Evans gets official nod from Bush for Cabinet

By Margaret Rendall
MRT Correspondent

Don Evans will soon be shopping for a Washington D.C. home, but Midland won't be far from this thoughts.

Evans on Wednesday got the official invitation from President-elect George W. Bush to join the White House Cabinet.

"I am honored and humbled to serve our country as secretary of commerce," Evans said. "My mind and my body will be in Washington D.C., but my heart will be in Midland."

His Midland friends won't forget Evans either.

"Evans knows the oil industry inside and out," said Jim Henry of Henry Petroleum Corp. said. Evans has worked for many years for Tom Brown Inc.

Even as Henry and other Midland oilmen applauded the Evans selection they are closely watching to see who will be chosen for the all-important post of secretary of energy.

Bush's other Cabinet choices also are meeting with approval from Midland political watchers.

Paul O'Neill, chairman of aluminum giant Alcoa, has been named to head the Treasury Department. He served as deputy budget manager during the Ford administration.

O'Neill told the Associated Press he decided to return to public life to help Bush "achieve the greatness that I believe he aspires to for America."

Bush cleans out desk, resignation countdown begins

By Jim Vertuno

AUSTIN — Boxing up his collection of autographed baseballs and personal belongings at his office as he prepared to resign his state post, President-elect Bush got nostalgic Wednesday about his six years as governor of Texas.

"I'm going to miss this place. I have a lot of fond memories," Bush said as he left the office after a morning visit. "On the other hand, I'm looking forward to my new assignment. I'm enthusiastic and optimistic about what lies ahead."

Bush, who has moved forward with nominating his Cabinet and appointing White House staff, was planning to resign as governor Thursday, his campaign said.

Republican Lt. Gov. Rick Perry will be sworn in "within hours" of a Bush resignation, Perry spokeswoman Kathy Walt said.

Bush was elected governor in 1994, as the Texas Rangers baseball team owner defeated popular Democratic incumbent Ann Richards. His only previous political race was a failed bid for Congress in the late 1970s, when he lived in Midland.

As governor, Bush quickly got to work forming friendships and working relationships with crucial Democrats in the Texas Legislature, especially the late Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney.

He championed bipartisan efforts in Texas and later made that a cornerstone of his presidential run.

Already considered a presidential contender in 1998, Bush won a re-election landslide over Democratic opponent Garry Mauro. Bush's coattails helped fellow Republicans win every top statewide post that year, ending the Democrats' grip on the highest levels of Texas government.

Elector tells fifth-graders about historic vote count

By Margaret Rendall
MRT Correspondent

Thanks to the five-week ballot dispute between George W. Bush and Al Gore, Americans have had a serious brush-up on the Electoral College.

On Wednesday, a fifth-grade class got a special lesson on the Electoral College from a Midland Republican who helped make history as an elector earlier this week in Austin.

"Until this election even some adults thought that the Electoral College was a place where people went to get an education," former Midland Mayor Ernie Angelo told fifth-graders at Greathouse Elementary.

Angelo, who chaired the Electoral College vote in the Senate Chamber in Austin, explained his duties as an elector and as chairman of electors to the class.

He fielded many questions from the curious children.

Had anyone tried to sway his vote?

"No one really tried to contact me, but there was one elector who received over 10,000 e-mails, letters and phone calls from people trying to get him to change his vote," Angelo said.

Do electors have to stick to their candidates?

The venerable Midland Republican leader explained that electors are not legally bound to vote for the candidate they

Hope, Arkansas offers case study on how to be a presidential hometown

By Margaret Rendall
MRT Correspondent

With a couple of former Midlanders getting ready to move into the White House, their old hometown is getting more and more attention from the national media and curiosity seekers.

The mayor's specially appointed Sky's the Limit Committee is now trying to juggle multiple issues of historic preservation, tourism and civic pride as George W. and Laura Bush draw attention to the Tall City.

"I am really excited about what is going on. This is an exciting time for Midland," Mayor Bobby Burns said at the meeting. "It is critically important for Midland to capitalize on this; we've got a great opportunity."

Plans are still taking shape.

Committee members would like to see a museum with photographs of the entire Bush family that includes their relationship with the oil business.

Eight years ago, city leaders in Hope, Ark., were in the same position Midlanders are in today after

Toxicology reports in shooting unavailable until after holiday

From Staff Reports

It may be after Christmas before toxicology reports are available on the two men involved in a murder/suicide Monday in Midland.

Police said Christopher Macha shot John Seay six times before shooting himself Monday morning near T&T Donuts on Big Spring Street.

The shooting was reported Monday at about 7:15 a.m. Officers found a Glock 9mm weapon lying on the ground near the bodies.

Preliminary autopsy reports indicated Seay received one shot to the back, one to the right abdomen, one in the middle of the chest, one on the chin and two on the left side of the face.

Police say all but the shot to the abdomen could have been classified as fatal.

Macha's only wound was to his right temple.

The gunshot wounds and the casings found at the scene are consistent with the police's eyewitness report.

It is believed the shooting was the result of a grudge between Seay's family and Macha's family.

Macha's father August Macha worked for Seay Exploration as a landman in the 1980s. Police said Macha blamed Seay for his father being laid off during the 1980s oil bust.

Smith said the alleged incident happened during a call-for-service run and involved, "inappropriate conduct in handling a case."

New clean air rules address truck pollution

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Tackling one of the country's major sources of dirty air, the Environmental Protection Agency will require that heavy-duty trucks cut tailpipe emissions by 90 percent beginning in 2007.

The agency, in rules being made public Thursday, will require for the first time that new large trucks and buses have pollution controls similar to those mandated for years on cars, according to government, environmental and industry sources familiar with the rules.

At the same time the EPA will require that refiners, beginning in 2006, produce virtually sulfur-free diesel fuel to keep the diesel from interfering with the pollution controls required a year later.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the new engines, combined with cleaner fuel, will reduce by more than 90 percent the smog-causing nitrogen oxide and unhealthy microscopic dust from large trucks.

The requirements apply only to new equipment. It could take more than a decade for the cleaner burning trucks to replace most of the older, dirtier trucks now on the road, industry and government officials have estimated.

Nevertheless, word of the final EPA rule was applauded by environmentalists and state officials who have sought tighter controls on truck emissions to meet local air quality requirements.

"It will be a huge benefit, a huge victory for the environment," said Bill Becker, a lobbyist in Washington for state and local air pollution control agencies.

He said it was one of the Clinton administration's most significant environmental steps.

"Our days of tolerating thick, black belches of truck exhaust on city streets and highways are coming to an end," said Rebecca Stansfield, an attorney for the U.S. Public Interest Research Group, a grass-roots environmental organization.

Oil companies and truck engine manufacturers have questioned whether they can meet the EPA's timetable for both for the truck engines and the fuel.

"These are unprecedented standards," said Allen Schaeffer, executive director of the Diesel Technology Forum, an industry group. "The kind of levels of reductions that are being talked about are going to require technology that is not commercially available yet."

The EPA wants sulfur levels in diesel to be cut to 15 parts per million, compared with the average 500 parts per million in today's fuel. Oil companies have argued that reduction may not be technically possible and could lead to fuel shortages; they have urged a cut to 50 parts per million.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner has said the agency is giving industry enough time to make the improvements.

Under pressure from the Energy Department, the EPA agreed to a modest phase-in of both the truck and fuel requirements, but still well short of what industry had sought.

Under the rule, according to the sources, at least 75 percent of the diesel sold by mid-2006 will have to be ultra-low sulfur fuel, with full compliance covering all diesel fuel no later than 2010. Small refiners would get additional leeway.

Only half of the new trucks — or replacement truck engines — will have to meet the new emission controls beginning with the 2007 model years. All engines will be covered beginning in 2010.

The new standards will require that diesel exhaust particulate, or soot, be cut to 0.01 grams per unit of engine energy, compared with 0.1 under current standards.

Reductions in nitrogen oxide under the new standard will be cut from 2 parts per million to 0.2 parts per million. Most trucks now on the road may release no more than 4 parts per million.

Vaccine eases memory problem in mice with Alzheimer-like condition

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

Taking what could be an important step toward preventing Alzheimer's, scientists found that an experimental vaccine can largely ward off memory loss in mice stricken with a similar disease.

The vaccine is already being tested in people.

"This potentially could be a major breakthrough for us," said Zaven Khachaturian, senior science adviser to the Alzheimer's Association.

But he stressed that treatments that work in mice do not necessarily help people and that the mouse research did not deal with some key mental abilities lost in Alzheimer's, such as language and judgment.

The vaccine made headlines last year when scientists reported that it largely blocks the formation of protein deposits called amyloid plaques in the brains of mice. Such plaques are a hallmark of Alzheimer's.

But the next step was to find whether the vaccine makes any difference in the animals' mental functioning.

Two studies published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature found that the vaccine does indeed make a difference.

The research was conducted by two independent research teams, centered at the University of South Florida in Tampa and the University of Toronto in Ontario, Canada.

The studies used strains of mice that develop lots of amyloid plaques in their brains, along with measurable memory deficits, because of the genes they carry.

The researchers used different versions of a procedure in which mice swam until they learned the location of an underwater platform. The animals were then tested to see how well they remembered where the platform was. Alzheimer's patients frequently have trouble remembering locations and how to get to destinations.

Both studies found that mice that had been repeatedly vaccinated performed markedly better than the untreated plaque-forming mice in the memory tests. On some occasions they did as well or nearly as well as ordinary mice.

University of South Florida researcher Dave Morgan said his vaccinated mice were slower to learn the platform location but eventually remembered it as well as ordinary mice did.

This past July, drug company scientists announced that preliminary results in human patients indicated the vaccine was safe. Those tests were not designed to assess any effect on symptoms.

Human tests are continuing under the sponsorship of Elan Corp. of Dublin, Ireland, and American Home Products Corp. of Madison, N.J. Neither company paid for the new mouse studies.

The researchers who carried out the mouse studies said it is not clear why the vaccine protects memory. For one thing, the research does not settle the question of whether the plaques actually cause the symptoms of Alzheimer's.

The vaccine was designed to make the mouse immune system attack amyloid-beta peptide, also called beta amyloid, a key component of the brain plaques in Alzheimer's. And both studies found that vaccinated mice had fewer and smaller amyloid plaques in their brains.

But Morgan noted that his treated mice still had a lot of plaques.

He and Dr. Peter St George-Hyslop, one of the University of Toronto researchers, suggested the vaccine might act on a harmful form of amyloid-beta peptide outside of the plaques.

Clinton signs bill for chimpanzee sanctuaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton on Wednesday signed a bill creating lifetime sanctuaries for chimpanzees that the federal government has finished using for medical research.

The law requires the Department of Health and Human Services to contract with a nonprofit organization to "ensure a secure retirement" for federal research chimps and "meet their lifetime needs for shelter and care."

While signing the bill, Clinton expressed concern there will be no federal oversight of the sanctuary system, even though the government retains responsibly for the welfare of the chimps. He said it puts severe restraints on the use of a chimpanzee for further research once the animal is accepted into the sanctuary system.

"This is a common-sense solution to a problem for which the federal government bears responsibility," said Wayne Pacelle, senior vice president of Human Society of the United States. "These chimps have suffered enough, and it's time they are place in suitable housing to live out their lives in some comfort and security."

There are about 1,000 such chimpanzees in six federal biomedical research institutions across the country. The government overbred chimpanzees at the beginning of the AIDS epidemic.

Chimpanzees, which can live up to 60 years, cannot be returned to the wild after medical research because most of them carry diseases such as hepatitis and HIV. They also face death from wild chimpanzees that feel their territory has been violated.

It's expected to cost $8 to $15 a day to care for a chimpanzee in a sanctuary, compared to the $20 to $30 a day now being spent to house the animals in laboratory cages, according to the Humane Society.

Last May, scientist Jane Goodall, who has been studying primates in Tanzania since the 1960s, asked during a congressional hearing on the bill:

EVANS: Bush also names others

(From 1A)

Jerry Jones, president of Midland Business Center, called the O'Neill nomination a very healthy decision.

"I think his strength is that he understands the private sector, he is not someone who has had his entire career in government," Jones said. "His credentials indicate strength in administrative work and he has experience with (Fed Chairman Alan) Greenspan, who he will have to interface with him on a daily basis."

Bush also named Californian Ann Veneman to be the first female secretary of agriculture.

Ms. Veneman served as director of the California Food and Agriculture Department from 1996 to 1998. She was also the highest-ranking woman in the U.S. Department of Agriculture from 1989 to 1991 during the first Bush presidency.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Larry Combest, who represents a portion of Midland County, said Ms. Veneman is a good choice.

"I look forward to working with Ms. Veneman," Combest said. "She knows policy and the way things get done in Washington. All of us will be tested as we continue to strive to solve the problems that have been facing agriculture for several years, and her experience will be very important."

Mel Martinez, a Cuban refugee who has been a rising star on Florida's political scene, has been nominated to serve as secretary of Housing and Urban Development. He co-chaired Bush's campaign in Florida and is a close ally of Jeb Bush, governor of Florida and George W. Bush's younger brother.

HOPE: Clinton's mother aided process

(From 1A)

Bill Clinton was elected.

"All of a sudden Hope, Arkansas was on the map," said Gary Johnson, director of the Hope Visitors Center. "People started coming to see where Bill Clinton was born and we quickly realized that we were going to have to come up with some kind of plan."

Hope, population 10,000, had a tourism tax in place before Clinton's election. The bulk of the money raised was funneled into the Hope Watermelon Festival, previously Hope's claim to fame.

"We redirected some of that revenue to go toward our Hope Visitors Center/Clinton Hope Museum," Johnson said.

To house the visitors center, the town acquired an abandoned downtown railroad station.

"Clinton remembered the train station from childhood since it was only four blocks away from his home," Johnson said. "This is a sentimental connection."

The railroad donated the abandoned station and Hope won a federal $400,000 grant which paid for more than 80 percent of the building renovations. The city spent more than $100,000 in tax money on other renovations and decoration of the station.

The Visitors Center/Clinton Hope Museum did not open until 1997. Prior to then, tourists were directed to the Chamber of Commerce where they were given pamphlets and a map of the town.

The city spends $65,000 a year maintaining the station and adding new exhibits. The tiny community plays host to 20,000 visitors a year.

"We are not at all finished," Thompson said. "I am hoping to have one exhibit finished this week actually."

The railroad station is not the only tourist attraction in Hope. Becky Moore is the executive director of the Clinton Birthplace Foundation, which was formed in 1992. The foundation purchased the home from one of Clinton's cousins and only finished paying it off last year.

The house did not open to the public until 1997. It was purchased, furnished and is maintained by a non-profit foundation. The funds come from corporate and private donors, fund raisers and membership drives. The cost of purchasing, restoring and furnishing the house was $1.5 million.

Clinton's mother, Virginia Clinton Kelly, walked through the house and described to the foundation board members how it was originally decorated.

"She helped tremendously," Mrs. Moore said.

Ticket sales help pay for maintenance costs, along with sales at the gift shop located next to the house. In addition to the house, the Virginia Clinton Kelly Memorial Garden is located on the grounds.

"It is a beautiful garden area, set up after the death of Clinton's mother," Mrs. Moore said.

Upkeep costs are approximately $7,000 a month. The house does not yet pay for itself, but it does come close, Mrs. Moore said. She is taking steps to get the home recognized as a national landmark which would make it eligible for government funding.

Mrs. Moore suggests that anyone trying to do something similar visit other birthplace homes.

"We went to other cities and looked at a lot of birthplace homes," she said. "It really helped."

ELECTOR: Students have been watching process had pledged to support.

"We are morally and ethically bound," Angelo said.

How does it work?

Electors vote by secret ballot and slip their votes into a ballot box. The box was then given to Angelo who was charged with the responsibility of reading the votes aloud and tallying them.

There was one heart-stopping moment in the formal proceedings on Monday.

After Angelo read the last vote in the ballot box, the electors and spectators let out a cheer. However, the secretary and the press realized only 31 votes had been read aloud.

"I looked into the ballot box and saw an envelope in there," Angelo said. "My hand was shaking as I pulled the envelope out and looked inside it. Fortunately the ballot was in the envelope and the vote was for Bush."

An elector had mistakenly put her ballot back into the envelope after voting.

"The Austin-American Statesman ran a story about it because it was the only unexpected event of the day," Angelo said.

The Greathouse fifth-graders have been closely watching the election process all year.

Angelo even helped one fifth-grader zero in on his own political aspiration.

"I would like to be an elector some day," 11-year-old John Chirico said. "I'm really into politics and I think it is cool that Mr. Angelo came to talk to us."

Tara Cordon, a 10-year-old in the class also enjoyed the event.

"I think it is really cool that (Angelo) has met George Bush," Tara said.

Bush tells ministers, religious leaders he has plan to expand churches' role

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — President-elect George W. Bush took another step Wednesday toward easing straints from the presidential race, meeting with about 30 ministers and other religious leaders, many of them black, to discuss his plans to greatly expand the role of churches and charities in federal welfare programs.

At a closed meeting that lasted for more than an hour at the First Baptist Church, in downtown Austin, Bush asked the ministers how his administration should proceed with what he calls "faith-based" initiatives, a catchall term for financing churches and private charities to take over government-run welfare functions and using tax breaks and other incentives to spur charitable donations.

Repeatedly during the meeting, according to participants, Bush emphasized that he knew many in the black community viewed him with great skepticism, and he asked how he could reverse that and not wind up a year from now, according to one person who attended, "with folks asking whether this was just smoke and mirrors.

"People said, 'Listen, there is a discrepancy now, there's a great divide,' and reference was made to the fact that over 90 percent of the black community did not vote for him," said Rev. Eugene Rivers, pastor of Azura Christian Community, in Boston. "He said, 'Look, there is a perception gap, and there are folks who feel they are not included. What we need to do to correct that gap?'"

At one point, said the Rev. Jim Wallis, a leader in Call to Renewal, an ecumenical coalition that focuses on poverty issues, one participant told Bush there "aren't great expectations" for his administration in the inner city community where she worked. Wallis said Bush acknowledged that, at which point Wallis said he told the president-elect, "I hope you surprise us."

During his opening statement to the group, Bush said that he "really wants to bridge the gaps that exist among the different groups in this country," according to Bishop Joseph A. Fiorenza of Houston, who is president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. Bush, he added, said "he's very sincere in wanting to be the president of all the people."

Bush also said "he was looking for some ideas he could put in his inaugural address that could make the country realize he is sincere about bringing this country together," Fiorenza said.

Bush did not lay out any specific programs or legislation, but according to people at the meeting, he indicated the likely head of a new federal office for initiatives he plans to create will be Stephen Goldsmith, the former mayor of Indianapolis, who served as Bush's chief domestic policy advisor during the campaign.

In addition to creating a federal "Office of Faith-Based Action," Bush has said other initiatives will include working to eliminate regulations that prohibit religious groups from participating in federal programs; making it easier for churches, charities and other nongovernmental organizations to get taxpayer money so they can operate federal programs, and creating tax breaks to boost individual and corporate charitable donations.

