Missing girl's OK

DALLAS — Six-year-old Morgan Littrell knew where she was all the time, so she wasn't worried. But her anxious parents, friends and law enforcement officers didn't know where Morgan was from about 7:30 p.m. Monday. After an all-night search, complete with helicopters, dogs, foot searchers, horse patrols, Morgan was found by a family friend wandering with her dogs./3B

Blacks leave Vidor

VIDOR — Ugly catcalls have taken their toll on Bill Simpson and John DecQuir. After just six months, Vidor's only remaining black residents are packing their bags, frightened by too many instances of harassment. "There are good people here, don't get me wrong," said Simpson, a 7-foot, 300-pound transplant from Beaumont. "But it's overshadowed by the negativity, the hostility, the bigotry of this town."/4B

New laws kick in

AUSTIN — A hodgepodge of new state laws takes effect today, including one that bans the sale of alcohol outside a nude dancing bar in Arlington and another that regulates do-it-yourself slaughterhouses. The 73rd legislative session, which wrapped up May 31, demonstrated once again lawmakers' ability to regulate virtually every aspect of life in Texas./2B

Emily rakes shore, veers

Hurricane batters islands, sideswipes coast

■ Forecasters expect cold front to began pushing storm out to sea, sparing the Northeast its worst fury.

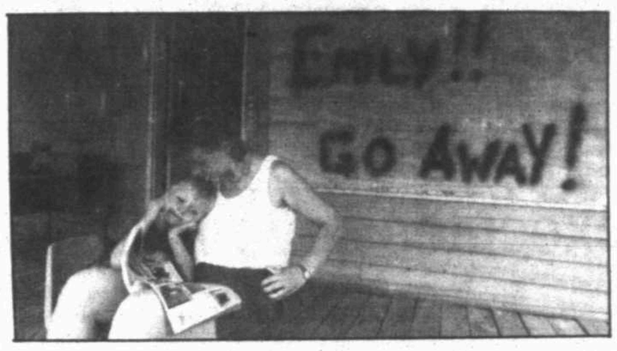

Associated Press

MANTEO, N.C. — Hurricane Emily blew away roofs and swamped the Outer Banks on Tuesday as it slowly brushed by the fragile island chain, pounding the sandy shoreline with 15-foot waves during a full-moon high tide.

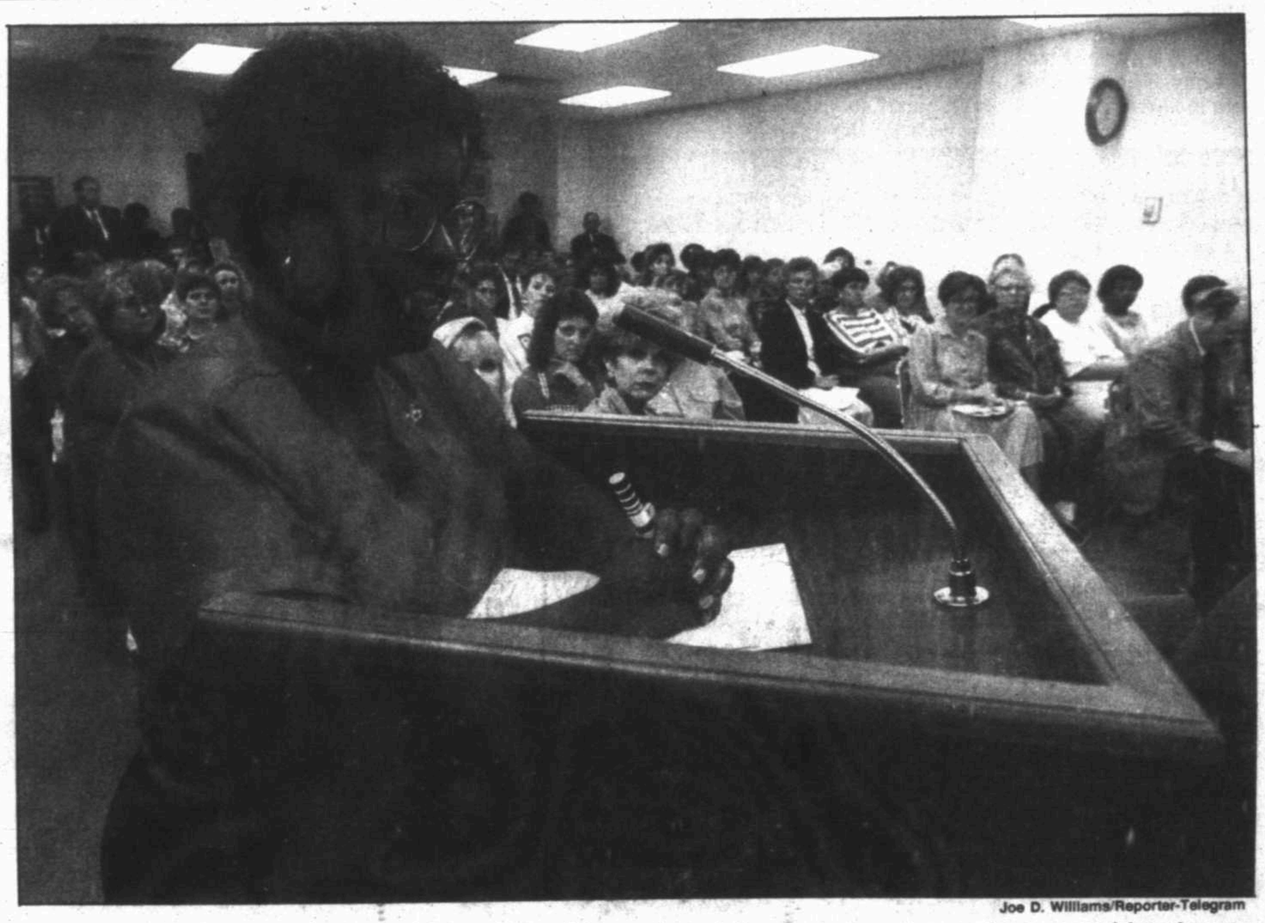

But the hurricane's eye, with 115 mph wind swirling around it, stayed just offshore. Forecasters said it likely would be the storm's closest encounter with the U.S. mainland, though hurricane conditions were expected overnight in southeastern Virginia.

"The house is shaking terribly from the wind and waves. Water is pouring in everywhere, from cracks in the doors and windows and from the roof," Irene Nolan said

Karen Mosley, educator and president of the Midland Educators Association, asks MISD school-board trustees to give serious consideration to teacher salary increases Tuesday night.

Teachers, taxpayers both win on pay vote

Chalk one up for the teachers and the Midland taxpayers, too.

Midland public school educators and citizens were all smiles following the school board vote that gave teachers a larger pay increase without raising the tax bill.

"We had to compromise a little, but it was really a moral victory," said Steve Buck, teacher, coach and president of the Midland Federation of Teachers.

School board trustees agreed to a salary proposal presented by the Texas Classroom Teachers Association which would give teachers either the administration's proposed 2.5 percent increase at the midpoint of the salary scale ($695) or the increase from moving up a step in the 1992-93 salary schedule, whichever was greater.

The compromise involved increasing teachers' tax sheltered annuity — which the district matches — from 2.5 percent to 2.6 percent, instead of the administration's proposal of increasing it to 3 percent.

Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent for Midland Independent School District, pointed out that the annuity is based on total gross salary. "It is a benefit of more dollars and it is tax sheltered," he said.

However, one teacher before the board said most teachers need every dollar to support families.

Beverly Crosson, a teacher at Bush Elementary School, said, "If we can't afford to save, we won't receive the half-percent annuity any-

Pact is near, Palestinians, Israelis say

■ Emotion-charged Mideast peace talks reopen with confident predictions.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Emotion-charged Mideast peace talks reopened Tuesday with confident Palestinian and Israeli predictions that a historic agreement to establish Palestinian self-rule would be concluded within days.

Moreover, Nabil Shaath, chief political adviser to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, said "we hope to hear very soon — tomorrow or the day after" statements of "full mutual recognition" by Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Israeli sources confirmed Arafat and Rabin would move toward an accommodation but said the announcement may be several days off. The sources, declining to be identified, also said the PLO had agreed that 3,300 Jewish settlers would remain in Gaza with Israel responsible for their security.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, praising the accord that will put the PLO in charge of day-to-day life in Gaza and in the West Bank city of Jericho as "a conceptual breakthrough," said the United States was prepared to provide financial assistance. "We want to be side by side with the parties," he told reporters.

Fast chill no precursor of days ahead

By Katherine Poteet

With its dull, gray clouds and low temperatures, Tuesday could have passed for a typical day in late November rather than a prelude to September.

Don't get used to it anytime soon.

While September does begin the slow transition from summer to fall as far as the weather is concerned, cold fronts of Tuesday's magnitude are rare this early in the fall season, said a National Weather Service spokesman.

The first part of September in West Texas usually feels more like August, with highs continuing to reach near 90 and lows dropping only into the mid-60s.

The average high temperature for the entire month is in the mid-80s, while the average low is in the lower 60s. Any measurable drop in temperatures typically occurs at the end of the month, when daytime highs often drop to the Growing number of Big Bend visitors encounter black bears

By Ralph K.M. Haurwitz
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Hiking alone on Emory Peak Trail in the Chisos Mountains, Carl Teinert was startled by a noise in the brush.

"Lo and behold, there was a bear moving through. He looked up, saw me, snorted a bit and just kept wandering through," said Teinert, 43, an environmental consultant from Austin who vacationed in Big Bend National Park this month.

He joined a growing list of visitors who have encountered black bears in this 801,000-acre wilderness of austere desert and jagged peaks along the Rio Grande.

The park had no bears when it was established in 1944. They had been wiped out by hunting and trapping. Park officials believe bears waded or swam across the river from Mexico in

Bosnian peace talks near climax with cease-fire agreement

GENEVA (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim-led government and Serbs agreed Tuesday on a new cease-fire as year-old negotiations to end the brutal war by splitting the country reached a decisive phase.

Serb President Slobodan Milosevic and Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, meanwhile, said they expected Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic to accept a separate plan to split Bosnia into three ethnic republics on Wednesday.

"The conference continues tomorrow (Wednesday) and we are expecting the Muslim side to sign the whole package," Karadzic said as he emerged from daylong talks.

However, Izetbegovic said no breakthrough has occurred in discussions on the boundaries of the republics.

"No progress so far," he said. "Maybe tomorrow." Izetbegovic has been consistently downbeat in public comments about the peace talks.

He has slammed a peace plan proposed by international mediators as rewarding Serb and Croat aggression. But he fears the outgunned government forces and suffering Muslim civilians may not survive another winter.

Earlier, Bosnian Serb and government officials said the two sides agreed to a cessation of hostilities as part of a five-point plan. The three warring factions — Muslims, Serbs, Croats — have repeatedly agreed on cease-fires, and then broken them.

Karadzic aide Nikola Koljevic said other provisions included prisoner exchanges and a telephone hot line between government headquarters in Sarajevo and the Bosnian Serb base in nearby Pale, the first phone link since the war began nearly 17 months ago.

Izetbegovic and Karadzic also agreed to set up a joint commission to regulate electricity and water supplies in all cities and pledged to calm news media, which have been used to incite hatred among the three ethnic groups.

Government spokesman Mirza Hajric confirmed the agreement, which has yet to be signed and is separate from the plan to divide up the country. However, he played down its importance.

Koljevic said Izetbegovic made only minimal demands for changes in the map proposed by international mediators despite his earlier statements that the proposals were unacceptable.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said the Bosnian Croats had dropped their demands for changes in the borders on the proposed maps and were ready to sign the peace plan.

The Serbs have already said they will sign the deal proposed by mediators Lord Owen of the European Community and Thorvald Stoltenberg of the United Nations.

It would divide Bosnia-Herzegovina into three ethnic republics with only a weak central government. Muslims would have 31 percent of territory, the Serbs 52 percent and Croats 17 percent.

Before the war Muslims comprised 43 percent of the population, the Serbs 31 percent and Croats 17 percent.

"We are waiting for Muslim acceptance of the peace plan," said Milosevic, one of the region's main powerbrokers. "Everything will be much clearer tomorrow."

The last-ditch peace talks resumed Tuesday after an 11-day break.

Earthquake moves island north of Tokyo 6.5 feet

TOKYO (AP) — The island hardest hit by a July earthquake that killed 202 people was moved more than six feet by the temblor.

A satellite survey showed Okushiri, about 480 miles north of Tokyo, moved westward by 6½ feet, said Toshihiro Wada of the Construction Ministry's Geographical Survey Institute.

"It was the first time that such a large movement of an island caused by an earthquake was observed by the institute," said Wada on Tuesday.

The July 12 quake, which measured 7.8 on the Richter scale, was centered 12 miles below the ocean floor off Okushiri, which has about 4,600 residents.

The island was hit by several tidal waves, including one believed to be about 100 feet high.

Despite progress, U.N. eyes war crimes court

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

■ News Analysis

PARIS — The United Nations in New York is discussing setting up a war crimes tribunal for Bosnia even as U.N. officials in Geneva press the combatants in that blood-soaked land to sign a peace agreement that rewards the war criminals.

The irony hasn't been lost. As a French foreign ministry official who asked not to be named puts it: "The Geneva accord legitimizes the ethnic cleansing carried out by the presumed war criminals whose prosecution the United Nations proclaims it will seek."

The peace agreement divides Bosnia into three "republics" along ethnic lines, Serbian, Croatian and Muslim. Of the three groups, the Bosnian Serbs have been the most frequently accused of ethnic cleansing, that is, systematically driving the other ethnic groups from the areas they coveted and sometimes massacring them. Under the agreement, the Serbs get to keep most of the territory they "cleansed."

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali reiterated this week that the world organization is serious about creating a court to try Bosnian war criminals. The legal basis for such a tribunal is furnished under Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter, as well as the Geneva Conventions on the rules of war.

Discussions have gone much further than when the U.N. Security Council demanded that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein be tried for his misdeeds during the Persian Gulf War. That threat came to nothing and was quickly forgotten.

This time, there's already talk at U.N. headquarters about the composition of the court and about candidates for the job of chief prosecutor.

But some experts point out that the same obstacles that prevented Saddam Hussein from being hauled before an international court are at work in Bosnia.

Asked whether he thought Bosnian war criminals would ever be tried, Lord Shawcross, the chief British prosecutor at the Nuremberg trials of Nazi officials following World War II, was dubious. "There's an old recipe for jugged hare that begins: First catch the hare," he said. "Catching the hare in Bosnia will be difficult."

Algeria executes seven Muslim radicals

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Seven Islamic extremists were executed at dawn Tuesday for a terrorist bombing at the Algiers airport a year ago that killed nine people and injured 123.

The Justice Ministry made the announcement but gave no details. Executions in this North African country are normally by firing squad.

Though three anti-terrorist courts established in February to cope with the Muslim fundamentalist insurgency have meted out 232 death penalties, the airport bombers were the first to be executed. The seven men were sentenced to death May 26.

Three other death sentences in the bombing were commuted to life imprisonment. The fate of two other defendants who never appealed their death sentences was not known. Twenty-six others sentenced to death in absentia remain at large.

The explosion that tore through Houari Boumediene Airport on Aug. 26, 1992, remains the single bloodiest act of violence in the 20-month-old insurgency by fundamentalist extremists.

More than 1,200 people been killed since the military canceled multiparty legislative elections being won by the Islamic Front.

Washington warns China about human rights abuse

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A senior State Department official warned China Tuesday that its favorable trading status with the United States could be in jeopardy unless it quickly improves its human rights record.

Assistant Secretary of State Winston Lord's comments in an on-the-record briefing were unusually frank for a high-level U.S. diplomat and appeared to be aimed at sending a strong signal to Beijing.

"I'd have to say there have been some setbacks," said Lord, citing China's recent move to revoke the passport of dissident labor leader Han Dongfang and other episodes.

"There have been some dissidents in Shanghai and elsewhere that have received some sentences. I just heard about someone getting a life sentence for leaking a speech. ... I'd have to say that so far we are fairly discouraged on this front. Indeed, some of these are steps we consider very disturbing."

Lord also said he hoped China would negotiate an agreement with the United States to refrain from selling ballistic missiles. That, he implied, could allow Washington to waive sanctions imposed last week when it accused Beijing of selling M-11 missile components to Pakistan.

Last May President Clinton extended "most-favored nation" trading status with China conditionally for one year, saying he was keeping a close eye on China's human rights record.

"Human rights is very important, and we want to make progress; in fact, we have to make progress on that by next spring," Lord said.

"It is too early to make final judgments. We have many months still to go. But we have informed our Chinese friends that we really should make fast progress, not just progress."

'Jurassic Park' highlights Italian film festival

ROME (AP) — Steven Spielberg will receive a Golden Lion career award at the 50th Venice Film Festival, its director said Tuesday.

Spielberg's "Jurassic Park," even though it is not in competition, is expected to be one of the highlights of a particularly American-tinted festival.

The much publicized dinosaur epic will have its first showing in Italy Sept. 7, and will open commercially soon after.

Martin Scorsese arrived for a showing of "The Age of Innocence," which was to inaugurate the festival Tuesday evening. He came with the leading actors in the cast, Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder and Michelle Pfeiffer.

The film, a period love story based on the novel of the same name by Edith Wharton, is an unusual departure for the director of "Mean Streets" and "Goodfellas."

Other American films in the 12-day event are: Woody Allen's "Manhattan Murder Mystery;" "Boxing Helena" by Jennifer Lynch; Abel Ferrara's "Snake Eyes;" "Even Cowgirls Get the Blues," by Gus Van Sant Jr.; "Short Cuts," by Robert Altman; "Bronx Tale" by Robert De Niro; "The Fugitive" by Andrew Davis; "What's Love Got to Do With It" by Brian Gibson; "Posse: The Legend of Jessie Lee" by Mario Van Peebles; "In the Line of Fire" by Wolfgang Petersen; "Dave" by Ivan Reitman.

The films by Van Sant, Altman and Ferrara are the only American productions among the 18 competing for awards.

Gunmen kill 27 Pakistanis in election related attack

QUETTA, Pakistan (AP) — Gunmen massacred 27 people in the first violence related to the country's October elections, reports said Tuesday.

Zulfikar Ali Magsi, a powerful tribal chief in the southwestern Baluchistan province, was en route to file nomination papers for the Oct. 9 provincial election when gunmen fired on a procession of his supporters, The News reported.

Twenty people were reported injured.

Pakistan's caretaker prime minister, Moeen Qureshi, has said 150,000 soldiers will be deployed to prevent violence during the Oct. 6 elections for the National Assembly and the provincial elections three days later.

Dozens of people died in Pakistan's last general elections in 1990.

Main players in Mideast may differ on area's future

By Nicolas B. Tatro
Associated Press writer

■ News Anaylsis

JERUSALEM — It's a little bit like the song: "You say toh-mate-toe, and I say toh-mah-toe."

Palestinians say withdrawal. Israelis say redeployment.

Such word play reflects the double vision the two sides have of what autonomy — Palestinians say transitional period — will bring to the occupied West Bank, Gaza Strip and, depending on the script, east Jerusalem.

Israel views the proposed plan as an experiment that will test the ability of the Palestinians to rule themselves without posing a security threat to the Jewish state.

If it doesn't work out, the army can roll back in and restore order. If it does, Israel still plans to keep all of Jerusalem as its capital and maintain Jewish settlements and possibly security posts in occupied areas.

Palestinians, however, see the plan as an initial stage enroute to independent statehood, or at least to a confederation with neighboring Jordan in which they would have an equal say.

Palestinians envision east Jerusalem, which was captured by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war, ultimately becoming the Palestinian capital and Palestinian refugees abroad being allowed to return. All Israeli soldiers and settlers would eventually withdraw.

The yawning gap in vision fuels the arguments over the more mundane details involved in implementing the interim self-rule plan, under which the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho will get more of a taste of independence than the rest of the occupied lands.

One area of ongoing dispute, for example, involves the 140 settlements in which 120,000 Israelis live among 1.8 million Palestinians.

Both sides agree the Palestinian self-governing authority will not rule over settlements or their residents in the interim period. But the Palestinians want assurances that no new settlements will be built in occupied areas during that time.

Jerusalem, where 350,000 Jews and 150,000 Arabs live in distinctly separate areas, also remains a bubbling issue.

Both sides agree that Palestinians from Jerusalem will be allowed to vote in elections for the self-rule council and be elected to posts in the government.

VOTE: Educators, residents are all smiles

way. ... Teachers make an assumption we will make at least as much as people who did our jobs last year with the same experience. You just don't expect to make less."

Karen Mosley, a teacher and president of Midland Educators Association of the Texas State Teachers Association, acknowledged "times are hard for everyone."

"But teachers do need to be able to just work one job to pay the bills. Our electric, phone, cable and grocery bills are going up."

Buck said Midland Federation of Teachers supported the TCTA proposal and both organizations presented a united front to trustees.

"The administration plan was an attempt to make salaries more competitive," said trustee Gary Willis. "... TCTA and MFT are saying: 'This is all very well and good, but after an additional year experience, some teachers were looking at getting a $1,000 increase and now $695 means they lost $300 they planned on getting."

Even though the TCTA proposal was not designed with making salaries more competitive, trustee George Staley said, "Let's at least give teachers what they were expecting, even if the schedule is off track."

Trustee James Fuller agreed.

Staley made the motion and Willis seconded it to approve the TCTA plan with an annuity of 2.6 percent. Trustees voted unanimously in favor of it, which resulted in resounding applause from teachers who packed the board room and part of the lobby.

"We are excited. We can go to school tomorrow knowing that all teachers broke even or gained money. But we still have a long way to go," Buck said.

"We were pleased that the board saw our point about no one having to make less then they should at the other schedule," said Joy O'Hara, TCTA president. "I couldn't agree more with Steve Buck that — long before we come to this situation next year — we need to try to even out some of the ups and downs in the pay scale."

Trustees also voted 5-2 to give all other district personnel — including admnistrators, teacher assistants, clerks and custodians — a 2.5 percent increase at midpoint and an annuity increase from 2.5 percent to 2.6 percent.

Adela Marmolejo and James Fuller voted against the motion.

Willis also made a motion to form a committee to study and rework the salary schedule. It passed unanimously.

"Getting a commmittee and getting a chance to get input is very, very important," Buck said, noting that caps for long-time teachers needed to be lifted.

"Teachers didn't gain as much as administrators did," Buck said. "But there is not a person in education who is overpaid. People think it's a them (administrators) or us (teachers) situation, and that's not true."

Teacher assistants and clerks still will keep the differentiated pay scale, however stipends will be funded at only ⅗ the amount of scale, since the budget won't cover full stipends.

Teacher assistant Martha McTeer had asked the board to consider funding the full stipends. "Teaching assistants are the lowest paid group," she said. "We have worked hard and spent time and money to advance. ... We strongly recommend funding all of it."

Connie Reeves, representing Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, had no complaint about the increases because they didn't raise the tax rate.

Trustees vowed to toe the line at keeping the district property tax rate at $1.38 per $100 valuation, the same as last year's combined MISD and CED rate.

Baressi said, nonetheless, the owner of a $55,000 home will see about a $50 increase in his or her tax bill due to the loss of CED homestead exemptions, which voters killed when voting down Proposition 1.

In other action, trustees voted to appoint new teachers, bringing the total of new hires to 196. Also, about 200 teachers transferred within the district because of the addition of two new schools.

Trustees voted unanimously to allow Crockett Junior High School to continue and expand its SUCCESS language arts program and Math Their Way program. A unanimous vote also was given to allow Abell to have 30, instead of 24 students in English classes, and to add three teaching assistants to rotate among the five English teachers.

The district's $98 million budget for the 1993-94 school year was unanimously approved. The budget reflects a $4,305 cost per student for the projected enrollment of 22,858 students. About $85 million will go toward general operating costs.

Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and special services, noted that the second day of enrollment had increased about 300 students from the first day enrollment, totaling 22,253 students.

CHILL: Early cold fronts rare

lower 80s and overnight lows dip into the upper 50s, according to the NWS.

