Congress responds to FCS with proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first formal congressional response to the Farm Credit System's appeal for financial help, a group of farm-state House members proposes authorizing as much as $3 billion in federal aid.

In addition to the qualified financial aid — an item that has provoked controversy within the Reagan administration — the proposed legislation contains two provisions agreed to in some form by all sides: stronger regulation of the loosely knit $70 billion farm lending system and a streamlining of FCS's cumbersome organization.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, and three other senior committee members planned to introduce the measure formally today.

The system, the nation's largest farm lender, is suffering along with the rest of the agricultural sector from the most serious rural depression in decades. Values of farm land — the collateral for the bulk of the system's loans — have plummeted as much as 50 percent during the past five years in the hardest hit areas of the Midwest.

System officials report that the 37 cooperatively owned banks will lose $2.5 billion this year, with further losses expected in 1986 and 1987. Such losses soon would wipe out all the money the system has set aside as a buffer against bad loans, FCS officials have said.

Both FCS and its regulatory agency, the Farm Credit Administration, have asked Congress for a line of credit of up to $6 billion to tide it over the next three years.

City hears PRPC membership pitch

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

In a meeting of the Hereford City Commission Monday night, the commission heard from Gary Pitner, Executive Director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC) and approved the ordinance on residential trash fees.

Pitner outlined the objectives and goals of the PRPC and recommended to the commission that the city of Hereford become a member.

Pitner stated that the PRPC is an association of Panhandle officials consisting of mayors, county commissioners, and city commissioners from the 25 counties in the Panhandle. Hereford is the only incorporated city in the Panhandle that is not a current member of the commission, but Deaf Smith County is and county commissioner Austin Rose is the chairman of the board of directors.

According to Pitner, PRPC allows local governments the chance to work together to better the entire region. PRPC, which was founded in 1969, has already implemented programs for the senior citizens, developed a summer youth employment program, developed an economic development program, operated a regional law enforcement academy, and heads the regional crime prevention unit.

If the city of Hereford should elect to enter the PRPC during the next fiscal year, the yearly dues would be $1,030.

No action will be taken until the 1986 budget is approved. In the commission's only other business, a resolution was passed to raise residential trash fees to $4.50 for single family units.

DWI law doubled convictions

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, said Monday the conviction rate on drunken-driving cases in Texas has more than doubled since a DWI law went into effect Jan. 1, 1984.

In 1984, the conviction rate was 87 percent, and in the first five months of this year it was 84 percent, Sarpalius said in a statement.

He also said the number of arrests has dropped to around 20,000 a year. Sarpalius said Department of Public Safety officials attribute declining arrests to stringent penalties in the 1984 law and greater public awareness about DWI.

Sarpalius, who sponsored the 1984 law, returned Monday from a special American Bar Association meeting in Tucson, Ariz., and reported that he was "more convinced than ever" that Texas is on the right track with its DWI laws.

Smiling Reagan, Gorbachev confer one-to-one

GENEVA (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev met today in the first superpower summit in six years and agreed that a successful outcome depends on a willingness on both sides to reconcile their differences.

"We must achieve decisions together," Gorbachev said as he sat down with Reagan in the front room of a 19th century mansion on Lake Geneva. "If someone will insist only on his own (views) I am not convinced it will look like a decision. We are very much interdependent."

When the remark was translated into English for Reagan, he said, "I agree."

The two leaders, both smiling, shook hands outside the villa and then conferred in a one-on-one session that lasted an hour — four times longer than was scheduled. Asked if that were a good sign, Gorbachev said, "I would think so." Reagan said enough time had not been allotted.

Reagan described the initial meeting as "very businesslike." Asked if they had settled anything, the president replied, "We left that to the table" — the eight hours of formal talks over two days.

The two leaders briefly answered questions from reporters as they posed for pictures.

Except for interpreters, the two leaders were alone at the introductory meeting while their delegations fidgeted and waited in an ornate living room to be called in for the first of the formal talks.

Reagan, asked about his expectations for the summit, said, "I hope for the best," Gorbachev said, "I join in that."

It was announced that both sides agreed to impose a news blackout on summit developments until the meetings are concluded.

Reagan, host for the first day's meeting, arrived at the mansion first, about 15 minutes early, wearing an overcoat and white scarf and carrying papers under his arm. From an inside window, he flashed a thumbs-up signal as he waited for Gorbachev's arrival.

Reagan stepped outside into the brisk Swiss air without his coat to greet Gorbachev as he got out of his long Zil limousine, one minute behind schedule. Gorbachev wore a heavy gray overcoat and held his hat in his left hand, and smiled as they greeted.

They shook hands and posed for photographs on a veranda of the tan sandstone building.

Reagan, asked minutes later about first impression of Gorbachev, said, "We had a cordial greeting. I believe we both do share the same goals." He said that peace "will be the subject of the meetings."

