Bus Driver Rescues Two Crash Victims

MORGANTOWN, Pa. (AP) — When a single-engine plane swooped in front of his bus and crashed, driver Allan Thomas ran to the wreck. But other motorists ignored his pleas to help, stopping to take photos and movies as he pulled two victims from the burning plane.

"It was flaming, there wasn't time to go for help," Thomas said Thursday, after rescuing Harold Denlinger, 32, of Morgantown, and his daughter, Emily, 8, from their plane, which had smashed into a dirt embankment along the Pennsylvania Turnpike near here. The plane had just taken off from a local airport.

Thomas was driving a Greyhound bus on a run from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia when he saw the plane crash about 2:30 p.m.

"I just took a chance, that's all," he said about running to the burning plane. "It was moving slow when it crashed, and I thought they might need a hand getting out."

They did.

Emily's face had been raked by branches that whipped the plane as it tore through tree limbs. Denlinger was unconscious, his hands stiff on the controls.

Thomas took the girl first.

"I wasn't scared," he said. "I just knew I had to get her out."

When Thomas put her on the ground about 100 feet from the burning plane, she started crying.

"I've never been so glad to hear a little girl cry," he said.

Thomas had problems when he went back for Denlinger.

"It was like he had been dead three days, he was so stiff," Thomas said. By this time, several dozen motorists had stopped, but Thomas's pleas for help went unanswered.

"I said, 'Won't somebody please help me?' but they all told me to get back, that the plane was going to explode. Some of them were taking pictures. Some of them were taking movies," Thomas said.

Thomas said two men finally came forward and helped him pull Denlinger from the plane. A bus passenger helped him lug a 50-pound fire extinguisher from the bus to the wreck and fight the fire.

State troopers, a fire engine and an ambulance then arrived. Thomas said the entire rescue took about 15 minutes.

Thomas completed his bus run and returned to his home near Philadelphia late Thursday night, where he said his stomach was "still all aflutter."

He said he asked his superiors for permission to remain home today, but otherwise did not want to make too much of the incident. "I think it was just something that most people would do," he said.

Denlinger was listed in poor condition Thursday night in the intensive care unit at Reading Hospital, where officials said he had a fractured skull, broken legs and possible internal injuries.

Early Vote By Miners Jolts Contract Hopes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Early returns from coalfield union halls indicated today many miners were prepared to continue their 109-day strike rather than accept the latest contract proposal with the soft coal industry.

Although only a trickle of the union's 160,000 miners had completed voting by midday, most of those early voters were opposing the pact.

"I can't figure it out," said Local 1447 President Donald Buff of Powhatan Point, Ohio, whose members rejected it. "I guess the men are just fed up."

A few locals opposed to the pact set up balloting soon after midnight in an attempt to sway fellow miners and overcome efforts of the United Mine Workers leadership to prevent a "steamroller" effect against the proposal that some felt occurred in the previous proposal, which was rejected by 70 percent of the voters.

The UMW headquarters in Washington did not plan to open its press vote tabulation center until 3 p.m. Results from a majority of the 719 locals were not expected until tonight.

Mason Caudill, president of Local 1569, the largest in eastern Kentucky's District 19, said his members rejected the contract 276-35.

Elsewhere in Kentucky, voting was reported moderate to heavy, and Tom Gaston, president of District 23 in western Kentucky, predicted it would pass there.

Two locals in Ohio, both in Powhatan Point, voted early and both rejected the contract, but a third local favored the contract. The total for all three was 338-153 against the contract.

In Pennsylvania, however, all 15 members of Local 7402 in Indiana voted for ratification, but there were reports it was being turned down elsewhere.

The first Virginia local to be tallied, Local 1965 near Dante, voted the contract down 36-9.

The voting came amid reports of an easing energy crunch and increased economic hardship on miners' families.

Today was the second time the miners were called to decide on a contract offer. On March 5, over 70 percent rejected a proposed pact.

An earlier proposed settlement was rejected by the union bargaining council and never was submitted to the rank and file.

After the March 5 vote, President Carter invoked the Taft-Hartley law and a federal judge ordered miners to return to work. Miners defied the order and eight days later the same judge refused to extend it. That made the nation's longest continuous nationwide coal strike legal again.

United Mine Workers leaders, anxious for ratification, guarded against momentum from early results affecting the outcome by ordering all voting to occur today, Good Friday.

Freeze Nips Some Areas Of Plains

A-J News Services

Thunderstorms danced about the state Thursday night, spawning at least one tornado, bombarding the Brownwood area with golf ball-sized hail and Northeast Texas with heavy rainfall. But the turbulent weather left the dry South Plains with little but expectations for a sunny Easter weekend.

Lubbock so far has dodged its legendary just-before-Easter freeze, but topped the freezing mark early today by only one degree. Other portions of the area were not so lucky. The mercury dropped to 28 degrees at Morton and Plains and subfreezing readings were numerous over the region.

While today's forecast calls for temperatures near 60 in Lubbock, tonight's low will approach the freezing mark, dropping to the mid-30s. However, warmer weather is due for the weekend.

Highs both Saturday and Sunday should be near 70, with nighttime lows in the 40s.

Historically, Easter weekend has not marked the end to freezing temperatures for the year, National Weather Service records indicate. A spokesman with the agency said April 10 is the "average" yearly date for the final freeze of the year in the Lubbock area.

Today's 10-15 mph winds are expected to diminish to the 5-10 mph range tonight, forecasts indicated.

Light northerly winds are expected Sunday, a spokesman said.

Lubbock Thursday reported a trace of

U.S.-Israel Hassle Clouds Peace Bid

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin flew home today after rejecting President Carter's demand for removal of Israeli settlements from the occupied territories as "not just" and appealing to the American public for backing.

Begin told reporters on arriving here that he and Carter achieved some agreement on "certain issues," but he stressed that Israel "faced several demands which we could not accept."

To the United States and "everyone else there are problems of policy. To us they are problems of life, of existence and of making sure of the future," the Israeli leader declared.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told a news conference today the drive for peace had been "much slowed down," but he said Carter had presented "some exploratory ideas" to Begin for advancing stalled Egyptian-Israeli negotiations.

Vance hinted these proposals centered on an interim plan for the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, leading eventually to a choice by the Palestinians there whether to affiliate with Israel or Jordan.

Vance said that any resumption of Egyptian-Israeli peace talks is unlikely in the near future.

Sources in Israel claim the Carter administration is trying to get Begin replaced by the more moderate Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, a report the White House and the prime minister denied. And Weizman told two Israeli newspapers today the opposition Labor Party should join the government coalition to form a "national peace government" that would stand up to the United States.

Some observers pointed out that talk of a "Dump Begin" movement in Washington could be an attempt by Begin's supporters to deflect criticism at home of his failure to reduce Carter's support of Egypt's demands.

At his news conference, Vance refused to be drawn into a discussion of whether negotiations can progress with Begin as prime minister.

Foes Of Canal Treaties Seek Recall Of Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring constitutional precedent, opponents of the Panama Canal treaties in at least five states are organizing attempts to recall senators who voted for the first of the agreements.

The final Senate vote on the two treaties is still to come, but various groups are voicing their displeasure at the initial vote by seeking enough signatures to begin the mechanism cutting short their senator's six-year term of office.

The treaty guaranteeing the waterway's neutrality was approved 68-32, with one vote to spare, and the pact to actually turn over the canal to Panama is expected to be equally close.

The efforts are being undertaken despite legal opinions that only the Senate itself can give members the boot.

Because of the length of time required for a complete recall campaign and the unlikelihood of ultimate success, the main purpose of the efforts appears to be changing the handful of votes necessary to defeat the second treaty vote.

Actions against senators who voted for the pact are known to be underway in Wisconsin, Louisiana, Arizona, Tennessee and Montana.

In Oklahoma and Colorado, similar drives were begun, then dropped because organizers were informed that the Constitution has no provision for recall of U.S. senators.

A group calling itself Impeach Baker and Sasser Inc., organized in Tennessee with the declared aim of removing the state's two senators, Republican Howard Baker and Democrat James Sasser for their pro-treaty votes.

In Wisconsin, Milwaukee attorney John Couture, chairman of a group calling itself the Conservative Party, said petitions calling for the recall of Democratic Sens. Gaylord Nelson and William Proxmire will be circulated next week.

In Arizona, Dan Hough, who said he represented a group of Phoenix voters, obtained recall petitions on Tuesday from the secretary of state's office in the first step toward unseating Democrat Dennis DeConcini.

Over the next 120 days, Hough must obtain 185,252 signatures (25 percent of the votes cast for DeConcini in the 1976 election), to get the recall question on a statewide ballot.

Other states with recall laws, mainly in the West, have similar requirements.

DeConcini was among the last to announce his vote on the first treaty and voted for it only after winning acceptance of a major revision in the agreement from President Carter.

Hough said polls show 84 percent of voters in Arizona opposed the treaties, which would turn control of the canal over to Panama by the year 2000.

Age Bill Causes Little Concern In City

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Major Lubbock employers contacted this morning were not alarmed by the passage Thursday of a bill to prohibit mandatory age 65 retirement for most workers.

retirement is expected to soften the impact.

President Carter still must sign the bill for it to become law.

Bob Hurmence, personnel director of the Furr's supermarket chain, said the firm does not require its employees to retire at 65 anyway, and he is unsure if it will have any material effect.

"What you're going to be into, if I would make a guess of it, has to do with most pension plans probably freezing benefits at 65," Hurmence said. "If you carry benefits forward, past 65, you would increase the contribution to these funds. To what significance I don't know. You're having a lot of people retiring before 65."

Hurmence is in favor of employees working past 65 if they wish.

"People go through all kinds of physical and mental ages," he said. "The fact that someone is chronologically 65 doesn't mean a heck of a lot about their ability to perform."

He added that a number of Furr's employees have chosen to work past that age.

Roy Carnes Jr., assistant personnel director for the Lubbock Independent School District, did not know how the law change would affect the school system, which has 1,930 teachers among its 3,310 employees.

"It looks like it will probably have some effect," Carnes said, "but that will be something the board and administrative council will have to discuss."

Supt. Ed Irons was out of town and not available for comment.

George Katsarakes, plant manager at Grinnell Fire Protection Systems, is glad of the change because it will allow him to keep a valued employee.

Katsarakes said Grinnell plant engineer Joseph Carothers, almost 64, would be forced to retire next year but for the bill.

"He's got such experience and accumulated knowledge that I couldn't replace him with five younger engineers," the plant manager said. "I think the specific situation should determine whether the guy can still do the job or not. He's a perfect example."

Neither Southwestern Public Service Co. nor Southwestern Bell expect a major impact.

Arlie Hudson of Amarillo, Southwestern Public Service personnel director, said he has supported age 65 retirement but does not expect the bill to have much effect because of the early retirement trend.

"I haven't seen the bill," Hudson said. "From what little I know about it, I don't think it's going to affect us materially."

He added that has "seldom ever" heard of anybody in the company who has wanted to work past 65.

"I have no reason to think ours hasn't worked real well under the way it's been," Hudson said. "Now we might have someone who, for some personal

Princess' Husband Leaves Army

LONDON (AP) — Capt. Mark Phillips, Princess Anne's husband, left his office at the War Office for the last time on Thursday.

PHILLIPS

Phillips resigned his commission in the elite Queen's Dragoon Guards recently to farm his 12,000-acre estate at Gatcombe Park in western England, where he lives with the Princess and their infant son.

"I am sad to be leaving the army but I am looking forward to my new life," said Phillips, who spent 11 years in the army. "I would have liked to have commanded a squadron in my regiment, but that wasn't possible."

Phillips could not advance his army career because he was not allowed to gain greater regimental experience in sensitive areas such as Northern Ireland.

Wayne Hays Ready To Campaign

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Wayne Hays hopes to begin campaigning in earnest in about two weeks for the Ohio House.

HAYS

Hays, who resigned from Congress because of the Elizabeth Ray sex scandal, filed petitions this week for the Democratic nomination in June for the seat held by A.G. Lancione, 71, who is retiring.

Hays, 66, was prevented from actively campaigning when he tore a tendon in a knee last month in a fall at his farm.

"I'm in a walking cast," he said Thursday in a telephone interview from the St. Clairsville bank where he is chairman of the board. "But I can get around. I can drive my car."

He said he expects to be out of the cast in two weeks.

Hays has lined up a campaign committee which includes his wife, Pat, as treasurer. "She's good with books," he said.

Five other Democrats are running for the nomination. Only one Republican had filed petitions by the deadline Thursday.

Suit Against Actor Dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A suit naming actor Chad Everett as the father of actress Sheila Scott's 4-year-old son has been dismissed by a judge who said the issue already has been decided by an out-of-court settlement.

EVERETT

Superior Court Judge Alfred Margolis dismissed the suit Thursday because a Sept. 20, 1973, settlement of an earlier suit declared that Everett was not the father. The settlement also provided Miss Scott with $55,000 plus attorney's fees and $275 per month for the child's support.

Attorney Caryl Warner, who brought the new suit as guardian for Dale Andre Lee Everett, contended the issue should be reconsidered because the child was not a party to the original case.

Auto Dealers Rap Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — New proposed federal regulations governing auto repairs would put some small repair companies out of business, the National Automobile Dealers Association says.

A Senate commerce subcommittee this week released a survey of state consumer agencies and said problems with auto repair shops constitute the most consumer complaints.

James B. Woulfe, spokesman for the dealers' association, told the subcommittee Thursday that new federal regulations "would reduce competition and offer the consumer fewer choices as to where to have his or her car repaired."

He endorsed a proposal by Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, that federal money be used to open auto diagnostic centers separate from repair shops.

She said earlier this week that at least $20 billion are wasted a year in unnecessary, inadequate, incompetent or fraudulent repairs.

Sales Of Cars Up In March

DETROIT (AP) — Auto sales warmed up with the weather and set a record for mid-March, U.S. automakers say.

Everybody shared in a 36.3 percent sales jump in the March 11-20 period, supporting manufacturers' forecasts that spring would pull them out of the sales doldrums that began last November.

But the results reported Thursday by the automakers were inflated by sales contests at General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. and a spillover of buyers who had stayed home during winter storms, the automakers acknowledged.

GM, helped by sales contests in all five divisions, saw sales jump nearly 63 percent in the March 11-20 period. It was a GM record for the period, the sutomaker said.

Even American Motors Corp. posted a 4 percent gain. Chrysler Corp., which also has suffered declining sales for months, recorded an 18.6 percent increase.

Analysts said the sales contests by GM and Chrysler cut into the performance by Ford Motor Co., which managed only a 1.2 percent increase.

Analysts had expected a strong showing, and said the industry has yet to set a sales pattern that would carry it to the record levels forecast for 1978 by GM. But the latest figures brought year-to-date sales to within 2.8 percent of last year's strong performance.

Early March a year ago was exceptionally strong, followed by a softer performance in the middle of the month. This year, early March sales suffered by comparison with the year-earlier period and were down 13.6 percent, while the latest period was up sharply.

The daily selling rate, an industry yardstick for comparing sales performance, was 37,739 for the period. The old March 11-20 record was 35,088, set in the boom year of 1973.

GM marketing vice president Robert D. Burger credited "the sales performance registered by our dealers in conjunction with aggressive merchandising activities by all our car divisions and the warming spring weather."

GM sold 192,785 domestically-built cars in the period, bringing its year-to-date total to within 1 percent of last year's.

Chrysler sold 31,693 cars in the period but remained 10 percent behind last year's Jan. 1-March 20 performance with 212,016 sales. AMC delivered 5,291 cars in the period and 32,921 since Jan. 1, down 24 percent for the year.

United States Birthrate Still Near Zero Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's birthrate is on the rise, but population experts say the nation may nonetheless reach zero population growth by the middle of the next century.

Provisional statistics compiled by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare show the birthrate climbed to 15.3 births per 1,000 population last year, up about 3 percent from the 14.8 per 1,000 recorded in 1976.

It was the first increase recorded in the annual birthrate since 1970 and reversed the slow decline of recent years.

But Paul Glick, population specialist for the U.S. Census Bureau, said the birthrate in the United States is still very low, and the number of children women expect to have remains at a statistical average of 2.1.

The level of no population growth is almost exactly 2.1 children per family, slightly higher than the apparent two children per couple, because some children never reach adulthood.

Glick said present projections indicate the United States will reach zero population growth about 2050, when the older generations that themselves were products of high birthrates have died off.

PILGRIMS MARCH IN JERUSALEM — Thousands of pilgrims, lashed by heavy rainfalls, trudged through Jerusalem's Via Dolorosa today to mark the crucifixion of Christ. The solemn procession ended at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, where the multitude waited their turn to file through the narrow door into the 800-year-old church, where tradition says is the spot where Christ was crucified. Youths Arrested For Shoplifting

Three Lubbock boys were arrested Thursday after they reportedly walked through a local supermarket and tried to leave without paying for the 29 assorted items they had stuffed inside their clothing.

Reports indicated the youths, two of whom are 11 years old and the other, 14, apparently were not too discreet as they made their way through 34th Street and Avenue Q United Super Market, putting the goods in their pockets, pants and socks.

According to police, the boys had passed the checkout stands and were heading for their bicycles when the long arm of the store manager nabbed the trio.

The $42.76 worth of non-perishable merchandise reportedly included just about everything from staplers to dog collars.

Elsewhere, it was business as usual for Lubbock burglars.

Whoever broke into a car parked in the 2400-block of Marshall Street late Thursday or early today made off with an $800 haul.

Susan Davis of Pampa said the goods stolen included clothing, a television set and assorted household items.

Linda Kay Crosby told officers someone got in her 1115 41st St. home by way of a back door Thursday and stole over $800 worth of property, including two televisions and some stereo equipment.

The same mode of entry apparently was used at Cecilia Chapa's 2613 Parkway Drive residence Thursday night. The complainant told police the $675 worth of goods taken included a stereo, clothing and household goods.

Ruth Nombrana of 1711 Zenith Ave. said burglars broke through a window at that residence Thursday and got away with her $325 television set.

A 53-year-old Lubbock woman, victimized by a youthful purse snatcher Thursday morning, wound up in Methodist Hospital's emergency room with a cut nose, lip, broken lower teeth and other injuries.

Geraldine Acuff said she had pulled her car to the rear of a business in the 1300-block of Avenue H late Thursday morning and was getting out when a young man appeared.

The suspect, believed to be in his late teens or early 20s, reportedly wore a black, leather, snap-brimmed hat, a black coat, blue jeans and tennis shoes.

As the woman left her car, the suspect grabbed the shoulder strap of her purse, ripped the pocketbook away and swung the victim face-first into the gravel.

Mrs. Acuff suffered numerous injuries when she was unable to break the fall, reports indicated, and the woman said her $100 glasses were broken.

Although an ambulance arrived on the scene minutes later, the woman opted to ride in a private vehicle to the hospital where she was treated and released.

The stolen purse reportedly contained personal items and about $35 cash.

Ricky Brazell of 3214 36th St. said he was only gone from his home for about 3 1/2 hours, but intruders made off with $1,300 worth of stereo equipment and other appliances.

Another burglary Tuesday or Wednesday at Dixie Lee Howell's 4416 75th Drive residence netted thieves $800 worth of property, including a tape recorder and a microwave oven.

Meanwhile, Butch Thompson of Modern Chevrolet said burglars took a battery, radio and tailgate from a truck early Thursday — a haul valued at $508.

Larry Lonis said thieves took 11 transmissions, seven transmission cases, a rear end and a wheelbarrow last weekend from his transmission outlet at 4519 34th St. The items were valued at $900.

Reporting stolen bicycles Thursday were Frances McClure of 1311 49th St., Joyce Biggs of 1314 49th St. and Doug Putnam of 5427 49th St.

Gene Blackburn of 2709 55th St. said vandals broke out his windshield Monday, causing $150 damage, while Sammy Barker of 510 40th St. reported the theft of his wheels and tires, valued at $145, Thursday.

A car stereo worth $65 was reported stolen from James Kennimer's vehicle Wednesday or Thursday while it was parked at his residence at 2105 28th St.

A bicycle and a child's toy were stolen from Richard Greenlee's 3515 38th St. residence a week ago. The items were valued at $40, Greenlee said.

Crowd Marches In Jerusalem On Good Friday

The solemn procession led by Franciscan friars in brown habits wound through the ancient lanes of Jerusalem's old city, stopping for devotions at the 14 stations of the cross.

The hour-long walk ended at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the traditional site of Calvary. In the courtyard of the 800-year-old church, groups of worshippers waited their turn to file through the wooden doors.

The Latin liturgy echoed off the stone walls inside the church as the pilgrims filed up the steep staircase to the spot where tradition holds Christ was crucified.

"In spite of the chaos during the procession, I felt a great deal of spirituality," said Rex Barnes, a pilgrim from South-West Africa. "This tends to strengthen my faith in Christianity.

Some of the pilgrims lit candles and stopped at Christ's tomb inside the same church, just a few yards from Calvary. The tomb will be the center of Easter Sunday celebrations.

Worshippers knelt to kiss the stone of unction, where Christ's body is said to have been wrapped in a shroud.

CROSS CARRIED — Hands reached out to touch the heavy wooden cross that was carried to Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulchre, erected on the spot where tradition says Christ was crucified, through the rain-lashed Via Dolorosa today by a group of Mexican pilgrims. (AP Laserphoto)

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Time For Show 'n Tally

PUBLIC FINANCING of private political campaigns—that thinly disguised scheme for letting Congressional candidates dip into the federal treasury even before they're elected—suffered a hopefully fatal blow this week.

By a 209-198 margin, the House of Representatives rejected rules by which it could consider new campaign contribution limits for its members and their opponents.

Surrounded by sweet-sounding rhetoric, the proposal has been inaccurately described by Common Cause as "a reform, sweeping and wholesome in its effect on Congress."

Instead, its approval actually would have led to a gross misappropriation of public funds, an abuse of power already sanctioned for Presidential hopefuls.

PROPONENTS of public financing cloak themselves in virtue and say it would put an end to the "dirty" business of a political candidate being beholden to his financial suporters after he has been elected.

If it's "dirty politics" to be responsive to, and responsible to, the people who elected you, then the whole concept of representative government established in this country 202 years ago is all wrong.

This is not to say there shouldn't be curbs on financial—and "volunteer" manpower—contributions to candidates. Full disclosure of contributions alerts voters to a candidate's true colors far more effectively in many instances than do his campaign speeches.

A dishonest politician will find ways to accept gifts from—and return favors to—those who want to improperly influence him, quite apart from their campaign contributions.

By putting the burden on candidates to raise their own campaign funds, though—instead of taking those funds out of the taxes we all pay—the politicians are forced to remember that the office belongs to the people, their constituents, after they get to Washington.

BY READING over the candidates' lists of contributors, moreover, the voters can "smell a rat" if it appears any one of them is a captive of a special interest group.

This is precisely why many liberal Congressmen favor public financing of their campaigns. If they don't have to worry about raising money, they can play to the gallery of those large groups of voters who want a handout from Washington and thumb their noses at the business and taxpaying community.

Similarly, a candidate who is buddy-buddy with the "fat cats" is revealed for what he is when he has to show their contributions to his campaign; if he could run on the public's money, he could mask his ties to, say, the oil and gas industry—with the voters being none the wiser.

Campaign contributions are not an evil in themselves. They are, in fact, a healthy part of a political system that will fall apart when the politicians no longer have to go to the people for campaign support.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

A Burden? Oops!

IN ATTACKING the Lubbock school district's proposed desegregation plan, Justice Department lawyers said it "places the burden of desegregation disproportionately on minority children."

Desegregation is a "burden" to minority children? Whatever happened to the bureaucrats' argument that desegregation is a blessing to minority children?

The government lawyers were undismayed by their slip of the pen, though. Since desegregating the third through sixth grades is a burden, they said, the way to improve the plan is to also desegregate grades kindergarten through second.

Presumably, by carrying the burden seven years instead of four the children will find the burden lighter.

IT WOULD BE like a breath of fresh spring air if the Justice Department lawyers and other integration zealots would show a willingness to give the school board's plan a chance to work.

In this instance, those who are against any degree of forced busing are showing a great deal more reasonableness and tolerance for other people's views than are some of those who favor a radical systemwide disruption of the educational process.

Federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward's desegregation order is a bitter pill for many but most of them appear willing to comply with the law if the school district's reasonable plan is approved.

One measure of the success of a desegregation plan is public acceptance so that the remedy has a lasting effect and does not result in white flight and resegregation.

The school district's proposal appears more likely to meet all legal and human concerns than any of the more radical ideas that some keep pushing.

Cheers to area Congressmen George Mahon, Omar Burleson and Richard White for voting "yea" to including a balanced federal budget as a mandatory goal of the inane Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

Jeers to Congressman Jack Hightower for voting against the balanced budget goal.

A certain Member of Parliament, said an opponent on the floor of the House of Commons recently, usually behaves as though he were giving an "imitation of a semi-house-trained polecat."

If you don't think The Guv'ment is extravagant, think on a little research done by Earth Resources Co. of Dallas:

The $11 billion budget proposed by the new Department of Energy for fiscal 1979, it said, is bigger than the value of all the oil produced in Texas ($10.3 billion in 1977).

On another front, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reports that the Department of Commerce is asking for $35,000 to hire a person to study the idea of a social performance index for business.

"Some are asking," Nation's Business magazine reported, "why the department—which has more than 38,000 employes—could not find someone on board to handle the study."

THE TEXAS COURT of Criminal Appeals has done it again.

It reversed the conviction of a Hunt County man on charges of armed robbery.

The indictment, solemnly intoned the Court's 7-2 majority, did not specifically describe the "corporeal personal property" he took from his victim at gunpoint.

Judge Jim Vollers, dissenting, gently chided his colleagues. If they'd read the law, he suggested, they'd see that taking any property whatsoever at the point of a gun is against the law.

What we need are more justices on the Court of Criminal Appeals with a grain of Vollers' commonsense approach to the law.

MEANWHILE, in Washington, the Supreme Court decided on a 6-3 vote that aliens aren't entitled to serve on state police forces.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William Brennan and John Paul Stevens argued—predictably—that an alien is just as entitled to carry a gun and arrest citizens as is anybody else.

The courts have held in the past that illegal aliens have the same rights as citizens to free educations and welfare assistance, but at least the Supreme Court's majority sees some slight difference between citizens and non-citizens.

That's not much hope to cling to, but it's better than nothing.

Democracy On A Mini-Scale

ST. CROIX, Virgin Islands—Sometimes the wisest political course is to do nothing at all. Such is the position of local Sen. John L. Maduro in a spirited dispute with Virgin Island Governor Juan Luis over the troublesome problem of immigration.

The proposition in contention is whether to pass a blanket amnesty, legalizing the citizenship of all persons now in residence, or to phase out the legalization of newcomers over a period of years. Gov. Luis insists it's an either-or decision. Vote it up or down.

But Sen. Maduro can't see why there's any hurry to pass legislation that hasn't been studied in depth. He thinks President Carter's liberal theories toward illegal aliens would be "disastrous" for the Islanders.

"WE DO NOT HAVE enough jobs now to go around, nor is there enough money to meet present budgets." He went on to say that a new flood of immigrants, legal or illegal, would multiply the population out of all reason.

Far better to let the present controls, imperfect as they are in keeping out unneeded or undesirable persons, stay in force. Maduro told the legislative session:

"Granting large-scale amnesty to illegal aliens is a form of madness, as it attempts to award illegality at the expense of those who uphold the law."

The Islands are in the midst of revising their constitution, and are doing so with all the democratic trimmings. The draft of the document, now fairly complete, must be subjected to public hearings, undergo another round of revisions in plenary sessions and finally be ratified by the people.

BUT THERE ARE many obstacles to the process. Nobody even pretends to know what the population is. Opportunities for abuse by subversive groups is manifest. Illiteracy is rife among the natives.

One idea whose time ominously approaches is to allow voters to choose their leaders by symbol. A distorted example, not a true one by any means, would be for ballots to be marked with the hammer and sickle, thus bringing about an influx of Reds to the government.

Crime has not spectacularly increased here, as elsewhere in the area, but this may be an illusion arising from the difficulty of getting convictions. The Senate recently revised the Criminal Code so that a felony can be proven in court only if the assailant brandishes a deadly weapon "with anger or malice" and has two eye-witness accusers against him in court.

An attempt to sharpen the teeth of the law was defeated, and every member of the 12th legislature received a furious letter from an outraged citizen. Mrs. Annette J. Healey hand-carried copies to the St. Croix members:

"As one constituent from St. Croix," she wrote in a document that received big newspaper spread, "I am amazed and appalled at the vote...that you need two witnesses to an armed incident for conviction of the perpetrator.

"Since you certainly did not vote as your constituents would have wished, perhaps you voted the way you did because you have been threatened at gunpoint—and that fear and terror I know from first hand and can understand."

She went on to say that in the past ten years, she had been subjected to 12 incidents of crime, and "not one" of them was solved.

Racism is happily non-existent among these charming people, but self-government comes hard.

Sylvia Porter:

Junk Calls Br-r-ring Prerecorded Nuisance

THE TELEPHONE, certainly a time- and money-saving convenience also has become a time-wasting, privacy-invading annoyance for countless numbers of Americans—resulting in a furious debate over whether and how to regulate telephone solicitation.

At issue basically are two significant rights: the individual's right of privacy, and the business organization's First Amendment right of commercial free speech.

The stakes in this issue are high; the solutions will not be simple. The phone is a vitally important tool for individual and for all types of American businesses, big and small.

As of now, the debate will center in Washington and California. The Federal Communications Commission is planning hearings and new regulations for telephone solicitation in general, and automated dialing devices in particular.

California's Public Utility Commission already is conducting an inquiry with the same goals.

MEANWHILE, lawmakers in a rash of states, as well as in Congress, have introduced a variety of measures to limit, control or ban certain types of unsolicited, or so-called "junk" calls.

Some legislators are focusing solely on automated dialing devices with prerecorded messages. These machines, oft referred to as "robot callers" can dial as many as 100 sequential numbers an hour, including unlisted ones.

When you pick up the phone, the device plays a tape-recorded sales pitch and records your answer. Although few businesses can use this technology economically (the machines cost up to $12,000) and fewer than 1,000 have been sold nationwide, my Washington associate Brooke Shearer has learned, nearly a dozen states have passed or are weighing laws to ban them.

Their measures, being considered in similar form by about 11 states, would give you the right to ask your local phone company not to give out your number to solicitors other than such groups as charities, political parties, pollsters, literary, scientific and nonprofit organizations.

And about four states are trying to regulate unsolicited calls by placing them under "cooling-off" regulations, now governing door-to-door sales. Under these rules, you usually can back out of a home solicitation sale up to three days after the sale.

Additional regulatory suggestions have come from such public interest groups as the Washington-based Citizens Communications Center and WATS. (Working Against Telephone Solicitation).

THEY PROPOSE THAT those of you who do not want to receive unsolicited sales calls could have a special symbol (such as an asterisk) next to your name in the phone directory that special tariffs might be slapped on firms using the phone to conduct sales and advertising campaigns, and that such firms be required to announce at the outset of a call that a prerecorded message will be transmitted.

Serious administrative and even constitutional questions are involved in many of these suggestions, though.

Why, for instance, under the Aspin-Anderson proposal, should a politician or a publishing firm be allowed to use the phone to solicit contributions or customers, while a vacuum or real estate salesman cannot?

As for compiling lists or adding symbols next to names of individuals who don't want the calls, business representatives note that most firms who use phone marketing do not rely on the phone directory, but instead consult preselected lists.

AND FINALLY, any ban on unsolicited phone calls could conceivably prevent many people from receiving, say, an official prerecorded hurricane warning.

Within 30 to 45 days, the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy is slated to release a 300-page report on the policy implications of automated and traditional phone communication.

Leading businesses currently using telephone marketing are forming a new group—the Telephone Marketing Coordinating Council—which will try to help shape the regulation that is certain to result.

"We have had more interest in this issue than in anything else we have looked into because it touches all of us," says a communications expert in the White House OTP. Think it through for yourself. What type of regulation would you like to have over "junk" calls?

James J. Kilpatrick:

An Offer Begin Can't Refuse

CAIRO—After 10 days in this benighted country, I have found a solution for the whole of the Mideast crisis. In the interests of world peace, I modestly pass it along.

In my scenario, Anwar Sadat, the president of Egypt, makes one more visit to Menachem Begin, the prime minister of Israel. After the usual pleasantries have been dispensed with, Sadat bespeaks himself, firmly but politely, as follows:

"Manny, my patience is exhausted. Either you give us a reasonable settlement, or—or, we surrender."

At that dreadful prospect, Begin trembles and turns pale. "But, but—," he says.

"I MEAN IT," says Sadat. "Come to terms or you can take over my trade deficit. You can repair the broken windows in the Cairo Museum. You can clean my filthy streets. You can solve the transportation mess.

"You can have the poverty, the squalor, the massive illiteracy. All yours, Manny, including the stinking camels! Whaddya say?"

It is an offer Begin can't refuse. Back in 1973, the conquering Israelis demonstrated their sound good sense. They got within 45 miles of Cairo—just 30 minutes by cab—and brought their tanks to a screeching halt.

With one more push, they could have had the whole schmeer. Prudence intervened. Judgment triumphed. The Israelis thought better of the prospect.

They backed off, and the rest is history.

TO VISIT EGYPT, however briefly, is to gain some understanding of the desperate fix in which this Arab republic finds itself.

If Egypt were a publicly traded corporation, it would be ripe for takeover. In terms of its gross national product, the trade deficit is pure disaster.

Egypt's population is growing at an annual rate of 2.3 percent. This could produce 80 million human beings by the turn of the century, double the estimated 39 million who now struggle for survival.

If an honest balance sheet could be prepared, Egypt would wind up bankrupt.

TO ITS CREDIT, Egypt is trying valiantly to educate more than 6,000,000 school children. It is trying to move ahead with health services.

It maintains 2,500 birth control centers in an effort to restrain the growth in population. But the social and economic problems outdistance the efforts at relief.

Every day, by one knowledgeable estimate, a thousand peasants move into Cairo from the country. They add to the unbelievable misery of the old city, where population densities approach 250,000 per square mile.

Egypt is starved for capital. Tourism offers potentially a nice return.

Last year a million tourists came to Egypt; they spent an estimated $370 million, which meant more to the economy than earnings from the Suez Canal. The Ministry of Tourism hopes for 1.7 million visitors in 1980, with spending of $850 million.

An additional 45,000 hotel rooms are in prospect, but when one watches the inefficient techniques of building construction, that goal has to be viewed with a skeptical eye.

THE ONE THING Egypt cannot possibly afford is another war with Israel or with anyone else. Even the rich and friendly Saudis could not bankroll such folly.

The dialogue in my scenario is written in jest, but this is graveyard humor.

Sadat's declarations of "non-negotiable principles" amount to no more than a pitiful bluff. In the fateful game of Mideast poker, he is down to a busted flush.

Beer Cans Recycled Into Solar Heating System

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A computer analyst at Kirtland Air Force Base here is recycling beer cans into a solar energy heating system.

"Based on my experiments," Nat Martz says, "I believe the beer can approach is the most economical method available to me. It will make it possible to eventually heat my entire house."

Martz, who works for the Air Force Systems Command's Weapons Laboratory at the air base, has spent evenings and weekends for the last two years designing, building and testing a prototype system.

It consists of a solar collector filled with 400 beer can halves and connected to an insulated bin of gravel, where the sun's heat is stored.

He cut the aluminum cans with a band saw and installed the halves with the open ends facing the sun in a glass-covered wooden box 7-feet long and 3-feet wide.

There's an open space between the cans and the glass-heated air is drawn from there with a fan and forced into a 2-by 4-by 6-foot concrete-block bin filled with gravel.

Martz plans to install 10 or more similar solar collectors on the south side of his seven-room house's pitched roof and build a gravel bin 10 times larger than the present one against an east wall.

"I believe I will reduce my heating bill 75 percent by using the sun instead of natural gas," says Martz, who has collected 3,000 additional cans for the project, total cost of which he estimates will be about $2,500.

"When the system is finished by next winter, air will be blown over the gravel to bring the stored heat from the bin into the house," he explains. "I plan to build a microprocessor computer to automatically control the air flow."

Martz says the idea is not a new one and that he has heard of a Colorado man who tried the scheme a decade ago. But his research turned up no more information, and he had to design the prototype from scratch.

He has spent $300 for materials so far, borrowed heat sensing instruments for his tests and has depended on friends for cans and assistance.

The prototype is a closed loop system and provides heat only for test purposes. It has generated temperatures as high as 300 degrees and operates at 80 percent efficiency on sunny days.

Most of the last two years were spent determining the best size for the collector, experimenting with different gravel sizes and amounts, and laying out air passages through the bin to provide even heat absorption. Martz also had to find the best position for the collector relative to the sun.

He calls the beer can halves "heat cups." They provide more heat absorption and reflecting area than corrugated or angled surfaces. And aluminum painted black absorbs and releases heat faster than other metals, he points out.

Wood partitions connected at opposite ends separate the cans, providing a channel for an even air flow.

Martz, who does his own carpentry, metal and masonry work at home, has also constructed a solar water heater hooked up to a home-built whirlpool bath. He is convinced that "everyone should and can have at least some sort of supplementary heating system if we are to really conserve energy."

"Building a beer can solar heater is no job for the person who is all thumbs," Martz concedes. "But anyone who is reasonably handy with tools should be able to do it."

Red Adair's Crew Arrives At Fire

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Red Adair's firefighting outfit is at the scene of a gas well fire on an isolated federal oil and gas lease 10 miles north of Navajo Dam.

When they arrived Wednesday, the Adair crewmembers didn't say when they would try to snuff out the blaze.

John Gumert of the Bureau of Land Management said the fire erupted Tuesday at a well being drilled for the Amoco Production Co. of Farmington.

STAN MARTIN, OWNER OF HI-FIDELITY, AND SOME OF HIS THOUGHTS ON HI-FI STEREO PRICING

Anyone can get a "price deal" on stereo equipment these days. Just look in any weekend Avalanche-Journal and you'll see stereo systems marked down on page after page.

But most "deals" on stereo systems which show big savings don't give you the equipment value that you pay for. Many times dicontinued, outdated components are used in a system along side of high value, name brand current components. Also watch the speakers! Many stereos have "private lable" speakers (these are speakers you buy only at XY Audio, and they're made by someone you've never heard of ... the regular price is inflated in order to show big savings in the system. More importantly is that the sound doesn't compare with name brand, quality engineered speakers). You'll never be satisfied if you buy such a system.

Hi-Fidelity wants you to be satisfied, therefore we never try to give you a "low priced system", but the very best system available at a low price.

That's what Hi-Fidelity is all about, so stop by and find out for yourself. You'll find the most inpressive and best equipped Hi-Fi Store in this area. Your first impression may make you feel it's too expensive, but don't let looks deceive you. As you look at one superb stereo system after another, you'll be impressed with the price too. Yes, you'll see systems costing thousands of dollards and worth every penny of it. At the same time you will discover good component systems that start at $349.95, and our compact stereos start at $149.95

There are a few other things to consider when comparing prices and equipment and that's our "Five Year Protection Plan," One Year Free Speaker Exchange, 20 Day Exchange Priviledge, Expert Consultation, Free Delivery and Setup, and a "biggie" ... our own quality technical lab to accomodate any service problem you might have.

By-the-way, this is our 20th year and we'll be around when others are not.

Chicago Man Continues Fighting For Youth Club

By DAVID TREADWELL

CHICAGO (AP) — The precinct officials dropped in to give him a "friendly warning." Housing officials padlocked his door and tried to evict him. Welfare workers suddenly decided his mother's benefits should be cut.

That was the beginning of Paul J. Hall's 16-year battle with City Hall to keep alive the boys club he founded in the basement of a housing project.

Hall was a teenager when it started. Now he's 31. By day, he's a social worker at the Ada McKinley School for retarded children. Nights and weekends, he can be found at the club's storefront headquarters on Chicago's Southwest Side.

"Paul Hall Warriors Drum and Bugle Corps" reads the sign outside the battered building on South Ashland Avenue. But the sign says nothing of the struggles Hall has endured to keep his dream alive.

"All I ever wanted was to prove to all the youngsters in the inner city that you don't have to get high to be cool, that you don't have to thump to be the baddest cat out there," Hall says.

But, he adds: "I'm a thorn in the side of the city. I've pulled kids off dope, got them out of gangs, kept them from dropping out of school. The city's 'paper' programs, with their millions of dollars in federal funds, haven't done a fraction of what this little club, with almost no money, has accomplished."

Hall says much of his trouble with City Hall stems from his failure to "play ball" with Claude Holman, who until his death a few years ago was alderman of the 4th Ward where the club was located. And his support of liberal independent political candidates earned the displeasure of the city's regular Democratic Party.

"If I had got myself together with the alderman, we'd be a lot further down the road," he says. "But I didn't want to sell my soul. I'd seen a lot of black men who tried to do something for the community sell their souls and get nothing but crumbs in return."

Hall was 14 and living in a public project called the Victor Orlander Homes when he formed the club. It started as a baseball team, with equipment and a basement clubhouse provided by the Chicago Housing Authority.

The club grew into a year-round organization attracting hundreds of neighborhood youths. Money for pool tables, ping pong equipment and clubhouse furniture was scraped together from bake sales and dances.

But Hall felt that if the club could do so well on its own, it could do a lot better with city support. So several hundred youngsters and parents petitioned for a full-scale recreational facility at the project. That's when his problems began.

"Suddenly I wasn't that cute little kid with the baseball team, I was a big troublemaker," says Hall. "This was in the '60s, and the powers that be didn't like blacks organizing for anything that even looked like it was political."

Precinct captains told him mass meetings were ill advised. Club members frequently found the door to the clubhouse padlocked or temporarily being used for storage. The public aid department reduced his mother's welfare check to $162 from $300 and the Housing Authority attempted to evict the family from their apartment.

Then a fire destroyed the clubhouse. Hall badgered housing officials for a new clubhouse and finally got a cramped, windowless space in the laundry room that was often without heat and frequently flooded by raw sewage seeping from faulty plumbing. He has photos of the drum and bugle corps, formed in 1969, practicing while sewage splashed around their feet.

In 1970, the city gave the club $18,000 in Model City funds. But the grant was not renewed the next year after the club ran into trouble with the Internal Revenue Service. Hall says he was not given proper guidelines about withholding taxes from salaries.

"It's just like I was set up, you know, to prove that we would fail," he says. "We're an embarrassment to the city. There're millions of dollars being spent on the gang problem and the drug problem, but the problems ain't going away. I'm saying, 'Look, I don't have much money, but see what I'm doing.'"

Finally, Hall decided to confront City Hall. In 1972, he organized a kneel-in at the Civic Center plaza that spread to busy State and Madison streets. Hall was arrested for disturbing the peace and blocking traffic. But as a result of the publicity, the Wieboldt Foundation, a private philanthropic group, gave the club $15,000.

That was enough for a down payment on the club's present quarters in the Southwest Side's Brainerd neighborhood and for new uniforms and instruments for the drum and bugle corps, many of whom are former youth gang members persuaded by Hall to trade in guns for horns.

Last year, 12 members of the drum and bugle corps received music scholarships from Prairie View A&M after officials of the predominantly black Texas college heard of Hall's work.

The Rev. George Clements of Holy Angels Catholic Church says Hall provides a positive image for youngsters shattered by poverty and unemployment and exploited by social service agencies.

"I've seen so many people who've come in under the guise of helping the inner city, when they have no concern for it except getting their paycheck," says Clements, who serves on the club's advisory board.

"When I first heard about the Paul J. Hall Boys Club in 1969, I figured it was one more ripoff. But Paul Hall is for real. I've seen him give up his own salary and go into debt to keep this club going."

Flora Bourgoyne, whose 14-year-old son Melvin joined the club last year, is one of Hall's most enthusiastic supporters and proselytizes for the club among her neighbors.

"He gives these kids what many of them don't get anywhere else," she says. "He tries to make them aware of what they can do in spite of the obstacles. He gives them discipline tempered with love. He gives them religion on a level they can understand."

A former member says: "He turned me from a boy into a man. I was hot and quick-tempered. I learned patience and how to respect people in order to gain respect."

Hall says he probably missed his calling as a minister, but those who know him say not by much.

It's Friday evening, and inside the clubhouse, candles glow on the homemade altar at one end of the meeting room. Music pours from an organ as Hall conducts a weekly prayer ritual. Scores of youngsters sit on chairs, hands joined, heads bowed.

"The Lord is our shelter in times of stormy blast, our refuge in times of trouble," he intones. "If you believe that we can make it, let me hear you say, 'It is so.'"

A chorus thunders in response: "It is so! It is so! It is so!"

Hall knows the odds. The club owes about $12,000 in back real estate taxes, and he says he never knows how he's going to meet the next mortgage payment or utility bill.

Last September, thieves stole $14,000 worth of musical instruments from the clubhouse. Hall sent his followers into the streets to beg for money to replace the horns.

Hall's battle with the city may have eased with the death last year of Mayor Richard Daley. Michael Bilandic, Daley's successor, gave the club $8,200 last summer to help with expenses for an Independence Day performance on the White House lawn.

And Bennett Stewart, alderman of the 21st Ward, says he is working with Hall to get the club support from federal and private sources.

"I'm impressed with Paul's sincerity and the kind of response he's getting from the kids in the program," Stewart says. "We don't have another program in that area or maybe in the whole city that's reaching out and touching kids like this fellow's program."

Hall says he and Stewart had a falling out after Hall backed an anti-administration candidate during the last aldermanic election.

Solons Pressured To Alte Social Security Plan

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., said it, and every lawmaker deep in his heart knows it: "The greatest weakness of Congress is that it reacts to problems rather than anticipates problems."

The latest example is the Social Security tax increase that Congress enacted last December to save the nation's retirement system from threatened bankruptcy. Although Republicans opposed it, it was hailed by President Carter and Democrats as a major legislative triumph.

