Midland to proceed with OK'd disposal project

From staff reports

AUSTIN — Midland's application for a $20 million wastewater disposal operation 15 miles southeast of the city was approved 3-0 Thursday by the Texas Water Commission, which warned that it will be watching the project carefully.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins said today that despite hints of further legal action by the opposition and a five-year, formal review provision attached to the approval, the city can now proceed confidently with planning and construction.

Akins said that while the Commission plans to review the project in five years, "in reality, they have the prerogative to shut us down anytime" if monitor wells indicate effluent leaking from the system into groundwater supplies.

He added that since no viable alternatives to the wastewater operation were offered and the opposition's arguments were deemed insufficient by the TWC, "I'm just as confident if it went to a court decision as I was before the water board."

IN GENERAL TERMS, the project entails pumping primary treated effluent from the city's sewage treatment plant to J. "Timber" Floyd's land southeast of the city. There, on a six-section tract, the effluent will be kept in lined holding ponds until pumped out for irrigating the land.

The commission heard more than 2½ hours of arguments and comments on the project before taking its vote. Over 1½ hours concerned whether proper procedures had been followed in the refusal of a TWC hearing examiner to admit some area landowners as parties at the public hearing in Midland on June 30.

Austin attorney Rick Lowerre, representing 17 landowners, argued the permit should be denied or returned for additional hearings.

Lowerre contended Midland had failed to show that the project would not be injurious to area landowners or groundwater supplies.

HE ALSO contended that Dr. Lee Wilson, a New Mexico consultant hired by some of the landowners, should have been allowed to testify as an expert witness. Wilson was allowed to question some other witnesses and to present a statement, although that statement wasn't made part of the sworn testimony.

Hearing examiner James Larkins said some of the landowners were denied status as parties because they were located more than two miles from the project site. And an attorney for others initially indicated he did not want party status at the public hearing, but requested that status after completion of the first part of the hearing.

TWC Chairman Lee Biggart commented that "I don't see where Mr. Larkins

Polish riots resume after man's death

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Rioting exploded again in Nowa Huta after police tear-gassed mourners at a memorial service for a steelworker mortally wounded by police gunfire in a pro-Solidarity protest, informed sources said today.

The riots erupted as fugitive labor leaders urged Poles in Warsaw's biggest plants to strike in sympathy with other workers who risked police bullets and tear gas to protest the new law banning the Solidarity union.

There were no immediate details of the latest rioting in Nowa Huta, a steel-producing suburb of Krakow, 160 miles southwest of Warsaw.

Official sources said the disturbances continued until about 2 a.m. (7 p.m. CDT Thursday).

Small groups of mourners returned today to a memorial for the slain steel mill electrician, but there were no reports of new violence as police blocked streets and clouds of eye-stinging tear gas hung in the air, the sources said.

Authorities say the 20-year-old man was killed and nearly 100 people injured in the bloodiest rioting so far, an uprising Wednesday in Nowa Huta.

Bodgan Wlosik died Thursday, one day after he was shot by a plainclothes police officer, the official PAP news agency said. It said the officer fired two shots in self-defense after being "assailed and brutally knocked to the ground" during vicious street fighting at Nowa Huta, a model Communist city erected in the 1950s.

Workers pelted police with firebombs, rocks and steel bolts in Wednesday's uprising and police responded with tear gas, water cannon and flares.

PAP said a 67 police officers and 27 civilians were injured in that clash and a "few dozen police vehicles were damaged." It said 21 policemen were hospitalized, two of them in serious condition.

Police tear-gassed a crowd of mourners placing candles and a floral cross at a makeshift memorial to Wlosik at a Nowa Huta church Thursday, PAP said. The attack on the mourners apparently sparked the renewed rioting.

Wlosik's death was the first officially acknowledged fatality in riots spawned by the outlawing of Solidarity last week. The Soviet bloc's first independent labor federation claimed 9.5 million members in a nation of 35 million before the government suspended it under martial law last Dec. 13.

Kudos for new program

President Reagan prepares to depart the Justice Department Thursday after announcing the federal government will hire at least 1,200 federal agents to help implement his new war on drugs. Attorney General William French Smith is to Reagan's right. The new program has been hailed by police and lawmakers across the country, especially in the South, where the drug smuggling problem is especially acute.

Rebels continue fighting

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels today claimed control over a large chunk of Morazan province after vicious fighting and said they were pushing into neighboring San Miguel province in a renewed drive to seize power.

Scattered but heavy fighting between guerrillas and government soldiers also persisted in the northern and western parts of this Central American nation beset by three years of civil war, battle reports said Thursday.

Both sides admitted heavy casualties in what military experts in the U.S.-backed rightist government called the strongest and best coordinated operation in six months by the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a coalition of six rebel groups.

"The FMLN controls northern Morazan province," the rebel coalition's clandestine Radio Venceremos said in a broadcast early today. It also said guerrilla legions were advancing into San Miguel province. Both provinces are in eastern El Salvador.

Military spokesmen refused to confirm or deny the report, and reporters could not immediately verify it. Telephone links with eastern El Salvador have been out since Wednesday, when guerrillas dynamited three microwave towers.

There were conflicting figures about casualties. Rebel radio claimed in an early morning broadcast that guerrillas killed or wounded 112 soldiers and took 95 prisoners this week.

It mentioned no guerrilla casualties but said they captured 186 automatic rifles, 11 mortars and machine guns, 230 hand grenades and 58,521 rounds of ammunition.

Military reports Wednesday placed the death toll at 33 soldiers and 34 guerrillas with more than 100 wounded, mostly rebels. No later figures were available Thursday.

About 500 soldiers, backed by artillery, U.S.-made warplanes and helicopters, were reported attacking rebel positions at Osicala, eight miles north of the Morazan capital, and along the road between Jocoaitique and Meanguera.

U.S.-made Huey choppers and 81mm mortars also pounded guerrilla deployments in the area.

Suharto, his wife, and a party of aides, security agents and interpreters conducted a 22-hour, whirlwind tour of Houston that concluded Thursday with a 20-minute stop at the Johnson Space Center souvenir shop.

A clerk, who asked not to be named, said the Indonesian group took only a few minutes to spend more than $2,000 on T-shirts, cloth patches, plastic spacecraft models, souvenir plates, ballpoint pens, postcards, photo slides and viewers.

"We've never had such a run of business," the clerk said.

Suharto and his party arrived in Houston Wednesday evening and were greeted at the airport by Mayor Kathy Whitmire. Early Thursday morning, the Indonesian party toured the cardiac treatment center of Methodist Hospital with famed heart surgeon Michael DeBakey as an escort.

DeBakey's cardiac treatment team is helping to train a group of Indonesian doctors and nurses who will establish a heart treatment center in Indonesia next year.

Suharto and his party motored to the the Johnson Space Center and were greeted there by astronauts Robert Crippen and Sally Ride. The astronauts are scheduled to fly a space shuttle mission next year that will deploy in orbit an Indonesian communications satellite.

Suharto and his wife followed the astronauts through a small hatch into a full-scale model of the space shuttle cockpit. Mrs. Suharto removed her shoes and climbed an interior ladder in her bare feet. The couple was forced to crawl on hands and knees to exit the spacecraft.

Open arms welcome program

By The Associated Press

President Reagan's national narcotics task force is an idea long overdue, law enforcement agents say, especially since a federal crackdown in southern Florida has encouraged drug traffickers to take their business elsewhere.

"It's really welcomed," said Lt. Joseph Newman, head of the Baltimore Police Department's narcotics task force. "It appears to me this is a little more than a finger in the dike solution. It's been needed for some time."

On Thursday, Reagan announced in Washington that federal officials would blanket the nation with 12 regional task forces. The $200 million effort would add up to 1,200 federal agents and investigators in Boston, New York, Baltimore, Atlanta, Houston, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego.

"Our commitment to this program is unshakeable. We intend to do what is necessary to end the drug menace and cripple organized crime," Reagan said.

Across the country, news of the federal plan was received with open arms, especially in the South, where officials have been calling for help since March, when Vice President George Bush was appointed head of a Cabinet-level task force to fight drug trafficking in southern Florida.

The Florida effort has pushed drug smuggling operations to other coastal states like Louisiana and Georgia, officials say.

"It's like squeezing a balloon," said Jimmy Davis, a Georgia state investigator. "You squeeze one area and it pops out in another."

Ray Vinsik, head of the DEA office in Atlanta, said recently that the Bush task force probably increased smuggling in Georgia. "It's put an awful lot of pressure on drug smugglers to try to find other ways to get drugs into the United States."

Jean Phillips of the Louisiana state police said, "We not only appreciate but we expect assistance from the federal government." Because drugs come from outside the country, she said, "This is not a state problem. This is an international problem."

The federal task force will "make a tremendous difference in our ability to investigate and prosecute" drug cases, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Nelson in San Diego, considered one of the nation's chief narcotics smuggling points.

Texas' stakes in gas controversy high

By WILLIAM GARLAND

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The battle over natural gas looms again in Congress as clearly as a prairie thunderstorm darkening the horizon.

No banks of rain-bearing clouds hover ominously over the Capitol, but lobbyists, congressmen and analysts are putting together and circulating what they hope will be fertile seeds for arguments next year.

In interviews with some key industry officials in Washington, as well as some lobbyists on the other side of the energy fence, three issues emerged as central to the developing tussle over how to price and sell natural gas:

—the possibility of new taxes on natural gas as a result of any decontrol.

The stakes in the battle range into the billions of dollars for natural gas producers, pipeline companies, utilities and consumers. It is less clear what the outcome of such a battle might be for consumers than for the others.

But the stakes will be higher for Texas, the nation's traditional leader in the production of both gas and oil, than for any other state. The decline from last year in oil and gas drilling has had sharp effects on almost all aspects of the economy in most regions of the state.

Many in the industry cite higher prices for natural gas as a necessary ingredient in bringing the oil and gas industry out of its current downturn. They describe the current glut in the gas market as a "deliverability problem" and say that deregulated prices would stimulate a market currently entangled in lopsided controls.

The powerful Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, with more than 200 members of Congress, already has sworn to take one of the major issues into the special session of Congress after Thanksgiving.

They want Congress to force producers to renegotiate contracts with pipelines, taking out so-called "take or pay" provisions that they blame for higher natural gas prices in much of their areas. Those provisions force many pipelines to buy gas at higher prices even if they don't need it for

Bush speech set in Pecos

PECOS — Vice President George Bush will be arriving here Saturday afternoon on a campaign swing for Pat Haggerty, who is seeking election to the 16th Congressional District seat.

Haggerty and Bush will arrive at 4 p.m. at the Pecos Municipal Airport and will go by motorcade to Pecos Flying Center. There the two men will give a talk and Bush will announce President Reagan's endorsement of Haggerty for the seat.

The 16th Congressional District seat is being vacated by Richard White of El Paso. Haggerty, a Republican, has served two terms as a city alderman in El Paso. According to a spokesman in his office, Haggerty is running slightly ahead of his opponent, Democrat Ron Coleman. The Democrat has served as a state representative from El Paso.

Midland leader elected as president of ACCT

Reagan H. Legg

Midland attorney and civic leader Reagan H. Legg was elected Thursday as president of the national Association of Community College Trustees at its annual meeting in New Orleans, La. Legg, a trustee of Midland College since 1970 and the first president of the Board of Trustees, has served as first vice president of ACCT for the past year and has been a member of its Board of Directors since 1978.

In 1977, he was the recipient of the Dale Ensign Community College Leadership Award, presented annually to the outstanding community college trustee in the United States and Canada.

"Being president of an organization representing more than 10,000 community college trustees in the United States and Canada will be a tremendous responsibility," Legg said in New Orleans Thursday. "We must redouble our efforts to be certain that education remains in the forefront of this nation's highest goals and objectives."

A former Midland County attorney, Legg has served as president of the Midland County Bar Association, the Midland Community Theatre Board of Governors, the Leadership Midland program and the United Fund. He also served as president of the Texas Association of Community College Administrators and Board of Members in 1981 and is presently a member of the Board of Directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

For eight years, Legg was a member of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and was chairman of its education committee. He is a past president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the University of Texas Ex-Student Association, past president of Methodist Men of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church and was chairman of the Official Board and of the Board of Trustees of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Midland.

In addition to Legg, others attending the conference from Midland College are president Dr. Jess H. Parrish, Hoyle McCright, John Cooper, Gloria Hinojosa, Jack Huff, Fred Wright and Kenneth Peeler.

Officials report no new leads in identifying dead woman

From staff and wire reports

ANDREWS — Authorities reported no new leads this morning as they continue to seek the identity of a woman, whose nude body, clad only in cowboy boots, was found entangled in a barbed wire fence by three workmen.

The corpse was found Thursday morning on the north side of State Highway 176, about 15 miles east of this West Texas town, investigators said.

The woman had been shot once in the chest with a large-caliber weapon, said chief deputy Morris Brown of the Andrews County Sheriff's Department.

Portions of the woman's undergarments, which had been cut away from the body, were found nearby, but Brown said there was no indication the woman had been raped.

Justice of the Peace E.A. Ragsdale ordered the body sent to Dallas for an autopsy.

The woman was estimated to be between the ages of 25 and 30, and had brown hair and eyes, Brown said. She had been dead about 10 to 12 hours, he said.

Odessa authorities examined the body to determine whether it was that of any person reported missing in the area, but no description matched, he said.

Kent Hance to campaign in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and U.S. Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, D-S.C., who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the 1984 presidential election, will headline the Lubbock County Democratic Rally Saturday night.

The rally will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium at 4th Street and Boston. Tickets are $10 per person and can be purchased by calling 744-3527. Tickets also will be available at the door.

The rally will honor long-time Lubbock County Democratic chairman Madison Sowder, who served for 11 years before turning over his party duties this year to Harvey Morton.

Blaze damages laundry in Crane

CRANE — Crane Laundry at Vivian and 11th St. here sustained extensive damage in an early morning fire today.

Crane volunteer firemen were summoned to the business at approximately 4:30 a.m., according to a police department spokesperson.

Cause of the blaze had not been determined by late morning, nor had a monetary assessment of the loss been made.

But the industry appears to envision the contract dilemma as a new chip in the game, replacing a windfall profits tax on natural gas (which its spokesmen reject) as a trade-off for decontrol. Industry spokesmen are adamant in their desire to save serious consideration of that issue until next year.

"We're opposed to any attempt to address the natural gas problem in a piecemeal fashion," said Nicholas J. Bush, president of the Natural Gas Supply Association, taking a lead in representing natural gas producers in Washington.

Natural gas decontrol has eluded the industry since 1954 when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Natural Gas Act of 1938 extended controls to its production. Since then, repeated attempts have been made by the industry to lift those controls, culminating in the 1977 attempt led by Rep. Robert Krueger, then a Texas Democrat. His bill failed by two votes.

More recently, Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, has picked up the banner of decontrol and tried persistently, and some say futilely, to unite the industry beneath it.

"He (Gramm) has been trying to get the producers and distributors together and he keeps saying he's close to an agreement," said Ed Rothschild, head of the Energy Action Project, one of the primary organizations lobbying against decontrol in Washington. "I think that's a lot of poppycock. I think he's saying that to keep his constituents happy."

The key to the battle, most observers agree, will not be so much whether Gramm comes forward with a bill (which he is almost certain to do) but whether the Reagan administration supports it: same game as earlier this election year, when the administration backed down.

"We're very much counting on the president to recommend that Congress speed up the phase-out of price controls," said Lloyd Unsell, executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

"Every person we speak to in the administration indicates that a bill will be coming in early 1983," added Bush of the NGSA.

A major sticking point in the controversy is what to do with so-called "old gas," defined under the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (the current law implementing the complicated price controls) as gas discovered before April 20, 1977. "New gas" would be decontrolled under the act on Jan. 1, 1985 but old gas would remain controlled.

The American Gas Association, representing primarily pipelines and utilities, opposes decontrol of that gas, which comprises 40 percent to 60 percent of all gas production. George H. Lawrence, president of AGA, called that "the most contentious issue" since many pipelines have that lowest-priced gas under long-term contracts.

But perhaps there will be flexibility on the industry side afterall: "You just can't rule out a solution to that (old gas) problem because it's too much in all of our interests to achieve it," said Lawrence.

turned down anyone who had anything to present."

Department of Water Resources Public Interest Advocate Jack Cox joined in requesting that the application be returned for additional hearings "in the interest of fairness."

However, Midland attorney David Reagan argued the landowners "had adequate opportunity to obtain party status."

MIDLAND COUNTY Attorney J. Scott Henderson agreed, saying Larkins "bent over backwards to be fair to those people."

He added that "while Midland County may not like this (project) as the best possible alternative, we have to do something."

Biggart agreed that it appeared that returning the request for additional hearings would produce little in the way of new evidence.

The commission spent some time questioning staff members about the proposed 1½ foot caliche lining for the project's holding lagoons.

The staff reported that in the original plan no lining had been proposed because the groundwater in the area underlying the lagoons is of poor quality and higher in total dissolved solids than the sewage effluent.

The lining would prevent movement of water for up to 10 to 15 years, according to staff calculations, but the main purpose of the lining is to prevent large volumes of water from entering the groundwater system and forcing poor quality water into other areas.

MARK HOELSCHER of Garden City, representing Glasscock County Underground Water Conservation District, said the district continues to be opposed to the application, feeling the only way the project can expand is toward the Glasscock County area.

He argued that two feet of compacted clay should be required to provide protection.

He also said the district feels it has a better alternative to the project in its plan to pipe the sewage into Glasscock County for use as irrigation — noting that it "would cost Midland some more money" but that the district has offered to finance a distribution system.

Hoelscher urged the TWC to deny the application.

Akins said the district's plan was unacceptable, since it would have Midland paying millions of dollars to irrigate Glasscock County land.

Biggart said that if the project works as expected, there will be no problem with extending it at the end of the five-year period. But if problems are found "then you're going to be in real trouble."

HOELSCHER SAID the five-year term would "allow us to feel somewhat more protected."

Biggart noted that the commission, if problems are indicated by reports from 26 monitoring wells around the site, could take action at any time.

Henderson agreed, commenting that "my commissioners and citizens are going to be watching them very carefully."

The project isn't expected to be operating for two years, Larkins said, so there will be about three years of operating data available when the permit is up for renewal.

John Lowe, Midland's director of utilities, said the city has been proceeding with planning for the wastewater operation "as much as we practically could. The gestation period for this project has been rather long."

Lowe said the city will let bids for pumps, switches and other equipment soon. He said bids for the pipeline could be taken in about 60 days and completion of the project is expected to require two years.

Lowerre was meeting with his clients Thursday afternoon to discuss the possibility of any legal action.

TWC attorney Larry Soward told the commission he was "confident any court would find the proper procedures were followed" in the case.

MISD doesn't compare SAT scores individually

Although figures on 1981-82 Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, released Wednesday by The College Board, show that black high school students are making more significant improvements than their white classmates across the nation, the Midland Independent School District does not compare scores by race or individually.

According to Bryant Saxon, director of program development and research, SAT scores are only looked at on a group basis to see how the district as a whole fares with national and state averages.

"We don't really look into individual scores," he explained, "we just look at group scores. There is no way I could find out which scores were black students' unless we had the (high school) counselors come in and identify them."

The rise in national average scores in 1981-82 was due to gains made by black students, The College Board reports, but according to Saxon, the number of minority students who take the SAT in Midland are so few that their scores don't affect the total score.

Only nine black students took the SAT here in 1981-82, while 16 Mexican-Americans, one Indian, two Orientals, one Puerto Rican and 305 Anglos took the test, he said. Midland has a smaller number of students of any race taking the tests than do many districts, he added, citing the fact that only 39 percent of the students at both high schools took the SATs last year.

1980-81 scores for Lee High School were 437 verbal and 479 math, while 1981-82 scores were 439 verbal and 485 math, he said. Midland High School's verbal average was 454 in 1980-81 and 487 in math. 1981-82 scores were 434 verbal and 472 math. The national average is 426 verbal and 467 math while Texas students average 415 in verbal and 453 in math.

"Scores don't really matter when you're entering college if you're at the top of your class," Bryant said. "The lower you rank in class, the higher score you need to make. But if you're in the top quarter of your class, they don't care what you make on the tests. Last year, the valedictorian at Lee High didn't even take it."

GOP candidate Clark claims 'unique' coalition

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Allen Clark

Although the Republican candidate for state treasurer jumped into the race late, Allen Clark on Thursday contended he has formed a "unique" coalition of various interests throughout the state and that his campaign is gaining momentum.

With 18 days left before the election on Nov. 2, Clark has enticed 300 bankers to join his coalition, he said during a news conference at Chaparral Aviation.

From Midland are Eddie Dunn, president and chief executive officer at Western State Bank; Bill Franklin, president of Midland National Bank; and Robert D. Southerland, president of Commercial Bank & Trust. Joining the bandwagon from Odessa are Kenneth Jumper, chairman of the board at National Bank of Odessa; Max Malone, president of Permian Bank and Trust; and Homer L. Stewart Jr., chairman of the board at Western National Bank.

"My coalition extends to a lot of Democrats and independents," he said. And, with an Hispanic mother, he's pulling in a lot of Hispanics in the Valley, Clark contended.

Clark, a West Point graduate who went to Vietnam and came home as a double leg amputee, added that veterans and disabled veterans are part of the coalition.

He continued leveling his charge of "liberal activist," against his Democratic opponent, Ann Richards of Austin.

With her background as a county commissioner, Clark said she doesn't have the qualifications for the job of handling the state's $2.5 billion in deposits.

"I have an MBA in banking investments and eight years experience," said Clark, sitting with his wife, Jackie. Ms. Richards, he said, had to get a book on banking when she filed for the post.

Pledging to run the treasurer's office on a "management by objectives" plan, Clark said, "I don't need on-the-job training. The people of Texas don't want to turn over $2.5 billion to someone who had to borrow a book on banking."

A poll of Texans showed that 85 percent of the respondents said "the most important qualification to be treasurer is a business background."

He criticized a claim by Ms. Richards that the department was being operated in an antiquated manner. Pointing out that it already is computerized, Clark said the Honeywell people who supplied the computers probably aren't happy to hear the charges.

The problem, said Clark, is that it needs to be updated and a proposal is ready for the next session of the Legislature to seek $1.8 million for updating. If elected, Clark said he "wants to see how far in the future it will take us."

Although he didn't enter the race until after the May primary, Clark said polls showed he had more name identification at the time than had been expected. This probably came from his working for Gov. Clements for 2½ years on special programs, he added.

And polls in July and September reflected an "appreciable increase" in his support.

The state treasurer's race has attracted more attention this time than usual, but he doesn't view it as one of a female running against a disabled veteran. Instead, he said, it's one of conservative vs. liberal. "I want to keep government out of the private sector," Clark said.

TORONTO (AP) — A bomb blast ripped the brick front off a suburban Toronto plant that makes guidance systems for the U.S. cruise missile, moments after police received an anonymous telephoned threat, authorities said today.

The bomb, hidden in a van, exploded in a fireball Thursday night injuring five to nine people, at least two seriously. The blast shattered windows and hurled debris hundreds of yards, witnesses said.

The two-story plant is owned by Litton Systems Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Litton Industries Inc., of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Police said five people were hurt, but local hospitals reported nine people were admitted for treatment and two were seriously injured.

The explosion came minutes after police received an anonymous telephone warning, and less than a day after a judge ruled that Litton executives could not be forced to testify at a trial of local anti-war activists.

"I don't know the details about what was said on the phone, but shortly after our men arrived it exploded," a police spokesman said.

Police declined to say what the caller said, but Constable Richard Haines said the bomb was deliberately set.

Acting police Inspector Gordon Fenton said three policemen drove to the plant after the tip was received and found a van with a small box inside marked "Danger Explosives." Early reports said the vehicle was packed with dynamite.

As the men walked away to radio for assistance, the van blew up, Fenton said.

Moments before the blast, a security guard told workmen at the plant that there had been a bomb threat and told them to "get out of here fast."

"We started running toward the exit when suddenly there was a big bang and everything shattered," said technician Leo Bailey, 50.

Bailey said he and two fellow workmen were trapped inside the building by debris until firefighters rescued them.

"The truck was parked and when it exploded it just blew the front part of the building away," said firefighter Jim Williams of the the Borough of Etobicoke Fire Department.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Authorities here worked to determine how a 23-year-old patient at Brackenridge Hospital crept from his fourth-floor bed to the top of a 10-story ventilation shaft, where he tumbled to his death.

Kenneth R. Davis Jr. was found late Wednesday at the bottom of the air shaft, four hours after he was reported missing from his private room at the downtown hospital.

"I think his death will probably be ruled accidental," said city homicide Sgt. Robert Feuerbacher.

Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo said Thursday his preliminary investigation showed the death was caused by "numerous injuries that were the result of that fall."

But one officer said many "unanswered questions" remained in the death of Davis, the son of a Travis County reserve constable.

"I wouldn't say it was suspicious right now, but there are a lot of unanswered questions," said city homicide Lt. Robert Wisian.

"Right now, everything is very inconclusive," Wisian said. "(Davis) was found in a ventilation shaft and the only way in is from the top or at the bottom in the basement."

He said a radio that might have been Davis' was discovered near the top of the air shaft.

"How he got in there, I don't know," he said. "That's a fairly secure area."

Davis had been admitted to Brackenridge on Sept. 4 with head and neck injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident, hospital officials said.

His 17-year-old sister, Tricia, said her brother was at times able to recognize family members, but then he would "daze off to another time. At times, he would think he was back in school and it's been several years since he was back in school."

Hospital officials were forced to restrain Davis with straps to his bed after he wandered around the facility, she said, adding that he broke the straps.

"It just seems like they could have watched him better," she said.

Dead teacher probably knew killer

HOUSTON (AP) — A Sam Houston High School reading teacher who was beaten to death probably knew his killer but authorities have no suspects, a detective says.

Bill Jack Foster, 52, was found by a colleague late Wednesday, lying face down in the study of his fashionable far west Houston home, said homicide Detective J.L. Waltmon.

Andes crash survivors find special quality of life

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — In the decade since they survived 70 days in the Andes Mountains on determination, faith and the flesh of their dead comrades, 16 young men have blended into everyday life.

They work as lawyers, doctors, lawyers, businessmen and engineers and get together often — bound by "total tranquility" about how they stayed alive after their plane crashed in the Andes, and by the memory of dead friends and loved ones.

"Some of his classmates are nephews of those who died and we're afraid one of these days one of the kids is going to say something like 'Your daddy ate up my uncle," and we don't want him to find out that way," Soledad Inciarte said of her 8-year-old son.

"I don't want to give him the idea his father is either a hero or ashamed. I'm just going to try to explain honestly how it was — something I did not go looking for, but that happened and that I got out of as I was able to," said her husband, Jose Luis Inciarte, one of four plane crash survivors interviewed by The Associated Press.

THE ORDEAL began Oct. 13, 1972 when a chartered Uruguayan Air Force Fairchild F-227 crashed while carrying the Old Christian rugby club to Chile. Seventeen of the 45 people aboard died at once, and others perished of injuries or of exposure and starvation amid the lifeless, snow-covered peaks.

"My life is divided into before-the-crash and after-the-crash," said the bearded and robust Gustavo Zerbino, manager at a Montevideo chemical company and at 29 still an active rugby club player.

Zerbino said he and the others — most were barely 20 when they were rescued — feel "total tranquility" about what they did to survive.

"The mountains drastically changed our scale of values. We lit fires with money in the Andes. Money may help attain goals, but it is not a goal in itself."

Like other survivors, Zerbino is a devout Roman Catholic who sees an analogy between the sacrifice of the Mass and his nourishment in the Andes — a belief developed during those 10 weeks in the Andes.

NONE OF THE survivors encountered insuperable problems returning to society, although most saw counselors for a time.

"He was weird for a good while after returning," Mrs. Inciarte said of her husband, now 34 and an agronomist with a dairy farm. She said he was fascinated by colors and distressed by insects after living without them in the cold for more than two months.

"I hardly think about it anymore. Only around this time of year," Inciarte, a calm man with a broad easy smile, said in an interview in his home in an affluent Montevideo suburb.

The survivors and relatives of victims attend three special Masses annually — one on the date of the crash, one 16 days later to mark an avalanche that killed seven people and the third on the date Numa Turcatti died.

Turcatti could not bring himself to eat human flesh. He starved to death two weeks before the rescue.

"On the anniversary of the rescue, we have a big party," said Inciarte. At such times, he said, the survivors talk incessantly and almost exclusively of their common experience, sometimes as a kind of psychological unburdening and sometimes "like at a college class reunion."

ROBERTO CANESSA, one of two survivors who hiked 10 days to bring help — officials had long abandoned the search — agreed to an interview after firmly, but amiably, interrogating the reporter.

"I like to know who I'm talking to, his motives and his character," said the 29-year-old physician in a small office in Montevideo's Italian Hospital.

Convict listed as fire inspector

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — The new Manhattan city directory has residents' names, addresses, phone numbers and occupations, but the chief of police doesn't find it amusing that page 345 lists Arlie Moss as a city fire inspector.

Moss was convicted of burning down a lumber company in May 1980 and is in the Kansas State Industrial Reformatory in Hutchinson, 130 miles to the southwest.

Police Chief Bill Smith annually completes a questionnaire from the producer of the directory, R.L. Polk Co. of Kansas City, Mo., providing phone numbers of local law departments and employees.

