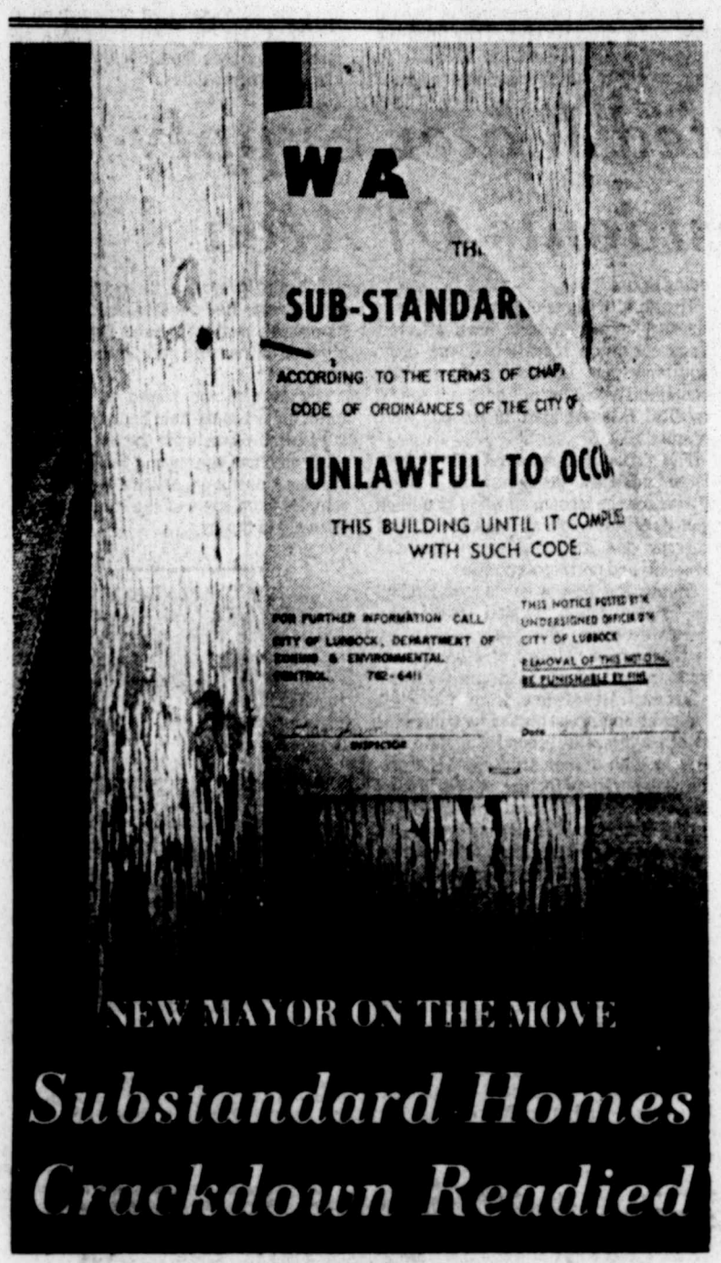
THIRTY FIVE CENTS



NEW MAYOR ON THE MOVE

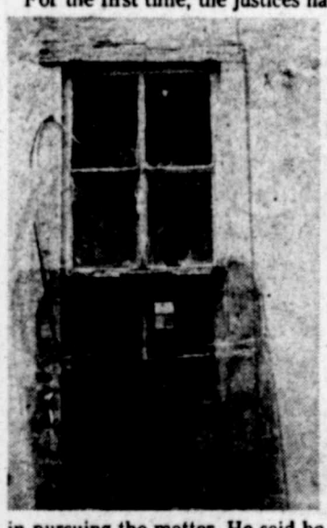
Substandard Homes Crackdown Readied

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SLUMLORDS, beware. You no longer can hide behind caveat emptor — Latin for "let the buyer beware" — and the city plans to make sure you know it.

Mayor Dirk West says he plans to follow up on a recent state Supreme Court decision breaking with past decisions and with the long-standing common law of caveat emptor.

For the first time, the justices have recognized a landlord's "implied warranty of habitability" in rental transactions. That means a landlord now has a legal obligation to ensure his rental units are fit for human habitation.



If they are deemed uninhabitable, tenants can sue. But the city is considering taking an active public role in habitability enforcement rather than leaving it to individuals and already backlogged courts.

An ordinance drafted last year at City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's request, but apparently forgotten by staffers and council members, may be resurrected.

After being told of the Supreme Court's decision and reminded of the city's tabled ordinance, West said he is "definitely interested" in pursuing the matter. He said he will ask City Mgr. Larry Cunningham to schedule the ordinance for upcoming council work session discussion.

The city staff's suggested ordinance, which has won Housing Standard Commission endorsement, would make the city a neutral intermediary between landlords and complaining tenants.

As proposed, a city zoning inspector acting on a tenant's complaints would determine whether a rental unit meets minimum habitability

Paris Airport Raided

Three Terrorists, One Policeman Die

PARIS (AP) — Three terrorists armed with submachine guns and grenades opened fire on Israel-bound passengers in an Orly airport departure lounge Saturday and were killed by police and Israeli security men in a half hour gun battle.

One policeman also was killed and two officers, three passengers and a stewardess for El Al, the Israeli national airline, were wounded.

El Al security agents joined airport police in pinning down and killing the terrorists in the Orly terminal eight miles south of Paris, airline officials said.

Identities Not Given

Identities of the dead and wounded were not given, but French authorities said none of the wounded was seriously injured. They reported the three wounded passengers were French.

Tunisian and Lebanese passports were found on the dead terrorists, who appeared to be Arabs, but the papers were believed to be forgeries, Jean Perrier, governor of Orly's Val de Marne District, told reporters.

He said the terrorists began shooting without giving any warning at 3:40 p.m., directing their five at persons waiting in the lounge to pass through security checks and board an El Al flight to Tel Aviv.

Agents Open Fire

"The terrorists didn't have a chance to get off more than the first burst when French security men and our security men opened fire together," El Al President Modechi Hod told Israeli Radio.

Perrier said the terrorists carried hand grenades, plastic explosives and Beretta submachine guns concealed in hand baggage. He said electronic security checks would have detected their weapons if they had tried to enter the El Al lounge.

According to Perrier, the terrorists had entered the waiting area of Spain's Iberia Airlines that adjoins the El Al departure lounge. He said they had tickets for an Iberia flight to Malaga, Spain.

Gunmen Challenged

Police reported security personnel became suspicious of the terrorists and went to question them. "When they were challenged, one of them pulled a submachine gun out of his bag and started firing," said Interior Minister Christian Bonnet.

Earlier official reports that were later denied said two other suspected terrorists had taken refuge on a terrace of the terminal building and then hid in a restroom. At one point, Gaston Viens, mayor of Orly, told reporters five terrorists and two policemen were dead.

But Perrier said, "We have no reason now to suspect that more than three persons were involved in the attack."

Official Aboard

A Tel Aviv broadcast said Israeli Labor Minister Israel Katz was aboard the EL AL plane that was preparing to receive the other passengers. It said he had been visiting Paris.

In Beirut, Lebanon, spokesmen for the major Palestinian guerrilla groups declined to comment on the attack. "We have nothing to say about that," said a leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

There were numerouus bullet holes in the glass windows of the El Al waiting room on the first floor of the airport building.

French officials cordoned off the airport after the shooting, but disorder reigned as flak-jacketed police with German shepherds combed the terminal.

It was not known how the terrorists got inside the departure area. Officials said said controls in the departure areas are strict, and the gunmen might have arrived with their weapons on an incoming flight. There is no security check of arriving passengers at Orly.

The security-conscious Israeli airline and its passengers have been the targets of about 17 terrorist attacks in the past 10 years.

Orly itself has been the site of two previous attacks on El Al. On Jan. 23, 1975, terrorists fired a bazooka at an El Al plane with 137 passengers about to depart for New York, but missed and struck an empty Yugoslavian plane.

Six days later, three terrorists tried to fire a rocket at an El Al 747 jet taking off from Orly. They were thwarted in the attempt, but managed to throw grenades into the terminal, wounding 20 persons and seizing 10 hostages, who were freed in exchange for a flight to Iraq.

In one of the worst attaccks, at Israel's Lod airport on May 30, 1972, three Japanese terrorists arrived on an Air France flight and opened fire in the terminal, killing 26 and wounding 70.

In Tel Aviv, an El Al official told Israeli Radio that a group of more than 100 French insurance agents who had been ticketed for the Saturday flight from Orly canceled their reservations after the shootout. The plane continued to Israel with just a few passengers, the official said.

Light Rainfall Persists Across Much Of Plains

A-J News Services

SCATTERED areas of the South Plains received drenching rains Friday night and Saturday, with the skies still full of rolling thunderheads as the optimum planting season closed.

A dozen South Plains communities reported two-day totals of more than an inch of rainfall by late Saturday, with reports of up to 3 inches of precipitation in parts of Lynn County and 4 inches in parts of Kent County.

The forecast for today was for more rainfall, with a 40 percent probability of precipitation today, 20 percent tonight, according to the National Weather Service.

The forecast was the same for the rest of the South Plains.

Although the official National Weather Bureau total in Lubbock late Saturday for the Friday and Saturday rainfall period was just .26, reports from Abernathy totaled 1.85 inches of rain for the same time frame, and Wolfforth reported more than an inch.

Lynn Moisture Good

Shallowater's two-day total hit 2 inches, with with another half-inch Saturday added to the 1.5 total recorded Friday night.

Tahoka reported only .6 of an inch total for the Friday-Saturday period, but reports from farmlands in Lynn County reached as high as 3 inches.

Among the totals for the two-day period reported late Saturday, with clouds still hovering over the entire South Plains, were:

Abernathy 1.85, Amherst .7, Andrews .6, Anton .36, Brownfield .19, Cotton Center 1.15, Crosbyton .44, Denver City .5, Dickens 1.5, Dimmitt .32, Earth .6, Floydada 1.06 (with the nearby Dougherty community recording 1 inch), Friona .14, Jayton 2.5, Lamesa .8, Levelland .48, Littlefield .5, Lockney 1.0, Lubbock .26, Matador 1.2, Muleshoe .8, New Deal .4, Olton .2, O'Donnell .3, Paducah 2.55, Petersburg, .8, Plainview 1.25, Post, 2.5, Shallowater 2.0, Slaton, 1.75, Springlake .10, Spur, 1.75, Sundown 1.2, Tahoka .6, Tulia .75, Wolfforth 1.0.

Little Drying Seen

Drying conditions are expected to remain poor through Sunday, providing maximum chances for the rainfall to do some good for South Plains farmers, according to the National Weather Service.

Heavy rains also poured down on other parts of Texas as Carlsbad in Tom Green County recorded more than 3 1/2 inches of rain by late Saturday and flash flood warnings were issued for the Hill Country, the Edwards Plateau and parts of South Texas.

Thunderstorms were scattered throughout the state, appearing just about everywhere except far West Texas and Northeast Texas.

A funnel cloud was reported by the public about 3:30 p.m. Saturday near Wolfforth, but was never officially confirmed.

At least a half-dozen minor traffic mishaps were reported to Lubbock police.

Montford Pledges Price Of Crime 'Going Up' Here

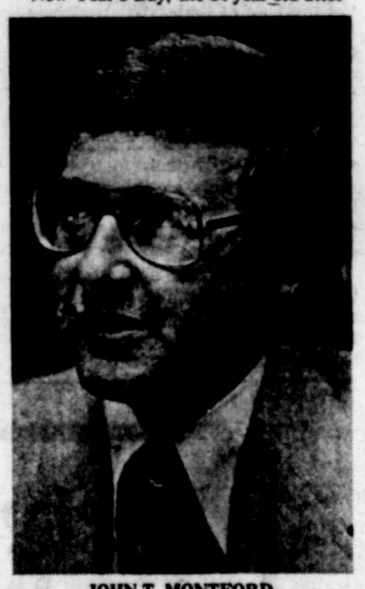
By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IN LUBBOCK County, sometimes you can get away with murder — literally.

And that, says the county's criminal district attorney designate, has got to stop.

"If you have a reputation for offering probation in certain cases like murder or robbery, that's no deterrent to keep people from committing those types of crimes or even enough of one to make them think twice about doing it," John T. Montford says. "You've got to let people know they have to pay the price, and you can look for that come January."

New Year's Day, the 34-year-old attorney moves into the courthouse office now housing Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin — the county's only chief prosecutor ever and the man voters May 6 said had to go.



JOHN T. MONTFORD

But, says Montford, that won't be the only change.

"Lubbock County needs a day-to-day reputation, on the streets where it counts, of tough, rigorous prosecution. That will be the guiding light of my administration," he said in outlining plans to stage an "all out attack on crime."

"I can't tell you we're going to ask for 50 years in every case, but the ante's going up." And along with it, Montford said, already booming crime rates should go down.

Montford, two weeks ago overwhelmingly selected by voters to replace Griffin in the county's top law enforcement job, says his staff basically will follow the eight-point plan he laid out in campaigning for the job.

But, says Montford, that election pointed out "a general dissatisfaction with crime rates here," and the basic premise always will have be to "let folks know if you're going to commit a crime in Lubbock County you will have to pay the price."

Five Lubbockites in one day last year walked away from the courthouse after pleading guilty to murder. Their only punishment was the same a shoplifter might receive — probation.

Lubbock County Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard claims a burglar in the county has a 75 percent chance of not getting caught, a murderer a 25 percent chance of never going to jail even for a day.

Those days, Montford says, are over.

Says Blanchard, Montford's "already been over to find out how many prisoners the jail will hold. I think he's pretty serious."

It may have been only two weeks since he got the job, but the attorney says by July he will have his staff of assistants, by September a 16-member citizens advisory panel and possibly by September or October a seminar to help educate businessmen on how to help stop the bad check problem, one that already has flooded the sheriff's office with an estimated 8,000 unserved warrants.

Already, Montford said, a list of known offenders has been prepared, and "we'll take 30 percent of those at first and keep an eye on them. These are certain known people who seem to have developed a

Lubbock 'White Flight' Doubted

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IF WHITE RESIDENTS are fleeing Lubbock to escape school integration, the exodus is so subtly mixed with other factors that area school officials have been unable to detect it.

The migration to communities surrounding Lubbock also is being spurred by rising tax burdens in the city and by what most see merely as natural growth patterns.

"I've probably had more inquiries this year than last regarding our schools," said Don Taylor, superintendent of the Roosevelt School District. "But we expect an increase of perhaps only 50 students next fall. This growth has been going on for several years now as people buy small acreages and build houses or put moble homes on them."

Adding to Roosevelt's growth and that of the Slaton schools is Lake Ransom Canyon. The development, which became an incorporated village last December, is served by both districts.

"I don't know whether 'white flight' is the reason for our growth or not," Reid Warner, mayor of Ransom Canyon, said.

"It's growing fast — but Lubbock is. People need some other reasons to move out here rather than Lubbock's school problems. Roosevelt and Slaton schools are integrated and students have to ride the buses to get to them."

Warner said he doubted Ransom Canyon would ever form a school district of its own. "In fact, I can't imagine us even wanting to," he said.

"There is no white flight," said Brownie Brownlee, president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors. "We find people say they're leaving Lubbock more because of the tax situation than schools, but I don't think it's going to help them all that much."

A recent Avalanche-Journal study showed increased tax valuations in the southwest part of the city could mean a $250 increase in city and school taxes for the average homeowner.

Raymond Taylor, president of a construction company now building homes in Idalou, disagrees with Brownlee.

"I think Brownie would answer different if he had a development going on outside Lubbock," Taylor said. Taylor is in the first phase of a construction program about a block from the Idalou Schools.

"I've not had the homes evaluated yet for tax purposes, but generally the total tax bill in Idalou is one-third of what it is in Lubbock," he said. The homes he is building are in the $45,000-$80,000 price range.

Taylor concedes that increased demand for services eventually would cause a rise in tax rates, "but not soon."

Taylor also disagrees with Brownlee about white flight, at least to the extent that "people are interested in moving if they can."

"Every time something is printed in the newspaper about the schools, I'm flooded with phone calls," said Taylor, who first began work on the Idalou subdivision about 18 months ago.

"We knew that it (a desegregation order) was in the making, but that is not what promted me to buy the land. It was a business venture," said Taylor. "I knew people would be moving to the suburbs, to Idalou, Wolfforth, Shallowater or Slaton. It wasn't because of the school thing, but it certainly has helped business."

Ralph Motsenbocker, Idalou school superintendent, said, however, that he had seen "nothing to indicate any white flight."

Motsenbocker said the Idalou School Board acted last winter, following announcement of the desegregation order, to block any large attempts at inter-district transfers in which the students live within the Lubbock district but would attend classes in Idalou.

The board declared a ban on any transfers, accord-

Congress To Decide Fate Of Alaskan Frontier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of America's last frontier is being decided in the halls of Congress in a classic battle between conservationists and developers.

At stake are sections of Alaska totaling about one-third of its land area — an area roughly equal in size to the state of California.

The question, bitterly fought on both sides: How much of the land should be preserved untouched for future generations, and how much should be opened to a resource-starved nation and an economically deprived state?

Conservationists call the bill "the last great first chance" to save the unspoiled frontier.

"There are no more Alaskas," said Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., who pushed the bill to House approval on Friday. "There are no more opportunities."

But opponents, including most of official Alaska, say too much land is set aside, put off limits to commercial exploration and development, its rich lodes of timber, oil and minerals locked away from those who need them.

"This is the greatest land fraud ever perpetrated on Alaska and the American people," complained Bill Egan, Alaska's first governor, after the bill passed the House. And former Gov. Walter Hickel, the one-time secretary of the interior, protested bitterly that "statehood is now an empty promise."

The bill, a top environmental priority for President Carter, passed the House 277-31 on Friday. It now goes to new battles in the Senate.

In one swoop, the measure would double the size of nation's park and wildlife refuge system. Overall, 120 million acres of federal land in Alaska would be given a protected status.

The amount of land involved is almost incomprehensible. The parks and refuges would be larger than some states in the Lower 48.

There would be 10 new national parks; additions to three existing parks; 12 new wildlife refuges; additions to four existing refuges; wild and scenic river corridors on portions of 22 streams; and expansions of two existing national forests in the southeastern portion of the state.

Alaska's sole House member, Rep. Don Young, a Republican, sees the bill as a disaster for his state and the country. Alaska's two senators, Republican Ted Stevens and Democrat Mike Gravel, also are bitterly opposed and say they may filibuster the bill if it is not revised in the Senate to suit them.

Gravel and Stevens gained an important ally Saturday when Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said he will not allow the bill to be considered without some compromise acceptable to the Alaska senators.

Asked if the 9-1 margin by which the bill passed the House vote had changed his mind about scheduling the bill for a vote, he replied: "No, not if the House had passed it 20 to 1."

"If the matter can be worked out to the point where the two Alaska senators are not adamantly opposed to it, then perhaps the matter can be brought up," Byrd said.

Gravel says the bill is dead, and many Alaskans hope he's right.

"People there are not allowed in polite society without damning Mo Udall," Udall observed Friday. "But I urge the people of Alaska to reflect on what we have done. It's a good, balanced bill."

Balance is the key word on both sides of the issue. Both sides say they're for conservation. Both sides agree the nation's largest state — twice the size of Texas — has room for both development and conservation. The disagreement comes on how much land should be set aside and under what conditions.

A key question involves the 65 million acres designated as wilderness area, a classification that bans development without specific approval of future sessions of Congress.

The bill includes the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge on the North Slope as a wilderness, for example, although that land also is rated as the highest potential onshore source for future oil discoveries in the entire country.

Exploration, according to developers, could take place in the arctic refuge without harm to nesting areas for millions of the hemisphere's waterfowl, the calving ground for a caribou herd of 120,000, and the habitat of bear, wolves and other wildlife. Conservationists say vast areas must be set aside to protect the wide-ranging wildlife.

Conservationists also point out that the state government and Alaska natives were ceded 150 million acres of federal land under previous laws. They think the resources on that land are adequate to underwrite a strong state and national economy.

"They can drill it, pave it, do anything they want to their land," says Udall, adding that another 80 million acres of federal land in the state is still left open for development under the current bill.

But many Alaskans say the locations of the protected zones — scattered from the rain forests of Southeast Alaska to the tundra of the North Slope — prevent access to some of the land supposedly available for development.

And, those Alaskans feel they are being denied the opportunity to make their own decisions and use their own land, that they're being forced to live with restrictions and laws imposed against their will by outsiders.

Robert B. Atwood, publisher of the Anchorage Times and a prime mover in the drive for statehood, said one purpose of statehood was "to control our own resources, our own land, our own destiny, like all the other states.

Contaminated Water Supply Sickens Residents Of Area

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Twenty-five National Guard trucks delivered free tanks of fresh water Saturday to isolated south-central Missouri Ozarks residents whose own supplies were contaminated by a major sewage leak that made at least 700 persons ill.

Bottled water was selling for up to $1 a gallon in much of the area.

Residents who had to use well water were warned to boil it first, but Mayor A.D. Pierce of nearby Thayer, Mo., said some of those people "are just too poor and too ignorant to know enough to boil water even if they hear the warning."

He said the people of Howell and Oregon counties just north of the Arkansas state line, are fearful and don't know where to turn.

"They don't know where all this is going to end."

Health officials said that in addition to the 700 known to have been affected, hundreds more may have come down with intestinal illnesses from drinking contaminated water but have not sought medical help. At least 10 persons were hospitalized.

The crisis was spawned when three large sinkholes developed in a West Plains sewage lagoon, allowing 25 million gallons of waste to leak into underground caverns and groundwater in southern Missouri and northern Arkansas.

Before the leak was plugged Friday, the contamination trickled south away from West Plains, following groundwater systems and a network of subterranean caverns that lead into Arkansas.

National Guardsmen from the West Plains armory were ferried by helicopter to other armories around the state, returning with 2½-ton trucks and 400-gallon water trailers for use in distributing clean, chlorinated water. The water was provided by the West Plains water system, which was not affected.

Guardsmen filled the tanks and health officials treated the water by adding a small amount of bleach as an added precaution. The Guardsmen then fanned out to tiny hamlets and rural areas.

Health officials were considering asking the federal government to declare the area a disaster. They declined to speculate on how long it would take to flush out the groundwater systems.

"We'll have a better idea in the next few days," said Jim Burris, regional director of the Missouri Division of Natural Resources. "If we get quite a bit of rain, it could be washed away before too long. If we have a long dry spell it could take quite a while."

Burris said much of the contamination will begin to surface in springs around the Arkansas line. He said health officials placed dye in the ruptured lagoon in an attempt to trace the path of the contamination.

The sickness was traced to fecal coliform, an intestinal-tract bacteria. Bacteria research teams from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta were taking samples from some of the estimated 10,000 wells in the area.

SHIP ABANDONED

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Owners of the Photinia, the British cargo ship that ran aground here during a Lake Michigan storm last weekend, decided Friday to abandon the ship, saying total repair costs estimated at $1.5 million would be too great.

Record-Breaking Floods Sweep Montana

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Record-breaking floods triggered by torrential rains swept down three rivers in southeastern Montana Saturday, driving thousands from their homes, closing roads and causing millions of dollars damage.

A storm that dumped 6 inches of rain and more than 3 feet of snow in parts of Montana and Wyoming ended late Friday, but sunshine that followed brought a new threat of snowmelting in the mountains.

The National Weather Service said a flood watch was still in effect for portions of northern Wyoming, where Gov. Ed Herschler said he would ask President Carter to declare a disaster area.

Record flooding was reported on the Bighorn, Little Bighorn and Tongue rivers, all of which flow northward out of Wyoming.

In Montana's Bighorn County, Undersheriff John Ferguson warned that "If it gets too much warmer we may be faced with that June rise" on the swollen Bighorn and Little Bighorn rivers. "We've got new snow up on the mountains right now. It's supposed to be 72 (degrees) today and 74 tomorrow and more rain on Monday. That's something to look forward to."

More than 2,000 persons were driven from their homes on the Crow Indian Resevation when the Little Bighorn overflowed at Crow Agency and Lodge Grass. The Red Cross helped set up emergency shelters at Hardin's high school gym and at other locations on or near the reservation.

"They're not able to go back in there yet. And when they do ... Well, when anything has been under a lot of water, they're going to find a lot of mud," Ferguson said.

No deaths or injuries were reported, but a search was under way for John Chatwood, whose empty pickup truck was found Friday in high water from Pryor Creek, south of Billings.

Two National Guard helicopters sent to Billings by Gov. Thomas Judge were being used Saturday in search and rescue operations.

Yellowstone County Sheriff Dean Betzer estimated damage in the Billings area in the millions of dollars. A spokesman for the sheriff's office said more than 300 homes were flooded in the county.

Several roads and highways were closed by high water, washed-out bridges or mudslides or rockslides, and officials said most were not expected to be opened for several days.

UNLIKELY PLAYMATES — The Rio Grande Zoo's only baby bear was lonesome for a playmate and soon got one — a St. Bernard named Maggie Mazoo. And the other black bears are too big and rough for it to play with. (AP Laserphoto)

Peruvian Countryside Hit By Earthquakes

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Two earthquakes shook northern and southern coastal sections of Peru Saturday, causing alarm but no major damage or injuries, authorities reported.

Among the cities rattled by the tremors were Trujillo, 375 miles north of Lima, and Arequipa, 450 miles south of the capital.

Information on the strength of the southern quake was not available as employees of the local seismological station were on strike.

Scientists at the National Geophysical Institute in Lima said the epicenter of the second quake was near Casma, an agricultural town 230 miles north of Lima.

They reported that quake registered 5.8 on the Richter scala.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. A reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, and 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a major earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

Evangelist Sets Return To Air

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Radio-television evangelist Herbert W. Armstrong, founder of the Worldwide Church of God, will return to broadcasting within one month, according to a spokesman.

Earlier this month, the 86-year-old Armstrong announced he would resume full leadership of the church and Ambassador College, which he also founded.

At the same time, his 48-year-old son, Garner Ted Armstrong, was removed from executive responsibility of both the church and the college.

But the return of the elder Armstrong to the airwaves after an absence of several years will not conflict with Garner Ted's continued broadcasting, according to Stanley Rader, a spokesman.

Twins Make Life Twice As Interesting

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The note taped to the door of the four-bedroom home read, "Please knock softly instead of using doorbell."

One of the mottos of a mother of twins is to walk and talk quietly, and no doorbells, please, during nap time.

Because for the parents of twins, almost nothing in a routine day is routine, not even doorbells — at least until the parents learn the shortcuts of raising two babies at a time.

"I used to wish someone would invent a shopping cart with two baby seats," said Sharon Hudson of 5538 W. 1st Pl., mother of 3 1/2-year-old Mark and Cindy and 7 1/2-year-old Julie.

Mrs. Hudson moved here in 1975 from Dallas, where she was a member of a Dallas-area Mothers of Twins Club. Her Lubbock pediatrician introduced her to Charlotte Doyle, also a mother of twins. The two women formed a local chapter of the club two years ago.

Members swap baby clothes and share ideas on how to handle double diapering, double feedings and sibling rivalry.

"For feedings, you put them side by side in infant seats," Mrs. Hudson explained. "Then you take one big bowl of baby food and one spoon. While one is swallowing, you can feed the other one."

She said doctors don't always approve of the method for sanitary reasons. "I used to think I'd never do it either. But if one baby gets sick, the other one will too because they are so close together."

In addition to coping with Cindy and Mark, Mrs. Hudson was concerned about her older daughter Julie who had been an only child for four years.

"Julie was used to all my attention and I was worried about what effect it would have on her," she said. "I set aside a certain time every day to be just with her. It wasn't a lot of time, but it was our time to be together to read a book or play."

"It was a habit I got used to when they were learning to walk," she said. "I didn't want them to hurt themselves. In fact, I even moved the coffee table out of the room for a while."

The first few months were the hardest, partly because Mark took only cat naps and would then awaken Cindy from her longer naps.

"My husband took his two-week vacation when they were born and after that I was on my own," she said. Her relatives live in Florida so she had no "built in babysitter" as do some families.

"I had a diaper service with the twins. That was my one luxury and I needed it," she said.

The luxury of spending time alone with her husband was something more difficult to arrange.

"Sometimes at the end of the day I just wanted to sit; I didn't feel like talking," she said.

But arranging time to be alone is important for couples, says Dr. Rolf Gordhamer, a marriage counselor and the father of twin daughters.

"When there is a new child on the scene, the child gets the attention and this is especially true with twins," he said. "A parent may forget to give the spouse the kind of attention he got before the child or children arrived." He said couples need to plan time to be alone.

"You have to schedule time to be alone — don't wait till it comes," said Gordhamer, who is director of the counseling center at Texas Tech.

Birth order may make some difference on the impact of twins on the family. One in 87 births is a twin birth.

"If twins are the very first children," Gordhamer explained, "there's the double shock of having twins and taking care of kids, period. If the twins are the last of four or five children, you're used to taking care of kids, yes, but not twins. And if your other children are older — say 15 or 16 — then they can pitch in."

Gordhamer also said, "There is a danger in calling them twins. Grandparents, relatives and neighbors lay the twin label on them. They are still two unique individuals."

The objection to the "twin" label was echoed by Tom Brown 3103 43rd St., whose wife, Cindy, is a member of the club. The couple has twin boys.

Brown has a twin brother and he vividly remembers the comment of neighbors and friends. "I always — always — disliked people calling us 'the twins' or 'Tim-Tom'. It just bothered me to no end, but it didn't bother my brother at all," Brown said.

"We will be in a store and someone will come up and say, 'Oh, you have twins' and Chad will say, 'I'm not a twin, I'm Chad Brown.'"

Chad and Chris are now 3 years old and easily identifiable to their parents. But for the first two months their parents kept a bracelet on one boy as a way to distinguish them.

Brown noticed when the boys were learning to talk, they developed a language of their own. This characteristic of some twins is called idioglossia.

"They just babbled and we couldn't understand them. But one would go into a room and get a toy and it seemed to be what the other one had asked for," he said.

Brown used to tease his wife and the other women in the club that they only joined so they could gripe together.

"But I told them we are all double blessed," he said. "I enjoyed being a twin. I didn't have just a brother, I had a best friend."

Briscoe's Influence To Remain Potent

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Dolph Briscoe may be out of Austin and out of office come January, but his stamp on state government will remain for years to come.

Through his length of service, and circumstances, Briscoe came closer than perhaps any other governor in setting up an administration where most of the top officials in the state were linked to him through legally non-binding, often informal, but important ties.

Attorney General candidate Mark White served Briscoe as secretary of state, and Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown was a gubernatorial aide before appointed to that job when John White went to Washington.

Treasurer Warren G. Harking was picked by the governor for his post, which he's now won by election.

Comptroller Bob Bullock's ties to Briscoe follow the priniciple of diplomacy that "the enemy of my enemy is my friend," with the enemy in this case being John Hill.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong had some run-ins with Briscoe over Armstrong's desire to purchase a Big Bend area ranch for the state — and Lt. Gov.

Analysis

Bill Hobby had some differences with Briscoe as well.

But neither of those had exhibited any great desire to go to the mat with Briscoe, or come out as prominent public supporters for Hill.

officials who owe, at least in part, their positions to Briscoe undoubtedly will learn to work with Hill, or Republican Bill Clements, should that latter possibility become reality.

Briscoe's main influence, however, will be through his appointments to various boards, commissions and councils — and he has made thousands of such appointments.

More significantly, he has quite a few yet to make — and there are some major ones.

Among them, and at the top of the list as far as many folds are concerned, are three University of Texas Regents.

James Bauerle, San Antonio, and Ed Clark and Allan Shivers, Austin, have terms expiring Jan. 8, 1979.

terms expiring Jan. 8, 1979.

Briscoe will have the opportunity to appoint three regents who will serve for six years — and he assured reporters at the first press conference he held following his primary loss that he'll use that opportunity.

Those appointees conceivably could be serving long enough for Briscoe to make a political come-back.

Confirmation of those appointees is required from the Senate — but it's unlikely that they would be rejected.

Such last-minute appointments have a long tradition behind them in Texas, and nationally (at least as far back as the "midnight judges" named by President John Adams in 1801 to prevent Thomas Jefferson from naming them when to took office).

Just the list of University Regents which Briscoe will have the chance to name is fairly lengthy, including Texas Eastern University (where Jeff Austin, Jr., Jacksonville; Quentin Abernathy, Gladewater; and Harold McKenzie, Tyler, are serving on already expired terms); Texas State University System (Sam Tanner, Beaumont; Philip Gary Warner, Houston, and Emil Rassman, Midland, have terms ending Jan. 10); Texas Woman's University (Jack Freeman, Forth Worth; Frank Altick, Dallas, and Mrs. Ben Carpenter, Irving, Jan. 10); and Midwestern University (Martin Frank Wood and G.P. Disosway, Dallas, and R.E. Chambers, Wichita Falls, on expired terms).

Then there are the ones which some other folks would put at the top of the list: three Texas A&M University regents (Clyde Wells, Granbury; Mrs. Wilmer Smith, Wilson, and Richard A. Goodson, Dallas, have terms expiring Jan 8).

Other appointments include two for the Water Development Board, and various others on the Coastal and Marine Council, Lower Colorado River authority, State | Highway Commission, Texas Industrial Commission and Texas Judicial Council, according to a list compiled by the Senate Subcommittee on Nominations.

Those appointments represent a goodly share of governor's power — and will be part of the legacy of Dolph Briscoe to his successor, and to the people of Texas.

Amputation Of Leg Sparks Court Tilt

ARLINGTON, Mass. (AP) — A court battle is developing over whether a 77-year-old widow must allow her right leg to be amputated, an operation doctors say is necessary to save her life.

The state Appeals Court will hold a hearing Monday on whether it should go along with a lower court decision appointing the woman's daughter as temporary guardian.

Rosaria Candura of Arlington has refused the operation at Symmes Hospital, saying she is old and has had "nothing to live for" since her husband died two years ago after 50 years of marriage.

However, earlier this week, Middlesex Probate Court Judge Lawrence T. Perera named Mrs. Candura's daughter, Grace R. Lane of Medford, as temporary guardian with authority to "consent to the performance of life-saving surgery" as soon as possible.

The judge said that Mrs. Candura has a 90 percent chance of recovering after the amputation. Without the surgery, he said, she "will experience severe pain from gangrene and ultimately death by infection."

On Friday, Mrs. Candura's lawyer, Stephen H. Katz, asked the Appeals Court to rule that there is no need for the daughter's legal involvement. He said Mrs. Candura can make her own decision and that "the law requires that her decision be respected."

Farmers Picket Party For Wright

AUSTIN (AP) — Approximately 15 central Texas farmers picketed a party Friday night that Attorney General John Hill gave for Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Several of the protestors said they had been in Washington in April when Wright, the House majority whip, called a bill the farmers supported a "charade."

Wright left the party and told the farmers President Carter had assured him he would veto the bill as inflationary, "so for the House to pass that bill would've been like writing a hot check."

"It would've been good when you wrote it," one farmer responded.

"No, because I knew the bank wouldn't honor it," relied Wright.

Some of the farmers appeared angry that Hill, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, had hosted the party for Wright. "Any friend of Jim's is no friend of the farmers," they said.

ROBINSON HONORED

NEW YORK (AP) — A bill to rename Colonial Park in honor of the late Jackie Robinson has been approved unanimously by the City Council's Parks Committee. Robinson, who broke baseball's color barrier when he joined the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962.

Model Cotton Gin Wins Prize

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It's held together with baling wire. Naturally — what else would you use to build a model cotton gin. A lot. Lots of glue and 800 hours of work by the Junior Historians of Frenship Junior High in Wolfforth.

The model of the South Plains' first cotton gin won second place in the state history fair in Austin, and now it is on display at the Texas Tech University Museum.

The tabletop reproduction is complete with suction flue and steam stacks. The stacks were made from plastic pipe covered with aluminum paint. The elastic elbow in the suction pipe really is part of a student's sock.

Seventh grade history teacher Jerry Lee organized his Junior Historians chapter last fall with the goal of uncovering as much local history as possible. They must be doing something right. Frenship was awarded the title of "Most Outstanding First Year Chapter" from among 29 such groups gathered in Austin.

"You have to point the way for the students," said Lee, "but after two or three years they learn and know where to go to find most any information. We are doing research activities I learned nothing about until college."

While studying the history of cotton production around Lubbock, the investigators happened upon a photograph of the Caprock Gin built in 1904.

"We got most of our information from the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech," said Lee. "The Plains Cotton Oil Mill also helped. All the Mahon Library had was one book on the history of Lubbock County."

The students learned the "Cap Gin," probably located somewhere in the area between Ave. A and East Loop 289, turned out 700 bales of cotton in 1905.

"Before then," said Lee, "the South Plains produced an average of five bales a year. The small amount that was raised was taken to Colorado City, 100 miles to the south, for ginning."

At a quarter-bale to an acre in those days, that means probably not much more than 20 acres planted in cotton in an area still very much devoted to ranching, according to Lee.

The Gin's location could not be pinpointed, nor could the student researchers could not determine who the pioneer ginner was. "We didn't find any record of the owner of the gin," Lee said. "It was torn down after becoming outdated in the 1920s, and we don't know what happened to the parts. Historians like to know what ultimately happened to everything."

Some of the information gaps were filled by interviewing old-timers and gin experts. One of them was Rufus Whitener. He provided the details of the Cap Gin not visable in the old photograph.

"I grew up in the ginning business," said Whitener, 42, who operates a gin parts company in Wolfforth. "I've studied them for my own enjoyment and for patent searches as well. I have a pretty good idea of what was behind the Cap Gin, even though you can't see it in the picture."

Whitener believes the gin, first powered by steam and later by gasoline engines, was abandoned about the end of World War I.

It took Lee three days to draw the plans for the model which is built on a scale of three-quarters of an inch to one foot.

"We had to make-do," said Lee, who supervised the work of the seventh and eighth graders from January to mid-April. Slices of plastic pipe with dowel rods as the hubs were used to make wheels for the yard wagons. The siding was made from a 1-by-12 cut to one-eighth-inch thicknesses.

When it came to the corrugated iron roof, the students bowed to professionals in the model-building business. The miniature roof was ordered from a Dallas company specializing in hobby materials, and it cost more than a third of the $160 price for the entire project.

The model gin is on display in the main museum building, a spokesman said, and it will eventually become part of a larger display depicting the history of ginning.

The museum already is the site of the restored Goodman Gin, a plant first built in 1875 and powered by mules. There are no regular tours of the facility, but groups may schedule special visits.

Tech's Tenure Policy Concerns Faculty, Regents

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The issue of tenure at Texas Tech University has been simmering for more than a year, and soon may be coming to a full boil.

At a recent Board of Regents meeting, three of the eight members voted against granting faculty members tenure, not because they felt the members did not deserve it, but as a protest against the tenure policy as a whole.

J. Fred Bucy of Dallas, one of the three who voted against it, said he was casting his nay vote "in principle" against a policy which he called "an anachronism."

Bucy has been openly critical of Tech's tenure policy, complaining, along with board member Don Workman, that tenure provides faculty members with lifetime employment.

"That's something unheard of in the business world," Bucy, president of Texas Instruments, pointed out.

He and other board members have urged study of the tenure policy and possible alternatives to it, going as far as to say, in one heated moment, that he would support abolishing tenure at Tech.

The tenure policy at Tech also has been a matter of concern to university administrators and faculty, and shortly after assuming office Tech president Cecil Mackey appointed a six-member tenure review committee to study the policy.

The committee, comprised of the vice president for academic affairs, the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and four faculty members, studied the school's tenure guidelines for a year, rewriting several portions for clarity and making at least two major changes.

Drafts of the revised policy were submitted last week to the Faculty Senate, the Tenure and Privilege Committee and the Academic Council, composed of all the university deans. Input from these groups will go to President Mackey, who will decide whether the policy needs further revision or should be submitted to the entire faculty for a vote of approval.

The final version of the policy will be presented to the regents — something officials don't expect until this fall, at the earliest.

Tenure originally was established among institutions of higher education to guarantee academic freedom — to protect a faculty member from being arbitrarily dismissed for expressing unpopular views or conducting controversial research.

Tenure also was established to "provide a sufficient degree of economic security to make the profession attractive to men and women of ability," according to the 1940 statement by the Association of American Colleges and the American Association of University Professors — the basis for the majority of tenure policies at the nation's universities and colleges.

Following a probationary period of up to seven years in which a faculty member proves his or her teaching and research abilities, the member is granted permanent or continuous tenure and only can be dismissed for grave breaches of conduct.

Tenure was not set up to provide lifetime employment or to shield faculty members from being fired for indifference or neglect of scholary duties, says Dr. Charles Hardwick, Tech's vice president for academic affairs.

"The concept of tenure has changed slightly from protecting academic freedom to assuring employment," Hardwick admits, but part of that is because recent court decision have guaranteed employee rights so that academic freedom doesn't seem as crucial, he adds.

He also points out that even after a faculty member is granted tenure, he or she still is reviewed annually by the department chairman and dean and can be denied merit raises and promotions for performing unsatisfactorily.

Should tenure at Texas Tech be abolished, Hardwick feels it would have "a significant impact on our ability to attract high-quality faculty to Tech."

Other faculty members had more vehement reactions to the idea.

"It would absolutely ruin Tech if they got rid of tenure. All the first-rate faculty members would leave and we'd have difficulty attracting high-quality young faculty. Tech would revert to the status of a large community college," one faculty member said.

The proposed revised tenure policy for Tech calls for two important changes. Faculty members denied tenure must be given the reasons for the denial, and the probationary period for associate and full professors would be lengthened to five and four years, respectively. Currently, the probationary period for associate professors is four years and for professors, three years.

Hardwick, who said he is highly satisfied with the revised policy, also said much of the policy's language has been clarified through the review committee's re-writing efforts.

Airport Displays Phenomenal Rate Of Growth During 1978

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Though American airports report an average 8 percent increase in their boardings, those figures pale when compared with the Lubbock International Airport's growth rate of better than 70 percent.

Figures released recently revealed that for the first four months of the year, 72 percent more passengers have climbed aboard planes leaving the local facility than for a similar period last year.

An even higher percentage — a whopping 81.4 percent — was noted during April, 1978, compared to April a year ago. Last year, 21,831 passengers took their seats on planes leaving Lubbock. Compare that with 39,608 boardings during the same month this year.

For the year, 145,393 persons have emplaned in Lubbock, a quantum leap over the 84,718 figure for a comparable period in 1977.

If the boarding rate continues apace, Lubbock International will exceed last year's total boardings of 369,323, based on figures for the first third of 1978.

Thus far, Southwest Airlines leads its three, major competitors in the air wars with 57,308 boardings through April.

The Dallas-based airline is responsible for the substantial percentage increase in all boardings since last April, because Southwest's flight service was initiated here in May, 1977.

Continental trailed Southwest in the boardings figures, with 43,460 enplanements through April, an increase of some 24.2 percent.

Braniff, which rated third according to boardings data released, ironically reported a 20 percent dip over its comparable 1977 boarding figures. Unlike its competitors, Braniff did not reduce its air fares during the period.

However, the airline has announced proposed reductions on some air fares, beginning June 1.

Texas International had 13,217 boardings through April — an increase of 24.1 percent over last year's 10,649 boardings.

For the year, Lubbock's boarding report far outdistances its neighboring cities. Locally, 145,393 pasengers have departed the city's airport, compared with 85,942 and 129,147 boardings in Amarillo and Midland-Odessa respectively.

NO-HITTERS HURLED

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A double no-hitter was pitched Friday during a high school baseball championship, but thanks to an error, one team went home the winner. Central High School's Joe Starosta got the victory over Germantown High pitcher Rick Ford on a second-inning run that gave Central the Public League Division B title, 1-0. The game was the ohly double no-hitter local officials could remember.

Airline Announces Fare Cuts

There's good news and bad news for Lubbock air travelers.

The good news is Braniff International's decision to reduce the rates nearly 50 percent on a number of flights between Lubbock and Dallas.

The bad news is Continental Airlines will end its flights to Oklahoma City on June 1.

Randall Jones, Braniff manager in Lubbock, said the airline will offer $25 "Supercoach Fares" on two morning and two evening flights each day beginning June 1.

The fares will be available on flights to Dallas at 6:55 a.m. and 9:25 p.m. and flights from Dallas at 8:20 a.m. and 10:50 p.m.

Formerly, with $48 one-way fares to Dallas, Braniff was the lone holdout at the Lubbock airport on the reduced fares.

Jones said Braniff "has always been an innovator on promotional fares" and said the new fares "correspond very well to our policy."

He noted the volume of traffic between Dallas and Lubbock is heavier than between Lubbock and any other city.

Meanwhile, Continental has determined it is no longer economically feasible for the airline to continue flights from Lubbock to Oklahoma City.

Continental regional manager Tom O'Donnell said the flights are "not even break even" and therefore the airline is "suspending service."

As a result, passengers destined for Oklahoma City will have to stop in Dallas — "the way the majority are still going," O'Donnell said.

The non-stop once-daily flight has been available to the flying public since Oct. 30, but the flight has left Lubbock only about 30 percent full most of the time.

The plane has a capacity of 130, but usually boarded only about 30 passengers.

The flight was formerly a "grasshopper" flight which stopped in Wichita Fallas and Lawton, Okla., en route to Oklahoma City and was experimentally started on a non-stop basis.

Administration Says Economy Measures Saving Expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials said Saturday that old-fashioned household accounting practices and modern computer technology are helping the government save $125 million a year.

At the heart of the newly instituted savings program is the principle that cash in government accounts is worth more than uncashed checks or money owed the government because the cash can earn interest.

The savings are being accomplished by cutting delays in cashing checks made out to the government, investing available cash in interest-bearing accounts and making sure the government's bills are paid no sooner than necessary, federal officials said.

The impact will be largely on banks and major corporations with whom the government does business, according to Wayne Granquist, associate director for management and regulatory policy at the Office of Management and Budget.

Although the administration is attempting to streamline the process by which the government collects the money owed to it, nothing is being done to the schedule by which the government pays out income tax refunds.

"We're not toying with that," said Richard Cavanaugh, director of the federal cash management program.

Slowing the pace of paying income tax refunds could save the government money, but this practice would delay taxpayers' refunds.

Instead, the government is using methods frequently subscribed to by those who manage household finances — holding back payments until they are due and transferring excess checking account funds to interest-paying savings accounts.

Through this practice, federal officials hope the interest earned will offset a fraction of the $47 billion the government is expected to pay in interest on the national debt in the next fiscal year beginning Oct. 1

The projected $125 million annual saving is tiny when compared with the $500 billion federal budget. But Granquist said it represents only a first step in an effort "to bring to the federal government some common-sense business practices."

Granquist and Cavanaugh said that over the next year approximately $75 million could be saved by earning interest on government funds that had not been kept in interest-earning accounts.

They said another $37.5 million could be saved by delaying payment on government obligations until they are due, thus earning interest on the cash.

Approximately $3.5 million can be saved through speedier handling of receipts and $1 million could be collected on interest from funds brought in by streamlined billing operations, they added.

The officials said some $8 million can be saved each year through a series of administrative changes expected to increase interest payments on government accounts, or by reducing the need for costly government borrowing.

Cavanaugh gave this example of how the new procedure works: The Internal Revenue Service is giving special treatment to its large receipts, requiring that checks of $50,000 or more be cashed the day they arrive at an IRS center.

Granquist, a banker before he joined the administration, said that by speeding up by one day the collection of $1 billion in receipts, the government can earn $167,123 in additional interest.

To accomplish this, he said, the Treasury Department is collecting large debts by electronic funds transfer, a computerized bank network that eliminates the time needed to mail, process and clear checks.

Officials also said that by cutting out at least three days of delay in cashing checks, the Treasury is able to save more than $3.5 million a year in interest.

The plan to withhold payment of government bills until they are due may be related to a study issued in February by the Government Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

The report noted that payments made earlier than necessary during the first six months of 1976 cost the federal government $118 million in interest on funds borrowed for the payments.

State School Panel Picks City Trustee

Restaurateur Jose Ramirez, a trustee of the Lubbock Independent School District, has been named to the State Commission on School Accreditation. His term will run through Dec. 31, 1979.

The appointment to the panel, which sees that Texas school systems are meeting state standards, was made by the State Board of Education this month.

Ramirez, who was elected to the Lubbock school board in 1974, will attend his first meeting of the state commission in June.

Accused Killer Recounts Feelings At Time Of Six Children's Deaths

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — With tears in his eyes, Simon Peter Nelson, accused of killing his six children, testified Saturday he envisioned the spectre of his dead father stabbing the children the night of the slayings.

The hulking, 46-year-old employment counselor said he even saw himself being stabbed by his father, who committed suicide when Nelson was a child.

The butchered bodies of the Nelson children, ages 3 to 12, were found by police in the family's blood-spattered home Jan. 7. Their heads had been crushed with a rubber mallet and their throats slashed with a Bowie knife.

Nelson, who stands 6-foot-4 and weights 275 pounds, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to six counts of first degree murder. The defense contends he was driven temporarily insane by marital problems.

The prosecution has argued he is guilty of brutal and cold-blooded murder, patterned after the book "Anatomy of a Murder," and is asking that he be put to death.

During two days of testimony, Nelson described his own unhappy childhood, his work and marital problems, and, finally, his own recollections of the night his children were methodically massacred as they slept.

He testified Friday his father beat him repeatedly for minor misbehavior. He said his father committed suicide when Nelson was a child and the suicide has deeply affected him.

Nelson had said he was driven temporarily insane the night of the slayings when his wife, Ann, 37, asked him for a divorce. He said he attempted suicide, then went berserk and saw the image of his deceased father "running around the house, killing the children."

After the slayings, Nelson said he drove to Milwaukee to tell his wife, believing it was his father who killed the children.

Nelson said he "felt sick" when he arrived at his wife's Milwaukee hotel room and said he saw his father beating her. He said he then asked her to call a priest for her and another for himself. That testimony confirmed earlier testimony by his wife.

Nelson said when he was arrested later by Milwaukee police, he still felt his father committed the slayings and beat up his wife in the hotel room.

The burly defendant Friday described himself to jurors in a choked voice as a "a fat slob" and an "oddball" and said he suspected his wife was having an affair.

He said he constantly failed at jobs and marriage.

Prosecutor Dan Doyle, in cross examination of Nelson, carried what he said was Nelson's paperback copy of "Anatomy of a Murder," and claimed Nelson had been reading it several weeks before the murders. Doyle read aloud a passage from the book that described a murder trial in which the fictional defendant claimed he was temporarily insane.

"In other words," Doyle told Nelson, "you already figured out your defense from this book a few weeks before killing the children."

Station To Design Sun Beam

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Radio station WDCL says it want to be the first radio station in the world to have a transmitter operated solely on solar power.

The station and Solar Systems Division have applied for a federal grant to develop a solar-powered radio transmitter.

Ross Charles, vice president of WDCL, said the two firms filed a grant application Friday afternoon in San Antonio, Texas, with the U.S. Department of Energy's Division of Solar Technology.

"We have asked for a grant of $163,657 to design a system for a 30-kilowatt solar photo voltaic flat panel power system," Charles said. "The transmitter would be used by WDCL and could make it the first radio station in the world to transmit entirely by solar energy."

Phase I for system design would be followed by Phase II for site modification, installation and checking.

Charles expects a decision on the grant by September. If it is approved, WDCL could start using the system within 12 months, he said.

Phase III of the project would be tests for the government to determine the practicality and reliability of the system.

"The plant we are thinking about would furnish the equipvalent power needed for 20 homes," Charles said. "Solar energy would be produced and stored in batteries. We would use it as needed and probably could stay on the air for 48 or more hours with our reserve.

"The system would also enable us to remain on the air through almost any kind of disaster."

SMILE — William "Digger" Young tries to get Lori Eyster, 3, of Pittsburgh to smile by putting make-up on the tip of her nose. When he isn't trying to make little children laugh, Digger is usually burying people. He is the coroner in Butler County, Pa. (AP Laserphoto)

Clown Brings Laughter After Hard Day As Funeral Director

By JULES LOH

BUTLER, Pa. (AP) — Digger Young, the undertaker, loves nothing more than making people laugh.

After a hard day at the graveyard, or at the Butler County Coroner's office, he will go home, take off his black suit and black tie, put on his clown costume and head for a hospital.

"There aren't many children's wards or nursing homes in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia that I've missed," he said. "I get about 20 requests a month and it's hard to fit them all in."

Digger has this routine, you see.

He puts on a silly wig and gets on roller skates and his baggy clown pants fall down and in pulling them up he teeters and scrambles and almost falls again and again but never does and if you can watch him without laughing you are a candidate for Digger's back room.

"I realize that some find it incongruous for a funeral director to be a clown, but I never think of it," Digger said. "Some of my colleagues regard it as undignified. I don't."

Digger is a third-generation undertaker. He doesn't mind being called Digger, either, although his father, who named him William F. Young Jr., objected to the nickname strenuously.

"It's inevitable. Some people are going to get a chuckle out of calling an undertaker 'Digger.' They're going to do it anyhow, so why not relax about it? The world needs more chuckles.

"I've been in business with my name on the door for more than 20 years, I've been coroner since 1970, yet I doubt if many people in town know my name. To them, I'm Digger. It's okay by me."

William F. Young Jr. did not aspire to be an undertaker even though he was raised from boyhood in the rooms over the funeral parlor his grandfather established in 1896 in nearby West Sunbury. He and his wife and three children still live there.

What Digger aspired to be was a professional baseball player, and came within a spring tryout with the Yankees of making it. He didn't, though, and decided, all right, he would go to undertaker's school. A family tradition endured.

Meanwhile, just for the fun of it, Digger had taken up roller skating and became accomplished at it, doing tricks, clowning around.

"A friend of mine, a judge here in town who was a Shriner, asked if I would consider being a clown in a Shrine parade. I decided to give it a try.

UNDERTAKER CLOWN — This map locates Butler, Pa., where Digger Young, an undertaker and part time clown lives. (AP Laserphoto)

"My grandmother made me a clown costume and from that moment I was hooked.

"I have about 10 costumes now. I try to find the brightest, gaudiest material I can find. Whenever I see some I like, I buy it. I clown every chance I get, and, no, I never charge a dime.

"I love to clown at parades, at conventions, anywhere. When I go to children's hospitals they love me as a clown. At nursing homes, they love me as a visitor. They don't have many visitors.

"Something else about clowning might surprise you.

"Put on a clown costume and you're immediately accepted. That's important. Today everybody seems suspicious of everybody else and we've accepted that aloofness, that distance, even if there is no basis for it.

"Did you ever see a child you just wanted to walk up to and hug? You wouldn't dare. It might terrify him.

"Put on a clown costume and it's okay. The child will love you. Put on a clown costume and walk into a crowded room. You will be accepted without question. You will even be appreciated."

World Leaders Gathering For U.N. Session Devoted To Disarmament

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Newman will be there. So will Prime Minister James Callaghan of Great Britain, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany.

They'll all be at the United Nations Special Session on Disarmament beginning Tuesday in New York.

But the leaders of the two countries that together control most of the world's weapons, the United States and the Soviet Union, will not be there.

President Carter is sending Vice President Walter F. Mondale to deliver the major American address of the session and actor Newman to lend a little glamor to the American delegation. Leonid Brezhnev is sending Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The two superpowers have their own, private disarmament negotiations going. But for most of the rest of the world, the Special Session on Disarmament, or SSOD, is the only forum they have to talk about their own ideas.

And talk they will, for several weeks. Then, the nearly 150 nations involved will try to draft a final document outlining positions and suggestions for future disarmament conferences. Nothing will be binding.

"As much as it is a diplomatic event, this will be a media event, designed to draw the attention of the world to the problems of disarmament," said Ambassador Lawrence D. Weiler, the special coordinator for the U.S. delegation.

American officials do not think any useful negotiations on disarmament can take place with 150 nations participating. Any substantial progress, they feel, will come in the bilateral talks with the Soviets or in smaller multilateral arenas like the 18-nation Geneva conference.

They have limited goals for this session. They would like to convince the assembled nations that Carter's policies aimed at preventing the spread of nuclear weapons are in the best interests of the non-nuclear countries, even when those policies hamper the quest for nuclear electrical power.

They also would like to discuss ways in which the nations that beg or buy weapons from the superpowers can help in an effort to cut back on the multibillion-dollar worldwide conventional arms trade.

Beyond the positive American goals, there are many ideas the United States would like to combat, starting with the expected Soviet call for a worldwide ban on neutron weapons, which the United States has and the Soviet Union does not.

In addition, the Third World nations are expected to press for ideas like a commitment that money diverted from weapons production will be spent automatically on Third World development. The United States opposes that concept.

Other ideas that will be raised include a French proposal for a "tax" on "overarmed" nations and various proposals to immediately cease all research and development on new weapons.

State Department officials say they hope those issues can be disposed of without a vote. "The one thing we'd like to avoid is a long series of votes in which we say 'no' and the rest of the world says 'yes,'" one official said.

Phone System Bids Accepted

TULIA (Special) — The Tulia school board has authorized the administration to accept bids for the purchase and installation of a telephone system in the school buildings. Bids will be taken at the next regular meeting.

Trustees accepted the resignation of Earl Cox and Mrs. Lee Stribling, both high school teachers, and elementary teachers Catherine Miller and Carolyn Davenport.

Employed were Rachel Painter and Jeanne Todd as elementary teachers.

The board approved the contract for the media service and data processing with the Educational Service Center, Region XVI in Amarillo and approved the commodity agreement, appointing Howard Pollard, school superintendent, as authorized representative to secure commodities from the Department of Public Welfare.

Also approved was a proposal to hire Adrian Photo Service of Borger to take pictures for the school next year.

Introducing
GOLDEN ERA
by Thomasville

At the turn of the century, American furniture designs exhibited a special ambience of livability and charm. The ideal of comfort and tranquility was seen in the late Victorian, even Edwardian designs. These designs illustrate the perfect blend of sophistication and cultural history that brings the warmth and beauty of nostalgic furnishings into the mainstream of today's eclectic room settings. Mirror accents on these pieces are etched for authenticity. Several cast aluminum pieces are finished in a matt black tone to achieve the look of wrought iron so popular for ornate fences and balcony trimwork in earlier times. For this Golden Era collection, Thomasville chose rustic pecan veneers and oak solids. The mellow fruitwood finish is distressed to provide the look of prized antiques. Hardware includes a white knob with brass finished backplates, a period brass bail design and finger-grip pull. Here are exciting designs of yesterday, yet beautifully stated for today's life styles.

City Woman Reports Assault, Rape To Police

A 23-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was raped early Saturday morning while she and a companion were on their way to a club on the Idalou Road.

The woman said she and a man had been driving around the city most of the evening when he stopped the car and started beating her. She told police the man ripped off her clothes and raped her before she was able to escape from the vehicle and run to her sister-in-law's home for help.

Lubbock police have the name of a suspect.

Maria E. Beard of 2904 Duke St. was treated for a possible broken wrist at Health Sciences Center Hospital early Saturday morning after a Mexican-American man reportedly assaulted her.

She told police she and a friend were talking in the parking lot of a club in the 2400-block of Cornell Street when the man approached them, cursed her and threw her to the ground.

Someone broke into the garage of David A. Vones' 5427 Ave. B home and took about $1,000 worth of tools.

Burglars also hit an appliance business in the 2100-block of Ave. Q. Store owner Charles Evans of 3512 66th Drive told police after the burglars broke out one of the building doors, causing $200 of damage, they took three portable televisions, valued at $950.

Easy to lift household items also were taken from two Lubbock residences.

Charles R. Slaton of 1801 15th St. told police burglars took a television and a Home Box Office unit from his home. He set his loss at $400.

Dennis Neal Barnes of 2309 34th St., No. 3, reported missing from his home four stereo speakers with a combined value of $300.

While Ova McClarney was working in the backyard of her 2218 10th St. home, someone entered the residence through the open front door and took about $100 in goods, including a radio, two purses and $15 in cash.

Burglars cut the lock of the trailer parked in front of Pete S. Mojica's 705 31st St. home and took about $2,800 in band equipment from the trailer.

Someone apparently drove a large vehicle into the nine-foot-high posts holding up the sign in front of a restaurant in the 2400-block of Broadway and then carried the fallen sign into the alley behind the business.

Stephen Chu of 2303 10th St., No. 20, manager of the restaurant, told police it would cost about $100 to replace the sign.

Miscreants caused about $200 worth of damage to Paul Higley's car that was parked in front of his 6113 Sherman St. home when they broke out the vehicle's front windshield.

Abbass Azima of 5801 22nd St., No. 37, told officers it would cost about $400 to repair the damage to another apartment in the complex that he manages. He discovered the damage on a routine maintenance check of the apartment.

Search Continues For Missing Man

A-J Correspondent

GUTHRIE (Special) — Deputies from Cottle and King counties, Department of Public Safety troopers and volunteers from around the area are continuing their search for A.B. "Henry" Northcutt today.

Northcutt, 68, of the Finney community, was last seen May 14 when he visited a neighbor, Elmo Adams. Adams said Northcutt told him he was on his way to pick up a case of beer.

About 40 men on horseback combed the 6666 Ranch area Saturday. Friday, pilot Tuck Blankenship, who was conducting an air search, spotted Northcutt's pickup truck in southern King County near the Stonewall County line.

Authorities believe that after the truck became stuck in the ditch in which it was found, Northcutt left on foot.

UT Commencement Exercises Held

AUSTIN (AP) — Chancellor Paul Murrill of Louisiana State University told University of Texas graduates Saturday night that money spent on higher education "are some of the best and smartest dollars we spend."

"There is within this country broad evidence that higher education has slipped as a national priority, and you can and should provide the grass-roots support for our nation's higher educational system," Murrill told UT's 95th commencement.

He advised the graduates to support the university and criticize and challenge it, when necessary, "but do not badger or bedevil this institution to make up for any of your own real or fancied personal inadequacies."

Speaking for the 1978 graduating class of the College of Humanities, A-student Robert McGlasson of Houston, said:

"Today we step, with degree in hand, into a society in which happiness is defined as the best, cheapest and lengthiest escape from the very problems that threaten that society. That the world has its better side is no consolation to those who suffer."

News Briefs

John Delfino Garcia II, 20, of 5206 7th St. was in serious condition at Methodist Hospital Saturday from injuries he suffered in a two-car accident in the 2200-block of Slide Road. After the collision with a car driven by Monte Clay Rose of 3102 4th St., No. 144, Garcia's car veered off the road and slammed into a light pole. The "jaws" unit of the Lubbock Fire Department was sent to the scene to help exticate Garcia from the vehicle. Rose and a passenger in his vehicle, Melinda Johnson of 4301 16th St., No. 3, were uninjured.

Alice Denise Harrison, 9, of 2807 Weber Drive, remained in serious condition Saturday in Methodist Hospital following a car-pedestrian mishap in the 2800-block of Quirt Avenue at 10:22 p.m. Wednesday.

Electrical Shock Kills Slaton Youth

SLATON (Special) — Thirteen-year-old Jerry Don Rodgers of Slaton was dead about 7:30 p.m. Friday on arrival at Mercy Hospital here, the victim of an electrical shock.

Reports indicate the youth was working on an electrical hookup at his home when the system apparently short circuited.

Services for the Slaton native are set for 10 a.m. Monday at Westview Baptist Church here with the Rev. Jim Wilkerson officiating.

Burial will be in Englund's Cemetery under direction of Englund's Funeral Service.

Rodgers was a student in the Slaton school system.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Rodgers of Slaton; three brothers, Henry, James and Max, all of the home; two sisters, Ruby and Anna, both of the home; and his great-grandfather, Sam Lowe of Slaton.

Airline Seeking Denver Routing

Continental Airlines Regional Director Tom O'Donnell said Saturday that Continental has requested consideration of an Austin-Lubbock-Denver flight or a San Antonio-Lubbock-Denver flight before the Civil Aeronautics Board in connection with a case currently pending before the Board in which another airline has requested a direct San Antonio-Denver flight.

O'Donnell said a decision on the request is not expected within the next six months. He said that if Continental's request was approved, the new flight or flights would be ooperational with the airlines' next schedule change.

Braniff currently holds Austin-to-Lubbock authority and is not using it, according to O'Donnell, and, hence, when an airline requested the San Antonio-Denver direct flight before the CAB, Continental, which must now stop and change plans at Midland en route between Austin and Lubbock, requested consideration be given Continental for the two new routes including Lubbock.

Students Construct Floating Laboratory

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Sea urchins, grass flats and water quality were only part of Sarasota High School's marine biology program. Students also learned carpentry, welding, wiring, drafting — even patience — while building their own floating laboratory.

The 41-foot Coast Guard-approved research boat called Carefree Learner was built without a cent of school funds by 80 pupils who spent a total of 1,800 hours after school over a four-month period. When they graduate, they'll leave it as a legacy to their school.

"You can do a lot in a classroom to bring marine biology to the students," said teacher Mike Stuart, who dreamed up the boat-building idea. "But that's not what it is. It's those squiggly little things that are out in the bay ... It's having a kid hold a sea urchin. That's worth 10 times the book work. It's having them out in the mangroves and muck and water. They don't have to like it. But they won't forget it."

Principal Wilmer Banks said, "It was a tremendous experience for the kids involved in construction, and it's an invaluable classroom resource."

Powered by an 85-horsepower motor, the red, white and blue barge-like vessel launched in March carries up to 32 pupils at a time to monitoring and dredging stations scattered across 10 miles of Sarasota Bay off this Gulf Coast city.

They trawl submerged plant communities to identify flora and fauna and measure pollution from sewage contamination and urban runoff. They drop probes to monitor the levels of such things as oxygen, ammonia and nitrates, then chart their findings for use as comparative indicators of water quality. Eventually, the data will be fed into a computer in Tallahassee for use in water quality control.

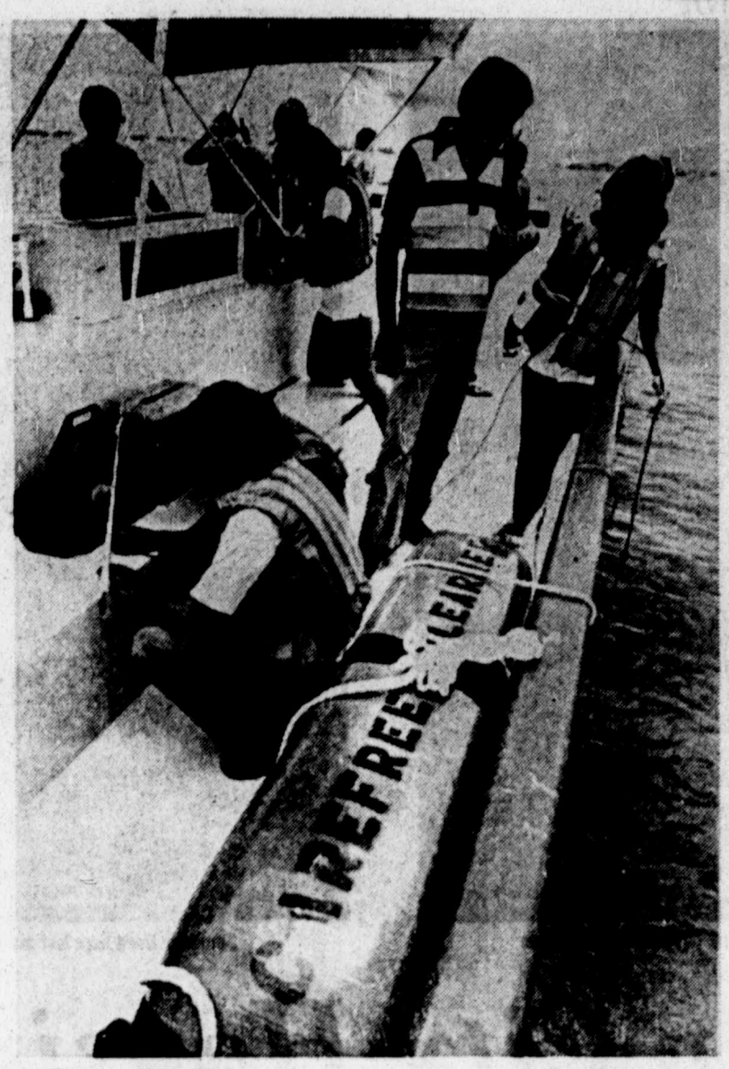
Stuart, 36, who said an equivalent factory-made boat would have cost nearly $60,000, spent four years rallying community support for the project. He raised $19,000, rented a utility building for 25 cents a month to house the vessel during construction, procured materials at cost through a friend's boat-building firm, updated the design as new techniques were learned, secured the wiring and instrumentation at no cost and rode herd on the young helpers.

