City Councilman Jose Cuevas meets with Reginald Anders, 8, and other children in a summer recreation program Thursday morning at the Northeast YMCA.

Cuevas proposes way to keep facilities open

By Jeff Stevens

Complex problems require creative solutions and sometimes a little outside help.

Not content to sit back and watch the unabated closing of two YMCA facilities, City Council member Jose Cuevas is looking for solutions to a communitywide problem.

Midland YMCA officials announced June 29 that they had decided to close the Alamo facility on Midland Drive and the Northeast facility on Butternut Lane near Lamesa Road.

Executive Director George Fierro said the closings, set for Sept. 1, were forced by budgetary shortfalls.

YMCA programs currently at the Alamo and Northeast facilities would be relocated to the Central YMCA on Big Spring Street.

The problem, as some community leaders see it, is that many of the city's youth won't be able to take advantage of those programs if their neighborhood facilities are closed down.

"Just leaving the Central YMCA open doesn't seem to me the right thing to do," said County Commissioner Louisa Valencia. "It's very important for those children to have clean entertainment to keep them occupied instead of getting into trouble."

She added that the facilities slated for closing are even more vital to their neighborhoods because of their locations.

"I hate to see them close up because we really need them. The people who use those YMCAs aren't the kind of people who have memberships to country clubs or pools in their back yards. It's going to hurt the youth."

Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Executive Director David Diaz agreed.

The Hispanic Chamber is located a few blocks south of the Northeast YMCA.

July sales tax receipts for city, county fall from 1998's figures

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The city of Midland, already scrambling to find solutions to woeful revenues, didn't get much encouragement from the July sales tax receipts.

The city's share of July sales taxes came to $806,295, representing a 15.05 percent decrease — $142,829 — from July 1998.

Tax receipts for the year are down from last year by 7.16 percent or $771,871.

The shortfall in the city's budget has caused officials to look for ways to trim costs. The city has a hiring freeze on and has cut the use of take-home vehicles for many employees.

Midland County also is suffering such hardships.

According to County Auditor Carol Wayland, the county's sales tax receipts for July were down 24.32 percent. The county collected just $432,550, down from $571,520 a year ago.

'Our hope is that we won't see but one or two more months of declines.'

— Mike McGregor, city manager

For the year, the county has lost more than $1 million. Last year, the county had collected $6,682,800 compared to $5,551,373 this year for a 16.93 percent decrease.

County Judge Bill Morrow said the shortfall is causing concern on the Commissioners' Court, which currently is working on its budget.

"We're trying to work through some of those numbers right now, and we haven't found a way to balance it yet," Morrow said.

He added that an aversion to cutting hours or laying people off has complicated the problem.

Despite such gloomy indicators, however, the local economy could be on the rebound.

"Our hope is that we won't see but one or two more months of declines," City Manager Mike McGregor said. "Oil has been $20 on the futures for the last several days, and if that holds out into the fall, we'll see a turnaround."

Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Marvin Wynn also feels things could be looking up but that it's taking a while for the sales tax receipts to show any progress.

"With the price of oil back up to almost $20, things are flattening out. Most of these decreases are going to be behind us," Wynn said.

"It took about four months on the way down to show it was affecting the overall economy. It could take maybe twice that long to show it going back up," he said, adding that July sales tax receipts are based on May sales.

Cooperative effort gives Lamesa Road new look

By Richard Acosta

Landscaping is one of those things that has the ability to instantly change a simple house into a palace. Indeed, a few chosen rocks and greenery can transform an overgrown, weed-infested street corner into an elegant location that draws the attention of passers-by.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has organized a face lift for parts of Lamesa Road in hopes of capturing some elegance for that neighborhood.

The beatification program, according to David Diaz with the Hispanic Chamber, is a cooperative effort between the chamber, the Texas Workforce Commission's Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) and the merchants on Lamesa Road.

Diaz said merchants are paying for the landscaping items such as the plants and rocks; JTPA is providing and paying the workers; and the chamber is coordinating the work projects.

Chris Garcia with Al's Grocery, a contributor of material for the project, as well as being one of the areas that was landscaped, said he was glad to see the work being done.

"It is a great program and it has improved our lot," Garcia said. "We get comments on it all the time. This part of town has really been neglected and it's good to see someone clean it up."

Diaz said the first two weeks of the program were spent in a classroom designing each street corner the young people were going to work on.

"The kids learned how to do a landscape on the computer before they went out into the field," Diaz said. "I think it's neat that the kids are getting to do the projects they designed in class."

One of the workers, Mario Jacobo, 15, a Midland Freshmen student, said he was happy he was able to do something good for the neighborhood.

"It was pretty messed up down here so it's good that they're fixing it up," he said. "Every time I pass by this street I will remember the work we did here."

Jacobo said that as they finish an area, people in the surrounding areas begin to do things on their own to fix their places up as well. He said he thinks seeing people do something for the area makes other people think they need to make an effort, too.

Another worker, Robert Covington, 17, a Midland High School student who wants to be a computer programmer when he "grows up," said he enjoys the work the group is doing.

"I don't mind doing the work out here, but it is kinda hot ... it was much cooler in the classroom with the computers," Covington said. "Everyone has been real nice to us, though. They drive by and wave to us or tell us we're

County caught up in financial balancing act

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

How do you balance the budget when your income is dropping, expenses are escalating and you're already in the hole?

That's the challenge Midland County government is confronting now and in fiscal year 2000, which begins Oct. 1.

"You can balance the budget two ways," said Midland County Judge Bill Morrow. Through "revenues balancing the outgo, or, if you have a reserve (fund), you can transfer reserve funds to operations."

And to be "responsible, we've got to do the best we can to balance (the budget)," Morrow said on Monday. "My preference would be to not have massive layoffs right now" among the county's 425 employees.

It seems a certainty that projected income will not rise to match departmental budgetary requests, which, in total, are projected at about $24 million, without cutbacks in departmental budgets according to County Auditor Carole Wayland.

The county's income, primarily through ad valorem (property) taxes and sales taxes, which are on the decline, and through fines and fees, likely would be $20 million to $21 million, not counting any dipping into the reserve fund, which Morrow estimated is at about $6 million, including $4 million set aside for state-mandated jail expansion.

Morrow

'Drastic cuts'

"They are going to have to make some pretty drastic cuts," Ms. Wayland said of members of the governing Commissioners' Court.

The court is to resume budget study on Wednesday in the Midland County Courthouse following the court's 9 a.m. regular meeting.

The county's half-cent sales tax revenue already is about $1 million short of projections: about $6.8 million instead of the $7.8 million for fiscal year 1999 ending Sept. 30.

Overall, 1999 sales-tax revenue is lagging at about 17 percent from the previous year, Ms. Wayland noted, although the monthly drop has been as much as 26 percent.

"It would be irresponsible, in my view," Morrow said of his preparing the 2000 budget, "to bank on there being an increase in sales tax this year.

"We need to be conservative in our estimate," he said. "I don't mind taking current (sales-tax) levels and projecting that because I think we are at the leveling-off place."

The county's sales-tax revenue from May 1999 sales totaled $432,550, which, Ms. Wayland noted, was a 24 percent decline from May 1998 sales.

Tax revenue in decline

Overall, the county's 1999 tax base is off by about $100 million, which is about a ½ per-

YMCA: Cuevas to present plan to City Council today

(From 1A)

"I think that a number of individuals and organizations have identified that keeping youth busy in a positive environment develops them into positive leaders of tomorrow. As a kid, I grew up and developed in the YMCA atmosphere, and to not have that available to our youth would be a sad situation," Diaz said.

Diaz added that centralizing the programs at one YMCA would not be very beneficial to children in the northeast section of Midland.

With two-income families and children stranded at home during the summer, "accessibility would be to a limited number of kids that live within walking distance," he said.

It all comes together to present a weighty problem, but perhaps it's one Cuevas has the political muscle to lift.

Cuevas is studying and has ventured an idea that would keep all YMCA facilities open, at least through the end of the year and maybe indefinitely. He will present that plan to the City Council today at its regular meeting.

The plan

Cuevas proposes that each taxing entity fund an equal portion of the YMCA's deficit amount for the rest of the year.

"We need to step up and say, 'What is the shortfall amount?' If it's $200,000, then my idea is for the city to make a commitment of $50,000 and challenge MISD, the county and the college to make similar commitments That would cover the shortfall," Cuevas said. "And all of those entities have said that youth are a big deal. This would be a great opportunity for them to step up and prove they mean what they say."

The players

The councilman's plan has a few wrinkles that need to be ironed out first. Primarily, getting five Midland entities — the YMCA, MISD, Midland College, the city of Midland and Midland County — all to agree on a solution.

And although each of the groups think something should be done, they're not sure the responsibility should fall on them or to what dollar amount that responsibility should carry.

Ms. Valencia said the responsibility should be divided among the four entities but not necessarily in equal amounts.

"I think it should be allocated according to the amount of taxes each entity collects," Ms. Valencia said, adding that the YMCA isn't the only program suffering budgetary constraints. She said the county also is facing budgetary hurdles this year.

David Daniel, president of Midland College, also cited a tight budget as an obstacle to the college pitching in.

"Our budget is pretty tight. Each year we budget for the operation of the college and to take $50,000 off the budget would make a difference."

Ms. Valencia had similar concerns.

"Our situation is bad right now, and we are going to have to build a jail," she said.

Cuevas said that's exactly the reason why it's important to maintain programs like the YMCA.

"The county is getting ready to build an addition to their jail for $6 million and they just spent $3 million on Culver Youth Home. Something is wrong when you're willing to pay those kind of dollars for jails but not willing to pay anything for the prevention of crime."

Ms. Valencia agreed.

"That's why our jails are so full, because kids are not being targeted early the way they should to keep them out of trouble."

Despite the concerns, Ms. Valencia and Charlene Wurtz, chairwoman of the Midland College board, said they would support doing something to help the YMCA.

"I do know that they have provided a lot of programs for the youth in those areas. So, it would be something I would support somehow," Ms. Wurtz said.

'The county is getting ready to build an addition to their jail for $6 million and they just spent $3 million on Culver Youth Home. Something is wrong when you're willing to pay those kind of dollars for jails but not willing to pay anything for the prevention of crime.'

— City Councilman Jose Cuevas

Becky Oekerman, president of the MISD board, also took a sympathetic view.

"My girls started taking gymnastics when they were 3 at Alamo YMCA, and it's been a very important part of their growing up," Ms. Oekerman said. "I would certainly hope if it closes it would only be temporary and I would hope the schools, city and county could cooperate to make use of those facilities."

YMCA officials said they would consider any ideas aimed at keeping the centers open.

"We are willing to listen to anything anybody might come up with," said Randy Bailey, chairman of the YMCA board. He added, however, that a long- term solution would have to be found.

Plan B

Failing to get cooperation from the myriad people he would have to convince, Cuevas also has a backup plan.

He'll discuss in executive session with the council today the possibility of the city purchasing the Northeast facility and possibly both facilities to operate youth centers.

"What makes this difficult is that we've not had a council meeting to discuss this. These are my explorations and I need to see if the council is interested in exploring these issues," Cuevas said.

Cuevas said the purchase of the Northeast facility could be funded through Housing and Urban Development Section 108 grant. The grant is a low- interest loan that could be repaid over the next 20 years using community development block grants (CDBG).

"Northeast, first and foremost, sits in a CDBG track. It fits all the criteria for CDBG eligibility," Cuevas said.

For Alamo to qualify, 51 percent of the people it serves would have to be at low- to moderate-income levels.

'Regarding Northeast, HUD essentially would lend the city the money and then give them the money to repay the loan. CDBG money could also be used for staffing salaries if needed, Cuevas said.

Whatever the solution, Cuevas said aggressive action has to be taken to ensure the facilities remain open.

"These facilities truly provide a service to low- to moderate-income individuals by providing safe summer and after-school programs, a safe environment for learning, swimming, basketball and team work. And they provide them at a reasonable cost."

"I'm afraid if we abandon them, we will have many individuals (for whom) this could make a big difference in their lives," Cuevas said. "This is a perfect opportunity to work in people's lives to really make a difference. If we allow that to fall by the wayside, we fail as a community."

COUNTY: Commissioners to resume study of budget

(From 1A)

cent decline, based on values at the first of the year, according to Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall of the Midland Central Appraisal District. The tax-base decline from 1998 to 1999 is from $4.68 billion to $4.58 billion, he said.

The county's 1999 property-tax revenue, estimated at $9.4 million, makes up about 45 percent of the county's general-fund revenue.

While Morrow and the commissioners have remained quiet on the tax rate, Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Kathy Reeves contended "Midland County will not be able to meet the budget if they (the commissioners) maintain the same tax rate (22.75 cents per $100 valuation).

"Probably the most practical way to go about this (balancing the budget) is some budget-cutting and maybe a slight increase in the tax rate," Ms. Reeves said.

A $100 million decline in the tax base would covert to about a $228,000 drop in property-tax revenue, she said.

"I know it is going to be tough for the Commissioners' Court and the department heads," Ms. Reeves said of balancing the budget. "The entire county is pulling together to try to get through this time" of a depressed economy because of an earlier slump in crude-oil prices that adversely impacted the economy.

"Even though the price of oil is up," Commissioner Louisa Valencia said, "we don't know how long that will last."

Last year's general-fund revenue was "right at $21 million," Ms. Wayland noted. And with a budget of $21.9 million in projected expenditures, there was a built-in deficit of more than $800,000.

Balancing act

Last year's departmental requests totaled about $25 million, but the then-County Judge Jeff Norwood had whittled the budget down to about $21 million in pursuit of a balanced budget. The Commissioners' Court, in split votes, in 1998 rejected the draft budget and increased expenditures without raising taxes enough to effect a balanced budget and thereby created the deficit.

The initial trimming toward a balanced budget is Morrow's job, who is the county's chief fiscal officer. Morrow went into virtual seclusion last week to make a draft of the budget. He will present it to the commissioners who then will fine-tune the document.

"If you are going into reserve (to compensate for a shortfall), you ought not, in my opinion, to also be increasing expenditures," Morrow said. "So, you are going to have to hold the line on expenditures."

The reserve, which in recent years had reached about $10 million, is now down to about $6 million, including the $4 million set aside for jail expansion. "There's probably $2 million in addition to that," Morrow said.

Although the county's elected and appointed department heads were "somewhat cognizant" of the county's falling revenues, their departmental requests for 2000 in the main exceeded those of 1999, Ms. Wayland noted. Requests for capital expenditures lessened, however, she said.

But there were about 10 requests for additional hired workers among the department heads even though the Commissioners' Court early in 1999 adopted a hiring-freeze policy. If honored by the court, those requests would increase the budget by about $300,000.

And Sheriff Gary Painter had requested a 5 percent pay raise for his 168 employees, which, based on a $4 million payroll, would add about $200,000 to the budget.

Painter said he didn't expect to get the raise.

Courthouse security

However, built into the 2000 budget, Ms. Wayland said, is an additional $250,000 for a courthouse security system and staff headed up by Sheriff's Lt. Benny Matlock.

All told, Morrow said the county's 2000 budget would be more than 1999's $21.9 million budget "if we honored all of the (departmental requests). We are just not going to be able to honor those requests."

Of a drop in the county's tax base, Morrow said the county "is not hurt as much percentagewise on ad valorem tax.

"The oil-and-gas valuations went down," he said. "Other valuations went up, and we had a good bit of new additions to the tax roll through new construction last year."

Police find 7 people dead in Atlanta home

ATLANTA (AP) — Seven people were found shot to death in an Atlanta home Monday after an 11-year-old boy who was wounded in the attack fled the closet where he had been hiding for hours.

The motive for the fatal shootings of three adults and four children was unclear, but police were investigating whether one person killed the others and himself.

Neighbor Georgia Hall said the boy, identified by neighbors as Antonio Briskey, told her his stepfather had shot "everyone in the house."

"He said: 'My stepfather shot my mama, my auntie, my brother, everyone,'" Hall told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

"We immediately called 9-1-1. We could not believe what had happened. We just called the police and sat with the boy."

Officers were called to the scene in the afternoon after the boy, who was shot in the elbow, sought help from neighbors. He told police the shooting started before 6 a.m. He left his hiding spot about 2:30 p.m.

Family members and neighbors said the dead included a woman, her sister and four of their children. The bodies were removed Monday night.

Neighbor Betty Fuller said the boy's mother lived in the house with her sister and five children. She said the mother had a boyfriend, and that her boy is a smart, happy go-lucky child.

"He was just as sweet as he could be, and God had to be with him for him to hide," she said.

Authorities say fingerprints link two to embassy bombings

LONDON (AP) — Two Egyptian men suspected of conspiring with Osama bin Laden in the bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa were given away by their fingerprints, a prosecutor said Monday as the two made their first appearance in a London court.

Both men's fingerprints were found on originals of faxes that claimed responsibility for the bombings, said Arvinder Sambi, appearing for the Crown Prosecution Service on behalf of the U.S. government.

The White House promised to hunt down any remaining suspects in the near-simultaneous bombings of the U.S. missions in Kenya and Tanzania on Aug. 7 that killed 224 people, including 12 Americans, and injured more than 5,400 others.

"We continue to remain vigilant and concerned about the threat that Osama bin Laden and his network poses to Americans and American institutions around the world," White House press secretary Joe Lockhart said in Washington. "We'll continue to pursue those responsible until they're all brought to justice."

Ibrahim Hussein Abdel Hadi Eidarous, 42, and Adel Abdel-Meguid Abdel-Bary, 39, were arrested on extradition warrants Sunday in London following a request from the United States. Both men also are wanted in Egypt for conspiring to overthrow the government there.

One fax claiming responsibility for the embassy bombings was received at a shop in London and another was sent after the bombings from a post office, Miss Sambi said at the hearing in Bow Street Magistrates Court.

She said originals of the faxes, with the men's fingerprints, were later found at the London offices of The Advice and Reform Council, allegedly a front for the violent organization Al Qade.

Egypt alleges Abdel-Bary and Eidarous are members of the Jihad insurgency group that assassinated President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

Abdel-Bary is one of 14 on the Egyptian government's list of its most wanted militants. The list was issued in 1997, the year he was sentenced to death in absentia for plotting to blow up Khan el-Khalili, Cairo's oldest market, and kill police officers. He was also was sentenced to life in prison for conspiring to topple the government.

Eidarous was sentenced in absentia to 15 years in prison in April for conspiring to overthrow the government. He is a former Egyptian army officer who was forced to retire in the 1980s because of links to Islamic groups.

Both men were ordered held in custody pending a court appearance next week.

