PILOT AND GIRL DIE IN STAMFORD CRASH

Finest Ocean Liners Toss Helplessly In Grip Of North Atlantic Gale

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Childress celebrated the formal opening of the new Fort Worth and Denver depot Friday night with a big party attended by citizens and Fort Worth and Denver officials.

The new depot is handsome brick structure, modern in every respect and designed to meet the needs of Childress for years to come. It replaces a structure that had long been an eyesore.

Childress is grateful for the new station. Its people remember that their city owes much to the Fort Worth and Denver railroad since pioneer days when it was first built through Childress county. The system's shops were located there and became the principal industry of the community. When time came for the building a South Plains line it was built from a point near Childress. Now comes the completion of one of the finest stations in the whole state of Texas. Fort Worth and Denver stock is considerably above par with Childress folks and rightly so.

The Times and Record News have adopted the Santa Pal plan of aiding Santa Claus for another Christmas. The plan seeks to bring into contact those who feel the spirit of the season and who wish to express it in giving with families who might not otherwise receive a visit from Santa Claus. The contact will be made through the family relief association. The part of the newspapers is to publish lists of the families and something of their condition and needs. Santa Pals can each pick some family to make happy on Christmas morning.

The Santa Pal plan has been used here for several years and has brought happiness to hundreds in need and a happiness and satisfaction scarcely less great to scores of givers.

Being handled through the family relief association the work of the Santa Pals will not conflict with the Christmas cheer of the Salvation Army, the Municipal Christmas tree or of other organizations or individuals. Rather it supplements the Christmas activities of them.

One list of families who will need a Santa Pal has been published. Others will be published from time to time. For further information telephone Mrs. McHam of the family relief association. Her number is 2-2183.

Defeated in the recent election, Jose Vasconcelos, candidate for the presidency of Mexico comes to San Antonio from whence he issues a statement saying that he will return to Mexico to take charge of the government as soon as there is a group of armed men capable of making themselves respected.

Admitting that there may not be much chance for a fair expression of the popular will in a Mexican presidential election it appears that one of the great sources of trouble in Mexico is the failure of its opposing candidates to abide the decision of the ballot. There is rarely a presidential election following which the defeated candidate does not attempt to start a revolution to overthrow the government of the successful candidate. Mexico's progress will not be solved until it learns to express the popular will through the ballot and its candidates learn to abide the decision given therein.

Texas Democrats ought to get a good example from our neighbors to the south. Both in the fairness of its primaries and in staying put.

Not one wife has tendered this talker an estimate of the worth of a husband. Here we are in bad with the husbands and not a wife whose salary we tried to raise comes to our rescue.

And a barber writes in to say that the law we recommended as a move to raise the standards of that trade is only a device to exact $10 in cash from every one who expects to wield a razor. Appears as if we had talked too much.

But talkers have just got to say something. And here goes again. The other day we asked a veteran lawyer, one who has been long years in the practice, who has sat on the bench and who is a student of public affairs, when we might expect a better improvement in the administration of justice. "When we have better lawyers" was his answer, and went on to say that

WIND WRECKS MANY SHIPS ON ENGLISH COAST

Terrific Ocean Storm Expected to Be Renewed In Few Days

BIG STEAMERS HURT

S. S. Roosevelt Arrives in Plymouth Many Hours Overdue

LONDON, Dec. 8. (P)—The terrific gale which has gripped the English coasts for the past several days, causing a loss of life and damage to shipping that cannot yet be estimated, subsided somewhat tonight.

The air ministry, however, predicted that further violent storms were en route. The continental shores had also felt the force of the gales, which several times reached hurricane force, from southern Portugal to northern Denmark.

The high wind and mountainous seas prevented relief ships in several instances from reaching other vessels which had reported themselves in great distress hours before. The total of larger vessels which suffered from the storm exceeded 50.

Little Fresh Damage

Comparatively little fresh damage was done today, principally because most of the shipping at sea when the gales began last Thursday night had either found their way to port or had been wrecked. Floods continued on land, but there was less damage reported from flying debris. With the fate of several vessels not definitely known it was impossible to estimate the loss of life, but it was known to run into scores.

The finest of ocean liners had found themselves almost helpless from the force of the gale. The American liner President Roosevelt, from New York, reached Plymouth today after battling the hurricane. Her officers said the velocity of the wind exceeded 100 miles an hour at times and had done some deck damage. George Stopfer, a German, was lost overboard but it was assumed he was a suicide.

Steamer Puts In

The German steamer Kellerwald put into Plymouth for repairs. It was bound for South American ports from Hamburg when it encountered a gale of such severity that on one day it logged only 34 miles.

The gale was most intense over Dover at 5:30 this evening. It was accompanied by lightning, thunder, hail and severe rain. The western entrance to the harbor was closed owing to the weather and all channel boat services were maintained only with great difficulty.

Falmouth harbor was filled with crippled shipping due to the storms. The famous scenic valley of Wye was flooded from Bakewell to Haddon Hall and Rowsley because the

The department of public instruction is of the belief that through prudent procedure the advantages of education will be impressed upon the Indians.

RUBIO LEAVES FOR NEW-YORK

Mexican President-Elect to Meet Calles

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Dec. 8. (P)—Shortly after receiving a long distance telephone call from New York, Pascual Ortiz Rubio, president-elect of Mexico, left here tonight presumably for New York City.

Although his rather hurried departure prevented his making a statement to newspaper men, it was believed Senor Rubio left to meet former President Plutarco Calles in New York. A meeting of the two had been arranged for New Orleans.

All of the Senor Rubio's party of 16 left at 9:30 p. m. on a Missouri Pacific train bound for St. Louis.

While resting here from the strain of his recent campaign Rubio had said he intended to meet Calles in the United States. He also expressed desires to meet President Hoover and to rest at Johns Hopkins at Baltimore.

Split in Mexican Senate May Be Healed

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8. (P)—Efforts are being made to bring together two disagreeing factions in the majority bloc of the senate after a split which threatened for a time to end the domination which the bloc has held over the upper house since the Obregon administration.

The trouble was precipitated when 17 members of the bloc issued a signed statement to the newspapers alleging the remaining members of the bloc showed tendencies of antagonism toward the National Revolutionary party, with which the signers of the statement contended it was the duty of the bloc to cooperate.

Presilen-elect Pascual Ortiz Rubio, visiting in the United States answered a query as to his attitude in the matter by telegraphing his determination to cooperate with the majority in congress and expressing the opinion that the majority would not forsake the principles of the party. Indications are that the differences in the bloc will be overcome.

Bandits Raid Banquet in Honor Of Judge and Escape With $2,000

Guest of Honor Interrupted in Speech of Evening When Holdup Men Take Charge of Affair

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. (US)—Seven banquet bandits, who held up Magistrate Albert Vitale and 40 dinner guests at an early hour this morning were the objects of an extensive police search today.

The robbery was one of the boldest gang operations that has ever challenged the New York police department. The bandits escaped with $2,000 in cash and $2,000 worth of jewelry collected from the 40 men at the banquet table.

They took also the service revolver of Detective Arthur Johnson, of the homicide squad, who was a guest at the party.

Dinner Honors Jurist

The dinner was given at the Roman Gardens in honor of Magistrate Vitale.

The bandits found the arrangement of the banquet hall perfect for their purposes. The guests were seated at a horseshoe table with Magistrate Vitale at the head.

Six of the bandits scattered about the outer rim of the horseshoe without interrupting Vitale who was to make his address of thanks for the testimonial. The seventh bandit, evidently the leader, stepped into the center of the room abruptly and shouted the command, "hands up!"

At the signal six guns flashed into view around the circle.

Detective Johnson, sitting beside Vitale, reached for his gun. There was a bandit behind him and he was halted by a threatening snarl in his ear.

Magistrate Cool

"Hey, you cop, stick 'em up—and quick!"

Magistrate Vitale kept his presence of mind. Stopping in his speech, he said to the guests:

"Gentlemen, obey all orders. Let them take what we have."

But as he sat back to await the search he slipped a four-and-a-half carat diamond ring from his finger and caught it between his knees. He lost $40 in cash.

Former Magistrate Michael Delagi followed the example and dropped a diamond ring into his shoe. He slipped $62 in currency into a hip pocket but it was discovered and taken.

Other guests were robbed of various amounts and relieved of rings, stick-pins and watches.

After completing the search of guests the seven bandits fled in waiting automobiles.

A few minutes after the holdup Henry Sedier, colored, of Brooklyn, was struck and killed by a speeding automobile at Southern boulevard and One-Hundred-and-Seventy-Sixth street. The car continued on its way.

The police believe this was one of the bandits' cars.

OZARK BAND'S 'VICTIM' BLASTS MURDER STORY

Connie Franklin Picks Out Tiller Ruminer From Group of Girls

SHERIFF CONVINCED

Youth Reported Tortured And Slain Re-Counts Movements

BATESVILLE, Ark., Dec. 8. (UP)—Out of a group of 12 Batesville girls, a 20-year-old Arkansas farm boy who claims to be Connie Franklin, today unhesitatingly picked Miss Tiller Ruminer, who previously had sworn to state authorities she saw Franklin burned to death by a mob which then allegedly assaulted her.

Five men are in jail facing charges of murder growing out of Franklin's alleged mutilation and burning at the stake.

The Ruminer girl stood near the center of the line, a hat pulled down over her face and a coat collar up over her chin, head bowed. She and Franklin were engaged to be married.

She refused to identify the youth saying only, "Well, if it's him, he's fleshened up," Ben Williamson, brother of the prosecuting attorney, told the United Press.

According to Williamson, the youth hurried across the room and grabbed Tiller Ruminer by the hand, calling her by name, "Hello, Tiller." The girl jumped backwards, startled, Williamson said.

When she spoke of fleshening up, the youth said quickly, "Sure I've fleshened up Tillie. I've gained 10 pounds. I been up to Boston mountain."

Recounts Incidents

The boy whose alleged death brought a governor's order for investigation of alleged peonage in this Arkansas farm district, then mentioned 100 incidents supposedly in which Franklin and Tiller Ruminer were concerned. The girl said she remembered every case.

The youth furnished $1,000 bond, provided by some of the wealthiest citizens in the country, for his appearance at the trial of his five alleged murderers Dec. 16.

Both Sheriff Sam Johnson and Prosecutor Williamson indicated they were reasonably sure the youth who confronted Tiller Ruminer today was the Connie Franklin supposedly murdered.

Girl in Custody

The girl has been in custody, though not held, since her testimony to the grand jury which returned indictments against the five defendants.

The youth who faced the Ruminer girl today appeared at Batesville last night, just eight months after a Connie Franklin, admittedly resembling him allegedly was

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. (P)—Three children were killed today in an explosion that wrecked their home in Brooklyn. After an investigation police, who at first attributed the explosion to a gas heater, said the house was wrecked by a bomb.

The bomb was made from a piece of galvanized pipe, 10 inches long, equipped with a time fuse, and attached to an alarm clock.

Police said the bomb had been placed on the kitchen table, evidently with the intention of having it explode when the family went to breakfast.

The dead were Mary Falzone, 15, her brother, Phillip, 13, both of whom were killed instantly, and Rose, 8, who died in a hospital 30 minutes later. The mother, Mrs. Jennie Falzone, and the two youngest children, Patsy, 5, and Sally, 3, were upstairs and escaped injury.

ROAD SMASH FATAL

Man Killed Near Oklaunion Sunday; Wichita Woman In Accident

STAMFORD, Texas, Dec. 8. (P)—Lloyd (Cotton) Hensen, 30, Haskell pilot, and his passenger, Miss Winnie Williams, 20, of Stamford, were killed today when Hansen's plane went into a tailspin and crashed on the landing field here, just a few minutes after the take off.

The plane burst into flames as it hit the ground. No equipment for fighting the fire was available and both bodies were burned to a crisp before they were recovered.

Plane Flies Low

Hensen came to Stamford this afternoon, on an impromptu barnstorming tour. He had taken up several passengers. Miss Williams' ride started just before 6 o'clock.

