Response Withheld To Apparent Missile Firing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration withheld a response today to North Korea's apparent firing of a surface-to-air missile in the vicinity of a high-altitude U.S. spy plane.

President Reagan was described as "concerned" about Wednesday's incident, which came a week after U.S. jets shot down two attacking Libyan planes during Navy maneuvers in disputed Mediterranean waters off the cost of Libya.

In Seoul, the U.N. military command called today for a meeting of the Military Armistice Command that oversees the truce between North and South Korea. It was not known, however, if the missile incident would be the subject.

The missile missed by miles, and the Reagan administration stopped short of flatly accusing the North Koreans of shooting at the Air Force SR-71 "Blackbird" reconnaissance plane.

The Pentagon and the State Department were evaluating the circumstances to determine how the United States should respond.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "the missile was so far away we are still treating it as an apparent incident." He did not elaborate.

Details of the incident were sketchy a day later. It remained unclear early today whether the missile was aimed at the U.S. plane and exactly where it originated, government sources said.

The Pentagon said the plane was on a "routine mission" in South Korean and international air space when the crew "reported sighting a contrail and subsequent air burst several miles distant."

There were no injuries to American crewmen, and the plane landed safely, officials said.

"If a missile was launched, it could have originated from any one of a number of missile sites in North Korea," the Pentagon statement said.

State Department spokesman Rush Taylor issued a similarly worded statement that substituted the words "north of the demilitarized zone" for "in North Korea."

Taylor said the possibly of a U.S. response was "currently being evaluated."

Voyager 2 Repaired

Pasadena, Calif. AP--An electronic swat sent from a billion miles away freed the stuck camera on Voyager 2, and scientists were trying to find out today if the ship can get back to the business of looking at distant worlds.

A weary flight engineer accidentally sent an incorrect computer command to Voyager late Tuesday, telling it to move its jammed platform with a forward rotation 10 times greater than previous orders designed to free the platform. The mistake did the trick, freeing a vital camera platform that had been stuck for nearly a day.

Peace Appeal Issued

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Criticizing both Solidarity and the government, Poland's Roman Catholic primate appealed for "30 days of peace and work" to ease the nation's political and economic crises.

Taking both sides to task for the turmoil wracking Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp said Wednesday that each has been "declaring its innocence and pointing out the mistakes, guilt and sins of the other."

"Let's inform each other honestly and avoid unnecessary bitterness and irritation," said the spiritual leader of Poland's 33 million Catholics. He spoke in Czestochowa, southern Poland, at ceremonies honoring the 599th anniversary of the shrine of the Black Madonna, Poland's most revered religious symbol.

Panda Still Isolated

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Five weeks after its birth, the only living panda bred normally in captivity is still leading a sheltered existence, isolated with its mother in an air-conditioned cage and kept away from a multitude of Mexican admirers.

On a closed-circuit TV screen at Mexico City's Chapultepec Zoo, the tiny creature born July 21 looks somewhat like a big white rat. It has grown to 2 pounds 10 ounces, 12 times its weight at birth, and is just over a foot long. But still unable to walk or open its eyes, it lives on its belly, nurses every hour, and struggles futilely twice a day to stand up.

"La Cria is growing normally and doing fine," said Dr. Gabino Vazquez, the zoo's administrator.

La Cria, which means suckling in Spanish, is what the caretakers are calling their baby until the Mexican government decides on a name.

Airline Suspends Service

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International is suspending service to seven U.S. cities and increasing flights on other routes as part of a plan to revamp the financially ailing airline, company officials announced.

The flight restructuring, which company sources say should make Braniff a more formidable competitor in Texas and the Southwest, suspends service to Atlanta; New York; Boston; Hartford, Conn.; Phoenix; Tucson, Ariz. and Salt Lake City, company officials announced Wednesday.

Nuclear Plant Plans Scrapped

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — The controversial Bailly Nuclear I power plant planned for the Indiana shores of Lake Michigan has been scrapped after a decade of legal and regulatory battles that sent the estimated cost of the project skyrocketing.

Northern Indiana Public Service Co. announced the cancellation Wednesday. In a statement, company Chairman Edmond A. Schroer blamed the move on the long legal fight, saying that during 10 years of litigation the plant's estimated cost jumped from $187 million to $1.8 billion.

$67 Million Spent Here 1st Quarter

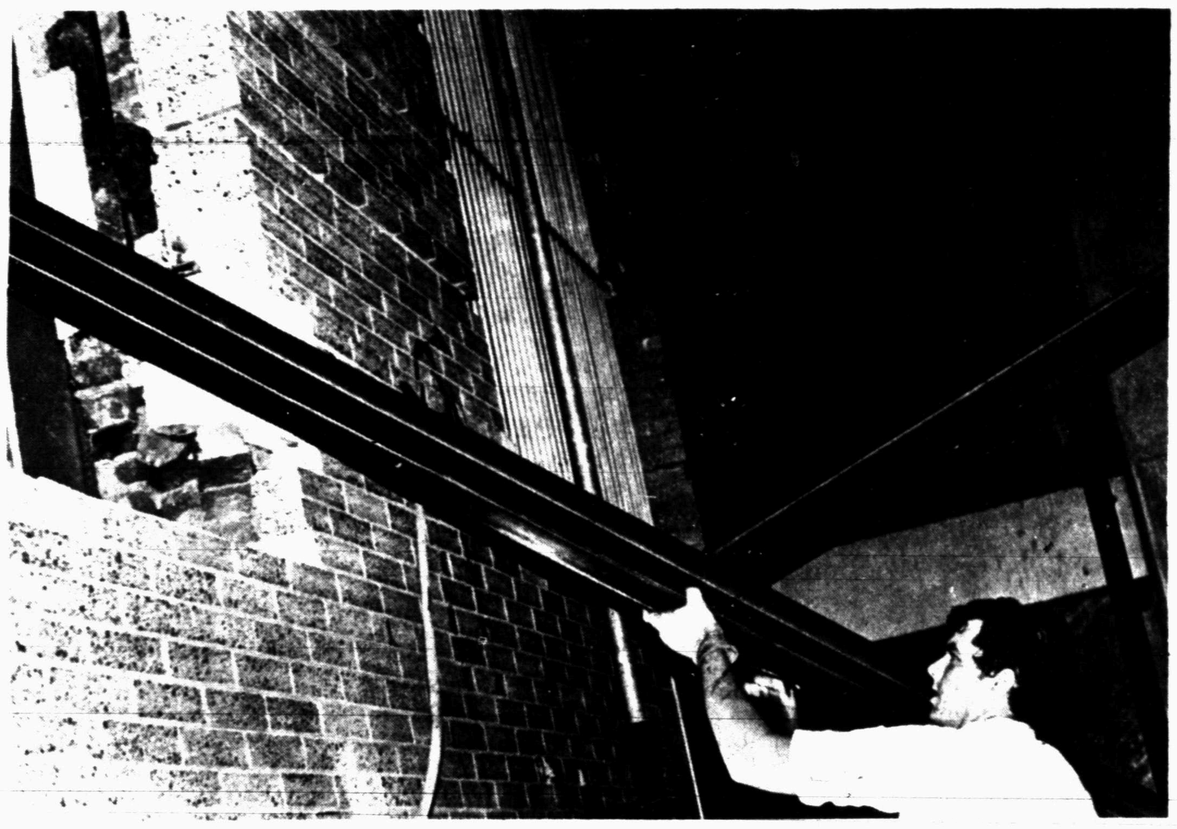
Gross sales in Scurry County totalled $67,380,779 in the first quarter of 1981, State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced.

