

Local Salesman Leads Campaign Past Five Years

Maynard H. Drake Leads 90 Salesmen For Candy And Cracker Co.

Maynard H. Drake, local salesman for the Brown Cracker and Candy Company is this week being honored by the company for his ability as a salesman—and the honors for 1935 make the fifth consecutive year that Mr. Drake has won the cake selling campaign sponsored by his company.

Mr. Drake attributed his success not to his sales ability, but to the territory which he serves and stated that he sells more products in Wellington than any other town in his entire territory. He also holds the distinction of having called on the grocery merchants of this city longer than any other salesman now working this city.

The top salesman is well known over this section, having called here almost every week for the past six years, and for the past year has led other salesmen, which includes 90 this year. Another interesting feature about Mr. Drake's territory is the fact that his collections have led all other sections of Texas for the past three and a half years. During this time he has not lost one cent in bad accounts.

Wheat That Grows Without Soil Helps Professor Probe Nature's Secret

A wheat crop is growing in California that flourishes, not in soil, but in a pool of water, just as pond lillies do.

And this particular field of golden grain is not subject to ravages of drouths and dust storms, but thrives under sunlight and atmospheric conditions regulated by the pulling of switches.

The crop in question is a tiny, experimental one, and its growth, in a tiny concrete room in his plant physiology laboratories, is superintended most carefully by Professor R. A. Davis of the University of California.

His precious plants—just a few clusters of wheat in all—are “fed” with a teaspoon. When, whether morning or midnight, Dr. Davis wishes to bathe them in high-noon sunshine, he does so by switching on a battery of sun lamps surrounding the wheat.

These lamps can be turned on, or off, or used in any required number, to stimulate any degree of sunlight. By means of other devices, moisture, heat, even air motion and wind conditions are provided in the desired degree.

Purpose of the experiment is to learn nature's secrets of plant growth, chemical composition, respiration, development, and response to every environmental condition.

By this means, the “breathing” of plants, and the questions of photosynthesis—the changing of water and air substances into carbohydrates under the influence of light—can be studied in fixed environment.

It is well known that, under the influence of light, plants give off oxygen and absorb carbon dioxide; and that in darkness the process is reversed. In every plant, says Professor Davis, the process is the same.

“How the sunlight and carbon dioxide combine to form sugar—how light energy is transmuted into sugar energy, and the metabolic process involved—these mysteries of nature long have been studied. Our wheat experiments may point the way to a clew.”

According to Professor Davis, the wide variance in climatic, soil,

According to Dr. Davis, a loaf of bread made from the wheat being raised experimentally would be worth somewhat more than its weight in gold and other feed crops were almost an entire failure and had it not been for a crop of stock beets that were planted early in the spring of 1934 and harvested in November, he would have had to go out of the hog business.

Mr. Pierce produces enough hogs each year to supply meat and lard for himself and three families who reside on his two farms. He advised that since the first of March his brood sows and pigs have been kept on pasture and stock beets supplemented with a little cotton seed meal and brand feed in a 50-50 ratio.

In my judgment, a program of road building is the key to the future of our country. For a number of years I have been urging a complete and adequate road building program.

Tri-State Fair To Include New Features, 1935

Entire State Fair Ground Being Remodeled for Exposition

AMARILLO.—Catalogs for the Tri-State Fair here September 13-21, listing more than $15,000.00 in cash premiums, are available now. Copies will be furnished upon request of O. L. “Ted” Taylor, Secretary-Manager. The catalogs set forth all the entry rules.

This year the Tri-State Fair will be the largest exposition in Texas and complete in every department.

Racing, with more and better entries than ever, again will be the feature attraction, but there will be plenty of other amusement, including Beckmann and Gerety, the largest midway shows in the United States. These “world's best shows” will come direct from Detroit, Michigan.

Concessionaires already are applying for space at the 1935 fair, which in recent years has developed into an elaborate show window of the Southwest, daily attracting thousands upon thousands of men, women and children through its free gates from several states.

Applications for concession space should be sent to Secretary-Manager Taylor.

Wilbur C. Hawk, president of the fair association, said today community and county fairs throughout the tri-state territory probably would be held during the week just preceding the exposition here.

“These will provide elimination contests so only the best of exhibits will be concentrated for the Tri-State Fair,” he said.

The fall racing meet of the Tri-State Fair will begin Friday, Sept. 13. The fair proper will open Monday, September 16, and continue throughout the week, including Saturday, September 21.

Demonstration News

By Miss Annie Mae Donaghey
County H. D. Agent

“There is a use for everything—even rusty nails,” says Mrs. Jno. Jones, bed room demonstrator of the North Wellington Cub as she dyed some scraps of ratine in the water where 1-2 gallon of rusty nails had been boiled.

The light brown ratine was used to make slip covers for the cushions of wicker chairs. In order to give a tailored appearance to the cushions a heavy cord was stitched around the boxing. “The harmonizing light cushions make the bed room look light and cool for summer time,” Mrs. Jones added.

