WASHINGTON — Three weeks before midterm elections, Americans disapprove by almost a 2-to-1 margin of the way Republicans are investigating President Clinton's conduct, according to a poll released Monday. And a growing number say they trust Clinton more than the Republicans to deal with the nation's problems.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — A gay University of Wyoming student died today, five days after he was found pistol-whipped and lashed to a fence post in an attack denounced nationwide as a hate crime. Shepard had been in a coma since bicyclists found him tethered to the post in near-freezing temperatures outside Laramie, Wyo., on Wednesday.

Congress keeps government open

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — White House and congressional budget bargainers put aside their battle over the 2000 census Monday but remained divided over school spending and other issues as Congress voted to keep the government open through Wednesday.

On one of their most contentious disputes, the two sides in effect agreed to a six-month postponement for resolving whether scientific sampling should be used to improve the accuracy of the 2000 census, said Republican and Democratic participants, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and House Speaker Newt Gingrich spent about nine hours negotiating with White House chief of staff Erskine Bowles. The two GOP leaders initially predicted that a breakthrough could come in the evening, but Bowles left the Capitol Monday night and planned to return for more talks on Tuesday. The hope was that Congress could approve a package as early as Wednesday.

"The mood is such that everybody would like to reach agreement," Lott, R-Miss., told reporters.

While agreeing that progress was being made, Bowles said disagreements remained on education, environmental and other issues.

"There's plenty left to do," he said.

Under the census agreement, one the eight remaining spending bills for the new fiscal year — covering the Commerce, Justice and State departments — will be financed only through March 1999. The Census Bureau is part of the Commerce Department.

Financing those departments for just six months will put pressure on both sides to reach an agreement on the census by then. By then, the Supreme Court also might rule on lower-court decisions saying that scientific sampling is illegal.

The administration wants to use sampling to account for hard-to-reach people, who are often poor or minorities who tend to vote for Democrats. Republicans oppose the idea. Census results help determine congressional and state legislative districts, and how billions in government aid is distributed.

While the bargaining proceeded, the House and Senate passed a bill to keep agencies operating through Wednesday night. President Clinton signed the two-day stopgap measure while on a campaign fund-raising trip to New York, replacing one set to expire at midnight Monday.

Both sides hoped the latest short-term bill — the third

Menchaca named newest deputy city manager

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

First working at City Hall as a graduate student intern, Rick Menchaca has seen Midland rise from economic crunch of the oil bust to its current strong economy and retail boom.

On Oct. 1, Menchaca, 33, was rewarded for his years of service to the city with a raise and a promotion from assistant city manager to deputy city manager.

He now holds the same rank in the city hierarchy as Glen Hackler, the city's other deputy city manager. Like Menchaca, Hackler too held the title of assistant city manger before a promotion last spring.

Both men are in charge of the same areas of city operation, but can now also act with the authority of the city manager when Mike McGregor is not available.

While the economy may be flattening out, according to recent sales tax receipts, Menchaca has seen the city grow significantly since joining the staff full time in 1990.

During that time, Menchaca has seen the completion of the main lanes of Loop 250 between Big Spring and Interstate 20.

"That has served as a catalyst for retail development," Menchaca said.

The aggressive use of planned districts has allowed easier zoning for businesses along this new freeway while giving the City Council the means of protecing adjacent neighborhoods, he said.

In addition, previous planning placed city infrastructure very close to this prime commercial-use land, making Midland much more attractive to new retail businesses.

"This has given us an edge on the retail boom," he said.

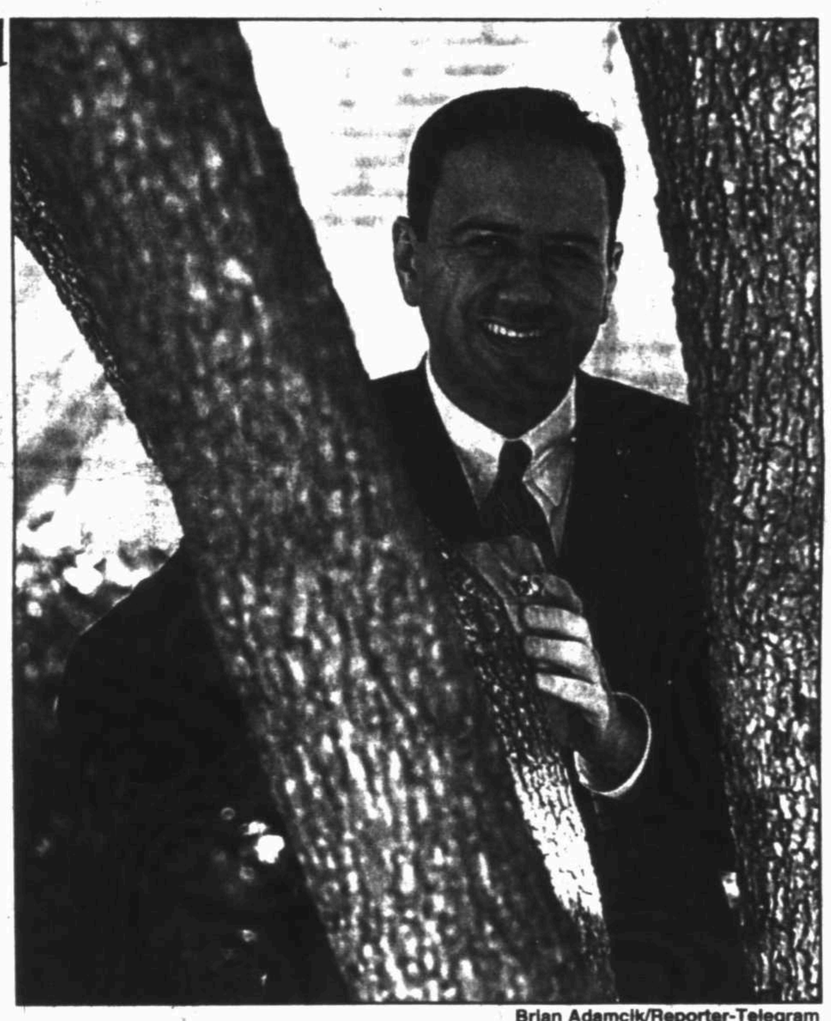

Menchaca said he is fortunate to work for Midland, a city where much of the management, both paid and elected, looks to the future rather than simply reacting to problems as they occur.

One of the most important steps taken by the city during his tenure was the legislative initiative proposed by the city and carried to Austin by Rep. Tom Craddick.

This allowed the city to place infrastructure, such as water/wastewater access, on raw land as needed by developers, but pro rates the cost of this to all the land owners.

Because of that, each subsequent developer can pay the cost of laying his portion of the infrastructure as he builds and connects to that infrastructure, making the process of development more fair than simply giving the whole bill for extending pipes or streets to the first developer.

U.S. envoy returns to Belgrade after securing bargain with Milosevic

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — With an agreement from the Yugoslav president to end his crackdown in Kosovo, U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke returned to Belgrade early Tuesday to continue the push for peace.

President Clinton announced Monday in New York that Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic had agreed to withdraw his forces from the province, initiate peace negotiations with separatist ethnic Albanians and allow an international observer force to ensure U.N. demands are met.

Clinton's announcement came shortly after NATO ambassadors meeting in Brussels, Belgium, authorized the use of airstrikes against Yugoslavia if Milosevic failed to comply with U.N. Security Council demands to end the crackdown.

Before leaving the Belgian capital, where he had flown Monday to brief NATO members, Holbrooke told reporters "we've had some movement ... in recent days and hours" and that he was returning to Belgrade "to see if we can build on that."

The Belgrade government had no immediate comment on the announcements in New York and Brussels.

Earlier, Holbrooke praised a proposal to allow 1,500 international observers to monitor Yugoslav compliance with U.N. demands to halt the violence in Kosovo, a province in southern Serbia, the main republic of Yugoslavia.

"We think that's a very positive, potentially positive development and we welcome it," Holbrooke said of the observer force, to be overseen by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Before Clinton announced Milosevic's agreement, a senior ethnic Albanian leader, Fehmi Agani, said in Kosovo that if the Yugoslav president agreed to such a force, it "could prove useful and provide a way out of the Kosovo crisis without further war." Agani is head of the ethnic Albanian team set up to negotiate with Belgrade authorities.

The NATO authorization of airstrikes transferred command over the airplanes and military equipment necessary for an airstrike to Supreme Allied Commander Wesley K. Clark.

Clark now can proceed in consultation with NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana to actually order the launching of planes and missiles.

Sergeyev said Russia, which as Yugoslavia's ally has tried to broker a deal that would avoid NATO intervention, was prepared to provide planes for controlling Yugoslav airspace, and consider participating in the monitoring force.

Holbrooke's mission to Brussels followed a flurry of diplomatic evacuations by Western nations from Yugoslavia.

An international diplomatic team left Kosovo for neighboring Macedonia, with the Russian members the last to depart. Sources at the American Embassy in Belgrade said all but 12 foreign staff were

Train kills six people believed sleeping on tracks

NORIAS (AP) — A freight train struck and killed six men believed to have been sleeping on railroad tracks early Monday in the south Texas scrubland.

The 105-car train was on its way to Brownsville from Houston when the accident occurred at 3:15 a.m. in Kenedy County, about 60 miles north of Brownsville, Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis said.

"When (the crew) saw the people lying between the tracks, there was no way they could stop," Davis said.

The train was traveling about 45 mph and took about a half-mile and several minutes to stop, said Letty Garza, a spokeswoman with the McAllen Sector of the U.S. Border Patrol. She said the train crew called her agency because they believed the victims were undocumented immigrants.

"The train crew saw some debris on the tracks," she said. "That next split second, they saw heads raise up and then six people were killed instantly."

An agent who happened to be working nearby heard the accident, Ms. Garza said.

"He heard the train, then all of a sudden he heard something — he described it as a loud slapping," she said.

The train eventually came to a halt and no cars derailed. The crew was interviewed by authorities and replaced, and the train continued about 7 a.m. to Brownsville, Davis said.

The 94 loaded cars were carrying mixed freight that could have included auto parts, lumber, scrap paper, scrap metal, grain and other items, he said. The computer list of exactly what was on the train is no longer available, Davis said.

Ms. Garza said the Border Patrol believes the men are undocumented

Houston researcher shares Nobel

Three Americans won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for discovering that the body uses nitric oxide gas to make blood vessels relax and widen — a finding that helped lead to Viagra and could also pay off in treatments for heart disease.

In addition, it has triggered research that could lead to new treatments for cancer and septic shock.

The prize, announced in Sweden, went to Robert F. Furchgott, Louis J. Ignarro and Dr. Ferid Murad. Furchgott, 82, is a pharmacologist at the State University of New York Health Science Center at Brooklyn; Ignarro, 57, is at the University of California at Los Angeles; and Murad, 62, is at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

They will split the $978,000 prize.

Yeltsin cuts short Central Asia trip with respiratory infection

ALMATY, Kazakstan (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin cut short a trip to Central Asia on Monday due to a respiratory infection, reviving questions about his health and ability to lead a country faced with economic crisis and NATO threats against its Yugoslav allies.

Russia has been leading a campaign to forestall airstrikes in Kosovo. Moscow's NTV station said it was a crucial time for Russia, when "presidential decisions" are needed.

There was no indication that Yeltsin's illness would sideline him for any length of time, and aides said the president would maintain his schedule for the rest of the week.

But after a series of health problems in recent years, including heart bypass surgery in 1996, every new ailment unleashes a flurry of speculation about the 67-year-old president's ability to function. The president insists he has no major health problems and will serve out the remaining two years of his term.

Yeltsin's aides said the president was taking antibiotics to ward off a bout of bronchitis and a mild 99.3-degree fever. There were no plans to hospitalize Yeltsin, who was expected back in Moscow late Monday night from Almaty, Kazakstan, a day earlier than planned.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin and Uzbek President Islam Karimov pose with Uzbek traffic police during a farewell ceremony at the airport in Tashkent, Monday. Doctors ordered Yeltsin to cut short his trip to Central Asia for health reasons Monday, and he agreed to return home a day early.

"The president has a cold and a cough. You're supposed to stay in bed when you have a cold," said Yeltsin's spokesman Dmitry Yakushkin.

Yeltsin's last reported illness was in March, when he had acute laryngitis that resulted in a bad cough, a hoarse voice and a reduced workload.

Yeltsin has never immersed himself in the day-to-day work of government, but has been even more distant than usual during the country's recent economic crisis — the most serious since the Soviet Union collapsed.

He has offered only a few, brief remarks on the turmoil and has not announced any plan for dealing with the crisis, leaving the job to the new government headed by Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov.

In a typical week, the president spends most of his time at his country home outside Moscow, venturing into the Kremlin on perhaps two or three days and usually for only several hours.

Yeltsin's public appearances consist mostly of televised footage showing him greeting officials in his office. The footage rarely lasts as long as a minute, and regularly shows Yeltsin and his guest engaging in small talk for the benefit of the cameras.

Yeltsin's opponents have long charged that his overall condition has deteriorated to the point that he can no longer work full-time. Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov renewed the call Monday for the president's resignation.

"Yeltsin is unable to work more than two or three hours a day," he said at a Moscow news conference. "He is even unable to review honor guards."

The president's foreign trips have been prone to misadventure, either because of health issues or unpredictable remarks from Yeltsin.

The trip to Central Asia, Yeltsin's first outside Russia since a visit to Britain in May, got off to a bad start immediately.

The president appeared stiff and stumbled when he arrived Sunday in Uzbekistan's capital of Tashkent. He had to be supported by Uzbek President Islam Karimov and canceled his other public events, saying he wasn't feeling well.

On Monday, Yeltsin turned up more than an hour late for talks with Uzbek officials and abruptly cut short a scheduled news conference.

Yeltsin read his brief statement in a strong voice, rarely raising his eyes from the text. He walked away unaided, but was closely flanked by bodyguards.

Shortly after Yeltsin arrived in neighboring Kazakstan, his aides announced he would be heading home a day earlier than originally scheduled.

Yeltsin went ahead with a meeting with Kazakstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev and sought to fit all of his planned meetings into Monday's schedule.

Yakushkin, Yeltsin's spokesman, said that based on his own observations, the president had begun to fall ill at the end of last week.

In step toward ending crisis, Japan adopts rescue laws

TOKYO (AP) — Japan took a big step toward ending its banking crisis Monday with the passage of laws allowing the government to take over foundering banks or shut them down.

The legislation establishes rules for how the government will deal with banks on the verge of collapse and establishes a public institution similar to the U.S. Resolution Trust Corp., created during the 1980s U.S. savings and loan crisis to buy and dispose of bad debt from failed lending institutions.

The new laws were the first half of a broader plan to strengthen Japan's debt-ridden financial system. A bill that allows the government to pour public funds into banks to induce them to lend more was expected to clear Parliament by the end of the week.

The package is crucial for cleaning up nearly $1 trillion in bad loans left by the collapse in the early 1990s of runaway real estate and stock prices. It is also a key step in Japan's efforts to overcome its deepest recession since the end of World War II.

The laws passed Monday established a framework for bank bailouts but didn't specify how much public money could be used. But lawmakers appeared to be close to an agreement on those details.

The ruling Liberal Democratic Party originally proposed using about 10 trillion yen, or $86 billion, but reportedly agreed with opposition parties over the weekend to increase the amount to $435 billion.

Toyoo Gyohten, a special adviser to the prime minister for financial affairs, said in Singapore Monday that the bailout could reach $522 billion. "Adequate public funds will be made available," he said.

Investors took the news as a sign the country is getting serious about fixing its financial problems. The benchmark Nikkei Stock Average surged 5.24 percent Monday.

Shoring up this country's banking system would provide a welcome relief for Japanese companies in need of credit, many of whom have been struggling with other problems. Unemployment is at a record high, bankruptcies are soaring and consumer spending is falling.

Japan's overall economy remains in the dumps and shows no sign of coming back anytime soon. The government's economic forecasting agency predicted last week that the economy would shrink by 1.8 percent this year, and the head of the agency said Sunday that it could shrink next year as well.

Under the new laws, a special committee will be set up to handle bank failures. The committee will take one of three steps: nationalize the bank temporarily through the government's purchase of its shares; order the liquidation of the institution; or transfer the bank's operations to a public "bridge" bank.

The laws cleared the upper house of Parliament Monday after passing the more powerful lower house on Oct. 2.

With Japan under pressure to turn around its economy and help Asian neighbors, the bills are a major victory for Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi and end one phase of a fierce dispute between his ruling party and the opposition.

The first test case of the new legislation will be the troubled Long-Term Credit Bank, which has been rumored to be on the verge of collapse since summer. LTCB, one of Japan's biggest lenders, is struggling under the weight of failed real estate loans.

Leftist confirmed as new German finance minister

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor-elect Gerhard Schroeder took firm control of his emerging government Monday, naming a traditional leftist as German finance minister and quashing a power struggle in the incoming administration.

Schroeder named Social Democratic chairman Oskar Lafontaine to the powerful finance post during the party's executive committee meeting, held apart from coalition talks with the future junior partner, the Greens.

Lafontaine was in line for the job after playing a key role in the left's Sept. 27 election victory. He had created a stir the day after the election by urging Germany's independent central bank to cut interest rates to spur the economy.

Lafontaine has also called for international cooperation to combat turmoil in financial markets and heavily influenced the Social Democrats' campaign platform with its planks for higher wages, lower working hours and a strong social welfare state.

But despite being viewed as an old-style leftist who strongly believes the state should provide for its citizens, Lafontaine has pledged the new government to strict fiscal prudence.

Palestinians say success of summit depends on Netanyahu

JERUSALEM (AP) — A senior Palestinian negotiator says the success of a peace summit this week near Washington depends on a clear-cut "yes" from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to an American initiative.

"It is time to deliver," Saeb Erekat told reporters Sunday night after a meeting of the Palestinian Cabinet.

Palestinians also were expressing growing unease over the naming of hawkish former Israeli general Ariel Sharon as Netanyahu's foreign minister.

Sharon, whose appointment last week was widely seen as a bid to keep far-right allies from toppling Netanyahu's government, has been quoted as saying he would refuse to shake Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's hand.

"It's worrisome," Erekat said. Previously, the Palestinian leadership had said the appointment was an internal Israeli affair.

Monday was a Jewish holiday and there was no immediate Israeli comment on summit prospects. However, the Israeli newspaper Yediot Aharonot said over the weekend that Netanyahu's hard-line Cabinet, due to meet Tuesday, was balking at agreeing to an American-authored plan for an Israeli pullback in the West Bank.

Erekat said the Palestinians hope the four-day summit, set to begin Thursday outside the U.S. capital, will mark the end of a long round of meetings and the start of implementation of accords.

"It depends on Mr. Netanyahu. If he says 'yes' to the American initiative and stops attempts to change the references of the interim agreement, we will reach an agreement in no time," Erekat said.

On the table is a U.S. plan for an Israeli troop withdrawal from 13 percent from the West Bank. The Palestinians accepted the plan, which includes security conditions they must fulfill.

The Israeli government has said it will only authorize implementing any deal after the Palestinians take a series of security-related steps, including disarming militants and annulling sections of the PLO charter.

In a statement issued after its meeting, the Palestinian Cabinet said it stood by an Israel-Palestinian security memorandum reached under American auspices in December 1997 that calls on both sides to deal with security in reciprocity.

"Security cannot be separated from the peace process. Real security comes through the implementation of the agreement," the statement read.

Also on the summit agenda are sticky points, such as a third troop redeployment, and outstanding issues such as the opening of a Palestinian airport and port and the status of Palestinian prisoners.

U.S. ambassador completes bottom-to-top trek of Britain

JOHN O'GROATS, Scotland (AP) — Sauntering down a country road, admiring sheep and cattle and glorying in a day of breezy sunshine is pure pleasure, but U.S. Ambassador Philip Lader made it part of his job.

Lader reached the northeast tip of Scotland on Monday to complete a walk across the length and breadth of Britain, trekking about 1,100 miles on odd three-day weekends over 11 months.

The conversations with Britons in bed-and-breakfast stops, in pubs and along the road provided some useful context for doing his job in London, Lader said.

But as he hiked the last few miles to John O'Groats, the northeast tip of Scotland, he admitted: "I really am glad to get this over. It has been 50-some days, many of which I should have spent with my kids."

Lader, 52, a South Carolina businessman who is a longtime friend of President Clinton, started his trek on the Friday after Thanksgiving, striking out along the North Coastal Path in Cornwall from Land's End.

Averaging 20 to 25 miles a day, he crossed the Severn River into Wales; past Tintern Abbey, which inspired a Wordsworth poem; then to the Pennine Way, into Scotland near Lockerbie, where a bomb brought down a Pan Am jumbo jet 10 years ago; and north toward John O'Groats.

The journey was inspired by Washington Irving, who served as U.S. Consul in Liverpool in the 19th century. In his "Sketchbook," which included the tale of Rip van Winkle and his impressions of England, Irving wrote:

"The stranger who would form a correct opinion of the English character must not confine his observations to the metropolis. He must go forth into the country; he must sojourn in villages and hamlets ... and cope with the people in all their conditions, and all their habits and humors."

Lader met scores of Britons who had been to Disney World, noticed the impressive number of American products sold at rural shops, and was surprised to find out-of-the-way schools staging "West Side Story."

He didn't always identify himself as the U.S. ambassador, content to be another American tourist in blue jeans.

"At night, it inevitably came out. I didn't try to conceal it. And with very few exceptions, it didn't change the tenor of the conversation," Lader said in an interview earlier at the U.S. Embassy in London.

The walk was part of Lader's effort to redefine the London ambassador's job, which he estimates involves spending about 60 percent of his time on trade, commercial and investment matters.

"So in that sense, having gone through 'Silicon glen' up around Glasgow and Edinburgh and to see what Motorola has going on there, and to go past Pfizer's plant and laboratories, provides some insights," he said.

Monday's final leg through the villages of Castletown, Inkstack, Barrock and Canisbay did not involve passing any industries. But the ambassador did earn one very enthusiastic greeting.

"Americans!" said a young lady named Linda who burst out of a roadside cottage as Lader passed by. Though a local girl, she was born in Michigan, she proudly told him.