These sales were reported by 425 business firms in the county.

State-wide, first quarter sales amounted to $70.8 billion, Bullock reported. This is an increase of $9.9 billion for the state over 1980 first quarter figures.

Scurry County led the counties in its population bracket for this area of the state. Other reports included Hockley County (Levelland) $60,156,736; Terry County (Brownfield) $57,742,560; Nolan County (Sweetwater-Roscoe) $56,273,944; Ward County (Monahans) $52,355,809; Dawson County (Lamesa) $42,590,880; Andrews County (Andrews) $40,549,913; Reeves County (Pecos) $28,474,217.

Figures for counties adjoining Scurry include Mitchell (Colorado City) $13,768,189; Garza (Post) $8,798,881; Fisher (Rotan-Roby) $5,236,174; Borden (Gail) $7,385.



REMODELING?— The Scurry County Courthouse has been experiencing a storage space problem and employees there hope the problem will be solved by using the area between the outer shell of the building and the interior wall to create a storage area for each floor. A hole was knocked in the wall of the second floor Wednesday to move the steel beams into the space. Pictured is David Hendricks with the work detail from the Scurry County Jail. (SDN Staff Photo)

In Atlanta Slayings...

Women Identify Suspect

ATLANTA (AP) — A woman and her teen-age daughter have told police they saw Wayne B. Williams with one of the two young blacks he is accused of killing shortly before the victim's nude body was found in the Chattahoochee River, The Atlanta Constitution reported today.

But the witnesses gave conflicting accounts of whether they saw Williams with Nathaniel Cater before or after police stopped Williams on a Chattahoochee River bridge after hearing a loud splash, the newspaper said.

Quoting unidentified sources close to the investigation, the newspaper said prosecutors are considering calling the women as witnesses during Williams' trial, scheduled to begin Oct. 5.

Williams is charged with murder in the slayings of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and Cater, 27, two of 28 young blacks whose slayings over the past two years have terrorized the city.

The women were identified by the newspaper as Margaret Carter and her daughter, Gwennette. They live in the same housing complex where Cater once lived. Cater had dated one of their relatives, the Constitution said.

Police are concerned, however, that Gwennette Carter showed some signs of deception on a polygraph test administered after she gave her statement, the newspaper reported. The Constitution said Mrs. Carter could not take the test because of medical problems.

Store Damage Being Assessed

Damage was to be assessed today at Thompson's Shoe Store where a truck crashed into the front of the building Wednesday morning.

The store, located on Ave. R at 26th St. on the southeast corner of the Snyder square, had a display window caved in and further damage inside the front part of the building when the truck rolled across the street from the courthouse parking lot. The truck, owned by the City of Snyder, was on loan to Scurry County, and it was being used to hall structural steel for use in construction of storage space in the courthouse.

County officials said that the case had been turned over to the county's insurance carrier.

An adjustor was due to inspect the damage today, said Johney Greenfield, assistant manager of the SOLUTION— A problem that plagues many ambulances is that some people won't pull over when an ambulance with flashing lights and sirens is behind them trying to rush to an accident or take an accident victim to the hospital. Joy Barnett, left, operator of Scurry County EMS, believes she's solved the problem with the addition of another siren — a much louder one. BCD Session Set Friday

The Scurry County Board of Development has scheduled a meeting for noon Friday at the Snyder Country Club.

The agenda includes a discussion of the organization's budget and a first aid training course being planned here.

The chamber of commerce and BCD have been requested to coordinate a first aid course which would train personnel for local industries to meet OSHA requirements.

Bill Warner, chamber manager and consultant to the BCD, said plans for the course are being made and that it probably will begin in mid-September.

School Board Session Set

Snyder School Trustees has scheduled a special session for noon Friday in the high school cafeteria.

The only item on the agenda is to amend the 1980-81 school budget, an annual process at the close of the school's fiscal year to reflect final status of the various accounts.

The school's fiscal year ends Aug. 31.

New Division Of CC Sets 1st Session

The new women's division of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce scheduled an organizational and planning session for 5 p. m. today in the chamber conference room.

The new division was created Tuesday at the August meeting of the chamber's board of directors. Manager Bill Warner said that several women had expressed interest in forming such a group and that they had some specific projects in mind.

Another session already is being planned for next Thursday, at which time all civic clubs in the city will be asked to send representatives and suggest projects and activities for the division.

The SDN Column

Surely they wouldn't dare do it. Or would they?

We are talking about CBS and its threat to preempt the NFL football game between the Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals on Sept. 13.

If they think the baseball strike and the famous Heidi case were boners, they haven't heard anything yet. And if they think the Rev. Jerry Falwell can be tough, just wait till all of those Dallas Cowboy fans finish with them. A simple boycott might appear tame in comparison.

Anyway, the word out of the Dallas Cowboys office is that CBS plans to air the U. S. Open Tennis tournamant that day instead of the Dallas-St. Louis football game, and the 17 stations on the Cowboys regional network would be included.

We are not putting down tennis, but there's been a lot of tennis going all summer and the new football season is just beginning. This will be the second conference game of the season, and on top of that, it has those upstart Cardinals opposing the Cowboys in an eastern division game that could have a big role in determining the championship.

If CBS goes through with the pre-emption, it will be interesting to see the ratings. And we would not like to be one of the sponsors.

The Texas Historical Commission has placed an official historical marker in an old cemetery on the campus of the University of Texas at Arlington, calling attention to a defunct institution that would have the ACLU and various other "do-good" organizations up in arms today.

It was the Berachah Industrial Home, which sprang from a Waco organization formed by the Rev. J. T. Upchurch and his wife Maggie Mae Adams Upchurch. Its purpose was "to combat the social evil of fallen women." Rev. Upchurch, it was reported, believed that there are no illegitimate children, only illegitimate parents.

At his Arlington installation, the residents worked in the home's handkerchief factory, operated the press for his "Purity Journal," maintained gardens and orchards, and all staff and residents were required to attend church on the premises, refrain from using the telephone on Sundays, eating pork or consuming coffee, tea or tobacco.

The cemetery was started in 1904 when one of the residents died. It is all that remains of the institution today. It contains more than 80 graves, including those of unwed mothers, stillborn babies, children who died in measles epidemics, employees and their children.

Reagan May Veto Spending Bills...

Budget Battle Rekindles

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rekindling the budget battle, administration officials are hinting that President Reagan may veto spending bills in an effort to force deeper cuts than those approved by Congress last month.

In addition, government agencies are being told to draft budgets that would slash spending in line with the more stringent reductions proposed by Reagan last spring.

The moves come as the administration struggles to keep the federal budget in check in the face of predictions by congressional and private economists that high interest rates and lower government revenues resulting from hefty tax cuts will push deficits for 1982 and beyond well above Reagan's targets.

Administration officials say they still hope to salvage up to $4 billion in spending cuts that Congress rejected when it passed a record $35.2 billion package of budget reductions July 31. They also hope to get even larger savings in programs that still await action.

That is virtually certain to renew congressional battles over the budget.

The budget measures already adopted by Congress this year—and signed by Reagan earlier this month—set spending ceilings and targets for various federal programs. The appropriations bills actually provide the money, but not always the maximum amount.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget, said the administration will try to make sure Congress doesn't appropriate the full amount in cases where the spending ceiling exceeds the requests Reagan made in March.