Observers said the plane was flown unusually close to the ground. Hensen taxied down the field, they said, at a very high rate of speed, and after the take off never exceeded an altitude of 400 feet. He went down the field once, circled back, and the plane crashed almost in front of Miss Williams' escort, L. D. Jamar, who had begged her not to take the ride.

Plane Licensed

The plane bore the state license number B-8118, according to the best information available here. It was flown yesterday from Seymour to Haskell, and today from Haskell here. It was believed to have belonged to an individual or firm at Seymour.

Miss Williams was an orphan. Her only relative here was a Mrs. Thomas, a sister, with whom she lived. Friends of the pilot here said he was married.

Relatives at Seymour were told that the ship, his personal, went into a tailspin at around 200 feet and burst into flames before it struck the ground. Hensen obtained his commercial pilot's license at Fort Worth about three months ago, relatives said.

Besides his mother, the pilot is survived by a wife and three children, who live at Haskell, four sisters and four brothers. The sisters are Mrs. Pink Haggart, of Wichita Falls; Mrs. George Daniel, of Lexington, Ky.; Mrs. Porter Fancher, of Toyah; and Mrs. Scott Session, of Seymour. SHOCK KILLS AGED WOMAN AT VERNON

HIGHWAY CRASH AT OKLAUNION FATAL

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, Dec. 8.—Frank J. Vernon of this city was almost instantly killed about 8:30 o'clock this morning when he was thrown from his truck as an automobile crashed into it during a heavy fog at Oklaunion, nine miles east of here. Both the truck and the automobile, the latter driven by C. R. Sherwood of Eldorado, were practically demolished. The driver of the truck was the only victim, although the Sherwood car was occupied by a number of people, some of whom were shaken up considerably.

According to witnesses, a heavy fog obscured the vision, and Sherwood reported that a covering of mist on his windshield made vision more difficult. The front wheel of the automobile struck a rear wheel of the truck, and the driver of the truck was hurled to the pavement. His neck was broken.

The victim was unmarried and had been making his home with a brother, E. R. Vernon, farmer near here.

WICHITA WOMAN HURT IN CRASH

Mrs. W. H. Carson, 2158 Broad street, suffered serious injuries late Sunday afternoon in one of the queerest automobile accidents ever to have occurred on the Burkburnett highway. The crash, involving three cars, happened near the entrance to the Municipal airport.

The injured woman was rushed to the Hargrave-Walker hospital. She sustained a bad fracture of the jaw and painful bruises on the head, face and body, it was reported. Several of her teeth were knocked out by the impact and physicians were watching her condition for evidence of further injury Sunday night, attendants said.

The accident occurred when a Buick coupe, driven by W. H. Carson, husband of the injured woman, attempted to pass a truck driven by R. L. Young, operator of a tire shop on Fort Worth street. The coupe was unable to get around the truck before it was caught between a Buick sedan, driven by Bill Hays of Devol, Okla., and the truck. The coupe was crushed between the other two machines and turned diagonally across the highway.

The sedan was thrown into the ditch at the left of the road where it overturned, slightly injuring the driver and his brother, who was also in the car. The truck was thrown into the ditch at the right of the highway. All three machines were badly damaged, the coupe driven by Carson having been almost demolished.

Motorcycle Officers John Lowry, J. H. Pogue and O. A. Roberson of the police department were summoned to the scene of the wreck. They turned their investigations over to County Highway Officers Jess Leverett and C. L. Bradford. The extent of the injuries sustained by Mr. Hays, driver of the sedan, was not determined but it was thought he was not badly hurt. He was taken to Burkburnett for medical attention.

Mrs. Wooley was rushed to the doctor's office by Sam Gibbs, a nearby neighbor, where she was treated.

The explosion occurred when Mrs. Wooley placed some clothing she was washing into a washing machine. It was believed that the gasoline-soaked clothes had filled the room with gas and ignited from a lighted stove. Practically all of her clothing was burned from the body, causing serious burns.

HOME-TOWN TALK

By B. D. D.

we would have better lawyers when the requirements for admission to practice were more exacting.

In some states the requirement for admission to the bar is much less than in the proposed barbers' license law. In one state, which happens to be that of this talker's nativity, the only requirement for a license to practice law is a certificate of good moral character.

In some sections of the country it is estimated there are 10 times as many lawyers as are needed for the services lawyers are called upon to render, and the law schools are turning out a flood of new lawyers every year.

Here's a quotation from the annual address of Gurney E. Newlin, president of the American Bar association:

"The adoption by the organized bar of standards of education and character is, however, a mere graceful gesture unless they are made operative. This can be permanently assured only when courts have the power to fix the qualifications of their officers, and the right to determine the requirements for a license to practice be revested in the profession itself, and in every state permanently removed from the whim and caprice of legislative enactment. Proof of the necessity for such power is not wanting. This last winter a law was enacted in California which swept away safeguards that had been erected about the admission to practice law since it was admitted to the union. To longer permit the right to fix and control the qualifications for admission to practice to be exercised by those not members of the profession, is to supinely allow an immemorial prerogative and vested attribute of the profession to be withheld and usurped."

ment today indicate the situation still remains very tense and all precautions are being taken by Commissioner Russell to avoid public demonstrations.

Despite this various disturbing incidents are contained in his report. American women and children are being evacuated from the interior. The telephone connections between Aux Cayes and the interior are in the process of being cut in order to isolate the small inland settlements.

A French Catholic priest stands out as the hero of the present situation, according to General Russell's dispatch. Yesterday morning a crowd of some 2,000 people gathered at Chantel and surrounding the outpost building, shouting threatening and subversive cries to the tiny garrison of three men. They were prevented from making a mass attack on the building by the garde and the priest who harangued the crowd and urged them to return peacefully to their homes while the soldiers were vainly telephoning for reinforcements.

Mob Gathers

Further instances of the bad temper of the populace were cited by General Russell in reporting an incident at Torbeck, near Aux Cayes. A crowd estimated at 1,000 collected there and threatened to kill the corporal for telephoning to the authorities the approach of the mob the preceding day. The crowd kept shouting "down with Borno," "down with Freeman." Borno is the president and Freeman is believed to be an official of the American customs service.

Orders to evacuate the American women and children were hurriedly issued by General Russell in the fear that the uprising might spread to the interior and defenceless American civilian employes with their families would be the first to suffer. Accordingly, all American women and children at Aux Cayes embarked today on the steamer Martinique of the Colombian line. The Martinque was due to arrive at Port au Prince some time tonight.

Swift and Co. Stock Split-Up Recommended

CHICAGO, Dec. 8. (UP)—A split up of Swift and company capital stock was recommended to stockholders by the board of directors here today.

The directors of the packing concern voted to recommend that each share of $100 par value be exchanged for four shares of $25 par, leaving the company's capitalization at $150,000,000. The new stock would have a book value of $37.50 a share on the basis of capital and surplus. A dividend of 50 cents a share quartely would be paid and would be equivalent to the present quarterly dividend of $2.

FIRE 'VICTIM' SEES HIS GIRL

Connie Franklin Picks Tiller Out of Group

mutilated by a mob and thrown on a burnish brush pile March 10.

He was produced by defense attorneys for the five defendants. Two of the defendants identified the youth last night as the man they were charged with killing. They were in jail and had not been told Franklin had been found, Sheriff J. E. Sherill said.

When the youth was led past their cells, each jumped up and said, "Hello, Connie," Sherill said.

The defendants are Joe White, Herman Greeway, Alex Fulke, Bill C. Younger and Hubert Hester.

The boy explained his movements during the time of the alleged murder to officials.

Explains Movements

"I had been working for Herman Greenway for six weeks," he said. On the night of March 8 Herman Greenway, Alex Fulke, Hubert Hester, myself and another boy started to Mountain View. I was riding a mule.

"We were drinking. Just before we got to Mountain View, my mule ran under a tree and the limb struck me on the head. We turned around and went back home.

"The next day, March 9, Tiller Ruminer, to whom I was engaged to be married, and I had a quarrel. I decided I didn't want to marry her and so just slipped out and left the country.

Ignorant of Charges

"I went down near Humphrey and worked for Carl Bryant on a farm. I hadn't heard anything about five men being charged with my murder until L. M. Marks came down here and told me about it yesterday.

"If I had heard of it sooner, I'd have come on alone. I don't know why Tiller told that story about me being murdered and burned, unless she was made to tell it."

Defense attorneys said they believed the charges resulted from a clan war and the activities of a night riding gang that had terrified the community for many years.

Judge Coleman, leading defense counsel, said it was not improbable that the bones supposed to have been Franklin's found near the site of the alleged pyre had been taken from an old graveyard nearby and planted for evidence.

"As I see it, the whole thing was a frameup against the men by their enemies in that community," Coleman said. "There had been a great deal of ill feeling and clan war between the group to which the defendants belonged and another group."

Wellington Legion Men Hold Banquet

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, Dec. 8.—Members of the Frank King post of the American Legion sponsored a banquet for all ex-service men of Collingsworth county which was held Thursday night at the City cafe in Wellington. Every ex-service man in Collingsworth was extended an invitation to attend the banquet, which was held following a meeting at the Legion hall.

According to Vertrees Langford, adjutant of the local legion post, the banquet marked the end of the membership drive which was inaugurated Armistice day by the legion.

More than 97 members for 1930 have been secured during the drive, Adjutant Langford stated. This is a substantial gain over the 1929 membership, as only 50 men were members of the legion when the membership campaign opened.

STEAMERS TOSS IN OCEAN GALE

Heavy Damage Caused by Atlantic Storm

river Wye was unable to carry off the heavy rainfall. The port of Folkestone was still closed to cross-channel steamers. Rising waters in the Thames caused some anxiety although the river thus far was below the flood height reached last year.

Communication Crippled

There has been no communication between Weymouth and the channel islands since Thursday. Many persons who went to that port on Saturday night to cross to the islands slept on the boat train at the pier. A chimney crashed into the dining rooms on Weymouth Quay. The woman proprietor was buried under the debris and seriously injured, but 10 guests escaped without harm.

The seriousness of the storm was shown in the wreckage which strewed the coasts. Several bodies were washed ashore. One recovered at Hartland was believed to have been that of a member of the crew of a steamer Radyr which sank on Saturday. It was tentatively identified as that of Radio Operator Meredith. Another body was seen in the surf at Welcombe on the Devon coast but could not be recovered. A lifebuoy with the name Mira Gella was found at Lulworth, Dorset, but no such ship had been reported in distress.

Lifeboats Lost

The Greek steamer Georgios P. lost several lifeboats and one of its crew was sent ashore with a broken leg. Cabins on the Japanese steamship Tasmanian Transport were flooded and some of its lifeboats smashed. The ship also lost its anchor and cables and so had to steam around until able to enter a dock.

The British liner Valacia's boats were smashed and other deck damages done by the mammoth waves. The steamer Laristan radioed that she had suffered damage and that her captain had suffered a broken leg.

The Cunarder Lancastria called at Cobh this morning and later sailed for New York. Its radio and other electrical apparatus had been disabled yesterday when the ship was struck by lightning while in the channel.

The liner Homeric was 20 hours late in reaching Southampton from New York after touching at Cherbourg. The storm had been so terrific on Friday that the huge ship had to heave to for six hours. The waves even reached the promenade decks 60 feet above the load line and smashed a dozen plate-glass windows. One man in the first-class dining room was thrown in a quadruple somersault across the floor, but was unhurt. The orchestra, playing in the lounge, was thrown from the platform into a heap with the instruments.

and typical mesorthorium or radium ositiis of femur and spinal column."

The contributory cause was stated as "radium poisoning, an occupational disease."

It was learned that the next step will be for Dr. Alexander Gettier, city toxicologist, to extract the radium emanations from the bones, teeth, viscera and tumor mass.

Mrs. McDonald's normal weight was reported as 140 pounds, and at the time of her death it was said she weighed only 77 pounds.

Mrs. McDonald had been employed in the New Jersey factory of the U. S. Radium corporation and painted the faces of watch dials with a luminous paint containing a small quantity of radium. She and the other four women sued the corporation for an aggregate of $1,250,000 and in a settlement out of court each received $10,000 and costs of medical attention.