Over nearly 11 months, Lader wore out an old pair of walking shoes, and got two new pairs well broken in.

And it certainly wasn't all bucolic.

"The worst day conditions-wise was a January day of hail, sleet and rain in the southwest of England, across Bodmin Moor ... and that's really where we were walking at 45 degrees, totally soaked the entire time, as cold as I have ever been in my life — including on Kilimanjaro or on Swiss peaks," he said. "That ain't fun."

Kosovo's ethnic Albanians find scarce refuge in Bosnia

By Susannah Nesmith
N.Y. Times News Service

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Sevdije Gashi left Kosovo a few days after her village was attacked and her home burned down by Yugoslav forces.

Though the timing is never good for refugees trying to escape such violence, it was particularly bad for this mother of three. She was about to have another baby.

"She was born on the bus to Bosnia," Gashi said, shyly showing off her gurgling three-week-old daughter. "My mother-in-law had just been arrested by Serb police. We had to leave."

Now Gashi's family of six — including he husband — lives in an abandoned Coca-Cola bottling plant in Sarajevo, eating, sleeping and crying together on the 10-by-10-foot square of floor that has become their home.

More than 1,000 other refugees live in the same factory, with no running water, no heat and no idea what their future holds, as winter looms and NATO officials debate military airstrikes to force Yugoslavia to end the seven-month conflict in the Serb province of Kosovo.

Bosnian government officials estimate 12,000 ethnic Albanian refugees from Kosovo have ended up in this country. But with about 800,000 of its own refugees to deal with three years after the war here ended, the government has been reluctant to help the Kosovars.

"It is the Bosnian government's responsibility to take care of these people," said a frustrated Melissa Ward, the U.N. High Commission for Refugees official in charge of the makshift camp at the Coca-Cola plant.

The government wouldn't let UNHCR install heaters or a kitchen in the camp, and officials have insisted the refugees be moved to another facility by the end of the month so work to rehabilitate the factory can begin. A left-over from Bosnia's communist past, the plant belongs to the government.

"We're providing all the funds, but the government isn't cooperating," she said. "We're only asking for assistance with the infrastructure, the water, housing facilities, healthcare. The government promised to send a doctor, but he never came."

While several government officials declined to comment on the situation, one official in the Bosnian ministry of public affairs said the government was doing all it could.

"The Bosnian government has problems of its own," the official said, asking that his name not be used. "The Bosnian government, the Bosnian people, we have a lot of refugees of our own to take care of.

"We cannot talk about is the situation fair, or unfair," he added. "These people didn't come here because they wanted to. They fled terrorism. But there's not much we can do."

In fact, Bosnia couldn't stop the Kosovo refugees from coming. Famous for being the only country in the world with no visa requirements for foreigners, much of Bosnia's border with Yugoslavia is controlled by Bosnian Serbs — who don't even require passports for people coming from Yugoslavia.

Without passports or money or family connections, the Kosovo refugees here aren't able to leave Bosnia. And the other countries of Europe haven't been willing to accept them, even if they did have passports and money.

"We are here, like in a trap," said Milazim Hasani. "We expected we could go somewhere from here. But where can we go?"

Hasani fled Kosovo with his wife and two children — one three years old, one 18 months.

"We hope NATO will take some steps. The best solution for us is to go back to Kosovo," he said. "But it seems like the international community is trying to make a situation like they did in Bosnia."

Hasani blames inaction by the international community for his problems, like many Bosnians did during the ethnic war here. But officials worry that it's too late for the international community to do anything in Kosovo that will help the people in the Coca-Cola plant.

"I think we need to find a solution for these people for the winter," Ward said. "You can't expect them to repatriate during the winter. They'll be here until spring at least."

UNHCR is working to arrange a different facility for the refugees in the Coke factory.

For now, 1,076 people take showers in a hut with seven stalls and only one small boiler to heat the water. They wash their dishes under a spigot of nonpurified water in the middle of a parking lot. They sleep on mats on the floor of the drafty warehouse with holes in the roof. Their children play with old Coca-Cola crates, and the garbage they find in piles around the camp.

"We are killing our children here," said Ibrahim Shala, a sort of mayor of the camp. "Look at our pavilions, with 600 people sleeping in one of them every night. There are diseases being spread around. Our children are in mortal danger here."

When no Bosnian doctor came to the camp, Dr. Lecaj Shukri, himself a refugee from Kosovo living with family in the area, volunteered to see patients in a makeshift clinic. After seeing lots of skin infections, diarrhea, dehydration and gastro-intestinal problems — even two cases of hepatitis — he wonders aloud "why we don't have an epidemic."

"The conditions here are very bad," he said.

The Kosovo refugees in the Coca-Cola plant are living in, by far, the worst conditions in Bosnia. But even here, they are better off than they would be in Kosovo.

Iranian foundation raises Rushdie bounty to $2.8 million

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Iranian foundation has raised its reward for killing Salman Rushdie to $2.8 million, firing its first shot at efforts by Iran's moderate president to distance his government from the bounty.

The move by the head of the Khordad Foundation was a striking show of the infighting within Iran's fractured government between hard-liners and moderates.

President Mohammad Khatami has been trying to improve relations with the West since he took office last year. His government said last month that it was distancing itself from the reward for the author's death.

"I, as the head of the Khordad Foundation, add $300,000 to the reward for implementing the edict," Ayatollah Hassan Saneii was quoted as saying by the Jomhuri Islami newspaper Monday.

The semi-official foundation initially offered $2.5 million to anyone who killed Rushdie, a British citizen whose book "The Satanic Verses" was claimed by Iran to be blasphemous to Islam.

The comments by Saneii were the first by the foundation since Iran's foreign minister told his British counterpart last month that his government was distancing itself from the bounty. Saneii is the representative of Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, in the foundation.

"To set a reward for killing Salman Rushdie has been a great honor for this foundation and we will keep this honor. We should not let this issue be forgotten," Saneii said.

On Saturday, a hard-line Iranian student group also offered $333,000 to anyone who kills Rushdie.

Frances D'Souza, head of Rushdie's defense committee, said "the fact that the original organization to offer the bounty has now reoffered it ... we obviously find extremely serious."

Speaking in London, she said, "there is no way that the organization is a private one. It is undoubtedly sanctioned by the government."

Study finds Canada's Indians rank low in living standards

OTTAWA (AP) — Though Canada is No. 1 in a U.N. quality-of-life ranking, a new government study suggests Indians on reservations in that country have living conditions lower than those in Mexico or Thailand.

For the past six years, Canada has topped a human-development index compiled by the United Nations on the basis of per capita income, education levels and life expectancy.

Canada's Department of Indian Affairs, applying the index specifically to aboriginals for the first time, found that the 380,000 Indians living on reservations in Canada would rank 63rd among the 173 countries in the U.N. index — about the same level as Brazil.

Indians living off the reservations came in 35th, equal to Russia, according to the study, which was made public Monday.

"This is not a surprise for us," said Phil Fontaine, head of the national assembly of Indian chiefs. "We live this every day. People have to be cautious about using the fact that we're No. 1, that Canada is the best place in the world to live."

According to recent government statistics, the life expectancy of Indians on reservations is seven years less than the national average, and income levels are about half the national average.

The United States ranked fourth in the U.N. study, behind France and Norway.

KOSOVO: Anan urges Milosevic to comply being evacuated to Budapest, and an embassy statement said personnel in "non-emergency situations" had left.

Holbrooke, who has met with Milosevic seven times in the past eight days for a total of roughly 50 hours, described his earlier overnight meeting with Milosevic as "intense, indeed, and at times very heated."

The Americans and Europeans are demanding that Milosevic halt the crackdown he launched against the separatist Kosovo Liberation Army. Ethnic Albanians represent 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people.

Hundreds of people have been killed and tens of thousands uprooted since Feb. 28 crackdown against ethnic Albanian rebels started.

Italy on Monday authorized the use of its military bases for any NATO raid, while the outgoing German government said it intends to allow German warplanes to participate in any attack.

In Paris, French Defense Minister Alain Richard said his country would provide around 40 aircraft for possible airstrikes, which could last "several days."

The U.N. Security Council demands include an immediate cease-fire, a withdrawal of special troops in the province, allowing refugees to return home and beginning talks with independence-minded ethnic Albanians on Kosovo's future.

The Pentagon continued its military preparations. Six U.S. B-52 bombers arrived in Britain on Sunday and a contingent of A-10 antitank planes flew from Germany to Italy.

The positioning of more U.S. planes within range of Yugoslavia and preparing them for attacks were clearly designed to convince Milosevic of Washington's resolve to force compliance with U.N. demands.

DEPUTY: Menchaca has seen city in bust, boom

(From 1A)

The year 2000 census should have Midland's population at greater than 100,000, but the city is already in compliance with most regulations that cover cities of that size.

About the only thing the city will have to consider changing when this happens is the collection and testing of storm-water runoff, Menchaca said.

The city will have to begin testing the rainwater that runs out of the city and measure it against pollution standards.

Above a certain point, the city will have to find ways to reduce the petroleum products found in the runoff water, he said. This could lead to some kind of city-administered recycling effort for oil and other petroleum products.

Regarding volume of waste, the city's solid waste is freed of 12 to 14 percent on average and up to 17.9 percent of its mass.

"Our recycling is the best in the nation," he said.

The city's water supplies are sufficient for the next 30 to 50 years, but city staff are always looking for ways to secure more water for the city.

"Water is such a precious commodity in this part of the country," he said.

The city's wastewater plant has been expanded by almost half in its capacity, which will be sufficient through the year 2020.

The city is currently testing its bridges to determine a schedule for infrastructure replacement and repair into the next century.

Some erosion is present around certain local bridge structures, but preliminary reports show that many of the older bridges will remain structurally sound for many years.

Over the long term, the city will need to work on improving access to railroad lines, including pushing for a future north-south rail lines and continue to increase and upgrade the highway infrastructure serving the city.

The aging of the city's infrastructure is a challenge for the future that is best met by planning today, he said.

In the short term, Menchaca expects high-speed, urban style interchanges along I-20 to be constructed, and believes it possible for that area to become the site of future development.

Economic development will come, as long as the city's leadership takes steps to keep taxes low and transportation available, as well as an educated work force available, he said.

Park land is important to any community, and currently the city is working to provide regionally placed large parks with ample fields for organized sports.

Past and current efforts are adding 25-percent to the city's park lands, he said.

In the near future, Menchaca hopes to balance these major parks with more open "green space" in developing neighborhoods.

Senior services will become more important in the future, as Midland draws more retirees and as the baby boom generation ages.

The city needs to help secure space and funding for expanded senior programs in the future, he said.

Menchaca views these future challenges without fear, because of one asset Midland has that some other communities lack.

It is the city's spirit of volunteerism that has kept the bachelor administrator in Midland all these years and continues to make him call Midland home, he said.

"We have one of the biggest volunteer (numbers) of any community," Menchaca said.

As he works with the city's parks, he is always amazed at the number of volunteers from sports organizations that take time to improve the facilities.

At many of the city's fields, Midlanders gather to pick up trash or to pick grass burrs from the lawns, he said, taking none of the credit for this volunteerism.

"This was cultivated long before I came here," he said.

Menchaca heads the city's budget team that oversees the overall city annual budget of more than $103 million.

This includes the general fund budget that is tax supported as well as the stand-alone portions of the city such as sanitation and water/wastewater that are supported through consumer fees.

Menchaca has been instrumental in administering a number of programs over the years. His responsibilities are in the administration of three departments including Community Services, Engineering and Development and Utilities.

Hackler oversees the other city departments including the Airport, Fire and Police departments.

Menchaca's responsibilities will remain the same under the new title.

NOBEL: UT-Houston researcher shares medical prize

(From 1A)

ter known as laughing gas. The researchers discovered that the body's own nitric oxide acts as a signal, telling blood vessels to dilate. That, in turn, lowers blood pressure.

The work already has inspired a treatment for dangerously high blood pressure in the lungs of infants. Babies breathe the gas.

"Now, finally this discovery can be put to use in treatment of numerous pathologies," said Ignarro, who was reached in Naples, Italy. "The future of pharmacology is in the creation of a superaspirin that will be fundamental in the prevention of heart attacks, of cardiovascular disease, of arteriosclerosis."

Scientists were surprised when Furchgott and Ignarro reported the findings in 1986. Nitric oxide was the first gas to be identified as a signal in the body.

"It was a sensation that this simple common air pollutant ... could exert important functions" in animals and people, said the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, which awards the prize.

The gas makes blood vessels dilate by relaxing the vessels' smooth muscles. It can help trigger erection of the penis the same way, because the relaxation lets blood flow in. Viagra was designed to work by blocking an enzyme that interferes with nitric oxide's effect.

The prize-winning work contributed "a small piece of information" to the development of Viagra, said Mariann Caprino, spokeswoman for Viagra maker Pfizer Inc.

Dr. Valentin Fuster, president of the American Heart Association, called the nitric oxide discovery "one of the most important in the history of cardiovascular medicine."

By showing the gas played an important role in the body, the researchers set off a cascade of studies that discovered other key things the gas does, Fuster said.

The wide-ranging results may pay off in new treatments for:

■ Atherosclerosis, a thickening of artery walls due to fatty deposits. Nitric oxide has turned out to be one of the body's main weapons against atherosclerosis, said Dr. Jonathan Stamler of the Duke University Medical Center and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute.

■ Septic shock, the dangerous drop in blood pressure caused by white cells pumping out too much nitric oxide in response to infections. Drugs that reduce the levels of active nitric oxide are being studied in people.

■ Cancer. White cells use nitric oxide to defend against tumors, and scientists are studying whether they can harness the substance's anti-cancer ability.

Murad, who worked independently of the other winners, called the Nobel announcement "a delightful surprise." Furchgott, reached at his home on New York's Long Island, said: "I'm very pleased. I truly wasn't sure I'd ever get an award like this. I wasn't sure that I deserved it."

Murad discovered in 1977 that nitroglycerin and related artery-widening compounds act by releasing nitric oxide. Furchgott later concluded that cells in the inner lining of blood vessels secrete some unknown substance that makes vessels dilate. Ignarro, working with Furchgott and independently, concluded this unknown signal is nitric oxide.

Alfred Nobel, a Swedish industrialist and inventor of dynamite, endowed the Nobel Prizes in his will. In later life, Nobel's doctor told him to take nitroglycerin — one of the ingredients in dynamite — for heart trouble.

"However, it would take 100 years until it was clarified that nitroglycerin acts by releasing nitric oxide gas," the Karolinska Institute said.

TRAIN: Men were immigrants, authorities believe immigrants.

"We did find a voter registration card from Mexico, but we're assuming they are all from Mexico," she said.

At the accident site late Monday afternoon, crushed cans of beans and packages of tortillas — remnants of the travelers' provisions — lay scattered among the cactus and mesquite trees.

The bodies were at the Nueces County medical examiner's office in Corpus Christi for autopsies, said Minnie Mendoza, a transcriptionist there.

A dispatcher with the Kenedy County sheriff's department said authorities were working to identify the men using fingerprints.

Davis said Union Pacific has worked with the U.S. Border Patrol and authorities in Mexico to discourage people from sleeping on train tracks. Some undocumented immigrants traveling into the United States, as well as transients, sleep between train tracks believing it will protect them from snakes.

"There is a great (misbelef) that if you sleep between the railroad tracks, snakes won't get you," Davis said. "Unfortunately, trains will."

Sleeping between the rails offers no protection from snakes, Kenedy County Sheriff Rafael Cuellar Jr. said.

Davis said the victims might have lived had they not raised their heads.

"There is clearance between the middle of the track and the car parts," he said. "There have been people known to have survived being run over a train because the train literally ran right over them."

Kenedy County is sparsely populated ranchland, dominated by the King Ranch. At least nine undocumented immigrants died of heat-related causes in the county this summer while trying to make their way north from Mexico.

BUDGET: Congress keeps government open

(From 1A)

— would be the last.

Twelve days into fiscal 1999, spending bills controlling about $500 billion worth of spending — nearly one-third of the federal budget — were still in play.

The administration has been demanding about $3 billion more, including $1.1 billion for hiring elementary school teachers plus money for dealing with climate change, aid to Russia and other proposals.

Republicans had been offering nearly $2.5 billion, but with some different priorities.

The GOP agreed to provide $1.1 billion states could use to hire teachers or take other steps to improve schools, but with language aimed at encouraging — but not requiring — communities to use the money for more teachers, said Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., chairman of the House Education Committee.

Republicans were opposing administration plans for school construction and for voluntary national testing of 4th and 8th graders, Goodling said.

The Republicans were also offering half the $46 million Clinton wanted for food safety and none of the $100 million he wanted for toxic waste cleanups.

Lott said differences remained over a number of issues: needle distribution for drug users in the District of Columbia; a Republican push for anti-drug programs; overseas family planning aid; aid to North Korea; and immigration.

Lott also said "a couple of words" stand in the way of agreement over Clinton's call for $18 billion for the International Monetary Fund. The two sides have generally agreed on conditions calling on the IMF to make its proceedings more open and to end its practice of below-market interest rate loans.

Just three weeks from Election Day, Clinton tried anew to keep his education demands in the public spotlight. Before leaving for New York, he prodded Republicans on an issue that polls show scores well for Democrats.

The White House and Republicans were also working toward agreement on a multibillion-dollar package of so-called emergency spending.

Clinton has proposed about $12 billion for modernizing federal computers, for farm aid, for supporting U.S. peacekeeping troops in Bosnia and for other proposals. Republicans have sought about $7 billion for defense needs, including $1 billion for anti-missile defenses and $1.5 billion for intelligence.

Other than approving the stopgap spending bill, the Senate spent a rare Columbus Day session with its members listening to each other give speeches.

After 70 years, Welcome Wagon to end home visits

Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — The Welcome Wagon won't be going out on the road anymore.

Ending a 70-year tradition, the Welcome Wagon will stop sending representatives out to knock on doors and greet newcomers in cities across the country with baskets of coupons, maps and other gifts from local merchants.

Instead, new arrivals, along with new parents and newly engaged women, will get a bound directory of coupons mailed to them.

Welcome Wagon's parent, Cendant Corp., blames the rise of two-career households for its dismissal of most of its 2,200 representatives.

"The world is changing. People are not home, moms are working," Cendant spokesman Elliot Bloom said Monday. "This is not an effective way to reach people."

Welcome Wagon got its start in 1928, and at its peak in the 1960s, representatives made 1.5 million home visits. But that has fallen to about a half-million visits this year.

"It's truly an American institution that is ending," said Dee Strilowich, whose baskets delivered to her new neighbors in Redding and Ridgefield, Conn., made her Welcome Wagon's top saleswoman the past two years.

Mrs. Strilowich, 58, said she makes many of her 900 annual home visits at night or on weekends, and experienced "very, very few refusals" when she sought appointments. She said she recalled getting a Welcome Wagon visit when her family moved to Connecticut 28 years ago.

Welcome Wagon will retain about 500 of its representatives to solicit merchants for the directories. Mrs. Strilowich declined an offer to take on a new role.

"I want to keep doing what I've been doing, and I feel very bad that I can't keep doing that," Mrs. Strilowich said She said selling an advertising book will not give her enough contact with people.

She has been a representative for four year, and is one of the few who do it full-time, earning enough in commissions and bonuses to qualify for medical benefits and a retirement account.

Cendant's holdings include real estate brokerages Century 21 and Coldwell Banker; the rental car agency Avis; and several hotel chains.

Gay student dies; suspects to face murder charges

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — A gay University of Wyoming student died today, five days after he was found pistol-whipped and lashed to a fence post in an attack denounced nationwide as a hate crime.

Matthew Shepard, 21, died while on life support, said the head of Poudre Valley Hospital, Rulon Stacey. Shepard had been in a coma since bicyclists found him tethered to the post in near-freezing temperatures outside Laramie, Wyo., on Wednesday.

"The family was grateful they did not have to make a decision regarding whether or not to continue life support for their son," Stacey said. "He came into the world premature and left the world premature and they are most grateful for the time they had to spend with Matthew."

Police have said robbery was the primary motive for the attack. But gay rights groups and others assailed the beating and called on Wyoming legislators to adopt laws to deter crimes against homosexuals.

"We are calling on all the people to have a renewed discussion to find out what we might do to strengthen our laws," Gov. Jim Geringer said today. The first-term Republican, up for re-election next month, hasn't pushed hate crime legislation in the past, but he said today, "I'm open to any suggestion that we might bring to our Legislature."

In Washington, White House press secretary Joe Lockhart said today that President Clinton was horrified by the attack and spoke with Shepard's family Saturday. He renewed the president's call for "some kind of a national standard, law, on hate crimes."

Before Shepard's death, Russell Arthur Henderson, 21, and Aaron James McKinney, 22, had been charged with attempted murder, kidnapping and aggravated robbery. Their girlfriends — Chasity Vera Pasley, 20, and Kristen Leann Price, 18 — were charged with being accessories after the fact.

A basket of flowers hangs from a fence post near Laramie, Wyo., on Monday, where gay University of Wyoming student Matthew Shepard was tied and beaten last week. Shepard died early Monday morning at a Fort Collins, Colo., hospital. Four people have been arrested and charged for the crime.

Sgt. Rob DeBree of the Albany County sheriff's office, a lead investigator in the case, confirmed today the charges would be upgraded to first-degree murder. He gave no details.

McKinney's girlfriend, Ms. Price, and his father, Bill McKinney, told The Denver Post that the two men never set out to kill the 5-foot-2, 105-pound Shepard. Instead, they said the two wanted to get back at Shepard for making passes at McKinney in front of his friends Tuesday night in a campus bar.

"I guess they (the people in the bar) knew that Matt Shepard was gay and maybe it got around that Aaron was gay or something," Ms. Price said in a story published Sunday. "Later on, Aaron did say he told him he was gay just to rob him, because he wanted to take his money for embarrassing him."

The elder McKinney said there was no excuse for the crime but the story had been blown out of proportion.

"Had this been a heterosexual these two boys decided to take out and rob, this never would have made the national news," he told the Post. "Now my son is guilty before he's even had a trial."

Friends of Henderson and McKinney said they were surprised by the allegations.

"They were quiet," said Heather Dunmire, 20, of nearby Rock River. "I wouldn't have expected them to do that. I never would expect another human to do that."

