Jury clears Odessan of murder charge

Defendant was accused of killing man with pickup outside Sedona Mexican Grill

By Rachael Gleason
rgleason@mrt.com

A Midland jury on Friday found Christopher Caudill not guilty of murder, manslaughter or criminal negligence after fatally striking a 25-year-old man with his pickup two years ago.

The 32-year-old Odessan's weeklong trial concluded Friday after nearly five hours of deliberation from the jury, which ultimately decided Caudill did not intend to seriously injure or kill his victim, Andres Garcia.

Court documents and testimony show Caudill fled the parking lot of Sedona Bar & Grill in April 2012 after striking the victim, which defense attorney Bob Garcia called an act of defense.

Bob Garcia previously argued that Caudill perceived the actions of Andres Garcia that night as a car-jacking and called his client's intent reasonable.

"People have the right to defend themselves when they feel they are under attack," he said during closing remarks Friday morning.

But as the final word turned to the prosecution, Midland County Assistant District Attorney Andrew van der Hoeven questioned whether the victim and his friends actually attacked Caudill in his vehicle.

Photos of the defendant after the incident didn't show any evidence of being coldcocked in the head or putting up a fight — as the defendant testified Thursday — van der Hoeven said.

"No bruises on the knuckles — nothing," he said. "Not a single injury."

During closing remarks, the prosecution reminded jurors that both Caudill and witnesses saw the victim standing 15 feet in front of the pickup with his arms up and hands out.

Witnesses also testified that Caudill made a circle in the parking lot, turned, stopped and revved his engine. Still — using Caudill's own words — the prosecuting attorney said the defendant hit the gas.

"I punched it," he said.

The trial concluded at 5 p.m. Friday with 142nd District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles presiding over the case.

OFF-DUTY OFFICER KILLS GUNMAN AT LA BODEGA

Midland emergency personnel responded to a shots-fired call at La Bodega restaurant on North Big Spring Street on Friday night.

Cops investigate why man fired gun in kitchen

From staff reports

A man responsible for firing multiple shots inside the La Bodega Mexican Restaurant and Bar is dead after he was gunned down Friday night by an off-duty Midland Police Department officer, who was eating at the central Midland restaurant.

Midland police reported that at about 9:40 p.m. a man fired multiple shots with a handgun inside the kitchen area and that when he came out of the kitchen, an off-duty officer shot him.

The man, whose name had not been released as of press time, was dead at the scene, said Sara Higgins, MPD public information officer.

No other injuries were reported, Higgins said.

MPD evacuated the Mexican food restaurant, located in the 2700 block of North Big Spring Street, and performed a "secondary search."

It was not immediately known why the man fired shots inside the kitchen area, Higgins said.

MPD detectives and the Texas Rangers were still investigating the incident late Friday.

La Bodega has been a favorite of patrons in Midland for 40 years, according to previous Reporter-Telegram reports.

Davis bashes Abbott as Dems push 'openness'

Associated Press

DALLAS — Wendy Davis gave restless Texas Democrats craving momentum in her bid for governor a fiery pep talk Friday night, relentlessly bashing Republican rival Greg Abbott and bringing her family back in front of the public.

Out to breathe new excitement into her most devoted supporters — many of whom had hoped Davis would be faring better with four months until Election Day — the Fort Worth state senator gave the Texas Democratic Convention a new glimpse of her populist message and her two adult daughters who have largely stayed out of the campaign.

But she set her sights mostly on Abbott. His name came up 30 times in a speech that hammered the longtime Texas attorney general on his office defending $5 billion in classroom cuts in an ongoing school finance lawsuit and characterizing him as an entrenched political insider.

"Don't clap too much or Greg Abbott will sue you," Davis said. "He says he goes to work, sues the federal government and goes home. He's so proud of it. But what Greg Abbott doesn't say is that our judges go to work, they rule against him and the people win."

It was a nod to Abbott boasting about filing about 30 lawsuits against Washington since President Barack Obama took office. Meanwhile, the state is likely to lose in court against more than 600 school districts that claim the deep cuts to classrooms in 2011 were unconstitutional.

Earlier this month at the Texas Republican Convention, Abbott didn't Davis during his speech to delegates. Abbott spokesman Matt Hirsch said Friday night that Davis was resorting to "desperate attacks that are the result of a floundering campaign."

Man seeks restitution for vehicle damage

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Bobby Lee was traveling northbound in a construction zone on State Highway 349 in mid-May when rocks came flying at his vehicle, causing thousands of dollars worth of damage to his car.

"I'm not kidding you, it was like a gun battle," said Lee, a West Texas sales representative for International Paper who was traveling north from Midland in the morning of May 14.

It took Lee about 10 minutes to reach a point where the repaving and barrage of rocks stopped. Lee did note that the speed limit in the construction zone was 60 miles per hour, but he estimated that everyone was traveling between 45 and 55 mph.

In the aftermath, the windshield, hood, front bumper, front grill, headlights and left side of his Lexus ES 350 were damaged.

"To me, it's like if you walk to somebody's car with a hammer and tell them you're going to bang their car about 25 times and they can't do anything about

Apache Corp. says says it was swindled

Apache Corp. recently filed a lawsuit alleging it was a victim of fraud, costing the Houston-based oil and gas company about $1.5 million.

The lawsuit claims two former Midlanders and an Odessa man conspired against Apache for about a year before the company discovered the fraud during an internal audit.

Multiple crimes started in February 2013, Apache alleges, including the production of fake invoices — which the company paid — for work not done.

Jess Malone, an Apache security advisor, said this instance is not the first time an oil and gas company was defrauded while drilling in the Permian Basin — and it likely won't be the last.

In Sunday's print edition, the Reporter-Telegram will have more in-depth coverage of the lawsuit and the alleged fraud.

Gubernatorial hopeful and state Sen. Wendy Davis waves Friday before speaking at the Dallas Convention Center during the Texas Democratic Convention.

DAVIS

introduced their mom to thousands of delegates at the Dallas Convention Center. Davis launched her campaign in October heavily focused on telling her narrative from going from a teenage single mother in a trailer park to Harvard Law School. Small discrepancies later found in that story, however, opened her up to attacks from critics.

A Democrat hasn't been elected to a statewide office in Texas since 1994, the longest such string of defeats in the nation.

Davis became a Democratic sensation nationally with a 12-plus hour Texas Senate filibuster last summer that temporarily delayed passage of strict abortion restrictions statewide. The party hopes she and lieutenant governor hopeful Leticia Van de Putte can woo women voters, young Texans and independents.

Delegates are also hoping to expand the base by approving an official party platform that stresses openness and inclusion. That's in contrast to Texas Republicans, who at their convention in Fort Worth wrote a platform with a hard-line stance on immigration and an endorsement of therapy to turn gay people straight.

In another stark difference, joining Van de Putte and Davis in speaking on the convention floor Friday was Houston Mayor Annise Parker, who is gay.

The final Democratic platform will be today.

More openness could mean defying traditional Democratic values or taking positions that alienate some voters. That tension was on display in Friday meetings of Democrats who support gun rights and oppose abortion and the death penalty.

"If we're going to be a big tent, it has to go both ways," said James White, a Texas Democratic Executive Committee member who addressed a gun-owner caucus.

Similar sentiment came from Lois Kerschen, who has been coming to Texas Democratic Conventions for 42 years but opposes abortion and is on the board of directors of Democrats for Life of America. She said most women get abortions because of economic circumstances and that expanding social programs could change that.

"You can't shove us out of the party," Kerschen said. "Put pro-life Democrats as candidates and you are going to win. We haven't done that in Texas and we're losing."

The Dallas Morning News reported selections also will include manuscripts, documents relating to Christopher Columbus, antiquities and sculptures.

Man firing weapon along street killed by police

Police say officers have shot and killed a 33-year-old man who was firing a gun as he walked down a Dallas street and later pointed it at neighbors.

Maj. Jeff Cotner said Friday that Rodney Hodge was fatally shot by three officers called to a residential neighborhood Thursday night. He says Hodge was shot when he approached the officers and did not heed orders to drop his weapon. The officers have been placed on administrative leave as the investigation into the confrontation continues.

Cotner said the officers saw Hodge point his gun at people standing near their homes.

Police had attempted to speak with Hodge for about an hour to convince him to drop the gun.

ARLINGTON

Small plane lands in freeway interchange

A small plane towing an advertising banner has made an emergency landing on a Texas freeway interchange after experiencing engine trouble.

A Federal Aviation Administration statement says the single-engine Cessna landed in the Interstate 20-U.S. 287 interchange in Arlington in North Texas about 5 p.m. Friday.

The plane had been towing the banner when the pilot told air traffic controllers he had lost oil pressure. The pilot said he would drop the banner and make an emergency landing.

The aircraft landing in the green space of the interchange but hit a pickup truck on one of the ramps. An Arlington police statement says one person in the truck suffered minor injuries when the wing smashed the truck's windshield.

The pilot was able to walk away. His name was not released.

Austin OKs $30M for buyouts in flood-prone area

Austin officials have authorized spending more than $30 million to buy about 140 homes in a neighborhood ravaged last year by severe flooding.

The city council voted unanimously Thursday to OK the buyouts along Onion Creek. It will spend another $12 million to hire an engineering firm to conduct appraisals and perform other work.

Revenue from a utility drainage fee will cover the cost of the buyouts.

Officials want to remove residents and structures from an area prone to flooding. Storms last fall brought flooding along Onion Creek and other parts of Central Texas and were responsible for six deaths.

Many homes near the creek were built before government maps began outlining flood plains.

The Austin American-Statesman reported the city has bought more than 400 homes near the creek since 1998.

it," Lee said.

He is currently seeking compensation for the damages from either the Texas Department of Transportation or the contractor hired to do the road work.

Lee first contacted TxDOT to report the problem. An official with TxDOT told Lee the contractor paved the day before, but the cold temperatures in the morning after caused the road to release the rocks. The National Weather Service observed a low temperature of 43 degrees on May 14.

Gene Powell, TxDOT Odessa District spokesman, said in general, asphalt does require a heated temperature for it to hold.

Lee then reached out to the contractor, who then told Lee to get two estimates and take photos of the damages. One estimate came out to $5,637, the other came out to $6,285.

On Thursday, Lee heard back from the contractor via email, who said to him that the company is not liable for damages unless the damage is caused by rocks falling off their trucks. The contractor referred Lee to TxDOT.

Lee said he has received instructions from TxDOT to fax or mail a letter to the Occupational Safety division in Austin with all the information about the incident.

Powell said he can't comment on this specific case because the Occupational Safety division will handle it. But generally, TxDOT's Occupational Safety division will get involved in damage claims if the vehicle was traveling in a construction zone.

"As soon as (the Occupational Safety division) are alerted, they get to it as quickly as they can," Powell said. "But they're handling the whole state."

Powell gave advice for those that travel in a construction zone. He first said to slow down. His other piece of advice was to seek alternate routes if construction is happening.

