Carter moves to end strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter invoked the Taft-Hartley Act today, seeking to compel striking coal miners to return to work after a three-month strike because "the country cannot afford to wait any longer."

He suggested that the miners be paid at higher rates while they work under court order during the 80-day back-to-work period he seeks.

Carter said he expects the miners to abide by federal law, which provides for the 80-day cooling off period under federal court injunction.

The United Mine Workers voted down a negotiated contract by an overwhelming margin, and Carter said that means collective bargaining is at an impasse.

"My responsibility is to protect the health and safety of the American public, and I intend to do so," Carter said as he invoked the Taft-Hartley Act for the first time since Richard M. Nixon used it in a 1971 dock strike.

UMW President Arnold Miller said in advance that he would comply with Taft-Hartley even though he doesn't like it. He said if a back-to-work injunction he issued, he will observe it.

But Miller's control of his union rank-and-file is very much in doubt. He had called for approval of the contract the miners rejected.

Carter called on the miners, the mine operators, and all Americans "to join in a common effort under the law to protect our country, preserve the health and safety of the people and to resolve fairly the differences that have already caused so much suffering in our land."

The president said the law will be enforced. He asked the governors of the coalfield states to help "make sure the law is obeyed, violence is prevented, and lives and property fully protected."

While a Taft-Hartley injunction normally would order strikers back to work under the terms of their expired contract, Carter said he will seek to have the miners get the first-year pay raise provided by the contract they spurned. That would give them a $1 an hour raise, from wages which now average $7.80.

But it apparently would be up to the coal companies to decide whether to grant the raise.

Carter said he was opposed to any more liberal wage settlements than the miners already have been offered. The rejected contract provided for raises of 37 percent over a three-year period. Many miners said they opposed provisions of that contract on health benefits, pensions and local strikes during the contract period.

As he announced his move to compel an end to the strike in a nationally broadcast and televised appearance in the White House press room, Carter recited the statistics of economic and energy trouble stemming from the walkout.

He said coal supplies are critically short in the Midwest, tens of thousands of people are out of work because of power cutbacks, and the situation is worsening rapidly. In a month, the president said, at least one million more Americans will be laid off if the strike continues.

Carter said he is asking the Department of Energy to minimize the impact of the coal shortage by moving energy resources to the areas in which they are most needed.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, the president names a fact-finding panel to report on the impact of the strike and, on the basis of its report, goes to federal court for an injunction ordering the strikers back to work and requiring that collective bargaining be resumed.

Provisions outlined

WASHINGTON (AP) — The strike-halting Taft-Hartley Act specifies a series of steps that must be followed before, during and after the 80-day "cooling-off" period provided in it. Here is an outline of those provisions:

1. Declaring that a strike or lockout threatens to imperil the public health or safety, the president names a fact-finding panel and fixes an early deadline for it to report without recommendations. The panel usually consists of three members and its deadline has ranged historically from one to 24 days.

2. After receiving the report, the president may direct the attorney general to obtain a U.S. District Court injunction ordering the strikers back to their jobs immediately and requiring that bargaining resume with the aid of federal mediators.

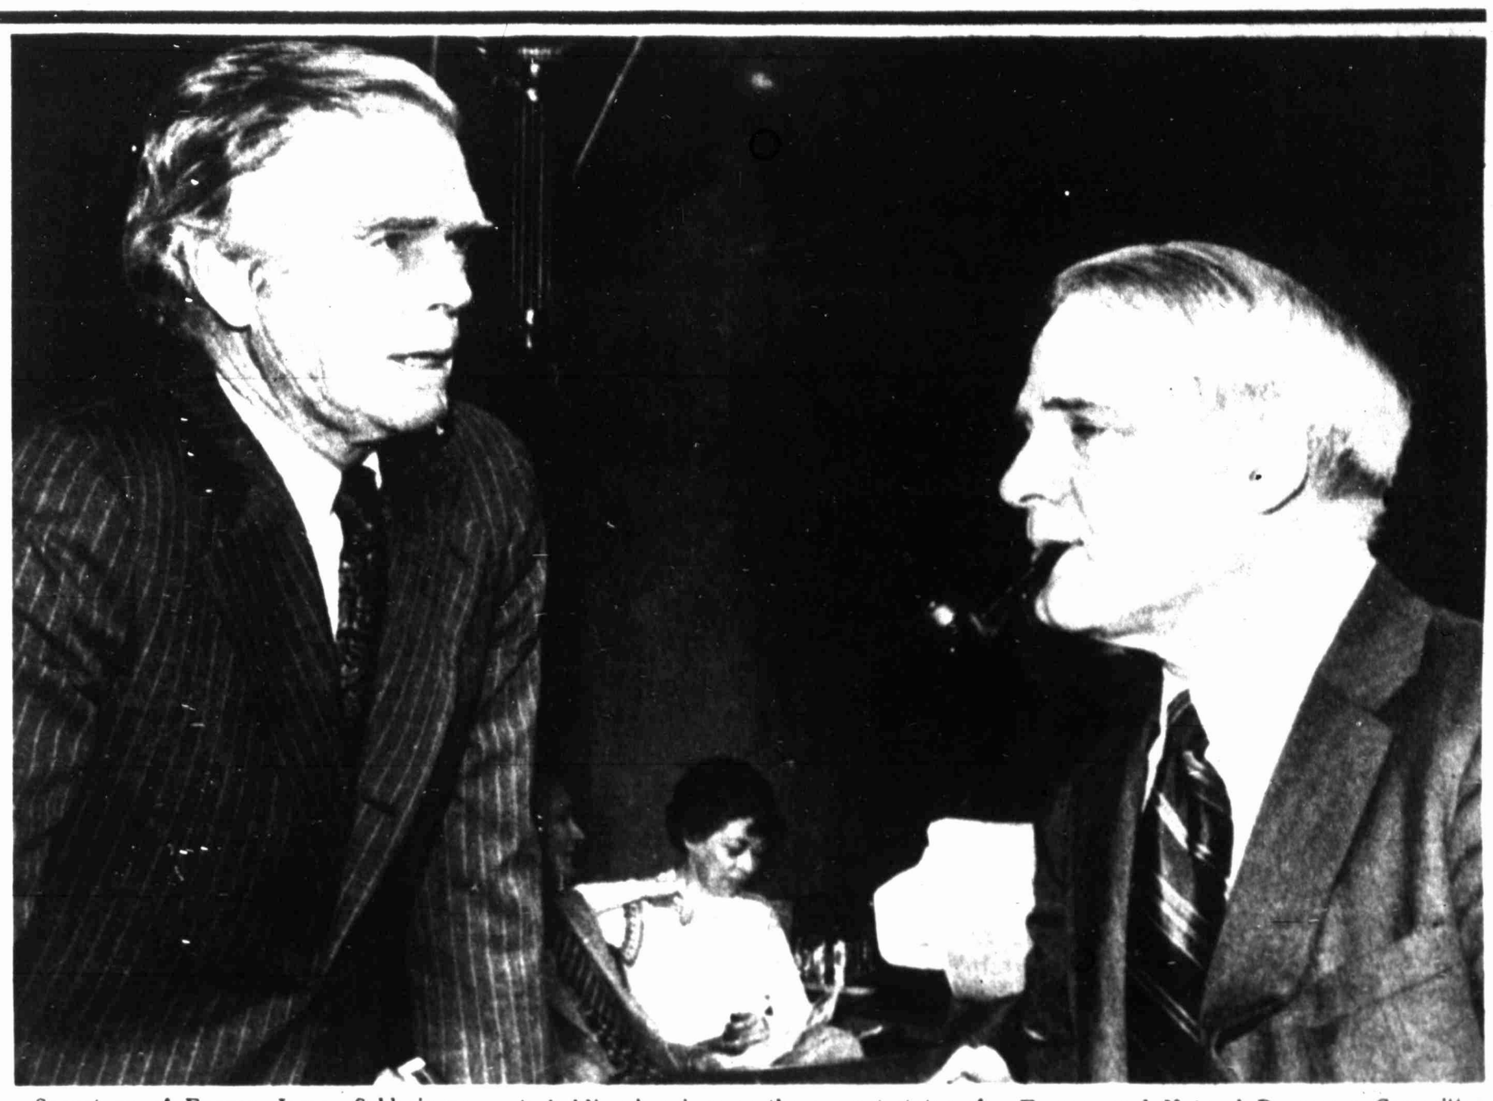

3. Within 60 days after issuance of the court order, the fact-finding panel must file a second public report, including a statement of the employer's last contract offer.

4. Within another 15 days, the National Labor Relations Board must complete a secret ballot among the workers on the last offer. The voting results are reported to the attorney general.

5. Within five more days, the attorney general must ask the court to lift the injunction.

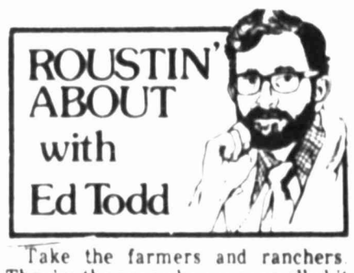

This completes the 80-day "cooling-off" and negotiation period. If the last offer from the employer has been rejected, the union is free to resume its strike.

Failure to obey the injunction against striking can result in charges of contempt of court and fines upon conviction.

Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger, right, chats with Senator Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., before testifying before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee this morning. Haskell chairs the panel, which is holding hearings on the current status of coal supplies. (AP Laserphoto)

Winter hides signs of drought

The crust of the earth is not beginning to crack . . . not yet, not around here.

But the drought is on. The ground is dry.

It's not so apparent, however, perhaps because of the winter season. People are preoccupied with the touch-and-go cold spells and with whether or not the sun will bring warmth to the day.

Thoughts just don't turn to the dearth of rain and to droughts. Not yet.

"Most people in the wintertime think about how cold it is. It's cold, all right," said Jim Lunney, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal. "It's also very, very dry."

To the weatherman, one interpretation of "very, very dry" is that the rainfall is about half the norm. It was that way last year. This year, the trend seems to be the same.

Lunney puts little faith in farmer's almanacs or in other long-range forecasts — including even the weather bureau's.

"I don't put much stock in these things," he said. Too many shower or rain forecasts, whatever the probabilities, missed their mark.

"If I could see into tomorrow, I'd be delighted," he said. "But let's face it. We're in the last three weeks of (the normally dry) winter. Things are going to get better."

There are a lot of people banking on that.

Take the farmers and ranchers. They're the ones who are normally hit the hardest by a dry spell. Eventually, of course, it will affect the town folks.

The all-important soil moisture is all but nil.

"Most of the underground moisture for most of the county is nonexistent," said Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in Midland County.

Hardest hit for now are the ranchers, who count on that moisture to keep their range lands fit for grazing.

They needed rain yesterday.

Already, many ranchers have cut their herds back by 50 percent, due to the increasingly poor grazing land, Hagelstein said. Too, many are forced to haul in supplemental feed.

A so-called "late rain" will not do the ranchers any immediate good.

"When your range is already short, in pretty bad condition," said Hagelstein, "it just takes awhile for it to get back to where it was."

However, a late rain, just around planting time, would benefit the farmers.

"If it comes a rain in May, the farmers can go ahead and plant," Hagelstein said. But that same rain would be of little or no immediate benefit to the ranchers.

On an average, more rain falls here in May than in any other month of the year. May's average is 2.16 inches.

Meanwhile, many cotton farmers, who are banking on some good rains, are "plowing to get the land ready for planting and to keep it from blowing," Hagelstein said.

Last year, the annual rainfall was 6.68 inches, which was just about half of the normal annual rain. Nevertheless, crops did fairly well on soil moisture stored up from the previous year's slightly above-normal (13.58 inches) rainfall. The norm is 13.51. A really "wet" year was 1975, when the weather bureau recorded 23.24 inches of rain. The year before, a 20.5-inch rainfall was gauged.

Even those who depend on irrigation are somewhat worried about the continuing dry spell.

Harold Semple, who uses drip irrigation to get moisture to his 5,000-tree pecan orchard, is becoming alarmed.

"It's getting plumb serious, to tell you the truth," he said.

"Not only (is it critical for) the boys who've got irrigation, it's serious for the dryland boys," Semple said.

To the farmer who irrigates, rain means he won't have to irrigate as often. And it also means that the water table will remain relatively high. But the longer the drought continues, the lower the water table will fall.

Effects of the drought are not as obvious to town and city people, who grow trees, shrubs, bushes and other plants for their aesthetic value, rather than for profit.

"A plant is just like a baby," said Odessa horticulturalist Gene Hurt.

Ruling could end mass use of x-ray screening

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mass x-ray screening would be outlawed under new rules proposed by the Texas Radiation Advisory Board and sent to the state board of health Sunday.

