White aims budget ax at 12 state agencies

AUSTIN (AP) — The budget ax is swinging.

Gov. Mark White has announced the 12 state agencies he wants abolished or merged into other agencies in order to eliminate the state budget deficit.

The House Appropriations Committee has "zeroed" the budgets for two agencies and stripped the prison system of $33.8 million that Texas Department of Corrections officials say they need to meet a court order.

Lawmakers and the governor worked Thursday on finding ways to attack the $3.5 billion deficit projected by Comptroller Bob Bullock. White announced in a Wednesday speech to the Legislature that he wants to solve the problem by raising the sales tax, now 4½ percent, to 5½ percent, and make program cuts.

The 12 agencies targeted by White for abolishment or merger would save the state $3.59 million in the 1987 budget year, which begins Sept. 1, said William Hamilton, White's budget officer.

Hamilton said nine offices would be abolished through merger into other agencies. Three may be able to continue through a combination of private, federal or other funds, Hamilton said.

The three which would lose all state general revenue tax funds under the governor's plan are the Texas Conservation Foundation, Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and Natural Fibers and Food Protein Commission.

A total of $78,575 would be taken from the conservation foundation, $200,000 from the intergovernmental relations panel and $1.49 million from the food and fiber commission.

The nine agencies which would be closed through merger into others and the amount of savings anticipated under White's plan are:

— National Guard Armory Board, merged into the adjutant general's department; $543,615.

— Automated Information and Telecommunications Council, into the State Purchasing and General Services Commission; $552,000.

— State Ethics Advisory Commission, into the secretary of state's office; $57,000.

— Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness, into the Department of Health; $138,546.

— Board of Examiners in the Fitting and Dispensing of Hearing Aids, into the health department; $17,004.

— State Board of Morticians, into the health department; $250,770.

— Board of Physical Therapy Examiners, into health department; $117,054.

— Polygraph Examiners Board, into Department of Public Safety; $107,535.

— State Rural Medical Education Board, into College and University Coordinating Board; $25,356.

The panel also voted Thursday to take from TDC $33.8 million the agency said it needs to hire additional guards and make other changes required by a federal court order.

"We're in trouble," said Bill McCray, TDC assistant director for budget.

NO OTHER OPTION? — Texas Governor Mark White tells reporters at a news conference Thursday that he saw no option but a sales tax hike to help balance the budget, and said he hopes the public will push the state's lawmakers to raise taxes.

Analysts think gasoline price slide is over

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

The stunning collapse of retail gasoline and heating oil prices is over, and consumers can expect to pay more over the next several months, analysts say.

By the Sept. 1 Labor Day holiday, gasoline will cost from a nickel to 10 cents more a gallon, depending on the region, Ben Brockwell, editor of the Oil Price Information Service, a Washington-based industry newsletter, said Thursday.

"You stand a chance to see a uniform 75 cents to 80 cents, with prices below that becoming obsolete," he said.

Jan C. Lundberg, publisher of the North Hollywood, Calif.-based Lundberg Letter, which tracks petroleum prices around the nation, predicted changes by the weekend.

"If the trend holds, the lowball price — the 69, 70-cent gas, is going to disappear, and by Labor Day it's going to be up in the 80s," he said.

Behind the price hikes is this week's production reduction agreement by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Brockwell said that if OPEC can enforce its new quota system, prices would continue rising.

The OPEC accord stunned the industry and sent oil prices soaring on world markets this week.

Contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed Thursday at $15.32 a 42-gallon barrel, up 35 cents from Wednesday and $3.77 — or 33 percent — from last Friday's $11.55 close.

At the U.S. refining and wholesale levels, the response has been quick and dramatic, said Brockwell, who said his organization tracks prices in 50 states and 250 metropolitan areas.

In the last week, he said, major refiners have raised the prices they charge wholesalers for gasoline by one to four cents a gallon.

Since they had not expected an OPEC agreement, they had been keeping low inventories, not wanting to be caught with more expensive product in the event of continued erosion of prices, he said.

But the surprise OPEC agreement "changed the distributors' attitudes to a buying mood, causing outages around the country," Brockwell said.

He emphasized, however, that the outages have been temporary and that consumers are not facing gasoline shortages, because of a continuing world surfeit of crude supplies.

Lundberg, whose father, Dan, was publisher of the newsletter until his death Sunday, said the OPEC agreement has bolstered a price rise that was already in the works.

He said national figures compiled by his organization showed that prices of gasoline and distillate — heating oil and diesel fuel — to independent private chain operators rose about half-cent a gallon between Friday and Tuesday, when OPEC endorsed the agreement it had announced Monday in Geneva.

However, in Houston regular leaded gasoline is selling as low as 61 cents a gallon, and industry analyst Russell Heinen said gasoline prices will be slow to respond to any increase in world crude oil prices.

The price of crude oil is a big factor in the price of gasoline, but other supply and demand factors must be considered, he said.

"I would be surprised if gasoline moved up more than a few cents," Heinen told the Dallas Times Herald.

The Oil & Gas Journal reported that the Dallas-Fort Worth area price averaged 77.4 cents in mid-July, down more than 39 cents from the $1.165 a year ago, and the AAA-Southwest Motor Club said self-serve gasoline averaged 80 cents a gallon last month at stations along the major highways.

Celanese solves its waste problem

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

After spending more than $1 million, Celanese Chemical Co. officials have found the solution to problems with a liquid waste injection well east of Pampa right under their noses.

Nearly two miles under their noses to be more precise.

Celanese Project Manager Philip Rapstine said after the company learned that the granite wash geological layer, more than a mile below the earth's surface, is too thick to inject the amount of liquid waste produced by the company's Pampa plant, it pursued several alternatives.

One alternative was digging deeper into the Ellenberger formation, close to 10,000 feet deep, where injectivity tests showed the formation to be permeable enough to handle the company's waste.

"To our great pleasure, we found that the formation in that area is very permeable and is capable of taking the flow that we had originally planned to put down the well," Rapstine said.

If all goes according to plan, the well, located five miles east of Pampa will be used to inject treated liquid waste from the Celanese plant, about five miles west of town, pending approval by the Texas Water Commission, which has jurisdiction because the well must travel through the Ogallala Aquifer, a major Midwest water supply.

Under the new plans, waste will be injected about 8,500 feet deep.

Rapstine said Celanese has resubmitted its application to the water commission to reflect the use of the Ellenberger formation. He said the company expects the commission to approve the plans either late this year or early in 1987.

The well, which technically is still a test well, has been temporarily abandoned, pending approval by the water commission, Rapstine said. If the application is approved, Celanese plans to build a second well and being construction on a 13-mile pipeline from the plant to the well site on a route taking it four miles south of the city limits.

Although the company must begin using the wells by November, 1988, to meet federal guidelines, Rapstine said the wells are expected to be in use by the summer of 1988. Until that time, the company will continue to use solar evaporation ponds on the plant site, which are being phased out in accordance with federal regulations.

Miami schools plan four-cent tax hike

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — School officials may have to add four cents to the property tax rate in order to make up for a possible $135,400 budget deficit.

Trustees are scheduled to adopt the budget and set a tax rate at their next regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Superintendent Allan Dinsmore presented board members with a $1.28 million 1987 budget Thursday at a special budget hearing. This is $143,826, or 10 percent, less than the 1986 budget. But with a 20 percent drop in district property value, the district would still come up $135,401 short in revenue if the current tax rate of 31 cents per $100 valuation is kept.

A 4.4 cent tax increase would add $144,099 to the school coffers.

Murray Bennett, a representative of one of the county's largest taxpayers, Mesa Ltd., said he can live with the tax increase.

"You're doing a commendable job to keep the increase at four cents," he said. "Your district has had a 20 percent drop in value and you'll only raise the rate by 12 percent."

Indeed, the district's effective tax rate — the amount the school would have to charge taxpayers to raise as much money as last year — is 39 cents per $100 valuation. The highest the school can go without having a hearing would be 40 cents.

Dinsmore said he was able to cut 10 percent from the budget by not replacing 2 teachers who left the district and by cutting back on supplies and materials.

"And we have virtually no capital outlay expenses," he said, adding that there will be no teacher salary decrease.

At $538,581, faculty payroll takes up nearly half of the budget. Of that, $210,816 goes to high school teacher salaries and $198,144 to elementary school salaries. The superintendent's and principal's salaries, which are not part of the instructional payroll, have been set at $42,000 for the superintendent and $34,000 for the principal, who oversees both the high school and the grade school.

With no major building addition or repair programs underway, the capital outlay budget has been kept at $11,400, with $3,000 of that going to the school-county agriculture project center.

About $203,000 has been budgeted for maintenance and operation, with $86,000 of that going to custodians' salaries. Of the instructional budget, supplies and materials take up $25,611 with contracted services taking up $12,023.

Also:

— $16,395 has been allocated to instructional computers, with $15,340 of that going to payroll.

— $28,905 will go to the library, media and other instructional resources.

Applications are being accepted for Leadership Pampa course

Applications are being sought from Pampa men and women interested in becoming better informed to become potential community leaders through the Leadership Pampa training course.

Mike Kneisl, who is serving as the 1987 chairman for the course, said deadline for the applications is Sept. 11. Participants selected for the course will be announced Sept. 17.

The class will be limited to 25 persons, he said.

Tuition fee for each participant is $200; at least $50 must be paid by the participant. His or her employer or another source may pay the remainder of the fee.

A limited number of partial scholarships are available in order to include individuals otherwise unable to pay the complete $200 tuition fee, Kneisl said. For information on applying for a scholarship, call the Leadership Pampa office at 669-3241.

Kneisl said it is essential that applicants be able to commit the time required to attend the sessions. The sessions are scheduled for the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month beginning Sept. 23 and ending May 26. Any participant missing three meetings may be dropped from the program, he noted.

"Leadership Pampa is a program designed to seek out the finest young leaders in Pampa and prepare them for positions of public decision making," Kneisl stated.

The purpose of the course is to identify potential community leaders, acquaint such leaders with the city's continuing needs and problems and motivate the potential leaders to be involved in Pampa's future, he explained.

Leadership Pampa is a program of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. The Executive Committee directs the program and gives guidance on such matters as curriculum, programs, speakers and potential participants.

Kneisl, who is a graduate of the 1986 class, said Leadership Pampa is aimed at developing a pool of well-informed and well-motivated men and women qualified to assume present and future leadership roles in the city.

The course seeks to develop community knowledge and leadership skills through a series of 19 sessions. Included are programs on local economy, government, education, health care and quality of life.

Program resources will come from citizen leaders and specialists in various fields. The sessions will combine lectures, dialogue among speakers, on-site visits and audience interaction, Kneisl said.

The course seeks to prepare citizens to serve on city government advisory boards; hold elected positions with the city, school or county; serve on boards for various civic and charity organizations; and otherwise fulfill leadership positions throughout the city.

Upon completion of the program, participants will be eligible for membership in the Leadership Pampa Alumni Association, which will serve to continue the process of leadership development and to keep the alumni in touch with each other.

