Violence erupts

JERUSALEM — Soldiers shot dead two Palestinians in the West Bank and guerrillas killed nine people in Israeli-held south Lebanon as violence erupted anew Monday amid efforts to revive stalled Mideast peace talks. Muslim extremists warned they will unleash suicide attacks on Jewish settlements in the occupied territories, saying Israelis will "cry in blood" for the Feb. 25 mosque massacre in Hebron./4A

WTC tapes link

NEW YORK — The accused mastermind of a plot to bomb New York landmarks offered a place to stay overseas to a suspected bomber fleeing the country after the World Trade Center explosion, an FBI informant's taped conversations show. But Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali's defense lawyer tried to discount what his client said in the secretly taped conversations, saying he was just bragging./5A

College debts

WASHINGTON — Hillary Wical has her dream job as a television reporter, but she can't afford the clothes that make her look professional on the air. She's trying to pay off "an enormous debt, probably $20,000 or $21,000" for the year at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism that helped her land the job. And that's on a novice newsperson's salary of $16,000 a year./7A

Border a hot topic

EL PASO — In the seven months since hundreds of federal immigration agents were deployed along the banks of the Rio Grande here, the traffic of illegal workers from Mexico has all but stopped. But the flow of politicians to the border here has surged: From across Texas, Washington and California, Republicans and Democrats want to see, and be seen at, a get-tough effort to control immigration. "It's election time," Mayor Larry Francis of El Paso, an independent, said as he took in the panoramic view of the border from his 10th-floor office, "and the border is a hot topic."/6B

Texas voters cast wary eye at weather; primaries arrive

Staff Report

Officials are hoping that bad weather and apathy don't keep voters away from the polls Tuesday as the Republican and Democratic parties conduct primary elections for county, state and federal officials, including a U.S. senator, throughout Texas.

An arctic air mass coupled with a storm system from the west will bring cloudy skies, lower temperatures and the possibility of snow into today's forecast.

Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

Republicans are fielding 23 candidates, including 15 who are in four contested races, including

Clinton defends wife, aides; new queries on probe arise

By Douglas Jehl
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton on Monday defended his wife and his White House against charges of having interfered in the Whitewater investigation, but quickly found himself facing a new round of questions about his knowledge of the inquiry's earliest stages.

After a stormy weekend watching from Camp David as his administration came under attack for its handling of the Whitewater case, Clintonheld a White House news conference Monday on relations with the former Soviet Union — but he clearly expected to be asked about Whitewater and was prepared to offer extended comments.

He emphasized that the case was different from past investigations of the White House, especially Watergate, which drove Midland High and Sugar Land Willowridge haven't even arrived in Austin for Friday's scheduled 3 p.m. Class 5A semifinal basketball game, but that contest already has taken on a bizarre set of events where five players will miss all or part of the Final Four tournament.

Midland High will lose four players, including starter and leading scorer Donald Carter, to the state's mandated No Pass, No Play rule at 3:40 p.m. Friday while Willowridge will be without the school's top-ranked player Jason Williams, who was shot Sunday by a man police said caught the senior guard in bed with his 14-year-old daughter.

2 Live Crew beat Orbison parody rap

Supreme Court gives songs that poke fun broader protection

By Dan Freedman
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

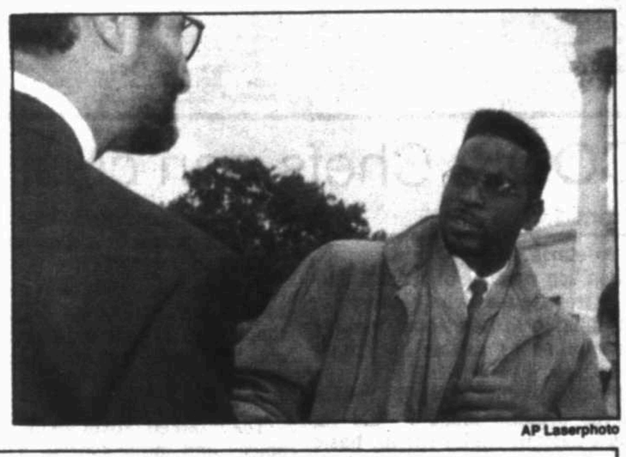

WASHINGTON — In a case closely watched by the entertainment industry, the Supreme Court on Monday sided with the rap group 2 Live Crew in a dispute over its 1989 parody of the Roy Orbison rock classic, "Oh, Pretty Woman."

The court unanimously reversed a 1992 appeals court ruling, which held that 2 Live Crew's parody had violated federal law by borrowing too heavily from the 1964 Orbison hit and using it for strictly commercial purposes.

Though the 2 Life Crew case didn't involve the First Amendment, the question of free expression undergirds the copyright law at issue.

"This is a ringing endorsement for the role that parody plays in society," said Steven Reich, a Washington lawyer who wrote a friend-of-the-court brief for the

Federal judge issues 17-year sentence to Bank One robber

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A federal judge sentenced convicted bank robber, Jimmy David Clark, to 17 years in prison for robbing a Midland bank last year.

Clark, 24, of Hobbs, N.M., was sentenced for the one of three bank robberies with which he was charged. He entered a guilty plea Jan. 7 to the Sept. 9 robbery of Bank One, 2301 W. Wall St. in Midland.

During sentencing, Clark told the judge he never used a "real" gun in the robberies, but used an unloaded BB gun. He said he was sorry for his actions.

In addition to serving 17 years in a federal prison he will be required to pay a fine and undergo supervised release for five years following his sentence.

Chefs cook up advice on school lunches: Eat garnish, cut grease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chef Nora Pouillon had simple advice for making Monday's lunch better at the Jefferson Junior High School cafeteria: Serve the escarole garnish instead of the iceberg lettuce, and cut the grease from the made-from-scratch rolls.

Also: hold the breaded little fast-food nuggets. Instead, use chicken to make a stew, adding some of the canned corn that was offered as a side dish. Add rice, a staple enjoyed by most of the world's people.

"Being ethnic is easier," said Pouillon, who plucked the dark, curly-leafed escarole from the decorations on the inner-city school's salad bar, set up as an afterthought to the side of the dimly

College students spring a break, help build homes

By Michael Kashgarian

Thousands of college students across the country are on spring break this week. Some will party at the beach or spend the time with their families. Others will study or just try not to do much of anything.

Thirteen came to Midland — to do construction labor for free.

"There's plenty of time to do those other things. There's plenty of time to go to Cancun or South Padre. You don't have a lot of time to do something like this," said Venere Vitale, a 20-year-old junior studying finance.

Ms. Vitale and 11 other students from the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana and a student from a nearby university volunteered their time to help build houses for Habitat for Humanity.

those of Midland County judge, commissioner of Midland County Precinct 2, commissioner of Midland County Precinct 4, and judge of Midland County Court-at-Law No. 2.

Eight Republican candidates, including two presiding district-court judges and a county court-at-law judge, are unopposed in the primary elections. But one of their numbers, veteran Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine, will be opposed by the Democratic Party's nominee, likely Manuel Lujan, in the November general election.

Four Democrats are seeking three nominations, including that of Precinct 2 commissioner, a post held since 1987 by Republican Guy McCrary; the judgeship of Midland County Court-of-Law No. 2, and the justice-of-the-peace office.

Should run-off elections be required in those races that are fielding more than two candidates, the runoffs would be held on April 12. A candidate must have a simple majority — more than 50 per cent of the vote — to win an election. Races fielding more than two candidates are those for county judge, judgeship of County Court-at-Law No. 2, commissioner of Midland County Precinct No. 2, and commissioner of Midland County Precinct No. 4.

The victors will be taking their parties' banners to the general election on Nov. 8, when only three Democrats, who are a bare minority in Midland County politics, will be challenging Republicans in three races: Precinct 2 commissioner on the Commissioners' Court, judgeship of County Court-at-Law No. 2, and the justice-of-the-peace post.

In the 14-day early voting period that ended Friday night, 4,723 votes, which represent 8.5 percent of the electorate, were cast. Of that number, 4,206 were Republican votes; 517 were by Democrats. The Republicans represented 90 percent of the early vote.

Four years ago, 39 percent of the electorate cast ballots in the primary elections. Of those votes, most — 86 percent — were by Republicans.

BREAK: Thirteen students come to Midland

ters of the ecumenical Christian housing ministry aimed at eliminating sub-standard housing by making decent homes available to low-income families.

Habitat for Humanity International builds and sells homes with no-interest loans. Volunteers and the owners build the houses. Future homeowners are required to help in the actual construction of their home as well as a home of another family.

The student volunteers in Midland this week are working on homes on South Jackson Street and Anetta Drive.

Duane Andres, a 25-year-old computer science graduate student, spent Monday helping construct the frame on a future house on South Jackson Street.

"I just like doing this. This is good stuff. It's fun putting houses together," he said.

Nevertheless, wouldn't he prefer taking it easy on spring break?

"This is relaxing, too. Sure you come out and get sunburned and swing a hammer and get blisters on your hands . . . ," he said.

But "you really feel like your doing something," Andres said. That's because the benefits of a home are reaped for years and not temporarily such as handing out food, he said.

And, Andres said, he believes in the Habitat for Humanity philosophy of giving a "hand up not a hand out."

Jodi McKeown, a 20-year-old junior studying bio-chemistry and president of UI's student chapter of Habitat for Humanity, said she first helped give a hand up when she was a freshman. She spent that spring break in East St. Louis, Ill., doing volunteer work for Habitat for Humanity with her church. She subsequently got involved in the school chapter.

"It's about getting together with people your own age and helping out," Ms. McKeown said.

lawed parole, so Clark will serve the entire sentence.

His attorney, Jack Chappell, called the sentence "stiff" and said Clark never intended to shoot anyone in the robberies.

Clark was arrested during a chase with law enforcement following the Bank One robbery.

Beery said the day after Clark's arrest he confessed to the Bank One robbery and two other robbers.

Beery said Clark confessed to the Aug. 20 robbery at Texas Commerce Bank, 1003 Andrews Hwy. in Midland and the Aug. 30 robbery of Western National Bank, 2700 N.W. County Road in Odessa.

Tom Kirspel, Midland FBI supervisor, said all three bank robbery cases are considered closed.

Clark was being held, awaiting sentencing for the bank robbery, in the Ward County Jail when he escaped Jan. 24.

A witness told officials she saw two women walking outside the recreation area when one of the women threw something into the fenced area.

She said she saw two inmates leave through the top of the recreation area, jump over the side and head across a park.

Clark escaped with a another prisoner, Jimmy Mac Haggard. They were apprehended separately after U.S. Marshals received a tip and tracked the two down. Clark was arrested Jan. 25 at an apartment in Midland. Haggard was taken into custody Jan. 26 at an Odessa apartment.

Clark, and one of his accomplices pleaded guilty to escape charges in U.S. District Court in Pecos last week.

Clark and Vanessa Aycock, 22, both pleaded guilty to the charges. Clark pleaded guilty to conspiracy to escape and Aycock pleaded guilty to conspiracy to aide and abet Clark and Haggard in their escape.

The two will be sentenced April 4 in Pecos. Beery said Haggard, James David Crawford and Julie Aycock are set for trial April 4.

Crawford and Julie Aycock were charged with conspiracy, aiding an escape and harboring a fugitive. Beery said he anticipated the others may plead to the charges without actually going to trial.

TURNS: 'No-pass, no-play' rule benches 4

(From 1A)

p.m. Friday, which means they could play one half against Willowridge if the game starts as scheduled.

Under the state's No Pass, No Play rule, students who do not pass all courses during any six-week grading period are ineligible to participate in any University Interscholastic League events for the following six weeks.

The six-week grading period for Midland ended at 3:40 p.m. Friday. There is a one-week grace period, meaning students failing a course may play until 3:40 p.m. this Friday.

"Naturally, this is a blow to our team," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said Monday after learning of the situation, but added, "We're still going to Austin with the intention of winning a state championship.

"I feel bad for the kids involved because they have been a huge part of our success this season. We will have them for 40 minutes and that could mean that Donald could play the first half. This will be extremely hurtful to all these kids because it comes at a time when we are playing a very high-profile game.

"It also means that some roles will change for some of our other kids on the team. We have Luke Mattorano, Camron Stotts and Geo Mitchell, who will be asked to pick it up a notch."

Carter led the team in scoring this season, averaging about 18 points per game, and has been brilliant in Midland High's five consecutive playoff wins. Taylor has had extensive playing time and Perkins has seen limited action. Cornelius Mitchell, who began the season as a starter, missed most of the year with a broken wrist, but was scheduled to be back with the team in Austin.

Willowridge's Williams was shot in both the chest and the arm by Earl Russell, according to Missouri City Det. Richard Wiley.

Russell, who suffered a stroke during police questioning and was admitted to Twelve Oaks Hospital, came upon a naked and awake Williams in his younger daughter's bedroom at about 4 a.m. Sunday, Wiley said.

"He (Williams) was in the bed. They were awake, when he (the father) came in on them," Wiley said. "Mr. Williams had no clothes on."

The confrontation was just hours after Williams helped his Willowridge High School team Saturday night win a trip to the state's semifinals. The 36-1 Eagles beat Houston Milby 71-60 in the class 5A Region III championship game.

"The whole case will be presented to the grand jury," said Wiley, who added that no police charges had been filed in the matter.

However, a Fort Bend County grand jury that meets next Monday could file charges against Russell for the shooting, or Williams, who at the age of 17 is an adult in Texas and could face a statutory rape charge.

Missouri City is 15 miles southwest of Houston.

According to investigators, Williams, and a teammate police won't identify, entered the Russell residence through another daughter's bedroom. The unidentified teammate was with the other daughter when he heard noises coming from the 14-year-old's bedroom. As he was exiting the same window the two had entered, the teammate heard a gunshot, Wiley said.

As police sorted out their investigation Monday, Willowridge school officials distanced themselves from the incident, refusing to comment on whether Williams' team status was in jeopardy.

"This doesn't have anything to do with school. It took place in the neighborhood," said Principal Yvonne Friday.

"It doesn't have any bearing on school. We have no connection with anything that took place over the weekend. We're all very hopeful that Jason will recover. At school, he's been a very fine, good student."

Ms. Friday said the 6-foot-2 Williams, who has signed with the University of Tulsa for next year, is in the top 25 percent of his class.

"I can only address Jason as a student," said Ms. Friday. "He's a model student."

Eagles Coach Gary Nichols said his thoughts were with the Williams' family and Jason, not any pending legal action.

"Anytime a player or someone in your family is not there, it's going to be very, very hard," Nichols said of Williams' absence.

At Saturday's game, Williams scored five points and pulled down five rebounds. Ranked No. 23 in the nation, Williams averages 9.4 points and 6.3 assists per game. Last Thursday, Williams led scorers with 21 points in an 82-76 Region III semifinal victory over Sharpstown.

Willowridge is located in nearby Sugar Land. The remainder of the Willowridge players are expected to play against Midland High on Friday.

Pouillon was one of several culinary trendsetters who gathered in Washington to talk about making school lunches tastier and more nutritious.

Pouillon, owner of Nora's, which serves organic foods in the nation's capital, said a cheap, basic ingredient like rice can be made at least a dozen ways without boring anyone.

The chefs met with school food service operators and nutritionists at the request of Ellen Haas, the assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services.

Haas wants to cut the fat and salt from school meals that cost federal taxpayers $7 billion a year. She wants to add more fresh fruits and vegetables.

"Taste and appeal is central to any of those changes," Haas told the chefs, school dietitians and cooking instructors who gathered for the Agriculture Department forum.

They talked about using more spices and marinades to fool the palates of a generation being blitzed by advertisers to consume sodium and grease.

"If these kids eat this when they're at home and eat this when they're here, they won't know a thing about food, and they'll have no tradition of good food in this country at all," said Anne Rosenzweig, owner of Arcadia.

RAP: Court favors 2 Live Crew

(From 1A)

American Civil Liberties Union supporting the Florida-based rap artists.

The 2 Live Crew version on the album, "As Clean as They Wanna Be," keeps the distinctive opening guitar riff of the Orbison original. But in place of the Orbison lonely man's plea to a pretty woman to "say you'll stay with me," the 2 Live Crew rappers make taunting references to a "big hairy woman," "bald-headed woman," and "two timin' woman."

The holders of the copyright on the Orbison original, Rose-Acuff Music Inc. of Nashville, had denied 2 Live Crew permission to use "Oh, Pretty Woman." After the denial, the group went ahead and made the parody anyway, crediting Orbison and Rose-Acuff on notes accompanying its compact discs and audio cassettes.

Luther Campbell, leader of 2 Live Crew, had argued that the group's version was a legitimate take-off intended to lampoon the original "Oh, Pretty Woman" in a provocative way, rather than merely copying it to make money.

The case had divided the entertainment industry. Some organizations including Home Box Office, NBC, Fox and Comedy Central filed a brief supporting 2 Live Crew. They feared a ruling in favor of Acuff-Rose would have cast a chill on all forms of parody.

PROBE: President defends wife

(From 1A)

President Richard M. Nixon from office.

"No one has accused me of any abuse of authority in office," Clinton said. "That's what Watergate was about."

As part of a calculated effort to "take the offensive," Clinton pounded the lectern as he came to the defense of his wife, Hillary, who has been criticized in recent days for her role in the Clintons' investment in Whitewater Development Co., an Arkansas land venture, and its ties to an Arkansas savings and loan that was taken over by federal regulators.

"I do not believe for a moment that she has done anything wrong," Clinton said. "If everybody in this country had a character half as strong as hers, we wouldn't have have half the problem we've got."

But Clinton left his aides scrambling immediately after his appearance to put out a new brushfire, which he started when he acknowledged during the news conference that shortly after it was made he had been told about a request by federal regulators for a criminal investigation into the savings and loan, Madison Guaranty, which is at the heart of the Whitewater matter.

That statement made it clear for the first time that Clinton learned about the sensitive request before it became public, and raised the question of whether he gained the knowledge improperly.

In recent days, attention has focused on internal White House discussions about the inquiry, including a series of conversations between White House and Treasury Department officials.

The disclosure of those conversations last week forced the resignation of Bernard W. Nussbaum, the White House counsel and prompted the independent counsel, Robert B. Fiske Jr., to issue subpoenas to six senior members of the White House staff.

White House officials said they also expected other aides to Clinton to receive subpoenas from Fiske, perhaps including Chief of Staff Thomas F. McLarty 3rd, who has acknowledged being told in advance about one meeting under scrutiny.

With the White House trying to meet a Thursday deadline to turn over subpoenaed documents to Fiske, Democratic leaders of the House of Representatives agreed to meet with Republicans.

White House bids adieu to its French chef

By Connie Cass
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Wanted: Chef to feed family of three, sometimes 130-plus guests. Must cook American. Must please the nation's first lady. Apply at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

And hurry.

The White House already is working from a short list to replace French-trained chef Pierre Chambrin. He will step aside at the end of the month to make way for someone who specializes in American cuisine, the White House says.

"He is an expert in French cuisine," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said of Chambrin. "That's his specialty and his vocation. That's not what we serve here at the White House."

Not any more, she means.

French food has been standard at White House official dinners for 30 years. President Kennedy started the trend when he brought in Rene Verdon, who whipped up meals like beef Wellington and artichoke hearts followed by mousse. The menus were printed in French.

Now, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton wants to "showcase American food, the very best of America," said her spokesman, Neel Lattimore. She's even serving American wine.

It's not that the White House has reverted to Eisenhower-era cuisine — Ike served roast turkey and sweet potatoes to Nikita Khrushchev, and relished simple dishes like chicken noodle soup and succotash.

And they're not talking about the Big Macs and pizza that the president often has a hankering for, either.

What Mrs. Clinton has in mind is new-style American — fancy stuff with funny names and mostly homegrown ingredients. Take for example, the official dinner served to 135 people during a visit by South Korean President Kim Young-sam: It began with Atlantic shellfish roll with peekytoe crabmeat and featured marinated panseared beef tenderloin, artichoke bottom with acorn squash, and basmati rice pilaf with bell pepper.

That was Chambrin's work. "Pierre prepared the American cuisine," Lattimore said. "He made the adjustment tremendously."

So why is he leaving?

"I have a different concept of food," Chambrin told USA Today. "I'd rather not go into it."

Chambrin's three assistants were asked to resign, Lattimore said, but they will be encouraged to interview for a job with the new chef.

"We're giving the new chef the opportunity to bring in his own team," Lattimore said. "All four people have to work extremely well together and a have a rapport."