The other four women are Miss Katherine Schaud, Newark, N. J.; Mrs. Edna Hussman, Hillside, N. J.; Miss Grace Fryer, Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Albina Larice, sister of Mrs. McDonald, Orange.

IMPROVEMENTS GIRT LOCKNEY

All Utility Conveniences Are Secured

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Texas, Dec. 8.—Municipal and utility expansion that has been under way here for the past three years now presents the citizenship of Lockney with every modern convenience.

With a domestic water rate of 10 cents and an industrial rate of eight cents per thousand gallons, city officials have been able to show a profit on the water system that cost approximately $75,000. Practically every portion of the city has city water available since a $30,000 extension was made in 1927. This cheap water rate has encouraged the people in maintaining beautiful lawns and gardens as well as being a boon to the industries located here.

Following the water extension program, a $55,000 bond issue was voted for the installation of a modern sewer system. The sewer disposal plant has been in use for the past two years and city officials declare that from a financial standpoint the sewer system is one of the best investments the city of Lockney has ever made.

Civic growth and development caused one of the major utility companies to extend its lines until practically every industry, business house and residence are now supplied with an unlimited amount of electricity for power and lighting.

Local business leaders say that the entrance of one of the major gas distributing companies into this territory during 1927 will be the largest factor in the development of Floyd county due to the irrigation possibilities presented by supplying cheap fuel. Nearly every house in Lockney has natural gas available, but local citizens are depending upon increased agricultural profits from irrigation farming as the major factor of development directly caused by the presence of a plentiful supply of cheap fuel.

In an effort to make Lockney a better place in which to live, civic leaders launched a campaign in 1929 for a municipal auditorium, swimming pool and community park. Their efforts were rewarded and today there is an auditorium with a seating capacity of 700 together with a ladies' clubroom with space provided for a community library. The building is located at the end of one of the major streets in the city, on a plat of ground that city officials say will be made into one of the most beautiful parks on the South Plains. Athletic fields and a bathing pool with adequate bath house facilities are provided on the plat with the auditorium.

A campaign for more paving, more sidewalks and additional municipal improvements has been started and prospects are good for 1930 to be a banner year along municipal improvement lines, in Lockney.

D.A.R. Chapter Has Lovely Luncheon And Program

Mrs. Fred T. Couper, regent of Major Francis Grice chapter, D. A. R., and Mrs. E. T. Duff, state chairman of patriotic education, featured the program of the Major Francis Grice chapter luncheon given at the country club Saturday with their interesting talks on the outstanding events of the 30th annual state convention of the national society of the D. A. R. which met recently in Beaumont.

In the dining room, where about 40 members attended the luncheon, the hostesses had arranged a beautiful setting. The wall lights were covered with evergreen leaves and red berries. On the table ivy trailed the length of the cloth and bunches of mistletoe and red berries alternated with red candles in crystal holders, adorned with fluffy green tulle bows. Place cards were in Christmas design and favors were boxes of bonbons that were stands for little frosted Christmas trees.

During the business session, reports were given by all officers. Mrs. Louis Gould, treasurer, reported 101 members in the chapter. After Mrs. E. T. Duff's report for the patriotic education committee, the chapter voted to give $5 to the local children of American Revolution chapter, for their Christmas box to the Tamassee school in South Carolina, a mountain school supported entirely by the D. A. R.

In her report for the conservation committee, Mrs. C. Joline urged the members to keep account of the trees and shrubs planted this year. Mrs. Clifford Deaton's report on the work of the flag committee was of much interest and when she had told of the presentation of a flag to the City View school, the members voted to present the day nursery with one.

New members were introduced at the close of the business session, the chapter greeting Miss Mary Dean Smith and Mesdames D. C. Copelin, Guy Rogers, J. D. Robertson and John Hampton.

Mrs. E. C. deMontel read a lovely group of original Christmas verses on the program and Mrs. Charles Reid gave a clever reading.

Mrs. Couper urged that as many members as possible attend the next state convention to be held at Waco, saying that "inspiration comes from information," and she gave briefly the ideals and purposes to which the D. A. R. is pledged. The society is an organization to combat materialism, fascism and Sovietism. Many of its works were told and among others, the erection of the La Salle monument at Navasota, Texas, was of much interest. The D. A. R. and the citizens of Navasota are cooperating in the erection of this figure which will be ready for unveiling after Feb. 1. It is built in Navasota as the city nearest the spot where La Salle was murdered. "Memorial Hour," as described by Mrs. Couper, was impressive and beautiful. Historical evening was featured by an address by Mrs. D. E. Baker of Abilene on the "Meaning of History," after which Judge Leon Sonfield of Beaumont talked on the "Federal Constitution and Its Relation to State Constitution." Reports were made from 60 active D. A. R. chapters in Texas. Mrs. Couper also gave a vivid description of the forest which the Texas D. A. R. can claim as the first D. A. R. forest, located just 35 miles out from Beaumont. Under the auspices of the better films committee of the state organization, a motion picture short feature, setting forth proper use and respect for the flag will be prepared shortly for "trailer" use throughout the country.

Mrs. E. T. Duff reported on the second annual convention of the Children of the American Revolution, saying that out of the six state officers for this organization, four were present at the state conference. There are 13 chapters in Texas, six of which were represented. Texas chapters have a membership of 358 and in the whole United States there are 32,000 members. The slogan in Texas, is "A C. A. R. society for every D. A. R. organization."

Mrs. Duff told of the many enjoyable social features given to honor the delegates, describing the wonderful flowers used—orchids, poinsettas, all other wonderful tropical blossoms.

Hostesses who made the Saturday event so enjoyable an occasion were Mesdames Fred T. Couper, E. C. deMontel, Walter Cline, S. H. Burnside, E. T. Duff, R. E. Ducker, F. W. Fischer and Misses Mary Anne and Sara Sue Denny.

Covers were laid for Mesdames S. Taylor Buchanan, W. L. Herblin, R. B. Kerbow, C. Joline, E. C. deMontel, Paul J. Pond, Walter Bachman, Roy H. King, F. W. Fischer, Charles H. Reid, S. Y. Ferguson, Guy Rogers, Clark, A. Wilcox, George W. Truitt, Eleanor D. Pace, Ben M. Bell, Ruth S. Cain, Laura Bristol, J. R. Hyatt, W. H. Sanford, Charles Borland, Fred T. Couper, Louis H. Gould, J. L. Jackson, E. T. Duff, E. B. Bailey, C. E. Deaton, A. C. Ludlam, L. O. Landon, J. L. Waggoner, D. C. Copelin, Misses Mary Dean Smith, Mary Anne Denney and Sara Sue Denney and two visitors, Mrs. Mary K. Hartson, mother of Mrs. Guy Rogers, and Mrs. E. A. Sterling, mother of Mrs. Jasper Ferguson.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Signs that read "silence." The sound of footsteps on inlaid linoleum.

A clean odor of anesthetics; glimpses of great bowls of flowers beside sick beds. Lights flashing above doors and nurses hurrying to answer calls.

The sound of a woman sobbing aloud. All the gilt gone off the gingerbread for a little while. But what thankfulness goes up from one's heart that pain is not eternal.

A bright-faced young man rolling himself briskly down a corridor; he is ordering two packs of cigarets for a man in one of the rooms. Directly one sees him again and hears him telephoning a home; a man in room No....... wants his wife to bring him a certain magazine.

Waiting and waiting and waiting in the sitting room. Why can't one read a magazine? Somehow the eyes will not focus. Since the white covered figure went up on the elevator, one's eye burn down the corridor, waiting to see it return.

That boy rolls himself again into the sitting room. He moves as swiftly as one could on one's feet.

A doctor comes in and speaks to him about his cast. Tells him how to sit and speaks of walking. "Do you mean I can walk on crutches?" the boy asks. "No," replies the doctor. "In a few days you can walk out there on your own legs."

As the doctor goes out and one looks at the boy, he says, "That's good news." "How long have you been in a cast?" one asks. "Four weeks," he says. "Hurt in the fields." "Did you suffer?" "Terribly," he says, "for about 15 days and then no more."

You hear of a man who has been in the hospital for six months—broken back. Little operations seem so trivial. But when they're operations on your own dear ones, it is different.

Getting almost sundown. There's a clink of dishes. The dumb waiter has come and nurses in blue and white frocks are hurrying with trays to different rooms.

Twenty minutes they said! It's been 40 minutes now. Can something be wrong?

Then from the swinging doors into the elevator, rolls the stretcher. One drops magazine and gloves and grasping for a coat, hurries down the hall to meet a nurse who moves as rapidly as if she had bad news. Can anything be wrong?

"Everything's just fine," she says. "The doctor wants to see you." And one rushes to the doctor ready to embrace him. Everything is just fine!

And now since everything is all right, what a pleasure to look forward to the Duncan dancers Monday afternoon and evening at the forum clubhouse. That is one place one may go and feel the joy of life in rhythm and grace.

Surely there will be a full house there. Only once in many years does one have the opportunity to see a treat like this one the forum has brought. It's time to rally round.

Modern Women Blamed for Loss Romantic Love

Why Can't the Modern Woman See That She Is Killing the Goose That Lays the Golden Eggs When She Places a Commercial Value on Every Endearment a Man Utters, Cries Dorothy Dix.

I often wonder that the modern woman does not perceive that she is killing the goose that lays the golden egg by her attitude toward men. By which I mean to say that it is women themselves who are destroying the things that they value most in life. It is women's hands that are tearing to tatters the chiffons of romance and sentiment and idealism in which men have always clothed them. It is women who are stifling tenderness and slaying chivalry in the hearts of men. It is women who are doing away with all the graces and sweetness that made charm in the relationship between men and women and that incidentally lured men into matrimony.

For women are making men afraid of them and what they will do to them and that makes men cold and cautious in dealing with the fair sex. Even Romeo watches his step and counts the calories in his sweet talk when he keeps a date with Juliet nowadays.

Women don't like this. They complain bitterly that there are no impassioned lovers. They say that young men are so afraid they may compromise themselves by their attentions to a girl that 10 minutes after meeting her they serve notice on her that they have no intention of marrying and that even one's fiance's letters read like a communication about the state of the stock market instead of being an outpouring of burning affection.

And women don't seem to see that they are to blame for this state of affairs and that the reason for it is because they have taken love and lovemaking and even marriage out of the realm of sentiment and planed a price tag on them and commercialized them. They have made men pay through the nose for romantic dalliance and idle words said on a moonlight night, and that is why Dan Cupid, who is no bill collector, has packed up his arrows and fled the scene.

Thus have many women been cut out of the pleasure and excitement of playing the love game, for no man dares take a hand in that now unless he is ready to pay up if the lady calls his bluff.

In our mother's time it is doubtful if there was any woman so unattractive that some man at some time didn't whisper soft nothings in her ear and tell her what beautiful eyes she had and how different she was from all other women and how the first time he ever saw her he felt that she was the only woman who ever really understood him and how sweet life would be if he could have such a woman as she by his side and who didn't send her gooey songs and slushy poetry.

But now it is a common thing to have an attractive woman in her 30s or 40s tell you that she never had a beau in her life and that the nearest approach to sentiment she has ever heard from any man is when her boss said: "Miss Pothooks, you certainly are a peach of a stenographer and I don't know how I would get along without you."

The reason for this is, of course, that men are afraid to make love to a girl unless they are prepared to lead her to the altar. For over their heads dangles the sword of the breach-of-promise suit. They have seen Juliet cashing in too often on Romeo's unguarded vows to take any chances themselves.

Now, of course, every woman yearns to be deeply and truly loved and to feel that some man is mad about her, but synthetic love is better than no love at all, and every woman would rather have been philandered with than to have been passed over entirely. The flirtations give her a tag end of romance at least to tuck away in her memory to keep her from feeling that she was wholly lacking in attraction to men.

Also, many women who have good jobs with fat pay envelopes and who are interested in their business or professions don't want to marry, but they do enjoy the society of men, which they might have if the predatory women hadn't made feminine companionship such a hazardous and expensive luxury for men to indulge themselves in.