"A couple of TB associations," according to radiation enforcement chief Ed Bailey, still use mobile x-ray screening vans, but they would be halted, except with the express approval of the state health department. Normally, a person could be x-rayed only on a doctor's orders.

Another rule would require a lead shield one-fourth of a millimeter thick for the gonads — testes and ovaries — of patients of reproductive years when the organs are in an area being x-rayed.

"This would be the first time we've required gonadal shielding by regulation," said Bailey.

The proposed x-ray rules also would enforce federal performance standards for newly-manufactured machines "and eliminate a lot of gray areas," Bailey said.

Dr. Ben DuBilier of Seguin, a board member, said setting tightly written x-ray standards would make it easier for lawyers to win malpractice cases.

The rules, he said, would "open up a can of worms here for some sharp lawyer."

Bailey replied that a lawyer already could refer to federal standards as a yardstick for proper use of x-ray equipment.

The radiation advisory board also looked Sunday at the use of laser beams. Texas is the first state to adopt laser regulations.

Joe Thiel, a supervisor in the health department's occupational safety and radiation division, said he checked out a laser light show given by the Houston Symphony Orchestra Jan. 25. Laser beams pulsed as the orchestra played. Musicians in the orchestra "would have been zapped" with laser beams had he not established a six-foot buffer between them and the possible zone of laser return beams, he said.

Flash flood warnings linger in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Flash flood warnings were in effect today for mountains and coastal valleys as residents of Southern California began cleanup operations from torrential rains that officials said killed eight people and damaged about 250 houses.

Four storm-related deaths were reported in Los Angeles County and one each was reported in Orange, Ventura, Riverside and San Diego counties.

Mexican officials said at least 26 people had died there, thousands had been left homeless and up to $1 billion in damage had been caused by weekend rainstorms that created flood waters and mudslides.

The border town of Tijuana appeared hardest hit with 19 dead, officials said.

Ensenada, 60 miles to the south, was split in two by a torrent of water rushing through the city. More than 6,000 residents were homeless there with estimates reaching 100,000 for the entire 1,000-mile-long peninsula of Baja California.

All along the Baja coast, schools, churches, city halls and Red Cross centers were converted into refugee shelters. The U.S. Coast Guard flew in supplies by helicopter and airlifted 52 Americans isolated by flooding.

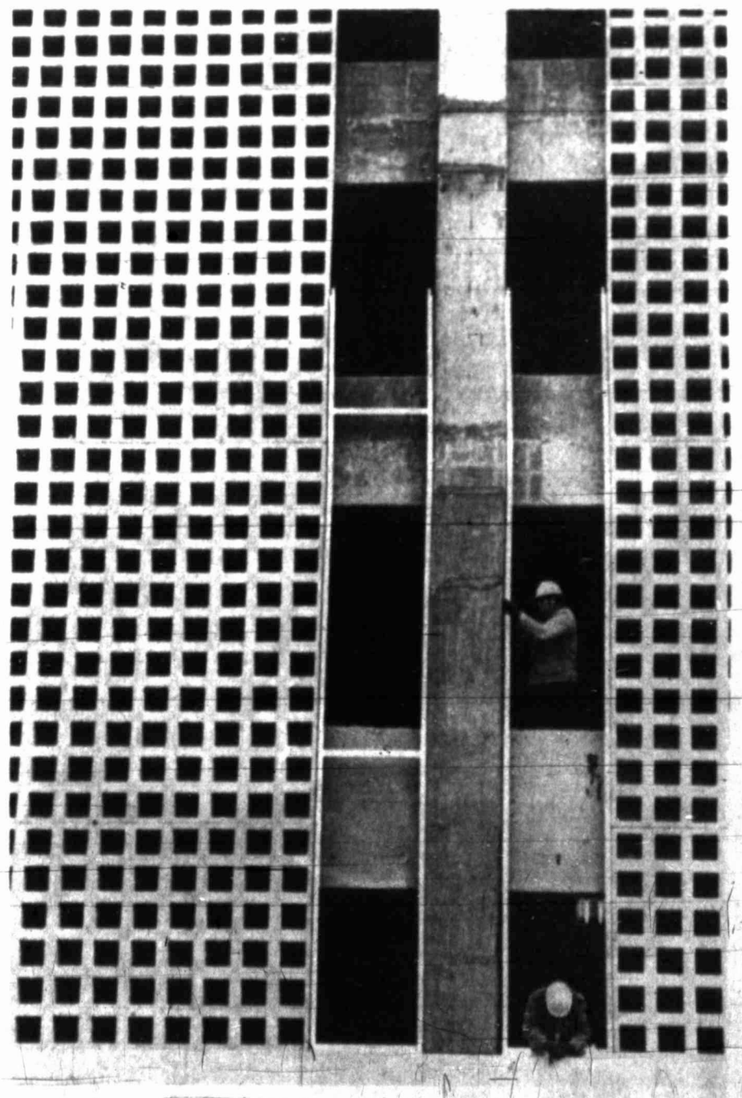

For most people in Los Angeles, there was no death or destruction — just more unwanted rain. In a little more than two months, the city has received 28 inches — twice the average for a whole year.

In widely scattered parts of the county, soggy hillsides gave way and sent mud crashing into homes.

The storm also brought high surf, which pounded beachfront homes of show business people in Malibu. Movie stars worked shoulder-to-shoulder with National Guardsmen and volunteers from nearby Pepperdine University to sandbag homes.

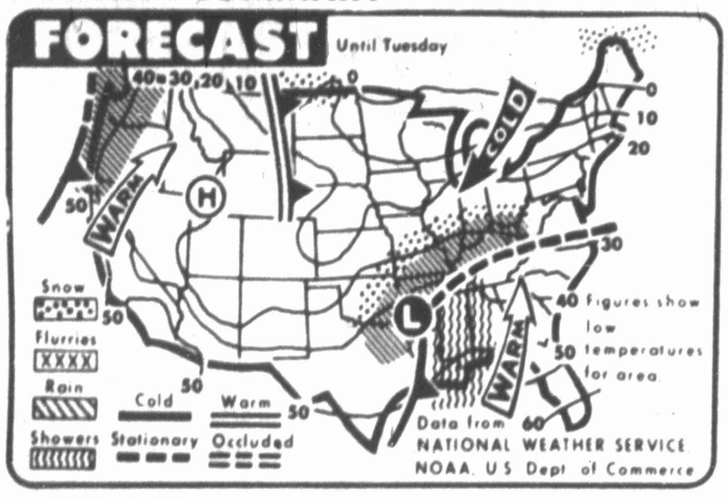

"Look at all the people," said actress Cicely Tyson, surveying the estimated 3,000 workers on the beach. Ms. Tyson's home escaped damage but she helped serve soft drinks and sandwiches.

In neighboring Ventura County, 800 residents had to flee their homes when the Sespe River flooded a housing tract in Fillmore. The homes were built on an old creek bed.

Town waits for ice jam to melt

PEQUEA, Pa. (AP) — Sitting on a bluff at eye level with soaring turkey buzzards, four Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. employees keep watch day and night over this tiny clapboard town.

For six weeks they have staked out a mammoth ice jam on the Susquehanna River a breathtaking 537 feet below. It is the biggest jam since the spring of 1904, when chunks of ice as big as box cars destroyed the upriver town of Safe Harbor, which never was rebuilt.

The men check the ice with binoculars and with stationary transit instruments whose crosshairs are lined up with two amber lights planted by helicopter on the ice, which resembles a sea of moon craters after a dirty snowfall.

One day, probably this month, the amber lights will stray from the point where the hairs meet, signaling the ice pack is on the move.

The men will relay the news from their mobile trailer at the lookout site. Sirens at two dams and at the firehouse will wail, alerting the people who live along the river of yet another spring thaw.

No one knows what will happen next.

"That's the $64,000 question," says Jim Karr, postmaster of this hamlet of 100 residents. "It could take this building just like a toothpick, or the ice could rot away gradually and stay within the river's banks. We'll know pretty soon."

The latest spring thaw along this stretch of the river was April 2, according to surviving records.

Another Pennsylvania Power employee drops a tape into the river every two hours, noting in a log book whether the river is rising or falling.

He and another man have been doing that since Jan. 27, the day the ice arrived from Turkey Hill, a river bottleneck that almost every year fills with debris-packed ice.

"The temperature climbed into the 50s that day and we had three inches of rain," recalled Gordon Stark, 30, whose house sits on the river's bank here.

"That Friday night it was like watching cars on a freeway, those chunks were doing 35 to 40 miles per hour. Then all of a sudden they stopped.

"The river is pretty shallow along here. The big chunks started digging into the mud, and the little ones stacked up behind."

The ice jam spans the milewide river and is about six miles long, starting a few miles upriver from Pennsylvania Power's Holtwood Dam, below town, and extending to the Safe Harbor Dam to the north. The Safe Harbor dam is owned jointly by Pennsylvania Power and Baltimore Gas & Electric.

The ice has already knocked the hydroelectric generating station at Safe Harbor Dam out of operation for six months to a year by backing water into generators, said Arch Knisely, a Pennsylvania Power official in Lancaster. It also toppled a transmission tower, carrying two 230,000-volt circuits.

One of the many who came to Pequea, Pa., walks on the ice-jammed Susquehanna River wanting to get a glimpse of what resembles a sea of moon craters after a dirty snowfall. (AP Laserphoto)

Ethiopia announces recapture of Jijiga

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia says it has recaptured the crossroads town of Jijiga, a major objective of its counteroffensive in the Ogaden War in eastern Ethiopia, and that its troops are pushing toward the frontier with Somalia. The Somali forces that took Jijiga in September deny that they have lost it.

"The revolutionary Ethiopian flag has been rehoisted in the town of Jijiga and is now proudly and triumphantly flying," Ethiopia's ambassador to Kenya, Mengiste Desta, told a news conference here today.

"The enemy forces are in complete disarray and are fleeing in every direction," he said, echoing an earlier statement from Radio Addis Ababa in the Ethiopian capital.

"There have been heavy losses, both human and material, but the enemy bore the brunt ... At this very moment, the revolutionary army is marching forward scoring further victories," Desta said.

Jijiga lies at the foot of the Kara Marda mountain range in the northern Ogaden desert about 40 miles from the Somali border.

Desta also said the southern Ogaden town of Gode had been retaken and other troops were advancing north along the railroad that links Addis Ababa with Djibouti on the Gulf of Aden, he said.

The rebels of the Western Somali Liberation Front, who have been fighting since July to wrest the Ogaden from Ethiopia and join it to neighboring Somalia, claimed the assault against Jijiga was repelled with "very serious losses for the attackers, all of them Soviet and Cuban forces."

Rape case dismissed; public wants probe

HONOLULU (AP) — A female jogger says she was raped after being run down by a car and threatened with broken glass. A judge tossed out the case on grounds of insufficient proof of force, prompting angry calls for a state investigation.

Some 700 women and men rallied across from the courthouse here Sunday to ask the state Supreme Court to consider the fitness for office of District Judge Robert Richardson.

"Judge Richardson has made a very dangerous decision. He's declared open season on all women joggers and he puts women in the position of having to fight, even if fighting could mean death or serious bodily injury," Janice Arnold-Jones, chairman of the group Women Against Rape, said at the rally.

Richardson, who dismissed the rape charge in a preliminary hearing Feb. 24, said in a telephone interview after the rally that he would welcome an investigation.

"The record will speak for itself. Anyone who is interested can check the record. Every word is there. I can't erase and I can't add anything," said Richardson.

Hawaii judges are appointed. The state does not provide for citizen recall, a method used last year in Madison, Wis., to force a special election and oust Judge Archie Simonson, who had made controversial remarks in a rape trial.

This case involves a woman who was jogging in a rural area of the island of Oahu when she was hit by a car. She told police the driver forced her into the car by threatening her with a broken bottle, then sodomized and raped her.

Wilbur Moyd, a 21-year-old Marine based on Oahu, was charged with rape and sodomy. Richardson upheld the sodomy charge but dismissed the rape count. The case now goes to a grand jury, which will decide whether to indict Moyd.

Cooling trend to hit area

A mild cooling trend through Tuesday is expected to pull the mercury down from pleasant 70-degree temperatures.

But don't worry. Temperatures for Tuesday are only expected to drop into the mid-60s. Today's high is predicted to be near 70 degrees, following a high temperature Sunday of 75 degrees.

The low tonight is expected to be near 40 degrees. This morning's overnight low was 50 degrees.

It was cloudy and warm this morning in Rankin, Stanton, Big Lake, Lamesa, Odessa, Crane, Rankin and Andrews.

Drought sneaking up on Basin's residents

"You take care of it, and it'll be okay. If you don't, it'll die."

Generally speaking, he recommends watering lawns and trees generously (about four inches' worth of water) every 11 days.