But scarcely had the lawmakers ver the merits of the case, cons just weren't buying it, the law-found.

e last few weeks, sentiment to rel or part of the tax increase has been moving through Congress like a steamroller. Many members of Congress concluded the impact on consumers earnings would be too much and that taxpayers' unhappiness likely would show up in the congressional elections this fall.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., expressed the view of many when he said this week, "It's one of the worse things the Congress did. ... That which went wrong should be put right, as quickly as possible."

Why didn't the lawmakers realize what they were doing? None of the answers put forth are especially convincing, but that of Sen. Jacob K. Javits is the one most often advanced: "The time limit was the problem. ... Our first priority was securing the Social Security system."

The rub now, however, is how to put things right, as Ruess says Congress should do. Nobody disputes that the Social Security system could be bankrupt in a few years if new means of financing it are not found.

One option being put forth is similar to what Carter originally proposed last year, financing disability insurance and unemployment insurance from general revenues, meaning the income tax.

The Joint Economic Committee, headed by Bolling, recommended that this approach be seriously considered by Congress, saying it could save the Social Security fund $33 billion.

But to keep the budget deficit from increasing, it suggested that Carter's proposed $25 billion in income tax reductions be scrapped.

Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, questioned whether anything would be accomplished by using one tax to substitute for another. "A tax is a tax is a tax," he said. "You've done absolutely nothing to cure the problem."

And Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said substituting the income tax for the payroll tax would throw the Social Security system into the same "horrible, hopeless deficit" situation that the rest of the government is in.

Congress clearly doesn't know what to do. The House Ways and Means Committee narrowly defeated a proposal to block the 1979 increase, by the slimmest of margins, 19-18.

Partly because of the confusion, the Carter administration is recommending that Congress sit tight this year out of concern that it could take another hasty action it might later regret. But sitting tight means sitting tight through an election with the voters facing the certainty of a big increase on Jan. 1, 1979.

Of course, they would still get the $25 billion in income cuts proposed by Carter, assuming Congress enacts those.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., says there is no doubt where the blame for the present mess lies. "If we followed what the White House had sent over (last year), we wouldn't be in this problem. We went much further," he said.

But he, too, wants some moderation in the amount of the tax increase and is urging the White House to recommend a new approach.

It may, indeed, have to do something.

But Bolling has warned that because Congress reacts to problems rather than anticipates them, it runs the danger of making matters worse. "Congress overreacted last fall and winter and possibly it is overreacting now," he said.

Tattooing Rules Change Eyed In Maine

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — In most states, it's against the law to get a tattoo below your waist. But it may soon be legal in Maine.

The state Department of Human Services Wednesday held a public hearing on proposed changes in state tattooing regulations. Six of Maine's nine licensed tattoo artists were the only persons who attended.

"Eighty percent of the states that allow tattooing ban it below the waist," noted James Datsis, the man in charge of licensing Maine tattoo artists.

But Louis Robbin, of the Tattoo House in Waterville, argued, "It's your body you should be able to do what you want with it. It's your business."

After about an hour of discussion, Datsis said he would suggest the rules be changed to permit tattoos on all areas — except the head, neck, hands, feet, and private areas below the waist.

Regulations in effect since 1963 ban tattoos on the head, neck, hands and all areas below the waist.

Seaway To Raise Shipping Rates

MASSENA, N.Y. (AP) — Shipping cargo on the St. Lawrence seaway will be more expensive this year for the first time since the international waterway opened to shipping 19 years ago.

In anouncing new toll rates Wednesday, seaway officials said they expect the new rates to inhibit growth in shipping traffic, but no loss of business. The seaway is not tax supported and depends upon the tolls for its revenues.

French Literary World Follows Custom Of Awards Luncheons

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — On a snowy February day a group of bookstore owners meeting over champagne bestowed the 24th annual Prix des Libraires, or booksellers' literary prize, to some author few people had heard of and might never again.

It was the 1,834th French literary prize for 1977.

Nearly 2,000 such prizes are handed out in France every year, a world record.

And this being France, the awarding and discussion of most of the prizes naturally is staged over truffled sauces and great wines in the renowned restaurants of Paris. Thus the prize ritual usually combines the two major pastimes of this country which (despite what some eyebrow-wiggling foreigners may think) are eating and talking.

The prize that started it all, and is still the most prestigious, is the Prix Goncourt. It was established in 1903 by bachelor author Edouard Goncourt who electrified the Paris literary world by leaving his estate upon expiring in 1896 as a prize fund for beginning authors.

Goncourt specified in his will that the judges, established authors whom he named as "Goncourt Academy" members, would select the prize winners over dinner, later changed to lunch.

This gourmet custom has been followed by other prize-awarding groups that mushroomed. Since food is part of the ritual, news stories of the seemingly never-ending prizes often list the menu. The 1953 Goncourt prize went down in literary history for oysters, trout in salmon sauce, chicken sauteed in champagne and fruit souffle washed down with a blanc de blanc wine.

The famed chef Auguste Escoffier prepared the first Goncourt academy feast in the Grand Hotel in 1903. After trying several restaurants the Goncourt academicians wound up in 1914 in the Restaurant Drouant on the Place Gaillon near the Opera.

They have eaten their way through the award luncheon at Drouant ever since except when the group repaired in 1953 to the apartment of Colette, the writer and academy member, for her 80th birthday because she no longer could leave her bed.

After the Goncourt's first prize created a sensation in Paris, other groups rushed to give their own prizes since the French are individualists. By now it is a rare author who can escape receiving one.

The three other major prizes are Prix Renaudot (given the same day as the Goncourt and in the same restaurant but with a different menu), Prix Interallie and Prix Femina. The latter was organized by women authors to protest the well-known misogynism of Edouard Goncourt (who once said, "Love? It takes me five hours a week between 10 and 11").

Then there are several prizes for history books, poetry and memoirs. The Prix Renaissance goes to "the book contributing the most to the renaissance of human values." Prizes go to the best books on tourism and law.

Commercial firms from perfume makers to insurance companies give prizes for books on those fields. The Prix Mystere funded by the cognac industry celebrates the year's best whodunit in which the secret agent or private eye imbibes cognac.

Foreigners in Paris have joined the prize craze. One of the final 1977 awards handed out in February was the Prix Ambassadeurs, awarded by a jury of ambassadors for the best political work.

As competition to the expensive Drouant Restaurant, a Prix Des Deux Magots is awarded by that celebrated Left Bank bar. There even is Le Prix Des Qautres Juries awarded to one of the authors who fails to win one of the big four prizes. And, inevitably, there is the Prix Epicure, given by the Hotel PLM Saint Jacques "for the best work on gastronomy."

Why so many literary prizes?

"Because people read books in France," was the brisk reply in an interview with author Armand Lanoux, 1963 Goncourt winner and now one of the 10 permanent Goncourt academy winners who spend the year reading candidate books.

"The prizes sell millions of books," said Goncourt President Herve Bazin.

Publishing industry experts say a novel in a bookstore window draped with a paper band announcing "Prix Goncourt" can sell 500,000 copies in France, so winning authors stand to make big money. They also are front paged and televised as much as film stars.

The prize money is negligible. The original Goncourt prize established by his will was 5,000 francs but devaluations have whittled this to 50 francs ($10). Few winners cash their checks, complains the Goncourt treasurer, but frame it as a momento.

The winner of the Grand Prix des Vins du Perigord, awarded by Perigord wine producers to a book mentioning their product, receives a half barrel of wine. The Prix Scarron, given to the best humor book by a group of invalids in the name of paralyzed 17th century humor writer Scarron, receives 500 10-centime pieces ($10).

For Goncourt judges, the Drouant restaurant reserves a special room, No. 15, furnished with a huge round table, crystal chandelier and blue satin Louis XV armchairs. The judges select the winner before eating so arguing cannot spoil the meal. According to Goncourt's will, the meal must cost 20 francs. Today the repast costs 200 francs but Drouant still charges the original price (20 francs now is $4.50).

The Goncourt prize has a tumultuous history. Three academy members, including poet Louis Aragon, resigned in fury when their candidates did not win.

When secretary Lanoux emerged from Drouant to announce the 1977 prize to the usual mob of waiting press and hopeful authors, one losing writer was so mad that he flattened a cream pie on Lanoux's face while TV cameras recorded the event for the evening newscast.

Chrysler Executives Receive 30 Percent Pay Raise

By JEFFERY L. SHELER

DETROIT (UPI) — Top executives of financially strapped Chrysler Corp., which posted a $50 million fourthquarter loss, received pay raises averaging 30 percent last year, company records show.

However, "incentive" bonuses paid to the officials fell drastically from 1976 levels, cutting the executives' overall earnings last year to less than half of their 1976 pay.

Chrysler reported the figures in a proxy statement to stockholders released in advance of the company's annual meeting slated May 2.

The largest pay raise went to Chrysler Chairman John J. Riccardo, the firm's highest paid officer, who received an additional $69,019 in 1977, boosting his salary to $314,852.

President Eugene A. Cafiero was next with a $65,963 raise, increasing his annual salary to $284,713.

Other officials ranking among the top moneymakers were executive vice presidents R.K. Brown, who was paid $173,481, up $38,481; and G.H. Gillespie, whose salary was $167,221, up $48,888. Gillespie resigned Feb. 28 in a shakeup of the company's financial office.

Executive bonuses, which are based on Chrysler's profit performance for the year, were less than one-third of 1976 levels, the company said. Riccardo's bonus totaled $45,120, compared with $445,900 in 1976. Cafiero received a $40,760 bonus, compared with $401,300 the previous year.

The document also included nominations for the corporation's 18-member board of directors, a new stock-issue proposal and four proposals from shareholders.

All 18 incumbent members were renominated.

Solon Seeks Control Of 'Angel Dust'

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Haunted by grotesque visions, a Los Angeles teenager gouged out his own eyes. Another drank rat poison to kill the rodents he believed had infested his body.

And a third pulled out his own teeth with pliers.

The above examples of such morbid behavior echoed through the Senate this week as Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, introduced legislation aimed at halting the illegal manufacture and sale of phencyclidine, or PCP. The drug, originally developed as a tranquilizer for elephants and other large animals, also goes under the street names of "Angel Dust" and "Hog."

Bentsen said unpublished Drug Enforcement Administration statistics show that confiscated dosage units of PCP more than doubled between 1976 and 1977, rising from 1.7 million to 3.5 million.

"The widespread use of PCP is a plague on the youth of America," Bentsen began. "The drug can kill or cripple a mind. It's the most dangerous illicit drug in use today. For the price of a school lunch, an eighth grade student can literally blow his mind, possibly forever."

Bentsen said he got the accounts of teen-agers pulling their own teeth, drinking rat poison and gouging out their eyes, from the files of the Los Angeles Police Department.

"In one recent incident, a teen-ager murdered his mother and father with a high-powered rifle while suffering from PCP hallucinations," Bentsen added.

Bentsen's proposed bill seeks to reduce the availability of the drug by requiring positive identification of persons purchasing piperidine, a chemical used to cure rubber and a key ingredient in manufacturing PCP.

The bill would also increase the maximum penalty for trafficking in PCP from five years and a $15,000 fine for the first offense to 10 years and a $150,000 fine.

"Any person with a few hundred dollars and perverse instincts can manufacture Angel Dust at home or in the back of a van," Bentsen said. "He runs a risk of blowing himself up in the process but this does not deter these entrepreneurs of derangement."

Oil Inventories Continue Decline

NEW YORK — Inventories of distillate oil, used primarily for home heating purposes, continued to decline in the latest statement week, according to statistics released by the American Petroleum Institute.

For the week ended March 17, supplies of distillates were down from 160.8 million barrels in the previous week, but were well ahead of the 142.6 million barrels on hand at this time last year. With the approach of warmer weather, current distillate supplies are more than adequate, the API said.

In the latest week, gasoline supplies increased to 273.5 million barrels from 270.0 million barrels a week earlier and also were well ahead of the 256.5 million barrel level in the comparable week a year ago.

Crude oil imports of 5.6 million barrels daily were virtually unchanged from the preceding week but were lower than the 6.2 million barrels imported daily in the same week in 1977.

Carter Weighs Urban Plans

By MARC ROSENWASSER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, ending his agonizing search for a national urban policy, today weighed proposals that sources said may provide an additional $3 billion for the nation's cities.

Carter was to make his final decisions today and announce them Monday.

Knowledgeable sources who asked not to be identified outlined for The Associated Press several of the "leading options" among 200 pages of proposals sent to Carter last Monday by domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat. Eizenstat huddled Thursday with key senators to discuss the policy.

The urban policy has been in the works for a year. It was to have been unveiled last summer, but the task proved far more difficult than expected and the release was delayed until this spring.

Carter drew fire last summer when black leaders, mayors and union officials said he was ignoring his urban constituencies. At that point, Carter ordered his staff to step up work on the urban plan.

They emerged this week with a lengthy four-part proposal covering economics, community and human development, neighborhoods and government reform. For every program, Carter's staff gave him several options as to what course he might take.

The major thrust of Carter's plan is designed to stimulate business activity in areas that find it difficult to attract investment. Also among the proposals before the president are two that would immediately help some local governments that are battling to balance their budgets.

One proposal would provide a half-billion dollars for state and local governments hard pressed by rising welfare costs. The other is an adjustment in anti-recession assistance which would more than triple next year's payout to more than $1 billion.

Carter also is considering a possible requirement that urban impact reports accompany all major legislative initiatives. He reportedly will favor financial incentives for states to aid their cities.

In addition to new spending programs, Carter is expected to restate some recent proposals and to alter existing programs. The sources said these elements of his policy could bring the total pricetag to $5 billion.

About $80 billion now flows from Washington to state and local governments, according to a Carter budget analysis.

In remarks Thursday, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris said, "The targets of our urban policies — blight, unemployment, deteriorated housing — are the problems causing people to reject the cities as residential areas."

The White House asked HUD to develop new housing subsidies for the working poor, and they are among the final proposals before Carter.

There are several proposals to spruce up the cities. Among them: $100 million for urban parks, $15 million for neighborhood rehabilitation and $40 million for an urban volunteer program.

But the big dollars are being earmarked for a series of job-creating economic development programs.

Carter is weighing four options for a National Development Bank, once proposed as the Urban Bank, and one option for no bank at all. Under the leading option, the bank would provide low-cost loans at 7½ percent interest to certain businesses that locate or expand in distressed cities or rural areas.

One source said Carter favors a $1 billion public works fund that would allow local governments to hire hard-core unemployed to help renovate public buildings, parks and other facilities.

Another job creation scheme, sources said, includes $1.5 billion in employment tax credits for firms that hire young people, whose jobless rate is running about double the national rate.

Also in the works is a boost in the investment tax credit from 10 percent to 15 percent for businesses in distressed areas.

Other elements involved in the last-minute urban deliberations are a plan to provide technical assistance grants to localities that are struggling to meet environmental standards, along with an additional $200 million for urban transporation and $50 million for community health programs.

Senate Hears Battle On Vegetable Market

By BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has decided to "sacrifice" Florida vegetable growers by allowing low-priced imports from Mexico, a Florida farmer charges.

Not so, spokesmen for Mexican producers and American importers reply.

The latest round of arguments in a running battle over the market for winter-season vegetables was laid out this week in a hearing before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee.

For Florida farmers, who claim they're being put out of business by low-priced imports — and who assert that Mexican growers are allowed to use pesticides which are banned in the United States — the complaints were outlined by witnesses including Johnnie Goodnight of Immokalee, Fla.

Goodnight said Mexican producers have taken more than half the total market for many vegetables. At times, he said, Mexicans have sold their produce below cost and many Florida growers have already gone bankrupt as a result.

In addition, he said, Mexican law allows farmers there to use many pesticides which are benned in the United States.

"There are tolerance levels for residues of pesticides which I am prohibited entirely from using ... It seems to me that if a pesticide is dangerous enough to justify prohibiting its use on American-grown produce, then there shouldn't be any reason for allowing it to appear on foreign-grown produce," Goodnight added.

The Florida farmer said officials refuse to crack down on Mexican imports because the government wants Mexican cooperation in fighting the drug traffic, in sales of natural gas and in coping with illegal immigration problems.

"We feel that we ... have been picked to be sacrificed to achieve what are perceived to be important national goals," Goodnight added.

On the other side of the debate, Jose Carlos de Saracho, president of an association of Mexican growers, denied flatly that Mexican farmers are deliberately keeping prices low.

"As a grower, I would like to get more money for my produce. But there are more consumers than there are growers, produce brokers or store owners. I cannot control prices. I sell at the price the consumers are willing or able to pay," de Suracho testified.

As for pesticides, American importers from Nogales, Ariz., who buy Mexican vegetables for sale in the United States, said charges they use chemicals banned on American farms are not true.

"Though Mexican farmers are not required by Mexican law to use the same pesticides as Americans use, nevertheless Mexican growers voluntarily do," officials of the West Mexico Distributors Association of Nogales said.

"The (Mexican) National Farmers Union has a complete compendium of pesticides compiled by the United States Environmental Protection Agency, which is updated every month, and polices the use of 'acceptable' pesticides by Mexican farmers," the Association said.

Edward Stoller, president of the importers' group, said a Mexican farmer was asked why he should be allowed to sell his vegetables in the United States.

"I awake ... to the sound of my General Electric alarm clock," the farmer said, according to Stoller's account.

"I hurry to the kitchen to plug in my Mr. Coffee coffee maker. Then I shave with my Gillette razor (and continue dressing in) Jockey shorts and Levi pants and shirt. I get into my Ford pickup to drive out to my farm (and see) my foreman sipping a Coca Cola, for he has started work early as the Caterpillar tractor is in need of repairs.

"... The new planter from Farm Machinery Company arrived, but the foreman was unable to try it out because the seed had not arived from Florida as yet. I then went to my office, where my secretary was busy typing on her Underwood typwriter and checking the previous day's invoices with her Monroe calculator.

"Yes, I think I should be allowed to export my produce to those customers," the farmer added.

Prison Term Assessed In Area Death

A-J Correspondent

LOVINGTON, N.M. — Clarence Ronald "Ronnie" McCoy was sentenced to prison for a 2-to-10-year term when he appeared before District Judge N. Randolph Reese in district court at Lovington, N.M., Wednesday.

He pleaded guilty to a voluntary manslaughter charge in connection with the death of his wife, Donna, 21, a grocery checker for a Hobbs, N.M., supermarket.

According to District Attorney Dave Hoglund, McCoy was charged with voluntary manslaughter instead of murder because evidence in the case showed that Mrs. McCoy was killed in the sudden heat of a quarrel and there was no evidence of premeditation.

Hoglund said McCoy and his wife argued, and Mrs. McCoy began yelling at her husband. He placed his hands around her neck to quieten her and she was strangled to death, the district attorney added.

Mrs. McCoy's death occurred the night of Nov. 4, 1976, at their mobile home at Westward Trailer Court in Hobbs. Investigators said McCoy then took her body to an abandoned oil well location in the sand hills about 20 miles west of Hobbs and buried her in a shallow grave.

McCoy reportedly then took the couple's 18-month-old daughter, Christa, to Odessa where he abandoned her in a shopping cart at a supermarket. The child was found Nov. 5.

The little girl was identified by a Hobbs woman who had been her babysitter when she saw the child's picture in the Hobbs newspaper.

The body of Mrs. McCoy was discovered by arrowhead hunters March 20, 1977, and was reported to have the appearance of a mummy because the advanced state of decomposition.

McCoy was arrested by Hobbs police Nov. 15, 1976, as a fugitive from justice with charges pending against him in Texas. The oilfield electrician was released to Lubbock authorities but was later released on bond. He returned to Hobbs but disappeared the day his wife's body was found.

He was arrested earlier this month in El Centro, Calif., on felony warrants for issuing worthless checks and signed a waiver to return to Hobbs.

Child Burned In Car Crash

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — A 6-year-old Hale Center child was in critical condition in Brooke General Hospital burns center here today, following a bizarre, one-vehicle accident near Abernathy in which a truck overturned and burst into flames.

Rachel Salazar, one of three persons injured in the crash, suffered burns over 90 percent of her body, a spokesman at Brooke said.

The child was taken first to Methodist Hospital in Lubbock and originally was due to be flown to the burn center at Parkland Hospital in Dallas. Those plans were scrapped, however, due to stormy weather in the Dallas area.

The other occupants of the vehicle, Juanita Salazar and Gloria Ybarra Barron, both of Hale Center, received only minor injuries in the crash.

The mishap occurred about 3:20 p.m. on US 87 when the right, rear tire on the Salazar's 1968 Ford pickup truck left the vehicle, causing the truck to overturn.

The vehicle was engulfed in flames, a DPS spokesman said, and was destroyed at the site four miles north of Abernathy.

Of all the trucks registered in the United States, more than 24.6 million units, or about 95 percent are privately owned. The government, which has the largest vehicle fleet in the country, had 191,000 vehicles in 1975.

Course Slated In Scheduling Of Projects

A short course in project scheduling techniques, with emphasis on the critical path method, will be held April 15, 22 and 29 and May 6 at Texas Tech.

The course is sponsored by the Department of Engineering Technology and the Division of Continuing Engineering Education. Co-sponsors are the Construction Specifications Institute, Lubbock Chapter; Women in Construction, Lubbock Chapter; and the Construction Specifications Institute, Texas Tech Student Chapter.

The course is open to the public. Advance registration is required, with a $50 fee in advance, as enrollment is limited. Deadline for registration is April 11. A certificate will be presented to each participant.

The course will be taught by Dr. Fred P. Wagner Jr. of the Engineering Technology Department. It will cover bar charts for scheduling, developing network and time calculations, scheduling with resource constraints and time-cost trade-offs, methods, computer scheduling with sample outputs, and practical problems of activity definitions, logical relation and activity duration.

Wagner has taught construction management courses at Tech for the past four years. Prior to that, he spent 15 years with the Texas State Highway Department, working with right-of-way description, planning, design and construction supervision. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, American Association of Cost Engineers and American Society for Engineering Education.

Health Commission Eyes Area Request

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission is to consider an application by Home Help Care, Inc., of Lubbock to establish a home health agency to serve the Lubbock area at its meeting Thursday.

The application indicates the services are to include skilled nursing care, physical therapy, medical social services, home health aides, occupational therapy, speech therapy, respiratory therapy, diabetic education and nutritional counseling.

Brown Warns Homeowners

UUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown today warned Texas homeowners to be alert for bogus landscape experts attempting to sell poor quality lawn plants.

"We have had reports from Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston areas that itinerant peddlers have been working neighborhoods selling worthless plants," Brown said. "They appear in large metro areas every spring and are difficult to catch because they have no local address."

Brown said the salesmen approach homeowners with a load of seemingly healthy plants, and offer to landscape a lawn at bargain prices.

"But the plants are frequently only cuttings with no root systems, or the stock is often unsuited to our Texas climate," hs said. "By the time the homeowner discovers a collection of wilted stubs some time later, the 'experts' have skipped town. There is little the victim or police can do to catch them."

Brown said homeowners approached by door to door plant salesmen should check with the Better Business Bureau or the nearest Department of Agriculture office. He said the department licenses all legitimate Texas nurserymen.

Survivors include his son, Joe Bill of San Pedro, Calif.; a brother, Edwin of Fort Worth; and a sister, Mary Nix of Dallas.

Fire Destroys Ship Terminal

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Fire swept through the Pan Atlantic Terminals today, destroying almost one-third of the wharf's warehouse space and lightly damaging a ship, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

More than 100 city, Navy and Coast Guard firemen fought the blaze, which was discovered at 3:15 a.m. by a night watchman aboard the Virginia Clipper. Coast Guard Cmdr. R.E. Sawyer said the 328-foot ship sustained minor damage.

Robert B. Nowitzky, president of Pan-Atlantic Terminals, said about 40,000 square feet of the terminal's 102,000 feet of warehouse space was destroyed. The cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Fire officials had estimated the damage at $750,000 early in the day, but later withdrew that figure, saying they could not immediately provide an estimate.

The largest warehouse was detroyed with all its contents, including 5,000 bales of cork from Spain and Portugal.

The warehouse and about 500 feet of the pier were heavily damaged. Although the blaze had been brought under control, firemen said scattered fires were still burning beneath the pier and that it could be as late as Saturday before they all are extinguished.

Water Agency Plans Meet

The Texas Association of Rural Water Corporations will present a one-day workshop here April 5 at the Holiday Inn, 6624 Ave. H.

The workshop, intended to inform water agency officials about the new federal Safe Drinking Water Act and its requirements, will begin with registration in the Casa Grande Room at 8:15 a.m.

Participating in the program will be representatives from the Texas State Health Department, Texas Public Utilities Commission, Farmers Home Administration, Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas A&M University Extension Service.

Admission is free. Further information can be obtained by writing P.O. Box 9651, Austin, 78766, or by calling 512-452-9188.

California Rice Crop Expected To Be Large

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices and an improved water outlook in California point to an even larger 1978 rice crop than indicated earlier this year, says the Agriculture Department.

In January, surveys indicated that farmers would plant about 2.5 million acres of rice this year, up about 10 percent from 1977.

"However, since then, continued strong prices and a vastly improved irrigation water situation in California suggest that actual plantings may be larger than January indications," the department said this week.

Stocks of rice carried over at the beginning of the 1977-78 crop year last Aug. 1 were a record 40.5 million hundredweight, up from 36.7 million a year earlier because of large production in 1976 and a failure of domestic and export use to keep pace.

Consequently, the season average price of rice from the 1976 harvest dropped to $7.02 per hundredweight from $8.35 for the 1975 crop.

Further, by last Aug. 1 nearly one-half of the rice carryover was tied up in Commodity Credit Corp. ownership, taken over under the department's loan program when producers decided not to redeem their grain.

Meanwhile, rice exports this season have picked up and domestic food use is continuing its moderate upward trend although brewery use of rice may drop for the first time since 1970-71.

"These developments, especially the very strong early season commercial demand, have lifted prices more than $4 per hundredweight above a year ago," the department said. "Farm prices will likely remain near the $11 per hundredweight level for the remainder of the season."

Real Issues Faced By Chamber

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Once they used to promote turkey raffles or run benefit dances or crown a teen-age queen of something or other, but now that's all passe.

Chambers of commerce today are more likely to be involved with real challenges, such as school integration, arresting inner city decay, planning energy resources and promoting better work relationships.

"There was a tendency for chambers not to get involved in anything controversial," said Clyde Cole, chairman of the Analysis

American Chamber of Commerce Executives. "Now we're involved in substantive issues."

Such as in Tulsa, Okla., where Cole is executive vice president of the metropolitan chamber, which threw its support behind a plan to peacefully integrate the once totally segregated school system.

"The business community had heard about a lot of communities being torn apart on this issue," said Cole, and it decided that "from a practical and pragmatic point of view this was not for Tulsa."

Or as in Jacksonville, Fla., where the chamber provided the original impetus for reorganizing and consolidating local governments into one unit, with a resultant decline in the millage rate for nine years.

Or as in Hartford, Conn., where the chamber arranged for the loan of corporate executives to provide free management expertise to school administrators.

Or as in Denver, where the chamber helped consolidate all transportation functions under a single metro transport authority. Or as in Milwaukee, where the chamber helps counsel ex-offenders.

Cole vows the old days are gone. For 50 or 75 years, he says, the personal goal of many chambers was exemplified by a slap on the back or dollar day sales. "That's gone forever in most cities," he promises.

Today, Cole insists, chambers of commerce are busily building cities. "There is nothing more challenging," he asserts. As he continues speaking he offers proof that the old chamber spirit still exists.

"When I get home at night I can't wait to get back the next day," he declares. Why? "Because it's so exciting."

That might be so for Cole, but why do so many business executives, including chamber members, remove their companies almost overnight from the inner city to the suburbs or even beyond?

Chamber officials have a facility with such questions. "They didn't leave because they lost confidence in the city," Cole replied. "They lost confidence in the processes available to them to deal with the problems at that time."

But now, he continues, the new, more responsible, more responsive, more community-oriented chambers are tackling the very problems that forced some of their colleagues to pull up stakes.

They are more interested in total programs of community development, says Cole.

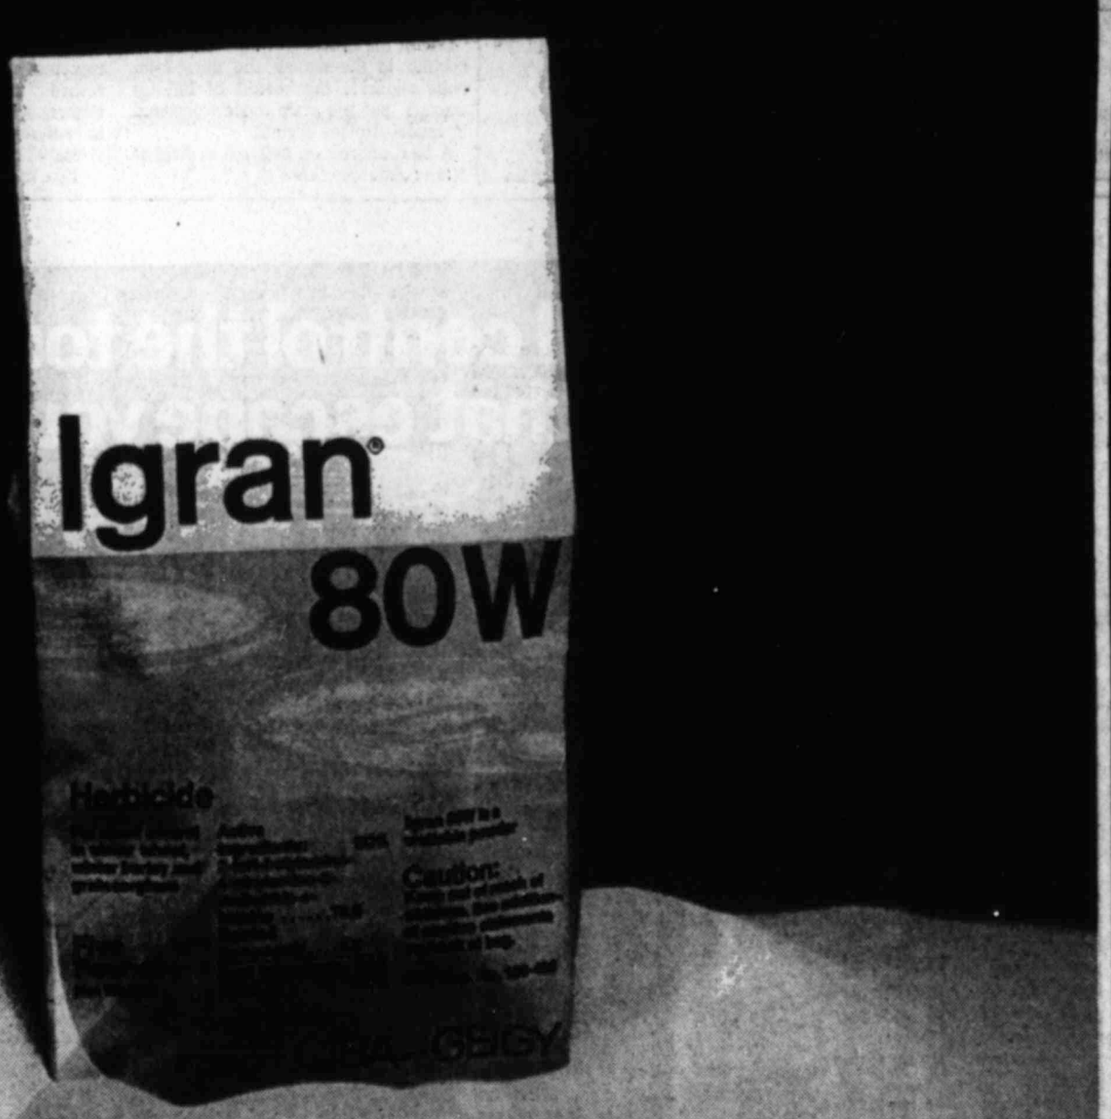
If you grow sorghum on sandy soils, it's time you tried Igran.



Because Igran® is the sorghum herbicide that really fits the sandy soil conditions in the South High Plains and South Rolling Plains.

And because it fits, Igran is easier to use. There's no guesswork or experimenting with rates. Just follow the label directions.

Then watch your sorghum come through clean and healthy. Because Igran controls those tough broadleaf weeds like carelessweed and annual morningglory. Controls them early, before they have a chance to rob your crop of vital soil moisture and nutrients.

Igran. Once you try it, you'll keep on using it. Because now you've got a sorghum herbicide that really fits your sandy soil conditions.

Implements Large, Small Spotlighted

The most modern farm implements and equipment in the world will be on display here March 30-April 1 at the first South Plains Farm Show in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The free, three-day exhibition, bringing exhibitors from across the country, also will feature a public forum on the economic plight of the farmer, a natural fibers fashion revue, a special day for members of the Future Farmers of America (FFA) and a championship micro-mini tractor pulling contest.

The event is being sponsored by the Southwest Hardware and Implement Association (SWHIA), the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

"Farmers like to see what's new in farm equipment" and several million dollars worth of farm machinery will be on view in the largest such show ever assembled on the South Plains, said Gene Cudd, president of Hansford Implements in Spearman and president of SWHIA.

Most farm machinery is getting more refined, Cudd said, requiring less labor to farm acreage than ever before.

Before mechanization, he noted, one man and a team of horses could plow about three acres a day. That meant the farmer might be able to grow about 80 acres of crops annually.

Today, one American farmer feeds more than 50 people a day.

"We've got to operate more efficiently today than we did yeaterday," especially in the face of the economic pinch being felt by farmers across the land, said Dale Elms, president of Elms Equipment of Lubbock and a past-president of the association.

Trends in farm equipment are efficiency and "as opposed to other nations of the world, driver comfort," Elms said.

Not only farmers, but city dwellers unfamiliar with farming will find the show informative and entertaining, Elms said. Hundreds of dollars worth of door prizes will be given away each day.

The displays of equipment will be open in the civic center from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, March 30, and Saturday, April 1, and from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, March 31.

At 10:15 a.m. Thursday, March 30, spokesmen for the American Agriculture Movement, the National Farmers Union and an agricultural economist from Texas A&M University will discuss "The Agricultural Dilemma: To Farm or Not to Farm," in the public forum at the civic center. The panelists then will face questions from a reaction panel of farm writers and broadcasters.

At 2 p.m. the same day, sewing enthusiasts from throughout the South PLains will display their handwork in the Natural Fibers Fashion Revue. Television personality Jane Prince will provide commentary for the show, with hundreds of dollars in prizes being awarded to the winning entries.

Friday, March 31, has been designated "FFA Day" and will feature two micro-mini tractor pulls, at 2 and 6 p.m.

The competitions are sanctioned by the National Micro-Mini Tractor Pullers Association.

One of the fastest-growing competitive hobbies in the nation, the micro-mini pulls duplicate the contest of full-size tractors, but use scale models powered by model airplane engines.

A final micor-mini pull will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 1.

Farmers, Administration At Odds On Ag Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The portion of pending emergency farm legislation most supported by protesting farmers is unacceptable to the Carter administration, presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday.

The part of the bill Powell criticized would establish a "flexible parity" system which would provide higher government price guarantees to wheat, feed grains and cotton producers who reduce acreage up to 50 percent. It is endorsed by American Agriculture.

Powell told reporters that the other major elements were an improvement but still "do not conform at all with our program."

The White House is expected to announce within days new actions to boost the farm economy and head off drastic changes in federal programs by Congress.

Powell's comments were the clearest statement yet of an administration position on the measure, designed to boost support prices while discouraging production.

Spokesmen for the American Agriculture protest group, angered that Congress took an Easter holiday without approving legislation initiated by the Senate Tuesday, promised Thursday to keep pressure on the lawmakers at home until they return to work April 3.

The farmers also told a news conference they intend to campaign this fall against members of Congress who oppose the bill.

The measure was sent to a conference committee late Wednesday but the panel recessed for the holiday without acting on it.

The measure had not yet been printed or subjected to economic analysis by administration and congressional budget-watchers.

The bill also includes provisions for paying farmers an average of $75 an acre for taking additional land from crop production, and higher supports for the major crops.

At the urging of Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the House rejected a move to commit its conference members to support of the flexible parity plan which had been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Don Patterson, The Plains, Va., told reporters that the House leadership rushed "to throw a sanded bone" to farmers when it sent the farm package to conference in hopes it will "dilute the strength" of the farm movement.

"Like the beard of Samson, the American family farm is the source and rootstock of America's strength," Patterson said. "If our leaders have become so effete as to have lost touch with this source of strength, the nation is indeed in worse condition that we have realized."

Rick Rodgers, Klamath Falls, Ore., said that "this is really the first time congressmen went home and are not going to be allowed to lie to their constituents like they always have before.

"We've been here and we've seen for ourselves as to what they do, and this time they're not going to get away with it," he said.

The farmers noted that Foley last December introduced a resolution calling for 100 percent of parity as a legitimate goal of farmers. They also said that Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, when he was a Minnesota congressman in 1976 introduced a resolution calling on the Ford administration to raise price supports to 90 percent of parity. If parity, which is tied to production costs, were at 100 percent, it would give farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

Rodgers said that Foley, who is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, "by his actions and inactions has destroyed our chances of getting any legislation" until Congress returns next month.

"I live very close to Mr. Foley's district and I'm going to see to it that it is told to him exactly and to his constituents exactly how he delayed the chance for agriculture to get any real benefits for this planting season," Rodgers said.

American Agriculture has called upon farmers to plant only half their land to crops this year to drive up prices in the absence of Congress meeting their goals.

There have been some reports of farmers plowing under winter wheat planted last fall for the 1978 harvest.

Hereford Area Growers Launch Planting Of Potatoes, Onions

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD–Vegetable producers here have launched the planting of their 1978 potato and onion crops, with 10-30 percent of the two crops already in the ground in some areas by early this week.

Spokesmen for two local packing sheds say the biggest problem thus far has been in finding enough help to get onion sets put out.

Wes Fisher of Dick Barrett Produce reported that onion setting has been underway for nearly two weeks here.

"We haven't had any trouble getting onion sets this year, but it seems like the labor supply is limited. We probably have 30 percent of our onion acreage set out, but every day seems like a month when you are setting onions," Fisher commented.

"Potato planting is progressing well, and planting is about 30 percent complete. We got started on potatoes around March 7, and we have more of them in the ground than usual at this time. We go just as fast as we can when the weather will let us. We need to get all of the onions set by the end of the month, and hopefully, we will have the potatoes planted by that time too, although we can run as late as April 10 without any problem," he added.

Fisher explained that local vegetable growers gamble to an extent on hitting the early summer market peak with their production.

Although forecasts on the onion and potato markets are not particularly optimistic for 1978, Fisher commented, "I don't worry about the market nearly as much as good production. You seldom lose money if you get good production."

He added that his firm has experienced a greater demand for potato acreage this year, although acreage will remain comparable with 1977.

"I think the economy has something to do with more demand for acreage, but we can handle only so much produce at our packing facility, and we couldn't take on any additional growers," Fisher said.

A spokesman for La Mantia-Cullum-Collier & Co., which has offices in Hereford and Dimmitt, reported that farm launched potato planting activities Thursday, and planting should continue "for five or six weeks."

He added that onion setting got underway the first of the month and should continue through April.

"Our acreage will be comparable to 1977, and we have had considerable grower interest this year. We are having problems getting enough help with the onions though. We can't seem to find anyone who wants to work," he added.

Preplant herbicides are great for controlling grasses.
But the fact is, they just can't control the stubborn broadleaf weeds that are breaking through cotton here in the South High Plains.
So, if you grow cotton on sandy soils, spray an overlay of Sancap® herbicide at planting.

Cattle Futures Close Mixed In Heavy Trade

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 52 points lower to 35 points higher in heavy trading of 24,508 cars Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Nearby April led the decline, losing 57 points for a time, with June and December sharing the gain.

The market rose 120 points in distant June on carryover buying from Wednesday's limit advance and lifted all contracts to new season's highs, highest since 1974, before resistance was met.

Selling was mostly profit-taking ahead of the weekend after initial demand on the U. S. Department of Agriculture's pig crop report.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 78 to 79 cents a pound, highest since October 1975. The six markets expect an estimated 8,000 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents, with the best top at $53 per hundredweight. The Omaha top was $51. Slaughter was 146,000 head.

Hog futures held limit up the second day in a row from the opening bell, with only nearby April briefly dipping 47 points from the limit. Sales were 4,439 cars.

Buying carried over from Wednesday's limit advance on the bullish pig crop report along with light kill and strength in cash hogs. Some easiness in cash hams and pork bellies at noon brought on scattered selling in the nearby at times.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 2 1/4 cents at 73 1/2 to 76 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect an estimated 18,500 head today.

Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $1.50, with the best top at $49.25 per hundredweight, a one-week high. Slaughter was 303,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures remained locked up the daily limit of 200 points across the board the second day in a row. Sales were light at 478 with thousands of unfilled buy orders. March expired on 54 sales.

The upturn was sparked by the bullish pig crop report and came after five limit losses in a row, off 9.25 cents from recent highgs. Strength in cash hogs and light slaughter were also busllish and offset some slippage in cash bellies.

Pork belly deliveries thus far total 26. Wholesale bacon was up 1 1/2 cents to off 1 cent at 74 1/2 to 78 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, highest since July 1976.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures staged a slight rally shortly before the close on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Good-sized gains in soybean oil futures, encouraged by rumors of Chinese purchases of that product, led the upswing. Traders also said they were evening up their positions before the three-day weekend.

Farmers sold little grain and soybeans in cash markets, indicating they are waiting for better prices despite sharp increases this month. That tended to lessen hedge pressure by cash grain dealers, who sell futures to lock in a price for their purchases of the actual commodities.

Analysts cited pending emergency farm legislation as one reason farmers are holding back.

The Agriculture Department announced that the Soviet Union bought more corn, bringing Russian corn purchases this week to about 44 million bushels or 1.2 million metric tons.

Although analysts noted that export sales normally are hedged in the futures market before they are announced, the good demand for corn lent extra support in that pit.

At the close, soybeans were 1 to 6 cents higher, with May contracts quoted at $7.14 a bushel; wheat was ½ cent lower to 1½ cents higher, May $2.95; corn was 1 to 3 cents higher, May $2.51 and oats were ¼ to ½ cent lower, May $1.40½.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $3.00 to $6.45 a bale lower Thursday.

Speculative liquidation touched off selling, and futures prices fell as much as the 2 cents a pound daily limit before recovering part of the declines, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 5 points to 55.81 cents a pound Wednesday for the ten leading markets, acccording to the New York Cotton Exchange.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SOUTH PLAINS GRAIN FARMERS NEED to think about the effects of new payment yield regulations before planting this spring, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"A circumstance involving the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service calculation of feed grain and wheat yields for 1978 can adversely affect many farmers in this area," warns Marvin Sartin.

Because of new regulations under which ASCS must operate this year, farmers should give careful consideration to planting sorghum, wheat, corn and cotton to protect their ability to prove yields in thse crops in years ahead, he says.

"Future payment yields may hinge on what producers plant this year," he points out. He urges farmers to talk with their county ASCS office staff to get a thorough understanding of the yield payment situation.

THE MATTER IS URGENT, Sartin stresses. "The spring-like weather of the past several days has encouraged farmers to get back on the tractors, and preplant herbicide is being applied very rapidly," he notes. "Unfortunately, this might prevent some producers from planting a protective acreage of feed grains if they are not informed before herbicide application is completed."

County yield averages for each payment crop are calculated by county ASCS offices, explains Leonard Williams, state executive director of ASCS. In counties with both dryland and irrigated farms, the county average is a composite of yields from both types of farming. The average payment yield in the county must balance with a composite figure compiled by the Statistical Reporting Service of the USDA.

In the past, because of allotments associated with each farm, the allotment and projected yield for each farm was considered in balancing to the county average, whether or not the crop was planted.

However, Williams says, the new farm program has suspended allotments, and the 1978 projections will be based on 1977 plantings.

BECAUSE MANY DRYLAND AND LIMITED irrigation farms on the South Plains planted all cotton in 1977, sorghum production generally was found on the higher producing units, Sartin points out. Thus only those farms with the higher ASCS yields planted sorghum in 1977, but the average of these must be factored back to equal the composite county aaverage yield.

As an example, the economist says, a sorghum producer with a 110-bushel yield last year might be in a county with a composite average of only 60 bushels an acre, and a factor of around 0.63 might be required to adjust yields. This farmer's yield for 1978 would be calculated at 69.3 bushels (110 times 0.63). This is the yield that would determine the amount of deficiency and disaster payments he could receive for sorghum this year.

County ASCS offices now are calculating the yields for their counties, and these calculations will be mailed to farmers soon.

If a farmer believes the yield projections are too low, and he has records for 1974-76 on his feed grain and wheat production, he can prove his yields and use the average production for those three years as his payment yield for 1978, Williams points out.

"THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS IN SEVERAL South Plains counties, as individual producers' payment yields will be substantially reduced from previous levels," Sartin says. He encourages such farmers to prove their yields with their 1974-76 records.

The procedure for proving yields makes it important that farmers give careful consideration to planting a small acreage of each payment crop they might wish to grow in the next two to four years, Sartin emphasizes.

"It is my understanding that yields must be proven each year, using production records of the three consecutive years immediately prior to the previous growing season," he says. Thus 1977 production will be used in proving payment yields for 1979, 1980 and 1981, and plantings in 1978 will affect projections for 1980-82.

"WITH THIS IN MIND, PRODUCERS who don't have a problem with the normal cropland acreage on their farms might be wise to consider planting each payment crop they might wish to grow in the next four years," Sartin says.

According to the ASCS handbook, Williams explains, farm requirements for proving the yield of a crop are that the farm must have acreage of the crop for harvest all three years of the base period and have actual production evidence for all the acreage harvested.

"If failure to harvest is due to a disaster," Williams says, "the county ASCS committee is empowered to make adjustments."

Calf Vaccination Program Set

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN–The Texas Animal Health Commission should begin its first major calf vaccination program in the coming weeks, according to agency executive director H.Q. Sibley.