Henderson and Ms. Pasley live in a rural, windswept trailer park amid weeds, engine parts, fishing tackle and barking dogs. A neighbor, John Gillham, 21, said the couple generally kept to themselves.

About a thousand people attended a candlelight vigil Sunday night near the University of Wyoming campus to show their support for Shepard, who was a political science major.

"We are saddened, heartsick," said the university's president, Philip Dubois. "All of us I would imagine are haunted by the thought of a terribly battered young man with his future erased.

"It is almost as sad to see individuals and groups around this country react to this event by stereotyping an entire community, if not an entire state."

Shepard's parents said in a statement released before his death that he would "emphasize he does not want the horrible actions of a few very disturbed individuals to mar the fine reputations of Laramie or the university."

Shepard left Wyoming as a teen to finish high school in Switzerland. A friend said he had to overcome concerns about how his sexual orientation would be accepted before he returned to Wyoming — which is nicknamed the Equality State because it was the first state to let women vote, serve on juries and hold public office — for college.

"He had a lot of the same fears other people have coming into a small community," said Walt Boulden, a graduate student. "When he left Wyoming he had just started dealing with being gay. So he was very concerned about the attitudes when he first came back.

"But he really felt at home and comfortable here. He felt this was the place to be right now."

Subaru recalls Legacy cars

DETROIT (AP) — Subaru of America Inc. is recalling 20,306 Legacy cars and station wagons because of oil filters that could leak and cause an engine fire.

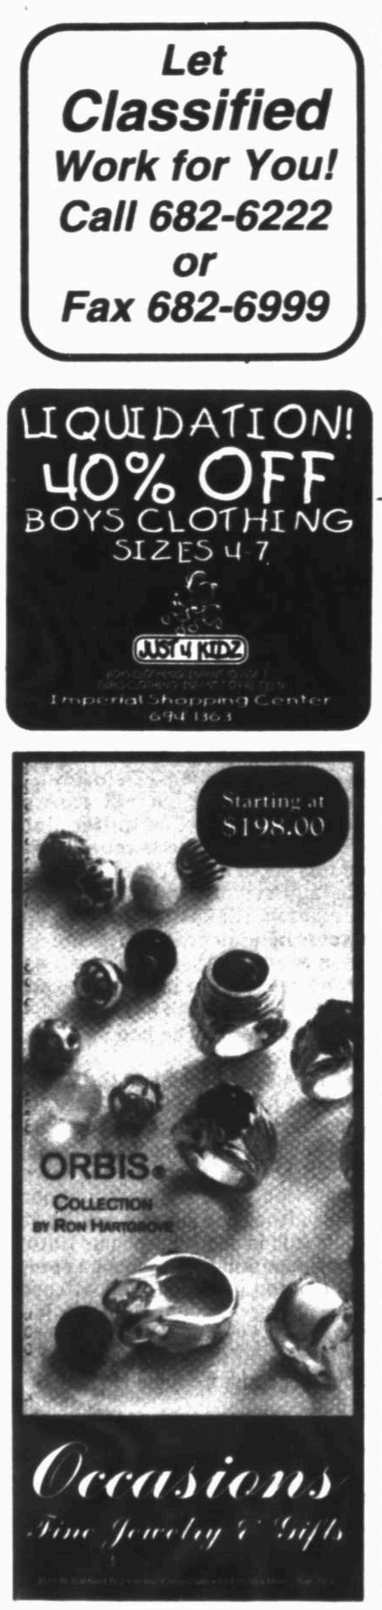

Eight fires have been reported, but no accidents or injuries resulted, Subaru spokesman Richard Marshall said Monday.

The recall involves original oil filters installed in the factory in 1998 and 1999 models.

The automaker also is asking owners of Legacy, Impreza and Forester vehicles who had their oil changed at a Subaru dealer between Jan. 21 and April 7 to have the filter checked.

Subaru oil filters that had part number 15208AA060 and were sold at dealerships also are affected. The filters were made by Purolator Products Co. for Subaru.

Region truly is world unto itself — and likes it!

West Texas, someone once noted, is not a place. It is, rather, a state of mind — complete with all the interesting characters, the beguiling land forms, the extremes in temperature and weather patterns, and the strangest happenings in the world.

West Texas, as was noted in the Associated Press articles by Mike Cochran and John Lumpkin in Sunday's Midland Reporter-Telegram, definitely is a world unto itself. And West Texans like it that way just fine!

In West Texas, people are exceedingly friendly. It is a characteristic of the people who call this land home.

There is even a long-ranging dispute over what area West Texas actually encompasses. Yes, Fort Worth has long been said to be "Where The West Begins," but any native West Texan knows that you are truly in West Texas when you have to drive for more than three hours on a Friday evening to get to the location where the high school football team is playing that night! It's OK. West Texans don't fear these wide open spaces.

What's more, you know you're in West Texas if high school football is more than an extracurricular activity and could actually be classified as a religion. In fact, it's right up there with college football and in some instances is considered far superior to the professional version.

It is almost certain you are in West Texas if there is nearly as much dust in the air as on the ground — and if you happen to be in an aircraft, you will see brown instead of green when you look at the earth below.

There is one other firm indicator that can tell people for certain when they are in West Texas. If the drivers of vehicles they are meeting on the highway wave to them as they pass, or stop to help them if they have car trouble, chances are they are in West Texas.

In West Texas, people are exceedingly friendly. It is a characteristic of the people who call this land home. Of course, the people who live here can also be cantankerous, humorous and downright indignant when the situation calls for it.

But, after all, this is West Texas — and it is a world unto itself!

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 13, the 286th day of 1998. There are 79 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 13, 1792, the cornerstone of the executive mansion, later known as the White House, was laid during a ceremony in the District of Columbia.

On this date:

In A.D. 54, Roman emperor Claudius I died, after being poisoned by his wife, Agrippina.

In 1775, the U. S. Navy took root as the Continental Congress ordered the construction of a naval fleet.

In 1843, the Jewish organization B'nai B'rith was founded in New York City.

In 1845, Texas ratified a state constitution.

In 1943, during World War II, Italy declared war on Germany, its one-time Axis partner.

In 1944, American troops entered Aachen, Germany.

In 1944, British and Greek advance units landed at Piraeus during World War II.

In 1960, Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy participated in the third televised debate of their presidential campaign, with Nixon in Hollywood and Kennedy in New York.

Ten years ago: Vice President George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis met in their second presidential debate of the 1988 campaign. Egyptian novelist Naguib Mahfouz was named recipient of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Five years ago: The U.N. Security Council voted to reimpose sanctions on Haiti unless military leaders there stopped violating a U.N.-brokered accord. The Philadelphia Phillies won the National League pennant, defeating the Atlanta Braves in game six.

It looks like we're in for another Great Depression

Don't worry about the stock market, the saying goes, just stay in it for the long run and you'll be OK.

OK, but how long is the long run? One should, as the old Greeks said, define one's terms. So just how long can the long run, run?

Reese

Well, thanks to David Feldman, a businessman retired from the stock brokerage business, I have an answer. In a letter to me, Feldman said, "Remember the long-term nonsense," he wrote. "After the market crash of 1929, the year the Dow Industrials peaked at 381, it was 24 years before stocks saw that price level again." And Feldman knows. He was there, through it all, and he thinks the new depression started in the early months of 1998.

He was also kind enough to supply me with a few quotes to share with you, so you can see just how wrong corporate big shots and economic experts can be. The market crashed in October 1929, but despite the crash, Americans were given this cheerful news about the promising new year, 1930, coming up.

"There are valid reasons to believe that the period ahead will round out a good year," said L.E. Pierson, chairman, Irving Trust Company. Wrong.

"I believe that 1930 will be one of the most soundly prosperous years in American history," said E.A. St. John, president, National Surety Co. Real wrong.

"There can be little that may indicate a serious or continued depression," said the president of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Extra wrong.

"Business is sound. The buying power of the country has been little impaired by the break in stock prices," said Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. Starting to hear little echoes?

"The general economic situation is thoroughly sound," assured A.W. Robertson, chairman, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. Talk about a misread of reality.

"A consensus showed that the New Year (1930) will be more prosperous than for some time, with every indication of an excellent 12 months from a business and financial standpoint," reported the 6th Federal Reserve District. Not to be.

"We believe with President Hoover that the country and its fundamental business conditions are sound," said W.W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. Gee, now where have I heard that?

And The New York Times reported, "Bankers say ... that the full year (1930) will prove sound. Authorities in all branches of business and industry agree that already indications of improvement are seen."

Must have been ghostly indications because 1930 and 10 subsequent years proved terrible. Feldman said that only German financial circles got it right, saying, "Majority opinion here looks for depression."

As Harry Truman was fond of observing, the only surprises are the history you don't know. So people who don't know history don't know how long the long run can be, don't know that all this talk of a "new era" is actually more than 60 years old. It was all said on the eve of the Great Depression.

President Clinton's recent "economic" speech at the Council on Foreign Relations was just banal baloney. His solution is still for Japan to restart its economy and "be the locomotive that pulls Southeast Asia." What in the (expletive) does this philanderer think the Japanese have been trying to do for the past five years? They can't restart their economy.

Batten down the hatches, folks. Life is an ever-repeating circle.

President hiding behind Hillary's pantsuits

It takes a village of women to defend Bill Clinton. That much is clear. Why do they do it? That's not so clear.

Men are nearly always more critical of Bill Clinton's behavior than women are. Some of the female defenses are tortured indeed. Toni Morrison, the novelist, for example. In The New Yorker she tries to focus on the scandal in terms of plot and character. She's smart enough to dismiss any comparison between the president and Achilles. She knows, as we do, that the part of the president's anatomy that's vulnerable is not his heel.

Fields

She finds raw and brutal comedy in the media commentators who lace the law with homilies as though they're Cotton Mather, but she must realize that Bill Clinton opened himself up to such sermonizing with his confession speech seeking repentance. True repentance would require an apology to Paula Jones, Kathleen Willey, Gennifer Flowers and several others we know about. Even Toni Morrison can't picture her hero in a hair shirt.

Toni Morrison plays the trump cards of sexism and racism. The president is a victim. "This is our first black president," she writes. "Blacker than any actual black person who could ever be elected in our children's lifetime."

What makes him black? He was born poor, into a single-parent household, plays jazz on the saxophone and overdoses on junk food. Discussing his sexual behavior is the equivalent of a body search. The message from white men to this "black man," as the novelist tells it is clear: "No matter how smart you are, how hard you work, how much coin you earn for us, we will put you in your place or put you out of the place you have somehow, albeit with our permission, achieved."

Her analogy is surely insulting to black men. Would she extend the specifics? Would she suggest that the president's abuse of Betty Curie, his black secretary, reducing her to an "enabler" if not panderer, is just like the ugly stereotype of a black man who abuses a black "sister" to get to a white woman? "For a large segment of the population who are not African-Americans or members of other minorities," she writes, "the elusive story left visible tracks: from target sighted to attack, to criminalization, to lynching, and now in some quarters, to crucifixion."

Analogies are always tricky, but the Morrison analogy offers insight into why so many women black and white defend this president. They see him as a boy who needs a mama to fight his battles for him. It's not his fault that the bullies are out to get Charming Billy.

The president ran from hiding behind his mama's skirts to seeking cover behind Hillary's pantsuits. Hillary, who turns everything personal into the political, sees her husband as the victim of slings and arrows of a vast right-wing conspiracy and people who despise Arkansas. Talk about writing fiction? Was it a right-winger who lied to the American people and the grand jury? Was it a right-winger who sent his minions out to defend a lie? Was it someone who despised Arkansas who sent Monica into the Oval Office to perform oral sex on the president while he talked about Bosnia to a congressman on the telephone?

Cynthia Ozick, one of the most intellectual of women writers, gets closer to the truth. Following Toni Morrison in The New Yorker she strikes the precise literary metaphor. Characters in the scandal are flat characters, depicting a single idea or quality, as defined by E.M. Forster: They are "recognized whenever they come in," "easily remembered," "not changed by circumstances."

Each person plays only one note. Monica seeks power sex. Betty Currie sacrifices integrity to loyalty. Hillary will say and do anything to maintain power. This elite village of women, devoted to their man, have all been engaged at one time or another in insuring that Bill, like a lovable puppy, will get his bone or his biscuit. Sad, but true.

Outsiders provide new perspectives on Clinton inquiry

Occasionally, in the heat of rhetorical battle, an outside voice can help clarify a contentious issue. Two such voices came to me this week. One was the voice of the House Judiciary Committee's chief Republican investigator, David P. Schippers. What makes him an outsider? He's a life-long Democrat who has a record of putting principle above partisanship and country before self-interest. It is as true now as it was 30 years ago when he was fighting organized crime and some of those in Congress were waving Viet Cong flags during antiwar demonstrations.

Thomas

The second voice is an older one. It is found in an ancient Proverb: "To show partiality in judging is not good: Whoever says to the guilty, 'You are innocent' — peoples will curse him and nations denounce him. But it will go well with those who convict the guilty, and rich blessing will come upon them" (Prov. 24: 23-25). Someone should hang this in the House and Senate chambers during the coming days of impeachment and possible trial of President Clinton.

Schippers succinctly and powerfully outlined the case against the president, listing 15 potential offenses against the law and his constitutional oath of office. All of it Schippers found "substantial and credible."

Democrats were reduced to substantially incredible defenses. None of them denied the charges, but all of them claimed the charges do not rise to the level of an impeachable offense. Democrats are in danger of becoming known as the party of adultery, kinky sex and moral relativity. Instead of cutting their losses and rebuilding their party on a foundation of integrity, Democrats risk going down with the ship and suffering titanic losses because of a debauched captain. It may take them a generation to recoup.

Schippers added an emotional conclusion, later stricken from the record, but reinstated courtesy of remarks by Rep. Bob Barr (R-Ga.). Schippers said, "You're not being watched only by the individuals in this room or even by the immense television audience throughout the world. Fifteen generations of Americans, our fellow Americans, many of whom are reposing in military cemeteries throughout the world, are looking down on and judging what you do today.

Is one man, Bill Clinton, worth destroying a party for or, worse, compromising a nation's integrity? That is what each Democrat will have to ask before casting a vote for or against the impeachment and removal of Bill Clinton from office. Republicans thought Richard Nixon wasn't worth that price, so they dumped him. They lost big in the 1976 election, but returned to fight for their issues and causes four years later and may be on the verge of winning complete control in 2000, which is what really alarms liberal Democrats.

Twenty-four years ago, the current ranking member of the House Judiciary Committee, John Conyers (D-Mich.), sounded like a much wiser man when he said this about impeachable acts during the Watergate inquiry: "By the same policies of secrecy and deception, Richard Nixon also violated a principal tenet of democratic government: that the president, like every other elected official, is accountable to the people. For how can the people hold their president to account if he deliberately and consistently lies to them? The people cannot judge if they do not know."

Conyers worried about the precedent the Watergate inquiry might set for future Congresses. He feared they might "recoil from ever again exercising this power. They may read the history of our work and conclude that impeachment can never again succeed unless another president demonstrates the same, almost uncanny ability to impeach himself. If this is our legacy, our future colleagues may well conclude that ours has been a pyrrhic victory, and that impeachment will never again justify the agony we have endured. It is imperative, therefore, that we speak to them clearly: impeachment is difficult and it is painful, but the courage to do what must be done is the price of remaining free."

Mr. Conyers, meet Mr. Conyers, or, better still, David Schippers, or, best of all, the Proverb writer who warned what happens to people and nations that refuse to convict the guilty.

Senate's Democratic women facing the fight of their lives

By John Howard
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif.— Female outrage at the all-male Senate Judiciary Committee's handling of the Clarence Thomas sexual harassment controversy helped propel three women to the Senate. But now Barbara Boxer, Carol Moseley-Braun and Patty Murray are struggling for second terms.

All three were elected to the U.S. Senate in 1992, the Year of the Woman. All are liberal Democrats. And all are in the political fights of their lives. The so-called Year of the Woman has been replaced in 1998 by the Year of One Woman — Monica Lewinsky.

And yet, there's no common thread to tie the three together. The impact of the scandal surrounding President Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky is an imponderable. But there is no question that Democratic bread-and-butter issues such as health care, education, and abortion rights have been overshadowed by the scandal.

"This campaign in many ways is a very surreal campaign. Nobody, or almost nobody, is focusing on the issues ... so I've got to do it myself," Boxer complained recently.

Boxer, Moseley-Braun and Murray all are vulnerable. This likely is due in part to the possibility the Democratic vote may be depressed because of the sex and coverup scandal. But it may be because of the upset nature of the women's victories.

■ In the state of Washington, Murray, who campaigned as a "mom in tennis shoes," has had lackluster job ratings since her election.

She faces a conservative Republican, Rep. Linda Smith, who has never lost an election and has a 35,000-strong volunteer army. The latest poll shows Murray leading narrowly, but a fifth of the vote remains undecided.

Like Boxer, Murray has been derided for her relative silence on Clinton's affair with the former White House intern. "She put on a pair of Hush Puppies when she took off her tennis shoes," Smith said.

■ In Illinois, Moseley-Brown, down 10 points in the latest polls, has been hammered with ethics problems ranging from allegations of misusing campaign funds, to criticism of a trip to Nigeria to visit the dictator Gen. Sani Abacha, who died this year. She was never convicted of any wrongdoing. On Monday, the Chicago Tribute endorsed her Republican opponent, State Sen. Peter Fizgerald.

■ In California, Boxer is in a neck-and-neck race with Matt Fong, a Republican perhaps best known for his legendary mother, Democrat March Fong Eu, who was California's top elections officer for two decades.

Fong has spent eight years in relative obscurity as an appointed member of a state tax board and as state treasurer, and at campaign stops, the balding, spectacled candidate jokes about his lack of charisma. The latest Field Poll showed Fong leading 48 percent to 44 percent with 8 percent undecided and a margin of error of four percentage points.

To win, Boxer, Murray and Moseley-Braun must galvanize their core supporters, the loyal Democrats and Republican women who helped put them over the top in 1992.

"What got them in was the Clarence Thomas matter in the fall of 1991. All were upset winners then," said GOP political consultant Tony Quinn.

This year, Quinn said, "they are all exposed to the hypocrisy charge, but Boxer more than the others because her whole career was built around sexual harassment."

The three benefited from the support of voters infuriated by hearings the male-dominated Judiciary Committee conducted in 1991 into allegations that Thomas repeatedly used suggestive language toward Anita Hill when she worked for him.

The enduring image of Boxer's political rise was captured by television cameras when she pounded on the doors of the Senate demanding that Thomas' accuser be heard. Thomas subsequently was narrowly confirmed for a seat on the Supreme Court.

Later, she took a lead role in denouncing then-Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who was forced to resign over allegations of sexual misconduct.

With 55 seats in the Senate, Republicans need just five more for a filibuster-proof majority, and Moseley-Braun, Murray and Boxer all are considered vulnerable.

Boxer, who is related by marriage to Clinton, was slow to criticize Clinton over the Lewinsky matter, finally speaking out after the president acknowledged the affair in a nationally televised address in August.

Even then, her comments paled in comparison with that of fellow Democratic California Sen. Dianne Feinstein, who said her faith in Clinton was "shattered" by his admission.

Like Boxer, Feinstein was elected to the Senate in the fabled Year of the Woman, though she is not up for re-election this year. She was running to fill the unexpired term of a Republican appointee, then ran again two years later for a full six-year term.

A record number of women were elected to Congress and state Legislatures that year, many inspired to run by the allegations that Hill, an Oklahoma law professor, leveled against Thomas.

In 1998, that momentum is gone.

Democrats sensing change in public sentiment

By Will Lester
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Three weeks before midterm elections, Americans disapprove by almost a 2-to-1 margin of the way Republicans are investigating President Clinton's conduct, according to a poll released Monday. And a growing number say they trust Clinton more than the Republicans to deal with the nation's problems.

Democratic politicians, sensing a shift in public sentiment after two gloomy months, say they have renewed hopes about the Nov. 3 congressional elections.

One Democratic challenger in the state of Washington, former Rep. Jay Inslee, has even targeted Republican incumbent Rep. Rick White for his vote in favor of an impeachment inquiry, focusing on it in a television advertisement.

"Thanks to the Republicans, it's a lot easier being a Democratic candidate now than it was a month ago," said Democratic pollster Geoff Garin, contending the impeachment investigation has been perceived as partisan.

But Republican politicians say they are content with their current approach: steadily pressing ahead with the impeachment inquiry, which appeals to their conservative voter base, while candidates appeal to swing voters in each district by talking about issues, not impeachment.

"My sense of the polling data is that the more knowledgeable people are about the (investigation's) details, the more likely they are to vote Republican," said Rep. John Linder of Georgia, chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee.

'Thanks to the Republicans, it's a lot easier being a Democratic candidate now than it was a month ago.'
— Democratic pollster Geoff Garin

And Republican press secretaries on Capitol Hill got a memo Monday from Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer's spokesman Ari Fleischer that said: "Media polls have a notoriously bad track record, they always understate GOP performance."

The Washington Post poll released Monday indicates more than half of registered voters, 51 percent, say they would vote for a Democrat in November's congressional elections and 42 percent say they would support a Republican.

The race among likely voters remains close, according to the poll, but Post pollster Richard Morin says Democrats have also taken a slight edge among likely voters in the last two weeks. Political campaigns take special note of likely voters in a midterm election, when voter turnout is often lighter.

Republicans have had an advantage among likely voters in polls over recent months, and a Newsweek poll released over the weekend indicated GOP candidates have kept that edge.

Clinton's standing in the polls has improved since early September with the release of a report from Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

Two-thirds of those polled by the Post, 67 percent, said they approve of the job the president is doing, up from 59 percent in early September.

And an increasing number of people trust the president more than they do Republicans to cope with problems faced by the country. The margin was 52-34. In early September, 43 percent expressed more trust in Clinton to deal with the nation's problems, compared with 37 percent who trusted Republicans more.

The Post poll of 802 adults taken Thursday through Saturday had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The Newsweek poll of 752 adults taken Thursday and Friday had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

In Washington state, Inslee is running in the 1st District that stretches from the Seattle suburbs across Puget Sound. He said Monday that he decided to use the ad focusing on White's impeachment inquiry vote after hearing repeated comments from scandal-fatigued voters.