Winds will start to pick up in September because it is the second peak for severe weather in West Texas due to the jet stream dropping farther south in the fall months, the spokesman said. While summertime winds occasionally would pick up, the average speed was about 10-20 mph. During September, as more severe thunderstorms and cold fronts hit the area, the average speed increases to 30 mph.

The average rainfall for September is 2.62 inches, which, like the wind, picks up because of the increase in storm conditions.

However, although the temperatures may drop and winds increase, September is by no means the end of hot weather. The NWS spokesman said that the significant decreases in temperature for fall come during October and November, when highs and lows at the beginning and end of each month can differ by as much as 10-15 degrees. The first of October has highs in the lower 80s and lows in the mid-50s. By the end of November, those temperatures have dropped to the mid-60s and mid-30s, respectively.

Cold fronts, though at a much lesser strength than Tuesday's, will begin to increase in frequency during the month of September, dropping temperatures slightly for a few days and bringing some form of precipitation, the spokesman said. But, between those fronts, days will continue to be warm and sunny, with no need from Tuesday's umbrellas and light jackets.

Tuesday's cold front should be out of the area today, with clouds predicted to break early this morning. The highs will begin a steady climb back to near 90 by Friday, and the weekend is predicted to be cloudy and warm.

Today will warm significantly from Tuesday, with a high in the mid-80s under partly cloudy skies. The winds will be southeast at 5-10 mph. Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s.

Thursday will be mostly sunny with a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 59, Tuesday's high reached only 64, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1952. The record low was 56 set in 1955.

STATE

Temperatures across Texas again were lower Tuesday, thanks to a cold front that stretched across the state.

Areas of light rain and fog were located over portions of West Texas. Temperatures ranged from 60 degrees at Guadalupe Pass and 74 degrees at El Paso. Winds were north to northeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Wednesday's forecast calls for a chance of showers over the Edwards Plateau, far West Texas and the Big Bend region.

Otherwise it should be fair to partly cloudy over most of the area, with mostly cloudy skies over the southern sections. Lows will be in the 50s to near 70; highs should be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

A flood warning was in effect Tuesday for parts of South Texas, including the Edwards Plateau and the western portion of the Hill Country.

Thunderstorms were scattered over most sections of the region.

Temperatures ranged from the upper 60s and lower 70s in southeast Texas to 80- and 90-degree readings reported elsewhere.

Winds ranged from 5 to 15 mph.

Today's South Texas forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a chance for widely scattered showers. Highs will be in the 90s.

A cold front hovered over North Texas Tuesday. Thundershowers persisted over the western part of the region, with three-quarters of an inch recorded in Abilene.

NATION

Hurricane Emily pounded the East Coast with high wind, rain and waves Tuesday, while thunderstorms stretched from the Southwest to the Great Lakes. Temperatures hit record lows from the Northwest to the northern Plains.

Emily, packing highest sustained wind of more than 100 mph, blustered onto the Outer Banks islands off the North Carolina coast during the afternoon and turned northward, moving up the coast.

High swells pounded beaches as far north as the south shore of New York's Long Island.

Four to 8 inches of rain was possible along the storm's path.

Elsewhere, strong to severe thunderstorms developed during the afternoon along and ahead of a cold front that extended from the southern Plains through the middle Mississippi and Ohio valleys to the eastern Great Lakes.

Hail as big as golf balls was reported at Girard, Pa., with heavy hail also falling at Linesville, Pa., and Sodus, N.Y., the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

FIT: Jackson's in good health, doctor says

(From 1A)

cian, Dr. David Forcast, said no problems were found.

"Medication has been prescribed and we would not anticipate any further attacks similar to the problem we had yesterday. ... He is totally fit and will perform tomorrow," Forcast said.

Jackson suffered an acute migraine headache Monday. Forcast said the dehydration that was blamed for two canceled performances last week in Thailand could make a migraine worse.

The physician said his patient started complaining of migraine attacks about six weeks ago.

Jackson's publicists and Forcast have insisted the cancellations had no connection to allegations that he sexually abused a 13-year-old Los Angeles area boy.

Meanwhile, Jackson's brothers Tito and Jermaine walked off a "Today" show set in Burbank after they became "rattled" when a crew from the NBC affiliate, KNBC, showed up at the studio, a family spokesman said.

"They weren't supposed to be there," said spokesman John McLaughlin.

Tito and Jermaine left the studio without appearing on the morning show, and later appeared on ABC's "Good Morning America."

On Monday, KCBS-TV in Los Angeles and CBS News broadcast excerpts of a tape recording in which a man, purportedly the father of the boy Jackson is accused of molesting, threatens to ruin Jackson's reputation.

On the tape, a telephone conversation allegedly between the boy's father and stepfather, the voice identified as the father is heard making a threat involving Jackson and the boy's mother. The parents recently were involved in a custody dispute over the boy.

"Certain things are going to have to come out and those two are not going to have any defense against me whatsoever," says the voice on the tape, allegedly recorded in July. "It's going to be a massacre if I don't get what I want," he added without elaborating.

EMILY: Hurricane batters Outer Banks from her home in the tiny seaside village of Frisco, where she rode out the storm.

"Everything under the house ... is floating down the street with the current," she said.

Many buildings along Ocracoke and Hatteras islands lost their roofs as wind gusts topped 90 mph, said Dare County emergency management officials, who abandoned their operations center on Hatteras because of flooding.

Cars were floating in a bank parking lot in Buxton, and fallen trees were blocking roads, said the National Weather Service in Buxton, which also reported flooding in the yard of its office, a mile inland from Pamlico Sound.

The extent of the damage wouldn't be known before morning. "It's too dark to say. There's no power down there. But at the crack of dawn, we'll be down there," Dare County spokesman Ray Sturza said.

The center of the hurricane got as close as about 20 miles due east of Cape Hatteras late Tuesday afternoon, and the eye wall — the region of strongest wind around the calm eye — moved over Hatteras Island, said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center.

No part of the eye crossed land, however. The eye had grown to 45 miles wide Tuesday evening and was 35 to 40 miles due east of Oregon Inlet at 10 p.m.

The slow-moving hurricane passed the Outer Banks as the tide, higher than normal because of the full moon, peaked at about 8 p.m. The storm was expected to create a tidal surge 6 to 8 feet high, though the weather service said flooding reports on Hatteras indicated the surge was even higher.

The storm also was forecast to dump 4 to 8 inches of rain in its path.

Two houses at Kitty Hawk that had been damaged by previous storms fell into the Atlantic. Fifteen-foot waves were reported at a pier in Duck, just north of Kitty Hawk.

No injuries were immediately reported, though to the north, a swimmer was missing in heavy surf in Virginia.

The weather service in Buxton recorded gusts to 98 mph. The Diamond Shoals light tower 14 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras had sustained wind of 102 mph with gusts as high as 132 mph.

Tens of thousands of residents and tourists had fled the Outer Banks, the chain of narrow, low-lying sandy islets off the North Carolina coast, though hundreds remained.

Farther north, hurricane warnings were in effect to Cape Henlopen, Del., while heavy surf caused minor flooding along the southern shore of New York's Long Island, where 20,000 people on Fire Island were ordered to evacuate.

But forecasters were expecting the hurricane to skirt the Mid-Atlantic Coast on Tuesday night, then turn to the northeast sometime today and veer offshore, sparing the Northeast its worst fury.

At 11 p.m., the center of the hurricane was near 36.0 north latitude and 74.7 west longitude, about 90 miles southeast of Virginia Beach, Va. The storm, which had been moving generally toward the northwest earlier in the day, had curved toward the north and, later, toward the north-northeast. Its forward motion was nearly 13 mph, up from 9 mph earlier Tuesday.

BEAR: Park officials put up crossing signs

Park officials estimate that a dozen bears now inhabit Big Bend — more than are found anywhere else in the state. So far this year, visitors have reported 170 bear sightings — more than double the number for any full year.

Most of the sightings have been in the mountains, but bears also have been reported at lower elevations. They've been seen outside the park as well, on private land and at the nearby Black Gap state wildlife management area.

"Their return here is one of the greatest things that have happened in Big Bend's history," said Raymond Skiles, the park's wildlife biologist. "It's mind-boggling and fascinating."

It also has brought new challenges to the National Park Service, said Kevin Cheri, assistant superintendent at Big Bend.

Officials want to avoid the "bear jams" that plague Yellowstone, Great Smoky Mountains and other national parks, where motorists stop to photograph and tease animals that have lost their natural fear of humans.

The service is taking a two-pronged approach at Big Bend: educating visitors and bear-proofing receptacles for food and garbage.

Crews recently installed 50 metal food lockers at mountain campsites used by backpackers. Special lids costing more than $500 each have been acquired for trash bins at the popular Chisos Mountains Basin campground.

Yellow road signs show a bear walking. Other signs admonish visitors, "Do not feed the animals."

Karen Boucher, a park ranger, gave another piece of advice during a recent evening slide show at the Chisos campground, which occasionally is visited by bears: "Please make sure you put all your food in your vehicle."

No one has been hurt by a bear, but a few encounters have left visitors shaken. Two years ago, a female bear escorting two cubs dashed toward a hiker and skidded to a stop 20 feet away — a type of behavior that wildlife biologists call a "bluff charge."

"In a case like that, the best thing to do is back out slowly," Skiles said. "The chance of injury is so minuscule even though it might seem threatening."

In another incident, a bear entered a campsite after someone poured sardine juice on the ground. "That was like a dinner bell for the bear," said Skiles, who has seen three bears in the past two years.

Teinert had a few tense moments during his encounter. He figures the bear was 25 yards away and weighed about 250 pounds.

"When I first saw it, I kind of just stood there and thought, 'What's going to happen here?' I realized the bear wasn't too interested in me. Definitely my heart rate went up a little bit," Teinert said.

Another animal that Big Bend visitors enjoy seeing — but also find a bit unsettling — is the mountain lion. About 24 roam the park. Two visitors were injured seriously by mountain lions in the 1980s.

It's not precisely clear why the black bear is staging a comeback.

PACT: Mideast peace talks reopen

(From 1A)

But in the Arab world beyond, and in Israel, there was anxiety and some bitter opposition forming to the agreement.

Many Israelis worried about giving Arafat a toehold on the West Bank, some 20 miles from Jerusalem, while militant Arabs questioned the Palestinians settling for less than a state at this stage.

Jewish demonstrators in Jerusalem called for rejection of the plan. Opposition leader Binyamin Netanyahu led a delegation of parliament members through Jericho, and police arrested two protesters while breaking up a rally outside Rabin's house.

Most of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip was closed down by a strike called by Islamic fundamentalists and dissident PLO factions to protest the peace talks. Merchants in Jericho defied the strike.

Jordan's King Hussein flew unexpectedly to Damascus for emergency talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad, and Arafat was under death threats from hard-line Palestinian rivals.

After a two-hour meeting in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Arafat told reporters confidently: "We will reach a just and comprehensive peace that will account for the Palestinian people's political rights."

Shaath, the PLO coordinator for the talks, said the basic outline of the declaration had already been worked out and that the negotiations, which resumed Tuesday after a two-month recess, were in a "holding pattern" awaiting approval of the PLO executive committee and the Israeli parliament.

The negotiators would then sign the declaration — probably in Washington — and move on to the fine print, he said. By way of example, Israeli sources said this would include how Israeli forces would have access to Jewish residents of Gaza.

Israeli Ambassador Itamar Rabinovich, also upbeat, said "there are no technical or substantive problems" remaining. He said the accord would be concluded by the end of the round next Thursday.

Yeltsin blasts foes with new parliament proposal

By Thomas Ginsberg
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW — After failing to defeat his opponents head-on, President Boris Yeltsin is trying a new tactic: circumvent them with plans for a new legislative body and state treasury.

The strategy, however, may only intensify his power struggle with the Russian parliament and heighten the risk of "dual government" paralysis. The parliament is led by Yeltsin's main political rival, speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov.

Yeltsin had promised a battle this fall to end the feud with hard-line lawmakers, who have assailed his political and economic reforms over the past two years claiming they are impoverishing and dividing Russia.

Yeltsin's chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, told the ITAR-Tass news agency that a new 176-seat legislative body, called the Federation Council, would be created next week.

He said the council would become the upper chamber of a new national parliament, apparently as envisioned in Yeltsin's draft constitution. Filatov said that current legislators would form the lower house.

There was no immediate reaction from Khasbulatov or other legislative leaders, who have opposed any change that could dilute their power.

Yeltsin could create a council unilaterally under the executive branch, as he did last June in convening a 700-member Constitutional Convention.

But he does not have the right to give the council real legislative powers or link it with the current parliament without approval by the Supreme Soviet legislature or its parent Congress of People's Deputies. He also does not have the right unilaterally to call parliamentary elections.

Canadian fishing policy hits hard on East Coast

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — A 500-year-old way of life on Canada's east coast suffered a stunning blow Tuesday when Ottawa virtually banned cod fishing and announced quota cuts that could put 12,000 people out of work.

The new job losses are in addition to the 30,000 people left unemployed by last year's ban on cod fishing off eastern Newfoundland and quota cuts imposed to save fish stocks devastated by overfishing and climate change.

Fisheries Minister Ross Reid announced the new cuts and a $190-million ($144 million U.S.) short-term compensation package.

The ban covers cod on the eastern Scotian shelf off Nova Scotia, the southern Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Sydney Bight area off Cape Breton and the south coast of Newfoundland. Quotas on other valuable species like pollock and plaice were sharply cut.

There has been cod fishing around Newfoundland since the island was discovered by John Cabot in 1497.

"It doesn't mean abandoning all our rural communities," Reid said. "It doesn't mean abandoning our very unique and important way of life. But it means recognizing that all of us can't be there forever."

The only areas left open to cod fishing are the Georges Bank, off southwestern Nova Scotia, and the northern Gulf of St. Lawrence between Quebec and Newfoundland. But even in those areas, most of this year's allowable catch has already been landed.

East Coast fishermen have seven days to remove their nets from the affected areas, Reid said.

A blue-ribbon panel — the Fisheries Resource Conservation Council — recommended the closure a week ago.

"We are facing an unprecedented ecological crisis in Atlantic groundfish stocks," said Reid. "Immediate action is needed to permit this fragile resource to rebuild."

Russia pulls last combat troops from Lithuania

KAUNUS, Lithuania (NYT) — The last Russian combat unit rumbled homeward Tuesday night, ending five decades of occupation and marking the first time Moscow has dismantled its military apparatus in any of the ex-Soviet republics.

"I am just a man who feels like he is free," exclaimed retired teacher Vincentus Pukelis, 68, as he watched Russian paratroopers in grease-stained, patched uniforms standing their final formation on Lithuanian soil. "I just hope they don't come back."

Pukelis spoke bitterly about how, as a schoolboy, he handed bunches of flowers to the first wave of Soviet occupation troops when they rolled in aboard ox carts in 1940. "I was forced to do it by my school," he said.

The Russian pullout, which had remained in question as late as Monday, was greeted rapturously in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius. Fireworks filled the night sky at a giant street party as word reached the capital that a 52-car train carrying the Russians was nearly out of Lithuania.

"This was awaited, dreamed about," said Lithuanian President Algirdas Brazauskas at a ceremony in Vilnius.

But the joy was tinged with suspicion, partly because Russia did not fully deliver on its 11-month-old promise to remove every last Russian soldier by midnight on Aug. 31.

Defense Minister Audrius Butkevicius disclosed that 300 Russian soldiers in a half-dozen scattered medical, ammunition storage and service units would remain in Lithuania for up to several months.

The last combat unit to leave was the once-crack 108th Russian Parachute Regiment, now down to 220 men in tattered khakis and facing a cold winter at a new base in Siberia that lacks housing.

Report cites need for change in ATF

An internal investigation reviewing the assault by federal agents for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in February has confirmed what was already obvious to many observers: that the ATF was going ahead with a paramilitary operation that had already been disclosed to the people inside the Branch Davidian complex and that senior officials with the agency were too detached from the operation.

More than a few times since the Feb. 28th assault on the complex and the intense fire that raced through the structure April 19th, killing more than 80 members of the religious followers of David Koresh, various individuals close to the Waco disaster have questioned why the ATF didn't merely contact Koresh instead of going to the complex en masse Feb. 28th. He had been cooperative with local officials previously and such an approach might have avoided the need for the confrontational situation that arose when heavily-armed ATF agents rushed the building.

Even more questionable is the decision of the ATF leadership to go ahead with the paramilitary operation even though they knew that the heavily-armed religious group had been alerted to the impending raid.

Speculation that ATF Director Stephen E. Higgins' job may be on the line as a result of the botched Waco operation is understandable. But Higgins should not be used merely as a scapegoat for what could be even deeper problems in the bureau. Higgins has commented that more than 200 such operations have been conducted nationwide with no loss of lives for ATF agents. At Waco, four agents were killed and 15 wounded. And that's to say nothing of the 17 children or the 69 others who perished in the April 19th fire.

In one such ATF assault in Utah, agents killed the wife and 14-year-old son of Randy Weaver, a former Green Beret who agents asserted had sold illegal weapons. Agents approached Weaver's mountain-top home with personnel tanks and heavy arms. That's pretty serious firepower for an individual suspected of selling a sawed-off shotgun to an undercover agent.

In the trial that followed, Weaver was acquitted of the charge against him and testimony revealed officials had lied in attempting to convict him.

That leads us to wonder just what is going on within the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. There obviously needs to be a thorough investigation of the Waco disaster, but also of how the ATF has been operating in recent years. Changes apparently need to be made before more Americans die needlessly.

New airline commission comes up with good ideas

President Clinton's special commission on strengthening the airline industry already has scored one success: In passing this summer's deficit-reduction bill, Congress followed the commission's advice by exempting airlines from new taxes on fuel. But if that was a good idea, there are more where it came from. The commission's final report . . . contains additional suggestions for stabilizing the financially troubled industry.

One of the most sensible wasn't included in the earlier draft report that contained the fuel-tax exemption proposal. That's to change the bankruptcy law to prevent financially troubled airlines from taking advantage of the protection the law gives them against creditors to undercut the fares of healthier and better-managed competitors.

Other commission recommendations include rescinding recent increases in airline ticket taxes, increasing the allowable percentage of foreign ownership of stock in a U.S. airline from 25 percent to 49 percent, creating a watchdog panel to keep track of airlines' financial stability, and establishing an independent government corporation to ensure that the air traffic control network has stable funding. . . .

A fully recovered economy would help the airline industry most. In the meantime, Congress and the administration can keep 'em flying by adopting more of the commission's recommendations.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 31, the 243rd day of 1993. There are 122 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 31, 1980, Poland's Solidarity labor movement was born with an agreement signed in Gdansk that ended a 17-day strike.

On this date:

In 1881, the first U.S. tennis championships were played, in Newport, R.I.

In 1886, an earthquake rocked Charleston, S.C., killing up to 110 people.

In 1887, inventor Thomas A. Edison received a patent for his kinetoscope, a device which produced moving pictures.

In 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed an act prohibiting the export of U.S. arms to belligerents.

In 1941, the radio program "The Great Gildersleeve," a spin-off of "Fibber McGee and Molly," made its debut on NBC.

In 1954, Hurricane Carol hit the northeastern United States, killing about 70 people.

Free enterprise grips academic halls

WASHINGTON — The worlds of free enterprise and federally funded education are in collision. But Peter Taborsky probably never thought it would help land him in jail.

Anderson

Taborsky was an undergraduate research assistant at the University of South Florida in 1987 when he discovered a new wastewater treatment process. Six years later, Taborsky was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in a state prison for refusing to turn over the patent to the University of South Florida.

University officials have claimed that Taborsky was told when he was hired that all research conducted on the premises would be proprietary to Florida Progress Corp., a holding company for the state's major electric utility. Taborsky has maintained that the research was conducted on his own time, and therefore it belongs to him.

Most research collaborations don't end up with the full force of a state legal system crashing down on an undergraduate, yet the Taborsky case illustrates an emerging truth in medical research: The drive for funding is turning universities large and small into venture capitalists.

With federal research dollars shrinking each year, and the demand for new research on the rise, the already blurry line between enterprise and academia is calling out for government refereeing.

Advocates of free enterprise may say "What's wrong with a scientist going into business for him or herself?" But it isn't always that simple, especially when the academic is working for an institution that is funded by the public. A similar principle applies to newspapers. When a reporter goes to work for a paper, the writer's work becomes the property of the publisher because the paper is paying the reporter to write. If the reporter wants to write on his or her own time, then fine. Wouldn't the same principle apply to a university that is paying an academic to conduct scientific research?

Many scientists also believe that universities are going too far in promoting and protecting the relationships they have with private interests, sometimes to the detriment of consumers.

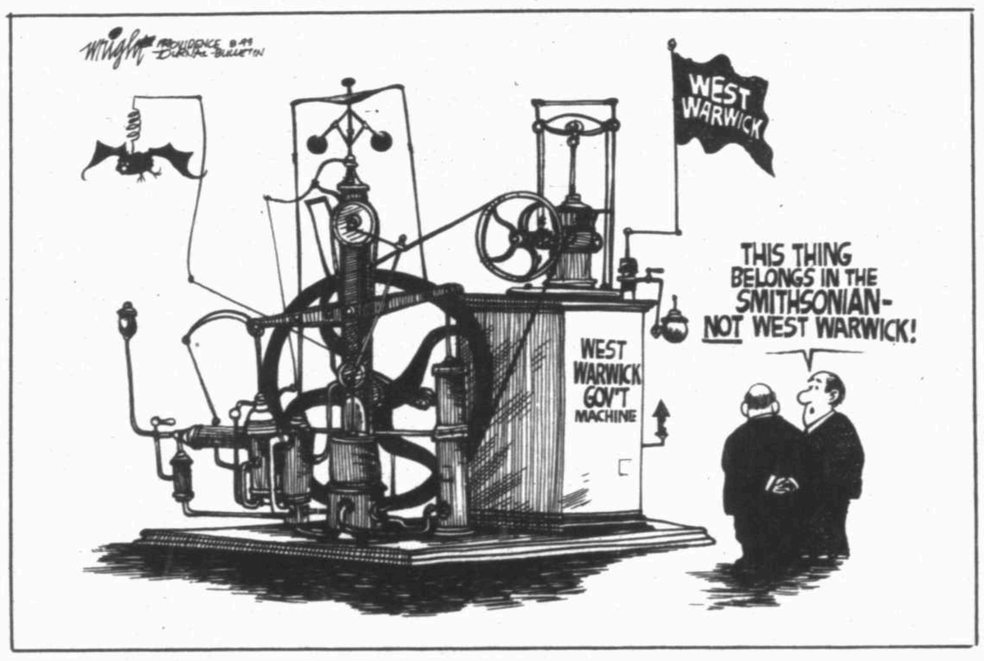

The public-private partnerships made news recently when Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., blew the whistle on a proposed collaboration between Scripps Research Institute of La Jolla, Calif., and the Sandoz Corp. of Switzerland. Under the terms of this agreement, Scripps would turn over exclusive rights of first refusal of all its research to the Sandoz Corp., in exchange for $300 million over 10 years. Wyden was outraged in part because Scripps receives about 65 percent of its funding from the National Institutes of Health, meaning taxpayers would essentially be left subsidizing research that goes to a foreign corporation.

A similar case arose recently in California. Dr. Maurice Buchbinder of San Diego, a state university employee, is one of the inventors of the rotablator, a drill that is placed on the end of a catheter which helps clear out blocked arteries. It's been billed as technology that will replace angioplasty.

For his services as inventor, the company that is marketing his product paid Buhbinder more than $14 million in stock and stock options. Although it's perfectly legal, some FDA officials are pushing for fuller disclosure of such cases in the future.

Should research scientists on a publicly funded payroll become venture capitalists? The question may be difficult to answer, especially in these uncertain economic times, but many people feel quite certain that clearer guidelines should be established.

America needs stronger Bosnian policy

PARIS — More than 10,000 U.S. troops, drawn mainly from the 1st Armored Division in Bad Kreuznach, Germany, were on the verge of being sent as part of a NATO force to Bosnia-Herzegovina to impose the wrong peace in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Safire

Had the Bosnian Muslims bowed to Western pressure to accept the latest surrender terms proposed by the U.N. — a humiliation Bosnia's Parliament this weekend unanimously rejected — the U.S. forces would have become guarantors of a Munich-style sellout that would have created a gulag of ghettos and encouraged future ethnic cleansing.