Kneisl said anyone may apply or nominate someone for the program. However, an official Leadership Pampa application form must be used. Forms may be picked up at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office in the Hughes Bldg.

The Selections Committee, which remains anonymous, will select a maximum of 25 individuals from all segments of the community to participate.

Kneisl noted that failure to be selected in no way indicates the nominee is not satisfactory. He said applicants who are not selected this year are invited to make application for the next program.

Reagan, Bush to 'set example' by taking drug-screening test

WASHINGTON (AP) - Members of President Reagan's senior staff are getting an offer they might find hard to refuse: Join the president and Vice President George Bush in volunteering for drug-screening tests.

The time is Monday. The place is the White House medical unit. And the purpose, says Deputy Press Secretary Albert R. Brashear, is "to set an example" of Reagan's determination to rout illegal drugs from offices and schools.

Brashear revealed Thursday that a memorandum was being sent to the 78 senior White House staff aides to Reagan, asking them to take part in the drug tests "on a voluntary basis."

There will be no reprisals against those refusing to take the test, he said, adding that "we're not out to punish anyone."

Brashear said he was confident that none of the urinalyses, designed to detect the presence of such drugs as cocaine, marijuana and heroin, would turn up positive.

"The president has made it clear that he is seeking a drug-free work place for all Americans," the spokesman said. "He believes that all federal employees deserve a drug-free environment, and that federal employees should set the example for state and local government and the private sector to follow in identifying users of illegal drugs."

White House staff members were notified up to five days in advance about the tests, thus raising questions about the effectiveness of the screening. For occasional drug users, most drugs would disappear from the body after one to four days. Under mandatory testing, there is no advance notice.

Reporters asked Brashear several times to spell out the consequences for members of the senior staff who did not take the test.

"If they don't take it, they just choose not to take it," he said at one point. But he also said, "I'm sure that if (the refusal to submit) would be noted that they didn't want to do it ... probably by their supervisor."

He said he did not know how many of the senior staff members would submit to the test. Brashear also refused to say whether the White House would reveal, after the fact, how many senior aides refused to take the test. But he did say that no test results would be made public.

Meanwhile, The New York Times, in today's editions, quoted administration sources as saying the White House tentatively plans to propose a $100 million program next week aimed at combating the use of drugs in schools. But it noted that administration officials are divided on the timing of the move.

The plan calls for grants to be awarded to states on a competitive basis over three years to provide funds to school districts to help in anti-drug efforts, the report said. The school districts would have to offer proposals to end drug problems, and the renewal of the grants would be tied to a district's progress in curbing drug use.

Celanese

Mark Henkhaus, assistant director of the local Texas Railroad Commission office, said the deeper well will not affect oil and gas interests because there is not any Ellenberger production within several miles of the well site.

Rapstine said the additional cost of pumping the waste deeper is worthwhile for Celanese because other alternatives considered over the past five months have not been acceptable. Celanese Industrial Relations Manager Darrell Nordeen said in March, when other alternatives were being considered, that the deeper well will cost the company an additional several hundred thousand dollars.

"That well is critical to the survival of the plant," Rapstine said. "We need a place to go with our water."

Other alternatives under consideration included acidizing and fracturing the original granite wash formation, moving to another site and reducing the amount of waste flow from the plant. Rapstine said Celanese plans to continue more testing of the granite wash when construction begins on the second well.

TEXAS/REGIONAL

Poll shows support in Legislature for lottery, racing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Texas Senate is inclined toward supporting horse racing or a state lottery as a way to resolve the state's budget crunch, but a majority of House members oppose both, according to a television station that polled all 181 members of the Legislature.

KXAS-TV in Fort Worth reported Thursday night that 67 percent of the senators said they favor allowing horse racing in Texas, and 63 percent said they favor a state lottery.

The poll shows 25 percent of the senators against horse racing and 7 percent undecided. On the lottery question, 21 percent said they were against it and 16 percent were undecided, KXAS-TV said.

In the House, the station said its poll showed 42 percent favoring horse racing and 35 percent favoring a lottery.

The poll shows 47 percent against and 12 percent undecided on the horse racing, and 47 percent against and 18 percent undecided on a lottery in the House.

KXAS-TV said it gathered legislators' views over a three-week period ended Thursday. The poll began with mailed polls and followed up with telephone calls to those who didn't respond.

Almost all 150 representatives and 31 senators voiced an opinion. Five representatives and one senator declined to participate, KXAS-TV said. Those not voting "for" or "against" were listed as undecided.

The station said its poll also queried lawmakers about their position on proposed increases or broadening of the state sales tax to help solve the budget crisis.

Lawmakers convened in special session Wednesday in Austin to grapple with a projected $3.5 billion shortfall in the state budget.

The poll showed a sharp split in the views of the House and Senate, with senators lining up behind Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's call for increased sales tax revenue, and state representatives standing with House Speaker Gib Lewis, who opposes new taxes.

Any new tax legislation must begin in the House.

Hobby has been making appearances around the state to rally support for his proposal of a permanent hike in the sales tax and expansion to include some services not currently taxed.

Gov. Mark White has recommended a temporary, one-year increase in the sales tax.

Lawmakers who voiced support for a higher or expanded sales tax did so only after being assured of confidentiality, the station said.

Asked if they favor increasing the state sales tax, 66 percent of House members said they were against such an increase, 19 percent were for, and 15 percent undecided. Senate members were 25 percent against, 63 percent for, and 12 percent undecided.

On a broadened state sales tax, House members were 54 percent against, 28 percent for, and 18 percent undecided, while Senators were 17 percent against, 67 percent for, and 16 percent undecided.

On a state income tax, state representatives were 96 percent against, 3 percent for, and 1 percent undecided. Senators were 83 percent against, 8 percent for, and 9 percent undecided.

Asked whether budget cuts alone can solve the state's budget problems, 54 percent of House members said no, 31 percent yes, and 15 percent were undecided. In the Senate, 88 percent said no, 8 percent yes, and 4 percent were undecided.

I feel a bad moon rising.
I feel hard times coming on.

—Creedence Clearwater Revival

Monday afternoon had been going nicely. The heat was tolerable; I'd beaten the TV contestants in Jeopardy and an ample supply of Cold Ones shivered in the fridge. Night, it seemed then, would come peacefully. Or no.

As I do every afternoon when I'm home at 5:30, which is most, I flipped the dial from ABC to CBS to catch Dan Rather on the best of the three evening national news broadcasts, and that Dan shook up this Dan's afternoon.

Near the top of the broadcast, CBS reported on Pat Robertson's presidential campaign and the goals of he and his followers. I recoiled from the little black and white television in horror.

Robertson was working an audience filled with mostly early-middle-aged born again types, whipping them into a revivalistic frenzy over how, through he and God, they could gain control of America and make it what they believe it should be.

"We've got to put God in the middle of the government," said one supporter whose name bears no significance whatsoever. Reeling, I barely fought off the urge to claw away my ears over what they just sent to my brain.

Stunned — while the barely registering images of Robertson's blessed bandwagons writhing about at his feet — I ran the words over and over again through my head.

We've got to put God in the middle of the government.

We've got to put God in the middle of the government.

We've got to put God in the middle of the government.

The basics of this week's column formed in my brain in the seconds that followed. I know some of my favorite critics out there will probably scoff this away as a deliberate attempt to draw copy for our Letters To The Editor page, but they know that's not true. What we're dealing with here is a serious mass cranial flaw and an overwhelming ignorance about what our system of government is (allegedly) all about.

What would compel supposedly responsible, educated adults to say something as dangerous as "We've got to put God in the middle of the government"? The only answers I could find involved brain damage from head injuries suffered bending over to stick gum on the bottom of the pews, or massive abuse of a drug which hasn't reached the general public. Neither of those is likely, so we'll have to resign ourselves to the cause being sheer ignorance.

Seismologists will probably report that, as those words went out to the nation, the graves of Constitutional Conventionists shook all across New England. Thomas Jefferson's headstone fell over and shattered into gravel.

"Indeed I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just," Jefferson once said.

Though history books neglect the influence of religion throughout time, its powers have been obvious. The authors of the Constitution — they and their ancestors much persecuted by the Church of England — labored long and hard over the question of freedom of religion. They knew religious freedom was essential to true freedom, and came to the conclusion that to ensure religious and all other freedoms they had to ensure separation of the church and the state. They stressed the point heavily in the Constitution we're supposed to still be living by.

But Pat Robertson and his followers would have it otherwise. Given a run amok, they wouldn't put God in the middle of the government, but their own moralities cloaked under his name, and the Constitution would be rendered into another piece of fire fodder for cold winter nights.

How would laws spawned from Robertson's "Christian Morality" fall on the lives of those Americans who follow the teachings of the Koran, or any other religion?

It is perfectly fine by me for a minister, or anyone else, to run for the presidency. I almost voted for Jesse Jackson in '84, but couldn't and ended up writing in for Bill the Cat of the comic strip Bloom County's Meadow Party ticket, which campaigned under the slogan "Why not the worst?"

It is not fine, though, for a minister to run and express clear intentions of drastically altering the Constitution. It is not fine for a pornographer to run with intentions of doing the same.

I'm not particularly worried about the prospect of Robertson becoming President, even if he is campaigning two-plus years in advance of the election. Perhaps wrongly but I think not, I have more faith in your intelligence than that. I don't think you're foolish enough to make such a mistake. Besides, Robertson has to win the GOP nominations, and his fellow Republicans will rip him apart like wolves or a proverbial lamb.

There is the minor chance that I'm wrong. If so, I've been assured by scores of other people that they will join me in seeking asylum in a nation which still practices sanity. Australia and the Netherlands have been sounding good, or Mexico, where there is no government. Currently, however, it's not a major concern.

The major concern is that so many people have forgotten what freedom is, and forgotten or ignored that they have no right to impose their moralities on others. People like Pat Robertson and Jimmy Swaggart have brainwashed them in much the same way they accused the ol' Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh of brainwashing his flock. The difference is, the Bhaggy was harmless.

The spirit of liberty is not, as multitudes imagine, a jealousy of our own particular rights, but a respect for the rights of others, and an unwillingness that anyone, whether high or low, should be wronged or trampled under foot.

—William E. Channing

I think the religious tests were invented not so much to secure religion as the emoluments of it. When a religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself; and when it does not support itself, and God does not take care to support it, so that it's professors are obliged to call for help of the civil power, 'tis a sign I apprehend, of its being a bad one.

PUC staff proposes AT&T deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — AT&T Communications should be allowed to set its own long distance rates in Texas beginning in 1989, the Public Utility Commission staff says in a deregulation proposal.

The recommendation was sent to the commission Thursday. No hearing has been set.

AT&T competitors, who are not regulated by the PUC, say AT&T must remain regulated because of its size.

"Obviously we are competing with someone who has by far the vast portion of the market share," said Paul Herrmann, an Austin lawyer who represents Sprint, one of AT&T's major competitors in Texas. "You have to be concerned about their ability to crush you."

But AT&T officials say consumers might benefit from deregulation, which was among the goals of the court-ordered 1984 breakup of the Bell System.