"Let them make a choice between months and years of muck and mire," Inslee said. "If that's the direction you want the country to go, you can vote Republican. But if you want to get the Congress to buckle down and work on real issues, you can vote Democratic."

White said the impeachment probe "is the last issue in the world we ought to be playing politics with."

Democratic New York gubernatorial candidate Peter Vallone, who is trailing Republican Gov. George Pataki in the polls and in raising money, embraced Clinton in his newest campaign advertisements. His message: Acknowledge Clinton's mistake, forgive him and then "move on."

President shortens campaign swing after criticism

NEW YORK (AP) — President Clinton left behind his budget battle with Congress on Monday to jump into the campaign of one of the toughest and most expensive Senate showdowns of the year. Republicans lambasted him as "the part-time president" and "fund-raiser in chief."

Clinton flew to New York to raise $1 million for Democratic Rep. Charles Schumer, who is trying to unseat Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato. Schumer is a member of the House Judiciary Committee that will conduct the impeachment inquiry against Clinton, and Republicans have questioned the propriety of the president raising money for a lawmaker who will judge his conduct.

White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said the Republican complaint about Clinton's support for Schumer is not legitimate, saying, "I'd suggest there are probably members of the Republican leadership campaigning for Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee."

The president originally was to have campaigned in New York and Florida, but he dropped the southern half of the trip, assigning Vice President Al Gore as his replacement. The White House said Clinton wanted to keep a hand in the budget negotiations with GOP congressional leaders.

Clinton condensed his New York schedule Monday evening to four appearances in a four-hour span: two receptions to raise a combined $1 million for Schumer, one to raise $250,000 for New York gubernatorial candidate Peter Vallone and a speech at a gala for the G&P Charitable Foundations for Cancer Research.

The rearrangements followed complaints by Republican lawmakers on Sunday television talk shows that Clinton was leaving Washington for politics rather than staying to work on the budget impasse.

In turn, he accused GOP lawmakers of dithering with the budget.

Clinton's complaints echo those of congressional Democrats who accuse Republicans of handling the impeachment inquiry in a partisan manner and trying to use it for a boost in the Nov. 3 election.

In the latest twist, the Republican National Committee issued a press release with sarcastic congratulations for Clinton. "Today you have hit a grand total of 100 fund-raisers in 1998. No president in American history has spent so much time fund raising."

Vallone, who is trailing Republican Gov. George Pataki in the polls and in raising money, took the unusual step of embracing Clinton in his newest campaign advertisements. His message: Acknowledge Clinton's mistake, forgive him and then "move on" with the nation's business.

"In New York City and in New York state, we don't turn our backs on our friends," Vallone said, who is leader of the New York City Council.

Clinton said he was helping to raise money for Vallone because of his record on fighting crime, improving education and balancing budgets.

"I'm here not just because this man is my friend and he has stood up for me, but far more important, he has stood up for the people of New York City in an exemplary way," Clinton said.

Clinton said Sunday the election should not be a referendum on his presidency — "I'm not running," he said — but instead should focus on such issues as how to use the anticipated budget surplus.

The RNC countered: "Instead of doing his job and negotiating with Republican leaders to finalize the 1999 budget, President Bill Clinton is threatening to shut down the federal government and hopping aboard 'Fund-Raiser One' to New York City to raise campaign cash."

Efforts under way to prove effectiveness of herbal supplements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The herb industry is attempting to counter growing complaints about dietary supplements' quality and effectiveness by turning to science: A fledgling movement uses pharmaceutical-style testing to ensure consumers get what they pay for.

It might even turn some popular herbs into prescription drugs.

"We're trying to give people some rational basis" for choosing to take a particular herb, said Bernie Landes, chief executive of Paracelsian Inc., which hunts the active ingredients that make herbs work.

"We want to be the Underwriters Laboratory for herbals," said Elliot Friedman who heads competitor PharmaPrint Inc., which just announced its testing had discovered that five ingredients may help St. John's wort ease depression — not the lone ingredient advertised by most herbal brands.

Americans are expected to spend $4.3 billion this year on herbal supplements such as saw palmetto, gingseng and others that promise to do everything from lifting depression and shrinking men's swollen prostates to fighting colds and easing stress.

So far, there's little scientific proof behind many of the claims of better health.

And if an herb does help, consumers would need a "standardized" brand that carries a consistent dose of the ingredients that make it work. Just as wine varies from vineyard to vineyard and melons from one field are sweet while those from another are tasteless, an herb's dozens of mysterious ingredients vary depending on rainfall and other growing conditions.

"How do you know what to buy now?" Friedman asked. "I'm pretty knowledgeable and I get confused."

St. John's wort, for example, recently made headlines when laboratory testing found competing brands often don't contain levels of the active ingredient hypericin promised on the bottle. No brand advertises all four additional ingredients that PharmaPrint claims consumers also need.

Testing is "a step in the right direction," said Dr. H.B. Matthews of the National Institutes of Health, which organized a meeting last month where scientists demanded better quality from the booming industry.

Matthews cautioned that the companies haven't yet proved their methods work.

"It's interesting, it's alluring," agreed Mark Blumenthal of the nonprofit American Botanical Council. "But the proof is going to come in the clinical trials," in which the companies scientifically test their brands' true health effect and whether they're any better than regular herbal brands.

The two companies are running herbs through the same lab tests that prescription medicines must pass — called bioassays — to uncover just what biologically active ingredients they contain.

For example, certain test-tube experiments hunt whether chemicals interact with brain pathways involved in depression. If the experiments measure a response, that chemical is biologically active.

Then the companies contract with herb manufacturers to guarantee certain brands carry high levels of the most biologically active ingredients. American Home Products next month begins selling six PharmaPrint-tested herbs under its popular Centrum supplement brand: Echinacea, garlic, ginkgo, ginseng, saw palmetto and St. John's wort. Paracelsian promises competing brands early next year.

The companies also plan to seek Food and Drug Administration approval to sell the most effective herbs as prescription drugs, so doctors wary of the largely unregulated supplements could choose, for a little higher price, a fully tested medicine version.

PharmaPrint has begun clinical trials of its first drug candidate, saw palmetto, to measure whether men taking the herbal pills have their enlarged prostates shrink more than men who get a dummy pill. Company testing shows saw palmetto is biologically active; the question is whether the effect is big enough to help.

There already is some scientific data from Europe, where Germany sells herbs as drugs, that some herbs have healthful effects. That data prompted the NIH to finance a study starting this winter comparing St. John's wort to the prescription antidepressant Zoloft, to see which better helps moderately depressed Americans.

Such careful studies are new for the U.S. supplement industry, which has run largely on folklore.

But "to assume something the Seminole Indians used for maintaining the health of their prostate 500 years ago is identical to something in a bottle today — it really begs the whole issue of science," said Paracelsian's Landes.

Mars is place of violent winds, huge floods, researchers find

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Mars is a planet of natural violence far greater than is known on Earth, with winds gusting to 350 mph and evidence of immense floods that swamped vast areas.

"Mars is a small planet that does things in a very big way," John Pearl of Goddard Space Flight Center said at meeting Monday of the planetary division of the American Astronomical Society.

The water flow from one flood, says scientist Michael C. Malin, was 1,000 times greater than in floods that struck the U.S. Midwest in recent years.

Researchers analyzing pictures taken by the Mars Observer said that the red rock and soils of Mars are imprinted with marks of high-speed wind storms that cover virtually a whole side of the planet, and of waters that race out of dammed up craters at speeds of more than 100 miles an hour.

"The floods could have lasted for months," said Michael C. Malin, a research scientist on the Mars Observer team who analyzed one such flood. The water flow, he said, was 1,000 times greater than floods that have struck the U.S. Midwest in recent years.

The waters poured out of a high crater that towers over nearby flat plains and churned across the planet surface, rolling huge boulders and carving canyons in a matter of weeks. Eventually, the water slowed and spread out into a flat basin and turned into a mud flow.

Malin said the water then either evaporated into the dry Martian atmosphere or seeped back into the soil.

The water may have been the result of a massive impact from an asteroid, a mountain falling from space.

Malin speculated that an impact smashed far beneath the surface and created a large crater with raised sides. Subsurface water flowed into the crater, eventually creating a lake that he estimated to be 1,600 feet deep and the size of the state of Utah.

When the sides of the crater eroded away, the water was released in one massive spill and began flowing in 300-foot-deep cascades traveling at about 130 mph.

Satellite instruments monitoring a Martian storm and clocked winds that raged at 360 mph — almost five times stronger than a minimum hurricane, said Pearl.

He said the satellite observed one storm from start to finish. In just 36 hours, said Pearl, a small disturbance covering about 60 square miles grew to a monster covering more than 1,000 miles.

"It was like a small storm that grew up to cover all of the western United States," said Pearl.

It is the dust in the Mars atmosphere that may make its storms so violent, he said. The suspended particles capture sunlight and heat up rapidly, rising by about 20 degrees just after sunrise. The captured heat sets off a vortex of moving air that grows and grows until it dwarfs an earthly hurricane.

Other photos have captured dust devils like those frequently seen in American deserts. These whirling disturbances suck up dust and carry it high into the air. Though the dust devils lack the great violence, they help keep the Mars atmosphere filled with the red dust that absorbs sunlight and helps to energize the major storms.

Crime Stoppers programs lauded

Midland, Odessa win 10 awards at conference

By Rick López

Sheriff Gary Painter, right, looks on as Midland Sheriff's Office Sgt. Jim Crouse talks about the three Crime Stoppers awards Midland won. Crime Stoppers programs in Midland and Odessa won 10 awards together at an international conference held in Gillette, Wyo., officials announced Monday.

Just a warning to crooks: West Texas is not the place to dodge authorities.

Crime Stoppers programs in Midland and Odessa won 10 awards together at an international conference held in Gillette, Wyo., officials announced Monday.

Both cities competed against other Crime Stoppers programs in the United States and nine other countries, including those in Australia, Canada, Guam and Korea.

More than 480 programs participating in the conference were divided into seven categories based on their host city's population. Midland-Odessa competed against other cities in the 25,001-to-100,000 category.

Midland's program, sponsored by the Midland County Sheriff's Office, earned a first place award for most arrests and two third place awards for greatest dollar recovery and most cases cleared.

During a news conference Monday, Sheriff Gary Painter thanked the community for making the local Crime Stoppers such a success.

"The citizens have also done a fine job of calling in and letting us know of people wanted for felonies," Painter told reporters. Midland Crime Stoppers spokesman Sgt. Jim Crouse "has done an extremely good job at bringing in the participation of the media, citizens and law enforcement community."

People can help local authorities solve crimes by calling the Crime Stopper's 24-hour hot line, 694-TIPS, and reporting information they might have on a criminal investigation.

A cash reward is offered to people who divulge information on a high-priority case. Phone operators do not ask for the caller's name and do not use Caller ID, Crouse said.

Anyone who thinks they have witnessed something suspicious should call the hot line regardless of how insignificant their information might seem, he said.

"It's those little things that make the difference,"

BASIN BRIEFING

Air emissions

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' industrial plants reduced air emissions by at least 7 percent last year, according to a study by the state's environmental agency.

The state's more than 1,600 major industrial sources produced 2.5 million tons of air emissions in 1997 compared to the 2.67 million tons released in 1996, according to the study released Monday.

The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission also said older facilities, facing possible legislative action, reduced emissions by 4 ½ percent since 1986 — the last time they compiled this number — but still make up 36 percent of all air emissions.

"We are pleased to see overall emission reductions," said Ralph Marquez, TNRCC commissioner. "The reductions in emissions are even more significant when you consider the growth of the Texas economy during this period."

But Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said the TNRCC is minimizing the study's findings.

"They are trying to make it sound better that it is," said Truan, who is serving on a committee studying the issue. "That is a terrible amount of pollution in the atmosphere."

The older facilities are not obligated to meet Texas Clean Air Act requirements that the "best available control technologies" be used if they were built or being built before 1971. They were excluded, or "grandfathered" from stricter new laws.

The grandfathered plants created 899,614 tons of emissions compared to 1.6 million tons in 1986, according to the study.

Environmentalists said the study shows the need to close the loophole allowing the older facilities to ignore state air quality standards.

"The Legislature should require all these grandfathered plants to undergo a complete check up to see if they are affecting neighbors health," said Neil Carman with the Sierra Club.

The TNRCC measured the amount of carbon monoxide, nonmethane organic compounds, nitrogen oxides, particulate matter and sulfur dioxide for the study.

Some power industry officials have supported a voluntary program for removing the grandfather protection, and the 1995 Legislature instructed the TNRCC to draft such a plan for voluntary compliance.

"Obviously, I'm pleased that we have some decline in pollution," said Rep. John Hirschi, who serves on a legislative committee considering this issue.

But Hirschi, D-Wichita Falls, said some of the data on grandfathered facilities may be misleading, since emissions at some plants have increased.

"That's a gigantic amount of air pollution being produced by those plants," said Hirschi.

Hirschi said while he praised their efforts it is a continuing problem. "It's not like the material coming out of these plants is benign," he said.

Marquez pointed out that the study does not reflect a pledge by 36 companies to voluntary reduce emissions at grandfathered facilities.

County trying to settle who owns military supplies

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Surplus military equipment, including two armored personnel carriers (APCs), acquired earlier this year by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter apparently is under the control of the sheriff and not Midland County or the Commissioners' Court.

"It is strictly for defense and protection of officers and civilians if necessary," Painter said Monday following a Commissioners' Court meeting.

The court had asked County Attorney Russell Malm to research status of the equipment, which the sheriff obtained from the United States Department of Defense (DOD) in San Antonio.

"We can't sell it or give it away," Painter said of the $210,000 in surplus military equipment, which includes the APCs, vans, computer terminals, boots, helmets, and binoculars.

The equipment may be transferred to another law enforcement agency, Painter said. But, because it is on loan from the DOD, the equipment eventually must be returned to the federal government for disposals or further use.

"Who does the equipment belong to?" Commissioner James Brezina had asked. "Like (Commissioner) Louisa (Valencia), I'm really concerned about the liability. Who owns this equipment —

Author uses Bible as guide to health

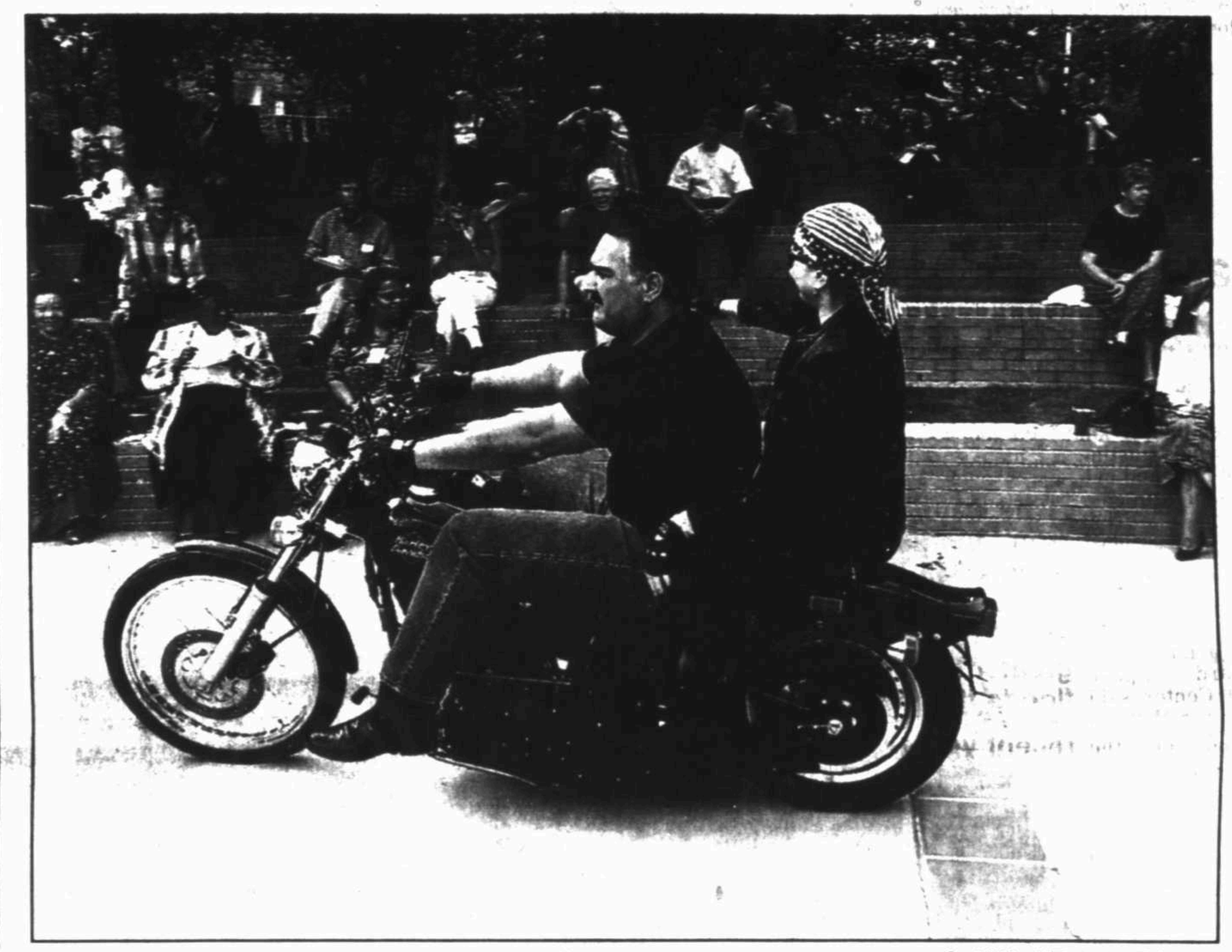

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Dr. George H. Malkmus, who is author of the Bible-inspired books "Why Christians Get Sick" and "God's Way to Ultimate Health," is to speak on "How to Eliminate Sickness" in a 9:30 a.m. Saturday free seminar at Midland's First Baptist Church.

In teaching health from a biblical perspective, Malkmus, who is approaching his mid-60s, is to reveal what the Bible says about diet and health and is to focus on "the diet God handed down to mankind" in Genesis 1:29. Therein, Scripture says, "And God said, 'Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the Earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed: to you it shall be for meat.'"

Malkmus, who is founder of Hallelujah Acres in Tennessee, is to depict consequences which mankind has suffered "by straying so far from this original diet." He is to suggest a regimen on how people can "maintain or regain" health by adhering to the diet cited in Genesis.

United Way campaign at 21 percent of goal

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

With a little more than two weeks left in the 1998 United Way fund-raising campaign, the United Way of Midland hosted a report luncheon to "rev up" volunteers for the final stretch.

After riding into Centennial Plaza on the backs of Harley-Davidson motorcycles, campaign co-chairwomen LuAnn Morgan and Susie Hitchcock-Hall announced that, officially, the campaign has collected $636,558 or 21.2 percent of its $3.001 million goal to date.

"I think the response has been amazing," said Carl Zapora, executive director of the United Way of Midland. "We were hearing that 'things are tough this year' but every single employee campaign has been positive, and corporate gifts have been strong. Every sign indicates we have a good chance of making our goal."

Ms. Morgan listed historical figures like Sir Isaac Newton, Albert Einstein, Thomas Edison, Walt Disney and Steven Spielberg.

"What did they have in common? They all failed at one time in their lives, but they kept pushing and never gave up," she said. "That's what we're going to do — we're going to keep pushing and not give up. We're going to meet our goal and surpass it."

Campaign volunteers have been separated into five teams: Red, Blue, Purple, Green and Yellow.

Members of the Red team reported that they are at 25.3 percent of their overall goal and have seen increases in a number of companies, including Hirschfeld Steel, up 29 percent, and Sam's Club, up 22 percent. The Midland Independent School District is expected to surpass its goal, with pledges at Alamo Junior High alone up 35 percent. The 44 employees of Henry Petroleum have raised $44,631 and Arco Permian has pledged an additional $10,000 above its corporate match if the company has 38 Gems of the Community — those leadership givers who pledge 1.5 percent of their annual salary or $1,000.

The Blue Team reported that to date they have raised 21.2 percent of their goal. Members have worked with Conoco, whose employees last year pledged $105,000 and have already raised $82,000 with only 75 percent of employee rallies held. The City of Midland, the team reported, is well on its way to surpassing last year's donations in excess of $9,000, and the Midland Fire Department has already raised $4,000 this year. Don't expect too much, and chances are you won't be disappointed

More rambling thoughts ...

— Overheard: "I might not be normal, but then nobody is."

— I could be wrong about this, of course, but I keep getting a gut feeling that some kind of deal is going to be reached in which President Clinton will be "censured" by Congress, but not impeached.

— But, hey, what do I know?

Ott

— This rather pragmatic view of self-esteem comes from author Winston Groom in his wonderful novel "As Summer Dies": "Sometimes he wished he had been born really handsome, but since that had not been in the cards, he had satisfied himself with being grateful that he was not ugly either."

— A few pages later, the same character from the same book was once again in a matter-of-fact kind of mood. The author described it this way: "Willie no longer aspired to the things most men want in life — love, wealth, fame and such. Or in any case he had long since reshaped them downward so as to protect himself against the rage and hurt of disappointment."

— I like that kind of attitude. If you don't expect too much, then chances are you'll never be overly disappointed.

— You don't seem to hear the word "bossy" as much as you used to, as in "My, isn't she in a bossy mood today?"

— Overheard: "Few minds wear out; more rust out."

— Good advice: When things are going good be sure to notice it.

— It is always interesting to receive a work-related telephone call, usually from someone who is quite unhappy, and hearing another voice in the background angrily telling the person on the phone what to say, causing that person to carry on two conversations simultaneously ... trying to placate the other person while at the same time continuing to chew you out.

— Few people, by the way, can pull that off without becoming terribly flustered.

— It was Agnes Repplier who first pointed out, "The clearsighted do not rule the world, but they sustain and console it."

— For what it's worth: If Dwight D. Eisenhower were still alive he would turn 108 years of age on Wednesday.

— It seems awfully mean to describe someone as looking "like something the cat drug in."