To help achieve that goal, Dale said, departments have been instructed to draft budgets pegged to the president's original plan, in effect reinstating cuts that Congress would not accept the first time.

The administration estimates the cuts approved last month fell $6 billion short of what the president sought and counted on to meet his vow to balance the budget by 1984.

Examples of deeper cuts the administration wants include $600 million in railroad programs, $500 million in energy assistance payments to low-income people, $665 million in direct loans by the Export-Import Bank and $300 million for the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

So far, seven appropriation bills already approved by committees in the Democratic-controlled House provide $2.7 billion more than Reagan's initial request. Five of those measures have passed the full House.

Dale refused to say directly whether Reagan would veto those bills if they clear the Senate, but he added that "the word has gone out" from the budget office about that possibility.

The president's budget advisers forecast a deficit of $42.5 billion for the 1982 fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1, and a thin surplus by 1984, providing that Congress agrees to trim at least another $74 billion between now and then from Social Security and other federal programs. Those things have yet to be identified by Reagan.

New Drug Might Prevent Disease

BOSTON (AP)—High levels of cholesterol in the blood, which doctors say contributed to the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Americans yearly, may someday be controlled by a new medicine developed in Japan, researchers report.

So far, the exprimental drug called compactin has been successfully tested on people who have an inherited disorder that produces high blood cholesterol and leads to premature heart disease.

Even though much more research remains to be done, doctors say the medicine may someday be useful for the millions of otherwise healthy people who have too much cholesterol in their blood.

Two experts who reviewed the Japanese research said the discovery of the new drug "assumes great importance."

The study was directed by Dr. Hiroshi Mabuchi at Kanazawa University School of Medicine in Japan and published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors gave compactin to seven people with a condition called hypercholesterolemia. Such victims often have two or three times the usual levels of cholesterol in their blood. They are five times more likely than normal to have heart disease, which often appears when they are in their 40s.

The medicine lowered their blood levels of a form of cholesterol called low-denisty lipoprotein, or LDL, by 29 percent.

LDL causes fatty deposits on the blood vessels and makes them narrow and clog. This condition, called hardening of the arteries or arherosclerosis, contributes directly to the heart attacks and strokes that kill 800,000 Americans each year.

In an accompanying editorial, Drs. Michael S. Brown and Joseph L. Goldstein of the University of Texas Health Science Center wrote that compactin may help more than those with the genetic defect.

Use Of Sugar Increases Risk

NEW YORK (AP) — Eating too much sugar can raise cholesterol levels and blood pressure, increasing the risk of heart disease, according to findings presented at a meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Evidence that Americans' fondness for sugar, soft drinks and baked goods is harmful to their hearts was presented by several researchers who have studied the effect of high-sugar diets on animals and people.

One of them also discovered that athletes might actually be harmed by eating sugar during an athletic event and that it could be easier to lose weight eating calories in the form of starches rather than in the form of sugar.

The average American eats 85 pounds of sugar a year, according to Catherine Wotecki of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. That includes sucrose (table sugar) and sweeteners such as corn syrup and dextrose found in processed foods.

The USDA's Sheldon Reiser, in testing people whose genes make them expecially sensitive to sugar, found that high-sugar diets produced increases in cholesterol and related fatty substances called triglycerides.

"Those genetically sensitive people have a higher risk of heart disease and diabetes" if they eat high-sugar diets, Reiser said.

"Sucrose changes the intestines over a period of time," he explained and stimulates the production of certain hormones.

One of the hormones triggers insulin production, sharply altering the body's chemistry. The insulin could, in turn, trigger the production of cholesterol and triglycerides, he said.

Dr. Sathanur Srinivasan of the Louisiana State University Medical Center studied the effect of high-sugar diets on four species of monkeys and found that "sucrose consistently produced an increase in cholesterol levels."

High-salt diets are known to result in high blood pressure, but Srinivasan's monkey experiments showed adding sugar to a high-salt diet makes the blood pressure jump even higher.

But Srinivasan noted there was a problem in generalizing these findings to apply to the whole population because everyone's tolerance of sugar is different.

"The genetic proneness of an individual or a species has to be taken into account," Srinivasan said. "Some people can eat all the cholesterol they want and still not get hyperlipidemic (high cholesterol)."

The same is true with sugar.

Sugar is what chemists call a simple carbohydrate, because of its simple chemical structure. The carbohydrates in starch and grains are complex carbohydrates.

As Americans have been eating more sugar and other simple carbohydrates, they have been eating proportionately less complex carbohydrates, Wotecki said.

The complex carbohydrates don't seem to be as damaging to health as the simple carbohydrates, the researchers said.

New York's Pennsylvania Station, the world's largest railway station of its day, was opened in 1910.

FALL ENROLLMENT—Jan Lanier, Mary Hall, Anita Felan, Leona Wiggins, and Pat Rice look over plans for the ABWA fall enrollment event.

ABWA To Hold Fall Enrollment

Scurry Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold a fall enrollment event September 8 at 7:30 p.m., according to Mrs. Leona Wiggins, chapter president. The event will be held at Martha Ann's Woman's Club.

The theme, "Focus on ABWA", will provide a close-up view of meeting personal and professional goals through ABWA membership. The event promises to be a festive highlight of ABWA new member enrollments.

ABWA enrollment events are held semi-annually to introduce ABWA and the local chapter to businesswomen in this area. Throughout this period, similar events will be held across the country by more than 1,900 other ABWA chapters.

"The goal of ABWA is to help women in business advance through education, increased competence, and through upgrading of professional skills and business attitudes," Mrs. Jan Lanier said.

The Association, founded in Kansas City, Missouri in 1949, now has more than 105,000 members. Last year ABWA chapters throughout the United States and Puerto Rico awarded more than $1,400,000 in scholarships to women students. In addition, the ABWA national scholarship fund, SBMEF, awarded another $200,000 in scholarships during the same period. Scurry Charter Chapter has awarded local scholarships to WTC to two worthy recipients.

Membership is by invitation only. For further information, interested businesswomen may contact Mary Hall, enrollment event chairman, or Mrs. Don (Pat) Snider, membership chairman.

GLAZED PEARS

Interesting new way to treat one of the season's fresh fruits.

3 tablespoons butter
1-3rd cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup unsweetened canned pineapple juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 fresh Bartlett pears

In a small saucepan over low heat melt the butter; stir in the sugar, flour and salt. Off heat, gradually stir in the pineapple juice, keeping smooth. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Off heat, stir in the vanilla; set aside off heat. Pare, halve and core the pears; place in a shallow 1½-quart baking dish; add the sauce — it should cover the pears. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 20 minutes. Cool slightly before serving. Makes 6 servings.

"Penelope Now" Holds Interest

PENELOPE NOW. By John Crosby. Stein & Day. 258 Pages. $12.95.

The Penelope of Greek mythology who held off an army of suitors while her husband, Odysseus, was wandering in far-off lands is billed as the inspiration for this novel. But with some key differences.

Penelope had to deal with 108 suitors and resisted them all, according to Homer. Crosby's heroine, Jessie, is confronted by only three swains and succumbs to all three. Also, Penelope spent her time weaving a shroud when not fending off passes, while Jessie progresses in her husband's absence from simple farm wife to prospective owner of a multimillion-dollar ski resort.

As Jessie gets rich through forgery and other shortcuts, her husband, Derry, is captured at gunpoint by an oversexed young woman named Mickie, who turns out to have three personalities and who keeps her prisoner tied up in the back of a trailer.

