Jury gives 50-year sentence to convicted murderer

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Convicted murderer Sherry Henderson, 21, of Odessa, received a sentence of 50 years in prison after a Midland jury deliberated into the early morning hours Saturday in 238th District Court.

Jurors deliberated about two hours Friday before finding the defendant guilty as charged in the Nov. 27, 1993, shooting death of Midlander Angela Perkins-Belcher.

Lead counsel for the prosecution, Brian Carney, was pleased with the sentence. "I thought it was very appropriate . . . it corresponded with the crime," he said.

Attorneys for the defense were clearly surprised by the 50-year sentence for the harshest verdict that could be handed the 21-year-old mother of three.

"I'm flabbergasted . . . truly," Abner Burnett, lead counsel for the defense said about the verdict.

Burnett claimed the sentence was improper, especially because of the light sentences in two recent cases, including Ramsey Harrell, who got a 12-year sentence for shooting a man four times in the back of the head.

The verdict came after 2½ days of testimony that ended Friday.

Ms. Perkins-Belcher's father, Tony Belcher, was visibly relieved when the seven-woman, five-man jury's verdict was read by Judge John Hyde.

Jurors elected to stay and hear testimony in the punishment phase of the trial and handed down the sentence just after 1 a.m. Saturday.

In Friday's testimony, Ms. Henderson testified that she had purchased the revolver four days before the Strike poll

Major league baseball players are set to go on strike Friday. The main issue separating the owners from the players is a salary cap that would put limits on the players' earning power. A strike would likely wash out the remainder of the 1994 season and could even cancel the 1995 season. President Clinton hinted last week that his administration could intervene in the strike — much like it did in the American Airlines strike earlier this year — if it would help resolve the labor dispute between the two sides in a more expeditious manner. Should the federal government become involved in the baseball strike if it helps return the game to the playing field quicker? We'd like to know your views. Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400, then enter Category 7655. If you're in favor of governmental intervention to help resolve baseball's labor dispute, press 1. If you feel the Clinton administration should stay out of the controversy, press 2. You'll also be asked to leave your comments on the baseball strike. The Reporter-Telegram asks that you leave your name but that is optional. The poll will remain open until noon Tuesday. Results of the non-scientific voting will be published in Wednesday's edition.

2 to split millions

Two tickets bought in the Houston area correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot is worth $17 million. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 2, 6, 23, 36, 42 and 45. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $3 million.

Crime bill

WASHINGTON — In a risky election-year gambit, Republicans are trying to keep President Clinton and Democrats from seizing the crime issue by painting a $33 billion measure before Congress as a pork-laden liberal spending spree./9A

Serbs return U.N. weapons after air strike

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Stung by a NATO air strike, Bosnian Serbs returned weapons they had seized from a U.N.-guarded depot and peacekeepers turned on Saturday to ferreting out snipers terrifying the city.

Fighting raged elsewhere in Bosnia, some of the most severe in Vares, just 20 miles from the capital of Sarajevo.

The air strike, in which two U.S. A-10s destroyed an anti-tank vehicle, came after Bosnian Serbs took a tank, two armored personnel carriers and a mobile anti-aircraft gun from a U.N. depot just west of Sarajevo. Serbs fired at a U.N. helicopter sent to check on the tank.

There were no casualties reported in the air strike. The Bosnian Serbs, facing increasingly strong resistance from the government army and abandonment by their patrons in Serbia, said they needed the weapons for the Vares battle.

The seizures violated a NATO ultimatum banning heavy weapons in a 12.5-mile zone around Sarajevo. NATO and U.N. officials threatened further air strikes if the Serbs again violated the exclusion zone.

U.N. spokesman Maj. Rob Annink made clear that the overall issue of heavy weapons in the exclusion zone had not been resolved, and that the United Nations was protesting to the Serbs about mortar rounds fired recently near Sarajevo, including three rounds fired Friday.

A peacekeeper peers through binoculars Friday, trying to find source of gunfire near U.N. headquarters in Sarajevo.

The exclusion zone, established in February, had brought a semblance of normalcy to the city that had been under siege for nearly two years. But truce violations have increased recently, notably sniper fire.

Annink said peacekeeper patrols

Program hopes to end voter apathy, starts with children

Staff Report

ODESSA — When trying to break through voter apathy, start young.

"Even better, have children vote alongside their parents," said Rollie Hyde, chairman of Kids Voting of Texas.

Kids Voting of Texas is a pilot program of Kids Voting USA. The program encourages adults to take children with them while voting on election day, and allows youngsters to place their own ballots in a different ballot box.

Because parents must accompany their children to the polls, it increases voter turnout. In states where Kids Voting has been integrated into the classroom, adult voting increased an average of 4 percent the first year.

Hyde, the former advertising manager of the Reporter-Telegram and current publisher of the Plainview Daily Herald, will present a program on Kids Voting USA at noon Friday at Region 18 Education Service Center, 2811 LaForce Blvd.

Three Arizona businessmen conceived the Kids Voting program. They researched voting habits of people in Costa Rica, where a 90 percent voter turnout is the norm. The trio found that

Fred Zain, a police chemist, is charged with lying in court, tampering with evidence.

Officials to review cases after chemist is charged with lying

By Sau Chan
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Fred Zain, a police chemist whose expert testimony and lab tests helped put scores of rapists and murderers behind bars in two states over 13 years, now finds himself in the dock.

Zain is charged with lying in court and tampering with evidence in his laboratories, compelling judges in West Virginia and Texas to release men sent to prison on the strength of blood and semen samples Zain verified.

"I really have no idea why he did what he did," said Jack Buckalew, a former superintendent of the West Virginia State Police. "The only possible reason I can speculate on is to enhance his status with prosecutors by saying what he thought they wanted him to say."

Zain, 43, surrendered on Thursday in Hondo, to answer charges of aggravated perjury, evidence tampering and fabrication connected to the 1990 rape conviction of Gilbert Alejandro.

"I think there's no criminal intent," attorney Sam Bayless said.

Officials: Mandates aren't all necessary

■ Implementing directives has cost Midland more than $3.5 million in last three years.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Unfunded federal and state mandates handed down to local governments have cost Midland more than $3.5 million in the last three years.

"We're not in a financial crisis but if these mandates continue at this rate then we'll get to the point we cannot handle it without going to the taxpayers for additional funds," said at-large City Council representative William Morrow.

Implementing the directives has cost the city $3,534,998. And required upkeep costs — for applicable mandates — will run about $1,514,369 annually.

In addition, there are indirect expenses and city employee-time costs that have not been calculated into these figures.

"If you wouldn't have had these mandates these dollars could have gone somewhere else," Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said.

Although city officials sympathize with the need for some of the mandates, they generally think many are inappropriate for Midland, or

Cubans guard waterfront after riots

■ Castro blames recent exodus and unrest on U.S., threatens to allow free emigration which raises specter of refugee tidal wave bound for America.

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Police and Communist Party militants guarded the Havana waterfront Saturday after a rare show of political unrest in Cuba, sparked by a wave of refugees fleeing the island nation.

President Fidel Castro gave no figures on the damages caused by the melee in which thousands of anti-government demonstrators battled police with sticks and stones on Friday and looted stores.

The Mexican government news agency Notimex said the crowd was drawn to the harbor Friday by reports that fleeing Cubans had hijacked a ferry for the fourth time in two weeks.

Notimex said there were numerous injuries and arrests, and among those arrested were several people who hijacked the ferryboat Baragua on Thursday. Authorities refused to give details.

News reports said two policemen were killed during that hijack. The Baragua ran out of fuel about 11 miles off the Cuban coast and was brought back to the island by patrol boats.

The U.S. Coast Guard in Miami said it picked 68 people on three boats and five rafts from Cuba on Saturday. Lt. Cmdr. San Cutrer said the number was slightly higher than most weekends, but noted that the weather has been calm.

So far this year, nearly 5,000 Cubans have made it to Florida — 173 in just the first four days of August, the Coast Guard said.

"Liberty! Democracy! Enough!" the crowd chanted before clashes began with police and the militants, Notimex and witnesses said.

A Cuban who spoke with The Associated Press on condition of anonymity said some of the demonstrators were armed with pistols and fired shots while angry crowds stoned the Deauville Hotel on the waterfront.

"Thousands of people supporting Fidel rushed into the streets after hearing the shots, with clubs and steel rods," he said.

On Saturday, police and pro-government workers with sticks patrolled the harbor area, closing streets to all traffic.

Workers swept up broken glass and replaced shattered windows in tourist shops that accept only foreign currency.

Castro blamed the United States for encouraging the recent exodus and threatened to allow free emigration, raising the specter of a huge wave of refugees as in the Mariel boatlift.

"I do not want to say there will be another Mariel, but I say that either they impose order and end these provocations or we will stop guarding the coast of the United States," Castro said during a tour of the riot zone late Friday.

Christopher rejects Arafat on Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher rejected a demand Saturday by Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat for immediate negotiations over the future of this divided city.

Christopher also warned Arafat during a meeting in Alexandria, Egypt, that the World Bank and donor nations would delay their pledged contributions of $2.4 billion over five years unless the Palestinian authority running Gaza and Jericho adopts modern accounting measures.

Christopher met with Arafat before flying to Jerusalem where he had dinner with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and discussed the peace process and violence in southern Lebanon.

A senior U.S. official said Christopher on Friday called Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa and Rabin to urge an end to the bloodshed, which the Clinton administration has blamed on "enemies of peace."

Another topic at the dinner table was the slow pace with which world donors have contributed to the Palestinian authority in Gaza. A senior Israeli official said his government shared U.S. concerns, especially since failure to pay the salaries of Palestinian police could have a negative effect on safety standards.

"You're in a process that's not neat and clean," a senior U.S. official said after Christopher, Arafat and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak caucused for 80 minutes in Mubarak's palace alongside the Mediterranean. Specifically, the donors — including the United States, which has pledged $500 million — are concerned about a scarcity of receipts for claimed expenses.

Christopher was on his fourth trip to the Middle East in three months focusing mostly on the locked talks between Israel and Syria over the future of the Golan Heights. He plans one or possibly two trips between Jerusalem and Damascus to try to narrow the differences over the territory, peace terms and security measures.

The deadlock contrasts sharply with the progress toward peace between Israel and two other Arab parties, Jordan and the PLO. Syrian President Hafez Assad has declined an offer by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin that they meet face to face. Instead, Christopher is acting as an energetic intermediary, even while his top aides say only direct negotiations could produce a peace treaty.

The Jerusalem issue cropped up during Arafat's visit to Gaza last month when he insisted only the Palestinians have authority over the Muslim holy sites in the city. As Israel and Jordan declared that Israel "respects the present special role" of Jordan with regard to Jerusalem, Arafat demanded the city's future be negotiated immediately.

Arafat hopes to establish a state on the West Bank and in Gaza, with Jerusalem its capital. But Israel has vowed never to relinquish sovereignty over its capital, although Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin has suggested the Palestinians be given administrative control over certain areas.

Haiti regime parades ragtag army in 'show of force' against U.S.

■ Platoons of 'recruits,' composed of teens, gray-haired old men and a few women, sweat while performing maneuvers under hot sun in capital's main square.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — It was supposed to be a show of force, a message to Washington that an invasion of Haiti would not be a piece of cake. In reality, it was a mix of low comedy and menacing commandos.

The army marched dozens of platoons of civilian defense recruits into the capital's main square Saturday, putting the teenagers, gray-haired old men and a few women through their paces — running, jumping, crawling and sweating in the morning sun.

"When the foreigners come, we will be ready for them," said one man as he ran by.

Marching hundreds of chanting, grim-faced civilian-soldiers into the central square rather than conducting serious training at a military camp seemed aimed more at putting on a show of resistance than a serious effort to prepare for battle.

Haiti is bracing for an American-led invasion aimed at ousting the military leadership and restoring deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The leftist priest, Haiti's first popularly elected president, was overthrown by the army in September 1991 and has been living in exile since.

■ Related story/10A

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the army chief, said in an interview with CNN commentator Robert Novak that he believes an invasion is inevitable and he is preparing to fight.

"It's been decided to invade . . . and we are getting ready," Cedras said.

That, apparently, is the reason for forming the Group of Patriotic Resistance and putting them on public display Saturday.

The recruits, all in civilian clothes, ran in formation past the white presidential palace in Port-au-Prince, chanting and singing. Among them were many members of the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti, an armed, right-wing pro-military party often accused of intimidation, torture and murder of civilians.

As each wave of would-be soldiers double-timed into the assembly area they chanted: "We are waiting for the foreigners, we will eat the foreigners."

Hundreds of Haitians attempted to form straight lines as menacing commandos dressed entirely in black with black hoods over their faces and new weapons in their hands peered watchfully through the eyeholes of their masks.

The recruits broke into about 15 platoon-sized groups and spread out through the central park. Drill instructors, some in uniform but most in civilian clothes, shouted, waved their arms and blew whistles.

Anarchists, skinheads riot across Germany

HANOVER, Germany (AP) — Anarchist punks, neo-Nazi skinheads and drunken rock fans clashed with police early Saturday in three German cities. Several hundred youths were arrested.

About 500 self-described punks from around Germany threw rocks and empty beer bottles at train cars and police before fleeing into abandoned houses in Hanover, in the northern state of Lower Saxony.

Federal police flushed out the youths, booked 190 of them on a variety of charges and then accompanied them home on trains, said Manfred Paetzold, a police spokesman.

Paetzold described the youth as anarchists. He read parts of an absurdist leaflet confiscated by police that called for a "pogrom against Indian elephants" and "a minute of silence for Erich Honecker," the late East German president. It urged those present to "leave Hanover in ashes," Paetzold said.

The pretense for the riots was the 10th anniversary of "Chaos Days '84," an earlier riot, Paetzold said. The underground German left scene includes thousands of anarchist punks and so-called "autonomen," who often clash with police.

"I'm not high-maintenance."

"I just look it. Because by now I know who I am and I have a clear sense of what I like to wear: natural fiber, beautiful fabrics, strong shapes."

CONVICT: Authorities to review hundreds of chemist's cases

(From 1A)

Zain refused to talk to reporters and left Medina County Jail after posting $6,000 bond. Trial is scheduled for Oct. 12.

Zain worked as a serologist for the West Virginia State Police from 1980 to 1989. He resigned to become chief of physical evidence for the medical examiner in Bexar County.

Texas has freed two men convicted on now-disproven blood tests done by Zain: Alejandro, who served four years of a 12-year sentence, and Jack W. Davis, convicted of murder in 1990.

Davis missed a death sentence by the vote of one juror and is suing Zain for $10 million. After Davis' conviction, Zain changed his testimony about blood at the scene of a teacher's mutilation-murder, acknowledging the blood came from the victim rather than Davis.

Zain's work or testimony figures in hundreds of other Texas cases, and authorities say they will review each one.

On Thursday, Zain goes to West Virginia to be arraigned on charges he lied about his credentials and about performing specific lab tests in a 1991 double-murder trial.

Seventy-one convictions, all but five of them for murder or rape, were granted reviews because of Zain's "long history of falsifying evidence in criminal prosecutions," according to a report presented to the West Virginia Supreme Court last year. Lower courts have rejected 25 appeals, but one man was freed and at least three, including a father and son convicted in a rape, have been granted retrials because of Zain's allegedly false testimony.

Suspicions about Zain's work first surfaced publicly in 1992, when tests he had performed five years earlier figured prominently in the dismissal of two rape convictions against Glen Dale Woodall, a Huntington cemetery worker.

Although Woodall's innocence was chiefly confirmed through DNA semen tests that were not allowed at his 1987 trial, a subsequent check of non-DNA trial evidence showed a strong probability he was convicted on tainted information from Zain, authorities said.

Zain had testified, for example, that it was "highly unlikely" a hair found in one rape victim's borrowed car could have come from any source but Woodall's blond beard. But a written report from March 1987, three months before the trial, shows Zain initially described the sample as a pubic hair and never bothered to compare it to hair from the man who owned the car.

When freed, Woodall had served five years of a sentence of two life terms plus 335 years. The state paid him $1 million in compensation, the maximum allowed by law.

A panel appointed by the state Supreme Court found that Zain, at numerous trials, fabricated or altered evidence and lied about academic qualifications under oath.

The panel's report said Zain was routinely "overstating the strength of results, overstating the frequency of genetic matches ... reporting inconclusive results as conclusive, repeatedly altering laboratory records ... implying a match with a suspect when testing supported only a match with the victim and reporting scientifically impossible or improbable results."

It also said Zain's supervisors may have "ignored or concealed complaints" about his laboratory work.

Even after Zain had moved to San Antonio, West Virginia prosecutors continued to seek him out to analyze evidence because his results were more favorable than those obtained by his successors, according to George Castelle, a Charleston public defender.

"After Zain left, the lab sometimes couldn't make any determinations, or the defendant would come within 40 percent of the population, whereas Zain always gave better probabilities because he faked evidence," Castelle said.

Amid the criticism of his role in the Woodall case, Zain was fired from the Texas job in July 1993 and left the state. A source involved in the Zain investigation says the chemist was dismissed for losing evidence; Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMaio failed to return multiple phone calls from The Associated Press seeking clarification of the firing.

In neither state, however, were officials zealous about checking Zain's background or, once alerted to possible blunders, in investigating their investigator.

Zain graduated from West Virginia State College with a C average. His transcript shows he flunked some chemistry classes and barely passed others. In court, Zain often testified he majored in biology and minored in chemistry; the transcript shows only the biology major.

Kenneth Blake, then-director of the state police's Criminal Identification Bureau, said he never questioned Zain's academic background when recommending him for the state police job.

"I did neighborhood and criminal background checks," said Blake, who now heads the criminology department at Zain's alma mater. "Any interviewing for his academic qualifications was done by the people who headed the lab."

Ray Barber, lab chief at the time, said he felt no need to check Zain's credentials because Zain had a "lab background" as a chemist with the state Department of Natural Resources.

In 1985, two fellow lab workers told superiors they had seen Zain record results from blank test plates. The court panel said state police investigators looked into the allegations and dismissed them as an office squabble.

"They didn't like Zain, and Zain didn't like them," Blake said of that time. "But we never had any complaints from prosecutors, defense attorneys or investigators."

The report also cited an internal state police audit of August 1992 indicating Zain had falsified test results or lied about performing certain tests as early as September 1986. But when a special prosecutor appointed by the court to investigate Zain asked the police superintendent about the chemist, Buckalew told him there was "no need to take any further action."

Interviewed last week, Buckalew said he was "satisfied" no one was wrongly jailed as a result of Zain's work.

"I had two of my top people go over all his cases and they told me no one was jailed as a result of his work," he said, adding: "His testimony and his work are two different things."

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be partly cloudy, 100

Staff Report

Today should partly cloudy with a high near 100 and southeast winds 10-20 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman in Midland.

Tonight should be fair with a low near 70.

Monday's temperatures should be between 95-100 and the skies should be partly cloudy.

After a low Saturday of 66, the high was 97, compared to the record high for the day of 107 set in 1964. The record low is 61 set in 1936.

STATE

Texas was its usually summery, sunny self Saturday as partly to mostly cloudy skies were the order of the day.

However, afternoon thunderstorms moved ashore along the upper Texas Gulf Coast.

Clear to partly cloudy skies predominated over West Texas and the Panhandle.

Southerly winds brought enough moisture inland to raise humidities and build puffy clouds over much of the state. It was not enough to cause rain most places, but some places got wet, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Parts of the eastern half of the nation got a break from summer heat Saturday, with temperatures dropping to unseasonable lows in the 40s and 50s across the Great Lakes and from the Midwest to the East Coast.

The coolest spot in the Lower 48 states Saturday morning was Bradford, Pa., with a low of just 33 degrees as a high pressure system pushed southward from Canada.

Record lows for the date included 53 at Ottumwa, Iowa; 48 at Chicago; 47 at Fort Wayne, Ind.; 45 at Flint, Mich.; 40 at Youngstown, Ohio; 51 at Lexington, Ky.; 51 at Charleston, W.Va.; 47 at Pittsburgh; 56 at Baltimore; and 45 at Albany, N.Y., the National Weather Service said.

LOCAL: Officials see some mandates as inappropriate

the same ends could be achieved in a less costly manner, Morrow said.

For example, federal solid waste regulations impose a more stringent and expensive way to construct landfill pits. The measures are largely for environmental reasons, specifically to prevent groundwater contamination.

But no groundwater exists underneath the Midland landfill, and West Texas cities generally have low methane gas production and ground seepage because of sparse rainfall, officials said.

Although the city appealed to the regulating agency and succeeded in obtaining a less-costly alternative, officials maintain those specifications are overkill.

Another example is a state mandate that requires vital equipment in police cars be moved so as not to alter the operation of passenger air bags. Because Midland police assign only one officer for each car, the precaution may be wasted, officials said.

Some directives are more on track but, if permitted, could be implemented in a less-costly manner.

For example, the federal American With Disabilities Act requires water fountains lowered and outfitted with special handles.

Morrow, who served six years on the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, said installing an accessible handle and cups with a dispenser would result in the same benefit.

"They can still get a drink of water and you save four or five thousand dollars," he said.

Some mandates — such as those that deal with safety measures — are redundant, officials said.

"We feel a lot of the things that are required were already adequately covered (by the city)," Morrow said.

The city can fight mandates, but many times such efforts cost more than implementing the directives, said Morrow, an attorney.

Members of the Legislature and Congress don't appear considerate of local costs when passing mandates, local officials said. Last October, the City Council publicly decried such mandates and unanimously adopted a resolution to support efforts of the National League of Cities and the Texas Municipal League to inform the public on the impact of unfunded directives.

Many representatives vote for a bill because they are told there won't be any cost to that branch of government, Morrow said.

"I guess when you (a state or federal representative) get further away from your home it's easier to make a decision without knowing the true impact," Morrow said.

"When they have to find the dollars to fund (mandates) then they will be more careful," he said.

Midland City Council members have contacted representatives and expressed the concern about mandates' effects. Midland's representatives — all Republican — generally vote favorable to the city, according to local officials.

Still, mandates are imposed at the city's expense.

"Unfortunately, local government doesn't have total control of their budget," Menchaca said.

But Texas law requires cities to maintain a balanced budget.

So far, Midland has managed to endure mandates without raising the tax rate to stay within budget.

In the last three years, Midland has offset the added expense from the increase in sales tax revenue. In addition, the city has had to increase some service user fees, delay some city maintenance work, and fund some projects through certificates of obligation.

Costs to comply with federal mandates over the last three years have totaled $1,949,682. Individual directives and costs are:

- The Americans With Disabilities Act, a one-time expense of $950,473.
- The Brady Bill, $10,000. Must be maintained annually.
- The Fair Labor and Standards Act, $23,500. Must be maintained annually.
- Federal Subtitle D Solid Waste Regulations, $910,000. Expense occurs every two years.
- Federal Safe Drinking Water Act, $50,208. Must be maintained annually.
- The Family and Medical Leave Act, $5,502. Must be maintained annually.

Costs to comply with state mandates in the last three years have added up to $1,585,315. They are:

- Passenger air bags, $25,920. Must be maintained annually.
- Texas Commission on Fire Protection requirements, $126,100. Must be maintained annually.
- Texas Department of Health Certification and Recertification requirements, $138,175. Must be maintained annually.
- Hazardous communications, $8,951. Must be maintained annually.
- Hazardous compliance audit, a one-time expense of $615,157.
- Chlorofluorocarbon control, $16,446. Must be maintained annually.
- General hazardous waste requirements, $356. Must be maintained annually.
- Battery disposal guidelines, $1,350.. Must be maintained annually.
- TU Electric 28 percent rate increase for municipalities, $600,000. Must be maintained annually.
- Rabies control, $18,320. Must be maintained annually.
- Records management program, $16,000. Must be maintained annually.
- Blood-borne pathogen law, $7,651. Must be maintained annually.
- Texas Commission of Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education requirements, $3,889. Must be maintained annually.
- Criminal Justice Information System requirements, $7,000. Must be maintained annually.

MURDER: Jury hands down 50-year sentence

shooting and had never before fired it.

When she left the Zodiac II club — where her sister had been involved in a fight — Ms. Henderson was under the impression that a man had attacked her sister, since she had not seen the fight, but had been told that her sister had been beaten, she said.

Ms. Henderson testified that she got her gun from the car and then proceeded to find her sister.

Prosecutors earlier presented witnesses testifying that Ms. Henderson had found her sister, Monique Henderson, in a group of people. When she asked who had beaten her sister, her sister pointed to Ms. Perkins-Belcher, who had earlier struck Monique Henderson with a beer bottle. The blow left a large, bleeding head wound.

One witness, Demetrius Stewart testified that he was one of the first to go to Monique Henderson's aid and heard no such exchange before the gun fired.

In closing arguments, co-counsel of the prosecution, Eric Kalenac, said Ms. Henderson's actions constituted murder because she did not retreat when a prudent person would have.

Ms. Henderson testified that when she found her sister bleeding and surrounded by what she considered to be a hostile crowd, she drew the weapon from under her shirt.

Carney told the jury that Ms. Henderson's actions were not justified by the circumstances. "You can't bring a gun to a fist fight — that is not self-defense," he said.

A polling of the jury indicated that all 12 had found Ms. Henderson guilty of murder, forsaking the lesser charges of voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide.

Early in the trial, Hyde granted a prosecutor's motion to suppress testimony showing that for many days earlier, Ms. Henderson had been stalked and beaten by a vengeful ex-husband. This man also had broken Monique Henderson's arm about six months before the shooting.

Jurors also were not told that Ms. Henderson's ex-husband approached the sisters earlier that night at another club, or that days before, Ms. Henderson had been fired upon by her ex-husband's sister.

The jury did not learn about these attacks until the punishment phase of the trial. Jurors heard about two hours of this testimony before deliberating on the punishment, but were unswayed in their decision to hand down a stiff sentence.

Defense attorneys said the case would be appealed. Ms. Henderson, however, will be imprisoned awaiting this appeal.

RETURN: Serbs give back weapons seized from U.N.

would start house-to-house searches of suspected sniper positions, including high-rise buildings from which snipers have targeted streetcar passengers. One rider was killed and 20 wounded in the past week.

Authorities shut down the streetcar Saturday, a logistical inconvenience and blow to morale in the capital. Restoration of streetcar service in March had been seen as an omen that Sarajevo's suffering might soon be over.

But the Bosnian Serbs have shown no inclination to halt the fighting, despite almost-total isolation.

The weapons seizure came a day after Serbia said it was cutting off economic and political ties because Bosnian Serbs rejected an international peace plan.

The plan would require Bosnian Serbs to give up roughly a third of the 70 percent of Bosnia they control after 28 months of war. Muslims and Croats would get the remaining 51 percent.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic is widely blamed for inciting Bosnian Serbs to rebel against Bosnia's secession from Yugoslavia. But Serbia has suffered heavily under U.N. economic sanctions imposed for its role in the war. Mediators want the United Nations to tighten those sanctions if the peace plan is not accepted.

Facing an imminent dearth of vital supplies from Serbia, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic issued an order for all able adults to report for work brigades, apparently to tend farms, stock up on food and work on housing.

He mentioned the introduction of 10-hour work days and said industrial workers could be drafted into military units "if need be."

In overly cautious language, Karadzic refrained from any criticism of Serbia's decision to cut ties with the Bosnian Serbs. Comparing Serbia and his rebel Bosnian Serb republic to a mother and child, he said while a mother had the right to punish her child, "a child must not hit" the mother.

Elsewhere, Annink reported gains by Bosnian government troops on battlefronts in northern and central Bosnia. He said government forces had closed to within a mile of a key east-west Serb supply route in the Posavina corridor of northern Bosnia.

He also said government forces, along with their Bosnian Croat militia allies, had scored significant advances south of Vares. Bosnian radio, quoting army soures, reported a Serb attack and government counterattack on a shoulder of Mount Ozren, a Serb stronghold in between Vares and the northern city of Tuzla.

APATHY: Program works to get children involved in voting for more than 40 years, Costa Rican children have studied the election process from grade school up and are allowed to vote alongside their parents.

Kids Voting began in 1988 with a pilot program in Chandler, Ariz.

Hyde will discuss the program and show a videotape at the Friday luncheon, which is a regular meeting of the Permian Basin Advertising Federation.

Persons interested in the program are invited to attend. Cost of the luncheon for non-PBAF members is $10.

Reservations are required. For reservations call 697-4396 or 520-7711.

Feminist writer boils politics in Bangladesh

■ Secular government grapples with angry Muslims after writer questions Koran, criticizes persecution of women.

By Charles J. Hanley
AP special correspondent

■ News analysis

DHAKA, Bangladesh — In their quaint old clubs and in government corridors, the people who run Bangladesh quietly reassure each other: It can't happen here.

They may be right. But outside, in this teeming, steaming city on the far fringe of the Muslim world, the angry young men who parade beneath Islam's green flag are setting some nerves on edge.

"This is not Iran," says publisher Kazi Shahid Ahmed. "But we cannot be complacent about it."

Shahid Ahmed organized an anti-fundamentalist group two months ago after Islamic militants suddenly poured into Dhaka's streets to defend their 1,400-year-old holy book, the Koran, against a brash, 31-year-old feminist writer.

Because of its past and its hopes for the future, Bangladesh is unlikely to turn into a strict Islamic republic. A leader of the fundamentalist protests concedes as much.

"I don't visualize this becoming that kind of country," said Maulana Obaid ul-Huq, chief cleric of the National Mosque.

But Taslima Nasrin's provocative writings do give Obaid and other militants a handy tool to use against "secularist" encroachment in this largely Muslim land, a weapon to wield in the battle for the hearts and votes of the rickshaw pedalers, landless peasants and jobless students of one of the world's poorest nations.

Nasrin, who has written powerfully on behalf of "women kept in chains" in a traditional, male-dominated Islamic society, angered Muslim activists last year with a novel, "Shame," that depicted Muslim persecution of Bangladesh's Hindu minority. Extremists offered a $1,250 reward for her assassination.

Then, this May, outraged fundamentalists took to the streets after an Indian newspaper quoted Nasrin as saying the Koran needed a thorough rewriting.

She was misquoted, she said. But the government — to appease the Muslim partisans, critics said — reached back into the law books, found a little-used old statute, and charged her with offending religious sentiment. The militants wanted her hanged as a heretic.

Nasrin went into hiding for two months, emerging only last Wednesday to appear in court and obtain bail, and then to drop from sight again.

The fundamentalists, meanwhile, stepped up their campaign by demanding a new law making blasphemy punishable by death.

On the surface, the debate grows more shrill. But fundamentalism, for several reasons, may never take firm root among the 125 million people of this flat, fertile, waterlogged land:

■ As in other Muslim areas of east Asia, the people of what is now Bangladesh have practiced a more relaxed, tolerant brand of Islam for centuries.

■ After years of military rule, the Bangladeshis restored civilian democracy just three years ago. They may now find little appeal in some new kind of conformity and rigid control.

■ Unlike Middle Eastern countries where militants crusade against the influence of "un-Islamic" outside powers, in Bangladesh it's the secularists who wave a nationalist banner, because many local fundamentalists sided with Pakistan when Bangladesh broke away from that fellow Muslim land in 1971, in a war that killed millions of Bangladeshis.

Whatever the history, the partisan politics of the day can always produce surprises.

In Bangladesh's case, the small but well-organized Islamic party Jamaat el-Islami — with 20 seats in the 330-member Parliament — has been jockeying for a power broker's role between the governing conservatives of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party and the left-of-center opposition, the Awami League. The Jamaat's price for support would be a further breakdown in the separation of religion and government in Bangladesh.

As always, too, desperate people in a desperately poor land might respond to promises of "social justice" under Koranic rule.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On August 5, 1994, Texas Utilities Electric Company ("TU Electric"), in accordance with Substantive Rule 23.23(b) of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("Commission"), filed a Petition with the Commission seeking authority to assess a surcharge on its customers' electric service bills to recover an undercollected balance of fuel cost revenues existing as of June 30, 1994, in the amount of $93,325,304, inclusive of interest through December 1994 (which assumes the surcharge to be implemented in January 1995, with additional interest being applied if the surcharge is extended past January 1995). All of TU Electric's customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel costs pursuant to TU Electric's tariffed Rider FC, titled "Fuel Cost Factor", and all territories served by TU Electric are affected by the Petition. These changes will be subject to final review by the Commission in TU Electric's next reconciliation proceeding at the Commission. Persons who wish to intervene in the proceeding or comment upon the action sought should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757, or call the Commission's Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 (telecommunications device for the deaf).

Michael Jackson and wife, Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson, comfort a child during their visit to a childrens' hospital in Budapest, Hungary Saturday. Jackson interrupted work on his latest album for the trip to Budapest to film a video, but he found time with his new wife Lisa Marie to distribute toys to children in the hospitals.

Jackson visits Hungarian childrens' hospitals with new wife, Lisa Marie

Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary — He looked like a Hungarian state railway worker. She tried to stay cool in a heat wave that has baked central Europe for weeks.

Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson handed out Barbie dolls, toy cars and stuffed animals at two childrens' hospitals Saturday in their first public engagement as man and wife.

The couple arrived late Friday in the Hungarian capital, where Jackson will shoot a video promotion today and Monday depicting him as a hero rescuing a generic communist state from the Red Army.

Jackson's look Saturday reminded many of a railway worker: a dark uniform with red epaulettes and a red armband. There were also the trademark sunglasses, a wide-brimmed hat and no comments for the press.

Elvis Presley's daughter sported a cream blouse and matching light trousers. She looked relaxed, staring straight at fans outside the hospitals and giving a hesitant wave.

Reporters were barred from both hospitals, but photographers trailed the couple as they distributed some 2,000 toys, plus diapers and baby food.

At the Hungarian Reform Church Bethesda Children's hospital, Jackson picked up children and chatted with them. He kissed Sandor Bak, 7, a boy admitted Friday with severe facial burns.

"I've seen him on TV, but I never thought I'd see him in person," a nurse quoted the boy as saying afterward.

Even so, the Gloved One was a stranger to some children. "Do you know who I am?" the pop star asked an eight-year-old boy. "No," the boy replied.

Outside the hospitals, dozens of fans awaited their idol, some erupting into hysterics upon glimpsing Jackson. Some fans had even come from neighboring Slovakia and Austria.

"I heard about Michael coming on Thursday, and on Friday I was already here," said Sandra Sulzbacher, 21, a hotel worker from Linz, Austria who said she's been to Israel, Mexico and all over Europe to catch Jackson's concerts.

Edina Solti, who turns 9 next week, eagerly awaited Jackson's visit in a hospital bed where she is being treated for a kidney ailment.

"I hope I get a box of crayons, because I love to draw. I will try to draw his picture if I get to see him," she said just before Jackson arrived.

Some hospital workers voiced mixed emotions about the hurriedly arranged visit.

Algerian Muslims threaten students who don't drop out

PARIS (AP) — Muslim militants who have stepped up their killings of foreigners in Algeria are taking aim at a new group: students who don't quit school.

"No student is allowed to go to secondary schools or universities, and whoever violates this order will be subject to reprehension and legal punishment," said a statement by the Armed Islamic Group published Saturday in the London-based Arabic newspaper al-Hayat.

The group threatened teachers with the Islamic "legal penalty," interpreted as execution.

It said schools or universities that remain open in Algeria "will be subject to burning and explosions until everybody yields to the GIA," the group's French initials.

Militants have been linked to the deaths of teachers and students as well as the burning of schools, but it was the first time they announced a blanket threat against students who stay in school.

Rwandans find graves, destruction, horrid memories back home

By Paul Alexander
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Walking through Cristophe Hitimana's neighborhood is like visiting landmarks on a tour of horror.

"They killed three people here," Hitimana said as he pointed to the remnants of one of the infamous roadblocks where Hutu militias hacked and shot people to death.

Here's a house that was destroyed by a mortar shell. There's another that was leveled by the death squads. Next to those withered ears of corn are the graves of five of the first death-squad victims.

Hitimana has seen it all over the last four months: house-to-house searches for Tutsis, murders, the battle for Kigali and the flight by the former army's troops as the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front swept through like a juggernaut.

He is one of the few Hutus to have weathered the chaos that erupted after the president's plane mysteriously crashed on April 6, sparking the massacres of between 350,000 and 500,000 people, mostly minority Tutsis.

Nyamirambu was a mixed neighborhood where majority Hutus and Tutsis lived side by side. There's a mosque, a couple of churches and a stadium.

"Every 100 meters there was a barricade where they were killing people," Hitimana said of the militias' final days. "At the end, they didn't even check ID cards. They just started killing people by their height."

Tutsis generally are taller than Hutus.

"That banana field is where the last battle took place," Hitimana said. "When the RPF took this position, the military went over the hill and took off.

"I fled down the road and the RPF captured us. We thought they were government troops. They asked, 'Why are you fleeing? You'll risk getting caught between the two lines.'"

He said he was taken to the stadium, held for four hours and released. After all the horror stories that government radio had put out about the RPF, he had expected to be killed. Instead, he was amazed to find a chance to work again as a building inspector.

"After Kigali was taken by the RPF, there was a sense of security," Hitimana said. "There was a sense of security, there was no more fighting, the killing stopped, and we started working again."

He found himself working in a near-ghost town where refugees are just starting to return. Only 10 percent or less of the pre-war population of 350,000 is left.

"It's growing every day," he said of the flow of returning refugees. "They talk of the misery in the camps in Zaire. People are dying every day of hunger and cholera. People are dropping like flies.

"The militias are going around the camps saying, 'Don't come back. They'll carve your eyes out.'"

But he says the death and disease will force the refugees to come home.

"The only people who are going to stay behind are the assassins," Hitimana said.

As he gave his tour, surefootedly navigating the warren of dirt paths in his tennis shoes, he came across Beatrice Umupfasoni, who carried snapshots of her husband as she wandered back to her home.

Mexican activists hold convention in southern town

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — Thousands of people jammed this usually drowsy town Saturday for the beginning of a convention led by the Indian rebels whose uprising this year shocked the country.

The meeting was called by the Zapatista National Liberation Front, which waged a 12-day war in southern Chiapas state in January to press for better living conditions, democratic reform and an end to human rights violations.

The Zapatistas lost much political backing when they rejected a government peace proposal in June and the convention is aimed at bolstering their image as defenders of the poor.

It also is a magnet for leftists and other activists. Around 5,000 people crowded into the town for the meeting, sleeping in parks, churchyards and the local bullring when they couldn't find other accommodation.

Five "study groups" of activist leaders started meeting Saturday to draft resolutions and manifestos demanding a variety of changes to Mexico's constitution and other reforms.

These will be submitted for approval Monday at a huge rally at a rebel-built log stadium in the jungle at Aguascalientes, 140 miles southeast of San Cristobal.

Organizers hope the gathering, coming two weeks before the Aug. 21 general elections, will strengthen the popular clamor for clean voting. The incumbent Institutional Revolutionary Party, in its 65 years in power, has often resorted to vote fraud to win.

"We are here because we are convinced of the need for a change in favor of the people who are in bad shape, which is the majority of us Mexicans," said delegate Rene Villanueva.

"If the government can take advantage of the opportunity that is here for them, there can be a peaceful transition to democracy," added Rosario Ibarra de Piedra, a social activist and unsuccessful presidential candidate in 1988.

The rebels have warned the smoldering rebellion could reignite if balloting in this year's elections isn't fair. Ruling party presidential candidate Ernesto Zedillo has repeatedly promised this time it will be clean.

For the first time also, two opposition candidates are giving him more than token opposition.

Delegates to the gathering are also drawing up proposals for better housing, health and other services nationwide. Recent studies showed around 40 percent of Mexicans live just above or below the poverty line.

Ozzie Crawford of Eureka, Ill., joins striking United Auto Workers from Caterpillar in Chicago's loop on Friday as they march to the plaza of the building where shareholders are meeting.

Caterpillar workers strike, claim firm wants to kill union

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

AURORA, Ill. — Al Weygand once traveled the country, preaching cooperation between workers and bosses. As a union man, he believed it was the way to protect his company — and his paycheck.

"To stay competitive globally, you need the cooperation of your work force. You don't need the adversarial relationship," said the 21-year veteran of Caterpillar Inc., who addressed laborers and bosses in his talks.