— A post office, especially one located downtown, is a common place to bump into people you haven't seen in awhile.

— Am I the only person who will admit he doesn't really understand the concept behind an HMO?

— It is a known fact that when a group of guys traveling in a car see a good-looking woman walking down the street, their heads will automatically jerk in her direction and a couple of tacky remarks will follow. My question is this: Do women, when spotting a nice-looking man, behave in the same manner?

— They do? Well, stop it girls! You're making me feel like a piece of meat. I want to be known for my mind.

— See how silly that sounds?

— And today's final quote comes from Kilgore Trout, alter ego to writer Kurt Vonnegut, who once described World War II as "civilization's second unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide."

Aggravated assault

A 20-year-old Midland man was injured in an aggravated assault early Monday morning after two teen-agers reportedly drove a vehicle into him before jumping out and kicking the downed man, according to police reports.

Emilio Rubio remains in serious condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Police have arrested Christopher Salinas, 17, and a 16-year-old male juvenile in connection with the assault.

According to police reports, Rubio and Salinas were arguing in the street near the intersection of Taylor and Colorado avenues.

Salinas remains in custody on charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Bond has been set at $12,550 for the aggravated assault and $500 for the weapons charge.

Oudems, 35, is described as a black male, 5 feet, nine inches tall, 200 pounds, black hair, brown eyes with a moustache.

He is suspected of walking into the store at 7:30 a.m. that day and demanding money from a cashier, displaying what appeared to be a handgun underneath his shirt, witnesses said.

Police have not released the amount of money stolen, but Oudems is thought to have fled in a red Toyota Corolla that was parked on the north side of the nearby Comfort Inn motel.

CRIME: Odessa won 7 awards for its program

(From 1B)

Crouse said. "It's all about catching the bad guys who do bad things."

Tips made this year have helped authorities clear a September shooting at the Spring Creek Apartments, where a group of men opened fire and riddled occupied units with bullets.

Crouse received information on that case a couple of days after the shooting and directed it to the Midland Police Department, which made three arrests in connection with the case, Crouse said.

Other large cases cleared by Crime Stoppers include a Feb. 24 break-in at Midland Sound, where several thousand dollars worth of stereo equipment was taken, the May theft of a $60,000 back hoe and the February killing of a local farmer's cow and bull.

This year, Crouse has helped recover more than $82,000 in property, $3,000 in narcotics and arrest 244 people — only 46 people less than the goal he set for January. It's not impossible, he noted. He still has three more months before tallying his final figures.

Despite the program's success, Crouse said there are still plenty of cases he needs to clear. He wants to help police arrest Johnny Madrid, a Midland man wanted on murder charges for the March 1996 slaying of his wife, Yvonne Madrid.

He also wants to help police find the person who killed Lula Belle Klingler, 92, at her Midland residence last September and the person who abducted a 15-year-old girl from the Riley's Bar and Grill parking lot and raped her out in the county.

Officials also announced Monday that the Odessa Crime Stoppers earned seven awards from the September 26 international conference, including three first-place awards for greatest dollar recoveries, best radio crime-of-the-week presentation and best newsprint award.

They also won three second-place awards for most arrests, best TV crime-of-the-week, most cases cleared and best newsprint crime-of-the-week.

Susan Rogers, Odessa Crime Stoppers spokeswoman, said the program has won 19 international awards since 1993.

"This definitely puts us on the map," Ms. Rogers said. "People will know not to mess with West Texas."

HEALTH: Author to speak

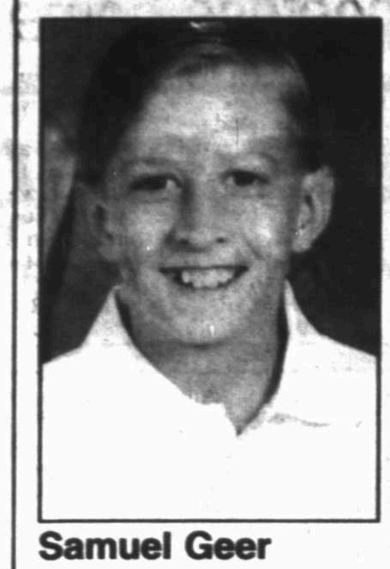

(From 1B)

"It's an important message," said Larry Satterfield, a Midland businessman and vegetarian who practices principles set forth by Malkmus. "God didn't design us to be sick. If we follow His rules, we should remain healthy most of our life."

In his "Why Christians Get Sick," Malkmus advocates the eating of natural and unadulterated foods and, especially, fresh fruits and vegetables. He warns against the ingesting of highly refined processed foods often laden with preservatives, taste-enhancers, including sugar, and devoid of many cell-building nutrients.

Of sickness related to unconfessed sin, Malkmus writes that "Repentant prayer will bring healing in this instance."

Vibrant is the best word to describe Sam. He was so happy with life that he could not contain it; his joy spilled out through the constant smile on his face. He loved to laugh, and make others laugh. He had a great sense of humor. Sam had a big heart, and was kind and compassionate to all. He wanted to be friends with anyone he met, he didn't care if they were young or old. Sam will be missed by his many friends.

DEAR ABBY

Guests get tongue-lashing for beating hostess home

DEAR ABBY: I am an 83-year-old widow and live with my divorced son. We are both in fine health and recently moved to a new community, where we're trying to make friends. I joined a bridge club and have met some very nice women.

Van Buren

One of the members was having trouble assembling some furniture she recently purchased. I offered my son's services to help her (he's very good at this sort of thing). For my sake, my son agreed, and we all settled on 11 a.m. My son and I drove to "Sarah's" and arrived at 10:55 a.m. No one was home. We decided to wait. At 11:15, Sarah drove up. She offered no explanation for being late. My son assembled the piece, Sarah thanked him, and we left.

A couple of weeks later, Sarah called and invited us to lunch as a thank-you for my son's work. Lunch was to be at 11:30. We arrived at 11:25 and, guess what? No one was home! We waited in the car. At 11:40, I wrote a note, "Did you forget you invited us?" I left it on her door and we drove home. When we arrived back home, there was a nasty message on my answering machine. Sarah yelled at us for leaving and called us rude.

When she called a second time, I told her I expected a hostess to open the door when I was invited and had arrived. She replied that we were early and could not expect anyone to be home when we arrived early. She said she had just run to the bank. I pointed out that the bank is open until 6 p.m. and she could have gone after we had lunch. She said maybe it is OK to be early where I come from, but not in this country. Abby, I was not born here, but I have lived in America for 50 years. I thought I was brought up with good manners, and nobody has ever said my "old country" ways are strange. Am I missing something?

— SURPRISED SONJA

DEAR SURPRISED: No. It's Sarah who's missing something — common courtesy. A host should be home to greet guests when they arrive, even if they're slightly early. Shame on Sarah.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment on something in Donna Williams' letter to you about guests in restaurants. She said, "Guests are our livelihood! Without them, we might as well be dishing out food at a school cafeteria, instead of practicing the fine art of restaurant service, one in which many of us take a great deal of pride."

Abby, I have been employed in school food service for 25 years. In every school cafeteria I have worked, the fine art of service to our customers has been practiced. We, too, take a great deal of pride in our work and in servicing our customers.

I am an assistant manager in one of the largest high schools in Alabama. We serve almost 2,700 students plus faculty and staff. We do not just "dish out" food. We service all our customers in a two-hour shift at eight food bars with a total of 16 to 18 entrees, plus fruits, vegetables, salads, milk and about 15 other beverages. We do take pride in our work, and we do serve good food.

Satisfied customers are as essential to us as they are to restaurants. Remember, if we don't satisfy them, they won't buy from us. I invite Donna Williams to our cafeteria any day, and I'll be happy to treat her to lunch.

—MARGARET SELLERS, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR MARGARET: Perhaps when Donna sees your letter, she'll stand corrected. She may harken from a time, as do I, when the choices in the school lunch program were fewer and less imaginative than they are today.

'Star Spangled Salute' named finalist in statewide competition

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — The Texas Downtown Association has announced that "A Star Spangled Salute" of Midland has been named as a finalist in the category of Best Promotional Event for the Texas Downtown Association's annual statewide awards.

The awards recognize outstanding achievements and contributions to Texas downtowns in the areas of building rehabilitation, new construction, adaptive reuse, store interior, community spirit, public space improvement, and promotional events. Awards are also given for best downtown management program and Downtowner of the year.

Winners will be announced at the TDA annual conference at the Windsor Ballroom in Abilene on November 12.

"We were very pleased with the professionalism of the judges this year," said Dina Stapleton, awards committee chairperson. "They brought a wide variety of perspectives to the table."

Judges included an international, national and statewide leader in downtown revitalization, a representative from Gov. George W. Bush's office, a nationally recognized authority on tourism specializing in Texas as a destination, an Austin architect involved with historical restorations and state of the art projects, and a representative from a regional magazine with national and international distribution.

The Texas Downtown Association, a membership organization, encourages the development, redevelopment and improvement of downtown areas throughout the state. Open to downtown organizations, neighborhood groups, government entities and individuals, the association provides a forum for members to exchange information about common experiences, needs, problems and solutions.

(From 1B)

27 percent above a year ago.

Members of the Purple Team reported they have held 39 employee rallies to date and 32 are scheduled for the next two weeks. Team members held a rally at West Texas Equipment in conjunction with the United Way of Odessa, the first joint rally in local United Way history — and West Texas Equipment has posted a 73 percent increase in pledges over last year.

Members of the Green Team, which is at 35.5 percent of its goal to date, are working with area foundations and concentrating on gaining 500 new Gems of the Community donors in order to meet a $150,000 challenge grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation. This team also works with the De Tocqueville Society, whose members give at least $10,000 individually each year and which hopes to increase its membership of 16.

The Yellow Team's members are working with state and federal employees as well as the youth campaign and employees of the United Way's 16 member agencies. Members reported that with only two state agencies reporting, state employees have raised $3,159 toward their goal of $12,000. They also said that the 16 schools participating in the youth campaign are expected to exceed their $7,500 goal.

The Yellow Team also oversees the United Way's "Bid The Basin" online auction at www.bidthebasin.com. To date, members say, $700 has been raised and new items will be added through October 28. Merchandise ranges from electronics to clothing, home, decorative and household items, foods, recreation and sports equipment, seasonal items, automotive equipment — including automobiles — to health and beauty products.

SURPLUS: Court has not formally accepted equipment

(From 1B)

the Sheriff's Office, the sheriff, or the county?"

Midland County Purchasing Agent Paul Thompson had expressed concern over how the surplus military equipment is to be inventoried and carried on county books.

The Commissioners' Court has yet to formally accept or acknowledge the equipment and is awaiting Malm's research into the matter.

All told, the Sheriff's Office has about $500,000 in surplus military equipment, including helicopters.

"I don't think we have accepted the helicopters," Mrs. Valencia said of the sheriff's three surplus U.S. Army jet-powered OH-58C Kiowa (JetRanger) helicopters, which the court has not budgeted for maintenance or flight. Only one of the helicopters is deemed airworthy; the others are for spare parts. Sheriff's Deputy-pilot Rusty Hill flew the airworthy Kiowa in the mid-1990s.

The Commissioners' Court routinely declines to fund operation of the airworthy helicopter and a smaller Hughes helicopter.

In other business, the court unanimously adopted a resolution for formation of the Midland Juvenile Council, which is to be appointed by the Midland County Juvenile Board that is made up of Texas district court judges for Midland County, Midland County court-at-law judges, and the county judge. The idea for the council, to serve as an advisory group, came out of a 1997 Midland County Grand Jury investigation into gangs and related criminal activity in Midland.

The Commissioners' Court also accepted a resolution commemorating the 90th anniversary of the founding of the 4-H Club movement in Texas for the character building of youngsters.

Representing the 4-H Clubs in Midland County were Pam Conry, 18, Melissa Conry, 15, Hoot Fox, 11, and Rhett Price, 9.

Pam Conry read the resolution, which cited the 4-H motto: " 'To make the best better' through the wise and effective use of the four 'H's representing Head, Heart, Hands, and Health."

Sherri Webb-Barton, who is the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's 4-H agent for Midland Count, thanked the Commissioners' Court for its continued support of the 4-H Club movement.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Oct. 13, 1998:
You'll always need to clarify, question and confirm information that comes your way this year. Confusion can come from out of nowhere and wreak havoc. Learn new ways of expressing yourself. Your ability to reach out will be greatly enhanced as a result. Creativity hits in waves; learn to maximize these periods of high inspiration. If you are single, romance takes many intriguing turns, but by 1999, you could find the right person. If attached, boredom will not be your complaint as the two of you take a roller-coaster ride through the tunnel of love. LEO is a true-blue friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Accept the limelight. Take unusual risks at home. Maybe it is time for you to tell it as it is, rather than playing games or trying to be a good sport. Clear the air, so you can set the stage for a new beginning. You have felt enough stress. Tonight: Work late if you have to.

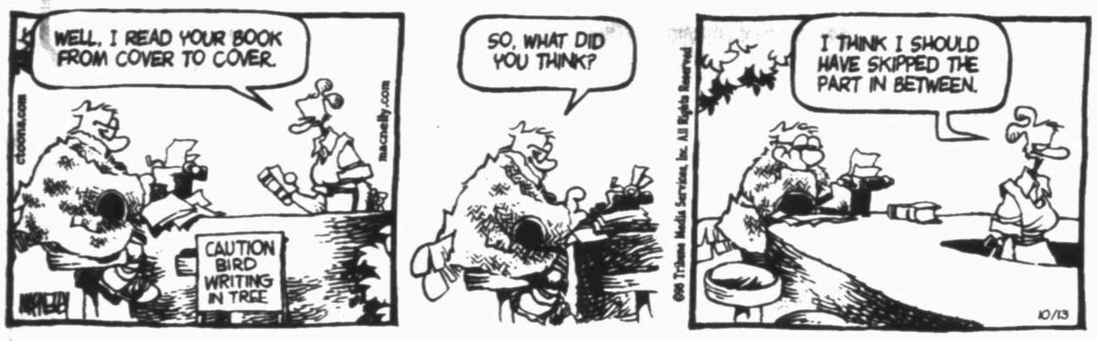

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Allow your imagination to take the lead. If you want to make calls and explore options, do so. Worry less about what else is happening. Stay secure, and let go of rigid ideas that cause you problems. Transformation counts. Tonight: Get out of work ASAP.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Pressure builds. You need to revamp a partnership on a financial level. What you thought would work actually will not. Be realistic, take responsibility and rethink bottom lines. Wildness marks personal interactions. Maintain a sense of humor with others. Tonight: A long-overdue talk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You shake your head, wondering what has gotten into others. Be realistic about your limits and desires. Awareness takes you to a new level; you find your goals and immediate circle of friends radically changing. Tonight: Go along with someone's plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Pace yourself. You are subject to fits and starts of energy. View a situation differently; what is happening nudges you along. Concentrate on getting the job done. Don't let others distract you. A boss observes you closely! Tonight: Do things for yourself.

Fortunes had changed for Trump Coup Tommy. Early in the year every rubber seemed to contain a hand where trumps broke badly and, as our readers are well aware, Tommy was an ordinary player who became a master of the pasteboards when faced with an evil trump break. But after a series of triumphs normal trump distributions became the order of the day, and Tommy's wallet suffered accordingly. Then this hand came along.

Note North's well-disciplined rebid of one spade because of a possible misfit. Tommy certainly did not underbid at his second turn, and North had no hesitation about leaping to slam with the singleton jack in support.

Declarer won the first trick with the ace and, realizing that only a poor heart division could endanger the slam, immediately ruffed a spade in hand. A heart to the jack was allowed to hold, and Tommy returned to hand with another spade ruff to lead the king of hearts.

East took the ace and switched to a diamond. Not wanting to allow East to get a crucial discard on a fourth spade, Tommy cashed the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club. Down to the same trump length as East, Tommy returned to dummy with a diamond to the queen and started to run clubs. It made no difference whether East ruffed immediately or dallied until being force to. Declarer was poised with Q 9 of hearts over East's 10 7, and easily collected the rest of the tricks.

Douglas to receive achievement award

LOS ANGELES — Kirk Douglas, who helped break the Hollywood blacklist in 1958, is the next recipient of the Screen Actors Guild's lifetime achievement award.

"In honoring Kirk Douglas, we pay tribute to a performer whose critically acclaimed achievements as an actor are matched by the strength of his personal character and integrity," SAG President Richard Mazur said in a statement Monday.

The award will be presented March 7.

Kirk Douglas helped break Hollywood blacklist in 1958.

Douglas has been nominated for three Academy Awards. In 1958, he insisted that credit be given to a blacklisted writer, Dalton Trumbo, for the screenplay of "Spartacus," a film in which he starred.

LOS ANGELES — Newly divorced, Laura San Giacomo says the NBC sitcom "Just Shoot Me" helps lighten her load.

"To go to work and laugh every day is great medicine, and it's a great way to live," the actress who plays Maya Gallo told US magazine.

San Giacomo divorced actor Cameron Dye this year after eight years of marriage. Their son Mason, who is almost 3, often joins her on the set of the comedy about the ups and downs of a fashion magazine.

"She has tunnel vision on that kid," said David Spade, who plays tart-tongued assistant Dennis Finch.

"That's why I like her, because she works really hard, and the second it's over, it's all kid." he said. "It's a lesson in parenting and growing up and everything that scares me in life."

———

IRVINE, Calif. — The reclusive Brian Wilson belted out "Surfin' USA" and "California Girls" during a rare live appearance.

The former Beach Boy joined Jimmy Buffett and his Coral Reefer Band on Sunday night at Irvine Meadows as Buffett wrapped up his summer tour.

A serious-faced Wilson, who just recorded a new CD, appeared slightly uncomfortable and raised his arms when he got a standing ovation.

Wilson, 56, lives most of the year in St. Charles, Ill., with his wife and twin daughters.

———

DUBLIN, Ireland — Prince Charles is donating one of his lithographs of Windsor Castle to benefit a hospital that treated victims of Northern Ireland's worst-ever terrorist attack.

The signed and dated lithograph will be auctioned Wednesday in support of County Tyrone Hospital in Omagh, where an Aug. 15 car bomb planted by Irish Republican Army dissidents killed 29 people and wounded 370.

"This is the first time a piece of art by Prince Charles has been auctioned anywhere in the world, so we have not placed a reserve price on it," said John de Vere White, Dublin's premier auctioneer of fine art.

Christie's London office has valued the lithograph at 2,000 to 3,000 British pounds ($3,400 to $5,100).

The heir to the British throne visited the hospital and the bomb-ravaged town three days after the attack.

———

NEW YORK — After four failed marriages, Barbara Walters is sticking to her promise of never again.

Walters denied a newspaper report that she's tying the knot with Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

"It's just not true," Walters assistant Monica Caulfield said.

Wedding bells for the "20/20" anchorwoman were reported Monday by the New York Post.

Although Walters and Warner "have been friends for many, many, many years," Ms. Caulfield said they were not planning to marry.

District 4-5A's 'Big 3' have returned

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

If last week is any indication, District 4-5A's "Big 3" is raising its ugly head again.

Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian all won district games to start a district season which many people had pegged as being too tough to call because of parity.

Why could one week of wins cause such a stir? Probably because the Big 3 has dominated the 1990s.

Each year a Big 3 school has won outright or tied for the 4-5A title.

Of the 24 UIL playoff spots won, 19 have gone to Lee, Permian or Cooper. Since 1991, at least two spots a year have been claimed by the Big 3. From 1993-96, the Big 3 swept all three spots.

With the exception of Odessa High in 1990 and 1997, the elder statesmen in 4-5A have not seen the postseason since 1959. In other words, the Big 3 have dominated their towns while repeatedly representing the district.

■ 4-5A Report

It used to be that the domination started with the cross-town game in the district's first week, but after Central was moved to District 3-5A this past February, it all changed. The cross-town game was moved to the end of the season.

However, this past week was unusual in that Cooper, Lee and Permian got a chance to get the Big 3's momentum going strong with games against the older schools. Lee beat Odessa High, Cooper defeated Midland High and Permian routed Abilene High.

"In order to get into the playoffs, teams like ourselves will have to line up and consistently beat a team like Permian, Lee or Cooper because they are in the playoffs all the time," Abilene High head coach Steve Warren said. "That is where we are trying to get and we'll have to beat one of them to do that."

Abilene High held a 14-0 lead over Permian at one point in the first quarter before Permian stormed back, outscoring the Eagles 42-3 the rest of the way.

Permian totaled 455 yards, including 337 on the ground. Running back Koefie Powell racked up 216 yards, and quarterback Leland Morris scored three times.

However, the statistic that counted the most was one — the number of wins after the first week. It was one more than last year at this time when Permian's fall from the Big 3 began with a loss to Odessa High.

"With fewer teams in the district, it is imperative that you come out of the chute," Permian head coach Randy Mayes said. "There is no doubt we beat a very good football team. There is a reason people are high on Abilene High."

One thing that coaches have pointed to this season is the parity around the district, and now that the Big 3 have made a first week statement, it may be parity that hurts Midland High, Odessa High and Abilene High. With fewer games,

Hamilton player dies

HAMILTON — A 16-year-old Hamilton linebacker has died of head injuries sustained after making a tackle in an Oct. 2 game.

Chandler Craig, who played middle linebacker and offensive tackle for the Hamilton Bulldogs, died Sunday night at Scott & White Memorial Hospital in Temple, where he had been treated since the injury.

"We're stunned and numb at the moment, but we're dealing with it the best we can," superintendent Gene Sheets said Monday. "We have counselors and we brought in ministers who know the town. The teachers and coaches have done a wonderful job helping the students cope with this."

A funeral was scheduled for Tuesday at the First Baptist Church in Hamilton, a town of 3,000 people about 60 miles west of Waco.

Chandler's father, Bill Craig, said his son "always had a smile on his face and a hug."

"He loved and understood people, and made them feel better about themselves," Craig told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "I feel like his generation will suffer a little bit because of the void he'll leave. He would have had so much to offer had he lived."

