Failed budget talks threaten shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a year-end display of brinksmanship, balanced-budget talks between the White House and congressional Republicans exploded in acrimony Friday, and a Christmas-season shutdown loomed for key portions of the federal government.

A defiant President Clinton accused Republicans of threatening to close the government if he wouldn't accept deep cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment. "I would not give into such a threat last month, and I will not give in today," he declared.

Republicans said the White House had proposed cooking the books to make it look like they were balancing the budget, and angrily accused the administration of bargaining in bad faith.

"Tell the American people the truth," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole shot back in remarks on the Senate floor. "Don't come on television, Mr. President, and say we're devastating this and devastating that" when it comes to key programs.

That left the talks in limbo after only a few hours — and an estimated 300,000 federal workers dangling as well.

With spending authority for several agencies set to expire at midnight, Republicans said they had no immediate plans to propose legislation to keep the government running. Both the House and Senate were expected to remain on call over the weekend, however, in case the situation changed.

A Friday midnight shutdown would principally affect what one GOP aide wryly called the "usual suspects" — shuttering federal parks around the country as well as the monuments and Smithsonian museums that dot the nation's capital.

More widespread disruption of government services would occur on Monday, when government workers arrive at their desks to begin the week and go into a well-scripted shutdown routine.

In the budget talks themselves, the White House and Smile surgery

LOS ANGELES — A little girl born with a perpetually grumpy look underwent surgery Friday that could literally bring a smile to her face. "I'm fine, and excited," 7-year-old Chelsey Thomas, clutching a favorite doll, said as she walked with her parents into Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Woodland Hills. The corners of the blond, blue-eyed girl's mouth sag because she was born without a key nerve in her face, a condition called Moebius Syndrome that afflicts up to 1,000 people nationwide. Absent atheist

AUSTIN — The mystery over the disappearance of atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair three months ago deepened with word that the IRS is seeking almost $750,000 in back taxes from her son and daughter, who vanished with her. Craig Etter, a Washington lawyer who represents Ms. O'Hair and her children, said Friday that the IRS case is being taken care of and that the family members are simply away on business. Ms. O'Hair, 76, filed the lawsuit that led to the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing school prayer. Story 12B

President refuses to turn over notes; panel urges court battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton defied a deadline Friday for turning over a former aide's Whitewater notes, prompting a deeply divided Senate investigative committee to vote to challenge him in federal court.

Republicans likened the court fight, which must first be approved by the full Senate, to a Watergate-like confrontation, while the White House continued to search in private for a resolution.

One option being discussed among administration officials was for the White House to negotiate, on its own, an agreement with Whitewater prosecutors and other investigative bodies that if it turned the notes over, the president would still have the right to claim other conversations with his attorneys were legally private.

"We will continue to pursue all available options to turn over the notes," said White House spokesman Mark Fabiani.

Commission withdraws funds from basin's substance-abuse programs

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Country Mesa, a Midland-based substance-abuse program for teenage boys, is closing down. And the Odessa-based Turning Point, which provides a non-medical detoxification program for people addicted to alcohol and other drugs, may be closed by year's end, according to Larry Carroll, who is executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers.

Funds for both substance-abuse treatment programs, which are operated by the Permian Basin Community Centers, are being withdrawn by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse (TCADA), which is "shifting emphasis from treatment to prevention" programs, Carroll said on Friday.

Substance-abuse programs represent about $2.6 million of the almost $14-million budget of the Midland-headquartered Permian Basin Community Centers, which operates facilities for mental health and mental retardation in Midland, Ector and Pecos counties.

70 mph limit: Texans let it rip

LUBBOCK (AP) — Beware, accelerator-pumping motorists: The lone police officer in Estelline still writes tickets these days in the Panhandle town reputed as a speed trap.

Some Texans say the state's highways have turned into racetracks in the first week since driving 70 mph became legal again.

"I get yelled at, cursed at and given certain hand signals because I drive the speed limit," said Lowell Bryan, who was renewing his license Friday at the Department of Public Safety office in Lubbock. "I used to drive that (fast) when I was young and foolish."

The federal law capping maximum speeds at 55 mph ended last week after 21 years in place as a tool to conserve fuel. Texas subsequently allowed a return to 70-mph speed limits on four-lane, divided highways.

The DPS, which issued 526,637 speeding tickets in 1994, had no statistics Friday on how many speeders got caught during the last week. That data are reported monthly, a spokeswoman said.

DPS trooper Jim Gonzales in Lubbock said most people are obeying the posted speed limits.

District attorney finds success as playwright

By Jeff Lightfoot
Reporter-Telegram Corresponent

BIG SPRING — Rick Hamby is a district attorney with an unusual twist. By day, this five-term official and his staff of four are responsible for prosecuting all felony offenses in a three county district. By night — or whenever time allows — he is a locally recognized playwright whose notoriety is broadening.

"My philosophy of writing plays is that first of all I want the audience entertained," Hamby said. "You can't take their money and not at least make a sincere effort at trying to entertain them. That's the bottom line.

"By the same token, I think that vacuous humor, while giving pleasure, is really sort of cut-rate. I also want to say something, not necessarily profound, but to say something to stimulate my thinking and hopefully the audiences' thinking to some degree through the medium of laughter."

Hamby's philosophy seems to be working. He has had three plays produced in Big Spring and one in Midland. A second one, "Maggie's Dance," is coming soon to Midland's Yucca Theater.

It is the winner of last year's McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition, which is sponsored by the Midland Community Theater and is one of the few comedy playwriting awards in the country.

'My philosophy of writing plays is that first of all I want the audience entertained.'
— Rick Hamby district attorney playwright

His notoriety has spread mainly by word of mouth. His last play to run in Midland, "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins," was produced in Austin thanks to a woman visiting friends in Midland.

"She confronted me at intermission and told me that she had enjoyed the first act so that she knew that her theater group would be interested in it," he said.

The Associated Press recently ran a story on him that had wide circulation in the state, and a number of contacts have come from that. Currently, a couple of theaters in East Texas are looking into producing "Gargoyles" and "Maggie's Dance," he said.

Hamby characterized "Maggie's Dance" as a love story that is not mushy. He said it's about a woman whose husband has left her and she has to raise a teen-age daughter on her own. Then there are the complications that her hotel has been condemned so that a new interstate can be built, she is surrounded by weird characters

Today, chance of rain, near 55

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, a high near 55, 20 percent chance of rain in the afternoon, and northeast winds 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 60 percent chance of rain and a low near 45.

Sunday is expected to have a high near 55 and a 70 percent chance of rain.

After an overnight low of 41, Friday's high was 64 compared with the record high for that date of 76 in 1977. The record low for today's date was 11 in 1987.

STATE

The National Weather Service reported some typically fickle Texas weather Friday: a tornado touchdown in northeast Texas, rain and thunderstorms from Longview to Waco and record-breaking high temperatures down south.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms fell ahead of a cold front that passed through North Texas Friday. National Weather Service radar showed an area of showers and thunderstorms east of a Longview-to-Waco-to-Austin line.

The forecast for North Texas calls for cloudy skies today with a slight chance of rain late. Highs will be in the low 50s to low 60s. Continued cloudiness tonight with a chance of thunderstorms and lows in the 40s.

The cold front became nearly stationary over south central Texas Friday creating mostly cloudy skies with scattered showers across the region. Temperatures were in the upper 70s to low 80s.

The South Texas forecast calls for more showers and thunderstorms. Amounts of 1-3 inches are expected today. Flash flood warnings may be issued. Highs will be in the 60s to low 70s. Northeast winds will be at 5 to 10 mph.

Skies were mostly sunny across West Texas and the Panhandle Friday as high pressure settled over the area. Temperatures ranged from 53 to 67.

NATION

A Pacific cold front brought rain and mountain snow to northern California and points north Friday while winter weather kept its grip on the upper Midwest.

Four to 8 inches of snow was on the ground at Lakeview, Ore., by early afternoon.

Crescent City, Calif., had gotten nearly 3 inches of rain from midnight to early afternoon, and flooding threatened the San Francisco Bay area after the storm earlier this week that shook skyscrapers, washed out roads and cut power to hundreds of thousands of customers.

Strong winds gusted along the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada, hitting 56 mph at Livingston, Mont.

Gusts blew apart a billboard and sent an unoccupied semi-trailer crashing into parked cars in Reno, Nev.

Although the arctic air was retreating northward, morning temperatures were still near or below zero from eastern Montana through the Dakotas and into northern Minnesota. Garrison and Minot, N.D., dropped to minus-7 for the nation's low.

Icy roads slowed the morning commute around Boston and school systems around the state delayed the start of classes in the wake of Thursday's storm, which iced roads and shut down colleges, schools, businesses and Boston's Logan International Airport.

Snow showers were expected from the upper Great Lakes across New England, while rain was forecast from southern Texas into the lower and middle Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley, with a few thunderstorms possible.

Showers and isolated thunderstorms were likely along the Pacific Coast and into the Great Basin, with snow scattered through the Cascades and Sierra Nevada and in the mountains from the Montana Rockies through the Intermountain region.

REFUSE: Whitewater panel urges court hearing solve the matter followed some tough talk by Republicans.

(From 1A)

"Why are they stonewalling?" asked Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., using a word popularized 20 years ago during Watergate to describe the Nixon White House. "Why are they fighting such a legal battle unless there is something there?"

Democrats decried the vote as a needless escalation of a dispute the White House has offered to negotiate. "This has now turned into a political game," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, the Whitewater Committee's ranking Democrat.

Split 10-8 along party lines, the GOP-led panel passed a resolution directing Senate lawyers to start a civil action to force former associate White House counsel William Kennedy to surrender his notes from a Nov. 5, 1993, meeting on Whitewater.

The action came after the White House allowed a deadline of 9 a.m. to pass without giving Kennedy permission to surrender the notes.

Clinton argues the documents should be protected by attorney-client privilege because the meeting involved both his personal attorneys and White House lawyers.

The panel's resolution heads to the full Senate, where it will be considered next Wednesday. If it is approved there, Senate lawyers will start a civil action in federal court to challenge the president's position.

The committee says it wants the notes to determine whether the White House did anything improper after obtaining confidential information in late 1993 about two Whitewater criminal investigations. The administration denies trying to interfere with the probes.

In addition to all the committee's Republicans, three Democratic senators said the panel needs the notes as part of its inquiry — John Kerry of Massachusetts, Paul Simon of Illinois and Barbara Boxer of California. But they voted against the resolution, urging more negotiations instead.

McCurry said Clinton would turn over the notes if the committee would recognize his right to attorney-client privilege. Republicans rejected a compromise Thursday that would have required them to agree the meeting was privileged in order to get the notes.

Under the arrangement the White House was trying to work out late Friday, notes of the Nov. 5 meeting would be turned over and questioning of the four presidential aides who participated would commence. In exchange, the investigative bodies would agree not to use the concession by the White House on the Nov. 5 meeting as an argument if the investigators seek to find out about other meetings that the Clintons claim are protected by attorney-client privilege.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said, "I don't want the president abused ... or the first lady abused." But he added, "If we were to buckle here today ... we could jeopardize all kinds of congressional oversight hearings."

Meanwhile, the committee voted 10-8 to serve another subpoena, this time directly to Kennedy, after his lawyer, Paul Castellitto, said the first one was defective. It had been presented to Castellitto, not to Kennedy, and Castellitto said he had not been asked to accept it on Kennedy's behalf.

Republicans also focused on a sentence in a Castellitto letter to the committee which says Kennedy "would be happy to transfer physical custody of his notes" to the White House "if that would make any difference."

Michael Chertoff, the committee's Republican counsel, said taking such a step would "very seriously impair our ability" to get the notes because Congress has no power to seek a civil contempt ruling against a government institution.

D'Amato suggested Castellitto was receiving instructions from the Clinton administration to move the documents. But Sarbanes said there was no basis for such an allegation.

SECOND: Budget negotiations collapse

(From 1A)

Republicans said they would pursue separate courtships of conservative Democrats who support a spending blueprint that falls between the two sides.

It wasn't clear when those meetings might occur.

The break-off in talks was unexpected, with both sides saying in advance that they were hopeful that progress might finally be possible and that they were ready for marathon talks through the weekend.

Each side came armed with a proposal — but the two sides were so suspicious of one another they decided to ask Budget Director Alice Rivlin flip a coin to see whether the White House or Republicans would go first.

The GOP won, and White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta began discussing the president's new proposal.

The White House moved $121 billion closer to a balanced budget than in its most recent previous offer last week. Included was a recommendation to scale back Clinton's tax cut and close billions of dollars in corporate tax loopholes. But the bulk of the savings came from using more optimistic economic assumptions than the ones contained in the Republican budget — provisions that Republicans denounced as "good old fashioned smoke and mirrors."

For their part, Republicans proposed a $5 billion nick in their tax cut, and said they would ease the hit on Medicare, Medicaid, education and environment that their earlier balanced-budget measure would have imposed. Clinton vetoed that bill last week, saying it contained "unacceptable cuts" in programs he considers vital.

After only a few hours of discussions, the two sides decided there was no point in continuing, and each swiftly sought political advantage in the ashes.

Democratic divisions have been visible all year, but cracks in Republican unity have appeared in recent days, as well. GOP officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Dole and Gingrich initially decided to advance legislation swiftly to reopen the government, although on conditions certain to draw a presidential veto.

These officials said that when Gingrich presented the idea to the other members of the House leadership, though, they rebelled at the prospect of any bill, saying they had long been insisting they wouldn't allow the government to reopen until Clinton submitted an offer that eliminates deficits under CBO's economic forecasts.

But political calculations lie at the heart of the budget battle that has been waged all year.

ABUSE: Commission withdraws funds

stance-abase budget is being retained as school-based and after-school programs.

Country Mesa, which is in rural Midland County, has facilities for 12 adolescent boys and has been phasing out its program in anticipation of cuts by TCADA. It has been in operation for six years.

The fate of Turning Point is more tenuous.

Turning Point, which operates a two-phase program, detoxification and intense residential treatment (IRT), is losing its TCADA money. But the programs may be rescued if he can secure funding from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and other sources, Carroll said.

"When they come out of detox, they go into intensive residential treatment (IRT) for a certain length of time," Carroll said of the residents, "and then they go into residential (treatment) where they can go out and work. In intensive residential treatment (IRT), they are in programming, in counseling, and in classes all day long."

Seventeen clients are in Turning Point.

"Now, we are trying to work with criminal justice and other agencies to get some funding for detox," Carroll said. "If we don't get that done, we won't be providing detox."

Carroll noted that funding for adult chemical-abuse recovery outpatient services will be provided only for persons on parole through funding from the Department of Criminal Justice.

who depend on her big-heartedness and the hotel is inhabited by two dozen Honduran packroaches.

Hamby described them as "not your regular cockroaches, first of all because they're giant. The experts say that they have a greater intelligence than most mammals and most phone company employees. They call them packroaches because they're traders, and they always get the best end of the deal."

Hamby enjoys working with the Midland Community Theatre, referring to it as a professional group.

"There is usually very little that I have had to do in the past to be satisfied with what they do," he said. "First of all, a writer hopes that whoever does his play has respect for the word. The theater group there has imminent respect. They know that every word has a purpose, hopefully, and they respect that. That's not to say that they don't have and have had in the past many important and valuable suggestions. On most of those occasions I have heartily welcomed their suggestions and I think my plays have become better because of it."

Hamby said that by the time "Gargoyles" reached the Yucca Theater, it was a much better play than when it ran at the Midland Community Theatre. The more it was performed the more it matured and became refined, he said.

"Maggie's Dance" has had a reading-theater production in Midland, the purpose of which is to allow the author to see it and have suggestions occur to him as to how to make it a better play. The play that will appear at the Yucca Theater is about 30 percent rewritten from the reading-theater version, Hamby said.

Hamby, with a major in history and English, claims to have been interested in writing all of his life. He became serious about the pursuit eight to 10 years ago mainly because it gave him a therapeutic outlet. Most importantly to him, writing is an outlet that can be done in the privacy of his own home with the benefit of not drawing attention to himself.

"You know, a lot of people play golf. I started playing golf when I was 10 and still play like I was a 10-year-old. Being a politician, you can't really go out on the golf course without everybody saying 'why aren't you in the office?'"

Although his job as district attorney keeps him "busier than a cranberry merchant," he stresses the importance of consistent and disciplined writing and reading.

"Ideally you want to spend some time (writing) everyday, but if I told you I did that I'd be lying. There are days when you simply cannot do it.

"I carry a notebook with me and jot down whatever thoughts about human nature I may notice. If I hear somebody saying something that I think is amusing in some old honkytonk, I write it down."

Hamby, whose other activities include "supporting my wife's shopping habit and my children's contention that there's a never-ending supply of money," is relatively new to playwriting and describes himself as a frustrated novelist who started writing plays as an exercise.

"I thought it might help me with my dialogue. And actually I've had far more success with my plays than I have with my novels," he said.

He currently has his best novel prospect to date, and said he is "dealing with a publisher right now."

Hamby has humble aspirations when it comes to his writing future:

"The only goal I have is to keep writing. Hopefully I don't have any sort of puffed-up expectations about where my writing may go. I can't help but think that the good Lord and luck will intervene if it's meant to be. If it's not, that's not going to change the fact that I need it. I don't do it to make a living, I do it because I need to do it."

State of war ends in Bosnia for all but Serb held sections of Sarajevo

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The leader of Bosnia's Serbs declared an end to war Friday in all areas except Serb sections of Sarajevo, complicating the transition to peace as plans to send in NATO peacekeepers moved ahead.

Radovan Karadzic's patchy nullification of his war order was designed to demonstrate a commitment to peace — and bitter opposition to the decision to unify postwar Sarajevo under the rule of his Muslim and Croat enemies.

Peace came to Bosnia on Thursday after Balkan leaders signed a U.S.-brokered accord that divides Bosnia into two regions — one controlled by Serbs, the other by a federation of Muslims and Croats. The two regions will be joined under the umbrella of a weak central government.

Under the peace accord, the nine Serb-held neighborhoods of Sarajevo are to be reunited with the rest of the capital under the Muslim-Croat federation.

Karadzic, indicted by a U.N. tribunal on war crimes charges, revoked a combat order issued to Bosnian Serb troops on July 28, the Serb news agency SRNA reported Friday. But he exempted Serb-controlled sectors from the order.

No fighting was reported in Sarajevo Friday, but there were fears that Karadzic's defiance, coupled with the tensions already existing in Serb-held neighborhoods, would provoke more violence.

The city's reunification is anathema to many of Sarajevo's 70,000 to 80,000 Serbs. Many have threatened to flee, fearing reprisals for the relentless Serb siege of the city throughout the 3 1/2-year war.

To stave off a mass exodus, officials have hinted that there might be some flexibility in the timetable for handing over the Serb neighborhoods to the Bosnian government.

