Bush, Dukakis prevail in primary

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA — George Bush challenged Michael Dukakis to "fire away" at him on the Iran-Contra affair today and Dukakis did just that after impressive Pennsylvania victories clinched the GOP presidential nomination for Bush and gave Democrat Dukakis another big boost.

Jesse Jackson, a distant second to Dukakis in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary, said today, "I keep struggling against the odds and I've always struggled against the odds and succeeded.... This campaign will remain alive and will go right down to the wire."

In television interviews, the vice president and the Massachusetts governor set a combative tone for the summer campaign.

Dukakis said of Bush's involvement in the Iranian arms-for-hostages dealing: "He sat there and did nothing while we engaged in one of the worst and one of the most misguided adventures in the history of American foreign policy."

Bush said he would ask Dukakis in debate what he would do about hostages in the Middle East. "Do you really care when a man like Buckley is being tortured to death?" he said he would ask, a reference to William Buckley, the CIA official who died after being taken hostage in Lebanon.

"Let him fire away," Bush said of Dukakis in an interview on CBS-TV.

Bush, prodding the Democrats on another sensitive issue, said on NBC-TV he might pick up substantial support from blacks if they decide Jackson wasn't given a fair deal by his party.

"If he's not treated fairly, a lot of people are going to be open-minded and if I campaign properly with the way I feel in my heart about openness and inclusion we might surprise people there," Bush said.

With the nomination in hand for Bush, President Reagan, free at last drop his neutrality, was meeting with his vice president today.

"I am sure the president will offer his congratulations and discuss how he can help in the campaign," said White House House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia were the next battlegrounds, each holding primaries next Tuesday.

"He's coming in with a head of steam," Ohio Democratic Party chairman James Ruvolo said of Dukakis. But he also cautioned against "Washington insiders trying to end the race before it's over."

"It certainly looks now as though Governor Dukakis will be the nominee," said John Livengood, the Indiana Democratic Party chairman.

Jackson vowed to "remain positive" and continue running through the final primaries on June 7.

"You can't finish the race until the race is over," he said. "We need to win this race in November, so I will remain positive."

Solid as his lead appeared, Dukakis insisted his race against Jackson was "by no means over."

"I'm going to campaign as hard as I can in the primaries between now and June 7," Dukakis said. "I'm going to campaign in every single primary."

He repeated his assertion that he didn't want to think about a running mate until after the primary season, although he indicated he would consider Jackson or Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia.

Network interviews with voters at polling places found signs of growing strength for the Massachusetts governor.

Hance gives accord about 50-50 chance

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance said today there was probably only a 50-50 chance that an accord between OPEC and non-OPEC producers to stabilize oil prices would result from current meetings between the groups in Vienna.

However, Hance said he was encouraged that an accord to stabilize oil prices in the $18 to $20 range might be achieved down the road. "There seems to be a new era of cooperation forming," said Hance in a telephone interview with the Reporter-Telegram from Vienna.

Hance said seven non-OPEC producers, with only Colombia dissenting, had proposed a historical first ever agreement with OPEC to stabilize oil prices through production cuts. The non-OPEC producers proposed to reduce oil exports by five percent or about 180,000 barrels per day if OPEC would cut production by 5 percent or about 700-800,000 barrels per day.

"This would be a four-to-one cut, and a cut in exports as opposed to a cut in production, and I don't think OPEC will accept it," said Hance. "Still," he added, "I think it was good to get some sort of proposal up front."

The OPEC oil ministers will take the proposal to the 13 OPEC nations for a vote on Thursday.

The non-OPEC nations produce about 8.5 million barrels per day or about half of current OPEC production.

While OPEC has long welcomed cooperation and support from other nations in stabilizing oil prices, Hance said OPEC members are not happy with the notion of making further production cuts, because they feel they are already doing their share. He added, however, that any accord to stabilize oil prices would probably require more cuts from OPEC.

Report confirms economy's fall to 1978 levels

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A comprehensive report released today by the Midland Chamber of Commerce concludes that the Midland economy and employment levels have basically retreated to 1978 levels, but predicts a possible return to 1982-83 levels by 1990.

■ Related story — 7B

The report which reviews economic indicators from 1974 to the present was prepared by Midland Economist Jim Williams under sponsorship of the Economic Development Department of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Economic Development Center of Midland College.

In reviewing employment levels for the last 14 years, the study reveals how hard-hit oil and gas employment was as a result of the downturn.

Curbside regulations changed

Signs that ask Midland International Airport users to load and unload passengers and baggage in 60 seconds will be changed to reflect a five-minute time limit after City Council action Tuesday.

City Council alters airport parking rules

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City Council members agreed Tuesday that 60 seconds just isn't enough time for Midland International Airport users to load or unload passengers and luggage at terminal curbside.

What divided members in a rare 3-2 vote was how to change the policy to allow more time and keep traffic moving.

Emerging from the Tuesday afternoon council session — among other changes — was an increase to five minutes in the posted time users may park at the terminal's entrance.

Voting in favor of the change were Mayor Carroll Thomas and council member Robert Rendall in addition to newly sworn in council member Robert Monaghan.

The three earlier voted down a change proposed by council member Katie Heck, who was joined by council member Bill Williams in an attempt to impose a more subjective limit on curbside loading and unloading.

Under Ms. Heck's proposal, front-of-the-terminal drivers would have been asked to leave the entrance after a "reasonable" amount of time. Signs would have reserved the prime spaces for loading and unloading only.

Council member Gorden Marcum II Tuesday was not present during both morning and afternoon council sessions. Council member Oralia Corrales had attended the morning session but did not attend afternoon proceedings.

Other changes imposed under the new ordinance include an increase in the number metered parking spaces, which will be located at the north and south ends of the terminal curb and in a parking lot directly north of the terminal.

Time limits for metered parking — which will continue to be available in a lot southwest of the terminal — were increased from 15 to 30 minutes under the new measure.

In addition, the ordinance held changes for airport limousines and buses, which now must load and unload passengers in the western-most lane in front of the terminal.

After the vote, Airport Director Vic White said: "For several years now we've been watching parking and listening to jillions of complaints about the so-called 60-second zone." The council in 1984 had approved the shorter limit, he said.

Police Lt. Jerry Morris, chief of airport law enforcement, told the council earlier that the 60-second rule had proved to be "unrealistic" and had led to needless argument between patrol personnel and passengers.

Agency's travelers checks make unscheduled departures

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department kept millions of dollars worth of travelers checks in unlocked cabinets and piled on floors in an operation so lax that more than $59,000 was embezzled and $307,780 cannot be accounted for, the department's inspector general testified today.

Government investigators told a House Government Operations subcommittee that controls on State Department travel advances were so disorganized that $15 million in such payments are delinquent, a total that includes a $695 advance to fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, which is four years overdue.

Frank Conahan, an assistant U.S. comptroller general, said a General Accounting Office investigation showed the delinquent travel advance situation is worse than it was two years ago, when the department promised to correct it.

The number of overdue or delinquent accounts rose from 8,100 in 1985 to 19,800 in 1987, with 300 accounts in excess of $10,000 and two totaling $34,000 each, Conahan said.

He said the total value of delinquent accounts rose from $10 million in 1985 to about $15.4 milion last year.

Some of the advance payments have been written off as uncollectible and some were made to accounts bearing obviously fictitious names, including tat of "Ludwig Von Beethoven," Conahan said.

"In testimony before the subcommittee in October 1985, the State Department admitted that its travel operations were a mess and promised prompt corrective behavior," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the subcommittee chairman.

"Today we see the same rotten ineptitude," he added.

The inspector general's report said that although operations have improved, procedures still are not in place to fully protect an inventory of some $3 million in travelers checks.

"If these deficiencies cannot be corrected the risk of loss to the department is so high that travelers check operations should be discontinued," the report said.

Dallas radio station picks local charities to receive funds collected

DALLAS (AP) — The $243,000 windfall a Dallas radio station received after an on-the-air solicitation will be distributed to area charities that help the homeless, hungry and abused, according to the man who started the solicitation drive.

"We just found things that made us say, 'Ooh, that's wonderful.' Now the fun part comes and we just start distributing funds," disc jockey Ron Chapman said Tuesday. It was Chapman who asked listeners several weeks ago to send in $20 without telling them why.

Within four days, the station had received $243,120 that it didn't know what to do with.

After days of reviewing numerous suggestions and requests, station officials Tuesday settled on the disbursement.

Recipients and the amount they will receive are the Salvation Army, $100,000; Common Ground Community Economic Development Corporation, $13,000; East Dallas Community School, $14,900; Tarrant County Food Bank, $56,000; and Women's Haven of Tarrant County, $16,000.

The station was deluged by suggestions from various people and organizations who had ideas on how to spend the money.

Hundreds wanted to help station officials figure out what to do with the money, and hundreds more wanted some of the money for themselves.

All kinds of suggestions were considered. Organ-transplant candidates wanted funding for operations. Lawrence Welk fans wanted to rebuild his birthplace in North Dakota.

Chapman said the donors will be told by letter how the money will be spent and if the donor disagree, their money will be sent back.

The Salvation Army intends to use its share to build a medical clinic at the Carr P. Collins Center.

"This is an answered prayer. It really is," said Maj. Frank Gordon, area coordinator for the Salvation Army services in greater Dallas.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Slight warming trend due

Midlanders can expect mostly cloudy skies and slightly warmer temperatures Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low is expected to reach only into the lower 50s with winds blowing from 5-15 mph out of the southeast.

Thursday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures with the high in the mid 80s. Winds will be from 5-15 mph out of the southeast in the early part of the day, increasing to 20-30 mph and gusty in the afternoon.

STATE

A high pressure system located over Central Texas was expected to keep skies clear and temperatures mild across all of Texas through Thursday.

Fog reduced visibility to near zero along lower portions of the Texas coastal plains before dawn today.

A cool front was located in South Texas along a line from near Galveston to near Laredo, but the front wasn't producing any significant weather activity because of the dry, stable air located over the state.

Forecasts called for clear skies tonight and for sunny skies Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the mid 40s in the Panhandle to lower 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Thursday will be in the 80s across most of West Texas except for the Big Bend area where readings will climb into the upper 90s, in the 80s across North Texas and in the 80s and 90s across South Texas.

Except for the area covered by fog, skies were clear across the state at dawn today.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s over the South Plains and Low Rolling Plains and in the 50s and 60s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 36 at Amarillo to 72 at San Antonio.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 43 at Wichita Falls, 50 at Fort Worth, 53 at Waco, 60 at Austin, 66 at Corpus Christi and Houston, 46 at San Angelo, 44 at Lubbock, 48 at Midland and 50 at El Paso.

NATION

A storm that dumped more than a foot of snow on the northern Plains swirled across Wisconsin today, while rain fell from North Carolina to Ohio.

Rochester, Minn., was buried under 11 inches of snow, with an inch of snow per hour for four hours Tuesday night. Several cars slid into ditches in Mason City, Iowa, as 4 inches of snow fell in just three hours.

Elsewhere in Minnesota, up to 10 inches of snow fell on Dodge Center, between 5 and 8 inches fell at Albert Lea and Austin had 4 to 5 inches. In South Dakota, 14 inches fell on Custer, 12 inches on Bonesteel and Gregory, and 10 inches at Colome.

"We'll put up with it because you have to have it when you have to have moisture," Wesley Stinton of Gregory said.

"Whenever you get moisture in this country, it makes you feel pretty good," farmer Henry Furhman said.

Two inches of snow was on the ground at Eau Claire, Wisc., and 3 to 6 inches was forecast today for central Wisconsin.

Snow advisories continue this morning for southeast Minnesota and central Wisconsin. A gale warning was issued for Lake Michigan.

Temperatures were freezing this morning across the northern Great Plains and forecasters issued freeze advisories for most of Kansas and northwest Oklahoma.

A few showers lingered over central Florida. Scattered showers developed in western Oregon late Tuesday with a thunderstorm at Eugene.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 a.m. EDT included .32 inches at Milwaukee, .28 inches at Green Bay, Wisc., .27 inches at South Bend, Ind., and .24 inches at Jacksonville, Fla.

Bodies found on damaged submarine

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Navy salvage workers who boarded the USS Bonefish as the abandoned submarine drifted in the Atlantic today found the bodies of the three men missing after explosions and fire rocked the ship, Navy officials said.

A Navy salvage crew boarded the submarine Tuesday but had to pump out toxic gases swirling through the hull before they could enter the ship, which had been adrift since Sunday.

The dead were identified as Lt. Ray Everts Jr., 30, of Naoma, W.Va.; Petty Officer 1st Class Robert W. Bordelon Jr., 39, of Willis, Texas; and Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall T. Lindgren, 21, of Pisgah Forest, N.C.

Chief Petty Officer Terry D. Borton, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters here, said two of the bodies were found at their stations in the control room of the ship and a third was found in an administrative compartment.

The rest of the 92-man crew escaped serious injury when they abandoned the 219-foot, 30-year-old vessel, which was drifting alongside two salvage ships 160 miles east of Port Canaveral, Fla.

The causes of death would not be known until a full medical report was done, Borton said. The salvage crew entered the vessel shortly after midnight to test for toxic gases left by the fire in the diesel-electric sub's forward battery compartment.

Lt. Michael Langston, chaplain at the Asheville Naval Reserve Center in Asheville, N.C., said he was told to notify Lindgren's mother and brother in nearby Pisgah Forest. "She's pretty distraught," he said of Mrs. Lindgren.

Everts' sister, Cynthia Williams, said the Navy had sent someone to their house this morning to announce that Everts' body had been found. The Navy gave no further details, said Williams, of Naoma.

"We'd really rather not say anything yet," said Williams.

Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of naval operations, said Tuesday in Washington that the three men were on watch in the sub's control room and may have died at their posts as they made sure everyone got clear.

Another sailor said, however, that the men were newly assigned to the ship and may have gotten lost in the smoke and gas that filled the hull.

"Avery thought maybe they got confused and got turned around in the smoke," Alice Causey, mother of Petty Officer 1st class Avery Causey, said Tuesday.

Causey said he himself was blinded by the smoke and was only able to escape because a wave washing over the ship guided him to an open hatch.

"Even though the emergency lights were on, he couldn't see them. ... None of the drills they do could have prepared them for what happened," said Mrs. Causey, who is from Jacksonville, Fla.

Causey, 30, was one of 89 of the Bonefish's 92 crewmen evacuated Sunday after explosions and fire filled the vessel with smoke and toxic gases. Three of 22 injured crewmen remain hospitalized.

The Bonefish's captain, Cmdr. Mike Wilson, praised the heroism of his crew. "It was a very harrowing experience we went through out there," he said upon arrival Tuesday in Charleston, S.C., his ship's home port.

Wilson would not comment further because an investigation of the fire is pending, said Lt. Cmdr. John Tull, public affairs officer at the Charleston Naval Base.

The Navy said the first explosion hit the Bonefish on Sunday afternoon as it was running at periscope depth, engaged in training exercises with surface vessels 160 miles off Florida.

The crew was able to surface the Bonefish and Wilson ordered the evacuation. Crew members abandoned ship and were taken to shore by the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and the frigate USS Carr.

A five-man salvage crew aboard the Bonefish waited for strong winds and rough seas to subside Tuesday afternoon, then conducted tests that found high concentrations of toxic gases inside.

Mexican police capture three in bank incident

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico (AP) — Police said they captured three of the six gunmen who held 42 people hostages for a day inside a bank they were caught robbing in this northwestern coastal city last week.

Five people were killed and 15 wounded in the botched holdup.

The three suspects were arrested without incident at dawn Tuesday at the home of a relative of one suspect, said Arturo Moreno, commander of the local federal police.

Moreno identified the three as Mario Valdez Soto, 26, and Ramon Terrazas Torres of Los Mochis, and Ivan Camarena Acosta, 21, of Navojoa, Sonora state.

Terrazas Torres was found seriously wounded and taken to a local hospital, said Ramiro Guerrero, news editor at the newspaper Noroeste in the Sinaloa state capital of Culiacan.

The three gunmen still at large included the gang's reported leader, the government news agency Notimex said. A judicial police spokesman contacted Tuesday night declined to say whether police had any leads on their whereabouts.

At the house where the three suspects were arrested, police said they found dynamite, two AK-47 assault rifles, ammunition and the equivalent of $6,100, apparently taken from the bank.

ECONOMY

It also reveals that some sectors were relatively unaffected by the drop in oil prices.

According to the economic study, oil and gas employment, the largest employment sector, is now back to 1978 levels. The industry employed 14,600 at the peak of the oil boom in 1982. But by September 1984, the number had declined to 12,000 and has dropped to 8,800 today.

The loss of employment, the review entitled Midland's Economy — Past, Present & Future says, was the direct result of ravaged oil prices, falling production and a loss of value in oil and gas production.

While oil prices dropped from $33.67 to $12.99 in a five-year period, the value of oil production fell from $18 billion in 1981 to just under $6 billion in 1986. The total value of reserves in the three Texas Railroad Commission districts of West Texas fell from $185 billion to $63 billion.

Construction, which rises and falls on the fortunes of the local economy, showed the steepest increases and decreases in employment. Fewer than 1,500 were employed in the industry in 1974, but by 1981 4,400 employed in the industry building homes, office buildings and apartment buildings in Midland.

Today, indicates economist Williams, employment in the construction sector has retreated to 1974 levels with only 1,600 remaining employed in the industry.

Employment in transportation, utilities and communications has declined to 1977 levels and could have fallen even further if not for Clay-Desta Communications, a Midland-based long distance carrier, which increased employment from six in 1984 to 150 presently.

Industries that have not retreated significantly include the finance, insurance and real estate sector which fell back to its 1982 level.

Employment in the retail and wholesale trade segment stands at 1981 levels. Services and government employment have shown very little decrease.

Government employment in fact has shown a steady increase through boom and bust. Williams attributes this to the employment of 500 by FDIC, and the fact that government employment on a local and national basis normally bears little relationship to the economy.

He says that the trade sector has held up well considering the severity of the downturn because of the high per capita income of Midland. He also noted that the service sector had remain steady because so many of those who were unemployed went out and established service businesses.

Overbuilding has hit the real estate sector hard, according to the report. Apartment units which increased from a little over 1,000 in 1974 to almost 12,000 in 1987, but only about 9,000 are occupied.

The picture is not much better for office space. From 1978 to 1987, office space in Midland increased from just over 2 million square feet to almost 7 million square feet. Williams estimates that currently a little over 4 million square feet are occupied. That oversupply has resulted in lease rates of about half what they were in 1983 for office space.

Two scenarios, developed in the economic development study, view Midland's future. The first, which assumes an oil price of $18 to $21 per barrel until the year 1990 calls for a 4-5 percent rate of growth. The second, which assumes an immediate increase in oil prices to $21, calls for 6-7 percent growth.

Williams concludes: "The recovery of Midland's economy appears certain, only the timing is in doubt."

HANCE

Also expecting to add difficulty to an OPEC accord Thursday is Iraq's unwillingness to abide by quotas. Iran has demanded a production quota equal to Iran. Also, Saudia Arabia has severed diplomatic relations with Iran.

Asked if he had been able to have discussions with OPEC members about the persistent problem of cheating on production quotas, Hance said he had talked to members about utilizing a system similar to Texas' for monitoring quotas. "They seemed receptive to the suggestion," he said.

The Texas Railroad Commission uses a system of checks and balances that compares producer and purchaser records to insure oil is being produced at assigned rates. Spot checks of wells are also made to ascertain production rates.

Hance said he will meet with OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman and Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Abdul Nazer later today or tonight to discuss other common problems.

"The meetings thus far have been useful," said Hance. "I think they are genuinely glad to see me here." He said three groups had developed naturally at the Vienna meetings. He described one group as Texas, Norway and Alberta, Canada; the second group as the non-OPEC producers of Mexico, Egypt, China, Angola, Malaysia, Colombia and Oman and the six OPEC members as the third group.

"I was glad to see Alberta attend the meeting," said Hance. "They are a producing province of Canada and have many problems similar to Texas." Hance said his counterpart Dale Lucas of the Alberta Petroleum Commission had requested permission to attend the meetings after reading that Hance had intended to attend.

In associated news reports today Mexico's oil minister Fernando Hiriart, who conveyed the export cut proposal to OPEC ministers, agreed with Hance that the meeting will be useful for the long-term development of oil prices.

"It is the beginning of a new stage of cooperation between a large number of oil-producing countries," said Hiriart.

Drug testing upon arrest proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III says everyone who is arrested should be tested for drugs and then should be subject to follow-up tests before trial.

"I would like to see the day where every person arrested is subjected to a urine test" to determine suitability for pre-trial release, Meese told mayors and police chiefs Tuesday at the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

He said once defendants are back on the street, they should be subject to random drug testing to dissuade them from committing crimes while awaiting trial. Meese added he would like to see mandatory drug testing results taken into account in sentencing by judges.

AIRPORT

"We're not enforcing it," he said. "We can't take the heat. We can't make it fair for everyone."

He implored the council to approve that five-minute rule "and we'll enforce it," he said.

In addition to Morris, Airport Board members Ed Vogler and Bobby Holt spoke in favor of the change.

Ms. Heck during discussion had guessed that people who now abuse the 60-second limit would take even longer under the five-minute rule. She acknowledged that had her proposal passed, more law enforcment personnel would have been needed at the terminal's entrance.

However, she allowed after the vote that White, Morris and Airport Board members are "more experienced" in such matters. "I'm just going on intuition," she said.

White said that the changes likely would take effect in June, but that airport personnel would begin making sign changes this week.

In other action Tuesday the council:

— Oversaw the swearing in of new member Bob Monaghan to fill a seat vacated by former member Kelly Fish, who resigned in March, — Passed on second reading an animal control ordinance that limits to five the number of dogs and ferrets Midlanders may own,

— Approved a resolution revising city employee position classifications and pay scales,

— Passed an ordinance regulating Sunday parking around several Midland churches, and — Approved purchase of a 1,500-gallon fire department pumper at a cost of $285,000,

— Approved purchase of four pickup trucks for the fleet services department at a cost of $103,000, and — Approved an amendment to the city depository contract to permit safekeeping of pledged securities in the hands of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, — Received a certificate of appreciation from Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, presented by former Midlander Jim Lindsey.

CHECKS

Reporting on a surprise audit of the State Department's principal cashier's office conducted last Aug. 21, the inspector general's office found "an almost total lack of internal control."

The report, a copy of which was made available to The Associated Press, said inspectors found there was no inventory of travelers checks, no written operating procedures, no controlled custody of funds, minimal physical security in the cashier's office and improperly trained and supervised personnel.

The cashier's operation was so disorganized that State Department records could not be used to determine how much money had been embezzled, the report said.

Instead, investigators had to rely on the records of Citicorp, the issuer of the checks.

"As of Aug. 21 no documented procedures for cashiering operations existed," the report said. "There were no procedures for end-of-day closing and funds reconciliation, sequential issuance of travelers checks, accounting for funds or even the handling of all funds — all of which are rudimentary requirements for the most basic controls.

"Eventually the lack of controls permitted an employee to embezzle funds," it said.

"On Aug. 21, we observed travelers checks stored in an unlocked supply cabinet and on the floor in the cashier's office," the report said.

"All of the boxes of travelers checks (20 or more boxes) had been opened and checks had been issued randomly out of the boxes rather than a first-in, first-out system for issuance," it said.

The Aug. 21 audit, the inspector general's report said, showed $87,320 was missing and cashed, of which at least $59,000 was found to be embezzled.

It said the remaining $28,320 cannot be located because of State Department processing errors and is still under investigation.

"An additional $307,780 in travelers checks are missing, but not yet cashed," the report said.

RADIO

The East Dallas Community School, a school for about 40 underprivileged students with a waiting list of 300, will receive $14,900 to build and equip two new classrooms.

"We are ecstatic. This is the best thing that could have happened," said Terry Ford, founder and director of the school.

The Tarrant County Food Bank will use its money for a new truck to deliver food donations to area food banks, shelters and agencies.

Common Ground, a small community group that helps the homeless and the poor find jobs and housing, will get $13,000 for a new computer system.

The Women's Haven of Tarrant County Inc., a Fort Worth shelter for victims of domestic violence, will get a van to transport children to school.

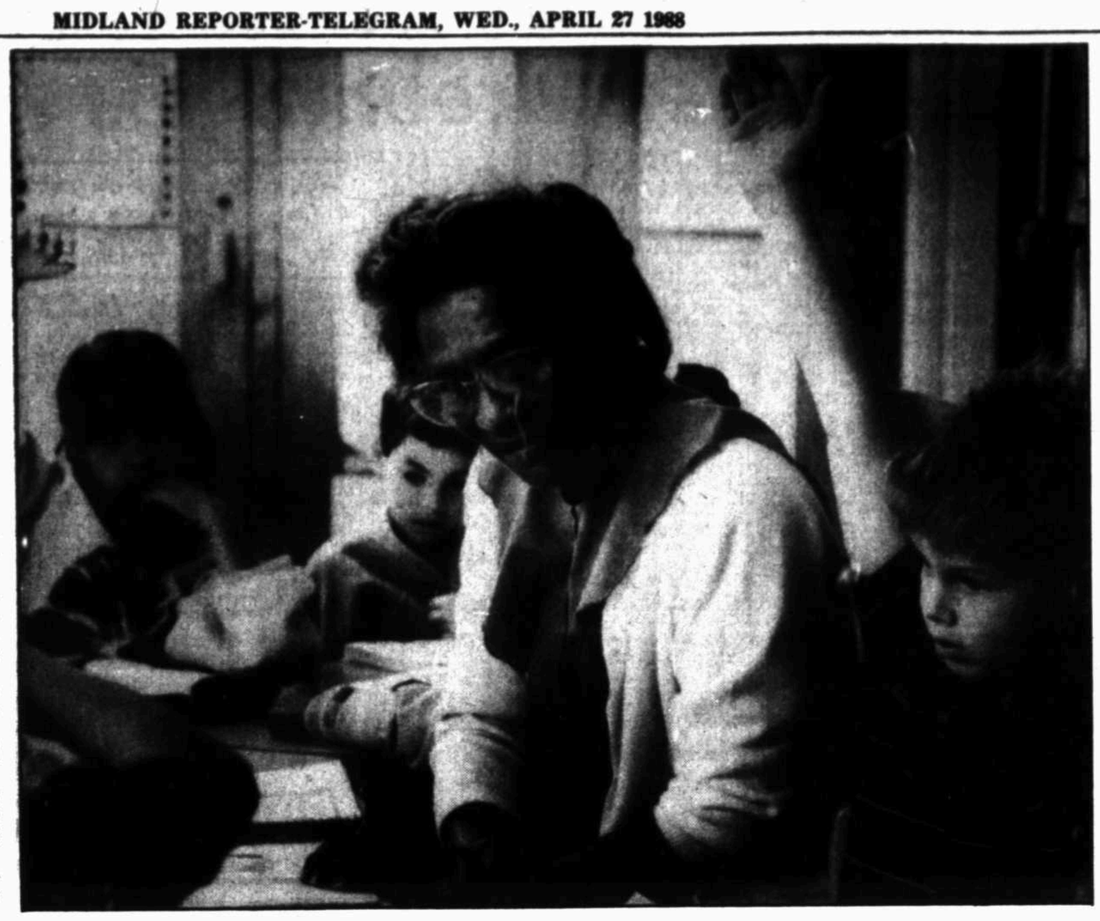
Miami-area pilot program making educators notice



A small group of second graders at Palmetto Elementary School, Miami, take part in a class with their teacher, Lillie Courtney. Under a pilot program in the Dade County schools, teachers have begun to share decision-making with administrators. Mrs. Courtney's large class is divided into small groups to allow students to receive personal attention.

EDITOR'S NOTE — In a pilot program that began this year in Dade County, Fla., which encompasses Miami, local schools are given more autonomy and teachers themselves help make the decisions. The final grades aren't in yet, but it looks like the program is getting good marks.

