Legoin Passes New Resolution at Meeting Aug. 8

Gatesville, Texas August 8, 1942.

At a meeting of Knox Curits Post No. 42 of the American Legion, Department of Texas, Gatesville, Texas, the following resolution was introduced and unanimously passed and ordered spread upon the minutes of the Post.

Whereas our State and Nation, as well as the rights of all free people are fast being subjected to a rule of tyranny by war lords and leaders who have no conscientiousness of the existence of God, or the rights of men, and

Whereas in order to meet this crisis, every man, woman and child of our free nation has been asked to forego many pleasures, common to our normal life, and to take on added duties and responsibilities and make many personal sacrifices, in order that our war efforts may be prosecuted to a successful and victorious conclusion, and

Whereas we must have implicit faith and confidence in our leaders and public officials, for only in our unity and support and in their wisdom and leadership can we hope for the preservation of democracy and the continuing existence of our rights as free men, and

Whereas the average citizen, cannot have available and be informed on all facts and material matters that might materially affect our national affairs, or economic conditions or the personal or public affairs of our officials, and are sometimes, mis-led or mis-informed by public officials, or by over-zealous politicians, and that such practice does incalculable harm under the present existing crisis, when we can not afford to make a mistake by being mis-led or mis-informed,

Now Therefore Be it Resolved that the Knox Curtis Post No. 42 of the American Legion, Department of Texas, go on record calling for all public officials now in office, and all candidates of all parties seeking any character of public office, to be open, frank and honest in all matters, and not to mis-lead us as common citizens by innuendos, insinuating references, loose statements, or be left to draw erroneous conclusions from facts stated in such manner (Continued on page 8)

Edgar Lee Clark, Jr. In Officers Candidate School No. 4 Here

Remember that name? Edgar Lee Clark's father was a cotton buyer here up until about 1915, when Mr. and Mrs. Clark moved to Waco and then to Memphis, Tenn. Cadet Clark was born here in 1909.

Edgar Lee Clark, Jr., is an Officer Candidate in Class No. 4, which started here this week.

He enlisted in the army some time ago and has been at a number of posts, including Ft. Oglethorpe, Ft. McCellan and Camp Cook.

He lived on South 14th, down where the Powells, Warrens, Jones, Painters and the others have lived for these many years. We kids used to play in the streets together, dodging R. E. Powell's Humpmobile as it started for town.

Edgar Lee's mother was a Tankersley, another well known Coryell county family, which lived in Wells Addition down with the Powells, Jones' and the Warrens.

Edgar Lee was busy, he said, plenty busy Wednesday morning when we saw him again (last time just before 1915 just before he left Gatesville) and said he'd be in camp by army request for two weeks and then he wanted, army not objecting, to meet some of the folks down on South 14th and many other citizens who he used to know and who used to know his parents when they lived here.

Certainly is getting to be a small world!

Atlantic Charter Anniversary is Today; 8 Points

About a year ago, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill met on the Atlantic for a conference, which resulted in the Atlantic Charter, which if you don't remember, was as follows:

1. Their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other;
2. They desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned;
3. They respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live; and they wish to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them;
4. They will endeavor, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all states, great or small, victor or vanquished, or access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity;
5. They desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing, for all, improved labor standards, economic adjustment and social security;
6. After the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries and which will afford assurance that all men in all the lands may live their lives in freedom from fear and want;
7. Such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance;
8. They believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wide and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential. They will likewise aid and encourage all other practicable measures which will lighten for peace-loving peoples the crushing burden of armaments.

U. S. FOREIGN LEGION

Most people don't realize it, but there are many enemy aliens who are officers in the U. S. army. In fact the army, true to the American tradition of the melting pot, is made up of American citizens of almost every national and racial background, including 2,720 German aliens, not to mention 2,700 Germans who are naturalized citizens.

The Italian total is 2,472 aliens and 3,781 naturalized. In addition, there are 644 Japanese in the army, plus 3,000 Japanese-Americans, formerly of the Hawaiian national guard, most of whom are assigned to the 100th battalion at Fort McCoy, Wis.

The army goes on the assumption that any man who wants to fight can be a good soldier. Of course, the "enemy aliens" are checked and double-checked before they are admitted for enlistment. The men who pass these tests are found to be even more zealous for the defeat of the dictators than the average American.

