Scottish heritage preserved

Local doctor finds 'roots,' coat of arms in Scotland

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Not in all of Scotland lives there a MacBray, or McBrayer, by American spelling, but a Hereford man has restored the name to the rolls of Scottish clans.

Just last month, Dr. Duffy McBrayer took part in a ceremony dedicating a memorial to the Armstrong clan of Scotland. And, for the first time, he proudly carried the McBrayer coat of arms in the ceremony.

As far as he knows, almost 200 years had elapsed since such an opportunity had presented itself.

No one knows what happened to the McBrayers, nee MacBrays. They just disappeared from Scotland, said Dr. McBrayer.

He has learned that the family was stripped of lands and titles in about 1600, for what reason no one knows.

By the early 1800s, there were none left there.

McBrayer knows that some moved to the English colonies in North America. A genealogy search located his great-great-grandfather, James McBrayer, born in the 1770s, apparently in Philadelphia.

"He was third generation which means the family probably came over here sometime in the 1600s," said Dr. McBrayer.

Besides locating the family coat of arms, Dr. McBrayer wanted to find a copy of or information about the MacBray tartan.

"All tartans were banned in 1745 and it was a crime to have anything that even looked like one," he explained.

Tartans disappeared, virtually, from the face of Scotland.

But, an English king, probably William IV, who ascended the throne in 1830, "became enamored with Scotland," and wanted the Scottish nobility to resume wearing their tartans, said Dr. McBrayer.

"Only families who had portraits of someone wearing a tartan knew what theirs looked like," continued Dr. McBrayer.

With the blessing of the king in 1830, tartans were restored and clans resumed wearing theirs after almost 100 years.

Corsicana tensions high for Juneteenth

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) - Protests sparked by a black man's death while in police custody had authorities concerned Saturday about a possible Juneteenth confrontation with white supremacists, while others complained of law officers' treatment.

Gwan Hawthorne, an officer of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Corsicana chapter, said the Ku Klux Klan's decision to rally Saturday is an insult.

Corsicana, which is about 50 miles south of Dallas, has held organized Juneteenth, which commemorates the emancipation of blacks in Texas, festivities for the last three years.

The NAACP has been telling people not to let the Klan's last-minute march mar the day.

"We don't plan to have any confrontation with the Klan members at all," said Robert Sanders, president of the local NAACP.

"We're advising everyone to stay away from their rally. It's no concern of ours as to what they're doing."

"They have the right, they've been granted their rights and so we've been granted ours. So, even though we don't want them here, they have rights, too."

Tension in this town of 29,000 residents, about a fourth of whom are black, has been high since news of Craig Thomas' death surfaced.

Three Corsicana residents contended Friday they were abused

Hereford to welcome 2 more doctors soon

Efforts by Deaf Smith General Hospital to lure new physicians to town will bring forth fruit later this year when the first two of five doctors begins practicing in Hereford.

The hospital district's board of directors on Tuesday learned that Dr. Kent R. Walker, D.O., and Dr. Howard H. Haysom will move here to set up family practices.

Walker is set to come here on Aug. 1, and Haysom on Sept. 1.

In addition, the hospital is looking forward to the addition of three other family practitioners to join the staff in the future.

Dr. Glen Afford will come to town in August 1994, while Dr. Stephen Lawlis and Dr. David Bruce Clark will come in August 1995.

Hospital administrator Ron Rives said the five additions will complete the hospital's two-year search for the specialty, although physician recruitment is still ongoing.

"We will...continue recruiting for an orthopedic surgeon to bring to Hereford," Rives said.

Rives also commented on the two new doctors scheduled to come to town this year.

"Not only are Dr. Walker and Dr. Haysom excellent physicians, they have interesting backgrounds and wonderful families that will be real assets to the community."

"Both Dr. Haysom and Dr. Walker will be delivering babies. Dr. Walker will be working with our industrial medicine (department) and helping to develop a sports medicine (program) here at DSGH," Rives noted.

Walker, a native of Idaho and former all-state football player, began his medical training in the U.S. Army as a basic medical specialist.

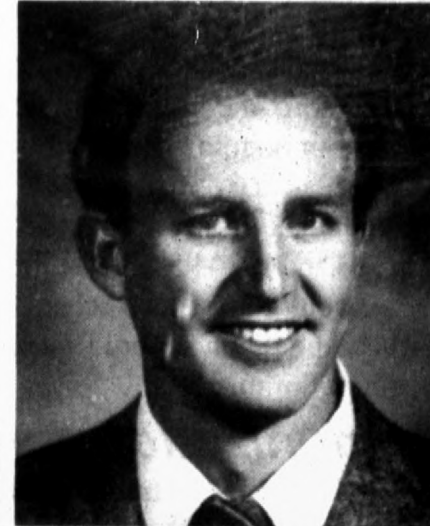

He continued taking specialized medical training, including a three-year stint on the European campus of the University of Maryland in Frankfurt, Germany, where he completed an associates degree in premed studies.

He received a bachelor of science degree in zoology from Idaho State University in Pocatello, Idaho, then completed his Doctor of Osteopathy degree at the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Sciences in Des Moines, Iowa.

He interned at the Michigan

HOWARD H. HAYSOM, M.D.

KENT R. WALKER, D.O.

Medical Center for one year, then spent 18 months at William Beaumont Army Medical Center at Fort Bliss in El Paso in an "Ortho Residency" program.

His training and background include extensive experience in family practice -- including obstetrics -- emergency medicine, sports medicine and industrial/occupational health.

Haysom was born in Johannesburg, South Africa, to a businessman and his wife.

He spent his early years in South Africa, Rhodesia, Luxembourg and Canada.

He received his Doctor of Medicine degree from Dalhousie University Medical School of Nova Scotia, Canada.

Since completing a general rotating internship at Dalhousie, Haysom has practiced medicine in Houston for the past 16 years. He has authored several scholarly articles on various aspects of medicine.

Haysom said part of his reason for choosing Hereford was that he was tired of the competitive atmosphere of the big city.

He said he hopes to build a strong family practice, specializing in primary care.

Haysom also said he and his family were drawn to Hereford because of the supportive atmosphere for family life and family activities.

He and his wife, Nancy, have three children, Derrick, John and Susan.

Mrs. Haysom is a graduate of Louisiana State University and South Texas College of Law. They enjoy gardening and family activities.

July 4th festival will be offered here again

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

It may only be June and the holiday on everyone's mind may be Father's Day, but it's not too soon to be thinking about Independence Day.

The Fourth of July Celebration Committee is currently involved in preparations for the third annual festival, arranging entertainment and trying to get the word out about the affair.

The concept of the celebration is simple -- organizers would like to invite everyone to hold their family, church, or other picnics at Veterans Park on Sunday, July 4.

There, at 7 p.m., the committee will present a program of local people singing, which will last until a fireworks show at dusk.

Wes Klett, chairman of the three-member organizing committee, said the purpose is simply to offer families a place to get together to celebrate Independence Day.

"A lot of people don't necessarily pay attention to the entertainment," Klett said -- they are there for family celebrations.

Because the holiday falls on a Sunday this year, said Janie Nino, the committee also is asking church groups to cancel evening services and schedule a picnic at the park.

As a special treat, watermelon provided by Anipro will be available to everyone who attends.

To date, several people have signed up to provide entertainment, Nino said.

They are: Raul Guerrero, Mary Verner, Melissa Celaya, Annie Zuniga, Vicky Ortiz, Suzan Scriber, Chelli Cummings and Natalie Sims and Christie Lytal.

Master of Ceremonies for the show will be County Judge Tom Simons.

Other performers are pending, Nino said, and a final schedule will be compiled before the celebration.

Also during the day, the committee has invited local non-profit groups to set up booths to raise money.

Nino said several groups have already pledged to have booths, many of them selling drinks and food.

Other groups may reserve a space at the park by calling Nino at 364-0231.

The deadline to sign up for booth space is 5 p.m. July 1.

As of Friday, the following non-profit groups had agreed to participate: Primera Iglesia Bautista youth, serving bunuelos and drinks; San Jose Catholic Church youth, serving burritos, carne asada and drinks; Community Church; the American Red Cross; and the Hereford Board of Realtors, which will sell raffle tickets for its scholarship fund.

There will be no electricity available for booth operators.

At dusk, Klett said, the 30-minute fireworks display will begin.

It is put on by Western Pyrotechnics of Enid, Okla., which has done the July 4th show both previous years.

Because of the fireworks, those attending the celebration will not be allowed to park inside the park, to avoid possible damage to vehicles.

In addition, access to the park will only be through the north entrance, Klett said, because of the fireworks.

Both Klett and committee member Diane Beavers noted that Hereford police and fire departments traditionally offer considerable help with the celebration.

Because it is basically an unstructured event, Mrs. Beavers said, groups coming to the park are encouraged to bring play equipment such as Frisbees, horseshoes, baseballs and other items.

In the past, Klett said, families have begun arriving at the park at about 9 a.m. with portable grills and lots of food, intent on staying through the fireworks.

Other families arrive just before the fireworks show begins.

Even though the committee's celebration is relatively low-key, there still considerable expense involved, Klett said.

"The whole deal runs about $10,000," he said. "The fireworks is the significant portion of it."

The committee is loosely affiliated with the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, and donations to cover the expenses may be made to the committee in care of the chamber.

Additional information or to volunteer with the affair is available by calling Nino or the chamber.

Campbell project due for completion in '94

Installation of water and sewer lines in the Campbell Street area could be completed early in 1994, if no unforeseen hitches develop.

A representative of the engineering firm, Hibbs, Oller and Todd, Inc., retained Friday for the project, told the Deaf Smith County Commissioners that the "best scenario" would be to have the job done in mid-December.

However, Gary Lee McKay, project engineer for the firm, advised commissioners that the earliest the work can be finished, as a practical matter, should be January or February.

The engineering firm of Hibbs, Oller and Todd, Inc., was one of six submitting proposals for the project. McKay attended the commission meeting to answer questions and explain procedure. The engineering firm has offices in Abilene and Lubbock.

Another firm, Brandt Engineers of Amarillo, was represented by Dwight L. Brandt at the meeting.

No other engineers appeared. The fee for engineering services is $23,337.

McKay said his company would begin the survey of the area immediately and submit plans to the Texas Water Commission as soon as possible. The TWC is empowered to approve, or disapprove, the plans.

The TWC decision should be made within two to six weeks after plans are submitted, McKay said.

As soon as the project is cleared by the TWC, plans may be put out for bids. He estimated construction time at 90 working days.

McKay reminded that weather will play an important role because construction could begin as winter approaches.

A Texas Community Development block grant of $250,000 was obtained for the improvements. The set fee for engineering is specified in the grant application. A formal contract for the engineering will be signed at a later date.

The area where water and sewer lines will be installed is located adjacent to, but outside of the Hereford city limits.

The new water and sewer lines will be connected to City of Hereford facilities.

City posts agenda

Hereford City Commissioners will work through a short agenda at their Monday evening meeting, beginning at 7:30 p.m. A pre-meeting briefing session will start at 6:45 p.m. Items on the agenda include consideration of bids for new lighting at the airport and for grass products for the gold course; discussion of a request for assistance for the July 4th celebration; consideration of installing a cafeteria plan for city employees; appointing members to the Golf Course Advisory Board and hearing a proposal for traffic re-routing at Hereford High School. The commission also will decide if the July 5 meeting will be canceled since that day will be an official holiday.

Hospital board to meet

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors will hold a special meeting on Monday. The session is set for 5 p.m. in the board room of the hospital. On the agenda is a board education presentation by Quality Systems Group and a discussion of the upcoming hospital renovation project.

School board meeting set

The Hereford Independent School District board of trustees will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, which will be held in conjunction with a special meeting that same day to tour ongoing construction projects. The regular meeting will be held at 6 p.m. in the board room, 136 Avenue F. Among the agenda items to be considered are school depository bids for 1993-94 and 1994-95, reapportionment, a requested tax abatement, the joint city commission-school board swimming pool committee and an update on school financing. The special meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

Immunization schedule noted

The Texas Department of Health has announced its June immunization clinic scheduled for Hereford. Vaccines against polio, diphtheria, lockjaw (tetanus), whooping cough (pertussis), measles, rubella, mumps and HIB (hemophilus influenzae type B) will be offered. Charges are based on family income and size and ability to pay. Funds are used to help keep the clinic open. The clinic's regular sessions will be held from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The clinic will be held Thursday in the Health Department offices, 205 W. Fourth St., Suite B.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Successful people are never afraid to try something new. Many of HJH's teachers are indeed trying new things this summer with various workshops and in-service programs. Myrna Buckley has been in the "Newspaper in the Classroom" program at WT. (We saw your picture in the paper, Myrna!). Paula Miller and Susan Perrin attended a Kodak workshop in Amarillo. We'll probably have to watch for candid camera activities now.

Many HJH students, including our "spring graduates" are involved in various areas of leadership in Vacation Bible Schools in the area. It is good to see these young people working in these roles. We also have students from HJH and HHS on mission trips, in musical touring groups and at various camps. A number of these campers are in leadership positions. All of these activities do much for character building!

Many of HISD's personnel are involved in VBS activities, also. An interesting article by Indira Lakshmanan in the Fort Worth Star Telegram would be worthwhile reading for all educators. Entitled "Art for Life's Sake," the writer states that the arts are not a special program or something "extra." Rather, arts are a basic part of education.

Art, music and drama classes teach teamwork and cross-cultural communication. They're focused on how well we're doing this together—dance, music, painting, sculpture, theater—and it doesn't matter if you're rich or poor or what ethnic group you're from.

"Perhaps the strongest argument for arts education is the potential the arts have to reach at-risk or special needs students," says Lakshmanan.

Too often, some of our arts education classes are not promoted as they should be, even in HISD, so perhaps this can be one of our goals as we prepare for our new year. After all, art education is about how we solve real-life problems. It's not music for its own sake or art for its own sake, but what they teach about us as people, as Americans, as parents and teachers, as children!

One young man at VBS was disappointed, I'm sure, with my answer to his question, "What is the very worst thing that happened at junior high this year?" My reply was, "The worst thing that happened at junior high this year was that many students did not learn as much as we would like for them to have learned."

Don't forget that there are some "mighty good books" waiting to be read and our local library personnel will be happy to check them out to you and it's FREE!! Read to your children, read with your children. If you don't have children, we'll see that you are loaned some!!

City Update

By CHESTER NOLEN
Hereford City Manager

The summer of '93 has finally arrived and so has high water usage. During the last several weeks, I have noted with increasing regularity people watering lawns and allowing the water to continue on down the gutter for several blocks. This practice is expensive for the water user and wasteful of the City's resources. Please follow watering guidelines applicable to your lawn and save some money.

The performing pavilion planned for Dameron Park is in final design stages and should be advertised for bids very shortly.

The Hereford Airport lighting project is proceeding with bids to be awarded Monday night.