To brighten a dark corner, May-delle Murry, Dozier 4-H bed room co-operator said that she had used sun flowers in combination with the mallows. “It's surprising how these bright colored flowers can keep the corner from looking bare and dark.”

A small tray was grouped back of a clear vase of flowers by Flossy Chisum, bed room co-operator of the Dozier Club in order to express individuality. To insure informal balance a small box was grouped with the vase and tray so that the eye could be carried from the vase to the box.

Prospects look bright for the paving on Highway 4 from Wellington clear to the Wheeler county line. The Highway Commission is waiting on federal funds. It is possible that these may be received in thirty days, but the Commission will announce no definite dates for contract letting until the federal funds are allocated. They assured Collingsworth representatives that they were just as anxious to complete the work in this county as we are to get it completed.

The new plan announced by the Commission will have a considerable bearing on other road construction in this county also. If the present plans of the commissioners' court work out, they will have an extensive road building program under way in various parts of the county by next year. If it can be completed it will mean a good system of roads in all parts of the county.

While I am on the subject I might as well shell down the corn and admit that Amarillo gave this county 100 per cent co-operation before the Highway Commission Monday. A delegation headed by E. Johnson not only lent their assistance to this county but to every Panhandle county, which had a hearing on either Monday or Tuesday. It is a course of action that I think will be appreciated by many people. Credit should also be given to Rep. Eugene Worley, who was on hand to assist in placing the request of this county before the Highway Commission.

Commissioner W. M. Davis has some relatives who live at Chico. Since he wanted to visit them, we went by that town. All my life I have heard about Chico, but last week was the first time that I had ever been there. It gave me a strange feeling to see the town, for it seemed like that somewhere and somehow it was a part of my own life. My father and mother once lived there as did many other people who now live here. It made me a little sad to see the town, because I could not help thinking of the days when my father and mother were both young and strong and life was filled with opportunities.

I hear that fleas and other handicaps are limiting the cotton crop in south Texas, but you certainly can't see any signs of a poor crop between Vernon and Austin. The wheat is the best in years, and I believe that Texas will make the biggest crop crop that it has in ten years. The cotton between Dallas and Austin looks fine, but it is slightly late and still must run the threat of insects. It is advanced much farther, however, than our crop here in Collingsworth County. On our trip down, W. M. Davis, W. C. Ketter and J. D. Hill almost twisted their necks off admiring the fine corn. Most of it has been topped, a practice which is seldom followed here. Great big ears of corn were all that could be seen. The tassels and the top foliage were cut and used as feed. Mr. Davis wanted to bring some back to feed his hogs, so bad that I thought that we were going to have to stop and hire a trailer to get him to hush up.

I will say one thing for Bill Davis. He never stops thinking about his precinct. The other commissioners would get to talking about a road program for the whole county. Mr. Davis would listen, and then say: "That's all right, but what about a road in precinct 4? I've got to have a road in precinct 4." Of course, he did elaborate on the thought that was the main idea, and he mentioned it one time he mentioned it a hundred on the way back from Austin. I don't believe I have ever been in touch with any group of men who are more sincerely interested in the welfare of their constituents than those commissioners with whom I do the trip, or who work much better harmony, but I will also say that Mr. Davis doesn't have to take off his hat to any of them when it comes to persistence.

Screen Enlarged At Ritz Theatre During Past Week

New Type Seats Will Be Installed In Texan, Mgr. Grady States

Motion picture fans of this county are in for a real treat when they next attend the Ritz, according to John Grady, manager, who today announced that the theatre screen has been enlarged by more than one-third of its original size. Larger lens have also been placed on the projection machines to take care of the increased picture size.

Pictures Third Larger
The screen formerly showed a picture eight feet by eleven feet, and after being remodeled this week now shows a picture 12 by 16 feet. The change in projection lens also gives the picture a smoother and more detailed appearance.

"The change was made as a matter of convenience to the fans of this area," Mr. Grady said. It is now possible for one to view the pictures without eye-strain and the images are clearer. No changes were made in the sound apparatus, which is considered of the best possible type.

Texan Remodeled
Mr. Grady also stated that the new screen size and lens are identical with those recently established in the Midwest theatre, one of Oklahoma City's leading picture houses.

The front and part of the interior of the Texan theatre has also been repainted and redecorated recently and Mr. Grady announced that new type chairs will be placed in the building. The new seats will have leather backs and cushion bottoms.

PASTURE PAYING CROP

MARLIN—Pastures are one of his best paying crops, according to C. D. Stone of Blevins community in Falls county.

Last fall Stone planted four acres of rye grass along with oats for winter grazing. The freeze during February killed the oats, and Stone thought the rye grass was also killed, but he says the grass put out again in March and has furnished grazing for eight head of work mules this spring. The rye grass made a heavy dense sod which permitted grazing even in wet weather on black land. It is making seed now and Stone plans to harvest these and increase his acreage of this grass for pasture another year.

He has also planted 40 acres to sudan grass for summer pasture and is grazing 40 head of yearling steers on it.

CLARENDON NEWS HONORS PIONEERS

Honoring the pioneers and old settlers of the Panhandle, the Clarendon News published a 16-page edition on July 4 in connection with the pre-centennial celebration held in Clarendon on that date.