Chambrin, who came to the White House in 1990 to cook for the Bush family, said he was resigning voluntarily. But he indicated cooking American dishes was not a problem for him.

"I've been in America 23 years, so I'm more American than French," he told the paper Thursday.

By Friday, Chambrin had put a lid on it. All press calls for him were referred to the first lady's office.

"The White House staff traditionally doesn't talk to the press," Lattimore explained.

The first lady hopes to name a new executive chef within two weeks, Lattimore said. In addition to feeding White House guests, the chef will prepare daily meals for the first family — emphasizing low-fat, well-balanced meals with lots of fresh vegetables and little red meat, he said.

It's a prestigious job. But there are drawbacks. Chambrin's departure only reinforces the impression that first ladies are tough to please.

"At the White House, other people are picking the menu, and you may disagree," noted Jon Jividen, head chef for Ridgewell's Caterers.

"You may be stuck in a situation where Mrs. Clinton may say, 'This is what you're going to serve because this is what I want, period.' "

Jean-Louis Palladin, one of Washington's preeminent chefs, said, "I could not take that — I'm a freedom guy."

He doesn't want the White House job, anyway.

"I think they work for peanuts," Palladin said. "They would need to pay me a lot of money."

Family loses years of history with stolen jacket

By Marty Sabota
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — One might think a $300 reward is a little exorbitant for an 11-year-old denim jacket worth $50 tops.

But to the Castillo family, sentimental value accounts for the other $250.

Norma Castillo said the jacket first was worn by her son David, now 14, who handed it down to little sister Alyssa, 6.

This was no ordinary jacket, although the casual passer-by never would know it.

Its front was adorned with tie pins — kind of a Castillo family legacy.

There was mom's national cheerleading association pin. And Mrs. Castillo's father's U.S. Marine pin and her brother's Navy pin.

A family travelog is there: seashells from a trip to Cancun, Mexico, horses from a Colorado dude ranch, and a souvenir from Disneyworld.

Other favorites are a faux gold valentine bought by Mrs. Castillo last Valentine's Day, a little reindeer David Castillo gave his daughter at Christmas, an angel from Alyssa's grandmother and a pink one from her mom, and "a little puppy my husband gave me when we started dating," Mrs. Castillo said.

None of the 40 pins is valuable: "It doesn't mean anything to anybody but us," Mrs. Castillo said.

Yet someone decided the coat was worth stealing on Feb. 21 from the EZ's restaurant, where the Castillo family accidentally left it after having a meal.

Italian police seize largest amount of cocaine in Europe

ROME (AP) — The tractor-trailer was headed down a quiet street of small factories just outside the industrial city of Turin when it broke down.

As a passing farmer stopped to help, dozens of Carabinieri paramilitary police pulled up, fired warning shots into the air, and accomplished the largest cocaine seizure in Europe, officials said Monday.

Twelve people were arrested, several of them linked to the Mafia, and 5½ tons of cocaine was confiscated. The cocaine was bound from Colombia to Italian and European markets.

The seizure Saturday evening was further evidence of the growing ties between organized crime groups in the South American country, which provide the cocaine, and the Italian Mafia, which refines and distributes it in Europe.

"This has the signature of the Cali cartel — the container right through the ports," spokesman Jim Shedd of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said in Miami.

An informant tipped the DEA that a huge quantity of cocaine was secreted in a container of shoes aboard the ship. He described the container in detail, including its registration number.

The DEA in Miami passed this information on to Italian authorities.

The ship reached Genoa weeks ago and the container was transferred to a Genoa warehouse, remaining there until a tractor-trailer picked it up.

Police kept the container under surveillance while tracing it to Borgaro Torinese, a working-class suburb of Turin with about 10,000 residents.

The truck was about to enter a former wheel factory on Via America when the agents pounced. Among those arrested was a man escorting the truck in a car with his 11-year-old daughter, Italian news reports said.

Violence erupts amid efforts to revive peace talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers shot dead two Palestinians in the West Bank and guerrillas killed nine people in Israeli-held south Lebanon as violence erupted anew Monday amid efforts to revive stalled Mideast peace talks.

Muslim extremists warned they will unleash suicide attacks on Jewish settlements in the occupied territories, saying Israelis will "cry in blood" for the Feb. 25 mosque massacre in Hebron.

The turmoil and threat of further bloodletting came after PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and an Israeli envoy, Jacques Neriah, met in Cairo on Monday to discuss resuming the talks. It was the first such face-to-face meeting since the massacre.

Gad Ben-Ari, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's spokesman, said in Jerusalem: "There are intensive efforts being made and we hope the negotiations will resume in the shortest possible time."

Rabin, seeking to broaden his coalition government and strengthen his negotiating position by bringing in the right-wing Tsomet Party, was more sanguine.

Any delay getting the talks back on track heightens the risk that "crazies" on both sides would strike again, he said hours before Monday's violence.

Rabin said later: "The terrible massacre and the atmosphere of vengeance in the Arab world have created a difficult reality which obligates us to make immediate and hard decisions."

The Palestinians were shot to death in Hebron, where the Feb. 25 mosque massacre took place, after an army jeep was stoned near the town's Israeli headquarters.

Four other Arabs were wounded in clashes after the Israelis lifted a 10-day-old curfew to allow townspeople to buy food.

The killings, the first since Friday, raised to 29 the toll in the aftermath of the mosque slaughter, in which 30 Muslims were gunned down by a Jewish settler as they prayed.

Other clashes were reported Monday in Bethlehem, where troops fired tear gas to break up a demonstration at the university.

In the Gaza Strip, Associated Press photographer John Gaps III, a 35-year-old American, was shot in the leg by an Israeli army sniper.

"There were no rocks being thrown or anything," Gaps said from his hospital bed. "I was taking pictures of him, and then I saw him draw down and I knew he was going to shoot."

The army said a soldier and a police officer were wounded in Gaza by a gunman in a car who opened up on them after crashing a roadblock.

Security forces fired back and the bullet-riddled auto was later found with bloodstains inside.

In south Lebanon, Muslim guerrillas killed seven militiamen of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army when three bombs exploded in Israel's self-designated "security zone," security sources said.

The guerrillas also kidnapped two civilians, a man and a woman, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found later in fields, the Lebanese sources added. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The slayings were the highest single-day death toll in the Israeli-occupied zone since July.

The Gaza-based Muslim fundamentalist Hamas faction threatened Monday to stage suicide attacks if five Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza are not evacuated by March 15.

"We have chosen our targets and our living martyrs have been instructed to carry out the suicide operations," it declared in leaflets.

Hamas said it plans a five-stage campaign "and each stage will make the Israeli people and the settlers cry in blood for their dead."

The militants named the five settlements as Kiryat Arba — where mosque gunman Baruch Goldstein lived — Gush Katif, Kedumim, Tekoa and Ariel.

They have a combined population of more than 24,000 settlers. All told, 120,000 Israelis live in 144 settlements.

Officials say hundreds of Israelis have already fled the settlements or are seeking government aid to find new homes elsewhere.

Neriah, a senior Rabin adviser, flew to Cairo early Monday, apparently with proposals for Arafat produced at a Sunday night meeting between Rabin and his top negotiators.

Arafat arrived Sunday in Cairo for talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who has been working to bring Israel and the PLO together again.

Arafat flew to his headquarters in Tunis and Neriah returned to Jerusalem without speaking to reporters.

U.N. secures Tuzla airport, proclaims end of Croat-Muslim war in Bosnia

GORNJI VAKUF, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The United Nations braced for trouble on one front and declared peace on another Monday, moving battle tanks to an airport in the east while proclaiming the Croat-Muslim war in central Bosnia over.

Bosnian Serbs reluctantly agreed a week ago to permit the United Nations to use Tuzla airport for aid flights of the kind that have kept Sarajevans fed since war broke out 23 months ago.

The concession was made under pressure from Russia and out of fear NATO would use force to open the airport. But the Serbs, whose big guns have frequently targeted the air strips, remain suspicious that Bosnian government forces could use the airport to resupply Muslim troops around Tuzla.

Plans call for the airport, in the heart of the largest single piece of Bosnian territory under Muslim control, to reopen this month.

A U.N. spokesman, Maj. Rob Annik, said four platoons of Swedish and Danish troops totaling about 480 soldiers rolled into the airport Monday.

Two of the units were platoons manning 10 German-made Leopard 1A5 tanks armed with 105 mm cannon. The Leopards, the most powerful weaponry the United Nations has in Bosnia, are more than a match for any tank operated by Bosnian Serbs.

Annik said the Bosnian army, which has controlled the airport south of Tuzla, was to withdraw by today.

Elsewhere, Bosnian Serbs pounded Maglaj, in northern Bosnia, and blocked critical aid shipments to the isolated pocket of government territory.

But most of the rest of Bosnia was calm Monday, almost four weeks into a truce between government forces and Serbs around Sarajevo and 1½ weeks into a separate government-Croat cease-fire in central Bosnia.

There were sporadic violations of the central Bosnian truce. But after mediating an agreement firming the cease-fire, Brig. John Reith of Britain, commander of British U.N. forces in Bosnia, described it as an "historic moment."

"Effectively the war between Muslims and Croatians has ceased," he told reporters.

As Reith watched, Brig. Gen. Fikret Muslimovic of the Muslim-led Bosnian army and Bosnian Croat Brig. Gen. Vinko Vrabanc signed maps of central Bosnia and the southern city of Mostar delineating truces over nearly 180 miles of previously disputed territory.

Reith said all but 1.2 miles of the Muslim-Croat battle front were covered by the truces.

The central front and Mostar had been among the worst areas of fighting in recent months, with Croats and Muslim vying for the 30 percent of territory not held by the Serbs. But both sides have abided by the cease-fire as they work out details of a U.S.-sponsored federation agreement.

Heavy weaponry was to be moved or collected by midday Monday. Croatian radio said Bosnian Croat forces had complied, but there was no confirmation from peacekeepers.

Part of Monday's agreement reached at Gornji Vakuf, 30 miles west of Sarajevo, stipulated that both sides either pull back weapons or pledge to use them only against Serbs.

Reith rejected a Muslim request to keep anti-aircraft guns in one area against potential Serb air attacks.

"We will protect you from any Serb aggression from the air," he told the Muslims, suggesting that NATO fighters, which last week downed Bosnian Serb aircraft attacking government targets, were prepared to strike again.

The Bosnian army claimed that Serb aircraft bombed and destroyed Maglaj's only bridge Sunday. But NATO said that was unlikely, and Reith said the bridge was actually blown up after a Serb mortar round set off explosive charges wired by Maglaj's defenders to destroy the span in case of Serb infantry attack.

Neither U.N. peacekeeping forces nor aid organizations have a regular presence in Maglaj, a community of 19,000 people 50 miles north of Sarajevo.

Bosnian radio reported heavy shelling of Maglaj on Monday morning, despite a planned cease-fire intended to permit an exchange of bodies of soldiers. A U.N. spokesman, Maj. Jose Labandeira, said in Sarajevo that U.N. observers in the area also reported heavy shelling, but had no details.

■ Judge spares medical-bills robber

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — A former police officer who robbed a liquor store to help pay medical bills for his brain-damaged son was spared prison Monday.

Eric Shames was sentended to five years' probation and 200 hours of community service. He also was ordered to repay the $1,500 he stole at gunpoint.

"I never would have hurt anybody," Shames told the judge, his voice trembling. "I just wanted to pay some bills."

Shames' 4-year-old son, Christopher, was born with a rare heart disorder called Wolff-Parkinson-White syndrome. Surgery performed in July 1992 went awry, leaving Christopher brain damaged, blind and in a wheelchair. He requires 24-hour care and must be fed through his stomach.

■ Advocates: Welfare cash-outs may hurt

WASHINGTON — A growing number of states experimenting with welfare reform are replacing food stamps that must be spent on groceries with cash that recipients can spend as they choose.

Advocates for the poor see a worrisome trend in what is known as "cashing out" the food stamp program. They believe some parents will spend their food stamp money on rent, utilities or even drugs instead of groceries for their families.

They also worry that cash-outs may diminish political support for a program that helps 27 million people buy food and pumps $22 billion a year into the economy.

But Andrew Hornsby, commissioner of the Alabama Department of Human Resources, says "people can be trusted to make proper shopping decisions for their families."

■ Navy sends women to combat-ship duty

NORFOLK, Va. — The USS Eisenhower will never be the same now that the Navy has ordered women to report for duty on the aircraft carrier later this month.

"I want to go out and show them that we can do it," said Cecelia L. Daley, an aviation ordnance specialist.

She was among the 60 or so women who got permanent orders Monday — in the first such time for women — assigning them to regular duty on a combat ship.

"Now I'll be completely equal," said Diana C. Knight, an aviation storekeeper who has been in the Navy for 12 years. "This is going to be great."

The repeal of the combat exclusion law in the defense authorization bill passed by Congress last year opened warships to women.

Attorneys detail taped links to trade-center blast

NEW YORK (AP) — The accused mastermind of a plot to bomb New York landmarks offered a place to stay overseas to a suspected bomber fleeing the country after the World Trade Center explosion, an FBI informant's taped conversations show.

But Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali's defense lawyer tried to discount what his client said in the secretly taped conversations, saying he was just bragging.

Prosecutors will use the tape transcripts to support their assertion that the Trade Center bombing was part of the larger, foiled terrorism conspiracy.

Fifteen men face trial in September on charges they plotted to blow up the United Nations, the FBI's New York headquarters and two tunnels and a bridge in the city. Assassinations and kidnappings also were part of the alleged terror spree against the U.S. government.

The transcripts of the tapes, recorded last spring, quote the alleged ringleader, Siddig Ali, as saying he had tried to arrange safe refuge overseas for Mahmud Abouhalima, one of the men convicted last week in the Trade Center attack.

In another conversation, according to the transcripts, Siddig Ali told the informant that more than one person had carried out the Trade Center bombing, which killed six and wounded more than 1,000 on Feb. 26, 1993.

But William Kunstler, a lawyer for Siddig Ali, said Monday that much of what his client said on the tapes was merely bragging.

"I think a lot of it is talk, that he knows things. A lot of it is braggadocio, each one is trying to upstage each other. But to the jury it looks like the real thing, unfortunately."

The tapes were recorded last spring by FBI informant Emad Salem. Hundreds of pages of transcripts were filed recently in U.S. District Court and reviewed by The Associated Press.

As previously reported, the transcripts also indicate that extremist Muslim cleric Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman approved the terrorism plot, though with reservations about attacking the United Nations and FBI office. He is one of the 15 defendants.

In one undated taped conversation, Salem asks why the first man arrested in the Trade Center bombing, Mohammad Salameh, rented an easily traced van to carry the bomb, rather than buy a junk vehicle for the attack.

"The operation was not done by one person, they did it as a group," Siddig Ali said.

"All the people are stupid," Siddig Ali said. "The car will be burned and they will never find out about it, this is their understanding."

FBI agents used a vehicle identification number on a van part found in the blast rubble to track down Salameh and eventually the other three convicted Friday. They will be sentenced May 4 and face life in prison without parole.

Siddig Ali later told Salem that he had given Abouhalima, painted by prosecutors as a leader of the trade center attack, letters of introduction so he could stay with his relatives in the Sudan and Saudi Arabia when he left the United States shortly after the bombing.

Prosecutor tells jury that Rolling should die for murdering students

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Danny Harold Rolling was dressed like a ninja and looking for prey when he entered three apartments, raped three women and murdered five students, a prosecutor said Monday.

State Attorney Rod Smith entranced the jury as he described Rolling's stalkings, rapes and murders to jurors in his opening statement.

The jury will recommend to Circuit Judge Stan R. Morris whether the 39-year-old confessed killer should be executed or be sentenced to life in prison.

The prosecution is arguing that he should be sent to the electric chair. Rolling's attorney says his client was mentally ill when he killed and now feels remorse for the crimes.

Rolling, dressed like a "ninja" and wearing a ski mask, stealthily broke into all three apartments, Smith said.

"Dark clothes for a dark night for a dark purpose," Smith said.

Rolling, a drifter from Shreveport, La., pleaded guilty Feb. 15 to five counts of first-degree murder, three charges of sexual battery and three counts of armed burglary.

Assistant Public Defender Johnny Kearns asked the jury to spare Rolling's life.

"Let the Almighty determine when it is appropriate for Danny Rolling to die," Kearns said.

Kearns outlined Rolling's childhood, his failed marriage, and what he said was his mental illness. He said he will present videotaped testimony from Claudia Rolling, Rolling's terminally ill mother, about abuse from his father.

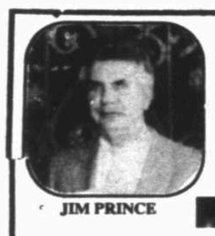

To get a death recommendation, the state must prove there were aggravating factors, such as the crimes being heinous or premeditated. The state also can bring up Rolling's extensive criminal background. He is already serving three life terms for burglary and robbery.

The defense will try to prove mitigating factors, such as extreme duress or extreme mental disturbance.

Autopsy reports released to reporters Monday detailed the sexual mutiliation of some of the female victims. One woman also was decapitated. The only male victim was asleep when attacked and was stabbed 31 times as he fought back. The jurors have not yet seen the autopsy reports.

Smith said Tracy Paules had expressed fears about the first student killings only hours before her own death. He said she asked Rolling, who was covered with blood from an earlier victim, "You're the one, aren't you?"

Rolling replied, "Yeah, I'm the one."

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, March 8, the 67th day of 1994. There are 298 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 8, 1917, Russia's February Revolution — so called because of the Old Style calendar used by Russians at the time — began with rioting and strikes in St. Petersburg.

On this date:

In 1702, England's Queen Anne ascended the throne upon the death of King William III.

In 1782, the Gnadenhutten massacre took place as some 90 Indians were slain by militiamen in Ohio in retaliation for raids by other Indians.

In 1841, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., the Great Dissenter, was born in Boston.

In 1854, U.S. Commodore Matthew C. Perry made his second landing in Japan. Within a month, he concluded a treaty with the Japanese.

In 1874, the 13th president of the United States, Millard Fillmore, died in Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1917, the U.S. Senate voted to limit filibusters.

In 1930, the 27th president of the United States, William Howard Taft, died in Washington.

In 1942, Japanese forces captured Rangoon, Burma, during World War II.

In 1944, U.S. bombers resumed bombing Berlin during World War II.

In 1965, the United States landed about 35,000 Marines in South Vietnam.

In 1986, four French television crew members were abducted in west Beirut; a caller claimed Islamic Jihad was responsible. All four were eventually released.

Ten years ago: A Gallup survey of 719 registered voters had Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart leading President Reagan 52 percent to 43 percent.

Five years ago: In Lebanon, daily artillery barrages between Christian and Syrian forces and their militia allies began in Beirut; at least 930 people were killed before a cease-fire took hold the following September.

One year ago: On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average soared to a record high, climbing 64.84 to end the day at 3,469.42. Singer-bandleader Billy Eckstine died in Pittsburgh at age 78.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publiction.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

School prayer movement gains power

The school prayer movement is gaining in potency and power. Says who? Says The New York Times, no fan of bowed heads on public premises. Georgia is moving toward the creation of "a moment of quiet reflection." Alabama and Tennessee, by statute, allow student-led prayer — in line with a decision by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Similar measures are on the move in Virginia, Mississippi, Florida, Louisiana, South Carolina, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania. Meanwhile, the majority of county commissioners' courts in Texas, prodded by Denton commissioner Scott Armey, son of the intrepid conservative congressman Dick, has passed resolutions urging that school prayer, with obvious safeguards against abuse, be authorized by constitutional amendment.

Murchison

Norman Lear's liberal People for the American Way organization acknowledges that "quite a trend" is under way.

It will be said — Pennsylvania notwithstanding — that the states moving toward the authorization of classroom prayer are Southern states, where the old-time religion, a hard faith founded on the open Bible and the quivering surrender to Jesus, remains alight.

This is so. And what does it prove? Trends have to start somewhere, do they not? A strong likelihood is that in the Northern and Western states, growing numbers of parents, surveying the social and cultural wreckage of the 20th century, would like to see official acknowledgment of God returned to the public school classroom.

The issue needs more than the intellectual brushoff it receives from backers of the U.S. Supreme Court's 30-year-old no-prayer decisions. Likewise, the issue needs from supporters of prayer an acknowledgment of that context in which the contending parties battle.

Would student-led prayer break down the famous wall of separation between church and state? Hardly. No such wall exists. It is a myth — like the unicorn, the Valkyrie, the lusty rampages of Zeus. The "wall" phrase occurs in a letter of Thomas Jefferson's. The federal government, for the first 170 years of our national history, erected no such wall.