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — When school administrators sit up and pay attention to what teachers have to say, students learn more.

That's the theory behind a pilot program in Miami and the rest of Dade County that has educators across the country taking notes.

"We people on the front lines — and we really are on the front lines — have a real contribution to make," says Linda Lentin, a first-grade teacher at North Miami Elementary and Dade County's teacher of the year, a classroom instructor with 30 years of experience.

School-based management and shared decision-making are the cornerstones of the program implemented by the Dade County School Board and United Teachers of Dade in the fourth-largest school district in the country, with 255,000 students in 280 schools.

Other elements of the program include a proposal to improve inner-city schools by involving various community organizations, Saturday classes, a satellite kindergarten in an insurance company, and various professional growth initiatives.

But the decision to give schools more say in their own management, with input from teacher committees, is the most fundamental of the reforms, which had the enthusiastic support of the teachers union.

Last spring, 53 schools designed programs detailing how they would make decisions normally handed down from a central or regional office, concerning such things as budget, curriculum and schedules.

Eighteen elementary schools, 10 middle or junior schools, four high schools and one adult education center were chosen to participate in the four-year program that began this school year.

"The people that are the closest to making the decisions as to what needs to be done to educate the kids — we're talking about the teachers — are actively involved in that process," says Elliott Berman, principal of Southwood Junior High.

The concept of teachers committees participating is revolutionary, according to Pat Tornillo, executive vice president of the teachers union.

It's put Dade County at the cutting edge of educational reform, says Joseph A. Fernandez, superintendent of schools.

"People across the country are looking on in amazement," Berman said recently, just before he left for Acapulco, Mexico, with three other Dade educators to discuss what's happening here.

Dade officials have been invited to cities across the United States to explain the program, and interest has been expressed from as far away as Japan, says Lynn Shenkman, a spokeswoman for Dade Schools. Educators from elsewhere also come to Dade to see the innovations, she says.

"We have a lot of people that come in and marvel," says Larry Feldman, principal of Palmetto Elementary School.

Feldman says that since the program was implemented enrollment has jumped from 360 to 480, volunteers have increased and businesses are proposing school projects.

Palmetto, which was 25th in attendance among Dade's 178 elementary schools, moved up to first place with 97.4 percent average daily attendance record.

Since parents had expressed dissatisfaction with the school's Spanish program, the committees proposed hiring teachers from Berlitz language school, one of the more widely publicized changes in Dade.

Teachers also decided it would be better to spend money on aides rather than a part-time assistant principal. But the most important change, members of a five-person steering committee unanimously agree, is something they call "flip-flopping."

Under the scheduling innovation, classes are divided into thirds, twice a day. One third might go to music class and another third to library. The classroom teacher then gets to teach basic skills to a very small group of children.

"We're able to really work with them and give them the individual help they need," says Bobbie Z. Davis, a fourth-grade teacher on the steering committee.

"When we're flip-flopping, we don't have discipline problems," says Mercides Hunter, the school's union steward who chairs the steering committee and teaches third grade.

Carole Wiener, who chairs the school's scheduling and curriculum committee, praises the flip-flop for another reason: It enables her to teach "Social Studies Through Art," a specialized class she developed under school-based management.

The changes initiated by teachers have varied widely from school to school.

At Mrs. Lentin's school, a common dismissal time was adopted for all grades for the safety of younger children who previously had to wait for older brothers or sisters to get out of school.

In Berman's school, teachers outlined major objectives for the school year, including closing the minority achievement gap, infusing critical thinking throughout the curriculum, increasing teacher expectations, encouraging handicapped students to stay in school and improving standardized test scores.

In Bunche Park Elementary School in Opa-locka, mildly handicapped students now have a housekeeping lab to learn how to take care of themselves and elaborate report cards come out every six weeks instead of every nine weeks.

Charles Hadley Elementary in western Dade County came up with a new way of hiring good teachers: Let teachers themselves do the hiring.

"Our current teachers interview prospective teachers," says Hadley Principal Menia Stone. "Oooh, they're tough. They ask questions I wouldn't dare ask."

Six new teachers have been hired so far and Stone has not gone against her teachers' recommendations once.

Hadley is also offering sixth-graders two elective courses on Friday afternoons.

'Ultimate' tourist gets around, has T-shirts to prove it

By RICK SMITH

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Not to brag, but I may be the Ultimate Texas Tourist.

I have visited every Snake Farm, Wooden Bowl Factory and Wonder Cavern from here to Terlingua. Where, of course, I witnessed not one, but two World's Championship Chili Cookoffs.

Lest you doubt that anyone could be so well-traveled, let me hasten to add that I have the T-shirts to prove it.

I have bought souvenir shirts at Kerrville Folk festivals, at New Braunfels Wurstfests, at Luling Watermelon Thumps, at San Angelo Armadillo Races.

And, of course, there are The Pictures.

I have had my picture snapped as I crouched, apeman style, in front of the post office at Tarzan, Texas.

My four-hour slide show makes for a truly unforgettable evening.

All the time, people ask me, "Rick, you've seen so much. You've been so many places. What do you recommend?"

Well, of course, there's Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo. Visit in the fall when the biting flies aren't so bad.

Try to 15-minute train ride on the Canyon's Sad Monkey railroad. I especially like the part when the engineer turns off the train and invites people to shout at the Echo Cliff. Which, much to the disgust of the engineer, no one ever does.

I don't like the part of the Caverns of Sonora tour when the guide cuts off all the lights at the bottom of the cave.

"Heh, hed, heh. Ever seen such total darkness?" he asks.

"Heh, heh, heh, Ever seen a terrified cave tourist mug a guide for his flashlight?" I've always wanted to reply.

I suppose there are some places you should visit just to say that you have been there?

— The Alamo, naturally.

— Battleship Texas, once.

— Luckenbach. Any day but Wednesday (when the town closes).

"My four-hour slide show makes for a truly unforgettable evening."

— Ultimate Texas Tourist

— The State Capitol Building. (Look for the crack on the rotunda floor. Legend has it the crack was created when someone jumped from the topmost balcony. This isn't true, but it makes for a good legend.)

If you want to really impress your stay-at-home friends, tell them you have visited:

— The exact geographic center of Texas. The state has built a little observation platform-roadside park on The Spot, which is near the town of Mercury. Mercury isn't shown on my new roadmap, but it used to be about midway between Brady and Brownwood on U.S. 377.

— Fort McKavett, the most out-of-the-way state park in Texas. Located between Eldorado and Menard, the town of Fort McKavett was once famous for its goat canning factory. Canned goat meat — as you may have noticed — never really caught on, like, say canned tuna or SPAM did, and progress passed Fort McKavett by.

— Literary types can impress friends with reports of Archer ("The Last Picture Show") City, or visits to the remains of the "Giant" mansion (Nothing there but a few telephone poles, last time I checked), near Marfa.

I know what you're thinking. "Is there anything this guy hasn't seen or done?"

Frankly, yes.

I've never visited the Railroad and Pioneer Museum in Temple.

Never attended the Cuero Turkey Trot.

Never seen the mule monument in Muleshoe.

I'm not even sure where the Popeye spinach shrine is located. South Texas, I think.

And never, never — sad to say — have I so much as set foot in the Gov. Hogg Shrine State Historical park in Quitman.

So much Texas still to see.

So many T-shirts yet to buy.

New York, Florida most often visited by tourists, survey shows

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Americans decide to see their country, New York and Florida apparently come first.

The Empire State's city life and placid mountains, and Florida's beaches and tourist attractions have helped boost those states to most visited in the nation, a study shows.

Some 63 percent of all Americans have either visited or lived in New York, the same figure as for Florida, reports Timothy Q. Rounds in the May edition of American Demographics magazine.

Indeed, the Sunshine State and New York were the only states to have attracted more than three-fifths of all Americans, reported Rounds, senior vice president of Market Facts Inc., of Chicago.

Pennsylvania and Illinois were close behind, each with 59 percent of Americans having been there, Rounds said. California followed at 57 percent.

At the other end of the scale, only 7 percent of Americans have been north to Alaska: about the same share as have been to Japan.

Hawaii also ranked low, at 22 percent, a reflection of the distance that must be traveled to reach the nation's two newest states, Rounds found.

His report was based on a survey of 3,148 people, asking them which states they had ever lived in or visited. The margin of error varies slightly by the percentage of responses, but is about 1.4 percent, Rounds said. American Demographics, published by Dow Jones & Company, specializes in population issues.

The aim was to find out how much Americans have traveled, he said.

Only 1 percent have never left their home state, and about that many have been in all 50 states, Rounds found.

Only 11 states have been lived in or visited by more than half of the population, he reported.

Besides the top five, those include Ohio, Georgia, Virginia, Tennessee, Texas and Indiana.

Rounds also asked about travel overseas, and found that Canada would have ranked 12th on the list, having been visited by 49 percent of U.S. residents — the same as Kentucky and New Jersey.

Mexico was the second most popular foreign destination at 34 percent, the same share as has visited Utah.

That was followed by Germany, 17 percent; Great Britain and France, 15 percent each; Italy, 12 percent and Japan, 7 percent.

The combination of high population and tourism boosted states to the top of the list, Rounds commented in a telephone interview.

Florida likely benefits from the many tourists, he noted. That's also a factor for New York, but in addition millions more people have lived there at one time or another. Conventions and business trips also boost several states.

The average American adult has visited 20 states, Rounds said, ranging from 24 states for those aged 60 and over to 14 states for those under 25.

Men averaged 21 states, women 20, he found. The more education and higher income people had, the more states they had visited.

Here is a rundown of the percentage of the U.S. population that has visited each state:

Nomination locked up, Bush looks to election

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush today grasped the prize he lost eight years ago to Ronald Reagan and began turning his attention to the general election now that he has clinched the delegates needed to win the Republican presidential nomination.

The vice president, who stood virtually alone after his five rivals for the nomination folded or froze their campaigns, coasted to a mathematical victory in the Republican contest Tuesday with a final push from the voters of Pennsylvania.

"I'm very pleased the nomination appears to be decided on our side," Bush said Tuesday during a campaign stop in Cincinnati before the votes were counted in Pennsylvania. "I'm glad we're almost getting down to the main event here."

Bush, who won the Pennsylvania GOP primary with 79 percent of the vote, early today surpassed the 1,139 delegates needed to win the party's presidential nomination, according to The Associated Press delegate count.

At the top of his agenda was a morning meeting with President Reagan, who planned to congratulate him and discuss plans for the coming campaign, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

But already, Bush was beginning to focus on the fall election. He took the opportunity Tuesday to attack Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis, saying the Massachusetts governor lacks the experience needed to handle foreign policy.

"That will be a major issue in the fall," Bush said.

What may not be an issue is charisma, with Bush and Dukakis both battling an image of being lackluster campaigners.

"What's wrong with being a boring kind of guy?" Bush said. "Running for president is serious business." Anyway, he added, "I kind of think I'm a scintillating type of fellow."

Bush entered the Republican race as the party's front-runner and got off to a shaky start with a third-place finish in the Iowa caucuses in February. He bounced back with a victory eight days later in the New Hampshire primary.

All through the campaign, Bush managed to stay on top of the race for national convention delegates, despite a strong early challenge by Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

Bush turned the nomination battle into a rout by sweeping his party's 16 Super Tuesday primaries on March 8.

Clinching the delegates prompted Bush to acknowledge he had won the nomination with the GOP convention in New Orleans still four months distant and with former TV evangelist Pat Robertson still offering token resistance.

Bush plans to summon Republican governors and experts on foreign policy and economics for a week-long session in June at his home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Dukakis to adopt two-track race strategy

By DAVID ESPO
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential front-runner Michael Dukakis, another landslide behind him, will now turn his campaign to a two-track strategy of running in primaries while focusing attention on his general election battle against George Bush.

Dukakis

He intends to spend some time campaigning in Texas during May, even though the primary was held there in March. The state will be a critical one to his election chances in the fall.

And he is considering a commencement address at a predominantly black college as a way of beginning to expand his meager support among Jesse Jackson's black constituency, whose voters he needs to be elected in the fall.

An Analysis

A trip or two to Washington is also likely next month so Dukakis can be seen conferring with Democratic leaders of Congress, just as Vice President George Bush intends to summon Republican experts to his home in Kennebunkport, Maine during June.

Bush has been running this sort of two-in-one campaign ever since he routed his Republican rivals more than a month ago. By winning the final few delegates needed to mathematically clinch his own nomination, he is free to pick up President Reagan's formal blessing — the most coveted Republican endorsement of all.

Even before the votes were counted in Pennsylvania Tuesday night, Bush had begun stirring his anti-Democratic rhetoric with an anti-Dukakis elixir. The vice president said the Democratic front-runner lacks foreign policy experience.

"That will be a major issue in the fall," said the former CIA director, U.N. ambassador and head of the U.S. delegation to the People's Republic of China.

He added, in an interview with the Washington Post, "The country does not want to move left. They do not want to go back to the malaise days of Jimmy Carter." So long as it works, Republicans enjoy trotting out the former president as a campaign whipping boy. Never mind that Dukakis has no known relationship to Carter.

Bush's campaign manager Lee Atwater, more pungent than his boss, summarizes the Republican campaign message with a single well-turned phrase. Americans, he says, don't want a "Northern-fried Jimmy Carter."

Dukakis, whose caution is legendary, publicly resists any attempt by Bush or anyone else to portray him as what he is — the prohibitive favorite to gain the Democratic nomination. Most probably on the first ballot at a unified convention.

In the hour of his Pennsylvania landslide — more lopsided than the one accorded him at home in the Massachusetts primary — he pointed out that Walter Mondale stumbled four years ago after winning primaries in New York and Pennsylvania.

But for all the public disclaimers, he and his aides have begun to pencil in a schedule for the month of May designed to appeal to a nationwide audience rather than a single-state primary constituency.

In an Associated Press interview last week, he worked to blunt Bush's foreign policy offensive by resurrecting last winter's rhetoric about a "failed and illegal" Reagan administration policy in Central America, as well as criticizing the Iran-Contra affair and policy in South Africa.

The Massachusetts governor also is expected to speaking about education and the environment, two areas in which Bush has sought gingerly to set himself apart from the Reagan record.

Dukakis also intends to begin fundraising for the Democratic party nationally and the state parties in the coming weeks.

Dukakis begins that phase of his campaign after next week's primaries.

Prosecutor seeks to limit access to secret documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is trying to limit the access of two Iran-Contra case defendants to the most sensitive government documents gathered during his investigation.

Under a proposal that drew a sharp defense protest Tuesday, lawyers for arms dealers Albert Hakim and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord would have to obtain court permission before showing "particularly sensitive information" to their clients.

The proposed restrictions would not apply to the other two defendants charged with conspiring to illegally divert U.S.-Iran arms sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Fired National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and former national security adviser John M. Poindexter were privy to the nation's most closely guarded intelligence and military secrets before they left the White House in November 1986.

They presumably saw or generated much of the material being reviewed by an interagency task force before it is turned over to the defense.

But Hakim, an Iranian-born U.S. citizen, never had access to classified government documents. Secord, his former business partner, no longer has the security clearances issued when he was a top-ranking Pentagon official.

Hakim and Secord brokered the U.S.-Iran arms sales through Swiss comopanies that also were used to funnel money to the Contras.

All four defendants were scheduled to appear today for a pre-trial hearing in U.S. District Court.

Hakim's attorney, N. Richard Janis, claimed in court papers that the proposed procedures "directly contravene" U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell's order granting all the defendants access to classified documents being compiled by Walsh.

Gesell ordered Walsh to give the defense 300,000 pages of classified documents to enable the lawyers to determine if the material would help their cases.

The interagency task force is reviewing the documents to determine what sensitive secrets they contain.

Walsh said these documents contain secrets that, if released, could compromise U.S. intelligence sources, sensitive U.S. military plans and foreign policy initiatives. Their release might also jeopardize the lives of hostages being held in the Middle East, according to court papers.

Reagan resists acid rain controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is unlikely in its remaining months to reach agreement with Canada on a plan to reduce acid rain pollution, according to a senior U.S. official planning today's White House visit by Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Mulroney, who has expressed disappointment with U.S. inaction on cutting chemical emissions that damage forests and lakes in Canada, discusses the issue with President Reagan and then goes to Capitol Hill for a speech and talks on trade and other issues.

Both administrations have been lobbying for a U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement designed to further stimulate what is already the world's biggest bilateral trade relationship.

Last spring, Reagan pledged during a trip to Canada to negotiate a treaty on acid rain, but the senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday that the two sides are divided on what should be done.

"Where we are is an agreement to disagree," the official said.

Asked if he felt the United States and Canada would be able to reach an accord by Jan. 20, when the Reagan administration leaves office, the official said: "No, I don't. It is a difference in approach."

Canada wants the United States to set specific targets and timetables for the reduction of emissions causing acid rain. The U.S. official insisted that scientists have not yet discovered a way to judge the success of such an effort.

"If you are going to put a lot of money into something, you had better make sure you have the right technology," the official said. "You had better know there is a direct relationship between what you are doing and where the acid deposition is coming from."

Asked if the Reagan administration is concerned about the cost of a cleanup, the official said, "It is too dear if you are using the wrong technologies and when you get all done you haven't solved the Canada problem. People are just simply very reluctant to say, 'Here we go full tilt,' and when you get done you haven't solved the problem as it addresses itself in the U.S.-Canadian relationship."

The Reagan administration has generally adopted the line that more research is needed. Northeastern states, which like Canada have noticed damage to their forests and lakes, have sided with their northern neighbor in calling for tough limits on pollutants from coal-burning plants and other sources of acid-causing emissions.

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are suing the Environmental Protection Agency, seeking new emission controls similar to those sought by Canada.

In arguments Tuesday before a federal appeals court in Washington, Justice Department lawyer Michael McCord argued that the government has no responsibility to take such action.

The administration official said Reagan remains committed to a $5 billion, multiyear program to identify new technologies that might help combat the problem. Reagan's pledge to reach an agreement with Canada on the overall issue, the official said, did not include a commitment to establish timetables and targets for a cleanup.

Instead, the official said, Reagan agreed to "try to find a bilateral accord that moved us ahead a little, but we haven't been able to."

Administration, police agree on plastic gun ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — After negotiations that excluded the National Rifle Association and rival gun-control groups, the Reagan administration and police organizations have agreed to a compromise boosting chances for a ban on undetectable plastic guns.

Although differences over plastic gun legislation have triggered a new and ferocious gun-control fight in Congress, sponsors of rival bills said Tuesday's breakthrough could be a unifying force for lawmakers on all sides.

Police organizations and gun-control advocates have insisted that a minimum amount of metal be required in a gun to ensure detection by the magnetometers used in airport and building security systems.

The NRA has insisted that there should be no government-established metal standard, only a general requirement that any gun be detectable by existing equipment.

The compromise takes the law enforcement approach, and sets a minimum metallic standard.

Joseph A. Morris, director of the Justice Department's office of liaison, confirmed the agreement and said he hoped "everyone can claim victory."

Despite these optimistic comments, however, the general approach adopted in the compromise has been attacked bitterly in past NRA statements as an attempt to take guns from law-abiding citizens.

NRA officials could not be reached for comment Tuesday on whether they would support the compromise. But Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who at first publicly backed the NRA's legislative position, now is committed to the compromise, Morris said.

The differences in the rival bills have never been insurmountable, but they became magnified once the plastic gun issue became the vehicle for the latest debate over whether the government should control handguns.

Almost lost in the bitter struggle was that everyone embroiled in the dispute expressed the same goal: making sure potential terrorist weapons of the future will never be smuggled onto airplanes or buildings with security requirements. Plastic guns are not yet in production in this country, but there is general agreement the technology exists.

The gun control and police groups have argued that the NRA approach would cause long delays in airports. They contended that without a minimum metal requirement for the gun, magnetometers must be used at settings so sensitive that they would constantly trigger alarms.

The NRA has said that the minimum standards established in legislation would have banned a number of small metal handguns now manufactured, and called one particular measure "the first federal gun ban bill in America."

In a fund-raising letter to its supporters just this month, the NRA said that bills with minimum metallic standards would "grant unlimited power to government bureaucrats to ban millions more of your guns."

However, those comments addressed bills with higher metal requirements than the compromise between the administration and a coalition of 11 police groups — the Law Enforcement Steering Committee.

Morris said no currently made gun would be banned under the compromise language. The key provision would require that guns have enough metal to trigger an alarm set to pick up 3.7 ounces of stainless steel.

Airlines report few problems by smoking ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first week of the first-ever ban on smoking aboard commercial jetliners, the airlines report few sparks from the traveling public and say smokers seem to have accepted the new curbs.

While many smokers have groused about the rule, they have made no attempt to challenge it and have prompted no major incidents, according to airline officials and flight attendants.

"So far, we've heard that it's working well," said Cindy Yeast, a spokeswoman for the Association of Flight Attendants, which has more than 21,000 members at many of the major carriers.

At Northwest Airlines where the ban went beyond government requirements and includes all domestic flights except those to Hawaii, officials said they anticipated some discord but were pleased to find none.

"We didn't have a single incident where we've even had to chide anybody...We anticipated more of a problem than there was," said Northwest spokesman Bob Gibbons.

Spokesmen for a half-dozen other air carriers also said they were aware of no incidents stemming from the smoking ban on flights of two hours or less, which went into effect Saturday.

The regulation carries a penalty of up to $1,000 for anyone violating the ban and up to $2,000 if a smoker tampers with a smoke alarm and lights up in an aircraft lavatory.

Leslie Roland, a spokeswoman for the Air Transport Association, the airlines' trade group, attributed the smooth introduction of the restrictions to advance warning given passengers. She also said introduction of the rule was made easier because it came on a weekend when air travel generally is less hectic.

"Frankly, I was surprised," she said.

Mecham trial costs state $1.06 million

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It cost Arizona taxpayers $1.06 million to remove former Gov. Evan Mecham from office, according to final figures released by the state Legislature.

The figure will go higher if the Senate ends up paying about $200,000 for Mecham's defense lawyers. The Senate has agreed to pay the fees, but the state attorney general must decide if that is permissible.

Excluding fees for the defense lawyers, the Senate's share of the bill came to $235,649.36. The House, which began investigating Mecham in October, spent $824,229.28, according to the figures released Tuesday.

However, the cost of removing Mecham from office was considerably less than the cost of holding a recall election, Secretary of State Jim Shumway said.

He said the election, which was cancelled by the state Supreme Court following Mecham's ouster, would have cost at least $2 million.

Agency tries to keep charm

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — An agency trying to preserve the character of Massachusetts' rural towns has published a guide on how those municipalities can retain their charm.

The 183-page manual, titled "Dealing with Change in the Connecticut River Valley," was unveiled Tuesday by the Center for Rural Massachusetts and is designed to help selectmen and planners corral development that can destroy the very characteristics that make rural areas desirable.

Anthony Yaro, the center's director and an author of the manual, pointed to Connecticut as an example of what not to do. "That whole state is close to turning into one large commuter suburb," he said.

The Legislature created the Center for Rural Massachusetts in 1985 when lawmakers became aware of farmland's vulnerability to development.

Dole criticizes reporters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole says reporters covering the 1988 presidential election treat Democrats better than Republicans because the journalists "see the world through liberal-colored glasses."

The Kansas Republican said in a floor speech Tuesday that "there has long been a double standard when it comes to political coverage."

"Why the double standard? Well, look at the newsrooms," Dole said. "Let's face it, they tend to be liberal. In all honesty, how many Republicans are out there covering the candidates? Or Congress?"

Dole, who has dropped out of the race for the GOP presidential nomination, said reporters "try to be objective. But try as they do, they just can't help but see the world through liberal-colored glasses."

City posts 'no bills' signs

NEW YORK (AP) — A knock on the door in the middle of the evening. Then, the dreaded words: "Sanitation police."

New York may have trouble educating its children or maintaining its bridges, but when the city says "Post No Bills," it means it.

The Sanitation Department has embarked on a campaign to enforce a law against placing posters on public property, including "any gutter, flagstone, tree, lamppost, awning post, telegraph pole, telephone pole, public utility pole, garbage bin, bus shelter, elevated train structure, highway fence, barrel, box or hydrant."

During the past six months, the city has issued more than 15,000 summonses and collected about $142,000 in fines, according to Vito Turso, Sanitation Department spokesman.

Group subpoenas notes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran-Contra defendant Oliver North still controls nearly 3,000 pages of top-secret notes he made while working at the White House and has never fully shown them to federal investigators, says a senator who wants the papers for an international drug trafficking probe.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said the notes which North made during the years he oversaw a clandestine resupply effort for Nicaragua's Contra rebels remain in the possession of North's lawyer, Brendan Sullivan. Kerry said they have been shared with authorities only after North and Sullivan blacked out large portions deemed by them to be secret or irrelevant.

Kerry said Tuesday that his congressional panel is subpoenaing the notes taken by North, the former National Security Council aide who is under indictment on conspiracy charges growing out of the Iran-Contra scandal.

Shuttle launch delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Unexpected delays in assembling Discovery's solid fuel booster rockets probably will hold up the first post-Challenger shuttle mission at least 10 days beyond the planned liftoff, NASA says.

The space agency will not officially make a decision on a new date until after the assembly process is further along, said Arnold D. Aldrich, shuttle program director.

Panel says Accutane should remain on market

WASHINGTON (AP) — A powerful drug that can cure severe acne but can harm unborn children should remain on the market, but with additional warnings and new packaging to discourage use by pregnant women, a government panel says.

Since its introduction in 1982, the drug Accutane has carried specific and explicit warnings that there is a high risk it will cause birth defects if taken during pregnancy.

Those warnings have been strengthened in intervening years, but Food and Drug Administration officials are concerned too many women — and perhaps their doctors — are ignoring them.

Against that backdrop, an advisory panel convened by the FDA on Tuesday concluded that the medication — the only one that cures the severe, scarring type of acne it is intended to treat — is too valuable to deny to thousands of patients solely to provide added protection to those who would abuse it.

Moreover, panel members noted that the drug, marketed by Roche Laboratories of New Jersey, also is available in 40 other countries and probably would find its way onto a U.S. black market if made illegal.

After concluding unanimously that the benefit of the drug outweighed the risk of its misuse, the panel recommended a number of steps to strengthen the warnings to doctors and patients against its use by women who are pregnant or at risk of becoming pregnant.

One of those recommendations embraced a proposal by Roche to sell Accutane only in a so-called blister package in which explicit patient warnings — including a sketch of a pregnant woman with a red X drawn through it — would be sealed at the factory to make sure the patient would see them.

The panel also recommended that the FDA try to find a legal way to partially restrict distribution, perhaps by saying only dermatologists could prescribe it and that two doctors would have to agree that the patient needed the drug and would not become pregnant during the four to five months the drug is typically taken.

Although the agency frequently follows the advice of the 26 advisory panels it maintains to review new drug applications and monitor existing drug use, those recommendations are not binding.

FDA Commissioner Frank Young told the panel the agency has not found legal justification in the past for partial restriction of any drug approved for sale, but he promised to ask lawyers to restudy the question.

Under federal law, regulation of the practice of medicine is left exclusively to the states and the long-standing legal interpretation is that prescribing drugs is part of the practice of medicine.

U.S. plan may back away from Noriega ouster

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is trying to negotiate an agreement under which Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega would retain power for a time rather than go into immediate exile, a published report says.

The Washington Post reported today the compromise plan was presented last week to the military strongman by Michael Kozak, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

The report, which cites unidentified U.S. and diplomatic sources, says the plan backs away from administration demands for Noriega's immediate ouster as commander of the Panamanian Defense Forces.

State Department spokeswoman Ellen Bork had no comment on Kozak's trip to Panama, but said there has been no change in the administration's position that "Noriega has to step down and leave Panama unconditionally" at once. Kozak did not return telephone calls to his residence late Tuesday.