Historical articles showed some of the early day work and activities of the pioneers in this area and rendered the edition interesting as well as valuable.

The edition was dedicated "to the Pioneers and Old Settlers of Donley and adjoining counties of the Panhandle." The purpose of the edition is generally summed up in the following excerpt from the edition: "The News cannot within the limits of any edition record the trials, labors, joys, and sorrows, disappointments and achievements of that gallant band of men and women who risked their lives and fortunes that this section might be conquered and harnessed to the pursuits of Peace and Progress."

"It can, however, dedicate this edition and this effort in feeble recognition of the ceaseless gratitude and obligations under which this generation rests to those who built this country wisely and well."

TEXAS CENTENNIAL

Congress has authorized the appropriation of $3,000,000 from the Federal treasury for the Texas Centennial Exposition, which will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the independence of the Republic of Texas from Mexican rule, which occurs in 1936.

The bill passed by Congress also authorizes an invitation to foreign governments, asking them to participate in the exposition, which will be held in Dallas.

Texas and the city of Dallas have pledged $9,000,000 for the event, which with the federal contribution will make a total of $12,000,000 in public funds available. With the additions to be made by various states and individual exhibitors it is expected that building construction will reach $25,000,000.

In a brief revolution, marked principally by the battles of the Alamo, whose entire garrison of Texans were killed, and Sam Houston defeated and took prisoner the Mexican President Santa Anna, Texas won its freedom in 1836, and from that time until 1845 it existed as an independent republic. In the latter year it became one of the United States.

All the color and romance of the state's early days will be brought out in the forthcoming exposition, which promises to be one of international importance.

SONGS THAT LIVE

A little more than 100 years ago there was born near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Stephen Collins Foster, whose best known songs have stirred the emotions of four generations, and live today in the hearts of his countrymen as do those of no other American.

Millions who have sung and heard them never knew the name of their author, who was of a quiet and retiring disposition, delicate as a child and never robust.

He began writing songs at the age of 13, and by the time he was 20 his compositions had gained considerable favor. He wrote in all about 125 songs of which the most famous have a Southern setting, although he was born, lived and died in the North.

Among Foster's songs, which had a universal appeal may be mentioned "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks at Home," "Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground," and the exquisite vocal quartette "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming." These and others have been popular on both sides of the Atlantic and their words have been translated into many tongues. Great musicians incorporated several of these melodies into elaborate concert fantasies.

Foster wrote both words and music of his songs, which made an epoch in popular music. He died in New York in 1864, but his plaintive haunting melodies seem destined for immortality.

U. S. CITIZENS ABROAD

State Department records show that more than 400,000 citizens of the United States now have residence in foreign countries, more than half of whom reside in Canada.

Among European countries, France has the most American citizens, about 24,000, while Portugal has the next largest number. The urge to get back to nature probably accounts for the 114 Americans now living in the Society Islands of the South Pacific. Naturally enough, Cuba and Mexico have attracted the greatest number of those who have removed to Latin-America.

While this large number of Americans now live in other countries, many of them are not American-born, but are naturalized citizens who have returned to their native lands.

And some of the native Americans who now prefer residence abroad do not do so entirely from choice, but because if they had not made a getaway they might now be in American prisons.

WHEN PIGS AREN'T PIGS

There is an old-time warning to the effect that one should never buy "a pig in a poke." But a lot of French people have been doing something like that or worse, according to a press dispatch.

A concern called "French Porkery, Limited," put on a strong campaign for investors, with such slogans as "Buy less stocks, they are paper." "Buy more pigs; they are meat." "When your pig grows up we sell him at the very highest prices. In the meantime we pay you from 10 to 12 per cent interest."

Thousands bought pigs they had never seen, and for a time received their interest. Later the sad news came to all investors alike: "Your pigs have died; we could not sell sick pigs."

Then the investors—not the pigs—began to squeal. Promoters of the scheme will be tried for swindling.

OUR PAST

By C. C. BISHOP

During the pioneer days of this nation many men followed the frontier up and among this group was a person by the name of Joseph Bays. He was born in North Carolina, just a little over ten years after the signing of the American Declaration of Independence.

While a small boy his parents moved to the territory of Kentucky and here he was associated with Daniel Boone, Kentucky's greatest pioneer and possibly the greatest pioneer the world has ever known.

After Bays had grown to mature manhood he moved to Missouri and it was here that he met Moses Austin, the father of Stephen F. Austin. Mr. Austin had just returned from Texas and his report so thrilled Bays that he did not wait to see if Austin would be granted permission to colonize Texas, but immediately started for Texas with thirty-two other families.

On reaching Texas, they did not dare to cross over into this land because Austin had not received instructions about his colony. They stayed several months in what was known as Camp Sabine. This camp was reached June 30, 1820, and it was located just across the Sabine River in Louisiana from what is now Sabine County, Texas.

This man had begun to preach when he was a mere boy and was of the Baptist faith and while he was waiting for a permit to locate in Texas, he was not idle. He did much preaching first confining his work to Louisiana. But his fame was soon noised abroad and many of the people on the Texas side came over and heard. It was not long until he was invited to preach to the people that were living in Texas.