Lee, who feels frustrated that nothing might get done or the Occupational Safety division may take a long time, noted how inevitable it is for vehicle damage to occur in the area.

"When you drive down the highways in Midland or Odessa, something's going to happen," Lee said. "You're going to get a rock ding. It just happens."

2 remain hospitalized after floor collapse

Officials say only two people remain hospitalized a day after a floor collapsed under a large crowd at a Houston-area religious gathering.

West I-10 Fire Department spokesman Tim Thomas said Friday no information was being released about the conditions of the two individuals still receiving treatment.

Officials said 36 people were transported to hospitals Thursday, with most suffering from minor injuries.

The collapse occurred while as many as 125 people assembled for the event at a suburban Houston home. At least 40 people were in an apartment above a detached garage when the floor gave way.

Thomas said Friday the floor had not "pancaked in" as first reported but that only a portion of the floor collapsed.

Police: Couple kept son locked away for years

A man arrested for burglary in a Central Texas town told police he had been held captive for at least four years by his adoptive parents in a garage apartment locked on the outside, authorities said.

Jenifer Elise Thyssen, 40, and Dane Andrew Thyssen, 39, were being held Friday at the Hays County jail. They were arrested Wednesday on kidnapping charges.

Hays County sheriff's deputies said the couple told them they confined 22-year-old Koystya Thyssen in an apartment at their home "for the safety" of their other children, according to the arrest affidavit.

DALLAS

Van de Putte goes on verbal attack against Patrick

Democratic lieutenant governor hopeful Leticia Van de Putte has gone on the attack, saying her tea party-backed opponent wants to bring political bickering and "Washington D.C.-style finger pointing" to Texas.

Addressing the Texas Democratic Convention in Dallas late Friday, the San Antonio state senator had some of her harshest words yet for Republican state Sen. Dan Patrick of Houston.

She said Patrick repeatedly voted against programs to help entrepreneurs and veterans, as well as infrastructure projects backed by business groups.

Van de Putte also noted that one of Patrick's Republican Senate colleagues called him a "snake-oil salesman."

Van de Putte is a heavy underdog in November. Still, she anticipated a response from Patrick saying: "I ain't no pushover. I ain't no East Coast Liberal. I ain't no West Coast Democrat."

WESLACO

Abbott says Texas border safer than before

A week after Gov. Rick Perry directed $1.3 million per week toward bolstering border security, Attorney General Greg Abbott said Friday he sees "measurable and meaningful results."

Abbott, who's the Republican nominee for governor, said after being briefed by Border Patrol and the Department of Public Safety in Weslaco that there has been no increase in crime and may have actually been a decrease in illegal activity. He credited the amount of law enforcement at all levels working at the border in the face of a surge of illegal immigration.

"Because of this border related effort, the border area in Texas is more safe from crime than it has been before," Abbott said. "And so as far as crime on the streets is concerned things are more safe and more secure because of the greater presence on the ground." He offered no details on the measurable results and said the Border Patrol told him that two days earlier they made 1,500 arrests in the sector.

On June 18, Perry announced that the state would send $1.3 million per week to DPS to help secure the border while federal agents were busy with immigrants.

Texas man pleads guilty to terrorism charge

Federal prosecutors say an Austin man has pleaded guilty to federal charges that he sought to join an al-Qaida splinter group leading militants in Iraq.

Authorities announced Friday that 23-year-old Michael Wolfe admitted to attempting to provide material support and resources to terrorists.

Wolfe planned to travel to the Middle East to support the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, the extremist Sunni group threatening Iraq's government.

He was arrested earlier this month at George Bush Intercontinental Airport in Houston as he was leaving for Turkey with his wife and two young children.

New Mexico county in prairie chicken lawsuit

Associated Press

LOVINGTON, N.M. — Commissioners in a southeastern New Mexico county voted unanimously Thursday to join a lawsuit against listing the lesser prairie chicken as a threatened species.

Lea County Commission Chairman Gregg Fulfer said the county entered the lawsuit because the commission believes the federal government's results on the chicken's threatened status is inconclusive.

The lawsuit is expected to be a long battle on the future of the endangered grouse roaming five states, Hobbs News-Sun reported.

Earlier this month, Lea County was listed in a joint complaint filed in a federal court in Texas. The Permian Basin Petroleum Association and four other New Mexico counties are also listed on the complaint.

"We had been working through this for a while," he said. "...We discussed all their science and showed in a lot of different ways how their science they were using was not credible."

Ranchers and oil companies believe the listing will have a negative effect on the ranching, oil and gas and wind farm industries in states where the chicken lives — New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado.

The federal government said those states had fewer than 18,000 lesser prairie chickens in 2013, down almost 50 percent from 2012.

The Obama administration in March listed the prairie chicken as threatened.

In a statement, U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce, R-N.M., applauded the New Mexico counties who are part of the lawsuit.

"The Fish and Wildlife Service's decision to cater to environmental groups and disregard science will devastate New Mexico's way of life," he said. "New Mexicans will pay the price in lost jobs, industry, ranching and oil and gas production. This is a federal government that is out of control."

Texas OKs wastewater reuse for parched city

Associated Press

AUSTIN — State regulators have given conditional approval to Wichita Falls' plan to recycle and treat wastewater to augment the drought-stricken North Texas city's dwindling drinking water supplies.

The Texas Commission of Environmental Quality approved the program for a period not to exceed six months. An agency statement said the decision is based on the city's report verifying that it was able to treat wastewater to meet all state and federal drinking water standards.

The Friday decision comes after state and federal climatologists warned Tuesday that the city of about 105,000 residents near the Oklahoma border will likely continue experiencing unnaturally hot, dry weather for a decade or longer.

The Texas Water Development Board says the city's water supply is on a pace to run dry by 2016.

FDA approves inhalable diabetes drug Afrezza

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration on Friday approved a long-delayed inhalable diabetes medication to help patients control their blood sugar levels during meals.

The FDA cleared MannKind Corp.'s Afrezza, a fast-acting form of insulin, for adults with the most common form of diabetes, which affects more than 25 million Americans. The approval decision comes more than three years after the agency first asked MannKind to run additional clinical studies on the drug.

Demand for diabetes treatments is surging globally as the prevalence of obesity explodes. According to the World Health Organization, roughly 347 million people worldwide have the disease, a chronic condition in which the body either does not make enough insulin to break down the sugar in foods or uses insulin inefficiently. It can lead to blindness, strokes, heart disease or death. In type 2 diabetes, the most common form of the disease, the body does not use insulin properly. Type 1 diabetes is usually diagnosed in children and young adults. In those cases, the body does not produce insulin.

Afrezza, an insulin powder, comes in a single-use cartridge and is designed to be inhaled at the start of a meal or within 20 minutes. MannKind has said that patients using the drug can achieve peak insulin levels within 12 to 15 minutes. That compares to a wait time of an hour and a half or more after patients inject insulin.

The FDA said in its approval announcement that Afrezza is not a substitute for long-acting insulin and is a new option for controlling insulin levels during meals. The agency approved Afrezza with a boxed warning — the strongest type — indicating that the drug should not be used in patients with chronic lung diseases, such as asthma and smoker's cough, because of reports of breathing spasms. The agency is also requiring several follow-up studies looking at the drug's long-term safety, including its impact on the heart and lungs.

Mannkind first submitted the drug to the FDA in March 2009.

Advocates push for reform of adult guardianship in Texas

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — It all started when Denise Tighe passed out at a restaurant in her North Texas hometown. The 85-year-old was taken to the hospital, deemed incapable of properly caring for herself and became a ward of the state against her will.

After she was assigned a guardian in 2011, she was taken to a nursing home 20 miles from her hometown near Fort Worth, which she adamantly protested, and her home and a lifetime of jewelry and antiques were put up for sale. She died in January with friends and family questioning whether the state did her more harm than good.

Now one of Tighe's friends, Virginia Pritchett, is pointing to what happened to Tighe as an example of a broken adult guardianship system in Texas.

Pritchett is one of about two dozen advocates who testified to the state Sunset Advisory Commission this week hoping to spur change. They say the guardianship process is stripping the rights from competent people and dragging them through a court system that requires them to spend thousands to protect their independence.

The push has gained momentum since the last legislative session when only a handful of critics lobbied with little success. Since then, a coalition of disability and elderly groups from across the state has banded together to develop and refine a set of proposals for the next session — calling for guardianships to be the last option and for more independence for wards.

"These elderly people are being warehoused in nursing homes, and these court-appointed attorneys are going through all their money in court hearings that the elderly people don't even know is occurring," said Debby Valdez with the San-Antonio based Guardianship Reform Advocates For The Disabled & Elderly.

Adult guardianship cases are lawsuits designed to ensure vulnerable seniors and people with disabilities are not abused, neglected or exploited. A probate court must determine whether people are competent enough to keep themselves safe and healthy. If the answer is no, the judge can appoint a guardian to make medical, financial and other decisions for them.

Lawyers and judges have said that the system is protecting people and that proposed changes would leave people more vulnerable and unecessarily impede the process.

Texas has about 46,000 people in guardianship, according to the state. Between September 2011 and August 2012, more than 4,500 adult guardianship petitions were filed in probate courts across the state.

Advocates say that guardianship should be the last option for proposed wards and supported decision-making should be the alternative. This means allowing people with limited disabilities to hire supporters whose jobs are strictly to give information so they can make decisions for themselves.

"Even though it seems counterintuitive, not all people under guardianship are totally unable to make decisions," said Bob Kafka with the Austin-based group Guardianship Reform and Supported Decision Making.

Supported decision-making has also garnered the support of former Texas Health and Human Services Commissioner Tom Suehs.

Doctor faces another charge in abortion reporting

SOUTH BEND — An Illinois doctor already charged with not properly reporting an abortion on a teenager in Lake County now faces the same charge in St. Joseph County.

The St. Joseph County prosecutor's office on Friday filed a misdemeanor count of failing to timely file a public report against Dr. Ulrich Klopfer of Crete, Illinois. A probable cause affidavit alleges Klopfer waited too long to report an abortion performed on a 13-year-old in January 2013. State law requires the report to file the report in three days.

During his Lake County charge, Klopfer said it's "amazing" that a paperwork error could jeopardize his medical license.

A hearing on the St. Joseph County charge has been scheduled for July 18.

BOSTON

Coakley: Abortion clinic protections still exist

Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley is reminding patients and protesters of the legal protections that still exist around abortion clinics even after the U.S. Supreme Court's ruled the Massachusetts' 35-foot buffer zone law unconstitutional.

Coakley said Friday that women continue to have basic rights to seek reproductive health care free from harassment and intimidation.

After buffer zone ruling, abortion rivals prepare to square off anew

New York Times News Service

BOSTON — Lorraine Loewen, 74, said she comes here once a week to demonstrate against abortion outside of the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts health care center.

On Friday, the morning after the Supreme Court struck down restrictions that had created no-protest buffer zones near abortion clinics, she stood inside the yellow line on the pavement that marked a 35-foot radius around the clinic's entrance.