Finally, after a series of sex bouts, Derry manages to break loose and kills Mickie.

While Jessie is learning illegal routes to success, Derry discovers things about disposing of stolen farm machinery and finds how easy it is to kill once you get the hang of it.

When doubts beset Jessie, she communes with her favorite deity, the Greek goddess Athena, who gives her sound if not always ethical advice. Derry in turn keeps in touch with Mickie's spirit after he has disposed of her. He visits her birthplace to find out what made her such a mixed-up girl. The answer is not a pretty one, but it's more convincing than some of the other disclosures in this book.

The moral of it all seems to be that crime pays off but you must not play ball with the really bad guys. Penelope and Derry are not very nice people but their escapades do hold the interest, and their victory over organized crime is gratifying, if not too convincing. Tom Hoge

South won the trump lead in his own hand and studied dummy for a while. He had nine easy tricks, but needed 10.

There were two ways to get the 10th. One would be to get to ruff a heart. The other to set up dummy's fifth club for a discard. South should find a way to have his cake and eat it, too.

At trick two he cashed his king of clubs. Then he leads a low heart. If East wins it turns out that he can't lead a trump. South will get to play a second heart and be sure of ruffing the third one. Of course, South will chuck his losing diamond on the ace of clubs somewhere along the way.

If West wins and leads a trump, South will play the nine from dummy. It will hold. Now South can play and ruff a small club. Enter dummy with the ace of trumps. Play ace and ruff a small club and get to dummy with the ace of diamonds to get a heart discard on the last good club.

Suppose East produces the 10 of trumps on the second trump lead. Trumps will have broken 2-2 and there would be no way to stop a heart ruff.

WELCOME HOME—Senior Citizens who returned from Hawaii Wednesday afternoon were greeted with punch and cookies as they arrived at the Senior Center. Many of the travelers sported colorful leis as souvenirs of their stay in Hawaii.

Senior Citizens Back From Hawaii

A delegation of Scurry County Senior Citizens returned Wednesday from a 10-day trip to Hawaii.

They left on Monday, Aug. 17, from the Lubbock airport, flying to Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, where they boarded a non-stop flight to Honolulu.

They returned Wednesday to D-FW and then flew to Lubbock where they were met by the Scurry County Senior Center van and returned to Snyder.

Making the trip were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mooty, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Brumley, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sizemore, Lovilla Holladay, Frances Martin, Tempie McHaney, Connie Key, Lubille White, Inez Wilson, Esther Weaver, Lois Shaw, Verdi Kimbro, Texa Jones and Ileta Hall.

Accompanying the group on the tour, which was sponsored by the Scurry County Senior Center, were Gloria Shaw, center director, Jean Smith, assistant director, and her husband, Jake Smith.

They toured the Polynesian Cultural Center in Honolulu, visited Hilo and Rainbow Falls and took a cruise on the Kona Coast.

California Man Charged

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A California man charged with the Aug. 4 abduction of a 5-month-old Parker girl was arrested two weeks later in Texas in connection with the alleged abduction of a 9-year-old girl, police said.

Brett Pensinger was arrested for drunkenness in Midland, Texas, after being chased by friends of a woman whose daughter had been taken from a bar, Sgt. Tom Hyde, a Midland police detective, said Wednesday.

Hyde told the Arizona Republic that Pensinger was not charged with the alleged abduction because the mother did not file a criminal complaint.

Pensinger has been named in two Arizona kidnapping charges in the abductions of Michele Melander and her 5-year-old brother, Michael, and total bond of $100,000 has been set.

Michael was released unharmed shortly after the abduction but the girl's body was later found near a garbage dump in San Bernardino County, Calif.

Routine checks by Midland police revealed Oregon arrest warrants for Pensinger and indicated the pickup truck he was driving had been reported stolen Aug. 1 in San Clemente, Calif., Hyde said.

Pensinger was then extradited to Washington County, Ore., to face charges that included auto theft.

California authorities also are preparing a murder charge in the death of Michele and are considering kidnapping charges, San Bernardino County prosecutor Raymond Haight said Wednesday.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

I've missed it again.

The sale of bathing suits.

For 30 years, I've never been able to figure out when bathing suits are being sold. If I go in January, I am told, "Are you crazy? It's 30 degrees outside. Who is going to buy a bathing suit in this weather?"

If I go in May, June, July or August, the racks are filled with turtleneck sweaters, double-knit wool slacks and fur coats and a salesperson says, "We had two or three a few weeks ago, but we've sent them back to the warehouse. We're into winter now."

I've figured out the retail bathing-suit season runs about two hours and 15 minutes.

Retail stores and shop personnel have always lived by a calendar that few of us can imagine.

It's like they're out of sync with the rest of the world. In October, they celebrate Christmas; in November, they stage their after-Christmas sales; in December, they bring out the spring cruise stuff for vacations.

In January, the aisles are lined with dogwood and white shoes; in February, it's Spring Bride Month.

In March, the new bathing suits are unfurled; in April, it's end-of-the-year sale; in May, it's the Autumn Harvest Bonanza and in June, it's back-to-school sale. July is always fur coat extravaganza.

In August, get ready for winter woolens and leather boots. In September, it's Holiday Entertaining, and in October, it's camping equipment.

The stores are rigged so that whatever season you enter them, you emerge from the wrong time capsule. Anyone who has ever tried on a winter coat wearing white sandals or a beach hat with snow on your parka knows what I'm talking about.

In the last store I visited, a salesperson guided me to the end of a rack with exactly six bathing suits swinging from it.

I chose one and asked where I could try it on. As she opened the curtain, I heard her humming "Jingle Bells."

She must have thought I was crazy...swimming so close to Christmas.

Roger Baldwin Is Dead At 97

OAKLAND, N.J. (AP) — Roger Baldwin, who helped found the American Civil Liberties Union and spent 60 years protecting individual freedoms, is dead at 97.

The mentor of a nationwide network of lawyers, whose clients ranged from Communists and pacifists to Nazis and Ku Klux Klan members, remained active virtually to the end.

Since his official retirement as executive director more than 30 years ago, he had concerned himself with fostering the International League for Human Rights but remained in close touch with ACLU's operations in this country.

Baldwin had long suffered from emphysema and heart trouble, and he was admitted to Valley Hospital in nearby Ridgewood on Sunday. His son, Roger R. Baldwin, said he died in his sleep early Wednesday.

Baldwin supported Communist causes in the 1930s, but the Soviet purge trials and the Hitler-Stalin pact turned him and most of his fellow liberals away from the Communists.

At one time in 1923, the ACLU was defending the right of the Klan to meet in predominantly Catholic Boston, the right of Catholics to teach in Akron where the school board was dominated by the Klan and the right of Communists to show movies in Providence, R.I., despite opposition from both the Klan and the Catholics.

New Television Program Helps Place Children

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It was the first television appearance for 12-year-old Paul and the dark-eyed, tousled-haired youngster made the most of it.

He beamed as he was filmed tossing footballs with former Dallas Cowboy fullback Don Perkins and crawling through the cockpit of a jet airliner.

Paul was the star of the show. But he was seeking more than momentary excitement when he appeared on KOB-TV in Albuquerque. He was looking for a home of his own.

After living for years in a foster home, Paul found a permanent family following his appearance on the station's "Wednesday's Child" program.

He is one of 30 of the 43 socalled "hard-to-place" children featured on the program who have found a permanent home since it began April 30, 1980.