"It appears from the proposed rules that the PUC staff recognizes Texas, like most other states, needs to move from a regulated to a nonregulated telecommunications marketplace," said Pres Sheppard, an AT&T vice president.

Don Butler, an Austin lawyer who represents cities in utility cases, said the PUC staff proposal is a bad one.

"It would turn AT&T loose to do its thing, which is to undercut its competition ultimately at the expense of all the ratepayers in Texas once its driven its competition out of business," he said.

Butler also said AT&T would raise prices in areas where customers have no other long distance company to turn to.

"What they want is not a level playing field. They want a clear playing field. They want the competition gone," Butler said.

The commission last year rejected a proposal that would have deregulated AT&T rates in some markets. The 1983 Legislature ordered the commission to look at deregulation.

Under the proposal, new services offered by AT&T after June 1, 1987 would not be regulated. Deregulation of all AT&T rates would go into effect June 1, 1989 "if AT&T meets a simple test for lack of market dominance," according to the proposal.

The commission would take another look at AT&T June 1, 1990 to measure the effect of deregulation. If it decided it was working well, the commission would limit itself to monitoring complaints about AT&T service.

AT&T would continue to be required to serve all of Texas, according to Deputy General Counsel Eddie M. Pope. The unregulated companies now can decide which markets to serve.

"Our primary objective is to protect and enhance long distance service for all of Texas," the PUC staff proposal said.

Foster captured after commandeering pickup

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) — Convicted murderer Richard Donald "Stony" Foster was back in custody today, headed back to a Death Row cell to await execution for the April 1984 slaying of a Springtown man.

After eluding scores of officers and bloodhounds for four days in the rough terrain around Possum Kingdom Lake, Foster was arrested about 10:30 p.m. Thursday after officers shot out the tires of a pickup that ran a roadblock near the east side of the lake.

Foster, 33, overpowered a jailer Sunday night at the Stephens County Jail in Breckenridge and escaped in the jailer's pickup truck with Cindy Davis, 27, who had been held on charges with attempted capital murder.

Ms. Davis surrendered the next day to officers at a bait and tackle shop near where the truck ran out of gas on the northeast side of Possum Kingdom Lake, which is about 70 miles west of Fort Worth and 35 miles east of Breckenridge.

Bloodhounds, on loan from the Texas Department of Corrections, were pulled out of the area after three days, but officers continued to center their search efforts on Possum Kingdom Lake.

Sgt. Le Roy Tucker of the Palo Pinto County sheriff's department said four youths told him Thursday night that Foster approached them, identified himself as "Stony Armadillo" and offered them $20 to take him to Graham, about 20 miles away, "because he had to get there in a hurry."

They refused, they told Tucker. As Tucker was hearing the youths' story, at a liquor store near the lake, a pickup truck approached, but quickly sped away, apparently because of his patrol car parked there, Tucker said.

"I knew it was him and I knew it was a hostage," Tucker said. Authorities said the pickup was driven by an 18-year-old boy whom Foster had taken hostage and ordered to drive out of the area.

At the intersection of State Highway 16 and State Highway 254, the pickup ran through a roadblock manned by officers of the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Palo Pinto County sheriff's office, officers said.

David Wells, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said officers shot out the rear tires of the pickup, but it continued east on Highway 254, toward the community of Graford, for about four miles before it finally came to a stop and Foster surrendered without a fight.

Graford is about 15 miles north of Palo Pinto and about 15 miles northwest of Mineral Wells, in northern Palo Pinto County.

Foster, 33, had been on Texas' Death Row after his conviction of the murder of Gary Cox of Springtown, but recently was moved to the Stephens County jail.

He was awaiting trial, scheduled to begin Aug. 26 in Gainesville, on seven charges of aggravated kidnapping filed in conjunction with a standoff in a Breckenridge bank in May of 1984.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Army is sometimes stubborn as mules

It wasn't the most lengthy study in Army history; it certainly wasn't the most expensive. Nevertheless, it occupied the brainpower of a small group of officers for more than a year. The Army moves slowly to break with tradition. Slow as a mule, you might say.

That's appropriate. The study was about returning that beast to active duty.

The study itself was noteworthy — it broke with the recent Army trend of abandoning tradition. First the helmet, then the Jeep, then the Colt .45. All went the way of the catapult. Through it all, the select group of officers was debating whether to re-enlist a beast of burden that hadn't seen action since World War II.

Their conclusion was even more noteworthy. It said the Army wouldn't be able to justify the cost. "The number of places where mules would be the transportation of choice or necessity are few when you look at the earth's surface and the missions of the U.S. Army," and Army spokesman explained.

Show that to critics of defense spending, Cap. On second thought, maybe Secretary Weinberger should keep this study under wraps. Its history does much to illustrate the workings of Army bureaucracy and it also provides a clue or two about why so many boondoggles slip through the cracks in the Pentagon.

The study grew out of a broad review of Army equipment needs for fighting in different terrains. Most people might have been content to chuckle for a moment or two and move on to more serious options. Instead, Army Secretary John Marsh and Gen. John Wickham, Army chief of staff, opted to study the mule issue in depth.

The group studied how mules had been used in the past. It studied how various pieces of Army equipment could be transported by mules in the future. It received dozens of letters offering advice on handling the animals; they were all duly noted, categorized and filed.

And it came to the conclusion that the Army was probably correct in the first place when the last group of Army mules was retired at Ft. Collins, Colo., and the last group of Army muleskinners disappeared. That was in the 1950s.

Is it comforting to know the Army is leaving no avenue unexplored in its defense of the country?

Not really. As a study, this one ranks as one of the more ridiculous. But then, at least it didn't cost as much as the ill-fated experiment with the Sgt. York gun, which went from study to blueprint to prototype to contract to junk heap, wasting millions in its attempt to weld an anti-aircraft gun on top of a tank.

The Sgt. York gun also grew out of a study on terrain. Undoubtedly, similar pointless studies will follow. Army brass can be hard-headed about some traditions. Just like a mule. Even more like its father.

The nerve gas deterrent

One of the unusual properties of nerve gas is that, without ever being used, it can cause rational people to lose their reason. Unfortunately for the security of the United States and its NATO allies, some of these victims occupy high offices in Western governments.

The Reagan administration said last week that it will proceed with producing a new generation of nerve gas weapons. Congress had made them conditional on approval by NATO, and the president says he has won the allies over to his plan. But the House Foreign Affairs Committee, whose chairman wants to block any new chemical weapons, says the approval doesn't meet the requirements of the law.

The committee's resistance threatens to further delay a needed replenishment of NATO's arsenal. But even the agreement reached with the allies falls far short of what is needed to deter the Soviets.

Chemical weapons, we all can agree, are among the most repulsive products of science. As shown by the primitive versions used in World War I and by the more advanced models deployed by the Soviet Union against Afghan rebels and Iraq against Iran, they kill gruesomely, painfully and indiscriminately. Like nuclear weapons, they represent a step backward, by making it impossible to limit warfare to combatants. In setting policy on chemical weapons, any government should place a high premium on preventing their use.

The question is how to achieve that admirable purpose. The point, after all, is not merely to prevent your own side from using them against the enemy, but also to prevent the enemy from using them against you - or from gaining a valuable advantage by threatening their use. As in the case of nuclear weapons, the surest way to encourage the other side to employ nerve gas is to forego retaliation in kind.

That is the prospect that looms in Europe. One problem is that the Soviets have a large and modern array of deadly gas weapons available for use against allied armies, not to mention soldiers much better prepared than ours to fight on a gas-contaminated battlefield. Another is that the existing NATO inventory of chemical projectiles is old and, by some reports, unreliable, and has yet to be replaced.

A third is that to get agreement from the allies on the new binary weapons, the administration had to agree to withdraw the old weapons from European soil and to store the new ones elsewhere. So even if the new gas weapons are produced, they will not be available for use if and when a war erupts. Until they can be transported from the U.S., a process which may take more than two weeks, the Soviet side will be the only one with nerve gas at its disposal.

The implications of the scenario are not reassuring. Knowing they might be visited at any moment with poison clouds, NATO soldiers would have to choose between leaving themselves naked to the danger and donning heavy, hot, cumbersome protective equipment - while fighting Warsaw Pact soldiers who would be free of such a burden. The prospect of a gas attack also might create mass hysteria among the allied civilian population.

And, should their offensive bog down, the Soviets can stop brandishing their chemical arsenal and start using it, with what probably would be devastating results. The knowledge that their foe can't respond with gas would make this course particularly attractive. NATO would be left with no comparable method of retaliation but the ultimate one - nuclear attack.

If NATO has its own nerve gas in hand, the Soviets are deprived of their advantage. Both sides' troops would have to wear gas masks and suits. Both would have to fear the mass poisoning of their cities and countryside. Both would have a powerful incentive for restraint. Both, in short, would be deterred from the use of these ghastly weapons, just as both have been deterred for four decades from starting a nuclear war.

The revulsion against fighting enemies by poisoning the air they breathe is a natural one. But it shouldn't paralyze us from maintaining our nerve gas arsenal, which, like it or not, is the best guarantee against ever having to fight that kind of war. Covering our eyes to the danger doesn't make it disappear.

Pick on somebody else

It was a tub-thumping, name-calling confrontational two hours when the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee pilloried State Secretary George Shultz on the subject of our policy toward South Africa.

Patiently, Secretary Shultz sought to explain that unilateral sanctions would worsen the problem for blacks in South Africa and adjacent nations.

"We are already enforcing a fuller array of measures against the white-led government of Pretoria than is any European nation."

But his explanation got little media coverage. His critics got much.

Delaware Sen. Joe Biden pounded the desk to focus TV cameras on himself when he shouted, "People are dying over there! People are dying!"

State Secretary Shultz believes it "makes no sense, politically, economically or morally, to compound the suffering of an entire region ... just as a gesture of outrage."

But Sen. Biden would have none of that argument. He demanded sanctions as "the only remaining alternative open."

"People are dying over there!" he persisted. "People are dying!"

Our nation's selective indignation makes for some strange alliances in Congress.

In Senate Foreign Relations, for example, you would expect Sens. Edward Kennedy and Alan Cranston to oppose the administration....

But joining Kennedy and Cranston are "conservative" Hoosier Republican Richard Lugar....

And Kansas-bred Republican Nancy Kassebaum.

A political pragmatist knows that about the only way for a Republican to get himself or herself on TV is to do or say something critical of the President.

There is another dimension, however, to any public debate relating to South Africa. What's left of apartheid there has become a symbol of suppression of minorities.

A cynic might suggest that some people with ambition for higher political or judicial office want to go on record as a friend of minorities.

I do not believe such posturing accomplishes its purpose. Minorities have a gut instinct for knowing who their all-weather friends are.

Also, the hypocrisy of beating one's breast over South Africa while ignoring 40 concurrent wars, each costing more....

While ignoring even the barbaric genocide which the Soviets are committing in Afghanistan....

Hey, Joe, people are dying over there! Why don't you pick on someone your own size?

Isn't it about time to ban the bonds?