Hurt, just like Midland nurseryman Johnny Johnson, cautions against spraying tap water on the plant's leaves. The sodium salts in highly mineralized water may dry on the leaves and inhibit transpiration.

Enough clogging up of the leaves' pores could kill a plant.

But the salt-free rains from the clouds serve a two-fold purpose. One, they put moisture into the soil, and two, they wash the dust, dirt and grime off of the leaves. A dusty leaf has breathing problems.

Midland nurseryman Johnny Johnson, like Hurt, recommends generous — but not too much — watering.

"It's hard, it'd be really hard, to over-water," Johnson said. That's particularly true in the summertime.

Too, both Johnson and Hurt noted that a good ground soaking at a plant's root system benefits a plant when a freeze is imminent.

The freeze doesn't hurt the plant. But the thawing-out process might . . . should the plant become dehydrated due to lack of ground moisture.

"The problem during the wintertime is that when you have a hard freeze, the moisture is pulled out of the ground," Johnson said. "The best way to protect a plant against a freeze is to water it properly."

Whether a hard freeze comes or not, reasonably heavy watering now may help save the plant if the drought continues.

"The main thing is to get the plant where its root system is deep and extensive, rather than shallow," said Johnson. "Put the hose there, and wet it down . . . so the plant will deep root."

Drought or not, you could let that water run from the garden hose for a long time — say, seven years — before Midland's supply of tap water might have to be rationed, said John Lowe, Midland's director of utilities. Mostly, it's lake water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Mixed with it is well water, of which Midland has a good supply.

A CELEBRATION OF WHEELS and of spring-like temperatures was held Sunday in Midland's parks, as both youngsters and adults took the opportunity to relax in the warmth. Howdy, ARCO visitors

Highlighting the events of this week in the Tall City of Midland is the visit of members of the board of directors and officers of Atlantic Richfield Co. from Los Angeles, Calif., Dallas and New York City.

Midland and Midlanders always are delighted to have such distinguished business leaders visit this Headquarters City of the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, and the ARCO group certainly is no exception.

The Atlantic Richfield officials will be the guests of The Midland Wildcat Committee at a reception given in their honor this afternoon in the Petroleum Club. Robert L. Wood, chairman of the executive committee of the host organization, said the reception hours will be from 5 to 7 p.m.

Heading the group of visitors is Robert O. Anderson of Los Angeles, chairman of the board of Atlantic Richfield.

Others in the party include Louis F. Davis, executive vice president, Dallas; E.M. Benson Jr., J.P. Downer and W.F. Kieschnick Jr., all executive vice presidents, Los Angeles; J.B. M. Place, executive vice president, Atlantic Richfield, and chairman and president of The Anaconda Co., New York City: R.E. Wycoff, senior vice president, planning and finance, Los Angeles; Ronald J. Arnault, vice president, planning, Los Angeles; B.J. Lancaster, senior vice president, North American Producing Division, Dallas; J.L. Wilson, vice president, Western Region, North American Producing Division, Dallas, and Clarence E. Cardwell Jr., Permian Basin district manager, Midland.

Atlantic Richfield long has been a good corporate citizen of Midland and the Permian Basin and it is great that its top officials are visiting the city and section. The company's Midland personnel likewise are excellent citizens, many of them holding positions of leadership in various phases of community life. It is great to have them as citizens of the Tall City.

A great big, typically West Texas WELCOME is directed to the ARCO visitors. It is hoped that they will extend their Midland visit as long as possible, that their stay here will be pleasant and profitable in every respect, and that they will come back to see us soon and often.

Merited recognition

Congratulations are in order for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, which, for the third consecutive year, has been awarded a George Washington Honor Medal by the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., in the category of Economic Education Programs.

The most recent honor was awarded on WTCC's catalogue, "Sources of Materials on the American Free Enterprise System," produced last year.

The source book lists all pamphlets, program kits, speeches, films, editorials and teaching aids known to the chamber's Private Enterprise Development Committee. It was designed to aid free enterprise instructors in the public school system, as well as program chairmen of organizations of all kinds.

The regional chamber was awarded the George Washington Honor Medal in 1975 for its economic educational campaign, "Profits Create Jobs," and in 1976 for its program, "Free Enterprise — For 200 Years, America's Strength."

Here's hoping that the West Texas Chamber will continue educational programs on the free enterprise system this year and in future years.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Turkish report is falsified

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Carter Administration is so worried about declining Turkish military power that it has falsified its report on human rights practices in Turkey and has portrayed the country as a virtual human rights paradise.

The false account, part of the State Department's "Country Reports on Human Rights Practices," was delivered to Congress several weeks ago. The department claimed it had little "conclusive proof" or "significant evidence" to support allegations of human rights abuses in Turkey.

A more enigmatic statement, worthy of the master diplomat Henry Kissinger, was issued on Turkish-controlled northern Cyprus. Human rights questions in Cyprus, stated the report, "cannot be treated in isolation from political considerations."

These conclusions are disputed by the State Department's own files, which contain abundant evidence of the harsh treatment of minority groups and political prisoners. Indeed, the Turks have a reputation for brutality, which makes them fierce fighters and cruel jailers.

American citizens, who have had the misfortune of landing in a Turkish lockup, have told of vicious beatings. A favorite Turkish torture is to batter the soles of a prisoner's feet with truncheons, which causes excruciating pain and leaves him unable to walk.

The Greek government, taking exception to the State Department's fairy tale, lodged formal protests both in Athens and Washington. And Cypriot Ambassador Nicos Dimitriou marched into the State Department and indignantly delivered an official letter of protest.

The official view of human rights in Turkey, insiders suspect, is a deliberate whitewash intended to tiptoe around Turkish sensitivities. The Turks are still smarting from an arms embargo imposed by Congress after Turkish troops invaded Cyprus with U.S. weapons.

The Turks retaliated by closing U.S. intelligence installations in their country. These electronic listening posts monitored Soviet missile tests and military maneuvers. At Sinop on the Black Sea, for example, sophisticated radar devices could zoom directly on Soviet missile launch sites.

At the time the bases were closed, intelligence sources claimed they were responsible for about a fourth of the clandestine information gathered about Soviet military activities. American technology and ingenuity, however, have produced substitutes for most of the Turkish installations.

Far more important, in the Pentagon's view, is Turkey's role as the Mediterranean anchor of the NATO alliance. One worried general told us: "The big question is whether they can perform their NATO responsibilities without military aid. We get a real buy with the Turks. Give them a few weapons and you buy a bunch of divisions. They've got the manpower, and they proved they could use it in the Korean War."

Our sources say that President Carter has adopted the military view. He has been strongly influenced by the Joint Chiefs, who meet with him frequently. In fact, the president recently boasted to his Cabinet behind closed doors that he "has generated a compatability among the strategic planners of our government unknown in former administrations."

He reportedly is preparing, therefore, to ask Congress to approve the $1 billion defense agreement that was signed in 1976 between Turkey and the United States. The State Department soft-pedaled Turkish human rights abuses, our sources say, to avoid irritating a Congress that is already sympathetic to the Greek and Cypriot causes.

In any event, the human rights reports on Turkey simply do not reflect the truth. Particularly galling to the Greek is the statement that "there does not appear to be any official discrimination against individuals belonging to minority groups" and that they enjoy, among other rights, "freedom of worship."

There has been a history of religious discrimination against the Greek Orthodox church in Turkey. The best evidence can be found in the statistics; the Greek Orthodox population in Turkey has dwindled from 111,700 in 1924 to 13,500 today. A confidential diplomatic document, reporting on the oppression of Greeks in Turkey, cites these flagrant abuses:

— A deliberate campaign of harassment has been reported against Greek Orthodox clerics in Istanbul, the very city where the head of the church traditionally resides. Greek religious leaders have been denied passports to travel abroad, even for pressing personal reasons. Editorials in the Turkish press have railed against the church. Following one series of articles, demonstrators laid a "black wreath on which were pinned slogans asking for the expulsion of the (Greek Orthodox) Patriarchate from Turkey."

— Turkish authorities are cracking down on Greek minority schools. Teaching of the Greek language has been "severely curtailed," and Turkish officials have refused to appoint principals to Greek high schools. All repair requests in excess of $15 were refused last year. And the Turks have begun assessing heavy taxes on Greek schools, though they are owned by charity institutions which are supposed to be tax-exempt.

— Last year, Turkish officials began "the close surveillance of persons who visit the Greek General Consulate in Istanbul" and "systematically ask for (their) identity cards." Leaders in the Greek Orthodox minority have also begun to "receive anonymous letters, threatening the property and lives of the recipients and containing demands for ranson."

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Latin American democrats turn interventionists

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

William Giandoni

Latin America's "democrats" seem much more willing to meddle in their hemisphere neighbor's affairs now than they were in earlier years.

For decades, Latin diplomats and politicians have been pontificating on the virtues of the hallowed principles of "non-intervention" and "self-determination."

In effect, they were telling the United States to leave Latin America alone so that the individual countries could work out their own problems.

But now some of the same Latin spokesmen who had argued so persuasively in favor of non-intervention and self-determination and the governments they represent have set themselves up as arbiters or at least self-authorized critics of the politics and conduct of the rest of the American republics.

Curiously, Costa Rica, reputedly the most democratic of all Latin American nations, is the one whose government seems least tolerant of those regimes with which it has differences.

The recent problems in Nicaragua illustrate that. By now, if press reports from Central America are any guide, it is pretty well established that the Marxist-led guerrillas who have been harassing the dictatorship of General Anastasio Somoza in Nicaragua have been ducking back across the border into Costa Rica when they find themselves fighting losing battles with the Nicaraguan National Guard.

Costa Rica, of course, says that it is unable to prevent movement of the presumably small bands of Nicaraguan insurgents across the river that marks much of the boundary between the two. Costa Rica does not have an army; the constitution prohibits the army as a permanent institution, and the little nation's 2800-man Civil Guard is mostly involved in police work necessary to preserve public order.

However, the National Liberation Party governments of recent years have permitted Costa Rica to become a haven for Marxist activists from a number of other countries. In addition to the "Sandinistas," as the Nicaraguan guerrillas call themselves, guerrillas from elsewhere in Central America and even from as far away as Chile, have been accepted in Costa Rica.

Nevertheless, the little Central American republic does have a very legitimate claim to democratic fame. It has passed the most acid of all tests of honestly-elected government. Just once since the revolution of 1948 has the presidential candidate of the party in power won. Seven elections have been held, the most recent Feb. 5, and only in 1974 did the National Liberation Party (PLN) manage to retain the presidency. This time, Rodrigo Carazo, candidate of the Unity Coalition, defeated the PLN nominee. Carazo is to be inaugurated May 8.

Neither Venezuela nor Colombia, the others oft-mentioned as democracies in Latin America, can come close to challenging Costa Rica's credentials.

Venezuela's democracy dates only from 1959 when, after the revolution a year earlier, Romulo Betancourt was elected president on the Democratic Action Party ticket. Two of the three Venezuelan presidents since then, including the incumbent, Carlos Andres Perez, have been AD stalwarts.

Colombia resumed electing presidents in 1958, after the downfall of the dictatorship of Gen. Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, but the purity of its presidential elections is subject to considerable doubt.

Before he died, Rojas Pinilla ran for election twice, and many political observers allege, polled the most votes both times but he was "counted out" by the governments in power.

Despite their democratic pretensions, though, both Venezuela and Colombia have advocated intervention in the affairs of other Latin nations.

Venezuela, for example, has taken the lead in South America in the campaigns against Uruguay and Chile, both of which have been living under military-dominated governments in recent years. Now Venezuela is asking that the Inter-American Human Rights Commission take action against the Somoza dictatorship.

Colombia, though less aggressively, has let it be known that it might favor some sort of boycott or diplomatic quarantine of those of its South American neighbors it dislikes.

Interestingly, all three — Costa Rica, Venezuela and Colombia — took active part in the effort to remove the diplomatic sanctions that the Organization of American States had imposed on Communist Cuba.

Mexico, the only Latin American country that never broke relations with Cuba, also played a role in that campaign.

Although Mexico was vociferous in its criticism of the Chilean military government during the administration of President Luis Echeverria, and went so far as to break diplomatic relations with Chile in 1974, since President Jose Lopez Portillo took office in December 1976, Mexico has limited itself to voting against Chile in the United Nations and other international forums.

Mexico, of course, was the birthplace of Benito Juarez, the 19th century president whose apothegem, "Respect for the rights of others is peace," is so often quoted by the non-interventionists.

INSIDE REPORT:

Terror: New York City's weapon against bankruptcy

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

NEW YORK — Having failed to convince America that they really feel remorse for long years of profligacy that have brought them to mendicant status, the big spenders of New York City have one weapon left to avoid bankruptcy: terror.