In another development, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday the administration was considering some exemptions to the order prohibiting payments to Panama by U.S. citizens and companies operating there.

The spokesman, in remarks to reporters, described them as "hardship case exemptions" and denied the administration was considering a sweeping reduction of its sanctions directed against Noriega.

As part of its attempt to oust Noriega, the administration cut off all economic and military aid last year. Earlier this year, it withheld fees for use of the Panama Canal and barred U.S. banks from transferring fees to the Noriega regime.

Noriega is under indictment in Florida on drug-trafficking charges.

Pointing fingers won't stop drugs

California Sen. Pete Wilson's attempt to make Mexico the scapegoat for America's debilitating drug epidemic may play well with the voters. But it threatens to divert attention from the real source of the problem.

At Sen. Wilson's urging, the Senate has voted to impose mandatory sanctions against Mexico for failing to cooperate as fully as possible in the mounting struggle against illegal drug trafficking. The action is largely symbolic, inasmuch as Mexico receives scant U.S. aid, apart from a $14.5 million program to help eradicate drug crops and interdict shipments to the United States.

Cutting off this assistance would defy common sense. That's why such an eventuality is extremely unlikely, despite the Senate vote. The House shows no inclination to join in the Senate's Mexico-bashing, and President Reagan has prudently pledged to veto the Wilson resolution if it reaches his desk. That's one veto we certainly could embrace.

In its election-year zeal to get tough on the alarming rate of drug abuse in this country, the Senate has lost a sense of proportion regarding the causes of the problem and how to address it.

It is true, of course, that the highly profitable trade in illicit narcotics has penetrated nearly all levels of Mexican society, including many local, state and federal officials. Bribery and other forms of corruption are endemic, making Mexico a safe haven in many cases for wealthy druglords.

At the same time, however, Mexico City has adopted a genuine program to crack down on the drug industry and to interdict shipments of cocaine, marijuana and other substances bound for the United States. During the last decade, some 400 Mexican soldiers and law-enforcement agents have been killed battling drug dealers.

Granted, there are other steps that Mexico ought to be taking, such as permitting the hot pursuit of drug smugglers across the border; at present, American drug agents must give up the chase before entering Mexico. But lashing out at the Mexican government, as the Senate has done, is likelier to hamper U.S.-Mexican cooperation than improve it.

More importantly, pinning the blame on Mexico loses sight of the fact that the fundamental cause of the drug scourge is the rampant demand on this side of the border. Even the most concerted international campaign to destroy crops and interdict supplies will yield only modest results as long as Americans continue to create an expanding market.

Actually, the most effective strategy for curbing the narcotics epidemic is to place heavier emphasis on eliminating the demand — through education, rehabilitation, stiff penalties for illegal drug use and other means. Exploiting the current political mood by pointing the finger at Mexico is simply counterproductive in the long run.

Remember 'Fix Wadley'

For years and years there has been an outcry to "Fix Wadley Street!...fix the potholes...fix the drainage...fix the flooding," and so on.

But don't bring any construction equipment, don't disrupt traffic, don't do this, don't do that; just fix the street! But you can't have it both ways. There have to be some distruptions.

It seems as many as possible advance preparations were made prior to the start of construction. But only a few days after the barricades were erected, there was a story on the radio that "Wadley Avenue businessmen" were getting an injuction ready to stop the work. What gives?

Then on the front page of a Sunday Midland Reporter-Telegram is a gloomy story and picture. And just a day or two before, my wife and I and three other couples had planned a Sunday luncheon at El Chico restaurant, but decided that if things are as bad on Wadley Avenue as the paper says, we should have our luncheon somewhere else, and changed our plans. We went to Harrigan's. And along with us went close to $80 in business.

No doubt Harrigan's, Bennigan's, Cattleman's, Chilis, and many other restaurants look forward to the next outcry of how bad things are on Wadley that Mr. Sharifi makes.

Instead of creating so much negative publicity, perhaps Mr. Sharifi could better spend his time in observing, rather than reporting the presence of water sprinkler runoff to city officials so steps could be taken to keep the construction on schedule.

In reading the article that Rick Brown put together, the idea is implied that the city is doing the work. Isn't the work contracted out to a private construction company? If so, that misconception should be corrected, and the blame for slowness (?) removed from the city's responsibility. And with a completion date still about four and a half months ahead, how can someone refer to the project as going "so slow."

Let's recognize the good job Mr. Hansen, the contractors, the Street Commission and other City of Midland departments are doing on this project that's been talked about for years and years and is finally in motion!

Incidentally, if Mr. Sharifi feels the few blocks of Wadley now under construction are such a disruption, he ought to take a look at the entire south end of Lubbock where roads are being worked on, or the miles and miles of San Antonio roads being rebuilt. Now there is a real mess!

MISD bonds imperative

Passage of the bond issue on May 7th is imperative if the Midland Independent School District is to be in compliance with House Bill 72. Please know that waivers for class size will no longer be granted by the Texas Education Agency, so with or without new classrooms, MISD will have to comply with the 22 student to 1 teacher ratio through the fourth grade.

Defeat could entail the purchasing of additional portable buildings (costly and unsightly), the possibility of renting classroom space in churches and other alternatives that would just not be conducive to quality education. The need for additional classroom space is neither a luxury nor is it frivolous — it is a necessity! Passage of this bond will not increase taxes — it will have a profound positive and long term effect on the quality of education for the youth in Midland. On behalf of the Midland Educators Association, I urge you to vote yes for the passage of the MISD bond issue.

Space park saga tale of Washington

WASHINGTON — The White House came within a hair of endorsing a $700 million government lease on a private "industrial park" in space, even though there was no competitive bidding on the project and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration wasn't sold on the idea.

Jack Anderson

The saga of the space park is a classic Washington tale of influence and power. This time, those with power say they went out of their way not to influence anyone. But their names may have been enough to put a shine on the deal anyway.

Space Industries Inc., a young Houston firm, orchestrated the political game for its proposed orbiting industrial park. The company hoped to capitalize on the Reagan administration's plan to privatize much of what the government planned to do in space, and planned to rent parts of the facility to private companies that needed to test products and theories in space.

NASA agreed to launch the industrial space facility with the Space Shuttle. But Space Industries needed more than that from the government. The small company needed a big financial backer, such as the U.S. government, as its prime tenant in space.

The Houston firm took its proposal for a $700 million, five-year government lease to the powerful White House Economic Policy Council, chaired by Treasury Secretary James Baker. Space Industries' legal counsel was the Houston firm of Andrews & Kurth, which just happened to be Baker's old law firm.

Space Industries' financial consultant was Shearson, Lehman, Hutton Inc., which just happened to have a managing director of investment named Richard Darman. And Darman just happened to be the former deputy secretary of the treasury under Baker.

On the surface, it looked like Space Industries had more than just a good proposal. It had good friends.

Both Baker and Darman took pains to stay out of the negotiations. Baker removed himself from any EPC debates on the Space Industries proposal. Darman said he advised Space Industries on the best way to sell its idea in Washington, but never lobbied Baker or anyone else. "I never contacted James Baker on that or any other issue since I left the treasury," Darman told our associate Jim Lynch.

(A Space Industries spokeswoman said that the company was represented in the negotiations by its own staffers, including Assistant Vice President Joseph Allen, a former shuttle astronaut.)

Whatever the intentions of Baker and Darman, their names weighed heavily when the project was considered, according to a top National Security Council source. The source told us, "We thought it was incestuous." He felt that the tie to Baker and Darman was "the only reason the project was moving ahead so quickly."

The source added that it was "unusual" that the proposal went to the EPC in the first place. An inter-agency group directed by the National Security Council normally handles space policy. In this case, the fact that Space Industries' proposal fit Reagan's space commercialization initiative allowed the EPC to take charge.

Over at NASA, officials were getting nervous. They knew that the budget was tight, and they didn't want a hasty lease on a private satellite to get in the way of their own plans for a space station.

It was Dr. James Fletcher, head of NASA, who finally slammed on the brakes. Fletcher wrote Baker and the EPC a letter on New Year's Eve. He urged the EPC to give NASA time to evaluate the proposal.

Fletcher wrote he was "troubled" that the government wasn't getting competitive bids when there were many companies "seeking to establish a foothold in the commercial space area."

A NASA attorney had alerted Fletcher that the lease with Space Industries would violate the federal Competition in Contracting Act. The lawyer, Edward A. Frankle, said that was one of several "severe" legal barriers. And he told Fletcher that the $700 million price looked like "an arbitrary amount unrelated to the value received by the government."

Fletcher's letter ended what until then was a relatively smooth ride for Space Industries. Competitive bidding is now required, and other space firms have since expressed interest in submitting proposals.

The issue has spilled over into unpublicized congressional hearings on the industrial space facility. An appropriations hearing is scheduled on the matter for April 28.

Fletcher's intervention slowed the Space Industries' momentum in Congress, where effective lobbyists for the Houston firm had been busy. The lobbyists were buttressed by the presence of former NASA heavyweights now in the top management ranks of Space Industries.

Congress has reacted in contrary fashion. The harder the White House, through the EPC, pushed for the project, the more suspicious Congress became about it. "The White House grabbed a hold of the idea and jumped on it," said a congressional aide who sat through the hearings. Others explained that Reagan, in a last-ditch, lame-duck effort, is trying to turn as many government functions as he can over to private industry.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Terrorists are vermin, but they aren't stupid. In the latest hijacking, they taught the civilized world a new lesson. They can run like cockroaches from one country to another until their acts of barbarism are so diffused, no country will hold them accountable.

Child care's 'sleeper' issue for '88 election

WASHINGTON — The sleeper domestic issue in the 1988 campaign will be one that hits home hard: child care.

William Safire

Well over half of U.S. women with preschool or school-age children are at work, and many of the others would work if they could — which means that a wide-ranging approach to child care has become a top national priority.

"Even politicians whose main interest is putting welfare mothers to work," writes Li Schorr in "Within Our Reach," a new, must-read book for political activists, "have recognized that they cannot achieve their objectives without vastly expanded and improved arrangements for child care."

Although the federal government already sets a target of $7 billion a year in aid and tax credits, nobody disputes the growing need for more and better care. The issue is who will provide it and who will get it.

The Democratic answer, as usual, calls for more federal aid. Sen. Christopher Dodd's bill calls for $2.5 billion a year to start, aimed at the poor. The example always cited is Head Start, crown jewel of the War on Poverty. Jesse Jackson has already upped the ante in demands for more direct aid, and Michael Dukakis cites press clips about Massachusetts having "the nation's most comprehensive, state-supported day care system."

The Republican most alert to the changing needs of families is Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, who threatens to give conservatism a heart. His $375 million bill, derided by Democrats for not sufficiently busting the budget, is geared to local initiatives and private enterprise, and opens the system to children of the middle class.

The Hatch alternative also deals with the matter of control. He puts the establishment of standards and licenses with the states — a devolution of power always anathema to Democrats — and permits churches and religious schools to take an active part in the nation's child-care effort.

Control is important; well-meaning federal bureaucrats are already moving in on higher education and would like to dominate preschool care. Conservatives are not nutty to recall Lenin's boast: "Give us the child for eight years and it will be Bolshevist forever." Washington's control of preschool and after-school care might not produce little Gorbachevs, but it would not produce the diversity and individuality that are a democracy's greatest resource.

Other conservatives, however, are much too hung up on appearing to discourage mothers from staying home and taking care of their own kids. O.K., give everybody a new-baby tax credit and reassure non-working mothers that parental care is the best child care; but let us not deny that the great majority of working parents need child-care help now.

Liberals are mistaken to derogate widely aimed aid as "baby sitters for yuppies"; the mother who is a steelworker is no yuppie. By addressing the concerns of the two-worker family at the start, we can avoid the segregation of a new generation of the underclass.

Where is the Reagan administration on this? Late. William Bennett, the ordinarily gutsy secretary of education (and a possible vice president in a Bush administration), has shown a cautious interest in current congressional proposals but wants federal aid only for the poor.

The member of the president's Cabinet who has stepped into the vacuum is the new secretary of labor, Ann McLaughlin. She quickly assembled a data base, correctly characterized the coming battle as "a work- force issue" (not a welfare issue), and steered the internal policy dispute into Treasury Secretary James Baker's economic council.

The energized Department of Labor is now working overtime on a plan drawing upon, but not limited to, the Hatch approach. Ideas range from child-care vouchers to liability insurance guarantees; to a care-givers' corps, to incentives for companies and unions to develop more child care at the work site.

Worker-parents can be more productive workers and better parents when companies provide on-site day care. (Call it "child care"; days don't need care.) That is where the big boom in new facilities could begin right away, with local initiation and control, class-blind and race-blind. Scores of companies have taken the lead; if the Republicans can't encourage this job reward to become part of the corporate culture, who can?

Come to think of it, George Bush is a member of the Reagan team; where is he in this internal administration struggle?

Airline's flying on a wing — and a prayer!

Soloway came into the office and said he wanted to take out a full-page advertisement in the paper declaring his airline is the safest in the business.

Art Buchwald

I was reluctant to help him, as Soloway's airline, A Wing and a Prayer, had lost my luggage a month before and still hadn't found it.

Soloway was almost in tears. "Don't talk to me about lost luggage now. The Department of Transportation is investigating us and they say Wing and a Prayer is the most unsafe airline in the business."

"Is it true?"

"Well, our food isn't very good. But any well-traveled person knows it isn't safe to eat airline food."

"People who fly do like safe food," I commented. "You should have thought about that when you founded Wing and a Prayer."

"I didn't found Wing and a Prayer. I merged it with Shake & Roll, a roller coaster ride I owned at the Seven Flags Amusement Park. Roller coasters and planes are practically the same business. Now the DOT is out to get us because we keep canceling flights."

"That's just part of it. I think they're also mad because you won't refuel your planes."

"I'm just trying to save some money. Do you know in order to buy the company I had to sell junk bonds? Now I'm in a bind. I either have to pay the interest on the junk bonds or buy new tires."

"The word on the tarmac is that you can't afford to buy new airplanes."

"No one can buy new airplanes. Our craft are good for another 10 years. Ask the pilots."

"The pilots say you're the worst manager in the airline business."

"That's because they're the worst pilots."

"If they're the worst pilots, why are they flying your planes?"

"I'm not going to buy uniforms for an entire new crew. How much do you think I owe on Wing and a Prayer?" "A billion?" I guessed.

"You're not far off. Do you believe I can pay it off by sending half-empty planes to Toledo?"

"Probably not. But you could worry a little about people's luggage."

"I plan to as soon as the FAA gives me permission to fly with one less engine."

"That's your game plan?"

"You don't need four engines on a 747. Our aviation experts have assured me three will do the job every time."

"I'm not certain you're going to get that one through the government inspectors."

"That's why I wish to buy an ad. I want to take my case to the public."

"Is it true you're doubling your price on airline tickets this spring?"

"We had to do it to pay for all the free rides we gave people for flying with us this winter. We gave away so many bonus miles that we haven't booked one paying passenger for the next six months."

"Maybe that's why you don't have any money for baggage handlers."

"Look, I welcome this investigation. It will bring out the facts once and for all on how O'Hare Airport is sticking it to the little guy. This country is going to be a sorry place when the government starts to tell us what food to serve on an airplane and permits passengers to make a big deal about spending two or three hours on the runway."

South Koreans strip governing party of parliamentary majority

AP Laserphoto

Kim Dae-jung, right, leader of the opposition Party for Peace and Democracy, smiles today as he puts victory marks above the names of party nominees elected to the National Assembly Tuesday on a scoreboard in Seoul, South Korea.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Voters stunned the governing party in a national election by stripping it of a parliamentary majority for the first time in South Korea's 40-year history.

President Roh Tae-woo, who took office in February, said the big gains by opposition candidates in Tuesday's National Assembly races would make it difficult for him to govern.

Stock prices plunged to record lows after the upset. After election results were announced, the composite stock price index fell 24.58 points to 620.1. The previous record drop was 21.69 on Feb. 26.

Final returns released today showed that 164 candidates from three main opposition parties were assured of seats in the 299-member National Assembly. Roh's party won 125 seats, independents captured nine and one race still was undecided. Earlier returns, based in part on projections, had 166 opposition seats and and 123 governing party seats.

The previous National Assembly had 276 seats — 160 held by the governing party and 87 by the three main opposition parties.

The election was the first test of public confidence in the Roh government, which in December narrowly won the country's first direct presidential elections in 16 years.

Balloting was marred by violent demonstrations that left at least two people dead. Protesters backing opposition candidates marched in the streets, battled riot police and accused Roh forces of vote tampering. Scores of protesters were detained.

Roh said the election "has left many things for us to think deeply about, but I would humbly accept the outcome and do my best to fulfill my promise to the people."

Roh won the presidency with just 36 percent of the vote when the two main opposition leaders, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam, ran separately and split the anti-government vote in December.

Both Kims won seats in the National Assembly on Tuesday.

Kim Dae-jung's Party for Peace and Democracy emerged as the strongest opposition force with 70 seats. He said lawmakers should consider releasing all political prisoners and demand a probe into the bloody suppression of the 1980 Kwangju protest, in which 200 people died.

Officials of the governing party said it was considering ways to absorb or align with "some independent members or moderate opposition members."

"Rough sailing is expected in the National Assembly with the emergence of a strong opposition," said Park Sung-bum of the KBS state television network.

Under the nation's new constitution, the assembly has an expanded role in governing. It is now empowered to investigate state affairs and the president can no longer dissolve it.

Kim Young-sam's Reunification Democratic Party won 59 seats. The New Democratic Republican Party, a conservative group headed by former Prime Minister Kim Jong-pil, controls 35 seats.

Kim Dae-jung said the results showed that his party is best qualified to challenge Roh's administration. Kim, 62, was often imprisoned by past regimes for his political activity.

Walesa wants pressure on authorities during strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called today for nationwide pressure on authorities during a massive strike by steelworkers, and the government said unrest was spreading.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said the number of strikers at the Lenin steel mills outside Krakow grew to at least 2,000 since the strike began Tuesday. He said a bus drivers' strike in Bydgoszcz on Monday ignited demands for drivers' pay increases in other cities.

Ewa Kaberna, a Solidarity activist in Stalowa Wola in southeast Poland, announced a call for a strike at the start of the first shift Friday at the 18,000-worker heavy machinery plant there for pay increases of $50 a month.

In a statement issued in Gdansk, Walesa said: "Our union appeals to all living social forces...for the undertaking of united actions to put pressure on the authorities.

"At the moment, we need a new policy which would fully answer the questions worrying Polish families and which would restore society's...rights," he said. "Millions of people are waiting for restoration of the rights of their trade union, Solidarity."

The labor unrest appeared to be the most serious in Poland since the December 1981 martial-law crackdown suppressed the Solidarity independent labor federation, which remains banned although its leadership is still active.

Strikes over higher prices have a long tradition in postwar Poland and caused government shakeups in 1956, 1970 and 1980.

Saudis break ties with Iran; Blast rips airline office

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia announced it was breaking diplomatic relations with Tehran, and the Iranian government today said the Saudis acted under pressure from the United States.

In Kuwait, an explosion ripped through the office of Saudi Arabia's national airline today and injured one guard, witnesses and officials said. Kuwait often has blamed bomb attacks inside its territory on Iranian-backed saboteurs.

Saudi Arabia said Tuesday it decided to sever its ties with Iran because of a riot by Iranians in Mecca, a raid on the Saudi Embassy in Tehran and Iranian attacks on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf.

The government also ordered all Iranian diplomats to leave the kingdom within a week.

Tehran Radio, quoting a foreign ministry spokesman, said Saudi Arabia's "cooperation with America's conspiracies in the Persian Gulf and its help for the Zionist regime of Iraq" was a reason for cutting ties with Iran.

Earlier this month, the U.S. Navy attacked Iranian oil platforms and vessel in retaliation for the planting of a mine that damaged an American frigate and injured 10 sailors.

The radio said the Saudi decision also was designed to divert the attention of Moslems from Saudi "crimes" during last year's pilgrimage to Mecca.

Israeli troops kill two Arab rebels who attacked truck

JERUSALEM (AP) — Troops tracked down and killed two Arab guerrillas who attacked an Israeli truck with a hand grenade and wounded its driver today, Israel radio said.

It was the second day in a row Arab guerrillas from Lebanon have clashed with soldiers inside Israel. The new attack occurred about two miles from Tuesday's border clash, in which two Israeli soldiers and three Palestinian guerrillas were killed, military sources said.

It was not immediately clear if the guerrillas infiltrated Israel today or came with the group that entered from Lebanon Tuesday.

The army closed roads in northern Israel and ordered women and children in the dozen settlements north of Kiryat Shmona to stay indoors while troops searched for the guerrillas by foot and helicopter, police in northern Israel said.

The guerrillas evaded troops for three hours until they were discovered and killed in a nearby dry riverbed, said military sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The truck driver, Danny Dahan, was attacked at "Tank Junction," where a ruin of a Soviet tank used by the Syrians in the 1967 Middle East war stands as a memorial, the sources said.

After the truck attack, Israeli men from the settlements were ordered to take up arms and go to assigned guard posts, said Zvi Yuval, 37, from Kibbutz Senir, located about three miles south of the border. During the search he heard continuous gunfire, including shots from helicopters, Yuval said in a telephone interview.

"We fear there will be more attacks this summer. The vegetation is like a jungle," giving guerrillas places to hide, Yuval said.

It was the 12th penetration or infiltration attempt since Nov. 26, when a lone guerrilla landed a hang glider in northern Israel and killed six soldiers before he was shot to death himself.

Earlier in the day, a U.N. source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the the army fired artillery and flares early today near where the Israeli soldiers and guerrillas clashed Tuesday.

U.S. convoy sails into Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers sailed north in the Persian Gulf today in a journey postponed for a day because bad weather hampered mine-hunting operations, shipping sources said.

Three Kuwaiti tankers and a fourth U.S.-flagged ship were sighted off the United Arab Emirates coast at midmorning after passing through the Strait of Hormuz during the night. They were escorted by four U.S. Navy warships.

There were no reports of activity by Iran's navy or nearby missile batteries during the convoy's passage through the narrow entry at the gulf's southern end.

A U.S. Central Command spokesman confirmed the movement of the convoy, the 26th this year and the 48th since the operations began in July to provide Navy escort to Kuwaiti tankers flying the U.S. flag.

A Soviet military commander was quoted as saying that the presence of foreign fleets in the gulf "implies a dangerous possibility of turning the war into a wider regional conflict."

He was referring to the presence in the gulf of the United States and its Western allies.

The Kuwait daily al-Seyassah quoted Gen. Yuri Markivov as saying in an interview today that the Soviet Union has no intention to use its weapons in the gulf "because this would lead to the outbreak of a third world war."

Markivov said the Soviet Union has three warships in the gulf for escorting Soviet commercial ships.

"The Arabian Gulf region is not distant from our borders, hence we will not be aloof from this arena," he said. "Therefore, we have called from the start for ending the foreign military presence and the withdrawal of the U.S., British and French forces."

Shipping executives, who reported the U.S. convoy sighting on condition their names not be used, said it included the destroyers O'Brien and Merrill, the guided missile destroyer Joseph Strauss and the guided missile cruiser Wainwright.

All four ships took part in the Navy's April 18 strikes against Iranian oil platforms and ships in the gulf, in retaliation for the sowing of mines by Iran.

Comic strip character comes of age

SOUTH BEND, Ind . (AP) — Pssst. Hey, Sluggo. Nancy's got a cru on yo u, nyah, nyah, nyah!

Twenty years ago a taunt like that, and there would be knuckle sandwich all the way from Brooklyn.

But things have cha nged in the comic strip neighborhood Nancy and Slug go once shared with Aunt Fritzi and Rollo the Rich Kid.

Cartoonist Jerry Sc ott, a native of South Bend, has livened up the little g girl, given Sluggo mellow lessons, and sent meddlesome auntie and Rollo packing.

So a little springti ne romance is in order for the comic strip United Fe atures says it distributes to more than 500 newspapers.

"I have a week co ning up where Nancy's decided she's fallen in love with him," says Scott, who has drawn the enduring st rip for five years. "It sends a real panic through Sluggo."

The infatuation last s only a week. The girl may have changed, but she has n't lost her mind.

Nancy has aged onl y seven years since Ernie Bushmiller started a strip titled Fritzi Ritz nearly a half-century ago. He later introduced the little girl, along with tough guy Sluggo from Brooklyn and the smug but enviable Rollo.

The strip was immensely popular but changed little under Bushmiller. By the 1960s, Nancy was looking dated, Scott says.

"I think I've made the character a little more lovable looking," he said Monday during a visit from his Phoenix, Ariz., home. "I've shaved a few years off her age, squatted her down, rounded her out. She's a lot more fun to look at. She was pretty wooden and stiff."

Aunt Fritzi and Rollo have disappeared, victims of their own 1940s flavor, Scott says. Sluggo's no longer a bully, and the dem-dese-doze speech from his Brooklyn background is gone.

"He's mellowed out," Scott said. But he still has "a heart of gold and a mind of lead."

Nancy's been more her own woman without the sometimes nagging presence of Aunt Fritzi.

Entertainers reaching noncollectors

New York Times News Service

Famous entertainers are being employed by worldwide postal administrations and their philatelic agencies in their search for new avenues to reach millions of noncollectors.

The entertainers are not used as one might expect — in paid commercials or testimonials.

Rather, they are being increasingly chosen as subjects for stamp issues.

The most recent examples come from Ireland and the Federal Republic of Germany.

On April 7, Ireland honored a native son, the actor Barry Fitzgerald.

The Federal Republic of Germany used a popularity poll to select the subjects for four semi-postal stamps that were released April 14 for Buddy Holly, John Lennon, Jim Morrison and Elvis Presley.

The new Irish single celebrates the centennial of Barry Fitzgerald's birth in Dublin in 1888.

After appearances on the stage in England and the United States, Fitzgerald went to Hollywood in 1937 and began a long, successful career as a character actor.

He earned an Academy Award in his most popular role, as Father Fitzgibbon in "Going My Way."

The foursome selected for the Federal Republic of Germany set all share lasting worldwide fame as well as untimely deaths.

Buddy Holly rose to fame as the lead singer with the Crickets. He was born in 1936 and died at the age of 22 in an airplane crash while on tour.

John Lennon's career needs no repetition here.

He has been honored on stamp issues from other countries and will be again, no doubt.

Jim Morrison is better known to rock fans than to philatelists.

MISD board OKs hiring asbestos team

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

School district trustees gave approval Tuesday to the formation of a "Double-A" Team — a four-man group who will be hired to abate or get rid of asbestos in the district's buildings.

The new employees are needed, according to a memo from Midland Independent School District Plant Services Director Wilson Heidelberg, to comply with the federally mandated removal of asbestos fibers in the ceilings, insulation, floor tiles and bricks.

Heidelberg maintained in his request to school district trustees that "asbestos (removal) is relatively easy to contract, but very costly due to insurance and government regulations."

Costs are high because of the liability associated with removal. The inhalation of asbestos fibers has been linked with lung disease and lung cancer.

The cost of the school district's use of in-house employees to remove the asbestos is anywhere from 66-75 percent cheaper than what the outside contractors would charge, Heidelberg said.

The latest round of removal chores stems from a strict ruling made last year in the Environmental Protection Agency's Asbestos Hazard Emergency Removal Act (AHERA).

Under the terms of AHERA, school district officials must remove "friable" or crushable asbestos from ceiling and insulation locations as well as "non-friable" asbestos fibers often found in the binding materials of bricks, floor tiles and shingles in buildings.

The employees will be retained by the district until the asbestos is totally removed from any of the district's 41 buildings.

In other action at Tuesday's board meeting, school district officials presided over a mini-uproar concerning whether high school soccer should be an official U.I.L. (University Interscholastic League) sport.