By Robert Walters

CHICAGO (NEA) — Presidential Towers, a sleek new apartment complex located just west of this city's downtown "Loop," is a yuppie paradise whose amenities include concierge service, a health club, valet service and pricey restaurants.

Four high-rise towers, each 49 stories tall, and a sprawling ground-level esplanade have been "carefully planned to maximize convenience, comfort, elegance, service, security, recreational facilities, excitement and affordability."

Presidential Towers is also a model of affordability for the developers of the project because they were able to finance much of the construction through low-interest municipal bonds authorized and issued by Chicago's city council.

That transaction was unusual because municipal bonds are supposed to be reserved for government projects such as public housing and waste treatment facilities while Presidential Towers always has been a private venture.

It benefited from public financing because it was technically part of a municipal urban renewal project and allegedly because its developers had political connections that enabled them to obtain preferential treatment.

A recent report commissioned by the Chicago 1992 Committee, a "good government" organization, offers this observation on the project:

"Virtually every present or former public official with whom we spoke had one or more stories about how decisions concerning Presidential Towers were made at the highest levels in (Chicago's) city hall or (Illinois' state capital of) Springfield or Washington, D.C., frequently overruling researched staff judgments."

The financing of Presidential Towers is only one example of a scandalous practice — the abuse of municipal bonding authority — that could be remedied in the omnibus revision of the federal tax code now being considered in Washington by a House-Senate conference committee.

Under the current system, state and local governments are authorized to issue bonds whose purchasers are not required to pay any federal taxes on the interest earned. That tax-exempt status allows the municipalities to offer low interest rates and thus obtain financing at a reduced cost.

That arrangement also benefits a small group of wealthy people. According to one estimate, about 80 percent of all tax-free interest income from municipal bonds goes to individuals whose annual income exceeds $100,000.

Among those calling for termination of that inequitable system is President Reagan, who has endorsed a proposal that would "virtually eliminate ... the federal subsidy currently made available ... through tax-exempt financing."

Sen. Robert W. Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, suggested a compromise earlier this year that would subject the interest earned by individuals from municipal bonds to an alternative minimum tax.

The Treasury Department estimates that the only people directly taxed by Packwood's proposal would be about 200,000 high-income individuals who now escape taxation by concentrating substantial investments in tax-free bonds.

Packwood's plan to change the status quo even that much provoked a storm of opposition that forced the Senate Finance Committee to back down, but the bill drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee does impose unprecedented tax requirements on municipal bond income.

Here in Chicago, the $180 million worth of governmental bonds floated to finance the construction of Presidential Towers slashed the developers' interest costs by $25 million and saved the bond buyers $30 million in taxes.

In return for that cut-rate financing, the developers were required by statute to set aside 20 percent of all apartments for low- and moderate-income renters — but they obtained a special exemption from the law.

As a result, the typical tenant profile now matches the yuppie stereotype — a 32-year-old earning more than $42,000 annually.

House report urges Deaver probe for possible perjury

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel investigating lobbying by Michael K. Deaver is studying a report detailing allegations of possible perjury by the former presidential aide during his congressional testimony May 16.

The report recommends that an independent counsel already investigating conflict-of-interest charges against Deaver consider "several items of serious conflict in Mr. Deaver's testimony before the committee under oath," said Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who heads the Energy and Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee.

The report, which will be considered Tuesday by the subcommittee at a closed session, recommends that independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. study evidence "of possible perjury before the committee," Dingell said Thursday.

It asks Seymour to "inquire into whether or not indictments for criminal misbehavior should be acted upon," the chairman said.

The report also will include evidence of possible criminal violation of ethics laws by Deaver as detailed by the General Accounting Office, he said.

The GAO investigation concluded that Deaver may have violated the Ethics in Government Act by lobbying for Canada about the issue of acid rain, which he dealt with while deputy White House staff director.

A longtime associate of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, Deaver left the White House in May 1985 — two months before he signed a $150,000 contract to represent the government of Canada.

The evidence of possible perjury is "based on his testimony, which appears to be in conflict against other allegations received by the committee and regarding the facts," Dingell said.

Randall Turk, a Washington attorney representing Deaver, said, "It's inappropriate to comment until such time as we have an opportunity to see any report prepared by Mr. Dingell's subcommittee."

"We have not had any contact from Mr. Dingell," Turk added. "We have not yet received a copy of a transcript of Mr. Deaver's testimony despite repeated requests for it."

Seymour, a former federal prosecutor from New York, has been investigating the various allegations against Deaver since his appointment as independent counsel May 30.

Dingell declined to specify what parts of Deaver's testimony conflicted with other sources, saying he preferred to wait until the report was approved by the subcommittee.

But a subcommittee source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the sworn testimony conflicted with several former and current administration officials about Deaver's business contacts involving Puerto Rico, Japan and West Germany.

Deaver is being investigated for allegations that he violated the Ethics in Government Act by lobbying his former associates in government on issues that he dealt with while in the White House.

He issued a statement during his appearance before Dingell's subcommittee stating, "I have never traded on my relationship with the president for any client — and I never will."

The GAO investigation determined that Deaver participated in 15 meetings on acid rain before he left the Reagan administration and pushed for the appointment of either Drew Lewis or William Clark as special envoy to Canada on the issue.

Lewis was appointed envoy and negotiated the joint U.S.-Canadian agreement to reduce acid rain. GAO investigators concluded that Deaver's meeting with Lewis last October constituted a possible conflict-of-interest violation.

The act prohibits former government officials from ever lobbying former colleagues on issues they were "personally and substantially" involved in during their government service.

Ethics law violations carry a maximum sentence of two years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Researchers say male lung cancer may be at high mark for good

ATLANTA (AP) — The lung cancer rate for white male Americans may have gone as high as it ever will, federal researchers say.

However, the rate for women, who haven't cut down on smoking as much as have men, continues to increase.

In a report published Thursday by the national Centers for Disease Control, scientists from the National Cancer Institute said lung cancer rates for white American males, which had increased each year by some 10 percent until the 1970s, peaked in 1981 and then fell 4 percent from 1982 to 1983, the latest year for which statistics are available.

The rate of 79.3 lung cancer cases per 100,000 white males in the United States translates to about 94,000 cases in 1983, said Dr. Marcia Will, a cancer institute researcher. In 1981, the rate was 82.8 cases per 100,000 white males.

It is possible, with declines in smoking in the United States, that the 1981 lung cancer rate will never be surpassed, she said.

"Most lung cancer in white males is presumed to be from smoking, and we've noticed a decrease in smoking since the 1960s," Ms. Will said. "Hopefully we won't see anything else in the future that would cause the rate to go back up."

Smoking among American adult males has dropped from a level of 52 percent before the surgeon general's landmark report on smoking in 1964 to about 35 percent in 1983, the CDC noted.

The lung cancer rates for black men are about 50 percent higher than those for whites, and are decreasing in a similar fashion, the CDC report said. But the data for black males have not been as consistent, so firm conclusions are not so easy to draw, Ms. Will said.

Women's lung cancer rate continues to increase "markedly," the CDC said. In 1983, 33.5 out of each 100,000 American women got lung cancer, up from 30.9 in 1981. Women reported more than 41,000 new lung cancer cases in 1983, and 35,000 deaths.

The prevalence of smoking among women has fallen by only 5 percentage points — from 34 percent in 1965 to 29 percent in 1983, the CDC reported.

Lung cancer kills about 90 percent of its victims within five years. Some 149,000 new cases are expected this year, and 130,000 more people will die of the disease, according to estimates from the American Cancer Society.

Hyundai, Yugo, Taurus and Sable perform poorly in fed crash tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two low-cost imports from Korea and Yugoslavia and Ford's new pride and joy, the Taurus and Sable, performed poorly in 1986 crash tests, the government says.

The annual tests by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration showed 10 models, more than one-third of the 26 cars tested, doing poorly in the 35 mph head-on crashes into a fixed barrier.

The impact was severe enough in the 10 cars that one or both of the front seat occupants, wearing seat belts, would have been killed on impact from head injuries, according to safety agency calculations.

The tests, conducted with instrument-equipped dummies over the past eight months, have been highly controversial with automakers, who contend they can vary widely because of test circumstances and do not reflect injury risks under real highway conditions.

But auto safety advocates argue the tests represent a clear indicator to car buyers as to the relative protection one may expect as a result of automobile design during a major highway crash.

"The crash test results separate the safer cars from the less safe cars," insisted Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, who expressed disappointment that more cars did not perform better among the 26 models tested this year.

The highway safety agency generally regards any head injury rating of more than 1,000 as probably being fatal to the occupant.

The cars that exceeded the 1,000 threshold for one or both front seat occupants were: the Isuzu I-Mark, Yugo GV from Yugoslavia, Plymouth Colt Vista, Saab 9000, American Motors Jeep Comanche, Volkswagen Scirocco, Ford Taurus, Mercury Sable, Hyundai Excel from South Korea, and Subaru GL.

The Yugo recorded a head injury rating of 1,415 for the driver and 1,318 for the passenger, while the Hyundai Excel just dipped under the 1,000 threshold at 999 for the driver but soared to 2,662 for the passenger.

Both companies in statements played down the significance of the government test results. Hyundai said its own 35 mph crash tests, conducted after a new seat belt system was installed last April, showed the Excel performing much better.

Ted Kade, a Hyundai spokesman, said the new seat belt system, which is on all the Hyundai cars now on the market, "provides an increased safety margin ... by locking up faster" than the system used in the NHTSA test car.

Bill Pryor, president of Yugo America Inc., emphasized that the Yugo meets or exceeds all federal safety standards including requirements for crash protection which are based on a less severe 30 mph crash test.

Among the surprises in the 1986 NHTSA tests was the poor showing by the Taurus and Sable models, a totally new car in which Ford has invested millions of dollars.

While the head injury rating on the passenger side was good for both the Taurus and Sable — 695 and 680 respectively — the rates for the driver jumped to about 1,200 for both cars.

"When Ford spends that much money on designing a new car you would think they would design it crashworthy," said Ditlow of the Center for Auto Safety.

Ford Motor Co. officials were dismayed by the NHTSA findings, but maintained that great attention has been devoted to designing safety into the vehicles.

"We don't understand the results of NHTSA's crash tests on these Ford products," said Robert H. Munson, Ford's director of automotive safety. "Our engineers will study the results of those tests in detail including the crash films, still pictures and data in an effort to determine the cause of the higher ... readings."

The best performers in the 1986 tests were the Toyota Celica, Chevrolet Nova, Chevrolet Cavalier, Oldsmobile Delta 88 and Buick Century, all of which recorded a head injury rating for both front-seat occupants of less than 800.

There are several hundred car types and models on the market and NHTSA each year selects about 30 to test. The selection is determined by a variety of factors such as popularity, whether the car has been tested before or whether it has undergone significant design changes.

Body identified as missing auto executive

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A cause of death had not yet been determined after officials identified a decomposed body found near El Paso as that of John F. Thompson, 59, an auto executive missing since late last week.