Dick Knipfing, KOB-TV's regular anchorman and news director who appears with the children, says their "biggest sin is that they're older children. Most adoptive parents are looking for babies."

Knipfing says a similar program proved successful at an Oklahoma station, and KOB-TV decided to try it after state Human Services Department Director Larry Ingram suggested it might help in the adoption of children over 6 years old.

The program title was chosen from the line of an anonymously written poem, "Wednesday's child is full of woe."

"Statistically," Ingram says, "I think it has been very successful. We've had some dramatic successes."

He says that during the past fiscal year, the state had custody of 78 children who fit the hard-to-place description but found permanent families. This year, it's expected to be near 100, he says.

Children who are featured on "Wednesday's Child" have been cleared legally by the state for adoption.

When the program was instituted a year ago, Knipfing, producer Jim Hussin and photographer Kevin Roark were concerned that it not become "like pet of the week," as Roark put it.

"We wanted to put it in a natural setting, something the kid would be comfortable with," says Knipfing. "It's not hard sell at all. We try to do whatever comes."

In filming "Wedneday's Child," Knipfing has found himself rafting down the Rio Grande, flying kites, touring airplane cockpits, crawling over fire trucks visiting toy stores and standing in line waiting to see Santa Claus.

Except for roller skating and a couple of other activities, Knipfing is ready to meet the kid on his or her ground.

"The child dictates the activity," says Hussin. "The caseworker askes, 'What would you like to do?' and word is relayed back to KOB-TV. If the child doesn't want to be on television, that word also is sent back to the station and the state suggests another prospective Wednesday's child."

"One of the hardest things is after you finish filming and have a kid come up to you and ask you to take him home," says Hussin.

The program has "attracted a lot of prospective parents," Knipfing says.

The Human Services Department has been able to create a pool of approved parents so that when the "right match" comes, they're ready.

During each "Wednesday's Child" presentation, viewers are advised to call a toll-free number if there is interest in the child. This puts them in touch with state Human Services Department officials who work with adoptions.

No Residence Permits...

Gypsies Can't Remain In Holland

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Koka Petalo, king of the Dutch gypsies, sat at the wheel of his parked blue Rolls Royce listening impassively to the police officer beside him in the passenger seat.

A few yards away a group of gypsies cooked at campfires, played cards and tended laundry on clotheslines strung between saplings on a grassy park in the center of this stately diplomatic capital.

Negotiations completed, the 250-pound Dutch gypsy leader drove over to the camp to tell the family leaders they could stay a few more days in The Hague before moving to another ffeld in yet another town. Then "King Koka" opened the trunk and handed out plastic toys to the delighted children as a few townspeople looked on from the sidewalk.

The 150-member band, which had pitched a multicolored camp of a dozen tents and a dozen trailers, is one of three main groups of gypsies living illegally in Holland. As Petalo was winning them the reprieve, another band was being escorted by police from a campground in Almere, east of Amsterdam, to another field six miles away following complaints of conflicts with weekend campers. The third group has reached a temporary peace with authorities in Utrecht in central Holland.

Most of the estimated 1 million gypsies in Western Europe and 3 million in Eastern Europe do have passports or residence papers, including Petalo and his family. The Dutch government has granted residence status to 1,500 gypsies since World War II, 500 of them in a general amnesty in October 1977.

It is the other gypsies, including the three Dutch bands, who maintain they are stateless and want to continue their centuries-old tradition of wandering, who pose the problem.

The 350 unregistered gypsies in Holland have been told they cannot stay here because they have no residence permits. The government fears leniency will simply encourage other gypsies to come to Holland, a small, crowded country whose communities refuse to make room for gypsy caravans.

But those caravans have been turned back when they have tried to cross the Belgian and West German borders, leaving them in legal limbo.

"The only solution to this problem is an international one, through the European Community or the Council of Europe," said Victor Holtus, spokesman for immigration affairs in the Dutch Justice Department. "But we are the only country in Europe seeking an overall solution."

After failing to interest its nine EEC partners, the Netherlands has tried to persuade the 21-nation Council of Europe in Strasbourg to adopt a treaty granting residence status to a number of gypsies in each country. The treaty would give the gypsies a home base yet still let them cross borders freely, able to wander and preserve their cultural traditions.

But after four years of debate, a council committee seems ready to submit a proposal that would merely "recommend" to member states that they adopt such a policy, Holtus said. "That is inadequate because it is not a treaty, it provides no sanctions."

Meanwhile, the group in The Hague agreed to go through the formality of requesting residence permits — which they have been told they will not receive, in return for being allowed to stay on a government-owned field in the town of Woensdrecht near the Belgian border for two months.

Holtus said the application process would require the gypsies finally to provide information on their countries of origin, thought to be mainly Yugoslavia and Italy. That will be the start of a laborious process of documenting their nationality and repatriating them.

The 38-year-old Petalo, king of the Dutch gypsies since 1964, says he spends most of his time now finding new temporary sanctuary for the unregistered bands and debating with police and government officials. The Hague group has moved "20 or 30 times" since the first of the year, he said.

"Our people have been driven away since the world began," Petalo said. "They've been given no peace, given no residence permits. We are always forced from one place to another."

Wanted Man Is Arrested Here

A man wanted by police in Alice, Texas for aggravated assault with a gun was apprehended Wednesday night at 400 East Hwy. by Officer Don Cheek. The arrest was made following a routine traffic stop. Leonardo Martinez, 45, is also being charged with driving while license suspended.

Martinez was to be transferred to the county jail today to await extradition.

In another incident, Hack's Grocery on 37th St. was burglarized last night. Taken were some tools and lunch meat. Value of the merchandise was estimated at over $100.

An accident occurred at 3:47 p.m. Wednesday next to the Western Texas College driving range. In that, a 1981 Chevrolet driven by Jay Horace Eiland hit a fence and fence pole. The fence was bent and torn and the car had moderate damage. There were no injuries.

Early this morning, one man was taken into custody in the 3600 block of College Ave. for driving while intoxicated.

Dear Abby

Gay Friend Makes Woman a Merry Widow

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago when my husband died I was 42. I thought my life was over. We'd been married 21 years, had no children and were completely devoted to each other.

A year ago I moved from Chicago to Florida and took a job selling in a fine store. There I met the most gorgeous man I'd ever seen. (I'll call him "Dale.") He's the sweetest, most understanding man in the world. Dale is 28 and everything a woman could want in a man, but he is gay.

Please don't think I'm a crazy 49-year-old lady, but we've been living together for six months. No sex, but a very warm friendship. Of course I'd like it to turn into something more, but for the time being, I've never been happier.

Since we've been together, Dale has had only one date, and that was with a 19-year-old male. But Dale promised he'd never see him again because he wants to go straight so he can marry me one day.

Abby, what I need to know is, what are a gay's chances for going straight?

IN LOVE AGAIN

DEAR IN LOVE: Slim—even with strong motivation and intensive psychotherapy. I once asked a distinguished psychoanalyst that question, and he replied, "I've had 50 percent success. I had two gay patients who wanted to go straight. I succeeded with one. And with the other one, I failed."

DEAR ABBY: I work as an aide in a nursing home and I have a message for people who visit relatives and friends in nursing homes. Older folks sometimes get confused and forgetful, so when you walk in, just put your arms around them and say, "Hello, Grandma. I'm Margaret (or whatever your name is), and I've come to see you!"