He wants an explanation from the company why Moss, who was convicted of arson in a $1 million fire at the Ramey Lumber Co., is listed as fire inspector.

Ed Martin, assistant district manager for the R.L. Polk Co., said the company has employees who verify listings, which are compiled by door-to-door visits. Occasionally someone "gets cute," he said, and alters information.

An Iowan whose last name is Cat had his occupation listed as mouser, Martin said, adding that the company tries to track down the prank-playing employee.

A publisher's note in the Manhattan directory says the company doesn't promise all the information in its 1,400 city and suburban directories is correct.

No hemline regulations in Midland

From staff and wire reports

With mini-skirts reappearing on the fashion scene after their appalling or appealing success in the 1960s, some school administrators are getting out the measuring tape, and, as in the Pasadena Independent School District, making marks maintaining modesty.

But in Midland, high school principals say there has been no problem with daring dressers.

According to Jack Stone, principal of Midland High, as long as the skirts are somewhat decent and are "in good judgment," there will be no hemline hassle.

"Possibly we may have to go back to a policy, but so far our kids have responded well, just as they have with everything else we've asked them to do," he said.

Stone added that with the hot weather, administrators readjusted the standards on shorts in school, allowing students to wear "walking" shorts, hemmed just above the knee, as long as socks are included in the ensemble.

Across town at Lee High, principal Joe Smith said, "We don't have anybody running around with rulers," adding that he is not in the fashion business but in the business of educating students.

"Unless a dress is distracting to the educational process, if it's offensive or immodest, we're not going to do anything about it," he said. "We also aren't planning on measuring hair length and we would hope that all of our students come to school with reasonably clean hair."

He said he recalled only one instance this year where he approached a student and made a comment about the length of her dress. According to Smith, the girl had on blue jeans the next day.

Companies plead guilty to rigging

AUSTIN (AP) — Four defendants indicted last year in connection with bid rigging on state highway construction projects pleaded guilty Thursday to violating antitrust laws.

No date was set for sentencing.

The pleas were entered by High Plains Pavers Inc., a Lubbock construction firm, and its president, Hulon A. Wall, and Western Pavers Inc., and its president, Hughard K. Daniel.

According to the indictment, High Plains Pavers submitted the low and winning bid of $725,660 to rebuild more than six miles of highway in Swisher County in July 1977. In another round of bidding Western Pavers was awarded a $598,217 contract for rebuilding 1.7 miles of Lubbock city roads in February 1977.

Man handed 50-year sentence in child rape

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 42-year-old Midland bachelor, who used his trampoline to lure neighborhood children into his backyard, was meted a 50-year prison term by a jury which found the man guilty of aggravated rape of an 8-year-old girl.

The man, William Wilson "Tom" Rackley, was accused of raping the girl in the bedroom of his southwest Midland house late in the afternoon last Dec. 15. However, he was not indicted until three months later, after the girl had told her parents of the rape.

Rackley had warned the girl not to tell anybody about the assault, said David Joers, chief assistant district attorney, who prosecuted the case.

"He had threatened her," Joers said. "He threatened that he would break in her house and 'get' her mother and father" should she say anything about the rape.

Joers said the girl had resisted the assault.

"She did to the extent that could be reasonably expected from an 8-year-old," he said.

After the girl finally told her parents of the assault, her mother reported the alleged offense to police, who subsequently arrested Rackley, a bulldozer operator. He has been held in Midland County Jail in lieu of posting a $100,000 bond.

In addition to the 50-year sentence, the five-man, seven-woman jury in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District court assessed the defendant a $5,000 fine.

"I think that the sentence was due to David's prosecution," said co-prosecutor Janet Copeland.

District Attorney Vern Martin said that the term assessed by the jurors was indicative of the Midland citizenry's loath of child abuse and, particularly, rape of a child.

Inspectors find doctored photos of plant welds

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Inspectors have found 73 doctored X-rays of piping welds at the Nine Mile Point 2 nuclear power plant under construction near Lake Ontario, Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. said today.

Similarly altered radiographs of welds also were found last month at the Susquehanna 1 nuclear plant at Berwick, Pa., but a spokesman for Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. said a reinspection showed no weaknesses in the welds.

The Nine Mile 2 and Susquehanna 1 welds, and the mandatory X-rays of them, were done by ITT Grinnell Industrial Piping Inc.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered new inspections of welds at more than a dozen plants where ITT Grinnell was a subcontractor. The new inspections led to the discoveries of altered radiographs at the Susquehanna 1 and Nine Mile Point 2 plants.

Niagara Mohawk spokesman Edward Kaish said 73 radiographs of 44 weld joints had been "enhanced." He said the alterations were mostly "lead-pencil shadings."

The company, major partner in construction of the 1,080-megawatt, $3.7 billion plant, looked at 13,990 X-rays on NRC orders, he said.

"I think we have to say that just because they have been doctored that is no indication that the welds themselves are in any way defective," he said.

Kaish said all of the welds in question were in one of four "safety-related" systems: the high-pressure and low-pressure reactor-core sprays (which would cool the nuclear fuel in an emergency); the residual heat-removal system and the reactor core isolation cooling system.

The NRC issued its warning about ITT Grinnell-related radiographs in August, about the time the company said it had fired two technicians at its Kernersville, N.C., office after learning they had altered X-rays of nuclear piping systems for the last six years.

During the inspections, Pennsylvania Power and Light found doctored X-rays of its Susquehanna 1 plant. But spokesman Paul Schock said the company had determined all its welds were sound.

Kaish said the X-rays supplied to Niagara Mohawk had been arriving since 1979 and were were "shop" radiographs, meaning they were done off-site. That raised the possibility they might have been done at the North Carolina laboratory where the problem developed.

'Comrade Hall' old communist warrior

By BEVERLY BEYETTE
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The old warrior of the Communist Party in America — "Comrade Gus Hall," as he's generally introduced — was basking in a standing ovation, clapping right along.

A crowd of at least 400 had turned out for the public meeting at the Convention Center, a whistle stop on Hall's "sweep through the state" on a recruitment blitz for the party.

This was no gathering of young leftists; it was, for the most part, an older crowd, people on whose faces was written their history of radicalism when it wasn't fashionable, or even legal, to be radical. New York, the '30s, perhaps?

They were hearing the message, all right. Hall talking about an America in which millions are seeing "their hopes and dreams buried in the ashes," an America with millions of "hidden hungry" having soup-kitchen doors slammed in their faces.

They nodded, they applauded, their applause escalating as Hall zeroed in on the Reagan administration's military budget: "We are being bankrupt on the issue (that) there is some kind of Soviet threat...It doesn't exist. It's not going to exist."

THE FACE IS an open Midwestern sort, nothing threatening, nothing to suggest that he's hellbent on destroying capitalism, just as he has been since he took over as the party's general secretary 23 years ago.

He's been a communist officially since he was 17, recruited for the party by his father, a Finn who had immigrated with his wife to Minnesota where he found the going tough in the iron mines.

Gus Hall has been the nation's No. 1 communist for so long that people tend to ask if he's still alive. They remember him best as the man who, in 1949, went to federal prison, convicted of conspiring to violently overthrow the government.

And, if after 55 years of service to the party in the United States, he is discouraged by the numbers (down to an official 20,000 from a wartime high of 100,000) or by a widespread image of fuddy-duddy irrelevance that the party has among many of the Left, or by factionalism within the party, he never lets on.

"The tempo of people coming into the Communist Party now is the fastest and the biggest in 50 years," Hall claimed here. It is a movement, he said, being fueled by "economic brush fires."

The next morning, over coffee at the airport en route to a party meeting in San Antonio, Texas, Hall talked about his view of life in the Soviet Union (which he appears to see through rose-colored glasses) and about his half-century of devotion to the communist cause.

THROUGH THE YEARS, the Communist Party, U.S.A. has been criticized as having pro-Soviet tunnel vision. The obvious question: If the system hasn't worked so well for them, why does he think it's going to work for us?

He responds: "Well, this, of course, is a controversial subject, and one has to place it in proper perspective. You have to have a little history and background (in order to) compare the two countries, the United States and the Soviet Union.

"We have the capitalist country, the biggest and the strongest, and the Soviet Union, the oldest and the strongest socialist country, so they would compare. But, to put it in proper perspective, we have been building capitalism for 200 and some years under the most favorable conditions — the resources, skilled labor, no devastation by wars, and the country got rich on wars.

"In the Soviet Union, socialism is 63 years old and it started from nothing, absolutely nothing, and it had to do it being surrounded by states and governments who tried to destroy it, and on top of that (came) two devastating wars. The people of the United States have a totally false idea of what devastation the Second World War did to the Soviet Union — what it did to housing, it literally destroyed half; what it did to the agriculture and the factories..."

"Now, if you compare everything about the two societies," he is saying, "that is, the quality of life, why there's no question that in the last year their overall quality of life has surpassed the United States.

"IT'S BETTER. It's higher. Amongst the things you have to put on that scale, for instance, is our unemployment — they don't have any — and the question of what happens to old people, the insecurity that old people have here. Even such things as we have to carry mace in this country, the question of security.

"On the Soviet side, you have to add the fact that there is no unemployment and there won't be any and that it's a constitutional provision that everybody has to have a job of their own choosing. And that education is free from beginning to end and medical care is free. Everything is free. There, the taxes are 3 percent of the wages. Rents are less than that, and there's about a dollar a month utility fee.

"So when you put that all together, I think socialism has done very well."

The suggestion is made that people queuing up in the streets of Moscow to buy groceries, families living in cramped apartments, does not suggest a high quality of life. Gus Hall has ready answers.

"Well, they have now fundamentally solved the housing problem; now they have a certain level of housing for everybody. And now everybody wants more. Instead of one bedroom, everybody wants two. But fundamentally there's not really a problem now. You talk about a massive housing project — they've developed the prefabricated system to its highest."

THERE ARE NO food shortages, says Hall. True, you do see lines in the cities but, he explains, "that's because of problems in their system of distribution. They do have problems there. They haven't yet built supermarkets, although they're beginning. There are some lines, not as often as people say."

The public Gus Hall turns some fancy phrases. He talks of the administration's "anti-human Trojan Horse budget," of the "deep-seated economic gangrene that is eating away at monopoly capitalism," of the "criminal corporate boll weevils," of the "off-the-Wall Street merger madness."

In private conversation, he tends to ramble on, sometimes winding up with a barely audible "and so on." But he has done his homework; he has answers to the troublesome questions.

"Well, of course I don't accept the whole concept of Soviet oppression in Poland because it's not there," he said. "Hungary and Poland are very proud, independent countries, and anybody who thinks they're satellites makes a fundamental error. Of course, that used to be said of China until China agreed to differ.

"Polish events are Polish, and Polish events actually prove the correctness of socialism because they came out of the distortion of socialism by the leaders, the Communist Party leaders, government leaders. They made a mistake that most socialist countries make, they wanted to build an industrial, scientific country as quickly as possible."

Michigan city's voters to decide whether streets will be lighted

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — Voters will decide Nov. 2 whether there will be light on the streets of Egelston Township.

Last August, voters rejected a 1-mill tax levy to pay for street light service, and if voters reject it again in November, the lights may be switched off next spring in the township near Muskegon.

The ballot proposal asks renewal of a tax that expires in March.

"If voters say no twice, I think that's a mandate," Ralph Simmons, township supervisor, said this week.

Simmons believes the question was rejected in August because voters linked it with another ballot proposal that would have banned "obscenity" on cable television. Both measures were defeated.

Simple pleasures can hurt

BOSTON (AP) — Even the simple pleasures of mowing the lawn and eating an ice cream cone have their hazards.

The letters pages of the New England Journal of Medicine have become a forum for the ailments of modern living, often lavishly described in florid and impenetrable medical gobbledygook. Today's issue lists two more oddball ills: lawn mower arm and French vanilla frostbite.

Dr. Franz von Lichtenberg of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston brought lawn mower arm to the attention of the medical world. He's well versed on the pain involved, because he got it himself.

Von Lichtenberg says the injury occurs when the starter cord on the mower suddenly seizes up in mid-pull.

"As the full pulling force of the motion is transferred from the starting gizmo to the victim's flexor digitorum superficialis," he wrote, "something inside rips, instantly setting off a burning pain centered on a point 8 cm proximal to the carpal skin fold and 1 cm ulnar from the volar midline of the forearm."

In short, it hurts. And the pain lasts for a week or so.

The first known case of French vanilla frostbite was recorded by Drs. Lance R. Peterson of the Veterans Administration Medical Center and LoAnn C. Peterson of the Hennepin County Medical Center, both in Minneapolis.

The victim this time was an 18-month-old girl who was given her first cone of ice cream — French vanilla, of course. "She ate the ice cream enthusiastically for 30 minutes, never removing her mouth from the delightful treat."

When she got home, her lips were swollen and dusky. Blisters developed over the next two days, but they eventually healed.

The child's babysitter thought she had cold sores, but the doctors diagnosed it as frostbite.

Their search of the medical literature turned up a precedent of sorts for their discovery. Twelve years ago in the New England Journal, another team of physicians reported something called "Popsicle panniculitis."

Injuries are child killers

BOSTON (AP) — Injuries are the leading cause of childhood deaths, and traffic accidents claim more lives than all other mishaps combined, according to a new study.

Other major killers of young people are drowning, fire, suffocation and poisoning.

The findings result from a 10-year review of injury-related deaths in Massachusetts. They were compiled by researchers from the state Department of Public Health, the Massachusetts Poison Control System and Framingham Union Hospital, and were published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The review covered the deaths of 4,852 youngsters from infancy up to age 19 between 1969 and 1978. Among the findings:

—Motor vehicle accidents accounted for 58 percent of the injury-related deaths.

—Teen-agers were most likely to die from poisoning, drowning and pedestrian accidents, while children under age six had most of the deaths from suffocation, falls and fires.

—Injuries accounted for 15 percent of all hospitalizations, and of these, more than half were fractures or head injuries.

Coronary bypass rate down

BOSTON (AP) — No more facilities should be opened to perform coronary bypass surgery because the demand for this expensive operation appears to be leveling off, a study says.

Doctors from the Mayo Clinic identified the trend in Olmsted County in Minnesota, and they said national figures reveal a similar change.

They noted that less than half the nation's hospitals are doing enough open-heart operations to provide the safest results.

"The data support the view that further growth in the number of cardiac centers should be avoided," they wrote.

The doctors compiled the number of open-heart operations, principally bypass surgery, and cardiac catheterizations, an X-ray test that frequently precedes heart operations.

In 1973 in Olmsted County, there were 15 coronary bypass operations for every 100,000 people. By 1977, this had risen to 40, but in 1980, it stood at 37. The rate of catheterization also slowed between 1977 and 1980, although less dramatically.

The research, directed by Dr. Robert H. Kennedy, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Coronary bypass surgery is usually performed to relieve angina chest pain. It is controversial because of its high cost and doubts about its effectiveness in preventing death from heart disease.

The Department of Health and Human Services says that hospitals providing these services should do 300 adult catheterizations or 200 open-heart operations each year to keep up their level of skill. But in 1980, only 45 percent of the hospitals performed the recommended number of open-heart operations, and 60 percent did enough catheterizations.

One-armed bandits turned away

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Slot machines are in Nevada's grocery stores, beauty shops and laundromats, but the state Gaming Control Board wants to keep the lemons, bars and cherries away from the nuts and bolts.

Members of the board have come out against placing one-armed bandits in hardware stores.

'It could cause some problems when the old man goes down to buy some lumber and loses his money in the slot machines," Control Board member Jack Stratton said at a meeting.

The panel could be overruled by the state Gaming Commission.

Nevertheless, said board member Dale Askew, a hardware store is "not an appropriate location." Stratton said there could be "policing problems" at such sites.

An application by Cardivan Co. to install slots at three separate Ole's hardware stores in Las Vegas was withdrawn because of the board members' concern.

Skunk makes bank deposit

The Vinton branch of Virginia Savings and Loan was shut earlier this week after a skunk apparently sprayed the outside of the building and the scent seeped inside.

"I opened the door and the smell hit me in the face," said Patty Stevens, branch manager.

Mrs. Stevens called an exterminator, who will try to eliminate the scent by spraying the walls with deodorant. The Virginia Tech extension office suggested scrubbing the spot outside the building with strong detergent, Lysol and vinegar.

GOP seeks positive economic signals

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is bullish on Wall Street — for the moment.

That's the same Wall Street he once said was out of touch with America and a poor source of economic advice.

The market was down then, interest rates were rising and the financial community was a center of skepticism about Reaganomics. Stock prices have gone up lately, and the president now describes the stock market as a leading economic indicator. He did say that he stopped counting when stock prices slumped a bit the other day.

With the unemployment rate at 10.1 percent and congressional elections three weeks away, Republicans are looking for every positive economic signal they can find.

He listed them in his nationally broadcast address Wednesday night: inflation rate down; interest rate down; the value of the dollar up on world markets; stock and bond markets surging.

"Recently, we have seen a surge of investment in our stock and bond markets," the president said. "This is no flash in the pan...the trend in the United States is up."

He said that is because investors "realize this administration means business in the battle against inflation. Their decision to put cash on the line is a strong vote of confidence in the foundation being laid for America's recovery — healthy, stable growth that will bring new jobs and opportunity for our people without returning us to runaway inflation and interest rates."

"I have news for you," Reagan told a campaign rally in Irving, Texas, on Monday. "At the closing bell at the stock market on Wall Street a few minutes ago, the stock market was over the magic 1,000," as measured by the Dow Jones industrial average.

"Their commitment to put cold, hard cash on the line signals a vote of confidence in America's future," Reagan said.

Reagan and Secretary of the Treasury Donald T. Regan have sometimes blamed, sometimes challenged, and only lately praised the financial community for the way markets and interest rates have reacted to administration economic programs.

The business and financial establishment was overwhelmingly Reagan's in the election that installed the Republican administration. Regan came to Washington from Wall Street, where he was chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co., giant of the investment business.

But skepticism set in, and before long, the president and the secretary were suggesting that their old friends were timid or worse.

"I have never found Wall Street a source of good financial advice," Reagan said after he'd been in office four months. "They're sitting there watching anything that they think may change the interest rates and the bond market.

An Analysis

"I think that Wall Street, in all due respect, I think they're looking through a very narrow glass and seeing only one facet."

By the end of Reagan's first summer in office, Regan was lecturing investors and businessmen to show a little confidence and backbone for the sake of economic progress — and to justify the tax breaks business got under the administration tax bill.

"Is this generation of business people too timid, too accustomed to direction from outside and too amenable to regulation by government to seize the initiative?" he asked.

When it was suggested that the administration was trying to brainwash Wall Street, Reagan answered with a quip:

"That assumes Wall Street has brains."

Thirteen months ago, the president said he was upset at the way Wall Street was responding, or failing to respond, to his program. "I hope the people on Wall Street will pay attention to the folks on Main Street," he said. "If they do, they'll see that there is a rising tide of confidence in America's future."

Your horoscope

Saturday, October 16, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Michael Conrad of TV's "Hill Street Blues," actress Suzanne Somers and catcher-turned-Philadelphia sportscaster Tim McCarver share this birthday with you, as does talented actress-singer Angela Lansbury. You now find job opportunities more exciting than any you ever dreamed about! Do not be surprised if your relatives play a key role in a career decision. Warmhearted and affectionate, you are eager to please those you love. Once a financial question is resolved, you are able to build a sizable nest egg. Your ideas win you new money and greater prestige at work. Count on romance to move in a pleasing direction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek advice from experts. You will be glad you did. You may become caught up in an influential person's political maneuvering. Avoid secret transactions. Put aside money for retirement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be prepared to deal with people who are negative or who try to waste your time. A family argument can be averted if you are diplomatic. Do not sign legal document.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not jump into a land deal without consulting a lawyer. Those around you will be more cooperative if you welcome their suggestions. The mail brings welcome news from abroad.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romance looks promising. Do not try to contact influential people today. Conduct business during the regular workweek. An old problem is apt to be solved once you talk with good friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look for ways to repay a family debt. You may want to sell some white elephants to raise some extra money. Keep good records for tax purposes. Someone from your past reappears.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check your records if someone seems to bill you twice. Work harder to improve communication with loved ones. Romance takes a turn for the better. Invest money only after consulting accountants.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Devote morning hours to chores, shopping. Later, you will want to be alone with mate to discuss a difficult personal matter. Avoid becoming embroiled in arguments with loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A splendid day for self-improvement activities. Read about subjects related to your career or business. A friend gives you a new slant on an old problem. A romantic puzzle is pieced together.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Play it safe today! Do not rely on other people's advice. Someone important agrees with most of your ideas. Make good use of the telephone to save yourself time and money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Playing hard-to-get is foolhardy now. Concentrate on improving your efficiency at work. A bit of plotting and planning will help you advance socially. Travel is best postponed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your friends play a more active role in your plans now. A bit of financial luck sends your spirits soaring. You change your mind about something after receiving a letter or phone call.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A loved one or close friend shares important news. Your initial reaction could astound you. Deal with your envy in a constructive way. Talking things out is a good way to begin.

South to make six no trump against any defense.

A few weeks ago we published this hand as a double dummy problem. Readers were invited to decide whether South could make twelve tricks at no trump, and to submit either the winning line or successful defense.

Obviously West cannot lead a diamond, so assume that he starts a low heart, after which he plays no part in the defense. It is the East hand that is crucial. Declarer wins the opening lead in dummy with the eight and runs five rounds of clubs, ending on the table. East must find three discards, and so far he has no problem—he can let go of three spades. Now South leads a heart from dummy, and East is in trouble. He must make a deadly discard from one of his holdings.

1) Suppose East sluffs a spade. Declarer wins in hand with the ace of hearts and leads a spade to the king. He cashes the ace of spades and concedes a spade trick to East, pitching two diamonds from hand. He wins East's forced diamond return with the ace, crosses to the king of hearts and dummy's spade takes the last trick.

2) Suppose East sluffs a diamond. Declarer wins in hand with the heart queen, cashes the ace of diamonds and concedes a diamond trick to East. East's forced spade return is taken in dummy, and declarer returns to his hand with the ace of hearts to cash his winning diamond.

For those who submitted this solution to Bridge World magazine, we congratulate you on your ingenuity. Unfortunately, there's just one tiny hitch. The question posed was for South to make six no trump against any defense. What happens if West leads the jack of hearts? This smashes declarer's communications to smithereens and he can no longer squeeze East for his twelfth trick. Try it if you don't believe us.

If you spotted the devastating effect of the jack of hearts lead, your free copy of Bridge World containing the solution will reach you soon. For the rest, a subscription to the magazine should make it simpler for you to solve this kind of problem in the future.

Hernia may be repaired when bladder removed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm being scheduled to have my gallbladder out. I have also had an inguinal hernia for some time, but I've neglected to do anything about it because I've been too busy. Is it possible to do both operations at the same time? — Mr. J.L., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mr. L.: An inguinal hernia may be repaired at the same time a gallbladder is removed. Incidentally, the same holds true for a patient undergoing an appendectomy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife would like to have a child. The trouble is she had a mastectomy and I don't want to do anything that would hurt her. Would you have any advice for us? — Burton, Long Beach, Long Island, N.Y.

Dear Burton: Pregnancy in a woman who has had a mastectomy does not appear to have any effect on the future course of the disease, either favorable or unfavorable. Nevertheless, there are factors you and your wife might want to consider.

You do not mention when the mastectomy was performed. The risk of recurrence of the disease reaches a peak within the first two to three years after the operation, and you might want to consider this along with other factors as you try to reach a decision.

You might also want to consider going for counseling at one of the social service agencies in your community. The counseling could help you and your wife weigh the reasons for and against having a child at this time, thus permitting you to reach a more rational decision.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is in the process of getting a divorce, and I'm afraid that it might affect her children emotionally. Is this possible? If it is, what can be done about it? — Mrs. N.W., Seattle, Wash.

Dear Mrs. W.: The children of parents involved in divorce proceedings may show symptoms of emotional disturbance such as depression, guilt, anger, and lowered self-esteem. I should add, however, that similar symptoms may also become evident in children of parents who do not divorce but who continue to live in a state of constant bickering and acrimony.

The problem stems in part from the fact that the children of divorced parents may feel that in some way they were responsible for their parents' difficulties. The situation is aggravated when the child has a medical or psychological problem, and feels that his or her presence in the home caused much of the misunderstanding between them.

I wonder if the children's pediatrician is aware of the family situation. A physician is often in a position to counsel parents contemplating a divorce about how stress on their children can be alleviated, and to counsel the children about the actual events surrounding the divorce.

For Mary, San Diego, Calif.: Blood pressure screening among adolescents is generally not too helpful in identifying those likely to develop high blood pressure in the future, except among those with a family history of the disease.

Don't throw the towel!

Ronald Reagan's Wednesday evening economic address has been thoroughly critiqued by both Republicans and Democrats and each side has a definite opinion about where the United States is headed.

The president didn't mince any words. He did do some economic cheer-leading, noting that his administration has made important progress on four of five of the nation's economic problems. The message was loud and clear: unemployment is still a problem and will continue to be for some time. The number of jobless even in the Midland-Odessa area continues to grow.

Sen. Donald Riegle of Michigan noted in the Democratic Party response to the president's address that one of every 10 workers is jobless and that bankruptcies are continuing to pile up at record rates. That's true. Nobody is denying that fact, particularly President Reagan.

But to abandon the economic course of the nation for the failed policies of past administrations would be to resign the nation to a resurgence of high-level inflation, mounting deficit spending by the federal government, unbearable taxation and a deteriorating lifestyle. That is what Americans were infuriated about during the waning days of the Jimmy Carter administration. They mandated a change from those policies toward economic stability.

No one should have expected overnight improvement. After all, the nation was fighting decades of government deficit spending which created the illusion of untold wealth. It was just an illusion. In reality, the United States was living beyond its means and now, as the saying goes, it's time to pay the piper. The cost is a high one in human suffering. Jobs are lost and will remain lost for some time — at least until the economy recovers to the point at which business investment creates more jobs, lasting jobs not make-work jobs.

We've already seen some of the benefits of facing up to economic reality — a plummeting inflation rate, now down to about 6 percent, and slowly receding interest rates, easing the money supply to make that business investment a possibility.

The fight is a long way from over. The United States didn't get bogged down to its chin in this economic quagmire in a day and it isn't going to pull itself free in a day. It's painful when friends and neighbors are out of work, even if the cupboard isn't bare. But that pain is part of the payment for the mistakes of the past.

When your opponent is on the ropes and sliding down fast is certainly no time to throw in the towel.

Overwhelming justice

"The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court...."

The Constitution was not stingy when it doled out power to the nine Supreme Court justices in black robes. Nor has history been sparing of abuse heaped on the Supreme Court, from both the left and the right, for making Congress and the American people live up to the letter of the Constitution.

In the process, the Supreme Court has been relied on to be America's conscience, to settle all disputes, to fight injustice and halt iniquity. And, not surprisingly in this era of overly abundant litigation, the justices are tired. Not of controversy — that is the court's role. But of an enormous caseload that has grown from 2,000 cases in 1961 to more than 4,400 last year.

Justice John Paul Stevens recently said: "The mounting tide of litigation" is threatening "to engulf our court." He complained that he is forced to delegate responsibilities to law clerks, some just out of law school, to screen cases and write opinions. Stevens admitted: "I do not even look at the papers in over 80 percent of the cases that are filed."

If Supreme Court justices don't have time to study the cases, who does? There is no higher court of appeal. The Supreme Court, that has weathered storms of controversy, must not be eroded from within by the relentless abrasion of exhaustion.

Stevens suggested the creation of a whole new court to screen cases for the Supreme Court.

This is a bad idea. Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said: "The screening function is an indispensable and inseparable part of the entire process and ... cannot be withdrawn from the court without grave risk of impairing the very core of the court's unique and extraordinary functions."

A better approach is for the court to exercise its authority to turn down cases which it deems secondary. The appeals of state prisoners to federal review should be strictly limited to involve only cases of "manifest injustice — where the issue is guilt or innocence," Justice Lewis F. Powell suggests.

We agree. A bill before Congress would authorize the Supreme Court to reject any case it chooses to reject. All cases which bear on constitutionality now go automatically to the Supreme Court, a needless burden on the court, which is in the best position to judge which cases are worth considering and which are false questions of constitutionality.

The lawyer's principle of exhausting all legal avenues must not be allowed to exhaust our Supreme Court. Justice cannot be done by tired and overwhelmed justices.

Another View:

Freedom has high price

Several young men opposed to military draft registration face time in prison as the price for defying the law, and some are saying that their stand takes courage, a view for which a case can be made.

Thousands of others across the country have failed to register. The notion that this takes courage may help give them the courage that it takes to risk prosecution.

The Vietnam syndrome figures largely in all of this. There is a widespread feeling, often shared by proponents and opponents of registration, that the United States could get involved in another long, costly, futile overseas war.

So there is a rationale to the opposition.

Luckily for the current opponents of registration, most American males of military age did not feel that way 40 years ago. If there is any current doubt about the courage of the generation of Americans whose "rendezvous with destiny" encompassed World War II, let it be said that millions of them had it.

On battlefields, on deadly seas, in combat in the air around the world, they demonstrated their courage by turning the tide against the two most powerful war machines in history — the Nazi forces of Adolf Hitler and the forces of the empire of Japan.

