat Cincinnati.

Ryan, who has not pitched a complete game since April 25, 1986 versus Cincinnati, pitched eight innings allowing seven hits. Dave Smith got the final three outs for his second save.

With the score tied 2-2 in the second, Mark Bailey singled and Chuck Jackson doubled. Ryan then poked a single off shortstop Barry Larkin's glove into center to score both runners. Ryan later scored the third run of the inning on Danny Jackson's second balk of the inning.

Mets 3, Cardinals 2

NEW YORK — Kevin Elster's two-out single in the ninth inning scored Mookie Wilson from third as New York won its sixth consecutive victory.

The Mets tied the score in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds and then went on to complete their first three-game sweep of St. Louis at Shea Stadium since July 1984. The Cardinals fell to 0-5 on the road.

Expos 5, Phillies 2

MONTREAL — Andres Galarraga drove in three runs with a homer and a single as Montreal sent the Phillies to their seventh straight defeat.

Pascual Perez, 2-1, pitched seven innings and Andy McGaffigan worked the final two for his first save.

Pirates 12, Cubs 7

CHICAGO — Andy Van Slyke hit two homers and R.J. Reynolds had four hits to lead an 18-hit attack.

Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla drove in three runs each as did Reynolds who had a pair of doubles and two singles.

The victory was the sixth in the last seven games for the Pirates who held onto their share of first place in the National League East.

Giants 9, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO — Rookie catcher Mark Parent's throwing error allowed Candy Maldonado to score the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning.

Suffering continues as Orioles lose 12th

From Wire Reports

The Baltimore Orioles lost their 12th straight game to open the season, one short of the major league record, as Mel Hall and Brook Jacoby had three hits apiece to pace the Cleveland Indians to a 4-1 victory Sunday.

The Indians, who won for the 11th time in 13 games, are off to their best start since 1966, and they have won five in a row.

John Farrell gave up four hits in 8 1-3 innings and Dan Schatzeder came on for his second save.

"The most difficult thing about this is, the last four nights especially, we've been in every ballgame, and we just can't get the hit we need to win," Orioles designated hitter Larry Sheets said.

The Orioles, off to the worst start in their history, are within one of tying the record of 13 straight season-opening losses by the 1904 Washington Senators and the 1920 Detroit Tigers.

Baltimore also is two games shy of the longest losing streak in the franchise's history. The Orioles lost 14 in a row in 1954 and twice before that when they were the St. Louis Browns.

Hall, who went 3-for-4 with two doubles and an RBI, has 14 hits in his last 30 at-bats.

Red Sox 15, Rangers 2

BOSTON — Mike Greenwell drove in a career-high six runs with a homer, two singles and a grounder as the Boston Red Sox broke out of a slump with a 20-hit attack.

Rick Cerone, acquired as a free agent on Thursday, had four hits for the Red Sox, and Jim Rice and Marty Barrett had three hits apiece.

Staked to a 10-0 lead in the first two innings, Bruce Hurst breezed to victory with a four-hitter. He struck out eight and walked three in his first complete game of the season.

Tigers 8, Royals 6

DETROIT — Chet Lemon extended his hitting streak to all 10 Detroit games, driving in two runs and scoring twice, and Jeff Robinson pitched the Tigers 6 victory.

Robinson, 1-1, allowed three runs on four hits over 6 2-3 innings. Three of the four hits off him were solo homers, two by George Brett and one by Jamie Quirk. Brett also drove in a run in the eighth with a single and had three RBI.

Blue Jays 2, Twins 0

TORONTO — Mike Flanagan and Tom Henke combined on a seven-hit shutout, and Kelly Gruber figured in both Toronto runs as the Blue Jays snapped a four-game losing streak.

Flanagan, 2-0, came out after allowing a leadoff single to Tim Laudner in the eighth, and Henke earned his second save.

Brewers 6, Yankees 3

MILWAUKEE — Joey Meyer homered for his first major league hit, Robin Yount and Rob Deer also homered, and Milwaukee beat New York behind the pitching of Ted Higuera, 2-0, with Dan Plesac getting the save.

Higuera held the Yankees to an unearned run in the third until Roberto Kelly got the Yankees' first extra-base hit, a one-out double in the ninth. Mike Pagliarulo followed with his third homer, and Plesac came on to get the final two outs.

White Sox 7, Athletics 6

OAKLAND, Calif. — Lance Johnson doubled home two runs, sending Chicago ahead during a five-run fourth inning, as the White Sox swept their three-game series.

Rookie pitcher Jack McDowell, 1-1, got the victory despite giving up three runs in the first and a two-run homer by Dave Parker in the fifth. The White Sox scored what turned out to be the winning run in the ninth on a single by Donnie Hill and three walks by Eric Plunk.

Angels 7, Mariners 4

SEATTLE — Chili Davis drove in three runs with two hits, and Kirk McCaskill scattered seven hits in seven innings.

With California leading 2-1 in the fourth inning, Davis hit a two-out, two-run single off Steve Trout.

Trout, 1-1, gave up five runs in four innings on seven hits, all singles. The Mariners left-hander also hit three batters, threw two wild pitches, committed three balks and walked three.

on road courses — and his first since the 1986 finale at Miami, in the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach. Two-time defending CART-PPG driving champion Bobby Rahal finished second, one lap and 33.482 seconds behind the winner's Chevrolet-powered March.

Radisich triumphs

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Paul Radisich of New Zealand led wire-to-wire Sunday in winning the Long Beach round of the SCCA Valvoline-Bosch Super Vee racing series. Radisich beat Robert Groff to the finish line by 3.05 seconds, averaging 69.248 mph on the 1.67-mile, 11-turn road circuit. The 37-lap, 61.79-mile race was slowed by two full-course caution flags for a total of five laps.

Chi Chi wins again

HOUSTON — Chi Chi Rodriguez became the fourth player to earn $1 million on the Senior Tour when shot a final-round 69—208, eight-under, to win the Doug Sanders Celebrity Classic by two strokes. Following Rodriguez, who eagled the par-5 16th hole, were second-round leader and former NFL quarterback John Brodie and Miller Barber.

Rodriquez, who also had three birdies and two bogeys on his way to winning the $37,500 first prize, his first victory this year. Rodriguez joins Don January, Gene Littler and Barber as the only players to earn $1 million on the Senior Tour. Rodriguez now has won a total of $1,037,105.

"I felt confident when I played the Pro-Am on Thursday that I was going to win," Rodriguez said. "I was going for broke all week because you really have to attack this golf course."

NORMAN

Hutton, from Madison, Wis., sat with his idol on the player's bag beside the 18th green after he had completed play and waited for the final groups to finish.

The two sat and watched as David Frost, the last man on the course and the only one with a chance to catch Norman on the final hole, missed a 20-foot birdie putt that would have forced a playoff.

Hutton grinned broadly and shook hands with a smiling Norman, who then touseled the youngster's hair.

"I just want to thank Jamie," Norman said. "He showed me inspiration and courage. He told me he wanted me to shoot 64 and win I shot a 66 and that was enough."

Norman gave Hutton the plaid jacket and trophy awarded to the winner.

"I'd like you to have it and put it in your hospital room. This is your trophy," Norman said to Hutton who was wearing the jacket already. "I almost had heart failure with all those short (par) putts, but he made them,' Hutton said after Norman had one-putted for par on the last two holes.

Nuggets mine Mavericks

DENVER (AP) — Alex English scored 31 points and Fat Lever had his 11th triple-double of the season to lead the Denver Nuggets to a 133-122 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

Lever had 25 points, 19 rebounds and 13 assists.

Jay Vincent had all 20 of his points in the second half as the Nuggets won for the 14th time in their last 15 games and moved 1½ games ahead of the Mavericks in the battle for first place in the NBA's Midwest Division.

Denver, 52-27, tied its club record for wins in a season. Dallas, which has lost eight of its last nine road games, dropped to 50-28.

Bullets 98, Celtics 92

LANDOVER, Md. — Darrell Walker's steal and layup with 1:23 left in the game sparked the Washington Bullets.

Boston, which had trailed by 11 points at the start of the fourth period, rallied to take the lead on a Jim Paxson jumper with 2:39 remaining. John Williams scored for the Bullets, then Paxson hit another jumper to put the Celtics in front 92-91 with 1:55 left.

After Jeff Malone's put Washington back in front, Walker stole the ball from Robert Parish and went the length of the floor for a layup that gave the Bullets a three-point lead.

Rockets 127, Lakers 119

HOUSTON — Akeem Olajuwon scored 38 points as the Houston Rockets handed the Lakers their fifth straight road loss.