And there is the matter of love letters. Men used to pour forth their souls to their lady loves in beautiful poetic letters that were like the beating of a heart in one's hand. There are love letters that have come down through the ages to us as gems of literature, and in the old days every woman had packets of love letters, tied with blue ribbon, hidden away among her treasures that she took out and read when she was old and that brought her girlhood flooding back upon her once more. Grandma wore grandpa's letters under her laces on her breast.

But the love letter has become as extinct as the dodo. The modern youth when away from his sweetie communicates with her by radio or wireless or telegraph or he dictates it to a stenographer, and if the modern girl should put her steady's letter above her heart she would think she had an ice pack on and get a chill.

Why? Because women have made men afraid to write love letters. They have seen too many people snickering as they read some man's impassioned maunderings in the newspapers and they know none but the foolhardy put down in black and white on paper the sentiments that seem so sweet and noble when they are written and that sound such idiotic twaddle when they are read aloud in court or appear in print.

Worse still, women are keeping men from marrying by demanding so much alimony that it makes matrimony not only a gamble in happiness but the most risky financial speculation they can engage in.

Under the present laws a man can marry a girl who makes no effort in any way to be a good wife. She can be lazy, extravagant, high-tempered, nagging and make his life a torment to him, yet she can force him to support her as long as he lives. And, such being the case, it is not strange that prudent men are shying off more and more from the altar.

These are facts which I respectfully submit to my sister women. And I would also call their attention to what happened to the greedy woman who killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

STUNNING TWEED FROCK
Pattern 1794

This smart sports model consists of separate jacket and skirt. The pointed revers of the collar and the unusual closure of the overblouse make the frock quite different. Decidedly slimming, too, because of the feeling of length given by the button trimming and front skirt pleat. Side pleats lend additional freedom and swing to the skirt.

Design 1794 would be stunning fashioned of tweed or jersey. Mixtures of browns and beiges always look well in this type of frock. The collar and vestee may be made of satin, pique or linen, in white or beige.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch material and ⅝ yard trimming.

receipt of fifteen cents (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size wanted.

The new winter fashion book is ready for delivery. Price 15 cents, but only 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to The Record News Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Epworth League Members Hear Splendid Talks

"Women of the World," was the subject for the program of the Epworth young people Sunday evening at Floral Heights Methodist church.

After the devotional, Miss Laura Mae Costly gave the first talk, telling of facts taken from an interview with Miss Esther Case, formerly a national officer in the Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church who personally visited the people described. Miss Costly compared the real home life of women in a Christian land with the so-called home life of these women and told what the mission schools have done to change the status of these women.

Miss Lois Corbin talked on "Women in South America," selecting her material from a report given by Miss Mabel K. Howell, who went as a jubilee fraternal messenger to Brazil. Miss Corbin said there are 5,000 members of the Woman's Missionary society in Brazil and that the majority of these societies are led by women of ability who have been educated in the mission schools. The illiteracy rate for 20 republics of South America is 75 per cent and is greater among the women because of unequal educational opportunities. Large numbers of women in South America occupy places of leadership who have not been reached by Protestantism, Miss Howell reported, and the tendency of South American women seemed toward spiritualism and theosophy. These women present the greatest challenge to the Protestant churches in South America, she said.

Miss Mary Hyatt gave an interesting story of a cultured Latin man and wife who told in an interview how much their home life had been influenced by Dr. John McPherson Lanker, who was at one time president of Granberry college in South America.

A lovely piano number was given by Miss Katherine Hawley and Christmas hymns, which are to be sung as Christmas carols, were practiced by the young people.

The meeting closed with sentence prayers, led by Miss Estelle McPhail and closed by Mrs. Joe Richker.

W. M. Cason, 1806 Huff street, who underwent an emergency operation for acute appendicitis at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital Saturday is reported to be resting well.

Forum To Serve Tea After Dance Matinee

The Isadora Duncan dancers matinee on Monday afternoon will be one of the outstanding social events of the season. At least a dozen of Wichita Falls' leading society matrons are planning matinee parties for which seats will be reserved.

Tea will be served in the attractively decorated Spanish tea room for those who make reservations. Christmas decorations and lighted red tapers will make a beautiful background for the affair.

School children who show their tickets at school will be dismissed from their classes in time to attend the performance.

The success scored by these youthful beautiful dancers in Boston was so instantaneous and marked that the management immediately sought them for a second week's engagement in June.

"Little Tamara," the gifted "pet" of the group, is an elf come to life—a most intriguing child of 13 who fascinates her audience with her grace in the Russian Girl Scout number.

The evening performance will begin at 8:15 o'clock and the matinee will be given at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Lindsay Calls Council Meet Tuesday

Mrs. R. F. Lindsay, state president of Texas Federation of Women's clubs, has called an executive board meeting at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, Dec. 10 at the Woman's club in Fort Worth, and at 11 o'clock on the same morning, a president's council composed of all the district presidents of the state will be held. At this meeting, the state board will be completed.

Mrs. Ben G. Oneal will attend as president of the first district. Wichita Falls members of the board at present are Mesdames W. W. Cook, James C. Berney, Wiley Robertson, O. T. Gorsline, Ben G. Oneal, W. B. Hamilton and C. W. Snider.

THE PEOPLE VS. KAMINSKY

Daily Editorial

THE Kaminsky family is again united. Reuben has just come home—in a coffin.

He sinned and retribution has collected wages in full—with usury added.

A fellow convict at Sing Sing is his assassin. But the people of the state of New York must stand indicted as accessories before the fact.

Reuben was 17 years old. He was 16, when located at Los Angeles and brought back to Brooklyn to plead guilty of payroll robbery

And for that theft he received a penitentiary sentence of seven years. The camels escape, but woe betide the gnats!

No evidence was adduced that the lad was incorrigible; no testimony was presented that he had previously broken any law, and no witnesses had identified him as a neighborly rowdy, an undutiful son or a precocious ruffian.

The record apparently does not attest that his associations or his environmental handicaps were investigated.

It seems sufficient that he stole a payroll. So, regardless of the fact that the boy had hardly passed into adolescence, an enlightened community condemned Reuben to remain for seven years in daily contact with the hardest-boiled batch of rascals, bravos and yeggs behind bars.

The most notorious crooks of the continent were forthwith delegated to make a thorough job of an impulsive experiment, and complete his picaroon education.

An eminent and efficient postgraduate faculty in racketeering, forgery, murder, dope-peddling, arson, blackmail and pandering, became his tutors, and proceeded to place their devious experience and virtuosity at his command.

HE was still a logical subject for reformation—still but superficially infected when he entered our great university of felony to be inoculated, with every corrupting virus that contaminates the cell-block and destroys remorse's fiber.

High civilization abandoned his case as hopeless—at the age of 16.

Correctional agencies and humanitarianism confessed bankrupt resources and surrendered a malleable stripling—just emerged from childhood—a youngster with one visible flaw—to an institution created and reserved for society's offscourings—its killers—its werewolves—for the chronic crooks by whom the Baumes act was invoked.

He never belonged there. Sing Sing wasn't designated for his sort.

Progress does not subscribe to the pre-Dickens attitude that there should be no mitigations in punishment for the same crimes.

Hospitals do not promiscuously bed their patients amidst contagion.

Insane asylums carefully separate the incipient lunatic from the maniac. And penology fails its purpose—justice betrays its trust—when the state ruthlessly casts a possibly redemptible minor into the rubbish heap, to feed on carrion influence—to fester there.

Reuben Kaminsky is dead. But not in vain.

National sentiment, already aroused against the stupidities and barbarities which continue to blemish criminal jurisprudence, will yet carry his case to the supreme court of public opinion.

Twentieth century conscience does not concur with the Dark Ages in a belief that juvenile offenders are lost souls.

So long as every dog is entitled to his first bite, every boy, (except a capital offender) is entitled to his second chance.

O. Henry, remember, was a jailbird, too.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who steals legally is as much a thief as he who steals boldly."

The principal difference between the man who takes the law and his life in his own hands and takes what he wants, and the man who takes an unfair advantage within the law is that the former is the most courageous of the two.

Iowa Park Tires of Train Whistle Blasts

THE Iowa Park city council is to meet tonight to consider the problem of getting safe railroad crossings on some of its principal streets, and, incidentally, to see if something can be done about alleged excessive use of shrill locomotive whistles, especially during the night, when the piercing screams can be heard all over town.

Wichita Falls citizens will eagerly follow their neighboring city's progress in correcting these evils, and, insofar as the train whistle menace is concerned, we hope they obtain better results than this city has.

Some time ago it was brought out before the Wichita Falls council that certain firemen or engineers, or whatever person is responsible for those beastly midnight howls of the locomotive, were overdoing the thing and apparently toying with the deafening roars as a baby plays with a new Christmas horn. Our city council solemnly passed an ordinance against superfluous train whistle blasts, attached a penalty for the violation thereof, and then proceeded to forget that an ordinance of that kind has to be enforced. That it has not been enforced at all is perfectly evident to anyone normally sensitive. And to those few like us who are abnormally sensitive, and who furthermore are, again like us, night workers who retire sometime between 1 a. m. and daylight, the tossing and rolling abed occasioned by the clamor from the railroad yards is downright hectic proof that the railroad men care not a snap for that ordinance.

It is of course necessary that some howls be raised by the puffing switch engine as it goes about its nightly business of making up the next day's trains. It certainly ought to give some kind of warning when it nears a street crossing. But that is no justification for such consecutive blasts, at intervals of one second, that we have been hearing in this city for many, many weeks. If the engine responsible for this clamor was approaching a street corner every time it gave forth one of these blasts, street corners, it seems to us, must have been encountered every five feet.

We hope that, if the Iowa Park council enacts an ordinance against all this clatter it will learn a lesson from our shortcomings, and energetically enforce it. If we hear it is being really enforced in Iowa Park, we will have a great yearning to move over there where things are quiet. Now, Iowa Park, here's your chance!

Protection From Diphtheria

WHILE the anti-diphtheria hints recently issued by Dr. H. D. Fillmore in this newspaper are excellent ones, The Record News cannot help but wish the city health officer had said a little something about the use of diphtheria toxin anti-toxin in guarding children from this disease.

Dr. Fillmore urges particularly against children promiscuously blowing whistles and horns on display in toy stores, and recommends that a physician be called at any indisposition of the child, particularly if a "croopy" condition exists. This is excellent advice in guarding not only against diphtheria, but against any communicable disease. In the case of diphtheria, however, The Record News understands that the use of the toxin anti-toxin and similar preventatives has reached the point of being almost unanimously endorsed by the medical profession and has proved nearly 100 per cent protection against diphtheria. Such being the case, it is far more effective than could be even the most careful supervision of the child's activities.

Knowledge of toxin anti-toxin among physicians is far from new of course, but its adoption by the public has been slow, as in the case of many other medical advances, because of the rules which prevent advertising and publicity work by physicians. Diphtheria is particularly dangerous to children because it so often results fatally. Dr. Fillmore has made excellent suggestions on general measures of protecting children from the disease, but The Record News has no hesitancy in urging parents to consult the family physician about the qualities of toxin anti-toxin and similar preventatives.

Business Is Hopeful

NEVER before in history has American business showed such a determination not to be crippled by a stock market crash as has been the case in the past few weeks.

The National Association of Credit Men is the latest in the list of business organizations to insist that business is going to go forward in spite of Wall street's gyrations.

A bulletin from this organization declares that the freeing of funds formerly tied up in brokers' loans has brought about a positive improvement in the basic credit situation.

"The shakedown has done at least one good thing for business, in that it has scared away from the brokerage offices a lot of people who had no right to be spending their time and money there in the first place," adds the bulletin. "When these people resume their normal activities as depositors in savings banks and purchasers of commodities, business will quickly feel the effect of the transition."

The Faith of a Scientist

IS THIS modern age an era of doubt and broken faith? Not if you take the word of Dr. Robert A. Millikan, famous American physicist who recently won the Nobel prize.