Aleksa Buha, a Bosnian Serb official, told Bosnian Serb television late Thursday that "the handover of Sarajevo will be postponed for a year or so." Others spoke of three months.

About 60,000 NATO troops, including 20,000 Americans, will be deployed soon to enforce the peace.

Fog prevented two dozen military flights carrying American soldiers and equipment from landing in Tuzla, the industrial town in northeastern Bosnia where U.S. forces will be based.

U.S. military officials still have not given the formal deployment order, so there was no hard deadline to be missed. But after two days of fog and forecasts for more miserable weather in smoggy Tuzla, pressure was building.

"If there's a qualified preacher in the crowd, I could use the help," U.S. Air Force Col. Neal Patton told reporters in the misty cold outside the airfield.

In Brussels, Belgium, on Friday, NATO's top political body provisionally approved the deployment plan, an alliance official said on condition of anonymity. It will get NATO's final stamp of approval after the U.N. Security Council votes to turn over its Bosnia peacekeeping mission to the alliance, which is expected shortly.

But rebuilding trust will be a slow process — and not only between the Serbs and their foes.

Muslims and Croats — allies who turned against each other for about a year during the war — have been joined in a marriage of convenience, and the problems of that union have only just begun.

Judicial authorities under Bosnia's Muslim-led government issued arrest warrants for 82 Bosnian Croats, including all Croat political and military officials in central Bosnia, President Franjo Tudjman of Croatia said Friday. He did not say what crimes they were accused of.

He denounced the action as "contrary to the idea" of the federation and the peace deal signed in Paris.

The death of five foreign Islamic fighters in a clash with Croat troops also illustrated lingering tensions.

Parliamentary elections disrupted by fighting of Chechen rebels

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Fighting flared in independence-driven Chechnya Friday in what appeared to be a rebel-launched offensive intended to disrupt parliamentary elections imposed by Moscow.

The separatists, who have demanded that Russian troops withdraw before any vote is held, seized buildings and offices in the city of Urus-Martan and held to positions taken a day earlier in Gudermes, Chechnya's second-largest town, the military said.

The roar of Russian howitzers shelling Urus-Martan could be heard some 12 miles away in Grozny, the capital, in the most severe rebel attacks in months.

The surge was clearly timed to mar the elections to choose a new Chechen leader and deputies to Russia's parliament. Balloting began Thursday and will continue until Sunday. Early elections were intended to give voters more time to cast their ballots.

Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, speaking in the Volga River city of Nizhny Novgorod, said the rebels will not succeed in sabotaging the vote.

Yakub Sabirov, deputy head of Chechnya's Moscow-installed election commission, reported an average 30 percent turnout.

Twenty-five percent of Chechnya's 450,000 registered voters must turn out for the vote to be legitimate, and a simple majority is needed to win. Doku Zavgayev, the present head of the Kremlin-installed government, is running against two little-known candidates.

"I voted for Zavgayev," said Saliga Asmayeva, a 42-year-old economist from Grozny, the capital. "I trust him more than all the others."

Voting was brisk in downtown Grozny despite armed attacks that destroyed two polling stations since Thursday.

"Many people have been voting yesterday and today," said Beslan Elmurzayev, a Chechen police officer guarding one station.

Still, the accuracy of turnout figures from other areas remained in question, and in many villages and towns voters said they will boycott the election, either because they oppose it or fear rebel reprisals.

Flights to and from Grozny were canceled until Tuesday, and two election observers from the Council of Europe could not make it to the city, Interfax said.

More than 50,000 people have died and 400,000 have become refugees in the year-long war to determine whether Chechnya remains under Russian rule or breaks away.

Fighting broke out with new force Thursday and again Friday, with rebels firing small-arms and mortar rounds at the railway terminal and military commandant's office in Gudermes, 20 miles east of Grozny. Russian forces reportedly recaptured a police office seized earlier by the rebels.

The military command said at least 22 servicemen had been killed since Thursday in Gudermes, and another 38 were missing.

In Urus-Martan, the rebels seized a number of key buildings early Friday, including the commandant's office and a communications center.

Meanwhile, Russian human rights activists and lawyers met Friday in Stockholm to set up a "moral tribunal" into alleged war crimes in Chechnya.

No one is expected to be charged. Rather, its purpose is to increase public awareness in Russia and abroad in the hopes of pressuring Russian leaders to solve the conflict peacefully.

Ultranationalist likely to win big in Russian elections

MOSCOW (NYT) — Lifted by strong TV appearances, ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky has engineered a comeback in the last week and is likely to command a major bloc in the next parliament, an extensive new poll indicates.

"The latest data shows that Zhirinovsky is going to surprise us again," said Leonid Sedov of the Russian Center for Public Opinion and Market Research. "He is gaining because his method of agitation was much more organized and more catching."

After interviewing 1,600 voters nationwide, the survey by Russia's largest polling firm found that five of the 43 competing parties are likely to gain enough votes in Sunday's election to surpass the 5 percent barrier needed to win party list seats in the next State Duma, the lower house of parliament.

The Communist Party of the Russian Federation continued to lead the list with 16 percent of the electorate, about the same as in past surveys.

The only other parties which Sedov said are likely to win party list seats, along with the percentage of respondents favoring them:

- Zhirinovsky's Liberal Democratic Party of Russia, 10 percent (up from 5 percent one week earlier.)
- Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin's Our Home is Russia, 8.5 percent.
- Liberal Grigory Yavlinsky's Yabloko party, 8.5 percent.
- Women of Russia, 7 percent.

Fifty percent of the respondents either supported other parties, opposed all the parties or said they would not vote.

The poll found that 25 percent of Russians could recall Zhirinovsky's punk-inspired TV commercials and his freewheeling campaign interviews.

Communist, nationalist nostalgia dominates Russian elections

MOSCOW (NYT) — Voter nostalgia for communism and hardline nationalism dominated the campaign and may help shape the new parliament as Russia on Sunday holds its second democratic election since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

Russians consider the race for the 450-seat State Duma, the lower house of parliament, an unofficial primary that will influence the presidential vote scheduled for next June.

A late poll suggested the revived Communist Party was in the lead, a remarkable reversal of fortunes four years after its demise with the fall of the Soviet Union.

Marketing themselves along the lines of a West European Social Democratic Party, the Communists have struck a chord among discontented voters with promises to restore the old times that 55 percent of Russians now say were better times.

Also poised to do well, according to the poll released on Thursday, was ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky and his Liberal Democratic Party, who appeared to have benefited from a late surge in support.

Like the Communists, the ultranationalist hardliners hope to capitalize on public opposition to President Boris Yeltsin's free market reforms and yearnings for a return to Russia's past glory.

Leonid Sedov of the Russian Center for Public Opinion and Market Research, which released the poll, said the Communists and ultranationalists together may do well enough to control a majority of seats in the new Duma.

Yeltsin, still recuperating from a heart attack, appeared on nationwide television Friday with a fervent appeal that voters not let authoritarian forces retake control of Russia. "You must not allow forces of the past to regain power," he said. "You must not allow them to bring this country back to the times when everyone was instructed on what to think, what clothes and hair styles to have, and what songs to sing."

No single party or bloc seemed likely to emerge with two-thirds of the seats in parliament, the margin needed to overrule presidential vetoes. As a result, the lower house is likely to remain ineffective.

But the results of the election could reshape Russia's political and economic debate — and determine who emerges as its next president.

Yeltsin, 64, has said he will wait until after the election to decide whether to seek a second, five-year term. If healthy, he is expected to run. Communist leader Gennadi Zyuganov is among his potential opponents.

Yeltsin, who has no party affiliation, gave a barely veiled endorsement to the Our Home is Russia bloc led by Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, urging voters to back candidates who can establish "stability and accord in our common home — Russia."

Chernomyrdin may run for president next year if Yeltsin bows out.

Our Home will be hard-pressed to emerge with the greatest number of seats in parliament since its tight-money policies in the name of the free market are broadly unpopular. The late poll showed it running no better than third.

Even so, the so-called "party of power" has wielded formidable advantages, including control of state television and links with local officials across Russia's 11 times zones.

In the closing days of the campaign, it hit the Communists head-on with television advertisements contrasting wacky looking Russians professing confidence in the Communists and solid citizens backing Our Home.

When an expected 57 percent of Russia's 105 million voters go to the polls to join thousands in remote locales who voted early, they will find paper ballots bearing a huge, puzzling list of 43 parties. The potential for fraud and mistake in the complex, two-tier voting system is expansive.

The "democratic" parties that lean to the West and to capitalism appeared to have plummeted in popularity as support for the Communists rose. The Yabloko party of liberal economist Grigory Yavlinsky loomed as the only opposition reform faction likely to garner the necessary 5 percent of the votes needed to win seats in the new parliament.

The moderately nationalistic Congress of Russian Communities, driven by the promises of retired Gen. Alexander Lebed to protect Russians stranded in nations that broke from the Soviet empire, apparently has lost support in the new surge for Zhirinovsky and may not achieve 5 percent.

In the center, the most popular party is Women of Russia. It could rank well in the party vote by scoring high among the 30 percent of undecided voters, a majority of whom are women.

Attention focused on party popularity, though only 250 seats in the Duma will be filled by votes for parties. The remainder will be determined by balloting in single-member districts where candidates often don't express party affiliation.

Voters will get two ballots, one listing candidates for the local district and a second listing the 43 parties which will split up 250 Duma seats based on the nationwide vote each receives.

Under the system of proportional representation, a party must get at least 5 percent to be eligible for seats through the party list ballot. Only four to eight parties are expected to pass the 5 percent barrier.

The late poll showed the Communists leading with around 16 percent of the party vote. They also are fielding candidates in at least 130 single-mandate districts, second only to Zhirinovsky's 187.

Anyone spoiling to challenge results likely will have ample grounds. Charges already have been leveled of campaign spending violations, and widespread suspicion that results were falsified in the last election has led to doubts about the credibility of Sunday's vote count.

International election observers may show up at more than the 25 percent of polling places they monitored in the 1993 election, but they still will not be permitted to view the actual vote counting.

Israel donates $100 million to renovate city of Jesus' youth

NAZARETH, Israel (AP) — Now that Israel is giving Bethlehem to the Palestinians, it is spending $100 million to turn the town of Jesus' youth — Nazareth — into a tourist attraction.

Nestled in a horseshoe-shaped valley in the Galilee in northern Israel, the city of 60,000 needs some work. Its roads are often clogged with traffic jams and a maze of TV antennas hide church steeples from view.

"It's got an image problem," said tour guide Yadin Roman.

Though some 1 million tourists visit this city every year, Mayor Ramez Jarrisi said most only stay a few hours, long enough to visit the religious and historical sites.

The government hopes to double the number of tourists by the end of the century. It plans to invest $100 million to widen streets, renovate the old market and restore 19th-century Venetian-style homes that have ceiling frescoes and red tile roofs.

The "Nazareth 2000" project will add 3,000 hotel rooms to the existing 600 and develop attractions to keep visitors busy "for a few days at least," Jarrisi said.

The facelift for Nazareth comes at a time when Israeli troops are pulling out of the West Bank town of Bethlehem, which tradition says is the site of Jesus' birth. This Christmas will be the first one celebrated under Palestinian rule in 28 years.

"The withdrawal of the Israeli forces from Bethlehem brings the focus of Christmas celebrations in Israel back to Nazareth," said Mayor Jarrisi.

The project represents the largest investment Israel has made in the Arab sector, said David Harnik, head of the Israel Government Tourist Corp., overseeing the project.

One-fifth of Israeli citizens are Arab, and the Labor Party has depended on Arab legislators since 1992 for its parliamentary majority and for support in the Mideast peace process. "The government definitely wanted to do something for the Arab population," Harnik said.

As part of the project, a system of promenades and observation posts will be built to take visitors to all corners of the city.

This way, said project architect Adeeb Daoud, visitors can wander in Nazareth's markets and soak in the town's atmosphere. "Our aim is to preserve, not turn Nazareth into a Disneyland," Daoud said.

The focal point of Nazareth is the Church of the Annunciation, one of the largest churches in the Middle East.

Completed in 1969, it is built on the foundations of a Byzantine basilica. This is the site where many Christians believe the angel Gabriel told Mary she would give birth to Jesus.

Today, visitors enter through a small side entrance, since the main door is blocked by a school. But next year, the school will be moved to its new buildings and the old structure torn down.

Planners will also repave small piazzas with local Galilee stones and turn the congested main road into a one-way, tree-lined boulevard with a separate lane for buses.

WHO raises AIDS estimate to 18.5 million

GENEVA (AP) — An estimated 18.5 million people worldwide are infected with the AIDS virus — a sharply higher number attributed to better reporting rather a surge in the epidemic, the U.N. health agency said Friday.

About 6 million people are thought to have developed AIDS since the start of the epidemic in the late 1970s, the World Health Organization said. Of these, 4.5 million have died.

An estimated 6,000 people are infected each day with the HIV virus that eventually causes AIDS. Of the 18.5 million already infected, 1.5 million are children, the agency said.

WHO previously estimated that 1 million children and between 13 million and 15 million adults are infected with HIV and a total of 4.5 million people had developed the disease.

The agency said the new figures reflected an improvement in estimating techniques, better HIV prevalence studies and other research, rather than a sudden jump in new infections.

On average, it takes 10 years for someone infected with HIV to develop AIDS, which attacks the immune system and is ultimately fatal. It is spread through unprotected sexual intercourse, contaminated blood and from mother to child. There is currently no cure and no vaccine.

Two-thirds of the estimated HIV cases are in sub-Saharan Africa, and three-quarters of the full-flown AIDS cases, WHO said.

India had the most HIV carriers — an estimated 1.75 million of its 1 billion people. Thailand — another country where experts fear an explosion in cases — had 700,000 HIV carriers.

The highest proportional HIV rate was in Botswana, with about 18 percent of sexually active adults infected. An estimated 17 percent of adults aged 15-49 had the virus in Zambia and Zimbabwe and 15 percent in Uganda.

In the Americas, Haiti had the highest proportion of HIV carriers, at 4.4 percent. The tourist resort of the Bahamas followed at 3.9 percent, with Barbados at 2.8 percent. In the United States, where an estimated 700,000 people were HIV-positive at the end of last year, the infection rate was 0.5 percent.

In Europe, Spain had the highest rate of HIV infections, with 0.58 percent of sexually active adults, followed by Switzerland with 0.2 percent, WHO said.

WHO is forced to rely on estimates to gauge the spread of HIV and AIDS because actual cases reported by governments give little idea of the true picture, especially in Africa.

In North Korea, there is not a single reported case of HIV.

Thus, although WHO estimated the true number of AIDS cases at 6 million, the actual number reported by governments was 1.3 million. The United States accounted for 39 percent of all the reported cases but only 7 percent of the estimated cases.

The figures for HIV infections are for the end of 1994, while the AIDS figures include cases that developed in 1995. A WHO official said there was a slight overlap in the two categories.

WHO begins two year Ebola transmition study

GENEVA (AP) — Admitting they are baffled by the Ebola virus, scientists on Friday launched a two-year research program to find out how the deadly disease is transmitted to humans.

There are few clear leads, despite intensive research since an outbreak that killed 245 people in Kikwit, Zaire this year, said David Heymann of the World Health Organization.

The disease caused another scare last week when a Liberian man living in the Ivory Coast was found to have a relatively mild strain. It is not known yet whether the four people who shared the man's hut near the border between the two countries have contracted the virus. Heymann said there are no signs Ebola has spread to neighboring villages.

A WHO team is expected to arrive in Angola soon to check on rumors of two Ebola cases there.

The Ebola virus, which causes high fever and hemorrhaging, rarely attacks humans. When it does, death is the outcome in up to 80 percent of cases, depending on the strength of the particular strain.

Scientists know how the disease is spread among people. What they don't know is what gives it to humans. WHO gathered Ebola experts from around the world Friday to come up with strategies for finding the natural host.

The U.N. agency also announced it will pay $250,000 to fund a two year project to investigate chimpanzees in the Tai forest in the Ivory Coast. At least two of the chimpanzees died of Ebola last year and a Swiss researcher performing an autopsy was infected.

Pierre Formenty, a French expert working for the Ivory Coast's central laboratory for animal pathology, said the chimpanzees were not the original carriers.

North Korea to receive two reactors

NEW YORK (AP) — Ending years of negotiation, a $4.5 billion deal signed Friday gives North Korea two new nuclear reactors in exchange for an agreement from the reclusive Communist country to freeze its nuclear program.

The agreement with a U.S.-led consortium aims to replace North Korea's nuclear reactors with ones that are both safer and produce far less plutonium, which is a key ingredient in some atomic weapons. Western officials believe North Korea now has enough plutonium to make at least one nuclear bomb.

Both sides hailed the pact as an important step toward putting into place a 1994 accord between the United States and North Korea that aimed to reduce the threat of North Korea building nuclear weapons.

The business deal caps more than three years of tough political negotiations that began in 1992 when North Korea abruptly withdrew from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

After talks with the United States, North Korea retracted its decision, and in 1994 it agreed to freeze its nuclear program in exchange for the reactors.

South Korea will cover most of the expense, with Japan promising a "substantial" amount toward the two 1,000-megawatt light-water reactors, expected to be finished by 2003.

The United States will provide heavy fuel oil until the reactors are finished. It also will help pay for storing spent fuel.

House passes $265 billion defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $265 billion defense bill aimed at increasing weapons spending while restricting presidential power to deploy troops won lopsided House passage Friday. It also would ban abortions at military hospitals overseas and expel service members with AIDS.

The compromise measure, which House and Senate negotiators agreed upon this week, passed the House 267-149, and the Senate began debating it. A vote was not expected until next week and President Clinton has threatened to veto the bill, which adds $7 billion to his request for the current fiscal year.

Although the bill is similar to a defense appropriations bill that already is law, it includes policy provisions not in the spending measure.

Among other things, it requires the president to certify a national security need before placing U.S. troops under United Nations command. It also specifies deployment of a national missile defense system by 2003, a move the Clinton administration says may abrogate the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with Russia.

On social issues, the bill would prohibit abortions at overseas military hospitals and require the automatic discharge of service members who test positive for the AIDS virus.

"This is unnecessary and discriminatory," Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said of the AIDS provision. "It would preclude the military from using personnel who are completely professional in their jobs."

The abortion provision, he said, was incorporated into the bill without hearings on it.

But Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., said hearings weren't needed because "every single military doctor in Europe and the Pacific does not want to crush a baby's skull in the mother's womb and abort them."

National Security Advisor Anthony Lake told Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, that Clinton plans to veto the bill.

If a veto occurs and Congress fails to find some other solution, a 2.4 percent military pay raise and a 5.2 percent housing allowance increase for married service members, both due to take effect Jan. 1, would be placed on hold.

Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., said, "We need to add the dollars it takes to protect our kids" in the military. But Rep. Lynn Woolsey, D-Calif., said the bill "wastes too much money on hardware we don't need."

If the bill wins Senate passage, little time would remain to settle differences between the president and Congress, which is scheduled to recess for the year at the end of next week.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., ranking Democrat on the armed services panel, criticized the bill for spending more on missile defense than either the House or Senate originally approved. Nunn also criticized buy-American provisions that would "result in enormous cost increases for naval vessels."

Both the House and Senate passed separate versions of the authorization bill. The differences between them were reconciled this week and are being voted on again by each chamber.

Total spending authorized in the bill comes closer to the Senate-passed version. But House negotiators insisted on provisions that would authorize $493 million to expand the B-2 bomber fleet, cut staff in the office of the defense secretary by 25 percent over five years, and reduce the defense acquisition work force by 15,000 in fiscal 1996, which began Oct. 1.

Of the $7 billion increase, $5.2 billion would go to new weapons, including:

—$1.9 billion for ammunition, $440 million above Clinton's request.

—$823 million for 18 Navy FA-18 fighters, six more than Clinton requested.

—$471 million for six Air Force F-15s and six F-16s not requested by Clinton.

—$1.3 billion for a Navy helicopter carrier not requested by Clinton.

—$974 million for an amphibious transport ship not requested by Clinton.

The bill is H.R. 1530.

Smoke victim's widower to get worker's comp

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For 18 years, Mildred Wiley was a nurse in the psychiatric ward at a Veterans Administration hospital, caring for patients who smoked so much that she often worked in a blue haze.

Last week, the U.S. Labor Department ordered the VA to pay her widower $21,500 a year until his death — half of her salary — in the first workers' compensation case in the nation linking secondhand smoke to a cancer death.

In the past, the government has awarded claims for respiratory illness and other ailments linked to secondhand smoke, said John Banzhaf, executive director of Action on Smoking and Health, a Washington-based anti-smoking group.

In Mrs. Wiley's case, the Labor Department ruled Dec. 8 that secondhand smoke was partly to blame for her death from lung cancer in 1991. Mrs. Wiley didn't smoke. Nor does her husband.

"This is great news, even though this one at the moment is confined to workers' compensation," Banzhaf said. "It will alert people to the fact that they can make a claim which they didn't think they could make before. Employers are going to say, 'If we don't ban smoking, we could face future claims.'"

Mrs. Wiley's husband, Philip E. Wiley of Charlotte, N.C., also has sued seven large tobacco companies. The workers' compensation ruling is not admissible in court.

Michael York, a lawyer for Philip Morris, the maker of Marlboro cigarettes and a defendant in the lawsuit, said he doesn't expect the claim to affect Wiley's lawsuit.

"The ruling appears to be based on the opinion of a single medical professor and at trial we expect to present substantial medical testimony to rebut that opinion," York said.

Wiley's lawyer, Joe Young, said that patients at the VA hospital in Marion, about 60 miles northeast of Indianapolis, were allowed to smoke freely when Mrs. Wiley worked there and that the ventilation was poor.

"Some of her co-workers testified that sometimes you could not see the heads of the patients due to the blue haze of the smoke in the rooms," Young said.

Simpson's girlfriend testifies to ending relationship hours before infamous double homicide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Offering surprising information that the jury at O.J. Simpson's trial never heard, model Paula Barbieri testified that she dumped Simpson just hours before his ex-wife and a friend were slain, a lawyer said Friday.

"It's obviously important information, a significant event on a significant day, and it may explain a lot," said Michael Brewer, a lawyer for Ronald Goldman's mother.

Barbieri the first witness to give a deposition in the wrongful-death lawsuit against Simpson, told lawyers Thursday that she called Simpson at 7 a.m. on June 12, 1994, and left a "Dear John" message for him, Brewer said.

"The relationship as far as she was concerned was over," Brewer said.

About 15 hours later, Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and Goldman, her friend, were slashed to death outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

At Simpson's trial, the defense portrayed him as a happy man on the day of the murders — not someone reeling because he'd been dumped by his girlfriend.

Barbieri's revelation raised questions of why prosecutors didn't call her as a witness during his trial.

"If they did know about (the call), it's incompetency not to call her," said Loyola University law professor Stanley Goldman. "There's their motive: Simpson's frustration with his women."

Prosecutors had suggested the relationship was on the rocks, but neither they nor the defense revealed the "Dear John" message. Sources speaking on condition of anonymity said both sides knew about it and decided against using it because it was unclear whether Simpson got the message before the murders.

The message was left the morning after Barbieri and Simpson attended a Beverly Hills fund-raiser, where, a defense witness said, they appeared deeply in love.

■ More National news/5B

At the trial, another model, Gretchen Stockdale, testified outside the jury's presence that he had left her a message about three hours before his ex-wife's slaying, saying he was "finally ... totally unattached with everybody."

Kodak on Web

Eastman Kodak Co. introduced new software this week to allow interactive manipulation of higher quality photographic images on the World Wide Web. The software will permit users to enlarge images that meet the standards of Kodak's Photo CD storage system. It will also let users zoom in to examine details of the images that would otherwise be too small to see. Pictures can be cropped and rotated.

The company said that the software would include a color management system to assure that colors remained accurate in the transferr from one medium to another.

Images have been available on the Web using other graphic formats. But Kodak's technology is a 24-bit format, rather than the 8-bit formats now in use and Kodak said its sysem wouldproduce images of nearly photographic quality.

Initially, the images will be available to users of the Mosaic browser operating in four platforms for Windows: 3.1, 95, NT and Windows for Workgroups.

Pay extra

LOS ANGELES — Deciding where to shop for a PC can be at least as confusing as figuring out what PC you're shopping for. If price alone were the issue, everybody would be buying no-name clones from out-of-state mail-order vendors, who in addition to offering highly competitive prices can often dispense with sales tax (although they will charge for shipping).

But as with any big-ticket item, you may want to pay extra for service and reliability.

"A lot of people still want to kick the tires before they buy," said Bill Howard, the executive editor of PC Magazine.

"If you buy from a store and there's a problem, instead of waiting on a telephone line to talk to an associate you can come into a store and talk to the manager," said Monty Herscovitch, PC-Home Office supervisor at Best Buy in the Woodland Hills section of Los Angeles. "It's a more personalized service." These days, Howard added, the amount of savings traditionally associated with buying from a mail order catalog isn't as dramatic as it used to be."

USER ERROR

Report of high Internet use is challenged

By Peter Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

A Nielsen survey that concluded that there are more than 24 million highly educated and affluent adult users of the Internet in the United States and Canada may have "significantly inflated" its findings, perhaps by millions, the study's principal academic adviser now says.

The highly publicized findings of the Commercenet/Nielsen Internet Demographic Survey are based on fundamental flaws that render its conclusions invalid, said Donna L. Hoffman, a business professor at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn.

The survey was conducted by Nielsen, a unit of Dun & Bradstreet that performs marketing research, and paid for by Commercenet, a group of companies that hopes to foster computerized commerce.

Other attempts to measure the size of the rapidly growing global computer network have found far fewer regular users, although numbers vary widely. And some of the conclusions of the Nielsen report surprised even the most ardent proponents of the Internet, while encouraging others to step up their efforts in electronic commerce.

Among the Nielsen study's more surprising findings were that adults collectively spend as much time browsing the Internet each week as they do watching videocassettes, that 18 million adults use the Internet's World Wide Web and that 2.5 million people have bought goods or services on the Web.

Paul Lindstrom, vice president of Nielsen Media Research in New York, defended the accuracy of the survey — which is being sold for $5,000 to $10,000 a copy to businesses — and played down the criticism from Professor Hoffman.

"I wouldn't swear the absolute numbers in the study were the truth, quote unquote, but I'm absolutely certain we have better data than anything else out there for providing solid information on making decisions on where to go on the Internet," Lindstrom said.

Cathy Medich, executive director of Commercenet,

Cyber-stitching circles a sign of re-energized sewing industry

By Sandy Shore
AP Business Writer

DENVER — This is the time of the year when fabric and craft stores are filled with reds, greens and golds for holiday decorations and clothes.

Are people really still sewing out there? Do they have the time?

■ The Internet

Yes, but these days, they might be found behind a personal computer as easily as behind a sewing machine. Like most other pursuits, sewing has gone high-tech.

Every night, Judy Heim clicks onto online services to chat with seamstresses around the world about everything from apparel to zigzag stitching.

"None of my friends sew," said Heim, of Madison, Wis. and the author of "The Needlecrafter's Computer Companion." So, she says, "You log on and you read all these messages. People talk about all these sewing things and you learn a lot."

The '90s version of the sewing circle is a result of the big changes in the sewing and crafts industry over the past two decades. The business has found renewed life, and even room to expand, from consumers who sew and do craftwork not to save money, but for personal satisfaction.

"Sure, you can buy a blouse for $10, but you don't get the same look, fit," said Terry Siemsen of Arvada, Colo. "I can do it as well, if not better, for not as much money."

Microsoft report aside, Macintosh takes high road to Superhighway

By Peter H. Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

Macintosh users were stung by a recent report, paid for and supervised by the Microsoft Corp., which concluded that Windows 95 users are more productive, more accurate and better looking than Macintosh or OS/2 users.

The results seem to contradict a similar study conducted several years ago, paid for and supervised by Apple Computer Inc., which concluded that Macintosh operating system (Mac OS) users were more productive, more accurate and of higher moral character than Windows users.

■ Review

The studies ought not to be taken too seriously, of course. All one really needs to know is that Windows 95 is an improvement over Windows 3.1 and that computers based on the Mac OS are still easier to set up and use than comparable computers based on Windows 95.

That, and one other thing: in years ahead, it will matter less and less which software religion one embraces, Windows or Mac or OS/2 or Unix or Nintendo. What will matter, if the computer industry's visionaries, including Bill Gates, are to be believed, is how well the computer connects to the Internet.

When I opened a copy of Gates's new book, "The Road Ahead" (the first book I have encountered that comes with its own technical support telephone hotline), the Windows-only CD-ROM that comes with it promised to connect me to the Internet's World Wide Web via a program called Microsoft Explorer. To truncate a long and tedious story, it has not so far succeeded. I am still waiting for the book's technical support experts to call me back.

Meanwhile, on the Macintosh Quadra computer down the hall, I installed a CD-ROM called the Apple Internet Connection Kit. The kit, which has a suggested price of $59, promises quick and easy Internet access for anyone with a Mac, a modem and a credit card.

The Connection Kit comprises a suite of programs, including Netscape Navigator, Claris E-mailer Lite, News Watcher, Fetch, Alladin Stuffit Expander, NCSA Telnet, Adobe Acrobat Reader, Sparkle, Real Audio, MacTCP, MacPPP and Apple Quicktime VR Player. Most of the software can be obtained from the Internet without cost, or at low cost. The catch is that one already has to be on the Internet to get it, or have a friend who is on the Internet, and

Gates turns his network inside out

By Warren Wilson
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Just when you thought you'd figured out the online world, Microsoft is turning it inside out.

For millions of people, standard procedure is to sign onto an online service and go from there to the Internet. In the future, Microsoft says, it's likelier you'll jump on the Internet first and go from there to the services — if they have anything you want.

The Internet will offer so much free information and activity, Microsoft figures, that the challenge facing the online services — including its own 3-month-old Microsoft Network — will be to develop content valuable enough that someone will pay for it.

In the short term, that someone will be computer users paying fees for subscriptions and connect time. Over the long term, advertising will be the main force — a major shift now in its infancy.

Already, Microsoft Vice President Pete Higgins said Thursday, a great deal of content developed for MSN is available for free at Microsoft's Web site, www.msn.com.

For MSN to succeed in the long term, Higgins said, it will pursue a "value added" strategy to differentiate itself from the pack, providing easy, guided access to the Internet, high-quality content and "communities" such as chat groups and topic forums that people find valuable enough to return to.

"We want to be the best place" from which to start out on the Internet, Higgins said at Microsoft's daylong Internet strategy workshop at Seattle Center.

He demonstrated a new feature with which each user can customize his or her view of the MSN "home page" to include stock quotes, sports scores, news on topics of personal interest and pointers to favorite Internet sites.

Describing Microsoft's push for quality content, he cited its new relationships with NBC, the DreamWorks studio and "Crossfire's" Michael Kinsley.

WEB: Many sites reflect lack of experience of page designer paper and works with illustrators, editors and writers to fashion content.

But it is Coutu, a programmer, who writes the code, creates the hypertext links and manipulates the digital files of graphics and text to turn Reducker's ideas into interactive offerings. One day recently, for instance, he was working on Trade Show Central, a site that will provide information on shows around the world.

With the corporate rush onto the Web, the demand for site designers is outstripping supply. The Web has emerged as the Internet's center of commerce, a digital domain where anyone can create a site, or home page, and share or sell information, products or just ideas.

Most companies have turned to internal design departments to build sites. But now, with the Web gaining in commercial importance, top-name magazine designers like Roger Black are going digital, reshaping careers to focus on what they perceive to be an inevitable future.

Black, the design director at Esquire, will be leaving the magazine at the end of the year to devote most of his time to cyberspace. He has started a company called the Interactive Bureau, a studio of designers focused solely on on-line interactive media.

The company has already created Web sites for the Discovery Network, USA Today, Columbia University, Apple Computer and the Metropolitan Opera.

Black is also joining Will Hearst of the Hearst publishing family to start a new venture called (AT) Home, a network that will bring the Internet to the home personal computer via cable.

"I wasn't old enough to get involved at the beginning of television," said Black, 47, who has worked for publications like Newsweek, Premiere, The San Francisco Examiner and The New York Times. "Here's a chance to get in and participate in an enormous amount of creation at the beginning of a medium. It's exciting and fun."

Not to mention lucrative. Big corporations are starting to spend several hundred thousand dollars to design Web sites, and in cases where several divisions of a company have different sites the price for Web design can soar past $1 million.

Black's Web site for the Discovery Network, for example, cost well in excess of $1 million, and a staff of 10 designers in New York is still at work regularly updating the site.

This week a team of scientists is in the Galapagos Islands seeking to test Darwin's theories, this time studying sea creatures instead of land animals. Discovery sent a writer and photographer exclusively to send back photos and information that are posted daily on the network's Web site.

Clement Mok, a noted designer and a former creative director at Apple Computer, has a studio called Clement Mok Designs in San Francisco. Mok, who has created Web sites for QVC, 20th Century Fox, Adobe and Harper-Collins, has hired 15 new people in the last year and still can't keep up with demand.

Sony, which has used several design firms, including Mok's, has spent more than $1 million for the design of at least six Web sites. The cost, according to Mok, depends on the scope of a site — whether, for example, it needs to be able to handle purchases or offer access to large data bases.

Some critics say many companies are still posting boring retreads of printed material, offering screens filled with difficult-to-read text.

"It's pretty much amateur hour out there," said David Siegel, a Web site designer based in Palo Alto, Calif. Jonathon Alsop, senior media producer for Convergent Media Systems, agrees. "Right now, the Web looks like a collage of bad term papers," he said.

For Black, though, the Web is the ultimate challenge, pushing the envelope of design. Designers and programmers have to create not only attractive graphics, but multiple layers of information and road maps for on-line navigation.

"It's unlike any other medium," Coutu said. "People start with standard media ideas but they are all one-way communication. The Web is two-way, whether you want it to be or not. So you have to find a way to be useful and attractive and give people a reason to stay in your site."

Paul Saffo, a consultant with the Institute for the Future in Menlo Park, Calif., says the most qualified designers for Web sites may be those who "design amusement rides at Disneyland."

Magazine designers have been the heroes so far," he added, "but we're pushing fast into areas alien to people who are accustomed to putting images on paper."

To fill the need, small studios are popping up around the country, like Avalanche Design and the year-old Razorfish in New York, with designers whose backgrounds include both MIT degrees in computer science and childhoods spent playing video games.

Jeffrey Dachis, 28, the co-founder and chief executive of Razorfish, and his partner, Craig Kanarick, offer what they call "dynamic digital design," with navigational tools and the latest hot software.

SEW: Industry evolved as lifestyles changed sewing," said Beth Mauro, marketing education director of the American Home Sewing & Craft Association.

The sewing industry began to evolve when the American lifestyle began to change. As more women entered the job market, they had less time to sew, and opted to purchase mass-produced apparel that was often cheaper than homemade.

But they continued to be lured by the art of needlework and crafts handed down from generation to generation, taking pride in pulling together pillows, furniture slipcovers, home decorations and clothing.

The changing consumer demand has forced retailers to close, consolidate or adapt. Crafts stores have expanded nationwide and fabric chains have added craft product lines. Most now offer how-to seminars for easy, do-it-yourself products.

"There is no way to compare the industry from a decade or more ago to the industry we know today," said Susan Brandt, a spokeswoman for the Hobby Industry of America. "It was a totally different industry, with virtually no chain stores."

There are an estimated 30 million sewers and hobbyists in the United States who are mostly college-educated women, between 25 and 54 years old, with a household income of at least $35,000, according to studies by the sewing and craft association.

Seventy-three percent own their homes; 37 percent are parents and nearly two-thirds live in metropolitan suburbs or rural areas, the association said.

In 1993, the hobby and crafts industry was valued at about $9.6 billion, compared with $1.8 billion in 1984, according to HIA's most recent figures.

Barbara B. Semen of Fabri-Centers of America Inc., a leading fabric and craft retailer, attributes the changes to the cocooning trend, where people prefer to spend time at home.

"They're not moving as much. Rather than selling and buying another one, they are fixing their existing ones," she said. "People are making things to put into their homes. They decorate their doors for every different season."

For that reason, stores stock up on material and trimmings for the Christmas holidays, to make tablecloths, napkins, tree skirts, curtains, pillows and stuffed Santas and other toys.

SURVEY: Lower income earners under-represented said she had relayed Professor Hoffman's concerns to Nielsen and was satisfied that Nielsen did the survey properly.

The final report from the study was distributed last week to the more than 130 members of Commercenet, including such companies as American Express, Ameritech, Andersen Consulting, Bank of America, Federal Express, Netscape Communications, Sun Microsystems and Wells Fargo.

Professor Hoffman and her partner, Prof. Thomas Novak, worked closely with Nielsen Media Research and Commercenet to design the survey, and she endorsed the preliminary report released on Oct. 30. But Professor Hoffman said that she had made the endorsement without having seen the raw data and that based on material Nielsen has since released, she believes "a big mistake has been made."

For reasons she said would be apparent after Nielsen releases its raw data, the sample of 4,200 individuals surveyed by telephone last August tended to include people who were older, much more affluent and more highly educated than the population as a whole, at least based on 1990 U.S. census data, Professor Hoffman said.

People with lower incomes and less education — and thus who were less likely to use personal computers at home or at work — were underrepresented in the sample, she said.