"It never occurred to me that it wouldn't be done, knowing the enthusiasm and backing of Mike Stuart," said Principal Banks. "The community dished out the money. They voted with their dollars."

Right now, the boat takes a total of 300 kids on almost daily 50 minute-field excursions and 50 advance students for longer trips. Next year, Stuart plans to add evening adult education classes and include youngsters from lower grades on field expeditions.

Trey Desenberg, a senior who plans to study marine biology in college, spent more than 350 hours sanding, framing, fiberglassing and pounding nails. And he helped canvass the community for support.

"I wanted to be able to look back on my senior year and be able to feel I did something meaningful — in some way I helped others. It was hard work, long hours and there were times I really wanted to quit. But I was committed. It was very important."



CHECKING THE OXYGEN — Sarasota, Florida high school student Theresa McCormick, 17, lowers a probe to check the oxygen content of Sarasota Bay waters. With her is marine biology teacher Mike Stuart. The probe connects to the meter on the left. The readings are being translated by students Scott Eavis and Rico Boevas. The students built the boat and use it as a floating classroom. U.S., Chinese Officials Start Talks In Peking

TOKYO (AP) — President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, went directly into talks with China's foreign minister Saturday shortly after arriving in Peking, the Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

The dispatch received here gave no details of the discussions between Foreign Minister Huang Hua and Brzezinski, who was opening three days of talks with Chinese leaders expected to focus on the future establishment of normal relations with Peking.

The U.S. envoy, who was not accompanied by American reporters, also was expected to bring up the issues of China's relationship with the Soviets in Asia and of the divided Korean peninsula.

Before flying to China, Brzezinski made an overnight stop in Tokyo, where he conferred with U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield, the former Senate majority leader.

After the China visit, Brzezinski is scheduled to make brief stops in Tokyo and Seoul, South Korea, before returning to Washington.

At a banquet given Friday for a reunion of U.S. Army observers who were sent to China in the 1940s, Marshal Yeh Chien-ying, second only to Chairman Hua Kuo-feng in the Chinese hierarchy, said, "The Chinese and American peoples are friendly to each other."

"It requires great exertion and time to realize the normalization of relations between China and the United States. We must make common efforts to promote an early realization of normalization," Yeh said.

Brzezinski's trip follows a recent swing through Southeast Asia by Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Both trips were seen as an indication that the Carter administration has decided to place more emphasis on Asia and the Pacific, in light of comments from some Asian leaders that the United States was neglecting their part of the world.

Crackdown On City Housing Mapped

codes in such areas as heating, ventilation, weather-proofing, plumbing and electrical wiring.

If it does not, the zoning administrator could set up an escrow account into which the tenant would pay his monthly rent. The administrator then would authorize payments from the escrow account for repair work to bring the structure up to code standards.

Money remaining in the account after repairs are completed would be given to the landlord.

Mrs. Jordan said she wants several changes in the staff draft, such as provision for the organization of an impartial board to arbitrate the landlord/tenant problems.

But she agrees with zoning administrator Jerrel Northcutt and Texas Tech law school professor Frank Skillern that the Supreme Court's decision clears the way for an effective city ordinance.

"It would support the ordinance," she said. Northcutt seconded that opinion.

"I see some need for it. There's still plenty of residences in the city that are below the code," Northcutt said.

"For the price of rent people are paying, I feel they should at least meet the minimum code," he continued. "There are not many slumlords here, but still some will try to take advantage of poor people."

Skillern, who teaches property law classes and who worked with Mrs. Jordan last year on the innovative ordinance idea, voices even stronger sentiments about it and about the city's leadership in light of the court's decision.

Other problems related to alleged breaches of the implied warranty of habitability — such as damages, solutions and criteria — will arise from the court's decision, Skillern predicted.

The proposed ordinance would benefit citizens in two ways, he said, explaining:

"As a practical matter, code enforcement and fines are not effective on substandard housing. And Lubbock is no different. The idea is not having people bring suit, but the hope is the landlord will make the necessary repairs, thereby improving the housing stock."

Skillern added, however, that the court's decision does not place a legal burden on the city to implement programs backing up the habitability warrant.

He suggested several approaches the city could take in an ordinance: escrow rent plans, repair-and-deduct programs or impartial arbitration panels separate from the city staff to handle disputes between landlords and tenants.

Skillern warned the city against being sidetracked by "red herrings" landlords may throw out. A typical "landlord ploy" is for property owners to say the "cost to the consumer will go up dramatically" if repairs are demanded.

"That's a kind of scare tactic to get the public against" a reform proposal, he said. And in this case, it probably would be unfounded, he added, explaining the city could follow other municipalities' leads by including in its code a provision against retaliatory eviction or rent increases.

If landlords refuse to bring their buildings up to standards, Skillern conceded, "You may lose units" off the housing market.

"But you'll probably lose them anyway" to deterioration, he added.

Ironically, the executive director of the Lubbock Apartment Association cited what Skillern called the "ploy" as a real concern of the state apartment association.

Larry Morgan, who said he does not believe any of the association's members fall in the category of slumlords, added:

"The state association has said it feels the end impact (of the court decision) will mean some owners probably will raise rents to make improvements on units."

That, Morgan said, could mean a loss of available low-income housing.

Tenants who want their substandard dwellings upgraded and who take their fight to court could price themselves out of the market, he said.

"What's the lesser of two evils?" Morgan asked, referring to substandard housing or no housing at all.

Although Morgan said he has not studied the city's proposed ordinance, he added he "personally would like to see" habitability controls initiated on the state level. However, he said, if a local ordinance is adopted, the apartment owners association probably would support it and work to ensure its workability.

If an ordinance is passed by the city council, it will mean a new phase in zoning code enforcement — and that will be expensive, a city official says.

Zoning Administrator Northcutt explained that economics — in the form of no funds — now prevents his department from enforcing the minimum housing code standards on occupied dwellings.

Northcutt explained the city government has "no good repair program" for substandard housing because it has no funds to finance one.

"So our only control is to keep them (substandard dwellings) from being occupied," he said, adding that enforcement of renter-occupied units would mean relocation costs, too.

The city council last year authorized two additional inspectors and an attorney to work solely with enforcement of the then-pending ordinance for renter-occupied controls.

The inspectors are on the job, but an attorney has not been hired, Northcutt said. "And without legal help, I don't feel I can effectively enforce it (the ordinance)," he added.

The landmark case that is the turning point in how the law perceives tenant-landlord relationship and that may lead to a new ordinance here arose when a Dallas disabled veteran living with his wife and six children in a $110-a-month apartment sued his landlord.

He claimed he should not have to pay rent for the apartment, which City of Dallas inspectors testified was substandard.

A district and appellate court upheld the landlord's contention that he is not bound to guarantee the habitability of a rental unit.

The appellate court cited Supreme Court decisions to that effect, but the high court reversed its earlier decision, saying that today's tenant is "more concerned with habitability than the possibility of the landlord's interference with his possession.

"The present day dweller, in seeking the combination of living space, suitable facilities and tenant services, has changed the basic function of the lease," the opinion said.

And, the justices added, "It is appropriate that the landlord who will retain ownership of the premises and permanent improvement should bear the cost of repairs to make the premises safe and suitable for human habitation."

Landlords might be warned by the plaintiff's action in the Dallas case: he is seeking $25,000 from his landlord.

Criminals To Pay Price, Montford Vows

pattern of crime, and if they are in trouble again we'll go for denial of bail.

Denial of bail to keep repeat and multiple offenders off the streets is one point Montford said he'll adhere to. In the Griffin administration, the statue authorizing bail denial was used once.

"We're not having a blacklist, because if these people do fine they won't be back before us. But particularly in violent crimes, child abuse cases, robbery, burglary and even theft, you'll see a significant increase in the use of the multiple offender statute."

"Our concentration will be more on violent people, people who've developed the most violent tendencies, the greatest threat to the people of Lubbock County," he said, adding also that those persons will be the target of increased use of the state's habitual offender laws.

That statute automatically raises minimum punishments for persons with prior convictions.

At the trial stage, Montford says, his approach will be to seek "significantly more meaningful punishment to fit the crime," particularly in the case of aggravated robberies.

That crime, besides costing citizens thousands of dollars, has already left three county residents dead this year.

His trial staff will be "ethical, but aggressive and qualified with experience." Above all, he says, they will be trial lawyers.

Administrative duties will be taken over by an office administrator if funding is approved, and even then staff assistants will have to undergo a police orientation training program to make the attorneys "mindful of what the officer does and goes through day by day."

Montford said misdemeanor and juvenile cases would be given more attention also because, "If you convince someone they can get away with a misdemeanor, it's hard to convince them they can't get away with a felony."

Stiffer sentences and more stringent probation policies would be sought for persons involved in misdemeanor crimes, and Montford said the job of handling juvenile cases won't be assigned to "the low man on staff... like punishment. We've got to start working with them at that age to convince them that they can't get away with it when they're older."

Montford said filing bad check cases will be centralized in one office, and that justice of the peace courts will be used more often in attempts to free state courts for more serious cases.

By September or October, he said, plans call for a seminar with Lubbock business for Montford and his staff to present more moden techniques in handling checks to cut down on that problem.

Then, when serious bad check cases come up, he said attorneys would ask for "punishment to fit the crime... to where they know that's a serious matter."

Montford, declining to discuss the county's autopsy situation on the record, said he was "optimistic that with a little statesmanship we can get something done," possibly before January.

Local officials have been able to get autopsies only on a sporadic basis for more than a year, and even then some autopsies have been only for the retrieval of bullets and not performed by pathologists.

Montford also promised establishment of a program where police and sheriff's deputies would have an attorney to consult any time of day on major cases.

He said a staff assistant would be placed on call to be advised of any major crime in case the officers "feel like they need assistance." Assistants would also be available if officers felt the need for an attorney's presence in executing major search warrants or just assisting with investigations.

He also said conferences with police would be provided to keep officers informed of any changes in laws affecting police procedure.

To also lighten the police burden and to give the district attorney's office more investigative assistance, Montford said he would ask for the creation of two more investigator posts in the office, providing one for each of Lubbock's five state courts.

With that number, Montford said, investigators could follow up on cases requiring additional investigation without having to refer them back to the law enforcement agency. It would also give the office more posibilities for independent investigations, he said.

Area's Crime Rate 'Intolerable,' All Agree

Exactly whose fault that problem is, however, isn't as unanimously agreed upon.

Crooks in Lubbock, according to a police department report on crime in 1977 released this week, stand better than one chance in four of getting away with those crimes without ever being caught.

In one year, according to the report, murder rates rose 43.4 percent. Rape cases were up 39.2 percent, and reports of unnatural death were up almost 50 percent.

Less than half of the 282 robberies reported last year were cleared. There were two unsolved murders. Less than 22 percent of the city's thefts were solved, and four of every five burglaries were still listed as uncleared at the end of 1977.

So far this year, county authorities have three unsolved capital murders in only five months.

"Intolerable" may hardly be the right word.

"I can't blame people for being tired of crime," says Lubbock County Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard.

"I'm not going to say we're doing an excellent job at keeping it down, but we're doing above the national average, whether that's good or bad," he said.

But, Blanchard still admits openly that in Lubbock County you can commit burglary or robbery and not get caught at least 75 percent of the time.

On murder, he said, there's a 25 percent chance you will never get caught, and the odds go up if the crime is committed at night and away from communities.

"The only way I'd say we could improve would be to put more men on the street, and that's going to cost the taxpayers more money," Blanchard says.

The problem, as he sees it, is a lack of personnel to investigate crimes — despite the fact that there is no program in the City of Lubbock or Lubbock County with an emphasis on keeping crimes from occurring in the first place.

Police Chief J.T. Alley says the department's budget for the coming year will have provisions for funding a crime prevention unit, but that those funds have never been approved before.

Alley also admits it "seems like all we've got time to do is answer calls." After that, cases are assigned to a limited number of detectives for further follow-up.

At the sheriff's department, there are only four investigators for all crime investigations in Lubbock County. At night, seven days a week, there are only seven deputies available across the entire county, and some of those are confined to jail duty or to serving warrants.

Alley and Blanchard cite personnel problems and the lack of higher bonds and higher sentences as their reasons why crimes are so common in Lubbock County.

Others in law enforcement say the police department and the sheriff's department may be at least part of the reason why crime is so bad.

During their campaigns, Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin and his elected successor John T. Montford both pointed out a lack of training and expertise in local law enforcement.

Griffin cited the 1975 slaying of Warren and Odessa McKay as an example. There, sheriff's deputies originally said there were tire tracks outside the crime scene. Those tracks were not properly safeguarded, however, and were gone when officers returned the next morning, according to Griffin.

Lubbock police have been stumped more than once by the refusal of their prime suspect to take a polygraph examination, something they claim is essential to a trial case even though courts have held that results of those tests cannot be entered into evidence.

Alley's city officers entered Toni Dianne Kumpf's apartment the night the young coed was kidnapped in 1977 and, even though they were told she did not smoke, removed with their bare hands a package of cigarettes lying on her bed, witnesses said.

During investigation of one of the city's most heinous crimes — the murder of Debra Sue Williamson — officers reportedly walked through pools of blood.

Fingerprinting as an investigative tool is often done only in situations where prints obviously will be found.

"When cops don't know what they're doing, how do you expect them to be able to solve a crime," one local official, who asked not to be identified because he frequently works with police, said. "If they botch an investigation, of course there is no way to backtrack it and clear up their mistake. It's a case of who pulls the most blunders, the crook or the cop half the time."

Blanchard and Alley both claim their departments are doing the best possible with what they have to work with, and both put part of the blame on Lubbock County residents.

"The people are going to have to help themselves. When you put a $3 lock on your door, you're going to get broken into. That's all there is to it," Alley said.

He, however, denies Lubbock voters were "doing something about it" in ousting Griffin by an overwhelmingly margin.

"That was not a slap at us, no," Alley said. "I don't feel like that was a comment on law enforcement in Lubbock, be it the sheriff's office or the FBI or us, no."

Blanchard says the same thing.

If the vote that ousted Griffin was not a vote against crime, Blanchard and Alley say, they would have been elected if it had been their name on the ballot instead of Griffin.

Come 1980, Blanchard told The Avalanche-Journal, it will be his name — "If things keep going like they are, I'm planning on still being here" — and Alley says rumors he will retire within the next two years are totally unfounded.

The criminal district attorney's office may change hands, but both men say law enforcement in Lubbock will keep on just about as it always has.

Economy Receiving Brake Application

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and the Federal Reserve Board clearly have begun to apply the brakes to the nation's economy, despite the administration's promise to reduce unemployment, recent government actions show.

There hasn't been a public outcry, in part because of substantial gains already made in reducing unemployment. Also, Republicans and Democrats are agreeing that inflation is the chief threat to the economy.

However, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board aren't trying to slow the economy very much — just enough to keep inflation from getting more out of hand than it already has.

Fear of inflation is behind the recent increase in interest rates and the administration's expressed determination to slow government spending.

The recovery from the 1974-1975 recession is entering its fourth year, making it one of the most sustained periods of economic growth in recent history.

Usually, periods of recovery end when an overheated economy begins to increase the rate of inflation to the point where the government has to slow things down, and then a recession follows.

There seems to be almost universal agreement that this time around a recession can be avoided, at least for the next year, if inflation can be controlled.

It's a big "if," but Carter and G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, are gambling that it can be done if the economy isn't pushed too far, too fast.

"We're in a zone now where we have to move more cautiously and where growth cannot be as fast as in the past," Lyle E. Gramley, a member of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said in an interview.

As a consequence, the administration has scaled back its projection for economic growth this year to between 4 percent and 4.5 percent, from the 5 percent growth in 1977.

"That kind of growth would not be appropriate this year," Gramley said.

The administration earlier had projected growth of 5 percent for 1978. But some key administration economists say even 4 percent may be too high a target, and that actual growth will be less than that.

Miller got the ball rolling toward slower growth last month by persuading the Federal Reserve Board that it should increase interest rates to slow inflation.

Both short-and long-term rates, ranging from interest on short-term interbank loans to long-term rates for home mortgages, have increased. The board influences interest rates through its control over the supply of money to financial lending institutions.

An increase in interest rates serves to restrain inflation because it leads to higher borrowing costs for both business and consumers, with the result that they buy less, taking pressure off prices.

But it also slows the economy in the process, and can be particularly damaging to the housing industry.

After considerable debate within the administration, Carter joined the Federal Reserve Board in the slower-growth approach by deciding to trim his proposed tax cut from $24 billion a year to $19.4 billion, and to delay it from Oct. 1, 1978, to Jan. 1, 1979.

By itself, this maneuver won't slow the economy. But it will reduce the shot-in-the-arm that the tax cut is to give the economy when it takes effect. And, importantly for some, it will reduce the budget deficit in fiscal 1979 to $53 billion or below, down from the $59.6 billion estimated earlier.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said in an interview last week that it is an indication of the seriousness with which the inflation problem is regarded that liberals in Congress oppose larger tax cuts, when the reverse might be expected in an election year.

There is a risk involved in applying the brakes to the economy at this point, however lightly, if unemployment should increase again.

Area University Names Two Deans

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Dr. Everett Frost and Dr. William Thomas have been named as deans of the Eastern New Mexico University's Academic Affairs and Graduate Studies in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, beginning July 1.

Dr. Frost will serve as dean of Academic Affairs and Graduate Studies, while Dr. Thomas will serve as dean of College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Frost, an associate professor in anthropology, has been assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences since 1976.

Thomas has been interim dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Scie sces during the 1977-1978 and has been a member of the ENMU faculty since 1959.

European Toll In Zaire Mounts; Kolwezi Taken

EN ROUTE TO VENUS — The first of two space probes to Venus lifts off from Cape Canaveral early Saturday. The probe, known as Pioneer Venus I, will be followed by another about Aug. 7. (AP Laserphoto)

Satellite Blasts Off For Venus Orbiting

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Pioneer Venus 1 blasted off flawlessly and hurtled through space Saturday on a 400-million-mile journey that will put the satellite into orbit around Venus Dec. 4.

The 131-foot-tall and 10-foot-wide orbiter took off only .73 of a second past the scheduled liftoff time of 9:13 a.m.

"I don't remember one with less problems," Dr. George Page, director of expendable vehicles, said of the countdown which began at midnight. "Our biggest problem was keeping people awake at that ungodly hour."

Atmospheric Data

The $250 million Pioneer Venus project is aimed at providing scientists with information about Venus unavailable from telescopes and three previous U.S. explorations. Never before has a spacecraft circled a planet solely to gather atmospheric data.

The only hitch in pre-flight plans was a spider web which clogged a tiny jet of the Atlas Centaur rocket which launched the Pioneer Venus 1, then dropped off into the Atlantic.

"We roasted and consumed him on the spot," joked John Gossett, Centaur operations manager.

A warning had been issued for thunderstorms 40 miles east of the launch site, but NASA technicians said the cloudy skies did not change the flight pattern.

Gains Speed

Pioneer Venus 1 initially traveled at 25,000 mph, trailing behind earth on an elliptical path. The satellite gained steady speed as it was pulled toward the sun.

Venus resembles Earth in size, density and distance from tme sun, but its total lack of water is puzzling to scientists.

"Why is a planet that might be our twin so hostile to life?" said Dr. Thomas Donohue, in charge of science steering for the project.

NASA officials speculate that the earth may also become dry and devoid of life because our own atmosphere is slowly thickening with carbon dioxide from burning of fossil fuels.

The first satellite will be joined around Venus Dec. 9 by Pioneer Venus 2, which will travel a shorter flight path. It will be launched Aug. 7.

Pioneer Venus 2 will split into five independent space vehicles, which will penetrate the hazy, yellow clouds surrounding Venus. Each will relay data back to Earth while flying down to the Venus' searing hot surface and will almost certainly burn up.

Because the 900-degree temperature on Venus remains the same all day every day, it is an ideal weather laboratory. Many of the 30 experiments on board the spacecrafts will test those atmospheric conditions.

NASA officials believe radar mapping will confirm that the planet's surface resembles a rocky desert. Radar astronomers have discovered enormous volcanoes and a canyon stretching 870 miles long and 95 miles wide.

Worm Farmer Finds Grain Dust Useful

NORTH KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Volatile grain dust is a hazard to grain mills and elevators but a boon to worm farmer Russ Latimore.

Latimer, along with his older brother, owns and operates the Huck Finn Worm Farm on the banks of the Missouri River in North Kansas City, about 10 blocks from where a grain mill exploded last month.

Latimer said the explosion was what directed him to start feeding his worms grain dust.

"Someone on television said they wished they had a good use for grain dust," Latimer explained. "And worms will eat anything that has ever lived or died."

Latimer said he was just getting into the worm business at the time of the explosion and decided to try to use grain dust as an additive at his farm.

Questions Raised On U.S. Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional restrictions on the use of the military in other countries, the Carter administration was not really hampered in responding to the Zairean crisis, a senior State Department official said Saturday.

But the official, declining to be identified publicly, acknowledged the latest flare-up in Zaire raised new questions about a host of laws enacted in the post-Vietnam era.

These laws, aimed at preventing the United States from becoming mired in a similar conflict, restrict President Carter's power to send troops or military aid to troubled allies without prior congressional approval. Because of this, administration officials are saying there's a good chance Congress will be asked to repeal many of the statutes.

CIA Role Eyed

The Zairean affair also has raised questions about the proper role for the CIA, which Congress has put on a short leash in southern Africa.

High-ranking administration sources said they are not necessarily interested in resuming wide-scale covert warfare in Angola. The State Department had said Friday, however, it believes the rebels who invaded Zaire were based in Angola and were trained by Cuban troops there. Cuba promptly denied the charge.

But the administration sources refused to rule out the possibility that covert action might be needed to combat Soviet and Cuban involvement in Africa.

Restrictions Cited

Meanwhile, the State Department released a list of the congressional restrictions under review. Foremost on the list were the Clark Amendment and the Hughes-Ryan Amendment of 1976.

The Clark amendment, sponsored by Sen. Richard Clark, D-Iowa, prohibits any American military involvement in Angola.

The Hughes-Ryan amendment, sponsored by former Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, and Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., prohibits covert paramilitary operations abroad by the CIA without the express consent of the president and approval of Congress.

The CIA conducted a covert paramilitary operation in Angola for several years. When the Ford administration tried to step up U.S. aid to the pro-Western faction in the Angolan civil war, Congress refused. It then enacted the Clark Amendment.

With the aid of Cuban troops, the Marxist faction won the civil war and took power in Angola. But the pro-Western faction reportedly is fighting on in the countryside without American support.

Two of the statutes on the State Department list deal specifically with Zaire, and they affected Carter's conduct last week.

One prohibits assistance for military operations in Zaire unless the president informs Congress and certifies that the assistance is in the interests of the United States. Carter did so before shipping military and medical supplies there.

Another, an amendment sponsored by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., prohibits credit sales to countries in arrears on previous sales. Zaire had to pledge quick payment of a $400,000 debt before Carter could ship the new non-combat supplies to that country.

Those restrictions did not prevent the administration from doing what it felt was best, said the senior State Department official.

But he stressed that a different situation might have called for actions that were foreclosed by law.

The president could not, for example, have sent Zaire supplies which cost more than Congress authorized for this fiscal year, despite its dire situation, the official said.

Soviet U.N. Officials Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Soviet nationals employed by the United Nations were arrested Saturday on espionage charges alleging that they bought classified U.S. documents on anti-submarine warfare.

The FBI said the Soviets picked up the documents in telephone booths along a New Jersey highway, leaving behind cash payments hidden in such things as milk cartons and a "Peanut Crunch" can.

The information, doctored in Washington before it was given to the Russians, was passed along by a Navy officer, who was acting as a double agent, the FBI said.

A third Soviet national, identified by the FBI as an official of the Soviet Mission to the United Nations, was named as a co-conspirator in the plot, but was not arrested because he has diplomatic immunity, the FBI said at a news conference here.

Acoustics System

The classified material included data on underwater acoustics systems for an anti-submarine warfare system, the FBI said.

Rudolf Petrovich Chernyayev, 43, a personnel officer at the U.N. Secretariat, and Valdik Aleksandrovich Enger, 39, an assistant to the U.N. undersecretary general, were arrested on a little-used dirt road in Woodbridge, N.J., the bureau said.

FBI Director William H. Webster said in Washington the arrests culminated an investigation that began last August. Warrants for the arrests were issued in Newark.

The FBI named Vladimir Petrovich Zinyakin, 39, attache to the Soviet Union's U.N. mission, as the co-conspirator. The bureau said Zinyakin was not arrested because he holds diplomatic immunity.

Senior Navy Officer

Thomas J. Emery, special agent in charge of the FBI in New Jersey, said the Navy officer, who was not identified, cooperated in the investigation. The officer was described by another FBI agent as a "senior officer, not an admiral, but not just an ensign, either."

The Navy officer was paid a total of $16,000 for the information, according to a complaint filed in support of the charges.

Court documents said the drop off points often were telephone booths along the Garden State Parkway in New Jersey.

"Sometimes the Navy officer was told to go to one telephone booth and there would be instructed to go to another, and sometimes even a third," said one FBI agent in Washington, describing the document "drops."

Keep Banana Hidden, Holdup Suspects Find

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If you try to rob a clothing store with a banana, for pete's sake keep it hidden.

Police said two men walked into Gavazzi's clothing store at 4 p.m. Friday and asked to look at slacks. One of the men put his hand inside a paper bag, indicated he had a gun and told the manager, "Give me the money or I'll blow your head off."

During a scuffle with a store security guard, the bag was knocked from the robber's hand and a banana fell out.

The two men ran out the door with $367 worth of slacks, police said, but were apprehended moments later after a chase down crowded Fifth Ave.

Police were holding Harold McCall, Jr., 27, and Sidney Williams, 26, both of Pittsburgh, on robbery changes.

Tuition Tax Credits Opposed By School Administrators Here

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Leaders in public education here have asked Congress to vote against giving federal tax credits to families who send their children to private school.

Lubbock Independent School District officials, teachers and parents say the proposed tax breaks would undermine public education — at a time when the city's public schools are especially vulnerable.

"By granting tuition tax credits, the federal government would be encouraging white flight from public schools," school board president Charles Waters said.

"Tax credits would be an incentive for middle-and upper-class families to take their children out of public school and put them in private school. These are the kids who are most likely to excel, the kind of student public schools need to have a well rounded system," Waters said.

"No school district can afford to lose that type of student. But for a district undergoing desegregation, a government incentive for enrolling children in private school would be particularly damaging," he said.

Due to objections to the Lubbock district's court-ordered integration plan, the district concedes it may lose some pupils to private schools next year.

School officials say that while those objections may not be valid, private schools have a place in the community as an alternative to public education.

But Waters said the federal government should not advocate the private-school option by "rewarding" with tax credits parents who pull their children out of the public school system.

James Whiteside, former president of the school board here and now the area's representative on the State Board of Education, concurs.

Whiteside and other state board members last week passed a resolution opposing "any form of tuition tax credit which aids non-public education at the elementary and secondary level."

The state board's position was provided to Texas congressmen, who may have a chance to vote on the issue in the next few days.

Quoting the resolution, Whiteside noted, "The American democracy owes its strength and vitality to a system of public education, free and open to all people of all races and all socio-economic groups."

The proposed tax-break legislation "could be detrimental to the public educational system by encouraging private schools through parent tax credits at double the per capita rate of federal aid provided to public schools.

"Expansion of private schools from such tuition tax credits would likely foster racal and socio-economic group isolation, as well as increase resistance to support public education through taxation by those with children attending non-public schools."

Whiteside also pointed out a passage in the resolution stating, "The majority of the benefits under this program would go to parents of children attending church-related schools while the nation has consistently advocated separation of church and state."

Several tuition tax credit bills have been introduced in Congress. The major one, sponsored by Sens. Bob Packwood of Oregon and Daniel Moynihan of New York, would allow a $250 tax break for each child for whom a taxpayer is now paying tuition.

The Senate Finance Committee has recommended a $500 tuition tax credit, and the House this week is scheduled to consider a proposed $100 credit.

Opponents — including local public school teachers and Parent-Teacher Associations — maintain that such tax credits amount to indirect federal aid to private schools. This aid, they say, would come at the expense of other taxpayers, who would have to make up the federal government's loss of revenue.

"It's actually double taxation," Whiteside said. Citizens would be taxed once to support public schools, which are open to everybody, and again to aid private schools, which are attended by about 10 percent of the nation's school population.

In its argument against tax credits, the Texas Association of School Boards, of which Waters is immediate past president, also notes that private schools are not subject to the same requirements — such as integration, bilingual services and programs for the handicapped — that apply to public schools.

Thus, the association says, federal aid to private schools would be unfair to public schools, which are struggling to pay for those required programs.

"The federal government in effect would be giving money to private schools but have no control over how that money is spent," said Jimmie Hooser, director of governmental relations for the Texas State Teachers Association.

"The greatest danger I see is that the government would be encouraging a dual school system by helping affluent people put their children in private school. This goes against everything that the Lubbock school district is trying to do in implementing its desegregation plan."

And Hooser said since 85 percent of the nation's private schools are church-affiliated, tuition tax credits would violate the constitutional provisions for separation of church and state. This aspect of the legislation is certain to be raised in court, he said.

Jerry Hale, president of the Lubbock Educators Association, TSTA's local affiliate, said he agrees with the state organization's position. "The discussions we've had have basically been against giving tax breaks to parents who send their children to private school," Hale, principal of Stewart Elementary, said.

Teachers have been urged to write their congressmen to ask them to oppose tuition tax credits, Hale said.

The PTA council for District 14, which covers Lubbock and 17 other South Plains counties, also has gone on record against the tax credits. Elsie Smith, president of the PTA district, said the council passed a resolution to that effect and is advising its local chapters to oppose tax breaks for private-school parents.

Mrs. Smith released a statement from the National PTA that private schools "already get fedeal support — about $75 per pupil. The average of federal support in the public schools comes to only about $145 per pupil.

"If the (Senate Finance Committee) tuition tax credits are passed, non-public school students will receive $500 plus $75 of federal funds — almost four times what public school students receive."

The PTA said tuition tax credits for private elementary and secondary schools would cost the government about $2.5 billion. The federal government spends about $4.7 billion on public schools.

A test vote on the issue already has been taken in the House. The House voted 227-136 to make room in the 1979 fiscal year's budget for a tuition tax credit of $100 for private-school parents.

ing to Motsenbocker, except for those already in effect.

Such transfers require ultimate approval in Austin, because state funds must be shifted as well. Students then pay tuitions intended to be equal to the local tax support per pupil at their new schools.

Transfer policies vary from district to district, with each board setting its own criteria and scale of fees. Slaton has a sliding scale, charging $350 for the first child transferred, $150 for the second and $100 for each additional student from the same family. The Frenship School District charges a flat rate of $200 per student, and the Shallowater schools assess a $250 tuition for the family as a whole.

The deadline for transfer applications was May 1. The state now will consider only what it considers hardship cases.

The steady 5 per cent growth of the Shallowater schools has given way to a 10 percent increase, according to Superintendent Charles Hohertz.

"Maybe 5 percent of that next fall, when we expect more than 900 enrolled, will be due to Lubbock's situation, but I really don't know," he said. "A lot is natural growth because of our location as much as anything else. As Lubbock continues to grow, we're a lot more convenient to some people."

J.C. McClesky, superintendent in Slaton, said schools there should see enrollment increase by about 60 students in the fall to approximately 1,965.

"Part of this is due to a new development where 300 lots are platted," he said. McClesky said the subdivision was first planned several years ago by two Slaton businessmen.

H. C. Carpenter, Cooper school superintendent, said his district does not anticipate any large increases in students.

"Some parents called and made comments that they were opposed to busing, but it certainly isn't a large group and there have been fewer calls since details (of the desegregation) plan came out," Carpenter said.

J. Weldon Bennet, who first joined the Frenship School District about 35 years ago as a principal, said Fenship's growth didn't appear out of the ordinary.

"We're simply caught up in things as Lubbock continues to grow south and west," the school scperintendent said.

Foreigners Reported Massacred

KOLWEZI, Zaire (AP) — French and Belgian paratroopers seized control of Kolwezi from rebels Saturday and reported about 100 foreigners had been massacred in this copper mining center.

Some of the 1,500 white residents waiting to be flown to safety told reporters they witnessed widespread murder, bloodshed and looting by the rebels who captured Kolwezi from government forces a week ago.

French and Belgian army officers said their troops controlled the city and were mopping up small bands of rebels.

Reporters counted at least 58 bodies in the streets. French miltary commander Yves Graves, who led a paratroop assault on Kolwezi Friday, said he estimated 100 whites had been slaughtered by the rebels and some 200 rebels were killed in the fighting Friday night and Saturday.

Postures Of Terror

In the ruins of one house, the bodies 34 men, women and children were frozen in postures of terror. A woman's face was twisted and her fingers were still plugging her ears against the noise of the machine gun fire that killed her and her companions.

French military sources said seven paratroopers of the French Foreign Legion were killed and several others were wounded.

The French Defense Ministry said the French opperation could be considered "terminated," but there was no indication the 600 legionnaires were being withdrawn.

No casualties were reported among some 1,000 Belgian paratrooers sent into Kolwezi early Saturday.

The airborne assaults were launched to save some 2,500 foreigners in the Kolwezi area. Most are Belgians and French, but U.S. officials said there also were 14 Americans.

Given Hot Dogs

The resccued foreigners, numb, hungry and exhausted, were given hot dogs at the Kolwezi airport while they waited for flights to a military airbase at Kamina, 160 miles north.

They then were flown to the capital of Kinshasa, 700 miles northwest of the war zone, for flights that would take them to Brussels, Belgium.

Two Americans were among 100 refugees in the first plane out of Kinshasa en route to Brussels. They were Harold Amstutz of Portsmouth, Va., and an unidentified member of his family, authorities said.

Officials reported Lonnie Glen of Yerington, Nev., was missing and feared dead. Refugees told reporters that when they last saw Glen he was searching for his German-born wife and daughter in Kolwezi. Glen was employed by the Boise, Idaho-based Morrison-Knudsen Co., which was building a power project in the area.

77 Americans Rescued

In Washington, the State Department said two unidentified American missionaries were among the first 550 persons evacuated from Kolwezi.

State Department spokesman Kenneth Brown said French and Belgian troops talked to two other U.S missionaries by radio who said they were all right. Bill Starkey, 32, of Boise, another Morrison-Knudsen worker, said five rebels took him from his home last week and drove him to a desolate spot.

"I figured it was all over for me," he said. "Suddenly they told me to get out and run. I tried to talk to them but they made me run and shot me." He was wounded in the side, but managed to walk to the Kolwezi hospital where he was treated.

Some of the whites in Kolwezi refused to leave their homes when the paratroopers first arrived, Graves said, adding they were terrified and didn't realize they were being rescued.

Rebels Chased Away

He said when his legionnaires landed on the grounds of a school outside of town Friday, rebels were about to execute 40 persons there but were chased away by the paratroopers.

Graves said 14 Frenchmen, including six advisers to the Zairean army, were kidnapped by the rebels.

Reporters were taken to Kamina and Kolwezi in the private plane of President Mobutu Sese Seko, who toured Kolwezi with a heavy armed guard.

The foreigners at the Kolwezi airport said the rebels appeared disciplined when they entered the city, but later they began drinking and looted homes and shot at residents indiscriminately with their AK47 rifles.

Monique Schmit, 43, of Belgium said she watched as two Zairean military police were shot down by rebels in front of her home.

She said rebels entered the house and threatened to kill her and her husband.

"They aimed a gun at his head, then fired it, just above. They did that three times," she said.

AZAP, the Zaire news agency, said the rebels gathered European men together, shot them and then raped their wives. The term "European" is frequently applied to any white in black Africa.

Youngster Wins Discrimination Action At Law

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UVI) — Tony Bryant, 11-years-old and black, has won a $29,000 out-ofcourt settlement from the Annapolis Elks Club in a suit charging the Elks kicked him off their kids' football team because of his race.

The club did not admit the charge, but Tony's lawyers disclosed the Elks had agreed to pay the money and had made assurances no discrimination would occur in their future policies.

The class action suit accused the Elks of violating the youngster's civil and constitutional rights when he was dismissed from the children's football team three weeks after he joined in 1975.

Under the terms of the settlement reached Friday, the club agreed to pay Tony $12,000, his mother Glenna $3,000 and their attorneys $14,000.

In the course of litigation, Thomas Hardesty, the team's coach at the time, said club officials had given him "subtle hints" Tony was not wanted because he was black.

Hardesty resigned in protest, after consulting a priest, and wrote in a diary he kept about Tony's dismissal:

"Never in my life have I had anything hurt me so much, except hearing that my kid brother died in Vietnam, when little Tony stood there looking up at me with his helmet hanging in his hand and those pitiful eyes full of whys."

The diary was part of the court record in the case.

At the time of the incident, an Elks spokesman said the boy was dropped from the team in a standard player cut football teams use to reduce their rosters.

The family filed a lawsuit charging otherwise, however, and the U.S. Justice Department filed a similar suit that is still pending.

The Annapolis club is a chapter of a nationwide Elks organization, which has more than 1.5 million members.

Catherine Quarles, the boy's grandmother, said Saturday, "We're pleased with the way the case turned out.

"The money was not the reason we spoke out. We felt it had taken years for a civil rights bill to be passed. Tony doesn't like the publicity and he's said many times he wishes it was all over."

Mrs. Quarles said her grandson, who is an only child, had been deeply hurt when the football coach was forced to tell him he could no longer be on the team.

She said he still loves sports and pitches for a baseball team that invited him to join after after he was kicked off the Elks club.

Tony's Reply

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — When Tony Bryant, a black youth, was cut from an Elks Club football team because of his race, his grandmother Catherine Quarles wrote this poem:

"You mean they really don't like me," the young child sighed.

With looks of hurt and amazement, he silently cried.

"You mean they really don't like me.

"Mom, I can't understand.

"I listened and watched and obeyed the commands.

"I had friends on that team, the coaches were great.

"Guess it's too deep for me, I'm only 8.

"You mean they really don't like me in this land of the free?

"Where millions have come to gain liberty

"They really don't like me, it's some kind of attack."

"It's not my ball playing, it's because I'm black."

WOMAN CHARGED

President Carter Predicting Gas Pricing Agreement Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says chances of an agreement on natural gas pricing in a House-Senate conference committee are "very good — it is the first time I have been able to say that in 13 months."

The stalemate over natural gas pricing has stalled congressional approval of Carter's energy package for months, but the committee is expected to vote on the gas issue on Tuesday.

Carter told a group of visiting newspaper editors there are strong prospects for an agreement bringing "step-by-step deregulation of natural gas, at a rate of the inflation plus 4 percent, to be completed in early 1985 ..."

He said the accord would include "adequate protection for consumers" who would be hit hard if natural gas prices rose too sharply.

Carter made the comments on Friday. A transcript was made public Saturday.

He noted the natural gas question "has been one of the most controversial ever addressed by the Congress."

"I am not saying flatly that this one will be resolved this year," he said. "My anticipation is that it will."

"At this time, the prospect for success in the conference committee is very good. It is the first time I have been able to say that in 13 months."

If agreement is reached on gas pricing, the House-Senate energy conferees will have completed work on four of the five parts of Carter's energy package. The fifth — his proposal for energy taxes that would include a crude oil equalization tax — still remains unresolved.

On other subjects, Carter told the editors:

—"If it became obvious" the Equal Rights Amendment will not be ratified by the required 38 states by the deadline of next March, he would support an extension of the deadline. Legislation is before both the House and Senate to extend the deadline. Approval from three states still is needed to include the women's rights proposal in the Constution.

—He still feels nuclear power should be used only to fill shortages resulting from lack of other energy supplies. But he believes "there is a significant role to be played by nuclear power" and supports the construction of six new plants by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

—Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, is visiting Peking "to exchange ideas, to try to build up a better relationship between ourselves and the People's Republic, to enhance trade, to search out mutual interests that we have around the globe and to let there be a better understanding between us and the people of mainland China." But, Carter said, "we don't know yet" the prospects for a return to normal diplomatic relations with the Chinese and that will not be a subject of discussion during the visit.

Spy Trial Appeal May Force Document Review

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The appeals of two men convicted of spying for communist Vietnam could force the Supreme Court to examine the government's system of classifying documents, attorneys say.

Defense attorneys for the two men say they will carry appeals to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., and if necessary to the Supreme Court.

Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who is not one of the defense attorneys but who contributed to a defense fund for defendant David Truong, told reporters before the verdict Friday that, "A conviction in this case would bring the whole classification system under judicial scrutiny by the Supreme Court."

Federal courts have never issued definitive rulings on whether it is proper to examine the process by which authorized government employees may classify documents as confidential, secret or top secret.

In the current case, Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. instructed the jury to accept the classification without considering whether it was proper or not.

The convicted men are Ronald L. Humphrey, 42, a former employee of the U.S. Information Agency, and Truong, 32, a Vietnamese expatriate who has lived in this country for 13 years and who was active in the antiwar movement.

Both were convicted Friday on six counts of an indictment charging them with conspiracy, espionage, theft of documents and failure to register as foreign agents. Each could receive a life sentence.

Both were arrested Jan. 31, and Humphrey has been in jail since then. Truong was released April 14 after posting bond of $250,000.

The judge revoked bond for both men after the verdict was announced by the jury of six men and six women, and the pair was taken away to jail.

Truong's attorneys, Michael E. Tigar and Marvin D. Miller, and Humphrey's lawyers, Warren L. Miller and Mark Foster, said they planned to appeal. They said possible issues that might be raised on appeal include:

—Was it proper for the Justice Department to use evidence gained through a wiretap on Truong's telephone installed on presidential authority in a foreign intelligence case?

—Did President Carter have the authority to tell Attorney General Griffin Bell that the FBI could install a microphone in Truong's downtown Washington apartment?

—Did Carter have authority to have a videotape camera installed at the information agency where Humphrey worked?

—Was it proper for Carter to authorize the FBI to open and photograph sealed mail to Truong and packages which Truong gave to a courier for delivery in Paris, also without a court warrant?

The government charged that Humphrey took sensitive government documents from his office and gave them to Truong.

Washington Set To Celebrate Hope Birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Thanks for the memory" is his theme song. But it will be official Washington saying "thanks" this week in two days of 75th birthday celebrations for Bob Hope.

A White House reception, a congressional tribute, a family birthday dinner and a special salute by the United Service Organizations to be held at the Kennedy Center are all part of the festivities planned on May 24-25 for one of America's favorite entertainers.

The three-hour USO special, which will be nationally televised on May 29, Hope's actual birthdate, features more than 40 performers, including Sammy Davis Jr., Ann-Margaret, Danny Thomas, Pearl Bailey, Tony Orlando, Donnie and Marie Osmond, Kathryn Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and Elizabeth Taylor Warner.

Hope has donated the occasion of his birthday to help raise funds for the USO, the organization for which he has gone around the world entertaining American servicemen. The special also will include historical footage of the Hope tours.

President Carter, honorary chairman of the USO, and Mrs. Carter will entertain Hope and the celebrities at a White House reception on Wednesday. Afterwards, Hope, members of his family and about 200 guests go to a birthday party in the Old Town section of nearby Alexandria, Va.

"This is going to be the biggest social event in Old Town since George Washington's farewell dinner," enthused Peter Malatesta, owner of the restaurant where the party is planned and a nephew of Hope's wife, Dolores.

Former President Gerald Ford plans to be there, as do Peter Grace, Leonard Firestone, Gen. William Westmoreland, Lucille Ball, Phyllis Diller and Jimmy Doolittle.

Woman Placed On Death Row

WETUMPKA, Ala. (AP) — Looking frightened and clutching a Bible, 18-year-old Debra Bracewell — the first woman convicted under Alabama's new death penalty law — has entered Tutwiler Prison to await execution for the slaying of a grocer.

Mrs. Bracewell was admitted Friday to the women's prison, north of Montgomery, where she will be held in a private cell, segregated from other inmates, prison spokeswoman Ashley Williams said.

The condemned woman's husband, Charles Bracewell, also was convicted in the robbery-murder of grocer Rex Carnley from the southern Alavama town of Opp. He has been on Death Row at Holman Prison in south Alabama since April 10.

There are no facilities for female inmates, however, at Holman.

Since the 1920s, three women have been executed in Alabama. The last was Rhonda Bell Martin, for murder, in 1957.

There are 29 men awaiting execution at Holman, most of them sentenced under the state's new death penalty law, which took effect in April 976.

Microcomputer System/Micro Processor Component Opportunities

When it comes to microcomputers, Mostek has certainly picked up where the others have left off. Our versatile 3870 microcomputer on-a-chip is software and hardware compatible with the existing F8 multi-chip family. In fact, these are the only compatible microprocessor systems that cover the range from a single-chip microcomputer to 1/0 intensive and/or memory intensive systems with total software and timing compatibility. As a result, there's quite a demand for our components and a tremendous place for us in the complete systems market. And, in turn, we've got quite a need for good people like those described below:

MICROPROCESSOR TEST EQUIPMENT ENGINEER: Individual will design and develop microcomputer test hardware and software products. Requires BSEE or BSCS (with EE) with 1-3 years experience.

PRODUCT ENGINEER: Must be experienced in MOS-Microprocessor design and improvement of devices. Requires BSEE and 1+ years experience in MOS circuits, fabrication, design or product enhancement.

SENIOR SYSTEMS SOFTWARE ENGINEER: Duties include the design/development of Microcomputer systems software. Requires BSEE or BSCS and 7+ years experience in software development for mini/micro computer systems.

SYSTEMS PRODUCT ENGINEER: Position includes assuming responsibility for taking system products from design staff. Requires BSEE and 1+ years experience. Must be familiar with T2L and MOS LSI.

SYSTEMS PRODUCT SUPERVISOR: Requires BBA and 1-3 years experience.

If you meet our qualifications and are looking for increased responsibility and true growth opportunity, call collect or send resume in confidence to Pat Coil. Or you may choose to visit the Mostek exhibit at Electro 78 in Boston May 23-25.

We take house calls.

Plains National Bank's Mortgage Loan Department still takes house calls. And we get lots of them: regular Plains customers calling to ask for current rates on new homes; young families in Lubbock calling to check on credit requirements to own rather than rent; newcomers to the South Plains calling to inquire about neighborhoods, builders and schools.

Most everyone who calls tells us that there are many advantages to having your home loan where you bank.

There are several good mortgage lenders in Lubbock. But there's only one Plains National. We're right in the middle of Lubbock — and we welcome house calls.

SOMETHING OLD: The neighborhood is an old established area but the 4 bedroom 3 bath home has the 3 living areas you've all asked for. See it today and move your bride in tomorrow.

SOMETHING NEW: New on the market—a real jewel. 2 bedroom home in immaculate condition, cozy den, with fireplace, central heat and refrigerated air. Big covered patio over the cellar. Priced to sell quick at $23,950.00.

SOMETHING BORROWED: The owner borrowed the garage and made a real cute den out of it. The charm of the kitchen appears to have been borrowed from better homes and gardens, and you can't beg, borrow or steal the school location, it's great. Priced at only $32,750.00, so hurry!

SOMETHING BLUE: You'll be "Blue" if you miss this 3 bedroom 2 bath home that's just on the market. Planned around a covered patio area, great kitchen arrangement and I know you'll love the decor and the price, only $36,950.00. Makes a great Wedding gift.

ORDINANCE NO. 7650
AN ORDINANCE AMEND

Affirmed: Two Down, One To Go

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Cauthen and Affirmed played the waiting game Saturday, and it paid off in a Preakness victory that put the chestnut colt on the threshhold of the Triple Crown.

"I was waiting for Alydar the whole race," said Cauthen. "He (Jorge Velasquez) set his horse down at the head of the lane. I set mine down, too, and we beat him."

Affirmed beat his arch rival by a neck to add a triumph in the Preakness to his victory in the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago.

"I've called two," said trainer Laz Barrera, who was confident before both the Derby and Preakness that Affirmed would win. "Now there is one to go."

That one is the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, the final race of the Triple Crown, June 10 at Belmont Park.

"I was gonna let Believe It set the pace, but nobody was doing anything," said Cauthen. "Track Reward was in front (after the first quarter-mile) and he was coming out, so I decided to go ahead and set him on the fence."

Affirmed took the lead and kept it, fighting off Alydar in a stretch duel that had the Pimlico record crowd of 81,261 cheering wildly.

"I saw him (Alydar) at the three-eighths pole," said Cauthen. "He ws outside a horse or two."

Alydar was sixth after the first half-mile, 5½ lengths back of Affirmed. He had been 17 lengths off the lead at one point in the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby.

Before the race, Alydar's trainer John Veitch said: "We can't be that far back this time. We have to be very close turning for home." Alydar was very close turning for home and the race was on.

Down the stretch they came, with both jockeys urging their mounts on, and Affirmed was equal to the challenge.

Affirmed ran the final three-sixteenths of a mile in a sizzling 181-5 seconds, tying the fastest final three-sixteenths in the 103-year history of the race.

He crossed the finish in 1:542-5 to tie 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat and last year's Triple Corwn winner Seattle Slew for the second-fastest Preakness ever. Canonero II set the record of 1:54 in 1971.

"I was where I wanted to be," said a disappointed Velasquez. "I was right with him at the head of the stretch, but he wouldn't be passed. My horse ran a fine race. We tried, but..."

The victory got Cauthen off the hook with trainer Barrera, who was upset with the 18-year-old jockey because he hadn't contacted the trainer until just before the race. Cauthen said he arrived in Baltimore from New York Saturday morning.

Barrera talked to Cauthen in the saddling area and told him: "If the pace is slow, go with the horse. Don't fight it."

Cauthen followed instructions to a T, and Affirmed responded brilliantly to become a millionaire. The winner's share of $136,200 from a purse of $188,700 pushed Affirmed's career earnings to $1,023,227.

Affirmed paid $3, $2.10 and $2.10 in winning his seventh straight race, beating Alydar for the sixth time in eight meetings and running his career record to 13 wins and two seconds in 15 starts.

Alydar, owned by Calumet Farm, paid $2.10 and $2.10. Hickory Tree Stable's Believe It, ridden by Eddie Maple, also third in the Derby, was $2.10 to show.

Completing the order of finish behind Believe It, who was 7½ lengths in back of Alydar, were Noon Time Spender, Indigo Star, Dax S and Track Reward.

"I have to say Alydar is a nice horse. Another horse might have had his heart broken," the wonder boy of racing said in reference to Affirmed's superiority over Alydar on the track. "But he just keeps on trying."

Alydar certainly tried on this sunny day with temperatures in the 80s, and he pushed Affirmed to the limit. It was the duel that was expected in the Derby but never really materialized.

Once Affirmed got into the lead, Cauthen set a pace with Alydar in mind. He completed the first three-quarters in 1:114-5, a length in front of Noon Time Spender with Believe It third, another head back. Alydar was fourth at this point and moving.

Affirmed completed the mile in 1:361-5 and had something in reserve when Alydar made his big challenge, the famed devil's red and blue silks of Calumet Farm glinting in the sun.

It was a stirring challenge and an even more stirring rejection.

Maple summed up the growing feeling about Affirmed's superb ability by saying, "That first guy, you just can't get by him."

"We were outgained at the very end," said Alydar's trainer John Veitch. "When we come that close, I ain't afraid of him (Affirmed). We'll catch him some day. We'll try him again in three weeks.

"Jorge rode a perfect race, and the horse ran a perfect race. When these two horses meet, there's no telling, you know, who's gonna come out on top."

It's been Affirmed on top in the first two jewels of the Triple Crown and as years go by, people don't remember who finished second.

Cauthen was asked, "Do you think if your rode Alydar, you could beat Affirmed?"

"I don't want to answer that," Cauthen said, then after a pause said, "I have to say Jorge Velasquez rode that horse beautifully."

It was perhaps the only question that Cuathen and Affirmed have not answered.

The money bet on the Preakness also was a record — $1,598,911, bettering the 1976 mark of $1,372,160. The nine-race handle of $4,484,405 also was a Preakness day record.

Simons Retains Lead In Memorial Tourney

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — A charging, fast-moving 10-foot birdie putt on the final hole re-established a 1-stroke lead for Jim Simons, but the baby-faced journeyman was far from confident going into today's final round of the prestigious Memorial Golf Tournament.

"You're bound to be scared with the lead," Simons said after his bold effort on the final nole of Saturday's third round finished off a round of 1-over-par 73 and lifted him out of a tie with onrushing Bill Kratzert.

"I'm going to try and be in control all the way," said Simons, who has won only once before in his seven years of tour activity. "I want to be as relaxed as I can.

"But I know that's not feasible."

Within four strokes of his leading 210, 6 shots under par on the 7,101-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course, are Kratzert, Rod Curl and two of the greatest players the world has ever seen, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player.

"I feel like I can shoot 65," the pumped-up Curl said.

"You just can't tell," shrugged Nicklaus. "I could shoot 71 and win, or I could shoot 66 and not win."

The dark, laconic Kratzert, generally regarded by his fellow tourists as one of the most promising young players in the world, holed a sand shot for an eagle-3 on the 15th that highlighted his round of 69.

He was a single shot off the pace at 211 going into today's final 18 holes of the chase for a $50,000 first prize.

Chipper Rod Curl, the little Wintu Indian who has played his last 36 holes in a blazing 135, was another shot back at 212. He had a third round 68.

"I found my game," the 5-foot-5 Curl chirped. "I've been playing just awful so long. But about Tuesday, I found it; found my game. I hope it's the start of a streak. I hope it don't run out."

Jack Nicklaus, the tournament founder, course architect and defending champion, had to rally from a double-bogey 6 on the third hole for a 71 that put him in a tie for fourth at 214, 4 shots back.

Despite the 9-iron shot that found the water on the third, "it was a pretty good round of golf," Nicklaus said before hustling off to officiate at dedication ceremonies for Francis Ouimet, the 1913 U.S. Open champion being honored this year.

He was tied with South African Gary Player and mustachioed Australian Bob Shearer. Player, who triggered a string of three consecutive victories with his triumph in the Masters, didn't make a birdie in his round of 75. Shearer shot a solid 70 in the hot, windy, overcast weather.

Tom Watson, holder of three 1978 titles and the year's leading money-winner, shot a 72 that left him at 217. U.S. Open champ Hubert Green had a 76-221.

Scoring, generally, was much, much higher. For the first time in the tournament, the ball was being played as it lay. For the first two rounds, players were allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairway.

Arnold Palmer got caught by the change. Accustomed to lifting the ball in the fairway, he put his hands on his drive in the sixth fairway, then jerked them away as if the ball was hot. But it was too late. It cost him a stroke penalty. He made double bogey on the hole and finished 75-223.

The scores bore him out. Eight men in the field of 73 of the world's best players failed to break 80. And some of those who broke it were considerably less than enchanted.

Tide-Husker Tilt Opens TV Schedule

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC Television kicks off its 1978 college football season on Saturday night, Sept. 2, with Nebraska at Alabama, the network said Saturday.

The game at Legion Field in Birmingham will be televised nationally starting at 8 p.m. CDT.

UCLA-Washington and Southern California-Alabama are also scheduled to be shown nationally in September. The network said it would announce the rest of the season's telecasts at a later date.

The schedule for September:

Sept. 2 — Nebraska at Alabama, national.

Sept. 9 — UCLA at Washington, national.

Sept. 16 — Penn State at Ohio State, Baylor at Georgia, San Jose State at Stanford, Syracuse at North Carolina State, Idaho State at Northern Arizona, all regionals.

Sept. 23 — Michigan at Notre Dame, Yale at Brown, Florida State at Miami, Fla., Colorado State at BYU, all regionals; Southern California at Alabama, national.

Sept. 30 — North Carolina at Pittsburgh, Nebraska at Indiana, Tennessee at Auburn, Washington at Oregon State, Alcorn State at South Carolina State, Boise State at Montana State, all regionals.

Sneva Earns Indy Pole; Error Costly For Foyt

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt's own error cost him a chance to win the pole position Saturday and could keep the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner out of the starting lineup altogether for the first time in two decades.

"The waste gate was not set right; I usually set it myself," a frustrated Foyt said after his aborted qualification attempt put him at the back of a lengthy line of cars awaiting Sunday's final six hours of time trials.

Twenty cars successfully qualified on Saturday, and all of the original 35 cars eligible for a shot at the pole exhausted their one guaranteed opportunity, keeping Tom Sneva on the inside of the front row for the May 28 race.

The rest of the 33-car starting field will be determined on the basis of Sunday's qualifying speeds.

Foyt's attempt was considered official since he took the green flag. So if he is still in line at the 6 p.m. close of qualifications Sunday — which could be shortened by some expected rainshowers — his string of 20 consecutive Indy starts would be snapped.

There is speculation Foyt might make another attempt in a little-used backup car, but even his crew has doubts whether it is capable of the necessary speed for four laps.

Foyt's primary racer would be behind at least a dozen cars in line on Sunday. He said he pulled off the track because he believed a pressure-relief valve installed by U.S. Auto Club officials was defective. When that happened last year, he was given another first attempt and qualified fourth.

"I guess it was my fault," he said. "We'll just be back Sunday. I think we've got the speed. We ran well in the morning (203.666 mph). Like I say, it's the breaks of the game."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The tentative, partial lineup for the May 28 Indianapolis 500, based on four-lap qualification speeds Saturday:

Row 1

Row 2

4. Johnny Rutherford, Ft. Worth, No. 4, McLaren-Cosworth, 197.098. 5. Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., No. 2, Lola-Cosworth, 196.474. 6. Gordon Johncock, Phoenix, Ariz., No. 20, Wildcat-SGD, 195.883.

Sneva, who became the first driver to earn the pole position two years in a row since Foyt did it in 1974-75, said the race "will be a whole different deal.

"There were four or five cars which had a shot at the pole," Sneva said, "but eight to 10 cars can win it on race day."

Sneva's four-lap average of 202.156 miles per hour broke his own record of 198.884 set last year. But he said he did not feel he did as good a job of driving as he did a year ago.

Unlikely NBA Finalists Vie

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Bullets and Seattle SuperSonics, two unlikely playoff finalists, open a best-of-seven series today (2 p.m. CDT) to determine which will become the losingest champion in National Basketball Association history.

It may be a dubious distinction, but it's one either club will gladly accept.

"There were 22 teams — now there are two," observed Seattle's explosive reserve guard, Fred Brown. "We have to be proud of what we've accomplished."

"I want that championship ring," declared Washington's Elvin Hayes. "I've been playing a long time and now I can smell that championship. That's what it's all about."

Seattle finished the regular season with a 47-35 record. Washington was 44-38. No team has ever lost that many games in the regular season and won the title. Three clubs currently share the "honor" of losingest champion with regular-season records of 48-34 — Boston in 1969, Los Angeles in 1972 and Golden State in 1975.

Washington overcame numerous injuries—including a back injury that has disabled star guard Phil Chenier since mid-season—to come on strong in the playoffs, upsetting explosive San Antonio and the multi-talented Philadelphia 76ers.

"We've had a lot of adversity," said Bullets coach Dick Motta, "but it all seemed to turn out for the best. Seattle is a very fine team, but I like our chances. I like the way things are going."

The Sonics are this year's NBA Cinderella story, following Golden State's "Love Machine" title team of 1975, Phoenix' 1976 playoff finalists and Portland's "Blazermania" champs of a year ago.

The Sonics stumbled to a 5-17 start this season before Lenny Wilkens replaced Bob Hopkins as coach. Wilkens shuffled the lineup, made some technical adjustments and, most of all, created a positive, team-oriented atmosphere.

Suddenly the Sonics believed — in Wilkens and in themselves.

"Everyone respects Lenny's knowledge," says Seattle reserve forward Wally Walker, a member of the champion Blazers a year ago. "We know if we listen we'll be okay. So we listen."

"We are here (in the finals) because we involve everybody," says Brown.

Brownwood Coach Finds Situation Calmer Now

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

BROWNWOOD—Everything seemed at ease. Nothing out of place. No hassles. A typical easygoing spring day at the Palace Drug Store, as the regulars drifted in to escape the 97-degree heat and accompanying 80 per cent humidity.

Brownwood football coach Gordon Wood sat at the largest table with chief assistant Morris Southall, two more assistants and a couple of other acquaintances. The conversation moved from fishing to golf and, inevitably, to football.

Wood mostly listened, only occasionally interjecting a comment. Often, he waved and called to friends entering the store.

A long-time friend strolled in and greeted Wood. The man had once coached against Wood and defeated him.

"Yeah, but he cheated me," Wood said, deadpanning.

Wood's manner and the general atmosphere suggested strongly that all was calm. An outsider would have gained no hint of the imbroglio that had existed not long before.

The outcome will help determine how much longer Wood, one of the winningest coaches in Texas High school history, would be allowed to practice his craft at Brownwood.

Wood will become 65 in May 1979, meaning that he had one season left because of the old policy that required school employees to retire at 65. Wood wanted to coach two more seasons —or more.

The controversy heated up in March. At one school board meeting, the members voted 3-2, with one abstention, in favor of retaining the 65 age limit. Following a school board election, in which two new members were voted in, the board voted unanimously at its regular meeting to abolish the limit.

However, a new policy was not drawn up, and Wood's contract was not acted upon. He has not signed a new contract but claims to not be terribly concerned about it.

"It's a situation that will take time to iron out," he said. "I really have lots more interest in this Congressional race (17th district). I'm real interested in Charles Stenholm getting elected. He played on two state championship teams for me."

Wood said the problem centered around the terms of his contract.

"I knew about the problem three years ago, and I made a mistake by not correcting it then. Actually, I'd coach without a contract, if the salary was realistic."

That Wood has had any problems might surprise casual observers, since Wood is a legendary coach in Texas. A Fort Worth motel marquee once announced as Brownwood arrived prior to a playoff game: "Welcome Gordon Wood. We have TWO pools for you to walk on."

To deserve such accolades, Wood has compiled a 328-66-10 record and is 180-31-6 at Brownwood. Seven of his teams—five at Brownwood—have won state championships. No other coach in Texas history as won as many.

Wood also has the reputation of being a quality person, so one would think that he would rank second only to the Diety in Brownwood. But there were hassles other than money. Wood chose not to comment on them—"I'm not blaming anyone" —but others did.

Given the mood of many U.S. citizens and members of Congress, the Brownwood school system's mandatory retirement age policy would have been challenged eventually. Wood just happened to provide the test case.

According to school board chairman Grady Chastain, Wood, in his original appeal, asked to be allowed to coach through his 65th year. The rule read that if a person's 65th birthday fell on or before Sept. 1, his contract would not be renewed for the school year beginning Sept. 1. Wood's birthday is in May, so he would not have been allowed to coach past the 1978 season.

Shockers Advance In Valley Meet

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Wichita State hit four home runs and Indiana State three but a crucial double by Larry Groves in the eighth inning gave the Shockers a 9-8 victory in the Missouri Valley Conference baseball tournament Saturday.

Groves knocked in Mike Davis to make the score 9-6. Indiana State carved out two runs in the top of the ninth on a double by Doug McPhail.

Banker Miller Gets Bills Cash 'Up Front'

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Terry Miller didn't come cheap, but officials of the Buffalo Bills consider him a bargain already.

"We really believe he's the type who can fill the void we have right now," said Stew Barber, assistant general manager of the National Football League team, at a news conference Saturday to announce Miller's signing.

The void developed when the Bills traded O.J. Simpson to San Francisco earlier this year for a peck of draft choices.

Miller and defensive linemen Scott Hutchinson and Dee Hardison — both taken by the Bills in the second round — later took part in a "mini-camp" for veterans and rookies. Hutchinson and Hardison had not yet signed player contracts.

Barber gave no terms, but said Miller agreed to a "series of one-year contracts." Miller reportedly had been asking between $1.5 million and $2 million over five years.

The 5-foot-10, 196-pound recordbreaker from Oklahoma State is the highest-paid rookie in Bills' history, Barber said.

"I don't think that would be an earthshaking statement on my part," he said.

Miller said he was happy, and his financial consultant, Ernie Green of International Management Group, said the pact was agreeable to both sides.

"We're pleased, and sometimes we think we're rather difficult to please," he said.

Simpson, drafted first in 1969, balked at coming to Buffalo and finally signed a four-year pact for between $300,000 and $350,000. Simpson eventually wound up setting dozens of NFL rushing records, including the single-season mark of 2,003 yards.

Miller holds the Big Eight Conference season and career rushing marks.

A finance major and the No. 2 loan officer for an Oklahoma bank, Miller had asked for most of his money "up front" rather than in deferred payments. He has said he wants to invest the money.

He would not comment on the arrangements for delivery of his salary, but said it was "most bankers' policy to get all the available money you can."

Hallberg Cops N-S Golf

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Gary Hallberg won five of the last seven holes, three with birdies, to defeat Hal Sutton and retain the North-South Amateur Golf championship Saturday.

Hallberg, a 19-year-old from Barrington, Ill., who is a rising junior at Wake Forest University, overcame nagging back muscle spasms to win the 36-hole match with a score of 4-over-par 148.

He finished the morning 18 holes over the 7,051-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club 2-up despite his 76-over 78. Sutton, a 20-year-old junior at Centenary in his hometown of Shreveport, La., birdied the third and fourth holes of the afternoon round to even the match but never won another hole.

Two Scores Win In MHS, CHS Tilts

Two touchdowns and a shutout were the winning ingredients for the Coronado red team and the Monterey blue team in Saturday night's spring football games at the local schools.

Coronado's reds defeated the whites 13-0. Fullback Steve Cox scored on a 2-yard run in the second quarter and Donnie Arterburn kicked the extra point. Fullback Randy Lusk added a 3-yard run in the third quarter for the winners.

CHS coach Jack Quarles credited tailback Loy Lackey (95 yards rushing and an interception) along with defensive tackle Joe Barnes and safety Richard Davis for their play.

At Monterey, the blues downed the reds 14-0 as fullback Tom Bevins scored in each of the first two quarters on runs of 46 and 6 yards respectively.

MHS coach James Odom said George Morris played well both ways at tackle, while Mac Tatum (middle linebacker) and defensive tackles Kelly Grammer and Kent Potts also received recognition.

MHS Bats Improved This Year

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

On first glance, this latest Monterey baseball edition looks and plays the way last year's Plainsmen did.

So the obvious question which pops up is: Why are they still playing this year and weren't playing last year?

"They're better than they were a year ago (when Amarillo High won the bidistrict ...ies in three games) while we're probably not as good," AHS coach Guss Hrncir remarked after Friday's 6-3 clincher for the Plainmen at Lowrey Field.

The biggest difference centers around the Monterey hitters who atoned for their spasmodic hitting in last year's bidistrict series. Regardless of how spasmodic MHS hit the ball last year, the Plainsmen scored enough runs in each game to win (8 in the first game and 5 in each of the next two). But last year's hitting in bidistrict couldn't compare to this year's figures.

