Farley's death

CHICAGO — Comic Chris Farley followed the path of his idol John Belushi right to the end, dying of a drug overdose at age 33. The Cook County medical examiner on Friday said an accidental overdose of morphine and cocaine killed Farley in his Chicago apartment. Farley's weight, his slapstick physical comedy and appetite for food, drugs and drink prompted many comparisons to Belushi, who died of an overdose in 1982.

Sentencing

Former Midland YMCA gymnastics coach Gary Seth was formally sentenced Friday to 7 1/2 years in the Texas Department of Corrections for aggravated sexual assault of a child and indecency with a child. After 238th District Judge John Hyde pronounced sentence, Seth was taken into custody. Seth was convicted of the charges in mid-December, but was allowed to spend the holidays with his elderly parents. "Evidence showed that his father was critically ill and that this might be his last Christmas," Hyde said. "It was primarily a consideration for the father." Hyde said that Seth was not considered a flight risk. "He had been free on bond for a number of months and never failed to appear." Seth pleaded guilty to the charges, and asked that his punishment be set by a jury. The assault occurred on Aug. 1, 1987, when the then-12-year-old-girl was allowed to sleep overnight at Seth's home. The girl did not report the incident until nearly 10 years later.

Kennedys gather to mourn another loss

■ Michael Kennedy died on New Year's Eve after slamming headfirst into a tree while playing football on skis.

Associated Press

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. — Kennedys, Shrivers, Lawfords, Cuomos and other members of the extended family gathered at the Kennedy compound Friday to pay last respects to Michael Kennedy, who in just a year went from high promise to scandal to death.

With the flag at half-staff, the white Cape Cod summer home where the family has rallied in times of crisis for decades was the site of a wake for the 39-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Ethel Kennedy.

Michael Kennedy died on New Year's Eve after slamming headfirst into a tree while playing football on skis with members of the family on Aspen Mountain in Colorado.

Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II and Robert F. Kennedy Jr., both brothers of Michael; Ethel Kennedy; and Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, Michael's sister and Maryland's lieutenant governor, were among those arriving for what has become as much a Kennedy ritual as a victory rally or an elbows-flying game of touch football.

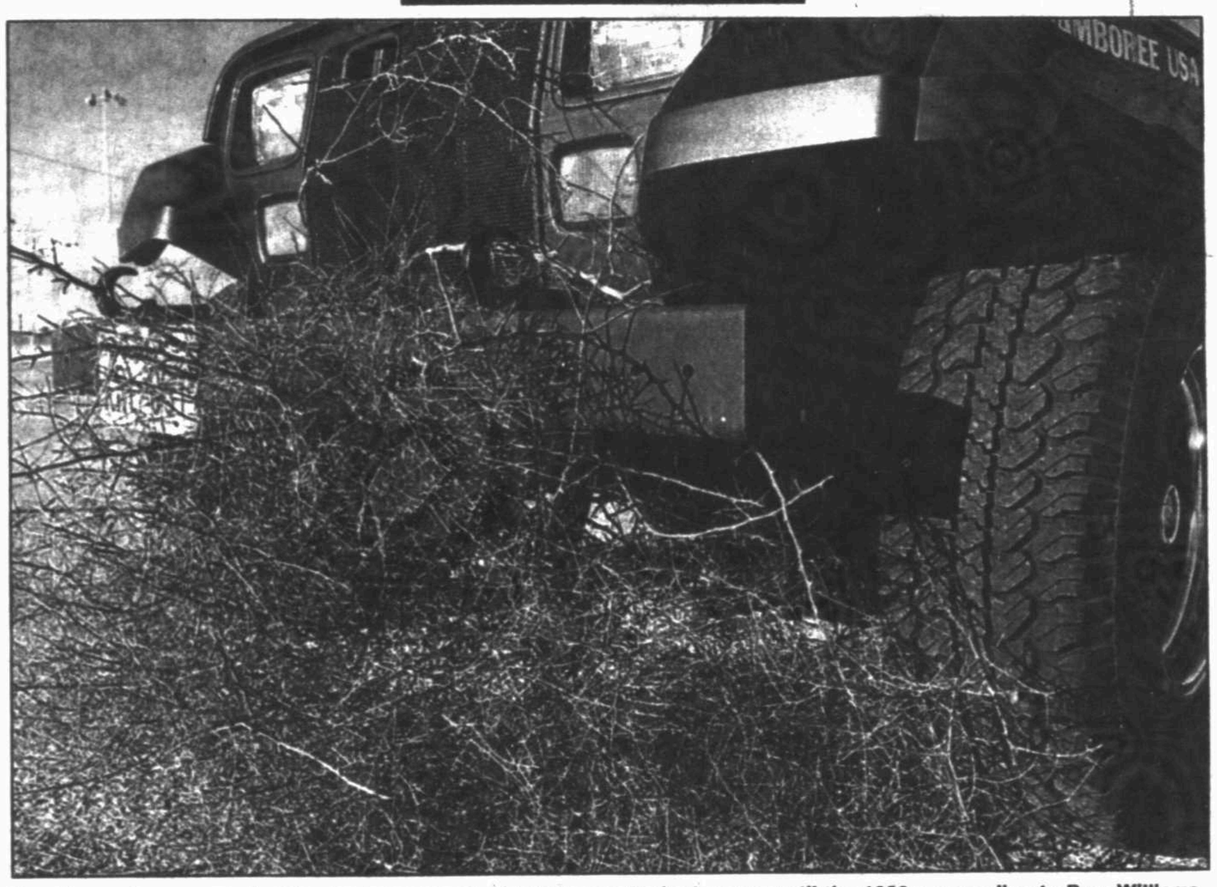

Maria Shriver, a cousin of Michael's, arrived with husband Arnold Schwarzenegger at the Barnstable Municipal Airport near the Kennedy compound, as did Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., actress Glenn Close, a family friend, and Irish activist Paul Hill, Michael's brother-in-law.

Tumbleweeds, a symbol of the American west, didn't even exist in the area until the 1880s, according to Burr Williams, education director of Sibley Learning Center at Hogan Park. Russian farmers unwittingly brought the weeds' seeds with them when they immigrated to the United States in the 1870s.

Weeds tumbled into Texas lore in late 1800s

They just keep rollin' along. Few symbols are as important to the West Texas and Wild West motif as the tumbleweed.

The dead tumbling plant carries the seeds for others of its kind as it rolls across the streets of Midland and other West Texas cities.

What would the desert region be like without the rolling annoyances?

Truth is, the plants didn't even exist in the area until the 1880s, according to Burr Williams, education director of Sibley Learning Center at Hogan Park.

Russian farmers unwittingly brought the weeds' seeds with them when they immigrated to the United States in the 1870s, he said. The seeds were mixed in with crop seeds that they planted in a North Dakota colony.

Tumbleweeds in the next 15 years worked their way across the western United States and into Texas lore. The scientific name for the weed —also called Russian thistle — is Salsola kali.

Williams said the weed probably made its first appearance in Texas in the 1880s and in other parts of the Southwest in the early 1900s.

"So if you see an old Western movie with tumbleweeds rolling around town, uh-uh. The tumbleweeds weren't around that quick," he said.

The plants only live about a year or until the first freeze kills them. When the plants die, their roots weaken. The first strong wind will uproot them and they roll across the ground and roads. The rolling motion will free seeds stored in the branches, he said.

"They roll around and drop their seeds, then they get hooked up in a barbed wire fence," Williams said. "They are extremely prolific. They don't germinate very well unless the soil is pretty much bare and pretty much loose."

Candidates file for 15 races in Midland County

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Twenty-five candidates in 15 races — from district court judgeships to justices of the peace — have filed for election in Midland County.

Each is seeking his or her party's nomination in the March 10 primaries. Two of the candidates are Democrats; 23 are Republicans. Filing deadline was 6 p.m. Friday.

The winners in the primaries will be on the ballot in the Nov. 3 general election.

Four candidates are vying for the $60,000-a-year Midland County judgeship. The current judge, Jeff Norwood, a former political consultant and member of the executive staff of the Railroad Commission of Texas, is not seeking re-election.

Seeking the county judgeship are attorneys Steve Hershberger and Bill Morrow, who is also a former Midland City Councilman; former Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, and Dianne Anderson, a business consultant and former member of the Midland Independent School District board.

In lieu of paying the $600 filing fee, Mrs. Anderson said that she had collected more than 500 voters' signatures, which the law allows.

"It was all to show grassroots support and I am willing to work hard," she said.

The county judge serves as the presiding officer of the five-member Commissioners' Court and is the county's chief fiscal officer. The commissioners oversee the county's $21 million budget.

The most sought-after post, with five candidates, is Commissioner's Court Precinct 2, currently held by Republican Guy McCrary. He is not seeking re-election to the $30,000-a-year post.

Vying for Precinct 2 are businessmen Mike Bradford and Charles A. Davis III; Bill Jackson, a real estate agent and former teacher, principal and MISD board member; City Councilwoman Pat Schneider; and Robert Vanderpool, an independent geologist.

Campaigning for the Precinct 4 commissioner's post are the incumbent, James Brezina, an independent geologist, and Randy Prude, an engineer.

The only two Democrats who filed are vying for Precinct 3 of the Justice of the Peace Court: incumbent, Michael Wallace, and Hilario "Lon" Dominguez, an assistant fire marshal. Dominguez pre-

Consumers won't see many changes with end of tire recycling program, dealers say

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midlanders who buy new tires this year should expect few changes since the state halted its scrap tire recycling program at the end of 1997, local tire dealers say.

"The consumer will not bear any additional costs for disposal of tires," said Nick Rodriguez, manager of Chaparral Tires on east Front Street. "It won't cost any more money for the generator. As before, it's still difficult to dispose of a tire. It's not going to be any easier to dispose of a tire because the program has ended."

He said the only real change will be that the money collected by the generators and tire transporters during the recycling program won't go to the state but instead to those who process the discarded tires and find an end use for them.

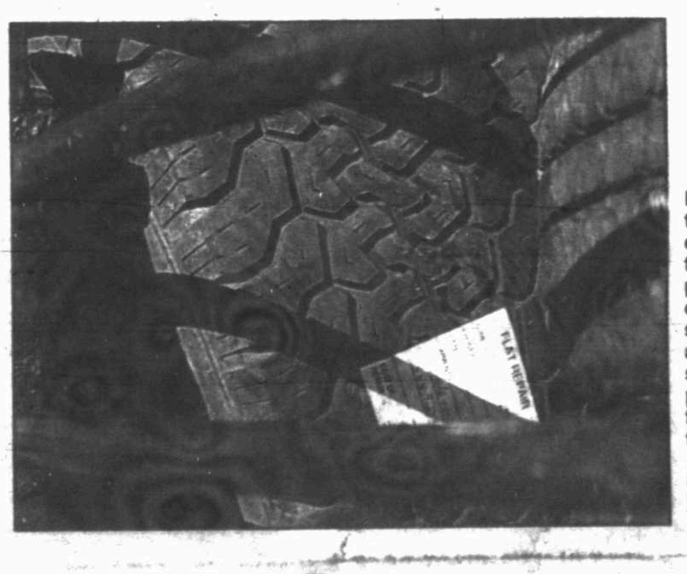

"We're cutting out the middle man basically," he said.

Jimmy Mowles of Bill Williams Tires is less upbeat, fearing that the move will compound the area's problem with discarded tires.

"We've argued with the state all these years. They didn't think we had a problem with discarded tires, but we do have a problem and this will compound that problem."

He said it is a no-win situation for the

Even though the state has eliminated its tire recycling program, the change should not affect consumers' disposition of their old tires.

Police watch for more attacks on Catholics

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Troops and extra police patrolled Belfast on Friday to protect Catholics after two attacks by pro-British Protestant gangs. Northern Ireland's police chief warned more killings were likely.

"We have had dreadful murders in recent days, and sadly I cannot say that is the last murder we're going to witness," Chief Constable Ronnie Flanagan said.

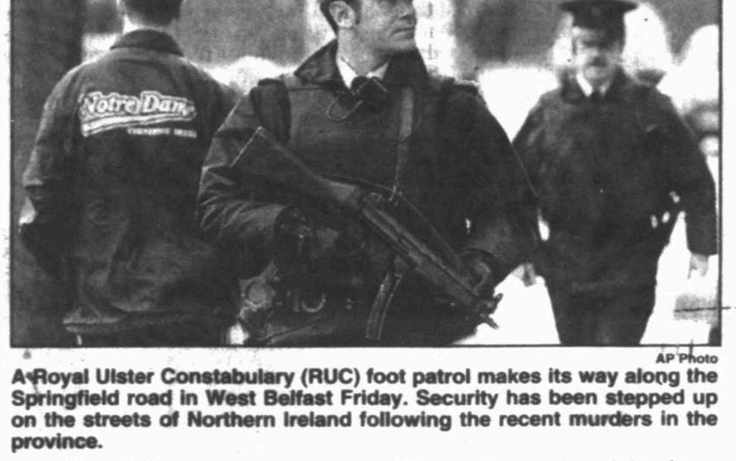

"We have increased our patrolling significantly to thwart that threat, but we need all the public assistance we can get," he said after meeting Northern Ireland Secretary Mo Mowlam.

The two decided to put British soldiers back on the streets during daylight to support police, instead of just at night. The army was taken off patrol during the day just six weeks ago as part of the peace process.

"The situation is serious but it is not out of control," Mowlam said.

The crisis was triggered by an IRA splinter gang's assassination of a notorious militant, Billy "King Rat" Wright, inside Northern Ireland's top-security prison last weekend.

His outlawed Loyalist Volunteer Force took revenge in shooting sprees at a rural hotel Dec. 27 and a north Belfast pub on New Year's Eve, killing two Catholics and wounding eight.

AP Photo

A Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) foot patrol makes its way along the Springfield road in West Belfast Friday. Security has been stepped up on the streets of Northern Ireland following the recent murders in the province.

The Loyalist Volunteers are opposed to negotiating a peace settlement for Northern Ireland. They also oppose the cease-fires called by other pro-British paramilitary groups in 1994 that allow their representatives to participate in the talks.

As darkness fell Friday, police in gray armored cars monitored the junctions between Protestant and Catholic neighborhoods in Belfast.

The deployments might deter some attacks. But because 90 percent of Northern Ireland's 1.6 million people live in predominantly Protestant or Catholic areas, its 12,000 police officers would have to camp out on practically every corner to stop sectarian killers.

Flanagan urged civilians to pass on information about the attacks confidentially to the police's secretive Special Branch, which develops networks of paid informants, taps phones and conducts surveillance.

But Catholics, moderates and Irish Republican Army supporters alike, expressed little confidence that the predominantly Protestant police would do enough to protect them.

That suspicion strikes at the heart of the Northern Ireland conflict, which began in the late 1960s when Protestant police and civilians opposed Catholic civil rights marches in what was then a Protestant-governed state. The British government took direct control in 1972.

Many Catholics doubt that the Loyalist Volunteers have been acting alone. They think members of both traditional pro-British gangs — the Ulster Defense Association and the Ulster Volunteer Force — are using the breakaway group as a cover.

"These gunmen who kill ordinary Catholics call themselves a lot of names. ... It's farcical," said Martin Morgan, a Belfast councilman for the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party.

"The common denominator is that, whatever they choose to call themselves when they kill, the police seem to know who all their important members are — but rarely seem to be able to stop them," he said.

Spiritual leader attacks United States

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's spiritual leader renewed harsh attacks on the United States on Friday, saying Washington was intent on destabilizing the Islamic republic.

Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's accusation comes days before CNN interviews moderate President Mohammad Khatami in what Iran is billing as an address to the American people.

The cleric's sharp words contrasted sharply with the president's unprecedented moves toward reconciliation with the United States and illustrated the power struggle between hard-line and moderate factions in Iran's ruling hierarchy.

U.S. leaders "want to build a gap between the people and Iranian leaders and they want Iran to turn to the West and the United States," Khamenei said in a Friday sermon.

He accused Western nations of using "guileful propaganda tricks" against Iran. "They would like to bring about instability and insecurity in the nation," he said.

Khatami said last month that he hoped to have a dialogue with "the great American people" in the not-too-distant future.

CNN said Friday that it plans to interview Khatami on Wednesday. Iran has characterized the interview as Khatami's chance to speak to the American people.

"A dialogue with the American nation certainly does not mean opening the door to the American government," the hard-line Qods daily said in an editorial Thursday.

"There are no signs of change in the position of the leader (Khamenei) and the Iranian nation regarding relations with America," the paper said.

It said Khamenei had the last word on foreign policy and that Khatami would act according to the policies "dictated by the leader."

Khamenei leads a powerful faction in the government that vehemently opposes relations with the United States.

Although Khatami has limited room to maneuver, he is very popular among Iranians — who would generally welcome a resumption of ties with the United States.

Also Friday, an Iranian legislator said he planned to disclose the names of alleged agents working for the CIA.

Mohammad Reza Faaker said the ambassador of "the former Soviet Union" had shown him the agents' identity cards.

Hong Kong concedes mistakes in slaughter as new flu case surfaces

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong conceded Friday it had done a sloppy job killing off its 1.3 million chickens, following sightings of bedraggled birds that somehow survived the slaughter and of dogs scampering off with carcasses.

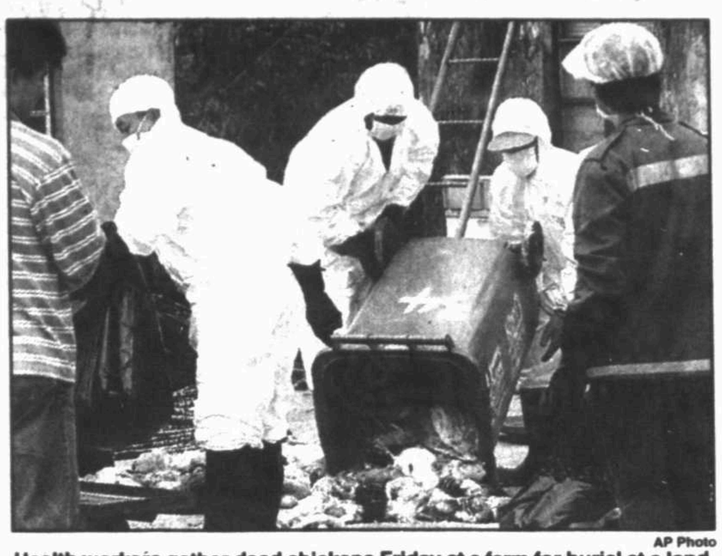

Scientists were testing a sampling of rats, cats and dogs to see whether other animals could have picked up the bird-flu virus from chewing on chicken corpses that were supposed to have been buried.

Television footage showed some chickens still strutting around after enduring what was supposed to have been a fatal gassing by carbon dioxide inside plastic bags.

The remains of some dead chickens were left in trash bags to fester instead of being carted off to a landfill. TV showed dogs pulling the possibly tainted carcasses out of sacks and running away with their finds, tails wagging.

Hong Kong leader Tung Chee-hwa, who won plaudits for his management of Hong Kong's tricky political transition to Chinese rule, was once again in the thick of it.

Tung said shortages of staff and equipment hindered the government's round-the-clock effort this week to stop the mysterious spread of bird flu to humans by killing off all chickens, which are believed to carry the virus.