Chief Magistrate Graham Parkinson allowed them to be held only for a week, saying he wanted more information about the U.S. evidence.

Parkinson said he was concerned by claims from Eidarous' lawyer, Gareth Peirce, that her client — who had been released Friday after being held by immigration authorities for 10 months — was the victim of U.S. abuse of power.

Bin Laden, the Saudi exile suspected of masterminding and financing the bombings, is on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List, and a $5 million reward has been offered for information leading to his arrest.

Bin Laden, along with six other suspects, remains a fugitive. He is believed to be in Afghanistan.

Five other defendants are being held in New York. Two of them, Mohamed Sadeek Odeh and Mohamed Rashed Daoud Al-'Owhali, are charged with more than 200 counts of murder in the bombings.

Another suspect, the Saudi national Khaled Al Fawwaz, is fighting extradition to the United States from Britain. He is accused of agreeing with bin Laden and others to kill Americans throughout the world, especially soldiers and diplomats.

Bin Laden has denied any role in the attacks against Americans. However, in an interview with an Arabic television station last month, he expressed admiration for those who bombed American forces in Saudi Arabia in 1995 and 1996 and called all Americans legitimate targets.

A prominent lawyer for Muslim fundamentalists said Monday that it will be difficult to capture bin Laden because he has both biological and chemical weapons.

Montassar el-Zayat told the London-based Al-Sharq Al-Awsatt newspaper that if bin Laden is put under pressure, "I believe he will resort to the use of these weapons in operations against American targets."

Last week, Washington warned that bin Laden may be preparing another attack as the Aug. 7 anniversary of the bombings approaches.

Berlin: First ministry opens, parliament in Reichstag

BERLIN (AP) — Mingling with paint-speckled workmen, Interior Ministry employees started work Monday in Berlin, opening the first government ministry to complete the historic move from Bonn to the prewar capital.

The German government also took two other steps toward settling into its new home: Parliament gained official control of its newly renovated home, the Reichstag, and Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder set Aug. 23 for his first day of work in Berlin.

Almost 10 years after the fall of the Berlin Wall, the German capital is in the final stages of its 375-mile eastward journey. Parliament last week began sending truckloads of files, furniture and computers. By the time the 669 lawmakers convene after their summer break, their 3,400 staff and 6,000 other government officials should be in place.

Along with 920 employees, Interior Minister Otto Schily moved into his office in the new ministry, a U-shaped building of mirrored glass on the Spree River.

About three-quarters the size of the ministry's former quarters in Bonn, the new ministry must hold nearly three miles of full filing cabinets, 10,000 books and 500 computers — all brought in 38 train cars.

"The new office is great, better than the old one," said Susanne Hinsen, a secretary working amid the din of construction drills.

Both Schily and Wolfgang Thierse, president of the lower house of Parliament known as the Bundestag, said they would miss the Rhine River, which flowed outside their Bonn offices.

But Thierse said the wait since 1991 — when the parliament approved the move — was long enough.

"I'm really pleased that this is finally happening," he said.

For the purposes of business contracts, Monday was designated as the official day that parliament received ownership of the glass-topped Reichstag from the federal ministry of transport and construction.

D&D Plumbing: We guarantee you'll sleep cool tonight

While there is no "good" time for you air conditioner to fail, there are especially bad times, like when it's 110 degrees, or when company is coming. D & D Plumbing understands the importance of cool air in West Texas—that's why they guarantee you'll sleep cool tonight.

If they can't fix your air conditioner, they'll put you up at the air conditioned Hampton Inn—at their expense. Of course, their goal is to fix your air conditioner. Toward that end, D & D technicians carry a huge parts inventory on their trucks. Most customers are getting cool again quickly. D & D's David Rotan says they only have to send one or two customers to the Hampton each summer.

To qualify, you must live in Midland County and you must call D & D by 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

If your air conditioner has served a useful life and is better replaced than repaired, D & D has teamed with Trane to offer you a special deal on Trane's new ultra-efficient XL 1800. If you buy one between now and July 31st, you'll get a free 10-year warranty on both parts and labor. Most warranties only extend to 10 years on the compressor and coils.

The XL 1800 has a SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating) of 18, making it the most efficient unit on the market today. That could mean big savings in electrical costs.

For example, if your old air conditioner is more than 10 years old, it may have a SEER of only six. The XL 1800 combined with a Trane XV 80 furnace, would cut your air conditioning costs by as much as 67 percent over that unit. If your old unit has a SEER of 10, you could still see savings of almost 45 percent. With our long, hot summers, the savings become obvious very quickly.

The new unit has caught on quickly. David reports that approximately half of all air conditioners D & D has installed this summer have been XL 1800s.

Want to find out more, and see these units close up? D & D Plumbing will have a booth near the food court at Midland Park Mall this weekend, July 16-18. Hear how quiet the XV 80 is—you'll hardly know it's running. You can also find out about a variety of financing plans. You can even schedule a service call while you're there.

So relax. Trane and D & D will help you keep your cool this summer.

D & D Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning (plumbing license M-14772 and air conditioning license TACL B009344E) is owned by brothers David, Dwain and Derek Rotan, the third generation of hometown service technicians. They offer complete plumbing and air conditioning service on all brands, while they sell and service Trane equipment. 24-hour emergency service is available. Call 687-1011.

See you at the mall: Brothers David (from left), Dwain and Derek Rotan of D & D Plumbing will have a booth at Midland Park Mall this weekend, July 16-18. See the new ultra-efficient Trane XL1800 air conditioner and XV 80 furnace.

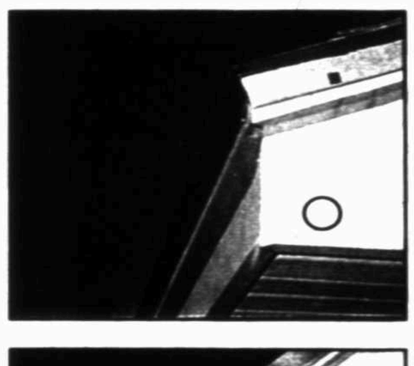

Lifetime Siding lets seniors relax

As a senior and a homeowner, are you tired of worrying about painting and repainting your home's exterior? Are your home's windows drafty and hard to clean on the outside?

Lifetime Siding has your solution. Owner Neil Letkeman is offering a 20 percent discount to seniors on insulated windows with tilt-in panes for easy cleaning from the inside. He also offers seniors a 15 percent discount on siding (which means you may never have to paint your home again). Both discounts end August 31, 1999.

Both feature a lifetime warranty on parts and a 15-year warranty on labor. Lifetime installs siding with screws or rivets in critical areas. That keeps your siding securely fastened much longer than nails would.

Lifetime Siding has been in the Permian Basin for over 10 years. They specialize in steel and vinyl siding, as well as storm doors and windows, plus patio covers, carports and metal roofs. Call 580-8125 for a free estimate. Call for a list of references.

The right and wrong of siding: On the top, nails have pulled out of the siding. On the bottom is a Lifetime installation, where screws hold the siding securely.

Pakistan shells highway despite accord; Sharif asks for meeting

KARGIL, India (AP) — A day after promising India that it would halt the fierce border fighting in Kashmir, Pakistan got in a few last licks Monday night, bombarding an Indian highway and unleashing a ferocious barrage of artillery and anti-aircraft fire.

The accord agreed to on Sunday was designed to let Muslim militants retreat from the high mountain posts they had been occupying in India-held parts of Kashmir. But Pakistan also shelled two regions where the militants had been pulling back toward the 1972 cease-fire line that divides Kashmir between the two nuclear-armed neighbors.

More than 1,200 combatants have been reported killed in fighting since India discovered in early May that its positions on Himalayan peaks had been taken over.

Sunday's withdrawal accord came a week after Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif promised President Clinton to take "concrete steps" to end the fighting.

In a televised speech Monday night, Sharif tried to portray the withdrawal of the militants as a victory, saying world attention had been drawn to the dispute over Kashmir. He also appealed for a meeting with Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee to settle the issue.

"Today we have calmed down the volcano of Kargil, but tomorrow the volcano can erupt somewhere else until Kashmiris are given their just right of self-determination," Sharif said. "Nobody can suppress the Kashmiris' struggle for freedom."

India has said it would consider resuming a peace dialogue with Pakistan that began in February only after the last intruder has left Indian territory.

On the front lines, Indian officers and artillery men who had covered their guns with tarpaulins were caught by surprise when Pakistan opened fire late Monday. The Pakistani barrage followed hours of relative calm fostered by the withdrawal agreement struck Sunday by the two countries' military chiefs.

Indian officials said Monday that they had given Pakistan until Friday to ensure that the infiltrators were gone, and the Pakistani army officer at the meeting had agreed to that schedule.

The intense firing began shortly after 10 p.m., along a six-mile stretch of winding road where Pakistani guns sit on rocky crags a few hundred yards away.

For at least 30 minutes, shells smashed into the road and the mountainside every 30 seconds. Four jeeps carrying journalists and a convoy of at least 20 fuel tanker trucks sped out of range with their headlights off.

Ten shells struck the small village of Kako Shilitse outside the front-line town of Kargil, severely injuring a boy and wounding a young woman.

Indian Bofors guns could be heard firing back as the Pakistani artillery lit up the mountainside and the anti-aircraft projectiles pounded holes in a stone wall built to shield highway traffic.

Earlier in the day, there was steady firing from the Pakistani side in the Mushkoh Valley and Kaksar regions to the west of Kargil. Indian officers on the front line were surprised and began scrambling their troops.

In those areas, Indian army officers had seen the Muslim intruders leaving their bunkered mountaintop positions and heading for the Pakistani side of the 1972 cease-fire line.

Although Indian officials denied Pakistan's claim that a formal cease-fire was in effect, the Indian army said it was under orders not to fire at retreating forces, but to retaliate if fired upon.

"We will not fire first," a major on the front-line told The Associated Press before Monday night's intense shelling began. "But if they hit us, we will not sit and watch," he said on customary condition of anonymity.

By Monday, Muslim forces had withdrawn from the Kaksar region and had begun to pull back in the Mushkoh Valley, Indian officials said. The other two sectors of the 110-mile front had been largely cleared in military operations.

Iranian police crack down on student protests

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Riot police backed by helicopters broke up a demonstration of 1,000 people in Tehran on Monday, as hard-liners in the Iranian government lost patience on the fifth day of pro-democracy protests.

Police fired tear gas and shots in the air and arrested several protesters at Tehran University, witnesses said in phone interviews.

Demonstrators in Tehran set fire to a police vehicle and hurled stones at policemen, while helicopters hovered overhead to direct the police response, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said, adding there were no injuries.

The crackdown followed government warnings Sunday that unauthorized demonstrations would no longer be tolerated. The protests, which began Thursday, have shown the widening gulf between Iran's reformists, who support President Mohammad Khatami, and the hard-liners in government who oppose him.

The crux of the power struggle is over the limited powers of the elected president. The country's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, is not elected, but he controls the armed forces, the police, the judiciary, the Intelligence Ministry and the media.

The protests swelled into the biggest seen in Tehran since the 1979 Islamic revolution after police stormed a university hostel Friday in response to a small protest the night before over the banning of a liberal newspaper. One person was killed and 20 injured in the assault.

Demonstrations have been in support of Khatami, who has strived to increase political and social freedom since taking office in 1997.

Khatami urged the students Monday to "respect the law ... and avoid violence," Tehran radio reported.

Khamenei, a hard-liner who came under harsh condemnation by protesters, took a conciliatory line towards the students, quoted by IRNA as calling them "my children."

He condemned the hostel raid as "a bitter and unacceptable incident" that "pained his heart" and promised those responsible for it would be punished, IRNA reported.

"We must be tolerant and patient. Even if somebody insults me, I forgive that insult," he was quoted as saying.

Rioting reveals Milosevic's rule could end soon

A reasonable person would assume that by now Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic would get the idea that there are more than a few of his countrymen — not to mention a few million freedom-lovers living outside Yugoslavia — who would like to see him leave office — willingly or otherwise.

The tragic killing spree that Milosevic and his henchmen carried out in Kosovo in their quest to "cleanse" that region of ethnic Albanians splattered them liberally with the blood of their victims.

Yet even NATO's bombing campaign, ostensibly carried out to stop that purging, did not convince Milosevic to change his ways. He is still a tyrant, albeit an elected one who is not scheduled to leave office until 2002. The question that understandably arises is "Can the Yugoslavian people wait that long to be rid of him?" Riots are already breaking out in Yugoslavia over Milosevic's bloody rule.

It was Voltaire, the pen name of 18th century French author and philosopher François Marie Arouet, who observed that "The best government is a benevolent tyranny tempered by an occasional assassination." With all the protests carried out recently against Milosevic and demands for his resignation, it might have occurred to him that some of the protesters are thinking along those lines.

Can Milosevic continue to hang onto power in the wake of the ethnic strife that led to the NATO bombing assault? There obviously is widespread discontent among Serbians, evidenced by the recent demonstrations. The legacy of bloodshed and ethnic hatred will continue to fester making renewed fighting likely in the future.

But expecting someone of Milosevic's character to reliquish power may be too much. With that acknowledged, Voltaire's assessment of how to temper tyranny may appear more acceptable to some Yugoslavians who have witnessed power carried too far.

ANOTHER VIEW

Court ruling should curb agency abuses

Certain government agencies think airlines should hire extremely nearsighted pilots.

The Justice Department and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission also thought a supermarket chain should hire a partially blind truck driver.

Recently, the U.S. Supreme Court rejected those "rights" and restricted the definition of disability to restore legitimacy to the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Two pilots with 20/200 vision sued because United Airlines refused to hire them. The court rejected their claim.

A Kansas truck driver who failed a Department of Transportation vision test was fired and also sued. The court rejected his claim.

The government is currently trying to force Exxon to hire former alcoholics and drug addicts unless Exxon can prove it would pose a "direct threat."

The oil company paid billions for hiring a former alcoholic who ran a supertanker aground in Alaska, causing a notorious oil spill.

The Supreme Court ruling should curb excess by federal agencies. Further abuse of the ADA will repeal protections for genuinely disabled Americans.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 13, the 194th day of 1999. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 13, 1974, the Senate Watergate Committee proposed sweeping reforms to prevent another Watergate scandal.

On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was stabbed to death in his bath by Charlotte Corday.

Five years ago: President Clinton visited flood-stricken Georgia, where he announced more than $60 million in aid for Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

One year ago: A jury in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., ruled that the Rev. Al Sharpton and two others had defamed a former prosecutor by accusing him of raping Tawana Brawley. Four young cousins in Gallup, N.M., died after becoming trapped in a car trunk.

Clinton the tax-and-spend Duke of Hazard

President Clinton followed in the footsteps of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson when he toured the Appalachian poverty trail. The president's anti-poverty proposals resemble those of Kennedy and Johnson: salvation by government. But, like those politicians of the past who have opted for photo-ops in Bedford Stuyvesant, the Appalachian trail makes nice pictures while improving no one's lot.

Thomas

Speaking in Hazard, Ky., the president said he hopes to use tax credits to "inspire" private companies to build plants and stores in Appalachia. What's this? A cut in a company's taxes will inspire that company to expand its business? Tax cuts as an anti-poverty program previously have been strongly opposed by this president. He seems to believe people cannot be trusted with their own money. Cutting taxes for everyone so we might have more financial discretion is an invitation to irresponsibility, Bill Clinton has said. If any tax breaks are to be granted, the president wants to make sure "the extra" money will be "targeted" where the government wants.

Ever notice how government never has enough money and cannot afford to close failed agencies? Government never asks if we can afford higher taxes. The Congressional Budget Office projects a $3 trillion "surplus" over the next decade. Excluding Social Security payroll taxes, the "surplus" is still $1 trillion. State and local governments report coffers brimming with "extra" cash. But with some exceptions, government is looking for ways to tax and spend more.

The Wake County, N.C., commissioners recently voted 4-3 to raise local property taxes a whopping 16 percent. In Wyoming, a tax committee claims a $183-million "shortfall" and recommends an income tax, a broadened sales tax, an increase in liquor and cigarette taxes and a real-estate transfer tax. Republican Gov. Jim Geringer and many legislators have opposed any income tax in the past, but now say they'll give it serious consideration.

On the way to Dayton, Ohio, last week, I noticed three levels of federal taxes on my airline ticket, adding nearly $75 to the cost. In Dayton, my hotel bill included a New York-like list of state, city and county taxes, adding more than $12 to the cost.

Excessive taxation is a relatively new phenomenon. Since 1993, Clinton's first year in the White House, per person taxes have increased by 25 percent. Checked your phone bill lately? I've lost count of the number of overt and hidden taxes.

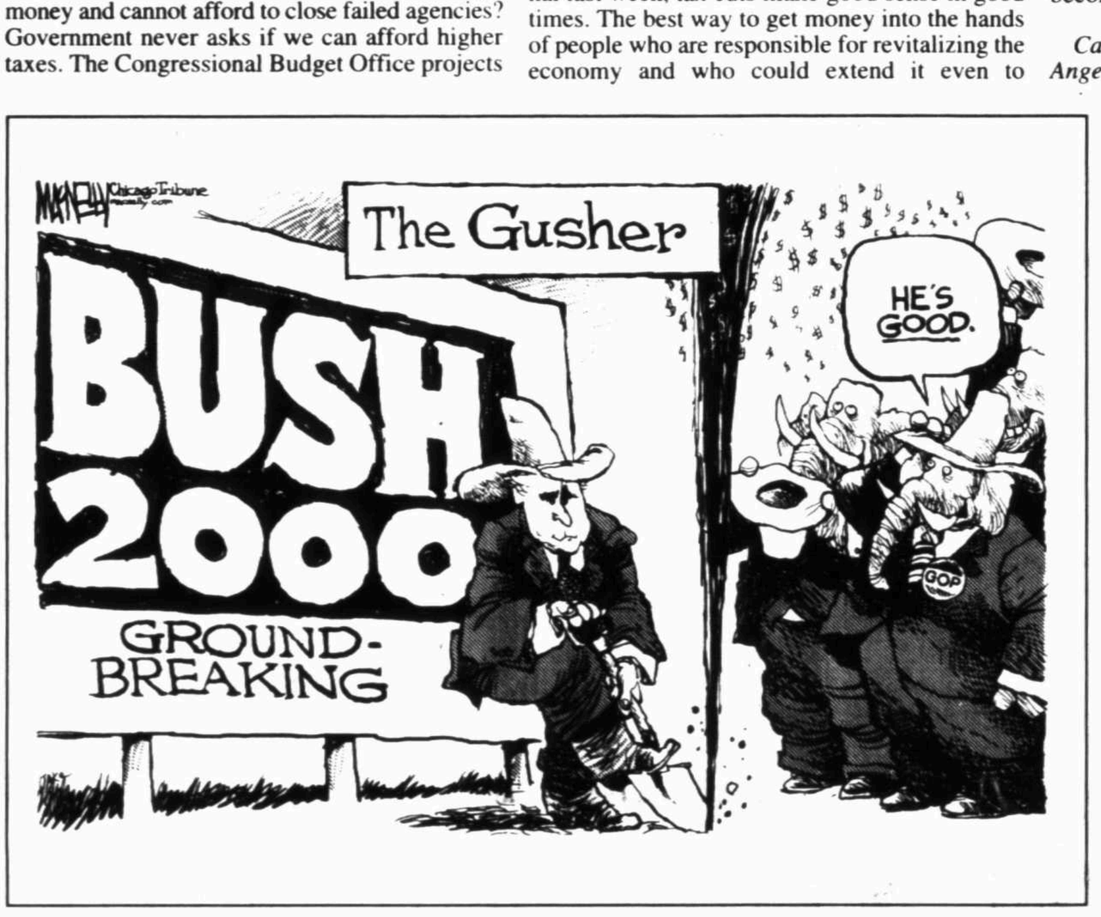

As House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer noted in The Wall Street Journal last week, tax cuts make good sense in good times. The best way to get money into the hands of people who are responsible for revitalizing the economy and who could extend it even to Appalachia is to get government out of the money-management business and turn more of it, along with greater responsibility for managing our lives, over to us.