As a result, Professor Hoffman said, the population projections made from the survey sample were skewed significantly.

She cited, for example, a conclusion in Nielsen's final report — but not in the preliminary data — that more than 40 million adults use commercial on-line information services. Other surveys put the number at no more than 10 million.

MAC: Through all it does well, Apple's program does have a couple of faults then spend a few hours tracking it down and downloading it.

The Apple kit removes this hurdle by gathering the best Internet software, organizing it in a clear framework on screen and simplifying the process of configuring the programs for the computer.

An Apple Internet Dialer application also helps new users find an Internet access provider, the Internet equivalent of a telephone company, and establish an account. The fees vary greatly, making comparison shopping worthwhile.

Unless one wishes to go to the Internet through a consumer online information service like the Microsoft Network (Windows only) or America Online, getting to the Web typically requires signing up for service with a local or national Internet service provider. National companies include PSI, UUNet, Netcom and Internet MCI.

To be fair, Gates's CD-ROM was almost certainly not intended to be as comprehensive as Apple's software, even though both packages promised to deliver the computer user painlessly to the Internet.

And I would be lying if I said the Macintosh software was installed flawlessly and, within a few minutes, delivered me to the Microsoft Web site that Microsoft's own Explorer software insisted did not exist.

It was not flawless. It took me two tries to install the Apple Software because I clicked on the wrong button a couple of places and there was no easy way to back out gracefully.

But after restarting the installation a couple of times, I was connected to the World Wide Web and zipped right over the Microsoft Web site. Clearly, for me, the Macintosh was the best way to gain access to the Internet.

The Apple Internet Connection Kit requires a Macintosh or Powerbook with 8 megabytes of system memory (RAM), 10 megabytes of vacant hard disk space and at least version 7.5 of the Mac OS. It also requires a modem or office network connection, a phone line and a valid Visa or Mastercard credit card number. The package I tested came with both a CD-ROM disk and diskettes.

It is hard to imagine any Macintosh software package that delivers a richer lode of entertainment and information than the Internet Connection Kit, since it connects the Mac to the biggest computer network in the world. And unlike a game, the Internet does not become stale after a few hours. This package goes to the top of my holiday software suggestion list.

MSN: Company VP says Microsoft will have focus on youth

(From 1B)

He said the company will have a strong focus on kids, with a goal of seeing the Internet "replace TV as the No. 1 after-school activity" — a pronouncement that drew applause from some in the audience.

The company will be developing sophisticated, interactive games that can be played over the Internet; Higgins said a dozen new ones will be introduced over the next year. Microsoft staffers demonstrated a new version of a game called Fury3, in which futuristic fighter planes zoom through a constantly changing three-dimensional landscape to attack each other as well as targets on the ground.

Microsoft will be developing sophisticated, interactive games that can be played over the Internet; a dozen new ones will be introduced over the next year.

On a more academic note, Microsoft CD-ROM products such as the Encarta encyclopedia will include Internet links so that the information is "constantly up to date," he said.

In a question-and-answer session that followed the workshop, Microsoft Vice President Nathan Myhrvold answered skepticism about the value of the refocused network by promising that its combination of content and services will be "compelling," especially to many among the millions of newcomers to the Internet who will need some "hand-holding" while they learn their way around.

Higgins emphasized MSN's value to third-party content providers as an "aggregator of lots of eyeballs" — that is, a site that would attract a lot of users.

Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates, asked if the fundamental shift in the network's business plan would cause any decrease in staffing, said no.

"We're hiring," he said. "Please send your resume."

Doctor charged with two counts of murder, attempted murder, arson

PRAIRIE VILLAGE, Kan. (AP) — The sprawling house of Drs. Debora Green and Michael Farrar sits charred and silent in this wealthy suburb, destroyed by a fire that laid bare what prosecutors say is a tale of murder, arson and a poisoning by exotic means.

Green, a 44-year-old cancer specialist, is in jail on $3 million bail. She is charged with arson and murder for allegedly setting the Oct. 24 blaze that killed two of her children, ages 6 and 13.

She is also charged with attempted murder. Prosecutors say she tried to kill another daughter, Kate Farrar, and poison her husband of 16 years with ricin, a powerful toxin derived from castor beans.

Kate, 10, escaped the fire and is now living with her father's family. Farrar, a 40-year-old cardiologist who filed for divorce the day after the fire, is recuperating from brain surgery to drain an abscess that doctors say may have been caused by the poison. He still suffers from heart and other health problems doctors believe may also be related to the poisoning.

"Early on, we decided to investigate as a homicide, hoping it would be a fire of natural causes and everything would be fine. It didn't turn out that way," Police Chief Charles Grover said.

Authorities have not given a motive for the crimes.

Green, who has been in jail since her arrest the day before Thanksgiving, maintains her innocence, said defense attorney Dennis Moore. Farrar has refused to be interviewed in the hospital.

At the suggestion of Green's lawyer, investigators also looked into the Sept. 5 death of anesthesiologist Dr. David Hacker. He died just days after his wife, Margaret, filed for divorce. Mrs. Hacker and Farrar were close friends.

The pathologist who conducted Hacker's autopsy concluded he had committed suicide.

Since the October fire, investigators have also begun looking at a blaze 16 months earlier at the Green-Farrar family's previous home in another exclusive neighborhood across the state line in Kansas City, Mo.

Authorities did not determine the cause of that fire, but the family's insurance company investigated and concluded it was accidental and paid an undisclosed claim.

Farrar had been separated from Green for several months at the time of the alleged poisoning.

On Aug. 7, he became ill with an ailment doctors could not diagnose. He almost died and was hospitalized twice more in August with the mysterious illness.

On Sept. 25, Farrar called police to his home to intervene in a family argument. Police reports said Green was acting bizarrely and was taken to a psychiatric unit at a hospital that night. Police wouldn't elaborate on the bizarre behavior.

While at the house, police found castor beans. The seeds are the source of ricin, which in its purest form is among the deadliest of poisons.

Less than one month later, fire destroyed the home.

The fire and alleged poisoning have shaken the exclusive neighborhood that in the past has offered privacy to the professionals who live there.

Seven weeks after the blaze raged through the doctors' home, the neighborhood still has a faint sooty smell. The curious drive and walk by the charred shell of a house, day and night.

Neighbors, collecting morning papers or hanging Christmas lights, regard strangers warily and hurry indoors.

"That environment has changed 180 degrees," the police chief said. "They know they can't be insulated, but it's difficult sometimes in their minds to finally admit that things have changed and they may never be the same."

FBI adds child molester to 10 most wanted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 41-year-old convicted child molester charged with raping a 9-year-old girl was added to the FBI's list of 10 Most Wanted fugitives Friday.

Convicted in a 1979 child sex case, Rickey Allen Bright now is charged by North Carolina with the Oct. 8 kidnapping, rape and sexual assault of the 9-year-old who was abducted from her neighbor's house in Hays, N.C.

Bright allegedly drove her to a remote wooded area and assaulted her, the FBI said. Several hours later, the child was released in a rural area of Wilkes County, N.C.

The FBI, which obtained a fugitive warrant for Bright, said he fled North Carolina for eastern Kentucky and then Charleston, W.Va., where he visited family members.

From mid-October to early November, Bright lived in Akron, Ohio, where he was hired as a maintenance worker at a bowling center, the FBI said. In Akron, he used his real name and an alias, Allen Barker.

Born in South Charleston, W.Va., Bright is white, is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 175. He has reddish brown hair with a receding hairline, blue eyes and wears prescription glasses. The FBI said he should be considered armed and dangerous and information about him should be reported to the nearest FBI office.

Bright frequents country music bars and he has played drums with country music bands. He also is active in Baptist and nondenominational churches and participates regularly in religious and social activities.

In 1979, Bright was convicted of the kidnapping and attempted rape of a 7-year-old girl he abducted from a bowling alley where he worked in Gastonia, N.C. He was sentenced to life plus 15 years in prison but was paroled last January.

Surgeons attempt to alter face of frowning child

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A little girl born with a perpetually grumpy look underwent surgery Friday that could literally bring a smile to her face.

"I'm fine, and excited," 7-year-old Chelsey Thomas, clutching a favorite doll, said as she walked with her parents into Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Woodland Hills.

The corners of the blond, blue-eyed girl's mouth sag because she was born without a key nerve in her face, a condition called Moebius Syndrome that afflicts up to 1,000 people nationwide. The nerve transmits commands to facial muscles that control smiling, frowning and pouting.

In an eight-hour operation that began at midmorning, doctors planned to remove muscle and nerve from Chelsey's leg and transplant it to one side of her face. If the transplant succeeds — something that won't be known for at least three months — the other side will be done in about six months.

"She'll be able to smile for the first time, and that's something every parent waits for. Usually it happens in the first few weeks of their life, but we've had to wait a little bit longer," said Lori Thomas, her mother.

The $70,000 two-step operation is covered by the family's health insurer, Kaiser Permanente, because it is not considered cosmetic.

"Just being unable to smile has numerous problems associated with it, social and psychological," said Dr. Avron Daniller, one of Chelsey's surgeons.

Her mother said: "It's been hard for her because people think she's unfriendly or ignoring them or bored. It's been hard. Kids stare at her. Adults are pretty understanding, but she has a worse time with kids."

Kaiser flew renowned Canadian surgeon Dr. Ronald Zuker, who pioneered the procedure, to Los Angeles to lead the surgery. Chelsey was expected to be hospitalized five days.

Last month, Chelsey said she was eager to have the operation: "After the surgery, I'm going to smile at all my friends and have a party."

Don't be the last to find out what's happening.

Telecommunications laws rewrite nears end

WASHINGTON (AP) — The far-reaching rewrite of the nation's telecommunications laws neared completion Friday as congressional negotiators tried to work out details for loosening federal controls on news media ownership.

The issue is the last major obstacle in resolving differences between separate bills passed by the House and Senate earlier this year to deregulate most of the communications industries.

President Clinton criticized early versions of the bills, but the administration hasn't commented on recent changes.

If the legislation becomes law, it will dramatically change the way Americans receive telephone, television and other communications services and how much they pay for them.

It would let local, long-distance and cable companies get into each others' businesses, deregulate cable rates and, for the first time, outlaw transmission of smutty materials to kids over computer networks.

The bill also would give parents a powerful new tool to keep violent, sexual and other objectionable shows off their TV sets. New TV sets would have to be equipped with a computer chip that recognizes programs rated for content. Using a device similar to a remote control, parents could block individual shows or categories of shows from their TV screens.

Now, negotiators must decide how much freedom they should give media companies to increase their holdings locally and nationally.

GOP aides in the House were confident Friday that the issue would be resolved and a final bill sent to Congress next week. Senate aides weren't as optimistic.

Resolution won't be easy. House and Senate bills are far apart on how they handle local media ownership, and a House offer on Wednesday to keep some ownership restrictions was rejected by key senators as not going far enough.

No new offers have been forthcoming, aides said.

The House bill would let one company own two TV stations, unlimited radio stations and newspapers in the same market — something not permitted under existing laws and regulations.

The Senate bill is more restrictive. It would eliminate a law that prevents companies from owning a TV station and cable system in the same market. It would not, however, eliminate an identical ban contained in a federal regulation. Since companies can ask the FCC to modify or waive the regulation, eliminating the law would be an important victory for media owners.

Both bills would let one company own an unlimited number of radio stations — and an unlimited number of TV stations nationally as long as they don't reach more than 35 percent of all U.S. viewers. Existing regulations limit national TV ownership to 12 stations, serving 25 percent of all national viewers, and radio to 40 AM and FM stations nationally.

Supporters of media deregulation contend it would create more choices for Americans by freeing companies to grow in ways not previously allowed — and perhaps not yet imagined. But opponents say it would encourage undue ownership concentration, which would reduce editorial choice and create a new era of media barons.

By freeing local, long-distance and cable companies to compete against each other, the legislation would give Americans the choice of buying all of these services from one company — their local Bell, a long-distance company like AT&T, MCI and Sprint, or their cable company.

Supporters say the competition would lower rates for these services.

Opponents say the proposals don't provide adequate protections for local phone and cable customers, and they predict rates will go up.

Under an agreement that will be part of the final telecommunications bill, federal control of rates for 20 percent of the nation's 61 million cable customers would immediately be eliminated.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Live Nativity set

Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church, 3308 W. Cuthbert Ave., is presenting a live Nativity at 7:30 p.m. today at 3308 W. Cuthbert Ave.

Parking will be on the church parking lot for those who want to sit in their cars or leave their cars and see the nativity from a closer range. The public is invited.

To arrange transportation to service or events at the church call 694-1645 on Saturday afternoons.

Choir sings 'Gloria'

The Sanctuary Choir of Trinity Presbyterian Church will present Antonio Vivaldi's "Gloria" during the 10:55 a.m. worship service Sunday.

Soloists include Louise Crocker, Virginia Speight, Sherry Campbell, Betty Forsberg, Lynne Swan, Darlynna Rush, Katherine Tedesco and Ron Whitaker.

Trinity's organist, Steve Spain, will accompany the choir.

A nursery is available during Sunday School and the Worship Service. If you do not have transportation for Sunday services, call the church office at 682-2514 for assistance.

Choir to sing

"City of Light," created and produced by Tom Fettke, will be presented by the Adult Choir of Bellview Baptist Church at 7 p.m. today and Sunday in the sanctuary, 1710 N. Big Spring St.

The work, arranged by Fettke and Bruce Greer, is orchestrated by Greer. Monologues were written by Ragan Courtney.

The public is invited to attend.

'Majesty' presented

Victory Family Christian Center, 5200 Illinois Ave., will present a Christmas program called "Majesty" at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The program, which commemorates the birth of the Christ child, will be presented by the Youth Department. The church's pastor, Bob Miller, invites the public to attend.

Chorus performs

The Permian Basin Men's A Capella Christmas Chorus presents "A Capella Christmas" at 3 p.m. Sunday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The performance is free and open to the public.

Cantata presented

The choirs of Northwestern Baptist Church will present the Christmas cantata "An Old-Fashioned Christmas" at 7 p.m. Sunday at the church, 3901 Mockingbird Lane, north of Loop 250 between Midkiff Road and Midland Drive.

All are invited to attend.

Presentation set

A Christmas choral presentation, "A New Star," will be presented by the Midland II Ward Choir of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at 1:20 p.m. Sunday in the chapel at 4805 Gateway.

The choir will be directed by Aleta Grandy and accompanied on the organ and piano by Betty Anne Tague. Words and music for the presentation are by Robert P. Manookin.

The public is invited.

Special service set

The Music Ministry of First United Methodist Church will present "A Service of Lessons and Carols" at the 8:30 and 10:35 a.m. services Sunday.

Junior chorister Rob Lowe will sing the treble solo on the processional hymn, "Once in Royal David's City." Also featured will be May Adelaide Barber, violin; Rebecca Durham, oboe; Jane Ward, soprano; and Bill Lucas, baritone.

Four children's choirs, the Celebration Singers Youth Choir and the Chancel Choir will sing Advent and Christmas anthems and carols. Choir members and clergy will read the lessons from Genesis to the gospel of John.

Performance set

The Worship Choir, Orchestra and Older Children's Choirs will present "Jesus, the Heart of Christmas" at 6 p.m. Sunday at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave.

The public is invited to attend.

Cantata scheduled

The Sanctuary Choir of Memorial Christian Church will present a Christmas cantata at 7 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary, 1001 Andrews Highway.

"The Living Creche" is a musical celebration that weaves Scripture, ancient legend and carol into a richly colored Christmas tapestry, Drawing upon scriptural narrative from the advent prophecies through the visit of the wise men from the East, it illustrates the Christmas story in continuously unfolding carols.

Treaded through this fabric are Christmas legends which trace modern customs to their Christian origins.

All are welcome to attend.

Combined choirs sing

The combined Chapel and Chancel choirs of St. Luke's United Methodist Church will present Robert Shaw and Russell Bennett's "The Many Moods of Christmas" at 5 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

The collection of carols will be directed by Bert Bostic and Don McCartney and accompanied by members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra.

Some of the carols that will be heard include "Good Christian Men, Rejoice," "Patapan," "Joy to the World," "Away in a Manager," "Fum, Fum, Fum," "March of the Kings, "Bring a Torch, Jeanette, Isabella," "Angels We Have Heard on High," "I Saw Three Ships" and "Deck the Halls with Boughs of Holly."

The public is invited to attend.

Musical presented

The Adult Choir of Kelview Heights Baptist Church will sing the musical "The Wonder of Christmas" at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

The musical includes traditional favorites and new Christmas music.

The public is invited to attend.

Because of the holidays, on Dec. 24 and Dec. 31, Kelview will have only an 11 a.m. service.

Carol service set

The Music Ministry of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity will present the 13th annual Candlelight Carol Services at 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

The prelude music begins 30 minutes before each service and seating is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Carols from around the world are heard each year at the traditional Candlelight Carol services presented by the choristers and handbell ringers of Holy Trinity. Strains of the light and lively "Shepherds Pipe Carol" to the beautiful "Nativity Carol" by John Rutter are some of the songs that will be performed.

The Children's Choirs and Junior Choristers I sing at the 5 p.m. service and the older Junior Choristers and Youth Handbells will participate at the 7 p.m. service.

Members of the Adult Choristers and Adult Handbells will provide music at both services.

A Christmas reception will follow both services. A nursery will be provided. All are invited to attend.

Children perform

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will have its Children's Department present its annual Christmas program Sunday.

The children will have a "Live Nativity Scene" while the youth and singles of the church provide the dialogue. Included in the scene will be a live donkey and sheep.

After the program, the church will celebrate Christmas with Fifth Sunday Singing. A fellowship with Christmas goodies and finger foods is planned after the singing. The church is one block off South Midkiff at 3203 South County Road 1211. For directions or more information call 697-4471 or 684-7233.

All are invited to attend.

Final concert set

The Music Ministry of First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, presents the final concert in a series of Noontime Noels Wednesday in the Glass Memorial Chapel.

The concert will feature baritone Bill Lucas and pianist Joan Lucas. The Rev. Lane Boyd will assist as narrator.

The 30-minute concert will begin at 12:05 p.m. Lunch will be served in the Fellowship Hall a half hour before and after each concert for a charge of $4 a person. The church is at the corner of Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

Concert offered

The Music Ministry of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity is offering its final "Tuesdays at Trinity" concert this week.

A tradition of a "Brown Bag" lunch follows the 30-minute concerts. Homemade desserts and beverages will be provided.

The Advent concert Dec. 19 features instrumental music with guitarists Michael Cunningham, Matthew Hinkley and David Lewis; percussionist Pat Shaw; flutist Gloria Steelman; organist Linda Hill; and harpist Darryl Knapp.

Arrangements of "What Child is This?" "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen," "Veni Emmanuel," "Prepare the Way, O Zion" and "In the Bleak Midwinter" will be featured on the program.