AP Photo

Health workers gather dead chickens Friday at a farm for burial at a landfill following the slaughter of Hong Kong's chickens. The government killed 1.3 million chickens from Monday through Wednesday, trying to stamp out the A H5N1 virus that has sickened at least 15 people and killed four. Six possible cases also have been reported.

"Improvement needs to be made, and we are going to make these improvements," Tung said after a private emergency meeting of the Executive Council, his top advisory board. "We are looking at these things very urgently."

Civil servants slaughtered roughly 1.3 million chickens between Monday and Wednesday, trying to stamp out the A H5N1 virus that has sickened at least 15 people — a new case was confirmed Friday — and killed four. Six possible cases also have been reported.

The outbreak is the first time the bird flu has turned up in humans, and health officials are still trying to figure out just how the virus made the leap from fowl to people.

For three days, government workers stuffed hundreds of thousands of live chickens into bags and then pumped the bags full of gas, slitting birds' throats when they ran out of gas. The government has also banned the import of new chickens.

But one TV network showed a chicken peeking out from a torn garbage bag at a dump site. Another bird was seen wandering nearby.

Other photos depicted cages of live chickens on small farms, their owners still awaiting the arrival of government slaughter teams. And carcasses spilled from torn garbage bags that has been left on farms, despite a plan to cart them off to landfills.

Residents or rural areas complained that dogs and rats had gotten to the chicken carcasses, prompting fears they might spread the virus.

Dr. Margaret Chan, health director, acknowledged that the killing and disposal of chickens "could be done better."

The Agriculture and Fisheries Department, which oversaw the slaughter at farms, said it would finish up its work and look into complaints that chickens were left alive and carcasses were unaccounted for. The department set up a hot line for such reports.

Seeking to demonstrate the enormity of the task, the government issued statistics on the effort thus far: Nearly 1,300 tons of carcasses — 95 percent of the total — had been buried at landfills by Thursday, a statement said.

About 1,500 employees using 250 vehicles were transporting remains to landfills, and were "working very hard" to finish the job, the government said.

A government employee who took part in the slaughter was being tested for the bird flu after developing pneumonia, but initial results were negative, the Hospital Authority said.

Soap opera challenges values in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Each weeknight, Mexican television viewers follow the twists and turns of a middle-aged woman's life in a soap opera that challenges deep-set values — and is bringing a new network into prominence.

"Mirada de Mujer," or "A Woman's Glance," is the story of one woman's triumph in bucking the macho society typical of Latin America. The break from the usual sugary romances of Mexican "telenovelas" has caught the attention of millions of people, including lots of men.

The show tells the story of Maria Ines, a 50-year-old mother played by Angelica Aragon whose husband of 27 years leaves her for his mistress. Though her mother and children advise her to wait patiently for him to return, Maria Ines rejects tradition and falls in love with a man 17 years her junior.

In Mexico, that's tantamount to a one-woman revolution.

"The man has always been dominant in Mexican society," said Martin Luna Ortigoza, vice president for programming and marketing at TV Azteca, the network that produces the show. "In 'Mirada de Mujer,' everything is in reverse. In a macho society, this is like lime in the eyes."

The show has sparked a lively discussion about Mexican values, challenging a double standard that makes it acceptable for men to cheat on their wives but not vice versa.

"Mirada" also offers frank discussions of sex, abortion, miscarriages and sexual harassment and it delves into such problems of daily life as loveless marriages, meddling in-laws, the loss of a job and alcoholism.

TV Azteca has been offering up such unconventional fare since 1993, when the government put a set of national channels up for bid.

The network first disrupted tradition with another soap opera, "Nada Personal," or "Nothing Personal," which spun a romance featuring an independent-minded young woman around drug scandal and political assassination.

The approach helped Azteca become the first network to break the ratings stranglehold of communications giant Televisa. So successful has Azteca been that it raised $605 million by selling 22 percent of its stock to the public in 1997 — the largest offering in Mexico of the year.

The network intends to expand into the rest of Latin America this year. It owns a television station in El Salvador and a UHF license in Guatemala and has agreed to buy a 75 percent stake in a Chilean television station for $10.4 million.

Azteca plans to produce 12 soap operas in the coming year, up from six in 1997 and three in 1996, Luna said. The network expects to produce 90 percent of its prime-time programs, up from 80 percent in 1997.

Azteca's freshness shows up in other areas.

While Televisa traditionally fills its news programs with government pronouncements, Azteca has zeroed in on juicy scandals and what the man in the street thinks and feels.

"There's a crisis of confidence toward the people in power," said Azteca's news director, Ricardo Medina Macias. "People reject 'Mr. Shirt-and-Tie' who says everything is great, that the economy is recovering. People don't believe it."

Azteca reporters are expected to talk to ordinary people, not just government officials, Medina said. A story about a government program to aid the rural poor must include interviews with farmers. A story about debtor relief must include the views of debtors. In Mexico, that's new.

Azteca's main evening news program, "Hechos," has climbed past Televisa's "24 Horas" in the ratings for greater Mexico City.

Medina predicts Televisa will mimic Azteca's style when it completes a promised overhaul of its news department next week.

While Televisa focuses its programming on the upper class, Azteca's soap operas deal with hot-button topics like interracial romance and police complicity in drug trafficking.

"We don't hesitate to tell things like they are," Luna said. "That has never happened in this country. It's a very simple formula: Present reality."

When the network decided to create "Nada Personal," it tapped Epigmenio Ibarra, a former TV combat correspondent who covered the civil wars in El Salvador and Nicaragua in the 1980s and had no soap experience.

Ibarra followed that success with "Mirada de Mujer." His third creation, "Demasiado Corazon," or "Too Much Heart" is a continuation of "Nada Personal" that debuted in October, said his assistant, Francisco Ortiz.

"It's about love," Ortiz said, "and it also treats issues from the country's reality."

1997 brought record number of rebellions in Brazilian prisons

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Sorocaba prison rebellion in which more than 600 hostages were held for three days closed a year of near-daily inmate revolts in Brazil — evidence of growing trouble in the nation's overcrowded prisons.

The rebellion at Sorocaba, 55 miles west near Sao Paulo, was only the last of 178 rebellions to occur in Sao Paulo state in 1997. A Brazilian human rights group estimates there were close to 400 inmate revolts across the nation; there is no official count.

"The whole situation is a time bomb," said James Cavallaro, director of Human Rights Watch Americas in Brazil, which is preparing a report on the state of Brazil's prisons.

With police arresting more criminals than ever, and the justice system notoriously slow, few believe things will be any better in 1998.

Nationwide, 144,484 prisoners are crammed into a system designed for just 68,597.

Brazil's penitentiaries, which hold convicted criminals, are filled, forcing authorities to send convicts to jails meant to hold suspects awaiting trial.

In 1997, 31,241 prisoners were held in jail houses designed to hold only 15,000, said Jose Afonso da Silva, head of the Sao Paulo State Security Bureau.

That was an increase from 28,501 jail inmates the year before, when only 96 prison rebellions were reported, he said.

Cavallaro said in jails, "it's not uncommon to have 160 people in a space for 30 or 40. In the penitentiaries, the situation is only slightly better."

Brazil's penitentiaries hold 30,000 prisoners though they are intended for only 17,500.

Though jails are designed to hold people for only a few days, convicts often pass months with little medical assistance, inadequate kitchen facilities and no space for exercise or education.

Prisoners often have to sleep in shifts and make due with little access to legal assistance, said the Rev. Francisco Reardon, a Boston-born priest and coordinator of a Catholic prison outreach program.

As a result, in the majority of rebellions prisoners demand nothing more than their right to be transferred to a penitentiary.

United States weather

Party to mostly cloudy skies were the norm from California to the Carolinas Friday. Rain fell from Texas to Indiana and the Plains were raked with high winds.

Areas from northern Texas to Nebraska saw gusts to 45 mph.

After a record warm day across the northern Plains on New Year's Day, much colder air filtered into the region. In Minot, N.D., after a record high of 50 degrees Thursday, temperatures hovered around 7.

The southern Plains enjoyed much warmer temperatures, with readings into the 60s and 70s in some locales.

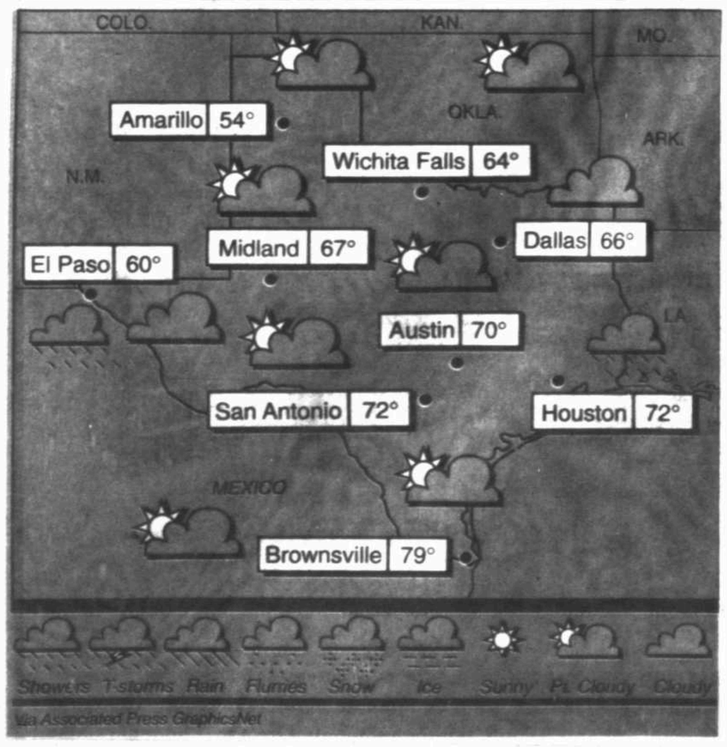

Rain and mountain snow fell from central California to Montana.

A storm system was to blow through the Rockies and toward the northern Plains in the evening, bringing rain and snow.

Fair and mild weather was to dominate the South and Mid-Atlantic.

Temperature across the Lower 48 ranged Friday from an early-morning low of minus 4 in Cut Bank, Mont., to an afternoon high of 78 in McAllen, Texas. The lowest wind chill was minus 37 in Cut Bank; the highest heat index of 79 was recorded in Marathon, Fla.

END: Dealer feels discarded tires to be problem

(From 1A)

customer and for the generator. "Instead of paying the state, I'll have to pay a trucking company to pick them up."

At present, he said, he has no plans to increase the fees once mandated by the state.

Kerry Fender of Dan Fender Tires agreed that the change "is going to be a pain, but it's always a pain when the state's involved."

He said he will continue to charge a disposal fee. The amount will depend on what he has to pay to have the tires carried away. But, he noted, "the customer will have the option of taking the tires with him or leaving them with me for $2 apiece. From what I can see, $2 is close to what it'll cost me to have them hauled off; the bigger tires will probably cost more."

Shannon Vinson, senior assistant manager at Discount Tire, predicted that the change will generate more paperwork but not higher fees.

"It will benefit the customer because if he doesn't leave the tires, he doesn't pay the fee. What I'm afraid it will do is, we'll see people who keep the tires so they won't have to pay a fee per tire will wind up throwing them in the dumpster just to keep from paying $8. It's going to be interesting to see what impact the change will have. It's amazing what people will do to save a couple of dollars."

Vinson went on to note that generators such as Discount Tire will be more accountable for the tires. The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission said it will continue a registration and manifest system to track used tires until they are recycled to prevent unauthorized dumping.

Like other dealers, Jerry Stanaford, co-owner of Big 3 Tire, said he doesn't plan to increase the disposal fees unless he has to pay more to have the tires hauled away.

"The only way the fee will increase is if I have to pass along transportation charges," he said.

Rodriguez of Chaparral Tires said, "our biggest fear is that now fly-by-night operators will come in, tell the generator they can dispose of their tires for 50 cents a piece but don't have an end-use for the tires or the proper processors to dispose of the tires and will just store them elsewhere."

He said it may take three to six months for the dust to settle and, "from what I'm gathering, this may drive up the price a little more in the long run."

Until the Texas Legislature discontinued the program in its last session, tire dealers collected for the state $2 for each new automobile tire, $3.50 for a new truck tire and $1 for each used tire. With the new year, landfills were authorized to accept split, shredded or quartered tires.

The TNRCC will retain authority over disposing of used tires and has been given $9 million to clean up nearly 300 existing waste tire dumps.

"The customer's best bet is to pay the disposal fees to get rid of the tires and keep them legally dumped so we can keep them off the side of the road and out of dumpsters," Rodriguez said. "Midland has done a great job of keeping the city clean of tires."

The TNRCC is also encouraging local recycling programs to get involved with tire recycling, encouraging the use of recycled tires as playground material, in road construction and as landscape mulch. Shredded tires are also usable as daily cover or in collection systems in landfills. A newly developed use is in on-site sewage facilities or septic systems, using shredded tires in place of gravel in the build lateral lines and leach fields, at lower costs, according to the TNRCC.

The TNRCC noted that in the past two years, there has been a 50 percent increase in the use of recycled tires in landfills and a 64 percent jump in the use of tire-derived fuel. The state's recycling rate over the last two years was 94 percent.

According to the TNRCC, the state scrap tire recycling program, in its five years of existence, eliminated 600 illegal tire dumps containing 20 million used tires, and more than 208 million pounds of scrap tire material were diverted to recycling markets in the first six months of 1997 alone.

MOURN: Kennedy's funeral Mass to be held today

(From 1A)

Some family members arrived in Massachusetts on a jet provided by actor Kevin Costner.

The wake and private viewing at the home Friday will be followed by a funeral Mass today at Our Lady of Victory Church in Centerville, near the family compound. Kennedy will be buried in Brookline, near his brother David, who died of a drug overdose in 1984.

Cardinal Bernard Law of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston met privately with the family for about 10 minutes before the wake.

"They're very strong, they're very united, they're very supported by one another," he said. "I was very moved in my encounter with Ethel and her own profound sense of faith."

Kennedy's siblings emerged from their home shortly before 4 p.m. Friday to thank friends and the public for the outpouring of sympathy.

"The last two days have been very difficult ones for every member of our family, but we've been buoyed and supported by the tens of thousands of calls and communications from friends around the world," Robert Kennedy Jr. said.

Kennedy had been playing football, a family tradition that was introduced so famously by his father and uncles and was played with the famous Kennedy competitive spirit on the lawn at the Hyannis Port home.

But this version — played with a blue plastic football on skis — was more rough and tumble, and the resort ski patrol in Aspen was said to have warned the family on other occasions that the game was too dangerous.

In the waning late afternoon light, Kennedy, an expert skier, lost control and crashed into a tree in full view of dozens of family members and friends. He died at a hospital of head and neck injuries.

His death ended a year that began with talk he might make a run for political office after helping his brother Joe run for governor.

But Joe withdrew from the race after Michael was accused of having an affair with a teen-age baby sitter. Michael sought treatment for alcohol and sex addiction and separated from his wife of 16 years, Vicki.

Authorities decided against filing statutory rape charges when the former sitter — by then 19 — refused to cooperate.

Kennedy disappeared from the public eye but had met with a Boston public relations specialist in recent weeks to discuss ways of rehabilitating his image. He looked to 1998 as a new start.

Kennedy, a lawyer and Harvard graduate, took over the chairmanship of Citizens Energy Corp. from Joe in 1988. The corporation supplies home heating oil to the poor. Kennedy also managed the tough, successful 1994 re-election campaign for his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The Rev. Donald MacMillan, a family friend who officiated at the 1986 wedding of Caroline Kennedy, said Ethel's faith will help carry her this tragedy.

"For Ethel to have to endure such a loss is sad. But Ethel is a very religious woman, and she will do her best to carry the rest of them," MacMillan said. "The most tragic thing of all is his three children, all fatherless now."

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, a good friend of the Kennedys, will represent President Clinton at the funeral today.

Other Cabinet members planning to attend are Commerce Secretary William Daley, a longtime Kennedy family friend, and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo, whose wife, Kerry Kennedy Cuomo, was Michael Kennedy's sister.

In a scene reminiscent of former President John F. Kennedy, Joe Kennedy took a walk Friday on the beach near the compound.

"I'd just like to be left alone guys. Thanks," he said to reporters.

Workers remove snow fencing from around the Kennedy family burial plot Friday, at the Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline, Mass., where Michael Kennedy, 39, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, will be buried Saturday. Michael's brother, David Kennedy, who died of a drug overdose in 1984, is also buried in the plot.

ELECTION: Candidates file for Midland County races

viously sought the post that pays $35,000 a year.

County Clerk Alice Brown, who is seeking re-election to the $40,000-a-year post, is being opposed by Shauna Hodges Brown, who works in the county's criminal-justice system.

Seeking re-election unopposed are:

- Three justices of the peace — David Cobos, Precinct 1; Joe Matlock, Precinct 2; and George Zimmerman, Precinct 4.
- District court judges — John Hyde, 238th District Court; Dean Rucker, 318th District Court; and Willie DuBose, 385th District Court.
- Midland County court-at-law judges Al Walvoord and Marvin Moore;
- District Clerk Vivian Wood; and
- County Treasurer Julie Fry.

Michael Higgins, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said that local Democrats are "building the party from the ground up.

"We wanted to have candidates to file because we feel strongly that Midlanders deserve a second choice. It's the two-party system that helps make a great government," he said.

POLICE REPORTS

Dogfighting

ODESSA — An Odessa man was charged in federal court Wednesday with animal abuse, according to reports from the U.S. Attorney's Office in Austin.

The defendant has been identified as 55-year-old Jerry Don Branum.

The incident stems from a violation of the Animal Welfare Act. Branum and 22 other defendants were allegedly involved with individuals who used pit bulldogs to fight with one another "for purposes of sport, wagering or entertainment," according to reports.

"All of the charges filed ... relate to animal fighting venture involving pit bulldogs transported in interstate commerce," the report continues.

The charges stem from a three-year investigation launched by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Texas Department of Public Safety and Bastrop County Sheriff's Office.

An arraignment date was not available Friday.

LORE: Tumbleweeds good for fire, food

(From 1A)

The weeds are considered a nuisance by farmers and city folk alike.

"I don't really know anybody who likes them, other than those who like to eat them," he said.

When the plant is alive it can be harvested for a tasty meal.

"Until they're about 6 inches tall, they're best greens you can eat," Williams said. "It tastes better than spinach and turnips and all those things people eat."

There are other useful qualities to the plant, he added.

Dead tumbleweeds are also a good fuel for fires. They burn easily, although the smoke is thick and black and the weed burns fast. In fact, tumbleweeds have been known to feed grass fires in the Permian Basin.

"They burn pretty well except they burn too hot," Williams said. "You'll have 30-foot flames, and you can't get within 40 feet of it. It's really scary to fight a grass fire when there's a lot of tumbleweeds in it."

For the creative, there's other uses. Williams remembers decorating them as a child.

"We'd use them as a Christmas tree, paint them and put tinsel and the little balls on them."

OBITUARIES

James Riley

James D. (Jim) Riley, 83, beloved husband, father and grandfather went home to be with his Lord, Thursday, January 1, 1998, at his residence. He was born November 29, 1914, in Logansport, Louisiana, to E.C. and Floy Belle Riley. He married Mary Elizabeth Etheridge, September 10, 1942, in Tullos, Louisiana.

Services will be held 3 p.m. Saturday, January 3, 1998, at Crescent Park Baptist Church with the Revs. Johnny Dickerson and Barry Owens officiating. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Gardens. Arrangements are by Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors.