CLASS AAAA REGIONAL PAIRINGS

Region I — El Paso Andress, 20-9-1, vs. Monterey, 28-4; Midland Lee, 23-8, vs. Arlington Sam Houston, 21-11.

Region II — Duncanville, 30-2, vs. Dallas Thomas Jefferson, 15-12; Lufkin, 23-3, vs. Waco Richfield, 15-7.

Region III — Houston Bellaire, 32-8, vs. Houston Scarborough, 27-11; Port Arthur Jefferson, 22-4, vs. Pasadena Dobie, 23-11.

Region IV — Austin Anderson, 26-3, vs. Corpus Christi Moody, 25-4; San Antonio South San, 14-7-2, vs. San Antonio Roosevelt, 30-2.

Mike Wooten improved from 3-for-10 to 3-for-8, Jeff Harp from 2-for-8 to 2-for-5, Phil Bruedigam from 2-for-10 to 4-for-7, Ron Reeves from 2-for-11 to 3-for-8, Dana Rieger from 1-for-8 to 2-for-8 and Eric Voyles from 3-for-8 to 4-for-7.

Though some of the figures seem minute, they added up to a .375 team batting mark in two games against the Sandies (24-for-64) compared to last year's .289 mark (24-for-83).

"We've really worked hard on improving our hitting in the last two weeks," MHS coach Bobby Moegle said afterwards. "But I feel we're going to have to play better defensively as we go along."

The going along begins Wednesday at 5 p.m. (CDT), when Monterey opens its re-

Andress outlasted Riverside 2-1 in Saturday morning's third game in the El Paso bidistrict series. Andress coach Gerald Antwine sounded impressed with the Plainsmen and delighted to get a chance to play them.

"Riverside blew us out 9-3 in the first game but we got lucky and our pitching held in there today," the Eagles' coach said. "I understand Monterey's a pretty salty ballclub. You don't win 19 in a row without being pretty salty."

The Monterey-Andress winner advances into the Class AAAA quarter-finals against the winner of the Midland Lee-Arlington Sam Houston regional series. The teams begin their best-of-three playoffs Monday night in Arlington at 8 p.m. A possible doubleheader begins Thursday in Midland at 1:30 p.m.

In Class AAA bidistrict playoff pairings, Borger (9-8) plays its first game at Pecos (19-8) Tuesday at 5 p.m. A possible doubleheader would follow Friday in Borger at 4 p.m.

Meanwhile, District 3-AAA champ Snyder (23-7) entertains 4-AAA winner Burkburnett in Monday's first game at 5 p.m. A possible twin bill would complete the series in Burkburnett Thursday at 1 p.m. Burkburnett defeated Weatherford in a one-game playoff Friday night for the 4-AAA title.

Killanin Denies LA Misled

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, lightly brushed aside charges Saturday night that he had misled Los Angeles, the bidder for the 1984 Olympic Games.

At a press conference at the conclusion of the IOC's 80th session, Killanin was told that Councilman Bod Ronka of Los Angeles had described the IOC as "old, antiquated and too old-fashioned for modern conditions."

"I have no intention of getting in a slanging match with anyone," Killanin said. "My views on city councilors might be equally rude as a city councilor was to me."

Asked again if the IOC had misled the Californian city, Killanin said firmly:

"I refute it."

The IOC provisionally granted Los Angeles the Games but insisted the city signs a contract in line with IOC rules by July 31. Otherwise a new city will be sought to take the Games.

Killanin again insisted that the rules must be observed. Los Angeles has refused to sign a contract thus far because it objects to a three-part agreement involving the city, the IOC and the U.S Olympic Committee, as required by IOC rules.

Meanwhile, the IOC provisionally approved a new plan to hand out some of the millions from television revenue to help athletes around the world and subsidize their travel to the Olympic Games.

Each of the 133 national Olympic committees may ask for $5,000 a year from the IOC's solidarity fund. All they need to do is to have a bank account and to explain how they will spend the money.

The IOC takes one-third of all television revenue at the Games. It has spent some $2.5 million on its solidarity program in the last three years but because of growing television rights it will have more money to hand out in the period ahead.

By the time the Moscow Olympics of 1980 are over there is likely to be some $6 million in the solidarity fund. Los Angeles, which provisionally has been granted the 1984 Games, is counting on television revenue of more than $100 million which probably would mean an additional $12 million or more for helping sportsmen.

From 1980 onwards the IOC will pay for part of athletes' travel expenses and part of their accommodation costs in Olympic village.

The amount available for this still is to be set.

In addition to this aid, the IOC will be ready to hand out big sums to each continent for helping sports on a regional basis.

From 1979, Europe will be entitled to $100,000 a year, Australia to $100,000, Asia to $200,000, Africa to $225,000 and the American continent to $175,000.

The proposals were made in a report by Giulio Oenesti, president of the IOC's solidarity commission.

The IOC has strict rules about the division of television revenue, and this was one of the points which arose in the dispute with Los Angeles in its bid for the 1984 Games.

The IOC takes one-third of the total and divides its share into three equal slices. One-third goes to administration, one-third to the 26 international federations which run Olympic sport, and one-third to the national olympic committees through the solidarity fund.

Antique Car Club Members To Meet

Members of the Crank and Push Club, the South Plains affiliate of the Antique Auto Club of America, will meet at 2 p.m. today at Security National Bank.

Harvey Dunham, host for the May meeting, said that a tour of selected members' garages has been arranged to allow others to examine projects underway there.

Interested persons are welcome to attend, Dunham said, regardless of whether they now own an antique or classic car.

TONNA LOSES TITLE

NICE, France (AP) — The European Boxing Union (EBU) Saturday stripped France's ailing European Middleweight champion Gratien Tonna of his title for failing to meet his British challenger Alan Minter in a title fight that had been scheduled in London May 9.

MOTOROLA IS COMING TO LUBBOCK!

WHY? We'd like to talk with talented Process, Product, Design and R&D Engineers experienced in discrete, IC's or MOS products. Engineering pros who have a keen desire to accept the unique technical challenges that our industry provides will have this opportunity to join one of the strong leadership companies in the semiconductor business. If your credentials are not in the semiconductor field, but you feel your skills might well be applied to this dynamic industry, all the more reason to investigate these valuable career opportunities.

We would also like to tell you more about the beautiful Motorola locations available to you, and their own very special lifestyles. In our Phoenix area locale there is an average of 314 days of sunshine per year, with almost every kind of outdoor recreation, including, surprisingly, nearly snow skiing and beaches! In Austin, Texas, there is a lively business climate, with abundant cultural and leisure activities - and Austin was recently chosen by a national magazine as one of the ten most pleasant places to live in the nation!

You know where...you know why...now find out.

WHEN? Motorola will be in Lubbock on June 16 & 17. We are scheduling interviews for these dates NOW. For telephone pre-screening, and to arrange your appointment, phone us COLLECT in Austin at (512) 928-6868, or in Phoenix at (602) 962-3573, 962-2994 or 962-3126.

If unable to phone, RUSH your resume to: P.O. Box 20903, Dept. OH/12, Phoenix, Arizona 85036.

Baylor, Pan Am To Collide

ARLINGTON (AP) — Heavy rain Saturday night forced the postponement of the Pan American-Baylor game in the NCAA South Central regional baseball tournament.

Pan American and Baylor will meet at 1 p.m. today to decide which will play Mississippi State at 7:30 p.m.

Mississippi State, which lost to Baylor Friday night, knocked Louisiana Tech out of the double-elimination tournament 6-5 earlier Saturday afternoon.

Both Baylor and Pan American are unbeaten in the tournament. This also means that at least one game of the tournament will have to be played Monday.

Senior Buddy Maher went the distance for the Bulldogs, giving up seven hits as he ran his season record to 7-4. Mike Kelly's infield ground-out drove in Larry Pavlou for the winning run in the eighth.

Laws Forbid Possession Of Wildlife

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Dept.

Many people are enjoying the springtime on picnics, while fishing, or just hiking in Texas, but young wildlife can be harmed if picked up or handled by the well-meaning individual.

The best reason to leave wildlife alone is that state laws govern the possession, sale or confinement of both game and nongame animals, birds and endangered species such as the horned toad.

Capturing young wilflife in the wild results in problems for both the person and the Parks & Wildlife Department.

Many times, serious, unexpected problems arise from unqualified attempts to domesticate creatures which nature intended to be wild and free. Most people attempting to pen or confine these young of the wild do so with a sense of compassion. In reality, the parents are most likely nearby watching as you handle or even injure their young. Some wild parents will not accept their offspring back if human scent is left on them.

Opportunities for young wildlife to learn to survive in the out-of-doors is lost if not taught by their natural parents. These birds and animals fail to learn their natural enemies and how to defend themselves.

Both "well-meaning" adults and children are often bitten by wild "pets" in captivity and usually, the children get the worse end of the deal. Some wild animals and birds carry harmful or deadly diseases such as virus, ticks, tetanus, or tularemia which can be transferred to humans or domestic pets.

Information about what to do with wildlife "pets" is available by contacting your nearest game warden or any P&WD office.

MARY L. WINS

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — W.A. Wood's Mary L. made Monmouth Park's Regret Handicap her fourth consecutive win as she outdueled six fillies and mares to take the $17,791 winner's purse Saturday.

TSU Captures NAIA Team Cinder Crown

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Texas Southern University captured its fourth team title and Frank Gross of Adams State dominated the weight events to be named the outstanding performer of the meet as the NAIA Track and Field Championships ended Saturday.

Texas Southern won the 440-yard relay and had 1-2 finishes in the 400-meter and 200-meter dashes to finish with 69 points, far outdistancing second-place Adams State with 42. Host Abilene Christian was third with 37.

Gross set a shot put record with a heave of 63-1 and finished second in the hammer throw to earn 28 points. Friday, the senior from Colorado Springs, Colo., set a discus record of 198-5, although he apologized later for not exceeding 200 feet.

"There's no excuse for not doing better than I did yesterday," he said. "The conditions were good, but I was too scared I would throw out of bounds."

Other record-breaking performances were by Billy Olson of Abilene Christian in the pole vault at 16-7 and Tom Antezak of Wisconsin-LaCrosse in the marathon with a time of 2:22:26.49. Ray Fredericksen of Wisconsin-Parkside was second in the marathon with a 2:25:43.88.

Vic White of Eastern Washington won the high jump at 7-0 and took the triple jump with a 50-4¼ mark. Other double winners were Gary Henry of Pembroke State, N.C., in the 5,000 meters with a 14:23.25 time to go with his 10,000-meter victory Thursday; and James McCraney of Southern-Baton Rouge, La., who won the 400-intermediate hurdles in 52.12 after taking the 110-meter high hurdles Friday in 13.70.

Sutton Wins 5000 Meters

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (Special)—Larry Sims of South Plains College clocked 14:42.1 to win the 5000-meter run at the National Junior College Track and Field Meet Saturday and gain all-America recognition.

SPC's Larry Sutton had won the long jump Friday and all-America honors. Previously, the Texans had had only one track performer make all-America.

South Plains scored 24 points to finish eighth in the meet that included representatives of over 100 teams. The point total is the highest the school has achieved in the meet.

SOUTH PLAINS RESULTS

Mayberry Leads As Toronto Streaks Past NY

By The Associated Press

John Mayberry drove in three runs, two with a fourth-inning homer, and the Toronto Blue Jays broke open a 4-4 deadlock with a six-run sixth inning to defeat the New York Yankees 10-8 Saturday for Dave Lemanczyk's first victory after seven defeats.

The Blue Jays had four hits, a walk and a hit batter and took advantage of three New York errors in the big sixth inning as they sent 10 men to the plate, with Roy Howell making the first and last outs.

Lemanczyk checked the Yankees on 12 hits before needing help from Tom Murphy in New York's three-run ninth. Lemanczyk left after Thurman Munson's run-scoring double and Murphy came on to get the final three outs, although he yielded a home run to Graig Nettles. Ken Clay, 0-2 was the loser.

A's 4, CHISOX 3

Wayne Gross led off the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday with his fourth home run of the season, giving Oakland a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox and snapping the A's 4-game losing streak.

PIRATES 6, EXPOS 0

Willie Stargell slammed two home runs, driving in five runs, and Bert Blyleven fired a three-hitter to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The homer gave Stargell a career total of 407 gome runs, tying him with Duke Snider for eighth place on the National League's all-time list.

O's 2, INDIANS 1

Jim Palmer, with eighth-inning relief from Don Stanhouse, posted his first victory since April 29 and Lee May and Rich Dauer delivered run-scoring singles in the second inning to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 2-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

BOSOX 6, TIGERS 5

Butch Hobson snapped a 5-5 tie with a run-scoring single in the ninth inning to give the Boston Red Sox a rain-delayed 6-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

ASTROS 13, BRAVES 0

Jose Cruz drove in 6 runs and seldom-used Dennis Walling added 3 more as J.R. Richard pitched a four-hitter, leading Houston over Atlanta.

Cruz clubbed run-scoring singles in the first and third innings and slammed a 2-run homer in the sixth. He tied the Astro club record for RBI in one game in the seventh when he drove in two more runs with a line single to right field.

PHILLIES 9, METS 4

Dave Johnson's tie-brea ing two-run pinch single highlighted a five-run 11th inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-4 victory over the New York Mets.

DODGERS 3, GIANTS 2

Relief pitcher Randy Moffitt hit Bill Russell with his first pitch with the bases loaded to break a tie in the ninth inning and give Los Angeles a 3-2 victory over San Francisco.

BREWERS 6, ANGELS 4

Gorman Thomas' RBI double triggered a 5-run fifth inning and the Mikwaukee Brewers held on to defeat the California Angels.

The Brewers took a 5-1 lead after five innings, helping Bill Travers, 1-1, gain his first victory since last Aug. 9.

CUBS 10, CARDS 2

Dave Kingman and Dave Rader slammed 2-run homers to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 10-2 victory that sent the slump-ridden St. Louis Cardinals reeling to their ninth consecutive defeat.

REDS 10, PADRES 6

George Foster's 2-out, bases-loaded triple off Rollie Fingers in the eighth inning powered the Cincinnati Reds to a come-from-behind 10-6 victory over the San Diego Padres Saturday night.

Trailing 6-4, the Reds loaded the bases in the eighth against Fingers when Dave Concepcion tripled, Dave Collins walked and stole second and, with one out, Pete Rose walked.

ROYALS 6, TWINS 3

Hal McRae drove in 2 runs for the Royals with a pair of singles as Kansas City wiped out an early Twins' lead.

Andretti Claims Pole In Belgian Grand Prix

READY TO GO—Race driver Mario Andretti is at the wheel of his JPS Lotus and waiting for the start of Saturday's time trials at the Zolder race track in Brussels, Belgium. Andretti posted the best time in the session, which preceded today's running of the Belgian Grand Prix. (AP Laserphoto)

ZOLDER, Belgium (AP) — Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., in a new JPS-Lotus 79, roared into the pole position Saturday for today's Belgian Grand Prix, the sixth stop toward the world drivers championship.

After abandoning the idea of making a supersonic round trip to Indianapolis for qualifying Saturday in the Indy 500, Andretti set a searing track record in the final hour of qualifying here Saturday, following up his performance on Friday, when he posted the fastest times of both practice sessions.

His pole time for the 2.648-mile circuit was 1 minute, 20.90 seconds, an average speed of 117.847 miles an hour, almost one second faster than Argentina's Carlos Reutemann in a Ferrari.

Andretti's achievement was a replay of 1977, when he won the pole here — more than a second ahead of the field — but was knocked out of the race in a first-lap collision.

Andretti's pole time was more than 3½ seconds faster than his 1977 time of of 1:24.64, but much of the improvement was due to track resurfacing.

On the second row of the grid for the 70-lap, 185.38-mile race were reigning world champion Nikki Lauda of Austria in a Brabham-Alfa and Canadian rookie Gilles Villeneuve in the second Ferrari.

The other top qualifiers, on the third row of the grid, were South African Jody Scheckter in the Wolf WR5 and former world champion James Hunt of Britain in a McLaren.

Andretti and Reutemann are tied for second in the world championship standings this year with 18 points each. France's Patrick Depailler is the leader with 23 points after his victory in the last race at Monaco.

Depailler only could qualify his Tyrrell 13th here, having trouble with suspension settings throughout practice.

Two drivers were planning to race after getting injections of pain killers for injuries.

Australian Alan Jones, 11th fastest, suffered a severe bruise to his right arm in an accident in practice Saturday morning. Italian rookie Bruno Giacomelli, 21st in a back-up team McLaren, sprained a wrist in a race last week, and an ankle here when he slipped in pit lane.

Brett Lunger of Wilmington, Del., just edged into the starting field, qualifying in the 24th and last position after only being allowed to join the qualifying Saturday morning when another driver dropped out.

Race Drives, Fans Face Doubleheader

Friday night rains which forced cancellation of auto racing programs at Lubbock's two tracks may mean a bonus today for fans and drivers as well.

Both tracks rescheduled their races for today. Lubbock Speedway for 2 p.m. and Lubbock Speed Bowl for 8 p.m.

Fans can take in both shows and see almost the entire spectrum of short-track racing in this part of the country.

Mike Cary, manager of Lubbock Speedway on south U.S. 87, is anticipating an expanded field as a result of the rainout. "Our running Sunday will get around a conflict with the track at Odessa and should bring in a number of cars from that area as well as from Amarillo and Hereford," Cary said.

Late model stock cars top the card at the paved raceway, which attracts top Southwestern drivers in that class. J.D. Hughes of Sundown will field a new "Sundown Sizzler" Camaro, replacing one he demolished in an early season crash at Amarillo.

Hughes practiced with the car at the speedway last week and reports are that it appears to be a top challenger. Also on the card are street stocks and Volkswagens for a 15-race program.

At Lubbock Speed Bowl southeast of Idalou a field of supermodifieds from Amarillo augmented by several Lubbock sprint and supermodified cars will test the dirt surface for the first time this season.

The quarter-mile oval, built last year, has played host to fields of modified stock cars and street stocks since its inception, adding Volkswagens to the format this year.

In the premier modified stock class, Charlie Whorton has set the early season pace, leading defending champ Jimmy Bilbrey and last year's second runner, Larry Johnson. The latter duo has been battling mechanical problems and may give Whorton a battle if the pieces fall into place.

Admission for either program is $3 for adults, with children 6 to 12 admitted for $1.

The speed bowl this afternoon will host the finals of a two-day tractor pulling contest which features exotic specially built machines as well as tractors whose owners keep them in the fields weekdays and pit them against other stock farm machines on weekends. Purses for the two-day West Texas meet total $5,000.

Cuevas Triumphs In First Round

LOS ANGELES (AP) — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Jose "Pipino" Cuevas mounted a whirlwind attack and stopped challenger Billy Backus, a former champion, in one round as the challenger went back to his corner with both eyes nearly closed and a cut under the right one.

Dr. Roger Thill decided Backus was so badly hurt in the three minutes of action that he should not continue.

Four Open Spots Await HCC Leaders

The surviving linksmen will advance to the sectional qualifying June 5 in Arlington. Sectional survivors earn the right to compete in the U.S. Open championship June 15-18 in Denver's Cherry Hills C.C.

The local competition begins Monday at 9 a.m. Players will tee off on the first and tenth holes from 9 through 10 a.m., on the morning round. The afternoon round begins at 1 p.m.

An impressive list of area golfers is entered including local golfers John Farquhar, Mark Jarrett, Tom Wilson and Steve Long. Midland golf pros George Clark (Midland Coutry Club) and Jerry Mobley (Ranchland Hills CC) and prominent Midland amateur Randy Geiselman also will compete at Hillcrest.

While top players compete for sectional bids to the National Open tourney, many scratch golfers will hit the area courses during the busy Memorial Day weekend. Four area partnerships are scheduled for the area in the weekend beginning with the Sam Hameed Memorial Tourney May 26-28 at the Levelland Country Club.

Reese Air Force Base will host its annual three-day event Saturday through Monday at the same time the Jim Rallis Memorial Partnership is played on the Clovis Municipal golf course. The Lamesa Country Club's two-day partnership will be held Saturday and Sunday.

Schoolboys Hurl Double No-Hitter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Central High School's Joe Starosta pitched a no-hitter and won 1-0 over Rick Ford, who pitched a no-hitter for Germantown High and lost.

The margin of difference Friday was an error in the first double no-hitter local officials could remember. The win gave Central the Public League Division B title.

Central's Jeff Chapman walked in the second inning and went to third on a sacrifice bunt. Germantown's third baseman then mishandled a ground ball, Chapman scored and Starosta took it from there.

TIM LESLIE

LCC Trio Picked On All-Area II Nine

Champion William Carey College and runner-up Lubbock Christian College dominated the all-Area II baseball team, supplying seven of the 15 members of the squad announced here Saturday.

The Chaparrals, who finished No. 9 in the final poll and lost only to Carey in the area tournament which wound up Friday, landed centerfielder Darius Copley, first baseman Tim Leslie and pitcher Oscar Acosta.

It was the second straight year for Copley to make the team and he was a first-team all-America selection a year ago.

Each of the other two Area II Tournament teams, Mesa State and St. Mary's, placed one man on the squad—Jamie Hamilton of Mesa as a utility infielder and Danny Heep of St. Mary's as an outfielder.

Grand Canyon was the only other team with more than one selectee on the team, as the Antelopes landed designated hitter Bob Bill and outfielder Dale Milton.

Other District 8 performers making the team include pitcher Moose Cook of Dallas Baptist and third baseman Keith Spreckles of Texas Wesleyan.

Six seniors, four juniors, four sophomores and a freshman made the team. Acosta was the frosh, finishing with a 10-4 record, striking out 91 men in 98 1/3 innings, allowing only 81 hits and 49 walks.

Leslie cracked the 100-hit barrier in the area tournament, only the second Chaparral in history to achieve that feat. He hit .418 with 17 doubles, two triples, 21 homers and 81 RBIs.

FIRST TEAM ALL-AREA II

FIRST BASE — Tim Leslie, LCC (Soph, .418).

SECOND BASE — Ricky McMullen, William Carey (Soph, .437, 77 hits, 1 HR, 37 RBI).

THIRD BASE — Keith Spreckles, Texas Wesleyan (Soph, .302, 13 doubles, 5 HRs, 50 stolen bases in 57 attempts in only 40 games).

SHORTSTOP — Mike Wood, Southern University of Baton Rouge, La. (Jr., .400).

PITCHERS — Acosta, Lubbock Christian (Frosh, 10-4, 2.14 ERA); Moose Cook, Dallas Baptist (Sr., R, 10-2, 76 strikeouts in 78 1/3 innings, 1.52 ERA); Ricky Cook, William Carey (Sr., R, 11-1, 53 hits, 46 strikeouts in 78 innings, 1.21 ERA).

Copley, who stole 45 bases in 49 attempts, hit .353 with 15 doubles, four triples, five homers and 39 RBIs.

Browns Conduct Spring Workout

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Brian Sipe, coming back from shoulder and elbow injuries that sidelined him for the entire second half of last season, says he is more relaxed than ever before.

"I feel like I'm entering Phase II of my career, that now I can be myself and become the best football player possible, and by doing so, help the team the most," Sipe said.

Offensive tackle Barry Darrow, among the missing when the veterans went through their physical examinations Thursday, contacted General Manager Peter Hadhazy and said he will be on hand next week when the Browns' coaches hold a quarterback "school" Monday through Thursday.

The only other returning regular who is not taking part in the mini-camp is defensive tackle Jerry Sherk, who underwent knee surgery four months ago. The Browns said Sherk is making good progress and hopes to be ready for the season opener, Sept. 3.

Sipe sounded an optimistic note Friday.

"I took offense at people who said last year that we were quitters. It's wasn't true," the bearded veteran said. "This is a team that has character, a lot of character.

"I don't promise a Super Bowl ring, or even that we'll make the playoffs, but I do know that if we play up to our capabilities we will make it to the playoffs.

"For now, I just want to say we are going to be better," Sipe added.

The players had workouts Friday and Saturday and have another session set for Sunday morning.

Among those participating in the training camp are Ozzie Newsome, a receiver from Alabama picked in the first round of the player draft earlier this month, and linebacker Robert Jackson, the Browns' No. 1 choice a year ago. Jackson suffered a knee injury that required surgery and kept him from playing in 1977.

Carner's 66 Produces Lead In Women's Golf

JAMESBURG, N.J. — JoAnne Carner fired a blistering 5-under-par 66 Saturday to take a 2-stroke lead over Pat Bradley after two rounds of the $100,000 LPGA Classic at Forest Gate Country Club.

Mrs. Carner shot an even-par 71 in Friday's first round for a two-round total of 137. The eight-year veteran recored seven birdies for a new course record.

"My short-iron game was the difference," said Mrs. Carner. "I hit three shots from the fairways that I thought had a chance to go in the hole."

Mrs. Carner bogeyed the first hole after landing in the bunker on her second shot, but then birdied the fourth, sixth, eight and ninth holes to make the turn in 3-under-par 33 over the 6,056-yard course.

"On the fourth hole, I hit a wedge within two feet of the hole that almost went in. The same thing happened on the sixth," she said. "On No. 8, I bounced a 7-iron off the pin and it stopped three feet away."

On the par-5, 457-yard ninth hole, Mrs. Carner hit a 3-iron to the fringe of the green on her second shot and chipped to within three feet and tapped in for a birdie.

"I took a lesson from Sam Snead before last week's tournament on Baltimore and it really helped me," said Mrs. Carner. "I was bringing my left elbow in too close and he corrected it. The most immediate effect has been on my short-iron game."

Mrs. Carner was forced to scramble for par on the 18th after putting her drive into a fairway bunker. She played a 3-iron over a tree and then chipped to within three feet where she salavaged par 4.

"A little kid moved as I began my swing. I couldn't stop and I snapped my drive," she said. "I had a bad lie in the bunker. It was below and to the backside. When I got onto the green, I just eased the ball in."

Miss Bradley, who was tied with Nancy Lopez and Dot Germain following the first round, fired a 1-under-par 70 for sole possesion of second place at 139.

Miss Lopez, winner of last week's Greater Baltimore Classic and the tour's leading money-winner, shot an even-par 71. She tied with Sally Little, 70-70, for third place at 140. Miss Germain is in fourth place, after shooting a 1-over 72 for a 141 total.

Sandra Post, Beth Stone, Pennie Pulz and Jane Blalock were tied at even-par 142.

Vilas Advances In German Open

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Wojtek Fibak of Poland ousted Briton Buster Mottram and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina won by default over injured Manuel Orantes Saturday for berths in the finals of the German Open Tennis Tournament.

In women's competition, top-seeded Mima Jausovic of Yugoslavia overcame Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 3-6, 6-1 and will face Virginia Ruzici of Romania in Sunday's finals.

Ruzici easily defeated Sylvia Hanika of West Germany — a surprise winner Friday over fourth-seeded Kathy May of the United States — 6-3, 6-0 in her semifinal match.

Bouton's Return Successful

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Jim Bouton's debut with the Savannah Braves of the Southern League Friday night was a success and the 39-year-old former major leaguer said he'll continue to pitch "until someone tells me I'm through."

Bouton, the former New York Yankee ace, last pitched in the majors in 1970, then wrote the best-selling book, "Ball Four," and worked as a television sportscaster for five years before quitting to return again to professional baseball in 1977.

He failed a year ago, recording a 0-6 record with Knoxville of the same Class AA Southern Leage before being released and drifting off to Mexico and Portland in quest of his dream.

He sold his New Jersey home earlier this year for a smaller one and said that, if necessary, "I'll sell this one for a smaller one and if I have to, I'll live in a trailer.".

Financially, Bouton said he can afford to continue for one more summer at his present salary. "I'm alright financially now, but I don't think I can afford a yacht."

Bouton said he is playing "because I like baseball. I think I can still play. Before you deride my answer, remember that besides the Yankees, I played for the Ridgewood Barons.

WT Finishes Second In MVC Track Meet

MACOMB, Ill. (AP) — Southern Illinois won its fourth straight Missouri Valley Conference track championship Saturday, outdistancing runner-up West Texas State 182 points to 125.

The Salukis were led by sprinter Mike Kee who swept the 100-and 200-meter dashes for the third consecutive year. The junior from Boston won the 100 in 10.35 and the 200 in 21.24, both times being wind aided.

The only other double winner was West Texas State's Joseph Kemei who won the 1,500-meter run in 3:49.83 and the 5,000 in 14:50.22. His victory in the 5,000 wrapped up second place for the Buffaloes who scored 122 of their total points on the final day.

Wichita State placed third with 109 points, followed by Indiana State 65, New Mexico State 46, Drake 44, Bradley 14, and Tulsa 2.

Four meet records were set Friday but none Saturday.

The record setters were Bob Roggy of Southern Illinois with 274 feet, 7 inches in the javelin; John Marks, Southern Illinois, 61-5 in the shot put; Don DuVall, Wichita State, 25-7½ in the long jump, and Mike Bisase, Southern Illinois, who won his preliminary 800 meter heat in 1:49.96. Bisase ran 1,500- and 800-meters Saturday and finished sixth in 800 after a second place finish in the 1,500.

Spaniard Ups Lead At London Tourney

LONDON (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain increased his lead to 7 strokes after the third round of the an international golf tournament at the RAC Club Saturday.

Ballesteros, leading money winner in Europe for the past two years, once again showed his consistency by scoring his third consecutive 4-under-par 67.

That put him at 201 after the three rounds, 7 strokes ahead of a bevy of challengers.

Spaniard Francisco Abreu moved back among the challengers with a 67 Saturday after his disastorous 74 Friday, and he is now level with Dale Hayes of South Africa and Britons Martin Foster, Nick Faldo and John Morgan for a 54-hole total of 208.

Hayes also remained remarkably consistent with a second successive 69, while Foster scored a 70 and Faldo and Morgan slipped back with par 71s.

Peter Dawson of Great Britain scored a fine 66, just 1 shot over the course record, for his sixth position on 209.

But other Britons Carl Mason and Peter Townsend faded.

Mason shot a 1-over-par 72.

Wood Asks To Coach Past Retirement Time

"The thing was poorly handled," Chastain said. "Gordon told us that he was representing all teachers. He didn't want us to make an exception just for him."

But his plea and his credentials had no positive effect until recently. Sources indicated that school superintendent Howard Murchison was the principal reason.

"I think he is jealous of Gordon because Gordon's been so successful," one person said. "It seems like he's against anything that's successful, unless he thought of it. As far as I can tell, he doesn't seem to be very people-oriented."

Murchison was at Childress for five years, at Marble Falls for three as superintendent, and is in his second year at Brownwood. He told the Avalanche-Journal that he did "not want to deal with newspapers."

During the controversy, Wood received some offers to coach elsewhere, and "a couple of them were pretty good, but I didn't consider them too seriously." It appears now that he will be offered another contract and continue coaching at Brownwood, although he probably won't receive a multi-year pact.

A source that declined to be identified said, "The community as a whole holds him (Wood) in high esteem. He has a good record and high morals and is a good Christian man.

"Besides," the person added, "I don't think anybody would have the nerve to try and get rid of him. He's got some people that would go to bat for him that can really draw blood."

Wood wants to coach "three to five" more years before leaving the profession. He is confident that he will be able to and confident that he will do it in Brownwood.

"I plan to retire here and stay here," he said. "There is no doubt that I have the support of this town. There is no doubt in my mind, nor in the minds of the board members, that I'm going to coach some more."

Snyder Leads All-League

SNYDER (Special)— District 3-AAA champion Snyder placed six players, including the newcomer and player of the year, on the loop's elite squad, announced Saturday.

Tracy Witherspoon, a senior on the Snyder club, hit .450 and was named the loop's MVP, while teammate Richard Crayton (.400) garned the newcomer honor.

Also honored from Snyder were outfielder Alvin Ollison (.433), infielder Dray Sikes (.375), pitcher Mitch Mackey (5-1, 1.84) and utility man Sid Everton (.388).

Outfield—David Harrell, sr., Brownfield, .338; Alvin Ollison, sr., Snyder, .433; Mark Hughes, sr., Lamesa, .342; Freddie Martinez, jr., Lamesa, .250.
Catcher—Sonny Whitaker, sr., Lamesa, .333.
Utility—Sid Everton, jr., Snyder, .388.
Pitcher—Mitch Mackey, jr., Snyder, 5-1, 1.84; Roy Lee Tealer, jr., Brownfield, 3-3, 3.88; Albert Martinez, jr., Lamesa, 3-8, 1.56.
Newcomer of the year— Richard Crayton, jr., Snyder, .400.
Coach of the year— Vernon Paul, Brownfield.

Phenix Signs With Jackets

BROWNWOOD (Special) — Ronnie Phenix, a former Texas Tech and Estacado High School basketballer, has become the lastest cager to sign with the Howard Payne University Yellow Jackets.

Phenix, a 6-7 forward who garnered all-city honors as a Matador, played for Santa Monica Junior College in California last year, averaging 20 points and 15 rebounds.

"Ronnie is a good shooter who possess the ability to play both inside and outside," said HPU assistant coach Jim Hamilton, a former aide at Tech. "He has the potential to be an outstanding player at both ends of the floor."

Hamilton coached Phenix during his freshman season at Tech.

Along with being named on the all-city team, Phenix copped all-district, all-South Plains and second team all-state honors.

Complicated Process Required To Raise Smallmouth Bass

AUSTIN (Special) — When Parks & Wildlife Department fisheries workers release several thousand smallmouth bass fingerlings into a reservoir, it represents the last step in a complicated process.

Smallmouth bass, unlike their largemouth cousins, have to be raised almost "by hand" under the vigilant eyes of hatchery personnel.

"Smallmouths won't spawn on anything but a rocky surface," said biologist Pat Hutson of San Marcos, who heads up the state's smallmouth rearing program. "So we have to sink artificial spawning beds in the hatchery ponds for them to use."

From the time a male smallmouth claims the nest until the fry finally are scooped out of the built-in net beneath the rocks 10 days later, the nests have to be checked daily—and there are 230 boxes in San Marcos hatchery ponds.

But the department's fisheries division chief, Bob Kemp, believes they're worth it. "I think the smallmouth, once it gets started, will reproduce in lakes and streams throughout Texas and be a super new gamefish."

Here's how the smallmouth fry are raised to fingerling size for stocking. The brood fish, mostly in the 1-1½-pound range, are paired and released in hatchery ponds into which special 3x3-foot spawning boxes have been placed. Each one-acre pond contains 8-16 boxes.

A male bass claims a nest and begins sweeping the rocks clean of silt—while driving off intruding fish. Then he rounds up a female and escorts her to the nest, where she lays as many as 10,000 eggs in about an hour. The male then fertilizes the eggs and begins his week-long vigil over the box.

Upon hatching, the tiny fry disappear beneath the rocks and remain in hiding for three days, when they begin to leave the nest and scatter.

The male bass, relieved of his guard duties, also leaves at that time.

Hatchery personnel have to monitor the hatching times carefully in order to interrupt this process. At the correct time, they lift the boxes while the fry are still hiding among the rocks. This catches the finy fish in a screen below the rocks, allowing workers to wash them into a pan.

The fry then are carried to a rearing pond where yet another step is taken to assure their protection. They are put into screened cages which keep them confined and protected while they are still living on the food sacs with which they are born. In two or three days, they swim to the surface, signaling that it's time to release them into the pond.

The fry scatter along the shoreline by the thousands. In the wild, they are easy prey for a variety of predators, but with current hatchery techniques, a good survival ratio usually is possible, Hutson said.

Once dispersed in the fertilized rearing ponds, the fry grow rapidly, reaching 1½ inches in only 20 days. Then the ponds are drained and the fry are ready for shipment and stocking.

"We get about 9,000-10,000 eggs per box for each spawn," Hutson estimated. "And if we're lucky, we can get four spawns per year from each pair of bass."

That's why, barring unforeseen disaster, Hutson thinks his crews will be able to meet the 1978 goal of 1.7 million fingerlings.

"And, another advantage is that we can use the same brood fish year after year," Hutson pointed out.

Despite the time-consuming process, fisheries experts feel that once over the hump of establishing breeding populations around the state, a self-perpetuating fishery of the scrappy fish will provide sport for future generations.

Boat Mishaps Abound; Safety Pointers Noted

How well a person handles an emergency aboard a boat may mean the difference in whether he survives a boating accident.

Anyone can have an accident and the most common are falling overboard, capsizing, taking on water during squalls, collisions and fires.

When a person falls overboard, swing the stern quickly away from the person in the water if the boat is underway. If he is close to the boat, stop the motor so he won't get cut by the propeller. Even though he can swim, throw him a life preserver, extend him a paddle or throw him a line.

If your boat capsizes, stay with it, don't try to swim to shore unless there is good reason to do so. Modern boats will hold up passengers even when full of water. Remember, it is easier to spot a large boat than a swimmer's head.

Wear a life preserver. Coolers, gas cans and water containers can be used to help stay afloat. Towels and extra clothing can be used to protect against sun and wind. Paddles can be used to wave for rescue, to rig shelters, or to reach people in distress.

Sudden storms and squalls are common in Texas and everyone should put on a life preserver before a storm hits. Get in the bottom of the boat and stay low. Secure all moveable objects and bail out water as fast as possible. Head for shore or the lee side of an island when possible. Use the motor to head the boat into the wind when moving ahead.

Collisions on a lake are more common than most boaters realize. When the hull is rammed, stop or reduce speed immediately. Stuff anything available—blankets, bedding, cushions— into the opening to stop the flow of water.

If a fire breaks out aboard your boat, stop at once to keep from fanning the flames. If the burning object is portable, try to get it over the side without burning your hands or igniting your clothing. When the fire is in a confined space, close all hatches, vents or ports to keep oxygen from feeding the fire.

Panic also should be included in any list of accident causes, as it can be the biggest killer. Panic-stricken people cannot think, act instinctively, and many times can endanger the lives of everyone on board.

Drought Hurts Deer Prospects

AUSTIN (Special)—A stubborn drought which has gripped parts of South Texas for two years may depress this year's white-tailed deer fawn crop, according to Parks & Wildlife Department biologists.

The most severely arid region appears to be centered around Uvalde, Kinney, Maverick and Zavala counties, according to biologist Jerry Cooke of Pearsall.

Farther south, the popular deer-hunting counties of Webb and Zapata also are dry, Cooke said, but there has been enough rainfall to sustain the brush species which comprise most of the deer food in that area.

On the other hand, Cooke said the eastern part of South Texas—east of SH 281—is in much better shape after spring rains.

Cooke said hunters this fall may see more spike bucks or some sub-par racks in much of South Texas, along with fewer yearling deer.

Fielding Harwell, a biologist assigned to the P&WD statewide deer harvest survey, said the current drought in South Texas is the worst in that area since 1971, when dry conditions caused some local deer die-offs.

Fishing License Check Suggested

While packing a picnic lunch and arranging the fishing gear in the camper, be sure to check the expiration date on your fishing license.

If you bought your license on June 1, 1977 or before, you may need a new license. If you bought it after that date, your license will be good until Aug. 31.

Reason for such double-checking is that 1977-78 was the first year of a changeover to a system based on Aug. 31 expiration. Previously, the licenses expired a year from date of purchase.

A resident fishing license is $4.50 and is required of all persons fishing in Texas, with these exceptions: persons under 17 or over 65, fishing in private waters; fishing in county of resjdence with trotline, throwline or ordinary pole and line having no reeling or winding device; or holding a valid commercial fishing license or holder of an exempt license ($1.25) available to disabled veterans or the blind.

An annual nonresident fishing license is $10.50 and a five-day nonresident permit is $4.50.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake—A catfish weighing 9 pounds was attracted by a night crawler worm near the bridge. Catfishing is active in most areas of the lake. Crappie action is picking up again and this time the crappie are bigger. Large perch are going for worms, flies and yellow corn. Carp fishing has been especially good with many of the fish tipping the scales at 10 and 12 pounds. The lake is in good condition, the water temperature is 67 degrees. Barnie Greenfield at the concession says the time is near for the spawning to begin.

Baylor Lake—Fishing has been fair. Some smaller bass have been caught, but the water is still too cool for more activity. Several nice crappie and channel catfish have been caught out of nearby Old Lake Childress. Channel catfishing has been the best action.

Greenbelt Lake—Fishing has been generally good for most species of fish with white crappie, largemouth bass and white bass improving as warmer spring weather arrives. Several channel and blue catfish have been caught during the past weeks. Crappie have not spawned; the water temperature is still too cool. Some walleye have been caught and a few northern pike.

Lake McClellan—Most species, except bass, are being caught. Several channel catfish from 5-6 pounds were caught last week. Water temperature is near 65 degrees.

Mackenzie Lake—Several channel catfish in the 5-6-pound class were caught along with some nice crappie. Some largemouth bass to 1½ pounds are biting. Several walleye tipped the scales at 3 pounds. One angler caught two trout with other reports of trout being caught. Water temperature is holding at 66 degrees at a depth of 6 feet.

Oak Creek Lake—Jack Clayton of Sweetwater along with Jack Hazard found the hour before sundown a great time to fish; during that time they landed five bass ranging in weight from 4 pounds to 5 pounds 9 ounces. The bluecat that were stocked two years ago are showing good rate of growth; some of the blues are hitting 2 pounds.

White River Lake—Lake resident Randy Freudenrich landed a 6-pound 2-ounce bass; the lunker was attracted by a minnow on the river side of the lake. Jean Hall of Lubbock caught a catfish weighing 8 pounds 6 ounces, usinga minnow near the cliff area. James Couch of Ralls used a black Hellbender close to the island to hook a 5-pound 3-ounce bass. Eloise Yeager at the marina reports the lake is smooth as glass most mornings. Water is 65 degrees at 15 feet, and the lake is in excellent condition.

Maegle Reminded Daily Of Tackle In Cotton Bowl

HOUSTON (AP) — Dick Maegle can tell almost immediately after the conversation starts that he's about to hear another "eye-witness" account of New Year's Day in the 1954 Cotton Bowl when Alabama's Tommy Lewis came off the bench to tackle Maegle in mid-touchdown run.

"They always say 'Oh yeah, I was sitting right behind the Alabama bench," Maegle laughs. "Well, I must have talked to the entire east side of the stadium in the past 20 years because everyone seems to have been sitting right behind the bench."

Maegle, younger brother of Monterey High School coach Bobby Moegle, has had plenty of opportunity to talk about being tackled by Lewis in the 20 years he's spent operating a motel across the street from Rice Stadium where he gained all-America stardom.

"It's good to be remembered and it is a good topic of conversation to get started talking," Maegle said. "But I'm always amazed at how many people were crowded into that section."

Lewis, who scored once for the Crimson Tide in a 28-6 loss, wrote himself into college football history with his action and took Maegle with him.

"Being in the hotel business you meet a lot of people in town on business or going to a football game and when they find out I'm the guy who got tackled, they always want to talk about it," said Maegle.

Maegle might prefer after all these years to talk about some of his other accomplishments, like his single game bowl rushing record that still stands, or his performance against Baylor that allowed the Owls to reach the Cotton Bowl.

But all they want to hear about is the Lewis tackle, and Maegle patiently complies.

"To this day I can't believe he didn't know what he was doing," Maegle said. "All through your career you are taught that football is a disciplined game. So how can a man be so regimented throughout his career and then in the biggest game of his career lose his cool and do something like that."

Maegle admitted he once thought of making a similar tackle during his pro career with the San Francisco 49ers when Chicago runningback Willie Gallimore ran past him on the bench.

"He was doing one of his fancy deals in front of our bench but I just couldn't see myself doing it," Maegle said.

Maegle and Lewis' paths have crossed several times over the years since their first meeting in the Cotton Bowl.

We're not what you'd call buddy-buddy, but we've talked several times," Maegle said of Lewis, who later played in the Canadian Football League.

"He (Lewis) told me they ribbed him about the incident in Canada," Maegle said. "They told him he wouldn't have any trouble getting accustomed to 12-man football."

Long Jumpers Lose Record On Technicality

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two Maryland long jumpers smashed the oldest standing record of the 102-year-old IC4A Track and Field Championships Saturday, but only one will get a line in the record book because of an inoperable wind gauge.

Bob Calhoun, a 21-year-old junior, finished first in the long jump with a leap of 26 feet, 3 inches, to win the event, and break the 27-year-old record of Meredith Gourdine of Cornell, now a millionaire New Jersey industrialist.

But Calhoun does not get credit for the record because when he jumped the wind gauge at the end of the runway was not operative. So, defending champion Dennis Ivory, who jumped 26-½ and finished second, is credited with shattering the mark of Gourdine.

What it added up to, was 18 points for the Terrapins and a total of 30 for the early lead in the two-day meet. Maryland picked up 10 points when Ian Pyka successfully defended his shot put title with a throw of 60 feet, 9¼ inches.

After the Calhoun-Ivory long jump confrontation, there was an even longer debate among IC4A officials on whether Calhoun's mark should count as the record as well as the winning jump. Finally, Ray Davis, the referee of field events, made a statement.

"You can't say that Calhoun's best jump was wind aided, because there wasn't any reading," Davis said. "And therefore, there can be no record. The NCAA rules say that there should be a wind gauge at the edge of the track."

Tully Awaits Decision On Pole Vault Mark

The 21-year-old UCLA senior soared 18 feet, 8¾ inches at the Pacific-8 Conference Track and Field Championships, breaking the previous mark of 18-8¼ set in 1976 by Dave Roberts at Eugene.

"Maybe they won't count the world record; I just don't know," said Tully, who holds the world indoor mark of 18-5¼. "I don't know why it shouldn't count."

Tully broke the record on his first attempt at that height Friday "and I didn't touch the bar."

However, a trailing wind blew the bar off the support.

When officials remeasured the bar, the tape read 18-8 instead of the 18-8¾ it had measured before the vault. Under international rules, only a confirmed measurement before the vault is needed to submit a world record.

The effort cannot be submitted as a college mark. Under collegiate rules, a measurement is needed before and after the jump.

Tully tried twice more at 18-8¾ before stopping.

"There was no use jumping any more," he said. "On those last two jumps I was really straining, tightening up going down the runway. There was a greater risk of injury and I don't need that right now."

"Everything was perfect—except for one thing, the officials," he said. "They could have been quicker. I don't think they have had too many meets here. They changed the bar after it had been blown off by putting the zero (of the tape) at the bar and measuring down. I've never seen that before."

With a brisk wind at his back, Tully had passed until the bar was moved to 17 feet. He cleared that height easily on a first attempt. He then passed at 17-4 before vaulting 17-8½ on his first try. That was followed by a successful vault at 18-1 before the record jump.

He said anything could happen during the NCAA championships in two weeks at Eugene, 40 miles south of Corvallis.

"I'm trying to peak for the NCAA and AAU meets, which are only seven days apart," he said. "This is only a start."

Prospects of a 19-foot vault?

"Nineteen feet? A good day, I'm feeling good. Who knows," Tully replied.

Michigan Wins Big Ten

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Mike Lattany won the high jump, the last event of the Big Ten Outdoor Track and Field Championships Saturday, by leaping a lifetime best of 7-2¼ to snap a tie with Indiana and give Michigan a 132-127 victory and its 26th conference title.

With 17 of the 18 events completed Indiana and Michigan were tied 122-122 and the attention of the crowd focused on the high jump.

Indiana already had picked up one point in the event on Bob Berry's sixth place finish. Lattany, whose previous best jump was 7-1, cleared that on his second try.

Wayne Pate, with the Hoosiers' hope riding on the spring in his legs, had cleared 7-0, two inches higher than he had ever gone before. He missed his first try at 7-1 and then passed that height.

Lattany, whose 7-1 jump would have been enough to give the Wolverines the crown to go with its conference indoor title, missed his first two trys at 7-2¼. But on his third and final attempt he made it over the bar without touching it, setting off a jumping, air-punching celebration on the infield by Michigan coach Jack Harvey and members of his team.

Lattany's leap gave the Wolverines more breathing room and Pate then missed his final shot at 7-2¼.

Indiana had taken a 36-12 lead over Michigan after Friday's three final events. Wisconsin, second after the first day with 20 finished in third place with 90. Defending champion Illinois was fourth with 61, followed by Ohio State, 43, Purdue, 32, Michigan State, 29, Minnesota, 24, Iowa 19 and Northwestern 1.

Michigan whittled away at Indiana's lead throughout Saturday's competition at Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium. But the Wolverines couldn't overtake the Hoosiers until the 14th event of the meet, the 5,000-meter run.

Pearson Turns Fastest Lap In 'Dixon' Prep

DOVER, Del. (AP) — David Pearson, helped by a new cylinder head in his Mercury, turned in the fastest speed Saturday during the second session of qualifying for the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race.

Pearson, looking for his second victory of the National Association For Stock Car Auto Racing's Grand National season, turned in a speed of 134.705 mph on the first of his two qualifying laps.

He will start from the No. 3 spot in today's 500-miler at Dover Downs International Speedway. The first two spots were secured Friday.

Buddy Baker won the pole with a speed of 135.456 mph, while Benny Parsons gained the second position at 135.171 mph. Both Baker and Parsons drive Chevrolets.

Saturday's second-best time was turned in by Darrell Waltrip, in a Chevy, at 133.993, but that good enough for only seventh place in the 40-car starting field as most of the 16 drivers who tested the high-banked mile Friday chose to stay with their first-day times.

Lennie Pond, in a Chevy, will start in the No. 4 position beside Pearson in Sunday's race, with defending champion Cale Yarborough in fifth spot in an Oldsmobile and Dave Marcis, in another Chevy, in sixth position. All stuck with their Friday speeds.

Pearson, who had to sit out Friday's session because NAS-CAR officials said he missed the draw for opening-day qualifying assignments, said his car had been fast enough in practice Friday to have won the pole.

The Wood Brothers' pit crew that cares for the Spartanburg, S.C., veteran's racer found a cracked cylinder head just before qualifying began Friday. It was replaced in time for Saturday's session, although Pearson said he could have run without the repair.

"For qualifying, it would have been all right," he said. "It was just a little bitty thing. We wouldn't have had to replace it, but we did."

Pearson also said that his crew had been on hand Thursday in time for the qualifying draw, "but there was no one there to sign us in. That's the story there.

"We could have won the pole, the way the car was running yesterday (Friday). Today, the track's a good half-mile an hour slower. It's hotter, and the track is heavier, slicker, than yesterday."

The stock car superstar, who is running for county commissioner in his hometown of Randleman, N.C., had Saturday's sixth-fastest speed at 131.295 mph. But that was only good enough for 15th spot in the starting grid.

DOVER, Del. (AP) — The starting field for today's Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race at Dover Downs International Speedway, with grid position, driver's name and make of car, and qualifying speed:

LUBBOCK CONTENDER—Stoa Minga strains as she sweeps under the wire to win her heat in the trials for today's Kansas Quarter Horse Derby at Ruidoso Downs. The filly and rider Jerry Nicodemus will be aiming for the top prize of $67,050 in today's race. The horse is owned by C.L. Siewart and Sons of Lubbock.

Cheevers Bypasses Preakness To Battle Montreal For Cup

BOSTON (AP) — "One of my usual festivities is a week at the Preakness," said Gerry Cheevers, somewhat wistful that the $188,700 Triple Crown race had to go on without him at Pimlico Saturday.

"My box at Pimlico is right at the finish line. Really nice," he said. But only Cheevers' trainer and stable agent were at the Baltimore track as the 1 3/16-mile race was run. Cheevers, who owns more than a dozen thoroughbreds, was busy preparing to tend goal for the Boston Bruins against the Montreal Canadiens tonight in Game 4 of the National Hockey League's championship playoff series.

"I picked Affirmed," said the 37-year-old netminder, whose body is decorated with grapefruit-sized reminders that the hockey season still is going on, despite temperatures that reached the mid-80s in Boston Saturday.

"This one's from Guy Lafleur—first shot of the game Thursday night," he said, pointing to a spot just above his right knee, where a three-inch bruise marked the point of impact by the Montreal right wing's blast. "I think this one was by Yvan Cournoyer," he continued, noting the matching purplish-green and yellow blotch above his left knee.

Most impressive of the lot was a giant rhapsody of violets and reds above his right elbow, a living record of left wing Bob Gainey's shot at 1:10 of the second period in Boston's 4-0 victory Thursday night.

"You might say I bruise easily," said the netminder. You also might say his play in goal has been phenomenal as the Bruins—who were swept in four games by the Canadiens in last year's final—attempt to pull even in this year's Stanley Cup final.

The Canadiens suffered something of a letdown Thursday, according to coach Scotty Bowman, who claimed in a telephone interview Saturday that his team "lacked the intensity you'd expect for a game in a final series."

The fourth Boston goal, a four-footer by Terry O'Reilly with just 4:21 remaining, was the one that most galled the Montreal mentor. The Bruins' right wing, unchallenged just to Montreal goalie Ken Dryden's left, had all the time he needed to tap in a backhand shot and complete the scoring in Boston's first victory over the defending champion in 13 games.

"That reminded me of a guy in a brand new blue serge suit standing around admiring himself while his pocket is being picked," said the coach, insisting his Canadiens will pay more attention tonight.

"After the game, we realized we're not unbeatable, and we're a lot hungrier for it," said Bowman, noting Montreal had swept the last two final series. "We spent way too much time behind our own blue line chasing the puck. We were trying to finesse too much. Sunday night, we'll maybe make a little more variety in our plays."

Thursday night, the Bruins wouldn't permit any variety at all. They shut down the Canadiens' powerhouse offense with workmanlike precision and know Montreal—aroused and embarrassed—will come out flying.

"It's up to us to try and get control of the game," said defenseman Brad Park, who has starred for Boston throughout. Cheevers expressed a similar theory, then headed for the local race track.

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — Citing a lack of funds for his program, Ken Morris resigned as track coach at Westminster College, shortly after his team won the Missouri NAIA championship, it was announced Tuesday.

Upset Win In Futurity Alters Trainer's Life

By DICK ALWAN
Ruidoso Downs Publicist

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M.—It was three days before the '77 running of the All-American Futurity, and Gene Tefertiller, the one-time carpet layer from Colorado, was off in a corner of the All-American Turf Club, having some friendly chit-chat with the press.

The ritualistic draw for post positions had been completed, so everyone had the All-American on his mind.

Almost as an afterthought, someone asked Tefertiller how he expected to do in the All-American. The big smile on Tefertiller's face disappeared, and he took on a dead-serious look. "My filly is going to win it," he said.

So when a man tells you he's going to win the All-American Futurity, this kind of optimism goes in one ear and out the other. The bargain-prized filly went into the $1 million classic with two races under her belt and came away with a daylight victory, a purse of $330,000, all the honor of the quarter-horse industry, and a trophy bigger than a sack of potatoes.

And Tefertiller has never been the same. "Every time I get to thinking about Hot Idea's win, I get tears in my eyes and get choked up. It all feels real enough, but it also seems like part of another world."

Before Hot Idea came along, Gene's career as a trainer was about to stall. Now, call him Mr. Lucky; he's never had it so good. He's never had a barn full of such classy stock. And what he'd do with his $33,000 share of the All-American purse?

Well, it's just like in the movies. It seems all his life, Tefertiller has been dreaming of being the maestro of a lavish horse farm, somewhere in Kentucky. He's got the farm now. It's not in Kentucky, but it almost looks like it, he says.

"I found this 80-acre farm near Madisonville (Tex.), right next to Joe McDermott's place," he said. "It's the closest thing to Kentucky, so far as the horses and country are concerned. I've already built a 40-horse barn."

Naturally, you can't materialize such a lavish dream for $33,000, but that All-American cash gave him the stake he needed to get rolling. It was "enough to get our feet on the ground."

He jokes: "The day before the All-American, I was in debt up to my neck. The day after, I was out of debt. And a month later, I was back in debt for $200,000."

But, it was "a dream come true. I've wanted a farm all my life, and now I've got it."

The win began a chain of fortuitous events for Tefertiller. The land he bought at Madisonville belonged to McDermott, a real estate developer and horse owner. While sewing up the deal, McDermott asked Tefertiller to train some horses.

So Tefertiller's 33-head stable at Ruidoso now includes 14 belonging to McDermott. The star attraction is the two-year-old thoroughbred, Money Changer, that McDermott bought at Keeneland, Ky., for a cool $150,000.

Shortly after the purchase, the sire, Buckpasser, died, and McDermott turned down an offer of $300,000 for Money Changer.

"He's (Money Changer) just super," says Tefertiller. "He's like a determined person. He puts his mind to something, and there's no backing off. Right now, I'd have to say he's a Kentucky Derby contender."

Tefertiller expects to have the colt running in his first race—probably the Ruidoso—in about 45 days. Another McDermott blue-blood is Forty-Five North, a colt by Northern Dancer that cost McDermott $125,000.

But, Hot Idea? "She's ready; she looks great," says Tefertiller. "During the winter, she had an operation to remove a chip from her knee, and everything turned out perfectly. She's been going through light workouts and looks tremendous. We'll have her racing in about two or three weeks."

With all this high-priced stock in the stable, it's almost easy to overlook the fact he also has an entry, Easy Move, in today's $139,000 Kansas Quarter Horse Derby. He's owned by Richard Barrie, the bossman of Faberge (he's the guy who signed up Joe Namath or Farah Fawcett-Majors to drumbeat for his soaps, perfumes and after-shave lotions).

Anyway, Barrie got a bit fed up with his quarter-horse luck last year and had decided to take Easy Move out of training and turn him into a cutting horse. Luckily, he was persuaded to change his mind, and Tefertiller wound up with the colt.

So how will Easy Move do today? Tefertiller, getting that same dead-serious look, says: "He's going to run a big race. He's the one they'll have to look at."

Horsemen Tell Of Complaints About Wiring

CINCINNATI (AP) — Horsemen said they were "complaining for weeks" about electrical shorts in the half-century-old wooden barns that caught fire Friday, killing 24 horses at River Downs Race Track.

Two other horses, possible drowning victims during the panic of the pre-dawn blaze, remain missing.

A track spokesman said the death toll was revised from earlier reports that 30 horses were dead. A statement will be issued Monday, according to Larry Koligian, assistant general manager.

Fire experts said they were "90 percent sure" that faulty wiring ignited the blaze.

"We've been complaining for weeks," said Charles Bradford of Hamilton, Ohio, whose son Gary lost eight of the nine horses he either owned or trained.

"The roof leaked. The wires were bad. They (track officials) wouldn't let you keep hay in the barns," Bradford said.

Track officials acknowledged that the barns have been scheduled for replacement for more than a year, but red tape, an extreme winter and flooding prevented construction.

It was the second barn fire in five years at the 53-year-old track, which is located on the banks of the Ohio River. Nine horses died and 60 were injured in 1973 when a short circuit caused a fire which destroyed four barns.

"Plans are going ahead for more concrete barns," said John Battaglia, general manager.

Winnipeg Eyes World Hockey Championship

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Winnipeg Coach Larry Hillman successfully converted back to an offensive attack carried by four lines Friday night and he'll continue with that plan when the Jets attempt to win the World Hockey Association championship Monday night.

Winnipeg took a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final playoff series by beating the New England Whalers 10-2 Friday night in a game that featured five goals in 2 minutes and 50 seconds in the first half of the opening period.

"We went with four lines most of the season and Friday they all came up very good for us," said Hillman. "We're a very hungry hockey club. We'd like to win the cup, win it here and win it in four games."

The four lines worked so well Friday that every player, except the goaltenders and defensemen Ted Green and Lars-Erik Sjoberg, contributed at least a point.

The least productive line was the top offensive unit of Ulf Nilsson, Anders Hedberg and Bobby Hull, which contributed a goal and two assists.

Two new lines Hillman went with led the way. Peter Sullivan was back between Willy Lindstrom and Dan Labraaten and they had three goals and eight points. Hillman dressed Lynn Powis for his first game of the final, put him with Kent Nilsson and Dave Kryskow and the three came up with four goals and nine points.

Hillman and the Jets now are seriously thinking about a sweep of the series and a duplication of the feat they performed in 1976 under similar circumstances. That year they came off an 18-day layoff to sweep the Houston Aeros and this year they had a 19-day wait before opening the final against the Whalers.

"They proved what a good club they are when they came off a three-week layoff and came flying out of the gate," said New England forward Larry Pleau. "After doing nothing but practicing for that time you wouldn't think a team could be that ready."

But the Jets have been honed to a fine pitch by Hillman and their own burning desire to win everything this year after losing in the finals last year to the Quebec Nordiques.

"I tell you, you don't get a championship too often. But when it's this close it's a little exciting," said Winnipeg forward Lyle Moffat, one third of the Jets' most consistent and productive line in the playoffs.

Another reason for their success is the desire of Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson to go out winners. The pair have signed lucrative contracts with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League and Monday's game could be their final one in Winnipeg.

RANGERS TRADE MAY

ARLINGTON (UPI) — The Texas Rangers Wednesday traded much travelled outfielder Dave May to the Milwaukee Brewers for a player to be named later. It was the second trade in the past 24 hours for the Rangers. May, who has been on the Rangers' injured reserve list since the opening of the season, was expected to activated by the Brewers immediatley.

Wayland Inks Six Athletes

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Three of Oklahoma's top fem cagers, two touted men basketballers and the District 1-AA high jump champion have all inked letters with Wayland Baptist College.

Signing with the Flying Queens from Oklahoma were Jo Tahsuda (5-10) of Navajo, Jodie Swart (5-11) of Merritt and Jamie Horacek (5-10) of Elgin.

Miss Tahsuda led the state in scoring the past two years with a 36.2 average, Miss Swart averaged 22 points and Miss Horacek hit at a 28.4 clip. All three will play in the Oklahoma all-star game June 2-3.

Aubrey Tucker of Boys Ranch, the loop's high jump king and runner-up in the high hurdles and long jump, cleared 6-8 last season. The 6-2, 170-pounder also had bests of 22 feet and 15.0 in the long jump and high hurdles, respectively.

Earlier, the Pioneers signed Les Soto of South Plains College, one of the nation's top junior college shot putters.

Cage coach Bob Clindaniel inked center Bryant Briden (6-8), a transfer from Southwest Texas State, along with guard Van Miller (6-4) of Fort Worth Richland Hills.

Two years ago, Briden led San Antonia Thomas Jefferson to the state AAAA semifinals as a senior, averaging 14 points and 13 rebounds. Miller, an all-area performer for the Rebels, tossed in 17 points an outing and pulled down 10.5 rebounds as a senior.

For the past two seasons, Briden has played on the SWTSU squad.

Unintended Effect Of Israeli Lobbying Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heavy-handed lobbying by friends of Israel may have helped the White House win Senate approval of a $4.8 billion package of fighters for Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, a well informed source says.

And the presence in the United States of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the plainspoken conservative leader of Israel's Likud party, wasn't much help either, said the source.

"He doesn't come across very well, and the Israelis were ambiguous about the crucial question of whether they would give up their planes if the Arabs also lost theirs," the source said. "They made it sound like they wanted everything."

The assessment was one of many in the aftermath of the Senate's 54-44 support for the sale of 200 sophisticated fighters to Middle East combatants, a package deal opposed by Israel.

The Senate vote, coupled with ratifccation of the Pamana Canal treaties, was the second major foreign policy victory for President Carter in two months. Carter said he sought the jet sale package linking weapons to Israel with weapons for the Arabs in an effort to gain influence with both sides in the troubled region.

Senate approval of the package last Monday marked a watershed in U.S.-Israeli relations — a relationshiv that has been marked for 30 years by American readiness to provide Israel most of what it wanted in its battle for survival. For the first time, the United States agreed to major weapons sales to Arab nations.

Both sides lobbied fiercely in the closing days before the vote, but in retrospect, each concedes few minds were changed.

And both sides agree the outcome of this fight did not spell an end to the vaunted Israeli lobby, a powerful and well financed group that has influenced congressional action on Israel for decades.

Fred Dutton, a 1972 campaign worker for George McGovern and a Washington lawyer hired by the Saudis, said the lobbying recalled presidential campaigns.

"Everybody pretty much has their minds made up at the beginning and both sides work like hell to counteract the other side and keep things the way they are."

A lobbyist for Israel awarded the administration high marks for its success, although disagreeing with the outcome.

"We only had three days between the time the vote was scheduled and the actual vote. Two of those days were over the weekend, and a lot of the senators were out of town. For us, the telephone lines were jammed, because of Mothers Day traffic. But the White House switchboard didn't have any problem."

One source said the administration was helped by some tactical errors on the part of the Israelis and their lobbyists.

"The Israelis were very heavy-handed, using the lobbying techniques of the 40s and the 50s. They still don't realize they have 100 independent-minded persons in the Senate."

Israeli lobbyists focused the fight on the Saudi package of 60 F-15s rather than on the 50 F5E's for Egypt, in part because the Israeli Air Force considered the Saudi jets would have a great effect on the military balance.

GM Outlines Inflation-Fighting Efforts

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp., in a gesture of support for President Carter's anti-inflation program, has pledged to trim salary and bonus increases for its highest paid executives.

Chairman Thomas A. Murphy told GM stockholders the company also will work to hold down car prices but declined to rule out further increases this year.

"We intend to redouble our cost-control efforts in every area of our business — to take every reasonable action to stem the rising tide of both costs and prices," Murphy said.

One of the inflation-fighting steps outlined by Murphy at a stockholder's meeting Friday was to hold this year's pay hikes for top GM executives below 5 percent — the guideline President Carter suggested.

Other executive salaries will be "prudently evaluated" and decelerated in the coming year, he said.

As a group, GM's top executives received pay hikes averaging 5.5 percent in 1977 with Murphy and GM President Elliott M. Estes the top money earners.

Murphy was paid $975,000 in salaries and bonuses last year and Estes received $910,000.

However, under the self-imposed limitations, the two executives still could receive pay raises of more than $45,000 this year.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser said such hefty raises "can hardly be considered a sacrifice."

"Somehow I believe the American people are going to have a hard time swallowing talk of restraint from men who get paid almost a million dollars a year — the same men who keep right on adding price increase on top of price increase to the American automobile," Fraser said in a statement after the stockholders meeting.

GM touched off a round of price hikes by the Big Three automakers earlier this spring with an across-the-board $100 increase it said was needed to offset rising material and production costs.

Murphy said the 1.4 percent increase signaled a move away from large, once-a-year price boosts to "smaller interim adjustments" that would be less inflationary.

While that would not necessarily rule out a sizeable price increase when new models are introduced in the fall, prices this year "hopefully will be more moderate," Murphy said.

Poerner Gets Advice In Board Race

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad commissioner John Poerner said Saturday he is following the advice of commissioner Jon Newton in his June 3 runoff campaign against Jerry Sadler.

Poerner obviously turned to Newton because Newton defeated Sadler in a runoff two years ago.

"Jon Newton has been very helpful. I'm following Jon Newton's advice on how to defeat Jerry Sadler very closely," Poerner said.

Asked how Newton had advised him, Poerner said Newton had told him "to bring him (Sadler) out in the open . . . remind the public of his (Sadler's) public record . . ."

In 1976 Newton trailed Sadler 352,785 to 327,949 in the first Democratic primary, then swamped him 531,444 to 272,350 in the runoff.

Poerner has a much larger gap to make up as Sadler led him 656,069 to 408,283.

"I don't know of a single state officer that is not helping me," Poerner said.

"It would be a disgrace to the state of Texas to allow him (Sadler) to come back in," he said.

Sadler was elected to the railroad commission in 1938 but resigned to enter the service in 1942.

Poerner said if Sadler is elected, "it is my judgment people will elect an empty chair, and we can't afford that at this time."

He said he had not even been able to raise Sadler by telephone. "He's obviously gone out to retirement or something."

Poerner said the race 'is very, very close" but that he expects to win by a few percentage points.

"I just don't think this man (Sadler) should serve in public office — the railroad commission, land commissioner or anything else," said Poerner.

Bob Armstrong defeated Sadler for land commissioner in 1970, after the 1969 Legislature reprimanded Sadler for "misleading" a House committee into believing he had signed a contract with an out of state firm that salvaged treasure from sunken ships off the Texas coast.