These days, Al Weygand is on the picket line, denouncing Caterpillar as a "corporate outlaw." As a union activist, he believes his survival depends on solidarity — against his company.

So much for unity. So much for common cause.

The lines are drawn again in one of the nation's longest, stormiest labor disputes, a bitter strike that has stirred President Clinton and pitted the United Auto Workers, a powerful union, against Caterpillar, a booming Fortune 500 company that is the world's No. 1 producer of earthmoving and construction equipment.

"This is one of those rare, highly emotional, high-media, long-lasting disputes that is going to go down in labor history," said Glenn Zipp, Peoria regional director of the National Labor Relations Board. "The level of acrimony is unusual."

Caterpillar claims the union has made unreasonable demands and is intent on a strategy to hinder production and embarrass the company. The UAW argues management is out to bust the union.

The walkout, which began June 20, is the 11th against Caterpillar since 1991; all but two were very brief and most were not system-wide. In the last two years, the NLRB has issued 95 unfair labor practice complaints against the Peoria-based company, stemming from charges filed by the union.

Many of the complaints allege the company has fired or suspended workers for union activities or displaying militant slogans on T-shirts, buttons or signs, some sharply critical of Caterpillar's hard-line chairman Don Fites.

The NLRB contends 11 workers were unfairly fired, including three at Aurora. One was a 28-year veteran who wore a "Stop Scabs" button.

"Certainly 95 complaints with kind of a stonewall attitude with respect to settling some of them is certainly unusual," Zipp said. "Eleven people discharged and the company made no errors? That statistic is not a likely scenario."

But Caterpillar regards the complaints as part of a union harassment campaign.

Report: Ice cream may save O.J.

■ Defense may try to save Simpson by connecting estimated time of murders to partially frozen summertime treat discovered near bodies.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A cup of partially frozen ice cream was found near the bloodied bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, raising new questions about when the victims were killed, Newsweek reported.

The defense may use the ice cream to argue that the victims were alive later than prosecutors have contended, making it impossible for O.J. Simpson to have killed his ex-wife and her friend, the magazine said in its Aug. 15 issue.

Ms. Simpson, 35, and Goldman, 25, were found stabbed and slashed to death outside Ms. Simpson's Brentwood condominium on June 13. Simpson has pleaded innocent to murder charges.

Prosecutors have said Ms. Simpson and Goldman died between 10:15 p.m. and 11 p.m. on June 12.

But police found the cup, with much of the ice cream still frozen, near the bodies sometime after 12:10 a.m. on July 13, unidentified defense sources told the magazine.

The timing of the discovery would suggest that Ms. Simpson and Goldman were alive after 11 p.m. because otherwise the ice cream would have melted in the 60-degree heat, Newsweek said.

By 11 p.m., Simpson was en route to Los Angeles International Airport for a trip to Chicago, Simpson's limousine driver has said.

Messages left at the offices of Simpson lawyers Robert Shapiro and Johnnie Cochran Jr. were not returned Saturday. Los Angeles Police Department spokesman Don Cox said the department would not comment.

Witnesses said they saw Ms. Simpson and her two young children at a Ben & Jerry's ice cream store in Brentwood after the three dined with family and friends nearby at the Mezzaluna restaurant, the magazine said.

Newsweek also reported that prosecutors have been testing their case before multi-racial focus groups.

After hearing the state's case, the groups have split along racial lines, according to the magazine.

The report mirrors polls that have shown similar divisions.

John Martel, an expert in jury selection and witness preparation, is advising the state and organizing the groups, Newsweek said.

Messages left at Martel's San Francisco office were not returned Saturday. Calls to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office went unanswered.

Simpson's trial is set to begin on Sept. 19.

NASA's Dante gets stranded in volcano

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The spiderlike Dante II robot explorer toppled after breaking one of its eight legs and must be airlifted out of a volcanic crater strewn with boulders.

NASA scientists considered abandoning the $1.7 million robot but instead decided Saturday to try to have a helicopter lift it out of Mount Spurr, where it lay on its side, its camera still panning the terrain.

"Dante is still alive," said John Bares, a robotics expert from Carnegie Mellon University.

The remote-controlled robot had been sent into the 11,000-foot mountain July 29 to test its ability to survive harsh environments. Scientists hope to one day use robots similar to Dante to explore other planets.

Dante lost its footing Friday night when one of its legs malfunctioned as it was climbing up the crater's steep slope, Bares said.

Scientists were moving the robot through the rugged boulder field when one of the front legs didn't respond to the commands about 400 feet from the crater rim.

"It pushed down too hard — we really don't know why," Bares said.

Dante might have been able to get up on its own, but the scientists decided instead to end the mission and fold up Dante's legs to make it as small as possible for the airlift.

"We've run a week longer than we intended — and the mission accomplished more than we really hoped," Bares said.

On Monday, they plan to pluck the 1,700-pound machine off Mount Spurr, 80 miles west of Anchorage, and try to find out exactly what went wrong. Scientists plan to watch the airlift from the volcano rim.

"I don't know if we'll ever know what actually caused it to go down," Bares said. "The machine was right at the limit of its capability. In those conditions, any normally tiny event can trigger a collapse."

The command center, which has been operating out of a trailer in an Anchorage parking lot, was to be shut down by Saturday night, he said.

Bares said Dante had performed successfully, getting to the bottom of the crater, taking readings on gases and transmitting video images of the landscape for seven days.

"I've seen robots that had trouble running seven hours in a laboratory," he said.

The machine was operated partly on automatic controls and partly by remote control from Anchorage and NASA's Ames Research Center in California.

Dante had spider-walked over snow and around boulders to reach the crater floor early in the week and began climbing out Wednesday.

GOP musters forces against Dem crime bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a risky election-year gambit, Republicans are trying to keep President Clinton and Democrats from seizing the crime issue by painting a $33 billion measure before Congress as a pork-laden liberal spending spree.

House and Senate GOP leaders, as well as several Republican organizations, have reached a consensus on a crime bill strategy in the 10 days since the measure emerged from a House-Senate conference committee. Although many provisions in it were advocated by Republicans, the GOP strategy is to tar the measure as a misguided Democratic social welfare experiment.

"This bill invests over $9 billion in questionable prevention programs, but does little to monitor whether they actually work," conservative GOP strategist William Kristol said Friday in a memo to Republican leaders.

Republicans used the big-spending, pork-barrel argument to gain their first major victory in the Clinton presidency, the defeat last year of the administration's $16 billion economic stimulus plan.

And there are provisions in the crime bill that Republicans believe are ripe for similar criticism, including $40 million for midnight basketball leagues designed to give children an alternative to gangs, and $630 million for dance, art and other recreational programs.

Carrying old-fashioned rifles, members of the Haitian army march in front of the National Palace in Port-au-Prince over the weekend. The U.S. Senate turned down a plan to prohibit President Clinton from launching an invasion of Haiti without congressional approval.

U.S. adviser: Negotiations with Haitian regime won't do any good

■ Only pertinent questions are when will military junta relinquish power, and will they sacrifice their own people, gray says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The international community is continuing to push alternatives to an invasion of Haiti, but negotiations with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and other military leaders controlling the country will do no good, the U.S. special adviser on Haiti said Saturday.

"The only discussion to be had at this point is a technical one, which is: 'When are you leaving? What time? What day?'" said adviser William Gray.

"It is hoped that they will think and they will decide not to sacrifice the military that they are a part of, and their country, and step down and allow democracy to return," Gray said, appearing on CNN's "Newsmaker Saturday."

But Cedras claimed military barracks in Haiti are filled with young people eager to fend off an inevitable U.S.-led invasion.

"I don't think that any arrangement can be made to avoid an invasion of Haiti," Cedras said through an interpreter on CNN's "Evans and Novak."

"They have decided to invade. And we are awaiting this moment. We are getting ready. As soldiers, we have sworn to defend our country."

Cedras dodged questions about whether military leaders would ever accept the return of deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"It will be bloodshed on both sides," Cedras said. "We have a small army, but we have a great people. We've had several young people, many people of old ages, who have spontaneously shown up in every military installation in the country to sign up."

But Gray said news footage of Haitians preparing to fend off an invasion is merely propaganda similar to publicity Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein arranged of military preparations before the Gulf War.

"And what did that eventually mean? As you know, it didn't mean very, very much," Gray said. "I think it is really tragic that General Cedras and his other two compatriots are going to destroy the Haitian military with a coalition coming to bear against them. . . . But most dictators don't care about their institutions or the people or the country."

Diplomats from Argentina and Colombia left Haiti's capital Saturday after receiving death threats from callers opposed to American military intervention.

Argentina has expressed support for U.S. military action to oust the military leaders. Colombia has been involved in an initiative by several Latin American countries to negotiate the departure of the leaders, who overthrew Aristide in a 1991 coup.

Cedras also defended the expulsion of United Nations observers, saying they violated Haitian law by prolonging their mission without consulting the government. But Gray said "there will be a tremendous price to pay" if the escalation of human rights violations continues.

"Right now, we're staying the course as we consult with the international community in determining exactly when is the best time to move to another option," Gray said.

Fire destroys school that's center of interracial prom dispute

Blacks seeking to oust white principal who banned interracial prom dates cancel march as Klan members arrive in Alabama town after blaze.

WEDOWEE, Ala. (AP) — An apparent arson fire left a school in smoldering ruins Saturday and stoked tensions in a dispute over the principal who opposed interracial dates at a prom.

The fire gutted all of the Randolph County High School classrooms only hours before marchers planned to form ranks for new protests targeting Principal Hulond Humphries.

Blacks seeking to oust Humphries, who's white, canceled a protest march as tensions mounted and Ku Klux Klan members arrived in the east Alabama town.

"The danger is too great," said a protest leader, the Rev. Emmett Johnson of Wedowee.

But tempers had already flared.

Humphries shoved a black TV cameraman at the fire scene. "Why don't you get out of here?" he told Bill Gill, with WVTM of Birmingham.

The camera captured the moment and recorded the approach of other men with Humphries, one of whom placed his hand on the lens and shoved. An unidentified voice is heard telling Gill, "You black sons of bitches burned this school."

Investigators were "99 percent" certain the early-morning blaze was arson, said Sheriff Larry Colley.

Later, it was Colley who grew angry with media attention to about 30 would-be marchers as they held hands, prayed and sang "We Shall Overcome."

"Where were you people this morning when Hulond Humphries was out there fighting that fire with his bare hands?" Colley said. "Where were these damn blacks?"

But protesters were angry, too.

Sherry Knight, who graduated from the high school in 1986, said of Humphries: "He was a racist pig then and he hasn't changed now."

Nathan Thomaston, a Klan leader from Georgia's Heard County, about 30 miles away, said he came to Wedowee after being asked by a high-ranking city official to have members of his group monitor the actions of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He would not name the official.

A new march was set for Aug. 20, said Rev. Henry Sterling of the Leadership Conference.

"We've never failed to march because of what the Klan might do," he said. He added, however, that "Wedowee needed a cooling-off period."

Gov. Jim Folsom offered a $10,000 state reward for information leading to the conviction of those responsible for the fire. The Leadership Conference offered $3,500.

"I plead that everyone in Randolph County remain calm and allow time for a peaceful resolution," Folsom said in a statement.

Humphries' status has divided the rural community, mostly along racial lines, since he told juniors and seniors in a Feb. 24 assembly that the prom would not be held because some interracial dates planned to attend.

Humphries, who relented the next day, said later that he was concerned about violence at the prom and was frustrated by unruly students when he spoke to the assembly.

The prom was held in April, and protesters held an alternative dance as well.

Revonda Bowen, a junior who has a white father and black mother, also sued the school board and the principal. She said Humphries told her that her parents made "a mistake" when they had her.

In a settlement, the school officials admitted no wrongdoing.

Clinton: 'Violent, extremist interests' fight health plan

DETROIT (AP) — Trying to push health-care legislation through a deeply divided Congress, President Clinton complained Saturday that "violent, extremist interests" were trying to keep the government from ensuring medical coverage for all Americans.

Clinton, addressing a $1 million fund-raiser for Michigan Democrats, said Republicans were refusing to compromise on health legislation and declared: "It is time to stop playing politics with the health-care of the people of the United States of America."

A Republican senator earlier Saturday said GOP legislators simply wanted to go slow to ensure Congress enacts the best possible reform package and a Newsweek magazine poll released Saturday found that 65 percent of those surveyed said Congress should wait until next year to pass health legislation.

The president flew into Selfridge Air National Guard Base outside Detroit and visited privately there with a woman who was left with $24,000 in medical bills after her husband was shot and killed in 1993. The couple had no health insurance.

Clinton said the plight of Linda Roster Clark of nearby Flint demonstrated the need for swift action in Congress on both crime and health reform. He accused critics of Democratic health-care plans of trying to deny all Americans the benefits they already enjoy.

"The violent, extremist interests in this country that are trying to keep health care out of the reach of ordinary American working people are a disgrace to the American dream," Clinton said in brief remarks at the air base. "Most of them have health care and most of them have parents on Medicare. Why do they not want you to have the same thing that they have?"

He did not specify to whom he was referring.

Brutal work, long hours take big toll on firefighters

ENTIAT, Wash. (AP) — The strain of endless days of fighting forest fires shows on Timothy Kent Brown's face as he tells of clearing charred trees around a burned-out house caught in the Tyee Creek firestorm.

"A little boy came up to me," said Brown, tears filling his eyes and beginning to roll down his face. "He and his family lived there.

"He was cold and tired and had been up all night. He wanted to know if I'd seen his dog.

"I had to tell his family they couldn't go near their house. There was nothing left," said Brown, who had worked for 12 days straight, cutting down trees and debris weakened by fire to protect other firefighters.

Firefighters work 16-hour shifts for 14 days straight before they get a day off. After 21 days, they're supposed to be rotated, said John Forsberg, a medical specialist with the Forest Service.

"Emotions start running really high then, and people get emotionally drained," he said. "When people get worn down, they try to compensate but there's nothing left."

The Tyee Creek fire had covered 119,000 acres as of Saturday, the biggest blaze still burning in the West. The thousands of firefighters battling the blaze had it 76 percent contained by fire breaks, said Washington state Department of Natural Resources spokesman Mark Grassel.

Last week, the fire raced across the dry foothills of the eastern Cascade Range toward Lake Chelan and homes that line the south shore of the lake. At one point, the fire came within three miles of the resort town of Chelan at the foot of the lake.

New Whitewater independent counsel promises 'fair' investigation

■ Solicitor general under Bush who's described as 'a Republican in his views, temperament and political leanings' to probe scandal that plagues Clintons.

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Newly selected Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr promised a "fair and objective and even-handed" probe Saturday and said he wanted to get to work quickly.

"I don't want to comment at all, projecting what might lay ahead," Starr, attending the American Bar Association convention here, told reporters. "It's important for me to go into this with an entirely open mind, trying to be very fair and very objective."

Starr's selection by a federal panel of judges to replace special counsel Robert Fiske was a top topic among lawyers, many familiar with Starr's work, who were attending the convention.

Starr said he anticipated meeting soon with Fiske and called that "an appropriate first step" but declined to discuss whether he would review the work already done or simply restart the investigation.

"It's premature to be commenting on the substance of the investigation and procedures and issues that arise," he said. "I intend assiduously to be fair and objective and even-handed and work as hard as I can."

He said he was contacted more than a week ago regarding a possible appointment as independent counsel. Starr would not say who contacted him. He said he learned for certain that he would be appointed on Friday — the day his selection was announced in Washington.

Atlanta lawyer Joe D. Whitley, who was a U.S. attorney at the same time that Starr was solicitor general during the Bush administration, said Starr faced a task akin to "getting on a moving train."

'Whatever result he comes back with, either side cannot complain," said Whitley.

A number of lawyers said in interviews they thought the 48-year-old Starr would be up to the task of following through on Fiske's work in the high-profile probe of President Clinton's Arkansas business dealings. He was for the most part praised as a thorough and fair-minded attorney.

"If there are facts that have not been uncovered they will be uncovered," said William K. Slate of New York, president of the American Arbitration Association. "Whatever he does will have the stamp of integrity."

Lawyer E. Barrett Prettyman Jr. of Washington, D.C., said that Starr, a former federal judge, is "very definitely is a Republican in his views and his temperament and in his political leanings. But he is not an ideologue, someone who puts politics first."

However, Miami criminal defense lawyer Albert J. Krieger expressed doubts about Starr's impartiality. He noted that a Republican administration appointed him as solicitor general and earlier as a federal appellate judge.

Starr has challenged Clinton's argument that sitting presidents should be immune from civil suits, going on public television last June to state his view in a case unrelated to Whitewater.

Clinton's lawyers have maintained, in the wake of the sexual harassment suit brought against the president by Paula Jones, that such litigation must be frozen until a president has left office.

He declined to comment on that point Saturday, except to say "I have authored no brief and nothing has been filed."

Up to the point of his ouster by the three-judge panel Friday, Fiske had ruled that deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster's death was a suicide. And he cleared White House and Treasury officials of any criminal charges stemming from discussions they had about an Arkansas savings and loan owned by a man who was partner with President and Mrs. Clinton in the Whitewater land development effort.

Georgetown University law professor Sherman L. Cohn said that "if Ken Starr comes out with the same result, that should quiet all those who were uncomfortable."

Fiske did more behind scenes, one aide says

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the surface, Whitewater prosecutor Robert Fiske accomplished little during his six months on the job — only one indictment.

But behind the scenes, he and his staff of a dozen lawyers put in 14- to 16-hour days, working closely with more than 20 FBI agents, and assembled a staggering amount of information to carry the investigation into its next phase.

"They've developed a tremendous amount of information — this has been a very, very aggressive investigation; no one realizes how big the effort has been," said Rusty Hardin, special trial counsel for Fiske.

Until a court directed Friday that Fiske be replaced, a first round of Whitewater indictments had been anticipated in the early fall, said defense lawyers in Arkansas who are representing figures in the investigation.

But the timetable probably will be pushed back by several months because of the switch to new Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr, a former solicitor general and federal judge.

"If Starr's going to hire his own staff, there's going to be slippage," said former Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, who was once a law partner of Fiske's.

In the Watergate scandal, noted Walsh, prosecutor Leon Jaworski retained the entire staff of Archibald Cox after he was fired in the "Saturday night massacre." The result: continuity and an investigation that kept moving with dispatch.

But even if Starr asks Fiske's staff to stay on, there could be delays.

"Substituting a former solicitor general for an outstanding prosecutor like Bob Fiske, there's bound to be some slippage," said Walsh.

At the White House, the switch in prosecutors was accepted with resignation. Privately, aides worried about the investigation stretching further into Clinton's term, and voiced concerns about which direction Starr will take the inquiry.

NAACP chairman vows to support Chavis in scandal

BALTIMORE (AP) — The chairman of the NAACP's board of directors said he didn't know in advance about a settlement of up to $332,400 between executive director Benjamin Chavis and a woman who claims Chavis sexually harassed her.

Nonetheless, William Gibson said he would stand by Chavis. Several people on the 64-member board, which also was not told of the settlement, have demanded that Chavis and Gibson resign.

Gibson said Friday in a telephone interview from his home in Greenville, S.C., that he didn't find out that Chavis agreed to use the group's money in the settlement until reporters called his home the day before the story was made public July 29.

"I was surprised," he said. "The surprise motivated me to find out more details."

But Gibson defended Chavis, reiterating his position that Chavis had full authority to deal with the complaint from former NAACP employee Mary Stansel.

In November, Chavis committed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to paying Ms. Stansel up to $82,400 while he tried to find her an $80,000-a-year job. He promised an additional $250,000 if no job was found.

Ms. Stansel sued Chavis and the Baltimore-based NAACP in June, claiming Chavis reneged on their settlement because he didn't find her a job.

The lawsuit said the settlement was reached to avoid a complaint by Ms. Stansel.

Bat breakfast

The 37th annual bat flight breakfast at Carlsbad Caverns National Park is set for 5 a.m. to 7 a.m. (MDT) Thursday. Breakfast — scrambled eggs, sausage, hash browns, juice, coffee, milk and rolls — is to be served on the lower parking terrace near the natural entrance to the caverns. Cost is $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12. The event offers an opportunity to witness the bats' early-morning return to their roosting area and the sunrise over the cavern entrance. After breakfast, there will be a guided lantern tour of the cavern. Self-guided tours will begin at 8 a.m. Cavern admission will be free to anyone who enters before 8:30 a.m.

Group issues report on school districts

■ Loss of CED exemption costs homeowners additional taxes, Texas Research League's annual report says.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When the system of collecting taxes through the County Education Districts was dissolved, property taxpayers bore the burden of an increase, according to the Austin-based Texas Research League.

The league's annual report — Bench Marks — indicated school tax rates increased only a penny last year for most Texans. However, Texas homeowners had to pay an additional $398 million because of the loss of the 20 percent exemption offered under the CEDs.

The average tax on an $80,000 home increased by $108, or more than 12 percent.

Gary E. Wood, league president, said the 18th edition of Bench Marks was being prepared at a time when the issue of financing Texas schools remains mired in controversy.

"The Texas school finance scheme, with the continuing disparity between rich and poor districts, and the five choices for tax-based rich districts to reduce this disparity somewhat, is being challenged on all sides," Wood wrote in a news release.

"The only thing anyone can agree on is that the Legislature has plenary power to consolidate districts and redraw boundaries," he said.

Texas school districts have been offered options to lower their property differentials with poor districts. These options include moving commercial property to other districts, annexation, consolidation or student buy-outs from the state or other districts.

In an effort to show how tax dollars are being spent, Bench Marks reports on all 1,040 school districts in Texas.

School districts statewide spent an average of $4,403 a student. Local school districts all spent below-average amounts per pupil. Midland Independent School District spent $3,943 a student in 1994.

Ector County Independent School District's student expenditure was a little higher, at $4,009 a student.

Greenwood Independent School District's was the lowest at $3,861.

According to Bench Marks, 367 school districts spent below average per student, and four districts spent below $3,000. However, 27 districts authorized the expenditure of more than $10,000 a pupil for operating expenses.

The report said MISD administrators are better paid — at an average of $52,778 a year, compared to their peers statewide who are paid an average of $48,827.

The report also indicates that Midland teachers, with an average base salary of $29,410, are better

Team gives police, rescue personnel emotional support

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Violent death, disasters, a hostage situation or a crime resulting in a person being injured or killed are just a few situations where counseling and support are needed to ease the emotional and psychological fallout.

However, it is not just victims, survivors or their families who may need such assistance. The law-enforcement officers and emergency personnel who work on such cases day after day are just as susceptible to the emotional and psychological backlash of an abnormally stressful situation.

"I don't know where this idea of firefighters and officers being superhuman and able to handle anything came from, but it's wrong," said Midland Fire Department paramedic Vaughn Donaldson.

"We're not he-men, and we can break under stress just like anyone else."

Reaching those officers and emergency personnel during their time of emotional need is the reason Donaldson helped start the Permian Basin Critical Incident Stress Management Team Inc., (PBCISMT) in June.

The service allows individuals to receive support and counseling after a critical incident from a mental health professional and a group of peers through a process called debriefing.

"A critical incident is any abnormal situation that would cause a normal, but painful reaction in a normal person," he said.

Examples of a critical incident include the death of a child, a person with a gun, a high-rise fire, fear of injury or death, injury of self or a peer, knowing the victim, dealing with survivors, nighttime operations and mistakes during an operation.

After a critical incident, any person involved goes through a process called defusing, which occurrs within eight hours of the incident. The process in-

'Jailbirds' to help raise money for Jerry's Kids

Staff Report

A number of Midlanders on Thursday will go behind bars for good — the good of Jerry's Kids through the local Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Local jailbirds will be showing their community awareness and support by being locked up in the temporary jail at Midland Park Mall. They are asked to raise at least $350 for bail; however, the sky is the limit for the amount each prisoner can raise.

Awards will be given to the persons who raise the highest bail; they will be recognized as the most wanted.

For those who have not raised bail by the time of their arrest, they will be allowed to make phone calls from the jail in an effort to raise bail.

Former Midlander heads Republican fund-raising

By Ed Todd

Williamson

Barry Williamson, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission and a former Midlander, is the chief fund-raiser for the Texas Republican Party's Victory '94 effort to get out the vote and to heighten voter awareness about Republican candidates in the Nov. 8 general election.

"We've got the best ticket we've ever had," said Williamson last week following his appointment to the campaign.

"It is the best group of candidates, I think, in the history of the Republican Party in Texas," Williamson said.

Williamson's mission will be to raise $1.3 million to finance the party's get-out-the-vote campaign to elect a Republican Party ticket that is headlined by gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush, Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, and Reps. Larry Combest of Lubbock and Lamar Smith and Henry Bonilla, both of San Antonio.

Williamson said he is "committed to working hard and getting out there and putting the money together, so we can get the vote out. That's my job."

Though he is in "familiar territory" in the fund-raising arena, Williamson acknowledged that "there's nobody better than Bobby Holt. He's the best in the nation. Nobody in the nation can raise funds better than he can. He's the best there is."

Holt — a Midland rancher and oilman — is Bush's chief fund-raiser in his gubernatorial campaign and was former President Bush's national fund-raiser in his bid for re-election in 1992.

As a fund-raiser, Holt is "committed to his product. He believes in it with all of his heart," said Williamson, who is married to Holt's daughter, Holly.

Property owners' organizations to stage rally in Austin

ALPINE — Texas property owners who are enraged over the federal government's encroachments will stage a march at 10 a.m. Aug. 27 on the South Capitol Grounds in Austin to proclaim their rights.

"We are fed up with the feds, so to speak," said Alpine rancher Ralph Meriwether, who is president of the Trans Texas Heritage Association.

Meriwether's group and the Take Back Texas Inc. organization are coordinating the rally to get the public and the politicians to consider intrusive government's dangers to a free society and the threat to landowners' rights.

"We are trying to protect and defend the basic principles that made this great nation: free enterprise, individual initiative, private property," said Meriwether, a former Midland oil operator.

The latest controversy — which incited the planned march — involves the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's announced intention to designate 33 Texas counties as "critical habitat" for the endangered golden-cheeked warbler.

As a result, Hill Country landowners reportedly were warned that they would not be legally able to "clear brush from their land" because doing so would deprive the bird of its natural habitat.

The critical-habitat designation "will only intensify government regulation on private property," according to a joint statement issued by the Trans Texas Heritage Association and Take Back Texas.

"Texans are fed up with government intrusion and it's time to draw the line," said Marshall Kuykendall of Austin.

Kuykendall, who heads up Take Back Texas, likened the landowners' action to reclaim their rights to the 1836 Texas Revolution to gain independence from Mexico.

"The Endangered Species Act, wetlands regulations, coastal-zone management and dozens of other similar programs have become nothing more than excuses for bureaucrats to run roughshod over productive Texans," Kuydendall said.

The encroachment endangers "freedom and individual rights," he said.

And it is wrong for the government "to attempt to control everything its citizens do," he said.

Meriwether believes that the ownership of "private property is the individual's first line of defense against the power of government.

"The founding fathers recognized this God-given, inalienable right as the guiding principle that undergirds American society and the cornerstone of freedom," Meriwether said.

"Government will always take from its citizens as much as they will allow it to take, and the designation of critical habitat marks the limit."

The Aug. 27 march on Congress Avenue is to include drivers of cattle trucks and horse rigs, mounted groups, ranchers, farmers, builders and other

POLICE REPORTS

Fatal accident

BIG SPRING — A Dallas man was killed and two others injured in a one-vehicle accident early Saturday morning on Interstate 20, according to a Department of Public Safety spokeswoman.

Viet Nguyen, 45, of Dallas was pronounced dead on the scene. Lan Nguyen, 9, of Dallas remains in serious condition with injuries to both arms that required surgery at Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring. Tam Nguyen, 74, of Dallas was in good condition and remained at the hospital for observation.

The accident occurred at 6:10 a.m. about two miles west of Big Spring in the eastbound lane of I-20, according to the report.

The Nguyen family was riding in a van driven by Duc Van, according to the report. He was not injured.

The van was eastbound traveling about 70 mph when it left the roadway to the right.

Troopers indicated that the driver overcorrected to the left, and the van went into a broadside skid, overturning three times before landing upright facing south.

Neither Viet Nguyen or the injured child were wearing seatbelts.

Assault

A Midland man was treated and released from a local hospital after he was "jumped" and robbed by about a dozen men while walking down Lamesa Road early Saturday morning, according to police reports.

Joe L. Fuentes Jr., 19, was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center emergency room about 3:33 a.m. Saturday. He was treated for abrasions on his right elbow and welts on his back, accoring to the report.

Fuentes told officers he was walking southbound in the 1400 block of North Lamesa Road, when between 10 and 15 Hispanic males jumped him, hitting him with sticks and clubs.

During the attack, his billfold was removed; cash and his driver's license were taken, according to the report.

Fuentes said he did not know the suspects.

Drowning

BIG SPRING — Police identified the victim of a Friday afternoon drowning as Diego Reyes, 30, of El Paso, according to police reports.

Reyes drowned at Comanche Lake Friday afternoon. Officers ruled the death accidental.

Friday

Theft: Maria Ramirez reported $500 was stolen from her purse at 1704 Belmont St. It was reported at 5:21 p.m.

Burglary of a vehicle: Laura Hillard reported that a stereo was stolen from a vehicle at 1300 S. Main St. It was reported at 6:14 p.m.

Saturday

Burglary of a vehicle: Two stereo speakers and a box were reported stolen from a vehicle at 1905 N. Big Spring St. It was reported at 1:16 a.m.

Theft: Dennis Hall reported the theft of various small hand tools from under a vehicle's open hood at 2910 N. Big Spring St. It was reported at 7:32 a.m.

TEAM: Officers, emergency personnel receive counseling

volves everyone talking about the incident — how they felt and what they did.

Once defusing is complete, any officer or emergency personnel still dealing with the emotional stress of the incident can be temporarily taken out of service and will go through debriefing within 24-72 hours. The process lasts about 2½ to three hours.

"It's very deep and, sometimes, very hard," Donaldson said. "These people are dealing with a lot emotionally and psychologically."

Critical incidents that automatically call for debriefing include life-of-duty deaths, serious line-of-duty injury, suicide of a peer and a disaster or major multi-casualty incident.

Other events that would more than likely require a debriefing include police shootings — being shot or having to shoot a suspect — significant events involving children, incidents involving relatives or known victims, prolonged incidents — especially with loss of life — events that draw excessive media attention or any "high-power" event.

Officers and personnel in one community are not debriefed by members of their own department.

"Say, if Andrews needed a team for debriefing, we would send a team of peers from say, Odessa or Midland," he said. "You need someone who is outside of the incident, but who has been there and can relate."

PBCISMT is made up of members of Permian Basin law-enforcement agencies, hospital emergency personnel, firefighters, paramedics, mental-health agencies, shelters and drug- and alcohol-dependency organizations.

The group also has elected officers and board of directors. Donaldson is the president of the team.

The service area for the team includes Andrews, Borden, Coke, Crane, Crockett, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Irion, Loving, Martin, Midland, Mitchell, Pecos, Reagan, Reeves, Sterling, Tom Green, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties.

Donaldson said he realized the need for such a service in the Permian Basin after he attended a conference given by Jeff Mitchell, a professor at the University of Maryland who pioneered the idea of stress-management teams in the early 1980s.

"You have to go to the conferences to be certified to be on these teams," he said. "We currently have about 10 officers and emergency personnel certified in the Permian Basin. We hope to have at least 100 individuals trained in debriefing."

The team has three health-care professionals who have volunteered their services, Dr. Perry Marchioni, Dr. Linda Montgomery and Beverly Kleiber of Big Spring. Ms. Kleiber is the only professional currently certified to participate in debriefing.

Officers, emergency personnel and health-care professionals who want to become certified will have the chance when Mitchell conducts two conferences in Texas next year. One will be in Midland and the other in Austin.

The conferences are the only cost for which the PBCISMT has to allot a budget. Donaldson said he estimated the cost at $250 a person to attend the conference.

"We are currently applying for grants, but we will have to conduct a couple of fund-raisers to get us started," he said.

Donaldson said the team will also be available for the public, if the need arises.

"For example, members of the media who might work a disaster and come in contact with people who are dying will feel, eventually, the emotional stress of that situation," he said. "We can be called in for those kinds of situations."

The next PBCISMT meeting will be August 11 at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission building.

SCHOOLS: Loss of CED exemption costs homeowners paid than the average Texas teacher who makes a base salary of $28,993.

The teacher base salaries don't include supplements or increases for experience or additional college degrees earned.

The base salary for ECISD teachers is below average at $26,333, as is GISD's at $26,071.

ECISD's average administrator salary is lower than MISD's by $1,417, but still above state average.

Chuck Hornung, public information officer for ECISD, said the district has been involved in an administrative reorganization since the 1990-91 school year.

"Figures recently released from the Texas Education Agency show that ECISD's administrative costs are below the maximum standard for districts our size," Hornung said.

"According to state guidelines, school districts the size of ECISD are allowed to have administrative costs that are 11.5 percent of the costs of instructional delivery. ECISD's ratio is 10.5 percent. This is a savings to the Ector County taxpayer of $330,000."

When the district began reorganizing, administration costs were about 12 percent of the costs of instructional delivery.

MISD's administrative costs are even lower than ECISD's, at 8.39 percent, according to Don Furgeson, MISD business manager. He said the state standard of 11.05 percent was established for districts with enrollments greater than 10,000.

A recent performance report from State Comptroller John Sharp's office indicated Midland teachers and administrators are better paid than teachers in San Angelo, ECISD, Lubbock and Wichita Falls.

However, the report also noted that MISD's Scholastic Aptitude Test scores were higher, topping both the state average and the average for the largest 50 school districts in the state.

Midland County homeowners paid $1.38 per $100 valuation during the 1993-94 school year, compared to the state average of almost $1.40. The owner of an $80,000 house in Midland would have paid $1,068 without exemptions. With a homestead exemption, the tax would have been $892, according to the Texas Research League.

Class sizes are slightly larger in Midland than the state average with one teacher instructing more than 17 pupils in a class compared to the state average of at least 15. ECISD also has a student teacher ratio of 17-1, and GISD's ratio is 16 to 1.

FUNDS: Williamson hopes to raise $1.3 million for party

(From 1B)

In focusing on Bush and Ms. Hutchison, Williamson said the candidates possess a trait that is rare among politicians: "the ability to make a decision.

"That's a leadership quality that is lacking (in many politicians)," Williamson said.

And leadership is the difference between Bush and his Democratic Party opponent, Gov. Ann Richards, Williamson said.

He said that while Ms. Richards is funny and entertaining, voters are "looking for some substance" in a governor.

Voters are worried and concerned about education, crime, their checkbook, "government out of control" and taxes, he said.

In a recent speech, Bush told his listeners: " 'If you're interested in the status quo, if you don't want anything to change, don't vote for me,' " Williamson said.

Like Williamson, Midlander Ernest Angelo — director of Victory '94 — is impressed with the slate of Republican candidates in Texas.

"While they (Bush and Ms. Hutchison) are giving us a real strong ticket by virtue of their own abilities and the attributes they bring to it, we've also got the strongest ticket we've ever had, top to bottom," said Angelo, a petroleum engineer who is the Republican National committeeman for the Republican Party of Texas.

Bush "clearly brings a lot of varied experience in business and politics," Angelo said. "He's got a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and willingness to work hard and to travel the state."

And Bush possesses "excellent political instincts in helping him make the right decisions."

Angelo said Ms. Hutchison is "establishing herself as a leader in the Senate (and is) looking real strong in the polls."

Her opponent, Democrat Richard Fisher of Dallas, "really doesn't know where he is coming from or where he's going" and is a party switcher: back and forth from Republican to Democrat, Angelo said.

"He doesn't know what he is or what he believes. He sounds kind of like a Clinton Democrat."

In his role as Victory '94 fundraiser, Williamson is "very dedicated and committed as supporter of the party's efforts," Angelo said.

"It's going to be a tough job" because of the competition for political funds, but Williamson is "very capable," Angelo said.

people who are fed up with federal regulations that impact Texas and Texans.

Federal and state elected officials are invited to attend the march and rally.

The No. 1 priority of the Trans Texas Heritage Association is the protection of private property, Meriwether said.

Trans Texas Heritage Association was formed two years ago as a property-rights group and includes the Davis Mountains-Trans Pecos Heritage Association and the Hill Country Heritage Association.

"We think that we are good stewards of the land," Meriwether said. "We are kind of mandated to inform people that it is the private-property owners — not the government, not the public — who will protect our natural resources and leave the land better than when they came.

"That has been proven in research and studies," Meriwether said. "If nothing else, it's a matter of economics. If you don't take care of it, you just lose what you have."

The telethon lock-up is set from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday at the Sears court of the mall.

Although the lock-up is all in fun, it is for a very serious cause: to help Permian Basin children and adults who have been diagnosed with muscular dystrophy.

Everyone is invited to come out and view the jailbirds and contribute to the cause. Persons interested in being jailbirds should call Patricia Jackson at 683-2405.

The lock-up is sponsored by the National Association of Letter Carriers, Midland Park Mall and Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems.

Officials: Man fatally shoots woman, school superintendent

LYFORD (AP) — A school superintendent and a female friend were fatally shot Saturday by the woman's husband, who later shot and killed himself, authorities said.

Jose A. Flores, 60, superintendent in Lyford, was shot in the side and in the chest shortly after 10 a.m. outside his office in the South Texas community, Willacy County Sheriff Larry Spence said.

Zelda Garcia, 28, a former employee of the school district, was shot at least once in the chest in an earlier attack at her rural home, officials said.

Eddie Garcia, 38, shot and killed himself when deputies arrived at the residence, the sheriff said.

"They heard some noises inside the house, and they called out in there. But by the time they got inside he was dead, so it must have just happened," Spence said.

Flores, who lived in nearby Raymondville, was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Sabas Garza, who ordered an autopsy. The Garcias were pronounced dead at their home by Justice of the Peace Teresa Trevino.

Authorities said Flores was shot and killed about 100 feet behind his office.

Sheriff's officers said they were investigating allegations that a love triangle may have led Garcia to shoot his wife and then Flores several hours later before taking his own life as authorities closed in.

School employees told the Valley Morning Star that Flores and Mrs. Garcia were having an affair.

Flores, who had been superintendent for 11 years, had been cleaning out his office because he was planning to retire next month, officials said.

Authorities said Flores may have been lured outside his office before the shooting.

Spence said deputies recovered several weapons from Garcia's residence.

Officials seek state audits of investment practices

DALLAS (AP) — Citing Odessa College's $6.6 million in stock market losses, Lieutenant Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney have asked the state auditor to investigate investment practices at agencies and state-funded schools.

Bullock and Laney met Friday with State Auditor Lawrence F. Alwin about "bringing investment practices into all of the audits that they (the auditors) do."

Bullock said he is "very concerned" about reports that the Odessa junior college and the state treasury had invested in derivatives. The particularly risky financial instruments are based upon, or derived from, the value of other assets such as stocks, bonds or mortgages.

Bullock's chief of staff also said he "is prepared to put together more stringent legislation," including proposing some type of oversight commission to monitor agencies' investment practices.

For the most part, state agencies and schools are each governed by their own investment policies. Bullock's staff said the problem is compounded by a lack of uniform reporting on investments.

Several governmental bodies nationally have complained in the past several months about losing extensively through investments in derivatives, which they said they had been led to believe were safe investments that would protect their principal.

The Dallas Morning News reported Friday that Odessa College has lost $6.6 million from trading in derivatives in the past year and has an additional $22 million in derivatives investments that it can't afford to sell.

As a result, the 5,000-student junior college was forced to borrow $5.2 million from a local bank to meet its obligations in June. The school also has proposed a 7.2 percent tax rate increase, has raised tuition and has cut its budget.

The News reported last month that the state treasury had invested $80 million in notes considered so volatile that federal banks and savings and loans are prohibited from holding them. Those investments don't threaten the solvency of the treasury's $8 billion portfolio, but were criticized as too risky.

While derivatives can be enticing, Securities Commissioner Denise Voigt Crawford wrote that the potential for higher return often is accompanied by higher risk, "partial or even total loss of the investment ... (which) can be fiscally devastating."