He preached the first Baptist sermon in Texas in 1820 in the home of Joseph Hinds. This house was a splendid two-story log house with double rooms and hall between and wide porches on either side.

It was the preaching done at this home that caused Billie Cook to turn to the Baptist faith and Bays baptized him, making the first Baptist church ordinance that ever took place on Texas soil.

It was shortly after this that Stephen F. Austin that carried on with his father's work received his permit to settle 300 families between the Colorado and Brazos rivers. Bays and his family was one of this group.

It was while Austin was in Mexico that Bays was arrested for preaching in this colony. Immediately after his arrest he was started to San Antonio under heavy Mexican guard. They camped for the night at the head of the San Marcos river where now stands the town of San Marcos. Bays and three Mexican soldiers were sent to some springs for water, and he was on constant watch for an opportunity to escape. It was at these springs that two of the soldiers laid down their guns to fill their water vessels, while the third soldier was left to watch Bays. This was the opportunity for which Bays was watching.

He was a man of powerful physique, being over six feet tall and weighing over two hundred pounds. He quickly seized one of the guns clubbed the three Mexicans into the springs and made his escape down the river. He was never recaptured.

After several days of hard traveling he made his way to Joe Kuykendall's home, one of the group that came out from Missouri with him. This friend furnished him a horse and a brace of derringers. Bays made his escape to Louisiana and his family soon joined him.

Here they lived until the revolution between Texas and Mexico broke out and Bays and his son joined Sam Houston's forces and both fought in the battle of San Jacinto.

After the war Bays and his family moved back into Texas and Houston sent him as a Commissioner to deal with the Cherokee Indians.

Thus we have a story of the price that one of our pioneers paid for our Texas liberty that we often think so little of.

Great-Hearted David

Text: I Samuel 26:5-12;
II Samuel 1:23-27

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 21.

As shepherd boy, singer, hunter, warrior, sinner, a man with fine moods of repentance and righteousness, and as a great king—in all these guises did David appear in Scripture.

It would be difficult to conceive of a more complex figure, or one whose elements of character were so contradictory.

If we were to consider only certain aspects of his life, such as, for instance, his sin with Bathsheba and his treachery against Uriah, we might see his life chiefly as an example of warning to the young. If we were to consider him as a man of blood, who was not permitted to build a temple because of the gory and violent character of his life, we should again have occasion for lessons of warning.

Here, however, we find the same David commended to the study of young people for his generous attitude toward others, and described for intermediate and senior students as David the great-hearted.

This side of David, also is true. He showed himself a man of rare spirit and of noble structure on a few occasions of testing that came to his life.

Here in our lesson is the story of his attitude toward Saul, who, in his raging jealousy, had sought to kill David, and whose fury was a constant menace to David's life. David had the chance to kill Saul, or to have him killed, as he lay sleeping among the wagons. But David refused to execute such vengeance.

There are other instances that reveal the man of complex character in similar greatness. When in a thoughtless moment in the hardships of warfare David had expressed a wish for a drink from the well at Bethlehem, three valiant men went into the enemy's territory, endangering their lives, and brought him a drink from the well.

But David refused to partake of it, regarding it as far too sacred a gift for which men had risked their lives, and poured it on the ground, as an oblation to the Lord.

Possibly the character of every man should be judged at its highest and greatest point and not by what was small and mean. By that standard David was a man of generous instincts, with fine qualities that youth might well emulate, avoiding at the same time the things that marred, and almost entirely wrecked, the life of Israel's greatest king.

Magnanimity is the greatest quality that a man can have. Men seem strong at times because of the intensity of their vengefulness and their hate.

We often say of a man, as if it were to commend him, "he is a good hater," but when in contrast with a "good hater" we consider a man like David, or a man like Lincoln, who even in conflict could be generous and magnanimous toward a foe, we understand that there is in human life something much greater and nobler than hate.

There is no such thing as a "good hater." Goodness is always associated with something better, larger and wiser than hate. We count David good because, in spite of his faults and sins, he lived above hate and meanness.

Caravan Visits Club Homes On Inspection Tour Friday

ests See Many rovements On pection Trip

Club Members Achieve General Success in Home Comforts

Can a clothes closet in a farm home be made into an attractive, convenient and practical storage room?