Family members had been looking for Thompson since Friday, when he left his office in the Ford Motor Co. plant in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

The body of a man who had been dead for about a week was found late Wednesday night in an abandoned airstrip behind the Sunland Park, N.M., racetrack on the outskirts of El Paso, said Capt. Paul Venema, head of investigations with the Sunland Park police department.

The body was identified as Thompson's Thursday by the Office of Medical Investigation at Albuquerque, N.M. An autopsy is pending.

Car bomb explodes in West Beirut; 25 killed, 60 are hurt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in a crowded shopping area of Moslem west Beirut, killing 25 people and injuring more than 60, police said.

Rescuers pulled victims from the rubble in Tarik Jedideh district's Afif Tibi Street as firefighters tried to douse fires in buildings set aflame by the blast.

At least 12 shops were heavily damaged, their shutters ripped to shreds by the blast's concussion and their wares scattered over a 50-yard radius. Glass shards littered the streets, which were awash with water from fire engine hoses.

The first two floors of a seven-story apartment building were gutted and 20 cars were reduced to piles of charred and twisted metal by the blast.

Syrian and Lebanese troops, as well as Moslem militiamen, blocked off the area.

The attack, for which there was no immediate claim of responsibility, was the third deadly car bombing in the Lebanese capital in less than two weeks. Two massive car bombs killed a total of 57 people and wounded 310 in Christian east Beirut and the Moslem west on July 28-29.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

This highway began to decay the day that it ceased to be used and repaired. Deterioration sets in with the onset of neglect. When a nation's spiritual life is neglected there is a possibility that nation will not long endure. Let us strengthen our nation and our society by attending church regularly and reaffirming our faith in God.

"And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." Hebrews 10:24, 25.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Highland Baptist planning special VBS activities

Big grasshoppers, pretty butterflies, ugly bugs and kids of all sizes and shapes will be much in evidence at Highland Baptist Church next week.

The event is Vacation Bible School, and all children are invited by the school leaders to attend this time of fun, fellowship and inspiration.

The school will be held Monday through Friday from 9 to 11:30 a.m. daily. Highland Baptist Church is located at the corner of Banks and Kentucky Streets, just north of Coronado Shopping Center.

The VBS faculty includes Brother Joe Wortham, pastor, as director; Jo Veda Watson, secretary; and Darlene Drinnon, Minnie Emmons and Jo Veda Watson, Kitchen Committee members serving refreshments daily to everyone attending the school.

Other faculty members are Marie Boyd, Ruby Denney, Edna Maple, Alta Morris and others teaching ages 3, 4 and 5; Sandra Wollman, Stacy Taylor and Tammy Kelley, teaching grades 1 and 2; Michelle Wortham, Lee Anne Mangus and Cindy Mangus, teaching grades 3 and 4; and Joe Wortham and Sherrill Watson, teaching grades 5 and 6.

Many special activities are planned, such as recreation, crafts, Bible classes, mission study and music, as well as a contest featuring big grasshoppers, pretty butterflies and ugly bugs.

Prizes will be given to children who bring the creatures for the contest. Leaders issue a warning: "Be sure all critters are in containers. We still haven't found the snake that escaped last year in the church basement."

Also, a king and queen will be crowned daily. These will be the boy and girl who bring the most new pupils each day.

A mission offering called "pounds of pennies" will be taken each day, with a goal of 10 pounds or more.

Also, on Friday at noon a sack lunch will be held with all parents and friends who attend.

Pastor Wortham issued an invitation to all children to attend the Highland VBS, especially to those who missed the VBS earlier in the summer.

The church van will run each day at 8:30 a.m. and will stop at these locations: Travis School, Austin School, Wilson School, the Pizza Hut and on the west side of M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Those needing a ride are asked to call the church at 669-6509.

HIS TOUCH

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: He (God) loads the clouds with moisture; he scatters his lightning through them. At his direction they swirl around over the face of the whole earth to do whatever he commands them. (Job 37:11-12 NIV)

On May 19, 1982, in Pampa, Texas, a minimum of six tornadoes danced in and out of heavy, dark clouds. The little funnels sashayed willfully around and over the town like teasing, malevolent Jzebels.

A week later townspeople met for a civil defense meeting.

The highlight of the meeting was a videotape of the largest of the tornadoes. However, the deadly, destructive power was diminished by the reproduction, and the storm seemed controlled and confined to the television screen. The videotape unintentionally relegated the storm to innocuous entertainment.

Men can use high technology to record and visualize the wonders of weather. The can effectively use the celluloid for education, research and fascination.

But cinematic reproduction cannot record the power dimension behind climatic cataclysms. Such ultimate power belongs to Almighty God alone!

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Drawing on advice of rabbis and other experts, the youth magazine of the Union of Hebrew Congregations, Keeping Posted, offers this advice on how to resist peer pressure:

"The important job of adolescence is to find out who you are and what you believe in. When you accept and value yourself, the need to be just like everyone decreases."

DALLAS (AP) — The head of the Greek Orthodox Church says he looks forward to the day when the 12 separate American branches of Orthodoxy are united to speak with one voice.

CLAYTON AND ALINE STOKES
...ready to make pancakes

Church plans pancake supper

Clayton Stokes will be doing one of the things he likes best Saturday night: cooking pancakes at the Community Christian Center, 801 E. Campbell.

The serving will begin at 6 p.m., with the public invited. There will be no charge, but a freewill offering will be made at the door. The profit will go to the Christian Center.

Stokes began cooking pancakes for groups some 10 years ago. He is well-known to local wagon train, rodeo and church groups as the pancake man.

Stokes said he first came to Pampa from Dallas as a 12-year-old with his parents and has been here ever since.

In 1940 he met the girl of his dreams and, according to his story, was so impressed by her pies that he promised to find a good guy to marry her. He said he never found that guy, so he married her himself.

He and his wife, Aline, had five boys and raised them all to go to church. They have attended the Community Christian Center since 1954.

Some 35 years ago, he went into the moving houses business and is still going strong. He and his wife say they are too busy moving houses and cooking pancakes for groups to take time to get old.

Music mission set at White Deer

WHITE DEER — Wilbur Sayles of Austin will bring his lay music ministry to White Deer on Wednesday, Aug. 13.

The mission will be held in the sanctuary of the White Deer United Methodist Church, 101 W. 8th Street, at 7:30 p.m.

"Mr. Sayles was in White Deer for a mission in February, 1984," Rev. Ivan E. Allen said, "and we are happy to have him return for another mission in our church. We invite everyone to take advantage of this unique worship service."

Sayles has been leading lay music missions for several years across the United States and in many foreign countries.

Rev. Allen noted the mission is not just a program of music, but the message and challenge of Jesus Christ presented through song and the spoken word combined with the music of the Elkavox.

The Elkavox is a combination of the accordion and organ. It is played like an accordion but has the sound of the accordion and organ in combination. The effect is one of greater depth and expression, Allen said.

There will be no admission charge for the program, but an offering will be received during the evening to help cover the expenses of Sayles.

Bible Baptist to show 'Sheffey'

Bob Jones University's motion picture Sheffey is scheduled for showing in the Pampa area at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 22, in the Bible Baptist Church auditorium, Kingsmill and Starkweather.

Sheffey, with screenplay written by Tim Rogers, is based on the book The Saint of the Wilderness by Jess Carr.

The film deals with the life of an itinerant preacher, Robert Sayers Sheffey. Living in the 1800s, Sheffey ministered to the mountain folk of the Virginias, Carolinas and parts of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Convinced that people needed to be shown the love of God, Sheffey rode the mountains and hollows to spread the light of the gospel.

Produced and directed by Katherine Stenholm, the movie won the prestigious Silver Medallion Award at the annual film competition conducted by the International Film and Television Festival of New York.

Sheffey is a moving, compassionate story that you will not want to miss, said Rev. Dick McIntosh, pastor.

Livestock Exposition endows Texas A&M chair

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Livestock Exposition Inc. has endowed a $1 million chair, two fellowships and a major scholarship at Texas A&M University, officials said.

The three gifts were described as the most diversified academic enhancement program ever established at one time at the 110-year-old school.

SALE provided $600,000 to Texas A&M's College of Agriculture, allowing the university to provide matching funds under its Endowed Scholars Program to establish the $1 million chair and two $75,000 graduate fellowships.

The chair, to be formally named the San Antonio Livestock Exposition Inc. Chair in Animal Science, honors the memory of Harry and Joe Freeman, longtime supporters and leaders of the exposition.

SALE Board Chairman Mary

Nan West said a plaque commemorating the occasion says the university should "continue the tradition of raising the quality of farming and ranching, and in the process, raise the quality of life for all."

Texas A&M President Frank E. Vandiver, who headed the university delegation that traveled to San Antonio for formal acceptance of the gifts, said the "timing could not have been better."

"At Texas A&M, for the past several months, most of our time has been devoted to formulating budget contingency plans," he said. "We have plans for 7 percent reductions, 13 percent cuts and obituaries written for a possible 34 percent knifing."

"At this point, Texas A&M needs the support of all its friends, and the establishment of this chair signifies your support of Texas A&M."

August 9, 1986

Exciting things are in the offing for you and an old friend in the year ahead. There's a chance the two of you will become involved in a unique enterprise where each will benefit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In order to fully relax and enjoy yourself today, you'd be wise to put duty before pleasure. If you do the reverse, feelings of guilt may outweigh the fun. Major changes are ahead for Leos in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be wishy-washy about matters that affect your family's welfare. Protect their material interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This can be a successful day for you, provided you finish what you begin. You may not do so well if you settle for half measures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be fair and up front in your commercial dealings today. However, don't volunteer to make concessions unless the other person is prepared to do some adjusting as well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Keep your priorities straight today or you might succeed in areas that mean little and fail in those that matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A person who is in a position to do you a favor will come through as promised, but he or she may expect quite a bit in return.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Things should please you today if you don't expect perfection from friends. Make allowances for their flaws and they'll do so for yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you are entitled to something for your past efforts, don't hesitate to ask for what is yours. Reasonable claims will be honored.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Before entering into an important agreement today, be certain that the other parties are as sincere as you are. Back off if you're doubtful.

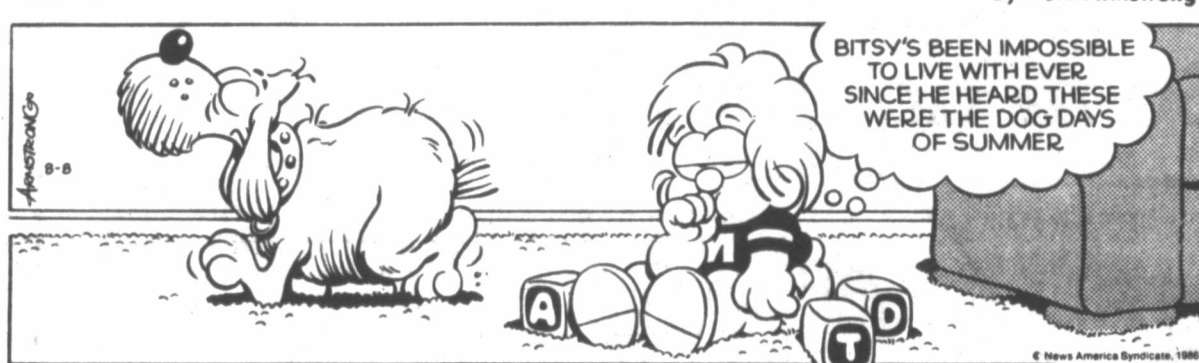

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Spell everything out in advance today if you are performing work or service for a stranger. Be sure both of you know what to expect from each other.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Hard feelings will result if you play favorites with friends today. Don't be overly attentive to one pal while ignoring another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Assignments that you enjoy will turn out exceptionally well today, but you could be extremely inept or careless with tasks that others have imposed on you.