The Securities Board has no authority over state agencies, although it does regulate firms and agents who sell securities.

In the letter, Ms. Crawford asked other agencies to check with her office about the background and disciplinary history of brokerage firms that sell derivatives.

Group wants Confederate flag erased from Nacogdoches logo

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — The NAACP chapter in this East Texas city is demanding that government officials remove the Confederate battle flag from the police logo.

Representatives from the group met with city officials last week to air their objections.

"The flag is a symbol of the people who fought to maintain the position of slavery," said the Rev. Elighah Walker Jr., president of the Nacogdoches chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"It is insulting, and it is insensitive to the black community," he said.

But Mayor Judy McDonald views the issue differently. To her, concerns center on the battle flag's presence on the shoulder patch worn by Nacogdoches police officers and on patrol cars.

"I can understand the problem with someone trying to teach young children about respect for the law and seeing that emblem on a police car, but we certainly never meant to offend anybody," Mrs. McDonald said.

Police Chief John Walton said critics take too narrow a view of the logo.

"The flags simply represent the flags that have flown over the city. I would suggest looking at the overall patch, not just one flag," he said.

Energy Secretary speaks at women's political caucus

DALLAS (AP) — Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary told a group of politically minded women Saturday that they have made valuable strides but need to press on to gain more seats at the head of the table.

O'Leary, delivering the keynote address at the Texas Women's Political Caucus, hailed the increase in the last 20 years of women elected officials, but said "it's not good enough."

"Without the strong political participation, there really can be no change in policy to make our lives different," she said.

O'Leary said female candidates got clobbered in the primaries because they didn't have enough money.

"We've got to get focused on that," she said.

The first woman and first black to hold the energy cabinet post, O'Leary used pictures on an overhead projector to show the changing face of state and national politics — from the days of white men only to a culturally diverse group.

She abandoned the podium and walked through the luncheon crowd of 150 as she spoke, recalling the names of people she'd visited with beforehand and encouraging college students to make their way into the political pipeline.

She sported a pin depicting 'The Evolution of Authority' with four footprints — the last of which was a woman's high heel — and described her early political activity as a "hand maiden" who licked envelopes and stamps and drove people to the polls.

"We weren't in the pipeline," she said. "We surely didn't have a seat at the table. That has changed dramatically."

O'Leary recalled one instance in which a political candidate she chauffeured in her role as a "hand maiden" wouldn't even speak to her.

Oh, what a difference a few years makes.

"This man is a newscaster clamoring for an interview," she said. "and I haven't given him one yet."

Mexican national receives stay of execution

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas appeals court has stayed next week's execution of a Mexican national whose confession to a 1979 robbery-murder or an El Paso cab driver came after Mexican police threatened his parents with torture.

On Friday, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals stayed Wednesday's execution of Cesar Roberto Fierro Renya, 37.

The court said it wants to study further the apparent contradiction between an El Paso policeman's 1980 testimony in the case and a sworn affidavit concerning his investigation made earlier this year.

Fierro was convicted in the murder of El Paso taxi driver Nicolas Castanon.

The death sentence, to have been carried out two weeks after the controversial execution of Vermont native Robert Nelson Drew, brought protests from the Mexican consulate in Houston.

Hours before the stay was granted, Consul General Francisco Gonzalez de Cossio said his office was preparing for the first time in recent history to file a motion to intervene in a capital case at the federal level.

Court of Criminal Appeals Administrator Rick Wetzel said the six justices participating in the decision were unanimous in granting the stay. Three other judges were unavailable to vote.

Defense attorneys say police in Cuidad Juarez held Fierro's mother and stepfather in custody as El Paso police questioned the young suspect on the U.S. side of the border.

Mexican police threatened to torture Fierro's mother with a cattle prod unless he confessed to the crime, lawyers said, and at one point, allowed her to relay that information to him via telephone.

El Paso policeman Al Medrano allowed Fierro to take the call, but in later court proceedings testified under oath that he was unaware that Fierro's parents had been taken into custody by Juarez police.

In January, shortly before his death, Medrano acknowledged in a sworn affidavit that Juarez police had held the suspect's parents.

He did not address the issue of torture in his statement, nor did he admit, in so many words, to perjury.

However, the man who prosecuted Fierro — former El Paso First Assistant District Attorney Gary B. Weiser — said he would have agreed to throw out the confession had he known the defendant's parents had been held by Mexican police.

Two students sue, accuse Texas Tech of discrimination

LUBBOCK (AP) — Two Texas Tech students are suing the university, saying that allowances ought to be made for students with epilepsy and learning disabilities.

Sherri McClure, who has epilepsy, and Tammy Tips, who has a learning disability, said the school is not making such allowances.

The school has wheelchair ramps, braille directories and an office that helps disabled students get the accommodations they need. However, Ms. McClure and Ms. Tips said more subtle disabilities are not accommodated. They contend that violates a federal law requiring access for the disabled.

"Accessibility does not just mean ramps," Ms. McClure told reporters. "Accessibility means attitudes and behaviors."

University officials believe the campus complies with the law, Tech spokeswoman Margaret Lutherer said Saturday. However, officials have not reviewed the lawsuits and cannot comment on specific allegations, she said.

Ms. McClure was a master's degree candidate seeking a certificate to teach people with impaired vision. However, the College of Education denied a recommendation for the certificate, she said.

"They said it was because I have epilepsy," Ms. McClure said.

In a separate lawsuit, Ms. Tips alleged she was barred from a clinical psychology doctoral program because of her learning disability.

She said she has a disorder that hinders her ability to do math and organize material under a deadline.

She earned her master's degree at Tech with the help of tutoring and extra time to take math tests.

Residents, fed up with gun ownership curbs, form citizen militia

VICTORIA (AP) — A spokesman for the Victoria Police Department said Saturday that authorities will get concerned about an armed citizens militia forming in the area only if members become violent.

"A militia by its very nature is constitutional; a vigilante group is not," said Lt. Tom Eastland, who heads the department's crime prevention unit.

About a dozen residents who say they are fed up with gun control regulations met in the past week to discuss creating an armed citizens militia in Victoria.

"As long as they stay within the bounds of what a militia is, and don't resort to any kind of violence, the Victoria Police Department won't bother them," Eastland said Saturday.

"Even as a militia, they don't have any rights than a private citizen," Eastland said. "A private citizen is able to protect his rights and property to a point."

If the group engaged in some type of violence, "then the courts would have to decide whether they were acting as a militia or as a vigilante," Eastland said.

"We feel that law-abiding citizens are suffering financial, psychological, legal and intellectual setbacks by officials who should protect them," Kyle Norman, a leader in forming the group, said Friday.

Norman said about 12 people met Tuesday to discuss forming a militia in the Victoria area. Texas, along with Montana and Florida, is in the forefront of the movement, and a similar group has been formed in the San Antonio area, he said.

He said the group will not limit itself to gun control issues.

"This is not just a gun owners' organization — it's larger than that. Our constitutional rights are already almost reduced to rubble, and we'd like to build them back into something that resembles the framers' intent."

Ken Schustereit, who attended Tuesday's meeting, said militias are legally provided for in the constitution of every state in the union.

Citizen militias are forming because people are fed up with restrictions on gun ownership and what they consider the erosion of other constitutionally guaranteed rights, Schustereit said.

Schustereit said he hopes the Victoria militia group will be productive and "not just gather once a month and tell war stories."

One of the group's goals will be to write letters to Congress, Schustereit said. He said he also would like the group to drill and have target practice, although Norman said it is too early to say how that will be handled.

"That's not the thrust at this time, although since the term militia is being used, something along those lines might be necessary to qualify as such an organization," Norman said.

Both men emphasize that there will be nothing secret.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

High school students can earn credit at MC

By Elise Coombes

Juniors and seniors at Midland and Lee High schools in selected advanced and honors classes can earn college and high school credit for the same course by participating in the Concurrent Enrollment Program at Midland College.

Coombes

This means it is possible for high school students to graduate with as many as 24 hours of college credit without leaving the high school classroom. This dual enrollment program is the result of an agreement between the state of Texas and Midland Independent School District and Midland College. Students need permission from their high school counselor or principal to participate.

"This is a great opportunity for the high school student to experience the quality and content of a college-level course while still in the high school environment," said Stan Jacobs, Midland College associate dean of instruction. "And, for their parents, it's a great savings of money as well as time."

Courses offered for college credit include computer information systems, English, Spanish, German, French, math, biology, chemistry, government and economics. To receive college credit for government and economics, students must take both semesters of honors high school government or economics. Also, students should check to make sure the course they want is offered at their high school.

Advantages to the concurrent enrollment program include earning college credit early and having study and learning efforts "counted twice."

The cost is between $125-$185 for one or two courses — plus books — for students enrolled in the summer program. And, grades received in the course become a permanent part of their college record.

Students in the concurrent enrollment program are urged to take the Texas Academic Skills Program (TASP) test as soon as possible. If a student's TASP scores are not on file by the time he or she has completed nine semester hours, the student will not be permitted to enroll in additional college courses.

TASP regulations also eliminate college enrollment for high school students who fail one or more parts of the TASP test.

Students are encouraged to discuss the program's merits with parents, teachers and counselors. Check your high school counselors' office for concurrent enrollment registration packets or call Midland College Registar Don Cates, 685-4508 or Jacobs, 685-4551.

One of the advantages of Midland College is its ability to respond quickly to community needs to teach and retrain students in a number of technical areas. Many of the college's technical classes are expanding in size and adding new equipment.

By enrolling in one of the college's technical programs, students can opt for a one-year certificate program or an Associate in Applied Science that allows them to quickly enter the work force. Additionally, several colleges and universities in Texas accept Midland College's two-year degree toward a bachelor's degree.

The welding program is an example of how rapidly a program can change to meet industry needs. With lab space more than four times as large as the old facility, new equipment and gifts of grants and equipment from the community, the welding lab, under the direction of Joe Smith, promises students state-of-the-art instruction.

"I've been around a lot of welding shops, but this is going to be one of the finest in the state," said Wayne Holcomb, Technical Studies division chair.

An open house to show off the new welding facilities will be August 18.

Other technical programs include drafting under Curt Pervier and Joe Nye, who are working on Computer Assisted Drawing (CAD) certification and adding a class in CAD-Computer Assisted Manufacturing (CAD-CAM).

Automotive Technology, taught by Tony Smith, is adding new computer diagnostics equipment with a $10,000 grant from the Hahl Proctor Foundation and expects to receive ASE certification this fall.

Air Conditioning, Heating and Refrigeration Technology under Wayne Young and Electronics taught by Bill Clarkson are expanding and adding new equipment.

One of the college's best-equipped facilities is the Aviation Maintenance Technology program with classes and lab at Midland International Airport. Bud Stapleton is the director of the program, which offers students hands-on experience in every area of airframe and powerplant instruction. Aviation Maintenance will hold ceremonies to honor its second graduating class August 17.

These programs are open to high school graduates, G.E.D. graduates and, in some cases, non-high school graduates. Financial aid is available. For more information about Midland College's technical classes, call Wayne Holcomb, 685-4676.

Midlanders attend Elks camp

Staff Report

Midlanders Daniel Patrick Smith and Donald Charles Smith recently attended the Texas Elks Camp, which caters to children with special needs.

Smith

Smith

The camp — located at Ottine, next to Palmetto State Park — gives children the opportunity to participate in activities such as swimming, fishing, arts and crafts, hiking, nature studies, camping, cookouts and therapeutic horseback riding.

The camp is free to qualifying youngsters, courtesy of the Texas Elks' Children's Services, a statewide project of the Texas Elks.

The Midland Elks Lodge supports the program and can help children gain admission to the camp.

For more information, contact the Midland Elks, P.O. Box 1902, Midland, Texas, 79702, 683-6565, or the Texas Elks Camp, Route 5, Box 185, Gonzales, Texas, 78629, 210-672-7561.

Applications for next summer's camp will be available after Jan. 1.

College to offer hunter education

Staff Report

Midland College will offer two sessions of "Hunter Education" on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6-9 p.m., Monday through August 17 or on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30-9 p.m., Tuesday through August 18. Hunters born on or before Sept. 2, 1971, must complete this course to legally hunt in Texas.

Anyone may take the course on a voluntary basis, and parents are encouraged to attend with their children. Students must be at least 12 years old in order to be certified. All other states and provinces require certification in order to purchase a license and/or to hunt.

The course will include firearm safety, ethics, laws and regulations, conservation, wildlife identification, field care of game, wilderness first aid and survival. Persons under 17 years old must have a parent or guardian sign the registration form on the night of the first class. Course fee is $7.

For more information, call 685-4518.

Officials probe missing dockets

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers are investigating the disappearance of seven docket books from the office of a Cleveland justice of the peace, officials said.

The bulky, 2-inch-thick volumes were discovered missing from the Precinct 7 justice of the peace court in February. They cover more than four years of cases, from 1989 to mid-1993.

Because of the missing records, current Precinct 6 Justice Fred Dishongh said he has had to dismiss more than 200 traffic violations.

"We have no record of what was done during those years. I had to recommend the outstanding cases be dismissed rather than risk falsely arresting someone," Assistant Liberty County Attorney Mike Stafford told the Houston Chronicle.

The books record Class C misdemeanors from traffic tickets to assault.

This may be the most important video you ever own.

While it's nice to have videos of birthday parties, elementary school graduations and Pee Wee ball games, take a moment to consider one of the harsher realities of life.

The U.S. Justice Department reports more than 1.4 million children are declared missing every year.

While most of them are thankfully found and returned home, the search for missing children can be made much easier if you give police a videotape of your child.

That's why participating Blockbuster Video stores are offering Kidprint throughout August.

Kidprint, a not-for-profit service, provides parents with a permanent videotape record of their child. It takes only a few minutes. And both the service and the special Kidprint vidéocassettes are free of charge.

Since Kidprint began in 1990, more than 650,000 parents have had videos made. What's more, thousands of dollars have been donated to the program's beneficiary, The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Please bring your child to Blockbuster Video this August to take advantage of Kidprint.

Marshals needed to prevent violence

While there doubtless will be some Americans who believe the federal government was overreacting to the threat of further violence at abortion clinics by stationing federal marshals outside dozens of clinics around the nation, there is no question whatsoever that the killings of three people outside a clinic in Pensacola, Fla. clinic gave authorities ample reason to provide the federal protection.

Dr. John B. Britton and his escort, James H. Barrett, were shot to death July 29 as they arrived at a Pensacola abortion clinic. In March 1993, Dr. David Gunn was killed as he arrived for work at a clinic.

And there is no question that the issue of federally-funded abortions remains one of the most divisive this nation has encountered in years. But the fact that Americans are sharply divided over how they view abortion and the federal funding of it does not alter the fact that, under present law, abortion is a legal medical procedure in this country, and until the Supreme Court reverses its stance on abortion, the operation will remain legal.

As a newspaper, we have editorialized in the past against federal funding for abortions and we still oppose it. Yet, if we are to remain a part of a civilized society we cannot condone the senseless killing of innocent people for their views on this highly controversial subject. Rather, we must — and do — endorse working within the framework of our political and judicial systems to change the law on abortion. Resorting to violence solves nothing.

The abortion debate in this nation has been continuing for years and shows no sign of ending; in fact, the emotions and passions involved virtually ensure that it will continue and will, at times, grow heated. Even in Midland where Planned Parenthood of West Texas plans to begin offering abortion services, there have been heated opinions expressed on both sides of this issue.

With that in mind, the stationing of federal marshals at clinics around the nation appears wise.

We must discourage this senseless violence and having marshals at specific clinics should do that.

OTHER VIEWS

Hispanics should demand intelligence opportunities

The intelligence community should be embarrassed that fewer than 2 percent of all its employees are Hispanic. It is hard to believe that the Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency and Defense Intelligence Agency aren't discriminating in their hiring practices. Promotion policies also have been criticized for racial biases.

Whether discrimination against women and Hispanics and other minorities is an established practice in intelligence circles will be determined in U.S. House hearings with intelligence administrators later this year.

In this instance, government is inexcusably behind in making the country open to people of all races and ethnicities. Fortunately, the situation has reached the public's eye as well as Congress'. But Hispanics . . . should demand to know how and why this was allowed to happen. And we expect it to end at once.

— El Paso Times

'Discovery' changes could reduce high cost of justice

Rules changes under consideration by the Texas Supreme Court aimed at limiting what lawyers call "discovery" make sense.

Discovery — disclosure of information before trial — was developed to keep parties in a suit from blindsiding one another. It is also useful in evaluating whether cases are worth pursuing. Unfortunately, the process is subject to a great deal of abuse.

Endless paper pursuits of information that may or may not be relevant to the cause at hand bog down the courts and drive up the cost of litigation, putting a high price on justice. . . .

As Justice Nathan Hecht, the advisory committee liaison for the court, said, "The legal system can't survive until the 21st century in this manner." The high costs and crowded court dockets will ultimately weigh it down unless changes are made.

— Austin American-Statesman

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, August 7, the 219th day of 1994. There are 146 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 7, 1942, U.S. forces landed at Guadalcanal, marking the start of the first major Allied offensive in the Pacific during World War II. After months of fierce fighting, the Americans succeeded in seizing control of Guadalcanal from the Japanese.

On this date:

In 1912, the Progressive Party nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president.

In 1934, 60 years ago, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld a lower court ruling striking down the government's attempt to ban the controversial James Joyce novel, "Ulysses."

In 1947, the balsa wood raft Kon-Tiki, which had carried a six-man crew 4,300 miles across the Pacific Ocean, crashed into a reef in a Polynesian archipelago.

GEORGE WILL

Clinton has 1950s health-care fantasy

WASHINGTON — For President Clinton, life of late has been all Lent and no Easter, and last week echoes of events 30 and 25 years ago underscored his problems. The man who campaigned as the "candidate of change" seems uncomprehending of changes pertinent to governing. The man who pledged to "make change our friend and not our enemy" is finding that changes in public attitudes are unfriendly to his agenda.

Will

The nation has paid as scant attention to the 30th anniversary of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution (Aug. 7, 1964) as the nation paid to the passage of it. It passed without a negative vote in the House and just two in the Senate. It authorized the president to "take all necessary measures" to prevent further aggression in Vietnam. Bitter experience soon caused many people, particularly Democrats of Clinton's age and persuasion, to assert that such a casual congressional role in authorizing major uses of military force is anti-constitutional.

Yet last week, on the eve of the 30th anniversary of what once was widely regarded as a dereliction of constitutional duty, the Clinton administration asked not Congress but the United Nations (Uganda, Sri Lanka, Saudi Arabia . . .), through the Security Council, to authorize an invasion to end the menace that Haiti poses to world peace. In 1945, when the U.N. was born, and before Bill Clinton was, there may have been a significant American constituency for such a dilution of national sovereignty and disregard of Congress' constitutional role. But not now. Virtually all Americans believe that no U.S. invasion of another nation can be justified by anything short of a threat to vital U.S. interest.

In domestic policy, the revival of congressional supremacy, and the miniaturization and marginalization of the presidency, is illustrated by the death of a thousand cuts administered to the president's highest priority, his 1,300-page health-care plan. The executioner has been Congress, which will write any plan that passes.

When Americans really want something, the political class does not wait 45 years to give it to them. National health care could not be passed during Truman's presidency, even though the mobilization of victory in the Second World War had given the federal government a prestige unmatched before or since.

Clinton's health-care proposal reveals him to be oblivious to changes that have occurred in his lifetime concerning government's prestige and burdensomeness, the former crashing, the latter soaring. For perspective, consider that in 1958, when Clinton was 12, a Gallup Poll showed that only 12 percent of Americans thought Congress was doing a "poor" job.

Long before the Second World War, Americans were remarkably ready to concentrate power in new government agencies that, Americans believed, would wield power wisely for long-term planning. For example, regional problems produced such bold improvisations as the New York Port authority in 1921, the Colorado River Compact in 1922, the Tennessee Valley Authority in 1933. Today, Americans aren't as confident in their government.

This helps to explain the fate of Clinton's health-care proposal, which his aides, recalling the goverenment-friendly 1930s, have advertised as the "Social Security of the 1990s." His proposal now looks like a political version of a Woodstock revival that no one wants, an exercise in a nostalgia.

Nostalgia is often a yearning for childhood, the years of fairy tales. "The essence of a fairy tale," writes literary critic Cynthia Ozick, "is that wishing does make it so: the wish achieves its own fulfillment through its very steadfastness of desire."

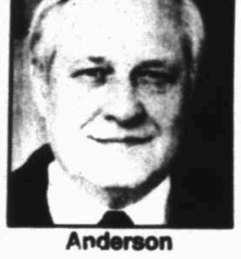
President fails to follow advice on crime

WASHINGTON — It was the kind of "scared straight" warning only a staunch ally could have delivered to the first family: The administration's war on crime is bankrupt and Democrats are in deep political trouble.



Anderson

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., made this impassioned argument during separate plane flights with the Clintons last fall — with Hillary Rodham Clinton en route to the United Nations, and weeks later with Bill Clinton on a trip to dedicate the Kennedy Library Museum in Boston.

Back then, President Clinton was perilously close to parting with a sacred campaign promise: to put 100,000 new cops on the street. That single promise had become synonymous with the slogan of "new Democrat," a commitment to reclaim violence-torn cities and communities. Yet last fall, under severe budget constraints, Clinton was willing to settle for 20,000 new cops, and perhaps only $5 billion in added spending on prevention and punishment.

During his in-flight conversations with the Clintons, Kerry assailed the administration's abdication. Begin by declaring a national emergency to fund a crime bill without budget constraints, Kerry urged.

Kerry drafted two "PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL" memos within days of each meeting — memos which now provide a marker for measuring the current $33 billion crime bill before Congress. The current version leaves intact the funding for 100,000 new officers, and also contains several controversial features such as an assault-weapons ban, an expansion of the death penalty, and money for more prisons and crime prevention programs.

In an Oct. 5, 1993, memo to Mrs. Clinton, Kerry complained that "the national response to our current epidemic of violence is anemic, to say the least. The risks for our party and for the country are enormous. It is our watch now. For 12 years, I and others have been critical of the phony Reagan/Bush war on drugs and response to crime. Yet almost a year into the new administration, we have proposed and funded little that is different."

Kerry's Nov. 1, 1993, memo to President Clinton was also brutally frank. He implored Clinton to "place crime more at the center of your governmental and political agenda, with dramatic initiatives," or risk "growing disorder."

Continuing with a political analysis, Kerry wrote: "One substantial reason for your own election was Mr. Bush's demonstrated inattentiveness to domestic security (his biggest single drop in polls was the week of the Los Angeles riots), coupled with your own promise to add 100,000 new police."

In the wake of the memos, the Clintons deployed counselor David Gergen and other administration aides to Kerry's office for a strategy session. After months of wrangling and bitter intra-party warfare, Democrats delivered a bill that had enough "prevention" money to anger many conservatives, enough "punishment" money to provoke some liberals and enough cops to allow Clinton to keep his campaign promise.

Even at that level, Kerry told the Clintons that it would be a mere "downpayment" and it would require a "generation" to truly solve the crime problem. "One hundred thousand cannot be considered as more than a downpayment on what we will need," he wrote the president. "Your own cited statistic that each policeman today must face 10 times as much violence as his predecessors in the 1950s implies that we need many more. It is evident that, at least, several hundred thousand are needed additionally and quickly."

Kerry pointed out to Mrs. Clinton recent FBI reports showing that in the 63 largest cities — where 42 million people live and tens of millions more work — the chances are about even that a killer will be arrested, and only about one in three that he or she will serve prison time.

"This is a national emergency with real national security implications," he wrote the first lady. "Should any foreign threat take the lives of this number of Americans, we would not argue whether or not we needed armies. . . . We would spend whatever it takes."

RUSSELL BAKER

Analysis reveals Forrest Gump's really O.J.

In response to the pleas of many serious but baffled people, here is a digest of a few of the more trenchant passages in my "Key to the Inner Meaning of 'Forrest Gump.' "

Russell Baker

1. What the feather tells us: The common interpretation arises from the feather's long history as a symbol for lightness. Appearing at the very beginning of the film, it seems to be a device for letting the more cerebral reviewers know they might as well go see another movie since "Forrest Gump" will simply be light entertainment unlikely to enrich their grasp of the meaning of things.

This too-glib explanation ignores the salient fact that we do not know what kind of feather we are seeing. Chicken feather? Sparrow? We cannot tell. Neither could a panel of foremost feather experts I commissioned to watch repeated showings of "Forrest Gump."

Why? Because this feather we are seeing has no parentage in either fowl kingdom or bird land. It is the ideal feather which, as Plato notes, can exist only in the mind.

What the feather tells us is that we must brush up our Plato if we hope to get to the real, inner meaning of "Forrest Gump."

2. Why Forrest drinks too much Dr Pepper while visiting President Kennedy.

Why, beis scene enriches us by examining the very roots of Forrest's way of life. Cultural historians tell us that in the Southland of Forrest's childhood Dr Pepper was marketed as a healthful beverage, as something good for you, very much the way jogging is marketed everywhere nowadays.

By downing bottle after bottle at the White House, with its bottomless supply, Forrest is illuminating his profound desire for good health. And what lies behind this desire? Forrest may not know the Latin for it, but he obviously knows that ancient wisdom prescribes "a sound mind in a sound body."

Thus, he clearly and poignantly hopes that the sound body which will result from Dr Pepper might be accompanied by the improved soundness of mind necessary to make him a more romantic figure to the adventuress Jennie.

3. Who is Lieutenant Dan?

Kutzall and Hammerbung, The Village Kvetch's cantankerous analysts of movie meanings, have muddied the intellectual waters here with their monograph, "Shaman and Shivaree: Jungian Avatars in 'Forrest Gump.'"

Their assertion that Lieutenant Dan is a symbolic representation of Marlon Brando in "Apocalypse Now" simply doesn't hold water. The two of them have obviously never heard of "Moby Dick" and rage-filled Captain Ahab cursing God (thinly disguised as a white whale) for tearing off his leg.

Are we not describing Lieutenant Dan to a T as he sits at the top of the storm-tossed shrimp boat cursing God for blowing off both his legs?

Lieutenant Dan is Captain Ahab. Once we grasp this fact we are on our way into the dark inner meaning of "Forrest Gump."

4. Who is Forrest Gump?

I wrestled with this one for several sleepless nights. "If Lieutenant Dan is Captain Ahab," I said to myself, "then Forrest Gump has to be Ishmael because Forrest is telling Lieutenant Dan's story just as Ishmael was telling Captain Ahab's."

But this was too easy, too obvious, too glib. It wasn't deep enough. It wasn't meaningful enough.

The answer leapt out at me while I was watching a videotape of "Gunga Din" and marveling at how the Aristotelian ethics of Cary Grant's character meshed so naturally with Victor McLaglen's Bismarckian leadership, thus illustrating the Greco-Teutonic symbiosis on which British colonial imperialism was built.

I was watching Abner Biberman run (vainly) for his life when — but of course! — it was as plain as Forrest's incessant running. Ishmael didn't run, he swam. Forrest Gump isn't Ishmael. He's O.J. Simpson.

U.N. document seeks to redefine family

The International Conference on Population and Development, which will take place in Cairo in September, is intended to give the world's nations an opportunity to discuss and respond to the complex and interrelated realities of population and development.

True development must be based on the social, cultural and spiritual dimensions of the human person, as well as on the common good. Its goals must be to protect and enhance the life and dignity of every person, especially the poor. Genuine support for development must be an exercise of justice and solidarity, not domination and control. Every caution must be taken not to impose on individuals or societies methods of population control that are ethically objectionable or a threat to human rights as a substitute for development assistance.

In a decisive shift from past U.N. documents, the Draft Plan of Action seeks to redefine the family and its importance to individual societies and to the global community. It virtually ignores the institution of marriage, and in so doing devalues marriage between a man and a woman, the institution through which children are given an appropriate welcome.

The plan also treats all sexual behavior as acceptable, even for unmarried adolescents, and ignores the fact that abortion obliterates the rights of children before birth. It urges contraceptives and abortion be provided to unmarried minors without parental knowledge or support and envisions the widest possible distribution of condoms. In an age when young people thirst for self-esteem, a sense of values and the courage to live them out, technological fixes deprive them of genuine moral growth and promote only a false sense of security — physically, emotionally and spiritually. Technology, as we have learned in our own country, cannot substitute for moral formation.

Sadly, our U.S. government is leading the effort to foster global acceptance of abortion and supports policies that weaken the traditional concept of family. The United States should work for the development of nations, with full regard for those nations' cultural traditions and values. Genuine development, not moral and social confusion, should be our government's major contribution to the developing world.

Citizens should write council about pigeons

Once again, the leaders of our community chose to kill the helpless and innocent pigeons. The citizens of this community are never asked how they feel about this cruel and thoughtless undertaking. I personally sent the Midland City Council a packet from People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals regarding humane pigeon control. It was totally ignored. The reason for this slaughter is because the poor pigeons cannot vote. Well, I can vote, and I can speak for them and I can boycott any organization that participated in this killing, including the stores in this town that also participated in this unfair and inhumane slaughter. Those of you out there who are outraged by this continued attack on these helpless birds can do the same. I urge you to write the City Council and demand this never happens again and boycott the establishments that participated in this heartless affair. Remember, the triumph of evil will always prevail as long as good people stand by and do nothing.

MISD needs to reduce middle management

The article in Wednesday's (Reporter-Telegram, July 27) paper interested me.

Teacher's salaries may go up 3.5 percent if the school board approves the teacher's recommendation. But the board is balking at that figure. The board apparently can't figure a way to give the teachers more money without raising taxes, says Dianne Anderson. The board recommends cutting the fat out of the system. Teachers recommend freezing salaries of administration.

The solution they haven't discussed is reducing the payroll by scaling back the middle-management positions. Oil companies and most of America's industries have discovered that overhead, including payroll and benefits, of the higher-paid middle management are out of line. And they are doing something about it — making cuts in those areas.

It's time for the Midland Independent School District (MISD) board and administration to consider reducing the number of jobs and payroll in the middle. Provide teachers with the pay boost they deserve. The pay increases they have received are tantamount to pay cuts, once corrected for inflation.

Use of Marxist theory seems appropriate

Bishop Pfeifer's letter (Letters, July 3) endorsing universal health-care encourages us to support legislation establishing more bureaucracy in a program of distribution by the state for "the basic principle (justice) . . . we receive according to our need, and pay according to our ability." It's unfortunate he used the Marxist social economic theory of communism, but it seems appropriate.

We already live under a veritable bureaucratic dictatorship, but in the spirit of economic development, who mentions the three-tiered international bureaucracy (Canada, Mexico, and U.S.) created by the NAFTA treaty for trade? Who discusses the increased bureaucracy of the Goals 2000 Act? Or who discusses the universal bureaucracy of the WTO (World Trade Order) Treaty aborting our constitution for participation in an economic UN — giving our nation a humiliating single vote among those hundred or so nations that still have an economy.

Solzhenitsyn explained communism as the lobbying forces of those myriad bureaucracies pulsating, "feed me!, feed me!, feed me!" from the fruits of our slaves.

Sign's theft detracts from golf course

Living in Midland for all of my life, I have grown to appreciate a few of Midland's fine points. The one thing that I have grown to appreciate is my job at Green Acres Miniature Golf. I have been employed at the golf course for seven great years. During those years, I have seen many people from all walks of life come to our golf course to play. They always seem to appreciate how well the golf course looks, but someone has decided to steal from its uniqueness.

While mowing on Thursday morning (July 28), as we do every week, one of our employees noticed the Texas-shaped sign was missing from hole number 17, "The Three Leaf Clover." We have looked for the sign all over the golf course and have come to the conclusion that someone has stolen it. During my years at the golf course, I have seen many misfortunes that have taken away from the beauty of the golf course. We spend hundreds of man-hours each week making the course look beautiful for the community. What we get in return is a stolen sign.

I do not understand why someone would take the sign. What are they going to do with it, hang it on their wall and show it to their friends and family like a priceless painting? Whoever stole our sign must be bored and cannot find anything else to do. I do not care who you are or why you stole the sign. I just want it back in the golf course's possession. I have not worked for seven years to see the beauty of the golf course destroyed. Whoever you might be, I wish you would return the sign, no questions asked. Just bring it back home.

Incident has caused expense, heartache

This letter is to the person(s) who are responsible for breaking the car window and stealing my daughter's purse on July 31 on the Golf Course Road Church of Christ parking lot.

My daughter is a student who works part time and does not have that much money. She had nothing of value in the purse to anyone other than herself. This incident, which profited you nothing, has caused us a lot of expense, heartache and trouble. I think you are a very thoughtless person. We are trying to forgive you but finding it very difficult.

We would appreciate it, if you still have the purse and its contents, if you would drop it in a mailbox. I'm sure that the post office would look at the I.D. and call us.

Also, if you get to feeling really bad about what you have done, you may include a money order for $200 to cover the cost of the window. You have the wallet, so you will know whom to make it out to.

Disney will make state history memorable

I am a former Midlander, who now resides in Roanoke, Va. I receive the Sunday edition of the Reporter-Telegram. I am responding to the George Will column on the proposed Disney theme park in Manassas, Va., that ran on July 17. We too had a similar article that ran in the Roanoke-Times', July 11, extra section by staff writer Dwayne Yancy, "History vs. Disney." Historian James Robertson and colleagues are comparing the proposed Disney America theme park to a "carnival set beside a historic battlefield." The George Will article was much of the same.

I respect and commend all who share the anxiety concerning the Disney theme park. True, Virginia needs the respect and dignity of all who live in the commonwealth, or those who merely visit, wanting to be part of the history for a few brief days.

Anyone who has been to Disney World in Florida will tell you what a well-maintained, professionally managed complex Disney is. Epcot is an educational experience for a child. What better way to learn than to be a part of the process? And if that means riding in a theme-park car in the shape of a horse, so be it.

Why can't history be enjoyable? Yes, the bloody battlefields, the countless deaths and destruction resulting from all this history aren't to be taken lightly. Have you ever been to a battlefield? What do you see? A cannon, a historical marker for all to read and grass! When you are a child and are required to take Virginia history in school from a book, how much is actually retained? We need to explore any avenues there are to help our children learn. In the true Disney tradition, good taste, authenticity and educational aspects will make Virginia history a history that children will want to remember, and maybe explore.

I applaud Disney for trying to bring some fun into Virginia, and maybe along the way, we'll learn something.

Volunteers contribute time, touch hearts

Picture yourself being 75 years old and alone. Your driver's license has been revoked — your independence taken away. Simple tasks like preparing a well-balanced meal are tedious and bothersome. Most of your family lives far away, and your friends are living in the same situation.

Community & Senior Services' answer to these problems and many others is volunteers. The month of July is dedicated to their many hours of service and care. Our agency and the elderly of Midland are blessed with each one of these volunteers who take time to deliver meals, make a friendly telephone call, take a trip to the grocery store or provide precious moments of conversation.

Approximately 1,300 people donate 15,000 volunteer hours to programs every year such as Meals on Wheels, Telephone Reassurance, Grocery Express, Friendly Visitor, Handy Man and Retired and Senior Volunteer Program. Our agency could not exist without these invaluable individuals who touch hearts and contribute priceless time, talent and love.

This past Saturday, July 30, the 3rd Annual Volunteer Celebration was held to recognize and praise these volunteers. We thank each individual for their devotion and concern they give to the community.

Readers' views on: Kanelis column

Goldwater has lost common sense

John Kanelis' column on the Sunday, July 31, Opinion page about Goldwater's crusade to give special rights to gays and lesbians is another example of pressure to be politically correct. Thirty years ago, Goldwater would have never made it to the primaries touting special rights for people living this unnatural and extremely unhealthy lifestyle. Today his opinion is being pushed as a tolerant approach for conservatives. His arguments do have some appeal. Nobody wants to be bigoted, intolerant or unfair. Do they? Christians especially should care for people from all walks of life, even those with whom we disagree, even those involved in immoral lifestyles.

I do not hate homosexuals nor do I favor legislation that would deprive them of their basic constitutional rights — rights they share with every citizen. However, granting special protected legal status in hiring and housing makes no more sense than giving special rights to Christians. When one person wins these kinds of battles, someone else loses. Thus we must be careful before creating new minorities based on beliefs and behavior — as opposed to those who have been discriminated against historically, based on their race.

I challenge Kanelis to show that homosexuals have faced the same obstacles as ethnic minorities have faced. Gays have Hollywood, the press, the media, the universities, professionals and the judiciary enforcing their "politically correct" agenda. My opposition to the gay and lesbian tidal wave is not an expression of hate but one of social justice and common sense; some things Goldwater has definitely lost.

Sanford Hillman

'Gay rights' means special privileges

John Kanelis slanders "right" Republicans in his article today (Opinion page, July 31) called, "Conservatives need lesson from Goldwater." First of all, the "right-wing fringe" he speaks of actually represents most Republicans, and the "moderate," "me-too," pro-choice Republicans represent the fringes.

However, much of his article harangued against Republicans standing against so-called gay rights. What "gay rights" really means is special privileges (like affirmative action) for homosexuals. Colorado recognized this in their initiative, which was not "anti-gay" but against special privileges. The Texas Republican Party platform states only that "No person should receive special legal entitlements or privileges based on sexual preference."

Homosexuals also want the rest of society to consider them normal and wholesome as Mom's apple pie. They are not. The platform also states "The Party believes that the practice of sodomy leads to the breakdown of the family and the spread of the deadly disease Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). Homosexuality should not be presented as an acceptable alternative lifestyle in our public schools." Most Americans believe this to be true, not just the "right-wing fringe."

Kanelis makes it sound like the religious right has come out of the woodwork to take over the Republican Party, the state, the country (and then, who knows, even the world) to impose morality on us all (horrors!). The truth is that common, God-fearing Republicans rightly see their party, their state and their country being besieged by a radical left-wing fringe who will not be content until Christianity (and common-sense morality) is completely removed from public life. These Republicans are defending the bedrock of freedom, not trying to become dictators.

Kanelis and those who would remove moral considerations from public policy had better beware. They may succeed, and they will not like the result.

Our policy on letters

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

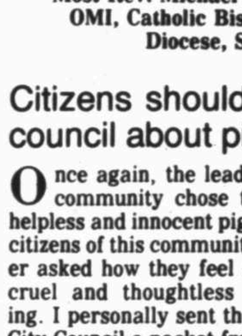
What will those scientists come up with next?

Today we present Science Quadrant, a look at some wonderful ideas developed by brilliant scientists who still vividly remember that the rest of us made fun of them in high school.



Barry

ROBOT IN YOUR COLON

We found out about this thanks to alert reader Alice Waugh, who sent us the May 18, 1994, issue of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Tech Talk, featuring an article about an MIT student who has invented a miniature remote-controlled robot designed to crawl far into your large intestine. This will be a great boon to the medical profession, which, as you know, is always looking for new things to stick as far as possible into our various bodily orifices. These procedures are uncomfortable, but there's an important medical reason why doctors perform them: to win big cash prizes in the American Medical Association's competition to see who can insert an object the farthest into a patient.

ANNOUNCER: . . . and our first-prize winner this year is Bob Bark of Miami, who inserted a Sears garden hose 87 feet into the colon of an elderly patient . . . who was actually being treated for an EAR INFECTION!

(There is a standing ovation.)

So you just know that the colon robot is going to be a big hit in the medical community. Tech Talk states that the robot, which looks like a tiny tank, is equipped with a claw to "grasp and carry objects," and that it "can be operated by a person with a joystick . . . but it also functions independently when untethered."

That last statement worries us. We don't want a robot of this nature — especially if it has a claw — functioning independently. ("Hey, has anybody seen the colon robot?" "No, but I'll keep an eye OOOOWWWWW HEY GET OUT OF THERE.")

At this point you're asking, "How soon can I, the medical consumer, have this device creeping around in my intestinal tract?" The answer, unfortunately, is "not yet."

THE SPY FLY

We found out about this thanks to alert reader Orrin Grover, who sent us a special issue of the newspaper Federal Times put out for Public Service Recognition Week, which honors government employees (motto: "You Have The Wrong Department"). The issue begins with a message about improving government written by (speaking of robots) Vice President Al Gore, who makes the following statement, which I am not making up, about the Internal Revenue Service:

" . . . when the IRS asked customers what they wanted, the IRS got a surprise. Customers wanted simple forms, help that is easy to get, and very little contact with the IRS."