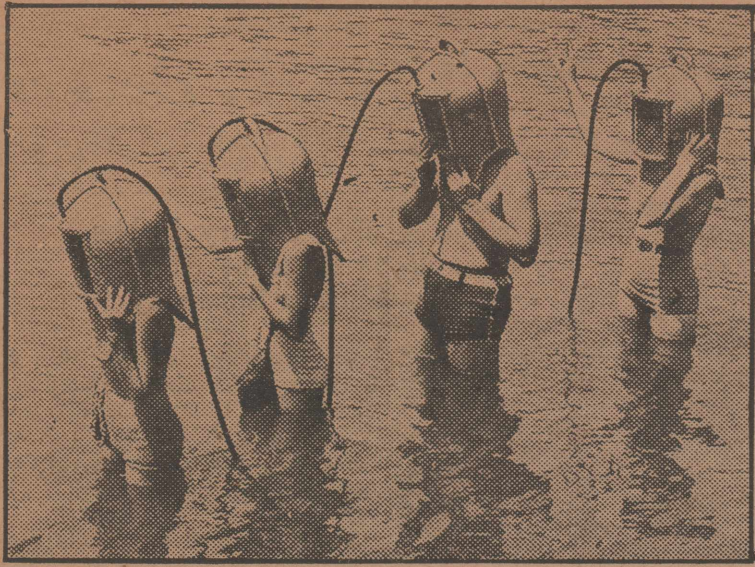

For the correct answer, ask any member of the small caravan of women who left Wellington Friday afternoon, July 12, shortly after noon and visited the homes of eight club ladies.

An Attractive Closet
The line of cars first drew to a point in front of the charming home of Mrs. Chas. D. Slay in North Wellington. The line formed and visited her clothes closet which will compare favorably with to be found in this area. The section of the closet featuring two clothes rods, above which shelves and doors for storing bedding and other articles. Slay explained that the second clothes rod was added for the purpose of hanging out-of-season clothing. The closet is also equipped with two tiers of slanting shoe racks. The walls of the closet are neatly finished in buff to reflect light and the floor was varnished. The closet was equipped with a light drop for convenience. Following the inspection of the closet, the guests also visited Mrs. Slay's garden, which is equipped with a hollow tile and features unusual production.

At Pierce Home
After leaving the Slay home the caravan turned to the north on the Shamrock road and continued to the home of Mrs. Lee Pierce, where another well balanced clothes closet awaited inspection. Original Mrs. Pierce had her bedrooms on the second story of her home, recently moved them downstairs, papered them and made numerous improvements, including construction of her closet. A clothes rod runs east and west across her closet. Above this is a shelf for hats and a third compartment affords storage space for quilts and comforts. In the lower portion, below the clothes she has constructed her slanting shoe racks from broom sticks. Another interesting feature of this delightful closet was an improvement in which Mrs. Pierce may take credit for individuality, a small stool which was constructed from scrap lumber and which enables her to reach the second and third shelves without having to go after a chair each time she secures an article from the shelves.

Light and Fresh Air
Turning to the Quail road the little caravan next stopped at the home of Mrs. J. W. Masten, North Wellington Wardrobe Demonstrator. Upon entering, a miniature ironing board was shown and its uses for ironing sleeves and delicate folds were extolled by club members. Mrs. Masten was awarded first place in the wardrobe contest recently and the fact can well speak for the accomplishment she has made in modeling her closet. It was immediately apparent that she had faced the problem of securing light, since electricity was not available on the farm. However, the closet was well illuminated by a small window and finished with such light colors as to afford bright lighting. The solution not only gave ample illumination, but also afforded fresh air, and also many improvements including lined doors to protect the clothing from dust and sand. Between the storage space at the top and neatly arranged clothing rods, she placed storage space for hats and had made hat racks from old apple boxes. Needless to say, this proved to be one of the most interesting stops on the trip.

Vacationists View "New World"

The weird figures pictured above are really vacationists at Old Point Comfort Beach, Va., about to indulge in the newest water, or rather under-water sport. Specially constructed diving helmets enable them to walk about for ten or fifteen minutes at a time on the bottom of Chesapeake Bay, viewing the wonders of "another world."

tween the storage space at the top and neatly arranged clothing rods, she placed storage space for hats and had made hat racks from old apple boxes. Needless to say, this proved to be one of the most interesting stops on the trip.

At John Jones Home
The next visit carried the party to the home of Mrs. John Jones, also of the North Wellington club. After passing through the kitchen where punch was served, the guests entered the charming closet. In arranging her closet, Mrs. Jones was very thorough. The door led in from the west. In the east side was arranged clothes racks with storage space above for miscellaneous articles. On the south wall was placed a mirror. The east wall featured shoe racks, magazine storage space, and a clothes hamper. On this side was also found hats on durable stands, which Mrs. Jones said that she constructed of beaver board. Another interesting feature of Mrs. Jones' home was the divisions made in dresser drawers for the convenient placement of clothing, spreads and similar articles.

A 4-H Accomplishment
With half of the tour completed the delegation met with a most pleasant surprise at the next stop, where they were entertained with several charming young ladies of the Crossroads 4-H club at the Koen home. Miss Loeva Koen showed the visitors where her closet had formerly stood, then conducted them through the new arrangement. This closet was located between the bedroom and bathroom and was constructed from old bridge forms. It had an opening on the east and west sides and featured ample shelving, clothes rods and slanting shoe racks. Just as the group thought they had completed a most delightful inspection they were greeted with a pleasant surprise—for little Patsy Koen showed her clothes rod and shoe shelf, constructed a bare three feet from the floor to enable her to conveniently care for her own little dresses and shoes. Many of the guests considered this visit as one of the most outstanding of the tour due to the fact that the young ladies conducted the inspection and conducted it in a et failed to furnish ample space.