Despite support from the ministers who attended Wednesday's meeting, many clergy are wary of increased government funding for religious social-service programs. They fear it will inevitably lead to government regulation and interference in their ministries, or that tax dollars will be channeled to the largest and most politically connected ministers. And others are concerned the whole initiative amounts to government financing for religious proselytizing.

"There are many religious traditions in this land," said Rev. C. Welton Gaddy, executive director of the Interfaith Alliance, a group that opposes the religious right. "How do we guarantee that minority religions have the same access that majority religions have? You have a situation in which an organization could turn food or clothing or counseling or rehabilitation into a tool for proselytizing," said Gaddy, who was not at the meeting. "And you have the government supporting that. This concerns me."

state office before making his Cabinet announcements and a meeting with leaders of religious organizations. Texas House Speaker Pete Laney, a Democrat from Hale Center, came by to visit with him.

"I'll always be a Texan," Bush told reporters. "I'm packing up my baseballs."

It was Bush's first visit to his Capitol office since last week.

Bush does not own a house in Austin and continues to live at the Texas governor's mansion.

Perry owns a home in Austin and has a "loose agreement" with Bush that he can stay in the mansion until Jan. 16, when he may be ready to move to Washington, spokeswoman Walt said. Bush becomes president on Jan. 20.

Bush looks to fellow GOP governors to fill top posts

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bush looked to fellow Republican governors for his Cabinet-in-the-making Wednesday, with Christie Whitman of New Jersey poised to take over the nation's top environmental post and Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin the front-runner for secretary of health and human services.

Montana Gov. Marc Racicot, one of the first state executives to encourage a Bush presidential bid, said Wednesday night he turned down the attorney general's job. The move upgraded the prospects of Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, a favorite of conservatives who has been under consideration. Other candidates include outgoing Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo. and former Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo.

"I'm just at a point of time in life and with my family that I'm not sure that that would be in our best interest," Racicot told The Associated Press after a private meeting with Bush. Some conservatives had objected to Racicot's candidacy, complaining, too, that the Cabinet may be shaping up as overly moderate.

Uncertainty also crept into Bush's search for a defense secretary. Top advisers said the president-elect has not settled on a Pentagon chief, rolling back from their earlier assessments about former Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind. They suggested that Coats is still a top candidate, but cautioned against assuming he would get the job.

Bush has decided to nominate Whitman to head the Environmental Protection Agency, but had not formally offered her the job, two senior Republican official said Wednesday night, adding that she was virtually assured to get the call when Bush was ready to announce the post. Thompson's status was a bit less solid than Whitman's, though the officials said he was expected to get the nod.

Whitman could be nominated as early as Friday. Thompson was penciled in for an announcement Friday or next week, the officials said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

On a day Bush announced his nominees to head the treasury, agriculture, commerce and housing agencies, the Texan worked behind the scenes to piece together the rest of his Cabinet. A top Bush adviser said no announcements were expected Thursday.

Among the developments:

■ Former Sen. Bennett Johnston, one of the Democrats Bush has considered for the Cabinet, took himself out of the running for energy secretary. The former chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, who is now a lobbyist in Washington, withdrew for personal reasons but said he would have enjoyed the "privilege of working with the Bush team." Johnston was a serious candidate who had discussed the job with Vice President-elect Cheney, but was never offered the post, GOP sources said.

■ Thomas Kuhn, a Yale classmate of Bush's who heads the Edison Electric Institute, a utility trade group, emerged as a candidate for energy secretary. He has raised more than $100,000 for Bush.

■ With Johnston out of the picture, Bush stepped up his search for a Democrat for his Cabinet. Speculation centered on the energy and education departments. Alaska Gov. Tony Knowles, a Democrat, was a possibility at energy, while Sandy Kress of Texas and the Rev. Floyd Flake of New York were mentioned for education.

Flake attended a meeting of religious leaders with Bush on Wednesday, and advisers to the Texan said Flake, an advocate of school vouchers, was being seriously considered. Arizona education superintendent Lisa Graham Keegan, a GOP ally of Bush, also is a candidate for education secretary.

A senior Republican close to Bush's team said veterans' affairs could yield a Democratic secretary, adding that Rep. John "Ike" Skelton, D-Mo., and Rep. Norman Sisisky, D-Va., were under consideration. However, Bush would have trouble recruiting Democrats from a House split almost evenly.

Bush hoped to fill most of his Cabinet before Christmas, particularly the top four jobs: secretaries of state, defense, treasury and attorney general.

Paul O'Neill, chairman of Alcoa and a former Ford administration budget expert, was nominated Wednesday as treasury secretary.

Bush's first Cabinet announcement was to name retired Gen. Colin Powell secretary of state-designate Saturday.

Racicot's announcement was bound to slow Bush's timetable for attorney general. Recounting his conversation with Bush, Racicot said: "He said, 'Do you want to be considered or do you not?' I said, after thinking about it, 'I think that I should withdraw my name from consideration."

Keating, a former FBI agent and Justice Department veteran, is favored by conservatives as well as many career Justice employees.

In New Jersey, allies of Whitman were telling associates the governor has accepted Bush's offer to head the Environmental Protection Agency. But sources close to the Bush camp said he had settled on her as his choice, but would not close the deal until closer to the announcement.

A number of Republican officials familiar with the deliberations said Bush had tentatively settled on Thompson for secretary of Health and Human Services. They said the nomination could be made official in the next week.

Federal Consumer Protection has confirmed the accuracy of the fuel saving theories in this advertisement.

Device May Increase Gas Mileage Significantly

BOSTON - After studying the Platinum Gas Saver for five years, Federal Consumer Protection concluded: "Independent testing shows greater fuel savings with the device than that claimed by the developer (National Fuelsaver Corporation of Boston)."

With a simple connection to a vacuum line, the Gas Saver adds microscopic quantities of platinum to the air-fuel mixture entering your engine.

Platinum was chosen for the Gas Saver for the same reason that it was chosen for the catalytic converter. Platinum has the unique ability to make non-burning fuel burn.

Since the average gasoline engine burns only 68% of each gallon that you pump into it, and since the unburnt fuel leaving an engine is pollution, the platinum of the catalytic converter burns the 32% of your fuel that did not burn in the engine.

Unfortunately, the converter's platinum burns this gasoline in the tail pipe, where the heat and energy produced from burning this fuel cannot be harnessed to drive your vehicle.

But by adding platinum to the air-fuel mixture, the Gas Saver enables most of this fuel to burn while it is still inside the engine, converting potential pollution into more miles per gallon.

In addition to this government study, the Gas Saver has received patents for cleaning out the carbon deposits and raising octane, making premium fuel unnecessary for most vehicles.

Joel Robinson, the developer, commented: "We have sold almost a half million Gas Savers. To our surprise, as many people buy the Gas Saver because it extends engine life (by cleaning out the abrasive carbon deposits) as buy it to increase gas mileage or raise octane."

Israel politics facing contest of extremes

One of the foreign policy challenges our new president will undoubtedly face in his first weeks and months in office will be the ongoing instability in the Middle East.

Our longtime ally Israel is in the midst of a political shakeup that reminds us of the relative peacefulness of our drawnout Nov. 7 presidential contest.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak abruptly announced his resignation earlier this month, but vowed that his name would be on the ballot in the Feb. 6 election for that nation's top job.

The man vanquished by Barak in the previous contest for prime minister, right winger Benjamin Netanyahu, has shown strong support in the Israeli electorate and even overcame a rule that would have held him ineligible. Among other demands, he is crying out for a complete dissolution of parliament. Although he is not now on the ballot, many watchers of Israeli politics believe the wily Netanyahu, brother of a hero killed in the famous 1976 raid on the Entebbe airport and an American-educated professional who understands the game of public relations, will end up in the February contest one way or another.

Seventy-two-year-old Ariel Sharon, head of Israel's Likud Party and a fixture on the nation's political scene, and former Prime Minister Shimon Peres, 77, who succeeded assassinated Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, also are among those seen as leading contenders.

's swings back and forth the pendulum Israeli politics.

our nation, it seems our political forces iginate from the two extremes, ultimately o find a moderating voice somewhere in the middle.

But Israeli politics have had a distinct back-and-forth pattern in recent years.

Netanyahu rose to prominence and to the prime minister's office in the 1990s, fueled by the orthodox wing which believed the Rabin gang had sacrificed too much in its attempts for peace with the Palestinians.

Within a few years, Netanyahu (also saddled with a willful wife with a taste for the finer things) fell out of favor as Israelis showed signs of a willingness to compromise.

Thus Barak defeated Netanyahu in the subsequent contest for prime minister.

It didn't take long before Barak was seen as unproductive in meetings with the ever-insistent Chairman Yasser Arafat and Barak began a steep, steady slide in the polls.

Rock-throwing and gunfire continue in this turbulent section of the globe, and ironically a peace deal that would end the turmoil is seen as Barak's only possible political salvation. Again, Israelis don't want a deal that gives up too much.

Thankfully, President-elect George W. Bush is assembling a top-notch foreign policy team that includes former Gen. Colin Powell, Condoleezza Rice and, of course, the venerable Dick Cheney.

Many Americans, particularly at Christmastime, continue to feel a deep connection to the region we regard as the Holy Land. We continue to hope and pray for a long-lasting peace.

Supreme Court undermines its authority

WASHINGTON — Over the years we have been asked which branch of government was the strongest, and we have answered the Supreme Court. The recent election once again proved the point, and it did so in more than one way.

Anderson

The U.S. Supreme Court does not have the enforcement mechanisms of the executive branch, with its armed forces, FBI, etc., and it does not have the power bases of the legislative branch with its home-base constituencies. All it has are the Constitution and its credibility.

The constitutional aspect was challenged by President Andrew Jackson when he proclaimed, "Supreme Court Chief Justice John Marshall has made his decision, now let him enforce it." This was a response to the 1832 Worcester v. Georgia ruling in which the court declared that the state of Georgia "can have no force" on Cherokee lands. It was a low point in American history for the executive branch. Jackson was intent upon removing Native Americans from their lands, and the Supreme Court, to its credit, tried unsuccessfully to stop him.

But the court's moral authority was sapped 25 years later by the Roger B. Taney court through its 1857 ruling on Scott v. Sanford. This was the famous Dred Scott decision, which effectively pronounced slavery to be legal throughout the nation, and that at a time when slavery was on the decline. This decision alienated a majority of the nation and undermined the court's credibility. As a result, when civil war broke out four years later, President Abraham Lincoln assumed near-dictatorial powers (including imprisonment without evidence of suspected sympathizers with the South) because the Taney court was virtually ignored. That moral authority was further undermined in the 1896 Plessy v. Ferguson case, which pronounced the theory of "separate but equal" to be the law of the land, a pronouncement that legalized segregation. The decision was overturned by the Earl Warren court in the landmark 1954 Brown v. Board of Education case, which once again established the court as the credible conscience of the nation and defender of the Constitution.

Now the William Rehnquist court has once again undermined the Supreme Court's authority by deciding on a 5-4 vote who would become the next president. There is no debate that this was done, only why. But more important is what impact the decision will have on the future of the court, the Constitution and the country.

History will certainly not judge this as one of the court's finest hours. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said "At the end of the day, perhaps the greatest damage has been done to the Supreme Court ..." Indeed, the dissents of four justices were so stinging that there will be little doubt left in the minds of future generations that the court had degenerated into crass political partisanship. The nation most certainly will decide that it can never again risk such a decision.

What will the immediate impact be? A 50-50 Senate is empowered by the Constitution to consent to any Supreme Court appointment, so Democrats are not likely to continue the tradition of allowing the president, within reason, to appoint justices who share his philosophy. And this is good. For too long the legislative branch has abrogated this constitutional power, so senators may yet turn the court back into a balanced institution.

Next, Justice Antonin Scalia may have to remain content not being the chief justice. As the most blatantly political of the justices during the Bush decision, it is unlikely that Senate Democrats would go along with his promotion.

Then there is the Constitution. Clearly, our election laws and the provisions in the Constitution need fixing. The Supreme Court's behavior has made it clear that judicial involvement in elections should be minimized. We have recommended retention of the Electoral College on the Maine-Nebraska basis, where electors are allocated by congressional districts, which would greatly reduce the likelihood of either an electoral tie or judicial intrusion, thereby forcing Congress and the Supreme Court to keep their distance.

Talking about fairness often a partisan tactic

WASHINGTON — After Europe's liberals helped Count Cavour unify Italy, he was asked how he would discharge that moral debt. He said he would astonish the world with his ingratitude. Today conservatives, who are temperamental pessimists and George W. Bush's base, are bracing themselves for betrayal in the name of "bipartisanship." They know talk about bipartisanship is usually a partisan tactic.

Will

But Bush, too, probably knows that most political and journalistic boilerplate about the need to "heal" the "deeply divided nation" has the partisan purpose of paralyzing him, turning him away from his political program, toward therapeutic gestures of "healing." But what wounds need healing? Those inflicted by a campaign best described by Freud's phrase "the narcissism of small differences"?

Fifty years ago the names of Joseph McCarthy, Alger Hiss and the Rosenbergs denoted America's differences. Thirty-five years ago Americans argued about guaranteeing African-Americans access to public accommodations and polling places. Thirty years ago the nation was riven by a ground war of attrition in Asia. Twenty years ago a president who believed the Soviet Union was "the focus of evil in the modern world" replaced a president whose secretary of state had said that Leonid Brezhnev "shares our dreams and aspirations." Today, who really believes Americans are at daggers drawn about the differences between Bush's and Gore's plans for prescription drug benefits?

Granted, many African-American leaders are miffed, but what else is new? For Jesse Jackson, it is forever Selma, Ala., 1965. Brit Hume of Fox News notes that Jackson, a diligent recycler of rhetoric, has recently been reminded of Selma by: the Supreme Court, Palm Beach County's butterfly ballot, a Houston debate about racial preferences, a Decatur, Ill., dispute about high school discipline, and an accidental police shooting in Riverside, Calif. Jesse Jackson Jr. has said, jokingly, his father wanted to name him Selma.

The Congressional Black Caucus is pouting, many members threatening an action that might not be noticed — a boycott of inaugural events. The three most admired Americans may be Oprah Winfrey (Bush's kiss of her helped reignite his sagging campaign), Colin Powell and Michael Jordan, and the three most eminent African-Americans in public service — Clarence Thomas, Powell and Condoleezza Rice — have ascended with Republican sponsorship. Yet the Black Caucus in its time warp clings to the idea that African-Americans are as much victims of racism as they were 40 years ago.

Tom Daschle, Senate Democratic leader, says bipartisanship is wonderful. He also says: Bush's proposed tax cut "would divide this nation more quickly" than anything he, Daschle, can think of. Bush's proposal for partial privatization would "destroy" Social Security. Bush's modest proposal for school choice for pupils in failing schools is "a non-starter." So bipartisanship as Daschle offers it is akin to what Grant offered Lee at Appomattox: a chance to surrender.

However, the sputtering economy is strengthening the case for Bush's tax cut. The younger the voters polled, the more they support partial privatization of Social Security, so the evolution of the electorate favors Bush. School choice is the most direct appeal Bush can make to African-American voters. They support choice more than do most African-American leaders, who are in league with teachers unions, and more than affluent whites, who are satisfied with their public schools. Pressing for repeal of the estate tax and marriage penalty will give Bush either early signing ceremonies or will give Republicans issues for 2002.

Bush, fresh from a crash course on the importance of courts, should begin his presidency by standing his ground so he will have had ample practice doing that when the stakes become highest, with judicial nominees.

So, here are four rejoinders to "bipartisanship" rhetoric: Conflict avoidance becomes habitual. Risk-averse presidents are constantly at risk. The rule regarding power is use it or lose it. And Bush will never have more of it than he will have next spring.

Attics are full of treasures that one day may be useful

At Christmastime we can discuss the gifts and other items that never worked, which every man treasures and every woman wants to throw out.

All cellars and attics are stuffed with things that were never put together or, if put together, never worked.

Dickerson took me up to his attic to show me his "treasures."

He held up a VHS machine. "It's from a very reliable salesman. When I bought it the man said it would last forever. When I brought it back the man said his store never takes back merchandise. I had no choice but to put it in the attic."

I said, "Is that a TV set?"

"Yes it used to work in the '70s, but then it stopped so I decided to put it up here."

Buchwald

"Why?"

"Someday I can use it for spare parts for the set I have downstairs. I always feel bad when I throw anything away that I could use someday."

"Do you know how to fix a TV set?"

"It's all in this manual that I have up here. Ida makes fun of me but she doesn't understand electronics. This is my microwave oven. It died after I tried to heat a can of Campbell's soup. They told me it would cost $123 to fix it, so I keep it here where it will be safe."

"That makes sense."

"This is a toy fire truck. It came missing six parts so I never got it to run. This is a collection of cameras that don't work, and pretty soon I'll have the best collection of broken cell phones in the neighborhood. Over here on this clothes rack are things I bought from catalogues. Nothing fit me."

"Why don't you send them back?"

"I hate to wait in post office lines."

At that moment Ida came upstairs. "Are you showing off your seven-year-old computer?"

"Not yet. I still haven't shown him my 35-year-old Remington typewriter that I haven't used for 15 years."

I asked, "Are those shotguns over there?"

Ida said, "Yes, but they don't work. Everything up here doesn't work, but he won't get rid of any of it. Would you believe he still has his roller skates from his youth? The only thing I won't let him keep are letters from his old girlfriends."

When Ida wasn't looking Dickerson winked at me, pointed to a locker box, and mouthed, "In there."

Taliban says sanctions will only hurt poor

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan's ruling Taliban militia, protesting harsh new sanctions over its refusal to surrender terrorist suspect Osama bin Laden, ordered U.N. offices closed Wednesday and vowed to boycott peace talks.

The sanctions — chiefly a one-sided arms embargo, a ban on official travel and the closure of Taliban offices outside Afghanistan — are not directed at the Afghan people but are designed to isolate the Taliban, said Erick de Mul, the U.N.'s chief coordinator for humanitarian aid to Afghanistan.

However, the Taliban maintained the sanctions will only hurt the poorest and most vulnerable in Afghanistan, a country already suffering from its worst drought in 30 years. Supreme leader Mullah Mohammed Omar called the sanctions "an oppressive action to subject the poor to inhuman sanctions."

"Step by step, the international community is killing Afghanistan," said 55-year-old Mohammed Zahir, echoing sentiments shared by other Kabul residents. "Slowly, slowly they are letting us die."

'Our position on Osama is unchanged. There is no evidence against Osama.'
— Qadratullah Jamal, Taliban's information minister

The U.N. Security Council on Tuesday gave the Taliban a month to hand over bin Laden and to close terrorist training camps — or suffer new sanctions. Bin Laden is suspected of masterminding the deadly bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in 1998.

The Taliban's information minister, Qadratullah Jamal, denied that Afghanistan was host to terrorist training camps. And the new sanctions won't result in bin Laden's extradition, he added.