The Mayor and myself, along with representatives from the County, School and Hospital, will be meeting Monday for what I hope to be a fairly regular occurrence. The purpose of the meetings is the exchange of information among the entities.

The City's next workshop is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Saturday, June 26. The meeting is open to the public.

The seal coating project is complete for this year. I hope that no person or business was terribly inconvenienced by the process.

The City will have already sprayed for mosquitos by the time you read this; however, we will be spraying a couple of additional times this summer.

U.S. meat among safest, but inspection system not foolproof

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - No amount of inspection can make meat and poultry totally free of contamination, witnesses testified Friday before a panel considering changes to the nation's meat-inspection system.

Meat in the United States already is among the world's safest, but too many people still believe wrongly that the inspection system is foolproof, some witnesses said.

Consumers and meat handlers need to be better educated on how to keep foods free of chemical, physical and bacterial contamination, once they have passed inspections at the food-processing level, the witnesses said.

Changing the system or increasing the number of inspectors - while desirable - is not enough, they said.

"Consumers must be made aware that food is not sterile," said Sherbyn Ostrich of the American Veterinary Medical Association. "It remains at risk of post-processing contaminants."

About three dozen people testified Friday before the Food Safety and Inspection Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The hearing was the last of a series of six that began May 21 in Dallas.

Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy wants a plan by next month on short-term reforms to the nation's meat-inspection system. A separate panel is considering long-term reforms, with a report expected within three years.

Critics say the current 86-year-old system does not focus enough on such contaminants as microorganisms that could lead to illness or death. Four people died and 500 others became ill in several Western states earlier this year from ground beef contaminated with the bacteria E. coli O157:H7.

The food safety agency has proposed a "war on pathogens" that involves tracking the meat chain from the farms to the dining tables, instead of starting with the food-processing plants as inspectors now do.

The program to reduce the disease-causing contaminants also has a consumer-education component and pledges to make regulations based on sound, scientific data.

Industry and consumer groups praised the agency's efforts to reform the system, although some remained skeptical about whether the changes would work.

J. Patrick Boyle, president of the American Meat Institute, agreed that numerous opportunities existed - "from farm to factory to fork" - to make meats safer.

Because few details were provided on the reform plans, many witnesses were limited to criticizing the current system.

"Meat and poultry inspection can no longer protect the public from unfit, unwholesome meat," said Rod Leonard, executive director of Community Nutrition Institute, which advocates food safety.

As an example of a "poorly managed" system, he cited last month's disclosure that 30 of 90 slaughterhouses randomly checked had to be temporarily closed because of possible sources of food contamination.

James Derba, who owns a meat-supplying company in Massachusetts, testified that many inspectors waste resources by focusing on "innate and inconsequential" areas of the production process.

Farmers would be under the agency's scrutiny for the first time.

MCBRAYER---

MacBriar tartan were available for many years, a genealogist in Scotland located "half" the pattern, said Dr. McBrayer.

"She found it in a museum and called a friend to tell him she had located the tartan," he continued. "She was told she'd found only half -- her friend said he had the other half," laughed Dr. McBrayer.

The tartan is a beautiful blend of colors with muted red predominating. The dress tartan has a white background while the less formal tartan has a cinnamon background.

In May the McBrayers and another Hereford couple, Don and Pat Graham, went to Scotland to attend Roots '93, a gathering of the International Family Association for Dumfries and Galloway.

"There were people there from New Zealand, Australia, Italy, California and Delaware," the McBrayers said.

The search for "roots" that seemed to erupt several years ago after Alex Haley's book by that name was published indirectly prompted Dr. McBrayer into seeking information about his own family.

"I hadn't thought about it until a cousin started doing some research," he said.

Dr. McBrayer soon learned that looking for ancestors is not a simple task. He consulted a Hereford woman, Nell Norvell, who has done extensive genealogy study.

"People who do this know where to look," he explained. "Nell went back to pre-Revolutionary times. There are McBrayers in Colonial Philadelphia records."

Because of her care and attention to detail, the papers he submitted to re-establish the McBrayer name in Scotland drew high praise.

"Lord Lyon King of Arms, who has charge of these matters, wrote the he rarely sees this quality of work from America," the Hereford man reported.

"The arms were issued in record time -- about three months, and we had expected it to take a year," Dr.

ELLIE ELIZABETH CLAY

June 17, 1993

Ellie Elizabeth Clay, 91, of Hart, mother of Pauline Adams of Hereford, died Thursday in Hart.

Services were held Saturday in Ivey Chapel of Foskey Funeral Home with burial in Hart Cemetery. Officiant was the Rev. Donald Puryear of the Church of the Living God in Brownfield.

Mrs. Clay was born in Jacksboro and lived in Fieldton before moving to Hart in 1963. She married Thompson A. Clay in 1927 in Sweetwater. He died in 1972. She was a homemaker. A son, Leland Clay, died in 1980.

Survivors, in addition to her daughter, are three sons, Thurman Clay of Hart, Lee Clay of Silverton and James Clay of Nara Visa, N.M.; four sisters, Lillie Heartsill of Lubbock, Lela Merritt and Rosetta Henderson, both of Brownfield, and Delphia Davis of Hart; a brother, Edward Durham of Brownfield; 15 grandchildren and 24 great-grandchildren.

ROBERTO G. BARRIENTES

June 17, 1993

Roberto Garcia Barrientes, 32, of Amarillo died Thursday in Lubbock. His mother, Concepcion Chavez, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Garcia, live in Hereford.

Services are scheduled Monday at 2 p.m. in San Jose Catholic Church with Fr. Darryl Birkenfeld, pastor, and deacon Vicente Garcia officiating. Burial will be in St. Anthony's Cemetery under direction of Gililand-Watson Funeral Home.

He was born on Jan. 10, 1961, in Hereford. He was a road construction worker and a Catholic.

Survivors include his mother; two sisters, Lupe Barrientes of Joliet, Ill., and Cindy Badillo of Fresno, Calif.; a brother, Juan Arnulfo of Amarillo; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Garcia of Hereford and Candelaria Barrientes of San Antonio.

FREDERICK ALBUS

June 17, 1993

Frederick William Albus, 72, of Pep, died Thursday at home. He is the brother of Wilhemia Fetsch of Hereford.

Services were held Saturday morning at St. Philip Neri Catholic Church in Pep and burial followed in St. Philip Cemetery under direction of Hammons Funeral Home of Littlefield.

Mr. Albus was born Jan. 2, 1921, in Rhineland and married Rose Fetsch in 1947. She died in 1984. Mr. Albus helped form Germania and Catholic Life Insurance branches in Pep. He moved to Pep in 1923. He served on the school board and was a member of the Catholic Church.

Survivors include four sons, three daughters, two brothers, four sisters and 18 grandchildren.

McBrayer added.

While the registration of the coat of arms does not afford McBrayer citizenship in Scotland, he said he is classified as a "nobleman." To have arms is "one step below a knight," he said.

Dr. McBrayer is not entitled to any land or special privileges except he may attend meetings of chiefs of clans in Scotland.

"It's all kind of romantic," he grinned, with his bright blue eyes twinkling.

"It makes an ancient name alive again in Scotland," Dr. McBrayer observed.

The McBrayers and Grahams were guests at the Armstrong clan memorial dedication while they were in Scotland. Graham represented the Graham clan and McBrayer carried his coat of arms banner.

During their visits to Scotland, the McBrayers feel very much at home. Said Mrs. McBrayer, "When we retire, we'd like to spend about two months there every year."

His coat of arms search and application for re-establishing the family in Scotland has drawn nothing but enthusiasm from their friends there.

"Everyone we talked to about the coat was pleased," said Dr. McBrayer. "They took it as a compliment, especially doing something out of love for our heritage."

One thing for sure, now, there is at least one McBrayer among the 5 million Scots.

Investigator searching for identity of long-dead victim

By CYNTHIA PUCKETT
Amarillo Globe-News
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A homicide investigator is calling for a national program to help identify nameless victims found throughout the country each year.

Investigators are left at square one in solving a homicide when they have no way of knowing who the victim is, said Amarillo Police Sgt. Modeina Holmes, an investigator with the Potter-Randall Special Crimes unit.

One such case that plagues Amarillo police officers is that of Jane Doe 1983. Ms. Holmes, who works with the multi-agency task force that investigates homicides in Potter, Randall and Armstrong counties, has made discovering the identity of the young woman her life's work, she said.

"Every year I make a New Year's resolution and I say 'This year I'm going to find out who she is,'" Ms. Holmes said.

The body of Jane Doe 1983 was found by a passing motorcyclist 10 years ago Oct. 8, lying face down in a culvert about 17 miles north of Amarillo.

An investigation revealed the woman had been strangled with a rope or cord by someone standing behind her. The date of her death is estimated to be the night of Oct. 6 or the morning of Oct. 7.

Investigators at the scene saw lines in the dirt that indicated the woman had been dragged about 30 feet before being shoved head first into the culvert.

An array of information has been gleaned from the victim's body. Investigators described her as 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 120 to 140 pounds, with curled light brown or dark blonde hair and hazel or blue eyes. Holmes estimates the woman's age at between 16 and 20.

This woman and hundreds of other mysterious homicide victims found across the country each year might be identified if officials had a way of showing their photographs to the public nationwide, a police investigator says.

The victim's hands and fingernails were carefully groomed and her toenails had been painted with red fingernail polish, Ms. Holmes said.

Jane Doe was wearing three rings: a diamond friendship or promise ring, a size 7 wedding band that had been wrapped with a bandage to fit the victim's size 5 finger, and a red-colored garnet or ruby birthstone ring.

The victim also had a brown mole or birthmark on her left forearm and a birthmark under her right breast.

Holmes said one thing she noticed about the victim is that she had no tan lines.

"That's unusual for someone that age, being toward the end of the summer, unless she was from an area where sunbathing wasn't popular, such as a state up north." Tests on the victim's type A-positive blood revealed that she had consumed very little or no alcohol before her death and was not a drug user.

Jane Doe's well-kept and well-groomed appearance was not typical of a transient, Ms. Holmes said. Information about the victim's contact lens prescription and unusual tooth structure was sent to eye and dental professionals nationwide.

The victim had a noticeable space between her two front teeth, and she had no upper right lateral incisor. The tooth had not been removed, but instead was a hereditary condition, Ms. Holmes said.

In many cases, bodies are badly decomposed and bones are scattered when they are discovered, often leaving few clues behind for investigators. But in Jane Doe 1983's case, the information police have is specific enough to identify the woman. Ms. Holmes believes the information is simply not getting to the right people.

"To me, she appears so young, and yet in 10 years, we haven't been able to identify her; we haven't made the right connection. And in all that time, nobody has come forward to identify her."

"The family might not have heard from her all these years, but think she's OK somewhere and haven't looked for her."

That's where national publicity would help in this and many other similar cases, Ms. Holmes said.

Information and a reconstructed photograph of the victim's face have been sent to several missing persons' organizations and law enforcement agencies across the county. But the public has only limited access to that information, Ms. Holmes said.

Nor are there any rewards posted for identifying the homicide victim, she said. Crime Stoppers will pay a reward if a suspect is found and convicted of the crime. And families of murder victims often post rewards for help in solving murders of their own family members, but rewards are rarely offered to get information about an unidentified body, she said.

The story has been turned down by national television shows such as "Unsolved Mysteries," mainly because there's no real story line that would make it interesting for the public, Ms. Holmes said.

"The only thing that will help us more than anything is to get her photograph on some kind of national system and get the public interested," she said. "We need her photograph exposed to the general public and not just law enforcement agencies.

"There's a lot of kids from infants to adults found by law enforcement agencies each year, but they are not identified because there's no national exposure. I would like to see a program specifically for that."

"We have found them. Now, who are they?"

Anyone with information about Jane Doe 1983 or who wishes to help with a national program can contact Ms. Holmes at 806-378-9468.

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) - Clint Eastwood has emerged as a major backer of a ballot measure to ease commercial zoning restrictions in this quaint seaside town of small shops and art galleries.

Eastwood, the town's former mayor and owner of a two-story commercial building, has donated almost $42,000 to promote Measure H, the city's first ballot referendum in 25 years.

Backers say the plan to give city staff more authority to grant business permits merely restores zoning rules in effect until 1984, when anti-growth members of the Carmel City Council put restrictions on the commercial district.

Opponents call it a battle over whether the town will cater to tourists or its roughly 4,400 residents. Al Eisner, an opposition leader, accused Eastwood of being "just another greedy landlord as far as I'm concerned."

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the trouble with the younger generation is that so many of us don't belong to it anymore!

Q: How many bureaucrats does it take to screw in a light bulb?

A: What, you mean the first time?

Did you hear about the woman who sought a divorce, complaining of her husband's constant bad language? "He kept after me all the time, using those four-letter words."

The judge wanted to know specifically what four-letter words her spouse had used.

Blushing, the wife answered: "Wash, iron, dust and cook."

The announcement by Deaf Smith General Hospital that two new doctors are moving to Hereford is a major development for the hospital and the community. The community was desperately in need of more doctors. There has been a specific need for more family practice physicians, for doctors to take care of nursing home patients, and for delivering babies. This should greatly benefit our health care situation.

For the hospital, the addition of two doctors makes a big difference in operating revenues. If one doctor adds one patient a day to the hospital census, that represents increased revenues of almost $1 million to the facility.

Father's Day is here again, and we'd like to salute all dads with a column written several years ago by Paul Harvey. It's titled "What are fathers made of?"

A father is a thing that is forced to endure childbirth without an anesthetic.

A father is a thing that growls when it feels good, and laughs very loud when it's scared to death.

A father is sometimes accused of giving too much time to his business when the little ones are growing up.

That's partly fear, too. Fathers are much more easily frightened than mothers.

A father never feels entirely worthy of the worship in a child's eyes.

He's never quite the hero his daughter thinks, never quite the man his son believes him to be, and this worries him, sometimes.

So he works too hard to try and smooth the rough places in the road for those of his own who will follow him.

A father is a thing that gets very angry when the first school grades aren't as good as he thinks they should be.

He scolds his son, though he knows it's the teacher's fault.

A father is a thing that goes away to war, sometimes.

And learns to swear and shoot and spit through his teeth and would run the other way except that this war is part of his only important job in life--which is making the world better for his child than it has been for him.

Fathers grow old faster than other people.

Because they, in other wars, have to stand at the train station and wave goodbye to the uniform that climbs aboard.

And while mothers can cry where it shows, fathers have to stand there and beam outside--and die inside.

Fathers have very stout hearts, so they have to be broken sometimes or no one would know what's inside.

Fathers are what give daughters away to other men who aren't nearly good enough, so they can have grandchildren that are smarter than anybody's.

Fathers fight dragons...almost.

They hurry away from the breakfast table, off to the arena which is sometimes called an office or a workshop.

There, with calloused, practiced hands, they tackle the dragon with three heads--Weariness, Work and monotony.