Abby, my heart just aches when someone comes to visit an older person, and the visitor starts off with, "Hi, Grandma. Do you know who I am? What's my name? Who am I?"

Then poor Grandma feels foolish or too embarrassed to guess because she might be wrong. I hope you have room for this in your column.

LOVES OLD FOLKS

DEAR LOVES: I make room for worthwhile suggestions. I'm sure that most visitors play the "Who am I" game more out of thoughtlessness than meanness.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding and have hit a snag. I want an outdoor wedding in my backyard, followed by a reception outside, too, but the weather here is very unpredictable that time of year, and if it should rain, we couldn't accommodate that number of people in our house.

I'm planning a 4 p.m. wedding. If the weather holds for the ceremony, but if it starts to rain around the time of the reception, we could move the reception over to the church, which is within walking distance from the house.

If at 4 p.m. it looks like rain, we could have the ceremony at the church, too.

How should the invitations be worded? "Outdoor wedding and reception—weather permitting"? Or, "If it looks like rain, go to the church. If the weather is fair, come to the house"?

Please help.

MAKING PLANS

DEAR MAKING PLANS: Since the weather is unpredictable that time of year, some of your guests may predict rain and go to the church, while others may predict fair weather and go to your house. Play it safe and have everything at the church, where you won't have to pray for good weather.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Anonymous Donor Gives Car

WOLFSBURG, West Germany (AP) — An anonymous donor bought a $20,000 West Germany sports car and then paid about $4,000 to send it by air to Haitian President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier in time for his birthday, a spokesman for the car company said today.

The order for the Audi coupe, "which came at very short notice," was not from Duvalier himself, said the spokesman, who would not identify himself or the buyer.

"Maybe a good friend or someone who wanted to become a good friend," the spokesman said.

"The car left for Paris on a trailer June 29 and Air france flew it to Haiti on June 30th," he added.

Communist China took a seat as a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council in 1971.

Oiler QB Out Of Retirement...

Stabler Answers Houston's Call

HOUSTON (AP) -- Houston Oiler quarterback Ken Stabler returned to workouts today with no apologies to his teammates for his 35-day retirement, but with a promise that it won't take him long to get ready to play football.

Stabler, 35, said he presently weighed "about 210 or 212, but it's all liquids so ... it won't take me long to get ready."

The 11-year veteran shocked the Oilers July 23 by announcing his retirement without previous notice and then disappearing until he resurfaced Wednesday to sign a two-year contract.

Stabler said his retirement announcement was an honest statement and had nothing to do with trying to get more money. Therefore, Stabler didn't feel he owed anyone an apology for missing the rigors of training camp.

"I don't think they deserve it," Stabler said. "Fred Bilenikoff (a former teammate) didn't call me and say he was going to retire. George Blanda didn't tell me he was going to retire and I didn't expect it.

"You go out and play and try to win. That's all you ask of a player is to try to win. That's the only thing you owe is to play as hard as you can everyday."

Although Stabler missed virtually the entire Oiler preseason training camp and will return to a newly installed offense, head coach Ed Biles doesn't think it will take Stabler long to get back in form.

"This is the answer to my dreams because I know things were set up with him in mind," said Biles, who revamped the Oilers conservative 1980 offense. "Our whole offense was predicated on what he could do along with the talents of the rest of the football team and now the guy that can do that is here."

Stabler said he had started to think about ending his retirement because "it was tougher to stay away than I thought." Stabler said Gifford Nielsen's injury last Saturday finalized his decision to return.

Nielsen, who had waited three seasons to get a shot at the starting job, suffered a shoulder injury in last Saturday's 27-17 loss to Tampa Bay and is out for at least three weeks.

"I think I retired and unretired a bunch of times but after Gifford got hurt I think I decided to come back because there was a definate need," Stabler said.

Free agent quarterback John Reaves will start Saturday's final preseason game against the Dallas Cowboys, but Stabler may play several series of downs, Biles said.

Highest Paid Lineman...

Cowboys Sign White

by The Associated Press

While Houston Oiler coach Ed Biles celebrated the signing of retired quarterback Ken Stabler to a two-year contract yesterday, the Dallas Cowboys also had something to crow about.

The Cowboys, who meet the Oilers in the teams' final preseason game Saturday, inked All-Pro defensive end Randy White. White had threatened to sit out the 1981 season if he couldn't reach an agreement with the Cowboys.

The new multiyear contract makes White, a seven-year veteran, the highest paid lineman in the NFL at a reported $200,000-plus a year. No terms of the contract were announced.

White's signing leaves Pat Donovan, a defensive lineman in his option year, as the only unsigned Cowboy.

The San Diego Chargers may not have one of their top defensive linemen for the upcoming season as Fred Dean has threatened to sit out the 1981 season and did not report to Tuesday's workout.

Dean, a seven-year veteran who missed the first two games of last year in a contract squabble with the Chargers, would be San Diego's second All-Pro holdout as wide receiver John Jefferson has missed the entire preseason so far because of problems with his seven-year contract that still has four years remaining.

The Miami Dolphins are planning to part company with running back Delvin Williams.

Head Coach Don Shula has said that Williams, who set a Miami rushing record with 1,258 yards in 1978, would be placed on waivers Thursday. Williams has a contract calling for $270,000 a year and that apparently has scared other teams from making a deal for his services.

Matt Robinson, hailed last year as Denver's quarterback of the future, was waived by the Broncos. The release of Robinson means first-year Head Coach Dan Reeves plans on keeping Jeff Knapple as starter Craig Morton's backup, with rookie Mark Hermann in reserve.

Dallas Chosen To Lead Way To 1981 Super Bowl

By Bruce Lowitt
AP Sports Writer

Dick Vermeil snowed the world - until last Jan. 25, anyway - that there's room in this world for the good old-fashioned work ethic. But will it work again, or will some other National Conference team reach the NFC graveyard, better known as the Super Bowl?

Barring ar upset of gargantuan proportions, Vermeil's Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys will battle their way, unimpeded by the rest of the division, toward the championship of the East. The guess from this perspective is that it is the Cowboys who will get there, leaving a playoff wild card for the NFC's defending champs.

But that's not too bad After all, the Oakland Raiders didn't do poorly with the one they were dealt last year.

That's not to say, of course, that the Cowboys or the Eagles will be the only challengers for the NFL title. There's the matter of the NFC's Central and West Divisions.

The Central is...well...sort of the poor relation of the conference. Even its champions are ragamuffins compared to the rest of the playoff teams. This year will be no different. The Detroit Lions will win the title. But they'll be long gone by the time their Silverdome home hosts the Super Bowl.

In the West, where Los Angeles is playing a Pat hand in Pat Haden, look title they owned for several consecutive seasons before Atlanta emerged as a contender. The Falcons will get the other wild card.

Here, then, is what the NFC standings will look like just before the playoffs begin:

East Division
Dallas Cowboys
Philadelphia Eagles*
Washington Redskins
St. Louis Cardinals
New York Giants

Central Division
Detroit Lions
Chicago Bears
Minnesota Vikings
Tampa Bay Buccaneers
Green Bay Packers

West Division
Los Angeles Rams
Atlanta Falcons
New Orleans Saints
San Francisco 49ers

* probable wild card

Steelers Picked Tops In American Central

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

"It's just a brief interruption," Joe Greene was saying last year as the Pittsburgh Steelers were bowing out of the playoff picture for the first time since 1971.

Was it just that, or was it the end of an era?