There were school prayers. Did that mean we capped such occasions with torchlight processions directed at the homes and workplaces of "freethinkers"? Did each murmured petition to the Almighty spark schoolyard attacks on classmates who kept their eyes open during the ritual? You would suppose so from the righteous yelps sent up by the anti-school-prayer faction. You wonder, on their reasoning, how we survived 170 years without the Supreme Court's intervention. Why didn't we simply tear each other apart, for the love of Jesus or Nietzsche?

One reason we didn't was that all this schoolhouse religion was remarkably tame: no flashes of Judgment Day, no preaching against the unconverted. A simple acknowledgment of gratitude to God was the framework.

Well, you ask, all that being so, why bother to restore prayer in any form? Good question. Often enough, proponents of school prayer claim we must have it in order to restore morality. With all due respects, this partakes of post hoc ergo propter hoc reasoning; i.e., because our moral decline started after school prayer was knocked out, the knocking out of school prayer must have commenced it.

The Supreme Court's decisions are better seen as judicial symptoms of the moral sickness already spreading over America in the early '60s — soon to culminate in the anti-war/counterculture movement. Our society let the prayer decisions stand because, at bottom, it was ceasing to believe in the efficacy, not to mention the truth, of revealed religion.

CHARLEY REESE

Folks face moral managers, mean aliens

The three broad areas we should be concerned about today are, not in any particular order of importance, our environment, our economy, and our government's increasing tendency to try to control every aspect of our lives.

Reese

What about moral values, that hot topic the neo-conservatives have, for the most immoral reasons, tried to convert into a campaign issue?

Moral values are not a public policy issue, because public policy, laws, and rules cannot affect them. Moral values are a matter of individual conscience. For the same reasons that Jefferson and Madison argued that government must not intrude into matters of conscience regarding religion, government should not intrude into matters of conscience regarding moral values, beyond prohibiting behavior that injures another person.

A crook will never become an honest man just because you passed laws or adopt rules regarding ethics. In fact, one contributing factor to the crisis in private morality is the belief that legalism can be substituted for morality.

A person inclined to rob, rape and murder will not be deterred by neo-conservative speeches or laws. We do have a lot of immorality in America, but only we as individuals and families can correct that problem. You cannot mandate kindness, love, loyalty, compassion or respect for the rights of others any more than you can mandate intelligence and judgment. Those come from within and if they are missing, they cannot be poured in from without.

The human being is not a programmable android.

As for the environment, one of the most urgent needs is to preferably eliminate and, at the minimum, greatly reduce immigration, both legal and illegal. Immigration at the present level will not only contribute greatly to the destruction of the environment but will also radically alter our culture.

America is not America because of the land and water. It is America because Americans sharing American values and cherishing American traditions live within these boundaries. We are a nation of immigrants but we are a nation of immigrants who left the old behind and adopted American ways and American values. Many, if not most, of today's immigrants, especially the illegals from Mexico, have no intention whatsoever of adopting American values. There are even organizations out West which publicly proclaim their intention to reclaim "Mexican territory" city by city, county by county, state by state.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., has offered the best bill, S.1351, which would limit immigration to 300,000 a year. I suggest you build a fire of support for it among your own congressmen and senators. Present legal immigration levels are at 900,000 a year.

According to Donald Huddle, of Rice University, immigrants, legal and illegal, have cost American taxpayers $42.7 billion since 1970 in excess of any tax revenues they contribute,

Environment and economy are interconnected. We need an economy which generates more jobs and less toxic wastes, solid wastes, and energy consumption. The only real solution to the crime problem is to create jobs that pay a living wage. The trend today is in the opposite direction of eliminating jobs, reducing the pay of those that remain, while producing more environmental problems. Simple example: restaurants use Styrofoam cups because they eliminate a dishwasher's job. So you subtract a job and add to the solid waste disposal problem.

Finally, we will never solve our problems if we continue to surrender decision-making to bureaucrats and politicians. Why did communism collapse? Because bureaucrats and politicians are incompetent when it comes to running a nation. The purpose of government is to provide police and armies and a little infrastructure. Allow it do more and it will foul it up. We need less government, not more, and sensible government, not utopian social engineering.

How far will president go to win?

During the late 1930s, Juan Peron seryed as Argentina's military attache' to Italy. Here he observed and was impressed by the success of the facists. In 1943 he participated in a military coup that overthrew the Argentine government. He was later elected president of Argentina for two four-year terms (1947-1955).

Although not elected or officially appointed to any government post, Juan's wife, Evita, took over and acted as de facto minister of health and labor throughout Juan's first term and until her death in 1952.

Evita cut off funds to Argentina's Socidad de Beneficincia (private aid society) and replaced it with the Eva Peron Foundation. This organization accepted "voluntary" contributions from unions, businesses, the government and received a cut from the national lottery. The foundation became a huge dispenser of political patronage under Evita's absolute control. She received great support and adulation from los discamiscidos (the shirtless ones). In their effort to impose their own ideas on a lawful and prosperous nation, the Perons used populist support and political muscle. They left a legacy of economic turmoil, inflation, political corruption and violence.

After observing the antics of our current U.S. president, his "Evita" and their zoo-like cabinet, one can only wonder as to what extremes they would be willing to go to gain their political ends and if their legacy will resemble the one described above.

VISTA volunteers work long, hard

On March 10 the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse VISTA volunteer program comes to an end. The council has been the recipient of a grant from ACTION for VISTA volunteers and at one time had seven VISTA volunteers. Nicholas Arena from Massachusetts and Josephine Vineyard from Washington were two nationally recruited VISTA volunteers.

The VISTAs have worked long and hard to recruit volunteers and establish educational programs and fundraising events in Ector, Midland, and the surrounding counties. We expanded our programs and services faster because of these wonderful volunteers. When people join together their power is fortified, their message is clearer and their voice louder.

I would like the citizens of the Permian Basin to meet these wonderful VISTA volunteers who worked with the council for one year or more: Lora Becker, Raymond Ellard, Carlo Madrid, Angie Treadwell, Vena LeFevre, Pam Tolliver, Nicholas Arena, Josephine Vineyard, Stephanie Ramirez, and J. Murphy Horton. Special thanks to the action office and to Bob Hernandez for all the support they offered us during our grant period.

Seniors should fear Clinton plan

Skepticism of the Clinton's health-care package, especially by seniors, is well founded. From experience, seniors have good reason to believe the program will be much more costly than Billiary tells us. Their cost rundown is about as reliable as Candidate Clinton's promised tax cut for the middle class.

Seniors have even more to fear. When costs are overrun, rationing is certain to occur and guess who is going to come out on the short end of the stick? If you're 85 and need a hip replacement, forget it! Some bureaucrat, certain to be younger than you who thinks you've already lived a full life, will establish priorities. That will get you on a waiting list, but you may die before your turn comes up.

The Clintons are not stupid. They know their plan won't work. What they want is power. They want to socialize this great country. Both have shown their admiration for Marxism, and they have grouped a lot of such people around them. We need to think hard and long before we buy into their's or any other plan that gives us bigger and more intrusive government.

Clinton: U.S. might back U.N. forces in Georgia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton said Monday he would support sending United Nations peacekeeping forces to embattled Georgia under certain conditions. It would be the first such U.N. presence in the former Soviet Union.

Clinton told Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze that if peace negotiations lead to "a lasting political settlement" and a cease-fire with the separatist forces in Georgia's Abkhazia province, "the United States would be inclined to support a U.N. peacekeeping operation in Georgia, an operation that would not involve U.S. military units."

The White House began sounding out Congress about backing such a mission, which could require tens of millions of dollars for the U.S. share of the cost.

Clinton, addressing a news conference with Shevardnadze at his side, said the United States supports "the independence, the sovereignty and the territorial integrity of Georgia," which still has Russian troops on its soil.

Shevardnadze is heading to New York late today to ask the United Nations for peacekeeping troops. The Abkhazian leaders and Russia also have requested the force. The U.N. has a small observer mission in Georgia now, but not a full-fledged peacekeeping operation.

The peacekeepers are needed to ensure the safe return of refugees who were driven out of Abkhazia last fall by separatist forces seeking to establish an independent state, Shevardnadze said.

Clinton also announced the United States this year will provide $70 million in mostly humanitarian aid for Georgians, including nearly 300,000 refugees displaced by the Abkhazia war. Clinton said more technical and economic assistance would be forthcoming as Georgia moves toward peace and domestic reform.

Shevardnadze announced Georgia will abide by the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty and he signed with Clinton a bilateral investment treaty to promote market-oriented policies toward foreign investment.

Georgia, once dependent on Russia for economic and military security, is "experiencing a very, very tough time," Shevardnadze said. "If it were not for the assistance of the American people and your support, Mr. President, our people, the Georgian people, in the fullest sense of the word would be starving."

"We long for the day when you will not need it any more, and we know you do, too," Clinton told him.

The United States has provided $225 million in humanitarian aid over the past two years.

Shevardnadze's visit to the White House was his first as leader of Georgia. He was well-known in Washington during his days as the Soviet Union's foreign minister who helped retire the Cold War under former President Mikhail Gorbachev.

He is seeking U.S. aid and American business investment, and told a gathering of the Overseas Private Investment Corp. Monday morning that his country is on the road to peace and stability.

Midwest merchants, forecasters dismiss fears of another great flood

By Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Some days, Tommy Tucker feels like he's still fighting the Great Flood of 1993.

Other days, he's so exhausted he just gets silly. Like the time a customer asked if she could have the frog he'd just found in his shop — and he filled out a receipt so she could prove it was hers.

Tucker's attitude about flooding has gone from constant worry over the past eight months to "it's just going to go where it wants to go."

He's been able to re-do his interior design studio, but comments: "It's a damn hard way to get home improvements."

His shop is in the old Valley Junction area — now a section of arts and crafts shops and restaurants — that is smack in the middle of the flood plain for the Raccoon River. In July, it was flooded three times, with the worst round bringing water up to 6 feet deep.

Three miles downstream, the Raccoon poured over the levee protecting the Des Moines Water Works plant, knocking out water service to the city of 250,000 for 12 days. Crews have added 6 feet to the top of the levee, bringing it more than 4 feet above the height of last year's flooding.

Throughout the Midwest, the 1993 flood caused an estimated $12 billion in damage and was blamed for 48 deaths in nine states: Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

That flooding started with heavy snow cover and early spring rain at the same time the snow was melting.

This year, even though early warm weather has already gotten rid of much of the snow — it's all gone in Iowa — the soil is still saturated in the nine states, leaving farmers wondering when they'll be able to plant, and people aren't taking chances.

The Army Corps of Engineers has stockpiled 10 million sandbags in the Midwest.

College debts change many graduates' lives

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hillary Wicai has her dream job as a television reporter, but she can't afford the clothes that make her look professional on the air.

She's trying to pay off "an enormous debt, probably $20,000 or $21,000" for the year at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism that helped her land the job. And that's on a novice newsperson's salary of $16,000 a year.

"All my clothes are gifts," says Wicai, who works for WLFI in West Lafayette, Ind. "Every single thing I have for work was given to me. My mother, my grandmother — they shop for me for bargains."

Millions of today's students must smirk when, studying Shakespeare, they come across Polonius' advice to his son Laertes, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be."

If they weren't borrowers, they wouldn't in college be.

And after they get out, their debt can influence the course of their lives. A study finds that many graduates in debt postpone marriage, delay having a family, hold down two jobs, even put off medical care.

Much attention has been paid to college borrowers who default, but relatively little to the impact of indebtedness on the 12.5 million who ploddingly, month after month, pay off their loans.

Collectively they owe $41.9 billion. Many are still in hock 10 years after graduation.

No time for these young people to backpack across Europe; no year off to "find themselves" — they've got debts to pay!

"There are students who would like to take a couple of years of their life and go to work in the nonprofit sector, and return something to their country before they mush on with their careers," said Victor Lindquist, director of placement at Northwestern.

'But they feel they are unable to do that and still meet their financial obligations. The clock begins ticking once you graduate."

For a variety of reasons — college tuitions have soared, more people of all incomes are enrolling and there are more loan programs available — more students are leaving school in debt.

In many schools, 70 percent of the student body must borrow. One survey said that the average undergraduate borrower carried away a $7,900 debt. Those who also borrowed for an advanced degree owed $31,000.

And the burden is compounded when one student debtor marries another.

"When I was in school in the 1950s, I had three jobs and worked summers," recalled Lindquist. "If you hustled you could make your way through."

Joanne Peevey, director of career and counseling services at the University of Houston at Clear Lake, said some graduates with loans leap at the first job offer that comes along "rather than taking the time to find the job that fits their skills and interest. So they pay a price."

Teenagers can find it difficult to express their true feelings. So it's not always easy to know when something is troubling them. Certain behaviors, however, can be signs. Elect Jim Prince, County Judge

Since Midland County spends 21-plus million dollars, the county judge needs extensive experience in investigating expenditures and developing economic plans limited to necessary expenditures. As former CEO of two major real estate firms, and now principal of a successful Midland business, I have many years of proven experience in budget planning and expense control.

Proven leadership, ability to organize, lead and compromise is required. I have more than a quarter century of successful experience doing this.

Conducting arraignments is best done by someone with the maturity and sound judgment that I possess and have used successfully for decades.

More JOBS = A Better Economy for Midland

SAVE TAXPAYERS MONEY by:

Work camps, not expensive jails, inmates performing community duties in print shops, laundries, landscaping and janitorial, by secure supervision of our capable law enforcement

Diversification = A Brighter Future & JOBS

Midland County deserves and could have a brighter future, but only if diversification is undertaken and accomplished. For years it has been unrealistic to depend economically exclusively on the oil industry. To grow, Midland, new industries and businesses must be attracted that create jobs. This can occur only with an organized professional plan, budgeted and undertaken by local government. I am the only candidate with years of direct involvement and participation in successfully relocating numerous major and small business firms.

Midland County is long overdue for a complete study of the activities that devour the citizens' ad valorem taxes, and after this thorough investigation, programs with policies, and procedures like that of a successful business need to be initiated. No other candidate has the experience and proven ability to accomplish this all-important task.

The overcrowded conditions of the jail could be solved immediately by the creation of boot camps and work facilities at much less cost than building additional jails. Why are we waiting? There should be printing shops, laundries, facilities for automotive, office equipment and furniture repairs, landscaping and janitorial duties all performed by inmates under careful and secure supervision of our very capable law-enforcement agencies. I will strive to accomplish this with the cooperation and assistance I have been promised.

Midland could be recognized as one of the most progressive and best communities in the USA, thereby better able to attract new businesses. Midland County needs a successful business leader not another attorney.

New group supports young people who want to 'Do Something'

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is another installment in "New Glory," an ongoing series on the concept of community in America.

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — Gathered quietly in a faux wood-paneled room, their backpacks and winter parkas jumbled among folding chairs, a dozen or so young people sit down to write their obituaries.

Brenda Sanchez, 24, was "a great achiever."

Todd Behling, 25, "worked and achieved at everything he put his mind to and his love of humanity defined his chosen work."

Hoover Herrera, 23, "can be best remembered as a man who liked to do anything to make someone else's life a little happier. To his family, he'll be remembered as a strong and responsible father who never put his needs above anyone else's in his home. To his community, which was the city of Newark, he will be remembered for his concerns and efforts in helping youth by providing many positive opportunities for them to take advantage of."

Jill Rottman, 21, "will be remembered most for her focus on the successful revamping of the welfare system, which eventually brought the program to an end. She was also responsible for initating housing programs that provided homes to millions of Americans who wouldn't have had them otherwise. Most importantly, however, she started a program that rid the country of the illegal drugs that used to plague our cities."

John Hill, 20, stops the exercise. Though the group has been asked to start with their endings, his talk tonight is actually about beginnings. He and his young colleagues are here to seize possibility, and commit themselves to the kind of vision their futures will require.

"Right now, everyone in here has done an obituary," says Hill, a New Jersey Youth Corps counselor whose turn it is to lead this week's workshop. "So if you have that in mind every day of your life, or every day when you wake up, everything you do should reflect where you want to be at in the end. You understand that?"

Everyone nods. It's pretty basic stuff, as basic as the name of the project that has drawn the group together tonight: Do Something.

Even though it's getting late, a certain energy moves quietly around the circle of chairs, among this multicolored group of bright people full of the kind of idealism many fear is more or less dead in young America.

Theirs is the first program in a new community service campaign that founders hope eventually will embrace and activate young people nationwide.

The brainchild of actor Andrew Shue and his childhood buddy, Michael Sanchez, Do Something is about giving the nation's younger citizens — a group often overlooked — the chance to make a difference.

The fund, set for an official launch in May, will administer grants of up to $500 to innovators under 30, young people who might want to start a recycling effort or day care center for single mothers, tutor peers or help build affordable housing. Programs can encompass anything, as long as they're creative and effective.

By enlisting the help of seasoned community activists who can act as mentors, Do Something plans to establish autonomous boards of young directors to administer funds in at least five cities by year's end. Ultimately, the hope is for such partnerships to spread and flourish around the country.

"Young people have a whole bunch of energy, enthusiasm, idealism and almost invariably want to take action, but there are few resources and structures in place," says Sanchez, 26, who runs Do Something's main office in New York.

"Our local boards can combine all this energy with a little bit of money and a lot of guidance. . . . It has to happen on the local level. And young people know their communities."

Thanks in part to the 27-year-old Shue, best known as Billy on "Melrose Place," the fledgling organization already has received celebrity support and commitments of airtime from the Fox Broadcasting Co., MTV and Chris Whittle's Channel One. Several major magazines have offered free ad space, and Blockbuster Video has agreed to make Do Something's materials available at its 2,500 outlets.

'Young people have a whole bunch of energy, enthusiasm, idealism and almost invariably want to take action, but there are few resources and structures in place.'
— Michael Sanchez, program co-founder

Participants in the fund's Newark pilot program say it offers a rare opportunity to move beyond the headlines and statistics that pigeonhole them to the very real, very practical problems many can — and want — to face.

Greg Tighe, 28, speaks up: "It's an idea, a plan to 'Do Something' before you die to make a difference in the world . . . to leave something positive behind in an environment that right now seems just focused on the negative."

Outside the brick building on Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard this freezing Tuesday night, planes descend one after the other from their flight patterns into Newark Airport. The icy streets are mainly empty, though area police will log 2,187 crime reports over the next 24 hours.

Inside and upstairs, over Chinese take-out and steady rounds of applause, are young people beating the odds. Many have lost siblings or friends to the streets; many have known temptation themselves.

Jermaine Puryear, a new grant recipient, was standing squarely in trouble's path. His mother was into drugs and his father "wasn't really there for me." By the time he was 16, his high school career was over and a baby son soon would follow. Car-jacking, which made its name in Newark, was the crime of choice among many young men in his neighborhood.

He hadn't gotten into any serious trouble, "but I could see it coming." Fortunately for Puryear, now 21, some good people also showed up along the way. At a local church, he found mentors and spiritual guides. They set him on another path, a path that since has only widened.

With help from Do Something and a $15,000 grant from the new Corporation for National Service, Puryear is starting a program that combines autobody repair and high school equivalency courses with life lessons, support and a strong emphasis on self-esteem.

Youths who otherwise would be in juvenile detention will instead have the chance to work off probationary community service by performing repair jobs and at the same time learning a marketable skill.

"You know, a lot of these guys can get into a car in 30 seconds," says Puryear, whose 3-year-old son's future is never far from his mind. "You might have a genius on your hands — a real rocket scientist. Why not give them a second chance? Why not let them take something violent and turn it into a skill?"

To many young people, the question is far from rhetorical. "The price of failure in this is the future of our nation," says Lawren Bridgeforth, 25, a striking woman with serious goals.

Local scam

Midland police are warning Midland residents of a possible scam involving magazine sales in Midland. Sgt. David Garcia said several college-age males and females are going door-to-door stating that they are selling magazines for a company called Paragon. Garcia said the subjects use a variety of reasons for selling the magazines, including getting extra college credits. The subjects tend to be pushy and flash credentials at the residents showing that they are licensed by the city, Garcia said. However, the City of Midland has not licensed any company called Paragon. The subjects also list several methods of payment, but state that if the resident pays in cash, up front, they will receive bonus points for other magazines. Garcia said the police department learned of the scam after a woman discovered that on her receipt, the appropriate magazine had not been marked. She called the numbers on the receipt, which turned out to be bogus.

Execution stay

HOUSTON — The execution for death row inmate Troy Dale Farris scheduled for early Tuesday has been stayed by a federal judge, officials say.