The Legislature appropriated $520,000 for calf vaccinations against brucellosis, through the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1979.

At first, the expenditure was withheld because the federal government would not term the brucellosis problem in Texas as an emergency, as the legislation required, Sibley said. However, the Animal Health Commission believes it corrected the situation at a recent meeting, by declaring its own emergency proclamation.

The vaccination program, the commission believes, will insure the "free movement" of cattle to other states, despite an on-going dispute of brucellosis eradication verses control efforts.

Sibley said the vaccinations should begin "shortly" after a fee schedule for the shots is worked out. Those negotiations now involve the Animal Health Commission, the Texas Veterinary Medical Association and USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

If the shots cost about $1.50 to administer, as Sibley anticipates, officials should be able to vaccinate some 34,000 calves.

"That's a small dent in the state's total cow population," he said, "But it's a start."

Meanwhile, Sibley reported the national commission named recently by the U.S. Animal Health Association to draw up a comphrehensive policy on brucellosis has made no details of its findings public.

The report is scheduled to be released in June, and all parties in the brucellosis eradication versus control fight have generally agreed to abide by the findings.

Government May Require Solar Energy In Homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, hoping to increase the use of solar power, is considering a plan that might force builders to install solar energy systems in all future homes, energy officials say.

How this would be accomplished and exactly what type of systems would be required aren't yet known, said an Energy Department spokesman.

But the spokesman, Jim Bishop, said such a mandatory solar program is being studied for inclusion in a "big solar initiative" the president will announce in May.

Bishop said the program would likely be announced on May 3, which has been designated "Sun Day" by citizen groups promoting increased use of solar power.

"There will probably be a presidential statement," Bishop said.

One possibility being studied, he said, is asking Congress to require that all homes eligible for Federal Housing Administration (FHA) financing have passive solar systems.

Passive systems use building design and solar collectors to maximize the effects of evaporation and heat flow, as opposed to more elaborate systems requiring pumps and other electrical and mechanical devices.

Bishop said that over the next few months the energy agency would work with officials of FHA and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to try to come up with a proposed "requirement that there be a passive solar system in every single new house."

"It has to be considered a top priority," Bishop said.

The first indication that the administration was considering such a proposal came at a congressional hearing earlier in the week, when Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger was being questioned on solar energy by Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.

Javits complained that the administration was "pussyfooting" with its voluntary approach to the use of solar power.

"We could go along the route you suggest and mandate use of solar heating and cooling," Schlesinger said. "We would be glad to draw up the plans."

Schlesinger went on to say that solar heating is "cost effective now and needs to be fashionable."

Schlesinger's remarks represented a major shift in administration thinking on the solar energy issue, Bishop said. "He threw out a trial balloon," Bishop said.

Schlesinger did not elaborate on the kind of solar program he had in mind during his testimony, but Bishop later said "the Department of Energy is on the verge of opening a lot of windows on solar energy. There will be quite a few studies made in the next six weeks."

He said that many things could be done to utilize solar energy, including "the position of the house relative to the sun, positioning of windows, solar collectors.

Bishop said that requiring builders to demostrate that they have incorporated such design features in their plans before a home could qualify for FHA financing "is the kind of thing that will be explored."

Israel Ready To Pull Out Of Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Ezer Weizman says Israeli forces will start withdrawing from south Lebanon within a week, the newspaper Maariv reported today.

As the Israeli army reported all quiet below the Litani River and more U.N. troops moved into the newly occupied territory, Weizman said the withdrawal "depends on the deployment of United Nations forces.

"But within a week the Israel defense forces will start moving back," he declared.

The defense minister said he hoped the pullback "will be done quickly with no delays." But "we have responsibilities for the welfare of the Christians in Lebanon," he added, "and we shall demand from the U.N. that they not be harmed."

Israel's invasion of southern Lebanon was welcomed by the Christian Lebanese there because the purpose was to drive their mutual foes, the Palestinian guerrillas, out of the area and north of the Litani.

The Israelis supplied the Christians in south Lebanon with arms and other aid in the latter months of the Lebanese civil war, and gave them artillery support against the Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem allies when the fighting continued in the South after the ceasefire in central and northern Lebanon 16 months ago.

Deployment of the U.N. peacekeeping force for south Lebanon progressed slowly.

A contingent of 120 Iranian troops set up strategic posts along the Litani. Nearly 200 more Iranians moved down from the buffer zone on the Golan Heights to Ghandouriyye, in south central Lebanon, and awaited orders.

A convoy of 150 Swedish troops from the Sinai buffer zone moved up through Israel, bound for Naqoura, on the coast three miles north of the border. It is to be the headquarters of the commander of the U.N. force, Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana.

A truckload of officers of the Palestine Liberation Organization led 200 French troops from Beirut down to Tyre, the crusaders' port 12 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border which the Israelis bypassed and left to the guerrillas. The French were inspecting the Tyre area, and a U.N. spokesman in Beirut said they would tour a 20-mile stretch of the Litani to choose policing positions.

Bill Fails To Alarm City Firms reason, might want to work a little longer.

"I think what we're all seeing is a trend toward early retirement rather than later retirement. Most of them seem like they're anxious for their retirement to take off and do the things they've been wanting to do in retirement."

The company has 2,175 employees in its 45,000-square-mile district.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Jim Goodwin said the average retirement age in the telephone company is 61.

"We don't anticipate any major impact on our business as a result of the change," Goodwin said.

"Of course, it will give individuals more freedom. There are individuals who are not ready to retire at 65.

"We will probably make some changes in the retirement plan after the law goes into effect. What those will be we don't know."

Goodwin said one change might be to extend the growth of pension benefits beyond 65, adding, "I'm sure we'll be taking into consideration that additional five years that they would work."

Bell has about 1,000 employees in the Lubbock district.

Jerry Greuel, president of Clark Equipment Co., said the bill will have no immediate effect on the company, where the average age of its 300 Lubbock employees is 40, and no one will be affected soon.

Clark already offers optional retirement between 65 and 68, Greuel said.

"I don't have any strong feelings about it one way or the other," he said.

"It might save the Social Security system. I don't know. That thing's in an awful lot of trouble, and obviously, the longer people work, the better off that program would be.

"I think the only general reluctance is apprehension of the unknown. Generally, I don't think there's any deep-seated feeling against it."

He added that the average age of the American public increasing in recent years probably was an impetus to the change.

Clark has about 300 employees.

ton Rouge was advised by the state's attorney general that a recall campaign against Democrat Russell Long would be useless because the state recall law does not apply to a U.S. senator.

"Our response is that we're going ahead anyway," she said. "This is something on which the people should be heard."

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., the treaty foes' chief strategist and head of a national coalition seeking to encourage public opposition to ratification, disavowed any connection with the recall drives.

"The Senate anti-treaty forces are in no way connected with the recall movement, which is independent," Laxalt said Thursday.

The target of one recall drive, Democrat Paul Hatfield of Montana, appointed to the Senate in January to fill out the term of the late Sen. Lee Metcalf, said through a spokesman Thursday that his vote on the second treaty would not be affected by the campaign.

"He just intends to continue to be senator from Montana and as a former judge will decide how to vote depending on how the treaty is amended," the spokesman said.

Experts consulted Thursday said the Constitution reserves for the Senate the power to control its own membership, including the right of explusion. They said only the authority to conduct elections or fill vacancies is given to the states.

Marsha Atcheson, a lawyer with the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional law, recalled that some voters in Wisconsin organized a recall effort against the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy in the 1950s, during his drive to find communists in the federal bureaucracy.

But before the signature drive went very far, the Senate officially advised the state that the recall would have no effect, and the drive withered.

Laxalt indicated agreement, saying, "It is fairly clear that the Senate is the sole judge of its own membership."

Begin Faces Tough Fight Over Policy

anything to do with the internal affairs" of Israel, Vance said.

Begin went public in Washington and New York after three days of talks with Carter. He told the National Press Club in Washington that U.S. praise for Israeli peace proposals has "suddenly disappeared from the lexicon." Then he told the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations in New York that the talks were "difficult" because "either directly or indirectly, the impression was made to me that Israel was obstructing peace."

"What an allegation!" Begin declared. "There isn't one day we didn't work for peace. This is an allegation in which there is a moral wrong.

"I will again turn to the moral greatness of the American people — whether Christians or Jews — and appeal to their fairness."

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, the president of the New York conference, responded with a call for an unrestrained attack on Carter's Mideast policy.

The White House had planned to issue a statement on the differences between the U.S. and Israeli governments, but decided not to because "it possibly would be counterproductive" and "could further complicate a difficult situation," press secretary Jody Powell said.

Israel has established nearly 100 Jewish settlements in the Sinai Desert and on the Golan Heights and the West Bank of the Jordan River, the territories it captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War. The United States is backing Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's demand for removal of all of the settlements as well as self-determination for the Palestinians of the West Bank.

Begin in his Washington speech reiterated that Israel will never allow the Palestine Liberation Organization to control the Judean hills of the West Bank, overlooking Israel's coastal plain. And he declared that the Jewish settlements in occupied territory were "absolutely and inseparably connected" with Israel's future.

Polling Place Here Closed By Mistake

City Hall's polling place for absentee voting in the April 1 municipal election opened today about noon after an Avalanche-Journal inquiry to the secretary of state's office revealed the poll was closed illegally.

Citizens who wish to cast an absentee ballot today will have until about 8 p.m. to do so in the city secretary's office at City Hall, 916 Texas Ave.

Assistant City Manager Jim Blagg called the closure an "oversight" after the A-J notified him that the Texas Election Code requires that polls for absentee balloting be open at least eight hours each day except Saturdays, Sundays and official holidays.

City Hall is closed today in observance of Good Friday. However, said John McKenzie of the state election division, today is not a legally recognized holiday.

At least one person must remain at the city's regular polling place for eight hours today, he said. Otherwise, he added, the matter "can be referred to the attorney general" or to the county's district attorney.

He also said that the election code requires that the city give notice of the opening in the same manner notice was given of the building's closure. Other than noting the closure was not published in the newspaper or broadcast in other media, Blagg had no comment about advertising the poll opening.

Absentee voting ends at 5 p.m. Tuesday. The polling place opens at 8 a.m. each weekday until then.

precipitation — adding an undetermined amount of moisture to the year's 2.21 inches — a 1.60-inch increase over rain totals at this time last year.

Thunderstorms that crossed most of the state during the night Thursday, grew out of a squall line that developed over the western reaches of the state. Before dawn today, the storm front fell south of a Lufkin-Cotulla line and was headed toward Texas coastal areas.

Fort Worth rainfall amounting to 1.69 inches Thursday broke the previous March 23 precipitation total there — .7 of an inch in 1902.

Hail struck about 25 miles east of Brownwood during the late evening hours Thursday, and some areas along the squall line reported slight damage caused by gusty winds.

A tornado ripped the roof of a small Longview business during the night, but no injuries were reported in connection with that incident.

Overnight temperatures ranged from the 20s in the Texas Panhandle to the 70s along the coast.

By dawn, skies in the western sections of the state were fair. Most of the remainder of Texas reported partly cloudy to cloudy skies at that time.

Some low readings from over the South Plains this morning included: Dimmitt and Friona, 29; Brownfield, Hereford, Muleshoe and Seminole, 30; Abernathy, Levelland and Silverton, 31; and Lamesa, Tahoka and Tulia, 32.

Showers to the south of Lubbock on Thursday left .25 of an inch of rain at Lamesa and .30 at Snyder.

Blasts Rock SouthBronx

NEW YORK (AP) — Explosions in a main sewer line blew out manholes along Brook Avenue in the South Bronx today, causing an undetermined number of injuries, shattering windows and, according to a witness, sending people "running hysterically through the streets."

Manhole covers were thrown up to 10 feet into the air, the witness said.

Cause of the blasts, which began shortly after 10 a.m., was not immediately pinpointed. Consolidated Edison Co. denied responsibility. The Environmental Protection Administration said it was possible that sewer gas had exploded.

Assistant Deputy Fire Chief Earl J. Maloney said 250 families were evacuated, some with a "cherry picker," from a 17-story apartment building where the first three floors were extensively damaged.

In a six-story apartment building across 142nd Street, the blasts blew out windows and displaced interior walls. Families were evacuated from that building, too.

The injured were taken to Lincoln Hospital where spokesman Robert Medina said the first two persons who arrived had received only minor injuries. Although the spokesman said Lincoln was expecting additional victims, Chief Maloney said he knew of only two.

Police set up command posts in the area, while the Fire Department was dispatching the equivalent of the number of vehicles used to handle a multiple-alarm fire.

New York Mobsters Fight Over Empire

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say that four apparent mob murders this week mean that top organized crime figures are making an all-out grab for control of the crime empire left by the late boss of bosses, Carlo Gambino.

Gambino's death in October 1976 left a lucrative underworld network of drugs, extortion and other rackets without unified leadership.

A number of law enforcement sources, who asked not to be identified, said the killings could mean a fight between the Gambino and Bonanno crime families, as well as internal turmoil for control within the Genovese family.

The highest-ranking victim of the warfare was Pasquale Macchirole, a reputed lieutenant in the Genovese family. Macchirole, who had been missing for about three weeks, was found stuffed in the trunk of his 1977 Lincoln Continental in Brooklyn Wednesday.

Police sources said it was unclear whether Macchirole's death was linked to the Tuesday slaying in lower Manhattan of New Jersey Teamsters official Salvatore Briguglio, who reportedly had dealings with the Genovese gang and was believed linked in some way to the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa, the former Teamsters Union boss.

Two lesser crime figures were slain Thursday in Brooklyn.

Americus Scotes, said to have "loose" ties to the Colombo family, was shot in the head and chest while walking his dog near his home.

Destroyed Home Called Mistake

By DAVE RICHWINE

HULL, Mass. (UPI) — Joseph R. Germaine feels like he's had the house pulled out from underneath him.

He's boiling mad because the 35-year-old oceanside summer home his father built has been destroyed — and he claims it was all a big mistake.

But the town of Hull doesn't think so. The fight has shifted to Plymouth County Superior Court, where Germaine's attorney filed a civil suit this week.

Germaine wants $86,000 to rebuild his home — and he wants it put up exactly where it stood, just a few feet from the ocean, before the Feb. 6-7 blizzard struck the New England coast.

The two-story, 18-room house "was really beautiful," he said. "There was family there all the time. We always kept it up and changed the furniture a lot."

Germaine was with his family at their year-round home in the Boston suburb of Quincy, Mass., when the 27-inch snowstorm hit last month. Like most New Englanders, there was little he could do but watch the news on television as 25-foot waves and 100-mile-an-hour winds pounded the coast, destroying or damaging hundreds of homes and causing hundreds of millions of dollars in damage.

He knew nearby Hull was among the hardest hit communities, especially the stretch where his summer home borders a cement sea wall.

A couple of days later, Germaine got a permit exempting him from a driving ban in eastern Massachusetts while rescue workers cleaned up after the storm.

Fearing the worst, he took along a contractor and photographer for insurance purposes.

"There was damage to a lot of property, but my father built our house strong. It was standing like a beam to the stars," Germaine said. "The only major damage had been where a section of the roof had fallen into some rooms. Three-quarters of the house was perfect.

"The contractor gave me an estimate of $11,800 to fix the roof. He said he would be able to start rebuilding after the driving ban was over, and he could have it ready by May," Germaine said.

But a week later, Germaine was at a high school hockey game when "people began to come up to me and say 'sorry to hear about your house.' When I drove down I couldn't believe it.

"I nearly had a heart attack. It took everything out of my wife and me when we saw our home bulldozed into trash," he said. What was left of the home stood in a pile at his feet.

Germaine called the town building inspector and asked why his home had been demolished. He claims the inspector, Stanley MacLeod, told him the house was bought two months ago by a couple who had national flood insurance, and they agreed it should be razed.

Germaine claims that couple owns a house just a few feet around the corner from his house and it is still standing. "It's kind of fishy," he said. "Luckily I have the pictures and two written estimates."

But MacLeod doesn't agree with Germaine's story. "The ocean was flowing right through the damned house," MacLeod said in an interview last week. "It was a public safety hazard.

"I did what I had to do," MacLeod said. "They were forecasting another storm. What if the house was knocked down and someone was killed? You have to live with yourself."

MacLeod said the house was razed under authority given him to destroy unsafe buildings, although he confirmed he did not obtain a written release from Germaine.

But Germaine insisted it was all a big mistake, and the town is now trying to cover it up. He admitted the sea wall didn't keep water from splashing over onto houses — it happens during many big storms. But he said the street was "dry as a bone" after last month's storm.

Landon Gives Endorsement To Daughter

By JOHN C. BRADEN

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Republican elder statesman Alf Landon, who rarely endorses any GOP candidate in the primary, has made an exception for a certain woman seeking the party's nomination to the U.S. Senate — his daughter.

Landon, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee, this week said he would support his daughter wholeheartedly in her primary race against five other GOP contenders.

Nancy Landon Kassebaum, 45, is seeking the nomination for the Senate seat being vacated in the retirement of Sen. James Pearson, R-Kan.

"I am very happy and delighted to see we have a sensible candidate in the race," Landon said. "I think from every angle politically, she has shown a pretty good grasp of political realities. I'm sure she's going to be a candidate I'm proud to support."

When asked if he was going to vote for Mrs. Kassebaum, Landon laughed and said, "You bet I am! How many times?"

Mrs. Kassebaum announced her candidacy Tuesday. On Wednesday, she held news conferences in her hometown of Wichita, Topeka, Overland Park and Pittsburg to discuss her campaign. The Topeka news conference was in a wood-paneled study at the white-columned Landon mansion.

Mrs. Kassebaum said she is running her own campaign and did not expect her father to campaign for her. Landon, 90, a Kunsas governor before his disasterous bid for the presidency against Franklin Roosevelt, admitted he has been forced to curtail his scheduled appearances as the years have passed and would not be on the stump for his daughter.

The candidate said she would bring to the Senate a background in community involvement as well as experience in operation of the Senate from the time she served as an aide to Pearson.

Mrs. Kassebaum also said as a woman she has experience in thrift and balancing the budget of a home, traits that would be handy in fighting inflation, which she said is a major issue of the campaign.

Army Demands Diploma

CLIFFSIDE PARK, N.J. (AP) — The Army says it is looking for a few good women. Only those with high school diplomas need apply.

"We're an employer," said Maj. David Gardner, an Army spokesman. "If you have one job and 10 applicants, you take the best qualified applicants."

The Army recently imposed the eligibility requirement of a regular high school diploma — for women only — because of the job market.

Aleta Downes, who quit school two months before she was scheduled to graduate in 1968, claims she is a victim of sex discrimination because the Army will not allow her to enlist even though she later received her high school equivalency certificate.

Army officials had to find a way to cut some women out of the running, said Lt. James Strachan of the Recruiting Command in Fort Sheridan, Ill.

"It's a statistical fact," Gardner said. "The high school diploma seems to be the thing that distinguishes those who will succeed from those who will not. It has nothing to do intelligence."

An Open Letter...

From DIRK WEST

For over half a century, good, honest people have been willing to sacrifice time away from their family and jobs to serve on our City Council. Lubbock could never have become the city it is today without this kind of civic leadership. These men and women have served out of a love for Lubbock and a concern for our future.

This is what makes our system work. Dedicated, civic minded people who are willing to serve on our Boards and Councils. They offer great talent and hard work at no cost to our city.

The Mayor makes $75 per month. The Council makes $25 per month. These folks, like the School Board, serve because they love Lubbock, and over the years this city has been blessed with good, solid folks whose only motive in serving is to improve our city.

I have tried very hard for the past four years to do a good job. If you elect me as your next Mayor I will devote all the time it takes, as well as represent everyone, white, black or brown. I'll bring a sense of humor and a love of Lubbock to the job of solving the problems of a growing city.

Have a happy and Holy Easter—

Plant, Environmentalists Debate Nuclear Leak

By STEPHAN KETELE

TIHANGE, Belgium (UPI) — When a tiny amount of radiation leaked from the nuclear reactor at Tihange, it was dismissed by the plant management as a "banal" incident that would soon be forgotten.

But the news that "leaked" a few days later provided ammunition for environmentalists and put Tihange in the center of the controversy about nuclear safety.

What did happen that winter night of Jan. 13?

According to plant director Louis Maesen, sensitive instruments detected a small leak of radioactive iodine-131 as the reactor was being cooled with water in preparation for the annual replacement of a third of the nuclear core.

Eighty-one workers were checked for exposure, and released. Six were given more extensive checks and found to have been exposed to 1 percent of the radiation they would have absorbed in a routine medical examination of the thyroid gland.

And that, as far as management was concerned, was that.

Not so for local supporters of the Friends of the Earth, an international environmental group that is foremost in the struggle to halt the spread of nuclear energy in Europe.

Based on information that it said came from within the plant, the Friends of the Eartt chapter at nearby Huy issued a communique Jan. 23 alleging a "grave incident" had occurred at Tihange.

It said 80 men had worked the day after the mishap, Jan. 14, in an atmosphere containing 900 times the allowable concentration of iodine-131.

The report coincided with the start of a Common Market hearing on nuclear safety. And for a while, Tihange shared headlines with a Soviet nuclear-powered spy satellite that plunged into a Canadian wasteland.

Because of the controversy, the plant's management decided to invite a group of reporters into a reactor building for the first time in the history of nuclear energy in Belgium.

Fitted out in heavy paper coveralls and peering warily at radioactive fuel rods that glowed with an eerie purplish light under a protective tankful of blue water, the reporters were told about a complex series of safety measures aimed at stopping "incidents" from turning into "accidents."

Officials say what happened Jan. 13 was proof the safety checks were working correctly.

"It is grotesque to talk about an accident," said Robert van den Damme, director of the firm managing Tihange. "There was a slight mishap of a strictly technical nature."

Freddy Chabot, 50, a member of the Friends of the Earth, said, "I am not a radiation expert. Our communique was based on information from someone who works at the plant. We have no means of checking independently."

The communique alleged that water contaminated with radioactivity sloshed through two floors of the plant during a cooling operation.

"It's a funny situation in which those who derive profit from the operation of the reactor should also be the only judges of its inherent dangers," said Chabot, a chemist by training.

"The least one can suspect is a powerful inclination on their part to let the show go on."

Van Den Damme said the law does not provide for a permanent outside control of the safety in nuclear plants.

"If the authorities wanted to station representatives in every plant to keep check over everything that goes on, we would gladly oblige. In fact, we would welcome their assistance," he said.

Chabot said secrecy surrounds everything that goes on at the reactor, an architectural nightmare built in a suburb two miles from the center of Huy, a quaint and ancient town of 15,000.

"It's powerfully irritating," he said. "If everything is above board, why the need to hide things?"

GULPED BY GALAXY — Workers at Carswell Air Force Base loaded Bell Helicopter's first XV-15 tilt-rotor research aircraft into the nose of a giant U.S. Air Force C-5A Galaxy for a flight to the NASA Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif. The future commercial and military aircraft, which can carry 15 passengers at a top speed of 330 knots, will undergo about two months of extensive wind-tunnel testing in California. The aircraft made its initial flight in Fort Worth on May 3, 1977. (AP Laserphoto)

City Schools Brag About 'Intercept'

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With new disciplinary tools, the Lubbock Independent School District this year has virtually eliminated out-of-school suspensions and may have reduced dropout and delinquency rates, school and juvenile authorities say.

Those are good reasons, they add, that the Governor's Criminal Justice Division renew a federal-state grant for the district's Project Intercept, an academic and counseling program for students who severely misbehave in regular classes.

The grant application, prepared by the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Department and the school system, says Project Intercept and the district's new in-building suspension program have contributed to:

—A drop of more than 95 percent in the number of out-of-school suspensions and expulsions. In the 1976-77 term, 751 youths were sent home for periods from a few days to the remainder of the year for disciplinary reasons. Such out-of-school disciplinary measures this year will number only a few dozen.

"It was originally felt that 60 percent of (youths who otherwise would be removed from school altogether) could be resolved at the in-house suspension level and 25 percent at the alternative-school level," the grant request notes.

"It now appears that 85 percent of the problems can be resolved with in-house suspension and 10 percent or better with the alternative school."

—The number of students quitting school appears to be down this year. It's too early to say for sure, but school officials still hope to meet their goal of cutting the number of dropouts by 15 percent this year and 25 percent the next.

In 1976-77, the school system recorded 647 dropouts. Nearly a third of them eventually were referred to the juvenile probation office because of delinquent activity.

—Delinquent activity in the city has declined since the alternatives to out-of-school suspensions were initiated. "We experienced a lower-than-expected number of referrals (to the juvenile probation department), which may indicate an unexpected accomplishment for the project," the application says.

"It is too early to claim this (as credit solely to the new disciplinary techniques), but we will be watching it closely."

Project Intercept, located in the annex to the district's administration building, was started last fall with $83,000 in "seed money" from the governor's office. The school system and county are seeking a second-year criminal justice grant of $66,800 toward the project's $97,000 budget for the 1978-79 school year.

Under the proposed arrangemant for next year, the county would put up $5,000 and the school district, $25,200. The district also would continue providing facilities.

The county and district hope Project Intercept, one of the first of its kind and a model for other Texas school systems, will continue getting some grant support — decreasing annually — until its fifth year, when all funding will be local.

"In reviewing the referrals to the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Department between the years 1973 and 1976, we determined that 20 percent of the youths referred were not in regular school attendance. Some were dropouts; a sizable number, however, had either been suspended or expelled," the grant application explains.

"Before this project began in August of 1977, we had ignored this fact and simply left it to the schools to control the situation. Without any background data, we theorized that part of them might not be referred had they been attending school.

"Conferences were held with school administration officials to see if some better way of handling school problems could not be developed that would keep youths in school and away from the boredom of roaming the streets. This project was a result of those conferences."

The project, says the application, involves a "well coordinated program between the probation department and school system which would meet the school district's needs for discipline and yet keep the children in school."

First, the school district using its own monies set up an in-building suspension program at each junior and senior high "to handle minor breaches of discipline, tardiness and minor truancies." The program consists of a closely supervised classroom to which students whose infractions otherwise would merit a short-

Solar Power Satellite Called Urgent Need

SPACE CENTER (AP) — A research scientist says the proposed solar power satellite is the only answer to the nation's energy needs and work on the project should be expedited.

"If SPS development is not begun soon, Dr. James W. Moyer told an energy conference in Houston, "a lot of you folks are going to have children who will freeze in the dark around the year 2000."

Another scientist told the group a SPS would cost $27 billion.

"We have a great sense of urgency about this program and we have about 12 to 15 years to negotiate the price," Moyer, with the Southern California Edison Company, said Thursday at a conference on "Meeting Energy Needs Today and Tomorrow." The conference was sponsored by the University of Houston and the National Consumer Research Institute.

Prior to Moyer's talk, Gordon R. Woodcock, solar power systems study manager for the Boeing Co., presented the $27 billion price tag for the SPS.

Woodcock said this would be a commercial system, including the satellite itself, transporation costs of building in a 22,300 mile orbit and two ground stations.

However, he said the figures could be reduced as the program progressed.

For instance, he said he believes the cost of orbital transportation could be cut in half as more research is done on solar cells and the cost of these would be reduced.

Moyer, who worked on the Manhattan Project, the development of the first atomic bomb, said California Edison, which provides about 2 percent of the electrical energy produced in the United States, has done research into virtually every type of alternate energy source.

"We have never had a situation like this in our history," he said, referring to the energy crisis.

He said there are compelling reasons for getting on with the SPS program–continued economic growth, surviving as a nation and increasing the quality of life.

Child Drives Grandfather To Hospital

FORT WORTH (AP) — When Wendy Harmon heard her badly injured grandfather tell her to get the pickup truck, she did just what he told her despite the fact that she was only nine-years-old.

Her grandfather, Archie Wright, 68, had just been gored by a cow last weekend when he gave Wendy the orders about the truck.

Wright is in serious condition at Coryell Memorial Hospital in Gatesville, said his daughter, Mrs. Barbara Turney. She is Wendy's maternal aunt.

Mrs. Turney gave this account Thursday:

Wendy and her mother, Mrs. Linda Lynch, have been living with Mrs. Lynch's parents since an accident last summer when a horse Wright was riding somersaulted and landed on top of him.

He had been taken home last month and was just beginning to walk again, said Mrs. Turney. His wife was also recuperating at home after falling out of the pickup truck, breaking her arm and collar bone, and could not walk yet.

"Daddy had gone down to feed the cattle," Mrs. Turney said. "This cow had a baby calf and daddy was marking (notching the calf's ear with a pocket knife)it."

She said the family dog ran between her father and the calf and the mother cow ran at the dog.

"She missed the dog and hit my father with her horn, goring him in the groin area," she said.

"The cow kept spinning around and around and finally, we don't know how, my father got loose and fell to the ground."

Wright was able to crawl about 30 feet and began screaming for help.

"My mother heard him. She hollered at

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

If I were casting a war, using sports enthusiasts, there's no doubt in my mind that the joggers would be the infantry, the golfers the artillery, the swimmers the submarines, polo players the cavalry and tennis buffs the special services.

For reasons I am about to explore, the skiers would be the Marines.

It's not just that they're so elite. It's just that somewhere along the line they've been brainwashed into believing that by putting big sticks on each foot, riding an open chair lift to the top of a big hill and skiing down into the arms of three ambulance attendants, they are having a good time.

They are absolutely fearless. No snow is too deep, no blizzards too paralyzing, no distance too far. The colder it is, the more inaccessible the slopes, the more hazardous the conditions — the bigger the challenge.

My husband is a ski mercenary. He follows the snow. We happen to live in the southwestern part of the United States where the winters are comparatively mild. When storms began to wreak their devastation this winter, my husband and I watched in horror.

"It's a real blizzard," I said quietly.

"It's a 40-inch snow base," he said, "and I've got to go."

"It's not your war," I pleaded. "There is nothing you can do."

As he packed his thermal underwear, his padded mittens, and his stocking cap, I tried to appeal to his sense of survival.

"It's the flu season. You have children. Your skin is dry."

No amount of reason would keep him home. He dug out the car chains, his AAA card and was off to the front.

A week later, he returned from the wars...face burned by the sun, a bruise from a chair lift that gave him a nudge, and a service-connected limp.

"What happened?"

"I was forced to do my reverse Wishbone."

"What's that?"

"It's where someone skis across your skis, whirls you around and you are skiing down a hill backwards as both of your legs are skiing in opposite directions."

"Sounds exciting. Wanta take out the garbage?"

"In 50-degree weather? Get hold of yourself!"

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old profession man, single and never married. I recently became attracted to a very pretty girl who works at a fast-food counter, and I could tell she liked me. I asked for six pieces of fish and she gave me eight. The next day she gave me change for a five dollar bill when I gave her a one.

After talking to her today, I found out that she's only a junior in high school. Could I get into any trouble if I asked her out? (I read that Dostoevski married an 18-year-old girl when he was 50 and they had a wonderful marriage.)

I need your answer before I make any moves.

BILL

DEAR BILL: Never mind what Dostoevski did; that was 100 years ago. The schoolgirl to whom you are attracted either can't count or she's giving her boss's store away. If you are planning any "moves," I advise you to move in the direction of a girl closer to your own age.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved here from another state, and quite by accident we learned that my husband has a niece in a private institution within half an hour's drive from our house. (I'll call this niece "Nellie.")

Naturally we went to visit Nellie at once, after which we phoned her mother (my husband's eldest sister) to tell her we had seen her daughter.

Nellie's mother objected strenuously to our visiting Nellie. She said the girl has been a "hopeless vegetable since birth (she is now 28 years old) and it would have been much better had we left the family skeleton in the closet where it belonged instead of digging it up! (We ignored her wishes and continued to visit Nellie.)

Abby, in the few months we've been visiting her, she has learned to recognize us and seems so happy to see us. The head doctor there told us that Nellie has improved physically since we've been giving her our love and attention. He has even let us take her home on Sundays.

The problems is Nellie's mother. She has asked us to stay away from her daughter. She pays for her support but hasn't visiting her once!

Should we continue seeing Nellie in spite of her mother's objections?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I can see only good resulting from your visits, and I would continue to give Nellie as much love and attention as you possibly can.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently died. I think it would have been nice if the doctor who had taken care of him during his illness had sent some kind of condolence message, don't you. Or don't doctors believe in that?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If the patient was only a patient, all the doctor sends is his bill. If the patient has been a personal friend, the doctor would send his condolences and a bill.

GREEN VESTMENTS

BERLIN (UPI) — Green, not black, is the traditional color of mourning in Germany during Holy Week. The word "green" is a corruption of an early German word meaning mourn, and vestments that color were worn by clergymen on Holy Thursdays years ago.

Brisket, Kraut Good Meal Combination

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Nowadays it's easy to find a small cut of beef brisket in supermarket meat stalls. Just right for a small family!

You can braise a two-pound brisket with apple, onion, sauerkraut and bouillon and have a delicious main dish. Served with steamed new potatoes or dumplings or good dark bread, it makes a satisfying main course. When we cooked brisket this way recently, the apples mellowed the kraut so that a few of our tasters weren't sure it was there!

BEEF BRISKET WITH APPLE KRAUT

2 lb. boneless beef brisket (buy the cut called first, flat or thin)
2 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. white pepper
2 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 large onion, chopped medium-fine (1 cup)
1 beef bouillon cube dissolved in 1 cup hot water
2 medium apples (pared, cored and chopped medium-fine)
8 oz. can sauerkraut, undrained
2 tbsp. dark brown sugar

Cut excess fat from the top of the beef if you like. Stir togethr the flour and pepper and rub it into the beef. In a large saucepot in the hot oil, brown the beef on all sides. Add onion and bouillon. Simmer, covered, for 1 1/2 hours. Stir in the apple and sauerkraut. Continue simmering, covered, until the beef is tender — 1 hour longer. If necessary to prevent sticking during the cooking, add extra bouillon a little at a time. The apple-kraut mixture should be thick at the end of the cooking period. Remove the beef to a serving platter and cut in thick slices. (It is impossible to cut brisket thin when it is hot.) Stir the sugar into the apple-kraut mixture and spoon it around the beef.

If you make this dish ahead, chill the meat and apple-kraut mixture separately. After chilling, the meat may be sliced very thin against the grain. Reheat it with the apple-kraut mixture in a large skillet on top of the range or in a casserole in a countertop microwave oven.

If this dish is served as soon as it is made, it may make only 4 servings. If the dish is made ahead and the beef is sliced thin, there may be some meat left over for sandwiches.

Note: If you like, you may add 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon caraway seed to the kraut and apple mixture during the cooking.

Bridge is a strange game. Here is a case where South avoided taking a finesse he seemed to need by giving up a trick in a suit in which he had no loser!

North had the high-card strength to respond three no trump to South's one spade opening bid. However, that bid should be reserved for hands of a 4-3-3-3 pattern without too many prime values, so North correctly showed both his suits. When South showed long, near-solid spades by jumping, North elected to contract for a spade slam.

West led a top-of-nothing diamond, and when dummy appeared, it seemed that the fate of declarer's contract hinged on the location of the king of clubs. However, declarer found a way of significantly increasing his chances at no risk whatsoever.

He won the king of diamonds, cashed one high trump and then led toward the ace of diamonds. That was a safe move, for if West had started with a singleton diamond and ruffed, declarer would be able to sluff a club on the ace of diamonds and fall back on the club finesse for his contract.

When West followed to the diamond, declarer won the ace in dummy, then ruffed a diamond with a high trump. A low trump to dummy's queen drew both outstanding trumps and left declarer in dummy to ruff the last diamond, eliminating that suit from all hands.

The stage was set for the coup de grace. Declarer led his singleton heart and finessed the ten! East won the queen of hearts, but was faced with a choice of losing plays. Whether he returned a club or a heart, he would be playing into the teeth of dummy's tenace holdings and would give declarer two tricks in whichever suit he led. As a result, declarer lost a heart trick, but no club tricks!

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

More than you probably care to know about broccoli: It's a sibling of cabbage and cauliflower, much loved in Italy but originally from Cyprus. Most of America's broccoli comes from California, although it was first grown in Coney Island.

What you really want to know is its calorie count: exceedingly low, one of the least fattening foods there is. broccoli is only 113 calories a pound, 26 per serving.

Something else worth knowing: vitamin-wise, broccoli is double-whammy vegetable, chockful of both vitamin C and vitamin A. Broccoli only pretends to be green. Where nutrients are concerned broccoli is more like vitamin A-packed yellow vegetables (but broccoli is much less fattening than most sources of vitamin A).

Most important: broccoli tastes terrific, cooked or raw. Hot or cold.

To cook broccoli: cut through thick stalks vertically. Stand broccoli heads-up in a tall skinny pot (like a double boiler top without its bottom). Add one inch chicken broth or water. Cover and simmer until tender-crisp (10 minutes) or tender-soft (15 minutes). The heads-up way of cooking concentrates heat on the thicker stalks. Then simmer down the broth and pour over cooked broccoli (no butter needed). Or dress broccoli with a generous dab of low-fat mayonnaise or a squirt of lemon juice. Or dress with low-fat Italian salad dressing and serve it hot or cold.

Another way to cook broccoli: break off the florets, cut the stems in same-size chunks. Combine with half-cup fat-skimmed chicken broth and simmer, uncovered, in a shallow nonstick skillet.

STIR-FRIED SESAME STEAK AND BROCCOLI, KOREAN-STYLE

1 tbsp. sesame seeds
8 oz. lean beef round steak
1 large Spanish onion, peeled, halved, thinly sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
¾ cup water
1 small red or green bell pepper, seeded and sliced
½ lb. fresh broccoli, cut up, or a 10 oz. package frozen broccoli spears, defrosted and sliced ½ cup sherry wine
optional: ½ tsp. MSG
optional: 1 tbsp. oyster sauce

Sprinkle sesame seeds on a large nonstick skillet over high heat. Shake the skillet gently, until seeds are browned (be careful they don't burn). Remove and set aside.

Sear the steak quickly on both sides. Remove to a cutting board (will be raw in the middle).

Combine onion, garlic and one-quarter cup water in the skillet over high heat. Cook and stir until onions are browned lightly.

Add to the skillet the bell pepper, broccoli, wine, MSG and oyster sauce. Add one-half cup water. Cook over medium flame, stirring occasionally, about five to eight minutes, only until vegetables are tender-crisp.

Meanwhile, slice the browned steak into very thin strips.

Combine arrowroot with soy sauce and stir into simmering skillet, until pan liquid simmers and thickens and vegetables are coated. Stir in steak strips; cook and stir until desired pinkness or doneness is achieved. Sprinkle with reserved sesame seeds and serve immediately. Makes two servings, 285 calories each. (Recipe may be doubled to serve four. Use a very large skillet or electric frypan.)

Traditional Easter Bonnets Fading

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A millinery designer making personal appearances in Mobile, Ala., recently sold $7,000 worth of hats in one day. Expensive hats. They retail for about $100 each, says Burt Champion, spokesman for the hat industry's trade association.

But Champion thinks people who expect to see fussy and-or funny headgear on Easter this year will be disappointed.

"The Easter Parade as we used to know it has sort of disappeared," Champion said in an interview. The circus atmosphere that used to prevail on New York City's Fifth Avenue and in some other major cities is long gone, he indicated.

Champion credits part of the decline to weather:

"Nobody's going to run out in a flowered hat in Minneapolis today," he said, as heavy snow was once again reported in the Midwest.

Champion is publicity director for the Millinery Institute of America, Inc. He thinks the fashion aspect of Easter dates from about 1890. That's the earliest year for which he has been able to find photographs of fashionably clad women strolling on Fifth Avenue on Easter.

"It peaked when the Vanderbilt house was on Fifth Avenue at 52nd Street, and St. Thomas's (Episcopal Church) was down the block. From 1890 until 1910 Easter was a glorious occasion."

(When St. Thomas's opened in 1893, one New York City newspaper bannered its story in two words: "Society Worships.")

"Easter (apparel) began to take on a family element after that," Champion said. "The whole family dressed up."

The custom continued until the end of World War II, he said.

"But when Rosie the Riveter came into the working world during the war, she lost her total occupation with dress.

"Women were in overalls and military uniform so long that dress for its own sake became less of a preoccupation for women in general," he said.

"When television began to cover the Easter Parade, all the freaks showed up," he added. "They debased it, made it a clown show.

Champion says dressing up is coming back again as a tremendously strong movement toward a soft, filmy, sexy, feminine look, and hats are part of the total picture.

He does not see the trend as a reaction against the women's movement, but as a desire on the part of women to achieve a coordinated look again.

"The winter hat business is great," he added. "Any scientist will tell you you lose body heat when your head is uncovered.

"All the cosmetics people are on our side, too. Staying in the sun too much doesn't help your skin."

Fashion Designer Discusses Public, Private Life

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — To John Weitz, one of the dozen or so designers who have dictated men's fashion for the past three decades, being fashionable isn't worth it.

That's something like the missionary telling his flock that religion is the opiate of the masses, but Weitz candidly says he's had it up to his lapels with trend-conscious clothes horses.

As he sat looking out the window of his Madison Avenue office, he glanced at the gold cuff links he was wearing and snorted, "Damn, these are silly." "I mean, why should a man have to try to stick these things through four holes on each cuff in the morning when he's not even fully awake?"

Things like that grate on Weitz, and one is tempted to accuse him of being tempermental, like so many other people who have experienced phenomenal success.

But after several minutes' conversation with him, his tastes make sense, and one wonders how we went so far astray from less cluttered, cleaner, neater, well, Weitzian days.

"Fashion is developed by a bunch of clothes makers who shy some new words out to journalists who translate them into sentences." Consequently he seldom participates in such collective gatherings.

"On top of that, so many of the designers are tempermental wrecks. Eccentricity is only permissible if it's a front for genius. I refuse to have someone come to me expecting me to accept his eccentricity if it only covers up his banality."

At 55, Weitz presents an outward picture of how he thinks every man ought to live. He does the modeling himself in many of his clothing ads. He travels 100,000 miles a year, but makes time to spend with his wife, the former actress Susan Kohner, a onetime Oscar nominee, and their two sons, Christopher and Paul.

In the summers he lives on and sails a boat that he keeps at his Palm Beach home.

He says he would never think of wearing a moustache ("Too much bother, and for what? To divide my lips from my nose?"); despises vests; does not believe in toupees or hair dyes ("Wear what hair you have left and wear it the color it is.").

Yet, he is the first to admit that the inner John Weitz bears little relationship to the commercialized image he pushes.

"I've learned over the years that to assume that my taste is the daily guiding light of my licensees is foolish and unrealistic," he says. "My contributions to the clothes I make end in the design room and in the corporate boardroom."

That is an admission not many designers will make, but Weitz would not be believable if he claimed to create — or even be aware of — every product that bears his name.

His clothing line has met with success all over the world over 20 years, and this fall he will launch a new advertising blitz in the U.S., Britain and Japan, where he is seen in TV commercials as a dashing pilot (he does not fly), a rugged football quarterback (he openly admits that he hates strenuous exercise), and a virile beachcomber.

Yet his clothing is being crowded out by the other Weitz signature products, which include cigars, a new fragrance line, and in the near future may expand to embrace furniture and automobiles.

"I have to watch what I put my name to, although allowing my name to be used on a product doesn't mean that I invented it, or even that I have much to do with it. I don't know a thing about cigarmaking, but I know the shape I like a cigar to be, and I know the color I like. Similarly, I don't know about the insides of a car, but I know what kind of car I like to look at."

He proved that last year by having a vintage SS-100 Jaguar reconstructed with a 6-cylinder Ford engine inside. He paid only $8,000 for the car, but dotes on it almost as much as he does his boat.

Pleasures like that comprise much of his spare time — time he insists on keeping to himself. "It's a nutty world and I don't want to expose myself or my family to any of the nuts out there."

And, he quite accurately has decided, "When you're as successful as I've been, you don't have to."

VITAMIN STABILITY

Vitamin C is the least stable of all the vitamins. Therefore, it is necessary to take special precautions to minimize its loss in vegetable preparation. For example, vitamin C is soluble in water (as are the B vitamins); therefore, don't soak fresh vegetables to crisp them. Instead, sprinkle with water, wrap well and refrigerate.

Wall Hanging Depicts Ancient History

Out of the Valley of the Kings and into your home comes the look of a lifetime — the Spirit of Eternity wall hanging pictured above. The design is a close adaptation of a cedar of Lebanon ceremonial wooden chair dating back to the 14th Century BC and the tomb of the boy king Tutankhamun. Heh, the God of Eternity, is gracefully poised over a symbol for gold, with the sign of life slung over his left arm. Above his head is the radiant sun disc, Ra. An an intricate pattern of hieroglyphic figures — from cobras and buffalo to scarabs and amulets — makes for a keen tapestry that's a true needlepoint exotic.

For this project your colors will be few, but well-chosen — cobalt and light blues, silty and clay browns, and in metallic thread, a lustrous gold. To work with the thread, it should first be cut into three foot long strands. When stitching with the metallic thread, you'll want to keep an even tension so that your stitches will lie smoothly and uniformly on the canvas without pulling on the mesh. The design is best completed in continental or basket weave stitch. Needlepoint is fairly simple, and before you know it you'll come up with a wall-hanging (or pillow) as enticing as the Nile and as mysterious as newly discovered loot from the tombs of the pharaohs.

Spirit of Eternity is available in a kit containing a 14-mesh design stamped cotton canvas, wool yarn, gold metallic embroidery thread, a needle, and full instructions. The 15" x 18½" solid oak frame shown here is also available.

Order Spirit of Eternity No. 00370 for $4.99 plus $1.75 postage and handling. Order Kit and Frame No. 00371 for $33.99 plus $2.00 postage and handling.

Commemorative Stamp Honors Country Singer Jimmie Rodgers

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

The late country singer Jimmie Rodgers will be honored on a new U.S. commemorative stamp to be issued May 24 in his hometown of Meridian, Miss. The U.S. Postal Service says first-day ceremonies will coincide with the annual Jimmie Rodgers Festival being held at that time.

Rodgers, known as the "Singing Brakeman" as a result of early employment as a railroad worker, has been called the "Father of Country Music." He became the first person inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame which opened in 1967. Rodgers died in 1933.