That same year Sadler choked Rep. Jake Johnson, D-San Antonio, with one hand when Johnson showed up for an official inventory of the treasure.

Zaire Attack Mirrors Africa's Agony

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The invasion of Zaire is the latest ominous episode in Africa's saga of turmoil. In the following analysis, an AP correspondent looks at the pattern behind the spreading chaos and the harvest reaped by Soviet Russia and its allies from "third-party wars.")

By LARRY HEINZERLING

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The invasion of Zaire — a nation long an unhappy symbol of chaos and bloodshed — reflects once again the seemingly perpetual turmoil of post-colonial Africa.

A tribal uprising in the heart of the continent, white hostages. A paratroop rescue mission. Charges of Soviet and Cuban intervention. Appeals for western support.

Familiar Pattern

The pattern is familiar in a black Africa plagued by political, economic and social upheaval it often blames on the lingering legacy of white colonial rule.

Much of Africa, like Zaire itself, is deeply troubled by political instability, by poverty, tribal divisions and a hangover from the 19th century European "scramble for Africa."

The attack on Zaire's copper-rich Shaba province by exiled Lunda tribesmen based in Marxist Angola reflects the continent's malaise.

So do other wars in Africa, from the desert wastes of the Western Sahara, Chad and Ethiopia, to the inhospitable bushlands of Angola, Namibia and Rhodesia.

In all these conflicts, one can hear the distinctive crack of Soviet-made automatic rifles and the soft, Latin accents of Cuban military advisers.

East-West Conflict

The East-West conflict has come to Africa in full force. The East is openly waging third-party wars. The West, chagrined but immobile, has so far watched from the sidelines.

The thrust into Southern Zaire by an estimated 4,000 Lunda tribesmen, the second serious assault in just over a year, threatens not only Zaire's strategic copper mining region but the central government itself.

The invasion is another major test of Zaire's flamboyant, autocratic, pro-Western President Mobutu Sese Seko, whose unmanageable nation of 25 million people is in serious economic straits.

Breakaway Attempt

The invaders are largely Lunda tribesmen, many of them former gendarmes (police) in what was known as Katanga Province (now Shaba), who attempted to secede under the late Moise Tshombe months after the former Belgian colony, then called the Congo, was granted independence in 1960.

The Lunda were finally crushed by the central government, backed by U.N. forces, three years later in the first of a series of armed uprisings, tribal revolts and outbreaks of violence which made the Congo synonymous with anarchy.

Some 7,000 Katanga gendarmes, who made up the armed forces of breakaway Katanga at the time, fled to neighboring Angola where they have been ever since.

Constant Quarrel

Angola's President Agostinho Neto has been quarrelling with Mobutu ever since Neto came to power in a bloody, three-way civil war in 1975 with the aid of Soviet arms shipments and Cuban troops.

Mobutu covertly supports two pro-Western guerrilla armies seeking to oust the Soviet-backed Neto, who relies on some 19,000 Cuban soldiers in his country to keep him in power. Mobutu, perhaps with reason, is paranoid about Soviet subversion in his unstable country.

In March last year, between 2,000 and 5,000 of the former gendarmes invaded Zaire from Northeastern Angola. Mobutu claimed but never fully proved that the attack was backed by Soviet arms, Cuban advisers and Angolan complicity.

Invaders Repelled

Two and a half months later the invaders were repelled after Zaire's rag-tag, poorly disciplined army of 30,000 men was reinforced with Moroccan troops flown in by France.

Now the gendarmes have returned to their tribal homeland in a bid to control Zaire's mineral wealth and topple Mobutu's 13-year-old regime.

Zaire mirrors Africa in many ways. It is huge, equal in area to the United States East of the Mississippi. Its 25 million citizens spring from some 200 tribes and speak perhaps 400 tongues. It holds enormous mineral wealth and agricultural potential, yet the vast majority of its people are impoverished. The nation has a foreign debt of $3 billion.

Analysis

The capital, Kinshasa, on the banks of the Congo River has the trappings of 20th century Europe with modern skyscrapers towering over broad tree-lined boulevards abustle with traffic.

Backward Villages

Yet 200 miles from town, the paved road stops, and modern life yields to Africa's tribal heritage, to the backward villages in the rain forests and way of of life that the European colonial conquests of the 19th century undermined but could neither transform nor eradicate.

Post-colonial Africa still suffers from the effects of the vacuum that followed when the often harsh controls imposed by the European powers were swept away, leaving the new nations without a working political and governing machinery. When Zaire was granted independence, for example, it had a mere 247 university students.

The colonial borders imposed by the European powers ignored tribal realities, which are back to haunt their legatees, and the colonial investments in railways, ports, roads, hospitals and other modern paraphernalia left the mass of the population untouched.

Elite Govern

Today, most of black Africa's independent governments are dominated by a small, ambitious, often avaricious European-trained elite. The vast majority of Africa's 230 million people live outside the modern sector, illiterate, poor, unheard in the new, continuing scramble for power among their more educated leaders.

It is this infighting for the inheritance of colonial power that afflicts Zaire and the continent and explains the more than 35 coups, counter coups and palace revolts as well as full-scale civil wars that have broken out in the past two decades.

The key element in its all remains tribalism, the stubborn loyalty of millions of Africans to primitive subgroups that represent a link with a more stable past, certainly amidst bewildering political, economic and social change.

'Scourage' Of Tribalism

"Tribalism is the scourge of Africa," says President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory coast, one of the few leaders of Africa to keep it in check. His West African nation is stable and one of the most prosperous in black Africa. And like Kenya in East Africa, a model of Third world development.

Tribal boundaries, not the frontiers drawn on maps, make up the real Africa.

The latest disorder in Zaire, as in Angola and most other African states, stems largely from attempts to impose "nationhood" on disparate, rival tribal groups.

Instant Progress

In much of Africa, expectations of instant progress have incited unrest and power drives by rival tribes. Exploited by ambitious politicians, tribalism has become the main complication in virtually every African conflict.

The Lunda of Zaire's Shaba province, which provides 65 percent of the nation's foreign exchange earnings, have long been oppressed by President Mobutu. It is not surprising that the Lunda wonder why the wealth of their region is spent, in the name of "nationhood," on multimillion dollar prestige projects in Mobutu's faraway capital of Kinsasha, where Bakongo tribesmen dominate.

The Lunda's answer is either secession or overthrow of Mobutu to gain a share of power at the top.

Over the past two decades, ever since colonial flags began coming down across the continent, Africa largely has been allowed to resolve its internal rivalries alone.

Western Sphere

Despite tribal eruptions and military coups, the continent long remained a sphere of Western influence, its fledgling nations closely tied to the former colonial power, economically and politically.

Only occasionally, in the Congo of the 1960s, Ghana, Cameroon and isolated other cases, did the cold war intrude in Africa with half-hearted Soviet efforts to spread Marxist influence.

The Soviet Union backed rebel movements in the Congo, and Bamileke tribesmen in Cameroon, curried favor with newly independent Ghana's Socialist President Kwame Nkrumah as a leader of African liberation from neocolonial control. The Soviet maneuvers were not taken very seriously.

Soviet 'Bumblers'

The Soviets were depicted as bumblers, on a wayward safari, sending snow plows equipped with heaters to tropical Guinea and toilets that could be connected to the sewage system.

In the past three years, all this has changed. The Soviet Union and its Cuban ally, propping up a string of Marxist dictatorships, supporting various guerrilla movements, have established presence and influence in Africa reaching from the Western Sahara eastward to the Horn of Africa and southward deep into the racially-troubled subcontinent.

Cuban troops, Soviet advisers and East European technicians are bolstering pro-Soviet regimes, fighting their wars, training guerrilla armies in Southern Africa, building schools, hospitals and spreading the gospel of socialist revolution.

45,000 Cubans

The U.S. State Department puts the number of Cuban military and civilian personnel in Africa at 45,000, of whom 39,000 are soldiers.

About 20,000 are in Angola fighting pro-Western anti-government guerrilla movements seeking to oust Neto's Marxist regime. Up to 5,000 Cuban advisers are also in Angola.

The Cubans are backing Ethiopia's Marxist government in its war against secessionists in the province of Eritrea with some 17,000 soldiers.

Washington estimates Mozambique has 500 Cuban soldiers and 350 advisers, while Tanzania, Guinea Bissau, Equatorial Guinea, Congo, and Guinea are believed to have more than 100 military advisers each. A smaller scattering is reported for Algeria, Benin, Sao Tome and Sierra Leone.

Few political observers doubt that the rebel incursion into Zaire, a strategically located nation, bordering 11 other states, has at least the tacit support of the Soviet bloc and probably much more.

'Red Belt'

A Marxist-ruled Zaire would create a "red belt" across Africa from Angola through Zaire to Mozambique, an ideal springboard for subversion throughout Central and Southern Africa.

With such a base of operations, the ultimate prize, white-ruled Southern Africa, would be a sitting duck for a long range Soviet-sponsored guerrilla war of "liberation."

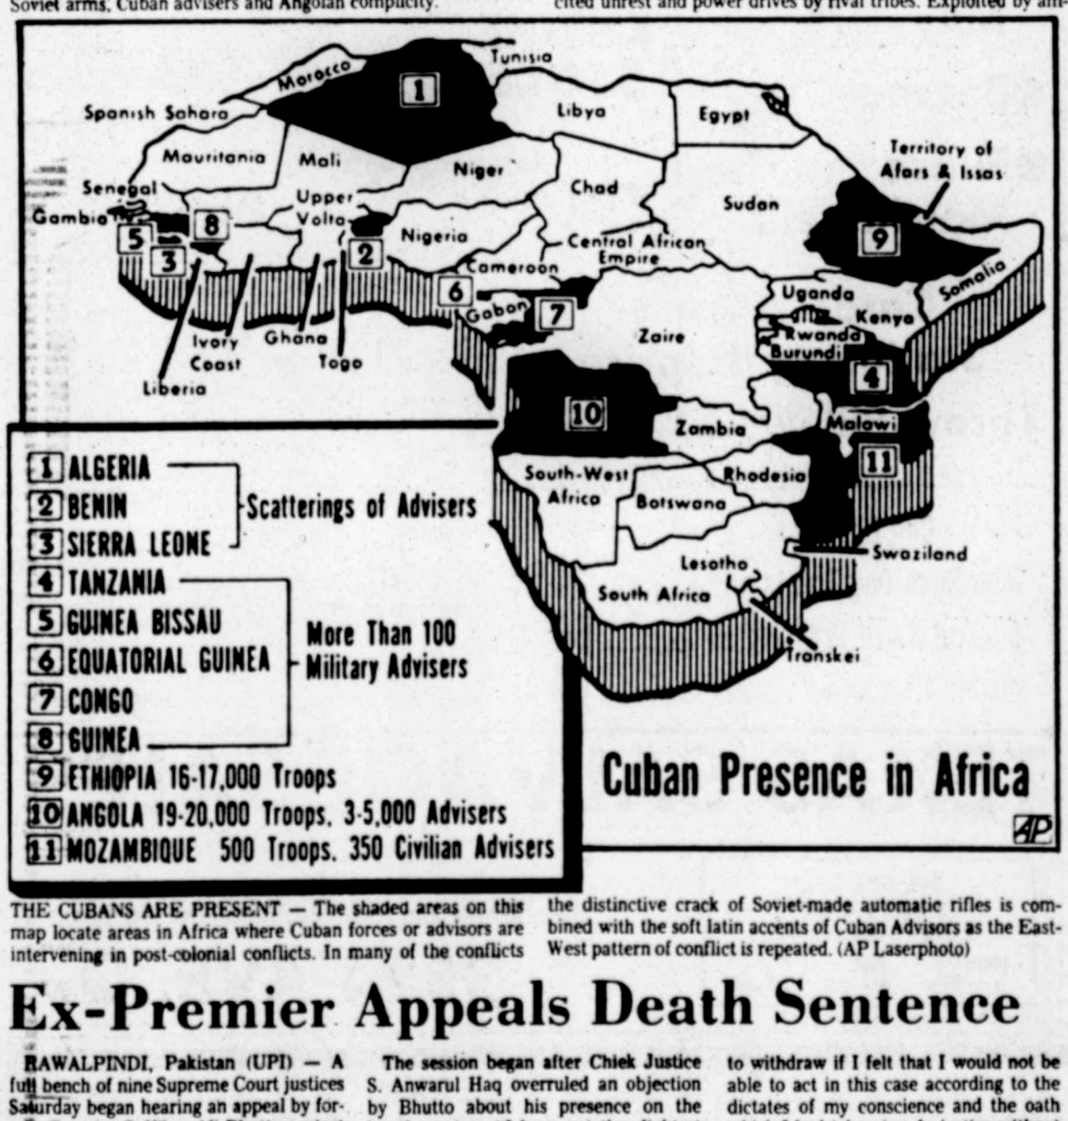
Their view is shared by some others, such as Zambia and Tanzania, who argue that continued white domination in Southern Africa is less tolerable to Africa than growing communist-bloc influence on the continent.



THE CUBANS ARE PRESENT — The shaded areas on this map locate areas in Africa where Cuban forces or advisors are intervening in post-colonial conflicts. In many of the conflicts the distinctive crack of Soviet-made automatic rifles is combined with the soft latin accents of Cuban Advisors as the East-West pattern of conflict is repeated. Red Brigade Group Smashed By Police

ROME (UPI) — A mystery witness helped police smash one of three Red Brigades terrorist bands in Rome, investigators said Saturday.

Charges filed against five of 10 people arrested two days ago in raids on two terrorist hideouts said evidence against them included statements by a person "whose identity it is not seen fit to disclose at this time for security reasons."

Investigators would not say if the mystery witness was a neighbor, an underworld informer, an arrested suspect or a police infiltrator in the guerrilla gang that kidnapped and killed ex-Premier Aldo Moro.

The infiltration technique worked once in the past.

"Friar Submachine Gun" — whose real name is Silvano Girotto —was a former Franciscan friar who turned guerrilla in South America and later infiltrated the Red Brigajes for the police. Information he supplied led to the arrests in 1974 of gang founder Renato Curcio and other terrorist leaders.

Girotto appeared as a witness this week at the Turin trial of Curcio and 48 other Red Brigades members.

Investigators earlier discounted newspaper speculation that the source of their information this time was a tip provided by common criminals either for money or to get police off their own backs.

Magistrates said material evidence discovered in Thursday's raids on a Red Brigades print shop and another hideout included weapons, machinery used in printing and typing Red Brigades literature and communiques, pictures of kidnap victims and banknotes from the ransom paid in 1977 for the release of abducted Genoa shiopwner Piero Costa.

Four of the 10 persons arrested Thursday were released early Saturday after extensive questioning. Five others were charged with membership in an armed band, attacking prisons and party offices and committing or attempting to commit murders and kidnappings.

The tenth arrested man was still being held pending a decision on his status.

Police said those arrested formed the "south Rome" cell of the Red Brigades' Rome "column." Investigators were now looking for the "university nucleus" and the "telephone company nucleus," named after the organizations they infiltrated.

Ex-Premier Appeals Death Sentence

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — A full bench of nine Supreme Court justices Saturday began hearing an appeal by former Premier Zulfikar Ali Bhutto against his death sentence.

Authorities took stringent security measures against possible violence by his supporters.

Bhutto was sentenced to death March 18 by the Lahore High Court, which held him responsible for ordering the killing of his political enemy Ahmad Raza Kasuri in November 1974.

Kasuri escaped the assasination but his father, who was in the same car when gunmen opened fire, was killed.

Several contingents of armed police, including women guards, were posted around the Supreme Court to guard against any demonstration by supporters of Bhutto, who was driven from power last July in a military coup led by the present ruler, Gen. Mohammed Zia Ul-Haq.

Traffic around the court building was diverted by police.

Extra security precautions were evident throughout the city, especially in the area around the jail where Bhutto has been kept since he was flown to Rawalpindi from Lahore last Wednesday.

Bhutto's lawyer D. M. Awan, who met his client Friday in the district prison, told newsmen that the former prime minister had not eaten any food in the past three days because he was dissatisfied with jail conditions.

The session began after Chiek Justice S. Anwarul Haq overruled an objection by Bhutto about his presence on the bench, saying: "I have not the slightest bias or prejudice against the appellant."

Bhutto had objected because he said Haq had merged the roles of the judiciary and the administration by accepting the post of president temporarily last month when President Fazal Elahi went to Vienna for medical treatment.

"I would not have the least hesitation to withdraw if I felt that I would not be able to act in this case according to the dictates of my conscience and the oath which I had taken too do justice without fear or favor, affection or ill will," Haq said.

The chief justice ordered that the appeal filed by Bhutto and four co-accused be heard by the full court.

It was not immediately clear how long the appeal hearings would last or when the court would deliver a verdict.

Leader Recalls First Conquest Of Mt. Everest

LONDON (AP) — "Climbing Mount Everest has become almost old hat, but when we did it there was a sense of disbelief — some people thought it was beyond the bounds of possibility."

The man recalling that time 25 years ago is Lord Hunt — plain Col. John Hunt of the British army when he organized and led the first conquest of the highest mountain. A knighthood followed, then a life peerage.

Two of Hunt's climbers, Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Tenzing Norgay of Nepal, reached the summit of Everest on the morning of May 29, 1953. It was not until 1975, in an expedition led by Chris Bonington, that British-born climbers got to the top.

Americans, Austrians, Chinese, Indians, Italians, Japanese, South Koreans and Swiss have also been there, a total of 64 climbers since Hillary and Tenzing.

Hunt told The Associated Press in an interview recently: "Our route from the south was not one of the most difficult by a long chalk, but the psychological barrier was very real, as it always is when something has never been done before. There is doubt about the physical and spiritual feasibility. Once the thing is done, like the four-minute mile, then the doors are open to others."

Mount Everest — 29,028 feet high in the eastern Himalayas — has become such a popular target that the government of Nepal now arranges climbers in rotation; the mountain is "booked up" through 1982.

The news of the first successful ascent took three days to come through from the slopes of the mountain, reaching London on the evening of Monday, June 1, the eve of the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

"All this and Everest, too" cried one ecstatic newspaper headline on the morning of Coronation Day.

Hunt had climbed his first Alpine peak when he was 15. While stationed in India between the two world wars he had taken part in three Himalayan expeditions and trained troops in mountain and snow warfare.

"The problem of Everest and any other mountain over 26,000 feet is not the climbing but the lack of oxygen and the strength of the wind," Hunt said. "I have done more difficult climbs than Everest, such as the Pamirs in the Soviet Union, and some other Himalayan mountains and heights in Greenland are technically harder."

Experts always have attributed the first Everest success to Hunt's organizing abilities and the use of oxygen.

This past May 8, two Austrian climbers, Reinhold Messner, 33, and Peter Hebeler, 35, reached the summit without the help of oxygen — another recorded first in the Everest saga.

Oxygen was scorned by some mountaineering purists but it proved essential in 1953, Hunt recalled. "It reduced the hazards of high-altitude climbing and increased our appreciation of the surroundings which, after all, is one of the chief reasons for climbing."

The summiteers might not have fallen unconscious without oxygen but it helped keep them alert and therefore safe on the way to the top, 5 1/2 miles above sea level, and on the way down. On the summit, Hillary was able to remove his oxygen mask for 10 minutes to photograph Tenzing and the view. The two Austrians even slept without oxygen in their climb.

"All expeditions help their successors," said Hunt. "That's why later climbers have been able to report making the final assault without oxygen.

"And we were lucky with the weather," he remembered. "There was no snow in the second half of May. Above all, we had a marvellous, united team — that's most important — and a great deal of cooperation from scientists, doctors and physicists. We went to Everest convinced we had all the answers right, providing we had the right weather, and we did."

Hunt said his team was greatly helped by the experience of two Swiss expeditions in 1952 when a Swiss and a Sherpa — the Nepalese hill people who act as guides, porters and climbers — got to within 1,000 feet of the summit of Everest. "We were a bit worried the Swiss might beat us to it," Hunt said with a smile.

"In a long life I have never been so drained as when we came down from Everest. It was utterly and completely demanding," Hunt said.

The mountain is named after Sir George Everest, a former surveyor-general of India, who mapped the Himalayas in Victorian days. He calculated the height by trigonometry at 29,002 feet, the figure accepted by all expeditions until the Chinese corrected it in 1973 to 29,028 feet.

Mountaineering is a sport but it is no game.

"About the same number of men have been killed on Everest as have climbed it," said Hunt. "The death rate for high mountains is perhaps 10 percent of those taking part."

His Everest expedition was fatality-free, but one British member, Wilfrid Noyce, was killed on an Anglo-Soviet climb in the Pamirs in 1962.

Why climb mountains?

"We shared a great endeavor," Hunt reflected. "We saw scenes of beauty and grandeur and we were thrilled to have done safely something that was dangerous. And it does contribute to science, especially physiology."

Hunt said: "One of the lasting values is the close friendships we made. For the first 12 years we met every year in North Wales and then on the 20th anniversary. Seven of us are going to the Himalayas this year, to Darjeeling where Tenzing lives and we will meet our Sherpas there. Then we will walk across East Nepal to the foot of Everest."

Tenzing, as a foreign citizen, was awarded the George Medal for gallantry. Hillary got a knighthood. Tenzing, now 64, directs field training at the Himalayan Mountaineering Institute in Darjeeling. Hillary, 59, has made a vocation of helping the Sherpa people in Nepal.

Hunt, 68, lives in a cottage at Henley on Thames, west of London, a host of public service posts behind him and still very much the lean, tanned, upright man he was 25 years ago.

Everest brought his team fame and honors. The 180,000 pounds (then worth $504,000), from Hunt's book "The Ascent of Everest" and a film, plus income from photographs and lectures, went into a trust fund, the Mount Everest Foundation, which has since helped nearly 500 British mountaineering expeditions and explorations — "a British success story, encouraging others to go in search of their own Everest," Hunt calls it.

Dubcek Attack Renewed

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Two Czechoslovakian Communist Party newspapers, Rude Pravo and Pravda, renewed the official attack Saturday on former Communist Party chief and liberal reformer Alexander Dubcek.

The dailies said Dubcek, who was driven from office when Soviet forces invaded this country in 1968 to curb his revisions of the Communist system here, betrayed both his party and the people of Czechoslovakia by not putting a stop to "anti-Communist attacks" while he was in power. Dubcek now works as a low-paid official in the forestry department.

OPEC Officials To Meet

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The finance ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will gather here Tuesday for a two-day meeting at which they are expected to discuss the fluctuation of the dollar, the basic unit of payment for oil.

OPEC officials have claimed the organization has lost $13 billion because of the dollar's decline in value. The financial ministers may prepare a report on the dollar for the oil ministers, who are to gather in Geneva June 17 for a price-setting meeting.

Drought Threat Eased

TOKYO (AP) — Heavy rainfall last week has eased the threat of drought in some of China's major winter wheat producing areas in the northern provinces, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported in a dispatch received here.

But the report said the dry spell has not abated in two other major winter wheat provinces located on China's east coast.

Police Force Proposed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has proposed the creation of an international Arab police force to bolster security in the Arab world, Saudi Interior Minister Prince Aayef Abdul Azia said in an interview published here Saturday.

He said the proposal has been put before the Arab League for discussion.

Restroom's Name Official

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A two-seat restroom on Boulder's downtown mall, which came under fire for its $65,000 price tag, now has an official name — The County Seat.

The winning name was chosen from 244 entries in the John Mall contest, sponsored by the Colorado Daily and judged by City Council members Paul Danish, Linda Jourgensen and George Boland.

The council will be asked to consider attaching a plaque bearing the name to the restroom's outside wall at its June 6 meeting.

The choice was a sly dig at council members, since the restroom is located next to the county courthouse.

Runner-up choices were The Headmaster, The Privilege and The Augustus John. Other entries included The Boulder Oval Office, Gone with the Wand and the Ludicrous Latrine.

Cab Becomes Getaway Car

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A Syracuse man took a taxi to the Lincoln First Bank, held up a teller for $600 and used the waiting cab for a getaway car, authorities said.

Police said Saturday that McClary Williams, 24, was charged with robbery when he was arrested Friday about 12 hours after the holdup at the bank. The money was recovered and police said they found a tack hammer Williams pretended was a gun during the holdup.

As Williams was getting away in the cab, police said he suddenly jumped out several blocks from the bank and fled without paying the fare.

'Boring' Sentence Given

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — The owner of a pornographic movie house has been sentenced to do something a judge feels is "extremely boring" — watch his own X-rated films.

Vincent Miranda, convicted on a charge of showing obscene material after a two-minute preview of "Sex Freaks" was played at his Pussycat Theater, was given the sentence Thursday by Municipal Judge Don E. Van Luven.

"The motive was to be somewhat punitive," said Van Luven, adding that he decided on the sentence after having to watch 20 hours of the films during the trial. "I had to endure them (and) they are extremely boring."

Atlantic City Ready To Roll For Casino's Grand Opening

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Several generations of Americans learned at a young age that Boardwalk and Park Place can turn big bucks, depending on the roll of the dice.

But surely Charles B. Darrow never envisioned that the legal tender of international high rollers would replace the play money of children when he invented the game of Monopoly back in 1930 and used the names of streets in this fading resort by the sea.

Nonetheless, the real people who live and work and invest in places with monopoly names are betting their futures on a roll of the dice.

A new game is coming to town this week and the stakes are high. Sorry, no children allowed.

In an unusual social and economic experiment, the roulette wheels are expected to start spinning Friday at a spiffy $50 million casino-hotel, a reincarnation of the distinguished old Chapfonte-Haddon Hall Hotel.

Casino gambling is moving east and the entire nation is wondering if the proud, old Boardwalk of the rolling chairs will become an extension of the garish Las Vegas strip.

The Resorts International casino-hotel, which used profits from its Bahamas casino to lead a four-year fight to legalize gaming in New Jersey, said Saturday everything is ready to roll for a grand opening Friday.

Late last week, Gov. Brendan T. Byrne looked the place over, peered into the innards of a slot machine and pronounced it as fine a casino as he has ever seen.

The state Casino Control Commission will hold several meetings before issuing u certificate of operation to Resorts Interantional, but that is expected to come before the end of the week.

"If everything isnin order, it will be issued Thursday," said Benjamin A. Borowsky, spokesman for the commission.

"We are ready to open," said James M. Crosby, chairman of the board of Resorts International.

But is Atlantic City ready? In many respects, the dowager queen of Atlantic coast resorts seemed as jittery as an old maid about to take a husband.

With 60 million people just a tank of gas away — as Crosby likes to point out — police were wondering how to hande a mob that some say could reach as many as 400,000 over this Memorial Day weekend.

Col. Clinton L. Pagano, head of the state police, said last week Atlantic City could handle about 110,000 people. If the crowd grows larger than that, and traffic comes to a standstill, he has a contingency plan to close off the highways and divert visitors elsewhere.

Once cars get into town, there are few places to park. Public transportation is limited mostly to buses from New York and Philadelphia. While some commercial airlines are planning regular flights, only an Allegheny shuttle to Philadelphia is presently in service.

In the background, the Mafia also waited a bit nervously, knowing that the FBI, state police and other investigatory agencies were on the watch.

During the myriad public hearings held by various agencies, it was warned that the mob was itching to get its tentacles into the support services such as linen, cigarettes and food.

Foreigners Increase U.S. Purchases

NEW YORK (AP) — Although foreign investment in the United States dates back to the founding of the colonies, the "buy America" bug is experiencing a new wave of enthusiasm among foreign companies.

Within the past few years, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of foreign-owned operations opening plants in the United States, or buying into U.S. companies. Real estate purchases also appear to be on the rise.

Purchases of farmland are particularly sensitive and difficult to track because foreign investors sometimes work through third parties to avoid the hostility of farmers who worry that prices will sky-rocket and the land will lay idle.

In one such case, near Wichita Falls, Texas, wealthy Arabs reportedly purchased a tract of land for $1,000 an acre last year when the going price should have been around $350 an acre, according to David Edwards, who is researching a book on international financing.

Some states are considering, or already have laws, to limit foreign ownership of land or other property. But other areas foreign investors are being actively wooed because new businesses mean new jobs.

The State of Pennsylvania, for instance, was jubilant when Volkswagen chose New Stanton as the site for its first U.S. production plant. So far about 1,200 new jobs have been provided and officials estimate that eventually will grow to 5,000.

Because their are no reporting requirements for foreign investment, no one knows the total amount or types of investment and purchases.

But Richard Apcar, a Commerce Department economist, notes it "has very definitely gone up in the past 10 years."

In some cases that reflects a degree of confidence in the strength of the U.S. economy and a desire on the part of foreign producers to get closer to its huge market. But the recent depreciation of the dollar against other major currencies is another factor.

"When you can buy substantially more dollars with the German mark than you could two years ago, it then becomes more advantageous to invest and establish markets here," says Apcar.

Edward's article in New York Magazine provides an additional theory. He contends that many middle and upper class Europeans are moving their capital to the United States because of fear of political upheaval in their own governments.

The Bureau of Economic Policy's study of foreign purchases in business and land in 1977 is not yet completed but is expected to show a substantial increase compared to 1976. Apcar expects the final figures, due next month to be "in excess of $3 billion," compared to about $2.1 billion in 1976.

Those figures reflect only part of the investment that is going on because the government can only track down those foreign investments which receive public attention and can come up with a dollar value for the deals on just a part of those.

In 1976, for instance, it counted 198 individual transactions and identified a value totaling $2.1 billion for 114 of those.

"I think we do a pretty good job of identifying the industrial developments, but when you get into real estate you really can run into a blank wall," says Apcar.

The Department's study on investment for the first half of 1977 identified 131 direct foreign investments, 72 of which were completed during the period. Of those it could place values on 43 and said those came to $668.8 million.

Although the figures are not comprehensive, the study does provide some interesting clues as to what types of investments are being made and from where. Canada, West Germany, Great Britain and Japan remained the primary sources of foreign direct investment, the study said.

Of transactions it could identify, fully one half were in manufacturing and about 30 percent in finance, insurance and real estate.

In business developments this past week:

—The cost of mailing a letter will be going up on May 29 to 15 cents, two cents higher than the current first class letter rate. The Postal Service Board of Governor's, rejected one proposal for a two tier system of first class rates which would keep current 13 cent stamp for private letters but charge businesses 16 cents.

—The total of wages, salaries and other personal income jumped sharply in April, in what economists saw as a sign that spending will remain strong and continue to spur the economy. Overall private wages as salaries grew 1.7 percent in April or $18.1 billion, from the previous month. All types of income, including government, farm workers and those receiving government Social Security or assistance payments increased $23.3 billion last month to an annual rate of $1.68 trillion. That represented a 1.4 percent increase from personal income in the previous month.

—The White House proposed a government tax credit program for private businesses who hire poor young workers. Government officials say the plan could result in nearly two million jobs for economically disadvantages workers under age 24.

As proposed, businesses who hire under the program could get a tax credit of up to $2,000 — or one-third of first year wages up to $6,000 — for workers they hire. In the second year, the maximum credit would be $1,500.

The Market Meter

By J.L. HUTCHESON
(Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.)

A new surge of buying early in the week propelled the stock market ahead on a broad front to new eight-month highs, but persistent profit taking Thursday and Friday ended the market's recent six-day advance.

After shrugging off a bout of early profit taking Monday, the stock market resumed te rally of the previous week with a surge of buying Tuesday that ballooned volume to the fourth highest figure on record. Renewed pressure on the dollar in Europe, analysts said, plus signs that the Federal Reserve apparently was nudging interest rates up again, triggered selling Thursday which accelerated in the final hour of trading.

Analysts point out that the market had an almost uninterrupted run upward from April through mid-May, and was overripe for a pullback. Many analysts are also uneasy over higher interest rates, which could prove to be a competitive force for the stock market to face in the coming months, and the prospects of an aging business cycle (the current expansion is the second longest post-war expansion on record) when the cash reserves built up in the previous decline are exhausted. Some analysts feel the current market rally is reminiscent of the 1973 bear market rally which seemed to thrive on darkening economic and political news.

The market ended the week at 846.85, up 6.15 for the week. Transportations continued to enjoy a bull market, advancing 1.41 to close at 229.16. Utilities are still lagging the market, closing the week at 104.26, off .34. The American Stock Exchange after scoring record highs for 13 consecutive sessions, ended the week at 144.86, up 2.29. The Composite Index closed at 121.57, up 2.17. Big Board volume for the week was 204,170,000 shares. Issues recording new 12 month highs reached 902, with 203 hitting new lows.

Skepticism Marks Mart Outlook

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearing the end of its third month, the stock market's spring rally is still being greeted with skepticism and confusion on Wall Street.

A number of analysts argue that it can't last because it is occurring at the "wrong" time in the normal cyclical pattern of the economy.

And even some who believe it may represent an important shift in the mood of investors acknowledge that it doesn't make sense in comparison with the market's past behavior.

Bull markets, they note, are supposed to begin with the economy at a low ebb as investors look ahead to a recovery — not more than three years into a business expansion.

Bull markets are supposed to begin as interest rates peak and head downward, not while rates are climbing steadily.

Bull market's aren't supposed to begin amid the kind of inflation worries that are currently in evidence among investors and businessmen and in Washington.

Yet the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials hit an eight-month high this past week in the course of a 6.15 advance to 846.85.

Since the end of February the average has risen 104.73 points.

Other weekly readings showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index up .10 at 54.95, and the American Stock Exchange market value index gained 2.09 to 144.66.

Big Board volume came to 204.19 million shares — the second busiest total on record, surpassed only by the 212.29 million total April 17-21. Almost 1 billion shares have traded in the past five weeks, in by far the busiest period in the exchange's history.

Perhaps typical of the skeptical camp are the views of Joseph McAlinden, director of research at Argus Research Corp.

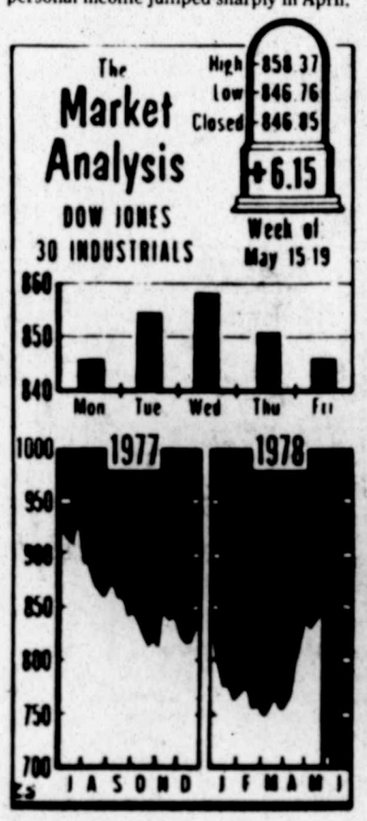
"This spring's explosive advance in stock prices has been described by many as a 'fundamental turn'," he wrote in this month's commentary on the market.

"But bear market bottoms in the past have occurred in conjunction with cyclically declining interest rates and an economy that was entering — if not well into — a period of slowdown or contraction.'

"Stocks are cheap on a long-term basis," he said, but "the basic forces which have traditionally driven stock prices downward in the late stages of business expansions — rising interest rates and faltering expectations of business activity — will soon be operative again, the 'cheapness' of stocks notwithstanding.

"If the early March lows did indeed mark the end of the bear market, this cycle constitutes a radical departure from the past."

Alan R. Shaw at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. observed that the spring rally had demonstrated "the market's ability to occasionally humble its creators by sending up smoke screens.



MARKET ANALYSIS — The Dow Jones average closed at 846.85 Friday, up 6.15 from the week prior. Analysts said the market dipped as a result of Thursday's decline of the dollar abroad but not enough to totally offset the spring rally. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas Test Wells Drilled For Thermal Energy

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Back in the days of cheaper energy, an oil or gas driller might hit water, cap the well and walk away, disappointed. But times have changed — and so have wells.

In Brazoria County, the drillers of a test well are looking for just that: hot water under tremendous pressure that, at least in some cases, could replace oil and gas as the energy source for electricity generation.

Aside from its benefits to the energy industry, it could mean a bonus for Texas, since the state has vast holdings of public lands already leased to firms involved in producing more conventional fuel.

Pioneering the effort are the General Land Office, the agency responsible for leasing public lands, and the University of Texas Center for Energy Studies. Both hope to receive a federal Department of Energy Grant to help back the $3.3 million project — perhaps the first well in a richly-endowed geothermal field in Texas.

A coastal well is a "natural" for geothermal production, says Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, because it lies in a T-shaped geothermal field extending along the Gulf coast from Houston to Brownsville and reaching into the Gulf of Mexico near Corpus Christi.

A second area in West Texas may not have the same potential for development, he says, because there are fewer nearby facilities for electricity generation.

Dr. Myron Dorffman, director of Geothermal Studies for the Center for Energy Research, says the idea has been studied for the past four years.

"It's very much like an oil and gas well, only its deeper," he says "We're used to drilling conventional gas wells, but this is gas and water."

Dorffman says the project involves drilling through a series of sands below 15,000 feet into an aquifer (underground reservoir) with large amounts of water and natural gas at estimated temperatures of 350 degrees Farenheit and a pressure of 122,000 pounds per square inch.

Natural gas produced at the site will be sold, Dorffman said, although he doesn't know who the buyer will be; pressured and thermal energy will be used for electricity or heat application, he notes.

The well probably will take a year to drill, Dorffman estimates, and testing the system will require another 12 months or so. And, of course, the problems don't stop when the well is drilled, Armstrong notes.

"We're still not sure what kind of junk we'll have to get rid of to get to the source," he says, noting that waste materials and unwanted minerals must be disposed of — or re-injected into the well, possibly at high costs.

Armstrong figures the state could assess drillers of geothermal wells the same one-fifth royalties charged other drillers on public lands. But he's taking a "wait-and-see" attitude before he allows himself to get to optimistic about the future of geothermal exploration.

"I hope it works," Armstrong says, awaiting work on the Department of Energy grant. "But I want to be cautious."

"It has a lof of potential, but everybody 35 or over has the potential for being President of the United States."

Tennessee, Plains On Carter Itinerary

The daughter of Billy Carter, the president's brother, will be married at home Sunday evening to 19-year-old Johnny Theus of nearby Ellaville.

An estimated 1,000 guests will witness the event, but apparently no reporters. "It's not the president's wedding; it's my wedding and I don't want publicity," Jana said last week.

Carter's last trip home was Jan. 21, when he interrupted a vacation at St. Simons Island, Ga. to attend the funeral of his uncle, Alton Carter.

The president, scheduled to arrive in Plains at 10:30 a.m., has no plans to attend religious service at either the Plains Baptist Church or the breakaway Maranatha Baptist Church, White House press secretary Jody Powell said last week.

The Maranatha church was formed last year by a splinter group, including some Carter relatives, opposed to the Plains Baptist Church's policy of not admitting blacks. Carter has avoided taking sides in the dispute.

After spending the night at his home in Plains, Carter planned to visit Knoxville and Oak Ridge, Tenn., on Monday before returning to the White House.

Though Tennessee gave Carter 57 percent of the vote in 1976, it is the home of Sen. Howard Baker, who is considered a leading contender for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. By visiting traditionally conservative Knoxville, where Baker once practiced law, the president has angered some Tennessee Democrats.

Al Bissell, the mayor of Oak Ridge who was an early Carter supporter, reportedly was disgruntled that the president would make a public appearance in Knoxville but limit his Oak Ridge visit to a private appearance at government-owned facilities.

In Knoxville, the president will address about 2,500 employees of the Tennessee Valley Authority, then drive to Oak Ridge, site of the controversial Clinch River breeder reactor Carter opposes.

However, the president does not plan to visit the site of the model nuclear power project he says could contribute to the spread of nuclear weapons capability.

Rather, the trip is aimed at "reassuring the scientific community that they will have a significant role in the future of energy research and development," according to an aide to Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn.

Sasser invited Carter, who is trained as a nuclear engineer, to visit Oak Ridge, a city that was built during World War II to develop the atomic bomb and now is dominated by three large installations owned by the Department of Energy that concentrate on nuclear energy research and development.

Schorr Says Agency Eyed Legal Moves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former television reporter Daniel Schorr said Saturday that the Justice Department considered prosecuting both him and his publisher after he provided a secret House Intelligence Committee report to a New York newspaper in 1976.

Schorr said departmental documents in the case, which he recently obtained under a Freedom of Information Act request, show that the idea of criminal action was dropped when the Central Intelligence Agency and State Department refused to declassify documents that would have been necessary for a trial.

The former CBS reporter, who resigned his network job amid controversy over his role in the publication of the intelligence report, said "I knew the Justice Department was looking for me all along, but I didn't know they were looking for the publisher."

The report was printed by the Village Voice, for which Clay Felker then served as publisher.

Schorr and his still-unnamed source for the secret report also were targets of a probe by the House ethics committee, but that investigation quietly fizzled out with no official action except for criticism of the reporter.

Schorr's remarks Saturday came in an address to a "Whistleblowers Conference," sponsored by the Institute for Policy Studies and featuring discussion of problems encountered by government employees who disclose wrongdoing.

He said that Justice Department documents showed that then-Attorney General Edward Levi asked Richard Thornburgh, then head of the criminal division, what the possibilities of prosecution were following publication of the House panel's report.

Thornburgh replied, according to Schorr, that the reporter, his publisher and his source all were potential targets, though the source likely was a member or staff employee of Congress and would claim congressional immunity.

Schorr said there was some discussion of charging him or the publisher with passing secret information to a foreign power, on the untried theory that mere publication of sensitive information constitutes such an exchange.

"But they decided to give up because they couldn't get the CIA and State to declassify the necessary papers," Schorr said.

Schorr was joined at the podium by Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., who has introduced legislation designed to protect government workers from dismissal or harassment when they disclose official waste or wrongdoing.

Abourezk said that although President Carter long ago promised such protections, he has so far done "next to nothing" and "the same thugs who terrorized government employees under (Richard) Nixon and (Gerald) Ford are still doing business as usual."

Pops Schedules 'Close Encounter'

By HELEN DIXON
Family News Editor

Do the names Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi, Artoo Detoo or See Threepio sound familiar?

The Lubbock Symphony Orchestra invites you to come aboard Starship LSSP (Lubbock Symphony Summer Pops) June 16, and have a close encounter with some of those folks, as well as your friends and neighbors. Bring the whole family to the Exhibit Hall at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

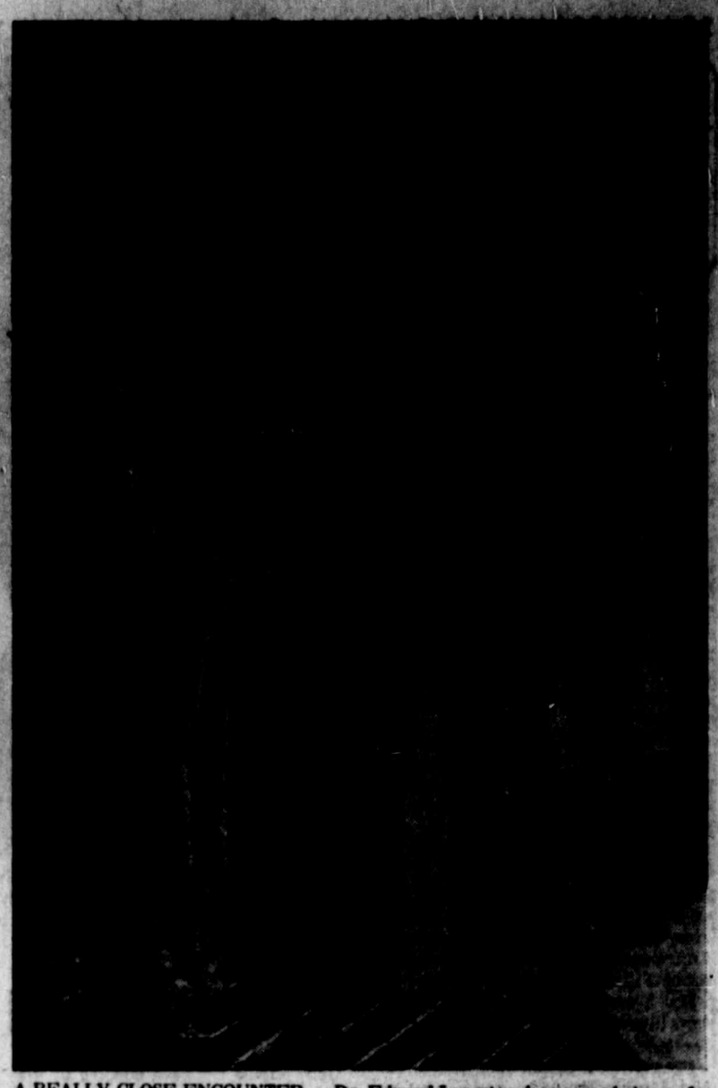
On that gala night, noted pianist Peter Nero along with Richard Natista on the electric bass and Andy Zoob on drums will 'join forces' with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra under the direction of conductor William A. Harrod. Featured numbers will include the suite from "Star Wars" "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "2001: A Space Odyssey."

Peter Nero, gold records artist, is particularly famous for his interpretations of "Summer of '42" and the theme from "The Godfather." All this fine music, and much more, is scheduled for the evening. The fun begins at 7 p.m. with a buffet supper and beverages served to those holding reserved seating dinner tickets. The concert begins at 8:30 p.m. and upper floor seating, both reserved and general admission will have serve-yourself beverages available.

Chairmen not pictured include Mrs. John R. Chalk, co-chairman for Summer Pops; Mrs. F.B. Pyle Jr., arrangements and Mrs. Douglas Sanford, printing and advertising.

Tickets for main floor seating with dinner are $12; upper floor reserved seating, $6, and general admission, $3. Tickets go on sale Monday at the Lubbock Symphony office, 1721 Broadway. Get yours early for this popular sell-out event.

THE FORCE BE WITH YOU — Obviously Ben (Obi Wan) Kenobi (?) means nothing but good for Mrs. Jack Strong, "Summer Pops" chairman and Maestro William A. Harrod, conductor of the Lubbock Symphony. Tickets for the concert will go on sale Monday so music lovers can all be "with the force" June 16.



A REALLY CLOSE ENCOUNTER — Dr. Edward Langston, beverage chairman for the June 16 "Summer Pops" concert, assures a visitor from outer space he is welcome in Lubbock. Mrs. Robert Ranck, chairman of ticket sales for the event, adds her assurance that the Civic Center exhibit hall will be filled to the rafters with enthusiastic concert goers at the all pops gala featuring Peter Nero.

OUT OF THIS WORLD BUFFET — Guests with main floor dinner reservations will be served such a sumptious buffet it would make friends of 'Luke Skywalker' and 'Darth Vader.' Roast beef, chicken, salads and cakes are only a few of the entrees to be served. Anticipating these culinary delights and the concert to follow which will feature the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra and pianist Peter Nero are, from left, Mrs. Richard Spikes, food chairman; Charley Pope, finance chairman; Mrs. Pope; Mrs. Jerry Kolander Jr. (serving) chairman of the ushers and Mrs. Nolen Swain, secretary for "Summer Pops" June 16 at the Civic Center.

By The Way...

By HELEN DIXON

If burglars appear to prey on women, it's largely because it's more lucrative.

William Wray who's on the board of the National Crime Prevention Association notes: "it's the women who have the fur coats, jewelry, sterling flatware and other easy to carry and highly negotiable knick-knacks. It's simply good economy for a burglar to seek out the home of a woman alone."

And nowadays there are more women living alone. In the past 10 years the number of women under 35 who live alone in their own apartments or homes has increased by 114 percent. The number of divorced women head of households has more than doubled in the same period. Women with husbands away all day are also, for all practical purposes, women alone.

The statistics he cites, which come from the FBI's Nationwide Crime Report, are enough to shock every woman into doing everything possible to make her home invulnerable.

A burglary occurs every 13 seconds. In the time it takes you to read this, 15 burglaries will take place! Somebody is held up every 68 seconds, a rape is committed every nine minutes. One out of every 18 Americans will be a crime victim during the next 12 months.

For a woman alone, here are some ways to protect herself, property and possessions:

Preserve your sexual anonymity. Telephone listings should have only a first initial, not a first name.

Ask delivery people to leave packages outside the door. Never, for any reason, invite a sales person or fund-raiser, no matter how ingratiating and of what sex, into your home or apartment.

If you have an automatic answering service, never leave a message saying you're out or away.

Invest in the best locks you can buy from a reliable locksmith. While no lock is completely burglar proof, some locks take longer than others to pick, and the average burglar prefers to go where the picking is easy. When you move into a new home or apartment, change all the locks. And lock your door everytime you leave — even if it's just for a few minutes.

Guard your keys. If you lose them, have locks or cylinders changed immediately. Don't hide keys in a mailbox or under a flower pot. Separate your house and car keys when you're having your car repaired.

- Light up. Front and back entrances to homes should be well lit to discourage intruders.
- Mark your possessions. The Lubbock police department, Detective division, provides free use of an etching tool to mark your valuables.
- Don't put it off. Do it now before it's too late.

- Courtship is a lot like looking at the pictures in a seed catalogue. Marriage is what comes up in your garden.

- Everytime we've been invited out to dinner in California, be it barbecue, beach or formal dinner, sure to make its appearance is the ubiquitous "Grasshopper Pie." If you've never made one, here's the original recipe sent us by Lorena Nolen, a friend who lives in California.
- Crush 14 chocolate cookies and mix with two tablespoons of softened butter — press into bottom of a nine inch square pan or pie plate. (Save some crumbs for the top.) Combine one package of lime flavored gelatin and two tablespoons of sugar in a small bowl. Add one cup of boiling water, and stir until dissolved. Add a half cup of cold water, two tablespoons of creme de menthe and a half teaspoon of vanilla. Chill until partially set.
- Beat one egg white until foamy, then blend in one tablespoon of sugar and beat until stiff peaks form. On the low speed of your mixture blend the partially set gelatin into the meringue.
- Whip a half cup of cream (or use one cup of frozen whipped topping, thawed,) and add the gelatin mixture as the cream begins to thicken (or blend into whipped topping on low speed.) Add four or five drops of green food coloring, and chill until firm.
- Then imagine yourself in the Hollywood hills, looking out over the Pacific while you enjoy this dreamy pie.

- We're personally against all types of terrorism: things like assassinations, hijacking, kidnapping and food prices.

- The best cure for insomnia, as W.C. Fields noted, is lots of sleep.
- However, to the millions of people who get up bleary eyed and exhausted each day, it's no laughing matter. Many try sleeping pills or alcohol and find only short term relief. Wry advice from the doctor to avoid worrying about it and relax, has tended to leave insomnia sufferers even more frustrated and anxious.
- One way of relaxing for sleep is muscular. Here are some tips:
- Begin by stretching out your body straight, with your head supported by a pillow. Alternately raise each leg slowly, up to about 45 degrees, then lower. Breathe out as you raise your leg; in as you lower.
- Another exercise to do while lying stretched out is to put both arms over your head and try to stretch your arms out as far as possible, while stretching with your feet at the same time. Hold for five seconds, then relax. Breathe out as you stretch; in as you relax.
- Another form of muscle relaxation is called "autogenic training," where one imagines that each extremity (one by one) is very heavy and impossible to lift.
- Let your muscles put you to sleep.

CELEBRATION OF LEADERSHIP — Judy Ribble, center, was presented the Pat S. Moore Award by the Junior League of Lubbock in recognition of outstanding leadership and service to the community. Judy Ribble Honored By Junior League

Judy Ribble has been honored by the Junior League of Lubbock as the first recipient of the prestigious Pat S. Moore Award, in recognition of her continued service to the community.

The award, established by the board of directors of the Junior League in honor of the late Pat S. Moore, was meant to celebrate the "outstanding leadership in community service and inspiring qualities of womanhood which Pat possessed," according to Anita Taylor, Junior League president.

"It is not an annual event," Mrs. Taylor said, "but one given only at that time when the Board of Directors of this group deems one worthy to receive it."

Mrs. Ribble was cited for her service as president of the PTA of Ballenger School, during which she drew up constitution and bylaws, started the annual Halloween party and worked to get the PTA functioning.

In addition, she organized the Starlight Club, a special class for retarded adults, which provides them with learning and recreational activities, as well as controlled service projects. She organized a volunteer program for the club and took its members bowling Friday nights.

Other experiences she has undertaken are teaching blind children to swim, driving hometeachers for the blind, helping at the Cerebral Palsy Center, chairing the city campaign for Crippled Children, making talking books for the blind, serving on the Easter Seal board and editing the newssheet for the Association for Retarded Children.

As a volunteer at the State School, she has served as secretary of the Parents Association for two years, dorm chairman for five years and a member of the Volunteer Council.

Her family has served as hosts to several foreign students at Texas Tech University and to All-American football players when the games were in Lubbock.

As a member of the First Christian Church, she has directed the Vacation Church School, chaired the membership and personnel committees and served on the Administrative Council and search committees. Last year she headed the community service department, and has been a member of the church's official board.

She has served on numerous committees of the Junior League, and has worked with the Camp Kiwanis board, the Women's Council of the Museum Association, been alumnae president and adviser to Delta Gamma and on the City Planning Council. She has been listed as an Outstanding Young Woman in America, and presently served on the Mental Health/Mental Retardation board and the United Way budget committee.

In making the presentation at the Junior League's luncheon Tuesday in Lubbock Country Club, Mrs. Taylor noted that in addition to Mrs. Ribble's busy schedule as a wife, mother and volunteer worker, she works at the family business two to four days each week.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My wife died 18 months ago, and this lady I'm interested in has been a widow for three years. We knew each other "way back when." I'm 66 and this lady is 63.

Before I renew our friendship, I'd like to ask you a few questions. Since her husband died, she's had several men staying with her (one at a time) in her one-bedroom trailer. I've also heard that she has visited an old farmer at his farmhouse (just the two of them) for days at a time.

Last week she headed for Colorado with another old buddy in his camper truck. She said she planned to sleep in motels on the way, and he would sleep in the truck; she didn't say where they would sleep once they got to Colorado.

Now, Abby, I don't want to marry a woman who has a bad reputation. She's the talk of this little town, but she is really a very high-class lady and everybody likes her. What is your advice?

FRANK IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRANK: It seems almost a disservice to the community to take this aging swinger out of circulation — if indeed you could. But if you regard this woman as a "high-class lady," any advice I could give you would fall on deaf ears. And your vision isn't too good, either.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have recently moved into a high-rise apartment, live alone and have a problem that I imagine other single girls who live alone must have. (I am 20 and am saving myself for marriage.)

When my date brings me home, should we say good-night in the lobby, where the doorman, night watchmen and tenants can watch us? Or should I ask my date to walk me to my apartment door and say good-night there? Or should I invite him to step into my apartment to say good-night?

When I first moved here, I let my date step into my apartment to thank him for the lovely evening and it ended up in a one-hour wrestling match. I had a terrible time getting rid of him.

Please answer this soon as I have no mother to ask.

SAVING MYSELF IN TULSA

DEAR SAVING: A girl's date should always see her safely to her door. Don't allow anyone to "step inside" if you have any doubts about how he will behave once he's inside. Even the most careful girls sometimes misjudge a man, so should you find yourself with the "wrestling" type, don't say "good-night" — say "GOOD-BYE!"

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has a very unhappy home life. My folks have been fighting ever since I can remember. They treat me like dirt, and I want to tell you, it is miserable and rotten.

My boyfriend, Brad, is 18, and he comes from a home that's even rottener, if there is such a word. His folks not only fight all the time, but his father beats on his mother. Anyway, Brad has been crazy about me ever since the seventh grade and we are thinking of getting married when he graduates from high school in June. He plans to work days at a garage and go to trade school for mechanics at night. He's real good with cars and motors.

Should I quit school and get a job when Brad graduates? I'd only have a year to go, and could finish later. We wouldn't have much money, but we wouldn't need much, and at least we'd have each other. I need advice. Thank you.

TEARS ON MY PILLOW

DEAR TEARS: Don't use marriage as an excuse to get you out of the house — no matter how "miserable" it is. I urge you to finish high school while you have the chance. The "later" you mention rarely comes. Children usually do instead.

Display At City-County Library Caters To Model Railroad Buffs

Model railroad cars and other items of interest to railroad enthusiasts will be on display at the Lubbock City-County Library throughout May.

Items displayed are from collections owned by members of the Lubbock Model Railroad Association.

Highlighting the exhibit are several solid brass replicas of engines used by railroads in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, as well as demonstrations of techniques for making realistic landscapes and completed scenes. Other items are miniature buildings made by club members, antique railroad lanterns and photographs of steam engines.

NEW GARNISH

Sieve a hard-cooked egg as a garnish for that old standy — lettuce, tomato and cucumber salad.

BEET TIPS

If you have a food processor, it's easy to puree drained canned beets. Serve the puree cold or hot flavored with bottled white horseradish and sour cream. Good with beef.

BIRTH CONTROL NEWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several new birth control methods could be in wide use within three years, but they are essentially improvements of existing hormone approaches for use by women and not men, say contraceptive experts. Speakers at a National Academy of Sciences symposium on contraceptive technology said on Wednesday there is increasing evidence men want to share the responsibility and risks of birth control. But George Zeidenstein, president of The Population Council, said reltively few researchers in reproductive biology are trained with emphasis on the male.

Dress Rules Real 'Duds'

Few places rival Malawi, one of southeast Africa's most interesting countries, for the severity of its dress rules for tourists.

Foreign women wearing shorts, pants or miniskirts are not even allowed into the country, says Lea Ann Van Houten, who collects travel data for a major credit card system. Men with long hair are also barred.

Sports and swimming attire is allowed only in designated areas along the shores of Lake Nyasa, one of the chief attractions of the former British protectorate called Nyasaland.

Violators are deported as "prohibited immigrants," applied to include tourists.

9. On Blueberry Hill (Antoine, of course, is Fats.)
10. Well, start with Beulah the Witch. Then add Madame Oelpuss and Dumb Cecil Bill and Dolores Dragon and Fletcher Rabbit. That's five. (Then you might throw in Windbag Colonel Crackie or Mercedes or Ollie's niece or...)

Anniversaries

DOSS

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Doss of Hale Center will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary from 3-5:30 p.m. today in their home.

Children of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. A.D. Morris of Plainview and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doss of Dimmitt.

The couple has lived in Hale County since 1921 and in Hale Center since 1948.

TAYLOR

Mr. and Mrs. C.C. Taylor Jr. were honored with a reception from 5 to 7 p.m. Saturday in the Fellowship Hall of Highland Baptist Church on the occasion of their 30th wedding anniversary.

Hosts for the occasion were the couple's children: Mrs. David F. Melcher of Amarillo, and Donna Taylor and Hank Taylor of Lubbock.

The former Jo Kathryn Dale and Taylor were married May 29, 1948, in Plainview, and have lived in Lubbock since then.

HALL

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hall will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception in their home from 2 to 4 p.m. today.

Host for the event will be the couple's son, Bobby Hall of Miami, Fla.

Hall and the former Marie Brewer were married May 12, 1928, in Corinth, Miss., and lived there for 20 years. They moved to Lubbock in 1951.

He is retired.

PTA

The PTA of Evans Junior High School will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the auditorium of Monterey High School for a recognition assembly and installation of officers. The program will include announcement of the winners of the "Eagle of the Year" award.

WHAT'S COOKING? — The basic concepts of nutrition, learned at an early age, become second nature to cooks, and that is the goal of the Expanded Nutrition Program. Part of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the program is aiming to teach young persons between the ages of nine and 19. Following through on the lesson are, from left, Lydia Garcia, 9; Linda Ortega, 10; Diana Castillo, 10; and Lupe Sosa, 9, whose volunteer leader is Francisca Alvarado.

Fun, Food Combine In Nutrition Class

Teaching the practical application of nutrition information and food preparation practices is the purpose of the Expanded Nutrition Program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, a program in operation in Lubbock since 1969.

ENP works with homemakers in the individual home setting to explain and put into practice basic normal nutrition concepts.

The program is currently aimed at teaching youth between the ages of nine and 19. This is done by working with volunteer leaders in the community.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Services Agent in the field of home economics-ENP teaches basic nutrition and food preparation concepts to a group of paraprofessionals, who in turn go into the community and identify mothers, older sister and brothers and various organization leaders to become volunteer leaders.

Once the leader is identified, the paraprofessional ENP assistant teaches the volunteer leader the nutrition information, which in turn the children are taught by the leader.

The nutrition lessons are very simple to teach and are completely planned and written out. Pictures, songs and games are planned for each lesson, along with a printed sheet for each child to take home, telling about basic health and nutrition concepts taught in the group lesson. There are also questions for the children to see if they can answer in regard to the nutrition lesson after they have had some good times learning about a basic nutrient and "cooking" food which contains that nutrient.

When the lessons have been completed, the boys and girls are given a certificae and have a special graduation exercise.

ENP Youth lessons can be taught to volunteer leaders to be used with individual home groups, church groups and other community organizations.

If you enjoy children and have some extra time to donate to the program, call Billie Cowling, the Extension agent for the ANPO, at 792-4789 or go to the office at 4232 Boston.

The ENP is part of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, an Equal Opportunity organization. Persons of all race, color and national origin are invited to participate in the program.

Extension Update

Well, I finally made myself get around to one of the home chores that I dislike the most — cleaning the oven. It really wouldn't be so bad if I'd just do it more often.

I happen to have a standard oven that has to be cleaned manually. You should be aware of what type of oven you have.

Today's consumer has three oven-cleaning options to choose from. These options include the standard porcelain-enamel oven, the self-cleaning oven and the continuous-cleaning oven.

Actually, each type is a porcelain-enamel oven, but differences involve performance as well as required use and care.

STANDARD OVEN

The standard oven uses a conventional porcelain-enamel finish, such as my oven.

There is only one way to clean this type oven — manually, using a homemade or commercial oven cleaner.

SELF-CLEANING

With the self-cleaning oven, a separate cleaning cycle is used. The door is locked and controls set to permit the oven to heat to temperatures around 900 degrees F.

In the two-to three-hour cleaning cycle, food spatters and spills are oxidized or burned off with only a small amount of white or gray ash remaining.

After the one-to two-hour cool-down period, unlock the door and wipe up the ash residue, leaving a spotlessly clean oven. This is the type I wish I had.

CONTINUOUS-CLEANING OVEN

Be careful with this type of oven — and use the correct procedure. With the continuous-cleaning system, oven soil is gradually reduced to a "presentably clean" condition throughout the specially treated surfaces activated during normal baking or roasting procedures.

This clean-while-you-bake system works most efficiently at high temperatures (475 degrees F. and above) and for longer periods of time. But a lot of homemakers have difficulty getting and keeping this type clean.

Heavy spillovers usually need additional attention after the oven cools — usually soaking and/or light scrubbing according to the manufacturer's instructions. But don't use a commercial oven-cleaner — you'll ruin your oven if you do.

PURCHASE COST

The purchase cost of the self-cleaning oven is higher than the standard porcelain-enamel or continuous-cleaning oven, but I would consider it worth the extra cost.

Because it has more insulation, the self-cleaning oven is more energy-efficient during normal baking and roasting.

These ovens use three to four kilowatt hours of electricity per cleaning, so the oven cleaning cost averages about 15 cents depending on local rates.

By comparison, cleaning the conventional oven often requires 75 cents worth of commercial oven cleaner for each manual cleaning.

Expect a higher initial purchase cost — offset over the life of the range by higher operating efficiency, lower cleaning costs — for fully automated cleaning.

THIS WEEK'S HINTS

Milk and milk products supply about 85 percent of the calcium intake in the U.S. Other dietary sources of calcium are dried fruits, leafy green vegetables, molasses and dried beans. I learned at a meeting that 25 to 30 percent of women over 50 have osteoporosis — partly because they completely quit drinking milk. Adults need two glasses per day.

Here's an interesting item. Forty-nine percent of the women between ages 14 and 25 surveyed by the American Council of Life Insurance expect to become homemakers. But, only one-fourth actually look forward to the role. How do you feel about your role as a homemaker?

Do not cut off snagged or pulled yarns in fabric. Stretch fabric to restore appearance as much as possible — then pull the snag to the under side with a needle, a fine crochet hook or a gadget available at notions counters designed especially for repairing snags. Otherwise, you may end up with a hole in your garment.

The word "influenza" comes from the Italian word meaning "to influence." Ancient Italian astrologers believed that the stars caused or "influenced" illness. I just thought you might be interested in that little tidbit.

If you have any questions concerning home economics or 4-H, please call me at the County Extension Office.

4-H HAPPENINGS

We have several 4-H'ers who will be competing in method demonstrations and illustrated talk contests at College Station June 6-8.

The 4-H'ers need practice in giving their presentations before groups. If you belong to a club or organization that will be meeting in May, would you consider having some 4-H'ers for your program? The presentations are about eight to 12 minutes each. Thank you.

KID KNOWLEDGE

PARIS (WNS) — Chantal Goya's advice to mothers: "Listen to your children; they know just as much as you do." For 11 years Chantal tried to become a singing star but had no success. Then she gave up her career to take care of her home and children for four years. One day her small daughter asked, "Why don't you sing to children instead of to grown-ups?" Chantal's first song for children was titled "Le Lapin" (The Rabbit), and was an immediate hit. Her second record, "Let's Dance With Mickey," sold 1.5 million copies in less than four months and won her an invitation to Disneyland in June for the 50th anniversary of Mickey Mouse.

THOUGHTS ON HOPE

"The brief span of life forbids us to cherish a long hope." (Horace: "Odes")

Program Helps Dieters Change Self-Image

By JANICE JARVIS
Family News Staff

For many diet conscious Americans, low calorie celery has made gourmet feasts extinct. But even after pounds are shed, many people continue to think "fat." Changing that self image is what a group called the "Thin Heads" is all about.

It's a new concept in weight control, which started in California four years ago and is now in Lubbock, according to Phil Sorley a local psychologist.

Sorley conducts several groups, designed to help individuals get weight off and keep it off, through behavior modification techniques and hypnosis.

The work program is difficult admits Sorley, but the results are beneficial, especially for those who view the group as a 'last chance' after a long string of diets, exercises and gimmicks.

The first step in the 'Thin Head' program is to change attitudes left from childhood. "People need to replace old mental tapes, which reinforce poor eating habits, with new tapes, " explained Sorley. "Parents encourage children to clean their plates and if the children don't do so, often they're punished."

As a result, the same mental tapes tell adults that as long as they overeat they are still good persons.

Children often deal with stress by overeating and those same habits carry over into adulthood. "Stress experienced by an adult is often soothed by something to eat," said Sorley.

To change poor eating habits, behavior modification techniques along with self hypnosis are used.

Participants are asked to write down everything they eat. Soon a pattern is revealed. They may eat when they are depressed and the foods they choose to eat are often 'comfort' foods. "They eat when they want to feel better and they often eat sweets and junk food," said Sorley.

Once a person knows how much he eats, the next step is to change those eating habits.

Participants are allowed a certain number of calories weekly. "The first week most people eat all the permitted calories in a few days, but soon they learn to regulate themselves," explained Sorley.

Once they start to loose weight, Sorley guides them through methods designed to help them change their image. "Once a person thinks of himself as fat it's often difficult to change the picture," Sorley noted. Furthermore, since they have never been slim, they may be unwilling to experience being thin. "They're what I call diet junkies — as long as they're dieting, people are telling them how great they look. Once they've lost that weight, they lose the attention too," he added. As a result, just about the time they get to their desired weight, they start overeating.

Others, especially women, may fear being sexually attractice when slim. "Fat serves as an emotional overcoat for some people," said Sorley.

There are also those women who put their families before themselves, using them as a convenient excuse for overeating.

"It seems to be a classic West Texas thing — people do everything for their families, but won't do something for themselves," said Sorley. The first step toward changing those attitudes is to learn to spend more time on one's self. "Even if it's just an hour a week the idea is to get pleasure just for one's self from something other than food," advised Sorley.