Strategists planning this city's drive for long-term federal guarantees are warning that bankruptcy is just around the corner, closely followed by castastrophe spreading far beyond the Hudson. Since the day is long past when the fate of New York evokes sympathy from the hinterland, the campaign of terror is the only reason why Uncle Sam may yet save the city.

It seems to be working. Although no definite decision has been made, the Carter administration is expected within the next two weeks to back a long-term federal guaranty program of the city's bonds. But even if given presidential sponsorship, that program must still clear the much higher hurdle of congressional approval. Congress is in no mood to save a city whose employes will soon get higher pay and whose citizens will soon pay lower taxes.

The options are clear: (1) Bail out this city's free-spending government, however undeserving it is, and avoid bankruptcy; (2) pass a short-term loan and probably avoid bankruptcy now, which would only postpone the showdown — perhaps only until the 1980 presidential election year, when congressional sympathy will be nonexistent; (3) do nothing, thereby mandating bankruptcy.

Is bankruptcy all that bad? The rest of America, specifically including Congress, thinks it might be a good thing to bring this fabled city in touch with reality (a view shared privately even by some Wall Streeters). In truth, municipal bankruptcy would not trigger overall financial collapse today as it might have in 1975, when Manhattan's banks were clogged with city bonds.

Nevertheless, city bankruptcy would threaten New York state with bankruptcy. It surely would further weaken the shaky dollar and worry unstable money markets. Financier Felix Rohatyn, finishing a long hitch as chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corp., paints a scary but credible picture of Jimmy Carter's bargaining strength with Leonid Brezhnev being diminished by bankruptcy here.

What is clear to New York's astute Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan is that nobody today would accept the 1975 argument that this is an urban crisis, not a New York City crisis. The fact that Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston are not experiencing the same trouble suggests a special madness here.

New York cannot persuasively argue to Congress that its madness is under control. While police commissioner Robert McGuire asks "real dollar increases" for his men, municipal labor leader Victor Gotbaum demands a half-billion dollars in higher wages amounting to a 12 per cent increase.

Assume Mayor Edward Koch digs in his heels in the impending negotiations and whittles down Gotbaum's demands to a more reasonable 4 per cent increase. That is still too much, when heaped on the present $1 billion annual deficit. Insiders sympathetic to the new mayor don't see how he can balance the budget unless the unions are held to practically no wage increase. A deficit-building wage boost added to state and municipal tax cuts will harden congressional hostility.

Ex-Congreessman Koch's insistence that "collegial" relationships with his former pals in the House will pass New York aid is not taken seriously here or in Washington. Koch was not the House's most popular member and another ex-Congressman, deputy mayor Herman Badillo, was one of its least popular members. With the Senate Banking Committee aligned against another New York bail-out, the House is in no mood to act before the Senate does. Yet, on his last visit to Washington, Koch failed to touch bases with either Moynihan or his Republican colleague, Sen. Jacob Javits.

Furthermore, New Yorkers clearly have to appeal to emotion, as Moynihan did in a recent conversation with President Carter, as follows: Herbert Hoover, whatever else he did, went down in history only for inspiring "Hoovervilles" (depression shanty towns)! Do you want to go down in history as the President who sent New York into bankruptcy?

That may move Mr. Carter, but even stronger language will be needed for the reluctant Congress. Responding to the Senate Banking Committee, Rohatyn accused it of playing "Russian roulette" and "pushing the city toward bankruptcy." But Rohatyn cannot wage the campaign alone. Ed Koch will have to drop his smiling optimism and instead terrorize Congress.

Whether Koch understands it or not, such perceptive New Yorkers as Moynihan and Rohatyn realize that other Americans do not much like, admire, respect, trust or believe in this city. They will help only if convinced that New York's financial collapse will be the indirect cause of their own ruin, which may indeed be the case.

Three courses added to non-credit listings

Three non-credit courses, not listed in the Midland College Continuing Education Spring Catalog, recently have been added to the continuing education program, James Bramlett, director of Community Services at the College, announced last week.

The courses begin during the week of April 3, and all will be taught by Laird Considine. Considine received his bachelor's degree in analytical psychology from Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash. He attended classes at the C. G. Jung Educational Center in Houston and has conducted numerous seminars in Texas.

Dreams and their interpretations will be covered in one of the three courses. The class will be divided into two parts, one academic and the other dealing with the students' own dreams.

Considine also will teach "Insight, the Psychological Concepts of C. G. Jung," an introduction to the discoveries about human psychology and their practical valule in everyday life. Discussion will include many of Jung's basic ideas and an exploration into the application of these ideas toward self-understanding.

The third course will deal with the art of calligraphic handwriting. Bramlett said students will learn how to personalize greeting cards, invitations and even everyday handwriting by using italic calligraphy, first developed during the 15th century Renaissance in Italy.

Announcement of class schedules and meeting places will be made shortly, Bramlett said. However, he said, persons may preregister now for these courses from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays in room 140 of the occupational-technical building. More information may be obtained by telephoning 684-7851, extension 216 or 147.

Exchange to continue

HOUSTON (AP) — The fifth in a series of prisoner exchange flights between the United States and Mexico was scheduled to depart Houston Intercontinental Airport this morning.

About 540 Mexican nationals were expected to be aboard the Texas International DC-9 destined for Mexico City.

The plane's flight plan calls for a first stop in El Paso where American prisoners jailed in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, will board the aircraft. The flight was to continue to San Diego and then Mexico City.

An unspecified number of Americans were expected to board the plane there. The big jet was then scheduled to fly to Hermosillo, Mexico, where additional American prisoners were to be picked up. The return flight was due to land in San Diego where authorities were anticipating handling about 40 Americans.

The prisoner exchange fights began last December. To date, 40 Mexican nationals and 246 Americans have been exchanged, according to a Texas International spokesman.

Campaigner explains incident with reporter

DALLAS (AP) — "I over-reacted, and I think you know I am not the type that generally over-reacts," a former presidential press secretary said of an incident in Dallas Sunday when he slapped at the microphone of a television newsman who was interviewing Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

George Christian, a campaign consultant for Briscoe, said he pushed the microphone of newsman Charles Duncan of WFAA-TV because Duncan's interview "was so abusive that on the spur of the moment, I didn't want it to go unanswered."

Christian was press secretary for President Lyndon Johnson and also for former Governors John Connally and Price Daniel. He now has his own public relations firm.

WFAA-TV showed the confrontation between Christian and WFAA's Charles Duncan on its evening newscasts Sunday. The incident occurred after Duncan asked the governor repeatedly about the use of tear gas and billy clubs by police and sheriff's deputies to force about 225 demonstrating farmers off a bridge last week at Hidalgo.

Briscoe appeared at a noon dedication in Dallas Sunday of a new Jewish community center. As Briscoe was leaving, Duncan asked him to comment on whether he felt excessive force was used by the officers.

The governor said he had no comment, that he had not seen the video coverage, a spokesman for the WFAA-TV news department said. Duncan pressed the issue farther, but Briscoe continued to decline comment.

"Briscoe finally said something like, 'I'm not going to comment on that. I don't think you're being helpful and you're not doing your profession a service,' the spokesman said.

As Briscoe walked away, Duncan yelled after him, didn't he want to comment on the night sticks being used?

It was at this point, the station spokesman said, that Christian walked up to Duncan, hit the left hand with which Duncan was holding his microphone, and asked, "What kind of questions were those?"

"I over-reacted when he put the mike in my face after the governor had left," Christian said later in the day from his home in Austin.

"I didn't knock the mike out of his hand. I just pushed it away and told him he had asked unfair questions."

DEAR ABBY

Teen-age driver's Pop should stick to his guns

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the letter signed by POP who warned his 16-year-old daughter that if she was arrested for a traffic violation or was involved in an accident that was her fault, he would take away her driving privileges for a year. The daughter complained about the severity of the penalty, and POP asked for your opinion.

Well, I am also 16, and when I became eligible for a driver's license, my parents gave me a similar warning. At first I thought they were wrong, but now I realize that they were right. I drive defensively, always watching out for the other guy, and I've yet to have an auto accident or get a parking ticket.

I agree with you, POP's decision was a little too harsh. But fortunately, the girl only hit a post. What if she had hit another car?—SIXTEEN AND SAFE

DEAR SIXTEEN: Read on for more opinions of POP's letter:

DEAR ABBY: I am 15, the oldest of five, and a licensed driver. If POP takes your advice and allows his daughter to drive before her year is up, he's not very smart.

When my father sets a rule and does not enforce it, it's just like breaking a promise. If the girl's mom thought POP's rule was too harsh when he made it, she should have spoken up at the time. I agree, a year IS too long, but once POP made the rule he should have stuck with it.—LONAH.

DEAR ABBY: I disagree that POP's punishment was too harsh. If he doesn't stick to his guns, his daughter will have no respect for him. I think the minimum age for drivers should be 18. It would take a bunch of these idiot kids off our streets and highways. I work near a high school and I see the stupid things those kids in cars pull every day. It's no wonder the death rate among teens from auto accidents is so high.

You should have congratulated POP on his wise decision instead of saying, "Lower the penalty this time, but if it happens again, lower the boom."—AGAINST TEEN DRIVERS

DEAR ABBY: How dare you give such irresponsible advice to POP? A conscientious father lays down the law to his daughter and you advise him to back down!

His daughter was lucky. Do you know how many thousands of people die in accidents caused by incompetent teen-age drivers? Losing driving privileges for a year is not too severe a penalty.

Rather than complain about the severity of the punishment, the daughter should thank God for a father who cares enough about her to make rules and stick with them. There should be more parents like POP!—CALIFORNIA TEACHER

New wooden exteriors standing tall today

By HERB LAWRENCE
Copley News Service

The freshness and natural attractiveness of wood has always made it a popular building material.

More and more buildings — residential, commercial and industrial — with wooden exteriors are popping up.

And redwood is playing a significant role in this wood revolution.

Many people fall in love with that sparkling reddish look of the redwoods.

But Ian Martin, technical adviser to the California Redwood Association, headquartered in San Francisco, says another key reason is durability. It wears better and lasts longer than many other types of wood.

"Durability of wood is measured by native ability to resist the deteriorating effects of hostile environments," he said. "The most common of wood despoilers are decay, insect attack and the erosive effects of weather.

"A wood that can withstand these antagonists while maintaining original shape and strength is high in durability properties. Redwood is unexcelled among commercial species in natural ability."

Reports by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Products Laboratory also throw heavy support to the redwoods.

The laboratory has found that the heartwood of only two commercial wood species in the United States can resist the deteriorating effects of all three, decay, termites and weather.

Redwood is one. Bald cypress is the other. Three cedar varieties rate highly for resistance to decay and weather erosion but are not termite-resistant.

The very resinous heartwood of southern yellow pine is termite-resistant but is not rated highly for resistance to decay or weather erosion.

Redwood also swells up less than other wood when water goes into it. That means the wood will have to shrink less to return to its regular size. The less swelling and shrinkage mean that redwood will splinter and crack less in the long run.

These facts all seem to fit in with the sales plans of the redwood association, which represents 75 percent of the redwood lumber mills.

"We don't need to expand our market," said Martin. "We already are selling as much redwood as we are able to harvest. Our job is to advise people on redwood and the best way to use it."

The growing and harvesting of redwoods are carefully controlled so that there will be enough every year.

Redwood in the United States is found only in California and the southern part of Oregon.

The redwood being used for a variety of buildings all comes from Northern california.

It doesn't include any redwood in the 175,000 acres of protected redwoods which are in parks and reserves.

Martin said the association cuts only as many redwoods as can be replaced.

About 800 million-board feet a year is provided for building.

The wood used for bildings has to be dried for more than a year before it's ready.

In the forest, the redwoods are half wood and half water.

Redwood is used for homes, commercial and industrial buildings, industrial cooling towers, water storage and water pipes.

One redwood water pipe in Chile lasted 63 years.

Redwood will fade to gray after being exposed to the elements awhile.

But the attractive color can be maintained by putting a semi-transparent stain on it.

"If we decided today we needed another power plant, these kids would be in college before it could be ready."

Mike Greene
TESCO Power Department

"Most people are surprised to learn how long it takes to build an electric generating plant.

It takes about eight years to locate and purchase the right site, order equipment, plan and build a lignite-fueled power plant, obtain approvals from all regulatory agencies, and then test the plant's operation carefully. It takes even longer for a nuclear-fueled plant — 10 to 12 years.

Right now, because of the shortage and high cost of natural gas, Texas Electric is building new plants that run on lignite coal and one which will use nuclear fuel.

These plants are very expensive. But we must build them so that when the need is there tomorrow, the electricity will be there too."