Currently, varsity soccer is played on an intramural level at Midland and Lee high schools and is coached by Midland Soccer Association coaches.

A survey conducted recently by the two high school football coaches found little student interest in the sport becoming sanctioned by U.I.L., said MISD Athletic Director Gil Bartosh.

However, a MSA official said there was student interest and showed trustees a 63-signature student petition to back up his claim.

Linnie Donnelly, who has two children playing intramural soccer at Lee High School, told trustees the announcements at LHS alluding to the formation of a soccer team were made at inopportune times in the day when students couldn't respond.

Trustee Mike Conaway said today the estimated $50,000-$60,000 a U.I.L. soccer program would cost would not take away from other athletic programs' budgets.

Currently, no MISD monies are spent on soccer, he added. Board members agreed to a compromise on the soccer issue.

A list of 40 students from each high school interested in playing on a soccer team must be received by noon Friday if there is to be U.I.L. soccer at the two high schools.

Trustees Tuesday also allowed the Public Policy Resources Laboratory at Texas A & M University to use MISD in a survey, "Project to Assess Drug Use in Texas Schools."

Diabetic says 'you have to take care of yourself'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Kay Vandiver is a healthy person.

And, despite her continuing bout with threats from incurable but treatable diabetes, she will be joining other cyclists on Saturday, May 7, in riding circles at Midland College to benefit research into diabetes.

"You've got to take care of yourself," said Ms. Vandiver, the 35-year-old office manager of El Paso Minerals Co. "It's got to be up to you."

Ms. Vandiver, who has contended with the "incurable disease" for 12 years, suffers from Type I diabetes, which "just means the pancreas is not functioning properly," she said. The condition is treatable with insulin, a natural anti-diabetic hormone.

"Insulin is not a cure. It allows diabetics to live."

The "key" to living with diabetes after it is diagnosed is "discipline," Ms. Vandiver said.

"You have to take care of yourself. You don't have any options," Ms. Vandiver said. "The biggest myth is that people think insulin is a cure." Rather, she said, for the Type I diabetic, the routine injection of insulin into the muscle tissue maintains life. Without insulin, the diabetic would "finally go into a diabetic coma" and die.

The diabetic is supposed to follow an exercise routine, faithfully take medication, and eat proper foods at certain times.

"There's not a prevention of Type I," she said. "You can have a good attitude, wholesome diet, and exercise. You can't prevent yourself from getting diabetes."

MS. VANDIVER said her lifestyle has not been inhibited despite her disease, which she faithfully treats in a "day-to-day" process.

"I work, and I haven't found anything I can't do yet," she said.

Her role with the American Diabetes Association is helping enlightening the public about the symptoms of diabetes and how the disease can be attacked and treated to ensure an otherwise healthy life for the diabetic.

The Texas Bike Ride Plus points to that optimism.

In Midland, the Second Annual John J. Redfern Jr. Memorial Bike Ride Plus sponsored by the ADA's Midland Chapter, will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. May 7 around Midland College's 1.1-mile Chaparral Circle. To raise money for the cause, cyclists are to ask sponsors to pledge funds for each MC loop circled.

Kay Vandiver

In turn, cyclists may be eligible for prizes. Entry forms for the ride may be picked up at the ADA office at 2209 N. Big Spring St., Suite J, and at 7-Eleven convenience stores.

Additional information on the ride may be obtained by telephoning the ADA chapter at 682-0314. Midlander Steve Davidson is Bike Ride Plus chairman.

If ignored and untreated, diabetes could lead to an early death. Health problems could include blindness, kidney disease, heart disease, strokes, amputations and birth defects.

"Diabetes affects the way our bodies convert food into energy," Ms. Vandiver said. Normally, with the help of insulin produced by the healthy pancreas, the glucose sugar from ingested foods is changed into energy.

"IN DIABETES, this process is interrupted because either the body does not produce enough insulin or insulin produced is not used effectively," Ms. Vandiver said.

When glucose is unable to enter the body cells, the sugar builds up in the blood stream until some of the excess glucose is passed out of the body by way of urine.

State rests its case in robbery trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The state rested its case early today in the trial of a 22-year-old Midland man accused of shooting a woman after trying to snatch her purse at a populous north Midland apartment complex.

Edward Nicholson Jr. is accused of aggravated robbery in the Nov. 11, 1987, shooting of Leeann Martin, who was shot and wounded at Quintens Walk Apartments, 3100 Caldera Blvd. He is being tried before Judge Pat Baskin in 142nd State District Court.

The state's last witness, Lora Hernandez, told the eight-man, four-woman jury that on the night of the robbery the defendant banged on her apartment door at the Wintree Apartments, 3609 Caldera Blvd.

"He was breathing real hard, like he appeared to be running," she said.

On the first day of the trial Tuesday, prosecutors focused jury attention on a blown-up design drawing of the complex, and the lighting in the area where the crime allegedly occurred. The victim — who was the first witness called to the stand — told jurors about the ordeal which began when she approached the complex last November.

Ms. Martin was working as a hair stylist at J.C. Penney at Midland Park Mall on the night of Nov. 11, 1987, when after work she attended a movie at the mall theater, she testified. After the show, she walked home because she did not own a car, she told prosecutor Robin Sams.

Between 9 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. — as she walked to the complex's cluster of mailboxes — she noticed another person in the area, she said.

Ector group to answer bond issue questions

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Answering questions and dispensing information to Ector County citizens about the $9.8 million school district bond issue will be the sole purpose of the United For Odessa steering committee, said Ron Fancher, chairman of the committee. The committee's headquarters opened Tuesday afternoon at East 7th Street and Grant Avenue.

Fancher termed passage of the ECISD bond proposal "critical" to the future of education in Ector County.

He noted that school board members, in calling the May 7 election, had no "secret agenda. The election call is very specific," he said, adding that funds could be spent only to build three new elementary schools and construct 17 new classrooms at existing elementary schools.

Fancher said voters are being given an opportunity to determine the direction and quality of education in Ector County. ECISD board members selected the least expensive method of additional classrooms that must be built to comply with state-mandated pupil-teacher ratios, he said.

The UFO chairman said school board members could have opted to use a financing method that would not have raised the ECISD tax rate, as Midland County school district members have in presenting an $11.8 million bond issue to voters.

But, Fancher added, the method chosen by ECISD board members, while increasing the taxes on the average home by about $6.75 per year, will save taxpayers about $4 million over the 15 year life of the bond issue.

Fancher, president of Texas Commerce Bank, observed UFO was originally formed to support the successful ECISD bond issue in 1978 and a decision was made to "resurrect" the organization "to answer questions and dispense information" to citizens so they will understand the importance of the bond issue to the future of Ector County. UFO "has no other purpose. It has no life beyond this election that I'm aware of," he said.

Worker's death ruled accidental

From Staff Reports

The death of a Midland man who was killed late Tuesday when a jack supporting a truck collapsed has been ruled accidental, according to a police spokesman.

Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe ruled the death of Francisco Humberto Estrada, 1100 W. Washington, an accident after he pronounced the man dead at the scene, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

Estrada was fatally injured about 6 p.m., as he worked on a vehicle owned by Weiltech, 1709 Garden City Highway, at the company garage, White said. He was underneath a truck when the jack collapsed, allowing the full weight of the truck to fall on him, White said.

Estrada was alone when the accident occurred, according to police reports.

Allergist appointed to MCHD board

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District directors appointed a local physician to their seven-member board Tuesday to fill a seat vacated two months ago.

Midland allergist/immunologist Stephen L. Wiesenfeld was named to the seat left in February by former director Barry Williamson.

Williamson left to assume a position with the Department of Energy in Washington D.C.

The allergist has served on the district's Premier Health Plan board which oversees the operations of that health insurance organization owned by local physicians and Midland Memorial Hospital.

"I have enjoyed serving on the PHP board with him," said MCHD Board President Frank Cahoon today. "I feel that as a doctor he will bring a new dimension to the board we need at this time."

Midland gynecologist Walter Parks was the last doctor to serve on the board and resigned last year after serving most recently as board president.

Wiesenfeld received his medical degree from the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. He is a fellow in Allergy and clinical immunology at the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center in Denver, Colo.

The new director joined the medical staff at MMH in October 1977.

Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

The function will also honor the club's past presidents and "Old Monarchs."

E.J. "Ebb" Grindstaff of Ballinger, a past president of the International Association of Lions Clubs, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Cecil Templeton of San Angelo, governor of District 2-A1, Lions International.

Norman C. "Hank" Henry, president of the club, will preside at the dinner session, and W.H. "Bill" Collins, a past president and longtime member, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Historical highlights and special musical entertainment will be featured at the banquet. Dinner music will be provided by the "Dow Jones Average," directed by Carvel Mills.

"Midland," a song written especially for the Tall City a number of years ago, will be sung by Duke Jimerson, a former president of the club and a past district governor.

The "Texas Ding-a-Lings," the bell-ringing musical duo of Monta Jo Johnson and Marian Reeder of Midland's First United Methodist Church, also will perform.

Carol Hall will be the piano accompanist.

Ray Gwyn, chairman of the anniversary celebration committee, said a number of Lions Club dignataries are expected to attend.

Other members of the arrangements committee include Jack Darden, Tom Blaze, Wayne Cornett, Morris Hulsey, George Weis, Norman Gould, Hank Henry, Victor Horn and Collyns.

The Downtown Lions Club was organized on April 9, 1928 with 102 charter members. The San Angelo Downtown Lions Club was the sponsoring unit. The club today has 370 members, making it one of three largest clubs in the nation.

The club's charter was presented on June 21, 1928, at a banquet held in Hotel Scharbauer's Crystal Ballroom.

Homer Rowe was the charter president.

E.J. Moore was secretary and Barney Grafa was treasurer. Lillie B. Williams, now Mrs. J. Holt Jowell of Midland, was the club's first sweetheart, providing piano music at regular meetings.

Downtown Lions Club members for more than 30 years have been flipping pancakes at the club's annual Pancake Jamborees. This photograph was taken at one of the early Jamborees.

The club started meeting on every Wednesday and has continued that practice through the years. Luncheons have been held at several locations through the years, but have been held at Midland Center the last several years.

Sam Houston PTA volunteer announces board candidacy

From Staff Reports

Anderson

Dianne Anderson has announced her candidacy for District 6 in the May 7 Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees election.

In making her announcement, Mrs. Anderson said: "On a given day, every several years, we ask Midland to choose school board members. For many, the day comes and goes without concern. Apathy, whatever the cause, is usually blamed. Strange. On the surface it appears that only those who have children are affected.

"Yet we all want a drug-free society, liberated from the crime associated with drugs. We want Midland's children to be productive members of society.

"Schools and teachers have a great influence in our lives. Who doesn't remember their first grade teacher, what she looked like and how she treated you? Schools mold values, personalities and futures.

"The business of education is always unfinished. It is now my turn to add my name to the list of those who tried to make a difference. I hope that those in my district will get involved in the selection of District 6's school board trustee, whether or not they have children. Problems of taxes, crime, drugs, clusters, teacher's salaries, education and continuity affect all of us. That is why I am running; that is why I hope you vote."

Mrs. Anderson, a mother of three, has been an active member of PTA and was awarded the "outstanding volunteer" at Sam Houston Elementary School in 1987. She is incoming PTA president at Sam Houston.

Also, she has been actively involved in the City Council PTA as chairman of the Parent Education Committee and attended the 1987 State PTA Convention.

Mrs. Anderson, an administrative manager for an oil and gas company, has assisted teachers in the classroom while working with the VIPS program.

DIABETES

"High blood sugar is thought to cause serious damage to all organs of the body, including the eyes, kidneys and blood vessels," Ms. Vandiver said.

Symptoms of Type I insulin-dependent diabetes include constant urination, abnormal thirst, unusual hunger, rapid weight loss, irritability, fatigue, and nausea.

"Twelve years ago," Ms. Vandiver said, "I had the same symptoms everybody else had: hungry, fatigue, abnormal thirst, and rapid weight loss."

Type I diabetes "appears suddenly in children and young adults and progresses rapidly," she said. "The exact cause is not known. Viral infections may trigger the disease by attacking the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. Or the body's own immune system, which is the first line of defense against infection, may attack those cells, thus stopping insulin production."

Type II diabetes can be controlled through diet and exercise, "although insulin or oral medication are sometimes needed to control blood-sugar levels."

SYMPTOMS OF non-insulin Type II diabetes include drowsiness, itching, blurred vision, excessive weight, tingling and numbness in the feet, fatigue, and slow-healing skin infections. Those suffering from Type II diabetes may have a family history of diabetes.

Ms. Vandiver said that diabetes, the third-leading cause of death by disease, affects 11 million Americans — 5 percent of the population. Six million of those have been diagnosed, and five million "have diabetes but do not know it."

Each year in the nation, 300,000 people die of diabetes-related complications.

Those who are most likely to get diabetes are people who are overweight, people who are over 40 years old, blacks and Hispanics, and people who have a family history of diabetes.

Ms. Vandiver said she does not use diabetes as a crutch.

"That would be the easy way out," she said. "If you take care of yourself, you can maintain a close-to-normal existence. Everybody has bad days, but you can't dwell on those."

LIONS

Two of the charter members, Foy Proctor and Carroll Hill, still reside here, but neither will be able to attend the anniversary event due to illness.

Sight and hearing conservation, youth welfare, District Eye Bank, college scholarships, health welfare, drug abuse, charitable needs and community betterment have been and remain the club's major objectives.

The chapter long has been a major supporter of and contributor to the West Texas Boys Ranch and the Texas Lions Camp for Handicapped Children.

The club's first major project back in 1931 was building a wading pool for youngsters at Cloverdale Park, now Cole Park. The most expensive project was the planning, funding and construction of the Fire Truck Museum to house the city's first two fire trucks, which were restored to operable condition by the club. The museum, built and furnished at a cost of $125,000, was the club's Centennial gift to the City of Midland in 1985.

The downtown club's activities budget, totaling in excess of $30,000 annually, is funded by the unit's annual Pancake Jamborees, which had their beginning 33 years ago. It is annually held in March.

The 60-year-old club also has been a leader in Lionism at district, state and national levels from its beginning. It has furnished this West Texas area with six district governors — James L. Daugherty, David M. Ellis, Roy A. Minear, Carl O. Hyde, all deceased, and Duke Jimerson and George Weis. Paul Bozeman and Samuel C. Martin, both of whom were elected and served while members of other clubs, now are members of the downtown club.

The chapter hosted its first district convention in 1940. A number of conferences have been held here since then, the most recent earlier this month.

Past presidents who are still members of the club include Jno. P. Butler, Collyns, Paul McHargue, Joseph H. Mims, Jimerson, Robert H. Pine, Newell Hughes, Lester Van Pelt Jr., Robert K. Milam, David E. Holster, Billy R. Jackson, Ray P. Moudy, Frank J. Marlow, L.N. "Jim" Coker, Victor Horn, Horace Robb, Weis, Gwyn, Hulsey, Darden, George Loudamy, W.H. "Bill" Malone, Keith Somerville and Gould.

Ernest Barbee, president-elect, and other new officers will assume their 1988-89 positions on July 1.

BOND

UFO has a speakers' bureau that been in operation about six weeks, Fancher noted. "We've been speaking to everybody that would give us an opportunity to appear before them," he said. "We have a dozen or so people who have made dozens of presentations to private and public groups. We're available and we're soliciting opportinities to appear before those kinds of groups to explain this issue to citizens."

Referring to the $6.75 in taxes passage of the bond issue will add to the annual tax bill of the owner of an average $40,000 home, Fancher said the school district has been allocating 5.9 cents per $100 of assessed valuation for debt service. The additional 2.5 cents would increase the debt service allocation to about 8.4 cents.

However, Fancher pointed out, the ECISD bonded indebtedness the 5.9 cents has been paying off will be paid off in 1995. Since funds allocated for debt service cannot be used for any other purpose, he said, this will mean that in 1995 ECISD board members will have to rescind the 5.9 cents now collected for debt service, which will reduce the tax rate for this purpose to only 2.5 cents for debt service.

Looking at the dark side of the bond issue, Fancher said if voters should reject the bond proposal May 7, it will mean ECISD board members will have to seek another way to fund the needed building of the three new schools and 17 classrooms. Failure to comply with state-mandated pupil-teacher classroom size ratios would mean the loss of state funds, he stated.

"The $9.8 million bond proposal, and method of paying it back," he said, "will be the least expensive plan from the standpoint of cost to taxpayers."

TRIAL

She ducked inside a breezeway for a few moments and then re-emerged, she said.

The man she had seen earlier confronted her, but she resisted when he demanded her purse several times, she said.

She swung at him with her purse, he kicked her, and she doubled over in pain, she told Ms. Sams.

"I screamed and he shot in the air," with a small-caliber handgun, Ms. Martin testified.

The man — standing only two to three feet from her — then shot her in the hip once and fled without the purse, she said.

"I kept thinking to myself I have to get a look at this man so I could identify him," she told Ms. Sams of the four-minute encounter.

Defense attorney Vern Martin questioned the victim's account of the shooting, and quizzed her several times about what he said were apparent contradictory descriptions of the assailant. But Ms. Martin denied giving an initial description that does not fit the defendant.

Two other witnesses called by the prosecution told stories similar to the defendant's, but neither saw the man who shot her well enough to identify him, they testified.

Nicholson is on trial on the same charge for the second time in six months. Six days after the robbery of Ms. Martin occurred, he was tried for an Aug. 13, 1987, robbery. A jury convicted him of a lesser charge of theft, and Baskin sentenced him to six years in state prison.

Clements to appoint panel to study reform of welfare program

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Citing a "moral obligation to help," Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday said he would appoint a special welfare reform task force to focus on linking public and private efforts at breaking the "crippling cycle of dependency."

"The welfare system as such has not performed to the expectations of anyone — liberal or conservative, recipient or taxpayer, deliverer of the programs or just an observer of the system," Clements told the Texas Association of Private Industry Councils.

"Where everyone does agree — particularly the welfare recipient — is that work is far better than welfare, and that those on welfare would much rather work."

The governor called on the 34 private industry councils, regional business groups that handle the federal Jobs Training Partnership Act program, to work toward "structuring job training more effectively to meet the needs of the welfare recipients."

Clements named Houston businessman Rob Mosbacher, a member of the board of the Department of Human Services who has spent nearly a year devising a public-private partnership on welfare reform, to chair the task force. The governor will appoint the nine remaining members within the next 10 days.

Mosbacher and other welfare reform advocates have noted that many Texas welfare recipients who find jobs return quickly to the welfare roles because of lost Medicaid benefits and child care benefits, difficulties with transportation and the low pay they tend to earn in those jobs. "We get these people all dressed up ready to go and then all of a sudden they go off the cliff financially," Mosbacher said in a 1987 interview.

"When you couple phasing out the child care when somebody finds a job, and then by definition they're starting at the lower end of the scale economically in terms of wages, then at four months they lose Medicaid, it really is not surprising that when they come into their first problem on a medical bill or they get harassed by an employer and they fall back on welfare."

Clements Tuesday pegged the turnover rate at about 50 percent.

"This recidivism must stop," he said. "We have a moral obligation to help every man and every woman who wants a job to have a job, a good job, a job with a future, a job in the private sector."

He directed the task force to:

— Improve relations among state and private groups working with welfare recipients;

— Develop pilot job programs that offer "the flexible use" of child care, health care and other support services that currently force many back onto welfare;

— Develop volunteer networks to provide support to welfare families; and — Recommend changes in state law and policy "to break the unemployment-employment cycle."

Centenarian receives green card

QUEMADO (AP) — With her family by her bedside and cameras recording the historic event, a 102-year-old woman became the second-oldest person in the country to receive legal status under the amnesty program.

Reporters and U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials had to wait for Francisca Rivera de Chavez to wake up from a nap before continuing with the ceremony Tuesday afternoon.

Richard Casillas, San Antonio district director for the INS, gave Mrs. Rivera de Chavez a work authorization or green card as reporters and family members converged over the bedridden woman, INS spokesman Mario Ortiz said.

"She is mentally alert, but there are times I have been told that she is more alert," said Ortiz, who accompanied other immigration officials to this border town about 40 miles south of Del Rio and 20 miles north of Eagle Pass.

The woman's family baked her a cake and presented her with a family tree as part of the ceremonies in the three-bedroom home of Dolores Turk, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez' youngest daughter.

"I feel this is one of the biggest days of my life and my mother's life because this the day she has always wanted to realize," Mrs. Turk said.

"I thought it was her desire to be a citizen of this country and now that there was this opportunity for amnesty I told her, 'Mom, this is the time for you to have your dream,'" Mrs. Turk said.

Ortiz said Mrs. Rivera de Chavez is the second oldest person in the country to receive legal status, behind a 104-year-old man in California who received a green card earlier this year. A 98-year-old woman in Brownsville earlier this year was given legal status and has since become the first amnesty applicant to be granted U.S. citizenship.

Francisca Rivera de Chavez, 102, is congratulated by her great-grandson, Joe Lee Delgado, after she received a legal status card from INS officials Tuesday.

Clara Escobedo de Martinez, whose green card was canceled by immigration officials in 1962, has made television commercials for the INS, urging other aliens who qualify for amnesty to apply before the May 4 cutoff date.

Mrs. Rivera de Chavez, who was born in Concepcion del Oro in Jalisco, Mexico, is the widow of Maj. Rafael Chavez, who fought in the army of Francisco Madero.

While her husband fought the forces of Pancho Villa, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez lived in Piedras Negras, across from Eagle Pass.

Her husband received several injuries and died in 1937 in Piedras Negras and after his death, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez crossed into the United States to look for work to support her 12 children.

She worked and traveled through Texas and California and sent money back to her children. She has been living with Mrs. Turk and her husband, James, for the past 10 years.

"She does not really know what is going on about all this," Mrs. Turk said. "She hears her name on the radio or television and laughs. She hears her name and she says, 'That's me' and she laughs."

Rafael Chancey, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez' grandson, said he called immigraton officials after Mrs. Turk was concerned about the elderly woman being deported.

Chancey, the manager of the Texas Employment Commission in Eagle Pass, said immigration officials expedited the paperwork for her grandmother and agreed to go to the border town.

"This is a very special occasion. It's very gratifying," Chancey said. "You get that tranquil spirit that this is really happening and I would tell all the families that are wanting to get into the amnesty program they should take advantage of it and not be skeptical about it."

Ex-cadet denied return to academy

Edwards

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — John Edwards said after losing his final appeal for readmission to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point that he probably will not seek the military career he had planned.

Edwards said he was ousted from West Point because he refused to enforce a tough code of discipline on new cadets.

Yet his case has prompted the Army to appoint a panel of three high-ranking officers to review the Fourth Class System, the method of indoctrinating new cadets that led to Edwards' dismissal.

"Obviously, I have a different attitude about discipline and the Fourth Class System than what West Point teaches," Edwards told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"It (the ruling) is disappointing, but maybe some good can come out of it," he said. "Maybe they will be more conscious about it the next time they do something like this."

Edwards, 24, a native of Portland near Corpus Christi, was a junior cadet at West Point who held a 3.59 grade-point average and ranked in the top 5 percent of his class until he was kicked out Jan. 5.

Ret. Gen. Roscoe Robinson, an outside investigator appointed last month to review Edwards' case, has ruled there is no evidence to justify overturning the academy's dismissal, according to a Pentagon official.

"Gen. Robinson found that while Cadet Edwards achieved considerable academic success at West Point, under the 'whole-man concept' he in other endeavors was a marginal cadet," states a letter from William D. Clark, the Army's principal deputy assistant secretary for manpower and reserve affairs.

The letter was forwarded to Edwards by U.S. Rep Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, who had written the Army on Edwards' behalf.

With his dismissal complete, Edwards said he must reconsider his future plans, which once included a career in the military, and said he is likely to pursue a degree in engineering.

"After all of this, a military career may be doubtful," he said. "I guess it's time to consider another career."

Edwards said he has requested a complete copy of Robinson's report.

Robinson could not be reached by The Associated Press for comment Tuesday.

Paige Eversole, an Army spokeswoman at the Pentagon, said the deputy chief of staff for personnel on Monday signed the official papers "separating Edwards from the academy." She said Edwards will be placed on reserve status for the next two years.

Edwards has said the Fourth Class System is a "humiliating and degrading" form of psychological hazing in which upperclassmen, for example, force new cadets to walk at a quick pace around campus, eat at attention and memorize long lists of information. If the new cadets slip up, he said, they are, "yelled at constantly" by upperclassmen.

West Point spokesman Maj. Bruce Bell said three high-ranking officers arrived Monday to review the Fourth Class System, with a final report expected within 30 days.

Bell said the three officers are Lt. Gen James E. Moore Jr.; Brig. Gen. Arvid West; and Col. Johnnie Wilson.

"The Edwards case was a major precipitating factor of this review," Bell said. "There had been no big hue and cry to review the system up to this point."

Bell told the newspaper that it will be the first outside review of the Fourth Class System since a congressional panel examined it 70 years ago and abolished physical hazing.

Cisneros considering business partnership

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With his daughters nearing college age and his ill son facing major surgery, Mayor Henry Cisneros says he is considering a lucrative business venture that would not conflict with his elected post.

The four-term mayor says he has been offered numerous other positions in development companies in the past, but he has turned them down because of time constraints or conflict-of-interest problems.

But the mayor confirmed that he now is considering a partnership in a proposed asset management firm that would include investment banker Robert Rodriguez, president of Southwestern Capital Markets; and advertising executive Lionel Sosa of Sosa and Associates.

The new firm would manage and invest pension funds of large corporations.

Cisneros said he has been looking at business opportunities more seriously recently because his two daughters are nearing college age and his son, John Paul Anthony, who was born with several malformed organs, will face major surgery next year and the city insurance will not cover all the expenses.

Cisneros has supported his family through jobs as a lecturer at Trinity University and the University of Texas at San Antonio and through speeches, writing and consulting work. It is reported he earns about $100,000 per year, including his academic positions, speaking engagements and his $4,040 annual salary as mayor.

Cisneros said the proposed partnership with Rodriguez and Sosa is attractive because it would allow him to continue as mayor and end the exhausting speaking schedule.

"It does impose very heavy scheduling duties," Cisneros said of the speaking circuit. "It would be much more helpful to have a job where I could handle much of my work over the telephone so that it doesn't affect my mayoral duties."

Cisneros would be chairman and chief executive officer and would use his national recognition and contacts to attract customers, while Rodriguez would be the company's chief operating officer.

Rodriguez said a fourth possible partner would be Criterion Financial Corp. of Houston, which would join the firm through a joint-venture arrangement and would provide the new company with expertise during its early years.

Cisneros, who said he would make up his mind in about six weeks, said the proposed job is "the most solid scenario I have seen in a number of years."

Cisneros, 40, has said he will decide in September whether to run for a fifth term after reiterating he is not interested in a state or national elected or appointed posts.

City Attorney Lloyd Garza is studying Cisneros' proposed business venture to ensure there are no conflict-of-interest problems.

Rodriguez said his current firm now provides financial advisory services on city bonds, but said he would resign from the city contract or sell the company if Cisneros joins the new firm.

"Here would be an opportunity to create what I think would be the first Hispanic-owned asset management firm in the United States," Rodriguez said.

Paint, glue retailers urged to apply for licenses

AUSTIN (AP) — Retailers are being urged to comply with a law requiring a license to sell spray paint and glue that can be abused as inhalants, state officials said.

The law that took effect March 1 covers up to as many as 20,000 retailers, but only about 4,000 of them have applied for and received licenses to sell the products, Texas Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein told a Tuesday news conference. The products can be abused through inhaling fumes.

"I don't think the importance of regulating the sale of inhalants can be overstated," Bernstein said.

"Whereas the so-called hard drugs, cocaine and heroin, may be the drugs of choice among the adult abuser, inhalants could be called the drugs of availability to youngsters," he said.