"Our position on Osama is unchanged. There is no evidence against Osama. We think this is just an excuse," he said in Kabul. "The United States and Russia are using the excuse of Osama and terrorism, but really it is the Islamic system of the Taliban they want to destroy."

The Taliban ordered a boycott of U.S. and Russian products, and Foreign Minister Wakil Ahmed Muttawakil urged Islamic countries to join Afghanistan in trying to "hurt the economy of these countries."

The United States and Russia, former superpower rivals, had lobbied hard to get the 13 other U.N. Security Council members to adopt the resolution, calling Afghanistan a "haven of lawlessness."

The boycott is little more than a gesture since Afghans, among the poorest in the world, can't afford the few U.S. products on the market, such as cigarettes and candy.

However, the Taliban's vow to close the United Nations' political offices when the sanctions take effect was a major setback, said Koichiro Tanaka, de Mul's political affairs adviser. Other U.N. humanitarian and charity aid workers won't be affected.

The United Nations has been brokering talks to end 20 years of civil war between the Taliban, which enforces a strict brand of Islam over 95 percent of Afghanistan, and the country's opposition, which is led by ousted President Burhanuddin Rabbani and holds some territory in the north.

"The Taliban have to understand that anyone but the U.N. would be unacceptable for the U.N. and for the international community," Tanaka said from Pakistan.

Fearing a violent backlash to the sanctions, the United Nations withdrew its international staff this week. However, de Mul said Afghanistan had been quiet so far. "We will watch for another day and then we will begin to return," he said by telephone from Islamabad, Pakistan.

Pakistan withdraws some troops from Kashmir border

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan made a peace overture to its rival India on Wednesday, announcing the withdrawal of some of its troops from the volatile border of Kashmir, the flashpoint of two wars between the South Asian nuclear powers.

The gesture came in response to India's offer to extend by a month a cease-fire with Islamic militants waging a bitter insurgency in the Indian-held part of the divided Himalayan territory.

Pakistan urged India to withdraw troops from its side of the Line of Control, the 1973 cease-fire line through Kashmir, which last year was the scene of fierce fighting between India and Islamic militants. Those clashes nearly escalated into another full-fledged war between the two countries.

"The fact is that we have withdrawn troops from the line of control and that is a very positive step and we would like to see India now reciprocate," Gen. Rashid Quereshi, a Pakistani army spokesman, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Concerns mounted over India and Pakistan's bloody rivalry over Kashmir — which both claim in its entirety — after the two countries tested nuclear weapons in 1998. They have fought two wars over the territory, divided between them after British rule in the subcontinent ended in 1947.

Pakistan has 25,000 to 30,000 troops deployed along the frontier, where they and Indian forces often trade fire. The army did not specify how many would be withdrawn, but it said the pullback already had begun.

The withdrawal "manifests Pakistan's earnest and genuine desire to de-escalate the situation in order to facilitate the process of meaningful dialogue on the issue," the army said in a statement.

It comes on top of a withdrawal of some troops ordered by Pakistan's military ruler, Gen. Pervez Musharraf soon after he came to power in an October 1999 coup. "Those soldiers never returned to the Line of Control and this is more that we are withdrawing," said Quereshi.

Islamic guerrillas battling Indian forces in Kashmir are demanding either independence or unification with Pakistan. India accuses Islamabad of fomenting the insurgency, but Pakistan said it gives only moral and political support to the rebels, many of whom are based on its soil.

India says it is willing to open negotiations with the guerrillas, but refuses to include Pakistan in the talks. It has refused separate negotiations with Pakistan over the broader issues of their rivalry until it halts support for the insurgents.

After lifetime of election losses, Shimon Peres may try again

JERUSALEM (AP) — A perennial loser in Israel's bruising election battles, Shimon Peres was on the verge Wednesday of entering the prime minister's race, driven by the belief he has the credibility with the Palestinians to negotiate an elusive peace deal.

The 77-year-old Nobel laureate has failed to capture the office in five previous electoral tries. But polls show him running ahead of Prime Minister Ehud Barak, and in a virtual tie with right-wing hawk Ariel Sharon.

Peres, a key architect of Israel's land-for-peace strategy, told lawmakers Wednesday he intends to run, but he needs signatures from 10 members of the 120-member Israeli parliament, or Knesset, by midnight tonight.

"He does intend to run," said Ran Cohen, a member of parliament with the left-leaning Meretz party, which may supply most or all of the needed signatures.

Peres was evasive when asked about his plans following a speech Wednesday evening near Tel Aviv.

"This is the first time in my experience that I did not approach the people, but the people approached me," he said. "So I ask you — should I run?"

After a half-century in Israeli politics, Peres has won a Nobel Prize for his peace efforts, a host of lesser honors and worldwide acclaim as statesman — but he's never triumphed in a major election at home.

Despite his tireless advocacy of Mideast peacemaking, Peres has never really connected emotionally with the broad mass of Israeli voters. Many regard his vision of an Israel at ease with its Arab neighbors and in close economic cooperation with them as too starry-eyed given the decades of bitter conflict.

However, Peres has negotiated with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat for years, and has developed a level of rapport and trust that no other senior Israeli politician can match.

While Barak has made significant concessions to the Palestinians — offering a state in most of the West Bank and Gaza and a share of Jerusalem — his relationship with Arafat has often appeared strained, particularly during the violence over the past three months.

The affable Peres, some Israelis believe, might maneuver with more finesse.

But Sharon and other right-wing critics say Peres — like Barak, in their view — is far too willing to offer concessions to the Palestinians and does not place enough emphasis on Israel's security.

Polls suggest that in a three-way race with Peres, Barak and Sharon, none would garner the 50 percent needed to win outright in the first round on Feb. 6.

However, Sharon and Peres would both outpoll Barak, leaving the beleaguered prime minister on the sidelines in a runoff ballot.

In a hypothetical second round, Sharon and Peres are in a statistical dead heat, with many voters still undecided, according to a poll in the Yediot Ahronot newspaper Wednesday.

A Sharon-Peres race would be a contest between the last two major politicians from Israel's founding generation — two men in their 70s with diametrically opposed views of the Jewish state's relations with the Arabs.

Local merchants: Holiday sales up

By Leslie Burleson
Staff Writer

The cash register is ringing in a bright Christmas season for Midland merchants, all of whom expressed a positive attitude toward holiday business.

The season is so successful at Susie's South Forty Confections that it's being measured in tons. Owner Susie Hitchcock-Hall estimated earlier this year that her sales from October through December would be 23.5 tons, and she's exceeded that estimate.

"It's overwhelming, it's incredible," she said, citing business both at her Wadley Avenue store, which opened around Mother's Day, and mail orders from across the country. Her original store on Old Lamesa Road now includes a huge assembly line for the company's products.

Ms. Hitchcock-Hall said when she started the company 10 years ago, "I knew it would be a success, but I never knew it would be this big." Her most popular item is Texas Pecan Toffee, followed closely by pralines and fudge. "Every batch is made from scratch," she said. "It's just like your grandmother is in the kitchen for you." South Forty Confections employs 43 people, many of them seasonal workers.

Another locally owned business — Domain home furnishings and accessories —reports great sales. Owner Pamela Brice said of the season, "We are quite a bit ahead of last year."

Christmas decorations and furniture are particularly strong this year, and Ms. Brice said their same-day delivery promotion has been popular. "People often don't want to wait for their furniture," she said.

Isidra Ochoa, head cook at Susie's South Forty Confections, cuts fudge with her custom-made blade roller.

What's hot at Barnes & Noble? "Anything to do with George Bush," said manager William McNutt. "And more and more people are turning to gift cards." Looking like a plastic credit card, the gift certificates give people the option to pick their own reading material, McNutt said.

Dillard's manager Mike Richmond said that this year is an improvement on last year.

"Men's wear is always strong at Christmas time," he said, adding that it's the only time of the year that men's clothing beats out the women's clothing in sales.

Expressions owner Sandra Green said the gift store's business is "definitely better than last

Last-minute shoppers ready to hit the stores

By Julie Jacobs and Andy Hancock
MRT Correspondents

Last-minute shopping is getting under way as Christmas Day rapidly approaches, which means Midland Park Mall — and other popular shopping spots around town — will be crammed with shoppers between now and Sunday.

That can be great for local merchants, of course, but it can work on the nerves of the shoppers, themselves.

Whether they waited because of time restrictions, busy schedules, or just procrastination, many Midlanders are now finding themselves parading to local shops and businesses to buy those last-minute Christmas items.

Some readily admit they wish they had started earlier.

"I much perfer having it done early.

Cold weather to greet first day of winter

Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

This morning you may notice a cooler chill in the air as a cold front makes its way through Midland. It could not have come at a more appropriate time with today marking the first day of winter. As people run around frantically attempting to complete their Christmas shopping and plan last-minute trips, many also wonder what the coming winter has in store for them.

But according to the experts, this year's winter won't be anything out of the ordinary.

Overall, temperatures through April look to be slightly above normal, said chief meteorologist Ray Fagen. However, this past fall local residents may have noticed the cooler temperatures during November, a month that was the third coolest November since 1930.

"We had 1.2 inches of snow in November, the sixth most snow in November since 1930," said meteorologist Jack Ciccone. "However, we are nowhere near making the top ten snowfall in December, yet. It's been a topsy-turvy temperature ride this December with many days above normal and many below normal."

Today's cool temperatures won't overstay their welcome for those looking forward to traveling over the holidays. Temperatures will reach the 50s by Christmas day, not necessarily Christmas card weather, but meeting the average temperature for this time of the year.

Travelers flying this weekend can expect cooperative weather in two of the "hot" spots for connections and layovers, Dal-

Local charities come to the aid of needy

By Dora Ruiz

With the hectic holiday season at hand, many of today's charities are experiencing their own holiday rush. Every charity from the Salvation Army to the Soup kitchen is reaching out to Midland's needy families.

Ed ard Alonzo, the commending officer of the Salvation Army, s planning a Christmas day dinner along with many other activities.

"Anyone is free to come, the hungry, the needy, the homeless, and the lonely," Alonzo said.

At the dinner people will be able to eat ham, turkey, and dressing.

"We prepare for about 200, but if only 70 show up then we use the rest for our three meals a day 365 days a year that we offer to needy families," Alonzo added.

The Salvation Army is also a part of the Dress A Live Doll program. According to Alonzo, 710 families applied, out of those, there are 2,547 children who will benefit from this.

"This is where people go and adopt a child and buy them a gift," Alonzo said.

Each child will get two or three gifts, and the families will receive enough food to last them a month.

The Salvation Army hasn't forgot about the elderly.

School celebrates 'Christmas Around the World'

By Andy Hancock
MRT Correspondent

Students at Bonham Elementary entered the Christmas season this year from a new angle. Not only did the students decorate for the holidays in the traditional way but they also learned how Christmas is celebrated around the world.

Each year Bonham has a theme it celebrates during the holidays, but it has only been in the last six years or so that principal Robbie King feels the celebration has really taken off. This year's theme was a collection of cultures — a Christmas around the world.

"This is the first year we have gotten to decorate inside with lights now that the school renovations are complete," Mrs. King said. "We want all of our students to experience other cultures, and understand how other people around the world celebrate Christmas."

Mrs. King also stressed the necessity of students learning more about other cultures. "It is not just the students that get motivated, it's the teachers and staff as well," she added.

Each grade, kindergarten through sixth, selected a theme to research and celebrate this holiday season.

Kindergarten classes are studying Denmark; first graders, America; second graders, Norway; third greaders, music from around the world; fourth graders, Holland; fifth graders, Mexico; and sixth graders, Germany.

With Christmas lights strung across the ceilings of each hall, more than 30 large boxes of lights in all, one can visibly see that this school is full of the Christmas spirit.

But not only was this intended to be a fun experience for the students, but a learning experience as well.

"I learned that it is good to give presents, and celebrate Jesus' birthday," said first grade student William Samples.

Sixth grade student Ashley Horner was not hesitant to share what she had learned studying about how the German culture celebrates Christmas. "I think that we learned where our Christmas really comes from and, by studying German culture, how we began with the Christmas tree," Ashley said.

Classmate Bryan James stressed the importance of learning about other religions and how they celebrate Christmas. "I learned about Hanukkah and a lot of other things I did not know about Christmas," James said.

And from a practical point of view, Ashley added, "I learned what to expect if you go to other's countries around the holidays."

Bonham Elementary principal Robbie King reads a book to Patty Villanueva's first-grade class at Bonham Elementary.

You want to know what Christmas is about? Sing 'Hallelujah'

Once again, almost all of a sudden, it is the Yuletide season. Winter is fast closing in, school is out for the holidays, the New Year is in sight, lines for Christmas mailings of presents are packed, and folks, I suppose, still are scurrying here and yonder to buy gifts as if to shore up the Christmas tree.

It is a time more of giving than receiving, I should like to think, from the more spiritual perspective. Perhaps that time, like a ring, should have no beginning, no ending.

But from the children's vantage, Christmas is a time of great expectations, fleeting euphoria, and lasting memories.

More and more, when I think of Christmas, I conjure up many images and two in particular.

The more spiritually joyful is the wonderment and grandeur of George Frideric Handel's magnificent oratorio, Messiah , and its arousing Hallelujah Chorus. The work surely is unparalleled in acclaiming God's glory and musically delineating Christianity.

Todd

Perhaps more than any other singular, popular and loved work, the Messiah best heralds the Christmas message that goes well beyond the humble manger and the Cross.

From my reckoning, Christmas is a celebration of Jesus Christ and Christianity. It ought not to be a commercial event that gets powered up even while people are observing Thanksgiving a month earlier.

I hope they are giving thanks, at least by some sincere measure, and not just getting fat and lazy and self-indulgent on that holiday.

Another image I have of Christmas really is tied to Thanksgiving.

At our Grandparents' farmhouse on Delta County's blackland, the families would gather for Thanksgiving. It was a grand homecoming — one of three planned events, Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. Gatherings about the breakfast and dinner tables always were preceded by prayer and thanksgiving. Most of the food came directly from the garden, the backyard where the chickens roamed and the dairy barn.

So, it was about a month before Christmas when each of us, children and grown-ups, would pick a name on folded paper from Granddaddy's hat. And each of us would buy an inexpensive but nice gift for the other. Inexpensive was, maybe, a dollar or two, perhaps less, certainly no more than a five-dollar bill, which back then, 50 or so years ago, was a lot of money. In those days, five-and-dime stores were just about everywhere. A nickel had buying power.

No one was to be burdened.

Christmas was more of a family gathering than a celebration. Everyone so enjoyed everyone else.

I remember one year when we trudged into some woods and finally found a scrawny evergreen tree, which we brothers cut down, carried back home and decked with angel hair, tin-foil streamers, those decorative glass balls all from past Christmases, and lights that sometimes worked and sometimes didn't. If one bulb went haywire, the whole array of lights went out.

There, of course, on Christmas morning were gifts which the legendary Santa Claus and his reindeer supposedly dropped by during the night. We soon learned better. And Grandmother's old spent stockings, dangling from the fireplace mantel, were stuffed with nuts, hard candy and fruit.

That was pretty much it. Not much fanfare except in dressing up the Christmas tree.

I as think back, the joy of Christmas was being with family, a gathering of families, to affirm our common bond, our heritage, our love, our faith.

Hallelujah!

Lost Jeep finds its way home

From Staff Reports

Police found a stolen Jeep in the parking lot of a local apartment complex Wednesday.

It belonged to Leigha Vogel who had not seen her Jeep since she left to march in the Lee High School state championship game last weekend.

Ms. Vogel had put a lot of time and energy into her Jeep and was glad to hear it was returned.

"I was taking a test (Wednesday) and one of my teachers came in and told me the police found my Jeep," Ms. Vogel said. "It's a little messed up, but I got it back."

The steering column, ignition, glove compartment and gas cap were all damaged. Ms. Vogel said the steering wheel locked up and she thinks that is why the Jeep was left.

"My mom told me I probably have about $1,000 worth of damage to the Jeep," Ms. Vogel said. "But I did get most of my stuff back."

SALES: Fads catch fire in Midland

(From 1B)

year:" Sales of several different items are particularly strong, with gourmet soups and Christmas-related merchandise flying off the shelves.

Hobby Lobby is facing new competition, but that hasn't affected them at all said the store's manager George Sanford.

"Our seasonal area is really going crazy," Sanford added. Other booming departments are home accents and special framing for Christmas, he said.

Boots and dress shoes are particularly popular at Famous Footwear, said assistant manager Anthony Marquez. He estimated that this year's sales are better than last year. He thinks sales are pushed by a special that offers the second pair at half price when you buy one at full price.

Sears has taken advantage of two toy fads, mechanical dogs and scooters. The store sold out of the dogs at Thanksgiving, said manager Linda Jorgensen, and a subsequent shipment has sold out as well. A shipment of scooters the store received this summer had tepid sales, she said, but now that the fad has caught fire in Midland they can't keep them on the shelves, Jorgensen said.

Since cold weather hit early this year apparel sales at Sears now are a bit down. But booming is the word for the store's sales of Christmas decorations and artificial trees, Jorgensen said, adding, "I think probably the real tree is certainly in the minority right now."

Graham Pharmacy, which is under new ownership, has advertised extensively this season. "We've done well on just about everything," said manager Donelle Slentz. Fudge and, naturally, Christmas items are strong.

December has been a successful month at Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Mazda, said sales manager Steve Spain. A particularly strong period for car sales is the week between Christmas and New Year's. People giving cars as gifts make the season bright as well. "Every year we have several surprise presents," he said. "It kind of puts the Christmas back into it."

homes you have to be very careful on what to get them. We usually buy them a praying bear. When they are in nursing homes they are like children so they enjoy it. Some even sleep with the bear," Alonzo said.

Alonzo has himself received the benefits of the Salvation Army.

"My family has been assisted by the Salvation Army," he said. "If it wasn't for the Salvation Army I wouldn't have had a Christmas, and I'm giving back. What someone did for me 43 years ago, I'm doing for them now. I'm at my dream, not many people get to achieve their dream."

Dolly Neff of the Food Bank of Midland warned that if one is in poverty to be sure to sign up ahead of time for charities.

"If people go to the Salvation Army today and they haven't signed up they won't be able to get anything. These charities are drowning. Some 300 or 400 people are wanting help. That's a lot of people."

Manager Sherry Cox of Saint Vincent DePaul said that St. Vincent DePaul is dependant solely on donations.

"We disperse to help out the needy families of Midland," Ms. Cox said.

Like the Salvation Army, the Midland Soup Kitchen is also having a Christmas dinner for the needy.

"We are expecting more people this year. All they have to do is sign in," said coordinator Yolanda Spencer.

"We welcome anybody, and we don't make you sign papers or anything. To me, that's the greatest thing," said Mary Rendon, director of the Midland Soup Kitchen.

"To me when I see an elderly man coming in to eat, it's something very special to me that we are able to help them. This came direct from the Lord. The biggest blessing is what the community is doing for the people. They are joining hands."

LAST: Stores experience rush

(From 1B)

That's my resolution next year, to get it done earlier," said Becky Cousins, who added she usually has her shopping finished by now.