The public is invited to attend these free concerts.

Mission meets

The New Hope Baptist Mission now meets upstairs at 602 N. Baird St. Sunday School is at 9:45 a.m., worship at 10:50 a.m. and Sunday evening worship at 7 p.m. Each Wednesday at 7 p.m. we meet to pray.

Special presented

A 30-minute special, "Red Boots for Christmas," produced by Lutheran Hour Ministries, is aimed at bringing the "real" story of Christmas back to television and sharing that message with families worldwide.

"Red Boots for Christmas" can be seen locally on KMID-TV, Channel 2 at 2:30 p.m. today as well as Dec. 24 at 12 p.m. and again on the Faith and Values Network (cable) on Sun., Dec. 24 at 4 p.m.

The story is a German folk tale about Hans, a sad, lonely shoemaker who learns to embrace the true meaning of Christmas

Poll: Americans say churches share their values

NEW YORK — Few Americans feel that the country's major leaders and institutions closely share their values — except when it comes to their own religion, according to a new poll.

Of 1,005 adults asked about values important to them, 58 percent told the Harris Poll that their religion shares their values "a lot." Only 2 percent said the same about Hollywood, and 10 percent about television and corporate America.

Just 18 percent said President Clinton shares their values a lot, and 9 percent felt that way about Bob Dole and Newt Gingrich.

The poll was taken by phone Oct. 26-29. Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

■ Skateboarders cause damage

BOSTON — The sexton of century-old Trinity Church, where Phillips Brooks became rector the year after writing "O Little Town of Bethlehem," says it is taking a beating from skateboarders.

The stone statue of Brooks, which stands outside the church where he was rector from 1869 to 1891 before becoming Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts, has been chipped, pieces have been knocked out of the church steps, and hand railings have lost paint.

Skateboarders are the primary cause of the damage, church sexton Richard Merrill said.

"They speed up on the St. James (Street) side of the church and then sail in midair off the porch into Copley Square. They are going to kill someone," Merrill told The Boston Globe.

Skateboarders take over the area about 8 p.m., and continuing wheeling around until after midnight, Merrill said.

"I've tried everything," he said. "They just won't go."

The American Institute of Architects has called the church one of the 10 best buildings in the country. It was designed by architect H.H. Richardson and built in 1877.

The skateboarders say they are harmless, drug-free and respect passers-by. They say they deter crime because there are so many of them.

"Granted, we do some damage to the property, but it's really not that bad," said Charlie Wilkins, 20, of Boston.

"There's so many advantages to us being out here. We're exercising, we're drug-free, and we're not on the streets raping and pilfering," he said.

Series topic set

I'll Be Home for Christmas" is the topic of a new series of programs at First United Methodist's Community of Joy, which meets at 10:30 a.m. Sundays at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Each program addresses the real meaning of Christmas that can be found hidden amid the boxes, bows and busyness of this time of year. Topics will include belief in God's miracle to us, trust of God in the midst of disappointment, finding a place to really call home and where hope can be found.

Dress is casual. The services include live music as well as short and lively dramas. For more information call, 682-3701.

Program planned

West Kentucky Baptist Church is presenting its Christmas Cantata at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Randy Bryant leads the devotion during the 9:45 a.m. service Sunday. Sunday School is from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., with a service following, which includes the 22-member choir, directed by Pat Bryant. Sunday at 5:45 p.m., the Sunday Night Youth Group meets, led by Mary Jo Leonard, and the Adult Bible Study Group meets.

Adult weekly prayer meeting and the "Girls in Action" meet 7 p.m. Wednesdays.

Other groups include Royal Ambassadors for young men and Mission Friends for children age 4 through kindergarten.

The church has a new addition that includes four Sunday School rooms, bathrooms, a kitchen and a large fellowship hall. The church has nine Sunday School classes and a nursery directed by Kathy Scoggins.

Church literature reinforces tradition roles, study finds

By David Briggs
Associated Press

The live Nativity scene was a typical one -- a little girl playing Mary holding a baby representing Jesus.

But when the baby started to cry and the girl was unable to console him, the girl handed him over to a boy playing Joseph and went out in the audience to find the real mother who had his bottle.

The setting people at the church were left with for a few minutes was of Joseph alone holding the baby Jesus, a Nativity image almost never portrayed in art or textbooks.

The scene last December jarred the Rev. Gail Murphy-Geiss out of what she called her Christmas pageant complacency, and intrigued her enough to begin a study of pictures kindergarteners and first-graders see in Sunday school curricula.

What she discovered was that more portraits of women clergy and caring fathers are finding their way into Sunday school materials, but in general the pictures children see at the beginning of their religious education reflect traditional gender roles.

In her research, Murphy-Geiss reviewed pictures from 21 different Sunday school resources published since 1991 for children in kindergarten or first grade. In all, she looked at 960 pages of curricula depicting 1,119 scenes and 3,902 adults.

What first became clear is that most people are shown in roles such as sitting in a congregation or being members of a crowd that are not specific to either sex.

Only 692 people were shown in what she classified as "gendered activities." Traditional male and nontraditional female depictions would include people shown as clergy, soldiers or rulers or those in positions of obvious family leadership with a spouse present. Traditional female and nontraditional male depictions would include people shown nurturing children or showing obvious deference to the other gender.

But among people shown in activities usually associated with one sex, there were relatively few portrayals of people in other than traditional sex roles.

This was particularly true of biblical scenes, Murphy-Geiss found. Only 1 percent of the men in conservative Sunday school publications and 3 percent of the men in liberal resources were presented in nontraditional roles. For women, only 2 percent of those shown in conservative materials were shown in non-traditional roles, while just 1 percent of the biblical women in liberal materials were in nontraditional roles.

In their portrayals of contemporary adults, only 5 percent of men in both liberal and conservative resources were shown in nontraditional roles. Three percent of women in conservative materials and 7 percent of women in liberal materials were shown in nontraditional roles.

While the numbers are low, they do represent a change. In older materials from the '60s, '70s and '80s she selected for comparison purposes, there were no portrayals of men or women in nontraditional roles.

And in the liberal materials, 38 percent of the clergy depicted were women, meaning it is much more likely a child will see a clergywoman in Sunday school materials than in the pulpit.

What about those Nativity scenes? As suspected, Murphy-Geiss reports, Mary usually held Jesus, and in the few scenes where Joseph is shown holding Jesus, Mary is close enough to intercede if necessary.

Murphy-Geiss, a doctoral student at Iliff School of Theology in Denver, said in an interview that in some respects, "the Sunday school materials weren't as bad as I thought they would be."

But portrayals of men and women in other than traditional roles are too rare, Murphy-Geiss said, "especially in an institution that's so male-dominated, and an effort needs to be made to correct the patriarchy of the past."

While she reported in a paper delivered before the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion that the study represented a first step in this area, the results indicated that "the Church doesn't overtly work toward the eradication of traditional gender roles in their Sunday school materials at all."

Adair Lummis, a sociologist at Hartford Seminary, said the research results seem consistent with other findings that traditional gender roles often are perpetuated — many times without a conscious decision on the institution's part — in kindergarten and first-grade classrooms.

"I just don't know if the churches are aware of what they are communicating through their Sunday school material," Lummis said. "Those years are very important for forming gender identity."

Students must shape up on shorts at BYU

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Fed up with dress-code violations, Brigham Young University student leaders have been given until semester's end to get their constituents in line on the shorts issue.

The Mormon Church-owned school's dress code allows students to wear only modest shorts, which must come to the kneecap when a student kneels. The policy was reaffirmed by Church President Gordon B. Hinckley during a campus visit last spring.

But violators have been noticed of late, so the Student Advisory Council has been given until Dec. 21 to develop an educational program to encourage acceptable lengths — or elect to cut out shorts altogether.

Students say it's unfortunate that a few are creating such a controversy.

"I personally don't care if they're not allowed," said Debbie Wadsworth, a junior from Colorado. "If there's going to be all this trouble over it, we should just scrap it (the policy)."

Wadsworth doesn't wear shorts on campus and doesn't believe many students care a great deal about whether they can wear them.

Susy Melgoza disagrees. She came from Mexico to the university and attends both spring and summer terms.

IRS seeks back taxes from missing atheist O'Hair, 2 children; mystery deepens

■ Members of Austin-based American Atheists Inc., insist the three are away on business, but haven't contacted the group in over two months.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The mystery over the disappearance of atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair three months ago deepened with word that the IRS is seeking almost $750,000 in back taxes from her son and daughter, who vanished with her.

Craig Etter, a Washington lawyer who represents Ms. O'Hair and her children, said Friday that the IRS case is being taken care of and that the family members are simply away on business.

Ms. O'Hair, 76, filed the lawsuit that led to the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing school prayer. She founded Austin-based American Atheists Inc. and eight or so other organizations, all supported by members.

Her son Jon Murray is president of American Atheists, and her daughter, Robin Murray-O'Hair, is executive secretary. The IRS alleges the children got income from some of the organizations and used it to buy a Mercedes, a Porsche, maid services, bonds and an Austin home.

Last August, Ms. O'Hair dropped out of sight amid speculation that she had died and that her followers were keeping it quiet because they feared Christians would claim she had repented her atheist beliefs on her deathbed.

Etter rejected any suggestion that Ms. O'Hair or her children had fled to escape back taxes. "We are in the final stages of resolving the tax case" for a "fraction" of the $750,000 initially sought, he said.

"I haven't spoken to any of them since September, but the information I had was that they are on business and doing something that they deem very important right now. I don't know what that is," the lawyer said.

John C. McDougal, the attorney representing the government in the tax case, refused to talk about it but didn't dispute what Etter said.

"It's not uncommon for a preliminary investigation to turn up an amount and then have the amount come down," McDougal said.

Board members of American Atheists insisted in late September that Ms. O'Hair and her children were away on business, not missing. But now they are worried.

For the first three weeks of the disappearance, board members were in contact with the three family members by cellular phone, said Frank Zindler of Columbus, Ohio, a longtime American Atheists member and friend of Ms. O'Hair.

"Madalyn herself said she was fine and they were involved in important business. Everything indicated that they were planning to come back," Zindler said.

But after about three weeks, he said, "they just shut off the cellular phone and no one was able to reach them by any communication means. So we've been in the dark for over two months now."

Arnold Via of Grottoes, Va., vice president of American Atheists and a longtime friend of Ms. O'Hair, said he may contact the FBI.

"I am beginning to worry about them — whether they have been really kidnapped or whether they're dead," Via said.

According to court records, Murray and Ms. Murray-O'Hair failed to report income from two other atheist groups founded by Ms. O'Hair.

A note was left at the American Atheists offices in August telling employees the offices would be shut down until further notice. The building is up for sale, and Ms. O'Hair hasn't returned telephone calls for months.

Texas drivers can't drive 55, law officers say

DALLAS (AP) — With the Christmas holiday approaching, Texans are already in the fast lane — not only with shopping.

All around the state, more new 70-mph signs went up Friday in what some law officers worried might trigger a more dangerous holiday.

"It is a bad time to kick in a higher speed limit," said John Gonzalez, a Texas Department of Public Safety officer and safety education trooper for the Lubbock office.

"We want to nevertheless hopefully deter speeding, keeping it at 70 during the day and 65 at nighttime," he said.

But in Texas' wide open spaces, many residents couldn't drive 55 before the state Transportation Commission voted this month to raise the speed limit on interstates and divided highways.

The average speed on some Texas roads was already 70 mph, Gonzalez said.

"Some of those folks are just like with a new toy: They are trying to go out and see how fast they can go and see what they can get away with," he said.

In a seven-county North Texas area that includes Dallas-Fort Worth, the state Department of Transportation posted 70-mph limits Friday on 300 miles of interstate and U.S. highways.

The higher limits apply on portions of Interstates 20, 30, 35 and 45 and U.S. 67, 75, 80, 175 and 287. Portions of some roads were also posted for 65 mph.

Chicago Cardinals?

CHICAGO — It may be the "rumor du jour," but Chicago officials aren't counting it out.

The city, struggling over facilities with the Chicago Bears, says it will do everything it can to keep a pro football team in town — even if that team is the Arizona Cardinals.

"We're still trying to convince the Bears to stay, but we'll keep our options open," an unidentified mayoral aide told the Chicago Tribune.

The newspaper reported Friday that city officials have talked secretly with the Cardinals about moving back if the Bears moved from Soldier Field. The team left Chicago for St. Louis in 1960, and then moved to Arizona.

Bulldogs vs. Rebels: Round 2

■ Midland High's leading scorer will miss the rest of the season starting tonight against Midland Lee, 8 p.m., Chaparral Center.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

The biggest fight today won't be the Tyson-Mathis bout at the Spectrum in Philadelphia, but at Chaparral Center in Midland.

Just call it the "Scrap at the Chap," but Midland High will be without its Tyson connection.

MHS and Midland Lee battled down to the wire in their first meeting eight days ago, but this time, there is a little more at stake.

However, MHS has an even taller hill to climb, learning this week that super sophomore Kirby Lemons, who is also the team's leading scorer, has been lost for the season due to a non-basketball related injury.

"Glass cut some tendons in Kirby's arm and he's out for the rest of the year," Stephenson said. "How will that affect our team? I don't know the answer to that, but it certainly hurts to lose one of the top five sophomores in the state. There's no question about that. We're still a pretty good basketball team and I'm sure some of the others will step up their game. We have to go on."

The two teams enter the ring, err, court tonight at 8 at Chaparral Center as the District 4-5A season gets underway.

"There is something I remember about every one of our games," said Stephenson, who has been at the school for 17 years. "We've had some good ones over the years and this one shouldn't be any different."

The Bulldogs (8-4) trailed most of the second half before a fourth-quarter comeback and a Lee breakdown at the free throw line gave Midland High the 81-77 win in overtime.

"We had the lead but then missed five-of-six from the line in the last two minutes," Lee coach Jon House said. "We've lost three in a row now and we need to get back on track and winning this one would be even better."

Both teams are coming off losses in their last games — MHS dropped a 78-67 decision to Lubbock High and Lee lost to Lubbock Monterey 62-56 — and need a win to stop the slide.

"We just didn't have anything left when we played Mon-

Lady Dawgs blister San Angelo Central

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

San Angelo Central could have been shooting at the Grand Canyon and it probably wouldn't have mattered.

The Lady Cats never solved Midland High's pressure defense as the Lady Dawgs drilled Central 68-39 Friday night in a District 4-5A game at the Midland High gym.

"We came out and made a few shots early and got after it on defense," coach Jim Raughton said. "It's easier to press like that when you make those two-footers."

Ogonna Merritt led the Lady Dawgs (12-2 overall, 2-0 in District 4-5A) with 17 points — her 10th game this season with at least 15 and her 12th in double figures — but she was far from Midland High's only scoring threat.

"It was nice to see that everyone contributed," Raughton said. "Toya (Zachery) had a good game, Laura (Childress) made some shots and we got a solid performance out of our bench."

Seniors Childress and Zachery snapped out of their offensive doldrums with 12 and 10 points respectively, and Childress said it was a long time coming.

"Finally," said Childress, who scored in double figures for the first time since Dec. 1. "I have been shooting the ball terribly lately, and it was good to start scoring a little again."

Ozona zaps second 4-5A team

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Ozona Lady Lions, the defending Class 2A state basketball champions, don't seem to mind who they play these days. The results always seem to be the same.

Ozona climbed to a perfect 13-0 for the season at Chaparral Center Friday night, defeating Class 5A Midland Lee 38-33 in a non-conference outing.

Just last Tuesday Ozona whacked 4-5A's Odessa High in overtime.

"Classification in my history doesn't mean all that much," said Ozona coach Dickie Faught. "I came from the Panhandle at Class 4A Hereford and we used to play Class A Nazareth every year and get beat by them. I just want my team to be able to be competitive no matter who we play. We may lose, but I want to be competitive and these girls have done that."

The game was tied eight different times. Lee held leads four different times and Ozona led six times. Lee, now 8-6, once led by six points, 28-22, in the third quarter, but the Lady Lions went on a run to catch and pass the Lady Rebels, who went dead cold from the field in the second half, scoring only 12 points while hitting just four of 22 shots from the field.

Ozona had a nine-point spurt to cover the end of the third period and the start of the fourth period to forge a 35-28 lead with 5:16 left to play and Lee could never catch up.

"We played a tough team hard and had shots to tie the game near the end, but just couldn't get the ball to fall for us," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "I still think we played well, but we didn't shoot well and that was the difference in the game. When (Ozona's Shelly) Sullivan hit back-

Three Super Bowl winners offer advice to Switzer

By Mike Fisher
The Associated Press

IRVING — How ex-Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson fixed his occasionally funk-burdened 1989-93 team is well-chronicled. An orchestrated tirade, a guarantee of victory, or the sudden human sacrifice of a meaningless backup player always did the trick during Johnson's back-to-back Super Bowl runs.

But what would Johnson do to make sure the present edition of the Cowboys, suddenly in a self-described funk despite a 10-4 record, stay on a Super Bowl course? What did other Super Bowl-winning coaches do when teams they felt were Super Bowl caliber were not playing up to par? Can a head coach make that much of a difference motivating today's players?

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram visited with three coaches who have won Super Bowls — ex-Cowboys coach Johnson, ex-Kansas City Chiefs coach Hank Stram and ex-San Francisco 49ers coach Bill Walsh — to explore those and other issues as they apply to leadership of today's Cowboys.

Q: When faced with a situation where a talented Super Bowl-caliber team is underachieving, how important is the role of the head coach?

Walsh: "It needs to be business as usual. You don't need a hysterical atmosphere. You have to be honest and direct with the team and with the public and the press. The head coach at this point is the critical factor. He's the single source in leadership. If players have respect, they'll respond. If they don't have respect, they'll unravel."

Stram: "One year, we were out of the race, but we had a big rivalry game with Houston. Well, one

Second MHS-Lee meeting means more

Williamson

It may only be December, and the Christmas shopping list may not be complete, but the District 4-5A boys basketball campaign kicks off today at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center with another blockbuster mystery.

Midland High and Midland Lee square off in the 4-5A lid-lifter and to the winner goes sole possession of first place. We're not quite sure of the reason, but MHS and Lee own the 4-5A spotlight as the only two district teams hitting the floor today. All other 4-5A teams will play a district game Tuesday.

The boys have to play at least one game prior to the short Christmas break in order to finish the district schedule. The girls will have three rounds of the loop competition under the belt before Christmas.

It seems to be a little early for a cross town rivalry to happen. That should come in the heat of the district race which won't begin in earnest until after Jan. 1. Also, these two teams met just eight days ago in the semifinals of the Oilman's Invitational. We would like to see a little more distance between the two games, but no one can control tournament outcomes and the district race is preordained.