Loewen, a retiree from Dedham, Massachusetts, approached a woman and a man who had climbed out of a taxi and were walking toward the clinic, which provides an array of women's health services, including abortions, and spoke softly in the woman's ear. She handed the woman a pamphlet depicting a woman's face and the words, "It's your choice."

"I asked her if we could be of any help," Loewen said, adding that she preferred talking close up with the people going to the clinic rather than yelling at them from outside the line.

On Friday, Loewen and a handful of other demonstrators were among the first anti-abortion activists to exert their restored rights, as a few police officers looked on and a volunteer escort stood ready to bring patients inside the clinic.

In its unanimous decision, the Supreme Court on Thursday rejected a seven-year-old Massachusetts law that had created the buffer zone around entrances to abortion clinics. Abortion opponents had challenged the law on the grounds that the First Amendment gave them the right to have quiet conversations with women entering the clinics to tell them about alternatives to abortion.

State officials said they were reviewing the decision and existing laws and considering what additional measures might be needed to prevent harassment near clinics.

"We are reviewing additional options to enhance those protections, while respecting the standards laid out in yesterday's court ruling," said Martha Coakley, the attorney general for Massachusetts, who unsuccessfully defended the buffer-zone law, in a statement Friday.

Before Thursday's ruling, many patients and staff members at the clinic had felt some measure of relief because of the no-protest buffer. But no more.

"I think patients and staff will feel a little more at risk, and less safe," Sarah Cyr-Mutty, the community relations coordinator for the Boston Planned Parenthood health center and a member of the volunteer corps that helps escort patients past protesters to the building's entrance, said on Thursday. "It's frustrating that it seems like their right to be able to stand up closer to somebody's face is more important than the rights of someone who is trying to access health care."

ENERGY BRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

NEW YORK

Oil price steady on quiet day for energy

The price of oil held steady on Friday on a quiet day for energy markets.

Benchmark U.S. crude for August delivery edged 10 cents lower to close at $105.74 a barrel in New York. Brent crude, a benchmark used to price international oils used my many U.S. refineries, rose 9 cents to close at $113.30 a barrel in London.

The price of both U.S. and international oils have slipped somewhat in recent days since reaching 10-month highs late last week, a sign investors are starting to believe that the violence in Iraq won't spread to the oil-producing south.

The national average retail price of gasoline held steady at $3.68 per gallon, according to AAA, OPIS, and Wright Express. It's the highest national average for this time of year since 2008.

In other energy futures trading on the Nymex:

- Wholesale gasoline rose 1.3 cents to close at $3.07 a gallon.
- Natural gas fell 1.1 cents close at $4.39 per 1,000 cubic feet.
- Heating oil fell 1.6 cents to close at $3 a gallon.

DENVER

Local control compromise sought on drilling

More oil companies are supporting Gov. John Hickenlooper's latest proposal to find a compromise to grant more control to local governments over oil and gas operations.

The Denver Post reports that four more oil companies wrote a letter Thursday to the governor expressing support for the proposal. In all, there were seven oil companies signed on to the letter, including Anadarko Petroleum Corp. and Noble Energy Inc., the largest drillers on the Front Range. Those two companies have previously expressed support for Hickenlooper's push to find a legislative compromise.

Among other things, the bill being circulated would give local governments the power to impose setbacks greater than 500 feet on drilling rigs. Local jurisdictions could also control noise from energy development and conduct inspections of operations.

The attempt to find a compromise is an effort to stave off several proposed ballot measures that would impose more stringent rules over drilling. Some of those ballot proposals have the financial backing of Colorado U.S. Rep. Jared Polis.

The letter from the oil companies states that they offer their "strong support for the draft legislation circulated by your office."

Pentagon: Drones guard US interests in Iraq

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. has armed drones flying over Baghdad to protect U.S. troops that recently arrived to assess Iraq's deteriorating security, the Pentagon said Friday.

The military for more than a week has been flying manned and unmanned aircraft over Iraq, averaging a few dozen sorties daily for reconnaissance. The decision to arm some of the drones follows the deployment to Baghdad of troops who will advise and assist Iraqi counterterrorism forces.

"The reason that some of those aircraft are armed is primarily for force protection reasons now that we have introduced into the country some military advisers whose objective will be to operate outside the confines of the embassy," the Defense Department's press secretary, Navy Rear Adm. John Kirby, told a Pentagon press conference.

So far, 180 of 300 troops promised by President Barack Obama have arrived in the country. That's 90 advisers and 90 who are setting up an operations and intelligence analysis unit.

A handful of Predators armed with Hellfire missiles are being used over the capital for the new force protection mission, a senior defense official said. The official was not authorized to discuss the new flights on the record and requested anonymity.

Officials stressed that Obama still has not authorized airstrikes against Sunni militants who have been overrunning territory in other parts of the country.

Obama seeks $500M to arm select Syrian rebels

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama is seeking to bolster U.S. efforts to train and arm select members of the Syrian opposition, a move that comes amid increased U.S. concern that the conflicts in Syria and Iraq are becoming an intertwined fight against the same Sunni extremist group.

Obama sent Congress a $500 million request Thursday for a Pentagon-run program that would significantly expand previous covert efforts to arm rebels fighting both the Sunni extremists and forces loyal to Syrian President Bashar Assad. If approved by lawmakers, the program would in effect open a second front in the fight against militants spilling over Syria's border and threatening to overwhelm neighboring Iraq.

Obama has long been reluctant to arm the Syrian opposition, in part because of concerns that weapons may fall into extremist hands. But administration officials say the U.S. has grown increasingly confident in recent months about its ability to distinguish the moderate rebels from the more extremist elements that include the al-Qaida-inspired Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, which has stormed into Iraq and capvtured much of the northern part of the country.

The risk of U.S. weapons and ammunition falling into the wrong hands appears to have only heightened now that ISIL has strengthened. But Obama's request to Congress indicated that tackling the crumbling security situation in Syria and Iraq trumped those concerns.

White House spokeswoman Caitlin Hayden said the military assistance "marks another step toward helping the Syrian people defend themselves against regime attacks, push back against the growing number of extremists like ISIL who find safe haven in the chaos, and take their future into their own hands by enhancing security and stability at local levels."

Meanwhile, the head of the Syrian moderate opposition is asking for more foreign. Ahmad al-Jarba told U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry at a meeting in Saudi Arabia that the insurgent march across the porous border between Syria and Iraq has created confusion across the region. He said the war against terrorism must be stronger than ever.

Kerry said the moderate rebels will be crucial in the cross-border fight against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant.

The Syria program is part of a broader, $65.8 billion overseas operations request that the administration sent to Capitol Hill on Thursday. The package includes $1 billion to help stabilize nations bordering Syria that are struggling with the effects of the civil war.

Court ruling comes as Obama's power is tested

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Before a unanimous Supreme Court weighed in, the White House had brushed off claims that President Barack Obama was exceeding his executive authority as grousing from frustrated partisans.

Then, in a 9-0 decision Thursday, the high court ruled that at least in one case Obama had gone too far.

For Republicans, the court's decision that Obama violated the Constitution in 2012 when he appointed members to the National Labor Relations Board without Senate confirmation validated their argument that Obama has acted against the law when he has taken matters into his own hands.

The court's decision comes while Obama is determined to use all his executive powers to get around the gridlock of a divided Congress. In the process, he has left his imprint on policies ranging from immigration to the environment, from gay rights to worker pay.

"This administration has a tendency to abide by laws that it likes and to disregard those it doesn't," Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell said.

Syrian rebels buckling in face of jihadis

Associated Press

BEIRUT — The Syrian rebels that the U.S. now wants to support are in poor shape, on the retreat from the radical al-Qaida breakaway group that has swept over large parts of Iraq and Syria, with some rebels giving up the fight. It is not clear whether the new U.S. promise to arm them will make a difference.

Some, more hard-line Syrian fighters are bending to the winds and joining the radicals.

The Obama administration is seeking $500 million to train and arm what it calls "moderate" factions among the rebels, a far larger project than a quiet CIA-led effort in Jordan that has been training a few hundreds fighters a month. But U.S. officials said it will take a year to get the new program fully underway. The U.S. also faces the difficult task of what constitutes a "moderate" rebel in a movement dominated by Islamist ideologies.

Opposition activists complain that after long hesitating to arm the rebellion to topple Syrian President Bashar Assad — their main goal — the United States is now enlisting them against the Islamic State out of its own interests. They have long argued that the group, which aims to create a radical Islamic enclave bridging Syria and Iraq, was only able to gain such power in Syria because more moderate forces were not given international support.

"This decision is a year and a half too late," said Ahmad Ramadan, a senior member of the Western-backed Syrian National Coalition opposition group. "Had it not been for Obama's hesitation all along, this wouldn't be happening in Iraq today nor would there be this proliferation of extremist factions in Syria," he added.

This undated file image posted on a militant website Jan. 14, 2014, which has been verified and is consistent with other AP reporting, shows fighters from the al-Qaida linked Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) marching in Raqqa, Syria. Moderate Syrian rebels are buckling under the onslaught of the radical al-Qaida breakaway group that has swept over large parts of Iraq and Syria. Some rebels are giving up the fight, crippled by lack of weapons and frustrated with the power of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant. Other, more hard-line Syrian fighters are bending to the winds and joining the radicals.

