City's redistricting plan gains federal approval

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland's election redistricting plan has been approved by the U.S. Justice Department and should take effect immediately, the city attorney said Wednesday.

However, leaders are keeping a watchful eye on a Congressional redistricting proposal that could affect the validity of the city's new plan.

City Attorney David Reagan has received clearance to enact changes to city voting districts. The new plan extends District 1 across north Midland and gives District 2 more minority representation.

The city council includes representatives of four single-member districts. Two members are elected citywide, or at-large, as is the mayor.

Gib Lewis shows up; judge OKs cameras

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis showed up Wednesday for a preliminary hearing in his misdemeanor ethics case after spending about 3½ hours in jail the previous day for failing to appear.

After the hour-long hearing before State District Judge Bob Perkins, Lewis said, "This is a bad dream. It's a nightmare that's happening to me.

"I'm going to wake up and it's all going to be over. I'm going to wake up in a cold sweat and say, 'Gee, I can't believe something like that could happen.' "

B-17 to fly again

The Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, admired by aircrews for its strength and ability to withstand battle damage, was designed in 1934 and served throughout World War II. The Fortress gained fame with the U.S. Army's 8th Air Force in flying bombing missions from England into Germany. Escorting the B-17s later in the war were long-range fighters — P-47 Thunderbolts, P-51 Mustangs and P-38 Lightnings. The B-17, decked out in its battle gear and colors, will be flying in the Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 on Oct. 12 and 13 at Midland International Airport.

Smith pushes bill

WASHINGTON — Aliens who repeatedly try to sneak into the United States or commit crimes here would face new penalties under a bill introduced Wednesday by a Texas congressman who said current laws encourage offenders to simply "try, try again." Rep. Lamar Smith, a San Antonio Republican, said his bill is aimed at "illegal immigrants who come to this country for many reasons, but the primary reason is wealth . . . too many aliens break our laws to make money and get away with it." Smith's measure would create a mandatory, minimum 10-day detention and a $1,000 fine for any alien detained while trying to cross a U.S. border illegally for the fifth time. And it would also compel resident aliens convicted of crimes, but released on parole, to register with federal authorities pending deportation proceedings.

Bentsen to run

WASHINGTON — Though he turned 70 this year, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Wednesday he has no plans to retire any time soon and is in fact preparing to run for re-election in 1994. Bentsen's future has been the source of speculation in Texas political circles over the past five months as it became increasingly clear he would stay out of next year's presidential race. /3B

OAS moves to squeeze Haiti junta

■ Bush indicates support for sanctions; Marines move to Cuba as evacuation contingency.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Organization of American States reached tentative agreement early today on a resolution to impose sanctions against the military junta in Haiti and to demand the immediate restoration of democratic rule in that country, diplomats said.

The agreement was worked out by OAS foreign ministers during marathon negotiations following a personal appeal for OAS intervention by ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The agreement came while in Haiti the army's chief, Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras, said the military would hand over power to Parliament but warned Aristide not to try to return from exile. Cedras also denied he planned the coup on Monday that ousted Aristide.

At the OAS, diplomats who asked not to be identified said that as a first step a high-level mission will fly to Haiti to demand that the junta step down and return power to Aristide and his government.

If the mission fails to achieve its goal, the OAS foreign ministers will reconvene to discuss alternate options, the diplomats said.

The resolution also recommends OAS member states sever economic, military and diplomatic ties with Haiti so long as the junta remains in power.

According to the diplomats, the resolution apparently will lead to a cutoff in government-to-government contacts with the Haitian regime but does not rule out private commercial dealings with that country.

The OAS was planning to vote on the resolution early today, but that was considered largely a formality once the final

Senate OKs family-leave bill

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Senate voted overwhelmingly on Wednesday to require many employers to grant up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for workers to attend to family emergencies like the sickness of an elderly parent or the care of a newborn or newly adopted child.

The 65-32 margin indicated that the Senate could apparently vote to override the veto that President Bush has threatened. Adding to the bill's prospects was the fact that among the senators who did not vote were two of the bill's Democratic co-sponsors, Sens. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Tom Harkin of Iowa, who were making presidential campaign appearances.

Democratic leaders also said Sen. David Pryor, the Arkansas Democrat who was the third member who did not vote, would have supported the bill if he had

Federal lawmakers dine 'on the House'

By Ron Hutcheson
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Defying the adage that there's no such thing as a free lunch, members of Congress have racked up more than $300,000 in unpaid restaurant bills in Capitol dining halls.

Exploiting a tradition that allowed House members to sign for meals and catered events, more than 250 lawmakers have failed to make good on debts dating as far back as the mid-1980s.

Ex-CIA analyst describes 'fear, cynicism' at agency

WASHINGTON — A former CIA analyst, appealing Wednesday to the Senate to reject the nomination of Robert Gates to head the CIA, accused the nominee of fostering "a culture of fear and cynicism" at the spy agency.

In calm but strained tones that held the Senate Intelligence Committee rapt, the former analyst, Jennifer Glaudemans, also repeated charges that Gates imposed his own anti-Soviet views on intelligence analysis.

Similar charges previously were leveled by former senior CIA officials, but Glaudemans' testimony hit harder because, as she put it, she spoke from the

Brooks takes top honor at 'country' awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Garth Brooks was voted entertainer of the year and won three other awards from the Country Music Association on Wednesday with President Bush and the first lady watching from the second row.

Brooks, 29, was honored for the single "Friends in Low Places," the album "No Fences," plus No. 1 video for "The Thunder Rolls." Under CMA rules, the award was presented to director Bud Schaetzle.

"It's funny how a chubby kid can just be having fun and they call it entertaining," said Brooks, a former boot store manager.

Vince Gill, a tenor with pitch-perfect delivery, won or shared three awards, including male vocalist of the year.

Gill, 34, shared song of the year honors with Tim DuBois, his co-writer on "When I Call Your Name."

Gill also shared vocal event of the year, which went to fiddler Mark O'Connor and the New Nashville Cats featuring Steve Wariner, Ricky Skaggs and Gill.

"I've come a long way from three chords and 'Ol' Shep,' the first song I ever learned," said Gill, former lead singer for the pop group Pure Prairie League.

O'Connor was voted No. 1 musician.

Bush, a longtime country music fan, was seated with his wife, Barbara, and country stars Crystal Gayle, Roy Acuff, Larry Gatlin and his brothers Steve and Rudy.

The Bushes received a standing ovation as they entered the Grand Ole Opry House and at the end of the show when they took the stage.

"It's easy to see why America loves country music," Bush said in brief remarks. "Country music loves America."