U.S. District Judge Terry Means issued the stay Friday, the state attorney general's office said.

Farris, 32, was convicted in the December 1983 fatal shooting of Tarrant County Deputy Sheriff Clark Murrell Rosenbaum Jr.

Farris was conducting an illegal drug deal when Rosenbaum noticed the group and drove up to investigate. Farris shot the officer twice.

Judge sentences telemarketers

■ The judgments for the phone-marketing employees range from 120 months in prison to five years probation.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Sixteen telemarketers convicted of defrauding thousands of dollars from victims via the telephone were sentenced in federal court Monday.

All of the defendants were sales staff for four telemarketing companies, based in Houston, that had their employees call individuals across the country, tell them they'd won large cash prizes and then instruct them to send in a payment for handling charges.

However, the victims never received any prizes.

The FBI handled the investigation and charged 20 people, with one released for lack of evidence. Of the remaining 19, 18 were convicted and one fugitive is still at large.

Most of the defendants pleaded guilty to the charges. Four defendants were found guilty after a three-day trial. Those include the so-called ringleader of the scheme, Norris Louis McGraw; along with Paula Sneed, Patrick Johnson and Sharon Ann Polley.

McGraw was sentenced to 120 months in prison with three years of supervised release to follow.

Ms. Sneed was sentenced to 15 months in prison with three years of supervised release. Johnson received 12 months in prison and three years of supervised release.

Ms. Polley got 12 months in prison and three years of supervised release also.

Renee Hamilton Adewola was placed on five years probation and ordered to pay $85,000 in restitution. Leroy Marshall was sentenced to 15 months in prison and orderd to pay $3,145 in restitution. He will also be required to complete three years of supervised release.

Publisher may remove textbook from state market

AUSTIN (AP) — A textbook publisher is considering removing its health book from the Texas market rather than make changes ordered by the State Board of Education dealing mainly with sex education.

"We've been evaluating the different implications and options and what it means," said Bill Talkington of Austin, president of Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

Company believes changes will make book less appealing to general education market.

He said the company already is marketing the book as it is nationally.

"We can't afford to develop a product that can only be sold in one state," said Peter Farwell, vice president of corporate relations for parent company Harcourt General Inc. in Boston.

The Education Board last month voted to require changes in health textbooks by five publishers, such as deletion of some explicit illustrations and addition of information about sodomy laws.

Farwell said the changes would make Holt's textbook less appealing to the general education market. He said the company spent two years developing the book, including surveying focus groups and researching health issues.

"It's not just an economic issue; we're concerned about the quality of health education," he said.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno had said the changes were meant to strengthen the sexual abstinence message and eliminate sexually provocative graphics.

Program helps victims during trying times

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Giving hugs and possessing good listening skills make up just a portion of what the two women who work in the Midland County district attorney's victim-assistance program do every day.

Sandra Edge, program director, and Rochell Beck, program coordinator, specialize in assisting victims and their families. The Midland County program has been in place since 1985 with Ms. Edge on the job for more than five years and Ms. Buck for more than four years.

Ms. Edge explained the purpose of the program is to help victims and their families through the criminal justice system in different ways. Some of those ways include advising them of their rights, accompanying the family into the courtroom and making referrals to other agencies.

They also help with protective orders and obtaining restitution for victims. Ms. Buck said they can also notify the victim about court cases and help them apply for a victim's compensation.

She said a lot of what they do depends on the victim.

Local groups offer support for chronic-fatigue sufferers

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Fatigue.

It is quite natural to be tired and worn out from travail — exhausted from work both mental and physical. And it can be an exhilarating, feel-good sort of exhaustion, for tomorrow you know that you, following rest, will be feeling better. You will be back to your "old self" and ready to begin life anew.

But for people who are affected by and afflicted with a medical phenomenon known as chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS) or chronic fatigue immune dysfunction syndrome (CFIDS), their "exhaustion" can be debilitating. They seem to be more than just "run down."

Linda Hagler is beset by CFS or CFIDS, which is clouded by controversy and lack of research.

"You are extremely fatigued," she said. "It is not normal fatigue like people experience when they exercise, or when they are just tired. It is debilitating, and you are zapped out. You just feel totally wasted."

In the 1980s, it was assigned "the yuppie flu" euphemism. The disease was associated with young professional people although it "crosses all barriers.

"I call it the 'yucky' flu," said Ms. Hagler, a 37-year-old former school-teacher who, at 5-foot-9, was into professional modeling and sales when two years ago she was injured in a traffic accident in Lubbock.

"The physical trauma is what set mine off."

The chronic fatigue syndrome seems to become evident following a period of severe emotional stress, such as that associated with illness, injury, divorce, job loss.

"I was 35 when I had the wreck in 1992," Ms. Hagler recalled. "I traveled frequently, socialized all the time, worked constantly."

Today, Ms. Hagler, who lives in Midland, is battling both the neurological problems

More rambling thoughts ...

— One of the prettiest songs ever recorded is "Moonlight Becomes You," which contains the memorable line, "You're all dressed up to go dreaming."

— I hate perky people, especially first thing in the morning.

— In a weird sort of way it can be entertaining to have people talk about you behind your back.

— Like I say, it's in a "weird" sort of way.

— When someone says, "I know just how you feel," I want to say, "No you don't."

— Kids don't seem to have nicknames as much as they used to.

— The best one I ever heard was "Booger Red."

— Gregory Peck always struck me as being the ultimate in class.

— Alltime favorite country-western song: "He Stopped Loving Her Today."

— Some people can make wisecracks and come across as being funny; others sound like jerks.

— It has been said a hundred times before, but West Texas sunsets are truly special.

— It's terribly unfair, I suppose, but there are certain people who just get on your nerves the minute you meet them.

— I miss old houses with wooden porches that kids could crawl under and do naughty things, like smoke cigarettes and steal kisses from a neighborhood girlfriend.

— Is it just me or does it seem like an awful lot of tomboys grow up to be beautiful women?

— There are not very many better feelings than hitting a high, floating golf shot that lands three feet from the hole and stops.

— OK, there ARE better feelings, but, hey, this is a family newspaper.

— Just a guess: Tonya Harding will spend no time in jail.

— There are a lot of things wrong with society, but I get tired of people blaming all of their problems on that fact.

— For some reason I like to hear old people brag about their grandkids, but when parents use the exact same words to describe their own kids it doesn't sound as charming.

— I suppose that is one of the benefits of growing old.

— Hunting never appealed to me.

— Fishing is better, but it's not exactly my cup of tea, either.

— Before you angry outdoorsmen take pen in hand, please note I am not anti-hunting or fishing, I just prefer other activities.

— Every once in awhile a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, topped off with a great big glass of cold milk, is just what the doctor ordered.

— True friends can communicate without speaking.

— Unless you're in the right mood, hearing someone discuss their sexual conquests is really quite boring.

— It's too bad men don't wear hats as much as they used to.

— Whenever I smell cigar smoke I think of my granddad.

— I thought it was a non-issue at first, but this Whitewater deal just might cause President Clinton major political damage, after all.

— It's sad when a person makes a career change and realizes it was a mistake.

— One of life's more amusing moments is listening to someone, preferably a "know-it-all" type, botch the words to a popular song while he attempts to sing along on the radio.

— Today's final quote comes from baseball pitcher Larry Anderson, who said, "You're only young once, but you can be immature forever."

HELP: Program offers victims assistance

(From 1B)

For instance, many cases are relatively short-term. But, she said violent crimes may last longer and therefore extend their ties with the victims.

Ms. Edge said they can help obtain counseling for victims and help families with medical expenses incurred as a result of the crime through the victim's compensation.

"Most people have never been involved with the criminal justice system . . . they're at a loss," Ms. Edge said. "We can explain the process to them, warn them about the time involved and everything they'll likely go through."

Ms. Buck said through the program she or Ms. Edge can act as a liason between the victim and the attorneys and law enforcement.

"We can help them find out what they need to know . . . plus they get used to us. Some want one person to talk to and a face they can associate with," Ms. Buck said.

In cases where children are the victims, Ms. Edge said the children are usually terrified. In many instances, the child's family members are witnesses and are not allowed in the courtroom while the child testifies.

So, Ms. Edge said she acts as a friend for the child. Before the trial, the child is taken into the courtroom, placed in the witness seat and practices speaking into the microphone.

She said that way "things aren't quite as scary."

Similar situations can exist with elderly crime victims.

Ms. Buck worked with a 91-year-old burglary victim, whom she picked up at home and brought to court because the woman didn't have transportation.

Connie Kyle met Ms. Edge and Ms. Beck in the worst situation. She is the sister of murder victim Tommy Edward Musick. The murder trial endured for more than a week with a verdict and sentence much less than the family expected.

Ms. Kyle, who lives in Baton Rouge, La., attended the trial with her mother and other family members who all live out of state.

"In a situation like we were in, it's hard enough to take care of ourselves, let alone another family member. Having Rochell there eliminated that stress for us. She took care of Mother so we knew we could get up and leave and not worry about her," Ms. Kyle said.

She said it was also helpful to have "a person there to show empathy and compassion for us."

Ms. Kyle said before the trial started, when she had questions, she knew Ms. Beck and Ms. Edge were there to answer questions for the family and keep them informed.

It is that appreciation from the people they encounter that keeps Ms. Buck and Ms. Edge in their jobs.

Ms. Buck said she likes "feeling like you've really helped someone."

She mentioned an 8-year-old sexual-assault victim who, the Christmas after the trial, brought her a small gift wrapped in holiday paper. When she opened the gift, it was simply a pack of gum. But to that little girl that was a sacrifice.

"It was so sweet," Ms. Buck said with a smile.

Ms. Edge agreed with Ms. Buck and noted it is the children that keep her going.

Both agreed the down side of the job is when violent offenders receive low sentences.

"But, even when they get three 99-year sentences, it is still not enough to put their lives back where they were . . . and we're a part of a real tragic time in their lives," Ms. Edge said.

"The pain is real. They are told not to break down in court so when we get back here we see that," Ms. Buck said.

But, despite the heartache and struggles, both women strive to keep smiles on their faces and offer shoulders for any tears shed.

GROUPS: Syndrome sufferers can seek support in Midland

(From 1B)

caused by the wreck and the fatigue.

Her principal therapy, which is generally encouraged by physicians, is eating a balanced diet, getting adequate rest, remaining as active as possible, and minimizing and coping with stress.

Ms. Hagler's Austin physician, Dr. Don Mannerberg, prefers to treat the fatigue through diet, nutritional therapies, including use of the parsley-like perennial herb, lomatium.

"I have always been a health-food nut anyway, always ate real healthy, so I didn't have to change anything in that respect," Ms. Hagler said. "But diet is very important."

As for exercise for fatigue sufferers, "you have to really pace yourself, do light exercise."

Another facet of therapy is that afforded by support groups. At least two are in Midland: The Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS) Group meets at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. Those interested may contact Hospital Chaplain Alan Williams at 685-1566. The joint Fibromyalgia Syndrome (FMS) and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Group meets at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ Fellowship Hall. Those interested in that group may telephone Ms. Hagler at 520-3500, Sarah Neisig at 683-9114, or Betty Cerf at 570-5709. Fibromyalgia, which is a disease of the musculoskeletal system, is a marker for chronic fatigue.

Until recently, chronic fatigue was linked to Epstein-Barr virus, which causes infectious mononucleosis, a flu-like viral infection.

In Europe, chronic fatigue is termed "myalgic encephalomyelitis" or the ME Syndrome.

Chronic fatigue is also known as the "Nightingale" disease after the British nurse Florence Nightingale, who reputedly suffered from the syndrome, Ms. Hagler said.

"Most people who have it were professionals, very educated," she said. "And through a major stress in their life, whether it was a physical injury or whatever, it sets in. But there are numerous neurological symptoms. And you become depressed because your life changes so drastically. You are not able to do the things that you normally could have before," Ms. Hagler said.

"Depression follows it; it doesn't precede it.

"You have to really learn how to cope and just pace yourself and literally take life easy, because you are not physically able to do the things you are used to doing."

"But the fatigue waxes and wanes," said Ms. Hagler, who estimated that up to 15 million of the 260 million people in the United States are affected by the syndrome. "It just comes and goes. And that is why it is so frustrating.

"Some mornings, you wake up feeling great," Ms. Hagler said. But during the day, it can change in just a matter of seconds without any notice."

Meanwhile, Ms. Hagler said she is "determined to get better, and I am going to persevere" and "'learn to dance with the pain.'"

Local women die in accident

Staff Report

HUDSPETH COUNTY — A Midland woman died after a car accident Friday that also claimed the life of a Midland Police Department cadet.

Estella Zamarripa, 53, died late Friday after being taken to Thomason General Hospital, according to police officials.

Ms. Zamarripa was a passenger in a vehicle driven by her son, 19-year-old Martin Zamarripa, which hit the medium on Interstate 20 in Hudspeth County about 2:45 p.m. MST. The driver overcorrected and the vehicle rolled four times, officials said.

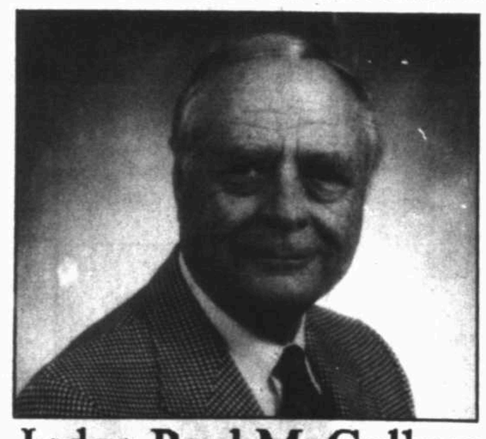

DeAnna Flores, also a passenger in the vehicle, was pronounced dead at the scene. The 18-year-old was a cadet at the Midland Police Department. She had been assigned to the traffic division.

Zamarripa, Rebecca Zamarripa, 18, and Ogla Zamarripa, 26, have been released from the hospital.

Sgt. David Garcia said a honor guard will be present at Miss Flores' funeral Wednesday and several officers will be in attendance.

Services are scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

U.S. firms try to figure out Mexicans

By Sally Streff Buzbee
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Jolted by their near-empty baseball stadium last summer and three Mexican soccer games that packed the place this winter, the San Diego Padres have hired a Tijuana ad company, agreed to recruit players from Veracruz and planned two exhibition games in Tabasco.

The effort is obvious. Like companies nationwide, the Padres are trying to tap into Mexico's big new market of consumers — just across the border but a marketing world away.

Still, Padres' president Dick Freeman says, no one in the front office has any idea whether advertising campaigns and exhibition games will accomplish the team's goal: luring Mexican fans.

"We need to know more about the market, need to try to understand it," Freeman said. "Right now, we're just beginning."

He is not alone. Two months after the North American Free Trade Agreement went into effect, U.S. firms are trying to figure out where to start, what to do and whom to ask for help.

"The psychological change has been dramatic," said Ernesto Grijalva of San Diego's Chamber of Commerce. "Before, there were a lot of people waiting on the sidelines and now they actively want to get involved. But they're still trying to figure out that first step."

Some are ahead of the game. Sara Lee Corp. of Chicago last week announced a joint venture to sell its Jimmy Dean and Hillshire Farm meats in Mexico. Giro Sport Design Inc., based near Santa Cruz, Calif., is making bicycle helmets in Mexico and hopes to sell there soon.

But the vast majority of U.S. companies are only just becoming aware of millions of Mexicans with money in their pockets. Many have long shared a "misconception that everyone in Mexico is poor," Grijalva said.

The baseball business, with so many knowledgeable, enthusiastic fans in Mexico and other Latin American nations, has a relative advantage over other businesses.

The Florida Marlins aggressively target Caribbean and Latin American countries, and the Houston Astros and Texas Rangers this year sent players to visit Monterrey and Mexico City.

The Los Angeles Dodgers have long touted their major Hispanic stars, like Mexican pitcher Fernando Valenzuela, to attract a certain market.

The Padres never exactly ignored their southern neighbors. Games have been broadcast on Spanish-language radio and television stations for years.

But there was little outreach. Last summer, the team's former director of broadcasting said 7 p.m. game times wouldn't draw Mexicans because they work 3-9 p.m. after taking afternoon siestas.

This year is different. "Now there's a sense that there's a lot of people in Baja California, and they have money to spend," Freeman said. The team, which plays in one of baseball's smallest TV markets, is eyeing the 1.5 million to 2 million people right across the border.

What caused the attitude adjustment?

NAFTA was a psychological boost, Freeman said, although technically it makes little difference to the club.

Then there were those soccer games.

On three nights in October, November and January, thousands of Mexicans poured across the border to watch their national soccer team play at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

The Padres, who lost 101 games in 1993 and won only 61 after trading away most of their big-salary players, suffered through a summer of dismal attendance, including one day when only 6,021 showed up. No wonder that soccer crowds of up to 56,000 were a shock.

"We did question some of our assumptions after that," Freeman said. "We had doubted that people would drive up and wait at the border on week nights."

The international border is so congested that cars must often wait an hour to clear U.S. Customs. "It's just a big problem as I see it," Freeman said.

But Grijalva and other business consultants say solutions exist.

The Padres could link up with Mexican bus companies to develop package trips that combine a ball game with other stops in San Diego, or perhaps a meal, said Ross Porter, whose San Diego firm helps importers and exporters.

They also should recruit Mexican and other Latin American players and Mexican workers for their front office, said Ed Vasquez of the Latin Business Association in Los Angeles.

Teen changes name to 'Trout Fishing in America'

CARPINTERIA, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager casting about for a new name has reeled in a golden one: Trout Fishing in America.

The 17-year-old wanted to do something different for his upcoming graduation from Carpinteria High School. So he went to court last week to legally change his name from Peter Eastman Jr. to Trout Fishing in America.

Trout said he decided to change his name to break away from tradition. "I am just saying I am not this little kid anymore. I want to be my own person."

The name was inspired by Richard Brautigan's 1967 counterculture classic, "Trout Fishing in America."

"I really liked the book," Trout said. "He looks at the world in a way I like."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It pays to keep your nose to the grindstone today. A lucky break could develop in a flash. Experience counts big in business. Get as much as you can. Be realistic about romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The emphasis now is on being frugal. If you dine out, choose someplace inexpensive. Practice some small economies if you want family members to develop thrifty habits. Avoid pointless squabbling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A family or relationship problem may have you frustrated. Employing logic over emotion will keep your thinking on track. Throw out negative thoughts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A dream could prove prophetic. Get your spiritual life in gear. Your ability to work calmly when under pressure will impress someone influential. A raise or promotion could be in the works.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may have some free time to yourself. Why not explore activities that can improve your well-being? A visit to a health spa or gym could prove both refreshing and beneficial.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your success is centered on artistic output and steady perseverance. Steer clear of risky financial transactions this month. Speaking your mind keeps you from blending in with the crowd.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your enthusiasm runs high for a new financial venture or romantic relationship. Step up to the plate and bat a home run! Comparison shopping will yield some fine bargains. Stick to the essentials.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The morning hours look great for business and personal gains. Your ideas and projects receive new support. Be willing to pay top dollar for expert advice. Half-measures will no longer suffice.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could give or get the wrong impression at work this morning. Diplomacy is advised if you want to reach an understanding with an influential associate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take nothing for granted. Confirm all routes, timetables and financial figures. Success hinges on your acting with a large degree of certainty. Too much analysis could lead to costly hesitation. Be decisive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): On-again, off-again negotiations are on again. A new alliance will help you attain your goals. Follow the wise advice of old friends. Fun social activities will unite a winning group.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Patience and a willingness to compromise let you mend some emotional fences. Steer clear of crowds; one-on-one encounters are favored. Apply psychology to a tricky situation. Spend quality time with offspring.

Life might not be a rose garden if you are a born pessimist, but a career in bridge could be. The winning players are those who prepare for the worst.

North could have shown a maximum one-no-trump opening bid with a good fit by cue-bidding over South's jump. When North did not, South decided that four spades was high enough.

West led the queen of hearts, ducked in dummy. When the jack was continued, declarer again played low from the table, then ruffed the third round of the suit. All seemed easy sailing until declarer cashed the ace and king of spades and West showed out on the second round.

The contract now depended on finding East with the king of diamonds or four clubs. Since it was impossible to test both possibilities, declarer opted for the diamond finesse—down one. The only consolation was that the other line also would have failed.