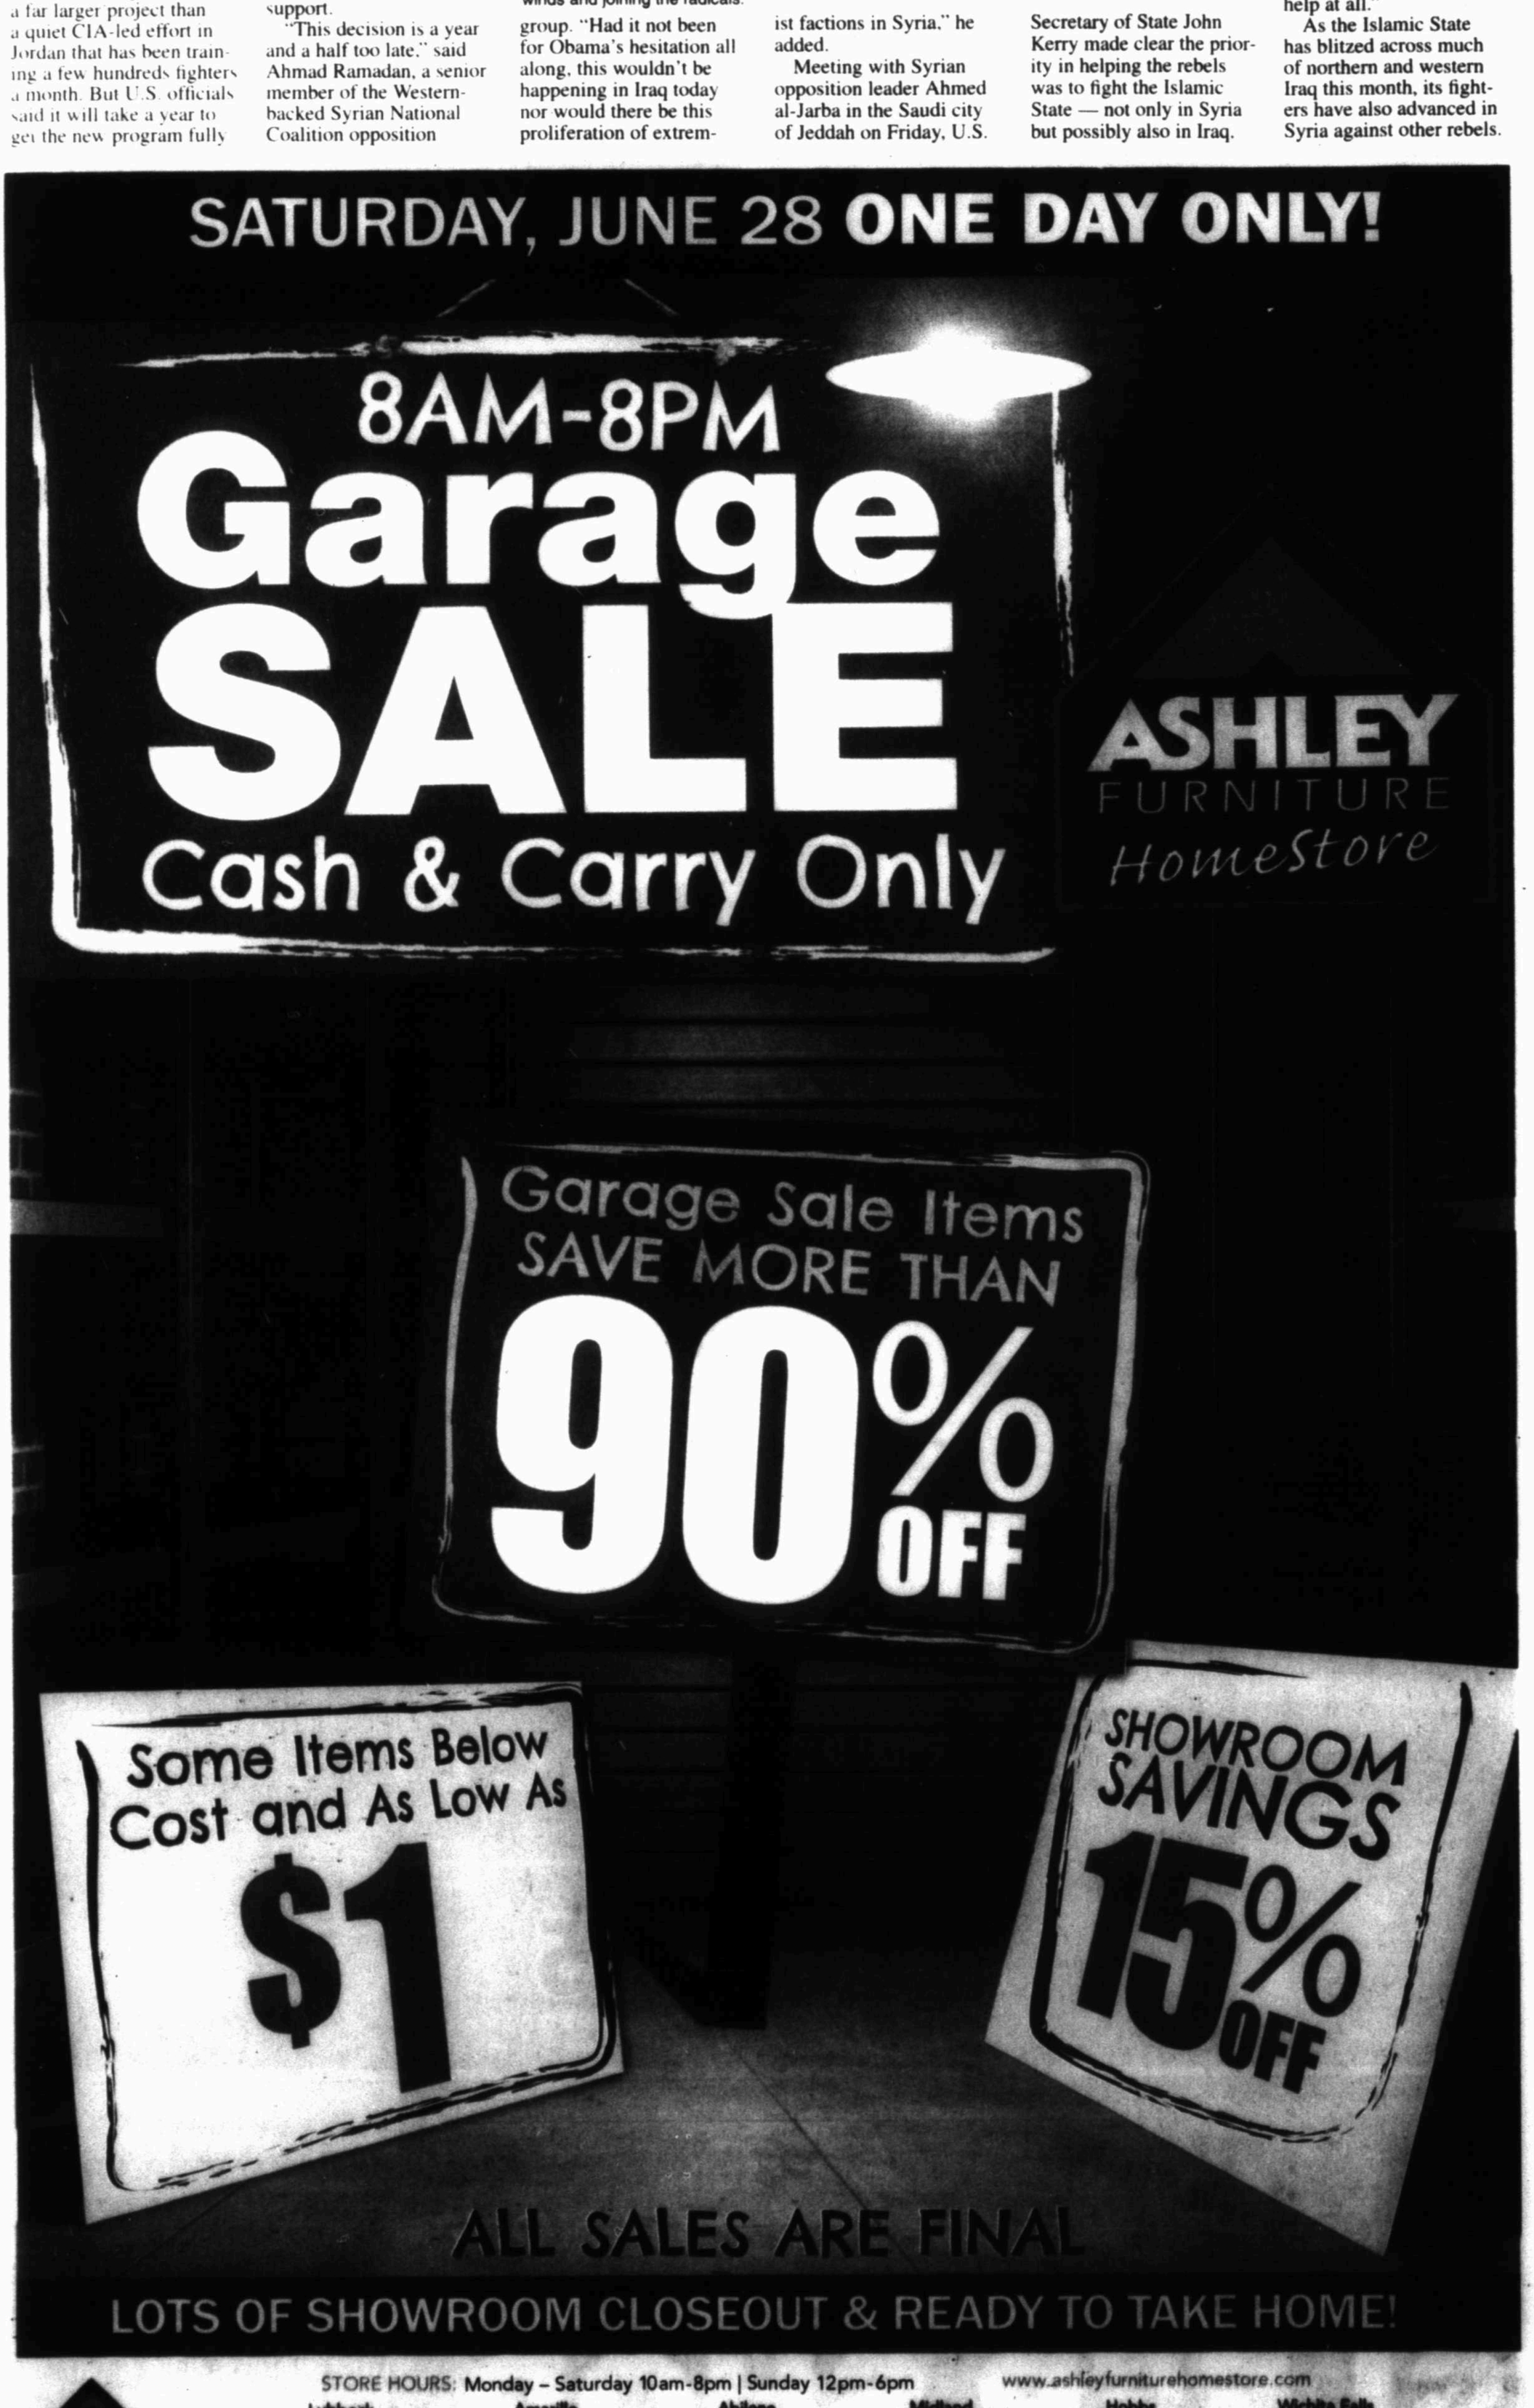
Meeting with Syrian opposition leader Ahmed al-Jarba in the Saudi city of Jeddah on Friday, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry made clear the priority in helping the rebels was to fight the Islamic State — not only in Syria but possibly also in Iraq.

The moderate opposition in Syria "has the ability to be a very important player in pushing back against ISIL's presence and to have them not just in Syria, but also in Iraq," Kerry said.

Al-Jarba, who leads a coalition in exile that only has nominal authority over some rebels on the ground, welcomed the aid and appealed for more. But in Syria, opposition activists were skeptical.

The aid "will only worsen the crisis," said an activist in the northern city of Aleppo, using his nickname Abu Bishr for his own protection. "They want Syria to enter a new war" between rebels and extremists. "This will not help at all."

As the Islamic State has blitzed across much of northern and western Iraq this month, its fighters have also advanced in Syria against other rebels.



US hopes to boost World Cup attack against Belgium

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SAO PAULO — No wonder the United States is having problems scoring at the World Cup: The Americans are hardly attacking.