If it had not been for their courage in that war the current crop of registration resisters would not be enjoying the freedom to resist anything. They would be subjects in conquered provinces, ruled by totalitarian overlords.

The courage of American fighters of World War II was matched by that of fighters of the Korean War and Vietnam War — those who were willing to put their lives on a line and pay a price not all were willing to pay.

Not all are willing to pay the price of freedom or even consider it. Their freedom, whether they acknowledge it or not, was purchased by others who were willing to pay the price. Whenever freedom is threatened, its defense will be possible only if enough are willing to pay the price.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Congress was arena in 'battle for beaches'

WASHINGTON — The sandy beaches of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts have long been a battleground between environmentalists who want to protect them and real-estate interests who want to develop them. In the last-minute rush of legislation before Congress adjourned, both sides won some and lost some.

Jack Anderson

At issue was a bill that would designate hundreds of miles of beaches as "coastal barriers" on which development would be effectively prohibited. This would be accomplished by eliminating such juicy federal subsidies as government loans, highways and flood insurance, which for years have encouraged developers to put up resorts and vacation homes that would otherwise be prohibitively expensive and risky.

The environmentalists, it should be noted, are not merely trying to make the shorelands safe for bird-watching. Tney point out that the fragile sand-spits and islands serve as protective barriers for the mainland against wind and wave, as well as shield the spawning grounds of 85 percent of the marine life caught by commercial and sport fishermen.

But by the time the shorelands-protection bill was finally passed in the early morning hours, more than 100 of the 750 miles of beach originally considered had been removed by members of Congress responding to pressure from real-estate interests back home. In other words, developers of the favored shorefronts will continue to profit from federal subsidies; the taxpayers will pay for storm or erosion damage to beach houses that few private insurance companies would cover.

When Congress first showed misgivings about protecting developers instead of the beaches, it was agreed that it would be unfair to strip away the subsidies from developments already built or under construction. The builders, after all, had invested a lot of money on the assumption that the subsidies would be available. So two years ago, Congress ordered the Interior Department to survey the coastal barriers and identify those that were still undeveloped.

It was like declaring open season for trickery. Whole Potemkin villages sprang up practically overnight to give the appearance of ongoing development when the Interior Department survey plane flew over.

On Don Pedro Island in Florida, for example, officials made an on-the-ground inspection of what had looked like a solid housing development from the air. What they found were hastily thrown-up plywood and cardboard shacks, some of which had building permits stating they were "residential buildings" valued at $55,000.

Other landowners turned to Congress for help. Those on Daufuskie Island off South Carolina appealed to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. The island was removed from the list of protected coastal barriers.

The real-estate interests' clout with Congress is reflected in their generosity at campaign time. As a spokesman for the National Association of Realtors put it to my associate Peter Grant with diplomatic delicacy: "Congress is more responsive to our concerns than the Interior Department because Congress is a different animal with different pressures on them."

The NAR itself applied more than $50,000 worth of pressure in the form of campaign contributions to members of Congress on the committees considering the bill, or those with coastal barriers in their district. For example, Rep. John Breaux, D-La., chairman of one subcommittee, got $2,800 from the Realtors; Rep. Gene Snyder, a Republican from landlocked Kentucky and an outspoken opponent of the shorelands-protection bill, got $3,000.

By contrast, Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, which drafted the legislation, refused offers of money from the Realtors "because it might indicate a conflict of interest on my part."

Footnote: An NAR spokesman argued that his organization's campaign contributions were intended to support congressmen who shared its views on many issues, not just shoreline protection.

I, THE JURY: Deputy Regional Administrator Wiley Messick of the Small Business Administration has put a peculiar twist on the concept that a man is innocent until proven guilty. In Messick's view, Fred Bower, a 17-year federal employee in Jacksonville, Fla., is guilty even though a jury found him innocent.

Messick intends to fire Bower for accepting favors from a restaurateur named Peter Abbott, an ex-convict who claimed he gave Bower five lobsters and a small rug as a bribe for favorable treatment of Abbott's application for $490,000 in SBA loans.

Bower denied it, and a jury took just 65 minutes to agree with him. The foreman added, "We feel this was an unnecessary burden on the taxpayers to bring this type of frivolous charge."

Nevertheless, Messick, the Judge Bean of SBA, has decided to overrule the jury and fire Bower on grounds that he took a different bribe of $5,000 for recommending Abbott's loan. When asked about this early in an FBI investigation, Bower passed a lie-detector test so decisively that the federal prosecutor dropped the charge entirely.

Messick insists that Bower is guilty of something, even though the jury disagreed. He declared: "The alleged misconduct cited in those charges, whether or not sustained by the evidence, has had a serious adverse effect on the confidence of the public in the integrity of the government." In other words, guilty or not, Bower should be fired simply because he was accused.

INSIDE REPORT:

Texas gubernatorial race holds '84 import

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Gov. William P. Clements seems poised to take another large step toward making Texas a two-party state on Nov. 2 in a brass-knuckled re-election campaign that is a major portent for the 1984 presidential election.

Rowland Evans

Clements' relentless efficiency in practicing and preaching the gospel of a "businessman's administration" appears to be overcoming a unified Democratic Party headed by gubernatorial nominee Mark White despite the burden of record 8.4 percent unemployment. White is no teacup-and-ladyfinger campaigner himself. But he lacks the political sturdiness and weight of gut-fighter Clements.

Robert Novak

The governor's record as Texas's first Republican in the state House since Reconstruction is demeaned by White as all Wall Street and no Main Street. But it has garnered the backing of three former Democratic governors and four Democratic ex-attorneys general — endorsements exploited by Clements to stigmatize Attorney General White's unremarkable performance in his present office.

Barring sudden elevation of the deteriorating economy as an issue too heavy for Clements to bear, another four years of Republican rule in the third largest state carries ill tidings for the Democrats in 1984. No Democrat has been elected president in this century without carrying Texas. Given 4,000 patronage jobs and Clements' inexhaustable delight in throwing round-house punches at national Democratic Party leaders, that record suggests Democratic problems two years hence.

Clements confided aboard his chartered twin-engine Beechcraft on the way here from Austin last Tuesday that he hopes to cash in on Texas antipathy for two 1984 liberal Democratic contenders: Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former Vice President Walter Mondale. Later, at an overflow campaign luncheon in the Mariott North hotel here, he did just that without noticeable understatement. "Who will the attorney general support for president if he is the next governor?" he shouted. "They know that if they are going to elect Mondale or Kennedy president in 1984, it has to start right here and right now in this state, here in Texas."

Quite apart from Texas, the Nov. 2 results here could have a 1984 spillover effect in other Southern states, particularly Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma. That explains why White House political operatives privately regard this election as the most important 1982 test in the nation.

They watch with special fascination Clements' extraordinary efforts to attract the burgeoning Mexican-American vote, an increasingly weighty element in Texas politics that comprises some 12 percent of the total vote. Clements has spent a cool $1 million — at a minimum — out of his total $11 million war chest to detach up to 35 to 40 percent of this vote from its Democratic moorings. Playing on White's 1975 attack on the Voting Rights Act as "ridiculous," Clements is running a TV commercial described by Lena Guerero, a leading Mexican-American activist and Democratic national committeewoman, as "one of the most awesome TV commercials I have ever seen."

It shows vivid shots of John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Ronald Reagan supporting the Voting Rights Act and then asserts Clements' own support and White's opposition. It has played heavily in Spanish throughout Hispanic areas. Recently Clements decided he could risk twinning himself with Kennedy and began using it in choice time spots.

Clements' operatives think the governor "is stealing White's base" in Hispanic areas. If it turns out that way, the result could be a landmark on the way toward a two-party state.

Building a truly statewide Republican Party never was high on Clements' unpublished first-term agenda. If he wins, he will wear a solitary garland. "Clements has a top-of-the-ballot mentality," one Democratic insider told us. Moreover, only one-fifth or so of total county courthouse offices up for grabs are being contested by the Republicans. Clements virtually ignores them to avoid alienating conservative Democrats he courts as Election-Day ticket-splitters.

Clements' intimates insist that this would change in a second term and that Clements would devote more energy and thought to building a truly statewide party. For the longer-term future, Clements' party-building efforts may turn out to be just so much tall-Texas talk. But in the shorter terms of 1984, it will not make much difference. The mere extension of his lease on the governor's office will add incremental percentage points to the Republican presidential nominee who Clements, in a recent reversal of his own opinion, has now persuaded himself will be Ronald Reagan.

CHARLEY REESE

Early life values still guide us

We can go to school, travel to far places, and talk to important people, but we never really escape our childhood and the values that are shaped by it.

Charley Reese

In my own case, I often see that some position, which I can argue with all kinds of philosophical points, is nothing more than a value gained by osmosis in McDuffie County, Georgia, as a barefoot boy in overalls, and later in the East Texas oil towns.

There was very little law in my home town, or so it seemed to me, and to this day, laws more often than not strike me as an infringement on liberty or useless posturing by bureaucrats and politicians.

On Saturdays, the farmers would sit beside the stores on Main Street and spit tobacco juice on the sidewalk. If you walked barefooted and didn't like the slicky, slimy feel of tobacco juice on your heel, it was your responsibility to watch where you stepped.

People in those days were not poor or disadvantaged. You were either "decent" or "sorry." Decent meant that regardless of your income, you kept yourself reasonably clean and neat, provided for your sustenance, and didn't abuse your family. Sorry meant that you were shiftless and lazy, didn't pay your bills, and didn't take care of your family.

It wasn't a bad thing to take a drink or play a little poker, even though it was a dry county and gambling was illegal. You just weren't supposed to get drunk and you were expected to have sense enough to set a limit on your losses.

My Dad taught me about gambling with a slot machine. I won about a dollar's worth of nickels, which seemed like a fortune, and he began to egg me on, telling me that if I just kept playing I would surely hit the jackpot. As my pile of nickels shrank and I started to get cautious, he said, "The very next time is liable to be the jackpot. You'd better try it."

Pretty soon, I had the fever and I was feeding nickels into that machine as fast as I could and when my last nickel disappeared, I sort of automatically turned to him and said, "Let me have a nickel."

He just laughed and said, "I'm not giving you any of my money to throw away. You'd better learn to quit while you're ahead." And that was that, I felt betrayed, but I learned a valuable lesson.

When I was 12 and used to roam in the woods with my shotgun, it never crossed my mind to worry about who owned the woods I was walking in. You were expected not to abuse anybody else's property by tearing down a fence, leaving a gate open, shooting livestock, or stealing anything, but it was also understood that a person walked where he wanted to go without asking anybody's permission.

I never had a hunting dog and the land was pretty well hunted out by tenant farmers who supplemented their diets with game, but I spent some wonderful hours in fields of broom straw and down in the swamps. To be able to walk where you will with a gun when you're 12 years old is something most children today cannot do. You could spend a whole day in the woods and never see another person.

I suppose growing up in that environment I learned the iron law of cause and effect: that you were not only responsible but accountable for what you did and didn't do, for what you said and didn't say, and nobody was going to come along and erase your mistakes or take the rap for you.

The worst aspect of the welfare state is that it removes or mitigates the penalty for personal failure and irresponsibility. The welfare philosophy makes excuses for people's failures and irresponsibility. The welfare philosophy makes excuses for people's failures and removes moral judgment from the human equation. People who are lazy, drunkards and wife-beaters today are called deprived or disadvantaged or sick, instead of sorry and no good.

I think that's a mistake, an understandable one and one made out of compassion, but a mistake nevertheless. You can't remove the penalties for failure without diminishing the incentives for success.

Chagras said to have felt Wood threatened their lifestyle

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two former employees of convicted narcotics trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra and his wife have testified that the couple felt their opulent lifestyle was threatened by the federal judge they are accused of plotting to kill.

Chagra is charged with hiring a hitman to assassinate U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. on May 29, 1979. Elizabeth Chagra is accused of helping plan the murder.

In an apparent effort to show the Chagras had enough cash to make the alleged $250,000 payoff for the slaying, government lawyers questioned the former employees of the couple on Thursday.

Mrs. Chagra, accused triggerman Charles V. Harrelson, 44, and Harrelson's wife, Jo ann Starr Harrelson, 41, are on trial in connection with Wood's death. Mrs. Harrelson also is charged with perjury and obstruction of justice.

Chagra will be tried seperately on murder charges.

George and Gloria Stroupe, now living in Florida, were asked Thursday about the Chagras' lifestyle between October 1978, when they moved to Las Vegas, Nev., and the summer of 1979, when Chagra went on trial on a narcotics charge.

Both Stroupes said they heard a judge known as "Maximum John" — Wood's nickname for the stiff prison sentences he handed narcotics traffickers — would preside at the trial and that the Chagras did not feel Wood would give him a fair trial.

Mrs. Stroupe said Chagra once "mentioned that his property could be confiscated, anything he owned," if he were convicted of the narcotics charges pending before Wood.

The night they moved to Las Vegas, Stroupe said, Chagra had him roll the dice at a craps table while Chagra placed the bets, with the pair coming out about $30,000 ahead.

Mrs. Stroupe said the Chagras bought a house in Las Vegas for $275,000, then spent "more than $700,000" over the next four months refurbishing it, buying furniture and landscaping the grounds.

"It was mostly in cash," she said, explaining that Mrs. Chagra delivered the money in stacks of $20, $50 and $100 bills to pay workers and craftsmen.

Once Mrs. Chagra made a $32,000 mistake by delivering eight stacks of $5,000 each, instead of $1,000 stacks, when Mrs. Stroupe needed $8,000 to pay bills, she said.

Chagra drove a Mercedes-Benz while Mrs. Chagra had three maids and drove a Lincoln Continental, the witness testified. The couple bought a boat and never blinked at $500 utility bills, according to Mrs. Stroupe, who handled the couple's living expenses.

Dole: Time's come to deal with Social Security

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Congress will avoid dealing with the ailing Social Security system if the Democrats score a big victory in the upcoming election, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., predicted in Los Angeles Thursday.

"I'm advocating that we save the system," Dole said in an interview. "We should deal with Social Security in the post-election session this year, but if there's a change of more than 20 seats in the House, any changes in Social Security are out the window."

Calling Social Security "the biggest issue we didn't face up to in the last two years," Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, warned, "If we don't address it, we may have a real problem." But Dole, who also serves on the presidential commission established to recommend reforms to Congress, did not fault President Reagan for conspicuously avoiding Social Security in his economic speech Wednesday night.

"I know he avoided it," Dole said, "but after all, there is an election only three weeks away. My own view is that we should address it."

The Social Security Commission, chaired by economist Alan Greenspan, is scheduled to issue a report on proposed Social Security reforms and changes a few weeks after the Nov. 2 election.

Among the ideas being considered, sources have said, are requiring new federal employees to contribute to the Social Security system to provide larger revenues, some tightening of future benefits for the elderly and a push forward to 1983 and 1984 of Social Security tax hikes now scheduled to go into effect in the late 1980s.

Speaking before a gathering of business leaders at a tax seminar sponsored by Price Waterhouse & Co., an accounting firm, at the Century Plaza Hotel, Dole cited congressional passage of the $98 billion tax increase this year as one of the factors contributing to Wall Street's increased confidence in Washington's economic policies.

"I don't have any affidavits," he said at a press conference, "but I think Wall Street was surprised Congress could so something no one expected. By raising taxes in an election year we showed we are serious about getting big deficits under control."

Arguing that he wants to avoid another tax increase next year, Dole nonetheless warned that he might go after some "tax loopholes" and that "revenue enhancements" might be necessary if the U.S. economy fails to recover strongly in 1983.

"I think we've just about hit the bottom of the barrel on cutting social programs," Dole said. "We are going to have to look at everything."

Carter maintains U.S. would have attacked Iran if hostages harmed

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Carter says the United States was prepared to launch a military attack on Iran if any of the American hostages were harmed or injured.

"I was prepared to make a direct military attack on Iran," Carter writes in his memoirs, "Keeping Faith."

"We pored over aerial photographs of oil refineries and many other targets of strategic importance there, and planned how best to carry out our threat to the Iranian leaders of quick punitive action," he said.

In an interview Thursday night on ABC's "20-20," Carter said that he had personally written Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with the threat and "the Iranian leaders knew that we would do it."

He was asked if he ever heard back from Khomeini, and Carter said: "Indirectly. I know he never put a hostage on trial and he never injured one of them."

The book, going on sale today with a sale price of $22.50, is being published by Bantam Books.

Carter also says President Reagan did not take notes, make any comments or ask any questions when he briefed him on issues that would face Reagan's new presidency.

"Some of the information was quite complex, and I did not see how he could possibly retain all of it merely by listening," Carter writes. "I asked him if he wanted a pad so that he could take some notes, but he responded that he could remember what I was saying."

In his interview with "20-20," Carter rated Reagan as president, using a scale of A to D.

"On economic policy...I think he wouldn't merit more than a D, because he's instituted some long-range afflictions on the economic system that I think are going to be very difficult to reverse in the future," Carter said.

He gave Reagan a C in foreign policy. "He's come around very well, mainly by espousing the policies that I left intact, and I give him credit for that."

Carter writes in his book that in early January 1981 Reagan's secretary of state, Alexander M. Haig Jr., and national security adviser, Richard Allen, "refused to be briefed on the Iranian situation."

The 52 American hostages were not released from Tehran until Jan. 20, when Reagan was sworn in.

Carter said that he based his memoirs on recollections contained in 18 volumes of diary notes accumulated during his presidency. Other highlights of the the book:

—Someone Carter refuses to identify gave him detailed information on the compound where the American hostages were kept and where each hostage was being held, for the team involved in the failed rescue attempt. It was the first time the United States knew precisely where the hostages were.

—One of Carter's biggest problem during the Iranian crisis was with a former ambassador to Iran, William Sullivan.

"I was still relying on some of his reports, which later realized were not accurate or balanced," Carter said. "Sullivan insisted that we should give support to Khomeini, even if it meant weakening (former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour) Bakhtiar and the coalition government he was trying to form."

Sullivan was replaced by Charge d'Affaires Bruce Laingen in the spring of 1979. Laingen was one of the hostages held for 444 days in Iran.

Who's the candidate in New Hampshire race?

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the big moment came for President Reagan to endorse Robert C. Smith's bid for the House of Representatives, the president told a rally of Republican faithful to vote for Lois Beaulieu.

Reagan made televised remarks via satellite to 11 GOP gatherings around the country Thursday night, answering a question submitted in advance from each location.

The ninth question came from Ms. Beaulieu in Manchester, N.H., where a rally was being held for Smith's bid to unseat incumbent Democratic Rep. Norman D'Amours in the 1st District.

In answering her question, Reagan flubbed his line, endorsing her instead of Smith.

Ms. Beaulieu, a local GOP activist, asked the president what can be done about congressmen who had "deceived the public" by co-sponsoring a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and then voting against it on the House floor just before the election. She said D'Amours was one of those congressmen.

Intense heat hampers teams' efforts at refinery

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Intense heat has hampered the efforts of three safety teams to examine a 13-story refinery unit that spewed scalding powder, killing five workers and injuring eight, a spokesman for Texaco Inc. says.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials arrived at the refinery Thursday to join company officials and investigators of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, but their efforts have been stymied by heat, said Texaco spokesman Charles Rentz.

"There has not been quite a lot of progress into the investigation because of the condition of the facility," Rentz said.

Tons of powdered catalyst remained in ankle-deep drifts around a fluid catalytic cracking unit, where a pipeline ruptured Wednesday morning.

Rentz said the hot powder was slowly cooking late Thursday. Officials said the powder was at a temperature of 1,200 degrees when it escaped from the No. 1 fluid catalytic cracking unit.

Gerald Baty, OSHA regional director in Houston, said results of the agency's investigation would not be available for a "minimum of a week" to several weeks.

Baty said investigators were not able to survey the immediate area where the accident occurred because of "all the heat" emanating from the powders, which are heated to high temperature and used to trigger a chemical reaction in the refinery process.

The catalytic cracking unit ruptured about 11 a.m. Wednesday, producing a large crack in an attached pipeline, officials said.

MMH recruits new emergency room supervisor

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital has a new emergency room supervisor who says she wants the ER to have a more positive image in the community — through improving communication.

Wanda Douglas, a registered nurse who is trained in critical care and trauma, was appointed to her new position as department head of the ER Monday.

"They knew that I like trauma," she said. "In fact, I applied for an ER position when I came here six years ago."

This week Ms. Douglas has been busy with schedules, sifting through paperwork, organizing her cubby-hole office and setting new goals for the department.

She has worked in many different capacities at MMH from house supervisor to working every floor on every shift — and she knows patient relations is an important part of quality care.

Ms. Douglas said the area needing improvement in the ER are those situations which are viewed by the staff as non-emergencies.

"Emergency room personnel are trained to respond in life-threatening situations," she said. "A baby's cold may not move them like an autombile accident victim would.

"But I know when it's my child with a respiratory problem — that's an emergency," she added.

"I want to work as a liaison between the patient, who's receiving medical attention, and the family who is waiting," Ms. Douglas explained. "When a patient comes in the emergency room, the family needs someone who is concerned and caring.

"In a trauma situation the family needs comforting and by relating better with these families, it should help us with our image."

Ms. Douglas is looking forward to working with the ER staff and wants to have an open door policy for her employees to voice their opinions. She will see that her 21 employees are properly licensed and CPR certified.

"We want to keep abreast of the newest and latest ER techniques through continuing education for the staff," she said.

For now, Ms. Douglas will not garb herself in the cranberry-colored smocks and pants that the ER staff currently wears; instead she will continue to dress in the traditional nurse's white.

"I want to keep a professional image for a while until everyone gets used to the change," she said, adding "but when it comes to lifting a patient off the stretcher on a rainy day like we had this week, the mud doesn't look very professional."

HOUSTON (AP) — Grand jurors refused to indict a former Indonesian president's daughter who was accused of stealing $5.5 million from a Japanese company that sold oilfield pipe to Mexico's national oil monopoly.

Hospital officials probe mix-up

DALLAS (AP) — Officials at Parkland Memorial Hospital are trying to determine who is responsible for a mix-up involving the bodies of two infants that resulted in a teen-age mother attending her son's funeral twice.

Rosa Torrez, 14, was told Tuesday night that the baby she buried eight days ago was not that of her son, but the infant of another woman, authorities said.

Hospital officials said Ms. Torrez and Rebecca Torres delivered babies prematurely at Parkland six days apart, both of whom died at the hospital.

Ms. Torres' son lived for five hours after his birth Sept. 25. Ms. Torrez' infant died Oct. 3, two days after his birth, officials said.

Ms. Torrez arranged to have Ben F. Brown Funeral Home of Irving pick up the body and handle her baby's funeral, which was held Oct. 6.

The error was discovered the next day when an employee of the Dallas County medical examiner's office called the woman and asked her if she was going to make funeral arrangements for her baby, officials said.

Comparisons of footprints confirmed that Ms. Torrez' infant was still in the morgue, officials said.

For several days after the discovery, hospital officials, the funeral home and the medical examiner's office were in a quandry over whether to disinter the Torres baby, according to funeral director Ben F. Brown.

Ms. Torrez was informed of the mistake Tuesday night and officials decided to leave the other child buried where he was because the mother had requested an indigent funeral.

Rosa Torrez's infant was buried next to the other baby Thursday.

Dallas County Medical Examiner Charles Petty and Brown blamed the hosptial for the mix-up. But Parkland officials said human error was to blame and the hospital was not responsible.

"The babies were tagged correctly," said Tom Cox, attorney for the Dallas County Hospital District. "The man from the funeral home came to pick up Rosa Torrez's baby and picked up Rebecca Torres' instead."

An investigation to determine how the mistake occurred was underway today, according to hospital administrator Ron Anderson.

Minor quake rattles Panhandle region

DALHART, Texas (AP) — A minor earthquake that rattled windows and dishes in the northwest corner of the Panhandle was only the second on record for the region, a geophysicist said.

The tremor, centered about 10 miles south of Dalhart, occurred at 7:53 a.m. CDT Thursday. The earthquake's magnitude registered 3.9 on the Richter scale, authorities said.

Waverly Person, a geophysicist at the Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said the last earthquake to hit the area — and the only other one on record — took place on March 11, 1948.

"We didn't have any damage reports," said Dalhart Police Chief C.L. Sanborn. He said his dispatcher told him, "It felt just like a sonic boom. Rumbled a little bit, felt like a big train was coming through and that was the extent of it."

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International, Midland Chapter, cordially invites the Public to its monthly meeting to be held Saturday Oct. 16. Dinner will be served at 6:30 P.M. ($5.00 per plate. and children under 12 yrs. free). Regular meeting will begin at 7:30 P.M.
Jerry Woodfill, NASA Space Center Design Engineer will be the featured speaker. Jerry will tell of the valiant effort, and the many prayers of the employees of the Houston Space Center in the Mishap of Apollo Thirteen, and how prayer changed disaster into a miracle.

Midland Phi Mus sell Pumpkin Pops for Project HOPE

Pumpkin Pops, being sold in Midland by Phi Mu sorority, are a great way to share Halloween fun with Midland's children, and at the same time contribute to Project HOPE, the world health care organization that's most famous symbol is probably the hospital ship S.S. HOPE.

Although the ship was retired in 1974, Project HOPE continues to provide health care for people all over the world. In Midland, Phi Mu sorority has sold Pumpkin Pops for Project HOPE for the past several years. These brightly colored orange suckers with the imprint of Project HOPE/Phi Mu on them will be displayed for sale in cannisters in prominent places in many stores in Midland during the month of October. All proceeds from the Pumpkin Pop sales will be funneled through Phi Mu Foundation, with 85 percent of the money raised going to Project HOPE, and 15 percent to Phi Mu Foundation Scholarships.

At the Phi Mu National Convention held in July, it was announced that Phi Mu has raised over $500,000 for Project HOPE, mainly through projects collegiate and alumnae chapters have had for Project HOPE throughout the country.

Walk-in emergency medical centers curing many ills

By BRENDA FINE
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Latter-day MASH units are springing up in America's shopping malls. This medical phenomenon, the Freestanding Emergency Center — also called Minor Emergency Center, or Emergicenter, or MedFirst Center in various parts of the country — may be the answer to today's family medical needs.

If the concept of medicine in a mall seems even more alien than law or dentistry at the local shopping center, imagine this family scenario:

It's 8 p.m. on a Saturday and you are carving the roast. Your grip slips and you carve your hand instead. It's too late to call your doctor, and you don't want to leave your guests for hours while you wait your turn in a hospital emergency room.

Instead, you drive to the nearby Freestanding Emergency Center. Within minutes you are processed, triaged (remember the MASH term for assessing the severity of an injury), and the doctor is treating your wound.

So he's not Alan Alda. But the cost of this visit runs anywhere from 20 percent to 40 percent lower than at a hospital emergency room.

These walk-in centers — whose function falls somewhere between that of a family phsycian and a hospital's emergency room — are mushrooming at an astounding rate. There are approximately 600 nation-wide, according to the newly-formed National Association of Freestanding Emergency Centers, a trade association.

The concept of no-frills medicine evolved as a natural outgrowth of the national lifestyle. As people moved around from job to job, families had no time to put down roots, to establish a relationship with a family doctor. Medical needs were treated at the nearest hospital emergency room.

A facility was needed that could combine the across-the-board expertise of a hospital with the personal care of a family physican, while keeping the cost of these services within reach. So began the first FEC.

Most centers are located in highly visible locations and stay open an average 12 to 16 hours a day, seven days a week, holidays included. They are staffed by at least one qualified M.D. and are equipped with lab and X-ray facilities as well as cardiac resuscitation units.

However, the word "emergency" should be clearly underscored. Freestanding centers have specific limitations. They can not treat major trauma cases. They are not open around the clock. And they do not offer on-going treatment, only one-emergency, one-visit care.

Because they cannot treat major trauma — life-or-limb-threatening situations — these centers have been under attack from segments of the medical community:

* Hospitals whose emergency rooms depend on the non-trauma patient to help defray the high costs of sophisticated equipment necessary for treating serious cases.

A recent study by the Indiana Hospital Association noted that half the people using a hospital emergency department have non-trauma conditions; while 45 percent were considered urgent, nearly 83 percent of all patients treated were released. Those 80 out of 100 patients were helping to pay the high medical costs necessary in the treatment of the remaining 17 patients.

* The family physician, long the source of general medical care.

"We favor a pluralistic approach to the health care system, but we don't want unfair competition," said Dr. Ernie Chaney, president of the American Academy of Family Physicians. "They (FECs) take only the cream off the top. If there were more family physicians, the freestanding centers would not be necessary."

He pointed out that, while there are more than enough doctors available, only about 25 percent practice family medicine. Many people do not have a family doctor.

Those doctors who own and operate the freestanding centers are not unhappy with the furor they are causing in the medical profession. "Competition can only bring down the costs and increase the convenience of health care," argues Gary Stevenson, executive director of the FEC trade association. Centers are opening at the rate of one a day, according to Stevenson, and are expected to number 1,000 by the end of this year.

Americans' eating habits changing

By JOAN ZYDA
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The American diet has changed markedly since 1976, according to government researchers. More chicken and less beef, more low-fat milk and less whole milk are being consumed — moves that are being hailed by nutritionists.

However, Americans also are drinking more soft drinks instead of coffee — which has the same health professionals shaking their heads.