OAS: Bush indicates support for sanctions wording had been agreed on.

At the Pentagon, a source said the United States has sent a contingent of Marines to the Caribbean to prepare for a possible evacuation of 7,000 Americans from Haiti, where there has been widespread violence since Monday's coup.

In an emotional 41-minute speech delivered to OAS foreign ministers, Aristide said the junta that forced him from office two days ago is "crazy with power." He urged the international community to use all peaceful means available to restore his eight-month-old government to power.

Aristide received an enthusiastic welcome from delegates who assembled to hear him a few hours after his arrival here from temporary exile in Venezuela.

More than 100 demonstrators marched outside OAS headquarters in a show of support for Aristide. Delegates worked into the night on a resolution to authorize a high-level mission to Haiti and perhaps other measures to bring pressure to bear on the junta.

One immediate benefit of sending a high-level delegation to Haiti is that the junta "would be afraid to carry out a bloodbath," he said. The violence to date already has claimed the lives of 26 Haitians and left hundreds more wounded.

The delegation, he said, should tell the junta "they must immediately leave the presidential palace."

Also, the junta leaders might reassess their position if an OAS delegation informed them of the depth of the international support for reversing the coup, Aristide said.

Later, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said that if economic and diplomatic pressure on Haiti do not restore Aristide to power, "we must consider additional steps." He did not elaborate.

He assailed the junta as a "small group of willful men who have betrayed their uniform."

The Pentagon source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a contingent of "fewer than 500 Marines" had been dispatched from Camp Lejeune, N.C., to the naval station at Guantanamo Bay

DINING: House members rack up unpaid tabs

(From 1A)

"We sent dunning letters and tried every way we knew how to get this settled," said Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan. "Enough is enough."

Roberts, a member of the House Administration Committee, released the bad debt figures Wednesday as part of a last-ditch effort to force deadbeat lawmakers to pay up. The Kansas Republican also called for publicizing the names of House members who fail to pay their outstanding debts within 30 days.

Sources said the list of lawmakers who compiled substantial debts in the House dining room includes former Democratic Rep. Mickey Leland of Texas, who died in an airplane crash on a congressional trip to Ethiopia in 1989.

The disclosure that scores of lawmakers helped themselves to free meals follows recent revelations that some members of Congress routinely wrote bad checks drawn on the private House bank. A General Accounting Office study found that House members bounced 8,331 checks during a 12-month period that ended in June 1990.

The study did not reveal the names of bad check writers.

Hoping to avoid the kind of public outrage sparked by the bad check revelations, the House Administration Committee agreed last week to drop the practice of letting lawmakers sign for meals. The bipartisan panel oversees the internal affairs of the House, including the various dining facilities on the House side of the Capitol.

In addition to the House restaurant in the Capitol, which has an area reserved for members of Congress, lawmakers can arrange catered events in the speaker's dining room or several other dining facilities scattered throughout the Capitol complex.

"Our new policy is cash up front," said Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., Administration Committee chairman. "I made a decision as chairman that whatever the history had been in the past, we were not going to have this practice in the future."

But Roberts said he remains concerned that lawmakers will not make good on their previous meals.

More than 50 current or former lawmakers still owe the House a total of $47,000 for food or catering purchased before 1987, when Congress hired an outside company, Service America Corp., to run the dining facilities.

About 250 lawmakers owe a total of $255,000 to Service America, which lost its House contract last month.

BILL: Margin indicates Senate could override veto been on the floor and would vote to override a veto.

But congressional officials said it was doubtful that the House, which is expected to vote on the measure as early as next week, could pass the legislation by the same two-thirds majority.

It was the second congressional challenge in two days to the president, who has also said he would veto a bill to provide extended unemployment benefits to those who have been out of work for six months. Both houses passed that bill Tuesday.

Republican opponents of the family leave bill accused Democrats of catering only to those who can afford to take time off from work. Democrats said they were trying to make family life more secure and grant American workers a benefit similar to those already enjoyed in Japan, Germany and other industrialized countries.

After the vote, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, a Connecticut Democrat who has sponsored family-leave legislation for five years, said: "I'm very interested in working with the administration to work out a compromise the president can live with. The door is open and the phone lines are free."

The bill, which has been vigorously opposed by business lobbyists, is slightly different from one passed by Congress last year and vetoed by Bush. Democratic sponsors forged a compromise with Sen. Christopher S. Bond, R-Mo., to exempt essential employees, who are the highest paid 10 percent of the work force, and part-time workers who worked fewer than 1,250 hours the previous year.

Despite the revisions, Bush this week reiterated his intention to veto the bill, suggesting that it would impede economic recovery and inappropriately extend the power of government over the workplace.

The bill passed Wednesday would potentially cover 46 million employees — those who work for companies that employ more than 50 workers. It requires employers to provide up to three months unpaid leave per year for the adoption or birth of a child or a serious illness suffered by an employee or a member of the immediate family and to guarantee the worker a job after the leave.

AGENCY: Former CIA analyst repeats charges

(From 1A)

"lowest rung of the totem pole" as "an analyst in the trenches."

"I cannot emphasize enough that my experiences at the CIA were upsetting, particularly so because they ran counter to the principles taught by the agency itself," she said.

"I take no satisfaction in sharing with you the basis of my conviction that Mr. Gates politicized intelligence analysis and is responsible for an overall degradation of the analytical process," she said.

During her six-year stint with the CIA, which began in 1983 immediately after graduate school, analysts working under Gates feared being labeled a "Soviet apologist," Glaudemans said.

"I heard terms such as "soft on the Soviets" and "Soviet apologist" thrown in certain people's direction," she said.

As a result, analysts sharply inhibited their intelligence initiatives, she said. Even so, they had evidence of a declining Soviet threat in the Third World as early as six years ago, but had their reports stifled.

"I think it's a pathetic shame that analysts had this story to tell in 1985 and 1986, but could not get it out," she said.

"During a period when American policy makers deserved and demanded unbiased objective analysis about Soviet foreign policy in the Third World, I believe that they instead, at times, received distorted studies.

"Tragically, these slanted studies became the foundation upon which the executive and legislative branches of our government deliberated momentous foreign policy decisions."

Gates denied such charges in his initial testimony to the committee, but he will reappear before the panel today to respond to specific allegations raised in the third week of hearings on his nomination.

President Bush, who nominated Gates to succeed retired CIA Director William H. Webster, expressed confidence in his nominee before a political trip to Pittsburgh and Louisville.

"I know Bob Gates and I know he wouldn't slant an estimate for some political purpose," Bush told reporters.