This is a situation that occurs with great frequency, yet is mishandled more often that not. All declarer need do is test trumps by playing off the two high honors in the closed hand. If both defenders follow, declarer draws the last trump and cashes out the clubs for an overtrick. If one defender shows out, declarer abandons trumps and starts running clubs.

As the cards lie, the best defense is for East to ruff the third club as declarer discards a diamond, and shift to diamonds. As the finesse is now fool's gold, declarer simply rises with the ace, draws the last trump with the king and takes two more diamond sluffs on the good clubs. Making four-odd.

'Shy' Jack Nicholson says he lies only to his girlfriend, police

NEW YORK — Jack Nicholson insists that he's a shy man who enjoys long relationships with one woman. Not necessarily one woman at a time, though.

In April's issue of Vanity Fair magazine, Nicholson says he often lied to longtime girlfriend Anjelica Huston, with whom he lived for 17 years.

"Of course I lied to her," Nicholson said. "It's the other woman I would never lie to. You only lie to two people in your life: your girlfriend and the police. Everyone else you tell the truth to."

A heavily whiskered Nicholson, dressed in makeup for the film "Wolf," appears on the magazine's cover.

SAN ANTONIO — Fess Parker, TV's king of the wild frontier, returned to defend the Alamo once more.

Parker, who played Davy Crockett on television in the 1950s, told members of the Alamo Society that he supported their drive to expand the Alamo grounds.

Fess Parker returns to defend the Alamo once more.

"My feeling is that this city and this state should be large enough, wise enough and creative enough to pull back away from the Alamo and give it space," the 69-year-old Parker said, clad in the buckskins and coonskin cap that made him famous.

"It could be a place for people to come to from all the Americas to discuss ways we could all come together," he said.

The Alamo was a San Antonio fort that Crockett and about 180 other Texans held against a siege of several thousand Mexican soldiers in 1836. The defenders, including Crockett, were killed, but their resistance rallied others who defeated the Mexicans six weeks later.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Frank Sinatra rested at his desert home Monday, a day after collapsing from apparent heat exhaustion in front of thousands of stunned fans at a concert in Virginia.

Sinatra, 78, felt fine and should be able to resume his concert tour in a few weeks, publicist Susan Reynolds said.

"It's very, very good to be home," Sinatra said through Reynolds.

Sinatra was nearing the end of his concert Sunday night at the sold-out Mosk Auditorium in Richmond, Va., when he passed out while singing his trademark song, "My Way."

Sinatra banged his head against a stage monitor and was unconscious for about 10 seconds. He suffered a small cut on his forehead.

"He's feeling fine. He became very hot on stage. It was heat exhaustion," Reynolds said.

Several times during the performance, Sinatra wiped his face and complained about the heat. Suddenly, he stopped singing and asked for a chair.

As paramedics and stagehands whisked him offstage in a wheelchair, Sinatra blew a kiss and the 3,700 fans responded with a standing ovation.

RADNOR, Pa. — Walter Cronkite wants TV shows that pay for interviews with celebrities like John Bobbitt and Tonya Harding to tell all themselves — including how much they paid.

"I think, by gosh, that we ought to have an FCC rule that any time anybody's paid for an interview, the price should be superimposed right under their face on the screen," the former CBS anchorman says in the March 12 issue of TV Guide magazine.

"If we were told what people had been paid for these stories, we might be able to better judge their truth or falsity."

ROME — It won't be long before Kurt Cobain can swap his hospital clothes for torn jeans and flannel shirts again.

The lead singer of the grunge-rock band Nirvana has recovered from his drug- and alcohol-induced coma and could leave the hospital as early as today.

"Cobain is doing fine and he only needs a period of rest now," his doctor, Osvaldo Galletta, said Monday.

Cobain, 27, fell into a coma early Friday after he combined a large dose of a strong sedative with champagne.

Nirvana's album "Nevermind" has sold more than six million copies worldwide.

LOS ANGELES — Russian virtuoso Maxim Vengerov played alongside his young American colleagues with a very old violin.

The 19-year-old Vengerov was the soloist for the American Youth Symphony's performance Sunday of "Concerto in D minor, Op. 47 for Violin and Orchestra" by Jean Sibelius.

Vengerov played a Stradivarius that was made in 1727. He received a standing ovation.

The Youth Symphony, formed 29 years ago, is composed of 110 musicians between 16 and 25 years old. It is guided by Mehli Mehta, 85, father of Israel Philharmonic Orchestra musical director Zubin Mehta.

Elections in big states focus on immigration

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

EL PASO — In the seven months since hundreds of federal immigration agents were deployed along the banks of the Rio Grande here, the traffic of illegal workers from Mexico has all but stopped.

But the flow of politicians to the border here has surged: From across Texas, Washington and California, Republicans and Democrats want to see, and be seen at, a get-tough effort to control immigration.

"It's election time," Mayor Larry Francis of El Paso, an independent, said as he took in the panoramic view of the border from his 10th-floor office, "and the border is a hot topic."

Many Republicans have argued that both legal and illegal immigrants unfairly burden American social services, while Democrats have played down the costs.

But now, even Democrats, who stayed clear of such debates as they relied on ethnic and civil rights groups for support, are joining the chorus, albeit cautiously.

The politicians are prompted by polls showing that the issue is gaining in importance among all voters who are worried about the economic impact of immigrants and their effect on American culture.

The politics of immigration is getting even more attention because of big elections this fall in New York, California, Florida, Illinois and Texas, which get the greatest share of immigrants. Immigration is also taking a high profile in Congress and the White House, where President Clinton, eager to appeal to moderates, is calling the issue a priority.

But if many are calling for a more aggressive attitude toward immigrants, they do not speak with one voice. Some politicians, particularly conservatives, advocate not only intensified patrols of the borders but also curbing or eliminating access to public services for illegal immigrants.

Others, like Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., are also taking aim at legal immigrants. Simpson introduced legislation last week to cut legal immigrants into the United States to about 500,000 a year from 675,000.

Rather than emphasize legal immigration, the governors of New York, California, Florida, Illinois and Texas — all of whom are running for re-election this year — have focused on illegal immigrants.

Asserting that their actions are driven by budgetary, not political, considerations, the governors have threatened to sue the federal government for help in providing federally mandated services to undocumented immigrants.

Even Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, a son of immigrants who is known for praising immigrants in speech after speech, was more circumspect in a recent radio interview, saying:

"They are part of our great strength. They will be a nourishment for our future," adding, "They are also expensive."

Immigration is especially perilous for Democrats as they seek to turn it to their advantage — or, at least, prevent Republicans from keeping the issue as their own — without alienating core supporters.

The exceptions are organized labor, and, increasingly, blacks, who look warily upon immigrants as competition.

In Texas, where Democrats have historically welcomed immigrants to integrate the border towns, Gov. Ann Richards has been particularly cautious; she needs to keep her stronghold among Hispanic voters in South Texas to win re-election. But her decision to join in a suit against the federal government shows how serious the issue has become.

Mark McKinnon, a Democratic strategist in Austin, said: "Immigration is a potential powder keg kind of issue. It plays to the politics of fear, and the politics of fear can be very persuasive. You're hearing the governor saying some things now that she wasn't saying three years ago."

There is reason for concern. Both legal and illegal immigrants cost Texans more than $4 billion in 1992 for education, health care and other services beyond what they paid in taxes, according to a study published this week by Donald Huddle, an economist at Rice University.

While many experts question Huddle's figures, saying he did not consider factors like Social Security payments made by immigrants, his conclusions have received wide publicity in Texas and intensified the debate.

Court allows church to keep tax exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday let First Baptist Church of San Antonio keep a property tax exemption for two parking lots it rents part-time to a local business.

The court, without comment, rejected an argument by Bexar County officials that a state law unconstitutionally provides a tax exemption to churches not granted to secular charities.

First Baptist Church rents two of its downtown parking lots to nearby Valero Realty Co., affiliated with Valero Energy Corp., for company employees to use during weekday working hours.

The church keeps about 40 spaces for its own use at all times, and uses the entire parking lots during the evenings and weekends, including during Sunday worship services.

In the mid-1980s, the realty company paid about $111,000 a year for use of the parking lots.

The Bexar County Appraisal District refused to give the church a property tax exemption for the lots from 1984 through 1986, saying they were being used for commercial purposes.

State law allows property tax exemptions for numerous groups, including churches, charitable organizations and disabled veterans.

The law allows religious groups to get an exemption for property they use commercially, as long as it still is primarily used for religious purposes.

But the exemption for charitable groups applies only to property used exclusively for charitable purposes, unless the commercial use is "incidental."

The church sued, and a state court jury awarded it a tax exemption for the three years.

Hillin Jr. resigns

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Former Midlander Bobby Hillin Jr. resigned Monday as the driver for the NASCAR Winston Cup team owned by Junie Donlavey after a disappointing 1993 season and a poor start this year.

"Neither one of us was happy with what we are trying to do with this race team," Donlavey said in a news release. "It is not anybody's fault. It is not working out for either of us, so it is smart for Bobby to do what he did."

Hillin said he had a difference in philosophy with Donlavey. "It's just the way I feel," he said.

Hillin, 29, of Charlotte, N.C., said he had been considering leaving for the past six months.

Hillin began driving the Ford Thunderbird for the Heilig-Meyers team at the start of last season. His best 1993 finish was 11th at Michigan. He was 27th in the overall standings at the end of the year, with six finishes in the top 15.

This year, Hillin was 24th in the Daytona 500 after getting involved in a mid-race wreck with 10 other drivers.

JUCO REGION V BASKETBALL

MC Hutch bound with 73-70 thriller

■ Midland College wins the Region V championship and lands a national Junior College tournament berth with a win over Odessa College.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

WACO — As Midland College coach Steve Green said following Sunday's 19-point win over McLennan College to earn a trip to the Region V finals, "It figures that we would have to travel 300 miles to play the rubber game."

The Western Junior College Athletic Conference foes had split two games earlier this year and on the line was a trip to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., March 15-20.

Midland College played tenacious defense and withstood a furious Odessa College rally to earn its first trip to the national junior college basketball tournament since 1986-87 with a 73-70 win over the Wranglers at the Starbrust Junior College Basketball Championships at the Ferrell Center here Monday evening.

"We were not going to let that press beat us," said Midland College coach Steve Green. "It got them back into the game, but we were not going to let it beat us."

The win improves Midland to 29-3 on the year while Odessa ends its season 29-3. The Chaps will face Region VII winner Kilgore Junior College tonight at 7:30 p.m. for the Texas-New Mexico championship.

Maybe more important to the Midland College players was pride and bragging rights for a year. There is no love lost between the two programs.

This one was personal.

Both teams came out playing hard-nosed defense. The play was physical as the officials let the warriors fight this one out.

"They got us at our house and we got them at their house, we owed them," said MC center John Brown, who scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. "They did a lot of talking this weekend and we didn't do any talking, we did our talking on the court."

"We heard a lot of noise earlier in this week that Odessa was telling everybody that they were going to beat us," said guard Andre Owens, who scored 15 points and dished out five assists. "We didn't let that bother us."

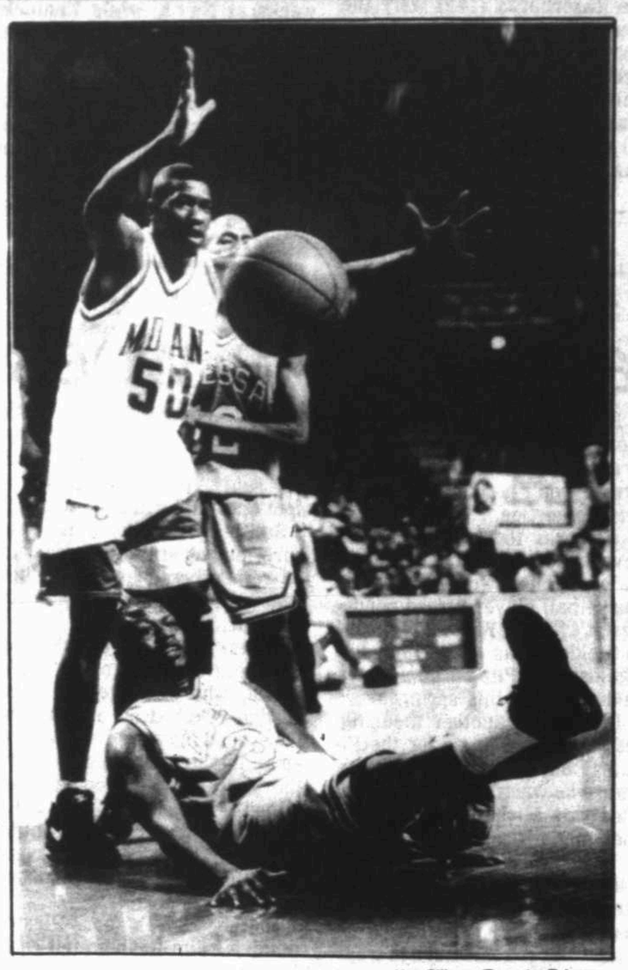

What did bother the Chaps was Odessa's full court trapping defense. After controling the OC press for 36 minutes of the game, the Wranglers crawled back into the game, feeding off a flurry of Midland turnovers.

Leading 64-54 with 4:40 to play, the Chaps turned the ball over on five of six possessions and OC reeled off nine straight points to trail 66-65 after two Bobby Davis free throws with 2:32 to play.

Wrangler guard Larry Johnson picked up his fifth personal foul with 2:27 to play and the momentum of the Wranglers was stifled.

"Larry was in and out of the game a lot tonight," said Green. "He was on the verge of becoming a

Cavs read pure poetry

■ Phills, Mills, Hill, Williams make Cleveland the hottest team in the NBA.

By Chuck Melvin
AP Sports Writer

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Phills. Mills. Hill. Williams.

There's a certain poetry to the Cleveland Cavaliers' roster these days, a roster dotted with unknowns, newcomers and role players who have helped turned Mike Fratello's patchwork lineup into the NBA's hottest team.

Cleveland has an NBA-best 11-1 record since the All-Star break and would match a franchise mark with 11 straight wins if it beats Sacramento on Tuesday night. A game at last-place Detroit follows on Friday.

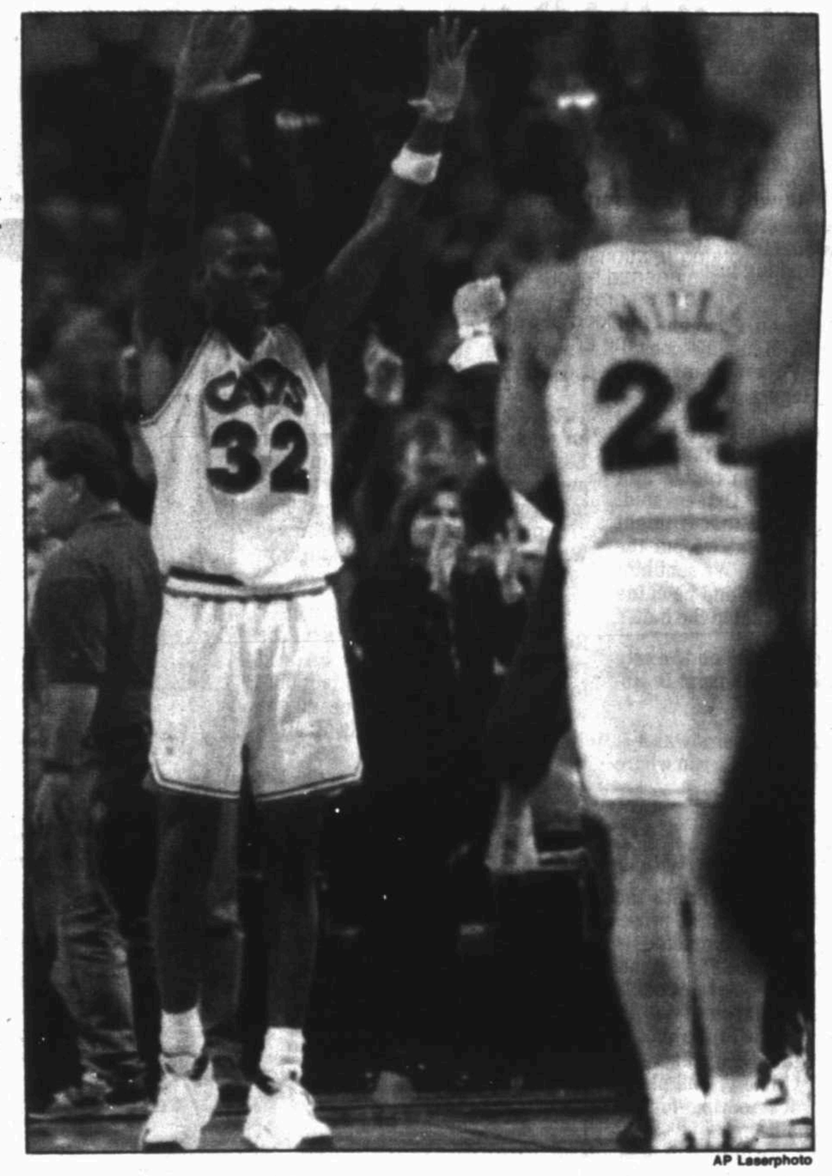

The turnaround has pulled the Cavs into a virtual tie with Orlando for the fourth spot in the Eastern Conference playoff seeding. The top four teams get home-court advantage in the first round.

Considered a championship contender after Michael Jordan quit the NBA last fall, the Cavaliers stumbled to a 7-14 mark by mid-December. Seven years under previous coach Lenny Wilkens had left them set in their ways, unsure they could adapt to the high-energy, trapping defense Fratello installed when he was hired away from NBC.

"We didn't have the trust in each other earlier in the season," said John Williams, whose play at center in place of injured Brad Daugherty has been critical to the recent surge. "It was a new system, with a lot of trapping. You didn't want to give up a layup to your own guy."

Injuries also took an early toll.

Sweep gives local kickers late boost

Saturday all four Midland soccer teams won their District 5-5A games — the first time that's happened this year. And all four wins had different meanings.

Midland High's boys wrapped up the District 5-5A title with their 2-0 win over Abilene High. Midland Lee's girls clinched a tie for a third-place playoff spot with a 4-2 win over Odessa Permain. Midland High's girls got their first-ever league win. Lee's boys won but fell out of playoff contention because San Angelo clinched at least third place by beating Abilene High.

■ 5-5A Soccer Roundup

Lee's teams are off today, but the Lee girls could clinch a playoff berth if Permian loses at first-place Abilene Cooper. The Lady Rebels can still tie for first with Cooper, San Angelo or both. Midland High's boys host San Angelo at 4:30 and the MHS girls play at San Angelo at 5:30.

Although Midland High has won the league title and San Angelo has clinched a playoff spot, Bulldog coach Tom Esikhati doesn't see today's game as a mere postseason tune-up. He and his players want to end the regular and district seasons without a loss.

"There's always a pride in winning all of them even though we've clinched first place," Esikhati said. "That is in the minds of the kids."

The Midland High coach doesn't expect San Angelo to approach the game lightly either.

"Every team comes after us because they would like us to lose at least one game," Esikhati said. "We're going to be prepared for that."

The Bulldogs may have two players back today, striker David Farias and midfielder J.D. Garcia. Both have had injuries.

MHS, Lee open 4-5A baseball run

■ League opener tosses early pressure on two sophomore hurlers.

By Bill Petitt

Midland Lee baseball coach Jesse Benavidez may wish that he had not taught some pitching secrets to Keith Lant after tonight's game with the Bulldogs.

Lant frequented Benavidez's baseball camps during his youth and tonight will test his knowledge against Benavidez and the Rebs in the District 4-5A opener for both squads at Angels Stadium. The game time has been changed to 6 p.m.

"When Keith was at my camps, I thought he would be going to Lee," said Benavidez, "but the school boundaries changed and he ended up at Midland High."

The sophomore has been effective for the Bulldogs early on, pitching a three-hitter against El Paso Jefferson and being named to the Tournament of Champions all-tournament team last weekend as the Bulldogs finished in third place.

"We've been erratic offensively and that concerns us," said Wood of his 3-4 Bulldogs, "but we are farther along than I thought we would be at this point. We still have a lot of work to do."

For Midland Lee, the key will be to avoid a letdown after winning the Tournament of Champions last weekend after defeating seventh-ranked Lubbock Monterey in two of three games to claim the championship.

Lee, now 7-3 with its only losses this season coming to Monterey, has their own sophomore pitcher that has impressed early out of the gate. Britt Harper was named the tournament's most valuable player after earning two saves and picking up a win in the championship game for the Rebels.