Asked if he would invite Gorbachev to Washington for a summit next year, Reagan replied, "All those are things to be discussed."

The Soviet leader has been described by Soviet President Andrei Gromyko as having "iron teeth." Asked if that were true, Gorbachev said, "It hasn't been confirmed. As of now I'm still using my own teeth."

If I reply to the substance of your question we have such grounds (for a useful meeting)."

Larry Speakes, the White House press secretary, said Reagan's mood was "magnificent." Before meeting with Gorbachev, Reagan met with top advisers, including, Secretary of State George Shultz, Robert McFarlane, the national security adviser, and Richard Perle, assistant secretary of defense.

The president's son, Ron, accompanied the president to the villa. Speakes said Ron Reagan asked his father, "Are you ready, dad?" The president replied, "Absolutely."

Speakes was asked about prospects for another superpower summit, this one in the United States in 1987. He said that question had not been decided.

Spain named to committee

Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain has been appointed by the president of the Texas Association of Firefighters and Fire Marshalls to be a part of the nine-member political action committee for the state of Texas.

The committee will push for legislation concerning fire and safety laws that will help the firefighters in the cities across Texas.

Spain stated that one of the measures that he would like to see passed would be the banning of fireworks throughout the state. Spain said that fireworks cause more damage than they are worth.

"Last year, we had six deaths caused by fireworks across the state, and over 4,000 injuries," Spain stated. "And there is no telling how much property was lost."

Spain said that he would like to see all but the public firework displays be abolished.

Florida braces for approaching storm

MIAMI (AP) — Six southern Florida counties were under a state of emergency today, and residents clogged the only escape route from the vulnerable Keys as Hurricane Kate aimed 110 mph winds at the state after churning through the lower Bahamas.

"This is not a super storm, but people should take it seriously. People can get killed in a storm like this," said Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

At 2 a.m. EST, Kate was centered near latitude 22.2 north and longitude 79.0 west over north-central Cuba and about 270 miles south-southeast of Miami. It was moving westward at 20 mph with highest sustained winds of 110 mph.

Gale-force winds extended 100 miles south and 250 miles north of the center. Forecasters predicted 5 to 10 inches of rain and road-swamping tides of 4 to 7 feet above normal along Kate's path.

The storm's eye was not expected to make landfall in the keys or the Florida mainland unless it changed course, but hurricane conditions were likely to spread westward over Cuba and the Keys today, said forecaster Bob Sheets.

Whitehorn wins second puzzle prize

The Brand's Photo Puzzle contest, in contrast to the first game, had everyone guessing this past week. The photo was a picture of Doug Manning which was taken about a dozen years ago.

Ruby Whitehorn, Rt. 3, Hereford, was one of 13 people who had a correct entry. Her name was drawn Monday afternoon by Dean Herring, and she is the winner of the $50 in Hereford Bucks.

The game drew 123 entrants the first week, but only 33 entered this past week. From the completed puzzle pictures, entrants guessed 14 different names for the "mystery guest."

The first piece of this week's puzzle was published in Sunday's Brand.

The person in the picture is a little older now, but maybe it won't be as difficult to solve as last week's puzzle game!

Follow the easy rules, clip the entry form from Friday's Brand and get your entry in the Brand office before noon Monday. You could be a winner of $50 in Hereford Bucks!

Police search for doughnut thieves

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — An all points bulletin was issued here for anyone with dried red jelly on their face after sticky fingered burglars smashed a plate glass window and stole two dozen jelly-filled doughnuts, police say.

Officers discovered that someone had smashed the window and stole the doughnuts early Monday, police said.

"We've got an APB (all points bulletin) out for anyone with dried red jelly on their face," said police spokesman Jim Willett. "At least that would be probable cause to question them. I believe that would stand up in court."

Police didn't have any problems finding an investigator qualified to handle the case, Willett said.

"Fortunately, we've got lots of cops here who are experts on doughnuts, so we can give it to anyone," he said.

The burglars apparently got less than they bargained for. The doughnuts were day-old, police said.

Judge ponders bond for Chagra

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Elizabeth Chagra is being held in the county jail here while she awaits a magistrate's decision on whether she can be released on bond for the first time in more than three years.

Attorneys for Mrs. Chagra, who is awaiting retrial on a charge she conspired to assassinate a federal judge, Monday asked that her bond be reduced from $1 million to $50,000 personal recognizance bond.

U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor said he would decide sometime this week on the bond reduction bid.

Mrs. Chagra has been in federal prison in West Virginia since 1982 when she was convicted in connection with the 1979 murder of U.S. District Judge John Wood.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the conviction in February and ordered a new trial.

Her husband Jimmy Chagra is serving a 47-year term for obstruction of justice in the same case and other charges.

He also is serving a life term for plotting to kill former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

Hance wants PUC official fired

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commissioner Dennis L. Thomas says Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance is playing politics by urging that Thomas be fired for using state resources in obtaining a doctoral degree.