A chest of drawers domed the northwest corner of the room. The chest had been refinished by Mrs. Richards and the drawers were divided to provide convenient storage space. In the northeast corner of the room stood the bed, which was also finished in an attractive manner. The southeast corner of the room held a table, while located in the central portion of the room was placed a re-finished rocker. The room presented a most comfortable and delightful appearance, which absolutely invited rest. In another portion of the house, Mrs. Richards had constructed a second closet at a very small cost. This stop proved pleasant and instructive—and none were surprised that Mrs. Richards scored high points to become a prize winner in the bedroom contest. The delightful visit was made even more so when members of the Crossroads Demonstration club served punch and butter wafers to the guests.

Wardrobe Painters

From this point the guests travelled to Quail. The first stop was made in the home of Mrs. J. S. Stewart, wardrobe demonstrator for the Quail club. Mrs. Stewart gave a short, interesting talk on the proper storage methods for winter clothing. Mrs. L. E. Brishbin showed how clothes protectors might be constructed from old sheets. The expense records for the year were presented by Mrs. Stewart.

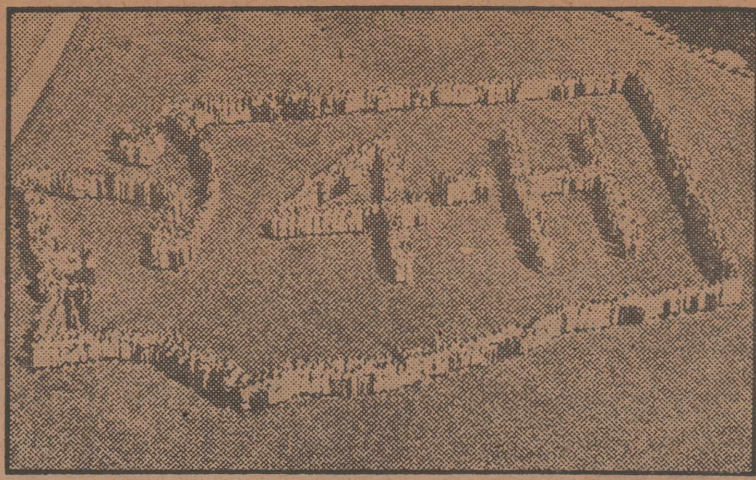

A Delightful Home

The final inspection was made at the delightful home of Mrs. Walter Starr, which is located just north of the Stewart home. This trip would have been well worthwhile even had there been no attractive closet or charming bedroom. Women raved over the kitchen as well as other portions of the house. Men envied the green lawn. Undoubtedly the Starr home would compare favorably with the homes in larger cities of the state.

Lawn Party And Shower Honors Mrs. Eikenburg

The lawn of the J. W. Harper home made a very attractive setting for the party and shower given in honor of Mrs. Frank Eikenburg, formerly Miss Margaret Ann McWilliams, on Monday evening. Two charming hostesses, Misses Annalu Harper and June Marian Alley assisted by their mothers, Mrs. J. W. Harper and Mrs. E. W. Alley, greeted the guests. Miss Dorothy Smith, Houston, house guest of Miss Harper, assisted the hostesses in serving punch. The table was arranged in the center of the lawn with the guests forming a semi-circle around the table. Smilax, phlox and zinnias made a colorful contrast against the background of green shrubbery. Pastel nets, chiffons and summer organdy dresses worn by the members of the house party completed the scene.

After the arrival of the honor guest, a short program was given by Mrs. Ernest Elliott, Miss Ramona Mitchell and Miss Mary Katherine Hutcherson. Mrs. Aubrey Dobbs accompanied the song numbers, which were rendered from an open window just above the punch table.

Thompson Favors State Control Of Oil Production

Railroad Commissioner Discusses Federal Control Of Wells

My fellow citizens of Texas, it is a pleasure to talk with you for a few minutes about the fight we have been making to retain in Texas and keep control in Texas our own Texas oil. We contend that the State of Texas has the right and the exclusive right to say how much oil can be produced within our own State. We believe that only the State of Texas has the right to say where you may drill an oil well in Texas. We believe that only the State of Texas can tell you how many oil wells you may drill on your farm. We say that the drilling of an oil well on your farm is a local matter and that it is a matter of concern only between you and your State of Texas.

We contend that it is not a proper matter for the Federal Government to dictate the terms. They simply haven't the authority to do it.

Texas has oil wells in 122 counties of this State.

There are 520 separate oil fields in Texas.

There are 63,000 oil wells in Texas.

Brings Vast Wealth

We produce and sell 1,064,000 barrels of oil every day in Texas. At a dollar a barrel this means $325.00 for every family of five in Texas every year.

Is the control of this wealth worth retaining in Texas. I say it is and we have been fighting successfully to defend this right from any and all encroachment and I propose to keep on doing so, with all the strength there is in me.