"We found out some things during the preseason and now we'll see how we do in district play," said Benavidez. "We found some people who come in and help us pitching. Mark Holly, a sophomore, has thrown well and Sean Low (a senior) came in and did a good job for us during the tournament.

"Offensively, Kevin Jordan, Chris Connally, David Galvan and Brian Henderson have been hitting the ball."

Jordan, Henderson, Connally, outfielder Alex Carrasco and third baseman Raymond Martinez joined MHS' Lant on the all-tournament team last weekend. Holly and Low are coming off Midland Lee's region quarterfinal qualifying basketball team.

The Rebels were batting .470 as a team a week ago after winning the El Paso Ysleta Tournament.

Lee has been able to fill the loss of senior third baseman and pitcher Alex Hale, who suffered a stress fracture in his foot at the Ysleta tourney. He is expected to be out for six weeks.

In other league games, Odessa Permian will face Odessa High, Abilene Cooper will meet Abilene High.

Arkansas strengthens grip on No. 1 poll slot

Associated Press

Arkansas, stretched to overtime last week by LSU, strengthened its grip on the No. 1 ranking Monday in the next-to-last poll of the college basketball season.

The Razorbacks (24-2) were the top-ranked team for the fourth straight week and the ninth time this season. The Southeastern Conference Western Division champions had 61 of 65 first-place votes and 1,619 points from the national media panel.

■ AP Top 25

Regardless of where they finish in the final poll, the Razorbacks will finish with the most No. 1 appearances of the season with nine. North Carolina is second with four weeks at No. 1, while Kentucky, Duke, Kansas and UCLA were each on top for one week.

Texas (22-7), which has won 15 of its last 16 games, entered the rankings for the first time since the final poll of the 1990-91 season. The Longhorns won the Southwest Conference title, losing league games only to Texas A&M and Texas Tech by a combined four points. Their non-league losses were all to teams ranked at some point in the season: Florida, Connecticut, Kentucky, LSU and Illinois.

Connecticut (26-3) and Missouri (24-2) each had one first-place vote in moving to second and third from fourth and sixth, respectively — their highest rankings of the season. Both teams had started the season unranked but went on to win the Big East and Big Eight conference titles, respectively. The ranking is the highest ever for the Huskies.

North Carolina (24-6), which had two first-place votes, moved from fifth to fourth after beating Duke for the second time this season. The Blue Devils (22-4), who had already clinched the Atlantic Coast Conference title, dropped from second to fifth. They were the highest-ranked of the 12 Top 25 teams to lose a game last week.

Purdue (25-4), which clinched at least a tie for the Big Ten title with the victory at Michigan Sunday, was sixth. The Boilermakers were followed by Arizona, Michigan, Massachusetts and Kentucky.

Kansas led the Second Ten, with Temple, Syracuse, Louisville, UCLA, California, Florida, Indiana, Marquette and Minnesota rounding out the top 20.

The remaining five ranked teams were Saint Louis, Alabama-Birmingham, Oklahoma State, Penn and Texas.

Texas replaced Boston College (20-9), which had been 23rd. The Eagles split two games last week, beating St. John's at home and losing to Providence on the road.

Connecticut and Missouri weren't the only teams to reach their highest ranking of the season this week. Purdue, Marquette and Penn also were at their highest positions at sixth, 19th and 24th, while No. 13 Syracuse matched its highest in early December.

Braves' pitchers avoid trivia woes

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — For now, Zane Smith, Scott Scudder, Jeff Ballard and Daryl Irvine won't be the answer to a trivia question.

Who was the first pitcher to give up a hit to Michael Jordan?

Jordan, the world's greatest basketball player turned nondescript Chicago White Sox rookie outfielder, was 0-for-4 Monday against the Pittsburgh Pirates and is 0-for-8 this spring.

It was just another meaningless exhibition game for the Pirates, but their pitchers were aware he wasn't just any hitter. This was Michael Jordan, and that made it a big deal.

"You can't help but realize who he is," said Scudder, who struck out Jordan looking on an inside fastball in the fourth inning. "But you still have to treat him like any other hitter."

Scudder, like many borderline players, hopes this isn't just a whimsical springtime vacation for Jordan, who might be taking valuable major-league exposure away from a prospect who would benefit from the experience.

"This is my livelihood," Scudder said. "I'm trying to win a spot on a major league roster."

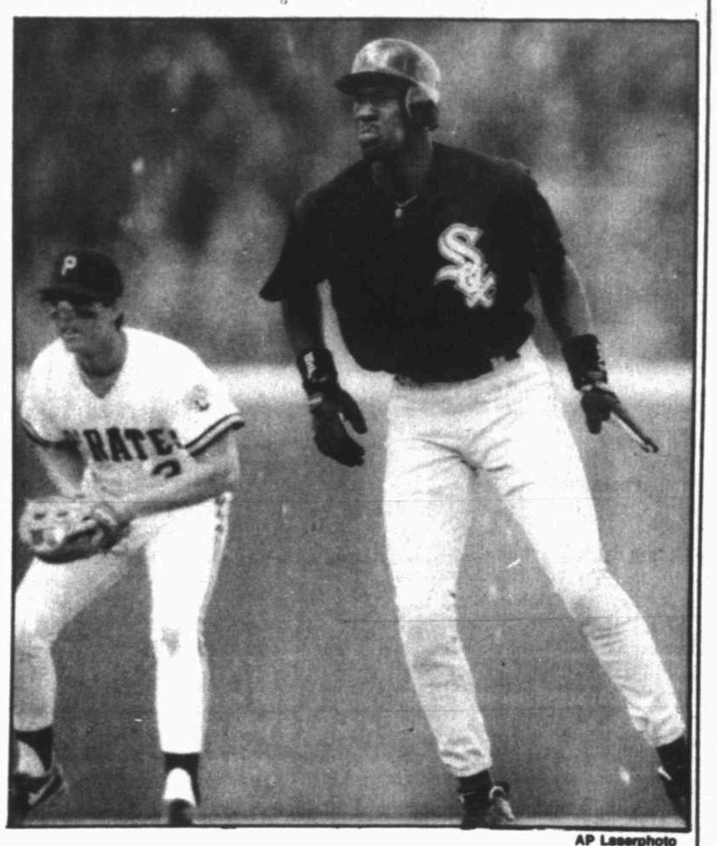

Smith's job status is more secure, but he still didn't want to be remembered as the pitcher who couldn't get Michael Jordan out.

"There might be a little stigma there if he got a hit," said Smith, who was pitching when Jordan reached on an error in the second inning. "But I've given up hits to a lot of people over the years, and he could have joined a long line."

"I admit it — I didn't want to be the first one he got," Irvine said. "I wanted to get him out of there."

Neither Smith nor Pirates manager Jim Leyland felt comfortable judging Jordan's baseball ability based on one exhibition game.

AP Laserphoto

Chicago's Michael Jordan is on first base, but he still doesn't have a spring training hit. He is now 0-for-8.

Texas' Penders expected crown

AUSTIN (AP) — Unlike a lot of people around Austin who were excitedly surprised by the Texas Longhorns' first outright Southwest Conference championship since 1974, coach Tom Penders expected it.

In fact, he was talking about it before last year's injury-riddled 11-17 season.

"Wait until next year," he said then, fully aware that Rich McIver, a transfer from Michigan, and Tremaine Wingfield, a transfer from Louisville, would be eligible this season.

He was right.

Star guard B.J. Tyler bounced back from a broken foot and a brief stay at the John Lucas Center in Houston, leading the Southwest Conference in scoring with a 23.3 points-per-game average.

Power forward Albert Burditt, who re-enrolled at Texas after withdrawing early last season due to academic shortcomings, leads the league in field goal percentage and is second in blocks.

Throw in strong support from Wingfield and McIver and junior college transfer point guard Rod Anderson and you have the reason Texas is back in the Top 25 for the first time since the final poll of the 1990-91 season.

"When Albert and B.J. went down last year, we were a Top 25 team and quickly became a less than average team," Penders said Monday. "Their performance and leadership has had a tremendous impact on the ball club. They help everyone else become better players."

Texas (22-7), which has won 15 of its last 16 games, won the Southwest Conference title, losing league games only to Texas A&M and Texas Tech by a combined four points. The Longhorns are ranked No. 25 in this week's poll.

Their non-league losses were all to teams ranked at some point in the season: Florida, Connecticut, Kentucky, LSU and Illinois.

"We have had a long and winding road to get to where we are," Penders said. "The way the schedule was set up, it's made it difficult for us to get into the Top 25, but I think we are playing at that level.

"And I would rather be in the poll now than in December."

Penders said his players have "used last year's disappointment to keep them focused for this season."

"A lot of people got down on us last year and thought the program was falling apart," Penders said. "But I knew who we had and that we would have a strong program."

Now the sixth-year coach has to keep his team focused as it takes a No. 1 seeding into the Southwest Conference tournament.

Texas will play Texas Christian (7-19 overall, 3-11 SWC) in the first round Thursday night. The Longhorns beat TCU 111-78 at Fort Worth on Saturday and defeated the Horned Frogs earlier this season in Austin.

"I never really like to play a team back-to-back," Penders said. "Motivationally, you have to really guard against being over confident. I would rather play someone we haven't played in a month.

"The first round of every tournament is a dangerous game. We have blown TCU out twice and we have to convince our kids we can get beat if we don't play well."

Rogers overcomes failure fear

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — After four years as a set-up man, Kenny Rogers stepped up to a starting role last season with starring results — after overcoming the fear of failure.

On a staff that included Nolan Ryan and Kevin Brown, Rogers emerged with the most victories (16) on the Texas Rangers.

"Last year was another step in learning how to pitch," Rogers said. "I was pleased with what I did last year and this year the goal is getting to another level."

The first step for pitching coach Claude Osteen last season was convincing Rogers that he could overcome his previous failures as a starter.

"The difficulty for him was that he'd failed all those other times and he was reminded of it so many times," Osteen said. "That's one of the things I had to downplay. We had to get past that."

And they did.

"Last year I did more pitching than throwing," Rogers said. "I worked the outside and inside of the plate instead of trying to throw it by everybody. That's being smart and being within yourself when you throw. When I got away from that, I'd pay for it a lot."

Rogers' 16-10 record was his best at any professional level. He made 33 starts after making just 12 prior to 1993.

Near mid-season, Osteen and manager Kevin Kennedy considered removing Rogers from the rotation. Even Rogers agreed.

"There was a point were Kenny became so ineffective that we'd have been justified in taking him out of the lineup," Osteen said. "He even suggested that it might be the best thing. But we put the decision back on him. We sent him home to think it over and he came back and said he wanted the ball."

Osteen gave it to him and he considers that the turning point in Rogers' season.

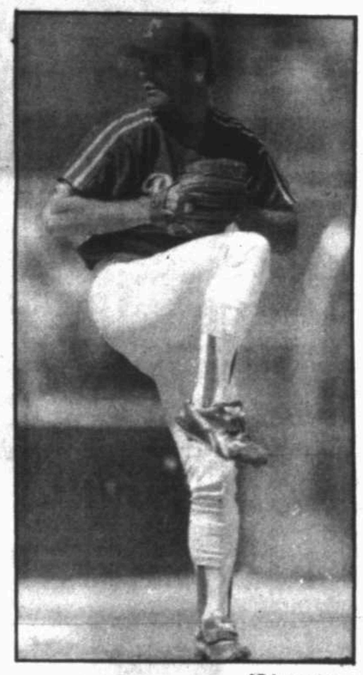

Before June 17, Rogers was 4-5. He had just completed a run where he was 0-3 in four starts, giving up 23 runs in 11 1-3 innings.

He was 12-5 over the rest of the season, winning six straight starts from Aug. 6-31.

"I can do better," Rogers said. "There were three, four starts in a row when I didn't do very well physically because I was tired. But in the second month I picked it up. I'd like to go the whole year the way I did the last part of last season."

Rogers became the second pitcher since 1947 to led the American League in appearances (81 in 1992) and become a full-time starter the following year. Wilbur Wood had 77 appearances for the Chicago White Sox in 1970 and 42 starts in 1971.

"I was glad to get the wins," Rogers said. "They kept us in the race for awhile. This year we need for all of our pitchers to be doing well. You don't want one guy to stand out too far. I want us all in the 18, 20 range."

Darwin 'pumped' against Rangers

Associated Press

■ Baseball Notebook

Red Sox

Danny Darwin missed the first few weeks of spring training last season because of a bad back and then allowed sux runs and right hits over three innings in his first start.

This year, he allowed a pair of runs in a three-inning stint Monday against Texas. He allowed only two hits and struck out four. One of those strikeouts came against Jose Canseco, who watched three straight strikes with two outs and two men on in the third.

"I was pumped. I can't tell you I wasn't," Darwin said after retiring Canseco on three straight fastballs — two on the inside corner and one on the outside corner.

Darwin said the biggest difference between this year and 1993 spring training is his back, which now feels fine.

"Last year, the first three weeks were kind of a nightmare," he said, "but I feel much better now."

Cleveland

Joel Skinner played his first exhibition game in two years Sunday when he played in a "B" game Sunday against Detroit. The 32-year-old catcher was 0-for-3 and threw out a runner. He said his surgically repaired shoulder was pain free. "It felt great," Skinner said. "I'm really pleased. This is a good start."

Skinner has not played in a major league game since Sept. 22, 1991. He has had three shoulder operations since then, the last on Sept. 2.

"This could be my last shot," Skinner said. "Mentally I've got to approach it that way."

Manager Mike Hargrove said he was very encouraged by Skinner's showing. "Joel threw well, and that's what I was looking for," Hargrove said. "I wanted to see if he turned it loose, and he did. His throws were strong and had a lot of carry."

Reds

Jose Rijo, who pitched two perfect innings in Cincinnati's exhibition victory Sunday over Pittsburgh, said he expects to win close to 20 games this year if he pitches like he did last season. Rijo qas 14-9 last year with a 2.48 ERA and led the National League in strikeouts with 227.

"I can't work any harder than I am right now," Rijo said. "I can't work any harder than I did last year. I'm maxing out."

Orioles

OK, so it was only the fourth game of spring training and the Baltimore Orioles probably could have survived another loss. But Ben McDonald wanted to put the breaks on the team's winless streak before it got out of hand.

McDonald allowed one hit and struck out five in three scoreless innings as the Orioles beat the defending National League champion Philadelphia Phillies 11-5.

"I was sitting back, watching us go 0-3, and I just wanted to come out and get us going," he said. "Hopefully, this will be the game to start us on a winning streak. We needed something to get our confidence going.

Cardinals

St. Louis reliever Paul Kilgus under went a magnetic resonance imaging test Monday on his sore left shoulder, which showed inflammation but no tears. His status was listed as day to day.

Pirates

Pittsburgh reliever Alejandro Pena didn't pitch as scheduled Monday after taking a line drive to the jaw during batting practice. He needed three stitches inside his mouth, but X-rays were negative and he is expected to resume normal work Tuesday.

Twins

Todd Ritchie, the Twins' top draft pick in 1990 who has yet to pitch in the majors, threw three scoreless innings in a 4-3 "B" game victory over the Boston Red Sox. Minnesota right-hander Greg Brummett is out with a sore elbow.

Angels

California first baseman Eduardo Perez was scratched from the starting lineup Monday because of a tight throwing elbow.

Harding tries to ward off banishment

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding went to court Monday to try to prevent the U.S. Figure Skating Association from proceeding this week with a disciplinary hearing that could result in her banishment from the sport.

Harding's lawyers sought a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction that would block the hearing set to begin Thursday in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"We've asked the judge to take a look at whether or not it's fair to her to be required to respond to the figure skating charges given the time we've been allowed and the circumstances," Harding's attorney Bob Weaver said.

U.S. District Judge Owen Panner scheduled a hearing on the request for 2 p.m. PST Tuesday.

Harding's lawyers contend she has not had time to prepare a proper defense and would prejudice her position in the criminal investigation into the Nancy Kerrigan attack if she participated in the hearing.

Unless the hearing is stopped, they say, "she will undoubtedly be found 'guilty' of violating some USFSA rule and deprived of her membership registration. That will effectively end her competitive figure skating career."

They want Panner to prevent the association from taking any action that would keep Harding from participating in the World Figure Skating Championships, which begin March 22 in Chiba, Japan. They also want the hearing put off until she has had adequate time to prepare her defense and until the investigation and potential prosecution of Harding is completed.

A five-member USFSA panel found Feb. 5 there was reasonable cause to believe Harding was involved with or knew of the plot to assault Kerrigan. Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, has pleaded guilty to racketeering for his part in the scheme.

Gillooly says Harding was in on the plot and gave the final go-ahead. Kerrigan was struck above the right knee with a metal police baton in Detroit Jan. 6 as she prepared for the U.S. championships. With Kerrigan knocked out of the competition, Harding won the title.

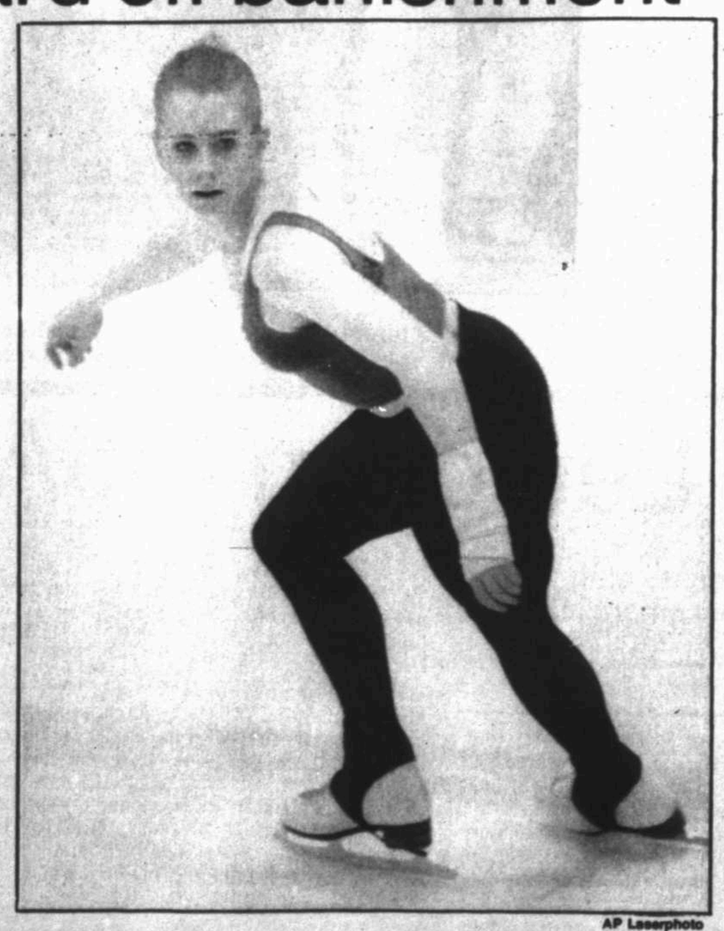

The USFSA indicated it planned to stand firm and not reach an out-of-court settlement, as the U.S. Olympic Committee did in Harding's earlier court action in which she assured her eligibility to compete in the Winter Games.

The USOC dropped the hearing and Harding dropped her $25 million lawsuit. Harding placed eighth and Kerrigan won a silver medal in the Olympics.

"The panel continues to believe that the hearing will be held on Thursday at 9 a.m.," the panel's chairman, Bill Hybl, said. "The panel is very carefully following the bylaws of the United States Figure Skating Association to provide due process and a fair hearing."

The lawsuit initially was filed in Multnomah County Circuit Court, but was quickly moved to federal court under a motion filed by the figure skating association citing that citizens of two different states, Colorado and Oregon, were involved.

In addition to the injunction and temporary restraining order, the lawsuit seeks unspecified compensatory damages.

CHAPS: MC earns another national bid

factor and then he would get a foul. That probably was the turning point because they then had to go to someone else."

Free throws by Owens and Tellas Lampley built MC's lead back to 68-65. Odessa's Troy Anderson hit a basket to trim the lead to 68-67 with 1:44 to play. Owens followed with a baseline jumper to go up 70-67.

Wrangler guard Martyn Norris ripped an NBA trey to tie the game at 70 with 46 seconds left to play. Midland called its final timeout and OC switched to a zone. Tellas Lampley rebounded an Owens miss and was fouled with 13.9 seconds to play. Lampley, who hit 1-of-3 free throws prior to this, hit one of two free throws to put Midland up 71-70.

Odessa came down with the ball and Desmond Greer tripped over the foot of Kevin Rice and fell down. He was called for traveling with 2.6 seconds to play. Rice sealed the win with two free throws.