Latin-American Battalions.

To make the melting pot more complex, the army has a Filipino infantry battalion, and is forming a battalion for Norwegians in the U. S. and Norwegian-Americans. Instruction and conversation in this unit will be in the Norwegian language.

Equally eager to fight are thousands of Latin-Americans, especially from the nearer countries, such as Cuba and Mexico. The office of the U. S. military attache in Havana is flooded with applications from young Cubans who want to wear the uniform of Uncle Sam. Most of them would renounce Cuban citizenship if necessary.

But what they do not realize is that if they come to the United States, they are likely to be swept into the U. S. army, whether they like it or not. Within five days after entering this country, aliens must register for the draft, and they had better leave the country pronto if they don't want to be inducted.

Not yet arranged, but highly desirable, is a Latin-American battalion. There are now ten Latin-American countries which have declared war on the Axis, and thousands of their young men want to follow up that declaration with something more than police duty at home.

BACK-BREAKERS

An American diplomat returning from Italy tells this revealing story about the true sentiments of the Italian people.

In his office, at the U. S. embassy in Rome he found a clerk, an Italian girl, crying. When he inquired what was wrong, she replied: "Oh, I'm ashamed to be an Italian. You remember what boasting the Fascists did about the Greek campaign? They said: 'We will break their kidneys.' But everybody knows who really beat the Greeks; it was not our army; it was the Germans. But now—have you seen the poster on the streets this morning?" And the girl broke into tears again.

The diplomat looked outside at the poster, which that day was appearing all over Italy. It showed a Greek soldier lying on his face, with a steel bar across his back. On top of the bar was the Fascist insignia, and on the side, the swastika.

The caption read: "We said we would break their kidneys. Mussolini is always right."

Note: All reports from Italy tell of a growing disgust with the Mussolini government, and a growing hatred of the Germans. But the people are too cowed to revolt.

NO-CHAUFFEUR ARNOLD

Trustbusting Thurman Arnold hails from the small town of Laramie, Wyo., and he doesn't see any reason why he should hire a chauffeur to drive his car. So he drives it himself.

One evening, after he and Mrs. Arnold had been dinner guests of Mrs. Evalyn (Hope Diamond) McLean, they were going out the front door, when the doorman said, in his most elegant manner, "Shall I call your car, Mr. Arnold?"

With a sour expression on his face, Arnold said, "You can call it, but I don't think it will come."

CAPITAL CHAFF

The Thurman Arnolds are mourning over the fact that Angelica has eaten Henry Wallace's corn. When the vice president heard about it, he having given the Arnolds a present of Iowa hybrid corn, he remarked: "I hope the corn did Angelica some good." Angelica is the Thurman Arnolds' cow.

FOOD FOR FREEDOM

By Sidney G. Gibson, Texas A. & M. College Extension Service

On Monday at Marlin the A. & M. College Extension Service Horticulturist, J. F. Rosborough, gave the Home Demonstration Agents in District 8 of Texas, which is Central Texas counties, some timely tips on fall gardening. He reminded them that now is the time to take out the exhausted vegetables and clean off the ground. It is a good time to put well rotted manure from the livestock lot on the soil and work it in from 4 to 5 inches deep.

Since we need to have some rain before planting the seed, time now can best be spent in good preparation of the soil and good garden planning. In deciding where certain vegetables are to be placed, it is best to avoid putting beans where Irish potatoes have grown in the soil but it is satisfactory to let peas follow potatoes.

A shortage of garden seed is inevitable, seed must be saved. Mrs. Keener of the Harmon Home Demonstration Club reports having successfully saved bean, pea, tomato, cucumber and even lettuce seeds and grown the following year's vegetables from them. She lets the seed mature on the vine, or plant, athers them, separates the seed from the pulp, cleans, dries and puts them in a dry cool, clean place until time to plant them.

In case trouble is experienced with flea beetles and similar insects in the garden, a good control measure is rotenone-sulphur.

The question is not what freedom costs, but what can we save that is worth more?

SIDE GLANCES ON TEXAS HISTORY

By Charles O. Hucker
University of Texas Library

MILITARY "UNIFORMS"

While the Texas defense guard of today is a snappy, well-clad and well-drilled military organization, early forerunners of this army—in the days of the Republic—could scarcely boast as much.