Class warfare has been fueled by the tax code and the presumption that if you're making $10 and I'm making $5 then you owe me $2.50 to make it "fair" and the government has a right to take your money and give it to me regardless of the reasons for your making more money than I make. We are locked into a mentality that there is a limited amount of money to go around. Statist politicians exploit this fear.

In Appalachia, if one wishes to raise all boats, it's not as simple as opening up new businesses. This isn't like planting corn. Are there enough literate and sufficiently educated people in the region with useful work experience who would make good employees? Businesses think of such things.

Clinton's march through parts of Appalachia is not about solutions. It's about the Clinton legacy and trying to get Al Gore to succeed him. If the president really wanted to do something that will help all Americans, including those in Appalachia, he would fulfill his vow that "the era of big government is over," reduce its size, lower its cost and give us some of our money back. Bill Clinton will do that when "Boss Hogg," the sheriff on the old "Dukes of Hazzard" TV show, becomes an honest man.

No excuse for rudeness by players toward fans

My family attended our first RockHounds game with tickets provided in the newspaper on June 30. Approximately 10 minutes before the game ended my son took his pad and pen and approached a player standing to the side of the dugout.

Holding out his pad and pen, he said, "Excuse me, could you do me a favor?"

The player spit on the ground and replied, "Not now I can't" and returned his attention to the game.

I wish he would have seen the disappointment on my son's face that I did. I could understand his intensity toward the game and not distracting the players by passing the pad through the dugout, but his behavior was inexcusable. If it weren't for the fans who would they play for? Then to treat a child like this tells me a lot about their appereciation for their fans. Maybe they need to come down to earth a little and realize where their support comes from!

By the way, we got autographs from Wichita players instead!

U.S. needs to get out of NATO, United Nations

The war against Serbia has set another very dangerous precedent for those who seek world government. Vaclav Havel of the Czech Republic and William Safire of the New York Times have both pointed out that this war has established that human rights are more important than national sovereignty.

In keeping with that attitude, President Clinton has stated that it is the responsibility of "the world" to deal with attacks against any ethnic group — even when these attacks occur within a sovereign nation.

Until recently, action within the borders of any nation was that nation's business and not the business of "the world." Based on this precedent, the future may see troops from NATO or the United Nations dispatched into the United States because of claims by some that the human rights of blacks, Indians, Mexicans, immigrants, our prison population or some other "victim" group are being violated.

The United States must withdraw from the United Nations and NATO.

Thanks to Frank Cole for gift of walking canes

I want to take this opportunity to thank Frank Cole of Midland who spent many hours turning old and unused golf clubs into beautifully decorated and usable walking canes. Out of the goodness of his heart, he contributed these to be given as door prizes to the senior members of the Exxon Annuitants' Club of Midland.

I failed to thank him at the Christmas Party in December and I am using this space in the Midland Reporter-Telegram to thank him now.

I am so sorry I failed to remember a little etiquette my mother taught me many years ago.

Blame the person, not the gun, for behavior

In response to the letter in the Sunday, July 4, Reporter-Telegram by Suzanne C. Martin, I don't have too much of a problem with her opinion about the killing of animals that are on the endangered species list for the sake of self-satisfaction and pleasure.

Her opinion of guns is, of course, her business.

But in respect I remind her that the freedom that she and I love in this wonderful country has never been free. The price was blood given by brave young men who took guns in their hands and made all this possible. Without the existence of guns, neither of us would be here today.

I would kindly suggest that she re-evaluate her opinion and continue to blame the person that uses the gun as she did in her letter, and not the gun itself.

God bless America and the things that help create this free country.

There are many ways politicians can help children

Politicians seem to have discovered children and profess to be worried about them. Various nostrums for saving children will likely be the main theme of next year's political campaigns.

Reese

Here's a few the politicians will not want to consider:

Start a new campaign to get mothers out of the work force. Believe it or not, there was huge public campaign at the turn of the century against women working, not in order to oppress women as the feminists like to think, but in recognition of the importance of motherhood.

Dumping newborns in a day-care facility until the state day-care system (commonly called K through 12 education) kicks in is one very bad practice. That's not to say all children who spend their formative years in institutional care eight to 10 hours a day will go bad. It is to say it is not the optimum situation by a long shot.

Of course, the obvious thing politicians could do would be to lighten the tax burden. When an American family has to labor practically half a year just to pay taxes, it's small wonder both parents are forced to work to maintain any kind of a standard of living.

Politicians need to reform the monetary system. Just because the inflation rate goes down doesn't mean that inflation is no longer a problem. Inflation is cumulative and never evenly distributed. In many categories, wages have not inflated at the same rate as prices.

Divorce laws ought to be toughened. No-fault divorce, while well-intended, has had bad, unforeseen consequences, one of which is to encourage folks to think of marriage as a casual experiment. Kids need a papa and a mama, and there's no getting around it.

Politicians ought to look carefully at banning the practice of doping American children. About 6 million American kids, including, by the way, several of those involved in school shootings, are on mind-altering drugs.

Restless kids, who used to be calmed down with a hickory stick, are now given dope, and the government encourages it by providing a subsidy in some cases. One of the consequences of dumping Christian morality is to view behavior as a disease to be cured by drugs. It relieves everyone of responsibility and provides profits to the drug companies and jobs for the psychological priesthood. Unfortunately, it creates problems instead of solving them.

Politicians could also engineer a real crackdown on pornography and start a real jawboning campaign to embarrass the entertainment industry into cleaning up its act. There is no such thing as a children's world and an adult world. Both inhabit the same world. Rating systems are just an excuse to continue intellectual and moral pollution and to slyly shift responsibility away from the producers.

There's no mystery about how to inculcate moral standards in children. The human race has been doing it for millennia. Moral standards and acceptable behavior have to be presented to children as absolutes, not as topics for discussion. Posting the Ten Commandments on a wall is a political gesture, not a solution for a child struggling to decide that great human question, how shall I live?

Finally, politicians could set a better example for children by living a virtuous life themselves.

World Bank inspectors find less damage to Kosovo than feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first World Bank team to assess reconstruction needs in Kosovo found significantly less damage to homes, power plants and roads than earlier thought.

And even in heavily damaged areas, bank official Rory O'Sullivan said Monday, many villages have quickly returned to near normal operations.

"Electricity is operating in most places. ... Telephone systems are working, many water supply systems are working. Road access is pretty widespread throughout Kosovo," O'Sullivan said.

He said major damage, from looting and vandalism by Serb forces before they withdrew and from the 78-day NATO bombing campaign, was confined to the province's western part. The eastern sections escaped relatively unscathed, O'Sullivan said.

O'Sullivan and other World Bank officials spoke to reporters on the eve of the first meeting of a coordinating group composed of finance ministers from the world's seven largest economies and representatives from the 15-nation European Union, the United Nations, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

The Clinton administration, represented at Tuesday's discussions in Brussels, Belgium, by new Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers, has said Europe should bear the bulk of reconstruction costs. The United States shouldered a bigger share of the burden in NATO's campaign of airstrikes to force Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevec to withdraw his forces from Kosovo.

On Monday in Brussels, however, German Finance Minister Hans Eichel said aid coming from Europe should not threaten the continent's commitment to budget austerity. That is a key plank in its effort to defend the value of the euro, the joint currency launched this year by 11 European nations.

Asked about earlier estimates that Europe was willing to spend around $493 million annually on reconstructing Kosovo, Eichel said that, pending a more formal assessment of needs, "there are no serious official numbers."

O'Sullivan told reporters in Washington that given his initial assessment of lesser damage to the region's roads and other infrastructure, he would put reconstruction needs at the "lower end of the spectrum of estimates."

Previous reports put a price tag of between $3 billion and $5 billion on reconstruction needs in Kosovo over a three-year period.

O'Sullivan said a more specific assessment could not be made until completion of the World Bank's initial damage survey by the end of this month, in time for the first donors' conference on July 28 in Brussels.

By comparison to the $3 billion to $5 billion initial estimate for rebuilding Kosovo, the estimate for rebuilding nearby Bosnia has been put at $5 billion over three to four years. Pledges from wealthy donor countries and the international lending agencies now cover about three-fourths of that.

While the infrastructure damage in Kosovo is not so great as originally feared, officials said that in some ways the job in Kosovo will be even bigger than in Bosnia because Kosovo has nothing resembling a functioning government with a budget.

"The real crisis is there is no budget in the country," O'Sullivan said. "There is no money to pay to keep the electricity operating, the coal mines operating, the water systems operating."

He said much of the international assistance that is raised will go to paying the salaries of doctors, teachers and municipal workers to keep essential services operating.

The World Bank, which has pledged about $60 million for Kosovo relief over 18 months, said it would send a team back into the areas this week for further on-site inspections. Its initial assessment of lighter damage supported views expressed by the United Nations and other international agencies.

In a report released last week, damage to housing and water resources was labeled as severe in only 141 of Kosovo's approximately 2,000 villages. The U.N. report said 35 percent of the homes in Kosovo were damaged, but only a small percentage were destroyed.

World Bank officials said returning Kosovo Albanian refugees are not waiting for international relief to help in the rebuilding of their homes but are picking through rubble for useable roof tiles and other building materials

Same engine problem caused two F-16 crashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cracks in an engine part caused two Air Force F-16s to crash this year, despite an inspection program aimed at finding problems with the already suspect part, newly released reports said.

The crashes in February and March were traced to the jets' "engine augmenter duct," or afterburner, which gives the planes a boost of power during takeoff or maneuvers. In both cases, the afterburner assembly fell apart in flight.

The Air Force was already keeping a close eye on the afterburners, which date to the 1980s, because of cracks that developed around places where the metal was spot welded.

The Air Force has recorded 13 incidents of serious afterburner cracks since 1984, but until this year the problem caused no crashes of the $20 million jet fighter.

In the March 26 crash. the plane's afterburner had recently passed a special inspection, but the device failed after the plane flew just 18 1/2 hours.

"The inspection procedures were ineffective," An Air Force report on the crash concluded.

The crash report, released last week, said a lab analysis revealed 30 cracks in the afterburner wall. A similar report on the Feb. 3 crash noted 50 cracks.

Both crashes involved student pilots at Luke Air Force Base in Arizona. In both cases, fireballs engulfed the rear of the students' F-16s. The pilots ejected safely.

Since the crashes, the Air Force has asked Congress for $45 million for an emergency replacement program. Starting next year, the aging afterburners on 767 Pratt & Whitney engines would be replaced with a newer version that has not been welded, said Air Force spokesman Gary Emery said Monday.

Congress has not yet acted on the request.

In the meantime, the Air Force is using a fluorescent dye to highlight cracks that may not otherwise be visible, Emery said. The Air Force is also checking the afterburners more often — after they have been fired 1,000 times, rather than the current inspection routine of 2,000 times, Emery said.

"We've halved the time between inspection, and increased the sensitivity of the inspection," Emery said.

Through mid-June, 712 engines had undergone the enhanced inspections, and the Air Force found 63 cases of cracked afterburners, Emery said.

Lawmakers plunge into disputes over taxes, guns and health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress faces a summertime clash of agendas, with majority Republicans determined to craft a tax cut while tending to routine spending bills and Democrats eager to emphasize health care and gun control.

Sixteen months before the national elections, neither side wants to dismiss the potential for bipartisanship on these or other issues such as Medicare. "There will be plenty of time for politics in the months to come," President Clinton declared recently, and he invited top lawmakers to the White House Monday as Congress returned from a week-long break.

But Republicans express skepticism about Clinton's motives, fearing he will try to outmaneuver them rather than make a deal. They also take for granted that the Democrats, striving to gain control of the House in 2000, oppose significant legislation. "The coming weeks offer many challenges for House Republicans as we work to provide tax fairness and relief and reduce the size and scope of the federal government," Republican leader Dick Armey wrote his colleagues during the day.

For their part, House Democrats are perpetually fearful that Clinton will compromise with the GOP, to their disadvantage.

The trend in both the House and Senate is for politically driven maneuvering.

"Americans are paying higher taxes today than at any time since World War II," says Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, who will preside this week over a Ways and Means Committee tax cut drafting session.

"The only reason for this (budget) surplus is because taxpayers are paying too much, which is why they deserve a refund."

Even before the details of Archer's tax cut are known, Democrats are studying the outlines, the better to charge that it would benefit the wealthy to the detriment of priorities such as Social Security, Medicare, health care and education.

The newly sworn in treasury secretary, Lawrence Summers, said over the weekend that a 10-year tax cut in the range of $700 billion to $800 billion, roughly what Republicans are weighing, would face a presidential veto.

Rep. Charles Rangel of New York, the senior Democrat on the tax-writing committee, said the centerpiece of the GOP proposal, a 10 percent across-the-board cut, would deny any break to about 45 million families. Those taxpayers don't make enough to pay income tax, he said, "even though they work hard and endure a high tax burden in the form of payroll and excise taxes."

Whatever the outcome, Republicans will do their best to focus public attention on tax cuts, an issue where they fare well in the polls. The bill will be drafted in House committee this week, and begin making its way through the Senate in different form next week.

The GOP high command hopes to have a compromise bill through both houses of Congress by the time lawmakers leave Washington for a month-long break on Aug. 6. They would send it to the White House after Labor Day and give Clinton a choice of signing it or explaining a veto in a time of enormous federal surpluses.

If Democrats are playing defense on tax cuts, they hope to use their July to focus attention on gun control and health care, two issues where the polls give them an advantage.

Health care was the first post-recess order of business in the Senate.

The Democratic bill on the floor would expand the rights of patients in HMOs, affecting millions of Americans.

Other issues to be debated include the right to see a specialist and the right to sue for non-coverage.

Republicans oppose the bill.

The Democratic bill would add 4.8 percent to the cost for patients and HMOs, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said on Sunday.

The outcome on the Senate floor is unpredictable, and under the rules in effect, Democrats could win the first several skirmishes only to see many or all of their early victories wiped out on a final vote on a GOP-drafted measure.

But several Democrats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there was a political objective as well. With a large crop of freshman Republican senators facing the voters in 2000, Democrats were eager to force them to vote on amendments favored by the public but opposed by traditional Republican business allies.

A campaign finance measure is also likely on the Senate floor later in the month, an issue that most Democrats favor and most Republicans oppose.

Democrats also intend to renew their push for gun control legislation, with polls showing strong support for such measures in the wake of this spring's high school shootings in Colorado.

Internal VA report details employee fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two employees of the Veterans Affairs Department embezzled $1.2 million during the past several years, according to an internal VA memo that blames the fraud on lax security and letting the same workers who process claims also authorize payments.