Houston snapped an eight-game losing streak against the Lakers as Sleepy Floyd and Cedric Maxwell hit four free throws in the final 32 seconds.

Magic Johnson scored 19 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and had 12 assists for his 12th triple double of the season and the 95th of his career.

Bulls 105, Bucks 97

CHICAGO - Michael Jordan scored 44 points, including 15 in the final quarter, as the Chicago Bulls won its fifth straight victory.

It was the Bulls' 48th victory, their most since the 1973-74 season when they finished with a 54-29 record. Chicago is now tied with Atlanta for second place in the Central Division, four games behind Detroit.

The Bucks, who lost their fourth straight and ninth in their last 11 games, rallied from an 11-point deficit to tie the score 85-85 on a Terry Cummings jumper with 6:03 left.

With the score tied 89-89, Jordan scored six straight points to give Chicago a 95-89 lead with 3:22 remaining.

Storms cancel SWC golf tourney

PLANO, Texas (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms forced the cancellation of the final round of the 1988 Southwest Conference Golf Tournment Sunday, but Southern Methodist, the leader after two rounds, was declared the champion.

SMU held a six-stroke lead over Texas following Saturday's round at Gleneagles Country Club. SMU had a 36-hole score of 571, giving the Mustangs their first SWC golf title since 1956.

SMU's Chip Carter, the individual leader after two rounds, captured medalist honors with his 36-hole total of 5-under-par 137. Carter, a Shreveport, La., native, became the first SMU golfer to capture SWC medalist honors since Payne Stewart shared the title in 1979 with Houston's Fred Couples.

Carter invited to play in the 42nd Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth May 19-22. He will be one of only two amateurs invited to play in the PGA event.

Texas finished second at 577, followed by Houston in third place at 581. Regular-season champion Arkansas and Texas A&M tied for fourth at 587.

The 1988 championship is the Mustangs' fifth.

SMU, which dropped golf in 1981 and resurrected the program in 1984, won the championship under first-year coach Barry Rodenhaver. Last year, the Mustangs finished seventh.

Carter's teammate Russell Beiersdorf and Texas A&M's Neil Hickerson tied for second place in the final individual standings at 3-under 139 while pre-tournament favorite Bob Estes of Texas placed fourth at 1-under 141.

The rain cancellation Sunday was the first in the 17-year history of the tournament.

This Day In Baseball

1899 — John McGraw, only 26, made his managerial debut with the Baltimore Orioles. He led them to a 5-3 victory over the New York Giants, a team he would later manage for more than 30 years.

1923 — In the first game played in Yankee Stadium, a record crowd of 72,400 watched Babe Ruth lead the Yankees to victory over the Red Sox with a home run.

1945 — In his major-league debut, one-armed outfielder Pete Gray got one hit in four at-bats in the St. Louis Browns' 7-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

1950 — The first opening-night game was played in St. Louis. The Cardinals behind a complete game by Gerry Staley and home runs from Red Schoendienst and Stan Musial beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

1982 — The Atlanta Braves defeated the Astros 6-5 in Houston to set a National League record as they won their 11th straight game from the start of the season.

1987 — Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt hit his 500th home run with two outs in the ninth to rally the Phillies to an 8-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates at Three Rivers Stadium.

Caps abandon choking label

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Hockey Writer

The Washington Capitals used to be called chokers. If they win their next playoff series, they'll be known by another title — Patrick Division champions.

The Capitals open their best-of-seven series against the New Jersey Devils Monday night at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Washington advanced to the divisional final Saturday with a 5-4 overtime victory over Philadelphia in Game 7 of their opening-round series.

The Capitals, who had been haunted by past playoff failures, became only the fifth team in NHL history to overcome a 3-1 deficit in the playoffs.

"We've taken that choke label and I think put in on the shelf for quite a while," right wing Mike Gartner said. "We pulled together as a team and we showed just the type of character we always felt we had."

The Adams Division final also opens Monday night, with Montreal hosting Boston. On Tuesday night, it's St. Louis at Detroit in the Norris and Edmonton at Calgary in the Smythe.

The Devils, who closed out their opening-round series against the New York Islanders Thursday, will be better rested than the Capitals in Game 1.

"It's silly that we didn't have another day off," Washington Coach Bryan Murray said. "I think it is a disadvantage. It's not bad if both teams go to seven. I will have to make some lineup changes to give some guys a rest."

But Gartner said he doesn't think it will make a difference.

"We don't feel tired at all right now," he said. "We're on an emotional high. Everybody feels pretty good. We played four lines throughout the series and we're pretty fresh right now."

Although the Capitals captured the season series 5-2, the Devils won the last two games, including their first victory ever at the Capital Centre.

"We need to put pressure on their defense, forecheck them, try to cancel some of their speed," Washington defenseman Rod Langway said. "The whole division is so close, it's going to be another tough series."

The Devils' high-scoring line of Pat Verbeek, Kirk Muller and Aaron Broten was kept in check by the Islanders, but Washington defenseman Scott Stevens said the line is "one of the best in hockey."

"We have to be careful, but we have enough talent to win," Stevens said. "They have a great goaltender (Sean Burke) and they're playing very well right now."

If history is any guide, the Canadiens will beat the Bruins in the Adams final.

TUESDAY, APRIL 19, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Keep important ideas under wraps until just the right moment. Fall is probably the best time to obtain financial backing. Play your cards carefully. Luck will be with you as long as you do what you know to be right. If your skills could be enhanced, think about returning to school. Friends who never have anything encouraging to say are best avoided. A new relationship deepens slowly but surely.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Dudley Moore, actor Hugh O'Brian, tennis' Sue Barker, actress Jayne Mansfield, coach Jack Pardee, designer Paloma Picasso.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be willing to make adjustments and you will be able to clinch a deal. You benefit from a shift in currency values. A sensuous member of the opposite sex intrigues you. Go slow. Public relations improve.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Organization can make a big difference in everything you do now. Get more mileage out of your computer skills. Financial progress may not be as swift as you would like. Be patient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A change of residency could work to your advantage. Be flexible. Cut ties that are not in your best interest. Cover your bets before heading into business negotiations. Do more research.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stay alert when using public transportation. A romantic relationship improves when you and partner are more open with each other. You are tempted to take a big chance. Look before you leap.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use your winning smile frequently in an interview or sales situation. A parent-child relationship benefits from independent counsel. Do not be too proud to say "I am sorry." A conciliatory approach works miracles!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use your time constructively. Make certain you know what is expected of you at work. Self-improvement activities lead to career progress. Cement a new friendship or alliance. Romance looks promising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finances require experts' advice. Take advantage of an older person's offer of assistance. Chances are there are no strings attached. The mail brings interesting news. Let go of old restrictions. Success beckons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good time to start a new career or change jobs. Disagreements over finances should be kept to a minimum. Trust your instincts on meeting an attractive person for the first time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be a leader, not a follower. Assert your independence without hurting a loved one's feelings. Ask assistance from partner if in doubt. Completing old projects will boost profits. Buckle down to work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on inspiration to carry you through the day. You may need to lower your expectations of someone. Body language provides the answer to a puzzling question. Pay close attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Traditional values are a source of strength. Readjust your schedule to accommodate loved one's needs. Showing a willingness to compromise will help mend a breach. Romance should have you walking on air!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Family pressures ease, allowing you to zero in on work. Consider getting additional training if it will help your career. Try to stick around people who appreciate you and share your ambitions.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K73 ♡AQ6 ◇AQ1063 ♣A8
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's bid is a one-round force (no one can know that the hand will make exactly nine tricks at spades, but not eight at no trump), and usually promises at least a six-card suit. Your hand has become golden—prime controls in every suit, a ruffing value and three trumps to a high trump honor. Trumpet your slam interest with a four-club cue-bid.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1065 ♡95 ◇J97542 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
3 ♠	Dbl	?