So, ready or not, Bulldogs and Rebels will be on the floor again tonight without a stranger in sight. They already know the feel. Midland High defeated Lee in overtime by four points in that meeting eight days ago. If that was any indication of what is to come tonight, sparks should ignite at the Chap between two playoff veteran teams before another large crowd.

But the mystery goes much deeper in this meeting since the Bulldogs will be without leading scorer Kirby Lemons, a sophomore who has cut tendons in his arm and is now out for the season in a non-basketball related injury. Stephenson called him one of the top five sophomores in the state and Lemons had 25 points against Lee in the first meeting.

The Bulldogs did make that first statement of the season with a win over Lee. However, both teams will limp into this game with losing streaks under the belt. MHS has lost two games in a row since beating Lee and the Rebels have lost three in a row, including the OT fall against the Bulldogs.

It depends on which camp you reside in as to how you feel about tonight's game. Lee fans will tell you that the Rebels should have won the first game in regulation at the free throw line. MHS fans will point out that the game was closer than it should have been. The Bulldogs had already played a game that same day prior to meeting Lee and the Rebels only played once.

Both ideas have a place, but now Game 1 doesn't have much to do with Game 2. The feeling here is that neither team probably showed all of their guns in Game 1 and the Bulldogs are now without a big gun. Will it make a difference for a team picked to win the league hands down? That is going to be the question that needs an answer tonight. One would think that Lee must take advantage of this situation before the 'Dogs get used to playing without Lemons.

Tonight's game carries more weight than the first. District wins are huge. Regardless of who wins tonight, you can almost bet that Game 2 won't look like Game 3 in late January.

You can expect new wrinkles to arrive from both teams. And the bet here is that it will be another wild experience. It almost always is. The Lemons factor, it seems, arrives with amazing timing. When else would you expect something like this to happen?

Toledo running back Wasean Tait (24) rushes for one of his four touchdowns in No. 25 Toledo's 30-37 overtime Vegas Bowl win over Nevada.

Toledo, Nevada coaches praise overtime system

■ First major college overtime game ends in 40-37 Toledo win.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Gary Pinkel didn't know what to expect after Toledo and Nevada found themselves going into an historical overtime in the Las Vegas Bowl.

This was, after all, uncharted territory for any major college football coach.

"That's the first time I've ever had to play a fifth quarter," Pinkel said after his No. 25 Toledo team emerged from the first major college overtime game with a 40-37 victory Thursday night over Nevada in the Las Vegas Bowl.

Toledo, capping an undefeated season, assured itself both a spot in the final national rankings and in the history books by putting a quick overtime end to what was a marathon game.

It was the first test of the new NCAA overtime rules for bowl games, and even Nevada coach Chris Ault proclaimed it a success.

"Tie games are a crime in college football," Ault said "The old guard needs to get off their butts and have tiebreakers in all games."

Pinkel agreed, despite the fact his Rockets risked their unbeaten season in an overtime setup that would seem to favor a more explosive team like Nevada. It led the nation in passing yards this season.

Ironically, the only blemish on Toledo's 11-0-1 record was a 28-28 tie with Miami of Ohio midway through the regular season.

"This is the best way to do it," Pinkel said. "It gives each team an opportunity to win it."

Nevada had that opportunity first, after Toledo won the coin toss and elected to go on defense to begin the overtime.

Unlike the NFL, where the first team to score wins, the college overtime is decided only after one team scores more points after an equal number of possessions. Each team gets the ball at the 25-yard line on each possession.

"If we won the coin toss we wanted to go on defense," Pinkel said. "That way we would know what we had to do the first time we had the ball."

After Nevada misfired on a third-down pass into the end zone and had to settle for a field goal on its first overtime possession, Toledo had a chance to win the game with a touchdown. It took only four running plays for the Rockets to score, with Wasean Tait scampering 10 yards on the third play before plunging 2 yards for the winning touchdown.

"The way we were running we decided to keep running the football," Pinkel said.

It was the fourth touchdown for Tait, who ran for 185 yards.

"I expected to get the ball at the end," he said.

Tait's teammates jumped on him in the end zone, celebrating the team's first undefeated season since 1971. It produced a scary moment for the 5-foot-8 back, who passed out under the pile.

"I was out cold," he said. "I remember scoring and one person jumping on me. After that, it was all dark."

Barnett tired of talk about leaving Northwestern

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Gary Barnett has tired of talk about his future as the Wildcats prepare for the Rose Bowl.

"Once and for all. I don't really want to say it again," Barnett said Friday before reiterating he's negotiating a long-term deal with Northwestern.

"I've laid it to rest. I'm not going to anymore. I've said it. That's all there is to it. It's the truth," Barnett said when pressed on the topic during a Rose Bowl media event.

"I'm negotiating in good faith. Right now I got a lot of other things to do than just negotiate because I feel like negotiating," he said.

Barnett, who's been collecting various coach of the year awards since the season ended, looked weary from long hours of travel. He said he doesn't want the speculation to affect his players and doesn't think it has.

"All year there has been a great deal of trust and respect between the coaches and the players. My players read what I said. They've seen my statement. They've heard my statements, and they trust me. That's about as far as it needs to go," Barnett said.

"The same speculation that is being thrown around now falls in the same category as preseason predictions, as far as I'm concerned. There isn't any more knowledge about the exact information in the preseason periodicals than there is in my particular case."

Many of the preseason publications forecast another season of doom for the Wildcats, who then won 10 of 11, their first winning season in 24 years.

Now the 49-year-old Barnett has been linked to major coaching vacancies across the country, and he even visited Georgia last weekend. Since then he has released two statements, one saying he was just visiting Bulldogs athletic director Vince Dooley and seeing the facilities.

In the second statement, released Wednesday, Barnett said he was not a candidate for a vacancy at any school and was working on a new long-term contract.

Offensive lineman Justin Chabot said so far, through two days of practice, Barnett's future has not been a distraction. The team leaves for Pasadena on Sunday.

"It doesn't even come up. It's not taboo, but at the same time it's not important," said Chabot, Barnett's first recruit four years ago. "Really. We all feel comfortable the coach will stay."

Darnell Autry, a Heisman Trophy finalist who nearly left the school after last season because he was homesick, said he wanted Barnett to do what is best for him.

"It's not going to be a distraction," Autry said. "I think the guys feel the same. It would hurt if he left, and we'd all be pretty much upset. But, obviously, we want what's best for coach Barnett. And if leaving here is best for coach Barnett, I want him to go.

Old hat Marshall, newcomer Montana meet for NCAA I-AA title game

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Montana has never done this before — play in a championship game. It's old hat for Marshall, which plays in its fifth NCAA Division I-AA title game Saturday, its fourth in the last five seasons, and the game is at Marshall Stadium.

The Herd won in 1992 and was runnerup in 1987, 1991 and 1993.

Montana's "Fun 'N Gun" offense has put on an awesome display in carrying the Grizzlies to the championship showdown.

The Grizzlies (12-2) won their three preliminary playoff games by a combined scored of 163-14. Quarterback Dave Dickenson has thrown for 1,219 yards in that span, 230 shy of the I-AA playoff record.

Montana needs 40 points against Marshall to match the I-AA playoff scoring record of 203 and Dickenson needs three more touchdown passes to tie the playoff mark of 14, while Joe Douglass is 166 yards away from the playoff record of 545 yards.

"I think their offense as a whole is the best we'll play this year. They know what they're doing and they get it done very efficiently," said Marshall quarterback coach Tony Petersen. "I think it will be the biggest challenge for our defense this year."

Marshall (12-2), meanwhile, eats up large chunks of time behind senior tailback Chris Parker, who has averaged nearly 5 yards per carry in the playoffs after rushing for more than 1,600 yards this season.

And once Parker gets the ground game going, look out: The Herd has a variety of high-percentage play-action passes that can eviscerate defenses.

On the other side, the Marshall defense, big, strong and quick for I-AA, is allowing just 134 yards passing a game. It has not allowed any team to pass for 300 yards this season.

"They have size and speed and athletic ability up front combined with an awfully, awfully good group of linebackers," said Montana defensive coordinator Mick Dennehy. "They're very mobile, very intelligent. They have no weaknesses."

If the teams' schemes and talent counteract, the game may come down to intangibles such as home-field advantage and championship experience. And Marshall has the edge on both counts.

Marshall Stadium has hosted the I-AA championship game since 1992, including two games in which the Herd played, and about 27,500 of the 30,000 fans will be screaming for the Thundering Herd. Also, the Herd is 45-3 in the stadium since it opened in 1991.

Also, Marshall Stadium has artificial turf, while Montana plays on grass.

Montana coach Dave Read does not seem concerned about those factors.

The Grizzlies have played before in hostile environments, such as the field at archrival Montana State in the regular-season finale, Read said.

As for playoff experience, "it's how you look at it," Read said. "We have 17 seniors who have been in the playoffs and conference championship. I don't see it as big a thing as if you had a young team."

And recent cold weather in Missoula has made the Grizzlies' field seem a lot like artificial turf, Read said.

Meanwhile, Marshall wants to avoid a reputation as the team that can't win the big one.

The game will be televised at 11 a.m. CST on ESPN.

Findlay of Ohio battles Central Washington for NAIA II championship

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Ray Long could tell from looking in the mirror in high school that he wasn't headed to Ohio State and the Big Ten.

He was a 6-foot, 180-pound linebacker then. He had the desire to play major-college football; he just didn't have the right size.

"I guess everybody thinks about being a Division I player when they come out of high school," Long said. "But I'm happy how it turned out."

Today, the 6-2, 223-pound linebacker leads the NAIA Division II's top-ranked defense when Findlay of Ohio (10-1-1) plays Central Washington (10-3) for the national championship in the Tacoma Dome.

It isn't the Fiesta Bowl. But these players, while lacking the brawn and speed of the ones at Nebraska and Florida, have NCAA Division I hearts.

Long, a first-team NAIA Division II All-America, leads a defense that gave up only 11 touchdowns with 141 tackles. He also has five interceptions and two fumble recoveries.

He's one of the big reasons why the Oilers are going after their third national title under 22-year coach Dick Strahm.

In 1992, Long was a reserve linebacker on the Findlay team that beat Linfield (Ore.) 26-13 in the national title game in Portland, Ore.

"For us small-college players, a game like this is like the Fiesta Bowl," Long said. "It really means a lot to us. To win this game would pretty much be the highlight of my career."

Strahm agreed.

"Everything is relative," he said. "You'd have a hard time telling these 96 young men that this game isn't as important as winning a bowl game."

Findlay and Central Washington, which is playing for its first national title, didn't figure to make it to the finals.

The Oilers were 0-1-1 after their first two starts and the Wildcats were 4-3 following a 19-16 loss to Western Washington Oct. 21. In the final NAIA Division II poll, Findlay was ranked No. 8 and Central Washington was 14th.

In the playoffs, Findlay and Central Washington have been the two dominant teams, though.

Findlay has beaten Pacific Lutheran of Washington (21-14), Malone of Ohio (15-7) and Lambuth of Tennessee (63-13), while the Wildcats have defeated No. 1 Western Washington (28-21), Hardin-Simmons of Texas (40-20) and Mary of North Dakota (48-7).

Saturday's game matches Findlay's defense, which has allowed only 7.8 points a game in the playoffs, against Central Washington's potent offense, which is averaging 573 yards in its three playoff games.

The Wildcats' Jon Kitna has passed for 4,330 yards and 39 touchdowns in his senior season, and needs just 163 yards to become the NAIA's all-time career total offense leader.

"He's a big, tall, strong quarterback with a real strong arm," Long said of the 6-3, 215-pound Kitna. "But you have to have a strong running game in order to beat us."

If that's so, their top rushing threat is Jamie Christian, whose uncle is Seattle Seahawks coach Dennis Erickson.

Mike Tyson weighs in Friday for tonight's fight against Buster Mathis Jr., which will be televised on FOX. Coverage begins at 7 p.m.

Tyson hits airwaves in bout with Mathis

■ Heavyweight battle, rescheduled from October, is first Tyson fight in nine years on free television.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Tyson will perform for free in the nation's living rooms tonight for the first time in more than nine years.

Tyson's appearance against Buster Mathis Jr. on the Fox network from a ring in the Spectrum is not expected to last anywhere close to the scheduled 12-rounds. It should, however, last more than the 30 seconds Iron Mike needed to dispatch Marvis Frazier on free TV in 1986.

The former undisputed heavyweight champion was a 25-1 favorite to beat the light-hitting Mathis and move on to challenge WBC champion Frank Bruno of Britain on March 16 on pay-per-view television in Las Vegas.

"I ain't taking anything for granted," promoter Don King said.

"You did once," King was reminded.

"Yes," he replied, "with a guy named Buster."

James "Buster" Douglas upset Tyson on a 10-round knockout Feb. 11, 1990, at Tokyo. Mathis, however, lacks Douglas' size, strength, punching power and experience.

King's listeners thought the promoter was closer to the truth when he said, "Mike has worked very hard, brilliantly, for this round . . . uh, two rounds."

The 29-year-old Tyson, released from prison March 25 after serving three years on a rape conviction, began his comeback with an 89-second victory over Peter McNeeley on Aug. 19. That was Tyson's first fight since he scored a 12-round decision over Donovan "Razor" Ruddock on June 28, 1991.

Tyson said he feels sharper than he did before his scheduled Nov. 4 match with the 25-year-old Mathis, which was postponed Oct. 31 because of a fracture to Tyson's right thumb.

Without seeking a medical opinion, Tyson began sparring again less than a month after the postponement.

"I think I'm in great shape," said Tyson, who weighed in officially Thursday at 219 pounds, a pound less than he weighed for McNeeley.

Tyson also said he feels more relaxed and in tune with boxing than he he did before the McNeeley match.

"I'm more confident now," he said. "I'm having fun. I was born to do this with my life."

"I'm glad that people are underestimating me," Mathis said. "I've got nothing to lose, and that's how I'm going to fight. I'm going for broke, plain and simple."

Mathis, of Wyoming, Mich., is clearly a better boxer than McNeeley, but his lack of knockout power is a serious drawback against a hard-hitting opponent with great hand speed. Mathis, 224, has only six knockouts on his 20-0 record. He also has one no-contest and one no-decision.

Tyson's record is 42-1, with 36 knockouts.

According to contracts filed with the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, Tyson is getting $10 million and Mathis is receiving $600,000.

King said he expects a crowd of 10,000 at the Spectrum, but it's very doubtful tickets sales will reach that figure. Prices are $500, $400, $300, $200 and $25.

The Fox telecast will run from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. CST and will include the junior middleweight title match between WBC champion Terry Norris and IBF champion Paul Vaden. Both are from San Diego.

In another match, Carl Daniels of St. Louis will defend the WBA junior middleweight championship against Julio Cesar Vasquez of Argentina.

There also are five scheduled 10-round bouts on the card.

Kings rebound for win against Rockets

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Bouncing back from a season-low performance in his last game, Mitch Richmond scored 24 of a career-high tying 47 points in a fourth-quarter comeback Friday night, leading the Sacramento Kings to a 114-110 victory over the Houston Rockets.

Richmond scored only eight points in Tuesday night's 133-93 loss to Houston, but he made up for it Friday helping the Kings erase a 10-point deficit at the start of the final quarter.

Trailing 83-73, the Kings took a 98-97 lead with 5:29 left during a run of 13 straight points by Richmond. It was Sacramento's first lead since the second quarter.

Pacers 112, Bucks 95

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits had 12 first-quarter points in Indiana's most productive period of the season and the Pacers went on to defeat Milwaukee.

The Pacers led 38-18 after the first quarter, shooting 65 percent, and weren't seriously challenged in winning a fourth consecutive game for the first time this season.

Indiana scored the game's first six points and led 16-2 as the Bucks made just one of their first six shots. Derrick McKey, who had 19 points to lead a balanced offense that featured seven players in double figures, made the first two baskets. Reggie Miller had five points in the spurt, including three following technical fouls called against the Bucks for protesting calls by officials Steve Javie, George Toliver and Luis Grillo.

Celtics 122, Raptors 103

BOSTON — Dino Radja scored a season-high 31 points and had 14 rebounds as Boston surpassed the .500 mark for the first time this season, coasting to a victory over Toronto.

The Celtics, who won their third straight, moved their record to 11-10, marking the first time since last Nov. 30 that they've been over the .500 mark. Rick Fox added 24 for Boston, and rookie Eric Williams had 17. Todd Day, Eric Montross and Dana Barros each added 13 for Boston.

Bullets 122, Lakers 114

LANDOVER, Md. — Chris Webber scored 15 of his career-high 37 points in the fourth quarter as Washington rallied to beat Los Angeles for its third consecutive victory. Webber had 10 rebounds and Juwan Howard added 26 points for Washington, which has won four in a row at home.

The Lakers blew a 6-point lead after three quarters, allowing the Bullets to go on a 18-2 run in the fourth. Washington won for the first time in nine games when trailing after three periods.

Pistons 105, Nets 98

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Grant Hill's second triple-double of the season led Detroit to a victory over New Jersey. Hill finished with 19 points, a career-high 12 assists and 10 rebounds.

The Pistons led 52-51 at the half, and still led by one after three quarters, but it wasn't easy.

Trailing by one after three quarters, the Nets scored the five points of the third quarter. Detroit regained the lead, but New Jersey's Kevin Edwards hit 6-of-8 shots in the period, including three 3-pointers, for 15 points.

Cavaliers 100, Timberwolves 88

MINNEAPOLIS — Chris Mills equalled a career high with 26 points and Terrell Brandon added 19 as Cleveland cruised to a victory over Minnesota.

The pair combined to hit 18-of-30 shots for the Cavaliers, who shot 53 percent from the field. Cleveland never trailed en route to its 10th victory in 14 games since starting the season 0-7.

Magic 111, Jazz 99

ORLANDO, Fla. — So much for Shaquille O'Neal gradually working his way back for Orlando.

The defending NBA scoring champion returned from a thumb injury that sidelined him the first six weeks of the season Friday night and scored 26 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to pace a 111-99 victory over the Utah Jazz.

His performance overshadowed a 24-point, 21-rebound night for Utah's Karl Malone.

SuperSonics 108, Warriors 101

SEATTLE — Shawn Kemp had a season-high 32 points and pulled down 16 rebounds and Gary Payton scored 28 as Seattle beat Golden State.

The Sonics, winning for the ninth time in 11 games, missed 16 of their first 17 3-point attempts, but they hit all of their last five from long range in the final quarter, three by Sam Perkins and two by Payton.

Grizzlies 104, Trail Blazers 100, OT

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Vancouver avoided tying an NBA record for futility, snapping a 19-game losing streak with victory over Portland. The victory was the first for the expansion team after a 2-0 start and was the Grizzlies' second this season against the Trail Blazers.

Spurs Perdue kicks in gear

DALLAS (AP) — When the San Antonio Spurs traded Dennis Rodman, they got rid of one big problem and created another: Now who was going to do the dirty work in the paint?