Participants are also taught new attitudes about their bodies, beginning by looking critically at one's self in a mirror. "It's very difficult for some women to stand nude in front of a mirror and actually touch their bodies," explained Sorley.

The next step is to make a list of the things they like and dislike about their bodies.

Once they've completed the list, participants itemize the things they can change and the things they can't. Extremely overweight women are concerned about loose skin left after weight loss but that can be corrected with plastic surgery, Sorley observed. Finally an individual must decide what things she wants to change and what she'll leave ' as is.'

The last procedure of the class is accepting one's self and taking responsibility for actions. "Overeating is not something that happens to someone, it's something they do to themselves," said Sorley.

Finally, participants are told what to expect once they've reached their goal, and they are warned not to expect too much. After all, once a person loses weight, "bells don't ring and the world doesn't take notice that the person is suddenly skinny," said Sorley.

To ease the blow of discovering the world doesn't stop just because a person loses weight, group members give each other emotional support and guidance.

That support works to an advantage as well as a disadvantage. "When a person stops losing weight often she won't come to the group," noted Sorley.

But in the long run the program works; people lose weight and adjust to a new self image. There's no limit on how long a person may spend in the group — for some only a few weeks, for others months.

'Disco Queen' Analyzes Life

Europe's biggest hit as disco queen is Amanda Lear, who is also topping the charts in West Germany and Italy with a new album, "I Am a Photograph." She has also been a model, a girl friend of David Bowie and — at the other end of the spectrum — an amour of Salvador Dali's.

Of Dali, she says, "his company was so stimulating that after him I found all men disappointing."

Traffic Safety Office Works To Cut Losses From Accidents

By SALLY LOGUE
Family News Staff

The rising crime rate is a major concern to many Lubbock citizens, but city public information officer Vaughn Hendrie believes they should be just as concerned about the city's traffic problem.

"Last year there were 33 murders, but 51 persons died in traffic accidents," he said. There were 4,400 burglaries as compared to 10,400 traffic accidents. Property lost as a result of burglary amounted to $1,900,000, but traffic accidents accounted for $7.8 million in lost property.

Hendrie pointed out that the $7.8 million figure doesn't include medical bills, loss of earnings and other unaccountable occurrences.

Hendrie's answer to this problem is that "we must make people realize that most accidents are caused by someone else," he said. "Safe drivers must be made aware that no matter how safely they drive, they can become involved in an accident due to the carelessness of someone else,".

Since Hendrie's office took over the traffic safety program last October, he has attepted to produce a more active program.

"We have tried to encourage safe driving, but that is hard to do because you are trying to change people's habits," said Hendrie.

The department sponsors special programs during the year. One of their major programs is a back-to-school campaign in August and September.

The first phase of the campaign is to alert drivers to the fact there will be more children crossing the streets and walking to school. Secondly, it is designed to reach the young people in an effort to let them know the safest ways to school, he said.

"This year about 20,000 folders will be distributed to all elementary schools showing the safest route to school," said Hendrie.

Hendrie said he believes the best way to help decrease the traffic problem is to have more people enroll in defensive driving courses.

These courses, in addition to paying dividends in safer driving habits, also can save drivers money on insurance premiums.

Hendrie advised interested persons to check with their own insurance agents to make sure these savings apply to their policies.

The defensive driving course, which consists of two four-hour sessions, is open to all licensed drivers.

The course is designed to teach drivers to "look out for the other guy."

"It will cover things that are usually not stressed in driver education classes in the schools," said Hendrie.

Hendrie pointed out that last year 13 fatal accidents occurred at intersections that had either stop signs or signal lights. If everyone had taken this course, then perhaps some of the accidents would not have occurred, simply because the drivers would have been more alert to a possible hazardous situation. Hendrie suggested.

"The ideal situation would be where one could be able to anticipate an accident before it occurs," he said. While he admits it is an unrealistic situation, Hendrie says he believes the course would help to the extent that if all drivers took a defensive driving course, traffic accidents could be cut by one half.

Hendrie said his major problem is attendance.

"We have to cancel classes simply because there are not enough people enrolled."

In an effort to increase interest and the number of classes, Hendrie's department is beginning a program to encourage business, civic and social groups to take advantage of the course at a discount rate.

Hendrie said the only defensive driving course that is always full is the violators school, required of all third-time traffic offenders.

"If these people complete the course within 90 days, then their ticket will be dismissed. We are hoping that by attending this course, the violators will realize that they must change their driving habits.

"Hardly any accidents are caused by those who do not break the laws," he emphasized.

Hendrie said his department is also attempting to update its film library.

"We are trying to get newer films to replace those that are out of date or damaged," he said. "We won't have as many films, but they will be better — it's hard for people to relate to a film when they see a guy with a 'flat-top' driving a '62 Chevy," he said.

The film library is available to all school, civic and social groups.

Persons interested in the defensive driving courses, film library or any traffic-related program should call the Office of Public Information in City Hall.

LIFT AND KICK — The 'Feelin' Good' classes at the YMCA will be "an integrated system of healthful living for children," said Mary Black, class director. Class sessions will center around a 30-45-minute exercise program. Trying the leg lift are Kyle Beebe, left, son of Kathy Beebe, and Ethan Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Logan. IT'S EASY! — Instructor Mary Black demonstrates one of the many exercises for improved muscle tone and increased general fitness the YMCA 'Activetics' class will do each week. YMCA Fitness Programs Benefit Children, Adults

By DALE RAYMAN
Family News Staff

Feeling better, being more productive, for a longer period of time — those are the goals of the new exercise programs at the YMCA.

Mary Black, director of the 'Activetics' program for adults, said many of the basic exercises in the program are now being utilized in the regular exercise classes at the 'Y.'

"Starting June 5, we're going to be offering 'Activetics' as a separate, comprehensive fitness program to help women develop a trimmer, healthier body in relation to the cardio-vascular system," she said.

The program, devised by Charles T. Kuntzleman of the Spring Arbor, Mich., YMCA, combines dieting, exercises and lectures about various health topics to produce improved function of the heart and lungs and to extend an individual's active years, she noted.

'Activetics' will teach adults how to eat for health and fitness, and how to use exercise to overcome chronic fatigue, lower back pain and stress.

But if exercise can help adults improve their health and enrich their daily lives by enhancing their physical condition, it's just as good for children.

Miss Black described the 'Feelin' Good' program offered by the YMCA as an "integrated system of healthful living for children — they will learn proper eating habits, new sports skills, how to build energy and stamina and techniques for reducing coronary heart disease risk factors in children."

The 'Feeling' Good' program will also begin June 5.

Classes for both programs will meet for an hour each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for six weeks. 'Feelin' Good' classes will meet at 4 p.m., and the 'Activetics' classes meet from 5 to 6 p.m. Children will be able to enjoy a free swim period while the mothers are in their fun fitness class.

'Y' members will pay a $5 enrollment fee and $3 weekly fee for the 'Activetics' program, but Miss Black noted with a laugh that 'If they are good and come to all three sessions in a week, they will get $1 back!" The enrollment fee for non-members is $10, and the weekly fee is the same.

For the 'Feelin' Good' program the enrollment fees are the same, and there will be no weekly charge.

Interested persons are invited to a "get-acquainted" session for both programs from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday in the All-Purpose Room at the 'Y.'

For more information about the special session or to register for the program, call the YMCA office.

Fans, Moviemakers Still Remember 'Buddy'

AND THE REST IS ROCK'N'ROLL — Buddy Holly was born in Lubbock and went on to become one of the primary innovators of rock and roll. Before dying in a plane disaster at the age of 22, Holly became a legend in Europe. His fans in England still keep his music on the charts almost 20 years later. But there are fans in the United States, also, like Steve Bonner of Dallas who supplied the A-J with an assortment of pictures of Holly. The left photo is one of Holly on stage in England in March of 1958. The center photo is a publicity picture of the Crickets made in New York City in 1958. That's Holly on the left, Joe B. Mauldin on the bottom and Jerry Ivan Allison on the bottom. The photo at right is a publicity shot of Holly made in New York City in January of 1959. According to Bonner, radio station KLLL had a large oil painting done of this photo and presented it to Holly's parents. Finally, the lower photo was taken in Dallas in June of 1958. The Crickets had flown into Dallas after completing a tour, bought the motorcycles and rode them back to Lubbock. More Holly photos are available on page 5-F.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Reaction to Thursday's "world premiere" of the film biography of Buddy Holly, called appropriately enough "The Buddy Holly Story," was varied. A few called in with complaints about Lubbock being "taken." These folks were upset that Holly was from Lubbock, and yet (1) the film was not made here, (2) Lubbock had to share the world premiere spotlight with eight other cities, (3) no stars would be at the local premiere screening of the movie and (4) all the "good stuff" — parties, celebrity appearances, concerts by the ex-Crickets (Holly's band members) and the band that performed in the movie — was all taking place in Dallas.

Columbia Pictures representatives confirmed Thursday that Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson and Linda Ronstadt had all agreed to show up for the Dallas premiere, also. They added the only celebrity of note, other than the Holley family, who would appear at the Lubbock screening would be Joe Ely. And he would not be performing.

Then, on another note, there must have been nearly 100 calls from people asking this writer to secure extra invitations to the Thursday night screening. Sad to say, I could not accomodate.

And then there were the Buddy Holly fans. The real, die-hard, staunch music fans who were not upset with Columbia Pictures for its promotional decisions, but instead with the city of Lubbock for waiting this long to honor Holly in the first place. Buddy Holly was born in Lubbock. He grew up here. And nothing in the way of a park was dedicated to him until Columbia Pictures came up with the idea to help promote the movie.

Earlier in the month, the A-J received a letter from a Holly fan in England. Correspondence increased as the premiere date neared. To cite an example, I received a registered letter from a Dallas resident named Steve Bonner last week, complete with pictures of Holly on stage in New York City and England.

The A-J has decided to run both the letter and the pictures, as further proof that Holly has helped place Lubbock on the map with music enthusiasts worldwide.

Bonner writes:

"I'm sure you know the world premiere of the movie 'The Buddy Holly Story' will be in Lubbock and other cities May 19. I thought that if you are going to do something on Buddy you might could use the enclosed pictures. ...

"I can promise you one thing. Lubbock has been heard of all over the world and it's not because of any college or cotton crops. It's due to Buddy Holly. To this day Buddy's records are issued and re-issued in countries all over the world.

"One thing for sure is that Buddy's record company doesn't keep issuing his records for sentimental reasons. The record company keeps doing this to make money, as they know the records are in demand and will sell.

"Buddy's biggest popularity continues to be in Germany, Australia and England. Most of all England, where Buddy just recently had a number one selling album. In Buddy's short career, he toured in England and Australia.

"Saying Buddy did a lot in a short time would be very much of an understatement. He did something unheard of in 1956 when he went to Nashville to record. He goes to the country & western capital and records a song that has been made popular by a black group. No white artist had attempted that in Nashville at that time. Now here it is 1978 and I can't turn the radio on to a country station without hearing an artist doing this very thing Buddy did in 1956.

"Buddy was ready to go new directions with his music. Even after he had hit after hit. He was not content with just having a hit sound. He was eager to move ahead and try new things in the music industry. Such as being the first rock and roll artist to record with a full string backing. This was just one direction Buddy was moving his music to. He had many other directions in mind, too.

"I guess the one word that would best justify calling Buddy Holly a legend would be inspiration. Many of the early British groups were very much inspired by the Buddy Holly sound. The Beatles even copied their name from Buddy's Crickets. Those that were so inspired by Holly gave much inspiration for other artists and groups.

"I believe I can justify that Buddy was way ahead of his time in music. He was the first to see talent in Waylon Jennings. He played guitar and produced the first record Waylon ever made. That was back in 1958.

Bonner's facts are accurate. Fred Bauer, producer of "The Buddy Holly Story," brought up many of the same points when he visited Lubbock. But Bauer, like many letter-writing fans these days, was also shocked at the lack of recognition Lubbock affords its talented native son.

As he put it, "I can't believe it. Most of the people I talk to in Lubbock don't even know who Buddy Holly was. Buddy Holly! The guy who still sells a million records a year. The guy who was really responsible for the Beatles and the Rolling Stones. I talked with practically every record store in town, and do you realize that I only found one that even carries Buddy Holly records?

Those interested in the fiber arts are also invited to attend the Lubbock Weavers Guild meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room at Monterey Center.

East German Production Premieres New Movie

BERLIN (UPI) — The East German state-run movie producer DEFA recently premiered its newest picture "Ich Zwinge Dich Zu Leben" ("I'm Forcing You To Live") in East Berlin's Kosmos theater.

Fans, Moviemakers Still Remember 'Buddy'

AND THE REST IS ROCK'N'ROLL — Buddy Holly was born in Lubbock and went on to become one of the primary innovators of rock and roll. Before dying in a plane disaster at the age of 22, Holly became a legend in Europe. His fans in England still keep his music on the charts almost 20 years later. But there are fans in the United States, also, like Steve Bonner of Dallas who supplied the A-J with an assortment of pictures of Holly. The left photo is one of Holly on stage in England in March of 1958. The center photo is a publicity picture of the Crickets made in New York City in 1958. That's Holly on the left, Joe B. Mauldin on the bottom and Jerry Ivan Allison on the bottom. The photo at right is a publicity shot of Holly made in New York City in January of 1959. According to Bonner, radio station KLLL had a large oil painting done of this photo and presented it to Holly's parents. Finally, the lower photo was taken in Dallas in June of 1958. The Crickets had flown into Dallas after completing a tour, bought the motorcycles and rode them back to Lubbock. More Holly photos are available on page 5-F.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Reaction to Thursday's "world premiere" of the film biography of Buddy Holly, called appropriately enough "The Buddy Holly Story," was varied. A few called in with complaints about Lubbock being "taken." These folks were upset that Holly was from Lubbock, and yet (1) the film was not made here, (2) Lubbock had to share the world premiere spotlight with eight other cities, (3) no stars would be at the local premiere screening of the movie and (4) all the "good stuff" — parties, celebrity appearances, concerts by the ex-Crickets (Holly's band members) and the band that performed in the movie — was all taking place in Dallas.

Columbia Pictures representatives confirmed Thursday that Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson and Linda Ronstadt had all agreed to show up for the Dallas premiere, also. They added the only celebrity of note, other than the Holley family, who would appear at the Lubbock screening would be Joe Ely. And he would not be performing.

Then, on another note, there must have been nearly 100 calls from people asking this writer to secure extra invitations to the Thursday night screening. Sad to say, I could not accomodate.

And then there were the Buddy Holly fans. The real, die-hard, staunch music fans who were not upset with Columbia Pictures for its promotional decisions, but instead with the city of Lubbock for waiting this long to honor Holly in the first place. Buddy Holly was born in Lubbock. He grew up here. And nothing in the way of a park was dedicated to him until Columbia Pictures came up with the idea to help promote the movie.

Earlier in the month, the A-J received a letter from a Holly fan in England. Correspondence increased as the premiere date neared. To cite an example, I received a registered letter from a Dallas resident named Steve Bonner last week, complete with pictures of Holly on stage in New York City and England.

The A-J has decided to run both the letter and the pictures, as further proof that Holly has helped place Lubbock on the map with music enthusiasts worldwide.

Bonner writes:

"I'm sure you know the world premiere of the movie 'The Buddy Holly Story' will be in Lubbock and other cities May 19. I thought that if you are going to do something on Buddy you might could use the enclosed pictures. ...

"I can promise you one thing. Lubbock has been heard of all over the world and it's not because of any college or cotton crops. It's due to Buddy Holly. To this day Buddy's records are issued and re-issued in countries all over the world.

"One thing for sure is that Buddy's record company doesn't keep issuing his records for sentimental reasons. The record company keeps doing this to make money, as they know the records are in demand and will sell.

"Buddy's biggest popularity continues to be in Germany, Australia and England. Most of all England, where Buddy just recently had a number one selling album. In Buddy's short career, he toured in England and Australia.

"Saying Buddy did a lot in a short time would be very much of an understatement. He did something unheard of in 1956 when he went to Nashville to record. He goes to the country & western capital and records a song that has been made popular by a black group. No white artist had attempted that in Nashville at that time. Now here it is 1978 and I can't turn the radio on to a country station without hearing an artist doing this very thing Buddy did in 1956.

"Buddy was ready to go new directions with his music. Even after he had hit after hit. He was not content with just having a hit sound. He was eager to move ahead and try new things in the music industry. Such as being the first rock and roll artist to record with a full string backing. This was just one direction Buddy was moving his music to. He had many other directions in mind, too.

"I guess the one word that would best justify calling Buddy Holly a legend would be inspiration. Many of the early British groups were very much inspired by the Buddy Holly sound. The Beatles even copied their name from Buddy's Crickets. Those that were so inspired by Holly gave much inspiration for other artists and groups.

"I believe I can justify that Buddy was way ahead of his time in music. He was the first to see talent in Waylon Jennings. He played guitar and produced the first record Waylon ever made. That was back in 1958.

Bonner's facts are accurate. Fred Bauer, producer of "The Buddy Holly Story," brought up many of the same points when he visited Lubbock. But Bauer, like many letter-writing fans these days, was also shocked at the lack of recognition Lubbock affords its talented native son.

As he put it, "I can't believe it. Most of the people I talk to in Lubbock don't even know who Buddy Holly was. Buddy Holly! The guy who still sells a million records a year. The guy who was really responsible for the Beatles and the Rolling Stones. I talked with practically every record store in town, and do you realize that I only found one that even carries Buddy Holly records?

Former Texas Tech University student Jim Sharpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sharpe of 1920 32nd St., is now working as an illustrator in Westport, Conn. But his illustrations are now a part of a history-making art exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. The exhibition is called "The Time Of Our Lives" — and it features 107 of the 900 available paintings, watercolors, drawings, photographs and sculptures used for the covers of Time magazine.

Sharpe has two covers in the show — his Jan. 25, 1971 cover of priests Daniel and Phillip Berrigan, and his March 1, 1974 cover of special prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

According to Sharpe's parents, the illustrator averages three covers per year for Time, and has had 17 of his illustrations used on the cover of the national news magazine since 1971.

Weavers Sponsoring Exhibit

The Lubbock Weavers Guild is sponsoring an exhibit of fiber arts by Susan Brints through the end of May at the Godeke branch of the Lubbock City-County Library.

Miss Brints is showing handwoven pieces and handspun yarns, as well as examples of small tatted medallions and an intricate crocheted shawl done in cotton cable cord. Her 9-year-old daughter Nicole also has a frame loom weaving on display.

Those interested in the fiber arts are also invited to attend the Lubbock Weavers Guild meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room at Monterey Center.

East German Production Premieres New Movie

BERLIN (UPI) — The East German state-run movie producer DEFA recently premiered its newest picture "Ich Zwinge Dich Zu Leben" ("I'm Forcing You To Live") in East Berlin's Kosmos theater.

'Brass Target' Raises Questions About Gen. Patton's Death

George S. Patton was the general people loved to hate. A figure of giant stature, he carried controversy with him in World War II as he led American troops across North Africa; from the shores of Sicily to Messina; through France to the banks of the Elbe. On December 9th 1945, the staff car carrying Patton was involved in an accident.

On December 22nd 1945 he died of his injuries.

Thirty-three years later intrigue and suspicion linger around the death of this most famous of generals. MGM'S "Brass Target," produced by Arthur Lewis, directed by John Hough and starring John Cassavetes, Bruce Davison, Edward Herrmann, George Kennedy, Patrick McGoohan, Robert Vaughn, Max von Sydow and Sophia Loren, asks did Patton die accidentally, as the official documets say, or was his death contrived as part of a daring and ingenious criminal conspiracy?

Filming on location in Munich, "Brass Target" is recreating the dark, desolate days of winter 1945. The German people were struggling to survive in the ruins of their cities. The conquering armies were endeavoring to bring law, order and something akin to normality. General George S. Patton, commmander of the 3rd Army governing the Eastern Military district of the American Zone, was a thorn in everyone's side. Refusing to co-operate with the Russians, Patton openly voiced his dislikes of the communists, to the embarrassment of his Supreme Commander, Eisenhower.

Establishing the mood and feel of that period is of obvious importance. To help get that authentic touch, the production have hired a retired US Army Colonel, Samuel Magil, as adviser. Magill, who was decorated by the US and French Governments for his wartime exploits, has searched and found army 'C' rations; canned bacon; groceries; old whiskey and gin bottles; two truck loads of office furniture; uniforms and dog tags of the period. Ever watchful, he has stopped actors smoking filter-tipped cigarettes..."they didn't exist then"...and has been heard discussing the proportions and availability of the humble brown paper bag, circa 1945.

GI's stationed in Munich recruited to play 1945 versions of themselves in "Brass Target" have had their hair cut in the old 'short back and sides' style and were asked to shave off any mustaches ... "no enlisted man then had a mustache." says Magill, "and it was unlikely that any officer below the rank of captain would have worn one." Those soldier/actors who appear as members of Patton's staff will find themselves with a crew-cut, this apparently was how 'old Blood and Guts' wanted it.

Great care has gone into creating the settings for the film. The art department has found cars, trucks, trams, railway carriages which survived from the war years. Army jeeps and lorriers have been re-vamped. A demolition firm was startled to find an eager buyer for four tons of rubble from a slaughter house they were pulling down. The rubble has become bomb debris. The 1978 American soldier wears a different uniform. Shoes and socks, for example, used to be brown, now they are black, and the 1945 version has had to be hired or made. Purple hearts, silver stars, the green and black European theatre ribbon also have been tracked down.

The Frankfurt street where Sophia Loren as Mara rediscovers de Lucca, played by John Cassavetes, is a masterful and depressing construction. Buildings shattered by bombs and fire stand with broken walls and gaping windows. Piles of rubble line the sidewalk and an aging tram laden with grey, defeated people clanks down the street. To walk along the bombed street or to enter the dusty apartment filled with the remnants of war, created by art director Rolf Zehetbauer, winner of an Academy Award for "Cabaret", is a step back in time. One can almost smell the struggle for survival and feel that here is a place and a society where a plot to get rid of one of American's top genearls could be devised and carried to conclusion.

Massive research into the events surrounding the death of General Patton has been undertaken by the director, John Hough, and all connected with the making of the films. Frederick Nolan, an expert on immediate post-war Germany and its intrigues, and author of the book "Algonquin Project" on which BRASS TARGET is based, says "I don't have to prove it happened, I just establish the possibilities. There were too many bizarre accidents involving Patton around that time and too many unusual happenings to simply dismiss the possbility of his death being more than an accident."

John Hough has a definite aim in directing BRASS TARGET, "it will be a thriller," he says, "but it will also leave serious doubts about whether or not General Patton was assassinated."

A DIFFERENT LOOK AT PATTON — George Kennedy plays General George Patton in the upcoming MGM release called "Brass Target." The film, directed by John Hough, proposes the theory that Patton may have been assassinated. Currently filming on location in Munich, the picture also stars John Cassavetes, Robert Vaughn and Sophia Loren.

Annual Orchestra Camp Set

The 22nd annual Texas Tech Summer Orchestra Camp will be held June 18-30 on the Tech campus. Guest conductors will be Robert Kreis, conductor of the Peoria Symphony in Illinois, and Kypros Markou, conductor of the Canton (Ohio) Youth Symphony.

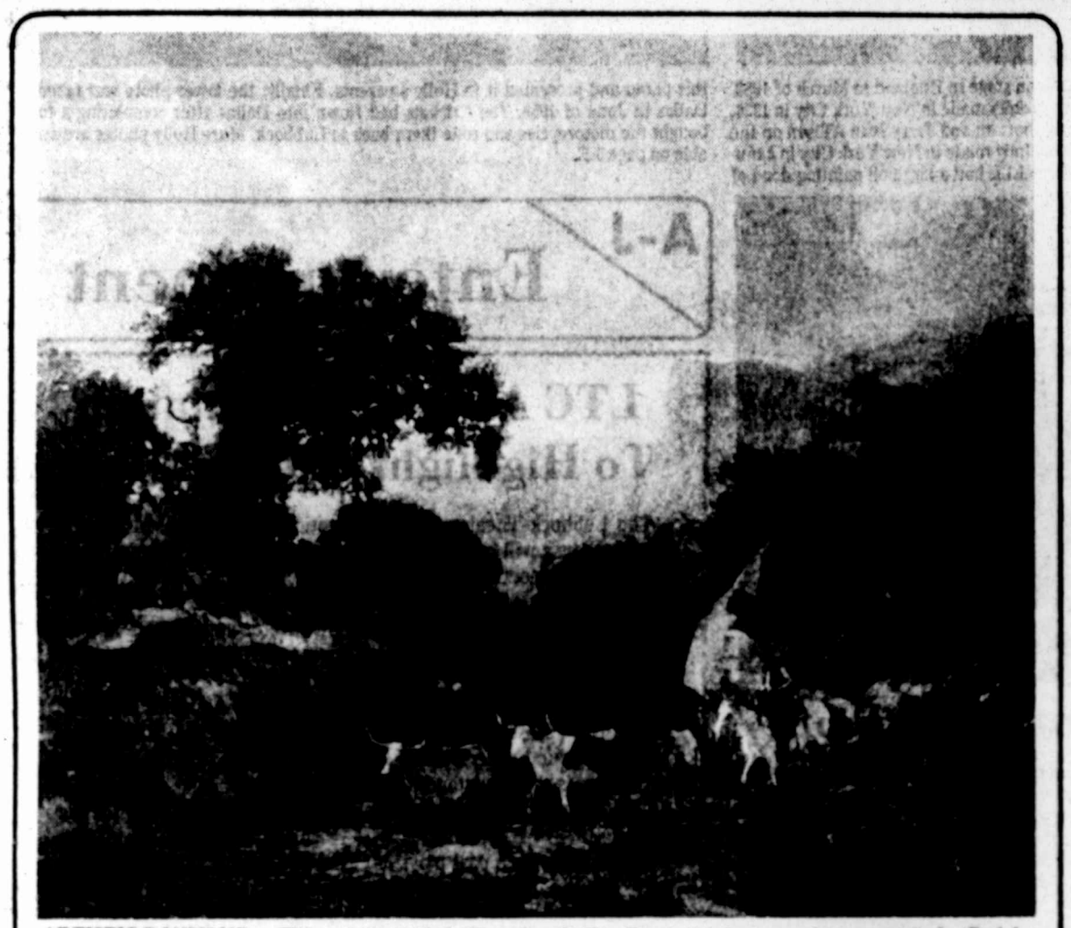
Pre-registration deadline is June 2. Applications and further information regarding tuition, housing and recreation is available by writing Richard Meek, Camp Director, Texas Tech Orchestra Camp, Department of Music, Texas Tech University, Box 4239, Lubbock, Texas 79409.

Kreis was formerly director of the Pittsburgh Youth Symphony while he was assistant conductor with the Pittsburgh Symphony and assistant to William Steinberg of the New York Philharmonic. Markou is also assistant conductor of the Canton Symphony and violinist with the Canton Symphony String Quartet.

Markou has served as conductor for the Cyprus Radio, and assistant to Gunther Schuller with the New England Conservatory Symphony.

The camp offers a 13-day program designed to compliment public school string programs. Under the supervision of Boyce Wyrick, advanced division; Jo Ann Bonnington, elementary division; and Jeff Whitmill, theory; instruction is offered in technic, theory, chamber music, conducting, sight reading, dance and swimming — in addition to intensive work in one of three orchestras.

The program is for string students in grades seven through 12; placement into orchestras is by audition.



ARTISTIC ROUNDUP — This painting titled "Roundup In The Breaks" is but one of many works by Carl J. Smith which will be on exhibit at the Country Framer, 4322 50th, from 2 to 5 p.m. today. Call the gallery for further details.

Carl Smith's Work To Be Exhibited

The Country Framer, 4322 50th, will host a one-man exhibition by Texas artist Carl J. Smith from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

The Canyon native is one of the nation's best Western artists. His show was the first one-man exhibition to be held in Tulsa's Gilcrease Museum, famous for its western art. Smith's paintings have also been displayed in the East at the Grand Central Gallery in New York City; that gallery is largely responsible for launching the career of Charles Russell, considered one of the greatest Western painters of all time.

Smith has had special showings in the Pritchard Galleries of Houston and San Antonio, and his paintings are exhibited yearly by Sagebrush Galleries in Amarillo.

Those who have purchased his works include Lyndon Johnson, the King Ranch, John Connally, Arthur Godfrey and Bud Wilkerson.

The son and grandson of Plains pioneers, Smith was reared in the Dust Bowl days of the '30s. He is applauded for his realistic settings.

Holden, Grant To Star In 'Damien: Omen II'

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) — When "Damien: Omen II" opens in New York next month, 20th Century-Fox will try to top its phenomenally successful "The Omen" shock for shock.

William Holden and Lee Grant star as the powerful industrialist and his wife who become guardians of the recently orphaned Damien, not suspecting they harbor the Antichrist in human form, whose appearance on earth is foretold by Biblical prophecy.

Meanwhile, the stage is set on a worldwide level for Armageddon, the prophesied end of the world. Biblical scholars point out that much of what is predicted has already been fulfilled. The Jews have returned to Zion. A comet has swept across the skies, and scholars have interpreted the rise of the Roman Empire to mean the formation of the European Common Market.

With young Damien approaching manhood against this background, producer Harvey Bernhard was faced with a partpcular challenge when it came to casting that key role. Jonathan Scott-Taylor is the young British actor selected for the demanding assignment. Lew Ayers and Sylvia Sidney round out the distinguished cast, with Don Taylor directing from a screenplay by Stanley Mann and Michael Hodges.

Jerry Goldsmith, who won an Academy Award for his original score for "The Omen," will again provide the music.

The deepest well in the United States is a gas well in Oklahoma's Washita County which is 31,441 feet deep.

Nolte-Weld Film Retitled 'Who'll Stop The Rain'

It was directed by Karel Reisz from a screenplay by Judith Rascoe. The film will be released by United Artists.

The Colorado desert is about 164 miles long and 98 miles wide. This arid region, which includes the Salton sink depression, is situated in southeastern California and northwestern Mexico.

Graham Parker One Of Few Rock 'Artists' Left

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

Rough and tumble rock'n'roll bands are a rarity in these days of mellow camp pop and banal hard rock. Rock'n'roll is a fine art (of a sort) — and there are very few rock artists left.

One of the special few is Graham Parker, a short Englishman whose music is tough as nails. On "Stick To Me" (Mercury) Parker shows the kind of durability and integrity he hinted at on his first two albums. Parker is again backed competently by the Rumour, a five-man assembly of able rockers led by guitarist Brinsley Schwarz.

"Stick To Me" contains a raw energy reminiscent of that on Bruce Springsteen's "Born To Run" or Peter Gabriel's two solo LPs (the latest of which will hit the stands soon). Parker's songs show a preoccupation with two elements — heat and its cooling rain. Both are symbolic, with the heat representing the fire in us all and the rain more abstractly representative of just about anything which might cool our fires.

Parker thrives on heat. He has sung about it many times; his first album was "Heat Wave" and the second "Heat Treatment." And we all know that heat can make us sticky. Parker interprets heat as being a necessity. It is the burning energy which makes rock'n'roll work and is the element which sparks Parker's musical inferno.

"Stick To Me" offers some of the most dynamic rock'n'roll to make vinyl in the last couple years. It is refreshing and energetic. Parker leads the troupe on vocals. His voice is coarse and bruising, the kind of gruesome sounding voice which could very well knock you out of your socks if the volume's too loud.

Parker shows a greater versatility with his voice, although the brunt of the material on "Stick To Me" can become a bit repititious. He confines his music to contemporary forms, rock'n'roll with several twists. The title cut is straight ahead, powerful music with an attractive vocal hook and a forceful guitar line from Schwarz.

The band gives the music some alternative turns on "The Heat In Harlem," the album's longest track at almost seven minutes. The song is divided into two segments, the first being more straightforward than the second. The group bridges a potentially muddlesome mid-section with Schwarz's descending guitar line and Goulding's cymbal slush. What follows is a masterful chord repetition which the group gradually intensifies. Parker's voice continues on its rough course and is backed soulfully by some unidentified female singers.

Parker drives home his theme of heat and energy, correlating the two to our souls.

The best cuts on this album are the shortest ones. "The New York Shuffle" is Parker's most playful song, the singer beginning it with a high-pitched yell of "Come on, let's do the New York Shuffle." The band follows with a boogie which, unfortunately, may not last long enough for hearty rock'n'roll appetites.

Another good, but too short, track is "The Raid." Parker rhetorically asks the listener "Where were you when the raid came" as though inquiring as to our whereabouts during a blackout. The song is a classic, using the build-up technique to gradually enthrall the listener. The only problem is that once "The Raid" really gets going, it almost immediately ends.

Such is Parker's main fault. His songs still lack proper balance, and not enough attention is paid to their development and length. Some tighter mixing would have helped bring more out of the abundant instrumentation, but these lessons may be learned with the release of subsequent albums.

Anyone who has seen Parker (Lubbockites had their chance when he appeared on PBS' "Soundstage" in March) knows that the singer's biggest virtue is his delivery. Power and conviction run rampant in his voice, and energy abounds in his style. With the backing provided by the Rumour, Parker should have a long and fruitful career as one of rock'n'roll's leading singers.

And if he can sort out his songwriting difficulties, as minor as they are, Parker may well go down as the fire which reignited rock'n'roll.

If you were surprised to find Carlo Campanelli bring the "Jan And Dean Show" — actually it was the "Jan Show," since Dean stayed in California — to Buckingham's last week, well, you haven't heard the last of it. According to Campanelli, the original Iron Butterfly will make an appearance at his club June 9 and 10. And there's more nostalgia groups still on the horizon.

As for the bigger contemporary names, look out Lubbock. At a time (summer) when concerts are usually at a minimum in Lubbock due to the absence of the Tech populace, surprising things are happening.

Ronnie Milsap will be headlining a country concert tonight at the Civic Center. Dolly Parton and Andrew Gold will appear at the Lubbock Coliseum June 9. And yes folks, it's finally happened. Rock band Heart, after months of rumored Lubbock dates, has finally been confirmed. The Wilson sisters will bring Heart to the Lubbock Coliseum June 22.

The time span between Easter and the summer months is usually a slow period for movies. This year has been no exception, as the pickings have been awfully slim of late. However, late May and June will see the major film companies step up distribution of the biggies.

Lubbock theater owners have announced the following bookings. South Plains Cinema: "Coming Home," "The End," "F.I.S.T." and "Convoy." Showplace Four: "Jaws Two," "Damien: Omen II" and "The Swarm." The Winchester will follow "The Greek Tycoon" with a summer of Disney releases: "The Jungle Book," "Hot Lead And Cold Feet" and "The Cat From Outer Space."

And the Fox Four is saving room for "Capricorn One," "The Bad News Bears Go To Japan" and "Grease."

Star In Rare Movie Role

Levene joins a cast headed by Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway and child discovery Ricky Schroder. He will be seen in the contemporary version of the 1931 MGM screen classic as an aged horse groom at Hialeah Racetrack. His last movie appearance was in "A Dream Of Kings," a 1969 release which starred Anthony Quinn and was directed by Daniel Mann.

Although he is 73 years old, Levene continues his acting career as ardently as ever, devoting the major portion of his time to the stage.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (Special) — Coproduction of "C.H.O.M.P.S.", a lighthearted comedy budgeted at $3,500,000, has been started by American International Pictures and Hanna-Barbera Productions.

Veteran director Don Chaffey, whose long list of film credits include "The Prince And The Pauper," "One Million Years, B.C." and "Jason And The Argonauts," will direct the film from a script by Dick Robbins and Duane Pool.

"C.H.O.M.P.S." (short for Canine Home Protection Systems) is the brainchild of a young engineer employed by a home security alarm system who comes to the rescue of a town plagued by burglaries. A mechanical watchdog, "C.H.O.M.P.S." is virtually indistinguishable from any normal house dog, at least in outward appearance.

But he not only runs faster, leaps higher and bites harder than any normal canine, he also has X-ray vision and a super-developed sound detection system.

In addition, "C.H.O.M.P.S." has the ability to run through walls, leap off buildings and deliver a flying karate kick when required while on lookout for a crook. Many special visual effects are being utilized in the making of "C.H.O.M.P.S." into a novel motion picture for worldwide audiences of all ages.

Theme Song Assigned

CULVER CITY, Calif. (Special) — Dusty Springfield has been signed to sing Craig Safan's "Give Me The Night" as the original theme song for MGM's "Corvette Summer," a contemporary love story starring Mark Hamill and Annie Potts.

The recording is scheduled to be released as a single on United Artists Records.

"Corvette Summer" opens June 2 at the Backstage Theater in Lubbock.

Springfield has introduced such hit songs as "Wishin' And Hopin'," "Son Of A Preacher Man," "You Don't Have To Say You Love Me" and "The Look Of Love." Her new album "It Begins Again" was recently released on the United Artists label to critical and popular acclaim.

Produced by Hal Barwood and directed by Matthew Robbins from their original screenplay, "Corvette Summer" will have a world premiere May 20 at the Showcase Theater in Toledo, Ohio. Major film critics from across the United States will be in attendance.

The film will be released in the United States and Canada by United Artists.

'Brass Target' Raises Questions About Gen. Patton's Death

George S. Patton was the general people loved to hate. A figure of giant stature, he carried controversy with him in World War II as he led American troops across North Africa; from the shores of Sicily to Messina; through France to the banks of the Elbe. On December 9th 1945, the staff car carrying Patton was involved in an accident.

On December 22nd 1945 he died of his injuries.

Thirty-three years later intrigue and suspicion linger around the death of this most famous of generals. MGM'S "Brass Target," produced by Arthur Lewis, directed by John Hough and starring John Cassavetes, Bruce Davison, Edward Herrmann, George Kennedy, Patrick McGoohan, Robert Vaughn, Max von Sydow and Sophia Loren, asks did Patton die accidentally, as the official documets say, or was his death contrived as part of a daring and ingenious criminal conspiracy?

Filming on location in Munich, "Brass Target" is recreating the dark, desolate days of winter 1945. The German people were struggling to survive in the ruins of their cities. The conquering armies were endeavoring to bring law, order and something akin to normality. General George S. Patton, commmander of the 3rd Army governing the Eastern Military district of the American Zone, was a thorn in everyone's side. Refusing to co-operate with the Russians, Patton openly voiced his dislikes of the communists, to the embarrassment of his Supreme Commander, Eisenhower.

Establishing the mood and feel of that period is of obvious importance. To help get that authentic touch, the production have hired a retired US Army Colonel, Samuel Magil, as adviser. Magill, who was decorated by the US and French Governments for his wartime exploits, has searched and found army 'C' rations; canned bacon; groceries; old whiskey and gin bottles; two truck loads of office furniture; uniforms and dog tags of the period. Ever watchful, he has stopped actors smoking filter-tipped cigarettes..."they didn't exist then"...and has been heard discussing the proportions and availability of the humble brown paper bag, circa 1945.

GI's stationed in Munich recruited to play 1945 versions of themselves in "Brass Target" have had their hair cut in the old 'short back and sides' style and were asked to shave off any mustaches ... "no enlisted man then had a mustache." says Magill, "and it was unlikely that any officer below the rank of captain would have worn one." Those soldier/actors who appear as members of Patton's staff will find themselves with a crew-cut, this apparently was how 'old Blood and Guts' wanted it.

Great care has gone into creating the settings for the film. The art department has found cars, trucks, trams, railway carriages which survived from the war years. Army jeeps and lorriers have been re-vamped. A demolition firm was startled to find an eager buyer for four tons of rubble from a slaughter house they were pulling down. The rubble has become bomb debris. The 1978 American soldier wears a different uniform. Shoes and socks, for example, used to be brown, now they are black, and the 1945 version has had to be hired or made. Purple hearts, silver stars, the green and black European theatre ribbon also have been tracked down.

The Frankfurt street where Sophia Loren as Mara rediscovers de Lucca, played by John Cassavetes, is a masterful and depressing construction. Buildings shattered by bombs and fire stand with broken walls and gaping windows. Piles of rubble line the sidewalk and an aging tram laden with grey, defeated people clanks down the street. To walk along the bombed street or to enter the dusty apartment filled with the remnants of war, created by art director Rolf Zehetbauer, winner of an Academy Award for "Cabaret", is a step back in time. One can almost smell the struggle for survival and feel that here is a place and a society where a plot to get rid of one of American's top genearls could be devised and carried to conclusion.

Massive research into the events surrounding the death of General Patton has been undertaken by the difector, John Hough, and all connected with the making of the films. Frederick Nolan, an expert on immediate post-war Germany and its intrigues, and author of the book "Algonquin Project" on which BRASS TARGET is based, says "I don't have to prove it happened, I just establish the possibilities. There were too many bizarre accidents involving Patton around that time and too many unusual happenings to simply dismiss the possbility of his death being more than an accident."

John Hough has a definite aim in directing BRASS TARGET. "it will be a thriller," he says, "but it will also leave serious doubts about whether or not General Patton was assassinated."

A DIFFERENT LOOK AT PATTON — George Kennedy plays General George Patton in the upcoming MGM release called "Brass Target." The film, directed by John Hough, proposes the theory that Patton may have been assassinated. Currently filming on location in Munich, the picture also stars John Cassavetes, Robert Vaughn and Sophia Loren.

Annual Orchestra Camp Set

The 22nd annual Texas Tech Summer Orchestra Camp will be held June 18-30 on the Tech campus. Guest conductors will be Robert Kreis, conductor of the Peoria Symphony in Illinois, and Kypros Markou, conductor of the Canton (Ohio) Youth Symphony.

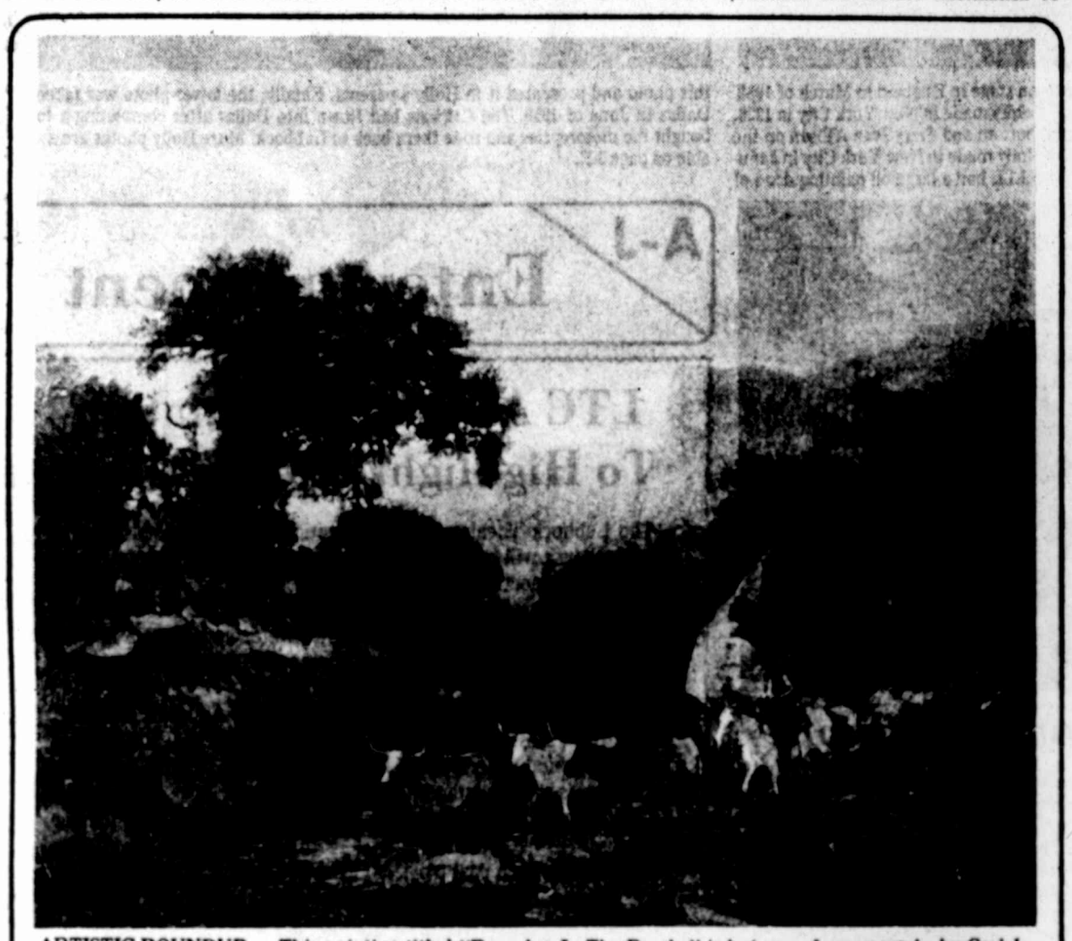
Pre-registration deadline is June 2. Applications and further information regarding tuition, housing and recreation is available by writing Richard Meek, Camp Director, Texas Tech Orchestra Camp, Department of Music, Texas Tech University, Box 4239, Lubbock, Texas 79409.

Kreis was formerly director of the Pittsburgh Youth Symphony while he was assistant conductor with the Pittsburgh Symphony and assistant to William Steinberg of the New York Philharmonic. Markou is also assistant conductor of the Canton Symphony and violinist with the Canton Symphony String Quartet.

Markou has served as conductor for the Cyprus Radio, and assistant to Gunther Schuller with the New England Conservatory Symphony.

The camp offers a 13-day program designed to compliment public school string programs. Under the supervision of Boyce Wyrick, advanced division; Jo Ann Bonnington, elementary division; and Jeff Whitmill, theory; instruction is offered in technic, theory, chamber music, conducting, sight reading, dance and swimming — in addition to intensive work in one of three orchestras.

The program is for string students in grades seven through 12; placement into orchestras is by audition.



ARTISTIC ROUNDUP — This painting titled "Roundup In The Breaks" is but one of many works by Carl J. Smith which will be on exhibit at the Country Framer, 4322 50th, from 2 to 5 p.m. today. Call the gallery for further details.

Carl Smith's Work To Be Exhibited

The Country Framer, 4322 50th, will host a one-man exhibition by Texas artist Carl J. Smith from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

The Canyon native is one of the nation's best Western artists. His show was the first one-man exhibition to be held in Tulsa's Gilcrease Museum, famous for its western art. Smith's paintings have also been displayed in the East at the Grand Central Gallery in New York City; that gallery is largely responsible for launching the career of Charles Russell, considered one of the greatest Western painters of all time.

Smith has had special showings in the Pritchard Galleries of Houston and San Antonio, and his paintings are exhibited yearly by Sagebrush Galleries in Amarillo.

Those who have purchased his works include Lyndon Johnson, the King Ranch, John Connally, Arthur Godfrey and Bud Wilkerson.

The son and grandson of Plains pioneers, Smith was reared in the Dust Bowl days of the '30s. He is applauded for his realistic settings.

Holden, Grant To Star In 'Damien: Omen II'

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) — When "Damien: Omen II" opens in New York next month, 20th Century-Fox will try to top its phenomenally successful "The Omen" shock for shock.

William Holden and Lee Grant star as the powerful industrialist and his wife who become guardians of the recently orphaned Damien, not suspecting they harbor the Antichrist in human form, whose appearance on earth is foretold by Biblical prophecy.

Meanwhile, the stage is set on a world-wide level for Armageddon, the prophesied end of the world. Biblical scholars point out that much of what is predicted has already been fulfilled. The Jews have returned to Zion. A comet has swept across the skies, and scholars have interpreted the rise of the Roman Empire to mean the formation of the European Common Market.

With young Damien approaching manhood against this background, producer Harvey Bernhard was faced with a partpcular challenge when it came to casting that key role. Jonathan Scott-Taylor is the young British actor selected for the demanding assignment. Lew Ayers and Sylvia Sidney round out the distinguished cast, with Don Taylor directing from a screenplay by Stanley Mann and Michael Hodges.

Jerry Goldsmith, who won an Academy Award for his original score for "The Omen," will again provide the music.

Nolte-Weld Film Retitled 'Who'll Stop The Rain'

It was directed by Karel Reisz from a screenplay by Judith Rascoe. The film will be released by United Artists.

The Colorado desert is about 164 miles long and 98 miles wide. This arid region, which includes the Salton sink depression, is situated in southeastern California and northwestern Mexico.

Graham Parker One Of Few Rock 'Artists' Left

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

Rough and tumble rock'n'roll bands are a rarity in these days of mellow camp pop and banal hard rock. Rock'n'roll is a fine art (of a sort) — and there are very few rock artists left.

One of the special few is Graham Parker, a short Englishman whose music is tough as nails. On "Stick To Me" (Mercury) Parker shows the kind of durability and integrity he hinted at on his first two albums. Parker is again backed competently by the Rumour, a five-man assembly of able rockers led by guitarist Brinsley Schwarz.

"Stick To Me" contains a raw energy reminiscent of that on Bruce Springsteen's "Born To Run" or Peter Gabriel's two solo LPs (the latest of which will hit the stands soon). Parker's songs show a preoccupation with two elements — heat and its cooling rain. Both are symbolic, with the heat representing the fire in us all and the rain more abstractly representative of just about anything which might cool our fires.

Parker thrives on heat. He has sung about it many times; his first album was "Heat Wave" and the second "Heat Treatment." And we all know that heat can make us sticky. Parker interprets heat as being a necessity. It is the burning energy which makes rock'n'roll work and is the element which sparks Parker's musical inferno.

"Stick To Me" offers some of the most dynamic rock'n'roll to make vinyl in the last couple years. It is refreshing and energetic. Parker leads the troupe on vocals. His voice is coarse and bruising, the kind of gruesome sounding voice which could very well knock you out of your socks if the volume's too loud.

Parker shows a greater versatility with his voice, although the brunt of the material on "Stick To Me" can become a bit repititious. He confines his music to contemporary forms, rock'n'roll with several twists. The title cut is straight ahead, powerful music with an attractive vocal hook and a forceful guitar line from Schwarz.

The band gives the music some alternative turns on "The Heat In Harlem," the album's longest track at almost seven minutes. The song is divided into two segments, the first being more straightforward than the second. The group bridges a potentially muddlesome mid-section with Schwarz's descending guitar line and Goulding's cymbal slush. What follows is a masterful chord repetition which the group gradually intensifies. Parker's voice continues on its rough course and is backed soulfully by some unidentified female singers.

Parker drives home his theme of heat and energy, correlating the two to our souls.

The best cuts on this album are the shortest ones. "The New York Shuffle" is Parker's most playful song, the singer beginning it with a lighthearted yell of "Come on, let's do the New York Shuffle." The band follows with a boogie which, unfortunately, may not last long enough for hearty rock'n'roll appetites.

Another good, but too short, track is "The Raid." Parker rhetorically asks the listener "Where were you when the raid came" as though inquiring as to our whereabouts during a blackout. The song is a classic, using the build-up technique to gradually enthrall the listener. The only problem is that once "The Raid" really gets going, it almost immediately ends.

Such is Parker's main fault. His songs still lack proper balance, and not enough attention is paid to their development and length. Some tighter mixing would have helped bring more out of the abundant instrumentation, but these lessons may be learned with the release of subsequent albums.

Anyone who has seen Parker (Lubbockites had their chance when he appeared on PBS' "Soundstage" in March) knows that the singer's biggest virtue is his delivery. Power and conviction run rampant in his voice, and energy abounds in his style. With the backing provided by the Rumour, Parker should have a long and fruitful career as one of rock'n'roll's leading singers.

And if he can sort out his songwriting difficulties, as minor as they are, Parker may well go down as the fire which reignited rock'n'roll.

If you were surprised to find Carlo Campanelli bring the "Jan And Dean Show" — actually it was the "Jan Show," since Dean stayed in California — to Buckingham's last week, well, you haven't heard the last of it. According to Campanelli, the original Iron Butterfly will make an appearance at his club June 9 and 10. And there's more nostalgia groups still on the horizon.

As for the bigger contemporary names, look out Lubbock. At a time (summer) when concerts are usually at a minimum in Lubbock due to the absence of the Tech populace, surprising things are happening.

Ronnie Milsap will be headlining a country concert tonight at the Civic Center. Dolly Parton and Andrew Gold will appear at the Lubbock Coliseum June 9. And yes folks, it's finally happened. Rock band Heart, after months of rumored Lubbock dates, has finally been confirmed. The Wilson sisters will bring Heart to the Lubbock Coliseum June 22.

The time span between Easter and the summer months is usually a slow period for movies. This year has been no exception, as the pickings have been awfully slim of late. However, late May and June will see the major film companies step up distribution of the biggies.

Lubbock theater owners have announced the following bookings. South Plains Cinema: "Coming Home," "The End," "F.I.S.T." and "Convoy." Showplace Four: "Jaws Two," "Damien: Omen II" and "The Swarm." The Winchester will follow "The Greek Tycoon" with a summer of Disney releases: "The Jungle Book," "Hot Lead And Cold Feet" and "The Cat From Outer Space."

And the Fox Four is saving room for "Capricorn One," "The Bad News Bears Go To Japan" and "Grease."

Star In Rare Movie Role

Levene joins a cast headed by Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway and child discovery Ricky Schroder. He will be seen in the contemporary version of the 1931 MGM screen classic as an aged horse groom at Hialeah Racetrack. His last movie appearance was in "A Dream Of Kings," a 1969 release which starred Anthony Quinn and was directed by Daniel Mann.

Although he is 73 years old, Levene continues his acting career as ardently as ever, devoting the major portion of his time to the stage.

Charles Lindbergh never regretted his contributions to aviation and medical science, but they presented a personal problem.

His "Autobiography of Values" is not only the story of his life, but also his evaluation of "qualities of the primitive with qualities of civilization."

That problem was always with him and never more so than when he roamed the African desert where, he said, civilization lost much of its importance.

"I felt the desert held values deeper than those of the civilization from which I came," he wrote... "They formed the core of life. I had experienced them as a boy on our Minnesota farm, in barnstorming, in flying the airmail."

His phrase, "the core of life" is threaded through this unusual and very readable book. Lindbergh says he neither wanted to give up all contact with civilization nor to be overwhelmed by it.

In the first chapter, "Life Stream," he reviews his career. In subsequent chapters he elaborates and reflects on its meaning.

He describes his participation in American air raids on Japanese-held islands in the Pacific and recalls that on one raid at New Ireland in 1944 he could not bring himself to pull the trigger of his machine gun for an easy kill of a man alone on the beach.

"Both sides fought under the primitive law, and by that law, he was my prey," he wrote. "What momentary sense made him my brother? ... For a time that cannot be clocked, at man on the beach and I had escaped from our organizations and the enmity of war. We met within the brotherhood of individuals..."

Lindbergh asked his friend William Jovanovich in August 1974 to come to a hospital in New York City where he was dying of cancer. He asked Jovanovich whether drafts of his memoirs were worth publishing. Jovanovich read them tha night and assured Lindbergh they were.

Two days before he flew to Hawaii where he died eight days later, Lindbergh asked Jovanovich, "Do you think I am dying well?" When Jovanovich said "Yes," Lindbergh replied, "That's good. You would know."

Jovanovich's co-editor on this book was Judith A. Schiff of the Yale University Library where many of Lindbergh's papers are deposited.

FLESH AND BLOOD. By Pete Hamill. (Random House. $8.95)

Hollywood film makers of the 1930s practically wore out that character to assemble a long line of cornball melodramas. Journalist Hamill returns to this musty theme and, astonishingly, concocts a plausible, tightly wrought novel that flashes with vitality.

Plausible does not mean believable. Fallon is sort of Superfighter, blasting experienced opponents in the ring and demolishing monstrous villains elsewhere, all with his magic fists.

Hamill's detailed descriptions of prizefighting are marvelous. The least knowledgeable reader can appreciate to a degree the immense skills involved in the sport and the dedication with which it is pursued.

And Fallon is quite nicely drawn. He's the guileless youth from the provinces (well, Brooklyn, which at least is a borough) whose principles and decency are continually under assault. Society, with its legacy of hate, tries to corrupt him. Then, his mother and finally, his father.

Fallon, of course, is a white fighter in a black-dominated sport, allowing the author to air the racial issue quite dramatically.

The recurrent use of incest is a bit bewildering. It seems hardly necessary and most likely is an over attempt at sensationalism, incest having just come out of the closet and into print and television journalism.

Despite its faults, the book succeeds and at times reads almost like a parable of modern civilization dragging wearily on the road to ruin.

— JOAN HANAUER, UPI

'Velvet' Premiere Announced In Capital June 25

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) — The world premiere of MGM's "International Velvet" will be held here June 25 in the Eisenhower Theater at Kennedy Center. The premiere will be a benefit for the United States Equestrian Team.

"International Velvet" stars Tatum O'Neal, Christopher Plummer, Anthony Hopkins and Nanette Newman, and is the sequel to MGM's 1944 screen classic "National Velvet."

The United States Equestrian Team is a nonprofit voluntary organization which represents the United States in international equestrian sports. The USET carries the sole responsibility for training, equipping and financing riding teams of the highest possible standard to represent the United States in Olympic and Pan-American games, World Championships and other international competitions.

Many of the film's principals, as well as a host of leading Washington dignitaries, will attend the premiere.

"International Velvet" is the story of Sarah Brown, an orphaned American girl with a love for horses and whose ambition is to ride for the British team in the grueling three-day equestrian event at the Olympic Games.

Soap Opera Role May Endure Longer Than Real-Life Marriage

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The travails of soap opera heroines traditionally transcend any possible collections of human domestic catastrophes, but at least one daytime serial queen may top her television role.

She is Ruth Warrick who has portrayed Phoebe Tyler in ABC-TV's "All My Children" for the past eight years.

For openers, she has played the wife of Dr. Charles Tyler on the show for all eight years, which is longer than any of her own four marriages has endured.

Then there is the matter of Ruth's career, which has been more varied than her husbands. She moves from New York to Hollywood and back again every seven years with the regularity of a metronome.

She has acted in movies, on Broadway and in prime time television, often moonlighting in plays during the course of her long run in "All My Children."

On a California holiday from her upper east side Manhattan apartment, Ruth — an aristocratic looking woman with a raucus sense of humor and a flirty twinkle in her eye — drew some comparisons between herself and the longsuffering Phoebe Tyler.

"I lead a more interesting life than Phoebe," she said. "Phoebe hasn't had as exciting a sex life as I have, which is why she's so mean, I suppose.

"Dr. Tyler has been cheating on Phoebe in the past months. She caught him at it with his secretary and raised hell. Dr. Tyler wanted a divorce but Phoebe refused to give it to him.

"They are separated, temporarily at least. The same thing happened to me under somewhat different circumstances. It wouldn't be fair for me to go into details about that little episode.

"A woman can't pretend such goings-on aren't happening. But she shouldn't order her husband out of the house the first time. She must put him on notice that he is jeopardizing everything. And she has to mean it.

"Phoebe and I are quite a bit alike, sort of metamorphosed into a single person. I have a sharp tongue and I can be just as bitchy as Phoebe. I'm also a witty person who learned just how damaging words can be.

"The main difference between Phoebe and me is that I'm not a snob and she is.

"I like Phoebe but she can be shallow and frivolous sometimes. That's another difference. I'm not at all frivolous when it comes to important matters.

"The network almost fired me the first year on the show because I am a political activist. I marched for peace movements, I taught in Watts, supported Synanon and was a feminist before the women's lib movement began."

Ruth Warrick has never been a conformist. A native of St. Joseph, Mo., she trained for her career in the New York theater, coming to Hollywood the first time in 1939 to play Orson Welles' wife in "Citizen Kane."

"That was the start of my first seven years in Hollywood," she said, smiling. "After that I went back to work on Broadway for another seven years.

"Then it was back to california for a couple of television series, 'Father of the Bride' with Leon Ames and to play Hannah Cord in 'Peyton Place.' I've been in New York eight years now and I suppose it's time to move west again.

"I'm a trial to a man because my work is a discipline. I get up at 6 o'clock and go to work and study at night. That isn't the best schedule for a marriage.

"But I'm the world's best cook, I love the physical part of marriage — sex — and I'm also a fighter.

"A television marriage is easier to live with than a real life marriage. You can put the script aside at the end of the day and you have the weekends to yourself. I salute the gentlemen who have survived me. Many haven't.

"My first marriage was to a Norwegian, Erik Golf. We had two children. It lasted seven years. Then I married a Dane, Carl Neubert, for two years.

"After that divorce I married an Irishman, Bibber McNamara. We had a son. But that marriage, too, collapsed after seven years. Then I remarried Neubert for another two years.

"My latest marriage, which ended about a year ago, was to Jarvis Cushing. It didn't survive more than 16 months.

"Not too many leading ladies, if any, have had more interesting husbands than I've had — or as many. But I can say in all honesty that everyone who has been married to me wanted to marry me again."

While both Ruth and Phoebe have suffering marital woes, neither has placed herself on the shelf. Indeed, Phoebe is carrying on with a young and handsome chauffeur. Ruth smiles provocatively when asked if she and Phoebe are alike in the matter of current romance.

"Actually, the chauffeur, played by Benny Sago, has moved in with Phoebe," Ruth said. "It actually parallels an interesting experience in my own life.

"Let me say that Benny took the part of the chauffeur for three days. But our interreactions came off so well that he was given a two-year contract for the show. He adds a new dimension to Phoebe's life."

Ruth made it clear a new dimension has been added to her life, one equally as interesting as that in Phoebe's make-believe world.

'Polka King' Making Bid For Stardom

By SANDRA BALMER

BERWYN, Ill. (AP) — Milk truck driver. Saxophonist. Heartthrob to the polka set. Now Johnnie Bomba, "The Midwest Polka King," is making his bid for stardom in a movie with Sylvester Stallone.

Bomba's band appears in "F.I.S.T.," Stallone's first film since his hit, "Rocky." It's Bomba's screen debut.

"I've done it all: radio, TV, records, and now the movies. It was the only thing left," says Bomba, 56.

During the week, Bomba drives a milk truck for the Country Delight Dairy in the Chicago area. But when the weekend rolls around, he dons a baby-blue ruffled shirt, slips into his silver brocade tuxedo, and delivers hours of polka pleasure to his loyal fans.

"But we don't just play polka music," Bomba said during a break while playing at the Berwyn Moose Lodge. "We're versatile. We give people what they want to hear."

That was the qualification that counted for director Norman Jewison, who picked Bomba to form a band from numerous others around the Midwest from Cleveland to Milwaukee.

"The story is about a union movement in the '30s. As part of the story, a Hungarian man, Stallone, marries a Lithuanian girl," Bomba said. Producer Patrick Palmer wanted an authentic band to play at the wedding reception scene.

"What they needed was a group that could play Hungarian and Lithuanian music the way it was then. We've been playing that kind of music for years and years," Bomba says.

He developed his polka specialty when he returned from World War II, married Janima Bochinski, his grammar school sweetheart, and started playing at Polish weddings, picnics and society meetings.

"Weddings these days are nothing compared to them," he remembers. "We'd start playing on Saturday at 3 p.m. and wind up at around 6 or 7 the next morning, then start all over again the next day."

That old-time ethnic feeling may be what Palmer and Jewison had in mind for the wedding scene in the film.

Bomba says they insisted he include a cymbalin for his band in the wedding scene. After calling a few friends, he managed to find one. "It's a traditional Hungarian instrument, like a small piano, played by hitting strings with a mallet," he said.

John Ballog, who is of Hungarian descent, played the cymbalin in the movie. Other band members included Vince Gareci on violin, John Hrymak on bass, Dave Romaine on violin, and Bomba on sax.

Polka music has carried Bomba a long way from his South Side neighborhood near the Chicago Stockyards to a split-level house in west suburban Oak Forest.

But he still rises at 5 a.m., to deliver milk, and he plays polka music nearly every weekend, "just for the fun of it."

And now he can take his family to the movies, "buy tickets just like everybody else," and watch himself on the silver screen.

"It's really fulfilling — something every musician dreams about," he says.

Sculptures Shown At Chagall Museum

NICE, France (UPI) — The Marc Chagall museum will display begicning July 8 an exhibition of ancient sculpture lent by the Augustins Museum of Toulbuse.

The 60 statues and columns of the 12th and 13th centuries represent more than six tons of fragile stone that must be brought from Toulouse to Nice.

ARGENTINE FILM

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An Argentine film titled "Divorce is in Style" has been released here, starring Enzo Viena and Gilda Lousek as a couple whose marriage is in trouble. The movie was directed by Fernando Siro, and the screenplay was written by the late actor Norberto Aroldi, who died two weeks before the debut of the film.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Is my friend pulling my leg? He insists that when the Nixons recently visited Miami, they ate in a restaurant named 'Watergate.' Is this true? — Stan Fisher, Miami.

A: Your friend was close. Cye's "Rivergate" was the restaurant the Nixons visited. It is owned by their old friend Cye Mandell. They drove all the way from Key

Largo to eat there. Also in the party were the four Secret Servicemen permanently assigned to the former First Family, plus another four from the local Secret Service office. They all quietly arrived in the back way — parking their cars on the Miami River bridge. Then later left the same way — frustrating reporters and TV camera crews cooling their heels at the main entrance.

Overheard: To show how fleeting fame can be, a couple of teenagers at the Rivergate were observed staring at an overstuffed leather lounge on which the Nixon party sat. One said, "Hey, doesn't that fellow look familiar? "Yeah," was the answer: "I think I saw him a coupla months ago on the David Frost show!"

Yankee Pitcher Ron Guidry is as quick with a quip as with his fast ball. Asked by a sports reporter how much money he is making: Ron replied, "More than Jimmy Carter, less than his brother Billy!" (Reminds us of James Bacon's comment that the beer-guzzling Billy makes twice as much as Jimmy just by returning the empties.

Q: Early last year you wrote a romantic story about comedienne Kay Stevens suddenly being swept off her feet and marrying a man she met at the airport only weeks earlier. Whatever happened to the marriage? — Mrs. Mildred C., Margate, Fla.

A: After some six months, the actress and her lawyer husband, Woodrow Melvin Jr., resolved to dissolve their marriage. Kaye continues to play a lead role in the TV soaper, "Days of Our Lives", commuting between her homes in California and Florida. She'll also star in a film biography of evangelist Kathryn Kuhlman. Meanwhile, Miss Stevens continues to stage her "Beautiful People Concerts" — Cabaret shows for senior citizens. The idea may wind up as a TV series.

Q: When was Martha Mitchell first told she had a malignancy that would take her life? And what was her last apperance on TV? — Anne D., Athens, Ga.

A: Martha's last appearance was on a Mike Douglas show in September 1975. Despite the intense pain in her neck, she kept her promise to Mike. Melvin Denholtz, a dentist-writer, reports that the earliest signs of myeloma was discovered in August 1975 by her dentist who advised Mrs. Mitchell to see a specialist immediately. She failed to do so.

Q: Did Michael Douglas (who starred in "Streets of San rancisco," then produced "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") —ever marry that actress he lived with for so long? — Mrs. Erna Anderson, Philadelphia.

A: No. Though "Cuckoo" made Kirk Douglas' son a millionaire in his own right, he and Brenda Vaccaro split up. Only recently, Mike married George Washington University student Diandra Lucker — who he met at Jimmy Carter's inauguration.

A: Those rumors are ridiculous. "I could give up recording and television if I had to," the superstar said. "But I will stay on stage until I am 97 — if I'm still around and the people want to see me." That would give Tom another 59 years to go since he won't celebrate his 38th birthday until June 7!)

Q: Is it true that Bing Crosby's attractive young widow, Cathy Crosby, is going to make a movie? — R.T.B., Glendale,Cal.

A: Yes. Kathryn (she shudders when she's called Kathy) also has just completed taping an autobiograhical account of her 20-year marriage to Bing. It covers not only their life ogether but also Crosby's first family with actress Dixie Lee. Titled "My Life With Bing," Simon & Schuster will Publish in early December.