Douglas MacEachin, the arms control adviser to the CIA, also defended Gates to the Senate committee, suggesting that the nominee was the sour-grapes victim of analysts who had been wounded by his sometimes abrasive criticism of their work when he headed the CIA's analysis division.

HEARING: 'This is a bad dream,' Lewis says

attorneys to remove media cameras from the pre-trial hearing, and said he would rule Oct. 21 on whether the case should be handled by a lower court.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said his courtroom appearance, in which he sat silently behind his attorneys, was a "sobering experience."

After his attorneys and Travis County prosecutors argued over interpretations of state law, Lewis, who has been a House members since 1971, said, "It makes me a little bit wary of what we do in the Legislature."

Lewis was indicted Dec. 28 on charges that he accepted a gift from a prominent San Antonio law firm and did not report it on his public disclosure statements.

A trial date has been pushed back because of the regular legislative session and two special sessions this summer. State law provides for lawmakers who are involved in court proceedings to receive a delay due to legislative sessions.

Perkins set a preliminary hearing Tuesday, but when Lewis was nearly two hours late, he forfeited the speaker's $5,000 bonds on each charge. Lewis then surrendered to authorities and stayed in the Travis County Jail until Perkins reinstated the bonds.

Lewis said he wasn't told he had to be at that hearing until late Monday when he was on a hunting vacation on a ranch outside El Paso.

By the time he arrived in Austin, and was on his way to the courthouse, Perkins had already acted, he said.

On Wednesday, Lewis' attorney Bill Willms argued that media cameras should be removed from the proceeding. "The additional intrusion of the cameras will only poison this already poisoned atmosphere," he said.

But Perkins said in criminal cases judges are given discretion on whether cameras can be allowed inside the courtroom. For the preliminary hearings, Perkins said he would allow one television video camera, and one still photographer.

On the issue of whether the case should be put in a county court at law, Willms argued that the misdemeanor indictments against Lewis did not relate to his duties and therefore could not be considered allegations of official misconduct.

Travis County Assistant District Attorney Mike Lynch said the allegations did encompass official misconduct and could be tried in a state district court.

Perkins did not consider any other motions. Willms has asked that Perkins remove himself from the case, and that the trial be held in another location because of pretrial publicity.

AWARDS: President rubs shoulders with country stars broadcast live nationally by CBS.

Tanya Tucker, who gave birth to a baby boy earlier Wednesday, won female vocalist of the year for the first time in four years as a finalist.

Tucker, 32, known for her songs "Delta Dawn" and "Down to My Last Teardrop," was at an undisclosed hospital. She and the baby, named Beau Grayson, were in good condition.

"I was sitting here watching," she said from her hospital room. "I had no idea I'd win."

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, were voted vocal group of the year for the fourth straight time in their farewell awards show together. Naomi Judd is leaving the concert circuit in December because of hepatitis while daughter Wynonna launches a solo career.

"Every ending is a new beginning," Naomi Judd said.

The husband-wife songwriting team of Boudleaux and Felice Bryant, who composed such hit records as "All I Have to Do Is Dream" and "Bye Bye Love," was chosen for the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Boudleaux Bryant died in 1987 at age 67. Felice Bryant, 66, who is still active as a composer, accepted the award.

The Kentucky HeadHunters, wearing Future Farmers of America jackets, won best group for the second straight year and million-selling singer Travis Tritt was voted the Horizon Award as the most promising newcomer.

Jo Walker-Meador, the retiring executive director of the CMA, was given a special award of excellence.

Finalists for entertainer of the year, the top honor, were Reba McEntire, Clint Black, Gill, George Strait and Brooks. Strait won the honor the last two years.

Up for best male vocalist were Black, Brooks, Strait and Alan Jackson. Black won in 1990.

Other finalists for top female singer were Patty Loveless, Kathy Mattea, McEntire and Lorrie Morgan.

Winners were chosen by the 6,000 voting members of the CMA, mostly singers, musicians, songwriters and others who make their living in country music.

The show was moved from its traditional Monday night to Wednesday in order to avoid a programming conflict with "ABC Monday Night Football."

A similar organization, the Los Angeles-based Academy of Country Music, had its awards show in April and named Brooks entertainer of the year.

PLAN: U.S. Justice Department gives approval worked to develop the accepted plan, said it was designed to group voters according to their common concerns and needs. His district is considered the "minority" district, covering mainly south and east Midland.

"I'm very pleased it was accepted, as I thought it would be," DeVaughn said. "I felt it was the most equitable way to design the districts in the best interest of each citizen. I'm very anxious to see it put into place."

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the plan was successful because of community support.

"We got a lot of input from the minority community," he said. "We drew it basically to satisfy the community and our legal obligations."

Under the new plan, District 1 includes a wide band of north Midland from east to west, taking in major areas of growth. District 4, which includes southwest Midland and the airport, takes in an area of growth to the west.

District 3 is the "heart of the city" under the new plan, covering heavily populated central Midland. District 2 lost northeast Midland, but took in much of southwest Midland, along U.S. Highway 80, and balanced a population deficiency by including a small section of central Midland as well.

The city, county and hospital district used demographer Del Taebel as an adviser in an attempt to develop plans that would mesh well, Reagan said.

"The demographics of this can be very complex," he said. "We worked very hard to avoid voter confusion. I think it worked out. All the plans fit together very well."

Justice Department officials have been reviewing the city's plan since late July. In early September, they requested supplemental information about the plan and responded positively Tuesday, at the end of a 60-day review period.

Reagan said he considers the plan to be effective immediately. The only change voters may see, however, is a different number on their voter registration cards.

County Elections Administrator Betty Calvert has divided the voting precincts among the redrawn districts. She said she plans to list new district numbers on the cards this year.

District 1 will include precincts 204, 206, 210, 211, 404, 407, 408 and 409. District 2 covers precincts 104, 209, 304, 305, 306, 308 and 309.

District 3 includes precincts 205, 207, 208, 212, 307, 402, 403 and 405. District 4 will cover precincts 102, 103, 105, 106 and 406.

But the plan — drafted over a long period of time — may be in jeopardy. A recently approved Congressional redistricting plan divides Midland into three districts and cuts into some current voting precincts. The Justice Department is currently considering that plan, which could force changes to the city's districts.

"It's not been popular," Reagan said. "Nobody expects it to survive a number of lawsuits that have been filed. We really don't think it will last."

The Midland City Council is expected to pass a resolution Tuesday urging federal disapproval of the plan.

"The question facing us is what will they do then," Reagan said. "We've got a good plan, a true success story. We don't want this to throw a monkey wrench into it."