Coach Jurgen Klinsmann is eager for the U.S. to create more chances in Tuesday's second-round game against Belgium.

The U.S. had just 72 attacks during three group-stage games, according to FIFA. That ranked 31st among the 32 teams, ahead of only Costa Rica's 69.

The Americans were dead last in attacks from the left with 21 and tied for last with Iran with 29 from the center. Right back Fabian Johnson seems to be providing the spark for most forays upfield, advancing more often than left back DaMarcus Beasley.

Midfielder Graham Zusi insists the approach and attitude must change if they are to reach the quarterfinals for the first time since 2002.

"The first minutes of the game, impose yourself, step on their toes a bit, get in their face," he said.

The Americans know they have to surge upfield more often if they hope to reach a quarterfinal against Argentina or Switzerland — a lot more often.

A day after advancing despite a 1-0 loss to Germany in rainy Recife, they worked out at Sao Paulo Futebol Clube, where the temperature on the sunny day peaked at 81 degrees (27 Celsius), 12 (6 Celsius) above normal.

They plan to fly Sunday to Salvador, another beach city on the northeast coast for the matchup against Belgium. The Red Devils, back in soccer's showcase after a 12-year absence, have won three straight World Cup games for the first time with one-goal victories over Algeria, Russia and South Korea. And their 136 attacks are seventh overall and nearly double the American total.

While Klinsmann wants his team to play attractive, attacking soccer, it hasn't worked out that way. The Americans had scored in eight straight World Cup games before getting shut out Thursday.

"It's definitely something that we

'Hounds drop 2nd straight game

Naturals 8
RockHounds 2

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Northwest Arkansas will leave Midland on Friday night feeling just a little bit better after another night where the Naturals' pitching gave the RockHounds fits and the hitters came through.

Northwest Arkansas starter J.C. Sulbaran pitched 6 1/3 innings, giving up one run, and two other Naturals relievers allowed a total of six hits to the RockHounds in an 8-2 victory on Friday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

Meanwhile, the Naturals' offense stayed hot with 14 hits in their second straight win and first series victory of the second half. The first six batters in Northwest Arkansas' lineup were a combined 13-of-26 and drove in seven of the eight runs in the victory.

The Naturals are now 5-4 to start the second half, which is much different from the 2-7 start Northwest Arkansas had to start the season in April. Midland, meanwhile, fell to 5-3 with its second straight loss was tied for first place in the Texas League South Division as San Antonio was tied with Tulsa at press time in extra innings.

"We have a lot of talented guys offensively, and we knew it was just a matter of time before we started rolling," said Naturals leadoff hitter and center fielder Lane Adams, who was 2-for-4 with a double, an RBI and two stolen bases.

All six batters in the top part of lineup had at least two hits as Hunter Dozier and Orlando Calixte each drove in two runs. Dozier drove in two runs in a four-run fifth inning and then Calixte hit a two-run home run to left in the seventh for an 8-0 lead.

"It can be really frustrating and we put a lot of pressure on ourselves," Adams said. "I think that's something offensively, (hitting coach)

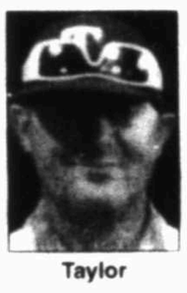
Taylor finds success in Las Vegas at WSOP

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Throughout most of his life, Midland's James Taylor has always had this competitive fire. That seemed to have served him well during his recent run at the World Series of Poker in Las Vegas.

Going into the WSOP, Taylor put a lot of pressure on himself to do well after winning the local Lonestar Poker Tour. Not only did he place 15th and won $21,946, but he also earned the respect of some of the professional poker players playing with him.



Taylor

"At the end of the second day, they were asking me, 'What's your name and where are you from?'" said Taylor, the 37-year-old plumber. "Just earning their respect meant a lot to me."

Taylor won the Lonestar Poker Tour and the $10,000 price on May 15, $5,000 of which must be used during the World Series of Poker, held at the Rio All-Suite Hotel and Casino.

Being also one of the Lonestar Tour directors, Taylor thought to himself, "wouldn't it be great to have someone finally go and do well at the World Series of Poker."

"I had all the confidence going in," he said. "I grew up playing poker and it had been a lifelong dream of mine to play in the World Series of Poker. God blessed me with a chance to get over there.

"I put a lot of pressure on myself to do well. I play softball too, so I expect the best out of myself."

The next step for Taylor was to decide which event he was going to play in. He chose Event 35, which was a three-day no limit hold 'em, eight-handed event with a $5,000 buy-in that began June 16. Taylor said the biggest reason he chose that event was there weren't as many players. The only drawback was that with a $5,000 buy-in, he would be playing with mostly professionals.

But Taylor had that confidence, and next he had to get used to the grind and toll it takes on the body and mind. Taylor said the days playing poker were 12 hours long.

"Patience for me was the biggest key," Taylor said. "I also did a lot of praying. You've got to be physically rested and mentally rested because it only takes you one hand to knock you out of the tournament."

By the end of the first day, he was 18th in chips. Then by the second day he moved up to 16th, but Taylor was Venus Williams reacts during her women's singles match against Petra Kvitova on Friday at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships in Wimbledon, London.

V. Williams out of Wimbledon, Djokovic wins

By Dennis Passa
Associated Press

LONDON — A year that started with another Grand Slam title for Li Na has turned into a major disappointment.

On a day when top-seeded Novak Djokovic had a nasty-looking fall, defending champion Andy Murray easily advanced and five-time champion Venus Williams lost, Australian Open winner Li was eliminated 7-6 (5), 7-6 (5) in the third round by Barbora Zahlavova Strycova in the first major upset at Wimbledon.

At the French Open, where she won her first Grand Slam in 2011, Li was beaten by Kristina Mladenovic of France in the first round. The second-seeded Li, who did not play at any of the grass-court warm-up tournaments over the past two weeks, looked out of sorts for most of the match Friday.

"I think I made a wrong decision, I needed to play some matches before the big one," said Li, who failed to convert a set point in the second set.

Williams lost 5-7, 7-6 (2), 7-5 to 2011 Wimbledon winner Petra Kvitova. The length of the match was no surprise — the sixth-seeded Kvitova, who broke No. 30 Williams for the first time in the last game of the 2 hour, 30-minute match, had won three of the four previous matches and all had gone to three sets.

"I knew that Venus can play unbelievable on the grass and that is what she did," Kvitova said.

Djokovic overcame a hard fall in the third set to advance to the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 Centre Court win over Gilles Simon. Leading 3-2 in the third set and with Simon serving, Djokovic lunged for a forehand shot and fell hard to the grass, rolling over and grabbing his upper left arm and grimacing in pain.

But after taking a medical timeout

Andre (David) has said to take the pressure off the numbers and have more of a balanced approach of hitting the ball hard, and that's helped us out with the second half start."

The only time Sulbaran ran into trouble was in the seventh when the RockHounds loaded the bases with a double from Beau Taylor and back-to-back walks issued to Dusty Coleman and Chad Oberacker.

But reliever Malcolm Culver struck out the next two batters to end the inning. Over the final two games of this week's series, the Naturals totaled the 14 runs and 29 hits. Sulbaran pitched 6 1/3 innings, giving up one run on three hits with five strikeouts and four walks. Culver and Matt Murray combined to give up three hits in 2 2/3 innings and one run and four strikeouts.

"We had a meeting at the start of the second half, it's a new slate and we can forget about the first half and move on. We just want to try to win a series, and we won this series," Adams said.

almost knocked out of the tournament. Taylor said he went all in with pocket kings but ran into pocket aces.

"I lost the hand and it crippled me," Taylor said.

But Taylor regrouped, gave himself a pep talk, and on a later hand he had pocket sixes and went all in. He ended up catching quad sixes and that win helped him get back in the game.

Taylor said by the third day, he was "card dead" and wasn't catching anything to call a blind.

But Taylor, who said he plays poker about five times a week during the winter and splits his time in the summer between softball and poker, was happy of what he accomplished and was proud that he got to go to his first World Series of Poker.

Taylor ended up staying a little while in Las Vegas and played some more poker as he turned $185 into $4,000 in eight hours.

Who knows? Taylor might be making a few more future trips to Las Vegas for the WSOP after last week.

Rangers end 8-game skid

Rangers 5
Twins...................................... 4

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas Rangers manager Ron Washington decided it was time to shake up his lineup a bit.

With a few switches in the batting order, and an impressive performance by young starter Nick Tepesch, the Rangers ended their longest losing streak in nearly nine years.

Adrian Beltre homered and Shin-Soo Choo had three hits in his return to the leadoff spot while Tepesch allowed only three singles over 7 1/3 scoreless innings, and the Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 4-0 on Friday night.

"He was outstanding. We needed a well-pitched game and he gave it to us," said Washington, who liked his lineup. "We'll run the same one out there tomorrow and see what happens."

The Rangers went into the opener of the weekend series mired in its first eight-game losing streak since August 2005.

"It's nice to end any negative streak," said Beltre, who added a sacrifice fly in the eighth that proved to be the margin of victory. "It's one of those things, you don't want to throw any at-bat away."

Minnesota has lost its last nine road games, including a three-game sweep at the Los Angeles Angels before getting to Texas.

The Twins came up short after scoring four runs in the ninth off Texas closer Joakim Soria.

Texas' Rougned Odor (73) and Ron Washington (38) greet Luis Sardinas, top right, at the entrance to the dugout after Sardinas scored on a Shin-Soo Choo double Friday in the fifth inning in Arlington.

making only his second appearance since June 14.

Choo led off for the first time in 18 games while Carlos Pena, in only his fourth game back with the Rangers, took over the No. 3 spot where Choo had hit .149 (10 for 67) since June 7.

And Washington's change paid off immediately when Choo had a leadoff single in the first and scored on Beltre's ninth homer, which just cleared the fence and landed in the Rangers bullpen in right-center field.

"I said earlier that doesn't make a difference. I knew this would happen after the game and I was sure people would ask me about it, but it's not ... I don't think anything changed as far as approach," Choo said about leading off, though he acknowledged that, "I'm a little more comfortable there, I've done it for the last two years."

Tepesch (3-3) struck out five, walked two and hit two batters, while matching his longest major league start. He has won all three of his career starts against the Twins, allowing only three earned runs in 20 2/3 innings.

"Just able to command all four of my pitches, and just commanding them in the zone and out of the zone," Tepesch said.

TIGERS 3, 11 INNINGS

HOUSTON — Jason Castro's solo homer in the 11th inning lifted the Houston Astros to a 4-3 win over Detroit on Friday night to snap the Tigers' seven-game winning streak.

Castro launched a pitch from Blaine Hardy (0-1) into the seats in right field with one out in the 11th to give Houston the victory.

The Tigers tied it when Eugenio Suarez scored on an error in the eighth inning. Jake Buchanan (1-1) pitched a perfect 11th for his first major league win.