And they never quite win the fights, but they never give up.

Knights in shining armor, fathers in shiny trousers--there's little difference as they march away to each workday.

Fathers make bets with insurance companies about who'll live the longest.

Though they know the odds, they keep on betting.

Even as the odds get higher and higher, they keep right on betting, more and more.

And one day they lose.

But fathers enjoy an earthly immortality, and the bet's paid off to the part of him he leave behind.

I don't know where fathers go when they die.

He won't just sit on a cloud and wait for the girl he's loved and the children she bore.

He'll be busy there, too--repairing the stairs, oiling the gates, improving the streets, smoothing the way.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I recently learned of an incident that happened in America that is so terrible that I am ashamed to even think about it. The national media, as usual, failed to inform us of an occurrence so shocking that mainstream American would never have tolerated it.

Thanks to Sen. Jesse Helms and a few other brave souls on Capitol Hill who have been distributing photos and videos of actual incidents being allowed in our land, the word is getting out to Congress and to the people that the situation is much worse than we realized. I wrote a somewhat cruel letter to President Clinton concerning the incident, and here's part of what I said:

"There comes a time when every human being must take a stand on what is right and wrong. For me, that moment came in a devastating manner when I read a recent news release concerning the parade entry directly behind Roberta Achtenberg and her 'family' in the Bay Bridge Parade last fall in San Francisco.

I cannot comprehend that you, as President of the United States, have not been given this information. I find it hard to believe you were not aware of this unbelievable blasphemy when you appointed her to the high post and promised a similarly high position to her 'partner.'

"What I am referring to, of course, is the parade entry float with the caption, 'One Nation Under God,' which featured a homosexual dressed as Boy Scout operating life-sized mechanical figures of Uncle Sam being sodomized by God the Father.

"NO, NO, NO. This cannot and will not be, not in America. NO MORE! Had I been there in San Francisco--although I am the worst coward there is--I would run out in the street all by myself and torn that float to pieces with my bare hands, and then I would have sung 'Onward, Christian Soldiers' all the way to jail."

That's what I wrote to the President, and that's how I feel. If you agree with this letter, please make as many copies of it as you can--then write "I AGREE WITH THIS LETTER" across them and send them to every local, state and Federal official for whom you can find an address. Then, please make some more copies and send them to as many relatives and friends as you can.

We HAVE to do something. Please pray, send letters, fast and speak out against the forces trying to destroy a wonderful country dedicated to Almighty God. We need to have some parades of our own--millions of Americans of all races and religions, banded together, marching behind the cross of Jesus Christ.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

I, for one, am very relieved.

It all started last Monday, when a reporter asked President Clinton (the male half, not the female half) about his flip-flops on recent nominations.

(Such as nominating super-liberal Lani Guinier without reading her writings, then pulling the rug out from under her after public protest started getting out of hand, and then almost nominating Judge Breyer to the Supreme Court, then changing his mind after the judge's tax problems became public.)

Clinton got riled and stormed out of the news conference (I'm not sure, but I think he was overheard to say something about "If they won't play by my rules, I just won't play with them at all!").

Anyway, the next day a reporter caught him on his morning jog and asked if Clinton was still mad at the media.

"I'm not mad at the press," the president responded.

As I said, I'm SOOOOOOOO relieved.

Speaking of the Presidents Clinton, I see that they are in trouble with the courts already.

On one side, President Bill Clinton and his lawyers are fighting a contempt order and threatened fines over a judge's order that the Clinton White House is failing to work to preserve Reagan- and Bush-era electronic mail.

Seems about 600 tapes are deteriorating from age and the judge feels Clinton has "dillydallied" around for four months without carrying out his order.

On the other side, President Hillary Clinton's health reform task force has been ordered -- not once, but twice -- to preserve all documents generated by the task force and 500-member working group that supported it.

Well, apparently the judge in this case feels there is "sufficiently credible" evidence that those two orders are being violated and he is threatening to charge the Clinton administration with contempt of court.

(By the way, that much-vaunted health task force that was supposed to present Clinton with a report in time for him to introduce health reform legislation by his 100th day in office STILL hasn't come forth with a report, even though it disbanded May 30. Talk about a colossal waste of taxpayer money! Does this bother anyone else?)

Speaking of political subjects close to the heart of our Presidents Clinton, I saw another interesting article last week that the Associated Press wrote.

This one says that a "new breed" of lesbians, gays and bisexuals have started calling themselves "queers," saying that it is used to show that people of those lifestyle are not afraid of a formerly derisive epithet.

In fact, one faction -- the Lesbian-Gay Freedom Day Parade in San Francisco -- will declare this to be "The Year of the Queer."

That is fitting, I think.

After all, the definition of "queer" is "deviating from the accepted or normal."

Don't even look at the religious argument, which says that homosexuality is sin. Just look at the biological.

Man has one set of sex organs and woman has a different set. They are designed to interconnect just like the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle.

The human sexual system was not designed to interconnect with the human excretory system.

Anyway, without getting gross, I really think "queer" (even though it ruins a perfectly good word that could be used in other contexts) is just the way to describe these people.

Let's get away from all this political mumbo-jumbo for a while, okay?

A couple of things I didn't have room to mention last week.

Living in this area, you all know that the musical "Texas" takes place every year near Canyon.

Well, last week my wife and I were able to see it for the first time.

We were invited to attend a special dress rehearsal performance for media representatives and other mucky-mucks from the area.

(The only Hereford person I saw that I recognized was Virginia Artho from the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, who attended with her family and staff. You might have been there, but I didn't recognize you.)

My wife and I had wanted to see "Texas" on our honeymoon in 1987, but it was not open, so last week's trip was a special treat, as it served as our fifth anniversary gift to each other. (Our anniversary was June 11.)

Anyway, we both thoroughly enjoyed the production and didn't really notice any major flaws. One dancer dropped his partner while trying to hold her above his head, but it was during the last number and she didn't fall too hard, so it didn't matter.

Hopefully we'll be able to go see it again sometime.

Now, I didn't omit my anniversary in last week's column because I had forgotten about it -- I simply had other things to write about and ran out of room, so don't you ladies go blaming me for being a forgetful pig!

As for this weekend, my parents, Jerry and Alice Wesner, will be in town for a visit with my nephew, Charles DiLorenzo.

I look forward to the visit and know they will be impressed with our friendly, clean, compact town.

Well, that's all for this week. Have a good week and, remember, let's be careful out there.

Guest column

Have we become disunited Union?

By DON ROGERS
Sweetwater Reporter

SWEETWATER, Texas - We need a new perspective regarding politics and the government of our country.

Seeing how government is regarded with such scorn and derision in our nation, by those who are our governmental representatives as well as the man on the street, I cannot imagine running for any government office on any level in our land.

Just after World War II, when I was just a young boy, I recall an incident that illustrates just how different the concept of the leaders of our nation was then compared to now.

I had accompanied my dad to the local grocery store one evening. As we were standing in line waiting to be checked out, my dad and several other local men were talking about the end of the war and how our country had pulled together as a unit to defeat the enemy.

A stranger walked in the door, heard their conversation, and began to speak of how little regard he had for the President. He didn't get very far into his conversation when my father spoke up and told him that if he did not stop speaking of the president of our country in such a manner, one of them would not be walking out of the store that day. All the other men agreed with him, and the man quickly made his exit.

It was not that my father thought the president was perfect. But his concept, one I frankly continue to hold, was that anyone who takes on the awesome responsibility of serving as president of our nation deserves our respect, even if we do not agree with all his ideas, plans and actions.

For many years now, through both Republican and Democratic party administrations, I have heard first one and then the other party lambast the one in power at each and every opportunity, regardless of the stand taken on a particular subject.

With no apparent thought or regard for what might be best for our nation, the two parties view any and all programs, proposals and plans by the other with suspicion and disdain, loudly predicting dire results for the nation if anything the opposition proposes should be passed into law.

What makes all this even more dismaying to me is the fact that many otherwise intelligent and discerning people, by their attitudes and actions, seem to approve of this approach to politics. Judging by the manner in which the many now participate, it has apparently become "fashionable" to be openly critical of governmental personalities.

It is not just the politicians who play this game. It appears that a large share of the population quickly and loudly condemn the leaders of the party in office and their attempts to govern, regardless of whether they are Republicans or Democrats. They get no chance to prove whether their programs will work before they are rejected. Every man on the street seems to consider himself an expert on everything from foreign policy to the economy.

Yes, we are a country of free speech, and yes, we have a right to express our opinions. But the thoughtless and instantaneous manner in which we criticize our government leaders and disregard their plans for trying to lead the nation forward is not the way to bring about constructive change.

We, all Americans, seem to have lost our true perspective. We have forgotten the spirit that was exemplified by our forefathers and which made our country great in its formative years.

Even the name of our country must seem like a joke to people of other nations - the United States of America, indeed.

It seems the only thing we are united upon in the area of government is to disagree.

Before we can hope for our nation to be restored to prosperity and a semblance of its former greatness, we must bring about a change in our attitudes, our perception of government.

Permit me to suggest to one and all - Republicans, Democrats and independents - let's try what has become a forgotten method of government. Let us cooperate with one another, let us think first of what is best for our country, and not what is best for our party; let us give those in governing power the opportunity to try their programs and see how they work before we reject them; let those of both parties who are running for office drop all the criticism and negativism from their campaigns and tell the voting public who they are and what they stand for. Then let the people decide for themselves, based on each candidate's merits, who is best suited to govern.

Let us, once again, truly become the United States of America.

I am proud to be an American. I love my country and the principles it stands for.

And while I may not agree with everything our governmental leaders propose, I still recognize the magnitude of their tasks. Instead of criticizing them, I intend to support them and give them an opportunity to prove their programs.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times, on the school-finance plan:

Recent Texas history is littered with failed school-finance plans. Now, there's reason to fear another one may be added to the wreckage. The current plan, crafted in the final days of the legislative session to avoid closing the schools, would leave many of the poor districts poorer. Its survival is beginning to look doubtful...

John O'Brien of the Legislative Budget Board said 80 percent of the state's school districts will lose under the plan...

The state relies too much on local property taxes to fund education, which creates the imbalance. The Legislature at some point will have to go back and rework the foundation. A new coat of paint won't do the job. It will have to increase the state's share of the cost of public education - from less than half now to somewhere around two-thirds or three-fourths. To do that, it should modernize the state's tax structure, which in itself is unfair and inefficient...

It's a form of collective denial by the Legislature to ignore the best options to fix this problem, but it has done that for five years now and has become so myopic on the subject that it seemingly can't see beyond the quick fixes.

El Paso Herald-Post on religion and the schools:

In two new rulings on religion and schools, the Supreme Court showed a welcome moderation.

The amazing thing about the Lambs Chapel case is that it ever came before the court. Unanimously, the justices held that when school buildings are made available after hours for social, civic or recreational use, they must be open on the same terms to secular and church-sponsored events.

That, of course, is as it should be. Nothing in the Constitution permits government discrimination against religion...

Deadbeat dads bring no Fathers Day joy to children owed support

By PAMELA PERCIVAL
Abilene Reporter-News
ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Dad is a deadbeat.

That's what Donna Myers' two children will be thinking this Father's Day.

They haven't seen their father in several years and have watched their mother struggle without any financial help from Dad. While she worked three jobs to keep a roof over her children's heads, Dad left town, went back to college and earned a degree in psychotherapy.

Even though the couple's divorce decree ordered Mrs. Myers' ex-husband to pay $200 a month in child support, Mrs. Myers, who has since remarried, says he now owes her about $14,000 in back payments.

"He just forgot about us," Mrs. Myers says. "Now their father is driving a 1993 pickup, and the cost of that would probably pay all the back child support. If he can afford that, he can afford to pay his children's child support."

Unfortunately, Donna Myers and her children are not the only people left in the lurch by a delinquent dad. Nationwide, more than $23.8 billion dollars was owed in current and prior years child support for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1992 (according to the 16th annual Report to Congress on Child Support Enforcement).

Those billions are dollars that could help keep children off the streets, out of gangs and out of trouble.

"The change in our traditional family structure often leaves young children with but one parent at home," former U.S. Health and Human Services Director Louis Sullivan wrote in the congressional report. "Too often, that parent is distracted by the need to provide single-handedly for the financial needs of children, leaving their social and emotional needs at risk. Our children have the right to support from both parents."

Toni Gardner, deputy director of public affairs for the Texas attorney general's Child Support Enforcement Division, agrees.

"In this day and time, children are at risk for poverty, drugs, teen pregnancy and so many things," Ms. Gardner says. "If somebody is not paying their child support, it opens up an avenue for kids to fall easily into these things."

The AG's office receives federal and state funds to help track down deadbeat parents and make them pay. But the number of child support cases is staggering - 741,538 in Texas for the 1992 fiscal year, which ended in August 1992.

By April of this year, the AG's office already had 832,464 cases. By 1995, the number of cases is projected to hit one million. And these numbers don't include families who don't seek help from the state.

Even so, Texas is doing much better than the national average in collecting child support payments.

In fiscal 1991, Texas had a 64 percent total collection rate, compared with a national average of 22 percent, according to the congressional report. In 1992, the AG's office collected $301.7 million, Ms. Gardner says.

Often, the AG's office can secure payments within two or three months. But sometimes it can take up to a year and sometimes the effort is unsuccessful.

"We're not magicians here," Ms. Gardner says. "If your husband is in Timbuktu, his parents won't tell you where he is and cover for him," it's going to take a while to find him.

However, if the custodial parent has the deadbeat's drivers license and/or Social Security number, there's a good chance the AG's parent locator service can track him by accessing records of such agencies as the Department of Public Safety, the Internal Revenue Service and the Texas Employment Commission.

Donna Myers tried using the state system, but ended up frustrated. The AG's office was able to help locate her ex-husband several times as he moved from state to state, and they even captured his federal income tax refund a couple of times. But in the end, Mrs. Myers still was not receiving monthly child support payments.

"I asked the lady at the attorney general's office why it takes so long, and she picked up a stack of applications and said 'because all of these people are in front of you,'" Mrs. Myers says. "I thought, they may never get to me!"

So she decided to seek the help of a private Abilene agency.

The Child Support Collection Agency's slogan is "We can't make them care, but we can make them pay." Owner Mike Farmer uses collection agency tactics to help parents recover child support payments.

Within one month, he got Mrs. Myers a child support check for $1,300.

"As a private agency, we are able to be more aggressive in tracking people and dealing with their relatives," Farmer says. "In this case, we got to his mother and that's how we made him pay."

"We can basically hound the guy, we can contact family, friends, employers. We can call these guys every morning at 2 a.m. if we want."

The theory is that, eventually, the parent will pay to get Farmer off his back. And Farmer has a great incentive to work. Each client pays an initial $95 administrative fee. After that, Farmer gets 25 percent of any child support he collects on his client's behalf.

In addition, Farmer says he has a personal interest in succeeding.