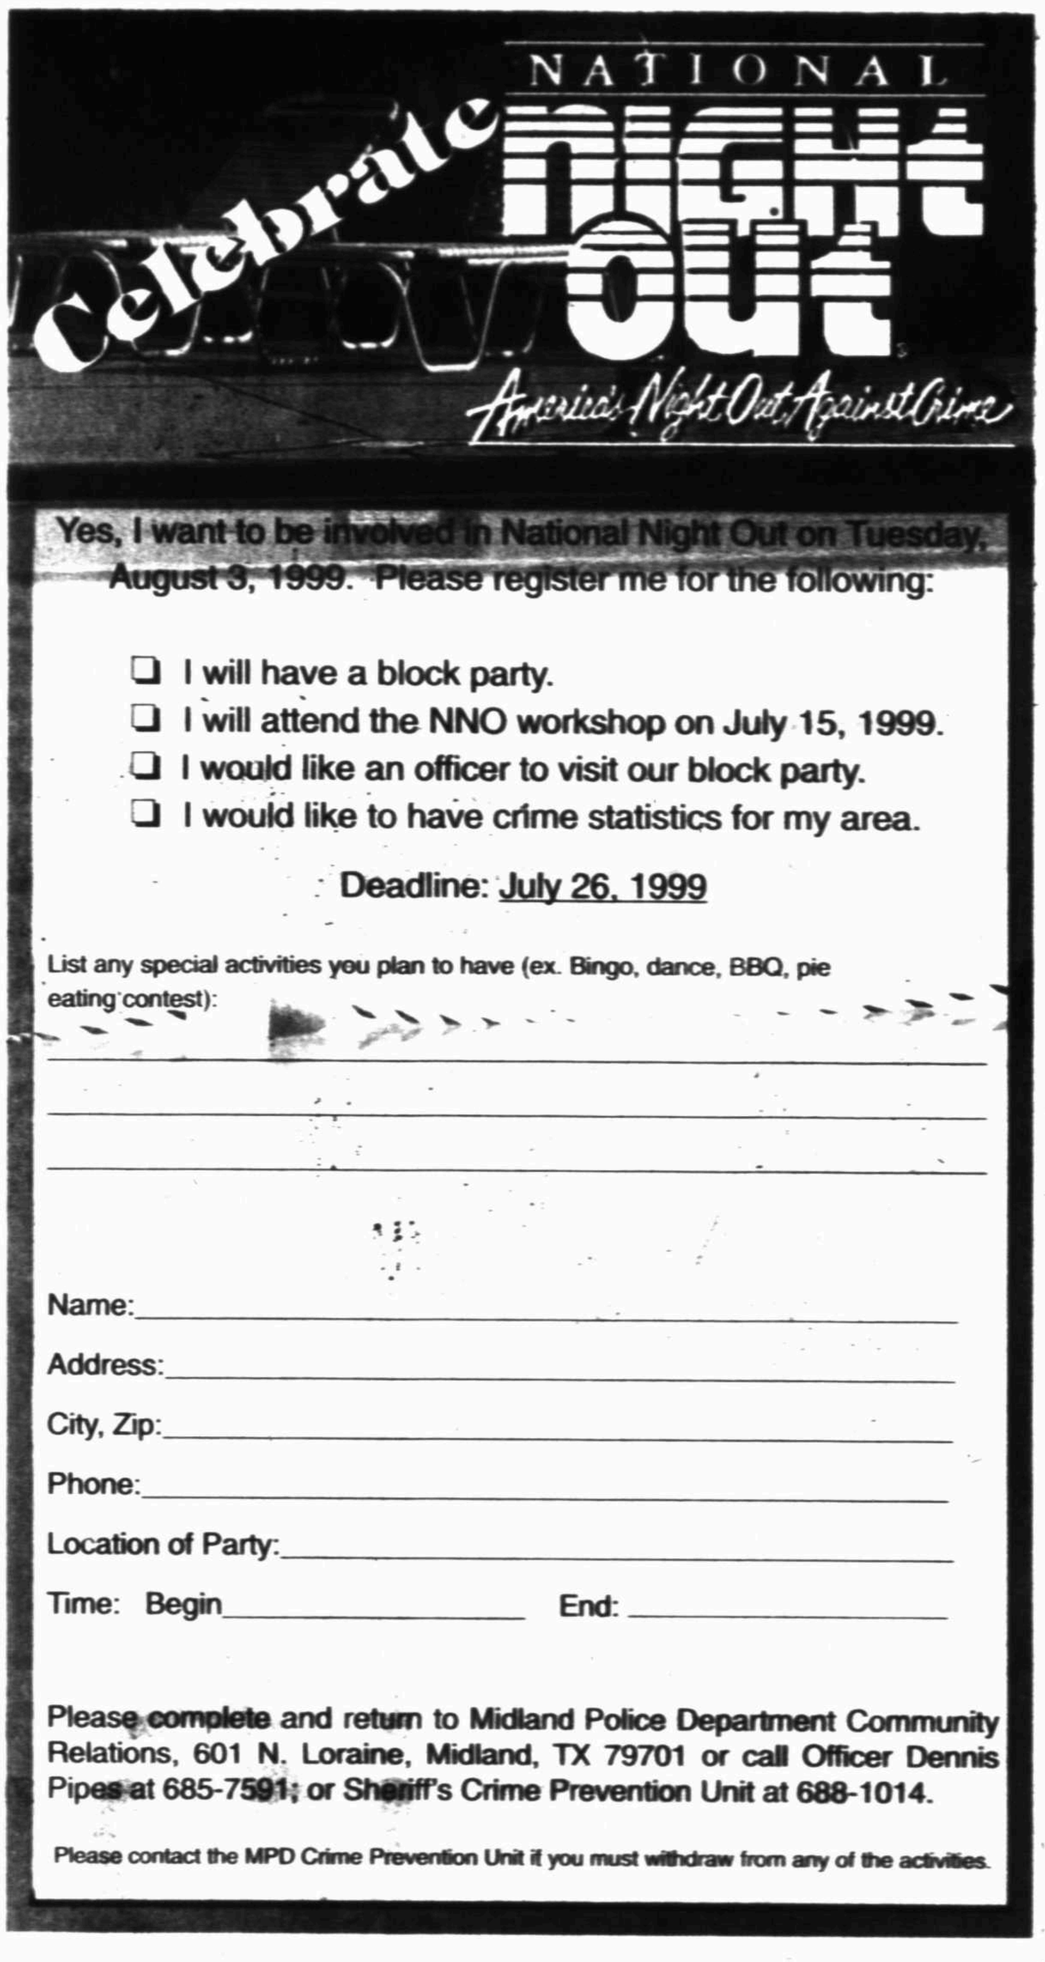

VA Inspector General Richard Griffin wrote the 37-page report June 17 after he investigated how the employees pocketed government money by setting up fake veterans benefit claims. His report, obtained by The Associated Press Monday, says the VA is reviewing its program that sends payments to 2.7 million poor and disabled veterans.

Griffin's memo details how a supervisory claims examiner in the VA's regional office in St. Petersburg, Fla., was arrested in January for stealing $615,451 in benefits. The woman, identified in previous news stories as Joy Cheri Brown, made fake disability claims in the name of her fiance, a police officer who was unaware of the scam.

The memo also describes how a former employee at the VA's New York regional office received more than $620,000 in benefits over a 12-year period. The fraud was uncovered last year when the man, who worked for the VA in 1986 and 1987, was arrested on drug charges in New Jersey and authorities found an identification card bearing the name of a fictitious veteran. At the time, the man was receiving $5,011 in benefits every month.

Ken McKinnon, a spokesman for the VA, said officials were not available to comment on the report.

But he said the VA has proposed adding 440 claims processors at regional offices where government cutbacks have led to a 20 percent reduction in staffing during the past few years. He also said the VA has been working on ways to tighten computer security in the regional offices.

Eight MISD campuses will require uniforms

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

With less than a month left before school starts, Midland Independent School District is reminding parents about uniform requirements at eight campuses and informing them of a slight adjustment to the district dress code.

The district has amended its Student Handbook dress code policy to prohibit students at any campus from wearing "baggy or oversized pants."

"What we're trying to do is inform parents so they wouldn't be out buying baggy pants feeling it was going to meet the dress code standard," said Barney Welch, executive director of communications for MISD.

Welch said baggy pants became an issue because of recent incidents of school violence.

"It goes back to Columbine. Those students had stuffed those weapons in baggy pants."

School violence was also a motivator behind a April board decision to install a uniform policy at eight Midland campuses.

"School uniforms have become more popular in recent times because of incidents of school violence that involved students wearing oversized clothing that makes it easier to hide weapons," added Dr. Joseph Baressi, MISD superintendent.

Whether or not uniforms make a difference in violence will be proved or disproved shortly.

As the first day of school rolls around, Aug. 10, students at Bush, Washington and South elementary schools, San Jacinto, Alamo and Abell Junior high schools and Midland and Lee Freshman high schools will be hard to differentiate from their peers.

They'll all be wearing khaki pants, shorts or skirts and they'll all have matching shirts.

Uniforms, at the campuses, were first approved by parent voters and enacted as policy by the school board in March and April.

The board voted unanimously to adopt uniforms at Midland Freshman High School and South Elementary. Yet just a few weeks later, when uniforms at Alamo Junior High, Bush Elementary and Washington Elementary were addressed, board support had faltered and the issue barely passed with a 3-2 vote.

Board member James Fuller, who had initially supported uniforms, said at the April 14 meeting, "My concern is ... provide me with sound statistical data."

Board member Pat Hodges added, "I just think we need to study it more."

The issue did pass and the board will have the opportunity to study the effects of uniforms in depth this fall at eight separate Midland campuses.

One other concern, among many, surrounding the uniform issue comes to the forefront as parents scramble to purchase back to school clothes.

Board member Adela Marmolejo, who lost her seat on the board to George Lara, was concerned that some parents may not be able to afford the uniforms.

The idea has merit. Forty percent of students at Midland Freshman participate in the free and reduced lunch program, according to the school's principal Don Mason.

Help does exist, however. According to state law, schools that mandate uniforms must provide one to students unable to afford them.

The legislature also provided recent back to school help for parents with a three day sales tax holiday.

Former realist painter follows heart, finds new artistic expression

Vanessa Matthews knows precisely the day her career path changed.

Strolling along through her high school art classes, perfectly content with her realist style of painting, Ms. Matthews, a 1994 graduate of Midland Lee, was given a time limit in which to finish a surrealistic work in class which had been given her by art instructor Herb Cooper. Struggling with Cooper's assignment, Ms. Matthews saw a rapidly approaching deadline.

"I was a super perfectionist," Ms. Matthews said. "Mr. Cooper told me I was taking too long trying to get it perfect and he informed me if I didn't get it finished by the end of class, I'd get a zero. No way was I gonna finish it with the same amount of detail."

In a rush to get the piece finished, Ms. Matthews slapped some yellow paint across the canvas and turned it in. The work was destroyed, but done. Cooper then told Ms. Matthews to put her name across the front — which she did, in large letters, "V-A-N." She turned it over and in equally large letters, wrote, "E-S-S-A." Cooper told Ms. Matthews it was great and hung it in the classroom. Not only was a lesson learned, but a future as an abstract artist was born.

"Back then, I thought I had defined what art was," Ms. Matthews said. "I thought abstract was kind of a joke. I'd never really studied it. I had the kind of mentality a lot of people had: 'Oh, my kid could do that!' "

But Ms. Matthews, 23, said it was that nearly busted assignment that began to break her free from her creative shackles. Always an emotional artist, she found abstract was a perfect way to release energy. Prior to her understanding of the art form, painting had served as more of a way to store up stress. Her discovery of a new way to express herself provided an outlet for what had once been pent up.

Cooper said he doesn't remember the specific incident with Ms. Matthews, noting the large number of students that passed through his art classes in a 30-year teaching career at Midland Lee.

"Vanessa was one of the highlights of my teaching career," he said. "I don't remember the specific assignment, but I do remember she tended to be a dawdler and

With a little push from her high school art teacher, Vanessa Matthews went from a "realist style of painting" to becoming an abstract artist.

Police gear up for National Night Out

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department has announced plans for the Midland National Night Out program with activities being scheduled for July 31 through August 3 in different areas of the city.

"National Night Out is designed to heighten crime prevention awareness, generate support for and participation in local anti-crime programs, strengthen neighborhood spirit and police-community relations and to send a message to criminals letting them know that neighborhoods are fighting back," spokeswomen for the City of Midland, Tina Jauz said.

Ms. Jauz said in the past Midlanders have had block parties, cookouts, pot luck dinners and other events to mark the occasion.

Crime prevention officer Dennis Pipes with the Midland Police Department said that programs like National Night Out help police keep crime numbers down.

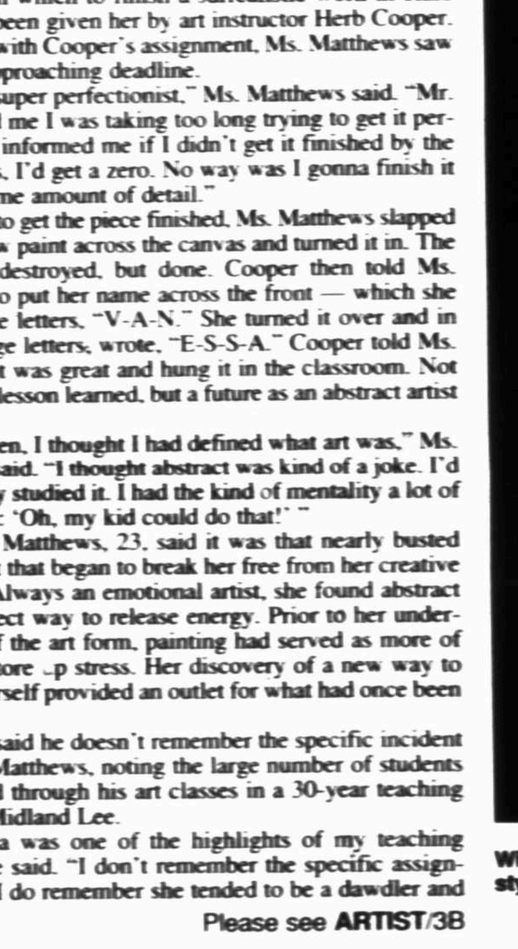

"This is a great way to help the relationship between the police and the community," Pipes said. "We get a lot of help from people who call in. It's better that we get a call on a suspicious person and either arrest him or scare him off than having to come back the next day to do a burglary report."

This year's activities include:

- Thursday, July 15, 6 p.m.: Event Organizer Workshop at Vagos Restaurant at 3312 W. Wall St. in Midland. Barbecue dinner $4.05 a plate for the first 100 to RSVP with Dennis Pipes (685-7591) or Gloria Newman (685-7582). All others will be $8.05.
- Saturday, July 31, 9 a.m.: Parade beginning at Dennis the Menace Park, traveling down Wall Street to the federal building. Line up begins at 7:30 a.m.
- Saturday, July 31, all day: Safety fair at Midland Park Mall featuring specialty vehicles and static displays from law enforcement and public safety agencies. Event sponsored by First American Bank.

German Air Force supersonic fighter-bombers make stopover in Midland

Staff Sgt. Michael Knaup cleans around one of the Tornado's massive engines.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Two German Air Force supersonic Panavia Tornado fighter-bomber aircraft based at Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico flew into Midland International Airport on Monday to inaugurate German Air Force training exercises here.

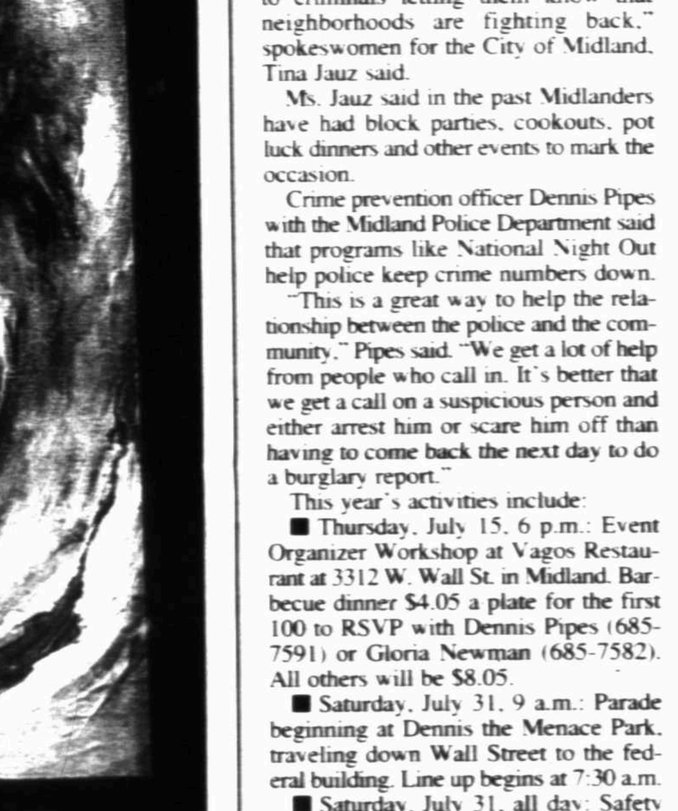

"The fact is," said Paul Erdmann, Midland's military consultant on aviation, "I sold them on coming here because it's a better place ... and because of the flying weather. We asked for the business. It was salesmanship."

The German Air Force and the German Navy fly the $40-million, multi-role Tornado, which is made by a consortium of German, Italian, and British manufacturers, Erdmann said. Germany is a United States ally in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

German Navy Lt. Cmdr. Michael Aberle, who pilots the Tornado, noted that a "couple of years ago, it (the Tornado) was comparable with the F-111," a United States swept-wing fighter manufactured by General Dynamics. "Now, with the F-111 no longer in service, there's no plane you can compare it with."

The Tornado, an interdictor-strike aircraft, has wings which sweep from 25 degree in slow flight to 67 degrees in fast flight.

"It can carry a lot of various weapons, Aberle, 36, said, "and that makes it very interesting."

Old junior high coach used to say 'Real men don't use hair spray'

More rambling thoughts ...

— Here's a line from a Johnny Cash song that pretty much sums up the feelings most "reformed" guys experience from time to time: "She keeps me off the street, and she keeps me out of trouble. But sometimes at night when I hear the wind, I wish I were crazy again."

— You know you are getting old when the person cutting your hair, pauses, clears her throat and gently asks, "Do you want me to trim your ears, too?"

— Speaking of haircuts, I always feel a bit effeminate when hairspray is applied to my hair. It is as though I can see my old junior high football coach shaking his head in disgust and saying, "Real men don't use hair spray."

— It is always refreshing to see people thoroughly enjoy their retirement years.

— Overheard: "It is human nature to hate those whom we have injured."

— Also overheard: "Life is a joke that's just begun."

— Most men do some of their most serious thinking while shaving. There's just something about staring at yourself in a mirror, especially early in the morning, that gets the brain working in overdrive.

— It was, as I recall, Calvin Coolidge who first pointed out, "I've never been hurt by anything I didn't say."

— Is there anything sadder than people who are estranged from their parents?

— All things considered, I'm glad I don't have to take the driver's test again, although it would probably be a good idea for all of us to have to repeat it from time to time.

— Even as a kid, the notion of chewing tobacco always seemed gross to me.

— I like questions to which there are no right or wrong answers.

Driver runs through crash scene, drives over body of wreck victim

GALVESTON (AP) — A motorist has been arrested for driving through police barricades at a motorcycle crash scene, then running over the body of the accident victim, officials said.

Officers were investigating a motorcycle crash that killed Galveston resident Porfirio Villareal, 31, when Russell Lee Rac, 21, drove past the barricade at 2:38 a.m. Sunday.

"I really don't have any idea why he would have done such a thing," Galveston Police Chief Kim Schoolcraft said. "He says he saw a bunch of police cars blocking the roadway ... and he just drove around them. He says then he hit the body and he knew he had done something wrong so he decided he needed to get home."

Police chased Rac for several blocks before he was arrested and charged with interfering with the duties of a public servant and evading arrest. He was released from jail late Sunday after posting $1,500 bond.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

INS changes mandatory detention policy for noncitizens with criminal records

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major change in the mandatory detention policies for noncitizens with criminal records was announced Monday by federal immigration officials.

The new legal interpretation, prompted by lawsuits challenging a section of sweeping immigration reforms enacted in 1996, could free hundreds of immigrants deemed non-violent who are being held pending their removal hearings.

Monday's change affects certain criminal aliens who completed their criminal sentences prior to Oct. 9, 1998, when the controversial mandatory detention provisions took effect.

The action essentially restores the discretion the Immigration and Naturalization Service once enjoyed to free noncitizens with criminal records who are believed not to pose a danger to the community or a flight risk in advance of their final deportation hearing.

Provisions of the 1996 law that took effect in October 1998 mandated that INS detain virtually all noncitizens whose criminal convictions — occurring before or after passage of the law — made them deportable.