How did the Clinton administration stumble to this brink?

First, by cravenly caving in to the French and British reluctance to arm the Muslims and to suppress Serbian-Croatian firepower from the air.

Second, by reacting to this allied rebuff with a foolish commitment to use our forces in NATO to support any surrender terms that the U.N. could work out.

Third, by abdicating operational authority to the U.N., thereby undermining our threats to use air power to stop the Serbian shelling of civilians — at a moment when the only incentive to negotiate came from the possibility of our air attacks.

Fourth, by limiting our involvement in the peace negotiations to occasional expressions of distaste, as if to dissociate the U.S. in advance from betrayal of principle — and then, behind the scenes, to urge the Muslim Bosnians to swallow the repugnant terms because U.S. protection would not be forthcoming until they gave up.

No doubt the Bush acquiescence two years ago in the U.N. cutoff of arms to the Bosnian Muslims was a diplomatic blunder. But this year's false starts belong on Bill Clinton's doorstep, and his apparent willingness to use U.S. troops to enforce a U.N.-sponsored surrender will lead to Clinton's Balkan Mess.

People of my strategic persuasion favored a hunkering-down of U.N. humanitarians on the scene while Western powers gave Serbian irregulars a taste of their own medicine.

Instead, what we have now is the undenied appearance of the promise of U.S. ground troop involvement in the U.S.-led policing of a surrender that the American people had no say in and want no part of. American lives would be at risk in a protracted entanglement where U.S. policy never came into play and U.S. diplomatic muscle was never applied.

No, thanks. The inept Clinton secretary of state has given a blank check to the U.N.'s Boutros Boutros-Ghali: You decide what the policy is to be and how much it will cost in lives and treasure, and the U.S. will obey. Is America to be a payer but not a player? Even unreconstructed hawks get off the train at that stop.

When Mr. Clinton finally gives a speech wrapping himself in the glories of multilateralism, he will not be able to sell the U.N.-brokered surrender as remotely honorable, especially considering the U.N.'s one-sided disarmament. If he continues tacitly to endorse the U.N. deal, he could only plead that slow strangulation in ghettos would be better than quick death in war.

Such argument would draw derision from across the spectrum because America will not defend with its lives what it cannot defend with its conscience. The problem is not the Bosnian unwillingness to submit to hopelessness, like good victims; the problem is the Serbo-Croat demand for Muslim humiliation and the Western powers' lack of backbone.

What can Mr. Clinton do now? He can get on the hook to Mitterrand and Major with changes of the U.N. terms to give Muslim Bosnia some territorial contiguity and undisputed control of its capital of Sarajevo.

He should arrange swift, certain NATO retaliation for any aggression during negotiations. He should set the terms for the participation of U.S. forces in NATO peacemaking, not make our troops pawns in U.N. hand wringing.

Time is running out, Mr. Clinton. Avoid the U.N. trap. Send Europe the message: Bosnia alive or NATO dead.

How does 'Hillary's Vineyard' strike you?

MARTHA'S VINEYARD — The presidential vacation on Martha's Vineyard is over, and no one here will ever be the same. The calls keep coming in from around the country: "Did you see the President?"

Buchwald

No one in his right mind would admit he didn't see Bill Clinton so we have to make things up.

"I saw him, but he didn't see me. That's why he ran over me in his golf cart."

"I didn't see him, but my best friend Tess has the same bathing suit as Hillary."

"We would have invited the Clintons to our cookout, but we didn't have enough steak."

"We missed hearing from the Clintons because our answering machine went on the fritz when they arrived."

"We're not talking to them. Fred and Bill were at Oxford together — but when Fred waved to him at the airport, Bill didn't even know who he was."

"Ellen and I are not the types to make a big deal over the President and his wife on Martha's Vineyard. After all, they only rent, and we own."

"I heard the President wants to join the Farm Neck Golf Club, but four conservative Democratic members are threatening to blackball him."

"I can't talk to you about what happened when they were here, but Hillary never returned my corn pudding recipe."

"I told the President if he really cared about Martha's Vineyard, he'd give every one of us a new septic tank."

"Bill and Hillary made us promise on the beach if we came to Arkansas to be sure and look them up."

"What I loved about the Clintons on the Vineyard is that they did everything we wanted to do."

"The President isn't much of a sailor, so I told him to sit in the back of the boat and shut up while I was tacking."

"We sent Chelsea a sparrow's egg from Chilmark so she owes us a thank-you note."

"A lot of people on the Vineyard claim to know the Clintons intimately, but they told us at breakfast that, except for Vernon Jordan and ourselves, they hardly knew anybody at all."

"Everyone in the press calls us rich and famous because the Clintons were here. That doesn't mean we don't use the same suntan shield on our bodies as the middle class."

"If I told you that we never dined with the Clintons the entire time they were on the island, would you believe me? I thought you wouldn't — but that's our story and we're sticking to it."

"Susanna is mad at me because I wouldn't wait on State Road for four hours to wave to Bill as he went by. She claims I would have done it for Ross Perot — which is not necessarily true, though Perot has a lot of good ideas."

"When we came to Martha's Vineyard, it was a quiet little island and the only thing that ever happened was the Queen Elizabeth crashing on the rocks outside our windows. I put the President's vacation in the same category."

"The big question that was never resolved by Clinton's visit was, were there more sharks in the water or more in the White House press corps?"

"We have mixed feelings on the Clintons. Half of us are pleased they chose the island. But the other half objects strongly to David Gergen wanting to change the name to 'Hillary's Vineyard.' "

Clinton's plan to include buyouts, early retirement, retraining

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's plan to "reinvent government" will offer early retirement, buyouts, transfers and retraining to thousands of federal workers who would no longer be needed in a streamlined, high-tech operation, officials said Tuesday.

The National Performance Review, headed by Vice President Al Gore under orders from Clinton, is designed to reshape the federal bureaucracy by consolidating operations, making government agencies compete with private firms and treating taxpayers like customers.

The White House believes the plan could reduce the 2.1 million-person non-postal federal work force by at least 100,000 before 1995, the goal Clinton set early this year. "It could exceed that number," said a senior White House official.

An administration official involved in drafting Gore's report said the number of federal employees affected may be closer to 200,000. It was also unclear how much money Gore expects to save with his plan, although early estimates projected $10 billion in savings over five years.

The details will be released next Tuesday at a news conference with Gore, Clinton and the Cabinet. The president will go on the road for two days next week to promote the plan.

Clinton also will establish the President's Management Council to implement the recommendations, according to an administration budget official familiar with the report. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

The order will require each Cabinet secretary and agency head to name a chief operating officer, who then will sit on the council.

The latest draft of the report recommends opening the government printing operation to allow competition with the private sector, said the officials. The Government Printing Office, which gets almost all of the business now, is considered slower and more expensive than private operations.

Agencies would be allowed to use private-sector printers.

The recommendation would be part of an overhaul of the purchasing process that would eliminate unnecessary rules to give federal workers freedom to buy items at the lowest cost and with the most efficiency.

One idea would allow managers to buy equipment with a government-issued credit card at a local retailer, bypassing lengthy and expensive procurement procedures.

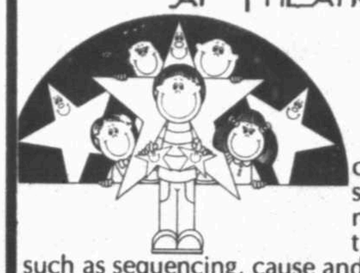

Gore has told horror stories of the government losing $2,500 to save $10 on the purchase of steam traps, of spending $40 for $10 lawn cuttings because neighborhood kids couldn't be hired, and of long waits for overpriced and useless office equipment.

He will recommend overhauling the civil service system.

Appeals court upholds ruling on Demjanjuk

CINCINNATI (AP) — A federal appeals court said it will not reconsider its order allowing John Demjanjuk to return to the United States.

Demjanjuk, 73, a former autoworker in suburban Cleveland, was convicted in Israel in 1988 of being the sadistic Nazi death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible." He was sentenced to die, but the Israeli Supreme Court overturned his conviction and sentence on July 29.

■ More national news/5B

On Tuesday, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals let stand an Aug. 6 ruling by a three-judge appeals panel that Demjanjuk be allowed to return to the United States while the court investigates whether the government withheld evidence that could have helped him fight his 1986 extradition to Israel.

The Justice Department had asked the full appeals court to reconsider the panel's ruling. The court also rejected the department's request to stay the ruling.

The Justice Department had no immediate reaction, spokesman Carl Stern said in Washington. It could appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Demjanjuk is still in prison in Israel, and the Israeli Supreme Court has given Nazi hunters until Thursday to present evidence supporting allegations that he participated in other Nazi crimes during World War II.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk said he was a prisoner during the war.

The Justice Department has argued he should not be allowed back in the United States because a U.S. court took away his citizenship in 1981, and because there is evidence he engaged in Nazi persecution of Jews.

Robbery suspect

FBI officials have released this composite drawing of the suspect in Monday's robbery of Western National Bank in Odessa. Although the suspect is similar in appearance to the man who robbed Texas Commerce Bank in Midland on Aug. 20, law enforcement officials said they are unable to say if the two banks were robbed by the same man. Both suspects are still at large. The Odessa suspect has been described as a white man, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing approximately 150 pounds with short blond hair. The Midland suspect has been described as a white man, 5 feet 9 to 5 feet 10 inches, weighing 120 to 125 pounds, with blond hair and a thin mustache.

Break in

BIG SPRING — Police are looking for the suspect in a robbery that occurred Monday night. According to a police report, 81-year-old Billie Marie Moore told police that she was awakened at about 10:30 p.m. when someone broke into her residence in the 400 block of Hillside. Ms. Moore said a male shoved her down several times and demanded money and jewelry. He then tied her up with a telephone cord and took her purse. Ms. Moore was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Hospital. Police did not release a description of the man Tuesday.

Kidnapping

ODESSA — Odessa police arrested a man Monday who was wanted in a kidnapping that occurred Sunday. According to a police report, 25-year-old Esther Garcia of Odessa told police that she was at the 7-Eleven Store, located at 6001 Eastridge Road, when someone known to her abducted her about 2 a.m. Sunday. Police arrested Oliver Ornelas, 22, of Odessa at about 7:40 p.m. Monday and he was charged with kidnapping. Bond was set at $7,500.

Car fight

A Midland man was dragged by a car Monday night after he and the driver allegedly got into a fight. According to a police report, officers responded to Albertsons, located at 1002 Andrews Highway, at approximately 7 p.m. Monday in reference to a person being struck by a car. Upon arrival, the victim, 18-year-old Humberto Palma, told officers that the driver of the vehicle made gestures like he wanted to fight. Palma said that when he stood his ground, the driver began to drive toward him, the report stated. Palma said his first instinct was to jump on top of the vehicle, which he did, causing some damage to the vehicle. The driver, a 16-year-old male, told police that after Palma struck the vehicle, he then leaned into the window and began fighting with him. The juvenile stated that he grabbed Palma and drove several feet in order to scare him, the report stated. No charges had been filed in the incident.

Town bigots

VIDOR — Ugly catcalls have taken their toll on Bill Simpson and John DecQuir. After just six months, Vidor's only remaining black residents are packing their bags, frightened by too many instances of harassment. "There are good people here, don't get me wrong," said Simpson, a 7-foot, 300-pound transplant from nearby Beaumont. "But it's overshadowed by the negativity, the hostility, the bigotry of this town."/4B

Bonilla blasts Democrats for stand on NAFTA, recently passed budget

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Fresh from a trip with five other Republicans to visit with Mexico's president, U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla made a stop in Midland Tuesday, with harsh words for Democrats for their stand on NAFTA and the recently passed budget.

The congressman spoke to about 80 residents at a dinner sponsored by the Midland County Republican Women at Casa de Amigos.

"I have met with many businesses over the past weeks," said Bonilla. "And, they all support the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). It will kill Texas and Mexican business relations not to have this agreement. Unfortunately, the paranoid Democrats, as well as Ross Perot, have built up a pretty strong stand against it."

Bonilla said citizens should continue to keep in touch with their congressmen, particularly those who are either opposed to the agreement or indecisive, and urge them to vote for NAFTA.

"We have to outwork the big labor forces and the big lawyers who have taken over government," he said. "NAFTA will create jobs. It is worth fighting for."

The congressman also criticized the Democrats for passing President Clinton's budget package and praised Republicans for opposing it.

Labor unions: 'Greed' is key to agreement

■ Representatives denounce NAFTA, urge congressional members to vote against plan.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The greed of big investors backed by bureaucrats, and the low wages of Mexican workers has resulted in a proposed North American Free Trade Agreement that can only hurt American workers, three union representatives said Tuesday.

"The whole NAFTA agreement can be summed up in one word — greed," said D.L. Willis, president of the Permian Basin Central Labor Union, AFL-CIO.

Willis, along with Gene Nix, business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local Union 460, and Brian Chandler, district director of the Texas Farmers Union, denounced NAFTA and urged congressional members to vote against the plan.

The union representatives said President Clinton's recent negotiations of NAFTA have not improved considerations for the American worker and public.

As outlined, the agreement would cost a "tremendous amount" of good-paying jobs — many union — to cheap labor offered in Mexico, Willis said.

Texas alone could lose 410,000 jobs, Willis said citing a study by the Economic Policy Institute.

"During these economic hard times, the continuing jobs recession, base closings, defense down-sizing and other layoffs in our state, Texas cannot afford to send even one more job to Mexico," he said.

In addition to the loss of work for Americans, NAFTA would lower the standard of living, damage the environment and do nothing to save the Mexican worker from poverty, Willis said.

For Texas farmers, NAFTA means taking away trade barriers — specifically import quotas — that would allow Mexico to import products from other countries and flood the United States with inexpensive exports, Chandler said. That, in turn, would adversely affect production stateside.

Chandler also expressed concern about the more lax restrictions on pesticides and herbicides in Mexico. "That's not fair for us" in terms of jobs and health, he said.

On the other side of the border, the plight of the Mexican poor will not benefit, the union representatives said. With workers being paid as low as 63 cents an hour, NAFTA would be simply exploitation, they said.

Furthermore, the trade agreement would do nothing to help Mexican workers' rights denied by their government, Nix said.

And NAFTA will not stem the tide of illegal immigrants, as some proponents claim, because wages and benefits will continue to be better in the United States, the union representatives said.

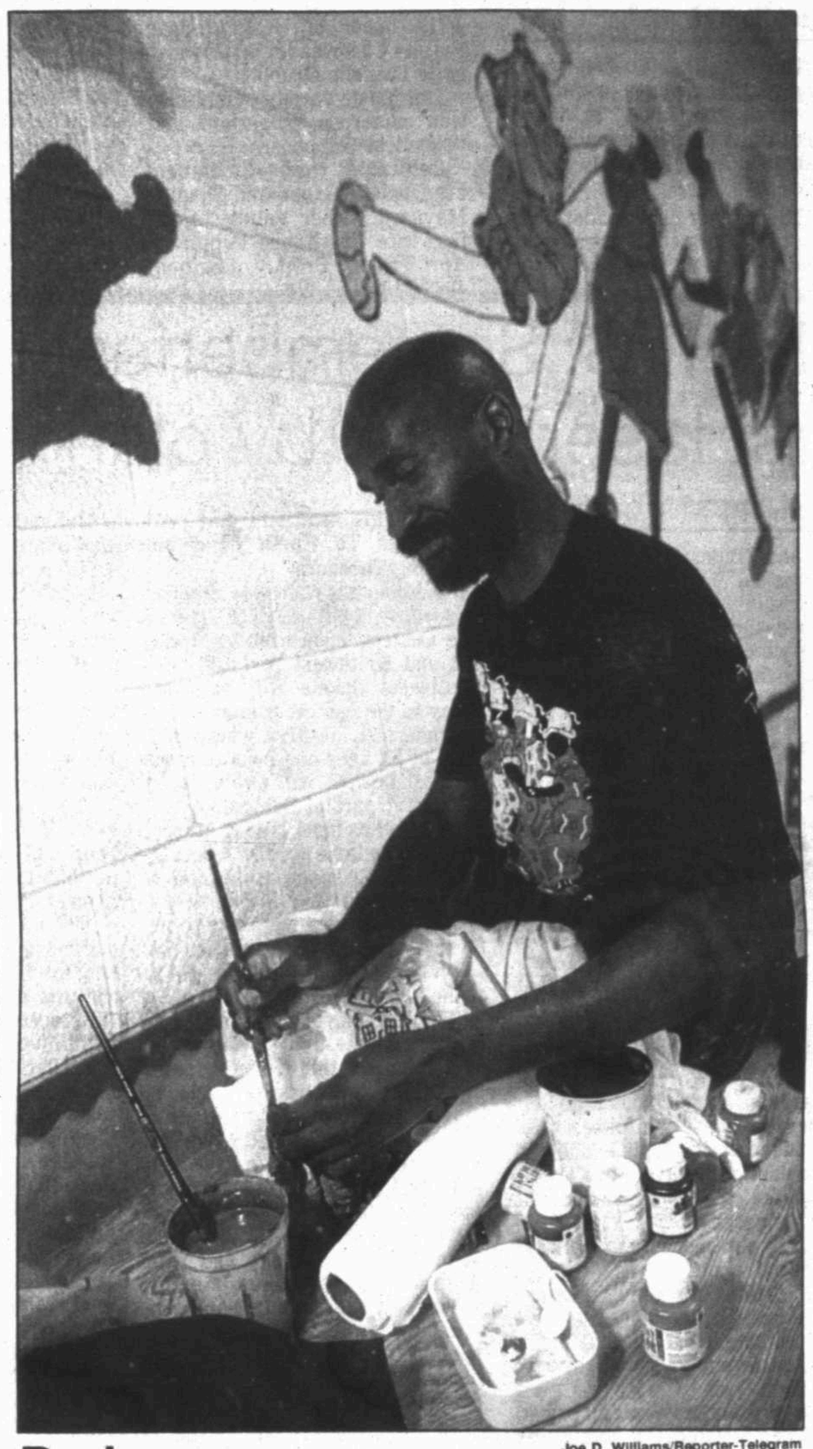

Residents of the Permian Basin will be directly affected eventually through a lower standard of wages and companies moving production to Mexico, Willis said.

Some NAFTA supporters claim the Midland area will serve as a corridor for transportation thus benefitting from NAFTA.

The unions disagreed. Service industries — which some say would pick up in the United States — would come out of Mexico in addition to manufacturing. For example, Nix said, Mexican truckers will benefit, because of lower pay, not Americans.

The union representatives said that if Mexican workers earned a decent wage, and the American people — not just the bureaucrats — had a say in a

Apartment complex to host poolside party to raise money for Flood Aid '93

While the rains in the Permian Basin may leave residents soggy for a brief time, the staff of a local apartment complex is sponsoring a "pool splash" to raise money for Flood Aid '93 to benefit the flood victims in the Midwest.

Treemont Apartments will host a poolside party from 1-5 p.m. Sunday at the complex, which is located at 5216 Treemont, off Loop 250 across the highway from Midland Park Bowling Lanes.

Apartment Manager Denise Hanson said she and members of her staff came up with the idea to raise the funds for the flood victims. She said the apartment complex sponsors an annual fund-raiser for different charities.

Visitors will be asked to provide a $2 donation to attend the event, although it is not required. Food, drinks and entertainment will be provided for free to all those attending. Ms. Hanson said the planners hope guests will donate as much as they feel able to give. The money will be turned over to the local Red Cross and designated for flood relief.

Planetarium to bring laser show to Septemberfest '93 this month

Brilliant dancing beams of light will fill the Marian Blakemore Planetarium this month during the Museum of the Southwest's Septemberfest.

"Jami Owen, who is the chair of Septemberfest, felt like the role of the planetarium had been secondary in the past, and she expressed an interest in having it be included more in Septemberfest," said Mark Hartman, planetarium director.

"I mentioned laser shows, and it seemed to kind of click with her that it would be a good thing to pursue or at least look into, and that's where it was born."

For more than a decade, Laser Artistry has created award-winning performances throughout the United States and has been a charter member of the International Laser Display Association. In Midland, the company will present a show during Septemberfest's Preview Party Sept. 10.

Theme for this year's Preview Party is "An Affair to Remember: A Romantic Evening of Italian Elegance." Italian cuisine, by the

More than million Texas students end their summer, return to college

DALLAS (AP) — The temperature may still be near the century mark, but summer is over for nearly 1 million Texans.

Classes have either already started or are about to open at colleges and universities across the state. Enrollment statewide is expected to be right above the 900,000 mark this year, including a record number of minority students, educators say.

Some 48,500 students have been back at the state's largest school, the University of Texas at Austin, for nearly a week.

At the state's second-largest college, in College Station, 43,000 students went back to school Monday. So did students at Texas Tech in Lubbock and the University of North Texas in Denton.

Freshmen in many cases went early to take part in orientations that included everything from study tips to A&M's "Fish Camp," where Aggies go to learn all the important things about being an Aggie, such as the famous Aggie yells.

BACK: Millions return to college

(From 1B)

Prompted in part by the growing national debate over whether colleges should require students to take "multi-cultural" classes, a number of colleges are including optional courses in orientation that focus on ethnic differences this year.

So far, Texas A&M is the only university in Texas that makes such courses a requirement. Texas A&M's College of Liberal Arts voted this summer to require all of its students entering school in 1994 or later to take at least six hours of class work focusing on ethnic groups or countries and international topics other than the Western culture that has long dominated American curriculum.

Such requirements have sparked intense debates on campuses in Texas and across the country, and the A&M debate is likely to kick in again later this year when the faculty is expected to vote on whether to require students in all of its colleges to meet the multi-cultural prerequisites.

The University of Texas at Austin fiercely argued the issue last year. The proposed requirement was finally rejected by the faculty senate, which decided that its curriculum already had a broad range of required classes offering non-Western views of the world.

Texas A&M's interim dean for the liberal arts college, Woodrow Jones Jr., said feedback on his school's action has been divided, but he believes the school did the right thing.

"We implemented this in hopes that students would get something that would help them be better prepared for the global market place," he said.

Opponents say the programs are attempts at "political correctness" that infringe on educational freedom.

But Jones said with projections that the state will be "majority minority" by the year 2003, institutions won't be able to ignore the need for breaking down racial and ethnic barriers.

"The whole state of Texas is changing rapidly so it's kind of hard to avoid it," Jones said. "How could anyone expect to appropriately deal with the diversity that's out there?"

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, tried to pass a law this year requiring all state college students to take a multi-cultural class. That was prompted by parties at Texas Tech and Texas A&M with themes and costumes derogatory to blacks. One had a "party in the projects." Another had a jungle theme.

"People have dismissed the incidents ... as kids will be kids. But we think it speaks to a deeper-rooted type of problem. I don't know if I want to say racism or total insensitivity toward people," said Wilson's administrative assistant, Eric Glenn.

According to a report from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, total enrollments at colleges, universities and technical schools around the state surpassed 900,000 last year. They should top 943,000 by 1995 and break 1 million by 2000.

Of those enrollment increases, the officials expect the biggest jumps to continue to be in the enrollment of Hispanics and blacks.

In addition to looking at multicultural classes, universities are adopting programs to lure minorities into fields such as engineering, which have traditionally been dominated by white males.

A UT program that includes peer-tutoring, workshops and special summer programs has brought minority enrollment to 19 percent and put its minority graduation rate at an all-time high.

ed against something," he said. "Nobody had to do any arm-twisting or last minute calls to accomplish that. We knew where we stood from the beginning.

"I remember watching President Clinton go from office to office, door to door, trying to get the budget passed," he said. "And, it went from trying to pass it because it was good for the people to voting for it to save the president's future. Is that a reason to vote for something that is so significant, that will affect so many people?"

He then took the president to task for comparing the United States to other countries when trying to pass the budget.

"He pointed to the European countries and told Americans that we should be happy that we aren't paying as much in taxes as they are," Bonilla said. "He used this logic to justify raising our taxes. Well, America sets the standards — we don't follow other countries. We may use some things, but we don't pattern ourselves after others."