"The changes signal that consumers are reacting to pressure on their pocketbooks as well as health concerns over certain kinds of foods," said Bonnie Liebman, a nutritionist with the Center for Science in the Public Interest in Washington.

The center's new report on the national diet says that the average American ate 78.8 pounds of beef and veal last year — a decrease of 19.4 percent over what was consumed in 1976. In place of beef and veal, Americans have developed an appetite for poultry, pork and fish — which often cost less. Each person on the average ate 62.9 pounds of poultry last year, or 20.3 percent more than the 1976 amount.

Individual consumption of pork climbed to 65 pounds in 1981, an increase of 19 percent. And the national appetite for fish increased to 13 pounds per person — a hike of 8 percent.

"Americans are becoming more nutritionally sensitive," said Dr. Charles Kleeman, director of the University of California-Los Angeles' Center for Health Enhancement, Education and Research. Kleeman noted that consumers are aware that the high fat content of beef has been "definitely, positively and unequivocally linked" to cardiovascular illnesses. "Consumers realize that nutrition is the most important environmental factor in modifying their quality of life," he said.

Reflecting concern over the fat content in foods, the report shows that Americans also are switching to low-fat milk over whole milk. Last year, the average person drank 11.4 gallons of low-fat milk (a 20 percent increase) compared to 16.2 gallons (a 19 percent decrease) for whole milk.

Nevertheless, Jerzy Meduski, a University of Southern California nutritionist and neurologist, added that consumers remain victims of "considerable misinformation" and "public nervosity" about nutrition. He cited the center's report that shows that Americans are substituting more soft drinks for coffee, which he said "isn't a healthy movement."

According to the report, the average American drank 567.5 cups of coffee last year, down 17.6 percent from the consumption in 1976. Each American also drank an average of 412 cans of soft drinks — up 25.3 percent from 1976.

The center's report showed the most dramatic increase nationally in food consumption occurred with corn syrup — which, the center said, seems to be replacing cane and beet sugar in various uses because it's cheaper.

To make your chicken cutlets, debone frozen chicken breasts when only partially thawed. Use a thin, sharp knife. The meat will hold its shape and leave the bone easily.

Counseling helps man face serious health handicap

By JIM McELROY
AP Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Rick Quezada says he's alive and happy today because of Presbyterian Hospital's Kay Hankinson. She's not a doctor, but she was what the doctor ordered.

Ms. Hankinson is a grief counselor. She works with people trying to deal with their feelings in the wake of the discovery they or someone close to them may be gravely ill or even dying.

"I've always been a real pusher," said the 29-year-old Quezadá, who was born with a congenital heart defect. "I've always thought of being strong, as being the ultimate thing. I was always very hard on myself. I refused to say I was weak.

"For the last three years my health seemed to take a dip. Every time I would go to the doctor, my condition was getting worse. My doctor was telling me, 'You had better slow down or you're going to kill yourself.'"

He kept pushing. The University of New Mexico graduate was attending law school with an eye toward a career as a trial lawyer.

"I thought I could overcome my body with my will power, with my strength," he said. "I was refusing to slow down."

He said his doctor and others suggested he see a counselor.

"I said no. That would have been an admission that I was weak," Quezada said.

"When my strength started breaking down, I felt I was going to be destroyed. My own mind finally said, 'You've got to come to grips with yourself, with reality. Or else you're going to destroy yourself. You're going to destroy your body.'"

He said he decided there was too much to live for and made an appointment last spring to see a counselor.

"It's probably the best thing I ever did," he said.

Initially, he said, the experience was neutral.

"I didn't really feel any relief nor any worse. But after I left I always felt I wanted to go back. I felt something that I was attracted to, somehow."

This English Department different from most

In 1976, Bob Brandts was denied tenure in the English Department at the University of California, Santa Barbara; so he went and started his own — The English Department, a bar, where he sits nursing a beer.

By ELIZABETH MEHREN
Los Angeles Times

GOLETA, Calif. — It was not such an unlikely transition, really, going from the English Department to The English Department.

The one least in Robert Brandts' view, the other was the arena for it all, the forum wherein all emotions would play; a stage where, each player at all times knows his role, his lines and when to deliver them.

As Brandts observed, standing in the tavern he named for the academic department from which he was ousted, "I do believe The Bar to be the source of all drama."

In fact soon after he was denied tenure in 1976 in the English Department at University of California Santa Barbara — soon after, for that matter, he steamed over to downtown Goleta and started an English Department of his own. Brandts began teaching in the City of Santa Barbara's adult education program. One of the first courses he offered was called Tavern Literature: bodies of writing, he explains, that have as their major setting, a drinking site.

POET, PAINTER, STUDENT of African literature, onetime "mercenary for the Kenyan Ministry of Education," longtime lifeguard, rabid St. Louis Cardinals fan, Brandts taught Doubt, too. Another semester, he led a classroom expedition into the literary laybrinth of Guilt.

But taverns were better. Taverns were real, taverns were living. Taverns were where Brandts could read poetry every Thursday night. Taverns were where he could hang his paintings.

Banished after eight years by UCSB'S English Department by "an anonymous committee — and I was too proud to find out who, or why" — Brandts turned his attention to The English Department, the dusty, dusky bar he founded dead opposite the Goleta Transit Station — just minutes from the sandy, sunny campus of UC Santa Barbara.

Summarily, predictably, the place became an unofficial adjunct to the university's faculty club. One night, the theoretical physicists would invade the premises; geographers, geologists, anthropologists the next. Psychologists had their night at The Bar.

TO BE SURE, those who lift their eyes above bar level will see an art gallery of sorts: paintings, by Brandts himself, that date from the day in 1957 when, lifeguarding for the City of Long Beach, he decided to teach himself to paint. "The anatomy was right there, on the beach," he reasoned. "Also the color, the balance, the symmetry." For reference, there was the public library, just a few blocks away. Brandts painted his way into his poetry period a decade later, and by the time he opened The English Department he was trying to buy back his own works from those who had collected them.

And there they hang, dimly lit, and surrounded by a motley and ever-increasing flock of rubber duckies: gifts from English Department alumni; testimony to Brandts' reign as UCSB's self-proclaimed "lame duck" professor of English.

The English Department has no jukebox, a fact it proclaims in a sign pinned to the front door. It has no jukebox, says sometime-bartender John Vosburg, a Brandts crony since 1943, "because Bob does not want a jukebox." Brandts, said his oldest friend, "can be very unbending."

He is firm, for example, in refusing to dispense anything other than beer and wine at The English Department. "Hard alcohol produces a different kind of clientele, and a different kind of social approach to alcohol use," Brandts believes. Specifically: "Anyone who drinks a hard-alcohol liquor drink suggests he wants to be conked out. Beer and wine suggests to me that he wants to be ... lubricated."

BRANDTS IS EQUALLY adamant in his policy of no credit cards and, with the arrival of a president up the road at Rancho del Cielo, no Secret Service agents. In Brandts' scheme of the universe, plastic is clearly a major indicator of a decaying civilization. Secret Service agents fare little better.

In fact he knows instantly who he does or does not want in his establishment. He thrives on voices that add texture to his living theater. "But when I hear a human sound that goes contrary to that," he says, "I jump on it."

Over the years, said Brandts, "obviously you have groups who come in and wants to act up." He raises himself to his full six-foot-one-inch, 205-pound hulk. "I just tell them 'you're not going to be able to do that in this place.'

"Listen, I've kicked Ph.D's out of here," Brandts said, "and told them never to come back because they don't know how to drink or think the way we want them to drink or think."

UNDAZZLED — TO SAY the least — by the trappings of academe, Brandts himself had only a BA when he began teaching at UCSB in 1968. In Terms at least of years-on-the-job, his resume tilted far more heavily toward sun and surf than ivory towers. But who said the beach was not the world's biggest classroom? "You see, lifeguards have often been very serious people," Brandts said. "A lot of people think they're just wasting away on the edge of the earth. The truth is," he said, perhaps truthfully, "we read 'Moby Dick' on the beach. Out loud."

Now Robert Brandts insists he had no intention, ever, of going into teaching. "It just came about naturally," he said, and shrugged. But after two years of teaching in East Africa, filled with the richness of African prose and poetry, he found himself being offered "securitive employment" as a lecturer at the UCSB English Department. So, OK, come-on, how did he really get the job? "I have smart friends."

Eased out of the system, he minces little contempt for institutionalized higher education. The university — any university — he says, "is the biggest joke in the world set up as it is to isolate the mind from other facts and facets of life."

Today's maternity clothes in fashion

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - "Flaunt the fact you are pregnant, but do it with savvy, with taste, with a polished, complete look from head to toe," advises Barbara Schlaks, an authority in the maternity fashion industry.

As pregnant women's lifestyles have changed, so have fashions for pregnant women changed, notes Ms. Schlaks, a fashion consultant to Motherhood Maternity Boutiques.

"Maternity fashions have grown up. They're no longer frilly or adorable," she says. "Now they have clean lines, sophisticated looks. The pregnant woman today is older, more mature, more confident. She can't afford not to look fashionable — she's often holding down a career."

With more and more women having their first baby at 30 or later, designers are creating maternity collections to suit women who need and want more and better clothes, and who can afford them, she explains.

"The smock just doesn't make it, either for the woman staying home or deciding to combine career with motherhood," Ms. Schlaks says. "When she looks good she feels good. If she chooses to wear her husband's clothes instead of investing in a wardrobe of her own, she'll not only look dowdy, but feel dowdy."

It's important that women should know how to accessorize — when in doubt, keep it simple — to achieve the proper balance, with the right makeup and hairstyle, adds Ms. Schlaks, who has helped to develop an educational program being conducted in Motherhood Maternity Boutiques throughout the country during the coming months.

The free seminar-workshops will focus on nutrition, exercises, beauty, psychological aspects of pregnancy, and other areas of concern, along with a fashion show.

"It's nice to know the pregnant woman has options," says Ms. Schlaks, "everything from sweatwear and dancewear to weekend wear, career wear, evening wear, including the little black dinner dress, and current trend-setters, even the newest tuxedo look. Why not?"

Shopping knowledge saves shopping dollars

By LUCRETIA STEIGER

The blouse is marked "imperfect" and the shirt a "second."

You look them over carefully but can't find any flaws. Are they OK to buy? Will they wear well? And what about that skirt with no label that's being touted as a Calvin Klein for $14.95; is it the real thing? How can you tell?

As clothing prices climb, it's increasingly important to understand retailing terms you're likely to encounter at lower-priced shops and boutiques.

By federal law, merchandise which is not first quality must be otherwise marked. Some of the common designations used by stores to earmark inferior merchandise are: "irregular," "imperfect," "damaged," "distressed" and "seconds."

According to Chuck McCourty of the Los Angeles office of the Federal Trade Commission, deceptive sales practices have been outlawed since 1914. Then, in the late 1930s, a provision was added to FTC regulations that the buyer can assume that a purchase is "first class merchandise" unless otherwise marked.

Firms have been prosecuted for failure to identify inferior merchandise. For example, in 1980, a Southern hosiery mill owner was fined for marketing hose that were irregulars and not so marked, McCourty said.

But when merchandise is not first class, when the sign above the bin of socks says "irregulars," it's important to know the meaning of the terms. The following explanations of some of the most common classifications are based on comments from local salespeople as well as definitions from "The Fashion Encyclopedia" a new book by Catherine Houck, published by St. Martin's Press ($12.95).

IRREGULAR OR IMPERFECT. These refer to a non-perfect article, but one with a minor flaw or flaws which rarely will affect wearability.

When buying something marked irregular or imperfect, manager Sandy Lowe of Marshall's in San Diego advises checking the item carefully.

"You may find a seam double-stitched or a flaw in the weaving. The label might be in the wrong place in a pair of shoes or the buttons might not be placed correctly on a blouse ... the flaw will not affect the wearability of a garment."

She also notes that in buying any garment which is not marked first quality, the shopper might look for such flaws as seams which happen to be stitched twice, an irregularity in the crossweave of the fabric, an emblem in the wrong place (a sleeve instead of a pocket), irregularities in hemlines, dresses with no buttons or even an incorrect lineup of buttons on a garment.

"Perhaps there is no snap fastening at the waistline where there should be," she added.

Other points to check might be the color of the front and back of a garment — the dye lots might not match exactly — or the closing of zippers, which can be sewn into clothing incorrectly with an uneven result. The zippers still work but the waistband could be higher on one side than the other.

Shoulder seams can be off, with one sleeve lower than the other, or the length of one pant leg can be longer than the other. Sewing garments often is "piecework" for the seamstresses, one retailer pointed out, meaning that the seamstress is paid by the piece and often in a hurry to complete more garments. This can lead to sloppy workmanship.

Retailer Arthur Bloom, manager of a store where he said only first-quality merchandise is sold, says that many garments labeled imperfect are wearable.

"In knitting a sweater, for example, when they switch from white to black in the spinning of the yarns, they must shut down to let the air settle. But if they don't, there could be a few threads of the wrong color knit into the garment," he said. Such a flaw would make the garment imperfect.

SECOND. A definite flaw, such as a slub or rough spot in the weave of a fabric, that could mar the looks as well as shorten the garment's life. (It might wear through more quickly in that spot.)

Houck, in "The Fashion Encyclopedia," says that seconds have slight flaws, but that "thirds" or "rejects" are disasters. Seconds are sold at stores, but thirds are torn apart to be made into entirely new fabric, she reports.

RETURNED. Merchandise returned to the manufacturer by stores for any number of reasons, ranging from flaws to the store having overstocked. These then are sold again to other retailers. One drawback is that they may be out-of-season by that time. However, this does not affect their quality.

DAMAGED. Damage done to an article such as a hole or tear, a run, a grease spot or a lipstick stain which may or may not be repairable.

"Damaged means that something more drastic is wrong with the garment," Bloom said.

DISTRESSED. The selling of out-of-season merchandise — such as velvet blazers or metallic evening dresses being sold in summer — or out-of-style clothing — long hemlines when short styles are in — usually at extremely low prices.

DEAR ABBY

Organ donors' legacy keeps on giving

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: While driving north from Florida, I stopped in Virginia for gas, only to discover that somewhere after the last fill-up I'd lost my wallet containing all my identification, license, etc.

A week later, I received a well-wrapped package in the mail. It contained my wallet! And with it was this letter:

"Dear June: My husband is a truck driver from Kansas. While he and his co-driver were driving through Virginia yesterday, they found your wallet and its contents scattered on the highway. They picked up all they could find; I hope nothing is missing. There was money. In the wallet was a card indicating that you are an organ donor. There was also a very touching clipping from the Dear Abby column urging people to become donors. It was beautiful!

"You must be a wonderful person. My sister had a heart transplant, which added a few more months to her life. We can never thank the relatives of the donor because we don't know who the donor was.

"I also have a young daughter who is on a kidney machine three hours, twice a week. It breaks my heart that I can't give her one of my kidneys (our blood and tissue types don't match) and, unfortunately, her father's kidneys aren't healthy enough. But thanks to caring people like you, someday someone may be a donor for her. May God bless you with a long and healthy life." — Driver's Wife

Abby, I hope that you will think this is worth sharing. People need to know that there are still a lot of generous, decent people out there who will go out of their way to do a kindness for a stranger. — JUNE P., MAINE

DEAR JUNE: It is indeed worth sharing. And the "clipping" that touched that truck driver's wife also deserves another run, and here it is. It originally appeared Dec. 28, 1977:

"At a certain moment a doctor will determine that my brain has ceased to function and that, for all intents and purposes, my life has stopped.

"When that happens, do not attempt to instill artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my 'deathbed.' Call it my 'bed of life,' and let my body be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

"Give my sight to a man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman.

"Give my heart to a person whose own heart has caused nothing but endless days of pain.

"Give my blood to the teen-ager who has been pulled from the wreckage of his car, so that he might live to see his grandchildren play.

"Give my kidneys to one who depends on a machine to exist from week to week.

"Take my bones, every muscle, every fiber and nerve in my body and find a way to make a crippled child walk.

"Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that someday a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her window.

"Burn what is left of me and scatter the ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

"If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses, and all prejudice against my fellow man.

"Give my soul to God.

"If by chance you wish to remember me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever." — ROBERT N. TEST

Aviophobics' fears of flying can be overcome

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Until six years ago, Ken Blasor-Wilson had soared the skies in small and large aircraft, never imagining the day his legs would turn to mush if he attempted to board a plane.

"At first I enjoyed it, then I was bored, then I was nervous," said the 34-year-old television production assistant, describing his flying experiences.

"All of a sudden, I couldn't walk up the gangplank. I tried five or six times. It was this extraordinary feeling. I have never wanted to do something but not been able to physically do it."

One out of every six adult Americans — some 25 million — is afraid to fly, according to a 1980 Boeing Co. study.

Some are fatalist vacationers, who fret as soon as travel arrangements are made. They may sit stoically in their plane seats, afraid that the craft's balance will be upset should they get up to go to the bathroom. Once they arrive, their stomachs begin to churn, and the mental anguish begins over the flight home.

Even some frequent air travelers, fortified by alcohol or sedatives, have a deep-seated dread when it comes to the wild blue yonder.

WHITE-KNUCKLERS have a myriad of fears that range from planes falling out of skies to pilots having heart attacks. But now some of those who experience gelatin knees, palpitating hearts and sweaty palms, are getting help from therapists who specialize in aviophobia.

This is the saga of four persons who recently completed a seven-week course sponsored by a private psychologist at Los Angeles International Airport. Their goal was a 55-minute trip to San Francisco.

"Sorry, we caught a late flight," nervously joked a tardy arrival, as he joined others at the first session in the non-descript third floor room of a TWA building.

The group was all male, unusual since studies show fear of flying is twice as prevalent among women, said Robert Folkerson, who has a doctorate is psychology and prefers people to simply call him "Dr. Bob."

Besides Blasor-Wilson, who permitted his name to be used, there are three others, all of whom asked that fictitious names be used.

There is Jim, 39, an alcoholism director, who hasn't flown in 10 years.

"I remember when I flew to Vietnam, my main concern was not going to Vietnam but flying over water," he said.

He vividly remembers another flight from Cape Cod to Florida aboard a DC-3 propeller plane.

"We were a long time in the air. There was heavy fog over Massachusetts and it just went on forever. It just scared the hell out of me."

THERE IS TED, 36, a salesman, who has no qualms about going up in a small plane but hasn't set foot in a jet for six years. Like Jim's wife, his wife has had to take vacations alone.

"The thought of all that metal getting up in the air and staying there," he said.

There is Glenn, 29, a state employee. He hasn't flown for two and a-half years, although he says his fear was born 10 years ago on a flight from San Diego to Los Angeles.

"It was a short flight but the weather was bad," he said. "There was a lot of turbulence. I looked out the window and I don't know. I felt very terrible."

They will end each session with a relaxation exercise aboard the enemy, parked in a hangar downstairs. For the technical and weather aspects, they will hear from Folkerson's sidekick, Mark Morro, a former TWA pilot and owner of a regional airline, as well as from an air traffic controller and expert from the National Transportation Safety Board.

At home they will listen to Folkerson on cassette, as he winds them down with his relaxation technique. After the fourth session, they will hear the tape's flip side, where the certified hypnotist pleasantly describes an imaginary airplane trip, dotted with the pictures of smiling ticket agents and friendly fellow passengers.

BUT AFTER SIZING UP the tense half-smiling faces at the first session, Folkerson decided not to discuss the culmination of the course — a real trip on an airliner.

"One time we had a travel agent come out and ticket everyone and a woman saw she was number 13 on the list and she decided not to go," he said half-jokingly, as Ted and Jim forced smiles.

Reasons for flying anxiety differ with each individual. Therapists say there can be a learned fear inherited from parents, separation worries when away from family members, or a fear of heights, among other causes. Fright can be triggered by the memory of a close call or recollections of plane disasters in the press. Flying may be symbolic of freedom or representative of pressure in another aspect of a person's life, says Folkerson.

"For many the greatest fear is the fear of being out of control," he said. "People have an idea if they're in an automobile, they have a chance to step on the brake or leap out the door. ... In a plane, they're just sort of there to go along with what's happening.

"A lot of people may be afraid of turbulence," said Folkerson, who has taught his course for four years. "They think the wings will fall off. Then when it's smooth, they say, 'It's too smooth. Then is when I die.'"

AS PEOPLE WROTE DOWN what frightens them, a laundry list emerged: flying over water, claustrophobia, a loss of engine power, takeoffs, landings, engine fires, turbulence, pilot errors, air traffic control errors, structural flaws, running out of fuel, and unknown sounds and sensations.

"Falling five miles and dying fast is OK," said Blasor-Wilson, who travels about town on a motorcycle. "But dying slowly ..."

The air travel pros came with some prompting: expediency, travel to interesting places, feeling refreshed upon arrival, being pampered with food and movies.

"With my luck, it would be 'Airport,'" Ted said.

Along the way, Folkerson and Morro would battle apprehension with knowledge: Claustrophibic? Planes are often the same square footage as an average house.

Chances of an accident? Slim, considering worldwide there are 750,000 takeoffs and landings of private, commercial and military aircraft each day, Folkerson says.

Turbulence? "To my knowledge there has never been a fatal air crash of a commercial airliner due to turbulence," Folkerson said. "Besides, if it is so dangerous, how is it possible they can use crystal and china in first class and (it rarely) breaks?"

"Say to yourself this won't be any worse than an E ride at Disneyland," said Morro, who piloted for TWA for 14 years. "It's no worse than running around the streets of Manhattan going over all the potholes."

WHY DO PLANES fly? Morro, holding a model airplane, explained the law of physics, detailing how "Mr. and Mrs. Molecule" keep planes aloft. There are answers about weather conditions, engine failures, engine fires, safety features and unfamiliar noises — "good sounds," as they are called in the course.

At the second session, Morro passed out diagrams and explained the principles of flying, take-offs and landings. Then the group walked downstairs and looked at a 747.

"After all that, I still don't see how those fly," said an unconvinced Ted.

At the last class, an excited Wilson tells how he took a "baby step." He had gone to Santa Monica airport, intending to taxi in a small plane, but had ended up taking the first pilot's lesson.

Glenn, too, had taken a necessary flight to Sacramento three weeks into the class.

But with the graduation trip three days away, all still had worries, including take-off and sudden turbulence.

Recession, money crunch also affecting fashion designers

By NINA HYDE
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

MILAN, Italy — There was a demonstration here recently against the high cost of clothing. And although the young girls who paraded with sandwich boards were not the major customers for the designers who showed their new spring collections recently, the depressed economy and the high clothing prices clearly influenced what was being shown here.

There may be just as many American stores here making purchases and spending as much money as last season, but many stores are traveling with fewer buyers and spending less time on the road in an effort to hold down expenses.

And designers have curbed extravagances with their clothes, making designs that are less exaggerated, simpler and slimmer.

"I am not designing fashion, I am designing clothes," Giorgio Armani told buyers all week.

Buyers, who finished placing their orders recently before going off to London and Paris, found little that was controversial but also little that was new in most of the collections.

Hemlines usually hovered about the knee, as much just above it as below, but that hardly surprised anyone. If they hadn't seen it at home, there were endless examples here of young women wearing skirts cropped above the knee on the chic boutique-lined streets like the Via Della Spiga and the Via Montenapoleone.

The trend toward narrower, more body-conscious clothing is also no great surprise. Mariuccia Mandelli, who has done round-shouldered jackets with wide armholes and fairly slim skirts for Krizia, says: "I simply felt clothes had to become less bulky. It gives more importance to the body."

Rosita Missoni, whose knitted sweaters and dresses are leaner in silhouette than they have been in a while, doesn't think the shift is any more serious than a need for a change, the basic formula in getting people to buy new clothes. About her long sweaters and chemises, in bright color blocks or a print that looks like a flower magnified a thousand times, she says, "It is time for clothes to be neater, simpler and more essential. It is not any more logical than the fact that women need a change."

Although it pains the Fendi sisters to admit that Karl Lagerfeld designs their collection — "I smell the aura of Karl Lagerfeld, but he does not design the collection," says Carla Fendi — there is no question that he does. His designs are closing in tight on the body Skirts have high-rise waistlines that hug the figure like wide belts. And jackets that are often short and shaped like Spencer jackets with wide armholes are worn with blouses cut like a man's vest or waistcoat. "Women want to look sensible, maybe like bankers," said Carla Fendi, as she held up a pin-striped wool suit with a very bare vest underneath. "But they also want to look sexy."

Scott Thorson, right, with entertainer Liberace at a Boston-area restaurant in 1981, filed suit Thursday in Los Angeles court alleging breach of contract on the part of the piano player. Thorson claims Liberace is his former lover and promised to support him for life.

'Ex-lover' sues Liberace for giving up support

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Liberace says the chauffeur-bodyguard seeking $113 million from him in a "palimony" suit is a "disgruntled former employee" trying to "assassinate my character."

Scott Thorson, 23, said in his suit filed Thursday that he had been the entertainer's live-in lover since 1976. The affair ended in April when Liberace's aides assaulted him and threw him out of the penthouse he thought Liberace had given him, the suit said.

Thorson, wearing a brocade dinner jacket and ruffled shirt, and his lawyer, Michael B. Rosenthal, refused to elaborate on the allegations when they arrived at Los Angeles County Courthouse.

The suit includes a detailed chronology of an alleged love affair which began in Las Vegas and ended in Los Angeles after Liberace began "dating other gentlemen."

The lawsuit said Liberace promised him lifetime support, including a salary of $7,000 a month and between $20,000 and $30,000 a year to tend the entertainer's animals. The different salaries were not explained. The suit also said Liberace had planned to adopt Thorson.

Liberace, 63, who was performing in Westbury, N.Y., when he heard of the suit, later said, "He is a disgruntled former employee who was fired in early 1982 because of excessive use of alcohol, drugs and carrying of firearms, among other reasons. This is an outrageous, ambitious attempt to assassinate my character."

Liberace's lawyer, Joel Strote, also named as a defendant in the suit, said, "There's absolutely no truth to it."

The entertainer, known for his purring voice, expensive clothes and pompadour hairstyle, often has denied that he is homosexual. In 1959 he won a $22,400 libel judgment against a London newspaper when a columnist implied he was homosexual.

And in a 1973 interview he said he was against homosexuality "because it offends convention and society."

The suit said Thorson had appeared with Liberace in his shows and was frequently photographed with the entertainer for publications which called him the star's constant companion.

The suit said he was studying veterinary medicine when he met Liberace in 1976, but abandoned those plans when the "dating relationship evolved into an intimate sexual relationship" and he moved in with the entertainer.

It said the two had an "express oral agreement" for the youth to become "driver-chauffeur, bodyguard, confidant and secretary of Liberace and to accompany Liberace at all times," and that Liberace was to support Thorson for the rest of his life.

The support was to include living, travel, entertainment, medical and personal expenses, the suit said, as well as the salaries.

"Scott Thorson (was) to have a one-half equity interest in all real estate and certain personal property owned by Liberace," it said.

Chicago police arrest two for alleged chimp kidnapping

CHICAGO (AP) — Eve, the 35-pound darling of the Lincoln Park Children's Zoo, is back home after being rescued by narcotics officers who took two suspected "chimpnappers" into custody.

The 3-year-old chimpanzee and star attraction at the zoo was found by police Thursday. She had been missing since Monday, and zoo officials feared she had been kidnapped.

Two men were arrested at a Southwest Side apartment after narcotics officers received a tip about where she was being held, police said.

Edward Charles Glick, 37, was charged with burglary and Alfred LaDoux, 45, was charged with felony theft.

The two also were charged with possession of a controlled substance after detectives searching LaDoux's apartment discovered a small quantity of drugs, police said.

The pair allegedly wanted to sell Eve for $20,000, said investigator Wayne Wiberg. Zoo officials said, however, that the chimp would bring only about $4,000 on the open market for monkeys.

Zoo veterinarian Thomas Meehan pronounced Eve fit, although a bit hoarse from screaming, and slightly dehydrated. Police said Eve had been fed nothing but bananas, with too much of a good thing failing to agree with her digestive system.

Country music like good short story: Vonnegut

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Author Kurt Vonnegut says country music songs are like a good short story — concise and well-structured with an idea brought to a conclusion.

Vonnegut

"The ideas are usually complete," he said this week while accompaning his wife, Jill Krementz, a photographer on assignment here for People magazine.

Country music songs are "quite satisfactory short stories," said Vonnegut, the author of "Slaughterhouse Five" and "God Bless You, Mr. Rosewater."

"I would try and like Bob Dylan, for instance, except I'm too literary," he said. "He will have one explosive sentence completely unsupported by all the other sentences around, so you just have to wait for it to come up again and say, 'Wow! That's right.'"

Country music, he said, "is much more carefully made. There are supporting arguments that build up that absolutely underline the chorus and make it inevitable."

He said his own favorite country song is Kris Kristofferson's "Sunday Morning Coming Down."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Allen Drury is one of four people President Reagan has named to the National Council on the Arts.

Also named to terms on the council that expire in 1988 were actor Robert Stack, actress Celeste Holm and musician and critic Samuel Lipman, publisher of a monthly magazine of arts and ideas.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Richard Dreyfuss is out of the hospital but he still faces legal problems from his auto accident last weekend.