Mr. Riley graduated from Carlisle High School in Price, Texas, May 1934. He attended Kilgore Junior College and Texas A&M. On December 10, 1940, in Minden, Louisiana, he enlisted in the Army of the United States. During his time of service he was awarded the Good Conduct Medal, the Expert Rifle-man's Badge, the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal, the American Campaign Medal, and the World War II Victory Medal. He was honorably discharged as a first lieutenant on March 10, 1946.

He moved to the Odessa area and on February 11, 1947, began working for Stanolind Oil and Gas Company in North Cowden. After 33 years, he retired from Amoco Production Company on February 10, 1980, as a shift foreman.

He was an avid fisherman and also loved hunting. He was a former member of the Odessa Bow Club and also received a certificate of recognition in firearms training from Odessa College. While a member of First Baptist Church in Goldsmith, he was ordained as a deacon. After moving to Odessa in 1955, he became an active member of Crescent Park Baptist Church where he served as a deacon, Sunday School teacher to 13-year-old boys, training union teacher to 6-year-old children, taught in the Royal Ambassador program, served on various committees and was president of Baptist Men's Brotherhood. He also sang in the sanctuary choir and was a former member of the men's quartet.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Riley of Odessa; daughters, Sarah Beesinger of Odessa and Marsha and Bill Prince of Athens; granddaughter, Rachel and Trevor Richards of Tyler; stepgranddaughters, Carol and Frank Campise of Dallas and Denise Prince of Los Angeles; stepgrandson, Donald Prince of Dallas; sisters, Fern and Robert Sibley of Henderson and Maxine and Ray Earl of Mesquite, New Mexico; nephews, Bob and Lynn Sibley of San Antonio, Robert and Marsha Taliaferro of Henderson and Jim and Marie Taliaferro of Henderson; nieces, Brenda Sue Allred of Dallas, Sandra and Wayne Lane of Monticello, Arkansas, and Anne and Lee Ryden of Escondido, California; sisters-in-law, Marie Etheridge of Jena, Louisiana, Frances Brown of Monticello, Arkansas, and Lorna Etheridge of Monticello, Arkansas, and other relatives and a host of friends who loved and respected him.

He was preceded in death by his father and mother, E.C. and Floy Riley; a son, James Kenneth Riley; a brother, Alvin Lathon Riley; a sister, Doris Dorney; and a nephew, Steve Dorney.

If desired, memorials may be sent to Family Hospice, 618 N. Golder, Odessa, Texas, 79761 or Crescent Park Baptist Church Music Dept., 3002 E. University, Odessa, Texas 79762.

Pallbearers will be Robert Ricks, Augusto Albo, Frank Carrasco, Frank Carrasco Jr. Patrick Carrasco and Noe Gonzalez.

Antonio Yharte

Funeral services for Antonio Yharte will be 1 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 3, 1998, at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

He was born Sept. 23, 1899, in San Vicente, Texas.

He had lived in Midland for the past 77 years.

He was preceded in death by his wife, a son and his sister.

Survivors include sons, Jose Yharte, Isaias Yharte, Gilberto Yharte, Macario Yharte, Hermenjildo Yharte, Abraham Yharte, Adolfo Yharte, all of Midland; daughters, Cesaria Nativadad, Francisca Saenz, Teresa Rodriguez and Antonio Valles, all of Midland, Consuelo Estrada, of Marathon and Flora Gomez of Akerly; 65 grandchildren, 84 great-grandchildren and 26 great-great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Isaias Yharte Jr., Antonio Yharte, Marcario Yharte Jr., Presiliano Natividad Jr., Juanito Rodriguez and Jeremias Yharte.

Juanita Ortega

Funeral services for Juanita Ortega will be 10 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 3, 1998, at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

She was born March 8, 1942, in La Mula, Mexico.

She died in Odessa Wednesday, Dec. 31, 1997, after a short illness.

She is survived by her husband, Luis Ortega Sr., of Monahans; sons, Luis Ortega Jr., of Monahans and Oscar Ortega and Orlando Ortega, both of Odessa; a daughter, Silvia Ricks of Odessa; three grandchildren; brothers, Pepe Gonzalez of Big Lake, Pablo Gonzalez and Roberto Gonzalez, both of Midland, Gustavo Gonzalez of Odessa and Antonio Gonzalez of Presidio; sisters, Senorina Neyra of Saltillo, Mexico, Pilar Molinar of Odessa, Dominga Gonzalez and Ruth Carrasco, both of Midland.

Police arrest man after brief chase

Police arrested a man late Friday after a brief chase across Midland, officials said.

The incident started shortly after 8 p.m. on Neely Avenue. It ended around 8:35 p.m. near the intersection of Scharbauer Drive and Lamesa Road.

The driver, according to police, didn't give in to officers' attempts to pull him over. After almost 20 minutes of pursuit, police apprehended the man and charged him with evading arrest, a misdemeanor crime.

Midland County jail officials said that bond for the suspect, Thomas Doyle, would not be set until today.

Midland police have responded to at least one other evading call this week.

A brief vehicle pursuit came to an end late Tuesday after the suspect in the chase slammed into another car on U.S. Highway 80, police officials said.

The driver, 20-year-old Gerhard Nuedorf, was charged with intoxication assault with a motor vehicle and failure to stop and render aid, both third-degree felonies.

President appears to clinch victory in Kenyan elections

Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Daniel arap Moi, Kenya's president for 20 years, appeared to have clinched a fifth straight term Friday, but key rivals refused to concede defeat and demanded new elections amid widespread complaints of vote-rigging.

The first official but partial results released by the Electoral Commission in this week's vote had Moi leading with 39 percent to Mwai Kibaki's 33 percent. Raila Odinga was third, with 11.5 percent.

Kibaki said both he and Odinga were asking the commission to call new elections in 21 days because of numerous irregularities in voting and ballot counting.

"We do believe Moi is going to be reasonable," said Kibaki, Moi's vice president for 10 years. "The country is at a crossroads. We don't want to anticipate anything. We will take further steps when we get there."

'In our view, nullification of the just completed elections makes no sense. Let us have a new General Election in which there will be a chance for the people to truly express their wishes after the reforms, not before as some are suggesting.'
—the opposition SAFINA party

Eight people have been killed in election-related violence in Kenya's third multiparty elections since independence in 1963. Monday's vote had to be extended an extra day when ballot boxes failed to show up and ballots were sent to the wrong constituencies.

The painstaking process of counting the ballots by hand continued Friday after a third sleepless night for thousands of vote counters. Riot police were deployed Thursday to guard uncounted ballots.

Friday's results were based on returns from 126 of 210 constituencies. Complete official results were not expected until the weekend.

Unofficial tallies broadcast by the private Kenya Television Network gave Moi the requisite 25 percent of the vote in five of the country's eight provinces. He also had more votes than the other 10 candidates, and he won his parliamentary seat.

As in 1992, when Moi easily defeated a divided opposition, his 14 opponents apparently never considered fielding just one or two candidates against him.

"Those opposition leaders are to blame," said fruit and vegetable vendor David Ocheyo. "If they had agreed on just one candidate, we wouldn't be having five more years of Moi."

The Kenya Human Rights Commission blasted the "chaotic administration" of the general elections and called for a government of national unity "to address our present political crisis."

Kenyan and foreign observers have expressed reservations about how the vote was conducted but have stopped short of calling for a rerun.

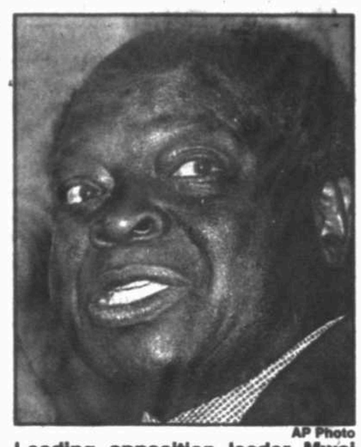

Both Kibaki and Odinga charged that widespread irregularities had affected "enough votes to make a difference," but they offered no specifics.

Moi's ruling Kenya African National Union party criticized the opposition leaders for "threatening chaos even before the results are announced."

The opposition Safina party, which was legalized only at the last minute, called Friday for all parties to negotiate a package of serious political reforms as the basis for new elections in two years.

"In our view, nullification of the just completed elections makes no sense," a Safina statement said. "Let us have a new General Election in which there will be a chance for the people to truly express their wishes after the reforms, not before as some are suggesting."

Eight of Moi's 22 ministers lost their parliamentary seats, but returns were too spotty to determine whether KANU would retain its control over Parliament.

Queens' pyramids opening to public

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — For centuries, tourists have come to marvel at the Great Pyramids of Egypt's ancient kings. Now, Egypt's queens are about to get a chance at equal time.

Three small pyramids beside the massive monument of the pharaoh Cheops — one for his mother and two for his principal wives — are being opened to the public this month.

Zahi Hawass, chief archaeologist at the pyramids, says the goal is both to preserve the 4,500-year-old ruins and to give visitors more to see at the Giza Plateau on Cairo's western edge.

"Tourists who come to Giza stay only a couple of hours," Hawass said in an interview. "They visit the Great Pyramids and the Sphinx and then they leave. The plateau has so much more, and we want to make that available to them."

In addition to the queens' pyramids, visitors also will be able to tour the newly refurbished tombs of 10 ancient noblemen later this month. No firm date for the openings has been set.

As part of a decade-long restoration project, Egypt's Supreme Council for Antiquities also has shored up the Sphinx and repaired the burial chambers of the three Great Pyramids — Cheops, Chephren and Mycerinus.

Promotion of the Giza Plateau is part of Egypt's effort to revive its tourism, which was devastated by an Islamic militant attack in Luxor that killed 58 foreigners in November. The number of people visiting the pyramids has plunged from 4,000 a day before the massacre to 700 now.

The three queens' pyramids are dwarfed — and sometimes shaded — by the nearby pyramid of Cheops, which soars to 452 feet.

The largest of the trio, the pyramid for Cheops' mother, Queen Hetepheres, once rose to a height of about 100 feet. But its smooth, limestone casing has been scavenged, exposing the jagged and crumbled underlying stones.

The other ruined structures belong to Cheops' wives Henutsen and Meryetes, who probably was the mother of Pharaoh Chephren.

Farley's death ruled accidental drug overdose

Associated Press

The Cook County medical examiner on Friday said an accidental overdose of morphine and cocaine killed Farley in his Chicago apartment.

CHICAGO — Comic Chris Farley followed the path of his idol John Belushi right to the end, dying of a drug overdose at age 33.

The Cook County medical examiner on Friday said an accidental overdose of morphine and cocaine killed Farley in his Chicago apartment.

Farley's weight, his slapstick physical comedy and appetite for food, drugs and drink prompted many comparisons to Belushi, who died of an overdose in 1982, and Farley openly considered Belushi an inspiration.

"The only comparison to Belushi is the 100 percent commitment to everything they did, and unfortunately that included their indulgences," said Charna Halpern, a friend of Farley's and director of the Improv Olympic theater school in Chicago where Farley studied during the 1980s.

Farley's brother found the comic's body Dec. 18 on the floor of Farley's apartment in the posh John Hancock Building.

A narrowing of the arteries to the heart was a significant factor in the death of the 296-pound, 5-foot-8 comic actor, Medical Examiner Dr. Edmund Donoghue said in a statement.

Belushi died in a Hollywood hotel from a combination of heroin and cocaine. A woman with him pleaded no contest to involuntary manslaughter and drug charges for giving him "speedball" injections of cocaine and heroin.

After the Improv Olympic, Farley went to Chicago's Second City comedy troupe, where Belushi also honed his talent. In 1990 Farley moved on to NBC's "Saturday Night Live" before branching out to movies, where he played witless but lovable slobs in "Tommy Boy," "Black Sheep" and "Beverly Hills Ninja."

Halpern said she didn't see Farley in his last week, but talked to him often.

"He knew he was having problems — he was getting nosebleeds. I think he thought he would just stop," Halpern said.

In the weeks since his death, news and tabloid accounts have featured numerous reports of Farley's last days, that he was drinking heavily at Chicago bars and using drugs.

A woman who identified herself as stripper Heidi Hauser was quoted as saying she was called to perform for Farley at his apartment and saw him use cocaine and heroin hours before his body was discovered.

She claims Farley passed out shortly before she left his apartment but was still alive. She said she had told her story to police. They refused to comment, saying only that the investigation is continuing.

Blood tests found Farley also had taken the antidepressant Prozac, and an antihistamine, but those did not contribute to his death, Donoghue said. It was not know if he had a prescription for the Prozac.

Traces of marijuana use also were found in his body, but no alcohol.

The comedian's father, Thomas Farley, had little to say about the coroner's report.

"I'm just getting over it," he said Friday from his home in Madison, Wis., where the comic grew up. "I know he's in God's hands now."

Court ruling prevents Baby Bells from jumping into long-distance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although a federal court ruling won't let all five regional phone companies jump immediately into the $80 billion long-distance business, AT&T took a beating on Wall Street on Friday amid worries the No. 1 long-distance company could be facing more competition.

The decision overturning a key provision of a 1996 telecommunications law also may spur a flurry of copycat lawsuits as Bell companies scramble to win free entry into the long-distance business.

There's agreement among the Baby Bells and the federal government that Wednesday's surprise ruling gives only two of the Bell telephone companies — SBC Communications and US West — an unobstructed path to compete in the long-distance market, assuming the ruling withstands certain appeals.

The U.S. government will ask the Texas court on Monday to delay the decision from taking effect. AT&T and MCI also are expected to seek the same relief.

The remaining Bells are likely to seek the same relief, telecommunications experts said.

Meantime, the Texas decision is not expected to have any immediate impact for telephone customers.

The nation's largest Baby Bell, Bell Atlantic, whose local phone territory spans from Maine to Virginia, attempted to piggyback onto SBC and US West's case on Dec. 30 — the eve of the historic ruling.

If the Texas court grants Bell Atlantic's request, "Then we're hopeful it would apply to us," said spokeswoman Susan Kraus. The company expects to find out in the next couple of weeks whether it will be given intervenor status in the case.

Ameritech, a regional Bell company, is studying its legal options, said spokesman David Pacholczyk. But he couldn't say whether the company intends to file a mirror suit.

BellSouth expects to make a decision shortly, said spokesman Bill McCloskey. The Texas ruling "encourages us to add the constitutional issue to our appeal of the FCC's South Carolina decision."

Last month, the Federal Communications Commission rejected BellSouth's request to offer long-distance service to local phone customers in South Carolina.

The FCC concluded that BellSouth hadn't sufficiently opened its market to local phone competitors — a prerequisite for entry under the 1996 law. BellSouth intends to fight that decision in federal court. The FCC last year also rejected long-distance requests by SBC and Ameritech.

"If the other Bell companies think there is a chance the Texas ruling will be upheld, I expect them to file copycat cases throughout the country," said Gene Kimmelman, co-director of the Consumers Union's Washington office.

Kimmelman said such "me-too court filings" would be reminiscent of what happened in early 1990s when the Bells sought to overturn a federal law barring them from providing cable TV service. After Bell Atlantic won the first court case in Virginia, a wave of similar lawsuits followed.

Representatives from Bell Atlantic, BellSouth and Ameritech agreed with FCC Chairman Bill Kennard's assessment Friday that the Texas ruling "is not binding nationwide" and applies only to SBC and US West.

Kennard said he doesn't foresee SBC and US West plunging into the long-distance business anytime soon. "There will not be an effort to get into long-distance until we get some clarity from the court," he predicted.

On Wall Street, shares of AT&T Corp. fell 4.2 percent, down $2.56 1/2 to close at $58.75, in the first trading since Wednesday's decision. It was the most active on the New York Stock Exchange with more than 10 million shares changing hands.

Among other long-distance carriers, MCI was off 0.3 percent, down 12.5 cents to close at $42.68 3/4; Sprint was down 1 percent, down 62 1/2 cents to close at $58; and WorldCom was off 1 percent, down 31 1/2 cents to close at $29.93 3/4.

SBC Communications, one of the Bells that challenged the 1996 law, ended the trading up 2.3 percent, up $1.68 3/4, to close at $74.93 3/4. The second, US West, closed up 2.2 percent, up $1, to close at $46.12 1/2.

Stunning the telecommunications industry, U.S. District Judge Joe Kendall in Wichita Falls, Texas, Wednesday ruled that a portion of the 1996 telecommunications law discriminates against the Bells because it does not apply to many other local phone companies, such as GTE Corp., Southern New England Telephone Co. and Frontier Corp.

The overturned provision required the Bells to open their local phone markets to competitors as a condition of winning federal approval to provide long-distance service to local customers. The provision actually gave the Bells unprecedented access to the long-distance market because it superseded a 1982 consent decree that barred them from the business.

The 1996 law freed the Bells to provide long-distance service outside their phone regions. But the Bells see their local markets as an opportunity to offer one-stop communications most cheaply and efficiently.

The law was intended to move telecommunications policy out of the courts to Congress. "Unfortunately, this decision is another in a series of decisions where the Telecommunications Act of 1996 is being rewritten by judges," said Kennard.

Weather may force balloon across Libya

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Millionaire balloonist Steve Fossett hit some rough air Friday that may force him in a direction he doesn't want to go — right over Libya.

Fossett's team in St. Louis said the development poses a serious threat to his quest to become the first balloonist to travel nonstop around the world. He made it halfway around last year, but was forced to land in India after Libya delayed granting him permission to fly over the country until he had already wasted precious fuel.

By mid-afternoon Friday, Fossett was almost across the Atlantic Ocean, 800 miles southwest of England, flying at 158 mph at an altitude of 22,000.

Strong winds, rain and thunderstorms over Ireland and northern Spain will force him to change his course, said Tim Cole, chief engineer for Fossett's flight team. If those weather patterns continue, Fossett's flight will take him over Italy and the Mediterranean Sea and through Libya by 7 p.m. EST Saturday, Cole said.

The flight team in St. Louis is seeking permission from the Libyan government for Fossett to fly over the country. If Libya denies the request, Fossett would be forced to land before he gets to Libya, or in Libya itself.

"Without passage through Libya, the trip is over," Cole said.

Fossett, a 53-year-old commodities trader from Chicago, is making his fourth try to circle the globe.

Boston University archive serves as storehouse to the stars

BOSTON (AP) — By the time Boston University got serious about collecting the personal papers of historic literary and political luminaries, most already had been taken.

It was 1963, and little was left unclaimed of, say, George Washington's library, Thomas Jefferson's correspondence or the drafts of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poems.

So the university turned its attention to the living: stars of stage and screen, 20th-century journalists and authors, screenwriters, producers, directors and comic strip artists.

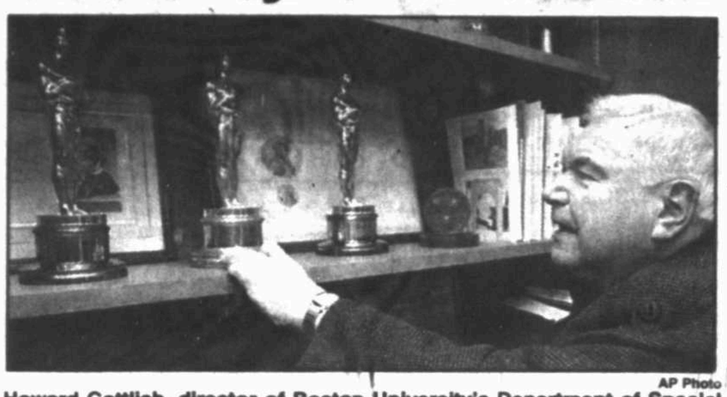

"Thirty years ago, people felt that only death would ensure the patina of someone as collectible," says Howard Gottlieb, the bow-tied, tweed-jacketed director of BU's Department of Special Collections. "A great deal of material was being lost or wasted. But when we first started to collect it, there was a lot of derision that someone very strange in Boston was grabbing anything he could get his hands on."