Although people sometimes associate last-minute shopping with vast crowds, long lines and picked-over clothes racks, some shoppers purposly hold off on shopping until the last minute.

Many who wait are hopeful of finding a substantial sale or merchandise that has been released late by a certain manufacturer.

"I wait for sales and new merchandise to come out," said Shana Blagrave. "It's hard deciding what people want when new things are coming out."

Others have been done with their holiday shopping for some time and are now shopping for fun. "I was really through by the first of December. That was my goal," Mary Ann Harless said. "I try not to wait, because things are picked over."

The lack of some popular items has the potential to be troubling for last-minute shoppers, but unfortunately some have no other option.

"I haven't had time. I'm done with finals tomorrow, so I will probably start after that," said Lauren Sauer. "It's not by choice, its just my schedule is very busy."

Karen Bradshaw, on the other hand, simply stated, "It just came up too fast."

Others avoid last-minute shopping at all cost. Ken White is one of them.

"I do not shop last minute. I get it done early. Everyone in my family is procrastinating. I hate to procrastinate, it is the feeling of that inner hurry, and I can't stand that feeling," said White. "I feel that many wait until the last minute for that Chirstmas bonus and then go shopping."

Some poeple, however, wait for different reasons all together, such as Ellen Belcher, who says she waits just becuase she "runs out of hiding places. There are just not enough places to hide gifts."

The workers at the local retail stores are seeing the last-minute rush as well.

"People are really coming out at the last minute this year, more than in the past," one store manager at the mall said.

Other stores have not seen the rush yet.

"We really have not seen a rush this year. We always have a layaway rush. I think this weekend will be big with pay day coming up and it being the last weekend to shop," said Joe Rael, Wal-Mart's assistant manager.

WINTER: Farmers hoping for freezing temperatures las and Houston. Dallas looks dry this weekend with highs in the 50s Saturday and in the 40s Sunday. However, there is a slight chance for sleet and snow on Tuesday. Houston will reach highs in the 60s this weekend with a slight chance of showers through Tuesday.

(From 1B)

Local ranchers and farmers have their own opinions of an ideal winter that does not depend on plane delays, but on their crops. Most hope for at least a week of freezing temperatures.

"A few cold days will kill the bugs, but a lot of warm weather will let us work," said local rancher T.O. Midkiff.

Although crops may not need as much attention as they do during mid-year, ranchers continue working throughout the winter season feeding livestock. However, with conditions so dry, ranchers may even get some time off this Christmas.

"We usually have livestock to feed everyday during the season whether you want to or not. But over the past two or three years, we don't have livestock to feed," Midkiff said. "We have a chance to go partying, Christmasing, and see Santa. It makes the (holiday season) a lot easier, but we have less to spend."

If by chance a hard freeze does make its way to Midland, prepare plants for the worst before it's too late. Horticulturist Leslie Bowman of Alldredge Gardens suggests mulching bed areas and watering the plants well, despite the cool temperatures.

"Watering your plants is most important in protecting your plants. Once it gets cool outside, everyone starts to turn off their sprinklers," Bowman said. "You don't need to water nearly as much as during warmer temperatures, but you do need to water everything."

Today's high temperatures are expected to reach the low 40s with overnight lows in the low 20s.

Man honored as amateur archeologist

SHERMAN (AP) — Plaques cover his walls, while arrowheads and other archeological finds decorate his desks at home. The bones of an ancient Indian woman wait in a box for reburial later this winter.

And now, R.C. Harmon of Sherman, Texas, has to find space for perhaps the most important piece of his collection.

Recently, Harmon received the first-ever Frank Stickney volunteer award from the Texas Society of Archeology ... an honor the Grayson County native doesn't take lightly.

"I was absolutely bowled over by this recognition," he said. "I've done a lot of things, but you never know if anyone saw the good stuff.

"I'm not the best, just the luckiest."

Harmon was born and raised in Sherman, worked at the IBM plant here until it closed, then moved away for nearly 20 years before retiring with the computer giant. It was three decades ago, as he was raising his three sons, that Harmon discovered the wonders of archeology.

"Growing up as a kid, I wasn't terribly interested in it. I was too heavily involved in football," Harmon said. "But when I started collecting arrowheads with my boys, it got to me."

He said that in 1979, professional archeologists started tapping him for volunteer hours. It was then he realized collecting arrowheads was taking away from historic sites, and never took home a flint stone again.

"That's when I went to work to help preserve sites."

At first, he did it on vacations from work. After retiring from IBM, the hobby became a full-time obsession.

He worked for two years on an archeological dig, which eventually discovered the remains of an Indian woman from 9,200 years ago.

Soon, Harmon began branching out to other sites. He was working with the University of Texas when he came across the weapons and tools of a clovis culture in Bell County, the oldest evidence of human life in Texas (going back 10,000 years).

Today, major universities are doing field work where Harmon found those materials and students take yearly field trips to that site.

In Grayson County and the surrounding area, Harmon serves as a steward for the Texas Archeological Society, a branch of the Texas Historical Commission.

He was asked to help on the salvage of the LaBelle, the historic ship found near the Texas coast belonging to famed explorer LaSalle.

Here at home, he's called on in instances such as what happened recently: a farmer called saying he found some human remains when digging a pond. Eventually, once the bones were determined to be quite old, Harmon was in charge of finding out the story. After collecting the samples and sending them off for examination, he found the bones belonged to an Indian woman, who died around the age of 30, about 1,200 years ago.

The bones are back in his possession, and he's charged with burying the woman where she rested for the past 1,200 years.

"This is very special for me. To touch her bones, to talk to her. Being a part of a life that lived and died 1,200 years ago ... is very meaningful," Harmon said. It's this passion that earned him the highest honor the Texas Archeological Society bestows on a volunteer.

Abell Junior High School science teacher Eric Setzler appears relieved that the damage isn't too bad from the haircut he received from his students Wednesday. The three eighth-grade students examining the superficial cuts made to the back of his scalp are, from left, Chase Dunagen, Mark Friday and Allie Schulz. Setzler challenged his students to contribute canned food, rewarding the person contributing the most cans by allowing him or her to give him a hair cut in any style the winner chooses. Ms. Schulz was the winner, bringing in a total of 63 cans.

Perry's replacement to be chosen by ballot

By Natalie Gott
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state senator who will succeed Lt. Gov. Rick Perry once he becomes governor will be chosen by his colleagues in a secret, non-record vote, lawmakers decided Wednesday.

The Senate met in a closed-door caucus for two hours to lay down the rules for electing the senator who will take over the duties of the lieutenant governor.

At least six senators have emerged as contenders.

There was an "overwhelming consensus" for a rule to make the selection a non-record vote, said Senate Pro Tempore Rodney Ellis, D-Houston.

"Of all of candidates who are running, all of them feel good about their chances," Ellis said. "It was certainly not on my part or the parliamentarian's part, an attempt in any way to hurt or help anybody's candidacy. I think it would protect the decorum of the Senate."

Sen. Steve Ogden, R-Bryan, had pushed for keeping the vote public.

"In my opinion, we should conduct this election like we conduct all other business in the Senate and we should vote viva voce and if a member wants a record vote, it should be put on the record," Ogden said after the meeting.

About 10 other senators also supported holding an open vote, Ogden said. He would not give their names, but said he would cast his vote in public. He said he supports Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco.

At least two other senators — Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, and Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi — said they would reveal their votes if their constituents ask them to.

The only rule spelled out in the Texas Constitution is that Ellis must convene the group within 30 days of the lieutenant governor vacancy happening.

President-elect Bush will resign his post as governor on Thursday morning and Perry will be sworn in later in the afternoon.

The vote for the lieutenant governor is expected Dec. 28.

Candidates for the post include Republican Sens. Sibley, Buster Brown of Lake Jackson, Jeff Wentworth of San Antonio, Teel Bivins of Amarillo and Bill Ratliff of Mount Pleasant.

Ken Armbrister of Victoria, a Bush ally during the presidential race, is one Democrat mentioned as a contender.

Each senator's name will appear on a ballot for the lieutenant governor's post. Ellis said several senators have said they do not want the post and will have their names stricken from the ballot. He would not specify which names will be removed.

Whoever wins will have the job of the lieutenant governor, but technically not the title. He or she will in effect be an acting lieutenant governor, presiding over the Senate until the 2002 election while continuing to serve as a senator.

Later Wednesday, the Senate Democratic Caucus interviewed the six candidates individually, asking them to discuss their views on issues such as hate crimes, school vouchers and redistricting. They also were asked whether they would assign committee chairmanships to both Democrats and Republicans.

Barrientos, chairman of the Senate Democratic Caucus, said Tuesday he believed that Republicans Wentworth and Brown were the "strong contenders" with the caucus. On Wednesday, he would not say which candidate might best appeal to Democrats.

"I do believe that a majority of Democrats will stay together," Barrientos said after the interviews.

Republicans hold a 16-15 majority in the Senate.

The Senate Republican Caucus had no plans by Wednesday afternoon to call a caucus.

Man sentenced to 40 years for shaking baby

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock man who says he never intended to hurt his 3-month-old son received 40 years in prison for shaking the infant to death.

Stephen Jermane Walker, 27, was sentenced Tuesday for shaking the child in January 1999. He pleaded guilty to felony injury to a child after admitting he had shaken his son VaSean several times in order to get the infant to stop crying while in his care.

Prosecutor Susan Scolaro said Walker could have received up to 99 years for VaSean's death.

Scolaro said intent is hard to prove in shaken-baby syndrome cases, because most people never intend to severely injure the child.

"I don't want people to think that I was trying to hurt my son," he told police. "I just wanted him to quit crying."

VaSean died four days after he was shaken.

Federal standards to impact local hospitals

By Leslie Burleson
Staff Writer

New federal standards regarding the confidentiality of patient records will have a major impact on hospitals across the country, said an official at Midland Memorial Hospital.

"It's very comprehensive in terms of patient records," said hospital president Harold Rubin. "Everyone today is looking at them."

The new federal rules, which will supersede the already strict Texas state rules, will affect virtually every doctor, patient, hospital, pharmacy and health insurance plan in the country. Rubin said the rules are part of a larger act called the Health Insurance Portability Accountability Act.

According to the act, patients must give their written consent to those who seek their medical records, even for routine purposes like treatment or the payment of insurance claims. The rules also give patients the right to inspect and copy information in their medical records.

Rubin compared the impact of the new rules to the preparations across the country that hospitals made for the Y2K bug. Even though the bug was a bust, Rubin said, "We did prepare and we did upgrade." The new rules will take effect in two years.

David Whiles, the hospital's director of information systems, said that the regulations are about 1,000 pages long. "We'll still be able to exchange information and do our business, we'll just have stricter regulations," said Whiles.

Covered under the new rules are electronic records and printouts, paper records and other information.

Threat to halt construction frees payment to contractor

EDINBURG (AP) — After the contractor threatened to halt construction, Hidalgo County Auditor Manuel Cavazos Jr. has agreed to pay the initial $1.6 million installment on a $48 million adult detention center, ending a two-week dispute.

Cavazos agreed reluctantly at the urging of the county commissioners court, the McAllen Monitor reported.

"This delay is costing the taxpayers $15,000 a day," County Judge Eloy Pulido said at the commissioners court meeting on Tuesday, noting that the county will pay about $3.5 million this year to house inmates in other facilities because the existing jail is too small.

Pulido continued, "I'm frustrated with this game. It's either hypersensitivity or derelict of duty and we have to come up with some solutions."

Cavazos had several concerns about liability insurance policies that he said needed to be addressed before his office could authorize payment. Some of the policies list Landmark Organization LP as the client, while other list Landmark Organization Inc., a company based in Delaware, Cavazos said. The Delaware company is the general partner in the Texas limited partnership, Landmark Organization LP.

"I just don't understand how one policy can cover two companies," Cavazos said.

Kamal Ariss, division manager for Landmark Organization LP, told the commissioners court Tuesday that he would halt work if he didn't have his money by the end of the week.

"We have tried to work with the auditor in a professional way," Ariss told commissioners. "But we feel like we haven't received reverse courtesy. If this payment is not processed in next 24 to 48 hours, we will have to stop work."

DART denies any danger from mold in underground rail station

DALLAS (AP) — The city's newly-owned subway station is contaminated with a dangerous mold, according to three workers and a light-rail operators' union who filed a suit this week against Dallas Area Rapid Transit.

The suit, filed in Dallas on Monday — the day the light-rail station opened to customers — also alleges that supervisors harassed the three employees and tried to force them to quit.

In the lawsuit, the three electricians with six to 18 years of seniority accuse DART of forcing them to work late-night shifts in the tunnel since September.

"What we're asking for is twofold: One, that DART not send any employees in there," plaintiffs attorney Steven Rogers told The Dallas Morning News. "Two, they need to go in and take measures to clean up the fungus."

Morgan Lyons, a spokesman for the transit agency, said workers were neither targeted nor retaliated against. The three workers have kept their job classification but their reporting responsibilities have changed, Lyons said. The three workers are the only DART employees who carry the industrial electrician job classification.

Rogers is representing employees Enrique Barron, John D. Briggs and Marcus Owens and the Railway Employees Association.

No court date has been set on the request for an injunction that would allow employees to refuse to work in the tunnel. The suit doesn't ask for the tunnel to be closed to the public.

DART officials say the air in the station — underneath the Cityplace skyscraper north of downtown — is safe for passengers and employees. A 1998 report found four times the level of the mold stachybotrys atra as recommended in federal guidelines. However, the federal government has not established restrictions on indoor air quality that would include the mold.

The 1998 report was done before station construction, when the tunnel was dark and dank, said Gary Thomas, DART's senior vice president for project management.

"It's not a problem for passengers down there," Thomas said. "We have cleaned up the surface fungi. Based on that report, there is no way people could have inhaled it."

He said any contaminated drywall would be replaced by the end of the year.

The greenish-black mold may cause allergic reactions in sensitive people, according to the Centers for Disease Control. The three employees say they have suffered from a series of respiratory ailments.

DART officials said they have received no reports of hazardous conditions or insurance claims related to the air quality.

On Tuesday, DART officials authorized a new study of the 3.25-mile tunnel's air quality.

TXU fined for missing deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission has fined TXU Electric & Gas $25,000 and extended the company's Dec. 31 deadline for replacing some natural gas pipelines.

TXU officials cited a shortage of qualified labor, foul weather and more extensive work than expected in its request for an extension. The company expects to complete the replacement of main lines, which carry gas to neighborhoods, by April 30.

Commissioner Charles Matthews said the agency fined TXU because it failed to complete the replacement on time.

"At the same time, the company didn't sacrifice the quality or integrity of the replacement program in order to meet the deadline, which is why the fine wasn't higher," Matthews said in a statement Wednesday.

Company spokesman Chris Schein said the company brought crews from outside the region to try to meet the deadline, but inclement weather hampered the efforts.

"We certainly understand their logic in that there was a deadline," he said.

"But this is work that needs to be done by qualified crews, and there's a finite number of people who can do this," Schein continued. "We were committed to the safety of our customers, which is why we didn't take any shortcuts."

TXU officials expect to complete replacement of isolated service lines, which run from the main lines to customers, by Dec. 31, 2001.

The commission ordered the company in May to replace all pipelines made from Poly 1 plastics. That includes most pipelines installed during the 1970s, but it is fewer than 1 percent of TXU's pipe, Matthews said.

Committee proposes better benefits for teachers

DALLAS (AP) — Texas teachers should get a mortgage assistance program, performance bonuses and guaranteed health insurance, a report from the state Senate Education Committee recommends.

After studying a teacher shortage for months, members of the committee want the Legislature to consider these benefits during the 2001 session as a way to combat the problem.

According to figures cited in the report, only about 22,000 new teachers are available to fill the approximately 63,000 job openings in Texas each year.

"The teacher shortage is a critical problem, not only in Texas, but across the nation," said Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, who is chairman of the Senate Education Committee. "We need to find ways to shrink the number of teacher vacancies."

One proposal is creating a mortgage assistance program as an incentive to attract and keep teachers in the profession. The committee also recommended a state-funded health insurance program to offset soaring premiums for teachers and financial pressure on districts.

Committee members also recommend establishing a college loan forgiveness program to offset the cost of earning a bachelor's degree. They recommend giving cash bonuses to teachers and administrators who work at schools where students meet certain academic performance standards.

Britney Spears No. 1 searched name on Lycos search engine

NEW YORK — Oops, they did it again. And again and again. Britney Spears fans searched for her more than any other person, place or thing typed into the Lycos online search engine this year.

In Lycos' Top 50 searches of 2000, Spears narrowly beat the popular Japanese cartoon Dragonball Z. The teen singer, whose hits include "Oops! ... I Did It Again," came in second last year.

Searches for the music-sharing Web site Napster went up more than 5,400 percent from last year, making it the eighth most-popular topic.

The Summer Olympics was the 10th most sought after subject, coming ahead of Election 2000, which was 12th.

Piscopo

NEWARK, N.J. — Tony and Carmela Soprano could be getting new neighbors.

Former "Saturday Night Live" cast member Joe Piscopo is shopping "Bloomfield Avenue," a miniseries to be set — and shot — on the road of the same name that runs from Newark to Bloomfield, Piscopo's hometown.

The comic praises the HBO series "The Sopranos," but Piscopo says his project will be a mob-free, coming-to-America tale that would celebrate Italian-Americans and other ethnic groups that have settled there.

"I'm a proud Italian-American, but I think 'The Sopranos' is the best show on television," said Piscopo, 49. "On the other hand, I have a lot of Italian-American friends who are also proud and don't have a sense of humor about this."

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Les Paul, the inventor of the solid-body electric guitar, will be honored with a technology Grammy in February after six decades of contributions to the recording industry.

Paul, 85, is credited with inventing multitrack recording, the overdubbing recording technique, tape echo and the eight-track tape recorder.

He experimented for years with a solid body electric guitar, bringing prototype after prototype to Gibson before the company accepted one. In 1952, it brought out the Les Paul model, which is still used by many musicians.

Paul and his wife, singer Mary Ford, had 28 hit records between 1950 and 1957, including "Mockin' Bird Hill," "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," "Tiger Rag," "How High the Moon" and "Vaya Con Dios."

MOSCOW — Nervous tension made grandmaster Vladimir Kramnik shed almost 22 pounds during last month's victory over chess king Garry Kasparov.

Kramnik, 25, dethroned Kasparov, 37, in London in a match held outside the auspices of the international chess federation.

The tension of competing with such a Herculean opponent caused his weight loss, Kramnik told Argumenty i Fakty, a Russian weekly magazine.

Kramnik also revealed the strategy he used to defeat his rival. Kasparov favors fast-paced chess games, so Kramnik said he drew him into a tortoise-paced, nerve-shredding game.

"I prepared a specific system of debuts, which were not so brilliant in themselves, but the most unpleasant for the adversary," he said. "By and large, it was sheer calculation, as in business."