In reference to more community involvement in the Republican Party, Bonilla said it was a myth that the Republican Party did not represent the ideas of minorities.

"Kay Bailey Hutchison's historic win came from sections of Texas with high numbers of minorities," he said. "Corpus Christi, San Antonio, the border states. The Republican Party believes in free enterprise and lower taxes. And, I think it would be hard to find any minority who wanted to work more and pay more taxes.

"Minorities don't want handouts," he said. "They want to be self-sufficient, to stand on their own two feet. And, that's the same agenda of the Republican Party."

Midland Hilton, will be served and a classical harpist and strolling musicians will provide music for the occasion.

A posted-bid auction will be held during the Preview Party, which features donated works of art, valued at a minimum of $100, from artists participating in Septemberfest. Admission is $37.50 per person.

During Septemberfest, Sept. 11 and 12, laser shows will be presented every 30 minutes. Admission to these laser shows, sponsored by Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo-Buick-Mazda, the Reporter-Telegram, K-Lite 100.3 FM and News-West 9, will be $2, an amount that is in addition to admission to the annual event.

"Every year it seems to get better," said Ann Wardlaw, president of Las Manos and chair of the Septemberfest artist committee. "Jami's one of those people — she's so enthusiastic that you can't help but catch that enthusiasm and give 110 percent.

"All of our sponsors are always real good about coming through for us. I think it's going to be one of the best Septemberfests we've had. Of course, I say that every year, but every year's it's always real good."

The 23rd annual Septemberfest, which is presented as a fund raiser by Las Manos, the museum's auxiliary organization, also features extended Saturday hours. Instead of closing at 8 p.m. Sept. 11, the event will continue until 10 p.m. with the Jack Ingram Band of Dallas performing during the 8 to 10 p.m. dance. Ingram is the grandson of Midlander Jack Brown. Hours Sept. 12 are noon to 5 p.m.

The San Jacinto Band will open Septemberfest that Saturday as it has in the past. The Midland High cheerleaders, who are bound for a national competition in Dallas, will be performing cheers and a dance routine.

Also on stage during the day will be the Cherry Jones dancers, Midland Community Theatre singers, Summer Mummers volunteers, Pickwick Players from MCT and Gay Phillips, who will play with the Down To Earth band and Clucking Theodore.

Rounding out Saturday's activities will be the finals of the Karaokee Contest, sponsored by Texas 102 and Southwest Airlines. Two Southwest tickets will be given away to the contest winner.

Kinderfest, an area where children of all ages can earn coupons at most booths, will again be an important part of Septemberfest. Booths will include, among others, wood sculpting, go fish, petting zoo, tattoos, space walk and a dunking booth.

Booths featuring works by some 70 artists from throughout the Southwest provide the focal point of the two-day festival.

"We're going to have probably more first-time artists coming to Septemberfest than I can remember," said Mrs. Wardlow, who is moving into her fourth year as a Las Manos member. "This will be their first visit. And we have several real popular ones that are coming back.

"The Maskeys — Edith and John — are a husband and wife team who do watercolors. Kennith Wilson will be coming back. He was not with us last year, but he's coming this year. He uses Indian heads and buffalo head nickels and pennies and he make jewelry out of those."

Coming for the first time will be Phil Carter and Rodger Brown of Norman, Okla.

"They make wooden flutes," Mrs. Wardlaw said. "This is the first year I can remember that we have someone with an instrument as their craft."

Midland artists participating in the annual event include Leslie D'Allesandro Hill, colored pencils; Rejeana Diers, pottery; and Jo Dufo, clothing and miscellaneous items, who also designed this year's Septemberfest T-shirt.

Odessa artists include Tiffany and Todd Whitley, furniture; Nita and Harold Baldwin, stained glass; and Frances Tillery, figer and jewelry.

This year, local artist Paula Fasken will be judging the art. Ribbons will include those for first through third and honorable mentions. First place — Best of Show — will receive $100 and an automatic invitation and booth selection for Septemberfest 1994. Second and third place winners also will receive an automatic invitation to next year's event.

Earlier this summer, Jennifer Dixon, a May graduate of Greenwood High School, was chosen as the Septemberfest '93 Student Artist. Her artwork was chosen from more than 1,200 pieces at the 1992-'93 Student Art Festival and is featured on all Septemberfest '93 materials. Miss Dixon, who studied art under Jimmy Chappell, will attend Midland College this fall where she plans to major in art.

Admission to Septemberfest '93 is $4 for adults and $1 for children 4-12. Those under 3 years old will be admitted free. For more information call the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., 683-2882.

New state laws take effect today

AUSTIN (NYT) — A hodgepodge of new state laws takes effect on today, including one that bans the sale of alcohol outside a nude dancing bar in Arlington and another that regulates do-it-yourself slaughterhouses.

The 73rd legislative session, which wrapped up May 31, demonstrated once again lawmakers' ability to regulate virtually every aspect of life in Texas. Lawmakers approved 1,074 bills — many of which took effect immediately and 453 of which become law on Wednesday, 90 days after the session ended.

For the most part, laws passed in the last session appeared to be broader in scope than those approved in previous sessions, said Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth.

Arlington Mayor Richard Greene would agree with that, especially since he promoted the law that bans alcohol sales from a limousine service parked outside the all-nude bar, Club Legends. He sees the bar as "a significant negative in Arlington's family entertainment character."

U.S. Sen. Paul Gramm, a strong supporter of NAFTA, could not be reached for comment on Tuesday.

A spokesperson said U.S. Rep. Larry Combest has not seen the recent NAFTA side agreements and therefore has not made a decision on how he will vote.

A spokesperson for U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith addressed the contention that NAFTA will cost jobs to citizens.

"No one is saying some people are not going to lose their jobs ... but there would be many more jobs created. Free trade pretty much improves everyone's lot," said Scot Montrey, press secretary.

Swimming is also an activity planned for the event.

Ms. Hanson said all of the proceeds will go directly to the flood victims. She said Treemont Apartments will have no costs because all of the services and items were provided by area businesses.

"We appreciate all of the support from our sponsors and are looking forward to (the support of area residents) while having fun in the sun and helping out the flood victims during this time of crisis," Ms. Hanson said.

Friend finds missing girl with her 3 dogs

DALLAS (AP) — Six-year-old Morgan Littrell knew where she was all the time, so she wasn't worried.

But her anxious parents, friends and law enforcement officers didn't know where Morgan was from about 7:30 p.m. Monday.

After an all-night search, complete with helicopters, dogs, foot searchers and horse patrols, Morgan was found by a family friend wandering with her dogs about a mile from her home in Northwest Dallas at about 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Morgan, who hid behind a pillow to avoid the probing questions and cameras of the media, couldn't understand what all the fuss was about. She wondered why people kept coming to her house to talk to her.

"I knew I was gonna get home," she said. "I'm tired now and I just wanna go back in the house."

Morgan and dog buddies Sparkles, Blackie and Lady had spent the night in a field not far from the family's home.

"They (the dogs) all slept with me," Morgan said. "I knew where I was, I just got sleepy."

Morgan had left home with dogs in tow to visit a friend in the neighborhood. After a disagreement with the friend, the girl decided she preferred the company of her four-legged chums and set out on a walk, the girl's father John Wyatt said.

According to Morgan the walk turned into a run with the dogs taking the lead and pulling her further from home.

Sgt. Judy Katz said the Dallas police department pulled out all the stops when they were contacted about 10 p.m. Monday.

"We had several canine units on the scene, helicopters and foot searches and were starting up this morning when the girl was found," Sgt. Katz said Tuesday.

For all Morgan's bravado, she appeared happy to be back safe in her mother's arms.

"I was worried because she doesn't wander away," said Tracy Littrell, 32, the girl's mother with tears in her eyes. "When we realized she was gone, I just kept thinking about that kid in Mesquite."

Ms. Littrell's reference was actually about 8-year-old Kim Nguyen, an autistic child who wandered away from his Garland home and whose decomposed body was later found in a field east of Dallas.

But Morgan's story has a happier ending, an ending that Sgt. Katz said is more common than believed.

"Most of the missing kids actually do end up this way," Sgt. Katz said. "There are very few cases

Court awards teen $300,000 in settlement

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A teen-ager whose detention in a mental hospital led to state and federal investigations of private psychiatric institutions has been awarded $300,000 in a lawsuit settlement with the hospital.

Sid and Marianne Harrell, the boy's grandparents and legal guardians, agreed in court documents as part of the settlement for Jeramy Harrell not to reveal the amount awarded.

The $300,000 was paid "into the registry of this court for the sole use and benefit of Jeramy Harrell," stated an agreement sanctioned by state District Judge Michael Peden and quoted Tuesday in the San Antonio Express-News.

The Express-News first reported the April 1991 apprehension of Harrell, then 14.

Ensuing state investigations resulted in a legislative package of mental-health industry reform measures that Gov. Ann Richards signed into law in June. The reforms take effect Wednesday.

Defendants agreeing to the lawsuit settlement with the Harrell family included Colonial Hills Hospital of San Antonio, which closed May 1992, and its corporate owners, National Medical Enterprises of Santa Monica, Calif.

Last week, the FBI raided National Medical's corporate offices in Santa Monica and four regional offices, including one in Dallas.

The agreement with the Harrell family stated the Harrells "understand that this is a compromise of a doubtful and disputed claim and that such payment is not to be construed as an admission of liability on the part of any of the (hospital, its corporate owners and others), each of whom expressly deny any liability."

Hospital officials consistently claimed Jeramy Harrell voluntarily accompanied two private security officers to the hospital and that his grandparents agreed.

But the grandparents charged that the two officers, working for the now-closed Sector One Mental Health Services, intimidated them by threatening that the boy could be held longer at Colonial Hills if the family forced them to obtain a mental health apprehension warrant.

Sector One had contracts with Colonial Hills and five other private psychiatric hospitals in the San Antonio area.

Harrell was held five days and released only after U.S. Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, obtained a court order. Tejeda then was a state senator and the family's attorney.

In May 1992, Colonial Hills Hospital was found guilty of wrongful seizure of the teen.

Police: Attacker uses condoms, orders bathing

SAN ANTONIO — Women alone in their upscale homes have been the targets of a rapist who police say used condoms in two attacks and ordered his victims to bathe after assaulting them.

San Antonio police confirm they are investigating a series of burglaries and sexual assaults that have occurred since November in neighborhoods on the city's far north side.

The rapist usually cuts the phone lines in the house and puts a pillow or sheet over the victim's face during the attack, said police Sgt. Joe MacKay of the sex crimes unit.

"The victims say he is on them before they know it," MacKay was quoted as saying Tuesday in the San Antonio Express-News.

Investigators said Monday the rapist has targeted women who were alone in their homes, attacking them at knifepoint between midnight and 6 a.m.

In one attack, the rapist used a condom he had brought with him, and in another attack asked the victim if she had one, police said.

He also insisted his victims bathe after the attacks, presumably to destroy any physical evidence, investigators said.

He then would flee after taking expensive jewelry, police said.

John DecQuir stands with some of his belongings in his living room of his public housing apartment Tuesday in Vidor. DecQuir said racism has become so intolerable in Vidor that he is moving from the place he has called home for the past six months.

Last black residents pack their bags

VIDOR (AP) — Ugly catcalls have taken their toll on Bill Simpson and John DecQuir. After just six months, Vidor's only remaining black residents are packing their bags, frightened by too many instances of harassment.

"There are good people here, don't get me wrong," said Simpson, a 7-foot, 300-pound transplant from nearby Beaumont. "But it's overshadowed by the negativity, the hostility, the bigotry of this town."

A federal judge last year ordered the eastern Texas town, home to 11,000 whites, to desegregate its 70-unit public housing complex. A few blacks moved in last February, becoming Vidor's first black residents in at least 70 years. When they walked through town, they were hailed with racist slurs.

Simpson, 37, and DecQuir, 59, are the last of the arrivals to leave. They were preceded by two black women and their five children, who fled in July.

DecQuir moved out some of his belongings Tuesday — he's heading back to his native Beaumont — and Simpson is planning to depart on Wednesday to an undisclosed location.

While no one has physically attacked them, the men say the derisive yells, the threats and the oppressive fear have become all too much to bear.

"I've had people who drive by and tell me they're going home to get a rope and come back and hang me, physical gestures, derogatory words," Simpson said.

Killer admits his guilt in Houston murders before being put to death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Richard Wilkerson acknowledged his guilt early Tuesday and then was executed for masterminding Houston's worst single mass slaying, the butchering of four employees at an amusement center where he once worked.

"I'd just like to say I don't hate nobody," Wilkerson, 29, said as he was strapped to a gurney awaiting lethal injection. "What I did was wrong. I just hope everybody is satisfied with what's about to happen."

His two sisters, sobbing, and a friend watched as the drugs took effect. He was pronounced dead at 12:16 a.m. CDT, six minutes after the punishment began.

One of the sisters, Polly Winn, afterwards read a statement denouncing the execution.

"This execution is not justice. This execution is an act of revenge," she said. "If this is justice, then justice is blind."

Wilkerson's attorneys earlier Monday unsuccessfully asked the U.S. Supreme Court to block the execution.

"I have a lot of mixed emotions," Donnie Trent, whose son, Roddy Harris, was among the victims, said when told the execution was carried out. "I can't help realize that if it wasn't for this man, my son would be alive and so would three others."

The injection was the sixth in six weeks in Texas and the 13th this year, topping the 1992 tally of 12 and setting a record for lethal injections in the state. This year's execution total is the most since 1936 when 14 condemned killers and rapists went to the old electric chair.

Wilkerson's death also was the 67th execution since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982. The numbers by far are the highest in the nation.

Wilkerson was 19 on July 1, 1983, when he and two companions robbed the Malibu Grand Prix, a Houston amusement center, and hacked to death four employees.

One of Wilkerson's companions in the killing spree, Kenneth Ray Ransom, remains on death row. The other, James Edward Randall, Wilkerson's cousin, was 16 at the time of the killings and is serving a life term.

Police called the slayings the worst single mass murder in Houston history. Medical examiners had difficulty determining if the victims also had been shot because the bodies had been stabbed so many times and there was so much blood.

Besides Harris, 22, the victims included Anil Varughese, 18, the night manager; and two brothers, Arnold Pequeno, 19, and Joerene Pequeno, 18.

Varughese had been stabbed 42 times with such force the knife broke.

Jurors acquit man of charge of eating turtle

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Cuban shrimp boat captain has been acquitted of charges he killed and ate an endangered Kemp's ridley sea turtle.

A federal jury deliberated nearly 90 minutes Monday before declaring 37-year-old Leopoldo Bell innocent of eating the illegal meat.

His attorney, Fred Jimenez, attacked the testimony of the prosecution's main witness, Joseph Simard, Bell's deck hand.

Bell, who spent three months in the Nueces County Jail awaiting trial, will likely return to the shrimping business in Port Lavaca, his attorney said.

Simard, 34, testified the two men were trawling in Matagorda Bay when they snagged a 110-pound turtle on May 13.

"He said he wanted something different to eat," Simard testified.

But Bell testified that he and Simard caught a 5-pound turtle in their net on May 15 or 16, and it was Simard who wanted to keep it.

"I told him to throw it back. It was very little. He said he wanted to take it home to his nephew," Bell testified.

Bell said he went inside the boat's cabin and the turtle was gone when he returned. "I thought maybe he'd thrown it back or hidden it," Bell said.

Simard testified that he brought his brother-in-law, Marion Danna, an off-duty petty officer with the U.S. Coast Guard, to the docked boat at Port Lavaca on May 16.

Danna said Simard showed him some "weird-looking" meat and told him it was from a turtle.

Agents launch attack against computerized child pornography

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Justice Department announced a crackdown Tuesday on what officials said is a growing trend of relaying child pornography by computer.

As part of a federal effort dubbed "Operation Long Arm," Justice and Customs officials identified 45 Americans in 30 cities who may have been involved in importing child pornography by computer.

Officials said that so far six people have been indicted on charges of purchasing child pornography from an operation based in Denmark.

In the latest trend in pornography distribution, computer users can tap into networks that provide visually realistic renditions of pornographic acts that previously could only be viewed in magazines or films.

Justice Department officials said that computer pornography has emerged just as the department believed it had halted widespread mail distribution of child pornography.

"We're right back to where we started because of computers," said George Burgasser, acting chief of the criminal division's child exploitation and obscenity section.

Burgasser said that since each computer purchase has to be made by electronic messaging, detailed records are obtainable on individuals who use pornographic networks.

However, to comply with federal laws guaranteeing computer users certain privacy protections, Justice Department officials have warned investigators not to read electronic messages unless they have secured search warrants.

While officials have sought indictments only in cases involving the Danish operation, they believe similar networks are operating exclusively in the United States. Furthermore, officials claimed that pedophiles could use computer networks to lure children, who often spend hours playing with computers without parental supervision.

So far, federal officials have not sought indictments of any individuals for luring children over computers. And federal officials refused to discuss any cases other than "Operation Long Arm."

Witness: King verdict prompts death threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the black men accused of beating white trucker Reginald Denny had threatened to "hit and kill people" because of Rodney King, and later hit Denny with a brick, a witness testified Tuesday.

Gabriel Quintana also testified that defendant Damian Williams attacked him during the riots that broke out after four white policemen were acquitted of most charges in the beating of King, who is black.

Williams, 20, and Henry Keith Watson, 28, are being tried on charges of attempted murder, assault and robbery for attacks on Denny and seven others at the South Central Los Angeles intersection where the riots began on April 29, 1992.

Quintana was the first witness to identify Williams as one of the attackers. He said Williams threw a brick at Denny's head and then "he started to dance."

Williams

Witness in Denny trial accuses defendant Damian Williams of saying 'Today I'm going to hit and kill people' after King verdict was announced.

Quintana testified that he was working at a gas station near the intersection where trouble started and that he recognized Williams as someone who had come by before to ask for cigarettes or take gas without paying for it.

On the day of the riots, "He say, 'Today I'm going to hit and kill people,'" Quintana said.

"He just said something about Rodney King," Quintana said when asked why Williams wanted to attack people.

Asked to identify the defendant, he pointed to the counsel table and said, "He's here in the shirt and tie."

Quintana, 22, delivered most of his testimomy through a Spanish interpreter, although he quoted the remark about hitting and killing people in both Spanish and in Williams' language, English.

After the riot started, Quintana said, he left his cashier's booth and locked himself in a gas station restroom. But he said Williams and others unscrewed the hinges to the restroom door, dragged him out, beat him and pushed his head through the glass cashier's window.

Williams' lawyer, Edi Faal, pointed out that Quintana never mentioned Williams' alleged threats to police.

"During that conversation with Officer (Martina) Villalobos on July 15, 1992, you made no reference to someone may get killed, did you?" asked Faal.

"No," the witness said.

Quintana also acknowledged that he did not mention Williams' purported remark when he filed a stolen property report on July 7, 1992, and that the first time he mentioned it was at a meeting with two prosecutors on May 13, 1993.

Asked why he waited so long, Quintana said, "I don't know."

Test may identify Alzheimer's early, save cash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A laboratory skin test developed at the National Institutes of Health may identify people with Alzheimer's disease, a mind-destroying disorder that now cannot be positively diagnosed until after death, researchers said Tuesday.

The test could save a great deal of money, shield patients from having to undergo extensive testing, and help doctors quickly distinguish those with a fatal disease from those with treatable forms of impairment, said Dr. Daniel L. Alkon, a researcher at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

"If this test fulfills its promise, it should have an immediate positive impact on our health care delivery system because we can save hundreds of millions of dollars in diagnostic evaluations," Alkon said.

The test is based on the discovery that the brain cells in Alzheimer's disease patients develop a flaw that closes up a microscopic pore, or channel, through which flows a form of potassium.

Alkon said researchers speculated that if this happens in brain cells, why not other cells in the body? With that in mind, the NIH team tested cells taken from tissues in the nose and from the skin. In both cases, he said, the test showed that the potassium channels were collapsed in tissue from Alzheimer's patients.

Alkon's team then treated cells with chemicals that cause microscopic sparks in healthy cells. Where the potassium channels were closed, in the Alzheimer's cells, there were no sparks.

JoAnn McConnell, senior vice president for medical and scientific affairs of the Alzheimer's Association, said that if the validity of the diagnostic test can be proven it would be important in dealing with the disease, but she warned that other promising tests for Alzheimer's have been disappointing.

"We are guardedly optimistic about this," she said. "There have been a number of tests for biological markers which have been proven to not be true."

"It would be very beneficial to doctors to determine exactly what the disease entity is because there are many forms of dementia that are treatable," said McConnell. "If you could rule out Alzheimer's then you could explore seriously the other possibilities."

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive disorder that gradually destroys memory, the ability to function, and, eventually, life itself. There now is no treatment and the disease always is fatal. An estimated 2.5 million to 4 million Americans have the disease and McConnell said it is expected that number will triple within 20 years.

Currently, Alzheimer's disease can be diagnosed with certainty only after an autopsy.

"When an individual comes to a clinic with memory loss, the diagnosis for Alzheimer's can be made only after a long and exhaustive series of tests that eliminate every other cause of dementia," said Alkon. "It is an expensive, intensive process with inaccuracies" of 20 percent to 30 percent.

By assessing the potassium channels in the skin, Alkon said doctors could determine with one test whether a patient has Alzheimer's disease.

To perform the test, Alkon said cells are scraped from a patient's skin and then cultured in the laboratory. The cells are then tested with an electrical probe to determine if the potassium channels are open.

Test ranks Chinese food with Big Macs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somebody always seems to be out to trash the food you enjoy the most. Now the calorie counters, sodium sifters and cholesterol cops are taking out after Chinese.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest decided to test the notion that Chinese food is better for you than, say, McDonald's burgers and fries, and came out voting for McDonald's.

For instance: An order of Kung Pao chicken has almost as much fat as four Quarter Pounders.

An order of Moo Shu Pork has more than twice the cholesterol of an Egg McMuffin.

And House Lo Mein had twice the salt of a Pizza Hut pizza.

"Popular Chinese dishes like Kung Pao Chicken and Moo Shu Pork are as bad for you as a greasy cheeseburger and fries," said nutritionist Jayne Hurley in CSPI's September Nutrition Action Healthletter.

But wait, General Tso's fans. You can make it all better if you eat a cup of steamed rice along with a cup of entree. Says the newsletter: "Chinese food suddenly becomes good for you." Most devotees of Chinese cuisine do that anyway.

CSPI, a consumer advocacy group, bought dinner-size take-out portions of 15 popular dishes from 20 mid-priced Chinese restaurants in Washington, Chicago and San Francisco, and sent them to an independent lab for analysis.

"Soup and egg roll aside, what we found would make your chopsticks splinter," said the article titled "A Wok on the Wild Side."

"Fat ranged from a respectable 19 grams (Szechuan shrimp or stir-fried vegetables) to an outrageous 76 grams (Kung Pao chicken)," it said. "that's more than you should eat in an entire day, and more than 40 percent of calories."

Sweet and Sour pork was OK for sodium, but stir-fried vegetables hit the day's quota with 2,100 mg. House Lo Mein had 3,460 mg., which CSPI called "incredible."

Moo Shu Pork had a two-day supply of cholesterol, but most of the dishes were lower in saturated fat than most American dishes.

And "it's easy to turn almost any dish into a healthy one," the analysis said. "It's spelled r-i-c-e."

The more rice, the less fat and sodium in the overall dishes.

Leaders of top faiths declare global ethic

CHICAGO (AP) — Leaders of the world's major faiths have declared a global ethic that laments environmental abuses, calls disarmament the newest commandment and condemns sexual discrimination.

The Declaration of a Global Ethic, a historic attempt to find values common to the world's religions, has been signed by 20 leaders of major faiths who are presidents of the 1993 Parliament of World's Religions.

Signers range from the Dalai Lama, leader of Tibetan Buddhism, to the Rev. Wesley Ariarajah, deputy general secretary of the World Council of Churches, which represents most major Protestant denominations.

The document, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, goes before a larger assembly of more than 200 spiritual leaders for their consideration beginning Thursday.