Now, in a city known more for early American highbrow literature than pop culture, BU has built the world's largest archive of Hollywood memorabilia and the personal papers of 1,700 celebrities.

"Boston, whether we like it or not, is the Athens of the New World, and there's some cachet to being collected in a place where there are 40 colleges and universities and a cultural life that is one of the finest in the country," Gottlieb says triumphantly.

That cachet has made the school a storehouse to the stars, attracting the papers and mementos of Hollywood and literary lights such as Mary Astor, Samuel Beckett, Ralph Bellamy, Robert Benchley, Cab Calloway, Al Capp, Alistaire Cooke, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Ella Fitzgerald, Robert Frost, Angela Lansbury, Myrna Loy, Anthony Newley, Eugene O'Neill, Robert Preston, Basil Rathbone, Cliff Robertson, Edward G. Robinson and Roddy McDowall.

"It's so lovely for someone to want one's memoirs," Joan Fontaine is reported to have said when Gottlieb came for hers.

AP Photo

Howard Gottlieb, director of Boston University's Department of Special Collections, points out Emmys donated to the 20th-century popular entertainment archive by actors Rex Harrison, Myrna Loy and Gene Kelly.

In many cases, the university has solicited the papers of established celebrities. Gottlieb pleaded with Bette Davis twice a week by telephone for 30 years, for example, before she finally contributed 119,000 personal documents, including her high school report cards and 115 scrapbooks she pasted together herself.

But the archivist, whose Oxford-cultivated English accent belies his origins in Bangor, Maine, is also an investor. He speculates in fame, soliciting the papers of young and virtually undiscovered artists.

"If I read a novel, even a first novel, and it moves me in some way, I'm ready to attach myself to that novelist and say, 'Let me collect you, and as the fame grows, the collection will grow.' I've been wrong sometimes, but not often," he says.

"In a way, the fact that you are being collected means someone has faith in you. That in itself, I think, is of great help, particularly to writers at the beginning of their career and even well into their career."

Gottlieb, who is 70, refers paternally to "my authors" and takes it personally when one of the actors, writers or directors in BU's collection gets a bad review.

"We could not succeed, and this collection could not have grown to the size it had, if a rapport had not developed between the collector and the collectee," he says. "Because what is more personal, after all, than your papers?"

When he persuaded Harold Gray, who drew the "Little Orphan Annie" comic strip, to contribute the original artwork, Gottlieb drove in person to Connecticut to retrieve it.

As he pulled away, he says, he saw tears running down Gray's cheeks.

"I turned around and asked him what the matter was, and he said, 'You are driving off with my life,'" recalls Gottlieb, who also has obtained the original "Li'l Abner" and "Dennis the Menace" comics. "And it hit me that I was the custodian of his life."

Gottlieb surrounds himself with reminders of the reputations in his charge; his office looks like a museum. There are Fred Astaire's dancing shoes, a doodled pen-and-ink self-portrait by H.G. Wells, the laurel wreath Claude Rains wore in "Caesar and Cleopatra," Dan Rather's Emmy awards, Rex Harrison's Tony Award for "My Fair Lady" and Gene Kelly's Oscar for "An American in Paris."

'We could not succeed, and this collection could not have grown to the size it had, if a rapport had not developed between the collector and the collectee. Because what is more personal after all, than your papers?'

— Howard Gottlieb, director of Boston University's Department of Special Collections

In underground vaults below and on seven miles of shelves that fill two floors of BU's high-rise library are manuscripts, typescripts, notes, notebooks, journals, scrapbooks, reviews, photographs, correspondence, telephone messages, financial records and diaries — the contents of which in many cases could embarrass people who are still alive, Gottlieb says. Robert Redford, for example, contributed a journal in which he expressed his opinion of Alec Guinness, Natalie Wood and Marlon Brando, but specified that it not be released until their deaths.

Five people killed when Jeep slides into pond

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Jeep filled with six friends joyriding across an abandoned strip mine plunged through the ice into a water-filled pit, killing all but one. The sole survivor used his head as a battering ram to break the icy surface.

Joseph Ruse, 24, stood shivering on the edge of the 15-foot-deep pit for about 15 minutes New Year's night, hoping someone else would make it out alive. No one did.

By the time he led police along five miles of dirt roads more than four hours later, the water had frozen over the pit, hiding the three bodies still in the Jeep and the two others resting just under the ice.

"I'll never go back there again," Ruse said.

The Newport Township strip mines — about 100 miles north of Philadelphia — were abandoned years ago, and the mud pits and low brush have become a popular four-wheel-drive playground. Some areas are roped off and marked with "No Trespassing" signs, but dirt roads at many other points are not marked.

"It's an open area. People out here like to go four-wheeling there. We have incidents every now and then, nothing like this," Newport Township police Sgt. Carl Smith said.

Ruse and his friends had headed to the mine around dusk Thursday in a pickup truck and the two-door Jeep, which had a newly rebuilt transmission and motor. Ruse and his childhood friend Steve Nowak, 22, who was driving the Jeep, wanted to test out the engine for the first time in the mud.

Around 9 p.m., the pickup, owned by Charles Smith, blew its motor, a common occurrence among the wet and slippery mud pits, Ruse said. Smith stayed with the truck while the rest of the group, including Nowak's girlfriend, 18-year-old Jennifer Dragon, piled into the Jeep.

About 100 yards down the road, through thick brush and trees, the Jeep fell into the water.

"I tried to grab this girl," Ruse said. "I couldn't get her out."

Ruse swam to the surface, bumping his head on the ice several times before breaking through and swimming to the bank. When no one else followed, he walked back to Smith's truck.

"They're gone," Ruse said he told Smith. "He didn't believe it. I didn't believe it."

The bodies were recovered about 3 a.m.

No charges are expected, police said. Three cases of beer were found in the back of the Jeep, but it was unclear if Nowak or the others were drinking.

Killed, in addition to Nowak and Ms. Dragon, were Richard Ammons, 42; William Fishburn III, 25; and William Vincent, 31.

Ruse was treated at a hospital and released after walking nearly three hours in wet clothes in temperatures in the low teens.

Police and county officials could not immediately determine who owns the land.

Furnace Safety Check-Up

Owner & Operator

I am announcing a furnace safety check-up special. A $60 value for only $39.00 just in time for cooler weather.

Why Am I Giving Away a $60 Value For $39.00

I am willing to invest more than $6,000 in your safety for two reasons.

First I want to give something back to the community that has helped me succeed. Second, I know it's ultimately good for my business. You see, some of you who take advantage of this offer have never used us before. I'm confident that after you sample our work and see how careful we are you will want to come back again...as a regular customer.

Why Check-Up??

Your gas furnace contains over 30 crucial parts. A failure in just one could mean increased utility costs, unsafe operation or unsatisfactory heating.

Furnace safety inspections are recommended by all manufacturers, gas companies, and industry professionals.

Your Furnace Safety Check-Up Includes

- Toxic gas test:
- Heat exchanger check:
- Low combustion air test:
- Temperature Overload test:
- Flame roll-out check:

COMPUTERS & NEW TECHNOLOGY

Time's Man of the Year dealing with life's realities

By Daivd Kalisch
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Breakfast at the elegant St. Regis Hotel, and the most powerful man in computer chips reaches into his bag and pulls out some Chex.

Not just cereal, mind you. Intel chief executive Andrew Grove has packed the squares in a homemade goop of dates, oat bran and soy powder. They are to swim in non-fat milk, he tells the tuxedo-clad waiter.

St. Regis, St. Schmegis.

Grove may seem the well-mannered, behind-the-scenes force in technology — Mr. Intel Inside — but polite appearances take a back seat when it comes to his health — and his company's.

Forget the charming East European accent. A cancer survivor on a take-no-prisoners low-fat diet, Grove attacks the technology business with a similar zeal — always looking over his shoulder, trying to kick adversaries into line, and not afraid to make new ones along the way.

That aggressiveness is getting Intel Corp. — and by inference its 61-year-old leader — some unwanted attention. The U.S. government last month launched a broad probe into Intel's practices to see if it's unfairly monopolizing the computer chip business, an accusation Intel denies.

The scrutiny may make it easy to lump Grove with the nerdier leg of computing's famous dupoly — Bill Gates of Microsoft Corp. After all, both men presided over the personal computer revolution, and today Intel chips and Microsoft software run the vast majority of the world's PCs.

But Grove, about two decades Gates' senior, defies easy technocrat molds.

Two years ago, the Intel chief didn't just follow doctors' orders when he was diagnosed with life-threatening prostate cancer. Relying on his skills as a semiconductor researcher, Grove studied the subject ad infinitum, queried doctors across the nation, weighed the odds of every major treatment, and finally chose a regime that helped beat the disease into remission.

And for a decade as chief executive of Intel, Grove has pretty much done the same.

Amid slowing demand for PCs, Grove has gone all out to develop new technology that will fuel more demand for Intel's silicon microprocessors, which are the brains in more than 85 percent of the world's personal computers. Intel is building devices that create new uses for semiconductors, such as networking hardware that links computers throughout a company.

Intel under Grove also has earned a reputation as the high-tech industry's most aggressive litigator.

Last May, Intel hinted it might quit selling computer chips to Digital Equipment Corp. and sued to force the return of microprocessor blueprints crucial to making new Digital computers. The moves were a stern counterattack to a Digital lawsuit accusing its supplier of

Surfing for travel tips

OFF-LINE RESEARCH
Encyclopedias on CD-ROM

While many travelers rush to pick up the latest guidebook when planning a trip, encyclopedias, no longer just long rows of volumes in the family room or the library, can provide a useful look at a country or culture. Some half-dozen encyclopedias are offered on CD-ROM's. Indeed, an encyclopedia, often last year's edition, is frequently part of the software included with a new computer. Such basic information as weather, attractions, a bit of history and a touch of the economy and politics can make a des-tination come alive.

Wait: Wasn't the Internet going to deal a death blow to off-line research? Well, the World Wide Web is a rich resource for travelers. The patient can find hotels, airlines and car-rental companies, reserve rooms and book flights. The trouble with background information, the sort you find in encyclopedias, is that it is put on the Web largely by individuals and organ-izations wishing to sell something — the owner of an inn or a country's tourist office. For more dispassionate views, travel books, magazine and newspaper articles, and encyclopedia entries have not gone out of style. Forums and chat rooms also offer in-formation, some accurate and some not.

CD encyclopedias are offered for com-puters running Windows 95 by Britannica, Collier's, Compton's, Americana, Grolier, Microsoft and World Book, ranging from nearly $500 to less than $40. I did research on the Yucatan Peninsula, cen-tering on the popular resort town of Cancun, with the 1998 editions of Encarta, published by Microsoft, and Collier's, published by Sierra On-Line. (Deluxe editions used here list for $80 each.)

Encarta had no article titled "Cancun," but a check in the Word Search module found four articles that contained the resort's name: Mexico, Quintana Roo, Yucatan, Yucatan (state, Mexico). The first article, Mexico, was a detailed treatment of the country, divided, after an introduction, into sections on the land and resources, coastline, people, economy, government and history. There were maps, an image of the Mexican flag, color phottographs and a sound clip of the national anthem.

A reading of the complete article, which I would place at an upper-high-school to lower-undergraduate level of difficulty, would give you a good basic understanding of Mexico. Within the text, subjects that were linked to other parts of the ency-clopedia were printed in red type, and every occurrence of Cancun was highlighted.

To gain access to some of the features, it was necessary to insert the second CD that comes in the package. The Mexico Fact Box, on the second disk, provided a condensed summary of information on land and climate, population, economy, government and education, and history. The article on Quintana Roo, a state in southeastern Mexico, offered a fair amount of in-formation on Cancun, "a beautiful resort community along the state's northern coast," as did the Yucatan article. A separate entry on Chichen Itza, the ancient Maya city, made it sound enticing. In the Virtual Tour section of the encyclopedia there was no Chichen Itza, but the ruins at Tikal in Guatemala were there. Soon, I was on a full-screen, colorful (albeit somewhat jerky) video trip around that Maya center.

Computer leasing takes off

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Richard Winward has been trying to keep up with computer technology since 1983.

The retired Air Force officer bought his first computer for $500 after seeing Bill Cosby promoting it for Texas Instruments. After 12 computers, the advent of the Internet and e-mail, Winward has decided he can't keep up.

"Technology was moving so fast, everything was becoming obsolete," Winward said from his New Jersey home.

So, last month when faced with the decision of upgrading, Winward chose to lease his home computer. "It only made sense," Winward said. He'll decide whether to upgrade again at the end of his two-year lease.

Leasing home computers is the latest option for computer aficionados who don't want to get stuck with outdated machines.

Dell Computer, based in Central Texas' Round Rock, is currently the only computer company offering the leasing option directly to consumers. Compaq, Gateway 2000, IBM and Dell all have leasing options for businesses.

"I think everyone is watching to see what happens," said Bob Francis, a senior editor InformationWeek. "I would be fairly optimistic."

Dell spokesman T.R. Reed declined to disclose how much the company has made on the consumer leases since unveiling the option in August but said the venture has been successful.

The fast pace of technology means that the average shelf life of a computer is only three years, said April Jacobs, a senior writer for ComputerWorld.

"So, people leasing may be more likely to upgrade," she said.

Leasing computers, office furniture and even carpet is already standard in the business world.

"Corporate users say leasing gives them a lot more flexibility," Ms. Jacobs said.

Experts predict that computers could follow the pattern of car leasing.

"That has been enormously popular," Ms. Jacobs said.

While popular — it's estimated that one-third of new cars are leased by consumers — car leasing also has run into some problems that those contemplating leasing a computer might heed.

Starting this year, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Trade Commission are requiring the language of car-leasing contracts to be simplified. Dealers also must tell consumers the amount to paid over the term of the lease and not just the monthly payments.

Ms. Jacobs warned that leasing contracts can be confusing and that consumers should know what they are signing.

There also are concerns that people may lease for the wrong reasons.

"I don't think leasing is for everyone," said Gene Ramirez, technology analyst for Southwest Securities in Dallas.

He said leasing for economic reasons may not make sense because people who already have financial problems will end up paying more for the equipment in the end.

Dell offers 24-month leases for its Dell Dimension desktop, Dell Latitude LM notebook and Dell Inspiron notebook.

Q&A on Microsoft's antitrust court order

By Bob Drummond
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Questions and answers about U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson's order telling Microsoft Corp. to stop making computer manufacturers install its Internet browser as a condition of their license to use Windows 95:

Q. What does the judge's order do?

A. The court order affects only Microsoft's contracts with personal computer manufacturers who install its Windows operating system on PCs before they're shipped from the factory. Microsoft tells those manufacturers they must also install Internet Explorer browser software, saying it's an integral part of Windows. The court order forbids Microsoft from enforcing that requirement, but does not stop Microsoft from offering Internet Explorer in stores, or for downloading from a Web site.

Q. Does that mean computer makers can't install Internet Explorer at all?

A. No. Computer manufacturers are still free to use Internet Explorer if they want. Many manufacturers will continue to do so, because their customers like Internet Explorer, and because Microsoft currently offers the Internet browser free of charge. The judge's order, however, gives rival Netscape Communications Corp. a better chance seek its own agreements to get computer manufacturers to feature its Navigator browser software.

Q. What about computers that have already been sold with Internet Explorer?

A. The judge's order has no impact on those. The injunction only says Microsoft from now on must stop enforcing the Internet Explorer licensing

Mass deletion of e-mail easier than eliminating individually

By David Einstein
N.Y. Times News Service

Q: When deleting e-mail, is there a way to "mass delete" messages so I don't have to get rid of them one message at a time?

A: Yep, and the same basic procedure applies to the mail features of Internet Explorer, Netscape Navigator or America Online. In each case, display a list of messages, then press the Control key while selecting the messages you want to remove. To delete the selected messages in IE or Navigator, either choose the delete option from the Edit menu, or right-click your mouse on the selected messages and choose the delete option from the menu that pops up. In AOL, just click Delete at the bottom of the window.

Q: When I installed Internet Explorer 4, my computer slowed down considerably. What's causing this, and is there anything I can do to improve the speed?

A: Speed can be a problem if you're running the Active Desktop feature of IE 4. Active Desktop gives Weblike properties to the Windows desktop, but it also eats up a lot of a PC's resources. You probably won't notice it if you have a superfast chip and 32 megabytes of memory, but on older systems, performance can drop.

The easiest way to get back up to speed is to turn off the Active Desktop. You can turn the desktop off (or back on) by clicking the Start button, pointing to Settings, pointing to Active Desktop, and then clicking View as Web Page. Before you disable the Active Desktop, however, you might try fine-tuning your hard disk, which sometimes can improve system speed. To do that, run ScanDisk and Disk Defragmenter, both of which are in the System Tools folder inside the Accessories folder in the Windows 95 Start menu. ScanDisk checks the disk for problems and can fix basic ones. Disk Defragmenter rearranges data on the disk to make it run more efficiently.

YOUR QUICKEST SHOT TO THE COOLEST SPOTS ON THE WORLD WIDE WEB

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

Everybody quiet! Line up for the museum tour. But on this field trip you make the rules. Explore art in your own way at the National Gallery of Art online at http://www.nga.gov Check out the tour of the week, see the special multimedia Web exhibitions (like the new memorial sculpture dedicated to the first African-American regiment of the Civil War), or maybe just explore the museum's collection without a guide. Is Picasso your pal, O'Keefe your obsession? Search the museum by artist names to see what the museum has by your favorite artists. Or maybe you want to head straight for the Renaissance room to see those famous Italian painters. (Browse by historical period.) This site offers many ways to satisfy the casual browser or the serious student with access to more than 100,000 art objects! The tour begins here.

ARRRGH, YE SURFIN' KIDS!

It's time for a pirate adventure on the high seas at National Geographic's Pirates World Wide Web site. Jump the next schooner out to http://www.nationalgeographic.com/modules/pirates/ and you'll catch a first mate's glimpse of these feared seamen. From Blackbeard to the Barbarossa Brothers, all of the great pirates and buccaneers are here. You'll sail from England to the Bahamas searching for gold, inspecting treasure maps and dodging flying musket balls. If you're ready to sail solo, you'll have the chance to name your ship and assemble your crew. And just in case you get seasick, they have links and books for some swashbuckling reading. Behave yourself while onboard, or you may have to walk the plank.

GLOBE-TROTTING

For those who love to visit historical lands and nations, the University of Oregon's Historical and Cultural Atlas is a must-see on the Web. Take a journey out to http://darkwing.uoregon.edu/~atlas/ to explore the ruins of Europe, the temples of Asia, or the natural won-ders of Africa. You'll browse through paintings in southern Italy, walk through villages in Spain, and visit a Roman theater in France. For those who prefer to stay closer to home, the Atlas has a timeline of maps that span across the history of North America. And once you're finished visiting churches and military sites, you can relax by shopping along the streets of Pompeii or taking in a sporting event at the Coliseum.