STAFFORD, Calif. — Eco-celebrity Julia "Butterfly" Hill has given arborists and engineers her blessing as they try to rescue the California redwood she called home for two years.

The tree, which environmentalists named Luna, was fitted with a girdle to hold it together after a recent chain saw attack endangered its life. Engineers splinted the redwood with coils of half-inch steel cable secured to three nearby trees to keep it upright.

The tree is believed to be 1,000 years old. Hill took up residence in its branches three years ago to draw attention to the plight of old-growth forests.

LOS ANGELES — A man has been sentenced to prison for extorting money from "Family Feud" host Louie Anderson by threatening to tell tabloids that the comic asked him for sex.

Richard Gordon, 31, of Mesa, Ariz., who pleaded guilty to a federal blackmail charge, was sentenced Monday to 21 months in prison. He will be on probation for three years after his release and must pay $4,000 in restitution to Anderson, Assistant U.S. Attorney David Wright said.

According to court papers, Gordon wrote a 1997 letter to Anderson alleging the comedian approached him four years earlier at a gaming establishment near Los Angeles International Airport.

Gordon allegedly urged the comedian to pay money "so your secrets don't get out and blow your future."

Anderson's lawyer told federal authorities earlier this month that Gordon received nearly $100,000 from Anderson but demanded another $250,000, according to court papers.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Dec. 21, 2000:

Aim for what you want this year. Success is yours. Focus on your goals and long-term objectives. Finances need to play a substantial role in your plans. You are on a financial roller coaster, but you can make money by using a natural talent. You are prone to quirky financial episodes. If you are single, your appeal remains high. A friend will be the source of a new relationship. If you are attached, the two of you need to commit. SCORPIO adores you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★★ You might not agree with others, but you do make strong decisions. You manage to show your caring side while acting responsibly. Stay on top of work. Parents make unusual demands. The unexpected occurs with friends. Tonight: Togetherness works.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Listen to another. Defer to someone and let him express what is necessary. Creativity springs from the workplace and from brainstorming with others. The topic might not be work-related, either. Reach out for those at a distance. Extremes mark your day. Tonight: Go along with another's ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Pace yourself carefully. You have a lot of ground to cover. The unexpected occurs one more time. Use your unusual flexibility and creativity. Work with associates and friends. Demonstrate your ability to be a team player. Ask more questions. Tonight: Togetherness counts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Your creativity emerges when dealing with others. Listen to someone's opinions. You come out on top if you follow through. Your drive centers on work and on getting the job done. Somehow, you might not understand a partner's action. This person comes from a caring place. Tonight: Get into the holiday spirit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Take care of family. Deal with others carefully. You find that a loved one or a dear friend is highly emotional and unpredictable. Be indulgent, because this person means well. Tension runs high. You see events in a different light if you walk in this person's shoes. Tonight: Stay close to home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Keep someone talking. You need to understand where another comes from. Listen carefully to someone. By conversing with and coming to a decision with another, compassion and understanding build. Your caring warms another. Shortly, love knocks on your door. Tonight: Talk up a storm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Continue to monitor your finances. You need to do something very special for a family member. Pay attention to a loved one. Do not turn your back on a child or loved one. You might be seeing only what you want to see. You could ultimately hurt yourself. Tonight: Treat another well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★★ Your personality draws others out. Keep conversations going during the next few weeks. You learn a lot about another — but also about yourself — through your reactions. You might indulge someone way too much, giving this person permission to act out. Unexpected developments come forth. Tonight: Draw in what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★ Continue to be careful about making decisions. You are more off kilter than you are aware of. If you need extra sleep or are tired, make a point of calling this an early day. You are particularly vulnerable on the financial front. Double-check your change and checkbook balance. Tonight: Early to bed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Opening lead: Six of ◇

With finesses everywhere, it might seem that the one declarer chose was unnecessary. Yet it was the key to success on this deal.

Norths revalued the four aces and made an artificial and forcing opening bid, intending to rebid two no-trump next to show a balanced hand of 23-24 points. South's positive response showed two of the three top honors, and North confirmed a fit. South's jump in spades to the five-level showed a near-solid six-card or longer suit with no side king or ace, and North decided to bid one more for luck.

West led a low diamond, and declarer finessed. Had that lost, declarer intended discarding two clubs on the remaining high diamonds, then testing clubs in the hope that suit would divide 3-3. If that were not the case, declarer would have fallen back on the heart finesse.

When the diamond finesse held, declarer cashed the ace of spades. Whether or not both defenders followed was immaterial — the contract could be claimed in either case. After the outstanding trumps were drawn, a club would be led to the nine, endplaying East. The defender could win with the king or queen, but whichever suit the defender returned would present declarer with the fulfilling trick. In all, South was guaranteed to take 12 tricks via seven spades, two diamonds, the aces of hearts and clubs, and the trick provided by East's return.

Last-minute TD toss buries 13th-ranked Horned Frogs

By John Zenor
AP Sports Writer

MOBILE, Ala. — Jeff Kelly's 29-yard touchdown pass to freshman Kenny Johnson with eight seconds left lifted Southern Mississippi to a 28-21 victory over No. 13 Texas Christian in the Mobile Alabama Bowl on Wednesday night.

In the first major bowl game of the season, TCU tailback LaDanian Tomlinson ran for 118 yards, his lowest total of the season. The Heisman Trophy finalist carried 28 times and scored two TDs in the third quarter.

The Golden Eagles (8-4) got a second chance after a fourth missed field goal, and trusted their senior quarterback instead of the shaky kicking game.

With 33 seconds left, they took over at the TCU 43-yard line after Mobile native Etric Pruitt got a hand on Mark Haulman's punt.

Kelly threw two incompletions, then scrambled 14 yards for a first down. On the next play, he lofted a perfect strike over the middle just above safety LaVar Veale's outstretched arm, victimizing the nation's top defense.

The Horned Frogs (10-2) endured a December coaching change and uncertainty over who would lead them into the game. In the end, former defensive coordinator Gary Patterson replaced Dennis Franchione on the sidelines.

Franchione left for Alabama Dec. 1 and was initially expected to coach the bowl game. TCU officials decided late last week to allow the Patterson era to begin a season early.

Franchione watched from the press box.

Kelly had a big fourth quarter. He was 7-of-15 for 40 yards after three quarters.

Then, he hit LeRoy Handy on a 56-yard TD strike with 7:24 left, tying it at 21. Kelly also hit Handy on a 9-yarder in the third quarter, finishing 11-of-23 for 159 yards.

Tomlinson, the nation's leading rusher the past two seasons, had a previous low of 119 yards against Tulsa.

Southern Miss had two chances for a go-ahead score with just over two minutes left. For the fourth time, Brant Hanna kicked a low line dri-

MHS vs. Lee: It counts

U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram

Rebel boys try to build on earlier win over Bulldogs in District 4-5A opener

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

There seems to be a renewed interest in the Midland High-Midland Lee boys basketball series.

Lee's Rebels ended a 14-game skid against the Bulldogs during the Oilman's tournament back on Dec. 7, with a 79-73 victory.

Today at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center, the two teams play for keeps when the District 4-5A race comes calling.

It was blessed news for Lee to come up with any kind of win against MHS, considering the past fortunes between the two teams, but whatever happened in that first game doesn't mean a hill of beans compared to the battle that will be waged tonight before what is expected to be a large and rowdy crowd at the Chap.

"I've been part of every game Lee and Midland High have played at the Chap," noted MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I've been in games when I thought we were the better team and we lost and vice versa. You really don't know what is going to happen when these two teams play.

"Coach (Mark) Coffman has them excited about basketball again, and after winning that state championship in football, I'm sure they are going to have their fans out. If we can get our crowd out, and I think we will, it should be a very large crowd."

Coffman is making his District 4-5A debut, and he doesn't mind that it comes against the cross town rival.

"Playing as many times as we do, it might water the whole thing

Lady Dawgs, Rebels meet for first time

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

Going into tonight's District 4-5A girls basketball matchup between Midland High and Midland Lee, set for 6 p.m. at Chaparral Center, one team will be trying to keep its momentum going, and one team will be trying to recover it.

Midland High is coming off a win over Abilene High last Friday. That win was pleasing for several reasons: from a historical perspective, AHS knocked MHS out of playoff contention last year in the season finalé; from a teamwork perspective, five Lady Dawgs scored in double figures; and from a competitive perspective, MHS beat a top rival in 4-5A and improved to 2-0 in district play (12-3 overall).

"That was built up as a big game because they're one of the preseason picks to win district," said MHS coach Terry Gray, referring to Abilene High. "There was a lot of intensity and emotion. We're glad for a few days off to prepare for Lee, because that's going to be another emotional game."

Finals pushed the basketball games — MHS' and Lee's boys will play at 7:30 p.m. — back to Thursday from the usual Tuesday.

Skidmore gets position on 3A all-state squad

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

GREENWOOD — Sam Skidmore not only had a senior season to remember, but after Wednesday, he has a bigger and better story to tell his grandchildren.

Skidmore, a 6-foot-4 and 270-pounder regarded by many in West Texas to be one of the best linemen around, was named as a first-team selection to the Class 3A Texas all-state team chosen by Associated Press Sports Editors.

Skidmore

"For the rest of my life, I can say back in the year 2000, I was a Class 3A first-team, all-state player," Skidmore said. "That will stay with me forever."

Also receiving recognition for Greenwood was Justin Outlaw, a senior defensive back. Outlaw was an honorable mention selection.

Skidmore follows in the footsteps of other Rangers to earn first-team honors. Last year, offensive lineman Barry Compton was selected. Others include Rusty Purser in 1994, Casey Otho in 1995.

Greenwood coach Bob Purser, though, is quick to say that there hasn't been a player like Skidmore. On a team which went to the state quarterfinals, Skidmore stood out, and Purser is glad his player's accomplishments transcend regional bias.

During the regular season alone, Skidmore had 50 pancakes (an average of five a game) while grading out at 98 percent for the season.

"He is the best one I have coached and the most dominant player we have had at Greenwood," Purser said. "We had a great team effort, but that kid had a lot to do with that.

"He slimmed down from 290 to 270 and was stronger and real dominant because he could move better. He was a difference maker."

Skidmore said the off-season preparation led to good things

Aikman's agent says QB needs time to decide

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — While the decision about Troy Aikman's season was made for him, it will take some time before the concussion-prone Dallas quarterback decides if he will walk away from football for good.

"There seems to be a presumption that the day after the season is over, Troy and I are going to meet, he is going to do some soul searching and that day make a decision," his agent, Leigh Steinberg, told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"That is simply not going to happen. Even if he arrives at the decision that everyone thinks is obvious, it will not be with undue haste."

While Steinberg wouldn't give a timetable on when he expects a decision by Aikman, he said it would take more than a few days after the Cowboys (5-10) play their season finale Christmas night at Tennessee.

Steinberg doesn't think Aikman will take as long to decide as did Steve Young, another future Hall of Fame quarterback he represents. Young didn't announce his retirement last offseason until June, just weeks San Francisco went to training camp.

Cowboys coach Dave Campo said Tuesday that Aikman wouldn't play against the Titans. Aikman suffered his second concussion of the season and 10th of his 12-year NFL career against Washington on Dec. 10, and didn't play against the New York Giants last weekend.

Steinberg said it was a coaching decision that Aikman wouldn't play in the finale Monday night. Not that he disagrees with the move.

"Troy always wants to play. There has never been a week since 1989 that he didn't want to play," Steinberg said. "Was he thrilled? No. Did he accept it? Yes.

"I don't think there is a padded cell with quite enough padding to contain a restless Troy who is not starting."

Aikman, 34, hasn't spoken to reporters since suffering the latest concussion on a hit from Washington linebacker Lavar Arrington. But he has maintained this season that he'd like to play as long as he enjoys the game and isn't risking horrible injury. His desire remains high, leaving his health as

Admitted triggerman testifies that Carruth planned girlfriend's slaying

By Paul Nowell
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The man who admitted shooting Rae Carruth's pregnant girlfriend testified Wednesday that the former NFL player planned the slaying for six months.

Van Brett Watkins was called by defense lawyers, who apparently hoped he would confirm a jailhouse statement that he shot Cherica Adams because he was angry at Carruth.

Instead, Watkins said the former Carolina Panthers receiver planned the attack.

"I was very afraid of Rae Carruth," Watkins said. "He made me do it."

Watkins pleaded guilty to the 1999 drive-by shooting of Adams, who was eight months pregnant with Carruth's child. The baby survived; Adams died a month later.

Prosecutors contend Carruth arranged the shooting because he didn't want to pay child support. Carruth, 26, could be sentenced to death if convicted.

Watkins has said Carruth offered him $5,000 to assault Adams and hurt her baby. He agreed to testify against Carruth, but was never called as a prosecution witness.

Watkins expressed remorse for Adams' death and covered his face with his hand when defense lawyer David Rudolf played a portion of her panicked 911 call after she was shot.

Carruth's mother and Adams' stepmother left the courtroom sobbing during the testimony, which was watched on television by about 20 Panthers p...yers at Ericsson Stadium.

According to police, Watkins said in jail that he shot Adams because he was angry at Carruth for backing out of a drug deal and because Adams made an obscene gesture at him.

"It was Rae's fault," a deputy recalled Watkins saying. "If he had just given us the money none of this would have happened."

Watkins' lawyers have denied he made the statement. On Wednesday, Watkins insisted Carruth planned the shooting.

"This wasn't a one-day affair," Watkins said. "It was six months. He dragged me into something I didn't want to be involved in."

Watkins won't be sentenced until after the trials of Carruth and two other men, but he did avoid a possible death sentence with his plea bargain.

Watkins said he takes two medications prescribed by a psychiatrist. He denied a past diagnosis of mental illness, saying he faked the condition so he could serve time in a mental hospital instead of prison.

Watkins admitted committing a number of violent crimes, including stabbing his older brother and pistol-whipping a man. He said he once threatened to kill a woman and her children if they testified against him and had threatened to kill two police officers.

"All those people lived the same lifestyle, in the jungle," Watkins said, turning to the jury. "We're not like y'all. If you swing in the jungle, you're going to get hurt."

Outside court, Rudolf said Watkins was a career criminal who has lied throughout his adult life to try to escape justice.

Average baseball salary elevates to $1.9 million a man

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Even before Alex Rodriguez's record payday, baseball players had a boom year at the bank.

The average salary soared 17 1/2 percent to $1,895,630, according to the annual survey released Wed..esday by the Major League Baseball Players Association.

The New York Yankees had the highest average salary for the second straight year and the sixth time in seven seasons. A year after becoming the first team to break the $3 million barrier, the Yankees averaged $3,656,542 as they won their third straight World Series title, up from $3,215,660 in 1999.

Three other teams topped $3 million: Los Angeles ($3,141,883), Atlanta ($3,127,992) and the NL-champion New York Mets ($3,115,549).

Minnesota had the lowest average at $601,680, with Montreal 29th at $767,420 and Kansas City 28th at $798,242. The Royals had the lowest average in 1999, $534,460.

Texas, which last week agreed to a record $252 million, 10-year contract with Rodriguez, had the biggest payroll drop this year, falling from second at $2,825,735 to 15th at $1,870,723.

St. Louis, which won the NL Central, rose from 17th at $1,515,094 to seventh at $2,390,042.

The average salary increased 17.7 percent from 1999's revised average of $1,611,166, the second-biggest rise since 1992, trailing only a 19.3 percent hike in 1997.

This winter's signings, led by Rodriguez's deal, Manny Ramirez's $160 million, eight-year contract with Boston and Mike Hampton's $121 million, eight-year agreement with Colorado, should push the average over $2 million next season, just nine years after it topped $1 million for the first time.

First basemen were the highest-paid players, averaging $4,996,933. They were followed by outfielders ($3,480,792), designated hitters ($3,366,872), second basemen ($3,158,209), starting pitchers ($3,064,021), catchers ($2,767,726), shortstops ($2,504,993), third basemen ($2,484,428) and relief pitchers ($1,220,412).

Just four teams among the top 15 payrolls had losing records — Detroit (79-83), Baltimore (74-88), Tampa Bay (69-92) and the Chicago Cubs (65-97) — and the teams with the eight highest payrolls all had winning records.

Only five clubs among the bottom 15 payrolls had winning records: the Chicago White Sox (95-67), Oakland (91-70), Cincinnati (85-77), Anaheim (82-80) and Colorado (82-80).

Players with 2-3 years of major league service who were not eligible for arbitration averaged $474,617, while those with 2-3 years of major league service who were eligible averaged $1,337,145.

Culpepper's status remains in doubt; Griese ready to go

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings pushed the timetable on the Daunte Culpepper decision back to Friday.

The cast on Culpepper's right ankle was removed Wednesday and replaced by a walking boot. He said he was optimistic that he can play Sunday at Indianapolis and keep backup Bubby Brister on the bench for the remainder of the season.

"It's a lot better than I thought it would be," Culpepper said. "I'm moving around pretty good. Hopefully, I can play Sunday. If not, I'll be confident that Bubby will be ready."

Coach Dennis Green said the Vikings won't "know anything for sure" until Friday. Even then, it is likely that it would only be determined whether Culpepper has a chance to play and that a final decision would come at game time. Culpepper's status is listed as questionable.

The Vikings, who seemed a lock for the No. 1 seed in the NFC playoffs before losing their last two games, could be forced to play a first-round game on the road if they lose to the Colts. They can assure themselves of a bye by winning, but do they have a better chance with Culpepper, their Pro Bowl quarterback, playing on a sore plant foot, risking further aggravation, or with Brister, who has thrown only two passes this season?

Brister spent the players' day off Tuesday working out and studying film.

Brister boosted his reputation with the Denver Broncos two years ago by stepping in for John Elway during a world championship run, which has prepared him for his possible start.

Griese poised to regain starting job

DENVER — Saying it was "important to get in there and knock some of the rust off," Denver Broncos quarterback Brian Griese practiced with the first team in preparation for returning to the lineup on Saturday against San Francisco.

Griese, the NFL's top-rated passer, has missed the last five games since separating his throwing shoulder against Oakland on Nov. 13.

He resumed throwing lightly two weeks ago, then practiced as the backup quarterback last week.

"Brian looked pretty good," coach Mike Shanahan said after Wednesday's workout. "He took about half the reps. It looks like there was no setback and he should be ready to go if he's feeling all right (Thursday)."

Griese, who has thrown 19 touchdown passes compared to just four interceptions, left no doubt he intended to regain his starting job Saturday in the final regular-season game ever at Mile High Stadium. The Broncos (10-5), who mathematically could have a playoff game at Mile High, will move into a new stadium next fall.

Williams still not ready to run

NEW ORLEANS — Ricky Williams, recovering from a broken bone in his ankle, will not return to the New Orleans Saints until the playoffs.

Astros' hurler likely to miss first month

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Astros pitcher Shane Reynolds, who made the NL All-Star team for the first time last year, is likely to miss the first month of the 2001 season after injuring his left knee while jogging.

An operation to repair a torn lateral meniscus in his left knee was performed Tuesday. The Astros said recovery time should be about three months.