The statement affirms that a common set of core values are found in the teachings of religion, and expresses hope "that the ancient wisdom of our religions can point the way for the future."

But the religious leaders reserved their harshest criticism for the sins of their own faiths in a world where up to two-thirds of armed conflicts invoke the name of religion.

"Time and again we see leaders and members of religions incite aggression, fanaticism, hate and xenophobia — even inspire and legitimize violent and bloody conflicts. . . . We are filled with disgust," the statement says.

Hans Kung, the Swiss Roman Catholic theologian who was the document's main author, hopes history will compare it to the American Bill of Rights.

The declaration is the most visible action of the parliament, a weeklong gathering that attracted more than 6,000 representatives of the world's religions. The goal of the parliament, the first since an 1893 gathering that marked the beginning of the interfaith movement, is to promote peace among religions and nations.

Southwest Air rates among world's safest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three of the nation's major airlines are among the six safest in the world in a rating of the largest carriers, an airline passenger group said Tuesday.

The International Airline Passengers Association listed the world's 16 safest airlines, grouped according to size, in the first issue of its Travel Safety Alert Newsletter.

David Stempler, a lawyer for the association, said the ratings are based on 10 years of data including accidents per million flights and fatalities per million passengers. Also evaluated are the airline's pilot training, maintenance, aircraft age, value of the fleet and commitment of the airline's home country to safety.

The safest of the biggest airlines in alphabetical order are American Airlines, British Airways, Delta Air Lines, Lufthansa German Airlines, Scandinavian Airlines and Southwest Airlines, the association said.

Among mid-size carriers. topping the list are All Nippon Airways, America West Airlines, Ansett Australia Airlines, Canadian Airlines International and Saudi Arabian Airlines.

Rated best among medium to small airlines are Alaska Airlines, Finnair, KLM, Malaysian Airline System and Swissair.

The 30-year-old passenger association has more than 110,000 members worldwide. Members are entitled to special travel discounts and other services that include access to a computerized lost baggage, keys and ticket retrieval system.

Washington demands safety precautions on oil tankers

SEATTLE (NYT) — Despite 11th-hour objections from the Coast Guard, Washington state is demanding safety precautions on oil tankers sailing through state waters to Canadian ports.

Gov. Mike Lowry's program requires tankers to file oil spill prevention plans by Friday or risk fines of $100,000 a day.

The dispute puts Washington on a collision course with federal authority and international diplomatic protocol. The Coast Guard wants Washington to leave the safety of Canada-bound tankers to Canada and international negotiations. But Lowry, backed by environmental groups in both countries, has rejected that as "totally unacceptable."

"Washington state is simply unable and unwilling to wait for the long and often cumbersome international process to run its course," Lowry wrote to J. William Kime, commandant of the Coast Guard. Until safeguards are in place, Lowry wrote, "a potentially worst case spill ... could devastate Washington state's most environmentally sensitive areas."

According to state officials, the Coast Guard raised objections to the program a week ago. Rear Admiral A. E. Henn, chief of the Coast Guard's office of Marine Safety, Security and Environmental Protection, wrote, "It is essential that we work carefully and through diplomatic channels." He warned that unilateral state action may "jeopardize existing or future international treaties and agreements," and hinted that federal officials would go to court to block the state.

"Popular Chinese dishes like Kung Pao Chicken and Moo Shu Pork are as bad for you as a greasy cheeseburger and fries," said nutritionist Jayne Hurley in CSPI's September Nutrition Action Healthletter.

But wait, General Tso's fans. You can make it all better if you eat a cup of steamed rice along with a cup of entree. Says the newsletter: "Chinese food suddenly becomes good for you." Most devotees of Chinese cuisine do that anyway.

CSPI, a consumer advocacy group, bought dinner-size take-out portions of 15 popular dishes from 20 mid-priced Chinese restaurants in Washington, Chicago and San Francisco, and sent them to an independent lab for analysis.

"Soup and egg roll aside, what we found would make your chopsticks splinter," said the article titled "A Wok on the Wild Side."

"Fat ranged from a respectable 19 grams (Szechuan shrimp or stir-fried vegetables) to an outrageous 76 grams (Kung Pao chicken)," it said. "that's more than you should eat in an entire day, and more than 40 percent of calories."

Sweet and Sour pork was OK for sodium, but stir-fried vegetables hit the day's quota with 2,100 mg. House Lo Mein had 3,460 mg., which CSPI called "incredible."

Moo Shu Pork had a two-day supply of cholesterol, but most of the dishes were lower in saturated fat than most American dishes.

And "it's easy to turn almost any dish into a healthy one," the analysis said. "It's spelled r-i-c-e."

The more rice, the less fat and sodium in the overall dishes.

Leaders of top faiths declare global ethic

CHICAGO (AP) — Leaders of the world's major faiths have declared a global ethic that laments environmental abuses, calls disarmament the newest commandment and condemns sexual discrimination.

The Declaration of a Global Ethic, a historic attempt to find values common to the world's religions, has been signed by 20 leaders of major faiths who are presidents of the 1993 Parliament of World's Religions.

Signers range from the Dalai Lama, leader of Tibetan Buddhism, to the Rev. Wesley Ariarajah, deputy general secretary of the World Council of Churches, which represents most major Protestant denominations.

The document, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, goes before a larger assembly of more than 200 spiritual leaders for their consideration beginning Thursday.

The statement affirms that a common set of core values are found in the teachings of religion, and expresses hope "that the ancient wisdom of our religions can point the way for the future."

But the religious leaders reserved their harshest criticism for the sins of their own faiths in a world where up to two-thirds of armed conflicts invoke the name of religion.

"Time and again we see leaders and members of religions incite aggression, fanaticism, hate and xenophobia — even inspire and legitimize violent and bloody conflicts. . . . We are filled with disgust," the statement says.

Hans Kung, the Swiss Roman Catholic theologian who was the document's main author, hopes history will compare it to the American Bill of Rights.

The declaration is the most visible action of the parliament, a weeklong gathering that attracted more than 6,000 representatives of the world's religions. The goal of the parliament, the first since an 1893 gathering that marked the beginning of the interfaith movement, is to promote peace among religions and nations.

Southwest Air rates among world's safest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three of the nation's major airlines are among the six safest in the world in a rating of the largest carriers, an airline passenger group said Tuesday.

The International Airline Passengers Association listed the world's 16 safest airlines, grouped according to size, in the first issue of its Travel Safety Alert Newsletter.

David Stempler, a lawyer for the association, said the ratings are based on 10 years of data including accidents per million flights and fatalities per million passengers. Also evaluated are the airline's pilot training, maintenance, aircraft age, value of the fleet and commitment of the airline's home country to safety.

The safest of the biggest airlines in alphabetical order are American Airlines, British Airways, Delta Air Lines, Lufthansa German Airlines, Scandinavian Airlines and Southwest Airlines, the association said.

Among mid-size carriers. topping the list are All Nippon Airways, America West Airlines, Ansett Australia Airlines, Canadian Airlines International and Saudi Arabian Airlines.

Rated best among medium to small airlines are Alaska Airlines, Finnair, KLM, Malaysian Airline System and Swissair.

The 30-year-old passenger association has more than 110,000 members worldwide. Members are entitled to special travel discounts and other services that include access to a computerized lost baggage, keys and ticket retrieval system.

Washington demands safety precautions on oil tankers

SEATTLE (NYT) — Despite 11th-hour objections from the Coast Guard, Washington state is demanding safety precautions on oil tankers sailing through state waters to Canadian ports.

Gov. Mike Lowry's program requires tankers to file oil spill prevention plans by Friday or risk fines of $100,000 a day.

The dispute puts Washington on a collision course with federal authority and international diplomatic protocol. The Coast Guard wants Washington to leave the safety of Canada-bound tankers to Canada and international negotiations. But Lowry, backed by environmental groups in both countries, has rejected that as "totally unacceptable."

"Washington state is simply unable and unwilling to wait for the long and often cumbersome international process to run its course," Lowry wrote to J. William Kime, commandant of the Coast Guard. Until safeguards are in place, Lowry wrote, "a potentially worst case spill ... could devastate Washington state's most environmentally sensitive areas."

According to state officials, the Coast Guard raised objections to the program a week ago. Rear Admiral A. E. Henn, chief of the Coast Guard's office of Marine Safety, Security and Environmental Protection, wrote, "It is essential that we work carefully and through diplomatic channels." He warned that unilateral state action may "jeopardize existing or future international treaties and agreements," and hinted that federal officials would go to court to block the state.

Oilers' moves

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers recalled four players Tuesday and claimed defensive lineman Craig Veasey from the Miami Dolphins off the waiver wire to increase their roster to 52.

NFL teams reduced rosters to 47 on Monday, but were able to expand to 53 on Tuesday. The Oilers still have one vacancy.

Veasey, a defensive end and tackle, will wear No. 75 for the Oilers.

Among those recalled by Houston were rookie fifth-round draft pick John Henry Mills, safety Melvin Aldridge, running back Le'Shai Maston and wide receiver Leonard Harris.

Mills is one of five draft choices to make the final roster. The other were tackle Brad Hopkins, linebacker Micheal Barrow and wide receiver Travis Hannah and Blaine Bishop.

Smith traded

NEW YORK — Former Midland Cub, and the major league's all-time saves leader, Lee Smith was traded by the St. Louis Cardinals to the New York Yankees on Tuesday night for a minor league pitcher.

Smith has 398 career saves. He was 2-4 with 43 saves for the Cardinals this season in 55 games with a 4.50 ERA.

The Yankees sent pitcher Richard Batchelor to the Cardinals.

Smith, 37, is in the final year of his contract and can become a free agent after the season.

Cowboy additions

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys claimed tight end Joey Mickey of the Philadelphia Eagles and defensive end Matt Vanderbeek of the Indianapolis Colts off the waiver wire Tuesday and made other moves to expand their roster to 52 players.

Mickey, a seventh-round draft choice in 1993 out of Oklahoma, will be the Cowboys third tight end behind Jay Novacek and Kelly Blackwell.

Vanderbeek, a four year veteran, can also play linebacker.

Other players joining the Cowboys' active roster included linebacker Bobby Abrams, fullback Tommie Agee, safety Bill Bates, center Dale Hellestrae and Robert Williams, all cut on Monday. Each player was resigned except for Abrams who returned via procedural recall.

Players who will be on the Cowboys practice squad include tight end Coleman Bell, quarterback Brad Bretz, fullback Lincoln Coleman and defensive tackle Everett McIver, all rookies.

Unknowns bury seeds

■ Capriati, Agassi and Stich all fall during the first day's action.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — All of Andre Agassi's boasts suddenly sounded empty.

He bragged about his new work ethic, his renewed confidence. He thought he'd strut into the U.S. Open without playing many matches and just stroll off with the trophy and the fat check.

Instead, he walked off a loser Tuesday in one round — just like Jennifer Capriati and Michael Stich. Two-time defending champion Stefan Edberg nearly did the same, while No. 1 Jim Courier and No. 2 Pete Sampras breezed ahead.

Sweden's Thomas Enqvist, ranked No. 61, beat Agassi at his own game in a 3½-hour affair, outhitting him from the baseline and making his head spin with 20 aces in a 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-7 (3-7), 6-2 victory.

"I didn't really feel sharp from the first point to the last point," said Agassi, the 16th seed. "And when you are down two sets, it takes a lot of energy out of you to get back into it."

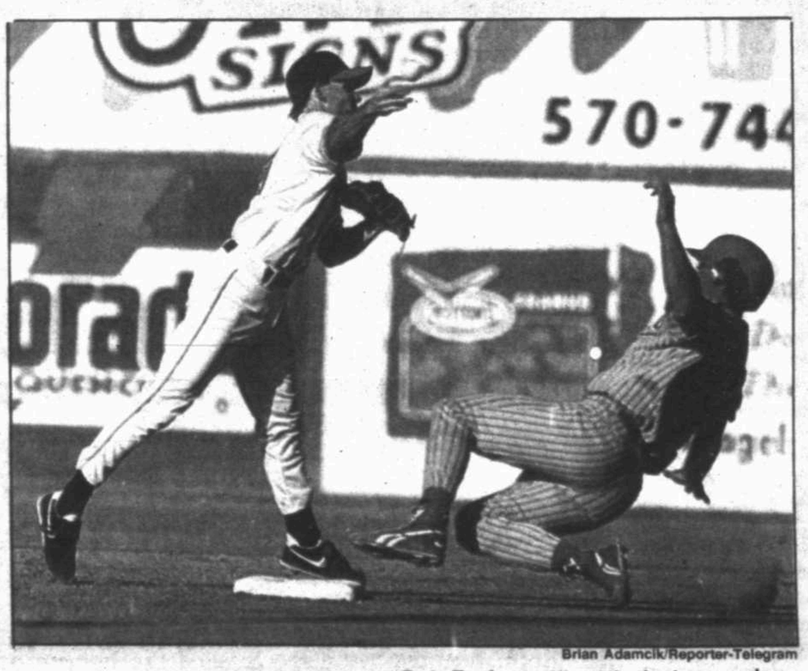

Agassi should know because he never has come back from two sets down.

Angels recollect on season of close calls

■ Midland manager Don Long reflects on the 1993 season.

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

On August 4 the Midland Angels had a six-game lead over the Wichita Wranglers for second place and a Texas League playoff spot.

If they had held that position, West Texans would have had an opportunity to see at least one minor league playoff game in Midland for the first time since 1975.

Instead, what happened over the next 3½ weeks can be summed up as follows: the Wranglers got hot and the Angels did not.

"In the end it was disappointing because we didn't make the playoffs and we were in position to do so," Angel manager Don Long said on the season's last day, "But I also think we made a lot of improvements both individually and collectively. At one point we were 10 games under .500 (18-28 May 26)."

Midland finished its season Monday night 2½ games behind Wichita in the Western Division.

In the Angels' late-season stretch the team lost eight of 10 games to the Wranglers. Especially crucial was a five-game sweep by the Wranglers in Wichita — a series in which the Angels had leads going into the ninth inning in three games.

But Long refuses to shrink a 136-

Aggies name Groff AD

■ Texas A&M hires from within in naming successor to John David Crow.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Wally Groff, a part of the Texas A&M University athletic administration since 1966, was named athletic director Tuesday, replacing John David Crow, who resigned in May.

Groff has been associate athletic director since 1988 and serves as the athletic department's chief fiscal officer.

Groff, 51, inherits a department that is being investigated by the NCAA for violating rules involving players being paid for summer jobs they did not perform.

Five players, including starting running back Greg Hill, are under suspension by the school until the matter is resolved.

Groff said compliance with NCAA rules would be a top priority.

"Of all the areas, I'm picking out compliance in particular," Groff said. "We won't tolerate any violations of NCAA rules. We've tried to set up a model compliance program but you can't be with everyone 24 hours."

Groff came to the athletic department at business manager in 1966 and was promoted to assistant athletic director in 1975.

"I don't see any major changes coming," Groff said. "We'll bring all the coaches and staff in and make evaluations and see which we'll go."

Groff said he had not been a part of the NCAA investigation but planned to get involved.

A&M President William Mobley said he had confidence in Groff's ability to take charge of the department.

"Wally is part of the solution at Texas A&M," Mobley said. "We do have a problem with compliance but I don't think it's to the depth of previous years."

Faculty representative Tom Adair chaired the selection committee and strongly supported Groff.

"We prepared a position specification profile of the perfect person for the job," Adair said. "As the weeks went by, it became obvious that Wally fit the position specifications best."

Crow resigned to become a partner in a dog racing facility at La Marque but he remains with the university in the newly created position of director of de-

Holly transfers to NMJC

Associated Press

HOBBS, N.M. — Lenny Holly, the former Alamogordo High School standout who was last season's freshman of the year in the Southwest Conference, has transferred from Texas Tech to New Mexico Junior College.

Kelly Robinson, assistant sports information director at Texas Tech, said Tuesday that Holly, a 6-foot-5 guard, was academically eligible to play in Lubbock but opted to leave without giving a reason.

"He decided not to come back here for reasons unbeknownst to anybody," Robinson said. "I guess he just wasn't happy here."

Holly registered for classes Tuesday morning at NMJC, according to the school registrar's office.

Holly would have to sit out one year before playing at another Division I school under NCAA transfer rules, Robinson said. NMJC Athletic Director Richard Morris said school officials were awaiting Holly's Texas Tech transcript before determining his athletic eligibility.

If his grades meet NMJC's school requirements, Holly could be eligible to play as soon as January, Morris said. Coach Ron Black would decide whether to play Holly or have him wait one year, Morris said.

Texas Tech coach James Dickey didn't immediately return telephone messages. Holly wasn't listed in Hobbs telephone records.

Holly was a two-time New Mexico Class AAAA high school player of the year at Alamogordo. He led the Tigers to back-to-back state championships in 1991 and 1992.

District 4-5A's finish before starting

The first questioned asked when football season arrives is "how is District 4-5A shaping up this year?"

So, we might as well get that order of business over with before a ball is kicked, thrown or fumbled. Well, almost before the season. After all, Odessa High has already jumped the gun and beaten Alamogordo, N.M., in a monster road trip.

Williamson

Still, picking district placement for 1993 may be the most difficult task in many years. It seems that teams in District 4-5A are moving closer from the top to the near bottom. Realistically, five of the seven teams look to have a legitimate shot at making the playoffs, thanks to the ever expanding UIL playoff format. Three teams will be playoff bound again.

While hoping you forget these words by Nov. 6, here's the annual stab in the dark.

1. Midland Lee: Odessa Permian has the lofty state ranking while the Rebels have been overlooked statewide. However, the Rebels may be embarking on offensive fireworks at a record setting pace. They say you win with defense in District 4-5A, but the Rebs may prove otherwise this year. The stumbling blocks are road trips to both Odessa High and Permian, but they also have San Angelo and Abilene Cooper at home. Depth is the major problem, and if you could factor out injuries, which have already occured (receiver/backup quarterback Corodon Watson and linebacker Steve Cloud out for the year), this might be an easy pick.

2. Odessa Permian: You make this pick because Permian is Permian. But it's hard to see this edition of the Panthers being anywhere close to where they have been the last two seasons. There has to be a dropoff on defense where major talent was lost and there is talk of starting at least five players both ways. In fact, if Permian loses to Odessa High (which they never do), old Mojo could find itself hard pressed to make a Top 3 standing. Still, the program is in place and Permian is always solid and well coached.

3. Odessa High: The Bronchos may be the surprise of the league this season, but to surprise they will have to beat two of the four contenders. The easiest route would be to beat Cooper and San Angelo. They always have big problems against Permian, and by beating Lee last year, the Rebels may show up against OHS this year meaner than wife during football season.

4. San Angelo: The Bobcats have been in the state playoffs all three years since three teams were allowed to advance. They could easily do it again, but the style will have to change from a throwing quarterback to a running quarterback (Elliott Bowman). That in itself might mean a dropoff in scoring for the explosive Bobcats. That also means the Bobcats will have to play better defense. It says here that the Bobcats will learn how to sit during the post-season.

5. Abilene Cooper: The Cougars made the playoffs last year for the first time since 1979, but Cooper also lost over 50 seniors to graduation. Cooper lost its last three games last year, all close, to Permian, Lee and Amarillo High. That may not be the carryover value you want for another playoff run. Still, the world won't cave in if the Cougars finish as high as No. 3.

6. Midland High: The catch word this season for the Bulldogs is "improved." It's probably a true statement. They hit bottom with an 18-game losing streak before beating Abilene High on the last week last season. They are now on the climb up. Still, the climb is Mt. Everest at this point with a brutal road schedule that will cover more than 2,000 miles with trips to El Paso, Lubbock, Amarillo High, San Angelo and Abilene twice. Home games against Andrews, Lee, Permian and Odessa High are all against stout teams. Improved? Yes. But they aren't a state power and that's what it would take to negotiate this schedule.

7. Abilene High: The Eagles aren't ready to contend, but they do host Midland High in the last game of the season. That's one game they will be looking forward to. AHS now has the longest current losing streak in district play with 10 consecutive losses. Right now, that is the major thorn to overcome.

Braves trim Giants' lead in West

Associated Press

ATLANTA — David Justice drove in four runs and Greg Maddux pitched a six-hitter as Atlanta cut front-running San Francisco's lead in the NL West to 3½ games.

The Giants, who led by 10 games on July 22, lost for the 11th time in 23 games and saw their lead drop below four games for the first time since June 8, when they led second-place Houston by 3½.

It was the third victory in a row and the 17th in 20 games for the Braves. Atlanta hasn't been within three games of first since May 28.

Maddux (16-9) won his fourth decision in a row and pitched his seventh complete game of the season.

After Barry Bonds gave the Giants a 1-0 lead with his 39th homer to start the fourth, the Braves took control in the bottom of the inning with a five-run rally off Bill Swift (17-7).

Astros 10, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Pete Harnisch allowed three hits in seven innings, and Houston pounded three Mets pitchers for a season-high 18 hits as the Astros snapped a five-game losing streak with a victory over New York.

Harnisch (12-8) struck out six and walked three in matching his single-season victory mark set in 1991.

Steve Finley had three RBIs, and Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell each added two. Bagwell had three singles and a double in five at-bats.

Dwight Gooden (12-15) left the game after four innings with inflammation in his right shoulder. He allowed four runs on eight hits while striking out two and walking none.

■ NL Roundup

Biggio led off the fifth with his 18th homer, off Pete Schourek. Eric Anthony hit an RBI double in the seventh off Dave Telgheder.

The Astros added four runs in the eighth off Telgheder on a two-run double by Finley and RBI doubles by Biggio and Bagwell.

Todd Jones pitched the eighth and Doug Jones finished for Houston.

Marlins 2, Padres 1

MIAMI — Gary Sheffield's sixth-inning home run against his former team backed Charlie Hough's seven-hit pitching as Florida defeated San Diego.

In Sheffield's first game against the Padres since he was traded June 24, he broke up a 1-1 game in the bottom of the sixth with his 19th home run of the year and ninth with Florida.

Hough (8-14), who entered the game with a 9.22 ERA in three straight losses, cooled off the Padres, who had won six of seven games while averaging eight runs. Hough pitched seven strong innings, allowing the only run, to boost his 1993 mark over San Diego to 3-0 with a 1.23 ERA.

Joe Klink pitched the eighth, and Bryan Harvey pitched a perfect ninth to earn his 39th save.

Phillies 7, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — Ben Rivera pitched a four-hitter, one of them Mark Grace's 1,000th, and Philadelphia beat Chicago.

Rivera (12-7) walked four and matched his career-high with nine strikeouts in his first complete game in 23 starts. It was his first complete game since a 10-0 victory over St. Louis last September.

He gave up three singles, one to deep short by Grace in the sixth for his personal milestone. The outing matched his career best, a four-hitter against Montreal last September.

Mike Morgan (8-13) allowed three runs on nine hits and struck out five in seven innings.

Cardinals 7, Reds 6

ST. LOUIS — Bernard Gilkey's two-run triple with two outs in the ninth inning gave St. Louis a victory over Cincinnati.

Ozzie Smith singled with one out in the ninth and stole second despite a pitchout. Gregg Jefferies walked and Todd Zeile grounded into a fielder's choice, barely avoiding a double play, before Gilkey's triple to left-center off Rob Dibble (1-2).

It was the third victory in 11 games for the Cardinals, and the Reds have won four of six.