When a battalion was mustered out at Houston in the fall of 1833 to "chastize" a band of predatory Indians, there was no "government issue" of clothing—each soldier, even the commander-in-chief wore whatever garb he had that he thought suitable for rough wear, according to R. F. Lubbock, member of the battalion and later Governor of Texas.

Lubbock described the habiliments of the battalion, himself included, in his Memories, "Six Decades in Texas," a copy of which is found in the University of Texas Library's extensive Texas Collection.

"Major Bonnell * * * was of medium height, with red hair and freckled face under a slouched hat," Lubbock wrote, "and he came into camp in a very long coat reaching nearly to his ankles, making quite a priestly appearance, and but for a belt around his waist and a long old sword dangling thereby, he looked less like a frontier soldier than any of us. Though there was no uniformity of dress in the battalion, each one wearing what he could get as most appropriate for a hard winter campaign."

Buckskin Pants

Lubbock himself wore a pair of fine new buckskin pants "such as worn by frontiersmen," specially made for him for the expedition. But he soon lost his affection for new possession.

"Once, while out scouting for several days with a small party, we were overtaken by a heavy rain storm when in our camp asleep," he recounted, "I was lying in a low place, so that the water ran against me in a flood, saturating my buckskins. Not thinking of the consequences, and being very wet and cold, I backed myself up to a hot mesquite fire made up to dry and warm us.

"Before discovering it, my pants had crawled up to my knees, and I had to ride in that plight a day or two. They got tighter and tighter all the time until we reached the main camps. Then I had in a manner to cut them off my limbs.

"I have never owned a pair of buuckskin pants since," he added. "They are more entertaining in a picture or a romance than they are on one's own shanks."

WNU Service

still further turns for the worse before the battalion finally returned home.

"I remember well how I appeared and how astonished my wife and friends were when they beheld me marching through town," he concluded. "The legs of my pants had disappeared, and I had made leggings of an old green baize crub cloth that I had taken with me for a horse cover. This I cut up and divided with the boys, for many of them were fully as bad off as myself."

100 Years Ago in Texas

"News from the West—The Western mail arrived early yesterday morning but brought no papers from Austin. From private letters we learn that Col. Burleson was at Austin on the 11th inst. with 350 men protecting the Archives. A rumor had reached that city that Goliad had been retaken by about 50 of our troops. The enemy retired without firing a gun. The two spies, Messrs. McCulloch and Miller who were supposed to be captured by the enemy, arrived at Seguin and stated that they followed in the rear of the enemy some distances and found no Mexican reinforcements, and believe that none were on their side of the Rio Grande. The families in the Colorado are not alarmed and remain contented at their homes, except at Austin, where scarcely a family remains.

ALEXANDER KORDA presents

MERLE OBERON in

Chapter One

Dr. Freddie Jarvis wheeled his little car out of the rain and cloying Yorkshire mud towards the covered entrance to the huge, fading mansion. From the second story, the charming brunette squire of the place saw him dash out into the rain. Jane Benson was downstairs before he rang the bell.

"Good morning, Freddie."

"Good morning, Jane. Anything the matter?"

"Not with me. But the servants are all sick."

"The usual complaint?" He had shed his drenched ulster, and they were walking up the sweeping staircase.

"Yes," she replied. "Old age — and plenty of it. The butler's the oldest and sickest of the lot — but they're all in bed."

"And you're looking after them, are you?"

Jane stopped, and knocked on a door. "Dr. Jarvis to see you, Ladbrooke," she said, almost timidly.

The voice inside shouted, "Then send him in!" They entered, and the old man in bed went on in a loud voice. "You don't need to tell me what's wrong with me, Dr. Jarvis, because I know. It's nothing more nor less than neglect."

"Oh — I'm not blaming you, Miss Jane. You're only a child and don't understand these matters."

"Cough, please," Freddie said.

"But this wouldn't have happened in your father's day — that an old servant should be left alone to die..."

"There's nothing the matter with you, Ladbrooke," Freddie said quietly.

cover. "Oh, I see..." he smiled.

"Burning Passion?"

She smiled. "Delightfully low. Oh, I love stories about cocktail parties in Mayfair — St. Moritz — Monte Carlo! I like to read about the suave Latin lovers — gigolos — who ply you with liquor and then fix you with their burning eyes..."