LIFESTYLES

Jim Davis will show this desk in the Santa Fe gallery exhibit.

Pampan to show work in New Mexico exhibit

Jim Davis of Pampa has been asked to show his handmade furniture in a special showing at the Contemporary Craftsman Gallery in Santa Fe, N.M., Sunday, Aug. 10.

Davis is one of 10 fine furniture makers asked to exhibit their work in the celebration of the gallery's 10th anniversary from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Sunday.

Davis, son of Billy B. and Nancy Davis of Pampa and a 1967 graduate of Pampa High School, was introduced to woodworking in a community college course in 1973. After completing his studies, he began building furniture for himself and for friends, making pieces that were unavailable on the market.

From these initial experiences, Davis launched his business, "Woodworking Unlimited," specializing in Early American, Queen Anne and Chippendale style furniture.

His contribution to the exhibit is a slant front desk, drawn from Chippendale and Hepplewhite styles, which took 320 hours to complete. Davis combined woods in this desk to provide contrast and to highlight each piece of wood's natural beauty.

The slant front desk is an original design...

combinations of woods in this desk contrast with one another to highlight their natural beauty.

Inside the desk are eight small drawers and one small compartment in the center that has shell and leaf carvings on the door to compliment the carvings on the front of the desk. For large flat areas, Davis covered flakeboard cores with veneer, matching patterns in grain. While the thin veneer sheets are ordered from New York, Davis cuts and mills the solid woods himself at his father's farm in Kansas. Leg pieces are quarter cut so that the grain pattern is symmetrical with the shape of the leg.

The desk frame, without veneer and moulding, is built using mortise-and-tenon and half-lap joints. Mouldings around veneered sections are glued and connected at the corners with "biscuits," a process in which an Elu Biscuit Joiner is used to cut two arcs in the ends of each piece to be joined, removing an oval. Then an oval-shaped "biscuit" is set with glue, holding the two sections together. All joints are glued and, where practicable, locked with screws.

Davis merges the past with the present by combining the elegance and complexity of historic furniture designs with modern technology and present-day furniture requirements.

Song asks question: did Tenna-see what Arkin-saw?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anybody knew the words to the old song, "What Did Tenna-see, Boys?" Well, my brother's Cub Scout den has been singing it for the last three years. It's got a catchy tune and is one of their favorites.

PAIGE DEBOBEN, HOUSTON

Oh, what did Tenna-see, boys, what did Tenna-see? (Tennessee) (Sing three times)
I ask you men, as a personal friend
What did Tenna-see?
She saw what Arkin-saw, boys, she saw what Arkin-saw. (Arkansas) (Sing three times)
I'll tell you then, as a personal friend,
She saw what Arkin-saw. (Similarly):
Where has Ora-gone, boys? (Oregon)
She's taking Okla-home, boys. (Oklahoma)
How did Wiscon-sin, boys? (Wisconsin)
She stole a New-brass-key, boys. (Nebraska)
What did Dela-ware, boys? (Delaware)
She wore a New Jersey, boys. (New Jersey)
What did Io-weigh, boys? (Iowa)
She weighed a Washing-ton, boys. (Washington)
Where did Ida-hoe, boys? (Idaho)
She hoed in Merry-land, boys. (Maryland)
What did Missy-sip, boys? (Mississippi)
She sipped her Mini-soda, boys. (Minnesota)
What did Connie-cut, boys? (Connecticut)
She cut her shaggy Mane, boys. (Maine)
What did Ohi-owe, boys? (Ohio)
She owed her Taxes, boys. (Texas)
How did Flora-die, boys? (Florida)
She died of Misery, boys. (Missouri)

DEAR PAIGE: Thanks for sending one of the most popular versions of that song. I received

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl. Ever since I can remember, I've had three things hammered into me: Don't drink, don't smoke, and don't get pregnant.

You see, my parents want to protect me from every harm they can because they love me. The only way I can get drunk is if I drink. The only way I can get pregnant is if I have sex. That's only logical. But can someone tell me where the logic is in telling me not to smoke because it's bad for my health, when I live with a mother who has a cigarette in her hand every time she turns around?

I don't smoke and I don't plan to start, but I might just as well because I suffer the same eye irritation, allergic reactions and lung damage as I would if I smoked two packs a day.

I don't care if this letter lands right smack in your wastepaper basket, Abby, but I just had to write it. Thanks for listening.

OREGON SMOKE HATER

DEAR SMOKE HATER: Your letter landed right smack in my column — where it belongs.

OLD FORT, N.C. (AP) — His examining room is the front porch of a battered, wooden farmhouse in rural McDowell County.

His instruments include six decades of experience and dozens of herbs and vitamins, and his patients are a surprising mixture of mountain folks and city people.

"I was born to traditional medicine," said Chief Two Trees, whose family was associated with Cherokee Indians in central Oklahoma. "My mother, father and grandparents were medicine people and each one had a turn teaching me. I didn't have any choice but to follow them. Our power comes from the Creator — it is a gift of knowledge that is bestowed on us."

Appointments aren't necessary, and between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. any Monday, Tuesday, Friday or Saturday, people with an assortment of ailments are usually waiting to be diagnosed.

Although it's been little more than 18 months since Two Trees staked his sign on a gravel road about three miles outside of Old Fort, the 60-year-old "medicine man" says he has already been visited by thousands of people in search of relief from chronic problems and diseases.

At the knee of his grandmother, Eyes of Fire, he learned that health can be maintained by treating the whole person and that the body's self-healing ability should be encouraged — beliefs that he said in many ways distinguished his practice from that of modern medicine.

Although Two Trees said he had never really forsaken his devotion to traditional medicine since those early days in Oklahoma, it wasn't until he retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1967 that he refocused his attention on the art by visiting with "native American elders" throughout the country.

He settled in Old Fort in 1984, and there he raises corn, pumpkins and beans, writes and makes "recommendations" to those who seek his medical advice.

Two Trees says he understands modern medicine and even recommends that everyone have a family physician so that a medical history is readily available.

"Native American medicine almost disappeared around 1940," he said. "People thought it was old-fashioned. In the last 10 years, however, we've seen a comeback because the modern trends haven't been all that effective. Everyone involved in the medical arts realizes we're in a dilemma. Our national health is fast deteriorating, and all medical people are open to anything that might reverse this."

Two Trees, who professes to be one of about 25 medicine men in the United States, bases his work on the belief that everyone is responsible for his own health — an approach that he supplements with the use of herbs and natural medicines.

"I think that everyone is responsible for himself," he said,

WEST VIRGINIA was a part of Virginia until the Civil War divided the population. At that time, Virginia separated using the Allegheny mountain range as the primary boundary. Because of the terrain, much of the initial travel was from Pennsylvania and Maryland rather than Virginia. A separate government for West Virginia was established in 1861 and in 1863 it became our 35th state. Many of the counties have records from the time settlement began in the mid-1700s. County clerks will search for a fee.

West Virginia University Library has a printed listing of the newspapers held in the collection. These are a good source for death notices. Church records are important for this area and often have complete data.

I would recommend joining a genealogical society in West Virginia if you have any indication of ancestors from that area. Consult the county first and locate the nearest organization that offers a newsletter with query exchange.

Remember that until 1863 you are concerned with Virginia records and even after that date, continue to research both areas. Some probate records have been found to have been filed in both states while others have been located in the opposite state than the one actually settled. Also, since it was created as a direct result of the Civil War, watch for families split by their political views moving during this time.

WARREN HASSE

WELL, AS MY FAVORITE President since Ike would philosophize... The induction of Willie McCovey into the Baseball Hall of Fame last Sunday brought back vivid memories of an unusual day spent in Chicago's Wrigley Field. The crowd loudly and determinedly booed one future Hall of Famer every time he came to bat, and two more every time after their first appearance at the plate. The three were Ernie, Willie and Willie.

The home town crowd was hostile toward No. 14, Mr. Cub, Ernie Banks because he had announced that morning he was divorcing his wife. That woman was dearly loved by the Chicagoans, and they expressed that adoration by making it one of the most miserable days for her soon-to-be ex-husband. Perhaps Ernie interprets his now-famous quote, "It's a great day for two", a bit differently than others.

And it was the two Willies, Mays and McCovey, who drew the wrath for refusing to run to first base after hitting the ball. They were mad at their Giant manager, Al Dark, and knew that as the stars of the team, drawing big salaries, Dark couldn't do anything about it. They eventually got him fired. If the ball they hit was a ground ball to an infielder or fly ball that was going to be caught, they never left the batter's box. It wasn't what the fans had paid to see.

Those memories stuck with me from that day on, and respect for the two Giant stars was totally lost over that one incident which showed a total lack of respect for the game, their manager, the fans. But in the case of McCovey it was all erased with his emotional, sincere, heartfelt acceptance of the Hall of Fame honor. Whether he wrote his own speech, or it was ghost written for him, there was no doubt he meant every word of it.

It made me realize how easy it is to misjudge someone. Like many fans who see a coach at work and disagree with his actions. Perfect example is an individual who told me within the last year that "the worst thing to ever happen to West Texas State was Joe Kerbel!" Asked if he had ever met the man, talked to him, or even seen him, the response was "no". You can imagine what effect that person's opinions will have on me from now on.

It's a shame the football exhibition from London, a meaningless affair, kept news media from giving McCovey the credit he deserved on his day.

Staying at Wrigley Field a moment longer, another Hall of Famer, now retired longtime Chicago Cub broadcaster Jack Brickhouse was asked recently to list the top ten moments in his illustrious career. Strangely, my son John and I were present for 20 percent of those Top Ten. One was a 10-inning no-hitter thrown by Cincinnati's Jim Maloney, the only major league hitless game I've ever seen. It happened Aug. 19, 1965. With one out in the top of the 10th, Leo Cardenas, hitting Eighth in the Redleg order, pulled a Larry Jackson pitch down the leftfield line. The ball hit the foul pole and caromed fair, over the wall, resulting in a 1-0 Cincy win.

The second matchup with Brickhouse occurred July 23, 1962. We attended the doubleheader the day before and were told that the next day, with the Phillies in town, the first-ever broadcast of a game over Telestar would occur, for the first time beaming a Television signal to Europe from the United States. Samples of various phases of life in the United States would be projected, and a part of the Cubs' Monday afternoon game was selected. So we immediately made plans to be back.