Three years ago the State of Texas was producing and marketing only 750,000 barrels of oil per day. By constant effort and fighting for our place in the markets of the world we are now successfully producing and selling a 1,064,000 barrels per day. Thus you will see that by freedom of action we have been able to increase the business of Texas over $300,000 dollars a day in oil. This means over a $100,000,000 a year additional income to our State. I ask you, is this not worth defending?

More production of oil is not commerce. If the production of oil is not commerce it certainly follows that the mere production of oil is not interstate commerce. If the mere production of oil is not interstate commerce, then the regulation of the production of oil in Texas on lands not owned by the Federal Government is not subject to constitutional regulation by the Federal Government. This internal regulation is exclusively a function of the States' police power.

Is Legal Question

We are interested in discussing purely a legal question. This is not a meeting of economists. We are all lawyers who swore we would uphold the Constitution of the State of Texas and the Constitution of the United States. We are all officers of the Court and as such it is our solemn duty to study faithfully these constitutions and to do nothing by word or act that would weaken or strike them down.

If it is found desirable to charge either the Texas or the Federal Constitutions the method is set out in each of them. Therein lies the security and the permanence of the people's power to control government.

So many people get excited over temporary and passing troubles. They cannot see the forest for the trees.

Our Federal constitution has been tested us through many such periods as we are now experiencing. It has brought us gloriously through four wars and has made a firm of government the outstanding example of democracy for modern world.

The founders knew that it was for the simpler phases of endeavor, like mere production, to be exclusively to the control and regulation of the State Governments. Thus those things which intimately touch the efforts of the individual in producing his bread and butter are kept in control of those officials close at home and immediately responsive to the will of the people themselves. The administrators over these affairs are close at hand and more clearly understand the problems of the localities in which they live and the people who elect them to office.

Air-Minded

The determination of the German government to build up its air force has turned the thoughts of its youth decidedly toward aviation. In this scene, a young air enthusiast tries out a model plane on the banks of the Rhine.

Power With People

If these servants or administrators do a bad job the electorate will not return them to office. Frequent elections keep them in check and responsive to the will of the governed. That is the very essence of free government. The founders knew this. They had experienced too long the heavy hand of administrators far from the fields of their administration.

They knew that men clothed with a little brief authority and safe from the direct vote of the people is apt to be harsh and tyrannical and is liable to mistake his ideas and aims for the wishes of the people and to get the idea that the authority really springs from him or his office instead of from the people themselves.

That is why the Federal Constitution expressly says that all powers not directly conferred upon the central government is retained by the States or in the people themselves.

The founders jealously guarded against the encroachment on the States' powers by the central government. They knew from bitter experience what it was to be ruled from afar and how hard it was to get audience and redress.

If you will study the debates on the provisions of the Federal Constitution which took place before it was adopted you will find that the so called commerce clause took up a great deal of the time.

These debates all clearly bring out the fact that what they had in mind was that no State should ever erect barriers at her borders to keep commerce from the other States from flowing freely across her borders.

No State could take toll or levy taxes or put any sort of a burden on the free movement of goods or persons into or out of any State from another State. We were to have free intercourse as between the traders of all the States.

It is under the guise of the commerce clause that the Federal Control proponents would assume charge of oil production within the States of the Union.

However, the United States Supreme Court on May 27, 1935 in the 9 to 0 Decision of the Schechter Case settled that point conclusively in the following language. Supreme Court Ruling

"It is not the province of the Court to consider the economic advantages or disadvantages of such a centralized system. It is sufficient to say that the Federal Constitution does not provide for it.

Our growth and development have called for wise use of the commerce power of the Federal government in its control over the expanded activities of interstate commerce, and in protecting that commerce from burdens, interferences, and conspiracies to restrain and monopolize it. But the authority of the Federal government may not be pushed to such an extreme as to destroy the distinction, which the commerce clause itself establishes, between commerce among the several States and the internal concerns of a State. The same answer must be made to the contention that is based upon the serious economic situation which led to the passage of the Recovery Act,—the fall in price, the decline the curtailment of the market for commodities. . . . Without in any way disparaging this motive, it is enough to say that the recuperative efforts of the Federal Government must be made in a manner consistent with the authority granted by the Constitution."

Such has been the policy of the Supreme Court since the dawn of our history and as long as it continues to be its policy, this country will survive and continue to grow.

Unusual Seedlings Sought For Tests

COLLEGE STATION.—Seedling peaches, plums and other fruits that have unusual quality but that have not been named yet are being budded to nursery stock for experimental purposes by the Texas Extension Service and the Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation, according to J. F. Rosborough, Extension horticulturist.

Anyone having unusual seedlings, or knowing of anyone who does, should get in touch with Rosborough giving the name and address of the owner. Shipping tags and other necessary material will be sent the owner so that the Extension Service and the Experiment Station may get buds for the test plots.

The budding work was started last year, who buds from almost 100 different seedlings were budded onto nursery stock. The trees were then transplanted to various experiment stations in the State for a five year test.

The object of the experiment is to make available to the people of the State the best of the new seedlings which otherwise would not be perpetuated, Rosborough said. Zambi, monkey mascot of the steamer Delaray, was successfully operated on for appendicitis.