"I grew up under these same conditions back before there was an attorney general's office to help," says Farmer. "My mom couldn't afford to get a private attorney to collect, so she worked three jobs to raise three children. I watched her struggle and that's why I'm so passionate about this."

Farmer only works with parents who have a court order granting child support and he doesn't take clients who are now or have been on Aid to Families with Dependent Children payments.

"It's against the law for us to take clients if they're still on AFDC," Farmer says. "And if they've been on AFDC in the past, the government holds a lien on money that's owed and can take any money we reclaim to pay off AFDC."

Farmer claims the state gives priority to cases where the custodial parent is receiving AFDC and other public subsidies. That's because any money the state recovers from a deadbeat parent is first used to repay taxpayers for subsidies paid to his family.

Ms. Gardner denies that AFDC cases are given priority.

"In terms of AFDC cases and non-AFDC cases, we focus our customer service efforts, energies and resources to both of those customers," Ms. Gardner says.

And she says the AG's office welcomes help from the private sector.

"People are getting involved in trying to help in the child support war to insure that the children of Texas receive the money, shelter and basic necessities they need," Ms. Gardner says. "If someone wants to go into the business and help these children have a better future, we welcome it and we applaud it."

A Few Stolen Moments With Dad

No matter how old we get, it seems like the times spent with Dad are unique and special. There is something about Fathers — an instinctive something — that breeds a bonding unlike any other we experience in our lives. With Dad we share a certain pride in our accomplishments — from the short distance with no training wheels through the years' journey to graduation. Just as though it was yesterday, we can remember walks with him laughing all the way to the fishing hole, crying all the way to the altar.

On this Father's Day, First National Bank extends to you our wishes for a memorable day and a few stolen moments with the man you call Dad.

NEW YORK (AP) - John Gotti got a deal bad enough to rap about at his trial last year, according to Big Lou, a Queens rapper who has a new single about the jailed Gambino crime family boss.

"It's about how he got railroaded," explained "Big Lou" Ferrante, 24. "It's terrible what the government did to him. They had to take away all his rights to convict him. Now he's sitting in jail, and he shouldn't be."

Several thousand copies of "Justice Not Found: The John Gotti Story" have already been sold, mostly in the Gotti heartland of Brooklyn and Queens, said Ferrante. His distributor is shipping the Dapper rap to Atlanta, Los Angeles and Chicago, Ferrante said.

The rap includes lines like: "Feds got John, next it could be you."

"Is this the way of the red, white and blue?"

It's been reported that an affordable new drug that fights the starvation that kills most cancer patients is being kept from the public.

CLOSING COST

When deciding how much money is needed to buy a new home, buyers should consider all the funds needed for the settlement table. Buyers usually figure how much of a down payment will be needed, but they forget the additional fees. Closing costs can vary, depending upon the cost of financing and the time of the month when they settle. A Realtor or a loan officer handling the mortgage application will give them an estimate. It should include points on the loan, private mortgage insurance (if the lender requires it), a title search, title insurance, attorneys fees and any transfer taxes or recording fees. They also may have to pay their 1st. month mortgage, and sometimes property taxes, home owners association fees and hazard insurance. As a general rule, the closer to the end of the month, the less cash they will need at the settlement table. Because closing costs can add up, it is important to include them in the calculations.

Hereford resident gained world fame as Rip Hawk

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

If you see a world-famous wrestler driving around in Hereford, you probably won't recognize him immediately.

He's not Hulk Hogan or Randy "Macho Man" Savage, and he certainly won't be wearing a pair of sequined tights.

Hereford's resident wrestler did his thing before flashy costumes, before Wrestlemania, before the guy who looks like Little Richard and wears a feather boa into the ring--when wrestling was considered a sport and not just a spectacle.

His real name is Harvey Evers, but in the 1950s, '60s and '70s, he was known the world over as Rip Hawk: wrestling villain extraordinaire. "Rip" was hung on him by his sister when he was 10 years old. "Hawk" he got from his early mentor, Karl Pojelo, when he first started out. Pojelo suggested he keep Rip. ("Harvey," while certainly a fine name, does not make for a very scary wrestler.)

Today, Evers still doesn't much care for his given first name and introduces himself as Rip Evers. He teaches a wrestling class at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA, trying to introduce a new generation to real wrestling.

For 25 years, Rip wrestled all over the United States and all over the world. He held many titles, both as a solo act and with his tag team partner of 16 years, Swede Hanson. Together, they won the world tag team title twice.

Rip once held the All-Asia wrestling belt. If you believe the stereotype that all Orientals are small, Rip could show you magazine photos of Asian giants who look like Sumo wrestlers--except they're in good shape.

Rip started wrestling as a youngster at his local YMCA. He wrestled collegiately for one season at the University of New Mexico, then joined the Marine Corps.

He became interested in pro wrestling after a chance meeting with boxing legend Jack Dempsey.

"We got around to the subject of wrestling, because he had refereed wrestling," Rip said. "I got a feeling for it through him."

Before he could get in the ring, he had to learn exactly what to do there.

"When I first had the idea I wanted to be a professional wrestler, I went to Chicago, to this old-time wrestler named Karl Pojelo," Rip said. "I had to go to his pro wrestling school on the south side of Chicago."

Soon after Rip got to the school, he went into a room with several veteran wrestlers.

"They were the ugliest men I'd ever seen," he said. "When I saw these guys, I wanted to get out of the place. It kind of chilled me to see those guys. They were massive hulks and they were all beat up."

He stayed, and he worked hard. "We'd get up at six and lift

Some Of The Best Recovery Rooms Aren't Located In Any Hospital.

Simply put, there's no place like home. And increasingly, health care professionals are recognizing the unique advantages afforded by home health care.

In-home covered services include everything from Nursing and Physical Therapy to Medical Social Services, offering the best in both worlds. The comfort, convenience and familiarity of a home setting are irreplaceable in the recovery process. At the same time, these experienced professionals can provide a range of medical services which were previously restricted to a clinical setting. Best of all, a typical home health visit costs one-tenth the price of an average day in the hospital, making it an invaluable asset.

leading Phoenix to a 108-98 victory. Kevin Johnson had 25 points and Charles Barkley added 24 for the Suns, who avoided elimination for the fifth time in the playoffs.

Michael Jordan, averaging 42.6 in the finals, scored 41 points for the Bulls, who lead the best-of-7 series 3-2, with the final two games of the finals scheduled Sunday and Wednesday nights in Phoenix.

Now that they've forced at least a sixth game, the Suns must address another problem - winning at home against Chicago, which has won all three games it's played at America West Arena this season. The Bulls were the first team in NBA Finals history to win the first two games on the road.

If the Bulls are to win a third consecutive title, it will be on the road.

Scottie Pippen had 22 points and John Paxson 12, all on 3-pointers, for the Bulls.

weights all morning, then we'd take a break, then wrestle all day. We did that six days a week," he said.

When Rip hit the big time, he wrestled against or on the same card as some of the giants of the day: Buddy Rogers, Billy Darnell, Gene Kiniski, Dick the Bruiser, Johnny Valentine, Fritz Von Erich and eight-time world champion Lou Thesz. Once, Rip even wrestled the original "Gorgeous George."

Later in his career, Rip took a young wrestler named Rick Flair under his wing, and Flair went on to become one of the most famous wrestlers in the 1980s.

Rip wrestled through the '50s and '60s and started to tail off in the late '70s. He retired in 1978, started again briefly then quit for good in 1982 in a fit of disgust over what had become of wrestling.

"I got so sick of what they were doing, I quit," he said. "I threw one of my wrestling boots out on the Will Rogers Turnpike (in Oklahoma)--I couldn't wrestle with one boot. I had just wrestled in Oklahoma City, and we were going to Tulsa to wrestle the next night. That's when I quit."

The wrestling you see today on cable TV has many differences from the wrestling of Rip Hawk's heyday.

"They've gotten so far from wrestling," he said. "When I started, it was holds. You could beat a guy with a hammer lock, a step-over toe hold, a cross-face chicken wing. No one uses a go-behind or a take-down anymore. Now they just go flying through the air."

"Guys today wear fringe and ribbons on their garments, paint on their faces--we weren't allowed to do that in those days," he said.

"Back then we were respected," he said. "Years ago, I used to walk down the street in St. Louis, and people'd want you to come in and eat at their restaurant. They used to bet on wrestling. You don't think they'd bet on it today, do you?"

"The thing they call wrestling now has got to end. People will get sick of it. It's entertainment; it's like watching a movie."

One of the knocks against wrestling is that it's fake. Rip has an old wrestling magazine with his face on the cover. The photo is in color, and his face is covered with bright red blood. A headline screams: "Wrestling is not fake, and I've got the scars to prove it."

Rip has had a high percentage of his bones broken at least once, including his sternum (breastbone) and several ribs. He's had his nose broken "seven or eight times," he said. He can't straighten his fingers. His cauliflower ear is a source of pride.

There were a few rules that governed wrestling when Rip was doing it. Before the match, the referee would address the wrestlers in the middle of the ring: "I want a good match," the ref would say, "no hair-pulling, no eye-gouging, and no closed fists."

Though punching was outlawed, throwing a forearm was perfectly all right. Rip said a well-placed forearm could do as much damage as a fist.

"If you'd bring down their head and throw that forearm, you could snap that guy pretty good," he said.

One thing that remained the same in wrestling from the '50s to the '90s is that everybody loves to hate a villain. That was Rip's thing.

"I was a bad guy all over the world," Rip said. "I loved it. That way, you didn't have fans hanging all over you when you went out to eat. They'd just sit and glare at you."

Rip wasn't a villain by choice, but by attitude.

"People made me like that from my very first matches--maybe it was the way I walked into the ring."

Sometimes, being a ring villain could be dangerous.

"People used to get seriously mad at wrestling matches," he said. "In St. Joe, Missouri, they tried to lynch me. They dragged me outside and threw a rope over a light pole. Then the police came and broke it up."

Being a villain made Rip famous, and fame has its advantages.

"Back then, we made $150-175 thousand a year," he said. "If you worked the Garden (Madison Square Garden in New York City) you'd pick up $3,500 for the night."

He said playing the Garden was nice, but the "Mecca for wrestling" was St. Louis.

"If you made it in St. Louis, you could go anywhere in the world," he said.

He did go all over the world. He wrestled in Canada, Mexico, Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii, Fiji, Samoa, Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore and the Bahamas. "They had tremendous crowds in all these places," he said.

He also got to meet--and in some cases became friends with--some pretty famous people: boxers Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Archie Moore and Joe Frazier; football players Jerry Kramer and Alex Karras; baseball players Pete Rose, Yogi Berra, Roger Maris and Stan Musial.

"Athletes, for some reason, end up in the same places," Evers said. "You'd just sit down and talk."

Joe Garagiola, the former baseball player, broadcaster and Today television show host, was one of Rip's closest friends among the rich and famous. Garagiola got his broadcasting start doing wrestling matches in St. Louis. He, as the broadcaster, and Rip, as the villain, would conduct duels of words to help pep up the shows.

In many cases, the famous people were fans of Rip, who was famous in his own right. He met country singer Willie Nelson not too long ago when Nelson recognized Rip in a San Antonio restaurant.

"This guy said, 'Hey, I know you. I'm Willie Nelson,'" Rip said. Rip looked up from his dinner and saw the Red-Headed Stranger standing there.

"He said, 'Can I have your autograph?' I said, 'Quit pulling my chain,' and he said, 'You give me yours and I'll give you mine.'"

Rip survived all the danger, travel and fame somehow, and he is living the quiet life in Hereford. He moved here four years ago from Amarillo with wife Kitty and daughters Jessica and Angela. He was originally from North Carolina.

Now he's trying to revive wrestling by teaching it to kids at the Hereford YMCA. He's teaching the kind of wrestling that you see in the Olympics, which is more like the wrestling he did in the '50s than what you see on TV today.

"I'd like them to become interested in wrestling," he said. Rip is assisted by Frank Gilbert, a well-experienced coach, and Jarritt Edwards, who wrestles and helps coach.

"I think we can do good," Rip said. "We've got some tough kids, and I think we can help keep them out of trouble."

Classes meet from 5-7 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at the Hereford YMCA. The class is still open, so anyone can join anytime. Contact the YMCA for details.

Swoopes could command $200 K in Europe

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Incessant dribbles, giggles and shrieks from a hundred pre-teen girls echo through a Texas Tech gym this muggy summer morning.

Sheryl Swoopes watches the clumsy layups and haphazard passes with a smile.

Swoopes had yelled herself hoarse helping coach the girls' camp. But this morning she is relaxed and joking, her 6-foot frame sprawled on low bleachers.

"Some of these little girls here are better than I was in Little Dribblers," the national Division I player of the year says. "I tell them that, and they say, 'No way.' "I tell them you never know - you could be better."

Better than Swoopes?

West Texas' sports darling has seen little letup from fans since she led the Lady Raiders to an 84-82 national championship victory over Ohio State in April. Swoopes smashed records left and right throughout the NCAA tournament.

Lubbock can't seem to forget her 47 points against Ohio State, a Final Four single-game scoring high.

Swoopes was doused in attention. Best of all were the White House accolades, the standing ovation from the Legislature, the "What's up?"

from idol Michael Jordan at a Chicago Bulls workout.

"It's been wild and crazy," she said, declaring herself physically and emotionally drained.

Everyone wants to buy her dinner, call her at home, get her autograph. Anonymous trips to the mall or grocery store aren't possible.

"I only mean to go for 10 minutes but I end up staying for an hour. I don't have any privacy anymore," she said.

Celebrity status - tiresome as it may be sometimes - has helped her become more mature and patient, she said.

"If I'm not in the mood to sign something, I just stay home."

In April, Swoopes became just the third woman drafted by a United States Basketball League team. The Daytona Beach Hooters, who made Swoopes the 44th selection overall in a 48-player field, said the move wasn't a publicity stunt.

Swoopes didn't take up the offer.

"It was a great honor, but I wouldn't have gotten to play," she said. "I would have been taking them (male players) water, giving massages."

Instead, her crowded calendar this summer includes finalizing a contract to play in a women's basketball league in Europe. Swoopes, 22, said she wants to finish her degree at Texas Tech after about one year in Italy.

Then, she hopes, she will make the 1996 U.S. Olympic basketball team. Her right knee has healed after being injured in the 1992 Olympic tryouts.

Swoopes envisions herself coaching college basketball one day.

In the meantime, several endorsement deals could come through within weeks. She gave no details.

Women's basketball legend Nancy Lieberman-Cline, who is handling Swoopes' marketing and promotions, said Swoopes gave the sport a marquee name.

"People want to see Magic and Michael and Chrissie and Sugar Ray. Those people are magnets," Lieberman-Cline said. "They draw attention and then you see everybody else."

Some observers have estimated Swoopes could earn about $200,000 in her first year overseas from her salary and endorsements. Lieberman-Cline declined to make a prediction.