The design of the stamp was first shown to the public via TV on a special program entitled "50 Years of Country Music." It depicts Rodgers in railroad worker's attire holding a guitar. In the background is a miniature steam engine. Atop the stamp is the wording "Jimmie Rodgers" beneath which is his nickname "Singing Brakeman." At the bottom of the adhesive is "Performing Arts USA 13 cents." This stamp is the first in the new Performing Arts and Artists series which commences this year.

The usual two methods of obtaining first-day covers will be in effect and will be specified in this column as soon as details are released by the Postal Service.

The original United States of Colombia was autonomous until 1865. Its constitution reorganized Colombia into national departments, of which some continued to issue stamps up to 1904. These unusual stamps are listed in the Minkus "New World Wide Stamp Catalog," Volume I, Part III (Latin America), 1977-78 edition, now on the market. These Colombian States are Antioquia, Bolivar, Boyaca, Cauca, Cundinamarca, Magdalena, Santander and Tolima. The catalog is available at your local stamp dealer or store.

Kenya commemorates the completion of the new highway extending from Nairobi, Kenya, to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, with the issuance of four new stamps. Each stamp features scenes on the highway and a road sign. The 50-cent shows a Kenya-Ethiopia border point with a jeep in the traffic circle. The next highest value depicts an archer's post with a car passing natives and huts. The third stamp has a view of the new double-lane highway with a bus on an overpass. The highest value shows a game lodge with elephants and water buffalo in the foreground. A souvenir sheet combines the four stamps with a border noting wildlife to be seen from the new highway. The wildlife include elephants, giraffes, leopards and rhinos.

Most of the stamps issued by Pitcairn Islands are based on the well-known story the "Mutiny on the Bounty." On Jan. 23, 1790, the Bounty was set ablaze by the mutineers who settled on Pitcairn. That date is still celebrated as Bounty Day. To honor that historical occasion, Pitcairn has just issued a new set of three stamps. The 6-cent shows the inhabitants building a model of the Bounty which is burned on the annual event holiday. The miniature ship is set afloat in Bounty Bay and burned — to the delight and cheers of the celebrants. The 20-cent stamp illustrates the model floating on the water prior to destruction. The 25-cent depicts the burning of the minature Bounty.

DID YOU KNOW THAT ... each year the U.S. Postal Service issues a new commemorative mint set — a collection of commemorative stamps issued that year. Every stamp in the set is in mint condition, held by an acetate strip ... although simple, one-color postal cards were first issued by the United States in 1873, the first pictorial post card released by the government was issued in 1966. The theme was "Visit the USA."

Enclosed Porch Needs Insulation Under Floor

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — We are going to enclose our front porch so that it can be used all year. I have everything outlined and don't anticipate any trouble in handling the job, but there is one thing I am not sure about. The wooden floor of the porch is in excellent condition and I intend to install plywood underlayment over it and lay floor tiles on the underlayment, but I do not know whether insulation is necessary and where it should be placed. There is enough space under the porch to work there, although it will be a little cramped. Can you advise me on this matter?

A. — Assuming that the space under the floor is unheated, you should place batt insulation there, attaching it to the joists. Be sure the vapor barrier on the insulation is facing the inside of the house. To prevent moisture from rising from the ground and attacking the underside of the floor, place sheets of polyethylene on the soil, overlapping the sheets by a few inches and holding down the seams with sand.

Q. — I have a pretty good idea of what hardboard is, but I am not sure how it differs from composition board. Can you explain it to me?

A. — Hardboard is made by exploding wood chips into a fibrous state, refining the fibers and compressing them into dense rigid panels in hydraulic presses. Composition board is a kind of catch-all term to describe various kinds of products made by mixing or combining certain ingredients. Since the term is used rather loosely for such wall materials as particle board, fiber board and insulation board, among others, it is sometimes difficult to tell from a lumber yard ad exactly what it is, but the one thing you can be sure of is that anything designated as composition board is much softer than hardboard. It is usually fairly sound-absorbent with some insulating value and relatively inexpensive.

Q. — About two years ago, you told a reader how to get a pickled finish on pine wood. I saved the clipping, but now that I have to do a job of that kind, I can't locate the clipping. Could you repeat it for me, please? I am sure there are others who would like to know about it.

A. — The pickled look on almost any kind of wood can be achieved in any one of half a dozen different ways. Every wood finisher has his own pet method, but generally the process involves a stain, sealer, some kind of white paint or white pigmented stain and a final coat of a clear finishing material. Here's one finisher's favorite procedure: Apply a coat of brown or gray stain. Wait a couple of hours, then give it a coat of clear shellac diluted 50 percent with denatured alcohol. When the shellac is dry, usually within an hour or two, brush on some flat white paint, wiping it lightly so that some of the paint remains and stopping when you get the kind of effect that pleases you. The following day, apply the final finish. If it isn't entirely smooth, wait another day, then rub very lightly with fine steel wool. Wipe off all traces of grit, apply wax and buff.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Democrat Objects To Group's Name

AUSTIN (UPI) — Rep. Gibson D. Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has protested to the attorney general and secretary of state about activities of a political group that calls itself "Tarrant County Democrats."

"The name the group uses suggests that they are acting as the Tarrant County Democratic Party, when they are not," Lewis said Wednesday.

Lewis asked the attorney general and secretary of state if the group is violating provisions of the Election Code against usurping the name of a political party or conveying the impression political advertisements emanate from sources other than their true source.

Camera Case Bags Thieves

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Bagging a thief is a familiar expression but when a camera bag literally catches a thief, that's news ... and here's the story.

Our hero is the "System Bag," a distinctive camera case designed by two working professionals, Eric Jacobson and Gary Miller. It was introduced last July and 600 orders from amateurs and professionals poured in following its announcement. It's a waterproof, tan canvas bag designed to carry a complete photographic system but its offbeat design and appearance make it easy to spot and hard to forget.

The System Bag's announcement was a bit ahead of its availability, resulting in a waiting list of up to four months as demand exceeded supply. One photographer who is exceedingly glad he waited is Richard Hutchings, a New York-based freelancer.

Recently, Hutchings finished an assignment and drove to a restaurant near his studio. Knowing the danger of leaving camera equipment in the body of an automobile, he opened the trunk and transferred his System Bag into it. The bag contained a new Hasselblad system, a Nikon motor drive and extra accessories with a value of about $3,000.

When he returned to the car, he discovered the trunk had been opened and the bag and equipment were stolen. Evidently, some sharp-eyed predator had watched Hutchings transfer the camera bag, then enter the restaurant. He went to work while Hutchings went to eat. Needless to say, the photographer's after-meal digestion was disastrous.

A few days later, the owner of a local camera shop where Hutchings bought supplies phoned him. Two young fellows had just been in the store, the dealer told him, and wanted to sell a camera bag with its equipment.

"They offered the stuff at a bargain price," the owner said, "but I recognized the System Bag and remembered you had a Hasselblad outfit. I decided to stall them until I could check with you. I told them I had to get the manager's OK and asked them to return at noon on Friday by which time we'd have the money, too."

The thieves had a redeeming feature — they were punctual with their appointment. The camera store owner was waiting. And so were detectives and Richard Hutchings. The thieves were bagged and Hutchings' digestion improved miraculously.

A camera bag which catches thieves is worth looking into. The story also sounds an alarm for photographers and provides an opportunity to commend alert camera store dealers who make an effort to thwart thieves.

The ideal camera bag, like the ideal camera, has been sought perpetually by photographers. The requirements for an amateur certainly would not suit a professional — literally, it would not be his bag. Many professionals, unhappy with what's been available, have designed their own. That's how the System Bag evolved. Jacobson and Miller spent three years designing and testing it based on their professional needs on assignments. It had to pass on size, weight, capacity, durability and accessibility of contents.

Their bag's heavy-duty waterproof canvas is light enough for easy carrying but strong enough to protect the contents. It measures 7 inches wide, 10 inches deep and 20 1/2 inches long. The main section is divided into four compartments. A typical load capacity might be: three SLR camera bodies, eight lenses, two exposure meters, two strobes, and accessories.

The two end compartments, each 2 1/4 inches wide, can accommodate 30 rolls of unboxed 35mm film each.

The main section and compartment dividers are constructed like a sandwich with the canvas on both sides and a quarter-inch layer of poly foam between them to absorb bumps. The main compartment has Velcro fastenings for quick opening and closing but there are three buckles for between-use security. The cover has a zippered pouch for written material and small electrical gadgets or tools.

The canvas has top and bottom leather patches, heavy-duty stitching and industrial-grade hardware which can support 200 pounds of equipment — far more than any photographer would want to haul. Carrying is done with shoulder straps and-or hand straps, which are handy in crowded hallways, taxis, planes, etc.

Richard Hutchings' experience shows that he made a mistake in transferring his equipment openly where he left his car. The equipment should have been in the trunk before he parked his car. He could have stopped en route to make the switch. Or he should have taken the equipment with him into the restaurant. It's a bit inconvenient, but better security.

Another suggestion: never leave empty film boxes or cartons or anything that is linked with a valuable possession in view anywhere in a car. Passing prying eyes can spot a clue and it may tempt a rip-off artist to investigate a car trunk.

Registration Of Vehicles Due In Week

For you procrastinators who haven't renewed your 1977 vehicle registrations yet, after today there are only five more days to do so at the tax assessor's office in the county courthouse.

The deadline for having the 1978 registration sticker on your car is midnight Saturday, April 1. Tax assessor Russell Hardin said his office will not be open that day, making 5 p.m. next Friday the last chance for renewals.

Spokesmen for the Department of Public Safety and the city police department say there will be no grace period for drivers who are on the streets past the deadline without the 1978 stickers on their vehicles.

A DPS spokesman said the fine could range from $100 to $200 for anyone caught driving a vehicle with outdated registration tags.

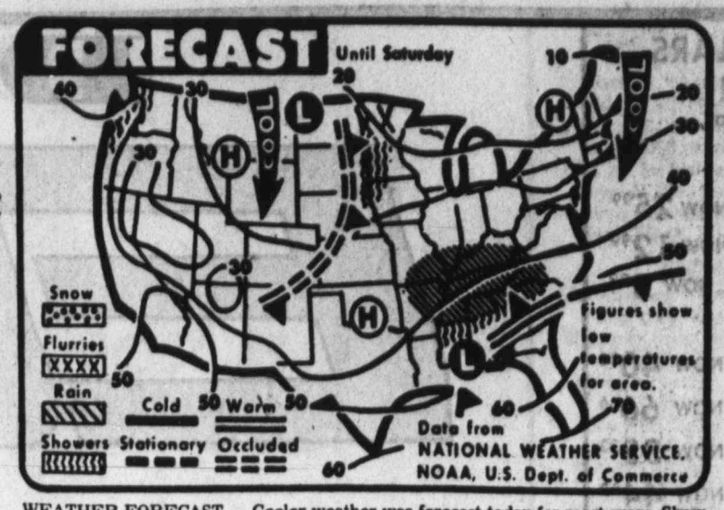
The tax assessor's office will close today at 5 p.m. and will be open next week from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Hardin said the lines this week have filled the outside walks in front of the courthouse, and were moving through at a rate of about 250 persons per hour. He stressed that the line moves faster if people have their renewal notice from Austin when their turn comes up.

Hardin said this morning about 131,000 county residents had renewed their auto registrations, and at least 34,000 more persons were expected to gather in the lines before the deadline.

The tax assessor said lines are already long by 8 a.m. and he could not suggest any time during the day when registrants might find a shorter waiting period.

The deadline for renewing registrations through the mail was March 1. R.W. Townsley, director of the motor vehicle division of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said it is taking longer to register vehicles this year because of the new staggered registration system.



WEATHER FORECAST — Cooler weather was forecast today for most areas. Showers and rain were expected from the western Gulf to the Midwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

World Economy Seminar Slated

Dr. Walt W. Rostow, widely known in national academic and political circles, will conduct a seminar on the world economy for Texas Tech University faculty and graduate students March 31 at 3 p.m. in room 129 Holden Hall.

Dr. Rostow has been an important figure in the academic world, particularly in the area of economic history, and in U.S. government affairs for the last four decades. He currently is on the faculty of the University of Texas at Austin.

He served as assistant to the executive secretary of the Economic Community for Europe in the late forties. From 1951-60 he served as special assistant for National Security Affairs to the U.S. President.

During 1961-66, Dr. Rostow was chairman of the Policy Planning Council of the U.S. Department of State and on the National Security Council. He was one of the principal architects of the Alliance for Progress program and had input into administration policy on Vietnam.

In addition to the seminar, he will speak at the annual banquet of Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary society. His address will be on "The Fifth Kondratieff Upswing and What it Means for You."

Dr. Rostow will visit Texas Tech at the invitation of the deans of the Graduate School and of Arts and Sciences and of the chairperson of the History Department.

DEAF JUROR

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A computer typist from Lomita may become the first deaf juror in the state, if court officials can solve insurance and interpreting problems. Elizabeth M. Ash, 55, was accepted tentatively on Wednesday for jury duty by the Los Angeles County Superior Court Jury Commission, which previously has accepted other handicapped persons.

Mackey Names Woman As Legal Counsel

Dr. Marilyn E. Phelan has been appointed legal counsel for Texas Tech University, a position she has held on an interim basis since last September.

Dr. Phelan is the first woman at Texas Tech to be appointed to a high-ranking administrative position.

She was named to the interim post by Texas Tech President Cecil Mackey following the resignation of Carlton B. Dodson to accept an associate judgeship on the Seventh Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

In announcing her appointment as legal counsel, Dr. Mackey said, "We are pleased that Dr. Phelan has accepted this position. She has demonstrated her abilities as a scholar, as a teacher and as an administrator."

Dr. Phelan has been associated with Texas Tech since 1967, when she left the private practice of law to join the faculty of the College of Business Administration. In 1974 she was appointed to the Law School faculty. She also has served as associate graduate dean since 1973.

An honor graduate of Texas Tech, Dr. Phelan completed the law degree with honors at The University of Texas and the master's and doctorate of business administration at Texas Tech. She also is a Certified Public Accountant.

Author of numerous publications, Dr. Phelan has been honored as outstanding professor, outstanding doctoral candidate and recipient of the American Jurisprudence Awards for Excellence in Federal Taxation and in Brief Writing.

She also has served as a consultant, appointed by the Secretary of Defense, for the U.S. Air Force Institute of Technology Subcommittee of Air University Board of Visitors.

Her husband, Harold Phelan, is a Hockley County attorney. They have three children.

Architects Schedule Meeting At Tech

The officers of the Texas Society of Architects will meet Tuesday and Wednesday in room 101 of the Architecture Building on the Texas Tech campus.

The two-day session will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday with a joint meeting of the Lubbock and the student chapters of the American Institute of Architects. Houston architect Preston Bolton, president of TSA, and Des Taylor, executive director of TSA in Austin, will present the program.

Bolton and Taylor also will be speaking to Tech architectural students about the Town Meeting 78 program, a year-long program spearheaded by Bolton.

Council Hopefuls Differ On Political Attitudes

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In their bids to win votes, city council candidates Thursday voiced differing political philosophies to representatives of several minority organizations.

Several of the 10 candidates speaking at the political forum cited their qualifications and reasons for seeking office while others chose to highlight issues such as crime, utility costs and property taxes.

Place 3 contestants Bob Schmidt, M.J. Aderton, Maria Mercado and Glad Norman singled out differing topics to present to the audience, comprised of representatives from minority organizations such as the NAACP, GI Forum, LULAC and PALMA.

The fact that in 1977 only half as many speeding tickets were issued as were given in 1975 "tells me crime is taking away from our traffic problem," Norman said, citing crime and traffic as his major concerns.

The police force needs additional manpower, he added.

Fuel cost pass-throughs should be reviewed by the entire council monthly and not by a rate analyst, Norman said. He also advocated studies on "the water situation," traffic problems and Community Development block grant funding policies.

Schmidt cited his several years of experience on the Planning and Zoning Commission as a qualification for office, explaining the experience has taught him to consider both sides in any issue.

He came out strong for cooperation among all segments of society. "I don't think we can overlook one segment of our society particularly while we're running an at-large election," he said.

Until the system is changed, he added, it is "incumbent on each elected official" to be responsible for representing all citizens.

The city's police force needs community support, not increased numbers, Schmidt said.

And, he said, all parts of the city must coordinate with county and state officials in an effort to fight crime and improve the judicial system.

Aderton told the group he wants to "set a trend toward a more responsible, less indulgent" society. Lubbock is a multi-ethnic city and all segments must be treated equally, he said.

He suggested fighting crime by cracking down on vandals, saying that "kids are protected that should not be protected." And, he added, repeat offenders must be taken out of circulation.

After citing numerous court cases involving past and current elected officials in Lubbock, Miss Mercado adjured the audience of about 25 people to support her as an elected official who would face difficult decisions.

She said the lawsuits she cited could have been avoided had elected officials made "difficult" decisions. Each time a suit is lost, she said, citizens hand to a judge part of their decision-making freedom.

"You can either wait until a citizen files a lawsuit or a federal agency starts interfering" or someone can be elected who will face the decisions that have to be made, she said.

Miss Mercado said she believes solving the crime problem means delving deeply into the factors that cause people to break the law. Often those reasons involve economic or familial pressures, she said.

The solution will be a long-range one, she added. And, she said, she believes the city should recruit "more people that are humane" in the police force.

The police force's brutality rate is too high, she said, advocating a citizens group to "monitor police actions."

Mayoral candidate Leland Kelly told the minority groups that he understands the problems of eastside residents and charged that "too many councilmen are on boards and everything that want to help the westside and westside only."

The city's eastern sector needs better roads, he said. And, Kelly said, of all the mayoral candidates only he and James Marshall "can devote all our time to the race."

He also advocated dropping a minimum electric charge and constant council review of automatic fuel cost pass-throughs.

Kelly endorsed the concept of a crime prevention unit as a good means of fighting crime. Citizens also should mark their belongings, he said.

Verbal fisticuffs erupted during the three-hour meeting when Place 1 opponents Mike Stevens and Alan Henry aimed personal swipes at each other.

Stevens initiated the exchange when he told the audience that he voted for Henry four years ago. "And that is why I chose to run," he said, adding that the present council does not review automatic fuel cost pass-throughs, does not plan for adequate traffic dispersal and often awards construction contracts to out-of-town companies.

And, Stevens said, during the four years Henry has served as Place 3 council member, the city's annual operating budget increased from about $30 million to about $64 million. He said the increase averages 17 percent yearly and added, "Is there anyone in this room who gets a 17 percent annual raise?"

During his five-minute address, Henry rejected Stevens's claim as a "fallacious statement." The incumbent councilman said that the 17 percent figure is based on all city expenditures, including the cost of gas to Lubbock Power and Light.

The fact, Henry said, is that the average increase in the budget over the past four years has been about 11 percent annually.

"The first thing a city councilman needs to do is to be accurate," Henry sparred.

Stevens also blasted what he said is a council contention that ad valorem taxes are not being increased. "That's bull and you know it," he claimed.

He said that property tax re-evaluations, usually made every four years, constitute tax increases. As an alternative to that system, he proposed that ad valorem taxes be attached to a real estate index that would shift as the property market changed.

And he suggested that crime in Lubbock be fought by a crime prevention unit comprised of policemen who would work with citizens to safeguard property. After citing the work of similar units in other Texas cities, Stevens said, "You can't tell me it doesn't work and you can't tell me we can't afford it. We can't afford not to."

In his presentation, Henry took a different approach , citing council accomplishments during his tenure. They include installing a traffic signal at Parkway Drive and Zenith Avenue and stop signs in the Arnett-Benson area.

He listed as his major concerns the "practice of good money management" and a continued search for a "long-range water supply" for the city. The council is "now actively engaged in negotiating" for water rights, Henry adding:

"And frankly, someone new on the council would take a couple of years to learn" what is happening. "And I just don't think we have two years," he said.

Mayoral candidate Robert Kizer addressed utilities, crime and property re-evaluations as major concerns.

He called for more careful audits of how the gas company spends its profits, saying, " We need to find out where the profit is going." He explained he believes the company's recent profits may be a "little unreasonable" as a fair rate of return on its investments.

The city "needs to increase minority policemen who understand minority problems," Kizer said, adding, "How can an Anglo understand the human relations problems of a Mexican or a black?"

"I don't think he can," he added.

During later audience questioning, Kizer expanded his idea by saying crime problems could be resolved by educating the public and humanizing the police force. "The police force many times does not approach the human side of crime," he said. The force often has an attitude of worrying only about getting ahead or promotions, Kizer added.

He advocated a citizens commission to oversee police activities and placing minority officers on patrol in predominantly minority neighborhoods.

Kizer also said that property re-evaluations are a form of tax increases and suggested the city needs "a decreasing type of re-evaluation system."

James Marshall, another mayoral candidate, rated utility rates as the city's most "pressing matter." "I don't think our rates have been set equal and uniform," he said, adding that there are too many unmetered street lights and "a lot of freeloading."

He advocated forcing Southwestern Public Service Co. to pay half of the cost of lighting streets and other areas of the city.

Such action, Marshall said, would mean lower rates for all consumers because the cost of paying unmetered lights is "all added in to the cost of what we pay on our bill at home."

He responded to the question of how to reduce crime here by saying that the police department is under the control of the city manager.

And, Marshall said, "It's the policy of the City of Lubbock that the mayor and the city council members cannot speak to the police chief without the permission of the city manager."

"It's very confusing and it's against the charter," he added.

Dirk West, third of the four mayoral aspirants, cited rising crime rates and a "disastrous" traffic record as part of the problems that accompany city growth.

During his four-year term as mayor pro tem, West said, he has tried to be responsive to the citizens. His experience is his campaign platform, he said.

"I won't go into a lot of political rhetoric but I will tell you that you're citizens and I will work with you," he added.

Banking Law Institute Set

Texas Tech University School of Law and the Texas Association of Bank Counsels will sponsor a Banking Law Institute on March 30-31 at the South Park Inn of Lubbock.

The program is designed to benefit the attorney new to the field of banking law, the experienced practitioner and the bank officer. The institute is set up to cover a broad range of banking law topics and to give insight into current developments, trends and problems in the field.

Robert E. Wood, institute director and professor in the Texas Tech School of Law, said the institute should provide opportunity for examination of timely topics interesting to bankers and their lawyers.

"The program will appeal to those whose entire practice is confined to banking law and to those who simply may have as a client a bank or an individual with banking problems," Woody said.

The institute will begin March 30, at 8 a.m. with late registration followed by welcoming remarks by Dean Frank Elliott, of the School of Law and Jack Wessler, president of the Texas Association of Bank Counsels.

The March 31 session will begin at 9:30 a.m. with an update of Articles 3 and 4 of the Uniform Commercial Code. Other session topics will be bank holding company activities and branch banking and usury.

Registration for the institute will be $70 per person and includes two luncheon and coffee breaks.

For information or to register write to: First Banking Law Institute, Texas Tech University School of Law, P.O. Box 4030, Lubbock, Texas 79409.

New Zealanders Rib Speech Of Aussies

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

WHAKAREWAREWA, New Zealand — One of the truths a chap quickly learns when travelling about this world is that the funniest and the stupidest people are always located across on the next island or over the next border.

The Spaniards think the Portuguese are hilariously inept at the art of everyday living and therefore make them the butt of all sorts of jokes, like painting a stripe on the side of the boat to mark where the fish were biting in the bay or hijacking a garbage truck as an act of urban terrorism.

Mulligan's Stew

Ever since the fighting resumed in Ulster and began going against them, the British resumed telling Irish jokes as a defense mechanism, like the one about the IRA man being sent out to blow up a bus but being unable to carry out the assignment because he burned his lips on the exhaust pipe.

The Norwegians jest that the Finnish national dance is a knife fight, and the Greeks will tell you that a Turk born with 11 toes grows up to become a mathematician, and the Romanians are convinced that the only thing dumber than a dumb Hungarian is a smart Bulgarian.

Even in a place with a funny name like Whakarewarewa, where the landscape looks more like a moonscape and has the funny habit of bubbling up with boiling mud pools and shooting hot steam and scalding water into the air, to say nothing of boiling an occasional tourist alive, the native New Zealanders think there is nothing funnier around the premises than an Australian tourist.

Just the way he talks makes him a more outlandish creature to the average New Zealander than the kiwi bird, the flightless retarded cousin of the dodo which is the sort of national emblem here.

"Do you know what the difference is between a bison and a buffalo in Australia?" asked the taxi driver who had just dropped off a group of Aussies at the airport.

Before we could even hazard a guess, he was slapping his knee with a resounding smack, because of his short pants, and laughing up a storm at his own answer:

"In Australia, a bison is something you wash your hands in." The joke here being that such is the manner in which an Australian would pronounce the word basin. The New Zealanders, whose delivery of the mother tongue would bring tears of anguish to Sir John Gielgud, can't get over the way the Australians massacre the Queen's English.

Whakarewarewa, sensibly better known as Whaka, is a hotel-filled suburb of Rotorua, a city of 50,000 people that is New Zealand's biggest tourist attraction, because of scalding plumes of steam and hissing geysers that bring in a half a million tourists a year, many of them Australians. The natives claim "the diggers," which is even more impolite than calling them Aussies, come to this spectacular thermal display to get their suits dry cleaned for free.

Since almost everyone, especially the men, goes about town in short pants, the locals will advise you that the way you can tell an Australian from a New Zealander is by looking for the two-inch white line around his left ankle and observing a slight list to port as he ambles down the street.

"That's where the ball and chain used to be," they'll laugh, a reminder that the neighboring nation and chief rival in cricket, soccer, rugby, beer drinking and all other cultural pursuits was colonized to a significant extent by emptying out his majesty's prisons.

An Australian historian doing a down under version of "roots," I was told here, would begin first by searching the guest books of the Old Bailey and Newgate prison. This hereditary aspersion on the neighboring commonwealth is remarkable in a land where Jock Mackenzie, a world class sheep stealer, has a whole valley named for him.

New Zealand is the only country in the world I have visited where the hotels carry this singular accusatory notice in your bathroom:

"For our guests' comfort we have equipped all our rooms with the highest quality of towelling. To allow us to maintain this standard the management would be grateful if guests would appreciate that these items are not souvenirs of the hotel."

The chambermaid, a charming Maori girl, told me it was necessary to remind the guests not to swipe the towels "because we get so many Australians coming here." But a spokesman for the tourist hotel corporation, the government agency that owns 13 of the luxury hotels displaying this extraordinary notice, said the home folks were more to blame than the out islanders, since the occupancy rate was runing "80 per cent New Zealanders and 20 per cent from overseas."

Towels are not the only souvenirs taken away by the guest. The Mon Desir Hotel reported that thieves one night stole six color televison sets, the house cat and the parrot in the downstaris bar.

No holes have been reported missing however at Arikikapakapa, which is the golf course in Whakarewarewa, probably because the course does some stealing on its own from both Australians and locals alike by gobbling up golf balls and digesting them in its 240-degree mud craters, called dongas, on the 6th and 9th holes. The rules at this unique New Zealand club require a one-stroke penalty for landing in one of these steaming hell holes lest too many foursomes boil down to instant threesomes or less.

And that's no joke.

Park Service Seeks Ban Of Motorboats On River

By ALICE Z. CUNEO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The battle of the oar vs. the motor came to Washington today in the sixth of a series of National Park Service hearings on a proposal to ban motorboats from a 277-mile white-water stretch of the Colorado River.

More than 20 concessionaires hold government permits to bring thrill-seekers down the river at from $300 to $1,000 per person, depending on the length of the trip. Some of the motorized rafts hold as many as 40 persons, a Park Service spokesman said.

But the Park Service wants to phase out the use of motor boats over three years starting in 1981, and to increase the number of private boat owners who are allowed use of the river.

"The trip would be just as safe and much more enjoyable in an oar-powered boat," said Dustry Jarvis of the National Park and Conservation Association.

Jarvis, who supports the plan, said the river has suffered from some oil and gas spills and noise pollution, as well as from travelers who have beaten their own paths along the shores.

"In the past, the river would wash away their tracks, but now, with the controls on the river flow from all the nearby dams, the paths just remain," the spokesman said. He said the service wants to limit foot traffic to designated trails.

In addition, he said some visitors climb partially up the mile-high canyon, creating their own trails and "wrecking the appearance and the ecology."

The service also wants to give 30 percent of its use permits to non-commercial private users who now receive only 8 percent of them.

"So many private parties have requested permits to use the river we've had to turn to a lottery system," said a spokesman.

The service also plans to increase to year-round the river's current 3 1/2-month season in spring and summer — when about 14,000 persons use the river.

"The new system would allow longer trips and increase usage," the spokesman said, although the number of people using the river in cold weather would not match the warmer usage.

Concessionaires have campaigned against the motor ban, contacting their customers and voicing opposition, a Sierra Club spokesman said. The result is delayed implementation, he said.

Debate Growing On Resurrection

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Easter, for Christians, is the bedrock of their faith: the celebration of the miracle of Christ's resurrection from the dead that testifies to the belief that Jesus was both God and man.

The Apostles Creed, one of the church's most ancient formulations of faith, states the church's belief bluntly in its second article:

"And in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost; born of the Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate; was crucified dead and buried; he descended into hell; the third day he rose again from the dead; he ascended into heaven..."

This year, however, Easter will be celebrated in the midst of a growing, debate about the nature of Jesus — whether, indeed, the church's ancient claim that Jesus was both God and man can still be advocated as truth.

Ironically, the questions being asked about Jesus come not from atheists, agnostics but from respected and influential theologians inside Christianity.

And it is a debate that involves both Roman Catholics and Protestants, so-called liberal theologians and teachers from denominations generally thought to be conservative.

At the center of the debate among Roman Catholics stands Dr. Hans Kung, the controversial German theologian who has been called the most pivotal thinker in contemporary Catholicism.

This week Doubleday and Company will publish a new Kung manifesto, "Signposts for the Future," and it once again addresses those questions that have gotten the Tubingen theologian into hot water with church authorities.

Kung, for instance, challenges the traditional understanding of Easter.

"Resurrection does not mean either a return to life in space and time or a continuation of life in space and time," he argues, "but the assumption into that incomprehensible and comprehensive last and first reality which we all God."

"Death is not canceled," Kung writes, meaning there is "no revival of a corpse." But death is "definitely conquered" and Jesus is "living forever" in a different, "eternal" life.

Traditionally, Easter has meant the empty tomb and a bodily resurrected Christ who appears to and walks among the disciples.

To undercut this miracle, according to the traditional understanding, is to undercut the foundation of the church's life and faith.

Challenges to the authenticity of the resurrection are not new.

Among Protestant theologians, in particular, the resurrecion has been increasingly viewed as a myth or legend since the time of the Enlightment and the beginning of the so-called "quest for the historical Jesus."

They are part of the study, technically called Christology, of the true nature of Jesus — a study which extends back to the earliest years of the Christianity.

In the pre-Enlightenment days, Christology was done based on the "from above" theory: Jesus was first confessed as the Son of God, the second person of the Trinity which also included God the creator and the Holy Spirit.

That theory proclaimed that Jesus was the divine Son of God. He became incarnate of the Virgin Mary through a miraculous conception by the Holy Spirit and did a number of miracles during his earthly ministry, such as curing the ill, turning water to wine, feeding the 5,000 and raising the dead.

He was crucified on the cross and then miraculously raised from the dead by God and physically reappeared on earth to his disciples and others.

With the Enlightenment, however, there came increasing attacks on the historical nature of many of the stories about Jesus.

These were fed and supported by the new ways of reading the Bible made academically popular by the so-called historical-critical method of biblical interpretation — a method which sought to isolate historical fact from legend and myth in the biblical account.

The historical-critical method of reading the bible especially challenged the accounts of Jesus' miracles, explaining his acts of healing, for instance, as cases of psychosomatic illnesses. This was a "from below" Christology that sought to separate the "historical" Jesus from the Jesus of myth and legend.

More recently, this effort has gone beyond questioning the stories about Jesus and focused on the even more fundamental issue of whether or in what matter Jesus can be considered God.

Kung is not alone, even among Roman Catholic theologians in challenging the traditional, creedal formulations of the nature of Jesus.

In the Netherlands, citadel of progressive Roman Catholicism since the time of the Second Vatican Council, debate on the nature of Jesus has been going on since the mid-1960s.

Jesuit scholar Piet Schoonenberg, for example, has rejected the "two nature" — God and man — description of Jesus formulated in the Nicene Creed to talk instead of the "complete presence" of God in Jesus.

Another Dutch scholar, Edward Schillebeeckx, describes Jesus as a human being who through the course of his ministry gradually grew closer to God.

Anglican and Protestant scholars, particularly in Britain, have also gotten into the debate.

Last year, seven British theologians published a collection of essays, "The Myth of God Incarnate," which stunned the British church-going public by asserting Jesus was only "a man approved by God" for a special mission but that the notion of him as "God incarnate" is mythological or poetic.

While denying the deity of Christ, the theologians still want to make Jesus unique.

John Hick, the editor of the volume, wrote that Jesus "is the one in following whom we have found ourselves in God's presence....He is our sufficient model of true humanity in a perfect relationship to God."

Another contributor, Frances Young, wrote that "I find myself able to say: 'I see God in Jesus' and 'God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself' and other such traditional statements without necessarily having to spell it out in terms of a literal incarnation."

The book was immediately answered by five conservative and equally prominent British theologians in a book, "The Truth of God Incarnate." This book saw the question about Jesus' incarnation as a direct result of the attack on the idea of the resurrection.

These writers seek to prove that both Jesus' descriptions of himself in the Scriptures and the early history of the church all point to a belief in Jesus as the incarnate son of God — a belief that contemporary scholarship cannot undermine by claiming Jesus did not believe that about himself.

Jesus' self-understanding has become the focal point in the most controversial instance of the debate in the United States — the case of Dr. Robert Alley, formerly head of the religion department at the University of Richmond in Richmond, Va. While the university has cut many of its ties to the church it is still strongly supported by Southern Baptists, who founded it.

Alley was removed from of the school's religion department after he was quoted by a local newspaper as saying that Jesus did not claim to be God. Instead, Alley speculated that the biblical passages which talk about Jesus as the "Son of God" are later additions — made by the biblical writers out their personal experience of Jesus and the Easter experience.

Some contemporary theologians, however, are attempting to shape a view of Christ based solidly on the resurrection as a real event in history while still making use of all the tools of contemporary scholarship and without taking a defensive, fundamentalist approach to the issue.

Among the most prominent of these is the German Wolfhart Panneberg.

Panneberg's major work on the question, "Jesus — God and Man," is an attack on 20th century theologians who deny the reality of the resurrection.

He believes that the resurrection stories in the New Testament can only be plausibly and rationally explained by accepting the hypothesis that the resurrection actually took place and that other explanations offered by 20th century theologians and biblical scholars do not adequately explain the rise of the tradition.

Pannenberg's work is beginning to receive increased attention in the United States and while both evangelical and liberal theologians will be critical of it, a growing number of scholars and preachers are finding in it a point of departure for expressing their faith in contemporary manner without splitting from the traditional formulations of the faith.

For the vast majority of church-goers, however, the scholarly debate means little to their own Easter experience.

Christians Focus On Odd Symbol

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

To some, it might seem an odd symbol. It's a rack of torture, an instrument of pain, shame and death. Yet the cross is the chief emblem of Christians, and to them, the sign of hopeful realism.

Their attention focuses on it today as they meditate on its meaning.

In churches across the land, believers gathered to reflect on Christ's hours of dying on the cross and its implications about our existence.

"The cross is folly to those who are perishing," writes the missionary-apostle Paul, but it is "the power of God and the wisdom of God."

It says, most obviously, that rough and brutal agonies rend our world, that there is hurt and tragedy even for the best of lives, that good is trampled, the innocent abused.

It's a hard reality, etched in the daily headlines of wars, refugees, sickness, hunger, disasters and death, and some call it all a madhouse, an absurd jungle, giving up on it, hunting escape in distractions, "spacing" out.

But curiously, the Christian stance embraces this tangled life as basically gracious despite its travail, and finds hope in it, even in its harshest of injustices, in the cross itself.

"It says that God is suffering with us," the Rev. John Shea comments in the U.S. Catholic, published in Chicago. "He is on the cross. Our suffering is not alone and somehow it will be brought to new life in ways we don't know yet."

That's why the day commemorating the crucifixion is called "Good Friday." To believers, it says that God himself, as mirrored in our dimension in Christ, suffers the anguish of this somehow disordered, human-run world, cherishing it, even though it kills him.

But why the atrocities? Why, the old question goes, does God allow the horrors, the unfairness, the evil?

It's a tough question, with many answers attempted, primarily that mankind was given the dignity of free will, to choose well or wrongly, and that he often does the latter to baleful effect.

In many ways also, the suffering chastens and educates against the blunders, ignorance and flawed acts and attitudes. "Tears clear the eye," an old adage puts it. Trouble, to a degree, also can build character and courage.

"Suffering produces endurance and endurance produces character and character produces hope and hope does not disappoint us," Paul writes.

Finally, however, theologians say that many of the imbalances and afflictions of life remain unexplainable. As the voice out of the whirlwind told the protesting Job, it's not his business, but God's.

Yet the cross says he is "with people in their pain," Shea observes. "It's very hopeful. But it's not the type of hope that ignores the tragedy and pain. It's not Pollyanna." It says "that God is sacrificial love."

That's the theological crux of it; he bears the brunt of it, somewhat like a parent dying to save a drowning child who in ignorance or defiance has strayed beyond his depth.

"Father, forgive them," Jesus implored from the cross, "for they know not what they do."

And he died. Yet the process doesn't end there, but opens up a greater frontier. Through his involvement, all the questions, fears, injustice and dying gives way to an overpowering triumph of resurrection.

"In the world you have tribulation," Jesus said. "But be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

Christians, as G. K. Chesterton put it, believe life is too important to be anything but life. In facing its trials and dying, Shea says, "perhaps the most useful virtue man can take with him is a capacity for surprise."

Religion Roundup

INDIANAPOLIS — The National Conference of Catholic Charities says it is planning ways to expand its work and service in rural areas beyond the usual reach of urban church offices.

Monsignor Lawrence J. Corcoran, executive director of the country's largest non-profit aid organization, called the new efforts at 'humane policies" and assistance in rural areas a "dramatic breakthrough."

NEW YORK — In a Lenten message, Greek Orthodox Archbishop Iakovos called for 'spiritual engagement" to stem modern influences that weaken the faith.

The message, read in parishes March 19 at the start of the Eastern Orthodox Lent five weeks after that period began in Western churches, urged restored emphasis on prayer and fasting to provide the "stamina to cope" with present-day challenges.

WASHINGTON — A national Roman Catholic educational official has expressed opposition to the Carter administration's proposal for creation of a cabinet-level department of education.

Monsignor Wilfrid H. Paradis, education secretary for the U.S. Catholic Conference, testifying this week on the legislation, said it offers no clear benefits, could lead to "excessive and unwanted" federal intrusion and probably would hurt non-public schools.

ST. LOUIS — The Rev. George S. Schultz of Minneapolis, an American Lutheran Church official, was elected to a third one-year term as president of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. at its annual meeting. It embraces the three main bodies of U.S. Lutheranism.

SEATTLE — Continued attention to issues of social justice by the National Federation of Priests' Councils was indicated at its annual convention by re-election of the Rev. James Ratigan as president.

In defeating a challenger, the Rev. James Hogan of Helena, Mont., Ratigan of Joliet, Ill., declared in a campaign speech:

"There are those who would ask the NFPC to retreat from its traditional commitment to social justice — those who would advocate not growth but a lessening of resolve, but I say emphatically, 'no'. Hopefully we have moved beyond the days of departmentalizing the social justice ministry of priests apart from our understanding of priestly ministry.

NEW YORK — Conservative Judaism has introduced a new teaching curriculum described as a means for revolutionizing Jewish education.

The United Synagogue of America, representing conservative congregations, said the new curriculum for 635 congregational schools stressed depth rather than breadth by concentrating on special areas of study, abandoning the "mile-wide, inch-deep" approach.

WASHINGTON — Kachin Baptists in northern Burma expected 50,000 people for their centennial celebration, says a report to Baptist World Alliance offices, and prepared for the occasion by rounding up 350 cattle, 750 pigs, 1,000 chickens and 5,000 baskets of rice for food.

Supplies had to be beefed up for the 100,000 who attended, including 6,215 converts baptized in the Irrawaddy River. The BWA says the number of Christians in Burma has grown from 207,345 in 1962 to 321,525.

Hospital Standards To Go Into Effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Claiming there are too many hospital beds in the country, the government has established the first national hospital standards.

The standards, which go into effect Friday and give local areas five years to bring themselves into line, represent a significant retreat from "mandatory" rules that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposed last September. The HEW rules say there should be fewer than four general hospital beds per 1,000 population in a community, with an 80 percent occupancy rate. There are now about 4.4 beds per 1,000 nationwide and a 75 percent occupancy rate.

Massachusetts Letter Filed Under 'Crackpot'

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., has a file on Carolyn Martin. It's listed under "C" for "crackpots."

It all started with the Senate debate on the Panama Canal treaties.

Mrs. Martin wants the treaties passed, but Allen is a vocal opponent. Mrs. Martin saw Allen on television and wrote to tell him she thought he was wrong.

"Your amendment is wrong, so please join forces with those who are seeking to pass the treaties as written," she wrote. Mrs. Martin said this week her letter wasn't very long.

But in a series of afterthoughts scrawled on the envelope, she wrote: "Please stop taking umbrage to derogatory statements about your constituents. Please stop arguing about your correctness and insisting on the order of considering the treaties. It's a dead horse. You make me very angry. What a waste of time."

Mrs. Martin said she also printed "pro Panama Canal treaties opinion" on the envelope "so they wouldn't have to waste time reading it if they didn't want to."

"Dear Mrs. Martin," Mitchell wrote. "I'm writing to advise you that your letter has been received and placed in Sen. Allen's crackpot file.

"There are quite a few letters from Massachusetts in this file. Evidently your state is a melting pot for neurotics, cranks and other individuals with subnormal mentalities."

Mitchell said he "may have overreacted a bit and I apologize to her if I offended her. But I don't retract the thing.

"The way the letter was written and things scrawled all over the back of the envelope carried kind of a crackpot connotation," he said.

"The replies to Massachusetts may be somewhat sharper than those to Alabama residents because the senator isn't running for anything but senator from Alabama."

GI Forum To Celebrate Group's 30th Birthday

The local chapter of the American GI Forum has slated Sunday through April 1 as "American GI Forum Week" here in honor of the national organization's 30th anniversary.

During the week the local chapter has scheduled a Wednesday open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Veterans Outreach Program center, 2020 4th St.

"The event is open to the public and we'll be giving information on the GI Forum and what we're trying to accomplish in Lubbock," said Leopoldo Quirino, a spokesman for the group.

He added that the organization has been actively supporting the desegregation of Lubbock's schools and has advocated the concept of single-member district representation on the city council.

"We also have given financial as well as moral support to the cases of Joe Campos Torres and Larry Lozano, who died within the past year while in the custody of Texas lawmen," Quirino said. "We maintain that civil rights were violated in the two cases."

At the forum's open house, persons also will have the opportunity to obtain information about the Veterans Outreach Program, Business Development Centers and SER, which are sponsored by the forum.

The Veterans Outreach Program offers counseling and job placement services to veterans; Business Development Centers which assist minorities in establishing or strengthening a business; and SER, a program which is attempting to help the economically disadvantaged by offering them vocational training and job placement.

The forum co-sponsors the SER/Jobs for Progress program along with the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC).

The week's activities will be capped with a dance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Naval Reserve Center, 2903 4th St.

Proceeds from the dance will go towards a scholarship given annually by the forum to an outstanding student in need of financial help to continue his or her education.

"The scholarship was established here because of our organization's motto: Education is Our Freedom, and Freedom Should Be Everybody's Business," Quirino said.

The American GI Forum was founded by Dr. Hector P. Garcia on March 26, 1948, in Corpus Christi to seek the social, economic and political rights of Mexican-Americans.

Its organization was sparked by the death of Felix Longoria, who was killed in action on June 16, 1945 in the Pacific during the last days of World War II.

When his body was returned home to Three Rivers for burial, the local funeral home refused to accept his remains.

Dr. Garcia, a former combat surgeon, contacted an old friend, Texas Rep. Lyndon Baines Johnson, and Johnson arranged for Longoria to be buried at the Arlington National Cemetery.

Within three years, Dr. Garcia organized the forum to fight what he felt was discriminatory treatment against Mexican-American servicemen returning from World War II. .

"Basically, in the beginning, the forum was primarily interested in working for the rights of Mexican-American veterans," Quirino said. "But, now we're trying to work for the civil rights of all, not just the veteran."

VA Eyes Chemical's Link To Illnesses

CHICAGO (AP) — The Veterans Administration says it is looking into complaints of veterans' health problems that may be due to exposure to Agent Orange, a toxic chemical used in Vietnam.

The VA said Thursday it is investigating 27 cases of veterans who complained of symptoms which may have been caused by exposure to the chemical, used during the war to kill vegetation.

The disclosure came shortly before WBBM-TV anchorman Bill Kurtis reported in a copyright story that veterans have complained to the VA in recent months about numbness in their fingers, diminished sex drive, aborted offspring or children born with birth defects, rashes, fatigue and nervousness.

VA spokesman Vern Rogers said symptoms of the 27 Chicago-area veterans include skin rashes and nervousness.

Rogers said most of them are not suffering "anything intense" now, "but if they suffer any serious illness 10 years from now, they want it in their records that they were in the defoliant areas."

In Washington, the VA said the 27 complaints in Chicago are the only ones it has received concerning the defoliants.

Dr. Paul Haber, assistant chief VA medical director for professional services, said the literature on the long-range effects is not too clear "so the answers are not in, but the literature tends not to support any great toxicity of the agents used, only mildly and moderately toxic."

On a short term basis, Haber said, exposure could cause "transitional toxic effect, such as swelling or gastic-indigestive effect such as nausea or vomiting."