We think Greene was right (we tend not to argue with 6-foot-4, 260-pound people, anyway). The Steelers, beset in 1980 by enough injuries to stock your average infirmary, will return to prominence in 1981, beating the Cleveland Browns (barely) to the top of the American Conference's Central Division while the Houston Oilers take a nosedive.

In the East, the Buffalo Bills will prove that 1980 was no fluke. Even without the services of top draft choice Booker Moore, suffering from a nerve disease, the Bills will trip up the often-confounding New England Patriots and win another division title.

In Oakland, the Raiders fans still have their team. Four months from now, will they still want it? The defending Super Bowl champions are due for a fall this year every bit as rapid as their rise of a year ago. And the San Diego Chargers, with a rushing game to go with their passing and a defense bolstered by, of all things, a new coach, should have the AFC West all to themselves.

Here, then, is what we expect to see when the regular season draws to a close:

Central Division
Pittsburgh Steelers
Cleveland Browns*
Houston Oilers
Cincinnati Bengals

East Division
Buffalo Bills
New England Patriots*
New York Jets
Miami Dolphins
Baltimore Colts

West Division
San Diego Chargers
Oakland Raiders
Kansas City Chiefs
Denver Broncos
Seattle Seahawks

* probable wild card

Just how badly does Terry Bradshaw want to win the fifth Super Bowl ring the Steelers talked about last year? Remember, he was all too happy to chuck pro football until "The Stockers," his proposed TV series, crashed.

If he's still got that drive - on on the field, that is - if he and the rest of Pittsburgh's key players (John Stallworth, Jon Kolb, Franco Harris, Mike Webster, Sidney Thornton, etc.) can stay healthy for a whole year, the offense will regain its stature as one of the league's fiercest. And if the defense can rediscover the pass rush that vanished last year, and survive the loss of linebacker Jack Ham, it, too, will rekindle the "one for the thumb" championship ring talks.

Quarterback Brian Sipe is to Cleveland what Earl Campbell is to Houston - the franchise. He did it all last year (one intrception notwithstanding) and as a result Cleveland emerged from the Steelers' and Oilers' shadows.

WTC Booster Event Slated Here Aug. 29

The annual western Texas College Booster Club two-player scramble is slated for Saturday here.

Play is open to the first 64 teams to enter. Registration fee is $30 per team.

Trophies will be awarded the first three places in each flight. A permanent Booster Club Tournament plaque will bear the names of winners in the tournament and will be placed in the pro shop.

A Booster Club booth will be set up at the tournament, making it convenient for interested persons to pay 1981-82 booster memberships. New members will also be eligible for the door prize drawing to be held.

Shotgun starts will tee off the tournament at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Flight A will be for teams on which one player has a 10 or below handicap. Flight B teams must have one player with a handicap of 10 or above.

Those planing to enter the tournament or who wish further information should call the pro shop at 573-9291.

Scrimmage Set Here Tomorrow

Local football fans will get a chance to see the 1981 Snyder Tigers at home for the first time this season when the Black & Gold scrimmages Brownfield here tomorrow evening.

Snyder plays its first three varsity games on the road this season, and will not return to Tiger Stadium until Sept. 25.

Snyder and Brownfield junior varsity units will scrimmage at 5 Friday. The varsity teams are expected to begin working at approximately 6:30.

New Tiger head coach George Byerly said Friday's varsity scrimmage will more closely resemble a game situation than past scrimmages.

"First will go maybe 15-15 (15 offensive plays for each team) in a controlled type scrimmage, then we plan to clear the field and get into game type situations," said the coach.

Moving the coaches off the field will give both sides an opportunity to send in plays from the sidelines, something they will have to do when the season starts Sept. 4. Byerly said that unlike a controlled scrimmage, a turnover will change possession of the ball in Friday's mock game.

The only phase the teams will not go through is the kicking game, though Byerly said they may do some punting and kickoffs without blocking after the regular scrimmage is over.

"We'll be looking at all of our personnel again and making some final decisions, at least for now," Byerly said. "A lot of it (earning a position) will have to do with execution. We are tentatively set in most positions right now, but if we can help ourselves by moving someone we'll do it."

Byerly urged community support to the scrimmages. No admission will be charged.

San Antonio Mayor Gets Another Death Threat

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros has received more threats on his life in two letters received at city hall — one containing a .32-caliber bullet and the ominous message: "Mayor Cisneros, you're a dead man."

The other letter, addressed to Vice President George Bush at city hall, said, "you and George Bush are going to be killed," prompting the Secret Service to take an interest in the threats, the latest of several directed against city officials in recent weeks.

"The police department has the letters and bullet for fingerprint examinations. We think we have the person identified," a spokesman for the Secret Service said.

Secret Service and police intelligence officers were to confer today regarding the threats.

Cisneros declined to comment on the letters, which followed a telephone call to the city hall switchboard last Friday by a man who threatened Cisneros in Spanish.

Meanwhile, a former city employee who allegedly threatened city manager Tom Huebner made a brief court appearance Wednesday and was returned to a hospital for psychiatric care.

City councilman Bernardo Eureste also received some threatening telephone calls at his home last month and reported them to city police and the FBI.

say how near the plane was to North Korea or to the demilitarized zone. It said there have been no similar incidents in the past and that no other aircraft was involved.

Speakes, asked in Santa Barbara whether the plane had been spying on North Korea, replied, "We don't comment on that."

The Defense Department and the Air Force rarely discuss operations of SR-71s, two-seat successors to the U-2 spy plane that fly more than 2,000 mph and at altitudes above 80,000 feet.

It is known, however, that SR-71s have been used in past years to spy on China and communist Vietnam. There have been unconfirmed reports they have been used to photograph North Korea.

White House counselor Edwin Meese III said Reagan was briefed about the Korean incident Wednesday by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger during a previously scheduled meeting at the president's ranch.

"The president was concerned about it obviously," said Meese, who attended the meeting with Weinberger. "But there weren't really enough details yet from the Defense Department. They were still evaluating the situation."

Asked if the United States considered the incident a provocation and was thinking about responding, Meese said, "I think that's up to the Defense Department to evaluate the situation, which they are doing."

"No one was hurt and our plane was not endangered," Meese said.

He said it was flying in international and South Korean airspace but added that he didn't know the nature of its mission.

Speakes said Reagan was first told of the incident by the White House situation room about 9 a.m. PDT. It was not known when the White House was informed. Reagan was not told of the Libyan incident until about six hours after his aides learned of it.

store. In addition to the damage to the building and to a counter and some shelves near the front of the store, more than 30 pairs of women's shoes which were on display in the show window were damaged.

Greenfield marveled that no one was injured in the incident. He said he was at the front of the store, but saw the truck coming in time to get out of the way.

Meanwhile, the store had boarded up the damaged portion of the front and was open for business as usual. They were hopeful that repair work could begin promptly.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Position is everything

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Now that football is upon us again, I want to ask you a few questions about how to treat a sprain. My boy is on the team and last year he sprained his ankle. The coach had him sit there with his foot in a bucket of ice water. Is that good for an injury or not? I have heard pros and cons on the subject. Should you use heat or cold? Just what is the difference between this kind of swelling and the swelling I get in my feet and ankles, particularly just before my periods?

DEAR READER — First, the ice bucket is a no-no for treating sprained ankles. It isn't the cold that is the problem but the position of the injured ankle. Whether you are talking about the swelling that occurs with premenstrual tension or from heart failure or from a sprained ankle, the swelling is always made worse by the feet being below the level of the heart. That is why many people with swollen ankles notice them in the evening but not in the morning when they first get up. To put it plainly — position is everything.