"I think that Mr. Hance's comments are politically motivated. It's important that the commission remain above politics, therefore I'll have no comment," Thomas said Monday.

Hance said Thomas showed poor judgment at best in using state funds, state employees and state computer time in getting his Ph.D. He said Democratic Gov. Mark White should replace Thomas with someone who will devote all his time to the job.

"Dennis Thomas simply used his office to further his own education, and that's not right," Hance said.

"Anything short of full-time, fully dedicated commissioners is unacceptable. That's why Thomas should be replaced," Hance said in a statement.

Hance also said Thomas' actions aren't helping consumers.

"I don't think that appointing a commissioner who spends his time furthering his personal education helps in any way to keep our utility rates down," Hance said.

Rex Cauble appeal refused

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rex Cauble's plea to get his drug conviction overturned never reached the ears of the nation's highest court.

The 71-year-old Texas rancher had hoped to convince Supreme Court justices that prosecutors failed to disclose numerous facts that could have helped acquit him.

But the court, without comment, let stand Cauble's conviction despite his claims that the government withheld evidence at his trial.

Cauble was convicted by a federal jury in July 1982, and began serving his sentence in June 1984 after two years of appeals.

He also was ordered to forfeit to the government his one-third interest in the $83 million Cauble Enterprises.

He is now serving a five-year prison term for heading a marijuana-smuggling ring known as "the Cowboy Mafia."

Prosecutors alleged Cauble, a Denton County businessman with interests in ranching, oil and real estate, masterminded one of Texas' largest drug rings involving the smuggling of more than 150,000 pounds of Colombian marijuana into the state in 1977 and 1978.

The government charged that "the Cowboy Mafia" smuggled marijuana aboard shrimp boats from Colombia and, using a company jet, distributed the drugs from Cauble's ranches.

Lawmakers warn of use of airwaves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug dealers and possibly terrorists are monitoring radio frequencies of Air Force One, the presidential limousine and other military and law enforcement communications of "enormous sensitivity," according to two members of Congress.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okl., and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., told a news conference Monday that the monitoring placed President Reagan in "grave danger" and jeopardized law enforcement operations against drug dealers.

They urged the president to have the National Security Council and the new, multi-agency Drug Enforcement Policy Board launch an investigation.

The lawmakers said their source was a 62-page list of 1,000 communications channels used by the military, law enforcement and intelligence agencies, and the Secret Service presidential protection detail. The list was seized in a drug raid on a warehouse Sept. 13 near Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Department denies mismanagement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Labor has denied allegations of rampant mismanagement, drug abuse, prostitution and violence at a San Marcos job training center, although officials said there could be management improvements.

"I'm relieved that the findings are essentially positive and the major allegations have been found to be either untrue, misleading or grossly exaggerated," said U.S. Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Austin. "But a better job can be done, and we must strive to do it."

In releasing the report Monday, Pickle said he sought the investigation after the San Antonio Light ran a series of articles in September quoting students and employees describing abuses at the Gary Job Corps Center.

FCS

Jones, D-Tenn., Edward Madigan, R-Ill., and Tom Coleman, R-Mo., would provide such financial help only if the system's regulators certify FCS has done everything it reasonably can to help itself. Under the bill, the government would be allowed to purchase as much as $3 billion in system loan obligations and then set interest terms and repayment schedules.

Whether the aid ever is provided would be up to the secretary of the Treasury. The Reagan administration has resisted any effort at financial aid, arguing the system has untapped resources it can use.

Birthmark distinguishes Soviet leader

GENEVA (AP) — Probably the most distinguishing outward feature of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev is a port-colored birthmark on his forehead.

Gorbachev, 54, has a receding hairline and the mark starts high on his forehead and tapers down to a few inches above his right eyebrow.

Caricaturists have adopted the mark in their drawings of the leader.

The Soviet leader does not appear to make any effort to conceal it, and it was prominently seen when he was shown on television today meeting U.S. President Ronald Reagan for the first time.

However, official Soviet photographs of Gorbachev frequently cover up the mark.

Soviet authorities have never publicly discussed the medical causes of the birthmark.

Envoy urgent about seeing kidnappers

PARIS (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy, Terry Waite, hurriedly left Beirut today saying he must renew contacts with the kidnappers of American hostages after consultations with U.S. and British officials in London.

The Middle East Airlines plane taking Waite back to Lebanon left Paris' Orly Airport at 11:20 a.m. (5:20 EST), more than an hour behind schedule because of a technical problem, the airline said.

A Beirut radio station reported that a team of French doctors also was flying to Beirut following a claim that a kidnapped Frenchman was ailing. The report could not be immediately confirmed in Paris.

Waite, 46, arrived from London late Monday on an overnight stopover after spending less than 24 hours in the British capital. He reported to Archbishop Robert Runcie, spiritual head of the Church of England, as well as U.S. administration officials whom he declined to identify.