Generals refuse Croatian president's truce offer

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav army battled Wednesday to claim some of the biggest military prizes in secessionist Croatia — the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik and the eastern strongholds of Vukovar and Vinkovci.

As his troops fought the army and Serb insurgents, Croatian President Franjo Tudjman sought a new truce, offering to lift blockades of army facilities in his republic if the Yugoslav military held its fire.

But generals of the Serb-dominated army, angered by what they said was Croatia's refusal to honor a past cease-fire, appeared in no mood to talk.

"Words will not be trusted any more," the army said in a statement issued hours before Tudjman made his offer during a visit to Italy to seek support for Croatia. The republic declared independence June 25, but has not been recognized by any major European power.

Croatia radio said Tudjman suggested both sides stop fighting at 4 a.m. today. There was no immediate army response.

The radio also broadcast a letter reportedly sent by Tudjman to President Bush, saying Croatia was under "all-out attack" and appealing for foreign peacekeepers.

The army's push seemed dictated by increasing exasperation with the blockades and the need to strike before its effectiveness is further eroded.

Thousands of recruits have deserted in recent months, and morale has worsened as the Croatian campaign drags on. Heavy fighting into the winter would hamper the army, which relies more on heavy equipment than the Croats.

Many ethnic Serbs in Croatia, who account for 12 percent of the republic's 4.75 million people, say they want to remain part of Yugoslavia rather than be citizens of an independent Croatia. They are supported by Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and some of the army's generals.

Fighting intensified Monday, when the army, accusing Croatian militias of violating a 9-day-old cease-fire, launched an offensive against key Croatian cities.

Early Wednesday, the army issued a new warning to Croatian authorities that it would not tolerate blockades and attacks on military barracks.

The blockades, which Croatian forces began several weeks ago, have forced many soldiers to surrender and gained badly needed military equipment for Croatia. But they also have drawn the army — which Croatia had already accused of helping Serb insurgents — more directly into the fighting.

More than 600 people have been killed in Croatia since the fighting began.

Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency said army troops were in control of Slano, 12 miles north of Dubrovnik, and other soldiers were advancing on the port city from the south.

Reports from Serbian and Croatian media gave differing casualty figures, as they have throughout the war. Belgrade TV said 10 soldiers died, while Tanjug said at least two civilians died and 49 were wounded.

Belgrade TV said five people were killed and 11 wounded in Osijek, the center of the Slavonia region in eastern Croatia that has been the scene of the most fighting since July.

Zagreb radio reported one dead and 27 wounded — most of them civilians — in fierce fighting in Vukovar, with the army using tanks and multi-barreled rocket launchers.

Dubrovik is famed for maintaining independence over the centuries despite repeated attempts to subjugate it, giving the battle for the Adriatic city symbolic significance.

No damage was reported by late Wednesday to its thick-walled old town of narrow cobble-stoned streets, and the local army commander said in a statement that Dubrovnik's medieval heritage would be spared.

New 'discovery' timely happening

The old primary school rhyme asserted that, "In fourteen hundred and ninety-two, Columbus sailed the ocean blue." And now, almost 500 years later, modern Americans may get to know a bit more about his voyage to the New World.

We all know, or should, that Columbus came to the New World with three ships, the Santa Maria, which was his flagship, the Nina and the Pinta. The Santa Maria was blown onto a reef during a storm east of Cap-Haitien, her seams split and she sank.

Now an archaeologist named Daniel Koski-Karell says he believes he has found the wreckage of Christopher Columbus' flagship in waters off the northern coast of Haiti. If he's correct, it would indeed be a great archaeological discovery and just in time for next year's 500th anniversary of Columbus' discovery.

After the wreck of the Santa Maria, which occurred on Christmas Day 1492, Columbus built a fort, left 40 men on the island now called Haiti to search for gold, and headed for Spain on Jan. 14, 1493, sailing from Samana Bay.

Koski-Karell says that he hopes that sometime next year he can pinpoint the site of the fort that Columbus built.

Koski-Karell further says, "To discover and confirm the location of that famous vessel would certainly be one of the greatest accomplishments ever made in the field of underwater archaeology."

The archaeologist's quest should capture the imagination of millions of Americans and others who have an interest in this country's history. Every person in North and South America can relate to Christopher Columbus' discovery. It started the migration which eventually settled this country, and to an extent did the same for South America. Thus, in a way, we all share the fortune of Columbus' "discovery."

But Columbus' impact was even greater. Writing for World Book Encyclopedia, Samuel Eliot Morison noted, "Columbus' voyage to America ranks among history's most important events. It led to lasting contacts between Europe and America and opened new windows to science and to all knowledge. To few people in modern history does the world as we know it owe so great a debt as to Christopher Columbus."

United Way serves as Midland's 'hero'

We at the big Brothers and Big Sisters proudly salute the United Way of Midland as a giant community hero. By recognizing United Way, we are recognizing individual Midlanders such as you, because without you there would be no United Way or Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

Through the generous support to United Way, Big Brothers and Big Sisters along with 16 other human service agencies receive the funds necessary to deliver their respective programs to the citizens of Midland. The significance of this heroic deed is that our board and staff can concentrate on meeting the needs of our community's special young people.

Your support of United Way in 1991 will make a difference. Thank you for giving to United Way.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Oct. 3, the 276 day of 1991. There are 89 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One year ago, on Oct. 3, 1990, West Germany and East Germany ended 45 years of postwar division, declaring the creation of a new unified country in the heart of Europe with festivities that included fireworks and the pealing of church bells.

On this date:

In 1863, President Lincoln declared the last Thursday in November Thanksgiving Day.

In 1922, Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia became the first woman to be seated in the U.S. Senate. (Mrs. Felton, a Democrat, was appointed to serve out the remaining term of Thomas E. Watson.)

In 1941, 50 years ago, Adolf Hitler delivered a speech in Berlin in which he said Russia had been "broken," and would "never rise again."

In 1941, the movie "The Maltese Falcon" — the version starring Humphrey Bogart and directed by John Huston — opened in New York.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the Office of Economic Stabilization and authorized controls on farm prices, rents, wages and salaries.

In 1944, during World War II, U.S. troops cracked the Siegfried Line north of Aachen, Germany.

In 1960, "The Andy Griffith Show" premiered on CBS.

In 1961, 30 years ago, "The Dick Van Dyke Show," also starring Mary Tyler Moore, made its debut on CBS.

In 1962, astronaut Wally Schirra blasted off from Cape Canaveral aboard the Sigma VII on a nine-hour flight.

In 1974, Frank Robinson was named major league baseball's first black manager as he was placed in charge of the Cleveland Indians.