Dear Amy: My class is doing a Web page on Native Americans. Any ideas? —Pam, Palo Alto, CA

Dear Pam: There is an awesome Web site at http://www.4Directions.org that would be a great place for resources. The 4 Directions site links up 12 Native American schools from all around the country. Since some of the schools are really remote, their teachers and students are using the Internet to share multimedia presentations, lesson plans and classroom activities with other Native American schools. These kids are learning about their culture and posting stuff on the Web for the rest of the world to see. Check them out. Maybe you could find some keypals there, too.

Dear Amy: Some of the Web sites I go to for kids make you fill out a form, but my parents say I'm not supposed to. What can I do?—Eric, Denver

Dear Eric: It's not smart to give out ANY personal information over the Web. It's not really bad, but lots of Web sites ask kids about themselves or their parents just to get sales information. I think a cool Web site should let you in without registering. :-) My rule is: If it makes me uneasy, just surf somewhere else. Check out an NPR story about it at http://www.npr.org/news/national/970610.privacyseries.html to get more details.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 3, 1998
You throw yourself fully into whatever you do. Your sense of commitment and caring opens doors and allows loved ones to be who they really are. You feel better with others than you have in past years. You might want to stay close to home and not take any long-distance trips this year. Plans change easily. If you are single, your love life becomes increasingly active; you enjoy being with others, socializing and sharing. If attached, your relationship grows much closer. Be more generous with your mate. You enjoy the rewards of fully understanding each other. PISCES makes you feel lively.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★ Assume a low profile. You wonder what is really happening here; you aren't getting a full, clear picture. Do not abandon ship, but continue your quest to get down to basics. Take a long-needed nap; you have pushed beyond your limits. Tonight: Vanish!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Aim for what you want. You are overwhelmed by a boss, parent or someone in charge. You are correct; this person doesn't hear you. Take the day off for a fun excursion. Out of your normal environment, you can relate differently. Tonight: Join friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You are out of sorts; no matter what you do or say, you can't seem to turn a situation around. You must postpone a trip or unusual get-together. Spending time with a partner helps you gain another perspective. Talks are upbeat. Tonight: Let another coax you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Pressure is intense with a key partner, who also affects you financially. Take the overview, and choose to get past problems. You'll enjoy getting together with friends. Laughter helps ease tension. Try a new place, be willing to break patterns. Tonight: Try an art film.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Another wants all your time. Whether you choose to be with this person is the question. You might be a bit out of kilter; think through what is important in the long run. A child or new friend is difficult. Discussions are animated. Tonight: Get down to basics with a partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Creativity is highlighted, so you might want to find solutions to a domestic situation. Listen to a child or loved one who has excellent ideas. Brainstorming, laughing and teasing allow you to relax. You might be overly tense. Tonight: Let another take the lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Anxiety is high; ask for that massage or foot rub. You also need to tackle your work or a project. Energy is high and somewhat diverse, though you have established strong foundations. A child or loved one acts up. Let it be. Tonight: Take a night off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Your amusement quotient is high. You are determined to have it your way, though a friend is contrary. Your playfulness is alluring. Rely on your seductiveness. A good time happens, and everyone appreciates what you add. Tonight: Others count on you for fun.

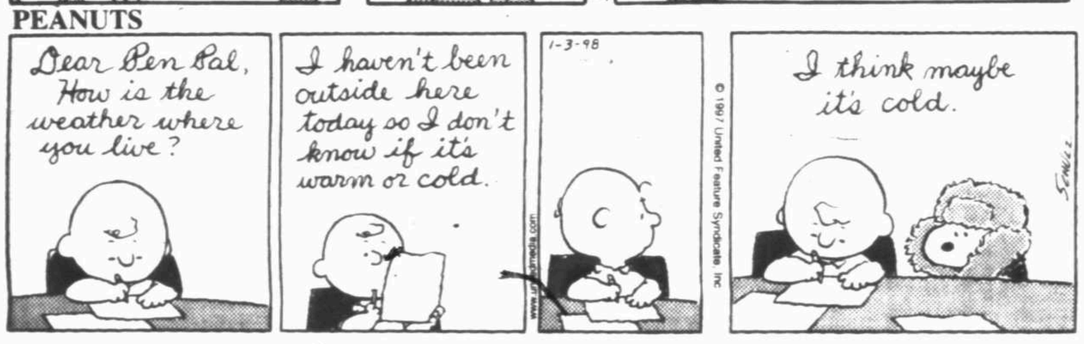

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Though you make the world your playground, and feel the grass is always greener on the other side, you are happiest at home. Take a day off, and establish greater security for yourself and a loved one. A communication befuddles you. Tonight: Make a favorite dinner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Discussions are your forte. Others come to you for insight, direction and feedback. There is an element of confusion. Plans can change; this is the time to express what is happening with you. Have lunch with an out-of-town friend. Tonight: Do your thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Take stock of finances. You might want to take advantage of a sale before you put yourself on a stringent budget. A child or loved one acts up; discussions don't seem to help. Don't pull out your hair; take a deep breath, and let go. Tonight: A little indulgence works.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You are personality-plus, but you aren't sure about everyone else. Examine what you want and keep it in mind. Friends get together and invite you. Make the most of the weekend and the tail end of celebrations. Ask for what you want. Tonight: Your smiles go far.

Actor Ralph Fiennes doesn't buy into what people say about sexy roles, being a star

LOS ANGELES — Ralph Fiennes winces when he's called a sexy star.

Ralph Fiennes thinks actors should try different things.

"The very language that people use about sexy roles and being a star is a language that I distrust. It's never been something that I can buy into or put my money on," the 35-year-old star of "Schindler's List" and "The English Patient" said in Friday's Daily News.

In his latest role, in "Oscar and Lucinda," he plays a disturbed Victorian minister torn between the exhilaration of gambling and the desire to serve God.

"I just loved the character," Fiennes said. "I loved his dilemma, I loved his guilt, I loved his jubilation and I loved his confusion. ... I think actors should try different things and shouldn't be bound by a sort of consistent theme in their casting."

JERUSALEM — Steven Spielberg might take on the Israeli air force.

The director is thinking of making a movie that would tell the story of eight American pilots who came to Israel after the 1967 Mideast War to train Israeli pilots, Friday's Maariv newspaper quoted him as saying.

Steven Spielberg might take on the Israeli air force.

"I love the idea because it is an amazing story," he said.

Spielberg said he got the idea after an Israeli pilot on an El Al flight from New York to Tel Aviv asked him to sit with him in the cockpit.

"I asked him about his life, and I found that he was a war hero during the Six Day War," Spielberg said. "He told me about the history of the air force, and how everything started from eight Americans. I didn't know about that."

NEW YORK — Term 2 meant a private screening of "The Godfather," Part 1, for Mayor Rudolph Giuliani.

On New Year's Eve, several hundred staff members, friends and fund-raisers gathered at a Times Square office tower to watch the ball drop and join the mayor for a private 12:30 a.m. screening of his favorite movie.

"I watched the movie back in the '70s and probably it helped me a lot, in a lot of the plans we've put together for how to dismantle the five families in New York," said Giuliani, who brought mobsters to justice in the 1980s as chief federal prosecutor in New York.

He brushed aside criticism that the 1972 movie romanticizes the mob.

"I think that movies are movies, and the fact is, that when you consider the major reductions that have been made in organized crime, it should not be something that people are offended by," Giuliani said.

He began his second term in office with his inauguration on New Year's Day.

LONDON — The bride wore white and the groom wore a kilt when Helen Mirren married American director Taylor Hackford in the Scottish Highlands.

About 40 locals accepted invitations to join the ceremony at Ardersier parish church near Inverness, said the Rev. Alex Whiteford, who conducted the ceremony on New Year's Eve.

"It was a very nice thought — a lot of people might have excluded them," he said.

The longtime couple chose the day because it was Taylor's 53rd birthday.

NEW YORK — Jerry Seinfeld, Paul Reiser and two of their funnyman buddies have changed their New Year's Day brunch tradition in the years since they hit the big time — they added Cuban smokes and caviar.

As surely as the Times Square ball drops, Seinfeld, Reiser, Larry Miller and Mark Schiff show up on New Year's at the posh River Cafe in Brooklyn, asking for the same waiter, Bobby Quidone.

The funny foursome couldn't agree on how many years have passed since their first brunch of champagne, waffles and pancakes.

"I said 17, but someone else said 20," said Miller, an acting regular who played the taunting doorman on "Seinfeld."

They should have asked Quidone. The waiter said in Friday's Daily News the four first showed up on New Year's Day in 1981.

"They were just a group that came in," he said. "You didn't recognize any of them."

Success has changed things a bit. This year, they arrived in a black stretch limousine, puffing expensive Cuban cigars. Caviar with toast points was added about five years ago.

They take turns picking up the tab, Quidone said. "They are excellent tippers."

Traditions collide at church as parishioners call for priest to resign

By Jesse McKinley
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In the 1940s, a priest at the Church of St. Francis Xavier in the Chelsea section of Manhattan won fame with his crusade against mob control of the city's waterfront. In the 1980s, another Xavier priest risked formal censure by criticizing the archdiocese's treatment of homosexual Catholics.

Now, Xavier faces a new battle, but this time it is an internal struggle, as the newest pastor and some of his parishioners clash over the church's progressive tradition and the question of who should set the parish's agenda.

The dissident parishioners criticize the pastor as heavy-handed and autocratic, accusing him of trying to reverse a trend toward giving parishioners a greater voice in church affairs. And they are outraged at his dismissal of a popular nun, whose leading role in church services was lauded by many parishioners but upset some of the church's more traditional members. The dissidents have called on the pastor, the Rev. Louis P. Sogliuzzo, to resign.

"We want him to go," said Michael T. Hewitt, a leading opponent. "There's no question that that's a must for things to move forward at this church."

The pastor's supporters, who are predominantly more traditional Roman Catholics, see Sogliuzzo's actions as an attempt to restore some order and decorum to the church's mission of worship and service.

Sogliuzzo declined to comment for this article, but in an interview in October he said: "The issue is really this: Is there room for a pastor at this church? There are expectations that there's a certain egalitarianism here, and that's good and I respect that. But the church is not a democracy."

Peter J. Awn, professor of religion at Columbia University and a former Jesuit priest, said that Xavier is a prime battleground because of its Chelsea locale, which is home to a diverse mix of homosexual men, young professionals, and a more traditionally conservative Latino and Eastern European population. He said Sogliuzzo's appointment may have been an attempt to bring an independent-minded parish more in line with church hierarchy. "They knew exactly who they were putting in," Awn said.

The Jesuit officials who run Xavier are so concerned about the rift that in November they took the rare step of naming a special observer to evaluate the problem. He is expected to report back to his superiors with recommendations this month.

The feud erupted as the church, at 30 West 16th Street, was celebrating its 150th anniversary — a history marked by crusades and progressive stances that today's parishioners cite with pride. In 1945, the Rev. John M. Corridan took up the fight against organized crime on the city's piers, a mission that earned him the nickname "the waterfront priest" and a cinematic gloss in the film "On the Waterfront" (as played by Karl Malden).

Some 42 years later, a Xavier pastor, the Rev. Michael E. Donahue, openly criticized the archdiocese's decision in 1987 to ban a Mass for homosexual Catholics at the church. He lost that battle, but the church today maintains an open acceptance of homosexual worshipers and runs AIDS support groups.

Both Sogliuzzo's supporters and his detractors say they were impressed by the pastor's intellect and eloquence when he took over the parish in October 1996. "I think Lou is very intelligent and very caring," said Brian Hamilton, a therapist and an opponent of the pastor, "but I think he's made a couple of very bad mistakes."

Both sides also agree that Sogliuzzo, who had previously run a Jesuit retreat program in Morristown, N.J., but never a parish, arrived at a church whose liturgical customs diverged from the norm. During Sunday Mass, for example, Sister Honora Nicholson had periodically been allowed to speak from the altar on spiritual issues after the priest's homily. Her speeches, called "reflections," were extremely popular, but her participation disturbed some parishioners who were used to a standard Catholic liturgy.

Soon after his appointment, Sogliuzzo put an end to Sister Nicholson's reflections, a decision that alienated even some of the most devout parishioners.

Then, in June, a parishioner wrote to Sogliuzzo questioning his handling of the church's finances. In a letter written in response, the pastor called the parishioner "insensitive and disrespectful" and suggested that the writer find another church.

Critics said the two incidents indicated an authoritarian leadership style that was not in keeping with Xavier's traditions. "This was collaborative ministry," said Thomas Sanger, a pastoral assistant at the church who resigned in November. "Lou wanted something else."

For his part, Sogliuzzo expressed concern about the spread of "gossip and accusations" and said a "lack of trust" between him and some members of the staff was hurting the church. In October, after several attempts at reconciliation, he asked for Sister Nicholson's resignation.

A week later, more than 200 angry parishioners gathered at a nearby church and voted to ask for Sogliuzzo's resignation. Another meeting called by Sogliuzzo and attended by about 900 people degenerated into a shouting match in the pews after the pastor left without responding to questions.

A majority of the nine-member Pastoral Council, the church's main advisory group, also called for Sogliuzzo's resignation.

Despite the problems, the church is filled to capacity every Sunday by Catholics drawn to the church's warm nave and welcoming congregation. But while some drop money in the collection baskets and greet Sogliuzzo at the church's door after Mass, others withhold their donations and assemble at the bottom of the church stairs to talk of their hope for the new year: that Sogliuzzo will find another home.

Introduction to the Internet

Tuesday - Wednesday, January 6th & 7th, 1998
6:30 pm - 10:00 pm

This class will introduce you to the ins and outs of the Internet, and will focus specifically on the often vague answer to a very straight-forward question:

"How do I get on the Internet, and what do I do once I am there?"

This class will show you how to get on the Internet.

And, it covers the topics: What you need to connect; hardware and software considerations; SLIP and PPP connections; what is TCP/IP; finding a service provider; using software tools to locate information on the 'Net; using FTP, Archie, Gopher, Telnet; accessing Newsgroups; e-mail and mailing lists; how to access the World Wide Web; using Netscape, the most popular WWW browser; understanding URL's and Hypertext; and anti-virus protection.

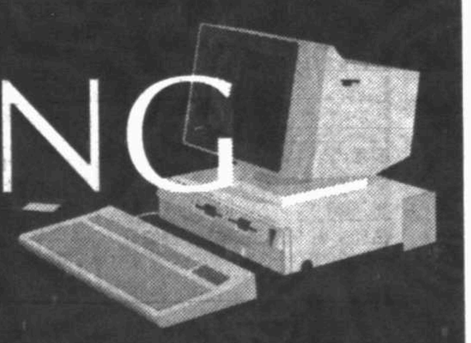

Prerequisite: Basic computer and Windows skills

Southern Baptists Build Bond with North Korea through good works

By JIM JONES
New York Times News Service

An unusual friendship is developing between Southern Baptists and communist North Korea. And a Texan, John LaNoue, has a lot to do with it.

LaNoue, who works in Dallas with the Texas Baptist Men's organization, says he is a "minor player."

But he has helped forge ties with North Koreans that have allowed Southern Baptists to donate food and clothing and provide other assistance to the Asian nation of 24 million. The country has been plagued by floods, typhoons and food shortages in the past two years.

"We are just responding to their concerns," said LaNoue, a Beaumont native who holds a doctorate from Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Mill Valley, Calif.

The latest Baptist endeavor was a "Coats for Christmas" project in which 180,000 children's coats were to be provided.

When LaNoue was in North Korea for three months this year helping other world relief groups monitor the distribution of food sent from the United States, a North Korean official told him of the need for the coats.

He relayed the request to the Southern Baptist International Mission Board, which is handling the project.

The first load of 50,000 coats were to be flown this week to North Korea on Russian transport planes leaving from Houston.

"We are responding to an official request from John LaNoue," said Al Gilbert, special assistant to the president of the International Mission Board based in Richmond, Va.

LaNoue said that most children in North Korea have to walk considerable distances to their schools, and temperatures can get as low as 4 below zero.

The ties between Baptists and North Korea were born of great need, said LaNoue. Other groups, including World Uision and Catholic Relief Services, also are working there, he said.

"The floods hit two years in a role. Then came the drought. Then Typhoon Winnie hit last August, destroying many of their dikes and ruining reclaimed farmland," LaNoue said.

Baptists sent several semi-trailer loads of dehydrated soup donated by Breedloue Dehydrators in Lubbock to North Korea in early 1996, after the first flood.

At the same time, Baptist Volunteers went to North Korea to remove salt from farmland flooded by sea water. DeWayne Williams of Arlington, a retired soil scientist, Volunteered to supervise installation of pipes to drain off the salt.

"The acreage we worked on has produced 2,200 more pounds of rice and corn per hectare (4.27 acres)," LaNoue said.

When Typhoon Winnie hit last August, it left mud cohering the salt-producing evaporation ponds of North Korea, and LaNoue put out word that help was needed.

Within a few days Texas Baptist Men bought $60,000 Worth of salt in China and shipped it to North Korea. Salt is needed to preserve kimchi, the food staple similar to sauerkraut that is made from fermented cabbage.

Religion isn't given a high priority in North Korea. No missionaries are allowed to be permanently assigned to the country. But government officials can allow religious groups in on a temporary basis for benevolent purposes.

A few Protestant and Catholic churches exist in the country. And LaNoue leas impressed by the humanitarian spirit of the populace.

"The best resource the country has are the people," LaNoue said, commenting on how hard they work to help each other. "They are fantastic."

The sensitive political climate still creates roadblocks. Americans are often regarded With hostility. The borders still are armed camps.

But the Baptists did get permission to enter that communist nation, which continues to have tense relations with the United States.

LaNoue said the overwhelming need of the people and the desire of Christians to help made a difference. But the major factor was divine intervention, he said.

"People don't realize that God still is at work in the World," LaNoue said. "God opens doors."

How Much "Personal Baggage Do You Have?

It seems that as we grow older, we all accumulate personal traits, ideas, and habits that accompany us through life. Some people may call this "personal baggage", and if we want to accept an individual as a friend, co-worker, or spouse, we have to accept their distinctive characteristics as well. Although the term "personal baggage", may have a negative connotation, it depends on the individual and often is associated with something very good. As we grow older, one may gain many positive traits such as wisdom, experience, patience, etc. Some feel that people can't change once they reach adulthood. However, the Bible tells us that when anyone is joined to Christ, they are a new being; the old is gone and the new has come. Hear what God says: "when the time came for me to show you favor, I heard you; when the day arrived for me to save you, I helped you. "Listen! This is the hour to receive God's favor; today is the day to be saved!

Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things become new.

Hope.

There's Plenty To Go Around.

Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.

We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

GROVE: Government looking over shoulder of Intel chief copying Digital technology. Intel, in its latest aggressive move, reportedly is talking with Digital about paying it $1.5 billion to resolve the lawsuit and buy its Alpha mainframe computer technology, which would expand Intel into more powerful business machines.

While Gates gets more press because of his vast wealth and Microsoft's software products, Grove is far from reticent.

In an eight-page cover story in Fortune magazine last year, Grove disclosed his cancer diagnosis to the world. He described how he began his research from a laptop computer while vacationing, and finally underwent a 28-day high-dose radiation treatment that he chose from among a confusing array of options. Grove's remission gave hope to millions of other victims.