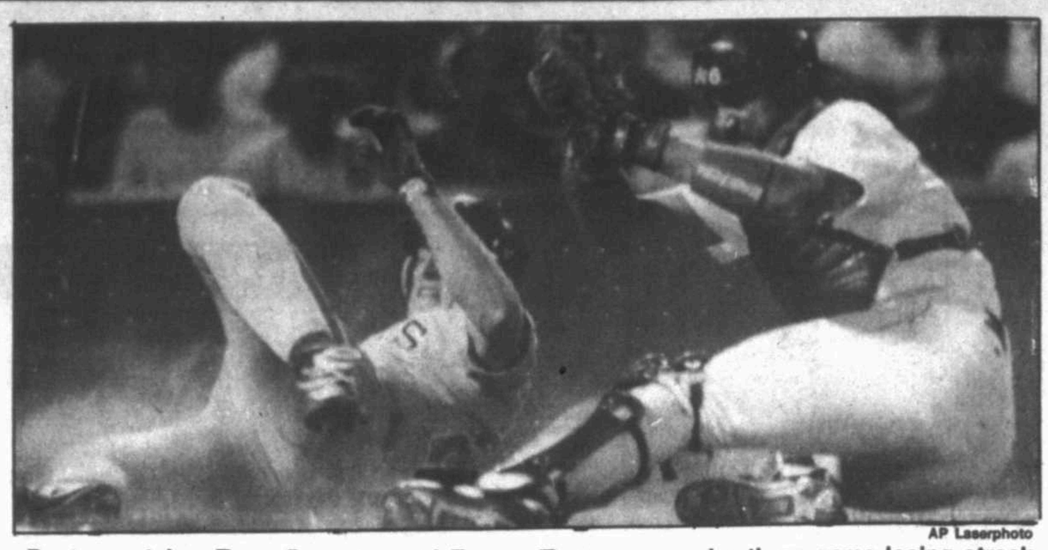

After the game, the Cardinals traded reliever Lee Smith, who leads the major leagues with 43 saves, to the New York Yankees for minor-league pitcher Richard Batchelor. Smith is the all-time saves leader with 398.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 2

PITTSBURGH — Dave Clark had three hits, including a home run, and Joel Johnston earned the victory with 4 1-3 innings of emergency relief as Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles.

Clark led off the second inning with his sixth home run of the year off Kevin Gross (9-12). Clark and Jeff King had RBI singles in the third after Johnston and Orlando Merced hit consecutive doubles to produce the first run.

The double was the first major league hit for Johnston (2-2), who relieved starter Paul Wagner in the third.

Rogers stops Rangers' losing skid

Associated Press

BOSTON — Juan Gonzalez took the major-league lead with his 40th homer and Kenny Rogers won his sixth straight start as Texas beat Boston 8-1 Tuesday night.

Rogers (14-7) allowed six hits in his third complete game and tied Ferguson Jenkins' team record, set in August 1974, of six wins in a month. He is 10-2 since June 17 and is the American League's winningest left-hander since July 6 with nine victories.

Roger Clemens (10-11) lost his first start since breaking a four-game losing streak with a combined shutout Friday night. He allowed six runs and nine hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Texas led 2-1 before Rafael Palmeiro started the sixth with a walk. Gonzalez then drove Clemens' first pitch to straightaway center, breaking a tie for the homer lead with Seattle's Ken Griffey, who played later Tuesday.

White Sox 11, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Frank Thomas hit the 100th homer of his career and Tim Raines homered twice, driving in four runs, as the first-place Chicago White Sox routed the New York Yankees 11-3 Tuesday night.

The Yankees entered the game trailing Toronto by one-half game in the AL East. The Blue Jays played a night game at Oakland.

Wilson Alvarez (10-8) gave up three runs and seven hits in 7 2-3 innings. Jose DeLeon got the last out in the eighth and Scott Radinsky pitched the ninth.

The Yankees scored two runs in the eighth on Mike Gallego's two-run double. Gallego then tried to move to third base on a fly ball to medium right field, but Bo Jackson made a great one-hop throw to get the runner in a key play.

Royals 6, Brewers 5

MILWAUKEE — Gary Gaetti and Hubie Brooks each hit two-run homers to power Kansas City over Milwaukee.

The Royals remained six games behind first-place Chicago in the AL West heading into September.

Kansas City snapped a 5-5 tie on George Brett's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning. Jose Lind walked to open the inning, moved to third on Brian McRae's one-out single and scored on Brett's fly ball to left.

Gaetti's eighth home run of the season, a two-run shot in the sixth inning off starter Angel Miranda (3-4), tied it 5-5.

Dodgers deal Eric Davis to Tigers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Eric Davis, once touted as the next Willie Mays but beset by slumps and injuries in two seasons with the Los Angeles Dodgers, was traded to the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday for a player to be named.

Eric Goldschmidt, the agent for the 31-year-old outfielder, confirmed the deal and said Davis will report to the Tigers on Friday when they play a three-game series against Chicago. Davis, who made $2 million this year, is eligible for free agency after the season.

The Tigers entered Tuesday night's game at Seattle trailing Toronto by five games in the AL East. The Dodgers began a three-game series in Pittsburgh on Tuesday night. Postseason rosters had to be settled by Tuesday.

Davis, acquired by the Dodgers along with pitcher Kip Gross in a 1991 trade that sent pitchers Tim Belcher and John Wetteland to Cincinnati, hit .234 for Los Angeles this season, with 14 homers and 53 RBIs in 76 games.

Once again, though, he was hampered by injuries although he did not go on the disabled list.

He entered the season with a lifetime batting average of .265, 182 homers and 460 RBIs in parts of nine seasons.

Davis broke in with the Reds in 1984 as an exceptional prospect. He had power, speed and could hit for average, and some said he had the makings of another Mays or Roberto Clemente.

His best season for the Reds came in 1987 when he hit .293 with 37 homers and 100 RBIs. He also drove in 100 runs in 1989 and helped the Reds sweep Oakland in the 1990 World Series.

On July 24, Davis was the driver when Vince Coleman of the New York Mets threw an explosive in the area of several fans in the Dodger Stadium parking lot. The next day, Davis said Coleman was the one who threw the fireworks, injuring three fans.

Players rejoin NFL teams day after cuts

Associated Press

The one-day vacation ended Tuesday for more than 100 NFL veterans who were called back to their teams.

Ottis Anderson, however, must make other plans.

The 36-year-old running back, the NFL's eighth best career rusher, was not reclaimed after being cut by the New York Giants, for whom he was the 1991 Super Bowl MVP.

Anderson, beaten out as the backup fullback by free-agent rookie Kenyon Rasheed, might still sign with New England, now coached by ex-Giant Bill Parcells.

Under the new labor agreement, any player with more than four seasons is a free agent when cut and does not have to go through waivers. That allows teams to release players with little risk to reach Monday's 47-man limit and then re-sign them to get back to 53 by Tuesday.

But even for those players who knew they'd be called back, it was a harrowing process.

"It's like you're on a spacewalk," said defensive end Tim Green of Atlanta, who re-signed with Atlanta on Tuesday. "You know you're still attached by the tether line, but in the back of your mind there's still a feeling of uncertainty. More than anything else, it puts it all in perspective as to how thin a line there is between making a team and not making it."

Some had the tether snapped, like kicker Matt Bahr, another hero of the Giants' 1991 NFL title. Bahr was replaced by ex-Bronco David Treadwell as Dan Reeves, who took over the team this year after 12 years in Denver continued to turn the team into "the New Jersey Broncos."

Some veterans got jobs elsewhere, like Jay Hilgenberg, the 34-year-old center released last week by Cleveland. Hilgenberg was signed by New Orleans to replace his injured brother Joel, the Saints' longtime center.

Minnesota brought back five players, including Roger Craig. Kansas City reclaimed four but not linebackers Percy Snow or Dino Hackett, both former starters. Snow was the No. 1 pick in 1990 by Kansas City.

Many teams brought back six players to fill the rosters. In some cases, they were six "terminated" veterans; in others, they were a combination of players who were "terminated" and younger players placed on waivers.

The Giants brought back just two — center Bart Oates and cornerback Perry Williams, while San Francisco re-signed linebacker Mike Walter, cornerback Don Griffin, kicker Mike Cofer and running back Marc Logan.

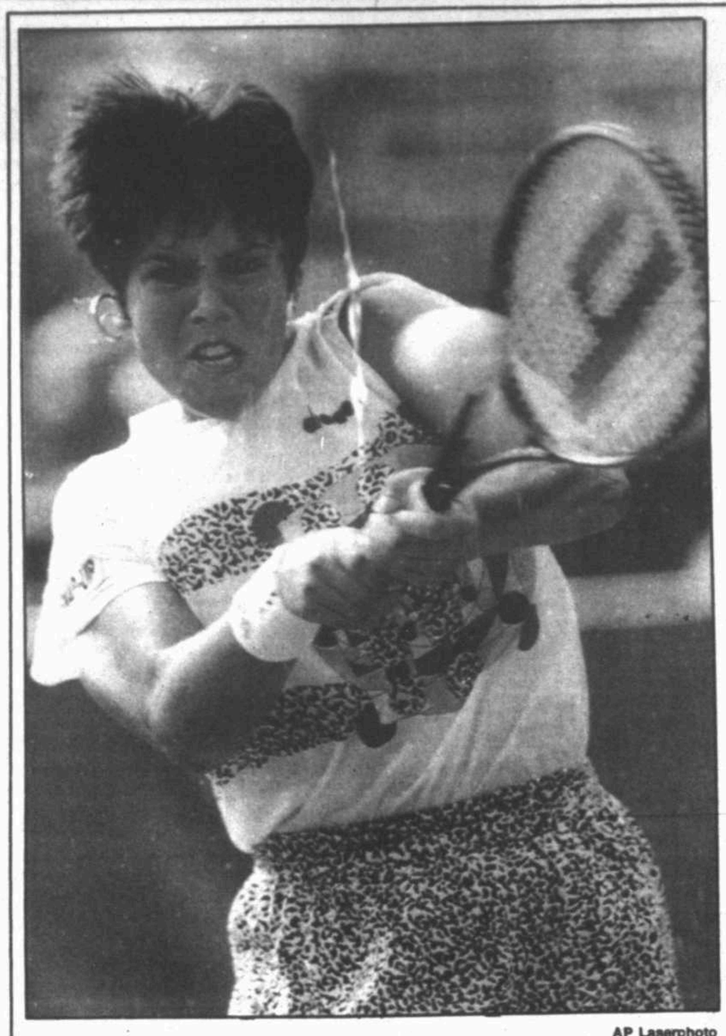

"I wanted to finish my career here," said Walter, a veteran of three San Francisco Super Bowl winners whose $875,000 salary was cut to accommodate the impending NFL salary cap. "I told them if they wanted to release me or bring me back that was fine with me."

Buffalo re-signed four veterans, including starting free safety Mark Kelso. Coach Marv Levy acknowledged that all four had agreements with the Bills that they would not leave Buffalo. Denver also signed four, including quarterback Shawn Moore.

Returning to Washington were tight end Terry Orr, punter Kelly Goodburn, special teams center Guy Bingham, defensive linemen Eric Williams and Jason Buck and cornerback Johnny Thomas. And the Skins said free safety Todd Bowles probably will be signed next week.

The New York Jets re-signed a group of cuts, including center Jim Sweeney, who didn't even clean out his locker.

Some teams took a mixed approach, like the Giants, who re-signed Williams and Oates and picked up Treadwell and defensive tackle George Thornton from San Diego. Green Bay brought back five players, including veterans Tootie Robbins and Ed West and claimed defensive lineman Gilbert Brown from Minnesota.

Seventh seed Jennifer Capriati smashes a return to Leila Maskhi during the first round of the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows, N.Y. Capriati lost in her first round match 6-1, 4-6, 4-6.

OPEN: Seeded players fall early

From 1D

"In the fifth set," he acknowledged, "I made a lot of mental errors."

Agassi complained he had trouble with the swirling winds, trouble with his backhand. Mostly he had trouble with double-faults — three in the final set — and with Enqvist's 125 mph serves.

"It's definitely a setback for me," Agassi said. "To what degree I don't know yet. Maybe I have to work a little harder."

He seemed as shocked by his upset as the crowd that had cheered so hard for him.

"If you win," he said, "you feel like you're on top of the world. If you lose, you feel like I am right now. It will get worse if this guy gets his butt kicked in the next rounds."

Before Enqvist experienced the biggest victory of his life, his compatriot, Edberg, nearly suffered one of his worst losses.

In the heat of the day, Edberg lay sprawled on the court, knocked down at the net by a blistering backhand to his head. He rose slowly, like a boxer at the count of nine.

And just as slowly, Edberg struggled back, exactly as he did a year ago to win his second straight Open.

No defending men's champion ever lost in the first round of the U.S. Open, much less a two-time defending champ like Edberg. Yet he barely avoided that dubious distinction, surviving 6-2, 0-6, 7-6 (9-7), 5-7, 6-3 in a 3½-hour drama against 99th-ranked Olivier Delaitre. .

Less fortunate was Capriati, the women's No. 7 seed, drummed out in the first round by Leila Meskhi, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4.

"I couldn't believe I could get totally off after the first set when I played great," said Capriati, who punched a forehand long to end an 18-shot rally on the final point. That was Capriati's 61st unforced error.

Mary Joe Fernandez, the women's No. 6 seed, withdrew because of abdominal pain. She was replaced by Maria Jose Gaidano of Argentina, a "lucky loser" from the qualifying tournament, who promptly showed up to beat Andrea Vieira 6-2, 5-7, 6-0.

Bye-bye, too, went Stich, the men's No. 6, who succumbed to Henrik Holm 6-3, 7-6 (10-8), 3-6, 6-3.

Not all the top players had a tough time. Courier dispatched Marco Aurelio Gorriz 6-1, 6-3, 6-3; Sampras beat Fabrice Santoro 6-3, 6-1, 6-2, and with Agassi's loss now has a seedless path to the quarters.

ANGELS: Midland wanes down playoff stretch run game season down to five games.

"If you (base the whole season on the Wichita sweep) it's easy to say we choked or we didn't get the job done, but I don't believe that," Long said. "The season's so long I don't think it's smart to break it down into five games. If we had won some of those games (against Wichita) we would be in the playoffs. But if we played better earlier in the (second) half we would also be in the playoffs."

The Angels finished the Texas League second half 34-33 and 67-68 overall.

A ten-game win streak that ended August 1 helped give the Angels their six-game hold on second place. But after August 4, the Angels went 10-15 while the Wranglers smoked to a 19-7 finish. Long said the Wranglers had the talent all year to play as well as they played over the last 3½ weeks.

"Basically given the players they have had all year up to that point they'd been underachievers," Long said. "They have good pitching, speed and power and it took towards the end of the season to finally come up to their ability."

The Wranglers appear good enough to beat El Paso — first and second half West Division winners — in the five-game division playoff.

The Angels, however, were hurt when several key players were called up to Triple A Vancouver. Between July 27 and August 7, the club lost two of their best starting pitchers in John Fritz (11-9) and Colin Charland (8-2) and left-handed middle reliever Bobby Gamez (5-2). It also lost valuable catcher-third baseman Mark Dalesandro August 7. But at the end of the year Long and second baseman P.J. Forbes weren't making any excuses about lost players.

"You can't look at that. You have to win with who you have," said Forbes, who himself got the call to Vancouver Monday. "Everybody we have is capable."

And Long realizes it's his job to get players ready for the next level.

"Selfishly you'd like to keep your best players," Long said. "But the idea is to develop them. Once their gone and the guys are up from A ball we don't think about them anymore. We're happy that we sent the number of players to AAA that we did, and all those guys are doing well."

Because of the ever-changing nature of the minor leagues, Long won't speculate on what players may or may not be back in Angel uniforms next year. But based on '93 performances, Forbes, catcher Jorge Fabregas, first baseman Chris Pritchett, centerfielder Orlando Palmeiro and outfielder Mark Sweeney could move up to AAA next year. Forbes and Fabregas have already been called up to help the Canadiens finish out their year.

But whomever suits up for the club next season will try to bring playoff baseball back to Midland.

ANGEL DUST: Forbes and Fabregas were named to the '93 Texas League All-star team released Tuesday. Fabregas threw out 52 percent of runners attempting to steal against him ... The Angels led the Texas League in team batting with a .285 average, ten points ahead of second-place El Paso ... Midland had three of the league's top five batters: Forbes second (.319), Pritchett fourth (.308) and Palmeiro fifth (.305) ... Palmeiro and Forbes also finished first and second in the league in hits with 163 and 159.

Oil prices fall

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell on Tuesday as traders watched the resumption of Iraqi-U.N. talks warily and grew confident that political unrest in Nigeria would not have a lasting effect on exports.

Iraqi officials met with United Nations representatives on Tuesday before the official start of talks on weapons monitoring. Iraq has been hoping that an embargo of its oil exports could be lifted.

Iraq says it has largely complied with terms of the cease fire regarding weapons destruction and monitoring, warranting a lifting of the oil embargo. However, Western nations want Baghdad to fulfill all U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Dollar up

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most major currencies Tuesday, buoyed by better-than-expected data on the U.S. economy for the second quarter.

Gold prices were up in New York and mixed overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $373.00 a troy ounce, up $2.40 from Monday. At 4 p.m. EDT, Republic National Bank of New York quoted gold at $372.65 a troy ounce, an increase of $2.40.

Traders said the dollar jumped after the Commerce Department reported the gross domestic product — the sum of goods and services produced in the United States — was up 1.8 percent in the April-June period. That was better than the department's earlier estimate of 1.6 percent.

"It wasn't a tremendous boost, but in the last week or so it feels like the dollar has been stuck in a range," said Matt Porio, a vice president at Chase Manhattan. "This gave it an impetus."

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 104.18 yen, up 0.28 yen from Monday's close. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 104.70 yen, up from 104.05 yen in Europe on Monday. In New York, the dollar finished at 104.74 yen, up from 103.83 yen.

Stocks higher

NEW YORK — The continued decline in long-term interest rates again helped stocks higher in lethargic trading on Tuesday. Major market indicators set new all-time highs for the second time this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.26 points to 3,651.25, rallying in the final minutes of trading after languishing in negative territory for much of the day.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 240.87 million shares as of 4 p.m., up from 191.34 million in the previous session.

■ Failed burglary attempt provides glimpse of dark side of semiconductor business, raises questions.

By Diana Williams
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — A failed burglary attempt this summer at Austin's XeTel Corp. provided a glimpse of the dark side of the semiconductor industry, and raises questions whether Austin is prepared to deal with it.

Five men wearing ski masks and gloves pulled a pickup into XeTel's parking lot with plans to steal computer memory chips from the company's assembly plant, police say.

Police, who had been tipped that the men were coming, arrested them before they got inside the building. Since the July 26 bust, eight men have been charged with attempted organized crime, a first-degree felony. Police say the men planned to take the chips to Canada.

The demand for chips — which are the brains of computers and many electronic products — has made them more valuable than gold, pound per pound, police and industry officials say.

"This is going to be the crime of the '90s for cities like Austin," said Sgt. Jim McMahon, head of the high-tech crime unit at the San Jose, Calif., police department, which serves Silicon Valley.

Law enforcement officials and high-tech companies in Austin may not be fully prepared to fight these crimes — especially if they become more common, McMahon predicts, and more violent, which is now the case in California.

The Austin Police Department does not have formal training in high-tech crimes or even how to identify a computer chip, said Senior Sgt. Ron McDavid, who supervises police training. Only one officer specializes in high-tech crimes.

Communication between Austin companies about chip thefts and other crimes also should be better, contends Rick Winter, XeTel president. While Austin's high-tech companies have individualized security measures, Winter wants executives at those facilities to devise innovative programs to help curb theft throughout the Austin high-tech industry.

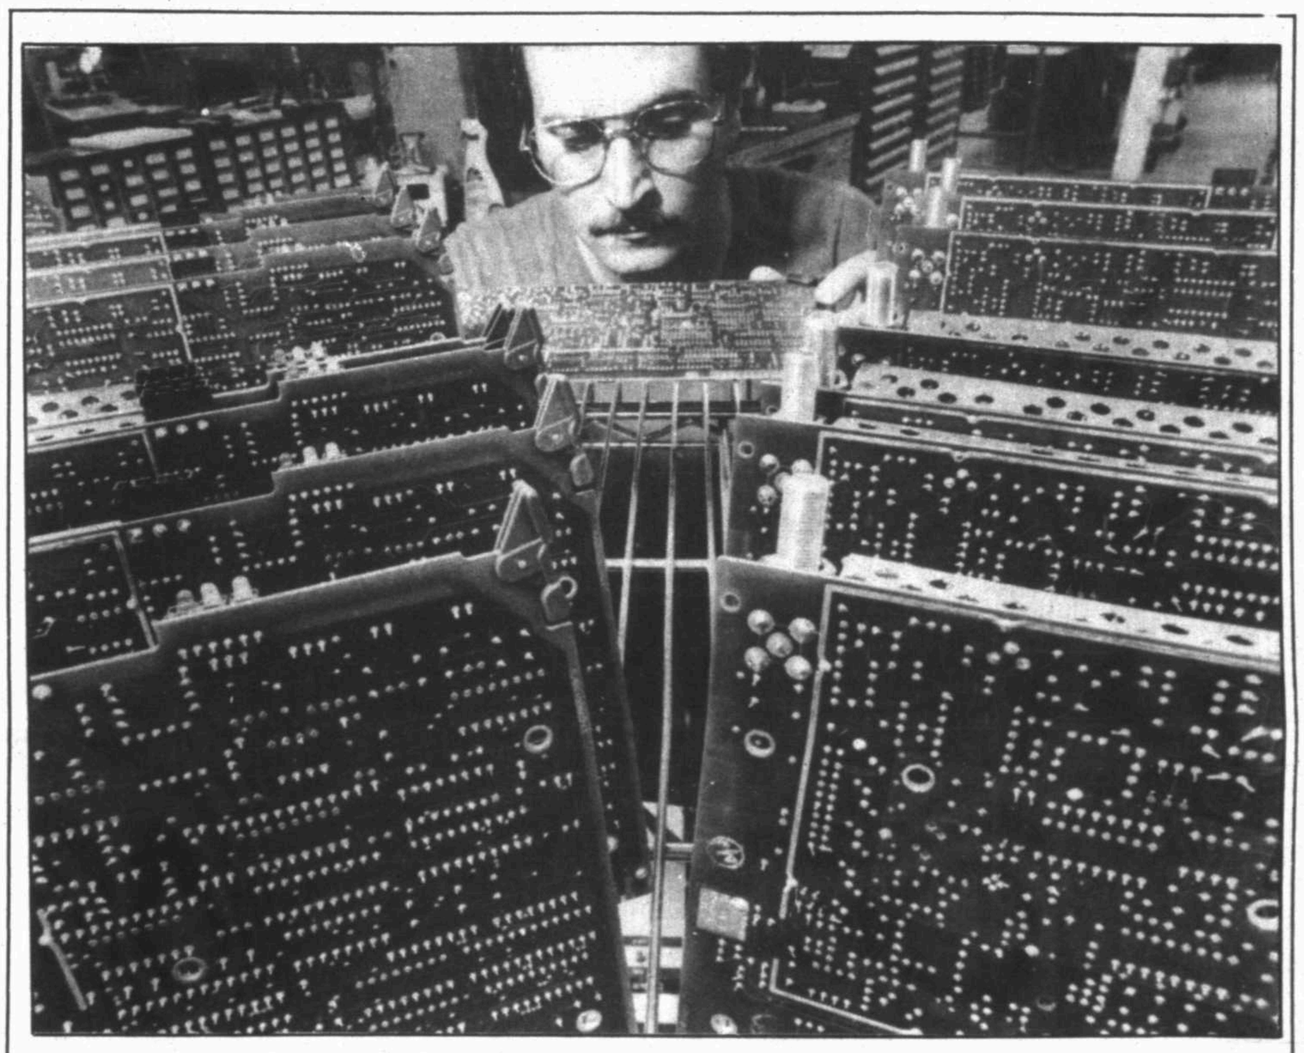

"We tend to keep our problem to ourselves," he said. "If there's some cooperation, we can do more to help support the police."

San Jose police learn how chips can be illegally transported, who should have chips and what chips look like, McMahon said. "If you don't have that, you won't know what signs to be suspicious of," he said.

Austin Police Officer Paul Brick, who helped plan the XeTel bust, said the burglary attempt should help focus more attention on high-tech crime here. "I think these crimes already are being taken seriously, but it takes a while to put a package together to fight it."

Computer chips are attractive to thieves because a pocketful can net thousands of dollars. And because chips often are bundled into small packages of 1,000, they are easy to hide and transport.

Small companies like XeTel are targeted because they typically do not have the security deterrence of larger companies. XeTel's coin-sized chips, called dynamic random access memory chips or D-RAMS, can sell on the underground market for as much as $110 each, Winter said.