Blood runs downhill from the heart so if you injure your ankle — get it up. Lie down and put your injured ankle well above the level of your chest. If you injure your hand hold it up, head high, and let the blood run downhill toward the heart. That may even stop or significantly decrease the bleeding, even from an open cut.

For a more complete understanding of swelling, from premenstural tension to injuries you should read The Health Letter number 11-6, Swelling: Causes and Management, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper; P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Cold is usually recommended for the first two days after an injury and heat thereafter. Of course, you don't want to induce a cold injury or burn either, so discretion is advised. Also, a properly applied pressure bandage will help prevent swelling, from an injury as well as from varicose veins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I have heard many contradictory statements about vegetarianism. My mother says that it is essentially unhealthy to refrain from eating meat, that it is brain damaging. I say this is ridiculous as a well-balanced vegetable diet can be more healthy than a high-fat meat diet. What do you say?

DEAR READER — Do I have to choose between two extremes? How about a nice balanced diet that contains lean meat, fish or poultry?

You can have a healthy diet and be a vegetarian. There are several types of vegetarians as you probably know. If you mean a strict vegetarian who eats no animal products, it does take skill to balance a diet to provide all the essential amino acids, minerals and vitamins. There is a danger of not getting enough iron or vitamin B-12.

A lacto-ovarian vegetarian can get adequate protein and calcium from milk. There is not too much of a problem here and those who simply forbid meat or poultry but allow fish should not have a problem obtaining a balanced diet.

Your extreme of a high-fat meat diet is not good for anyone, vegetarian or otherwise.

Adoptee Turned Down Once More

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An adoptee suffering from bone cancer has been turned down again in his effort to learn the name of his mother and any half-brothers or sisters, all of whom could be potential marrow donors.

The Missouri Court of Appeals decision Tuesday upheld a lower court decision which denied James Grant George's request to learn the names.

The appelate court did say that George, 34, of Miami, Fla. can be told the identity of his father, but only if the man is alive and therefore a potential donor.

Doctors have told George a marrow transplant could save his life, but only blood relatives would be candidates for having marrow that Grant's body would accept.

Missouri's laws forbid identifying the natural parents of a child given up for adoption without compelling need.

The three-judge appellate court ruling Tuesday upheld an earlier decision by Juvenile Court Judge Gene Martin that there is no compelling need in George's case.

Through Martin, George's real mother is aware of the case. She has refused to allow the judge to identify her or any of George's half-brothers or half-sisters.

The appeals court did direct Martin to begin a search for George's father so he could be asked to submit a blood test and possibly donate the bone marrow.

The court-appointed attorney for George's mother, Michael E. Curley, said he would ask for a rehearing on the issue of contacting the father.

"Getting the father is not what the mother wanted to do," Curley said. "Trying to contact anybody creates a situation for a potential breach of her anonymity and confidentiality."

Curley said he did not know whether the father was alive. George's mother has said in written testimony the father never knew of the pregnancy that produced George in 1947, at the Willows Maternity Home in Kansas City.

Guilty Of Violating Labor Law

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The state Department of Industrial Relations has found Sentco Paint Co. — where a June 6 accident killed two people, including a minor — guilty of violating child labor laws.

Earlier, the U.S. Department of Labor's wage and hour office found no violations of child labor laws at the paint plant, concluding that 15-year-old William F. Brewer, the minor, didn't work at Sentco.

Company officials have denied that Brewer was employed at the plant.

Grain Elevators...

'Prairie Skyscrappers' Dot Land

MACKSVILLE, Kan. (AP) — They are the skyscrapers of the prairie, stark symbols of the agricultural society that clusters around them in the vastness of middle America.

Nearly every small town has at least one giant grain elevator standing like a lone sentinel above the undulating fields that inspired its creation. Taller than the highest church steeple, more precious than the bank, its hollow concrete cylinders are storehouses for the sum of the community's many rural parts.

The elevators protect the wheat, barley, corn, milo, soybeans and sorghum that eventually will pay for most of the town's shoes, cars, televisions, groceries, and even next year's seeds.

Kansas has the greatest grain elevator storage capacity of any state in the nation. Its 815 federal-and state-licensed facilities are capable of holding nearly $2 billion worth of crops at one time.

"To me, that agricultural capacity makes OPEC seem pale by comparison," says Sam Reda, chief of the warehouse division of the Kansas Grain Inspection Department. "Grain elevators are one of the major elements in this state's economy. They are vitally important to everyone, not just the farmer."

Orian Kephart is intimately acquainted with the huge vertical warehouses. He runs one of the two grain elevators in Macksville, a south-central Kansas village of about 500 people. For 34 of his 60 years, Kephart has worked at elevators in Kansas and Colorado.

Five days a week he dons clean overalls and a baseball style cap and drives the two blocks from his house to Macksville's tallest building to unlock his office by 8 a.m.

Owned by the English Brothers of nearby St. John, Kephart's elevator was built in 1955. It can store 807,000 bushels — each weighing approximately 60 pounds — in 54 separate bins.

The English elevator parallels the north side of the Santa Fe main line tracks that angle across Kansas like a string stretched from Topeka to Colorado. South of the tracks sits the Bunge elevator, Kephart's competitor, which has about one-third the storage capacity of the English facility.

Kephart is proud of his elevator and can quickly rattle off its attributes.

"Each tank is 120 feet tall, and on top there's a 40-foot-tall equipment house," he says. "We sweep out every day, and run daily tests for moisture. We've got a cyclone machine to prevent dust buildup, which can cause spontaneous combustion. At least one of us goes on top every day to make sure everything is okay."

Going "on top" means riding a one-man claustrophobic wire cage up a dark shaft to the equipment house.

The job is a hot one during Kansas' scorching summers, and sometimes it can be hazardous if an elevator operator is careless.

Kephart is finicky about the cleanliness of his elevators. Crop dust is vacuumed out every day to head off potential spontaneous combustion. A single spark could touch off an explosion, and smoking is not allowed within 50 feet of the elevator.

The veteran manager's eyes, nose and fingertips are also essential tools of his unique trade, almost as important as all the electronic gadgets in his small office.

When a farmer brings in a load of crops, Kephart climbs up the side of the big truck and probes the millions of kernels to test quality.

Experience has taught him what to look for, he says. If the shipment is wheat, it must not be more than 13 percent moisture or it won't go into storage. Corn moisture can run as high as 15½ percent of the truckload, but soybeans' moisture content can only constitute 12 percent of the load.

"I look at it, feel it, smell it," says Kephart, who's all business when he's running his fingers through the crops. "I look for foreign matter such as weeds or insects. Too many cracked kernels lowers the grade. I eyeball the color. That helps me decide which bin to store it in, and will ultimately determine the price the farmer gets for his product."

It's a big responsibility with thousands of dollars riding on his decision, but Kephart says he never really thinks about the consequences of his snap judgment.

"When you've done this job as long as I have, it's almost automatic," says the expert, who spends at least an hour of his day sniffing the pungent aroma of freshly harvested raw food.

Last year more than 15,000 truckloads of crops were weighed in on Kephart's huge scale. A third of those shipments was wheat.

The farmer — or more often, the farmer's wife — drives the loaded truck onto the scales, then pulls ahead to the elevator and dumps the grain through a grate in the concrete floor.