As fans entered the park they were given small American flags for use at the appropriate time. About 18,000 showed up and patiently waited to follow directions when telecast time was near. At the precise moment, the game was momentarily halted so it wouldn't be during a between-innings break.

The public address announcer informed the fans exactly what the telecast timing was, and urged all to wave the flags as the camera picture from Wrigley Field was shot into space to Telestar and reflected to Europe. To make certain there was action on the field, with the Cubs at bat, outfielder Johnny Callison was told to swing at anything the pitcher threw. Fortunately, he got a good piece of the ball and sent a long fly to rightfield, where George Altman, a former Cub, made a nice running catch. It all took less than a minute, but it was a minuscule piece of sports history that meant enough to brickhouse to list in his Top Ten most memorable moments.

Back to booing athletes, the thoughts of former Amarillo Giant turned broadcaster, former Cy Young Award Winner Steve Stone are very apropos. Speaking of the way the fans were insulting Ron Cey early in the year, Stone said: "What Ron Cey has to remember is they are not booing Ron Cey the man, the husband, the father. They're booing his performance. What he has to remember is to keep his identity as a player separate from his identity as a person."

Even for a highly paid professional athlete, with world's of success and some low moments, that is difficult. So imagine how difficult it has to be for a trying, inexperienced teenager doing his best to represent himself, his team, his school while learning to play a sport. As the new school year nears and the athletics teams, boys and girls, start readying to have fun and compete, it might be a good thought to keep in mind.

Trio shares Henredon lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Kathy Postlewait and Robin Walton might not be where they are in the Henredon Classic golf tournament if they hadn't talked to their teachers.

Walton and Postlewait, along with Amy Benz, headed into today's second round at the Willow Creek Golf Club course at 4-under-par 68. Neither Walton nor Benz has won a tournament on the LPGA circuit, while Postlewait has one victory, which came in 1983.

Attributing her score to better driving, Walton said a talk with instructor Mike Adams helped change her golfing attitude.

"I'm trying to go from being a hitter of the golf ball to being a swinger of the golf club, and sometimes I get caught in between," she said. "If I can keep within myself and keep things under control, I really strike the ball quite well."

Walton, who tied for ninth this season in the LPGA Corning Classic, birdied her sixth hole with a 35-foot putt, but failed to save par on the seventh when she missed a 4 1/2-footer.

Two short birdie putts on the back nine helped Walton finish strong. And, she said, having straightened out her problems could keep her in the chase for the $34,500 first prize.

Postlewait's change was more mental than physical, she said.

There had been putting problems prior to the Henredon, but a talk with teacher Davis Love may have straightened her out.

"In years past, I have been known as a pretty decent putter, but I'm just not having a whole lot of success at the moment," Postlewait said. "I'm just trying to get my mind off trying to make the putt. In my mind, I'm trusting that I'm lined up right and I'm just trying to move the ball a certain distance."

Postlewait canned a 45-foot putt for birdie to end her round and get into the three-way tie.

Benz, meanwhile, is trying to capitalize on her familiarity with Willow Creek. It was on the course that she began her LPGA career in 1983. It was a 30-foot putt for her at 18 that made her the third member of the group to be tied at the top.

"It's great to get off to a good start," she said. "I started my career here and I have good feelings about this place."

Kris Monaghan and Hall of Famer JoAnne Carner were at 3-under-par 69 starting today's second round, while seven golfers are at 2-under-par 70.

Defending champion Nancy Lopez, back in action after seven months off to give birth to her second child, turned in three birdies and two bogeys en route to a 71.

Walker wants to join Cowboys

NEW YORK (AP) — Herschel Walker is ready to become a Dallas Cowboy, but he's in no hurry.

The Cowboys are. The USFL's most heralded player announced Thursday that he had decided to move to the NFL rather than sit out a second straight season hoping for the USFL to resume next fall. His agent, Peter Johnson, said that he'd probably open contract talks next week with the Cowboys, who selected pro football's all-time single-season rushing leader in the 1985 NFL draft.

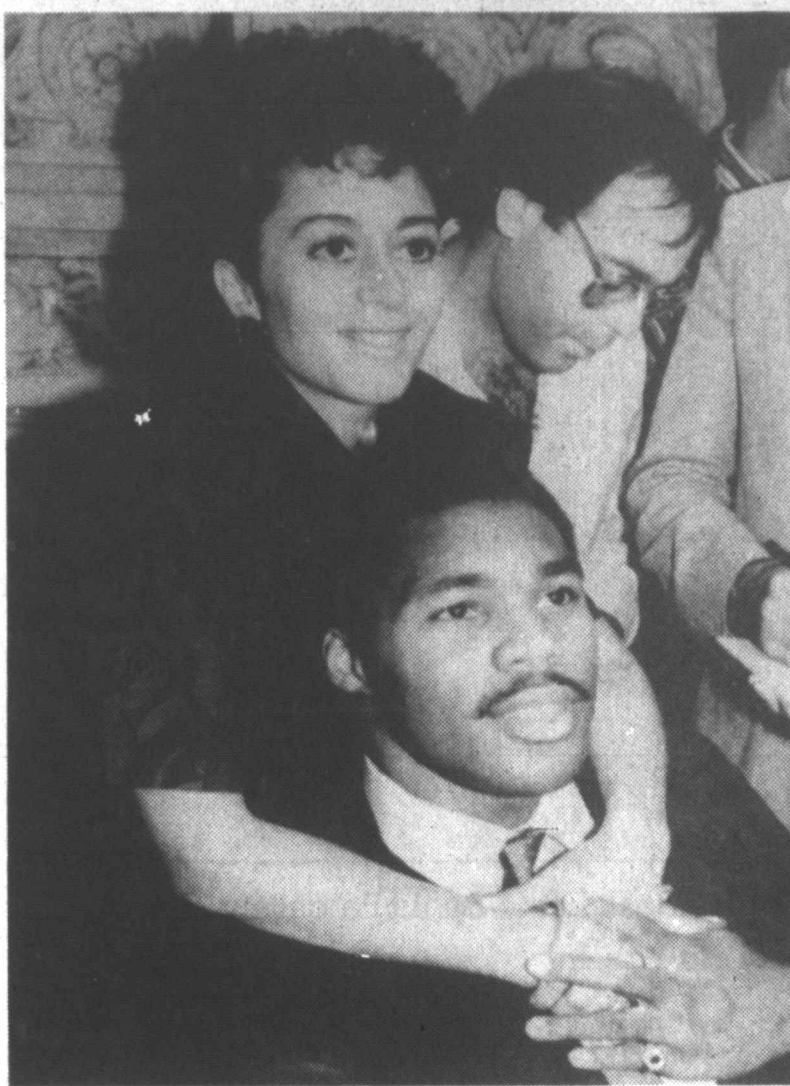

But Cowboys president Tex Schramm said he would prefer that negotiations be hastened.

"This afternoon is OK with me. Time is one of the essentials now, both for the Cowboys and for Herschel," Schramm said. "It's one thing to just be out jogging, but there's a difference in football conditioning, particularly for a running back. You have to be out and take the hits."

Walker made the announcement by declaring, "I'm a football player and I want to play football" and with praise for Donald Trump, the owner of the USFL New Jersey Generals, who agreed to release him to the Cowboys.

Dallas got the rights to Walker because they drafted him in the fifth round in 1985, at a time when the USFL's demise wasn't certain. Walker had already completed two years in the USFL, but hadn't been drafted earlier because he went directly into the other league after his junior year at the University of Georgia.

"It was a big day for our team," said Cowboys coach Tom Landry, who also was cheered by the signing Thursday.

Walker and wife, Cindy, at news conference.

day of the team's first-round draft choice, UCLA wide receiver Mike Sherrard.

"This will give us the depth we haven't had in several years. We've got some good impact players, but when you add a couple more, that really makes you strong," Landry said. In Washington Thursday night, the USFL gave the rest of the players a chance to play football, when, after 12 hours of talks between league officials and the players union, it was determined that all players, including those with guaranteed contracts, will be given immediate permission to seek employment in the NFL or the Canadian Football League.

Although still disappointed by the postponement of the league's 1986 season, USFL Commissioner Harry L. Usher expressed the league's optimism in the wake of Thursday's decision.

"The union and the league have shown that both parties are committed to the future. We will not give up in the face of the NFL's illegal monopoly."

But they may have to surrender Walker.

Walker, the 1982 Heisman Trophy winner, brought the USFL instant recognition when he signed with the Generals following his junior year at Georgia. In 1985, his third season with the team, he rushed for an all-time professional record of 2,411 yards.

But when the USFL decided to scrap the 1986 season after winning just $3 in its suit against the NFL, Trump announced that he would release any player who asked him, including Walker and quarterbacks Jim Kelly and Doug Flutie.

Other USFL players were also ready to leave.

The Baltimore Stars, for example, gave offensive tackle Irv Eatman permission to talk to the NFL Kansas City Chiefs and the Washington Redskins were reportedly interested in four USFL players. Prime among them was Eatman's teammate, Kelvin Bryant, along with former NFL quarterback Doug Williams and wide receivers Clarence Verdin and Derek Holloway.

...More good news, Sherrard finally signs

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — After a 32-day holdout, Mike Sherrard, the Dallas Cowboys' first-round draft choice, signed a four-year, $1.45 million contract and was given No. 88 — the number once worn by Drew Pearson.

"He's got some big shoes to fill," Cowboys coach Tom Landry said.

The former UCLA wide receiver signed on the same day the Cowboys learned that Herschel Walker was ready to open negotiations with them.

"This is a big day for us," Landry said Thursday. "This will give us the depth we haven't had in several years. We've got good impact players, like (Tony) Dorsett and (Tony) Hill, but when you add a couple more, that really makes you strong."

The Cowboys wasted no time in putting Sherrard to work. He worked out during the afternoon practice session Thursday, only hours after signing his contract.

He will be in uniform for Saturday night's game against San Diego, but will not play, Landry said.

"It was a long time to miss camp and it was tough," Sherrard said. "But I still feel that I can contribute to the team. I'm anxious to see what I can do. I think I can still contribute with my deep speed."

Leigh Steinberg, Sherrard's agent, said he, Sherrard and Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey worked out the contract in a "caffeine-assisted negotiation that burned the midnight oil" late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning.

Sherrard said he had been working out with some players at UCLA and came to training camp in "excellent shape."

"I don't know how well I'm going to adjust to the NFL, but I always thought deep down that things would work out with the Cowboys," Sherrard said.

Sherrard had been talking with the Arizona Outlaws of the USFL, but the decision earlier this week to suspend play this season put the USFL team out of the bidding for his services.

The end of the USFL, for at least this season, combined with the injury to Cowboys veteran wide receiver Mike Renfro, who suffered a separated shoulder in the Cowboys' exhibition game against the Chicago Bears in London last Sunday combined to apparently speed up the end of the negotiations. Renfro will be out up to six weeks.

Landry said that because of the injury to Renfro, Sherrard has an opportunity to move quickly into the lineup.