He also refused to give details of his talks with them.

"Loose words can cost lives and I don't want any more lives to be lost in this unhappy drama," Waite told reporters Monday night at London's Heathrow Airport.

The 6-foot-7, bearded envoy arrived in Beirut last Wednesday after four of the six Americans missing in Lebanon wrote to Runcie appealing to him to intervene. He spent most of his time in Beirut out of sight, and told reporters when he returned to London on Sunday night that he had made "some progress."

Upon leaving London for the second time, Waite said: "I think there are certain things I can now say (to the kidnappers) which I hope will take the conversations forward and help us in this long and difficult process of negotiation."

The French news agency Agence-France Presse quoted Waite as saying during the flight from London that he had important things to say in Beirut "and it is important I say them quickly."

Waite, believed to be the first Western intermediary to meet the kidnappers, was quoted as saying: "It is important to understand in what state of frustration they must have found themselves to do what they have done."

In addition to the Americans, four Frenchmen and a Briton are missing in Beirut. On Monday, a Western news agency in Beirut received a letter purportedly from the captors of the Frenchmen saying one was gravely ill. The letter did not identify him.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem fundamentalist group, has claimed it kidnapped the Americans and Frenchmen. Another group, the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems, claims to have abducted a British journalist.

22 survivors dug from mire

ARMERO, Colombia (AP) — Weary rescuers who pressed on with their search despite a government official's doubts that anyone remained alive pulled 22 survivors from the sea of volcanic mud that buried this Andean farming town, a radio station reported.

Health officials said Monday they planned to fumigate the area where an estimated 25,000 people died after two cases of typhoid fever were reported among survivors.

Weak voices of survivors could be heard crying for help Monday in outlying areas of Armero, Juan Otalora, a fireman working with a rescue team, told RCN radio.

Otalora said he saw "guys dressed like firemen taking anything useable" from the corpses of those killed when the nearby Nevado del Ruiz volcano erupted last Wednesday, melting part of its snowcap and sending an avalanche of mud on residents of the Armero Valley.

The three-mile-high volcano continued spewing steam and ash Monday, and scientists recorded frequent tremors.

Mayor Isaac Rodriguez of Lerida, four miles from Armero, said on Caracol radio that the army "has been given orders to shoot looters."

"These filthy looters are stepping on the injured, who are agonizing in the mud, to get objects that were not covered by the avalanche. They're even ripping chains and rings from the cadavers," he said.

Victor Ricardo, president of the government emergency committee, told Caracol he also had reports of looting, and said army Col. Rafael Horacio Ruiz was appointed mayor of Armero and its outlying districts and was told to restore order.

Radio reporters said they saw loot from Armero for sale in Mariquita, Honda and other nearby towns that survived the destruction in the valley 105 miles west of Bogota.

Health Minister Rafael Zubiria said on Caracol that two Armero survivors evacuated to Bogota were found to have typhoid.

"It is necessary to begin fumigation immediately to exterminate the clouds of flies that are hovering over the decomposing bodies and are the agents for transmitting the disease," Zubiria said.

He said the operation would not interfere with rescue work.

The government pledged Monday to continue rescue efforts after the nation's largest radio chain, Caracol, said its journalists reported 1,500 to 2,500 people were still alive in the mud or stranded in isolated spots.

Five survivors, including a 7-year-old boy, were found Monday, according to rescue workers interviewed by the radio chain RCN.

"We located a little boy buried in the mud who was barely alive," Otalora, the fireman, told RCN. He said he reached the boy by "swimming" through stinking mud that nearly covered his head.

No details were available immediately on the other four survivors.

Zubiria had said Sunday that the last three survivors had been found in the valley, indicating that officials were ready to end the search. But Juan Castillo, spokesman for the presidential press office, said Monday the rescue operation would continue until there was no doubt all survivors had been found.

Officials estimate that 23,000 of the dead and missing are from the Armero area and 2,000 from Chin-china on the opposite, western, slope of the mountain.

Tremors increased in frequency Monday, said a European scientist among about 20 from all over the world. He spoke on condition of anonymity, saying the Colombian government has told the scientists they may stay only if they do not speak with reporters.

Tax panel weakens limits on real estate tax shelters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee apparently is rejecting President Reagan's recommendation for blowing the roof off real estate tax shelters.

A committee task force called instead for looser limits on non-business interest deductions than Reagan proposed, and voted unanimously to all but kill the president's plan for sharply curtailing the tax break that makes most real estate shelters work.

The full committee planned to consider the recommendations today as part of its tax-overhaul plan, but there was no indication the recommendations of the task force would be overturned.

"I was just outgunned by a real estate lobby that knows no limit to its greed," said Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., the task force chairman, who favors tougher restrictions. "The real estate industry creates far more shelters and abuse than makes economic sense for the United States."