Q: When did Congress finally pass the law requiring that the motto: "In God We Trust" appear on all our money? — Erica Newman: Baltimore.

A: Although the motto has appeared on various U.S. coins dating back as far as 1864, it wasn't until 1955 that Congress passed a law requiring that it be on all the currency and coins we mint or print.

Q: How did Dan Rather of "60 Minutes" get to be known as "the man the White House hates"? — Mrs. P. Downing, Youngstown Ohio.

A: It happened on March 19, 1974, during a brief verbal joust on a televised Nixon press conference. Here is the official government transcript of the exchange that shocked so many viewers: "Thank you, Mr. President. Dan Rather of CBS News."Mr. President . . ." (applause mixed with jeers.) Nixon: "Are you running for something?" Rather: "No, sir, Mr. President, are you?"

Q: Did this saying come from the Greek: "When you've got your mother you're still a kid?" — Mrs. D. Coulouras, Minneapolis.

A: We don't know the derivation, but we first heard it from a sentimental Greek named Telly Savalas.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That:"P.O. Box 1748: Chicago: Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

MARRIAGE DISSOLVED—Comedienne Kaye Stevens of "Days of Our Lives," seen with Hy Gardner, is a Miss again. She'll play the role of Kathryn Kuhlman in an upcoming film biography of the evangelist.

'Family Business' Just Misses Paydirt

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Family Business" (also known as "Family BuSine$$"), which opened April 12 at the Astor Place Theater is a curious throw back to early Arthur Miller, a well-made drama about four Jewish brothers who squabble and come to vcolence over their father's $1.4 million will.

From youngest to eldest they are: Jerry, 18, a homosexual hedonist; Norman, 28, whose guilt about driving the car in which his mother was killed has turned him into the "mother" of the family; Phil, 32, a psychologist desperate for money to maintain his fancy way of life; and Bobby, 35, who runs the family toy store chain and dreams of his dead wife.

In an effort to help Jerry, Norman tells Phil of the boy's homsexuality. Phil blackmails Jerry in an effort to get $35,000 from him, his own legacy being tied up in a trust fund. Bobby blocks the deal but is shattered to hear Jerry is gay.

In spite of Norman's attempts to keep the family together, Jerry and Bobby move out of the family house. In the end Phil and his family move back in to live with Norman.

The mixture of hate and love which tear the four men is the core of the play. Author Dick Goldberg has loaded his play by giving them enough problems to sink a dozen families. But he can write effectively, and we'd like to see something a little less contrived and more contemporary from him.

The direction by John Stix is pretty straightforward and unimaginitive. The actors, with much of their time taken up with silent suffering, are pretty good within the limits of the unrelenting melodrama and the direction.

Borge 'At Home' On Sesame Street

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Victor Borge visits "Sesame Street" this spring, he'll use his mixture of comedy, music and grandfatherly expertise to help entertain and educate the series' young viewers.

Borge, father and grandfather of five, is quite at home in this setting. For years his particular brand of comedy introduced thousands of people to clussical music.

Borge's series of guest appearances on "Sesame Street" will cover everything from the benefits of practicing diligently to the need for safety belts, especially when playing the piano. He will also find himself out-grouching Oscar the Grouch, "Sesame Street's" cantankerous trash can-dwelling Muppet.

Royal Shakespeare Lists Program For New Season

STRATFORD -UPON-AVON, England (UPI) — The Royal Shakespeare Company's season this year will be the longest it has ever staged.

It began in March with "A Midsummer Night's Dream," followed April 19 by "The Taming of the Shrew." Then Michael Hordern opened April 26 as Vrospero in "The Tempest," to be followed June 21 by "Measure for Measure."

The company stages "Love's Labor's Lost" in August, then Glenda Jackson and Stacy Keach star in "Antony and Cleopatra" in October.

New Construction Up By 38 Percent In Texas

AUSTIN (Special) -The value of new construction authorized by building permits in Texas rose by 38 percent in the first quarter of 1978 to $1.6 billion, according to Janet K. Tandy, research associate at the University of Texas' Bureau of Business Research.

New residential construction during the first quarter represented almost 59 percent of new construction valuation, about the same proportion as in 1977. Of the $967 million in new residential construction, single-family houses accounted for about 74 percent, slightly lower than the 77 percent share in 1977.

The valuation for total new construction declined from the 1977 level in seven Texas metropolitan areas: Amarillo, Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, Galveston-Texas City, Longview, San Angelo, and Tyler. Although the valuation of new nonresidential construction dropped substantially in all seven areas, six of them showed increases in the valuation of new residential construction. Longview, the exception, had declines in both categories.

During the first quarter of 1978, the Dallas-Fort Worth area was the source of 29.5 percent of all new construction valuation for the state of Texas, closely followed by the Houston area with a 28.2 percent share.

New residential construction valuation accounted for 60 percent of total new construction valuation in Dallas-Fort Worth, and about 55 percent in Houston.

The share of total new construction valuation was 6.1 percent for Austin, a substantial increase from the 4.2 percent share in 1977.

The other top 10 metropolitan areas and their proportions of total new construction valuation for Texas thus far in 1978 were: El Paso, 3.6 percent; San Antonio, 3.4 percent; Corpus Christi, 2.5 percent; Amarillo, 2.0 percent; Lubbock, 1.9 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, 1.7 percent; and Killeen-Temple, 1.5 percent.

The percentage change from 1977 to 1978 in the valuation of all new construction jumped to over 100 percent in four Texas metropolitan areas: Texarkana, with very large percentage gains in both nonresidential and residential construction valuations; Midland, where virtually all the change occurred in new nonresidential construction valuation; Corpus Christi, with more than double the 1977 valuation in new nonresidential construction and almost double the new residential valuation in 1977; and Wichita Falls, where a sizable gain in new residential construction valuation more than offset a slight decline in the nonresidential sector.

Total new construction valuation in Austin rose by 99 percent from 1977 to 1978; the valuation figure for Houston was almost 70 percent greater in the first quarter of 1978. Four other metropolitan areas—Laredo, Killeen-Temple, Abilene, and Waco—posted gains in the 50 percent range.

Midland not only had the second largest percentage in total new construction valuation but also had the highest per capita dollar volume of new construction for all Texas metropolitan areas.

Besides Midland, at $330 per capita, the other top five metropolitan areas as ranked by per capita new construction valuation in the first quarter of 1978 were: Bryan-College Station, $218; Austin, $217; Amarillo, $212; and Houston, $194.

The slowdown in new residential construction during the first quarter of 1978 was apparent in the cutbacks in new dwelling units that had occurred in 12 of the 25 metropolitan areas in Texas. Four areas—Bryan-College Station, Longview, Odessa, and Lubbock—suffered the largest percentage losses from 1977 to 1978 in the number of new dwelling units. The 135 dwelling units issued building permits in Odessa represented the lowest number of units authorized in that metropolitan area during the first quarter for the years 1974 through 1978. The other eight metropolitan areas that had a reduction in new dwelling units authorized were: Abilene, Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, Dallas-Fort Worth, El Paso, Galveston-Texas City, McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, San Angelo, and Tyler.

Seven Texas metropolitan areas had a drop in the number of new single-family houses authorized in the first quarter of 1978: Amarillo, down 48 units; El Paso, off by 142 units from the five-year high point in 1977; Killeen-Temple, a slight loss of 15 units; Longview, a reduction of 41 percent, or 39 units; Odessa, 29 fewer units; Waco, down 34 units; and Wichita Falls, 10 fewer units.

The reduction in the number of new single-family units authorized in the first quarter of 1978 was the primary cause of the decline in the total number of new residential units only in the El Paso area. The losses in new dwelling units in the Longview and Odessa metropolitan areas can be attributed to cutbacks in both the single-family and multi-family housing sectors, according to the bureau.

In the remaining areas (Abilene, Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, Bryan-College Station, Dallas-Fort Worth, Galveston-Texas City, Lubbock, McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, San Angelo, and Tyler) the sole cause of the decline in new residential units from 1977 to 1978 was the reduction in the number of new multi-family units authorized.

The estimated cost (based on reported permits) of building a new single-family house in Texas reached $40,800 in the first quarter of 1978, an increase of 18 percent from the 1977 estimate.

$2,145,950 In Permits Approved

The Lubbock Building Inspection Dept. has issued permits for $2,145,950 in future construction activity, according to city records.

Commercial projects accounted for $441,700 of the total, and residential programs were $1,704,250.

In the commercial category, Longhorns Construction Co. plans to build office and retail space at 2323 66th St. for an estimated cost of $100,000. The project will involve 11,416 square feet of floor space.

C. B. Thompson will construct a computer center for the Lubbock County Court House, 904 Broadway, at an estimated cost of $98,700.

A laundry at 4808 Ave. H will be constructed by John Mulford at a cost of $65,000 for 4,000 square feet.

King Builders will construct a vocational building for the Lubbock State School. The 2,500-square-foot building is expected to cost $50,000.

Tusha Building Inc. plans a $30,000 warehouse at 802 46th St.

A service station at 2335 82nd St. has been scheduled by Lubbock Building Co. Inc. for an estimated cost of $25,000.

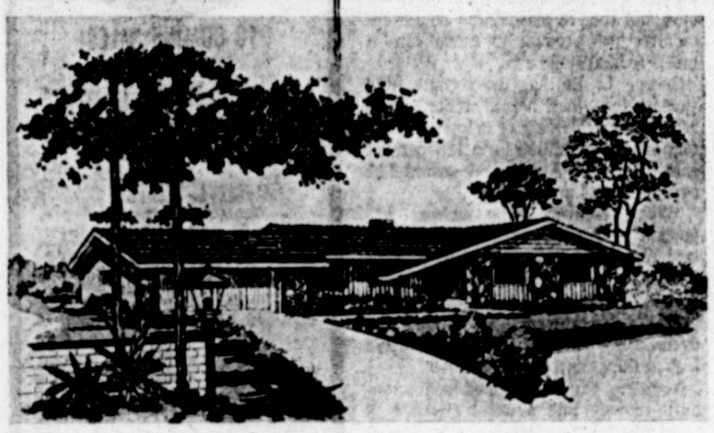
In the residential classification, Gary Beaty has scheduled two duplex projects at 7821 and 7823 Memphis at expected costs of $65,600 each.

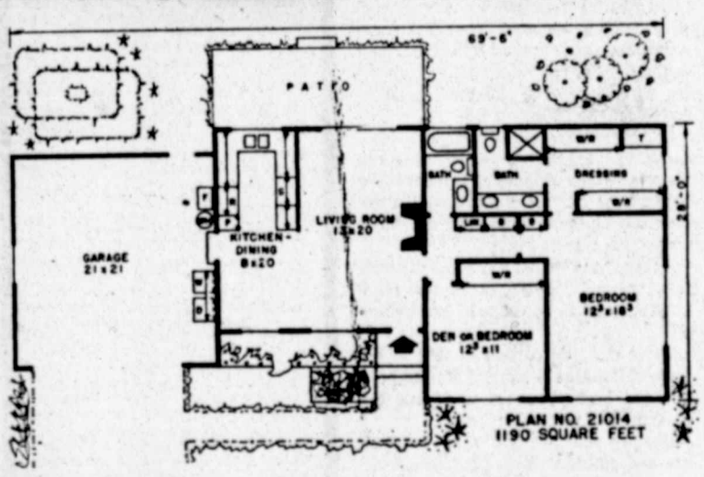
Three new homes have been scheduled by Meador Construction at costs ranging from $50,000 to $60,000. They are located at 5421 89th St., 5412 90th St., and 7606 Detroit.

Reese Enterprises has scheduled a single-family home at 8020 Winston Ave. at an estimated cost of $250,000. The structure will contain 4,864 square feet of floor space.

Other single-family homes, with estimated costs and contractors, include: 5804 15th St., $30,000, John Ashe; 4717 80th St., $69,500, King Builders; 8006 Wayne Ave., $95,000, Carel Whisenhunt; 3112 78th St., $85,000, Bob Tramel; 8007 Vinton, $73,500, Edwin Roberts; 5725 70th Place, $85,000, Monte Holmes; 1812 Bangor Ave., $110,000, Jack Givens; 5802 16th St., $37,000, C. W. Turner; 8403 Utica Ave., $90,000, Jim Turner; 1804 Albany, $110,000, Dick Mosley; 5611 Harvard, $40,000, C. W. Turner; 8012 Chicago, $62,000, G. Carl Ballard.

Others include: 5107 58th St., $30,000, Burl Kizer; 7719 Ave. V, $30,000, Carl Sanders Builders; 9301 Gary, $45,000, J. L. Elliot; 5010 60th St., $36,000, E&T Construction; 2707 79th St., $32,000, Bobby Day & Co.; 4506 Itasca, $28,450, Gerald Jaquess; 5612 72nd St., $57,000, W. W. Williamson.





Plan Eliminates Walls Between Living, Dining, Kitchen Areas

By HIAWATHA ESTES

This plan was designed for those wanting to build a two bedroom home without sacrificing any of the amenities usually included in larger three and four bedroom homes.

It doesn't matter whether you prefer a view toward the street or toward the rear of your lot as both are available in this design. There are large windows in the front wall of the living room and dining area while sliding glass doors provide access from the living room to the patio.

The main living area of the house has been visually enlarged and made more imposing by eliminating the walls between the living, dining, and kitchen. A large window above the sink provides an ever-changing view of the rear yard and floods the U-shaped kitchen with light. The kitchen has a large amount of storage cabinets including a pantry.

Three closets line the short bedroom hall. The luxurious master bedroom suite consists of a huge bedroom, a dressing area with two wide wardrobes plus a dressing table and a private bath with a twin pullman lavatory and semi-private water closet compartment. This bath backs up to the second bath.

Both vertical and horizontal wood siding plus a low, stone planter and stone pilasters link the home to the building site, making it possible to achieve a striking architectural effect for this relatively small home.

Complete working drawings for plan 21014 can be purchased for only $18.50 for the first set and $9 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until September 21, 1978. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $3. Also available are six home plan books illustrating in excess of 900 plans -a $9.75 value -for only $7.75 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, California 91328.

T.I.M.E.-DC Inc. Hikes Dividend

The T.I.M.E.-DC Inc. Board of Directors has announced a dividend increase of five cents per share on the company's common stock.

Second quarter dividends were 10 cents per share on the common stock, and 18 cents per share on the convertible preferred stock—Series A. Both amounts are payable June 30 to shareholders of record at the close of business on June 12.

Hugh C. Shurtleff, president of T.I.M.E.-DC, indicated that the increase in the common dividend was made possible by improved operating results reported by the company in recent months.

Realtor Firm Announces Plans To Change Name

The company can be reached for additional information by calling 793-2401.

Washington Signed First Patent Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It took three months after the U.S. patent system was established for the first invention to be patented. On April 10, 1790, George Washington signed a bill that created the U.S. Patent und Trademark Office. On July 31, 1790, Samuel Hopkins of Pittsford, Vt., received the first patent for an improvement in the production of pot ash and pearl ash by a new process.

His patent grant was signed by George Washington, according to Intellectual Property Owners, a non-profit group dedicated to preserving that patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity.

Cut-Rate Air Fares Stimulating U.S. Travel

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Despite inflation and dollar jitters, record numbers of Americans are expected to travel abroad and at home during 1978. A major stimulant will be the cut-rate promotional fares offered by international and domestic airlines.

That is the consensus of authoritative sources in various segments of the travel industry, official and unofficial, American and foreign.

Reports released by the U.S. Passport Office show passport applications during the first three months of 1978 running ahead of the similar period last year. The number of departures for Europe — still the prime destination — also are up, from seven percent in January to an estimated 19 percent in April.

The U.S. Travel Service predicts about 23.5 million U.S. citizens will go overseas this year, an increase of three percent over the 22.7 million who went in 1977.

Canada again will be the No. 1 destination, with an estimated 53 percent, followed by Mexico with about 12 percent. The USTS said Europe is expected to get "an increasing share" of the remaining 35 percent.

At the same time, indications are that 1978 will be a good year for domestic and international tourism within the United States, according to Fabian Chavez Jr., assistant secretary of commerce for tourism, who heads USTS.

"This year, with the increasing availability of lower air fares and the fall of the dollar in many areas abroad, the U.S. is expected to be even more attractive to international travelers," he said in a statement.

"We expect more than 20 million international visitors during 1978, an increase of more than eight percent over last year," he said. "Travel is even expected to increase from those areas of the world, such as Europe, which experienced relatively no growth in travel to this country in 1977."

Chavez said Canada will continue to be the main generator of U.S.-bound tourists, followed by Mexico, Japan, Great Britain, West Germany, France and Venezuela. He said increases ranging from eight percent to 18 percent are anticipated from countries like Australia, Italy, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Foreign visitors are expected to spend about $8.8 billion on their U.S. travels, including the cost of transportation on U.S. carriers. Expenditures by Americans traveling abroad is estimated at about $11.4 billion.

"Domestically, pleasure travel is heavily dependent on the state of the economy," Chavez said. "...a positive factor already beginning to affect travel, however, is the proliferation of lower domestic air fares. Bargain fares ... may induce travelers to take flying vacations for the first time or to choose a destination farther from home."

Chavez noted that a "significant shift toward the use of air, rail and bus travel could help cut gasoline consumption — very important considering the nation's energy problems — without robbing Americans of the enjoyment and relaxation we look forward to from our vacations."

Bus and rail lines also offer special low-cost summer fares. But traval surveys indicate that the family car will remain the most popular mode of transportation for vacationers in the United States, despite higher prices for fuel, accommodations, food and other items.

The U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington estimates 39.5 million American families will vacation by car or recreational vehicle in 1978, or 1.4 million more than last year. The West and Alaska will be the most popular destinations, according to various surveys.

A spokesman for the American Automobile Association said that requests from members for road maps — a usually reliable barometer — shows all kinds of travel increasing. A pamphlet issued by the UUA says two persons vacationing by automobile should plan on spending $27 a day for meals — not including tips or alcoholic beverages, $28 a day for lodging and $5 for gasoline and oil for every 100 miles of travel, with the car averaging 15 miles per gallon.

The AAA noted that the food and lodging total of $55 per day is an increase of 3.8 percent over 1977. It also emphasized that these figures can vary considerably, "depending on location and travelers' preferences."

Domestic air travel already is up, with travelers taking advantage of the various promotional fares, such as Super Saver, Super No Frills, Unlimited Mileage, No Strings, Peanuts and others offered by the U.S. carriers. Air Canada got into the act with a Super Budget fare, with discounts of up to 42 percent on U.S.-Canada flights.

Paul R. Ignatius, president of the Air Transport Association of America, which includes all major U.S. carriers, predicted that scheduled air travel in the United States will set new records in 1978. He told the Corporate Travel Association in New York that more than 255 million passengers will fly U.S. planes this year, an increase of 15 million over 1977.

John G. Bertram, chairman of the European Travel Commission representing the national tourist organizations of 23 countries, also cited lower air fares as a major factor in predicting increased travel by Americans across the Atlantic.

The ETC reported that 582,000 Americans traveled to Europe during the first three months of 1978, an 11 percent increase over the same period last year. It estimated that Europe will welcome "well over" four million Americans before the year is out.

"Usually, the single biggest cost item of a European vacation is the trinsAtlantic fare, which is lower than it has been for years, if not the lowest ever," said Bertram, who is also the director of the Netherlands Tourist Office in New York.

"Travelers can combine the new fares with packages which provide savings in every price category from budget to deluxe on ground arrangements such as hotels, transportation, sightseeing, etc. Savings can be realized because the people (tour wholesalers) who put the packages together are competitive and pass on to the consumer savings realized from bulk purchase of hotel rooms and other items."

Bertram said the lower air fares, when combined with prepaid packaged tours, could provide Americans with a hedge against inflation and the fluctuating currency exchange.

"You will know what the important basic travel costs will be when you purchase your package in dollars from travel agencies throughout the U.S. before you go," he said.

Indications are that Britain, which captured the lion's share of American tourists in 1977, will be the prime destination again this year. Some of the other long-time favorites, such as West Germany and Switzerland, could be hurt by the devaluation of the dollar vis-avis the deutschmark and franc. Greece, Portugal and Spain are expecting gains this year.

U.S. and foreign airlines offer bargain fares to virtually everywhere in Europe. Freddie Laker touched off the fare war with his $236 round-trip no-frills New York-to-London Skytrain. Other transAtlantic carriers countered with $299 standby and budget fares. Then there are Advanced Booking Charters (ABCs), One-Stop Charters (OTCs), Inclusive Tour Charters (ITCs), Advance Purchase Excursion (APEX), affinity charters and others. Some require advanced bookings — up to 45 days. Some include ground arrangements. Check your travel agent before deciding.

A boost in tourism to the Pacific region also is seen by Edward E. Johnston, executive vice president for the Pacific Area Travel Association in San Francisco, whose members include tourist offices of 28 countries.

"The budget fares being offered for the first time in trans-Pacific travel by scheduled airlines should be within the pocketbook of travelers who felt previously they could afford only a European vacation," he said.

He cited such sample oneway fares from Los Angeles-San Francisco to Guam $309, Manila $349, Taipei $349, Bangkok $399, Singapore $439 and Jakarta $479. There are a variety of new low-cost package tours also, including a one-week vacation in Tahiti for $699 per person, double, including hotel accommodations and round-trip transportation.

Japan is expected to remain the primary initial destination despite higher prices because the dollar buys fewer yen than in previous years. The Philippines, Hong Kong, Singapore and Indonesia anticipate more American visitors.

For those with wider horizons, Pan American World Airways dangles the Round-the-World in 80 Days or Less fare — $999 for economy and $1,599 for first class. These standby fares— you board if there are seats available — offer savings of 46 percent compared to regular fares.

Standby passengers are allowed up to 11 stops anywhere within Pan Am's global network. There are other conditions and requirements. Unlimited stopovers are permitted for passengers who purchase reservations 30 days in advance for $1,199 economy and $1,899 first class — a savings of 35 percent.

The Caribbean, which enjoyed a good winter because of the terrible weather in the United States, is hopeful that lower prices for hotels — up to 50 percent below those in the high December to April season — will attract bargain-hunting vacationists during the summer months.

Venezuela, Brazil and Peru are expected to be the top South American destinations. Costa Rica and other Central American countries are making a big pitch for the U.S. tourist and increases are expected.

Cruise lines report strong bookings, with increased interest in trans-Panama Canal voyages and Alaska. Incidentally, U.S.-flag passenger services between the West Coast and Hawaii ended earlier this year.

Product Got Name By Accident

By NANCY KERCHEVAL

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — It started six decades ago in a coffee pot boiling on a stove in a downtown Baltimore pharmacy. Today, however, Noxell Corp. is a multimillion-dollar cosmetic business.

In 1914, Dr. George A. Bunting, a pharmacist in search of a greaseless sunburn ointment, developed Noxzema Skin Cream. It was spooned into small glass jars and sold as "Dr. Bunting's Sunburn Remedy."

But the name was changed to Noxzema when a customer used it for another ailment and told Bunting: "Your cream knocked my eczema."

Now, Bunting's 37-year-old grandson watches over an assembly line that fills 300 jars a minute. The containers still are blue, but they're plastic, and employees monitor the product to make sure it meets federal standards.

George L. Bunting Jr. recently told stockholders that Noxell recorded its 23rd consecutive year of increased sales, totaling $137.6 million for a 12.7 percent gain from 1976. Net income soared 13.1 percent to $9.4 million.

"We're relatively small, but we're important within the market," Bunting said, referring to the other cosmetic companies that report sales in the billions of dollars.

"We're concentrating on building the business we have," he said. "We don't look at things as a fad."

Noxzema, which developed from a sunburn remedy into a facial cleanser, is "still growing because it's a unique product," Bunting said. And Cover Girl makeup products have captured the No. 1 spot in the mass-distribution market, competing with Maybelline and some products by Revlon, he added.

In addition, Lestoil, a household cleaner, has claimed the top spot in its marketing area, which includes 51 percent of the country. Noxzema Instant Shave Cream, which was introduced 24 years ago, holds second place in its market.

Bunting said Noxell uses mass distribution, primarily in drug stores and retail outlets, to get its products to the consumer.

Cover Girl, introduced in 1961 in the form of liquid makeup and pressed powder, has been expanded to include eye makeup, nail polish and lipstick.

Bunting said Cover Girl sales, which pioneered cosmetic mass distribution, account for about 45 percent of the firm's total.

"There is one point to be emphasized concerning Cover Girl's future growth potential," Bunting told the New York Society of Security Analysts last year. "Namely, it has a leadership position in the fast-growing self-service segment of the market."

In addition, Bunting said, "People enjoy using cosmetics. It's a benefit in terms of appearance."

Cover Girl is now distributed in nine European countries, and Noxzema Skin Cream and Cover Girl are being marketed in Japan by Lion Dentifrice Co., Ltd.

Noxzema Chemical Co. was established in 1917 with sales of $5,214 and four employees. The first factory was set up three years later in a tiny Baltimore house.

With a monthly rent of $27, that first factory hardly compares with the current headquarters nestled in the middle of 60 acres which was once a nursery. To the rear of the tract, construction is nearly completed on a $6 million warehouse that will make the company self-sufficient.

By 1944, Dr. Bunting was operating a $3 million business, which had expanded into the New York market. Until 1961, when Cover Girl was introduced, the company's success depended on just one product—Noxzema.

That policy of not overstepping into unfamiliar territory still exists.

Bunting said the company's philosophy is based on a "limited product range and looking at the long-term to build business, not just to get next year's sales."

ARCHITECTURALLY SPEAKING

Professor of Architecture, Texas Tech University

ONE OF THE most common and useful active solar systems utilizes liquid flat plate collectors to provide hot water for heating and pre-heat for domestic hot water.

Since an auxiliary system is usually necessary, a hot water boiler is employed for this purpose.

The heating system could be a radiant system (hot water coils embedded in a concrete slab)—or a convection system that uses a hot water coil as a heat exchanger located in a ducted supply and return air system, utilizing a fan. Radiant systems are usually more useful in northern latitudes.

(See Sketch Below)

The operation of the system diagrammed is as follows: flat plate collectors (liquid) collect heat from the sun; the heat is given up to the water in the insulated storage tank through a heat exchanger (the sketch indicates a closed loop liquid system—collector liquid does not mix with storage water); the stored hot water is pumped to the heat exchanger (coil) in the ductwork and back to the storage tank—the cycle continues until the water temperatures drops below operating temperatures; when this happens water is directed to the boiler to be raised to the operating temperatures (in effect, this is the auxiliary heating system).

TO ASSIST IN THE heating of domestic hot water the incoming water supply enters the storage tank and is pre-heated before it enters the hot water heater. If cold water enters the storage tank at 55 degrees, is raised to 115 degrees, then to 140 degrees in the hot water heater, the savings is apparent (water temperature has to be raised only 25 degrees instead of 85 degrees.)

The heating system is actually a hydronic (liquid), convection (air) system combined. A common term "fan coil unit" describes the basic equipment. Heated water needs to be about 140 degrees in order to produce heated air for the system.

Other components, such as valves, expansion tank, thermostats, etc., have not been indicated in order to simplify the sketch.

JOHN St. LAWRENCE

Builders To Hear GE Executive

Members of the West Texas Home Builders Association will have an opportunity at a meeting Tuesday to hear some of the latest forecasts and observations concerning the building industry—where it is now and where it is heading—according to a spokesman for the association.

John St. Lawrence, manager of contract support operation for the General Electric Contract Sales Division at Louisville, Ky., will be guest speaker.

As manager, St. Lawrence is concerned with sales and services for major appliances, air conditioning and consumer electronics sold to home builders, remodeling contractors, apartment builders, mobile home manufacturers and others.

St. Lawrence has been with General Electric since 1945. He is currently serving on the Board of Trustees, National Housing Center Council, a part of the National Association of Home Builders.

St. Lawrence has addressed national conventions and home builder association meetings across the country. He is considered by the industry to be well versed on trends and problems facing builders today.

The association has asked that reservations for the meeting be made by calling M. B. Smith, executive officer, at 799-4188.

Lake Haruna Beautiful Japan Recreation Spot

TOKYO (UPI) — Only 75 miles northwest of Tokyo, Lake Haruna is a magnificient place to skate, fish and dine.

The lake measures three miles in circumference and is stocked with smelt, trout and carp. In winter the lake, formed by the crater of an inactive volcano, becomes a skating spot, while some ardent anglers embark on ice-fishing.

FCC Has Enforcement Power

By MIKE WENDLAND

One of CB's biggest breed of lawbreakers—the unlicensed operator—will be priority target of the FCC's enforcement engineers this summer, thanks to the passage of some long-overdue legislation.

Until recently, the FCC had absolutely no jurisdiction over licensed "pirates" on CB, whose numbers have been variously estimated at between 10 and 20 percent of the nation's 30 million CB users. While FCC engineers frequently came across unlicensed pirates, they could only warn them to get off the air or, in really serious cases, ask for criminal prosecution from a United States attorney.

And the federal courts, already overburdened with backlog, were normally reluctant to take on extra work. So, the word spread quickly. The way to shoot skip, run illegal power and operate in the CB service without worry was to not get a license.

The reason for the ridiculous situation stemmed from legal red tape. The FCC was created by Congress as part of the Communications Act of 1934, charged with enforcing the act's administrative rules.

Thus, because the act required radio operators to be licensed, the agency could impose fines and do whatever was necessary to enforce the rules on licensed operators. But because unlicensed operators were not in compliance with the act, they were beyond the FCC's jurisdiction.

Fortunately, all that has changed. Earlier this year, President Carter signed legislation empowering the agency to enforce its rules against licensed and unlicensed operators.

And that makes James C. McKinney very happy. McKinney is deputy chief of the FCC's field operations bureau, the agency's enforcement arm, and was one of the main backers of the new law. "With this legislation, we can make it economically unfeasible to be unlicensed," he said. "I suspect that fines for our unlicensed operators will be greater than for licensed operators."

The normal fine imposed by the FCC in the past for licensed operators was about $50. In most cases, that probably won't change, unless it is for a repeated or particularly severe violation like using a linear or operating on ilegal frequencies.

But for unlicensed operators, the agency is planning a get-tough policy. Since the FCC wants to get the word out quickly that it is cracking down on the pirates, the enforcement officials are threatening to issue stiff fines.

So far, no massive crackdowns on unlicensed operators have been evident, even though the new law became effective in March. McKinney says his people are finishing a detailed plan which will be operational by the end of this month.

We'll let you know how it works out.

Q. I applied for my CB license in November, 1977. Here it is May, and I still haven't received it. What gives?–E.J., Indianapolis, Indiana.

A. Obviously, your application has been lost. Though the FCC is receiving some 250,000 CB applications each month, the turn-around time is normally less than four weeks. Write the FCC's Amateur and Citizens' Division, Public Reference Section, Washington, D.C. 20554. Give them the date you mailed the application and your birth date. They'll let you know what happened. For a complete discussion of FCC rules, see my book, THE WENDLAND CB GLOVE COMPARTMENT BIBLE, available postpaid for $3.95 from Sheed Andrews and McMeel, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kansas 66202.

CB clubs that want to be listed in our upcoming national CB directory should send us the club name, address, geographical region served and main activities. Write Mike Wendland, Club directory, The Detroit News, Detroit, Michigan 48231.

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: CBers should fight the urge to talk back or retaliate against those who throw carriers or mess up the channels. This never works and only makes matters worse. We are no better than the company we keep. If we are as bad as those we complain about, we're only playing into their hands. And we shouldn't be chummy with them, either, in the hope that they'll think we're on their side. –R.H., Richmond, Virginia.

• • •

Dear CB Static: I have operated three base stations from the same location and with the same antenna for the past three years and the only one that caused television interference was the one that had a modulated microphone, or power mike. I changed the mike and the problem was eliminated.–P.H., Caldwell, Idaho.

• • •

Dear Mr. Wendland: Any time you see CB used on a TV show, you see it used all wrong. The TV actors never give call signs. I think that's one of the biggest causes of the illegal operation. People learn by the examples they see. And TV always gives the wrong example.–A.W., Louisville, Kentucky.

BETTER LIVING THROUGH Improved Housing

By DR. CORA McKOWN
Texas Tech University

NEW HOUSING AND Urban Development (HUD) Standards documented in the Federal register of December 18, 1975, should aid the consumer in the search for a durable, safe, and functional mobile home. Federal Mobile Home Construction and Safety Standards seek to establish performance requirements on all equipment and installations.

Performance requirements are those which emphasize fire safety and set more consistent guidelines for the installation of plumbing, heating, and electrical systems. Manufacturers of mobile homes must submit the building plans or each model to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development for approval, and must certify that each building plan meets Federal construction and safety standards.

The purpose of these standards are many: 1) assure the adequacy of interior plans; specify measures that will reduce fire hazards; 2) provide materials and workmanship to give structural strength and protection against corrosion, decay, insects, and windstorm harards; establish requirements for the design of windows and devices to be used as emergency exits; 3) set requirements for heating and cooling controls and thermal insulation; and 4) assure plumbing systems that are functional and safe.

The standards also cover general requirements for designing the structure to fully withstand the shock and vibration of moving the mobile home. The new HUD guidelines replace the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) recommendations.

EACH MOBILE HOME must have a data plate permanently fastened in a visible place on the home. The data plate must have the following information: 1) manufacturer's name and address, 2) serial number and model number of the unit, 3) date it was manufactured, 4) reference to structural zone and wind zone for which the home is designed, and 5) the statement "This mobile home is designed to comply with Federal Mobile Home Construction and Safety Standards in force at the time of manufacture."

The data plate also must list the factory-installed equipment, which includes the appliances or fixtures necessary for fire safety, plumbing systems, gas supply, electrical systems, and heating or cooling appliances. This plate provides a permanent record for consumers. It also provides a convenient reference for consumers purchasing a used mobile home.

Consumers should judge as many construction features as possible when buying a conventional house or mobile home. In both cases, the consumer generally is attempting to judge after construction has been completed; this makes the task more difficult.

However, many mobile home manufacturers provide cut-away samples of wall construction. Most dealers can also provide specification sheets for construction materials. The mobile home consumer can use both of these items to evaluate quality of construction.

The base of mobile homes generally is steel. Two "I" beams run the length of the mobile home and are located over the wheels. Steel channels then support the width of the mobile home. Channels generally are spaced 4 feet apart (see cutaway drawings). Usually these are easily seen by looking under the home.

The trailer hitch which is a part of or attached to the steel "I" beam is considered a part of the length of the mobile home. Therefore, a 64-foot mobile home has approximately 61 feet of living space. Many manufacturers are now making detachable hitches which may have some advantage when skirting and landscaping the mobile home.

ASIDE FROM THE steel frame, mobile homes have conventional wood floor joists, subflooring, and flooring. As in conventinal housing, joists are spaced approximately 24 inches apart as a minimum standard (see check list).

Often the heating duct work is one continuous strip down the center of the mobile home; this is convenient for placing between the "I" beams. The duct work and plumbing often are placed in proximity.

Heat from the ducts can help to keep pipes from freezing. There should be some insulation around both duct work and plumbing. This area is sometimes called a "basement". The disadvantage in this strip vent system is that it often creates awkward placement of the heat register.

There is more than one way to achieve a 4-inch exterior wall. An advertisement of 4-inch walls does not necessarily mean that 2 x 4 studs have been used in construction. A 4-inch wall can be achieved by using 2 x 3 studs and adding a horizontal rail to the 2 x 3. These horizontal wood strips are sometimes called belt rails. A 2 x 4 stud is stronger than a 2 x 3 stud in a comparable grade of lumber.

However, some people question the added value of the 2 x 4 stud because the 2 x 4 is dadoes (cut) for inset of the belt rail.

The written specifications for construction materials will include all materials. It is wise to check to see if double full length (floor to ceiling) studs have been used between adjoining windows.

An aspect to look for in wall construction is a vapor barrier. The most common vapor barrier is a polyurethane film. The vapor barrier prevents moisture and aids in insulation. Another construction feature to look for is insulation board underneath the siding. Insulation board helps to absorb noise as well as to insulate the home.

ROOF TRUSSES ARE prefabricated and have metal plates at each end of the truss to give added support. Most mobile home roofs do not have much pitch, and there is little or no roof overhang. Since there are strict highway regulations on width of vehicles, roof overhang is not feasible. Some manufacturers are making fold-down overhangs which can be expanded once the home is situated.

Generally, the consumer can tell how far apart roof trusses have been placed simply by looking along the top horizontal of the home and measuring between clusters of screws attaching the truss to the body of the mobile home. Roof trusses generally are 16 or 24 inches on center.

Mobile homes are produced for different climatic zones of the United States, and insulation requirements vary according to zones. Conventional batt insulation and insulation board are used in mobile home construction.

When reading construction specification, check the "R" value of the mobile home as well as the thickness of the insulation used. "R" value refers to the amount of resistance a material has to the passage of heat through it. The resistance value ("R" value) required for manufacturers complying with Mobile Home Manufacturers Association codes established by the Department of Housing and Urban Development vary according to the area. Some manufacturers are producing an "energy-saving" mobile home which has more than the conventional amount of insulation.

Other forms of insulation include storm windows and doors. Weather stripping and caulking are important around windows and doors as is how snugly exterior doors close. After the mobile home has been moved, window caulking and weather stripping should be checked to see if they still offer maximum protection.

Owners of older mobile homes may find it necessary to recaulk windows. Again, pipes under the house and the heat duct work should be protected. If they are not "basemented," they should be wrapped with insulation. Skirting not only improves the looks of the mobile home; it helps insulate the home's floor.

It is important to take full advantage of site when planning insulation. The site should have good drainage. Trees and plants aid in shading for the summer and as wind breakers. Hardwood trees are particularly useful since they lose their leaves in winter allowing sunlight for heat.

TIPS FROM YOUR BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

WHEN WAS THE last time you took a close look at the condition of your roof? Has it survived the ravages of winter? Is it in good enough shape to endure the summer heat? The Better Business Bureau reminds you that a good roof will last for years, but only with a conscientiously applied program of inspection, repair and maintenance.

Look for penetrations, blisters and cracks before your roof starts to leak or become badly worn. Roofs that need repair fall into three categories: 1. those that can be maintained by patching and coating, 2. those that require resurfacing with a new layer, and 3. those that have deteriorated to the extent that they require removal and replacement.

If you think your roof may need repair, have it inspected by a reputable roofing contractor who will be able to make a detailed examination of distressed areas and flashings (the sealing material, usually aluminum, around chimneys and vent pipes where leaking may occur). Before you decide to have any work done, make sure you have at least two estimates from reliable contractors. You can check their reliability by asking for references or by checking with the Better Business Bureau.

Beware the "fly-by-night" operator who promises you everything in order to make a sale, and often charges you many times more than the fair price to do the work. Keep in mind that if he does not pay the supplier whose materials are used on your repair job, you may find a lien placed on your property even though you have paid for the work. Don't be taken in by high-pressure sales talk or offers that seem to good to be true.

When you have decided on a contractor, be sure to get a written contract. If the roof needs replacing, the contract should include the size of the roof in square feet, the type of roof (whether flat or pitched) and the type of shingles. It should also state if flashings, valleys and removal of the existing roofs are included. Any warranty or guarantee should also be in writing and should state whether the entire job or only certain materials is guaranteed, and who will make good on this warranty—the dealer or the manufacturer. Find out if the company also provides liability and compensation insurance to protect you in the event of a worker's accident.

Make sure you know how much the entire roof repair job will cost, including interest and service charges, and get this figure in writing. If your roof repairs result from damages covered by your homeowners insurance, check with the insurance company before signing the contract. Banks and lending institutions offer FHA loans up to $15,000 for any home improvements that make your home more livable and useful.

— You can extend your roof's life expectancy through a planned maintenance program with periodic roof inspections.

— Watch out for high-pressure salesman who know nothing of the type, age and condition of your roof, and who promise that a simple roof coating will do the trick.

— Always get at least two estimates and check the reliability of each contractor before you do business with him. Ask for references or check with your Better Business Bureau.

Don't wait too long. Inspect your roof now to see if the cold weather has caused any damage which needs to be repaired. The Better Business Bureau has this final tip: money spent wisely now on roof maintenance may save you a large repair bill later.

• • •

An energy-saving tip from your Better Business Bureau: If you have a workshop in your home, be careful how you use energy. Turn off lights, soldering irons or other heating tools as soon as you have finished using them.

The Central American country of El Salvador is about the size of Massachusetts and has 25 volcanoes, all of them inactive.

Now, as an owner-operator of a Ming Auto Beauty Center, you can net extraordinary pre-tax profits — with just a fraction of the capital required for other businesses with similar profit potential.

Ming Auto Beauty Centers now gross an average of $300,000 to $500,000 per year. A few Ming Centers gross slightly under $300,000; but one grosses well over $700,000.

The average Ming owner-operator nets 20 to 30 percent of gross, after manager's salary and all other expenses except taxes. Again, some owner-operators realize only 10 percent net, and others as much as 40 percent.

Ming Centers are just as profitable for absentee-owners, too. Selecting a good manager is the key. Ming will help you find him. And Ming will fully train him for you.

If you service just 3 to 4 percent of the cars in your exclusive territory, you're assured of success.

You can offer unique Ming services, unmatched customer satisfaction, and the strongest performance guarantees available. Your attractive, highly-visible Ming Center will sell services no competitor can match.

The only 100% dependable rustproofing system available Completely guaranteed for 5 full years on new cars.

The full circle of auto beauty Includes interior rejuvenation, engine cleaning and repainting, and trunk restoration.

You can operate with a relatively modest investment in time and money.
• Low building cost
• Low equipment cost
• Low inventory cost
• No cash receivable problem
• Regular 8 to 5:30 hours

Now get the complete Ming profit story.
You'll get Ming of America's valuable support in every area of your business. Including site selection, finance procurement assistance, construction supervision and bid-letting, employee training, cost accounting, advertising, and much more.

In short, Ming offers you extraordinary profit potential on a disproportionately small cash investment.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Promise Us Anything, But...

DEMOCRACY, it has been said, is the worst of all forms of government except all the rest.

There are times, though, when even those who have the greatest faith in the American system must admit to amazement that it still works.

Whether it can continue to do so indefinitely may hinge on our willingness to demand and expect less from Washington.

Certainly, it is incongruous to think that we can elect 535 men and women, most of them of no more than ordinary individual ability, and then expect that their combined wisdom as a Congress can solve all of the complex problems that confront us.

It is a myth, encouraged by the politicians themselves, through which the American public deludes itself because it wants to believe in miracles.

IN EXPECTING more than Washington can humanly deliver, we have in recent years put enormous pressures on our Congressmen and Presidents.

Having raised our expectations to unrealistic heights through their campaign promises and a constant flow of publicity releases, the elected representatives then seem genuinely nonplused by criticism over their failure to deliver.

They labor under a staggering workload, face withering criticism and are constantly bombarded by divergent demands for services, protections, public works, social programs and handouts of one sort or another.

It's little wonder, then, that 108 members of Congress decided in 1976 or 1978 not to seek re-election.

"IT IS NOT MERELY a question of advancing years," one syndicated analyst says, "for a number of relatively young members are among those stepping down."

Besides the workload and new financial disclosure requirements, Congressmen gripe over the strains Washington puts on their family life and the low esteem in which much of the public currently holds Congress, he notes.

Having taught special-interest groups that public demonstrations such as strikes, marches and sit-ins are an effective way to get legislation, Congress faces constant harassment and badgering from a growing legion of such groups.

Even mayors and other officials of local governments have discovered the Washington gravy train as an easy way to get a handout, so that their cities can live higher off the hog without the onerous task of having to raise local taxes.

They, too, spend a great deal of time putting demands on their Congressmen.

ONCE WE GET the laws and the handouts that we, the people, demand from Washington, disillusionment usually sets in.

Congress writes a law to cure a perceived problem but by the time it gets through the give-and-take of 535 members of the House and Senate—and, worse yet, goes through the bureaucratic mill for the writing of detailed rules and regulations required for its implementation—the law often creates as many problems as it solves.

In many instances, the cure turns out to be worse than the disease. But, almost invariably, the prescription for correcting the cure is not to repeal it but to modify, amend or "reform" it and, thus, make it even worse.

THE WAY OUT of this dilemma is not to change the system but to change our expectations of the role that government should play in it.

We need to remember that the American Revolution was triggered by too much government control, rather than by too little.

If we will remember that, it will be easier to recognize that the snowballing demand for more government today is not progress but a retrogression into the very abuses our Founding Fathers sought to avoid.

FEDERAL government, as it was envisioned by the writers of the Constitution and as it was practiced for the first 150 years of the republic, should not have an overshadowing presence.

It should, instead, be merely the vehicle through which we defend ourselves from foreign threats and guarantee ourselves inalienable rights as individuals.

If we will get back to basics in that regard, rather than look to Washington to supply our every need, we will put new strength and vigor into the American system.

To continue to expect and demand that the President and Congress promise more and deliver more government is to invite a collapse of the whole system.

ART BUCHWALD:

Being Poor No Disgrace But Bad For Your Image

WASHINGTON—Unless I'm mistaken, the big political issue in this fall's election is what is happening to the "middle class" in America.

The standard cliche in this country is that the rich and the poor are getting everything and the middle class is being left out in the cold.

It may be true about the rich, but there is some doubt that the poor class is as well off as the politicians might have you believe.

SINCE IT'S TOO early for the candidates to talk to the poor people (they usually wait until the week before the election to take a walk through a ghetto), I decided to find out if the poor people were as lucky as the middle class thinks they are.

My source was Target, who fits all the qualifications of being poor. He's unemployed, lives in a slum and needs food stamps to keep his family from starving.

"Target," I said, "there's a lot of hostility from members of the middle class because they think you poor people have it made."

"Don't I know it?" Target said. "We're really getting it for being poor. The vibes are everywhere."

"How do you explain it?"

"WELL, AS I see it, the middle-class people are mad at us because they feel that their taxes are supporting the poor. They're not half as mad at the rich people, because they all hope to be rich someday themselves, and they dream of having everything the rich are entitled to.

"Now, despite the fact that they think we poor are having a ball, I haven't met one person from the middle class who wants to change places with me, though God knows I've made the offer a thousand times."

"That's true. The middle class never thinks it's supporting the rich," I said. "In their hearts, middle-class people think the only ones getting their tax money are the poor."

"RIGHT. BUT THE truth is that a large proportion of the money set aside by the government for the poor is actually going to the middle class.

"Thousands and thousands of bureaucrats are making very nice middle-class salaries administering the poverty programs. I would guess that the poor people get about ten cents on the dollar, and the rest goes to keep us poor people honest."

"It's true that people get angry when they read a story about the poor people cheating the government," I said.

"Of course, they do. But nobody gets uptight when doctors, military contractors, and large corporations rip off the government. They figure that's part of the game.

"THE DIFFERENCE between poor people and the big guys is that they can plead 'no contest' and get fined, while we're urged to plead 'guilty' and take the jail sentence."

Target went on, "The trouble with the middle class is when you mention poor people, they think of blacks, Hispanics and American Indians.

"They forget that there are millions of poor white people eking out a bare existence on Social Security. They're white, elderly and were once part of the middle class until they were wiped out by inflation.

"Most of them are parents of your present middle class, but when they get mad at the poor they never include their own mothers and fathers in their grousing."

"IS THERE ANY way to improve the image of the poor in this country?" I asked Target.

"I believe there is. Once middle-class people realize that we're supporting them more than they're supporting us, they might become more sympathetic to our plight.

"If I have any legitimate criticism of the poor class, it's that in spite of our numbers we've never gotten our story over to the people. The rich do that so much better."

Busing Beats 'Inferior' Segregation, He Believes

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Your feature story in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on the evening of May 16 was most interesting. I refer to the article that said something to the effect that integration in Lubbock schools will cost nearly a million dollars.

It would be more interesting and challenging to compute the cost of segregation in the Lubbock Public Schools since their opening.

I would suggest that the cost of segregated inferior schools in terms of wasted dollars, not to mention wasted human resources, by far exceeds the million dollars mentioned.

John Denver Show Decent, Family-Type Entertainment

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I would like to take this opportunity to let the people who missed seeing the "John Denver Show" know that they missed a truly wonderful family show. By family show, I mean it was decent for anyone to see.

My faith is renewed once more to know there are still people in the entertainment world who stand for God and Country. John Denver is a wonderful example for the youth of America. I believe he realizes the wonderful opportunity he has to influence young people in the right direction.

I also think he is a great tribute to Texas Tech University and the South Plains Area. I would like to see more family type entertainment brought to the South Plains Area. We need to remember what a great influence the entertainment world has on our young people.

Shortly after my wife passed away, I retired from the Los Angeles Yellow Cab Co., and decided to reside in Lubbock, where I am living with my daughter and son-in-law.

I spend my time writing poetry, baby-sitting (and though I lack a proverbial "green thumb"), enjoy doing a little gardening.

In spite of the love and affection showered upon me by my loved ones, there was, however, a terrible void in my existence that prompted me to join the Senior Citizens Group, located at 1812 13th St.

Thanks to this group and the fine, concerned personnel, they've given me a new lease on life, for which I am extremely grateful.

Demo Support Befuddles Bothers And Bewilders

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The Harris Poll on May 8 reported those who view themselves as Democrats go 75 percent to 8 percent for the party's candidates for congress.

Blacks register 79 percent to 9 percent preference for Democrats. Union members are 57 percent to 21 percent Democrats, Catholics are 50 percent to 25 per cent. Big cities vote 56 percent to 24 percent, suburbs 46 percent to 30 percent, rural areas 42 percent to 36 percent Democrat.

Since you are basically in the business of helping to educate the public, how about you telling us the reason for this trend?

You may know from history that we had a little more than 60 percent Republicans at the turn of the century.

H. P. Clemons, 3706-B 53rd St.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We'd guess it's because people want more from government these days —and the Democrats give them more of what they want, deficits notwithstanding.)

Anti-Fem Editorial So-o-o 'Helpful,' She's Thankful

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Thank you so much for your (May 11) editorial concerning rising housing costs. For the first time I realize the insidious nature of the feminist movement.

Following your reasoning, two-income families have more food-available income, more clothing-available income, more medical and dental-available income and so on down the road. This must be what is fueling inflation in these other areas as well.

In the past I thought that the rise in housing costs had been caused by increased wages and material costs. I hadn't really decided where to place the blame for rising prices in the other areas, but now I know.

Perhaps our President can encourage working women to stay at home where they belong and take care of inflation once and for all.

Afterlife Is Gonna Be Lot Like This Life, Ace Avers

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Mankind invented the wheel and many other keen ol' things over the centuries but in all this time we have not found a way to get along with one another in decency and goodwill.

Some say that schooling and discipline will help but I do not buy the package because too many supposedly smart dudes have fallen by the way-side throughout recorded history.

Field generals used to say that whoever got there first with the most won the war but even this does not hold true anymore. Mankind is bound to destroy himself in the end and nothing in the world can change this—schooling, discipline or what-have-you.

My theory about afterlife is as good as the next one and it tells me in effect that it is going to be little different than the present one which leaves, as I have indicated, much to be desired!

'Rip-Off' Fee Too Much For Rip-Offee To Bear

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I have a complaint to voice which affects every homeowner: The service charge which repairmen charge just to come to your house and before they start the labor and in addition to any equipment neeessary in the repair.

Even the BBB thinks this practice is fair!

All businesses have as deductible on income tax the expense, upkeep, wear and tear on vehicles. So, it seems to me that expecting the consumer to pay them for the trip is an unfair practice, tantamount to double indemnity.

If you miss your newspaper, the paperboy doesn't bring that copy...the newspaper does and docks the newsboy (as he should be). The paper doesn't charge you anything for bringing you another...not plus $16.50.

Consumers are resenting it but have no voice, no place in which they complain about the practice! Frankly, I consider this trip-charge a rip-off!

I hope this creates a response among other dissatisfied consumers.

Lubbock Man Appreciates Information On Races

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I would like to thank the Avalanche-Journal and the Lubbock League of Women Voters for your and their work in preparation for the election.

The presentation of the candidates, qualifications, and their position was excellent.

Keep up the good work.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Yup, She Is Guilty

I DON'T KNOW how it is with the rest of you parents, but at our house we approach the mailbox a little more warily these days. We can't help wondering which delivery will bring the subpoenas.

From the children, you know.

The suspense is building, and has been ever since that Colorado 25-year-old slapped a $350,000 damage suit on his mother and father because he didn't like the way they raised him. Says it left him with "recurring homicidal tendencies" that may require lifelong psychiatric care.

What happened was, when he was 14 he was suspended from a Hawaiian prep school for puffing pot. His father made him cut weeds in the backyard for a week while he lectured him on the error of his ways and fed him dry oatmeal twice a day.

AFTER THAT, HE was in and out of public and private schools, smoking marijuana and living at times on the beach with the hippies. He says his father threw him out for good when, at 17, he was expelled again.

This left him "starving on the streets for a year." Now he's living in Boulder, drawing Social Security mental-disability payments, and brooding.

And he's decided to haul the folks into court for rearing him improperly, denying him clothes, food and shelter, and neglecting his "need for psychological support at critical periods in his life."

There'll be a brief time out here while we count up this kid's chances of collecting a penny. Then we'd better start worrying.

THIS KIND OF thing could catch on, you know. And the way my luck's been running lately, I'll be hearing from my two any minute, claiming that if I hadn't damaged their little psyches at a tender age they'd be president of Sperry-Rand by now, or ambassador to Great Britain, or the first female in the White House.

And you know what? They probably could make a pretty good case out of it before a judge. I did keep the hairbrush handy. I did set up early curfews. I did ram them through Scouts and drag them to Sunday School.

And while I never actually kicked them out of the house, there were times there, believe me, when I felt like it.

I WAS NOT ALWAYS the serene, self-controlled parent figure Dr. Spock wanted me to be. I yelled a lot. Especially when, as teen-aged drivers, they burned out five transmissions and two motors in two years, dented a dozen fenders and flip-flopped one automobile onto its back.

Never mind that child psychologists say kids use "wheels" as their first steps in breaking the parental apron strings. What they were breaking was the family budget and I "denied them psychological support" in the loudest voice I owned.

I force-fed them on oatmeal, too. But when they bring that up in court I hope they'll remember to tell the judge I poured milk on it. That may reduce the punitive damages.

AS FOR "RECURRING homicidal tendencies," they probably have those as well.

Especially when they remember how I cracked the whip over their homework, processed them through millions of dollars worth of prep schools, universities and graduate schools (on allowances lower than "any of the other kids") and stunted their social development by nixing coed sleeping parties.

There was mental cruelty, along with everything else. We damaged Sis' psyche by refusing to let her date an 18-year-old when she was still 13. Even when she argued that she'd be perfectly safe because he was a "champion drag-strip racer" and had a "brown belt in karate."

That's only half of it. We wouldn't let her go up on private airplane dates with a 16-year-old pilot, either. Marked her for life, that did.

AND SONNY IS probably still smarting over how we shipped him off to summer camp and then ignored his anguished pleas to "come get me out of this rotten place." Any smart lawyer could turn that one into "emotional and psychological deprivation" at the drop of a retainer.

Come to think about it, I never have been too crazy about the letters we got from the offspring over the years. They tended to run along the same line: routine requests for a bigger allowance or a loan for a down payment on a house.

When the bulletins were good, we got a phone call (collect). The bad news they tucked into the mail.

That's why I'd rather hear the phone than the postman. At least Ma Bell doesn't mess around with subpoenas.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THE BRITISH tested 17,000 children who were 11 years old. And the testers found that the near-sighted children appeared on the average to be about a year ahead of the overall group in such matters as arithmetic and general ability.

A check then of their records showed that even at age 7 before they'd been fitted with glasses they'd exhibited higher-than-average intelligence.

Berry's World

THE SQUARE—A bandstand with plenty of room for dancing and listening centered the 1903 business section of Thurber.

THURBER, 1912—With 10,000 residents, the largest town between Fort Worth and El Paso. . .

Thurber Now Just Ghost Of Once Thriving Town

"I OWE MY SOUL to the company store. . ."

Even in Texas' only coal mine in the 1890s, the song lyrics seemed to be true. Thurber was a company town, fencing in 10,000 residents, fencing out external influence.

A company whistle summoned the miner to the job at 5:30 a.m. and 12 hours later the mine whistle shrilled the end of a day's work broken only by a 30-minute period for lunch.

He awoke early in a company house, breakfasted on food bought at a company store, boarded the company train for the mines, reclined in a narrow tunnel to chip coal from a 36-inch vein.

Company mules, which lived out their existence at the bottom of 500-foot shafts, pulled the coal to the elevator, with a day's pay determined by the pounds of coal chipped during the day.

Back home at the company house he readied himself for some entertainment at the company opera house or company saloon to smooth out the kinks of the long work day.

ON SUNDAY, THE 23 different ethnic groups worshiped in company churches.

On weekends and holidays there were company picnics and parties, formal dances and badger fights. The best entertainment in the country came by train to perform at the company opera house.

Most nationalities of Europe were represented in the population filling the company-built, company-owned and company-operated town of Thurber. They worked the mines and manned the furnaces of the company brick factory fired by fruits of the miners' labors.

Thurber was born to the sounds of strike violence accompanied by murder threats quelled by Texas Rangers.

It died with strikers living in a tent city surrounding the company town, strikers staying on expecting to go back to the mines when the settlement came as it always did.

But, in 1921 conditions were different from 1888. An oil field had been discovered in nearby Ranger, the field helped into being by the company engineer managing the mine operation.

RAILROAD COMPANIES, which had been offering rewards to companies discovering coal deposits along their routes, were converting to oil engines as were other industries.

Eventually, the Texas and Pacific Coal Company became Texas Pacific Oil of Dallas which recently donated one million pages of Thurber history to the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech University.

Future researchers into collection records may discover exactly how it was with Thurber while miners chipped 127 million tons of coal from 15 mines.

At one time Thurber was the largest town between Fort Worth and El Paso, and its mines filled half of Texas' coal needs. Coal smoke trailing from iron horses for several states around came from Thurber coal.

Its records hold the story of a company town development, mine engineering, brick making and labor problems.

SPECTRUM

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The town was founded when the company bought out two brothers, W.W. and Harvey Johnson, who had sunk shafts but could not operate with labor strife running rampant.

FOUNDERS OF THE new company kept the mines closed for nine months while the first major labor difficulties were resolved.

Thurber remained headquarters for the company's oil interests until 1937. By then, Thurber itself was almost gone, its houses moved or torn down for supplies.

The brick factory, which furnished bricks for much of Texas building requiring vitrified brick, closed with the last of its coal leaving only memories in the sound of traffic on historic Fort Worth streets or the lapping of Gulf waters against the Galveston sea wall.

For years the smokestack for an electricity plant, which furnished power for one of the first Texas towns to have electric lights, pulled the imagination as travelers passed by on U.S. 80.

TODAY, ITS SURROUNDING grounds carefully manicured and a Texas historical marker in its shadow, the 100-foot smokestack is just off I-20 east of Ranger, immediately behind a few remaining brick buildings, one now a restaurant, and a new service station built as a coal tipple to keep the atmosphere.

Wording at the smokestack's base calls Thurber's life the "natural evolution of an American enterprise dedicated to developing natural resources to supply the nation's growing needs for abundant energy."

In June those who remember Thurber will come home again to recall how it was until 57 years ago, how life was when 2,500 men "picked up the shovel and walked to the mine" to dig coal in Texas famous coal mines.

DEATH SYMBOL—A funeral hearse and the smokestack for the electric plant seem to symbolize the death of Thurber in the 1930s photograph from the Southwest Collection.

THE SMOKESTACK memorializes a time and town that were and can never be again except in the hearts of homecomers returning annually to keep the town's memory alive. (Staff Photo)

Smokestack Reminder Of Past Glory

THE SMOKESTACK rises 100 picturesque feet into deep blue sky, a monument to a life and time that was, that is no more except in memory.

A few red brick buildings sit at variance to each other, together and yet apart, needing the missing life between to make a whole.

To the side, lines of brick foundations lie in rows like regimented tombstones. Clusters of prickly pear cuddle against them, thorny arms loaded with exotic blooms.

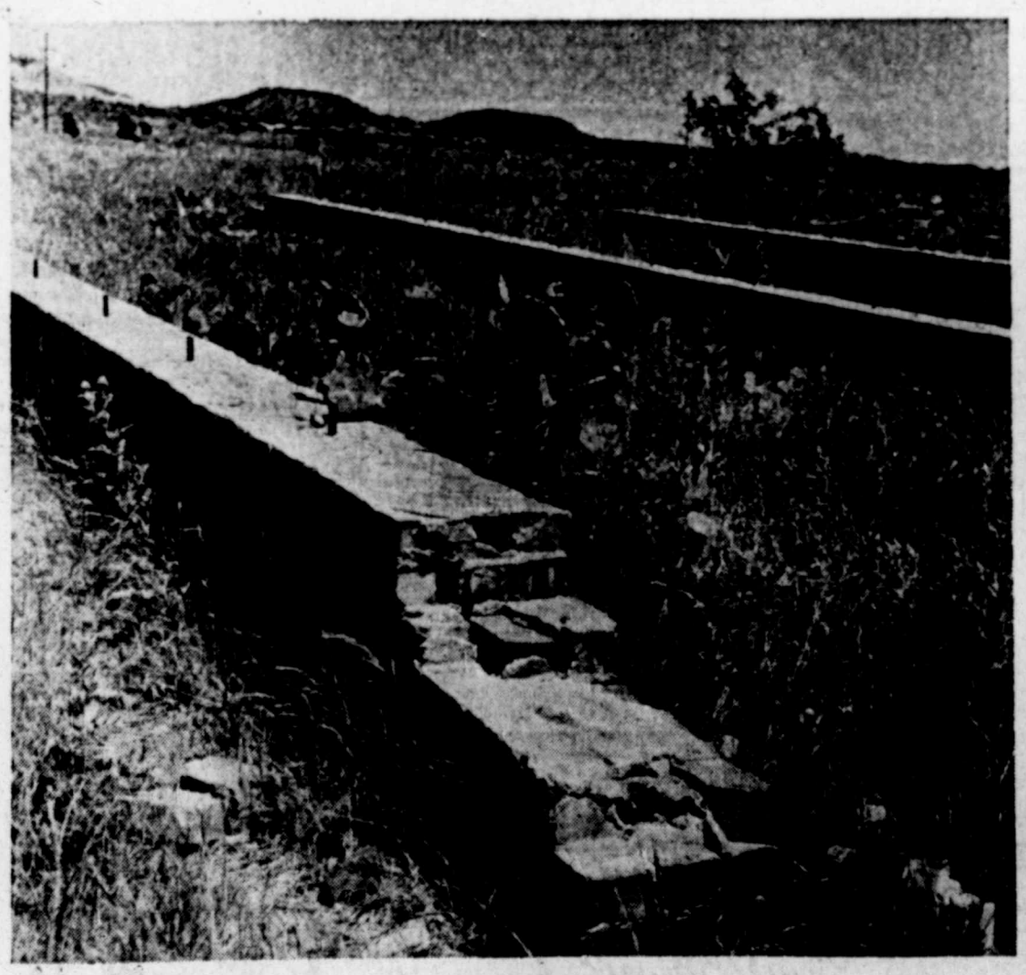
Thurber, once the largest town between Fort Worth and El Paso, slumbers and dreams of past glory when violence and merriment resounded in turn on its streets.

Down at the restaurant, located in what used to be the Thurber drugstore, a waitress leans on the counter and spins yarns—about the 15 coal mines, the 10,000 residents, the strikes, the dress balls, the badger games, the company picnics, and the ghost that walks the streets of Thurber, singing operatic arias with an Italian accent.

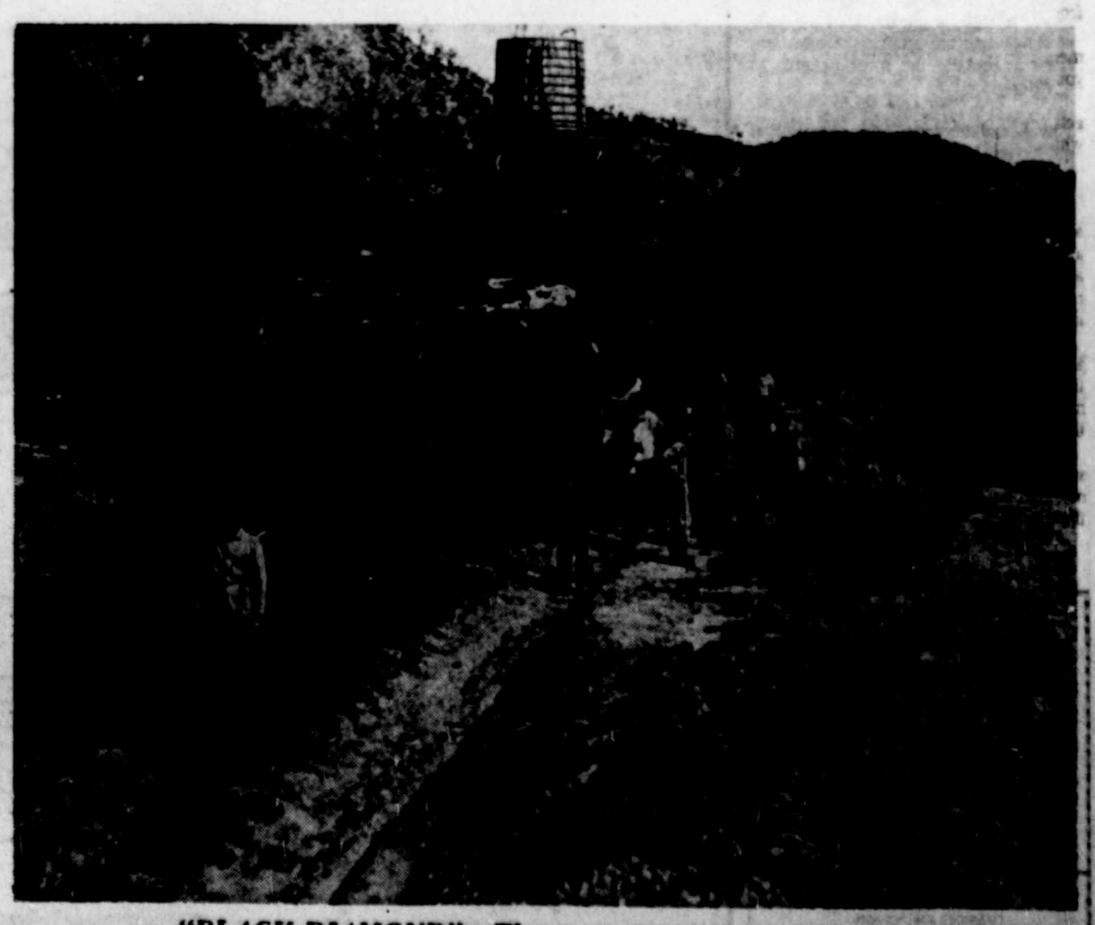
She recalls with a grin the Mays of the past when mine union boss John L. Lewis parked his private rail car at Thurber for negotiations with mine owners while miners quit work to wait the outcome and partake of some "120-proof" locally-produced "grape juice."

And, travelers stopping off a busy I-20 listen, then talk of fuel shortages and energy crunches—wondering aloud if Thurber might live again, might once again echo to the brawling life of a coal town to ease modern problems.

A roar of motors and the travelers again are gone, leaving Thurber to its lazy days of nothing to do but tempt the curious close enough to tell its tale.



THE REMAINS—The foundation of the brick plant and an empty plain where homes for 10,000 residents once stood.



"BLACK DIAMOND"—The company train to the mine...