Chandler, known to his friends as "Chigger" because he was tough as the insect and just as hard to shake on the field, was an undersized junior who had been on the varsity team since his sophomore year.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

Braves avoid a Brown-out, go on to Game 6

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — Michael Tucker and the Atlanta Braves did what they had to do to stay alive in the NL championship series, staging a stunning comeback against no less than Kevin Brown.

With the Padres just five outs away from reaching the World Series for the first time in 14 years, manager Bruce Bochy's strategy to bring on Braves-killer Brown blew up when Tucker hit a go-ahead, three-run homer that sent Atlanta to a 7-6 win Monday night in Game 5.

Bochy's move looked good in the seventh, when Brown came on with a 4-2 lead, a runner on and no outs and retired the side. But now, after Brown faltered in just the third relief appearance of his career, the strategy will be heavily questioned.

Tucker's homer highlighted a five-run rally in the eighth that made it 7-4. Tucker drove in Atlanta's first five runs.

"It's a tough one, no question about it," Bochy said. "We said before the game if we had a two-run lead, we'd use Brownie. He had three days' rest.

"We had our best out there, but it didn't work out. Now we just have to go back to Atlanta," he said.

Pinch-hitter Greg Myers hit a two-run homer in the ninth off Braves reliever Kerry Ligtenberg, and then Atlanta manager Bobby Cox made his own unusual move — bringing in four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux from the bullpen. Maddux, who had not relieved since 1987, got three outs for the first save of his pro career.

Brown, who had been 6-0 with a 1.85 ERA in his last eight starts against Atlanta, was the loser. John Rocker won in relief.

The Braves still may have to beat Brown, who pitched a shutout in Game 2, one more time in this series. He had been scheduled to pitch Game 6 Wednesday against Tom Glavine, but Bochy said he'll probably use Sterling Hitchcock instead. Brown would be ready for Game 7 against Maddux, if necessary.

Either way, Atlanta already has made history. No team that trailed a seven-game series 3-0 had ever come back to win two games.

Brown didn't look nearly as sharp as he did when he won 3-0 on a three-hitter Thursday night in Atlanta. He walked Ryan Klesko leading off the eighth and Javy Lopez reached on an infield single.

Yankee Stadium should be rabid for ALCS Game 6

By Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — They'll be howling at Yankee Stadium tonight.

Howling in anticipation of New York's record 35th American League title. Howling to avenge last year's first-round loss to the Indians. Howling to get back at the Cleveland fans who taunted David Wells over the weekend.

"It's going to be crazy," Charles Nagy, the Indians' Game 6 starter, said Monday. "New York is up 3-2 and they are sensing something."

Wells, who put New York ahead Sunday with his second win of the series, fumed some more Monday, again blasting the fans at Jacobs Field who taunted him with references to his deceased mother. Wells also claimed they were rude to Yankees' families.

"Jeff Nelson's baby got hit with a pretzel, got beer tossed on him," Wells said. "That just goes to show you what kind of class Cleveland has — none. None at all."

David Justice practically laughed at the accusation. There's a reason Yankee Stadium is called the Bronx Zoo.

"Yankee fans — come on now," he said. "They can't get anymore rougher on us unless they show up with Uzis."

Not quite, David. No guns, just knives — Wally Joyner was hit in the arm by a knife thrown from Yankee Stadium's upper deck in 1986.

David Cone, New York's starter Tuesday in the sixth game of the AL championship series, is expecting a wild night.

"It's going to be a frenzy, no doubt about it," Cone said. "To me, Yankee Stadium is center stage."

After winning an AL regular-season record 114 games, New York has felt tremendous pressure to make it back to the World Series for the second time in three seasons. Anything less than a pennant would have been regarded as a failure.

STEWART DOREEN

This was a Wynn which could have been celebrated

No one could accuse Midland Lee Michael Wynn of savoring every bit of the moment, at least not on Friday night. Although someone might need to tell the sophomore he's allowed to.

Doreen

The backup kicker came off the bench to knock through his first varsity field goal. It was a 44-yard effort, which was Herculean considering his previous best was 29 yards as a freshman last year and because it came in the last minute of Lee's 13-10 win over Odessa High.

The last-minute shot was also one of the longest field goals in Lee history. The longest is 48 yards by Craig Kamradt (in 1983 vs. Trimble Tech). That mark came in a 23-6 win, which was a comparative blowout.

However, instead of relishing the moment under the Memorial Stadium lights, guess who was one of the first guys on the bus? That's right! Wynn.

No basking in the post-game celebration for this sophomore. No waiting for a pat on the back.

No rushing to the west side of Memorial Stadium to be revered by thousands of his newest friends.

No entertaining the many date options which tend to fly to a Friday Night hero.

No leading the Lee band in a joyful rendition of "Dixie."

Not this hero. Wynn was off the field before some of his teammates were finished shaking the hands of the victims to Wynn's kick.

"He grins once in a while," Lee head coach John Parchman said of the shy kicker. "He is a little sophomore and in awe of all that."

The "little sophomore," however, came through with a field goal effort that tied Cooper's Ryan Shahan for the longest in the district this season, and he did so on moment's notice.

Lee originally went out for the last-minute attempt with Matt Segulja ready to take the kick. Segulja made a 32-yard attempt in the game's first quarter. However, Parchman called timeout, and went with a gut feeling.

"Michael was having one of those games," Parchman said. "He was nailing his punts and had a 40-yard average. He was also booming his kickoffs. He was on a roll, and when it came time to kick a long field goal, that was a factor."

Actually, there was a little more to it.

"Plus his last name is Wynn (pronounced win)," Parchman kidded.

Celebration aside, Wynn's heroics did two things.

First, it was a fitting end to a good day on special teams, an area which Parchman was critical of one week earlier.

"We talked after the San Angelo game that we were playing solid on offense and defense," Parchman said, "but our kicking game left a lot to be desired."

"(Friday), we won every phase of the kicking game. It was a big factor in our favor."

Second, Wynn is another player coming through for Lee, another young player. Like the "Baby Backs," and a young offensive line, Wynn will be around for a while.

"He is another young guy making plays for us," Parchman said. "We would not be winning if we didn't have those guys."

More wins could result in a district title. Here's hoping they figure out how to celebrate it.

PREDICTIONS (Special high school and college edition): Despite scoring big points in the talent competition, OHS head coach Randy Quisenberry again falls short in his bid to win a homecoming title in Midland. Bulldogs stay undefeated at Memorial... Lee does its talking on the field this week, contains Arturo "Sneezy" Beltran and shuts down the rest of the Abilene High Eagles... Again, all expectations indicate that the best game will be in Odessa. If you like the forward pass, it will be. Permian will win. Roy, Koefie and Leland are just too good... Texas Tech, who deservedly moved into the top 25 with a 6-0 record, find out they are not a top 25 team with a loss to Colorado...

Report: Tyson has his problems, but can fight

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson has extremely low self esteem and is often depressed, but psychiatrists believe he is truly sorry he bit Evander Holyfield's ears and is mentally fit to return to the ring, a source told The Associated Press.

A report by a team of psychiatrists portrays Tyson as being uncomfortable with his superstar status and recommends that he undergo regular psychotherapy, a source familiar with the report said.

The source, however, told the AP that the report concludes by saying Tyson is "mentally fit to return to boxing, to comply with the rules and regulations, and to do so without repetition of the events of June 28, 1997."

The report says Tyson does not need any medication for psychological problems and is "highly motivated to avoid repetition" of the type of behavior that led him to bite Holyfield during their heavyweight title fight 15 months ago.

A team of six doctors who examined Tyson last month at Massachusetts General Hospital wrote the report, which was given to the Nevada State Athletic Commission just minutes before a deadline Monday. The examiners included a neuropsychologist, psychiatrist, clinical psychologist, two neurologists and a doctor-lawyer.

The report is scheduled to be made public Tuesday morning, but the AP was given some details of its findings under the condition that the source not be revealed. According to the source, the report recommends that Tyson "undergo regular psychotherapy with a goal of building trusting relationships and managing, understanding and managing his emotional responses."

But in response to the commission's main question, it says the risk of another major boxing offense is "low."

Earlier, Tyson's attorney said the psychological exams show that the former heavyweight champion is mentally and physically fit to return to the ring.

"He is sound mentally, he is sound physically, and he is sound neurologically," attorney Jim Jimmerson said Monday.

However, Jimmerson acknowledged that there are certain aspects of the report that Tyson would prefer the public not see.

"It is a hard-hitting report," Jimmerson said. "There are going to be things that talk about his innermost thoughts and innermost feelings."

Jimmerson said he reviewed the reports for two hours on Monday and turned them over to the Nevada Athletic Commission at 7:57 p.m. EDT, three minutes before the deadline for next Monday's hearing on whether Tyson will be granted a new boxing license.

The commission plans to release copies of the reports at 11 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

Jimmerson said the reports answer "in the affirmative" the five questions the commissioners asked the doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital to answer during their five days of evaluating Tyson.

The major question asked by the commission was whether the doctors believe Tyson is mentally fit to compete without having another incident like his biting of Evander Holyfield's ears. The other questions centered around Tyson's ability to handle stress and his current mental diagnosis.

Earlier Monday, Tyson lost a fight to keep the records out of public view. A divided Nevada Supreme Court refused to block a lower court's order that allows the documents to be made public once they are given to the athletic commission.

Though the court rejected the motion to keep the records secret, two of the five justices questioned why all the details of Tyson's psychological tests had to be revealed.

"Today's majority ruling unfairly and needlessly puts Mr. Tyson in a dilemma: He may choose, to his great personal and financial loss, to withdraw his application, or he must risk the embarrassment that may result from the unlawful release of confidential matters," Justice Charles Springer said in dissent.

But Justice Miriam Shearing, siding with the majority, said that Tyson was seeking a privileged license to box, and that the commission has no authority to edit the reports to keep embarrassing details out of public view.

Tyson issued a statement which indicated he was not happy the reports were released, but that he would do whatever he had to get licensed again.

"On numerous occasions I have apologized for my actions in the ring versus Evander Holyfield," Tyson said. "I am willing to do whatever the Nevada Athletic Commission wants me to do in order to regain my license to fight."

District Standouts

Offensive MVP

Koefie Powell, RB, Permian: The senior running back rushed for a season-high 216 yards and one touchdown on 28 carries in Permian's 42-17 win over Abilene High. Powell's running also allowed the Panthers to sustain long drive, which kept Abilene High's Arturo "Sneezy" Beltran off the field.

"He (Koefie) took it as a challenge. He knew there was another great back in the stadium and he wanted to prove he is one of the best backs in the state," Permian head coach Randy Mayes said.

Defensive MVP

Chris Brown, DB, Odessa High: The junior defensive back totaled 10 tackles and led the Bronchos defense which held Midland Lee to 187 total yards. OHS also kept the Rebels to under 100 yards in the air for the first time in three games.

City Standouts

Midland Lee

Offense: Cedric Benson: The sophomore running back got his first start Friday in Lee's 13-10 win over Odessa High, and had his moments with over 106 yards and one touchdown. He has over 300 yards and four TDs in his last two games.

"He is quickly becoming a factor, stepping forward and making things happen," Lee head coach John Parchman said. "Even as a sophomore he showed some maturity in doing things a back is supposed to do."

Defense: Sammy Hall: The senior defensive tackle played a big role for the Lee defense which held Odessa High 183 total yards and harassed OHS quarterback Rick Leach all night.

"He had his best game as a Lee Rebel," Parchman said. "He was in on nine tackles, jammed things up inside, constantly pressured the quarterback and ran to the ball really well."

Midland High

Offense: Raji Hickey: The senior wide receiver is one of the fastest athletes in the district and made the speed pay off with 145 yards and one touchdown on five receptions. That included a 84-yard catch and run in the third quarter.

"He had his best game, no question about it," Midland High head coach David Browning said. "If he catches the ball with a step on people, it will be difficult to catch him."

Defense: Chris Hicks: The junior strongside linebacker recorded 11 tackles (three for a loss) against Abilene Cooper and graded out the highest of any Bulldog.

"He is improving every week," Browning said of Hicks. "He is a physical player who is gaining confidence weekly."

Jags stay undefeated by edging out Miami

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The Jacksonville Jaguars keep winning close games, and that's the reason they're unbeaten.

Jacksonville started fast and finished strong Monday night, rallying in the fourth quarter to edge the Miami Dolphins 28-21. The Jaguars (5-0) have won four games by a total of 18 points.

Fred Taylor scored on a 77-yard run on the first play of the game, and Mark Brunell hit Keenan McCardell with a 56-yard touchdown pass with 2:36 to go. Brunell and McCardell also teamed up on a 23-yard scoring pass to tie the game with 12 minutes left.

"We made the plays when we had to make them," coach Tom Coughlin said. "It's a continuation of what's been happening all year long. We find a way to win."

Jacksonville, Denver and Minnesota are the only undefeated teams in the NFL. The Jaguars took a two-game lead over second-place Pittsburgh in the AFC Central.

Miami (3-2) fell one game behind AFC East leader New England, but coach Jimmy Johnson looked forward to a possible rematch against Jacksonville in the playoffs.

"I thought the offense did an excellent job," Johnson said. "If we build upon this and get better, which I think we can, you never can tell. We may be playing these guys again."

The Dolphins, who came into the game ranked last in the NFL in offense, squandered the best performance of the season by Dan Marino. He went 30-for-49 for 323 yards and two scores to help Miami control the ball for 39 minutes.

But Marino lost a fumble when sacked by Tony Brackens with two minutes left, ending Miami's final threat at the Jacksonville 38. Brackens, who both forced and recovered the fumble, was playing for the first time this season after returning from an ankle injury.

With the score tied and less than three minutes to go, Johnson gambled by letting Olindo Mare try a 54-yard field goal, and the strategy backfired. Mare was wide right, and McCardell beat Terrell Buckley long on the next play to break the tie.

"That's a new play for us this week," Brunell said. "You throw it up there and hope the timing is there. Fortunately the ball came down where it should."

A crowd of 74,051, the largest in the Jaguars' four-year history, watched Jacksonville win shorthanded in the first meeting between Florida's two AFC teams. Rookie sensation Taylor left the game in the third period because of a bruised shoulder, and receiver Jimmy Smith sat out the second half with a strained hamstring.

Garrett leads Cowboys' offense another week

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Jason Garrett gets one more week to lead the Dallas Cowboys then it's back to carrying a clipboard on the sideline.

Garrett, who has become the NFL's most efficient backup quarterback with a 3-1 record, was 14-of-24 for 287 yards and two touchdowns in Sunday's 27-20 win over the Carolina Panthers.

"I'm 99 percent sure Troy won't play this week," Dallas coach Chan Gailey said Monday. "What Jason has been doing is amazing. I can't say enough good things about him."

Troy Aikman had targeted the Carolina game for his return after he broke his collarbone in the second game of the season against Denver. Aikman's return will be on Monday night Nov. 2 in Philadelphia.

Garrett has taken the Cowboys (4-2) to victories over the New York Giants, Washington Redskins and Carolina. His only loss was to Oakland.

His quarterback rating has jumped to third in the NFC at 92.3 ahead of Brett Favre of the Green Bay Packers and behind Steve Young of San Francisco and Randall Cunningham of Minnesota.

"I'm just trying to take what the defense gives me," Garrett said. "I want the team to be in good shape when Troy returns. That's my job."

Wide receiver Billy Davis said Garrett, who is 5-1 lifetime as a starter, has always been underrated for his ability to throw the deep ball.

"First of all, Jason makes great reads and one of the throws he made to Ernie Mills was sensational," Davis said. "We have a lot of confidence in him until Troy returns. Jason can throw the deep pass."

With Garrett at the controls, the Cowboys have averaged 348 yards and 25.2 points in four games. Gailey said Garrett has stunned teams by being able to get the ball deep to Davis, Mills, Michael Irvin, and, on occasion, Deion Sanders.

"He does a good job of keeping the safety at home with his eyes," Gailey said. "He knows how much heat to put on the ball, whether to throw it hard or soft. He has a great touch. Sometimes a receiver will only be 15 yards beyond the line of scrimmage when he lets it go and it comes down in the receiver's arms 30 yards down the field."

When Wade Wilson left Dallas to go to Oakland, the Cowboys had to make a decision on a second quarterback. Could Garrett do the job if Aikman went down?

Owner Jerry Jones asked Gailey what he thought and Gailey opted for Garrett, who had spent five years with the Cowboys as a backup, mostly third string.

"I had high expectations for him," Gailey said. "He has really done the job."

Dallas came out of the Carolina game with some bruises for Sunday's game in Chicago. Running back Emmitt Smith may not practice this week because of a hip injury and Davis could miss some time with a foot injury.

NLCS: Tucker's homer forces San Diego to return to Atlanta

(From 1C)

With one out, Tucker lined a 3-2 pitch over the right-field fence to give Atlanta a 5-4 lead.

With the crowd of 58,988 sitting stunned, Tucker, who finished with five RBIs, pumped his fist as he rounded first and looked at the spot where the ball landed, as if amazed he really did it against Brown.

"It was a tough one," Tucker said. "I got a couple of tough strikes, fouled a couple off. Then I remembered something my father told me: 'You can't swing hard and hope to hit it hard.' I just got it nice and easy and got it out of the ballpark."

The Braves added two more runs off reliever Donne Wall, keyed by Tony Graffanino's double.

Ken Caminiti and John Vander Wal hit clutch two-out, two-run homers off John Smoltz, whose 11 postseason wins are the most ever. Caminiti's homer came in the first inning for a 2-0 lead and Vander Wal's in the sixth for a 4-2 lead.

Smoltz came in 3-0 with two no-decisions in five postseason starts when Atlanta faced elimination this decade. He beat Chicago in the division series for his 11th postseason victory, the most ever.

Vander Wal, acquired late in the season mainly because he hits Braves pitchers so well, broke a 2-all tie when he homered to left on an 0-2 pitch with two outs in the sixth. Vander Wal, hitting .438 lifetime against Smoltz, made his second start in place of Vaughn, San Diego's 50-homer man.

The Braves tied it at 2 in the sixth. Jones singled with two outs and stole second. The Padres chose to pitch to Tucker with Smoltz coming up, and he hit a tying single to center.

Smoltz allowed four runs and nine hits in 6 2/3 innings, struck out eight and walked one. Ashby gave up two runs and nine hits in six innings.

ALCS: Tensions figure to be high for Yanks and Tribe

(From 1C)

"Once you get to the World Series, I think you have accomplished what you want to accomplish," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "I don't think the anxiety is there as much in the World Series as there is now."

Yankees hitters certainly have been pressing. Since scoring five runs in the first inning of the opener, New York batters are just 6-for-39 (.154) with runners in scoring position.

"The first few games, I was trying to do too much," said Tino Martinez, whose ninth-inning double Saturday stopped an 0-for-19 slide.

Justice, taunted at Yankee Stadium with chants of "Hal-le Berry" (his ex-wife), agreed that Indians' fans crossed the line by bringing up Wells' mother, who died in January 1997.

"It hurt me, too," Justice said. "I hated that he had to go through that. But I mean, come on, we are talking about the Yankee fans. I have heard everything about my mother, everything about my history, too."

Justice, a diamond bracelet sparkling around his left wrist, came to Yankee Stadium to criticize ESPN, interpreting a report Sunday as saying he asked out of Cleveland's lineup in Game 5. Justice said he suggested to Indians manager Mike Hargrove he hit seventh instead of third, and that Hargrove decided on his own to take him out of the lineup.

Cleveland didn't work out Monday as the series shifted back to New York, but most of the Yankees showed up for batting practice.

"We left one jungle and we're coming to ours now," Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter said.

The mood in the clubhouse was loose. There were at least three golf bags in view. After overcoming a 2-1 deficit by winning Games 4 and 5, the Yankees regained their confidence.

In their minds, the series will end Tuesday night and the AL pennant will fly again from the flag pole behind Yankee Stadium's left-center field fence.

"We don't look at it as a chance to win one out of two," Jeter said. "We look at it as if it was Game 7."

Cleveland, which blew a ninth-inning lead in Game 7 of last year's World Series and lost to Florida, just wants to force this series to the limit. Then the Indians can try to get back into the World Series — which they last won 50 years ago.

4-5A: Smaller district gives schools a sense of urgency

every week is must win, and there are no cupcakes.

"You have to beat one of them (the games versus Lee, Cooper and Permian) aside from winning the other ones," OHS head coach Randy Quisenberry said. "Granted they are the Big 3, but you have to win the other games."

4-5A SCHEDULES: If realignment didn't do anything else, it sure led to some weird scheduling for District 4-5A. It starts with playing the cross-town game at the end of the year.

Also, there are a few quirks with the five-game schedule in that the Abilene teams travel to Odessa, Odessa teams travel to Midland and Midland teams travel to Abilene.

Permian will host its second Abilene team in as many weeks before going to Midland for two.

Odessa High will travel to Midland Memorial Stadium for the second straight week. Coincidentally, it will be OHS' second straight homecoming in the Tall City. Odessa High will then host Abilene teams in district weeks 3 and 4.

Lee makes the first of two trips to Abilene in consecutive weeks.

Midland High will host Odessa High and Permian in weeks 3 and 4.

"Mentally, we are going to be used to it," Permian coach Randy Mayes said. "We plan it ahead of time, get the scouting done and by time you get to the game, it is seems normal, although to the fans, it doesn't."

4-5A QUIZ: Permian is on track to have a 1,000-yard passer, rusher and receiver trio (QB Morris has 1,139 yards passing; RB Powell has 862 rushing and Roy Williams has 822 receiving)... Name the last school to have a 1,000-yard trio?

ANSWER: Permian in 1989 (QB Stoney Case - 2,029; RB - Chris Comer 1,589; WR - Lloyd Hill 1,519).

SO MUCH FOR RUNNING UP THE SCORE: After beating their first five opponents by an average of 43-8, it was unusual that a 13-10 win over Odessa High was good enough to move to the Midland Lee Rebels up two spots to No. 8 in the latest AP Class 5A poll. Aside from what recognition a ranking brings, Lee head coach John Parchman was indifferent about the move up.

"It is nice, but my goodness, you don't have time to think about that. You have to get to the playoffs," Parchman said. "We are involved with Abilene High and don't have time to put much thought in it. Being ranked in the top 10 certainly didn't have a factor in us beating Odessa High. If we dwell on that too much, it will come back to haunt us."