But he said "our attitude must be one of alertness" with sympathetic attention to the veterans' claims.

The VA said it is getting the views of such agencies as the Environmental Protection Agency and the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The broadcast said 10 million gallons of the herbicide were sprayed during the Vietnam War from 1962 to 1969.

Agent Orange is created by mixing two other herbicides, 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, and contains dioxin, a deadly poison.

Rogers said VA employee Maude De Victor touched off the investigation when she processed a claim for the widow of former Air Force Sgt. Charles Owens, who died of cancer last summer. Ethel Owens claimed that Agent Orange was a factor in her husband's death.

Rogers said an Air Force study showed that there is "absolutely no evidence" that Agent Orange can cause deaths. He added that as part of the investigation, VA physicians soon will examine eight Chicago-area veterans who have filed claims with the VA.

Lubbock Unemployment Creeps To 4.3 Percent

Unemployment in Lubbock climbed one-tenth of a percent from January to February, but the 4.3 percent unemployment rate for the second month of the year was down from last year's 4.6 percent for February.

And Lubbock's unemployment picture still compares "favorably" with state and nationwide levels as preliminary February data showed a 5.4 percent figure for Texas and a national rate above 6.0, the Texas Employment Commission said today.

TEC figures show that the total Lubbock labor force in mid-February was about 98,980, and that total employment was 94,690, — down slightly from January. But it said that employment figure was 5 percent above the February 1977, level.

The commission predicts a May total employment figure of 97,950 and an unemployment rate then of 4.7 as new job seekers enter the labor market in the traditional manner that raises unemployment percentages as summer draws near.

Predicting coming employment trends, the TEC noted that job "gains are anticipated in every segment of the labor force, but are not expected to keep pace with the growth in size of the labor force."

It said 840 additional jobs were added to the Lubbock labor market in February in the non-agricultural fields, reversing a decline there last month.

The public sector accounted for most of the new jobs, while manufacturing and services in the private sector added an estimated 140 jobs to the total, the TEC said.

Manufacturing showed the widest margin of gain in employment over a year ago — 15 percent, it said.

The TEC said demand for construction workers is expected to pick up "noticeably" in the next three months, as new residential construction here appears "especially active."

Official Raps Proposal To Ban State Regulation Of Airlines

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas Aeronautics Commission chairman David Witts today sharply criticised a proposal by a congressional subcommittee to ban state regulation of commuter airlines, saying the move would negate Texas' record of consumer service and low fares.

He said the 13-11 vote by the House aviation subcommittee would prohibit Texas from regulating the commuter airline industry within its borders and ban regulation of intrastate airlines granted authority by the Civil Aeronautics Board to provide any out of state service.

"The real tragedy is that the movement in the subcommittee was led by none other than a Texas congressman, Dale Milford of Dallas," Witts said.

Witts noted that 2.9 million Texans traveled on intrastate airlines during 1977, and saved more than $9 million in air fares.

"Without instruction from Washington, private business in Texas has built a commuter airline industry that is unmatched anywhere in the world for convenience, low costs and safety," Witts said.

"At a time when federally regulated carriers were cutting schedules, raising fares and gulping subsidies, the commuter carriers were establishing themselves as profitable businesses, contributing vastly to the public convenience. Now, suddenly and without request from anywhere, Washington wants to take our people away from all this."

Witts contended that carriers licensed by the CAB have no interest in serving commuter traffic, and have abandoned service to medium and small cities to seek more profitable long haul routes.

"Why should the people of any state be forced to abandon cheap and convenient local air service and return to the time tested and time proven failure of the heavy hand of federal government regulation?," Witts asked.

City Man Put On Probation

A Lubbock man has been assessed a four-year probated prison term after pleading guilty to indecency with a child.

Victor Sosa, 27, of 4915 7th St. was assessed the punishment by 140th Dist. Judge William R. Shaver on the recommendation of the Criminal District Attorney's Office.

As a special condition of the probation, the defendant agreed to submit to psychological treatment at the Human Development Center until released by doctors.

Sosa had been accused of exposing himself to a 12-year-old Alderson Junior High School student as she walked home from school Oct. 20, 1976.

In another case, Raymond Gomez, 28, of Idalou Thursday was assessed a two-year probated prison term after pleading guilty to theft.

Gomez admitted stealing items including a welder and cutting torch from a farm south of Lubbock in 1977.

Flag Ruling Stayed By U.S. Court

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Flags on state buildings which had been lowered to half staff to comply with a Good Friday order from Gov. Meldrim Thomson were raised to full staff today after the U.S. Supreme Court stayed an appeals court ruling permitting the action.

Supreme Court Judge William Brennan, acting on an appeal by the New Hampshire Civil Liberties Union, ordered a stay to a federal appeals court decision Thursday which gave Thomson the go-ahead to lower the flags "to memorialize the death of Christ on the Cross on the first Good Friday."

Brennan said he would present the matter to the full court at its regular weekly conference later today. There was no indication when the court would act.

Peter Thomson, the governor's son and administrative assistant, said the governor would wait until 9:30 a.m. to see if the full court acted on Brennan's stay.

"We have, in the meantime, ordered the comptroller to raise those flags on state buildings that are at half staff to comply with the order," Peter Thomson said.

The flags on at least three buildings, including the legislative office building across the street from the statehouse, had been lowered today. The governor was expected to personally lower the statehouse flags at 8 a.m. but had not shown up by 8:30. He was scheduled to meet with the Executive Council on other business at 9 a.m.

Brennan's decision came at the request of the NHCLU, which is representing four ministers and a rabbi. The judge stayed a ruling by 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Bailey Aldrich, who said Thomson could lower the flags for the religious holiday, one of the holiest on the Christian calendar.

Aldrich's decision vacated a Wednesday federal court decision in Boston which said Thomson could lower the flags only if he did so for non-religious reasons.

Aldrich also left the constitutional dispute between Thomson and the clergymen open to reconsideration in the future. He said he could make an equitable ruling because the clergymen brought the suit at such a late date.

Judge Revokes Probated Term

Dist. Judge Thomas L. Clinton Thursday revoked the probation of Glenda Gail Mooney, earlier convicted by a jury of aggravated robbery as the result of a 1976 hold-up of a local convenience store.

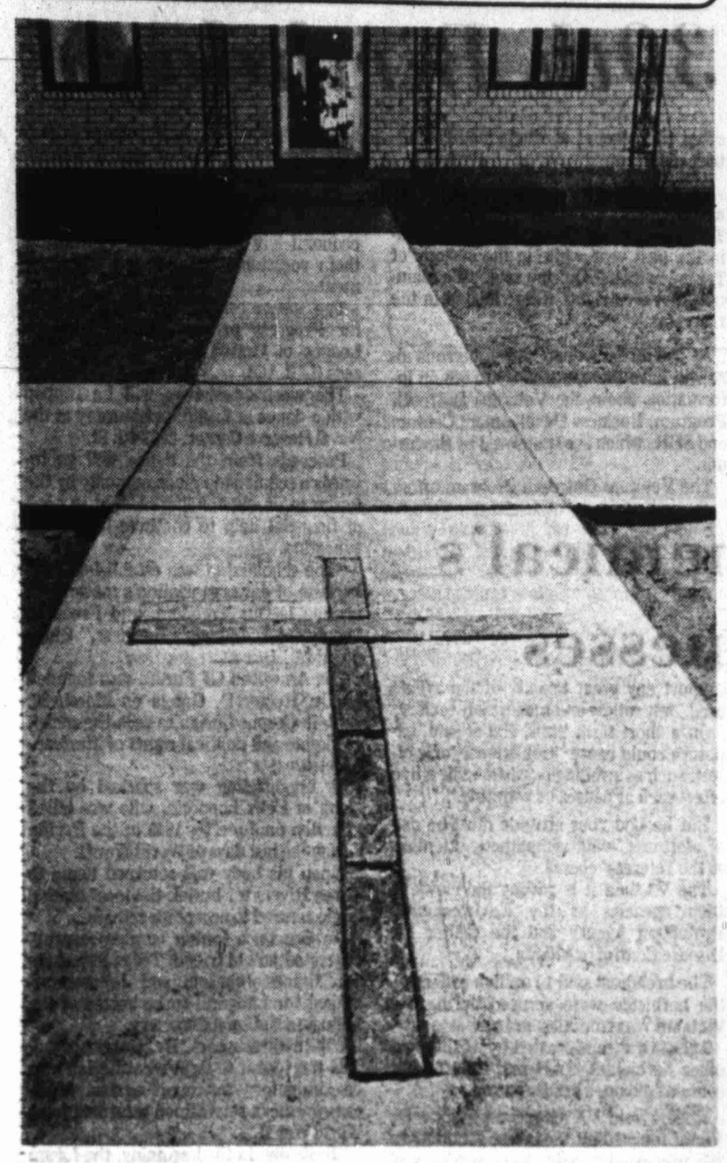
Clinton had assessed a five-year probated prison term for that offense, which occurred April 6, 1976.

A jury in 99th District Court had taken only 15 minutes to find Miss Mooney, 22, of 1710 E. Brown St. guilty of participating in the hold-up of the Preston Milk Store at 1101 34th St.

An aggravated robbery indictment was returned against Miss Mooney last month alleging she participated in the Jan. 14 heist of a convenience store at 28th Street and Avenue Q.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell said that charge is still pending against the defendant.

CHURCH NEWS



CROSSES OF LUBBOCK — When laymen of the Shepherd of the Plains Evangelical Lutheran Church were laying a sidewalk for their pastor, Rev. Robert L. Good Friday Emphasized In Program On Radio

As part of its radio ministry called "Points To Ponder," Shepherd of the Plains Evangelical Lutheran Church of Lubbock, presented "Seven Final Words of Jesus On The Cross" as a Good Friday feature today.

The Rev. Robert L. Sawall, pastor of Shepherd of the Plains, presented the seven 60-second spots at 30-minute intervals from 12 noon to 3 p.m. over Radio Station KLBK.

The Rev. Sawall said the messages were presented for all to ponder the Savior's Passion on Good Friday.

The "Points to Ponder" regular program runs Monday through Friday at 7:45 a.m. over KLBK.

Here is an example of one of the spots presented on the regular "Points To Ponder" program by Pastor Sawall:

"LIVE A HOLY LIFE: Jim really liked the fellows at school. They were a fun group; outgoing and ready to overpower the world. But sometimes that 'fun group' found its fun in sexual immorality, or in getting high on hard liguor. After a night out with the fellows, Jim felt out of place in church. Singing hymns, hearing the sermon, pondering Jesus' love for sinners, made him acutely aware of his guilt.

"There is no assurance of forgiveness when we go contrary to God's will. Oh, the sins of youth! The desire to be accepted by our peers prompts us to identify with their sins. Jim should know: that as he feels, so might others. And if Jim would take a stand for Christ, it could well be a relief to his friends who might willingly follow his example.

"To live otherwise than God's Word teaches places our soul in real danger. But to live for Christ and serve Him draws us away from sin and at the same time makes us a light unto the world. We Christians pray 'Thy Will Be Done.' It is God's will that you should be holy. Amen. (I Thessalonians 4:3)."

Eyesight Regained By Minister

These words from the old hymn, "Amazing Grace," describe the miracle the Rev. Jerry D. Moore, evangelist and singer, said God performed in his life.

The Rev. Moore is preaching and singing in a revival at Lubbock's Broadview Baptist Church, located at 1402 Frankfort Ave., Sunday through April 2.

Time of services will be 10:55 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. each night.

The Rev. Moore will assist the Rev. V.L. Huggins, pastor of Travis Avenue Baptist Church of Memphis, evangelist and pastor.

The Rev. Moore said he was blind from ages 8 to 18 and he added that doctor after doctor sought a cure for 10 years but to no avail. "Then God intervened and did the impossible," he added.

A graduate of the Alabama School for the Blind at Talladega, Ala., Samford University in Birmingham, Ala., and and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, the Rev. Moore has 16 years experience as a pastor and in music ministries, and now is beginning his seventh year in evangelism.

The Rev. Huggins also has an interesting testimony. He was a grown man and a butcher by trade when the Rev. Bob Bales, Broadview pastor, won him to Christ and ordained him to preach.

Special nights of the revival at Broadview will be: Monday, Sunday School Night; Tuesday, Children's Night (hot dog supper at 6 p.m.); Thursday, Old Fashioned-Dress Western Night; Friday, Youth Night; and Saturday, Family Night.

The Rev. Moore talks readily about his blindness and the miracle healing he declared, "I never asked the Lord to let me see, but to let me serve," he said.

With that private prayer of dedication at age 18, the evangelist said, "the veil of blindness that had darkened my life for 10 years was lifted and the Lord gave me my sight."

"I ran out into the sunlight and to an aunt's house," he said, "I called my widowed mother home from work. I hadn't seen her in 10 years. I thank the Lord every day for the privilege of seeing," he concluded.

Gospel Music Taken To Nursing Homes

Caroline Mullins of 4910 41st St, one day last September sat idly playing the piano and singing when, she said, "the Lord plainly told me to take my singing to nursing and convalescent homes."

Mrs. Mullins, who was trained for a professional opera career, continued: "I said 'Lord, if you want me to do this, point one out to me,' she declared as she looked in the phone book.

"He did," Mrs. Mullins said, seriously. "I called up that nursing home and talked to the activities director. She was enthusiastic. My ministry in song was launched," the singer added.

CAROLINE MULLINS

Now, she said, she sings at two or three nursing homes each week.

"I am considering branching out and making this a professional career," Mrs. Mullins commented.

But right now, she's just singing locally. The concerts at the convalescent and nursing home have a seasonal themes. For example, this month's concerts have an Easter message; the Christmas season had appropriate music; and February (Valentine's Day) suggested love song titles, according to the Lubbock singer.

March 27, Mrs. Mullins will sing at John Knox Village. She was at Quaker Manor this week. The concerts are at night, soon after the night meal.

Mrs. Mullins said she had turned down two opera contracts. She was trained for metropolitan opera, she said.

"I was lucky," the Lubbock singer and housewife said, "I received training when Anna Louise Bourneman (German) and Felice Wolmut (French) were refugees of war and lived temporarily at Amarillo in World War II days."

"Both had fled the Nazis. In fact, Felice Wolmut was on stage singing in the Vienna Opera House when Nazi storm troopers marched in," Mrs. Mullins related.

"I could never have gotten training from both of them unless the Lord has made it come to pass," Mrs. Mullins said.

She believes strongly this came about at the direction of God and that the gospel music ministry she was directed to begin also was God-directed.

Her piano accompanist in is Luella Stokes. Her husband, J.A. "Moon" Mullins, assists in the ministry.

Church To Open Revival

The Rev. Garry Smith, president of the Assemblies of God Christ's Ambassadors (youth) department in North Texas, will be speaker for a revival at Lubbock's University Avenue Assembly of God Church at 4803 University Ave. Sunday through April 2.

As representative of Christ's Ambassadors, the Rev. Smith travels in the state ministering at youth rallies, camps, retreats, banquets and revivals.

In addition, he promotes such activities as the "Speed-the-Light" campaign. This is a youth-oriented missionary program which provides vehicles, printing equipment and radio equipment for missionaries.

More than $210,000 was given by Assemblies of God youths of the North Texas District in 1977.

Revival services here, according to the Rev. David McNeely, pastor, will be 9:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday; and 7:30 p.m. each night during the week.

Pre-Easter Observance Includes Rally Tonight

A "Good Friday" rally at 7 p.m. today will climax pre-Easter services at Lubbock's First Church of the Foursquare Gospel at 3115 2nd St.

Churches from all over West Texas will be represented at the rally, according to the Rev. Phil Demetro, pastor of First Foursquare. Youth director Steve Smart will be in charge.

Services,which opened Wednesday, featurr missionary-evangelist Claude Updike.

The Rev. Updike is a veteran missionary. He is a graduate of LIFE Bible College and of the University of Wyoming.

Beginning in 1951, the Rev. Updike toured the West Indies and the Central and South American countries of Honduras, Panama, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Jamaica, and Cuba, conducting open-air, citywide meetings. The campaigns have been credited with causing a spiritual awakening that is still felt, by the residents of those areas.

After pioneering the Foursquare Gospel outreach in Guatemala, he served as supervisor over churches of that country. He currently is touring the United States. His itinerary has included the northwestern part of the United States and Canada.

'Super Sunday' Set At Lubbock Church

Sunday will be "Super Sunday" at Westmoreland Baptist Church, located at 5605 46th St.

In addition to regular worship services of the church, there will be three special events: "Super Sunday Easter Egg Hunt" at 1 p.m., with 500 eggs to be found; a "Praise The Lord Sing Out" at 2 p.m., featuring the Oakwood Baptist Chuch Church Handbell Choir and the Bacon Heights Baptist Church quartet; with an all-church dinner at noon, served at the church.

The Easter egg hunt will be for 6th-grade church school students down to infants toddlers.

Also singing in the "Praise The Lord Sing Out" will be soloists and groups from the host church.

Pastor is the Rev. Craig Wilcox.

'COME WORSHIP WITH US!' — Calvary Baptist Church, now located at 18th Street and Avenue T, last Sunday placed a sign at its location for a new sanctuary at 82nd Street and Abbeville Ave. The sign of welcome was put out even before construction had begun on the sanctuary. Participating in ceremonies Sunday were, left to right, Jim McDonald, E. Jack Brown, Francis Brown, Norman Wreyford, Rev. Dale Cain (pastor), Jim Walters, Bob Evans, Duane McQueen and Raymond Taylor.

Arkansas Man To Preach Here

A revival at Lubbock's Quaker Avenue Church of Christ will begin Sunday and continue through April 2. The church is located at Quaker Avenue and 17th Street.

Evangelist will be Ralph Gage from Eldorado, Ark. He has a son living in Lubbock—Dennis Gage of 4403 61st St. The evangelist is an elder of the East Faulkner Church of Christ where he also serves as minister.

A special feature of the revival will be early morning services at 7 a.m. with coffee and doughnuts and services at 7:30 p.m. on weekdays and 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sundays.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible®

Matthew 14:10-30, The Living Bible

10 So John was beheaded in the prison,
11 And his head was brought on a tray and given to the girl, who took it to her mother.
12 Then John's disciples came for his body and buried it, and came to tell Jesus what had happened.
13 As soon as Jesus heard the news, He went off by Himself in a boat to a remote area to be alone. But the crowds saw where He was headed, and followed by land from many villages.
14 So when Jesus came out of the wilderness, a vast crowd was waiting for Him and He pitied them and healed their sick.
15 That evening the disciples came to Him and said, "It is already past time for supper, and there is nothing to eat here in the desert; send the crowds away so they can go to the villages and buy some food."
16 But Jesus replied, "That isn't necessary—you feed them!"
17 "What!" they exclaimed. "We have exactly five small loaves of bread and two fish!"
18 "Bring them here," He said.
19 Then He told the people to sit down on the grass; and He took the five loaves and two fish, looked up into the sky and asked God's blessing on the meal, then broke the loaves apart and gave them to the disciples to place before the people.
20 And everyone ate until full! And when the scraps were picked up afterwards, there were twelve basketfuls left over!
21 (About 5,000 men were in the crowd that day, besides all the women and children.)
22 Immediately after this, Jesus told His disciples to get into their boat and cross to the other side of the lake while He stayed to get the people started home.
23,24 Then afterwards He went up into the hills to pray. Night fell, and out on the lake the disciples were in trouble. For the wind had risen and they were fighting heavy seas.
25 About four o'clock in the morning Jesus came to them, walking on the water!
26 They screamed in terror, for they thought He was a ghost.
27 But Jesus immediately spoke to them, reassuring them. "Don't be afraid!" He said.
28 Then Peter called to Him: "Sir, if it is really You, tell me to come over to You, walking on the water."
29 "All right," the Lord said, "come along!" So Peter went over the side of the boat and walked on the water toward Jesus.
30 But when he looked around at the high waves, he was terrified and began to sink. "Save me, Lord!" he shouted.

This thing we call hope — it is a strange thing. It springs eternal in the human breast . . . and yet so often it has been mocked by time and tragedy.

Why, indeed, does every man cling to his hope, even when the self-styled realists cry "hopeless."

The answer is written in the beautiful history of the first Easter Day. Faithful friends of the Master came to anoint His Body. Came sorrowing . . . without hope.

And they returned rejoicing: "Christ is risen . . ."

That was the birthday of Hope . . . the certainty of Christians that even death cannot destroy the believing soul!

And every Easter Day countless men and women discover or rediscover that Hope. It brings a new joy to their lives. It will, to yours . . .

Estes Slated To Appear At Trial

TYLER (AP) — Testimony in the kidnapping trial of promoter Don Trull begins Monday, but the expected highlight comes Tuesday with the appearance of paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes — who has become the focus of the proceedings.

Estes, whom Trull claims cheated him in a business deal, has been told by State District Judge Glenn Phillips to appear here Tuesday. He has been subpoenaed at the request of Trull's attorneys.

Phillips denied Thursday a defense motion ordering Smith County District Attorney A.D. Clark II to produce a letter allegedly linking Estes to a land deal.

Attorneys for Trull, 40, filed the motion in an attempt to prove the key letter was among documents turned over to Clark.

Phillips said in the hearing that he was "not convinced at all that Clark ever possessed the letter."

In the letter, Estes allegedly confirmed receipt of $575,000 from Trull for land in Smith County. It was allegedly signed by Sue Goolsby, Estes' secretary.

Estes was paroled in 1971 after serving six years of a 15-year sentence for his conviction in a multi-million dollar swindle. He is barred by the terms of that parole from engaging in any self-employment or promotional activities.

Trull is charged with holding Bill May, an employee of Tyler millionaire Billy D. Pyron, hostage in Pyron's office and threatening to set fire to the office after splashing it with gasoline. Trull claims he lost $1.6 million in deals with Estes and Pyron.

Attorney Brockett Irwin of Longview, who represents Trull, said the letter is vital to the defense. Trull claims the letter was among the documents given to Clark.

Clark denied Thursday that he ever saw the letter and said he turned over all the documents to Assistant Attorney General David Pace, who was investigating Estes' alleged business activities.

"I can tell you this — everything I got from Mr. Trull was given to Mr. Pace," Clark said. "I can testify to that with complete certainty."

Margaret Isham, Clark's former secretary, testified she made copies of each page of Trull's documents. Testimony revealed she made copies of 216 pages, which coincided with the number of pages Pace brought to Tyler.

Pace also said the letter was not among the stack of documents he received by certified mail.

Schools Seek Extension Of Plan term out-of-school suspension are assigned.

More severe rulebreakers are assigned to the Project In tercept alternative school, which offers "special educational help and counseling to those unable to adjust to the normal school progrm."

Intercept is staffed by four teachers and a juvenile probation officer skilled in working with problem youths, the grant application says.

Students referred to Project Intercept are assigned there for at least the remainder of the quarter. Admissions and dismissals are made by a special school district committee "to keep the alternative school from becoming a dumping ground for all troublemakers," the application said.

"To date, one half of those referred to the alternative school have been returned by the admission-review-dismissal committee to the normal school program," the document said.

Of 42 students who have gone through the Project Intercept procedure, the application says, "All but five have been successfully returned to the normal school program and are making an adequate adjustment and are achieving satisfactorily."

The application said the in-building suspension program has received "high praise from administrative personnel and school principals. The Parent-Teacher Association has also warmly received this program.

"Youths have responded with mixed emotions. Some have felt it removed the distractions and helped them to achieve better. Others felt the schools were getting too tough. School officials have indicated that those who have objected generally were the very ones who needed the program."

School and juvenile authorities say they want to "refine our procedures and methods in working with problem youths" next year so Project Intercept can be relocated in 1979 to the county's proposed regional juvenile detention center.

"We anticipate moving the project into the new center and expanding it to offer a better quality of education to those youths in detention." The grant application already has been favorably reviewed by the South Plains Association of Governments. The Lubbock County Juvenile Board, composed of the county judge and five district judges, is expacted to consider endorsement of the application today.

The Lubbock County Commissionars Court will consider the application Monday.

School and juvenile probation officials said in their grant application Project Intercept and in-building suspensions so far have been successful in reducing the number of students kicked out of school for disciplinary problems.

"Traditionally these youths have roamed the streets of Lubbock and are involved in many of our delinquency problems. By keeping them in a school setting, we anticipate that fewer will be involved in violations of law."

After endorsements by the county, the grant application will be sent to the Governor's Criminal Justice Division for consideration in early April.

Child Drives

Wendy who was playing outside with a friend," Mrs. Turney explained.

Wendy and her friend ran to Wright and her grandfather told her to "get the pickup and take me to the hospital."

Undaunted, the nine-year-old backed the family pickup out of a very tight space and drove down to her grandfather.

Wendy, who can barely see over the steering wheel, began the 14-mile trip to Gatesville.

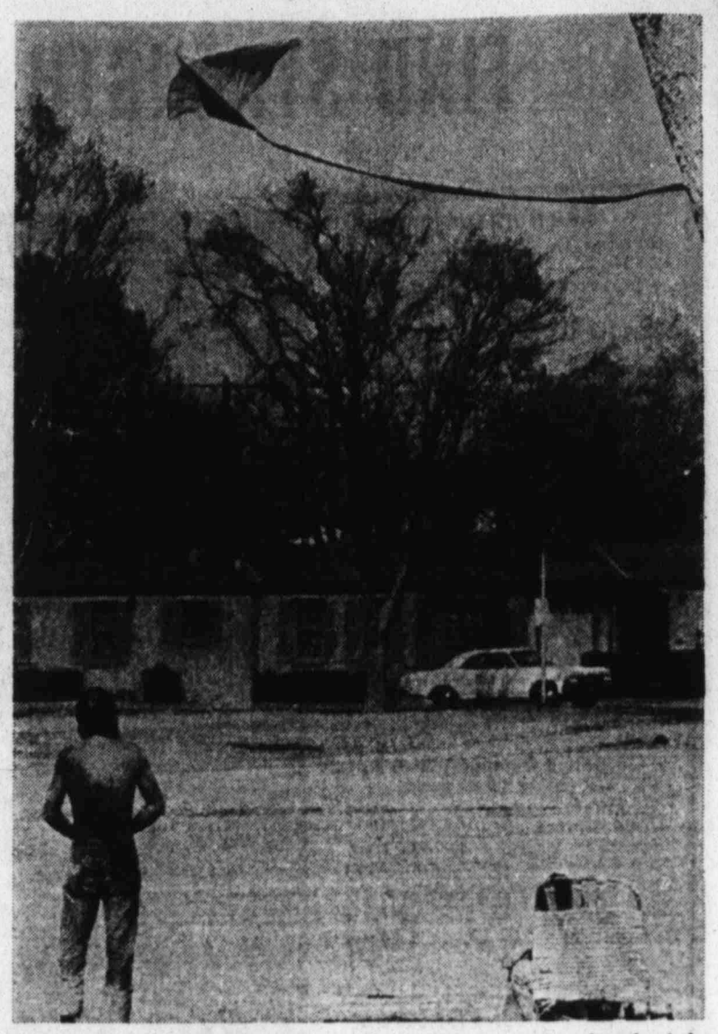
Mrs. Turney said her father once told his granddaughter, "don't go so fast," when she reached 30 miles per hour.

Wendy's mother, who had been called by Mrs. Wright, intercepted the pickup four miles from town and drove the truck to the hospital.

"The doctor said that if my father had been 10 minutes later, he would have died," said Mrs. Turney. "He also said the horn just barely missed a major artery."

She said Wendy told her she was very nervous during the episode.

"I was so nervous I could hardly stand it," she told her aunt. "But I told myself that I could do it. I knew I had to."



SEASONAL BAROMETER—As though mild daytime temperatures and gentle winds were not enough proof, kites, bicycles and sun baskers serve as early indicators of seasonal shifts. Lubbockite Lance Osborne and his sister, Darlene Schubach of San Antonio, took advantage of a sunny Tech Terrace Park. Forecasts call for continued moderate daytime conditions through the weekend. GOP Offers Larger Tax Cut Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Republican senators is offering a tax cut to deal with two of the biggest problems on the minds of voters: inflation and rising Social Security taxes.

A bill introduced Thursday would allow a direct credit against income taxes for 10 percent of a worker's Social Security contributions and adjust the tax system to cancel some of the effects of inflation.

In general, the GOP plan would be of more benefit to businesses and to workers earning less than $6,000 or more than $40,000 a year than would the tax package proposed by President Carter.

A four-member family earning $10,000 a year now faces a projected $258 federal tax increase in 1980 because of anticipated inflation and higher Social Security taxes. Carter's plan would turn that into an $11 tax cut; the GOP proposal would result in a $47 tax cut.

A $25,000 family of four faces a projected $727 tax increase in the absence of any congressional action. The president's program would reduce that to a $461 tax increase; the Republican substitute would mean a tax increase of $219.

The GOP bill would reduce income taxes by $36 billion in 1979, with about two-thirds of the cut going to individuals. The Carter plan, costing $25 billion in 1979, would designate about three-quarters of the tax relief for individuals.

The two versions agree on the need to extend about $8 billion worth of individual and corporate tax cuts that are due to expire this year.

The proposal is partly a response to the large Social Security tax increases passed by Congress in December. Passed in an effort to shore up the financially ailing system, the increases have outraged taxpayers and brought cries of protest.

In addition to the income tax credit for Social Security taxes, here are major components of the GOP plan, whose chief sponsors are Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.:

— The $750 personal exemption, the standard deduction (now $3,200 for a joint return), the $35-per-person tax credit would be increased over the next three years, and the tax brackets would be widened.

The purpose of those moves would be to counteract the tax effects of inflation, which automatically nudges workers into higher tax brackets even though their spendable income has not increased.

Assuming a 6 percent rate of inflation, the personal exemption would rise to $900 by 1980, the joint-return standard deduction to $3,800 and the $35 personal credit to $45.

— The earned-income credit, which now provides payments of up to $400 a year to poor working families, would rise gradually to $480.

— The 48 percent corporate tax rate would be cut in steps to 42 percent. Carter proposes to cut it to 44 percent. The GOP plan would mean more tax relief for corporations earning under $50,000 than would Carter's.

— The 10 percent investment tax credit, which rewards businesses for purchasing machinery and equipment, would go up to 12 percent. The GOP also would make it available for the first time to unprofitable companies.

NEW U.S. ATTORNEY — Peter Vaira, chief of strike force in U.S. Justice Department tn Chicago, relaxed in his office after the announcement of his appointment by Attorney General Griffin Bell to replace David Marston as U.S. Attorney for Eastern Pennsylvania, Thursday. Marston was fired earlier this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Peter Vaira Praised For Legal Career

CHICAGO (AP) — Peter Vaira, named to succeed ousted David Marston as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, comes recommended by a former colleague as a legal professional who can restore order to the controversial post.

Vaira, chief of the Justice Department's strike force on organized crime in Chicago and former head of its counterpart in Philadelphia, is "already two steps ahead" of any other candidate, according to J. Terrence Brunner of the Better Government Association, a private governmental watchdog agency.

Brunner headed the strike force office in Pittsburgh when Vaira worked in Philadelphia in 1972 and 1973.

"As a professional, he already knows how to do the job," Brunner said. "And he can come into the spot running because he already has a good rapport with other agencies — FBI and IRS, labor and the state police — there."

Brunner said that those qualities might have first attracted the attention of U.S. Attorney Griffin Bell to Vaira for the post.

"It is my understanding that the attorney general has become tired of all the political bickering associated with the job and thought one way to solve the problem was to choose a career professional," Brunner said.

"People know him, like him, and trust him. He gets along with everybody," he added.

Vaira is no stranger to the hunt for political corruption. One of his achievements in Chicago was the successful prosecution of East Chicago, Ind., officials accused of taking $2 million in bribes, Vaira told a news conference Thursday.

The 41-year-old bachelor also is credited with vigorous prosecution of labor racketeers and organized crime figures.

His office brought one-time crime syndicate chief Sam Giancana before a federal grand jury in 1975 but the reputed mobster was slain in his home before he told anything noteworthy, Vaira said.

Vaira has headed the strike force in Chicago since 1974. Between 1968 and 1972, he was a trial attorney with the organization, before leaving for his stint in Philadelphia.

If his nomination is approved by the Senate, Vaira will succeed Marston, a Republican, who was dismissed amid charges of political favoritism in the midst of an investigation of two Pennsylvania Democratic congressmen — Reps. Joshua Eilberg and Daniel Flood.

Vaira said after his appointment that if any politics were involved in Marston's dismissal, he is glad it's over.

"I don't know anything about it. I hope we can just set that aside and get back to work. Let the historians worry about it," he said.

U.S. Students Making Trek To Mexico

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) — College-age youths from the U.S. Southwest seeking warm weather are invading once-quiet Mexican beaches by the thousands, turning them into campgrounds and race courses, Mexican authorities say.

The Mexicali 250, a highly promoted off-road race open to any type of vehicle with prizes totaling $200,000, drew 10,000 tourists, most of them young Americans, to the Lower California peninsula Sunday.

A California motorcyclist named Ray Russel won the race, which circled south to sleepy San Felipe, on the Gulf of California, then through the desert to San Pedro and back to Mexicali, on the U.S.-Mexican border.

The hoardes found San Felipe ideal for camping, said Miguel Angel Alanis, a tourist department official who came to study the results of his department's campaign to promote the race.

More 6,000 youths are still in the area, most of them sleeping in their race vehicles or camping outdoors, he said. He said water sports are popular with the visitors, "but what they are doing most right now is racing around in their vehicles."

"We are sending trucks down there daily with drinking water," Alanis said, "and the small store owners are coming up here to buy food by the truckload."

"The problem is that this weekend the residents of Mexicali will also go down there for vacation, so you can imagine what kind of situation they have in San Felipe," Alanis said.

Congress Approves Bill To Expand Park

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill expanding Redwoods National Park in northern California by 48,000 acres and providing training and jobs for lumberjacks displaced by the expansion is on its way to President Carter's desk.

The bill, passed by the Senate 63-26 this week, will cost $359 million for purchasing private land around the present park. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate sponsor, said he expects no opposition from the president.

Environmentalists have fought for the expansion for 10 years, arguing that heavy logging of the forests around the park threatened the majestic redwoods, which include some of the tallest trees in the world.

The measure has been bitterly opposed by timbermen, who once formed a 23-truck convoy to Washington to protest. They contended the expansion would destroy the local economy and was unnecessary because of the industry's own reforestation program in the area.

The bill sent to the president also gives the secretary of the interior the authority to buy another 30,000 acres if park protection makes this necessary.

The national park was established in 1968 in an area of 28,000 acres.

The bill contains a jobs package calling for $40 million for retraining and relocating timber workers, plus paying full salary for up to six years for those who cannot find other suitable jobs.

Expansion proponents said they did not expect many would be paid for doing nothing, since the bill also includes a forest rehabilitation plan costing another $33 million that would employ many of the displaced loggers.

The number of jobs affected is disputed. Supporters of the expansion have estimated it will cost about 800 jobs; loggers set the figure at 2,000.

Cranston said he did not think the jobs package set a precedent. But, he added, "When a government action causes economic hardship, then the government has responsibilities. ...

"If we can establish that as a policy, then many worthy projects that are defeated, not on their merits but because of hardship to business and workers, would have a better chance," Cranston declared.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., the bill's floor manager, said the jobs package could begin to establish a pattern in which a worker who loses his job through no fault of his own has a right to compensation, much as a property owner does who loses his property.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, told the Senate that the redwoods job package goes far beyond anything other workers have ever received. But Stevens voted for the expansion, saying he wanted to stake a claim for Alaska workers who might have their jobs disrupted by environmentalists' plans there.

Uruguay, one of South America's smallest republics, is a little larger than the state of Missouri.

Long-Term Feeder Available For Potted Plants

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

A new long-term automatic feeder for potted plants is available. Feeder Meter is a small plastic container that is inserted in the pot. It contains plant nutrients released in measured quantities each time the plant is watered.

The feeder is mistake-proof, clean and easy to use since there is no mixing or storing. It comes in regular and extra sizes, lasting from three to six months or one to three years, depending on how often you water and the size of the pot. And it is easy to determine when the capsule is empty.

Feeder Meter contains a 10-10-10 mixture of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and soluble potash suspended in a gel. The tip of the capsule is sliced off, the amount depending on the pot size. The case is pushed into the soil so that only the small bulblike top remains visible. The principle is that frequent small quantity feedings are more effective in maintaining good plant health than infrequent, large doses.

The item, (by Hortigro Inc., of Lynbrook, N.Y.) comes in two-or six-unit packages, and single, extra-large size, ranging in price.

If you want to organize a community garden in your area there is an organization named "Gardens for All" that can assist you.

This is the time to be thinking about such a project and here are some steps typically required to start one:

—Getting together a half-dozen or so interested people.

—Selecting an organizer who has know-how.

—Finding a sponsor and borrowing its organizational and perhaps legal and political muscle.

—Finding the land for the project — vacant lots, factory or school property, unused farmland, an industrial park, or even a cemetery area.

—Securing that property via gift, lease, purchase or land trust arrangement.

—Designing and laying out the garden site, outlining individual plots, figuring the proximity to water, the need for fencing.

—Informing the community that a site will be available, giving information about how and when to sign up.

—Obtaining financial assistance if needed.

—Establishing rules, regulations and operational policies of the program.

—Overall supervision of the garden project, including end of season cleanup.

The organization has a 40-page booklet, "Guide to Community Garden Organization," available for $2 from Gardens for All, Bay and Harbor Rds., Shelburne, Vt. 05482.

Something to consider: In 1977, more than three million persons in this country grew more than $2-billion worth of vegetables on land they don't even own.

Power Mower Care Called Important

One way to shake the doldrums of a tough winter is to begin preparations for the spring gardening season. Among the most important chores to tackle is to make sure your power tools are ready to perform when the weather is right.

Foremost in the average homeowner's collection is the power mower. David L. Walker, Champion Spark Plug Company technical services director, offers the following advice on getting the mower ready for the cutting season.

Mr. Walker says, "Unless you have the proper tools and know-how, it's wiser to take the mower to a competent service outlet for tune-up and sharpening. But in most cases, there are some important maintenance procedures you can perform yourself."

If you failed to drain the gasoline from the tank and carburetor last fall, then do it now. Stale gasoline can become contaminated with condensation and can form harmful deposits on internal parts of the carburetor or valves, Mr. Walker stated.

He added, a dirty or clogged air cleaner is another potential problem and should be serviced or replaced. On mowers with steel mesh-type cleaners, the filter can be washed out with a commercial solvent and a fresh coat of oil should then be applied. With the oil bath variety of cleaner, merely dispose of the old oil supply, clean up the parts and install new, heavy weight oil.

On mowers with disposable paper air filters, these should be replaced at the beginning of the new season.

Mr. Walker advised, "If you used the spark plug all of last season, replace it now. Before discarding the old plugs, examine the firing tip for signs of abnormal engine operation. Conditions such as burned insulator, oil soaking, blistering or signs of metal deposite are tip-offs to possible engine problems that should be checked."

Also, when removing the spark plug, pour one or two teaspoons of light lubricating oil into the cylinder. Give the engine a few turns to distribute the oil evenly on cylinder walls and engine parts.

Mr. Walker issued other tips including a general note of caution. "Never leave the throttle in the "start" position when the mower is not is use. As an added guard against accidental starts, make certain the plug wire is disconnected."

Remove all dried vegetation and other foreign matter from the mower. Remove any rust spots and cover them with touch-up paint.

Clean ignition wires and inspect them for loose connections.

If the insulation is cracked, feels hard or brittle, replace the wire.

Check the drive belts for cracks or signs of wear.

Wheat Mixture Proves Marketable In Europe

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Mixing hard red winter wheat such as that grown in Kansas with native Western European wheat produces an improved baking blend that opens up a dramatic potential for increased export of U.S. wheat, Kansas Gov. Robert F. Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett and members of the Kansas Wheat Commission unveiled at a news conference what they called "a major breakthrough" in efforts to sell more Kansas wheat abroad.

They said studies show native European wheat can successfully be mixed with 30 percent or more of the hard red winter wheat grown in the United States.

"We are quite excited about the possibilities that exist, based on the strength of these studies, for the increased sale of Kansas wheat to Western European countries," Bennett said.

"The wheat commission has made a concerted effort during the last few years to convince European buyers that Kansas hard red winter wheat is of excellent quality and can be used in baking, facts now shown by these blending studies."

The Kansas commission initiated the studies, which were conducted in Europe.

Bennett said the studies are important because Western European countries have purchased very little hard red winter wheat since formation of the Common Market, preferring instead to rely on their own native varieties and imports of high quality spring wheat.

He also said that the studies came at a time when adverse weather conditions for the growing of high quality spring wheat have resulted in a very limited supply of quality wheat for baking.

"Through efforts of the Kansas Wheat Commission, we have demonstrated the usefulness and quality of our hard red winter wheat. There is an immediate need for this wheat."

"We are extremely hopeful that hard red winter wheat will quickly become attractive to customers in Europe," Bennett said.

The tests were conducted by the Brabender Corp. in Germany, using No. 2 hard red winter wheat with 12.5 percent protein supplied by Far Mar-Co, the big Hutchinson-based farm cooperative.

The Kansas wheat was blended with native wheat from 10 countries — Germany, Italy, France, Norway, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and Great Britain.

Joint Linked To Headache

ATLANTA (AP) — Do you have often have tension headaches? Try this for quick relief.

—Don't cup the telephone between your shoulder and chin when you talk on it.

—Don't cradle your chin while you watch television.

—Don't chew on pens, pipes or other hard objects.

Dr. Harold Gelb of the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry says all of these things can lead to something called the TMJ syndrome.

And Gelb says a study shows that nine out of 10 people with tension headaches suffer from the TMJ syndrome. TJM stands for temporomandibular joint, or the jaw joint.

Gelb told a group of dentists at a seminar that anything that puts stress on the jaw joint can lead to the TJM syndrome with resulting headaches, dizziness and a ringing in the ears.

"The pain is often thought to be entirely psychosomatic in nature and is usually treated by drugs without any success," he said.

$250,000 Estate Left By Woman

NEW YORK (AP) — Gail K. Rubin, 39, the nature photographer killed by Palestinian guerillas two weeks ago in Israel, left an estate valued at up to $250,000. It includes a $10,000 trust fund for the care of her pet dogs, according to a five-page will filed Wednesday in Manhattan.

The bulk of the estate was bequeathed to her parents, Jonathan and Estelle Rubin of New York, with whom she lived before she moved to Israel. According to the court papers, Miss Rubin had planned to return to New York later this year.

Circus Trapeze Artist Misses Try At Quadruple Somersault

NEW YORK (AP) — Twice he twisted furiously through the air, reaching speeds estimated at 75 mph. Twice Tito Gaona narrowly missed his partner's wrists. But he says it's only a matter of time until he becomes the first mortal to do a quadruple somersault off a flying trapeze.

His father agrees. "He's going to do it," says Victor Gaona. "I promise he's going to do it.... One day he's going to come in easy."

Wednesday was not the day. The 30-year-old Gaona climbed 40 feet above Madison Square Garden's floor. Both times, the star of Ringling Bros. and Barnum Bailey circus flew into the air and did four somersaults, two ascending and two descending.

Each time he reached for his partner and cousin, Lalo Murillo, and each time he failed to catch Murillo's wrists and landed on his back in the net below.

"I was there, and then I pulled my hands back," he said later. "Lalo said, 'We've got it,' but I pulled back.... It was like a shock. I don't know what happened."

He asserted that the death earlier in the day of 73-year-old high wire performer Karl Wallenda, who fell 120 feet in San Juan, Puerto Rico, had no effect on his performance.

"Trapeze is trapeze, and high wire is another thing," said the Mexican native. Still, he said, Wallenda's death "touched me a little bit. You think about a great man like Wallenda."

Earlier in the act, Gaona successfully performed a triple flip — he is only the second man in circus history who could perform the feat consistently.

The first to master the triple was Alfredo Codona, a circus star of the 1920s whose life was chronicled in the movie "Trapeze," with Burt Lancaster and Tony Curtis.

That movie inspired the then 14-year-old Gaona to take up the trapeze in 1961. Four years later, he did his first triple.

In 1975, Alaska's average per capita income was $8,815, then the highest in the United States.

Oklahoma Seeks Quick Reaction To Tax Hike

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Legislative leaders want to determine whether most Oklahomans would favor a temporary gasoline tax increase to fix severe damage the winter inflicted on state and county roads and city streets, but they have a time problem.

The legislative session is due to end in about three weeks, so they have to try to get a reading on public opinion in a hurry.

Senate Majority Leader Jim Lane, D-Idabel, Senate leader of a 10-member committee studying the proposal, said legislators really are counting on the news media to help them find out what people think about a temporary tax.

"It's so late in the session that we'll just have to try to get some quick reaction to the news stories on this and see how it goes," he said.

Lane urged persons who have opinions on the proposal to "contact their local senator or representative, then we'll talk to all the members next week and see how their constituents feel."

House Speaker Bill Willis and Senate President Pro Tem Gene Howard said Wednesday a temporary tax probably would be the best way to get a major repair program started.

They also said the 2.5-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax proposed by the Oklahoma Good Roads and Streets Association for a nine-month period would be the maximum tax the Legislature would consider.

A 2.5 cent increase would raise about $30 million during a nine-month period.

They said the temporary tax could be as small as one cent per gallon, which would raise about $12 million during a nine-month period.

Gov. David Boren, who has been cool to a temporary gasoline tax, wrote a letter to the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration Wednesday asking for federal disaster aid.

He said the Oklahoma Civil Defense Department has estimated damage to state, county and city roads at $171.8 million — $13.8 million to state highways, $113.7 million to county roads and $44.3 million to city streets.

But there appears to be little chance that the federal government will provide substantial assistance because the same problems exist in many other states and the total cost of providing federal aid would be extremely high.

Boren, Willis and Howard agree there is no way all the damage can be repaired in one year, both because of the high cost and the fact that the needed repairs are too numerous to accomplish in a single year.