We can certainly see how these findings would surprise the IRS, just as they would surprise any normal American who has spent the past 75 years encased from head to toe in cement. But that is not our point. The point is that this same issue of Federal Times has an article about the federal government's Technology Reinvestment Project, which is spending millions of dollars to develop new technologies for exciting uses, such as the Spy Fly.

How would the Spy Fly work? Federal Times asks us to imagine a scenario in which the dictator of a "ferociously aggressive nation" is in his underground bunker, planning a nuclear attack.

"As the dictator talks," says Federal Times (we are still not making these quotes up), "a fly crawls, unobserved, across the ceiling. The fly is equipped with a sophisticated electronic listening device, far smaller than a human pore. Later, the fly will bring his precious load of recorded information back to a U.S. intelligence officer."

We here at Science Quadrant think this would be a fine use of our tax dollars. The only potential problems we see are:

1. The Spy Fly might not hang around the attack-planning area of the bunker, preferring to spend its time in the kitchen. ("Well, we don't know if the dictator is going to attack, but we DO know he will have meatloaf for dinner.")

2. It might be hard to get the Spy Fly to return to the U.S. intelligence officer. ("Here boy! I said HERE BOY, DAMMIT!")

Town's beautification program starts small but continues to grow

By Rick Smith
San Angelo Standard-Times

ELDORADO — While some small towns across the country wither and die, Eldorado's Main Street literally blooms with color and life.

"We have a lot going on here. Big projects and a lot of pride," said Jo Ann Sproul.

Sproul, Jackie Napier, Pat Sykes and Lucy Page head the Eldorado Chamber of Commerce beautification committee — called Chamber Pride in this Schleicher County town of 2,000.

Their 4-year-old cleanup and beautification campaign has been so successful that Keep Texas Beautiful Inc. awarded Eldorado its Governor's Community Achievement Award last year. The award includes a $30,000 grant from the Texas Department of Transportation that will be used for — what else? — further beautification of the city.

Eldorado's beautification committee began as an effort to clean up or remove several unsightly buildings in town.

"We had pretty humble beginnings," Napier said, "but we've accomplished a lot in a short time.

'We had pretty humble beginnings, but we've accomplished a lot in a short time.'

— Jackie Napier, beautification committee

"It's fun, working as a community, seeing people get involved."

Now, 18 flower gardens decorate Eldorado's Main Street and highway.

Residents built the gardens the old-fashioned way: with a lot of hard work.

The first garden was inspired after a flood washed a number of rocks down a draw at the Napier ranch.

"I thought, 'We have all these rocks. Why not use them?'," Napier said.

Ranch hands hauled the rocks to town and fashioned them into a planter. Someone donated a load of dirt. Someone else hauled in some sand and humus, and a garden was born.

Every summer, residents stage a dinner theater to raise money for buying flowers. Last summer's performances raised more than $1,000.

D.T. "Duge" Yates, a 79-year-old retired businessman, tends the flower beds. He works year-round, volunteering up to eight hours a day to care for all 18 beds.

When the summer flowers fade, he replaces them with pansies and snapdragons for the winter.

"I enjoy flowers," Yates said. "I was born and raised here, and this is something I can do for the town.

"I do this because I love to do it."

The beautification project continues to grow, Napier said.

"People have gotten interested in their yards," she said. "It doesn't take much money to plant a few flowers, and more people are getting involved."

A vacant lot on Main Street by the courthouse contains the biggest flower bed — a burst of color full of daisies, marigolds, pink begonias and other plants.

Main Street is currently the focus of the beautification committee's efforts.

The street contains several historic buildings. Isabella McCutcheon restored the 1907 bank building and the city's theatrical group, the Way Off Broadway Players, is in the process of renovating the old Lone Star Theatre.

Winnie Helen Ratliff donated the former movie palace to the players in March with the stipulation that it be named the Tom Ratliff Civic Theatre in memory of her husband.

Dr. Jim Brame, vice president of the Players' board of directors, is leading an effort to raise $50,000 for the restoration.

Construction on a new stage already is under way inside the old theater and theater director Sproul hopes the renovation will be completed by October.

The larger facility will seat 136, while the Players' old theater, which was located in a former drug store, could only seat 90.

In preparation for next year's Centennial Celebration, Eldorado residents are tackling several other projects as well:

■ A Pioneer Family Memorial. Donors have given seven oak trees and three Bradford pear trees to be planted along Main Street. Bronze memorial plaques will be placed at the base of each tree.

■ A Centennial Walk. Donors can buy engraved brick-sized pavers for $35 or an engraved 12x16-inch granite paver for $250. The pavers will be placed along Main Street to replace cracked and broken sections of the sidewalk.

■ Centennial Park. Holly Brame donated a 3-acre tract of land near the hospital for the city's newest park.

MC to offer course in scuba diving

Staff Report

A credit course in scuba diving (Advanced Aquatic P.E.2260) will be offered at Midland College on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Classroom instruction will be at the Health Sciences building 7-8:40 p.m. Tuesdays. On Thursdays, the course moves to the COM swim facility from 6:30-9:50 p.m.

The course will provide students with two of the three required components to be certified by PADI as an Open Water Diver.

Students need basic swimming skills and will need to supply their own mask, fins and snorkel. These may be purchased or rented. Stovall Scuba Center has established a scholarship to pay the rental fee for all other required equipment.

The eight-week course begins Sept. 6 and ends Oct. 27.

For more information, contact Heathman at 685-4691.

Mavs offer Tarpley

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks have made forward Roy Tarpley an offer to return to the team if he wins reinstatement to the NBA, a team official said.

Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju said the Mavericks have made Tarpley a "substantial," multiyear offer contingent upon his winning approval to return to the NBA. Sonju said a decision from the NBA isn't expected until the end of August.

Tarpley, who was kicked out of the NBA in October 1991 for violating the league's anti-drug policy, has played the past two seasons in Greece for Olympiakos.

Luttrell leap frogs into men's city championship lead

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Frank Tryon remains in the hunt with a two-day total of 142, four strokes back of leader Jeremiah Luttrell.

■ Former Midland High golfer Jeremiah Luttrell leads a pack of nine golfers for the Midland Men's City Golf Championship.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The players still in contention going into today's final round of the Men's City Golf Championship are as thick as flies at a West Texas barbeque in the middle of August.

And while those nine players who are all within four strokes of each other enjoyed that August barbeque and a live band Saturday night after the completion of the second round at Hogan Park, they will be swarming around the course today in what should be a thrilling scavenger hunt for a city title.

Jeremiah Luttrell will be the object of the hunt. The former Midland High golfer, who helped bring the District 4-5A team championship to MHS for the first time in 26 years, scorched his home course with a 68 to compile a four-under-par 138 for the lead in the Championship Flight.

But eight others are nipping at his heals starting with Harry Bettis and Tim Phillips, who are tied for second at 139. Ron Jumper, defending city champ Jeff Moses, Nolly Adkison and Will Gray are right behind at 141 while 1992 champ Steve Whiteside and Frank Tryon sit at 142.

Luttrell started the day one-under but birdied holes No. 22 and No. 1 and eagled No. 2 to take the lead. Lutrell, the district medalist who will play for Odessa College in the fall, was in contention for the title last year but his game fell apart in the later rounds of the tournament. That's a big reason why he feels more confident going into today.

"I have more experience this year and there is better competition," Luttrell said. "I play harder when there's a more good players. I feel like now I can still stay in the hunt even when I'm not hitting the ball well."

Better competition is an understatement. And if Luttrell knows his own game, then the hunt will be on and he'll have to fight the challengers off with a stick. No, make that a putter.

"There are some good players," said Moses, who also shot a 68 Saturday. "Everyone in there is a good player and it will be a matter of who makes the most putts."

Moses has a theory on why the field is the largest it has ever been and why the championship flight is so competitive.

"Because of Midland Country Club changing their father-son tournament to last weekend, it's allowed about five or six really good players to play this year," said Moses, who did no worse than par all day and finished with three birdies. "Plus, all those high school guys have either graduated or are at least a year older so they are all that much better."

Whiteside is one of those back in the fold after missing last year's tournament due to the MCC father-son event and he wasn't able to defend his city title but should give a strong push today.

The championship flight begins teeing off today at 11:37 but the leaders won't go off until noon. They will play holes No. 1-18 on Hogan's 27-hole layout. The championship flight, which began play Friday, was split into the president's flight and those players will tee off between 10-11 a.m. also on 1-18.

The first through fourth flights played the first of two

Buddy strikes back

■ Buddy Ryan brings the fire back into Arizona football with a 17-7 win over San Francisco Friday night.

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Buddy's Back.

Restored as a head coach, this time in Arizona, Buddy Ryan's got some old friends to reinforce his reputation as a defensive wizard.

Although the San Francisco 49ers had lost only two NFL exhibitions since 1991, they were silenced by Ryan's 46 defense — led by his former Philadelphia Eagles defensive end Clyde Simmons — in a 17-7 defeat Friday night.

Ryan, hired to lead the Cardinals from their usual position near the bottom of the NFC East, showed the 49ers and the rest of the league exactly what could be in the offing.

First, free agent acquisition Simmons — like former Eagles teammate Seth Joyner, a follower of Ryan — plucked a Steve Young pass out of the air for a 5-yard TD interception return in the second quarter.

As if to prove the 46 to those who remained among the doubters, Simmons stopped the 49ers later in the game with another interception. That impressed Young.

"I really had respect for them last year, even when others might not have noticed, but they ought to put Clyde Simmons at defensive back," Young said. "I've run that play a long time and I know that when a guy is charging at me he can't get his hands up very quickly. So he made a real nice play on that one."

The Cardinals got six turnovers — including three interceptions by linemen.

Their play was reminiscent of those plays Ryan defenses made in

Gogan ready for return

By Dennie H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

Kevin Gogan doesn't see tonight's exhibition game against the Dallas Cowboys as just another opportunity to showcase rookies.

The huge offensive tackle, who joined the Los Angeles Raiders after feeling "lowballed" by Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, sees the game as an opportunity to "give a little extra" and show Jones what the Cowboys will be missing in 1994.

"I didn't feel wanted by Jerry," said Gogan, long one of the mainstays of the Cowboys' line. "The only time he hiked up his offer was when the Raiders put something down in writing. By then it was too late and he knew it."

Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman said Gogan's departure down the free agent road "was one of the biggest offseason losses we had. Kevin is a tremendous player and a great guy to be around."

The Raiders are back from Barcelona, Spain, where they beat Denver 25-22 in overtime. The Cowboys beat Minnesota 17-9, but lost running back Derrick Lassic probably for the season with a torn knee.

The injury got coach Barry Switzer to employ a player protection program.

Emmitt Smith, the NFL's top rusher for the last three seasons, will again be held out, just as he was for the Minnesota game.

"I don't need to look at my difference makers," Switzer said.

The Cowboys want a long look at running back Lincoln Coleman, who drew the wrath of the coaches for reporting to training camp at 250 pounds.

"We want to see if he can develop some stamina," said running back coach Joe Brodsky. "Right now, he can't run more than four plays in a row without getting gassed."

Oilers capitalize over mistake-prone Chargers

■ Houston's defense forces five turnovers, offense erupts for 19 second quarter points in 31-3 win.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Reserve quarterback Bucky Richardson engineered Houston to 19 second quarter points, 16 of them off four turnovers by San Diego, leading the Oilers to a 31-3 exhibition victory over the San Diego Chargers on Saturday night.

The Oilers (1-1) had five turnovers in all as Houston's defense picked up where it left off last season when it ranked second in the NFL with 43 forced turnovers.

The defense allowed San Diego (0-2) quarterback Stan Humphries to complete only one of eight passes for six yards.

Al Del Greco kicked four field goals for the Oilers, including a 56-yarder late in the fourth quarter for Houston's final points.

Richardson, fighting for the No. 2 role with newly acquired Sean Salisbury, gained 14 yards on a quarterback keeper on his first play in the game to start the second quarter.

The Oilers got another score off of Tim Roberts' fumble recovery at the Oiler 25. Salisbury drove the Oilers to the five and completed the touchdown pass to Keith Jack with 7:23 elapsed in the fourth quarter.

Oiler starter Cody Carlson played a crisp two series, hitting four of five passes for 45 yards. Richardson

Favre, Marino shine in outings

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Two series and little more than one quarter was enough time for Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre to sway his many skeptics.

Favre, whose tendency to go for the big play last season resulted in more interceptions (24) than touchdowns (19), was almost perfect Sunday in Green Bay's 14-6 victory over the Los Angeles Rams that was the exhibition opener for both teams.

■ NFL Roundup

The five-year, $19 million contract Favre signed in the offseason is as much a topic of debate in Wisconsin as health care, but he looked to be worth every penny, completing five of six passes for 42 yards and scrambling three times for 15 more yards at Camp Randall Stadium.

He completed all four of his passes, totalling 36 yards, and ran twice for 14 more as Green Bay covered 69 yards on its first series for a 7-0 lead.

Edgar Bennett capped the drive when he scored from one yard out with 7:54 left in the first quarter.

Ty Detmer and Mark Brunell split time after Favre departed. Detmer hit Robert Brooks with a 2-yard touchdown with 7:38 left in the third quarter, capping a 12-play, 78-yard drive that made it 14-3.

Green Bay's LeShon Johnson, the nation's leading rusher last year at Northern Illinois, sat out with a pulled hamstring. Wide receiver Sterling Sharpe, recovering from toe surgery, also sat out.

Bucs 17, Bengals 16

TAMPA, Fla. — It was a situation ripe for Sam Wyche's trickery.

With quarterback Casey Weldon lined up at wide receiver, single back Vince Workman took a snap direct from center and ran up the middle for a 2-point conversion that gave Tampa Bay an exhibition victory over Cincinnati.

Weldon led each of Tampa Bay's four scoring drives in a bid to win the No. 3 quarterback job behind Craig Erickson and first-round draft pick Trent Dilfer, who ended his training camp holdout last Thursday.

Dolphins 24, Steelers 14

MIAMI — Dan Marino, playing for the first time since he was injured last October, threw a 78-yard touchdown pass Saturday night to help the Miami Dolphins beat Pittsburgh.

Marino passed the biggest test yet of his surgically repaired Achilles tendon. He was in the game for 14 plays, looked smooth despite rainy weather and completed three of five passes for 99 yards, including the touchdown to Mike Williams.

Browns 24, Giants 15

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Vinny Testaverde threw a 24-yard touchdown pass late in the first half to give Cleveland the lead and the Browns opened their exhibition schedule with a victory over New York.

Eric Turner also had 68-yard interception return for a touchdown and Matt Stover added three second-half field goals as the Browns handed New York its second straight loss.

The Giants got touchdowns on a 3-yard run by Rodney Hampton in the first half and a fumble recovery in the end zone by tackle Greg Bishop late in the third quarter that got New York within 18-15.

However, former Washington quarterback Mark Rypien replaced Testaverde in the fourth quarter and led the Browns on two scoring drives, with Stover kicking field goals of 45 and 21 yards.

Testaverde was 13-of-28 for 162 yards and Rypien was 5-of-11 for 83. Giants starter Kent Graham was 12-of-23 for 122 and threw an interception in struggling for the second straight game. Dave Brown, who is edging ahead in the battle to replace Phil Simms, was 9-of-15 for 88 yards and an interception on the last play of the game.

Broncos 37, Falcons 16

DENVER — Tommy Maddox threw two touchdown passes, directing Denver to scores on three of the six series he worked, and the Broncos beat Atlanta.

Denver (1-1) got scoring runs from Rod Bernstine and rookie Derrick Clark and another TD pass by Shawn Moore, and the defense contributed three interceptions.

OILERS: Ex-A&M QB ignites offense played the second quarter and completed seven of 15 passes for 117 yards.

Richardson hit Haywood Jeffires for seven yards and Pat Coleman for 30 yards to set up Del Greco's 43-yard kick that put the Oilers ahead to stay prior to the Oiler defense's parade of big plays.

A fumble recovery by John Henry Mills at San Diego's 35, set up a two-yard touchdown run by Gary Brown with 6:46 elapsed in the second quarter.

Tony Brown recovered a fumble at the Charger 44 and Richardson completions of 12 yards to Reggie Brown and 15 yards to Mario Bailey, helped the Oilers to the Charger four-yard line for a 22-yarder by Del Greco with 10:53 elapsed.

Andre Coleman opened the game with a 77-yard kickoff return that set up Hollis' field goal.

DALLAS: Carver to see action tonight

(From 1C)

In Friday's games, Detroit defeated the New York Jets 26-13, Indianapolis downed Seattle 13-9, Chicago beat Philadelphia 12-6, New England ripped New Orleans 24-6 and Arizona defeated San Francisco 17-7.

Other first teamers from the two-time Super Bowl champions not expected to play at Dallas are defensive end Charles Haley, defensive tackles Leon Lett and Russell Maryland, and wide receivers Alvin Harper and Michael Irvin. All are nursing injuries.

"Our defensive line is depleted," Switzer said. Rookies Shante Carver, Hurvin McCormack and Todd McIntosh will all get plenty of time against the Raiders in the game before an expected 50,000 fans.

The Cowboys also will take a long look at rookie wide receiver Cory Flemming, a third-round draft choice who signed to a three-year contract after the San Francisco 49ers released him.

Aikman may play several series for the Cowboys, then turn the job over to Rodney Peete, who played well against Minnesota last week.

Quarterback Jeff Hostetler hit a 75-yard touchdown pass to James Jett on the first play against the Broncos. He was replaced by Vince Evans, who hit seven of 10 passes for 73 yards and a touchdown.

The Raiders lead Dallas 9-4 in preseason games.

BUDDY: Card coach impresses in opener

(From 1C)

Chicago, Phialdelphia (where he was head coach from 1986-80) and Houston. In Arizona, that should translate to large crowds — part of what the Cardinals hoped for by hiring the high-profile Ryan.

They got what they bargained for, a crowd of 61,619 that shattered the previous preseason mark of 51,987 set Aug. 12, 1988 for the first Cardinals' first appearance ever in the desert. With the exception of a near-sellout 73,025 for the Dallas game, the Friday night crowd was larger than that for any regular-season game in 1993.

Still, Ryan wanted more.

"When I first got here, all the players told me how much they wanted a home-field advantage," he said. "Well, tonight they had one. That should show you what can happen. Now, we need to sell the place out."

The Arizona starters held Young to 6-for-9 passing and 63 yards through the second quarter, before he was replaced by former Michigan quarterback Elvis Grbac.

"The other team was getting after our butts," 49ers coach George Seifert said.

Grbac completed 14 of 23 passes for 117 yards, including an 8-yard scoring strike to Ed McCaffrey for the 49ers' lone score. He led San Francisco on a nine-play, 51-yard drive for the third quarter touchdown.

The fans enjoyed the defense. So did middle linebacker Garth Jax, playing in place of the injured Eric Hill. Jax recovered a fumble in the fourth quarter, pleasing Ryan, who had given him a $20,000 raise a week ago.

"I should have gave him a $40,000 raise," Ryan said. "He got hurt and had to go back in and play the whole game."

Cauthen becomes youngest inductee

■ Hall of Fame

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — In 1978, 18-year-old Steve Cauthen became the youngest jockey to win the Triple Crown. On Monday, "The Kid" becomes the youngest person ever inducted into the National Racing Hall of Fame.

Cauthen, 34, will be honored during induction ceremonies at the Hall of Fame, located across the street from Saratoga Race Course. Also being inducted are Holy Bull's trainer, Jimmy Croll, and thoroughbreds Ta Wee, Arts and Letters, Eight Thirty, and Flatterer.

"Anybody in the sport obviously would hope one day they might make it in there," Cauthen said last week during a telephone interview from his home in Verona, Ky. "I wasn't necessarily expecting it, especially so soon."

Cauthen's 2,794 career wins came in a dozen countries on four continents, from his native Kentucky to Hong Kong. He's the only jockey to win the five major derbies in the United States, England, Ireland, France and Italy. He appeared on the covers of Time and Sports Illustrated while still a teen-ager, and was named The Associated Press Athlete of the Year in 1977.

"It was wonderful, and at the same time scary," Cauthen said. "There's a lot of things that go through your mind — it's really me doing this, and how am I going to keep it up."

Cauthen was five days past his 18th birthday when he rode Affirmed to victory in the 1978 Kentucky Derby. Affirmed won the Triple Crown with victories in the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, and like the Derby, they involved classic battles with Alydar, runnerup in all three races.

Cauthen stopped riding in 1993, although he never officially retired. A champion rider in the United States and in England during his 17-year career, he declined when asked to pick one race that stands out in his mind.

"I don't think any career stands on any one race. Each day, whatever was going on, that was the most important thing I was doing," Cauthen said.

Cauthen's induction comes nearly 16 years to the day that he took a serious spill during a race at Saratoga. On Aug. 9, 1978, he was aboard Cute As A Button when it broke its shoulder, sending both horse and rider crashing to the dirt.

"By the time I quit rolling, I was trying to get under the fence to get out of the way, but the last horse ran into me," Cauthen said. He said the first thought to flash through his mind was that he would sit out a race and be ready for that day's stakes race. Then the pain hit.

"After about 30 seconds, my knee began to swell up like a grapefruit," Cauthen said.

The injury was serious enough to keep Cauthen sidelined for the rest of the year. He began 1979 with a 110-race losing streak at Santa Anita Park, then lost his mount on Affirmed to Laffit Pincay. In March 1979, he went to England to ride for owner Robert Sangster.

"It was really like starting over. It was three years before I felt I could confidently ride the tracks," Cauthen said.

After some initial culture shock, Cauthen went on to become England's leading rider three times.

The other inductees are: Jimmy Croll, trainer of three champions and more than 60 stakes winners, including Holy Bull; Ta Wee, a champion sprinter in 1969-70; Arts and Letters, 1969 horse of the year; Eight

Gordon sneaks past Bodines in 400

■ Brickyard 400

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hoosier-bred Jeff Gordon, the youngest driver in the lineup, escaped the Bodine brothers' family feud and passed Ernie Irvan with four laps to go to win NASCAR's inaugural Brickyard 400 Saturday.

It was the first non-Indy car race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in more than 80 years. Gordon, who grew up in nearby Pittsboro, Ind., averaged 131.770 mph and finished .53 second over Brett Bodine.

Bill Elliott was third, followed by Rusty Wallace, Dale Earnhardt, Darrell Waltrip, Ken Schrader, Michael Waltrip, Todd Bodine and Ricky Rudd. The top 10 finishers were separated by just 9.3 seconds.

"Oh man, what a battle," Gordon said from Victory Lane. "We had a great battle all day long. The only one I was worried about was that No. 7 car (Geoff Bodine). ... But we had a caution and Ernie and the No. 2 car (Wallace) were right there.

"Then Ernie kept loosening me up and I let him go by."

But not for long.

"The tire went down and Jeff went under me. I turned into the corner and it didn't turn," Irvan said.

"I was in a good spot. Jeff did a good job. We got ours right at the end."

Who would have won if the tire not gone flat?

"We'll never know, will we," Irvan said.

Gordon, who turned 23 on Thursday, led most of the first half of the 160-lap race after starting from the inside of the second row. But he dropped to fourth after a series of pit stops during a yellow light for a crash involving Dave Marcis and Mike Chase.

After the green light came out, Brett Bodine and his brother Geoff battled — literally — for the lead.

Geoff tapped the rear of Brett's car and took the lead in the third turn of the 100th lap, then Brett returned the favor on the fourth turn, spinning his older brother into the wall at the head of the main straightaway.

Gordon, who had passed third-place Darrell Waltrip, avoided the wreckage and moved into second behind Brett Bodine as the yellow came out again. After the green was displayed again on the 105th lap, Gordon went around Brett and regained the lead.

"I'm OK," Geoff Bodine said. "He spun me out. We've been having some personal problems, some family problems and he just took it out on the race track. It's a shame. I still love him. He's my brother. But he did spin me out."

Goodwill Games come to merciful ending

■ Lackluster performances tarnish final day of competition.

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — In retrospect, it was not a very good idea: holding a figure skating competition in the summertime.

■ Goodwill Games

Not a moment too soon, the skating events at the troubled Goodwill Games came to an end Saturday. The performances were sloppy and the competitors worn out, a result of all the confusion of the past week.

"We're tired," said American Elaine Zayak, the former world champion who finished last among the eight skaters. "This has been a long week, because of the ice and the schedules."

And besides, said Zayak, "summertime is not really for skating. It's for summer sports."

The first warnings were there earlier this week when the Russian summer sun made the rink so hot that the ice wouldn't freeze. The competition had to be postponed a day and was almost moved to another arena, leaving the skaters confused about when and where they would be performing.

It led to one uninspired performance after another, especially among the women. Skating in a nearly empty arena on Friday, more than half the skaters botched the technical program.

There was more of the same at the free skate Saturday, when the phrase "winning ugly" was taken to a new extreme.

One of the best leapers in the world, Surya Bonaly of France, missed four planned jumps but still won the gold medal. Why? Because nearly everyone else was just as lousy.

"I'm very happy it's over," said Bonaly, a four-time European champion and the only truly big name the organizers could attract. "Everyone had their problems. It was hard. I'm surprised (that I won) because I didn't do all my jumps, but what I did do was quite strong."

Somehow oblivious to it all was 14-year-old American Michelle Kwan. Though lacking the artistic flair of a more mature skater, Kwan bounced back from a flawed technical program with a solid free-skate performance to vault from sixth to second over the error-prone field.

"Yesterday I just didn't go for it. I was holding back," said Kwan, who landed all seven triple jumps in her routine. "I was more confident going into the long program. I said to myself, 'Go for everything. You have nothing to lose.'"

Bronze went to Russia's Maria Butyrskaya, who moved up despite a fall while attempting a triple lutz.

The other Americans in the field, Nicole Bobek and Zayak, wrapped up the turbulent week with weary-looking performances. Bobek finished seventh, one place ahead of Zayak.

The silver medal represents another stepping stone for Kwan, a rising star billed as the next great American women's champion. But for the more established names, it was hard to take this offseason competition too seriously.

"It's in summer and I didn't prepare," Bonaly said. "I accepted to come here a year-and-a-half ago, and if it had been four months ago, I would have refused.

"It was kind of like a training (session) for me."

Even Zayak, trying to make a comeback at age 29, admitted it probably wasn't the best setting to make a big impression.

"It's not the competition of the year for me," she said. "I had only decided a month ago to come. It's the middle of the summer. All of us are coming off the (normal season) never having a break. I think I'd do better in the winter time, when skating's most important."

Another sport usually associated with the cooler months is basketball. Fortunately for the Goodwill Games, it's more adaptable.

The U.S. women's team, one victory away from its first gold medal in a major international in four years, neutralized China's towering center in a 105-73 semifinal victory.

Zheng Haxia, who is listed at anywhere between 6-foot-8 and 7-foot, scored only 18 points and fouled out with about seven minutes to play.

Lisa Leslie scored 24 points to lead the Americans, who face France in today's final.

In other events Saturday:

■ In ice dancing, Irina Romanova and Igor Yaroshenko of Ukraine took gold over a weak international field. Russians pairs took silver and bronze. Americans Tamara Kuchiki and Neale Smull were sixth and last.

■ Americans won two golds and two bronze medals in rowing. Jason Gailes took the men's 500-meter single sculls, and Ruth Davidson won the women's version of the same event.

Russia, Germany and the United States finished 1-2-3 in the men's 500-meter eights. China, Russia and the United States took the medals in the women's event.

■ In diving, Xiong Min of China won the women's 10-meter platform competition. Mary Ellen Clark of the United States took the silver and Deng Yong of China the bronze.

U.S. guards shut down China

■ Sheryl Swoopes and Dawn Staley combine for 12 steals in U.S. 32-point win.

N.Y. Times News Service

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — The spectators burst into laughter. In front of their eyes, down on the court at Lenin's Sport and Concert Complex, was 5-foot-6-inch Dawn Staley of the U.S. women's basketball team doing her best to stop China's 7-foot center, Zheng Haixia, from chugging to the basket.

It resembled a scene from Saturday morning cartoons: Jack fooling the Giant. But trying to rattle Zheng and foul her out was part of the United States' plan. And it worked like a charm, giving the American team a 105-73 victory over China Saturday in the 1994 Goodwill Games semifinals.

China, the silver medalists at the World Championships in Australia in June, and the United States, the bronze medalists, were neck and neck for the first few minutes of the game. China kept feeding the ball to Zheng and early on she seemed to score at will.

"If she gets the ball, it's very difficult to keep her from getting the shot," said Lisa Leslie, the United States' 6-5 center who had that difficult assignment.

So, the Americans decided to play up-tempo and hope to wear down Zheng with fast breaks and high-pressure play whenever she got the ball. Ten minutes into the first half, Zheng had committed her third foul.

"The big girl took a little time to get down the floor," said Staley, in reference to Zheng. "I had a chance to get in there and I wanted to push the ball up court," she said.

She fouled out with only 18 points and 7 minutes still left in the game. Meanwhile, Sheryl Swoopes, a guard from Brownfield, Texas, and Staley, a guard from Philadelphia, had managed to steal the ball a dozen times.

Besides their tight defense, the Americans were shooting much better than they did against Russia Friday, hitting 42.1 percent of their 3-pointers in the second half and all but 5 of their 28 free throws.

The game's high scorer, Leslie converted on just over 70 percent of her shots and racked up 42 points. Staley, who spent last season playing professionally in France, Spain and Brazil, made 55 percent of her shots for 21 points. Against Russia, Staley took only one shot in the entire first half.

Coach Tara VanDerveer, the women's coach at Stanford, said the United States is eager for the taste of Goodwill gold.

"This team has not won a gold before," she said. "They feel they were denied it at the World Championships." In that tournament, the Americans entered the semifinals undefeated at 7-0, but lost to Brazil and returned from Sydney with a bittersweet bronze.

The U.S. team plays France for the Goodwill gold today. China plays Russia for the bronze.

In the women's figure skating finals Saturday, 14-year-old Michelle Kwan was the only skater in a field of eight to skate a clean program at Yubileinyi Sports Palace. Her flawless performance moved her up from sixth place to the silver-medal position.

"I took it easy," she said. "I had nothing to lose."

Surya Bonaly of France missed four planned jumps but still won the gold medal. Bonaly attributed her mediocre showing in the free program to problems with her skates.

Dream Team II measures success

TORONTO (AP) — With a rare open date during the 11-day, eight-game World Championship of Basketball, Dream Team II played the comparison game Saturday.

With one narrow victory and one blowout behind them, the United States is assured of a berth in the round-robin quarterfinals. Also assured is the certainty that Dream II will be measured against the original Dream Team from the 1992 Olympics.

"It's very difficult to have 12 All-Star players blend in such a short time," coach Don Nelson said. "After the first game, we had to step back. We had to think of team basketball instead of individual basketball. That's difficult to do when players are used to creating shots on their own."

■ World Championship

Dream Team I, especially with Michael Jordan, Larry Bird and Magic Johnson as leaders, accepted the team concept more readily than this year's version, but Dream Team II's 55-point rout of China took away doubts that it had a killer instinct.

Logistics dictate that the two teams will never meet on the court, even though Jordan said he would come out of retirement to play against Dream Team II for charity.

A 115-100 victory over unheralded Spain on Thursday night had critics saying that this year's U.S. team would be overwhelmed by the Jordan-led Dream Team, but a 132-77 blitz over China the following night had Dream Team II feeling better about itself.

"I respect them, but I won't ever say they would beat us," said Joe Dumars, the only Dream Team II member who has an NBA championship ring. "I'd play them in a heartbeat."

But instead of a dream game between Dream Teams, the U.S. team plays its next tournament game Sunday against Brazil, which lost to China in overtime and has already been eliminated from contention for championship round.

Nelson admitted Saturday that he slept better Friday night after the easy victory over China and predicted the U.S. team's strong defensive effort would continue through the rest of the tournament.

"In the first game, we weren't patient enough," Nelson said.

Azinger's 70 not enough to make cut

■ Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Golf fans are going to have to pay attention to Corey Pavin now. His pal Paul Azinger is gone.

Pavin, gunning for his second win this season, shot a 7-under-par 65 in the second round of the Buick Open on Saturday. That was good for 131 and a commanding four-shot lead over first-round leader Fred Funk.

Still, for the second day in a row, Pavin wasn't even the most popular player in his threesome.

That honor went to Azinger, making his first start since being diagnosed with cancer last November.

Azinger continued his return with a nifty 70 for a total of 146. He missed the cut, but it was clear Azinger's game was coming back after a nine-month battle with illness.

And just in time. Azinger will defend his PGA Championship title starting Thursday at Tulsa, Okla.

"It's fun to be around Paul," Pavin said. "He played a lot better today. Today was easier for him. The thing that struck me was his improvement from yesterday to today."

Azinger, followed hole to hole by an adoring army of cheering fans, might have scored even better. He just couldn't get the feel for his putter.

But his iron play improved markedly. He missed only four greens during the second round, reeling off consecutive birdies at Nos. 7, 8 and 9 to turn at 2-under 34.

"It was a good feeling to whip a few in there," Azinger said. "I could have had four birdies in a row, but I just couldn't putt."

Funk shot 70 for 135. Davis Love III was at 136 after rounds of 69 and 67, tied with Duffy Waldorf, who also shot 67 in the second round. Nick Faldo, Fred Couples, Tom Kite and Steve Pate were at 137.

Pavin, winner of 11 PGA Tour events including the Los Angeles Open in February, had a bogey-free first round and rattled off seven more birdies in the second round before finally making a bogey at No. 15, a 457-yard par-4.

But that was because he found a greenside bunker. It certainly wasn't because of his putter. Pavin, who ranks eighth among the tour's putting leaders, sank birdie putts of 40, 18, 4, 12, 15, 12, 30 and 1 feet.

"I never felt comfortable with any putt in the 4-foot range," Azinger said. "But, for crying out loud, I never saw Corey waver on anything outside of 50 feet. He's just a fearless putter."

Ben Crenshaw, who filled out the threesome, discovered perhaps the only way to check Pavin. Crenshaw eagled the 335-yard 12th, which Pavin went on to birdie.

"Well, I lost that hole," Pavin quipped as they headed for the next tee.

The 7,105-yard course was still wet from nearly a week of rain which delayed the start for one day. As a result, players were still allowed to remove mud from their golf ball, as long as it was in their own fairway.

That was a distinct advantage to the 150-pound Pavin, not noted as one of the tour's longer drivers.

"The ball isn't rolling anywhere," the playful Pavin said. "The most important thing is to hit fairways when you play lift, clean and cheat."

Those who qualified will finish the tournament with 36 holes on Sunday. The winner will pocket $198,000 of the $1.1 million purse.

"Playing 36, I'll try to conserve my energy as much as possible," Pavin said. "I don't want to change anything."

Hill fires best round for lead

■ LPGA Stratton

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Carolyn Hill, whose best finish was a second place 13 years ago, shot a career-best 65 Saturday to take a two-shot in the McCall's LPGA Classic.

Her 10-under-par 206 put her in front entering a final round for the first time since 1981.

Nancy Ramsbottom, one shot out of the lead starting the day, fell another stroke back but retained second place with a 2-under-par 70 for 208.

Betsy King, the leader after the first two days, shot a 72 and dropped back into a tie at 209 with Joan Pitcock, who had a 68.

Page Dunlap, who held the lead for much of the front nine after reaching 8-under, lost two strokes coming home and finished at 71, leaving her alone at 210.

King, needing one victory to become the 14th player in the LPGA Hall of Fame, is the only player in the top five with a tour victory. She has 29.

In contrast, Hill managed seconds in 1980, her first year on the tour, and in 1981. Her best finish this year is 22nd and she she ranks 122nd on the money list with $16,782. She didn't even play the last two weeks.

Hill, who had seven birdies without a bogey, was dropping putts all over the mountain course. On the front side, she sank three from 8, 5 and 4 feet for birdies, and saved par on another hole with a 12-footer after hitting a hazard and then a gravel road.

On the back nine, she rolled in 25-footers on 10 and 11, and then went 9-under with a 55-footer on the par-5 14th.

Albus builds three stroke lead at Boston Classic

■ Bank of Boston

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Jim Albus, a career club professional until he found a gold mine at age 50, withstood the challenges of Raymond Floyd and Lee Trevino in building a three-stroke lead Saturday after 36 holes in the $750,000 Bank of Boston Senior PGA Classic.

Albus, the 18-hole co-leader with Bob Brue at 67, fashioned a 6-under-par 66 for a 36-hole total of 133 after two rounds over the Nashawtuc Country Club's 6,740-yard course.

Floyd added a 67 to his 69 of Friday and was at 136. Trevino also fired a 67 for a 137 as he bids for his seventh victory of the year and 25th on the senior tour. He was joined by Butch Baird, who also shot 67.

Heavy rain on Friday gave way to sunny and mild weather.

Tom Wargo added a 70 for 138 and Bob Dickson and Bob Charles were at 139 after shooting 70s.

Albus, who left his club pro job in New York after 14 years to join the senior tour, birdied the first hole, then went ahead to stay with a birdie on a 396-yard third hole, putting him 7-under.

He had five more birdies before he took his only bogey of the tournament, lipping out a short par putt on 18.

Albus, who has won three times as a senior, once this year, is bidding to go over $2 million in career earnings. He has won $649,000 this year.

Floyd, who has won more than $7 million on the PGA Tour, three-putted from 10 feet for bogey on No. 2, but recovered to keep the pressure on Albus. He trailed by only two strokes late in the day, but Albus responded with birdies on Nos. 15 and 16.

Trevino, with earnings of more than $1 million this year and nearly $10 million in his career, had five birdies in a bogey-free round to stay in the chase for the first-place prize of $112,500.

Miller Barber, who is tied with Trevino with 24 senior victories, had a 70 and was at 141.

Dickson closed within two strokes of the lead with a birdie on No. 10, but then bogeyed Nos. 12 and 14.

Dave Stockton, third in earnings with $818,000, had a second-round 68 for 140. He was joined by Brue, who slipped to a 73, and Dewitt Weaver, who shot 71.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, a three-time Bank of Boston winner, shot 73 for 145.

U.S. golfers try to avoid major shutout

By Larry Dorman
N.Y. Times New Service

Unprecedented occurrences always attract bated-breath attention in golf, and we're on the verge of one right now as the PGA Championship looms this week at Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Okla.

Here is something to ponder while Dream Team II is running roughshod over the rest of the world: For the first time in golf history, the United States could be shut out in the major championships.

For American golf, a dream year this most definitely is not. American players are 0 for 3 so far in the majors, something that has never happened before.

In fact, U.S. players have never even been 0 for 2 in the 60 years that all four professional major championships have been contested. But this year, the victory list has an international accent: Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain in the Masters; Ernie Els of South Africa in the U.S. Open; Nick Price of Zimbabwe in the British Open.

This trend has been on the way for the last decade. American players once dominated golf the way they dominate basketball. In the decade of 1965-74, U.S. born players were 31-9 in the majors. From 1975-84, they were 33-7. But in the past decade, from 1985-94, Americans are 20-19.

If a foreigner wins at Southern Hills, then it's dead even for the decade, with the momentum headed overseas. Foreign-born players have won 10 of the last 11 British Opens, six of the last seven Masters, the last U.S. Open and two of the last four PGA Championships.

"American golf," Paul Azinger said this week, "is getting hammered."

Depending on whom you ask, this is either cause for concern or an overblown media creation. Golf is the most individual of sports, and many golfers prefer to ignore the fact that the balance of power — especially at the very pinnacle of the game — has shifted dramatically in the majors.

LPGA tries to absorb foreign invasion

■ LPGA Europeans

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — American men aren't the only ones under attack by European golfers. Foreign women have launched their own invasion on the LPGA tour.

Nick Faldo, Nick Price, Bernard Langer and Seve Ballesteros have been joined by Laura Davies, Helen Alfredsson and Liselotte Neumann in the rush for American titles and dollars.

The success of the European men in the United States encouraged the women. "We could see the Americans aren't invincible.," said Suzanne Strudwick of England, last year's LPGA rookie of the year.