Inhalant abuse mostly involves young people, officials said. Bernstein said the abuser usually is between the ages of 11 and 17, and some have been as young as 5.

Consequences of abuse include permanent respiratory disorders, heart attacks, brain damage and death, Bernstein said.

"It is a cheap high, and the reason it goes down into the younger ages is because it is inexpensive and relatively available. The product's in the home, and the kids can come home after school and get high. It's in all classes of society," said Rep. Bill Blackwood, R-Mesquite, who sponsored the measure.

Blackwood said many retailers are not complying with the law, because they do not know about it.

The law passed by the 1987 Legislature requires people selling the products to display their licenses and to post conspicuous, bilingual signs warning that spray paint and glue with harmful vapors must not be sold to those under age 18.

A retailer who sells the products without a license faces a class B misdemeanor charge for the first offense, and a third-degree felony charge for the second offense, Blackwood said.

The state license, which must be renewed each year, costs $25, Bernstein said. Money from the licenses is to be used for inhalant abuse programs.

Among the programs being considered by the board of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse are projects for high-risk people, such as children of substance abusers, and packages providing information on inhalants for businesses.

Sweetwater finalist in city competition

(Sweetwater) is the only Texas representaive in the 1987-88 All-American City competition...

SWEETWATER (AP) — Community spirit that rebuilt this West Texas city after twin tornadoes caused millions of dollars in damages also earned it a spot in the finals of this year's All-American city competition, officials said.

Sweetwater was declared a disaster area when the tornadoes hit April 20, 1986 killing one person, injuring 100 and causing up to $20 million in damages.

More than 2,000 of the city's 12,000 residents were affected by damage to about 800 houses, and city officials said three-quarters of those houses were destroyed.

But with federal finacial grants, the city has slowly rebuilt homes and buildings. Businesses, churches and residents also donated money to help families recover.

The city is the only Texas representaive in the 1987-88 All-American City competition sponsored by the National Municipal League, Mayor Rick Rhodes said in a news conference Tuesday.

The city located about 130 miles west of Fort Worth is competing with 24 other finalists for the All-American desgination that will be bestowed on 10 municipalities June 10-11 in Houston.

Rhodes hailed the city's achievement as one of the greatest things to happen to the area in many years, the Sweetwater Reporter reported.

"We have come a long way as the result of a lot of hard work by a lot of peoeple," Rhodes said. "But we still have a way to go.

"Just making it to the finals is a great honor and I know that we will be successful in our efforts before the jury in our presentation," he said.

The National Municipal League gives the award to recognize communities for citizen action, effective organization and community improvements.

The last time Texas had a finalist in the competition was in 1984 when Dallas and Georgetown were selected. In 1982, San Antonio was given the title.

City Manager David Maddox, who encouraged the city's participation in the competition, said about 100 applications were sent to the league.

The city cited its recovery from the 1986 tornadoes, its participation in a state project to refurbish historic downtown districts and the reorganization of its county coliseum in its competition application.

Man sentenced to death for rape-murder conviction

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man convicted raping and stabbing to death a female passenger on a city bus received the death penalty Tuesday after a jury deliberated three hours.

Emanuel Kemp Jr. was convicted of capital murder on Saturday in the stabbing death of Johnnie Gray, 34, who was a medical clerk at a local hospital.

Ms. Gray was the only person aboard the bus when the assault occurred, police said. David V. Jeanfreau, the bus driver and only witness, said Kemp robbed him and Ms. Gray at knifepoint and then ordered the bus be driven to a local park.

When the bus reached the park, Kemp sexually assaulted Ms. Gray and stabbed her to death, police said.

When the sentence was read, Kemp picked up his jacket and ripped through a sleeve as he put it on. He had to be calmed by his attorneys.

Because the case involves the death penalty, it will be automatically appealed.

Kemp is a Texas Department of Corrections parolee who had been convicted of aggravated robbery.

Lawmen seach for escapee

OCALA, Fla. (AP) — Authorities were searching today for an inmate described as extremely dangerous after he escaped from the Marion County Jail by prying a window from the wall of his cell.

Authorities in Missouri, Nevada, California and Texas have been alerted to the escape of Lewis Wesley Barnes of Missouri, said Marion Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Ken Ergle.

The accused double murderer was discovered missing Sunday from the jail, Ergle said.

"We have to consider him as if he were a wild animal," Ergle said. "...To consider him dangerous would be putting it mildly."

Authorities believe Barnes, 31 — who broke out of the jail by breaking off parts of his bed, filing down the metal, prying a window from the wall of his cell and enlarging the hole — may have had help after his escape.

He was under indictment for two first-degree murder counts in the slaying of an elderly Marion County couple in 1984. Barnes was charged in the execution-style deaths of Betty and David Branum, the managers of Wayside Antiques, in nearby Irving.

Barnes had been held at the jail since Jan. 12 after he was extradited from Houston, where he was serving a 40-year sentence there for attempting to kill two police officers in a shootout.

TRC denies toll request

PORT ISABEL (AP) — A bridge owner has been denied a request to charge tolls of $3.50-$4.50 for vehicles crossing from a residential development to the mainland.

The Texas Railroad Commission on Monday denied the Long Island Swing Bridge Co.'s application for the toll on the grounds that McAllen attorney John R. Freeland owns the bridge, not the company, which is listed as the applicant.

Freeland was one of the original developers of the island.

Residents of the island near Port Isabel have fought the toll, which would cost them $3.50 for cars and $4.50 for trucks each time they crossed the swing bridge.

Mark Freeland, attorney for his father, John Freeland, said a new application will be filed with the Railroad Commission.

Texan has liver transplant

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One Louisiana woman and another from Fort Stockton, Texas, were in critical condition Tuesday after receiving organ transplants Monday night at Ochsner Foundation Hospital, the hospital said.

Nell Brown, 57, of Patterson, La., who suffered from a severely damaged heart muscle, received a new heart in a two-hour procedure by a surgical team headed by Dr. John L. Ochsner, the hospital said.

Virginia Alfaro, 56, of Fort Stockton, received a new liver in a 10-hour operation directed by Daniel H. Hayes, the hospital said.

An Ochsner spokesman said Mrs. Alfaro suffered from primary biliary cirrhosis, a chronic disease that slowly destroys bile ducts in the liver.

Both women were in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Workers overcome by gas

HOUSTON (AP) — Eight men were hospitalized when they were overcome by carbon monoxide while working at an underground construction site.

The men, all employees of Texas Sterling Construction Co., were doing underground welding where crews were trying to lay a 84-inch water main, officials said. Two large ventilation fans were not on when rescuers arrived at the southeast Houston location Tuesday afternoon.

"We keep in contact with them (via radio) and when they didn't answer we sent someone down there to see what happened," foreman Tony Rorai said.

The workers were taken to Hermann Hospital, but were not seriously injured, officials said.

The men were under contract by the city of Houston.

Ex-UT pitcher honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens is one of four former University of Texas students honored as Outstanding Young Texas Exes.

The other honorees announced Tuesday are Jeff B. Love, a partner in the Houston law firm of Liddell, Sapp & Zivley; Dr. William J. Koros, chemical engineering professor at UT-Austin; and Richard Moore Archer, a partner in the San Antonio architectural firm of Overland Partners.

Clemens led the Texas Longhorn baseball team to the 1983 College World Series championship. He won the Cy Young Award as the American League's outstanding pitcher in 1986 and 1987.

Indians to participate

AUSTIN (AP) — Descendants of 14 American Indian tribes who once lived where the Texas Capitol now stands are to participate in the Capitol Centennial ceremony May 7.

Plans have been made for the tribes to set up tepees, display Indian lifestyles and artifacts, perform traditional dances and conduct a peace pipe ceremony, said R.C. Ahtone, a member of the Kiowa tribe from Oklahoma.

Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis have been invited to participate in the peace pipe ceremony. Each of the state officials will be presented with a warbonnet.

El Paso receives grant

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso is one of nine areas that will receive Ford Foundation grants to fight AIDS.

The El Paso Community Foundation will match the Ford Foundation's $50,000 grant and use the money to educate Spanish-speaking youth about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Janice Windle, the El Paso foundation's executive director.

The grant is part of a multimillion-dollar national AIDS education and assistance program funded by the Ford Foundation and other philanthropic organizations. Eight other areas across the country are taking part in the Ford Foundation program, which was announced Monday.

The El Paso Community Foundation will match the grant for a Southwest border states education program, Ms. Windle said. It will work with local organizations.

Report says asbestos dealt with improperly

DALLAS (AP) — An independent consultant report issued Tuesday said asbestos has been improperly removed and disposed of at Parkland Memorial Hospital and staff and patients may have been exposed.

According to the private consultant's report, the hospital violated federal guidelines for asbestos removal in 1986 and 1987.

The report said Parkland employees were not properly trained in the handling of the cancer-causing substance and employees and contractors routinely disposed of the material improperly. However, the consultants said the improper process probably did not seriously endanger employees or patients.

"Even during our inquiry at Parkland, we observed improper disposal of asbestos-containing material...Employees were still sweeping asbestos as opposed to using a...vacuum," said the report by Microanalysis Inc., a Dallas company Parkland hired in November to investigate alleged improprieties in removing asbestos.

Also Tuesday, Leonard Edelstein, director of engineering, and John Willis, senior vice president in charge of crews of removing asbestos, agreed to early retirement. The two were in charge of the hospital's quality assurance inspectors whose job it is to report non-compliance.

Willis was replaced by Wayne L. Ogburn, who has 10 years of asbestos removal experience. The hospital said the retirements were not in response to the consultant's report.

Parkland president and chief executive officer Dr. Ron J. Anderson said Tuesday that hospital officials had changed the department's managerial arrangement in response to the findings.

Under the former management system, there were six levels of managers between the head of engineering and the asbestos workers and inspectors monitoring the substance. Under the new arrangement, all quality assessment workers report directly to the hospital's safety director.

"The big error here was having a system that does not report very high into management," Anderson said. "It's not a good structure. It's an old structure."

Microanalysis President Carolyn W. Jones, who wrote the report, said not all management has been aware of the problems with the program.

The report also said Parkland has taken many steps to improve its handling of the hazardous material, including educating personnel in asbestos handling, contracting consultants and altering management structures.

Insurers: Banks would abuse sales

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — More than a hundred independent insurance agents from across Texas came here Tuesday to protest a proposal that state-chartered banks be allowed to sell insurance.

But bankers and consumer representatives said the proposals from the State Finance Commission's banking section would encourage competition and result in cost-savings, added convenience and better service for customers.

The proposals, aimed at boosting the state's ailing banking industry, would allow state-chartered banks to sell credit property and casualty insurance. Banks already can sell credit-life insurance. State-chartered banks in cities of fewer than 5,000 would have the authority to sell full lines of insurance, now offered in small towns by nationally chartered banks.

"Our banks are sick today for many reasons; surely no one would claim they're sick because they can't sell insurance and that they'll get well if they start selling insurance," Bill Bailey, an insurance agent from Waco and vice president of the Independent Insurance Agents of America, told a public hearing.

Besides violating state law and exceeding the authority of the commission, Bailey said the proposals would escalate the potential for abuses, increase risks in the industry and offer no real benefits to consumers.

The proposals contain language designed to prohibit a bank from coercing customers to purchase insurance as a condition for getting a loan. But the insurance agents, along with consumer forces, say they are skeptical.

"The potential for coercion and tie-in sales is so great that both must simply be accepted as inevitable when banks are allowed to sell insurance," Bailey said.

He and other insurance agents urged that the issue be resolved by the state Legislature.

Carol Barger of Consumers Union, while supporting the idea of insurance competition from banks, said her group has "serious reservations" about abuses that could occur in banks tying insurance sales to loans.

"Clear standards, safeguards, monitoring and effective enforcement... are imperative if the consumer is to be fully protected," she said.

Representatives of several banking groups, including the Texas Bankers Association and the Independent Bankers Association of Texas, testified in support of the Finance Commission's proposals.

Allowing state-chartered banks to sell insurance would help boost the industry and thus the state's economy, they said, while benefiting consumers with greater convenience, better service and lower costs.

"Insurance (sales) are particularly well-suited as an additional bank product," said Jeff Austin, president-elect of the Texas Bankers Association. "We believe bankers can acquire the necessary expertise" to sell insurance, he added.

Happy landings

Dobbs Houses Inc. has completed remodeling its Midland International Airport facilities at a cost of nearly $500,000. General Manager Randy Goodman said "we gutted and rebuilt the place. Everything's brand new — the furniture, the ceiling, the wall coverings."

The gift shop and the lounge both doubled in size and a private dining room was added to the restaurant. As a point of entry for many visitors, Goodman said the new look helps make a good first impression.

First RepublicBank loss reported as $1.5 billion

DALLAS (AP) — Officials for financially-ailing First RepublicBank Corp. said the next step in its attempt to rebound from its $1.5 billion first quarter loss is to continue with its restructuring and recapitalization plan.

First RepublicBank officially announced the loss Tuesday, although a preliminary statement was made April 12.

The amount is the sixth-largest quarterly loss by a U.S. corporation and is triple the amount of corporate projections.

On March 19, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. extended a $1 billion emergency loan to the Dallas-based holding company.

In 1987, bank officials reported a loss of $656 million.

Company officials said the first quarter loss primarily is the result of a $1.4 billion loan loss in its real estate loan portfolio and $126 million of losses and write-downs of assets.

Earlier this month, Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clarke urged First RepublicBank to begin restructuring and change its leadership.

Gerald W. Fronterhouse, former chairman and chief executive officer, resigned April 12, when the huge loss was first indicated. He was the second top executive to leave the firm during the management shake-up arranged by federal regulators. Other top officials followed Fronterhouse's departure.

"The actions taken in the first quarter are consistent with our intention that the company move ahead with its plan to restructure and to recapitalize operations," Casey said in a statement Monday.

First RepublicBank, the nation's 13th largest bank holding company, included $235 million in its loan-loss provision for Third World countries, increasing the provision to $612 million or 50 percent of the bank's $1.2 billion of outstanding debt.

Creditors drive Pengo toward bankruptcy filing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A petition to force Pengo Industries Inc. of Fort Worth into involuntary bankruptcy has been filed by unsecured debtholders, company officials say.

The oilwell-service company said Tuesday the bankruptcy action under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code will not affect its operating subsidiaries.

Chemical Bank of New York as trustee of Pengo Eurobonds, and individual Eurobond holders Anthony Ben Walsh, New York, and Matthew Metcalf, Mobile, Ala., filed the petition, a company official said.

A Pengo subsidiary has been in default of annual interest payments on the bonds since 1983, but the original outstanding principal amount of the bonds has been reduced from $22.5 million to about $4 million through two exchange offers, the company announced.

The New York bank had said it was considering filing an involuntary bankruptcy petition against Pengo, but more recently Pengo said it understood that Chemical would hold off, pending the outcome of Pengo's discussions regarding restructuring of its secured debt.

"This move took us by surprise," said E. Wayne Mercer, Pengo vice president and general counsel. "We believe Pengo has a good future on its own."

The outcome of the debt restructuring discussions is still uncertain, Mercer said.

A company generally has 20 days to respond to such an involuntary bankruptcy petition. Then it is entitled to a hearing to determine whether it will be forced into a Chapter 11 reorganization.

Desert Partners seek approvals

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown's Desert Partners L.P. disclosed Tuesday that it must receive the approval of Merrill Lynch & Co. and Elders Investment Ltd. of Australia before it can sweeten its $42-a-share hostile tender offer for the USG Corp.

The Midland-based limited partnership announced it had commitments totaling $1.9 billion to buy the USG stock. In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, it said "the consent of Elders and Merrill Lynch shall now be required to increase to more than $42 per share the average per-share purchase price" of the USG shares bought with the funds provided by the two investment firms.

Benefit increases outgrow pay raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worker benefits are growing at a higher rate than wages, with escalating health insurance costs accounting for most of the increase, the government says.

Basic wage rates over the past 12 months have risen 2.6 percent for union workers and 3.5 percent for non-union employees, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday.

But when benefits are included, the overall hourly cost of labor in private industry increases at 3.9 percent for union members and 4 percent for non-union members.

"Some of these benefits have turned into entitlements, and just like the government, a lot of businesses have lost control of them," said Richard Belous, a labor economist for The Conference Board, a business research house.

OPEC meeting boosts oil prices

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continued moving moderately higher, gaining 6 cents to stand at $18.66 at midmorning.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $18.60 per barrel Tuesday, up 20 cents from Monday. Traders were keeping a close eye on OPEC meetings that had gotten under way in Vienna, Austria.

Among May contracts for refined products, wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 52.42 cents per gallon, up 0.37 cent, while wholesale heating oil settled 0.83 cent higher, at 52.04 cents per gallon.

Chris McCormack, an analyst at Drexel Burham Lambert Inc., said the "principal impetus" behind the move was technical.

After a long spell of apathetic trading, he said, buying picked up after the crude price broke above certain levels.

In addition, he said, the market was "nervous" as it watched the events in Vienna, pushing prices higher amid reports that "some countries might be favorable to cutting prices."

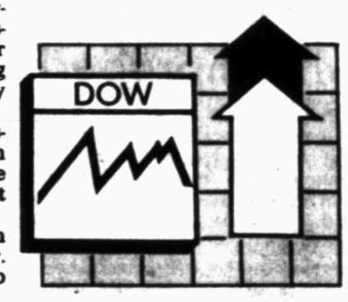
Stocks post 8.79 point gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some modest gains Tuesday, bouncing back in the final hour of trading after the morning's strong advance faded in the early afternoon.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 20 points on Monday and nearly 17 points in the morning, finished with an 8.79-point gain to close at 2,044.76.

It was the fourth consecutive gain in the market's best-known indicator. Monday's close was revised to 2,035.97.



Advancing issues outnumbered losers by about 3 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 926 up, 551 down and 491 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 152.30 million shares compared with 156.95 million shares on Monday.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $13.7 billion, or 0.53 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 177.78 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

State high court refuses take-or-pay appeal

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Supreme Court of Texas this morning closed off the last state appeal for Midland's Wagner & Brown in a long-running natural gas dispute with Valero Transmission Co.

In March, the high court sided with Valero in ruling that a 1984 "take-or-pay" contract between Wagner & Brown and Valero and Texas Utilities Fuel Co. did not require Valero to purchase 45 percent of Wagner & Brown's annual gas production. The contract requires Valero and TUFCO to buy 90 percent between them, the court said in agreeing with lower court rulings, and not necessarily 45 percent each.

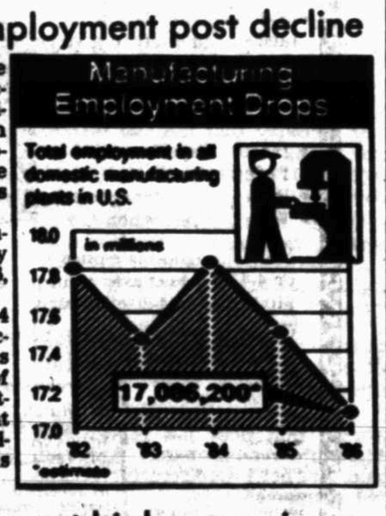
This morning, the Supreme Court denied Wagner & Brown's request for a re-hearing in the case.

Manufacturing employment post decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans manufacturing things for a living has fallen in this decade, although such areas as transportation equipment, plastics and furniture are bucking the trend, the Census Bureau reported.

Overall, employment in manufacturing businesses fell by 731,900 between 1982 and 1986, the bureau said Tuesday.

That represented a decline of 4 percent, to 17,086,200 workers, according to preliminary statistics from the 1986 Annual Survey of Manufacturers. But more recently, manufacturing employment has increased as the devalued dollar boosts sale of U.S. goods abroad.



USX, Bethlehem report higher earnings

Associated Press

USX Corp. has reported a profit for the first quarter after suffering a loss a year ago due to a lengthy strike, while Bethlehem Steel Corp. says its earnings more than tripled.

Both companies, two of the nation's largest steel producers, on Tuesday attributed the gain largely to strong demand for their steel products and higher prices.

Construction strengthens city's March indicators

From Staff Reports

Continued strength in residential construction buoyed Midland's economic indicators again last month, according to figures released by the Economic Development Department of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

In the first quarter of 1988, 52 new home permits have been granted, up more than 13 percent from 1987. The value of those permits is up even more, topping $5 million in three months for an average of about $96,500. That is $24,000 more than the average permit value last year.

Total residential sales — new and existing — is more than 5 percent ahead of last year's pace, although March 1988, was not quite as good a month as March 1987, the Midland Board of Realtors reports.

Financial institutions show total deposit growth of about $40 million. The city's thrifts, which gained about 10.5 percent — $86 million — more than compensated for the 2.9 percent decline at banks.

Other strong indices during the month were total employment, airline traffic and postal receipts.

Downstream operations bolster quarter's profits

NEW YORK (NYT) — Texaco Inc., the Phillips Petroleum Corp. and the Chevron Corp. all reported much stronger profits in the first quarter Tuesday, bolstered by chemicals and refining and marketing operations.

The improvement in results were in line with those at five major oil companies released earlier this week, and continued to show weakness in exploration and production, the "upstream" end of the oil business.

Texaco

Texaco, freshly emerged from bankruptcy and facing a proxy battle at its annual meeting in June, announced first-quarter earnings of $242 million, or $1 a share, more than double its earnings of $118 million, or 49 cents a share, in the comparable period last year.

Analysts said that the improvement was in line with their expectations, and that management's success in fending off a takeover would probably depend on asset sales, rather than the recent operating results of the company. Texaco, based in White Plains, is the nation's third-largest oil company.

James W. Kinnear, Texaco's president and chief executive, attributed the earnings growth to "the continuing upward trend in the company's quarterly earnings from the depressed levels of 1986."

Kinnear continued, "Texaco has been able to achieve this steady improvement in its operating earnings over the last five quarters, even though the petroleum business remains highly competitive with extremely volatile crude oil prices."

Depressed oil prices have been good news for refining and marketing at all the companies. At Texaco, quarterly profits in the sector were $153 million, up from $6 million, in the comparable period last year. Exploration and production profits were up more modestly, to $248 million, from $204 million. Total revenues were $8.7 billion, compared with $8.5 billion.

Chevron

Chevron, the nation's fourth-ranked oil producer, said that profits were up 81 percent, to $653 million, or $1.91 a share, from $361 million, or $1.06 a share, in the 1987 quarter. Its revenues rose 10.3 percent, to $7.5 billion, from $6.8 billion, because of price increases for chemicals and natural gas and higher volumes of crude oil and petroleum products.

Chevron's net income from its American petroleum operations more than doubled, to $180 million for the quarter, from $78 million in the year-ago period. The prior year's earnings were restated because of accounting changes. The exploration and production component of its first-quarter earnings dropped this year, to $46 million, from $124 million, the company said.

Phillips

Phillips, the nation's 10th-largest oil producer, said that it earned $130 million in the first quarter, compared with a loss $32 million in the 1987 period. Sales rose 14.2 percent, to $2.9 billion, from $2.54 billion.

Phillips, based in Bartlesville, Okla., also attributed its turnaround to higher prices and volumes for natural gas, and to moderately higher petroleum prices, as well as lower operating costs.

RAISE

Benefit increases in the 12 months ending April 1 have average 5.8 percent overall in private industry, double the 2.9 percent increase of the previous 12 months, said the Labor Department statisticians.

And among blue-collar workers, benefit cost increases have nearly tripled — from a 2.3 percent gain a year ago to 6.8 percent the past 12 months. In manufacturing, non-cash worker benefits rose 7 percent in the past year, compared with just 1.5 percent a year earlier.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimates that employee fringe benefits such as pension and health and dental insurance plans now comprise an average 40 percent of a company's labor costs.

The government said Tuesday that the bulk of the increase in those costs in the past year was escalating health insurance premiums, with a smaller portion coming from increased Social Security contributions by employers.

"For a while, it looked like many employers were containing health care costs," said Belous. "But in the last year a lot of the solutions have unraveled. With mandatory health insurance on the horizon, a lot of companies are going to have to go back to the drawing board."

John Zalusky, an economist for the AFL-CIO, said the stock market crash last October explains much of the difference in the size of benefit increases between union and non-union workers.

"Union employers tend to have defined benefit pension plans, which means that when the market crashed, they had to put more money into the kitty," he said. "Non-union employers have switched more to defined contribution plans in which the beneficiaries absorbed the brunt of the crash."

However, Zalusky acknowledged that unions also are being sent signals from their members to get more benefits and job security rather than cash at the bargaining table despite nominally lower tax rates.

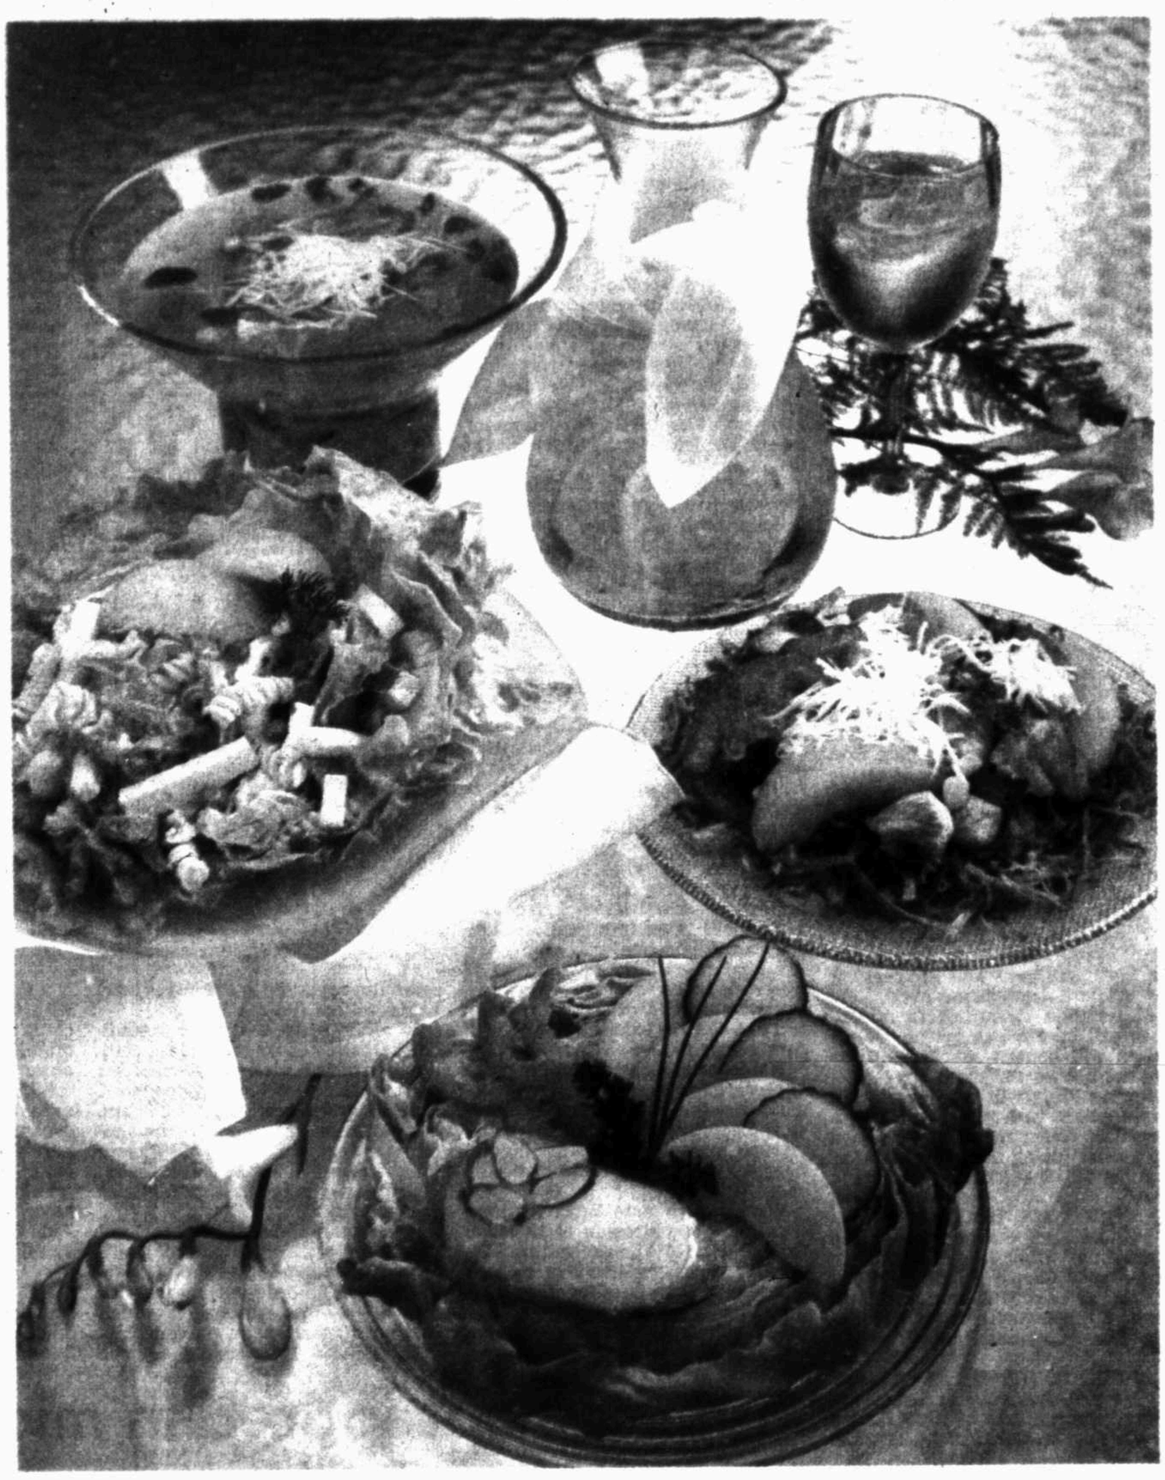
GIVE LUNCH/SUPPER THE LIGHT TOUCH



Warmer weather tempts most of us out-of-doors — and away from heavy cooking. Appetites change, too, during the spring/summer months, giving cold or clear soups and colorful salads special appeal.