What action do you take?
A.—It's simply a question of whether the opponents can make a small slam or a grand, and what you can do to prevent them from getting there. Certainly you should up the ante, and it's only a matter of whether you should bid four, five, or six spades. We have a slight preference for the latter.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠763 ♡KQ982 ◇Q76 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—While partner's bid is not forcing, you should tend to pass only if you have a dead minimum for your first bid. You have nothing to be ashamed about here, so we suggest you venture one no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠763 ♡KQ982 ◇Q76 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—It's the same hand and almost the same situation, except this time you are a passed hand. If partner has substantial values, he will strive to find a bid that cannot be passed. Since there is less chance of a heart fit here, we don't mind if you elect to pass.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J8 ♡AQJ1063 ◇A87 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner is showing a balanced hand of 11-12 points, you certainly want to be in game. However, don't bid four hearts—you have already told partner you have a six-card suit. With your balanced hand and honor in every suit, nine tricks might be easier than 10. Raise to three no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable as South you hold:
♠KJ6 ♡Q1092 ◇AJ7 ♣KQ9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—If you think that partner is asking for aces, you need to brush up on your basics. He is making a quantitative raise in no trump, asking you to go to slam if you have a maximum no trump. Unfortunately, you are dead minimum, so you have to pass.

Sculptor Nevelson dies at age 88

Nevelson

NEW YORK (AP) — Louise Nevelson, who turned scavenged balusters, bedposts and odd bits of wood into masterpieces of modern sculpture, died Sunday at her home. She was 88.

She was a serious artist for half a century, but her work was largely ignored until the late 1950s.

Mrs. Nevelson, who had been in poor health for several months, remained active almost to the end, having recently finished a 35-foot black steel sculpture being installed at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. A show of her 1950s work is scheduled for this summer at the Pompidou Center in Paris.

A regal woman who wore mainly black and preferred that color for her creations as well, Mrs. Nevelson was generally regarded as one of the nation's greatest and most prolific sculptors.

The artist was perhaps best known for black-on-black wood boxes assembled from "found" objects put together in unusual ways. She also worked in white and in gold, but invariably in monochromes. In later years, Mrs. Nevelson used metal and plexiglass as well as wood.

Her work was big, dramatic, often dark and intense. Some critics felt it was cold, airless and sterile. Others called it graceful, warm, haunting and uplifting.

Critic Hilton Kramer, in an introduction to "Nevelson's World" in 1983, praised her as having expanded the scale, drama and psychological intensity of modern art, much as Martha Graham had influenced dance.

Mrs. Nevelson lived in adjoining houses on Spring Street in Manhattan's Little Italy section. Behind a wrought-iron door were 17 rooms and a garage studio where she did much of her wood work.

Mrs. Nevelson was born in Kiev, Russia, a few months before the turn of the century, the date never precisely recorded. Her family, the Berliawskys, came to the United States when she was 4 and settled in Rockland, Maine.

Louise Berliawsky decided on her career at an early age.

"I felt like an artist. You feel it — just like you feel you're a singer if you have a voice," she once said. "I have that blessing, and there was never a time that I questioned it or doubted it."

In 1920, she married Charles Nevelson, a wealthy New York ship owner, and moved to the city. They had a son, Myron, and separated in 1931.

Mrs. Nevelson traveled to Munich, where she studied with Hans Hofmann. Upon the rise of the Nazis, she returned to her New York studio.

But it was not until her 60th year in 1959 that Mrs. Nevelson was recognized as a major artist with "Dawn's Wedding Feast," her first all-white "environment."

It was a majestic series of standing and assembled columnar bride, groom, wedding cake and chapel, constructed in Mrs. Nevelson's favorite medium, pieces of wooden junk.

In succeeding years, Mrs. Nevelson produced her notable all-black sculpture house, "Mrs. N's Palace" and the white Chapel of the Good Shepherd in St. Peter's Church in New York.

Age did not slow her. In her 84th year, Mrs. Nevelson embarked on creating the sets and costumes for a production of the opera "Orfeo and Euridice" in St. Louis. In 1985, she was among the first recipients of the National Medal of the Arts.

Survivors include her son and three granddaughters. Funeral services will be private. A memorial service will be announced at a later date.

Jackson

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop star Michael Jackson's first book, "Moonwalk," goes on sale around the country this week, four years after it was acquired and published in secrecy.

In the book, named for the singer's trademark dance step, 29-year-old Jackson writes about his show business friends, his girlfriends, his plastic surgery and his fame.

Jacqueline Onassis, a Doubleday editor, helped acquire the rights to the book and has written a three-paragraph introduction to it.

Doubleday was so determined to keep the book's contents under wraps that it hired employees' family members to deliver portions of the manuscript to the printing plant, The New York Times reported today.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Gail Strickland says shock value wasn't what motivated her to seek the role of the first regular lesbian character on a prime-time television show.

"It's not often actors get to play parts that might make a difference," said Strickland, whose nurse practitioner character, Marilyn McGrath, on ABC-TV's medical drama "Heartbeat" will reveal Wednesday that she is in love with another woman.

"The fact that somewhere, somehow, someone's perspective might be softened is important to me."

Strickland, 41, says she's surprised that TV didn't break the taboo long ago.

"God knows, they've tried to sensationalize everything else," she said in an interview in this week's People magazine.

Strickland, whose credits include "Cagney & Lacey" and "Hill Street Blues," says she expects some negative viewer reaction.

"I'm sure they'll get mail, and I'm afraid they'll pull back when they get negative responses," said Strickland, who is engaged to a Boston businessman.

Cool

NEW YORK (AP) — Physicist Rodney L. Cool, who helped establish that protons and neutrons are made up of subatomic particles called quarks, has died at age 68.

Cool, a professor of experimental high energy physics at Rockefeller University, died Saturday at New York Hospital, said Pam Johnson, a hospital administrator. The university said he died of cancer.

Cool was respected "for his scientific insight and also for his way of dealing with people," said Konstantin Goulianos, a professor of experimental high energy physics at Rockefeller. "He was extremely good at discussing problems and getting to the heart of things."

Until the 1950s, neutrons, protons and electrons were thought to be the fundamental particles of nature.

But a series off experiments in the 1970s conducted by Cool and his colleagues at the European Center for Nuclear Research (CERN) in Geneva, Switzerland, helped establish quarks as the building blocks of neutrons and protons.

Quarks are bound together by an extremely strong force. Cool's recent research at CERN had been directed toward probing the properties of the force.

He was a member of the National Academy of Sciences and a fellow of the American Physical Society.

DOE boosts oil production forecast

Oil, gas price predictions lowered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Domestic crude oil production in the 1990s should be greater than previously expected and demand for natural gas will be markedly higher, according to the Energy Department's annual forecast.

The department's independent Energy Information Administration said oil prices will be slower to rise in the decade than it projected in last year's forecast, and natural gas prices will be much lower.

The import share of U.S. petroleum consumption won't be much different at the end of the century from what was predicted last year, EIA said.

In their annual forecast released last week, the agency's forecasters significantly raised their prediction for U.S. crude oil production in the year 2000 from 5.4 million barrels a day to 6.0 million barrels. Last year's production was about 8.3 million barrels compared with 9.0 million barrels before the 1986 petroleum price collapse.

Richard Farmer, in charge of the petroleum forecast, said in an interview Friday "there is no way you can avoid a decline" in U.S. production by the year 2000. Any major discoveries off California or in Alaska, areas where explorers have high hopes, could not be in significant production before then, he said.

He said "we have been significantly influenced here" by the work of William Fisher, chairman of the Department of Geological Sciences at the University of Texas at Austin.

Fisher reported last year that drilling efficiencies or finding rates — barrels of oil per foot of exploratory well drilled — have been remarkably stable, instead of decling as many predicted.

Farmer, using slightly different calculations than Fisher, said drillers are finding 25 barrels of crude oil per foot drilled, and have been finding between 25 and 30 barrels for the past 10 years.

In 1986, the most recent year for which full drilling statistics are available, drilling dropped off drastically in the price collapse. But efficiency "didn't change much," and may have blipped upward as the least competent drilling rigs were idled, Farmer said.

The projections say crude oil, now about $18 a barrel, will reach $20.37 a barrel in 1994 and $30.76 a barrel in the year 2000. Last year's forecast predicted that $20 a barrel would be reached in 1992, and the price in 2000 would be $32.87.

These prices are average cost to U.S. refineries of imported supplies in dollars of 1987 buying power.

Demand for petroleum products, including natural gas liquids, should reach 18.3 million barrels a day in 2000 compared with last year's projection of 17.4 million barrels. Demand last year was about 16.5 million barrels per day.

Imports, which were 35 percent of consumption last year, should be about 56 percent in 2000, only a slight revision from last year's prediction of 55 percent.

In a major revision for natural gas, consumption of 19.7 trillion cubic feet per day was predicted for 2000, when the average wellhead price is expected to be $4 per thousand cubic feet.

Last year's forecast said the nation would use 18 trillion cubic feet of gas in 2000 at a price of $5.50.