Swamp Challenges Intruding Man

By JULES LOH

OKEFENOKEE, Ga. (AP) — No other place on earth is quite like the Okefenokee Swamp, the land of trembling earth.

That is what the scientists say, and anyone who has ventured among its wondrous wilds emerges a believer. But that is only one reason why this place in America, this place on the planet, is remarkable. At least two more reasons are obvious.

As a mere curiosity, Okefenokee, Ga. 31501, surely is the only place in America with a post office that serves a population which includes 42 species of mammal, none of them man.

Second, if this swamp is not truly paradise, as old-time swampers hereabouts believe, it is at least a place where two implacable antagonists — those who aim to preserve America's remaining wildlands untouched; those who want to make them accessible — have found harmony. The lion lies down with the lamb.

The Okefenokee is a swamp, yet is more than 100 feet above sea level, the source of two rivers spilling from an ice-age bowl.

For centuries it has challenged indigenes to hunt in it, timber hunters to raze it, naturalists to explore it, explorers to navigate it in its usual forbidding state, which is wet, a wet labyrinth as unpatterned as the crazing in a china cup.

It is a domain of beasts; man is an intruder. Man had better be aware of that if he would survive here.

It is a place of unmatched languor, beauty, suspense.

Ash-gray cypresses, their grotesque branches bearded with Spanish moss, rise from tea-black water. The water's surface is so polished, its reflection so perfect, that floating upon it in a boat is to feel eerily suspended. Look up, look down. Same view.

In the night an alligator bellows, the last great primeval love song on this continent.

By day a brown watersnake suns itself on a limb, a study in quiet.

In the sky, ospreys circle, searching for lunch.

Through the distant thicket a black bear thrashes undaunted, undauntable, and makes the earth tremble. Literally tremble.

Some ancient Seminole, a lyricist, gave the swamp its name, Okefenokee, "The land of trembling earth." The "earth" of the swamp, or much of it, was born of decomposed leaves and twigs turned to thick peat from which new vegetation grows, and the whole mass floats.

Step on it. Jump on it. It quivers and rolls, like Jello.

All of this 600-square-mile wonderland, here from prehistory, was assumed to be inaccessible except to the few who were born to it and learned its secrets and its hidden entries.

Then, during the Depression, men with great need and sharp blades hacked through one edge, near Waycross, Ga., as a make-work project.

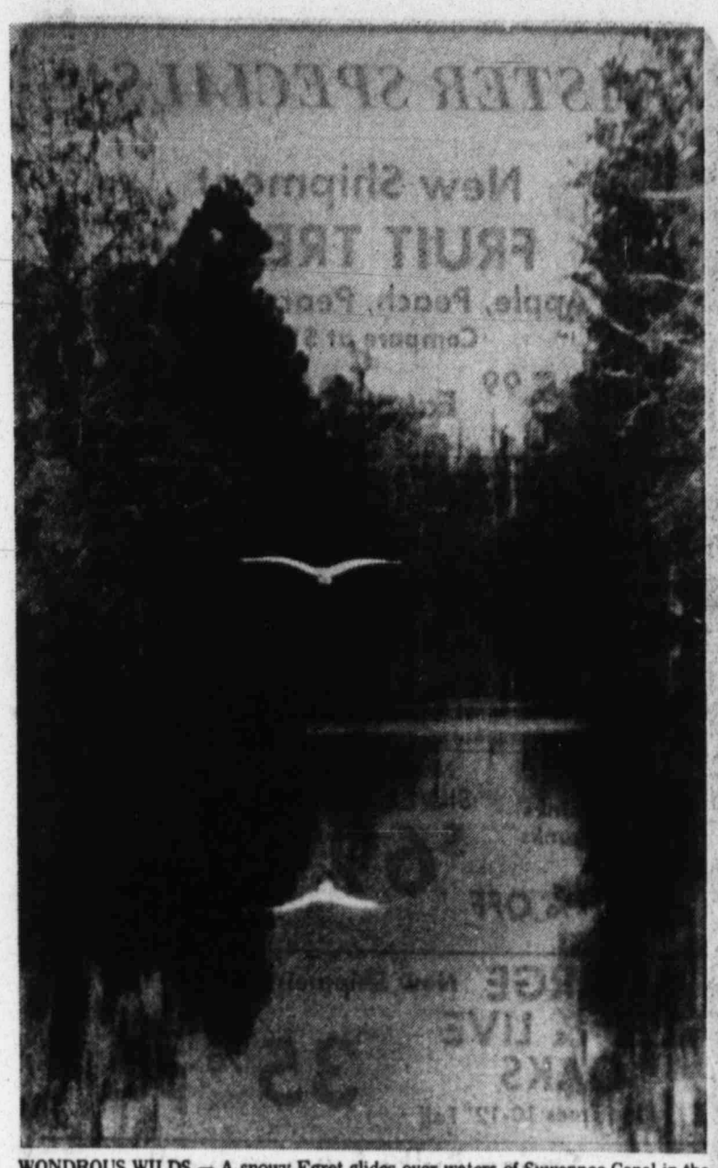
They widened some water trails which had been blazed by alligators and improved by Seminoles, and made a twisting corridor to the swamp's ghostly interior.

That was that. Years later, after the government had made the swamp a federal preserve, some Waycross citizens had the novel idea that others might like to see a swamp. Naturalists, for instance, or even tourists.

They formed a non-profit corporation and subleased from the state, which had leased from the federal government, that small corridor at the swamp's edge, and made a park.

They have kept their park, which pays its own way, utterly free of tourist tickytacky. They have, yes, tampered a bit with nature, but only enough to make accessible that wild interior which is federally protected from man's meddling.

Even the alligators seem to like the arrangement.



WONDROUS WILDS — A snowy Egret glides over waters of Suwannee Canal in the Okefenokee Swamp, the land of trembling earth. No other place is quite like the swamp, scientists say, and anyone who ventures into its wondrous wilds emerges a believer. (AP Laserphoto)

FAA Investigates Close Calls In Air

FORT WORTH (UPI) — An investigation into the report of a near mid-air collision between two Braniff and American jetliners could take several days, Federal Aviation Administration officials said Wednesday.

S.M. Comley, chief of the Fort Worth Air Traffic Control Center, said a Braniff flight en route from Tulsa, Oklahoma, to Houston reported the near collision with another Boeing 727 about 80 miles northeast of Dallas Tuesday.

Comley said he did not know yet how close the jetliners were, but said they passed within 2,000 feet vertically or five miles laterally, the standard FAA separation.

The Dutch mathematician Ludolph van Ceulen is chiefly known for his computations of the value of pi, which he carried to 35 decimal places. This value was inscribed on his tombstone.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Friday, March 24, the 83rd day of 1978 with 282 to follow.

The moon is in its full phase.

There is no morning star.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon was born March 24, 1855.

On this day in history:

In 1902, one of the "earliest "advice to the lovelorn" columns received this question: "Can two people live as comfortably as one on $12 a week?" The answer: "We do not approve of marriage on a financial basis."

In 1934, the United States granted the Philippine Islands independence to become effective July 4, 1946.

In 1956, white civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo of Detroit was shot and killed on a road near Selma, Ala. She was following a protest march demanding equal voting rights for blacks.

In 1976, Argentine President Isabel Peron, widow of former strongman ruler Juan Peron, was removed from power and arrested in a military coup.

A thought for the day:

British King George VI said, "The highest of distinctions is service to others."

Fiddlers Convention Set This Weekend

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI) — It's a Woodstock with mountain men, where pot smokin' and banjo pickin' combine in an event that has grown and changed enormously from its start as a rural school fundraiser 54 years ago.

More than 130,000 persons, mostly young, are expected to fill J. Pierce VanHoy's 70-acre cow pasture this weekend for the 54th annual Old Time Fiddlers Convention.

Organizers of the event say it has become a spring happening comparable to the mass student migration to Florida. Some come from as far as Alaska, Lt. Guy Griffin of the Iredell County Sheriff's Department said.

More than 10,000 persons had arrived by Wednesday evening, setting up tents amidst bluegrass musicians, sunbathers and Frisbee throwers.

"They fought the dad-blamed snow all winter," VanHoy said. "They're enjoying the sunshine now. They deserve it." The field began filling on Sunday, he said.

The Iredell County Sheriff's Department also is getting ready for the convention's start. Sheriff Tom Thompson said his 40 officers have made six arrests already for misdemeanor marijuana possession.

Police usually describe the crowds as peaceful. Drug and drunkenness arrests usually total 100 or 150 for the weekend, they say.

What brings the crowds to the Blue Ridge Mountain foothills are the 20 bands and scores of individual players. Last year's "World Champion Fiddler," postman Buddy Pendleton of Stuart, Va., is expected to seek his fifth title.

Musicians compete in preliminary contests in order to reach Saturday night's finals. The top fiddler picks up $1,000, while $500 goes to the top bluegrass band and the No. 1 old time band (groups that don't use dobros and pick the banjo differently than bluegrass players). Clogging exhibitions and other performances also are planned.

This is the second year the convention will be at VanHoy's 12,000-seat outdoor arena, a far cry from the schoolyard where the first convention took place. It has grown ever since VanHoy moved it to his property.

Meet Planning Conference Hits Snags

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — They paid $100 each to learn how to run a meeting. They learned how not to.

A "creative meeting planning conference," sponsored by the Hyatt Regency Hotel and New Englander magazine Tuesday, drew 88 business executives — and a lot of grumbles.

Conference highlights included a meeting on planning meetings that began early in the morning and ran late in the afternoon.

It also featured an audio-visual demonstration with upside-down slides and a talk entitled "audio-visuals should not be nap time in the darkened room" during which, witnesses said, two people fell asleep.

A knocking microphone distracted listeners at a talk on avoiding pitfalls at meetings. Much of the massive lunch — crab salad, thick steak and a piece of chicken — was untouched because it was too much to eat.

"It's lousy and you can quote me," Robert F. First, president of Robert S. First Inc.; of New York, told the Boston Globe. "What's creative here? Nothing."

"If I had planned this meeting for my company," said Pauline Uzzle, of W.R. Grace, "I'd be fired."

Boise, Idaho, founded in 1863, takes its name from the French term "les boises," or the trees, a description for the area used by French fur trappers in 1811.

Rhino Suffers Illness

Officials at the Buffalo Zoo are worried because Sally, their black rhino, is eating very little, mopes around all day and appears to be "asleep on her feet."

Zoo veterinarians believe their weighty patient has contracted some kind of illness, but they don't know what.

She's lost a "few hundred" pounds in the past four months. Whereas she once ate a bale of hay, pelleted rhino food and carrots daily, she now eats about a third of that.

"She's almost asleep on her feet," said the worried zoo veterinarian, Dr. Allan Prowten.

Zoo officials first thought Sally, who was obtained from the Boston Zoo 18 months ago, was pregnant, but blood tests proved negative.

Medical treatment has even proven to be a problem. "The rhino's abdominal cavity is so large you'd burn out the X-ray equipment we have, and surgery is out of the question," Dr. Prowten said.

He hopes that Sally, who has been receiving massive daily doses of iron and vitamins A, B, D and E, may just be suffering from a case of the winter blues.

"As soon as the weather gets warmer, she's going out into the paddock behind the rhino barn," Prowten said.

"Who knows, maybe the fresh air and sunshine will do her a lot of good."

Delaware, the second smallest of the states in area, is 96 miles long and from 9 to 35 miles wide.

Texas Town Burns Easter Fires

FREDERICKSBURG (AP) — As German settlers struggled for security in the Texas Hill County in 1846, a group of men met with Comanche Indian chiefs to forge a peace treaty.

As the meeting took place Easter Eve on the San Saba River, Indians kept watch fires burning on hills surrounding Fredericksburg. The flares burned brightest after the colonists, led by Fredericksburg's founder John O. Meusebach, struck an agreement with the chiefs.

Mothers told frightened children the Easter bunny had built the fires to boil eggs. He was coloring the eggs with dyes from hillside wild flowers, and if the children went to sleep they would find the eggs Easter morning.

And so goes the story of the unique Easter Fires which have burned each year, except during World War II, in commemoration of the pioneers.

The eight to nine fires now are fueled by tires and railroad ties, instead of brush and sticks, but the tradition is carried on with pride by Fredericksburg townspeople, many of whom speak their ancestors' native tongue.

"We used to shoot up a rocket or fireworks to signal people out on the hills to light the fires," said Elise Kowert. "But now they use CB's to radio the signal."

Mrs. Kowert and her husband publish the Fredericksburg Standard.

A pageant has grown around the event. Adults and children don costumes of Indians and settlers and even the Easter bunny to re-tell the story. The Gillespie County Historical Society stages the pageant, whose script has not changed since it began in 1946.

Civic groups have taken over handling of several fires, although some families continue building the huge bonfires.

"When I was little, it was families that would have them. That's how the customs were kept up," Mrs. Kowert said. "Often couples would go out on Saturday night and make a fire in the hills."

Last year, 4,000 persons packed the Gillespie County Fair Grounds for the pageant, which moved from an older site in 1976.

Fredericksburg is 15 miles from Stonewall, site of Lyndon Johnson's ranch. During LBJ's presidency, reporters attended the pageant yearly in case the president would show up. If he ever came, he went undetected.

Boulder Joins Ban Of Non-ERA States

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The city has joined a feminist boycott of states which have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment by approving a resolution banning payment of travel expenses to conventions held in non-ERA states.

The resolution was introduced Tuesday by council member Linda Jourgensen and approved unanimously. She said six other cities and two counties in other states have taken similar action.

Boulder was the first Colorado city to approve the resolution.

Miss Jourgensen said current estimates indicate non-ERA states could lose $100 million in convenion business during the next two years. She said the economic pressure was making several states reconsider their opposition.

The resolution will cut off travel funds to the 1978 Municipal League convention, scheduled for St. Louis in November. She said Missouri his not ratified the ERA and St. Louis officials have reported a drop in business due to the boycott.

Texas Family Says Firm Used Stolen Documents

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An Illinois insurance company, using surreptitiously-obtained medical information about a severely injured South Texas man, reduced by $150,000 a settlement offer to the man's family, alleges a suit filed by the family.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court here this week, said the information was obtained by a private detective agency in Denver from hospitals in Kansas and Texas and supplied to a Long Grove, Ill.-based insurance firm.

The detective agency and three of its employees were indicted by a Denver grand jury. The employees later pleaded guilty to theft-related charges and the corporation was dissolved by authorities.

James Lowell Bookout, injured near Santa Rosa in 1969 when he was knocked off his motor scooter by a low-hanging telephone wire, had brought suit against General Telephone Co. of the Southwest.

Bookout, now 25, was in a coma for several days and was initially hospitalized for two months. In the four years after the accident, he spent several months in institutions.

Some of the medical information concerning Bookout described him as suffering from severe mental problems, thus causing his attorneys to doubt his ability to testify against the telephone company.

The lawsuit said American Motorists Insurance Co. paid on Bookout's medical expenses until April 1973 when it gave the man's family two weeks notice it would stop payments. The family filed suit the following month.

In October 1974, Bookout's family agreed to a $300,000 settlement.

But the current lawsuit claimed the settlement would have been $450,000 if the insurance company had not known of Bookout's mental problems.

Bookout's records were among those seized by officials during a raid on the Denver offices of Factual Service Bureau. Colorado Assistant Attorney General Jim Bayless said more than 1,000 medical files were found.

A spokesman for American Motorist said he was familiar with the Denver investigation of the private detectives.

"Our company was completely exonerated in that situation," said Stephen Lesnik, vice president of communications and public affairs. "If there wasn't this lawsuit, I could tell you a lot of things."

The private investigators' reports concerning Bookout's medical records — from Scott-White Hospital in Temple; Memorial Medical Hospital in Corpus Christi; the now-defunct Seaview Hospital in Corpus Christi and the Menninger Clinic, in Topeka, Kan. — were mailed to the Bookouts in January by the district attorney's office in Denver.

The records had been used in a grand jury investigation of Factual Service Bureau. Copies of them were attached to the suit.

The suit claims the records were "secretly and unlawfully obtained" and seeks $25,000 for invasion of privacy and $2.5 million in punitive damages.

Factual Service Bureau was indicted in Denver and subsequently dissolved by the Illinois Secretary of State, Bayless said.

Copies of the documents mailed to the Bookouts from Denver include extensive physical and psychological background on Bookout's hospitalization.

The reports prepared by Factual Service Bureau mention the confidential nature of the material and how difficult it was to obtain the information.

The reports cite "medical sources" for delivery of the hospital records.

One report, prepared from material from Seaview, said it was condensed because "his (Bookout) chart is as thick as a New York telephone book."

But Bayless said the records were obtained through the use of simple methods such as pretext phone calls where the caller would pose as a doctor's secretary seeking information.

Some of the records probably could have been legally obtained through the courts, Bayless said.

Administrators at the three Texas hospitals said that it would be impossible to get the records by phone.

Joe Dickson, administrator at Scott-White, said Bookout's file there showed that authorization for release of the records was given to three doctors and an insurance adjuster in South Texas. He said the private detectives could have received the records through the doctors or the adjuster.

Researchers Say Worm Controls Disease-Carrying Mosquitoes

By LLOYD G. CARTER

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — University of California scientists report the best weapon against disease-carrying mosquitoes may turn out to be another bug that eats the pesky creatures.

Recent research with a tiny nematode worm named Romanomermis culicivorax at Searsville Lake near Palo Alto on the San Francisco Peninsula produced impressive mosquito control results when coupled with a growth-thwarting substance called Altosid.

Dr. George O. Poinar Jr, insect pathologist for UC Berkeley, says this is the first time a nematode has been found practical for mosquito control.

"We achieved from 70 to 97 percent control of Anopheles freeborni (mosquito) along the edge of the lake in 1976," said Poinar, who oversaw the lake tests conducted by graduate student Wellington Otieno of Kenya. "This was especially signficant since the lake border was covered with parrot weed so thick that mosquito fish couldn't catch the mosquitoes."

Anopheles mosquitoes carry several diseases fatal to humans, including malaria.

"A system combining R. culicivorax with Altosid could give very good control over many freshwater mosquitoes without damaging non-target organisms," he said. "Use of the nematode, at the very least, could reduce the need for chemicals and retards or perhaps prevent the development of resistance to the chemicals by mosquitoes."

The nematode is native to Louisiana and U.S. Agriculture Department scientist James J. Petersen raised the nematode cultures for Poinar's experiments at Lake Charles, La. Poinar said much of the credit for the mosquito control success should go to Peterson.

Science Today

The tiny parasitic nematode worm works best in quiet, fairly warm, water with lots of vegetation.

"After hatching, the young worms seek out mosquito larvae and bore a small hole in the cuticle. They enter the body cavity and feed on the mosquito's interior," Poinar said.

He said scientists in Florida are starting to raise the nematode for mosquito control and have developed a method to spread the worms over marshes and lakes by aircraft.

Field trials of nematode control have also been conducted in Southeast Asia, Central America and in West Africa where it is being tested for control of blackfly larvae, which carries the agent causing the human disease called river blindness.

One California firm, Nutrilite Corp. of Lakeview, is attempting commercial production of nematodes.

James Cupello, manager of research and services for Nutrilite Products' at Lakeview, said his firm has built a pilot facility to test mass production of the worm. He says keeping the worms alive during shipping is the main obstacle.

"We're gearing up," Cupello said. "When we overcome the shipping problems we'll send the eggs free to a select group of mosquito control agencies. Then we'll seek approval from the Environmental Protection Agency for their use and sell them at or near cost to get feedback on commercial use. We hope to make test shipments starting in June."

Airline Asks Right For Mexico Route

HOUSTON (UPI) — Texas International Airlines is requesting approval from the Civil Aeronautics Board to begin daily non-stop flights between Houston and Guadalajara, Mexico.

A TIA spokesman said Wednesday the Mexican government had already approved the new route.

Carter Now On Shaky Ground Regarding Israel

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's clash with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin sets their two countries on a collision course, dims Mideast peace prospects and leaves Carter groping for a policy that works.

Finding one will not be easy.

If Carter tries to exert more pressure on Israel, he will run political risks with Jewish-Americans, a group that gave him immense support in his 1976 presidential race.

Begin's appeal Thursday to the "moral greatness" of Americans was clearly a call for both Christians and Jews to stand with Israel in its fight with the White House, which he said had accused Israel of "obstructing peace."

Addressing the same New York meeting, Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, the principal lobbyist for American Jews, weighed in alongside Begin. Schindler proposed an unrestrained attack on U.S. Mideast policy — a clear reference to the planned sale of jet fighters to Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

But there are other signs the president and his policy makers may have more political freedom to get tough with Israel than any presidential adviser would have thought possible in the past.

In an Associated Press-NBC News poll this week, 42 percent of the 1,604 adults quizzed agreed that all U.S. aid to Israel should be suspended if Israel declined to sign a peace agreement with the Arabs.

Although no agreement is in hand, the response, based on the premise of a pact, does seem to reflect considerable impatience with Israel and its prime minister.

Begin, in a speech before the National Press Club here Thursday, acknowledged that his talks with the president were "difficult."

There were reports, meanwhile, that high-level American officials had concluded progress toward peace was possible only if the 64-year-old leader steps down. There is no evidence, however, that Carter intends to try to force Begin's ouster.

Carter has already taken several political risks, calling for a Palestinian "homeland," declaring that Palestinians have "legitimate rights" and preparing to sell the fighters to Israel's Arab neighbors.

Analysis

Henry Kissinger dealt with a stubborn Israel three years ago by declaring a "reassessment" of U.S. weapons shipments to Israel, suggesting that the massive sales could end. While his approach may have overcome Israeli resistance to the terms of a Sinai disengagement agreement with Egypt, it dangerously rattled U.S.-Israeli relations.

Carter is giving no hint that he too might apply a military squeeze to Israel. In fact, he is promising continued U.S. aid in the hope of giving Israel a sense of security to take some risks for peace.

The arms option removed, Carter does not seem to have many left.

And if Begin follows through on his farewell hint to start up new Jewish settlements in captured Arab lands, the U.S. predicament will grow more intense.

The United States could offer strong security guarantees to Israel. But Begin does not want American soldiers fighting Israel's battles, and it is highly unlikely that the American public would permit that anyway.

Washington could train its diplomatic attention on Egypt and try to induce President Anwar Sadat to at least resume the direct political negotiations with Israel he suspended in mid-January.

That, too, seems out of the question. Sadat wants Israel to make concessions and U.S. strategists are reluctant to push him into new disagreements with the other Arab states.

American mediator Alfred L. Atherton Jr. might reboard his Mideast shuttle and plug away on a declaration of principles to serve as a guide for an overall settlement.

Israeli officials say privately there was some progress on the document while Begin was here.

But beyond limited measures it would be difficult to imagine a new U.S. overall strategy.

The realization is deepening, meanwhile, that Begin as prime minister will not be transformed into a dove. There is now no doubt that he is a hawk with an extra set of claws.

Cleveland's Mayor Suspends Hongisto

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police Chief Richard Hongisto, who swept into town like a lawman hero three months ago, has been suspended by an angry mayor in front of the poised pens and whirring cameras of reporters.

Dennis Kucinich, the 31-year-old "boy mayor" elected last November, called a sudden news conference Thursday to confront Hongisto about his charges that the police department was being pressured to commit "unethical acts."

When Hongisto balked at clarifying his remarks with reporters present, Kucinich announced his surprise decision.

One published report Thursday quoted sources as saying the mayor has told Hongisto to resign within the next few months. The story said Kucinich was upset because of Hongisto's disputes with the mayor's staff and because Hongisto receives more publicity than the mayor.

Hongisto, 41, who established a liberal, free-wheeling reputation in two terms as sheriff of San Francisco County, was hired Dec. 14, the first big appointment for Kucinich, who tabbed Hongisto "one of the best law enforcement officials in the country."

The two men appeared to get along well, but periodic reports surfaced that Hongisto was locking horns with top Kucinich staffers.

The "ethics" charges are the first public clash of wills between the police chief and the mayor.

Hongisto has said that some persons in Kucinich's administration are "trying to put people with questionable ethics on the vice detail" and attempting to "jigger scores at the (police) academy to qualify people because they are somebody's son."

Kucinich told Hongisto at the news conference that the suspension would continue "at least until you furnish me with adequate substantiation of your charges or until you clarify that you have no basis for the charges."

Hongisto refused to elaborate on his charges, saying he would probably have the information ready in 24 hours. "They asked me to report in front of a bunch of cameras. I wouldn't do that," he said.

Kucinich gave two reasons for the suspension: Hongisto's refusal to affirm or deny a published statement quoting the chief as saying, "You wouldn't believe the unethical things they're trying to get me to do"; and Hongisto's "refusal to document in any way the nature or details of any unethical conduct you have charged or implied against members of my administration."

Press secretary Andy Juniewicz said Hongisto would not be paid during his suspension. Reached by telephone Thursday night, Hongisto said, "I feel fine. I'm just worried about continuing to get a paycheck."

Hongisto's record as sheriff in San Francisco included establishing jail reforms, such as medical care and drug counseling, and improved training of deputies.

In May 1977, Hongisto was fined $500 and spent five days in jail on a contempt of court citation for refusing to evict elderly and poor tenants from a Chinatown hotel scheduled for demolition.

He also attracted national attention last year as an outspoken supporter of gay rights, making speeches in San Francisco and going to Miami to oppose Anita Bryant's anti-homosexual rights campaign.

Slow Changes Expected In Federal Language

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's executive order requiring federal regulation writers to use plain English won't get any quick results, his advisers concede.

"Carter still thinks things happen when he orders them, poor man," one official of the Office of Management and Budget said, only half in jest and asking not to be named.

Administration officials predict at best a long, slow improvement in the clarity of federal prose as a result of the president's order, signed Thursday. It requires any new regulation be "written in plain English and understandable to those who must comply with it."

"There won't be any overnight, instantaneous results," said Fred Emery, the director of the Federal Register. It is in that daily digest that proposed federal regulations must be published.

Emery, who participated in writing the plain-English order, has had an effort under way for nearly seven years to make the writing of regulations clearer.

The history of that effort shows results come slowly if at all. Recently Emery has even detected some disappointing evidence of backsliding, he says.

Last April he began requiring that regulations published in the Federal Register contain a plain-language summary. He detailed several of his staff members to monitor compliance. "We really beat on the agencies," he said.

There was improvement for awhile, he said, "but it takes more than an order. I think now that some agencies are not keeping up with the level we had in April."

One major problem with clarifying governmental English, or what is often called "bureaucratese," is the sheer number of people who write it.

According to a 2-year-old federal study, 105,000 employees are involved in writing, editing or otherwise affecting the language of regulations. And that total did not include writers of regulations involving federal grants, the fastest-growing class of rules.

Emery has been holding composition classes to teach lucid writing to regulation drafters for three years, but so far only about 400 have received the training. At that rate it would take generations to give writing instruction to all those involved.

Another difficulty, as Emery sees it, is that regulation writers tend to be lawyers who try to draft language with no loopholes. "You can't be airtight and still simple," he said.

Yet another problem is that federal prose is held in such low esteem that it is difficult to recruit talented writers to produce it, Emery says.

"People ask, 'What do you do for a living?' and you have to say, 'I'm embarrassed to tell you that I'm a regulation writer.'" he said.

He said Carter's order could change this by making regulation-writing "a worthwhile profession in this town."

But Emery and Carter's other advisers on the subject concede they have a long way to go. The OMB official said most regulations now written aren't clear enough to be classified as plain English.

"I have a guy on my staff who wants to be Editor of the United States," he said. "If he could veto any badly written regulation, he'd be the most powerful guy in the country."

It's Worth Looking Into

Think Ahead ... Think of Swimming ...
Think of swimming in the back yard of this lovely "early" contemporary home, featuring 2 fireplaces, 3 large bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, an office and a garden room. Over 2800 sq. ft. and priced at only $69,950. You might call the pool a "bonus" feature. Call for private showings.

Quiet, Established Neighborhood
Lots of trees, a lovely yard and a home that's just immaculate. Two living areas, 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, and worlds of storage. Carpet and drapes are almost new. Drive by 6010 Vernon, you'll like the inside, too!

Advantage One! Formal Dining Room
Advantage Two! Office, sewing room or playroom all-in-one. It's pretty and clean and has 3 exceptionally large bedrooms. You'll see a lot for your money when you check out 7708 Lynnhaven Drive. You'll also enjoy the party house, pool and tennis courts of Melonie Park South.

Crowded? Move Up To Comfort
In this spacious 4 bedroom home with living-dining comb., den, gameroom, breakfast area and a multitude of extras. It's big, it's sharp and it's priced to sell at $74,500. Call for further details.

Can't Find What You're Looking For?
Build it! Corner lot, super location in the Westgate Addition near Rushland Park. Be a part of that prestigious neighborhood. The lot is priced at $25,000. You might also ask about other lots we have avilable.

Diplomatic Party Season Begins In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan launched the spring diplomatic party season Thursday with a celebration of its national day, 38 years after a resolution was passed in India to establish the Moslem nation.

The embassies of Greece, Bangladesh, Senegal, Hungary, Chad, Sierra Leone and Portugal will commemorate their independence days over the next few weeks with the lavish buffets that make Washington an ethnic food gourmet's delight.

But the Syrian Arab Republic may cancel its national day party scheduled for April 17. Syrian press aide Toufic Abouchaer said that because of the crisis in the Mideast, Damascus had not yet decided whether to have an official celebration at the embassy.

A reception to mark the 33rd anniversary of the League of Arab States scheduled for Wednesday was cancelled "due to the flagrant Israeli aggression on Lebanon."

Israel's Independence Day falls on April 21, but a spokesman from the embassy, still swirling from Menachem Begin's tense state visit this week, said no one was working on plans for a party then.

But at a national day party, international politics can take a back seat to socializing, getting in a free meal, and celebrity watching.

At the lunch at the Pakistani embassy, more than a hundred guests loaded their plates with pungent curry, and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger breezed in for a five-minute cameo appearance.

Trim and tan from Acapulco, Kissinger stayed just enough for orange juice (liquor was not served), photos with Ambassador Sahabzada Yaqub-Khan and a brief chat with Foreign Secretary Asha Shahi, fresh from a meeting on nuclear disarmament with national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The party was designed as a stag affair, explained Ambasssador Yaqub-Khan, "because we didn't think men could get home at lunch time to fetch their wives. Believe me, this is not a policy of discrimination against women."

The few women who showed up appeared to be reporters, State Department officials or real-estate agents.

"No, no. I'm not here for business," said a dramatic redhead wearing a canary yellow pants suit who was passing out business cards as a member of the "million dollar sales club. "I just think the diplomatic community is the most interesting in the world."

Christopher Phillips, former deputy ambassador to the United Nations and now president of the National Council on U.S.-China trade, said he usually tried to avoid most embassy parties because you "can't talk seriously with people in places like this."

Dot Padgett of the State Department protocol office said she found such parties "useful to pass information and see many of the people I don't get a chance to talk to. I can very often settle a particular question with an ambassador right away like this."

Ambassadors from Bulgaria, East Germany, Egypt, Bangladesh and Paraguay were among the diplomats at the reception.

"I'm a celebrity watcher. That's why I come to these receptions," said Eric Heiberg from the Georgetown University Office of International Programs. "But I never recognize any of the ambassadors."

Tanker Amoco Cadiz Breaks Completely

By PAUL TREUTHARDT

BREST, France (AP) — The wrecked American supertanker Amoco Cadiz broke completely in two early today, and the stern section with its broad towering bridge and huge engine was swung completely around by the pounding seas.

The forward section, still thought to hold up to 15 million gallons of oil, was bearing the full force of the storms and 25-foot swells.

Peak tides due over the weekend may completely break up the vessel, ending any chance of saving the remaining oil from joining the record 50 million gallons already fouling the Brittany coast.

The tanker broke its back and split almost in two within hours of grounding March 16. But until early today it had held together on the port side.

A full pollution alert was ordered in western Normandy as the oil slicks continue to drift eastward across northern Brittany.

Oil pollution control experts from America and other nations were bitter over French reluctance to take their advice on cleaning up the spill, which topped the 1967 Torrey Canyon disaster off southwest England by at least 15 million gallons.

French press criticism also was growing over the French government's failure to coordinate and start a cleanup of waters and beaches soiled by the spreading mess.

None of the experts would be quoted directly because of their continuing relations with the authorities.

But they left no doubt in private conversations they felt precious time had been wasted and that they disagreed with the clean-up policies adopted by the French government.

At least five American companies specializing in oil recovery had been trying since shortly after the accident to interest French authorities in their services, without success.

The experts disagreed with one government theory that there was no point in calling in additional troops to try to clean beaches until it was known there would be no more oil spillage from the tanker.

The specialists said their experience showed that all possible clean-up operations should be started at the earliest moment after a spill regardless of possible new oil slicks.

Most experts considered the idea of setting fire to the ship too dangerous because of possible explosions and the resulting fallout of oil droplets on homes and farmlands on the Brittany coast.

The controversial idea was revived Wednesday by French authorities.

A marine biologist said the effect of the spill on plant and sea life will be massive and could be catastrophic.

Voters Pick 17 Women In France

PARIS (AP) — The fledgling French women's movement faces an uncertain future after a dismal showing in the National Assembly elections.

Out of a record 600 women candidates, only 17 of them were elected to the 491-member assembly. That is 10 more women than were in the last assembly, but women leaders had hoped to do much better.

"It wasn't misogyny, just French conservatism," said Florence d'Harcourt, whose re-election from the Paris suburb of Neuilly was one of the few hopeful signs for women.

"But in any case, the future of the women's movement is not bright," she declared.

Eleven of the 17 women elected were Communists, one was a Socialist and five belonged to parties of the center-right majority.

"As far as women are concerned, the results are a catastrophe for the majority," said Mrs. d'Harcourt. "They show that only the Communists understood the importance of backing good women candidates."

Mrs. d'Harcourt had to run as an independent after her own party, the Gaullist Rally for the Republic, ran newspaper magnate Robert Hersant in her district. The party asked her to withdraw but she refused and then whipped Hersant in the first round of voting.

The feminist group Choisir — Choice — ran its own slate of 100 candidates, but none managed to get more than 4.4 per cent of the vote.

In recent years, women activists have helped get legislation passed liberalizing France's abortion and divorce laws. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, sensitive to the increasing political agitation by women, created a special governmental office for women's affairs and has named half a dozen women to the cabinet.

But Mrs. d'Harcourt said the election results did not strengthen women's leverage either in the National Assembly or within the established political parties.

"I and the others elected will do all we can to give French women a voice in this Assembly and to press for more women candidates next time," she said. "But I'm afraid we're in for a tough time."

Leaders of Choisir said they weren't discouraged by the results of their first campaign, which was organized late and didn't have much money.

Soviet Scientist Warned Against Leading Protest

MOSCOW (UPI) — Dissident leader Andrei Sakharov says authorities have warned him he will be prosecuted "under all the strictness of Soviet law" if he holds any more public demonstrations.

Sakharov, 56, a leading Soviet scientist, was summoned to the office of the deputy city prosecutor of Moscow Thursday in connection with a March 12 demonstration he led to protest Kremlin support for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The protest, which was quickly broken up by bystanders, condemned the PLO raid in Israel that killed more than 30 people.

Sakharov said Deputy Chief Prosecutor V.V. Nestuerov told him in a three-minute meeting he had committed "a crude violation of public order" and had provoked other citizens to break the law with his "actions bordering on hooliganism."

The Nobel Peace Prize laureate said the prosector told him he would not be prosecuted this time as an "act of humanity."

"But if there is a repetition of this type of act you will be held responsible under all the strictness of Soviet law," Sakharov quoted the prosecutor as saying.

Sakharov said he tried to explain that he believed he had not violated the law, but was interrupted and not allowed to reply.

It was the third time in five years that Sakharov has been warned by authorities about his dissident activities.

Writer's Expulsion Ordered By Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Georges Herbouze, director of Middle East operations for Agence France-Presse, left Beirut today after he was ordered expelled by the Lebanese government.

Herbouze, 54, was told he was expelled because he "had not written a story favorable to Lebanon in the past three months," the agency's Beirut bureau said.

The foreign press corps in Beirut protested the expulsion, first since the 1975-76 civil war, as a "grave blow to freedom of expression in Lebanon."

Atlantic City Not Ready For Gambling Crowds

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — As school opened for student croupiers who hope to turn this ailing resort into a gambling mecca, officials still worried that their city may not be ready for a crush of card players and dice throwers.

The 500 students who will be fitted for the tuxedo outfits they will sport after graduation from their unusual studies — in blackjack, craps, roulette, baccarat and big six wheels — are assured of work in a city where unemployment reaches 20 percent in the winter off-season.

Within a six-hour drive of Atlantic City are 53 million potential gamblers.

But almost 17 months after New Jerseyans voted to legalize gambling in Atlantic City, only one casino will be open by Memorial Day — and that only because the state frantically pushed through special legislation to ensure a jump on other states contemplating legal gambling.

The major problem is that money — a necessary ingredient in any renaissance in this once elegant resort — is still lacking despite a flurry of announcements for planned casinos and hotels.

The lone casino being readied is Resort International's $40 million renovation of the 59-year-old Chalfonte-Haddon Hall hotel.

Plans for about 20 other casino-hotel projects are stalled by the search for financing. Developers like Playboy and Penthouse magazines and Caesar's Palace hope to open the second casino. Who will win is anyone's bet.

Officials have expressed other worries. The city has only about 3,200 first-class hotel rooms. Its narrow streets, many of which deadend at the famous Boardwalk, may be jammed with an extra 100,000 cars on a summer weekend, and there are not enough parking spaces.

Plans also were announced earlier this month to lay off 35 police and some lifeguards because state limits on local spending prevent a budget increase to prepare for casinos.

Police Chief William ten Brink fears the whole thing may be "like a Fourth of July weekend every day."

All this comes after a decade-long fight to legalize gambling to revive a tourist economy weakened over the years by general decay and jets speeding vacationers to more exotic beaches. It comes after a state commission spent six months trying to write detailed gambling regulations.

Last week alarm reached a head over the stalled gambling and the prospect that Florida or New York might move to steal casino revenues. Gov. Brendan Byrne rammed through the legislature a bill designed to open Resort's casino quickly while the state continues an investigation to ensure the conglomerate runs a clean gambling operation.

Byrne's impatience even got to the state casino commission. "We've got to get this thing going. Let's get Atlantic City rolling," chairman Joseph Lordi said Tuesday as the commission approved the casino school's opening and granted Resorts a special exemption to buy 1,200 slot machines without a license.

Resorts is expected to apply for a temporary gambling permit in the next few days under the Byrne law. The governor hopes the law will encourage building by guaranteeing reluctant investors their money will not be lost if a casino license is rejected or revoked.

Resorts plans to hire 1,000 employees beyond its present staff of about 800. State labor officials estimate the extra hotel jobs and spinoff jobs could knock a point from the city's unemployment rate.

The hopeful dealers and croupiers who complete the tuition-free night classes in running gambling operations can expect to be hired when Resorts' casino opens, possibly by May 20.

But Wednesday night they were just getting name tags and orientation. "It takes time to get these things off the ground, you know," explained James E. Carr, the school's director.

Woman Offers Fine For Smuggling

WINDSOR, Ontario (AP) — A woman who says she has been smuggling clothes for years into Canada has paid up before Easter.

"Enclosed please find a $50-bill conscience money," said the letter to the customs office in Windsor. "For years I smuggled small items of clothing across from Detroit. I want to make amends and restitution where possible." It was signed "A penitent sinner now saved by God's grace" and included an Easter religious picture along with the money. An official said the handwriting was "definitely female."

Paper Says Terrorism Hurting Middle East Talks

By United Press International

The Sharon (Pa.) Herald:

The massive air, sea and ground assault launched by Israeli forces against Palestinian guerrilla camps in Lebanon in the wake of the worst terrorist attack in the history of the Jewish state was to be expected. Considering the heavy loss in civilian lives suffered by Israel at the hands of Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah killers, Israel could do no less than to exact retribution, and the world will understand its need to do so.

There is much that is to be mourned in this turn of events, chief of which is the deaths of the innocents. Equally sad, however, is the impact of his renewal of the Palestinians' terrorism will have on the tortuous efforts to achieve a stable Middle East peace.

However strongly Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has condemned the attack, Israeli anger and sorrow for some time to come will not permit its leaders to engage seriously in any talks with any Arabs. We are inclined to believe Sadat when he called the work of the terrorists the kind of act — action and counter-action was the way he put it — he was seeking to end in his historic journey to Jerusalem.

Obviously he has not succeeded, and the renewal of such acts of terrorism and subsequent demands for retaliation cannot help but seriously impede the efforts of reasonable men to bring peace to the Middle East.

Scripps-Howard Newspapers:

At this writing it is not known if Israel's thrust into southern Lebanon can be limited to cleaning out Palestinian terrist bases or will lead to war with Syria, which has 30,000 troops on Lebanese soil.

The latter possibility is the terrible risk Prime Minister Menachem Begin took when he ordered his forces into action. And yet he could hardly react otherwise after Saturday's Palestinian raid on the Haifa-Tel Aviv road.

That attack by an Al Fatah suicide squad was worse than the murder of 30 innocent Israeli civilians. It was a cold-blooded attempt to sabotage negotiations between Egypt and Israel and thus was anti-peace.

For Israel not to retaliate after the costliest act of Arab terrorism since it became a state would have required superhuman forbearance. Sadly, as in all such reprisals, helpless civilians as well as guerrillas were killed and wounded.

The shedding of innocent blood is all the more reason why Al Fatah bases must be kept out of the area just north of Israel's border. They can only lead to suffering on both sides, raids and counter-raids and disruption of the peace process.

Interestingly, the State Department recognized the threat to peace posed by the bases in "Fatahland," the border region where Lebanese authority is nonexistent and the guerrillas ruled. Given a opportunity to condemn the Israeli invasion, the department said:

"It has been clear for some time that the presence of Palestinian military units in southern Lebanon has presented a threat to Israeli security. These units have not only declared open hostility to Israel but have also launched terrorist attacks on that country."...

Los Angeles Times:

Once again last week, the guns of the guerrillas and the terrorists dominated the news and stirred the emotions.

The attacks were by the Palestine Liberation Organization outside Tel Aviv, by South Moluccan gunmen who seized 72 hostages in the Netherlands and by Red Brigades extremists who kidnapped Aldo Moro, one of Italy's more important political leaders and murdered his five bodyguards.

The terrorists have different reasons for their actions, but commonality exists in the irrationality. The Palestinian attack will not bring realization of a homeland closer. The Moluccans will not persuade the Dutch government to help win independence from Indonesia for their island homeland. And the Red Brigades terrorists will not force a total collapse of Italian society, which has survived greater strains.

To the civilized, logic has never been a force among such determined men. They kill in hopes of success, the world shudders and governments try and very often fail to prevent new assaults and to punish the guilty. It's all another illustration of the destructive and disruptive powers of relatively small bands of terrorists.

What are the nations to do? ....

In some cases, the best answer to terrorism may be to provide a stable and just society. But it is not that simple. The Dutch pride themselves on stability, yet are targets. As for justice, some societies with the most injustice, such as those in Eastern Europe, are the freest of terrorism.

Sadly, there are no clear answers. There is nothing the Dutch can do, for example, to twist Indonesian arms for the creation of an independent Moluccan state. The Palestinian attack oly stiffens Israeli resistance to an independent Palestinian state on the West Bank. And the crisis in Italy may turn out to be more beneficial than harmful to society if the present mood of solidarity among all political parties continues there.

Futility appears to breed futility. The attackers fail in achieving their goals; the attacked fail in their search for calm. And, most important, the innocent continue to suffer.

Jeannette (Pa.) NewsDispatch:

This is to be a year of tax reform, or at least so the administration has decided. In the past, tax reform usually has meant the administration tries to eliminate tax deductions and otherwise simplify collection procedures while Congress takes the opportunity to add some new deductions.

For some unknown reason, one change that has not been suggested over the years is to establish a schedule of depreciation for that greatest of all national treasures, the taxpayer. He is at least as much an exhaustable resource as any of the material objects which can be depreciated for tax purposes, and the government certainly stands to lose substantially if the taxpayer should collapse prematurely.

Just how one would gauge the condition of the taxpayer at any given time, or assess his resale value, might be a difficult point. It probably would involve a complicated formula incorporating his medical condition, earning capacity, field of activity, number of dependents, tension factor and his ability to complete an income tax return.

In the end, it probably wouldn't be worth the trouble. Which is an additional reason why the Internal Revenue Service ought to go for the idea. Tyler Morning Telegraph:

Most Americans probably have passed the point of being surprised at where some of their tax dollars go.

But they still need to be informed about some of the spending programs that simply don't make much sense. In this category is a recent grant to Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers (UFW) of $500,000 from the U.S. Labor Department.

But the money is reported to be earmarked for teaching unemployed members of the UFW something about the English Language.

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall was quoted as saying that this grant is just the beginning, and there also are plans to sign additional contracts with the UFW for an apprenticeship training program.

There appears to be plenty of government money available for such purposes — $1.8 billion under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), which seems to have had questionable success in some of its other training programs.

There is so much money available that Rep. Bill Ketchum of California reported that the national director of CETA programs told his office "there is no way he can monitor the millions of dollars which cross his desk."

Rep. Ketchum said his office contacted three separate spokesmen at the Labor Department: "We asked exactly how a labor organization untrained in the implementation of an educational grant of this magnitude qualified for so many of the taxpayers' dollars. No one was able to provide an explanation."

It is difficult to understand how people who are charged with being national leaders can vote to waste huge amounts of money on things like this while the public debt grows larger by the day.

We keep thinking that the taxpayers are going to get indignant enough soon to make sure that some people are elected who will begin to weed out the big wasters and big spenders.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette:

The first and tactically more important of the new Panama Canal treaties has made its way through the locks of Senate approval — barely. Supporters of the treaty, including President Carter, have a right to be peeved at the handful of senators who made the passage slower and more turbulent than it should have been by attaching unnecessary amendments and reservations. But that brinkmanship and the crowd-pleasing politics that prompted it will soon be forgotten.