One tax lawyer who is an authority on real estate disagreed. When fully effective in 10 years, he said, the proposal "is going to stop people from zeroing out" — that is, paying no income tax.

Ann Landers

Reader wants to disrobe

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As a faithful reader of your column I am aware that you believe exhibitionists are sick and need professional help. I want to know if it is also sick to WANT to exhibit one's self but not actually do it?

I am a young woman in my early 20s with a promising career in retailing. I have a good figure and have been told I ought to be a model. I'm beginning to wonder if all the compliments and my secret desire to be a model are making me a little nutty.

When the doorbell rings and I know it is the delivery boy or the mailman, I have a sudden urge to take off all my clothes and appear at the door wrapped in a skimpy face towel or a short see-through blouse. When I let my dog out and wait for him to come back in, I have a strong desire to take off my housecoat and stand there with no bra wearing only skimpy panties.

What will happen if I should give in to these impulses? Any advice?—ON THE VERGE IN FLORIDA

DEAR VERGE: So long as you remain inside your home you are out of reach of the law, unless, of course, the delivery boy is a minor and you seduce him and he tells his parents. If you disrobe on the porch, however, you could be arrested for indecent exposure.

A few sessions with a counselor might help you understand what is behind your need to expose yourself. Once you understand the reasons you will have made the first step toward solving the problem.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When you advise people to back off and not get mixed up with strangers, you are encouraging scum to run roughshod over law-abiding citizens. If we listen to you, we will lose our rights and freedom.

I personally do not go out of my way to look for trouble, because I realize it isn't smart to be "dead right." But, I do get even.

For example: When I am a pedestrian, I know I cannot win a battle with an automobile. However, there are several cars with dented hoods around town. The drivers of these cars made the mistake of almost running me down a crosswalk where I had the right of way. It costs about $8 per month in umbrellas, but it is worth it.—NEW ORLEANS UMBRELLA MAN

DEAR UMBRELLA MAN: Sorry, I don't believe you are protecting your rights. When you go around banging on the cars of people who have failed to give you the right-of-way you are just asking for trouble. One of these days someone may grab your umbrella and put a large dent in your skull.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a tip for your readers who have trouble giving their dog or cat a pill. I discovered the secret by accident. Cover the pill with peanut butter and give this tasty treat to your animal. He'll wolf it down!—T.L.H., FLORIDA

DEAR T.: Since I have no animal I asked a friend of mine to try it on her cat. The Persian turned up her nose at the peanut butter and walked away. But when the pill was wrapped in tuna fish she gulped it down and meowed for more.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? Ann Landers' "New Bride's Guide" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.00 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Thanksgiving dinner held Friday

A turkey dinner was held for members of Cultural Extension Club and their guests Friday in the Energas Flame Room.

Special guests, Ada Bullard of Center, Tx. and Hank Wedel of Hereford, were welcomed at the annual Thanksgiving party.

John Hunter voiced the blessing for the group before the covered dish meal was served. Various games provided entertainment during the evening.

Members and husbands attending included Mmes. and Mmes. Tom Hargrave, John Hunter, George Popple, M.H. Wiseman and Johnnie Townsend.

Other members in attendance were Carrie Mae Doak, Bertha Detmann, Byrdie Fellers, Vernis Parsons, Jewell Rogers, S.T. Walton and Marie Thames.

MISSING BIRDS

NEW YORK (AP) — When the New York Historical Society placed on exhibit its entire collection of original watercolors for John J. Audubon's monumental "Birds of America," the paintings totaled 433.

Audubon painted 435 in the 1800s, but over the years the blue-gray gnatcatcher and black-throated blue warbler have vanished.

Peter Gott, M.D.

One testicle can be enough

DEAR DR. GOTT — If a man has just one testicle, does that mean he will only have all boys or all girls, not one of each?

DEAR READER — If the remaining testicle is functioning normally, the man will be as fertile as any other gentleman. You do not get boys from one testicle, girls from the other. The owner of one testicle can father boys, girls, twins or any other reproductive variation. The only problem he has is to take special care of his solitary testicle; he doesn't have the "insurance" that he would have if he lost one of two sperm-producing glands.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Recently, while dining out with friends, I got some food caught in my throat and couldn't get it up or down. I managed to get on my feet and motioned for one of my friends to pound on my back while I stooped over. I'm OK, but it got me to thinking: I live alone and am wondering if there is something I can do for myself if this should happen when there is no one here to help me.

DEAR READER — There is. Acquaint yourself with the Heimlich Maneuver. Most hospital personnel and emergency medical technicians can instruct you how to perform the procedure on yourself — and others. The maneuver is effective, easily learned and more useful than pounding on the back.

Remember that most serious choking results when people inadvertently swallow unchewed food or meat that has been incompletely masticated.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor says I have hypoglycemia. He put me on a 1,500-calorie-a-day-diet, but it is not helping. I have such bad weak spells I almost pass out, and have to eat something sweet to get over them. It seems to me that there should be some kind of medicine I could take for hypoglycemia.