Agressive new western airline expands again

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Another expansion by aggressive Reno Air has the airline industry buzzing about the lucrative California air travel market and a return to the '70s, when smaller carriers with "passenger friendly" reputations dominated the skies between northern and southern California.

On Oct. 15 Reno Air will launch nonstop service from San Francisco to Burbank, with four daily flights. The lowest fare on the flight will be a two-week advance purchase for $49 each way. With no advance purchase the fare will be $89 each way.

This compares with Southwest Airlines' unrestricted fares between San Francisco and Southern California of $69 each way, with a midweek two-for-one special.

In addition, Reno Air will add more daily flights onto its routes between Reno, San Jose and Southern California starting Oct. 1.

Reno Air's new route is expected to raise the airlines burgeoning passenger load and elevate it to the ranks of strong local competitors for Western powerhouse Southwest Airlines. Reno Air is also among the small carriers chipping away at the California market share of the three retrenching national airlines, American, United and USAir.

Denton firm celebrates $500 million sales mark

DENTON (AP) — Sally Beauty Co. Inc., the world's largest beauty supply company, has celebrated reaching $500 million in sales in less than a year by releasing 500 red and pink balloons in its hometown.

Sally Beauty hit the sales benchmark Monday on a tally that began last October. The company sells more than 4,000 kinds of hair gels, mousses, shampoos, conditioners, nail files and polishes to cosmetologists and the general public.

Sally Beauty Supply, a subsidiary of shampoo maker Alberto-Culver Co., has been based in Denton since 1988.

American employees brace for new round of layoffs

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Several hundred American Airlines employees are expected to lose their jobs this fall as a result of parent AMR Corp.'s decision to shrink the airline and focus on its more profitable, non-airline businesses.

The Fort Worth-based company has not yet decided just how many white-collar managers, technical specialists and clerical employees will be laid off. American executives are still working on the company's 1994 operating budget.

But an American spokesman confirmed that the budget, which calls for cuts of between 12 percent and 15 percent for virtually all of American's departments, will require several hundred layoffs.

The job cuts are not unexpected.

Last December, 665 non-union American workers were let go after the company completed its 1993 budget. Of that number, 295 worked at the company's Fort Worth headquarters.

She is widowed, 84 years old and has several other stocks, which were left to her by her husband. He passed away years ago without giving her any information about his holdings.

Could you tell us what her stocks are worth today?

A: As I write this, the utility stock you named in your letter is trading at $27.75 on the New York Stock Exchange. That makes your friend's 1,075 shares worth $29,831.25.

Although the share value might be a bit higher or lower when she sells, she will receive about that price, minus commission, by selling now. She can do that through any securities brokerage firm.

She and you can learn the current market prices of her other stocks by looking at newspaper stock tables. Some stocks are traded on the New York Stock Exchange, some on other exchanges, still others in the NASDAQ over-the-counter market. The annual stockholder report your friend receives from each company tells where each is traded.

Check your newspaper for the stocks' current prices.

Q: About a year ago, I bought a total of 1,000 shares of a certain preferred stock in four different purchases. My average cost was $28.50 per share.

I recently received a letter from the company, recalling that preferred stock at $25 per share. I do not want to give up the stock, especially at less than I paid for it.

Can the company force me to sell the stock to them?

A: You can't be forced to sell. However, if that stock has a "call provision," it would be foolish for you hang on to those shares. After a call becomes effective, dividends are not paid on the stock.

Many preferred stocks have call provisions giving the companies the right to buy the shares back and redeem them. The details of each call provision are printed on the preferred stock certificate. It's wise to check for call provisions before buying.

These days, with interest rates lower than they have been for years, many companies are selling low-dividend preferred stocks and low-interest bonds and using the money to call in high-dividend preferred stocks and high-interest bonds. Those moves save money for the companies, while making the owners of the old preferred stocks and old bonds unhappy.

Q: I personally manage 95 percent of our family investment portfolio, dealing through a discount broker and no-load mutual funds. But every now and then, I'll listen to a full-service — and high-commission — broker and take a chance on a promising recommended security.

Overall, the latter experience has not been too bad — except in one regard. If I talk with one aggressive broker, five more call witl. their own sales pitches. This has become a nuisance, since I am not yet so rude as to just hang up on them.

Is there any central agency that I can contact to get my name off the lists of these pests?

A: No. Along with peddlers in other trades, aggressive brokers will keep phoning as long as they feel they can reach attentive ears. Your only recourse is to cut them short by hanging up.

Q: I want to join an investment club but do not know how. I remember reading about their existence but do not recall any details. Could you tell me where to start?

A: Write the National Association of Investment Clubs at 1515 E. Eleven Mile Road, Royal Oak, MI 48067. Ask for information, as well as names and addresses of clubs in your part of the country.

Economy sputters, but '92 was better than thought, U.S. reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy is sputtering along so far this year at a substantially weaker growth rate than in 1992, and the prospect, according to economists, is for only mild improvement.

The gross domestic product — the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States — advanced a lackluster 1.8 percent in the April-June period to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.1 trillion, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. That followed a barely perceptible 0.8 percent gain in the first quarter.

The increases were slightly better than what the department reported a month ago — 1.6 percent in the second quarter and 0.7 percent in the first. But they're still far below what analysts were looking for when the year began, and they cast doubt on the strength of the momentum going into the second half of the year.

"Our forecast for the second half is 2.7 percent. . . . It's our forecast and I'll live and die by it but I'm beginning to feel a lot less comfortable," said economist Martin Regalia of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "It's becoming a hope as much as a forecast."

The Clinton administration, too, is scaling back its projections. Laura Tyson, the chairwoman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, has said that the administration could reduce its 1993 growth forecast from 3.1 percent to as low as 2.1 percent when it releases its midyear economic review on Wednesday.

This year's languid growth offers a stark contrast to the relatively robust performance last year, when the economy expanded at a revised 5.7 percent rate in the fourth quarter, 3.4 percent in the third, 2.8 percent in the second and 3.5 percent in the first.

The 1992 revisions, along with other changes showing the 1990-91 recession was milder than thought, show that the economy, although still sub par, was better off during the presidency of George Bush than economists realized at the time.

"All I can say about these revisions is 'Poor George!'," said economist Maury N. Harris of PaineWebber Inc. "The fact of the matter is the economy wasn't doing all that horribly. . . . I guess that's the way the cookie crumbles."

Economist Norman Robertson, an adjunct professor at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, said the revisions underscore the danger of fashioning government programs to aid the economy in the short run.

"It really makes the implementation of any kind of economic policy extremely hazardous in the sense that the numbers on which the policy are based are often wrong and subject to substantial revision," he said.

Carol S. Carson, director of the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis, said this year's revisions were larger than usual because of the difficulty of monitoring fast-changing business conditions.

Shamed by publicity, lending records, banks now stress minority mortgages

By Saul Hansell
N.Y. Times News Service

Shamed and embarrassed by their poor lending records, mortgage lenders are finally opening their doors a little wider to poor people and members of minority groups seeking home loans.

Newly released figures from a handful of big banks suggest that they are starting to reduce the obstacles that have led them to reject minority-group applicants and poor people. Although complete information will not be available until October, many banks are showing sharp increases in the number of these loans.

Chemical Bank, for example, says it more than doubled the number of home loans made to black, Asian-American and Hispanic borrowers in New York last year — to 1,522, compared with 622 in 1991.

Nationsbank, of Charlotte, N.C., and the Bank of America and Wells Fargo, both based in San Francisco, were among other banks with sharply increased minority-group lending.

Community organizers say they are encouraged that at least some banks have begun to expand such lending, although they caution that only sustained action throughout the industry will have a significant effect.

'The data have been our wake-up call. For the first time we had a way to assess our penetration in minority communities.'

— Catherine H. Bessant, Nationsbank

"A lot of banks have changed their practices and that is positive," said Allen J. Fischbein, general counsel for the Center for Community Change in Washington. "But it's a little hard to cheer too loudly; we are still in the early stages of overcoming decades of prejudice and neglect."

The improvement in lending to members of minority groups last year came after bankers were embarrassed by Federal Reserve data late in 1991. The Fed reported that in 1990, blacks, Asian-Americans and Hispanics were twice as likely to be rejected for home loans as whites having the same income. The data included figures on nearly every mortgage application in the country.

While the lenders argue that the figures are misleading and do not take into account differences in creditworthiness among applicants, they express shock at the magnitude of racial disparity. And they were horrified by the adverse publicity.

As a result, many large banks and other lenders have embarked on programs to attract potential minority and low-income borrowers and to offer them mortgages with altered approval standards and easier terms.

"This data galvanized many of us," said Charles K. Gifford, president of the Bank of Boston. "I would believe we were not discriminating before the law was passed, but I surely believe we are now making more of an effort to invest in low-income communities."

The lenders, of course, were motivated by more than altruism. Many community groups seized upon the housing data as a way to challenge banks' applications to make acquisitions on the ground that they had not met their obligations under the Community Reinvestment Act.

Eastman Kodak asks steep tariffs on imported film-processing items

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Eastman Kodak Co. asked the Commerce Department late Tuesday to impose steep tariffs on imported paper and chemicals for color-film processing, a step that could result in higher film-processing prices in the United States.

The case is the first major one in which a U.S. company argues that a Japanese competitor should raise its prices here to reflect the steady rise of the Japanese yen against the dollar. Trade experts say that other U.S. companies, including automakers, are now deciding whether to file similar cases against their Japanese competitors.

Kodak charged Tuesday that its rival, Fuji Photo Film Co.Ltd. of Japan, had violated a federal law prohibiting imports from being sold at unfairly low prices, a practice known as dumping.

It argued that Fuji maintains a near-monopoly in Japan, allowing it to cut prices for photographic supplies in America. Kodak further contended that Fuji used its profits to undermine the economic viability of foreign rivals.

Robert T. Hamilton, Kodak's vice president and general manager for imaging in the United States and Canada, stated Tuesday night that "dumping undermines healthy competition because companies cannot continue to compete profitably where unlawful competition is taking place."

Thomas H. Shay, a spokesman for Fuji Photo Film U.S.A., the U.S. subsidiary, said Tuesday night that the company had just learned of the filing and had no immediate reply.

The case involves materials used to turn exposed film into prints, not the film itself.

Its filing represents a remarkable shift by Kodak. Kay R. Whitmore, the company's departing chairman and chief executive, has long been an outspoken defender of free trade, winning praise from fellow corporate executives for a leading role in the push for a North American trade accord, even allowing an aide to run the corporate lobbying campaign for the pact, the North American Free Trade Agreement.

But Kodak's board, unhappy with Whitmore's managerial effectiveness, announced on Aug. 6 that it would replace him as soon as a new executive could be found. Big investors have harshly criticized Whitmore for his reluctance to take unpopular steps, like laying off thousands of workers, to reduce costs and increase the price of Kodak stock.

Kodak spokesman Paul C. Allen said the company remained committed to liberalized trade. "We don't see this action as being inconsistent with our public stance on free trade," he said.

Allen pointed out that while Tuesday was the first time Kodak had pursued a dumping case involving a photographic product, a Kodak subsidiary successfully sought dumping duties on some Japanese computer disks in the late 1980s.

ATLANTA (AP) — For some 16 million Americans afflicted with osteoarthritis, coping with the daily pain and limitations of the disease can be a challenge — one which affects every aspect of life, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Foundation-sponsored research indicates strategies used by people coping with arthritis-related problems predicts their psychologicl health status.

Researchers reported that people trying to see their problems in a favorable light were associated with positive moods, such as feeling interested, excited and enthusiastic about life.

On the other hand, they found those venting emotional distress, criticizing themselves and withdrawing from social interactions were associated with negative moods such as anger, depression and anxiety.

"These findings suggest that using certain coping strategies for arthritis may lead to better psychological well-being," explained Dr. Arthur Grayzel, senior vice president of medical affairs.

"It's important for people with arthritis to know they can take an active approach to controlling their arthritis in a way that not only helps them psychologically, but we believe helps them to improve their quality of life."

Straight to the heart

The startling evidence is that taking vitamin E supplements may save you from heart disease. But how much is needed, and how much is safe?

According to the latest evidence, here's what you need to know about vitamin E for your heart.

An effective dose seems to be around 200 IU per day. That amount slashed heart attack risks in men and women by about 40 percent, according to new Harvard studies. Actually, 100 IU per day benefited men's hearts, but not women's. Also among men, daily doses beyond 200 IU did not give more heart benefits.

It does not work overnight. Studies indicate you must take vitamin E for at least two years before protection kicks in. Also, the longer you take it the more heart benefits you can expect. In one study, women who took it for more than 15 years had less heart disease than those who took it for less time.

How much is toxic? That's unclear, but in new studies, Harvard researchers are giving women 600 IU of vitamin E per day with no expected adverse effects.

Unfortunately, there is no way to get such high amounts of vitamin E by diet alone, say researchers.

New 'Nutraceuticals'

Scientists are increasingly finding potent drugs in foods. Here are some of the latest developments:

Ginger is the basis of a new anti-inflammatory drug in Japan. The spice's aromatic gingerol compounds inhibit agents that cause inflammation, especially in rheumatoid arthritis. Eating plain ginger can also reduce arthritic pain and swelling.

Garlic compounds have been patented as ACE inhibitors to lower blood pressure. The garlic behaves much like synthetic angiotensin coverting enzyme or so-called ACE inhibitors already prescribed as blood pressure drugs.

Parsley chemicals are being developed into a new contraceptive pill. Parsley's polyacetylenes inhibit hormone-like substances, encouraging a natural abortion.

Garlic extract has been found to have "beta blocker" activity by decreasing the strength and frequency of vascular muscle contractions. Beta blockers are well-known heart disease and blood pressure drugs.

Red pigments called anthocyanins, found in foods such as red grapes, apples and cranberries, inhibit an enzyme that suppresses cholesterol production much the way the latest drugs do.

HeartFest Debuts

There is good news for health-conscious Texans. In October, the American Heart Association plans to release a new national nutrition event designed to educate consumers on the health benefits of a diet low in fat (especially saturated fat), cholesterol and sodium.

"HeartFest" will be Oct. 11-17. For more information, call 1-800-AHA-USA1 or the local AHA office at 520-7041.

It's (clean) curtains for 63-year-old laundry soap

By Cynthia Rigg
N.Y. Times News Service

New Coke hit the supermarket shelves with great marketing fanfare in 1985. This year another American icon was reformulated, with nary a press conference.

Psst! In February, Procter & Gamble altered the formula for Ivory Snow, changing the 63-year-old laundry soap into a detergent.

Dedicated users of Ivory Snow are learning about the change on their own. Joan Meyer, a retired teacher in Union, N.J., whose family has used Ivory Snow to wash their clothes and linens for more than 25 years, was recently startled to notice the word "detergent" in small print on the familiar blue and white box.

Detergents, which usually contain synthetic cleaning agents, have become increasingly popular since they were developed during World War II in response to a shortage of natural fats, which are the main ingredients in soaps. Because detergents tend to clean and rinse better than soaps, they have become an American staple.

"Years ago a dermatologist told my mother to use only Ivory Snow because a laundry soap was less harsh than a detergent," said Ms. Meyer, whose family suffers from allergies. "I was shocked there was no major announcement of the change."

Ms. Meyer and many others have been calling Procter & Gamble's toll-free customer information line to ask for an explanation. But those who prefer soap now have little choice but to switch to detergent: Ivory Snow was the last national brand of laundry soap.

"Consumers commented that they wanted a product that cleaned and rinsed better but was still mild," said Lynn Hailey, a spokeswoman for Procter & Gamble in Cincinnati.

But that wasn't the only reason, she said. Several sleepwear companies had warnings on their labels not to launder their products with Ivory Snow because it destroyed the flame-retardant chemicals required in the manufacturing of infant and children's sleepwear.

Current ads promoting Ivory Snow do not mention that the product has become a detergent but do say that the product is now safe to use on flame-resistant sleepwear.

Are detergents inherently harsher? There is no definitive answer. Procter & Gamble says that the new Ivory Snow is as gentle as its predecessor. Dr. Rachelle Scott, an assistant professor of dermatology and pediatrics at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, said that most allergic reactions were caused by fragrances and other chemicals added to cleaning procucts.

"Frankly, what is probably most important is double rinsing your laundry," Dr. Scott said. "That is what I recommend for babies and people with skin sensitivities."

Clinic treats bad breath

By Karen E. Quinones Miller

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — You know you have bad breath when your wife won't kiss you, your co-workers will communicate only through electronic mail and your best friend keeps asking if you'd like a stick of gum.

Mouthwash doesn't help, brushing three times a day doesn't help and you've bought so many breath mints the manufacturer mails you a Christmas card each year.

So what do you do?

You could check out the Pennsylvania Center, which says it's the only dental clinic in the country that specializes in treating breath problems.

More than 500 people from around the country have been treated at the clinic since it opened in January, according to Dr. Jon L. Richter, the periodontist who founded and directs the clinic.

Ten times more than that have called to inquire about appointments.

"Some of these poor souls have been asking their dentists and physicians for years for help but have essentially been told, 'Go brush your teeth and leave me alone,'" said Richter, 48, a graduate of Yale and the University of Pennsylvania. "But the fact is, for some people, bad breath is ruining their lives."

As a periodontist, Richter said he heard complaints from many patients troubled with bad breath. Many had been to ear-nose-and-throat doctors, gastroenterologists, dentists and general physicians, but to no avail.

"When I started to read up on the problem I found that there had been quite a bit of research done in the chemical area but not in the clinical, which rather surprised me," he said.

Treatment centers for patients with bad breath are long overdue, according to Dr. Richard H. Price, a spokesman for the American Dental Association and a monthly columnist in the Boston Herald.

"The problem is dentists aren't taught in dental school how to treat bad breath or even to consider it the major problem that it is," said Price, who has a dental practice in Newton, Mass.

"After all, nobody dies from bad

Food allergies may cause cold sores

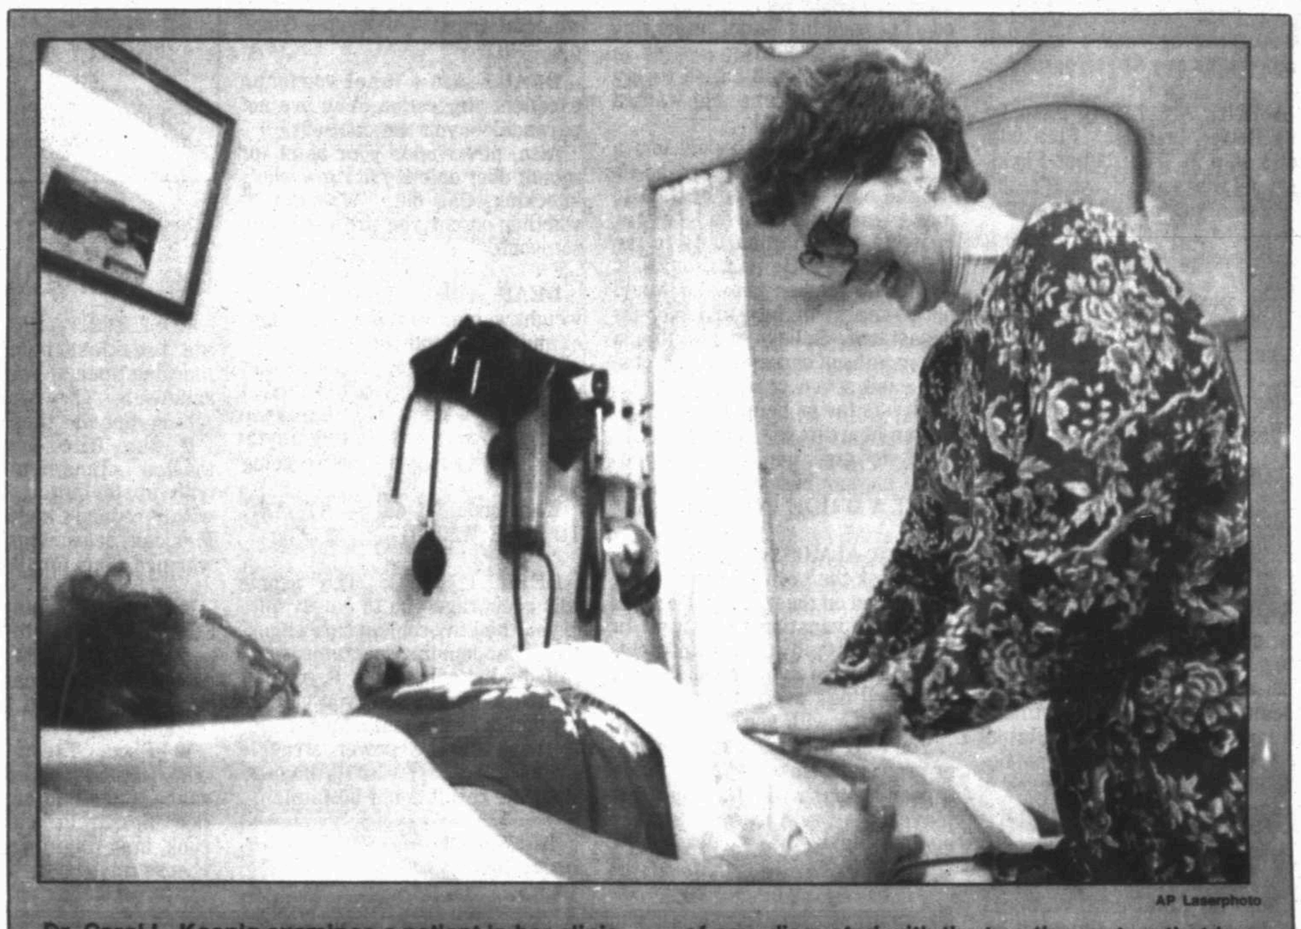

CHICAGO (AP) — People who suffer from recurrent cold sores may be experiencing food allergies, according to the Academy of General Dentistry.

"About 10 percent of all cold sores could be caused by an allergy to food," says Dr. Michael Goldstein, spokesman for the academy.

Goldstein says researchers at the Glasgow Dental Hospital and School in Scotland conducted patch-testing for food allergies on 21 patients with repeated cold sores, and 20 of the patients exhibited allergic reactions.

Eleven reacted to benzoic acid, a common food preservative. They were asked to avoid the substance. When they were checked three years later, 10 reported great improvement.

"Cold sores can also be caused by too much stress, a deficiency of the iron protein complex ferritin, or a lack of vitamins such as B12, folic acid, B1 or B6," Goldstein adds.

Dr. Carol L. Koenig examines a patient in her clinic in rural Exmore, Va. She and her partner split $75,000 last year, all they cleared from their family practice. Doctors have broken ranks over the issue of pay, disgusted with the two-tier system that has evolved in the medical world. On the low end of the payscale are generalists like Koenig.

U.S. health care in crisis

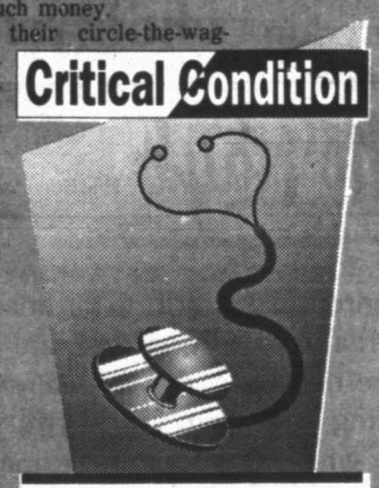

Some doctors agree — physicians make too much money

EDITOR'S NOTE — Fully 20 percent of the nation's health care bill goes to pay doctors. Now, even some physicians are beginning to ask whether they make too much. In the first of several stories, published on the Wednesdays' Living Well pages, looking at doctors' pay, The Associated Press examines the more-than-comfortable livings of the nation's healers, a profession where the average pay is $170,000 but some top $1 million a year. This series is part of the project "Critical Condition: U.S. Health Care in Crisis."

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

Dr. Carol L. Koenig earned $37,500 last year. Dr. Timothy S. Truitt made more than $200,000. But they share one money gripe that is being voiced by more and more physicians: Doctors make too much money.