"Better write a prescription for you. One lover, dark — tall — long lashes — taken with vodka. Goodbye, Jane."

"Freddie," she said as he turned to go. "You could do something for me, Freddie."

"What is it?"

"You could marry me."

"What?"

"I know I'm not much according to the standards of Mayfair and Monte Carlo. But I don't think you can find anything much better in this part of Yorkshire. And I'll promise to love you, Freddie. I'll promise to love you very much indeed."

"And what could I give you, Jane?"

"Liberty! You could set me free."

"As the wife of a country doctor?" he smiled. "How much freedom would you have then?"

"But you're not always going to be just a country doctor. You're experimenting with something, aren't you? And you'll be famous, you'll succeed, and we'll move to London."

"I wish I could believe that."

"I'm ready to run any risk, Freddie — so will you please do an act of Christian kindness and marry me?" She moved to him.

"Perhaps — perhaps it would help you to make up your mind if you kissed me. I mean — then you might know better how I'd be..."

"You could do something for me, Freddie," she said.

ly, "but I'll leave some pills."

"It's too late for pills," the man moaned.

"What's possible — but I'll leave them anyhow. Who's next, Jane?"

"Giggys, the kitchen maid. She's a mere slip of a girl of sixty-two..."

"They made the rounds."

Freddie snapped his case shut, and turned to her. "These are for the butler — these for the cook — and these for the kitchen maid. And here are some more for your governess, in case she gets jealous. They're all the same pills — bicarbonate of soda with sugar coating. Now I'd like to examine you."

"But there's nothing the matter with me."

"There will be — if this sort of life goes on. What you need is a holiday."

"Oh, but I've had a holiday — with my aunt by the sea — three weeks at Grimsby," Jane replied. "Of course, that was ten years ago, and I don't remember much about it —"

"Why in heaven's name do you stay in this place?" he interrupted sharply. "Why don't you go to London, and have a good time? Better yet, why don't you sell this ancestral place?"

"I'm afraid I'm not allowed to. Grandpa, you know."

"Grandpa? But he's been dead for years!"

"Yes, but his will isn't. It's very much alive. He stipulated that if I wanted the small income that he left me, I would have to live right here." She forced a smile. "There aren't many alternatives for orphans. Here I am and here I stay. My life, Freddie, is in the hands of Millbank, Cudgeham, Millbank and Frude."

"Who?"

"Grandpa's lawyers."

He picked up the cheap, paper-covered magazine, with its lurid

He did.

"Goodbye, Freddie," he heard her say. "And please come back soon, with your mind nicely made up."

In London, the junior member of the firm of Millbank, Cudgeham, Millbank and Frude prepared for a journey; Mr. Frude, aged 68, bought a coach ticket to Yorkshire. In a small Yorkshire house, Dr. Fred Jarvis announced to his housekeeper that he had sold his practice for five thousand pounds, since he was thinking of getting married...

The one moment that Jane remembered, before the reporters and photographers and black and screaming headlines began, was that in which a white-haired man named Mr. Frude said to her, very carefully:

"Here are the statements of all securities, mortgages, rents and sums in cash. The entire estate was handed over to the stewardship of our firm. You will find, Miss Benson, that due to wise administration and sound investment, the fortune has now reached the total of roughly eighteen million pounds."

And she herself, murmuring, "You said — eighteen million pounds — all mine — to spend as I want to..."

And then, Julie Derthrop and Lady Millie Parsmill, who had been very distant and sophisticated cousins, coming quickly to "chaperone" her. Julie arrived first and, as a pirate who could best safeguard Jane against further piracy, she won the prize. "Jane, you're going for a ride over the moon," she enthused.

And finally, Freddie, barging through the shouting photographers, and saying, "Come inside, Jane. I want to talk to you."

We've got to face it. We can't win till the job is managed by an expert with nothing else on his mind.

To get sympathy for his ailment, dad must stop work. We don't worry about a tire while it keeps going.