Consumption last year was about 16.8 trillion cubic feet, and the current average wellhead price is about $1.75. Usage has never reached the peaks of the early 1970s, 23 trillion cubic feet, and probably won't get that high again in this century.

High court upholds FERC open-access

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact a key federal regulation designed to foster competition within the natural gas industry.

The justices, without comment, rejected appeals by pipeline companies that claim the rule places them in an unfair economic bind.

The justices also refused to hear arguments by natural gas producers who support giving federal officials broader power to regulate the pipelines.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission adopted sweeping new regulations in 1985 to change the way the natural gas industry operates.

The key change — called the open-access rule — is aimed at giving consumers the benefits of competition among natural gas suppliers.

The rule requires pipeline companies, under certain conditions, to transport gas sold by other producers and traders. Thus, the pipeline companies would carry gas that is in competition with their own supplies.

The commission adopted the rule to end what it said was a practice that unnecessarily inflates the price of some gas supplies.

Potentially billions of dollars in proceeds from gas sales are at stake in the dispute.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here substantially upheld the commission's new regulations last year, stating that the pipeline companies apparently were trying to stifle competition.

"Their attack on the (commission rule) is precisely that it may disable them from passing on to customers gas purchase costs that they incur under contracts entered into years ago under premises now obsolete," the appeals court said. "In other words, enforcement (of the rule) will expose them to competition that their discriminatory practices enable them to avoid."

The commission said the pipelines had been practicing unfair discrimination by generally declining to transport gas in competition with their own sales, thus denying consumers access to gas at the lowest reasonable rates.

The commission said the problem was aggravated by the phasing out of price controls in recent years.

Builder of an oil empire, Texas oilman Clint Murchison, Sr. had strong ties to West Texas.

Secretary recalls life of legendary oilman

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The story goes that few men can be a hero to their butler or secretary, but Ernestine Orrick Van Buren, secretary to legendary oilman Clint Murchison Sr. for over 20 years, disputes that slogan.

"Next to my own parents and my husband, Clint Murchison had the greatest influence on my life," says Van Buren. The author of the book Clint: A Biography, Van Buren will be in Midland Thursday to speak to the West Texas Geological Society about Clint Murchison, his times and his entrepreneurial feats.

Murchison has a strong link to West Texas. With his friend Sid Richardson, he became active in the development of oil production in Winkler County. Murchison intended to build a pipeline from Wink to Pyote to move his oil production, but discontinued the notion when he learned that a major oil company was also planning to build a Wink-Pyote line.

Instead, he built a pipeline from a 70 million cubic feet per day gas well he had recently drilled to the City of Wink, bringing natural gas to each home in town and forming one of the first gas utilities in West Texas. His company, Wink Gas Co., later became Southern Union Gas Co. serving much of West Texas.

From this meager pipeline start Murchison would later go on to build the first pipeline across the Continental Divide.

Van Buren said she alway thought a book should be written about the elder Murchison, father of the late Clint Murchison Jr., one-time owner of the Dallas Cowboys, and finally decided to do it. In a phone interview from her Dallas home, she recalled some of the history of the oilman who built a fortune in oil, utilities and banking.

He was the son and grandson of bankers, was raised in Athens, Texas,and began earning his money raising and selling calves and picking and packing peaches, tomatoes and peas.

When his stay at Trinity University ended after three weeks, he returned to Athens to work in his father's bank. Soon he had some private enterprises going — such as furnishing fuel oil to a brick plant and selling East Texas pine to the army under a war contract.

'Junk cement' suits filed against Western, Dowell

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Two major oil field service companies facing several lawsuits are accused of lining oil wells with "junk cement" that could leak contamination into freshwater formations.

Altogether, the lawsuits seek $62 million in actual and exemplary damages from Dowell Schlumberger Inc. of Houston, and $32.9 million from Western Company of North America, a Fort Worth company that until recently was headed by Texas Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles.

Dowell is owned by Dow Chemical Co. and the Schlumberger Technology Corp.

According to the lawsuits, faulty cement jobs by the two companies on numerous wells greatly increased drilling costs, caused blowouts or ruined wells. Both companies have filed general denials of the charges.

But in a filed response to one of the lawsuits, Dowell admitted its Victoria facility had shorted or substituted cement and chemicals ordered by some of its customers, the Houston Post reported Sunday.

That admission was filed in response to a suit filed Feb. 11 in Victoria against Dowell under the federal Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act, commonly called RICO. The Enterprise Drilling & Manufacturing Co. filed the suit.

Enterprise Drilling filed a second RICO suit against the Western Co. in Victoria on Feb. 3 — a day after Western, facing $750 million in debts, filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Vernon N. Reaser, the Victoria attorney who filed both RICO suits, also has filed two other suits against Dowell in state courts and one against Western on behalf of two drilling contractors, the T&T Production Co. and Mid-Coast Drilling Co.

A year ago, Western pleaded guilty in Victoria to nine misdemeanor counts of supplying its customers with adulterated "junk cement" left over from other well jobs. Despite the plea, it was exonerated by the Texas Railroad Commission of any violation of commission rules or standards after a hearing last December.

Parker & Parsley partners trimmed losses in 1987

Parker & Parsley Development Partners reported a loss of $8.1 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1987, on revenues of $32.8 million.

The partnership trimmed its loss from $9.5 million in 1986, when it had revenues of $29.5 million with a net loss of $9.5 million.

PPDP reported a net loss of $1.8 million for the fourth quarter of 1987 on revenues of $6.8 million. That compares to revenues of $8.6 million and a net loss of $6.0 million for the same three month period in 1986.

Cash flow provided from operations (before depreciation, depletion, and amortization) was $1.8 million for quarter, compared with $3.3 million for the comparable period during the previous year. The net loss decreased primarily due to having no valuation allowance and $4.0 million of operating costs for the three month period ended December 31, 1987 as compared to $3.2 million and $5.0 million for the year earlier quarter.

Exchanges differ on trading trigger

By NATHANIEL C. NASH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The chairmen of the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange said they were developing a plan to shut down all trading in stocks and stock-index futures when the Dow Jones industrial average moved up or down between 200 and 300 points in one day.

Their comments were made Thursday in testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee's Subcommittee on Telecommunciations and Finance as the Dow was heading toward a decline of more than 100 points.

"You've got to let the market seek its own level, but there comes a time when a systematic halt — a safety net — that is known in advance is helpful," said John J. Phelan Jr., chairman of the Big Board.

"In the futures market, we are not uncomfortable with price limits; we already have them," said Leo Melamed, chairman of the Merc, where the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index future is traded. "It just depends on where you draw the line."

In addition, both chairmen told the congressional panel that the president's newly appointed working group on the markets had indicated that establishing what it termed a "circuit breaker" between the New York exchange and the Chicago Merc, as well as with the other major exchanges, was one of its highest policy priorities.

It was a rare joint public appearance for the heads of the two powerful exchanges, who in the past have reportedly been at loggerheads about ways to change regulation to avert another market collapse such as the Dow's 508-point plunge on Oct. 19.

And though they still disagreed on a number of issues, it was significant that the two officials confirmed that they were so far advanced in their negotiations on a coordinated halt to trading in times of crisis.

MARKETS

Posted prices rise to $17.50

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continue to strengthen, gaining 38 cents to stand at $18.75 at midmorning, the highest level since December.

The strength of the futures prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange as well as renewed hostilities in the Persian Gulf also helped posted prices — the actual price paid for a barrel of oil — as several producers increased their postings a dollar to $17.50.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the May-delivery price for West Texas Intermediate crude, which closed up 18 cents per barrel Thursday, rose another 7 cents to $18.37. It was the highest since a Dec. 11 close of $18.31 per 42-gallon barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale heating oil rose .24 cent a gallon to 49.75 cents after a 0.49 cent rise Thursday, and wholesale unleaded gasoline rose 0.25 cent a gallon to 52.61 cents after falling .06 cent Thursday.

Traders said Friday's gains were based largely on internal market influences rather than any outside news.

"What you have today is more of an absence of sellers rather than any aggressive buying," said Jayne Ball, a trader in the energy futures department at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York.

Prices have advanced recently in response to plans for a meeting of oil producers from inside and outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on April 23.

Gains also had been spurred Thursday by investors who dumped stocks as the market tumbled in response to the Commerce Department's disappointing report on U.S. trade.

Dollar mixed in early trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in early European trading today amid fears of central bank intervention if the American currency moves lower. Gold prices were slightly higher.

Market sentiment remains extremely bearish toward the dollar because of disappointment over the widened February trade deficit, dealers said.