That same year, Grove likewise declared his business credo in his book, "Only the Paranoid Survive." Fear, he wrote, helped spur Intel's toughest and wisest business decision — exiting memory chips in the 1980s amid a worldwide production glut that threatened the company's vitality.

Like a star player of the popular Doom computer game, Grove has defied the odds to survive the enemy — but he creates some new ones in the process.

Now, when Grove looks over his shoulder, the Federal Trade Commission is looking back. With both Intel and Microsoft now objects of federal scrutiny, Grove seems to have achieved a dubious parity of sorts with Gates. But in person, Grove is quite different.

In an hour-long interview at the Manhattan hotel's restaurant, Grove had little patience for the prophesies favored by Gates. Gates tends to rock excitedly in his seat while talking of how the global Internet will transform society into a true democracy empowering people of all walks.

But Grove seems calm even as he describes the Internet as "the mother of all strategic inflection points" — his term for what happens when a huge change caused by outside forces sweeps over a company.

"I have a very hard time with the Epcot vision of the future," says Grove, who retains a faint accent from Hungary despite emigrating more than four decades ago.

Grove instead dwells on how he uses the World Wide Web today. He's customized pages on Yahoo and Excite, two popular search engines, to automatically deliver high-tech news related to Intel. He is an avid reader of CNET, a high-tech online news service that Intel has a small stake in — typical of small businesses Intel tries to foster to drive demand for its chips.

Grove's passion for details precedes Intel. He graduated first in his class at City College in New York with a degree in chemical engineering. He got a doctorate at the University of California-Berkeley in 1963 and went to work for Fairchild Semiconductor, then led by the two men who would start Intel in 1968. Joining Intel that year, Grove worked his way up to become chief executive in 1987 and add chairman to his title last winter.

Today, the idea is to whet consumers' appetites for more and more powerful chips. One way is a new system from Intel that uses PCs with videocameras and phone lines to create a version of the long-awaited videophone.

But Grove goes beyond conventional means. Last spring, he disguised himself in a space-age jump suit at an Atlanta trade show, then came clean before thousands of attendees to give the keynote talk. The gold-metallic costume not only poked fun at the suited, helmeted drones who make chips, it showed how Intel's new MMX Pentium chip jazzes up graphics on the computer screen.

Asked whether too much technology can clutter people's lives, Grove mentions that he refuses to carry a beeper.

"Nobody shoves technology down your throat. It took quite a while before I had a car phone. We all make our own decisions on how to spend our time. I choose what I use," he says.

But what about the future? Will doors open when we ask them? Cars talk back? Houses clean themselves?

He hesitates above his bowl of cereal. He seems caught in his own contradiction. Forced to live day-to-day, he must dream of a new, better world.

Grove finally lowers his spoon toward the squares that resemble, vaguely, the thumb-nail-size microprocessors he sells more of than anyone else.

"My view of the future is continuing the present," he says simply.

And that could describe either battle.

MICROSOFT: Lengthy court fight could hamper Windows 98 plans restriction. Neither Microsoft nor any computer manufacturer must take Internet Explorer off an existing machine.

(From 1B)

Q. What happens next?

A. The judge issued only a temporary court order to stop Microsoft's licensing restrictions while the court continues to study the Justice Department's request for a permanent ban. Judge Jackson appointed a Harvard law professor to act as a special court official, to review evidence and make recommendations about further court action. The official, known as a special master, was told to report by May 31.

Q. Could that affect Microsoft's plans for Windows 98?

A. If the court fight drags on into the spring, it could put a cloud over Microsoft's plans for Windows 98, a new product with the features of both a PC operating system and a Web browser. The judge's order uses broad language, forbidding license terms that require use of "any" Internet browser as a condition for permission to install "any" Microsoft PC operating system, including "any successor version" of Windows 95.

Microsoft says it doesn't think the order will have "any negative impact" on Windows 98. Antitrust lawyers and officials at the Justice Department say the incorporation of a browser into Windows 98 could be a violation if the order is still in effect when the new operating system debuts. Microsoft has not set a firm date for introduction of the new program, saying it expects Windows 98 to hit the market sometime in the second quarter of 1998.

Q. How could this affect Microsoft in a broader sense?

A. This court fight involves the Justice Department's claim that Microsoft's marketing practices for Internet Explorer violate the terms of a 1995 settlement of a separate antitrust case. That agreement forbids Microsoft from making computer manufacturers use a separate software product as a condition for getting Windows. Microsoft argues that the company is free to "integrate" new functions into Windows, even if the company sells free-standing programs that do the same thing.

The judge's order says Microsoft's interpretation of the settlement appears to be too broad, rendering some restrictions "essentially meaningless." Microsoft has long pursued a strategy of folding into Windows new functions that had previously been performed by stand-alone software programs —many of them made by Microsoft's competitors. Now, Microsoft could face legal challenges if it stays with that strategy.

Q. What about the 'browser war' with Netscape?

A. If the judge ultimately rules that the Internet Explorer browser must be marketed as a separate product, some antitrust lawyers say Microsoft's practice of giving the browser away without charge could face a legal challenge. Antitrust laws forbid so-called "predatory pricing," in which one firm tries to gain a monopoly by forcing prices so low that competitors can't make any money. Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has already charged that Microsoft's give-away policy for Internet Explorer amounts to unfair pricing. If Microsoft must charge computer manufacturers separately for Internet Explorer, it could help Netscape compete for that market.

The competition between Microsoft and Netscape could have huge consequences down the road. Both sides think that browser programs are likely to become the way that people get information from their own PCs, as well as from the Internet, supplanting the function that's now performed by PC operating systems, where Microsoft dominates. A leg up in the browser competition now could give one firm a head start on that market, as well as the power to help dictate the development of the Web.

Q. What are Microsoft's chances of getting the court order lifted?

A. Judge Jackson stressed that he has not made a final decision. Before issuing a preliminary injunction, however, the judge was required to rule that — from the evidence submitted so far — the government had shown a "substantial likelihood of success" in the ultimate decision.

LEASING: Convenience, not cost, strongest advantage of scheme

(From 1B)

A $2,675 customized Dell Dimension, for example, would be $125.10 a month. By the end of the lease, the consumer will pay more than $3,000, including monthly payments and other fees.

After two years, the consumer has the option of returning the computer, trading it in, extending the lease for six months or paying the market price for the machine.

"There is no question that in the long run they are going to end up paying more if they want to buy the computer through the lease than just buying it outright," he said.

Joseph Rockey, from Steubenville, Ohio, said he considered that leasing his computer would cost him more if he ever decided to buy it, but decided to go ahead.

"It's more expensive, obviously, but there are advantages," Rockey said. "I don't think the purpose of leasing is to buy it."

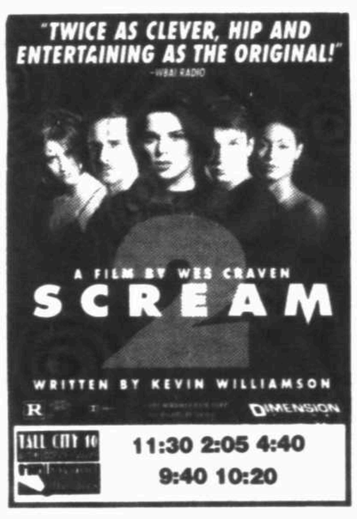

Rockey said the computer he bought 10 years ago is now "a piece of junk. ... Everything changed so quick."

Although he has had the new Dell for less than a month, Rockey said he already realizes that he'll be upgrading at the end of the lease.

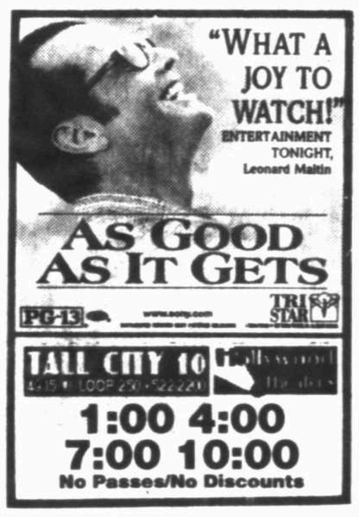

"The same day I got this one, they came out with a newer model," he said.

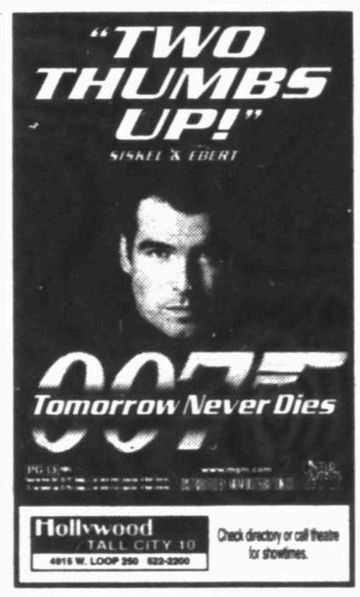

Rockey said he does have a concern about transferring his data to a new computer at the end of the lease.

"Whenever somebody asks me about it I say ask me about it in two years when I have to take it back in," he said.

Mavs' future coach

PHOENIX — Phoenix Suns assistant coach Donn Nelson resigned Friday and accepted an offer to become his father's successor as head coach of the Dallas Mavericks in the 2000-01 season.

Nelson Jr. will be Dallas' scouting director the rest of this season, an assistant coach the next two years and head coach the following season.

"I guess I just made my dad the interim coach," he joked before the Mavericks-Suns game in the American West Arena.

Don Nelson, who was hired as the Mavericks' general manager Feb. 7, fired coach Jim Cleamons on Dec. 4 and took over on the bench. On Wednesday, he received Suns president Jerry Colangelo's permission to offer his son a job.

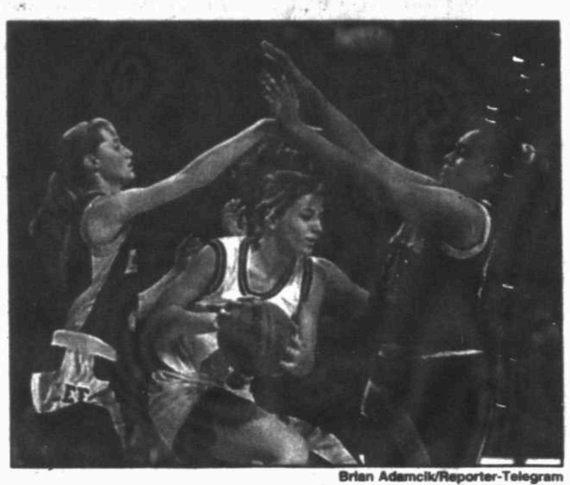

Donn Nelson's five-year contract had a clause that allowed him to leave to become a head coach.

Suns coach Danny Ainge wouldn't let Nelson help coach the game.

"I just looked at him differently. He's a Dallas Maverick," Ainge said. But he said there was no animosity in the parting and predicted Nelson would succeed like his father, the NBA's fourth-winningest active coach.

"He's been big for me as an assistant," Ainge said. "Last year, (Ainge's first) he saved me. He was very helpful. I just relied on him a lot."

Midland High, Lee return to 4-5A schedule with intra-city battles

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

The end of perhaps the biggest showcase week for Midland basketball in recent memory will come tonight at Chaparral Center, and appropriately enough, it will be with the two games carrying the most meaning to date.

Midland High and Midland Lee will both open their District 4-5A schedules with a boys game at 7:30 p.m., while the MHS and Lee girls will continue their 4-5A slate preceeding the boys game at 6 p.m. While Midland High and Lee is always a meaningful battle within the framework of both a city rivalry and a district contest, tonight's games won't even be the first time the MHS and Lee boys and girls have met this week.

The two schools faced off in both brackets to open the Byron Johnston Classic on Monday at the Chap Center, with Midland High claiming city bragging rights — for at least five days. Midland High's boys defeated Lee 76-57 while the MHS girls beat Lee 65-52, but those scores matter little tonight.

"The real deal will be next Saturday," said Lee boys coach Jon House during the tournament.

There's little doubt, though, that the Midland High boys are the real deal. The Bulldogs won the Johnston by defeating Killeen Ellison 72-49 Friday night and are 17-1 on the season. They are also the defending 4-5A champs, having gone 12-0 in district last season.

As lopsided as their 19-point win over Lee might look on paper, the Bulldogs got their stiffest challenge of the tournament from the Rebels, who earlier in the sea-

Huskers make bid to move up

■ Cornhuskers must hope 42-17 Orange Bowl win over Vols is enough to vault them past Michigan into No. 1 spot.

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — When Tom Osborne's final game ended, he trotted off the field and checked the scoreboard one last time without expression. However, when presented with the Orange Bowl trophy minutes later, he broke into the grin of a winner.

That's how Osborne will be remembered, regardless of what the final polls may say.

Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers, needing a lopsided victory to have any hope of overtaking Michigan in the rankings, gave their retiring coach an emphatic sendoff Friday night by beating Tennessee 42-17.

"If all the pollsters honestly think after watching the Rose Bowl and watching the Orange Bowl that Michigan could beat Nebraska, go ahead and vote for Michigan by all means," Cornhuskers quarterback Scott Frost said.

"I don't think there's anybody out there with a clear conscience who can say that Nebraska and that great man Tom Osborne doesn't deserve a national championship for this — at least a share."

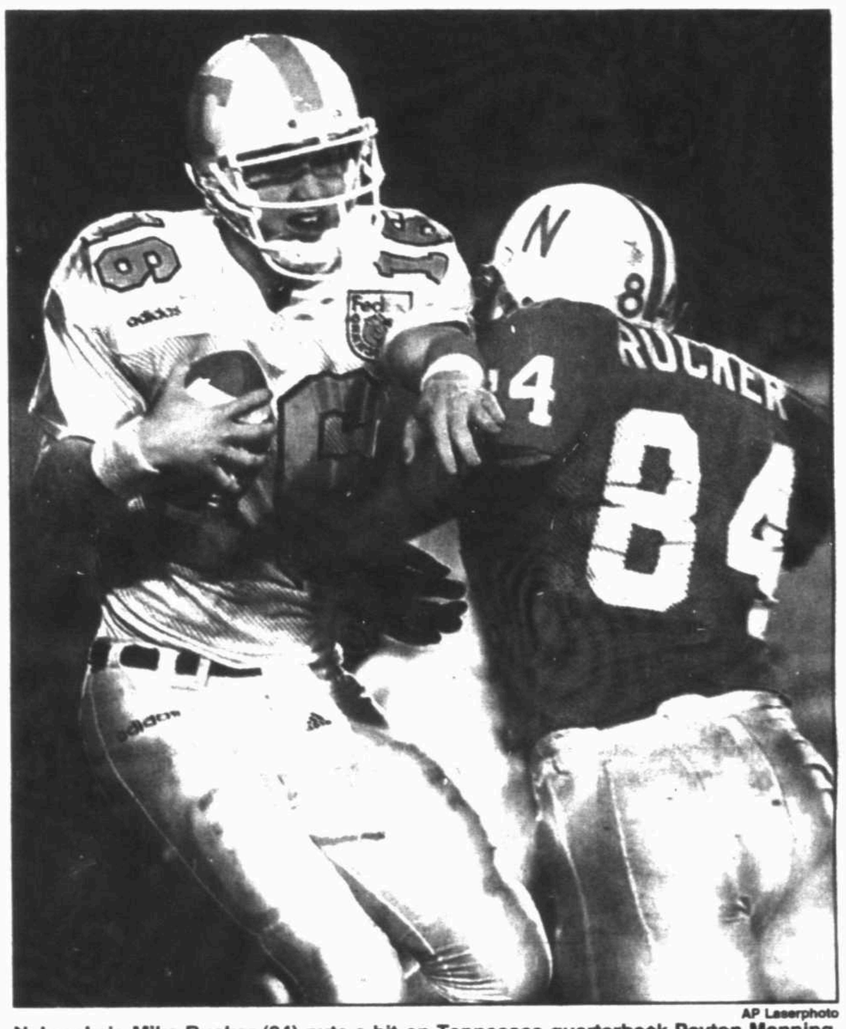

Ahman Green rushed for an Orange Bowl-record 206 yards and two touchdowns to lead the second-ranked Cornhuskers, who limited Peyton Manning — also in his last college game — to 134 yards passing. Frost was 9-for-12 for 125 yards and scored on runs of 1, 11 and 9 yards.

Third-ranked Tennessee finished 11-2, while the Cornhuskers capped a 13-0 season. No. 1 Michigan (12-0) beat Washington State 21-16 Thursday in the Rose Bowl, and every top-ranked team that won its bowl game has been crowned the national champion.

When the polls are released Saturday, Nebraska could become the first undefeated team denied the national title since Penn State in 1994, when the Huskers finished No. 1.

"We can't do any more than win 13," said Osborne, his shirt soaked from an ice-bucket bath courtesy of his players. "We'll just let the chips fall where they Nebraska's Mike Rucker (84) puts a hit on Tennessee quarterback Peyton Manning, during Friday's Orange Bowl in Miami. It was that way all night for Manning, as No. 2 Nebraska trounced the third-ranked Volunteers, 42-17.

■ Tennessee quarterback Manning ends stellar college career on losing note.

By Tom Sharp
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — The final game of Peyton Manning's college career was a bummer.

Not only did he play on a bum knee, but he spent the final minutes of the Tennessee's 42-17 loss to Nebraska on the Orange Bowl sidelines wondering what went wrong.

It was turnovers. The Vols killed their chances with three of them on consecutive possessions in the first half at a time the Tennessee defense still had Nebraska somewhat under control.

"That killed us," Manning said. "You can't turn over the ball against a great team like Nebraska and expect to win.

"We just hurt ourselves. If you give them anything easy their offense is going to make you pay."

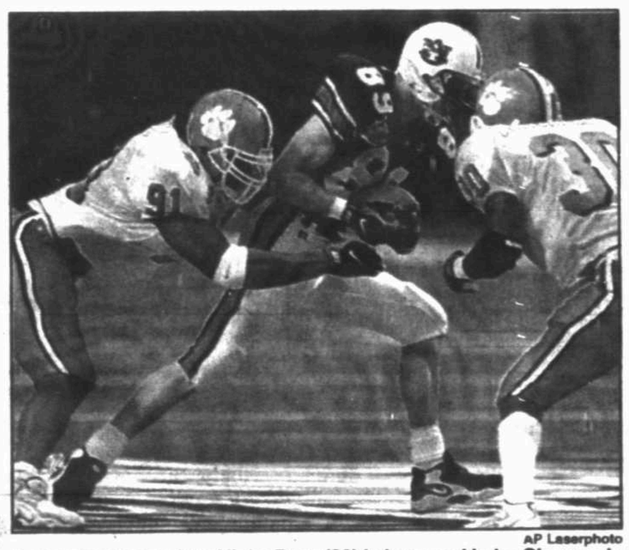

That Nebraska did, and all Manning could do at the end was stand in the gloom near the Tennessee bench at Pro Player Stadium as the Cornhuskers staked their claim to being the nation's best team.

Manning's father, former All-Pro quarterback Archie Manning, said on the sidelines the family was proud of his son's decision to return to college for his senior year, and the way he handled the season.

"I think he had an impact on others, and I'm glad it worked out for him," Archie Manning said. "He stayed healthy, won a (Southeastern Conference) championship, and we're glad he stayed. We're proud of him."