DEAR READER — There is no medicine for hypoglycemia. Your best bet is to avoid sugar and alcohol, eat several small meals a day (rather than two or three large ones) and snack on fruit, cheese or small portions of complex carbohydrates (like bread). If your symptoms persist, insist that your doctor investigate further.

The all-district team was announced after the district's two playoff teams, Amarillo High and Palo Duro, lost Friday and Saturday. Odessa Permian beat Palo Duro 34-15 and Midland Lee defeated Amarillo High 13-7.

Herd center Brett Clements, a six-foot, 200-pound senior, was named to the all-district offensive first team. Clements also played at the linebacker position for the Whitefaces on defense.

Hereford offensive players receiving second team honors were wide receiver Bobby Baker, tight end Doug Watts, and offensive guard Casey Smith.

A 6-2, 190-pound senior, Watts had 11 pass receptions for 141 yards. Smith is a 6-1, 220-pound senior.

Three other Herd varsity players received honorable mention on offense—Danny DelToro, Stefan Hacker and Allen Dudding.

DelToro, a 195-pound senior, played offensive guard for the Herd. Hacker, a 170-pound senior quarterback, led the district in passing yardage with 1,068 yards. He completed 76 of 141 passes, five of them for touchdowns, with 10 interceptions.

Dudding, a 170-pound senior fullback, totaled 664 yards to lead the Whitefaces in rushing. He churned out those yards in 136 carries for an average of 4.9 yards per carry.

Dudding scored six touchdowns rushing, and was the team's third leading scorer with 36 points. Hacker rushed for five touchdowns for 30 points scored.

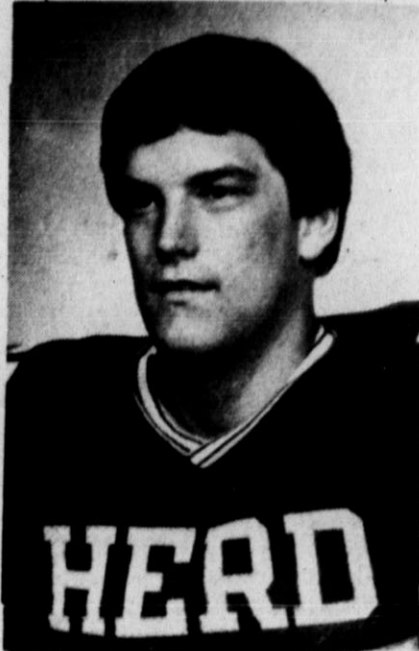

Hacker was also the Herd punter, attempting 28 punts for an average of 33.6 yards per punt.

Dudding also led Hereford in kickoff return yardage with 14 returns for 313 yards, an average of 22.3 yards. His punt return yardage was 69 yards in 10 returns. Dudding caught six passes for 124 yards.

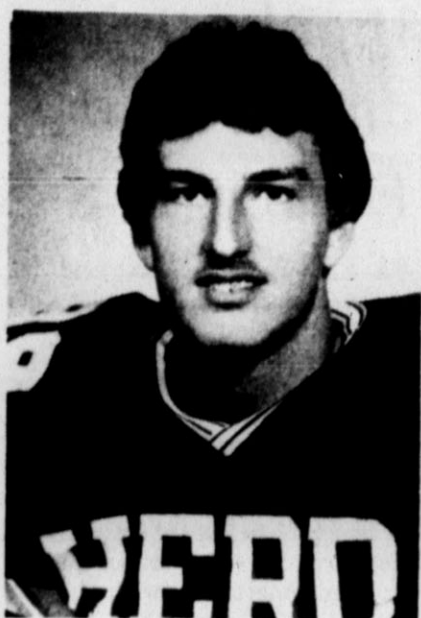

The all-district offensive first teams were dominated by Amarillo High and Palo Duro. Palo Duro had five players on the offensive first team and six players on the defensive first team.

LOWER SCORING

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The basketball used by women players in college competition in the 1984-85 season did not produce higher scoring totals, as expected.

Players and coaches agreed after the season that the smaller ball helped ball-handling and passing. But closer shots tended to bounce or rim out more often because of the lively nature of the ball.

There was a small decline in field goal accuracy in feminine competition, from 44.01 accuracy in 1983-84 to 43.92 in 1984-85. Free throw accuracy also showed a slight dip.

League Champions

Third And Fourth Grade Champs

The Rams captured the YMCA third and fourth grade boys' flag football league title last Saturday when they beat the Lions 31-0. Members of the team are: front row from left, Brian Barrett, Josh Liscano, Jay Moore, Trey Skiles, and Matt Davis; middle row from left, Eddie Riddle, Nick Alexander, Jeremy Richerson, Stacey Sanders, and Ashley Noland; back row from left, Todd Patterson, Michael Carlson, Chad Hutson, and Casey Berry. Not pictured are Coach Bud Patterson and Coach Rick Hutson.