North To Alaska By Road: Best Advice-Take Boat

By SUSAN CHADWICK

SEATTLE (UPI) — The only road to the last American frontier is 1,000 miles of mud, dust and gravel, relieved by the occasional appearance of a wild sheep or coyote, some lofty mountain peaks, and perhaps an encounter with a colorful character.

"It's long and tedious and wears a lot on you and your car," said Ned Tuthill, a professional hunting guide and pilot who estimates he's traveled the Alaska Highway too many times.

"Oh, yeah, there's a lot of really beautiful country," he admitted under pressure. "A lot of mountains, and, uh, colorful trees."

"But it's a long road with a lot of turns and long stretches through flat country where there's nothing really to see. The two or three days before Whitehorse are pretty boring."

The Alaska Highway, unofficially called the Alcan Highway, was hastily bulldozed out of the wilderness by the Army Corps of Engineers during World War II as a land supply route for military installations in Alaska.

The rough-hewn road, most of it unpaved, begins at Dawson Creek on the northeast border of British Columbia, a mere 839 miles from Seattle. From there it winds for 918 miles to Whitehorse in the Yukon Territory.

Past Whitehorse the scenery along the two-lane dirt road picks up, said Tuthill, as you pass by Mount Logan in the St. Elias Range, at 19,850 feet the second highest peak in North America.

At the Alaska border, some 300 miles from Whitehorse, the highway becomes paved for another 300 miles to Fairbanks.

But it's the mud and dust and gravel that provide the summertime souvenirs of motoring the 2,362 miles from Seattle to Fairbanks.

When it's not mud as high as the top of your license plates, it's dust that fills your car, or flying gravel that punctures your radiator or windshield, said Tuthill.

During the Alaska ferry strike last summer, many stranded tourists sold their cars and motor homes rather than face the drive back down to the "outside."

"Most people have screen guards in front of the radiator to block the stones," he said. But he added: "You hardly ever see very much traffic on the road. You can drive for hours without seeing another car."

"A lot of places they're working on the highway and we had to go around them," said Tuthill of his latest trip last summer. "They're always working on it continuously. As far as I know they've always been working on it.",

He said there are gas stations along the route "with little cafes in them just far enough apart so you can fill up with gas. A lot of these stopovers have hotels and cabins you can rent by the night."

With luck the traveler stopped for rest or repairs might meet some of the interesting people that live up the northern wilderness. "Trappers, bush pilots, a lot of people that live up there have interesting stories to tell about animals and things," said Tuthill, though the subject of mud clearly evoked more feeling.

Tuthill, who makes his home at Anchor Point, Alaska, on the lower Cook Inlet, also recommends the hot springs north of the Liard River in northern British Columbia to soak off the residue of travel. "Everybody usually stops to sit in the hot springs."

The Liard River also marks the boundary between the territory of the magnificent white Dall sheep on the north and the related grey Stone sheep on the south, said the 28-year-old guide. But other than sheep, some coyotes and maybe a wolf or two in the wintertime, "you don't see many animals," he said.

Wintertime is a better time to drive the highway, he said. The road is harder, smoother, and generally plowed out, although temperatures regularly drop to 50 and 60 below and storms sometimes make progress difficult. "You've got to make sure you got good antifreeze."

Overall he recommends that anyone contemplating driving the Alaska Highway consult a travel guide called "The Milepost," available in most book stores.

"If I had the choice and the money, I'd send my car by ferry or barge," he said.

The Voice of Business

By RICHARD LESHER
President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON --You have trouble saving, and may be dipping into savings to pay routine bils. A raise — if you're lucky enough to get one — doesn't seem to do much good. Most of the luxuries have been cut out of the budget, and still it's difficult making ends meet. Those are the effects inflation is having on many consumers.

For the businessman, inflation also causes problems: His costs — raw materials, rent, credit, wages, utilities, insurance, fees, taxes, etc. — keep on going up. But raising prices to cover the increased expenses is difficult, because customers resist higher prices. If prices cannot rise, it is difficult to maintain product quality. He treads a thin line between survival and bankruptcy.

It is unrealistic to expect people in either of these positions to be very receptive to a call to "sacrifice" to end inflation. Rising wages and prices in the private sector are the largely symptoms of inflation, not causes.

The cause of inflation is not difficult to understand. When the federal government spends more money than it takes in, in a high employment economy, the difference must be made up somehow. One way to make it up is to raise taxes openly. Another way is to impose the hidden tax of inflation, by creating new money faster than the economy can create new goods and services.

Since voters are fed up with tax increases, the politicians are making up the difference with the inflation tax, and hoping no one will be smart enough to hold them responsible for it.

And in a sense, the politicians are only partly responsible. We all — collectively — tend to want more from the government than we are willing to pay for. Our representative should make the tough decisions on who gets what from the money available. But it's politically more expedient to try to give everybody what he wants and let inflation take care of the overdraft.

As long as the federal government is running record deficits, inflation is not going to be controlled by anything business or labor can do. And jawboning from the director of the council on Wage and Price Stability, or from the President himself, deserves to be recognized for what it is: a political cop out.

For the record, the deficit for fiscal (budget) year 1977 was $45 billion. It will probably reach $53 billion for fisal 1978. And the projection for 1979 is $60 billion.

If and when the government does its part by reducing spending, there are some things we can all do to help.

1. Stop pressing our representatives for costly government programs. Inflation removes from the left pocket what the government puts into the right.

2. Limit average wage increases to average increases in productivity. Or better yet, increase productivity to match our expectations for wage increases.

3. Shop carefully. Competitive pressure is a strong weapon against rising prices.

4. Demand that the benefits from the government regulation at least match the cost of regulation. Perfection is literally priceless...we just don't have the money to buy it.

5. Adjust tax policy to reward saving and investment.

Conquering inflation does not require resigning ourselves to a lower standard of living. But it does require that we rediscover the source of a rising standard of living: Investment in better tools for workers which will improve productivity, provide new and better jobs, and provide higher increases for all Americans.

Government "aid" isn't worth the paper it's written on.

Although the IRS can audit whomever it chooses, it can't necessarily audit whenever it chooses. For example, if an IRS agent shows up at your business establishment for an unannounced audit, you have the right to a postponement if an audit would inconvenience you at that moment.

In deciding to relocate, retirees hoping to get away from tax collectors as well as cold weather will be interested in a comparison of state and local tax rates prepared by Internal Revenue Service. States with the lowest rates on earnings in the $10,000 to $15,000 range are Wyoming, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia and Florida. The highest rates are in Massachusetts, New York, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Maryland. Not to be overlooked, though, is the fact that the high-tax states also are among the ones that generallly provide the most benefits to the elderly.

Pitney Bowes Employees Cited

Seven sales representatives of the Lubbock branch office of Pitney Bowes will be cited for their 1977 sales achievements at the business systems and equipment company's annual Sales Leadership Club Conference beginning today at Cerroman Beach, Puerto Rico.

Receiving honors for their above-quota performances are Thomas H. Shelby, Rayburn L. Maxwell, Kenneth L. Aldridge and Larry D. Damron. Also being cited are Clyde L. Long, Sherwood F. Anderson and Cecilia A. Lisby.

Others attending the Pitney Bowes sales conference include: Kenneth L. Sisco, branch manager; Ruth Brown, administrative manager; and Stephen L. Moore, service manager.

Michael J. O'Connell, vice president of field operations for Pitney Bowes, said the top sales representatives from the Lubbock branch office achieved sales that rank among the best performances by the company's 2,550 sales representatives throughout the United States.

Sisco said that more than 800 top sales, service and administrative personnel from Pitney Bowes are expected to attend the conference at the Cerromar Beach Hotel.

Norway's Troops Told To Fight Despite Big Odds

By BARRY JAMES

TROMSO, Norway (UPI) — As a nation of only 4 million people, Norway could hardly hope to roll back an attack by the Soviet Union, which has a population of a quarter billion.

But it does aim to make such an attack as painful as possible, enabling Norwegian forces to hold out until its western allies can rush in reinforcements.

Norway is one of only two countries in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which shares a common frontier with the Soviet Union. The other is Turkey.

In the face of a mounting Soviet military buildup — much of it concentrated on the Kola peninsula east of here — Norway is speeding negotiations that would enable its allies to pre-stock heavy equivment in this country, as well as spending heavily to modernize its own equipment.

But Norway's basic military strength rests on a total defense conception in which every able-bodied man and woman has a place. In case of war, there would be a massive mobilization of resources, involving everything from farm tractors to civilian ships and airliners.

Norwegian soldiers, sailors and airmen are instructed to go to war automatically against invaders without waiting for orders from Oslo or from NATO headquarters in Brussels.

According to a Royal Decree dating from 1949, officers and non-commissioned officers "shall at once offer resistance against an armed attack with all the resources at their disposal... they are to offer resistance even if the situation looks difficult or hopeless without regard to enemy threat of reprisal."

On the 122-mile Norwegian-Soviet frontier, the 120 border guards have orders to open fire automatically on invaders, while further back, troops would be blowing up roads and bridges.

"Our mission would be to create a fighting situation so that there would be no doubt a war had started," said Col. Per Hansen, the border garrison commander. "As a commander, I have to think a war could start tonight and be ready for it."

But strategists fear an attack, if it came, would slice across northern Finland to a point where Norway is only 4 miles across in an attempt to cut the country in two.

Alternatively, the Soviets could use an amphibious marine regiment, air drops and landing craft to strike far down Norway's coastline. This is why NATO officials are particularly worried about Soviet amphibious exercises on the Kola peninsula, which has the same kind of terrain and climate as north Norway.

All over the Northern Norwegian command, which covers a slice of territory as big as Belgium, Holland and Denmark, but with only 450,000 inhabitants, serious defensive preparations are going on.

Some fjords are mined and others would be. Submarines and patrol boats put to sea with live torpedoes and missiles. Ambushes have been set up along roads and valleys. Naval artillery has been strengthened and upgunned.

(The Navy has 16,000 miles of indented coastline to defend, as well as a 200-mile economic zone comtaining oil rigs and rich fishing grounds. Potential ocean delimitation disputes with the Soviets cause concern. The army needs specialized equipment to deal with rough, mountainous terrain, deep snow and sub-zero temperatures. But these conditions, and the training of soldiers to survive them with minimal equipment, can also be considered defense strongpoints.

The air force will be getting the lion's share of the defense budget over the next few years. This will pay for 72 F16 fighters partly produced in this country, Norway's contribution to NATO's airborne radar system (AWACS) for which funds already are allotted, and improved airfield protection.

This last is a key point for the Norwegians, for they have to be able to maintain airfields open in time of conflict, both to keep the expensive F-16s flying and to be able to receive allied reinforcements. Delays in producing the Franco-German short-range Roland missile have caused serious headaches for Norway, which may not be able to deploy them until 1983 or later — far behind schedule

Norwegian military officials also are deeply concerned about possible cutbacks in the U.S. Navy which might make it difficult to keep open lines of communication across the North Atlantic.

This is vital, because Norway — which lacks easy land communication with other NATO countries — depends on quick reinforcement by sea and air. Canada has dedicated one brigade to Norway's defense, and negotiations are now under way for the unit to permanently stock its heavy and winter equipment here. British and Dutch Marines also train here every winter, leaving behind some of their winter equipment. U.S. forces regularly take part in sea and land exercises in the northern command. Airfields are being improved to receive the latest American aircraft.

The Norwegians welcome allied forces on regular exercises —although the Soviets have strenuously objected to the participation of West Germans. Norway says neither the exercises nor the prestocking violate its 1949 ban on the basing here of foreign troops. The stockpiling of nuclear weapons on Norwegian soil also is banned as are exercises close to the Soviet frontier.

The need to tread softly as far as the Soviets are concerned while remaining an active partner in NATO requires great political skill.

"As a small country bordering on a superpower in a strategically sensitive area, Norway has had to pay particular attention to the need for reassurance without straying into the ominous territory of appeasement," Defense Undersecretary Johan Jorgen Holst said.

Norway joined NATO in 1949, impelled by the Communist takeover of Eastern Europe. It was a novel move for a traditionally neutral land. But Norway realizes it is a strategic plum for the Soviets and takes comfort from its NATO membership, which makes a Russian attack in isolation unlikely. Although Russia and Norway have not fought each other in 1,000 years — the Soviets withdrew after driving out the Germans in World War II — NATO enjoys broad public support.

"If NATO were in disarray, Norway would be the last country to leave the bridge," Holst said.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The oncoming Full Moon is not good for you to take any chances now. Do not allow yourself the luxury of having any uncompromising views for if you do, you can easily estrange others and have a difficult time in later reconciling any separations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try not to commit yourself to any further expense, but pay pressing bills instead. Avoid arguing with mate, loved one. Concentrate on whatever is charming and beautiful. Think positive.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your partners are not in a good mood today, so be with others until they are feeling better. Do not get into any arguments where a civic matter is concerned. Be most careful when out driving.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get work done alone without expecting help from others, but don't overdo. Take time for pleasant visits. Get home fixed nicely so that you are proud of it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are courteous and charming to others, you avoid arguments and can have a pleasant day. Don't overspend for pleasure, but stay within your budget.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't bring up any controversial subjects at home, where tempers are apt to be short. Study into a new venture but don't jump right into it, as yet. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use particular care in driving since others might be careless. Go after data you need in a quiet way from depenable sources. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to instil economy measures, whether you think you need them or not. Don't take chances but listen to what a bigwig has to suggest. Think along more constructive lines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have ideas that could get you into trouble, so forget them now, and don't be forceful with others. Steer clear of a group affair where arguments could arise. Home is best bet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Although you may feel limited, this is no day for you to rant and rave, but to plan quietly how to better your lot in life. Clear the deck for action later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your pals are in no mood to be helpful today so get things done on your own. Plan how to become more independent in the future also. You have more ability than you think.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to be particularly cautious in the handling of worldly affairs now. Don't jeopardize your position with bigwigs by wrong words, actions. Be careful of yor reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Not a good time to get started on a new interest or you meet with failure. You have made new contacts that can be good for you in the future. Forget those who have been drawbacks to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will show ability at trouble-shooting and should have the education slanted along such lines. Teach to be objective and give an opportunity to solve problems. Your progeny will have the ability to get at the truth of any situation and this can lead to much success and fame, and is one who can bring order out of chaos.

Pioneer Corp. Promotes John Ray

AMARILLO (Special) -Pioneer Corp. has promoted John Ray to the position of district manager of Pioneer Natural Gas Co. operations in Plainview, according to Larry Shortes, vice president.

Ray, who has been Pioneer's office manager in Plainview for the past 10 years, replaces Vernon Clem, who has been promoted to assistant vice president in charge of the West Texas division of Pioneer Natural Gas Co. at Lubbock.

The new district manager has been with Pioneer for more than 20 years in duties ranging from meter repairman to new business salesman. He was named Plainview office manager in 1969.

A native of Amarillo, Ray is a graduate of Amarillo High School and Amarillo College. He spent nearly 15 years in the Texas National Guard.

He is a past president, director and fund drive chairman for the High Plains Children's Training Center, and is past president of both the Plainview and the Texas Consumer Credit Association.

He and his wife, Carol, have a son, John Ray III, who is a student at West Texas State University.

Terra Testing Opens Office

Terra Testing Inc. of 1212 18th St. has announced its recent opening in Lubbock as a testing laboratory.

Joe Schiel, laboratory manager, said the business handles testing operations relating to the construction industry, such as the testing of concrete and asphalt, and soil investigations for foundations.

The firm, managed by C. V. Surendran, has five full-time employes plus a consulting engineer.

Surendran has a masters degree in architectural engineering from the University of Texas, and is a registered engineer. He was previously with the Texas Highway Department, and before that worked in private industry.

Schiel, who has been in Lubbock for 2½ years, previously worked for the Texas Testing Laboratories.

The company's activities recently included soil investigations in five different rivers in Texas as preliminary work for a natural gas pipeline collection system.

Diet Center Opens New Facility Here

The Diet Center has opened a new facility at 4708-B 4th St., the fourth location in Lubbock for the firm, according to Glenda Bratcher, Diet Center counselor.

She said the center offers a diet "which is easy to follow and inexpensive to prepare" as well as being nutritionally balanced.

"Our people are not hungry because the diet features a 100 percent natural food supplement especially designed for the Diet Center," she said.

"We find that people generally lose 6 to 10 pounds in two weeks, 11 to 17 pounds in four weeks, and 17-25 pounds in six weeks."

Additional information is available by calling the center at 793-1387.

Horowitz Fans From 14 Countries

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Since pianist Vladimir Horowitz has not played outside the United States since 1951, and never has played in the Far East, special arrangements were made to enable his overseas fans to attend his all-Chopin May 7 concert at Carnegie Hall.

Some 1,200 enthusiasts fromm 14 countries — including Japan, New Zealand, France, Britain, West Germany, Italy, Sweden, The Netherlands, Lebanon, and Brazil — paid up to $2,000 each for a "Horowitz weekend" in New York City.

Even before Horowitz opened his Golden Anniversary season Jan. 8 with the New York Philharmonic under Eugene Ormandy at Carnegie Hall, he wus bombarded with letters from overseas complaining that every one of his concerts was selling out the day tickets went on sale and pleading for a chance to see him. So he decided to set aside a number of seats for the May 7 concert — the 18th of his anniversary series — to be made available overseas through music organizations and tourist agencies.

The response was immediate and overwhelming. France, where Radio France ran special programs of Horowitz recordings, sent more than 200 representatives, with nearly as many from West Germany and Japan, and smaller contingents from elsewhere.

The 1,200 visitors and another 1,800 Americans — including 100 on stage in a rare Horowitz concession — were not disappointed.

There were some pyrotechnics, but mostly the concert was an exercise and a demonstration in interpretation rather than technique. The first half of the program consisted of the introspective Barcarolle, Opus 60, three mazurkas including the beautiful Opus 17, No. 4, and the B-flat minor Sonata. The second half comprised the Polonaise-Fantaisie, Opus 61, the "Posthumous" Nocturne in E minor, and the heroic Ballade in G Minor. Encores included the familiar "Military" Polonaise.

It was a triumphant "International Golden Jubilee Concect" which noone present will forget, with the smiling, waving 73-year-old taking bow after bow to a standing ovation.

'Demon Drums' Grew Out Of Physical Fitness Group

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI)—An entertainment difficult to classify — it has elements of music and dance and ritual — was the "Ondeko-za" (Demon Drums) from Japan, presented by Pierre Cardin at the Beacon Theater May 1-13.

The group originated as a physical-fitness commune on an island in the Sea of Japan, based on long-distance running — everyone runs from 15 to to 25 miles a day and they all participate in the Boston Marathon. The drumming and dancing came later and have been welded into a popular touring entertainment.

There are brief dance excerpts featuring the three women in the company — with excellent costumes, decor and lighting — and some singing, but it's the musicians who count most.

There are the familiar samisen, koto, flute and recorder-like shakuhachi — at one point a masked shakuhachi player walks slowly through the audience with magical effect — and, of course the drums, from small kettle drums to a giant 700-pounder.

Drumming in Japan has almost as many different intricate rhythms as African drumming, but the Japanese drums are mostly used for religious purposes, and strength is as necessary as subtlety. The finest effects come from seven small drums all toned differently, backed by three different sizes of medium drums and the king of them all, the 700-pound Oni Daiko.

The dynamic range of the drums, from pianissimo to fortissimo, played on face or rim, is astounding, and one marvels at the power of the self-hypnotised young drummers, led by slim Eitetsu Hayashi. There is a sense of wonder, but no feeling of involvement: a separation of cultures which is far greater here than with Noh plays or Kabuki dancers.

Shorts On Argentina Set Prior To Soccer Matches

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Each of the 38 transmissions of the 1978 World Cup soccer championship matches made to television stations throughout the world will be preceded by short films on Argentina.

Director Sergio Renan has put together the 38 film shorts, most of which include shots of scenic natural settings, from the icy region of the southern tip of South America to the tropical forest near the famous Iguazu waterfalls.

VIRGINS' SEAPLANE

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands (UPI) — Antilles Airbotas, the seaplane service that connects the Virgin Islands with neighboring Caribbean isles, has acquired a 42-passenger Sundringham flying boat, the largest seaplane flying in the Curibbean. Natives call the big boat the "747" of the Virgin Islands.

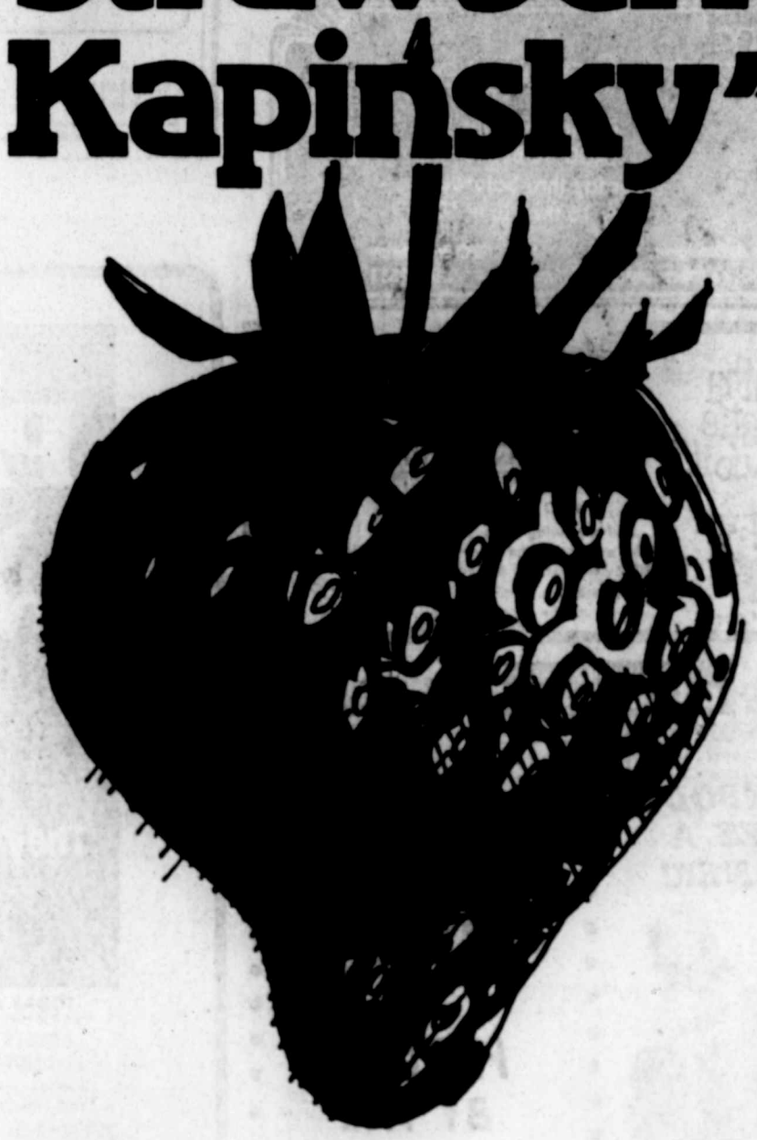
Whatever happened to "Strawberry Kapinsky"?



Strawberry
(Fragaria)

Born Leonard McFadden Kapinsky in 1923, he got his nickname by pushing a Strawberry up a 46' flagpole with his nose. The subsequent publicity and his genuine love for strawberries landed him parts in several movies, the most memorable being the lead opposite Darrell Renaldo in the science fiction film, "The Strawberry that attacked Cleveland". He married a former Miss Altoona, Pennsylvania, who collaborated with him on the book "How to be Friends with a Strawberry".

We are pleased to bring you, Strawberry lovers, these great moments in the history of the Strawberry. We are equally delighted to be able to bring you the Strawberry itself in a variety of wonderful ways to complement your other good cookin' favorites. Blind Georgian Adept At Stage Direction

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — The first thing Robert Ravan does when he tackles a play is crawl all over the stage, talking to himself, feeling.

Then he picks actors by making them talk a lot — and hearing more than they say.

For him, "directing is more a case of listening than of seeing."

Ravan has been blind since birth. A circumstance he regards as challenge rather than handicap.

"Vision without sight," runs his reasoning, "is a helluva lot better than sight without vision.

"Anyway, about 99 percent of the directors working are creatively blind, so why shouldn't I get to work?"

After a half-dozen productions in small West Coast theater groups, the 36-year-old Georgian recently launched his initial New York exhibit, "James Joyce Is Leaving Paris."

His lifelong addiction to theater began at age 7 when his parents took him to see Mary Martin in "South Pacific." Years later, Ravan met William Ball, director of the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, who "rejuvenated my belief that the stage could be a vital force."

One of seven children, Bob was born in Atlanta. His mother had German measles a few months prior to his birth, which resulted in his blindness and a host of other ailments.

"My parents were petrified by having a child who couldn't see," he says, "and I think they felt terribly guilty, but the result was they never said no to anything I wanted to try."

After graduating from the University of Georgia, Ravan went on a piano-playing safari of Europe for two years, then entered Yale for a master's degree in international relations.

His education completed, Ravan headed to the West Coast, became active in public relations and got involved with several transient theatrical groups. His first directing was of a Noel Coward play in 1973.

About a year ago he came to New York, passed a set of examinations and became an account executive with a large investment firm.

"I suppose this will sound very arrogant and cold," Ravan says, "but I find that other blind people have not been quite as lucky as I. They have not been encouraged to be themselves.

"They depend too much on organizations to give them their opinions, their tastes, their psychological support."

Admittedly, breaking into theatrical work has been an in-and-out affair. "Somebody has to discover you before others will give you an opportunity."

He has found that after initial hesitancy actors get over the mental hurdle of working with a blind director. "I'm beginning to form an ensemble that works well together.

"We engage in lively interpretative skirmishes, but they will tell you I always win. I do my own blocking in a scene and work out a setting with the designer.

"Then, too, blind people dream in colors. I cannot prove to you it is the same color you see, but the concept is workable because the kinds of reds and greens and blues and lavenders that I describe to a lighting designer obviously are the same because I get those results on stage.

"I let my actors try anything. What I loathe most is an actor who brings you nothing. Bring me everything including the kitchen sink. We can edit that out but we can't edit in a performance.

"I know that if I think things out clearly they will come around to what I want.

"I want to be judged as a good director as opposed to being seen as a freak show. I came to terms with that. You know what you are and to hell with the rest of them.

"If some people see you as a zoo, then you are a zoo. If it gets you the work you want, be a zoo. I'm not afraid of that any more."

Good News For Ballet Fans: Gelsey Kirkland Back At Peak Form

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The best ballet news is that Gelsey Kirkland is back at the peak of her form and dancing better than for the past two years.

She proved it with a bang as American Ballet Theater opened its long April 17-June 10 season at the Metropolitan Opera House with George Balanchine's "Theme and Variations."

Miss Kirkland was a Balanchine protegee until the ABT enticed her away from New York City ballet three years ago as principal partner for defector Mikhail Baryshnikov. (Her slight build suited him, as his physique is not the strongest for lifting a partner.) Illness and injury had hampered her form much of the time since then, however.

She still fits the Balanchine style like a glove, and with Baryshnikov partnering her in "Theme and Variations" she showed from the opening bars of the Tchaikovsky music that she has put on a little weight and a lot of strength and once more is what Baryshnikov saw in her: marvelous. She gained at least one admirer, who had had reservations about her dancing since joining ABT.

The ballet has bright new costumes by Desmond Heeley — white for the two principals, yellow for the four solists and their partners, and red for the corps — which it didn't really need, but the color adds to the spectacle. While Miss Kirkland was dancing up a dream, Baryshnikov was partnering her with neat diffidence and performing his own grands rondes de jambes en l'air, double turns and jetes en tournant to perfection. A great opening to the season.

New to New York on the same program was Kenneth MacMillan's "Pavane," a slow pas de deux in classic style replete with supported attitudes and high arabesques, fish-dives, back bends and high lifts. Miss Kirkland, full of newfound aplomb, was partnered by Ivan Nagy.

The opening night program also included "The Firebird" and "When Push Comes to Shove."

Following a week with the Murray Louis company, Rudolf Nureyev was joined by the Dutch National ballet for two weeks April 18-30 in his fourth annual Broadway season at the Minskoff Theater. He certainly seemed more at home with the ballet dancers.

The program with the Dutch company — the same at every performance — was a long one: five ballets with Nureyev appearing in four, necessitating lengthy intermissions, adding up to 2¾ hours.

Nureyev himself danced the pas de deux from "Le Corsaire" with Alexandra Radius, unacknowledged ballerina of the company, the American premieres of Toer van Schayk's "Faun" and Rudi Van Dantzig's "About a Dark House," and the solo role in Hans van Manen's "Four Schumann Pieces." The fifth work, for the Dutch company, was the American premiere of Rudi van Dantzig's "Four Last Songs," to the Richard Strauss songs.

"Le Corsaire" is one of Nureyev's trademarks, and if his leaps and double turns are not as high as they once were, he still can excite an audience. "Faun" is a reworking of Nijinsky's "Afternoon of a Faun" set in a modern factory, with Nureyev as a factory cleaner flirting with two girls from the assembly line during their lunch break. Thin but fun.

"About a Dark House" is a muddling piece of existentialism, in which a man invited to a formal party finds himself as the only real person in the room, which suddenly disappears, leaving everyone near naked. Some interesting movements and passages of male supporting male, but overall is a puzzlement.

The "Four Schumann Pieces" is a modern classic, with its central character living in his romantic thoughts but content to be by himself when the five couples in his mind's eye disappears. The ballet suffers from a lack of variety of step and pace, but much of it is compelling romanticism. "Four Last Songs" is a similar work, with again the separate movements too similar, but it establishes a mood and certainly the dancing was excellent.

The Eliot Feld Ballet made its first Broadway appearance April 10-23 at the Plymouth Theater, sponsored by the powerful Shubert Organization in its first major ballet presentation.

In addition to old favorites like "Intermezzo," "Harbinger," "Consort" and "The Real McCoy," the company came up with a couple of new Feld works, one of them "La Vida," set to Aaron Copland's "El Salon Mexico."

In "La Vida," given its world premiere April 13, Feld contrasts a single hidalgo with a half-dozen Indian peasants. The hidalgo is presented alone at first, in a comic presentation in he which he doesn't do much dancing but has a lot of business with a huge sombrero and an enormous serape.

Three Indians trudge in, dragging girls on their backs as symbolic burdens. The Indians give a series of peasant and ritual dances, during which one of the men appears as Quetzlcoatl, the serpent god, and one of the women poses on the back of the hidalgo, under the serape, in a variety of poses and lifts.

The stage looked a bit bare with only seven dancers, and the choreography a bit thin compared with the density of the music. The Indian costumes were beautiful, an adaptation of peasant dress which could set a new disco style.

Copland, spry and smiling at 77, was on hand to share the curtain calls with the cast and choreographer.

The five-year-old Feld company improves from season to season and rivals the Joffrey as the third most important ballet comieny in the country.

WAITING FOR DEATH—A guillemot, its plummage impregnated with oil, waits on a beach at Great Yarmouth on the east coast of England recently for what can only be a long and painful death as the bird is unable to dive for food. More than 100 birds washed ashore dead in the wake of a tanker collision off the coast. (AP Laserphoto)

Lemmon Likes Roles Which, At First, He Doesn't Understand

By WILLIAM GLOVER

BOSTON (AP) — The roles Jack Lemmon likes most are the roles Jack Lemmon at first understands least.

"It's the best way of staying out of a rut," says the veteran of 39 films and 500 television shows.

"You have to fight like hell not to get pigeonholed in this business. If you don't, you keep getting the same part with a different name."

The two-time Oscar winner is right now on change-of-medium break in the play "Tribute." After tryouts here and in Toronto, the father-son comedy-drama gets to Broadway's Atkinson Theater June 1.

JACK LEMMON: Likes Challenging Roles

The production is only the third Lemmon appearance on a Main Stem stage in 25 years. Just out of stock apprenticeship, the future star assisted at a 1953 revival of "Room Service," returned in 1960 with "Face of a Hero" which scored a critical and boxoffice zero.

"That didn't discourage me a bit," he says cheerfully. "Your chances in a play are about five times tougher than in a film, but the whole business is a crapshoot. I've had my share of flops and I'll have them again.

"I think I learned more out of that experience than in any hit. When as an actor you have something that is not working, but you keep slugging, the experience is very good for you.

"Fortunately, though, the vibes this time are all the opposite of what they were in 'Hero.'"

With a cherubic puff on the ever-present big cigar, Lemmon says he would have been back sooner "if it wasn't such a major job of moving coast to coast with your family and everything."

As an extra inducement to involvement, the bouncy 53-year-old performer has a contractual first claim on starring in the eventual movie version of the show. Whatever else it does, "Tribute" has set a pre-production record of being bought for the screen for $1 million.

"I can play in New York through October," he reports. "Later I'd like to do it in Los Angeles."

Lemmon has kept in stage training out there for several years with appearances at the Music Center with "Idiot's Delight" and "Juno and the Paycock."

"It's like swimming — it comes back to you right away," he says of the contrasting thespic demands of screen and stage. "I'm awful lucky I got my basic training in theater and in the great era of live drama on television."

Lemmon got the script of "Tribute" about a year ago from the author, Bernard Slade, whose earlier opus "Same Time, Next Year" continues to reap Broadway p.

"We'd met casually before, but Bernie said he'd written it with me in mind, so he thought I ought to see it. Well, I loved it and the project was far enough ahead so time could be blocked out to do it." A lifelong piano addict, Lemmon also wrote a song that he plays in one scene.

His role is that of a happy-go-lucky writer who has squandered talent by "making the world around him a large party." Threatened by serious illness, he "decides to do one good thing by developing a relationship with his grown son.

Lest that sound too solemn, Lemmon asserts "there's a tremendous amount of comedy and that's how it makes points."

Prior to rehearsal, however, he avoided probing the character too much, or arriving at a concept. Which brings him back to the pattern of liking parts of potential complexity and depth.

"I often find if a part is well written, I haven't the slightest idea of how to play it at first — that's one of the most attractive things I know.

"There has to be something there that isn't obvious." He cites "Days of Wine and Roses" and "Save the Tiger" as two movie examples of such dilemma.

"I didn't have the remotest idea where I wanted to go at first. You start digging.

"If you know immediately how to play a part, I don't know why the hell you'd do it. Because that would mean, you'd either played the part before, or there's nothing to it, it's all surface."

In "Tribute" he feels "pretty damn close" to ultimate portrayal, "although there are always little bits you keep working on."

Besides acting, Lemmon has a major avocation of serving as a spokesman for environmental improvement groups. During the past decade he has taken part in four TV specials on such topics as air pollution and the dangers of atomic reactors and frequently tapes messages for local rganizations.

"I'm not an expert," he says of his involvement, "but I'm at a point where people at least will stop and listen. We know the work has helped. It hasn't hurt my career, although some people wish someone would put a bullet through my head."

He shuns public involvement, though, on political topics.

"That makes me a little leery. Am I more politically acute, so that I should try to influence others? I don't think so."

Photos Banned On Mule Rides

SANTORINI, Greece (UPI) — There may be no photographs of tourists riding mules from the port of Santorini up a precipitous cliffside to the volcanic island's capital town this year.

The Association of Santorini Mule Owners — the men who lead the mules as they pick their way up the zig-zag path cut out of the mountainside — has asked for bids from photographers for the right to take the pictures.

But bidding starts at $28,500 for a two-year contract and there are no takers at present.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, May 21, the 141st day of 1978 with 224 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Jupiter, Mars, Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

Glenn Curtiss, American inventor of the hydroplane, was born May 21, 1878. This is actor Raymond Burr's 61st birthday.

On this day in history:

In 1832, the first Democratic National Convention was held in Baltimore.

In 1881, the first American Red Cross chapter was organized in Washington, D.C., by Clara Barton.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed "an unlimited state of national emergency." Seven months later, Japan attacked Pearl Harbor and the United States was catapulted into world War II.

In 1976, 28 members of a high school choir were killed in a bus crash in Martinez, Calif.

A thought for the day: British writer Richard Garnett said, "Ascend above the restrictions and conventions of the world, but not so high as to lose sight of them."

Black rolls 5-1. How should play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

While White is ahead in the race, he does have a problem — the runner marooned on Black's 1-point. White needs a 6 or a 5-1 to get that man out, and Black's efforts must be directed to keeping the man trapped.

At the moment, one roll could win the game for White: 6-6. That would enable White to get the runner all the way off the board and leave him with an insurmountable lead.

There are three possible ways for Black to play his 5-1: a. make White's 12-point with the men on White's bar-and 11-points; b. hit the blot by using the 5 to hit from the 6-point; c. bring the man on White's bar-point to Black's 12-point, bringing it into position for a direct shot should White escape.

The first two moves both stop 6-6. The third possibility gives White the 35-to-1 chance of 6-6, but enormously increases Black's chances of hitting should White escape.

The one move we would rule out is making White's 12-point. True, that does stop White from winning the game if he gets a lucky 6-6, but it leaves little chance of hitting White should he escape with 6 and some other number, and that is eight times more likely than is White's rolling 6-6.

There is not all that much to choose between the other two possibilities. My own tendency is to use the 5 to hit the blot on the 1-point, then use the 1 to bring the man on White's 11-point into range by moving it up to the 12-point. Even should White enter and hit the blot on the 1-point, he will still need a 6 to get out. Since White's 5-and 6-points are open, Black should have little trouble re-entering, and then he will have an impressive array of men to hit the White runner if it escapes.

Special Type Socks Now Available For Women

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Note to fisherwomen and boy anglers: a two-layer sock designed to be worn inside waterproof boots to keep feet warm and dry in winter or cool and dry in summer now is available in women's and boys' sizes.

The European-designed foot covering acts as a wick to absorb dampness from feet when it condenses on inside walls of boots. The inner fibers form a barrier to keep the feet dry. Women's sizes are 5-10; boys' sizes, 3-6.

Shortage Of Funds Plagues Aggie Hall Of Fame

By WILLIAM DICKINSON IV

BONNER SPRINGS, Kan. (UPI) — A blond, green-eyed mannequin, fashionably dressed in a circa 1870 red satin dress, stands next to a Steinway & Sons piano.

But the mannequin, like the Agricultural Hall of Fame and National Center where she is displayed, has fallen on hard times. One hand is missing; a finger is gone from the other.

The hall, located 12 miles west of Kansas City, opened its doors in 1965 to honor the "American Farmer" under a charter granted by Congress.

But financial success has been elusive. Unable to pay off its $500,000 mortgage due May 15, the hall had to obtain an extension of the note.

Bill Davis Jr., president of the hall, said that despite the financial problems, "We are probably doing better now than any time during the 18-year history of the hall." He estimates up to 100,000 visitors may stop by the hall this year — 20,000 more than the 1977 record of 80,000.

Officials also said they have plans to drill into one of three or four abandoned natural gas wells on the 258-acre property in an effort to cut utility costs. Surplus gas would be sold off to help meet mortgage payments. Drilling may begin this month, according to Tom Higgins, a member of the hall's board.

John Junior Armstrong, president of the Kansas Farm Bureau and a member of the hall's board of trustees, said members of the state bureau passed a resolution at their annual meeting this year asking each farm family donate 80 cents to the center. The American Farm Bureau has also expressed support.

Armstrong said the Bureau's slogan is, "80 cents, the price of one Big Mac, to get the bankers off the Ag Hall's back."

"We have to make the first move," Armstrong said. "Other industries then will be forthcoming (in support)."

Future plans for the hall, established as a national education and historical corporation, include a learning center and a science technology center. The latest addition, a library, opened last month.

"I think it is a shrine to the agriculture industry and something I think is very appropriate," Armstrong said. "It's not just another museum. We have plenty of them."

The exhibits contain a variety of antiques and memorabilia. On a wall in the main building hangs a console mirror from the first opera house in Kansas City, Kan. Several old-time record players sit nearby.

Other exhibits in the main hall include pictures of the 50 state flowers, a collection of washing machines, various farm tools, oxen bells, water pumps, weight scales, hundreds of different pieces of barbed wire, a collection of salt and pepper shakers and butter churns. Amidst the antiquity is a modern display on artifical insemination of cattle.

The main hall also boasts such items as a mail cart, baby cradles, a vacuum cleaner, a horse-drawn pleasure carriage and a collection of ovens.

Behind the main building is a second exhibition hall. About 30 rusted tractors, some with hand cranks, and other farm machinery are parked along a path to a one-room school house.

NEW LIGHT IN EASTERN SKY

There seems to be no end to the number of bright shining stars in the Russian chess firmament. The latest and brightest is Josef Dorfman of Lvov, who is presently Soviet co-Champion (with Boris Gulko). Over the past several years, he has played with a consistently high level of competence and can be expected to improve in the years to come. The game below, taken from the Student Olympiad held in Mexico City last year (and won, as was expected, by the USSR) shows Dorfman's fine blend of opening knowledge, tactical vision and endgame technique.

ROYAL SUCCESSION IN DENMARK

For so small a country, Denmark has produced some remarkable chess players. Aron Nimzowitch was one of the world's top players, as is Bent Larsen today. In between, there was Jens Enevoldsen who was champion of Denmark in 1940, 1947, 1948 and 1960. In the zonal tournament in Helsinki, in 1947, he came in fourth, and he has represented his country in many Chess Olympics. At the age of 52, he won the Kiel, Germany International Tournament. Here is a game from that event:

Detroit Planning To Expand Zoo

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit's Children's Zoo, located on Belle Isle, is expanding to accommodate larger animals such as the Michigan Bear, Formosan deer, llama and buffalo. Elephant and camel rides are part of the expanded attractions.

The zoo will double its size to 28 acres and will add a "Goat Island" and an elevated treehokse from which visitors can view the whole animal area. Zoo expansion is part of Belle Isle's $10-million renovation program, which includes a nature center, new fishing docks and lighted tennis courts.

Books That 'Talk' Being Developed By Firm

By JAMEF J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Bible that preaches, bird cards that chirp, an encyclopedia that teaches language — all new ways of learning by adding sound to the printed page — are being developed for sale in the near future.

David Hackman, president of Microsonics Corp., says the various products all rely on miniature phonograph records, about the size of a quarter, and a hand-held player device.

Microsonics has licensed several applications of the concept, including a series of talking books for children called "Adventures Through the Alphabet" to be put out by Encyclopaedia Britannica. n

The talking books are designed to teach English to Japanese, Spanish, Italian and Arabic students.

There is another talking books idea being marketed by Fisher-Price Toys, a children's encyclopedia edited for audio use. The toy concept was introduced at the American Toy-Fair in New York City arlier this year.

Hackman said Fisher-Price, which has the rights to Disney and Seseme Street, was introducing a series of 18 books initially.

"The toys will sell for about $2," Hackman said. "That includes a player and one book. The Britannica languuge program is about $150, including four books and a player for each module, a beginner, intermedite one and two, and advanced.

"Each book has about 200 records in it and instructions in the book are in the native language of the user."

The toys are to be released for the 1978 Christmas buying season. But ready for release now, Hackman said, are sets of full-color bird picture cards designed for members of the Audubon Society.

Each set contains pictures of different species of North American birds. A painting of the bird, text, and a micro-record which describes the species and a bird call. The bird calls were furnished by the Cornell University Laboratory of Ornithology. The package retails for about $38.95.

Pamphlets that teach health and medical techniques are currently being used by John Rich, director of health careers education at Kuskokwim Community College in Bethel, Alaska. n

He has been teaching Eskimos with less than an eight-grade reading level medical and life saving techniques with the microsonic concept.

"It simplifies the lessons because the audio messsage is right next to the text and may be repeated as many times as necessary," he said. "Plus, in anatomy and physiology there are many Greek and Latin phrases that need to be pronounced for these students."

The concept behind the talking books is a transparent micro-record and a phonograph held in the hand which is placed against the disc. With the push of a button 45 to 90 seconds of sound will come through a tiny speaker.

Indigents Receive Free Heart Surgery At Medical Center

By RONALD R. LANDRY

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Despite skyrocketing costs, a group of medical professionals in South Jersey's Pine Barrens maintains its policy of offering expensive health treatment absolutely free.

In the 55 years the Deborah Heart and Lung Center has maintained its wooded, 40-acre medical retreat in Browns Mills, no indigent patient has ever been turned away, hospital officials say.

Ranking among the top cardiovascular centers in the world, the hospital, a one-time tuberculosis sanitarium, quietly gives away an average of three $25,000 heart operations a day.

"It's not easy. We work very hard," says the center's vice president for development, Clara Franks. "But we manage to keep our heads above water."

Just how the hospital has managed to be successful is an improbable example of charity begetting charity, year after year.

In 1977, the center provided 997 cardiac operations free of charge and offered outpatient care to more than 9,000 persons, said hospital spokesman Hugh Harper.

Mrs. Franks says such traditional fundraisers as "card parties, car raffles and dinner dances" arranged by 40,000 members in 300 supporting chapters in five states have posted the hospital's current $12.8 million operating budget.

The 130-bed hospital maintains surgical, pulmonary and cardiac departments with a combined staff of 450. Among them are 15 cardiologists and seven surgeons who give full-time attention to the heart and lung problems of the center's patients.

One of the near-thousand heart operations performed last year by the center was on Shakila Razak, a 10-year-old Pakistani girl whose bout with rheumatic fever damaged her heart and withered her body to 40 pounds.

A malfunctioning heart valve destroyed the girl's appetite and her condition steadily worsened until she underwent delicate open-heart surgery.

The estimated $30,000 cost of the operation would have been more than the girl's father, a Karachi soap merchant, could afford.

Founded in 1922 as a sanitarium for tuberculosis patients victimized by working conditions in the sweat shops of New York, the center shifted its emphasis to heart and lung disease when TB was controlled in the late 1950s.

Mrs. Franks, the hospital's fund-raising director for more than 40 years, was a tuberculosis patient cured at the center. She coordinated a $14-million expansion drive that will add two new wings to the hospital and reduce the center's 31-week patient waiting list.

Hindus Come To Holy City To Die, Be 'Liberated'

By RAMESH C. PUNDE

VARANASI, India (UPI) — Death means liberation from a long series of incarnations to the devout Hindu and is the biggest event in life.

Hindu scriptures indicate there is no better place to shuffle off mortal coils than Varanasi, the ancient and, to India's 500 million Hindus, the holiest city.

Many sick and old Hindus come to Varanasi (the British call it Benaras) on the banks of the sacred River Ganges, to die and be liberated.

A single dip in the sacred Ganges ensures the regular multitude of pilgrims that converge on the city they have washed away a lifetime of sins.

A few drops of the sacred water in a dying person's mouth is supposed to be the second best way to liberate the soul.

Millions drink the sacred water every day at bathing places near the confluence of medieval drains that discharge raw sewage.

Relatives carry the sacred water in copper containers home to the sick and poor.

Hinduism seems to pervade Varanasi — in the decorated doorways of temples, the sound of sacred bells, the chanting of priests, the fragrance of burning incense and the smoke of cremation sites on the river's living waterfront.

Mourners chanting "The Name of Lord Rama is Truth" carry shrouded corpses to the funeral pyres, where constant curling smoke has blackened the facades of ancient nearby temples.

Varanasi offers much more to tourists and pilgrims than funeral pyres, however.

Pastor Directs Colorado Backpacking Program

NEW CASTLE, Colo. (Special)—At first glance, 28-year-old Steve Hoekstra, of New Castle, looks like anything but a pastor.

Clad in blue jeans and worn hiking boots, sporting a bushy red beard and long hair, the young Southern Baptist admits he often is mistaken for a hippie.

Actually, Hoekstra, of Dutch descent, serves as pastor of Grand River Baptist Church and a small mission on a $5,300 annual salary; directs a backpacking program on a volunteer basis for Colorado Southern Baptist; and conducts at least three ongoing community ministries.

According to Baptist Press, Hoekstra talked about the relatively new backpacking program while attending the annual Brotherhood Leadership Conference at Memphis, Tenn.

Hoekstra said he trains backpack leaders and plans seven backpacking trips for youth annually, with two of them co-ed in nature.

About 100 Baptist high school youths participate in the program each year, learning campcraft skills, taking part in Bible study and permitting nature to help them make a spiritual application to their lives, according to Hoekstra.

Don't co-ed backpacking trips create boy-girl problems?

"Absolutely not," Hoekstra insisted, "I've been leading co-ed groups for four years and haven't had my first problem yet. If anything, they are more respectful of each other than groups of the same sex."

Hoekstra came to the 93-member Grand River church right after he graduated from Grand Canyon Baptist College in Phoenix, Ariz., nearly two years ago. He also has since started White River Baptist Mission, 70 miles away in Meeker, Colo.

Hoekstra's Sunday mornings begin with Bible study and worship at New Castle. Then he takes his wife and baby to Meeker for afternoon Bible study and worship services, and returns to New Castle for church training and evening worship.

He conducts mid-week prayer services at New Castle on Wednesday night, and at Meeker on Thursday night. During the week, Hoekstra, who majored in fine arts and minored in Bible in college, teaches three classes in drawing and pottery at a junior high school.

"The kids in New Castle are stifled," Hoekstra said. "Pottery gives them an outlet," he added.

New Castle is one of the new boom towns where oil shale is mined as an energy source.

Hoekstra also is beginning a ministry to prisoners in the county jail at Glenwood Springs, 14 miles away, that already has seen two prisoners on work release, become Christians.

Hams Spread Gospel Worldwide

Ham radio, originating in Lubbock, is sending and receiving messages to, and from, missionaries—around the world.

This dramatic service spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ, has its point of origin in the Missions Department of the Sunset School of Preaching at 3723 34th St.

Sunset School of Preaching is fostered by the Sunset Church of Christ in Lubbock.

The ham radio ministry already is in service. The antenna will reach up to 52 feet. It can be cranked down in case of high wind.

The ham set is inside the Sunset School of Preaching building. It is capable of reaching around the world to any of the 200 to 250 graduates of the SSOP, who are scattered all over the world.

Looking into the future, a course in ham radio will be included in the curriculum of the Sunset School of Preaching.

Several times a week, ham operators tie into a network that stretches the miles from the mission fields to Lubbock and the SSOP.

According to Tex Williams, chairman of the SSOP Missions Department, this network can result in tremendous savings in time and money of communications. "The missionaries can talk to us, and we can talk to them. It's great!" Williams said enthusiastically.

"Previously, it was time-consuming and uncertain to contact missionaries by mail; and expensive by telephone," he explained.

Emergencies, as well as routine network exchanges, can be handled in a matter of minutes.

Up-to-the-minute status reports are possible, as well s communication of new ideas and programs.

Williams explained that also "phone patches" with relatives of missionaries are possible, and already have been tested and proved. "This way, the missionaries never are too far away from home and loved ones," he added.

A present project of the Missions Department of the Sunset School of Preaching, is "Adventures In Missions." In this, college-age men and women train six months in the SSOP to assist missionaries, then go for six months training in the Spanish languages, before being sent to help the missionaries in the mission fields.

Last Saturday, Rudy Wray, missionary in Honduras hooked up the Lubbock station, and a group of "Adventures" students who are there assisting him, were allowed to talk to friends in Lubbock and other places via phone patches. "It bolstered the morale of the students far out on the mission field and away from home, 100 per cent," Williams said.

He added that the Sunset ham radio project is not a closed door and strictly denominational (Church of Christ) affair.

"We plan to allow missionaries of other churches to use our network," he said.

Eventually, the 1,000-plus missionary force of Churches of Christ around the world, may be using Lubbock's ham radio network, as well as the 200 to 250 SSOP-trained missionaries.

Official call letters are being applied for, Williams said.

The station currently operates using the call letters of David Svobda, an undergraduate in the SSOP Missions Training Department. He set up the local installation and helps Williams, who originated the project, operate the ministry.

Svobda had been a ham radio operator before coming to school to study missions.

'CALLING ALL MISSIONARIES, CQ, CQ!'—David Svoboda, right, a student in the Sunset School of Preaching's missions department in Lubbock, is calling missionaries on a ham radio setup that has been installed as a communication link between the SSOP Missions Department and missionaries around the world, who are graduates of the school here. Looking on is Tex Williams, chairman of the SSOP Missions Department, who originated the idea of the ham radio communication link. Svoboda was a ham radio enthusiast before enrolling in the SSOP for missions training. Williams said a course in ham radio would be offered at SSOP starting next fall. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

RELIGIOUS NEWS

Rev. Cooper Serving In Church Post

The Rev. George Cooper is Minister of Education and Outreach at Lubbock's Southwest Baptist Church.

He started to work in April. His responsibility will be directing the church's outreach in evangelism and visitation, and in coordinating the church's total educational ministry.

Rev. Cooper has a bachelor of arts degree in religion from Wayland Baptist College at Plainview; and a master of religious education degree from Baptist Theological Seminary at Jacksonville, Tex.

He has served pastorates in Plainview, Palestine, and Huntington, all in Texas.

Rev. Cooper and his wife, Betty, have two children: Debbie, 15, who is a sophomore at Coronado High School, and George, IV, 11, who attends Rush Elementary School.

Wilburn Coffman Assumes Southcrest Baptist Post

Wilburn P. Coffman is serving as Minister of Evangelism and Outreach at Lubbock's Southcrest Baptist Church. He commenced duties of that position, May 1.

He is responsible for leading and directing with the pastor, the evangelism and outreach thrust of the entire Southcrest Baptist Church through the church's organizations.

Coffman was born Oct. 22, 1921, at Weatherford, and moved to Lubbock from there in 1927. He graduated from Lubbock High School in 1940, and attended Texas Tech. He served in the Navy and said he was called to preach while in the Navy.

He graduated from Bible Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth in 1948, and became associate pastor of Tabernacle Baptist Church of Lubbock. He has served as pastor of Bible Baptist Church at Stockton, Calif., Hurlwood Baptist Church at Hurlwood (west of Lubbock), Parkway Drive Baptist Church and University Baptist Church, both of Lubbock, Travis Baptist Church of Memphis, Tex., and came to Southcrest from Trinity Baptist at Amarillo.

He married Opal Boldin in in 1944 and the couple has a married son, Ronald of Lubbock, and a married daughter, Mrs. Dianne Morrow of Hereford, and one daughter at home, Amy, 14. She is an eighth grade student.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

IT SEEMS THAT some people are dissatisfied with life in general and with themselves in particular. Not a few have an inner dissatisfaction with themselves, with what they are and with what they are doing about themselves. This would be part of what underlies the widespread exasperation of our times. It may be related to the pathetic spiritual vacuum which seems to exist for a good many. This personal dissatisfaction ranges all the way from petty annoyances to serious problems.

Recently I saw a copy of a typewritten note found by a police officer in a telephone booth. Apparently written by a drug addict, it read as follows:

"King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want. He maketh me to lie down in gutters. He leadeth me beside the troubled waters. He destroyeth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of wickedness for the effort's sake. Yea, I shall walk through the valley of poverty and will fear all evil for thou, Heroin art with me. The needle and capsule try to comfort me. Thou strippest the table of groceries in the presence of my family. Thou robbest my head of reason. My cup of sorrow runneth over. Surely heroin addiction shall stalk me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Damned forever."

ON THE REVERSE side was written, "Truly this is my psalm. I am a young woman, 20 years of age, and for the past year and one half I have been wandering down the nightmare of the junkie. I want to quit taking dope and I try but I can't. Jail didn't cure me. Nor did hospitalization help me for long. The doctor told my family it would have been better, and indeed kinder, if the person who first got me hooked on dope had taken a gun and blown my brains out. And I wish to God she had. My God how I do wish it."

Here is a tragic example of how deeply personal dissatisfaction can go and how destructive a force it can become. Yet, in this tragic human situation, there is one element of hope. The girl's honesty about her addiction. With that honesty as a base, she still may be able to extricate herself from the misery in which she is living. But whatever unhappy circumstance one may face there is the beginning of an out in self analysis and honest self scrutiny. It can be a most painful experience for anyone to tell himself the honest truth about himself. The human mind is very clever when it comes to rationalization or the process of trying to make the irrational appear rational. Forthright telling it "like it is" is never easy. But it is a pretty healthy procedure.

THERE WAS SOMETHING admirable about the woman who wrote that pathetic note. With all the suffering because of her problem, she could at least face herself honestly and admit she had a real problem. And such honesty is the beginning of the solution of any problem. Here's hoping she really uses that honesty to work her way out of her heroin habit.

It's no good to let the feeling of personal dissatisfaction govern oneself for it can steer one wrong. Problems must be faced for exactly what they are. The mind must not be allowed to disguise them.

Every person is, after all, a free spirit and as such will not let himself be destroyed by frustrations. Honesty is the key to personal freedom. The formula for success is to look at oneself objectively. Recognize yourself for what you are, both bad and good. Being completely honest with oneself a person may then begin to deal creatively with those things that cause dissatisfaction and come out on top of them. There are always better ways to better days for anyone.

Safe Drinking Water Available

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Consumers are being shortchanged by the failure of government to recognize that bottled water and home water treatment devices have the potential for providing water that meets all national safe drinking water standards," Donald E. Porth told a meeting sponsored by Resources for the Future.

"If consumers in Boston want lead removed from their water, it can be done now with home water treatment devices," he said. "If consumers in Nevada want arsenic removed from their water, it can be done now. If consumers in Illinois or Iowa want radioactivity removed from their water, it can be done now. It can be done today without bond issues, without huge construction projects, without delay and without obsolescence."

Porth is president of the Water Quality Research Council, a non-profit group devoted to research and education.

Lake Sakawea in North Dakota, the state's largest, is a manmade body of water with 1,600 miles of shoreline.

German Health Spa In Use As Far Back As 1378

BAD WILDUNGEN, West Germany (UPI) — History books and centuries-old records say that the Georg Viktor Spring in Bad Wildungen was discovered and used for health cures as far back as 1378.

The spa, located between the medieval university town of Marburg and Kassel, thus will celebrate its 600th anniversary with a series of social events in May, July and at the end of September.

Unable To Sleep? Try Long Walk

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you feel restless, upset or worried at bedtime, don't go to bed. Chances are you'll find it hard to fall asleep and then sleep restlessly. Instead, do something to make you physically tired, such as going for a walk.

Research uncovered by the Spring Air Mattress Company indicates that being keyed up interferes with sleep. Being physically tired at the end of the day is the best sleep medicine. If you wake up and can't get back to sleep, get up, read a book or do something quietly until fatigue overtakes you.

Troubles Continue To Plague Army's West Point

By DON HOLLOSCHUTZ

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — THE U.S. Military Academy, having survived cheating scandals and the admisscon of women, is again trying to figure out how to change without changing.

Officers say the 176-year-old academy's problem is how to adapt to young men and women cadets brought up in the 1970s without compromising west Point's regimentation, traditions and honor code.

"The cadets of today have changed a great deal in some ways as soccety has changed over the years, though in some ways they have not," says Lt. Gen. Andrew Goodpaster, the academy's superintendent. n

"The main goals we are working toward remain just the same. We have been through those thoroughly and we don't see any difference in terms of what the Army needs and what the academy should provide, but the ways of going about doing it today are different.

"Really our aim in adapting to young people today is not so much to ease off restrictions but to tighten academics, discipline, clarify standards in the honor (code) area and explain the reasons for the changes."

The academy has undergone numerous changes since World War II to conform to a changing world. In the past three years, it has survived a major cheating scandal, admission of women for the first time, challenges of the revered honor code and harsh criticism from within Army ranks.

Tobay, the academy is in the middle of one of the "most comprehensive changes" in its history, according to top officers.

The study charged the Point is plagued by poor morale, a lack of supervision and planning, "intellectual inbreeding of the faculty," resistance to change, negative attitudes toward learning by cadets and a pervasive lack of humor.

The generals issued 152 recommendations. Nearly half have been adopted, and most of the other nare being studied. Both cadets and faculty reject the charge about the lack of humor.

But, according to Col. Edward Saunders, class of '46, who heads the physics department, the main problem is accommodating the attitudes of today's young people without compromising basic principles of military officer training.

"When I went to college in the '40s it never occurred to us to ask why we had to take a course in civilian school. Yet now, every civilian asks that question," he said.

Today, he said, "There is much more questioning (by cadets). They are less disciplined in the sense that they are less likely to do what they are told to do just because they are told to do it.

"The academy has to understand that this has occurred. We have to do a better job of selling on why the curriculum is a sound curriculum. We have to convince them that the Point is all right."

"The 17 and 18 year olds 20 years ago had very little acclimatizing to do when they came mere," Szabolcsi said. "The outlook, goals and behavior in civilian life and military life were not that great.

"Today, you have 17 and 18 year olds coming to the academy from a society that is extremely divergent (from) the atmosphere at the academy. The mission is to bridge the gap between a highly volatile, fractional society and a highly structured and disciplined military society."

As a result, there is friction at the Point which sits on a bluff on the west bank of the Hudson River, 50 miles north of New York City.

Cadets chafe under restrictions, although many rules have been modified. They complain of limitations on their free time.

The cadets of the 1970s are less compliant, more militant. They will break rules they feel are unjust and go to federal court if they believe their rights have been violated.

One recent incident: Cadet Kevin Downey, a senior, was charged last year with violating the academy's rule barring fraternization between upperclassmen and plebes (freshmen).

He received a number of demerits and served numerous "area hours" walking around a courtyard in full dress with a rifle as punishment for his friendship with Cadet Cynthia Bianca, who subsequently left the academy.

Honor code charges also were filed against him, charging he lied about how long he knew Miss Bianca. Fighting back, Downey filed suit in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn alleging his rights were violated. The Army eventually dropped all charges on a technicality.

One sophomore cadet, who declined to be identified, complained, "I find it very hard to go along with the academy's policies, for instance, the one involving fraternization. I was brought up that no one told you who to go out with. You went out with whomever you wanted."

And, he said, "I know classmates who have broken rules because they wanted to become test cases."

The trouble with West Point, he said, is that "the cadets are very normal but the military academy is not normal. They want us to conduct ourselves as officers, but the majority of the 17, 18 and 19 year olds at West Point haven't raised all the hell they are going to raise yet. They can't understand why they can't be like their friends going to other colleges."

One woman cadet said women cadets going steady with other cadets will "sneak off" to secluded places on campus and that many plebe women are dating upperclassmen.

There have been eight cases of "fraternization" since August and the cadets all received "slugs" or demerits.

Sophomore cadets Joan Zech and Carol Barkalow and plebe Marianne Malizia say they are happy and do not find too much discrimination from the men. But they admit feeling closed in at times by the restrictions.

"Sometimes there is a real lack of freedom," said Miss Zech. 20, Enumclaw, Wash. "We have free time on the weekdays and can't leave the post. All the meals are mandatory whether you feel like eating or not."

"The most immediate problem is how to close an increasing gap between the average product of society and the ideals of West Point—Leslie Szabolcsi, president of the class of 1978."

Being a plebe, Miss Malizia, 19, Windsor, N.Y., has the toughest time. Plebes always fare the worst as the Point attempts to instill discipline.

The academy now stresses military training for plebes and has eliminated many of the harsher punishments, such as upperclassmen screaming at them, having to sit stiffly at attention when eating or being deprived of food.

"We have to do things like deliver the mail and the laundry," Miss Malizia said. "Whan we walk down the halls in the barracks, we always have to be in uniform and have to walk at 120 steps a minute and walk along the walls. We cannot talk to anyone (upperclassmen) unless we are spoken to."

"During the summer training last year, we were ordered to cut each of our Cheerios into four pieces and that sure takes a long time to eat."

Defending the restrictions, academy spokesman Lt. Col. Jere K. Forbus replies, "We know the degree of socialization of the cadets is not like that of students at the University of Michigan.

"This is a military academy. It is analogous to going to a strict boarding school in Connecticut. You are not going to be like the kid who went to P.S. 89 down the block and got his nose knocked in a couple of times a week. We think the military training and discipline and academic training is the most important now. The other things, they (the cadets) can picknup quickly enough when they leave here."

Many are not content to wait that long.

The Academy with 4,246 cadets, 4,080 men and 166 women, has an attrition rate of 36 percent. Compared with attrition rates of 31 percent in 1945, 31.9 percent in 1955, and 36.6 percent in 1975, the rate has not really increased that much but the academy has not been able to reduce it.

Most leave in the first two years when they will not owe the Army anything. If they start the third year and leave, they must serve two years as an enlisted man.

Goodpaster and many cadets and faculty members feel the cadets who leave do so primarily because they do not ceally want a career in the Army.

Saunders and George Storck, class of '54, a civilian who recruits varsity athletes as assistant director of sports, and Col. James Anderson, director of of physicul education, feel cadets were more motivated in the past.

"I suspect that 40 to 50 percent of the cadets coming into the academy now feel they just want to 'take a crack at it'," said Saunders. "Don't come here if you don t really want to be an officer. We are not an altruistic organization. We are not here to give a free education."

Storck feels that "there was a commitment on our part to finish what we started. There were fewer distractions and alternatives and it was harder to quit and live with yourself.

"Nowadays, it's easy come, easy go. You don't like college, transfer, you don t like marriage, divorce. We have a bigger challenge now to inculcate the standards we (the academy) have."

Anderson thinks "that although the curriculum is more difficult today than it was when I was a cadet, we had more cadets leaving West Point for academic failure and fewer cadets leaving for motivation. That has reversed itself now."

"We do a better job in selecting cadets now academically," he said, "but it is very difficult to measure a person's motivation."

Drew Harrinvton, a 19-year-old sophomore from Moultrie, Ga., warns, "come here if you want to be an officer. If it's just the education, you are hurting yourself because there's a lot of other stuff. So if it's just for the education, go somewhere else."

Asked if there was racism at the academy, Harrington, who is black, replied, "there are the same problems here as in society. Racism exists here but no one has time for it. We're too busy."

There may not be time for drugs and alcohol either. There were eight cases of marijuana use between 1976 and 1977. Three cadets resigned, two received demerits and did area tours, one was expelled and two were suspended and brought back. There have been 59 cases of alcohol abuse since last May.

West Point, in its bulletin to prospective students says: "We will be frank. The nation has charged the Military Academy with educating and training professional officers for the Army. This is exactly what we do."

In a special brochure for women, the academy warns them of their first two months of summer training, known as Beast Barracks: "You will be assigned to and trained with units which include men and women... Much of the time you will be in fatigues and combat boots and feeling hot, sweaty, dirty and tired."

The biggest change recommended in the Department of Army study concerns the curriculum. It has been revamped and the revisions will start in the next academic year.

But the Point has made some of the other recommended changes already.

Cadets cannot drink within 20 kilometers (32 miles) of the military reservation, a rule which angers tavern owners in nearby Highland Falls, N.Y., but last October the Point began selling beer to cadets over 18 in Eisenhower Hall, the recreation center.

Movies are available on weekdays to upperclassmen and there are movies and rock concerts on weekends.

Seniors are now allowed to have cars on campus at the beginning of the semester in September instead of after Christmas.

A court suit filed by a cadet brought the abolition of compulsory chapel attendance several years ago; and after the 1976 engineering assignment cheating scandal which involved 152 cadets, more due process was instituted in the administration of the academy's honor code.

The academy superintendent now has the "discretion" to decide whether a cadet should be expelled for an offense.

The honor code itself, "A cadet will not lie, cheat, or steal, nor tolerate those who do," remains.

The practice of "silence," where no one would talk to a cadet cleared of an honor code violation except for official purposes, has been dropped.

Women are now placed in every cadet company and undergo the same academic and military training and practically the same physical development proggam as men.

More women will be joining the 596-member faculty, composed mostly of Army officers. More minorities are being sought for the Point. n

The academy says its history shows that West Pocnt with the motto "Duty, Honor, Country," can "change within tradition."

The changes West Point makes will probably never satisfy everyone, but if they did the Army would not be the Army and West Point would not be West Point.

Former Nightclub Entertainer To Sing, Speak At Revival

Gary Haines, a converted nightclub entertainer, will be at Lubbock's Monterey Church of the Nazarene at 4302 58th St., May 23-28, to sing and speak in a revival meeting.