How true.

Of the 21 LPGA tournaments this year, Europeans have won six. Davies, of England, is the tour's leading money winner; Neumann, of Sweden, is ninth, and Alfredsson, also of Sweden, is 13th. Ten years ago, five European golfers ranked among the top 150 money winners on the LPGA tour; today, the number is 18.

"There's a lot of talent over there. But the competition is not as great as here. And there's the money, of course," Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez said this week during the LPGA tournament at Stratton.

Strudwick, 29, blamed the economic problems overseas in the last five years for forcing more European women across the Atlantic.

A few years ago, there were 28 tournaments on the European tour. Dwindling sponsors dropped the number to 11 last year. The average European purse for women was about $150,000 with about $3 million in total prize money. In contrast, the LPGA tour has 38 events with $22 million up for grabs.

Mariners snap Royal streak

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City's 14-game winning streak came to a crashing end Saturday night when Reggie Jefferson drove in four runs and Edgar Martinez hit a three-run homer to lead the Seattle Mariners to an 11-2 rout of the Royals.

The Royals' first loss since June 22 ended baseball's longest winning streak since Minnesota won 15 straight in 1991.

■ AL Roundup

Kansas City began its run trailing by 9½ games in the AL Central but sweeps of Chicago, Minnesota and Oakland has helped the Royals move back into the playoff race.

Jefferson hit three doubles for the Mariners, who were playing their 15th game on the road since the Kingdome was closed for structural repairs.

The Mariners handed rookie Tim Davis (2-2) a 9-0 lead after four innings. Davis gave up seven hits and two runs in five innings. Jeff Nelson pitched two-hit relief over three innings, and Goose Gossage finished up.

Red Sox 8, Indians 4
Indians 7, Red Sox 0

BOSTON — Dennis Martinez pitched a two-hitter and Carlos Baerga homered twice as Cleveland defeated Boston 7-0 Saturday for a split of their day-night doubleheader.

John Valentin had a career-high five hits and drove in five runs as the Red Sox won the first game 8-4.

Martinez (11-6), who has won 10 of his last 12 decisions, allowed only a leadoff single by Otis Nixon in the first and a two-out single by Tim Naehring in the second. After Naehring's hit, he retired 19 straight batters before walking Wes Chamberlain to open the ninth.

Martinez struck out six — fanning the side in the second and sixth innings — and walked one in his third shutout and seventh complete game of the year.

Baerga hit a solo homer in the first and a three-run shot in the third off Chris Nabholz (3-5), who was traded from the Indians to the Red Sox on July 1. Baerga, who hit both homers into the screen atop the Green Monster, has 19 this season.

Twins 10, Yankees 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett reached 100 RBIs faster than any Minnesota player ever, and the Twins stopped New York's eight-game winning streak.

Puckett, Kent Hrbek, Shane Mack and Pedro Munoz homered for the Twins. Paul O'Neill connected for the Yankees, who had won 10 in a row on the road.

Puckett drove in three runs, giving him 101 RBIs. He reached 100 RBIs for the third time in his career, and did it this year in his 104th game; Harmon Killebrew accomplished the feat in 106 games in 1969, the previous fastest in team history.

Melido Perez (9-4) matched a career high by allowing eight earned runs. He had been 6-0 in his previous nine starts.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Cecil Fielder and Tony Phillips homered to lead Detroit to a victory over Toronto.

Mike Moore (11-10) gave up two runs on eight hits over seven innings. He struck out one and walked three to help the Tigers end a three-game losing streak.

Joe Boever pitched two innings for his third save of the season.

Loser Pat Hentgen (13-8) gave up three runs on four hits in eight innings, striking out nine and walking three.

Orioles 5, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Arthur Rhodes pitched his second straight shutout Saturday night, a five-hitter, and Baltimore continued its recent run of shutouts with a blanking of Milwaukee.

Rhodes (3-5), who pitched his second career shutout Monday just one day after being called up from Triple-A Rochester, struck out three and walked five in his third complete game.

The Orioles, who had not recorded a shutout this season before Rhodes outing on Aug. 1 — a seven-hitter against Minnesota — have four shutouts in their past six games.

Baseball braces for strike deadline

"How bad do you think it's going to be?"

"Pretty damn bad. ... These things have got to happen every five years or so — 10 years. Helps to get rid of the bad blood. Been 10 years since the last one."

NEW YORK — Baseball's labor wars occur even more frequently than mob wars. And no end appears in sight.

The owners say they won't have an agreement without "cost certainty," fancy talk for a salary cap. Players say they'll never accept a labor contract with one.

"If they are waiting for our proposal on a salary cap, they're never going to see it," union head Donald Fehr was quoted as saying in Friday's editions of The Boston Globe. "It doesn't arrive until the year 2078."

Fehr's refusals haven't been quite as descriptive in his news conferences. But he and other union officials have made it clear players won't agree to a salary cap under almost any circumstance.

"I don't think any owner will see — no matter how much they believe it — will see salary caps," Eugene Orza, the union's No. 2 official, said Friday. "I'm sure every owner, like every other American, has at one time in their life believed something they learned later in life they shouldn't have believed."

With the union set to strike Friday, formal talks over a salary cap aren't even scheduled until Wednesday — two days before the deadline for baseball's eighth work stoppage in 22 years.

"We're willing to sit down any time, any place, to resolve this as soon as possible," management negotiator Richard Ravitch said Thursday.

But he says any resolution must have cost certainty. And Tom Reich, an agent for many players and a veteran of baseball's labor wars, made clear what his constituents think of that idea.

"There's a better chance of the United States returning to a monarchy," he said.

Baseball's labor history isn't pretty — strikes in 1972, 1980, 1981 and 1985, and lockouts in 1973, 1976 and 1990. Fehr says that in his analysis, every work stoppage since arbitrator Peter Seitz created free agency in December 1975 has been about management's attempt to stuff the free-agent genie back into the bottle.

Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council for 23 months, says owners are merely trying to respond to changing times. He's not happy with the pace of the talks.

"I wish they'd meet sooner," he said Friday. "We just play it day by day."

Jerry Reinsdorf, the Chicago White Sox owner, gave a hint of management's thinking in an interview two years ago, during the move that pushed Fay Vincent to resign as commissioner. Reinsdorf said only a united ownership front threatening a confrontation could get owners a deal it liked with the union.

"You do it by taking a position and telling them they're not going to play unless we make a deal, and being prepared not to play one or two years if you have to," he said then.

That seems to be the strategy of Selig. He claims 19 of the 28 teams are projected to lose money this year, and says a salary cap is needed for the small-market teams to survive.

"Do you want to tell fans in Milwaukee they can't have baseball?" he said this week to more than one reporter.

While the union considers management's proposal unreasonable, Reinsdorf doesn't think it's a "lowball offer," the term used by some player agents.

Management's plan, given to the union on June 14, guarantees players $1 billion a year for seven years — as long as revenues don't decline from their 1994 level. Ravitch says the average salary would rise from $1.2 million to $2.7 million by the 2001 if the 15 percent historical rate of increase over the last 15 years continues.

Fehr says the numbers aren't true, and that Ravitch's plan would include as revenue that the players currently keep for themselves, such as licensing from baseball cards.

So where do the parties go next?

"I don't know," Selig said. "I continue to be optimistic. Neither side wants a work stoppage. Both sides want to avoid it."

Both negotiators seem to have dug in. There appears to be no middle ground and neither side has any inkling where breakthroughs may come.

"I have no idea," Ravitch said Friday.

"We'll keep meeting," Fehr said Thursday.

And, surely, they will keep sniping at each other. Their views of baseball, and each other, are polar opposites.

Bagwell 3-run homer leads Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell hit his 39th homer, a three-run shot Saturday night and the Houston Astros held off the San Francisco Giants 8-7.

■ NL Roundup

The Astros won their fifth in a row. Matt Williams hit his major league-leading 42nd home run as San Francisco lost its fifth straight game.

Houston took an 8-4 lead into the ninth, but Jeff Reed hit a three-run homer off John Hudek with no outs. With one out, pinch-runner Mike Benjamin was thrown out by center fielder Steve Finley when he tried to go from first to third on Todd Benzinger's single.

Braves 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Greg Maddux allowed just three hits in eight dominant innings and David Justice homered off Jose Rijo to give Atlanta a victory over Cincinnati.

Expos 4, Phillies 3, (11)

PHILADELPHIA — Wil Cordero scored from third base on a slow grounder to the mound in the 11th inning, giving Montreal a win over Philadelphia.

John Kruk's two-run homer in the ninth tied it for the Phillies, but Montreal came back for its seventh win in eight games.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — St. Louis worked over reliever Dan Miceli in a four-run eighth inning finished off by Luis Alicea's three-run double and the Cardinals rallied to beat Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals have won three straight since losing 10 of 11, their first three-game streak since they won five in a row June 26-July 1.

Cubs 7, Padres 1

CHICAGO — Frank Castillo pitched a six-hitter, leading Chicago to a victory over error-prone San Diego.

Castillo (2-1) was within one out of his first major league shutout but gave up three straight singles.

Marlins 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Jeff Conine hit a three-run double in a four-run fifth inning and Florida held on for a victory over New York.

The win was Florida's fourth in five games, and snapped New York's three-game winning streak.

Pat Rapp (7-7), who had lost his previous two decisions, lasted only five innings but got the victory.

Diablos rally in fifth, top Angels 5-3

Staff Report

EL PASO — In typical Diablo style, El Paso scored big in the fifth inning and took its second straight win from the Midland Angels 5-3 here Saturday at Cohen Stadium.

The Angels had 2-0 and 2-1 leads through the fourth, but the Diablos came up big in the fifth to take the lead for good. Jim Byrd singled with one out and Bob Kappesser got another single but an error by outfielder Bo Ortiz on the play allowed Byrd to score and sent Kappesser to second and tied the score at 2-2.

Then Angel starter Kyle Sebach gave up a walk which set up Kevin Castleberry's two-run triple. A passed ball allowed Castleberry to score and pushed the score to the final margin.

Sebach's troubles began in the fourth after pitching a shutout to that point. Tim Unroe singled and stole second with two outs. But Sebach had an 0-2 count on the next batter before disaster struck. On two consecutive wild pitches, Unroe went to third and then scored to pull El Paso within 2-1 before Sebach finally pitched a strikeout on a full count to end the inning. The loss gives Sebach, who pitched until the ninth and has four complete-game wins under his belt, a 5-3 record.

Midland jumped ahead 1-0 in the second when Mike Wolff singled to left setting up Chris Smith's RBI double. In the fourth, Chris Pritchett walked and Wolff single and Smith drove in his second run of the night on a bounce-out for a 2-0 lead.

Midland's rally fell short in the eighth after Ty Boykin tried to stretch an RBI single into a double and was thrown out at second. Marquis Riley singled to set up Boykin's drive.

El Paso's Kevin Kloek pitched the win to improve to 3-0 and Mike Thomas relieved with two outs in the eighth to shut the door and record his 15th save.

El Paso's Francisco Gamez (8-6, 4.45 era) will be on the mound today facing Midland's Korey Keling (8-8, 5.18).

Woodforde overcomes heat, Krajicek for win

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mark Woodforde survived Richard Krajicek's 120 mph serves and a three-set battle in 110-degree heat Saturday, advancing to the Los Angeles Open final with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 victory.

Woodforde reached his first final of the year and will play either No. 2 Boris Becker or No. 6 Jason Stoltenberg in Sunday's championship on the UCLA campus.

"Reaching a final is fantastic," said Woodforde, an Australian ranked 53rd in the world in singles, but known primarily for his doubles success. "It's a great feeling."

Woodforde's first victory over Krajicek in five career meetings was a replay of the 1992 LA Open final, which Krajicek won in three sets. Krajicek, the fifth seed from the Netherlands, also won here in 1993.

This time, Woodforde's serve-and-volley game withstood Krajicek's booming serve, which produced 13 aces to Woodforde's 10.

Woodforde committed three double faults in the seventh game, but nailed a crosscourt backhand volley winner to go up 4-3.

Kitzbuehel Tennis

KITZBUEHEL, Austria — Unseeded Fabrice Santoro of France stunned Austrian favorite Thomas Muster on to earn a place in the championship of the $410,000 EA Generali tennis tournament.

Santoro drew applause from the partisan crowd as he held off Muster with repeated strong rallies to win 2-6, 7-6 (8-6), 7-6 (7-4). The Frenchman will play Goran Ivanisevic, the world's second-ranked player, for the title.

Ivanisevic, the top seed, had an easier time against Tomas Carbonell of Spain, the Croatian winning 7-6 (7-4), 6-0, in 74 minutes.

Czech Open

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — Spain's Sergi Bruguera and Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine breezed to semifinals victories in the Skoda Czech Open, both winning 6-1, 6-3.

The top-seeded Bruguera breezed by 19-year-old fellow Spaniard Alberto Costa 6-1, 6-3 in the clay-court event.

Medvedev, seeded No. 2, disposed of local favorite and third-seeded Slava Dosedel in 64 minutes.

Toshiba Tennis

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain defeated countrywoman Conchita Martinez 6-4, 6-1 in the semifinals of the $400,000 Toshiba Classic, avenging a three-set loss last week to Martinez.

Sanchez Vicario, ranked second in the world, displayed great patience against No. 3 Martinez, carefully picking her spots to come to the net.

"She's been playing really well, but I think I was the better player today," said Sanchez Vicario, who lost 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 to Martinez in last week's U.S. Hardcourts final in Vermont.

Sanchez Vicario will meet top-ranked Steffi Graf of Germany in a rematch of last year's final here, which Graf won 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Graf advanced Saturday with a 6-3, 6-4 win over Tami Whitlinger-Jones.

Today's final will be the 30th career meeting between the players, with Graf leading the series 23-6. They have met three times this year, with Graf winning twice.

Scovell takes Cotton Bowl fate personally

By Johnny Paul
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — John Scovell could no longer conceal the hurt and anguish.

Scovell, the son of "Mr. Cotton Bowl," backed away from the podium he stood behind on this bleak Thursday afternoon.

Hours earlier the Cotton Bowl's bid for Tier I status had been rejected by conference commissioners. Asked what that decision meant to him and his family, Scovell winced.

He turned his head to the right — away from media gathered at the Hyatt Regency — and paused for several seconds, fighting his emotions.

"I think I'll postpone that one for a minute," replied Scovell, who quickly gathered his composure and continued to answer questions.

His father, Field, served as a driving force behind the 58-year-old game, spending nearly four decades as chairman of the bowl's team selection committee. Scovell himself has been involved with the game for almost all of his 48 years.

Yet, the Cotton Bowl no longer stands proud as the Scovells once knew it — an elite bowl able to attract the cream of college football teams — and the hurt clearly showed.

"I'm a little bit emotional anyway," Scovell said after many in attendance at the news conference departed. "So, when you talk about 40 years of my life, maybe that's predictable."

If nothing else, it was understandable.

"I am unique. Not anybody else in the bowl business — it doesn't matter if it's Orange, Cotton, Sugar or whatever — has got the legacy that I have," Scovell said. "So, nobody else can really identify with my attachment to this football game, the symbolism of what it means. Nobody can relate to that.

"I can't even explain it. It's an intangible. It's a gut feel. It's just something very special."

Scovell's father died two years ago at the age of 85.

If only he still were around...

"We wouldn't have had this press conference," said Scovell, who answered the question before its completion. "We would have won. He understood people and this process, and those people making that decision would not have said no to Field Scovell. Trust me."

Conference commissioners instead selected the Orange, Sugar and Fiesta bowls, which will rotate the opportunity to play host to a national championship game. The agreement stands for three years, with a three-year option resting with the conferences.

Cotton Bowl officials are scheduled to meet Wednesday to plan how to keep the game viable.

Money and geography — and to a certain extent, weather and game site — excluded the Cotton and Gator bowls, the two finalists not chosen.

His father stood as the final piece between the old and new guards, yet Scovell said he does not feel he and his partners at the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association failed his father, or his father's game.

Instead, he recalled a favorite saying of his father's.

"Anytime you walk off the field, you want one feeling: No regrets," Scovell said. "That's how I feel. Seldom do you walk off the field of competition with no regrets. We didn't let anybody down."

Scovell never saw his father so much as touch a beer.

Now, as for ice cream...

Well, Field Scovell remembered an ice cream parlor for every city he visited.

His relationship with his father allowed him to travel the country as a member of the selection committee, a reward priceless to Scovell.

The Midland Independent District sponsors a Child Find Service. This service is designed to locate special needs students who are not in school or who, if in school, are not receiving services under The Individuals with Disability Education Act (Special Education) or Section 504 of The Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Services are provided to students ranging in age from 3 years to 21 years.

To "qualify" for purpose of public preschool, elementary school and secondary school, one must be a handicapped person. Section 104.3 (j) (1) states "handicapped persons" means any person who (I) has a physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more major life activities (II) has a record of such an impairment, or (III) is regarded as having such an impairment.

If you have a child or know of a child who is not enrolled in public school that fits the above qualification please contact:

UTTER-LY ADORABLE

Put a cow to pasture in your very own yard this year with our trendy cow planter. This cow doesn't attract flies, requires no care, and won't "milk" you dry in hay and feeding expenses. Just fill her with some potted plants or flowers and join the thousands that are decorating their yards and homes with the cow theme. Made from pine and measuring 37" long x 20½" high x 14" wide, simply trace the full-size parts onto wood, cut out, assemble and paint!

LAKESIDE VIEW

Photos By Joe D. Williams

Text by Kes Gilhome

Rooms with a view are always a pleasure, but it is unusual to find a home that offers great views from opposite sides of the house.

Most of the rear facing living areas in this pleasant four bedroom home in Greentree North overlook the golf course, whilst the study at the front of the property has a view of the lake.

This unusual aspect of the house really lends an open feel to the entire building and is complemented by the large rooms and high ceilings that abound.

The section of the house which really exhibits the scale of the home is the open-plan combination of kitchen, family room and informal dining area. By integrating these spaces, the architect has created a large bright suite of rooms that is extremely comfortable, practical and elegant.

The kitchen area is very large and features all of the 'mod-cons' that one would expect from a house of this calibre as well as a long breakfast bar, Maple cabinets and a central island which is equipped with power points and plenty of storage space.

The family room boasts white framed paneling throughout and a large brick fireplace that has a spot-lit mantle and carved wooden columns.

The master bedroom suite is another spectacular series of rooms. The bedroom, which is sequestered across the rear of the house, overlooks the golf course and has its own private access to the patio and back yard. An unusual feature of the room is the high cathedral ceiling.

The master bathroom pulls no punches either; a 16 foot vaulted ceiling, glass brick above the Roman tub separate vanities at different heights and a whole host of built-in amenities.

This elegant, custom home at 4907 Island Drive is being listed by Karen Foster of the Prudential Adobe Realtors at $261,500, and was built by Johnny Whitley.

There are many other attractive features to the house which should be seen to be appreciated. To arrange a private viewing, call Karen Foster at 683-9548

Chaparral Realtors attends '94 RELO Conference, learns latest trends in real estate and relocation

Norma Pine
Chaparral Realtors

Norma Pine, Owner of Chaparral Realtors met with real estate professionals representing the employee relocation field at the Annual Conference of Chicago-based RELO/The International Relocation Network held July 14-16 in New Orleans.

Pine was among several hundred real estate professionals from across the country who met to discuss the latest trends in the area of real estate. "Right now there are some important developments taking place in the real estate and relocation field," Pine says. She adds, "Issues such as buyer brokage, limits on transferee tax deductions, enhanced computer technology and tighter corporate relocation budgets will all have an impact on the way real estate transactions are conducted."

"We choose to attend the seminars and training session that would enable Chaparral Realtors to address the changing needs of buyers and sellers in the Midland market."

1994 RELO President Fred T. Madley, also president of The Michigan Group, Inc., Livonia Mi, concurs. " This year's Conference was a very important educational tool for our members. Conferees gained useful insight and skills that will allow them to provide the best real estate services - particularly in the area of employee relocation - to their customers," he notes.

The RELO Annual Conference also provided Pine with the opportunity to meet with representatives from Maenner Relocation, Inc., a third-party relocation company that provides homebuying and home selling services to corporate transferees. A joint venture agreement between Maenner and RELO, Chaparral Realtors has expanded the services offered to corporations by Chaparral Realtors.

The Chicago-based RELO network has nearly 800 members and 3,000 member offices nationwide. Its members sold $64.3 billion in residential real estate in 1993. Chaparral Realtors has 20 sales associate and services the Midland Community.

When selling house "by owner," the phone may only ring once

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Remember Lily Tomlin's monologue about the telephone operator? "One ringy-dingy, two ringy-dingys!" If you're planning to sell your home alone - without representation - you should know that buyers will only give you "one-ringy dingy!" That may sound corny, but as a "by owner" it's important information. Here's why.

Serious buyers are, those individuals who have a NEED to purchase a home. They are being transferred in, have just sold their existing home, or have some other strong motivation for making a purchase. in other words, they are ready, willing and able to buy a home - NOW.

If they call a "by owner" from an ad or sign, the expect to talk to the owner, not an answering machine. The have real questions, and expect live answers - not a call-back tomorrow. They may also drive by, and expect to see the home without prior notice or an appointment.

Are they being unreasonable to expect an owner to be waiting for their call? Not at all - they are just being buyers, and as such they want facts to make their decision.

Of course, many prospective "buyers" are not in such a hurry. The term "buyers" is used loosely in this case, because, where motivation is lacking, there is no rush to make a decision.

How do serious buyers overcome their need to gather information and inspect suitable properties? It's simple they call a real estate agent. They know the agent will do the necessary research and leg work to identify homes which meet their requirements - at no cost to them.

Buyers also realize that an agent can show them virtually every home currently available for purchase. That includes homes listed with other companies too - making their home purchase a "one-stop" shopping trip.

Planning to sell your home alone? You'll be competing with a 24-hour, seven day a week sales force - that's every agent in the market. "One ringy-dingy...!"

Radon Gas: Easily detectable, but there's a concern for householders

Pat Orseth
President /Midland
Association of Realtors

Radon is a radio active gas produced by the decay of radio active elements, such as uranium, in the soil. It is tasteless, odorless and colorless. Prolonged exposure to radon may cause damage to lung tissue and result in lung cancer. A study by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) estimated that 8 million homes contain potentially dangerous levels of radon.

Radon flows from soil into basements through crack in the foundation, sump pumps or pipes. Low pressure indoor air then sucks up into the house where, without proper ventilation, it can accumulate and cause risk to the inhabitant. If ventilated properly, radon becomes diluted in the outdoor air and no longer presents a health hazard.

"Fortunately, elevated levels of radon are very easy to detect and possible to reduce," according to Pat Orseth, president of the Midland Association of REALTORS. "Testing for radon is very simple," continued Orseth. A small collector is placed in the house for a pre-determined period of time, and then a lab measures the radon buildup. The simplest form of testing kit is a charcoal canister that absorbs the gas and, within a few days, registers the level of radon. It is important to keep in mind, however, that radon levels fluctuates on a daily basis depending on varying conditions, such as open windows. Other tests require a period of several months to report an accurate reading.

The EPA approve d tests provide instructions for administering the test. The lab results will report the level of pCi/1 (picocuries per liter in air), a standard measure of radiation. The EPA's A Citizen's Guide to Radon provides information on understanding levels of radon and suggested means of mitigation. The guide is available free of charge. For information on obtaining a copy of the guide, contact your state EPA office.

There are two general responses to the presence of radon: prevention of radon entry into the structure or removal of radon from the structure. Solutions vary in complexity and expense, and it is advisable for you to consult an EPA certified radon removal / home improvement firm before proceeding with major mitigation procedures.

Strategies for reducing radon levels range from simply improving your home's ventilation with window or ceiling fans, to piping the radon-laden air out from under the foundation, a process which ranges in cost form $800 to $1,500. If radon is detected in your home, you may wish to employ some of the suggest "do-it-yourself" solutions, such as as installing a window fan or covering any open areas near your sump pump, and then retest. The cost of having radon removed by professionals will depend on the means of removal, rather the the radon level. Low levels cost just as much as high levels if the same method must be used.

As a homeowner, it is important to be aware of the possible presence of radon. If radon is present, it is important to determine the level of risk and cost involved before proceeding with mitigation strategies.

What does this mean for homebuyers and seller? Orseth advises that concern about radon is no reason not buy a home since any problem can be corrected easily. The National Association of REALTORS has worked closely with the EPA to inform associate members, formulate policy and to educate the public.

The association's board of directors has adopted a radon policy supporting increased efforts by both the private and public sectors to evaluate the extent of indoor air quality problems and to encourage the development of meaningful and affordable monitoring and mitigation strategies.

"The only way to know if you have a radon problem is to test your home," advises Orseth. The Midland Association of REALTORS encourages all resident to have their homes tested for radon gas.

The Midland Association of REALTORS is one of more that 1,800 local board and associations of REALTORS nationwide that comprise the National Associations of REALTORS. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

Why Join TEAM KENT?

What turns you on about your job? For most people, these thoughts focus on several different areas. How does your current job stack up against TEAM KENT?

SALARY

Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience). We also give you a SIGNING BONUS ($200 for full-timers and $100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY

Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs!

FLEXIBILITY

Our stores are open 7 days a week, with many open 24 hours a day. We have some hours available for all shifts. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement, and a profit sharing and retirement plan. In addition, all Team Members are covered by a $100,000 accidental death life insurance policy!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks or Avis Lubes!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 N. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday-Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 S. Crane Hwy. on Tuesdays only at 9 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. For answers to specific questions regarding employment with our company, please call Andy Salcedo at 520-4000.

London: Bridging the Budget

'England is a living guidebook to over 2,000 years of civilization.' — John Gloag

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a two-part Sunday series about traveling to London on a budget. It is written by Kes Gilhome, now a writer and photographer for the Reporter-Telegram living in Midland, a native of London who recently spent a month at his home.

Text and photos by Kes Gilhome

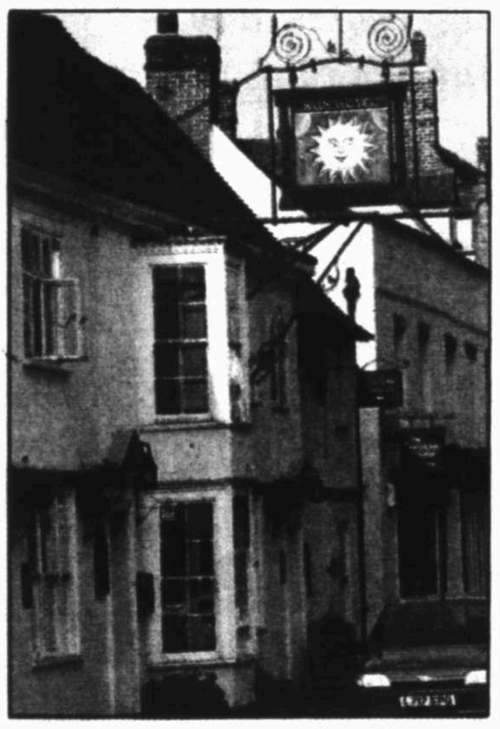
LONDON — Paris in the springtime, London in the fall — perhaps two of the most romantic and attractive travel destinations in the world.

Or at least they would be if it were not for the popular perception that one has to own at least a couple of oil wells in order to contemplate going.

Fortunately, this idea is largely untrue, because traveling to Europe can be much more affordable that on would think. It can actually cost less to fly the round trip between Dallas and London than it does to fly to New York and back. An added benefit is that the cab drivers are friendlier.

For many Americans, Great Britain is the most popular destination in Europe because there is less of a language barrier — a moot point for some travelers — and it is easy to get to and of course there is the obvious historical connection to add interest.

London, like all major cities, can be an expensive place to visit, but with a certain amount of research, a couple of decent guidebooks and the knowledge that most tourist attractions are outrageously expensive and therefore should be avoided, the cost can be kept down.



English pubs are one of the great British institutions. Often historical buildings in their own right, pubs are social centers for communities. This pub, in the village of Debden, is over 200 years old.

The easiest way to reach Europe is to fly from Dallas-Fort Worth airport straight to London or Paris. Flights average a posterior-numbing 10 hours each way, but they can be bought for as little as $620. There are a number of flights each week to London from Dallas; the only question is when you go, and therefore how much will it cost.

The peak months of July and August are the most expensive times to travel. This can have a "knock-on" effect into other months because most airlines count the date of the outward flight as determining the price and not the date of your return.

The fall is probably the best time to visit England. Not only is the weather likely to be fairly good (here it should be mentioned that good weather in England is a relative term; on average it rains for 170 days a year), but accommodations and air fares will be cheaper and, as there are fewer tourists, easier to find.

The key to making the most of your dollar abroad is knowing that many organizations offer substantial discounts if you can prove that you fall into one of several "special groups."

Some airlines such as British Airways offer an unpublished deal to holders of student cards and to those under 26 who can avail themselves of an International Youth Card.

Please see LONDON/3E

St. James Park, opposite the Queen's London residence of Buckingham Palace, is a popular place for young and old alike. Feeding the birds in the parks is a favorite pastime for many in England.

At London Street Markets, visitors and locals can find inexpensive, yet colorful shopping for everything from flowers and produce to clothing; a perfect place for the budget traveler.

The Royal Irish Dragoon Guards' Band — a military band — marches each morning (around 11 a.m.) for the changing of the guard at Windsor Castle. If the Queen's standard (flag) is flying, she is in residence.

Lawn concert features Dow Jones Average

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

From their opening number, "In the Mood," to their last, "The Woodchopper's Ball," the Dow Jones Average received a warm reception at the Museum of the Southwest's Summer Sunday Lawn Concert last weekend.

McKnight-Harrison

More than 900 persons gathered on the grounds of the museum for the next-to-last concert of the 1994 series.

The group, which was organized in 1978, is composed of local businessmen Carvel Mills, saxophone; Jim Ross, piano; Mark Lowe, bass, and Gary Burnett, drums. Max Howard, morning show host for KMND Radio, was commentator for the concert, which featured music of the Big Band era and jazz.

Among those seen in the throng were Sharla and Bart Hotchkiss, Donna and Tom Manning, Nell and Julian Lopez, Ed Adcock, Jay Reynolds, Ben Hoffacker, Rae Wright and LeNelda and Bill Pennington with their daughter, Michelle and Melissa.

Tonight's concert at 7:45 features the band, The Shades. The museum invites those attending to bring their own seating and picnics or snacks, which they may enjoy before or during the program.

A MEXICAN FIESTA recently honored newlyweds-to-be Laurie George and Scott Boeh, who were here from Alexandria, Va., to visit Laurie's mother, Linda George.

Held at the home of Barbara and Jim Clack, the party also was hosted by Liz and Bill Adam and Gloria and LaDoyce Lambert.

Colorful paper flowers and pinatas added a South of the Border touch to the proceedings. Guests enjoyed a "build your own" taco supper, with pralines and Mexican wedding cookies for dessert. Sangria and Mexican beer were served from an area marked La Cantina.

Special guests included the bride-elect's mother and her brother, Wiley George, and his wife, Valorie, of Houston.

The couple plan to be married Sept. 10 in Washington, D.C.

JOYCE AND GORDON LEACH celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on July 26 with a recommitment ceremony performed by the Rev. Mark Alexander in the Mabel Holt Glass Memorial Chapel of the First United Methodist Church.

Following the ceremony, they were hosts for a cocktail buffet at the Plaza Club.

In addition to their daughter, Debbie Leach Bishop, and granddaughter, Amy Bishop of Midland, family members attending were Joyce's stepsister, Marian (Mrs. Lucien) Collins of Menard; her aunt, Margaret North Farrar of San Antonio; Gordon's nieces, Kim Owen of Richmond, Va., and Robbie Wood of Farmville, Va.; Gordon's cousins, Dr. Joseph Leach of El Paso and Lela Ann Leach Jacks of Hewitt, and Joyce's cousin, Bill North, and is wife, Betty of Lancaster.

Other out-of-town guests were Gordon's childhood friend, Marshall Doswell and his wife, Gloria, of Fort Mill, S.C., and Joyce's high school friends, Jeanne and Albert Orsinger and Amalie and John R. Shaw of San Antonio, and Dallas traveling friends, Char and Gene Cuny, and Jean and Bob Roberts.

The following day, Joyce and Gordon hosted a luncheon in their home for family members and out-of-town guests.

AFTER A HONEYMOON to Colorado, Patrick McGarrity and his bride, the former Caryn Kelly, will return to Texas A&M University to continue their studies. Caryn is a junior, and Patrick is a graduate student in the English Department there.

They were married Saturday afternoon at Trinity Presbyterian Church, with a reception following in the church parlor.

Festivities begin in Midland with a "Meet our Future Son-in-Law" open house at the home of Caryn's parents, Sharon and Jerry Kelly.

A bridal shower celebration was held in Trinity Presbyterian's church parlor. The hostesses were Margie (Mrs. Wayne) Barton, Joy (Mrs. Dave) Boes, Libby Evans, Ver Nelle (Mrs. Denny) Fidler, Juanita (Mrs. Joe) Marshall, Glenda (Mrs. Larry) Massey, Donna (Mrs. Ben) Nichols, Brenda (Mrs. Billy Jack) Perryman, Lynne (Mrs. Jack) Swan and Donna Whiles.

The bride's sister, Erin Kelly of Princeton, N.J., and Bambi (Mrs. Alan) Byars hosted a barbecue and pool party at the Byars' home.

On Friday, Margie Barton entertained with a bridesmaids' luncheon at her home, while Ann (Mrs. Mike) Bradford and daughters, Heather and Lauren, hosted a manicure party at Before and After.

The couple's parents, Sharon and Jerry Kelly and Shirley and Mike McGarrity of Andrews, hosted a dinner party at the Midland Hilton Friday evening in the couple's honor.

A wedding day breakfast was hosted by Mary Lou (Mrs. Robert) Appling and Erin Appling at their home for the families and bridal party.

In addition, Caryn was honored with a bridal shower in the groom's hometown of Andrews. Held in the home of Lynne and Len Wilson, the party was also hosted by Lauretta (Mrs. Ira) Adams, Elwana (Mrs. Delbert) Brewster, Linda (Mrs. Elvin) Brownlee, Evaloa (Mrs. Maurice) Crouse, Linda (Mrs. Kirby) Culp, Wanda (Mrs. Jeff) Doughten, Shirley (Mrs. Larry) Dupler, Sue (Mrs. Brian) Gordon, Linda (Mrs. Windle) Harper and Kim (Mrs. Welsey) Harris.

Also, Patsy (Mrs. F.W.) Hoermann, Lois (Mrs. James) Ketcham, Kay (Mrs. Jerry) McWilliams, Jo Ann (Mrs. Robert) Montgmery, Sandra (Mrs. Gary) Petross, Pat Pope, Beth (Mrs. Bill) Shipman, Sue (Mrs. Grant) Thompson, and Lenn (Mrs. Gerry) Tucker.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

AT WIT'S END

When going gets tough, go shopping

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. This column appeared originally in May 1990.

By Erma Bombeck

To many women (me included), shopping has always been like sex with the lights on — lust for something, the titillation of conquest, the seductive moment when you become one, the emptiness when it's over.

Bombeck

Women are in control when they shop — and the struggle of cruising up and down aisle after aisle picking and discarding items is half the fun. I never thought the day would come when my sisters would sit in front of the TV set watching a shopping network and buying the first and only pair of earrings put in front of them.

That's not shopping.

Shopping, if you do it right, will do you in. It has the capacity to turn a happy homemaker into a woman who warms up pizza with freezer burns and serves it on paper plates. It's wandering aimlessly through a store and not knowing what day it is, what the weather outside is like or where you left your car.

It's a total commitment to trying on every shoe in the store, even if it isn't your size, and asking the price of everything, including the water cooler by the elevator.

Where have all the courageous women gone? The ones who used to stand outside the department stores and wait for the bell to ring and the doors to be unlocked so they could lead the charge to the EOM clearance rack?

Sixty million women are parked daily in front of the home shopping networks eating Fritos and dialing the phone with wet nails. Will the retail foot soldiers become an endangered species?

I'm telling you, home shoppers, you are trading reality for illusions. Example: You have a rear end that looks like an IMAX screen. Vanna White appears on your shopping network wearing one of her creations. You reach for the phone, never stopping to think that you've seen bigger road-kills than Vanna White. You will not look the same as she does in that dress.

Store shoppers, on the other hand, must fight the battle of the fitting rooms and the cruel funhouse mirrors. They will know before they leave the store that the dress makes them look like they could hover over the Super Bowl.

It has taken women 20 years to get out of the house. Now home shopping is sucking us back into it. I read a quote the other day that should be our battle cry: "Money can't buy happiness. That's what shopping is for."

Researchers use scratch-and-sniff tests

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Scratch-and-sniff tests may be effective, inexpensive screening tools for Alzheimer's disease, according to medical researchers. Since memory loss and loss of smell often occur together, the scientists tested the sense of smell to determine if it could be an early warning sign for the disease.

Telephone Pioneers donate time, labor to Fort Davis site

Staff Report

Volunteers from the Texas Pride Chapter #22 of the Telephone Pioneers of America/Southwestern Bell/AT&T will donate their time and labor to make visiting Fort Davis National Historic Site in Texas more enjoyable for persons with disabilities, seniors and families with young children.

The volunteers from around West Texas will build a wooden walkway surrounding an enlisted men's barracks beginning Aug. 15 with 20 to 40 volunteers expected to work Aug. 20-21. Visitors with mobility impairments or families using strollers will be able to easily tour around the historic barracks used from 1869-91 when the volunteers complete their work.

The Telephone Pioneers of America, the nation's largest industry-based volunteer organization consisting of current and retired telephone company employees, has completed numerous similar projects in National Parks since adopting the "Easy Access Park Challenge" program in 1992. The Easy Access program began in 1989 by the National Park Foundation with the goal of improving accessibility in each National Park area every year.

The National Park Foundation is the official nonprofit partner of the National Park Service. Dedicated to helping meet the needs of the country's 367 National Parks, the foundation was chartered by Congress in 1967 to channel private resources into the Parks. The foundation awards more than $2 million in grants each year to support education, visitor services and volunteer activities to preserve and enhance the Parks.

For more information, contact Jerry Yarbrough, superintendent of Fort Davis National Historic Site, at (915) 426-3224.

LONDON: Inexpensive trip to England possible

(From 1E)

Proof of student status or a Youth Card will entitle you to a 33 percent discount on regular fares. Fortunately for those over 26, there is no age limit for students — have student card, will travel (cheaply).

Internationally, students probably get the best possible deals. Student travel organizations such as "STA" or "Council Travel" can help the budget traveler with cheap accommodations and flights throughout the world. However, the discounts do not stop there. Major European cities such as London are full of universities and colleges with thousands of students. Bars, clubs, theaters, cinemas (movie theaters) all cater to this source of revenue by offering substantial discounts on admission, drinks, etc. All that one needs is a student card.

The two main expenses of any trip are the flights and accommodations. Cheap flights are available if you book far enough in advance and you push your travel agent into researching "bucket shop" prices. But accommodations are a bit trickier because on the whole hotels are very expensive and motels do not exist in England.

Reasonable deals do exist on packages of air fares and accommodations. London can be yours for about $1,000 for a 10-day trip. The down side is that one is tied to a particular hotel and location for the entire trip.

Another option is to find an inexpensive bed and breakfast establishment. These are often private homes with one or two rooms for rent and can vary a great deal in terms of value and quality. The advantage of these places is that they are often quite cheap, clean and comfortable, and provide visitors with a ready source of information about where and where not to go.

Probably the best deals are to be found in the wide rang of hostels, students accommodations, Youth Hostels and dormitories that exist throughout London. These can cost as little as $10 to $20 per night, and although they vary in quality, on the whole they are clean and comfortable.

BUDGET PLACES to stay can be found through student organizations both in the U.S. and in London itself. Other good sources of information are guide books (Frommer's publish an excellent guide for less than $20), student publications or one of the many Travel Information centers in London.

One source not often heard about in America is the wide range of services that cater to existing expatriate populations in London. The Australian and New Zealand communities in London are the best organized and publish a variety of magazines and newspapers designed to help foreign nationals survive in London. Magazines such as TNT are to be found for free at railway stations and on news stands all over central London. In them, the budget traveler will find lists of apartments to rent, cheap hotels and hostels, as well as a range of other information about life in London such as the address of the next free party.