"I can look at myself in the mirror and the players can look at themselves in the mirror and see a man, but some of the people on the floor can't," said Odessa coach Dennis Helms, questioning the final call by the officials.

Odessa got into early foul trouble with Larry Johnson and Dewayne Davis picking up two fouls apiece in the first four minutes. Johnson, who scored 31 points in Sunday's win over Temple to advance to the finals, was saddled with his third foul after Owens was picked off on a screen with 32 seconds left in the first half.

With the game tied at 20, following a Dewyane Davis basket with 7:51 in the half, MC went on a 15-6 run over the next 5:03 behind three, three-pointers from Luis Cambraia, Kevin Rice and Earl Tyson. The Chaps took a 35-28 lead into the lockerroom.

Celtics snap Heat's streak

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

MIAMI — Dee Brown scored six key points in the final two minutes to help the hot-shooting Boston Celtics snap the Miami Heat's team-record seven-game winning streak Monday night, 112-104

The Celtics won their second straight game following a franchise-record 13-game losing streak. They also ended an eight-game road skid.

Boston shot 64 percent in the first half and 61 percent for the game.

Brown scored 21 points. Teammate Sherman Douglas had 20 points and 11 assists.

Miami's Grant Long hit 10-of-12 shots and scored 24 points. Rony Seikaly had 22 points and 14 rebounds.

After the Heat hit three consecutive baskets to tie the game at 100-100 with 2:13 left, Brown and Seikaly traded baskets. Then Brown hit a 20-footer to put Boston ahead to stay, 104-102 with 1:29 left.

The Celtics swiped Brian Shaw's errant pass, and Douglas hit a running shot in the lane. After a Miami miss, Brown hit two free throws for a 108-102 lead with 49.6 seconds left.

Knicks 99, Pistons 85

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — John Starks scored all but two of his 21 points in the second half and sparked a 20-0 fourth-quarter run to help New York beat Detroit.

The win was New York's third in seven games. Detroit has lost seven straight.

Detroit led 45-37 at the half, and stretched that lead to 64-48 midway through the third quarter.

That's when New York started a parade to the free throw line, hitting seven foul shots during a 9-2 run.

That pulled the Knicks within nine at 66-57. Detroit stretched the lead back to 73-57 before John Starks cut the gap to 13 with a last-second 3-pointer.

Starks proceeded to score the first eight points of the fourth quarter, and the Knicks went on a 20-0 run to lead 77-73 with six minutes left.

Portland 137, Golden State 108

PORTLAND, Ore. — Portland's Clifford Robinson scored 25 points, 17 in the first half, to lead the Trail Blazers over Golden State.

Portland has won nine of its last 10 games.

Chris Mullin scored 20 points for the Warriors, who had won three straight.

Portland shot nearly 60 percent in the first half and took a 68-50 halftime lead.

Harvey Grant and Rod Stickland added 20 points apiece for Portland.

Lakers 106, Bucks 84

MILWAUKEE — Tony Smith scored a career-high 25 points and rookie Nick Van Exel added 16 to lead the Los Angeles Lakers over Milwaukee, snapping a two-game losing streak.

The Bucks, who fell to 17-41, were led by Todd Day with 18 points and rookie Vin Baker with 17.

Smith, who starred at Milwaukee's Wauwatosa East High School and Marquette University, had 19 points in the final period to lead the Lakers, who improved to 22-35.

The Lakers started the fourth quarter with an 18-point lead, and Smith's outburst kept the Bucks from getting back in the game.

Sedale Threatt, who had 20 points in the game, scored 10 in the third quarter for the Lakers.

Elden Campbell scored 12 points in the first half to help the Lakers to a 45-34 halftime lead. He sat out most of the second half, however.

Minutemen rip Duquesne

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Massachusetts overcame a shaky first half with a 27-2 run that gave the ninth-ranked Minutemen a 69-52 victory over Duquesne on Monday night in the semifinals of the Atlantic 10 tournament and the right to host the championship game.

The Minutemen (26-6) will meet the winner of the other semifinal between George Washington and No. 12 Temple at the Mullins Center on Thursday night. The two-time defending champions have not lost on their homecourt in the 18 games since it opened last February.

Things didn't look very good for Massachusetts in the first half as it trailed 31-30 after missing eight of 13 free throws, including the front end of three 1-and-1s. The Minutemen had trouble underneath with Derrick Alston, the conference's leading scorer, scoring 18 points in the first half for the Dukes (16-12), who were in the semifinals for the first time in nine years.

Duquesne, which beat West Virginia in the quarterfinals, led 35-32 2:21 into the second half when the wheels came off.

The Dukes went 10:42 between baskets because the only points in the big run came on a goaltending call. They missed all eight shots from the field and the same number from the free throw line and committed six turnovers as the Minutemen built a 59-37 lead with 7:14 left.

As Duquesne couldn't do anything offensively, the Minutemen picked up their game, making 10 of 12 shots during the spurt.

Michael Williams led the Minutemen, the regular-season champions who beat St. Joseph's in the quarterfinals, with 19 points, while Lou Roe and Marcus Camby added 14 each.

Alston had just two points in the second half and he picked up his second, third and fourth fouls during the decisive run and was 1-for-5 from the field.

Massachusetts beat West Virginia in the title game in 1992 and downed Temple last season.

No. 12 Temple 54, George Wash. 34

PHILADELPHIA — Aaron McKie outscored George Washington 17-10 by himself in the second half and No. 12 Temple overcame a horrible first half to beat the Colonials 54-34 in the semifinals of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

The Owls (22-6) will play at Massachusetts on Thursday night in a rematch of last year's conference championship. The ninth-ranked Minutemen, the league's two-time defending champions, earned the right to host the game with a 69-52 victory over Duquesne.

The victory was the 500th for Temple coach John Chaney. The 62-year-old Chaney was 225-59 in 10 years at Cheyney, where he won a Division II national championship, and is 275-103 in 12 seasons at Temple.

No. 24 Penn 89, Columbia 69

NEW YORK — Matt Maloney and Jerome Allen scored 21 points each to lead No. 24 Pennsylvania over Columbia as the Quakers completed their second straight undefeated Ivy League season.

Penn (24-2 and 14-0 in the league) is only the third team in the 93-year history of the league to win back-to-back championships with undefeated records and Penn accomplished the feat in 1970 and 1971.

Columbia had done it in 1904 and 1905.

Penn has now won 29 straight league games since losing to Columbia on March 6, 1992.

The Quakers jumped away to a 15-2 lead in the first seven minutes and expanded it to as much as 24, 39-15, before the Lions made a move behind the hot shooting of Jamal Adams, who scored a career high 31 points.

Adams scored 11 points in a 9:28 span bridging the halftime break as the Lions outscored the Quakers 27-14 to pull within 11, 48-37, with 16:43 remaining in the second half.

Maloney and Allen then stabilized the Quakers, who slowly pulled away in the game's final 10 minutes, building their lead back to 20, 76-56, with 6:37 left.

Allen also had six assists.

Bliss given extension

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico gave Dave Bliss a four-year contract extension on Monday, the same day he was named Western Athletic Conference Coach of the Year.

Athletic Director Rudy Davalos announced the contract extension, which will keep Bliss at New Mexico through the 1998-1999 season. Davalos said financial and other details of the contract will be worked out after the season.

New Mexico now has its football and men's basketball coaches under contract through 1999. In January, football coach Dennis Franchione signed a new six-year contract. Last season, Franchione led the football team to its first winning record in 11 years (6-5) and, like Bliss, was named WAC Coach of the Year.

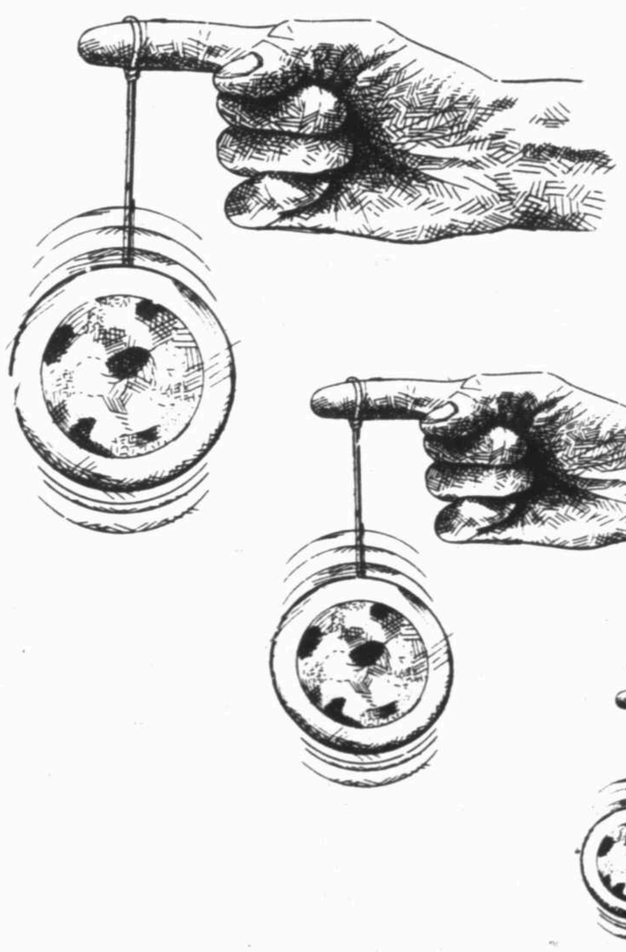

Bliss's contract extension comes four days after the Lobos won their first regular season WAC title in 16 years. New Mexico (22-6, 14-4) begins the WAC tournament Thursday as the top seed. The Lobos will play the winner of Wednesday's game between San Diego State and Wyoming.

"I think we're hitting a great period for New Mexico basketball and New Mexico athletics in general," said Bliss, who is 128-61 in six years with the Lobos. "In athletics these days, you never really know what the future holds. So, what you should be very concerned with is that you like what you're doing, who you're working with and where you're living. Because everything else is very temporary."

Just last year, Bliss interviewed for a coaching job at Lamar University in Beaumont, Texas.

Dean Powell, the owner of New Castle Gap Jewelry, has moved the store to its new location at 4703 North Midkiff, (between Burger King and Avis Lube).

The move has allowed Dean to expand his business and he has many new and interesting fields available.

New Castle Gap now has a extensive variety of rocks, gems and minerals in stock which will appeal to a wide and diverse range of people.

There is a lot here in Midland for those who are interested in geology, working with stone, archeology, jewelry and other related subjects and New Castle Gap caters for them all.

No matter what the level of expertise, or requirements are, New Castle Gap can fulfill your needs.

Amateur and professional stone workers and jewelers will find a range of rock saws, tumblers, polishers and hand-tools to suit all needs whether it be polishing semi-precious stones or cutting large cabinet pieces.

Archeologists will find petrified wood from Arizona, Oregon, Washington and Texas. It can be bought either in its natural state, or fashioned into beautiful bookends and other objects. Fossilized Dinosaur bones in a variety of sizes are also available, as are other fossils from far-flung places such as Brazil and Morocco.

Although Dean has expanded his operation, he is still continuing all of the services and articles for which his store is well known, such as the full line of American Indian jewelry in both traditional and contemporary styles from the Navaho, Zuni and Hopi tribes.

Many people, from interior designers to collectors will be interested in Dean's large mineral collection. Geodes of all sizes are available as well as all collectable sizes of minerals from thumbnails to cabinets, (mineral specimens which range in size from one inch to one foot in size).

To compliment the selection, there are a number of periodicals and books on all stone related subjects, suitable for those with just a casual interest as well as professional collectors and geologists.

Geology students and children will be pleased to find classification guides and samples as well as fun items such as crystal growing kits for all ages.

Dean is offering a number of classes in a diverse range of subjects such as:

- jewelry making,
- silver-smithing,
- bead stringing,
- making gem trees,
- wax casting and lost-wax casting,
- Venetian bead making.

For more information about his classes and details on his wares, call Dean Powell at 697-8809 or stop by 4703 North Midkiff. (Between Burger King and Avis Lube, opposite Albertsons).

Book-ends fashioned from fossilized wood and strings of exotic beads are just a few of the many interesting items to be found at the New Castle Gap's new location at 4703 North Midkiff in Midland. For more information call Dean Powell at 697-

Mutual of Omaha suggests protection of income with prudent disability policy

You may think that you have adequate insurance coverage: life insurance, major medical, insurance on your home or car.... but have you thought about what could happen if you became temporarily or permanently disabled?

The staff at Mutual of Omaha, in Midland, can help you think through that possibility, and help you decide on an adequate and economically viable plan for you and your family.

Though most individuals carry life insurance, only one out of every four Americans has any kind of disability insurance. But, statistics show that the risk of disability is much greater for almost every adult age group than is the risk of death.

Everything that you work for depends on you-- and your regular monthly income. When you are sick or injured and unable to work, your monthly income can drop dramatically. However, you still need to pay your monthly bills for your car, food, rent, utilities and credit cards-in addition to your recent medical expenses.

There aren't many options for obtaining more money when you are sick or injured and cannot work. You could use your savings; but if you deplete your savings account, your dreams for a new car, home or vacation are gone. You might take out a loan, but borrowing money to pay your monthly bills can be difficult, especially when you are disabled. There is no way of repaying the loan in a timely manner, and it often leads to a cycle of debt.

Another way to cover living expenses when you become disabled is to sell your possessions. This is neither a pleasant nor highly profitable option. Selling your possessions is often the last resort before serious financial problems occur. You might collect Social Security if yo8u pass the strict guidelines for qualification; however, it often takes up to 12 months to receive your first benefit payment.

A much better option is to plan ahead and protect yourself and your family with an income replacement policy from Mutual of Omaha. One of the company's newest disability products will pay up $15,000 per month in tax-free benefits (in addition to any workman's compensation you might already be receiving).

You may select a policy with one, two or five year disability benefits, or up to the age of 65. Optional benefits include a provision for guaranteed insurability, additional in-hospital loss of earnings benefit, cost-of living adjustment and accident expenses.

For more information on income replacement, call Mutual of Omaha in Midland, located at 3525 Andrews Highway, suite 104, at 699-3081 or 1-800 657-8893. Stick with the firm that sells more health insurance than any other company in the world- Mutual of Omaha.

Prices sink

NEW YORK — Oil prices sank Monday after a group of Persian Gulf oil producers met without giving any signals of possible cuts at an OPEC meeting scheduled for later this month.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $14.10 per barrel, down 47 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 50 cents to $12.50 a barrel.

A weekend meeting of the Gulf Cooperation Council disappointed some who were looking to the meeting for clues that OPEC will seek production cuts. The council includes OPEC members Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar, as well as non-OPEC members Bahrain and Oman.

The drop in crude prices spilled over to trading for refined products.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in April settling at $2.167 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.1 cents. Later delivery months were higher.

No mutual funds

Due to a computer error, no mutual funds or over-the-counter stock prices are listed in today's edition.

Dollar steady

NEW YORK — The dollar barely budged Monday from its closing levels against major currencies last week as traders stayed on the sidelines in the absence of any news to influence trading.

Gold prices fell after finishing higher in Europe. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $375.90 a troy ounce, off $1.70 from Friday.

Other dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday: 1.7185 German marks, unchanged; 1.4405 Swiss francs, down from 1.4415; 5.8380 French francs, down from 5.8430; 1,689 Italian lire, up from 1,687; and 1.3572 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3570.

In New York, the pound ended at $1.4905, more expensive than $1.4900 on Friday.

On the New York Comex, silver for current delivery closed at $5.176 a troy ounce, off 6.3 cents from Friday.

Market advances

NEW YORK — Stocks ended broadly higher on Monday, aided by lower market interest rates and news that defense giant Martin Marietta will buy rival Grumman.

Martin Marietta to buy Grumman

■ Latest defense-industry takeover reflects military's vastly reduced spending.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Martin Marietta Corp. agreed to buy Grumman Corp. for $1.9 billion Monday, the latest defense-industry takeover to reflect the military's vastly reduced spending.

The deal would wrap up a Martin Marietta shopping spree that doubled the company's size in the past year. It also would end Grumman's independence after a slide from pre-eminence as the chief maker of Navy warplanes, including the F-14 fighter jet that Tom Cruise flew in the movie "Top Gun."

With less federal money being spent on jet fighters, tanks and helicopters, the companies that make weapons and the sophisticated electronics behind the guns have been either buying competitors or retrenching.

The buyout news sent Grumman's stock soaring Monday and lent confidence to the rest of the stock market.

With its purchase of General Electric's aerospace business last year and General Dynamics' space division, Martin Marietta had already shown itself as the most aggressive of the defense contractors trying to grow while the rest of the business contracts.

"We looked at every company in the industry," said Norman R. Augustine, Martin Marietta chairman and chief executive. "It was very important to be among the first to select. ... We wanted first-round draft choices."

Despite the flurry of recent mergers and spin-offs — Lockheed bought General Dynamics' F-16 fighter business while Hughes bought its missile subsidiary — the consolidation of the business is just getting started, industry observers say.

"The industry is ripe for consolidation in a number of segments as Martin Marietta is proving," said Jerrold Lundquist, a partner at management consultants McKinsey & Co.

Martin Marietta was in a hurry to nail down a deal with Grumman.

The deal was put together with bank loans rather than a stock offering to speed it along after Augustine and Grumman chairman Renso Caporali agreed a month ago to pursue the buyout, the two men said.

Further Pentagon spending cuts could lead to job losses, but the companies haven't decided whether the takeover will result in layoffs.

The two executives acknowledged there is some overlap between their companies but said the buyout was not done as a way to cut jobs.

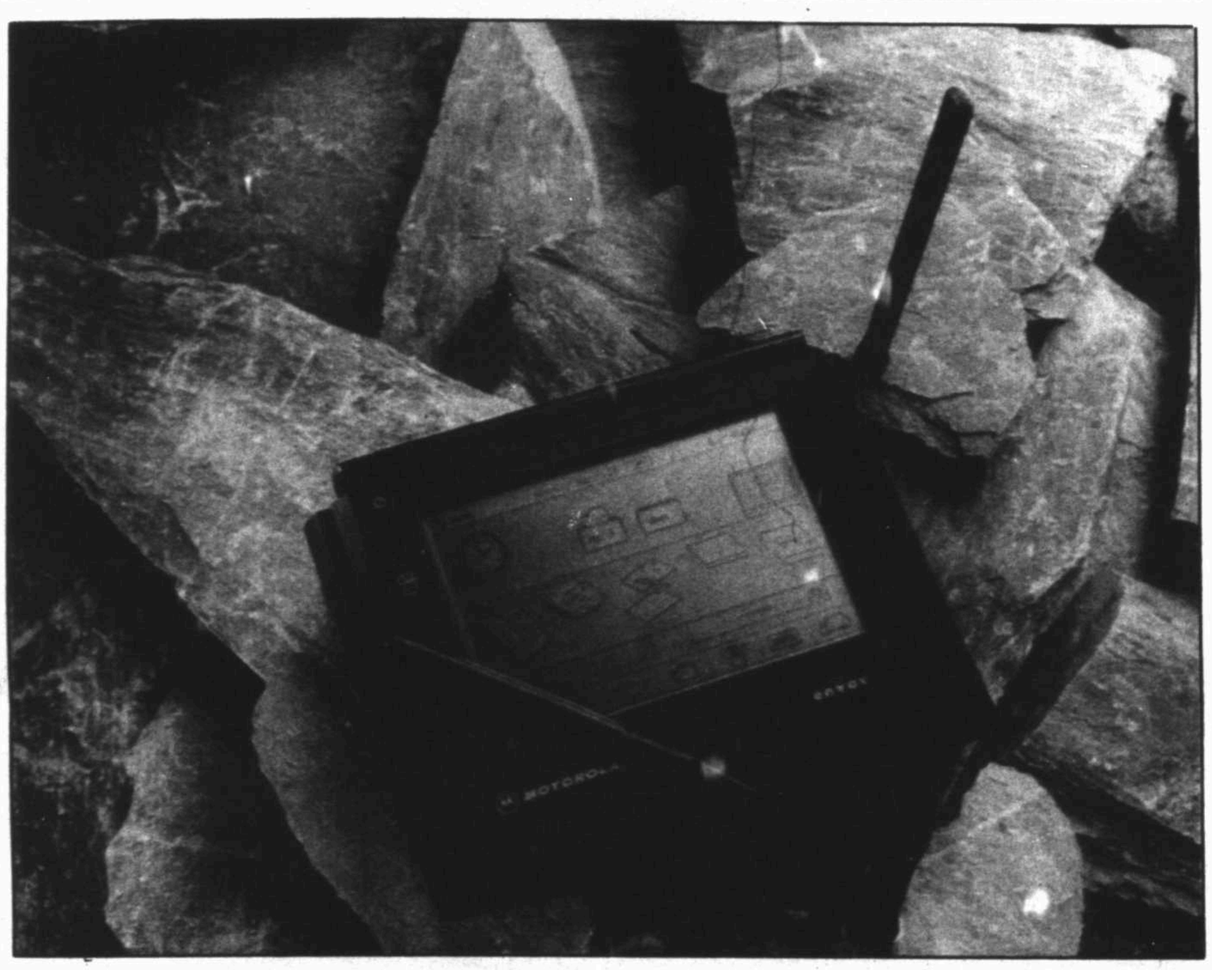

"It isn't like we're both working on the same things," said Caporali, who will remain chief executive of Grumman as a Martin Marietta subsidiary and join the parent company's board.