In the current issue of The Golden Book Dr. Millikan is quoted as follows:

"I believe that one of the greatest contributions the United States ever can or ever will make to world progress will consist in furnishing an example to the world of how the religious life of a nation can evolve intelligently, inspiringly, reverently, completely divorced from all unreason, all superstition and all unwholesome emotionalism."

This, coming from a scientist, is rather significant.

Broadway Logic

She thought she knew what love was.
He did too.
Everybody thinks they know,
So few do.

Burning eyes, swaying flesh,
Quiet little dreams.
This is how it always ends—
So it seems.

Life and trembling lovers
Come to grips.
The song they call endless
Dies on their lips.
—J. WHITFIELD.

The Comeback Dandy

From J. Brooks Atkinson, the N. Y. Times critic, comes the nifty about the dramatic critic who once went out of his journalistic province and called a producer names in the paper. There was a great to-do about it, and the critic's boss urged him to apologize to the offended producer, in his column.

The bitter critic apologized in this manner: "I called the gentleman a liar it is true and he can punctuate it any way he likes."

Capsule Criticism

Entered for our Crisp Cracks from Critical Cusses Dep't.: Alexander Woollcott's sub-title on a review of a show starring Odette Myrtil, viz.: "Odette, Where Is Thy Sting?" and Heywood Broun's slip quip about the author of a new play: "He talks like a book with the pages torn out."

Heheheh!

Ann Pennington says she overheard it on the pavement between acts of a new play:

First Critic—"What do you think of the show?"

Second Critic—"I asked you first!"

A Form of Criticism

Speaking of those horrid old mean critics, at a recent First-Night Percy Hammond (now touring the world) turned to the smart alec in front of him and grumbled: "Golly, what a stupid show. It's a wonder the audience doesn't hiss it."

"You can't hiss and yawn at the same time," was the retort.

Imagine

From Edward Dean Sullivan's book, "Sold Out" (Vanguard Press), comes this stirring paragraph: A customer's man of one of the largest brokerage houses in New York was on jury duty during the three worst days of the panic. His customers were being wiped out for millions; his company was involved in the greatest test of its 50 years of existence, and he was called upon to listen attentively to a case involving $88.

Gag

Mary Horan, who clicked in the big-time manner in the new musical hit, "Sons o' Guns," passes along the story about the movie director and his squaw who believed in utter candor. She returned from the week-end at Atlantic City and he met her at the station.

"Well, darling," she said, after she greeted him fervently, "I've got another confession to make. I've been unfaithful again."

"Then we're even!" he teehee'd. "Remember all those dishes you left in the sink for me to wash? Well, they're still there!"

Pepigrams

Charles G. Shaw, who recently deserted Broadway for London, is a bachelor. The following are some of the reasons why: The most successful lover, nine times out of ten, is the most successful liar . . . In any affair of the heart the greatest error a woman can commit is in allowing the man to realize that she loves him before he realizes that he loves her . . . A man is far mor attracted to the girl who confesses she knows few men than to the one who is forever boasting of her numerous acquaintances . . . The minute a conversation between a man and a woman grows impersonal, likewise does it grow uninteresting . . . Marriage is Love's hangover.

Bravo!

Willard Keefe says that Harry Rosenthal, whose sensational success in "June Moon" is now well known, has been annoyed by people who keep accusing him of being ritzy. The other night a pill approached Rosenthal and chirped: "So you're getting high-hat, huh?"

"Lissen, you!" thundered the fed-up actor. "If I were high-hat, you'd be the first guy I'd snub!"

Incidentally

Rosenthal's aggregations recall the description of a well-know Broadway snob:

"You wouldn't know him any more. He's the type who gets dizzy from lookin' down on people."

For Nora:

Without so much as a by-your-leave,
I'm wearing my heart on my sleeve
To mock the monkeys who won't believe
That I've found a face that haunts me.

Go hang this sign where the arch-
light plays,
In the hideaways and the bright
cafes,
On boulevards and in alleways:
I've Found a Woman Who Wants Me.
—DUNCAN UNDERHILL

People I Could Choke

Girls you don't know who tell Edgar Selwyn, the producer, that the reason you blackballed his show, "Other Men's Wives" (which closes this week), was over "a personal reason" (wonder why all the other lads panned it?) . . . People who spend a nickel to call you when you're busiest, when a letter costing two cents would be just as unimportant . . . Restaurant owners who sell sandwiches as thin as a Broadway friendship . . . Persons who argue that it is time a new word for "whoopee" was invented (the answer to which is: "All right. For instance?") . . . Commercial photographers who take flashlights at premieres (a new racket)—and who, when you ask them "what paper do you represent?" say "The Herald Tribune"—and those annoying persons with wet palms.

Things to Worry about

"No man who has hung around Broadway for more than five years," says Damon Runyon, "can truthfully say he has more than three friends."

Veriwell, sir. Name yours.

And—

Incidentally, too many sentimentalists and other gullible persons really believe "friends" are assets. We found out long ago that "friends" are the ones who ask for favors, theater passes, baseball tickets, good write-ups—and when you refuse them, they either give you Dirty Looks of a piece of their alleged minds.

So far as we are concerned Friends are not important. After all, all you really need are six of them to serve as pallbearers and if there are not six pallbearers at your funeral how the hell will you know?

Marriage for Two - -

By Arthur Somers Roche

Shortly after an interview in which Helen Wilson tells Larry Tracy that she wishes to break their engagement so that she can marry the wealthy, middle-aged Frank Burton, and Larry swears, in pique, to marry the first girl who will have him, he rescues from a park bench a starved but beautiful girl, Joyce Carroll.

A few days later they are married, agreeing that the marriage shall in reality be nothing more than a friendship.

Of his wife Larry knows nothing, except her name, although a man named Ratty Rogan attempts unsuccessfully to tell him something of her past.

Shortly they sail for Biarritz in order to escape the notoriety their marriage has caused. At a smart restaurant they meet Paul Weedon, whom Joyce dislikes at sight; Billy Valdemagara, a red-headed Spaniard, and Jeanne Masell, the undisputed social leader of the colony.

At the Casino Joyce gives a woman of the demimonde 40,000 francs and then tells Larry she lost the money at the gambling tables.

Larry Seeks Information

He was not stingy; in fact, he held money rather more lightly than most people who have never needed to work to acquire it. For, difficult of credence though it may be, and not at all in consonance with the shirt-sleeves to shirt-sleeves axiom, people who have inherited money are far less generous than those who have earned it. This is because those who have inherited wealth realize that their importance is predicated solely upon their possessions, whereas those who have earned money are wont to believe that their achivements make them important, and these latter also have confidence in their ability to make more money.

That Joyce should have lost or given away 40,000 francs would not have mattered to Larry. But that she should lie about the affair was something to arouse indignation. And that indignation would have been translated into instant resentful speech but for the fact that the lie held something of mystery in its brazenness. Those vague suspicions to which Rogan's interrupted tale had given birth were revivified now.

"Lost it all?" he said. He was proud of his light tone and his bantering smile. "What a gambler you are. Well, then, our cabby profits by your loss."

He gave the driver a 50-franc note, and, of course, the man had no change. He drove off gayly, praying his Basque gods that they would send other mad Americans his way.

Larry threw open the gate and they passed into the villa grounds. He felt his wife's eyes upon him.

"I—I'm sorry," she ventured.

"Sorry? What about?" he asked.

"The money," she replied.

He glanced at her. "It was yours," he said shortly.

"I know, but—after all your generosity—."

"That tennis court could do with a bit of rolling." He changed the subject abruptly. "Ever play?"

"I'm afraid I'm rusty," she said.

"So am I—I haven't had a racquet in my hand for two years. Want to try—tomorrow?"

"I'd love it," she enthusiastically said.

The Enigma

He stopped to speak to the gardener, and when he resumed his interrupted progress to the house she had disappeared. So—she played tennis. Well, nothing surprising in that, was there? She could not always have been on the verge of destitution. Those shabby clothes she had worn when he first saw her had been well made, had obviously been expensive when purchased. And anyway, he reminded himself with a touch of self-contempt at his own snobbery, tennis wasn't a game played only by people of affluence. Probably she played golf; maybe, for all he knew, could drive a motor, or an airplane. How did he know what she could do, or might have done?

He was in his bedroom now, and through the partly open door he could hear water running in a tub, could hear her halting efforts at conversation with the maid.

"Larry," she called.

It was the first time she had called him by his nickname. Indeed, he could not remember that she had ever given him any title when she addressed him. He had called her Joyce, but it seemed to him that she had carefully avoided any salutation to him.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Which is which? Does froid mean hot, chaud mean cold?"

"The other way around," he laughed.

"No wonder I was parboiled this morning," she responded. "Froid—cold. Chaud—hot. Much obliged."

Light-hearted, gay, inconsequential—this was a different woman from the girl whom he had picked up, starving, from the bench on the park side of Fifth avenue less than a month ago. Could any woman, even the most superb actress in the world, have just lied and committed deceit and be as gay as she now was?

It didn't seem possible. But there were many impossibilities about her; or, at least, many incredibilities. There was no question about the fact of her having lied to him a few minutes ago. After all, some people have active consciences and others have none at all. She might very well be of this latter class. A lie uttered and accepted was a thing promptly to be forgotten with a girl like her.

Larry's Admission

A girl like her! He sat abruptly down and began to ponder the situation, and as he did so a wry smile curled his lips not too pleasantly. There were just as many varieties of fools in the world as there were varieties of a highly-advertised pickle, and he had been all of them.

But there had been certain extenuation for his first foolishness. At least, there had been the cheap extenuation of pique and hurt vanity. But to continue with this farce, this mockery of a sacrament, was impossible save under one condition. That condition was that he should fall in love with his wife.

Now, assure himself though he might that there was no danger of this, he knew that there was grave danger. He had not been inspired to this morning's kiss by the mere sight of her displayed beauty. True, she had been provocative in her beach garb, but that had not been enough to make him seize her, press his lips against her impassive mouth.

He was by way of falling in love with her. His jaw set as he made this admission to himself. Well, before this beginning descent became an actual tumble, he would find out something about Joyce.

He couldn't ask her. He couldn't go to her and say that he thought it was time he knew something of her. And the only reason he couldn't do this was because there was only one question he wished to ask. Disguise it as he might, the fact would be patent, with his first words, that he wanted to know whether or not she was a virtuous woman.

Damn it, that was what he wanted to know. And all he wanted to know. Why had he let silly chivalrous scruples prevent him from listening to that man Rogan? After all, a girl who marries a complete stranger is not like a girl whom one has known all one's life. Instinctively one knows that certain women are all that may be demanded. But strangers—marriage was a serious business, and if he had any thought of making this farce of his a real thing, then he should know, had every right to know, to ascertain from any source whatsoever, everything about Joyce that a husband might wish to know about a wife.

He had overlooked an opportunity with Rogan. Well, there was another opportunity right here in Biarritz. Joyce wouldn't have given money to an utter stranger; or, if she had done so, she would not have found it necessary to lie about it.

She had left the gambling table with a woman; she had returned minus some forty-odd thousand francs. Why? Well, maybe the woman in question would tell why. And he had every right to ask. It wasn't as though he had married—well, Helen Wilson. In that case he would undergo torture before permitting any one else to become privy to his doubts of his own wife. But a stranger, whose actions were mysterious and who lied about them. . .

So he salved his conscience for intending to do a shabby thing. He called to Joyce that he was going for a stroll, and the pretty Basque maid with the hard voice appeared in the communicating doorway to inform him that madame was in the bath. Sounds of splashing and a voice raised in a surprisingly sweet contralto would have given him the same information.

"Tell madame that I'll be back in an hour," he said.

To the Casino

Then, guiltily, like a small boy bent on petty meanness, he ran downstairs and out into the garden. As he emerged therefrom to the street, the crack of a whip, a hoarse cry, and the clattering of hoofs stopped him. The cabby to whom he had given the unprecedented fee of 50 francs had been lurking in wait. Did monsieur desire him? He would drive monsieur to San Sebastian and back for the sheer joy of it would give him. Behold the fastest, sturdiest horse in al lthe Basque country. But no? Monsieur preferred to walk. Dieu, but all Americans were mad. Eh bien, tomorrow, perhaps?