Swoopes says she is frustrated that men have more opportunities to play professionally, and to make more money doing so.

Even so, thoughts of the future leave her "excited and scared and nervous."

But memories of the past remain fond.

Swoopes often talks about growing up in Brownfield, playing basketball with her brothers and other boys. She remembers shooting by herself and talking aloud through the solitary drills. At night she would practice ball-handling in the dark.

The little girl's awkwardness turned to poise and precision few defenders could stop. She developed her blink-of-an-eye moves, subtle pauses and ability to nail clutch baskets.

She was intense and driven to please her mother, Louise, a single mother.

"I wanted to show people just because I didn't have a dad there, that I could succeed," she said. "I wanted her to be proud of me."

Very few girls will actually try out for high school football next year

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - The walls of the Cotton Bowl began to shake.

Letters of the names in the Dallas Cowboys Ring of Honor began falling off.

And perennial power Odessa Permian's black panther turned white.

Girls playing high school football in Texas, the state where football is king - not queen? How could this be?

In a state known for Cowboys and good 'ol boys and even the reigning Super Bowl champions, how did girls manage to get the right to put on helmets and shoulder pads?

Take a deep breath football junkies, says University of Interscholastic League athletic director Bill Farney. Only a handful of young women will try out for the teams, he says, and "in a year, people will hardly be talking about this."

"I don't see the girls being able to try out for football would alter in any way the reputation that Texas has as a grand football state with years of expertise and great champions," Farney said.

The decision to allow girls into high school huddles did not come as a result of females clamoring to clash on the line of scrimmage, but from education officials worried about equal opportunity lawsuits.

"This is a gender equity issue," said State Board of Education member Mary Knotts Perkins, who voted for the rule change when it passed in February.

"It's a matter of giving the opportunity to girls. That does not mean they have to be selected or they have to play."

Only a handful of girls across the state have expressed an interest, Farney said. None have called with questions since the rule change.

Frankie Groves was the last girl to take the field in Texas in 1947 before the UIL banned girls from high school football - a rule set in stone until the mid-1980s, when girls were allowed to participate on middle school teams.

Groves, who is now in her 60s and lives in southeast Austin, played three or four plays at defensive tackle for the Panhandle's Stinnett Rattlers. She says girls on the high school gridiron "is long overdue."

"If girls have the ability to play well, let them play. But if they go out for football, they're going to have to lift weights and dedicate themselves, as boys do," she said.

Farney says the best female athletes in high school likely won't try out.

"Girls with outstanding athletic ability are likely going to be trying to earn a scholarship in one of the sports offered to girls in college," he said.

Texas becomes one of more than 40 states that currently allow girls to play high school football.

In those states, nearly one million boys competed last year, while only 112 girls took the field, according to UIL officials.

Amber Crockett, an eighth grader at Slaughter Middle School in McKinney, made her football league all-star team as a linebacker and says she aspires to play at McKinney High and beyond.

"I like playing for the same reason any guy likes to play football," she said. "It's a contact sport and that's not what girls usually do so people question it. But I like to hit people. I don't know, I just like it."

"I would love to play pro football," she added.

Crockett is clearly in the minority, however. Farney said the UIL hears of only about a half dozen girls playing at the middle school level in Texas each year.

Tam Hollingshead, coach of traditional football power Odessa Permian, says he will give girls a fair try out.

Aside from his concerns about girls sustaining injuries, Hollingshead said competition will be fierce.

"We must afford girls the opportunity," Hollingshead said. "We are going to carry 55 players and we have more than 100 in the off-season conditioning program right now. Spots on this team are going to be hard to come by."

Marla Brumfield, a 5-foot-7, 120-pound student at Elsie High School in Houston who played three sports last year as a freshman, likely has the opinion of many girls.

After saying she would consider playing football, she had second thoughts.

"There's a difference between playing with your brothers and an opponent who's purposely trying to hit you."

Sherwood, McCabe married Saturday

Susan Elaine Sherwood and Joseph Dale McCabe, both of Amarillo, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in Amarillo's Lawndale Church of Christ. Loran Harper of the church officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Sherwood of Panhandle and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim McCabe of Dawn.

The bride's sister, Sheryl Sherwood of Dallas, served as maid of honor and Brent Harrison of Hereford was best man.

Bridesmaids included Tana Gardner of Pampa and Gail Hogg of Fort Worth. Groomsmen were Tom McCabe of Canyon and Randy Ray of Hereford.

The groom's niece and nephew, Rebecca and Michael Hogg, children of Gayle and Richard Hogg of Fort Worth, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

Candles were lit by the bride's brother, Stephen Sherwood of San Antonio, and Wade Gardner of Pampa.

Musical selections were performed by the Panhandle Church of Christ.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in an ivory satin gown fashioned with a modified sweetheart neckline, hourglass bodice, long fitted sleeves and a full skirt which swept into a train that was accented with cameo lace. The entire gown was encrusted with delicate beadwork and pearls.

The full-length tulle bridal veil was attached to a wreath created by ivory flowers. The bride carried an ivory floral bouquet accented with streamers, pearls and lace. To complete her ensemble, she wore a pearl necklace.

The bridal attendants wore teal-length dresses designed with puffed sleeves. They carried lace fans with silk flowers and ribbons.

Pedria Spaulding invited guests to register at the reception held in the church.

Cake was served by Greta Morrison, and Mrs. Brent Harrison poured punch and coffee.

The three-tiered white cake was topped with Precious Moments bride and groom figurines and was placed on a table accented with crystal candlesticks. Also, enhancing the table was a crystal punch bowl.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Stonewall, Colo., the bride wore a black knit skirt with a multi-colored shirt.

The bride is a graduate of Panhandle High School and received a bachelor degree in 1989 from Abilene Christian University. She received her M.A. degree in 1993. She is employed as a teacher by the Amarillo Independent School District.

The bridegroom is a 1984 graduate of Hereford High School. He served in the U.S. Marines for four years and was in the reserves for four years. He is employed as a technician by AI Mobile Communications in Amarillo.

Eyewear advances being made

Advances in eyewear let a growing number of professionals keep pace with their visually demanding careers.

"Knowing the variety of eyewear options available to you will help you to see well and look good," says Paula Newsome, O.D. optometrist.

When selecting eyewear, consider lens material; lens design; and optional lens treatments or coatings.

Be sure to tell your eye care professional about the type of work you do.

State Roundup winners

Karon Harder, at left, and Cady Auckerman were honored at the recent 4-H State Roundup Awards Assembly held in the Rudder Auditorium on the Texas A&M University campus. The girls received first place honors in the horticulture preparation and use division. The event was sponsored by the Texas Vegetable Association and Texas Food Processors. Approximately 3,000 4-H members participated in the roundup.

Navy Dentalman Serapio S. Cabezucla, son of Serapio C. and Rita Z. Cabezucla of 203 Higgins, recently returned aboard the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk, homeported in San Diego from a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific and Persian Gulf as the command ship of the battle group.

During the deployment, elements of the USS Kitty Hawk Battle Group participated in the relief effort Operation Restore Hope by supporting the delivery of food and medical supplies to key relief centers in Somalia. The battle group also participated in Operation centers in Somalia. The battle group also participated in Operation Southern Watch, enforcing the United Nations-imposed "no-fly" zone over Southern Iraq in conjunction with French, British and Russian forces.

The carrier's mission is to support and operate aircraft that engage in attacks on airborne, afloat and ashore targets which threaten our use of the sea and to engage in sustained operations in support of other forces.

The deployment exemplified the Navy and Marine Corps' new strategy entitled "...From the Sea," which stresses operating forward to project a positive American image, building foundations for viable coalitions, enhancing diplomatic contacts, reassuring friends and demonstrating U.S. power and resolve.

The 1990 graduate of Hereford

High School joined the Navy in June, 1990.

Marine Pvt. Christy D. Shedeed, daughter of Pam J. Oakley of Route 4, Hereford, Texas, recently completed recruit training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C.

During the training cycle, recruits are introduced to typical daily routine and study personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.

In addition to an active physical conditioning program, close-order drill, first aid, teamwork and self-discipline are also included in the training cycle.

She is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School.

NEW YORK (AP) - Laura Dem knew her role as a scientist in "Jurassic Park" would be worlds away from the vulnerable nymphomaniac of "Rambling Rose" or the small-town ingenue of "Blue Velvet."

"It isn't about me finding my emotional motivation for each scene," she told Rolling Stone magazine for its June 24 issue. "It's certainly not quite the kind of acting I've done in the past."

Dern, 26, said director Steven Spielberg told her the role "isn't about getting an Academy Award nomination."

Second place winners

Karis Blain, at left, and Joanna Brumley received second place in the cooperative demonstrations division during the State 4-H Roundup held recently. The cooperative demonstrations were sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Cooperative Council. District I netted both first and second place winners in the cooperative contest with Randall County placing first.

Rowland chosen best speaker

Rigger Rowland was named the best speaker when members of the Hereford Toastmasters Club met Thursday morning at the Ranch House.

Chosen as best evaluator was Margaret Del Toro and best topic speaker was Rick Jackson.

The pledge was led by Joe Don Cummings and the invocation was given by Charles Minchew.

During the business meeting with Vice President Rick Jackson presiding, membership pins were presented to Dee Hamilton and Linda Minchew.

Serving as toastmaster was Dee Hamilton; timer, Rich Jackson; "ah" counter, Art Gonzales; grammarian, Joe Weaver; wordmaster, Ralph Barndt; and "assuage", the chosen word.

Ralph Barndt was topicmaster and topic speakers were Joe Weaver, Dee Hamilton, Stan McCabe and Ed Gilbert.

Dave Kimmel spoke on "Never Too Late", evaluated by Charles Minchew, and Jigger Rowland spoke on "My Challenge", evaluated by Margaret Del Toro.

Linda Minchew gave the reading and Joe Don Cummings told the joke. Clark Andrews served as general evaluator.

Others attending were Dennis Printz, Gayla Sanders and Adolfo Del Toro.

The Hereford Toastmasters Club is an organization designed to help people improve their communications skills. Interested parties are welcome to attend either the meeting at the Ranch House Restaurant at 6:30 a.m. each Thursday or at noon each Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

NEW YORK (AP) - The latest financial advice from Louis Rukeyser: Save money on your credit cards by signing up for the Rukeyser gold card.

The 415,000 subscribers to "Louis Rukeyser's Wall Street" newsletter will have a chance next month to get a low-rate MasterCard bearing Rukeyser's name, said publisher Brian Smith.

The gold card, issued by Union Planters Bank of Memphis, Tenn., has no annual fee and a 5.9 percent interest rate for the first six months. The rate will then increase to 2.9 percent over the prime rate, which is now at 6 percent.

Couple to marry

Lubbock residents, Kellie Ann Sims and Michael Claiborne Lowder, plan to wed Aug. 14 in St. Luke's Methodist Church in Lubbock.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Gil and Ann Sims of Lubbock and is the granddaughter of Hereford residents, Mr. and Mrs. James Mercer and Mrs. Juanita Sims. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Sue Boyd of Crosbyton. Miss Sims is a graduate of Monterey High School in Lubbock and attends the University of Texas in Austin. She is an officer in the American Marketing Association and holds membership in Phi Beta Chi.

Lowder, also a graduate of Monterey High School, attends Rice University in Houston where he is a member of the Rice Rugby Team and also serves on the Jones College Cabinet.

REBECCA WALLS

Lions & Tigers and Books...Oh My! You should see all of the children reading for special prizes. The Summer Reading Club is off to a very good start. Last week children attended the first activity which was the movie "The Incredible Journey." If you have a child that is 4 years old or older, bored, with nothing to do bring them into the library and get them started in the summer fun. Not only will the children have fun, but they will be keeping their reading skills up instead of declining. June 22 10:00 a.m. Susie Wall will be giving a drawing lesson to all the Reading Club members. It isn't too late, come in now and get started.

Dominick Dunne's A Season in Purgatory begins the new book list this week. Harrison Burns first meets Constant Bradley at boarding school. When Harrison meets Constant's family he is awed by their wealth and generosity. As he gets to know them better Harrison becomes aware of a family that is driven by strong social aspirations, unrelenting political ambition, and his friendship with the Bradleys has its price. The Bradley family has also had to cover-up the murder of an innocent girl for the last 20 years. This story has all the ingredients for a spellbinding, shocking, page turner.

In Fire and Rain Dianne Chamberlain weaves a tale of the small southern California town, Valle Rosa. Because of the drought wildfire are racing through the canyons destroying homes and lives. Christopher Garrett, former major league pitcher and present mayor of Valle Rosa, has seen his house destroyed and is watching his beloved town die slowly. Jeff Cabrio, a mysterious stranger appears at Christopher's office and offers a solution to the town's problem. Jeff believes he can create rain and all he asks in return is food, lodging and total personal privacy. But Jeff's charismatic personality makes it hard to keep a low profile. Jeff becomes intrigued with Mia Tanner a brilliant young artist with a secret past. Carmen Perez, sees Jeff as an opportunity to regain her status as a investigative TV reporter and anchor woman. As Jeff races against time putting his own life at risk to perform a modern rainmaking miracle, it becomes evident that Valle Rosa isn't the only thing at stake.

Seed of Doubt by Ralph McInerney is another mystery featuring father Roger Dowling, but with a new twist. Margaret Sinclair, a wealthy dowager and member of Dowling's parish dies suddenly. The death looks suspicious when a full oxygen tank is found within Margarets easy reach and her private nurse was just out of earshot. Margaret was the owner of a collection of landscape paintings by a famous American artist. Father Dowling notices that Margaret is the subject in one of the few portraits the artist ever painted. The family begins to squabble over the will and then the second death occurs in the Sinclair mansion. Long held secrets begin to surface as Father Dowling probes deeper for the truth about this complicated family.

Flavor of the Month by Olivia Goldsmith is the story of a Hollywood actress Mary Jane Morgan who has just lost an off-Broadway role and the only man she ever loved. The role was created too plain and too old at the age of 34. It is then that Mary Jane makes the decision to buy the one thing that can change her life: beauty. Two years later, after a series of exorbitant surgeries costing thousands of dollars, Jahne Moore emerges, then gorgeous and ready for the big time. Jahne lands a part in TV's hottest new series and as her fame increases, the man that broke Mary Jane's heart wants Jahne to star in his new film, and become his lover. Will he discover her true identity?

Philippa Carr's We'll Meet Again is the moving story of Violetta Denver, her fiancé Jowan Jermyn and Violetta's twin sister Dorabella. Jowan and Violetta celebrated their engagement knowing that he will leave for the front the next day. Jowan and Violetta had fallen in love the first time they met, even though the families were supposed to be feuding and there was a war going on. Jowan's regiment leave to defend a weakling Europe from Hitler's tyranny. Months and years pass and Jowan is listed as missing in action, but Violetta is determined to wait for him. Then Dorabella's new beau unwittingly involves the twins in a dangerous web of intrigue and treason.