The great Wilt Chamberlain, the No. 2 scorer in the history of the NBA, made only one point, on a free throw, in his final game, playing for the Los Angeles Lakers in 1973.

Greene, Landon of 'Bonanza' together again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten years ago Michael Landon called Lorne Greene and told him he had a role on "Little House on the Prairie" that would be perfect — but he couldn't offer it to him.

"Michael called and said if we worked together people would ask, 'Why doesn't he recognize his own father?'" Greene said. "He said he wanted me to know he was thinking of me."

After 14 years on NBC's "Bonanza," which left the air in 1973, the public had come to see Greene and Landon as exactly that: father and son. To millions of viewers, Greene was Ben Cartwright, owner of the Ponderosa, and Landon was Little Joe.

After the passage of more years, however, the two actors became less identified with "Bonanza."

Thus Landon and Greene are together again in an episode of NBC's "Highway to Heaven" called "The Smile in the Third Row." It will be broadcast Wednesday.

Greene plays Fred Fusco, an actor in a Broadway flop who insists that he sees God seated in the audience. Landon, who created and produced the series, plays an angel named Jonathan, who is skeptical.

"People think he's crazy, but they start coming to the theater," Greene said. "Jonathan is offended. This man saw God and he didn't?"

Greene looks relatively unchanged from the days when he was playing Ben Cartwright. He has the same craggy face, white hair and black beetle brows, and the lean, erect stance. He has, however, lost some of his hearing and uses a hearing aid.

Greene said his stint on "Highway to Heaven" was like a homecoming.

"It was marvelous working with Michael again," he said. "And a lot of the old crew from 'Bonanza' was working with the show. It was like old home week."

Greene appeared in two series after "Bonanza," but neither "Griff" nor "Battlestar Galactica" was successful.

For the last three years, Greene has been the producer and host of a successful syndicated show called "Lorne Greene's New Wilderness." It's syndicated to 140 stations and appears in Canada.

Workshop planned Thursday

Members of the Bud to Blossom Garden Study Club will present a craft workshop from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

There will be a break for lunch and the workshop will continue from 1 to 3 p.m. Wreath making with natural materials will be the program topic.

Please call the Senior Citizens Center for more information, 364-5681.

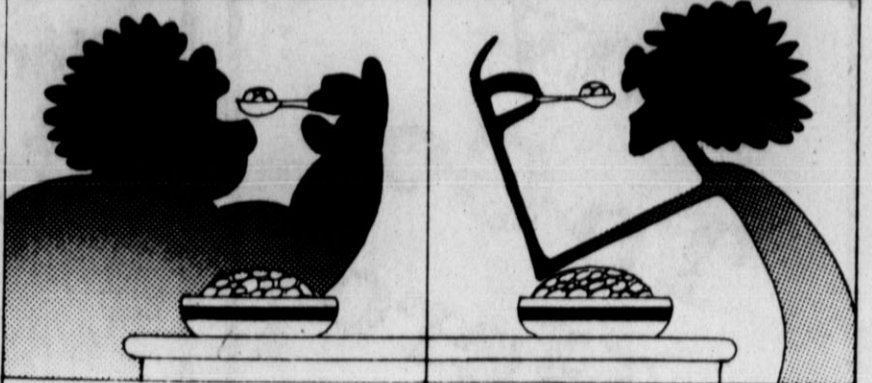

EVERYTHING IN PLACE

DENVER (AP) — A place for everything and everything in its place may be the solution for many tourist travelers' luggage problems. A recent survey by Samsonite indicated experienced tourists want luggage that offers special compartments for packing specific items.

Asked to describe the features that would best accommodate their travel needs, tourists voiced a need for separate places to pack wet or soiled items, and shoes.

Unlike many business travelers who prefer soft carry-on bags, experienced tourists cited a preference for large, durable cases with wheels that are comfortable to maneuver.

Not by drought

African famine said caused by people

NEW YORK (AP) — The famine in Africa was caused by human activity, not by lack of rain, and emergency food aid is making the situation worse, two ecologists have concluded.

Piecemeal aid from developed countries has changed life in sub-Saharan Africa so dramatically that the land can no longer support the population, the researchers say.

The changes may even be altering the weather itself. The core of the problem, according to Anthony Sinclair and John Fryxell of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, is that too many people and too many cattle are living on land that can no longer support them, because it has been overgrazed and stripped of vegetation.

"If you feed the people and leave them where they are, it won't address that problem," Sinclair said recently in a telephone interview. "It will make it worse, because these people will move into new areas and alter the vegetation again, so the famine will spread."

Sinclair is quick to say that on humanitarian grounds there is no immediate alternative to sending food to the millions of starving African families, but warns that more must be done.