In fact, the inevitable sense of climax that has set in after Thursday's dramatic Senate vote should help passage of the second canal treaty to be considered, that granting sovereignty over the waterway to Panama after the year 2000. The historical justice and strategic logic of an orderly transfer of control over the canal have been obvious from the day the documents were initialed. Subsequent senatorial agonizing about peripheral issues and semantic subtleties was inevitable. When the important issues in the treaty debate were focused upon, a two-thirds majority for ratification was produced.

It's a good bet the same majority — or an even more comfirtable one — will approve the second Panama treaty.

Two Plead Innocent To Murder Charges

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — A Texarkana private detective and a DeKalb, Texas, woman pleaded innocent Wednesday to a charge of conspiracy to commit capital murder.

Larry Wilson, 35, and Doris Eloise Swint, 52, were arrested Feb. 24. They are accused of trying to hire an undercover policeman to kill the wife of a Texarkana policeman.

Wilson and Mrs. Swint are free on $100,000 bond.

Circuit Judge J. Hugh Lookadoo of Arkadelphia said the case would be continued until the next term of court begins May 23 in Miller Circuit Court.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Give-and-take will be called for tomorrow with one you're involved with romantically. Hurt feelings will surely result from inconsiderate actions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be short-tempered tomorrow with persons who don't do things your way. Tolerance will make everyone's job easier and the day more pleasant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your friendliness on a strictly platonic plane tomorrow. You could be accused of enticing another's sweetheart and sparks will fly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your image will still be fragile and could be easily damaged tomorrow, especially with those who count. Be extra careful about what you say or do to others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone you expected to hear from may not call you tomorrow. You could let this get you down and ruin what otherwise could be a pleasant day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might further complicate your financial picture by going on a spending spree tomorrow. Remember that those bills have to be paid at the end of the month.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't get your signals crossed tomorrow and be overly-assertive in a situation that calls for diplomacy and tact.

Brokerage Firms Eye Commodity Futures

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

The squeeze on brokerage industry profits, which has prompted recent commission rate hikes for both individual and institution investors, could push some firms into an area many of them have traditionally shied away from — commodity futures. A few of Wall Street's better-know names have been looking into the possibilities of futures trading, for a very simple reason — profits.

That doesn't mean a wholesale leap into the soybean and pork belly trading pits. Rather, the route to the commodity business is more likely to track first through the relatively new areas — financial instruments such as Government National Mortgage Association bonds, Treasury bills and, possibly, foregin currencies. A lot of firms that wouldn't consider trading agricultural or industrial commodities have been active in money markets for a long time and, as one broker put it, are practically in the futures market now.

Reflecting the growing interest, a membership of the International Monetary Market in Chicago — which didn't even exist at the beginning of this decade — last week sold for $79,000. That's about $15,000 more than the value of a seat on the venerable New York Stock Exchange and nearly triple the going price for an American Stock Exchange membership.

Futures trading, of course, is nothing new to Wall Street. Big firms like Merrill Lynch, Bache, Paine Webber and others have been members of commodity exchanges for years. For most of them, revenue from futures trading has been only a small part of total income, but it's been growing rapidly over the past year or two.

Recently, though, there have been indications of interest in futures from firms never associated with that business before. Goldman, Sachs & Co., for one, long considered among the street's premier investment banking firms, is one that has been testing the commodity waters. A spokesman for the firm says it is not gearing up a futures trading operation, but we've learned it has been gathering data, and commodity traders point out that a firm like Goldman, with its long list of big coroporate clients, — and its long background in money markets — might find the futures arena a natural evolutionary step.

At Becker Securities, president John Wing told us that expansion in commodities is "Something we think about from time to time — about once a year," but he added that he fully expects his firm to step up its role. "It's not a question of if, but when," he said, explaining that "the lines (between financial markets) are getting more and more blurred all the time."

Becker is already a member of the IMM and, says Wing, "we're sort of getting into (futures trading)." He adds that if and when the American Stock Exchange's plans for futures trading become a reality, Becker will "certainly be part of it." (The Amex has an application pending at the Commodity Futures Trading Commssion for clearance to trade futures in GMMA bonds. The exchange also plans to trade gold and silver bullion and put and call options on bonds, but those are waiting for rules to be published by the (FTC.)

Although interest in futures trading is picking up among brokers, it is not exactly sweeping through Wall Street. A partner at one firm told us that the subject is studied "every few years" and always rejected because, he said, "most people lose money in commodities and we just don't want to get into that hassle."

It isn't hard to see whay the brokers are casting eyes at the futures business. Last year, profits for members of the NYSE fell 63 percent from the 1976 level, according to exchange figures. In the fourth quarter, profits were down 72 percent from the year-earlier level.

At the same time the great hope for hyping revenues — the option markets — have been stagnant, partly because of the stock market's slide, which takes the attraction out of trading puts and calls, and partly because of the freeze on expansion of those markets. Options trading has been little help to the brokers' income statements.

Futures trading, on the other hand, has been growing rapidly. (Volume on the IMM, a small market, soared 173 percent last year.) What's more, the commissions, in relation to the amount of money that is actually ivested, are much higher than for trading in stocks. As one broker told us, "the reason for the interest, simply, is that commodity business can be very, very profitable. The problem is that it involves a whole new area of expertise, so firms that aren't in it have to build a staff. That's why you're not likely to see a lot of firms rush into commodities, buy they could edge their way in over a period of time."

Carter In Middle Of Crucial Decisions On Foreign Policy

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is in the middle of several crucial foreign policy moves, the outcome of which are far from certain. Furthermore, it appears that domestic politics is weighing heavily on all the president's major decisions these days.

Facing strong opposition from conservative forces, he won by one vote the ratification of the Panama Canal neutrality treaty. But the fight is far from over. The big test comes in early April when the Senate votes on turning over control of the waterway to Panama.

The president also has taken a tougher approach to the Soviets with his Wake Forest University speech in which he vowed to maintain the U.S. military strength to guarantee its security.

"Adequate and capable military forces are still an essential element of our national security," Carter said. "We, like our ancestors, have the obligation to maintain strength equal to the challenges of the world in which we live and we Americans will continue to do so."

The speech, which included a warning against growing Soviet military power, was quickly denounced by the Soviets as having abandoned the policy of detente and created new tensions.

The Russian-Cuban adventures in the Horn of Africa and the stalemated strategic arms limitation talks motivated the aggressive address by Carter.

Aides concede that the new toughness against the Russians is partly designed to answer criticism from the right that the president may be giving away too much in the SALT negotiations.

As for the Middle East, Carter issued a strong condemnation of the terrorist attack in Israel, but in contrast had no personal statement to make on the massive Israeli invasion of Lebanon where hundreds have been killed and some 200,000 Palestinians and Lebanese made homeless.

Early in the week, aides also indicated that Carter would not hold a news conference this week — although he is due for one — apparently so that he would not be hit with a barrage of questions on the Middle East situation. Carter was certain to be asked about the use of American supplied arms in the invasion of another country.

Carter's chief domestic political adviser, Hamilton Jordan, has sat in on all the foreign policy deliberations. His presence is the principal clue that the president is keenly aware of the political impact of all his decisions on the international front.

Carter's own political future as president is tied up in all the moves he makes now. The State Department held off on any statement regarding the raids into Lebanon until after the Panama Canal vote out of fear of alienating some of the supporters of Israel in the Senate.

Carter's moves in the international field also affect the value of the dollar and the global image of the United States. Like other presidents, he finds that most of his working hours are devoted to world affairs where he alone makes many of the final decisions.

So, if there is a linkage in Carter's foreign policy, domestic politics is not the least of his concerns. In fact, lately it appears to be one of the most important of his preoccupations as he strives for the answers that will win him the support of the people.

ORIGINS OF CITY

The city of Fort Myers, Fla., is located on the banks of the Caloosahatchee River, 15 miles upstream from the Gulf of Mexico. The city takes its name from a fort which was built inn 1839 and was named for Col. Abraham C. Myers, quartermaster for the military district of Florida.

GROWING OLDER

Writer Urges Action On New Resolutions

By LOU COTTIN

Quite a performance! Fourteen resolutions related to the needs of older women were proved at the National Women's Conference that met last November in Houston.

But hold the "Bravos." Skip the "Right on, sister." Cheer won't change a thing. Most women will be long gone before the conference's proposals become reality. Unless:

—Your area's office of the aging distributes copies of the resolutions;

—Members of every senior citizens club study and discuss the resolutions;

—Committees of older women confront local political leaders and demand action, and —Students in every college gerontological course explore the social content of the resolutions.

Resolutions are merely statements on a piece of paper. But when taken directly to the people involved, they become demands. Women young and old can turn these words into powerful tools for action.

Unfortunately, older women were not represented in sufficient number in Houston. Nonetheless, the conference came through with a satisfory set of resolutions that women of all ages can endorse.

What the conference missed was the fact that older women could have played a more important role in promoting the objectives of the conference. After all, they were the ones who fought for and won the right to vote back in 1920.

The National Women's Conference is now disbanded. But in every state of the union, the Houston parley's work on behalf of all American women — young and old, rich and poor, black and white — will continue. New public and private programs will give substance to the pro-woman resolutions. The fight for the Equal Rights Amendment will continue.

Older women must be permitted to play leading roles in these activities in their own communities.

The executives of any office of the aging can develop plans to spread news of the Houston conference resolutions among older women. They can provide places for study and implementation of the older women's resolutions.

But without direct pressure from senior women themselves, officialdom will act timorously. These officials are involved with many projects. They are not actively looking for more programs. They may have the best intentions in the world. But public officials move farthest when pushed hardest.

Senior women — and their menfolk — must do the pushing. The first step is for each to ask local officers of the aging for copies of the Houston resolutions on older women.

Second, leaders of senior organizations should demand copies. The resolutions should then become the topic for group meetings.

Older women should lead such meetings and take charge of any plans of action that result from the discussions. Here older men can play an effective role only if they accept the leadership of older women.

First steps first. By mail or by phone, older women should get copies of the resolutions from local offices serving seniors. We men will do what we're told in order to help.

Retirement Questions Answered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some answers to questions about the legislation approved by Congress and sent to the White House Thursday, extending the mandatory age for millions of American to retire:

Q: What would the legislation do?

A: Starting next year, if you are an employee in a private business that has at least 20 persons on the payroll, your boss cannot make you retire before your 70th birthday. Federal workers cannot be forced to retire at any age after Sept. 30 of this year.

Q. Can your boss, either alone or through a new union contract, make you work until age 70 before collecting retirement benefits?

A. No. Pension laws require 100 percent vesting of pensions not later than 65 unless the employee has less than 10 years of service at that time. The choice is yours as to whether you retire at age 65 or at age 70.

Q: If a private sector employee turns 65 on Dec. 31 of this year, does he have to retire?

A: Yes. A person turning 65 this year gets little help from the bill, but the overall Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 protects against discrimination in hiring as well. A person who is forceably retired in these months before the increase to age 70 takes effect could reapply for his or her old job immediately after Jan. 1. Presumably you are qualified to fill your old job, or a comparable one, if it's vacant.

Q: Will a person's Social Security payments be affected if he or she remains on the job past 65?

A: Yes, but not as a result of this bill. Any earnings over $4,000 in 1978 will reduce one's Social Security benefits 50 cents for each dollar over that ceiling until age 72. After that you can make all you want.

Q: Do workers who stay on the job past 65 get any advantages when they eventually collect Social Security

A: By allowing people to remain on the job past age 65 if they so choose, the bill will permit those persons to earn a bonus once they do start receiving Social Security. The bonus will be 1 per cent for each year they work beyond age 65.

For example, if you worked until age 67, your checks would be 2 percent higher than it would have been at age 65, with the same earnings history. Beginning in 1981, the bonus is increased from 1 percent to 3 percent for each year of work under the new Social Security bill.

Q: Will the bill change 65 as the age when workers can retire and receive full Social Security payments.

A: No, age 65 is the age for full payments under Social Security, and nothing in the bill changes that.

Q: Can an employer fire a person between 65 and 70 for any reason?

A: Certainly. The law explictly permits a person's discharge from the job for cause, such as incompetency. The whole point of the bill is to require that employment decisions be made on the basis of merit, not arbitrary age.

Q: What would the effect of the bill be on pension contracts? Could a person continue working beyond age 65 and still draw pension benefits?

A: The wording of most plans requires that a worker retire before being eligible for a pension. Nothing in the bill changes that. If there are plans that require payment of a pension at a specified age, rather than on retirement, those plans could be changed without violating the law.

In order to encourage the hiring of older workers, present law does not force an employer to pay a full pension at age 65 or 70 to a person hired, for example, at age 62. Nothing in the bill changes that.

Q: Is military retirement affected?

A: No. It's a separate system.

Q: Will the bill affect Medicare payments to older persons who remain on the job?

A: No. Once a person turns 65, he or she is eligible for Medicare.

Q: Will it affect a young person's ability to get a good job if older Americans stay on?

A: The Labor Department estimates that only about 200,000 older people might remain in the private work force as a result of these changes. And only about 1,500 of the more than 2 million federal workers affected by this bill remain on the job until the current maximum retirement age of 70.

Nine out of ten new Social Security beneficiaries who had been employed in private business now receive their first check before age 65.

Q: The bill permits business to keep on retiring certain high-level executives with retirement incomes of $27,000 at age 65. Many low-level supervisors and blue collar workers might fit that discription. What happens to them?

A: An employe cannot be retired at age 65 solely because he or she fits the retirement income test. He or she also must be in a "high policymaking position" in the top executive level.

Q: What would prevent an employer from quickly promoting a worker into a high policymaking executive post and then retiring him or her at age 65?

A: An employe must have been in that top job for two years prior to retirement.

Q:Will state and local government employees be affected?

A: Yes. They are now covered by the same rules that govern private employees. They could keep on working until age 70.

Q: Would all federal employees be given the chance to work as long as they wish?

A: Unfortunately not. The bill did not change the retirement ages set by law for special groups of federal employees such as air traffic controllers, foreign service officers, and law enforcement and firefighting personnel.

Q: What would the effect be on collectively bargained retirement plans?

A: The age 70 provision would be delayed until Jan. 1, 1980, or until the termination of such an agreement, whichever comes first.

Q: Are there many employers who don't have any mandatory retirement ages at all and let their workers stay on past any set birthday?

A: Yes. Two-thirds of the U.S. workforce does not have any set mandatory retirement age.

Question: Once the law goes into effect, who can you write to if you suspect a violation.

A: The U.S. Labor Department.

Many American Firms Predict No Problems With Age Change

By MICHAEL W. MILLICAN
Associated Press Writer

Many major American companies are guardedly optimistic they can cope with legislation to raise the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70, noting that most employees want to stop work earlier anyway.

Many executives queried by The Associated Press said the bill sent to President Carter Thursday will cause some headaches with their union contracts, pension plans and corporate promotion policies. But most added that the difficulties will not be major.

"The trend seems to be in the other direction, with people wanting to retire early," said Harry Seivwright, vice president for administration at National Life Insurance Co. of Montpelier, Vt.

National Life, like many other companies, have required employees to stop work at their 65th birthday. With a higher forced-retirement age, Seivwright said he expects some National Life employees "will want to work beyond 65 and if they are good performers we'll be glad to have them stay."

But other companies are not happy about the bill, which Carter is expected to sign.

Sears, Roebuck Co., the nation's largest retailer and employer of more than 400,000, said it suspended its age-65 retirement requirement last fall in anticipation of the bill and surveyed workers scheduled to end their careers this past Jan. 31. Sears spokesman Ernie Arms said 45 percent indicated they wanted to stay on the job.

That would "have a severe impact on job openings and promotional opportunities, especially on women and minorities," Arms said. He added that if that trend persisted for five years, openings for new employees would be cut by about 8,000 and promotions and transfers for existing workers would drop by more than 33,000.

In Boise, Idaho, the Morrison-Knudsen Construction Co. expects there could be some problem with manual laborers because of the law, said spokesman Bob Smith.

"The only problem the company foresees is at construction sites, where the job is physically demanding," Smith said.

Chrysler Corp., which gives all white- and blue-collar workers the option to take early retirement at 55, stay until 65 or work until age 68, doubts the change will have much impact on its operations.

"If you're an autoworker, the idea is to get out as quickly as possible," said spokesman John Montgomery. "The earlier they get out, the happier they seem to be."

Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. in Bloomfield, Conn., dropped its mandatory retirement rule Aug. 1. Donald Illig, director of compensation and benefits, estimated 20 percent of those who reach age 65 this year will elect to continue working.

Agency Plans To Sell Confiscated Jewels

By STEPHANIE MANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heartened by the government's first art auction, the General Services Administration now is planning a jewelry auction next month.

The agency plans to sell on April 7 104 gems or groups of jewels confiscated by the U.S. Customs Service over the last 15 years, according to John Suter, a regional director of GSA's personal property division.

Suter said the jewelry includes some diamonds and emeralds worth tens of thousands of dollars, several silver pieces and an assortment of gold rings — some with diamonds or diamond chips.

GSA hopes the government will make more than $100,000 from the jewelry sale.

All but one piece of art that was on the block was sold at Wednesday's art auction. Suter said a Kerman rug — at $12,000, the highest appraised item — drew a bid of $4,500, which GSA had to reject.

Suter explained that each item had an appraised value and a lower "upset price." If bids did not at least meet the upset prices, GSA could not accept the offers.

While the agency hoped the art auction would bring in at least $50,000, Suter said most of the bids were lower than the appraised values and the total sale came to "a little over $22,000." He said exact figures were still being tabulated.

GSA was "quite pleased" with the sale and the turnout, which filled the hall where it was held to beyond its capacity of 250 people, Suter said. The agency hopes that next month's jewelry auction draws as much interest as the art sale did; more than 500 people viewed the art objects during the 2½ days before the bidding.

The art and jewelry were confiscated by Customs officials when travelers tried to bring them into the country without paying duty fees, Suter said.

Most of the items were then transferred to the Smithsonian, the Kennedy Center or the State Department for display. He said the art and jewelry are being offered for public sale because those agencies no longer want them.

The proceeds from the auctions go to the Treasury Department's miscellaneous fund, Suter said.

WATER CUT OFF

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Water supplies to most buildings in the Lisbon area were cut off Thursday when pipes burst in a central supply system. A spokesman for the waterworks said service should be restored some time today.

President Expected To Sign New Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is expected to sign a bill which will allow persons in private business to keep working until age 70, and prohibit the federal government from forcing civilian employees to retire before any age.

The measure was approved 62-10 Thursday in the Senate and went to the White House for the president's signature.

Its chief sponsor, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who is 77, said he believes Carter will sign the bill next month. "This marks the first step in guaranteeing the right to grow old in dignity," Pepper said.

TV Musical 'Cindy' Disappoints Critic

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Broadway folks once made "The Wizard of Oz" into a sprightly, all-black musical, "The Wiz." Tonight, ABC airs a similar effort involving the "Cinderella" fairy tale.

With such talent, "Cindy" should be a great show, no?

No. The sad news is that most of the two-hour special moves at a pace that could prove a sure cure for insomnia. It's a shame, considering all the work the fine cast put into this musical comedy.

Young Charlaine Woodard has the title role, playing a poor Southern girl who comes to Harlem to live with her father, stepmother and two stepsisters during World War Two.

Pop, played by Scoey Mitchell, claims to be earning big bucks as a doorman at the Plaza Hotel (though as you learn, he actually works as a men's room attendant there).

He's the stock cliche of the henpecked black husband, forever bowing — with a few exceptions — to the will of his domineering second wife (Mae Mercer), Cindy's wicked stepmother.

Nell-Ruth Carter and Alaina Reed are cast as Cindy's stepsisters, and spend considerable time tormenting the waif.

Also in the cast are Cleavant Derricks as Michael, a draft-dodging chauffer for Harlem's "biggest black market operator," and Clifton Davis as Marine Capt. Joe Prince.

Yep, the captain is the Prince Charming, but proves a parody of same. He's an egotistical, glib, rich and handsome war hero who falls in love with Cindy at the big dance, only to lose her at the show's finale.

The basic Cinderella plot is followed, and there's no reason why this special couldn't have been as lively as "The Wiz."

Alas, the direction by Billy Graham is oddly listless for the most part, the five original songs by Stan Daniels are undistinguished and most of the scenes seem to drag on forever.

Thankfully, there are signs of life late in the program, as when Capt. Prince hires a private eye to track down Cindy and is told the fee will be "six dollars an hour and carfare."

"You find me this girl and I'll pay you $1,000," he says.

"And carfare?" the gumshoe inquires.

Another good moment: A funny, surreal spoof of the routine at an Army enlistment center when Michael decides to stop dodging the draft and signs up to serve his country.

The scene is tight, crisp and effective. And it makes one wonder why in the world the program's four authors couldn't have made all of "Cindy" work this way.

The earth is closer to the sun during the northern hemisphere's winter than during its summer but the earth's angle accounts for the winter's cold and summer's warm.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: "How many times was Sen. Barry Goldwater nominated for President? I say once; my dad, a lawyer, says twice. Who is right?" — Terry W., Baltimore, Ohio.

A: Though your dad is technically correct, so are you! Let's unravel this puzzle. Goldwater was nominated for the presidency of the U.S. at the 1964 GOP convention. After his crushing defeat by the incumbent Lyndon B. Johnson, he was asked by a stranger if he was Barry Goldwater. "No," he snarled. "I didn't even vote for him."

The first time he was nominated, in February 1962, was for fun. Goldwater was nominated for the "presidency" by a "national convention' the Washington, D.C., Alfalfa Club — a social group which includes many of the capital's most prominent citizens. His "acceptance speech" at the time was pure and unadulterated Goldwater. Here's a transcript:

'Now gentlemen, if my voice trembles a little at this historic moment, I'm sure you will understand. Emotion chokes me when I think that you have chosen a barefoot boy from the Arizona 'Valley of Fear' to lead this underprivileged, underclothed and over-Kennedyed nation...which reminds me, I have a grandson who's too young to vote but too old to be Attorney General. This may be an asset...

"I will not deny that I've thought about the presidency. Somebody ought to think about it...

"I would not be truthful if I said that I was fully qualified for the office. I do not play the piano, I seldom play golf, and I never play touch football...

"Now, I must take note of the fact that my opponents call me a conservative. If I understand the word correctly, it means to 'conserve.' Well, then, I'm just trying to live up to my name and conserve two things that most need conserving in this country — gold and water...

"I don't apologize for being a conservative. I can remember when 'conservative' and 'mother' were clean words...

"Now, I think you're entitled to know something about the caliber of men I will have in my cabinet. In presenting the list, I'd like it understood that it is confidential. Also, all the men on this list have already leaked the information to the press and I have promised to respect the priority of their leaks.

"For Secretary of the Treasury. I think I can do no better than to keep Mr. Dillon ... Mr. Dillon is flexible. In fact, you might call him an extreme middle-of-the-roader. My hat is off to any man who can argue under Eisenhower that we must beware of the inflationary tug of the mounting national debt. Then make a rebuttal under Kennedy by saying that a mere $7 billion added to the debt won't hurt us a bit. I believe that Secretary Dillon belongs in government — I don't think private industry can afford him...

"As for the State Department, I've been going over their records and I've come to the conclusion we ought to abolish the whole thing...I don't want to seem critical, but our first ambassador in space was a chimp. And so far he's the only one in the State Department who hasn't made a mistake...

"Now I suppose no acceptance speech would be complete without a reference to the candidate's background. Very simply, I think I'm in the American tradition. I was born in a log cabin (which I had moved to Phoenix) and, except for some air conditioning, a swimming pool, a bowling alley, a bar, a shooting range and a golf course, it remains the simple log cabin it always was.

"I have nothing against millionaire Presidents. I'd just like to see the day return when people other than Presidents can be millionaires, too."

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That,' care of this newspaper. P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill., 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Evangelist Image Troubles Actor Marjoe Gortner

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actor Marjoe Gortner, ex-kid faith healer, has lived with the nagging fear that his acting career is hampered by his reputation as a Bible-pounding evangelist billed as "The Miracle Child" during his pre-adolescence.

In tent meetings and churches across the country young Marjoe — beginning at age 4 — exhorted throngs of believers to seek God by stepping forward and receiving his blessings.

He was sort of a pint-sized Billy Graham and Oral Roberts all rolled up in one angelic little package of religious fervor.

Despite the fact that Marjoe gave it all up in disgust at 14 and later wrote a book about evangelical ripoffs, Gortner has found his Bible-thumping image no easy thing to live down.

Not that strangers rush up to Marjoe seeking benedictions or even a cure for gallstones. But the first flash that comes to mind when his name is mentioned is the image of a golden-haired cherub quoting scripture and passing the collection plate.

Marjoe mentioned to Charlton Heston one day not long ago that people insisted on reminding him of his youth. The first thing strangers ask about are his days as a kid preacher.

"I'll never forget what Chuck told me," Marjoe said. "He said almost everyone he meets for the first time wants to hear about the chariot race in 'Ben Hur.'

"Chuck said we were both fortunate to have one factor in our lives that was unforgettable to the public in general and that it was an invaluable asset to our careers. It provides immediate identification.

"So I've learned to live with my background and it really doesn't bother me all that much."

Gortner now is in his early 30s and, no small thanks to his days as an evangelist, is an accomplished actor with several fine movie and television performances behind him, including "Earthquake," "Viva Knievel" and "Sidewinder One."

Today Marjoe is branching out with his own production company and his own film which is light years beyond several exploitation flicks which he has done.

He has bought film rights to "When Are You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?" a New York play he thought would make an outstanding movie.

His real purpose is to get away from biker pictures. Marjoe sees no reason he shouldn't play something a little more dramatically demanding.

"I tried for a year and a half to get screen rights for 'Red Ryder,'" Marjoe said. "At first the agent for the property told me it had been sold — that Robert Aldrich and then John Huston had film rights to it.

"Eventually I learned the property was owned by William Jasper Fisher, a very wealthy man on the board of Monsanto and a well-known philanthropist who has given a fortune to the New York Metropolitan Opera.

"I flew to Chicago to talk to Mr. Fisher who told me he had only three months left on his option which he signed over to me for nothing. Then I had to raise $50,000 to buy the screen rights, which I did.

"After that I took the play to Mark Medoff, the original author, who wrote the screenplay in four days.

"I needed $1.3 million to make the movie,. Instead of going to a bank or a studio I contacted Mel Simon, the Indianapolis shopping center tycoon, and talked to jim about budgets. He's got about $30 million invested in movies.

"We went over my plans and eventually he gave the OK for $1.6 million for the picture which we will put into production next month."

Marjoe has devoted 14 weeks to preproduction, meticulously selecting lthe very best technicians he could find in Hollywood. He hired Richard Katselas to direct because "Dick is really hungry for a big hit and he's a great director."

Marjoe will play the lead role, a suicidal, sadistic killer. He's hired a top cast including Candy Clark, Lee Grant, Pat Hingle and Hal Linden, TV's "Barney Miller" who is making his major film debut.

Gortner is as smart as he is talented and he will make a distrubtion deal only after he has completed the film on locations in Texas and New Mexico.

"This picture is an opportunity for me to do some real acting," Marjoe said.

"The movies I've made so far were good old pictures for good old boys, mostly in the south who related to films on different levels than some other people who may consider themselves more sophisticated.

"Those movies appeal to a lot of people who work in mundane and boring jobs. I know what market they were made for and they were successful. I'll never hang my head for doing them.

"But now I want to move on to different pictures and I think it's a courageous step for me. I'm putting my neck on the line, not just as an actor, but as a producer. I'm responsible for the whole project.

RRC Sets Hearing On Natural Gas

AUSTIN (AP) — The railroad commission scheduled a May 12 hearing on a staff report that natural gas is contaminating fresh water in a two-mile wide strip between Springtown, Parker County, and Decatur, Wise County.

The commission said its staff began an investigation after 12 "separate parties" had reported gas in fresh water sands.

The matter to be considered, the commission said, "is gas contamination of the Lower Trinity Aquifer, Springtown area, southwest Wise County, and petroleum production activity restricted to that area of the Boonsville and Cal-Tex Fields area, Wise County."

The commission's notice of hearing said, in part:

"The investigation revealed that some old wells in the field areas cited are in need of remedial work to prevent leakage of gas into fresh water sands, and commission personnel have proposed the permanent isolation of the fresh water sands in those wells where contamination possibly exists."

The Atacama Desert in North Chile is approximately 400 miles long and has an elevation of 7,000 to 13,500 feet.

CIA Exploits Proposed As Basis For TV Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — TV viewers next year may be tuning in on a weekly series about the true exploits of the CIA's cloak-and-dagger men in action — just as they did with an FBI series that ran successfuly for five years.

Texas millionaire Gordon McLendon and ex-CIA agent David Philipps approached the CIA on the idea and, while officially non-committal, the agency appeared to like it.

"They approached us with the idea and wanted to come in and talk about it," a CIA spokesman said. "We said fine. But we are still totally noncommittal. We're listening. They came in with a very positive approach."

McLendon. who once served as a naval intelligence officer, told UPI "we're at the very early stages on this and just talked to them with no commitment or endorsement on their part."

McLendon said he got the idea of a fictionalized television portrayal of actual CIA operations from "The FBI," a series that ran through five seasons until 1974.

"We're targeting for next year's fall season," he said. No arrangements have been made with any studio, he said, and, "If this series goes at all, much of it will be done on location. We are not that far ahead yet for casting or anything else."

McLendon said he and Philipps would suggest story ideas to the CIA, which would screen the scripts to prevent security breeches.

The CIA spokesman noted that many difficulties would have to be overcome.

"They want to do something like the FBI story," he said. "But it's not that easy. We are not in the cops and robbers business. We don't know if we can cooperate with them at all. Another thing we are very concerned about is that we don't want people with whom we work, particularly foreign services and assets, to think that they are going to appear in a TV series. But we're listening."

McLendon is prepared to do his own financing, and he could already have a leading man in Philipps, a fellow Texan, who in addition to his CIA experience at one time was an actor, a reporter and a newspaper editor.

A native of Fort Worth, Phillips is a ruggedly handsome man of 55 who spent 24 years with the CIA before taking early retirement. He formed the unofficial Association of Former Intelligence Officers, which now numbers well over 2,000 veterans of the CIA, FBI, Defense Intelligence and other security branches.

Cases Of Fake Masterpieces Shake Up World's Art Dealers

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — "Fake" is the single word the art world dreads most, and suddenly it is thundering through hushed art galleries around the world.

One dealer took a rare step usually associated with faulty cars: he recalled works of art he had sold, and in some cases refunded the purchase price.

A court case in France — currently on appeal to a higher court — brought the first group of alleged forgeries into the open.

This case involved a drawing by Fragonard. Before long about 30 drawings by 18th century French artists were being challenged. Some experts charged they were the work of an art expert now living in Paris.

Within days came a challenge to 20 or 30 other drawings, these attributed to Italian artists of the 15th to 18th centuries. There are charges, art sources said, that they were drawn by a former student of London's Royal Academy who now lives in Europe.

But in terms of prestige and reputation, the stakes are incalculable.

Some of the drawings were sold by the world's top art auction houses, Sotheby Parke Bernet and Christie's. Major museums and their experts were among the customers, and top-flight art dealers among the sellers.

The supreme irony is that no one is completely certain that the suspect drawings really are fakes.

"One of the major problems to contend with in the matter of fake Old Master drawings," said the London Times, "is the difficulty of finding 100 percent proof that a drawing is a fake."

In the case of paintings, canvas and pigments can be analyzed and brush strokes X-rayed. But with drawings, tests of paper and inks are inconclusive and X-rays reveal nothing.

Style becomes all-important. And identifying the style of one artist's hand as opposed to another's is a matter of human judgment. Even the greatest experts often keep their options open.

Typical is John Gere, keeper of prints and drawings in the British Museum. One of the questioned drawings is a Van Dyck which the museum bought.

"We could find nothing wrong," Gore said. "We still believe it to be genuine, though we keep an open mind."

Despite the "recall" issued by Colnaghi's, the London art dealer, some owners were so convinced of their drawings' authenticity they refused to return them.

But other museums, art sources said, have taken the initiative in returning doubtful drawings to the dealers who supplied them.

Few gallery officials or dealers will discuss these possible forgery cases openly. Libel possibilities are too great, too many reputations are at stake — and all the experts are in the same uncertain boat.

But anxious eyes are now studying Old Master drawings in the collections of distinguished museums with a new and questioning approach.

Middle-Class Turns To Mobile Homes

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

Inflation is pushing working-class families out of the mobile home market, but sales to Americans in middle-income brackets are increasing because conventional homes are beyond their budgets, say industry spokesmen.

Mobile home manufacturers expect to boost sales again this year when more than 300,000 units will become the residences for many Americans.

In fact, three out of four families in search of a new home priced under $30,000 are turning to mobile homes, claim representatives of the Manufactured Housing Institute.

The source, manufacturers of mobile homes, in 1977 increased its sales approximately 10 percent over 1976. Significantly, they expect sales of about the same amount in 1978.

The mobile home industry in the last few years has lost what it considered the traditional market, working-class families, because of inflation. But this helps the mobile home field because of the increased sales to the middle-income group and there are fewer restrictions on mobile home owners these days.

Those occupying mobile homes can obtain the same broad protection provided by homeowners' insurance policies, says the Insurance Information Institute.

Special coverage can be provided if the home is at least 10 feet wide and 40 feet long — dimensions easily surpassed by most popular units. In fact, nearly one-third of all mobile homes shipped last year were double-wides — two units combined to make a home 24 feet to 28 feet wide. These are usually mobile only once, while being trucked to their permanent location.

The Institute recommends that shoppers for new mobile homes look for the manufacturer's seal, which certifies that the unit meets the construction and safety standards of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A new unit or one moved to another location should undergo a checkup of its fuel lines to the furnace, water heater and appliances by a qualified service man before utilities are connected.

The consumer's manual that comes with each home must be studied carefully. Literature on mobile home safety is also available from insurance companies and their agents or brokers, the Institute notes.

These manuals emphasize three major hazards: fire, a danger for all homes; high winds and floods.

All new mobile homes are equipped with smoke detectors on the walls or ceiling near bedroom areas. Owners of older homes are urged to install these detectors, especially in the sleeping areas.

In addition, families should make fire escape plans and hold drills on what to do in an emergency. The exit window required in every bedroom should be broken if there is no time to open it in an emergency.

Proper blocking and tie-downs are essential for mobile homes as protection against both winds and floods.

Quartet Eyes NCAA Crown

ST. LOUIS (AP) — College basketball's elite, the survivors from an original field numbering more than 12 score, converged today on the banks of the Mississippi River to await a pair of Saturday matchups.

The lineup for semifinals of the NCAA's 40th postseason tournament is made up of Kentucky and Notre Dame, each relying on size and muscle, against Arkansas and Duke, underdogs with racehorse speed.

Kentucky, the nation's top-ranked quintet, faces Arkansas, No. 5, in the second game of the afternoon doubleheader at the 19,000-seat Checkerdome.

Ahead of the clash is a confrontation between Notre Dame, No. 6, and Duke, No. 7, both young teams on the rise which also feature contrasting styles.

As each team settled into its tournament quarters, the lone ripple was that created by the status of Arkansas senior Marvin Delph, whose eligibility was revoked because of money raised to send his parents to the West regional tourney last week. An NCAA subcommittee on eligibility reinstated the 6-foot-4 Razorbacks star 24 hours later, however.

While Delph pondered his exoneration, Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton and his Kentucky counterpart, Joe B. Hall, mulled over the quality of their teams' recent performances.

"We played awfully well in the (Nevada) Las Vegas game, the next to the last in our regular season," said Hall, "but we've been pretty much on the decline. I'm looking forward to coming back up now."

"I'm like Joe," said Sutton. "I don't think our ballclub has played as well right now as we played earlier in the year. I think that's due to the fact tht Steve Schall, our center, was injured. Although he didn't miss any ball games, he hurt his knee and he really never been able to come back and play at the same level that he did earlier in the year."

If Arkansas is to capitalize on its advantage in speed, the 6-11 Schall and 6-7 Jim Counce must neutralize the inside strengths of Kentucky's Rick Robey and Mike Robey, 6-10 frontliners.

Sophomore guard Kyle Macy, a 90.1 percent free throw shooter, is Kentucky's outside threat. But for pure shooting, a Razorbacks threesome of Delph, Ron Brewer and Sidney Moncrief is unexcelled.

Duke's coach Bill Foster saluted the Irish as a team also boasting finesse in addition to power and added, "They have very good, quick instincts. They're talented. They use their personnel very well."

To reach the shootout scene for the final four, each team mastered three opponents in regional tests.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER—Marvin Delph, Arkansas' alltime scoring leader, carries his bags through the terminal at St. Louis after the Arkansas team was delayed more than an hour on its flight from Fayetteville. Delph was ineligible for 24 hours this week because fans of his home town of Conway, Ark., had collected money to send his parents to the regional tournament at Albuquerque. (AP Laserphoto)

Bits And Pieces

WHILE LISTENING TO last week's Arkansas-UCLA game, one got the distinct feeling that the Razorbacks were going to blow the game in the second half after holding big leads throughout most of the first half. The game had so many parallels to last season's Arkansas-Wake Forest contest in the first round of the NCAA tournament. In that game, the Hogs held a 43-30 halftime lead, only to see the Deacons put on a press in the second half, cause numerous Arkansas turnovers and take an 86-80 victory. Against UCLA, the Razorbacks also had a 13-point advantage at intermission, and the score was almost identical—42-29. And the Bruins caught up in the second half and went ahead by 2 points at 60-58. This time, however, Arkansas maintained (regained?) its poise and won...

Given Cal-State Fullerton's track record for falling behind by large margins and then rallying in the second half for upset triumphs (as in the New Mexico and San Francisco games), one unquestionably got the feeling that the Titans were going to do it again against Arkansas last Saturday. But it didn't happen that way, as the Razorbacks pulled out the victory...

WHEN FORMER PLAINVIEW hurdles star Randy Lightfoot graduated from high school, four of his times in the 120-yard high hurdles were among the 10 best in national schoolboy history. His best clocking was 13.4, which tied for the national record at the time. Now, however, the record is 12.9 by Renaldo Nehemiah, and 13.4 is not even rated in the top 10 all-time clockings. That gives just one glimpse of how sports performances are improving so rapidly...

Lightfoot says that the average sports observer doesn't usually understand and appreciate all the time and effort that goes into the making of an athletic champion. "People ask me from time to time something like 'How come you never made it to the Olympics?' Well, to do that, getting to the Olympics has to be your No. 1 objective in life. You have to have absolute, total dedication. But it just wasn't that important to me. People often don't understand how much work has to go into it. All they see is the end result. They don't see the bleeding knees and the depleted bank accounts."...

An athletic program such as Rice's, which has limited finances, must spread its talent around as best it can. Currently, seven Rice football players are running track. Most of them are competing in the sprints...

Three of those latter five came from Cincinnati, where Mason coached previously...

Wayland Falls In Semifinals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The era of domination of smaller schools in women's college basketball came to a sudden halt Thursday night as host UCLA and Maryland won their way into Saturday night's title game of the seventh AIAW tournament.

Twelve national championship banners of UCLA men's teams hang from the rafters of Pauley Pavilion where the Bruin women's team won their 32nd consecutive home floor victory. UCLA, 26-3, defeating Montclair State of New Jersey 85-77.

Maryland, 27-3, edged Wayland Baptist College 90-85 in the other semifinal of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tourney.

Early years of the tournament were ruled by tiny Immaculata College of Pennsylvania, champions in 1972 through 1974. Delta State of Mississippi took over from 1975 through 1976.

Each of the four teams in the Thursday night games featured brilliant individuals. Montclair State, 24-7, had a 40-point performance by 5-10 senior Carol Blazejowski. Wayland Baptist, 33-4, had 33 points from 6-3 sophomore Jill Rankin.

But UCLA and Maryland had much better balance, typified by Ann Meyers of UCLA. She had 19 points, tied with teammate Denise Curry for the game high of 14 rebounds and added eight assists. Her outlet passes led to several fast break baskets in the first half as UCLA opened an 18-point lead. Miss Curry and center Heidi Nestor each had 22 points.

Maryland had two standouts, 6-3 freshman center Kris Kirchner with 30 points and 5-6 senior Tara Heiss scoring 21 points and adding nine assists for the Terrapins. Maryland took the lead for good at 74-72 on a layup by Kirchner with 6:11 remaining.

"It's a real thrill to be here and to beat the finest team (WBC) we faced all year," said Maryland coach Chris Weller.

That evaluation from the Maryland coach may not set well with UCLA, which also faced Maryland three months ago in game at Maryland won by the Terrapins 92-88.

"Against Maryland we must play very strong inside, because they're bigger than we are," Miss Moore said. "I think our main advantage is that we'll be playing at Pauley Pavilion."

"It was a very big blow to lose Kathy Harston (on fouls), and the game came down to whose big people were stronger," Weese said.

Miss Harston had only six points but her ballhandling was missed in the closing minutes. With 1:49 left to play, Maryland forward Debbie Jones stole the ball and scored, and also was fouled and made a free throw for a three-point play that improved a one-point Terrapin lead to four.

Miss Jones also made two free throws with 49 seconds remaining to put Maryland's lead back to four points again.

Razorbacks' Delph Mum On Suspension

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Marvin Delph and his Arkansas teammates hit town an hour late Thursday, under strict orders not to discuss his 24-hour suspension from the Razorback basketball team.

"I'm not supposed to talk about that," said the 6-foor-4 Delph, Arkansas' career scoring leader. "It's over and done with anyway."

Arkansas officials disclosed Wednesday that Delph had been suspended because some people in Conway, Ark., his home town, had paid for his parents to fly to the West Regionals last week in Albuquerque, N.M.

NCAA rules forbid such gestures. But the NCAA eligibility committee advised that no one was aware they were breaking any rules, and cleared Delph to play Saturday when the Razorbacks face top-ranked Kentucky in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Delph did pause a moment to discuss the Kentucky match and what this season has already meant for the fifth-ranked Razorbacks.

Basketball, for the past 30 or so years, has been an almost forgotten sport in football-happy Arkansas. In Kentucky, basketball is undisputed king.

"We've been talking about that, the others guys and me," Delph said. "But the way we look at it, if we can beat UCLA with all their tradition, why should we get nervous about playing Kentucky, or anybody?"

Finley Withdraws Offer To Sell A's

DENVER (AP) — Charles O. Finley has withdrawn his offer to sell the Oakland A's major league baseball team to Denver oilman Marvin Davis, Davis' lawyer announced today.

Lawyer Ben Stapleton handed out a terse statement from Davis, who is vacationing in California, which indicated the negotiations to move the A's from Oakland to Denver are dead.

The statement said:

"Charles Finley has withdrawn his offer to sell his Oakland franchise to Denver.

"It is a sad day for baseball, a sad day for Denver, and a sad day for me. I was determined to bring major league baseball to Denver this year. If Mr. Finley would reconsider his decision, even at this extremely late date, we still have the capabilities to complete the transfer."

Finley wasn't immediately available for comment.

But the deal apparently broke down Thursday over Finley's reluctance to pay more than $1 million to break the A's lease with the Oakland Coliseum directors.

The coliseum management had asked for $3.25 million to release the team from the lease which had 10 years left on it. The other major league owners had agreed to pay $1 million if Finley would pay $2 million.

Finley, however, had argued that the co-owners of the San Francisco Giants should pay $1 million, because their team would benefit from the move, or that the other major league owners should come up with more than $1 million.

The lease debate came to a crisis at noon Thursday, the deadline American League president Lee MacPhail had given Finley to pay $2 million of the $3.25 demanded by the coliseum.

In Chicago Thursday night Finley said he wasn't going to pay that disputed $1 million dollars and since he hadn't heard from MacPhail he faced the possibility of playing ball in Oakland.

Davis, who had left Thursday for his Palm Springs, Calif., vacation home saying he was 90 percent certain the deal would go through, reacted by saying he'd had a bellyful of the three-month-old, on-again, off-again deal.

In a telephone interview Thursday night, Davis said, "We'll know by morning which way it will bounce. If they get together, fine, if they don't, fine. We've had a bellyful."

Meanwhile, MacPhail cancelled his appointment in Denver with the American Association Denver Bears to discuss the problem of territorial indemnification.

MHS Leaper Tries Hobbs Competition

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As Monterey's track coaches were saying, it's not so hard to coach prize high-jumper Chuck Perry — just leave him in a gym with a basketball.

The Plainsmen journey across the state line for the Hobbs Relays today along with Coronado and Dunbar. Field events begin this morning at 9:15 while running finals start at 2 p.m.

Perry ranks as the only Hub City thinclad among the state's top 10 in any event at the present time. That should at least insure him one of the front seats on the team bus. But coach Bob Gay was thinking more in terms of bringing his limited troops in a van. By this morning, the travelling squad may all fit in a Volkswagen.

As many as 15 Plainsmen may miss this trip and Gay doesn't sound very optimistic about his team's chances.

"We probably won't do much. Spring break's the main problem. So many of them are busy doing something else and just aren't here. The main point-getters who probably won't make it are (Greg) Iseral in the quarter and the relays, (Dudley) McMinn in the high jump, (Rodney) Dunn in the hurdles and (Eloy) Guyton in the half-mile," the Plainsmen coach said.

Perry plans to make the trip, but he's been away from the gym lately. The junior starting post on Monterey's basketball team played in a bidistrict defeat to Amarillo High on a Tuesday night, proceeded to the practice field the very next day and cleared 6-8 in workouts.

"That's the best I've ever done. I cleared 6-7 in my first meet (this year) at Odessa. But that 6-8 in workouts was really a fluke. My approach was right the very first day and that's uncommon," he said.

Perry feels basketball helps his legs to prepare for track but the 6-5 junior thinks much of high-jumping boils down to the mental aspects of competing.

"If you don't have the ability to jump, you shouldn't be out there. But once you get out there, it's all mental. Sometimes I get too cocky like last week. I felt I had the meet wrapped up when I heard what teams were competing. Then I went out and didn't work much all week and I went out there and did terrible," he said.