— YOUR EYES — SEE BETTER BEHIND THE WHEEL

The better you see, the better you can see the road. Here are some vision tips for safer driving:

- Clean eyeglasses, windshields and headlights often.
- If you need glasses for driving, keep an extra pair in the glove compartment. It's not safe to drive without them.

- Sunglasses are a great help in daylight hours but dangerous at night when they lower the visibility of cars, people and signs.
- Drivers over 50 would be wise to stay on well-lit roads.
- At night, try not to look at oncoming lights; they can be disorienting and even cause temporary blindness.
- If dry eyes are a problem with wind, heat and air conditioning, keep some ocular lubricant on hand.
- Eyes should be examined regularly and eyeglass prescription kept up to date. Some drivers—especially seniors—find they need a stronger prescription behind the wheel.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to the parents whose child, "Kathy," is incurably ill. They wanted to know how to make her final days happy ones.

Forgive me for being critical, but I'm afraid you are missing the boat. Indulging Kathy with a "dream trip" or other luxuries will not help prepare anyone for the inevitable. It would only add to the tension and drain the energy of the entire family. Since this lovely young girl will not be able to make contributions in future years, you must now help make her brief life as purposeful and productive as possible.

Use the money you would have spent on indulgences, and try to raise additional funds to build something that will provide health, education or recreation for deprived children, perhaps an aquarium in a ghetto school, a playground for handicapped youngsters, a nature walk, an immunization clinic or a sports center. Get Kathy's friends and classmates involved in the project she finds most appealing.

Let everyone see that this is Kathy's gift to other children. It will give her a great deal of pleasure and might even lengthen her life.

Ask for help. Perhaps the local Rotary, a church youth group or another organization will join in the project and make it larger and more enduring than something you put together on your own.

And please consider arranging in advance for organ donation. It's a marvelous way for your child's beauty to live on.

In short, help Kathy be part of a lasting memorial that will bring other children a more fulfilling life. Purposeful living is the best preparation for dying--A Caring Rotarian

DEAR FRIEND: What a beautiful concept. I received thousands of letters suggesting ways to make Kathy's final days more pleasant, but yours was the most creative and constructive. Keep reading for more on the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is for the parents who are faced with the loss of a daughter who is terminally ill. They asked for your guidance.

You, dear parents, have incredible strength that you are not yet aware of. Once you get past this horrendous shock and the "why me?" phase, allow yourselves to say, "Why NOT me, because I have the strength to make each day a good one for her."

Let each day be calm, loving and ordinary. Do the sort of things the whole family would do anyway, as well as other things you may have been putting off. You will get much advice, that's OK, but trust your instincts.

When I finally lost my daughter, my only child, I was able to work through my grief, because I knew I had given her a good life, however brief, and that I was privileged to have had her.

Parents who have lost a child by accident or murder or sudden death, whatever the reason, had no chance to prepare. Use what time there is to the fullest. It will become clear to you what is truly important and what is trivial. May God bless you. You are in my prayers.--Swarthmore, Pa.

DEAR READERS: The letter about the terminally ill child generated more mail these last two weeks than all the other letters combined. My thanks to all whose sensitive and caring words were worthy of print, but unfortunately, space would not permit me to use them.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brices, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been married for 16 years to a man I love with all my heart. We have two children. "Roy" has always had problems expressing his feelings. He never talks to me and keeps everything inside.

Five years ago, I made the mistake of having an affair with a divorced man in our social group. Actually, it wasn't sex I was looking for. I just needed to feel some closeness. I couldn't handle the duplicity and stopped seeing the man after three months.

I confessed this to Roy, because the guilt was killing me. We separated for a short while but got back together again. Now here comes the real problem. Roy thinks I have another boyfriend and is certain that this boyfriend and I are trying to make him believe he is crazy. He hears voices and accuses me of secretly communicating with my boyfriend while he's in the room. Everything that I say or do he thinks is related to this conspiracy. He comes home at all hours of the day trying to catch me and is convinced that I'm using ultrasonic devices to hurt him.

I don't want to leave my husband, because I really do love him and we've had many good years together. Please write me back, because I am feeling desperate and suicidal.--Chula Vista, Calif.

DEAR CHULA VISTA: Your husband has clear symptoms of schizophrenia (hearing voices, paranoia, delusions about ultrasonic devices, etc.) He needs to see a psychiatrist at once, and you need counseling to get through this nightmare.

If Roy is reluctant to seek professional help, enlist the assistance of your family doctor, clergyman and family members. This man will not get better without medical intervention.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sure that many members of Congress read your column. I hope they will see this, because it's the best way I can think of to get their attention.

I am enclosing an article from the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle so you will know I am not making this up.

Two professors, one from Rochester, the other from Australia, have worked for three years, used 110 computers and communicated 10,000 miles by electronic mail, and finally have learned the answer to a question that has baffled scientists for 63 years.

The question is this: If you are having a party and want to invite at least four people who know each other and five who don't, how many people should you invite? The answer is 25. Mathematicians and scientists in countries worldwide have sent messages of congratulations.

I don't want to take anything away from this spectacular achievement, but it seems to me that the time and money spent on this project could have been better used had they put it toward finding ways to get food to the millions of starving children in war-torn countries around the world -- B.V.B., Rochester, N.Y.

DEAR B.V.B.: There has to be more to this "discovery" than you recounted.

The principle must be one that can be applied to solve important scientific problems. If anyone in my reading audience can provide an explanation in language a lay person can understand, I will print it. Meanwhile I am "baffled in Chicago."

Gem of the Day: A good place to find a helping hand is at the end of our sleeve.

FOOD SAFE:

SLOW COOKERS ARE OKAY
Summer days cause homemakers to rethink cooking. A slow cooker or crock pot can cut the heat that might be released by other appliances thus keeping the kitchen cooler on warm days. Certain food safe procedures should be considered.

Slow cookers cook food safely at temperatures that would be unsafe in an oven. The covered pots cook with steam which is a potent bacteria killer. These electric pots are convenient for stews or casseroles which benefit from slow cooking. The recipes call for a cooking period of eight to ten hours, during which time the temperature should gradually rise to about 165 degrees.

The following precautions should be taken to ensure that the contents get hot enough to destroy bacteria that could cause food poisoning:

-Don't use the pot to defrost and cook frozen foods. Defrost them first in the refrigerator or microwave.

-Cook with the lid on.

-Cut meat or poultry into small uniform pieces. For instance, don't put whole roasts or chickens in the pot.

-Use plenty of liquid, since the resulting steam will help kill bacteria.

-If you think your pot isn't getting hot enough, start cooking on the highest temperature and then lower it.

A great recipe, perfect for summer days is Rotel Roast which was featured at a recent program by the Southwestern Public Service Company Home Economist.

ROTEL ROAST
1 (3 to 4 pound) arm roast
1 pound pinto beans, washed
1 can (10 oz) Rotel tomatoes
1 quart of water
1 can (8 oz) tomato sauce
1 can (4 oz) chopped green chilies
1 onion, sliced
Place all ingredients in slow cooker. Cook 8 to 12 hours on low heat. Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

In 1776, the Continental Congress passed a resolution saying, "These United Colonies are, and of right, ought to be, Free and Independent States."

Spaghetti supper set by lodge

Plans for a spaghetti supper were made when members of the Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met in regular session Tuesday evening with 11 members present.
The supper is scheduled for July 24 with the public invited to attend.
Also, during the business meeting with Noble Grand Anna Conklin presiding, various reports were made including nine visits to the sick, 27 cheer cards, 20 dishes of food and 20 flowers.
A school of instruction was presented by District Deputy President Mary Lou Weatherford.
Ocie Bolton served as hostess to Conklin, Weatherford, Marie Harris, Dorothy Collier, Peggy Lemons, Rosalie Northcutt, Nan Rogers, Genevieve Lynn, Susie Curtsinger and Ben Conklin.

Launder blankets carefully

It's time to put away the electric blanket, but the edge bindings look a little grimy. Can you launder blankets with all that wiring inside? Yes, you can. Most electric blankets can be laundered at home in your automatic washer, but with gentle treatment to avoid damaging electric wiring. For best results, check the blanket's care label for any special precautions.
With electric blankets, it's important to avoid long periods of agitation in the washer and excessive tumbling or over-drying in the dryer. Laundering that is too vigorous can eventually damage the thin wires inside the blanket. On the other hand, gentle laundering can extend the blanket's useful life by keeping it fresh and clean.

Marriage planned

Jennifer Howell of Hereford and Kent Chesher of Friona plan to exchange wedding vows at 8 p.m. Friday, July 2, in the home of Harold and Joyce Wells of Friona.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Eldon and Ronna Howell of 149 Sunset Drive and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Albert and Jan Chesher of Friona.

Miss Howell is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School and is currently attending Amarillo College. Chesher is a 1988 graduate of Friona High School and is presently employed by Campbell Electric in Friona.

Campaign promotes safety

A safety coalition claims its Operation Water Watch campaign, now in its sixth year, is helping to reduce the number of child drowning accidents and diving injuries. As more and more people "vacation" at their backyard pool or spa, the campaign explains how to increase the safety and enjoyment of home pools and spas.

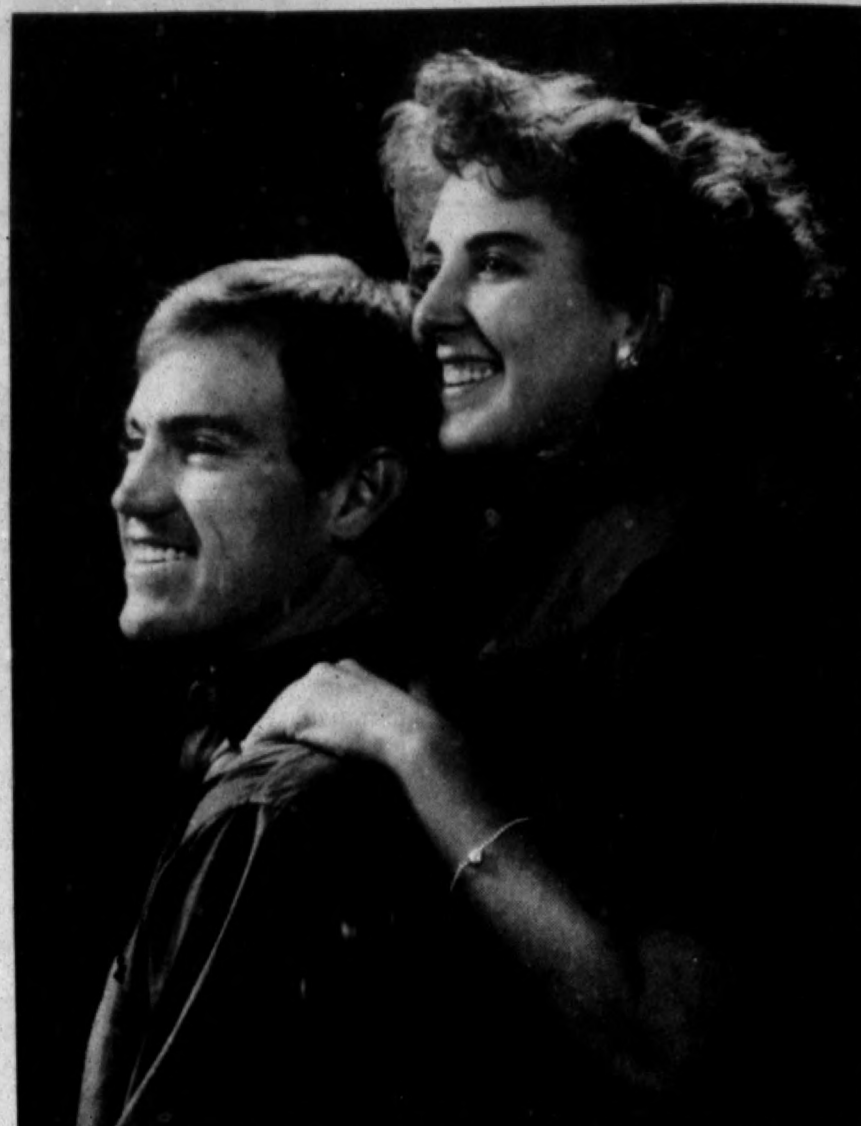

Called Operation Water Watch 1993, it's a national water safety campaign, created by the National Swimming Pool Safety Committee (NSPSC), that's designed to educate parents of children under five and pool owners about aquatic safety. Its goal is to ensure safe use and enjoyment of all bodies of water. The NSPSC wants to continue to reduce child drownings and diving accidents in all bodies of water.

"We want everyone to enjoy swimming and diving, but to remember some simple, important safety tips," says Lester Kowalsky, Chairman of the NSPSC Steering Committee. "Exercising safe and responsible diving habits such as checking the depth of the water, steering your body up when entering the water, always checking the water for submerged objects and never drinking and diving can help prevent unnecessary accidents. The basic rule is this: If you don't know what the conditions are, don't dive."

NSPSC also says that you can prevent drowning accidents by installing barriers that restrict access to your pool or spa. Young children are naturally attracted to water, and effective barriers such as fences, power safety covers, door alarm systems and door-closing mechanisms can help detect or deter unsupervised access to the pool or spa.

In most child drownings in residential pools, adult supervision had lapsed just momentarily. Accidents can happen in minutes when children inside the house get outside and fall silently into the pool. Constant supervision is the only sure way to prevent such tragedies from happening.

Credit cards register big gains

A growing number of Americans are taking a walk down the aisle with their credit cards - the supermarket aisle, that is. The reasons are not too surprising.

-There is no need to carry large sums of cash.

-The transaction takes an average of only 15 seconds - faster than paying with either cash or a check. That means a shorter time in the checkout line for everyone.

-Out-of-town customers can avoid check approval delays.

-Discover Card users can receive cash of up to $30 over the purchase amount with no additional charge (in participating states).

Eye exams fight glaucoma

Over 50 million Americans at risk for glaucoma can save their vision with regular eye exams, says the Better Vision Institute (BVI). High risk individuals include everyone over the age of 60, African Americans over 40 and anyone with diabetes or a family history of glaucoma.

Glaucoma is a chronic eye disease in which fluid pressure increases within the eyes. It can result in blindness. Regular testing can help doctors prescribe medications or treatments before too much vision is lost.

"If glaucoma is detected early enough it can be controlled before serious vision loss occurs," says Kim Robbins, M.D., a Connecticut-based ophthalmologist and member of the BVI Advisory Council. "That's why it's essential to see your eye care professional on a regular basis."

MARION, Ind. (AP) - Nick Nolte's upcoming movie about a harried basketball coach is called "Blue Chips." It deserves the title for the cast of characters alone.

It includes Shaquille O'Neal of the Orlando Magic - the NBA rookie of the year - plus a half-dozen members of the Marion High School basketball team that won three straight state championships in the mid-1980s.