Dreyfuss

Dreyfuss, 34, was released Thursday from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said Tess Griffin, spokswoman at the hospital. "We conducted tests for internal injuries, but found none. He suffered only cuts and bruises," she said.

Dreyfuss was driving alone through Benedict Canyon when his car apparently went out of control, swerved, skidded into a palm tree and flipped over, police Lt. Russ Olson said.

Dreyfuss, who appeared in such films as "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," was booked "in absentia" for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol and possession of a controlled substance, police said.

Olson said Thursday that because of a work backlog, it could take about two weeks for the department's laboratory to analyze a white powder confiscated from the actor to determine whether it is cocaine.

Solidarity threat to communist state

By MICHAEL DOBBS
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WARSAW, Poland — The dissolution of Solidarity, the first legally recognized independent trade union in a communist country, represents the collapse of a unique experiment.

Solidarity's rapid rise two years ago, when almost overnight it became a mass organization of 9.5 million members, marked a serious attempt to introduce pluralist institutions into a totalitarian state. Its fall is a reminder that democracy and dictatorship are very difficult to mix.

When Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski announced his military takeover last December, it was still possible for him to argue that he was acting to save the concept of national agreement, not to crush it. It is difficult, however, to sustain this argument following the adoption last Friday of a new trade union law against the wishes of a clear majority of workers, the Roman Catholic Church, and independent members of the Sejm, Poland's legislative body.

The original justification given for martial law was that it provided the nation with a much needed cooling-off period after months of mounting tension. Official commentaries depicted the new military rulers as reluctant autocrats who had stepped in temporarily to fill the power vacuum to allow Poles to forge a new national consensus.

THERE ALWAYS HAD BEEN a contradiction between the democratic aims professed by Jaruzelski and the autocratic methods to which he resorted last December. Ten months after the the imposition of martial law, its effects are clearer than ever. Having failed to persuade the Polish people to trust him voluntarily, he now seems determined to teach them a lesson in political realities.

A Western analyst in Warsaw compared Jaruzelski's position to that of a child with a new ball.

"He is willing to allow the other children in the yard to touch the ball, provided they play his game according to his rules. As soon as they try to play the game by their own rules, he grabs the ball back and runs indoors," He said.

Jaruzelski's position is that Poles must be patient. In a speech to the Sejm on Saturday, he insisted once again that the state needed the support of "a democratically organized society." But he depicted this as a long-term aim that could not be achieved immediately.

For now, Jaruzelski's chief concern is to eradicate all sources of opposition to Communist Party rule. For tactical considerations, the campaign proceeds in fits and starts. But gradually he is achieving his goal — by persuasion when that is possible, by force when it is not.

A Polish journalist remarked: "remember those summits in Moscow back in the days when Solidarity seemed at the peak of its power? Remember how the Polish leadership was instructed by the Soviets to reverse the course of events? Well that is exactly what Jaruzelski is now doing, slowly but very methodically."

THE OUTLAWING OF SOLIDARITY last week was foreshadowed shortly after the introduction of martial law by the dismantling of the independent students' association. Similar action was taken against the Polish journalists' association on March 20 by the mayor of Warsaw following an intensive propaganda campaign against it.

The issue of Solidarity was always more delicate in view of its greater numbers and the still considerable power wielded by the working class. Initially, the government promised to consult society and respect the wishes of the workers. But in the end, the same methods were used against Solidarity members as against the students and the journalists.

The number of deputies who voted against the new trade union bill in the Sejm was small but their composition was revealing. The 10 votes against the bill and nine abstentions were cast by semi-independent intellectuals and Catholics with the most claim to representing public opinion outside the Communist Party power apparatus. It is precisely these people whose support Jaruzelski needs for there to be any pretense that he is interested in national agreement.

A couple of independent deputies made the point that, on the most vital piece of legislation to be passed since the introduction of martial law, the government had ignored precisely those bodies that it had set up to act as sounding boards of public opinion. Most deputies were informed of vital amendments to the bill, including a clause dismantling all existing trade unions, only three days before the Sejm session.

THE LACK OF PROGRESS toward national reconciliation helps explain the disillusionment of several people who accepted the introduction of martial law as a necessity but opposed the trade union bill. When the martial-law decrees were submitted to the Sejm Jan. 25, there was only one vote against and six abstentions.

The government's more forceful tactics against Solidarity seem to date from the last two weeks in August. Jaruzelski met the Soviet leader, Leonid Brezhnev, in the Crimea on Aug. 16 against a background of new unrest in Poland. It is impossible to know exactly what went on at that meeting, but it seems likely that Jaruzelski was urged to settle accounts with Solidarity once and for all.

The nationwide demonstrations on Aug. 31, the second anniversary of the Gdansk agreement that recognized independent trade unions, seem to have convinced the government that it was impossible to do business with Solidarity. The disturbances also showed that the riot police could win a confrontation on the streets. This removed a psychological barrier for a showdown.

Amerasian boy eager to attend school after being denied it

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — At age 10, Michael Reighard is perhaps more eager to attend school than most other children in this Dallas suburb. Maybe that's because he has been outlawed from going to school most of his life.

Reighard, one of 11 Amerasian children to recently reunite with parents in the United States, said he was not allowed to attend public school in Vietnam, and he rarely had enough to eat.

"He told me he wants to go to school (and) that no one will stop him," said Dang Reighard, his mother.

"He said he wants to become a doctor and then be famous like the president of Vietnam, and then go back to Vietnam to help the poor people.

"I said, 'You can do whatever you want. You don't have to be famous. Why do you want to be famous?'"

Tears filled her eyes as she repeated his answer:

"He wants to be famous because I tried so hard to get him out and he wants to make me proud."

The Air Force gave Robert Reighard, an explosives expert, less than two hours to gather his belongings and get out of Vietnam in 1973. Michael, 3 months old, was visiting his grandparents 100 miles away. He was left behind.

Tortuous dealings with the two nation's bureaucracies to free Michael from Vietnam left the Reighards holding a pile of documents. They often were close to losing hope until 1979, when formal negotiations opened. In 1980, the Orderly Departure Program was formed at the U.S. embassy in Bangkok, Thailand.

Nestle changes Third World infant formula selling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nestle, the world's leading infant formula maker, says it is changing the way it markets formula in the Third World, but critics of Nestle's sales tactics are taking a wait-and-see attitude.

Nestle vice president Carl Angst said Thursday the new practices will better align the Swiss-based firm with an international effort to discourage the promotion of infant formula as a substitute for breastfeeding.

However, Douglas Johnson, national chairman of the Infant Formula Action Coalition (INFACT), said the changes may represent progress but still do not bring Nestle into conformity with a code adopted last May 21 by the World Health Assembly, a United Nations organization.

"There are some real steps forward, it appears," said Johnson, whose group has been waging a five-year boycott of Nestle products. "What we need to see is a method of compliance, how it is going to be implemented."

The voluntary code is aimed principally at less-developed countries where poverty and illiteracy are widespread and refrigeration and pure water are scarce. Formula frequently has been misused, leading to inadequate nutrition for some infants.

Nestle's revisions include restrictions on the use of free supplies and samples, on advertising and promotional activities and on linking a salesman's sales volume in infant formula to company bonuses.

Johnson said Nestle's marketing changes were "imprecise" and would not provide sufficient guidance to Nestle field representatives so that they would discontinue some past aggressive marketing practices.

"There is something about this document that reeks of an attempt to undermine the boycott," Johnson said. "It's not a specific operational guide to the person in the field."

Also saying he wanted to see how the marketing changes are carried out was former Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, who heads the company-financed Nestle Infant Formula Monitoring Commission that recommended the changes.

Muskie, who joined Angst in announcing the revisions, said his commission did not consider its work done. He said the panel would accept complaints about Nestle's performance and, if none were forthcoming, would use other means to monitor Nestle compliance with the code.

"We don't give any clean bill of health as to that here because we have not had an adequate opportunity to examine Nestle's performance in the field," Muskie said.

Nestle has endorsed the U.N. marketing code, adopted on a vote of 118-1, with only the United States dissenting.

Nestle's critics said the original instructions given Nestle employees for implementing the code were not adequate. The revisions announced Thursday replace those instructions.

Angst estimated that the company sells between $300 million and $400 million worth of breast-milk substitutes each year — about half the world market.

He said the new marketing instructions would be used everywhere the company sells formula except the European Common Market nations. Nestle does not market formula in the United States.

The audit commission headed by Muskie was formed May 3 by Nestle to monitor its compliance with the code.

NBC's Thursday night great, but in trouble

By HOWARD ROSENBERG
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Good news, NBC's Thursday night lineup of "Fame," "Cheers," "Taxi" and "Hill Street Blues" is every bit as gorgeous as it was cracked up to be.

Awful news. It may already be in trouble.

Even worse news. If it is in trouble, so is TV.

Quality is in the taste of the beholder. Like them or not (and I like them), however, those four shows are the first series grouping in years that come close to meeting the aching need for program alternatives in prime time.

But will the light at the end of the tunnel be followed by another tunnel?

The national Nielsen ratings (generally the networks' Bible) for the premiere week that ended Oct. 3, ranked the "Fame"-"Cheers"-"Taxi" trio in the bottom 13 (of 63) series. Given the lack of momentum those shows produced for the Emmy-rich "Hill Street Blues," its Nielsen rankings of 21st in the 10 p.m. (EDT) time slot was truly impressive.

The Thursday culprit, in network terms, is probably "Fame," the uneven, but sometimes glowing hour of drama and music that was renewed for fall by a patient NBC, despite having the kind of ratings that make a network blubber.

Networks view their programs as dominoes in a line. Hence, the poor showing of "Fame" is thought to have delivered relatively few viewers to sample the delightful new "Cheers," whose poor showing was lethal for the terrific "Taxi." The dribble-down was less noticeable with "Hill Street Blues," but with a bigger lead-in audience, it might have really skyrocketed.

Some of the competition was tough. CBS opened with a two-hour "Magnum P.I." that ranked third for the week. But when an hour version of ABC's yahoo "Too Close for Comfort" more than doubles the audience of "Cheers" and "Taxi," it's time for mourning.

All this takes on unusual significance because of the increased stakes. Thursday is no ordinary night of TV. It is one network's flagship, its calling card. It's the symbol of the new NBC under the enlightened stewardship of Grant Tinker, whose ascension to the pinnacle of that floundering network immediately launched high expectations.

The failure of NBC's Thursday night would also pull the rug from under those of us who regularly rail about TV underestimating the national taste and sticking viewers with programs they watch only by default.

Regional income gap closing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spread of industry, people moving off farms and workers retiring to warmer climates have helped close the once-wide regional gaps in personal income in the United States, the Commerce Department says.

In a report released Thursday, the department said the Far West and Mideast still lead in personal income and the Southeast and Southwest still trail, but the differences are less than they were in 1929.

Commerce analyst Robert Bretzfelder said a main reason is that people have moved off low-paying farms in the South and other relatively low-income areas. At the same time, he said, factories that once were concentrated elsewhere have moved in, raising income levels.

"The industrial distribution of employment ... became more uniform among regions," the report said.

Bretzfelder also said that Northern retirees have moved South, bringing Social Security checks and sometimes substantial bank accounts that add interest payments to other income.

Wage rates also have become more uniform throughout the nation, the report said.

In 1929, it said, per capita income ranged from $366, or just 53 percent of the $697 national average, in the Southeast, to $963, or 138 percent of the average in the industrialized Mideast.

By 1981, however, per capita income in the Southeast, though still the lowest in the nation, had risen to $9,014, or 86 percent of the $10,491 U.S. average, while the Far West had taken over the top ranking at $11,669, 111 percent of the national average.

The report made no attempt to figure how much of the gain over those five decades was due to inflation.

Regional figures, including per capita income and ranking in 1929 and 1981, were:

—Far West: $897, or 129 percent of the national average, in 1929; $11,669, or 111 percent,in 1981.

—Mideast: $963, or 138 percent in 1929; $11,301, or 108 percent, in 1981.

—New England: $870, or 125 percent in 1929; $11,058, or 105 percent, in 1981.

—Great Lakes: $793, or 114 percent of the national average in 1929; $10,656, or 102 percent in 1981.

—Southwest: $472, or 68 percent in 1929; $10,405, or 99 percent in 1981.

—Plains: $571, or 82 percent in 1929; $10,270, or 98 percent, in 1981.

—Rocky Mountain: $592, or 85 percent of the U.S. average in 1929; $10,056, or 96 percent, in 1981.

Burgeoning securites prices stalled

By The Associated Press

The boom in stock prices has stalled, at least temporarily, while some prominent Wall Street economists are predicting only meager economic recovery for 1983.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged 18.21 points Thursday to 996.87. The overall decline was not as deep, however, and continued heavy trading pushed volume over 100 million shares for a record sixth straight session.

In New York, several economists predicted that some short-term interest rates, such as the prime business loan rate, would fall further in the weeks ahead. The prime rate was reduced earlier this week by 1 percentage point to 12 percent.

The economists also forecast a slow and gradual revival of economic activity.

David Jones, an economist at the securities firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said at a bond conference that he expected the prime rate charged by commercial banks to dip to 11 percent by year's end and to fall to 7 percent by next September.

But he added that he did not expect the unemployment rate to fall below 10 percent until the second half of next year. The rate in September was 10.1 percent, up 0.3 percentage points from the previous month and the highest in 42 years.

Albert Wojnilower, chief economist at First Boston Corp., an investment house, said he expected the prime rate to fall, but he did not say how far or by when. Wojnilower said he did expect other short-term interest rates to drop this year.

Wojnilower also said he expected the economy to sustain a weak recovery next year.

Although rates on consumer loans generally have not declined as much as business loan rates, banks have been lowering those rates, too. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York said it was cutting its interest rates on home mortgages by 1¼ percentage points, effective today. The new rates range from 14 percent to 16.25 percent.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—The Labor Department said 695,000 people filed first-time claims for unemployment benefits in the week ended Oct. 2 — the second-highest total since the recession began in July 1981. The department also reported that in the week ended Sept. 25 there were 4,461,000 people claiming regular unemployment benefits under the 26-week payment period. That was 64,000 more than in the previous week, and the highest since the peak of the 1975 recession.

—The United Auto Workers union said its members rejected by a 7-3 margin a proposed contract with Chrysler Corp. that tied pay increases to profits. The two sides were scheduled to reopen negotiations today.

—The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, said assets of money-market mutual funds reversed a four-week decline and rose $2.8 billion in the week ended Wednesday. Assets of the 256 funds tracked by the institute hit a record $227.4 billion.

—Ford Motor Co. announced that for the first time since it went public in 1956, it will not pay a dividend for the entire year because of "a continuation of the depressed state of the industry," company spokesman Tom Foote said.

Higher telephone rates may be ahead

By Andrew Jaffe
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The split up of Ma Bell and the general trend toward deregulation may double phone rates over the next five years for customers of smaller independent phone companies, according to Richard A. Lumpkin, president of the U.S. Independent Telephone Association.

Lumpkin said that telephone companies face a terrific challenge in trying to explain such large rate increases to consumers. He said that as a result of expected increases of "from 50 to 100 percent," phone companies "will have significant public relations problems."

Lumpkin, head of the Illinois Consolidated Telephone Co., is outgoing president of the association, which includes 1,459 companies outside the Ma Bell system.

Wholesale prices fell in Septemeber

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fueled by sharply falling automobile costs, prices at the wholesale level fell in September at an annual rate of 1.7 percent, the government said today.

The monthly decline, the fourth this year, also was driven by lower food and energy costs, the Labor Department said in its new report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods.

Prices for new cars tumbled 6.3 percent from August and costs forlight trucks were off 3.5 percent as dealers cut prices to make room for 1983 models, the report said.

Food prices, partially reflecting abundant crop harvests, fell 0.5 percent in September, the second sizable drop in the past three months.

Gasoline prices dropped 0.9 percent in September after rising in each of the previous three months. The cost of home heating oil fell 1.6 percent after a smaller decline in August.

The new figures meant that for the first nine months of the year inflation at the wholesale level was running at an annual rate of 3.1 percent. If that rate held steady for the rest of the year, it would be the smallest increase since the 2.2 percent rise recorded for all of 1970.

Producer prices — one merchandising step before the prices paid by retail customers — had surged 7 percent in 1981 and 11.8 percent in 1980.

Economists have attributed the better results on inflation to the stifling recession and the worldwide oil glut as well as bumper crops.

In September alone, producer prices dipped a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent, compared with 0.6 percent increases in July and August, the report said. They also fell by 0.2 percent in February and by 0.1 percent in March and May.

If prices fell for 12 straight months at September's 0.1 percent, the yearly decline would be 1.7 percent. The annual rate reported by the Labor Department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the figure the department makes public.

The new report said that for the 12 months ending in September, producer prices rose 3.6 percent.

The department provided these details on producer prices last month:

— Food prices fell 0.5 percent after rising a small 0.1 percent in August and tumbling 1.5 percent in July. Prices declined for pork, poultry, soft drinks, beef, veal, and processed fruits and vegetables. Prices were up for fish, fresh fruit, sugar, dairy products and coffee.

— Energy prices overall rose 0.4 percent in September, less than the sizable advances in the three previous months. Offsetting the falling gasoline and heating oil prices were costs for natural gas, up 2.7 percent.

— Capital equipment costs fell 0.4 percent, marking the first since February. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

— Prices declined for costume jewelry, tires, cosmetics and lawn mowers. But they juimped sharply — 16.8 percent — for gold jewelry and 5.3 percent for tobacco. Apparel and luggage also cost more.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 281.4 in September, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $28.14 last month.

In advance of today's new report, Thomas Thomson, chief economist for San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, said, "I don't see any dark clouds on the outlook for inflation."

He said he expected the inflation figures "to remain modest for the balance of the year."

Also reflecting the improvement of inflation, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index has been rising more slowly than in previous years, with an annual pace of 5.1 percent recorded through August. If that rate held steady for the rest of the year, the overall increase would be the smallest since the 4.8 percent rise of 1976. September consumer price figures won't be out until later in the month.

Price changes that show up in the Producer Price Index are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level, as measured by the Consumer Price Index. The CPI, though, checks costs for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the producer price measure.

SEC may ambush raiders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission is considering new rules aimed at curtailing the ability of social activists to push their causes at annual corporate stockholders meetings.

The proposed changes, outlined at a commission meeting Thursday, would toughen the eligibility requirements for stockholders who want to amend proxy statements on corporate policies and give company officials more power in setting the rules for shareholder participation at annual meetings.

SEC Chairman John Shad said the rule changes are intended to prevent gadflies who often buy only one share of stock from turning a company's annual meeting into a political forum.

Other the current rules, a company must allow shareholder votes on any proposal that meets SEC criteria.

One proposal would require that a person or group own at least 1 percent or $1,000 of the stock in a corporation to offer an amendment to a proxy statement.

Another would allow corporate stockholders, by a majority vote, to adopt their own rules on shareholder participation at annual meetings. A third option would give the courts, rather than the SEC, the authority to determine what shareholder proposals must be included in a corporation's proxy material.

The SEC will take public comment on the proposals until Feb. 24.

Dollar value improves

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose today on foreign markets, hitting a record high against the Italian lira in early European trading. Gold prices dropped more than $14 an ounce on the basis of rumors of large Soviet bullion sales.

The dollar hit 1,441 lira at mid-morning in Milan interbank trading, a jump of more than 10 lira from late Thursday's rate of 1430.20.

Dealers said the U.S. currency was benefitting from higher Eurodollar interest rates and from an expectation that the U.S. money supply figures to be released later today will show a big increase.

Rises in the amount of money in circulation have traditionally brought credit-tightening moves by the U.S. Federal Reserve and higher U.S. interest rates. Such rising rates make the dollar more attractive to foreign investors.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing price of 268.90 yen from 265.75 yen Thursday.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7027, compared with Thursday's late rate of $1.7105.

Donoghue's MONEY FUND AVERAGE -(Averages for all 211 taxable funds)		39	9.5	9.5

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (x) - average term to next rate adjustment date. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746. 617/429-5930.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 211 money funds increased almost $2.9 billion to $224.7 billion for the week ending 10/13/82. The funds' 7-day average yield increased slightly to 9.46% from 9.42%. The funds' 30-day average yield fell slightly to 9.53% from 9.58%. The Money Funds' Average Maturity stayed at 39 days for the third week.

Publisher William E. Donoghue says, "Expect money funds to post slightly higher yields as short-term interest rates decline. For those of you with All-Savers or 6-month CD money maturing, you'd be wise to stay liquid in a money fund at this point."

Rebels, Panthers draw a sellout throng

Close battles highlight Lee-Permian grid games

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

More than 12,500 West Texas football fans are expected to squeeze their way into rickety Memorial Stadium today at 8 p.m. in hopes of seeing the 1982 District 4-5A title decided between the Midland Lee Rebels and the Odessa Permian Panthers.

Both teams will still have three games left following this crucial meeting, but it's almost agreed that the district champion will come out of this game, including Permian coach John Wilkins.

"I just feel like the winner of this game will represent the district in first place. We feel like Lee is the best team we will face," Wilkins says.

LEE BOSS Spike Dykes isn't that quick to predict a district championship for the winner, but he does agree that it is an awfully big game.

"I don't know if you can say this game will decide the district championship, but it will certianly go a long way toward it. There are not many games that can be much bigger and you like to be in the position to play a game like this," Dykes notes.

The game is a complete sellout and no tickets will be sold at the gate tonight. All reserve seats for Midland fans were gone by 10:45 a.m. Wednesday and Odessa was selling the remainder of its end zone seats Thursday as was Midland. Less than 30 end zone tickets remained Thursday afternoon in Midland.

A very cruel past history favors the Panthers in this one. Lee has beaten Permian only three times in 21 meetings. The last time Lee could turn a victory over Mojo was in 1976 when the Rebs squeezed out a 14-13 verdict.

But Lee has been competitive over the last few years, losing for the most part in low scoring matchups, including last year's 9-7 loss in the last 13 seconds of play on a Bobby Knott (who is back) field goal.

Permian, however, comes into the game with awesome statistics and Dykes has taken notice of that fact.

"They have the best team I've seen over there, including when they won the state championship two years ago. I can't compare this Permian team to the one Gil Bartosh had in 1972 when they won the state crown because I wasn't around then, but this team does everything well," Dykes stated.

FACTS AGREE with Dykes. Permian has the leading offensive and defensive teams in the district. On offense the Panthers have outscored 4-5A opponents by a 98-0 margin and have a 202-20 scoring edge over the opposition this year. Permian is the only 4-5A team to thus far escape a district loss with a 3-0 record. Lee is 2-1. However, with the rule for breaking district ties going to the team that beats the other in regular season play, tonight's winner will have the edge for the district crown.

Lee ranks second in district offense with a 151-61 scoring edge over its opposition, gaining 322 yards less than Permian this year. But the Rebels rank only fifth in team defense, giving up 654 more yards than Permian's league leading total of 717.

Despite the obvious edge in both offense and defense, Wilkins enters the game feeling like he has one arm tied behind his back.

"Britt Hager is out of the game for sure with a torn leg muscle and Mike Troglin has a severe hip-pointer," Wilkins notes. "We feel like they are two of the best offensive backs in the league. We have confidence that some of our other kids can do a good job, but we won't be the same team without those two playing. Mike may play, but we won't know until Friday, and Hager

Dogs take new punch to Ratliff

Going into Abilene's P.E. Shotwell Stadium last week, Midland High was suffering from a severe case of offensive lack-luster. Sometimes this disease can be cured, but more often than not it sets in so deeply that the final diagnosis is "fatal: no cure available."

Well, MHS head coach Pat Culpepper didn't believe his team was beyond help, so he and his coaching staff performed an amputation and concocted a potion that worked remarkably well against the Abilene Cooper Cougars. The result: A 9-6 District 4-5A victory, the Bulldogs' first of the season.

THE AMPUTATION they performed involved the removal of the Wing T offensive non-attack and the brew he came up with was the I formation with a simple theory: "We wanted to get the ball into the hands of our best ball carriers, Ricky Madrid and Raymond Chambers," he said. "We also wanted to spread out the defense by using two wide outs. Our staff felt that Mark Page was an excellent passer and we wanted to get him a chance to prove it."

The theory worked fine. Midland High rushed for 203 yards against the Cougars and passed for 52 more with Page completing 7-of-15 passes with only one interception (three fewer than against Big Spring two weeks ago).

The defense, which has been by far the strongest part of the Bulldog game plan all year, came up with another outstanding performance by shutting down Cooper's attack. In the game, they allowed only 119 total yards. No medical help was needed there.

With the success of the offensive change against Cooper, one question come to mind. Does Culpepper have something new planned for tonight's 4-5A opponent — the Odessa High Bronchos at Ratliff Stadium?

"I hope Coach (Jerry) Millsapps is thinking the same thing," said Culpper, adding with a smile, "the wishbone is looking real good this week."

Since the I formation worked so well, it would be next to impossible to invision any major changes, but that doesn't mean a few sneaky plays couldn't be added to keep OHS on its toes because the Bronchos have a few tricks of their own.

"Odessa High," said Culpepper, "is a team that all Midland fans got to see against Lee (a 10-7 Broncho victory). They're very resourceful with the quick kick that kept Lee off balance and offset their speed. The win for Odessa was the same as our win over Cooper. It provided a big boost. The training room was empty this week, everybody felt good about the win."

And how does Culpepper assess tonight's game?

"It should be close," he said. In the history of the schools there have been a lot of close games, one, two and three-point games. Both teams feel they have a chance to win. I know Odessa has had more success this year than we have and that means we have to be aggressive. The key to us winning is being aggressive."

Aggressivness is what Midland High uses to overcome its lack of size. Of the 22 starters only two, Chuck Dickenson and Greg Bartus, can claim the magical 200-mark. On the other end of the scale, players like tackle Chad Hughes and center John David Munn come in at 145 and 151 respectively.

WITH THE addition of the two-team playoff rule, there is a lot riding on the outcome of the game. Odessa High, with a 2-1 4-5A record, 4-2 overall, is tied with Midland Lee and Big Spring for the league's second place spot behind unbeaten Odessa Permian at 3-0.

Resting one game back and still in the playoff picture are Midland High, Abilene High and San Angelo, all at 1-2. A loss for any of these three teams and the season, for all practical purposes, would come to a halt.

"Until the ball game takes place at Memorial Stadium (Permian vs. Lee, also tonight), a lot of teams are still in the race. If the Rebels can knock off Permian, then it sets a different tone in the district. But if Permian continues to steam roll, it's going to be a fight for second place."

From last week's performance and from other glimmers of offensive efficiency in the past, Midland High seems to have a few ways it can go against the Bronchos even though they're rated last on the district's offensive stat list. Chambers, who missed part of the season with an injury, is the eighth best rusher in the league with 303 yards on 75 carries (a 4.4 average) for one touchdown and Chuck Dickenson has proven himself an effective short yardage receiver from his tight end position with a league-leading 13 receptions for a fourth place 158 yards (12.1 per catch).

Defensively, Midland High has the "Junk Yard Dawgs" with a No. 3 ranking in the league behind Permian and Big Spring in yards given up. One category they do lead is safeties. The Dawgs have kept opposing offensive units deep enough in their own territory to come up with five two-pointers.

Odessa High ranks well above Midland High in team offense with 1,560 total yards, 500-plus yards more than the Bulldogs have accumulated with Howard Harris leading the team on the ground with 263 yards from 64 carries (4.1 yard average).

Quarterback Albert Cruz has completed only 14-of-41 passes on the year, but they've gone for 334 yards and none of have been intercepted. His most productive receiver has been end Cal Hendrick with four catches for 165 yards, a league-leading 41.2 yards per catch, and one touchdown.

The Bulldogs have the edge defensively by a little more than 100 yards, but a key statistic in favor of Midland High is the number of first downs they've given up, 63 (tied for second with Big Spring behind Permian's 40). The Bronchos are second to last in that category with 83.

MHS has given up fewer yards on the ground than the Bronchos, 901 to 1,274, but Odessa High has shown the strongest pass defense in the league giving up only 192 yards. Midland High is third at 372.

The final summary: Defense against defense and improved offense against established offense. It should be another close one.

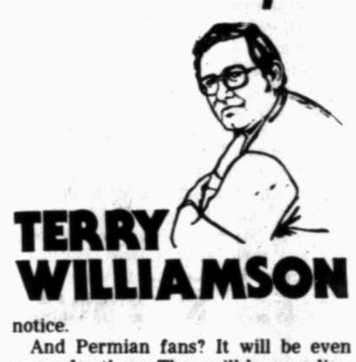
Memorial may slip magic out of Mojo



Midland Lee vs. Odessa Permian — the game where District 4-5A championships are decided more often than not. The springboard for Permian into the playoffs more often than not.

It has been the game of the year for several years. It's the game sellouts are made of. And this one is no exception. Tickets are gone, the battle is on — again.

It seems to make little difference that Permian has won 18 of the 21 meetings between the two teams. West Texas football fans always want to see it. Every year there is great hope for Lee and most every year Permian ends up in the playoffs.

BUT PERMIAN has a big disadvantage this time around, not even considering the fact that Mojo fullback Britt Hager is out and tailback Mike Troglin has a severe hip-pointer.

The change in the district schedule this year moves the game up slightly from past seasons. No longer is the game played on Halloween week. I always thought that was a big advantage for a team that calls itself Mojo with a coach (John Wilkins) who was born on Halloween. Midland has been spooked by that yearly coincidental event.