Jose Altuve had four hits, an RBI and two steals for the Astros. It was the MLB-leading 33rd multi-hit game this season for Altuve, whose 111 hits lead baseball. He also leads the American League with 32 stolen bases.

BALTIMORE — Nelson Cruz and Nick Hundley homered to back a commanding pitching performance by Chris Tillman, and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Tampa Bay Rays 4-1 on Friday night for a doubleheader split.

In the opener, rookie Alex Colome gave up two hits over 5 2-3 innings and Brandon Guyer hit three doubles to lift Tampa Bay to a 5-2 victory.

Tillman (7-4) gave up one run and four hits over eight innings to earn his first win in seven home starts this season. He was 0-4 with a 2.78 ERA.

Zach Britton got three outs for his 10th save.

Hundley connected in the sixth off Juan Carlos Oviedo (3-3) for a 2-1 lead, and Cruz hit his 25th home run — tied for the major league lead — in the seventh off Joel Peralta after Adam Jones led off with his fourth hit of the game.

YANKEES 6
RED SOX 0

NEW YORK — Vidal Nuno rebounded from two awful starts to pitch two-hit ball into the sixth inning, Kelly Johnson and Brett Gardner hit consecutive homers, and the New York Yankees beat the Boston Red Sox 6-0 on Friday night in the opener of a series between struggling powers.

Brian McCann added a two-run homer for New York, which has won six of the eight meetings with Boston this season.

In his first at-bat as a 40-year-old, Derek Jeter fisted a single to right field with one out in the first. His birthday was on Thursday, the Yankees' final day off before playing 17 straight going into the All-Star break.

After Jacoby Ellsbury doubled, Jeter scored on Mark Teixeira's sacrifice fly off Brandon Workman (1-1) for the early lead. The Yankees captain also singled in the fourth for hit No. 3,390 and went 2 for 4 in New York's second win in six games.

WHITE SOX 5
BLUE JAYS 4

TORONTO — Jose Abreu hit two solo home runs, Alexei Ramirez added a two-run blast and the Chicago White Sox survived a shaky ninth inning to beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4 Friday night for their second win in nine games.

Dayan Viciedo also went deep as the White Sox won for the second time in 12 road games and connected four times off Blue Jays knuckleballer R.A. Dickey (6-7).

Abreu led off the fifth with his 24th home run and began the seventh with his 25th, tying Toronto's Edwin Encarnacion and Baltimore's Nelson Cruz for most in the majors.

Encarnacion also homered, going back-to-back with Dioner Navarro in the sixth, but that was all the Blue Jays would manage against left-hander John Danks (7-6), who won for the fourth time in five starts.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Omar Infante capped a seven-run inning with his first career grand slam, and the Kansas City Royals held on to beat the Los Angeles Angels 8-6 on a rough Friday night for starting pitchers.

Jason Vargas and Angels counterpart Matt Shoemaker (5-2) combined to give up 14 runs on 20 hits — four of them home runs. Neither got an out in the fifth inning.

Michael Mariot (1-0) picked up with his first career win with 1 1/3 innings of relief, and Greg Holland earned his 23rd save by tossing a perfect ninth.

Salvador Perez had three hits while Lorenzo Cain, Billy Butler and Alex Gordon each drove in a run for Kansas City, which ended the Angels' six-game winning streak despite limping into the series having lost six of seven.

CHICAGO — Light-hitting catcher John Baker had three hits, a walk and four RBI, and Chicago Cubs starter Jason Hammel again mastered the Washington Nationals in a 7-2 victory Friday.

Baker capped his big day with a bases-loaded, three-run double off reliever Jerry Blevins in the seventh inning. He entered the game with a .160 batting average in 35 games. With the four RBIs, he doubled his season total to eight. He also had four RBIs against the Nationals on Sept. 4, 2009, in Washington.

Chris Coghlan, Justin Ruggiano and Ryan Sweeney each had a pair of hits in the 13-hit attack to help the Cubs win for the 21st time in their last 38 games.

Hammel (7-5) allowed two runs on five hits and one walk in 6 1-3 innings en route to his seventh victory in seven decisions against the Nationals.

Washington's Tanner Roark (7-5) allowed four runs in six innings to take the loss. The University of Illinois product had won his previous four starts, in which he did not allow more than two runs.

BRAVES 4
PHILLIES 2

PHILADELPHIA — Freddie Freeman homered, doubled and drove in all four Atlanta runs to back Julio Teheran's strong pitching and lead the Braves over the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2 Friday night.

Teheran (7-5) allowed two runs — one earned — and six hits in seven innings. He struck out nine, walked none and retired his final seven batters for Atlanta, which had lost six of 10 beginning with Philadelphia's three-game sweep at Turner Field last week.

Craig Kimbrel pitched a scoreless ninth for his 23rd save in 27 chances.

Ben Revere had three hits, including a triple, for the Phillies, who have lost five of seven.

PITTSBURGH — Josh Harrison doubled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets on Friday night.

Jordy Mercer hit a two-run single for the Pirates (41-39), who moved two games above .500 for the first time since April 10. They have won the first two games of the four-game series.

BREWERS 3
ROCKIES 2

MILWAUKEE — Ryan Braun was hit by a pitch in the seventh inning that scored a run and had an RBI single in the ninth, lifting the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-2 win over the Colorado Rockies on Friday night.

Mark Reynolds led off the ninth with a single off reliever Matt Belisle (2-3) and advanced on a sacrifice by Jean Segura. Scooter Gennett pinch hit for Francisco Rodriguez (3-2) and was intentionally walked. The runners advanced on a passed ball by catcher Michael McKenry. After Rickie Weeks went down swinging, Braun drilled Belisle's first pitch up the middle.

Josh Reddick's two-out RBI triple tied the game in the eighth, and Oakland scored four times in the ninth off Marlins closer Steve Cishek (4-3).

Crisp singled to start the ninth and took second on Alberto Callaspo's single. When Yoenis Cespedes followed with a single, right fielder Giancarlo Stanton made a strong throw home, and Crisp was ruled out at the plate.

IndyCar looks for rebound at GP of Houston

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Moments after Dario Franchitti's career-ending crash on the last lap of the Grand Prix of Houston, race promoter Mike Lanigan went to the accident scene to see the damage firsthand.

The three-time Indianapolis 500 winner fractured two vertebrae and broke his right ankle when his car went airborne into a fence last October. The spectacular crash showered debris into the grandstand, injuring 13 fans and an IndyCar Series official.

"I went out there within minutes and I sat on the wall and I said, 'What in God's name I am doing in this business?'" Lanigan said Friday. "But then I said after a while how fortunate we were — that's a racing incident and we've been in the business long enough to understand that. But it was still shocking. It's still depressing."

Lanigan, who brought racing back to the temporary street course at Reliant Park last year for the first time since 2007, had a difficult weekend in IndyCar's return last year.

Because his group couldn't access to the course until the week of the race because the Houston Texans were using the area, no one was aware of a bump in the track surface until opening day and it ultimately altered the championship race. Track workers had to erect a temporary chicane to keep cars from launching over the bump, then work overnight trying to grind it down.

In the end, everything that could go wrong for points leader Helio Castroneves did, and his shot at the championship slipped away during the doubleheader weekend. Adding salt to the wound, Castroneves sponsor Shell Pennzoil was the title sponsor of the race.

Then came Sunday's accident, and Lanigan, a part owner in Rahal Letterman Lanigan Racing, was devastated.

"After the smoke cleared a month or two after the race, we said, 'If this ever happens again, we want to make sure that nobody gets hurt,'" he said.

The fence that Franchitti hit has been fortified, and the grandstands where fans were seated and hit with debris were removed. All told, Lanigan estimated $700,000 was spent on safety improvements.

Past winners, contenders aim to solve bumpy track

By Gary B. Graves
Associated Press

SPARTA, Ky. — NASCAR drivers won't be shocked if Kentucky Speedway's fourth Sprint Cup Series race yields a repeat winner or new face spraying champagne in victory lane.

Either scenario could happen with past winners Kyle Busch and Brad Keselowski trying to strengthen their bids for more success in Saturday night's 400-miler by running companion series races this weekend. Keselowski earned the pole with a track-record speed of 188.791 mph in a Ford; Busch will start 18th.

Defending race champion Matt Kenseth, meanwhile, seeks to repeat the magic and earn his first win this season. He must start from 14th place but said Friday that past success "certainly gives you more confidence when you come back and you've won somewhere."

Then there is reigning series champion Jimmie Johnson, points leader Jeff Gordon, Kurt Busch and Martin Truex Jr., who have posted multiple top 10s on the 1.5-mile-track and aim to finally close the deal. All are hungry to find the right setup, timing and luck to solve the tough, bumpy track.

"I like (Kentucky) because it's a challenging race track and I like a good challenge," said Gordon, who was eighth last year and will start third Saturday. "Our cars have been good here the last few times, so if I feel like we have a shot at winning I usually like that track."

Johnson dominated last June's race, leading 182 laps, and was poised to overtake Kenseth on a late restart before a spin racing four-wide run dropped him from second to ninth. Kenseth's went on to his fourth win of the season despite taking fuel only on his last stop.

Johnson said he has changed his restart procedure to deal with the guessing games. And with a sparkling Kentucky record highlighted by three top-five starts including the 2012 pole and three top-10 finishes, the six-time Cup champion believes he's due to break through.

"We've been close," said Johnson, who starts 25th. "It's just on that last run; varying mistakes have kept us from going to victory lane. We've had a car capable of winning; I think two of them, at least. I'm not sure about the third. So, it's just executing in that final run."

Here are a couple of Things to Watch Saturday night at Kentucky Speedway:

BUMPY RIDE: Kentucky Speedway has hyped its rough surface in TV ads and some drivers believe it might be the circuit's roughest. "It's definitely a jolt, because you're hitting concrete every time you through holes on the front stretch," said rookie Austin Dillon, who has two Nationwide Series wins at the track. "I just try to get the car to turn through 'em."

SMALLER FIELD: Few spectators may notice or care that "just" 42 cars will start, one less than the standard grid. That hasn't happened since 2001 at New Hampshire.

A short return for Tiger Woods at Congressional

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — Tiger Woods never felt so good after playing so badly.

Taking two shots to escape a plugged lie in a bunker put him a hole. Four straight bogeys on the back nine Friday in the Quicken Loans National buried his chances of making it to the weekend. Over two rounds at Congressional, he missed 16 greens and managed to save par only three times.

Woods was back — just not for very long.

Playing for the first time in more than three months because of back surgery, he had a 4-over 75 on Friday and missed the cut by four shots. It was only the 10th time in his PGA Tour career that Woods missed a 36-hole cut, and the first time he didn't sound overly distressed.

"I hate to say it, but I'm really encouraged by what happened this week," Woods said. "I missed the cut by four shots — that's a lot. But the fact that what I was able to do physically, and the speed I had and the distance that I was hitting the golf ball again, I had not done that in a very long time. Felt great today. Then, as I said, I made so many little mistakes ... all the little things that I know I can fix. But as I said, that's very encouraging."