Because the 1996 law also broadened the definition of crimes that would trigger deportation and included retroactivity provisions covering convictions prior to 1996, some noncitizens who had steered clear of crime after an earlier brush with the law suddenly found themselves behind bars under mandatory detention.

With the changes announced Monday, INS will initiate a case-by-case review.

INS Commissioner Doris Meissner stressed that no one deemed to pose a threat to public safety will be released under the new policy. Release decisions are subject to review by immigration judges.

"The 1996 act gave INS important new tools that have helped us reach record levels in the removal of criminal aliens," Meissner said in a news release. "In one provision of the new law, at least 13 federal courts have ruled that INS has greater flexibility in implementing the law's mandatory detention requirements than we had thought."

INS officials, who had worried that the mandatory detention provisions would overburden their already strained detention system, estimate their new interpretation could reduce the detention population of 17,400 by about 5 percent.

An author of the 1996 law, House Judiciary immigration subcommittee Chairman Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, had no immediate comment pending review of the new INS policy, said spokesman Allen Kay.

Rep. Ciro Rodriguez, who had written Attorney General Janet Reno seeking a change to the mandatory detention policies, welcomed INS' action.

"If they are criminals and they are terrorists, yes, deport them," the San Antonio Democrat said. "But if they are people who have been here 20, 30 years and are not a threat to our nation and are working, have a family, then we need to be conscious of that. They have a right to (be released on) bond."

TEMPLE BAPTIST CHURCH
Summer Bible Conference '99
Dr. Jack Graham
July 14 • 7 p.m.
The Prestonwood Baptist Church is a 14,000 member church growing rapidly in the heart of North Dallas. Under the leadership of Dr. Graham since 1989, the church has recorded over 3,500 baptisms and 6,400 additions. In June, 1995, Prestonwood voted to purchase a 138- acre site in Plano, Texas. A complete new campus will be constructed and the church will relocate there in the Spring of 1999. In addition to the numerical growth under Dr. Graham's tenure, Prestonwood has implemented dynamic ministries such as: the Monday Night "Metro Bible Study" with up to 4000 single adults in attendance; To Dallas With Love, ministering to hundreds of underprivileged families each year; Power Lunch, an outreach initiative attended by hundreds of business men and women each week; Excel, a Sunday night worship service for college students; Evangelism Explosion, and Powerpoint, Dr. Graham's broadcast ministry, reaching millions of homes across America weekly via radio and television.
Dr. Graham has published two books, participates in significant roles of leadership in the Southern Baptist Convention, and serves on the Board of Trustees for Liberty University. We are glad to have him return to West Texas and speak to our church.

ARTIST: High school teacher encouraged Matthews to work abstractly over-analyzed things. (That assignment) wasn't a turning point in my career, but it's exciting to know it was in hers."

Cooper said that Ms. Matthews turned out to be an abstract artist was a bit of a surprise since in high school she had tended to be subject-matter oriented.

"She had to be pushed into the abstract realm of thinking," Cooper said. "I saw her work at Celebration of the Arts, and it was very exciting. Her sense of color, which has always been there, has really begun to shine. She obviously had some very good college instructors which brought out the best in her."

Merle Burleson Taylor, another local artist who, along with Cooper, served as inspiration to Ms. Matthews, also had high praise for Ms. Matthews' significant progress.

"She had a very innovative booth at Celebration," Taylor said. "Very abstract and very up to the minute, as far as what she wanted to say. Her work is very colorful, very dramatic."

Abstract art, Ms. Matthews said, is not normally highly thought of in the more conservative West Texas, but she works through those periodic feelings of unacceptance of her work.

"I had one man come up to my booth at Celebration of the Arts and just say, 'Why? I just want to know why'," Ms. Matthews said. "I got some weird looks."

Weird looks, though, will likely be scant as she prepares to exhibit her work at a juried show at the end of July in Santa Fe, a sort of Mecca for the art world.

"It's set up like Celebration of the Arts," Ms. Matthews said of the Santa Fe exhibit. "I had to be juried in. There will be a lot of very talented artists there."

Ms. Matthews completed her degree work at Hardin Simmons in 1998, where she said it's easy to distinguish yourself as an abstract artist on a smaller scale.

Two works of which she is proudest involve much emotion.

"Screaming With Your Mouth Closed" portrays the image of a person with clenched teeth. While not violent, the piece depicts hooded figures representing the Ku Klux Klan, and a victim with an open throat, screaming yet unheard. The piece reflects what happens, "when anyone suppresses someone else's ability."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
One of Vanessa Matthew's abstract paintings, titled "Screaming With Your Mouth Shut."

"One of the figures in the piece is carrying a cross," Ms. Matthews said. "Going to a small Christian school, you see a lot of things. Hypocrisy is everywhere. I don't want to sound trite when I refer to it, but people who use the cross or Christianity as an excuse to be cruel, I see the Klan as being the perfect example of that. People also use the concept of loving the sinner but hating the sin, which seems to me to be an excuse to be judgmental."

In another example of her work, titled "Can You Feel Her," a woman is shown abandoned, perhaps abused. At the rear of the artwork, a darkened figure looms in the opening of what appears to be a long hallway.

"The guy I sold it to said it reminded him of his mother when she was having a long bout with cancer," Ms. Matthews said. "He was in tears when he saw it. If anyone feels that way when they see one of my pieces, that's who I want it to belong to."

The abstract nature of both works, as well as others, allows people to not only become more involved in the finished piece but also for them to freely interpret what they are seeing.

"If people stop long enough and study it, they can take whatever they want from it," Ms. Matthews said, likening the process to how a person would interpret poetry or song lyrics.

"There's no wrong interpretations of these," Ms. Matthews said.

Christianity has had a profound effect on both Ms. Matthews' life and her art, and admits to doubting that abstract is a sufficient way of serving God. She says she has recently come more to grips with her faith and feels, despite her conflicting feelings, she has more to say as an artist.

"For a long time, and even now still, I had this concept that you can serve God doing almost anything," Ms. Matthews said. "But this way seems like a very selfish venture to me. I've struggled a lot with knowing whether I can serve God and still do this, too."

UNIFORMS: Tax holiday planned to help parents buy clothes for returning students

sion, the state legislature has established Aug. 6-8 as a tax holiday on clothing and shoes costing less than $100. Some athletic items will be excluded but the bulk of children's school clothing will be exempt from both state and local taxation.

The good news for local retailers is that the combination of uniforms and a sales tax moratorium could equal improved sales.

Randy Houston, a manager at Target, said he expects school uniforms to be a business boon.

"It may increase. People are going to be buying more leisure clothes over the year. So over the long run, it will help our sales."

Houston felt that where in the past school clothes doubled as leisure clothes, students will be buying uniforms for school and leisure clothes for after school.

J.C. Penney's Store Manager Don Lewis also felt uniforms would boost sales, but only temporarily.

"We've had other stores this has happened to and what's happened at those locations is we see an increase the first year. After that, it's just blended in. You don't usually see a big peak again the next year," Lewis said.

As for the sales tax relief, Houston said it would definitely impact sales during the three days.

Lewis added, "I think it's going to be a major improvement. This happened in our Florida and New York stores and it was a big success."

Lewis added that Midland retailers also could expect to see improved sales from New Mexico shoppers coming to take advantage of the tax holiday.

Target already has some uniform items available but has not yet received its complete uniform inventory. J.C. Penney's currently has all uniform items available.

In addition to Target and J.C. Penney's, uniforms can be found at at Eddie Bauer and Old Navy.

Bush collects on Spurs bet against New York governor

AP Photo
Texas Gov. George W. Bush approaches a table loaded with food delivered by a New York delicatessen on Monday in Austin.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Gov. George W. Bush got a tasty payoff Monday.

Ben's Best delicatessen of Rego Park, N.Y., delivered sandwiches for 30 courtesy of New York Gov. George Pataki, who had bet Bush that the Knicks would beat the Spurs in the NBA finals.

The delivery featured matzoh balls, celery soda and a variety of kosher sandwiches, including pastrami and corned beef.

Photographers, but no reporters, were allowed into the reception.

"We had five minutes available on the governor's schedule today," said Bush spokesman Scott McClellan. "The deli owner delivered the sandwiches personally, so we thought it would be all in good spirit to have a photo opportunity and share in the pride that all Texans feel toward our San Antonio Spurs."

The Spurs won their first NBA title in the franchise's 26-year history last month, beating the Knicks four games to one in the finals. If the San Antonio team had lost, Bush had pledged to send Pataki a pair of Texas-style western boots — complete with spurs.

This isn't the first victory for the GOP presidential front runner in his sports team rivalry with Pataki.

The two Republican governors also had wagered on whether the Dallas Stars or Buffalo Sabres would win the NHL championship.

The Stars triumphed and Pataki sent Bush buffalo wings last week and will dispatch an order of sandwiches Wednesday, according to the governor's office.

Bush would have owed Pataki, who has been mentioned as possible running mate for the Republican governor, barbecue ribs and brisket if the Sabres had won.

Trial begins for teen accused in fatal shooting

EL PASO (AP) — Testimony began Monday in the trial of a top area high school football player accused of being the driver in the fatal drive-by shooting of a senior from a rival school.

Miguel Jacob "Mike" Flores, 17, is accused of driving past a house where a party was taking place on the city's east side. His cousin, 18-year-old Ernie Licon, is accused of shooting into the crowd.

Angel Chafino, 18, was killed.

Licon is awaiting trial. Flores is being prosecuted under the state "law of parties," under which a person may be charged with being criminally responsible for another's conduct.

To convict Flores, prosecutors must prove he knowingly aided or encouraged the assailant. Flores' lawyer, Dolph Quijano Jr., contends his client didn't know what was going to happen, so he couldn't have aided the gunman.

If Flores is acquitted, he would be eligible to play football as a senior this fall at Riverside High School.

During his trial, prosecutors are expected to call Jeremy Aguilar, the third person in the car the night of April 24.

For the past two years, Flores has been one of the top high school running backs in El Paso, running for 2,191 yards and 38 touchdowns in that time. As a sophomore in 1997, the 5-foot-11, 170-pound Flores was named the El Paso Times Co-Offensive Most Valuable Player.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, July 13, 1999:

At times, you may think everything is under control, only to have surprises come your way. Stay light and easy when dealing with others. Finances are highlighted this year, for better or for worse. Handle as much on your own as possible. Friends could be demanding, but on the plus side, they offer many ideas and options. If you are single, a friendship could develop into a lot more. Your creativity needs an outlet; a relationship is a perfect one for you. If attached, the two of you may weave quite a romantic haze. However, both of you need to be careful when handling joint finances. There could easily be an error. Money could slip away. LEO could be most possessive of you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Everything seems to be out of control. Extravagance and excess combine. Tempers flare. One thing is for sure — you don't have the whole picture. Perhaps if you're lucky, you might get a glimpse! Allow creativity to play out. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★ Communication brings reactions from a partner. Get to the bottom of problems. Gain insight by walking in another's shoes. Discussions with family remain key to taking the next step. Tonight: Head home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Be careful about committing funds to a work project. Establish boundaries. Know how much you are willing to spend. Find answers. Realize that not everyone has the same reactions. Tonight: Make that additional effort.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Understand what ails a child or loved one. What he might be yelling and screaming about may have very little to do with what is really bothering him. Tonight: Treat another to a home-cooked or gourmet dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Though you mean well, you may come out fighting. Stop and think about what you are doing. Gain a better perspective about what is happening. Don't count on a partner being able to shed light on the present situation. Others are clearly drawn to you. Tonight: Your call.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Reach out for a friend early in the day. You might not like what you hear. Starting a fight isn't going to help. Be willing to deal with facts. Confusion surrounds your work, goals and daily life. Stay centered. Tonight: Take some time for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Establish your role in an up-and-coming project. You might feel pressured financially, but making a decision is important. Set priorities. You might not understand where another is coming from. Bring friends together. You enjoy yourself nearly everywhere. Tonight: Where the gang is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★ You might not be sure what another is saying. Don't hesitate to question. Get to the bottom of what is happening. Sometimes you have difficulty absorbing all the different sides of an issue. Understand what starting an argument could cause. Are you sure you want that? Tonight: Working late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Discussions reveal a whole different side to what is happening. You are full of energy, though you could be motivated by frustration. See the whole picture, pull back and do a better job of listening. Let your sense of humor come out. Tonight: Rent a movie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Sometimes deferring to others helps you understand them better. A friend could be testy, especially about a money matter. Change what is necessary. Your creativity comes out when dealing with others. Tonight: Go for togetherness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Plunge into work. Worry less about a partner who insists on having things his way. A boss could be angry; his expectations may not be reachable. Do your best. Tonight: Let your imagination lead you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Allow your imagination to play out. Know your limits and what you need. A loved one or child brightens up your day. Another communicates in an unusual manner. A change in plans might be absolutely necessary. Tonight: Burning the midnight oil.

Opening lead: Seven of ♡

When you need a specific lie of the cards to bring home your contract, play as if that distribution exists. The reward is worthwhile.

North would have liked a fourth spade for the jump raise of partner's major suit. However, no other convenient invitational bid was available, so North made the best of a bad lot. The result was a pushy four-spade contract.

That was the contract at most tables of a duplicate pairs game in Buffalo, and the popular opening lead was the singleton heart. Most declarers won and tried to cash the remaining high heart. West ruffed and shifted to a club, and declarer went either one or two down, depending on the defense.

When Gerald Fried held the South cards, he realized that, to make the contract, trumps had to break 3-2 and West had to hold the king of diamonds and East the queen of hearts. Therefore, it was not necessary to clear hearts before drawing trumps.

Declarer won the opening lead in hand, cashed the ace and king of spades and then led a heart to the king. The defenders were helpless. West ruffed (discarding makes no difference) and the defenders took two club tricks, but South won the third club, took the diamond finesse and led the jack of hearts for a ruffing finesse. East covered, declarer ruffed, returned to dummy with the ace of diamonds and discarded a diamond from hand on the 10 of hearts to score 10 tricks.

Eubanks recalls game show moments

LOS ANGELES — For game show host Bob Eubanks, there's one moment on "The Newlywed Game" that will be hard to match.

In an interview in Monday's Los Angeles Times, Eubanks recalled asking a contestant to remember something her husband told her not to talk about.

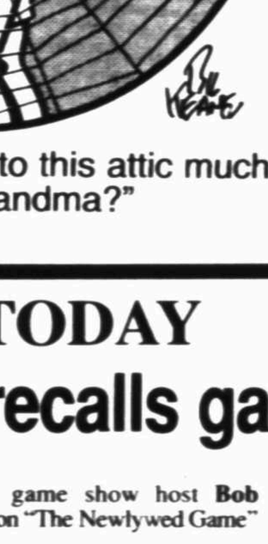

"She answered that her husband and her cousin were going to kill her uncle for the insurance money," Eubanks said. "I was shocked, but even more taken aback when the husband returned and matched the answer."

He didn't elaborate on whether the conversation was a joke or if there was any criminal investigation.

Eubanks has been a TV game show host since the mid-1960s.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Fifteen years after parodying Stevie Wonder and Frank Sinatra in a "Saturday Night Live" skit, comics Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo met up again, this time in the audience for a Wonder concert.

Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo recently reunited at a Stevie Wonder concert.

Wonder played a sold-out show at Resorts Atlantic City on Saturday. Murphy and Piscopo hugged when they ran into each other in the crowd before the concert.

Piscopo played Sinatra and Murphy played Wonder in the 1984 skit, which poked fun at the Paul McCartney-Wonder song "Ebony and Ivory."

Piscopo said there were no hard feelings about the spoof from Wonder.

"We had talked to him during the week and made sure he was OK with it," Piscopo said.

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Gov. Jesse Ventura may be ready to rumble again.

The wrestler-turned-politician will appear Aug. 22 at the World Wresting Federation's "Summer Slam," though it remained unclear Monday what his role will be: wrestler or referee.

Ventura said only that the event will benefit charity.

"He's going to be taking some vacation time. It's business that is separate from his gubernatorial duties," said Ventura spokesman David Ruth, who also refused to elaborate.

Ventura, 47, hasn't wrestled in more than a decade. Back in his WWF days, he was a boa-wearing bad guy known as "The Body."

A spokesman for the WWF also declined to comment.

LAS VEGAS — Marilu Henner believes her latest role — as the murderer Roxie Hart in a Las Vegas staging of the musical "Chicago" — is a perfect fit.

Marilu Henner says she feels right at home in her role as Roxie in "Chicago."

The former "Taxi" driver is both a native of the Windy City and a "Chicago" veteran, having played the role of Roxie 312 times on Broadway.

"I've always had dancing in my blood," she said during a recent break in rehearsals. "Once dancing's in your bones, it's in your bones forever."

Henner also recently wrapped up filming of "Man on the Moon" with Jim Carrey. The movie is due out later this year.

NEW YORK — Greg Kinnear's wife isn't a writer after all, but the Oscar-nominated actor says she has a tougher job.

Kinnear said in the August issue of Cosmopolitan magazine that an article four years ago mistakenly identified his wife, Helen Labdon, as a writer.

"She doesn't work, but she does so much more than I do," Kinnear said. "She keeps my sanity intact and handles all the details in our lives with such incredible grace that I love her for it."

Kinnear recently played Meg Ryan's boyfriend in "You've Got Mail." He was also in "As Good as It Gets."

Texas launches diabetes prevention and control initiative

AUSTIN (AP) — An estimated 1.6 million Texans have diabetes, but only about half realize it.

That's why state officials on Monday unveiled a two-year pilot project to identify and treat diabetics. The program also will concentrate on helping the growing number of children being diagnosed.

Uncontrolled diabetes can lead to a stroke, blindness and kidney and heart disease.

"We are at a crossroads today," said Health Commissioner William Archer. "If we do not do something today then we look in the next 20 years to see significant numbers of Texans with blindness, kidney failure and death."

AP Photos

Texas Health Commissioner William Archer speaks during a news conference Monday in Austin. Archer announced a two-year pilot project to identify and treat diabetics.

The Texas Diabetics Prevention and Control Initiative will be funded with a $1 million donation from health care company Bristol-Myers Squibb, said Archer. It is the largest donation to the Department of Health, he said.

"We recognize the critical need to work in concert with governments, medical institutions, international organizations and community-based groups to effectively address disease prevention and treatment," said Bristol-Myers Squibb area vice president Anthony Coles.

The state will spend $200,000 to alert the public of early signs of diabetes and for prevention efforts under the initiative, Archer said.