In 1980, four people were killed when a car bomb exploded outside a synagogue in Paris, the latest in a wave of anti-Jewish attacks in France.

In 1988, Discovery completed its four-day mission, the first American shuttle flight since the Challenger disaster.

One year ago: Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made his first known visit to Kuwait since his country seized control of the oil-rich emirate.

JACK ANDERSON

Did Florida thrift have inside track?

WASHINGTON — When savings and loan regulators raided the ruins of David Paul's Centrust Savings Bank in Florida, they came away with a van full of internal documents and a half-dozen taped phone conversations. In one of those conversations, Paul boasted of insider knowledge of the Senate Banking Committee, the congressional overseers of his industry.

Anderson

The setting was early 1989. Paul was a year away from rock bottom when federal regulators would seize his thrift and announce that he had been using it as a "personal piggy bank," and that his "insatiable vanity and greed" had contributed to the thrift's $1.7 billion failure.

In 1989, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was looking to clamp down on thrifts and their risky junk-bond investments. It was the last thing Paul wanted.

In a recorded telephone conversation with one of his Washington lobbyists, Paul was told that there was little chance of derailing the new rules unless a prominent senator leaned on the bank board members.

Paul offered his own insight into two Senate Banking Committee members, Don Riegle, D-Mich., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif:

"There's another piece that you don't know," Paul said. "The deal was cut, you understand. Riegle, who is from Michigan, got the chairmanship of the banking committee when Cranston was next in line for it, under the condition that Riegle would defer to Cranston on the issues dealing with California thrifts."

The Senate Banking Committee was indeed Cranston's for the taking that year, but he allowed Riegle to grab the reins. When we confronted both of them with Paul's version of events, they denied that a deal was ever struck. Cranston told us he didn't take the chairmanship because he had his hands full as Majority Whip. And he said, "I have never asked Riegle to defer to me on any California S&L matter." Riegle's chief of staff said Paul's claim was "nonsense and absurd on its face."

Where would Paul have gotten his version of the deal? The records seized from Paul showed that he and Cranston exchanged chummy mail. And, in the same conversation with the lobbyist, Paul implies he and Cranston saw each other socially. "I was with Alan the other night," Paul said, after dropping the tidbit about Cranston trading away the chairmanship. Then Paul added, "Hey, who's that gal Cranston's dating?"

As we reported earlier, the foundation for Paul's friendship with Cranston was laid in July 1988 when Paul made a $25,000 contribution to a California voter-registration drive — a thinly veiled effort to get more Democrats to the polls in California, and a pet project of Cranston's.

Paul has been branded a "name dropper," and accused by some nervous senators of exaggerating his access to the Senate. But somehow he was able to keep his losing savings and loan open almost two years after regulators recommended that it be shut down. During those two years, Paul treated senators to the use of his corporate jet and yacht, and showered them and others with campaign contributions — more than $200,000 in 1988 alone.

There is no evidence that any senator personally intervened with regulators to keep Paul's thrift open. The one document that federal investigators found interesting was a December 1987 letter signed by some members of the Florida congressional delegation, including Sen. Robert Graham. The letter, to Danny Wall, who was then head of the bank board, implied that regulators were not giving Florida savings and loans a fair shake: "There is a perception among supervisory agents that the entire industry is composed of dishonest people."

Graham's office told us that the letter referred to problems reported by the whole Florida savings and loan industry, and that Paul exaggerated their friendship. But Paul apparently thought he had a loyal soldier in Graham. Former bank board Chairman Ed Gray told our associate Jim Lynch about a conversation he had with Paul in June 1989 about Gray's successor, Danny Wall. "Paul told me that the only way to get through to Wall was through Graham," Gray said.

Americans, unlike legislators, favor limits

DENVER — I have changed my mind. Myriad forms of evidence have driven me to the conclusion that my opposition to limitations on the number of terms legislators — local, state and national — can serve is mistaken. The evidence concerns such disparate matters as municipal garbage collection, interest groups in Sacramento, and 8,331 bounced personal checks on the House side of the U.S. Capitol.

Will

Colorado's enactment of limits last year rebutted the assertion that limits are merely a partisan ploy by Republicans who are unable to beat Democrats in fair fights. Colorado's senators and six members of Congress are evenly divided between the parties and its legislature has Republican majorities in both chambers. Also, in Washington state liberal Democrats are prominent in the drive to enact limits more stringent than Colorado's — retroactive limits. If constitutional, by 1994 they would retire all of Washington's eight congressmen, including Speaker Tom Foley. Furthermore, 70 percent of Americans favor limits.

Of course, an even higher percentage of legislators oppose them — even though the president and a majority of governors live with limits.

True, many great careers are long and long legislative careers would become impossible. However, more talent is excluded from public service by clogging the system with immovable incumbents — and by the atrophy of the talents of incumbents once interested in things other than job security — than would be lost by term limits.

It is said that interest groups will have magnified influence if "rookies" replace "experienced professionals" in legislatures. But then why, in 1990, did so many California interest groups fight so fiercely against the term limits passed by initiative? Because those interests have the incumbents (of both parties, who get the lion's share of campaign contributions) wired. The interests panic at the thought of any disruption of the relationship of mutual aggrandizement that exists between career lobbyists and the permanent government.

When a city like Philadelphia, near bankruptcy, is unwilling to save many millions of dollars by privatizing garbage collection, the inescapable conclusion is that public interest is being sacrificed to the convenience of elected city officials protecting their long-term relationship with the municipal employee unions. Term limits would break the nexus based on long careers in electoral offices.

Mark Petrucca of the University of California, Irvine, argues that the professionalization of politics is incompatible with the core values of representative government. Professionalization entails a relationship between "experts" and "clients," roles that disconnect and distance professionals from what James Madison called "the communion of interests and sympathy of sentiments" that should exist in a republic between the elected and the governed.

Increasingly, Congress creates problems its members then rush forth to "solve." Congress creates programs, which entail bureaucracies; then members act as ombudsmen, intervening on behalf of grateful constituents.

Besides, their private behavior mimics their professional behavior. These "experienced professionals" govern by writing trillions of dollars worth of government checks against insufficient funds. It is called deficit spending.

To govern is to choose. A legislature's primary duty is to budget. Careerism has rendered the professional political class unwilling to make hard choices — the only important kind.

There are many questions about term limits. How many terms are appropriate? Can states constitutionally limit the terms of their congressional delegations? If not how can the political class be brought to heel? Are term limits "undemocratic"? If so, so what? Why did the Founders not establish limits? What will be the sociology of legislatures when service in them cannot be a career, only a leave of absence from real life? What kind of person, at what point in life, will run?