Haines was a professional nightclub entertainer for 14 years, working in Detroit and other places in the Midwest, but he is now devoting full time to singing and speaking engagements.

GARY HAINES

He will sing and speak here at 7:30 p.m. nightly and at 10:40 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Haines said he was converted in April 1972, and felt that God wanted him to enter the ministry. He completed three years of ministerial studies at Nazarene Bible College in Colorado Springs, Colo., and since graduation, has been appearing at youth camps, district tours and church engagements.

Pastor Dr. Fred Fike said the public is invited.

'Outer Limits Expedition' Program Set July 8-29

"Outer Limits Expedition," an activity coordinated by the Broadway Church of Christ's Youthreach Program, is scheduled July 8-29.

This 21-day program emphasizes both physical and spiritual survival in wilderness stress situations.

During the three-week program, participants will backpack in the San Juan Wilderness area of the Rocky Mountains near Durango, Colo.

The youths will participate in mountaineering, rock climbing, basic survival techniques, and a "three-day solo."

"Outer Limits" is designed to place participants in positive, controlled stress situations and to help them evaluate and examine their purposes and goals in life, a spokesman explained.

Stu Childre will direct the "Outer Limits" Expedition. He has had experience as a Marine Ranger and Boy Scout leader. Childre has conducted the program the last four years.

Assisting as staff personnel will be Tim Talley, Broadway's Senior High Youthreach intern; Terry Peacock, employee of the Development office at Lubbock Christian College; Karen Kerr and Cindy Halstead.

Youths who are 16 or have completed the 10th, 11th and 12th grades are eligible to participate. There are a limited number of openings for the expeditions. Youths interested should contact in writing: Outer Limits Expedition, Broadway Church of Christ, 1924 Broadway, Lubbock, Tex., 79401.

Lubbock-Based Team Plans 11 Crusades In India Cities

A team from the Lubbock-based Outreach Evangelism, a worldwide evangelistic effort, has been invited to conduct 11 crusades in Andhra Pradesh's largest cities, including the capital city of Hyderabad, in India. Andhra is a state of India.

The invitation was extended by Dr. Yesupadam Bandela, president of the Gospel Association of India. A trip to the United States was made by Dr. Bandela to lay groundwork for the crusades.

The crusades will be scheduled in January and February of 1980.

Dr. Bandela said that while discussing the crusades with Indian church leaders, he was told again and again, "The time is ripe for this kind of thing in our country."

A youth conference during the crusades will bring more than 1,000 young persons from throughout India together with the Outreach Evangelism team for a week of teaching, inspiration and commitment.

Lutheran, Baptist, and the Church of South India (Anglican in origin) leaders in India are "enthusiastic," it was reported.

Dr. Bandela has predicted the Outreach team consistently will minister to crowds in excess of 10,000 persons, progressively during the campaigns.

"Outreach: India, is the greatest challenge our team has faced," declared Bristow. He gave an insight: "the magnitude of what we are facing is illustrated when one realizes that India is growing at a rate of 35,000 people every day, and only a minute fraction of 1 per cent of these men and women know anything of Jesus."

AWARD WINNER—Ralph E. Bailey, left, president of Continental Oil Co., recently presented the API Meritorious Safety Award to Robert Perry, a West Texas production department employe of Conoco. Perry, who lives in Hamlin and works as a senior maintenance man for the company's Midland division, was credited with saving the life of a utility company lineman who was knocked unconscious by contact with a power line while making a field installation.

Soviet Union Producing Fields Above Ratings To Meet Goals

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -The Soviet Union is forcing its largest western Siberian fields to produce above rated capacities in order to meet crude oil production targets, according to the Oil & Gas Journal.

In a special April message to oil workers in Tyumen and Tomsk provinces, President Leonid Brezhnev called on western Siberia to produce at least 5.08 million barrels a day during 1978. Earlier reports set this year's Siberian goal at slightly less than 5 million barrels a day.

The move puts more pressure on supergiant Samotlor field and other mature fields in the Middle Ob region, the Journal says.

Samotlor reached its projected peak production rate of 2.6 million barrels a day last year. But the U.S.S.R.'s Ministry of the Oil Industry has ordered an intensified development drilling program aimed at boosting the field's 1978 output to 2.8 million barrels a day.

Without this added flow from Samotlor, western Siberia and the Soviet Union as a whole probably would fall far short of 1978 crude oil production goals.

The country has had little success in generating major crude production gains in other frontier areas. And it is becoming increasingly expensive for the Soviets to stem production declines in older regions, such as the Ukraine, Azerbaijan, Turkmenistan and most Volga-Ural districts.

Also, the country failed last year to place on stream the planned number of medium-to-small western Siberian fields.

In hiking western Siberia's goals, the Soviets made no mention of increasing Russia's overall 1978 production objective—11.5 million barrels a day of crude oil and condensate. That indicates total output in other areas of the country is declining faster than had been expected.

Siberian officials, however, insist the shift in activity to Tyumen and Tomsk provinces is not an emergency measure to meet the 1978-80 production plans. They say the move actually is long overdue and is based on sound economics.

One official pointed out that the current Soviet Five-Year Plan calls for crude and condensate production in western Siberia to climb 103 percent to 6 million barrels a day in 1980 from 2.96 million barrels a day in 1975. Total output for other areas in the Soviet Union is expected to remain about flat at 6.8 million barrels a day in 1980, compared with 6.86 million barrels a day in 1975.

Soviet reports claim western Siberia's output ran well ahead of plan during the first quarter of 1978. The area's oil flow now is more than 4.8 million barrels a day, compared with an average 4.37 million barrels a day in 1977.

But some Russian officials are concerned about increasingly heavy dependence on a single area for attainment of national production goals. And the Soviets are having to invest heavily to keep Samotlor and other developed fields at higher than projected production levels.

They're rushing rigs and experienced crews into western Siberia from other oil producing regions mainly from Volga-Ural area fields but some from as far away as the Ukraine and Azerbaijan.

And logistics problems are mounting. Most new western Siberia production must come from small, remote fields, each requiring its own support facilities. Transportation and supply problems are becoming increasingly difficult and costly to solve.

Sunoco Energy Hikes Output At Coal Mine

DALLAS (Special) -Sunoco Energy Development Co. of Dallas has begun work to double coal production capacity at its Cordero Mine from 12 million to 24 million tons a year.

The surface mine, near Gillette, Wyo., which began coal shipments in 1976, will complete the expansion of production facilities in about two years at a cost of some $12 million, according to H. Robert Sharbaugh, chairman of Sun Co. Inc.

The company projects an additional capital outlay, eventually reaching some $30 million, for expansion-related mining equipment, such as electric shovels, trucks and earth-moving vehicles, as production is increased.

The expansion of the mine was begun, Sharbaugh said, following approvals granted by the U.S. Department of the Interior and the State of Wyoming.

New construction at the mine, under contract to Fluor Mining & Metals Inc. of San Mateo, Calif., consists of modification of crushing and conveying facilities and the building of a coal storage barn.

"We are preparing ourselves to respond aggressively to the growing demand for coal energy resources," said Sharbaugh. "We have a solid resource base on which to build and we intend to be prepared for marketing opportunities as they develop."

Sharbaugh noted that one-third of all domestic coal which can be mined by surface methods underlies the eastern Powder River Basin of Wyoming where the Cordero Mine is located. Coal reserves at Cordero amount to 519 million tons.

Current coal production at the mine is being sold for electric power generation to the City Public Service Board of San Antonio at the rate of 3 million tons a year. This is a 20-year contract.

A second 20-year contract will begin next year with the shipment of 3 million tons a year to Western Fuels Association Inc., a non-profit Wyoming corporation whose members are rural electric cooperatives and municipal systems.

Another contract, also for 20 years, at the rate of 2 million tons a year, will begin in 1980 to supply the Ottumwa Generating Station near Chillicothe, Iowa. This plant will be operated for a group of Iowa electric utilities by Iowa Southern Utilities Co., a partner.

Projected production life of the Cordero Mine lease (6,560 net acres) is about 30 years. Average coal seam thickness is 58 feet.

PROGRESS FOLLOWS THE POWER LINE

Industry needs a dependable supply of electricity for rural development, rural jobs, rural progress. Agriculture needs reliable rural electricity for the efficient production of food and fibre for everyone.
For 40 years, dependable power at a value price from the member-owned rural electric cooperative has promoted rural progress. Continuation of this efficient service is our promise for the future.

Company Tests Prolific Well In North Sea

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -Occidental Petroleum Corp. has announced a discovery of oil on Block 14-18 in the British sector of the North Sea, immediately west of the Claymore field.

The well, No. 14-18-1, was tested from upper Jurassic sands at the rate of 1,400 barrels per day of 27.1-gravity oil.

Drilled by a British rig, the well is the first to be completed under the fifth round licensing agreement in which the British National Oil Corp. holds a 51 per cent interest.

The discovery well is located eight miles west of the Occidental group's Claymore field production platform and 28 miles west of the group's Piper field platform which is located in Block 15-17. A 135-mile pipeline links the Piper and Claymore fields to a terminal in the Orkney Islands. Occidental has applied to the government for permission to drill a second well on Block 14-18.

Other interest holders include: Getty Oil Co.; Allied Chemical Corp; and Thomson Scottish Petroleum Ltd.

Canadian Venture Yields Discovery

NEW YORK (Special) -Wilshire Oil Co. of Texas has announced the successful completion of a significant oil discovery in the Rainbow South area of Alberta, Canada.

The oil discovery, in which Wilshire has a 10 percent interest, contains over 300 net feet of productive sands.

The well is on a block of approximately 2,000 acres. An offset well will immediately be started west of the discovery and further development of the field, including the completion of several wells as multiple producers is expected during this year.

The three productive zones, Keg River reef, Muskeg, and Sulphur Point, are between 6,000 and 6,700 feet, and indicate an open flow capacity of 10,800 barrels of 42-gravity oil per day.

Siggi B. Wilzig, chairman of Wilshire, said, "This oil discovery, together with the company's recent offshore gas discovery, will result in doubling the company's entire oil and gas reserves.

Project Completed In Brae Reservoir

FINDLAY, Ohio (Special) -Pan Ocean Oil Corp. has announced it has completed testing Brae field well No. 16-7A-12 in the U.K. North Sea.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 13,470 feet by the rig Venture II and was tested at a rate of 919 barrels of oil per day with an API gravity of 37 degrees. The gas-oil ratio was 1,346 cubic feet per barrel.

The Venture II drilling rig will move to a new location approximately 1.2 miles northeast of the No. 16-7A-8 well to continue the evaluation of the Brae field.

Pan Ocean Oil Corp., a subsidiary of Marathon Oil Co., is operator in the Brae field for a group of companies which includes: Ashland Oil Ltd., BNOC Ltd., Bow Valley Exploration Ltd., Canadian Ashland Oil Ltd., LL&E Ltd., Saga Petroleum A-S & Co., Siebens Oil & Gas Ltd., and Sunningdale Oils Ltd.

THE ROUSTABOUT

BY RAY WESTBROOK

THE DOLLAR'S DECLINE is more a product of monetary policy than a result of high import costs, according to Citibank economists of New York.

In the institution's monthly economic letter, the economists point out that the dollar's slide has not been "oil-lubricated," as has been generally supposed.

Actually, U.S. imports of OPEC oil have been self-financing, according to Commerce Department findings. The agency reports that from 1974 through 1977, cumulative capital inflows from OPEC countries into the U.S. totaled $38 billion, more than offsetting the period's deficit of $36 billion on transactions in goods and services with those countries.

For this reason, Citibank says, it would be a mistake for the Carter Administration to impose a tariff or quota on oil imports as a way to stop the dollar's decline in world currency trading.

"A sounder diagnosis of the dollar's weakness would point to monetary policies—more specifically, the relatively expansionary trend of U.S. monetary policy through most of 1977 compared with concurrent trends in other leading countries such as Germany and Japan," Citibank said.

Even if the United States became a net exporter of oil, as Norway is today, the dollar would probably be weak, just as Norway's krone is—provided the United States, like Norway, were to cling to a monetary policy that was persistently more expansionary than other countries, the economists believe.

"In short, the dollar's gyrations are hardly relevant to the claim that it's urgent to rein in U.S. oil imports. But in any event, the dollar-oil connection was a Johnny-come-lately to the energy debate. The essential sales pitch for urgent action was, and still is, built on predictions of a near-term, worldwide energy shortage," the bank said in its newsletter.

IDEALLY, THE UNITED STATES should curb its energy appetite by decontrolling wellhead prices, thus encouraging discovery and production of more domestic oil and gas and reducing dependence on imports, according to the Citibank economists.

While they concede such a course may be "politically impossible," the next best thing would be to allow more time for the adjustive process that has been working quietly but effectively to stabilize the world energy situation since the OPEC crisis of 1973-74.

Meanwhile, Citibank warns, "This process should be spared the spasm of intervention by Presidential decree on U.S. oil imports."

The economists point out, "After all, the world will notice if the President marks up the price that the U.S. market pays for OPEC oil. And OPEC's price hawks just might decide that, if anyone is going to raise the price of their oil, it might as well be them."

A CASE PENDING before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) may establish ground rules for determining how the nation's dwindling reserves of natural gas are carved up among competing interest groups, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

General Motors and a coalition of home builders currently are contending for remaining low-priced natural gas reserves in a five-state area of the Midwest.

The basic issue before FERC and the cause of the skirmish between GM and the builders is a proposed natural gas curtailment plan that would guarantee future natural gas service for two GM auto plants in the Kansas City area while home builders would find it necessary to utilize electricity or fuel oil for space heating.

John C. McKay, president of the Wichita Area Builders Association, said, "This case is unique—possibly the first of its kind."

THE 1978 PRESIDENT of the Home Builders Association of Greater Kansas City, James Campbell, says that about 11,000 new homes were started in the Kansas City metropolitan area last year.

"Home buyers in the lower income brackets would be the hardest hit if gas hookups were stopped," he said. "They can't afford the extra expense of a heat pump, the most practical alternative to natural gas."

An electric heat pump, which also works as an air conditioner, costs about twice as much to install as a heating system using natural gas, according to Campbell.

The homebuilders think the chances of a settlement or compromise are small. However, the National Association of Home Builders reports that GM officials have agreed to work with the organization's Research Foundation in Washington to examine ways to lessen the impact that a gas moratorium would have on the home building industry in the event such a moratorium is imposed.

Firm Promotes Former City Men To Posts

Amoco Production Co. has announced the promotion of two former Lubbock men, and the appointment of a new superintendent of the firm's Slaughter Area at Brownfield.

Ernest R. Sneed has been named drilling coordination supervisor in the Houston Division office. Prior to the promotion, he was senior drilling foreman in the firm's Corpus Christi office.

A native of Cisco, Sneed is a 1958 petroleum engineering graduate of Texas Tech University. Joining the company's former Sweetwater office after graduation, Sneed has since held various engineering and administrative assignments in Texas.

He is married to the former Nelda K. Rogers of Lubbock. They are the parents of four children.

Richard C. Heiser has been promoted to research associate in the geophysical division of the research department of Amoco.

A native of Millersview, Heiser received bachelors and masters degrees in mathematics from Texas Tech University, and joined Amoco in 1965 as a geophysicist in the Lubbock office. After less than a year he was promoted to the Fort Worth division office, and in 1970 moved to the research center in Tulsa as a research scientist. He has published technical papers in his field of interpretive research.

Heiser is a member of the Society of Exploration Geophysicists and the Geophysical Society of Tulsa. He is married to the former Sandra J. Maggio of Peoria, Ill., and they have one son. He is active in the scouting program and other youth development activities.

Richard E. Ogden has been appointed superintendent of the Slaughter area in Brownfield. Ogden replaces E. D. Newman who has been transferred to the Houston division office.

A native of Eldorado, Ark., Ogden graduated from the University of Texas with a chemical engineering degree in 1968, and joined Amoco in the Andrews area office. He was promoted to the Houston division office in 1969, research engineer in Tulsa, Okla., in 1972, area engineer in the Hastings area office in 1973, Chicago general office in 1974, and Houston Division engineering supervisor in 1976.

Ogden is married to the former Judy Follis of Longview. They have three children.

Dry Spring Hurts Crop Prospects

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A drier-than-normal spring so far is causing concern among agricultural producers over much of Texas. Although a few sections have good moisture for young crops, pastures and ranges, most of the state needs a good, soaking rain.

Young crops in South and Southeast Texas are suffering from lack of moisture, while many farmers in western areas need planting moisture, noted Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dryland farmers in some of the drought-plagued areas of Southwest Texas have not yet planted spring crops.

The lack of spring moisture is also having an adverse effect on the livestock picture in Texas. Grazing is short in most areas and stock water is low.

Many herds have been liquidated or heavily culled. Livestock in the Trans-Pecos and Far West Texas area also is suffering because of poor grazing conditions, and culling has been heavy.

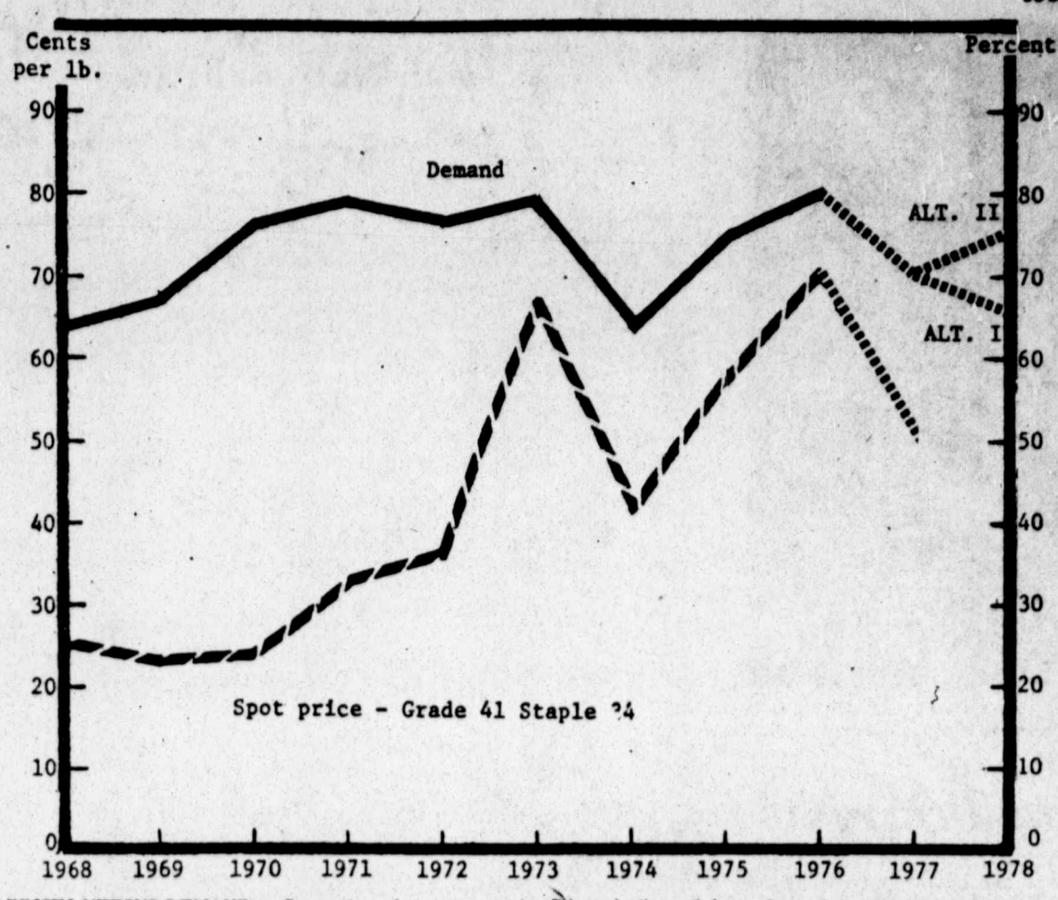
Lack of spring rains also has slowed the growth of hay crops, and if livestock producers need anything this year, it's a good supply of hay. Some first cuttings are underway over East Texas, and some oats have been baled for hay because of poor grain prospects, Pfannstiel said.

Reports from district extension agents showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture continues short, with wheat in poor condition. Much of the dryland wheat has been grazed out. Some cotton and sorghum planting is in progress. Corn is emerging slowly due to recent cool weather. Potatoes, onions and sugar beets are making good progress. Some hay is being harvested. Cattle markets continue strong.

SOUTH PLAINS: Planting of cotton and sorghum is active in irrigated areas, but some dryland farmers are waiting for rain. Corn, sugar beets, potatoes and onions are making good progress. Irrigated wheat continues to look good but thata on dryland is in good shape. Forage conditions are generally short.

ROLLING PLAINS: Recent rains helped to green up pastures and allowed some farmers to start planting cotton and sorghum. However, additional moisture is needed for spring planting to get underway full scale. A lot of wheat and oats are being cut and baled for hay due to poor grain prospects.



PRICES VERSUS DEMAND — Comparisons between annual average prices for grade 41 staple 34 (strict low middling one and one-sixteenth inch) cotton and demand (disappearance as a percent of supply) are plotted on this USDA graph for the 1968-76 crop years. Estimates of demand and the average price through April 30, 1978, are shown for crop year 1977 and USDA projections of demand are shown for 1978, based on both favorable (Alt. I) and unfavorable (Alt. II) production conditions worldwide. From 1968 through 1976, the two trend lines moved in the same general direction, indicating a close correlation between prices and demand.

Tips Aired On Damaged Crops

Foul weather with hail often runs rampant over Texas during the spring, causing widespread crop damage. This puts many farmers in a quandary about what to do with their damaged crops — leave them or replant?

"When assessing damage to corn and sorghum, there are a number of factors for producers to consider," points out Dr. John Bremer, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station.

"However, probably of most importance is the condition of the growing tips of damaged plants."

Other factors in assessing crop damage include stand reduction, leaf loss, weed and insect control, and the calander date. Also, local growing conditions and alternative crops enter into the final decision-making, notes the agronomist.

"As far as corn is concerned, producers must first determine the number and distribution of plants remaining alive," advises Bremer. "To do this, they must check the growing point closely for damage."

The growing point remains below the ground for two to three weeks after the plant emerges. Since it is in the center of the stalk, it has some protection from injury.

Bremer said if the growing point is not damaged (it is white and firm when healthy), corn will recover and perform better than when replanted.

The agronomist suggests that producers also check corn plants to determine if they are "buggy whipped," or the leaves bound in the whorl. These plants may recover but should not be considered as living when making the plant count.

"As with corn, sorghum should be checked for damage to the growing tip," notes Bremer. "If the tip is healthy, the crop will yield more than if replanted or shredded for a second crop."

If the decision is made to shred, cut the sorghum at about the 4-inch level, he advises. This produces tillers at ground level which result in stronger stalks and more uniform heading than a higher shredding."

The agronomist adds that sorghum shredded in the bloom stage will require another 30 to 60 days before reaching bloom again.

"Even with heavy hail damage, all is not lost as far as sorghum is concerned," emphasizes Bremer. "Sorghum has the ability to compensate for stand losses so that a 50 percent stand reduction does not equal a 50 percent yield loss.

"With an even distribution, the remaining plants will make more grain per head," he says. "This means that usually more than 50 percent of the stand must be lost before replanting becomes economical."

When assessing hail-damaged corn and sorghum, producers need to take a close look at leaf damage once the decision is made to leave the crop, adds the agronomist. Leaf loss will determine expected reductions in grain yield.

The big factor is the crop's stage of growth. Small plants can lose all their leaves without affecting grain yields. But the further along the crop is when damage occurs, the more severely grain yields will suffer.

"If grass is a problem in corn and sorghum that has suffered hail damage, then producers face another decision," points out Bremer. "Since grasses cannot be controlled with postemergence herbicides, replanting may be advisable even though the crop would probably recover.

"If an alternative crop is chosen, producers must consider any carryover from previously applied herbicides," he says.

When replanting, the agronomist advises producers to choose early or medium maturity hybrids in an attempt to avoid insect and disease problems along with poor soil moisture and high soil temperature late in the growing season. These factors all limit late and sorghum yields.

Council Sets Farm Survey

What do and should the American people know about agriculture today?

The Agriculture Council of America (ACA) will explore this question by examining what the farm community feels are the essential facts of agriculture.

Farmers and agribusinessmen may express their views by calling the ACA's toll-free number (1-800-368-8050) on Wednesday between noon and 4 p.m. EDT.

K. B. Parish of Springlake is an ACA director.

Information gathered over the "Farm Line" will be used in a new communications effort the ACA is planning concerning the current economic situation in agriculture.

Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, and Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., a senior member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, will head a panel of experts.

County Agent's Report

By KEN COOK
Lubbock County Agent

WHETHER A HOME GARDNER IS GROWING peaches, plums, apples, grapes or pecans, he should pay close attention to disease prevention the next several months.

The key to a good disease control program in fruits and nuts is "prevention," not control. To control a disease menas that you allow it to become established and then start a program to stop that disease.

For the most part, this is not possible. In the case of pecan scab, black rot of grape, fruit rot of apples, fire blight of pears, peach scab and bacterial leafspot, the crop is lost if one waits until symptoms are visible.

Three critical points in a disease outbreak are the pressure of a disease causing organism (fungus, bacteria, virus and nematodes), susceptible varieties and the weather.

DISEASE-CAUSING ORGANISMS CAN BE eliminated as much as possible by sanitation; that is, removing any dead twigs or fruit from last year's crop and as it occurs this year. This will help for most diseases, but remember that many disease-causing organisms are windblown and trees can be recontaminated from nearby trees.

Use of disease resistant varieties has always been a must in a good disease control program. The problem lies in the large number of plant diseased which must be prevented.

Most disease-causing organisms require periods of rainfall or high humidity (90 percent of above) for development. Home gardeners should be award of the importance of weather and adopt programs to meet these conditions.

For instance, during periods of intermittent rainfall, the interval between sprays may need to be shortened from 14 days to 10 or possibly 7 days on a disease susceptible varieties. Most fungicides are effective as "preventing agents" for only 7-10 days. There are a few exceptions, such as Benomyl, which is effective for 14 days and under some conditions even longer.

SPRAY PROGRAMS ON FRUIT AND PECANS should begin early (peaches--pink bud, plums--full bloom, grape--when new runners are three inches long, apples--white tip, and pecans--bud break). On most crops except pecans, continue spraying on a two-week schedule until harvest time.

On pecans, follow a two-to-three-week schedule through mid-June and then lengthen the interval between sprays based on weather conditions.

The fungicides Benomyl, Captan, Maneb and sulfur can be used on one or more of the fruit and nut plants grown in the home garden. Check the label closely for use on a particular plant and application instructions.

Disaese prevention is the secret to a successful home fruit planting. To do an adequate job of preventing diseases, use all possible steps to stop the disease at the three critical steps--presence of organisms, susceptible varieties and environment.

Rise In Farmland Value Tops Return On Stocks

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Farmland is said to be "a good investment," at least from the Federal Reserve Bank's point of view.

According ot Dallas economist Alan M. Young, writing in the bank's monthly publication, "Voice," farmland in Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas now is selling for 6.9, 5.4, 7.7 and 6.7 times more, respectively, than in 1949.

The national average increase in farmland over the last 29 years has been seven times the selling price in 1949, the report notes.

"These large price increases have made farmland a good investment during these years," Young says.

Since 1971, returns to farmland --the rise in value plus income --have averaged about 19 percent each year in the United States, while comparable rates of return on common stocks and bonds have averaged about 5 and 8 percent, respectively.

This 19 percent return which Young quotes on farmland consists of an estimated four percent current income increases and about 15 percent in price increases.

In Texas, and elsewhere in the Southwest, farmland prices have not increased as much as the national average.

Since 1971, average land price increases for Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas have been 9.0, 9.7, 13.0 and 10.7 percent, respectively.

Young also points out in his research that:

"Prospects for farmland returns for the next two or three years are much less spectacular than the increases in recent years."

He bases this projection on apparent price constraints on five major crops -- corn, wheat, grain sorghum, cotton and soybeans --where production costs are projected to rise steadily.

U. S. farmland prices will increase in average of 5 to 6 percent per year in the foreseeable future, Young predicts.

The rationale used in the report to account for the increase in farmland prices since 1949 include inflation, population growth and technology.

ABOUT 1 MILLION BALES (of 480 pounds net) in outstanding U. S. cotton export sales this season probably will be carried into the new marketing year beginning Aug. 1, leaving exports this season of about 5.5 million bales.

In a summary of its cotton and wool situation report, scheduled for release May 26, the USDA says March shipments were 742,000 bales, the highest monthly total in four years.

Outstanding sales as of May 7 totaled 2,422,700 running bales. These plus shipments of 3,860,900 bales put the 1977-78 export commitment at 6,283,800 running bales.

COTTON PRICES HAVE RISEN in recent weeks and the spot market average for the base quality of strict low middling 1 1/16th last Wednesday was 59.28 cents per pound.

This was the highest price so far this season, was up 20 percent from the season low of 47.02 cents on Dec. 12, and was up 10 percent from the early part of this marketing year.

New-crop December futures topped 65 cents per pound last week, reflecting 1978 production uncertainties.

World cotton output in the 1978-79 season is expected to total between 59 million and 65 million bales, USDA says, depending upon weather, while world consumption is expected to increase slightly from the 61.4 million bales estimated for the current season.

World production this season is forecast at 64 million bales, about 2.5 million above expected consumption, which will result in a buildup of world stocks for the first time in three years, Most of the expected increase in stocks will be in the United States.

U. S. FARMERS IN EARLY APRIL indicated they planned to plant 12.9 million acres of cotton, but actual acreages are expected to be below those indications.

The April survey was taken before farmers had a chance to assess the paid land diversion program for cotton and feed grains.

Also, while moisture supplies are greatly improved from last year in California, dryland fields on the Texas High Plains urgently need moisture.

And wet, cool weather has delayed cotton planting and damaged production prospects in the Mid-South and Southeast.

Sausage Stands Feed German Tourists

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany is feeding hordes of Socialist tourists with new sausage stands but still has restaurant problems.

East Berlin is waiting for its first Chinese restaurant and there are problems on the discotheque front, according to the latest reports on East German gastronomy and nightlife.

"Young people's desire to dance is still growing so fast that presently nowhere near all their wishes can be met," an East Berlin newspaper says.

East Germany now has 90,000 "dance facilities," up from 60,000 in 1973, ranging from youth centers to nightclubs and "dance bars." The last are so heavily in demand that reservations are a must and lines of young people form outside their doors.

East German party and government leader Erich Honecker has noted the shortage "critically," the Berliner Zeitung said, and top priority has been given this year to building more such facilities and improving the ones already around.

Snack bars were last year's priority project, a program aimed at taking pressure off an overloaded restaurant system.

Seven million of East Germany's 17 million citizens are said to get a restaurant meal every workday, a figure which apparently includes some 8,000 factory and office eateries. The country's 25,000 restaurants have 1.5 million seats.

The shortage means more reservations, more lines, and service so erratic that East Berlin veterans allow an hour and a half for the quickest restaurant lunch. The snack bar boom, though, is linked to tourists.

"The mass tourism that has built up in recent years simply can't be handled with traditional restaurants," says the Zeitung's chief reporter, Dr. Karl-Heinz Gerstner.

East Germany, a country the size of the American state of Ohio, isn't swamped with Western tourists. But enough busloads of East Bloc tourists flocked to its cities for the country to have more foreign visitors last year than inhabitants.

Snack bars were one answer to the problem, with tourists and natives lining up for wursts, beer, meatloaf and ice cream.

A sausage on a thin piece of cardboard, with a slice of bread and a dab of mustard, goes for 95 pfennigs (about 47 cents at official rates) at state snack stands. A similar wurst, minus the cardboard, goes for 1.65 marks (about 83 cents) in West Germany.

"A large number of people can be provided with food and drink with relatively little material and personnel," Gerstner says.

Showpieces among postwar restaurants in East Germany are establishments serving dishes of other Socialist countries and featuring names like the Moscow, the Budapest, the Warsaw and the Sofia.

But decor and mood aren't as exotic as the menus, some East Germans complain. Many of the restaurants are housed in new buildings and tend to look almost identical from the outside and only vaguely foreign on the inside.

East Berlin has 10 of East Germany's 23 "nationality restaurants," offering Hungarian, Polish, Romanian, Bulgarian, Yugoslavian, Czech, Cuban and various sorts of Russian fare.

"One still hears reports," Gerstner says, "that these nationality restaurants still don't adequately express the national character of the country of whose cooking it is supposed to remind us."

East Germany's politics are tied more closely to Moscow than Peking, but even its active involvement with Vietnam and other Asian countries has yet to be reflected in the East Berlin restaurants.

"It is also regretted," Gerstner said, "that we in Berlin still have no restaurants with Asiatic food."

Female New ROTC Cadet Commander

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Carleta Asbury, who wanted to sign up for a class in military training when she was a high school freshman, is the first woman in the 21-year history of the Southern Illinois University Air Force ROTC unit to serve as cadet commander.

She expects to graduate and be commissioned next year as an Air Force officer. She plans a service career. Her goal is the rank of general.

Ruhr Has New Image As Vacation Center

DORTMUND, West Germany (UPI) — For decades, the Ruhr has been known as Germany's industrial heartland and the home of the Krupp empire that produced the guns and armor for the Kaiser and Adolf Hitler.

But in recent years West Germany's largest industrial region also has become a recreation center. A Ruhr tour is offered twice a month, including visits to a steel mill and leisure parks. A two-night stay and the Ruhr tour are offered for about $80.

your National Parks Right Around Home

by Ben Moffett

LAST YEAR there were more than two million visitors to Yellowstone National Park.

In the year 1807 there was but one visitor to that wild, beautiful expanse in Wyoming—John Colter.

Yet if Colter were to return to Yellowstone today he would find more than 90 percent of its two million acres looking just as it did in 1807. The National Park Service is charged by Congress with preserving the most breathtaking spots in America, while at the same time providing citizens the opportunity to enjoy them.

It's a unique American idea—setting aside the wonders of a great land for all of the people to enjoy for all the generations to come.

But the National Park Service has found it is not always easy to "preserve" something that is loved so dearly as the nearly 300 areas of the National Park System, especially from Memorial Day to Labor Day when America's love affair with its parks is at a peak.

With Memorial Day at hand, National Park Service regional director John Cook offers a suggestion that will help you have a more enjoyable park vacation while at the same time helping the Park Service in its efforts to keep the parks unimpaired for your children's children.

COOK'S ADVICE: Spend some time talking to park interpreters through campfire talks, guided tours, lectures or casual conversation while in the park.

"Most visitors are from the city and aren't really on speaking terms with Mother Nature anymore," said Cook. "But perhaps the thing the NPS does best is act as an interpreter for Mother Nature.

"In the flickering light of an evening campfire a ranger can help you understand the marvelous and continuous cycle of nature that controls all our lives.

"In the crashing ocean surf at Padre Island National Seashore, a park naturalist can show you a hundred living things were it appears none can survive."

There are smaller parks, too. Cook noted, where the works of man are interpreted. The NPS manages the boyhood homes of American presidents from George Washington to Lyndon Johnson as well as the sites of the earliest European settlements in this land and the massive ruins of Indian civilizations that flourished on this continent before Columbus.

Cook believes that the park visitor who soaks in the interpretive messages will not only have a more enjoyable experience but will be in better tune with the purpose of the parks.

"And visitors that are tuned in won't love the parks to death," Cook said. "Instead they'll love them to better health and help protect them for future generations."

IF YOU YOU ARE planning to visit a National Park Service area on your vacation, write the agency at P.O. Box 728, Room P-4, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501. You'll be sent a free brochure that lists NPS areas near your home and charts facilities and services available at each.

Humble Scarecrow Now Endangered Species In East

BOSTON (UPC) — They have become an endangered species — a part of our heritage that over the years has slowly disappeared from the farms and gardens along the backroads of New England's towns and villages.

They are victims of modern times, a voiceless minority harking back to a less sophisticated age when they played a vital role in the life of the American farmer.

Scarecrows. There just are not many left cn New England anymore. n

In towns where scarecrows once stood sentinel in every cornfield and vegetable patch, today only a handful remain. Now each spring, fewer and fewer scacecrows can be seen.

They are a controversial character — praised by some, laughed at by others, but always humble in appearance as they stand uncomfortably perched in the middle of a field under a hot sun, doing a chore no ordinary farmhand would welcome.

"I can't deny that they are a vanishing breed. I can remember that it wasn't long ago, when it seemed that just about every other field in town had a scacecrow. I guess it was just part of the way things used to be around here in the old days," said Mrs. Hollis Magoon of Fremont, N.H.

The Mugoon farm, off Rte. 111, which passes through a small town of less than 1,000 inhabitants, is one of the few farms in the area which still "employs" a scarecrow to stand guard over the crops.

"I really can't understand why they are disappearing," says Irving Potter, a farmer in Berwick, Maine. "I've always used one and I can say truthfully they've always done the job for me. Sure, sometimes you get birds like the red-wing blackbird, who won't pay as much attention to the scarecrows. But well, they don't always pay attention to me.

"I think one of the reasons people have gotten away from scarecrows is that they have found that most birds are smarter than you think and it won't take them long to get used to the scarecrow," said Professor Robert Young of the University of Massachuuetts College of Food and Natural Resources.

"We've found that how you scare a bird depends on the bird and the type of crop. There are a lot of different methods used. For example, some birds would be frightened by explosives while others would practically sit on a cannon before they'd move. So sometimes you really can't tell what will work."

But Thomas Lane, who works a small field across from his uncle's farm on Rte. 4 in Billerica, Mass., says the scarecrow is as good a method as any.

"When those crows go after the crop, you've got to do whatever has to be done. We tried using chemicals and soaking the seeds in oil, but we still couldn't keep the birds away. You might not believe it, but we haven't had any problems since the scarecrow took over."

Like so much American folklore, the scarecrow's history is intertwined with fact and legend.

The practice was common in England and other European countries before the time of the colonists. In fact, the scarecrow is referred to in the pages of William Shakespeare's Henry the IV, which dates back sometime around the 16th century.

The actual origin of the scarecrow is believed to have come down through the ages from the time of early Greek mythology, when the scarecrow was worshipped as the God of the field and protector of crops.

Historians trace the scarecrow back to well before the time of Christ, where in the Greek village of Lampsacus, Mysia, the scarecrow was believed to have had divine qualities because of its ability to keep birds and other creatures away from the crops.

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

THE LAST U.S. half-cents were issued back in 1857. But you can enjoy putting together a set of foreign coins equivalent to our half-cent.

Such coins would hold the same relative value—they'd be one two-hundreth of the basic monetary unit.

England counts a hundred "new" pence in its pound. The smallest British coin is the bronze half penny. It has a portrait of Elizabeth II on one side and a small crown on the other.

Chile's 1960 currency revaluation produced an aluminum half-centesimo larger than our quarter. This beautiful coin pictures a flying condor on one side.

Ghana's bronze half-pesawa coin is another interesting item. It features two native drums on one side and a five-pointed star on the other.

Ireland's half new penny is a pleasant addition to our collection. One side features the harp that's on almost every Irish coin.

Lebanon used to have a half piastre piece. A combination of Arabic and French lettering, plus dates in both real Arabic and western numerals, make these little coins quite interesting and attractive.

Nigeria issued a bronze half-kobo in 1973, with a coat-of-arms on one side, the value and a floral design on the other.

Nicaragua's half-centavo was last issued in 1937. This coin's generally well-balanced appearance makes it worth having. The monetary unit was the cordoba at that time; one side of our coin is marked "Medio Centavo de Cordoba" in a thin wreath.

Rhodesia's half-cent, whatever our view of that country's policies, also belongs in our collection. The balance of the large ½, small "c," inscription, and partial wreath makes for a very nice reverse design.

Russia had half-kopeck coins at least as early as 1730. These copper pieces show a beautiful variety of two-headed eagles, tsars' initials, and exotic-looking inscriptions. These coins, each a two-hundredth part of the ruble, are among the best of the world's "half-cents."

South Africa, with 100 cents in its rand, has issued large brass and smaller half-cents. The large coins of 1961-64 are interesting because of both an almost full-face portrait and the use of both English and Afrikaans legends.

A graceful Liberty head faces right on the half-centavo that Venezuela issued in 1843 and 1852. The reverse has the value and date within a wreath.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Museum of Modern Art is showing one of the most unusual exhibitions of American photography ever — Jerry Dantzic's six-foot long panoramic color photographs of the American landscape taken with the Cirkut camera.

The Cirkut was designed at the turn of the century but rarely used and never successfully used with color film. Dantzic developed a highly sophisticated technique of photographing with the Cirkut and received a Guggenheim Fellowship to continue his work, which he estimates has cost him $100,000 in personal funds.

The camera can take a continuous 360 degree picture while being revolved by a motor at a predetermined speed. The 12 photos in the exhibiton cover from 210 to 360 degrees of subject matter, including New York City with the Brooklyn Bridge, the Teton Mountains and Jenny Lake in Lyoming, Monument Valley in Arizona, and the Atlantic City, N. J., boardwalk.

The show opened at MOMA on May 9 and will be on view there through July 30 before circulating to other American museums under the sponsorship of Springs Mills Co. and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Taiwan Highway Has Top Scenery

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — The East-West Cross Island Highway which runs across the central part of Taiwan offers breathtaking experiences for tourists.

The highway winds its sinuous way from Taroko Gorge in the east to Tungshih, a gateway to the lush green plains of the west coast.

The 12-mile stretch through the marble mountains of Taroko Gorge is the most popular section. There are 38 tunnels before reaching Tien Hsiang, a scenic site in a verdant valley 1,476 feet above sea level at the western end of the gorge.

Days Of Big Spenders Recalled

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — When Philip Sassoon missed a train he ordered the stationmaster: "Bring me another." Lord Berners had a piano built into his Rolls-Royce.

E.T. Stotesbury's wedding present to his wife was $3 million in cash and almost as much in pearls.

All of history, according to Alan Jenkins, is crammed with people who had so much money they grew desperate inventing new ways to throw it away.

Jenkins, a British journalist, has just produced an intriguing book about the world's most profligate big spenders. He calls it "The Rich Rich," and states his purpose in its opening lines:

"Most books about very rich people tell you how they made their money. This one will concentrate on how they spent it."

And how they spent it! Not in your wildest dreams, according to his 190 pages of anecdotes, could you imagine a way to fling money around which someone hasn't tried, in spades.

There was the third Marquess of Hertford, for instance. He owned a huge estate in Wales which he never saw, much less visited. But an elaborate dinner for 12 people was cooked there every night in case he decided to drop in. "The butler eats it," Hertford said.

There was the sixth Duke of Devonshire, who demolished an entire village because it spoiled one view from his house. He built another village for the inhabitants.

Or Chicago hotel tycoon Potter Palmer, who loaded so many diamonds onto his wife that she literally teetered. "There she stands," Palmer loved to declaim, "a half a million on her back."

One problem with Palmer's story, as with many other delightful ones Jenkins tetts, is that inflation has eroded what were once enormous sums.

We have grown so used to millions and billions that it seems a small thing to learn that Calouste Gulbenkian spent $2.5 million in the 1930s on a garden.

But not such a small thing, perhaps, when Jenkins says Gulbenkian — who kept 61 gardeners working on it full time — created the garden only so he could visit it twice a year to work. He stayed at a nearby hotel — the garden had no house — and he insisted, "The most precious thing money can buy is privacy."

Nor has inflation dimmed the tale of James Gordon Bennett, the New York newspaper tycoon, who was refused his favorite table in a Monte Carlo restaurant one night. Jenkins says the enraged Bennett bought the restaurant on the spot, and after his meal gave it to a waiter.

Jenkins chronicles all forms of spending, but only approves of the frivolous kind.

"A true big spender is someone who spends unwisely but enjoys it," he writes. "The element of pleasure is a must."

For this reason, "Not many gamblers qualify as true spenders."

Pinball Machine Craze Of '30s Makes Comeback

CHICAGO (UPI) — The revival of the pinball craze of the 1930s has attracted more than 20 million players of all ages, according to the pinball industry which is busily installing the flipper-type machines in better class restaurants and bars, shopping malls, laudromats, and even homes.

For the ordinary flippers who would like to become wizards at the game, pinball machine designer Anton Kraemer of Williams Electronics, Inc., a top manufacturer, has some sage advice. Kraemer plays pinball about 100 times daily in the course ot test-checking new machines. He says:

— Read the instruction card. It explains which targets give bonus points or extra balls and if they have to be made in sequence, so that you will know where to aim to make your ball count.

— Nudge gently. Nudging is not cheating, nor is kicking, hitting or lifting, but if you hit too hard you activate the "Tilt" signal, automatically canceling the score for that ball's play.

— Work the flippers individually. Beginning players see the ball moving toward the outhold and panic, pressing both flipper buttons at the same time in hope that one will hit the ball. Instead, the ball usually goes between them and out of play.

The technique to avoid this is using flippers in quick succession to deflect the ball from one to the other, hold it back until it's correctly aimed, or whack it solidly to the opposite side of the playfield.

— Keep your eye on the ball. Live any sport where the object is a fast-moving ball, concentrate completely on the game. Talk with friends and onlookers after the game.

— Concentrate on one game until you master it. Playfields vary, so play each game enough to work out a winning strategy.

Observance Set For 62 Who Have Scaled Mt. Everest

By BHOLA RANA

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Twenty-five years ago, when lanky New Zealand beekeeper Sir Edmund Hillary climbed Mt. Everest, the conquest of the world's highest peak was an epic feat that stirred the world.

"We have knocked the bastard," he said to Tenzing Norkay, his Sherpa guide, shortly after they reached the summit on May 29, 1953.

They were the first men to stand atop the 29,028-foot Himalayan peak. For Hillary, it was meant to commemorate the coronation of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II.

All told there have been 62 known Everest summiteers. All have been invited by the Nepalese government to attend a week of celebrations, featuring symposiums and exhibitions, beginning May 29.

Americans first scaled Everest in the spring of 1963, and the feat was repeated two years ago to honor the U.S. Bicentennial. At least six of the Americans who have climbed Everest are expected here for the 25th anniversary celebrations.

Everest is named for Sir George Everest, the British Surveyor General of India who discovered it in 1855. Until then, Mt. Kanchenjunga on the Nepal-Sikkim border was considered the world's highest peak.

In 1921 a British team made the first real reconnaissance of Everest, from the north side in Tibet. In 1924 British climbers George Mallory and Andrew Irving were killed not far from the summit.

After the end of World War II and the emergence of Nepal from two centuries of virtual isolation, the landlocked country was opened to foreigners.

In 1950 Americans Charles Houston and Bill Tilman brought news to the outside world after an assault on Everest that the treacherous Khumbu Icefall, the only approach from the Nepalese side, was not negotiable and that chances of ascent from the south were negligible.

Other reconnaissance attempts followed but no one succeeded until Hillary and Tenzing.

Teams which followed over the years included, besides the British and Americams, expeditions from China, Japan, South Korea, India, Switzerland and Austria. All were national teams. Fifteen expeditions in all have reached the Everest summit.

The American conquest in 1963 was one of the more notable efforts in the struggle between man and mountain. Besides putting six climbers atop Everest in three separate assaults, Dr. Willy Unseold and Tom Hornbein climbed it for the first, and since unrepeated, time through the west ridge. They then made a traverse, also the only recorded feat, by coming down the southeast ridge.

The latter was the route Hillary and Tenzing had taken to the summit.

Tenzing's nephew, Nowang Gombu, is the only man to have climbed Everest twice, once with Americans and again with the Indian team.

Japan is the only nation to make three successful attempts on Everest and in 1975 put the first woman, housewife Mrs. Junko Tabei, on the peak. The only other woman to reach the top was from China.

The Italian conquest of 1973 was one of the more controversial. The team, financed by an Italian tycoon, used helicopters to ferry supplies to its second camp. This prompted a comment from Hillary that the climb was "not a mountaineering expedition but an army exercise."

Some mountaineers also doubt that the Chinese actually climbed Everest in 1960 because they never produced adequate evidence to prove it.

The latest conquest was made by three Austrians May 3 with the use of oxygen.

Vacationers Urged To Use Care On Trip

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

Now that the summer vacation and annual reunion season is approaching full swing, the nation is taking to the highways and byways in ever increasing numbers.

It is, however, a fact that most vacationers and other traveles are unaware of the problems associated with traveling, particularly the lack of security in hotel and motel rooms.

It is important that we recognize this hazzard and take precautions to provide protection for ourselves and members of our family. Several lock companies have developed special motel and hotel locking devices which make illegal entry extremely difficult.

Unfortunately, they are nonexistent on most motel and hotel doors, as many designers and architects have yet to recognize the need for adequate physical security.

Here are several suggestions which you should consider while traveling in order that reasonable security precautions are followed. When staying the night in a motel or a hotel, a chair or other similar device propped aginst the door offes piece of mind, for it prevents illegal entry even with a key.

However, this concept can be employed only if you are in the room. While away from the room, anyone with a key can easily enter and steal your valuables. Therefore, if you will be leaving the room for several hours, it is suggested that you do not leave money, jewelery, cameras, credit cards, etc. behind. These items should be properly locked away in the trunk of your car.

One other area of which you might be aware is a through-the-door viewer installed so you can see who is at the door before you open it. If you have such a device on your hotel door, look through it to see that it works. If you cannot see through the viewer, beware. Someone may have reversed the device so you can't look out, but they can peep into the room from outside the door.

Motel and motel security is not difficult to achieve, but in many instances we must do it ourselves.

Asbestos Dangers Cited In Cabinet

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A timely inquiry from Flint, Mich.:

"We own a four-drawer standing file cabinet, which is called fireproof. It is asbestos-lined.

"It is rather full and some things scrape against the asbestos as the drawer opens. We wonder if this white asbestos dust, which gets on things as we open the drawer, is harmful, getting out into the air and perhaps us breathing the dust."

It may well be.

As you may have read recently, the government is renewing a drive to alert consumers to the dangers of asbestos. The latest effort is a program warning persons who may have worked in shipyards from World War II onward that they may have been exposed to dangerous levels of asbestos dust.

Some evidence even exists that the families of persons exposed to asbestos dust at work are at risk if the exposed person tracks the dust into the home on clothing.

It is impossible to say how much asbestos dust is harmful. The results of exposure often don't show up for years afterwards. Without knowing more details about your file cabinet, we are reluctant to advise you to get rid of it.

We put the question to Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group. Wolfe says the current permissable level for asbestos dust in the workplace is so low it cannot be seen.

If you do see white powdery dust in your file cabinet, a dangerous amount may be involved. We suggest you write to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207. Give the brand name of the cabinet and details of your problem. Perhaps the commission can give you a better answer.

The CPSC recently proposed bans or reductions on asbestos in two other classes of products — wall patching compounds and fake fireplace ash.

A reader in Indianapolis asks:

"Is it safe to cook in microwave ovens with plastic margarine tubs?"

It is not recommended.

Kathy Justice, a home economist for General Electric's consumers institute in Louisville, Ky., says margarine tubs are not suggested for most microwave cooking, heating or defrosting. They may warp or disintegrate when high temperahures are transferred to the containers by the food being cooked, she said.

Foods with high sugar and-or high fat content become very hot, Miss Justice said, and utensils for microwaving them should be ovenproof glass, glass-ceramic, pottery or special microwave plastics.

Some special microwave plastics can even be used in conventional ovens up to certain temperatures. Read the manufacturer's label for safe usage information.

Many glass, ceramic and paper containers also are acceptable for microwave oven use. Metal containers are not because they deflect the radiation, although foil can be used in certain circumstances and in some ovens. For details, consult the use-and-care booklet that comes with your own appliance.

Government safety experts say eight men were killed in three separate accidents recently, all of them electrocuted while working with CB antennas that came into contact with electric power lines.

The accidents occurred in Salisbury, N.C., New Orleans, La., and Abbeville, La.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission suggests consumers seek professional advice before installing an outside antenna. Local utility companies and CB organizations can provide information on local electric code regulations and antenna mounting.

The commission also recommends that the distance between any power line and the installaion site be at least one and one-half times the height of the antenna and mast assembly, or an even greater distance, if possible.

Army ROTC Makes Gain On Campus

FORT MONROE, Va. (AP) — College students around the country are showing renewed interest in Army Reserve Officers Training Corps, says Maj. Gen. Charles C. Rogers, deputy chief of staff for ROTC at the Army's Training and Doctrine Command here.

"Whatever the motive — to receive a commission as second lieutenant in the U.S. Army; to be awarded a merit scholarship; or to develop leadership and management skills — students are enrolling in Army ROTC, which is making a strong comeback," says Rogers.

For the fourth consecutive year, enrollment in Army ROTC programs has shown substantial increase, he reports. Latest nationwide figures show that about 60,000 cadets, approximately 14,000 of whom are women, are taking part in Army ROTC.

More than 6,000 ROTC candidates are expected to be commissioned this year as second lieutenants in the Army.

There are 280 colleges and universities across the country that host Army ROTC programs, plus more than 600 other schools which offer the program through cross-enrollment.

"In the past five years the program has been overhauled and given a new approach," the general says. "For example, the academic curriculum has been thoroughly and thoughtfully revised to meet the needs of today's college students in terms of their field of study and future careers. Emphasis is placed on leadership and managerial skills.

"We provide a stimulating challenge for our students — not just an intellectual challenge but a physical one as well," adds Rogers, noting that one of the most popular programs developed in recent years is Adventure Training.

Adventure Training includes instruction in rubber rafting, mountain climbing, survival training, rappelling and orienteering. Rappelling is controlled descent down a rope from high lofts such as mountains, cliffs and helicopters. Orienteering is a relatively new sport that takes boredom out of cross-country running. The objective is for the participants, known as orienteers, to navigate themselves over rugged and mapped-out terrain with the aid of a topographical map and compass.

Another attraction of Army ROTC is the scholarship program, Rogers points out. The four-, three-and two-year merit scholarships are available to qualified students on a competitive basis. These scholarships pay the entire tuition, plus the cost of textbooks, laboratory fees and other education expenses. In addition, ROTC scholarships provide a living allowance of as much as $1,000 a year, each year the scholarship is in effect.

Skateboarding Now Million Dollar Business

By STEVE CAPPS

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Shortly after its birth in the 1960s, skateboarding was suspected of being a fad that would fade as soon as its practioners passed puberty.

But 15 years later, it appears to have found a permanent home in the hearts of enthusiasts — and in the bank accounts of businessmen.

Example: Robin Logan, 18, dropped out of high school this year to pursue something she feels is more meaningful: professional skateboarding. And when she isn't competing in national contests, she earns extra money in the family business — Logan Earth Ski of Encinitas — which manufactures 5,000 boards a week.

Example: Four years ago, R.L. Levor was an employee at DuPont. One afternoon he fashioned a skateboard for his son and the enterprising lad sold it for $40 that evening.

"The next day I quit my job and was in the skateboard business," Levor said. His firm expects gross sales to climb to about $4 million this year.

Skateboard packs, enclosed areas where skaters can silently skim over concrete without fear of inattentive motorists or irate pedestrians, are being built throughout the United States. At last count there were 150, with several more in the construction or planning stages.

One park, billed as the world's largest, just opened in San Diego and will feature six separate courses on four acres directly underneath an interstate freeway interchange.

Manufacturers continue to report sales doubling and tripling annually and they see no sign of the trend slowing. In San Diego County, often referred to as the "birthplace" of the sport, four manufacturers expect gross sales to exceed $4 million this year, and the leader expects its sales to reach $15 million.

All agree that modern skateboarding bears little resemblance to the sport that began 15 years ago on the sidewalks and driveways of Southern California.

Back then, all a kid needed was an old pair of skates, a piece of plywood, and a few nails, and he was in business.

That same kid today had better have a part-time job or a savings account to finance the board, the safety gear, his subscriptions to several national magazines and admission to the local skateboard park.

Martin Mazner, publisher of Skateboard Industry News, estimates there are about 14 million skateboarders in the United States. And, he said, the sport is just getting started in Europe and Australia.

He said a recent nationwide survey conducted by several distributors showed 62 percent of males between the ages of 8 and 18 who live in metropolitan areas already own skateboards.

Among girls of the same age, only 15 percent own boards, Mazner said, and he smiled at the thought. "Girls are the new frontier for the skateboard industry," he said.

Robin Logan, already a professional, agreed. She says that more female professional skaters will result in larger purses.

Robin began skating when she was 6 years old. She got expert instruction from her brother, Bruce, 27, who was the world champion in 1975 and 1976.

She turned pro in 1975 and has entered six major competitions since then. Like most professional competitors, she belongs to the International Skateboarders Association.

Her most noteworthy — and profitable — accomplishment came earlier this year when she entered television's "Challenge of the Sexes" and beat 21-year-old Ernie Martin of New Jersey to take home the $2,500 prize money.

Timely Tips Given On Purchase, Use Of Paint Correctly

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's spring again, time for painting and decorating. Stephen Wolf, past president of the National Decorating Products Association and owner of a 109-year-old New York City paint store, has these suggestions for buying and using paint indoors and out:

— Use latex paint for ceilings, except in older buildings where ceilings have been calcimined; use oil paint for those.

— For painting woodwork, always dull the gloss to make paint stick better and enamel easy to apply.

— Beware of bargain paints; they often won't cover or hold colors well, apply easily or withstand washing.

— For water paints, use brushes with nylon or polyester fibers, not natural bristles.

— Select rollers with no more than ¼-inch nap for high gloss enamel or ½-inch nap for flat paints. The exception is at least ¾-inch nap for rough surfaces such as cinderblock or stucco.

— The new polyurethane paints are excellent if they contain a high percentage of that substance.

— Don't use spray paints outdoors except when the air is calm. On windy days it will end up on the painter and nearby trees and plants as well as the wall or object to be painted.

HYDRACARBON USE

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Hydrocarbon propellants are used in more than three-fourths of aerosols produced today. Applications include a variety of products, some being cosmetic, pesticide, paints, household, food, and personal care goods, reports Phillips Chemical.

Romney Fears U.S. Headed For Disaster

By PAUL VARIAN

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (UPI) — George Romney, at 70, drinks chocolate milk with his lunch, trots around the globe preaching citizen activism and the Mormon religion and talks ominously of impending national disaster.

Though long divorced from any active role in politics, the silver-haired former auto industry executive, Michigan governor, Republican presidential aspirant and Nixon cabinet member maintains the travel schedule of a whirlwind campaigner.

Hcs demeanor, as always, is that of the frustrated prophet — the man whose prematurely timed warnings on such divergent threats as the "gasguzzling dinosaur" and escalation of the Vietnam war went unheeded.

A political doomsayer, Romney feels that government has lost its ability to combat such economic bugaboos as inflation, urban decay and dwindling energy supplies — problems he says may be impossible to solve without a major societal disruption.

"There have only been two periods in our history when we adopted the kinds of reforms that we need now," he said. "One was the Civil War. The other was the Great Depression.

"That's why I feel we're headed for a disaster. We are unable, as a society, to achieve basic fundamental reforms without one."

Taking a break from a hectic travel schedule that included stopovers in such far-flung locations as Salt Lake City and Moscow, Romney, who now has 19 grandchildren, sandwiched an interview between a morning round of golf and an afternoon tennis match.

Dressed in casual slacks and an open-necked shirt, he relaxed over a lunch of grilled cheese and chocolate milk in the den of his tree-enshrouded suburban Detroit home.

The discussion kept drifting back to Romney's favorite subject —his 6-year crusade to mobilize citizen activists into a public lobbying coalition strong enough to take on Washington's "Triple Alliance" — the special interest groups, government's burgeoning bureaucracy and an immobile Congress.

It is these forces, Romney said, that have rendered presidential leadership a thing of the past.

"If I had been elected president," Romney said chuckling, "I would have undertaken to do things that would have been so opposed by the special interests that they would have chopped me into little pieces."

Romney first came into the public eye in the 1950s as chairman of fledgling American Motors Corp., where he became the auto industry's foremost small car innovator, declaring war on the "gas guzzling dinosaurs" offered by Detroit's "Big Three" and introducing compact cars to the marketplace.

In 1961, he coordinated a classic grassroot's citizen drive to adopt a state constitution in Michigan and rode the campaign all the way to the governor's office — still the only non-incumbent Republican elected to that post since 1948.

Having weathered such crises as Detroit's bloody 1967 riot, Romney was regarded prime GOP presidential timber in 1968 until he charged that he had been "brainwashed" by Pentagon officials during a factfinding tour of war-scarred Vietnam.

The remark, the first criticism of the nation's war involvement by a major political figure, sparked a public furor that forced Romney to drop out of the race.

"It was a good example of being right too soon on a political issue," he said.

He sees Jimmy Carter as a one-term president unless there is a dramatic change in the performance of his administration between now and 1980.

"His support of conflicting policies has been damaging to him," Romney said.

Group Planning To Teach By Satellite

By HAROLD H. MARTIN

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Never leaving his Philadelphia operating room, a professor of surgery at the University of Pennsylvania teaches his art to a pupil who stays at the University of Calcutta. That's the idea.

If Prof. Thomas Naff is successful, it may happen. It would be done by television, video systems and satellites.

"The mind soars," said Naff, "A surgeon here could teach that technique live to medical students in several parts of the world at the same time. And they could see more than if they were sitting in the operating room."

"Think what it would mean in teaching language and history, to take the student into a village and have interaction.

"You could have a great scholar giving a lecture to our students at the same time as he gives it to his own.

"There is so much to do before we can achieve that — the ultimate goal.

"But it is not a fantasy. It's a reality that is achievable in a decade."

Naff then qualified that to say it could be achieved domestically within a decade, but worldwide may take another generation.

"I really don't know if wa can make it work. But it has to be tried."

Recently at the U. of P., Naff hosted a meeting of educators, television experts, satellite builders, legal experts and technicians. They formed the National Committee for Internationalizing Education Through the Use of Educational satellites.

Meeting came five years after Naff begun talking of the idea as a way to avoid duplication of efforts among universities. The experts looked at the problems — technical, legal and otherwise — of establishing a worldwide satellite educational system and tried to set a program for making it a reality.

Naff says a satellite system could provide a daily diet of courses utilizing the teaching of world experts. It would have, in his words, "the potential — I do not exaggerate — for changing higher and secondary education fundamentally within the next decade or so."

In particular, he says it could help bring about change "eradicating kinds of ignorance our student body has about other regions, even as close as Canada, and the stereotypes."

While a lot of work has been done already on satellite education, Naff said, interest and financing has been fragmented. The technology is already available.

"What we need to do is mobilize all the interests and get them to work in unison toward this goal," he said.

Although on an informal basis he has uncovered some interest abroad, Naff said his initial intention is to organize the system within the United States and test its operation here before approaching foreign governments.

He said he would expect that if it were government financed, as he believes it must be, it would first operate abroad in those areas of chief interest to the United States.

Georgia Town Boasts More Than Its Share Of Millionaires

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

DALTON, Ga. (UPI) — There's gold in the north Georgia hills, and if you don't believe it, ask the 75 millionaires in Dalton.

It's not the kind of gold found in the ground; this wealth comes rolling off tufting machines in 12-foot widths at an incredible volume.

But like the gold rush days of the century past, the burgeoning tufted carpet industry mas made a boomtown of Dalton, populution 23,132, creating millionaires of both native sons and Yankees attracted to the area by the astounding growth of tufted carpeting. There are some 300 manufacturers in the carpeting industry and approximately 175 are located in the Dalton area, 90 miles north of Atlanta and 30 miles south of Chattanooga. The Dalton plants account for more than 60 per cent of total U.S. production. They employ 14,000 workers, and have a payroll in excess of $1o2 million annually.

Ninety-seven per cent of all carpets manufactured in the United States are of the tufted variety (like a tuft of grass) with only 3 per cent woven. A few years ago the figures were the reverse.

Gib Watts, president of the First National Bank of Dalton, the city's largest, estimated the number of millionaires in the city, 11 more than a few years ago. Watts said supplies of tufted carpet climbed to $3.5 billion last year, with $2 billion of that amount coming from plants in Dalton and surrounding Whitfield County.

The Carpet and Rug Institute, the promotional arm of the industry, is located in Dalton, housed in a building where even the walls are covered with carpet. Partitions between offices are made of carpet, and the steps of the building down to the parking lot are carpeted.

"We have some very wealthy people who live in this town," said Ned Hopper, director of consumer affairs for the institute. "People come here, they make their money and they live here. They blend right into this town."

Dalton is the technological center of the tufted carpet industry, according to Hopper, and is the place that others who ant to enter the business come to learn the know-how, including the Japanese.

"This is one product in the United States that we make faster and better than Japan. We are keeping ahead of them in this line."

He said that last year the plants in Dalton turned out about 10 per cent more carpet than the year before and economic indicators point to another good year in 1978.

Motorists on nearby Interstate 75 know they are in the Dalton area when they begin to see retail stores selling carpet remnants. Hopper describes this as a $19 million annual business. The stores buy remmants from manufucturers who have parts of carpet rolls left from their wholesale transactions.

Hopper says these stores — there are 157 in the area — sell both first quality carpets and seconds. "We get very few complaints from this area about the quality of the carpets," he said.

Hopper says that if a visitor is looking for carpet and just passing through the area, "yes, it's probably worth your while to stop in Dalton and buy some carpet, but not if you have to make special trip."

Exxon Chemicals, which supplies carpet backing to the Dalton plants, recently published a brochure about the Georgia city. "You can still strike it rich in the carpeting capital of the world," it said.

The millionaires of Dalton readily give credit for the birth of their lucrative indufstry to Catherine Evans Whitener, who made the first tufted bedspread in 1895 by using a needle and thread to sew a locked stitch that looked like a tuft of grass. A bronze plaque commemorating Mrs. Whitener, who died in 1964, hangs in the institute building.

Wood Still Has Strong British Ties

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Wood's first words: "My therapist tells me smoking is good for the circulation. It may be a reverse ploy: because it's good for me I'll give it up?"

The line is not from one of the English actor's plays. It's the real John Wood, tensely reaching for a cigarette immediately on arriving for an interview.

He apologizes for being late: he's been phoning home to England to talk to his wife Sylvia and the children at the Woods' country house in Gloucestershire.

Although he misses them while performing in Ira Levin's Broadway thriller "Deathtrap," he finds there are compensations.

"I'm very lazy about doing anything while performing; it's easier when I'm on my own," he said. "I find it difficult to work when the children are around. They make demands which are impossible to fulfill — like playing table-tennis at 7 in the morning."

The one-time soldier and law student established an American reputation with his first play on Broadway, Tom Stoppard's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead," in 1967, and followed it up with a series of acclaimed performances in "Sherlock Holmes," "Travesties" (for which he won a Tony Award), "Tartuffe," and now "Deathtrap."

Performing takes a lot out of him, emotionally and physically. His constant tension shows in his thin body with the unmistakable cadaverous face — and his smoking.

"My body has to wind up to a performance," he said. "When I'm on holiday (vacation) there's a terrific surge of energy in late afternoon even when I've no theater to go to. And then every night at two o'clock my body tires."

Although he has been working a lot in this country the past few years, he still manages to get back to England for four or five months a year while resting or working with the Royal Shakespeare Company. And the family comes here from time to time during school vacations.

"This summer — presuming the show goes — we'll take a house in the Hamptons for the summer," he said.

The children are Sebastian, 16 (from his first marriage), Sibylla, 12, Ghislaine, 9, and Rufus, 7.

They got such out-of-the-ordinary names because he gets tired of always being referred to and addressed as "John Wood," never plain "John." He didn't want his children to have to go through life like that.

Not long ago Wood decided to "go transAtlantic" — working both in England and the U.S. He now has official resident alien status and hopes eventually to settle on this side of the Atlantic.

One reason is the better money available here for an actor; the other is that while he wants his children to have an English secondary education he wants them to go to college here (which also requires the extra money, to complete the circle).