"It was a freak accident," general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "Shane just took a bad step while he was out jogging. The good news is that this appears to be only a short-term problem. This is just another bump in the road we have to deal with."

For Reynolds, 32, the injury sustained last weekend likely will snap a string of five consecutive appearances as Houston's opening day starting pitcher.

His health already was questionable because he missed most of the second half of last season with a disk problem in his lower back.

After going on the disabled list July 30, he finished with a 7-8 record and a 5.22 ERA in 22 starts and 131 innings. The right-hander has an 86-69 career record and a 3.85 ERA.

Astros spokesman Todd Fedewa said the injury was far less severe than the knee injury sustained by Houston outfielder Moises Alou after the 1998 season. Alou hurt a knee while jogging on a treadmill and missed the entire 1999 season.

He rebounded last year, batting .355 — second-best in the NL — with 30 homers and 114 RBIs.

Rangers talk to Cone, ink injured Thompson

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Having bolstered their offense with the $252 million signing of Alex Rodriguez, the Texas Rangers turned their focus to upgrading the worst pitching staff in baseball.

General manager Do.. Melvin met for 3 1/2 hours Wednesday with free agent right-hander David Cone. Melvin planned to talk with the pitcher's agent in the next few days but said no offers have been made.

"It's too early to tell, but there might be a right mix, a right fit," Melvin said by phone from Tampa, Fla., where he met Cone.

During his meeting with Melvin, Cone worked out and spoke about his problems of 2000, when he was 4-14 with a 6.91 ERA for the New York Yankees.

"We talked about last year and what went wrong, how he feels he can bounce back," Melvin said. "He felt that last year in the offseason he didn't work as hard as he should. He slacked off, and he blamed himself."

Cone turns 38 on Jan. 2.

The Rangers also signed left-hander Justin Thompson, who hasn't pitched for Texas since being acquired last year, to a $2.42 million, one-year contract. The Rangers also signed infielder Frank Catalnotto, who came to Texas in the same trade as Thompson, to a one-year contract.

Thompson, acquired from Detroit in a nine-player trade last offseason for Juan Gonzalez, didn't pitch this season because of shoulder surgery, but the Rangers remain optimistic that he will still be an impact pitcher.

Thompson agreed to $2.42 million contract for 2001 and could earn performance bonuses that would raise his earnings to $3,025,000 — matching 2000. The deal includes a team option for 2002 that will be worth $2.5 million to $5 million, depending on his performance this season.

In all, he could make about $9 million for two years.

"We have hopes that he will be back and pitching for us midseason," Melvin said. "At that point, we have an option on him so that year we feel very confident that he will be back at full strength and able to reach a higher level of performance."

Thompson, 27, is still undergoing rehabilitation and isn't expected to be ready for the start of the 2001 season. He has had surgery two more times since the arthroscopic surgery that ended his 1999 season.

Thompson was an All-Star in 1997, his first full season with Detroit, when he was 15-11 with a 3.02 ERA in 32 starts. He was 20-25 the next two seasons, including just 24 starts in 1999 before arthroscopic surgery on his left shoulder that August.

Bordick returns to Orioles, agrees to two-year contract

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles welcomed a familiar face Wednesday, agreeing to a two-year contract with free agent shortstop Mike Bordick worth about $9.5 million.

Bor..ick spent 3 1/2 seasons with the Orioles before being traded to the New York Mets in July. A sure-handed fielder throughout his career, Bordick last year supplemented the package with a power stroke that earned him his first trip to the All-Star game.

During his first stint with the Orioles, he was part of a veteran-laden club with designs of winning a world championship. Now he's among a handful of over-30 players on a te..m filled with youngsters.

"When I first came here in '97, my main goal was to be part of a winner and to get into the World Series. That hasn't changed," he said. "I think it's going to be a great experience for me."

Bordick hit a combined .285 with the Mets and Orioles, setting career highs with 20 home runs and 80 RBIs. He hit .297 with 16 homers and 59 RBIs in Baltimore, but his production tailed off shortly after he joined the Mets.

That mattered little to the Orioles, who again plan to make him their starting shortstop. Melvin Mora, who struggled at the position after joining Baltimore in the Bordick trade, will return to his more natural position in the outfield.

Bordick, 35, was traded as part of the Orioles' youth movement. His return doesn't make the team a contender, but certainly appears to have improved the mix.

Bordick homered during his first at-bat with the Mets, but finished with only four homers and 21 RBIs in 56 games.

State senator protests football on Christmas Eve

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A state senator who is also a Lutheran pastor — and a football fan — wants to stop NFL games being played on Christmas Eve.

"I would like you to keep the holiest of holidays in mind for next year's schedule," Sen. Dean Johnson wrote in a letter to commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

The Willmar minister is perturbed because the Minnesota Vikings and the Indianapolis Colts will be playing at 3:15 p.m. CST, when he says many churches begin Christmas Eve services.

He says given their recent stumbles, the Vikings might be better off praying than playing on the night before Christmas.

Mickey Mantle Jr. dies

DALLAS — Mickey Mantle Jr. died of cancer Wednesday, five years after the disease killed his father. He was 47.

Mantle Jr. had been in and out of R.H. Dedman Memorial Hospital since about August, said Dorothy Weber, a New York lawyer who represents the family in trademark and licensing.

Mantle Jr. was a switch-hitting center fielder like his Hall of Fame father but never made it to the majors. He spent several years in the minors for the New York Yankees and Texas Rangers.

Like his father and brothers, he also became an alcoholic. The entire family shared their battle with the addiction in the book, "A Hero All His Life."

In recent years, he worked in Dallas with brothers Danny and David at the Mickey Mantle Foundation, which promotes organ donation.

Mantle Jr. was the oldest of the Hall of Famer's four sons and the second to be stricken with cancer. The youngest Mantle son, Billy, had Hodgkin's disease before he died of a heart attack in 1994 at 36.

Mickey Mantle died of liver cancer in 1995 at 63 after receiving a liver transplant. The New York Yankee great's father, grandfather and uncle all died of Hodgkin's disease when they were in their early 40s.

In 1998, Mantle Jr. had a malignant tumor removed from his neck and had 36 radiation treatments. The tumor was discovered when he was having trouble swallowing.

Devils win Stanley Cup rematch

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Devils still have the Dallas Stars' number.

Patrik Elias had a goal and three assists in the opening 10:29 as the Devils drove Ed Belfour to the bench and defeated the Stars 4-1 on Wednesday in their first meeting since New Jersey beat Dallas in the Stanley Cup final.

Elias' linemates, Jason Arnott and Petr Sykora, and Stanley Cup MVP Scott Stevens also scored, while Martin Brodeur had 23 saves in the very one-sided game.

Kirk Muller scored early to prevent Dallas from being shut out for the second straight game.

Belfour, who came into the game with a 1.89 goals against average, struggled for the second straight game, giving up four goals on nine shots, with the final three goals coming on the last three shots.

BOYS: Lee owns previous win

(From 1C)

down a bit, but it's good for basketball and kicks off the district season by getting the fans excited," Coffman said.

Coffman enters the game at 1-0 against MHS but knows this one counts in the standings. State playoff berths can only be gained from district play.

"No one really told me that Lee had lost 14 games in a row when we played them the last time," Coffman said. "Maybe it was better that I didn't know. I expect this game to be a lot more intense than when we played before, and I'm sure Midland High will be up for this one. In fact, I think both teams are comfortable playing against each other. If we played them 10 times or practiced against them, I'm sure it would be intense."

Stephenson came up with the one-liner that probably speaks best of this game.

"It's either going to be a very merry Christmas or a miserable one," he said. "It's that kind of game."

One thing is for sure. The winner enters the Christmas break with a fast foot in the door. The loser will have to go into rebound mode.

Stephenson said that his team must shoot better than it did in the first game.

"Against Lee, we were 20-for-50 from the field, but what hurt was hitting only four of 18 from three-point range and only 17-of-31 from the free throw line," he said. "In games we lost this year, we didn't shoot the ball well. We didn't put the ball in the basket, and they did. They also killed us in the second quarter with a run. We tried to get back into the game, but they always answered when we made any kind of run at them."

More Sports/8C

Coffman said, "We scored 79 points against Midland in the first game and that's usually good enough to win. Going into that game, we felt we had a chance if we didn't turn the ball over and shoot well."

The Bulldogs will carry an 8-7 record into the game while Lee is 7-6. Both coaches have played a brutal schedule.

"This team is potentially there," Stephenson said of his Bulldogs. "But when the ball is thrown up, sometimes it happens and sometimes it doesn't. We've played a bunch of kids in order to get some game experience when it counts, and after 15 games, there should be no excuses. We feel like every time we throw the ball up, we have a chance to win."

Coffman felt much the same way with his team, noting, "We're not as consistent as we need to be. We've played well at times, but we haven't won back-to-back games.

"I'm just glad that all our district games are on weekdays because, for whatever reason, we don't seem to play well on Saturdays. I'm just glad this isn't a Saturday game, and I'll be glad to get into the district routine of playing on Tuesdays and Fridays."

In the first MHS-Lee meeting, the Bulldogs got 18 points from Blake Huggins, 17 from Jarvis Brown, 15 from returning starter Lucquente White and 12 from Roman Conner. Lee got a game high 22 points from Kyle Shatzer and 20 more from Wendell Smith, while Art Garcia had 12 and Ben Webb 10.

But there may be some new faces for Lee now that football is over. Big 6-7, 280-pound Eric Winston has joined the team, as has sophomore Jacoby Hartley and junior Tim Norman. All were starters for Lee's state champion football team.

"We don't know how much we can use these kids right now, but I can see in practice that they bring a good work ethic with them," Coffman said. "This takes a little getting used to because I'm not used to waiting half the season to get three members of your team out for basketball. But we'll sure take them."

And just in case the game doesn't go the way you want tonight, they play again in seven days to open the Byron Johnston tournament. That one won't count in the district standings, but that doesn't seem to matter much anyway. It would be worth the money to watch these two teams practice against each other.

Lindale QB ends on top in 3A

Associated Press

DALLAS — Lindale fell short of its goal of a state championship, but senior quarterback Rob Shipley still ended on top.

Shipley was the first-team quarterback on the Class 3A Texas all-state team announced Wednesday and also was named the Class 3A offensive player of the year.

While leading all East Texas high school quarterbacks in attempts, completions, yardage and touchdowns, Shipley led Lindale to the second round of the playoffs before a 28-7 loss to then-undefeated Daingerfield.

Shipley completed 136 of 243 passes (56 percent) for 2,337 yards and 31 touchdowns. He threw just eight interceptions.

STATE: Skidmore earns top honor

(From 1C)

early on, and those early games gave him the motivation to keep working hard.

"The Sweetwater game was the best game I had (up to that point). I knew my abilities," Skidmore said. "It charged me up to work everyday in practice so I could continue to have that kind of game every week."

His dominance both offensively, where his talents are obvious, and defensively, where he was double-teamed all game long, made him Greenwood's most talked-about player. It also seemed to make him a lock for postseason awards. Still, Skidmore was taking nothing for granted. As Stanton running back/defensive back Jeremy Hull found out after getting second-team recognition in Class 2A, there are no guarantees.

"I saw Jeremy didn't get it, so I was worried," Skidmore said.

Skidmore will play college football next season. It is just a matter of determining where that will be. Right now, he says that Abilene Christian, West Texas A&M, and Angelo State are among the top prospects. His coach thinks that success will continue to follow him wherever he ends up.

"He wasn't that dominant as a junior and Division I schools work ahead. There isn't much room for surprises," Purser said. "If they did start over, there wouldn't be any question about anyone in the country being after him. I don't know if he will play Division I, but I know he can play Division I."

GIRLS: Lady Rebels try to put dent in Midland High's 2-0 District 4-5A record

(From 1C)

The way the Lady Dawgs have been playing, you'd almost think they would want to play every day and skip the extra days of practice.

"We haven't lost a game since Thanksgiving, so we've got momentum and confidence," Gray said. "We're really happy to be 2-0 in district, but we're focusing on Lee right now. We're pretty healthy right now. We're ready to play."

Lee's Lady Rebels are ready to play, too, if only to get the taste of Friday's 71-56 loss to Abilene Cooper out of their mouths. After that game, Lee coach Elise Kail expressed disappointment in her players missing defensive assignments, and this week she took steps to avoid having the same disappointment after tonight's game.

"We've got to be focused when we come out (tonight)," Kail said. "We've got to keep up our defensive assignments. We didn't do that at Cooper, but we've been concentrating on that this week. The girls will be focused on executing.

"We've got to play a smart ball game," she said. "We've got to be focused and balanced and go out and execute.

Lee is 1-1 in 4-5A play. It's overall record of 5-10 doesn't look impressive next to Midland High-'s 12-3, but the only records that really matter are in 4-5A. An MHS win would keep the Lady Dawgs perfect and drop Lee to 1-2, while a Lee win tonight would make both teams' district record 2-1.

"Midland High is playing really good ball right now," she said. "We're capable of playing good ball if we put our hearts and minds into it."

Lee is led in scoring by a pair of seniors, Shamera Bryson (14.4 points per game) and Shandi Neatherlin (11.3 ppg). Gray also took note of sophomore Lauren Hinsley, who scored 20 points in Lee's district opening win over Odessa Permian on Dec. 12.

"You've got to respect their game," Gray said. "You've got to pay attention to Bryson, Neatherlin and Hinsley. Their two seniors (Bryson and Neatherlin) have a lot pride, and they'll have the others ready to play."

Midland High also is led in scoring by a pair of seniors, Edrea Rogers (15.7 ppg) and Laura Koch (11.5 ppg). But the Lady Dawgs demonstrated balanced scoring in their 68-57 win over Abilene High. Sophomore Lauren Lucas came up with a career-high 16 points, and four other girls scored exactly 11: Rogers, Koch, LaQuori Harris and Jenny Jones.

Gray wants his Lady Dawgs to play their game and not the Lady Rebels' game.

"We'll try to play our style as much as possible," Gray said. "We want to be physical, get up and down (the court) but play a controlled and disciplined game. We've got to limit (the Lady Rebels) runs — keep them from having 6-0 or 7-0 runs in the game."

Gray said the defensive styles should contrast tonight. He expects Lee to play a zone, while his team never plays zone. (However, when Kail was asked about her team's tendency to play zone, she would only say, "Maybe.")

Still, Gray is more concerned with his defense.

"We hope our man defense is good enough to give us the opportunity to win, and hopefully we'll score enough," he said. "Hopefully, we'll execute on offense well enough to come out on top."

"Both teams will play hard," Gray said. "It'll be entertaining for the fans to watch."

Lots of fans may be something new for the MHS and Lee girls. While the schools' boys' teams have already played — Lee got a rare win in the series in the Tall City Oilman's tournament — the girls' teams haven't renewed the crosstown rivalry yet this season.

"The city as a whole views it as a fun time," Kail said. "There's a little more pressure because of bragging rights. We don't want to talk about it too much with the players, but they know it.

"The difference is in the level of the crowd; that'll be a factor," Kail said. "We've only got two kids (Neatherlin and Bryson) who have played in a Midland High-Midland Lee game."

Kail expects her players to handle the excitement well.

"They came out and watched the Oilman's, so they won't be surprised," she said. "They've been seeing the crowds in football, and they've seen the crowd at the Oilman's. We've got some kids that like that pressure. We've got some kids who like to step up if there's an opportunity to shine."

Tonight, they'll get that opportunity.

BOYS: Aikman plans to take time the main concern.

(From 1C)

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, meanwhile, has decide whether he wants to keep the quarterback who brought him three Super Bowl titles — and at what price. Aikman is due $7 million if he's on the roster March 8.

Jones anticipates sitting down with Aikman, the first player he ever drafted, soon after the season.

Steinberg said the two sides would "check in soon after the end of the season."

The agent said he wants Aikman to have some time away from the field before seriously considering his future.

"He will need some time to process his options and come to a decision that is right for the rest of his life. It certainly is not something that will be settled in a day or day," Steinberg said.

"Given how competitive he is, and the amount of time he's spent with Dallas, any decision about leaving football is a traumatic one."

Oil plunges

New York — Crude oil prices plunged Wednesday to their lowest levels since the beginning of May as data showing that stockpiles are rising coincided with growing fears that a slowing world economy will curb demand.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, crude for February delivery closed down $2.19 at $25.77 a barrel, while February Brent on London's International Petroleum Exchange fell $2.03 to $22.97. Heating oil fell 594 points to 85.66 cents a gallon, while January gasoline dropped 440 points to 72.64 cents a gallon.

A more than 200-point slide in the Dow Jones industrial average and a 7% slide in the Nasdaq composite index added to worry about a slowing U.S. economy.

Natural gas futures halved earlier gains after the American Gas Association reported a smaller-than-expected supply draw last week, which also dragged oil lower.

With crude now trading for February delivery, concerns about winter oil supply have abated, although natural gas remains near record highs. February crude opened lower, and continued to push through support levels as the day went along.

Euro rallies

LONDON (AP) — The euro rallied strongly to hit a four month high against the dollar Wednesday after the Federal Reserve sent a strong signal Tuesday that it was ready to start cutting interest rates to prevent the once red hot U.S. economy from falling into recession.

The Fed's new policy triggered heavy selloffs on Wall Street Tuesday and a sharp drop in the dollar Wednesday, as many analysts predicted an interest rate cut was likely in January.

The European single currency — which had barely budged Tuesday — surged against the dollar Wednesday and broke through the key technical levels of 90 and 90.5 cents.

The euro was quoted at 90.72 cents in late European trading, up from 89.06 cents Tuesday.

The U.S. dollar also was mostly lower against other major currencies in European trading Wednesday. Gold was mixed.

Gold dealers in London fixed a recommended price of $272.70 bid per troy ounce at closing, up from $269.10 on Tuesday. In Zurich the bid price was $272.80, up from $269.35. Gold fell 50 cents in Hong Kong to close at $270.45.

Silver closed in London at $4.61 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.55.

Dell cuts prices

DALLAS (AP) — Dell Computer Corp. said Wednesday it has cut U.S. prices on most of its corporate notebook computers by up to 20 percent.

The Round Rock-based computer maker said it could cut prices because of lower costs for components.

Dell and other computer makers have been hurt by steadily eroding prices and by sluggish holiday-season sales. Dell's stock price has plunged more than 70 percent from its 52-week high of $59.69 in March.

On Wednesday, Dell said it cut the price of a Latitude CS Ultramobile notebook with a Pentium III processor 20 percent to $1,599, and cut its new and more expensive wireless-ready notebooks by up to 9 percent.

In trading Wednesday, Dell shares fell $1.63, or 9 percent, to $16.63.

Economic fears induce sharp drops

By Amy Baldwin
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fears about a harsh economic slowdown and continuing weakness in corporate earnings sent stocks sliding Wednesday, with the Dow Jones industrials giving up more than 260 points and the Nasdaq hitting another low for the year.

Disappointed that the Federal Reserve declined to lower interest rates Tuesday and scared that the Fed has acknowledged the economy may be slowing too much and too fast, investors dumped both high-tech shares and blue chips.