Consider this column fair warning: I shall often recur to this subject, beginning with my next column, wherein we shall see how amateur basketball is becoming a federal project, and why that fact supports the case for term limits.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ART BUCHWALD

You really can't say goodbye to Dr. Seuss

I had the privilege of knowing Ted Geisel, better known as Dr. Seuss. I can't claim that we were bosom buddies, but we did have a few meals together and, when it came to hero worship, I treated him with the same respect as I did Joe DiMaggio.

Buchwald

Every time we met I kept trying to peer into Seuss' ears to find out where all the magic came from.

Dr. Seuss was a role model for writers because he used the English language in such a way that even adults could understand it. Nobody disputes the fact that most writers employ too many words to express an idea. Some feel that the larger their verbiage, the more talented the reader will think they are.

Dr. Seuss never wasted a word. I read that his entire vocabulary was 220 — not including the ones he made up.

You didn't read them, you sang them. Dr. Seuss wrote music — that's why parents enjoyed reading his stories to their children, and that's why children enjoyed reading his stories to their parents.

If you want to know what he was like personally, he was a very dapper person, with a great head of gray hair and a neat beard that was never threatening.

He was a kind and gentle person and interested in everything that was going on. He felt that our present world leaders were more insane than any characters he could invent.

One day, while watching the Watergate hearings, I recalled a book of his called "Marvin K. Mooney" in which Dr. Seuss implores his character to "go, leave, get out!" Instead of "Marvin K. Mooney" I heard myself singing "Richard M. Nixon, will you please go now?"

I called up Seuss and said, "May I have permission to run the Marvin K. Mooney poem with Richard M. Nixon's name?"

He laughed and said, "Be my guest."

An hour later I received a call from Dr. Seuss.

"I explained to Random House what you're about to do and they went through the ceiling. They said I can't take sides on Watergate."

"So," I asked, "What do you want to do?"

Once again he laughed, "Be my guest."

I did and this is how it read:

"Richard M. Nixon, will you please go now!
"The time has come.
"The time has come.
"The time is now.
"Just go.
"Go.
"Go!
"I don't care how.
"You can go by foot.
"You can go by cow.
"Richard M. Nixon, will you please go now!
"You can go on skates.
"You can go on skis.
"You can go in a hat.
"But
"Please go.
"Please!"

(The poem continued until Nixon went.)

Obviously, I have used too many words to say goodbye to the good doctor. But you really can't say goodbye to someone whose work will live forever. As a matter of fact, Seuss is sitting right over there on that bookshelf — next to his good friend, "Marvin K. Mooney."

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Ex-Gorbachev adviser second in command at KGB

■ Soviet Union's new spymaster will eventually head a new foreign intelligence service separate from the KGB.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union's new spymaster said Wednesday that the remaining republics can start their own intelligence agencies, but that breakaway regions will be targets of espionage if they threaten the fragile union.

In his first day on the job, Yevgeny Primakov also displayed keen awareness of his embattled would-be CIA counterpart, Robert Gates, and referred to Gates' confirmation hearings to illustrate how he would — and wouldn't — run his espionage agency.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev appointed Primakov to head the foreign intelligence operations of the KGB, which was implicated in the failed coup attempt in August and is now in the process of being cut apart.

Primakov, Gorbachev's former Middle East adviser, is for now the deputy director of the KGB under radical reformer Vadim Bakatin, who was appointed to oversee the security network after the failed coup led to a purge of its upper echelons.

Primakov said his job will be to gradually spin off the foreign intelligence service into a separate entity with a new, still-unchosen name.

"It will not be called the KGB," he told reporters.

Primakov was vague on the delineation between the domestic and foreign services, but it is widely anticipated the KGB will specialize in domestic security, like the FBI, while Primakov's organization will become the Soviet equivalent of the CIA.

Primakov, 61, said the agency's foreign espionage efforts would extend to areas of the splintering Soviet Union that may ultimately become sovereign states, like the three Baltic nations.

" "I could tell you bluntly, if there is a threat to the interests of the Soviet Union it is natural that (Soviet) intelligence will not avoid an interest in those states," he said. "But (only) if there is a threat."

He also said the 12 remaining republics were free to form their own intelligence agencies, but he hoped they would cooperate with the Soviet foreign espionage service.

"Every republic has to settle this question independently," he said.

Asked whether Soviet spies would continue to use "disinformation" — the circulating of phony information — Primakov claimed that Gates was forced to admit that the CIA made up a story about Soviet involvement in the 1981 assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II.

"I would not like to be in his place when he made such a confession," Primakov said, referring to Gates' confirmation hearings.

Gates, however, made no such admission at his confirmation hearings. He said he would reserve judgment on Soviet involvement until the Soviets open their files on the plot. There were several CIA assessments of the plot, one of which alleged Soviet involvement.

Previously classified CIA material made public Tuesday indicated that the agency's assessment of Soviet complicity was written by analysts under orders. They said Gates circulated this assessment within the Reagan administration with a cover letter misrepresenting it as a consensus analysis.

Primakov said he would end the practice of using journalists as spies, a fundamental change in the Soviet Union's espionage ethic.

He did not rule out economic espionage to help smooth the difficult road the Soviet Union faces in its move to a free market democracy.

International terrorism, and the spread of nuclear or other weapons of mass destruction, also would be targets of Soviet foreign intelligence, he said.

Primakov said he does not want a wholesale purge of the foreign service, which he said could hurt already plunging morale. He criticized the KGB's brutal control over the Soviet people but defended its expertise in foreign espionage.

"We should avoid moral damage to an organization that is being severely criticized," he said.

He appeared less willing than Bakatin to overhaul the agency and disagreed with Bakatin's recent contention that secret agents should be removed from Soviet embassies. Primakov said many nations use their embassies for espionage.

The Arab expert and former deputy foreign minister, who was involved in efforts last year to mediate a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf conflict, said he wanted to recruit young, professional agents; emphasize scientific analysis; and erase the KGB's thuggish image.

"If (espionage) means people in gray coats standing around the corners of houses and listening to other people's conversations, and using clubs from time to time, then my appointment would seem to be unnatural," he said.

Coup leaders eat well in prison, Tass says

MOSCOW (AP) — Former officials accused of leading the hardline coup will not face trial until next year, and meanwhile are dining well on meals such as pea soup and boiled potatoes with herring, news agencies reported Wednesday.

A spokesman for the Russian prosecutor's office denied press reports that the men were living in unhealthy prison conditions, the Soviet news agency Tass said.