One of the most immediate concerns that visitors to London have is how to move around one of the biggest metropolitan areas in the world without a car. Geographically, London is about the same size as the Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex, but is has approximately four times the population, at about 11 million people.

Fortunately, Londoners are well served with a good public transport system which includes underground trains (the "Tube") and the famous red double-decker buses. Although commuters frequently complain that the service is too old (the underground was first built in the late 19th century), and too crowded (about 3 million people use it daily), it is ideal for seeing the capital on a budget.

The most cost effective way of getting around is to buy a Weekly Travelcard (about $15 for travel within central London). These passes give you unlimited travel after 9:30 a.m. both on the buses and on the Tube.

This year is the 300th anniversary of the London Taxi. Famous throughout the world for their distinctive design and color scheme (99 percent are black), London cabs are a safe, if rather expensive, way of getting home once the public transport system has shut for the night.

LONDON TAXI drivers are unlike any other cab drivers in the world because before they are allowed to own a cab, they have to pass the "knowledge." This is an intensive three-year course, reputedly harder to pass than any university degree in the country, which involves learning virtually every single street, hotel, theater, club and place of interest in central London.

It therefore comes as no surprise to many Londoners that taxi drivers are often found winning the English equivalent of Jeopardy.

London as a city has grown from an ancient walled town to become one of the world's greatest cities. As it has grown, it has incorporated all of the towns and villages that once surrounded it. This has given each separate area of London its own unique flavor and has contributed to the archaic and confusing layout of London streets.

Even native Londoners swear by their "A to Z" (pronounced A 2 Zed), a novel-sized book of maps, as a way of getting around. A visitor who does not purchase one of these maps is at a considerable disadvantage, not least because different areas in London will have streets of the same name. For example, there are 12 "High Streets' and five "High Roads" in central London alone. One navigates by using the name of the original village, such as Chiswick High Road.

The ancient Britons had already founded a village on the shores of the river Thames before the Romans invaded England in the first century AD. Some visiting Americans might argue that the London they find seems as if it has not changed a great deal since that time. At least this is the kind of comment heard when Americans try to find ice in large quantities, a cold American beer or a shower one stands up in.

This is all part of the charm of England. Everything seems to be very old, and on the whole, it is.

CENTRAL TO THE social life of every community in Great Britain is the English pub. Shortened from the official name of "public house," these are more than just more bars, but rather social institutions that have been around for hundreds of years.

Drinking in England is taken very seriously, and very different to its counterpart in America. The pub is where one goes to meet friends, have a meal, listen to music and of course have a drink, and pubs tend to be well established places with their own histories. For example, there is a pub in North London which still boasts of its past life as one of the biggest (and best) bordellos in 18th century Europe.

Immediate causes for concern for Americans drinking beer in England include: the legal drinking age, 18 years old with little or no proof of age required; the quantity of beer sold, the one-pint glass is the usual measurement; the style of the beer, traditionally is is a dark, non-carbonated, full-bodied ale; and the way in which it is served, at cellar temperature (read warm).

The quality of the food and drink in pubs is taken very seriously; indeed, many a historic pub has lost its landlord because of poorly served beer.

With over 5,000 pubs in London alone, one is never far from a great evening out, but a good pub to try is the King's Head on Upper St. N1. This cheerfully scruffy, Victorian pub caters to a wide spectrum of people with its cosmopolitan atmosphere and reasonable priced beer (expect to pay about $2.50 per pint).

This is one of the very popular theater pubs and is a great place for an entire evening out — meet friends for a drink (or make some new ones there), then move into the theater. The theater and restaurant are one and the same thing, so enjoy a play with your entree. After the play finishes, move back into the pub in time for the nightly band to start. An eclectic mix of rhythm and blues, rock and folk music is the norm.

Last orders is at 10:50 p.m. (only clubs can stay open longer), by which time you might have realized that you have been charged for your beers in shillings (predecimal currency), a quirk of the King's Head's proprietor.

WITH OVER 2,000 years of history in one city, there is no shortage of sightseeing to do. The trick is in avoiding the tourist traps while still seeing everything you want to. There are two ways of doing this: either have friends in London who will show you around, or buy a good travel guide before you go. The famous sights such as the Tower of London, Trafalgar Square, Buckingham Palace and Piccadilly Circus are all easy to find, but there are a lot of other options.

Walking tours are becoming very popular as a way of seeing specific areas or investigating themes. For example, the London Tourist Board has a list of a whole host of tours which range in content from famous murder sites to examples of different church architecture.

Travel guides can point you in the direction of lesser known sights, but in order to find out what is going on in London, the well-advised traveler will find a copy of Time Out magazine. This weekly listings magazine is the most comprehensive in London and is regarded by many as the bible of entertainment. It covers virtually every event in London from political rallies to concerts and exhibitions and it is very accurate. It will tell you which films are showing where, and give you the price of your discounted student admission. For the traveler on a budget, it is especially useful because it lists all of the free events in London, of which there are many.

No matter what you are interested in, whether you want to go to a transvestite bar or a poetry reading, listen to a string quartet or slam dance to a punk band, or just shop, eat and travel back through time, London has it all.

Communicate more effectively

Associated Press

In some relationships, couples fall into a pattern in which one partner can't get the other to commit to anything — from what color to paint the kitchen to when to have a baby. The result is that she — it is often, though by no means always the woman who takes on this role after marriage — begins to nag to get her partner to become more involved. The more she nags, however, the more likely he is to avoid the issue altogether and withdraw. This sets up a cycle of nagging and withdrawal that if not corrected can be very destructive to the relationship. If you find yourself on the nagging end of a relationship like this, Ladies' Home Journal magazine suggests you try the following steps to break the pattern:

■ Set a time for a discussion about the problem that will be free of interruptions and when you are both relaxed and awake. Go for a walk, or talk after the kids are in bed.

■ Use 'I' statements. Instead of saying "You're never home" or "Why do you do this to me?" say "I love you and I miss you when you're gone so much. I hope we can find a way to spend more time together."

ANNIVERSARIES

Byrds honored for 50th anniversary

Charles and Anna Byrd celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a reception Saturday at Fellowship Hall of St. Mark's United Methodist Church. Hosts were their children.

Byrd and the former Anna Katherine Rowell were married March 20, 1944, in Oberlin, Kan. They have four children — Carol Hall of Lubbock, Bob Byrd of Brush Prairie, Wash.; Cathy Schlemmer of St. Simons Isle, Ga.; and Betty Lou LaCaza of Barnhart, Mo. — as well as 10 grandchildren.

Byrd served with the Army Air Corps in England during World War II. He earned a business degree from Texas Technological College (now Texas Tech University) in 1950 and the couple moved to Midland. Byrd was employed with Atlantic Pipeline, the City of Midland and Wilkinson Realty. He retired from Brazco Development in 1983. His wife worked for Midland Independent School District and retired from First National Bank in 1983.

L.C. and Veda Briley

Couple celebrates 50th anniversay

L.C. and Veda Briley of Midland were guests of honor at a reception in celebration of their 50th anniversary Saturday at Main Street Church of Christ Family Center. Hosts were their children and grandchildren.

Briley and the former Veda Wheat were married Aug. 12, 1944, in Winters. They have three sons — Londale Briley of Odessa, Ronald Briley of Ingram and Bryan Briley of Corpus Christi — and nine grandchildren.

At the time of their wedding, Briley was serving in the U.S. Navy and was stationed in California. The couple moved to Midland in 1945. Briley was employed with the U.S. Postal Service from August 1945 to December 1980. The couple are members of Main Street Church of Christ.

Riley was from Indiana

GREENFIELD, Ind. (AP) — James Whitcomb Riley, a lawyer's son who won fame as the "Hoosier Poet," was born here in 1849. During his career, he was a sign painter, an actor in a medicine show, composer, playwright and journalist.

Riley wrote many poems, several in pure English, but most in the country dialect of Indiana. Among his works are "The Ole Swimmin' Hole" and "Even More Poems." (1883) Riley, whose poems appeared widely in newspapers, also traveled about the country, lecturing and reading his verses. He died in 1916.

Modify seating for comfort when traveling

CHICAGO (AP) — An overnight plane ride or a long train trip often can cause lower back and neck discomfort. Since most seats are designed for space needs, it is up to the passenger to modify the chair for comfortable seating, say travel consultants.

Try placing a small pillow, a rolled-up towel, or a blanket in the hollow of your back to keep it from flattening out. A modified pelvic tilt — putting your hands on your hips and pushing your pelvis forward — will also help.

Then, place a smaller pillow or towel behind your neck and recline your chair to help alleviate neck discomfort. Finally, get up at least once every hour and move around.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Tips can help improve local vegetable garden crops

By Deborah A. Benge

When it comes to the vegetable garden, much can go wrong. Finding out what went wrong and what to do about it can be a little difficult. Let's take a look at some of the current problems that plague the most commonly grown vegetables at this time of year.

Benge

BEANS

■ Brown leaves or leaf margin: Crispy brown leaves or leaf margins are common in beans that are suffering from high salts. Salts come from the water, fertilizer and soil. If salty water gets on the leaves, these sensitive plants can crisp overnight. Keep the water off leaves by using drip, soaker or flood irrigation. Reducing or avoiding fertilizers with high salt indexes (23-0-0 or 21-0-0) can reduce salts, and watering deeply can leach excess slats out of the soil.

■ Yellow leaves and stunted growth: Plants like these may need additional nitrogen, could be infested with spider mites, may have root knot nematodes or be setting in wet soils. Identify the problem and take appropriate action.

CANTALOUPE

■ Leaves curled or distorted: Aphids may be on the leaves. Look on the underneath side and spray with strong sprays of water, insecticidal soaps or recommended insecticides.

■ Yellow spots on oldest leaves: Downy mildew fungus which can be treated with a fungicide recommended for use on cantaloupe and to treat downy mildew.

■ White talcum-like powder: If you see this on the leaves, it's probably powdery mildew fungus, which can be treated with recommended fungicides.

■ Fruit small and poor quality: Low soil fertility and dry soils can cause these. Side-dressing with nitrogen and maintaining soil moisture during the early growth stages will reduce this problem from occurring.

■ Fruit cracked or bland tasting: Too much water near the time of fruit maturity will cause fruit to crack open and/or develop a bland taste. Use proper soil moisture management, especially close to harvest time.

CUCUMBER

■ Fruit gourdy, misshapen: Low soil moisture, high temperatures, low fertility or disease can all cause this. Identify the stress and correct the ones that you have some control over.

■ Bitter fruit: This too is caused by stress. Inadequate soil fertility or soil moisture stress can cause this. Side-dress with nitrogen or manage water more carefully to correct.

■ Blooms but no fruit: This can be caused by two things — no female blooms, which will be corrected with time, or no bees or other pollinators present. If flowers are not getting pollinated, you may need to take pollen from the male flowers on a cotton swab and transfer to the female blooms to set fruit. Or you can plant seedless varieties which don't need pollination.

OKRA

■ Plants stunted or poor color: Low fertility or cool temperatures can cause this. At this time you can rule out the cool temperatures and consider side-dressing plants with nitrogen. Root knot nematodes can cause these same symptoms. Pull up one or two plants and look for the presence of galls or knots on the roots.

■ Plants die overnight: This is caused by a soil-borne fungus called cotton root rot. Plants die quickly with leaves hanging on. There's no cure for this, so try relocating your okra to another area.

■ Small black bugs: Small black bugs and sticky leaves are indications of aphids. Strong sprays of water, insecticidal soaps or recommended insecticides help.

PEPPERS

■ Small and misshapen fruit: High temperatures and low soil fertility can cause these. Nothing can be done about the temperatures, but side-dressing with nitrogen will keep peppers productive after they begin to bloom and set fruit. Keep soil evenly moist as well.

■ Water soaked areas on fruit: This is caused by sunscald and there are no practical solutions.

SOUTHERN PEAS

■ Large vines, few blooms: This is pretty typical of high temperatures and long days. Cooler weather will see your vines turn productive, This can also be caused by excess soil fertility, so preplant fertilizer rates should be cut a little. One other contributing factor is excess soil moisture in the early stages of plant growth. Decide which is the culprit and take corrective steps.

■ Leaves distorted: Leaves that are twisted, curled and puckered can be caused by thrips insects. Control with malathion or diazinon.

■ Lower leaves brown: This can be caused by spider mites. Tap leaves out over a white paper and watch patiently for movement. If mites are present, spray with recommended insecticide.

SQUASH

■ Plants wilt and die: Low soil moisture, nematodes, squash vine borer and squash bugs can all cause this. Identify the problem and take the proper steps to correct. Thiodan will help control squash bugs and squash vine borer.

■ Fruit shrivel: This is caused by a lack of complete pollination. If there are no pollinators present, you may need to do the pollinating with a cotton swab, transferring pollen from the male flower to the female flower.

■ Fruit multi-colored: This is caused by a virus called squash mosaic. There is no practical control and infected plants should be removed.

■ Fruit rots and whiskers: This is a fruit rot fungus and it can be avoided by eliminating overcrowding of plants, overwatering and poor drainage.

TOMATO

■ Curiously mottled fruit: The most common causes of this are virus diseases which have no cures. Pull infected plants and discard. Another pest that can cause similar damage is stink bugs which can be ignored or sprayed for.

■ Blooms but no fruit: At this time it is due to high day and night temperatures. August and September should see better fruit set with cooler temperatures.

■ Lower leaves mottling or browning: This could easily be caused by spider mites. Strong sprays of water, insecticidal soap or recommended insecticides will help. Tomato pin worm can also cause lower leaves to turn brown, with some leaf mining and larva evident. They are difficult to control, but regular sprays of diazinon or thiodan will help.

■ Worms: There are several, including hornworm, fruit worm and even pinworm. All except the pinworm can easily be controlled with handpicking or Bt insecticide (a very safe organic pesticide).

■ Fruit cracks: Common this time of year due to extreme heat. Also common in large fruited varieties. Keep soils properly irrigated and use a four-inch layer of mulch.

WATERMELON

■ Fruit misshapen: Moisture stress is the common culprit. Watering properly, using mulches, growing plants on the proper spacing and preparing the soil properly can all help with this problem.

■ Large white tasteless center: White heart of melon is caused by excess soil fertility. Avoid applying too much nitrogen when preparing soil and side-dressing.

■ End of fruit shrivels and blackens: This is caused by blossom end rot. Soils that are too wet or too dry or fluctuate from these two extremes will often have this problem. Water properly and mulch.

■ Fruit lacks flavor: Watering or raining too much close to harvest time will cause fruit flavor to be bland. Water properly and pay close attention near harvest time.

These are just a few of the problems that might plague your vegetables at this time of year. There are a few problems that can be seen in many vegetables, including root knot nematodes, aphids, spider mites, low soil fertility and improper watering. In the cucurbit family (vining crops), pollination is often a problem but easy to solve. If you have vegetable woes, go by your local County Extension office and ask for the Easy Gardening vegetable series.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Windermere England's largest lake

WINDERMERE, England (AP) — Picturesque Lake Windermere, which inspired poets William Wordsworth, Robert Southey and Samuel Coleridge, is England's largest lake.

Located in the northwest, it covers almost 6 square miles and is from 30 to more than 200 feet deep. Wooded hills rise to 1,000 feet around the lake, blending with distant mountains to the north and west. Thousands of people come each year to visit Windermere.

DEAR ABBY

Walking around in 'the buff' makes bashful wife blush

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old woman who has been married for seven years. My problem is that I refuse to be naked in front of my husband.

Van Buren

I am not fat, but I used to be overweight. I exercise every day, but I'm flabby, and I just don't look good walking around naked. My husband tells me that I am the only woman in the world who won't let her husband see her naked. I tell him that's the reason there are so many divorces — women today can't compete with the women their husbands see on TV.

Abby, am I the only woman in the world with this problem? — BASHFUL

DEAR BASHFUL: You are certainly not the only woman in the world with this problem. Women who compare their bodies to those firm, voluptuous beauties their husbands see on TV are understandably reluctant to walk around naked. It's not a serious hang-up — unless your husband feels seriously cheated, which I doubt. In fact, there's something to be said for keeping a little mystery about oneself; it can be provocative and quite enchanting.

DEAR ABBY: About 10 years ago, you had a letter in your column titled "That's Why I Married a Farmer." I cut it out and kept it for the longest time because I am a farmer's daughter, and my daughter also married a farmer.

If you can find it, please run it again. Thank you. — A FARMER'S DAUGHTER IN IOWA

DEAR DAUGHTER: That column originally ran in September 1984. And since it's as true today as it was then, here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a city girl who's attending college in Ames, Iowa. I've fallen in love with a young man whose father was a farmer, and he intends to follow in his father's footsteps.

What are my chances for happiness as a farmer's wife? Do you have any statistics on this? — IN LOVE WITH WALLY

DEAR IN LOVE: No statistics, but love being what it is, statistics wouldn't help much.

A reader sent a charming piece. It may not be your bale of hay, but if it is, good luck to you and Wally.

"I wanted a guy who could sit and have a cup of coffee with me at 5:00 a.m. when the only sounds to be heard are crickets, cows and creaking floorboards — that's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who would crack a joke and make me laugh when I am covered with dirt and cow manure — that's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could get out of a nice warm bed when it is 30 below, start up the tractor and plow out the driveway so the school bus can get through — that's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could entertain four kids, a dog and a nerve-wracked wife when the power goes off, the pipes freeze and everything quits during a two-day blizzard — that's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could put up with in-laws, outlaws and new tax laws, and still be open-minded and openly loving — that's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could count his blessings when he's depressed, count his children when he feels poor, and count on God to make it all work out — that's why I married a farmer."

DEAR ABBY: This may be silly, but I need an answer. I have three sons, ages 5 years, 2 years and 10 months old. "Ricky," my 2-year-old, loves to play with dolls. (He has three.) Some people make wisecracks when they see Ricky with his dolls, but he would rather play with dolls than cars or trucks. I have never thought there was a problem, but some people say it would make him "funny" when he gets older.

My mother replies that if more parents would let their sons play with dolls, there would be more men willing to play the father role, instead of expecting the mother to do it all.

Ricky's "babies" are girl babies — he even tries to feed them. He watches me with his baby brother and mimicks everything I do.

Is this a bad thing? Or is it good for a boy to act so maternal? — CONCERNED MOMMY

DEAR CONCERNED MOMMY: If you are really concerned that this will cause your son to have homosexual tendencies, you need not give it another thought. Homosexuals are born, not made.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Hurt and Disappointed": Abby, I agree with you wholeheartedly. One card signed by a large group of friends and co-workers is a great demonstration of respect and friendship. You may use my name. — MARJORIE MOURNING, LAS VEGAS

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor and I have been having a dispute over a petition he asked me to sign. Abby, all I did was tell him I would have to read it carefully first, because I would never sign anything without reading it.

He became very angry, said I had insulted him, and inferred that I didn't trust him. Abby, that was not true. I do trust him; I just wanted to know what I was signing.

Was I right or wrong? — WAUKEGAN READER

DEAR READER: You were not only right, you are the kind of person every lawyer would like to have for a client.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

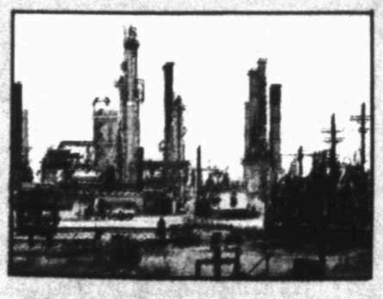
OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, AUGUST 7, 1994 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING



The Pride Petroleum refinery in Abilene has long been at the center of Eastern Shelf production.

Industry activity

– Both oil prices and drilling activity have picked up.

Concerns that an oil workers strike in Nigeria, the 10th largest producing country in the world, would further hamper exports, sent prices past the $20 level early last week. As the week progressed, reports that Nigerian officials would meet strikers demands and free President Moshood K.O. Abiola, whose election was annulled by the military, sent prices lower.

Late in the week, September contracts closed at $20.14 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The posted price closed at $18.75 a barrel.

Natural gas prices held steady if a little weaker, closing late int he week at $1.76 per thousand cubic feet.

Drilling activity was mixed in the final week of July, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count rose three to 118 for the week, just below the 121 seen a year ago.

Eddy County, N.M. was the most active county in the Basin with 15 rigs, followed by Lea County, N.M. with 10 rigs and Midland County with nine.

The national rig count slipped eight to 771, falling below the year-ago level of 776.

Environmental problems are the biggest concern of Eastern Shelf operators says Morris Burns, WeTOGA executive.

Bird nests halt oil exploration

Says Morris Burns, executive vice president West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association (WeTOGA): "Environmental regulation remains our biggest concern on the Eastern Shelf."

Having to answer to multiple agencies including: Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission, Texas Railroad Commission, Environmental Protection Agency, and the Fish & Wildlife Commission is not working. We would like to answer to one agency, and if we had our choice it would be the Texas Railroad Commission. They seem to know what's going on."

Burns says the Golden Cheek Warbler is the latest environmental controversy in West Central Texas. The national Fish & Wildlife Commission has forbidden the cutting of cedar trees in 33 counties, that bound I-35 on the eastside and extend into West Central Texas. Not only has the rule cost hundreds of jobs for "cedar hackers," who cut the trees, it has also created serious problems for the oil and gas industry.

"The trees cannot be cut, because the Golden Cheek Warbler, which nests in Live Oak trees uses the bark of cedar trees to build its nest. That means operators cannot clear drilling locations or build roads to them," says Burns.

"The building of dikes around tank batteries is becoming a major cost of doing business. The Environmental Protection Agency has hired a private firm to go around and make sure that all producers have dikes around tanks, even though they are miles from any navigable water and pose no threat."

Chasing after the Tannehill

■ Area's most elusive target now easier to hit with 3-D seismic.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

An Abilene oil company says 3-D technology is on the verge of making one of West Central Texas' traditional oil producing formations more popular and profitable than ever.

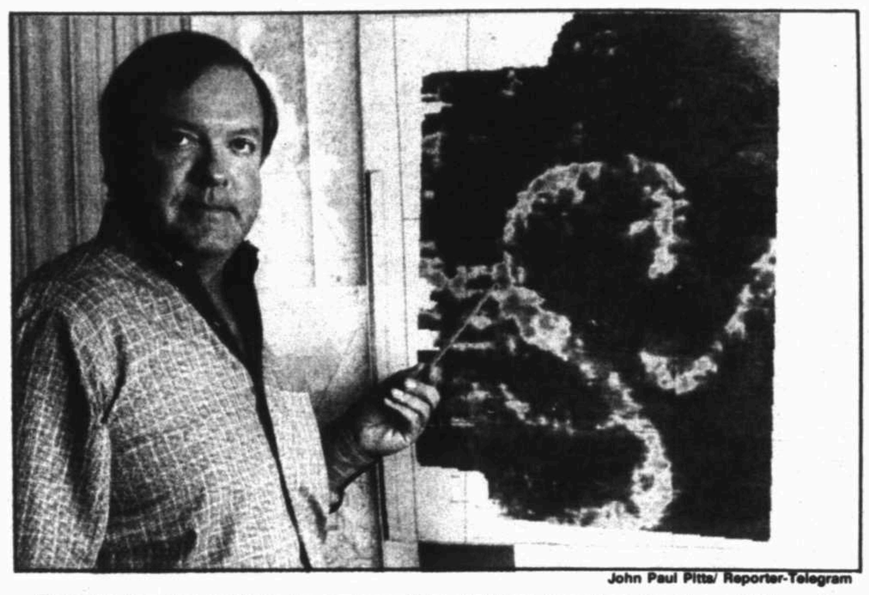
In years past, the Tannehill formation, a meandering and elusive sand channel, has been one of the most popular targets for drillers in this productive region.

The former river channels, which vary in depth from 300 feet in Shackleford County to 3,200 feet in Stonewall County, are similar to the Morrow sands of New Mexico in that they are often loaded with hydrocarbons, but always hard to find.

While there is extensive Tannehill production in West Central Texas, producers in the area say most of it has been found by pure luck and accident.

"Anyone who ever went looking for Tannehill channels eventually ended up with a drinking problem," said Logan McGill, manager for Hack Drilling in Abilene.

Jim Polk, president West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association, confirms the elusive nature of the Tannehill: "We once drilled a successful Tannehill well, moved the rig 26 feet — just on the other side of the mud pits — and drilled a dry hole."



John Paul Pitts/ Reporter-Telegram

Robert Jordan points to a possible drilling location in the middle of a twisting Tannehill channel, as exposed by 3-D seismic. The channel images are arrived at by using time-slice analysis.

But now with the advent of 3-D seismic on the Eastern Shelf of West Central Texas, some oil and gas operators are not only deliberately looking for the elusive Tannehill, they are doing it in a big way. Among those looking for the snake-like formation are: Jordan Engineering, Arch Petroleum, Meridian Oil Co., Brigham Oil & Gas and Midland Oil & Gas.

Jordan Engineering, a father-son oil company based in Abilene now has 66,000 acres under lease in northwest Stonewall County and is about to launch the biggest Tannehill search ever in the area. Meridian Oil Co. has a tract of similar acreage leased to the south of the Jordan acreage and also plans on looking for Tannehill.

"The Tannehill will be our first choice, then the Pennsylvania reef and then the Ellenburger," said Robert Jordan, a principal in the father-son oil company.

Technology expanding opportunity

■ Seismic, polymers, horizontal drilling, coiled tubing all are helping to find and make more oil and gas in West Central Texas.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

While 3-D technology came along just in time — perhaps just in time to save the oil and gas industry of the Eastern Shelf from insignificance — other technology is also making a difference, says Jon Rex Jones, President of Jones Co. Ltd. one of the largest independent oil companies on the Eastern Shelf.

■ Please see related story/3F

Besides exploration Jones said his company is using 3-D technolgy to improve production.

"We are using it to model Caddo reservoirs in Shackleford County. With it we are able to do reservoir characteristic studies and to better pick our injectors and producers in waterfloods."

Jones said the unique geology of Shackleford County — where the Eastern Shelf ends and the Bend Arch begins — is a candidate for both 3-D oil and gas plays, and Jones says his Albany-based company is involved in both.

He said Shackleford County was "hot as a firecracker" and that he expected the entire eastern part of the county to be shot with 3-D seismic in another year. He noted that a 55,000 acre shoot was now going on in the eastern part of the county.

The Albany native also noted that dual swath seismic, a less expensive form of seismic technology, was also

SEISMIC PLAY DOMINATES EASTERN SHELF

Advent of 3-D improves outlook

By John Paul Pitts

Things are looking up on the Eastern Shelf. Two years ago, the mood was somber as operators clung to mature and declining production and saw few development or exploration opportunities ahead.

But that was before 3-D. Today, the 3-D seismic technology dominates the scene throughout West Central Texas, touching in some way every single business in the area, and reversing the mood and fortunes of oil operators.

"Drilling would have been off 30-40 percent this year if it had not been for 3D seismic, said Jim Polk, president West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association, who noted that the hottest counties for 3-D are Nolan, Stonewall, Shackleford and Fisher counties.

Logan McGill, manager for Hack Drilling agreed: "Thanks to 3-D, are drilling about 30-40 wells in the second and third quarters of this year — all based on 3-D seismic, which now accounts for about 40 percent of our business." McGill said his company was finally beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel for the first time in years.

David Ice, a partner in Crescent Supply, said that with 3-D activity and better oil prices, operators now have more money in their pockets and are giving more attention to wells they let a few months ago. "Go around to the well service yards here and you don't see many rigs in the yard," said Ice.

"It appears that we are now in the process of re-shooting every single mile of every county in the area," says John Rex Jones, president Jones Co. Ltd. of Albany.

Lane Frizzell, a partner in Enrich Oil Corp., sees a new a new day for exploration on the Eastern Shelf because of 3-D seismic.

3-D casts shadow over acquisitions

The advent of 3-D seismic on the Eastern Shelf has had an impact on the acquisition market, say Abilene operators.

"A lot of people are buying, but no one is selling," says Dorman Farmer, a geologist.

One investor reportedly came to Abilene with $40 million to spend for producing properties, but was able to spend only $1 million.

"We sold one property recently, but only because we were able to realize a 250 percent return on our money, whereas it would have taken 48 months to get that return by producing it," said Lane Frizzell, a partner in Enrich Oil Corp. who speculates that many are buying properties on the prospect of higher oil prices.

That, and 3-D development and exploration potential, is also the reason Abilene independents are holding on to properties. Since most acquisitions are major oil companies passing properties down the chain to independents, and since most operators in Abilene are independents there are few properties that change hands.

First shot fired in natural gas revolution

Pitts

By the rude bridge that arched the flood, there once the embattled farmers stood that fired the shot heard 'round the world.

So goes Ralph Waldo Emerson's hymn of 1837, commemorating the Battle of Concord.

Another historic shot was fired this week. It was not at Concord, and it was not by embattled farmers, but it is very likely to be heard round the world — or at least throughout the energy industry.

The location was a media event at New York's trendy River Cafe in Brooklyn, and it was the natural gas industry that fired a shot that many say could lead to a revolutionize in the domestic energy industry.

The shot came in the form of an announcement by the American Gas Association that it had produced a natural gas heating and cooling unit (heat pump) for the express purpose of taking sizable energy market share from the electric utilities.

In the past, natural gas utilities and electric utilities have shared in the light commercial and home heating market, but when it came to cooling, that service fell almost exclusively to the electric utilities.

A lack of appropriate, economical and efficient technology had denied natural gas a significant portion of the lucrative cooling market. Gas cooling systems developed 30 years ago failed to capture significant market share.

But now, after 10 years of research and development, the American Gas Association, American Gas Cooling Center, Gas Research Institute and York International say they have finally developed technology that not only allows natural gas to compete head-to-head with electric air conditioning but even to exceed it in operating cost, comfort and reliability.

It is good news for the natural gas industry, because a technological breakthrough that could steal market share from electric utilities could increase natural gas demand by trillions of cubic feet, resulting not only in a bigger share of the energy pie, but improved and more stable natural gas prices. That in turn could result in a push to add natural gas reserves and stimulate activity in an ailing oil and gas industry.

"In terms of technology, the Triathlon unit, built by York International, is heads and shoulders above conventional heat pumps using electricity," says Mark Stultz, a spokesman for AGA, "and we fully expect it to add significant burner tip business for the natural gas industry."

Stultz would not speculate as to how much market share natural gas heat pumps might eventually gain, but said he expected most of the new business would come in the residential and light commercial markets, and in areas hard hit by escalating electric rates.

"We expect to see the units first in places with very high rates such as New York, Phoenix, California and some parts of Texas. That's where payouts will be realized." He said some field tests had indicated that the gas units could save as much as a 50 percent

Completions down in first half

WASHINGTON — The number of U.S. wells completed during the first six months of the year declined by more than 20 percent, says American Petroleum Institute reports.

According to API's Quarterly Completion Report, some 9,891 oil wells, gas wells and dry holes were completed during the first half of 1994.

CHASE: The elusive

Jordan says there are three reasons for the Tannehill revival: One, Tannehill channels are easily detected using 3-D time-slice analysis. Two, geological knowledge of the channels and the presence of hydrocarbons within them is growing rapidly with the drilling of each prospect, and last the economics of Tannehill production is very good.

"Initially we didn't go looking for Tannehile, we used 3-D to look for Ellenburger and reef development pospects. It was purely theoretical that one could find Tannehill channels using 3-D seismic, but as we began to apply time-slice analysis, a procedure which literally peels away the earth layer by layer, it jumped right out at us. We could clearly see the channels," said Jordan.

Jordan Engineering plans to shoot 16,500 acres (25 square miles) of its 66,000 acre leasehold this year and drill four wells to confirm the accuracy of its imaging. The remainder of the acreage will be shot with 3-D seismic, next spring. Jordan says the four test wells, will in no way condemn the entire prospect.

Rumor has it that Meridian, who holds nearly all its information tight, has already staked four wells on its tract to the east.

At the termination of the project when all acreage has been evaluated, Jordan says his company hopes to have conservatively developed 30-40 good prospects, but that the overall number of wells developed from those prospects could number in the hundreds. "We are looking at this as a 20 year project, and we conservatively hope to identify numerous two and three well fields plus several million barrel fields with this technology," Jordan said.

Jordan said Tannehill production tends to be both prolific and longlife, with a typical discovery well making 100 barrels — sometimes for decades. Jordan said his company had some wells that were drill eight years ago to make 80 barrels per day and are still making 80 barrels per day. He noted that his father, founder of Jordan Engineering, had discovered the Pruitt-Henson field a number of years ago and that the field, one of the largest Tannehill fields in the region, had already produced one million barrels of oil and had another million to go. He also pointed out that the Pruitt-Henson covers 640 acres and has only 23 wells.

A characteristic of such fields, he noted, is that in a field of six or eight wells most of the production may come from only one or two of the wells.

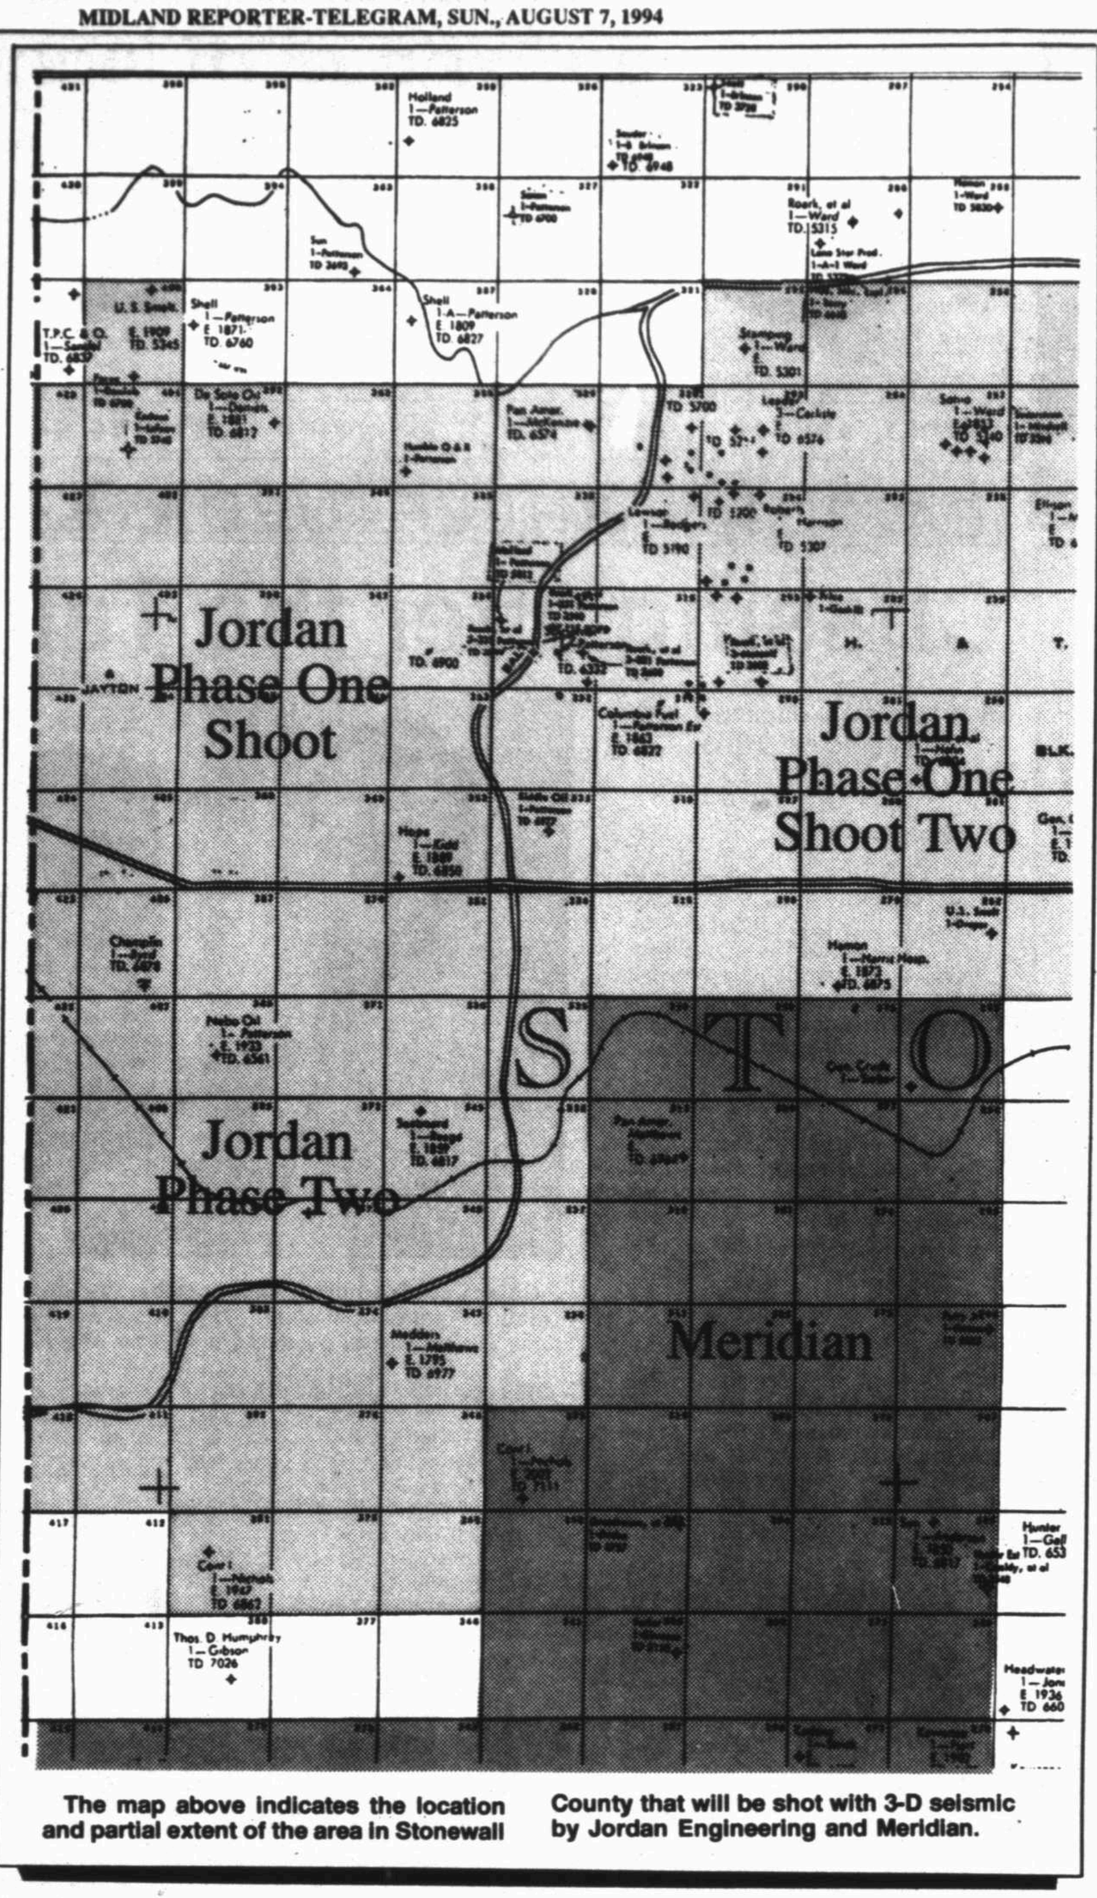
Typical completions for a 3,200 foot Tannehill well average $110,000 to drill and complete. About $55,000 is for drilling, but Jordan hopes to reduce that cost by drilling slim hole test wells. "With slim hole drilling, I think we can test a well for $25,000."

To increase its successful discovery rate the company also plans to use geochem in prospective drilling areas, especially in qualifying wells in the point bar system of the channels. Jordan said all the productive Tannehill wells are not always in the middle of the channel, that some of them are in the geological (point bar) system located on the inside curve of the ancient channels. "By the time we have drilled 12 wells and passed the learning curve, I think we will have our success rate in the Tannehill up to 75 percent," he informed.