Britain's pound sterling continued strong on high interest rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.35 yen to a closing 123.78. But later, in London, it rose to 124.40 yen, higher than Friday's close of 124.13 yen.

—1.6625 West German marks, up from 1.6605

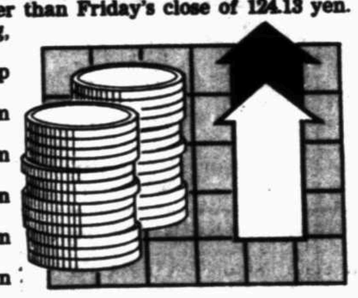
—1.3750 Swiss francs, up from 1.3720

—5.6455 French francs, up from 5.6325

—1.85885 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8630

—1,231.00 Italian lire, down from 1,232.50

—1.2305 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2335



In London, the British pound rose against the dollar. It cost $1.8925 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.889 late Friday.

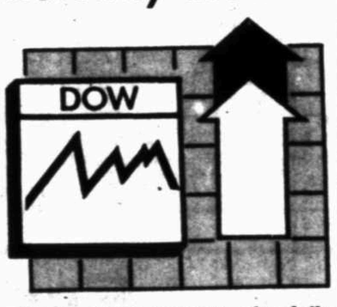
Gold opened in London at a bid price of $456.75 a troy ounce and at midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $457.55. Both were higher than Friday's late bid of $456.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $457, up from $456.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.03 to close at a bid $457.98.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.515 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $6.49.

Stocks reverse Thursday slide



NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pulled out of Thursday's steep slide with an uneven showing Friday marked by strength in some blue-chip issues.

But analysts said investors' spirits were still dampened by worries over inflation and the nation's international trade problems.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 101.46 on Thursday for its fifth largest point loss ever, rose 8.29 to 2,013.93. It finished the week with a net loss of 76.26 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 5 in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange, with 573 up, 990 down and 420 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 234.16 million shares, up from 211.81 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index slipped .14 to 147.00.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $1.06 billion, or 0.04 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 265.05 million shares.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose .36 to 302.68, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .02 at 259.77.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped .62 to 373.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 299.24, up .32.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Cancer claims chairman of AT&T

NEW YORK (AP) — James E. Olson, who as chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. made the company more aggressive and cost-conscious, died early today of cancer. He was 62.

He had been operated on late last month for a tumor of the colon.

AT&T President Robert E. Allen, who took over from Olson after he became ill last month, will continue to direct the company until the board of directors elects a new chairman, company spokeswoman Lynda Beighley said.

Olson became ill with the flu on March 18 and had surgery seven days later. He returned home on April 1 and had been undergoing chemotherapy since.

Texaco board reinstates dividend

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. announced it will resume paying a quarterly dividend and will sell off an additional $2 billion in assets as part of its restructuring.

At its first meeting since Texaco emerged from Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy court reorganization on April 7, the oil giant's board of directors on Friday authorized a 75-cent quarterly dividend, a move analysts said is intended to bolster shareholder support for the current management team.

United changes frequent flier program

NEW YORK (AP) — United Airlines, alarmed by the mushrooming popularity of frequent-flier programs and their potential financial impact, announced changes that effectively pull in the reins on free flying.

Other major U.S. airlines, facing potential revenue losses from their frequent-flier programs, could well follow Friday's initiative by Chicago-based United, the nation's largest carrier.

The frequent-flier plans reward passengers with free tickets or upgrades to first class after they have flown a set number of miles. United's new program sets up a two-tier system of travel awards.

'Power lunchers' graze on impressive chitchat

By SHARON BENOIT
Copley News Service

Getting down to business at lunch usually follows a pattern. Overall, it's always impress the impressive. Conversation usually opens with chitchat then eases its way into the pitch and wraps up with the sale. No matter what the topic might be, power lunching never ends without a return to the chitchat phase, which is a signal that the lunch has been successful.

Power lunch participants are always seeking new and unusual points to bring up during the initial chitchat phase. For example, the difference between Cajun and creole or where to get bargains in the city are great icebreakers.

Here's a list of impressive conversation openers to discuss during the chitchat phase of your next power lunch:

The nation's fertility rate — the annual number of births per 1,000 women aged 15-44 — is at an all-time low.

Only 10 percent of households consist of a working father, a housewife mother and children younger than 18.

Two-thirds of working women work full time.

Just one-fourth of Americans aged 15 and older have a personal income of $20,000 or more per year.

Half of Americans aged 15 or older have a personal income of less than $10,000 a year.

Seven out of ten new home buyers need two incomes to pay their mortgages.

One-third of marriages are remarriages for at least one partner.

Six out of 10 children born today will live with only one parent for at least one year before the age of 18.

One-fifth of American children are poor.

Poor whites outnumber poor blacks by more than 2-to-1.

The state gaining the most people is California.

The county gaining the most people is Los Angeles.

Immigration accounts for more than one-fourth of U.S. population growth.

The Hispanic population is growing twice as fast as the black population. The black population is growing twice as fast as the white population.

If you can afford the extra money and if you qualify, a 15-year mortgage usually has a lower percentage rate than a 30-year loan.

The difference between the 'haves' and 'have nots' has little to do with intellect or creative abilities or after-hour work and single-minded dedication. Many wealth-builders are rather 'plodding' individuals, and successful accumulators typically enjoy more leisure than others.

Between now and the turn of the century, the number of Americans in their 20s will drop by one-fifth.

Between now and the turn of the century, the number of Americans aged 85 and older will increase by two-thirds.

Nine percent of Americans live alone.

Eighty-five percent of Americans live in families.

The occupation that will gain the most jobs in the next 10 years will be that of a cashier.

Blacks will outnumber Hispanics until 2010.

One-fourth of Americans will be black, Hispanic or Asian by 2000.

One in eight Americans (non-agricultural workers) is self-employed or owns a business on the side.

Today's eldercare concerns are puny compared to the health-care problems and costs estimated after 2010. The 11 percent who comprise the elderly already pay 33 percent of America's health-care bills (even though two-thirds describe themselves in good/excellent health). Out-of-pocket health expenses for those 65-plus are now higher than they were before the introduction of Medicare/Medicaid.

This chitchat business certainly is hard to swallow, but then again, some people will do anything to create a lasting impression during a simple two-hour lunch.

NYSE

Since the crash, most market studies have recommended that regulatory policy, both at the federal and exchange level, needs a high degree of coordination, since the Chicago and New York markets are now inextricably linked. Specifically, analysts have noted that stock-index futures — which represent baskets of stocks trading on the New York exchange — are a key pricing mechanism for the underlying stock market.

Both Melamed and Phelan confirmed they were in talks they hoped would produce a key agreement to coordinate the closing of trading. And both said that within two to four weeks such an agreement could be reached. But they were still in disagreement over when such a circuit breaker should kick in.

Phelan said trading should not be stopped until the Dow fell or rose at least 300 points, while Melamed recommended that the trigger point be more in the range of 200 points on the Dow.

JUNK

Officials of Dowell and Western have said they believe any problem with junk cement was limited to their Victoria district offices, the Post reported.

Cement is poured around oil well casings to support and steady the pipe and to prevent pollution of groundwater by contaminants migrating along the casing. The casing protects fresh-water formations that might supply municipal, agricultural or home water wells.

Some major oil companies specify the cement formulas they want for a well, but many smaller operators leave it up to an oil field service company to work out and mix a suitable cement.

Various amounts of chemical additives are blended into the dry cement for each specific job. Extenders such as fly ash are used to make the mixture go further at lower cost.

The railroad commission's standard requires that cement withstand 250 pounds per square inch pressure within 24 hours. One laboratory manager said even the most adulterated of Western's cement — 48 percent cement and 52 percent fly ash — met the commission standard.

Fred A. Brooks Jr., an independent Houston expert on oil and cement, told the Post that cement so heavily diluted with fly ash would not, in his opinion, set up and reach the specified strength with 24 hours.

"I certainly don't think all the aquifers in Victoria County are going to be polluted because of bad cement," he said. "But if a company is supplying junk bin cement, this obviously could get you into trouble."

Another well cement expert, Dwight Smith of Duncan, Okla., said junk cement may meet Railroad Commission standards and cause no problems.

"But ethically, it's wrong ...," he added. "Water one day may be more valuable than oil, and the consequences of bad cementing may not even show up in our lifetimes."

Broad effects seen from trade fight

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A clash between the White House and Congress that could spike 1988 trade legislation endangers major international economic intitiatives of the United States, including a free trade pact with Canada, and could weaken the nation's global posture, analysts warn.