And it wasn't all that surprising.

Woods had played only four tournaments this year while coping with an increasingly sore back, which led him to have surgery March 31 and miss the first two majors. He had hoped to return for the British Open next month. Instead, he felt strong enough to play the Quicken Loans National, primarily because it benefits his foundation and Woods figured he needed to get in a little competition before going to Royal Liverpool.

Even it if was only two rounds.

"I came back four weeks earlier than we thought I could," Woods said. "I had no setbacks. I got my feel for playing tournament golf."

Carrot and stick needed to change Suarez

JOHN LEICESTER

Associated Press

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil —

How is it that soccer players are among the few who've not had much to say about the bite seen around the world, now punished with an appropriately tough ban?

Luis Suarez's peers surely can't all be fearful that he might chomp them next if they voice an opinion about his penchant for man-flesh. Some of his teammates and his latest victim, Giorgio Chiellini, told their (conflicting) sides of this bizarre story.

But other players are too busy trying to win the World Cup to worry themselves with the Uruguay striker, what soccer should do about him and whether the punishment FIFA meted out Thursday fits his crime. Their broad silence, punctuated by few exceptions, has been deafening when the rest of planet football talked and tweeted up a storm about Suarez fanging the Italian defender's shoulder and now being sent home.

FIFA, a deserved target for criticism on so many other levels, did well with its swift, measured justice in this case. Excluding the man-toddler from the rest of the World Cup means soccer can get back to focusing on the fabulous play at its showcase tournament and less on Suarez's psyche and need of a pacifier/muzzle.

Instead of blindly closing ranks, trying to defend the indefensible and pretending he is the victim of a conspiracy, now is the time for teammates and Uruguay officials to sit in a semi-circle around Suarez and one after the other explain how he is letting them and himself down. Peer pressure might be more effective than simple punishment in moderating his behavior. They could help themselves by helping him stop ruining what should be a glorious career, given his skills with a ball.

FIFA's four-month ban from "any kind of (soccer)-related activity," fitting given his history as a repeat offender, plus a nine-match international ban should hopefully have the smelling-salts effect of hurting Suarez's income.

Smart sponsors should cut him off as they eventually did with Lance Armstrong. If they don't, then, by association, they are encouraging his behavior. Buyers who've sniffed around Liverpool to test whether the club will part with the Premier League's top scorer last season also should look elsewhere. Handing over millions for Suarez now would make them complicit and allow him to believe that club bosses don't care if he bites opponents just so long as he beats them.

But Liverpool should both publicly condemn and stand by Suarez, as it did in the past, and again show that its motto — "You'll never walk alone" — means just that. Educate Suarez by offering him a carrot to go with the sting of FIFA's stick. Make Liverpool's support conditional on him accepting counselling and understanding his behavior from his victims' perspective.

If he hasn't already, he should be made to meet with Otman Bakkal, Branislav Ivanovic and now Chiellini to hear how unpleasant it was to feel his teeth sink into their bodies. Liverpool should do all this to show that soccer doesn't tolerate bad behavior but also won't tolerate leaving players alone with their demons. Ostracizing Suarez would feed mob cravings for a hanging but alone won't save this conflicted talent.

Understandably, players have cut themselves off to minimize distractions in Brazil. Distractions don't come any bigger than man eats man. A standard reaction when asked about Suarez was that of Mamadou Sakho: the France defender and Suarez's Liverpool teammate laughed, motioned to zip up his mouth and walked away.

"I saw what happened. I think everybody has seen it by now," Brazil midfielder Willian said before FIFA announced its punishment. "But it's not up to us to judge him. There are other people who will do that. We have to keep focused on the national team and on our match against Chile. We can't think about anything else."

Modern soccer players are a disenfranchised lot, spoken for in the sport's corridors of power by retired players, bureaucrats and mostly older men. It would be wrong to think that soccer players don't have an opinion. But most aren't asked or paid for them until after they've retired and become media pundits, and some truly won't care. Some won't see Suarez's behavior or anything beyond winning the next game as being their business.

Among the few active players to express an opinion was Brazil striker Fred. He acknowledged that Suarez "made a mistake" but called FIFA's punishment "too severe." Chiellini on Friday also called the punishment "excessive" and "really alienating for a player."

"On the field, players are on the edge, there's tension, everyone is fighting for space," Fred said. "I've talked to some people and most think it was fair, but in my opinion it wasn't, because it's a punishment that can end a player's life (career)."

Soccer players have shown they care about other issues in their workplace. When Brazil's Dani Alves was racially taunted by a banana-throwing spectator this season, other players expressed solidarity by posting pictures of themselves eating bananas. Now players should tweet pictures of themselves with plastic Dracula fangs to show that on-pitch violence bothers them, too.

They should speak out on Suarez, on biting, stamping, spitting, match-fixing and any other intolerable behavior by one player against another. They should become guardians, not mere bystanders, of a code of acceptable behavior in their profession. Tell Suarez publicly and privately, and any other out of control players who forget this is a game, not war, that enough is enough.

By doing so, perhaps they'll help save Suarez, too.

learned out of the Germany game. We were too deep — especially the first 20 minutes," Klinsmann said. "I was screaming my lungs off there to get the back line out and to move the entire unit high up the field. We will work on that in next couple days in training, to shift our entire game up forward. So that will put more pressure on the opponents and create more chances."

The U.S. had 41 percent possession in its 2-1 win over Ghana, 48 percent in its 2-2 draw against Portugal and 37 percent versus Germany. The Americans have been outshot 54-27 in the three matches.

And this had occurred in a World Cup in which offense is up. There were an average of 2.83 goals per game in the group stage, up 35 percent from 2.10 in South Africa four years ago and the highest in the initial phase since 1958's 3.37, according to STATS.

Jozy Altidore, the top American forward, has been sidelined since straining his left hamstring in the first half against Ghana. Klinsmann said "we are optimistic we have him being a part of the Belgium game" but didn't go into detail on Altidore's recovery. Altidore looked strong running laps, then stretched on the sideline under the direction of medical staff.

In the last two games, Klinsmann opted for a 4-2-3-1 formation with five midfielders to feed Clint Dempsey as the lone striker.

Thus far, the U.S. has had just four solo runs into the penalty area, in a four-way tie for 27th, and the formation frequently morphs into a 4-4-1-1.

"We have to bring up the players higher up and create chances get more support for Clint and come down the line more often on the sides," Klinsmann said. "This is something we will work on in the next few days."

While midfielder Michael Bradley hasn't been at his sharpest, he was the endurance-man of the first round, leading all players with 23.6 miles (38 kilometers) covered.

"He is all over the place. The defensive work that Michael puts in is absolutely outstanding," Klinsmann said. "We know that he can add something extra to it going forward. He also needs to help with the team by shifting higher up. If we can get Michael more into that role behind Clint, I think we are even more dangerous then. So there is more to come."

US midfielder Jones has broken nose, as expected

By Janie McCauley

Associated Press

SAO PAULO — U.S. midfielder Jermaine Jones has a broken nose after Thursday's game against Germany, but remains available to play in the round of 16 against Belgium on Tuesday in Salvador.

U.S. Soccer Federation spokesman Michael Kammarman said Friday that Jones and fellow midfielder Alejandro Bedoya each were checked on the field for concussion symptoms during the 1-0 loss at Recife following their second-half collision, and three more times since then. There were no issues for either player so far.

The team arrived back to its Sao Paulo hotel at 11 p.m. Thursday night, and Bedoya and Jones were examined again Friday morning.

Jones won't wear a protective mask and the fracture hasn't caused discoloration in the area.

"I don't remember really what happened. I went for a header," Jones said. "The feeling was that it was broken."

Kammarman added that Jones' injury doesn't appear serious, as there is no visible bruising of the like forward Clint Dempsey had when he broke his nose in the Ghana game.

Canada again No. 1 in NBA draft

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Seems basketball is making inroads on hockey up north.

For the second straight year a native of Canada was the overall No. 1 pick in the NBA draft by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Andrew Wiggins of Kansas was taken first on Thursday night. Last year, Anthony Bennett of UNLV, like Wiggins a native of Ontario, was taken No. 1 by the Cavaliers.

Wiggins was the 11th international player to be selected No. 1 overall and the third in the last four years. Kyrie Irving, a native of Australia who played at Duke, was the No. 1 overall in 2011, again by Cleveland.

Wiggins was one of four international players selected in the lottery. Kansas teammate Joel Embiid, a native of Cameroon, was taken No. 3 by Philadelphia, while Dante Exum of Australia was selected No. 5 by Utah. Nik Stauskas, a native of Canada who played at Michigan, was taken No. 8 by Sacramento and Dario Saric of Croatia was taken 12th by Orlando.

There were 10 international players taken in the first round, tied with 2011 for the second-most ever behind the 12 last season.

Last year there were three international players taken in the lottery, Bennett, No. 12 Steve Adams of New Zealand, who played at Pittsburgh, and No. 13 Kelly Olynyk of Canada, who played at Gonzaga.

WIMBLEDON

and receiving treatment by a trainer, he recovered to play out the final four games of the match, breaking Simon's serve in the final game, his seventh break in the match.

"I basically had a strong impact on the shoulder," Djokovic said. "When I stood up, I felt that click or pop. I feared maybe it might be a dislocated shoulder ... or joint problem.

"But luckily for me it was only an impact that had a minor effect on the joint and the muscles around, but no damage, significant, that can cause a bigger problem. I just came from the doctor's office, ultrasound. It's all looking good."

Djokovic will next play Jo-Wilfried Tsonga, who beat Jimmy Wang of Taiwan 6-2, 6-2, 7-5, in the fourth round on Monday.

"There is two days off, I'm going to try to recover and get ready," Djokovic said.

Murray, playing the last match on Centre Court, beat Roberto Bautista Agut of Spain 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 and hasn't dropped a set this tournament. He has a 16-match winning streak at the All England Club incorporating his London Olympics win in 2012 and last year's title run.

Grigor Dimitrov of Bulgaria, Leonardo Mayer of Argentina and Jeremy Chardy of France also advanced to the second week.

In a second-round men's match carried over from Thursday due to rain, 2013 semifinalist Jerzy Janowicz of Poland beat Australian veteran Lleyton Hewitt 7-5, 6-4, 6-7 (7), 4-6, 6-3.

Hewitt broke the Open era record for the most five-set matches played at Grand Slam tournaments. The loss to Janowicz was his 42nd five-set match, breaking the mark of 41 he had shared with Andre Agassi.

Zahlavova Strycova called her win over Li the biggest of her career.

"When you go on court you have to believe in yourself," the 43rd-ranked Zahlavova Strycova said. "I thought I could do it and I was pushing myself a lot."

The Czech player thought she had won the match and went to the net to shake Li's hand after a forehand was called out. But Li challenged the call and the ball was ruled in, continuing the match — until Li double-faulted on match point.