The Cowboys drafted Sherrard during the 1986 draft after making a trade with the San Francisco 49ers.

Norman takes command in PGA Championship

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Craig Stadler had just finished at 4-under-par 67 in the first round of the PGA Championship when he was asked about chasing leader Greg Norman.

"So what else is new?" Stadler said.

Despite 67s by Stadler and Phil Blackmar, once again it was Norman who stole the show with a 6-under-par 65 to take a two-stroke lead Thursday in the 68th PGA Championship at the Inverness Club.

Norman, a winner of three Tour events in 1986, including the British Open three weeks ago, scorched the back nine of the 6,982-yard, par-71 layout for five birdies and a 31 to take the early lead.

"I'm working harder than I ever have before," said Norman, who broke the course record by two strokes. "The harder I work, the more it pays off in the long run. My priorities have changed with the win at the British Open. Now I have put my mind and my whole train of thought to winning as many major championships as I possibly can."

Annual Oil Bowl Game set for Saturday night

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Sean Fisher of Mineral Wells, Texas, and Terry Fisher of Clinton, Okla., will be the starting quarterbacks in the 49th Oil Bowl football game here Saturday night in Memorial Stadium.

The game, which annually matches high school all-stars from Texas and Oklahoma, is sponsored by the Maskat Shrine Temple of Wichita Falls. All proceeds from the game go to crippled children charities.

Stadler, who has won a Masters green jacket, and the 6-foot-7, 250-pound Blackmar, who might have trouble finding a jacket big enough, were deadlocked at 67.

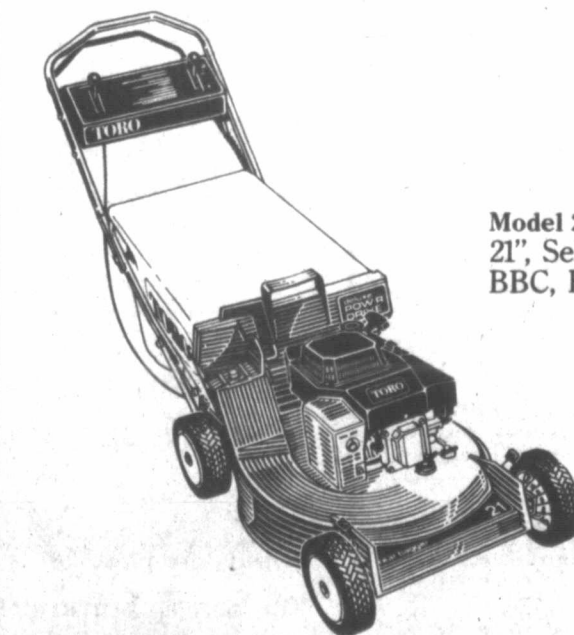

At 3-under-par 68, three shots back of Norman, came Gary Koch, Bob Gilder, Bruce Lietzke, Bobby Wadkins, Gene Sauers, Fred Couples, Jay Haas and Mike Hulbert.

Heading a logjam at 1-under 70 was five-time PGA champion Jack Nicklaus. He was joined by David Frost, Jeff Sluman, Scott Simpson, Donnie Hammond, Payne Stewart, Davis Love III, Dave Stockton and J.C. Snead.

The 31-year-old Norman, who has already set a PGA Tour single-season money-earning record of $564,729, needed 28 putts in his round. The pivotal one might have come on the 528-yard, par-5 eighth hole.

He drove into the right rough, had to hit a sand wedge sideways to get back to the fairway, hit a 5-iron short of the green and then could get a sand wedge no closer than 45 feet. But Norman rolled in the putt for an anything-but-routine par.

Tigers close in on Red Sox after sweep of Indians

By JONATHAN VITTI
AP Sports Writer

They have a four-game winning streak, they have the lead down to 4½ games and they have the Boston Red Sox coming to town tonight.

They are the Detroit Tigers — suddenly playing some of the best baseball in the majors. They swept a two-night doubleheader from Cleveland Thursday, 15-1 and 6-2, their second doubleheader sweep over the Indians in three days.

The Tigers are now 16-6 since the All-Star break, while the Red Sox have gone 6-13.

At the break, Detroit was 13 games behind the Red Sox, in sixth place in the American League East. They moved into third after Thursday's sweep, with the Red Sox coming to town for four games.

Jack Morris and Mark Thurmond continued Detroit's strong pitching in Thursday's doubleheader. Morris threw seven shutout innings in the opener, while Thurmond fired six shutout innings in the nightcap.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, who suddenly has a contender on his hands, pulled both starters quickly.

"I was going to get him out after six innings, but I allowed him to go seven," Anderson said of Morris. "If I had another pitcher, he might have been gone after five. I was watching him real close. You don't fool with your pitchers."

"Anytime I can get one of my starters out of there now, I will, from here on out."

In Thursday's other AL games, Texas beat Baltimore 9-8, Toronto beat Kansas City 5-4 and Milwaukee crushed New York 10-2.

Rangers 9, Orioles 8

Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper belts three-run homer.

Gary Ward drove in five runs, including the first of four Texas runs in the seventh inning, as the Rangers rallied for their second straight comeback win in Baltimore.

With Orioles' ace reliever Don Aase out with a back injury, the Rangers came back from an 8-5 deficit against Brad Havens, 3-2, and Mike Flanagan.

The two teams, who set a major league record with three grand slams Wednesday night, traded three-run homers early in the game. Ward connected in the first, and John Stefero countered for the Orioles in the second.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 4

Reliever Steve Farr balked home the tying run in the eighth inning, then gave up a game-winning single to Willie Upshaw to give Toronto the win over visiting Kansas City.

"It definitely unsettled me, so it had to unsettle him," Upshaw said of the balk. "Then he gave me a fastball right over the middle of the plate, which is exactly what I was looking for."

"He looked like someone with his hand in the cookie jar," Jim Sundberg, the Royals catcher, said. "He realized he had done it."

Brewers 10, Yankees 2

Cecil Cooper and Rick Manning hit three-run homers, as the Brewers won three of their four games in New York and eight of 13 with the Yankees this season.

The Yankees have lost eight of their last 11 games.

Angels 4, Mariners 3

California's Jack Howell, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the ninth and doubled, ended the game with a homer leading off the bottom of the 11th inning to sink Seattle.

Howell hit his third homer of the season off Pete Ladd, 6-3, who had relieved in the ninth and pitched 1 1/3 hitless innings.

McEnroe advances in Volvo

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Count John McEnroe in when you talk about the people who are upset with his arguing over line calls.

"It's like a bad habit and it's unacceptable," McEnroe said of his blow-up over what he felt was a bad call in his 6-1, 6-4 second-round victory over doubles partner Peter Fleming at the Volvo International Tennis Tournament. "I'm not handling it well."

Showing flashes of the form that has taken him to seven Grand Slam singles titles, McEnroe breezed through the opening set of Thursday's rain-plagued match. Then, after several delays caused by the heavy thunderstorms that sporadically swept through the Green Mountains, he was at break point on Fleming's serve in the eighth game.

The big right-hander served to McEnroe's backhand, and the talented New Yorker hit a floating return that seemed to hit on or just inside the baseline.

That would have given McEnroe the service break and meant he would have been serving for the match. Instead, the ball was called out and McEnroe went into his act that has become all too familiar. He stormed to the chair and demanded that umpire Ron Bennett overrule the baseline judge. Bennett refused.

"I thought both calls (there was an earlier call he questioned) were big mistakes, but that's going to happen," McEnroe said. "But it really bothered me."

Congress considers defense bill, focus on arms control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are turning their attention to major arms control issues such as bans on nuclear tests and anti-satellite weapons as they write their versions of the massive Pentagon budget bill.

The Senate voted approval late Thursday of a non-binding resolution calling on President Reagan to resume U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at seeking a new treaty banning all nuclear tests.

A similar resolution is on the House agenda. That chamber has finally resolved a parliamentary snarl that had delayed plans all week to vote on major issues in the defense spending bill, but it isn't expected to pass the overall measure until next week.

While the Democratic-controlled House struggles with a nuclear test ban, the Republican-controlled Senate turns its attention to anti-satellite (ASAT) weapons and a decision on whether to continue the House-initiated ban on final tests of the weapons.

Both chambers are writing parallel versions of bills authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. A House-Senate conference committee will later resolve the dozens of differences between the two measures.

Reagan sought $320 billion in defense spending, but the House bill cuts that to $292 billion while the Senate would permit $295 billion.

The ASAT fight centers around an Air Force weapon that Reagan says is necessary to offset a similar Soviet system. But opponents say the small, three-stage rocket launched from under a high-flying F-15 jet would only lead to a new arms race in space.

The House banned tests of the weapon during the 1986 budget year and that ban is continued. An extension of the ban has been proposed in the House, but it is not expected to come up for a vote until next week.

The Senate voted 64-35 approval late Thursday of the resolution calling for a total nuclear test ban. The measure also asks Reagan to submit for Senate approval a pair of 1974 and 1976 treaties limiting the size of underground nuclear tests.

A 1963 treaty bans open-air nuclear tests and a comprehensive ban has been a long-time goal of arms control advocates.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has expressed an interest in negotiating for such a ban, but the Reagan administration has rejected those proposals. U.S. officials say they fear current technology is not adequate to verify compliance with such a ban.

After approving the test ban resolution, the Senate rejected, 57-42, a Republican-led effort to water down the measure by simply urging Reagan to maintain his current test ban treaty efforts.

In other major decisions Thursday, the Senate:

—Voted 57-43 against requiring new U.S. consultation with its allies before chemical weapons are built for the first time since 1969. It then voted to reject new tests for one of the weapons, the Bigeye bomb, which would have delayed its production. The second vote was a 50-50 tie, meaning the amendment proposing the tests wasn't adopted. Vice President George Bush then cast a tie-breaking, but unnecessary, vote.

—Voted 63-37 to reject a proposal that would have effectively barred the transfer of shoulder-fired Stinger missiles to anti-Marxist guerrillas in Afghanistan, Angola and elsewhere. It would have imposed conditions for the security of the rocket that would be so strict they couldn't be met.

—Killed, 51-49, a proposal to permit military personnel to wear religious headgear.

—Voted 58-40 to add $566 million to the Air Force budget so the service can pay NASA for scheduled space shuttle flights, even though none of the flights will be flown because of delays in the program.

Halliburton reports half billion dollar loss in second quarter

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co., the giant oilfield services and engineering company, Thursday reported a loss of $524.6 million, or $4.94 per share, for the second quarter.

The company said more than 90 percent of the loss came from writedowns of $488.7 million on inventory, property and equipment.

"The writedowns were made to recognize the substantial erosion which has occurred this year in the economic value of our operating assets and related investments," said Thomas H. Cruikshank, president and chief executive officer.

The loss compared with a loss for the similar period last year of $474.7 million, or $4.37 per share.

Revenues for the second quarter this year were $854.9 million, compared with quarterly revenues a year ago of $1.22 billion, the company said.

Cruikshank in a statement blamed the downturn in oil prices for the company's decline in exploration.