The spokesman, who was not identified, said the prisoners are allowed to receive packages from home — some containing costly treats such as chocolates and caviar — and meet monthly with family members.

The seven surviving members of the eight-man committee accused of organizing the failed Aug. 18-21 coup have been charged with high treason. Also charged are several top KGB, military and presidential staff officials.

The prosecutor's office told the Russian Information Agency that their trial will not be held until 1992. The agency said it was still unclear whether the trial will be open or closed to the public.

The daily newspaper Izvestia had reported earlier that two of the former officials, KGB chief Vladimir Kryuchkov and former Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov, had filed official complaints about receiving small quantities of food. It said that former Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov's eyes hurt from a light in his cell that was kept burning round-the-clock.

Other media also carried reports about complaints of too little food and cold, uncomfortable cells.

But the spokesman for the Russian prosecutor told Tass on Wednesday that the former officials' daily meals contained "sufficient quantities of meat, fish, butter and other foodstuffs." He said Monday's menu featured pea soup, vermicelli with meat, stewed fruit, boiled potatoes with herring, bread, butter and tea with sugar.

The spokesman said that due to their advanced age and poor health, the former officials were taken off the standard prison diet and were receiving meals reserved for Russian Interior Ministry law enforcement personnel. No details were given about the normal prison diet.

The spokesman also said the men also were allowed to receive up to 10 pounds of food monthly from relatives.

On Sept. 15, Vasily Starodubtsev, former chairman of the Farmer's Union of the U.S.S.R., received a package containing chocolate, walnuts, smoked meat, dried apricots, coffee, chicken, apples and three jars of black caviar, the spokesman said.

He said the former officials' health was being monitored constantly by a medical staff. Former parliamentary spokesman Anatoly Lukyanov had been transferred earlier to an Interior Ministry hospital after complaining of declining health.

The prosecutor's spokesman said the men were kept in cells with two or three other prisoners, and that none of them had filed complaints about cellmates.

He said they were allowed to listen to the radio, read newspapers and take daily open-air strolls.

Eagles eat reindeer?

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Herders' claims that eagles eat more than 1,000 reindeer a year are hard to swallow, a newspaper suggested Wednesday.

The herders in the northern district of Porsanger have demanded state compensation for up to 1,300 reindeer they claim have fallen prey to ravenous eagles in the past 12 months.

Only five eagles have been officially reported in the country, reported the Oslo tabloid Dagbladet.

Reunified Germany's birthday marred by extremist rampages

BERLIN (AP) — Reunited Germany celebrates its first birthday today, but the party mood has been dampened by extremist rampages, unemployment and lingering international concerns.

The northern port of Hamburg is throwing the first anniversary bash, complete with speeches, tall ships, kiddie entertainment and concerts.

Just one year ago, thousands of Germans joined Chancellor Helmut Kohl during a midnight ceremony at Berlin's Reichstag, the country's historic parliament building. Many were moved to tears of joy as Germany ended its Cold War separation.

Twelve months later, Kohl says he feels "every reason for optimism" about the future.

Yet Germans are grappling with dozens of problems.

For nearly three weeks, right-wing extremists have been attacking refugees and their shelters across the country. The assaults, window smashing and rock-throwing have brought back memories of Adolf Hitler's Nazi thugs.

"Hatred of foreigners, anti-Semitism and intolerance toward minorities are still dangers for German democratic society and its political credibility," the OETV public employees union warned.

In the state of Brandenburg near Berlin, police said they were stepping up patrols in expectation of further right-wing attacks today.

Other of Germany's difficulties range from the local classroom to the international community.

A top-to-bottom revamping of eastern Germany's schools has led to confusion and frustration among students.

It will take years to decide who owns land and other property in former East Germany. The region remains volatile, despite the "boom town" atmosphere created by western German investors.

Increasingly, eastern Germans are saying that some aspects of their lives were better under the Communist regime.

Eastern German businesses have collapsed, leaving more than 2.5 million out of 9 million workers unemployed or in make-work jobs. And of the eastern Germans still employed, about 400,000 commute to former West Germany to make a living.

"I expect unemployment in eastern Germany to peak in the winter," says federal labor chief Heinrich Franke.

Meanwhile, the jobless rate in the west remains at a relatively low 6.2 percent, and the economy there is booming.

Soon after the Berlin Wall fell on Nov. 9, 1989, Kohl put Germany on the fast track to unification. He had to convince other nations that a powerhouse Germany of 80 million people would not pose a threat to world peace.

In a radio interview this week, Kohl said concern in foreign captials "has not been overcome."

Germany's efforts to play a greater international role sometimes stumble over relics of the Nazi past.

After Yugoslavia's civil strife broke out in June, Germany threatened to recognize Croatia and Slovenia. However, Kohl's government backed off after Serbian media accused Germany of trying to dominate Europe with a "Fourth Reich."

"You have to admit that German foreign policy has become more complicated through unification," Kohl told Deutsche Welle radio.

German leaders have used the anniversary of unification to renounce once again the policies that helped start two world wars.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Germans are determined "to draw the lessons from the disastrous chapters of our history in this century."

Even the location of the national celebration is designed to underscore Germany's break with an authoritarian past in favor of a strong federal system. Each year, the main gala will be held in a different state, rather than in the capital of Berlin.

NATO to call for cuts in gravity bombs

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO will go beyond President Bush's plans to scrap ground-based tactical nuclear weapons in Europe by also calling for sharp cuts in nuclear bombs carried by planes, a senior alliance official said Wednesday.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said plans to reduce gravity bombs would be unveiled at a November summit of the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Bush announced last week that the United States would withdraw from Europe all nuclear artillery shells and nuclear warheads for short-range missiles.

With the elimination of those weapons, analysts say NATO's nuclear stockpile in Europe would consist almost entirely of bombs that are dropped from warplanes.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said in an interview that the Europe-oriented alliance hopes to reduce nuclear weapons on the continent to a minimum, but does not plan to eliminate all of them.

He said a nuclear deterrent is still needed "in order to prevent any kind of use of force or war — be it nuclear or conventional."

While scrapping ground-based tactical nuclear weapons, he said Europe would continue to rely on air-based weapons.

But the senior official said the number of such plane-launched missiles or bombs would also be sharply reduced.

Intermediate range missiles in Europe were eliminated under a December 1987 treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Jury awards trustee close to $50,000

■ Jurors determine city employee and Adela Marmolejo were equally negligent in the 1987 accident in which Marmolejo was hit by pickup as she was crossing street.