Following the collapse of a tentative compromise last week, President Reagan's representatives have clearly signaled that he will veto a trade bill that congressional Democrats said they now expect will clear both houses by Friday.

The legislation contains a hotly contested worker-notification provision that the White House calls "injurious" to the economy. Under the provision, companies with more than 100 employees would have to give 60 days' notice of plant closings or layoffs. The plan is being pressed by the labor movement as essential assistance to workers and is being resisted by business as unwarranted governmental intervention.

At the weekend, Democratic leaders were preparing to incorporate into the sweeping legislation a second provision singled out as "veto bait," requiring foreigners to register with the Commerce Department if they own American real estate or 5 percent or more of an American company.

A White House official labeled the legislation "beyond redemption," and a group of legislative aides at a private meeting on Friday forecast unanimously that any veto would be sustained.

"The trade bill will go down the tubes," said Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the minority leader, urging his Democratic colleagues to take another stab at a compromise.

Clayton K. Yeutter, the United States trade representative, said, "We're back to ground zero after two or three years' work on a trade bill."

Although some administration officials held out the possibility of a later compromise on a smaller, streamlined bill if a veto is sustained, many legislative analysts remain skeptical, especially in an election year with a much abbreviated legislative calendar.

"It's not like having to get the Social Security checks out when you've got a fiscal fight that closes down the government," said one key Senate aide. "There's no powerful constituency out there that says you've got to have a trade bill."

Asked about chances for new trade legislation this year, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., chairman of the Finance Committee, told reporters on Friday that "another bill will be extremely difficult to do."

Such prospects, analysts say, hold out grave dangers for the nation's broader economic policy objectives, which require a consensus between Congress and the White House.

One of the casualties may be the free-trade agreement that Ottawa and Washington painfully worked out last fall, under which both countries would wipe out their border barriers within 10 years.

Also likely to be affected by any trade blowup are the so-called Uruguay Round of trade liberalization negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and American efforts for tariff harmonization. The authority to pursue these goals is contained in the omnibus bill.

The Uruguay Round is an American initiative to gain greater access in global markets for American services such as banking and insurance, and for American agriculture. It would also change trade distorting investment practices of many governments.

If the administration lacks negotiating authority, other governments would be unlikely to bargain seriously, and the whole exercise could go by the boards.

Under tariff harmonization, the United States would fall into line with the way most of the rest of the world classifies goods and services flowing in international trade. The divergent position of the United States is generally agreed to weaken its trading position.

Thomas D. Matty, director of exports for the American Association of Exporters and Importers, provides this example. American and Canadian exporters are selling competitve computers to Britain. Canada and Britain are on the harmonized system, the United States is not. So the American exporter cannot be sure how his computer will be classified, and what duty will be assessed by British Customs.

"Being odd man out opens up the possibility of discretion and discrimination against our products," Matty said. "In exporting we should be leading the pack, not out of step with it."

Legislators and administration officials agreed that Canada was likely to be caught in the backwash. "There will be a sour taste in Congress that will make it more difficult for Canadian free trade," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., a member of the Finance Committee. "They're playing with fire because it shows that this country can't govern, that the White House and Congress can't govern together, which means we're putting America's future in a precarious position."

He went on to note in an interview that, without trade legislation, "we'll lose our stature."

"Germany and Japan will be less likely to cooperate in currency stabilization," he said. "It's likely that Japan would think again whether it wants to help us bail out our budget deficit. The key question is can America govern. That's what this is all about."

The concern on Canada was echoed by Yeutter at a trade meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia, during the weekend, when he noted that "bruised feelings" in Congress, at the least, would defer consideration of the pact by Congress. He predicted a delay of 30 days, which would mean it would not come up until July 1, two weeks before the Democratic convention opens in Atlanta.

For the pact to go into effect Congress has to approve "implementing" legislation changing American regulations and laws to authorize the staged elimination of tariffs and other trade barriers against Canada. Canada is going through a similar process to comply at its end.

But because of constituency interests opposed to some of the provisions — chiefly affecting natural resource-based industries such as copper, uranium and plywood, where Canada maintains certain competitive advantages — approval is likely to be touch and go.

A number of legislators want to use the implementing legislation to modify parts of the deal worked out last fall. A group of senators from the West, for example, are pressing for contingency provisions permitting American tariffs to "snap back" into force if Canadian subsidies are not removed. But there is a question whether this can be done without reopening the basic agreement, which, because of the delicate balance already achieved, both governments insist they will not do.

The Senate Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee are expected to work with the office of the United States trade representative on drafting the legislation, which would be formally sent up around midyear. Under so-called fast-track procedures, Congress then has 90 days to vote the package up or down.

In April 1986, the Senate Finance Committee only barely approved granting the administration authority to negotiate with Canada. Senators explained that they had nothing against Canada, but instead were protesting the administration's failure to consult adequately over trade policy.

Canadian fuel sales may rise

By MATTHEW L. WALD
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The proposed free trade agreement with Canada could provide an immediate spurt to natural gas sales in this country, by convincing potential gas users that larger reserves are available because neither country could reimpose restrictions, according to spokesmen for American gas producers and pipeline companies.

That would be the largest short-term impact of the agreement in the energy field, according to American and Canadian experts. Over the long term, they say, the agreement would also stimulate American investment in Canadian oil and gas production, and increase sales of Canadian electricity, because of the promise of an end to restrictions on exports and imports established by both countries.

Some American gas producers remain apprehensive, however, that the agreement could result in increased gas imports into an already depressed market.

The pact, signed Jan. 2 by President Reagan and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, is under consideration by legislators in Washington and Ottawa. The Energy Committee of the Senate begins two days of hearings on the pact Tuesday.

At present, with energy relatively cheap and plentiful, the two countries have few barriers to energy trade between them, but in times of shortage or of a large surplus, both sides have imposed restrictions.

Robert A. Reinstein, who represented the United States in negotiations on the energy portion of the agreement, said that by assuring that Canada would be a steady supplier and the United States a steady customer, the agreement would encourage trade that requires long-term commitments, like gas purchases and long-term oil exploration projects.

But, he noted, the short-term impact will be small, because "trade between the United States and Canada is essentially free today." Reinstein added that this was the first trade agreement to deal specifically with energy.

The agreement would leave intact a Canadian rule that oil drilling projects on land owned by Canada's federal government continue to have a majority Canadian ownership. The American Petroleum Institute, a Washington-based trade organization, has complained about that provision but supports the agreement.

The refiners' group, the National Petroleum Refiners Association, has not taken a position. Some of the group's members would face stiffer competition under the free trade agreement, which would eliminate a duty of 1.25 cents on each gallon of gasoline imported.

Canada would also benefit from a modification under the agreement of the United States law that prohibits the export of oil from Alaska, to allow 50,000 barrels a day to go to Canada's west coast. That is the limit of what refineries there can now accept, according to experts.

Richard L. Itteilag, director of gas demand analysis at the American Gas Association, which primarily represents pipeline operators, said that Canada's proven reserves are nearly 100 trillion cubic feet, half again as large as the United States' reserves. At current rates of consumption, Canada has a supply of more than 35 years.

"Ultimately, this is another source of energy independence for the U.S.," Itteilag said.

The effect on the electricity market in the United States could be substantial in some areas. Less than 2 percent of the electricity consumed in this country comes from Canada, but according to the Department of Energy, the figure was 12 percent in New York and 9.2 percent in New England in 1986, and those numbers will grow.

U.S. consortium plans Soviet joint ventures

By FELICITY BARRINGER
New York Times News Service

MOSCOW — The Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev told 500 American executives and top officials of the Commerce Department that better international relations and Soviet economic reforms offer potential for a new economic relationship between the two superpowers.

"New thinking should, at long last, enter the sphere of our economic relations," Gorbachev said at a Kremlin reception for the executives, who are in Moscow for the 11th annual meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, a private group.

The Gorbachev reception was held a few hours after executives of seven American corporations announced the formation of a business consortium its organizers hope will serve as a gateway and guidepost for expanded American participation in joint venture projects with the Soviet Union.

The consortium consists of Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., Chevron Corp., RJR Nabisco Inc., Eastman Kodak Co., Ford Motor Co., Johnson & Johnson and Mercator Corp.

The joint ventures planned by the member companies of American Trade Consortium Inc. are expected to engage in the manufacturing and sale of goods ranging from floppy disks to medical equipment to automobiles to tampons.

"What we have tried to do here is set up a mechanism that would facilitate our negotiations so that we could enter into profitable transactions with our Soviet counterparts," said James H. Giffen, president of the consortium.