Pancake event sales under way

With the more than 300 members of the Midland Downtown Lions Club selling tickets to the club's annual Pancake Jamboree scheduled Saturday, it isn't likely that many Midlanders will be missed. Special musical entertainment, featuring many of the city's stellar performers, will be presented from 8 a.m. until closing time.

All work in connection with planning and staging the jamboree will be done by club members, assisted by the Lion Tamers, the club's woman's auxiliary.

Chairmen of the various jamboree committees are Newell Hughes, entertainment; Bruce Hart and Don Combs, procurement; Larry Hunnicutt and Jerry Speck, cooking; John Berry and Al Dirnberger, equipment; Ray Gwyn, Chuck Logue, Morria Hulsey and Henry Culp, tickets; Tom Mixon, publicity, and Eddie Klatt, afterglow.

Midland man injured after questioning thief

A Midland man was injured Sunday night after he asked an apparent thief a question.

Mike Evans of the 2600 block of Goddard Drive told police he walked out of the First Baptist Church at 8 p.m. Sunday and walked across Garfield Street to the parking lot where his car was. According to police, Evans said he noticed a man removing the hubcabs from another car, and Evans asked the man what he was doing.

At that time, the man struck Evans with an L-shaped tool, Evans told officers.

The man reportedly put the hubcaps into a car and left. Evans then notified the owner of the car, Steve Caldwell of the 2800 block of Frontier Drive.

Caldwell told police that four spoke hubcaps worth approximately $120 were missing from his car.

VANDALISM REPORTED

Four acts of vandalism, committed during the weekend, were reported to police.

Robert Beeson reported two windows broken at Petro Chem Products Corp., 3001 W. Industrial Ave.

A broken windshield was reported by Mattie Cole in the 700 block of East Clay Street.

Ralph Aman told police that someone had driven a vehicle through his front yard in the 4700 block of Erie Drive, and Danny Riddle of the 3800 block of Shell Avenue reported that the seat on one of his bicycles had been cut.

Cars, house damaged by way-straying vehicle

A Midland woman ostensibly received only slight injuries Sunday night after the car she was driving reportedly struck two parked cars and a house.

Police said Mary H. Haver of the 2200 block of South Lamesa Road was northbound on Crestview Road when her vehicle struck a parked car belonging to Pam Elmore of the 3100 block of Delano Avenue.

Ms. Haver's car reportedly then went out of control, jumped the west curb on Crestview, continued northwest, across a yard at 3201 Delano, crossed Delano, jumped the north curb and crossed the yard at 3200 Delano before striking a car belonging to John H. Iasacks.

According to officers, Ms. Haver's vehicle then struck the house at 3200 Delano.

Damage to the house, which belongs to L. C. Slape of the 1200 block of Bedford Drive, was estimated at $2,000.

Police said Ms. Haver was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, however the hospital this morning showed no record of treatment.

Two volunteer Merkel firefighters and an Abilene fireman were treated for minor glass cuts.

Glider mishap fatal

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A 29-year-old El Paso man hit a deep downdraft Sunday afternoon as he was gliding in the mountains skirting El Paso and plunged 150 feet to his death.

The victim of the hang-gliding accident was identified as Thomas Green. The glider floated for about 200 feet over the edge of a scenic view area before hitting the downdraft.

Churches lure thieves

MADRID (AP) — The serenity that draws weary souls to the old cathedrals and churches of southern Europe is increasingly being violated by a different kind of visitor — thieves.

They are lured by the jewels, paintings and objects of gold and silver, many antique and priceless, that adorn these cool, dark sanctuaries, protected if at all by little more than glass cases.

"Looting is going on everywhere from the Alps to Sicily," says the Rev. Pietro Garlato, secretary of Pope Paul's commission for sacred art. Garlato has been touring the countryside teaching priests how to install burglar alarms and urging them to remove valuable objects from isolated, unguarded churches.

Italy records the highest number of thefts from churches — 12,000 items were stolen in that country last year, Garlato says — followed by Spain and France.

Minor thefts are discovered by the dozens, but others are spectacular.

In northern Spain last year, a lone burglar entered the cathedral at Oviedo. He felt so confident that he took time to eat a can of sardines. Then he left with an estimated $5 million in jewels from 9th century crosses.

It was the third burglary in six years at the cathedral and the 20th major church theft in Spain in the past decade. Archbishop Gabino Diaz called it an "incalcuable historic loss."

This case was unusual. An arrest was made. When Jose Dominguez Saavedra was seized in Portugal several days later, police recovered the jewels that had been bashed out of the Cross of Los Angeles and the Cross of Victories, but church officials worry that the crosses may never be completely restored.

Not much has changed in the six months since the crime.

"We have protection plans," its dean says, "but no money yet."

Growing concern over theft has prompted several efforts to halt it, with little success so far.

Parish priests in the Ossola Valley of the Italian Alps have issued a public appeal to police and parishioners to help stop the stream of stolen objects flowing across the Swiss border.

In Spain, art and antique dealers are required by law to notify the government if they come across something that could belong to the government.

Italian authorities mail lists of all reported stolen objects to antique dealers in Switzerland, Germany, France, England and the United States.

Generally only valuable paintings or other works of art reach the United States, says Elizabeth Burns, director of the International Foundation for Art Research, which maintains lists of stolen items. Items looted for their jewels or precious metals are usually broken up and remain in Europe.

The top works of art are usually recovered because they are instantly recognized by dealers, she says, and others are retrieved at customs or when they are sold to law enforcement agents posing as fences.

Despite attempts to turn the tide, looting continues.

Garlato links the wave of stealing with economic conditions in Italy and Spain. "More jobless and needy means more thefts, and churches have become another target in a world where sacrilege is no longer feared," he says.

Church thefts aren't so widespread in northern Europe, where economic conditions are better, he says.

Images of the virgin are favorite targets of Spanish burglars because they usually are encrusted with precious stones, priests say. Often the loss is more than monetary, as when a congregation, especially in a small town, loses the image of its patron saint.

Among the most valuable art stolen from churches in Italy are paintings by Tiziano, Giorgione, Mantegna, Tiepolo and Caravaggio.

Tire air bill asked

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Every American has the right to life, liberty and compressed air, according to a Minnesota legislator.

"It really is a heck of a feeling when you're having a tire that's going down and you can't find an air pump," Rep. Stanley Fudro said Friday.

Fudro, chairman of the House Transportation Committee, persuaded members to approve his bill that would require service station operators to offer compressed air for inflating tires, even if they have to charge for it.

Schneiders chosen for party position

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Greg Schneiders, director of special projects at the White House, has been tabbed by Democratic National Chairman John C. White for a senior staff position at the party headquarters.

White last week confirmed the substance of an account in the forthcoming issue of The Baron Report, a political newsletter, that he has asked Schneiders to join him at the national committee.

That report said Schneiders would be the committee's executive director. White said he was "not hung up on titles," but indicated Schneiders would share duties with Dan Horgan, the New Jersey Political consultant previously mentioned for the executive director's post.

White said he would like Schneiders to be his deputy for patronage and administrative matters, while Horgan concentrated on political organizing. White said Schneiders was interested in the post but added. "We haven't shaken hands on it yet."

Schneiders was President Carter's personal aide during the 1976 campaign.

Lewis' heart spills blood after tough win

HOUSTON (AP) — Southwest Conference basketball followers have known most of the season that Houston had the best bench in the league and now Texas Coach Abe Lemons is ready to go one better.

"Hell, apparently they've got the best team, there's nobody left for them to beat is there," Lemons said Saturday night shortly after the Cougars had beat the regular season cochampions 92-90 in the finals of the SWC Basketball Tournament in the Summit.

Despite finishing third in the SWC regular season, the Cougars now advance to the first round of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) playoffs as the SWC representative at Tulsa, Okla.

"Men, I've got blood on my pants leg and I don't know where it came from," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said after his team had turned in its second thriller in as many nights. "It must have come from my heart at the end of the game."

Houston, which one night earlier had dispensed with fourth ranked Arkansas 70-69 in the tournament semifinals, did in fact battle its way through the tournament with the help of superior depth.

Senior center Mike Schultz was Mr. Inside and sophomore sharpshooter Ken Williams played Mr. Outside and the Off-the-Bench Gang was paced by Mark Trammell and George Walker.

"I thought we played hard but with their big guy on the inside and that little one outside shooting, it makes things a little difficult," Lemons said.

Texas, which drew a bye into the tournament finals, took the early lead but the Cougars took the lead in the first half shortly after Trammell bounced off the bench to hit two straight buckets that started the Cougars toward a 47-41 halftime lead.

"I didn't want this to be my last game," Trammell said. "Everyone was playing positive. Texas played hard, we played hard, but it came up Houston.

In the second half, Texas' Jim Krivacs, only two of 12 in the first half, finally regained the form that made him the No. 2 scorer in the SWC. He finished with 25 points to lead all scorers and Ron Baxter hit 24 more.

Despite the second half shooting heroics of Krivacs and Baxter, the Cougars went into the final 28 seconds with a 90-86 lead before a four-point play by All-SWC guard John Moore almost pulled it out for the Longhorns.

With Houston leading 92-86 and five seconds to play, Cougar Charles Thompson was charged with deliberately fouling Moore as he made a basket with five second to play.

Moore then sank two free throws that narrowed it to the final margin but that's where the Longhorns' season ended.

Lemons said playing in Houston was an advantage for the Cougars although they do not play their home games in the Summit.

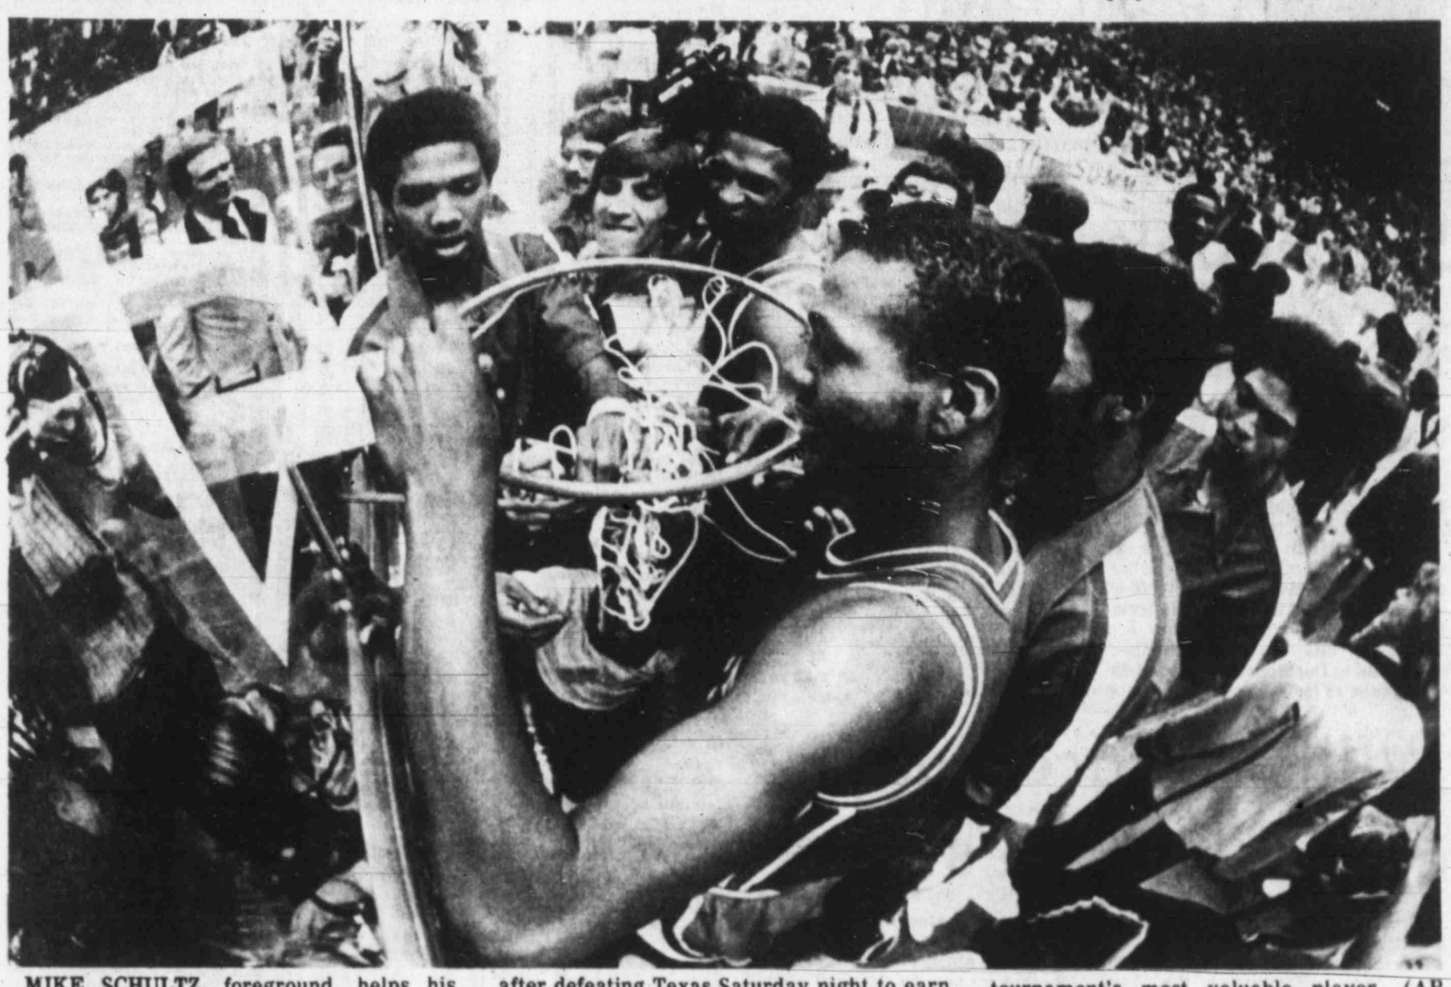

"It's bad enough having to play Houston in their home," Lemons said. "But you wait, (Arkansas Coach Eddie) Sutton will think of something. He'll figure some way to have us playing in Fayetteville."