But there is even more going against old Mojo this time around. You see, Permian has gone big time in Odessa. They play out of Ratliff Stadium instead of W.T. Barrett Stadium. Ratliff is a pearl — first class all the way.

Odessa fought for Ratliff. It wasn't an easy fight, but sports fans won out in the end. Barrett was no thing of beauty even though it was better at its end than Midland's Memorial Stadium was in its 1948 beginning.

THE POINT is that Permian doesn't travel by coach any longer. They use those seats right behind the pilot where all the pretty stewardesses of the world reside. First Class is more than just a frame of mind. It's Broadway in New York, a quick eating fling in San Francisco, a buying spree in Dallas, a luau in Hawaii and the Super Bowl in New Orleans. It's Ratliff Stadium to be sure.

But now Mojo has to return to the bushes to see if another championship is in the works. The letdown could be tremendous.

For sure Memorial Stadium has no carpet — no message board — no oil well at the entrance. It's not even a coach ticket — it's the baggage department all the way. The last stewardess seen here weighed 245 pounds and played for the Dallas Cowboys.

When Permian enters the worn-out confines of Memorial Stadium they are going to feel like Howard Hughes would if he had been dropped in a tar pit deep in the Congo. The easy life is not easy to let go of on a moment's notice.

And Permian fans? It will be even worse for them. They will be spending more time cussing their surroundings than yelling for Mojo. They have learned to accept the cushy life of Ratliff.

WHILE THERE are those of the 12,500 who will be on hand for the game who may be able to keep up with the score on the field, many more, including those from Midland will be keeping a better score off the field.

Following is a list of scores that may be kept tonight:

How many fans will leave their seats in the second quarter to get a place in line for the bathroom?

How many women will ruin new dresses from some well placed Memorial Stadium seat splinters?

How many fans will miss half the game because they couldn't find a parking space within walking distance of Memorial Stadium?

How many fans will be able to see the numbers of the players who score in the ill-lighted end zones?

How many fans won't be able to find their seats because of time weathered seat numbers?

How many fans will be able to munch some popcorn or hot dog without missing the game for standing in line at the concession stands?

HOW MANY writers, P.A. announcers, radio announcers, scouts, camera people and TV personnel can get into the press box before it busts its seams?

How many people will lose their cars by parking a mile away from the stadium and how many of those women were foolish enough to wear high heels instead of hiking boots?

How many will take bets that the Memorial Stadium stands won't last the night?

The list is endless. Try a few of your own tonight.

It seems to me that regardless of the final score Midland is the loser. Memorial Stadium is the disgrace of West Texas and that makes us the worst host.

Bullpups explode over OHS, 36-14

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Two quarterbacks gave the Midland High Bullpups a potent offensive attack Thursday night as they rolled to a 36-14 junior varsity victory over Odessa High at Memorial Stadium.

In the first half, quarterback James Welborn threw three touchdown passes and one two-point conversion before being ejected from the game near the end of the second quarter.

Welborn's first scoring throw was set up by a 60-yard pass to receiver Evan Poer to the 15-yard line and the touchdown used the same player combination as Poer hauled in the pass for a 6-0 lead. The touchdown capped a 93-yard drive and left 9:10 on the first quarter clock. Darren Thorpe added the two-point conversion on a run.

A little over two minutes later, Odessa High knotted the score when quarterback Bill Davis hit hit Richard Lawler on a 35-yard touchdown pass. Davis scored the two points on a run.

With 3:56 remaining in the half, Welborn hit Sam Cessna on a 25-yard scoring pass and then threw to Thorpe for the extra points to take a 16-8 lead.

The Bronchos failed to move the ball against the Bullpup defense following the kickoff and the resulting punt set up a third MHS score. Tackle Jeff Daily went after the kick around the 25-yard line, got his paws on it and Martin Napoles recovered for Midland High at the 14-yard line with 2:19 left in the half. Forty seconds later Welborn hit Cessna for a 14-yard touchdown pass but had his two-point aerial blocked for a 22-8 lead.

Odessa High was able to get one final score before the half expired, a 10-yard pass from John Bowser to Davis. The missed two-pointer gave MHS a 22-14 halftime edge

With Welborn out of the game because of an altercation near the end of the half, Midland High coach Rick Woods called on Kenneth White to take over the quarterbacking chores.

White engineered a drive in the third quarter that saw Jeff Longbaugh chalk up six points on a one-yard run with 4:51 left in the frame and his pass to Dennis Cano for the two-point conversion gave the Bullpups a commanding 30-14 lead.

The defensive unit came up with the final points of the game as Tommy Hudson intercepted a pass on the OHS 35-yard line and took it in for the score with 8:03 left in the game. The two-point pass attempt failed, but by that point in the game, it was no longer a factor.

"Kenneth White was a key to the second half, replacing James Welborn at quarterback," said Woods. "We also got a real solid game out of Gary Browning tonight (wing back). We were also real pleased with the way James Welborn, he threw the ball real well. He has a lot of patience and that's something you can't teach a quarterback."

Coach Woods also credited the unheralded few — offensive linemen — with a big contribution to the team's success along with acknowledging the defensive unit for an outstanding performance.

"From the way we moved the ball and without looking at the films, I'd have to say the offensive line had to be moving them off the ball," he said. As to the defense, "except for the two scoring drives, they played an outstanding game."

The victory is Midland High's third straight of the junior varsity season for a 3-4 overall record and a 3-1 mark in District 4-5A play. Next week the Bullpups will seek No. 4 when they travel to San Angelo to take on the Bobcats.

In sophomore action, Midland High suffered a 21-9 defeat at the hands of Andrews for a 4-2 season record. Since the game doesn't count in the district standings, MHS' 4-5A mark will remain unblemished at 2-0. The sophs' next game will be on Nov. 2 when they host Midland Lee at Memorial Stadium.

Permian JV 13, Lee JV 9

The Odessa Permian junior varsity converted two fumbles into touchdowns Thursday to deal the Midland Lee JV its first loss of the year, 13-9.

Permian scored on a mid-air fumble inside the 10-yard line in the first half and marched 18 yards after another Lee fumble in the second half. Lee's Walter Jones scored from one-yard out in the second half to narrow the margin to 13-7 after Matt Mabe's extra point. Later Permian took a safety for the final margin. The loss leaves Lee with a 6-1 record for the year while Permian is 7-0.

Lee Sophs 48, Monahans 23

The Midland Lee sophomores ran their football record to a perfect 7-0 with a 48-23 victory over Monahans Thursday at the Lee Field. Tyrone Thurman scored touchdown runs of 85, 65 and seven yards to key the win.

Earl Davis scored twice on runs of four and five yards and Willie Walker scored on a two-yard play.

Lee led 20-7 at the half and 48-7 in the fourth period before Monahans scored twice late in the game. Lee's Craig Kamradt hit on five of six extra point tries.

Midland Lee's Mike Mercurio leads District 4-5A passers in touchdown passes this season with six. Lee fans would like nothing better than for him to add to that total tonight when Lee faces league leading Odessa Permian at Memorial Stadium.

FULLBACK HAGER is the fifth leading rusher in the district with 381 yards to go with seven touchdowns. Tailback Troglin leads the league in rushing by 153 yards over his closest district rival with 652 yards and a 10-yard per carry average. He has also scored nine times.

If neither can play, Permian loses 1,033 yards of offensive experience and clout, but the Panthers still own depth. Richie Keller, who has rushed for only 56 yards this year, will replace Hager while John Hamilton, an Ector transfer who has rushed for 168 yards, has been named the starter in place of Troglin.

Permian quarterback Brent Kelley is healthy and leads the league in passing, completing 35 of 67 attempts for 458 yards and three touchdowns. He has tossed three interceptions. With the running game slowed by injuries, Permian may go to the air more behind Kelley.

"With our injury situation, there will be a lot more pressure on our defense than has been the case in the past. Our defense has played well this year, but Lee has an excellent offensive scheme with a complete Wishbone series. Lee's line also impresses me the way they come off the ball at you," Wilkins said.

Lee's "No Name" attack has generated few names in the district leadership catagories, but depth at running back and quarterback has given Lee a potent offensive attack. Dykes uses as many as 15 running backs in a game.

LEE'S CLARENCE Smith has 261 yards rushing while Darrell Fennell stands at 195. In all, Lee has seven backs with over 100 yards rushing this year.

Mike Mercurio has been the leading passer for the Rebs, completing 13 of 19 for 214 yards, but leads the league in TD passes with six. Paul Cox is the running quarterback and ranks right behind Smith with 225 yards rushing this year and a 10.7 per carry average.

Lee's Luther Johnson is also the league's leading receiver with 202 yards on 12 catches and tight end Mike Barton leads the league in TD receptions with four this year.

Despite all the offensive weapons the two teams possess, another low scoring game is expected. Both teams are defensive-minded, a trademark Permian has always owned. Mistakes can be expensive when these two teams meet. Last year Lee turned an interception into a TD and Permian converted a fumble for six points.

Permian-Lee matchups are usually the talk of the year in this district and this one appears to be headed in the same direction before a sellout throng. The only real problem that now remains is getting everyone into ancient Memorial Stadium without the Old Lady collapsing.

Gionfriddo had moment of glory

By DAVE LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

For one magic moment in a World Series game 35 years ago, Al Gionfriddo went just that.

The baseball glove he wore on his right hand that day in 1947 is in the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. Its owner lives in a rented house in nearby Goleta, having tried his skill at selling insurance, then running a cafe, and now at age 60 as the equipment manager at San Marcos High School here.

"I help order the equipment, maintain it, get it laundered," said the now-bespectacled grandfather of six. "We have 19 major sports at the school, plus there is the equipment for the physical education classes."

HE WAS one of 13 children born in Pennsylvania to a father who worked in coal mines, and as a teen-ager even tried it himself one day. From those humble origins, the youth found himself in left field for the Brooklyn Dodgers in the sixth game of the fall classic against the New York Yankees.

The Dodgers, trailing in the series three games to two, had a lead of 8 to 5 in this game, but the enemy had two men on base in the sixth inning and none other than Joe DiMaggio at the plate with two outs.

"The shadows of the stands were covering the infield," Gionfriddo recalled. "I was standing out in the bright sunlight. Burt Shotton, our manager, had moved me over to the left-field line.

"When the ball was hit, I picked it up and knew right away that it was hit good. I put my head down and ran toward center field. I looked over my shoulder once and knew I would have to keep running."

When he reached the bullpen fence he leaped probably three feet, stretched his 5-foot-6 body to its limit, and made a twisting stab of the ball.

"As I came down, I was still turning, my cap flew off, my butt hit the fence and I had to brace myself against it with my bare left hand."

The Yankees won the series the next day, but the catch wouldn't be forgotten.

PERHAPS IF Gionfriddo somehow could have known that sixth game was to be his last one in the major leagues, he would have kept the ball. "But I threw it back into play, and when I led off in our next inning, I fouled off the first pitch into the stands. Some fan somewhere presumably still has the ball."

Although a solid minor leaguer, Gionfriddo never reached greatness in the big time, and after almost four years of it, he was through, thereafter to drift down through the minors until it came to a merciful end in 1956 with the Channel Island Oilers in the California League.

He was 34 and had to find another way to provide for his six children.

"The most baseball had ever paid me was $8,500 during that last year in Brooklyn," he said. "Most of us had to work during the winter. I did construction jobs, was a car salesman, sold linoleum and carpeting."

Now he was going to try to support his family selling life insurance in Visalia, Calif.

"In the mornings, I would go to the courthouse and take down the names of the couples newly married or of those who had become parents. The rest of the day I would call them — 20 calls a day for two days — and try to line up prospects to see at night. My goal was 10 appointments a week.

"I would even drive around the neighborhoods and check for bicycles in the yards. That way I knew there were probably children in the home, and I would call their parents."

It lasted three years.

"I was successful at it, but every time I would listen to a baseball game on the radio I would ask myself: 'What am I doing selling insurance?'"

So for two years he became a full-time scout for the San Francisco Giants, eyeballing the prospects from Oxnard to Northern California. Many were called, but few were chosen.

THEN CAME three years as general manager of the Santa Barbara farm team of what now was the Los Angeles Dodgers.

After that, for 12 years, he ran a Goleta pizza parlor that he eventually changed to a cafe named Al's Dugout. The decor included a photo of the famous catch. Behind the bar were autographed bats. Former players such as Tommy Holmes occasionally stopped by.

The MHS boys had a tough time with Lee before winning a 5-4 decision, but the MHS girls took Lee by a 7-2 margin to nail down the victory.

The Lee boys split singles matches with MHS 3-3 before the Bulldogs won two of three doubles matches. But the MHS girls took five of six singles matches from Lee and two of three doubles matches.

Bulldogs recapture second in volleyball

The Midland High Bulldogs took over sole possession of second place in the District 4-5A volleyball race Thursday night with a wild 11-15, 16-14, 18-16 victory over Abilene Cooper in Abilene.

Both teams went into the matchup with identical 7-2 district records, but MHS is now 8-2 while Cooper slips to 7-3. San Angelo maintained its 4-5A lead with a victory over Odessa Permian Thursday night and is now 9-1 on the district season.

MHS, now 20-6 on the season, will travel to Odessa High Tuesday before entertaining San Angelo Thursday at the MHS gym in the battle for what could be the district championship.

"It was really a close game with Cooper and it was one of those games where you hate to see anyone lose," noted MHS coach Linda Jolly. "But we do have second place now, but no one seems to know what will happen if we beat San Angelo Thursday and end up in a tie. I hope its not decided by a coin flip. The top two teams go to the playoff, but we would have to decide who the district winner is if there is a tie, and I don't know how they are going to do that right now."

The Midland High JV took a 15-11, 15-7 win over Cooper.

Meanwhile, Midland Lee jumped back into the win district win column with a 15-5, 15-6 win over Abilene High at the Lee gym. The victory gives Lee a 2-7 district mark.

Lee's junior varsity also won, taking a 15-0, 15-8 win over Abilene, giving the JVs an 8-2 district record.

Lee will host Odessa Permian Tuesday with a sophomore game to start at 5 p.m. at the Lee gym. JV and varsity games will follow. Lee travels to Big Spring Thursday.

Only four games remain in regular season play and the top two teams in the league will move to the playoffs in two weeks. Right now it looks like Midland High and San Angelo have the edge.

San Antonio signs Moore

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have signed free agent guard Johnny Moore to a multi-year contract, says General Manager Bob Bass.

Moore led the NBA last season with 9.6 assists per game and set Spurs records with a 762 total assists, including 20 in one game. Moore has played with the Spurs two years.

The terms of the agreement with Moore were not disclosed. Moore had been a free agent since the end of last season.

The 24-year-old Moore came to the Spurs from the University of Texas.

Is that real fear coming out of Alabama's Tide?

By The Associated Press

The Alabama Crimson Tide, fresh from a rousing victory last week over highly ranked Penn State, believes it has plenty of reasons to fear Tennessee Saturday although the Volunteers are two-touchdown underdogs.

"Tennessee Week has always been and always will be something special for Alabama," Tide Coach Bear Bryant says. "It was when I was playing and it is now while I'm coaching. There's a lot going on in Knoxville, with the World's Fair and all, and we're looking forward to going up there."

Bryant said second-ranked Alabama has had to face a "good or great passer every week, and this one is no exception."

Tennessee's quarterback against the Tide will be Alan Cockrell, who has hit 84 of 137 passes for 968 yards and eight touchdowns in leading the Vols to a 2-2-1 record, including a tie against unbeaten LSU. Cockrell's favorite receiver is speedster Willie Gault, who has 25 receptions this year.

"Gault can kill you with his speed," Bryant says.

Alabama assistant coach Louis Campbell says he fears a letdown against Tennessee one week after the Tide's 42-21 triumph over Penn State.

"We have to be concerned with how we play and how we react against the hostile situation in Knoxville before 98,000 folks," Campbell said.

"It will be a big challenge for us because we are coming off a big win against Penn State. If we go up there and are not physically and mentally ready to play, then it will be a long, long afternoon."

Alabama hopes quarterback Walter Lewis can perform as well as he did against Penn State. The elusive junior is the leading rusher for Alabama this season and he has hit 68 percent of his passes.

NFL denies cocaine watch

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The National Football League's security director has denied a published report that a part-time security agent for the NFL is investigating allegations about cocaine use by some members of the Green Bay Packers.

"The National Football League is conducting no active investigation regarding the Green Bay Packers and their use of drugs," said Warren Welsh when contacted by telephone in Tampa, Fla., Thursday. "This is erroneous."

Welsh acknowledged that the NFL has part-time security representatives in Milwaukee and Green Bay.

The Milwaukee Journal, in making the original report, said it was quoting two sources familiar with the probe. The agent, according to the story, has been in contact with federal and local law enforcement officials in Milwaukee County, Brown County and Door County.

A man described as familiar with the investigation said the allegations "haven't been proved as yet."

In a telephone interview, Coach Bart Starr said, "We haven't been informed of any such investigation. He said he thought that if there were an investigation the NFL "would tell us immediately."

Vidor's Hagler does it all

By The Associated Press

If Vidor tailback-linebacker Tim Hagler survives the weekly tug-of-war between the offensive and defensive coaches for his services, playing the game on Friday night is easy.

Last week's 27-7 victory over Nederland revealed the coaching dilemma Coach Phil Brown faces.

Hagler lined up at tailback and rushed 211 yards on 26 carries and scored touchdown on runs of 78 and seven yards despite sitting out much of the week's practice with a virus — a good reason for him to concentrate on offense.

But then Hagler moved across the line where he intercepted a pass and returned it 46 yards for another touchdown. Ah, a point for the defense.

HAGLER'S DUAL performance earned him mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll. But the argument continues.

"Of course I think he'll make an outstanding college linebacker," Vidor defensive coordinator J.R. Jones said. "He's been our top hitter in four of our six games. But he's been improving every week on offense."

Hagler, a 6-1, 200-pounder, spent most of his time as a blocking fullback in Vidor's I-formation offense until the third game this season.

"When we started out this fall, he really didn't know much about running with the football," Jones said. "But he's so quick and he learns real fast. He just keeps getting better."

Refugio's Eugene Whitmire accounted for 217 yards of offense in a 42-0 victory over Aransas Pass. Whitmire gained 152 yards on 14 carries and had touchdown runs of 21, 59 and five yards. He also caught two passes for 65 yards, including a 45-yard touchdown catch.

High-scoring Rosendo Delgado accounted for all of Gregory Portland's points in a 28-14 victory over Corpus Christi Moody. Delgado rushed 155 yards on 35 carries had touchdown runs of 1, 2, 1, and 1 yard and kicked all four extra points.

Delgardo has scored 126 points in Gregory Portland's six games this season.

Monahans' Ricky Boysaw continued to pile up yardage with 35 carries for 294 yards and touchdown runs of 40 and 23 yards in a 25-13 victory over Snyder. Boysaw now has 1,006 yards in five games this season.

OTHER OUTSTANDING performances included:

— Grand Falls defeated Rankin 12-8 but they had to overcome the performance of Rankin's Dennis Black, who rushed 191 yards on 34 carries to give him 1,017 yards for the season.

— Goldthwaite's Appolonia Torres completed five of nine passes for 151 yards and two touchdowns and ran 12 and 67 yards for two more scores in a 47-0 victory over Evant.

— Wingback Matt Allen kept Ozona guessing in leading Ballinger to a 28-13 victory. Allen rushed 143 yards on 20 carries and scored on runs of eight and 57 yards. The 57-yarder came on a fake punt and he also threw two halfback passes, both for touchdowns.

— Port Arthur Lincoln's Kenneth Vaughn riddled Lumberton in a 34-8 victory by completing 10 of 10 passes for 164 yartds and three touchdowns.

— Quarterback Jeff Payne rushed eight times for 119 yards and had scoring runs of 95 and six yards in the first half to ignite Victoria to a 41-6 victory over Port Lavaca Calhoun.

— Gary Martin led Amarillo River Road to a 3-0 victory over Canadian with 228 yards rushing on 24 carries and touchdown runs of 45, 74 and four yards.

— Senior running back Tony Hernandez scored five touchdowns and rushed for 197 rds on 20 carries to lead Carrizo Springs to a 49-23 victory over San Antonio Southwest.

— Vernon Cook had 190 yards rushing on 15 carries and four touchdowns in Thorndale's 34-6 victory over Bartlett.

— Rogers blanked Calvert 26-0 on the dual performance of Larry Coots, who rushed 178 yards on 23 carries and scored two touchdowns and kicked to extra points on offense and intercepted two passes defensively.

— Colmesneil extended its record to 6-0 with a 52-6 victory over Apple Springs on 228 yards rushing by Darryl Boykin and four touchdowns. His brother Gene added 103 yards rushing on 14 carries and another touchdown.

Herzog calls on Joaquin Andujar for tonight

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It was one of Whitey Herzog's less-heralded trades, occurring on the eve of last summer's baseball strike and more or less shrouded in secrecy.

But the acquisition of pitcher Joaquin Andujar has been a major factor in the construction of the St. Louis Cardinals' National League Championship.

And so tonight, Herzog will hand the baseball to Andujar for Game 3 of the World Series against Milwaukee.

The Brewers will counter with Pete Vuckovich, an ex-Cardinal traded by Herzog in a seven-player deal with Milwaukee at the 1980 winter baseball meetings.

It was six months later, a week before the strike in June 1981, that Herzog went after Andujar, who had been buried on the Houston pitching staff.

"I needed a pitcher," he said. "We had three doubleheaders on the West Coast. They needed a center fielder when Cesar Cedeno got hurt. Tony Scott was playing out his option. They couldn't sign Andujar either."

One and one makes two, and the trade was made. Almost immediately, Andjuar began paying dividends for the Cardinals.

"He likes to pitch," Herzog said. "He's a tough guy, a competitor. The guy wants the baseball. Houston had signed (Nolan) Ryan and (Don) Sutton. He had become a number there."

At St. Louis, Andujar got work from Herzog. He won six of seven decisions for the Cardinals and finished the season at 8-4. This year, he was the Cardinals' most dependable pitcher with a 15-10 record and 2.47 earned run average. He was the National League's Pitcher of the Month in September when he won five games and posted an 0.62 ERA.

"What turned it around for him was the opportunity to pitch," Herzog said. "He throws 90-some miles per hour, has good control, keeps it down, throws a hard slider and he's not afraid to come inside with it."

In Houston, Andujar had some problems with management. But he's been fine with the Cardinals.

"I guess when you pitch good, it's easy for the front office to get along with you," cracked Herzog.

Seven of Andujar's 10 losses came in games in which the Cardinals scored two or less runs. "That's pretty good," said Herzog. "He was 8-10 at one point and he could have been 15-3 if we scored more runs. That's how well he pitched."

Andujar's last loss was Aug. 6 against Montreal, the first time he had lost to the Expos after beating them 11 times. Herzog thinks that could mean good things for the Cardinals tonight.

"Their lineup is as good as Milwaukee's if not better," Herzog said.

Concerned with his own lineup, Herzog said he would start the same unit that delivered a 5-4 victory in Game Two, to tie the Series. "That's if I can remember it," he said.

Herzog said that considering the fact that he has not had a hit from three of St. Louis' most important bats — Keith Hernandez, Lonnie Smith and George Hendrick — he was satisfied with a split of the first two Series games.

Herzog held a voluntary workout when the team arrived in Milwaukee Thursday afternoon. Hernandez, Lonnie and Ozzie Smith, Mike Ramsey and Willie McGee all showed up to get some extra swings.

Now the St. Louis hitters get to go against one of their ex-teammates. Vuckovich has a .762 winning percentage, best in baseball for the last two seasons with 32 victories, 18 of them this year.

From the All-Star Game until mid-September, he won eight straight games and was 13-1 at night and 22-2 under the lights in his two years with the Brewers.

He never won fewer than 12 games in three years with the Cardinals and it was the Brewers' interest in the strong-armed right-hander that planted the seed for the big trade.

Catcher Ted Simmons and reliever Rollie Fingers also went to Milwaukee in the trade with the Cardinals getting pitchers Lary Sorensen and David LaP-oint and outfielders Sixto Lezcano and David Green.

Sorensen and Lezcano were passed on to Cleveland and San Diego in two of Herzog's subsequent trades. But the others remain with the Cardinals and LaPoint, a nine-game winner in the regular season, will be Herzog's starting pitcher in Saturday's fourth game of the Series.

Vuckovich, whose walrus mustache makes him look a little ominous on the mound, said he understood the big trade.

"Whitey wanted to build with speed," he said, "and I never did really run that well."

Milwaukee's County Stadium gets hosed down Thursday as the city prepares to host Game 3 of the World Series tonight. The St. Louis Cardinals held a workout, but the Brewers got the day off.

Series has own sudsy flavor

By D. BYRON YAKE
AP Sports Editor

MILWAUKEE — As this World Series hops from brewery town to brewery town it's slowly finding its own refreshing flavor. The two participating teams are neither stuffy nor arrogant. Their managers are forthright and a tad crusty.

A thread of similarities runs through the two cities, St. Louis and Milwaukee, and the two teams, the Cardinals and the Brewers.

ANHEUSER BUSCH owns the Cardinals and makes Budweiser, Busch and Michelob. Miller and Pabst Blue Ribbon have breweries in Milwaukee.

The teams are almost incestuous.

The two catchers, Milwaukee's Ted Simmons and St. Louis' Darrell Porter, who are both having marvelous post-season performances, once played for the opposing team.

So did Brewers' pitchers Pete Vukovich and Moose Haas and the Cardinals Dave LaPoint.

Milwaukee pitcher Mike Caldwell spent a winter on the Cardinal roster in 1977 before he was traded to Cincinnati. Ailing Brewer relief ace Rollie Fingers was a Cardinal for the brief period at the 1981 winter meetings, although he never wore the uniform.

LaPoint and Haas, who will oppose each other in Game Four Saturday, are close friends.

Harry Dalton, Milwaukee's general manager, hired Whitey Herzog, now the Cardinals manager, as a coach for the California Angels in 1974. Dalton was the assistant farm director with Baltimore when Herzog was an Oriole player.

YOU HAVE the recipe for an excellent series, but something important is missing — Fingers, the 1981 Cy Young Award winner and American League Most Valuable Player.

The Cardinals have Bruce Sutter. The Brewers have Fingers, but he is only on the 25-man roster at this point and it is questionable what, if any, use he will be in the remaining games.

"I certainly hope he gets better by Halloween," said indefatigble Herzog.

Fingers' loss is incalculable to the Brewers, for he is to the Brewers exactly what Sutter is to the Cards — a near-invincible stopper.

Brewer Manager Harvey Kuenn says Fingers is ready and could pitch an inning if needed, but he didn't use his ace reliever in Game Two when the game was tied in late innings.

The message was clear, and Kuenn acknowledged it:

Sutter was a key to the Cards' victory in that game, shutting the door on the Brewers after the Cards tied the game.

The Cards kept creeping up on the Brewers, down 3-0 then 3-2, then 4-2, then 4-4.

"When we stayed that close, I think the players realized that we had Sutter out there and they knew I was going to use him in the eighth inning," said Herzog. "I think that was a big factor."

Fingers relies on a sinker, he keeps the ball low and has no trick pitches.

Sutter has the split-fingered fastball, a most difficult pitch to throw, but he throws it better than anybody.

"The first time I saw him pitch, I just stood there and watched. It was amazing," said Herzog.

Sutter somehow gets the ball between his index and middle finger and upon delivery pushes the ball out with his thumb.

"You have to have big fingers and a strong thumb," says Herzog, comparing it to the way the thumb is used in shooting marbles.

Herzog doesn't use Sutter when it's unnecessary. He called on him only one time this year when the Cardinals were behind.

Herzog will use the ace reliever three days in succession, never four. And he knows that Sutter, when he's going well, will get the job done, six or seven outs, on an average of 24 pitches.

Fingers holds the major league record for career saves with 301, including 29 last season.

Sutter had 39 saves, breaking his own record of 37, which he had set in 1979.

It would be nice to see a tie game in the ninth with Sutter and Fingers battling it out on the mound.

But it probably won't happen, and that's too bad.

Tommy Herr knows answer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tommy Herr knows exactly what the St. Louis Cardinals must do to topple the Milwaukee Brewers in the World Series.

"It's all pretty obvious as far as I'm concerned," said the Cards' second baseman. "We've got to neutralize their power and keep their home run hitters from hitting with men on base.

"That's the big key for us," he said, following a brief workout at County Stadium Thursday. "Ted Simmons has hit two home runs but both were with the bases empty. Offensively, we've got to be aggressive, which we were last night."

Like his teammates, Herr prefers to disregard Tuesday night's, Series-opening 10-0 Milwaukee triumph when comparing the two clubs, who are tied at one game apiece in the best-of-seven contest. St. Louis won Game Two Wednesday night, 5-4.

"We're going to play well here," he said. "We've played well on the road all year. It's a nice park. It's picturesque; it has atmosphere.

"I like our chances," he said. "I think that the win in the second game pepped us up pretty good and gave us back the confidence we'd had knocked out of us the first night."

The Milwaukee player who most impressed Herr during the first two games was third baseman Paul Molitor.

"He's a very fast runner," said Herr. "But no one else on their club impressed me with their speed. Most clubs in the National League are base-stealing threats. Basically, they (the Brewers) have got to play for the big inning."