Public awareness programs will be focused on areas where there is a high propensity for the disease, including black and Hispanic neighborhoods, he said.

There also will be an effort to set up screening programs in rural areas, including West Texas, Archer said.

Another major aim will be to identify the thousands of Texas who don't know they have the disease, Archer said. The private-public initiative will set aside $400,000 for communities to use for diabetes screening, he said.

"We have to find the Texans that don't know they have diabetes because people with diabetes can live well," Archer said.

It's particularly important to target children who are at risk, he said.

"We need to get into the schools at an earlier age to stop the dynamic where we see 12-year-olds with significant diabetes," Archer said.

Texas has seen a significant increase in the number of obese children, Archer said. Obesity is a risk factor for diabetes, as are high or low blood sugar, family history and limited physical exercise.

Another $400,000 will be used to educate health care providers in the latest treatment technologies. Archer said some doctors don't use the protocol set out by the Texas Diabetes Council, also part of the initiative.

"Medical education and technology move at such a rapid rate that our ability to keep up with it without provider education can be quite limited," said Coles of Bristol-Myers.

Screening and treatments may start in October, according to Coles. Bristol-Myers Squibb is based in Plainsboro, N.J.

Trucker charged in last week's Amtrak collision

EAGLE LAKE (AP) — The truck driver at the center of last week's Amtrak collision was charged Monday with failing to stop for the oncoming train.

El Campo truck driver David Bubela could face a fine of up to $200 if found guilty of the class C misdemeanor, said Tom Vinger, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

Bubela, 21, told officials he did not see a stop sign posted in front of the rural crossing and saw the Orlando, Fla.-bound Sunset Limited too late to get out of the way.

The impact derailed the train. Twenty of the train's 235 passengers and an engineer were injured.

Bubela will not be charged in connection with the tanker truck's missing log book, a violation that apparently played no role in the accident, Vinger said.

A recorder taken from the second locomotive shows the train was traveling at 68 mph, just under the 70 mph authorized speed along the Union Pacific track, said Jay Kivowitz, an investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board.

The federal investigation could result in an upgrade of warning equipment at the crossing, which is marked only by stop signs and X-shaped railroad crossbuck signs. Kivowitz noted that a similar collision involving a freight train and a grain truck occurred at the same railroad crossing three weeks earlier.

No one was injured in that wreck.

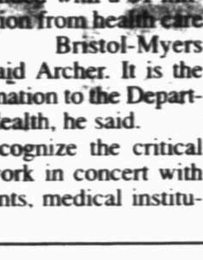

"We've been told that there may have been other accidents at that location, and we will be searching data bases to determine if that is correct," Kivowitz said. He said his agency's investigation will likely take at least six months to complete.

The Eagle Lake crossing is on one of the nation's busiest east-west rail links. Union Pacific officials said an average of 28 trains use the stretch of track each day.

DEAR ABBY

High-flying flags available for bargain-basement prices

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter reminding us of the importance of Flag Day and for urging Americans to fly Old Glory. As I read it, I wondered if your readers knew that by contacting their senator or congressman, they can get a flag for as little as $7.50 — the actual cost of the flag — plus $4 for shipping. They can even have it flown over the U.S. Capitol and have that event commemorated with a personalized certificate.

Van Buren

Regardless of where they get their flag, however, I wanted to join with your patriotic correspondent in urging Americans to take pride in our nation by displaying an American flag. Yours respectfully, U.S. SEN. PHIL GRAMM, WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR GRAMM: The fact that people can purchase flags at cost (plus shipping charges) from their legislators in Washington was news to me. Batten down the hatches —because I'm sure that offer will interest a lot of people.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the bald man from Fort Lauderdale who sweeps his hair over his bald spot and bugs his wife with the foot-long flag of hair streaming in the breeze when they go boating.

I have barbered for 49 years and don't claim to be an expert, but have learned a little along the way. We all have customers with special requests and try to honor them. That head of hair could and should be cut so that no matter which way it is combed or not combed — or windblown — it would not be a problem.

I produce some haircuts just like that one, because that is what the customer asks for and he is paying the bill, but don't ask me to autograph the work as an artist who is proud.

"Baldy" has one good thing going for him. His wife is sick of his denial, and he should take her advice. His problem is in his head and not ON it. Winding a flag of hair over your head is like wearing a sign telling the world you are bald. — WILLARD M. KERK, CHAPPELL, NEB.

DEAR WILLARD: I'm printing your letter because there's no denying that when it comes to hair, you are an expert. But if I see one more letter about baldness, I'll curl up and dye. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In response to your recent column about a husband who attempts to cover his baldness with a comb-over:

Perhaps we could form a support group for balding men and call it "United Hairlines." — WADE KNIGHT, JUNCTION CITY, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: I've had a best friend for nine years. (I'll call her Christy.) She's always been there when I needed her, but here's the problem: She flirts with most of the guys I'm interested in.

Last month I found a guy that I really like. We hang out all the time. I've come to find out that Christy's also interested in him. She never even told me! I had to find out from someone else. He also has the same feelings toward her. He and I are still friends, but I really don't want to have anything to do with Christy anymore. She knew for about a month that I liked him a lot, but she went after him anyway! What do you think about this best friend's behavior? —MELLISA IN THE SUNSHINE STATE

DEAR MELLISA: With friends like Christy, you don't need any enemies! But it may not be HER fault that he's more attracted to her than he is to you, and one person does not "own" another person. "All is fair in love and war" — and this is a combination of both.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." CASA DE AMIGOS
35th Anniversary

Having been on the board of Casa de Amigos during most of the 1970's was a great pleasure and experience for me. We had a really diverse and talented board during that time. Some of them were Mel Goffigon, one of the most articulate persons you can imagine, (and also the quietest); Meg Sutton, whose colorful language delighted us as she helped us get to the heart of the matter, Betty Sheeler, who guided other groups to achieve their goals; Romeo Canales, a highly respected educator; and other great board members such as LouAnn Rogers, Cathy Stump, Helen Cronenberg, Mary Jane Young, Al Talbot, Jane Wolf, Ed Magruder, King Hughes, Jo Warren (now Swallow), Steve Davidson, Bob Landreth, Jimmy Allison, and other valuable folks.

Don Hollinghouse

The director in the early 70's was a young lady name Vangie Hernandez (now Catana), who was ably supported during this period by a volunteer by the name of Margaret Hernandez. Margaret became a paid staff person soon, and continues to this day as a great asset to Casa. Marcia Ingram was also a director during these years and was hired to replace Ms. Hernandez as Executive Director, and did a superb job for a long time, and later resigned to pursue a nursing career. Marcia showed that a great ministry can be carried out efficiently with love and tenderness for the clients.

We outgrew the house we had rented on Dallas Street, so we bought a house from "Miss Agnes" (Fitzsimmons) on Weatherford Street and moved it to Dallas Street and remodeled it, but we outgrew it immediately, so the decision was made to build a new building, and this was carried out very ably by Bob Landreth's board. About this time we had a report from our Community Relations Chairman, Earl Booker, that the lack of affordable housing had become a major problem in our city. This information became the seed for some housing groups to be formed to attack the problem. Casa has been the initiator of several great agencies and services through the years.

Midland's big hitters dominate West lineup

By Jay Peden

The Midland RockHounds are leading the Texas League in hitting, and they've been devastating TL pitching staffs all year. Now five 'Hound hitters will get the chance to devastate many of the league's best pitchers all in one night.

That's because five 'Hounds — Adam Piatt, Josue Espada, T.R. Marcinczyk, Jeff DaVanon and Mario Encarnacion — all were selected to play in the TL All-Star Game July 28 in Tulsa, Okla.

Piatt had to be the most obvious choice to all voters. Through Sunday's game, the third baseman has hit 30 home runs and drove in 98 runs, and both figures lead the league by a substantial margins. His 30 homers represent a tie for the Midland club record. His .352 average also led the team, just ahead of

Abell standouts beat Midland Christian to claim Junior League Championship

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Monday night's Junior League District 3 All-Star Tournament winners' bracket game had simply been too tense for the first six innings for somebody not to break the tension.

Midland Abell had trailed Midland Christian the entire game at Simon Field and entered the bottom of the seventh inning down by two runs after doing seemingly everything not to win the game. At that point, Abell coach Steve Geer put things in perspective for his team.

"I told them to just enjoy the game because it's just a game," said Geer of his dugout speech to his players. "Midland Christian played a great game. My kids just didn't give up."

Not until a two-out single on an 0-2 pitch by Brett Stevens drove in the winning run, capping a three-run rally to give Abell a 4-3 victory and the district championship. With the win, Abell advances to the junior sub-sectional tournament beginning this weekend at Simon.

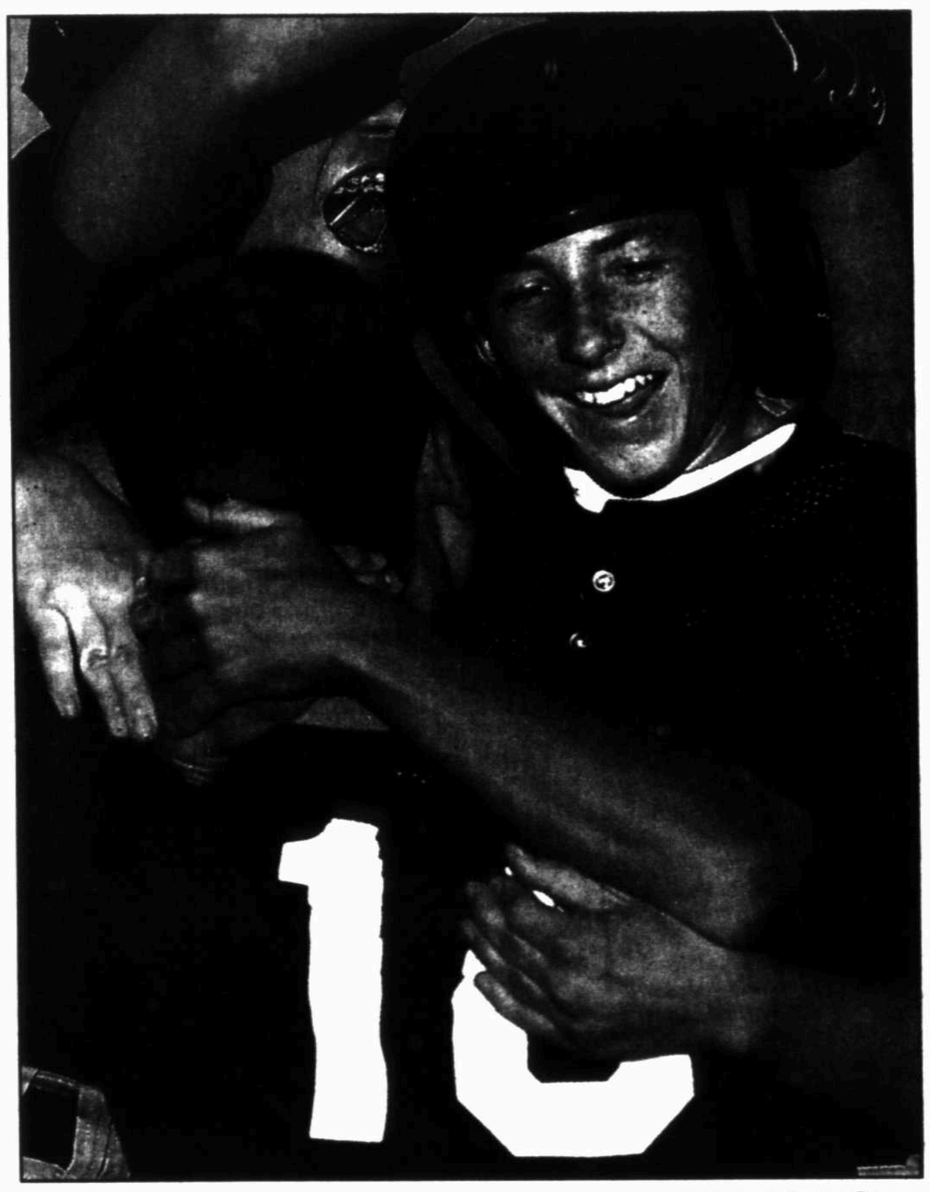

Until the seventh, Abell's hitters hadn't been able to do much against Midland Christian starter Shane Wright, managing only three hits through six innings and no runs through five. But they finally caught up with Wright in the seventh as the first three hitters singled to set the stage for Stevens.

In his first two at-bats against Wright, Stevens flew out to right field, and in the sixth, he walked and scored Abell's first run, so he had gotten as accurate a read on Wright as any of Abell's hitters.

"I hit it hard every time up, but the first couple of times it was right to people," said Stevens. "I was looking fastball the whole time."

With Buck Ramirez standing on third base and the game tied, Wright quickly got ahead of Stevens 0-2. But Stevens stood his ground, and lined a solid single to left to bring home Ramirez

RockHounds follow nice opening victory with nightcap defeat

Jay Peden
Sports Writer

The first game of a doubleheader, the 6 p.m. game Monday at Christensen Stadium, was supposed to go only seven innings, but the eighth inning was really worth the extra time as the Midland RockHounds came away with a 3-2 win in a wild finish.

Bowles hit a two-run single to win Game 1.

The second game wasn't wild; just brutal. The Shreveport Captains hammered Midland into submission with a four-run fifth and a six-run sixth on the way to an 11-0 win. Captain starter Michael Riley (4-1) and reliever Jason Verdugo combined on a three-hitter.

After the Midland RockHounds and Shreveport Captains could score only one run each in the alotted innings of the first game, Shreveport's Travis Young, who went 7-for-8 in the twinbill, homered with one out in the eighth to give his team a 2-1 lead.

The action really picked up in the bottom of the inning, with Midland sending the top of its order to the plate. Josue Espada led off with a single, and Jeff DaVanon followed with a bunt attempt. The ball went about 25 feet up the first base line, staying on dirt near the line. There was doubt about whether it would go foul — that is until Shreveport catcher Yorvit Torrealba got down on his hands and knees and apparently blew on the ball. It veered foul, home plate umpire Mike Jost called it foul — apparentyly having no problem with Torrealba blowing on the ball. Mid-

Ken Griffey Jr. pays respect to the hitting display put on by Mark McGwire in the first round of the home run hitting contest. Griffey would be the one everyone else would look up to at the end. He won a second straight title.

Big Mac, Griffey put on show at Fenway

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON —The Green Monster met its match Monday.

Mark McGwire didn't just conquer The Wall. He embarrassed it, making it look like little more than a picket fence.

He didn't even dent the 87-year-old icon. He sent one soaring off the light tower, about 100 feet above the field and 60 feet over the wall's top.

Clearing Lansdowne Street was easy. A few seemed to soar over the Mass Pike toward the Citgo sign in Kenmore Square.

Even on an official off-day, McGwire set another home run record.

By the time Ken Griffey Jr. repeated as Home Run Derby champion Monday night, it was all anticlimactic. Fenway Park was buzzing about McGwire's 13 home runs in the first round.

"I was having fun," Big Mac said. "I love doing these things. Earlier in my career, when I didn't accept myself as a home-run hitter, I didn't like doing these things. But now I enjoy them. I think sometimes it's better than the game because I haven't really had a great All-Star game."

McGwire's 13 homers off Tim Flannery broke the one-round record set by Cal Ripken in 1991 at Toronto's SkyDome. His longest shot was his last of the first round, a 488-foot drive deep over the screen and into the summer night. Of the eight longest shots, eight were his, all 450 feet or longer.

"I'd like to question a lot of those measurements on some of those balls," Boston's Nomar Garciaparra said. "I don't think it's 480 feet to the Mass Pike."

Baseball's best want piece of historic All-Star stadium

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

BOSTON — Ken Griffey Jr. wants a piece of the Green Monster.

And with the All-Star focus clearly on Fenway Park's famous left-field fixture, Junior has a plan for Tuesday night's game.

"Chip some paint off the wall, put it in a bag and take it home," Griffey said Monday. "There's something I will take from this ballpark before I leave."

He'll let Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire try to clear the 37-foot-high wall — after all, he's hit only eight of his 379 career shots at Fenway. Griffey still won Monday night's home run derby for the second year, overcoming a monstrous performance by Big Mac.

Griffey will let Ted Williams and Carlton Fisk look out toward the wall and reminisce — they spent many years playing in Boston.

Junior just wants a keepsake.

"It's a classic," the Seattle center fielder said. "There are certain ballparks that have a lot of tradition behind them, and this is one of them. And before they tear it down, they've having an All-Star game here."

After a recent run in which many of the majors' newer stadiums got to play host, baseball returns to its roots for the final All-Star game of the 20th century. Fenway opened in 1912, the same week the Titanic sunk.

"This is the one old park I haven't played in," San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn said. "I saw what Wade Boggs used to do here. I'm looking forward to doing it myself."

Gwynn, tied with Boggs at 2,982 career hits, won't be able to help the National League try to extend its 40-28-1 edge. Hobbled by injuries, he'll sit out as Boston ace Pedro Martinez starts for the AL against Philadelphia's Curt Schilling.

Still, Gwynn wanted to take batting practice Monday and maybe field a few balls off the wall. How excited was he about seeing Fenway? He had a book detailing the history of the ballpark in his hotel room.

NL manager Bruce Bochy of the Padres was equally enthused.

"I've never been in Fenway. You step on

Hamm, Houston join sold-out hoops game

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The WNBA All-Star game just became more star-studded.

Mia Hamm, Julie Foudy, Brandi Chastain and other members of the World Cup soccer team will attend the sold-out WNBA All-Star game at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

Whitney Houston will sing the National Anthem and supermodel Tyra Banks will perform at halftime with 100 New York City youth dancers.

Director Spike Lee, a regular at Knicks games, actor Tracy Ullman and singer Liza Minelli are also expected to join the 19,563 fans at the inaugural All-Star game.