Lemons gave the Cougars plenty of praise however. "They are a good team," he said. "We couldn't handle them inside. They were just too strong. You don't play hully-gully with Houston and expect to win."

Amidst the uproar of the Houston dressing room, Schultz, voted the tournament's outstanding player, sat with a net draped around his neck.

"We have a great team," he said. "There's no reason we can't win the NCAA. That's why we play basketball, to go to the NCAA playoffs. The NIT (National Invitation Tournament) was nice but we went there last year and were ready for better things."

And those better things start with the first round of the NCAA at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Mac McLendon finally wins one

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Mac McLendon has spent 12 long years on the pro golf tour and, in that time, he's heard lots of locker room conversations.

"I've heard players say they'd won and they really weren't playing well. Well, I just put that down as a lot of bologna.

"Now I know what they're talking about.

"I don't know when I've hit the ball worse," he said after closing rounds of 69-68 in Sunday's 36-hole wind-up had given him a 2-stroke victory in the Florida Citrus Open Golf Tournament, only his third tour title.

"Any player who wins is fortunate," he continued. "But I was really fortunate. Every time I got tied up in the trees I had an opening. I could advance the ball, even put it on the green."

And then there was the putting. The slender man from Birmingham, Ala., used only 111 strokes on the rain-softened greens for the week.

In essence, McLendon said, he changed from his old, open stance to a more conventional, upright position.

It produced a 271 total, a whopping 17 strokes under par. "I've never been more than 12 under par before," he said. "I'm more proud of these four rounds than any golf I've played in my life. It's always been a stumbling block to me to shoot those real low scores. Now I know I can do it."

His victory, worth $40,000 from the purse of $200,000 and assuring him of spots in the Masters and Tournament of Champions, actually was more comfortable than the two strokes might indicate.

He started the double-round wind-up, necessitated after Friday's play was washed out, in a tie for the top with Australian David Graham. McLendon established sole control after the morning round and wasn't headed again.

Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw and Hale Irwin all made challenges but none could catch him. Graham, who took a 72 in the morning, came on late in the bright, sunny, chilly day with a late birdie-eagle-birdie-birdie burst to claim second with a closing 66 and a 273 total.

Kite and Crenshaw, former teammates at the University of Texas, tied for third at 274. Kite had closing rounds of 69-70 and Crenshaw 69-68. Irwin, a third-place finisher three times this year, was fifth this time at 275 after Sunday rounds of 69-68.

Arnold Palmer, who shared the first-round lead finished 71-71 for 280. Lee Trevino had 73-70—279.

Austin gains golf title

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — American Debbie Austin shot a final-round 73 Sunday and won the Australian Women's Golf Championship by 10-strokes.

Miss Austin's rounds of 70, 70 and 73 gave her a 213 total and earned her about $4,000.

Another American, Donna Caponi Young, was second at 223 with rounds o 74, 73 and 76.

Third, one stroke behind Miss Young in third spot, was Chako Higuchi of Japan, who had rounds of 73, 77 and 74 for 224.

"This is easily my biggest winning margin and one of the most gratifyinr victories of my career because it is the first outside my country," Miss Austin said after the tournament.

The big disappoinetment of the tournament was defending champion Jan Stephenson, a Sydney player.

Miss Stephenson, 26, finished with a 5-over-par 79 folowing earlier rounds of 76 and 77 to finish 19 strokes behind Miss Austin.

Tigers cash in on NCAA berth

By The Associated Press

The Missouri basketball team has been waiting all season for a winning streak. And now that the Tigers finally have one, they can't wait to keep it going.

"I think we'll do a good job representing the Big Eight Conference in the NCAA playoffs," says Missouri Coach Norm Stewart. "I really do. Our record doesn't count. Really, we're a better club than our record indicates."

For the record, actually, the Tigers are the only team in the NCAA playoffs with a sub.-500 mark this year, despite winning three straight games in the Big Eight playoffs.

"At first I couldn't imagine us going this far, but I could see in one of the earlier games of these playoffs against Iowa State that we had something," noted Missouri's Clay Johnson after helping the giant-killing Tigers to a 71-68 overtime victory over Kansas State Saturday night in the finals of the Big Eight playoffs.

That left Missouri with a lackluster 14-15 record, but hardly a humble attitude.

The surprising appearance of Missouri in the prestigious playoffs for the national championship reflects a widespread trend. Only in one instance this past weekend did the regular season champion win its league playoffs, Creighton in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Bluejays edged Indiana State 54-52 Sunday on Rick Apke's jump shot with two seconds to play, capping a busy weekend that established all but one berth in the NCAA playoffs. The only team missing in the playoffs is the representative from the Mid-American Conference, which could be decided tonight when favored Miami of Ohio meets Eastern Michigan.

Houston was almost as surprising an NCAA entry as Missouri. The Cougars also played a giant-killing role and on successive nights, knocked off fourth-ranked Arkansas and No. 12 Texas. The Cougars finished their climb to the SWC summit with a 92-90 victory over the Longhorns Saturday night.

Regular season champions were also missing from the winner's circle is the Ohio Valley Conference, Atlantic Coast Conference, Metro Conference, Eastern Eight, Southern Conference, Pacific Coast Athletic Association and the Big Sky Conference.

Western Kentucky defeated Austin Peay 77-69 in overtime in the finals of the Ohio Valley Conference playoffs; Duke defeated Wake Forest 25-77 in the ACC finals; Louisville edged Florida State 94-93 in the finals of the Metro Conference playoffs; Villanova beat West Virginia 63-59 in the Eastern Eight; Furman hammered Marshall 69-53 in the Southern Conference; Cal State-Fullerton took a 64-53 decision over Long Beach in the PCAA and Weber State turned back Montana 62-55 in overtime in the Big Sky.

La Salle defeated Temple 73-72 in the finals of the East Cost Conference playoffs; New Mexico, the nation's eighth-ranked team, won the Western Athletic Conference championship with a 93-74 victory over Wyoming and Penn clinched the Ivy League title by beating Cornell 98-74 while Columbia was losing to Princeton 59-42.

In the ECAC playoffs for Eastern at-large berths, St. John's won the Metropolitan division with a 65-63 victory over Army; St. Bonaventure topped Virginia Commonwealth 63-61 in the Upstate New York-Southern division and Rhode Island upset 18th-ranked Providence 65-62 in the New England region.

In other games Saturday, top-ranked Kentucky routed Nevada-Las Vegas 92-70; second-ranked UCLA whipped Southern Cal 91-78; No. 3 Marquette edged No. 16 Detroit 80-77; No. 6 DePaul outscored 13th-ranked Illinois State 96-84; Dayton upset No. 7 Notre Dame 66-59.

Connors continues net domination

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — No mean aspirations for Jimmy Connors, the scrappy big kid who's gobbling up titles to make up for a compartively lackluster 1977, dominated by Bjorn Borg and Guillermo Vilas.

"Well, like I said, I want to re-write the record book. I'd like the seventies to be the Jimmy Connors era," the 25-year-old left-hander said Sunday after beating Tim Gullikson 7-6, 6-3 for his fourth U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championship.

It was also the fourth tournament title he has taken this year, following the Grand Prix Masters, the U.S. Pro Indoor and the Denver Grand Prix event. He lost the Grand Slam, an exhibition to Borg in January. But that is still five tournaments he has played in two months.

He played only 15 tournaments all last year and lost Wimbledon (to Borg) and the U.S. Open (to Vilas). Connors was the Wimbledon champion in 1974 and the U.S Open titlist in 1974 and 1976.

Connors took the National Indoor title three times in 1973 and 1975, the years generally considered his finest.

NIT gets best of rest

NEW YORK (AP) — After the NCAA picked the "best", the NIT got the rest.

But, actually, it wasn't so bad with such teams as Texas, Illinois State, Detroit and Georgetown among the crowd in the nation's oldest post-season basketball tournament.

Those four nationally-ranked teams were among 16 picked Sunday by the NIT selection committee in probably one of the strongest and undoubtedly one of the most intriguing fields in recent years.

Making their picks just hours after the NCAA completed the field for its playoffs, the NIT selectors grabbed an armful of successful teams — many of whom saw daylight in the Top Twenty at one time or other this season.

The worst record in the field belongs to South Carolina, at 16-11. But supporters point out that the Gamecocks, as a representative southern independent, play one of the toughest schedules in the country and in fact finished the regular season with a flourish.

There is speculation, of course, that South Carolina was a sentimental choice because of Coach Frank McGuire. This may be the last season for the venerable McGuire, a New York product who has carried on a love affair with this city despite his defection to the South many years ago.

Also included in the field of the 41st NIT are Utah State, Nebraska, Temple, Virginia, Fairfield, Dayton, Army, Rutgers, Indiana State, Virginia Commonwealth and North Carolina State.

Although there were no snubs of the NIT this time, as there had been in the past, there was dissatisfaction expressed by some of the participants. Detroit Athletic Director Dick Vitale, for one, indicated some unhappiness at being passed over by the NCAA tournament committee.

"I'm just very disappointed," said Vitale. "I'd be a liar if I told you differently."

Detroit Coach Dave Gaines, similarly hoping for an NCAA bid, expressed some fear that his players might be affected by a letdown.

"It may be a little more problem getting the kids up for the NIT because we thought we should have gone to the NCAA," Gaines said. "But it's their job to be ready when they walk on the floor — and they will be ready.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons did not appear to be entirely thrilled with NIT participation, either.

"The players wanted to play and so did my assistants (Barry Dowd and Steve Moeller), so we're playing," said Lemons. "Dowd's all excited. I'm going to put him in charge this week. It's a bowl game for him."

If the colorful Lemons ever gets past the first two rounds and makes it to Madison Square Garden for the semifinals and finals, he is certain to be a crowd pleaser in New York.

Lemons was here in the NIT 11 years ago when he was coaching at Oklahoma City University and basketball fans with long memories may recall the show he put on. When Duke dominated the first half against his team, Lemons made the Chiefs scrimmage each other, shirts vs. skins, at intermission.

Texas, which finished the Southwest Conference regular season tied for the league chamionship and then suffered an upset in the playoffs, was the highest ranked of the teams at No. 12. The Longhorns, who have a 22-5 record, will play host to Temple, 24-4, in a first-round NIT game on March 10.

Illinois State, 24-3, a powerful midwestern independent ranked No. 13 in the country, will play another of the first-round games against Indiana State, 21-8, at the Sycamores' arena on March 10.

Detroit, 24-3, ranked No. 16, will host Virginia Commonealth, 24-4, on March 9. Independent Georgetown, 21-6, the country's No. 17 team, will open its quest for the NIT title at Virginia, 20-7, an Atlantic Coast Conference team, on March 8.

Utah State, 21-6, a Western independent, plays at Nebraska, 21-7, of the Big Eight on March 8. Fairfield, a Connecticut independent which has fashioned a 22-4 record this year, will open at independent Dayton, 18-9, on March 10.

Army, 19-8, and Rutgers, 21-6, two of the East's stronger independents, will play at the Scarlet Knights' gym on March 9. North Carolina State, 18-9, the second ACC team in the field, will play host to South Carolina in an opening-round game on March 10.

The quarter-finals also will be played at regional sites, to be determined by the outcome of the opening-round games. The semifinals wil be held at the Garden on March 19 and the championship game on March 21.

Temple, winner of the first NIT in 1938, and Dayton are the only two former champions in the field.