No. 4 seed Agnieszka Radwanska beat Michelle Larcher de Brito of Portugal 6-2, 6-0. French Open finalist Simona Halep and former No. 1 Caroline Wozniacki advanced earlier after rain delayed the start of play for about 30 minutes.

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17 and a junior in high school. My family has recently been hit with hard times. We lost our home and are living in a motel, and I am struggling with depression. I haven't attended school since last September. However, I am feeling well enough to the point where I'd like to start attending school again.

I would be willing to take more than six periods and, if necessary, I would be willing to attend summer school. I want to graduate from high school, but I don't know if that's possible.

My mother has never been OK with any decisions I have made, so I don't know how to tell her. I don't want to disappoint her, but I do want to do this. Any advice you are willing to give would be appreciated! — ANONYMOUS GIRL

DEAR GIRL: You are clearly an intelligent young woman, and your determination to finish school is something that should be supported by all of the adults in your life. If possible, go back to the school you were attending and talk with a counselor or the principal about your family's circumstances — including your struggle with depression. Whether you can resume studies at your former school may depend upon whether the motel you're staying in is within the district. But a counselor should be able to help you to transfer if that becomes necessary.

I wish you the best of luck. Your mother should be proud of you because I certainly am.

DEAR ABBY: I am pregnant with my third child. There has been a large gap between baby No. 2 and baby No. 3. With my second child, my husband and I were just starting out and used hand-me-downs. But now we are established and can purchase items to suit our preferences.

Many well-meaning family members and friends have started inundating us with hand-me-downs (some ask first; others are just dropping things off). I really don't want any of these items. However, I don't want to seem ungrateful or rude because the well-wishers seem so excited to give me these things. The way I was raised, I have a hard time turning down offers such as these. How do I kindly tell these people I don't want their hand-me-downs? — CONFLICTED IN PHILLY

DEAR CONFLICTED: Thank the donors warmly for their thoughtfulness and generosity and say you already have all the things you need for the new baby. You don't necessary have to allude to the fact they are "hand-me-downs." If the person insists on giving them to you anyway, donate them to a charity, such as a homeless shelter. (Warning: To avoid possible hurt feelings, do NOT include them in a yard sale.)

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 28, 2014:

This year you will be more dynamic than you've been in the past. Your personal life will take priority. Some of you will be in a position to buy a new home after July. You are likely to see a pay raise head your way this year. If you are single, others find you to be extremely attractive. You have to sort out who you would enjoy relating to and who offers you what you need. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy your life together more and more if you remember to be more sensitive to each other. Re-enact one of your first dates together in order to add more romance to the mix. A fellow CANCER is as temperamental as you are!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You might want to understand more of what triggers excitement and unpredictability in your life. If you enjoy this element of the unexpected in your life, then do not worry about it. Your stability comes forth in these situations. Tonight: Happy at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ If someone repeatedly seeks the same response, understand that he or she is testing you. You'll gain unexpected insights, though you could be quite frustrated by this situation. A new beginning becomes possible later on. Tonight: Catch up on a loved one's happenings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You might consider an alternative approach to a situation, especially as you see what is happening on a different level. A child or new friend could become quite rebellious. Try to maintain a more centered, quiet approach with this person. Tonight: Ever playful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You could feel tired and pushed to the max. Just the same, you seem to be more stable than you normally are. You have the ability to be direct in how you handle situations and people. A family member could be on the warpath. Tonight: Say "yes" to a pleasing offer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★ Know when you need to move in a new direction; however, keep your thoughts to yourself for now. You might want to accomplish a lot on your own. If an irate friend or loved one shows up, stay cool. Nothing will be gained by getting angry. Tonight: Choose personal and quiet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You could be more confused than you realize. You suddenly might be able to turn a situation around, no matter how unsure you are about your choices. You know what is acceptable, and you won't opt for anything less. Tonight: Where your friends are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Tension builds to a new level, where you easily could feel like a firecracker. Be conservative with your funds, no matter how great an idea might seem. Remain optimistic about a decision you have yet to make. Just give yourself time. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Take news with a grain of salt. You might feel very upbeat right now, and that will encourage a positive response. Check out the details and facts of a situation before you give the OK. Be as clear as possible with others. Tonight: Opt to be entertained.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might want to see a situation evolve to where you can relate on a one-on-one level with a friend. You could be low on energy, yet your intuition will tell you to act anyway. You might be amazed at how good you feel once you make a move. Tonight: All smiles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Defer to others, and try to get a better sense of direction. The unexpected might occur with a partner, whether you like it or not. A disagreement could evolve out of the blue with someone who is essential to your community involvement. Tonight: Go with a loved one's suggestion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You might want to listen to feedback from someone who is far more serious than you are. You could disagree, but this person will enlighten you about other styles and ways of handling a situation. Consider a trip in the near future. Tonight: Invite friends over.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You could discover that someone has been holding back and not sharing some of his or her negative feelings. You might be the recipient of the sum total. Be diplomatic, and back away, for now. Have a discussion once the waters are calm. Tonight: Kick up your heels. Be a kid again.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING
FAIRGROUNDS ROAD WIDENING
FROM PECAN AVENUE TO LOOP 250

The City of Midland will hold a public meeting to discuss the proposed improvements to Fairgrounds Road from Pecan Avenue (Ave) to Loop 250 in the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas. There will be no formal presentation. The public meeting will be held in an open house format on:

Thursday, July 10, 2014
6:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.
MLK Community Center
2300 Butternut Lane, Midland, TX 79705

The proposed project would widen Fairgrounds Rd. from two lanes to five lanes, from Pecan Ave to Loop 250, a distance of approximately one mile. The proposed project would provide a continuous five-lane roadway from Business Interstate (BI) 20 to Loop 250.

The proposed project is needed to address existing traffic congestion and increasing traffic volumes due to commercial and residential development along Fairgrounds Road. The project will also address the lack of pedestrian access between neighborhoods and parks along the roadway.

The purpose of this project is to improve traffic circulation by providing a continuous five-lane operation between BI 20 and Loop 250, and to enhance pedestrian access by providing a pedestrian path along a portion of the roadway.

Maps and drawings reflecting the proposed build alternative will be displayed at the public meeting. This and other information about the proposed project will be available beginning July 8, 2014, for public inspection at the City of Midland, Engineering Office, 300 North Loraine, Midland, TX 79701.

Verbal and written comments relative to the proposed build alternative may be presented at the meeting. All written comments must be submitted by 5:00 p.m., July 24, 2014, to Mr. Jose Ortiz, P.E., City of Midland, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, TX 79702, in order to be included in the public meeting record.

Persons interested in attending the public meeting who have special communication needs or require physical accommodations are encouraged to contact Shellie Mitchell at 432-685-7287 at least three (3) working days prior to the public meeting. The City will make every reasonable effort to accommodate these needs.

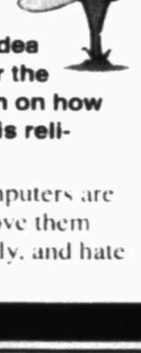
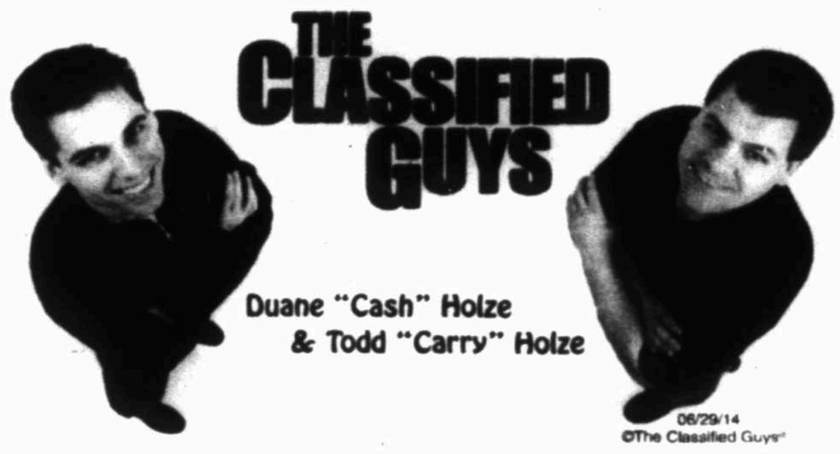
Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
These electronic gizmos today change faster than I can keep up with them. I consider myself pretty good, but even basic computers can be very complicated. I read my email, shop online and do all my banking electronically, but when my computer begins acting up, I just don't know what to do. I used to call my son for help, but he moved away and now I'm on my own. Most recently my PC started doing all sorts of weird things. I ran some of the antivirus programs that came with the computer and deleted all of my junk files, but something else must be wrong with it. I'm considering calling an ad I found in the business service section of the newspaper. It sounded like a person who repairs PC's on the side as a second job. To be honest, I think it's like taking my car to a mechanic. I have no idea what he's doing under the hood. Any suggestion on how to hire someone who is reliable?



Carry: Cars and computers are very much alike. We love them when they work properly, and hate them when they don't.



Cash: Fortunately, computers don't have to run on gas. Otherwise, telecommuting could be as costly as driving to work!

Carry: Nowadays the hardware and software of computers can be very confusing for most people. And since almost every home has at least one computer, it's spawned a whole new industry of computer helpers to keep them all running.

Cash: Today even major store chains offer computer services like the one you found in the classified section. Most of these services come directly to your home to help, so you can monitor what they're doing and often learn a few things from them as well.

Carry: As with hiring anyone from the classifieds or other source of advertising, you can always ask for references and talk with previous customers until you're comfortable with the idea of using their services.

Cash: The great part about selecting someone from an ad like this is that if you need ongoing help, you know you'll always get the same person. While hiring them can be a little unnerving at first, the relationship you develop can go a long way since electronics change so quickly.

Carry: And who knows, if all goes well, the technician may just seem like a second son to you!

Fast Facts

Age of Electronics

Most homes today have a wealth of technology in them. However most of those advances, from the television to the home computer, are less than a generation old. Microsoft Windows software was created in 1985, only a year after the first Apple Macintosh computer. The high definition television, developed in 1989, is now the industry standard. Even the programming protocol for the World Wide Web that we use everyday was only developed in 1990. It just makes you wonder what could happen by the next generation.

Syntax Service

When the first personal computer was released in 1975, it sold only a few thousand units to enthusiasts. Today, it's estimated that more than 130 million computers are sold annually. This growth eventually yields a lot of computers that need repair. Into the late 1990's, computer manufacturers held almost 80% of the repair market. However today, repair services can be found everywhere including most large retail chain stores.

Cost to Upgrade

The other day our branch office got together for our monthly sales meeting. As we sat at the conference table, one of the salesmen, Fred, pulled out his new laptop with its 19" widescreen and started to take notes. Immediately, some of the guys into tech gadgets were in awe of its sleek design, thin profile and quick speed.

While Fred was typing away, one of the guys leaned over and asked him how he liked his new laptop.

Continuing to finish his notes, he replied, "It's kind of similar to my second wife." Pausing and looking up at us, he continued, "I love it, but I find myself spending too much of my paycheck on accessories."