"I don't see anything there to throw away. But we've only been working on this for a month. When we get into the nitty gritty we might find some duplication."

Grumman, headquartered in Bethpage, N.Y., has already started a restructuring that would close a third of its factory and warehouse floor space and reduce its work force by 500 jobs, or 3 percent. Martin Marietta plans by year's end to cut 3,500 jobs — 2,000 resulting from the purchase of GE Aerospace.

The Grumman buyout is subject to Justice Department approval, but the companies said they don't foresee any antitrust problems.

Martin Marietta's expansions have not always brought good fortune to the company. Three Martin Marietta satellites built by GE have gone awry, including the $1 billion Mars Observer.

Halliburton inks for new project offshore China

Staff Report

HOUSTON — Halliburton Energy Services Monday signed a letter of intent with Phillips Petroleum International Corp. Asia for primary contracting on the Xijiang Field Development Project in offshore China.

The project is jointly owned by Phillips, China Offshore Oil Nanhai East Corp — a subsidiary of the China National Offshore Oil Corp. -- and Pecten Orient.

Halliburton will provide a broad package of integrated products and services, and the associated project management for these services, on the twoiplatform, 32 well project. The project will constitute the first major integrated service package to be implemented in China. The value of the contract is said to be in excess of $70 million.

A cross-functioning management team will oversee the project utilizing Halliburton's global resources. An extensive Chinese content will be provided by Petrotech Service Co. along with other subsidiaries of CNOOC.

The Xijiang Development Project includes a three-year drill program, expected to begin by the middle of the year, and an ongoing production maintenance program. The field poses major technical challenges due to the multiple oil-bearing mobile sand beds that require advanced sand control and production techniques.

USAir takes loss, problems with British partner to unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing losses are putting USAir on the spot with its British partner and forcing the airline to seek help from its labor unions.

USAir Chairman Seth E. Schofield confirmed Monday that meetings have been scheduled between company officials and union leaders.

The announcement came as Schofield reported that bad weather and growing competition have saddled his airline with an expected $200 million pre-tax loss for the first quarter of this year.

And, Schofield said, British Airways has decided that it will not invest any more money in USAir until it cuts costs.

At the current rate, Schofield said, USAir's losses for this year will top last year's $350 million.

"While storms in January and February forced us to cancel about 8 percent of our scheduled operations, the principal cause of our unacceptable loss is the requirement to sharply lower fares in response to the steady expansion of low-cost carriers into many of our East Coast markets," Schofield said.

British Airways paid $400 million for a 24 percent stake in USAir and has said it wants to increase its stake to 44 percent by investing an additional $450 million over the next five years.

But British Airways officials have grown increasingly concerned over losses at USAir at a time when other big U.S. airlines appeared to be returning to financial health.

McDonald's considers home-style restaurants

CHICAGO (AP) — McDonald's is considering offering its customers a different kind of break today: sit-down restaurants that serve home-style dishes such as roasted chicken, meat loaf and mashed potatoes.

The new chain would be called Hearth Express and would cater to families looking to pay about $5 per person for dinner, according to Crain's Chicago Business, which attributed the information to unidentified sources.

It signals a shift in strategy at the fast-food company, which has been trying unsuccessfully for years to develop a dinner menu that could pump up evening sales at its McDonald's outlets.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stocks of overseas firms tend to be volatile

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I have a large certificate of deposit due to mature soon. With CD interest as low as it is these days, we are thinking of dividing that money into five parts and investing it in five mutual funds. One is a capital appreciation fund; the others are international funds, investing mostly in Asian companies.

Doyle

This would constitute about 20 percent of our investments. The remainder is in CDs.

We do not expect to touch the money invested in mutual funds unless there is an extreme emergency.

We are 75 years old. Do you consider it wise to move 20 percent of our investments from CDs to mutual funds? If so, what do you think of the funds I selected? Or, should I go back and do more research on mutual funds?

A: It's clear you already did some research. All five funds named in your letter had great investment performance last year. That's understandable, because mutual funds focusing on emerging markets had a good year.

Lipper Analytical Services cites Pacific Basin funds as last year's top regional category — up 63.81 percent.

But, as must be constantly stressed, past performance does not assure future results. Those five funds are rather far out on the risk scale. Their share values just might go into sharp declines, as has happened in the past.

At your stage of life, it is generally wise to move out of risky situations and into CDs and other safe investments. Nonetheless, if you wouldn't be seriously hurt by declines in value of those five funds, you can't be faulted for attempting to improve the overall returns on your investments — providing you are aware of the risk involved.

My suggestion is to do some more research and consider mutual funds investing in U.S. corporations — which are generally less volatile than foreign securities.

You can get reasonable returns, without high risk, from a variety of U.S. mutual funds, including income funds, growth and income funds and balanced funds.

Q: A CD I have in my individual retirement account will mature soon. I have to decide whether to renew it or find a higher-rate IRA CD elsewhere. Upon investigation locally and in other parts of the country, it seems my bank's interest rates fit the national average.

I did find one bank in another state, listed as tops in safety rating, offering IRA CDs one whole percentage point higher. After I have satisfied myself that it has all the features I now enjoy at my present bank, would there be any risk involved dealing with a bank so far away?

A: There shouldn't be. Your IRA would have $100,000 Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage at the out-of-state bank, making it just as rock-solid safe as your present IRA.

If that bank fails, you might have a short wait for your money. But that could happen with your local bank as well. And you indicate you have investigated the faraway bank's safety rating — meaning capital strength, earnings and asset quality.

By all means, compare the features offered with that bank's CDs. Such features can vary widely from one bank to another.

Q: To avoid having to pay a $12 and up monthly service charge on my checking account, I maintain a $600 minimum balance. Is this a wise use of my $600?

A: Call it a bargain.

By maintaining the $600 in the account, you are avoiding the $72 annual service charge.

You could not invest the $600 elsewhere and hope to come out ahead without assuming considerable risk.

TIPS FROM THE POLICE

Sexual Assault

A rape is reported about once every five minutes in the United States. But many rapes go unreported. The motivation for this crime is not sexual gratification; it is power and anger. A rapist's goals are to control, dominate, humiliate and degrade. Awareness and knowledge of this violent crime are the keys to lessening your chances of becoming a victim.

STATISTICS

- 87% of rapists carry a weapon or threaten the victim with violence or death.
- 50% to 75% of victims know their attacker.
- A third to a half of all rapes occur in the victim's or offender's home.
- Rapists attack members of their own race in 90% of cases.
- A majority of victims are between 18 and 35.
- It is estimated that only one out of every five or six rapes is reported to police.

DEFINITION OF RAPE

Under California law, rape is defined as sexual intercourse against the will of the victim and can occur under several circumstances, including the following:

- The assailant uses physical force or the threat of force to overpower and control the victim.
- The victim is unable to give consent because of intoxication, a mental disorder or a developmental or physical disability.

REDUCING YOUR RISK

At home

- Lock all doors and windows, especially at night.
- List only last name and initials on your mailbox and in the phone directory.
- Replace locks when you change residences.
- Do not hide a duplicate key outside.
- Install a wide-angle viewer in your door.
- Do not let children answer the door.
- Verify the identification of any repair or utility service person. (All utilities have a phone number to verify the identity and schedules of their personnel.)
- If you live alone, do not advertise it.
- Do not allow people to use your phone for emergency calls; ask them to wait outside while you make the call.
- Never give wrong-number callers any information.
- Leave some lights on at night.
- Use good exterior lighting and motion-detector lights around your house.
- If you live in an apartment building, avoid empty laundry rooms.
- Avoid entering an elevator occupied only by a stranger.

Walking

- Avoid walking alone; stay on well-lighted streets.
- Carry a flashlight and a shriek alarm.
- Be aware of your surroundings. If you think you are being followed, cross the street and head for bright lights and people.
- If a vehicle approaches you and you feel you are threatened, turn and run. Do not be afraid to scream.
- Do a quick survey of parking lots before entering.

IF YOU ARE ATTACKED

No one can tell you whether passive or active resistance is the best course of action. Think in advance about what you might do in a threatening situation, so that you will be better able to quickly and wisely choose your options. Here are some:

- Assess the situation as it is happening. If the first strategy does not work, try another.
- If you choose to resist, a scream can surprise or frighten an attacker away if he fears that people will come to help.
- A forceful struggle may also discourage the rapist and give you an opportunity to escape. But all blows or kicks must be forceful and aimed at vulnerable areas.
- Martial arts can be effective, but proficiency takes practice and still may not be effective against some attackers.
- Guns, knives or chemical sprays may ward off attackers, but unless you are well-trained and not afraid to use these weapons, the attacker may be able to turn them against you. It is illegal to carry a concealed firearm and some types of knives. To legally carry chemical sprays, you must complete a training course by a certified agency and have a license.

- Passive resistance may help to defuse the violence of the attacker. Try to calm him and persuade him not to carry out the attack.
- Claim to be pregnant or sick. Telling an attacker you have AIDS or a sexually transmitted disease may deter him.
- Other means of discouragement include pretending to faint, crying hysterically or acting insane or mentally incapacitated.

GETTING HELP

- Many victims of sexual assault don't know where to turn for help or may be afraid or ashamed to talk to anyone. If you have been assaulted, it is important to get help quickly.
- Call the police; they can take you to a hospital and get information that will help them arrest the rapist.
- Avoid the impulse to "wash away" the ugliness of the crime. Do not change your clothes, shower, wash or douche until after you have called police and been taken to a hospital. Skin, blood, saliva, hair, seminal fluid and other samples can be collected and used to help identify and convict the rapist.
- If for some reason you do not want to call police right away, get help from a friend, a hospital emergency room, or call a rape center or other crisis center.

DEAR ABBY

Secondhand smoke leads to second-rate marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: At the top of my Christmas wish list last year was my desire to give my husband the nicotine patch. He refused me flat-out!

When we were first married more than 40 years ago, I didn't mind his smoking, but now that we are in our 70s, I have respiratory problems as well as eye problems, and the smoke is very irritating. He refuses to believe that secondhand smoke is injurious to others. Our grandchildren don't want to be near him; his sister and her husband refuse to stay here overnight or go on trips with us.

I enjoy taking walks in the crisp Maine air, only to be assaulted with a wall of smoke when I come home. I'm really a home person, but lately I try to be out of the house as much as possible.

We rarely watch television together, as I leave the room when he lights up. I miss the closeness we once had.

Not only did he refuse the nicotine patch, he didn't get me a Christmas gift again this year — not even a card. But somehow he always finds the extra money for cigarettes.

We both read Dear Abby faithfully, and I thought if you published this, he might recognize himself and it might also help to open the eyes of other smokers. — SMOKED OUT IN MAINE

DEAR SMOKED OUT: Here's your letter; I hope it helps. When will people realize that smoking is addictive? I have been playing on that one string ever since I started writing this column in 1956, and I have literally begged youngsters not to start smoking — it's too hard to quit. And secondhand smoke is not only irritating, it's damaging to others.

DEAR ABBY: Recently in your column, there was a letter from a woman about not donating clothing items to charity if they are stained, torn or out of style.

She meant well; however, I hope that people don't just throw away the used clothing. I recycle clothing by buying thrift shop clothes and using the buttons, ribbons, lace and other good parts for art projects or for decorating other clothes. An applique can easily hide a stain or tear, and long pants with holes in the knees can be made into shorts. Fabric alone can be used in a variety of ways, and our landfills don't need any unnecessary trash.

I'll bet your readers would agree and, perhaps, come up with many other ideas about recycling used clothes. Many of those "stains" come out when properly washed, you know. — JANET IN BOYNTON BEACH, FLA.

DEAR JANET: Your point is well-taken. One person's trash can be another person's treasure.

DEAR ABBY: Being an extensive traveler, I have my own amusing story about customs officials. Returning to the U.S.A., I noticed that each fourth tourist was being searched. I was relieved as I was not to be — but lo, the lady in front of me said, "I have been flying for 18 hours straight. If you open this suitcase, one of us is going to be terribly embarrassed!" He motioned her past, and I dumped everything from all my bags for inspection.

Upon leaving the area, I spotted her at a restaurant table and quipped, "For once, how fortunate to be female!" With that, she opened the case, where two complete 24-piece settings of sterling flatware lay. She said, 'Like I said, if he had opened that suitcase, one of us would have been terribly embarrassed." Sign me ... DOVER, DEL.

AT WIT'S END

Passions about food can turn into rhubarb

By Erma Bombeck

There is no one in this world more pushy than a hostess trying to shove her favorite food down your throat. You'd think she gets advantage miles for every brussels sprout she can get you to swallow.

Every time the word "rhubarb" comes into the conversation, there is a war between the "I love it" disciples and the "No, thank you" rebels.

I hate rhubarb. I have seen too many dogs go directly to it in a garden, lift a leg and wet on it. My sentiments exactly.

But the "I love its" are tenacious. They tell you that you've never had it cooked properly. They give you their recipe for rhubarb-/strawberry pie.

Rhubarb lovers have the same mentality as fruitcake disciples. They're a small group, and the numbers seem to shrink every year. There seems to be a parallel between them and people who smoke. It's only a matter of time before people who eat fruitcake will be asked to do so outside a building or in a designated area at the airport. Don't even think of nibbling on it in an elevator.

When a person doesn't share the love of the same food you do, it's a personal thing. I remember when George Bush declared his loathing for broccoli. It made national headlines, nutritionists hyperventilated, the stock market bottomed out. It probably cost him the election.

My grandmother hated fish. She said it smelled up her kitchen. When my grandfather occasionally cooked it for himself, she got into the car and went to visit one of her daughters. Fish drove a wedge in their marriage.

I hate to admit it, but when it comes to spinach, I'm an "I love it." My husband made it clear from day one he doesn't like spinach, never has, never will.

I have force-fed him spinach salad, steamed spinach, spinach quiche, spinach lasagna, spinach with hard-boiled eggs and vinegar, creamed spinach and spinach dip. He still hates it. I have to ask myself, Why is he punishing me?

Spinach is not the same as rhubarb. Rhubarb is weird. I read in a magazine where cooked rhubarb juice, which contains acid, is used to dissolve the stains from antique linens. Am I impressed?

The same article said wet chicken feathers are used to oust grease stains. I'm not putting them in my mouth either.

Accident destroys man's memory of his heroics

By Claudia Coates
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — John Stubner doesn't recall trying to save a teen-age boy stranded on a raft in a churning river. The brain damage he suffered from his act of heroism stripped him of that memory and others.

He doesn't recollect how the rushing water tossed his jet ski into the air or plunged him under again and again until he lost consciousness.

Even being notified Thursday that he was one of 20 people honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission is already a dim memory for Stubner.

"Remember, they called today?" said his girlfriend, Mary Rehbock.

The Pittsburgh-based commission, which industrialist Andrew Carnegie founded in 1904, recognizes people who risked or lost their lives trying to save others. It has honored 7,807 people from the United States and Canada. Carnegie heroes receive $2,500 and a bronze medal.

Stubner, of Warrendale, Ill., and Ms. Rehbock were riding ski jets on June 9, 1993, on the Fox River in North Aurora, Ill., when they saw the trapped teen-ager.

Michael Deutsch, 16, had ridden a raft over a dam and was caught in the choppy waters under the dam.

"I said to the boy, 'Do you need help?' He said, 'Help me,'" Ms. Rehbock said.

Stubner, 25, got close to Michael, but was knocked off his jet ski. Even though he wore a life jacket, he struggled under the water's force as he tried to remount.

"He would go under. He would come back up," Ms. Rehbock said. "I'm 25 feet away, just screaming. I couldn't do anything."

Michael's body was pulled from the river five weeks after the accident.

When Stubner resurfaced closer to shore, Ms. Rehbock was able to ride to him.

"I turned him over. He was blue. It was awful," she said. She thought he was dead.

Stubner had gone into a coma, and Ms. Rehbock said doctors didn't think he would survive.

But he began responding to music about 15 days later. He was hospitalized for three months.

Brain damage wiped out most of his knowledge of the past two years and continues to affect his short-term memory. Against the odds, he has made a partial recovery, relearning how to eat, walk and sit.

His prize money will go toward his $100-per-hour speech and occupational therapy.

Stubner's memory of himself before the accident is of the kind of man who was capable of risking his life for someone else's.

"Yeah, I think I was, but I shouldn't have been," he said.

Carlsbad native serves as agent to young Russian skater

By Ray Rivera
Associated Press Writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. — One-tenth of a point. Nobody knows the value of that fraction better than Carlsbad native Michael Rosenberg.

On the evening of Feb. 25, in the small Olympic amphitheater in Hamar, Norway, Rosenberg witnessed the graceful, delicate 16-year-old Ukrainian, Oksana Baiul, edge out American Nancy Kerrigan by one-tenth of a point on the judges' scorecards.

For Baiul, the tiny margin translated into a gold medal. For Rosenberg, the margin could translate into millions of dollars of annual revenue. Rosenberg is one of the world's foremost ice skating agents. He's the one who converts the gold into cash, big cash, for him and his clients.

And Baiul? Baiul is his baby — his natural.

"When she won, everything went wild," the 1961 Carlsbad High graduate said by telephone from his home in Palm Desert, Calif., just hours after stepping off the plane from Norway last week. "I was elated beyond any victory of any client I've ever had, going back to Dorothy Hamill."

"I got home hoping for a rest, maybe a game of golf, but it was incredible, I had maybe one hundred calls and faxes; movie producers for the story of her life, Nike, Coca-Cola. I expected to have to solicit attention, make phone calls and remind people who she was."

"I was surprise that being a non-American the interest in Oksana would be so high," he said. "It shows that her appeal is worldwide. And it couldn't have happened to a nicer girl. Oksana is as sweet as can be. Winning the gold she was elated but totally modest."

Rosenberg's association with the teen-age phenomenon began through the efforts of another of his clients, former gold medalist Victor Petrenko.

"About a year after Viktor had won his gold in Albertville, he told me about Oksana. He said she had been living on a cot in an ice rink and that his coach had taken her in. He said she was going to be great, and asked if I would represent her.

"Of course I said yes. Viktor is such a sweet man I would do anything for him. But I wondered what in the world I was going to do with a 15-year-old orphan.

"Then when we were introduced she was like no one I had ever met," Rosenberg said. "I knew what it must have been like to meet a young Judy Garland, to meet someone who you know is going to be a star forever. Then she got lost in the whole Tonya-Nancy shuffle, but I knew she had a real shot."

Rosenberg, a University of New Mexico graduate, began his agency in the late 1970s, along with his wife Nancy. The first big name in their fold was skater Dorothy Hamill.

The couple has since gone from representing a diverse range of entertainers and athletes to concentrating on ice skaters and promoting their annual World Cup Skating Champions Tour. This year's tour will feature Baiul and Petrenko, who will arrive in the United States about April 1.

Rosenberg said he'll move slowly in the day-to-day task of promoting his newest star.

"I think I'll proceed very carefully, maybe go three long-term endorsements," he said. "I don't want to inhibit her. She has all the tools to become the greatest skater of our time. Her potential is unlimited."

No additional sales will be approved until the purchaser has demonstrated his/her ability to maintain all previous loan accounts over a period of 6 months or more commencing with the due date of the first payment of the last loan account. The intent is not to limit the cumulative/aggregate number of properties which can be sold to speculators, but rather to ensure that the purchasers' financial position is such that he/she can satisfactorily support the additional obligations. However, additional VA-vendee financed sales to an investor-purchased who already own five properties purchased from VA within the preceding 6 months will be considered if the investor - purchaser is willing to make a 20 percent cash down payment on each such additional property.