In comparing Milwaukee with NL clubs, the Cards leadoff hitter said, "As far as having several guys in their lineup that can hurt you, they remind me a lot of Los Angeles."

Fingers-Sutter battle is gone

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chances are diminishing that the 79th World Series will showcase perhaps the two greatest relief pitchers in baseball history.

Bruce Sutter displayed his credentials by earning the victory in the St. Louis Cardinals' 5-4 victory over Milwaukee in Game Two Wednesday night. But the likelihood that Rollie Fingers of the Brewers is through for the season increases by the day.

Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn has said for the last 10 days that Fingers, sidelined since Sept. 2 with a torn muscle in his right forearm, could pitch an inning if needed.

But Kuenn declined to use Fingers in the eighth inning in Game Two. Instead, rookie Pete Ladd walked the first two batters he faced to force in the Cardinals' decisive run.

Kuenn said he prefers not to use Fingers in tie games. But Fingers said he couldn't have pitched in any case because his arm had stiffened after he had thrown in a workout Tuesday.

Fingers, who holds the major league record for career saves with 301, said his Tuesday workout was his best since his injury.

"It was the first time I'd had a good breaking ball," he said. "I had my fork ball and my fast ball — I threw all of them — and I had my best arm speed since the injury.

"The only reason I got so sore afterward is that the muscles hadn't been used," he said.

Fingers said he may be able to pitch in Game Three here Friday after Thursday's off day.

Asked Thursday if he is worried that his team might have to face Fingers, Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog said, "I'd hate to say no and then have him stick it to us.

"But it's going to be tough for him now," Herzog said. "It's a tough decision for Harvey. If Fingers does try to heat up and something happens, it sure would be tough."

Herzog acquired both Sutter and Fingers in trades in December, 1980. He decided to keep Sutter and traded Fingers to the Brewers.

"Sutter is the greatest relief pitcher who ever lived," Herzog said. "Fingers is the greatest relief pitcher who ever lived as far as longevity is concerned, but for the last six years nobody can match Sutter."

Brewer hitters, aware of Sutter's reputation and curious about his unique split-fingered fast ball, got their first look at him in Game Two.

"Just seeing him once may help us," right fielder Charlie Moore said. "His pitch really breaks, but he isn't overpowering. He doesn't blow it by you."

"Hitters have seen him for six years in our league and they haven't been able to do much with him," he said.

"I hope we need to use him every day," he said. "That means we're in the game. We've got two off days, unless it rains, so I know I could get two innings out of him most days. I could use him every day if I had to."

Herzog said it wouldn't affect his strategy if the Brewers decide to gamble with Fingers.

"They have one left-hander (Bob McClure) in their bullpen," he said. "If they use him, then they have to go to a right-hander. What difference is it if it's Fingers or Ladd?"

Screams of 'MVP' may greet Yount

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The 79th World Series has been billed as the battle of two Midwestern beer-producing cities, but some differences will be apparent when the scene shifts to County Stadium for Game Three tonight.

One will be the crowd.

The first two games between the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers at Busch Memorial Stadium drew crowds of 53,723 each night, and at least two-thirds of the fans wore caps and jackets in various shades of Cardinal red.

Blue and yellow — Brewers' colors — are, of course, popular here. And when a rangy, angular player wearing No. 19 comes to bat for the home team, shrieks and chants of "MVP! MVP!" are even more popular.

He had five hits in 10 at-bats in the Series' first two games, and on Tuesday, during the opener, tied a Series record with four hits in one game. That mark was broken a few moments later when teammate Paul Molitor collected his fifth hit.

Yount's hitting has made him the target of intense media attention and he's handled it pleasantly if somewhat reluctantly.

"All it's done is make me talk a lot more than I'm used to talking," he said. "I never considered myself much of a talker. But people are asking me more questions, so I guess I have to talk more."

During the regular season, Yount batted .331, hit 29 homers and drove in 114 runs. He tied for the AL lead in doubles with 45 and was third in triples with 12. He became the first shortstop to lead the league in total bases and slugging percentage.

He may not be in the same class with Cardinals shortstop Ozzie Smith when it comes to fielding, but Yount does fairly well there, too.

Detroit Tigers' Manager Sparky Anderson picks the Cardinals to win the Series, but he adds: "The best player on either team is Robin Yount."

Pitcher Don Sutton, who spent 17 seasons in the National League until the Brewers acquired him from Houston Aug. 30, is one of Yount's greatest admirers.

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Money, the hardest nut to crack in the National Football League players' strike, is on the bargaining table today. And Sam Kagel just may be the nutcracker.

The feisty 73-year-old San Francisco lawyer had negotiators for the owners and players meeting far into the night. And one source monitoring the talks said Kagel was "knocking heads, twisting arms, pushing them together" in his effort to end the strike which today entered its 25th day and has knocked out four of the 16 regular-season weekends.

Kagel denied Thursday a rumor that a settlement is near, and appeared as fresh as he did when he arrived in this Baltimore suburb Tuesday night, vowing to "tire them out before they tire me out."

As Thursday became Friday, he called a halt to negotiations on peripheral issues, more than 15 hours after the day's bargaining had begun.

He commanded both sides — union chief Ed Garvey, owners' top negotiator Jack Donlan and their aides — to address the union's demand for a wage scale and a central salary fund, the two issues which have kept the owners' hackles raised ever since they were first proposed. The owners have insisted all along on maintaining the existing system — individually negotiated contracts.

Upon his arrival Tuesday night, Kagel brought the sides together for 2½ hours. Then he began his war of attrition with 19 hours of bargaining on Wednesday. And on Thursday he got them started again at 9 a.m. They were still going into the predawn hours.

"That's what's amazing about Kagel," said Jim Miller, the Management Council's public relations director. "He just keeps going and going with the same kind of enthusiasm. If he keeps this up for a couple of days he's really exceptional."

He repeated — verbatim — his single-sentence statement of Wednesday that both sides were examining proposals and counter-proposals and continuing their negotiating.

Then, with one more sentence, he emphatically knocked down a cable television network report that a settlement was imminent.

And, finally, as he strolled down the corridor toward the sealed-off negotiating room, he commented off-handedly: "It takes nine months to have a baby. It'll take a few more days to work out a thing like this."

But there apparently was significant progress toward resolving the non-economic issues during Thursday's morning and afternoon sessions. "There has been a good deal of give-and-take by both sides," a source at the talks told The Associated Press. "There has definitely been some movement."

"He is building momentum," another source privy to the negotiations said of Kagel's orchestration of the talks. "He is getting agreements on a phrase here and a paragraph there, building in them the confidence they can come together on a number of issues.

"There has been some progress," the second source continued. But he cautioned: "There are still too many issues here and on the outside that could upset things."

The magic number in the wage talks is $1.6 billion. The union wants it in four years, tied to incentive and performance bonuses, a minimum wage scale and the creation of a central fund from which all salaries would be paid. The owners have offered it in a five-year package, but without the fixed scale and the independently administered fund.

Bartender says Bob Hayes was not drunk in restaurant

DALLAS (AP) — A bartender says former Dallas Cowboy wide receiver Bob Hayes was not drunk when he left a restaurant shortly before he was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

The testimony by Steve Hansen came Thursday after County Criminal Court Judge George Shepherd denied a defense motion for a mistrial.

Defense attorney Frank Jackson made the motion because of the arresting officer's shooting death Wednesday night.

City patrolman Stanley J. Short, who arrested Hayes on June 7, accidentally shot himself in the chest Wednesday while demonstrating an automatic pistol to friends.

Hansen, 27, said he served drinks to Hayes and a couple who accompanied him to the restaurant.

The bartender described the man and woman with Hayes as intoxicated, but said, "Bob was taking care of the two people he had brought in with him."

Hayes told jurors in the second day of his trial Wednesday that he was taking the couple home after leaving the restaurant, but had difficulty in driving because the woman kept bumping into him.

During cross-examination Thursday, Hayes told Assistant District Attorney John Robinson he did not recall striking the curb several times before Short stopped him.

Fans ignore All-Star games

WASHINGTON (AP) — Linebacker Harry Carson of the New York Giants says he would prefer to be in New York this week rather than in the nation's capital.

"Bease and Mark and I would rather be back at Giants Stadium with a new agreed-to contract getting ready for the Super Bowl track," Carson said Thursday. "Since we can't be there, we are here."

Teammates Beasley Reece, a safety, and Mark Haynes, a cornerback, said they agreed totally with Carson.

The trio made their comments after the second day of workouts by the NFL Players Association NFC East all-star team, which will play Sunday against a team of AFC East all-stars.

The contest, originally scheduled for 3 p.m. CDT in RFK Stadium, has been changed to noon to avoid conflict with the World Series on television.

Still, there hasn't been much fan response to both the game in Washington and the one in Los Angeles the following night, both of which are union-sponsored. Promoters of the Washington game say they've only sold 4,000 to 5,000 tickets for the 55,000-seat RFK Stadium — about 10,000 below the financial break-even point. In Los Angeles, a spokesman at the Memorial Coliseum box office said 40 tickets had been sold for the Monday night game in the 100,000-seat stadium.

NFC East Coach Chris Hanburger, a former Washington Redskins linebacker, said he was not worried by the light turnout for the practice. Only 27 players showed up for the workout, although 39 were present for the afternoon session by the AFC East.

Quarterback Bob Avellini of the Chicago Bears, running back John Riggins and punter Mark Moseley of the Washington Redskins attended Wednesday's NFC session but were not there Thursday.

"I'm not worried about it," said Hanburger. "Too many people are concerned about people not being here. We will have enough people for the game. I don't forsee any problems.

"If they get the strike settled, one of the concessions will probably be to drop the all-star game," he continued. "But if they have to play, they will play 100 percent. Realistically, though, they would prefer not to play."

Despite the lack of players, quarterback Gary Danielson of the Detroit Lions said the practice went very well. "It would take us three weeks in a regular camp to do what we have done in three days. Of course, we don't have a lot of rookies and the veterans can grasp what we're doing right away."

Hanburger also praised the players for the workout they had.

"We've had very few errors," he said. "And you've got to remember, Carson is fitting in as an outside linebacker and after seven years in the middle, you've got to expect a misplay every once in a while."

Devils finally fall in NHL contest

By The Associated Press

No one really expected the New Jersey Devils to go unbeaten this season, did they?

The National Hockey League's newest franchise — transplanted from Colorado last summer — had registered a victory and three ties in its first four games, an almost-shocking record considering how inept the team had been as the Rockies last season. But Thursday night, the Devils met with defeat for the first time, falling to the undermanned Montreal Canadiens 5-3.

The Canadiens skated off with the triumph despite the absence of veteran stars Guy Lafleur, Larry Robinson and Rejean Houle. Mark Napier made up for that with two goals, including the game-winner late in the second period.

"I told them this club is playing very well and if they didn't give 100 percent it wouldn't be enough," said Canadiens Coach Bob Berry. "We had to work very hard, especially in the third period when New Jersey really came at us. Pressing with five guys can be really uncomfortable."

The Devils weren't particularly uncomfortable with the loss.

"We played well and we outshot them 28-27," said goaltender Lindsay Middlebrook. "There is nothing to be ashamed of when you play like that."

"We played with confidence, especially in the last period," he said. "I'd be pleased if we lose once in every five games. But we made some mistakes in the back line tonight that we didn't make in the previous games."

One of those crucial mistakes came when rookie Mats Naslund beat Middlebrook on a breakaway at 3:06 of the third period. It was the first NHL goal for the Swedish forward and it clinched the Montreal triumph.

Islanders 9, Penguins 0

Butch Goring scored three times — twice during Islander penalties in the first period and once on a second-period power play — as the defending champions opened their home season in style. The game was marred by 243 penalty minutes, most of them from a final-period brawl.

Goalie Billy Smith notched his first shutout since March 1981, stopping 30 shots, as the Islanders extended their home unbeaten string to 24 games — 22-0-2.

Flames 6, Red Wings 4

Mel Bridgman got Calgary started early with a goal seven seconds into the game, and Kari Eloranta had three assists. Bridgman set a team record with his quick goal when he deflected a flip pass from Jim Peplinski under Detroit goalie Greg Stefan.

"It was super to get that first goal of the season," said Bridgman. "It gets a monkey off my back. An early goal like that gives everyone a lift."

Oilers 4, Whalers 4

Ray Neufeld scored a power-play goal with only 1:52 to play to lift Hartford into the tie and out of the Adams Division celler for the first time in two seasons. Edmonton, which got a goal and two assists from Wayne Gretzky, continued to have defensive problems — the Oilers have given up 27 goals, most in the NHL.

Bruins 2, Canucks 1

Kings 4, Nordiques 4

Marc Tardif's goal midway through the final period boosted Quebec into the tie. For Tardif, who has been benched several times already this season by Coach Michel Bergeron, it was a special goal.

"All I want to do is play hockey and as much as they'll let me play, I'll give 100 percent, as I've always done," said Tardif, 33, who scored 39 goals last year but had a poor second-half of the season. "There was extra pressure on me because my name has been in the news lately. All I said to a Montreal reporter was that this might be my last year in the NHL and it was blown out of proportion."

North Stars 6, Maple Leafs 2

Dino Ciccarelli and Mike Eaves each scored twice as the North Stars blitzed Toronto goalies Michel Larocque and Mario Tremblay with 52 shots, including 25 in the first period, when they scored four goals.

"I think you want to get off to a good start team-wise and individually," said Ciccarelli, who scored 55 goals last season and already has five. "I hope we can continue to do that."

Flyers 4, Sabres 2

"We had no breakdowns for the last 10 minutes of the game," noted Flyers Coach Bob McCammon. "And we did an excellent job protecting the lead, which is something you have to do to win in this league."

Jets 5, Blues 2

Winnipeg won its third straight road game — they've lost both of their home games — as Morris Lukowich scored two goals and Jerry Butler added a shorthanded tally. Goalie Doug Soetaert was outstanding, making 34 saves as St. Louis lost its third consecutive game.

Yankees may open season in dome

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Yankees are coming, and the man who runs the Louisiana Superdome wants $1.4 million to roll out a new carpet for them.

The New York Yankees played exhibition baseball games in the Superdome late in the preseason each of the past three years, drawing around 40,000 to the games.

Superdome General Manager Cliff Wallace said that there is a possibility that the Yankees may open their regular season in the big state-owned stadium next April.

If that should happen, exhibition games tentatively scheduled again for March in the Superdome probably would be canceled, said Bill Curl, spokesman for Superdome management.

Cedric Tallis, executive vice president of the American League team, said nothing has been firmed up, yet.

"There are a number of options that would have to be worked out," he said from his New York office on Thursday. "No. 1 is whether our stadium would be ready." Yankee Stadium is undergoing renovation.

"The others would be economic, I guess you would say — whether it would be a break-even process," he said. "It would be expensive for the visiting team — the team that would normally be opening at our stadium."

Wallace said the stadium's football turf is badly worn in spots and must be replaced. Although the seldom-used baseball turf is in pretty good shape, it has to be replaced at the same time, he told the Superdome Commission at its meeting on Wednesday.

"I'd like to point out that the $1.4 million includes not only replacement of the football turf, but replacement of the baseball turf and includes modification of the infield turf that eliminates the infield seam for which the Superdome has received so much criticism, particurlarly in the national press," he said.

The seam runs just inside the first-base line, where the baseball carpet attaches to a part of the football rug that remains in place when the stadium is converted from a football field to a baseball diamond.

Players fear the seam could cause physical injury, at worst, and some erratic hops, at least. There have been no injuries attributed to the seam in major league exhibition games.

Billy Noah leads BASS shootout

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Billy Noah, who led the $100,000 BASS Masters Classic fishing tournament going into today's second round, is not a classic optimist.

"My chances of winning this thing are somewhere between slim and none," Noah said after claiming the first-round lead by catching 12 pounds, 2 ounces of black bass Thursday to start the three-day tournament sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society.

"I probably did better today than I will tomorrow and Saturday put together," Noah said. "I don't have anything going."

"The lake needs some more bass in here, I do believe," he said.

Noah, a furniture maker from Thomasville, N.C., said he made three trips to Montgomery during tournament prepractice which ended Sept. 13.

The first prize of $40,000 goes to the angler among the 41 qualifiers who catches the greatest weight of fish during the three days. The black bass, which include largemouth bass and spotted bass, must be over 14 inches long and the angler must stay within Alabama's seven-fish-per-day limit.

"The fish is really not biting that good, to be honest with you," Noah said.

THURSDAY'S FISHING was done under bright, sunny skies, in sharp contrast to the steady, sometimes heavy rains during final practice sessions Tuesday and Wednesday. The rains raised the water level in the Alabama River, but the level dropped during the night.

Asked whether the change in the water conditions had hurt him, Noah answered, "I don't guess it did, because I haven't caught anything until today."

But one contender who said he was hurt by the water conditions was Stanley Mitchell, 22, of Fitzgerald, Ga., the defending champion. He won last year by catching 35 pounds, 2 ounces of bass on deep-diving crankbaits over points in the main river.

"It was really rough for me," said Mitchell, who finished the day in 24th place with just two fish weighing a total of 3 pounds, 7 ounces. "The fish just shut off where I'm fishing. I think they are still there, but they're not hitting."

In second place was Guy Eaker of Cherryville, N.C., with 11 pounds, 4 ounces of fish. During practice, Eaker said he had been catching considerably more fish.

"What hurt me today was the water dropped," said Eaker, a self-proclaimed river fisherman compared with others who fish the coves and feeder creeks. "The water was not flowing nearly as hard. Yesterday I caught 20 or so fish. Today I caught five. I don't know if it was the current, the sun or what."

NOAH AND Eaker were followed by Bill Ward of Amsterdam, Mo., with 10 pounds, 12 ounces of bass; Ron Shearer of Hardin, Ky., 10 pounds, 9 ounces, and Paul Elias of Laurel, Miss., 8 pounds, 12 ounces.

Larry Nixon, BASS Angler-of-the-Year, the title given to the fisherman who catches the greatest total weight of fish in the seven BASS qualifying tournaments, finished the first day 27th. He caught one fish weighing 2 pounds, 7 ounces.

Roland Martin, seven-time BASS Angler-of-the Year, finished the day in seventh place after taking a 20-ounce penalty for being two minutes late back to the boat ramp. His official total was 8 pounds of fish.

Martin's reason for being late was the classic angler's excuse. He caught a fish at the last possible minute before he had to leave for the 42-minute boat ride back to the dock and "I just couldn't resist making a few more casts."

Johnson draws start against Texas Tech

HOUSTON (AP) — After four knee operations, a frustrating redshirt season and a brief move to wide receiver, Rice's Doug Johnson finally gets his chance to start at quarterback Saturday when the Owls host Texas Tech in a bid to win their first game of the season.

Johnson, a third-year sophomore from Pasadena Dobie, will be the third starting quarterback Coach Ray Alborn has used this season trying to shake the Owls out of their 0-5 start.

Michael Calhoun, who threw a Southwest Conference record-tying 21 touchdown passes last season, has started four games and backup Phillip Money started once.

"We are 0-5 with the other two so we had to do something," Alborn said. "This is no reflection on either of the other two. We just feel Doug is a leader and he's got the respect of the football team."

Johnson suffered a knee injury in the final game of his freshman season in 1980 that resulted in his second surgery. He tried to return too quickly and as a result, had to endure two more operations.

"Doug goes through knee surgeries like some people take blood tests," Alborn said. "The thing about Doug is that he wants to play so badly. I know it's been frustrating for him. He'd come into my office and say he didn't care where he played, just get him in the game."

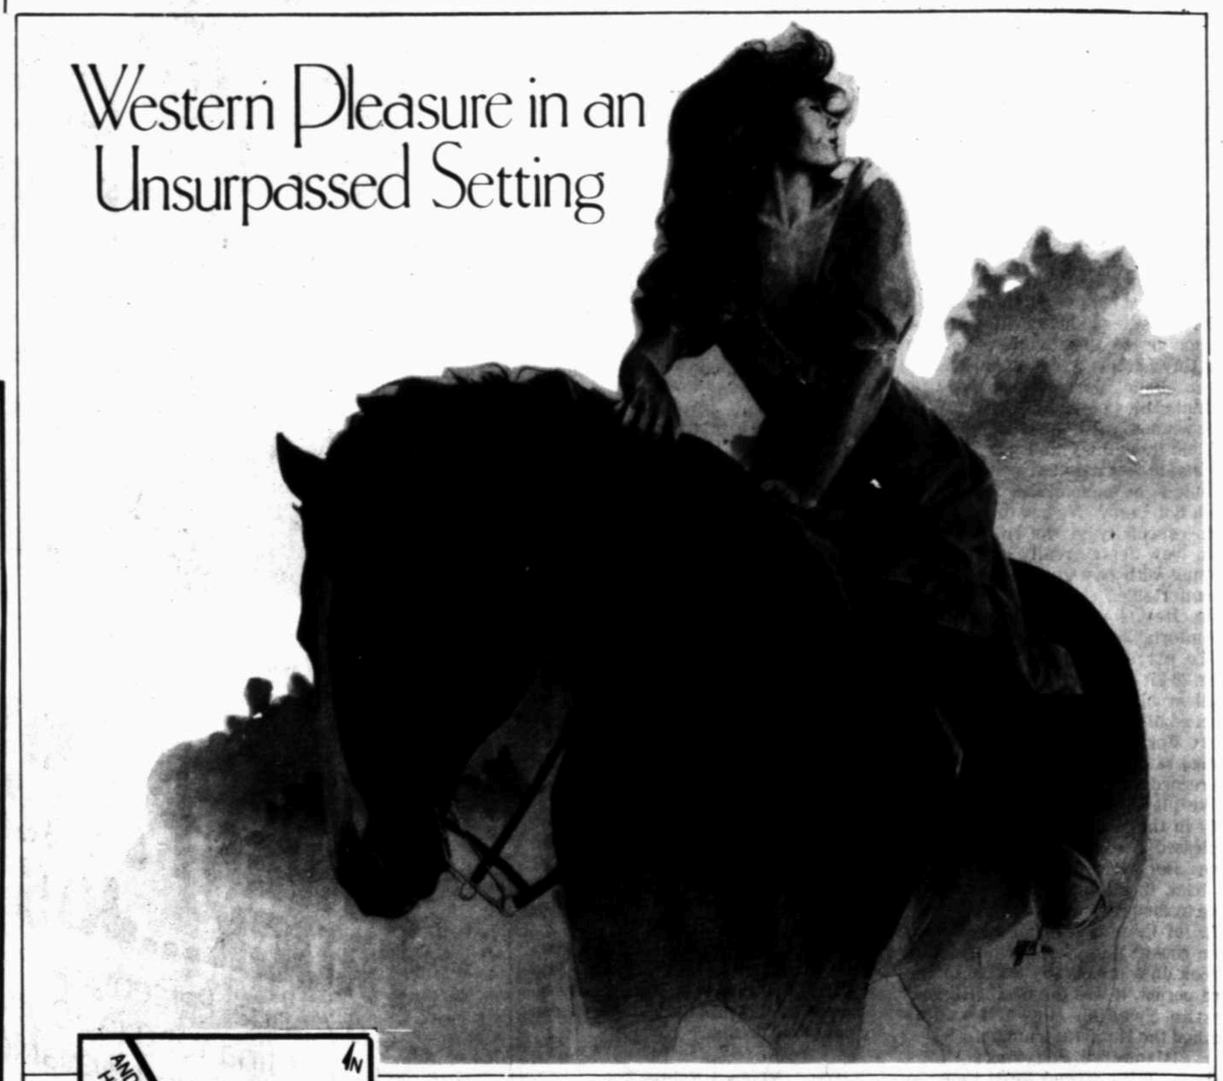
"I like to think of myself as a runner and passer," Johnson said. "I've got something to prove in this game."

Alborn moved Johnson to wide receiver early this season but in his first game at the new position against Tulane, he suffered a knee injury on the kickoff and was not cleared for activity until Monday.



Cleveland denies hiring A's Martin as manager

CLEVELAND (AP) — A published report that Billy Martin has agreed to leave the Oakland A's to manage the Cleveland Indians has been denied by both clubs.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported Thursday an announcement that Martin was joining the Indians was expected soon.

"The rumors of Billy going to the Indians are completely and totally false," said Martin's agent, Judge Eddi Sapir. "It is a bad rumor. Billy still has a contract with Oakland.

"I have been talking to (Indians President) Gabe Paul and (Yankee majority owner) George Steinbrenner as a courtesy to Billy. No deal has been cut with Cleveland or anyone else.

"Right now, Billy is very, very happy with the Oakland A's. He loves the fans out there, loves his ball club, and is very happy with the management."

Indians General Manager Phil Seghi said from Milwaukee, where he was attending the World Series, Thursday night, "The story is false."

"He is one of the leading candidates, but he has not signed anything."

Paul said he favors Martin to manage the Indians in 1983, but that New York Yankees first base coach Mike Ferraro also is under consideration.

"We have talked to only two men about the job," Paul said Wednesday. "They are Billy and Ferraro. Obviously, we have a strong interest in both of them."

Paul would not rule out the possibility that others might be considered to replace Manager Dave Garcia, whose contract has expired.

Asked when a decision would be made, Paul said, "As soon as possible."

Martin, 54, has managed five teams in the American League and twice took the New York Yankees to the World Series.

He has been with the A's since 1980 and has three years remaining on his contract, but Oakland owner Roy Eisenhardt has said he would not keep Martin from going elsewhere.

Oakland finished fifth in the American League West this season with a 68-94 record. Last year, Martin's A's won the first half of the strike-shortened season and then beat the Kansas City Royals to win the AL West flag.

Cleveland finished the season with a 78-84 mark and was sixth in the American League East under Garcia.

Martin led Minnesota to the AL West title in 1969 before moving to the Detroit Tigers, where he stayed three years and won one AL East flag. He then went to New York, where the Yankees lost the 1976 World Series but rebounded to win the Series the following year.

Of the top 12 teams in the Associated Press ratings, seventh-ranked Arkansas is idle, there is no line on third-ranked Pitt vs. Temple or No. 10 Arizona State vs. Texas-El Paso and the only member of the group which is less than a 12-point favorite is fifth-ranked Southern Methodist.

LAST WEEK'S score was 29 right, 15 wrong and five ties for a percentage of .659. For the season, it's 206-64-8 — .769. Against the spread, last week was a dismal 13-18 — .419, dropping the count for the year to 76-68 — .528.

No. 2 Alabama (13½) at Tennessee: Even though Gen. Neyland is no longer around there's no team Bear Bryant likes to beat more than the Vols ... Alabama 38-14.

Temple at No. 3 Pitt (no line): The Penthers have had a week off to contemplate their narrow escape against West Virginia ... Pitt 31-14.

Houston at No. 5 Southern Methodist (7½): Eric Dickerson and Craig James are ready to roll again after their close call against Baylor ... SMU 27-13.

Kansas State at No. 6 Nebraska (28): K-State is much improved, but not this much ... Nebrasoa 28-10.

Syracuse at No. 8 Penn State (26½): Syracuse is 1-4 and still has to play Pitt, West Virginia, Boston College and ... Penn State 45-13.

ARIZONA AT No. 9 Notre Dame (12): The Wildcats have had a penchant for pulling upsets since Larry Smith took over as goach and they tied UCLA last week. Upset Special of the Week ... Arizona 21-20.

Texas-El Paso at No. 10 Arizona State (no line): At 6-0, the Sun Devils are more than halfway home ... Arizona State 41-7.

North Carolina State at No. 11 North Carolina (17½): If tailback Joe McIntosh is healthy, the Wolfpack could make it interesting ... North Carolina 24-14.

Washington State at No. 12 UCLA (23): After last year's excitement, the Cougars are finding life in the fast lane a bit too fast ... UCLA 34-14.

No. 13 West Virginia (6½) at Virginia Tech: The Mountaineers were fortunate to beat Boston College and could be looking ahead to Penn State. Second Upset Special ... Virginia Tech 20-17.

No. 14 Southern California (5½) at Stanford: A national television audience will find out if a week off helped the Trojans figure out how to stop John Elway ... Southern Cal 28-21.

OHIO STATE at No. 15 Illinois (5½): The Illini favored over the Buckeyes? How the mighty have fallen ... Illinois 24-17.

No. 16 LSU (10½) at Kentucky: Jerry Claiborne is finding it roughter than he expected at Kentucky; there's no cinch victory on the schedule ... LSU 21-14.

Mississippi State at No. 17 Miami (5½): A three-game skid has negated MSU's 3-0 start ... Miami 20-14.

Duke at No. 20 Clemson (13): The Tigers have remembered how they did it last year ... Clemson 27-13.

Cougs call on Mustangs

By The Associated Press

Bobby Collins is discovering that coaching a Southwest Conference football team is a rock-hard way to make a living.

Taking over a defending SWC championship team from Ron Meyer, Collins has found that every league team is shooting for the Mustangs.

SMU has beaten Texas Christian and Baylor by only three points.

Houston comes calling in another vital SWC showdown in Texas Stadium Saturday night and Collins knows it will be another dogfight.

"It's another challenge," said Collins. "Houston keeps getting better each week ... it should be another exciting game."

SMU sports a 2-0 ledger and is tied atop the SWC standings with the Arkansas Razorbacks, who are idle this week along with Texas. Houston is 1-0-1.