Jordan said the ability of 3-D seismic to locate Tannehill channels is one of the best things that has happened to West Central Texas in decades. "This play is very hot."

He said Jordan Engineering didn't intend to become so big in the play and that the size of it has limited the company's ability to find partners, but it could not resist the opportunity. "Frankly, we could not find any of the 66,000 acres that we could condemn as not offering opportunity. When you look at the prospects of finding Tannehill channels, Pennsylvanian reefs and Ellenburger structures within the same area, it looks very good."

Because of the success of Jordan Engineering and others Jim Polk says it is almost impossible to sell a Tannehill prospect on the Eastern Shelf without 3-D data. "The first thing they will ask you is if you have 3-D."



The map above indicates the location and partial extent of the area in Stonewall County that will be shot with 3-D seismic by Jordan Engineering and Meridian.

JONES: Talks tech

being used in the country in conjunction with geochem and was having good results. "In some places dual swath is equally as effective as 3-D. The only difference is that dual swatch does not give you that great reservoir of data for future studies."

He noted that at least one company had also had success by drilling horizontally into pinnacle reef structures discovered by 3-D seismic.

Among other technology to hit the area, Jones says coiled tubing applications and polymers are helping operators to recover more oil and gas.

Jones said Jones Co. Ltd. had successfully brought some gas wells back to life by using small diameter coiled tubing. One formerly shut-in well that was down to zero production is now producing 50 mcfd and 10 barrels of water per day on coiled tubing.

"We run 1¼-inch coiled tubing inside 2⅜-inch regular tubing. The extra velocity created by putting the same amount of water and gas into a smaller hole keeps the well from being killed."

Jones says the technique doesn't work on wells where the bottom hole pressure is below 250 psi or the amount of water produced is above 15 barrels per day. "At that point it is better to go ahead and put them on rod pump."

The veteran oil man, who with his partner brother A.V. Jones Jr. are both past presidents of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, also noted that the area was also enjoying a good degree of success with polymers in waterfloods.

"This is technology that is just now making a run across the Eastern Shelf. Polymers are being used to plug highly permeable stringers and to improve sweep efficiency in reservoirs." Jones said Ellenburger waterfloods has shown good economic results through the use of polymers.

Additionally, Jones said he was encouraged with natural gas opportunities in Shackleford County. "We just completed a conglomerate gas well last night for 1.8 million cubic feet. It was near where we had a blow out last year and had plugged the hole. We redrilled the well and made a good gas well."

SHELF: 3-D seismic activity brings revival to Eastern Shelf surface to the cambrian. A prime target he noted was pinnacle reef production in the Mississippi. "It has been yielding some good discoveries," said Polk. He noted that 3-D was the only technology that could have been able to pick out the subtle structures. "We found one pinnacle 107 feet high between two dry holes," he remarked.

One of the most active Permian Basin operators on the Eastern Shelf is Midland Oil & Gas.

"We have been using 3-D to look for the Canyon reef. Over the past two years we have shot over 175 square miles in six counties," said Ernie Gilkerson, president. "We are looking for higher relief reef — something we can see with a signature and know is productive."

While acknowledging that his success rate was over 50 percent on 20 wells, Gilkerson said was not exactly a spectacular record for 3-D, which is now enjoying success rates of up to 75-80 percent in some areas.

"We have found lots of drill sites. We have made some good wells, but we have also had problems with some wells. With 3-D you have to have a lot of good wells to make up for the expensivie seismic technology."

According to Polk, the cost to shoot 3-D in West Central Texas is now running about $25,000 per acre, a price operators are hoping to eventually get down to $10,000 per acre.

While operators are sold on 3-D they say it not the end all. "It is a good tool," says Geologist Dorman Farmer, "But there will still be a lot of dry holes drilled on 3-D."

Said Lane Frizzell "Enrich drilled five wells this year on 3-D, three were successes and two were totally dry holes. The structures were there but they didn't contain hydrocarbons."

Jim Polk: "We have had a lot of geological successes that were commercial failures," said Polk. "We found the structures, but there was no oil in them." Despite those reverses, Polk says 3-D is the first technology ever introduced on the Eastern Shelf that could condemn a prospect.

Gilkerson says 3-D is no "gut cinch" that it has to be coupled with good subsurface geology and other techniques. One technique that many operators are turning to, including Midland Oil & Gas, is geochem, a technique that measures concentrations of methane in the soil that might have leaked from underground reserves.

Enrich says it uses radar on nearly all its prospects. While radar, which detects methane concentrations, has some drawbacks according to geologists, Frizzell says it is an economical qualifier. "We own our own radar device and it doesn't cost anything to check a prospect."

All-in-all the Eastern Shelf is an excellent place to explore for oil and gas with 3-D because of shallow well economics, says Gilkerson.

"We chose the area because of the geology and the depth of the objectives. This is a place where drilling is relatively inexpensive and risk money comes easier. A $70,000 dry hole is a lot easier to swallow than a $300,000 dry hole."

There are indications that some of the risk money for 3-D activity may be coming from Canada.

Robert Jordan says some of the funds designated for acquisitions in the Canadian market may be moving into exploration in West Central Texas. "We have Canadian investors involved in our Stonewall County shoot," says Jordan. "It appears that much of the money that had been budgeted for acquisitions, which are now hard to come by, may be diverted into exploration in places like the Eastern Shelf."

For the 3-D is in its infancy on the Eastern Shelf, but it appears it will be a long time activity.

"With new 3-D data, a lot of shallow holes that were drilled in the 50s and 60s are likely to be deepened to the Ellenburger to pick up new horizons. We will also be looking at a lot of old dry holes, and we will be looking for pinnacles in some of the older fields," said Frizzell.

Jim Polk noted that many operators are under the gun with seismic options right now and will only single out only the more promising horizons for the present. "Later on I would expect that we would see this same data used to look for other targets."

PITTS: Natural gas aims for bigger share of cooling market

That, however, will not result in a rush to buy the new technology, which is not exactly cheap. The initial cost of the heat pumps are about $6,000 to $8,000 installed. But even at that price, Stultz says lower operating costs can still result in economic payouts for owners. And, for home owners who order a unit as part of new construction and add the cost into the mortgage payment, savings will be instantaneous. In the meantime, he said, owners will be able to enjoy the benefits of increased efficiency, comfort and reliability.

"This is the Cadillac of heating-cooling systems, and it's natural gas," says Gary Bedard, a spokesman for York International. While its complex and high tech components, and the fact that very few will be manufactured initially, make it expensive on the front side, Bedard says the cost should come down significantly once the volume of manufacturing increases.

Presently, York International is the only company licensed to manufacture the new gas heating-cooling units, and plans call for only 2,000 units to be produced this year, 8,000 next year and 15,000 the third year, before the company looks to expand production.

However, the technology, which was developed by American Gas Association and Gas Research Institute (GRI) can be licensed to any number of manufacturers and Stultz says that once other manufacturers get into the act, cost of the units could drop significantly. Some manufacturers, he said, may also elect to use the technology to build more economical heat pumps or air conditioning units only.

At the heart of the technology is a small lightweight Briggs & Stratton engine which runs on natural gas. The engine is reported to have such a high reliability factor that if it were a car it could rack up the equivalent of 1.6 million miles or 15 years of continuous service. Joined to the Briggs & Stratton engine is an open shaft, dual scroll compressor and a complex control package developed by Johnson Controls. The microprocessor control features a seven day programmable thermostat and a diagnostic mode for service. It regulates fan speed, engine speed, and cycling rates.

Says Bedard: "Electric air conditioners cycle on and off, but these Briggs & Stratton engine is variable speed and allows the Triathlon cooling unit to run faster or slower without cycling on and off. This results in a higher level of comfort because temperatures stay constant and the unit is continuously dehumidifying a residence or business."

Ritchie Pritty, an Energas employee in Lubbock, has had one of the York test units in his home for two years and calls it the most important technological breakthrough in decades for heating and cooling.

A former employee of TU Electric, Pritty notes that word about the new technology being developed had been around for several years and that those in marketing for the electric utility used to scoff and laugh at the notion of a heating-cooling unit powered by a Briggs & Stratton engine. "We would joke about going out in the backyard and starting it with a pull rope. I don't think anybody is laughing any more."

Pritty said the unit was the quietest and most reliable he had ever encountered. "You can't compare it to anything else."

He said West Texas was an ideal location for the new gas heating-cooling system to take root, because of high electric rates and low gas prices. "If this was strictly an air-conditioning unit, I think we could sell tons of them."

In two years of testing, Pritty says he has been able to save consistently over his neighbor who has an electric heating-cooling unit. By keeping his 1,500 square foot home at a constant 74-75 degrees through the summer, he said his bill averaged about $50 per month compared to $74 for his neighbor, for a savings of $24 per month.

Part of the electrical savings was offset by a higher natural gas bill, but overall, Pritty said he was able to save $110 per year over the two year period.

However, gas industry officials expect that savings gap to increase over the next few years as the cost of electricity continues to escalate at a much faster rate than natural gas.

Bedard points out that some utilities are already charging homes and small businesses higher peak rates. "Between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. the cost of electricity may double. Some businesses will be hit hard, and anyone who goes to work and leaves an air conditioner on during the day could get some outrageous electric bills."

He pointed out that some utilities may even greet the natural gas competion with a sigh of relief, because it will spare them the cost of building extra expensive generation for systems already overloaded, and enable both gas and electric utilities to manage peak times.

Any attempt to level out demand would certainly be a welcome relief for natural gas producers who are continually subjected to the ups and downs of seasonal pricing, which results from roller-coaster demand.

Gas cooling and heating doesn't necessarily need all of market share, but since the lines are already in the homes and businesses, it only makes good sense that it be used to handle more of the loads, said Bedard.

Hardly anyone expects natural gas heating and cooling to be an overnight success. But given the significance of the new gas technology and escalating electric rates, no one doubts that natural gas will gain a substantial share of the home heating and cooling market — perhaps 30 percent or more within a decade.

Operator counts on horizontal drilling

■ Breckenridge operator expects horizontal drilling to enhance 3-D plays.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The search for pinnacle reefs across West Central Texas could be intensified by the prospects of horizontal drilling.

Bass Energy of Breckenridge, has drilled five horizontal wells into pinnacle reef prospects with good results in each case, but says it plans further drilling to validate the drilling technology.

"We don't have enough production data yet to say exactly how these wells will do," said Jim Bass, a partner in the aggressive oil company that has been a leader in testing new concepts on the Eastern Shelf.

Bass speculates that vertical drilling recovers only about 15 percent of the reserves in place and that another 15 percent could be recovered by horizontal drilling.

"These pinnacles are heterogeneous in nature, and by drilling horizontally we are able to link up porosity stringer and fractures," said Bass. "Thus far we have succeeded in using horizontal drilling to turn some very tight, very mediocre Mississippian reef production into average pinnacle wells."

On one well, Bass said a well that had no show of hydrocarbons in the bottom 150 feet was drilled horizontally to produce 1.2 Mmcfd of gas and 14-30 barrels of condensate. Bass said the next step would be to take a prolific pinnacle well and see if they can turn it into a world class reef well with horizontal drilling.

"We don't know what we have here yet, but we think it is very good. Horizontal drilling could be the next story to be written in West Central Texas. In the next few months we will horizontally drill one of our big reef prospects than we will know."

Bass said drilling reef prospects was nothing like drilling in the Austin Chalk. "The bit goes in the direction of least resistance, despite efforts to guide it with MWD. The bit drifts up and down, breaking into porosity zones, which is exactly what you would want it to do."

He said the Missippian reef was also unlike the Horseshoe Reef Atoll where porosity is connected.

Can good reef wells be made into barn burners? Bass Energy got a good indication that that might be the case when it decided to go horizontal on an average reef producer that had already made 44,000 barrels.

"We had finished drilling the horizontal lateral and we getting ready to go in with coiled tubing to blow it out with nitrogen and acidize, when the well gave a kick and started flowing out of 5½-inch casing. I think that gave us a good indication of how good horizontal drilling can be," said Bass.

The Breckenridge operator said the well has been flowing for over three months, but would not say how much it has made.

To date Bass Energy is drilling horizontally in Shackleford and Throckmorton Counties and is the only operator using the drilling technique, but Bass says he doesn't think competition can be far behind.

In other out-front programs, Bass initiated a highly successful combination geochem and dual swath seismic project that has to date yielded at total of 150 commercial wells with a success rate of 75-80 percent.

In its shallow geochem program, the company has drilled 63 of 93 wells as successes in the Tannehil and Cook Sands. The wells average from 300-1,000 feet deep, cost $35,000 to $45,000 to drill and complete, and will produce 15-20 barrels per day.

Delhi buys West Texas gathering facilities

DALLAS — USX-Delhi Group announces that Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. has signed an agreement in principle to purchase the West Texas gathering and treating facilities of the Oasis Pipe Line Co., subject to execution of a definitive purchase agreement and receipt of necessary regulatory approvals.

in conjunction with the acquisition, Delhi plans to enter into a long-term lease for up to 100 million cubic feet per day of capacity in Oasis's 36-inch natural gas mainline from the Waha gas marketing hub in West Texas to various interconnections with other pipelines at the Katy gas marketing hub near Houston.

The assets to be acquired include the Mi Vida, Gomez, Pyote/Block 16, Rocksprings, and six other small systems located in various West Texas counties. These systems consist of approximately 600 miles of 4- to 24-inch diameter pipelines, two treating plants, 24,000 horsepower of compression and an idle processing plant. Throughput on these systems is approximately 140 Mmcfd, of which 90 Mmcfd is presently being treated at Oasis facilties.

David M. Kihneman, president of Delhi Group, said, "The acquisition of these assets will complement and strengthen our existing position while allowing Dehli to expand into new areas of West Texas with significant reserve potential. Much of the gas in this area must be treated and compressed before it can be sold to consumers. When combined with our existing facilities, these assets will give Delhi a very significant position in the gas gathering and treating business in West Texas. The lease capacity will provide Delhi with reliable access to new markets and further our ability to attract additional gas supply."

SPE conference addresses state of industry

Staff Report

Addressing the current state of the oil and gas industry will be the main concern of the 69th Annual Technical Conference and Exhibition presented by the Society of Petroleum Engineers. The conference will be September 25-28 in New Orleans.

Addressing technology, the conference has scheduled 355 papers presented in 61 sessions, covering topics ranging from drilling to development geology and geophysics, pressure-transient testing to well logging and formation evaluation, facilities engineering to offshore operations, production operations, well completions, fluid mechanics and oil recovery processes to gas technology, reservoir engineering, economics, emerging and peripheral technology to environmental, health and safety.

There will also be 11 SPE short courses offered and a geologic field trip exploring "Recent Reservoir Models — Mississippi Delta."

The keynote Management and General Interest session, set for the afternoon of September 26, will focus on the stringent economic environment in which petroleum engineers must meet their professional responsibilities and goals.

Another session, "Achieving Expectations Without Price Growth" will feature a panel of industry leaders. Session Chairman Ansel L. Condray, senior vice president of Exxon Co. U.S.A. will speak on "Challenges and Opportunities: An Introduction". Panelists Phillip J. Carroll, president of Shell Oil, will address "Re-engineering a Major Company for Improved Competitiveness" and Victor G. Beghini, president of Marathon Oil Co., will speak on "Exploring New Areas of Opportunity." Other panelists will speak on "Effectively Meeting Safety and Environmental Needs" and "Focusing the Independent."

The President's Luncheon, set for September 28, will feature SPE President E.A. Breitenbach's "State of the Society" address and the installation of Roy H. Koerner of Texaco U.S.A. as 1995 SPE president.

Jazz great Pete Fountain will be featured at the Awards Banquet, set for the evening of September 26 to honor SPE members.

Over 300 companies from all over the world are expected to exhibit products and services available to the industry in 73,000 square feet of space at the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center.

Oryx suffers $41 million loss in quarter

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy Co. lost $41 million in the second quarter as revenue fell 8 percent from the second quarter of 1993, when Oryx had a $4 million profit.

For the three months ended June 30, Oryx lost $41 million, or 43 cents per share, on revenue of $255 million. The company earned $4 million, or 3 cents per share, on $278 million in revenue in the year-ago period.

The results for the just-ended quarter include an operating loss of $31 million, a $9 million charge related to income tax accounting, and a $1 million loss on asset sales.

"We're expecting a better second half with volume increases and improving oil prices, and we are looking forward to a stronger financial position at year-end with lower debt," said Robert Hauptfuhrer, Oryx's chairman and chief executive officer.

Dallas-based Oryx is among the largest independent oil and gas companies.

For the first six months of this year, Oryx lost $181 million, or $1.88 per share, on revenue of $515 million. The company lost $3 million, or 6 cents per share, on $561 million in revenue during the first half of last year.

British Petroleum posts earnings rise

CLEVELAND (AP) — British Petroleum Co. reported a 38 percent earnings gain in the second quarter, despite lower oil prices and tighter refining profits, as the company cut its bill for taxes and interest.

The London-based company earned $554 million, or 367 million pounds, on sales of $12.54 billion. In the same period a year ago, the company earned $401 million, or 261 million pounds, on sales of $13.65 billion.

For each American Depositary Receipt — which allow U.S. investors to buy shares of BP — the company earned $1.11 before extraordinary items, up from 81 cents a year ago.

BP also said it was boosting its quarterly payout to shareholders to 2.5 pence, or 49 cents per ADR. In 1992, BP halved its dividend to 2.1 pence as part of a broad restrucuturing.

BP's operating profits from oil production were 1 percent lower, while profits from refining were 33 percent lower. BP's chemical business reversed last year's $35 million loss to post a $68 million profit.

BP, which has been paying off loans, reduced its interest costs in the quarter by 20 percent. Its tax bill dropped 22 percent.

For the first six months of the year, BP earned $1.04 billion, or 695 pounds, on revenues of $24.51 billion. In last year's first half, the company earned $770 million, or 510 million pounds, on revenues of $27.12 billion.

Earnings per ADR for the six months were $2.11 versus $1.57.

BP converted pounds to dollars at the rate of $1.54 per pound, up from $1.49 per pound a year ago.

Energy Ventures income falls sharply

HOUSTON — Energy Ventures Inc. announced income from continuing operations of $127,000 or 1 cent per share on revenues of $50,566,000 for the second quarter of 1994.

This compares to income from continuing operations of $1,431,000 or 12 cents per share on revenues of $52,136,000 for the second quarter of 1993.

Operating income for the three months ended June 30 was $3,501,000, compared to $3,778,000 in the second quarter of 1993.

Second quarter operating income at the company's contract drilling segment remained relatively unchanged from prior year levels as improvements in domestic day rates were offset by reduced levels of domestic drilling and lower operating income in the foreign drilling segment. Domestic drilling activity is expected to show significant improvement during the second half of the year. The oilfield equipment segment's results were affected by sluggish domestic and worldwide exploration and development activity coupled with a delay in certain large orders of tubular products for use in the former Soviet Union. Business volume is expected to increase in the oilfield equipment segment during the second half of 1994 as evidenced by an increase in backlog at June 30, 1994.

Domestic reserves values continue to increase

HOUSTON — Domestic reserve values continued their climb, increasing by approximately 2 percent to a median value of $4.40 per barrel of oil equivalent, from the first quarter value of $4.32.

The figures were compiled by Strevig & Associates Inc. in its "Quarterly Reserve Report."

Considering the modest levels of activity seen recently, this underscores the intense competition flourishing in the market.

The median was derived from 48 transactions, a small decline from the revised number of deals, 51, closed in the first quarter. The aggregate value of the total transactions was $385 million, a drastic decline of 67 percent from the revised aggregate of $1.17 billion traded in the first quarter.

Surprisingly, the company reported, there were not any deals over $50 million completed. Thirteen transactions represented 70 percent of the aggregate value traded in the second quarter. In terms of number of transactions, deals less than $20 million in value represented approximately 92 percent of that total transactions.

For the sixth consecutive quarter, natural gas proved to be the fuel of choice in reserve transactions. Gas dominated 69 percent of the number of deals, however, when evaluating activity in terms of actual reserves traded, gas accounted for 59 percent of reserves, which is down from a high of 82 percent reported last year. The median price paid for transactions involving a significant amount of natural gas was 73 cents per thousand cubic feet, a 3 cent increase from the first quarter median of 70 cents per Mcf.

Activity in natural gas reserve purchases supported the increase in the median price paid on a BOE basis. The median price paid for gas-dominated transactions — gas representing over 50 percent of the reserves — was $4.40 per BOE, whereas the median price for oil-dominated transactions was $3.65 per BOE. For the third consecutive quarter, the trend of gas dominated transaction values exceeding those of oil dominated transactions continued.

The ratio of reserve values to wellhead prices in the second quarter yielded an above average 32 percent compared with the historical 30 percent. This represents the fourth consecutive quarter favoring sellers over buyers. The average transaction size was slightly under $10 million, as compared to over $25 million last quarter. Opinion among market players indicates the quality, quantity and magnitude of transactions continues to shrink.

Strevig & Associates Inc. is a boutique investment banker specializing in negotiating oil and gas mergers and acquisitions of companies or assets.

Tucker posts net income

SAN ANGELO — Tucker Drilling Co. Inc. reported net income of $740,000 or 36 cents per share after income taxes on revenues of $5,080,000 for the second quarter of 1994.

In the second quarter of 1993, the company reported a net loss after taxes of $196,000 or 9 cents per share on revenues of $3,267,000.

Larry J. Tucker, chief executive officer, said contract drilling revenues increased 70 percent to $4,839,000 from $2,853,000 as average rig utilization increased to 56 percent from 40 percent.

A stable drilling rig utilization rate contributed to increased efficiency of drilling operations, and lower insurance costs due to improved results of the company's safety program contributed to increased operating income for the drilling segment in the 1994 period.

Oil and gas sales decreased 42 percent to $241,000 from $414,000 due primarily to the previously announced sale of the company's interest in 35 producing oil and gas wells effective May 1, 1994 — proceeds of which are not included in revenue — and a lower average oil price. The sale resulted in a gain of approximately $295,000 which was recognized in the 1994 period.

Tucker Drilling Co. Inc., a diversified energy company headquartered in San Angelo, is engaged in contract drilling, and exploration and development of oil and natural gas.

Rotary rig activity

Rotary rig activity during the final week of July increased slightly, according to the Smith Tool Activity Tracking System provided by Smith International Inc. The report found a total of 834 rotary rigs during the week, up seven from the previous week, but down 9 percrnt from 916 a year ago. There were 757 rigs drilling, up one from a week earlier but down 8 percent from 823 last year. There were 77 rigs rigging up, up six from the previous week but down 17.2 percent from 93 last year.

Congress urged to revitalize energy industry

Deputy Energy Secretary William White and key U.S. lawmakers say Congress and the Clinton administration must work together to revitalize America's natural gas and oil industry.

Their remarks came at a news conference on Capitol Hill as part of Wildcatters' Week in mid-July, the third annual energy education event, sponsored by the Independent Petroleum Association of America to highlight the importance of America's energy industry.

IPAA represents the nation's 8,000 independent producers of oil and natural gas.

"Technology: Revolutionizing America's Natural Gas and Oil Industry" was the theme of this year's Wildcatters Week. Over a dozen exhibits were displayed on Capitol Hill to showcase technology being used i the industry.

IPAA Chairman George Alcorn said promoting the use of state-of-the-art technology among producers is critical. "It will help us increase the nation's reserves of oil and natural gas."

Alcorn said government and industry must work together to stop the decline of the industry and boost oil and gas production in the United States.

"Fortunately, the Congress and the Clinton Administration have shown they're not standing idly by," he said.

U.S. crude oil production has sunk to its lowest level in 36 years, while oil imports continue to rise. The U.S. is expected to import 50 percent of the oil it needs to fuel the nation in 1994. Over the last 10 years, the U.S. has lost nearly 500,000 jobs; an additional 22,500 between October 1993 and March, when crude oil prices plunged to levels below what it costs to operate many of the nation's wells.

Deputy Secretary of Energy William White stressed the importance of promoting the use of advanced technologies i the industyr.

"This is a high-tech, high wage industry and there's nothing that can revitalize the industry as much as the technological breakthroughs which have been occurring," said White.

The congressmen and senators who participated in the news conference were among the 75 lawmakers who met with President Clinton last month to propose initiatives, including production tax credits and other initiatives, designed to boost U.S. oil and gas production and encourage new drilling. A bi-partisan coalition of 117 lawmakers has been working toward the passage of the initiatives.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said he's optimistic about the initiatives.

"We are coming together across party lies to work on this," he said.

At the news conference, he announced that he is working with other members of Congress to form an oil and gas caucus in Congress before he leaves the Senate in November. "We should have a strong unified effort" on behalf of an important industry, he said.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, voiced the need to pass a royalty relief measure to encourage drilling in the Outer Continental Shelf. "There is no objection that I have ever heard from any environmentalist for from anyone drilling in the central and western Gulf," said Johnston.

"I think the theme of Wildcatters' Week and the focus of technology is right on target," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La. The congressional proposals include allowing producers to deduct the cost of geological and geophysical expense the year they're incurred. Sen Breaux said "that would be a tremendous assistance to producers."

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said Congress and the Clinton administration must get serious about passing legislation which would help, not hurt the industry.

"It needs to access to public lands...it needs policies to permit the production of oil and gas," he said.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, pointed to the initiatives that have been passed in Texas as a "dynamic model" for passage of measures on the federal level because they've helped to boost production without draining the state treasury.

"So what can we do," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas. "We can unblock the barriers that restrict domestic development and that means opening up more government lands to prudent develoment."

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said it's a "win-win situation" to allow for repeal of the ban on the export of Alaskan North Slope oil which is being debated by Congress and the Clinton administration.

Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., also called for the elimination of the export ban. Repealing the ban will "ad to our energy security, protect the environment from tanker spills, and create thousands of jobs."

Rep. Calvin Cooley, D-Calif., said "we are advocating policies" that will lead to the creation of jobs. He also supports lifting the ban.

Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Ill, said "we just want back the jobs the industry lost."

SPE schedules first international conference on Mexico oil fields

RICHARDSON — Worldwide suppliers of services and products to the petroleum industry will have the opportunity to target the market in Mexico as well as learn more about its technical environment through the first SPE International Petroleum Conference and Exhibition of Mexico (IPCEM) in Veracruz, October 10-13 of this year.

The technical program will consist of 60 papers on characteristics common to many Mexican oil and gas fields - naturally fractured reservoirs and deepwater basins. The portion of the conference on fractured reservoirs will contain reports on reservoir characterization of dual porosity systems, numerical simulations, and fractured reservoir behavior. The focus on offshore operations will include papers on deepwater structures, drilling mud systems, offshore completions and production techniques and new innovative technologies.

The technical exhibition will offer hands-on evaluation of relevant products as well as demonstrate service and supply capabilities in the Mexican and global markets.

Sponsored by the Society of Petroleum Engineers, the event is being organized by International Exhibition Inc. of Houston. Directly participating as endorsing organizations are the national oil company, Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex), and the Instituto Mexicano del Petroleo (IMP). The general director of Pemex E&P, Manuel J. Ortiz de Maria, is general chairmen of the event.

"Mexico's energy and economic requirements strongly depend on cost-efficient development of oil and natural gas resources," said program chairman Alfredo Arriola-Torres of IMP. 'This inaugural conference is a direct outgrowth of these Mexican oil and gas initiatives."

Arriola continued, "As a result of restructuring, Pemex-E&P has reduced its workforce and sold many of its equipment assets. The company is now looking to enter into service contracts with both Mexican and foreign companies as well as contract much of its operation via turnkey projects, including engineering and construction, inspection and maintenance, and well service," he said. "There is no better way to explore new business opportunities in Mexican than by participating in IPCEM."

"IPCEM will provide direct access to Pemex engineers, managers, and decision-makers who are looking to do business with outside suppliers," concurred program vice chairman William J. McClung of Amoco Production Co. "Additionally, the SPE-coordinated program will reflect the highest technical standards and latest technology. There is no larger or more important conference that focuses its attention solely on the pertinent development issues in Mexico."

The Mexican market for oil and gas field equipment is estimated at more than $500 million U.S. annually. Almost all purchases are made by Pemex, the world's largest oil producer.

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club willmeet Thursday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with cocktails at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speakers will be Richard Nelson Baze and Susan Sexton of KCRS Radio. They will discuss the Desk and Derrick Club's function as commentators for "Radio Week" prior to the Oil Show in October.

AAPG 1995 international conference reset

The International Conference and Exhibition sponsored by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists has been rescheduled to September 10-13, 1995. It will be held in Nice, France.

Also rescheduled will be the 10 geologic field trips, including tours of Tunisia, Greece, Albania, Spain and the Alps area.

The deadline for papers remains November 15, 1994.

The 1994 meeting will be held August 21-24 in Luala Lumpur, Malaysia.

BRIEFS

Gas futures set overnight trading record

NEW YORK — Overnight electronic trading in natural gas futures more than doubled its previous volume record recently when 1,651 contracts were traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange Access system.

The previous overnight record in natural gas, which is traded only two hours each evening, was 820 contracts set during the July 7 session. Natural gas was first listed on NYMEX Access on July 5, 1994, marking the start of the July 6 trading day.

American Exploration suffers net loss

HOUSTON — American Exploration Co. has announced a net loss of $2.7 million or 4 cents per share for the second quarter ended June 30, 1994.

This compares to net income of approximately $900,000 or 1 cent per share for the same quarter of 1993.

The net loss for the current quarter includes an extraordinary gain on extinguishment of debt of $2 million or 3 cents per share. Results for the second quarter of 1993 included gas contract settlement revenue of $9.8 million and a noncash loss on property sales of $6.6 million.

Cash flow from operations before changes in working capital for the second quarter of 1994 was $2.6 million, compared with $14.2 million for the second quarter of 1993, which included the gas contract revenue.

Destec to sell energy to San Antonio

HOUSTON (AP) — Destec Energy Inc. said it has agreed to supply the City Public Service of San Antonio with 200 megawatts of energy this month.

Discussions continue on future sales, the Houston-based independent power company said.

The energy will be furnished to San Antonio at night and in the early morning. It will be supplied by Destec's 465-megawatt CoGen Lyondell cogeneration plant near Houston.

"Although we have provided up to 900 megawatts of electricity to large, investor-owned Texas utilities, this is the first sale of energy by Destec directly to a municipality within the state," Destec chief executive officer Charles Goff said in a news release.

The company would not disclose the sale price.

Newfield Exploration gets offshore stake

Newfield Exploration Co. of Houston said it has acquired a 50 percent working interest in the Ewing Bank 947 field, offshore of Louisiana, for approximately $28.8 million in cash.

The field, which has five producing wells, is located approximately 120 miles south/southeast of New Orleans and produces about 250 barrels of oil and 10 million cubic feet of natural gas daily, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing.

The field was purchased from AEDC (USA) Inc., Cairn Energy USA Inc. and Aviva Petroleum Inc. in three separate transactions.

Marked versions of rate changes required

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has approved a final rule which requires electronic utilities and interstate natural gas pipelines to file proposed rate and tariff changes in a format that will enable the commission staff and the public to easily compare new informtion with information previously filed.

The final rule will require the companies to file a marked version of proposed rate and tariff changes, along with unmarked replacement pages. On the marked version, new language must be highlighted. For example, background shading, bold text or underlined text may be used. Deleted language must be indicated by strike out.

The rule will reduce the time needed to review proposed changes by employing the wide availability of computer technology, thus eliminating the time-consuming process of preparing side-by-side comparieson.

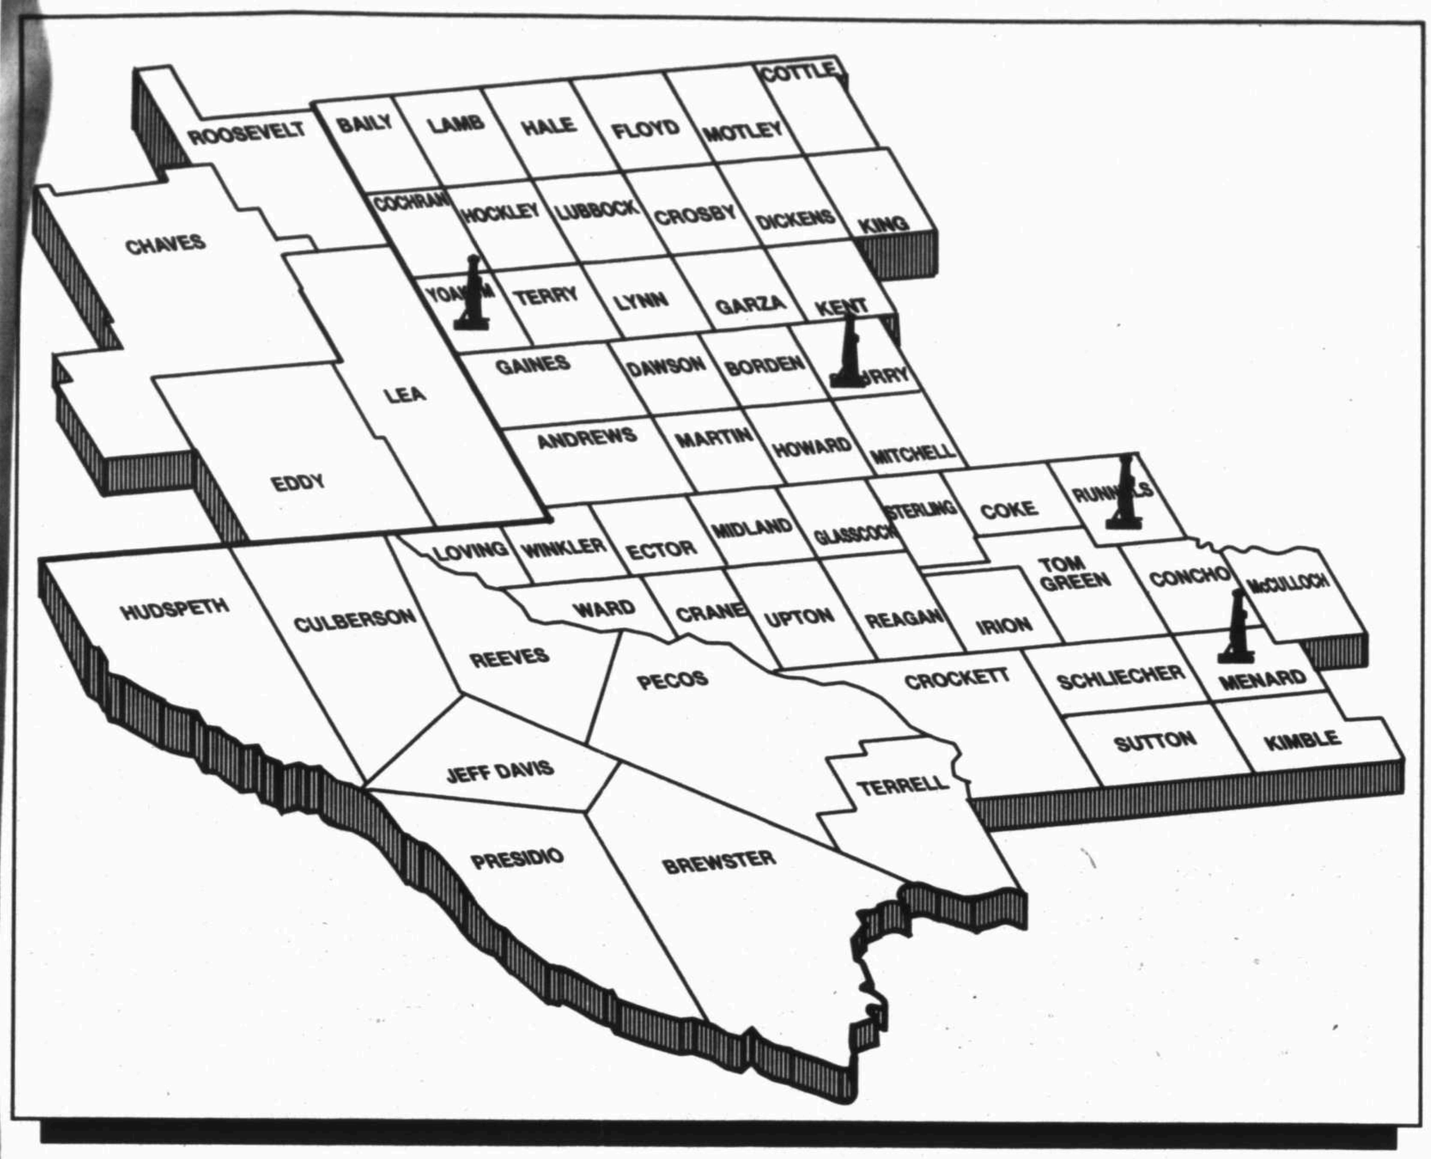
ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS



Horizontal well extends Yoakum field

Staff Report

A second producer has been added to the Harvard (Devonian) field of Yoakum County, extending production 3/4-mile northwest, 11 miles southwest of Plains.

HARVARD PETROLEUM CORP. completed the No. 1 Gayle, a horizontal producer, to pump 118 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 261 barrels from Devonian interval 11,956 to 12,402 ft. No treatment was reported.

The project was scheduled as a 12,200 ft. wildcat. After inadvertently plugging the first drainhole with cement, Harvard kicked off a second lateral drainhole to the west-southwest at 11,929 ft. and accomplished a 90-degree turn at 12,021 ft. — true vertical depth of 11,988 ft. The second drainhole was drilled to 12,402 ft. Casing was 5 1/2 inches, set at 11,914 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 3,776 ft., include the San Andres at 4,558 ft., Tubb at 7,258, Wolfcamp at 9,106, Upper Pennsylvanian at 10,018, Mississippian at 11,173, and Devonian at 11,943 ft.

Surface location is 1,518 ft. from north and 1,876 ft. from west lines of Section 521, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 264. Bottom hole location is 35 ft. from south and 367 ft. from west of the surface location.

Harvard opened the Harvard (Devonian) field in September 1993 with completion of the No. 1 McGinty to flow 205 barrels of crude from open hole interval 11,914 to 11,924 ft.

Production reopened in Runnels County field

The Burt-Ogden-Mabee field of Runnels County has been reopened with recompletion of a failed explorer, five miles from an earlier reopener and two miles north of Talpa.

DELRAY OIL INC. reentered the No. 3 Evelyn Hale Kirby Unit "A" and squeezed off perforations 3,044 to 3,049 ft., deepening the well to 3,700 ft. and testing Gardner pay in the depleted Burt-Ogden-Mabee field at 3,509 to 3,515 ft. The interval tested to flow 84 barrels of 43 gravity crude, 67 Mcfd and 120 barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 285 psi. The interval was acidized with 650 gallons of HCL and fractured with 40,000 gallons of gel and 92,500 lbs. sand.

Deepened to 3,700 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,643 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,689 ft.

Formation tops, on elevation of 1,914 ft., include the Palo Pinto A at 3,046 ft., Palo Pinto C at 3,134, Lower Fry at 3,340, Gardner Limestone at 3,487, Gardner Sandstone at 3,502, and Grey at 3,630 ft.

Location is 2,050 ft. from south and 640 ft. from west lines of ETRR survey 117.

Goen discovery pumps 16 barrels

Menard County has gained a Goen Lime discovery, two miles north-northwest of the Wilhelm Lane West field, 16.1 miles northwest of Menard.

3PGM Ltd. finaled the No. 2 J.A. Davis to pump 16 barrels of 39 gravity crude from perforations 3,777 to 3,788 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe.

Permitted as a 4,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,875 ft. and plugged back to 3,794 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,866 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,875 ft., include the Breckenridge at 2,164 ft., Palo Pinto at 3,194, Strawn Limestone at 3,442, Fry Sandstone at 3,467, Capps Limestone at 3,656, and Goen Limestone Marker at 3,774 ft.

Location is 2,183 ft. from south and 2,306 ft. from east lines of H&OB survey 69, Abst. 429.

New pool opened in Scurry field

A new Wolfcamp pool has apparently been opened in the High Five field of Scurry County, eight miles west-southwest of Ira.

FORTSON OIL CO. potentialed the No. 1 Conrad Unit to flow 165 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 34 Mcfd on a 17/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 590 psi. The well flowed from perforations 5,398 to 5,406 ft., which had been acidized with 750 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Permitted as an 8,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,500 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,080 ft.