4-5A FACTS: PHS' Powell, AHS' Sneezy Beltran and Lee's Cedric Benson are the only backs to score TDs in every game this season... Beltran is the only 4-5A back to rush for 100 yards in every game... Benson became the first back to rush for 100 yards against the OHS defense... The 44-yard field goal by Lee's Michael Wynn to beat Permian ties Cooper's Ryan Shahan for the longest in the district this season. It was the first time Lee used a last-minute field goal to win a game since John Parchman took over as head coach in 1995... Abilene High is leading the district in penalties (52) and penalty yards (376).

Supreme Water offers new EcoWater softener

New water softener costs hundreds of dollars less

If owning a top-quality home water softener has been your dream, but you could never afford one, your dream could now become reality. Supreme Water is introducing EcoWater's new 1500 E/D series, which costs up to $900 less than their popular 3000 E/D series. That's a saving of almost 43 percent!

Supreme's Mike Ruther says the EcoWater 1500 series has more features and is of better quality than most softeners in its price range sold by discount and home improvement stores. Here are a few of the quality and money-saving features of the EcoWater 1500 series:

1. Electronic demand control module. Most units regenerate at a set rate, no matter how much water you use, which could waste salt and water. The EcoWater 1500 has a built-in memory that tracks usage and regenerates only if it needs to do so to meet the next day's probably usage. If your water use increases when you have guests, your EcoWater softener will work harder to provide all the softened water you need.

2. Countercurrent brining. By regenerating the resin bed from the bottom up rather than from the top down, it pushes the hardness out the top. Because hardness concentrates at the top, this action pushes it out without contaminating the resin below. This action saves salt and water.

3. Automatic bypass during regeneration. Soft water is temporarily unavailable during regeneration, which is factory-set for 2:00 a.m. (it can be changed if necessary). If you need water at that time, the bypass valve allows you to run what you need.

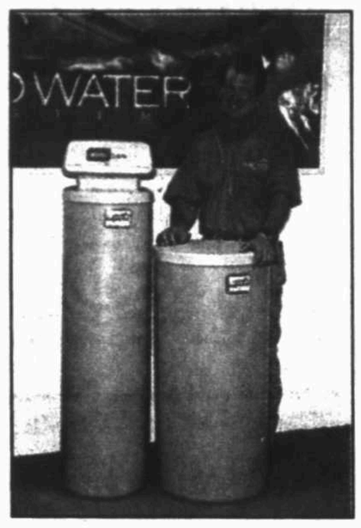

4. Heavy duty mechanical valving. The valves are built to withstand lots of use.

The 1500 series has a service flow rate of up to nine gallons per minute, plenty for most household uses.

When you're comparing EcoWater to those off-the-shelf types, there are some important things to remember, says Mike. "Our price includes the unit, installation and all needed parts, for houses which are pre-plumbed for a softener. In stores, you'll probably pay extra for those items. Plus, their installation is usually done by a subcontractor whom you may never see again."

Supreme does their own installation, service and warranty work. If your home is not plumbed for a softener, they can do the plumbing as well. Owner Duane St. Clair is a master plumber, and Supreme Water has two journeyman plumbers on staff, all of whom only do plumbing related to water systems. Their goal is to keep you as a customer. "Water softeners and RO systems are all we do," says Mike, who himself has been certified as a sales representative by EcoWater.

Supreme Water Treatment has been locally owned and family operated since 1981. They sell and service EcoWater systems, both reverse osmosis and whole house water softeners. They service most softener brands. The phone number is 570-1220.

EcoWater's new lower-priced systems are making soft water affordable to many more people, says Supreme Water's Mike Ruther. Call Mike at 570-1220 for a free estimate.

AMI Services staff combines years of experience in heating, air conditioning and plumbing. Let them put their old time business attitude to work for you. Call them at 570-8105.

Have AMI service your heater now

Once the weather turns cold (it has to do that sometime), everyone suddenly realizes their furnace or heat pump needs service. That can put a strain on service companies, so why wait? Call AMI Services now, sign up for a convenient service contract and get ready for a winter of comfort.

AMI is a division of locally-owned Alpine Mechanical, which has done air conditioning and plumbing in the construction field for approximately five years. This new division will service those same areas in residential and light commercial applications. AMI's technicians combine for many years of experience in HVAC and plumbing.

When you buy a service contract, you save money in several ways. The $99 price includes both a fall heater maintenance visit and a spring air conditioner maintenance visit, which saves you $39 over paying for them separately. The service contract also saves you 10 percent on parts and labor for other heating, air conditioning and plumbing work done by AMI Services. Plus, when you're a service contract customer, your call receives priority status 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Regular maintenance helps your unit last longer and work more efficiently—saving you money on utilities and postponing the time your unit must be replaced. Some manufacturers require annual maintenance to keep the warranty in effect. AMI's maintenance check for gas furnaces includes testing for deadly carbon monoxide (CO) which can escape into your home if the heat exchanger is leaking. Furnace service also includes cleaning or replacing the filter, oiling the blower motor if needed, and a variety of other checks. This gives your AMI technician the opportunity to spot any potential problems before they cause a breakdown in December or January's cold.

If you have a heat pump, the service includes checking your unit's refrigerant charge along with a long list of other checks. If refrigerant is low, your heat pump won't heat properly, causing your unit to rely on the more expensive electric heat strips—costing you money.

AMI's technicians bring a wealth of experience to the job. John Redman comes from Service Experts, David Romero was with Greer's and Maurice Wilder was previously with Alpine Air.

You'll get a fair price from AMI Services, with no sales games or hidden costs. For service, which they provide on all major brands, they charge by the hour, not by the job. By-the-job costs often are higher, to compensate for the occasional time when a job presents unusually difficult challenges. Charging by the hour benefits most people.

AMI is a new company with an old time business attitude. Their goal is to keep you satisfied and comfortable.

Locally owned AMI Services is a division of Alpine Mechanical. They provide heating, air conditioning and plumbing service in residential and light commercial applications. They also service commercial ice machines, coolers and freezers. AMI offers service 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Their phone number is 570-8105.

You'll smile when you see everything's 10-60 percent off

Way Out West's Fall Price Shootout starts today

Move over Summer, Fall's comin' and there ain't room in this town for both of ya. To make room for Fall, Way Out West is having an old-fashioned clearance sale October 13-17, with everything in the store 10 to 60 percent off its already low regular price. During this Tuesday-through-Saturday sale, Way Out West will be open 10-7 every day.

Save 60 percent on clay pots (planter types with a drain hole in the bottom). Cantera garden figures are also 60 percent off. Save 40 percent on decorative clay items. Brightly decorative talavera pots are also 40 percent off, as are wrought iron furniture items. Standard pine Mexican furniture is 40 percent off.

There are great savings on Mexican-pewter, too. Picture frames are 30 percent off, and other Mexican-pewter items are reduced by 20 percent. Comfortable leather furniture is 25 percent off.

Everything else in the store (except for silver jewelry) is at least 10 percent off. Thomas and Pat just have to make room for all the fall and Christmas items arriving.

Speaking of which, lots of chimneas have moseyed into the store. Chimneas lend some south-of-the-border charm to patios, and they lend some welcome-anywhere warmth when you build a fire in them. Way Out West has some chimneas on wrought iron stands, to make them useful even on decks. These are 20 percent off right now.

Mix old and new by storing those CDs in a wormwood cabinet. One of these might make a great Christmas gift, too.

Yes, it is not too early to look at the Christmas selection and do a little dreaming. Pat Schneider is particularly excited about their selection of Mexican-pewter serving pieces including dip dishes and charger plates. You can also get matching place settings.

Looking for a unique Christmas tree ornament that says "Old Mexico" all over it? Sift through the brightly colored ornaments at Way Out West.

New pewter and talavera crosses have arrived—if you enjoy collecting these charming pieces, there's probably one just waiting for you.

Add old west charm to your front door with a weathered-looking bronze door knocker. Pull handles of the same look would be perfect on the dresser in that young cowboy's room.

Pat and son Thomas suggest you compare prices—you'll see what bargains even the regular prices can be. Layaway is available with a down payment of one fourth.

Help run Summer out of town and save as much as 60 percent this week during Way Out West's inventory reduction sale, October 13-17.

Way Out West's Summer stock, like the clay pot in front, must go to make room for new items. Thomas and Pat Schneider have marked current stock down as much as 60 percent to make room for such pictured items as Christmas tree candle holders and new wormwood furniture like the chest and the CD cabinet on the right.

Way Out West Trading Company is owned by Molly Clark, her brother, Thomas Schneider and their mom, Pat Schneider. They carry rustic pine, mesquite and wrought iron furniture as well as Talavera, pewter and other decorative items imported from Mexico. They are located at 301 East Illinois. Hours are 10-5 Tuesday through Saturday. The phone number is 682-2580.

Earl gets ambitious with Jib's tender catfish

Note: Awhile back, Slim and Sally Sue started a computer business, with Earl and Effie helping out sometimes. Today, Earl is at a seminar entitled, "Start Small and End Up Like Donald Trump."

"So we see," said the speaker, "that to fastest way to grow your business is to do what you enjoy doing. Then growing your business will be a great pleasure."

He continued, looking for audience participation. "Someone tell me what you most enjoy doing."

Earl's hand shot up. Unsuspectingly, the speaker called on him.

"Eating fried catfish at Jib's," Earl said, excitedly.

With an irritated frown, the speaker replied, "Sir, lunch isn't for another hour. Please answer the question."

"No, really," Earl insisted, "Jib's catfish is really good!"

"You don't say," the speaker said, rolling his eyes.

"Oh, I do say. I think it's because they start with farm-raised catfish, then cut it into strips by hand. After that, they roll it in their specially-seasoned corn meal—but they don't cook it until you come in and order some, so it's hot, fresh and crisp when you eat it."

"Okay," came the reply from the podium, "Just how do you propose to grow a business by eating catfish?"

"Well, Jib's owner Joe Harper does. Plus, along side that tender, flaky catfish he puts a big slice of buttered Texas toast, steaming hot hush puppies, golden French fries and a choice of fresh green salad or Cole slaw with Jib's special tangy dressing."

"Mister Harper does not make a living eating catfish, he makes a living selling catfish so you and others can eat it," the speaker pointed out. "A business must do something for which others will pay."

That night, Slim asked Earl what he'd learned that could help the business. Earl reported on his Jib's discussion.

"Are you serious?" Slim demanded. "I pay for you to go to a business seminar and you come back talking about eating Jib's catfish?"

"Calm down, I have it figured out. Ya'll have some desktop publishing software on those computers. Well, I'll start a newsletter for Jib's catfish lovers. It'll be called Jib's Caftish Today, and it'll have info about Jib's golden-fried catfish."

"Why would people pay to read about it when they can go to Jib's and enjoy the real thing?" Slim asked.

"We could put one of those scratch and sniff things so people could get that mouth-watering catfish aroma wherever they are. We could mail it out to people that don't live around here any more. They'd pay to remember Jib's catfish."

Slim shook his head. "I should pay to have my head examined for thinking you'd bring back a good idea from that seminar."

Located at 3316 W. Illinois, just north of Dunlap's, Jib's features steak fingers, chicken fried steak, chicken strips, deep-fried pork chops, catfish, shrimp, barbecue, smoked sausage, St. Louis style ribs and more made-from-scratch Texas fare. Their hours are 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and until 9 p.m. Friday. Call ahead for carryout orders at 699-3008.

New legislation puts money in your pocket

Have you ever found money in your pockets or purse that you didn't realize you had? It's a great feeling to have a "windfall" of extra cash.

Millions of Americans are experiencing that same feeling as a result of new tax and spending legislation recently passed by Congress. When the dust finally settled, Congress agreed on landmark legislation that provides the biggest tax cut in 16 years and is projected to balance the budget by the year 2002.

The legislation is intended to cut taxes $151.6 billion over the next five years. It includes $35 billion in education tax credits, tax credits for people with children, lower estate and capital gains taxes, added health coverage for thousands of poor children and deficit reduction. In addition, proposed changes to Medicare are aimed at saving $115 billion over five years.

Van Pearcy

Amid the haze of media coverage and political rhetoric, however, most of us simply want to know how this legislation will impact us. In essence, it will affect almost every area of our lives, from buying a home to paying for our children's college education to planning for our retirement.

Investors keep more of what they earn. This legislation is good news for investors. The top rate for capital gains taxes was reduced from 28 percent to 20 percent for assets held longer than 18 months. For securities purchased after the year 2001 and held at least five years, the top rate will be 18 percent. This break for assets held five years rewards investors who employ and buy-and-hold strategy.

In addition, the package contains a break for homeowners. You now won't have to pay capital gains on the sale of your home if the profit is below $500,000 and you file jointly. Single individuals may exclude up to $250,000 of gain upon the sale of a home.

And, the legislation increases the estate-tax exemption from $600,000 to $1 million over 10 years. For the owners of qualified small businesses and family farms, the exemption is immediately raised to $1.3 million.

New Twists on an old favorite. The tax breaks associated with the Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) have expanded substantially. The package lifts the adjusted gross income (AGI) limits for tax-deductible contributions for those who are covered by a retirement plan at work. The new "phase out ranges" (the AGI range where deductibility is phased out) is $80,000 - $100,000 for couples by the year 2007 and from $50,000 - $60,000 for individuals by the year 2005.

In addition, the legislation paves the way for some new IRAs. You'll now be able to make contributions to a Roth IRA. Although contributions to the Roth IRA are not tax-deductible, all earnings grow tax-deferred. Distributions from the Roth IRA are tax-free and penalty-free if they meet the following criteria. First, the distribution must be taken at least five years following the first taxable year in which you made your first contribution. Second, the distribution must be taken due to the death of the accountholder, disability, age 59-1/2 or, for first-time homebuyers (up to $10,000). Couples with AGI of less than $150,000 and individuals with AGI of less than $95,000 are allowed to contribute to a Roth IRA.

While annual contributions to a traditional IRA or a Roth IRA are still limited to $2,000, an additional nondeductible contribution of $500 per child can be made to an Education IRA. to contribute to the Education IRA, the child must be under age 18, and your AGI must be less than $150,000 for couples and less than $95,000 for individuals.

More in our wallets. Middle income families will also benefit from income-tax credits for having children and putting them through college. The legislation allows tax credits for each child 16 and under for many families, and tax credits designed to offset college tuition costs.

As you can see, the new laws are good news to parents and investors alike.

NBA talks to finally continue

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — When David Stern and Billy Hunter sit down across from each other in a hotel conference room, it will be their last opportunity to save the league's uninterrupted string of 35,001 games over 51 seasons.

Judging from the pessimism so abundant on both sides, their chances of keeping the NBA's perfect record intact are roughly equal to those of Michael Jordan airballing a title-clinching jumper — slim and none. The last chance to save a full, 82-game season comes Tuesday when owners, led by commissioner Stern, and players, led by union chief Hunter, meet for collective bargaining talks at a Manhattan hotel.

Barring a quick settlement, the league will cancel games for the first time in its history. The regular season is scheduled to begin Nov. 3.

"I think it's a real shame," NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said of the perfect record. "The people it means the most to, probably, are those of us in the league office. David's been at this for 30-some years, and I've been at it for more than 20, so that's something we have taken a lot of personal pride in.

"We feel pretty bad about it, but at some point you have to accept that there are other issues that are more important. And the overall financial health of the league has to take precedence over that record that we hadn't missed a game," Granik said.

The sides have met for only two formal bargaining sessions since the lockout began July 1, and their meeting last Thursday was more of a question-and-answer parley than a bargaining meeting.

About 15 players met at the union's offices Monday to discuss the specifics of a counterproposal. When it is presented Tuesday, the owners will not be expected to respond positively unless the players have accepted the demand to somehow place a definitive limit on the amount of league revenues that will be devoted to player salaries.

Putting it in the lingo of the business, the current "soft" salary cap must be replaced by a "hard" cap, or at least a "harder" cap. Otherwise, no deal.

"Certainly this is the least successful (negotiation)," Granik said. "In terms of reaching a deal, this is the worst we've ever had. We've never gotten to this point without being able to make a deal."

The NBA is a $2 billion-a-year business, and it is incomprehensible to most fans that the owners and players haven't been able to come up with a way to divvy the pie.

Like the disastrous baseball strike of 1994, the less-destructive hockey lockout of 1994-95 and the NFL strike of 1987, the combatants in the NBA lockout stand to do more harm to their sport than good. The NBA has enjoyed leaps in prosperity that would have been unimaginable less than two decades ago in Magic Johnson's and Larry Bird's rookie season when the finals were televised on a tape-delayed basis.

Since then, the league has enjoyed a renaissance and gained a worldwide appeal that has shown no sign of ebbing — even with the current possibility that Jordan will retire from the six-time champion Chicago Bulls.

As the game's popularity has soared, so, too, have the revenues. Franchises that were worth only a few million dollars in the 1980s have become worth hundreds of millions of dollars, and player contracts that were formerly valued in the hundreds of thousands have grown to be worth more than $100 million for the most promising young players.

It is that rapid escalation, however, that has made the stakes so high and has so hardened the resolve of the owners who believe their operating profits should be larger.

The league claims almost half of its 29 teams lost money last season. The only answer, owners claim, is to put a limit on payroll costs.

Players, the majority of whom won't miss a paycheck until Nov. 15, are banned from NBA facilities until the impasse is settled. It's anybody's best guess as to when that day might arrive.

"The players have to participate in some deal that lowers the percentage of revenues being paid to salaries," said Granik, the owners' chief negotiator. "But they don't see that as their responsibility at all."

NEW YORK — Crude oil was little changed as an estimate of overproduction by Iran during September came as output in Nigeria was cut because of civil strife.

Royal Dutch/Shell Group is evacuating personnel from some oil facilities in Nigeria and has reduced output there by 378,000 barrels a day. The company blames rising civil unrest for the cutback. Meantime, a report from the Middle East Economic Survey said Iran violated its promise to cut output to end a global supply glut. Iran may have been trying to capture prices last month, traders said, when crude rose to a six-month high.

Crude oil for November delivery was little changed at $14.44 a barrel, down 14 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

November gasoline was little changed at 43.50 cents a gallon, down 0.29 cent. November heating oil fell 0.77 cent, or 2 percent, to 38.60 cents a gallon.

Natural gas dropped almost 5 percent — falling for a third day — as temperate weather across the U.S. and high storage levels showed that demand is low before the start of the winter heating season.

Heating demand will be 21 percent below normal on average nationwide over the next seven days, according to Weather Derivatives of Belton, Mo. The mild weather comes with inventories about 10 percent higher than a year ago.

November natural gas for delivery at the Henry Hub in Louisiana fell 10.2 cents, or 4.7 percent, to $2.089 per million British thermal units on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the lowest since Sept. 28. Natural gas has fallen almost 13 percent in the past three trading sessions.

Dollar rebounds

NEW YORK — The dollar reversed its skid from last week, rising against major currencies Monday on the back of ascending U.S. and European stocks.

But the dollar came nowhere near regaining the level against the Japanese yen from which it fell last week.

The dollar was trading at 117.63 yen late Monday, up from 116.95 late Friday. The dollar started trading last week near 135 yen. Also in late trading Monday, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6530 German marks, up from 1.6363 marks.

Last week, the dollar endured its worst declines against the Japanese yen in a quarter century, falling nearly 14 percent for the week as a whole as hedge funds dumped dollars to unwind complex trades.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.3423 Swiss francs, up from 1.3270; 5.5425 French francs, up from 5.4900; 1,637.00 Italian lire, up from 1,619.45; and 1.5405 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5423.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6895, compared with $1.7050.

Houston airports

HOUSTON — Houston will pour $1.4 billion into a five-year upgrade of its three airports, part of a plan to improve passenger service and triple cargo capacity.

"This construction and development plan will add airfield facilities such as runways, taxiways and aircraft apron areas, the core of any airport," Mayor Lee Brown said Monday.

Billed by the city as the world's sixth-largest multi-airport system, Houston operates Ellington Field, Hobby Airport and its linchpin, Bush Intercontinental Airport.

Monday's announcement comes two weeks after Brown's administration decided the city should stop considering construction of an airport on the city's west side. The facility, proposed in the 1980s, would serve smaller aircraft.

Oman official sees division over need for cuts

■ Oman's oil minister says Persian Gulf producers are divided over need for more cutbacks.

N.Y. Times News Service

MUSCAT, Oman — Persian Gulf oil producing states are divided on the need for further production cuts to boost crippling oil prices, said Oman's oil minister.

"Some want action now and some want to wait and see what impact the current cuts will have," said Mohammed bin Hamed al-Rumhy in an interview. Both members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and nonmembers, are still attempting to build a consensus on what further action they can take, though none is expected before OPEC meets Nov. 25 in Vienna, he said.

Oman, the world's 18th-largest oil producer, doesn't belong to OPEC. It joined with OPEC and other oil producers in June to slash world supply by 3.2 million barrels a day, or 4 percent, to lift oil prices after a slump in Asian demand and a warmer-than-normal winter in the Northern Hemisphere caused an oversupply in the market, pushing prices to the lowest in a decade.

The cutbacks, combined with disruptions to oil production in Nigeria and the Gulf of Mexico, have helped lift benchmark Brent crude oil prices 15 percent since the ten-year low of $11.55 a barrel they sank to in August. Still, U.S. oil inventories are higher than they were a year ago when prices began to drop.

In London, Brent crude was little changed, up 2 cents at $13.29 a barrel, well short of the $24.91 a barrel peak last year.

Al Rumhy, speaking at his office in Muscat, said $15 to $20 a barrel for crude oil would be an "acceptable price range" to both consumers and producers of oil.

Dow climbs 102 points, above 8,000

■ Big-name technology shares lead sharp blue-chip rebound.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow industrials hopped back above 8,000 on Monday, just days after threatening to sink below its summer low of 7,400, as big-name technology shares continued to lead a sharp blue-chip rebound.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 101.95 to 8,001.47 after peaking at midday with a gain of 185 points.

IBM rose 3 9/16 to 130 7/8 to lead the Dow, which has now bounced more than 500 points from the bottom of a 274-point slide on Thursday.