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS

Inferior roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a paving fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins! Maintenance costs go up and up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep . . . and no more new roads are built.

That's why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps.

Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic . . . reduces accidents . . . saves motorists up to two cents a mile in gas, tires, oil and repairs, as compared with driving on inferior roads.

Get concrete. Insist on it—for safety, comfort and economy.

Give our Centennial Visitors the Protection, Economy and Comfort of Safe Highways.

Kiwanians Hear Relief Head In Short Talk Here

John Harper Answers Series of Questions Before Club Meeting

Members of the Wellington Kiwanis Club last Friday heard an interesting round table discussion led by John Harper, local relief administrator.

The club members asked questions, which were answered by Mr. Harper. A few of the questions and answers follow:

Ques.—What amount is paid to beneficiaries of your office? Ans.—From $6,000 to $15,000 per month. At the present time it is around $6,000 per month.

Ques.—What is the number on relief rolls at the present time? Ans.—About 430 persons, each the head of a family, and 43 of the number are on the rural rehabilitation program.

Ques.—Is the number increasing or decreasing? Ans.—The number is gradually on the increase at the present time.

Ques.—What is this new plan? Ans.—Since we do not have definite information on this plan it is impossible to answer at the present time.

Ques.—Under your present plan what does the individual average receive per month, Ans.—The average family consists of about 4 3-5 persons and receives under the July allotment about $16 per family as an average. The amount depends upon the number in the family.

Ques.—Is there an outright grant to an individual for which he does not work? Ans.—Yes. Where there is no employable person in the family an outright grant is made on a budgetary basis.

Ques.—In case a person is offered a job from some individual and refuses to accept it, what action, if any, is taken by your office? Ans.—If he is offered a steady job (2 or 3 weeks) at normal wage schedule, and refuses to take it—and can offer no excuse or not accepting other than that he wants to work on relief, his case is closed.

Ques.—In case a person on your rolls accepts an outside job, and that work lasts only a few days, can he return to your rolls? Ans.—Yes.

Ques.—Is TRC labor being used in constructing county roads? Ans.—TRC labor is being used in construction, maintenance and on bridge construction.

In his message to the Wellington club he stated: "I shall bring with me an Eskimo husky dog which went east with the party which penetrated Marie Byrd land. Her name is 'Neeka.' I shall show slides to illustrate my story."

The young explorer's lectures have been heard in many neighboring cities including Memphis, Pampa, Amarillo and Canyon. Always, his audiences report him as telling the story of the expedition in a highly interesting and entertaining manner.

and not fear. Some used binoculars while others gazed at the moon from time to time early in the night and then went to bed.

The first portion of the eclipse, starting at 8:15, was invisible to the naked eye, but the dark shadow started cutting into the full moon at 9:15. Shortly after 10 o'clock, the eclipse was total, leaving only a dark, copper ball until 12:30. At this time the eastern edge became tipped with light that looked like sparkling silver in contrast to the dull red of the other part of the moon. The moon escaped from the shadow of the earth completely about 2 o'clock, and shone in its full brightness.

The entire stalk and bloom was brought to the Leader office by Hugh Longino. Mr. Allen does not know whether it is the first bloom in the county or not, but says he believes it to be one of the first.

nounced, and a number of counties withdrew their applications for new designations. This is being done to facilitate the federal program of building farm to market and lateral roads.

Possible Lateral Roads
Collingsworth County will have an excellent opportunity to get work done on a road from Dodsonville through Wellington and on out through Quail under this new program, as well as work in the Samnorwood community and other parts of the county. The present designation on the east and west road through this county will be cancelled under the new plan announced by the Highway Commission, but the roads will be re-designated after they have been improved.

As the result of information received at the meeting the commissioners of this county will meet soon to map out a general road building program for the county in order to make the best use of all the money that this county is entitled to receive.

No New Routes
The commission's new policy of not approving any new routes for designation and its announcement that numerous designations will be cancelled placed a new outlook on various projects in the Panhandle, leading to the general conclusion that much more road building will be possible in that area than had been planned.

For the main highways, one on the federal aid system, the commission let it be known that much work will be started immediately after the federal rules and regulations are received, possibly in the next week. Contracts on these routes will be let in August and September, looking to their completion by winter.

Collingsworth Delegation
Collingsworth County was represented by a delegation headed by Judge Luther Gribble and composed of Commissioners J. D. Hill, W. M. Davis and W. C. Ketner, and M. P. Watkins and Deskins Wells. Rep. Eugene Worley also lent his assistance to the representatives from this section as also did Judge Dave Shanks of Ochiltree County and a delegation from Amarillo, headed by T. E. Johnson, managing editor of the Globe-News.

ers who stated that the moisture brought relief from the hot summer days and loosened the top soil on the young cotton. Feed crops were also thought to have benefited materially from the rains.

The precipitation was considered as coming at an unusually good time as most of the farmers had just about finished their first cultivation and the ground was in excellent condition to receive the moisture and hold it. The extremely hot weather had caused much fear of a July drouth.

Rains were reported throughout the state during the past week, and the Friday shower which brought relief here extended on to Wichita Falls.