In keeping with the season — and today's trend towards lighter, more nutritious foods that please the eye as well as the palate — here's a selection of dishes that fill the bill in innovative ways. While offering fresh, often surprising ideas and combinations, all are simple to prepare with minimal kitchen duty and take advantage of three perfectly compatible ingredients including crisp, crunchy California Iceberg Lettuce, delectable California cling peaches in convenient canned form and three very adaptable, premium quality Norwegian cheeses.

Chock-full of vegetables with low-fat, high-protein chicken as a base, Chicken - Lemon Soup has a pleasantly tart, slightly Oriental flavor. Healthful California-grown cling peaches — they're lighter packed in natural juice or extra light syrup — marry deliciously with fresh ginger. Shredded Iceberg Lettuce, another gift from California, provides pleasing texture and, from Norway, mild nutty tasting Jarlsberg cheese mellows and complements the blend.

Try a zesty Mexican Stir-Fry Salad served warm, in contemporary style, over cooling lettuce, sumptuously finished with grated Jarlsberg.

Highlighting another cheese from Norway, subtly spiced Nokkelost — like Jarlsberg it's made from part-skim milk and melts readily — Hot Nokkelost Salad is sparked with an addictive Herbed Sherry Vinaigrette. Cling peaches give a luscious, refreshing accent . . . low in sodium, loaded with Vitamins A and C plus niacin, they carry a slim 50 calories per 1/2-cup serving.

A complete light meal, it takes just a few minutes to put together this pretty Pasta Salad In Lettuce Cups. Once again, you're starting with California Iceberg Lettuce — because nobody gets bored with it. Only 100 calories per average head (less than 20 per serving), Iceberg is also a source of Vitamins A and C, thiamine, fiber and vegetable protein.

And that's merely a sampling of the creative possibilities. For example, Cold Peach And Pea Bisque stands alone as a seductive warm weather treat, doubles as an elegant yet easy appetizer course for a gala dinner: unique, creamy Norwegian Gjetost cheese, with its touch of natural sweetness, enriches this wonderfully smooth, slightly minty soup. Served with hot, crusty bread, Warm Smoked Chicken Salad is a sophisticated yet uncomplicated lunch or supper main dish. Highly versatile Iceberg — also called Crisphead lettuce since the days when Christopher Columbus brought the first seeds to the New World — lends a fresh, delicate counterpoint as it does in so many different salads. Jarlsberg strips enhance the savory mixture.

Seafood recipes made with 'cold cooked' fish

By MARSHA KAY SEFF
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Just when sushi haters thought it was safe to order seafood again, ceviche came out of the water. Restaurateurs report that, like shark, ceviche has gained greatly in popularity in the last few years.

For those of you who still think we're talking about an Italian ice cream or a developing country, here's the line and sinker: Ceviche, or seviche, is a colorful and surprisingly palatable South American appetizer or main dish made of almost-raw fish.

"Almost" raw because the fish is actually "cooked" in citrus juice. "Cold cooked" is the term for marinating the fish in lemon or lime juice and thus changing its color and texture, much as heating would do.

There is some debate over which Latin country actually developed the piquant delicacy. Although Mexico claims it as its own, a Peruvian recipe is thought to have been the original.

According to Craig Claiborne, ceviche derives from the Spanish word cebollo, meaning onion. Originally, chopped onion was a dominant ingredient in any preparation of the fish and lime juice dish. Today, basic ingredients still include fish, citrus juice and onion, as well as chilies, cilantro and tomato.

After that, it's open season, and some variations do not contain onion at all.

CEVICHE RECIPES are as varied as the folks who like the puckery stuff. Even the type of fish differs from one kitchen to another. Corvina and sierra are the fish of choice in many Latin countries, although most white fish will do. Choices include everything from red snapper, halibut, swordfish, rockfish and mahi mahi to shrimp, scallops, lobster, squid and abalone.

While most chefs agree that fresher is better, others see no problem with using frozen fish. A flaky fish like cod, for example, is easier to cube when frozen.

Which brings us to another point of preference. Some cooks are meticulous in cubing the fish into quarter-inch pieces so that they absorb the marinade evenly. Others use bigger, irregular chunks; some even slice or chop it.

Marinades include lemon or lime juice, or a combination of the two. Orange juice or vinegar can be added. Sometimes, the fish is marinated separately; sometimes together with the other ingredients.

Some chefs marinate for 48 hours and others overnight. While some serve the appetizer in the citrus marinade, others drain it.

In addition to the basic ingredients, creative cooks may add a combination of fish, along with shredded carrots, celery, dried chili peppers, red and green bell peppers, cucumber, avocado, oregano, garlic, cuminos, sweet basil, olive oil, tomato juice, Tabasco or soy sauce and salsa. There's even a recipe that includes coconut cream.

Ceviche can be served as a cocktail with chips, stuffed in scallop shells or avocado halves or on top of tostadas. Some people enjoy it with French bread or even bagels, which help to neutralize the pungency.

HOWEVER IT is served, ceviche is a taste treat that doesn't improve with too much age. Although some chefs suggest eating it immediately, others claim that a week is the maximum shelf life.

Still, if the thought of raw fish — even one that supposedly is cold-cooked — makes your eyes water, here is some good news for landlubbers: Ceviche can be made with frankfurters instead of fish. We have included such a recipe from Aida Gabilondo, author of "Mexican Family Cooking."

BASIC CEVICHE
1 pound white fish, cubed
Juice of 2 lemons or 3 limes
2 tomatoes, blanched, peeled and chopped
1 jalapeno pepper, diced
2 serrano chilies, finely chopped
2 green onions, finely minced
1 teaspoon capers
Olive oil
Cilantro or parsley sprigs
Salt to taste

Cut fish into cubes and marinate overnight in juice. In the morning, pour off liquid and save. Place fish, tomatoes, peppers, onions and capers in a mixing bowl. Mix reserved liquid with tablespoon or 2 of olive oil and pour over fish mixture. Sprinkle with chopped parsley or cilantro. Stir, chill and add salt if desired. For a deluxe dish, add cubes of avocado and slice of lime just before serving.

(From "Authentic Mexican Cooking" by Paula Holt and Helene Juarez)

BONITA QUICKIE
½ pound bonita fillets, cut into 1-inch cubes
Lime juice to cover fish (approximately ¼ cup)
1 or 2 fresh serrano or other hot chilies, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
1 tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
Salt to taste
Thin slices of red onion or scallion to garnish

In small bowl, combine fish, chilies and cilantro. Cover with lime juice, tossing to moisten evenly. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour. Fifteen minutes before serving, add tomato and salt. Garnish with onion or scallions. Serve in avocado halves.

(From "The California Seafood Cookbook" by Isaac Cronin, Jay Harlow and Paul Johnson)

SCALLOP CEVICHE
1½ pounds scallops
½ cup fresh lemon juice
½ cup fresh lime juice
2 canned, peeled green chilies, seeded and chopped
Dash green chili sauce or Tabasco sauce
¼ cup thinly sliced green onions
2 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chopped fresh oregano or ¼ teaspoon crushed, dried oregano
¼ cup olive oil
Chopped pimiento and fresh coriander

If using sea scallops, cut in quarters and place in ceramic or glass bowl. Pour lemon and lime juices over and refrigerate overnight, stirring once or twice. Drain. Add chilies, chili sauce, green onions, tomatoes, salt, oregano and oil and mix lightly. Spoon into scallop shells and garnish with pimiento and fresh coriander.

(From "International Fish Cookery" by Lou Seibert Pappas)

ECUADORIAN CEVICHE
2 pounds striped bass fillets, skinned and cut into 1-inch pieces
1½ cups lime juice
1 cup orange juice
¾ cup olive oil
1 fresh, hot, red chili pepper, seeded and finely minced
1 clove garlic, finely minced
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 sprig cilantro, finely minced

Mix fish with other ingredients and toss gently. Regrigerate for at least 4 hours.

(From "The Fish-Lovers' Cookbook" by Sheryl and Mel London)

CEVICHE VERDE
1 pound fish fillets, chopped
¼ cup lime juice
¼ pound tomatillos
1 ripe avocado
1 clove garlic
Salt and pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup peeled, chopped tomatoes
½ cup chopped green onions
1 small, fresh jalapeno chili, seeded and chopped
1 teaspoon crushed oregano leaves
Chopped cilantro

Marinate chopped fish in lime juice for an hour. Drain and dry with paper towels. Remove dry outer skin from tomatillos and place them in blender; puree with peeled, chopped avocado and garlic. If too thick, add 2 tablespoons ice water. Add sugar to taste. Chop tomatoes, green onions and jalepeno chili. Add salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle with oregano leaves and stir in fish. Combine avocado mixture with fish mixture and sprinkle with cilantro. Serve with corn chips.

(From "Mexican Family Cooking" by Aida Gabilondo)

HOT DOG CEVICHE
2 cups thinly sliced or chopped frankfurters
1 cup chopped, peeled ripe tomatoes
½ cup chopped white onion
1 jalapeno, seeded and chopped
¼ cup chopped cilantro leaves
Salt and pepper
⅛ cup freshly squeezed lime or lemon juice

Mix all the above and chill in refrigerator. Drain off excess juice before serving.

Copley News Service

Freshwater fish and seafood are more popular than ever. Why? Fish is a nutritionally superior source of protein, and most are low in fat.

Lowest are freshwater (perch, trout) and white-fleshed saltwater varieties (cod, haddock, halibut, sole).

Herring, mackerel, salmon, sardines and tuna are higher in fat: up to 20 percent. But the kind of fat found here — Omega-3 — is actually good for you. This polyunsaturated fat helps lower blood cholesterol levels and lessens blood's tendency to clot, thus reducing the risk of heart attack.

Your skill in selecting high-quality fish has a lot to do with your final success at the dinner table. When buying whole fish, look for firmly attached scales, a mild and freshly fishy odor, and pinkish flesh around the gills. Eyes should be clear, bright, and slightly protruding (as fish loses freshness, eyes become cloudy and sunken).

All fish and seafood are highly perishable, and should be stored in the coldest part of your fridge (35 degrees Fahrenheit or colder). Refrigerate or freeze fish as soon as you get it home (plan to use fresh or thawed fish within two days).

Frozen fish defrosts rapidly in the microwave. To defrost 1 pound of frozen fillets, microwave on DEFROST (30 percent power) setting six to 10 minutes, turning every four minutes. Remove from oven while fish is still slightly icy to prevent toughening.

Fish and seafoods are naturally tender and quick-cooking. For best texture and flavor, cook only until fish is opaque and easily flaked with a fork — no longer. (The conventional 10-minute rule is no-go in the microwave.) Fish may be removed from the oven while it is still barely translucent in the center. It will finish cooking with standing time.

Fillets are usually baked in a shallow glass pan, covered with plastic wrap (turn back one corner to vent). In general, microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) about five to 10 minutes per pound of boneless fish, depending on thickness. Rotate once or twice during cooking if microwave has no turntable. About halfway thorough cooking time, begin fork-testing thickest parts of fillet to prevent overcooking.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

COMPANY FLOUNDER
4 flounder fillets (about 1 pound)
1 (11-ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom or shrimp soup
1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
¼ cup white wine
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley, or 1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
⅛ teaspoon each salt, pepper and paprika

Roll up flounder fillets and arrange, seam-side down, in 9-inch round glass pie plate. In mixing bowl combine condensed soup, mushrooms, wine and chopped or dried parsley. Spoon evenly over fillets.

Cover pie plate with plastic wrap, leaving an opening to vent. Microwave 6 to 9 minutes, or until fish is firm. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, then dust top with paprika. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

LEMON-BAKED TROUT WITH DILL
1 pound trout fillets
4 thin slices lemon
¼ cup white wine
2 tablespoons minced onion
Scant teaspoon grated lemon peel
⅛ teaspoon dried dill weed
4 teaspoons butter
⅛ teaspoon each salt and pepper

Arrange fillets in a 2-quart shallow microwave-safe baking dish, thickest portions toward outside. Top each fillet with a lemon slice. In 1-cup measure combine wine, onion, lemon peel and dill weed. Pour mixture evenly over fillets. Cover with plastic wrap, leaving 1 corner open to vent. Microwave 4 to 8 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with fork. Top each fillet with a teaspoon of butter, then sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Replace cover and let stand 3 minutes before serving.

Breaded fillets cook in minutes

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

For uniform microwave cooking, turn under any thin portions of the fillets to obtain an even thickness of about ½ inch. Crumbs go only on the top and sides so they don't absorb moisture and become soggy.

BREADED FISH FILLETS
1 pound fresh or frozen fish fillets, cut ½-inch thick
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
½ teaspoon curry powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
Dash garlic powder

Thaw fish, if frozen. In a microwave-safe custard cup cook margarine, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 40 to 50 seconds or until melted. For crumb coating, in a small bowl combine crumbs, curry powder, salt and garlic powder.

Separate fish into fillets. Arrange on wax paper. Brush with melted margarine. Coat tops and sides of fillets with crumb coating. Arrange fillets, coated side up, in an 8x8x2-inch baking dish with thicker portions toward edges of dish.

Cook, uncovered, on high 4 to 7 minutes or until fish flakes with fork, giving dish a half-turn after 4 minutes. Gently brush off any dry-looking crumb coating. Transfer fish to serving platter. Makes 4 servings.

Possible benefits of caffeine studied

Copley News Service

A couple of cups of coffee a day aren't going to kill you. In fact, the coffee may even keep you from having a heart attack.

According to physiologist Dr. Bernd Binder of Vienna, Austria, coffee — consumed in moderate amounts — can be good for you because the caffeine in it attacks an enzyme that causes vascular congestion and, as a result, heart attacks.

Binder's research shows that a few cups of coffee a day can cut the amount of dangerous enzymes in the bloodstream by half.

Loretta Lancaster

Loretta Lancaster has lived in Midland since 1968, and she and her husband, Jerry, have been the owners of Permian Court Reporters since 1973. Their business has offices in Midland and Odessa, and employ 16 reporters.

In addition to working in the business, Ms. Lancaster also is a member of Midland Legal Secretaries Association and has been elected to serve as vice president of the group next year. She is also a member of the Midland Downtown Lioness Club and Bellview Baptist Church Ladies Ensemble.

Ms. Lancaster said she also is active in Midland High School Band Boosters and plans to help chaperone the MHS Band when they travel to DisneyLand in Anaheim, Calif., to perform in a parade.

Although Midland is not exactly a waterfront city, some of the Lancasters' favorite activities are water sports. Their activities include boating, water skiing, camping or visiting San Angelo's lakes.

Because of her active lifestyle, Ms. Lancaster doesn't have a lot time to spend in the kitchen, so she prefers to cook food ahead or use a slow cooker. And, occasionally she talks her daughters, Monica, 15 and Sheila, 16, into helping in the kitchen.

"Sometimes I don't get home until 6:30 or 7 p.m.," Ms. Lancaster said. "I get the girls to put a meat loaf in the oven. Sheila also likes to make brownies," she said.

Ms. Lancaster said her family "loves to eat Mexican food, especially enchiladas or Navajo Tacos," as much as she "loves to cook it." She also said her Noodleless Lasagne, made with crescent rolls, is a family favorite. The meat sauce for the lasagne can be made ahead and frozen.

As a member of MLSA, Ms. Lancaster contributed some recipes to the group's cookbook. She said the club plans to produce a cookbook annually. She included some of her favorite recipes.

TUNNEL OF FUDGE

1½ cups margarine, softened
6 eggs
1½ cups sugar
2 cups flour
1 package Chocolate Fudge Frosting Mix
2 cups walnuts or pecans (optional)

Cream butter in large mixing bowl at high speed. Add eggs, one at time, beating well after each egg. Gradually add sugar while beating. Continue creaming mixture at high speed until light and fluffy. By hand stir in flour, frosting mix and nuts until well blended.

Pour batter into greased and floured Bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 60-65 minutes. Cool two hours and remove from pan. Store in airtight cake storer.

MEXICAN AVOCADO SALAD

¾ head lettuce, torn into pieces
½ onion chopped or fresh green onions
1 to 2 large avocados, cut into slices or diced
1 cup crushed corn chips, (not finely crushed)
Cheese sauce (recipe follows)

Put all ingredients in bowl. Mix.

CHEESE SAUCE:
¾ pound American cheese
½ cup milk

Mix together cheese and milk and cook over low heat or cook in microwave until cheese is melted. Add more milk if sauce is too thick. Pour over salad and serve immediately.

PEANUT BUTTER CUPS

½ pound of graham cracker crumbs
½ pound butter or margarine, melted
1 cup peanut butter
1 pound powdered sugar
12 ounces chocolate chips

Mix all ingredients except chocolate chips together and press into 9x13-inch pan. Melt 2 cups or 12-ounce chocolate chips and spread over mixture. Chill to set firm, if in a hurry. Cut into small squares.

NAVAJO TACOS

MEAT SAUCE:
4 cups of cooked pinto beans or 4 15-ounce cans
1 15-ounce can tomato sauce

Brown meat, drain and add other ingredients. Simmer for 30 minutes or until juice has cooked down.

FRY BREAD:
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 rounded tablespoon of shortening
1 to 1¼ cup tap water

Mix ingredients, cover and let sit 15 minutes. Fill skillet with about 1 to 2 inches of oil or shortening. Let get hot. Knead a large spoonful of dough onto floured board a few times. Roll out in round shape about the size of a large saucer. Punch hole in center and place in hot oil. Fry, turning once to brown on both sides. Drain on paper towels or paper sack. Continue cooking until all of dough is cooked.

Makes about 8-10 servings.

HAVE ON HAND:
Grated Colby longhorn cheese
Chopped onions
Chopped lettuce
Guacamole

Build tacos by beginning with fry bread, meat sauce and cheese. Add the other ingredients in layers.

NOTE: Meat sauce can be cooked ahead and refrigerated or frozen.

Mozzarella cheese
1 can cresent rolls
1 tablespoon milk
Sesame seeds

CHEESE FILLING:
1 cup creamed cottage cheese
1 egg
¼ cup parmesan cheese

Mix well and set aside.

Roll out ½ can of crescent rolls into a square on a floured board. Place onto cookie sheet. Spread ½ of meat mixture on top of crescent rolls, leaving one-inch border. Top with cheese filling, add remaining meat sauce. Top with cheese filling, add remaining meat sauce. Top this with slices of mozzarella cheese. Roll out remaining crecsent rolls into a square and place on top. Seal edges together. Brush top of crust with 1 tablespoon milk and sprinkle sesame seeds on top.

Cook at 350 degrees until golden brown. Cut into large squares to serve.

'Retro-food:' New York's taste of nostalgia

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Retro-food, the essence of soigne New York of 40 years ago, is being served at the the Rainbow Room for special benefits. Recent guests at the benefit for Citymeals-on-Wheels, which provides food for the homebound elderly, dined on dishes of legendary New York restaurants, most of them now closed.

The Retro-food menu includes lobster thermidor, quenelles eminence, sweetbreads with morels, rack of lamb persille, chocolate mousse cake and baked Alaska.

These dishes are fairly hard to come by, now that salsa, sushi and sorbet are in the ascendancy.

The butter, the cream, the calories! But who cares? This is the ultimate indulgence in nostalgia, classic recipes by classically trained chefs: Roland Chenus, the last chef at Le Pavillon; Jean Vergnes of Colony; Andre Ren'e of the Rainbow Room, once of the Pierre, and Michel Fitoussi of the Palace.

Fitoussi is practically an upstart compared with the others, having made his New York debut in 1976 at the opening of the Palace, New York's most expensive restaurant at the time. But during its brief life — it closed in 1983 — it represented the luxe for which the other restaurants are remembered.

During the heyday of these great restaurants, few questioned that baked Alaska (the invention of a Massachusetts man) was as classically French as the quenelles and lobster thermidor. It was a time when sweetbreads were $3, lobster thermidor $1.50 and baked Alaska for two was $2. It was long before the term nouvelle cuisine had passed the lips of Gault and Millau.

In a way, the Rainbow Room was the inspiration for the menu. "We were sitting around looking at our menu and at the room itself," said Joseph Baum, the operator and a co-owner, "and thought the evening should be one of memories that came from restaurants which were in existence when the Rainbow Room was."

The room, which opened in 1934 atop the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, closed two years ago and reopened this year after a multimillion-dollar renovation intended to make it look as it did 50 years ago. The food at the most recent benefit, Baum said, "was an extension of the items we have on our menu, like tournedos Rossini and pigeon en cocotte" — things that the Rainbow Room calls "dishes with tradition."

For $350, guests at benefits wash down their classic Continental-American dinner with "oceans of champagne Krug," and swap samples of the great vintages of the wines that each guest is expected to bring.

Most benefits are BYOB parties on a grand scale; at previous Citymeals benefits, $200 and $300 double magnums were passed around as casually as jugs of Gallo hearty burgundy.

Baum declined to put a price on the meal other than to say that if you ordered it in a restaurant "the cost would be outrageous."

Kefir: 'Champagne of milk'

By SHEILA SOBELL MORAMARCO
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Long before yogurt became a household word in the United States, people developed a nutritious, easy-to-digest dairy drink called kefir, which still is being enjoyed 2,000 years later.

A combination of low-fat pasteurized milk and other natural ingredients, kefir is thick and creamy. Ilya Metchnikoff, the 1908 Nobel Prize-winning scientist, dubbed kefir the "champagne of milk, a miraculous health-giving food."

Kefir's makers credit it with contributing to the long life of natives in the Caucasus Mountains, who often lead active lives past 100 years of age.

Mary Donkersloot, a registered dietitian of Personal Nutrition Management, agrees that kefir is a nutritious food. It's sweet, she says, and she considers it a dessert. She is skeptical, however, of kefir manufacturers' claims that link it with longevity.

As far as kefir's "health-giving" properties, the dietitian disagrees that any one food can be termed "health-giving." Rather, she says, a healthy diet is made up of a balance of food.

She does concur with maufacturers' claims that kefir will last 45 days in the refrigerator without spoiling.

Lifeway Foods is one of the makers of kefir. Mike Smolyansky of Lifeway says the recipe for kefir was passed along from God to Abraham. He says the people in Eastern and Western Europe and the Middle East are familiar with kefir and he offers reasons for its enduring popularity:

Kefir is higher in protein, lower in calories and lower in carbohydrates than premium brands of flavored yogurt.

Kefir contains more than 400 milligrams of calcium per 8-ounce serving, which is about 50 percent more than most comparable servings of milk. This calcium is absorbed more readily by the body.

Kefir has roughly one-third less lactose than most dairy products, making it ideal for the more than 29 million Americans who cannot drink milk.

Certified kosher, kefir is priced 10 percent to 35 percent lower per 8-ounce serving than most fruit-flavored yogurt.

Steve Novil, a nutritional consultant and director of research and development for Lifeway Foods, says kefir is high in B-complex vitamins, folic acid and cultures, so it is easy to digest, reduces gastrointestinal distress and helps the body absorb bone-saving calcium. He recommends kefir to his clients who have digestion problems.

Donkersloot thinks a direct comparison between kefir and yogurt is misleading, since one is liquid and one is solid.

"It's an apple and orange comparison." she says.

She also questions the benefit of kefir's being lower in carbohydrates, maintaining that a high-carbohydrate content would be more beneficial.

As to the calcium in kefir being absorbed more readily by the body, Donkersloot says, "More readily than what? It is an incomplete comparison, the calcium in all dairy products is absorbed better than that in vegetables, than in broccoli, for instance."

She agrees that kefir presents a good alternative for people who cannot drink milk due to lactose intolerance. The dietitian also concurs that the calcium content and ingredients in kefir make it an excellent dietary choice for pregnant women, nursing mothers, convalescents and the elderly.

Novil says he recommends kefir to his clients who are recovering from a serious illness or who are being treated with antibiotics. Kefir restores the natural intestinal flora that is wiped out by antibiotics.

Donkersloot counters that all cultured dairy products, of which kefir is one, restore the intestinal flora that is decreased by taking antibiotics.

Kefir is available in various flavors. Lifeway's kefir is packed in 32-ounce plastic bottles and comes in eight flavors. Low-fat peach, blueberry, banana-strawberry, strawberry, cappuccino, cherry, raspberry and low-fat and regular plain.

"We are confident that within two to three years, Americans will agree that kefir is the 'champagne of milk,'" Smolyansky says. "We intend to make kefir as popular here as it has been in Europe for 2,000 years."

Electronics salesman top winner in cooking contest

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Anthony DeSantis, a salesman for an electronics firm in Wilkes Barre, Pa., has won the $10,000 cash grand prize in the "Campbell's Soup Makes Good Food" recipe contest.

His prize-winning recipe for Wing Dingers, a spicy variation on Buffalo chicken wings, uses molasses, dry onion soup mix, hot pepper, taco and soy sauces.

Betty Cronin, director of Campbell's cooking soups (those soups used most often as ingredients in recipes), says there were nearly 30,000 contest entries from every state in the nation, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

From the initial entries, 17 category winners were named, one for each cooking soup variety. Category winners were then judged against one another to select the recipient of the $10,000 grand prize.

The second grand prize winner was Priscilla Yee of Concord, Ca., and her El Paso Apple Praline Cake, and the third grand prize winner was Denise Carter of Wichita Falls, Texas, for her spicy Astro Huevos egg-in-tortilla dish.

The following is DeSantis' grand prize-winning recipe:

WING DINGERS

1 pouch Campbell's Onion Soup and Recipe Mix
½ cup molasses
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup taco sauce
1 to 2 teaspoons hot pepper sauce
⅛ cup lemon juice
18 chicken wings (about 3 pounds)

In large bowl, combine all ingredients except chicken wings. Add chicken wings; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate at least 2 hours or overnight.