Manning wanted more than an SEC title, but it was not to be. The Vols were their own worst enemy in the first half, and the Cornhuskers were their worst nightmare in the second.

Manning completed 21 of 31 passes, but for only 134 yards as Tennessee went to its quick passing game to negate the strong Nebraska defensive rush. Manning's sore right knee, which put him in the hospital for five days before Christmas, did not appear to be much of a factor, but it was the second-lowest passing total of Manning's senior season.

Auburn defense holds Clemson until QB takes over in 4th quarter

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Defense kept Auburn in the game, special teams nearly lost it and Dameyune Craig helped pull it out in the fourth quarter.

With the Tigers trailing by 11 points, Craig engineered three scoring drives in the final quarter Friday to rally No. 13 Auburn to a 21-17 victory over Clemson in the Peach Bowl.

It was a game Auburn (10-3) seemed primed to give away; allowing three blocked punts, including one for a touchdown and another that led directly to Clemson's second TD.

"We had every opportunity to give up, to quit, to get discouraged and just lose the ballgame because nothing's going right," Auburn coach Terry Bowden said. "But the players showed again the thing that makes this team very special."

Thanks to a 15-point fourth quarter and a defense that allowed just 146 yards, Bowden got his second straight bowl victory and his first 10-win year since Auburn went undefeated in his 1993 rookie season.

Meanwhile, for the third straight year, Clemson (7-5) started the season 3-3, rallied to make a bowl, only to get there and lose.

This loss capped a frustrating season in which Clemson came close to reaching the proverbial next level, losing by just a touchdown to the top teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Florida State and North Carolina.

"We've tried as hard as we could to bring this program to another level," coach Tommy West said. "We were just a little short against some outstanding teams."

Like his teammates, Craig shrugged off a terrible first three quarters and finished with 258 yards pass-

Steelers avoid New England fog this time

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — The New England Patriots must be wondering if they'll get lost in the fog of playoff football this time.

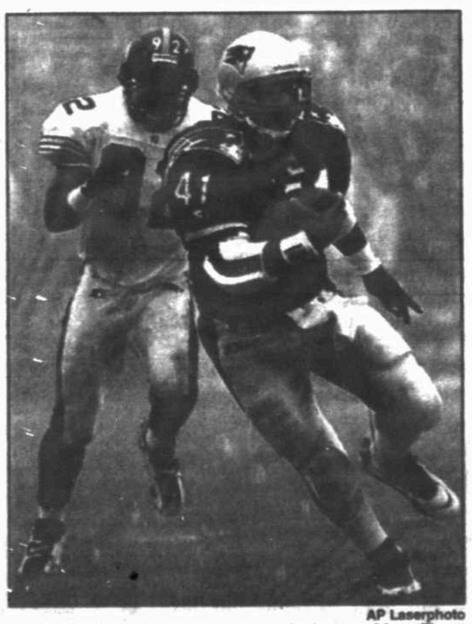

The Patriots had not only the element of surprise — a bomb to Terry Glenn on a momentum-swinging first play — but the elements in their favor when they beat Pittsburgh 28-3 in the AFC playoffs last January.

The Steelers fell behind 21-0 in the thick Massachusetts mist in a loss that ruled out a return trip to the Super Bowl.

"It was a bad day — and a bad feeling," said Steelers coach Bill Cowher, who is 4-5 in the playoffs.

Now, as the Patriots (11-6) and Steelers (11-

Greenwood pulls off sweep of Buffaloes

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

GREENWOOD — Greenwood and Stanton will never be confused for heated rivals. They aren't even in the same district.

However, Greenwood and Stanton are towns just miles apart, and with the opening of their respective district seasons just days away, an otherwise innocent non-district basketball doubleheader took on a different form Friday at the Greenwood gym.

And as the heat turned up on the four teams, it was the hometown Greenwood boys and girls basketball that came away with wins. The Rangers defeated the Buffaloes in a nail-biter, 55-53 while the Rangerettes had an easier time of it, dropping the Lady Buffaloes 46-33.

The Rangers (11-6 overall) defeated Stanton, and in the process, got a big monkey off their back. Justin Morett's Rangers had been exposed for not finishing out games, especially with leads.

Against the Buffs, it looked as though it might happen again. Greenwood opened the fourth quarter with a three-point lead (44-41), and again that advantage was lost as the Buffs opened the quarter with a 7-0 run. However with under two minutes left in the game and the game tied at 49-49, Greenwood came through with some clutch performances as Andrew Wootan fired in a 3-point field goal for a 52-49 Ranger lead. Then, Calef Montes and Larry Johansen added free throws down the stretch to preserve

Osborne leaves with big win, 13-0 record

By Ben Walker
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Tom Osborne never let on.

Nope, there was no way to tell this was his last day at work. He stood on the sideline calmly chewing his favorite Big Red gum, acting as if there would still be a next season.

He kept on coaching until the final play Friday night. And if he was savoring No. 2 Nebraska's 42-17 romp over No. 3 Tennessee in the Orange Bowl, he did not show it.

"He'll have a whole lifetime to reminisce," son Mike said before the game, recording the entire scene with a video camera.

Of course, his fans and players would not let him pass into history so quietly, not after 25 years in one of the most successful careers ever in college football.

"Os-borne! Os-borne!" the red-clad Husker crowd chanted as the clock wound down.

And in the final minutes, defensive stars Grant Wistrom and Jason Peter made sure there would be one more shower — they dumped a bucket of water over Osborne's head. Only then, momentarily, did he crack a tiny smile.

Even in his moment of victory, and his third perfect season in four years, there was no emotion from the 60-year-old coach, only a face as flat as the Plains.

"It's kind of a bittersweet moment," he said, accepting the Orange Bowl championship trophy.

Then, it was a final walk off the field, held up the whole way by handshakes and hugs.

No more practices, no more games against Iowa State or any of the other teams he's beat up for a quarter-century. There was, though, a brief postgame talk to his players and coaches.

It was there, away from the public eye, that his true feelings came out.

"You could hear his voice crack every now and then, but it wasn't like you would expect," guard Aaron Taylor said. "He got a little emotional and told us thanks for everything ... but it was a typical postgame speech."

Osborne left with a 255-49-3 record, including an unbelievable 60-3 mark in the last five years.

His farewell victory was a fitting one, too. It was in the Orange Bowl where he won his first national championship, and it also was in Miami where he lost one of the greatest games, but gained a national reputation, by going for a 2-point conversion that failed.

"We could tell he wanted it," Wistrom said. "There was no way we were going to let him down."

Leaf, McQuarters to enter NFL draft

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press Writer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Ryan Leaf led Washington State to its first Rose Bowl in 67 years. He won't try for a second one.

The strong-armed quarterback said Friday he will pass up his senior year to enter the NFL draft.

"I've accomplished as much as I could in college football," he said. "The next challenge is the NFL."

Leaf said he made up his mind well before his team lost to Michigan 21-16 Thursday in the Rose Bowl.

He said he consulted with some top pro and college quarterbacks, and agent Leigh Steinberg came to his home in Great Falls, Mont., during Thanksgiving.

He finished third in the Heisman Trophy voting last month and has been projected as a high first-round draft pick, and could be the first quarterback chosen.

As a youngster, Leaf was a Pittsburgh Steelers fans, but he does not care which NFL team he plays for.

"Pro football has always been a dream of mine," Leaf said. "I feel the best is ahead for me."

Leaf said the lure of NFL money was not an issue.

"I would play for free," he said. "But if they are going to pay me, I'll take it. You go to college for financial security."

An unusually big quarterback — 6-foot-6 and 240 pounds — Leaf was a fiery, inspirational leader this season. And his departure ends a great year for Washington State, which went 10-2 and gained a No. 8 ranking.

He set Pac-10 records with 3,637 passing yards, 33 touchdown passes and 3,583 yards of total offense. The Cougars averaged 42 points and 502 yards of offense a game.

Leaf holds school records for 305 yards passing in one half, 58 career touchdown passes and five touchdown passes in one game, among others.

"He made as big an impact with the football team as any player we ever had," coach Mike Price said. "He's never played a bad game."

Against top-ranked Michigan, Leaf completed 17 of 35 passes for 331 yards against the nation's best defense. The Cougars were driving for what could have been a winning touchdown when time expired.

"If it wasn't for Ryan Leaf, we wouldn't be here," Price said.

OSU's McQuarters to enter NFL

STILLWATER, Okla. — Versatile Oklahoma State defensive back R.W. McQuarters is giving up his final year of eligibility to enter the NFL draft.

"When I was young, I always wanted to play in the National Football League, and I feel like now is the time for me to go ahead and pursue that dream that I had," McQuarters said Friday. "I'm going to give it a shot."

McQuarters, a two-way starter for the Cowboys, played more than 100 snaps during OSU's 33-20 loss to Purdue in the Alamo Bowl on Tuesday night.

may as far as the rest of it goes.

"It's a great way to end 25 enjoyable years. It's been a lot of fun."

The Big Red's red-haired coach, who announced his retirement Dec. 10, finished a 25-year career with a record of 255-49-3, including 60-3 in the past five years. Nebraska won the national championship in 1994, capping a perfect season with an Orange Bowl victory, and again in 1995.

Unassuming to the end, Osborne spoke briefly at a postgame news conference before directing questions to his team.

"I don't mean to butt in ahead of the players," he said. "They're the guys who did it. I just stood there."

But Osborne's play-calling clicked with surprising success through the air in the first half, when Frost was 7-for-10 for 109 yards, before Nebraska's vaunted running game buried the Volunteers in the second half.

The Cornhuskers' pass rush, meanwhile, forced Manning to hurry his throws. The All-American completed 21 of 31 passes, but with a long gain of just 20 yards, and he was replaced by Tee Martin with four minutes remaining.

"As a senior, it's disappointing to go out on this note," Manning said. "But it can't overshadow the great things we've done this year."

Nebraska led 28-3 before the Vols scored their first touchdown on a 5-yard pass from Manning to Peerless Price. Tennessee committed three turnovers during a 10-minute span in the first half, which helped Nebraska go ahead 14-0.

"You can't turn over the ball against a great team like Nebraska and expect to win," Manning said. "We just hurt ourselves. If you give them anything easy, their offense is going to make you pay."

After Jamal Lewis' fumble ended an early scoring threat by the Vols, Frost hit passes of 25, 16 and 22 yards to set up Green's 1-yard touchdown run. Nebraska took over at the Tennessee 15-yard line when Terry Fair muffed a punt, setting up Shevin Wiggins' 10-yard touchdown run.

Jeff Hall kicked a 44-yard field goal for the Volunteers, but in the second half, the powerful Huskers stayed on the ground and wore down a tiring Tennessee defense.

Nebraska rushed for 227 yards in the third quarter alone, throwing just one pass. Three long drives were capped by touchdown runs of 1 and 11 yards by Frost and 22 yards by Green, making the score 35-9.

Green, who rushed for 1,925 yards and 22 touchdowns this season, was held to 38 yards in the first half but gained 159 yards on 13 carries in the third quarter.

"They handed us our butts in the third quarter," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said. "Physically we got mismatched and whipped."

HOOPS: MHS, Lee boys open 4-5A play

(From 1C)

son at the Tall City Invitational, lost to Midland High 90-59. MHS coach Jack Stephenson doesn't place much stock in the recent past.

"Any time we play Lee it's good for basketball around here," Stephenson said. "We're 17-1 and that's significant to us. People ask us who the toughest team to beat in the district is and I always say Lee."

The Rebels (10-8) lost to South Garland 53-51 in the fifth-place game of the Johnston Wednesday. Earlier in the season, Lee lost to South Garland by 20 points, proving if nothing else that the Rebels are giving opponents a much tougher time the second time they face them.

Midland High can claim five straight victories over Lee dating back to last season, yet there could be something to Stephenson's claim about Lee being the toughest team in the district for MHS to beat. Following Monday's loss, House remained upbeat over his team's chances to eventually beat the Bulldogs.

"I'm not going to tell you what it is but I'm optimistic about Saturday night," said House, like a man who had a secret he was unwilling to reveal until after the game. "We're going to look at videotape and get some things ironed out."

Both the MHS and Lee girls teams are going to have to do some ironing out beginning tonight. Last-second failures by the Lady Dawgs and injuries to the Lady Rebels have put a new spin on the rematch.

Midland High suffered a pair of late defeats in the Johnston, losing to El Paso Hanks 58-55 in the semifinals by missing two three-point shots in the last 17 seconds and failing to hold a four-point lead in the last 36 seconds while losing to Arlington Bowie 64-62 in the third place game. MHS coach Jim Raughton wants to put those two games behind and concentrate on the Lady Rebels.

"I know there are some things we need to come down and improve on the next time," said Raughton of Monday's win over Lee. "We didn't do a very good job taking care of the basketball."

The Lady Dawgs (10-6 overall, 1-0 in district) committed 23 turnovers against Lee, which committed 22 of its own. Heidi Lange's game-high 25 points helped Midland High get out to a 19-point lead which Lee could never quite whittle down.

Lee coach Elise Kail was disappointed with her team's effort in the first three quarters of that game, but felt her team played better in the final two games of the tournament, a 42-41 loss to Plainview and a 37-30 win over Sudan in the seventh place game.

A big part of Midland High's success against Lee came because of its accuracy from the field. The Lady Dawgs hit 22 of 48 shots and also made 35 trips to the free throw line.

"Midland High shot a great game against us," said Kail, whose team is now 6-10 overall and 2-0 in district. "We had hands in their faces and they still put the ball in the bucket. They'll see a little bit different of a defensive set from us."

That could be as much out of necessity as design. The Lady Rebels will be without their only senior, forward Tamika Thurman, who broke her foot against Plainview and whose status for the remainder of the season is in doubt. Also missing will be reserve forward Heather Wells, who tore a medial collateral ligament in her knee.

GREENWOOD: Rangers sweep Stanton

(From 1C)

a huge win.

"We got a lead and held on to it," Morett said. "We have dropped close ones, and to get this win will maybe build a little confidence."

Morett pointed specifically to Stanton's previous performance against the Buffs (a 60-57 loss earlier this week at the Reagan County Tournament). In that game, Greenwood turned the ball over 14 times in the second half. Friday, the Rangers just gave the ball up five times. They also did the little things to get a win over a taller, more athletic Buffalo team.

"I told them if we do the things we can do, we would be ahead in the third quarter," Morett said. "The kids perked up when they realized they had a chance."

For the Buffaloes, this was a close game and that is maybe what Doug Gordon's Buffaloes needed especially with their shortened pre-district season. The Buffaloes started the season ranked fifth in the opening Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' Class 2A poll. However, the success of the Stanton's state championship football team kept athletes on the grid iron and away from the hardwood. That meant little practice time to get the team where Gordon thinks it needs to be at this point of the season.

"It will take two weeks and then we will turn into a good club. People will not want to play us then," Gordon said. "While everyone else is fine-tuning, we are trying to get the basics. If we can survive until then and get out of district, the experience of the football team will be a positive."

"We are 3-1 against tough competitions," Gordon added. "We feel good that we had a chance to win. They (Greenwood) are district champions and they got good kids."

Friday, Gordon's team came out like the one which defeated Greenwood, Ozona and Ballinger en route to a title at the Reagan County Tournament. The Buffs never trailed in the first half, stretching the lead to nine once. However in the second half, Greenwood outscored Stanton 19-11. During that run, Greenwood forced five turnovers and held the Buffs to just 4-of-11 shooting.

The Rangers were led by Wootan's 13, John Settles added 12 and Montes threw in 11. For the Buffaloes, Marcus Washington scored a game-high 17, Chad Smith 11, and Kyle Herm added 10.

In the girls game, the Rangerettes ran away from the Lady Buffaloes from the beginning to improve to 9-10 overall.

The Rangerettes got 15 points from freshman Valerie Wootan and 13 from Kristi Brown, but it was the defense that responsible for the Rangerettes' 22-5 run to open the game. Greenwood forced 12 turnovers during that stretch and forced 19 for the game.

"I thought out girls busted their rears, but we can't handle the ball," Stanton coach Ron Mayberry said. "That affects everything we do."

Stanton had lost three players over the holiday break and that played a part in the loss, but Allan Wootan's team did the rest. Greenwood won all the battles inside and outside and played the style of basketball that has the coach ready to get district play started. He thinks that things may get even better before the district opener next Friday against Crane.

"I thought we played well," Wootan said. "We have four days to get ready for district. That is the most consecutive days we have had."

Though the Rangerettes' lead was never in jeopardy, Stanton did take a nice chuck out of it. The Lady Buffs' Jonna Moore scored 11 of her 14 points in the last quarter while Randi Simer added five of her 11. In the fourth quarter, Stanton scored 16 which was almost as much as he Lady Buffs scored in the previous three.

"We were fortunate to have that cushion," Wootan said.

PEACH: Auburn rallies

ing, including a perfect 28-yard lob to Karsten Bailey to set up the go-ahead touchdown, a 7-yard run by Rusty Williams with 8:45 left.

Craig finished just 15-for-45, but showed the resilience that led Bowden to base his entire offense around the quarterback when Patrick Nix left two years ago.

"When it was going bad, I pulled Dameyune over and said, 'I can't lie to you, you better go out there and do it,'" Bowden said. "I told him this was going to be his final statement and that wasn't how he wanted it to be."

On the drive after the go-ahead score, Williams made a spectacular one-handed grab on the sideline for a 34-yard gain to set up Jaret Holmes' third field goal — the game's final points.

Auburn linebacker Ricky Neal had 12 tackles to lead a defense that played its best game of the year despite Bowden's decision to send two starters home for breaking team rules on New Year's Eve.

Bowden applauded fifth-year seniors Nate Smith, Shannon Suttle and Bobby Daffin, all reserves who played significant roles in the starters' absence.

"I don't think we missed the starters one bit and we won't miss them next year if they don't want to come back and be good Auburn people," Bowden said.

Given four weeks to prepare, coordinator Bill Oliver crafted a game plan that held Clemson to four first downs, just 60 yards rushing and no third-down conversions until late in the fourth quarter.

Loss of stars puts pressure on 49ers' young receivers

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — First, Terrell Owens and J.J. Stokes were called on to replace Jerry Rice. Now, the San Francisco 49ers are leaning on their young receivers to help make up for the loss of their big running threat.

The 49ers (13-3), the NFC's top seed, enter Saturday's divisional playoff against Minnesota (10-7) without 1,000-yard rusher Garrison Hearst, whose broken collarbone from a month ago needs additional healing time.

That means another identity change for the 49ers, who began the year by building the offense around Rice only to lose him twice — to torn knee ligaments in the season opener and then a cracked kneecap in his comeback Dec. 15.

With Rice down, the 49ers cultivated an image as a running team, and for the first time since 1984, they ran the ball more than they passed this season. But Terry Kirby has struggled since replacing Hearst as the starter, averaging 2.6 yards on 43 carries in the past three games.

Kirby will be sharing tailback duties Saturday with Chuck Levy, who showed speed and elusiveness while running for 61 yards on eight carries in the season finale at Seattle.

But the 49ers also will be counting on more production from their passing attack, a trend that started in their first game without Hearst, a 28-17 victory over the Vikings on Dec. 7. Steve Young, the league's top-rated passer for a sixth time, went 20 of 25 for 280 yards and two touchdowns in his best all-around game of the year.