It couldn't be David Robinson, whose reputation for being "soft" forced San Antonio to get Rodman in the first place. Robinson is center-sized at 7-foot-1, 250 pounds, but he's as graceful as a small forward and often plays like one.

That left coach Bob Hill without many options, so for the first six weeks of this season he's handled his power forwards by committee.

Greg Anderson has seven starts and Carl Herrera six. J.R. Reid has five and Chuck Person one. On Thursday, Hill came up with a fifth option: Will Perdue.

Yes, that Will Perdue. The same one who came to San Antonio for Rodman.

Hill tried the twin-towers approach of Robinson and the 7-1 Perdue in early November playing together and it worked for a few weeks.

But, over a seven-game span from Nov. 22 and Dec. 7, Perdue scored a grand total of two points and was benched for two entire games. That stretch ended when Hill let Perdue play 20 minutes against his former teammates. He responded with nine rebounds.

More inspired play earned Perdue his first start of the season, Thursday against Dallas.

He responded by tying his career-best with 15 rebounds and adding six points in 33 minutes.

to-back shots underneath in the fourth quarter, that was a huge part of the game in the spurt they had."

Sullivan had 14 points to lead all scorers. Lee held athletic Amber Tarr to only 11 points.

"This is the first time this season that we have faced a box-and-one on Tarr," Faught said. "She's had some big games lately and it took us some time to figure that out. But we did a much better job in the second half."

Lee, which hit only 14 of 48 shots from the field, got 11 points from leading scorer Jamie Rhoads, who has been sick this week. No other players hit in double figures, but played hard on defense as Angie Seibold had six rebounds and Rhoads seven. Nisha Washington kept Lee in the game in the third period, hitting six of her eight points in the period. Claire Wright, who has had some big scoring games for Lee, didn't have her shooting eye on this night, hitting only two of 14 shots from the field, including an 0-for-7 effort from three-point range.

Lee will play cross town rival Midland High at 7 p.m. Thursday in a return to District 4-5A play. Lee is 1-0 in district play and MHS is 2-0 after a win over San Angelo Friday night. The winner will have sole possession of first place since all other league teams already own at least one district loss.

In the junior varsity game, Ozona took a narrow 41-39 decision over the 13-4 Lee JV. Ozona's Sandra Sessom hit for 11 points while LaSundra Christian, Allison Bradshaw, Ritha Belizaire and Vanessa Moseley all hit for nine points each.

MHS: Lady Dawgs 2-0 in league action demolition of Odessa Permian, fell to 7-5 and 1-1 despite 16 points from their 6-foot post Kenesha Randle.

"We know that Randle's going to get hers (points) — that's a given — but I think we did a good job of containing their inside game so that no one else could hurt us," Raughton said. "They're a little more inside-oriented and they have the good little point guard, but when we pressured them, it worked."

Alison Hudgins, San Angelo's other big inside player, finished with two points and its best three-point shooter, Imani Dunbar, hit only one from long range all night.

After a close first quarter, the game was never in doubt. The Lady Dawgs broke open a five-point lead in the second with a 16-2 run and led 33-14 with 2: 14 left in the first half.

More Sports/10C

"We worked a lot during the week in practice on defense," Zachery said. "Our pressure was working on them in the first half and went hard at them."

Merritt keyed the run with a layup off a steal by Childress and her fifth three-pointer of the year which got the run going and put Midland High up 21-14.

"They're finally beginning to play as a team," Raughton said.

Zachery agrees.

"I think we're finally beginning to gel as a team," she said. "(Shallowater) was a big wake-up call for us and we really didn't play that great against (Abilene) Cooper, but tonight, we played really good defense and that helped get our offense going."

The Lady Dawgs then went into overdrive with 6: 29 left in the second quarter. Midland High forced the Bobcats into five straight turnovers and held San Angelo scoreless for 4 1/2 minutes as the Lady Dawgs went on a 12-0 run. San Angelo scored only eight points in the second and third quarters as Midland High built its lead.

Reserve forwards Deborah Landreth and Autumn Yeager began to get position inside on Randle and put the ball in the basket, combining for eight points.

The second half was just as miserable for the Lady Bobcats, falling behind by as many as 34 points in the fourth quarter at 64-30 with 5: 53 left in the game.

In the junior varsity contest, Midland High got 13 points from Kelly Scharbauer as the Lady Dawgs beat San Angelo 60-48. Midland High broke open a close game at the half, leading by just four at 29-25, and took the lead for good in the third quarter.

Louisville basketball assistant was in contact with agent, report says

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A Louisville assistant coach made nearly 100 calls during the past two years to a sports agent with a history of making improper payments to players and coaches, The Courier-Journal reported.

The newspaper researched telephone records and found that coach Larry Gay maintained frequent contact with San Antonio lawyer Lance Jay Luchnick. Luchnick is an agent who was decertified by the National Basketball Association players union for 18 months in the early 1990s and permanently prohibited from assisting clients in financial management.

Luchnick currently represents only two NBA players — former Louisville star Clifford Rozier and ex-Georgia standout Willie Anderson. Both were coached by Gay, who was disciplined last month for violating NCAA rules by making improper contacts with potential Louisville recruits.

University phone bills, obtained by the newspaper through open-records requests, show that Gay made at least 96 calls to Luchnick from July 1993 through September 1995. Thirty-six of those calls came during Rozier's junior year — 27 during a 14-week period from late October 1993 through January 1994.

The newspaper also said Friday that Gay misrepresented to the school his reason for flying to San Antonio on Dec. 8, 1993, the date of a Louisville home game against Morehead State. According to recruiting logs filled out by Gay, he made the trip to scout a player who is actually from a suburban Houston high school and whose team played that night in its home gym, about 200 miles east of San Antonio.

Roscoe into 1A state finals

■ Plowboys beat Sudan to make the state finals for the first time since 1982.

ANDREWS (AP) — Jason Alexander rushed for 140 yards and two touchdowns on 30 carries to lead the Roscoe Plowboys to a 38-20 victory over the Sudan Hornets in a their Class A semifinal game Friday night.

Roscoe (14-1) killed the clock in the final 24 minutes, rushing for 161 yards to earn its 13 straight victory. It's the first time the Plowboys have made the finals since 1982.

Roscoe will face the winner of today's Thorndale-Overton game, probably in Brownwood or Fort Worth.

Sudan (9-5) closed to within 24-14 late in the third quarter, but the Plowboys engineered a 16-play, 80-yard drive on their next possession that ate 7: 41 off the clock.

Alexander carried nine times for 62 yards during the march, including a 10-yard TD run.

Roscoe put things away when 285-pound lineman Jerry Chavira intercepted a screen pass and rumbled 43 yards for the final Plowboys score.

Jerimi Bourland led the way for the Hornets' offense, completing 13-of-21 passes for 150 yards and two touchdowns with one interception.

In other playoff action Friday, Commerce tied Springtown 17-17 but advanced the the Class 3A state finals on penetrations. Commerce will play the winner of today's Sealy-Cuero. In Class 2A, Celina beat West Texas High 23-22 to advance to the state finals. Celina will play Refugio or Alto.

BOYS: Lee, MHS both coming off loss streaks

(From 1C)

terey," Stephenson said. "The kids were really drained from the Lee game and you could see it in their eyes."

The Rebels played Monterey tough despite losing their seventh game by seven points or less, and House said that kind of competition will help Lee going into the 4-5A campaign.

"We've played a lot of close games this year, but we knew that good competition would help us get ready for district," House said. "The kids are going into a week of finals now, and I told them this was the first of them."

Going into the game, it was felt that the starting fives of both teams matched up well and most felt it would come down to how the two benches played. However, with the loss of Lemons, another factor has been cast into the mold.

The Rebels played the first game without its entire team as some players were still making the transition to basketball from football, but House believes that his bench will be ready.

"We've reviewed the film from the first game and there are some areas we need to pick up on, but our bench did a good job," House said. "Matt Johnson came in and did a solid job and so did John Norman."

The Lee offense is centered around senior Mark Holly, who is averaging 16.7 points a game, but it doesn't end there. Guard Keith Sawyer is taking his share of the scoring load at 11.6 per game, followed by Israel Boyd and Norman at 8.7 a contest.

"I had no idea he (Sawyer) could shoot from out there, but we made some adjustments on him in the second half," Stephenson said. "They've got a lot of role players who can hit from anywhere."

Midland High has a great supporting cast including seniors Josh Lane, James Whitfield and Terry Johnson, who were instrumental in getting the Bulldogs into the Oilman's Invitational championship game last week. The Whitfield and Johnson combined for 30 points in a win over Levelland, including Johnson's game-winning three-pointer in the final seconds.

Johnson may be a little bit of a question mark, however. The 6-4 forward took an elbow to the eye in Tuesday's loss to Lubbock High and suffered a slight concussion. He left the game but returned later, and probably will see action tonight.

But as solid as the Midland High bench is, the Bulldogs had hitched its wagon to the 6-foot-5 sophomore Lemons, is just 15 years old. Lemons was scoring 21.9 points a game and had become the go-to guy in crunch time for the Bulldogs.

Lemons adjusted to a physical contest and ended up scoring 25 against Lee in the first meeting with the Rebels but this time Lee will have a better idea of what to expect inside.

"It was a physical game, but you can't use that as an excuse," House said. "The officiating didn't lose us the ball game. The only problem with the officiating was that they kept sending us to the line and we kept missing free throws."

The winner of the game not only takes city bragging rights until the next meeting on Jan. 23, but it also gets a leg up in district play.

"I really feel that Jon and I have the two best teams in the district this season," Stephenson said. "It should be a pretty good race."

Five of the district's seven teams had winning records going into district play which could signal a close fight for the two playoff spots.

"I think its going to be a real toss-up," House said. "There are five teams in the district that could make the playoffs."

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An ambitious strategy will help you open new doors. Resist any momentary romantic temptations. A friend could turn into a lover once 1996 gets underway. Next spring will bring professional honors or new public recognition. Join forces with a business associate whose talents complement your own. Wisdom and maturity should be apparent in the family decisions you make. Happy adventures beckon in summer and fall of '96. Pack lightly when traveling.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: TV producer Steven Bochco, anthropologist Margaret Mead, actress Liv Ullmann, composer Ludwig van Beethoven.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your powers of persuasion are at a peak. Pair up with someone who shares your goals. Friends and family members applaud the choices you make now. Be sure to give credit where it is due.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your skills and services impress prominent people. Avoid being overly chatty. Let your good efforts speak for themselves. Travel requires extra care. Go ahead and entertain a small group at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Consult a friend or trusted associate about pivotal financial changes. This person's realistic assessment could open your eyes. An educational matter demands prompt attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your leadership pulls a group together, making progress a cinch. Opening a dialogue with a neighbor or friend helps restore confidence in your relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Conditions are excellent for making new contacts or bonding with your partner. Watch your timing. A premature or reckless declaration could cause regrets. Think before you speak.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your caring attitude brings out the best in others. A candid chat will lighten a tense romantic or financial situation. Make a special effort to help someone who is lonely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance gradually deepens. Dress elegantly for a public appearance. Communication with family members could be strained at times. Tact serves you well. Be aware of what others are saying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Children are lively and full of holiday mirth. Make the most of these happy moments! Indulge yourself by buying something special for your home. Important financial choices must be made in the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle top priority chores early in the day. An agreement is sealed with a handshake. You will enjoy shopping for unusual holiday decorations for your home. Romance demands more consideration on your part. Be attentive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Think positive! Be prepared to seize a unique opportunity. Your social life will soon accelerate. Examine your beliefs and values. A suspicion or prejudice you have harbored for a long time, should be discarded.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Domestic harmony and family life mean the most to you at present. An organized approach to household tasks leaves your evening free. Set aside time for a heart-to-heart discussion. Seek mate's cooperation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keeping your emotional balance in romance will take some effort. You find a way! Do not reveal everything to friends and neighbors. A sister or brother offers loving support. Enjoy a quiet dinner for two.

Hopper sues his 'Easy Rider' co-star for larger cut of rebel classic's profits

LOS ANGELES — Biker buddies no more.

Dennis Hopper is suing his "Easy Rider" co-star, Peter Fonda, for a larger cut of the profits from the '60s motorcycle rebel classic.

Fonda's Pando Co., which marketed the movie, paid Hopper only 33 percent of the proceeds, said the lawsuit filed Wednesday. Hopper wants 41 percent of the $40 million to $70 million "Easy Rider" has earned since 1969.

In denying Hopper a bigger share, Fonda was "wanton, oppressive and malicious and motivated by ill will toward Hopper," the lawsuit said. He seeks unspecified damages.

Hopper wrote and directed the movie and went on to stardom while Fonda's career fizzled.

Eileen Feldman, Fonda's spokeswoman in Los Angeles, said Friday he had no comment.

LONDON — Fitness appears to have paid off for Princess Diana.

The Sun and the Daily Mirror reported Thursday that Diana has been dating a wealthy real estate tycoon for 14 months after meeting him at her London health club.

The estranged wife of Prince Charles exchanged phone numbers with Christopher Whalley, 40, and bombarded him with calls, the Sun said.

Whalley played down the friendship in an interview with the Sun.

"I'm not one of her regular friends. So she's phoned me a couple of times — what exactly is the big deal?"

NEW YORK — Dan Rather doesn't buy the theory that the public isn't interested in death and destruction in the Balkans.

In the Dec. 23 TV Guide, the CBS news anchorman chides both viewers and TV decision-makers for apathy over Bosnia, saying he hopes the deployment of 20,000 U.S. troops will change some minds.

"It was easier to make room in our broadcasts for the O.J. Simpson trial than for the war in Bosnia," he said.

"There have been times when we've run stories on apple picking back home and forgotten the babies that are being blown up in Bosnia. Even the best of us have succumbed," Rather said.

Rather is in Bosnia and NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw was on his way. Both planned on staying at least through the weekend.

MINNEAPOLIS — The artist formerly known as Prince is $200,000 richer after a property tax fight.

His Paisley Park Studios successfully challenged the tax value of its suburban Chanhassen property, Finance and Commerce reported Friday.

Carver County had assessed the property at just over $5 million, but Minnesota Tax Court recently reduced the studios' assessed value to $4 million, the business daily said.

Under the ruling, the studio will receive more than $200,000 in tax refunds.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Doug Stone had a mild heart attack in a restaurant and will be hospitalized for a few days.

Stone, 38, fell ill Thursday at an airport restaurant in Charlotte, N.C., and was taken to a hospital, said his spokeswoman, Dixie Pineda.

He was listed in serious but stable condition and is expected to remain in the hospital about five days. Stone had quadruple bypass surgery three years ago.

Stone's hits include "I'd Be Better Off in a Pine Box," "A Jukebox With a Country Song" and "Why Didn't I Think of That."

LONDON — Nicole Kidman and Tom Cruise may find an on-screen spark to go with their off-screen marriage.

The two will star in "Eyes Wide Shut," a Stanley Kubrick thriller filled with jealousy and sexual obsession, Warner Bros. said Friday.

Kubrick, who released the classics "Dr. Strangelove" in 1964 and "2001: A Space Odyssey" in 1968, will begin directing in London next summer.

Kubrick, who wrote the screenplay, will also produce.

Cruise and Kidman previously shared top billing in "Far and Away," Ron Howard's 1992 Irish-American historical epic. The film flopped and some blamed the couple's inability to transfer their real-life romance into on-screen chemistry.

Dolphins got tougher on the way to Buffalo

The Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

For a while, the Miami Dolphins looked like just another team the Buffalo Bills would have to step over on their way to the playoffs.

But that was two weeks ago, after Miami had lost three in a row and critics were asking whether time had passed by Dolphins coach Don Shula.

Now, Miami has won its last two, including a 13-6 victory over Kansas City on Monday night, and Buffalo will have to step a little higher to clinch the AFC East.

"It's been an up-and-down year for us," Shula said. "The important thing now is that we're very much in the hunt. Like Buffalo, we have to be ready for this Sunday."

The NFL has a pair of games scheduled for today, New England at Pittsburgh at 11:30 a.m. CST, and Green Bay at New Orleans in the 3 p.m. game.

The Dolphins-Bills game will be in Buffalo, where the warm-weather Dolphins will have to contend with conditions severe by even Buffalo standards.

"We know we have a great task just playing the Bills. We can't even be concerned about the weather up there," said offensive lineman Keith Sims. "Whether it's bright sunshine or blizzard snow, we have to try to do the same thing."

Jaguars (3-11) at Lions (8-6): The Jaguars and Lions are teams headed in different directions. Expansion Jacksonville has lost six in a row, and Detroit has won five straight to shoot into playoff contention.

"This is a big game for us," Lions coach Wayne Fontes said. "I hate to keep saying this, but it becomes that issue. It's the biggest game of the year because of where we are. It's a must win for us."

Bengals (6-8) at Browns (4-10): If the Browns move to Baltimore next season, as they plan, this is it for Cleveland Stadium, and that's about the only significance of this game.

"It's a sad day when Cleveland doesn't have football," said Bengals linebacker Steve Tovar, who grew up near Cleveland. "When you say Cleveland, you say Browns in the same breath."

Jets (3-11) at Oilers (5-9): This one provides another likely "last," with the Oilers planning to move to Nashville next season. "I think it's going to be an exciting time if this is the last game, for people to come out and see Steve McNair," said Oilers coach Jeff Fisher. "He stimulated the Astrodome last week and hopefully he can do it for four quarters this week."

Falcons (8-6) at Cougars (6-8): The Falcons can clinch a playoff berth by beating Carolina and getting a loss by either Detroit or Minnesota. If both the Lions and Vikings win, the Falcons probably will be playing out the string the following week against San Francisco.

Atlanta has lost its last three games against San Francisco by a combined total of 106 points.

Cardinals (4-10) at Eagles (9-5): The Eagles need a win to clinch the playoffs, and they'll settle for an unimpressive one. Ranked only 19th in the league with a 20.2-point average, the Eagles know they're not exactly scaring people to death.

"The fans want to see us lighting up the scoreboard and scoring 40 points a game," said quarterback Rodney Peete.

Buccaneers (7-7) at Bears (7-7): It doesn't take a genius to figure out the significance of this game.

"The winner has a chance and the loser stays home. It's that simple," said Bucs quarterback Trent Dilfer. "It's been so long since Tampa Bay had a December game that really mattered and really meant something."

Redskins (4-10) at Rams (7-7): Despite dropping seven of their last 10 games, the Rams remain mathematically alive for a playoff spot that would be the team's first since 1989.

The Rams are one of seven teams at either 8-6 or 7-7 fighting for three available spots.

Mark Rypien will start for Chris Miller, sidelined with a concussion.