In 15x10-inch jellyroll pan, place chicken wings and marinade in a single layer. Bake at 400 degrees F for 45 minutes, basting occasionally. Makes 4 servings.

Appetizers: Cut wings in 3 pieces, reserving tips for another use.

DEAR ABBY

Bisexuals remain locked in closet

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I saw you on the Phil Donahue show recently and was delighted when you said, "There is far more bisexuality around than anyone suspects."

I am a male, 64, and have been married for more than 40 years. I was a pilot in World War II, had a few flings with women, married shortly after the war and fathered several fine children.

When I was 27, my employer sent me and another male employee, whom I admired, to a one-week training program in another city. We shared a motel room with twin beds. This man had also been in the Air Corps and had a lovely wife and one child, as did I at the time. On the third night, we had no homework, so we went to a topless bar, had a few drinks and went back to our motel. Amid a little horseplay and rib-poking, we kind of fell on one of the beds together. That was the beginning of a very long bisexual relationship. He died two years ago and I have grieved ever since.

Not once in all those years was there any indication that there was anything between us either at work or in the presence of our families.

I loved that man and he loved me. Our relationship lasted for 40 years, and neither of us took anything away from our families. It was far more than a sexual attraction — we were best friends, closer than brothers. His children called me "Uncle."

I know that bisexuality is frowned upon by others. But I have no regrets. — IN THE CLOSET IN CLEVELAND

DEAR IN: Yours is a very large closet. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised that you were surprised by the number of bisexuals who surfaced in your survey. I am a male bisexual. The mental health professionals probably include us in the 10 percent labeled "gays." True, the majority of bisexuals use the gays for same-sex relations.

You are correct to question percentages, Abby. We bisexuals are so closeted we don't even know each other. We are in your heterosexual world — usually "happily" married, helping to rear our children with the same moral, ethical, caring values as you. We may be pillars of the community and part of that lovely family down the street. We cross all ethnic and financial lines. Most of you know one of us and consider us your close heterosexual friend, working buddy or acquaintance. Although this letter has little chance of reaching your readers, in order to protect my job, wife, children, heterosexual and bisexual friends, I must sign myself ... NO NAME, NO TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: After my survey, I read an illuminating book titled "The Bisexual Spouse." It contains interviews with bisexual couples, married and divorced. It also includes enlightening comments by Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and past president of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. The book is edited by Ivan Hill, published by Barlina Books Inc., P.O. Box 7425, McLean, Va. 22106, and sells for $16.95. It is especially timely in this age of AIDS.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Abby's Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

We caught up with globetrotter Zia Mahmood, voted the 1987 Bridge Player of the Year by the International Bridge Press Association, at one of his favorite New York eating places, Abe's Steak House on Third Avenue. Not even the excellent fare could keep the conversation off bridge, and we soon had a collection to share with you.

On this one from a high-stake rubber bridge game, Zia held the West cards and took advantage of the vulnerability and his honors to open three clubs. With the boost of some excellent judgment by North, North-South still reached a sound slam contract.

Zia led the top of his club sequence. Declarer won the ace and cashed the ace of trumps, on which Zia smoothly furnished the jack. Suddenly declarer had a choice of lines. He was understandably reluctant to lead another trump in case East could win and play a third round, leaving declarer dependent on a 3-3 diamond break. Since West, who was marked with club length, rated to be short in diamonds and apparently held either a singleton or K-J bare of trumps, declarer saw no harm in abandoning trumps and first playing on diamonds.

Declarer was devastated when West ruffed the third diamond with the deuce of trumps. South still had to concede a trick to the king of hearts for down one.

Note that had West routinely followed with a low trump on the ace, declarer would have had no option but to lead a second heart. The slam would then have rolled home.

Randy Travis picks up five Viewers' Choice Awards on Nashville Network

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Randy Travis won five categories, including favorite entertainer and top male vocalist at the fan-voted Viewers' Choice Awards.

Travis won every eligible category Tuesday night, while Reba McEntire was voted favorite female singer by viewers of The Nashville Network.

Travis, 28, also won for album of the year, top video and No. 1 song. His winning album was "Always and Forever" and the video and the song were "Forever and Ever, Amen." He shared the song honor with the co-writers, Paul Overstreet and Don Schlitz.

His albums "Always and Forever" and "Storms of Life" have sold more than 1 million copies each. He received a Grammy Award in February for the single "Always and Forever" and won three awards in March from the Academy of Country Music.

His awards Tuesday night were announced during a live, 90-minute show broadcast from the Grand Ole Opry House by TNN, a 5-year-old cable channel that reaches 40 million households.

The Oak Ridge Boys were voted favorite group, earning their first award in years by outpolling perennial winners Alabama and the Judds.

Ricky Van Shelton won favorite newcomer on the basis of his No. 1 album, "Wild-Eyed Dream."

DENVER (AP) — Comedians Billy Crystal and Paul Rodriguez joked about being serious as they presented $220,140 to a health clinic for the homeless and announced the third Comic Relief telethon.

Crystal

"Sometimes it's good to laugh at even the worst thing in the world," Crystal said at a news conference Tuesday at the Stout Street Clinic for the homeless in downtown Denver.

The clinic, whose official opening was today in a former Universal Studios building, is the first recipient of $2 million raised by more than 50 comedians during the 1987 Comic Relief, supported and televised by Home Box Office last November.

Health care for the homeless in 22 other cities also will be given funds.

One goal of the benefit was to increase awareness of the problem, Rodriguez said.

"When you think of the homeless, you think of bums; that's why people have a hard time digging in their pockets," Rodriguez said. "I walked into a center, I saw children with their mothers."

EL PASO (AP) — Miguel Pedraza Sr., who helped persuade Congress to recognize the Tigua Indian tribe that he governed, died Sunday at age 83.

Pedraza Sr.

The small tribe was recognized in 1967 after Pedraza and other tribal officials drove to Washington, D.C., to testify before a joint committee.

The Tiguas became the first tribe to be recognized by the U.S. government in 50 years.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Rock star Mick Jagger got some satisfaction from a federal court jury, which rejected a reggae musician's claim that Jagger had pirated his song "Just Another Night."

Fans who had packed the small courtroom burst into applause after the verdict was read Tuesday.

"My reputation is really cleared," Jagger said. "If you're well-known, people stand up and take shots at you. It's one of those things in a litigious society."

Patrick Alley, 36, of New York City, had accused Jagger of copyright infringement, claiming the chorus of Jagger's song was lifted from Alley's 1979 tune, also called "Just Another Night."

"I still believe and I know that's my song," Alley said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actresses Glenn Close and Pam Dawber became first-time mothers in a sudden increase of celebrity births.

In a Los Angeles hospital Monday, Miss Dawber gave birth to an 8-pound, 14-ounce boy with actor-husband Mark Harmon watching the delivery. Sean Thomas Harmon measured 22 inches long, said Miss Dawber's publicist, Carla Schalman. The hospital wasn't identified to assure privacy, she said.

It is the first child for Harmon, 36, and Miss Dawber, 35, who were married 13 months ago.

Close, star of "Fatal Attraction," gave birth Tuesday to a 7-pound, 12-ounce girl in an undisclosed East Coast hospital. The girl has yet to be named.

Producer John Starke, 37, the baby's father, and Miss Close, 41, are not married.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — LeVar Burton and Louis Gossett Jr. will recreate their roles as Kunta Kinte and Fiddler in a television movie, "Roots Christmas," 12 years after work started on the original "Roots" production.

The ABC movie was scheduled to go into production here today.

Production started on "Roots," Alex Haley's epic of a black family's journey from Africa to slavery to freedom, on April 28, 1976, in Savannah, Ga.

"Roots Christmas" dramatizes "the inherent lust for freedom that motivated early mass escapes of slaves, which paved the way for the...Underground Railroad," Haley said at a news conference Tuesday at Burbank Studios.

The setting for the tale is Christmas 1770. The Underground Railroad was a system of safe houses set up by abolitionists to move slaves to freedom in the years before the Civil War.

"In the course of researching 'Roots,' there was such a breadth of things that I could only select some of them for the book," Haley said. "One of the things that intrigued me was the sporadic, undisciplined efforts of the slaves to run away. I had been reading about the Underground Railroad and felt this would work well with a Christmas setting."

New York (NYT) — Frederick Douglass Patterson, founder of the United Negro College Fund and president emeritus of the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, died Tuesday after suffering a heart attack at his home in New Rochelle, N.Y. He was 86.

Under his leadership, the college fund became the largest independent source of money for the nation's private, historically black colleges and universities, providing for student scholarships, staff salaries, library resources, laboratories and new teaching programs.

Patterson, who was named after the black journalist and anti-slavery leader Frederick Douglass, was born in Washington on Oct. 10, 1901.

Exotic vegetables add to diet

Copley News Service

If you were to take a peek into the average fridge and pull open the vegetable drawer, what do you think you'd find there? Most likely some carrots and celery, maybe some green beans and a head of cabbage or broccoli, a squash or a few ears of corn, depending on the season.

Most cooks have potatoes on hand, and maybe some salad fixings and a few green and yellow veggies — most of them commonly found at the corner market. They're all nutritious and tasty, but pretty mundane and familiar.

Even more so than other cooks, vegetarians should be a bit adventurous in their choice of foods. Since we don't eat meat, our diet benefits greatly from a wider variety of vegetables. And because of the increasing interest in ethnic foods, a number of foreign-sounding (and tasting) veggies are finding their way into local markets.

■ Bok choy — a crisp member of the cabbage family and rather like a Chinese version of Swiss chard (it can stand in for fresh spinach in many recipes).

■ Daikon (or "low bok") — the large and carrot-shaped Japanese radish which is eaten raw, like the more familiar round red radish, but is also served pickled, stir-fried, or deep-fried in tempura batter. This is Japan's No. 1 vegetable crop.

■ Hakusai, or Chinese cabbage (also sold as Peking, Napa, and celery cabbage) — subtle in flavor, with longish, thin leaves, white stalks and tender green leaves, it is equally good in a stir-fry or shredded raw into a salad.

■ Lotus roots — a popular ingredient in Chinese soups.

■ Snow peas — the flat, tender pea pods that need only the briefest steaming or stir-frying (never overcook these these delicate morsels).

■ Chayote — a strange-looking squash rather like a large, furrowed, pale green pear covered with thin spines. The squash contains only one large seed. Remove this and you have a perfect boat for stuffing. Use as you would zucchini.

■ Jicama — a crisp, crunchy tuber with glistening white flesh. Cut raw jicama into julienne strips, sprinkle with lemon or lime juice (to prevent discoloration), and add to salads or serve strips with crudites and dip. The root also can be cooked in the same manner as a potato (boil, fry, etc.).

■ Plantains — really a fruit (closely related to the banana), but never eaten raw. Very starchy and an important staple in tropical climes.

A few more veggies of note:

■ Fennel (or "finocchio") — a member of the parsley family cultivated for its seeds, leaves (which make a nice garnish), and root, all of which sport a mild aniseed flavor. Serve the root raw or cooked.

■ Radicchio — the deep red chicory leaves so popular in chichi restaurants. Radicchio tastes slightly bitter, and is quite high in vitamin C. The leaves add a vibrant touch of color to salad plates.

■ Salsify — a root vegetable which, raw or cooked, is said to taste something like an oyster (which is why it is also known as the "Oyster Plant").

SPICED CREAM SALSIFY

2 pounds salsify
2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 cup heavy cream
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Dash each salt and pepper
¼ cup minced parsley

Wash and trim salsify. With vegetable peeler scrape off outer covering of root; cut flesh into 2-inch chunks. Place in pot and add boiling water to a depth of 1 inch. Add lemon juice. Cook over medium heat until just tender, 5-10 minutes. Drain thoroughly.

Melt butter in stove-top casserole dish; add onion and saute, stirring constantly, about 1 minute. Add salsify and toss gently. Reduce heat to low. Add all remaining ingredients except parsley, cover, and simmer 5-10 minutes longer, or until heated through and salsify is tender. Sprinkle with parsley just before serving.

CHEDDAR CHEESE STUFFED CHAYOTES

3 large chayote squash
6 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mild cheddar cheese, shredded
2 tablespoons chopped black olives
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Dash paprika

Wash chayotes, cut in two lengthwise, and place in pot. Cover with water, add salt, and bring to a boil over high heat. Cover, reduce heat to moderate, and continue to boil 40-50 minutes, or until chayote is fork-tender.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Drain chayotes, remove cores, and scoop out pulp (being careful not to break shells). Arrange shells on lightly oiled baking sheet. Combine pulp with cheese, olives, butter and pepper. Mound mixture into shells, then sprinkle tops with bread crumbs and dust with paprika.

Bake in preheated oven 25-30 minutes, or until heated through and tops are golden brown.

FENNEL SALAD

2 large heads fennel
1 whole lemon
1 medium tomato, cut into 8 thin wedges
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons light cream or half-and-half
¼ teaspoon sugar
Dash each salt and pepper
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Wash and trim fennel and cut in fine shred with a sharp knife. Place in serving bowl. Peel lemon and remove all seeds and membrane. Chop flesh and toss with fennel. Arrange tomato wedges around edge of bowl.

Combine all remaining ingredients except parsley in small jar; cover and shake to blend well. Drizzle over salad, garnish with chopped parsley and serve immediately.

Kentucky recipes in Derby Museum's cookbook

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

There's lots of good Kentucky cooking in the "Kentucky Derby Museum Cook Book" and fancy recipes for entertaining, too. The museum, located next to Churchill Downs where the race is run, honors Derby winners, their breeders, trainers and jockeys.

Recipes include Southern classics such as Kentucky burgoo, chess pie, beaten biscuits with country ham and corn pudding.

In any crowd of Derby-goers, you'll find a dozen recipes for a mint julep, the traditional drink of the Derby. The museum cookbook offers four versions and we sampled two.

MINT JULEPS

1 cup sugar
1 cup water
1 bunch fresh mint sprigs (2 ounces or about 2 cups lightly packed)
Crushed ice
Kentucky bourbon

Combine sugar and water and boil for 5 minutes without stirring. Cool. Place mint in a jar with a lid; add syrup. Refrigerate overnight. Remove mint. Keep syrup refrigerated. This will keep several weeks and individual juleps may be made as desired.

For each serving, fill an 8-ounce glass with crushed ice. Add 1 tablespoon syrup, 1 tablespoon water and 2 ounces (¼ cup) bourbon. Stir gently until glass is frosted. Insert straw and garnish with a sprig of mint.

MR. CLOSSON'S MINT JULEP

1 cup sugar
1 cup water
2 cups lightly packed fresh mint
1 (1-liter) bottle Kentucky bourbon
Crushed ice

Combine sugar and water; boil 5 minutes without stirring. Cool and refrigerate. Fill a bottle or jar with mint leaves; fill with bourbon. Let stand 3 days at room temperature. Remove and discard leaves.

For each serving, fill a glass with crushed ice. Add 1 to 1½ tablespoons syrup and 2 ounces (¼ cup) mint-flavored bourbon. Stir. Garnish with sprig of mint.

Grapes: Not just snacks anymore

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Sure, grapes are super for eating out of hand. But grab a bunch and give some of these fun and fancy ideas a try, too.

■ Beverage stirrer: Alternate different-colored grapes on a skewer and slip into a tall glass of iced tea or lemonade. Kids will like them for juice or summer drinks, too.

■ Drink coolers: Cool a thirst quencher without diluting it. Place whole, rinsed grapes on a shallow pan and freeze until solid. Wrap grapes in freezer bags to store. Seal. Use the grapes in place of ice cubes. Munch a few for a refreshing snack.

■ Crunchy snacks: Rinse whole seedless grapes and pat dry. Roll the grapes in fruit-flavored, soft-style cream cheese, then in granola or finely ground nuts. Chill in the refrigerator until serving time.

■ Salad sprucer: Stir seeded, halved grapes into a creamy main-dish salad made with tuna, chicken, turkey or ham.

■ Sauce dress-ups: Serve poached chicken breasts or fish fillets Veronique-style. Just stir halved, seeded grapes into an orange- or wine-based sauce near the end of the cooking time. Heat through. Or add sweetness to an orange or lemon dessert sauce by stirring in halved, seeded grapes.

■ Cake fix-up: Make a border or decoration on a frosted cake or a cheesecake. Use different-colored whole or halved grapes. Lightly press the grapes into the surface.

■ Sugared grape clusters: Brush a small cluster of grapes with egg white, then dip in granulated sugar. Let dry on a wire rack. Enjoy as a dessert or use as an edible garnish.

Dishes made with Kentucky bourbon perfect for Derby Day

By LORNA J. SASS
Copley News Service

BARDSTOWN, Ky. — In this land of bluegrass and bourbon, all eyes will be cast toward the Churchill Downs in Louisville on May 7.

For that is Derby Day and, as always, one of the world's most famous horse races will be heralded with raised silver goblets of mint juleps and large brunch and dinner parties featuring such regional specialties as Kentucky burgoo, country ham and beaten biscuits. Dessert, of course, will be Derby Pie.

Although bourbon is best known as a beverage, here and there in the kitchens of Kentucky, cooks have devised tasty dishes using their native whiskey — no great surprise since more than 90 percent of the bourbon consumed in this country is produced in the 17 distilleries nestled in the rolling hills that ring Louisville.

Bourbon is a uniquely American drink, and by congressional order, no alcohol designated as "bourbon whiskey" may be imported into this country. If you ask a Kentuckian, he will tell you that his state is the only state that produces bourbon, a statement that is only about a 10 percent exaggeration of the truth.

KENTUCKY BOURBON has had a rough-and-tumble history, made all the more colorful by such legendary characters as Carry Nation who, wielding a hatchet in one hand and a Bible in the other, brought national attention to the Prohibition movement around the turn of the century. (To this day, 96 out of 120 Kentucky counties are dry.)

But the Kentucky distillers had had a good head start. By the late 1700s, farmers emigrating from Pennsylvania had discovered that much of central Kentucky sits over a limestone shelf. The limestone acts as a natural filter to water, and it is the fresh spring water — free of iron and other minerals — that contributes to the unique taste of bourbon.

Couple this factor with fertile, corn-producing soil and four distinct seasons to nurture the aging process, and you have a product as inexorably tied to the land as Parmesan cheese is to Parma and clotted cream is to Devon.

Curiously enough, the first bourbon distiller is believed to have been a reverend named Elijah Craig, who in 1789, concocted a whiskey drink of corn, rye, barley, malt and other grains. Word of this early whiskey spread quickly and as time went on, so much of the spirit was produced in and around Bourbon County that the name bourbon came to stand for Kentucky whiskey. By 1811, (19 years after Kentucky became a state), approximately 2,000 farm-oriented distilleries were operational in Kentucky.

These early distillers were already using the white oak, charred aging barrels that contribute to the unique flavor and amber color of bourbon. Nowadays, although small stills and manual labor have been replaced by enormous stills operated by computer technology, use of these white oak barrels is still considered an indispensable part of the process. All Kentucky bourbon is aged for a minimum of four years.

No sampling of bourbon recipes can omit instructions for making a mint julep, a powerful drink that visitors to Kentucky generally find themselves sipping very slowly. A silver julep cup is the ideal vessel for serving the drink as it can be chilled so well, but a glass tumbler does quite nicely in a pinch. This and the following two recipes have been adapted from Marion Flexner's superb cookbook "Out of Kentucky Kitchens," published in 1949.

MINT JULEP
1 teaspoon superfine sugar (or more, to taste)
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint leaves
1 tablespoon water
Shaved or crushed ice to fill the goblet
1 to 2 ounces Kentucky bourbon
A few sprigs of fresh mint

Place sugar and chopped mint in small bowl. Bruise mint well with muddler or back of wooden spoon, until mixture becomes pastelike. Add water and stir into thickish green syrup. Fill julep cup or glass half-full with shaved ice. Put mint syrup and then bourbon to taste over ice. Fill glass to top with additional ice and garnish with sprigs of mint. Just before serving, imbed straw deeply into crushed ice and cut it to approximate height of the mint.

BOURBON BARBECUE SAUCE
1 cup ketchup
⅓ cup bourbon
¼ cup molasses
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Mix all ingredients together and let stand at room temperature for several hours before using.

This mixture makes a tasty marinade or basting sauce for hamburgers or spareribs.

BUTTERMILK BOURBON PIE
1 (9-inch) pie crust
3 large eggs
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups buttermilk
3 tablespons melted butter
3 tablespoons Kentucky bourbon
⅓ cup currants (optional)
Freshly grated nutmeg

Prick and pre-bake pie pastry at 425 degrees for 10 minutes. Set aside.

Prepare filling by beating eggs with sugar until light and lemon-colored. Beat in flour and then buttermilk. Finally, beat in butter and bourbon and currants, if desired. Pour filling into pre-baked pie crust add grate a bit of nutmeg on top. Bake in oven preheated to 375 degrees just until filling sets, about 20-30 minutes. Serve warm or at room temperature.

CHOCOLATE BOURBON BALLS
1 cup ground vanilla wafers or day-old (dry) pound cake
1 cup ground pecans
2 tablespoons cocoa powder
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
3 or 4 tablespoons Kentucky bourbon
Confectioners' sugar

Mix ground wafers or cake with ground pecans and cocoa. Stir in corn syrup and 3 tablespoons of bourbon. Knead slightly until mixture will form a mass, adding more bourbon if necessary.

Taking a teaspoon at a time, form the dough into small balls. Roll them in confectioners' sugar and place on rack or cookie sheet to dry out for about 2-3 hours. Then roll once more in confectioners' sugar. Wrap each bourbon ball separately in waxed paper or plastic wrap and store in an airtight box.

Choosing brands requires care

Copley News Service

Elmer Lee, the master distiller at Blanton's, has provided the following guidelines for doing a bourbon tasting.

You'll need a clean snifter or goblet large enough to accommodate your nose, and you'll need a container to spit in. (Two to three swallows can deaden your taste buds.) You'll also need a good supply of distilled or spring water and a variety of bourbons.

For each brand, pour small but equal amounts of bourbon and water into your glass. Take a small amount in your mouth and swirl it around for a few seconds. Then spit it out and rinse out your mouth with water.

Hold the goblet up to your nose and inhale gently. You should get a pleasant, full, rounded bouquet of caramel and alcohol that is not raw or medicinal.

Take a very small amount of whiskey and let it lie on the front of the tongue and breathe very lightly and slowly in and out of your nose, with your mouth closed. With a very good bourbon, you will experience a slightly sweet, caramel alcohol taste that is pleasant, without any bite or bitter taste.

Spit out the whiskey, forcing it through your lips. This allows the taste sensors on your lips to double-check the taste buds in your mouth and tongue. Once you have spit out the whiskey, the flavor should not rebound.

After each sampling, you should wash your mouth out with water.

Copley News Service

Sauerkraut juice can help overweight people shed unwanted weight without doing exercise, claims Virginia voodoo priest Dr. Buzzard.

Just drink one glass of chilled sauerkraut juice in the morning and one at bedtime. Continue the process for two weeks, then lay off for five days and begin again.

However, Buzzard says you need to buy pure sauerkraut juice.

Midland Lee's Brian Bishop
...Region I qualifier

Lee's Bishop looks for upset

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Midland Lee tennis player Brian Bishop doesn't give himself much hope of qualifying for next month's state high school tennis tournament out of the Region I tourney at the Lubbock Tennis Center Friday and Saturday. But then again, who would have thought he'd make it to regionals in the first place?

The lanky Rebel junior was unseeded going into District 4-5A play at Abilene last weekend, but stunned top seed Aaron Layman of Odessa Permian in the singles semifinals to become the first Lee netter in at least 16 years to earn a regional berth in boys singles. Bishop was defeated by San Angelo's Will Tankersley in the finals, but the first two players in each division advanced to regional play.

BISHOP WASN'T even considered Lee's top male singles player this season, but No. 1 Rebel Stephen Lintzen dropped a close match to Midland High's Luke Morrow early in the district tournament.

Alex O'Brien of Amarillo Tascosa and Michael Martinez of Wichita Falls are odds-on favorites to go one-two in boys singles. That's where losing to Tankersley in the district finals may hurt Bishop, because the winners from one district are paired with runners-up from another district in the draw - thus Bishop runs the risk of meeting O'Brien or Martinez in the early rounds.

O'Brien is a nationally-ranked singles player who has beaten professional players, while Martinez is considered to be nearly his equal. Bishop doesn't classify himself at their level, but Rebel coach Bobby Connell said the 6-foot-3, 150-pounder has the physical capabilities to make them work for their state berth.

"He's really going up to play the best he can, but he's got a good enough game to win," Connell said. "A lot of kids can play well in spurts, but Brian can play well consistently.

"Brian has more of an overall game than most kids," Connell added. "He doesn't mind hitting ground strokes, but he can also play serve-and-volley. A lot of the other kids are either one way or the other, but Brian can adapt to the other player's weaknesses."

Connell also lauds Bishop's efficient work habits. "Brian can get a lot done in a short period of time."

Bishop said he developed his consistent style of play through hours of instruction from Racquet Club instructor Joe Don McBeth and plenty of encouragement from parents Don and Kay.

"My parents started me in all the sports," he said. "I played baseball at these fields over here (pointing to the ball fields adjacent to Rusk Elementary School), then I started really getting into tennis.

"I was taken to the Racquet Club when I was about five years old," Bishop added. "Then I played in some junior tournaments here at Lee, before qualifying to play in USTA (United States Tennis Association) tournaments."

MHS claims playoff berth

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs clinched a District 4-5A playoff spot Tuesday, defeating Odessa High 11-1 in a game called after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

At 9-2, the Bulldogs clinched at least second place with only Abilene Cooper remaining on the district schedule. Saturday's game between the Bulldogs and Cooper will be for the district championship and will decide who sits in the driver's seat as the playoffs begin.

Tuesday's game marked the end of the season for the Odessa High Bronchos, who finish at 5-7. The Bronchos were much improved over last year, but the last two games have proven to be too much for the Bronchos, as they've been outscored by opponents 34-4.

The Bulldogs took advantage of seven OHS errors, and of the 11 MHS runs, only the four scored in the Midland High fifth inning were earned.

Leadoff hitter Tony Perez drove in Dorey Thompson and Jason Stone as the 'Dogs jumped to a decisive 9-1 lead in what would be the last frame. After shortstop Jamie Surratt flied out to center, back to back RBI sinlges by Eric Boyt and Scott Mowles drove in the Bulldogs' final two runs to end the game.

The Bulldogs also had a three run third and a two run fourth.

Odessa High collected its lone run in the first inning on Tony Villalobos' RBI single, driving in centerfielder Jessie Paz.

Despite the recent school district policy violations and athlete suspensions experienced by Midland High, the team successfully turned off the field controversy into on-field prosperity.