Nolte plays Pete Bell, coach of the fictional Western University basketball team, who becomes caught up in the maelstrom of rabid alumni, advertisers, and the need to recruit "blue chip" athletes who can save his program.

Filming is scheduled July 8-10 at Frankfort High School, about 40 miles southwest of Marion.

Nolte spent a week last spring shadowing coach Bobby Knight of Indiana University to research his role.

Conservation tillage being accepted

Research for cotton production shows good results

LUBBOCK-Increasing the profitability of cotton while reducing soil erosion is a challenge that is being met head-on by researchers at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock.

Because the growing season for cotton on the High Plains is marginally short, a late planting or re-planting date combined with cool, wet weather in the fall can reduce cotton yields and quality.

Nonetheless, cotton remains the most agriculturally viable crop in the area in terms of both acreage and crop value. Any means of providing it with a better start and protecting it from the adversities of the West Texas weather allows cotton growers to take better advantage of the short growing season.

Research being conducted at the Lubbock experiment station is providing answers to challenges facing cotton growers. For the past seven years, scientists have been studying cotton growth in conservation tillage systems using crop residue to provide early season protection from the weather.

These conservation tillage systems are gaining acceptance not only in West Texas but across the United States as well. This is because of their effects in reducing soil erosion, allowing more efficient use of soil water, decreasing costs of production and increasing profitability, said Dr. Wayne Keeling, systems agronomy scientist at the Lubbock station.

Since 1990, agricultural scientists have been able to test such new technology as conservation tillage under the same conditions High Plains farmers are facing.

With the development of a 160-acre farm, called the Agricultural Complex for Advanced Research and Extension Systems at Lamesa, irrigation, fertility, weed and insect management are now being evaluated in a whole farm situation.

Through such research, a conservation tillage system has been found that has gained acceptance in growing areas with sandy soils west and south of Lubbock. It consists of using wheat or rye as a winter cover crop, Keeling said.

The cover crop is sprayed and chemically killed prior to planting the cotton. The cotton then is planted directly back into the cover crop residue. This standing stubble from the cover crop protects the soil from erosion and helps the cotton get an improved growing start.

Because of this and other research, interest has increased across the cotton belt in producing cotton in a conservation tillage system.

"Conservation tillage systems in which the crop is planted into the residue from previous crops have show potential for reducing machinery, fuel and labor use," said Keeling. "It has also shown potential for increasing profit."

The advantage of using conservation tillage systems as compared to a clean tilled soil lies in the erosion factor, he said. On a clean tilled soil, with no crop cover, every time it rains or the ground is irrigated, the soil is slicked over. It must be roughed up again with equipment such as a sandfighter or rotary hoe to prevent soil from blowing and damaging young plants.

Keeling said one of the initial obstacles in using conservation tillage systems is weed control. Cotton growers are accustomed to having herbicides incorporated into the soil before planting cotton. Therefore, other means of controlling weeds are essential.

One method of controlling weed growth is through strip tillage, a method that uses and incorporated band where the cotton is planted. Strip tillage along with chemigation herbicide applications can provide effective weed control, equaling the conventional tillage system, said Keeling.

The agronomy scientist believes that conservation tillage systems can make cotton-growing a less risky option for High Plains farmers.

What types of wetlands?

According to a 1991 estimate, Texas has roughly 8 million acres of wetlands, four-fifths of which are in East Texas bottomlands.

Insecticide application will control bagworms

Insecticide control of bagworms, one of the major pests of junipers and other trees and shrubs, should be considered now by Hereford and area residents.

Control is most effective about mid-June when the bagworms are small, said Deaf Smith County Extension Agent Jay Johnson.

Spring hatch usually occurs late-May to early-June, over a period of about three weeks.

Bagworm larvae emerge from hatching eggs inside last year's bags and begin feeding on foliage, explained Johnson. They soon begin to construct their own protective bag of silk, twigs and leaves, providing a camouflage that is hard to see. As the larvae and their bags continue to grow, control becomes more difficult.

Bagworms feed throughout the summer months, building their bags until the bags are about an inch and a half long. In the fall, the bagworms become adults, mate and the females lay eggs inside their bags. They overwinter in bags in the egg stage on trees and shrubs. Each bag may contain 500 to 1,500 eggs.

"Since the bagworm only completes one generation a year and spreads very slowly from plant to plant, picking the bags off infested plants in the winter will help a lot toward controlling this pest," said Johnson.

"But if bagworms were present on plants last year and control measures were not applied, chances are very good that an insecticide will be needed this spring," Johnson added.

Insecticides which have proven effective against bagworms include sevin, dursban, diazinon, malathion and orthene. The biological insecticide Bacillus thuringiensis also may be used.

To obtain effective control, Johnson said, thorough coverage of the foliage is important. The addition of a small amount of liquid soap or surfactant to the spray solution will improve control because it helps adhere the insecticide to the treated trees and shrubs. Always read and follow label instructions when applying insecticides, Johnson reminded.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THE POWER OF OPTIMISM

The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today.
-Franklin D. Roosevelt

During the Great Depression, the president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was quizzed about the effects of the depression in Los Angeles. He replied, "Depression? We have no depression in Los Angeles, but I will admit that we are having the worst boom in many, many years." This community leader was a classic example of optimism.

According to Webster's dictionary, an optimist is a person who looks at actions and events and anticipates the best possible outcomes. Many humorous definitions of optimism exist. For example, a person who takes a frying pan on a fishing trip or a lottery ticket buyer who first opens a savings account. My favorite is the man who falls from an airplane without a parachute and as he hurtles toward the earth remarks, "What a beautiful view."

In the more serious world of small business, optimism is valuable. If a pessimist ever opened a successful business. I haven't heard about it. Nearly all new ventures are started by optimistic women and men who believe that the outcome will be successful. I'll admit that I've seen a few who were "foolishly optimistic," but there would be no successes if someone didn't try.

A driving force

Optimism is a motivator. The belief that something good is going to happen because of our efforts, gets us up and going. Optimism is a driving force that helps us make the best of a bad situation. It is a state of mind that keeps our expectations high. Even when the going gets tough, the optimist will keep on going because of the basic belief that success is just ahead.

An interesting phenomenon occurs around optimistic people. Good things happen to them. Optimism is the fuel of a positive attitude which powers people toward success. In a wide variety of careers, you will find that people who have great attitudes will soar to the top.

Everyone enjoys being around winners. Just watch the fans at sporting events. Watch the crowds gather around successful folks from all walks of life. One of the common factors you will find in the lives of successful people is a positive attitude.

The optimist creed

Recently, I spoke to a group of optimists. After the meeting, one of the club members gave me a copy of the optimist creed. The creed is a collection of positive thoughts that will help you build a positive, optimistic attitude.

Would you like to develop a better attitude? Would you like to be more successful? Would you like to enjoy a happier, more fulfilling life? Try following the optimist creed.

Promise yourself-

- To be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind.
- To talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet.
- To make all your friends feel that there is something in them.
- To look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true.
- To think only of the best, to work only for the best and expect only the best.
- To be just as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own.
- To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future.
- To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile.
- To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others.
- To be too large to worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear, and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

SUN PORCH AND BREAKFAST ROOM ORIENTED TO REAR

Great Room Expands Into Sun Porch

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

The main level of this plan is largely devoted to open family living space. The vast great room is highlighted by open access to a great sun porch and the sloped ceiling is carried straight through. The only visual obstruction between the two is a central fireplace. Stairs to the basement and attic are adjacent to this area.

The formal living room and dining room are separated by attractive wood columns and the foyer is shown with a tray ceiling.

Three bedrooms and a hobby room complete the plan. The master bedroom is provided with a luxury bath and a large walk in closet. The remaining two bedrooms share a central double entry bath and a powder room is provided for daytime use. The hobby room also includes access to a full shower bath and the large laundry room is in the same area.

The entrance to rear garage is from the hall near the spacious kitchen.

The colonial exterior is enhanced by a columned porch, brick construction and corner quoins. The roof style is steep gable.

The plan is Number 4010. It includes 4,036 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	15	3.00
2 days per word	26	5.20
3 days per word	37	7.40
4 days per word	48	9.60
5 days per word	59	11.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALIS
Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

CHICAGO (AP) - The headlines: Oprah Winfrey postpones book because of pressure from boyfriend Stedman Graham. The fact: Her boyfriend had nothing to do with it, Winfrey said.

"The book, as written, does a really great job of chronicling the events of my life, but I wanted it to be more than a recitation of my life's events," Winfrey told the Chicago Sun-Times in an interview from her Indiana home.

"I wanted it to say more. I wanted to offer some insight, some clarity and some wisdom that might benefit other people."

Winfrey rocked the publishing world Wednesday by postponing her eagerly anticipated autobiography. It was supposed to come out this fall. The New York Post said it was because Graham was "upset by the revelations of her prior sexual experience." The Daily News said Graham threatened, "Publish and our engagement perishes."

The Washington Post hinted that Winfrey has a history of postponing things, noting that she and Graham got engaged last fall but have yet to set a date.

None of the above, Winfrey said. Winfrey said she decided to talk to dismiss "all the rumors, speculation and out-and-out lies" that have circulated.

"The whole process of writing it has opened my mind in ways that I would not have unless I had had the time devoted to years of therapy. I'm just trying to step back from that an assess what does that all really mean," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Hollywood heartthrob Billy Dee Williams has filed for divorce from his wife of 20 years.

The 56-year-old actor cited irreconcilable differences Thursday. He and his wife, Teruko, have no children.

Williams rose to stardom in "Lady Sings the Blues" opposite Diana Ross in 1972. He also had roles in two "Star Wars" movies and "Batman."

WASHINGTON (AP) - James Carville was roasted by Washington's Democratic establishment as a man who overcame his resemblance to a serial killer to help elect a president.

The Thursday night dinner in honor of President Clinton's fiery, short-tempered campaign adviser was a benefit for the liberal Independent Action political action committee.

Hillary Rodham Clinton stopped by to say that those who don't know Carville think he tries hard to be eccentric. "He's actually trying very hard to be normal and not ever quite getting there," the first lady said.

Harry Thomason, Clinton's Hollywood producer friend, called Carville "a man who has not let the fact that he looks like a serial killer keep him from electing a president of the United States."

The roast raised $250,000 for Democratic candidates.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dwight D. Eisenhower would be pleased with the spread of democracy around the world if he were alive today but would probably continue to insist on a strong U.S. defense, Gen. Colin Powell says.

"I believe Ike would congratulate us on our efforts - not to demobilize our armed forces, but to bring them down and at the same time ensure they remain strong, proud and combat ready," the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said Thursday after accepting the second annual Eisenhower Leadership Prize.

The Eisenhower World Affairs Institute and Gettysburg College in Gettysburg, Pa., award the prize for effective leadership in the style of Eisenhower. Winners receive $25,000 and a bronze bust of the president.

The first Eisenhower prize went to former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft.

NBC's 'Double Deception' is a run-of-the-mill mystery

James Russo portrays a private detective searching for a client's missing husband in "Double Deception," airing Monday on NBC. Oscar nominee Sally Kirkland plays the worldly real-estate agent who assists him.

BY JOHN CROOK

A Los Angeles private eye goes looking for a missing husband and opens a Chinese puzzle box of deceit in "Double Deception," airing Monday, June 21, on NBC.

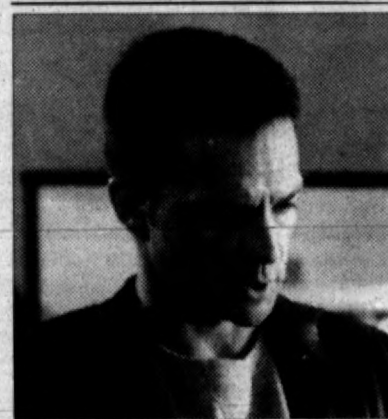

In this made-for-TV melodrama (a pilot for "Kane," a projected series not on NBC's fall schedule), private investigator John Kane (James Russo) is hired by the beautiful and mysterious Pamela Sparrow (Alice Krige) to find her husband, who walked out on her a year ago. Aided by Anita Cortez (Sally Kirkland), an "ex-call girl, now a real-estate agent in Beverly Hills" (no kidding), and Zimmer (Burt Young), a police detective into roll-your-own metaphysics, Kane learns that (a) missing husband is an insatiable philanderer and (b) Pamela is Not What She Seems to Be.

Richard Rothstein's teleplay, directed by Jan Egleson, is certainly no worse than most of your run-of-the-mill detective dramas, and it does have one nice little running gag: Every time Kane returns home to his Venice Beach cottage, he finds an uninvited guest there, be it Anita, Zimmer or a pair of burglars. Any intelligent mystery fan, however, is bound to feel betrayed when he wades through this convoluted storyline and discovers that the resolution hinges on — no, not amnesia — plastic surgery.

The amount of screen time devoted to the principal characters seems bizarrely out of whack, no doubt due to the fact that the movie was intended to be a series pilot. Fans of professional Oscar nominee Kirkland, for example, can catch her entire performance — ALL of it — in the first half-hour. (It's almost worth it — in only five minutes of screen time, her ditsy charm brings a welcome sense of humor to the otherwise straight-faced proceedings). Young's Zimmer barely registers, an eccentric characterization with no context.

Krige, who is matchless at conveying riddles wrapped in enigmas, walks off with the acting honors, despite some plot turns reminiscent of Faye Dunaway's character in "Chinatown" ("She's my sister! My daughter! My sister AND my daughter!"). In what may be "Double Deception's" most inspired and perverse bit of casting against type, career wacko Grace Zabriskie (Laura Palmer's psychic loon of a mother in "Twin Peaks") plays Kane's psychotherapist.

What makes "Double Deception" a long shot for series status, however, is a bad case of Michael Woods Syndrome. For those who don't remember Woods, he was the charisma-impaired star of "Private Eye," a similar, short-lived 1987 series on NBC. For those who don't remember "Private Eye," well, you can bet the suits at NBC still do.

Television: cultural meeting between black and white Americans

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television, for better or worse, is a cultural meeting ground for young black and white Americans.

A gap between what black and white households watch on TV is bridged by the younger generation. Black teen-agers are fans of "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air" and "Martin." Young whites also favor black-themed comedies.

But some observers contend children are sharing more than laughs — that impressionable young viewers are soaking up racial images that could have a lingering effect on them and society.

"I think it has a tremendous impact," says Marilyn Kern-Foxworth, an associate professor at Texas A&M University who has studied the relationship between the mass media and blacks for two decades.

"I think it has an impact on white children. I think it has an impact on black children, on how blacks see themselves and the people they want to emulate."

Age makes a difference, says another expert.

"A child or a teen-ager accepts

DECEPTION

Russo (who played Farrah Fawcett's taunting rapist in "Extremities") is a capable enough actor, but he's too cold, too self-contained to connect with a mass audience. Granted, he's not given much to work with in this respect — his interrogation style consists of slamming bad guys up against walls. Attempts to soften the character in his scenes with Zabriskie seem gratuitous and contrived. Still, only Russo can be held accountable for his tendency to slide into vocal mannerisms right out of "Taxi Driver" during his big moments.