Down the steep hill to the sea, the action of walking somehow enabling him to divert his mind from thoughts of the thing he was about to do, Larry hastily strode. He came at length to the Municipal Casino, entered, checked his hat and entered the salon de chimin de fer.

An attendant recognized the American gentleman who had lost rather debonairly earlier today. He accosted Larry. Monsieur Tracy—he had consulted the register and found out Larry's name—wished to play? Ah, but a seat would be found for him instantly at the big table.

Larry waved aside his friendly offer. He smiled inwardly at the man's courtesy. The season was young and the big fish had not swum into the net so attractively laid out, so men like himself, who could lose a few hundred dollars with equanimity, were to be courted and flattered and cajoled into taking part in the games. Casinos must live, after all.

He strolled about the room, taking it in more thoroughly than this afternoon. The smaller tables, where five pitiful francs was the minimum stake, held his attention briefly. Here were shabby Italians, Spaniards, nondescripts, awaiting each coup with a dreadful intensity. Men and women, of obviously low professions, almost spat at each other in rage at winnings or losings, only to offer cheery encouragement a moment later. A woman once beautiful addressed Larry. Just 10 francs that she might continue playing . . . A man, furtive for all his youth, wished a cigaret . . .

He turned away, disheartened, momentarily miserable. Gambling was fun; it was all very well for those who could afford it to pass away a few hours risking their money on the turn of a card. But fun may also be vice, and surely these degraded folk were addicts to a vice as deadly, and as insidious in its beginnings, as any drug.

And then, at the boule table, in the outer room, he came upon her.

PHILLIPS

Mr. Rockefeller (looking out the window of his home at Pocantico and seeing the estate snow covered): Ugh! Take it away!

Secretary: Take what away, sir?

Mr. Rockefeller (pointing with great aversion): Look! Snow! Br-r-r!

Secretary: I suppose you'll want to go South at once, sir?

Mr. Rockefeller. Just look at all that snow! Br-r-r! Can't we leave right away? Ugh!

Secretary: I had arranged for us to leave in a few days but I guess we can charter a special and go the first thing tomorrow.

Mr. Rockefeller (very anxiously): Good! Just look at that snow. It's buried every fairway. I wish we'd left last week. I had a feeling we might not get away before it snowed. How about the packing?

Secretary: Nearly everything's ready, sir.

Mr. Rockefeller: Got all the clubs in the golf bag?

Secretary: I think so.

Mr. Rockefeller: Sure that new putter is in it?

Secretary: I've checked up on it

Mr. Rockefeller: Better see that plenty of balls are packed, too. They charge more for 'em in Florida.

Secretary: Yes sir.

Mr. Rockefeller: And these celluloid tees that fellow sent me. Be sure you don't forget them.

Secretary: I'll take care of everything, sir.

Mr. Rockefeller: I'll want woolen sweaters and a good windbreaker, you know. A cold wind whips across that Ormond course some days.

Secretary: How about straw helmets?

Mr. Rockefeller: Oh. I've plenty of those down at Ormond, but you might make sure I've enough gloves. I do wish we could get going at once. Just look at that snow. Br-r-r-r.

The Next Day

Secretary: Well, everything's set. Are you all ready?

Mr. Rockefeller: I certainly am. Look at that snow!

Secretary: Here's the motor. I'll bundle you in carefully.

Mr. Rockefeller: You're sure everything's been packed?

Secretary: Everything.

Mr. Rockefeller: You haven't overlooked anything?

Secretary: Nothing.

Mr. Rockefeller (suddenly): How about new dimes?

Secretary (guiltily): Why, er, er—

Mr. Rockefeller: I knew we'd forget something.

CULTIVATE TOLERANCE

Tolerance is one of our greatest virtues. Observe the people about you, and you will find that those whom you like best are the ones who are most tolerant of your views and actions. Apply the acid test of friendship. To which would you be willing to give money in case of need? As a rule, we hesitate about loaning money to those who are fault-finding and eternally picking the world and all that's in it to pieces, when we are quite willing to help out those who are not so bitter. If anyone is critically intolerant with a tongue that stings like a lash, we avoid him.

It is possible to form a mental habit of being "again" anything. As people grow older, unless they are careful, these tendencies deepen like wrinkles on their faces. One can, however, learn to form a habit of trying to understand and to praise. Good habits form chains that are just as strong as bad ones. Man is by nature a constructor, a builder, a doer, and he feels the happiest when engaged in constructive things.

I believe that everyone should cultivate the gift of tolerance. See that it keeps growing. Try to feel friendly toward more people and more interests. As you know them, you will cease to condemn them for we usually condemn that about which we know little.

Most people have had their tolerances and intolerances built into them for many years. If they were born among Americans, they consider it "good" to sit on a chair. If they were born among the Japanese, they consider it "bad" to sit on a chair and "good" to sit on the floor. If they had been born among the Eskimos they would think it "good" to tear their meat with their fingers. If they were born in this country they would use a fork for the meat and save their fingers for the potato chips.

Why be intolerant of others simply because they believe differently? It only hurts ourselves. Intolerance is a destructive emotion that interferes with digestion, peace of mind and general physical well being. The person that is friendly toward everyone and an enemy to no one is likely to be joyous, hale and well able to digest his food. The person who is eternally intolerant is likely to suffer from nervous breakdowns, hyperacidity and melancholia. Tolerance pays in a physical way as well as in a physical wal as well as in mental happiness.

It is well to remember that there is a difference between the tolerance which is based on simply not caring, and the true tolerance of understanding.

Tolerance on our part always attracts others to us. A tolerant person is generous toward the beliefs of others. Here is a French saying well worth considering. "To understand all is to pardon all."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pay for Work.

Question:—Wm. B. F. writes: "Kindly tell me if your pay for the valuable work you are doing for humanity comes from the Rockefeller Foundation Fund?"

Answer—My health articles are syndicated through hundreds of newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. Each newspaper pays a different amount for these articles, according to the size of the paper. My real pay, however, comes mostly from reading the thousands of letters, such as yours, showing appreciation. There is no association, firm, fund, foundation or institution of any kind which lends me the slightest amount of financial support. Mine is mostly one man's job, but I get a great deal of real satisfaction out of it.

Glandular Imbalance

Question:—G. asks—"How can a person get fat and a fat person get thin on the same diet?"

Answer—Such a tendency is caused by a difference in glandular functioning. A special fasting and diet treatment will often correct either of these improper balances of the functional activity of the ductless glands.

Spleenic Tumor

Question:—M. D. W. writes—"My doctor tells me I have a fibroid tumor on the spleen. Will you please tell me the nature of a fibroid tumor and does it ever become cancerous? Are there any treatments to be taken that will arrest its growth?"

Answer—A fibroid tumor any place in the body is caused by a kind of fibrous growth through the tissues affected. These undoubtedly may become cancerous in time if they reach a certain stage of degeneration. A spleenic tumor can sometimes be removed by surgery or its growth arrested through a specific fasting and diet treatment.

PHIL SCOTT AND PORAT IN TWELVE ROUND BOUT TONIGHT

The Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Winning Combination

When a touch of frost creeps in the air
And the northwind's roaring bugles blare,
When the long gray evenings gather down
From the hills that shadow the walled in town,
When the dripping eaves in a bleak refrain
Chant the wail of a winter's rain,
O, where is the poet left to sing
A song of dream in the land of spring?
A song of dream that may compare
To a pipe—a book—and an easy chair?

When the wild blasts howl and the shadows flit
Over the wall where the fire is lit,
When the snow drifts deep and the driving rain
Sings its song at the window pane,
When the dim world lies in the pit of night
And the gray ghosts shriek in the mad gale's flight,
O, where is the poet left to praise
The gleam and dream of the summer days?
The gleam and dream that may compare
To a pipe—a book—and an easy chair?

A Weak Spot

One of the weakest spots in football as a game is that the team taking a daring offensive and trying to score in a close game is also taking the major risk and is likely at any spot to run into serious trouble.

If both teams played for safety there would be no action and little interest. Yet any team that takes a scoring chance also takes a chance of blowing the ball game then and there. There are certain times, of course, when no such chances should be tried—but there are many other times when they must be tried if one is to score. Often under such conditions the defensive team will pick up a touchdown it has hardly earned by its play.

The element of chance and luck in modern football is terrific. The better team doesn't always win by a long shot. The better team can often be rather decisively beaten.

The Winner's Chance

The best tip now is that the winner of the Von Porat-Scott meeting will get a shot at Sharkey this winter at Miami. The survivor here will then be all set to take a running jump at Max Schmeling for the title. The German is in a peculiar spot. He hasn't done any fighting for many months, he has been completely out of the picture and yet he is still something to be considered before they figure up the final returns. There is a chance that Tuffy Griffiths will also slip into the meeting by taking on the next winner early in January, thereby providing a double elimination before the Florida party breaks. Some one is sure to be fitted out for the crown this year unless they all break a neck or a back.

Over-Swinging

Those golfers who bother considerably at one time or another about over-swinging are merely chasing a shadow. The big trouble is under-swinging, the result of tension and tightening up. There is no harm in over-swinging—or rather in taking a full swing where the clubhead dips down below the horizontal.

A swing of this sort indicates wrist and arm action that isn't locked up through stiffness.

One trouble with the three-quarter swing is that it is too often accompanied by stiff wrists and an over-tensioned body. It usually means restricted action where ease and freedom are destroyed.

When it comes to a matter of schedules Carnegie Tech did no piking in picking Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Southern California. The latter game is still to be played, which proves again that when you think the football season is over, you are all wrong. The football season is apparently never over.

If you think it will be over after December passes, get with a set of Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Purdue camp followers and then wire your answer.

It used to be possible to stop a football fan by tossing a golf nut at him. But even that drastic remedy is no longer any use. It is now that golf nut who suddenly whirls and attempts to break away.

Hornsby Voted The Most Valuable Man

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. (UP)—Rogers Hornsby, Chicago Cubs' second baseman, has been voted the National league's most valuable player for 1929 it was announced today.

The honor, which is the sixth and last official award to be given by the National league, carried with it a bronze medal and cash prize of $1,000.

Hornsby previously won the award in 1925 as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals and is the only player to take the honor for a second time.

WINNER MAY MEET SHARKEY

Norwegian Boxer Is Hard Puncher

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. (AP)—Ousted from Madison Square garden by the pedal pushers of the six-day bicycle race game last week, representatives of the cauliflower industry return in force this week with two boxing carnivals.

The first—tomorrow night—finds Phil Scott, the fighting fireman from London, battling Otto von Porat, heavy punching Norwegian heavyweight, in a 12-round bout for sweet charity's sake and, incidentally, for the possible chance of meeting Jack Sharkey at Miami in February. Friday night, Ruby Goldstein, apparently back in the form that made him a formidable contender for the lightweight championship a few years ago, will take on Jimmy McLarnin who punches just about as hard as Goldstein ever did.

Big Bout of Season

The Scott-Von Porat struggle looms as one of the most important of the winter season and officials of the Christmas fund show have added an additional lure for boxing fans by announcing that the referee will be William Harrison Dempsey, Jack Dempsey for fistic purposes.

Because of his tremendous punching power, Von Porat has been established a slight favorite over Scott, but there is plenty of English money that says Scott will outbox and outspeed the big Norwegian and gallop away with the decision.

Semi-Final Windup

Maxie Rosenbloom, whose clownish tendencies in the ring have nothing to do with his capabilities as a boxer and fighter, meets Julius (Yale) Okun, another New York light heavyweight, in the 12-round semi-final. George Hoffman of New York, erstwhile national amateur heavyweight champion, takes on Marty Gallagher of Washington, in a 10-rounder.