"The very first thing we have to address is to repair the vegetation," he said. "We've got to get the grasslands growing again. We've got to take the people off the land, take the pressure off the land."

people is a difficult political problem in the best of circumstances, and may be impossible given the political unrest in some of the drought-stricken countries of Africa, in the broad belt known as the Sahel that stretches across the continent just south of the Sahara.

"We're not the right people to say how this should be done," Sinclair said. "We're not in the aid business. But that shouldn't stop us from mentioning problems."

Sinclair and Fryxell are specialists in the migration of wild animals in the Sahel.

In a recent paper titled "The Sahel of Africa: ecology of a disaster," Sinclair and Fryxell described how the wildebeest and the white-eared kob, two African antelopes, survive in large numbers by migrating during the rainy season to areas where short-lived, high-protein grasses briefly appear, and then returning in the dry season to areas where lower-quality vegetation grows year-round.

The migration strategy allows more animals to survive than would be possible if they were confined to a single area year-round, and it also allows grasslands to recover during periods when the animals are away.

Many people living in the Sahel have traditionally followed a similar strategy, moving their cattle herds to different areas at different seasons, and thus avoiding overgrazing and permanent loss of grasslands.

That pattern began to disappear several decades ago, however, as western countries began to send aid to Africa.

Wells were drilled in areas that were green with vegetation year-round. Communities developed around the wells, and medical and veterinary care became available. Much of this change was the result of aid from developed countries.

People who had migrated soon settled near the wells, and it wasn't long before difficulties arose, according to Sinclair and Fryxell.

Grazing animals no longer had access to high-protein grass during the rainy season. The land around the wells became overgrazed and ultimately denuded of vegetation, now that animals were feeding there constantly.

The improved medical care increased the population of humans and animals.

As the process accelerated, each periodic episode of less-than-average rainfall had more severe consequences. The famines of 1973 and 1984 were both preceded by reduced rainfall, but resulted in far more deaths than previous droughts, the researchers said.

While the lower rainfall might have been the trigger for the famine, the ultimate cause was settlement and overgrazing, prompted in part by aid from developed countries.

"That's the most crucial point in understanding the problem," Sinclair said.

Beyond this relatively rapid deterioration of grasslands there may, however, be an even more ominous long-term problem, Sinclair said.

The overgrazing may be directly changing weather patterns, causing a decline in rainfall that could last for decades.

Plea bargain enrages family

AUSTIN (AP) — The family of a 20-year-old murder victim is enraged at a the accused killer's plea bargain deal, which prosecutors acknowledge was a mistake.

Roland Otts, 25, the man accused in the July 16 murder of Richard Taylor, pleaded guilty Monday in a deal that gave him a 39-year sentence. Otts could be considered for parole in five years.

"The system failed us," said Taylor's father, whose name also is Richard Taylor. "This should not be the kind of deal where someone can just say 'oops' and let it go. This affects a lot of people's lives here. I think we were railroaded."

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle conceded his office had erred in striking the plea bargain without the family's approval. But he said the 39-year sentence was fair.

Taylor had been married only three weeks when he was shot in the head in a robbery at a Southwest Austin construction site.

Ott's fingerprint was found on Taylor's truck and the victim's wallet was found at Ott's home, said Bryan Bishop, an assistant district attorney.

Taylor's signature was forged on several credit card receipts after his murder, Bishop said, but a handwriting analyst would have testified in Ott's trial that the defendant did not sign the receipts or use the hand he was not accustomed to writing with.

Assistant District Attorney Bryan Bishop said that because of largely circumstantial evidence against Ott's, the prosecutors decided to offer him 39 years in exchange for a guilty plea. The maximum sentence for a murder conviction is life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Bishop spoke with members of the victim's family last week and told them that he was considering the plea bargain.

Although there is no law requiring approval from a victim's family, Earle said it is his policy not to enter into any agreement without that consent.

In keeping with Earle's policy, Bishop told Taylor's family that he would not complete the plea bargain without the family's approval.

Taylor's father said his family told Bishop they wanted to know Ott's side of the story before agreeing to the offer.

As Ott's was set to go on trial in a county courtroom, the Taylor family was in another room of the courthouse considering the plea bargain proposal.

However, Bishop, the prosecutor handling the case, was tied up with another case and turned the Ott's matter over to another prosecutor who was not told the plea bargain was contingent on the Taylor family's approval.

That prosecutor agreed to Ott's plea, and the judge sentenced him to 39 years.

The Taylors were outraged. "We approached today with a certain degree of enthusiasm thinking that once and for all we're going to get this thing put to sleep," the father said. "Instead, we get put into another room until the case is all over."

The Taylor family also was angry that there was no finding of use of a deadly weapon included in the plea bargain. Convicts who are judged to have used a deadly weapon in a crime must serve at least one-third of their sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

Some parts of the island of Grenada record more than 150 inches of rainfall a year.