Long known for their circle-the-wagons response to outside criticism, doctors have clearly broken ranks over money. Grousing about big bucks is reaching a crescendo among those who feel they don't make them. Internists and family practitioners, in particular, marvel and mutter over the lush paychecks of surgeons, radiologists, heart doctors and other specialists.

U.S. Health Care in Crisis

Until now, such talk has been little more than hospital gossip. But with attention refocused on President Clinton's efforts to reform health care, this could change.

Doctors' pay takes up fully 20 percent of the nation's runaway health bill. Since the U.S. public ultimately writes the paychecks, they might reasonably ask: How much does a urologist or pediatrician or pathologist really deserve to make? $100,000 a year? $300,000? $1 million?

An examination of earnings surveys conducted by the American Medical Association shows doctors are well-paid by almost anyone's standards, often impressively so. Perhaps even more surprising, though, is the broad gap between the highest and the lowest.

On the low end are the generalists like Koenig and Truitt who sort out heart disease from heartburn. "Low," of course, is a relative concept: In 1991, according to the AMA, family docs averaged $112,000 and general internists $134,000.

At the high end is just about everyone else. They typically make $100,000 a year more than the generalists, and often much more.

Not surprisingly, some doctors say they are apprehensive about reform. It is unclear what it might mean for their earnings, but Hillary Rodham Clinton, who headed the president's task force on health care reform, has noted "the overwhelming public perception" that doctors charge too much.

All of this is especially galling to Koenig. She and her partner split $75,000 last year, all they cleared from their family practice in rural Exmore, Va., on the Eastern Shore of the Chesapeake Bay. She has no retirement plan, she pays her own life insurance, and she has two kids in college.

"There's a major unfairness," she said. "Some cardiologists across the bay take home close to $1 million a year. I'm a specialist, too, and what I do is important. I feel slighted. Society doesn't think I'm worth as much."

Truitt, on the other hand, is satisfied with what he makes — "in the low 200s." But those million-dollar specialists bother him, too, even though some are partners in his 25-doctor internal medicine group in Palm Bay, Fla.

He and others complain the work these specialists do is no harder than theirs. But Medicare and insurance companies traditionally pay more for surgery and for high-tech tests and procedures than they do for patient consultations to

Study of gene therapy encouraging for suffers of MD

By Malcolm Ritter

NEW YORK (AP) — Mice that normally get a disease resembling muscular dystrophy were protected when given a man-made gene, a finding that boosts the prospects for gene therapy in human patients, scientists said today.

The work shows that an inserted gene can make muscle work normally, researchers said.

But the study does not answer other major questions about gene therapy for Duchenne muscular dystrophy, the most common childhood muscular dystrophy.

The disease strikes about once in every 3,500 male births. It weakens and destroys muscles, usually beginning around age 3 or 4. Few patients survive beyond their mid-20s.

Duchenne arises from defects in a gene that is supposed to tell muscle cells how to make a protein called dystrophin.

The mouse work is presented in the journal Nature by Jeffrey Chamberlain, an assistant professor of human genetics at the University of Michigan Medical School in Ann Arbor, with scientists there and at the universities of Iowa and Washington.

They worked with a strain of mouse that lacks a working dystrophin gene. The mouse does not develop Duchenne as a human would, but it does show a severe Duchenne-like wasting of a diaphragm muscle and abnormalities in other muscles.

Researchers made a miniature version of a working dystrophin gene in the laboratory and injected it into fertilized mouse eggs. Later, they found that mice that had taken up the gene had completely normal diaphragm muscles and other muscles.

Tests showed the diaphragm muscle worked normally, said Chamberlain, who noted that weakness in respiratory muscles is often lethal to Duchenne patients.

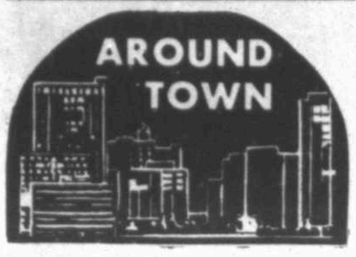

The Muscular Dystrophy Association, which helped pay for the work and its fund-raising telethon is Labor Day weekend, called the research a landmark study.

Helen Blau, a professor of molecular pharmacology at the Stanford University School of Medicine who has studied gene therapy for Duchenne, also called the work a significant step.

But she said the applicability to humans is still a major question, because mice do not get true Duchenne and because the experiment's gene-delivery technique would not apply to humans.

The mice showed no side effects even though their muscles had about 50 times the normal amount of dystrophin, researchers said. Blau said that would be

DEAR ABBY

Third time not always charm

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with "Bill" for the past seven years. Bill has been married three times and I've been married twice. He proposed several times during our relationship, but I wasn't ready for another marriage.

Van Buren

Three months ago, Bill announced that he was going to the Philippines for two weeks to meet the young lady with whom he had been corresponding. (A co-worker had pictures of women who were interested in meeting and marrying American men.) After a week in the Philippines, Bill called to say he was coming home and wanted to marry me.

We selected (and he paid for) a diamond. Two weeks later, he informed me that he did not want to marry me after all, and he was bringing this Filipina lady to the United States! He had previously written to let her know he would not be marrying her, and she was devastated. Believe me, Abby, a few months of correspondence cannot equal seven years of living together as far as being devastated.

I am heartbroken, and I think he plans to give her my diamond. What is your best advice? — ALMOST A BRIDE IN VENTURA

DEAR ALMOST: Dry the tears and thank the Lord that Bill didn't marry you on the rebound from his Philippine vacation adventure. In your grief and disappointment, you may have overlooked that he was writing love letters to her while living with you.

You were wise to refuse his earlier proposals. He would have made a poor husband. Be glad that this player — with three strikes against him — has struck out of your life.

DEAR ABBY: As you can see from this stationery, I am writing from my room in a popular national motel chain. After I registered, the room clerk handed me my key, loudly announced my room number and gave directions on how to get to my room. Several men were standing behind me, awaiting their turn to register. At the risk of sounding paranoid, any of those well-dressed individuals could have been Jack the Ripper.

Abby, please suggest that motel and hotel clerks simply hand the key to the guest without broadcasting the room number to the general public. One sensitive clerk handed me my key and said, "This is your number." Then he diagrammed the location of my room on a pre-printed map. Such a simple procedure could prevent an unwelcomed visit — or even a tragedy. — K.A.W., LANCASTER, PA.

DEAR K.A.W.: Thank you for an excellent suggestion. You are not paranoid — you are cautious.

Also, never open your hotel (or motel) door unless you know who's knocking. Call out, "Who is it?" whether or not you are expecting someone.

DEAR ABBY: I am an overweight woman with high cholesterol and high blood pressure.

Everywhere I go, people encourage me to eat. I try to tell them I must lose weight, but they keep saying, "Aren't you eating anything?" or "Is that all you're going to eat?"

What should I do? — TRYING TO LOSE WEIGHT

DEAR TRYING: The people who encourage you to eat in spite of your health problems are engaging in a popular spectator sport called "diet sabotage." If you can resist the temptation, you will enjoy better health and a longer life. If they win the power struggle (which is really what is happening), the result could be fatal.

Snacks more than peanuts

By Linda Anderson

This summer has really been bountiful, as far as getting free food in the mail is concerned. The Planters Peanut people sent us not one, but four bags of their new peanut snack products — Planters HEAT, Caribbean Crunc, Sweet 'N Crunchy and P.B. Crisps — and of course all kinds of journalistic types volunteered to take part in the resulting taste-test.

Anderson

The company defines these new products like this:

■ "Planters HEAT should appeal to Tex-Mex food lovers ... The product comes in Hot Spicy or Mild Spicy flavors. Mr. Peanut, in cowboy boots and a belt, swings a lasso on the package. Both varieties of HEAT come in an 8-ounce bag. The suggest retail price is $1.79." Excuse me, but how can something called HEAT be mild? Just asking...

■ "Caribbean Crunch is a fruit and nut alternative to salty snacks. Caribbean Crunch is a mix of honey glazed peanuts, cashews, sesame sticks, banana chips and pineapple pieces in a 6.5-ounce bag. Suggested retail price is $1.79. On the package, Mr. Peanut — wearing a lei — kicks back on a beach.

■ "For the 6- to 12-year-olds, there's P.B. Crisps, a bite-size, peanut-shaped snack with sweet peanut butter creme on the inside and a crispy graham cookie shell on the outside. P.B. Crisps come in a 7.25-ounce bag at the $1.79 retail price or a 1-ounce bag priced at 50 cents.

■ "Mr. Peanut gives an A-OK sign of approval on the 7-ounce bag of Planters Sweet 'N Crunchy, peanuts coated with a sugar and butter crunch shell. ... everyone in the family will love Sweet 'N Crunch, although children may be the primary consumers. As with the othe rnew products, the suggest retail price is $1.79."

I guess you noticed that suggested retail price is the same for all four products; size of the packages are different, though (a little bit). And of course, all are peanut-based, so if you don't like peanuts, then you won't like these snacks.

When you set out food in a newsroom, you get a wide variety of opinions. Of the two sweet-coated peanut snacks, Sweet 'N Crunchy was finished long before the Caribbean Crunch was. P.B. Crisps received mixed reviews — the "crispy graham cookie shell" didn't have either the taste or texture of graham crackers; however, the peanut creme was OK. One young visitor (here to see her grandfather, who is one of the newsroom bunch) really liked P.B. Crisps. Most of the older taste-testers didn't.

The big winner, though was the HEAT, which were very tasty. Almost everyone who tasted them, liked them a lot.

All in all, the four packages made a very tasty, very appreciated gift from Planters. I'm not sure I'm interested in actually buying any of them, though...

PAY: Doctors question rates

adjust blood pressure prescriptions, lecture them about weight control and generally figure out what ails them.

The two-tier system started evolving generations ago, when people paid their own medical bills and relatively low-priced charges for office visits became standard.

By the time high-tech treatments like angioplasties and coronary bypasses were developed and charges were set, insurance companies paid most of the bills and prices didn't matter to patients.

"They'll admit a monkey can do what they do," Truitt said of the high-paid specialists.

"These procedures are easy. They don't require much thought. And they get reimbursed $1,200 for a cath" — a heart test called cardiac catheterization — "that takes an hour. For an hour I spend with patients, I get paid $125, and it's probably more effort."

Certainly not all specialists are in the megabucks category. According to the AMA's annual survey of 2,937 physicians, the average U.S. doctor made $170,600 in 1991. But when all doctors are listed in ascending order of salaries, their median income, the halfway point on the list, was $139,000. That means most doctors are earning less than the $170,600 average, and a minority are making considerably more.

The AMA figures also show how some specialists outpace their colleagues. For instance, pathologists averaged $198,000, cardiologists $206,000, anesthesiologists $221,000, ophthalmologists $227,000, radiologists $230,000 and orthopedic surgeons $274,000.

Many do far better. One-quarter of all orthopedic surgeons, radiologists and obstetricians top $300,000.

The AMA defends doctors' pay. An editorial in its weekly newspaper said the vast majority "earn every dime they make." AMA officials point out:

- Doctors typically work 60 hours a week.
- New doctors frequently have heavy education loans to pay off, often $50,000 or more.
- By the time doctors finish residency, they are typically in their early 30s. People in other professions have already been earning good salaries for a decade.

Despite the income disparities, specialists bristle at the notion they are therefore greedier than family doctors. Such physicians as otolaryngologists — the ear, nose and throat specialists — contend they work hard for their pay, which averaged $233,000 in 1991.

"We do some very technical procedures, in which much skill and training are required," said Dr. James L. Autin, an otolaryngologist in Port St. Lucie, Fla.

He said he might charge $2,000 or $3,000 for a two-hour procedure but noted, "That fee is all-inclusive. It encompasses the very specialized procedure, the risk involved, the technical ability. And post-op care is rendered at no charge until the patient is done healing."

General doctors say they hardly ever question specialists about their fees. They have to stay on good terms with the doctors to whom they refer their difficult cases.

"It's a semi-taboo subject in the doctors' lounge," said Dr. Robert Florence, an internist in White Bear Lake, Minn. However, he and others acknowledge they sometimes do what they can to keep patients out of specialists' offices.

A few years ago, Florence sent a patient to a dermatologist for removal of a skin tag, a tiny, harmless flap of extra skin. The patient came back complaining of his $75 bill — $35 for an office visit and $40 to snip off the skin tag.

"That's when I learned to do it;" said Florence. "It takes 2 minutes. I charge $25 for the whole thing."

Even some family doctors are beginning to ask whether their pay has grown too rich.

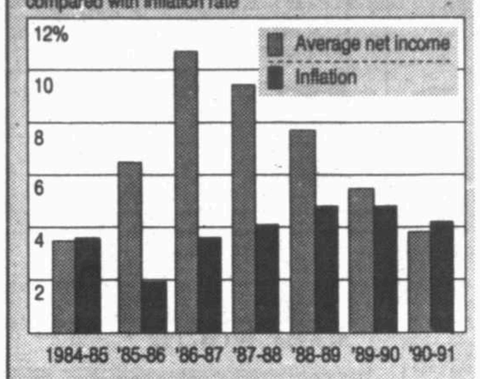

"My job is both difficult and demanding," Dr. Timothy J. Wolter of Chippewa Falls, Wis., wrote recently in the AMA's journal. "But is it really fourfold more so than that of a school teacher, a nurse or a police officer?"

The ups – and ups – of doctor's income

Average paychecks of U.S. doctors never fall; in some years, they just grow less rapidly. The reasons why doctors' incomes rise so consistently – and so fast – include the popularity of expensive new diagnostic tests and treatments, patients' demands for the very best care, insurance loop holes and physicians' free hand to raise their rates and fees.

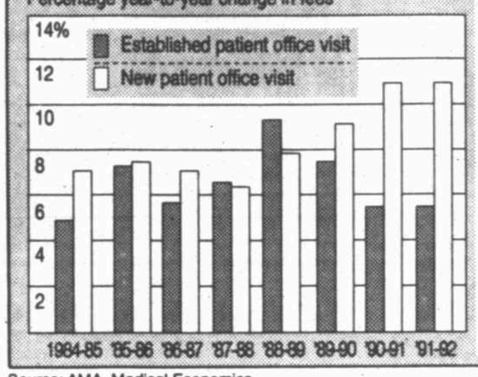

Almost every year, doctors' pay goes up faster than the inflation rate

One way doctors make more is by raising their rates

Other factors driving up doctors' pay

Medical technology: inserting catheters, doing surgery and running million-dollar diagnostic machines are clearly where the money is in modern medicine.

Fees for medical procedures are rising for patients with conventional insurance. In two years, for instance, plastic surgeons raised their fees for removing skin blemishes more than 50 percent, to $751.

Patients demand the latest, most sophisticated kinds of care. With insurance picking up the bill, there's no reason to search for a bargain.

Doctors are growing more adept at collecting the biggest possible reimbursement from insurers. One strategy is "unbundling" — charging separately for each step of a procedure rather than billing once for the whole thing.

STUDY: Findings encouraging encouraging for gene therapy if it applies to humans, because scientists cannot yet regulate how much protein results from inserted genes.

But Kay Davies of John Radcliffe Hospital in Oxford, England, said the problem in gene therapy is producing too little protein, rather than too much. She said she did not regard the paper as a major advance in the context of gene therapy.

The study does not address the major question of how to get the dystrophin gene into muscle cells of patients. Viruses are the major candidates to act as a shuttle. But scientists would have to create a working gene only about half as long as the one used in the new study to be able to use viruses, Chamberlain said. "I think we can do that," he said.

breath. But let's face it, it's the type of thing that can make neurotics out of all of us," he said.

Price said he is not familiar with Richter or the Pennsylvania Center but said the diagnostic and treatment process the center follows aligns with American Dental Association recommendations.

Most patients must make three visits to the clinic for the treatment process. On the first visit, patients undergo diagnostic tests to determine whether the odor stems from medical problems or oral anaerobic bacteria. Richter said those are the cause of 90 percent of the cases he sees. "A lot of people, for one reason or the other, have a particular germ in their mouth that produces a very bad odor, and if there are enough of those germs — an infestation — the odor can be quite powerful."

If the problem is a bacterial infestation, patients return for a second visit, and the soft tissue in their mouths is gently scaped and sprayed with a germicide. The patients then are taught how to treat themselves using a germicide shipped to their homes each month.

The third and final visit is made a few weeks after treatment has begun to make sure that the problem is under control.

The center, Richter said, has a 96 percent success rate. The cost of the diagnosis and treatment is about $300; the cost of the maintenance program is about $16 a month.

"The cost is ridiculously low considering what you get in return," said an attorney who lives in the Rochester, N.Y., area and was treated in March. "Personally I like I received a second life."

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Family life becomes much more fulfilling. Less stress and greater happiness are part of the picture. A new relationship will benefit you all the days of your life. A job promotion is possible in December. Your experience gives you an important edge over the competition. If planning to make a major employment or residential move, wait until next spring. The support of an influential group will give you extra clout then.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: labor leader Walter Reuther, actress Yvonne DeCarlo, singer Barry Gibb, comedian Lily Tomlin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You now find the motivation that you have lacked in the recent past. Success beckons! Guard against becoming overconfident. Others are willing to make sacrifices for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You gain the support of VIPs by meeting their needs. Make certain your partner understands the importance of keeping within a sensible budget. Romance is wild and wonderful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A brilliant flash of inspiration hits you. Your mind's eye is wide open. A money idea may be the start of something big. Now is no time to keep secrets from your mate!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new purchase or friendship will work out great because you love what you are doing. Other people are drawn by your warmth and interesting concepts. Examine a longtime business relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An exciting day lies ahead. Your plans gain widespread support while others "read all about it." Some information you receive is prize-winning material. Stay in step with those at the top.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An expert's idea will help you make rapid career or financial progress. Someone influential may be hard to please — suit yourself. Be patient with someone who airs a grievance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take care of paperwork early in the day. Getting involved in your friends' financial schemes would be a mistake. Cut down on expensive travel by making better use of the phone and mails.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bide your time, postponing a financial decision until more data are available. A short trip or group tour makes an enjoyable fall vacation. Romance sparkles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An indirect approach will work best today. You may be too easily influenced by another person. Keep your guard up, especially if money is involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to travel or get a pet project off the ground. Double-check reservations to prevent any mix-ups. Do everything you can to avoid a clash with an authority figure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will have to act fast to shore up a partnership or business deal. The leaks you plug now will help stop any further "water down the drain." A relative is your strongest ally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your words make believers of those who hear or read your message. Calls and meetings have lucky timing. You obtain what you ask for — even in romance — when you show more affection.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a real sense of direction in their lives. Count on them to be choosy when picking their friends. Even as youngsters, they will value honesty and diligence. Despite their shyness, these Virgos make wonderful hosts — quick to put others at ease. Careful attention to detail also makes them excellent managers and executives. They will never ask a subordinate to do something they would not be willing to do themselves.

Corporate America, fielding a team that included four players who had won major championships, waited until the last board to defeat a squad representing Congress by 7 International Match Points. It was the closest finish of the three annual matches held so far.

Congress grabbed the lead on the very first board. Sen. Hank Brown (R-Colo.) and former Rep. Bob Kastenmeier (R-Wisc.) reached three no trump on the auction shown. Since the South hand was too strong for a one-no-trump opening bid, Kastenmeier started with one club, then jumped to three no trump once his partner showed enough to bid voluntarily.

Rita Shugart, president of Monterey Aircraft Co, made a valiant effort by selecting fourth-best from an unbid major as her opening salvo. Declarer won the spade lead in hand with the king and the fate of the contract hinged on how the club suit was tackled. If either defender held a singleton honor, the correct way to play the suit would be to cash the ace and then, if an honor appears, to eventually finesse the other defender for the remaining honor. As the cards lie, that would have failed and the contract went down at the other table.

Kastenmeier reckoned that because of the overcall and opening lead West was more likely than East to be short in clubs. So at trick two he led a low club to the queen. When West showed out, it was a simple matter to take two club finesses through East and score two spades, one heart, two diamonds and four clubs.

Richards to get 60th birthday wish: her motorcycle license

AUSTIN — When she turns 60 today, Gov. Ann Richards will get her birthday wish: a motorcycle license.

"She took the written test and driving test" Monday and "passed with flying colors," said Bill Cryer, her press secretary and partner in motorcycle training class.

Cryer said the governor will go to a Department of Public Safety drivers license testing station Wednesday to be photographed and complete the paperwork.

The governor last year casually mentioned that she would like to ride a motorcycle on her 60th birthday.

A short time later, Harley-Davidson presented her with a pearl white bike decorated with the Texas flag. To keep from violating ethics laws, Richards gave the bike to the Department of Public Safety.

But she also said it would be fun to "do something kind of jazzy" on her birthday, and spent several days recently taking training classes and riding a 250-cc motorcycle. Cryer took the classes with her and said he also passed the test for his license.

LOS ANGELES — Jennifer Chambers Lynch's childhood reverence for the Venus de Milo statue is clearly evident in "Boxing Helena."

Lynch

The film, which opens Friday, stars Julian Sands as a surgeon who cuts off the limbs of the woman he's obsessed with, played by Sherilynn Fenn.

"I had an obsession for Venus de Milo, having been born with club feet and having the normal insecurities that children have," the filmmaker said. "I was feeling very broken and sort of imperfect.

"I was in awe of how beautiful the Venus was, and how people looked at her as if she were whole and perfect and not as if she were broken."

A life-size replica of the Venus occupies a spot in the living room of the director-writer's Hollywood Hills home. It also can be seen in the movie.

The film took six years to reach theaters. Madonna and Kim Basinger abandoned it; both had been involved with the production for eight months and walked out four weeks before the start of filming, Miss Lynch said.

Main Line Pictures won a $7.4 million judgment against Miss Basinger in a breach of oral contract lawsuit; she has since filed for bankruptcy.

Lynch, 25, is the daughter of "Twin Peaks" filmmaker David Lynch.

LOS ANGELES — The marriage is off, and Axl Rose wants his money back.

The lead singer of Guns N' Roses and model Stephanie Seymour began dating in early 1991, got engaged on Feb. 4 and split up later that month. Now, Rose is seeking to recover $100,000 in gifts he says he lavished on her in anticipation of marriage.

Among items he listed in a lawsuit are wedding and engagement rings, a gold and diamond turquoise necklace and a diamond and sapphire antique watch. He also is seeking punitive damages.

Seymour was asked in an Aug. 13 letter to return the gifts but she refused last week, according to the complaint filed Friday in Superior Court.

Rose contends that Seymour punched, hit and kicked him at a party she threw at his home last Christmas. He said she attacked him "without warning or provocation" while he was sitting at the kitchen table.

Seymour's attorney, Marc Goodman, was attending a meeting Tuesday and was unavailable for comment, his secretary said.

LAS VEGAS — Hundreds of family members, friends and fellow performers turned out to watch magicians Melinda Saxe and Lance Burton exchange wedding vows.

After Monday evening's ceremony at the Tropicana Hotel, the couple performed a levitation illusion. In attendance were a Who's Who of the magic world, including illusionists such as David Copperfield.

The bride, born and raised in Las Vegas, is billed as "The First Lady of Magic." She is performing at the Lady Luck hotel and casino, and Burton is a headliner at the Hacienda Hotel.

Hollywood's businesswoman of the year, Heidi Fleiss, was an all-American party girl, but according to the latest issue of the Spectator, the British are big in bed, too. William Cash writes that a "remarkably high proportion of Hollywood's prostitutes are British."

Author Bill Stadeim, whose forthcoming "Madame 90210" is being rushed into print ahead of time by Random House, concurs.

"Hollywood (consumers) are suckers for an English accent — they think it's smart. Even though most of the British girls working in L.A. have the sort of ghastly voices which would make the Englishmen I know run in the opposite direction, to the untutored American ear, a Brit accent is ... well, it's good for another hundred dollars.

SPACE-SAVING OCTAGON PICNIC TABLE

Outdoor seating is in high demand during the summer, so an octagon picnic table like this is ideal because it provides plenty of room for dining "al fresco" in a minimum of space. Made of redwood for its beauty and durablity, the three pieces in this set are designed to be inexpensive, very sturdy, weather-resistant and simple to build. Follow our step-by-step directions, traceable pattern and use standard lumber. When done, the table measures 55"W x 30"H.

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers'papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!