Broncos (7-7) at Chiefs (11-3): Although already assured a playoff berth, the Chiefs could clinch the home-field advantage this weekend. Kansas City has to win, and Pittsburgh must either tie or lose to New England on Saturday. If Pittsburgh won't cooperate, then Kansas City can do it by winning its last two games.

Chargers (7-7) at Colts (8-6): Indianapolis could clinch its first playoff trip since 1987 with a victory and a loss by one of three teams — Miami, Denver or Oakland.

San Diego's road to postseason is a little tougher, needing victories this week and in its final game of the regular season against the New York Giants next Saturday.

Giants (5-9) at Cowboys (10-4)

These teams met earlier this year on Monday night, and Dallas won 35-0. That was back when the Cowboys were invulnerable, however.

Now, the Cowboys find themselves in a crucial game against New York. Dallas is is tied with San Francisco for the best record in the NFC, but the 49ers have the tiebreaker after beating the Cowboys.

Raiders (8-6) at Seahawks (7-7): Jeff Hostetler returns to action for Oakland, which has lost four in a row.

"I'm hoping to be a little spark," said Hostetler, who had a bruised left shoulder. "But everybody else has got to do their jobs, too. I can't go out and win the game by myself."

Vikings (8-6) at 49ers (10-4): En route to a Super Bowl victory last season, the 49ers lost their final regular-season game to Minnesota.

"But it's a different story this year," said wide receiver Jerry Rice.

This year, the 49ers don't have the division title, first-round bye and home-field advantage locked up. They're tied with Dallas.

ADVICE: Johnson says Cowboys need to be inspired guy on the team went back into the training room and was talking to some other players, saying, 'What the hell do we need to win for? We're not in the playoffs.' A very negative thing.

"I called the team together and said it took a lot of guts to say something like that in front of people, and that the person should show the same guts and say it now. I'll never forget the silence in that room as I counted, '1-1,000, 2-1,000, 3-1,000.' I'll never forget the silence. '4-1,000, 5-1,000, 6- 1,000.' Finally, a guy jumped up and said he'd said it. I told him, 'You're off the squad and I never want to see you again as long as I live.'

"We beat Houston and won our last three games, convincingly. That incident reminded us all of the loyalty it takes for a program to succeed. That was in '61. We won the AFL championship in '62."

Johnson: "I said this watching the Cowboys' loss to the Redskins: I said they didn't look inspired. I believe now they'll be inspired. There are methods that can be used."

Q: How much of the problem is the burden of expectations, the concept that a great team shouldn't have adversity?

Johnson: "Sometimes, you have to take that into consideration looking at this in personnel decisions. You've got to weigh if certain individuals, for instance, who are a bit free-wheeling, do more to hurt than to help. That's coaching, but that's also drafting."

Stram: "Motivation, focus, intensity, the competitive urge to succeed, these are hard to sustain for years and years. Plus, you go into games overconfident, against nondynamic teams, and the next thing you know, you're spending the week figuring out why you lost. That's just the nature of people."

Walsh: "There's no escaping some adversity. Winning every game is not critical, but improving every week is. And recovering immediately from losses is."

Stram: "Coach George Halas, one of the great Polish philosophers of our time, once told his Bears, 'We have proven we can stand adversity. Now let's prove we can stand success.' It's so true. Most people will handle adversity because it's so commonplace. It's tougher to handle success."

Q: When faced with these situations, what did you do? Crack the whip, or stroke egos, or give fire-and-brimstone speeches, what?

Stram: "Once, in Denver, it was halftime and we were getting killed. I said, 'Everybody you ever met in your lifetime is watching this game from all over world. You're wearing the arrowhead on your helmets, the red jerseys, the right names, but you're a bunch of damn impostors. And we're not playing the rest of this game with impostors.' I told them I'd hold up the purse (salaries) until I watched the film. 'If I see on film that you were an impostor, you'll have played this game for free.' We came back in the second half and won. Years later, Jan Stenerud asked me if I could really have not paid them. No, I couldn't have really done that. But it worked."

Johnson: "Any time our team was playing a team that was confrontational, I beat something into our players' minds. I beat it into their minds that there were going to be some skirmishes, and that they'd look best in my eyes if they were the guys who walked away from the skirmishes and let the other team get the 15-yard penalty. The guy who gets on my bad side is the guy who shoves back."

Stram: "One time, as we were heading to a Super Bowl season, I had my trainer, Bobby Yarborough, go down to the five-and- dime store and buy $15,000 worth of play money in a big bag. Before the game, I emptied it in the locker room. The guys couldn't tell it wasn't real and their eyes got as big as golf balls. 'Win the Super Bowl,' I said, 'and each one of you gets this much money!' Wow, you should have seen them."

Walsh: "If you are the same exact person day after day, players become too comfortable and you are no longer a resource. The great coaches, like Pete Newell, the great basketball coach of Cal — I'm a student of his style — possessed a tremendous sense of humor, and was close to his players. Yet he was a major taskmaster. The best coaches are unpredictable. The very best all have that."

Q: How can a coach turn a negative into a positive?

Johnson: "In Dallas, we once had some problems with penalties. So we hired a couple of officials and they came and worked all of our practices. I'm not saying that kind of thing helps everywhere. But that's what we did, and it worked."

Stram: "You can't use adversity as an excuse to lose. You've got to use it as a reason to win. We said going into the 1970 season that we might lose some people to injury along the way, and even if it's Buck Buchanan or Willie Lanier or Len Dawson, we've still got to win. Then we lost Lenny for six weeks. It was a severe blow, but we started Mike Livingston, the great athlete from SMU, and we won all six games. The team rallied around the loss of Lenny."

Walsh: "Humor can do it. I could get everybody laughing, and I don't mean with some traveling salesman joke. I'd stumble and fall, make myself the butt of the joke. I knew if I could get 'em laughing, I could get 'em serious."

Q: Did you ever sense that players thought you were a fake, or that they tired of your act?

Stram: "I never talked to the team without tape-recording the speech. I did it only because if you're not careful, you can be very, very repetitious. At the end of the year, I categorized the speeches and filed them for future reference. Also, I got motivational speeches on tape from other great speakers, and played two or three minutes of it for the team. They loved it. It was famous speakers saying the same thing I'd said, but in a different way and with a different title."

Walsh: "You don't want to be a coach expecting your players to come flocking around like a shepherd with his sheep, waiting for the magical words. The atmosphere must be that they also demand of each other."

Johnson: "I've always been clear with people that I treat them consistently — consistently different. You have to have a plan to address each and every player. Which players do you take aside? Which do you take into your office for a talk? Which do you chew out in front of the team? Which do you talk to through the media? You have to have a plan."

Stram: "You think you have a captive audience. But they'll know if it's not real. Jimmy had his way, Tom Landry had his way. I had my way. (Vince) Lombardi was a scream-and-holler guy, and the Packers knew that's what he was like. Tom was very stoic. He screams and hollers, his players would say, 'What the hell happened to Tom?' You've got to believe in what you do, believe strongly. Players like that and respect it."

Q: If the coach is not a motivational type, or doesn't quite click with his players, can players with leadership qualities be relied upon to do it for themselves? And is that enough?

Stram: "The kind of team the Cowboys are, they have that kind of core. With free agency, you can buy all the players you want to, but you can't buy chemistry. You can't buy 'team.' A player finds somebody slipping, he's got to tell him that he's taking money out of 'my' pocket."

Walsh: "There is great leadership on the Cowboys, probably the best leadership in football. Troy Aikman in particular. Interestingly, almost all their greatest players are also great leaders."

Johnson: "This can be a problem. A player can be a leader. He can set himself up to chastise other players. But if he's chastising other players, that can cause a problem. I'm not saying that's what happening (with the Cowboys). I'm saying if players are doing the job of the head coach, or the job of the enforcer, some players might resent that."

Walsh: "Some teams are strong enough to go without a coach and win. But remember during players' strikes, when we heard the rhetoric about players forming their own leagues? How disastrous that was! They couldn't even assemble to practice! They need authority. In Dallas, they can win because winning was already established before (Barry Switzer)."

Stram: "Ultimately, you are the coach. You got the chalk. You got the keys to the plane. You've got to make it fly."

Q: If you were in charge of this Cowboys team at this moment of supposed crisis, what would you do?

Walsh: "It's simple: hard work, concentration and as little dialogue as possible."

Stram: "People don't understand this about Barry Switzer, but you don't win like he won, with that consistency and those national championships and for all those years, without being a great coach. That's a given. This is a people business. He's a great people person. I think the world of Barry. I don't think he's got nearly the recognition he deserves for the tough spot he was in, replacing Jimmy. I think Barry can push the right buttons."

Johnson: "I've talked to the (Cowboys) players ... In my conversations, they've said they feel their back is against the wall. Now, it's not, really. They're going to win the NFC East and have home-field advantage. But they've taken the position that their back is against the wall. They've challenged themselves. So the right button has already been pushed."

Judge sets February trial date to keep Browns in Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — A Feb. 12 trial date was set Friday for the city's lawsuit seeking a permanent order blocking the Cleveland Browns from moving to Baltimore until their Cleveland Stadium lease expires in 1998.

Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Kenneth Callahan last month issued a temporary order barring the Browns from moving until a trial could be held.

Fred Nance, a lawyer for the city, said he was satisfied with the trial date. The city had asked the judge to delay the trial until early March, but Nance said he could live with mid-February.

"Our request for March in the first place was based on the notion that we needed time to get information from the other side, analyze that information, and put it together in order to put our case on," Nance said.

No. 13 Utah coasts to 87-63 win over St. Thomas

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Keith Van Horn scored a season-high 29 points despite limited action as 13th-ranked Utah coasted to an 87-63 victory over tiny St. Thomas Friday night.

Van Horn, who played 24 minutes and sat out the final 10:22 of the game, was 12-of-19 from the field. His performance against the outmanned Bobcats of the NAIA also included 11 rebounds.

Utah (6-1) won its sixth straight game. St. Thomas (3-6), from Miami, has lost six of seven.

Mark Rydalch bolstered the Utes with 12 points off the bench, while Ben Caton added 10.

The Bobcats got 19 points and five steals from Durrant Williams and Desmond Jackson chipped in 10 points and nine rebounds.

No. 12 Georgia 104, Bowling Green 64

ATHENS, Ga. — Kedra Holland scored a career-high 29 points to lead Georgia to a rout of Bowling Green. Georgia (4-2) broke open the game midway through the first half with a 26-8 run and took a 57-32 halftime lead.

Sara Puthoff led Bowling Green (3-4) with 13 points.

No. 19 Mississippi 90, NE Louisiana 46

OXFORD, Miss. — Freshman Christie Sides scored 17 points as Mississippi defeated Northeast Louisiana. Ole Miss (7-1) has won seven straight since a season-opening loss. Northeast Louisiana (0-7) has yet to win a game.

Ohio St. 80, No. 25 DePaul 76

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Katie Smith made six straight free throws in the final 1:12 to give Ohio State a victory over DePaul.

The Buckeyes (7-3) held the Blue Demons (2-5) scoreless for the final 3:25 after a layup by Tawona Alhaleem completed an 8-0 run that gave DePaul its only lead of the second half at 76-74.

Four-time champ Graf undergoes surgery, to miss Grand Slam Australian Open for second straight year

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — For Steffi Graf, 1996 will have an ominous start. That sounds just like the way 1995 began.

Graf, co-ranked No. 1 in the world with Monica Seles, will be miss the Australian Open next month after undergoing foot surgery Friday.

Graf, 26, had surgery Friday at the Alfred Krupp Hospital in Essen to remove bone splinters from her left foot, Dr. Hartmut Krahl said in a statement.

"The patient wants to take enough time to complete her recuperation and rehabilitation program without problems," said Krahl, who frequently acts as Graf's physician.

Graf had a similar operation two years ago.

She is a four-time winner of the Australian Open, the first of the year's Grand Slam events. She also missed last year's tournament in Melbourne because of injury.

The surgery comes at the end of a bizarre year for Graf. She won all three Grand Slam events she entered, compiled a 47-2 record and still could consider 1995 a frustrating year.

After missing the Australian Open, Graf played little because of a chronic back injury.

But when she played, she usually won.

She won the French Open, followed by Wimbledon and then stopped the triumphant comeback of her great rival Seles with a classic, three-set victory in an emotion-charged final of the U.S. Open in September.

But even during the U.S. Open, Graf had been bothered by the sore left foot.

Physical problems were just part of Graf's traumatic years.

In August, Graf's father and long-time manager, Peter Graf, was arrested on suspicion of tax evasion on more than $30 million of his daughter's earnings.

Peter Graf remains in investigative custody. Investigators also are looking into Steffi Graf's role in the affair and trying to determine how much about her father's alleged tax schemes she knew about.

Boston honors Williams with tunnel dedication

BOSTON (AP) — The fighter-pilot eyes that supposedly could see the seams on a fastball are dimmed by age. The long legs that loped around the basepaths need the help of a cane.

But Ted Williams made it clear Friday that the tunnel that bears his name is no memorial.

"Every place I go, they're waving at me, sending out a cheer, sending letters and notes," Hall of Fame outfielder of the Red Sox outfielder said at a ceremony to dedicate the tunnel. "And I thought, I've only seen it happen to somebody who looks like they're going to die ... And I'd like to say this one thing today: I'm a long ways from that."

The player John Updike once referred to as a municipal monument now has a monument of his own, a $2 billion tunnel under Boston Harbor that one day should ease monumental traffic jams to and from Logan International Airport.

Williams, 77, stood for much of the hour-long ceremony, during which politicians lined up to pay him homage for his baseball feats, his wartime service and his charity work for childhood cancer research.

"We are honored that Ted Williams, a hero on the ballfield, on the battlefield and in the battle for children's health, would lend his name to this project," said Gov. William F. Weld.

After the speeches were over, Williams and Weld tugged at a black drape to expose a bronze plaque showing Williams at the end of one of his famously sweet swings. Williams then reached up and gently brushed the raised image. Hundreds of people watched by the tunnel's South Boston entrance, including hard-hatted construction workers who looked down on the bunting-covered reviewing stand from atop high concrete walls.

"This is here, and you'll be talking about it for 100 years," Williams told them, a blue knit cap perched high on his head against the freezing cold.

The 1.6-mile tunnel is the third beneath the harbor, and part of the nation's largest ongoing public works project, which eventually will sink an elevated highway that clogs the city's center to an underground roadway . The so-called Central Artery project has been in development for 30 years and has an $8 billion price tag.

Before the ceremony, Williams took a ceremonial ride through the tunnel with Weld and former Govs. Michael S. Dukakis and Edward J. King, political antagonists who steered the project through decades of red tape. U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena was in a second car.

"Three governors in one car," Weld quipped. "The third harbor tunnel was obviously one of those rare public projects able to stay on course despite the hairpin turns of Massachusetts politics."

But the center of attraction was Williams, who was perhaps the greatest pure hitter in baseball, and the last player to hit more than .400. Such a feat hasn't been matched in 54 years.

He lost five seasons to military service during World War II and Korea. He flew dozens of missions as a Marine Corps jet pilot in Korea, and nearly was killed in a fiery landing. He played his entire career with the Red Sox, and is now one of the most beloved sports figures in Boston, ranking with the Celtics' Larry Bird and the Bruins' Bobby Orr.

Williams was a sensation from his first season in 1939, when he became the first rookie to win the American League RBI title, to his last at-bat in 1960, when he hit an eighth-inning home run to center field in half-empty Fenway Park.

In between, there was the .406 season in 1941, seven AL batting titles, four home run crowns. He hit at least .300 in every season except 1959 for a lifetime average of .344.

There also were two wars, and comebacks from a smashed elbow in the 1950 All-Star Game and a broken collarbone.

That final home run remains an enduring baseball image, replayed on film and etched in a black-and-white photograph that shows Williams following through his swing, eyes closed, head cocked.

But the home run also is famous for something Williams didn't do. He wouldn't tip his cap to the crowd or acknowledge their cheers. He never did, not after his rookie season. He used to say the same ones who cheered him when he hit a home run booed him when he struck out. Williams didn't tip his cap to the Fenway fans until an appreciation day in 1991.

During his playing days, Williams' thrown bats, his spitting in the direction of the crowd and his unending feud with sports writers were headline fodder.

Friends say the bitterness and anger grew out of his need to excel.

"He got mad at himself all the time. That was the perfectionist in him," said Curt Gowdy, who broadcast Red Sox games from 1951 to 1965 and was master of ceremonies Friday. "He had a burning pride to be great."

Williams was a master fisherman, a crack hunter. Future astronaut and U.S. Sen. John Glenn, his wing commander in Korea, called him an exceptional pilot.

Red Sox teammate Johnny Pesky and Williams went through two years of Navy training together during World War II. The conditioning program included boxing. A professional fighter was brought in to show the recruits a few pointers. During one sparring session, Williams stung the pro with a quick punch.

"He said, 'You want to make a million dollars quick? I'll make a fighter out of you,'" said Pesky.

Williams stuck to hitting, and he worked hard to take advantage of his gifts: his 20-10 eyesight, quick hands, and extraordinary ability to match the two.

"He could have been a drunk and hit .300. He had that much natural ability," Gowdy said. "He could never understand the modern players who didn't as work hard as he did. He was the first person in the park, the last to leave."

Whether the tunnel turns out to be a boon or boondoggle, naming it after Williams gives it some measure of protection, said David Luberoff, an observer of the arduous process by which it was built.

In Boston, "being against Ted Williams is like being against motherhood," Luberoff said.

CHRISTMAS 1995
PUT A SMILE ON THE FACE OF A REAL LIVE DOLL

DRESS a LIVE DOLL

Call The Salvation Army at 697-7262

Here is a special idea for your Christmas Shopping list. Why not "Dress-A-Live-Doll"?? For 20 years the Midland Salvation Army's favorite Christmas program has been "Dress-A-Live-Doll". This year join others who have experienced the joy of clothing a needy child and the excitement of knowing that the child may be receiving new clothes for the very first time. Happiness for young boys and girls can be nice school clothing that is their very own. Get friends and neighbors to participate with you.

There are still 150 children waiting to be adopted. Please hurry - deadline is December 17.

You can adopt your live Doll by stopping by the Customer Service Desk at J.C. Penney (Midland Park Mall) or you can call the Salvation Army at 697-7262

We ask that you purchase an entire outfit for a child...approximate cost is $90-$130, which includes a coat or sweater. Your purchase is tax deductible.

Thanks To The Midland YMCA Indian Princesses. They raised $4500 that will dress 35 children

Do you have someone in your company or family who you don't really know what to buy them as an appreciation gift or love gift? Let "Dress A Life Doll" be your gift. A certificate indicating a child was dressed on their behalf is provided upon your request.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsibility, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsibility for the omission of an ad.

FREE BEE
FREE CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
If your are a private individual selling one item for $50 or less you can place a 3 line classified advertisement for 4 days absolutely FREE in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