"Double Deception" is a relatively painless TV mystery with some nice moments by Krige and Kirkland. Viewers should be prepared for a high sleaze and jiggle content, however, as well as a teleplay laden with unlikely twists and red herrings.

what they see on television more easily than someone who's older and has more to compare it to," says Dr. Carole Lieberman, a Beverly Hills psychiatrist specializing in media issues.

The comedies "are better than just seeing blacks being the villains... but we may be trading one stereotype for another" in the eyes of children, suggests Ms. Lieberman.

Four black-oriented shows rank among the top 10 for the general 12-to-17 audience, as well as for black youths of that age, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Besides NBC's "Fresh Prince" and Fox's "Martin," the four include "Hangin' With Mr. Cooper" on ABC and "In Living Color" on Fox.

By comparison, the top 10 programs for U.S. households in general and for black viewers failed to overlap at all for the second consecutive year, an annual study by the advertising agency BBDO Worldwide found.

"The fact is, teen-agers like to watch teen-agers. That's the way it's been for a long time," says Ted Frank, NBC's senior vice president of current series programs.

The attraction of hip, irreverent comedy also explains the series' popularity among youngsters, observers say.

African-American culture defines "what's cutting edge in American humor, music and television," says Andrew Fessel, Fox TV's senior vice president for research and marketing.

Black-oriented shows also tend to have a rebellious, alternative image attractive to white suburban youth, says John Caldwell, who teaches television at the University of California, Los Angeles.

"It's 'in-your-face,' and sexually loaded a lot of times," Caldwell says. "It certainly has that element of seeing what you can get away with."

Ms. Kern-Foxworth questions whether white youths, who may have limited exposure to blacks, understand the exaggerations of fiction.

"Because we live in a segregated society, there are a lot of white children who formulate their opinions of African-American culture, African-American lifestyle, African-American idiosyncrasies through what they see on television," she says.

Blacks, who tend to watch more TV than any other ethnic group, also are affected by TV's portrayals, she says.

Although "Fresh Prince" offers positive images of a stable black family headed by a successful attorney, Ms. Kern-Foxworth says she is made uneasy by its frequent depiction of women as sex objects.

The series, which stars Will Smith, tends to mock a straight-laced character, Carlton.

"Will is always talking about 'Did you score? Did you get over with the young lady?' Then they tease Carlton because he is the one who supposedly never had sexual relationships," she says.

Instead, she says, "we should reward the behavior of young men (like Carlton) and say you're doing exactly what you should do."

Such scenarios also tend to reinforce the prejudice that "black men sleep around and are very promiscuous," Ms. Kern-Foxworth says.

"It becomes a Catch-22," she says. "Sometimes we get confronted with the question of whether it's more detrimental to have stereotypical images of blacks on television than not to have them at all."

Programmers insist they are mindful of television's potential impact.

"We don't set out week in and week out to deliver a message, but we hope that the portrayals are positive and have a positive impact," says NBC's Frank.

An effort is made to avoid stereotypes, he says. If black youths are portrayed as superficial in their sexual attitude toward women, so are young whites, he says.

Joey Russo, a young white character on NBC's "Blossom," is "an incorrigible girl-chaser. It's typical male teen-age behavior, rather than black male teen-age behavior," Frank says.

David Simon, supervising producer on "Fresh Prince," notes that series had considered sending Smith's character to college on an athletic scholarship.

The idea was discarded, Simon says, because Smith was concerned about suggesting to young blacks that athletics, not academics, were the road to success.

Ms. Kern-Foxworth says she understands the networks are not in the message business, "not Western Union," as Frank put it.

But she urges them to be sensitive to the difficulties faced by black Americans.

"Our children and our youth are facing such obstacles and are looking for direction," she says, and what they see when they look to television counts.

SOAP WORLD

Nothing beats a great pair of legs

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Who cares that Susan Lucci (Erica, "All My Children") lost the Outstanding Actress Emmy for the 14th time — she has a great pair of legs. For those who missed "The 20th Annual Daytime Emmy awards," here's an update.

After beginning the evening in a red satin gown, Lucci showed up for the second half of the show in a body suit and see-through skirt, and the audience went wild. She probably planned the outfit to turn attention from her loss to Linda Dano (Felicia, "Another World"). The fact that Dano won is old news now, but everyone is still talking about Lucci's dress.

The big news of the night was the announcement of the return of Luke and Laura (Anthony Geary and Genie Francis) to "General Hospital" this fall. Wendy Riche, executive producer for "GH" says, "Luke and Laura's blend of romance and adventure are an essential part of 'GH's' history, and I am thrilled to welcome them back to Port Charles."

There were some surprises during the evening, but it all went like clockwork. The time limit on speeches was 30 seconds each, and most everyone adhered to the rule. "The Daytime Emmys" is one of the few awards shows that actually finishes on time.

Writer Douglas Marland was posthumously given the Lifetime Achievement award. It was an emotional moment when his family accepted the award on his behalf.

Here is a select list of winners:

Outstanding Actor, David Canary (Adam, "AMC"); Outstanding Supporting Actress, Ellen Parker (ex-Maureen, "Guiding Light"); Outstanding Supporting Actor, Gerald Anthony (Marco, "GH").

The Outstanding Younger Actress Emmy went to a very surprised Heather Tom (Victoria, "The Young and the Restless"). The Outstanding Younger Actor award went to Monti Sharp (David, "Guiding Light").

The Outstanding Directing Team award went to "As the World Turns." "Guiding Light" picked up the Emmy for Outstanding Writing Team. "Y&R" surprised everyone by winning the Emmy for Outstanding Drama Series.

Helen Hunt and Paul Reiser star in a special Sunday episode of "Mad About You" on NBC.

'Sports Awards' honor inspirational athletes

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

President and Mrs. Clinton head an all-star salute to some of the largest living luminaries in sport when they serve as Co-Chairs of "The Great Ones: The National Sports Awards," airing Tuesday, June 22, on NBC.

A host of stars from the entertainment and music industries will gather in historic Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C., to pay tribute to basketball great Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, former heavy-weight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, golfer Arnold Palmer, track star Wilma Rudolph and baseball's hitting machine, Ted Williams.

"The five athletes we're honoring all radiate hope and inspiration," says Don Mischer, the program's multi Emmy-Award-winning co-producer. "Their lives are grounded in excellence, commitment and purpose."

The late tennis star Arthur Ashe will be honored in a special presentation by his wife Jeanne. She will also announce the formation of the Arthur Ashe Memorial Award, which in future years will be presented to athletes who look beyond their careers to better the lives of young people.

Weekend events planned to coincide with the awards, such as a celebrity golf tournament and reception at the Smithsonian Institution's Museum of American History, will raise funds for Youth-ServeUSA, a new, private operation that supports local youth service organizations across America.

A Connecticut Yankee ★★ A Connecticut handyman finds himself in 16th-century England. Will Rogers, Myrna Loy 1:35. (1931) June 23 7:35pm; 24 3:35am.

Cool Blue ★★ A painter searches for inspiration and the woman he loves. Woody Harrison, Elyse Duvall R Profanity, Nudity, Violence. 2:00. (1988) June 23 11:30pm.

STAR NOTES

Kirkland likes co-stars on the edge

BY DAN RICE

Viewers who tune to NBC Monday, June 21, for the movie "Double Deception" will catch a few scenes in which star James Russo is assisted in his detective work by a worldly real estate agent, played to the hilt by Sally Kirkland. The movie was intended as the pilot for a series in which she was to co-star, but the deal fell through: The network's airing of the pilot as a one-time movie leaves us hungry for more of Kirkland.

"I was heartbroken when it didn't get picked up," Kirkland says. "My whole thing in my career has been to work with people with edge, E-D-G-E. Nothing turns me on more than when I don't know what an actor is going to do next -- to me, with me. And Jimmy Russo has that quality."

Kirkland ("Anna," "The Haunted"), however, demonstrates great control, in evidence as far back as her 1964 film debut in Andy Warhol's "13 Most Beautiful Women."

"I was studying with Uta Hagen and maybe had just my first month of Strasberg," Kirkland recalls, "and (Warhol) told me, 'Don't move. I'm going to leave the room for 15 minutes, and I just want you to just sit there and do a blank stare.' I waited till he left the room, then without even blinking, I, being a method actress, had these tears one by one streaming out of my eye. So, I fulfilled his direction of not moving, but I proceeded to have my face turn all sorts of different colors."

TRIVIA

St. Paul, Minn., was founded in the early 1840s as Pig's Eye Landing. It assumed its current name when it became the Minnesota capital in 1849.

HIGHLIGHTS

Wednesday, June 23, on "Entertainment Tonight," Lou Diamond Phillips ("La Bamba") discusses his role in the HBO movie "Extreme Justice" and the unusual path the project has taken. Inspired by the beating of motorist Rodney King by Los Angeles police officers, the film tackles the issue of violence in the LAPD. Originally intended for release as a theatrical film, "Extreme Justice" was pulled from theaters last April in anticipation of the verdict in the second King beating trial. The film debuts Saturday, June 26, on HBO.

TV FOR KIDS

ABC fall schedule a smorgasbord of fun

BY SCOTT WHITE

"Our Saturday morning will be sort of buffet-style," says Cormac Wibberly, director of children's programming at ABC. "We'll have everything."

Indeed, ABC's fall schedule promises many flavors of Saturday morning fun.

Returning favorites will include "Wild West C.O.W.-Boys of Moo Mesa," "The Addams Family," an hour of "The Bugs Bunny & Tweety Show" and live action favorite "Land of the Lost."

"Cro," the first commercial network show produced by the Children's Television Workshop, will teach basic mechanical principles in an Ice-Age setting. Jim Henson Productions' puppets will add a touch of lightness to the tough topics covered in "CityKids."

Jaleel White ("Family Matters") will provide the voice of "Sonic the Hedgehog," who lives in a setting Wibberly describes as "a Raiders (of the Lost Ark) meets Blade Runner sort of deal."

"Tales from the Cryptkeeper" will offer suspenseful thrills and "Reboot," a mid-season addition, will be the first Saturday morning series made up solely of 3-D computer animation.

With the exception of "Reboot," which will appear around February, ABC plans to hit the September premieres with guns blazing.

"Kids are very unforgiving," says Wibberly. "If they don't pick you up when you premiere, they're not going to come back to you. They set their patterns and that's what they go with."

Shaker Run ★★ Two American race-car drivers become pawns in high-level espionage. Cliff Robertson, Leif Garrett Profanity, Violence, Adult Situation. 1:30. (1985) June 26 1:30pm.

Shame ★★ A woman investigates the rape of a young girl in a small town. Amanda Donohoe, Dean Cain 2:00. (1992) June 23 3:00pm. □

She Knows Too Much ★★ A former cat burglar and an investigator probe a series of murders. Meredith Baxter Birney, Robert Ulrich 2:00. (1989) June 21 8:00pm. □

A Show of Force ★★ A reporter investigates two murders and finds a political conspiracy. Amy Irving, Andy Garcia R Profanity, Violence. 2:00. (1990) June 20 11:30pm.

Sitting Bull ★★ Sitting Bull comes to the aid of a Cavalry officer accused of treason. Dale Robertson, Mary Murphy 2:35. (1954) June 25 12:00am.

TRIVIA QUIZ

Late '60s? Early '70s? Remember?

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

On Friday, June 25, ABC's "In Concert" welcomes Timothy Leary, a figure identified with the tumult and excess of the late '60s and early '70s. Here's a test of one's memories of the news, movies and television of the period.

Questions

1. Bruce Davison, Bud Cort and Kim Darby star in this jumbled yet enjoyable film about change and unrest at Columbia University. Name the movie.
2. In 1967's "The Graduate," the role of Mrs. Robinson was first offered to what actress?
3. Name the successful but critically maligned novelist who scripted 1970's lamentable "R.P.M." (Bonus: Name the writer's best known credit and the actor who stars as the dean of the embattled university in "R.P.M.")
4. In 1968, she became the first black woman elected to Congress. Name her.
5. Andy Griffith plays the aggrieved parent of a high-school drug addict in this memorable TV movie. Identify the film and the Jefferson Airplane song used in the soundtrack.

1. "The Strawberry Statement."
2. Dots Day.
3. Erich Segal ("Love Story") wrote the script. Anthony Quinn stars.
4. Shirley Chisholm.
5. "Go Ask Alice" features the song "White Rabbit."

TRIVIA

James Whitmore starred in 1957's "Them!," a gem about giant ants ravaging the Southwest. Leonard Nimoy also appears in a tiny role.

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Dennehy gets his due; Midler returns to concert stage

Brian Dennehy has been racking up the awards lately. In May, Dennehy's chilling turn as serial-psycho John Wayne Gacy ("To Catch a Killer") was honored by the American Television Awards. Earlier this month, he was given the Artistic Achievement in Acting Award from the Florida Film Festival. ... British-born Howard Stringer, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, has been honored with the Ellis Island Medal of Honor. HIGHLIGHTS

MTV welcomes a new cast to the second season of its reality-based soap opera, "The Real World," on Thursday, June 24. The half-hour episodes, shot in documentary fashion, follow the lives of seven adults between the ages of 18 and 25 as they share a loft in Venice, Calif. The cast members — (top row, from left) David, Aaron, Tami, Jon, (bottom row) Beth, Dominick and Irene — create the spontaneous drama as they discuss their careers, politics, loves and dreams. The ever-present MTV cameras, located throughout the residence, capture every moment.

Bond is headed back to the big screen. Michael France, the writer behind Sylvester Stallone's current opus, "Cliffhanger," will script the film and a number of top directors are vying to helm the project, including Michael Caton-Jones ("This Boy's Life.") Timothy Dalton, the star of 1987's "The Living Daylights" and 1989's "Licence to Kill," has been approached, but no deal is set. (An interesting sidelight: Oscar winner Anthony Hopkins has expressed interest in playing the villain.)

Multi-talented Dawnn Lewis won't be "Hangin' With Mr. Cooper" next fall. She's leaving the popular ABC series to pursue success in movies and in the music industry.

FRIDAY

Friday on CBS, Patrick Duffy plays a cop investigating an enterprising hit man who kills first, then bills the person who benefited most from the death in "Murder C.O.D."

HIGHLIGHTS

Dr. Timothy Leary (left) interviews British rocker Billy Idol on the Friday, June 25, edition of ABC's "In Concert." Idol discusses his latest album, "Cyberpunk," which he says draws upon his experiences with virtual reality, a budding technology that 1960s LSD guru Leary is now helping to develop.

The same evening, "In Concert" ventures inside the New York apartment of host Joey Ramone, who will join the rest of The Ramones for a rendition of their song "Touring." Also featured on the concert bill are the low-key punk innovators Television.