"That's the name of the game here," he said. "This is not aid; this is trade and we're after profits."

In his speech, Gorbachev said: "We are formulating our policy, also our foreign economic policy, to last. We make it more predictable for the outside world. And we do not do this in order to please someone. We do this because we need this ourselves and this is profitable for us."

Referring to his domestic economic reforms, Gorbachev said, "Our perestroika is an invitation to work out a new system of coordinates in the economic relationship between our socially and ideologically different countries." Perestroika, or reconstruction, is Gorbachev's catchword for his programs of social and economic change.

"There are and will be serious differences between our countries," Gorbachev said. "But the times demand that these differences not be a source of enmity and be used, as far as this is possible, as a stimulus to mutually advantageous competition." The text of his remarks was carried by the official Tass news agency.

The consortium seems both an example of the potential new mechanisms to facilitate trade and a metaphor for the tentative and unpredictable nature of the relationship between the superpowers.

None of its member companies have yet completed joint venture negotiations with Moscow, and company executives were unresponsive to questions on how they would obtain hard currency profits from their agreements.

But despite the uncertainties, the executives have been generally upbeat about potential deals.

Most would involve joint venture arrangements, a concept used worldwide for years but adopted by the Soviet Union only in 1987, with the enactment of a law permitting foreign companies to own up to 49 percent of a Soviet-based manufacturing plant.

Soviet and American officials say that dozens of ventures are under discussion, but before this week only two had been registered with the Soviet Chamber of Commerce.

Three more joint ventures were announced, though not registered, this week. Honeywell Inc. announced an agreement to manufacture automated control systems for fertilizer plants. The Occidental Petroleum Corp. announced two joint ventures to build petrochemical plants in the Ukraine.

Chevron mum on direction of discussions with USSR

By PAUL FARHI

SAN FRANCISCO — Chevron Corp. of San Francisco took its first tentative steps toward a joint oil-exploration venture with the Soviet Union when it announced it has joined five other major American companies in a U.S.-Soviet trade-negotiation group.

The private American Trade Consortium signed an agreement with its Soviet governmental counterpart, the Soviet Foreign Economic Consortium, to begin discussing the ground rules for investment in Soviet industrial projects and for marketing consumer products in the country.

Chevron officials hailed the agreement, but steered clear of predicting where the discussions might lead.

"We're still at the point of exploring the potential of a joint venture," said Chuck Wootton, a spokesman for Chevron's international division. "We're hopeful we can work out something in our interest, but there are no certainties."

Chevron officials said the company is interested in exploring and developing Soviet crude oil and natural gas reserves.

Along with Chevron, the members of the U.S. consortium include Archer Daniels Midland, the agricultural commodities producer, Eastman-Kodak Co., Ford Motor Co., Johnson & Johnson, RJR Nabisco, and Mercator Corp.

Mercator, a small New York merchant banking firm specializing in trade finance, is headed by James Giffen, the president of the consortium, who began discussions about joint ventures with Soviet officials early last year.

Chevron's two top international executives, J. Dennis Bonney, vice chairman, and John Silcox, president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum, have traveled to Moscow within the past year to discuss possible ventures.

Last month, Soviet officials invited the company to participate in building a Siberian petrochemical plant, but Chevron said it has declined the offer.

Tom Burns, manager of Chevron's economics department, said the Soviets need Western expertise to tap smaller pools of oil, and to drill at deeper depths or in hostile environments, such as off-shore or in Siberia. Chevron, he said, is experienced in these areas.

The Soviets produced a world-leading 12.5 million barrels of crude oil a day last year, according to PlanEcon Report, a Washington, D.C., newsletter. About 9 million barrels are used internally, and about 2 million barrels are sold to allied Socialist countries in Eastern Europe. The remainder, about 1.5 million barrels, are sold on the international market and represent the Soviets' prime source of foreign exchange.

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks weakened this morning in reaction to falling bond prices, concern about inflation and U.S.-Iranian fighting in the Persian Gulf.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, wobbly after a big weekly loss, was down 11.28 points to 2,002.65 as of noon EDT.

Anxiety about inflation contributed to a selloff in bond prices this morning that pushed yields on the 30-year issue past 9 percent, the highest level in three months. To many investors, this made bonds more attractive and less risky than stocks.

Rising oil prices linked to escalating violence in the Persian Gulf also aggravated fears about inflation, traders said.

Others said large institutional investors such as pension funds were fearful of another large drop in the Dow average like the 101.46-point fall last Thursday, despite NYSE restraints on computerized trading strategies that are designed to slow the speed and magnitude of the index's movements.

Declining issues led advances by more than 3-to-2 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 812 down, 527 up and 484 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 78.58 million shares in the morning vs. 132.88 million Friday morning.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks fell 0.60 to 146.40. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index also fell 0.60 to 298.64.

Oil stocks were mixed, despite a jump in petroleum prices caused by the Persian Gulf hostilities. Amoco rose ⅝ to 78⅛, Chevron rose ¼ to 48⅜, Texaco fell ⅝ to 48 and Exxon fell ⅛ to 43½.

Pacificorp was the Big Board's most-active issue at 34, down ½, on volume exceeding 15 million shares. The heavy trading was linked to the utility's quarterly dividend payment.

American Telephone & Telegraph fell ⅛ to 26½. The company said its chairman James E. Olson died of cancer. Sears Roebuck fell ⅞ to 34. The retailer reported a decline in first-quarter earnings.

BOOK

Murchison served in the Army during World War I, and after his release in 1919, began trading leases around the Burkburnett oil boom with his childhood friend Sid Richardson.

Murchison was also involved in the East Texas oil boom, seeing the need for and building the Tyler pipeline and refinery. His leases in East Texas were the beginnings of American Liberty Oil Co. Van Buren credited his success to being in the right place at the right time. "Of course, he could have been a railroad magnate if he'd been born 100 years earlier, or an astronaut if he'd been born later. He was always interested in new developments." He also was involved in cattle ranching, insurance and owned a race track.

She noted that he was very close to his family, getting both his brothers Frank and Kenneth and his sons John Dabney and Clint Jr. involved in his enterprises. She added that the current generation of Murchisons — his grandchildren — were showing signs of being as successful as he was.

She described him as a modest man in both appearance and speech, which hid the fact that he was a dynamo. "He had tremendous mental energy and, fortunately, he could hire people to carry out his ideas. He could think of more things to do than you could get done," she said, adding that he kept her so busy that "if he didn't leave town now and then, I'd never have gotten my work done."

She called the book a "chore of the heart, as Mr. Murchison would say. If I had known it would take so much of my time, I'm not sure I would have had the nerve to do it." She said she spent approximately three years researching the book.

Her presentation will be Thursday at Ranchland Hills Country Club, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Copies of the book and the special bandana designed for Murchison will be on sale.

Audit shows FSLIC deficit doubled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal audit being prepared on the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. will show that its deficit more than doubled in 1987 to as much as $13 billion, according to a report published today.

The Washington Post said government estimates indicate that FSLIC's deficit could reach $30 billion to $65 billion in the next few years. It attributed its report to government sources.

The deficit at the end of 1987 for FSLIC, which insures deposits up to $100,000 and manages failed S&Ls, more than doubled the $6.3 billion deficit at the end of 1986, the newspaper said.

The deterioration in FSLIC's financial condition last year occurred despite government efforts to stabilize the S&L industry.

Last August, President Reagan signed legislation recapitalizing FSLIC, which was technically insolvent and unable to deal with failed S&Ls. The legislation provides $10.8 billion over three years from the sale of bonds, to be paid off by a special assessment on profitable institutions.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board which regulates 3,126 savings institutions, said last month that it's too soon to consider bailing out FSLIC. Wall said the fund had about $20 billion to work with over the next three years.

In 1987, S&Ls suffered net withdrawals in seven of the first nine months, and one-third of the industry lost money, pushing overall 1987 losses to a post-Depression record of $6.8 billion.

But the bank board reported earlier this month that net deposits at federally insured savings institutions had grown for the fifth consecutive month in February, continuing a trend begun after the October stock market crash.

The board said net deposits increased by $5.2 billion in February, compared with a $1.1 billion withdrawal in February 1987. Since the stock market crash, $6.2 billion moved into S&L accounts in October, $3.2 billion in November, $2.6 billion in December and $5.4 billion increase in January.

Mexican airline files for bankruptcy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The state airline Aeromexico filed for bankruptcy, saying a strike that kept its flights grounded for a fifth day Saturday had ruined its fragile financial balance.