Gee, it rained in Texas last Sunday. Couldn't believe it, must of been a mistake. Having been in Killeen at that moment, I was almost tempted to stand in the middle of Main Street and get soaked. Pvt. Schulman and others took the cover; they worried a little about their clothes and appearance. Most likely they had a date * * * Pvt. Chauncey O. Rogers and S-Sgt. Joe E. Fiala, hav something on the ball between Belton and Temple. Incidentally Chauncey O. is somewhat of a poet. Dishes out some good lines. Will have a sample of his talent printed in this paper soon, what for it * * * Cpl. Robert E. Brown of Company "A" was transferred to Hq. Co., Intelligence and Operation Section. Congrats and loads of luck * * * Pvt. Stanley Gemzala of "C" Company isawiz on skates. You can see him almost every night at the skating rink in Killeen. He's the one that skates backward, dances and sometimes teaches the femmes

* * * Mrs. Dotty Coker of Baylor College spends a great deal of her spare moments at the Belton USO club sketching portraits of boys in the service. Pvt. Anthony Rogowitz has a sample of her artistic abilities * * * Congratulations on your recent promotion Cpl. Charles A. Strenk * * * Ex-Pvt. Alfred Swanson of Recon. Company is now a Company Clerk and a Corporal. Off to a good start again * * * With the exception of Pvt. Paul McGinty and Sgt. McCarron the entire Hq. Co. kitchen is reorganized. Reasons, military secret. T-5 Ernest C. Perkins is supposed to be in the driver's seat (Mess Sergeant). Haven't seen his rating sewed on, so its not official as yet * * * Pvt. Ralph Liguori visited Austin last week end and enjoyed the visit so much that he plans to spend the follow-week ends there forthe duration of his stay * * * Boys, don't hesitate to send telegrams from Killeen. The Western Union office has two of the most beautiful Texicannans I have seen. Next time passing by in Killeen, give a peak.

A "Fourth" Now At OCS and Thee's More Coming

—v—
That "fourth" is not for bridge, just ask 'em.
The Fourth OSC started Monday, with Captain Kern C. Hayes as commanding officer, at the former CCC camp in Gatesville. There are 30 states represented in this class with the Empire State (?) New York leading with 27. Texas has 4 in this one.
Another oddity about this class, it has the youngest and the oldest. They are Candidates Paul Joseph Clifford (No. he's not named for Paul Joseph Gobbels) and Martin James Esses. Clifford was a T-4 in an engineer unit and was 20 June 30, hailing from Norwich, N. Y. Essex was 1st Sgt. of Co. A. of a T. D. B'n. and is from New Haven, Ky., and is 44.

James Edward Daniels, also of the "Fourth" is the first colored candidate in the school. He was a Technical Sergeant in an engineers outfit at Camp Shelby when he was selected. He is married, a Texan, and is from Bracketville, where his wife, Mrs. Jennsey E. Daniels, makes her home. He was born in Columbus, New Mexico, in 1919 and is 23 years old.
—v—
Mrs. Mike Duncan and Miss Edith Lackey spent last week end in Abilene where Mrs. Duncan was a guest of her husband, who is stationed at Camp Barkeley.
—v—
Mrs. Bill Maxwell was informed that her son, Sgt. Jack Hearne, who is with the 36th Division on maneuvers in North Carolina, was in the hospital.
—v—
Miss Gloria Harper of Marlin has been a guest of Miss Martha Ann Davidson.

A little from you... means a lot to them

USO is a caterer for Cupid, and recently has arranged everything but the girl and boy, even to obtaining the license and ring.

—v—
Dance postponed, no floor. Have one soon when tile floor of USO is completed.

—v—
Sixty soldiers were sent out from USO to homes in Coryell county and they're asking for more homes. Just stop in after church and there'll be one or two ready to go with you.

—v—
Six swimming suits wrapped around 130 men who wanted to get wet, other than perspiration. Certainly is a lot of wear and tear on six anything.

—v—
Buttons, chigger bites, packages wrapped, money orders written, telegrams sent at USO. Suggestion: Soldier, get finger nail polish and put on that chigger bite. Winchell says it's grand.

METHODIST CHURCH RALLY DAY SET

—v—
The pastor and Official Board of the Methodist Church have set Sunday, September 6 as the day to rally all our membership into the services. We are setting a goal of attendance of all our members at the Sunday school and preaching service Sunday morning, September 6. We are asking all our membership to join us in this plan to bring our people back to the House of God for his worship. We want to begin our fall season with a great attendance and to keep it up through the school year. Will you join us by coming and helping to bring the rest of the membership out? We need you. Good needs you. Your friends need you. Your nation needs you. We shall not fail these, but shall rally to the call and do our best.