The Cougars also have lived dangerously, tying Baylor by coming from behind with three touchdowns and rallying to defeat Texas A&M 24-20.

"Houston and (quarterback) Lionel Wilson give you all sorts of problems,' said Collins. "They lead the conference in offense. They can run it and throw it."

In other SWC games, Texas A&M, still looking for its first conference victory under Jackie Sherrill, was a two-point favorite over Baylor at Kyle Field; Texas Tech was a six-point pick over Rice in Houston; and Mississippi was an eight-point choice to defeat Texas Christian in an intersectional game at Biloxi, Miss.

The SWC is 14-10 against outside competition.

SMU defensive end Jerry Kovar said of Houston: "They have a great offense. If you make one mistake it's a TD.

"Wilson is a great quarterback," Kovar said. "There are very few quarterbacks as big and strong as he is. Yyou can't arm tackle him. He's bigger than I am, and strong. He could be a great running back."

Baylor stopped the Mustang offense dead last week, but quarterback Lance Mcilhenny threw three touchdown passes.

"We didn't run the option much against Baylor because we didn't want Lance to run," said Collins. "If his foot is better, we'll turn him loose against Houston."

Former winner Jeff Mitchell of Lubbock, the first-round leader, slipped to even-par 72 and stood in fourth place.

"We do all types of electrical work," says Fussell, "but we specialize in electrical repair and maintenance." City Wide welcomes calls from owners of mobile homes.

Right now, Fussell has entered a new field, one in which his company is fast becoming expert: computer room installation. They install three different types of computer room systems, among them the CPS power system, the UPS system and the Micro-power system. The CPS system is geared for larger computer setups, while the Micro-power system is for the smaller computers. UPS is short for Uninterruptible Power System, which features automatic battery operated power if power is lost to the computer. This system automatically reverts back to electricity when power is restored.

In addition to installing these specialized systems, City Wide also furnishes and installs raised flooring for computer rooms. There are an abundance of cables and wiring connected to computers, and a raised floor can keep these out of the way, yet still have them accessible for repair. Fussell and his crew also installs the complete air conditioning package. "We can install the complete package," says Fussell, "from the power system on up to the flooring and air conditioning." This specialized service is just one of the many extras you can expect from City Wide Electric Co. For the finest in electrical service, give Fussell a call at 684-6621. City Wide Electric is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Fielder verdict seen as Haynes victory

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — For Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, an attorney unaccustomed to losing, the verdict in the lurid Pam Fielder murder trial was little more than a bummer.

But a number of his peers insist the outcome rates no worse than a "non-victory" on the Houston lawyer's cluttered courtroom scorecard.

"I'm puzzled and confused and I don't understand it," grumbled Haynes after the jury assessed his client a two-year prison sentence earlier this week for the summertime 1981 slaying of her gynecologist husband, Dr. Darwin Fielder.

"But I never claimed to know why jurors decide the way they do."

Despite his misgivings, the jury did reject prosecutor's demands for a murder conviction and a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Instead, the panel convicted her of voluntary manslaughter and then assessed the minimum prison sentence, which it could have probated.

MRS. FIELDER, 38, maintained that she shot her husband in self defense after he threatened to kill her for exposing his bizarre sexual proclivities.

Several lawyers contend the verdict was more triumph than tragedy for Haynes, recognized by many as the state's top criminal trial lawyer and among the best in the nation.

"It's a victory," Jeff Kearney, a lawyer and courtroom observer, said flatly.

"It isn't a loss at all. That's ridiculous," agreed Jack Strickland, a former prosecutor who opposed Haynes in the marathon murder-for-hire trials of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

"The man (Fielder) was shot seven times at point-blank range. And she has been found not guilty of murder."

Strickland pointed out that the manslaughter ruling carried "the same range of punishment (2 to 20 years) as possession of cocaine or stealing an $11,000 car. It was not a loss at all."

"I'd call it a clear victory for the criminal justice system,"said Worley, 33, a seven-year veteran of the Tarrant County District Attorney's office.

"I'm pleased that the jury assessed some time in the pentitentiary...and I feel like it's a definite victory for the state," said Ms. McCutchan, 29.

"The prosecutors...were trying Racehorse Haynes and not Pam Fielder," said Strickland, "and it's an easy thing to do. But the defendant got hurt not hardly at all."

Another veteran of the Cullen Davis legal skirmishes, former prosecutor Joe Shannon, summed it up this way:

"Whether or not it was a victory for Haynes I don't know. Anytime his client goes to the slammer, he considers it a loss.

"IN A SENSE, when she didn't get probation, it was a victory for the state. Voluntary manslaughter is a killing that occurs in the heat of passion and with adequate provocation. In that type of situation, it makes it very easy for the defense to argue probation and the jury to give it.

"Probation is a legitimate second step."

Still, said Shannon, with a trace of black humor, "two years is the minimum sentence for pumping seven slugs into a professional man. In fact, 2-to-do is pretty damn minimal."

But he said Haynes sees it differently.

"He's the kind of guy who strives for all-out victory," said Shannon. "He goes after the take-no-prisoners victory. He wants to win it all.

"And that's the way it should be. I know he considers it, if not a loss, at least a non-victory."

HAYNES, 54, compiled an impressive string of legal triumphs in Houston before gaining statewide attention in the bribery trial of Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher in the early 1970s.

Mutscher and two associates were convicted in a case linked to a bank and stock fraud case known widely as the Sharpstown scandal.

Later, Haynes represented Houston plastic surgeon John Hill in a murder case that was immortalized by Thomas Thompson's bestseller "Blood and Money."

Professionally, Haynes won his greatest acclaim in defense of Davis, accused in 1976 of murdering his wife's lover and daughter in a bloody shooting spree at Davis' $6 million mansion.

THREE EYEWITNESSES later identified the industrialist as the bewigged gunman, but an Amarillo jury acquitted him of capital murder charges.

Davis was re-arrested nine months later and charged in a murder-for-hire scheme involving his divorce judge and an alleged list of 15 persons marked for death.

Retained again, Haynes neutralized devastating FBI tape recordings and videotape and won Davis a mistrial in Houston and subsequent acquittal in Fort Worth.

One ironic twist to this whole episode was that Davis' third wife, Karen, reputedly led Pamela Fielder to the Lord last year and she and Cullen followed up with a fund-raiser at the mansion to enable Mrs. Fielder to hire Haynes.

AP Laserphoto

Richard "Racehorse" Haynes is not at all happy with the sentence given his client, Pamela Ruth Fielder, in a trial where she admitted shooting her husband seven times. She stands convicted of voluntary manslaughter and faces two years in prison for the killing. However, Haynes' peers insist the verdict may be more triumph thantragedy for the noted Houston attorney.

Botanist: Acid rain, vinegary fog kills trees

NEW YORK (AP) — Acid rain, and often "fog as acid as vinegar," appear to have killed half the trees on a mountain in northern Vermont since 1964, a botanist says.

"I hesitate to say acid rain is unequivocally the cause, but we've been trying to eliminate other things," said Hubert Vogelmann, chairman of the botany department at the University of Vermont. "We can't find a disease. We can't find an insect pest. There are no climatic trends that we can identify."

He said the mountain, Camel's Hump, about 30 miles east of the University of Vermont in Burlington, once was capped by a "deep green and dense" forest, which since 1964 has been reduced to "gray skeletons of trees."

All rain is slightly acidic. Carbon dioxide occurring naturally in the atmosphere dissolves in falling raindrops to form carbonic acid, which is weak.

Acid rain is composed of raindrops that have fallen through polluted air. The pollutants, including such heavy metals as cadmium, lead and copper, dissolve in the raindrops, increasing the rain's acidity to levels that are toxic to animals and plants. Acid rain and acid snow have been found everywhere from Bermuda to the Arctic Circle.

In 1977, when it was noticed that the soil on Camel's Hump contained high concentrations of heavy metals, Vogelmann examined the growth rings of trees on the mountain. The examination showed that growth had slowed dramatically in the 1950s and early 1960s, about the time, Vogelmann said, when acid rain began falling on Vermont.

High concentrations of aluminum were found in the outer, stunted growth rings, he said. Aluminum, normally immobilized in soil, is liberated by acid rain and can then be absorbed by plants.

Laboratory studies then showed that the absorption of water by spruce seedlings was impaired when aluminum was added to the water, he said.

The Midwest has frequently been blamed as the source of the pollutants that drift to the northeast over New England, but some say the scourge is at least partly produced by New England's own factories and utilities.

Argentinians want to see justice done for loss of 'desaparecidos'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — To mention Nuremburg is to bring shudders of fear and apprehension to Argentina's military rulers. To be tried for their acts during six years of repressive control in the manner Germany's Nazi masters were, simply cannot be tolerated, they say.

Yet, the cry for fixing responsibility for the deaths and disappearances of perhaps 20,000 Argentines at the hands of the armed forces in the 1970s is growing and is becoming a dominant factor in the negotiations to re-establish democracy and civilian rule here.

Set against the strident refusal of the military to accept investigation and trial are human rights groups and families of the desaparecidos — those who disappeared.

"We don't want vengeance. We don't want a Nuremburg trial," said Emilio Mignone, father of a desaparecido and head of the Center for Legal and Social Studies, a leading human rights group. "What we want is justice."

For the admirals and generals who took power in a coup in March 1976, the words vengeance and justice present a distinction without a difference.

"We did what was necessary to defeat terrorism and subversion," one air force office said. "It was a war for national survival and in war there are casualties. Some of us died and some of them died. We were not Nazis. Your (American) commanders were not tried for Vietnam and we shouldn't be either."

To make certain, the current military regime, which has promised to shift power to an elected government by March 1984, is negotiating with leaders of Argentina's major political parties for an agreement that would prevent any trials of the sort that took place at Nuremburg, the German city where Nazi war criminals were brought to trial before an international tribunal after World War II.

ONE POSSIBLE arrangement is an amnesty under which military and security personnel would be granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for the early release of most people still held for political crimes.

According to sources in the parties, human rights groups and the Interior Ministry, the military is also trying to reach an agreement along the lines of tacit arrangements worked out when dictatorial regimes in Greece and Spain turned power over to elected governments. Under such an accord, the new leaders would pledge privately not to stage large-scale investigations and trials of the outgoing military.

The armed forces would agree to support the new and presumably fragile government, accept restrictions aimed at preventing any future human rights abuses and dismantle the large security groups that carried out the suppressions.

Sources indicated that some security agents might be punished if there is definite proof that they violated human rights and acted on their own out of government control.

"The important thing," an Interior Ministry source said, "is to make certain there are no repetitions of human rights violations."

By acknowledging a need to prevent future violations on the scale that existed after 1976, the official was quietly expanding on past government statements on the military's role.

Previously, all that was admitted were "some excesses" and what one former president, Gen. Roberto E. Viola, called "the dirty war against subversion."

The comments of the Interior Ministry source were an example of an increasingly liberal attitude that many observers, foreign and domestic, see as an effort to dampen any demands for retribution.

THE CURRENT regime, headed by Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, has stepped up the release of prisoners held by executive order without trials or, in many cases, without even charges.

In the past several weeks, more than 400 of these prisoners have been freed and government officials say the remaining 400 to 500 will be released before the elections.

Sources also raised the possibility that the fate of some people listed as desaparecidos might be made public, particularly those believed to have died in shootouts with the security forces.

This would be a relatively small number and would fall far short of satisfying a key demand of human rights organizations that a full accounting be made of all 6,000 of those who disappeared. However, government officials hope such an act would ease criticism and pressure by showing good faith.

Finally, government sources say that if the country remains peaceful in the interim before the transition to civilian rule, the military will lift the state of siege that has been in force since 1974, when most sections of the constitution and all civil rights were suspended.

Political leaders acknowledged discussing the volatile issue with the military, but they are very cautious about disclosing details and wary of making public commitments.

Raul Alfonsin, a leader of the important Radical Civic Union and a leading candidate for president, reflected this careful attitude in an interview.

"When we have a democratic government," he said, "there will be justice...but I think any decisions will have to be taken by the courts."

"THE COUNTRY cannot give up on this (human-rights issues), but neither can we make a future out of a spirit of revenge for the past. We won't give up our principles, but we won't make a big effort to impose something like a Nuremburg trial."

Major human rights leaders agree with Alfonsin's assessment, but they are determined to make human rights the single most important priority of the new government.

"We can't forget," said the mother of a 19-year-old woman who vanished in 1977 after six men with submachine guns took her from the family's apartment.

"We can't and we won't let the world forget. Every time I go into my daughter's empty room I remember the men and the guns. We want to know what happened to her and who did it. We want them punished. That is what justice is."

From the March 1976, overthrow of President Maria Estela Peron until 1979, an estimated 15,000 people died in battles between government troops and alleged terrorists and subversives. Human-rights groups say that they have lists of another 6,000 who were kidnapped and who disappeared.

The assumption on the part of most human-rights leaders, foreign diplomats and, off the record, government officials is that they all died, most of them after having been tortured.

The list of desaparecidos includes more than 100 children under the age of 12, hundreds of pregnant women and large numbers of older people, many in their 60s and 70s.

Argentine diplomats disappeared. So did political and labor leaders, university students and professors, the children of rich and poor alike.

IT WAS A horror that cut across all segments of the society and nearly everyone in the country seems to have been affected, either as a relative or a friend of a desaparecido.

All of this is fueling the pressure being applied by the human-rights groups against any amnesty or agreements to spare the outgoing military from answering for its actions.

"I have serious doubts about an amnesty," a well-informed foreign diplomat said. "I don't see these people (human-rights groups) giving up. If they can get a halfway good judicial system, they will go through" with prosecuting military and security agents allegedly involved in the disappearances.

Evidence of this determination is the increasingly sophisticated record-keeping being done by human rights organizations. Financed in part with foreign money, the organizations have been computerizing and microfilming testimony, documents and other evidence they say can prove who did what to whom.

And because police last year raided and destroyed some records kept by Mignone, the head of the Center for Legal and Social Studies, the human rights groups have sent copies of their files to other countries for safe keeping.

All of this points up the strategy of the human-rights leaders. In effect, they do not expect nor will they press for government commissions or investigations or Nuremburg-type trials.

Instead, individual cases will be filed in the courts by relatives and other people directly involved against military personnel and government security agents accused of the deaths and disappearances.

The key, obviously, will be the Argentine court system and the restoration of the constitution.

MIGNONE AND JOSE Westerkamp, another leading human-rights figure, say many current judges who have denied previous suits were appointed illegally by the military.

"Under the constitution," Mignone said, "which goes back into force automatically when the state of siege is lifted, all judges have to be confirmed by the Senate."

Because most of the judges now in the courts did not go through this process, "one of the first decisions a constitutional government will have to make will be which judges to replace and which to keep," Mignone explained.

And, Westerkamp added, "as all the political parties are pledged to solving the human-rights problems, we think the new judges will follow the law."

Mignone and Westerkamp and, to a lesser extent, foreign observers, feel that momentum is on their side and that the public is so incensed that no political leader could afford to arrange any deals to head off trials, particularly if filed individually.

"Public opinion won't let them do that," said Westerkamp. "The military cannot dictate to the future."

While many foreign experts agree with this assessment, they are skeptical about the willingness of the military to sit quietly by while the courts try officers and enlisted men alike for alleged human-rights violations. "It is clearly a threat to the military," one diplomat said.

Thus, the danger of a military coup over the issue is very real. A major motive for the overthrow last year of Viola was concern by ranking officers that he was too moderate on human rights.

ANOTHER CONSIDERATION is the system that was used to oppress opponents of the armed forces in the 1970s.

To ensure that everyone's hands were dirty, the repression was spread around. That is, kidnappings, torture and killing involved personnel of all ranks and branches.

"It would be hard to find a single officer between 1976 and 1979 who could not be held responsible for some gross act," a European diplomat said. "They are all guilty."

One human-rights expert said that members of the ruling junta may not have been personally involved, but that they ordered the repression and approved the tactics. "And they have covered it up. That is a crime,too."

Even Mignone acknowledges, in theory, the danger of a coup to prevent a new government from carrying out trials. He thinks the realities in Argentina, however, particularly now after the military disgrace of losing the Falkland Islands war, preclude the possibility of a coup.

He, Westerkamp and their allies argue that the military is splintered internally over the loss of the war and over policies dealing with Argentina's crumbling economy.

"If one branch tried to stop elections," Mignone said, "the others would oppose them." There would be civil war, he said, adding that "the failure in the Malvinas (the Argentine name for the Falklands) changed everything."

Perhaps more important than internal disunity, Westerkamp said, is the total disillusionment by the public concerning the military's ability to do anything right, in war or in peace.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Accounting Department Meets Many Diversified Needs.

The Workers Behind the Scenes.

The accounting department is essential to the effective functioning of any business organization in both its internal operation and in the relationship of that business to its customers. And the accounting section of The Midland Reporter-Telegram is no exception.

Its functions include the systematic organizing, authenticating, recording, processing and analyzing of all financial aspects of the newspaper.

The department consists of a staff accountant, a credit manager and nine others making up accounts receivable, accounts payable, computer inputting,customer service, legal processing, personnel-payroll.

Customer service and representatives provide customers with assistance in reconciling their accounts and answer any questions customers may have. Payroll-personnel keeps records in order and up to date, handles medical insurance claims of employees, keeps savings bond records and handles accounts payable, those invoices which the newspaper receives for services it has contracted, features it purchases and the multitude of other charges associated with any business.

On a daily basis, computer entries are made for display and display classified billing as well as for invoices on legal notices. The department also assists in providing customers with copies of their published advertising and works with customers in regard to questions they have about their accounts.

Stressing the total service concept, the staff of The Reporter-Telegram's accounting department plays an important role in helping the newspaper fulfill one of its most major goals: to provide the best, most productive means of distributing our customers' advertising message.

Payroll and personnel

Phyllis Wilson, left, responsible for payroll and personnel records at The Reporter-Telegram, discusses an employee work record with Carolyn Boid, cashier.

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

Can Tylenol's image be restored?

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Johnson & Johnson executives say they would like to begin in earnest the task of rehabilitating Tylenol's good name, but the chore will be difficult until the poisonings of seven people are resolved.

"What we need is a fast arrest," said Lawrence Foster, vice president for public relations for the New Brunswick-based health care giant.

Johnson & Johnson officials say they've done everything possible to expedite the capture of whoever put cyanide in Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules, killing seven people in the Chicago area. And they've also worked hard to help consumers.

The company has recalled and examined millions of Extra-Strength and regular Tylenol capsules, offered a $100,000 reward, set up a telephone hotline, cooperated with investigators and hired private detectives. It has also offered cash refunds or tablet exchanges for some 22 million bottles of Tylenol — offers Johnson & Johnson has said could cost $79 million.

Joseph Chiesa, president of McNeil Consumer Products Co., the subsidiary that makes Tylenol, said the battle to save the aspirin-free pain reliever will be waged whether or not arrests are made.

HE SAID THE effort involves both Tylenol — the nation's best-selling over-the-counter pain-reliever until two weeks ago — and Johnson & Johnson, because "there is a clear number of consumers who now identify Johnson & Johnson as the maker of Tylenol along with McNeil."

Chiesa said he would not detail plans for the rehabilitation effort, except that the product would be made with new tamper-resistant packaging and that the name Tylenol would be retained.

Keeping the name is a wise move, said Stephen A. Greyser, a marketing professor at the Harvard Business School "The cost of relaunching — even though that would be expensive — would be less than starting a new brand name." he said.

Chiesa also said the company has no plans to eliminate Tylenol capsules in favor of tablet and liquid forms, which are still sold.

New advertising for Tylenol will "be different than our normal messages" of the past and be "reflective of the current situation," he said.

Chiesa would not speculate on the dollar loss to Johnson & Johnson, which had sales of $5.4 billion in 1981, but said the firm expects to feel the impact of the poisonings through 1983.

Analysts have estimated 1981 Tylenol sales at about $400 million, for a 37 percent share of the analgesic market — more than Anacin, Bayer aspirin, Bufferin and Excedrin combined. Sales of Tylenol, which contains the aspirin substitute acetaminophen, have doubled since 1976.

NEIL SWEIG, A HEALTH products analyst for Shearson American Express, said the poisonings could cost the firm about $75 million in net profits.

He predicted the recall and destruction of capsules would be reflected in a 25 cents per share loss in the third quarter, and that repackaging costs would result in another 15 cents per share loss in the fourth quarter. Johnson & Johnson last year earned $2.51 per share.

Sweig and others said Johnson & Johnson will be able to rebound, but the experts are less sure about Tylenol. The drug is the leading product among 120 Johnson and Johnson subsidiaries, but accounts for only about 7 percent of company sales.

The product's chief assets, analysts said, were the fact that no manufacturer error was indicated in the deaths, and the forthright way Johnson & Johnson executives reacted to the poisonings. Another plus, experts say, is consumer confidence in the company and Tylenol's previous popularity.

Support for Johnson & Johnson has come from such varied sources as analysts, government officials, competitors and even the New Jersey Council of Churches. And the 1,200 employees at McNeil's Fort Washington, Pa., plant offered to each provide $100 toward a reward for whoever finds the culprit who tampered with their product. The offer was politely rejected by Johnson & Johnson.

PROSECUTORS SAY THEY believe someone introduced the cyanide to the Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules after they left the manufacturer — making this case unlike others in which producers have been blamed for sickness or death.

Maple Plain Co. employee Sandy Motzko of Watertown, Minn., is surrounded by mail carts bearing packages of Tylenol capsules earlier this week in Maple Plain, Minn. Maple Plain Co. is a coupon redemption firm which is preparing for several million returns of the capsules in exchange for the tablet form of Tylenol. All of this is in response to cases of cyanide poisoning being linked to the capsules.

"The great difference is that it's not their fault. It's a pathetic case, but there's a great challenge there. I'm reasonably certain they can come back," said Dr. Thomas Robertson, chairman of the marketing department at University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

A lawyer has filed suit against Johnson & Johnson on behalf of several families of poisoning victims. But an article in the National Law Journal says it will be difficult to convince a jury that the company is liable for the deaths — especially if tampering by a third party is shown.

However, Dr. Roger Strang, marketing professor at New York University, and other experts say Tylenol is in grave danger as a product because of the seven deaths.

The link, said Dr. Robert Blattberg, a professor of marketing at the University of Chicago, will hurt Tylenol "a lot. And it's going to affect other kinds of products in capsules."

SWEIG SAID THAT although some other manufacturers of pain-relievers are reporting sales increases, "I have spoken with a lot of them, and they are all frightened about what this is going to do to the market."

At Johnson & Johnson, three task forces are working on the image problem. And the company has preliminary results from consumer attitude studies indicating Tylenol tablets are selling, said Foster.

Chiesa says he is "optimistic" about Tylenol. He strongly disagrees with "marketing experts who say this rings the death knell on the Tylenol franchise."

Foster said consumers will realize "we were victimized along with society" and that because of "goodwill" generated by the 95-year-old Johnson & Johnson, "we may come out of this with a stronger image."

'Serious loophole' in drug regulations exists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a "serious loophole in drug regulation," there is nothing to prevent or discourage deliberate tampering with drugs once they leave the manufacturer, says the head of the congressional subcommittee looking into the Tylenol murders.

"We have extensive controls designed to ensure that drugs are manufactured safely," said Rep. Henry Waxman, the California Democrat who heads the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and environment.

"Unfortunately, we have nothing on the books to prevent or discourage deliberate tampering with drugs once they leave the manufacturer," he said in a statement on a hearing scheduled today by the subcommittee.

Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, was to testify at the hearing about what changes in the law, if any, should be considered in light of the seven killings in the Chicago area from cyanide-contaminated Extra-strength Tylenol capsules.

The hearing was being held a day after a drug industry trade group recommended to the FDA that it require tamper-resistant packaging for all over-the-counter drugs that people ingest, inhale or insert in the body.

Such packaging would make it easier for consumers to tell if capsules, throat sprays, ear drops, eye washes, contact lens solutions, suppositories, douches and vaginal foams had been tampered with.

The trade group, the Proprietary Association, also appealed to the FDA on Thursday for "preemptive" federal regulation to discourage state and local authorities from setting their own rules in the wake of the Tylenol murders.

And the group urged the FDA to give the industry flexibility on how to achieve more tamper-resistant packaging.

The group based its recommendations on a report by a 30-member panel of experts convened last week to point the way toward more tamper-resistant packages. The recommendations were approved at a meeting of its board of directors in New York and released here.

They defined a tamper-resistant package as "one having an indicator or a barrier to entry which, if breached or missing, can reasonably be expected to provide visible evidence to consumers that the package has been tampered with or opened."

The FDA, which is drafting new federal packaging regulations for over-the-counter drugs, asked the industry group for its suggestions. Both FDA commissioner Hayes and Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker have said they want to leave some discretion in the manufacturers' hands.

James D. Cope, president of the Proprietary Association, said in a statement that "various good and efficient tamper-resistant closure systems already exist. We don't need to invent them."

He said the FDA should "regulate results, that is, tamper-resistant packaging, but leave industry free to find the technical options to achieve these results."

The Proprietary Association listed 11 types of tamper-resistant packages: film wrappers that seal around the product; blister-strip packs with individually wrapped pills; bubble packs, in which the product or container is wrapped in plastic; shrink seals or bands that must be torn to open the cap; foil, paper or plastic pouches enveloping the drugs; bottle seals underneath the cap; tape seals over carton flaps or bottle caps; breakable caps; sealed tubes; sealed cartons; and aerosol containers.

Seven people died in the Chicago area two weeks ago after swallowing Tylenol capsules that contained cyanide. Their killer has not been found.

Man sought for questioning in cyanide deaths

CHICAGO (AP) — A nationwide appeal was issued for information about a man wanted for questioning in seven cyanide deaths after it was learned he was charged for a time in a Kansas City killing four years ago.

Kansas City police identified James Lewis, 36, who also uses the name Robert Richardson, as a former suspect in the murder of Raymond West, 72, of Kansas City. West's dismembered body was found in his attic in 1978 in a "semi-mummified condition," Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner told a news conference Thursday night.

A federal extortion warrant for Lewis, using the name Richardson, was issued Wednesday in a matter related to the cyanide poisoning of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

The warrant said Lewis wrote a letter to McNeil Consumer Products Co., maker of Tylenol, demanding $1 million "if you want to stop the killing." The letter was delivered Oct. 6, a week after the first cyanide victim died.

Charges against Lewis were dropped in the Kansas City murder when a judge ruled that Lewis had been arrested illegally and evidence had been taken from his apartment illegally. In addition, the medical examiner in Kansas City could not determine the cause of West's death because his body was so decomposed, according to Fahner, who heads a multi-agency task force handling the case.

Fahner said Lewis also was indicted in December 1981 in Missouri on theft and forgery charges in an alleged land fraud scheme. Illinois officials became aware of charges against Lewis after a Kansas City detective recognized him from a photo circulated across the country by the task force.

The attorney general said Lewis was known to frequent the Amarillo, Texas, area, and a Chicago detective was sent to Oklahoma and Texas to look for him.

Lewis' wife, identified as Leann Lewis, 35, is named in a federal warrant charging her with using a fictitious Social Security number to try to obtain work in the Chicago area. Known as Nancy Richardson, Mrs. Lewis worked as a bookkeeper for a now-defunct Chicago travel agency operated by a businessman whose inactive bank account number was listed in the $1 million extortion letter.

Authorities said that in her work she had access to the account number where McNeil was ordered to deposit the $1 million extortion money. Officials declined to speculate whether the extortion attempt was genuine or designed to embarrass the businessman.

He had said earlier that while Richardson was wanted on the extortion charge, he has "never been a suspect" in the killings.

"We still have no direct evidence that these two people are responsible for the cyanide-Tylenol deaths, but we want them back so we can pursue that angle," Fahner said Thursday night.

TOKYO (AP) — About 4.4 pounds of deadly sodium cyanide, enough to kill 10,050 people, were stolen from a Tokyo storehouse, police said today.

Local press reports speculated the cyanide may have been stolen to commit random murders similar to those in the United States, where the deaths of seven people have been linked to cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol.

An employee discovered that a large metal drum containing 1,000 tablets of sodium cyanide, used in plating car components, had been broken into, and 67 30-gram tablets, about 4.4 pounds, were missing.

Only .2 grams of sodium cyanide is fatal to a person, a police spokesman said, so the amount stolen could kill 10,050 people. The missing poison was worrth about $3, the spokesman said.

No cases of deliberate contamination of over-the-counter drugs have been reported in Japan, and Tylenol is not available on the domestic market here.

The police spokesman discounted fears of mass poisoning, calling it "just speculation." He said there was no indication why the cyanide was stolen and that there were no leads in the case.

And a car to be enjoyed for many moons. Both because of the attention to quality engineering that goes into all our cars, and the Prelude's standard power-operated moonroof.

The moon and stars come standard as well.

Just what is the difference between a 2 wheel and 4 wheel drive sport utility. Unless all terrain travel is important to you, consider these advantages in a 2 wheel drive. Less machinery in the 2 wheel Ramcharger means less on the sticker price and the cost of repair. 2 wheel drive uses normal highway tires for less cost and for a more comfortable ride. And the 2 wheel drive tows your boat, camper or trailer with as much ease as the 4 wheeler. Over all the 2 wheeler is a practical choice. But we of course, stock 4 wheel drive Ramchargers.

natural energy HOME

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 13½% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 14.28%