West regionals hold big powers

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Loaded with such heavyweights as Kentucky, UCLA, Arkansas and Marquette, the Mideast and West regionals have emerged as the super powers of the 1978 NCAA basketball tournament.

Nine of the first 11 teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty landed in the Mideast and West. The East and Midwest regionals, in contrast, contain only five members of the Top Twenty.

"There is real strength in the Mideast and West regionals," conceded Wayne Duke, Big 10 commissioner and NCAA basketball committee chairman, in announcing the pairings and at-large berths for the 32-team tourament.

Defending champion Marquette, Southwest Conference co-champion Arkansas, Big Eight titlist Kansas and Metro State power Florida State were among the 11 at-large teams picked by the six-man committee, whose task this year, Duke said, was "the most difficult it has ever been."

Among the notables left out were No. 12 Texas, which tied Arkansas in the SWC; No. 13 Illinois State, No. 16 Detroit and No. 17 Georgetown.

The committee chose 11 at-large teams and five squads received automatic berths but were seeded as at-large entries.

The four at-large berths in the West Regional went to North Carolina, 23-7; Arkansas, 28-3; Kansas, 24-4, and Fullerton State, 21-8.

Marquett, 24-3; Syracuse, 22-5; Providence, 24-7, and Florida State, 23-5, were picked to fill out the Mideast Regional.

In the East Regional, the committee picked Indiana, 20-7; St. Bonaventure, 21-7; Rhode Island, 24-6, and LaSalle, 18-11.

At-large entries in the Mideast Region are DePaul, 25-2; Notre Dame, 19-6; Utah, 23-5, and St. John's, N.Y., 21-6.

The three Eastern College Athletic Conference regional champions — St. John's, Rhode Island and St. Bonaventure — were automatic qualifiers but seeded as at-large teams, as were Fullerton State, the Pacific Coast A.A. titlist, and LaSalle, the East Coast Conference champion.

Automatic qualifiers were seeded based on their conference's tournament record the past five years and at-large teams were seeded according to their won-lost records this season.

Metcalf leaves NFL

TORONTO (AP) — National Football League star Terry Metcalf has signed with the Toronto Argonauts and the Canadian Football League team is expected to announce its new acquisition at a news conference Monday, the Toronto Globe and Mail said in Monday's editions.

The newspaper said the signing came after the Argos had given the St. Louis Cardinal player a quick tour of the city before settling down to negotiations.

"He is very impressed with Toronto and we are very impressed with him," said Bill Hodgson, Argos majority owner.

Metcalf, 26, an all-purpose running back, played out his option with the Cardinals. He arrived in Toronto Saturday night with his agent, Richard Bennett.

Metcalf had been reported seeking a salary of $300,000 a year in earlier talks with other NFL clubs. The Globe and Mail reported that his deal with the Argos would pay him a salary of $100,000, plus bonuses worth another $100,000 a year.

In St. Louis, Cardinals operations director Joe Sullivan said Sunday that Metcalf had priced himself out of the NFL. He said the Cards had arranged a trade with the New Orleans Saints, who were very interested in obtaining Metcalf until they learned he wanted $300,000 a year.

The Argos, burned badly with the signing of U.S. college star Anthony Davis two years ago, say they feel justified in spending big money on Metcalf because he is a versatile, proven veteran.

Lee Rebels dominate 5-4A cage selections

Dee Dee Poole, Midland Lee junior forward, was named the Most Valuable Player while Karen Washington, Abilene High, was named sophomore of the year as the District 5-4A coaches picked their all-league basketball team.

Winning berths on the first team were Schilla McCallister and Debra Kittle at forwards and Carla Goodley and Leisha Watkins at guards from the Lee district champions.

Midland High, which finished runnerup to the Rebels, landed Beth Thomason at forward and Kim White at guard.

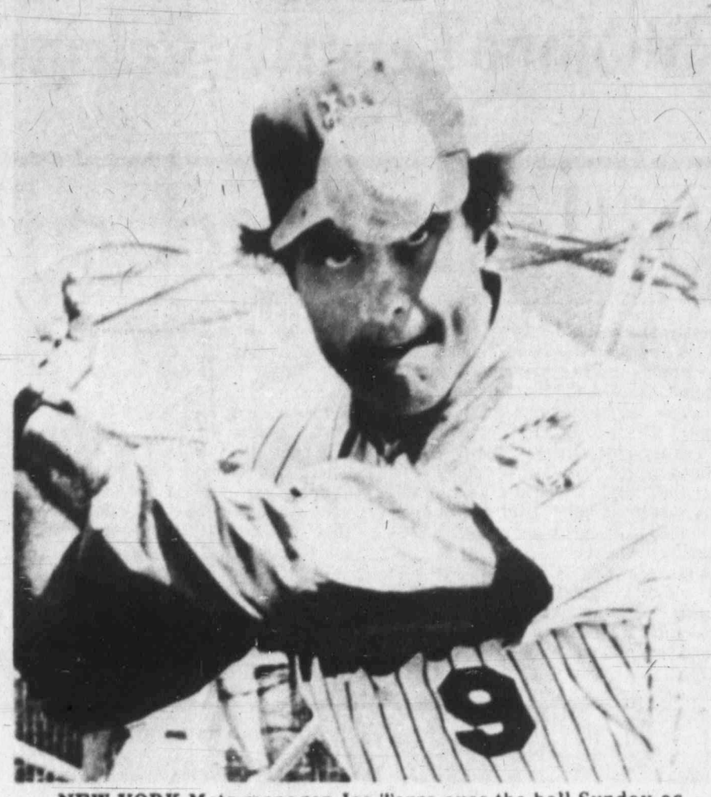

Coach Shirley Stephenson's Rebels made it to regional last weekend and were eliminated by El Paso Parkland.

Lee finished the season with a 24-11 record.

Willis to face Eagles as Rebels eye streak

The Robert E. Lee Rebels seek their fourth straight baseball victory today when they entertain the strong Class AAA Pecos Eagles at the Lee diamond at 4 p.m.

Pecos bombed Odessa Permian last week, 16-4, and is the favorite to win the District 2-AAA crown again for the fourth time in the last five years.

Coach Ernie Johnson plans to pitch Terry Willis today against the Eagles and then in Tuesday's game with Lubbock Coronado in Lubbock, may call upon Mark Denny who has been moved up from the junior varsity to fill the loss of senior Mike Richard who had knee surgery earlier this week.

Lee holds a 4-1 win over Hobbs, N.M. and swept two from Coronado in Midland Saturday by scores of 7-6 and 11-1.

Midland High, with a 1-2 record, travels to Snyder Tuesday for a game with the Class AAA Tigers.

Midland lost to Snyder and then split a doubleheader Saturday with Lubbock High.

Following games on Tuesday, the Rebels and Bulldogs will prepare for the 4th annual Tournament of Champions at Cubs Stadium with El Paso Burges, Lubbock Monterey and Duncanville joining them in the big two-day round-robin meet.

Cardinal tour may be cancelled

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A three-day St. Louis Cardinals' tour of the Dominican Republic in a fortnight will be cancelled if the native promoter fails to forward a guarantee within 72 hours.

Bing Devine, general manager of the Cards, emphasized Sunday that Wednesday's deadline was arranged to accommodate the Dominican promoter, Jose Tejeda. The latter has failed to deposit a longoverdue $25,000 check in a St. Louis bank, Devine said.

Industrial areas face stricter cuts in power

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

Utility and government officials in parts of the industrial East and Midwest say they will order stricter power curtailments following the United Mine Workers' rejection of a proposed contract.

Deeper power cuts, which could slice the paychecks of millions of Americans, appeared to be the only hope for coal-hungry power companies already burning costly imported oil by the shipload and buying expensive out-of-state electricity.

"The utilities are now in a very precarious position," said Simon McHugh, energy adviser to acting Gov. Blair Lee of Maryland. "I regret to say that some further steps will have to be taken, and it looks like sooner rather than later."

He said the current 10 percent cut in power to many industrial customers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia likely would be increased to 30 percent.

Meanwhile, officials in Michigan, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Alabama readied calls for voluntary conservation and considered mandatory cutbacks.

Michigan officials said rotating blackouts of two hours at a time might be ordered if coal deliveries do not resume in a few weeks.

But no areas were in imminent danger of being blacked out, and some non-union coal was being delivered. George Lentz, a utility-industry official, said the eight hardest-hit states — Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and parts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland — had about 20 million tons of coal.

At normal consumption rates, that would last six weeks, but some utilities had less than a 20-day supply and several local generating plants were almost out of coal, Lentz said. It could take up to two weeks for coal deliveries to resume upon ratification of a contract.

Street lights have been off in Columbus, Ohio, since January; lighting on major highways has been cut in West Virginia and St. Louis; lights have been dimmed and cafeterias closed in Maryland schools.

Government and industry officials warned that the economic ramifications of the strike were growing.

"In the near term, some time toward the end of this month, we may be looking at as many as 1 million people unemployed in the affected region of the Midwest," Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Sunday. "If the strike were to continue into the later part of April, we would be facing up to 3½ million people unemployed because of the direct effects of the lack of power in the area."

Tens of thousands of workers already have been laid off, and even when the strike ends, economic reverberations will continue.

"It's a no-win situation," said Paul Wagner, a spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, an industry group. "If the strike isn't settled, people will be out of jobs and children will be locked out of school. When it is settled, if it ever is, the ripple effects of the cost of the settlement will be felt throughout the country."

Bill to levy 5 cent tax

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Editorials praise it or thunder against it. Doctors laud it. Bartenders ridicule it.

The subject of all the attention is a proposal which would levy a nickel tax on all drinks served at bars to build a $27 million fund to help local governments pay for the arrest and prosecution of drunken drivers.

The bill was authored by Rep. John Arlandson, who was called "sick" by one letter writer. Arlandson said he is pessimistic about passage of the bill but noted it had called attention to Minnesota's chronic problem of drinking drivers.

Department of Energy official will address 31st SEG meeting

One of the featured speakers for the 31st Annual Midwestern Exploration meeting of the Society of Exploration Geophysicists will be Robert R. Aitken, acting chief of the Crude Oil Division, Off of Oil and Gas, Office or Resource Applications, in the Department of Energy.

Aitken will address the delegates at noon Thursday in the Midland Hilton. He has held his present position Since Oct. 1, 1977, when he transferred from the Federal Energy Administration to the DOW.

A native of Iowa, Aitken studied geology at Iowa State University before becoming the exploration geologist for the Westgate-Greenland Oil Co. in Wichita, Kan., in 1948.

Aitken became an independent consulting geologist in 1951 and for the next 12 years was active in the U.S. Mid-Continent and Canadian oil fields, based in Wichita.

From 1963 to 1970, Aitken was director of Eastern Hemisphere operations for the Drilling Equipment Division of Westinghouse Air Brake.

During that time he lived in Europe and became familiar with many of the drilling, petroleum and groundwater problems of every country in Europe and the Middle East and parts of Africa.

Aitken is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, the Kansas Geological Society and the Belgian Society of Geology, Paleontology and Hydrology.

The exploration meeting, hosted by the Permian Basin Geophysical Society, is to be headquartered in the Midland Hilton.

The technical program will be presented in the Cinema I theater in downtown Midland.

Fred D. Meyer of Midland, with Geo Search Seismic Processors, is general chairman for the meeting. He said the registration is $30 per person for delegates and $15 for their wives, and $15 for students.

Registration will be from 1 to 5 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. Wednesday in the lobby of the Midland Hilton, and from 8 a. m. to 12 noon Thursday in the same place.

All persons who plan to attend the technical sessions must register, Meyer said.

Midland Mayer Ernest Angelo and PBGS President Don Hibbitts, with Pennzoil Co., will make welcoming remarks at 9 a. m. Thursday in the Cinema I Theater.

The keynote address by E. J. Northwood of San Francisco, president of the national SEG, will follow at 9:15 Thursday.

Immediately preceding the convention, the SEG will sponsor a day and a half school to be held in the Permian Ballroom of the Midland Hilton.

This school will be held from 8 a.m to 5 p.m. Tuesday and from 8 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Subjects of the two-part school are "The Convolution Model of the Reflection Seismogram" and "Progress in Measurement of Subsurface Seismic Parameters: Velocity, Density and Specific Attenuation."

William C. Collins of Midland is the publicity chairman for the exploration meeting.

The technical sessions, following the theme "Update on Exploration Expertise," will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, and from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Maryland residents take dim view on floodlights

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — Powerful security floodlights were burning around the wooded perimeter of Camp David where President Carter was spending a weekend relaxing in his retreat and receiving the discouraging reports of the coal contract voting.

But just down the hillside, local businessmen and residents were turning down thermostats and turning off lights to help stretch dwindling coal supplies.

And some of them were turning off to President Carter.

"I'll bet you he's not suffering, but he might at the next polls," said Margaret Moxley.