"Investors are seeing a confirmation from the Fed that the economy is very weak and that earnings are going to be pretty poor and that assistance from the Fed is not going to be right away," said A.C. Moore, chief investment strategist for Dunvegan Associates in Santa Barbara, Calif.

The Dow fell sharply, closing down 265.44 at 10,318.93.

The Nasdaq composite index finished down for the seventh straight session, falling 178.93 — or 7 percent — to 2,332.78. It was the Nasdaq's lowest close since March 23, 1999 when it ended at 2,322.84.

The tech-focused Nasdaq also is down about 43 percent so far this year and has fallen more than halfway from its record close of 5,048.62 set on March 10, 2000.

The broader Standard and Poor's 500 index on Wednesday stumbled 40.86 to 1,264.74.

President-elect George W. Bush's appointment of Alcoa chairman Paul O'Neill as the new treasury secretary seemed to hold little sway with investors, analysts said.

Stocks have been heading lower since around Labor Day, as investors have sold off stocks — mainly in the high-tech sector — based on fears that profits would be further pinched by an economic slowdown, high interest rates and decreased consumer confidence. Meanwhile, a litany of companies have warned that future earnings would indeed be disappointing.

AP Photo

The board at the Nasdaq shows the market at closing down 178.94 points at 2332.93 as CNBC's Nasdaq correspondent Tom Costello, left, works Wednesday in New York. The Nasdaq composite index finished down 7 percent, its lowest level since August 1999.

"We've actually had a crash over the last few weeks, not a one-day crash," said Ricky Harrington, a technical analyst for Wachovia Securities. "I think we are getting close to a short-term bottom, the beginning of a technical rebound."

Wednesday's high-tech losers included Cisco Systems, which skidded $5.25 to close at $36.50 in extremely heavy trading after Merrill Lynch cut its rating on the network equipment maker.

Other tech stocks brought the Dow lower. Computer makers Hewlett-Packard and IBM slumped after Merrill Lynch also downgraded those stocks. Hewlett-Packard fell 88 cents to $30.44, and IBM tumbled $4.13 to $86.

But the Dow's losses were practically across the board. General Motors fell $1.88 to $50, and AT&T lost $1.63, closing at $18.94 before warning that fourth-quarter earnings will fall short of expectations.

Retail stocks, battered by declining consumer confidence and a lackluster holiday shopping season, posted more losses. Despite faring better than most competitors, Target fell 56 cents to $28.19. Home Depot, which is a Dow industrial, slipped $1.50 to $41.13.

But drug makers gained ground. Merck rose $1.88 to $93.38, and Johnson & Johnson climbed $1.44 to $100.63.

The Commerce Department reported earlier that housing construction rose 2.2 percent in November, the biggest jump in nine months. But builders — like investors — are worried that a slowing economy will crimp their business.

Declining issues outpaced advancers slightly more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange where consolidated volume was 1.74 billion shares, ahead of the 1.59 billion on Tuesday.

The Russell 2000 index, which tracks the performance of smaller companies, fell 14.98 to 443.80.

Overseas markets also were lower. Japan's Nikkei stock average fell 1.5 percent, and Germany's DAX index tumbled 3.6 percent. Britain's FT-SE 100 lost 1.9 percent, and France's CAC-40 fell 3.2 percent.

MALL GIMMICKS

Patrons at the Jersey Gardens mall in Elizabeth, N.J., Tuesday wait to sign up for a chance to win one million frequent flier miles in a weekly contest to attract holiday shoppers. As they compete with Internet retailing and discount chains, malls are rolling out the gimmicks to give holiday shoppers more reason to come out.

Hispanic TV network to cut 31 jobs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Hispanic Television Network, which aims to repeat the success of Univision and Telemundo, said Wednesday that it will cut 31 jobs and ask investors to help it mee. a cash shortage.

The company announced it has sweetened the terms of a fund-raising round from January and will devote more resources toward a new Los Angeles station to become profitable.

President and chief executive Marco Camacho said the Los Angeles outlet, KJLA-TV, will demonstrate that the company can operate a full-power station.

Many of the company's 25 stations are low-power operations, and the weak signals make it hard to tune in advertisers.

The news didn't cheer investors: In trading Wednesday, Hispanic Television shares fell 19 cents to 44 cents.

In the first nine months of the year, Hispanic Television lost $13 million on less than $400,000 in revenue. The company had $3.9 million cash left on Sept. 30, according to documents the company filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Camacho said the downturn in stock markets has made it hard for Hispanic Television to raise money. He said the company is meeting with two large investment groups to raise more cash and has changed the terms of its January private placement that included sale of stock and warrants to buy stock.

The company said warrant holders who act by Dec. 31 will get three shares of stock for every $2 warrant exercised, and they will get a warrant to buy one more share at $2 by June 30.

Unlike Univision and Telemundo, which appeal to a broad cross-section of Hispanics in the United States, Hispanic Television targets Mexican Hispanics from California to Texas.

Univision controls about 80 percent of the U.S. Spanish-language viewership — and keeps growing. Last week, Univision said it would pay $1.1 billion for the 17-station USA Networks.

National government prepares for British invasion

By M. Ray Perryman

I first put pen to paper with these ideas in the wee hours of the morning on November 8, shortly after the networks declared George W. Bush the winner — the first time. Before I could finish, the race was again too close to call. I fully expected to hold my thoughts for a week or so, then release them. Little did I know! After five weeks, I can finally use them. As I read back over this little epistle, I discovered it would have worked just as well (except for the obvious name change) if the other guy had won. Here it is.

Perryman

Our governor is now president-elect by the thinnest of margins, and, for the first time in almost a half-century, joins in a Republican sweep of the Senate (including the vice-president's tie-breaking vote) and the House. The dynamics of this situation are far from what they might appear on the surface, especially when it comes to economic policy.

Most of the folks in Congress, Democrats and Republicans alike, are what you would call moderates. Perhaps moderately conservative or moderately liberal, but moderate nonetheless. Most of them will, on key votes, go with their party leadership. In fact, it is the job of the "whips" (and chief deputy whips and deputy whips) to bring the troops into line. There are a handful in each party, however, that refuse to be whipped. They tend to shift back and forth between Republican and Democratic initiatives, depending on their assessment of any given piece of legislation.

When you encounter a situation with (1) an almost evenly divided House and Senate and (2) a president with less than a popular mandate, the fence sitters become very important. For the next two years (at least), our national government is going to look very much like the British Parliament (without the accents or powdered wigs). Success will only be achieved by forging coalitions of often disparate groups. Those who remain in the middle are thus endowed with enormous power not so much to pass their own agenda, but to shape ultimate outcomes to their liking.

The end result is that policy gravitates toward the center. We will not see the $1.3 trillion across-the-board tax cut that Mr. Bush envisions, nor the full adoption of his plans for social security, prescription drugs, or education. His ability to pass legislation will be critically dependent on hammering out compromises, picking his battles, and finding common ground. Success will require the support of the stalwart moderates in both parties.

As Governor of Texas, Mr. Bush has worked exceedingly well with Democratic colleagues. But Austin is on the Colorado, not the Potomac. We have a history of bipartisan cooperation on critical issues. I work a lot in both places and can assure you that, while party politics come into play everywhere, the swords are much sharper in Washington.

In short, the challenge before President-elect Bush is a tough one. He must adhere to a set of principles, yet be flexible in structure and implementation. He is not facing an environment that is conducive to a lot of home runs, but one which can yield a very high batting average. The rancor of the election has been tough, but the real work is just beginning.

That being said, we can be thankful that the race is finally over. We are unlikely to see radical policy shifts (fortunately), but we can see fundamental progress on many pressing economic concerns. Things are a bit sluggish at the moment, but we can take comfort in the one economic forecast that is always on target — there will be growth in the Spring.

Dr. M. Ray Perryman is President and Chief Executive Officer of The Perryman Group (www.perrymangroup.com). He also serves as Institute Distinguished Professor of Economic Theory and Method at the International Institute for Advanced Studies.

(From 1C)

ve, this one a 32-yarder that failed to clear TCU's defensive line.

It was the second block of the night for the junior, who was 12-of-18 in the regular season.

TCU couldn't get a first down against the nation's second-rated defense, which held the Horned Frogs to 265 yards and set up a pair of TDs with interceptions.

Leo Barnes returned the first pickoff against Casey Printers 50 yards into the end zone in the first quarter. Rory McGee's interception at the TCU 15 set up Kelly's first TD pass to Handy two minutes into the second half.

Southern Miss tailback Kelby Nance outshined Tomlinson, carrying 16 times for 104 yards. It was the first career 100-yard game for the senior

Former TCU coach watches from press box

MOBILE, Ala. — Dennis Franchione didn't guide Texas Christian into the Mobile Alabama Bowl as planned, but he was there rooting for his former team Wednesday night.

Franchione, who took over as Alabama's coach three weeks ago, showed up at Ladd-Peebles Stadium early in the first quarter to watch TCU play Southern Mississippi.

"I just wanted to be here to support the team and let them know I'm here cheering on the team," Franchione said in an impromptu half-time press conference. "I don't want this game to be about me, but about the team and the players. I just wanted to quietly come in here and be a spectator."

Franchione watched the early part of the game from behind TCU's end zone, doing an interview with ESPN, then sat in the President's Box with Mobile's mayor and bowl officials. He was succeeded by his defensive coordinator, Gary Patterson, as TCU's coach.

The school had initially planned to have Franchione coach the game, but changed its decision last week.

"If they'd gone outside the program to hire somebody, I'd probably have had to coach the game," Franchione said. "All I ever wanted was what was best for the team."

He said he had "mixed emotions" watching the game.

"I gave a lot of myself to that team and those kids and those coaches," Franchione said. "I'm certainly pulling for them."

No. 10 Arizona dumps Lousiana State by 13

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Gilbert Arenas scored the first 10 points during a decisive 17-2 second-half run as 10th-ranked Arizona shook off a sluggish start to beat previously undefeated LSU 88-75 Wednesday night.

Arenas, benched along with center Loren Woods by coach Lute Olson to start the game, scored 16 of his season-high 24 points in the second half after going 2-for-12 in Arizona's loss to Illinois last Saturday.

The Wildcats (6-3) avenged an 86-60 loss at LSU last season, the worst defeat in Olson's 18 seasons at Arizona. But it was anything but easy until the final 12 minutes.

Five players hit double figures for the Wildcats. Woods scored 17, Jason Gardner 16, Michael Wright 13 and Richard Jefferson 12.

Torris Bright was 5-for-5 from 3-point range and scored 17 in the first half for LSU (6-1). He took only one shot, and made it, in the second to finish with 20.

Ronald Dupree scored 21 and Brian Beshara 13 and Jermaine Williams 10 for the Tigers, who shot 57 percent in the first half (16-for-28) and 32 percent (8-for-25) in the second. Arizona shot 58 percent in the second half (18-for-31), including six of eight 3-pointers.

LSU was 8-for-11 from 3-point range in the first half, but 0-for-6 in the second.

Grades prevent FSU wide receiver from playing in title game

Associated Press

The reasons are different, the results the same: Players are getting knocked out of bowl games before they even take the field.

Florida State's Marvin "Snoop" Minnis was declared academically ineligible Wednesday, knocking the All-America receiver out of the Orange Bowl. The third-ranked Seminoles (11-1) will meet top-ranked Oklahoma on Jan. 3 in the BCS national championship game.

Minnis was Heisman Trophy winner Chris Weinke's favorite target during the season, catching 63 passes for 1,340 yards and 11 touchdowns. Athletic director Dave Hart said was nine hours from graduation but did not satisfy the semester's requirements.

"My one desire at this point is that he does what he has to in order to earn the degree, which we all anticipated he was on track to complete," Hart said. "We all feel badly for him."

Earlier in the day, Ohio State receiver Reggie Germany was declared out of the Outback Bowl on Jan. 1 against South Carolina because of academic problems.

Buckeyes athletic director Andy Geiger did not elaborate, but The Columbus Dispatch reported Germany missed classes. The senior was Ohio State's second-leading receiver with 22 catches for 366 yards and a touchdown.

Germany has plenty of company on the sidelines.

Among others who won't be around for kickoff are:

—Florida reserve defensive lineman Thad Bullard and reserve offensive lineman Tommy Hillard. Bullard was declared ineligible for the Gators' Sugar Bowl matchup against Miami on Jan. 2 for undisclosed reasons. The senior played in 10 games with 17 tackles. Hillard quit the team last month after his third concussion.

—Clemson defensive ends Marcus Lewis and Nick Eason. Eason, who led the Tigers with seven sacks, has an Achilles' heel injury; Lewis, a freshman with 10 tackles who was set to replace Eason, has a torn ligament. Clemson plays Virginia Tech in the Gator Bowl on Jan. 1.

—Michigan backup safety Justin Fargas and cornerback James Whitley. Fargas, the former highly touted running back said he's transferring and won't be with the Wolverines when they play Auburn in the Citrus Bowl on Jan. 1. Whitley, Michigan's senior captain, was kicked off the team following his recent arrest on a concealed weapon charge.

—Boston College running back William Green and senior defensive back D.J. Sutton. Both were suspended for unspecified rules violations and will not play in the Aloha Bowl on Dec. 25 against Arizona State. Green, a sophomore, led the Eagles in rushing with 1,164 yards and 14 touchdowns.,

Also, 13 Minnesota players misused a school telephone access code and must replay a total of $420 before they will be allowed to leave on Friday for the Dec. 28 Micronpc.com Bowl.

And, five Purdue freshmen, including free safety Stuart Schweigert, were cited for underage drinking last week by West Lafayette, Ind., police. Three of those players red-shirted this season, but coach Joe Tiller said Schweigert and cornerback Deaunte Ferrell will be allowed to play in the Boilermakers' Rose Bowl game against Washington on Jan. 1. Schweigert was the Big Ten's freshman of the year with 75 tackles and five interceptions.

Aggie lineman quits due to heart problem

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Offensive tackle Michael Mahan is leaving the Texas A&M football team because of problems with his heart.

Mahan has undergone two surgeries this season to try to correct a heart irregularity known as Wolf-Parkinson-White Syndrome.

"I talked at length with coach (R.C.) Slocum last Saturday and after weighing my options I think it is best for myself and my health that I step away from playing football," Mahan said. "Having two heart surgeries that close together is risky. My health comes first and I think that in the long term I can live with my decision to hang it up."

Mahan, a 6-foot-6, 293-pound sophomore from Homer, La., started at left tackle in eight games this season and six games last year.

The Aggies are preparing to play Mississippi State in the Independence Bowl in Shreveport on Dec. 31.

Coastal

NORTH SABINE: A stiff northwest wind has made fishing tough. The drop in water temperature should prompt flounder to migrate to the Gulf of Mexico. When the weather settles, prime fishing will resume under the birds and on the shell reefs.

SOUTH SABINE: Trout are slow due to the weather and muddy water. Redfish and black drum are fair on cut-bait and shrimp from the jetties. Sheepshead, croaker, sand trout and flounder are fair from the pier on shrimp and mud minnows. The weather has kept many anglers off the water.

TRINITY BAY: Flounder are fair to good in the cuts and channels on mud minnows and plastics. Black drum and sheepshead are fair at the HL&P Spillway on dead shrimp. North winds have dropped tides well below normal.

EAST GALVESTON BAY: The wind has hampered fishing efforts while dropping tides significantly. Trout should head to the shorelines as the sun shines during midday. Shell reefs will also produce adequate redfish and trout action on plastics and live shrimp. Best colors for plastics in eight to 10 feet of water are limetreuse and glow.

WEST GALVESTON BAY: Trout are fair on live piggy perch when you can find clean water. Recent winds have kept anglers pinned to the dock. Water levels are significantly down due to low tides caused by the hard north wind. Sheepshead are good in the surf on live shrimp under a popping cork.

Deeper shell should also payoff for anglers throwing red shad and pearl/chartreuse plastics. Redfish are fair on the shorelines on gold spoons.

MATAGORDA: Wind has muddied the south shoreline of West Bay. Before the brisk weather, trout action was good on shrimptails. Redfish are good on the south shoreline from the Middle Grounds to Green's on bright-colored plastics and spoons. Flounder are good at the locks and around cuts and passes.

Mavs beat Trail Blazers

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki scored 29 points and Michael Finley 20 as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Portland Trail Blazers 106-101 Wednesday night in a game marred by 11 technical fouls, six in the fourth quarter.

The Blazers were called for two technicals in the third quarter, then were slapped with three while the Mavericks were breaking the game open in the fourth.

Portland coach Mike Dunleavy was ejected during that span, and Mavericks center Shawn Bradley got tossed in the final minute.

Dallas won its fourth straight since coach Don Nelson returned from a three-game absence while seeking treatment for prostate cancer. This win tied Nelson with Bill Fitch for No. 3 on the NBA's all-time victory list at 944.

The Mavericks trailed for most of the first three quarters, but never by more than six. Three straight baskets by Howard Eisley early in the fourth quarter put Dallas ahead 84-82. On the Mavs next possession, Nowitzki was fouled by Bonzi Wells and things went haywire.

After Nowitzki sank the first free throw, Wells got a technical for arguing the call. Nowitzki made the technical foul shot and his other remaining free throw. In the third quarter, Dale Davis got a technical for also arguing while a Maverick was at the line.

The next time Dallas got the ball, Wells tripped Finley in the backcourt, prompting Finley to jump up and scream in his face. Bradley pulled Finley away and practically the entire Portland bench ran onto the court. Offsetting technicals were called on Finley and Stacey Augmon.

Next up was Scottie Pippen, who tripped Bradley in the backcourt. Bradley's reaction drew him a technical while Pippen got only a personal foul. But Dunleavy's reaction to the scene brought about his second technical, forcing him out. He ran back onto the court to scream at officials after his penalty was announced.

Portland pulled to 89-86, but Nowitzki scored nine of Dallas' next 13 points for a 102-94 lead with 51.2 seconds left. Bradley's celebration of Nowitzki's last basket drew his second technical.

Damon Stoudamire led the Blazers, who had won four straight, with 22 points and Rasheed Wallace added 20.

Portland did not use Shawn Kemp, who missed a practice Tuesday. He was fined for the absence, which he blamed on on weariness triggered by a new diet, but was not suspended. Coach Mike Dunleavy did say his minutes would be cut as punishment.

Steve Nash had 18 points and eight assists for Dallas, which won its fifth in a row at home. That's the longest streak for the Mavericks at Reunion Arena since winning seven straight in March-April 1988.

Ferry leads Spurs with 16

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Danny Ferry, who had spent the past 10 years in Cleveland, scored 16 points against his former team as the San Antonio Spurs snapped the Cavaliers' six-game winning streak with a 94-77 victory Wednesday night.

Tim Duncan backed Ferry with 14 points and 12 rebounds, while Derek Anderson added 13 points for the Spurs. Led by Ferry, San Antonio's reserves contributed 43 points.