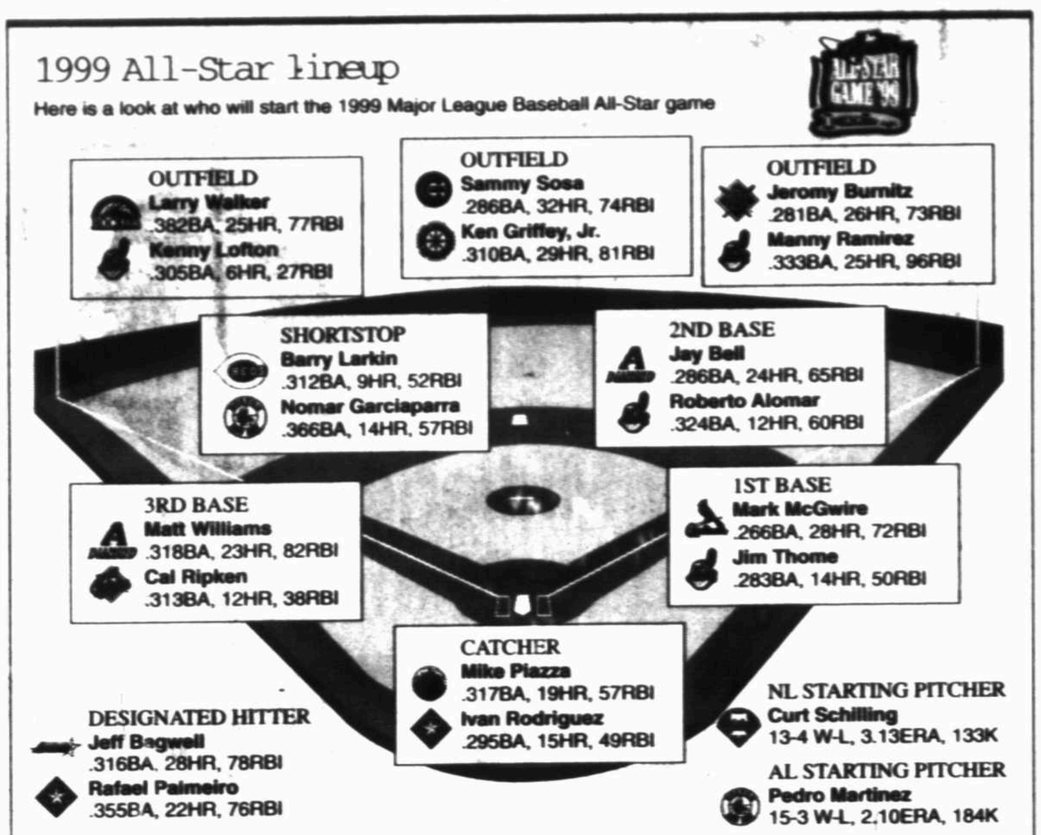

New York Liberty forward Rebecca Lobo, who was voted to the All-Star team despite her season-ending knee injury, will be cheering on her Eastern Conference teammates from the sidelines.

Baseball standouts sound off on Ranger no-show Gonzalez

By Josh Dubow
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — Juan Gonzalez was a prominent topic of conversation Monday after he decided he'd rather stay home than come off the bench for the AL team.

"I think he is totally out of line refusing to be recognized as one of the greatest players," said Carlton Fisk, an 11-time All-Star and the AL honorary captain.

"I don't know whether that is a kind of attitude or selfishness on his part, but it is. I think down the line he may regret the decision."

Gonzalez, the reigning AL MVP, was angered by the high number of votes for the Cleveland Indians. Despite being third in the league in homers and RBIs, he finished fifth in the voting, behind Ken Griffey Jr. and three Indians.

Nevertheless, his colleagues were confounded by the Texas slugger's choice.

"I think the decision he made wasn't a very good decision," said Sammy Sosa, Gonzalez's friend and former teammate. "But that's his business and there is nothing I can do about it."

Tony Gwynn, who has been selected to 17 All-Star teams, made the trip even though he is sidelined with a calf injury.

"Juan decided he didn't want to be here," Gwynn said. "That's his choice. They are not going to call off the game because Juan Gonzalez isn't here."

JUNIOR AND JUNIOR: Ken Griffey Jr. was a late arrival for his All-[illegible]ews conference. At least he had an excuse.

"Sorry I'm late," he said right before receiving the award for being the leading vote-getter in the AL. "My 3-year old, who just got in, wanted me to stay in the room and watch cartoons."

Once Griffey arrived, much of the talk was about his chances to pass Hank Aaron to become baseball's career home run king. Griffey, who doesn't turn 30 until after the season, has 379 career homers — more than halfway to Aaron's record 755.

"I've never really thought about it," Griffey said. "The person that I wanted to beat was my dad — over 2,000 hits, world championships, played every day. That's the only person I wanted to beat because he was the guy I could physically touch.

"Now they're talking about me breaking Hank Aaron's record, and I just say OK. It's an honor that he says it and you people say it, but I still take it one day at a time."

ALL-STAR MEMORIES: With 23 first-timers at this All-Star game, AL manager Joe Torre reminisced about his first All-Star experience.

As a 22-year-old in 1963, Torre was thrilled to be selected as the third catcher, even if he spent the entire game in the bullpen.

He finally got to play the next year, catching Don Drysdale at Shea Stadium in front of his hometown. The two went over the signs before the game for the fastball, slider, change-up, and even the spitter.

They agreed that the fastball and spitter would have the same sign, and since Torre didn't know which was coming, he had trouble catching some of Drysdale's pitches.

"He said 'I'll throw it off the fastball.' And I said OK," Torre recalled. "That was the dumbest thing I've ever done. In the first inning, I went back to say hello to Mayor Wagner (behind the plate) about four times. We had a sign for it after that."

TRIBAL REUNION: There is a decidedly Cleveland flavor to this year's game. And you can't put all the blame on the Jacobs Field ballot stuffers.

Former Indian Tony Fernandez joins six current Cleveland players — Roberto Alomar, Kenny Lofton, Manny Ramirez, Jim Thome, Charles Nagy and Omar Vizquel on the AL squad. The NL has six former Indians: Matt Williams, Jay Bell, Paul Byrd, Sean Casey, Jeromy Burnitz and Jeff Kent.

"That's a quality organization," Burnitz said. "They develop guys and they can make trades with their prospects. I loved it there even though I didn't play. I learned a lot there and so did a lot of other guys."

Many of the former players were forced out of Cleveland because there was no room to push out the All-Stars who were already there.

"It was really tough with Jim Thome ahead of me," Casey said. "You look at the long-term situation there and you realize there isn't much chance. If I hadn't gotten the opportunity to be traded, who knows how long I would have waited."

EQUAL REPRESENTATION: At least two All-Stars agree that baseball shouldn't do away with the requirement that every team be represented at the All-Star game.

"If there wasn't that rule, I wouldn't be asked that question," Detroit's Brad Ausmus said. "I know it doesn't make everybody happy, but I don't know if there is a perfect system."

Minnesota's Ron Coomer, another player who wouldn't be at Fenway Park without that rule, sees both sides of the issue.

"When I was a kid, I remember waiting up all night to see the one Cub, Steve Swisher, get his one at-bat," Coomer said. "I'm glad we have the rule, but it can keep some deserving guys out."

Boston's Martinez, Phillies' Schilling get starting nods

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — Not many hitters have given Pedro Martinez trouble this season. So he's not about to worry now that he has to face Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and the rest of the NL's best.

"What should I do, start crying?" he said with a laugh Monday.

No, just keep pitching the way he's been doing all season. He's 15-3, the most wins in the majors, with a 2.10 ERA. He'll be the AL starter in Tuesday night's All-Star game in his home park against Philadelphia's Curt Schilling.

"I pitch the only way I know. I'm not going to switch anything," said Martinez, chosen for his fourth straight All-Star game, the last two with Boston.

That can't be good news for the National Leaguers, who had to face Martinez in his two seasons with Los Angeles and four with Montreal before he was traded to Boston before the 1998 season.

NL catcher Mike Piazza was with the Dodgers in Martinez's rookie season in 1992.

"Catching him, I knew he was going to be an outstanding pitcher," Piazza said. "He can make you look bad."

Plenty of American Leaguers would agree. In 132 2-3 innings, Martinez has allowed just five homers, struck out 184 and walked only 24.

"I don't think I have a hit against him yet," said AL second baseman Robbie Alomar of Cleveland.

"He throws so many pitches. His ball moves," said Cleveland's Kenny Lofton, the starting left fielder. "He can throw one ball 70 (mph) and the next one 96. You don't see that every day."

He has a chance to become baseball's first 30-game winner since Denny McLain won 31 in 1968. That's a longshot since starters usually work on four days rest instead of three as they did 31 years ago.

But it's not impossible.

"The chances are there if you get the outings," said Martinez, who has a decision in all 18 of his starts. Then he added, with a smile, "After getting 25 (wins) I'll probably ask to pitch every day."

There was little doubt he would start Tuesday night because of his outstanding record and the site of the game at Fenway Park, which "makes it really special," Martinez said.

The selection of Schilling as the starter didn't come until Sunday when he got a call from NL manager Bruce Bochy. The other leading candidate was Randy Johnson. He was 9-3 before losing his last four decisions despite striking out 54 and allowing just five earned runs. Arizona hasn't scored in Johnson's last 34 innings.

"I'm honored to be chosen to get the start," said Schilling (13-4) "but seeing the lineup they're throwing out there, it might not have bothered me throwing second or third."

Schilling, on his third consecutive All-Star team, said, "I'm as nervous for this as I've been for any game I've ever pitched."

Like Martinez, Schilling has a link to the Red Sox, although that was severed more than a decade ago. They drafted him in 1986 before trading him and Brady Anderson to Baltimore for Mike Boddicker in 1988. He went to Houston in 1991 and has been with the Phillies since 1992.

Garciaparra set to go despite injury

BOSTON (AP) — Nomar Garciaparra has missed the last nine games with a groin injury, but he won't be a spectator for Tuesday night's All-Star game.

The Boston Red Sox shortstop plans to start for the AL team in order to test his injury and play in front of his hometown fans.

"It's actually good for me," Boston's shortstop said Monday. "It will help me get ready so I can play Thursday."

That's when the Red Sox resume their season with the opener of a three-game series against Philadelphia. But first Garciaparra plans to start for the AL.

On Sunday in Atlanta, he missed his ninth consecutive game with a strained left groin. He doesn't feel he's jeopardizing himself by playing Tuesday.

"I've always said my team's first," said Garciaparra, third in the AL with a .366 batting average. "I probably could have played yesterday (Sunday) and if we had a game today I probably would have played today."

It was unclear how long Garciaparra, batting second, would play. AL manager Joe Torre of the New York Yankees said he would consult with Boston manager Jimy Williams, one of his coaches.

Garciaparra will play before his home fans at Fenway Park after winning the fan balloting with 1,089,974 votes. New York's Derek Jeter was second with 1,069,528.

GAME: Players take on the Monster

(From 1C)

the field, it's hallowed ground," he said. "I hate to age Carlton, but I was a Reds fan and now I get to walk in there and see where it really went out."

Fisk's down-the-line, 12th-inning shot that won Game 6 of the 1975 World Series remains one of baseball's most enduring images.

"The Green Monster, when you talk about it, everybody knows where the Green Monster is," said Fisk, the AL's honorary captain. "There are plans that they're going to build a brand new, old-fashioned ballpark. That doesn't cut off your memories and the stories that have taken place in the old ballpark."

Williams, who will throw out the ceremonial first ball, put on a one-man show in the 1946 All-Star game at Fenway. He hit two homers, including a drive off Rip Sewell's "eephus" pitch, in going 4-for-4 with five RBIs in a 12-0 rout.

That said, the 80-year-old Williams claimed he won't miss Fenway.

"No, I'm not sentimental about it. I want to see a new ballpark where the seats are bigger," he said Monday.

"I've heard a lot of fans say, 'Oh, geez, I wouldn't even think about going anyplace else.' It wasn't that great. The park is just an old park."

With a lot of history wrapped up in that wall.

At times, it was made of wood, brick, concrete and sheet metal. Now, the side facing the hitters is all tin and stretches about 240 feet toward center field.

It became known as the Green Monster in 1947 when ads for Lifebuoy, Gem Blades and other products were covered up with green paint. There's also a thin ladder running to the top — grounds crew members use it to retrieve balls that wind up in the 23-foot screen on top.

One other fact about the wall: The initials of former owner Thomas Austin Yawkey and his wife, Jean Remington Yawkey, appear on it in morse code. Easy to overlook, a series of dots and dashes for "T-A-Y" and "J-R-Y" show up in the vertical white lines to the left of pitchers' numbers on the out-of-town scoreboard.

Hugh Bradley of the Red Sox hit the first shot over the wall on April 26, 1912 — "Few of the fans who have been out to Fenway Park believed it was possible," the Boston Herald reported the next day.

Sosa hit his first major league homer over the Monster off Roger Clemens in 1989.

"It made me real proud of myself," the Chicago Cubs slugger said. "After I did that, I knew I could play in the major leagues."

McGwire hit 18 home runs at Fenway, most of them to left. In the first round of Monday's derby, he hit 13 in 23 swings, including a drive off a light tower above the wall.

Rocky Colavito connected for the AL in the 1961 All-Star game at Fenway, stopped by rain after nine innings for a 1-1 tie.

Marked at 310 feet down the line in left, many believe the wall isn't even that far.

"It's right on top of you," Anaheim reliever Troy Percival said. "It's much too close for comfort when you're on the mound."

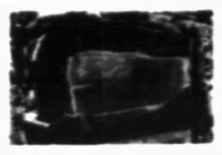

Trust ol' Ted Williams on this one.

"The wall's 290 feet," he said. "When I first got there in left field, they had a rise out there to let you know you're getting near the fence. But that was taken out.

"But still I knew the wall was only 290 feet. And I had a good conception of how close I was," he said.

Fenway Park was the site of the second of two All-Star Games played in 1961. Solid pitching dominated this game that was called because of rain after the ninth inning with the score 1-1. The Tigers' Rocky Colavito hit a first-inning home run for the American League.

Note: There were two All-Star Games played each in the years 1959 through 1962. No MVPs were selected until 1962.

their feet, applauding him. Just like all of baseball last year.

Rafael Palmeiro and a few other players followed every swing with camcorders. Even Griffey sounded awed.

"(You're) watching Mark hit them 500 feet when you're getting them over like 420, 430, and his balls are doing the postal service, just flying by you and dropping mail off at your house," Griffey said.

Big Mac's attack totaled 5,692 feet — more than a mile — and a lot more than he hit one mile up at Denver's Coors Field last July.

McGwire, who hit 18 home runs at Fenway while he played for the Oakland Athletics, powered the NL to a 27-10 victory. But when it came to the individual title, he got just three in the second round and didn't make it to the final.

"Sitting and waiting tired me out," he said. "I probably tried a little too hard. I was more relaxed in the first round."

Rolling it to the hole

Andrews' Jennifer Sanders, a Midland College women's signee, competes in one of the two Westcott junior golf events held Monday in Midland.

ROCK: RockHounds, Captains split

(From 1C)

land manager Tony DeFrancesco spent the next 10 minutes protesting the call, to no avail. He even protested the game.

The umpire's call may have been the right one. In the press-box, official scorer Bobby Dunn couldn't find anything in the official rule book that said a catcher blowing on the ball was against the rules.

The foul ball meant that Midland wouldn't be able to start its rally with two on and no out; Espada went back to first base. The situation looked worse when DaVanon struck out, but all the fuss soon seemed moot.

Adam Piatt followed with a bloop double, letting Espada advance to third. The Captains walked T.R. Marcinczyk intentionally to load the bases, and with two outs, Justin Bowles pulled a two-run single to right field to end the game.

The rally made a winner out Jim Brink, who was making his Double-A debut after being called up from Class A Modesto, where he compiled 21 saves in 31 games with an ERA of 3.77. There was a roster spot for Brink because the back-to-back-to-back homers Midland's Jake O'Dell gave up in the ninth inning of Thursday's game were apparently too much for him. He left the team and is officially considered retired.

WNBA: Swoopes gets most votes

(From 1C)

sympathy votes,'' said Lobo, who signed autographs during all-star festivities on Monday. ''My mom may have realized you can vote more than once.''

Rookie sensation Chamique Holdsclaw of the Washington Mystics will start for the Eastern Conference along with teammate Nikki McCray and the Liberty's Teresa Weatherspoon and Kym Hampton.

Lobo's replacement in the starting lineup has not been announced.

''It's the first time in my life I can cheer for Chamique,'' said Lobo, whose team has lost twice to the Mystics this season.

Sheryl Swoopes, the fan favorite with 84,632 votes, will start for the Western Conference. She'll join second-place vote-getter Cynthia Cooper (80,806) and Tina Thompson of the Houston Comets, Lisa Leslie of the Los Angeles Sparks and Michele Timms of the Phoenix Mercury.

The All-Star game may be the perfect occasion for the WNBA's first dunk, Hampton said.

''The All-Star game is for spectacular stuff,'' said Hampton, who will guard Leslie. ''(Lisa) could dunk. I would move aside and let her dunk because this is for women's basketball. This is for people to say, 'Wow.' We're here to have a great time.''

Notes: Cleveland's Linda Hill-MacDonald will coach the East all-stars and Houston's Van Chancellor will coach the West. ... Liberty guard Vickie Johnson was selected to fill Lobo's all-star spot, but Hill-MacDonald will decide who will getting the starting forward nod. ... The WNBA attendance is down 2.8 percent from last season. The 12-team league is averaging 9,695 through 80 games, down slightly from 9,970 of last season.

JUNIOR: Stevens collects winning hit

with the winning run.

That Stevens was in a position to win the game can be attributed to Abell's can-do attitude which was reflected in the seventh. Winning pitcher Aaron Timmerman led off the inning with a single to right field and Ryan Dupriest followed with a base hit to left. But the key blows which followed came from what might have been unexpected sources.

Pinch hitter Keith Vest came on and tried to sacrifice Timmerman and Dupriest over, but bunted the first two pitches foul. That might have been a blessing in disguise.

"He hit the ball well at coach Ben's (Midland Lee baseball coach Jesse Benavidez) camp this morning," said Geer of Vest. "He (Benavidez) gave our kids a lot of confidence, and that's why I felt I could use Keith."

Vest then lined two balls barely foul the other way down the right field line before lining a single to left which loaded the bases. Another pinch hitter, Ramirez, then grounded deep into the hole at shortstop, and Midland Christian's Dillon Farish bobbled it before taking the force out at second, allowing Timmerman to score and make it 3-2.

Braden Lathram then hit a fly ball to Brandon Williams in left field and Dupriest raced for home. Williams' throw to the plate arrived in time, but Dupriest's slide knocked the ball loose from catcher Timmy Brock and the game was tied.

Meanwhile, Ramirez stole second and moved up to third on the fly ball. The rest was up to Stevens, the sixth batter of the inning.

"I was just anxious to hit the ball," said Stevens. "I was hoping to get the opportunity to bat. I knew I could hit it hard if I got the chance."

Not a lot of balls were hit hard in the game. Both teams had only seven hits apiece, and few of them were solid.