In the White City arena at Chicago tomorrow night, Arthur (The Great) Shires, pugnacious Chicago White Sox first baseman, will make his fistic debut in a four-round bout with Dan Daley, of Cleveland. Big Six Athletes Must Have Amateur Record Next Year

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 8. (UP)—When Big Six athletes take the field next season they will be certified amateurs according to a plan formulated by faculty and athletic representatives of the conference schools here.

A committee was appointed to compile a questionnaire for submission to each athletic aspirant who must make a record of his sports career from his high school days. These records will be placed on file for the perusal of any who may question a player's eligibility.

The action was an outgrowth of the Carnegie foundation's report on subsidization of college athletes and charges made in the conference this season that certain players were receiving "so much per touchdown."

The conference body, representing Iowa State, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Kansas Aggies and Oklahoma, also ruled that tie football games next season will be tallied in the standings as half a lost game and half a game won for each of the teams involved, a move which previously had been taken in some other conferences in an effort to clarify frequently muddled standings which are said to have caused adverse comment.

Pirates Buy Suhr

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8. (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates today secured First Baseman Gus Suhr of the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league. First Baseman Earl Sheeley and a "substantial sum of money" were given in exchange for the coast player, the Pirate management said.

SPORT Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

The dope didn't pan out for those of us who picked Amarillo to beat out Breckenridge in the race for the bi-district championship of West Texas. The Golden Sandstorm seems to have blown out before reaching the oil belt metropolis, for it did not raise much sand with wirey Buckaroos of Breckenridge. Possibly the long 300-mile jaunt from the rigors of the Panhandle climate to the sun kingdom of central West Texas had something to do with the matter. Thursday and Friday before the game on Saturday reports from Breckenridge stated that a pleasant, sunny weather on the day would be a big help to the Buckaroos while a chill northern blast would favor the chances of the Sandies. That being so the home boys were certainly smiled upon and the visitors were left to a bitter fate, for the day was perfect football weather. The weather alibi is the only one we can think up for the Sandies.

The game Saturday at Breckenridge was not so much a demonstration of how good the Buckaroos were but how badly "off" or mediocre the Sandies were. Now we are inclined to the belief that the Amarillo team was playing on an over-inflated football reputation. Truly Amarillo had an impressive looking team but their performance against Breckenridge hardly warrants the terror which they had struck in the hearts of district 1 teams.

It was given out that the Sandies outweighed the Buckaroos on an average of 15 pounds to the man, and from the appearances of the teams, we would not doubt it a particle. When the two teams, the Buckaroos in their bright green and white uniforms and the Sandies in their somber gold and black football togs, ran out onto the field to warm up before the opening kickoff, a low murmer of apprehension went up from the stands at the sight of the powerful looking, stocky Sandy players. It looked like a meeting of a college team and a high school team with certain slaughter for the Buckaroos. Amarillo's stock went up like an office skyscraper. What Breckenridge money that could be found left was taken in a hurry. But then the kickoff and the first half dozen plays and it was plainly apparent that something was wrong with the Sandies. They lacked the fury and frenzy of the game that the Buckaroos were displaying. The Breckenridge forwards outcharged the Amarillo line by one or two jumps and had them off their feet before they could get started.

In fact the outcharging, outtackling and outfighting of the Amarillo team by the Buckaroos is the whole story of the game. The game was not a spectacular and thrilling one as would naturally be expected from such an affair. Nothing could have been more methodical and routine from the standpoint of the Sandies. They were slow and like a certain Coyote team on one particular occasion—they could never get started.

The "famed" Amarillo offense featuring the mighty Lockhart, Gibson and Bufkin never materialized. Whether it was a matter of the Amarillo backs lacking the sting of a powerful punch or the toughness of the Buckaroo line is uncertain. We do know that the Breckenridge forward wall was in there every minute of the game and playing the opposing forwards off their feet. Once the Sandies got the ball on the Breckenridge 15-yard line on a luck exchange of punts but they could not pierce the opposing line in three different attempts and then a fumble cost them possession of the ball. In fact when the Sandies looked as if they might conceivably get the ball within scoring distance the Breckenridge forwards invariably broke through to throw them for a loss.

The Buckaroo followers believe that they have a great football team but the game with the Sandies was no test of it. The way we see it the Sandies played mediocre football and the Buckaroos were hard put to win the game. Next Saturday the Breckenridge eleven will very probably meet a really good team in the Waco Tigers. They say that the Tigers are the best coached team in the state. If this is so they should play a smart game of ball against the Buckaroos. The season record of the Tigers include victories over the well-known Cleburne High and Central High of Fort Worth. Waco should put Breckenridge to the real test.

It has not been officially given out where the game will be played but current reports have it that it will be in Breckenridge. We anticipate the fracas with pleasure.

World's Champ May Be Crowned Today

Jack Dempsey Will Be Third Man in Ring

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The next heavyweight champion of the world may have his hand raised aloft by Jack Dempsey Monday night, for Jack is to referee the Scott-Von Porat battle in Madison Square garden and either Phil or Otto may yet qualify for the vacant title.

Certainly a decisive victory for either the Englishman or the Norwegian would put the winner close to the top. He would be in line for a battle with Jack Sharkey, who is waiting for his next opponent to be named.

Big Money for Winner

With Max Schmeling definitely lined up with an "outlaw" group, the Scott-Von Porat affair takes on added importance. Madison Square garden is going to make a mighty effort to keep control of the heavyweight situation, and will reward Monday night's winner with some lucrative guarantees.

Schmeling is coming here to meet an opponent, as yet unnamed, at Atlantic City on Washington's birthday. The promoters, who know a lot more about the boxing business than the Madison Square garden crowd but haven't as much mazuma, are after Sherkey as the German's opponent.

Failing to get Sharkey, they will go after the winner of the Scott-Von Porat fight, which will not do winner a bit of harm financially, whatever the outcome of the negotiations.

There is every reason, therefore, for the boys to give their best Monday night. Because each is a reserved, cautious young man with a keen business sense, it is barely possible that the bout will be terrible. It is more likely that it will be quite a brawl, with Otto throwing that ponderous right hand of his and Philip jabbing and running until the Norwegian is slowed down to a walk.

Scott has gained in favor during the week, since he is recognized as the smarter boxer of the two. The Englishman was flattened by Knute Hansen, floored by Monte Munn and Pierre Charles and considerably damaged by fighters with a lot less wallop than the Norwegian from the Middle-West But Philip always got up, save in the Hansen affair, when he claimed to have been fouled.

Otto's lantern jaw presents a fair target for a boxer of Scott's ability, but the Englishman has no reputation as a puncher and the chances are that if he wins it will be on points. Von Porat is rugged, slow starter who keeps persistently after his man, a dangerous hitter at all times. He is awkward and rather slow-witted, quite in contrast to Scott.

Okla. Driver Wins Race Event Here

Paul A. Fox and his side-car rider, Ray Walker, both of Altus, Okla., driving a Harley-Davidson machine won first prize money at the fairgrounds speedway here Sunday by rounding the 25-lap race in 11 minutes 10 seconds. Hollis Short of Wichita Falls drove his Dodge roadster to victory in the tank car race of 10 laps around the track in 6 minutes 58 seconds. Jimmy See, also of Wichita Falls, won the stock car race event when he piloted his De Soto roadster over the 25-lap route in 10 minutes 30 second of time.

Barney Burg, the Indianapolis racer, failed to show up for the racing events. Word came that he had been caught in a snowstorm and could not make it here. A pretty good crowd was on hand to see the racing but fell short of what had been expected.

MAJOR LEAGUES WILL CONVENE

Annual Meet of Big Leagues In New York

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The retreat of the baseball clan from Chattanooga progressed as far as New York today as officials, magnates, managers and camp-followers gained strategic positions in which to await the annual meetings of the major leagues here this week.

The National league will assemble in the Commodore Tuesday, and the American league will gather in the same hostelry Wednesday. The joint meeting of the two circuits will be held at the Biltmore Thursday.

Important Business

Aside from the solemn ceremony of voting the two pennants to the Athletics and the Cubs, the two major circuits have two or three pieces of important business upon which to take action, including an earlier closing date and a stand on the question of broadcasting league games. Early closing and the radio will be taken up by each league individually, with final decision doubtless awaiting the joint meeting over which Commissioner Landis will preside.

Although the 1929 world's series had the good fortune to encounter three very fine afternoons in Philadelphia after a chilly opening and a frigid second game in Chicago, sentiment in the two circuits seems to lean toward a closing date on next year on the last Sunday in September, the 28th. The world's series then could be completed in the first week of October, avoiding conflict with football except on Oct. 4.

Opening-Closing

A mid-April opening and a Sept. 28 closing would give the major leagues only about 170 playing dates for the accommodation of 154 games as opposed to 176 days available in the 1928 schedule. With Sunday baseball in Boston, however, the makers of the charts should find 169 or 170 days sufficient—provided the magnates first can reconcile themselves to the loss of the 25th Saturday and Sunday of the longer arrangement.

Doubtful on Radio

Club owners seem to be somewhat divided on broadcasting, with the non-radio group slightly in the majority because of the traditional suspicion with which some of the magnates view anything which smacks of progress. Philip de Catesby Ball, social giant of the major leagues, leads the opponents of broadcasting, contending that fans refused to pay to see the Browns play. William Wrigley Jr., glowing over the fine business of the Cubs at the gate, supports the radio enthusiastically.

Scouts and managers of the two major circuits will haunt the lobbies and the corridors of the Commodore and the Biltmore for the duration of the meetings. Rumors of trades will be rife, but it will be surprising if anything momentous in the way of transfers should take place. The big deals always are saved for a time when they may receive the glare of the spotlight alone.

Schools of Rockies Adopt Big-Ten Plan

DENVER, Dec. 8. (INS)—After breaking a deadlock which existed for more than six hours over football dates, Rocky Mountain conference officials today had adopted superficially the "Big Six" idea to frame their schedules for 1930. The "Big Six" schools, which include Utah university, Utah State Aggies, Colorado university, Colorado Aggies, Denver university and Colorado college, will play largely among themselves. The smaller schools, similarly, will play each other for the most part.

Immediately following the announcement here Saturday evening, that Hereford had been selected as the meeting place Merle Gruver, secretary of the chamber of commerce called officials of the Wichita Falls and Southern and J. W. Chatham, industrial commissioner and acting manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce for information regarding the possibility of chartering a special.

BIG MONEY ON GOLFING MEET

Catalina Open Will Be for $7,500

By MAX STILES
Universal Service Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—Money-seeking professional golfers, and not a few of the more able southern California amateurs, this week will be in Avalon town. But they will not be thinking of old Captain Kidd, or of the chests that he hid They'll be thinking of the $7,500 in ultra modern, non-bounceable checks that Mr. William Wrigley Jr., is to autograph for prize winners in the second annual Catalina open.

This is the fourth most important tournament on the California winter schedule from a monetary point of view, being topped in price only by the Agua Caliente $25,000 open, the national P. G. A. with its $10,400 in lap prizes and the Los Angeles $10,000 classic.

Amateur Trophies

As for the amateurs, Mr. Wrigley has put up some exceedingly desirable trophies. Thus there is a mad rush for places in the starting line. The tournament opens Friday, continues Saturday and ends Sunday. Play will be over 72 holes, the field to be pared at the half-way mark. It was planned to limit the entries to 100 players, but so many top-notchers are trying to bust through that 103 already have been accepted and dozens of others are squawking like perturbed hens.

Last year this tournament was for $2,500 and was played over a nine-hole course. The ante has since been raised and another nine been added, giving 18 complete holes. The holes are short but sporty, uphill and down dale. Canyons open up wide mouths to gobble in balls that are pulled or pushed off line. There are no better greens in the state.

Last Year Winner

This tournament last year was won by Horton Smith, the tall young man from Joplin, Mo. Smith won over Walter Hagen by a stroke.

Leo Diegel, who successfully defended his national P. G. A. crown, will play, as will the man he defeated in the finals, Johnny Farrell.