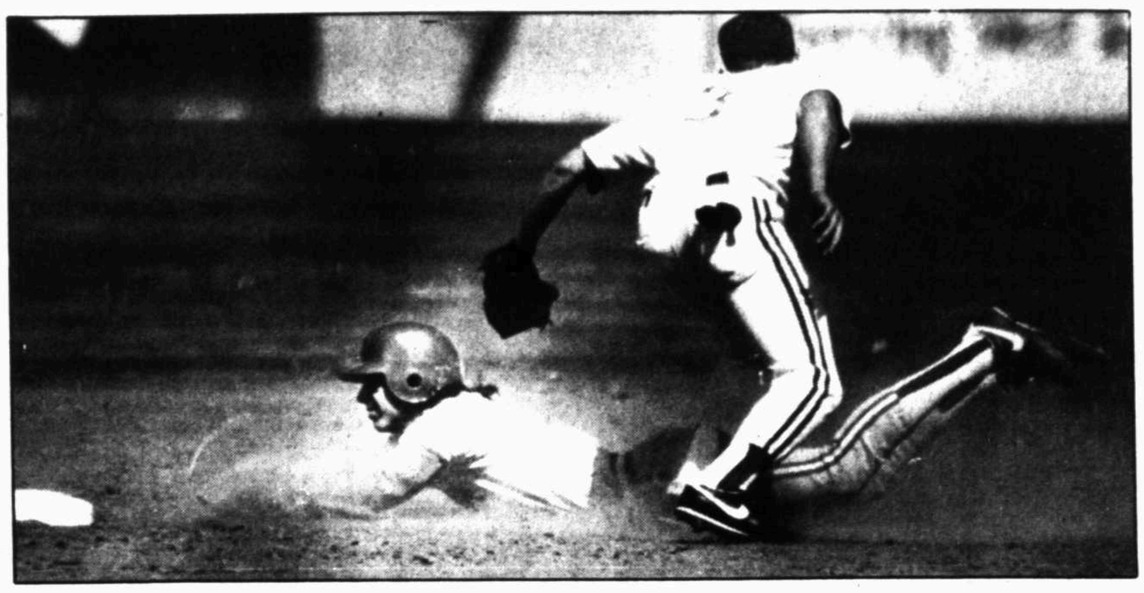
"This was a big win for the kids today," MHS head coach Tim Whalen said. "They really overcame adversity. We're just not going to mention it anymore and just go out, play baseball and win the district championship."

Not one to take victory for granted, Whalen said the Bronchos were a concern for him.

"I was concerned," he said. "I really didn't sleep at all last night. Tossin' and turnin', all I kept seeing was Hilbert Anaya, Hilbert Anaya. I was thankful the wind was blowing in today."

Anaya, whose three homers lead the district, is also the ace pitcher of the OHS staff. Anaya, though, had an off day, yielding eight hits, five walks and the four earned runs. Only three MHS batters fell to strikes.

MHS' Joe Rendon, now 2-0, was the winning pitcher, allowing six hits and only one earned run while striking out five and walking only two.



Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's Jason Stone foils a stolen base attempt by Odessa High's James Villalobos after receiving a throw from MHS catcher Scott Mowles during the first inning of Tuesday's game.

"Midland's a good ball club," Odessa High head coach Milton Thompson said. "They're well disciplined, good hitters. With the problems they've had recently, they need to be up. I wish them all the success in the playoffs.

"(The OHS season) was a positive learning experience with young talent. We've still got a long way to go. Next year will be the year we really begin to put everything together in our program."

Odessa High ends the year with a 7-12 overall record.

For Midland High, following Saturday's date with the Cooper Cougars, the playoff road begins. The Bulldogs' first opponent will be the District 3-5A representative. After Tuesday action, Lubbock Monterey has a playoff spot clinched with Plainview and Lubbock Coronado fighting it out for the final spot.

Rebels pull off rally to defeat Bobcats, 10-5

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee Rebels are showing signs of doing what they want — salvaging a respectable season out of one that earlier showed signs of disaster.

The Rebs took another step in achieving that goal Tuesday, coming from behind to beat the San Angelo Bobcats 10-5.

With Lee leading 1-0, San Angelo exploded for five runs to lead 5-1 in the bottom of the third.

But a seemingly safe lead for San Angelo didn't last long. Lee responded with its own five run outburst in the top of the fourth to jump ahead 6-5. The Rebels would tack on another four before game's end to ensure the victory.

In the monstrous fourth, Lee knocked out three triples and one double in sending 10 batters to the plate. The three triples doubled the team's three-base hit total for the year — and all in one inning. Responsible for the production were Cal Jenkins, Paul Bacon and Blaine McAnally, who had the triples, and Kemp Laidley, who answered with his double.

Bacon, the Rebel third baseman, finished the night a perfect 3-for-3 with three runs scored and two RBI. Right-fielder Chad Brooks was 3-for-4 with three RBI. Jenkins went 2-for-4 and second baseman Dudley Jordan knocked in another two runs with a double in the seventh.

Jenkins, the starting pitcher, went the distance, striking out eight, walking four and allowing seven hits. With the win, Jenkins ran his record to 5-2 in district, 7-4 on the year.

San Angelo used three pitchers with Roman Zamarrippa taking the loss. Zamarrippa, now 0-4 in district, pitched 3⅓ innings, yielding seven hits and five earned runs.

The win for the Rebs moves them to 11-10 overall and 6-5 in district, good for third place thusfar; San Angelo falls to 6-13 and 3-8, for sixth place in district.

Lee concludes its season Saturday against Abilene High at Lee Field.

Twins' Viola keeps Orioles winless

Associated Press

Frank Viola called it just another game. Gary Pettis said it wasn't.

Viola and Pettis were talking about different games but they both came away winners Tuesday night.

Quizzed whether the prospect of becoming the first pitcher to lose to the Orioles caused Viola a restless evening, he said: "I slept 17 hours last night."

Then the well-rested Viola pitched the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 triumph over winless Baltimore, extending the Orioles' losing streak to 19 games, one short of the American League record. The major-league mark is 23.

"I think the seventh game of the World Series was more important than playing Baltimore at 0-18," the World Series MVP said. "I don't care if Baltimore's 0-18 or 0-150. They always play us tough."

Pettis, meanwhile, couldn't wait to face his former California teammates.

"When I woke up it was already on my mind that we were playing the Angels," Pettis said after driving in three runs in Detroit's 6-0 victory. "I had to tell myself not to think about it. But myself talked back.

"I'd find myself thinking about the game and it was only 2 p.m. so I had to keep telling myself to forget about it. It was a day-long battle."

Pettis, traded to Detroit last winter for pitcher Dan Petry, drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and singled home another in the Tigers' four-run fifth.

"We were talking about this on the bench," California manager Cookie Rojas said. "A lot of times after you trade a guy he comes back to hurt you."

Meanwhile, Jeff Robinson pitched a six-hitter, walked five and struck out three for his second major-league shutout. Loser Mike Witt gave up seven hits and all the Detroit runs in five innings.

"The first hit by Pettis was where I wanted it," Witt said. "He doesn't hit with authority, but he hit that one good enough to get it through."

American League

Rangers 3, Brewers 1

Jose Guzman pitched a three-hitter and Pete Incaviglia homered. Guzman struck out eight and lowered his ERA to 1.41 in 32 innings. It was the ninth time in 18 games this season that Texas pitchers have allowed two or fewer runs.

Incaviglia's single triggered a two-run second inning against Chris Bosio that included Steve Kemp's sacrifice fly and Mike Stanley's RBI double. Incaviglia homered in the fourth.

Guzman had a career ERA of 8.28 and an 0-3 record against Milwaukee.

Indians 12, Mariners 6

Joe Carter continued his torrid hitting with two homers and five RBI and Jay Bell and Brook Jacoby drove in three runs apiece. Carter has hit five of his seven home runs in the last four games and is 11-for-17 with 15 runs batted in and nine runs scored in that span.

"The pitchers are getting behind and then throwing the pitches I'm looking for," Carter said. "I'm not getting myself in a hole swinging at bad pitches. And once the count is in my favor I can be more aggressive."

Tom Candiotti, 4-0, yielded all six Seattle runs in the first three innings but settled down and pitched his fourth complete game. He allowed 12 hits and struck out 10.

Cleveland trailed 6-2 when Cory Snyder walked in the fourth against loser Mike Moore. Bell then hit his first home run of the season before a single by Andy Allanson and a walk to Upshaw preceded Carter's second home run of the game, a three-run shot that gave the Indians a 7-6 lead.

Athletics 6, Blue Jays 1

Mark McGwire, who hadn't homered in 10 games, hit a pinch-hit, three-run shot in the eighth inning that broke a 1-1 tie. Loser Dave Stieb left with one out in the eighth after allowing consecutive singles to Dave Parker and Dave Henderson. David Wells relieved and McGwire, batting for Ron Hassey, hit his fifth home run of the year.

McGwire stayed in the game and singled a run across in Oakland's two-run ninth against Mark Eichhorn.

Yankees 5, Royals 4

Don Slaught opened the eighth inning with an opposite-field home run that snapped a 4-4 tie. Slaught's fourth homer of the season came on the first pitch from Charlie Leibrandt, who allowed only four hits. Three of them, however, were home runs, including a solo shot by Dave Winfield and a two-run homer by Jack Clark.

It was the Yankees' 22nd triumph in the last 25 games against the Royals at Yankee Stadium. Cecilio Guante, the second of three New York pitchers, was the winner.

Region V tourney hurdle for Chaps

From Staff Reports

When the Region V tennis tournaments begin Friday at Midland College, some of the powerhouse teams in the nation will be competing for the right to play in the National Junior College Athletic Association's championships.

Gathering for the two-day event will be the number two, three, and four women's teams in the nation, plus the second, seventh, and tenth-ranked men's squads.

Play begins both days at 9 a.m. MC coach Joe Williams tentatively has scheduled two rounds of men's singles, a round of men's doubles, plus the semifinal and final rounds of women's singles.

The Saturday schedule calls for women's doubles semifinals and finals, the men's doubles finals, and the semifinal and championship rounds in men's singles.

IN ONE of the best regions in the nation, the women's bracket will include Cooke County Community College, Gainesville, ranked second in the nation. Midland College was ranked third until last weekend, when they were upset 5-4 by Odessa College. That caused OC to swap places with Midland. The other team in the tournament will be McLennan Community College, Waco, which is ranked 11th.

The Chaparral men are ranked second in the nation, McLennan is seventh, and Odessa tenth. Also entered in the men's bracket are players from New Mexico Military Institute, Weatherford College, and Grayson Community College, Sherman/Denison.

"It's going to be tough on any team in either bracket to sweep this tournament," Williams said. "Since only the top two teams in each bracket advance to the NJCAA tournaments, I expect it's going to come down the very last match in most cases...and some very good teams are going to stay home."

The Midland College men's team gave notice it might be ready last weekend, when the Chaps blasted Odessa 9-0 in the conference championship. The Chaps have lost only to Texas Tech, Pan American and Anderson Junior College. That lost to Anderson was 5-4 with MC's number one player, Johan Dysholm, at home with an injured foot. Dysholm returned to action last week and proved he was ready to go full speed.

But the women's team, which has never failed to qualify for the NJCAA championships in 13 years, has been struggling. They lost to Cooke 6-3, Tyler 6-3, Texas Tech 6-3, and last weekend to Odessa 5-4 after having beaten OC 8-1 and 5-4 in previous conference dual matches.

"I might make some changes in both the singles and doubles lineups this week," Williams said. "They've lacked something, and I might be trying some changes among some of the positions. This is the last time that can be done, since you have to play in the NJCAA in the same positions you play at the regionals."

Dysholm, who has signed to play next fall for the University of Arkansas, is Midland's anchor at number one. His record there is 19-2, with losses only to a player from Texas Tech and one from Rollins College, a Division II NCAA school. Sophomore Gilles Ameline holds down number two singles. A signee with Wake Forest, Ameline is 22-2 on the year.

Amine Boustani, a freshman, now is playing number three. His record is 24-5. Tommy Heiting, a freshman from Odessa Permian, now is playing number four. His record is 20-6. Scott Randolph, a freshman from Abilene Cooper, plays five, with a record of 22-5. Freshman Robert Antoun, who joined the team in January, now plays six. His record is 12-3. Freshman Luke O'Loughlin is playing doubles only, teaming with Dysholm at the number one spot.

FRESHMAN RAQUEL Colvin, a graduate of Abilene Cooper, is 21-5 at the demanding number one singles position for the women. Rebecca Nevarez-Ayon, a sophomore, is 16-4 at the number two place. Sophomore Caroline Bhaguandas has a 15-3 record at number three. Sophomore Sara Hancock is 19-3 in the four position. Freshman Gaby Csorba, who joined the team in January, is 7-2 playing the number five spot. Sophomore Jill Vallandigham is 12-8 playing at number six.

Odessa's number one doubles combination of Carla Martin and Melissa Nelson is ranked number one in the nation.

"Quite a number of these players, both men and women, will be winning national titles later this month. Many of them will be playing next fall for the best tennis programs in Division I," Williams noted. "Tennis just won't get much better than this, so we hope a large number of fans will come out Friday and Saturday."

The women's NJCAA tournament is being hosted by San Jacinto Junior College in Pasadena, Texas, May 15-20. Tyler Junior College is hosting the men's championships May 24-28. First and second place teams in both men's and women's divisions advance to the national tourneys with their complete teams.

Cowboys sign two players

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Two Wyoming Cowboys, quarterback Craig Burnett and running back Gerald Abraham, signed with NFL teams Tuesday, they said.

Abraham, Wyoming's all-time leading rusher with 2,239 yards, signed with the Denver Broncos, while Burnett, the holder of nine Wyoming passing records, signed with the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys also signed free-agent quarterback Jim Malosky of Minnesota-Duluth.

Malosky, son of the UMD coach, was signed by a Dallas scout Monday night after the conclusion of the NFL draft.

The 6-foot-3, 200-pounder is the Bulldogs' all-time total-offense leader.

The 6-1 Burnett said he was pleased to sign with a team with the Cowboys' reputation.

"I'm looking forward to playing for a team with that kind of reputation," he said. "It's definitely going to be a challenge for me, because they will have about seven to eight quarterbacks in camp and they will keep only three. So it will be extremely competitive for me."

Abraham, a 5-foot-10, 198-pound Denver native, said he was looking forward to the challenge of playing for the Broncos in his hometown.

"I'm pretty thrilled about it," he said in a telephone interview. "It will be my hometown and everything, so it will be pretty nice. I have a really good shot there. They are having problems with their backfield and I think I could add a lot."

Burnett and Abraham had been seen as two of three graduating Cowboys with a shot at being selected in the NFL draft, along with defensive lineman Jeff Knapton.

But only Knapton, claimed by the Los Angeles Rams in the sixth round, had been selected by the end of the draft Monday, something Abraham and Burnett both said they were disappointed by, although they also said they saw advantages to signing as free agents.

"I guess they weren't kidding when they said it was a bad year for quarterbacks," Burnett said.

Eric Show blanks Cardinals, 1-0

Associated Press

Both the veteran and the kid listened to advice. Their reward was immediately apparent.

Eric Show, now in his seventh season with the San Diego Padres, listened to a friend and benefitted to the tune of a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night.

John Smiley, in his second season with the Pirates, threw a four-hitter for 8⅔ innings as streaking Pittsburgh blanked San Francisco 2-0. His adviser was pitching coach Ray Miller.

Also pitching well Tuesday were Chicago's Greg Maddux, who beat Los Angeles 7-3, and Houston's Mike Scott, who three-hit Philadelphia for eight innings in a 3-1 victory.

Astros 3, Phillies 1

Scott was not real satisfied with his 12-strikeout performance.

"I didn't throw the ball well," he said after taking the National League lead with 43 strikeouts. "I got in a situation that all pitchers have been in where you are not throwing strikes."

Scott allowed five walks and hit a batter.

Two of Houston's runs were the result of fielding errors by the Phillies' 10-time Gold Glove-winner at third base, Mike Schmidt. Both errors were on hard grounders by Glenn Davis that went right through Schmidt's legs.

National League

Padres 1, Cardinals 0

Show allowed 10 hits but spaced them well and former Midland Cub Carmelo Martinez homered for the first time this year as the Padres won their fourth straight, the last three shutouts. Show came into the game 0-3 with an 8.36 ERA and said he had talked earlier with a friend who told him he might subconsciously be looking to lose after his frustrating start.

Martinez, subbing for a sore-shouldered John Kruk at first base, homered with one out in the seventh.

Pirates 2, Giants 0

Like the Cardinals, San Francisco is in a batting slump. Smiley extended it by allowing only four hits before needing last-out relief from Jim Gott, who got his second save.

The 23-year-old left-hander, who drove in Pittsburgh's first run with his second major league hit, became a starter two weeks ago. He made 63 relief appearances last season.

The Pirates, in first place in the National League East, won their fourth straight game and are off to a 14-4 start, the team's best since 1937.

Mike LaValliere raised his National League-leading batting average to .412 with two hits, and Smiley also had two hits.

Cubs 7, Dodgers 3

Maddux pitched an eight-hitter for eight innings and the Cubs capitalized on four infield errors. Maddux is 4-1 after a 6-14 record last season.

The errors by the Los Angeles infield and the first balk called at home against the Dodgers all season led to five runs off Tim Leary, who has lost all five career decisions against the Cubs. Leary allowed two earned runs and five hits in six innings. One of them was Jody Davis' third homer, leading off the sixth.

Mets 13, Braves 4

Keith Hernandez, off to the worst start of his career, had the best RBI night of his life. He knocked in seven runs, hitting two homers, one a grand slam. That gave him 1,000 RBI for his career and his big game helped manager Davey Johnson to his 400th career victory.

Rookie Kevin Elster had four hits in support of Dwight Gooden, who wasn't at his best but won his fifth straight decision. The unbeaten Gooden is the league's only five-game winner.

Reds 5, Expos 2

Solo homers by Nick Esasky and Eric Davis backed Ron Robinson's first win of the season. The Reds got six hits from the bottom three positions in their order, a key to the victory.

Long-suffering Boston Bruins eliminate Canadiens, 4-1

Associated Press

The long-suffering Boston Bruins made short work of the Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Ending 45 years of frustration against Montreal, the Bruins knocked the highly regarded Canadiens out of the playoffs with a 4-1 decision Tuesday night in the Adams Division final.

That wrapped up the series in five games and lifted a burden from the Bruins, who had lost 18 straight playoff series against Montreal dating back to 1943. The Bruins overall have only beaten the Canadiens three times in 23 Stanley Cup matchups.

NHL Playoffs

"I've spent so much time losing in this building," said Steve Kasper, who scored two goals along with Cam Neely at the Montreal Forum to key the Boston attack. "It's no fun when you have to leave and your friends are waiting outside for you, and you have to make excuses for what happened."

The Bruins will play the winner of the Patrick Division final between the New Jersey Devils and Washington Capitals. The Devils took a 3-2 lead in that series with a 3-1 victory Tuesday night.

The playoffs continue tonight with St. Louis visiting Detroit in the Norris Division final. The winner of that series will play in the Campbell Conference final against Edmonton, which won the Smythe in four straight over Calgary.

Devils 3, Capitals 1

At Landover, Md., Kirk Muller scored two goals and Bob Sauve stopped 28 shots to lead New Jersey's victory over Washington. The Devils can wrap up the Patrick title with a victory at home in Game 6 on Thursday night.

Sauve recorded his second playoff victory in as many starts this year for the Devils. Rookie Sean Burke, the sensation from the Canadian Olympic team, has started New Jersey's nine other playoff games.

For Muller, the goals were his first in 11 playoff games after he set a franchise record for most points during the regular season with 94.

Labor peace comes to NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Labor peace is being declared in the NBA.

"It's better to make peace than to make war," Commissioner David Stern said Tuesday after a six-year collective bargaining was signed between the NBA and its players. "This deal was made because it's good for the league, good for the players and good for the fans."

In addition to bringing an end to NBA antitrust litigation, the agreement grants many players unrestricted free agency between now and 1994, continues the salary cap system and reduces the college draft to two rounds after this year.

Both sides had expressed confidence in winning the brewing court battles that now will not occur, but Stern said, "Whatever side's legal position was right, it's better that we settled this now."

The union had asked for unrestricted free agency and the abolition of the salary cap and the college draft. It got partial, but not complete, satisfaction on all three.

"Both sides made compromises from their original positions in order to reach agreement," Stern said. "The NBA owners and players once again demonstrated their willingness to work together."

Before next season, seven-year NBA veterans with expired contracts will have complete freedom to sign with any team, and his original team will no longer have the right to match an offer and keep him, as it does under the current right-of-first-refusal system.

Among the veterans who could benefit immediately from this provision will be Moses Malone of Washington, Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee and Tom Chambers of Seattle.

"This is the first time in professional basketball that a player will be able to play with any team he chooses," said Larry Fleisher, executive director of the players association.

AFTER THE 1988-89 season, the free-agency provision will apply to five-year veterans, and in the last year of the agreement, 1993-94, a four-year veteran will have unrestricted free agency provided he is not in his first NBA contract.

In order to retain the right-of-first refusal for players who do not have enough years of service or who have just completed their first contract, a team must offer a player a new contract that is worth 125 percent of his previous yearly salary. Teams also are not allowed to match an offer and then trade a player.

In addition, right-of-first-refusal applies only to players who are offered $250,000 or more by their old team.

The agreement, which is subject to court approval, was reached after a seven-hour negotiating session Monday and was approved by the league's owners and the executive board of the players union.

The agreement provides for a reduction in the June 28 college draft from seven to three rounds.

The Fullers won a love-match against Hill and Shepard of Dallas Vanguard in the first round and then beat Westmoreland and Qualls of Abilene Christian, 6-4, 6-3, in the second round.

Holloway and Sturdivant also won a love-match against Satcher and Thompson of Dallas Winston in the first round.

MHS JV sets victory record

From Staff Reports

The Midland High junior varsity baseball team set a school record for victories in its 14-3 win over Odessa High's JV Tuesday.

The MHS JV is now 20-3 for the season, the first 20-win season for the Bullpups. Juan Dominquez picked up the victory with 10 strikeouts.

Dwane Roberts led the attack with three hits while Greg Galvan and Will Sowders each had two hits.

The Bullpups end the season this weekend with the Midland Junior Varsity tournament, which runs Thursday through Saturday.

From Staff Reports

ROSWELL, N.M. — Former Midlander Brad Taylor recently went on a 7-for-8 batting spree in three games for New Mexico Military Institute High School to help his Colts win the Santa Rosa Invitational baseball tournament consolation trophy.

Taylor collected three singles, three doubles and a homer in the three games. He also scored four runs in the conlolation final against Clayton. Taylor, naturally, made the all-tournament team.

Wichita Pilots sink Angels

From Staff Reports

WICHITA, Kan. — The Wichita Pilots used a five-run second inning to blow past the Midland Angels 5-3 in Texas League action here Wednesday.

The Pilots worked Midland starter Chris Collins, 1-2, for three hits and three walks in the second inning. Two-run singles by Bill Wrona and Craig Cooper were the big blows in the Pilot splurge.

Midland struck back for three runs in the top of the sixth on consecutive walks to Lee Stevens, Tom Alfredson and Jesus Alfaro, an RBI single by Dan Grunhard, a sacrifice fly by Jeff Manto and another RBI single by Erik Pappas.

Grunhard was cut down at the plate by Wichita left fielder Mike DeButch to end the Angel threat, however.

Midland also loaded the bases with none out in the third, but could not capitalize.

Wichita added an insurance run in the sixth off Midland reliever Sherm Corbett on a single by Chris Knabenshue, a sacrifice by Jim Tatum and Stevenson's double.

A crowd of less than 400 fans braved temperatures in the low 50s with a north wind of 15 to 25 miles per hour. Midland is now 1-3 against Wichita in the current road trip.

In other TL action Tuesday night, Shreveport blanked Jackson, 3-0, Arkansas blasted Tulsa, 14-10, and El Paso beat San Antonio 11-7.

Gary Sheffield, Alan Cartwright and Greg Vaughn all slugged home runs to lead the El Paso Diablos over the San Antonio Missions.

San Antonio put on quite a hitting show, too. The Mission had 16 hits, including homers by Javier Ortiz and Walt McConnell. But they were hindered by five errors.

Paul McLellan pitched a complete-game shutout as Shreveport defeated Jackson.

McLellan struck out seven and walked two as he improved his record to 3-1.

Dee Dixon hit a lead-off triple and scored in first inning to give the Captains all the lead they would need.

BISHOP

BISHOP MADE the round of 16 at the USTA state championships in Houston last summer, despite the fact that he was only 16 at the time and ranked only 129th in the state. He expects his summer tourney experience to help this weekend.

"Since I traveled last summer, I got all the butterflies out of my stomach. I got a lot tougher mentally and a lot steadier, knowing that I can win."

But beating O'Brien or Martinez? Bishop knows what it will take.

"I'll just have to have an extraordinarily good day to beat Alex or Michael," he said. "I think I have a good chance against anybody else.

"I know I've got sort of a pessimistic attitude, but I've played Alex and Michael before and they both went to state last year."

Both O'Brien and Martinez have whipped Bishop in straight sets. "Alex is so talented," the Rebel said. "He's so much stronger and steadier than the rest of us."

Bishop has been trying to get ready for regionals by playing Midland College players like Luke O'Loughlin, who is half of the Chaparrals' top doubles team. As for his own college plans, he doubts at this point whether he can qualify to play at the University of Texas - where he hopes to study architecture in the fall of 1989.

"Right now, I think I'll go for grades because they (at UT) recruit some of the top players in the nation. But if I go to state, I'll get recognized by all the major universities."

An upset win over one of the favorites Saturday may give Bishop reason to change his college plans. But for now, he realistically expects to join his teammates in their post-season stickball games on the LHS tennis courts next week.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Buddhists kill 14 Moslems

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Buddhist tribesmen with automatic rifles raided two settlements near the Indian border and killed 14 Moslems, officials from the area said today.

The victims of Tuesday night's attack included eight women and four children, they said. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was the second attack this week blamed on the tribesmen, known as Chakmas. On Sunday, seven Moslem settlers were killed in a similar attack in the area.

In the latest attack, about 40 rebels raided the Bengali settlements near Matiranga village, just 800 yards from the border with India, the officials said.

U.S. military train damaged

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A bomb blast damaged a U.S. military train en route to West Berlin but no injuries were reported, the Army said today.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attack.

Steve Stromvall, spokesman for the U.S. Army in West Berlin, said the blast occurred late Tuesday night on a remote section of track between the West German cities of Kassel and Goettingen.

The explosion shattered windows on the train's locomotive, and slightly damaged a 6-foot-long section of track, Stromvall said.

U.S. won't help Austria

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Austria has asked the United States for assistance in preparing a criminal slander case against the head of a major Jewish organization for saying that President Kurt Waldheim had been "part and parcel of the Nazi killing machine." The United States has turned down the request.

Officials at the Justice Department, the State Department and the Austrian Embassy said the Austrian authorities wanted to interview Edgar M. Bronfman, the president of the World Jewish Congress, to prepare their case. Bronfman and his organization have led efforts to investigate Waldheim's wartime record.

Justice Department officials said Tuesday that they had concluded they could not support the Austrian request because the department had already investigated Waldheim and found evidence that he "participated in activities amounting to persecution" of Jews, Greeks and Yugoslavs in World War II.

"We developed the information on Waldheim in our own investigation," said John K. Russell, a Justice Department spokesman. "It would be a conflict of interest for us to assist the Austrians with their request."

Austria could hire private lawyers if it wanted to ask an American court for help.

Bomb explodes in Kabul, killing 4

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A bomb exploded today along the Kabul River in the center of the capital, shattering windows in a two-square-block area. Four people were killed and seven injured, the Soviet news agency Tass said.

The vehicle in which the bomb was planted was destroyed, but it appeared to have been a truck or a small bus. Three buses and two taxis also were damaged.

Ambulance crews took away at least two men with serious wounds after the explosion at 12:40 p.m. (3:10 a.m. CDT) in the Pamira district. One Western reporter said he saw three bodies carried from the scene, and that witnesses had told him at least eight other people had been injured.

Police refused to tell visiting foreign journalists who arrived on the scene about 10 minutes after the blast whether there had been deaths or injuries beyond the two people that ambulance crews were seen taking away.

In Moscow, Tass reported that preliminary information indicated four people were killed and seven were injured.

"Investigating authorities said the truck, which arrived in Kabul from Pakistan, must have carried an estimated 330 pounds of explosives," Tass said.

Foreign journalists were visiting Kabul for the 10th anniversary of Afghanistan's Marxist revolution, which was observed Tuesday with a massive military parade.

It was not clear whether the vehicles were occupied when the explosion occurred.