Broader indicators also extended a rebound that began Thursday as the Dow and other key measures sank toward lows reached in the selloff on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1. The market has now reversed course several times at those levels, which have proven appealing to bargain hunters.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 53.59, or 3.6 percent, to 1,546.08 as popular technology names continued to bounce back from last week's pounding: Dell Computer rose 3 1/4 to 56 1/4, and Microsoft rose 2 7/8 to 99 3/4. Last week, the Nasdaq tumbled about 200 points, or 12 percent, before gaining 73 points on Friday.

"The market was significantly oversold late last week. Sentiment on common stocks was so low that you couldn't get much more bearish," said John Shaughnessy, chief investment strategist for Advest Inc. of Hartford, Conn.

"Stock prices already reflect these deflated expectations," said Shaughnessy, who also attributed the rebound to "a growing realization that the Federal Reserve is going to be fairly aggressive in lowering interest rates" to offset the drag of economic crises abroad.

The early trickles of third-quarter financial results remained fairly encouraging Monday a strong showing from Chrysler, which rose 2 1/2 to 44 1/4.

In what should be its last quarterly report before its merger with Daimler-Benz AG of Germany, Chrysler posted a 55 percent improvement in profits from year-ago levels.

"We've seen the usual spate of negative earnings pre-announcements, and now that the actual reports are coming out, the news is not so bad," said Shaughnessy.

Monday's gain lifted the Dow back above 1998's break-even point, 7,908.25, but still left the blue-chip index more than 1,300 points beneath the July 17 record of 9,337.97.

Helping fuel the advance were more signs of progress toward ending a severe Japanese recession that weighs heavily on the battered Asian economy.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 13.32 to 997.71 after gaining 25 points on Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by more than a 2-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where composite volume totaled 822.31 million shares, easing sharply from the billion-plus tallies of the prior two sessions.

The NYSE composite index rose 6.25 to 492.95, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 6.28 to 581.01.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 7.22 to 325.62.

Chrysler earnings climb

■ Just before merging into Germany's Daimler-Benz, Chrysler goes out with a bang.

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Chrysler Corp. earned a record $682 million in its third quarter, heading into next month's merger with Germany's Daimler-Benz richer and more profitable than even Wall Street optimists expected.

The earnings allowed the automaker to enter its final weeks as an independent U.S. company with a $9.6 billion cash reserve. Daimler-Benz is the maker of the Mercedes-Benz.

"Some of the European shareholders are concerned about buying Chrysler at the peak of the cycle," said analyst Mark Rowen of Salomon Smith Barney. "These results should be pretty appealing to them."

Chrysler on Monday credited strong sales of profitable new models, cost-cutting and the launch of the redesigned '99 Jeep Grand Cherokee for the 55 percent increase in profits over last year's third period.

Earnings totaled $682 million on sales of $15 billion. That compared with $441 million on sales of $13.2 billion during the third quarter of 1997. It also exceeded Chrysler's previous third-quarter high of $680 million in 1996.

Securities firms' profits sink, spark job cuts on Wall Street

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — U.S. securities firms' earnings fell 40 percent in the third quarter, the steepest drop in four years, according to forecasts compiled by First Call Corp. Profits aren't expected to improve much in the fourth quarter and investment banks are preparing to fire thousands of workers.

Merrill Lynch & Co., Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc., Bear Stearns Cos. and Paine Webber Group Inc. are scheduled to report that per-share earnings fell as much as 75 percent from the year-ago quarter. Their stocks were battered in the past three months as they warned that Russia's default and currency devaluation caused billions of dollars in trading losses.

"It's going to be a brutal quarter," said Steve Eisman, an analyst at CIBC Oppenheimer, which fired 27 mortgage securities and emerging markets employees last month. "There is no underwriting, there are trading losses and the firms all have high expenses."

Officials at Merrill — whose stock fell 59 percent since July — and DLJ said they expect earnings to rise in the fourth quarter. Until debt markets recover, though, profits "will still be bad," Eisman said.

Both firms already warned earnings were hurt in the quarter. Earnings haven't fallen this fast since the fourth quarter of 1994, when they dropped 91 percent as the Federal Reserve raised interest rates.

The earnings slump has Wall Street planning the biggest round of job cuts, unrelated to mergers, since 1995, analysts said.

Merrill is expected to announce tomorrow that it's cutting about 5 percent of its workforce, or more than 2,000 jobs. Salomon Smith Barney Inc., a unit of Citigroup Inc., is also looking to eliminate positions. Nikko Securities and Warburg Dillon Read already made cuts. ING Barings is eliminating 1,200 of its 9,000 jobs.

"A lot of firms are going to use the second half as a means of cleaning house," and cutting payroll costs, said Richard Strauss, a Goldman, Sachs & Co. analyst. While the rest of the year may be tough for investment banks, reducing expenses and getting rid of less productive employees should help boost profits by the second quarter of next year, he said.

Strauss sees Merrill Lynch, Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co. and Citigroup Inc. as better able to weather the shocks because they have more businesses than companies such as DLJ and Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc.

Earnings at Merrill fell to about 48 cents a share, a 61 percent decline from the year-earlier period, according to a First Call survey.

DLJ, the eighth-biggest firm and a unit of Equitable Cos., probably will show earnings fell 75 percent to 23 cents a share, First Call said. Its stock dropped 59 percent from its high and is up 11 percent from the recent lows.

Paine Webber's earnings are expected to come in at 50 cents, down 29 percent from last year, First Call said. Shares of the firm fell 52 percent from their highs.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Lifespan of bear markets averages about two years

BY ERIC TYSON

Q: What is a bear market, where did the term come from and what typically happens in one? I think a lot of readers need to know this.

Tyson

A: It's hard to find agreement on the origin of the term but my favorite description comes from Robert Claiborne's "Loose Cannons and Red Herrings: A Book of Lost Metaphors."

The term "bear," according to Claiborne, originates from a proverb that mocks a man who "sells the bearskin before catching the bear."

Here's the connection to the stock market. When dealers in the stock market thought that the market had become too pricey and speculative, these dealers would sell stock that they hadn't yet "caught" (bought). These dealers were labeled "bearskin jobbers" and, sand, later, "bears."

The practice that these bearish dealers were engaging in was short selling. They hoped that when they ultimately bought the stock that they had first sold, they could buy it back at a lower price. Their profit thus is the difference between what they sold it for and what they bought it for.

Short selling is simply investing in reverse: you sell first and buy back later. The worst thing for a bear is if prices go up and one must buy back the stock at a high price. As Claiborne said, "He who sells what isn't his'n, must buy it back or go to prison."

While there's disagreement over the origin of the term bear market, most market mavens agree that a bear market is defined as one that has fallen 20 percent or more from its peak.

The market over the past century has dropped more than 20 percent approximately one out of every five years. The last time it happened was 1987. We got close during the market's correction this past August, but then the market rallied.

If you have to wait for a 20 percent decline to declare that we're in a bear market, you should know that most bear markets are over soon after. The average bear market this century has lasted less than two years.

Q: I would like to know how to best invest my and my spouse's IRA accounts. The accounts total about $50,000 and we are both 73 years old. We don't plan on using this money during our lifetimes and expect to pass this money on through our estate. We have always invested this money in CDs, but CDs do not currently carry good interest rates. Can you recommend a better alternative that is conservative for our heirs?

A: Since you don't plan on using the money during your lifetime, you should consider being a bit more aggressive. Keeping all of this money in CDs, which offer little real growth potential likely won't leave as much for your heirs.

So long as you don't plan on using the money in your lifetime, you might consider a balanced approach with about half in stocks and half in bonds. I would invest this money through mutual funds.

Q: It has been my understanding that when one sells a mutual fund, the only taxes you owe are for last year. In prior years, I thought, you paid taxes on your fund's profits. Now, I have people telling me that I will have to pay taxes again the following year. Is this true?

A: When a mutual fund sells a security at a higher price than it paid for it, the resulting profit, known as a capital gain, must be distributed in that same year.

However, over time, the fund share price itself may appreciate as the fund's holdings increase in value. Only when you sell the fund is this capital gain realized and tax owed.

Stars should use power play to advantage

By Mike Heika
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — While the Stars acquired free-agent winger Brent Severyn in the off-season as a form of protection to keep opponents from getting too physical, the real enforcer for the team this season could be the power play.

After rumbling through the preseason with 13 power-play goals in eight games, the Stars stepped up the pace in Saturday's season opener, blistering the Buffalo Sabres for three power play goals in eight chances. Not only did the success with the man advantage pave the way for a 4-1 win, it also left a feisty Buffalo team weakened by the fact it could not afford to take any penalties.

"It's a big deal, it gets them to back off," winger Pat Verbeek said. "If you can score on the power play, it changes the game."

That was no more important than on the first goal of the game. The speedy Sabres were zipping about in the opening nine minutes, buzzing the Stars' net and playing the tenacious, on-the-edge sort of game that led them to the Eastern Conference Finals last season. That was until Sabres winger Curtis Brown was whistled for an obstruction penalty — part of the Sabres' style of gritty defensive play — sending the Stars on their first power play at the 9:43 mark of the first period.

Fifty-seven seconds later, the Stars had their first power-play goal of the season as defenseman Darryl Sydor completed a smooth passing play by slipping a wrister past Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek. With that, the Stars had the all-important first goal (they were 42-8-8 when scoring first last season) and had control of the game.

"The power play is going to be an important part of the game this season," Stars center Mike Modano said. "Sometimes, you're going to get eight, nine, 10 chances on the power play."

With the NHL trying to open up the game for more skating, they have instructed referees to call even the petty stuff. That, league officials reason, will eventually stop teams like the Stars and Sabres from playing a clutch and grab style of game.

"It's going to be a short-term pain for a long-term gain," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "In the meantime, you're going to have to be prepared to play a lot of special teams."

But while the Stars eventually frustrated the Sabres by making them pay for their mistakes, the Sabres never answered. And that could become a recurring theme in Stars games this season. The team brings back the top-ranked power play in the NHL (77 for 385 for 20.0 percent) from last season, as well as the second-ranked penalty-killing unit (309 for 351 for 88.0 percent).

The Stars' power play has a real chance to improve on those numbers. With the addition of Brett Hull in the off-season, the Stars have added another element to their attack — an element that has excelled on the power play his entire career. Hull had an assist on Saturday, but just as important, he had six shots and drew plenty of attention away from Modano, who was blanketed for much of last season.

Free to skate, Modano was able to get a goal and two assists to lead the Stars.

"Brett has a really good feel for getting open in the slot and he's definitely going to draw a lot of attention," Modano said.

Ironically, Hull wasn't a part of the first goal as Jere Lehtinen made a hustling play to keep the puck in the offensive zone, Modano then threaded a perfect cross-ice pass to Sydor that had the Sabres' collective head spinning.

But just as much as that power play goal was a thing of beauty, the next one was as ugly as they come. Grant Marshall charged the net to try to beat Hasek and the rebound lay out in front of the net until Verbeek swept in and chipped the puck in.

"We give them two very different looks, and I think that's a good thing," Verbeek said. "Modano and those guys are more speed and pretty passes and we're going to get in your face a little more."

In fact, the general thinking has been that when Joe Nieuwendyk returns from rehabilitating his two injured knees, he will play with Modano and Hull on a superstar power play. But the best strategy might be to keep Modano, Hull and Lehtinen together and come back with a second line of Nieuwendyk, Verbeek and Jamie Langenbrunner.

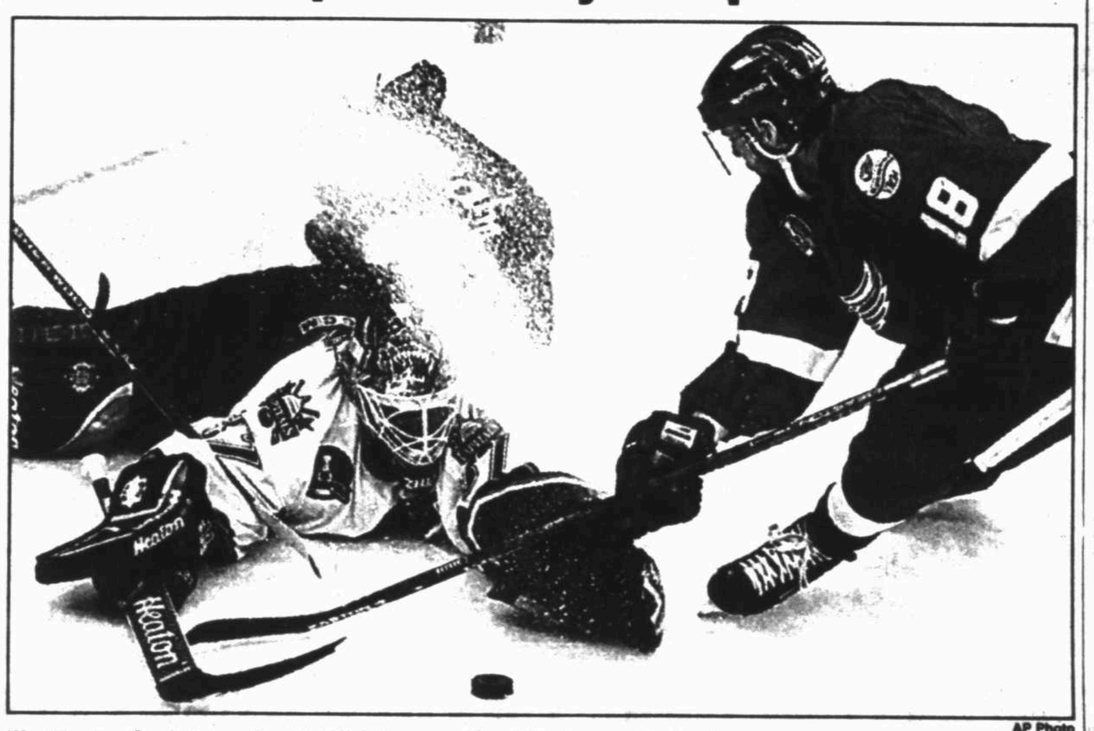

As Verbeek said, the two units could feed off each other because they would be giving the penalty killers so many different looks.

"It's hard to change that much in such a short period of time," he said. "That (change) could be something that really helps us."

Wings, Caps hook up in early Cup rematch

By Joseph White

Washington Capitals goalie Olaf Kolzig gets a face full of ice while defending a shot from Detroit Red Wings left wing Kirk Maltby during second period action of Game 4 of the Stanley Cup Finals, June 16, 1998. Just two games into the schedule, the Capitals are playing host to the Red Wings tonight at the MCI Center.

WASHINGTON — Stanley Cup Rematch Time comes early, and only once, this NHL season.

Just two games into the schedule, Washington is playing host to the Detroit Red Wings on Tuesday at the MCI Center, giving last spring's upstart Capitals their lone regular season shot at revenge against the team that swept them in the Stanley Cup finals.

"It's one game that everybody's going to be watching," Capitals forward Joe Juneau said. "Everybody's putting emphasis on it because it's the two finalists from last year's Stanley Cup playoffs. But it's the only game we're going to play against them this year. If we face them again, it's going to be in the finals. We want to face them again."

With expansion and realignment, the NHL has gone to a new schedule in which some Eastern and Western conference teams play each other only once instead of twice. The teams made up for it to some degree by playing an exhibition game last week in Detroit, won 4-3 by Washington.

"It will mean more than it did last week," coach Ron Wilson said. "But we proved then that we could beat a Detroit team with its full lineup. ... The thing that stinks is that the Wings lost (their season opener) in Toronto. They're struggling now a bit with their coach out."

Detroit coach Scotty Bowman will miss the game as he recuperates from knee surgery. But the players are back, and they sound almost nostalgic about returning to the rink where they brought wheelchair-bound former teammate Vladimir Konstantinov onto the ice to parade the Cup around.

"There are some good memories from that building," defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom said. "I'm sure they'll want to beat us because we swept them last year. It might mean more to them."

The game does mean more for the Capitals, who still aren't considered among the NHL elite after a playoff run in which they didn't have to play a higher seeded team to win the Eastern Conference title. So, while goalie Olaf Kolzig cautioned about the team needing to pace itself to avoid burnout and not "play every game like it's the seventh game of the finals," he also sees an opportunity to move up a notch in the respect sweepstakes.

"We'd like to send a message to the league that we're for real," Kolzig said. "It's a good test. We want to get back to the finals and do more damage than we did last year."

Lindros looking to impose presence more

By Ken Berger
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — After making a few enemies in skirmishes along the boards, Eric Lindros found himself alone in front of the net.

With nobody but the puck nearby, the siren was sure to wail. This is the sort of moment Philadelphia Flyers general manager Bob Clarke had in mind when he challenged Lindros to pick up his play this season.

Bobby, consider it done.

"The energy's really contagious when Eric's out there," said John LeClair, who scored once and assisted on both of Lindros' goals in the Flyers' 4-1 victory over Anaheim in their home opener Sunday night.

It didn't take long for Lindros to show the home crowd how ready he is for his seventh season. Very ready.

Barely five minutes into the game, he doubled back toward the crease to lose Anaheim's Antti Aalto, picked up a loose puck and flicked it in for his first goal of the season. Before all the fans had returned from the nacho stand in the third, Lindros drilled a slap shot from the right circle for his second goal 50 seconds into the period.

"We wanted to get out of the gate and do well," Lindros said. "You never want to have a slow start. We felt strong, but it's two games in. We've got a long way to go."

In his first performance of the season for fans hungry for a championship, Lindros certainly appeared to be on a mission. It was swift, it was devastating, it was Lindros at his very best.

What's gotten into this guy?

"He was dominant in preseason, but it's hard for me to say," said John Vanbiesbrouck, the Flyers' new goaltender. "I wasn't a teammate with him. I've certainly admired him from a distance."

Clarke, the former Flyers captain, has admired Lindros up close for most of his career. During contract negotiations over the summer, Clarke challenged Lindros to prove he's the best player in hockey if he wants to be paid that way.

Lindros, represented by his father, Carl, signed an $8.5 million contract extension in June, then reached a handshake agreement with Clarke that could keep him in Philadelphia through the 1999-2000 season.

Already one of the most imposing front-line players in the NHL, Lindros arrived in training camp in tremendous physical condition and dominated. Once the games started counting, he needed only 65 minutes to score his first goal.

"He can control a game," LeClair said. "He was the best player on the ice again."

The Flyers got Lindros from the Quebec Nordiques in 1992 for six players, two draft choices and $15 million. Lindros, the Nordiques' No. 1 pick, said he wouldn't play in Quebec. The deal had to be approved by an arbitrator because Quebec owner Marcel Aubut also had made a tentative trade with the New York Rangers.

Now, Lindros is happy in Philly and eager to make sure the Flyers' first-round playoff loss to Buffalo last year doesn't happen again.

"We're a confident group," Lindros said. "We had a good preseason. Tonight wasn't exactly a pristine example of it, but we did do our jobs."

Lindros certainly did his.

Sampras wins first round in Austria tourney

Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — Top-ranked Pete Sampras, who got into the event thanks to the generosity of Boris Becker, advanced to the second round of the CA Tennis Trophy tournament Monday.

Sampras beat qualifier Jan Kroslak 6-2, 7-5 in the opening round of the $800,000 indoor event that features seven of the top 10 players.

After his early exit from the Swiss indoor last week in Basel, Switzerland, Sampras asked for a wild card from the organizers in Vienna. But they turned him down because all wild cards already had been allocated.

Sampras then asked Becker if he could have his wild card, and the veteran Becker agreed.

"Pete needs it much more than I do," said Becker, who is in semi-retirement and only plays selected tournaments.

Sampras said it was an "incredible gesture" by Becker. "I don't think you'd find another guy doing that," he said. "I was practically already on the way home."

The American wants to become the first player to finish the season as No. 1 for six consecutive years and desperately needs to increase his margin over No. 2 Patrick Rafter, the reigning U.S. Open champion.

■ Tennis Roundup

In other matches Monday, Cedric Pioline defeated Richard Fromberg 6-3, 7-6 (9-7), Magnus Norman edged Daniel Vacek 7-5, 6-4, and Jonas Bjorkman beat David Prinosil 6-4, 7-6 (7-1).

Chang captures Heineken Open

SHANGHAI, China — Continuing his dominance in Asia, second-seeded Michael Chang captured the rain-delayed $315,000 Heineken Open Monday by defeating top-seeded Goran Ivanisevic 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The final had been pushed back a day by heavy rain.

It was Chang's second title of the year, and his 12th in Asia. Chang, an American of Chinese descent, won five titles last year and finished the season ranked third in the world. But his ranking has fallen to 33rd this season after suffering a series of injuries.

Ivanisevic failed in his bid to win his second title of the year, falling to 4-6 lifetime to Chang. The 27-year-old left-hander has now lost three finals since winning at his hometown of Split, Croatia, in February.

Chang earned $45,000.

Jim Courier wins first-round match in Singapore Open

SINGAPORE — Former world No. 1 Jim Courier took full advantage of his wild card status to capture his opening round match at the Singapore Open tennis tournament on Monday.

Courier, the American star who has won four Grand Slam tournament titles but is currently ranked 102 in the world, defeated Canada's Daniel Nestor 6-3, 6-2 on opening day at the $700,000 ATP Tour tournament.

Stymied with a lingering arm injury and poor performances recently, Courier made short and convincing work of his Canadian opponent.

Australian teen-ager Lleyton Hewitt also won, defeating France's Lionel Roux 6-2, 7-6 (10-8). Also capturing first-round matches Monday were the Netherland's Sjeng Schalken, New Zealand's Brett Steven and Romania's Andrei Pavel.

Dragomir upsets Huber at European Championships

ZURICH, Switzerland — Ruxandra Dragomir of Romania pulled off the first upset at the European Championships on Monday, knocking off Anke Huber 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Dragomir is ranked 37th in the world, 17 spots behind her German foe.

Romania's Irina Spirlea struggled before winning her first-round match, 7-6 (9-7), 6-2 over qualifier Miriam Oremans of the Netherlands.

In other opening day matches, qualifier Julie Halard-Decuguis of France defeated Japan's Ai Sugiyama 7-5, 6-1; Amelie Mauresmo of France downed Austria's Sylvia Plischke 4-6, 6-4, 6-1; South African Joannette Kruger stopped Kveta Hrdlickova of the Czech Republic 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.