A statement issued by the federal Communications and Transportation Department said the strike declared by the airline's technical workers at noon Tuesday already caused losses of more than $6.4 million.

"That broke its precarious economic balance and the possibility of continuing to operate," the statement, issued late Friday, said.

The government newspaper El Nacional said bankruptcy could affect 7,200 ground workers, 1,200 cabin attendants and 800 pilots.

Spokesmen for the National Technical Workers Union told reporters the decision was a political one and maintained the airline cannot file for bankruptcy until the strike is resolved. The Federal Labor Mediation Board is hearing the airline's petition to have the strike declared illegal and the union's response.

The union went on strike to protest the airline's plan to reduce its fleet by 13 aircraft and cut service routes, saying that automatically would mean laying off 30 percent of Aeromexico workers.

FERC

In the appeal acted on today, the pipeline companies said the open-access rule is causing a dramatic decline in gas sales and a drop in drilling for gas reserves. The regulation "has raised questions as to the security of the nation's gas supply and has threatened the financial and operational base of the pipeline industry," the companies said.

The appeals court here stopped short of upholding all of the commission's 1985 regulations.

The appeals court ordered the commission to come up with an adequate explanation of its decision not to amend so-called take-or-pay provisions in gas supply contracts.

A take-or-pay provision requires a pipeline to pay a producer for some specified percentage of deliverable gas, for example 75 percent, even if the pipeline took less.

The pipeline companies say such provisions became particularly onerous by committing them to high gas costs in what by 1982 became a time of falling prices.

Natural gas producers urged the justices to overturn that portion of the appeals court ruling that requires the commission to re-examine its support of the take-or-pay concept.

The cases are Interstate Natural Gas Association vs. FERC, 87-976; Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. vs. FERC, 87-977; Shell Offshore Inc. vs. Associated Gas Distributors, 87-978; Willcox, Ariz., vs. FERC, 87-979; and Southern California Gas Co. vs. FERC, 87-1091.

DOE

"This year's view is based on the flexibility gas producers have demonstrated recently in meeting competition, both from other gas suppliers and from suppliers of other fuels," the EIA analysts wrote. "Increases (in consumption) after 1995 are likely to be especially significant as competitive natural gas prices and the increased use of (gas-burning) combined cycle units by electric utilities push demand for this fuel upward."

Predicted coal use was reduced slightly, from 1.2 billion tons in 2000 to 1.1 billion tons. The report noted the entry of new producing countries in world trade such as China, Venezuela and Colombia, which will compete with U.S. exports.

The petroleum demand projection assumes that new cars, currently averaging 27 miles per gallon, will average 34 mpg in the year 2000, and that people will use cars and trucks about as much as they do now. Economic growth, expressed as the average annual change in the gross national product, was predicted to be 2.3 percent per year in the new forecast vs. 2.4 percent last year.

The report also assumes that the overall energy effiency of the economy should improve, though more slowly than in the recent past. The energy used for a dollar's production of goods and services, which fell by 2.5 percent per year from 1976 through 1986, will fall at 1.0 percent per year, the report said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

IRS changes 'cockamamie' rule

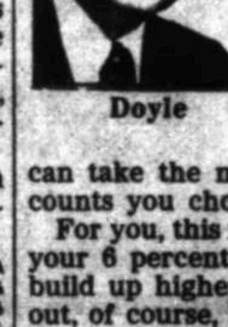
By BILL DOYLE

Q. You described Internal Revenue Service Regulation 1.408-8 as "just about the meanest the revenooers ever foisted on people who tucked money away for their retirement years." That rule said people with two or more individual retirement accounts have to take withdrawals equally from each IRA after passing age 70 1/2.

I have certificates of deposit paying 6, 9 and 10 percent in three IRAs at three different banks. I would prefer to make my withdrawal first from the low-interest CD.

The IRS regulation said I can't do that and that I must take a proportionate share of the total withdrawal from each of my three IRAs.

Is there any hope the IRS will change this rule, which you aptly called "cockamamie?"



Doyle

A. Good news! It has, in IRS Notice 88-38. The revised rule says a person past 70 1/2 with multiple IRAs may make his or her total required annual withdrawal from any one or more of them.

A calculation will have to be made of the amount required to be withdrawn from each IRA based on the value of each account as of Jan. 1 of the year in which the withdrawal is made. Then, you can take the money out of the account or accounts you choose.

For you, this means you can take money out of your 6 percent CD and leave the other two to build up higher interest. The amount you take out, of course, will be based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary.

The old rule mandating equal withdrawals from all IRAs was scheduled to take effect this year. The new regulation applies to 1988 and, unless the IRS reverses its field, will cover future years.

An IRS spokesman admitted the former regulation caused a lot of flack. It certainly was a hot topic with IRA participants. When I mentioned the revised rule in response to a query such as yours in the question-and-answer session following a recent talk in Vero Beach, Fla., senior citizens in the audience broke out in applause and cheers.

Q. Because I became 70 1/2 in 1987, I had to take my first required individual retirement account withdrawal by April 1, 1988. Neither I nor the banks at which I have IRAs knew about Internal Revenue Service Notice 88-38 allowing me to choose the account from which I may take the entire withdrawal. When was that announcement made?

A. The IRS distributed that notice to tax-reporting services, such as Commerce Clearing House and Prentice Hall, on Mar. 21 and sent out an information release, 88-63, to the media on Mar. 30. The notice was printed in the IRS Bulletin April 11.

There's little doubt that some folks such as you were caught in the switches by the late timing of the announcement. However, if banks and other IRA sponsors were on the ball, their operational people should have seen the notice in the bulletins from tax-reporting services.

Q. I am in my late sixties and will be forced to begin taking withdrawals from my relatively small individual retirement account within a few years. I have a large Keogh self-employed retirement and two annuities which will give me substantial taxable income and put me in a high income tax bracket.

I am considering withdrawing $4,000 this year and next year from my IRA, depleting it before I become 70 1/2. I realize I will have to pay tax on the withdrawals as ordinary income. But that does not bother me, because my taxable income now is low.

What do you think of my plan?

A. It's a good one, because it will save you tax dollars – assuming you now are in the 15 percent tax bracket and expect to be in the 28 or 33 percent bracket once you start taking money out of your Keogh plan and annuities.

An additional thing to keep in mind is that the bite out of your income might be higher than 28 or 33 percent, if federal income taxes are raised in future years. Some spend-happy members of Congress are making noises to that effect.

Incumbent county officials being swept from office

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The increasingly difficult task of county government was reflected in recent elections that saw several sheriffs and county commissioners swept from office, a political observer said.

New sheriffs were elected in Jefferson, Orange, Liberty, Newton, Tyler and San Augustine counties. Voters also swept county commissioners from office in Orange and Hardin counties and gave others strong runs.

Although the general election is not until November, the primary winners in those races did not face opposition.

"The sheriff is by its nature a controversial job," said Dewey Updegraff, Orange County Democratic chairman and a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

"The basic duty of the sheriff is not to mess up, to keep controversy to a minimum. But in today's world, I don't know if that's possible," he told the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal.

County commissioners also are more vulnerable as they try to provide county services with shrinking tax rolls, Updegraff said.

After 25 years in office, Jefferson County Sheriff R.E. "Dick" Culbertson lost to a former deputy, Carl Griffith, who charged the incumbent had become complacent in the years since he had been a reform sheriff in the early 1960s.

Orange County Sheriff James Wade's first term was marked by lawsuits and political infighting, culminating in the announcement in January that the FBI was investigating Wade.

Wade drew three primary opponents including two deputies Wade had fired and lost in the runoff to Huel Fontenot, a former Texas highway patrolman now working as a private investigator.

Sabine County Sheriff Blan Greer avoided a runoff by eight votes despite the controversy surrounding the alleged beating death of 34-year-old Loyal Garner Jr., a Louisiana truck driver who died after being held at the county jail.

Tyler County will have a new sheriff after two-term Sheriff Leon Fowler unsuccessfully ran for county judge. Texas Department of Public Safety trooper Gary Hennigan won the sheriff's office with 55 percent of the vote in a runoff over Bob Rawls, a former state game warden.

Jerome Owens, a Woodville lawyer, defeated Fowler in the primary to win the two-year unexpired term as county judge.

Perhaps the biggest upset was veteran San Augustine County Sheriff N.L. Tindall's loss to Charles Bryan, a meat locker owner who got 53 percent of the vote in the runoff after leading the three-man primary race in a campaign with undercurrents that the incumbent was not tough enough on drug traffic.