Other headliners who have entered include Harry Cooper, Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Charlie Guest, Henry Ciuci, John Golden, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, Al and Abe Espinosa, Billy Burke, Ed Dudley, Gibson Dunlap, Fred Morrison, Joe Kirkwood, Larry Nabholtz, Frank Rodia, Harold Sampson, Dan Sangster, Lewis Scott, Arthur Clarkson, F. C. Stevens Jr., Tom Stevens, Joe Turnesa, Frank Walsh, Al Watrous, Danny Williams, Fay Coleman, Craig Wood and many others of prominence.

The scoring will be low, but the hill climbing will be high.

BASKETBALL TO START AT A. & M.

Eighteen Games Have Been Slated

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Dec. 8.—Eighteen games, 10 of them with teams of the Southwest conference, four with quintets from other conferences and two with one of the strongest amateur cage teams in the state, compose the 1929-30 schedule of Coach John Reid's Texas Aggie basket ball team.

Coach Reid's charges will open their schedule with a two-game series against the Sam Houston State Teachers' college quintet on the Memorial gymnasium court at College Station Dec. 15-16, and on Dec. 20 they will journey to Houston for a two-game engagement with the all-star combination of the Houston Triangles to close the schedule of pre-Christmas games. Other non-conference games will be with the Centenary college cagers at College Station Jan. 6-7 and with the Sam Houston Teachers in a return series at Huntsville Jan. 17-18.

According to their conference schedule the Aggies will play five conference teams, Texas, Arkansas, T. C. U., Rice and S. M. U., meeting each of them except Arkansas in two games on a home-and-home basis. Both of the tilts with the Porkers will be played at College Station since the Aggies journeyed to Fayetteville to meet the conference champions last season. This program will give the Aggies 10 games on their own court and eight away from home.

Alsabrook, Aggie End, Will Represent West

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8. (AP)—With acceptances to invitations to play on the western team in the annual Shrine East-West game here New Year's day received by Coach Locey today from O. G. Alsabrook, Texas A. & M. end, and Joe Fredericks, San Francisco Olympic club halfback, only two positions on the West's team remained to be filled.

The two unfilled positions include a guard and a backfield man. Coach Locey expressed himself as very anxious to get Brumbelow, Texas Christian university guard, and sent a second telegram today when the hoped for acceptance to the first invitation did not come. Several players are still under consideration for the backfield berth.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Dec. 8 (INS)—Yale football stars of the past and present will be among the 300 or more persons who will crowd Nick Robert's old Yale barn tonight for the ninth annual "win, lose or draw" party given by the Yale club of this city in honor of the Eli football team.

Trial of E. A. Martin, local attorney charged with barratry, has been postponed in the county court-at-law from Monday until Wednesday morning of the coming week, according to an announcement Sunday from Bob Crain, attorney for the defendant. Martin is accused of having sought to represent J. M. Jetton in a suit to recover damages for personal injuries. The defendant was acquitted of similar charges in an earlier trial held here several months ago.

Disbarment proceedings growing out of the charges, brought by the grievance committee of the Texas Bar association, are still being delayed pending the serving of papers upon the defendant who has been out of the city for the past two months, court officials said.

Spent About Half of Her Time in Bed

Plainview Carpenter's Wife Gains 7 Pounds on Orgatone; Now a Well Woman

"I have gained seven pounds since taking Orgatone and am feeling like a well woman for the first time in two years," said Mrs. H. G. Cole, wife of a well-known carpenter, and living at 217 Hillcrest street, Plainview, Texas, recently.

"I suffered from a severe case of indigestion, nervousness and general rundown condition," she continued, "and in spite of everything I did, I just kept getting worse. I finally got to where I couldn't eat anything, and gas formed and caused those bloating spells. My nerves were all on edge and I could hardly sleep at all for worrying about my condition and by morning I would be so weak and fagged out I was hardly able to get up at all. I was fast going down hill and I actually got so weak and listless at last I just had to stay in bed part of the time. I was gradually losing weight, and I tried all kinds of medicines and treatments, but nothing seemed to bring my health and strength back."

"One day a friend came to me and told me so much about Orgatone, and what it had done that I decided to try it. I am certainly getting wonderful results, and had only taken a few doses and I knew that I had found the medicine I needed. I have improved right along ever since and can now eat anything I want and it agrees with me. My kidneys and liver are back to normal, and I rest every night and sleep like a child. I have honestly gained seven pounds on Orgatone and it has helped me so much, my husband is now taking it. Orgatone is the best medicine I have ever seen or heard of and a medicine that will do what Orgatone did for me is certainly worth recommending."

Prevention as Well as Cure of Wrongs Duty of Modern Christian, Says Speaker

An application of the parable of the good Samaritan to modern times, presented to the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church by Judge P. A. Martin, Sunday morning, outlined the duties of the present day Samaritan as two-fold. The speaker urged that prevention as well as cure of wrongs is the duty of the modern Christian who would follow the teachings of the old story.

A portion of Judge Martin's address is quoted below:

"The parable of the good Samaritan has probably had more direct influence upon the sons of men than any other saying of the Christ; its teaching is so convincing that no man, however selfish and sinful he may be can fail to subscribe to it, and, whether he will acknowledge it or not, he finds himself in accord with it, endorsing it, teaching it to others and finally following it, in some degree at least, in his own life. The human heart just naturally reaches out to the Samaritan and we just naturally want him for a neighbor and friend.

Modern Samaritan

"The lesson today shows the final fate of the good Samaritan and of the priest and the Levite who passed by on the other side and failed to give comfort and succor to the suffering man and teaches the great truth that in ministering to the unfortunate in this world we are ministering to the King of Righteousness himself.

"'For inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'

"Then who is the modern good Samaritan? In our complex civilization we seldom meet personally with men wounded and robbed and bleeding by the wayside. But on the other hand we know there are thousands who suffer all around us; for them we prepare hospitals and sanitariums where free treatment may be received by those unable to pay. For the young we provide the free clinic; for the children of the poor we provide a means of education; for the hungry we provide food; for the old we provide a home of some sort and the modern good Samaritan is the man who cheerfully and in the spirit of the Master goes down deep into his pocket and pays for these things, or at least cheerfully pays his part.

"The lesson presents a picture of the final judgment when all nations shall be judged and it is indicated that they shall be judged not by their expressions of faith or their profession of religion, but by the way they have treated their fellow men. There does not seem to be any particular inquiry in this final assize about how they were baptized or what particular denomination they belong to. These matters may be of the utmost importance, as a means of grace to live right, but they do not seem to enter into the case upon the final hearing in that great court. The Savior calls them the sheep and the goats, by way of division. In our modern language we would call them the loyal troopers and the 'slackers.' The people who did what they could and the people who slacked on the job.

Essence of Christian Living

This lesson teaches the very essence of Christian living. To alleviate human suffering; to reduce pain; to feed the hungry are but a few of the things modern civilization is calling for at the hands of the men of today. We are challenged to do more; we must remove the cause of human misery, if possible. Millions are being spent every year in the effort to discover the means of preventing dread diseases, as well as in curing them. Other millions are being spent to eradicate sin and crime and to cure the criminal of his crime and rehabilitate him to valuable citizenship. Modern thought and study has evolved the idea that the best way to fight the ills of life is to remove the cause. The modern physician while treating the typhoid patient does not fail to analyze the water he has been drinking far up to its source and discover, if he can, the breeding place of the germs. So the modern Christian, while feeding and sheltering the wounded man, would organize a posse and comb the mountains far and near to find if he can the men who robbed him and left him on the highway to Jericho.

"As long as there is sin and sickness, poverty, ignorance and crime in the world, the job of the Christian is an unfinished job. It is a long, hard job, often a thankless and an unpleasant job but the recompense is sure. For rest assured that the time will come when the Master shall say:

From the foundation of the world.' "—

"'Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.'"

IF THE WAGE EARNER IN THE CITY could devise some way whereby he could save all his hard-earned wages and not have to pay it out in rent and grocery bills, he could then accumulate enough capital to eventually become independent. Why not bring your family into a beautiful garden home where the table could be furnished direct from the garden? Then by putting in a few hundred choice high-record hens the little farm should become self-supporting, furnishing employment for the entire family while the head of the household still continued his job in the city ½ commuting to his farm.

You Couldn't Tell 'Em at Home, Says Critic

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Again on the subject of vaudeville, 1929 edition, there is a tremendous task assignable to some statistician of great ability and tenacity. With 50 years or more available for work on the subject, he would be able to demonstrate that Mrs. Adam, nee Miss Eve, mistress of the Garden of Eden some years back, and one Sigmund Freud (19th century sex specialist) are the world's richest individuals by virtue of royalty claims on 99 per cent of all the "singing and talking" vaudeville acts of which any record is available.

From present day vaudeville, as exemplified in two of the numbers now showing on the local Keith-Orpheum-Interstate bill, back to the much discussed episode in the garden is a long jump only in point of time. This particular type of entertainment would be a lamp entirely innocent of oil but for the mysterious attitude toward sex which is generally accredited to the luckless Eve. Grasping the age-old bone of contention and bringing it smartly up to date under the caption of psychological revelations, Mr. Freud spoke out in direct testimony to remind us that all motives of human beings originate in their consciousness of having been divided by nature into two kinds of animals.

Among Other Things

From that platform, skits and patter and songs and what not without number are written for the vaudeville stage, completely ignoring the fact that human beings—at least, several here and there—are equipped with thought as well as sex. It might even be said that portions of the world's population have a measure of that redeeming element known as humor—that rare quality which has wings to fly above the merely physical, sordid attributes of things as things. An element in human life which is unnatural and taboo, risque, declasse, banned only by inane implications that it is of evil essence has been perversely utilized by such vaudeville acts under the borrowed guise of humorous entertainment. The fact that other groups brew the same concoction through other channels lends little if any vindication to the "entertainment" included in many vaudeville bills.

One act on the bill now showing at the Majestic falls 100 per cent under the classification of stories which could not be told in any home—and seldom at a men's club. Another had much of merit, from the standpoint of being unusual, but bogged down heavily with overdoses of concentrated undiluted essence of the jazz-element. Accepted with scattered laughter, it is noticeable that any inclination the audience may have had to applaud dies a peculiar death almost before the act is off the stage.

Dance Act Good

The dancing bill with which Sunday's bill opened developed a well-flavored bit of entertainment in its later moments. Executing an intricate pattern of taps up and down a flight of steps to martial music, and simulating in dance time a Dempsey-Tunney renewal, Louise and Al Rudack closed with a rush.

Permane and Shelley in "Pulley-Pulley" accomplish a genuine bit of originality, so far as vaudeville entertainment here is concerned, and brightened commendable performances on the violin and accordian with a delicate touch of burlesque.

Male impersonations by Miss Kitty Doner were headlined, and were featured by an unparalleled display of vitality, and brilliant costumes. Val Harris and Gertrude Shari were respectively, the regenerated old sheriff and the amorous chorus girl from New York—out West, and so on.

Sensational motorcyle riding in a 20-foot wooden saucer suspended one the stage left no doubt about its being dangerous—possibly to the orchestra, too—but produced more apprehension than applause.

Clive Brook in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," talking film attraction, closes the show—and Mr. Brook's picture is entertainment.

STOUT GOES ON TRIAL MONDAY

Copper Wire Theft Case to Open in 89th Court

Trial of Ladonia Stout, indicted on charges of theft and receiving and concealing stolen property, will be called in the 89th district court Monday morning, according to an announcement Sunday from Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney. Stout is charged with participation in the theft of more than a ton of copper wire from the Acme Cement Mills about two months ago. D. M. and Mozell Barker and Ernest Bacon are under similar indictments in connection with the same offense.

E. F. Fruechte, attorney for Stout, said Sunday that he was not in a position to announce defense plans

The trial of Larry Kilroy on charges of possessing whisky is set next on the criminal docket for the week, Mr. Anglin explained. By a special arrangement of counsel the trial of Dan Norwood and Taz Locke, under charges of the possession of a still, has been temporarily postponed, the attorney said.

LAREDO, Texas, Dec. 8 (AP)—The first international gas pipe line to cross the United States-Mexico border to furnish natural gas from fields on the American side to consumers a distance of 100 miles in the interior of Mexico will be completed by the end of the present year, a recent announcement here said.