Cleveland was led by Chris Gatling with 18 points, while Andre Miller and Lamond Murray chipped in 14 apiece.

After trailing by 15 points at halftime, Cleveland went on a 21-6 run to open the third quarter and tied the game at 61-61 on Matt Harpring's free throw with 3:23 to play in the third quarter.

San Antonio regrouped behind six points from Anderson and closed the quarter with a 14-4 run to lead 75-65.

The Spurs continued shooting well at the start of the fourth quarter, outscoring Cleveland 13-2 and taking an 83-67 lead on Steve Kerr's 3-point field goal with 9:29 to play.

Cleveland, which allowed San Antonio to grab a season-high 17 offensive rebounds, trailed by as many as 19 points in the final quarter and could get no closer than 12 the rest of the way.

Leading 24-19 after the first quarter, San Antonio stretched its advantage to as many as 17 points in the second quarter as Antonio Daniels capped an 8-0 run with a 3-point field goal to make it 52-35 with 2:02 left in the quarter.

Relying on a swarming defense, San Antonio forced five Cleveland turnovers in the second quarter that led to 11 points as the Spurs led 55-40 at halftime.

Hornets shut down Heat

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — In the second-lowest scoring game in NBA history, the Charlotte Hornets held the Miami Heat to a franchise-low in points in a 65-56 victory Wednesday night.

The teams combined for only 121 points — two more than Boston and Milwaukee scored between them on Feb. 27, 1955.

The Heat, playing a night after losing at home to the Los Angeles Lakers, made only 19 field goals and shot 29 percent. Miami did not crack 30 points until 5:29 remained in the third quarter and reached 40 points with 8:47 left in the fourth.

Jamal Mashburn scored 19 to lead Charlotte. Anthony Mason and Brian Grant each had 11 points for Miami.

Celtics 99, Nets 86

BOSTON — Paul Pierce scored 25 points and Antoine Walker added 21 with 19 rebounds to give Rick Pitino his 100th victory as head coach of the Celtics and snap Boston's four-game losing streak.

Raptors 99, Pacers 98, OT

INDIANAPOLIS — Vince Carter added another game to his highlight reel, hitting one turnaround jumper after another and dunking his way to 45 points as Toronto beat Indiana in overtime.

It was an ex-Pacer who scored the game-winner as Antonio Davis made the second of two free throws with 1.8 seconds left.

Jalen Rose scored a career-high 42 points for the Pacers, including the first four in overtime to give them a 96-92 lead. Carter scored the next four before Rose tied it at 98-98.

Carter's season high is 48. Rose's previous best was 37.

Jazz 91, 76ers 89

PHILADELPHIA — Karl Malone scored 41 points and Danny Manning had 12 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter as Utah rallied to beat Philadelphia.

Brown returned to the Sixers after missing two straight practices following a weekend dispute with the team that included heated words from Allen Iverson. His team led by as many as 16 but faltered down the stretch.

Iverson scored a season-high 45 points, but his desperation 3-pointer with 3.1 seconds left fell short.

Nuggets 108, Pistons 106

DENVER — Nick Van Exel had 17 points and 10 assists and made a driving layup with 21 seconds left to lead the Nuggets to their third straight victory.

Antonio McDyess had 29 points and eight rebounds and Raef LaFrentz scored 20 of his 22 points in the second half for the Nuggets, who trailed by nine points to start the fourth quarter.

The Sooners (8-1) broke the game open with a 27-3 run that was ignited by McGhee, who blocked two shots and hit consecutive shots during a two-minute span.

SMU 101, UPR-Mayaguez 72

CAROLINA, Puerto Rico — Jervl Sasser scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, helping SMU beat UPR-Mayaguez 101-72 in the San Juan Shootout.

The Tarzans surprised the Mustangs in the first half with their full-court defensive traps and well-balanced offense, taking a 35-34 lead with 2:42 left on a basket by Francisco Jovet.

SMU regained the lead on two free throws by Damon Hancock with 2:28 left, then Lavardicus Atkins added a 3-pointer with six seconds remaining, ending the half 39-35.

Czars, capitalists and communists found this factory their cup of tea

By John Varoli
N.Y. Times News Service

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — Imagine a tea party with the following guests: the New York designer Eva Zeisel, 94; the New York financier Henry R. Kravis, 56; the St. Petersburg designer Mikhail Sorokin, 52; and Douglas Boyce, 34, an American business consultant who is Sorokin's new boss.

It is not hard to imagine what they would be discussing over their smoky caravan tea, since only one thing binds this unlikely fraternity: the strange plight and uncertain future of the Lomonosov Porcelain Factory.

This is not just any porcelain factory. It was here some 300 years ago that the Russians, in a Sputnik-style campaign, strove to replicate the magically translucent milky white porcelain being imported from China by the richest families in Europe. Peter the Great tried, and failed. It wasn't until 1744, 14 years after German alchemists cracked the formula for making porcelain, that Peter's daughter, Empress Elizabeth, opened the Imperial Porcelain Factory and began cranking out porcelain pieces painted gold, red and blue — colors designed to mask the early flaws.

The factory continued to ply the czars with gilded figurines, place settings and centerpieces, until the Bolsheviks took over the factory in 1917. Eventually, in 1936, they renamed it the Leningrad Porcelain Factory.

Skip ahead through the Soviet era and glasnost to 1997 and the Park Avenue triplex of Kravis. A onetime purveyor of the leveraged corporate buyout, a 1980s financial tool that helped make him a billionaire, Kravis may be to Imperial Porcelain tea sets what Malcolm S. Forbes was to Faberge eggs. Kravis, sponsor of the Kravis wing of European decorative arts at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, declined to be interviewed for this article, but two years ago he became interested in an unusual proposition. He was offered the opportunity to help bail out the porcelain factory. It had been privatized in 1993 — when it was renamed again, this time after the Russian scientist Mikhail Lomonosov. Which brings us to the new director, the devoted Boyce.

As he walks the corridors of the sprawling factory, in a clump of buildings overlooking the Neva River, Boyce is greeted as "Dooglas Giorgivich," sort of a Russian version of his name. But while Boyce speaks fluent Russian and knows Russian culture, in fact he hails from Chicago. He arrived in St. Petersburg seven years ago as a consultant at PriceWaterhouseCoopers but ended up at the U.S.-Russia Investment Fund, an economic development fund. With $440 million and a mandate to prod the Russian economy, the fund had purchased a 30 percent stake in the Lomonosov plant. Boyce agreed to oversee it.

In six months, he has raised the salaries of the 1,800 employees (80 percent of them women); introduced new accounting, sales and marketing procedures; tightened workplace rules; and looked into charges that previous managers had sold porcelain at cut rates in return for kickbacks.

"I want to bring back the glory of this factory's great past," he said. "It sometimes seems that I am more a Russian nationalist than most Russians."

If he seems like a man in a hurry, consider his task. Along with the rest of the work force, Boyce reports to outside investors eager to see the factory on its feet and back to its original business: designing, making and selling some of the world's most expensive porcelain.

Which brings us back to Kravis. A principal in the New York investment firm of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., Kravis was drawn to the factory around the time that Russia's financial crisis became so bad that Lomonosov employees, despairing of being paid, started selling off shares they owned in the plant. In the end, Kravis and some colleagues formed the International Porcelain Co., which also purchased 30 percent of the factory.

The Lomonosov factory, still carrying out most work by hand, needed infusions of cash and savvy. But when the old guard saw the Americans coming, they feared they would sell off the factory's 25,000-piece museum, which contains a tea set made for Empress Elizabeth and drawings by Malevich and Kandinsky, who designed motifs for the factory in the 1920s. The managers persuaded the government to sue for an annulment of the factory's privatization. Ultimately, the Russian courts ruled in favor of the outside investors, while the government stepped in to claim the museum. Why all the fuss over an aging porcelain factory?

"The decision to invest in Lomonosov was made because it was viewed as an attractive investment," said Ruth Pachman, a spokeswoman for Kravis. Also, she added, it "possesses rich historic traditions, and in the past it has produced world-class porcelain masterpieces, which are sought by collectors of Russian imperial art. It's a unique company with a special legacy that deserves to be preserved."

Though the last few decades were hard on the factory, it held onto its reputation as an artistic and cultural treasure chest. When President Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, visited Moscow in 1988, they went home with a Lomonosov vase and a coffee service for six, a gift from the Gorbachevs. In 1999, a vase was a gift for the King and Queen of Norway.

"During its long history, the factory has nurtured some of Russia's and St. Petersburg's most important artistic, architectural and literary talents," said Karen Kettering, the associate curator at the Hillwood Museum in Washington, which has the largest collection of Russian decorative arts objects outside Russia, including many Imperial Porcelain pieces. "No other European or American factory had such a unique or productive collaborative relationship with contemporary artists."

Even under the Bolsheviks, who viewed it as a propaganda tool, the factory attracted skilled designers and craftsmen. In the 1920s, they recycled a stockpile of white porcelain by decking it with Communist slogans. Many pieces were hung in public places like state-owned banks; others were snapped up by members of the surviving bourgeoisie, who recognized the porcelain's value. The collectibles have gained cachet recently in other circles: about six years ago, Jane Fonda placed an order for a reproduction of a plate embossed with the words "Land to the Workers."

Current patterns, most notably the glossy blue and white Cobalt Net, remain popular in Russia, and though Lomonosov porcelain is not readily available in the United States, vintage imperial ware and Lomonosov collectibles are sold in specialty stores and on the Internet. A recent Web search for "Russian Imperial Porcelain" turned up a dozen items, including a circa-1830 gold-rimmed teapot advertised at $1,350. (The Metropolitan Museum of Art has a nice sampling of the factory's 18th-century works and sells a reproduction of one of the plates.)

Items from the '20s and '30s are harder to find — which brings us to Eva Zeisel, considered one of the 20th century's leading industrial designers.

Hungarian-born, Zeisel worked at three ceramics factories in the Soviet Union during the 1930s, including the one in Leningrad, and within five years she was named art director for the state's china and glass industry. But during one of Stalin's cleansing campaigns, she was jailed. In 1937, she was deported and landed in New York.

Last year, eager to re-establish a link, Boyce tracked down Zeisel at a studio she keeps north of New York City, inviting her to make her first visit to Russia in more than six decades. Last July, she spent two weeks in St. Petersburg, visiting her old haunts and working with a Lomonosov designer on a tea service.

Zeisel, interviewed in New York last summer, called the current generation of designers "sensitive and high-quality artists who are perfectionists." But she said the factory had fallen behind in failing to mechanize, adding that it faces competition from the German and Japanese.

"Of course it's worth saving, because of its great tradition and history," she said, "and because of the beautiful pieces it has produced for centuries. Lovely things. Some of the things they make now, such as the Cobalt Net tea set, are also exquisite, and their hand-painted decorations are unique."

She continued: "We must save these great old factories because porcelain, unlike shoes, for instance, documents a culture, just as the written and printed word do."

In St. Petersburg, Mikhail Sorokin, the new chief designer, seemed optimistic. He looked around his cramped studio at the factory, its surfaces littered with molds. Lomonosov is "not just a factory, but rather it is an experimental art studio," he said. "We emphasize art, and especially creating new art forms through porcelain."

DEAR ABBY

Quilters rattled by raffle try to do the right thing

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We have a unique problem and hope that you can help us. We are members of a quilt-making club. The quilts we make are well thought of. Once a year, we raffle off one of them, and therein lies our problem.

Van Buren

The man who won this year's quilt is not very well thought of. In fact, some people here consider him "scum." Nevertheless, his name was drawn, and we draw only once. The ladies were shocked. They stood there with their mouths open. Some of them said if they had known he would be the winner, they would not have worked so hard on the quilt. Others suggested that we draw again — which, in fact, we did.

Then one club member spoke up and said it wasn't fair. The man won the quilt fair and square. Buying a raffle ticket was the only requirement involved.

I can see no way around giving that man the quilt. I believe honesty is the best policy. Can you help us to do the right thing? — TROUBLE IN PARADISE

DEAR TROUBLE: Consider this: If you give the quilt to someone else, you will put yourselves on the same moral level as the man you have labeled as "scum." So do the honest thing — give him the quilt and hold a good thought. Perhaps the love and care that went into crafting it will rub off on him, and he'll be better for it.

DEAR ABBY: Both my grown daughters work, and I take care of their daughters for them. Granted, I have them only a few hours a day, but I still have to feed them and give them snacks and juice.

All I ask in return is $20 for each child every two weeks to help pay for the food and beverages.

My older daughter says it's definitely worth it to her, as it would cost far more for someone else to care for her daughter. My younger daughter and her husband, however, are throwing a fit. They insist that a grandmother should never charge money to watch her own grandchild. I also watch them on weekends and barely get a thank-you.

What is your opinion, Abby? Am I ... A GRANDMA OR A DOORMAT?

DEAR GRANDMA: Twenty dollars per child for every two weeks seems reasonable to me. I'm sure you wouldn't ask your daughters to chip in if you didn't need the money. Your younger daughter is looking a gift horse in the mouth. Tell her to stop saying "nay" and pony up the money or provide her own lunches and snacks.

P.S. Your older daughter is right. Child care costs a bundle these days, and anyone who doubts it should check it out.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I have this little disagreement about how to eat properly.

I eat with the fork in my left hand and my knife in my right hand. I have the fork facing downward, so I don't have to ever let go of my fork to eat. My girlfriend holds the utensil in the same hands, but she puts down her knife and switches her fork to her right hand to eat.

We saw on a Web site that both ways are correct. However, we want to have the final answer and figured you would be a good mediator. — HUNGRY COUPLE, EAU CLAIRE, WIS.

DEAR HUNGRY COUPLE: You and your girlfriend are both eating "properly." You are doing it in the European style, and your girlfriend is doing it in the American style. You don't need a mediator. The person with the bone to pick needs to exercise a little more tolerance.

As elite women players head to U.S., some mull future of soccer in China

By Julie Chao
Cox News Service

BEIJING — Sun Wen, China's star soccer forward, has programmed a personal message that is always displayed on her cell phone: "In pain yet happy."

It's the title of a recent book on China's market reforms, yet it also describes the state of women's soccer in China.

Even though the women's team won the 1994 Asian Cup championship, the 1996 Olympic silver medal in Atlanta and was a penalty kick away from beating the United States for the World Cup last year — and even though the men's team has never even played in the World Cup — soccer is still a man's world in China.

"For women's soccer, the playing fields and equipment are all shoddy," said Li Jing, a reporter for Soccer World magazine. "The prospects for increasing sponsorship are not good. For most people, watching women's soccer is not as enjoyable as men's soccer. After the women's team lost at the (Sydney) Olympics, audience and commercial interest sunk to an all-time low."

Men's soccer matches in China are packed full of screaming, die-hard fans while at women's games, the stadium is half-empty. Even in Internet chat rooms, which have endless commentary on the men's teams, women players get barely a mention.

Sun, the 28-year-old captain of China's national team, is hoping that will change now that she and four of her teammates have been selected to play in the United States by the new Women's United Soccer Association (WUSA). The Atlanta Beat got the first draft pick and chose Sun.

"I hope this will be a new beginning for women's soccer in China," she told the Beijing Morning Post last month just after signing the agreement. "Going overseas to play is a new path for the development for women's soccer. In the future, no one will say women playing soccer is just goofing around."

Besides being exposed to new players and training methods, she is hoping to catch some of the competitive spirit that she said China's women players lack and is so abundant in American players.

"The main reason we twice lost so closely to America is because we are not aggressive enough," she said in an interview with China Radio International after winning the Federation Internationale de Football Association's female player of the century award.

After China failed to advance out of preliminary rounds in Sydney, popular interest in women's soccer took a dive.

"I'm worried about the future of women's soccer in China," Sun told another local newspaper, the Beijing Evening News. "After losing at the Sydney Olympics, we lost a lot of fans. It was completely different from when we returned from the World Cup. We need encouragement and cheers."

Sun was born in Fujian province on China's prosperous southeastern coast, but at 12, moved to Shanghai to enroll in the state sports school. Four years later she joined the Shanghai women's team and the next year joined the national team. At the 1999 World Cup, she was the tournament's top scorer, with seven goals, and was named the most valuable player.

Some are pessimistic that Sun and her teammates will bring any benefit to women's soccer here by going abroad. With China's five best players in the United States, companies will be reluctant to sponsor any teams and the public will be even less inclined to attend games, observers say.

Popularly called "roses of steel" by the Chinese media after their World Cup performance, the players won't be able to make the needed changes to the state of women's soccer, said a commentary in the Beijing Morning Post.

"Today (five) of our roses will go to America to bloom," it said. "But tomorrow, without the support of the whole society, how many more roses can China's fields produce?"

Sun knows the market is the biggest obstacle facing women's soccer in China. But reflecting on how far it has come in 20 years, she is optimistic.

"Women's soccer is getting better every day," she told the Beijing Evening News. "I feel I still haven't displayed my true gifts on the soccer field."

Rapids hire former Mutiny coach

Associated Press

DENVER — Seeking to energize their offense, the Colorado Rapids hired Tim Hankinson on Wednesday as the franchise's fourth head coach.

Hankinson, the former coach of the Tampa Bay Mutiny, replaced Glenn Myernick, who was fired last month because of the team's flat play.

Hankinson, 45, coached Tampa for 2 1/2 seasons, leading the Mutiny to a 39-38-4 record. The Mutiny, 0-4 in the postseason under Hankinson, were 16-12-4 last season and lost in the first round of the MLS playoffs.

His contract was not renewed in October because Tampa general manager Bill Manning said his relationship with Hankinson "was lacking a bit of chemistry."

Kansas City chosen for World Cup qualifier in spring 2001

CHICAGO — The United States will play its second home game of the final round of World Cup qualifying at Arrowhead Stadium on April 25 against either Costa Rica or Guatemala.

It will be the first World Cup qualifier in 33 years at Kansas City, the home of the Wizards, the champion of Major League Soccer.

The Americans open qualifying on Feb. 28 against Mexico at Columbus, Ohio, then play at Honduras on March 28. The opponent for the game at Arrowhead will be determined on Jan. 6, when Costa Rica and Guatemala meet at Miami's Orange Bowl in a one-game playoff.

Brazilian star resumes light training

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Ronaldo kicked a soccer ball for the first time in eight months on Wednesday, moving closer to returning from right knee surgery.

The Brazilian star, who plays for Italian club Internazionale, ran, dribbled around cones, and kicked gingerly for an hour at a stadium in the Barra beachside neighborhood.

"There have been days when I thought it would be difficult to come back and it's very emotional to be out playing with the ball. But I have to be cautious," said Ronaldo, who was the FIFA world player of the year in 1996 and 1997.

In April, he hurt his knee for the second time in five months. Doctors expect a full recovery but say another knee injury could end the 24-year-old player's career.

"We're going month by month," said Ronaldo's physical therapist, Nilton Petrone. "What's important is he's always moving forward."

Ronaldo's daily training schedule includes three hours in the gym, an hour on the field, and two hours in the pool.

He plans to stay in Rio until Jan. 15, before returning to Italy.