"I think if you looked at tendencies and studied us, we've been playing a little bit more wide open," 49ers coach Steve Mariucci said. "We're not running the ball quite as often as we had with Garrison, although we have not abandoned the running game and we will not."

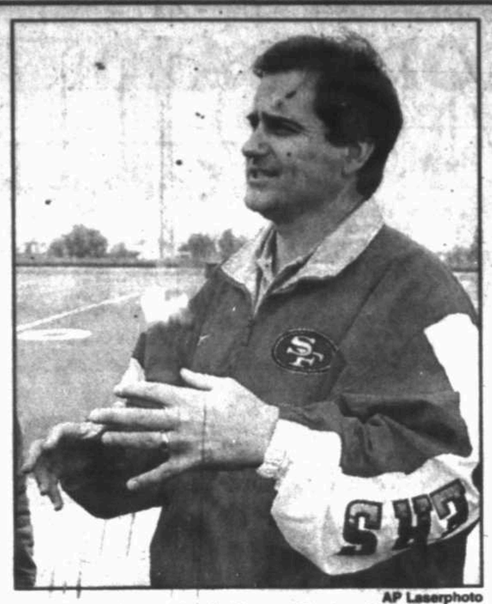

Between them, Stokes and Owens had a Rice-like year, combining for 118 receptions for 1,669 yards and 12 touchdowns. Owens, with 60 catches for 936 yards and eight TDs, was the first receiver other than Rice to lead the 49ers in receptions since 1988, when Roger Craig led the club.

The two also accounted for the bulk of the receptions in San Francisco's previous meeting with Minnesota, making six receptions each.

Owens, a second-year pro, and Stokes, a third-year player who completed his first full season without injury, have each appeared in only one postseason game. But the lack of playoff experience doesn't worry them.

"I feel like we've just got to go out there and make plays like we've done all year," Owens said.

San Francisco will be facing a Minnesota defense that was overhauled in the aftermath of the loss to the 49ers. Six starting positions were changed and four rookies are starting on defense for the first time in team history.

San Francisco coach Steve Mariucci will be on the sidelines for his first NFL playoff game as head coach when the 49ers host the Minnesota Vikings today.

"They're bringing a lot of fire to the team," cornerback Corey Fuller said. "They're just playing outstanding right now. They're still learning which way to go, learning all their positions. But they are doing a great job."

The Vikings, who last week upset the New York Giants 23-22 by rallying for 10 points in the last 90 seconds, also believe they've gotten better on offense since their last meeting with San Francisco.

Elway seeks to haunt Schottenheimer again

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — So many subplots.

Will John Elway break Marty Schottenheimer's spirit this time as well as his heart? Or will Sunday's Denver-Kansas City game end Schottenheimer's Elway jinx and propel the Chiefs coach — 5-10 in the playoffs — toward his first Super Bowl?

And what of Elway? Time is bound to catch up with Denver's renowned quarterback, 0-3 in the big game Schottenheimer can't even get to. Could his 15th season be his last good shot at winning one?

Which group of castoff defensive linemen will extract revenge from the teams that discarded them? Former Chiefs Neil Smith and Keith Traylor? Or former Broncos Dan Williams and Michael Dean Perry? They all shrug and say beating their old team would be no big deal. Nobody believes it.

Can a Kansas City defense that allowed an NFL-low 14.5 points per game stop a Denver offense that led the AFC with an average of 367 yards and 29.5 points? In their two regular-season meetings, they did. While each beat the other at home, the Chiefs held the Broncos' high-octane offense to just two touchdowns and nine Jason Elam field goals.

Will the bad blood simmering all season between the AFC West rivals erupt in a brawl? The Chiefs (13-3) and Broncos (13-4) had the two best regular-season records in the AFC. But charges and counter-charges flew last time they met, and, frankly, these teams don't like each other much.

And what about Elvis Grbac? After missing six games with a broken collarbone, Kansas City's lanky quarterback looked rusty and out of sync while hitting just five of 14 passes in the regular-season finale.

Nevertheless, he'll start instead of Rich Gannon, the faithful backup who guided the Chiefs to a five-game winning streak in Grbac's absence and had them humming like a finely tuned engine.

The Grbac-or-Gannon debate has stirred Chiefs fans for three weeks. If Schottenheimer thinks he's been second-guessed before, just stand back and watch what happens if Grbac falters and puts the Chiefs in a hole.

"My feeling is this," Schottenheimer said. "The quarterback is one piece of the puzzle. All the other components have to be in place. I fully expect we'll get a winning performance out of Elvis Grbac."

After the Chiefs' last-play, 24-22 victory in November, many Broncos accused Kansas City of playing dirty, of becoming "the new" Oakland Raiders. The Chiefs called the Broncos a bunch of whiners.

Chiefs center Tim Grunhard had said on his weekly radio show a few days before that Schottenheimer "hated" the Broncos and offered to pay any fines his players incurred. Schottenheimer denied it and the league did nothing.

But guess what the Chiefs have banned during the playoffs?

Player radio shows.

PITTSBURGH: Steelers own momentum

(From 1C)

5) are rematched in the AFC semifinals one year later, it seems everything has changed — and not just the weather report, which calls for rain showers but no fog Saturday.

The site has shifted, from Foxboro to Three Rivers Stadium, where the Steelers have won 21 of their last 23 and the Patriots are 0-5 since 1986.

"Yeah, but we don't want to go home now," defensive tackle Henry Thomas said. "All the holidays are over. All the good parties are done."

With one more loss, the Patriots' season will be done, too.

The momentum has also shifted perceptibly to the Steelers, who are healthy and rested after playing only one meaningless game since beating New England 24-21 in overtime Dec. 13.

The Patriots, by contrast, had to defeat rival Miami twice in a week just to earn Saturday's rematch, leaving them only six days to prepare for their biggest game of the season.

"But there's no long season at this time of the year," Cowher said. "You can see the light at the end of the tunnel, and it's very bright."

It doesn't seem nearly as dark for the Steelers as it did a year ago in foggy Foxboro, where Jerome Bettis grimaced on every carry because of a groin injury and was held to 43 yards. This time, Patriots star Curtis Martin has an injured groin and probably won't play.

"My whole body feels better, and it's also great that we're playing them in our backyard, not their backyard," said Bettis, who said his sprained knee isn't a problem.

Martin had 166 yards against his hometown Steelers a January ago, but if he can't play, former practice squad player Derrick Cullors will be left as the Patriots' top runner. He had only 19 yards against Pittsburgh last month in an offense that has rushed for 100 yards just once in seven games.

Running back Dave Meggett, who scored on a touchdown pass against Pittsburgh three weeks ago, is also likely out with a groin injury.

Martin's absence again shifts the weight of the offense, and all the accompanying pressure, onto quarterback Drew Bledsoe. He started big with two 300-yard games in September as the Patriots opened 4-0 but has only one completion of more than 50 yards in his last six games.

"I think he has to have a terrific game for us," said coach Pete Carroll, whose offense manufactured only 31 points against Miami the last two weeks. "There's no question about that. I think we have to throw and catch the ball very well and Drew has to be a big factor in the game."

One plus is the return of Glenn, who returned against Miami after missing five games with a hamstring injury to give the Patriots a downfield threat. He made only 27 catches during the season, but his presence forces defenses to make significant alterations in their coverage.

"Defenses have to pay special attention to him," Bledsoe said. "Without Curtis, I know we're not going to try and pound the running game as much as we would if he were in there. I know I'm going to have to be precise, take care of the football, score points and get the job done. I enjoy playing that type of game."

He'll enjoy it more if he keeps the ball away from Kevin Henry, whose interception of a poorly thrown screen pass allowed the Steelers to rally from an eight-point deficit with only two minutes remaining last month.

At the time, the Patriots were a first down away from a victory that would have given them the home-field edge this weekend.

"This is a revenge match," linebacker Chris Slade said.

Bledsoe said he can't allow himself to think that way.

"It stuck with me for a few days," he said. "It's a play that hurt our season and our standing in the playoffs. But I'm over it now and hopefully we can rectify it with a win this week."

Bucs have Levens' number

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

GREEN BAY, Wis. — In his first season as Green Bay's feature rusher, Dorsey Levens piled up yards and Pro Bowl votes at a pace second only to Barry Sanders among NFC running backs.

On the heels of a strong finish last year, Levens took over rushing duties for the Green Bay Packers when Edgar Bennett went down with a torn Achilles' tendon in the preseason.

Without having to split snaps, Levens flourished, rushing for 1,435 yards in establishing himself as one of the league's best running backs.

He ran roughshod over everybody except the one team that really had his number — the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, whom the Packers face in a playoff game Sunday at Lambeau Field.

Levens managed just 44 and 54 yards in Green Bay's sweep of the Bucs. In all other games, he averaged 95 yards rushing.

He averaged 2.8 yards per carry against Tampa, compared to 4.5 yards against everybody else.

Levens said he was eager for another shot at strong safety John Lynch and Tampa's small but quick front seven that take away the outside rush.

"It's a challenge for me, the offensive line and (fullback) William Henderson," Levens said Friday. "Those guys have pretty much shut us down on the ground the last two times we've played them."

GMC Denali peaks as luxury edition of big Yukon

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

MOUNTAINAIRE, Ariz. — Heading north out of Sedona, route 89 runs up Oak Creek Canyon toward Flagstaff until butting against bluffs of the Mogollon Rim, a sheer escarpment stretching for hundreds of miles across Arizona.

A ribbon of asphalt threads like a twisted serpent up those cliffs, scaling thousands of vertical feet in a course littered with tricky chicanes and blind hairpin curves.

Drive this road on a Saturday in July and your progress will be impeded by a slow line of tourists stacking up behind humongous recreational vehicles, with drivers intimidated by their closeness to so many cliffs.

Drive it early on an autumn weekday morning when the tourists have gone home and you'll be alone to play.

A recent romp up the cliffs of Oak Creek Canyon turned into an exercise in surefooted but plush motoring, with driver and passenger ensconced in a deluxe new edition of the full-size Yukon sport-utility wagon from GMC Truck.

Dubbed Denali — a name drawn from native Alaskan Athabascan people to describe "the High One" of Mt. McKinley, tallest peak on the continent — this sport-ute represents the top of the Yukon line in a leather-trimmed environment charged with overwhelming horsepower.

Denali stands out with sophisticated monochromatic dark color scheme on an exterior form accented by bold front hood with rectangular center port grille and flanking jewel-like lenses of sparkling halogen headlamps.

It rides high On special Firestone 16-inch tires and carries front tow hooks and plenty of protective cladding around the lower body, plus side integrated body-color running boards and, at the rear, a functional step bumper which hides a trailer hitch.

And beneath that muscular hood Denali conceals a V8 powerplant which twitches with the strength of 255 horses to charge a hill route like the bluffs of Oak Creek Canyon.

An electronic powertrain control module regulates fuel injection, with micro-adjustments of the mixture of air and fuel. This means instantaneous compensation for stressful effects such as altitude, like my Denali faced in climbing Arizona cliffs, as well as load. The result: Continual dependable power flow.

To find Denali's position in the GMC lineup of SW wagons: understand that it spins off the full-size Yukon 4 door wagon and measures more than the compact wagon, Jimmy, but not quite as much as gigantic Suburban. Denali's 117.5-inch wheelbase, six inches longer than the 2-door Yukon, exceeds Jimmy's 4-door wheelbase by ten inches yet still falls 14 inches short of massive Suburban.

The iron-block 5.7-liter Vortec engine also provides serious muscle for towing a trailer's load. When coupled at the towing hitch, Denali can lug a trailer rig weighing up to 6,500 pounds.

Denali's plant mates with a 4-speed automatic transmission which modulates shift points to enhance torque in lower gears.

For ultimate traction, it also packs a 4-wheel-drive system which operates with pushbutton ease.

Essentially, the wagon functions with rear-wheel traction for typical pavement applications. However, a new automatic transfer case — called ActiveTrac — positions 4wheel-drive mode in stand-by readiness, thanks to a dashboard toggle switch. On-board sensors can detect wheel slippage, and when road conditions become slick with rain or snow the system automatically switches from rear-drive to 4-wheel-drive mode to ensure proper traction.

In addition, you can punch up a low-gear setting of the 4-wheel-drive mode for venturing off-road into more rugged terrain where steady low-end torque helps carry Denali over rocks, roots, bumps and bulges.

The wagon feels rock-solid to drive.

Its ladder-type chassis uses welded crossbars and a boxed front for increased rigidity in motion.

The platform supports a fully independent front suspension and rear semi-elliptical multi-leaf spring. Tack on variable-ratio power steering and power brakes tied to the 4wheel anti-lock system and Denali ends up with important ingredients for smooth maneuvers either on pavement or off-road.

From driver's vantage behind the wheel, it stands tall and rides high, so you can peer above other vehicles.

And the interior, laced with ultimate luxury features, provides plenty of space for riders and gear.

Park Denali next to Suburban and you will be pressed to tell them apart, since both exhibit a similar form from front bumper through the B pillar. Beyond the front seatback, however, Suburban gets extra room to add a third tier of seats so it can carry up to nine people, while Denali maximizes with five riders due to front bucket seats.

Detect differences by comparing the second set of doors on each side: Suburban's rear door edge forms a straight line from top to bottom and fits in front of the rear wheel-well, while the door of Denali has a notch near the bottom to tuck around that arched well.

Also, this wagon will fit neatly into a home garage, while Suburban cannot due to its extra length.

Recent tests of the 4-door Yukon Denali included a day's drive from Sedona to Las Vegas, Nev., following canyon routes, multi-lane interstate links across the upper plateau and one long and straight speed shot through the high desert on old Route 66 from Seligman to Peach Springs.

These tests revealed that Denali rides smoothly on the open road and maneuvers easily in traffic, despite that massive size, and it stocks enough luxury items to make one feel like you're riding in some fancy sedan.

Denali contains a number of favored features as standard equipment, such a power windows and door locks, leather-wrapped steering wheel, cruise control, tilting steering wheel, and soft leather seat upholstery with decorative interior touches of glossy Zebrano wood trim.

It also applies a premium entertainment package of Bose stereo in 6-speaker package with 6-disc CD changer.

Further, GM's PassLock theft deterrent system is onboard, as is the optional OnStar communication system which uses global positioning satellites to track the vehicle. Tied to a hands-free cellular phone, OnStar can dispatch emergency services or through connection to an operator guide a lost driver to a desired destination. ■

AUTO ALBUM
1964 PLYMOUTH
BY TAD BURNESS

"Get up and go Plymouth!"(1964 slogan).

1964 is the year that Plymouth introduced the sharply wedge-shaped rear-quarter window section on some of its two-door hardtops (as illustrated). This Sport Fury was Plymouth's top-line model in 1964, and available either in two-door hardtop or convertible body styles.

Though V8s were extremely popular in the 1960s, when gas was under 35 cents a gallon and there were four gas stations at some busy intersections, the aslant-six" (introduced 1960) was the best and longest-lasting of Plymouth's many available engine choices. The slant-six was a vastly superior design and was used for years in some Valiants, Plymouths, Dodges, Darts and Lancers, as well as in some more recent models.

The choice of seven different engines offered by Plymouth in 1964 was a wasteful idea! It raised production costs, and caused various complications as these cars got older. Most American makes of cars competed hotly in the 1960s to offer " something for everyone," thus spawning a vast array of engines, transmissions, options (including power assets of all types), body types, paint and upholstery combinations, etc., which seemed almost endless each year and in nearly any model line!

On the other hand, Volkswagen, with a simple little two-door model (initially), made great inroads into the American market in the late 1950s and throughout the 1960s!

This writer strongly believes that multiple choices should be more or less limited to paint and upholstery combinations and not expanded to a very costly proliferation of mechanical variations that can only complicate things in the long run! Of the various V8s Plymouth offered in 1964, only its then-new 318 CID variety has stood the test of time.

At any rate, a 1964 Plymouth Sport Fury like the illustrated car is now a hot item among car collectors all around the world!

Chevrolet's Electric S-10 Pickup Truck

By Neal White

NASHVILLE, Tenn. _ There's enough power to squeal the tires, but the engine is quieter than a church mouse during Sunday service. Last year Chevrolet began marketing its S-10 Electric truck, primarily to fleet lines in the US. The S-10 Electric truck meets EV America minimum requirements as outlined by the US Department of Energy. Robert E. Hayes, commercial manager for the S-10 Electric truck, said sales have been going well for the first year of production. ``We have several fleets that are using them now,'' he added.

I admit, I was skeptical. The thought of an electric-powered truck just seemed to go against the grain of tradition. One test drive changed my mind.

Driving is Believing

On the surface, it looks just like a gas-powered S-10. The standard features are about the same: cruise control, tilt steering wheel, power steering and brakes, driver side airbag and AM//FM stereo. Turn the key, however, and you won't hear anything except the click of the dashboard instruments coming on line. That's it. All you have to do now is shift into gear and push the accelerator, just like an electric golf cart only with a lot more power. While it won't set a land speed record, the S-10 Electric truck does have quick acceleration off the line. In fact, it has a quarter-mile speed of 67.6 mph. That's not too shabby, especially when you consider you can't hear any sound coming from beneath the hood.

Short Range

At an average cruising speed of 45 mph, the S-10 Electric truck has a range of just over sixty miles. While that doesn't sound like a lot of miles, keep in mind that most fleet operations have a small service area. This makes it convenient to bring the trucks back to the central depot at the end of the day and recharge the twenty-six module, valve regulated lead acid batteries made by Delphi Energy. The modules are located beneath the truck and require an off-board charging system and takes about five hours and fifteen minutes to totally recharge. According to Chevrolet fuel efficiency estimates, the S-10 Electric truck cost approximately 4.7 cents per mile to operate and is virtually pollution free. Also, the regenerative braking system helps produce power for electrical components during operation. The S-10 Electric truck has a curb weight of 4,200 pounds and can carry a payload of 951 pounds. ■

TOP TEN REASONS TO BUY YOUR NEW VEHICLE FROM A MIDLAND DEALER

1. PRICING: New car dealers buy direct from the manufacturers. Prices are equalized no matter how far the dealer is from the factory. You can be assured that you're getting the best price possible on your new vehicle.

2. SELECTION: Dealers have a tremendous inventory and quick access to a wide selection of models, options, colors and safety features that meet your needs.

3. REBATES: Dealers offer you attractive manufacturer rebates that can bring you substantial savings.

4. SERVICE/REPAIRS: By maintaining your car according to the manufacturer's maintenance schedule you can retain better value and increase the life of your vehicle. Dealers employ factory-certified mechanics.

5. REGULATIONS: Dealers must comply with all federal, state and local laws, as well as standards established by the vehicle manufacturers.

6. WARRANTIES: Dealers employ factory-trained professionals to perform warranty work. Dealers can provide extended factory warranties and other factory sponsored products that protect your investment.

7. FINANCING: Dealers offer attractive financing rates through a number of sources which could result in monthly payments to fit your budget.

8. STABILITY: You can feel confident knowing that they will be available to provide service and support long after you make your purchase.

9. PRODUCT KNOWLEDGE: Dealers and their sales and service personnel are equipped with specialized knowledge of their particular product lines, giving you valuable information on vehicle performance.

10. COMMITMENT: Dealers are committed to the community, employing skilled professionals, generating tax revenues and participating in civic, cultural and charitable activities. They value lasting relationships with customers and a variety of businesses to build your trust and your loyalty.