Perry finished second to Snyder's Randy Courtney in last Saturday's Canyon Reef Relays. Courtney's 6-6 outdistanced his 6-4 effort but Perry doubts those figures can rate today. He says three of today's opponents have cleared 6-4 and one has topped that mark.

"Chuck has a lot of potential," coach Gay said. "It's not that complicated to coach high jumpers any more because nearly all of them use the flop method."

"I probably don't see 10 during a whole year who don't us the flop. It sure changed the event. You just don't see any kids rolling any more," the MHS coach said.

As for Perry, he dreams of the day when he clears 7-0 and the junior thinks he's capable of reaching that mark.

Hobbs School Votes To Rehire Mentor

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS—By a 4-1 vote and upon the recommendation of athletic director Gene Wells, football coach Joe Cromartie has been rehired for the 1978-79 school year.

Cromartie has been head coach here for two years, compiling a 7-15 record.

Dissenting in the vote was Dr. Jack Kernan, who said he "is not happy with the (Hobbs) football program, and it should be changed. I personally believe Jim Cromartie is a fine person, but he isn't getting the job done in the football program."

Cromartie is the only one of the 376 teachers and personnel not approved by Kernan in the hiring session.

Softball King To Play Here

Tickets are now on sale for the April 9 appearance here of the famed King & His Court softball team.

Eddie (The King) Feigner and his three teammates will play a group of Lubbock softball players in a game that day (3:30 p.m.) at Mackenzie Park, under sponsorship of the City Parks & Recreation Department.

Feigner has been touring the country for 33 years with his softball ball aggregation, usually winning against full nineman teams. Feigner, the pitcher, usually stations his son, Eddie Jr., behind the plate, has Al Jackson at first base and Gary West at shortstop.

Tickets are available through the Parks & Recreation Department. Advance tickets are $2 for adults and $1.50 for students. At the gate, prices will be $2.50 for adults, $2 for students.

Persons interested in tickets can contact the Parks & Recreation Department, 1010 9th, or by calling 762-6411, extension 308.

Tech Nine Hosts SMU

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Considering SMU's recent lack of success in Southwest Conference baseball warfare, one might suspect that Texas Tech wouldn't take too seriously this weekend's series with the Mustangs. But no.

As today's 3 p.m. series opener nears, Tech coach Kal Segrist is quite aware that the three games are important to the Raiders' hopes in the conference race.

"We really need to at least win this series, if not sweep it," he said. "We need to have some good momentum going heading into the last part of the season. Those last four weekends of conference play are going to be tough."

Tech, 5-4 in league action, will host North Texas State next weekend and then resume SWC play April 7 against SWC tri-leader Arkansas in Fayetteville. On successive weekends will be three-game sets with Houston here, Texas A &M in College Station and Texas here.

Houston is currently tied with Arkansas and Baylor for the league lead, while A &M and Texas—usually top contenders—have been struggling lately. Still, Segrist expects them to be formidable opponents.

The Raiders are 15-12 for the season and have won 11 of their last 15 contests following a 4-8 beginning. Most recently, they swept doubleheaders from Wichita State Tuesday and Wednesday after dropping a twin bill to the Shockers Monday. Last weekend, Tech won two of three games from TCU in Fort Worth.

Tech's record is certainly less than brilliant, but it is much better than what was expected of it before the season, in view of the team's extreme youth.

"They just have kept fighting back," Segrist. "It's a pleasure to coach these kids."

SMU is 9-14 for the year and 1-5 in conference play in its second season under coach Steve Adair. Adair assumed control before the 1977 season of a program that was moribund, to state matters delicately.

Actually, the Ponies had posted a 2-36 season record the season before and had gone 0-23 in league play. They stretched their conference losing streak to 40 games before finally defeating Tech once last year and finishing 1-22 in SWC warfare. That translates into two victories in the last 52 conference games for SMU.

Graham Blossoms In Deep South

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Lou Graham, a softly drawling son of the South, often finds this portion of the pro golf tour schedule his most productive.

"Well," he said, "it's about this time each year we start getting to warm weather." He paused a moment, smiled, and added, "and we're getting into my part of the country."

The Tennessee native recalled a three-tournament stretch a few years ago when he finished one stroke out in tournaments at Jacksonville, Fla., Greensboro, N.C., and New Orleans.

This one could be even better. After a one-shot loss to Jack Nicklaus last week in Jacksonville, he followed with a 4-under-par 67 that lifted him into a tie with Howard Twitty and Bobby Walzel for the first-round lead Thursday in the $225,000 Heritage Classic.

"I hit the ball much better, played much better, than I did in any round last week. That's for sure. And," he said with a twinkle in his eye, "there weren't too many guys that beat me then."

There was one. And he isn't playing this time.

"Up until last week I really hadn't played very good," Graham said. "But that kind of finish does a lot for your confidence. It helped mentally."

There was one little lapse, however, which prevented him from taking sole control of the top spot. On the 16th hole, he and his caddy figured the yardage from the wrong marker and "I got too much club in my hand," Graham said. He flew a 7-iron shot some 15 yards behind the pin and 3-putted for a bogey.

CLIFF BAGGETT

Graham got the shot back on the next hole with a 6-iron to 12 feet and figured it was a pretty good rally from what could have been a disastrous start. He came within seconds of missing his tee time and incurring a 2-shot penalty.

The start of play was delayed by an hour because of fog. Graham was on the practice tee when other players suddenly started yelling at him, "You're on the tee."

"I didn't know they'd played through the starter's time and made up some time," Graham said. "I ran as hard as I could to the first tee, and when I got there it was my shot. That's the closest I've ever come to missing my tee time."

One stroke back of the leading threesome were Rod Curl and Phil Hancock, tied at 68, 3 strokes under par on the 6,655-yard Harbour Town Golf Links, a reclaimed swamp that is studded by ancient, moss-hung oak and cypress.

The group at 69 included Tom Weiskopf, Gibby Gilbert, Larry Nelson, Bruce Lietzke, Victor Regalado, Lyn Lott, who holed a 6-iron shot for eagle-2 on the final hole, and Hale Irwin, who rallied with birdies on the last three holes.

A starry group including PGA champ Lanny Wadkins, U.S. Open king Hubert Green, and Tom Watson, the current British Open and Masters titleholder, shot 70s in the almost-perfect weather—warm, sunny, with just a hint of breeze. Australian Graham Marsh, the 1977 Heritage champ, was at 72.

Walzel holed from a marsh for a birdie on the 18th for a share of the top spot, while the 6-foot-5 Twitty got his share of the lead with a birdie-birdie finish.

MHS, Baggett Continue Race

HEREFORD (Special)—Monterey High and Cliff Baggett will be out to maintain their leads in the District 4-AAAA golf races today when the third league meet will be staged.

After meets at Lubbock and Plainview, Monterey commands a 4-stroke lead over Hereford in the team race, and Baggett has a 2-stroke lead over Coronado's David Groom in the individual wars.

Going into today's meet, Monterey's total is 622, followed by Hereford at 626, Coronado 633, Plainview 659, Plainview B 659, Monterey B 675 Coronado B 685, Lubbock High 693, Hereford B 694 and Lubbock High B 841.

Hereford had the lead after one tournament but Monterey leaped to the front playing the Plainview Country Club course two weeks ago.

Baggett claims a two-meet total of 149, to lead Coronado's David Groom who is second at 151. Hereford's James McDowell is third individually at 157.

Next district match will be in Lubbock next Friday.

ENMU Fems Eliminated From Play

FLORENCE, S.C. (Special)—With 6-5 Gwen Walker towering over Eastern New Mexico's players, guarding the goal at one end and scoring on the other, Arkansas-Monticello eliminiminated the New Mexicans 84-66 in the national AIAW college division tournament Thursday.

The loss brought ENMU's season to a close with a 17-8 record, and Monticello will advance in the consolation division to today's semifinals against Viola College of Mirada, Calif. Monticello is now 18-6 for the year.

Miss Walker scored 30 points and grabbed 24 rebounds for the Arkansas team. ENMU's tallest player is 6-3 reserve Melva Tollett, and its tallest starter is 5-11 Donna Read.

Miss Read picked up four fouls in the first half trying to guard Miss Walker. Although she did not foul out, Miss Read, who has been averaging 18 points a game, was held to 4 points.

With Miss Walker dominating, Monticello raced away to a 46-24 halftime lead and Eastern could not recover.

Behind Miss Walker, Anita McChristian scored 16 points and Karla Kerr 10.

Margie Martinez scored 17 to pace Eastern, with Brenda Worley scoring 11 points and Irene Torres 10.

Herzog Hears Gripes

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The whispers followed Whitey Herzog all winter and the Kansas City manager admits he heard them.

"Sure, I know people say I overmanaged in the playoffs," he said, "but I wouldn't do anything differently."

The Royals lost the American League pennant to New York last October in the ninth inning of the fifth playoff game.

The strategy battle between Herzog and Yankees skipper Billy Martin had begun an inning earlier with left-hander Paul Splittorff nursing a two-run Royals lead.

"We're winning 3-1 after seven innings," said Herzog. "Splitt came to me in the bottom of the seventh and said, 'I'm getting tired. You'd better get somebody ready.'" The Yankees had Willie Randolph, Thurman Munson, Lou Piniella and Cliff Johnson, four right-handed batters, coming up in the eighth. Herzog ordered Doug Bird, a right-hander to warm up.

"Randolph singles and I go out to talk to Splitt," Herzog said. "I ask him if he thinks he can get Munson and he says, 'I've about run out of tricks with him. You'd better get Birdie in here.'"

So, Herzog brought in Bird who struck out Munson. "He had two strikes on Piniella and the next pitch was strike three but he didn't get the call. Then Piniella bloops a single."

That brought up Reggie Jackson as a pinch hitter. "He's 1-for-16 in the series," said Herzog. He hits a fly ball and Amos Otis starts back. The ball drops for a single and it's 3-2."

Next, Herzog went for southpaw Steve Mingori against left-handed batters Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss. The strategy worked and the Royals got out of the inning without furhter damage.

At the start of the ninth, Herzog brought in 20-game winner Dennis Leonard. He gets no argument on that strategy from Baltimore manager Earl Weaver.

"In that spot, I'd do the same thing," said Weaver. "If I'm three outs away from the pennant, I go to my ace every time."

So Leonard came in to face Paul Blair, Bucky Dent and Mickey Rivers. "I'll take that matchup any time," said Herzog.

Leonard got two strikes on Blair, "then he fouls off about half a dozen pitches and finally punches one off his fists for a bloop single," said Herzog. Roy White batted for Dent and moved the count to 3-2 before fouling off three pitches and finally walking.

"Now, we've got to keep Rivers from bunting," said Herzog. "Leonard gets two strikes on him and he grounds a single up the middle. After that, it was all over."

It was the second year in a row that the Yankees beat the Royals for the pennant in the last inning of the final playoff game. Both times, the winning hit came off reliever Mark Littell. That won't happen again. The Royals traded Littell to St. Louis over the winter for Al Hrabosky.

As for Herzog's strategy, the manager shrugs off the criticism.

"You do what you believe best in this game and then forget it," he said. "Otherwise, you'd go nutty."

Monterey Tries Midland Nine

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Fair-weather pitchers are guys who wake up in the morning and smile when they look out the window and see the sun shining. Gene Segrest fits right in that category.

The Coronado junior can pitch in colder climates, too. But he figures the heat helps him to throw "heat" toward opposing batters a little better. Segrest and the Mustangs entered the Snyder tournament against Lamesa today at 3 p.m. The Coronado club (3-6) plays two more games Saturday in the round-robin event with a 12:30 game against Snyder and a 4:30 game against Levelland.

Meanwhile, Monterey shot for its fourth straight win today against Midland High in Lowrey Field at 2 p.m. The Plainsmen (6-3) called on ace righthander Ron Reeves (3-0) to cool a Midland team which has defeated Monterey twice this season.

As for Segrest, he's also been defeated twice this season. But those were cold-weather days. Last Friday at Big Spring, Segrest pitched the distance and allowed four hits as CHS downed the Steers 4-2. What was the difference in the pitcher's performance?

"I would say the cold weather had a lot to do with it," Segrest said. "It was pretty. It wasn't windy or cold. I thought Big Spring had as good hitters as I had faced all year. But it's the first game I had pitched this season when the weather was good."

Segrest thinks the cold weather provides the pitcher an additional mental obstacle. Plus there are a few physical factors.

"It's kinda hard to grip the ball when it's cold and dry. So at the first of the season, I was pretty wild. But last game I got everything back to normal," he said.

Segrest pitched out of necessity on the varsity as a sophomore. Coach John Dudley needed pitchers and the rookie responded with a 1.92 ERA and a 2-4 won-loss record. But last year the weather wasn't the problem for Segrest. The CHS junior incurred an infection in his back muscles. The sophomore experienced occasional pain and it hindered his ability to rotate his back.

The problems are in the past but Segrest still receives penicillin and takes pills to prevent any future trouble. At 5-10 and 156 pounds, the junior doesn't look the part of a muscular thrower such as Monterey's Reeves. Yet Segrest's best pitch is the fast ball.

"I have a slow curve, a fast curve, a knuckleball and a change-up but I think the fast ball can do the job better. Right now the hardest thing for me is controlling my walks. When I think about pitching, the big thing I think about is keep the hitters off balance and make them guess," he said.

When the mound duties end, Segrest plays shortstop for Coronado and it doesn't matter which position he plays. However, the pitching is more of a challenge to him.

"Hitting is, too, but pitching especially is. There's a lot of pressure on you when you're on the mound and the whole team is depending on you. You know you have to come through. . . I like to be under pressure," he said.

"We got it all together against Big Spring. We had been hitting the ball well, but right at people. This team has good an overall attitude as any team I've played for as far as wanting to win," Segrest said.

Now if the weatherman only will cooperate.

Tech Golfers Keep Second Place Spot

CORPUS CHRISTI (Special)—Texas Wesleyan College added another stroke to its lead over Texas Tech in the Gulf Stream Intercollegiate Golf Tournament going into the final day of play.

TWC shota a team 291 Thursday and now claims a score of 876. Tech had a 292 Thursday for an 878 sum. Following the Raiders is Cameron (Okla.) State at 885 after its 293 Thursday.

Harston Named All-America

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Senior Ann Meyers of UCLA heads the 10-women Kodak All-American women's basketball team which includes Wayland Baptist College's Kathy Harston. The team was announced here today. It was the fourth year in a row that Miss Meyers was named to the squad selected by the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

The 5-foot-9 forward averaged 18 points a game this season and is the sister of former UCLA all-America Dave Meyers who now plays for the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

She is joined on the squad by Montclair State senior Carol Blasejowski who was selected for the third straight year. In her college career she scored a national women's record 3,115 points.

Named to the squad for the second time was Cindy Brogdon, a junior from Tennessee.

Also chosen were Miss Harston, Nancy Leiberman of Old Dominion, Lynette Woodard of Kansas, Ginia Beaseley of North Carolina State, 4-foot-11 Debbie Brock of Delta State in Mississippi, Julie Gross of Louisiana State University and Althea Gwyn of Queens College.

Exhibitions Please Houk

By The Associated Press

Detroit manager Ralph Houk knows it's only spring training, but it's still better to be winning than losing.

"It's a good indication, if nothing else," the veteran manager said after the Tigers tied a club record Thursday with their seventh consecutive exhibition baseball victory, a 7-0 decision over a split squad of the Montreal Expos. "We're just playing good ball."

The Tigers, who have had four losing seasons as they rebuilt under Houk, are 12-3 so far this spring, the best record of any team in the major leagues.

"You can see our depth," says Houk. "You can see the players have learned a lot from last year. You can see our players are making the plays they didn't make last year."

Veteran Jack Billingham, recently acquired from Cincinnati, was the starter for Detroit and pitched six strong innings before giving way to John Hiller. Steve Foucault came on in the ninth to complete the seven-hitter.

Rusty Staub and Tim Corcoran were the batting stars, Staub driving in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and Corcoran hitting a two-run homer. Corcoran has hit safely in nine straight games and leads the Tigers with 13 runs batted in.

"With all these young guys and everyone trying to do so well," Staub said, "I'm more into it. Usually in spring training, I just get my work in and get ready for the season."

Elsewhere, the other half of Montreal's team beat the Houston Astros 3-0; Pittsburgh's split squads beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 and lost to the Toronto Blue Jays 7-5; the Minnesota Twins routed the Boston Red Sox 10-0; the Texas Rangers beat the New York Yankees 5-1; the Kansas City Royals clobbered the Chicago White Sox 14-3.

Also, the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the New York Mets 12-1; the Philadelphia Phillies outscored the Cincinnati Reds 15-5; the Oakland A's trimmed the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2; the Chicago Cubs defeated the San Diego Padres 7-1; the California Angels beat the San Francisco Giants 5-2, and the Seattle Mariners edged the Cleveland Indians 7-5.

Rudy May pitched five perfect innings and teamed with Larry Landreth and Bill Atkinson for a three-hitter as Montreal beat Houston. Willie Stargell homered and Bruce Kison pitched six shutout innings for Pittsburgh's winning team, while Toronto got three runs batted in from Dave McKay and two from Rick Bosetti in defeating the other group of Pirates.

Butch Wynegar hit a two-run homer and Minnesota scored seven unearned runs in the fourth inning to rout Boston. Juan Beniquez homered to back the seven-hit pitching of Doyle Alexander and Jim Umbarger as Texas beat the Yankees. U.L. Washington had five hits and Al Cowens homered and drove in four runs to lead Kansas City over Chicago.

Ron Cey hit a home run and two doubles as Los Angeles rapped the Mets for 19 hits in their one-sided victory. Philadelphia had 17 hits in beating Cincinnati, including a three-run homer by Mike Schmidt. Jeff Newman broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to give Oakland its victory over Milwaukee.

Steve Ontiveros had four hits and two RBI as the Cubs whipped San Diego. Brian Dowling singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning of California's victory over San Francisco. Dan Meyer had three hits and drove in three runs to lead Seattle past Cleveland.

O.J. Still At Buffalo

BUFFALO (AP) — The Buffalo Bills say — for the moment, at least — that O.J. Simpson is still theirs.

"If O.J.'s. . . when O.J.'s been traded, we will announce it, and no announcement is planned," Budd Thalman, a spokesman for the National Foootball League club, said Thursday night after another report surfaced that the Bills' star running back was bound for San Francisco.

A few weeks ago there were published reports that the 9-year veteran from the University of Southern California, who holds the NFL's single-season rushing record with 2,003 yards, would be dealt to the 49ers long with guard Reggie McKenzie for runningback Delvin Williams, defensive end Cedric Hardeman and cash. And on Thursday, a Los Angeles radio station said Simpson, who makes more than $700,000 a year, had been traded to the 49ers for undisclosed draft choices.

Officials of the 49ers, whoo denied the earlier reports, were not immediately available for comment on the latest one.

Russell Selected For All-Star Game

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Four players, including Texas Tech's Mike Russell and 6-11 center Dave Corzine of DePaul, were named as at-large selections to round out tha 10-member East and West team rosters for the annual Pizza Hut Classic, it was announced Thursday.

Corzine and forward George Johnson of St. John's were added to the East team while forwards Jackie Robinson of Nevada-Las Vegas and Russell were named to the West squad for the April 1 game at the Las vegas Convention Center.

Pizza Hut also announced that two of players voted to the East team — Phil Ford of North Carolina and Rod Griffin of Wake Forest — have withdrawn from the game. Ford has been advised by doctors to rest an injured knee while Griffin has a schedule conflict between the game and his student teaching commitments.

They will be replaced on the East squad by two Kentuckians, foward Jack "Goose" Givens of the top-ranked Wildcats and guard Rick Wilson of Louisville.

Also playing for the East team will be Butch Lee of Marquette, Harry Morgan of Indiana State, Roger Phegley of Bradley, Jerome Whitehead of Marquette, Wayne Radford of Indiana and Jeff Covington of Youngstown State.

ON TOP TEAMS

In back-to-back years, 1977 and 1978, Tony Dorsett played on title teams in the Louisiana Superdome. On Jan. 1, 1977, his college team, Pittsburgh, defeated Georgia to clinch the collegiate title. On Jan. 15, 1978, Dorsett's pro club, Dallas, won the Super Bowl.

ATLANTA — Sharon Walsh defeated Pam Shriver 6-2, 7-6 on the third day of play in a $35,000 tennis tournament. In earlier action, Brigitte Cuyvers defeated Caroline Stoll 7-5, 6-4.

GOLF

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Lou Graham, breathless from a hard run to the first tee, recovered his composure for a 4-under-par 67 that staked him to a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $225,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

Graham, a 1-stroke loser last week, almost lost 2 strokes when he came within seconds of missing his tee time, which was delayed for an hour by a fog that blanketed this resort island. A deuce on the 17th lifted him into a tie for the top with Bobby Walzel Howard Twitty.

BOWLING

MILWAUKEE — Fred Jaskie of nearby Greendale, Wis., regained the lead after four rounds of a $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association open tournament. Jaskie had led the first round, dropped to second and took over the lead again on the fourth round's final game when he shot 256. His 26-game score includes 120 bonus pins for winning three games and tying two in match play for a total 5,992, or 22 ahead of Jim Certain of Huntsville, Ala.

Jaskie's 1,810 for the round was second only to Don Johnson's 1,856. Johnson, of Las Vegas, moved from 24th to sixth with a total 5,893. Certain, with 5,970, won seven of his eight matches for the best won-lost record of the round.

SWIMMING

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Favored Tennessee took the first-day lead in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I Swimming and Diving Championships. Andy Coan won the 50-yard freestyle for Tennessee, leading Volunteers to four of the first five places in that event in the 25-yard Belmont Plaza pool.

Freshman Brian Goodell of UCLA ended the two-year rule by Tim Shaw of Long Beach State in the 500-yard freestyle. Scott Spann of Auburn successfully defended his title in the 200-yard individual medley. Wayne Chester of Alabama won the one-meter diving. California was a surprise second in the team standings of the three-day meet after winning the 400 medley relay.

Blazer Injuries, Losses Mount

By The Associated Press

The injuries continue to mount for the Portland Trail Blazers, and they couldn't be happening at a worse time.

Forward Bobby Gross is the latest to be sidelined after aggravating an ankle injury in Thursday night's 116-109 loss to the Milwaukee Bucks.

With the start of the playoffs less than three weeks away, the National Basketball Association's defending champions find their three starting frontcourt players and their No. 1 reserve all out with injuries, and two other players at less than 100 percent.

Center Bill Walton, recovering from foot surgery, and power forward Maurice Lucas, who has had wrist and leg injuries, are both expected back next week. Reserve Lloyd Neal has a knee injury but should return in the first week in April. Gross, who suffered a stress fracture of his ankle against Milwaukee, is expected to be sidelined for six weeks.

Playmaker Dave Twardzik and swingman Larry Steele are the two Blazers who are playing hurt.

The big question, however, is how quickly will they be able to regain the cohesiveness, teamwork and fine tuning which helped them to the title a year ago.

Lionel Hollins, the only member of Portland's regular five who started against Milwaukee, led all scorers with 38 points. But it was not enough as the Bucks built a 13-point fourth-quarter lead and then held off repeated comeback efforts.

Two baskets by Ernie Grunfeld gave the Bucks a 94-81 lead with 10 minutes to play, but Hollins helped Portland pull within four points on six different occasions — the last at 113-109 with 21 seconds to play.

But Portland's T.R. Dunn was called for a backcourt foul on Milwaukee's next possession, and Grunfeld sank a free throw. Buckner added a layup with five seconds to play.

Rookie Marques Johnson led the Bucks with a career-high 32 points. The victory, Milwaukee's fourth in a row, kept the Bucks 2½ games ahead of Golden State in the race for the final Western Conference playoff berth.

Portland, which has already clinched the Pacific Division title, will get a bye through the first round of the playoffs, and that extra week's rest and practice time should certainly help.

In the meantime, however, the Blazers are in danger of being overtaken by Philadelphia in the race for the best overall record in the NBA, which carries with it the homecourt advantage in every playoff series. Portland is 55-17 while Philadelphia is 50-21, a difference of just 4½ games, and the Sixers can trim that by one when the two clubs meet Sunday in Philadelphia.

"We're playing as well as we can with the players we have," says Blazers Coach Jack Ramsay. "But I have to be concerned because I don't have all my players."

Spurs 123, Nuggets 106

Larry Kenon scored 29 points and George Gervin 27 as San Antonio hit on 57 percent of its shots from the field in a battle of division leaders. The Spurs moved out to a 68-53 halftime lead and were never caught. Denver has lost seven of its last 10 games.

Suns 120, Knicks 108

Phoenix got 10 points each from Alvan Adams and Walter Davis in the third quarter, outscoring New York 41-20 to take a 94-77 lead. The Suns shot 70 percent from the field in that period and had 14 assists. Davis finished with 29 points and Adams 21.

Warriors 119, Pacers 115

Golden State climbed to the .500 mark behind 27 points by reserve forward Nate Williams. The Warriors built an early 15-point lead, saw Indiana rally to draw even at 103, then went ahead to stay on Clifford Ray's three-point play with 3:06 to go. Two free throws apiece by Ray and Rick Barry in the final minute clinched the victory.

Buffalo Forward To Miss Games

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Braves forward Marvin Barnes will miss at least two games due to a dislocated thumb, the National Basketball Association club has announced.

Barnes jammed his right thumb during Wednesday night's 97-92 loss to Seattle, a team spokesman said. "It's painful and swollen and is in a splint," according to the spokesman.

A starter in the Braves last 22 games, Barnes will definitely miss Friday night's match with the Los Angeles Lakers and Saturday night's game in Phoenix, the club said.

In the 1977 National Football League draft of college players, the most popular position was running back. Fifty-one were chosen.

Chaps Blank Coe In Tourney

ABILENE (Special) — Oscar Acosta spun a two-hitter and had as much trouble with the weather as with Coe College of Iowa as Lubbock Christian College opened the Abilene Collegiate Invitational Baseball Tournament Thursday with a 9-0 victory.

The Chaparrals, who have now won 13 straight and stand 16-9, were slated to play UT-El Paso at 12:30 p.m. Thursday, but a heavy rain soaked the ACU field five minutes before gametime. The game was then pushed back to Saturday at 3 p.m.

Then against Coe, LCC jumped out quick in the first inning, allowing Acosta to coast to his fifth win in as many decisions this year as he recorded the Chaps' third straight shutout.

Tommy Inman laced a triple to right center with two outs in the top of the first with his 10th homer of the year, a towering drive into a 15 mile-an-hour north wind to right, making it 2-0.

But for awhile it appeared that may be nullified, as, with one out in the top of the second, another cloudburst struck and delayed the game for 15 minutes.

When action resumed, the Chaps quickly wrapped things up with a 4-run outburst. Clark Langdon walked, Dick Battle ripped a double to left and, after Brady Brashear struck out, Darius Copley walked but Coe catcher Charlie Boothe tried to pick Langdon off third and his throw was wild. Bobby Doe's single up the middle made it 5-0 and then Doe scored on Leslie's single to center.

Leslie, who raised his average to .484, drove in his fourth run of the game with a sixth-inning single, giving him 38 RBIs on the year.

Acosta walked five, allowing only a fourth-inning single to third baseman Ralph Grande and a sixth-inning double to shortstop Mark Parker, which left runners at second and third with no outs. But he got Grande to fly to left, fanned centerfielder Vic Shada and got second baseman Ted Kahle to bounce to third for the game's final out.

The meet, which operates on a 10-run rule after five frames and 9 after six innings, had two games Thursday night. Today, LCC will play Kearney State of Nebraska on the Hardin-Simmons field at 10 a.m. Then the Chaps come back for a game with ACU on the ACU field at 3 p.m.

Acosta, who has hurled complete games in his only two starts of the season, needed 106 pitches in the 55-degree weather to retire Coe six times. Coe dipped to 1-7 with Thursday's outing.

Longhorn Cagers Named To Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Baxter and Jim Krivacs of National Invitation Tournament champion Texas were named to the all-NIT team.

Krivacs, who scored 99 points in four games to lead tournament scoring, and Baxter, who added 26 points to Krivacs' 33 in the Longhorns title game victory over North Carolina State 101-93, were joined on the all-NIT team by the Wolfpack's Kendal Pinder, James Bailey of Rutgers and John Duren of Georgetown.

COACH NAMED

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Taylor "Tates" Locke, the former head coach of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves, has been named head basketball coach at Jacksonville University. Locke, 40, was named Thursday to replace Don Beasley.

Quarterback Draws Charge For Possession

ODESSA (AP) — University of Houston quarterback Darrell Shepard, whose recruitment last year led to National Collegiate Athletic Association probation for the Cougars, has been charged with possession of less than two ounces of marijuana.

Shepard, the most sought after schoolboy football player in 1977, was freed Wednesday on $1,000 bond after the Class B misdemeanor charges were filed.

Shepard was 1976 Class AAAA all-atate quarterback in Odessa and highly sought by Southwest Conference schools. He was used sparingly last year as a freshman quarterback.

His arrest came after police stopped him Tuesday in a radar speed trap. He was home from college for the spring holidays.

Police said a routine check of Shepard's driver's license showed two outstanding warrants against Shepard for driving without a license. Officers impounded the car and said an inventory of its contents revealed a plastic bag of what officers believed to be marijuana.

After an intense recruiting struggle for him last year, Shepard announced he would attend the University of Texas. Then on the day for signing Southwest Conference football letters of intent, Shepard surprised recruiters by signing with the Cougars.

The NCAA later placed the Cougars on probation in connection with the recruiting of Shepard, saying it found violations in recruiting inducements, excess recruiting contacts and improper transportation.

The NCAA also reprimanded Houston head coach Bill Yeoman and assistant coach Melvin Brown.

One NCAA violation said an assistant coach and a representative of UH athletic interests were involved in arranging a loan for Shepard's mother to buy him a car. Yeoman said he had asked Brown to check with Charles Marino, board chairman of the Bank of Brazoria, concerning the loan.

Corporal Punishment Still Persists In British Education System

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — As you sit down to read this you are the envy of a fair number of British students. On any given day quite a few find sitting down a somewhat painful experience.

Corporal punishment is still part of the British educational system. Not as prevalent as it used to be, perhaps, but inflicted often enough to surprise visiting American educators. Local teachers, in turn, are surprised American schools, considering their reputation for occasional violence, have abandoned what they regard as "the ultimate deterrent."

It's an emotive subject, even here where it is traditional that teachers at school are acting "in loco parentis" — in place of the parents. The British system is that a local educational council decides whether to permit corporal punishment in its area and then the headmaster of the school in that district determines whether or not to permit it in his or her particular institution.

If they do, they must keep a "punishment book" in which all corporal punishment must be written down, including the reasons it was ordered. If this sounds like the sort of thing that would have enraged American parents marching on the schools, the British parent must be of a different breed.

A few months ago, Woman's Own magazine polled its millions of readers on the subject and found that 73 percent of the parents replying favored corporal punishment. Not only that, but a large majority was in favor of more homework for children.

The question of physical chastisement in schools is bound to erupt again here in the wake of the decision of the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg to consider the case of a youth who was 15 in 1972 when he was punished with the birch on the Isle of Man, off the coast of Britain.

The British Home Office has announced it will defend the suit when hearings begin Jan. 17.

The youth alleges that his sentence to three strokes of the birch rod for assault causing bodily harm amounted to a "degrading treatment or punishment" in breach of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Ninety percent of the 60,000 residents of the resort island are believed to be in favor of the retention of birching as a deterrent in minor crimes of violence. They have the support of the Bishop of Sodor and Man who says the island is determined not to permit "the desperate state of morals in England" reaching it.

A rally to support birching is being organized to coincide with the hearings.

The birch is of course, a far tougher form of punishment than is permitted in British schools where the worst is a leather strap or a slipper or light cane applied across the bottom.

But the Society of Teachers Opposed to Physical Punishment says that the principle is the same. It has charged "excessive use of the cane" in a number of high schools.

In one London district — Croydon — more than 1,000 pupils were caned in 1977, according to its secretary, Colin Bagnall. But its demand for an inquiry received a hostile reception from Headmasters and Teachers Union leaders who described the organization as a pressure group that has no effective alternative.

A spokesman for the National Union of Teachers, largest of the teaching unions, said it opposed any national directive for or against corporal punishment by the Ministry of Education. It believes the problem is best handled as it is now, on the local level.

Minister of Education Shirley Williams is known to be against physical correction but she is reluctant to try to force educators away from a practice so many believe essential to discipline. Especially when some schools, in the words of the opposition spokesman on education, Norman St. John Stevas, are witnessing "trench warfare" between students and teachers.

Lubbock schools have never faced an immediate future with more potential problems or change. The school board will benefit greatly from the mature, calm judgement of Lynn Stafford, the only candidate for place one on the school board who has two school age children, and who has actual experience in teaching school.

Silent Heart Attacks

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please write about silent heart attacks? I had one this spring. I had heard of them, but had never seen a patient with one. I'm a registered nurse.

I never suffered any of the classical symptoms and never had any heart pain. On a Sunday morning I just fell sick and was nauseated. There was no perspiration on my head or face, but I was perspiring on my body. My pulse rate dropped to 50, but I didn't think of heart attack. On Wednesday the pulse rate dropped to 40.

My sister wanted to call a doctor on Sunday but I refused, thinking I'd soon feel better. On Wednesday when I talked to the doctor he thought I had a virus and asked me to come in on Friday but if I felt worse to come in sooner.

When I got to his office and had my tests run, including an electrocardiogram, I was sent immediately by ambulance to the coronary care unit with a diagnosis of acute myocardial infarction. I was hospitalized for seven weeks. I had to have a pacemaker. Several doctors said I had something unusual: a silent heart attack with complete heart block and heart failure.

I think you would do the public a great service if you would comment about silent heart attacks.

DEAR READER — Silent heart attacks are not as rare as you might think. Doctors have known about them for years. Often these would be found as a result of autopsies showing the old damage to the heart muscle in a person who had no history of a heart attack.

The figures vary on how common they are. But when my staff at the school of Aerospace Medicine studied electrocardiograms from the flying population, we found about one-third of the men with infarcts were found because of changes they developed in their electrocardiogram — compared to previous normal records. The other infarcts were in men with symptoms. The surprising thing is that these men were flying airplanes and were never ill enough to know they had anything wrong.

We also know that men doing heavy labor sometimes continue working in the presence of a heart attack and do not know anything has happened. Perhaps it isn't so surprising anyway, since the heart muscle itself does not have pain fibers. The heart pain is a reflex pain pattern to the chest wall, shoulders, arm, jaw and sometimes other parts of the body.

There is always some disagreement about whether a heart attack is truly silent. Many doctors would not classify your case in that group because you did have symptoms — illness and nausea. You may not have recognized what caused the symptoms but they were real. Many a case of mild indigestion is passed by as not important when in reality it represents a heart attack.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Ekofisk Hotel Costs $1 Million Per Room

By PAUL TREUTHARDT

EKOFISK CENTER, North Sea (AP) — Europe's newest hotel cost one million dollars a room and was put up in two days and nights on stilts in the middle of the North Sea.

It has a spectacular view of the platforms of a huge oil field, lit like diamond clusters at night with the roiling flames from flare stacks throwing blood-red images across the sea.

It's called the Ekofisk Hotel. But don't try for a reservation in the exclusive establishment 180 miles — a 99-minute helicopter ride — off the Norwegian coast. It was designed and is operated only for workers and invited guests to the heart of an oil and gas development from six fields in the Norwegian zone.

The 100-million-dollar cost for the 106-room hotel would be outrageous for the most luxurious shoreside resort. But everything comes high in the midst of a treacherous sea. Current estimates for full development of Ekofisk run to 5 billion dollars and oilmen expect to see a further one billion poured in as inflation takes its toll.

A massive barge crane hoisted 900-ton, five-and six-story sections into place in two days and nights. Installation of generators, water purifiers and other complex machinery below the living quarters will take until early spring.

The hotel will bring a new lifestyle — and women — to Ekofisk and alleviate the serious accommodation problems which Phillips Petroleum, the operator of the Ekofisk group, faces daily. It has had to hire three of the great submersible drilling rigs just for sleeping space, and on a typical night had only two spare beds in the entire field.

"We run a helicopter ballet here twice a day," said a radio-room operator, "shuttling 1,200 men in two hours between the platforms where they work and where they sleep."

The giant hotel modules were carefully equipped by the Norwegian builders ashore. The two-bed rooms were fully carpeted and equipped with private bathrooms and consoles for taped music or four radio channels.

The 106 rooms flank a central unit boasting a two-story cinema, with balcony, billiards, card and reading lounges, a gym with sauna, a six-bed hospital with emergency operating facilities, and administration and training areas.

The hotel is topped with a helicopter deck over waiting rooms and a hotel check-in counter on a floor which also has a small chapel. Three elevators serve the seven-floor structure.

Work schedules at the center call for eight 12-hour days, followed by eight days off ashore, with a long break every four tours. This system meets with enthusiastic approval from the multinational staff because it gives long periods ashore to spend with families or in sightseeing.

Telephone Operators Learning French

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — Ma Bell is giving French lessons to some of its operators in Maine and New Hampshire to help solve problems brought on by thousands of French-Canadian tourists trying to make calls in the summer months.

New England Telephone Co. is paying for the voluntary 12-week course in conversational French, which is being given to operators in Portland, Bangor, and Dover, N.H., with the help of the universities of New Hampshire and Maine.

NET spokesman John McCatherin said the lessons were an attempt to solve problems such as the case of a French tourist who attempted to make a long distance call from a pay phone last summer but came up against a non-French speaking operator.

The operator tried to tell the man to press the phone's coin return but instead told him to "kiss the coin return." McCatherin said the result was inefficient, embarrassing and "not very sanitary."

Conservatives Seek Senators' Recall

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Members of a recently organized Conservative Party say they will circulate recall petitions against Wisconsin's two U.S. senators, Democrats William Proxmire and Gaylord Nelson, because they voted for the first Panama Canal treaty.

Attorney John M. Couture, chairman of the party, and Joseph M. Birkenstock of Manitowoc, state chairman, said Wednesday the campaign would begin next week.

Birkenstock is former chairman of the Wisconsin American Party.

To secure a recall election, petitioners would need signatures equal to 25 percent of the last gubernatorial vote, or about 295,000.

Static Electricity Proves Costly

By ARNOLD DIBBLE

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — The kid's game of "shocks and sparks" played by shuffling feet in the dark to create static electricity to shock a playmate is no child's play to modern computerized industry.

Static electricity, an annoying sensation that startles when a door knob or an elevator button is touched, can cause millions of dollars in losses to industry at the touch of a finger. Billings can be so fouled it literally makes the hair of management and customers stand on end.

Printing and photographic companies are particularly vulnerable. So is the relatively new electronic banking industry.

In a recent case in California, a woman made a $20 deposit by electronic banking and was as pleasantly shocked momentarily as the bank's management was stunned to find static electricity had changed it to $20,000.

At New York Bell's Manhattan headquarters subscriber billings are fed into a central computer. Without knowing it, employees walking across the floor to the computer built up thousands of volts of static charge and by touching the computer altered bills and erased the memory.

This situation also has been reported at financial terminals, grocery registers, word processing consoles and data processing centers where loss of memory can require hours of re-entry programming.

In commercial photography as a roll of film is wound before processing, static is generated on the film and the emulsion instantly records the light streaking and there are "chicken tracks" on negatives and prints.

In the printing industry, where lighter paper and faster presses have been introduced, static contributes to jam ups, poor image quality and equipment downtime.

An entire new industry has grown up to fight static in the computer age.

At the 3M Company, makers of Scotch Tape and myriad other products, the project is being managed by Dr. John Ryan, head of the company's Static Control Systems.

"Our studies have convinced us that industry is overlooking a key production link," Ryan said, "if it doesn't recognize the costly effects of static."

The company has introduced a new carbon-loaded plastic floor mat to be put in front of electronic hardware which harmlessly grounds employees, drains away static charges and keeps a computer from going haywire. Conductive work bench covers, wrist straps and flexible or solid containers also are available to drain static from employees who handle computer components in the manufacturing cycle.

For printing and photography, static control systems using safe alpha-emitting isotopes have been developed to ionize the air surrounding film and paper, eliminating or neutralizing the static charge.

The cost of anti-static equipment ranges from less than $10 for a wrist strap and about $100 for the carbonized floor mat to thousands of dollars for a complete ionizing system, a 3M spokesman said.

Another company, Simco, markets ionizing equipment and others make specific devices to meet certain requirements, but 3M is the only firm offering a full range of anti-static equipment and is by far the largest manufacturer in the field.

It's booming business running into sales figures of "many millions" a year, the 3M spokesman said. "And it's getting bigger all the time because of the increasing use of computers and electronic equipment."

Identification Cards Termed Not Legal

AUSTIN (UPI) — The cards look like a drivers license, complete with color photo, some numbers and words on the back, but the Department of Public Safety warns they have no legal value and are put out by a private business firm.

The DPS issued the warning Wednesday because businesses frequently use drivers licenses to varify identification for personal checks and other transactions.

DPS officials said the cards issued by the private company resemble driver licenses in having a color photograph, a number, and information similar to that on the licenses.

The DPS said it had information the cards have been purchased at various locations in the Houston area.

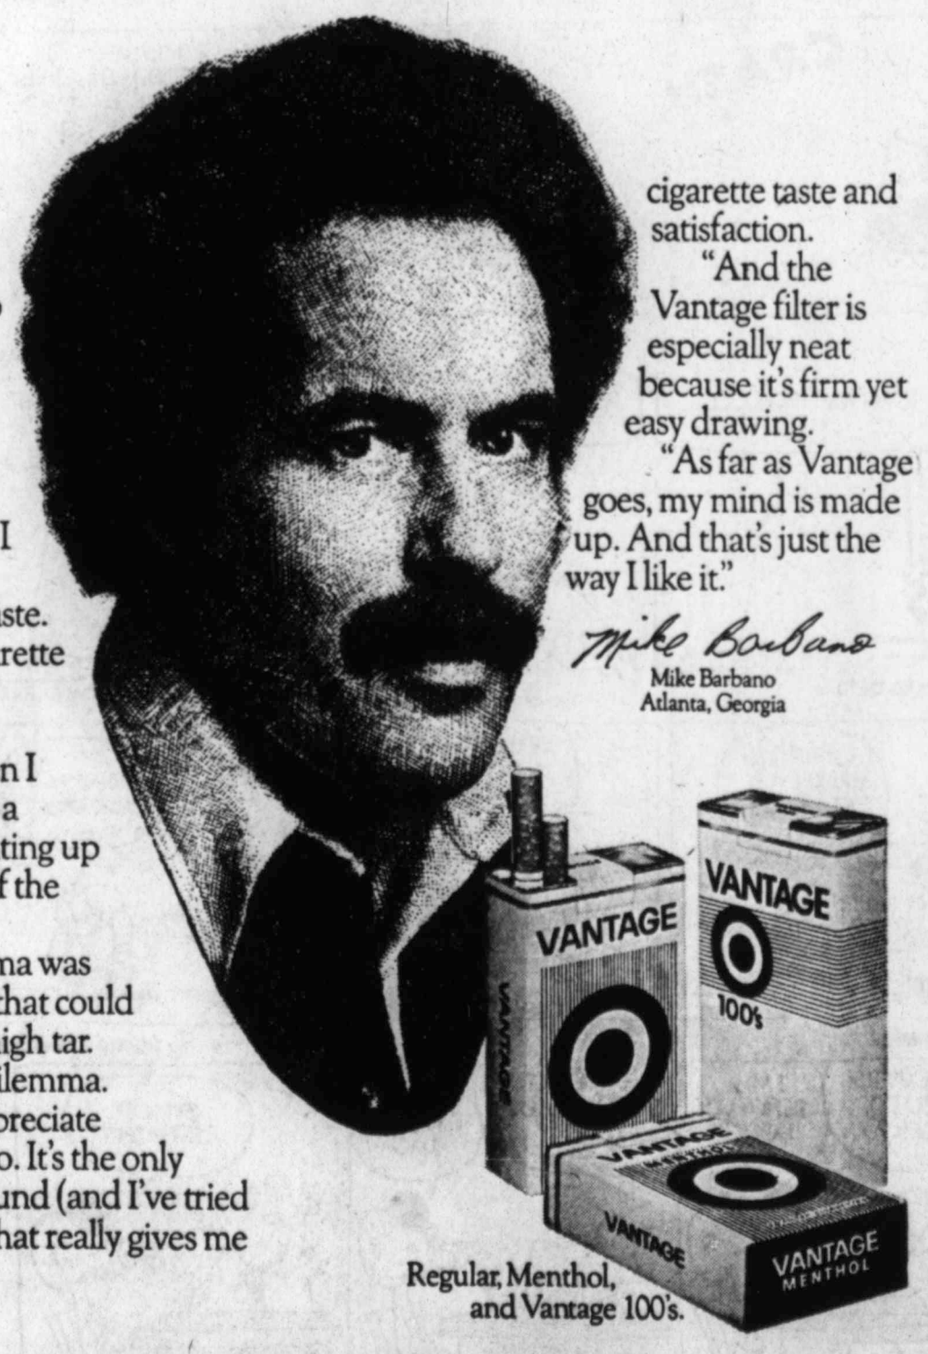
"I have my own ideas about smoking."



"I know what I like out of life. And one of the things I like is smoking. But there's no getting away from the stories I keep hearing about cigarettes and high tar.

"There's also no getting away from why I smoke. I smoke for the pleasure of it. For the taste. And for enjoying a cigarette after my long day as a teacher.

"Then at night when I work my other job—as a drummer—I enjoy lighting up between sets. It's part of the way I live.

"For me, the dilemma was how to find a cigarette that could give me taste without high tar. And that was quite a dilemma.

"Which is why I appreciate Vantage as much as I do. It's the only low-tar cigarette I've found (and I've tried several other brands) that really gives me cigarette taste and satisfaction.

"As far as Vantage goes, my mind is made up. And that's just the way I like it."