Location is 274 ft. from south and 1,715 ft. from west lines of Section 87, Block 20, Lavaca Navigation survey, Abst. 434.

Plains Resources income doubles over year ago

Staff Report

HOUSTON — Plains Resources announces that net income for the second quarter of 1994 more than doubled that reported for the same period last year.

The company reported net income of $750,000 or 6 cents per share on total revenues of $67 million, compared with net income of $310,000 or 2 cents per share on total revenues of $48 million for the second quarter of 1993.

Cash flow from operations increased to $4.9 million as compared to $4.7 million last year, while earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization were $8.2 million, a 20 percent increase over the $6.8 million reported in last year's second quarter. Earnings before interest and taxes in the second quarter increased approximately 70 percent to $4.1 million as compared to $2.4 million in the prior year period.

The company said the improvement in operating results is a direct result of production increases related to the company's continuing exploitation activities and its acquisition of the remaining 50 percent working interest in the Sunniland Trend properties effective at the beginning of May. The company also benefited from lower unit production expenses and an increased contribution from its downstream business segment.

Equivalent volumes of oil and gas production increased by 8 percent in the current year quarter to 1,134,000 barrels as compared to 1,049,000 barrels last year. The average oil price received by the company during the second quarter, which is an average of prices received under fixed and floating price sales arrangements, was $14.10 a barrel.

"MEET OUR ELITE"

Nina Willis is congratulated by Fran Hawke, Associate Manager of Temporary Resources.

Congratulations to Nina Willis who has qualified as a Temporary Resources "Elite Temp". Nina is a wonderful employee who can handle any situation that arises. She makes the following statement:"Hats off to the staff of Temporary Resources. They are friendly, helpful and considerate and they keep me busy! Thanks to Vickey and Fran and all the staff. Keep up the good work."

When not on assignment, Nina likes to do crafts, handwork and sewing. She enjoys bowling, golf and getting together with her three children and their families.

Make this summer a "picnic". Don't let vacations take a "slice" of your office. Let the personnel professionals at Temporary Resources "patch" all your employment needs. Temporary Resources is "THE POWER IN PERSONNEL."

Company produces royalty reports

ARDMORE, Okla. — C. Boyd and Patti A. Donaldson have established Energy Reporting Company in Marietta, near Ardmore, to serve independent producers in Oklahoma and Texas in reducing royalty rates and trimming employee costs associated with filing timely and accurate royalty reports. The married partners, who have more than 25 years combined experience working for the Minerals Management System, U.S. Department of the Interior in Denver, specialize in federal and Indian oil and gas lease royalty and production reporting.

Prior to the MMS position, Donaldson was an auditor on oil and gas price regulations for the U.S. Department of Energy in Dallas from 1974 to 1981. Ms. Donaldson, a former MMS accountant, also taught reporting requirements and procedures to staff members at private energy firms.

Marathon income climbs

PITTSBURGH — USX Corp. announced higher second quarter 1994 net income for the Marathon Group of USX of $72 million or 25 cents per share on sales of $3.2 billion. This compares with net income of $21 million or 7 cents per share on sales of $3.1 billion in the second quarter of 1993.

Second quarter 1994 results included pretax employee-related expenses of $27 million associated with Marathon's ongoing reorganization efforts. In addition, results included a favorable inventory market valuation adjustment and a favorable effect relating to various state tax issues, partially offset by a loss reflected in other income. The net favorable estimated aftertax effect of these items, including the employee-related expenses, was $67 million. Second quarter 1993 results included an unfavorable inventory market valuation adjustment which resulted in an estimated aftertax charge of $29 millin.

For the second quarter of 1994, the Marathon Group reported operating income of $156 million, compared with $94 million in the second quarter of 1993.

USX Board Chairman Charles A. Corry commented "Upstream operating income improved, reflecting increased production volumes and ongoing expense reductions. Second quarter liquid hydrocarbon prices, while nearly $1.80 per barrel lower than last year's second quarter, were more than $2.60 per barrel higher than first quarter 1994 prices."

He added, "Second quarter downstream results reflected a squeeze on refined product margins as refined product prices failed to keep pace with the rapid increase in crude prices from first quarter levels."

Worldwide exploration and production, or upstream, operations had operating income of $59 million in the second quarter of 1994, compared with operating income of $37 million in the second quarter of 1993. The increase mainly reflected higher worldwide production volumes and reduced operating expenses, partially offset by lower average crude prices and employee-related reorganization expenses of $11 million.

Operating income for refining, marketing and transportation, or downstream, operations totaled $29 million in the second quarter, compared with $119 million in the second quarter of 1993. The decline mainly reflected lower average refined product prices which were not completely offset by decreased crude oil costs and employee-related reorganization expenses of $10 million.

In upstream operations, Corry said that the jacket and deck of the Ewing Bank 873 platform in the Gulf of Mexico were in place, and work was on pace to achieve first oil in September. The platform is located in 775 feet of water and is expected to develop estimated recoverable reserves of 73 million gross barrels of oil equivalent.

Story by Georgia Todd Temple

Arts Assembly director Emma Hale Burnett was on hand when Midland County Library staff members unpack a shipment of art prints that the library received as a result of a grant from the Arts Assembly of Midland.

Arts Assembly grant

Art prints cover the walls of the Midland County Library. Although most of these prints are not yet available to be checked out, many others are part of the circulating art print collection.

For the past two years, the Arts Assembly of Midland — through its sub-granting program — has helped make possible the purchase of these prints. Until these grants were given, the collection — which numbers more than 300 prints — had been purchased by the Friends of the Library.

"That's one of the things that a good Friends organization does, they provide the icing on the cake," said Sandra Wegner, library director. "There are other libraries that have art print collections. We consider our art prints collection above and beyond."

The prints, which may be checked out for two months, hang in special racks — also purchased by the Friends of the Library.

Monies received in the 1992-93 Arts Assembly of Midland grant went to purchase art prints and art books.

Monies received in the 1993-94 grant, which the library is now closing out, went to purchase art prints and art instruction videos, which may be checked out from the library's video area.

Artist Max Perry — the library expansion fund-raiser chairman — and Shirley Gist — library decorator — selected this year's art prints.

"Variety is always the goal of our art print selectors," Ms. Wegner said. "Artists may be well-known like (Marc) Chagall or (Diego) Rivera or lesser known contemporary artists with names that many do not recognize.

"This year's choices include landscapes, florals, abstracts and definitely lots of color," she said.

The grant from the arts assembly — which is made possible in part through the Texas Commission on the Arts and the city's hotel-motel tax — has been matched each year by monies raised by the Friends of the Library.

Circulating collection

After spending years working in Oregon, Washington, D.C., and Louisiana, a job offer as director of the Arts Assembly of Midland brought Emma Hale Burnett home to West Texas.

"I came out there and did a board retreat while Lucy Woodside was director," said Ms. Burnett, who at the time was the local arts agency specialist for the Texas Arts Council.

"I said, 'If that job ever comes up, I'm interested.' And, lo and behold, about six months later, the job came up."

Ms. Burnett joined the organization this spring when Mrs. Woodside left to take a position as development director with the Confederate Air Force.

"I really think it is a good arts council and a good local arts agency," Ms. Burnett said. "It has an absolutely outstanding board of directors. We had approximately — and this is not a total — between 550 and 600 volunteers for Celebration of the Arts this year. That, for a city this size, is pretty amazing."

The COA, held in May, is the assembly's largest fund-raising event. Monies raised are used to fund the annual event and to fund other arts programs.

"COA is a good arts festival that really serves the community. What funds are allowed for it are used to go back into the community for cultural projects."

Those projects include CityArts, a mural art program, and KidsArts & Co.

"KidsArts is such an exciting program to me that I think will grow as the agency grows. I think it's the nucleus of a really exciting program for the children who are served by Casa de Amigos."

Coordinator of the KidsArts program is Becky Bailey.

"I feel so fortunate . . . I couldn't have interviewed and chosen a person I like to work with better or who I think has more potential as a super arts administrator than Becky."

In addition, the assembly participates in a sub-granting program of around $35,000 annually. Part of the funds come from the city of Midland's hotel-motel tax and part from the Texas Commission on the Arts Subgranting Program.

"It is a really good program. This year, we have 17 grants, plus some special applications. It really does make an impact on the cultural community of the

Chatting is pet peeve of moviegoers

By Louis B. Parks
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — It's an irritation hated by every moviegoer: You're absorbed in the world on the screen when somebody near you starts yakking.

You decide to ignore the intrusion on your fantasy, but the talkers drone on.

Yak, yak. Yakety-yak.

Silence is never more golden than in a movie theater, where people go to escape into another reality. But often — and, some people insist, increasingly — viewers are deprived of their full pleasure by the rudeness of others.

"Last week I went to see 'Forrest Gump,'" said Scott Northcutt, a Houston waiter. "There were two girls sitting behind me. They just kept talking about clothes they were going to buy. They they kept saying. 'like, like, like.' I finally turned around and said, 'Do you mind?'"

The talkers quieted down. But, unfortunately, that approach does not always work.

Some people get an usher, which most theater chains recommend. But at best, that means missing even more of the movie. After the usher leaves, there's no telling how the talker may respond.

"What tends to happen is, the usher walks in the auditorium, and the person gets quiet. Then the usher leaves, and they talk again," said Keith Wiedenkeller, who manages Houston's American Multi Cinema theaters.

There's at least a tiny concern that the reaction could be worse.

"In today's society, you see a lot of things you don't like, and you put up with it because if you squawk you may have a gun to your back," said one business executive who did not want to be named.

Many theater managers say the talking problem has always existed. But some people are convinced it is getting worse.

"It seems as people get used to seeing movies in their homes (on VCRs or cable) and make comments while seeing them, they're more apt to be doing that in the theater," said Mindy Posey, Landmark Theaters' Houston district manager. "I have to believe that the whole living room mentality has gotten stronger."

Psychotherapist Christine Wagener said part of the problem may be that the structures of family and society are not as tight as they once were, so many people have less sense of community, less concern for others.

"There is much more a sense of the 'I' instead of the 'we.' Wagener said.

Disturbances in movie theaters take many forms. One common problem is small children talking or crying.

A problem at action films and comedies is the "screen interactor," the person who talks to the actors, loudly advising stars to "Watch out!" or "Kick his behind!" (usually in more colorful terms).

Then there is the person who is unable to control emotions, shouting in fear or crying.

There are also the gum poppers, lip smackers and paper unwrappers who never seem to finish their snacks. Or the dreaded repeat customer, compelled to tell his companion, and innocent bystanders, when something is about to happen.

Let us not forget the pagers and beepers as well as a new kind of offender — the person rude enough to actually carry on phone conversations in the theater.

"A guy sitting behind me took out his cellular phone and started talking," said one incensed movie patron. "Then he dropped the phone on the floor and asked me to pick it up and hand it back to him."

But the most common problem is plain old chatting.

"Usually it's not a deliberate thing," said Wiedenkeller. "At least half the time, they're not even aware they're doing something wrong."

Theaters try to deal with talkers

HOUSTON — Theaters insist they want to help moviegoers deal with annoying talkers.

"Talking in auditoriums is probably the number one problem we see," said Lynn Norton, director of marketing for Cinemark.

"Most theater owners like quiet auditoriums," said Jim Kozak, director of communications for the National Association of Theater Owners, which has more than 14,000 member theaters. "They are anxious to offer really strong value for the entertainment dollar."

Many major theater chains have passive and active programs for dealing with the situation.

AMC's "Silence Is Golden" program, initiated three years ago, won the National Association of Theater Owners' Customer Service Award. It includes a policy of not allowing children younger than 3 years old in PG-13 or R-rated movies starting after 6 p.m., even with their parents.

Most major theater chains — Cineplex Odeon, Loews, Landmark, Cinemark — have similar policies for discouraging talkers, except for the restriction on children.

In general, the policies have three components:

— Showing a trailer prior to the movie urging patrons to be quiet. The trailers may not run all the time, especially in the summer when theaters try to show many previews.

— Ushers walking through auditoriums during movies, politely asking people to be quiet.

— Responding to customer complaints.

At the first complaint, an usher will observe the situation and request quiet if necessary. On a second complaint, a manager is called for a tougher warning. After that, it is up to the manager to decide when a patron should be ejected.

Short of instigating constant usher patrols or sticking microphones in every row, theaters depend mainly on customers to let them know when they are bothered.

Evita

"Evita," the phenomenal pop-rock opera by Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber, is being presented at Casa Manana through Aug. 14. Liz Larsen is portraying Eva Peron. Performances are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday. Tickets are $18 to 24 and are available by calling 1-817-332-CASA or any TicketMaster outlet.

Professional actress moves into Shannon Doherty's room

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — This is not a Cinderella story, not by a long shot. When Shannen Doherty, the excessively newsworthy female star of "Beverly Hills 90210," the Fox network's most successful show ever, finally exited that long-running series last season, the last thing its producers wanted was to replace her with an unknown quantity, a tube-struck starlet or a potential loose cannon.

Enter Tiffani-Amber Thiessen, seasoned professional actress. Don't be fooled by her filigreed first name (her parents liked Tiffani; her grandparents liked Amber), her distressed jeans and scuffed Doc Martens or her utterly unlined heart-shaped face.

At age 20 years and 7 months, Ms. Thiessen has probably spent as much time working on television shows as many of her peers have spent watching them. Her career is well into its second decade.

She has not been to college or even attended a conventional high school, but has played plenty of high school and college students, appeared in several television and theatrical movies and been a mainstay of a successful sitcom.

"Yes, I've been in this business for a long time," she says matter-of-factly, looking like a Working Woman cover model as she hovers over coffee and a bran muffin at a vegetarian restaurant on the Sunset Strip. "I started very young, and, yes, it's taught me a lot. I understood what fame is, but I also realize that acting is just a job."

Her new job (her first "90210" appearance will be Sept. 7) is to play Valerie Malone, an awe-struck transfer student from Minnesota.

As Valerie, Ms. Thiessen will occupy the very same bedroom as did Brenda Walsh — formerly played by Ms. Doherty, who, her co-workers have said, was often late on set. That, combined with her real-life at-large shenanigans, precipitated Brenda's enrollment in acting school, in far-off London, England, several months ago.

"Yes, I move in with the Walshes," Ms. Thiessen said. At first, she adds, Valerie is somewhat disgusted by the fast-lane excesses she's exposed to. "But inside, she really wants to be here and be like everybody else. Meaning, probably, like Brenda."

Producers appreciate a veteran who can step right in and do the job. "Tiffani is wonderful. We've been aware of her for a long time," says Aaron Spelling, the creator of "90210" and Ms. Thiessen's boss. "Don't you get the feeling," he adds, mostly but not altogether humorously, "that she's been here before? In a past life?"

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 7, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Exploring the world around you will point out something you have missed in recent years. Good managerial skills will always be in demand. Control your emotions and get better organized at work. Consistent performance may mean more than random flashes of genius to an authority figure. Your romantic partner may feel that too many people have claims on your time. Try to compromise. An occasional weekend getaway will draw you closer together.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: humorist Garrison Keillor, singer Lana Cantrell, marathon great Alberto Salazar, World War I spy Mata Hari.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You enjoy the confidence of someone who can advance your career. Ask questions but be diplomatic! The more you learn about a situation, the better you will feel. Encourage teen-agers to make wise choices.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you are uncertain about an agreement, seek experts' advice. It is possible to breathe new life into a dormant business plan. Your mate or partner has a worthwhile suggestion. Try to work out the details.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Relax and enjoy what you have. There are many pleasures that do not carry a big price tag. Someone with a dazed or faraway look may be falling in love. Resist the temptation to pry.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be presented with several choices today. Postpone making a final decision until you can talk things over with family or friends. It is time to take steps to provide for your retirement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take it easy. Things are not as bad as they seem. An old movie soothes your nerves and lifts your spirits. Be more flexible in your approach to work and play. Delegate certain routine chores.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): When partners cooperate ungrudgingly, benefits accrue to both sides. Friction has the opposite effect! Let someone know that you are no longer upset about a misunderstanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Daring ideas will find an enthusiastic audience now. You know how to bring others around to your point of view. Repairing a relationship may be more difficult than anticipated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone from your past may show up or send you a message. Lighting the fires of romance may be easier than you imagine. A passionate new relationship is a sure cure for the blues.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Choose your words carefully or you could find yourself between a rock and a hard place. Dealing with a child's problems will require patience as well as energy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A bold revelation may send you reeling. A quick recovery is possible if you refuse to panic. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand for those on vacation. Balance self-expression with partnership needs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): That "heavy" feeling will depart as soon as you lighten your load and get more rest. Romance or good financial luck gives you a new lease on life! Take a journey before summer's end.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep any relationship secrets to yourself. A romantic adventure could give rise to unpleasant gossip. Leave your valuables at home while traveling. New recreational activities should appeal to family members of

Opening lead: Five of ♠

Follow the play of this hand, then decide if anyone committed an error. If so, who was the culprit? What was the offense?

North-South reached three no trump on a simple power auction. With 12 points facing at least 16 in partner's hand, North did not expect there would be any problem, but bridge is a funny game.

West led a low spade, and dummy's queen lost to East's ace. The shift to the queen of hearts was won in the closed hand with the king, and declarer started on clubs. When West showed out on the second club, declarer had only eight sure tricks. Declarer cashed the red-suit winners, ending in the closed hand, then finessed the ten of spades. When that held, South's worries were over. What's your verdict?

The crime was hardly blatant but, as is so often the case, it occurred at the very first trick. East failed to give declarer a losing option.

Suppose that, instead of winning the ace of spades, declarer allowed the queen to hold. As the cards lie, that is only declarer's eighth trick. Declarer will still have to come back to spades for a ninth trick, but is now faced with a guess: Who holds the ace of spades and who has the jack?

When declarer leads a spade toward the K 10 and West follows low, declarer has a pure guess and, as a result, a 50-50 chance of going wrong. If declarer puts up the king, hoping West led from the ace, the contract will be defeated; if South finesses the ten, all is well.

As East defended, declarer had no choice. Making life difficult for declarer is one of the defenders' best weapons.

Stamp pays tribute to Marilyn's life, career

The tiny island nation of St. Vincent is to pay tribute to Marilyn Monroe by issuing a limited edition set of nine different legal-tender postage stamps that commemorate the actress's life and career.

"Collector demand for these stamps has been unbelievable," said Scott Tilson, president of the International Collectors Society, exclusive distributor of the stamps in the United States. "Marilyn certainly had her fans out there, and they know this will be their only opportunity to get actual government issued legal tender stamps that are both beautiful and rare. In fact, we're nearly sold out."

Collectors are already predicting that in the near future these stamps will be more desirable than the Elvis stamps.

"Over 500 million Elvis stamps have been issued. When you compare this to these Marilyn stamps, which are a limited edition of just thousands worldwide, you can see the irresistible appeal that these stamps have to stamp collectors and Marilyn fans," Tilson said.

Cost is $9.95 plus $3 postage and handling for a set of nine stamps.

Those ordering will receive an individually numbered Certificate of Authenticity and the free pocket guide "99 Little Known Facts About Marilyn Monroe."

High school student, 17, takes top honors in duck stamp competition

A 17-year-old high school student from Harrisburg, Pa., has taken top honors in the 1994-95 Federal Junior Duck Stamp Program competition.

Clark Weaver, a senior at Central Dauphin High School, becomes the second annual winner of this competition, the first new federal program to be introduced since the Federal Duck Stamp Program began in 1934.

Directed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the program is a unique, innovative and needed conservation education curriculum tailored to students in grades K-12. Public and private school teachers utilize the curriculum to introduce conservation and management topics, wildlife art and stamp collecting to students.

Weaver's acrylic painting of a pair of hooded merganser ducks, "Hoodies," was chosen at the "First Day of Sale" ceremony for the Federal Duck Stamp in Washington, D.C. this summer. It beat out 224 entries in the Pennsylvania competition and then advanced to win at the national level. "A First Day of Sale" for the 1994-95 Junior Duck Stamp will be held Aug. 20 during the APS Stamp Show, Pittsburg, Pa.

Chosen as second and third place winners, respectively, were: Clark McCune, 17, of Hyannis, NE, and Paul Makuchal, 17, of Pocomoko City, MD. All three winning students, their teachers and parents will be guests of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at the 1994 Federal Duck Stamp Contest this fall in Washington D.C.

Selected winning designs are exhibited at the U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C.,a and at the national wildlife refuges, wildlife festivals, museums, galleries and state fairs nationwide.

Clark's drawing will be depicted on stamps, Limited Edition Prints, First Day of Issue Covers and Telephone Debit Cards and will be offered for sale to collectors and conservationists. Net proceeds from the program are allocated to a fund established by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Foundation. These monies will be used to expand the Junior Duck Stamp Program and Competition and to further promote conservation education in U.S. schools.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Musician to perform

ODESSA — Doyle Bramhall plays Dos Amigos Sept. 2.

Doors open at 9 p.m. Tickets, priced at $8 in advance and $10 at the door, may be purchased at Dos Amigos or Endless Horizons.

Currently, Bramhall's long awaited debut CD, "Bird Nest on the Ground," has been released.

In Texas, Bramhall has long been respected as a valuable musical source. In addition to playing drums on the vaughan Brothers' "Family Style" and ZuZu Bollin's"Texas Bluesman" CDs, backing up Lightnin' Hopkins and Freddie King, Bramhall has long been recognized as the man who penned many of the memorable moments in the Stevie Ray Vaughan songbook. Songs he wrote or co-wrote with Vaughan appear on six of Vaughan's albums.

■ Grants received

ODESSA — Odessa College's Options Gallery has received grants totaling $1,000 from the Odessa Cultural Council toward exhibitions that display high quality art and help to expand the horizon of art students and enhance their artistic abilities.

Two exhibits are by successful former Odessa College art students Nate Tharp and Dale Short. The college plans to demonstrate with these exhibits that success is achievable for OC art students.

Students attending Tharp's exhibit, which received $500, will have an opportunity to discuss with Tharp his artwork and experiences that led to his success. This exhibit is scheduled for Aug. 24-Sept. 21.

The Dale Short Art Show, which received $250, will be on display from April 10-May 5, 1995.

A third exhibition, receiving $250, will be by Gary Goree, a fine arts coordinator for Tulsa, Okla., public schools who has been a visiting professor of art at Texas Tech University for the summer since 1985. His work will be exhibited Oct. 24-Nov. 16.

Pamela Poindexter, graphic artist in the Learning Resources Center media/computer services office and the person who schedules exhibits in the Options Gallery, applied for the grants.

The Options Gallery is located in OC's Learning Resources Center. Exhibits are open to the public. For more information call 1-335-6646.

■ Symposium planned

AUSTIN — An international group of writers, literary agents, scholars, television producers, book editors and publishers, and publishers of magazines, newspapers and electronic databases, will explore the present state of publishing and the opportunities for the next century at "The State and Fate of Publishing: The First Biennial Flair Symposium," sponsored by the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin Nov. 11-12.

Major novelist and political commentator Carlos Fuentes will close the meeting with a summary address at 8 p.m. Nov. 12. Fuentes' address is free and open to the public. The address is sponsored in part by the Texas Committee for the Humanities, a state program of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Simon Jenkins, columnist for and former editor of The Times of London, will open the colloquium that Friday with his consideration of the subject "Is the Written Word Really Dead?" Notable participants in the roundtable discussions that will follow include Texas Monthly editor Gregory Curtis; Donald Lamm, president of W.W. Norton & Co.; ABC Prime Time Live executive director, Robert Wallace; Indian novelist Anita Desai; Temple University Press director David Bartlett; Virginia Postrell, editor of Reason, a current affairs magazine; and Jerome S. Rubin, of MIT Media Lab's News in the Future consortium, who developed LEXIS-/NEXIS on-line research services.

Registration fee is $5 for students and $25 for other participants if postmarked by Oct. 15. Registration after Oct. 15 or on-site registration is $10 for students and $35 for other participants. The fee includes admission to all programs. Not included are meals, transportation and lodging. Registration is limited.

For registration information call 1-512-471-8944 or write Flair Symposium, Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, UT at Austin, P.O. Box 7219, Austin, 78713-7219.

Kerrville's 3rd annual music festival is winemakers', songwriters' celebration

KERRVILLE — The Kerrville Music Festival's 23rd season continues Labor Day weekend with the third annual Kerrville Wine & Music Festival sponsored by Southwest Airlines and Whole Foods Market.

In the setting of Rod Kennedy's Quiet Valley Ranch, nine miles south of Kerrville on Texas Highway 16, the festival is a winemakers' and songwriters' celebration with a dozen Texas winemakers joining 28 songwriters and their bands from 10 states and Canada.

Headlined by Trout Fishing in America, Brave Combo, Italian guitarist Peppino D'Agostino, Walter Hyatt and Champ Hood, Iain Mathews, Seattle autoharpist Bryan Bowers and Dala Cooper, the festival includes the four surviving members of the Sun Rhythm Section from Memphis, the Dallas classical Gypsy jazz quintet Cafe Noir, songwriting favorites Erik Moll of Austin and Rick Beresford of Nashville.

The event includes free three-day camping in its $40 advance ticket price with children under 12 free and single day tickets available as well. Call 1-210-257-3600 for information.

Thriving poetry scene springs up amid suds, spin cycle

By Molly Hall
Associated Press

DENVER — On some nights at Smiley's Laundromat on Denver's East Colfax Avenue, you can hear poetry over sloshing suds and the spin cycle.

As feedback squeals through an amplifier, a dozen would-be poets lean against vibrating washers, dragging on cigarettes and waiting to step up to the mike.

"I'm glad all of you could make it out," says Cameron Walter, 19, host of the Tuesday night readings.

A few bemused onlookers in the busy laundromat stop folding clothes to look. They might not know it, but they are seeing poetry in its newest form — young, hip and happening in unlikely places.

Poetry is everywhere you turn these days — a few verses taped to a lamppost, shouted in cafes, on MTV and in the staid Denver Press Club.

While the packaging may be different, these "Generation X" poets — most of them under 30 and fed up with packaged entertainment — are walking in the footsteps of the Beat poets of the 1950s.

The poets tonight are black-clad — in faux fur, tie-dye and berets. One wears a neon orange cap with a Tide logo on it and more than a few are decked out in mismatched thrift store finds.

James Gonzales, a local favorite in his early 20s with black spiked hair and wild eyes, stands next to a soda machine and readies himself.

"Shower curtain theatre!" he exclaims.

"In pink dress, stilleto clacked on a eurythmic block of head neon pink and mediterranean 3 o'clock am haze alley vessel echo mint melted mask
I cry my face off at night..."

Gonzales shouts over the rumble of washers, the ding of pinball machines and a television blaring "Rosanne." He finishes and the distracted gathering offers a smattering of applause.

As the night goes on, one poet laments the rogue she loves to hate; another curses his uncle's flea-bitten dog. A 4-year-old with his mother on laundry night sings "Twinkle Twinkle, Little Star."

The newsletter Poesis lists some 45 venues in Denver and Boulder offering everything from lesbian and cowboy poetry to a reading of works by the late Colorado Poet Laureate Thomas Hornsby Ferrill. And there are the many casual, come-as-you-are open readings and workshops at coffeehouses around town.

Some of the readings are raucous "poetry slams." Part performance and part "Gong Show," these sessions feature judges giving scores based on their own fickle vibes and on audience response.

At these gatherings, the poet faces howling, whistling patrons clanking their beer bottles and cheering. The spectators are prone to rapid mood swings.

The slam phenomenon began at Chicago's Green Mill Tavern in 1984. It is now all the rage in 25 states, especially with the TV-bred Generation X-ers looking for spontaneous entertainment.

Heckling is strongly encouraged.

"Please do not applaud a mediocre poem," said emcee Mari Christie at a recent slam at the Mercury Cafe.

Through the smoke that night, teen-age bards scribbled furiously in notebooks. But all eyes were on a wiry young man in a golfer's cap as he stepped up to the mike.

He spoke in a rapid-fire monotone, dropping pages to the floor as he went.

"I keep on writing;
Hope some day I say something;
Honest and intellectual to someone.
I call myself an alarm clock;
To prove I'm asleep."

Henry Alarmclock, 22, is a regular on the slam circuit. He and Christie both have won Denver slams and have qualified for the national slam championship this summer in Asheville, N.C.

Christie likens slams to other art competitions — Battle of the Bands, Comedy Sports. The fast pace keeps the attention focused, she said.

Critics say the slam is not necessarily every poet's forum.

"Ego, style identification, putting somebody up as No. 1 ... poetry slams have all those things that Americans love, but really aren't conducive to community, inclusivity," said Cynthia Payne, who has read at slams.

While Payne describes the scene as a melting pot, it mirrors the Beat tradition of being mostly male.

"There's a friendly confrontation going on within the younger poets who are saying, 'Hey guys, yeah, you're great, but there's another side to the coin here, and that's women.'"

In nearby Boulder, the Naropa Institute and its Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics are celebrating their 20th anniversary this summer with a tribute to Allen Ginsberg. "Beats & Other Rebel Angels," also features Marianne Faithfull, Philip Glass and Lawrence Ferlinghetti.

Naropa's Ivan Suvanjieff said much like the Beat poets, the new poets of the so-called "Generation X" are outsiders defining life on their terms.

"Poetry is about looking for something real," said Suvanjieff.

"I think slams, these new forms like spoken word, it's all marketing to lure this new generation," he said. "They think back to high school teachers who get up there and bore people to death with poetry."

And with large crowds showing up at slams, what Ferlinghetti said in the '50s could be true today: "My whole kick has been oral poetry. The poets today are talking to themselves. They have no other audience. We're trying to capture an audience."

Unsigned artists may submit tape of country music

NASHVILLE, TENN. — Whether it's participating in amateur night at the local country tavern or picking up the guitar whenever they get a chance, thousands enjoy playing country music. And while some are content strumming on the back porch, others dream of taking their act to Nashville. Once there, they hope to catch the ear of a music industry insider who will recognize their talent and possibly even help them cut a single.

The winner of this 'battle of the bands' will then be showcased before an audience of country music industry executives in a private performance.

Through the Jim Beam Country Caravan Talent Search, unsigned country music artists may submit an audio tape of their performances for a chance to get their break in the country music business. All tapes received by Aug. 20 will be screened and narrowed down to five finalists. Those lucky country music hopefuls will them be flown to Nashville to perform before a panel of industry professionals, including Jim Beam Country caravan music tour star Lucinda Williams, and a live audience.

The winner of this "battle of the bands" will then be showcased before an audience of country music industry executives in a private performance.

Official rules may be obtained by sending a legal sized, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Jim Beam Caravan Talent Search, c/o ARS, 43 North Canal St., Chicago, Ill. 60606.

The search is sponsored by Jim Beam Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey.

ART: Assembly director sees growth potential

The Midland County Library is among the local organizations included in the sub-granting program. The library has, for the second year in a row, received monies for art-related materials: prints, books and videos.

Some of the grant money comes through the Texas Commission on the Arts. The funds are matched by monies raised by the Friends of the Library.

"One of our grants that is so wonderful is the art project with the library, where you can actually go down and check out some fine art prints," Ms. Burnett said.

"I was in there the other day when we were unpacking the new ones. I think it's great. Everyone can enjoy it. Anyone who has not been down there and seen what you can check out for two months and have in your home really is missing a treat."

The grant applications — the recipients of which will be announced at the assembly's annual meeting in September — have been mailed out. Those agencies or individuals who have not received an application are asked to call the assembly at 687-1149.

"We are always open to people who want to talk to us about or need some help or technical assistance with a program they are trying to start or need some support past what they can get here," Ms. Burnett said.

"In the nonprofit world, you kind of absorb information about grants or funding possibilities because you're around people that that's their expertise. I try to network with everybody I can to find out where things are. I think one of my really strong suits is that knowledge and the ability to provide technical assistance to cultural nonprofits."

'In the nonprofit world, you kind of absorb information about grants or funding possibilities because you're around people that that's their expertise.'

—Emma Burnett
Arts Assembly director

Ms. Burnett's career began in her hometown of Odessa, where she attended Odessa College and was the continuity director for KRIG, now KRIL radio. She grew up the youngest in a family of four children, with two brothers and a sister 10 to 15 years older than she is.

Her parents — now deceased — are Grace Hale, who had served with the Red Cross in World War I, and Leonard Hale, who worked for Forest Oil Co., until he retired in the mid-1960s.

After marrying, Ms. Burnett became active in cultural organizations, including the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc., the Permian Playhouse, the United Way — then called Community Chest — and the American Red Cross.

After she was divorced, she moved to San Antonio.

"I took my background of working with nonprofit organizations and after I spent a couple of years as the chairman of volunteers for the American Red Cross in San Antonio — the job is a full-time nonpaid position — I went to work for the United Way.

"It wasn't easy. I had four children (Abner, Melissa, Paul and Emily) with some child support and property settlement.

"During that time I got my real estate license and broker's license. I made a little money selling real estate.

"I was the generation of the displaced housewife. It was tough. It also was quite interesting. Many of the women my age remarried, but I didn't."

Instead, Ms. Burnett turned the knowledge she had acquired working in non-paid positions in nonprofits into a career in the paid arena.

"I had been chairman of the March of Dimes. I had a real good working knowledge of how nonprofits worked as do most women who are volunteers instead of professional during their working lives."

Then, around 1976, Nancy Hanks — who was chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Arts — began funding a program called State-Local Grants, Ms. Burnett said.

"The purpose of those grants was to create local arts agencies. I heard about it and through a friend met the man who was going to be the director of the newly organized arts council of San Antonio. I got the job as director of administration and development."

In the early 1980s, Ms. Burnett's boss, Robert Canon, was selected as the first director of Locals Program — another new program funded through the National Endowment for the Arts. The position took him to Washington, D.C.

'I was the generation of the displaced housewife. It was tough. It also was quite interesting. Many of the women my age remarried, but I didn't.'

—Emma Burnett
Arts Assembly director

"He asked me to go but I couldn't afford to take the job. It didn't pay enough money. At that time, three of my kids were in the Oregon area of the country. Abner had graduated from the University of Texas. Melissa had married a guy in Washington State. Paul had gone with Abner and the two were in a rhythm and blues band with some kids from Oregon.

"I packed my television set, my silver, my china and my linen napkins and I headed for Oregon. All Southern women travel with their silver and china so they can have at least some sense of a home.

"I had been up there and visited a lot. I loved it and thought it was beautiful."

But she didn't have a job. Originally a journalism major, Ms. Burnett had written articles, mostly on fashion, for San Antonio Monthly magazine. She took the articles to a women's specialty shop and was hired.

At the end of four years, Ms. Burnett accepted the position as executive director of the Division of the Arts for the State of Louisiana.

"By then, I knew I wanted to come back to the South and closer to my children. State jobs don't come open that often. Texas was not going to come up and Louisiana came up."

Ms. Burnett also served as a local arts agency specialist for the Texas Arts Council from January 1993 to March 1994. When she had the opportunity to come to Midland — where her son Abner is an attorney — she accepted the offer. Part of what attracted her to the job of executive director of the assembly in Midland was the agency's potential for growth.

"We're looking at arts education as a new area of programming, which we haven't done a lot in. We are going to bring Missoula Children's Theatre to Midland the weekend before COA so it will really tie into the festival."

Missoula Children's Theatre will hold auditions for children in kindergarten through 12th grade for a production of "Beauty Lou and the Country Beast."

"There will be 50 to 55 children chosen to be in the production from all the schools,' Ms. Burnett said.

"It's a good vehicle with which to launch our arts education program," Ms. Burnett said.

'One of our grants that is so wonderful is the art project with the library, where you can actually go down and check out some fine art prints. I was in there the other day when we were unpacking the new ones. I think it's great. Everyone can enjoy it.'

—Emma Burnett
Arts Assembly director

"I worked there to keep body and soul alive until I got another job," said Ms. Burnett, who became the executive director of the Business Forums Management Association in 1984. In this position she administered all programs and activities for the 1,800-member international association that had an annual budget of $500,000.

"My former boss kept calling me from Washington and saying, 'You've got to get a job in the arts so I can move you to Washington.'

"I did get a job as executive director of the Beaverton Arts Commission, and I adored it. When they made the offer to me to come to the National Endowment for the Arts, it was really hard for me to go, but I went, initially thinking I would stay a year and then go back to Oregon."

She stayed more than a year, serving initially as special assistant to the director of Local Programs, then as acting program administrator for Local Programs and finally as program administrator.

"You only really stay four years on these contracts at NEA," Ms. Burnett said. "It was a fabulous learning experience. And I still use what I learned there. I learned how to use the federal agencies, who to call on and how to work within the bureaucracy actually to find support funds for projects. And I learned how to help people find fellowships. I learned about finding assistance for cities to do urban development. So the learning experience was invaluable."

'94 Jazz Classic to run Sept. 29 through Oct. 2

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Concert scheduled

The Shades will perform for the Summer Sunday Lawn Concert Series today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The free family entertainment starts at 7:45 p.m. on the museum grounds.

This seventh season of lawn concerts is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

A Midland-based dance band, the Shades is a three-time winner of the Reporter-Telegram "best of" poll and specializes in rock 'n' roll and country wester music.

Members are Murray Neese, lead vocals; Ken Morgan, guitar and vocals; Paul Molnar, bass and vocals; Ron Korner, drums and vocals; Phil Marquez, keyboards and vocals; and Bill Green, guitar, pedal steel and vocals.

The museum invites those attending to bring seating and picnics or snacks.

This is the final concert in the series.

■ Photos featured

A collection of recent photographs by Shawna Lloyd will be featured at Pages & Prints Bookstore, Wadley Avenue at Garfield Street, this month.

The exhibit will open with an artist's reception from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Ms. Lloyd will present black-and-white and color photographs that explore the juxtaposition of light and shadow. She uses simple subjects such as a chair leg, old silver and willow trees over a river to show her audience the "little things that intrigue me.

"I want to create for the viewer the mood I feel when I look at these prints," Ms. Lloyd said.

She uses different types of cameras to facilitate her mood photography.

For more information call the bookstore, 570-5173.

■ Experience shared

Midlander Johnnye Montgomery has recently completed a bike ride around the perimeter of Texas. She will share her experience with children in the parking lot in front of Pages & Prints Bookstore Saturday.

The free program begins at 10:30 a.m.

During her ride, Ms. Montgomery met two children who herd buffalo every summer, 13-year-old twins who pick onions 10 hours a day, a 12-year-old New Yorker who won a bull-riding championship and another 12-year-old boy in Muleshoe who produces television shows from his home.

In addition to sharing her stories, Ms. Montgomery will show these attending how to get a bike ready for a journey across town or across state.

Those attending are invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and bikes. For more information call 570-5173.

■ Appearance set

ODESSA — Michael Damian of "The Young and the Restless" will make a special appearance from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday at Permian Mall.

He will be signing autographs and posing for photographs. His Odessa appearance is made possible through Weir Brothers Entertainment, WildCat Records and Power 106, which will give away an autographed script copy from "The Young and the Restless" along with a Coca-Cola Red Hot Summer Sony WatchMan.

For more information call Clayton Allen, 570-8833.

■ Presentation set

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, is hosting a public reception and awards presentation for the Watercolor Horizons Group from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 14.

The exhibit will remain at the institute until Sept. 4.

Also on display is the exhibition "Echoes of New Mexico," paintings by Dorothy Peterson of Roswell, N.M., through Aug. 21.

Mrs. Peterson, a native of north-central New Mexico, maintains a working studio in Roswell and teaches at Eastern New Mexico University and the New Mexico Military Institute. She is listed in "Who's Who in American Art" and "Who's Who of the West."

She has served as a member of the New Mexico Arts Commission since 1983. She was formerly a faculty member at Midland College.

No admission is charged. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Entries due

Entries for the World Day of Poetry Competition are due Sept. 15 at the Permian Basin Chapter of the Poetry Society.

There is no entry fee for the contest. Poems may be open form and open subject with a 50-line limit. Each person may submit no more than three poems.

Cash prizes will be awarded.

The awards ceremony will be held on the World Day of Poetry, Oct. 15, in conjunction will a poetry workshop given by Reposa at Midland College.