The problem stems from efforts by Maryland officials to convince everyone, from residential customers of the Potomac Edison Co. to its large industrial users, to use less electricity. Among those customers is Camp David, where Marine Corps guards feel the powerful lighting is necessary for presidential security.

One of the biggest employers in this rural town about 60 miles north of Washington is the Cozy Motel and Restaurant. Mary Freeze, who runs it with her son, Jerry, has replaced 75watt light bulbs with 25-watt bulbs, set thermostats to 58 degrees and cut off one of the two deep freeze units and two refrigerators in the kitchen.

That means, among other things, that salads can't be made a day in advance. Because of dim lighting behind the bar, Mrs. Freeze must use a flashlight when reaching into a cooler for a bottle of beer. Copies of a local newspaper story about electricity curtailments were placed in motel rooms to remind guests about the reductions.

"I can't understand why we're in the shape we're in," Mrs. Freeze said Sunday afternoon while awaiting restaurant customers.

Should Carter have acted sooner to end the coal strike by government intervention?

"I really think he should have," she said.

British health care system termed good by doctors, visitors

EDITOR'S NOTE — President Carter plans to send to Congress this year a proposed national health insurance bill. Here's a look at Britain's national health program, its benefits and pitfalls after 30 years.

LONDON (AP) — Pilgrims to Canterbury 500 years ago enjoyed rudimentary hospital care along the way.

For a couple of groats — silver coins worth four pennies — monks provided aid and buried those who didn't survive it.

That was the start of a tradition of health care in Britain that eventually led doctors to accept the idea of state medicine.

The first national health insurance act took effect in 1912. In 1944 the British Medical Association, a doctors' union, welcomed the declared intention of the World War II coalition government to "ensure that every man, woman and child can rely on getting all advice, treatment and care which they need."

To that end, the National Health Service was introduced on July 5, 1948. Through payroll taxes, medical care was made available to all Britons. The only out-of-pocket costs are minimal fees for prescription drugs and dental and eye care.

All but 2 million of the 55 million Britons use the service provided by a majority of the 25,800 general practice physicians.

Foreigners working in Britain pay a national insurance tax, but because Britain doesn't have the machinery to charge patients, visitors requiring emergency care are treated on a good samaritan basis.

The National Health Service was founded on the notion that once total health care was provided, general health would improve, reducing demand. "In fact, the demand is endless and the cost has exploded," says Anthony Thistlewaite, chief spokesman for the British Medical Association.

"Before the NHS, people put up with some illness and disability. Now improved medical techniques have made possible cures for ailments for which was there no treatment in the past.

"People are living longer — there were 2.4 million persons over 65 in 1901 and 9.5 million now, and the over-79s, who take a higher proportion of NHS spending than any other age group, increased from 1.8 million in 1951 to 2.8 million in 1974."

Last year the service cost $11.7 billion, almost 11 percent of Britain's total state spending. Seventy percent of the cost is for wages for 900,000 employees who make the NHS Britain's biggest employer.

To help defray costs, employees pay a 5.7 percent payroll tax and employers contribute another 8.75 percent. A worker averaging $140 a week pays about $8, but he and his family get more than just health care. The comprehensive program includes unemployment and sick pay, retirement benefits, disability pensions, welfare payments, aid to children. It also can cover the cost of funerals and provide home heating for the elderly.

A shortage of money in Britain's sluggish economy means too few hospitals and old folks' homes are being built. Forty percent of the 468,000 NHS hospital beds are occupied by the over-65s, many because they have nowhere else to go. One result is a waiting list of 591,000 persons to enter hospitals for elective surgery.

"The NHS needs another $3.8 billion a year," Thistlewaite says. "We think the cash could be raised by a levy on those able to afford it. Other countries put more of the burden of payment on the users of health services."

If a shortage of money is taking its toll on the NHS, it is also affecting physicians. Says Dr. Lottie Newman of North London: "Doctors' standards of living are falling behind Europe and the United States."

Despite problems of inflation and complaints of crowded waiting rooms, red tape and uneven standards of care, the people who use the program and those who have observed it believe it is worthwhile.

Joseph A. Califano, U.S. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, praised it after a visit last November.

Margaret Range of Brattleboro, Vt., who now lives in London, spoke of relief in getting skilled care for her 10-year-old son who has a brain disease. "He needed six major operations in the States," she said. "It took us six years to pay for just the first two."

Although she said her son was treated in Boston by the "best brain surgeon in the world," she has access to an equally qualified man in London "without the worry and tremendous financial hardship."

"If we are sick our GP (general practitioner) will call on us. And there are health visitors for pre-schoolers and geriatrics, community nurses sent out by GPs for home visits who put on dressings and give backrubs, social services like delivery of meals to the old and disabled, and home help to do chores. There isn't such co-ordination in the States."

BRIDGE

Best play depends on where you live

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The best way to play a bridge hand may depend on where you live. Almost any play is safe in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries, but you have to watch your step in countries with a Latin tradition.

Suppose you are South. You let West win the first trick with the jack of diamonds. He continues the suit, and East wins. East leads a third high diamond through you.

You get off to a good start by discarding a spade. You win the next trick and lead the queen of hearts through West.

When West plays a low heart, you go into a long stew. You think deeply and look suspiciously at both opponents. Finally you play dummy's ace of trumps, hoping to catch the singleton king.

WHAT FALLS

The king of hearts does not fall, but you may if your partner is a vigorous type. After a play of this kind in a Latin country, your best procedure is to keep moving. A moving target is harder to hit.

Don't play for a singleton king when you are missing two low cards in addition to the king. It's against percentage and unfair to your insurance company.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S K 8 4; H Q 10 9 8 6 4 3; D 6 2; C A. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is not quite worth an opening bid of one heart and is far too good for an opening bid of three hearts. Pass first and show your strength, if possible, by bidding later.

Snowbirds migrate south to escape bitter winter

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Life holds fewer joys more unalloyed than lookng out the window of a Florida-bound jet and watching snow blowers move across the runways at Kennedy airport.

A refugee mentality grips the waiting passengers, transforming them from passive helpless orphans of the storm into clawing, pushing aquisitive animals. Even with advance seat selection, assuring everyone his and her place in the smoking or no smoking section of their choice, everyone rushes to board the minute the flight is announced, as if it were the last train out of Berlin and the advancing Russians were at the gates.

"The temperature in Sarasota is 59 degrees and our flight time will be two hours and 24 minutes," the captain announces.

"Fifty nine! That's cold!" cries the woman on my right. She already has donned her rhinestone studded sunglasses and carries on her lap a rolled up rattan mat for a siesta on the sand.

"What do you mean cold?" demands the man on the aisle who has just swapped his woolen ski cap for a jaunty golfing fedora advertising the coconut palm-fringed fairways of Harbor Isles. "It's 50 degres warmer than southern Connecticut at this very minute and she's complaining. That one would cry at Hitler's funeral."

The big silver bird climbs up over the frozen glitter of Jamaica Bay, chocked with miniicebergs and moves its shadow over the snowy white beaches of the Rockaways. The parkways stretch emptily out to Long Island, dotted here and there with automobiles marooned in the deep drifts.

"Winter is no time for old people," sighs the old man in the seat behind. 'Edna and I have been coming down to Florida for 39 years, starting off in a trailer camp at $14 a week. This time we're not coming back. There were nine inches of snow on the air conditioner this morning. We measured it. Getting too old to wait for spring. We'll buy a condominium and stay."

Another snow bird giving up the annual migration, settling for the warmer habitat. According to th U.S. Census Bureau estimates, released in the Sunday newspapers handed out by the stewardess, Florida gained 1.6 million residents in the past seven years, a population jump of nearly 25 percent, many of them, no doubt, snow birds like Edna and her husband:

"Please fasten your seat belts," the captain advises over Raleigh, N.C. "We're encountering a little warm air turbulence."

"Just so long as it's warm air, I don't care how much we bounce," says the ruddy faced priest at the window seat by the emergency door. "It took me nine hours to drive from Binghamton (N.Y.) to the airport, not counting the time it took to dig the car out. I had to dig it out twice because the snow plow went by when I went back into the rectory to get the luggage."

The farms below suddenly no longer are bleak and white, and a large lake somewhere in the Carolinas is flecked with sailboats. Our refugee mentality thaws to the cammaraderie of shared blizzard experiences.

"I almost set fire to the garage door trying to unfreeze the automatic lifting thing," contributes the man in the golf hat. "I don't care how diseased those palm trees are, I'm going to kiss the first one I see. Say, Miss, will you change that bourbon and water to a gin and tonic? I might as well get my liver ready for the tropics. They say the quinine keeps down your chances of getting malaria."

The woman who might have had hysterics at Hitler's obsequies scoffs at his medicinal humor. "Irving put away enough quinine on New Year's Eve to spend the rest of the winter in a Brazilian rain forest. The doctor says he's got a liver like an umpire's chest protector."

"Now, Gloria," he admonishes her, "You know a little nip is supposed to be good for your circulation. They say Bellevue has never had a heart attack death in the alcoholics ward. Look what happened to your brother when he gave up drinking."

"It was from shovelling wet snow, not from going on the wagon. A little exercise couldn't hurt you instead of giving that kid $2 just to make a path out to the driveway."

Civil service once again Carter target

WASHINGTON (AP) — When in doubt, the savvy candidate knocks the federal bureaucracy in order to score a political point or two.

It is big and expensive, it is unpopular with the voters, and it is not equipped to knock back.

That makes the civil service a target too tempting to resist, the more so because there are enough horror stories about bureaucratic bungling, red tape and inefficiency to validate most any complaint.

So it is not surprising that, as President Carter has noted, there is widespread criticism of federal government performance.

"The public suspects that there are too many government workers, that they are underworked, overpaid and insulated from the consequences of incompetence," he said in proposing an overhaul of the civil service system.

That suspicion has been around for a long time. The president says that such sweeping criticism is unfair to dedicated, conscientious federal workers.

But he made his initial political headway as the candidate who ran against Washington and its establishment. In those days, his own criticism of the government was rather sweeping.

"Many Americans have begun to question whether government can be made to work at all — whether we can serve basic human needs without proliferating wasteful, bloated bureaucracies," Carter said as a candidate. "The challenge before the nation is to cut the bureaucracy down to size and reverse this corrosive decline of confidence."

The president put it a bit more gently, saying he has a promise and an obligation to help rebuild the faith of the people in a government that is trustworthy, efficient and responsive.

"I have seen at first hand the frustration among those who work within the bureaucracy," Carter said. "No one is more concerned at the inability of the government to deliver on its promises than the worker who is trying to do a good job. ...

"We have to recognize that the only way to restore public confidence in the vast majority who work well is to deal effectively and firmly with the few who do not."

Simply put, he wants to make it easier for the government to fire them. As the system stands now, the process can take three years, wasting time and money and diverting the efforts of the manager who wants to get rid of an incompetent employee.

Carter notes that out of a work force of more than two million, only 226 people lost government

He also wants pay raises used more effectively and selectively to reward top performance. As matters stand now, the rewards often go with longevity, even if the performance is mediocre.

At the same time, Carter's proposals appear aimed at confronting another civil service problem, one that often has frustrated his predecessors.

The bureaucracy sometimes has been an anchor against change, retarding or even blocking the policies or programs of elected officials.

Endorsing the Carter program, the National Civil Service League said it would "make the federal civil service a more flexible and effective instrument to carry out the policies of the president."

That is a delicate point, since the civil service is supposed to be both insulated against political intrusion and responsive to the instructions of elected and appointed policymakers who, after all, are politicians.

As president, John F. Kennedy is said to have complained wryly that there were some things he'd like to do but the government wouldn't let him.

Richard M. Nixon sought to bend the civil service to his will with a program which, had it succeeded, would have made it a political apparatus to do his administration's bidding.

Poerner says LoVaca settlement realistic

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad commissioner John Poerner said Sunday the agency's final order in the LoVaca gas case was designed mainly to force a settlement between the gas supplier and its customers.

Poerner, who was not a commission member when the order was approved Dec. 12, was interviewed on the radio-television news panel show, "Capital Eye."

The order instructed LoVaca Gathering Co. and its corporate parent, Coastal States Gas Producing Co., to sell gas at contractual prices of about 25 cents per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf). It also required a $1.6 billion refund to LoVaca customers.

Gas suppliers currently sells for about $2 per mcf.

Asked if order was realistic, Poerner said: "Well, I think the order was intended to do one thing, and that was to, first, force these people to come to a bargaining table and reach a settlement."

He added that the commission also was trying to say it did not believe in stepping in to relieve any party to a contract from the obligations it imposed.

Since the order was issued, LoVaca has reopened settlement talks with its major customers, and a proposed settlement has been approved by the last holdouts.