Timmerman often found himself in danger, and in the third through fifth innings he faced bases loaded situations. However, he surrendered only two runs in those innings.

"With Aaron you never know," said Geer. "He can lose it and get it back in the space of one batter. He's got the best fastball on the team."

Eric Paulson had two hits for Midland Christian. Williams drove in a run with a single as did Josh Wilson with a sacrifice fly.

"We had to win five in a row to take the championship," said Midland Christian coach Stacy Wright, whose team would have had to return to Simon today for another game against Abell for the championship if it had won Monday. "We got down 7-0 in the game against (Odessa) Sherwood National and we didn't give up.

"I think today Abell maybe wanted it a little bit more than we did."

Drew Winston had two hits for Abell.

TEAM: Five 'Hounds make squad

(From 1C)

Espada (.350) and DaVanon (.338). Those numbers are 3-4-5 in the league, behind two El Paso Diablos who have been called up to Triple-A and will soon not have enough plate appearances to qualify for the TL batting race..

Espada, the team's shortstop, had a hitting streak of 17 games earlier this season, the longest for a 'Hound this season.

DaVanon, an outfielder, has nine homers to go with the fifth-best batting average in the league. Encarnacion, also an outfielder, is hitting only .304, but he had hit in 34 of his last 36 games going into Monday's doubleheader. His 16 homers are fourth in the league.

Marcinczyk, the first baseman, would be close to the RBI lead in the league if it weren't for Piatt. His 70 RBIs were third in the league behind Piatt and Tulsa's Mike Lamb with 72. He's batting .300 with 15 homers.

Piatt and Espada will also play in the Double-A All-Star Game, a national game set for Wednesday in Mobile, Ala. Starting pitcher Tim Manwiller also was selected to play in that game, but he has since been promoted to Triple-A Vancouver.

Scurry confesses about steps taken

LOS ANGELES — U.S. goalkeeper Briana Scurry admits she may have bent the rules in making the lunging save on a penalty kick that helped her teammates beat China for the Women's World Cup.

''Everybody does it,'' Scurry told the Los Angeles Times. ''It's only cheating if you get caught.''

After China and the United States made their first two penalty kicks, Scurry took a few steps forward before Liu Ying struck the ball. That gave Scurry the angle she needed to dive to her left and block the shot.

That was the only penalty kick missed in Saturday's championship game at the Rose Bowl, and that was enough to give the United States the title.

Technically, a goalkeeper can move only laterally along the goal line before a penalty kick is attempted, but that's the strictest interpretation of the rules.

ESPN will replay World Cup match

NEW YORK — The United States World Cup victory over China on Saturday will be replayed Tuesday night opposite the Major League Baseball All-Star game.

ESPN will re-broadcast the game Tuesday at 8 p.m, the same time that Fox begins its All-Star game telecast at Fenway Park in Boston.

The shootout victory by the United States was the most-watched soccer game ever on U.S. network television.

HONG KONG (Bloomberg) — Anheuser-Busch Cos., the world's largest brewer, sued to force the Czech Republic's Budejovicky Budvar NP to remove its Budweiser beer from shelves in Hong Kong, the latest move in their century-long trademark dispute.

Anheuser-Busch said it has owned the trademark for Budweiser and Bud in Hong Kong since 1950. It's taken legal action to prevent the Czech company from selling beer under the same name.

St. Louis-based Anheuser-Busch said it named its beer Budweiser in 1876, 19 years before Budejovicky Budvar started operating. The two brewers have filed suits around the world —including in Israel and Vietnam — over the trademark rights.

State-owned Budejovicky Budvar is based in the southern Czech city of Ceske Budejovice, which prior to World War I was called Budweis.

Some Czech companies brewed a beer called Budweiser hundreds of years before either company started operating, Budvar executives said.

In June, the U.S. government began investigating whether a ban on imports of Budvar's Budweiser beer should be tightened. Anheuser-Busch wants Budvar to be permanently barred from using the Budweiser brand name in the U.S. The company filed its case with the government after it found evidence of Budvar's Budweiser being served at a hotel in Maryland.

Anheuser-Busch shares rose 7/16 to 74 15/16. Monday.

Coke recall cost

ATLANTA (Bloomberg) — Coca-Cola Enterprises Inc., the world's largest bottler of Coke products, said recalls of its drinks in Europe last month will cost it $103 million in the second quarter, about two-thirds more than it had estimated.

Coca-Cola Enterprises, 42 percent-owned by Coca-Cola Co., raised the cost estimate from $60 million because consumers returned a greater-than-expected number of drinks, which it had to destroy. The company said it may be able to recoup some of the costs through insurance, though second-quarter earnings won't include insurance reimbursement.

Illnesses among 250 Belgian and French consumers last month forced Coca-Cola to suspend sales and recall its drinks, one of the worst blemishes to Coke's public image in its 113-year history. Coca-Cola has already warned second-quarter profit will be hurt by the health scare as well as struggling overseas economies.

Also, the company said about 17 million cases of drinks were recalled, less than 1 percent of the company's yearly volume.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The euro fell closer to parity with the dollar Monday, sinking to yet another low as weak industrial production figures from Germany indicated that Europe's stagnant economy is not recovering as quickly as hoped.

The dollar also was quoted at 1.5830 Swiss francs, up from 1.5793, and 1.4796 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4733. The British pound rose to $1.5559 from $1.5480.

Currencies of the 11 countries participating in the euro are no longer traded separately and are tied to the euro by a fixed rate.

Dow edges up, but most stocks slip

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow industrials edged to another record high but most stocks fell Monday in cautious trading before the impending flood of quarterly profit reports.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.28 to 11,200.98, turning positive with only minutes left in the session. It was the third closing record in four sessions for the Dow, which has now gained more than 2,000 points, or 22 percent, in 1999.

Most broad-market indicators posted small losses on the day.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 2.63 to 2,790.44 after flirting with a second straight record high. The Standard & Poor's 500 index, which also closed at a new high on Friday, fell 4.18 to 1,399.10.

With the flow of reports on the just-ended second quarter beginning in earnest on Tuesday, traders were hesitant to make any big bets. Most stocks traded in a narrow range as investors waited to see whether profit reports will justify the market's record-setting climb.

"Clearly, a market without conviction and one that is inclined just to wait and see as we get through these second-quarter earnings reports," said Richard E. Cripps, chief market strategist for Legg Mason of Baltimore.

But, he noted, with most economic indicators pointing to continued growth, "market sentiment is still bullish."

General Motors rallied late in the session to lead the Dow higher, rising 2 9/16 to 68 11/16. That helped offset a drop of 1 3/4 to 115 3/8 by General Electric, which posted its results last week. Other sizable Dow gainers included: American Express, up 1 3/4 to 135 1/4; International Paper, up 1 3/4 to 53 1/2; Chevron, up 1 11/16 to 98 15/16; and Eastman Kodak, up 1 11/16 to 72 13/16.

Among leading Nasdaq technology names, Sun Micrososytems rose 2 1/4 to 75 3/16. Intel, scheduled to release its earnings on Tuesday, retreated 13/16 to 65 7/16.

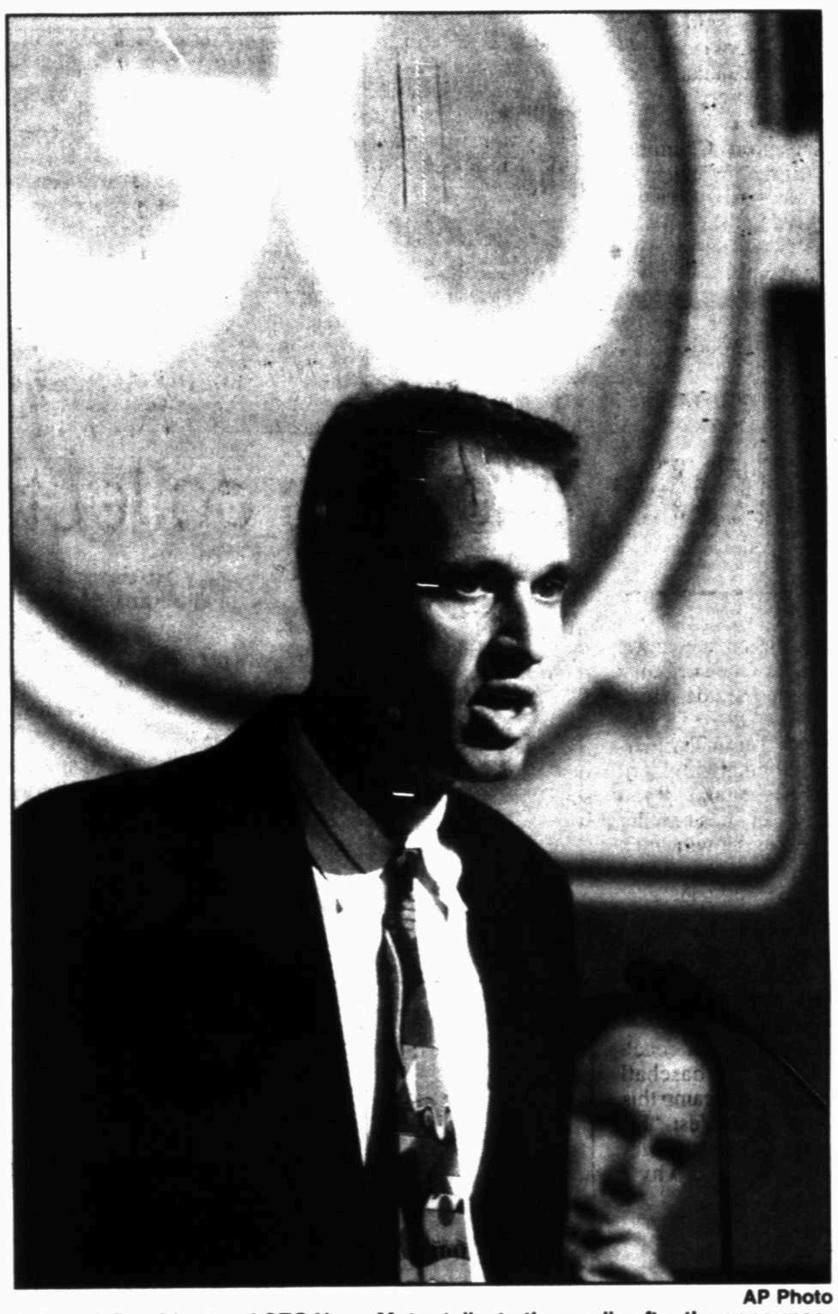

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a 7-to-6 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,381 up, 1,624 down and 559 unchanged, but Nasdaq advancers finished with a slim lead.

Composite volume of all NYSE-listed shares totaled 843.21 million shares, down slightly from 856.55 million on Friday.

The NYSE composite index fell 1.89 to 655.79, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.81 to 815.54.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 1.32 to 459.30.

Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average rose 1.88 percent. In Europe, Germany's DAX index rose 0.23 percent, Britain's FT-SE 100 fell 0.26 percent, and France's CAC-40 rose 0.31 percent.

Infoseek President and CEO Harry Motro talks to the media after the announcement that the Walt Disney Company would aquire the remainder of Infoseek.

Disney acquires remainder of Infoseek to merge into go.com

NEW YORK (AP) — The Walt Disney Co. is consolidating its online strategy by acquiring the remainder of Infoseek Corp. that it didn't already own.

Disney will pool its existing Internet assets with those of the Sunnyvale, Calif.-based Infoseek to create a single entity called go.com, which will serve as the online arm of the entertainment conglomerate, the companies announced today.

Disney acquired a 42 percent stake in Infoseek last year and worked with it to create the Go Network, which is powered by Infoseek's search capabilities. The site, which competes with Yahoo!, Excite and other major "portal" sites, offers Web searches, entertainment and personalized news.

The combined entity will include the Web site for Disney's TV network, ABC.com; the online store that sells Disney products; the children's site Disney.com; and the sports site ESPN.com. Disney also will add its share of several Internet projects it co-owns with Infoseek.

Infoseek shareholders will receive 1.15 shares of the new company for each Infoseek share they own. Disney will own about 72 percent of go.com, which is expected to have revenues of about $350 million this fiscal year.

Disney had revealed a month ago that it was in talks to acquire the remainder of Infoseek.

Barnesandnoble.com lets users earn commissions

By Anne Pollak
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK — Barnesandnoble.com Inc., the No. 2 online bookseller, said it started a program that lets users earn a commission on sales if they direct other people to the retailer's Internet site through links in their e-mails.

Through the service, called MybnLink, members can earn 5 percent of sales generated through e-mail referrals or give the money to certain charities. Commissions are earned on sales of books, music, videos, software or magazines. A member could e-mail a friend recommending a book, for instance, and get the commission if the person uses the e-mail link to make a purchase.

MybnLink, which started today, is the latest move by barnesandnoble.com to compete with No. 1 online seller Amazon.com Inc., which got a two-year lead selling books online. Barnesandnoble.com said the program is the first of its kind, and will increase its customer base and lower marketing costs.

Barnesandnoble.com is jointly owned by Barnes & Noble Inc. and German media company Bertelsmann AG.

Its two partners in MybnLink are Mail.com Inc., a provider of free e-mail services, and Be Free Inc., a technology company that will track which sales originated from which e-mail address. Barnesandnoble.com declined to comment on the financial arrangement among the three companies.

Be Free said it agreed to give Barnesandnoble.com a month's lead time before offering similar services to other online merchants.

MybnLink was modeled on barnesandnoble.com's existing affiliate network, where users can set up links to the company's online store on their own Internet sites. That program now has more than 120,000 members.

The five charities participating in MybnLink are the American Red Cross, CARE, National Wildlife Federation, Special Olympics and First Book, a literacy foundation. Barnesandnoble.com will donate an additional 1 percent of all sales generated through MybnLink to First Book.

Users will be mailed referral commission checks on a quarterly basis, barnesandnoble.com said. There's no charge to participate in the program. Members can use existing e-mail addresses or register for a free e-mail account through Mail.com.

The shares of barnesandnoble.com fell 1 to 18 1/4. Barnes & Noble rose 3/4 to 24 15/16, and Mail.com fell 9/16 to 24 7/16. All three companies are based in New York.

Ingram Micro signs $10 billion agreement with CompUSA

SANTA ANA, Calif., (Bloomberg) — Ingram Micro Inc., the world's biggest computer distributor, said it reached a preliminary agreement valued at about $10 billion to build and service machines that retailer CompUSA Inc. sells directly to business customers.

CompUSA will close its distribution center in Grapevine, Texas, near Dallas, and turn over all distribution, custom assembly and configuration of personal computers to Ingram Micro for five years. Dallas-based CompUSA, the largest U.S. PC retailer, already is Ingram Micro's largest customer.

Ingram Micro is benefiting from a decision in May by Compaq Computer Corp., the world's biggest PC maker, to winnow distributors from 39 to just four — Ingram Micro and three others. At the time, Ingram Micro said the move could add as much as $4 billion in sales, which were $22.03 billion last year.

"It prompts the companies that didn't get a direct relationship with Compaq to look for other partners," said Shelby Fleck, a Morgan Stanley Dean Witter analyst who rates Ingram Micro "outperform." "CompUSA could no longer buy PCs direct from Compaq."

Ingram Micro shares rose 1 1/4 to 27 3/4. CompUSA fell 1/16 to 7 5/16.

The two companies hope to reach a definitive agreement by Aug. 29. It would be the largest such contract for Ingram Micro, which has been looking to services as a way to compensate for falling PC prices.

Ingram Micro, based in the Los Angeles suburb of Santa Ana, California, assembles and services PCs and equipment for PC makers and dealers.

Falling PC prices and competition from Internet retailers have caused CompUSA to report a loss or declining profit in each of the last five quarters. The company has begun closing as many as 14 stores and plans to cut as much as 7 percent of its workforce. It also will add consumer electronics to rely less on low-profit PC sales.

The Ingram Micro agreement will enable CompUSA customers to order a PC and have it shipped the same day, Ingram Micro said.

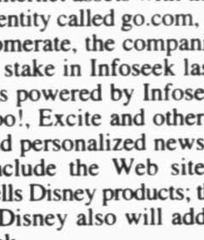

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stock funds, like all investments, have pros and cons

By Eric Tyson

Q: In recent columns, you responded to questioners who didn't seem to like mutual funds. Why do you like mutual funds for investing in stocks and what are the drawbacks?

A: The main advantages of stock mutual funds are:

Tyson

Diversification. It would be expensive to buy individual stocks on your own, unless you buy reasonable chunks (100 shares or so) of each stock. But to buy this amount of stock in, say, a dozen companies' stocks to ensure diversification, you'd need about $36,000 if the stocks you buy average $30 per share in price.

Professional management. Mutual funds offer something you can't deliver: professional, full-time management. Funds are a huge timesaver. Mutual fund managers peruse a company's financial statements and otherwise track and analyze a company's business strategy and market position. The best managers put in long workweeks and have lots of expertise and experience in the field.

Low costs. Through a no-load (commission-free) mutual fund, you can hire a professional, full-time money manager to invest your $10,000 for a mere $20 to $100 per year. And if you have far less than this to invest, they'll still invest your money at a low cost: $2 to $10 per year if you invest $1,000.

As with all investments, mutual funds have drawbacks. First is the issue of control. You may be unnerved turning over your investment stash to a seemingly black-box process where others decide when and in what to invest. You should be more nervous about the potential blunders you'll make investing in individual stocks of your own choosing or, even worse, those stocks pitched to you by a broker.

Taxes are another concern for investing in funds outside retirement accounts. Because the fund manager, and not you, decides when to sell specific stock holdings, some funds may produce somewhat high levels of taxable distributions. Simply select tax-friendly funds if taxes are an issue.

Q: I am just getting started with investing, and your book "Investing for Dummies" provided a great deal of insight. However, where would a young investor go to get leads and tips for stocks that would potentially be up-and-coming?

A: First, you should focus on smaller-company stocks because you'll be far more likely to find a company with greater untapped growth potential. In the current market environment, smaller-cap stocks also, on average, are not as highly valued as larger-cap stocks, especially those of well-know companies.

Since you read my book, you know that I'm an advocate of mutual funds. There are funds that focus upon smaller-cap stocks, so that would be my first choice.

If you wish to do some of your own stock picking, here are some resources that I would recommend:

The Value Line Investment Survey — provides one-page reports on thousands of companies. The smallest companies can be found in its so-called Expanded Survey.

"A Random Walk Down Wall Street" by Burton Malkiel — a timeless classic about understanding how the financial markets work and how to evaluate the price and prospects of a given company's stock.