The jury decided each was 50 percent negligent to the cause of the accident.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A city of Midland employee and Adela Marmolejo were equally negligent in an accident where a city vehicle struck Ms. Marmolejo as she crossed a street four years ago, a jury in the 238th District Court determined Wednesday.

The 12-person jury, after about five hours of deliberation, also awarded Ms. Marmolejo $49,339 for damages — almost $6,000 less than a settlement offered last year.

Ms. Marmolejo, 34, a Midland Independent School District board trustee, was seeking $280,000. She declined comment following the verdict.

"In our view, the verdict is reasonable," said Leslie McLauglin, who represented the city.

The trial, which began Monday, consisted largely of conflicting testimony as to whether Ms. Marmolejo was in the crosswalk when struck by a city pickup truck and whether various medical problems she suffers resulted from the accident.

The Feb. 3, 1987, accident occurred when Cynthia Karen Hilton, the driver of the truck, was traveling north on Main Street, turned left onto Front Street and subsequently hit Ms. Marmolejo, who was walking south across Front Street.

Ms. Hilton testified that Ms. Marmolejo was about 10 feet outside of the crosswalk when the accident occurred.

Ms. Marmolejo and an eyewitness, who saw Ms. Marmolejo just before and after impact, testified that the plaintiff was within the crosswalk.

The jury decided each was 50 percent negligent to the cause of the accident.

In addition to how and why the accident occurred, the jury listened to in-depth medical testimony from depositions about the extent of injuries suffered.

Testimony indicated that Ms. Marmolejo sustained ear, elbow, neck and shoulder injuries from the accident and has continued to suffer chronic headaches and other problems.

The defense presented testimony that many of Ms. Marmolejo's medical problems may have existed separate from the accident.

Breakdown of damages awarded were: physical pain and mental anguish since the accident to date — $10,000; future physical pain and mental anguish — $5,000; medical expenses — $19,539.04; loss of earnings — $4,800; physical impairment — $10,000; disfigurement — nothing.

Ms. Marmolejo declined two settlements offered in the past, court records indicated. In 1989, a $47,000 settlement was refused and in September 1990, $55,000 was turned down.

Traffic in far north Midland, near the intersection of Midland Drive and Mockingbird Lane, points to continuing population growth in that section of the city. Agreements are pending with developers to renovate both roads for improved access to homes there.

Agreement calls for extending city street

■ City and developers will improve Mockingbird Lane in northwest Midland.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

City officials have fashioned two agreements with major developers in north and west Midland for projects to extend and expand streets.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the projects signal continued growth and development with a healthy number of new home buyers each year.

"We're consistently issuing building permits for 250-300 new homes each year," he said.

Under phase I of an agreement with local developers in a new plat known as Mockingbird Heights, the city will fund two-thirds of construction on a strip of Mockingbird Lane, an east-west street north of Loop 250.

City leaders have agreed to spend $180,000.

"In situations like this it's expected to benefit both the city and the development," McGregor said. The first phase of the area's development, under builders Gilbert Bates and Bill Brown, includes slightly more than 100 lots. The homes would be grouped together on Mockingbird between Midland Drive and Midkiff.

Brown and Bates will be responsible for the construction of streets within the development and will pay the remaining third of the Mockingbird Lane improvement costs.

"It's going to be five or six months before we're ready to sell but we felt this was the way the city's trying to grow," Brown said. "Prime residential (land) really has to have a good street going to it."

The street, now merely a paved roadway, would be built with five lanes, including a continuous left-turn lane, although it would not yet connect Midland Drive with Midkiff. Engineering Director Harvey Hahsen said that may be the next extension of Mockingbird.

10-year-old Midland girl testifies in sexual assault trial

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 10-year-old girl described how she was allegedly raped twice last summer to a 12-person jury during the first day of a sexual assault case Wednesday in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court.

Raymond Glynn Reed, 30, of Midland pleaded not guilty to two counts of aggravated sexual assault and two counts of indecency with a child.

Reed is alleged to have assaulted the girl, then 8-years-old, at the girl's south-central home around September 1990.

According to testimony by the girl's 36-year-old mother, 13 people were residing at her three-bedroom, one-bath house when the incidents are alleged to have taken place.

The victim's mother and two teen-age sons and a teen-age daughter lived at the home, testimony indicated. A boyfriend of the mother also resided at the home, the mother said.

The mother's niece and her son, 7, and daughter, 4, moved in during June 1990 "because she (the niece) was having financial problems," the mother testified. Reed, the niece's boyfriend, later moved in, according to testimony.

In addition, a third woman, the mother's cousin, lived at the house with her two small children, testimony revealed.

During that time, the victim began acting differently, the mother testified.

"She would get agitated easily ... like screaming," the mother said.

The girl, who has a history of kidney problems, also began to have increased bed-wettings and was found to suffer from infections, the mother testified.

But the cause of the problems were not known until the girl visited her natural father in Fort Worth during the Christmas holidays, testimony indicated.

The father testified that his daughter expressed a fear toward men.

The girl told her father she was sexually assaulted by "Tootie," a nickname for Reed, testimony revealed.

The girl testified, with the aid of dolls, how Reed forcibly had sexual intercourse with her, once in her bedroom and another time in the kitchen.

"He told me not to tell anybody," she said.

Other testimony on Wednesday included a medical doctor who examined the girl and stated that the girl's genital injuries were consistent with sexual abuse.

The trial will resume this morning and is expected to conclude today.

According to the indictment against Reed, the prosecution is seeking an enhancement of the charges because of previous criminal convictions.

Reed has been convicted of felony theft of oilfield equipment and felony burglary of a habitation, officials said.

Reed remained in jail Wednesday on charges of aggravated sexual assault, parole violation and various local ordinance violations, jail officials said.

Consul general, city officials discuss trade

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The proposed free trade agreement between the United States, Mexico and Canada weighs heavily on the mind of Oliver Farres, who has served as the Consul General of Mexico in Dallas for the past seven years.

And on Wednesday, Farres met with Mayor Carroll Thomas and members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce to promote the agreement, which is currently being negotiated by the three nations.

"We (Mexico) have eliminated the red tape," said Farres. "We have reduced tariffs by about 10 percent and eliminated almost all tariff barriers. The doors have been opened."

An approved agreement between the three countries would create the world's largest free trade zone, Farres said. It would include approximately 362 million consumers with a combined gross national product of $6 trillion.

According to Farres, a draft is expected to be drawn up in early 1992. Meanwhile, trade between the countries continues full-speed ahead.

Smith introduces illegal alien bill

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Aliens who repeatedly try to sneak into the United States or commit crimes here would face new penalties under a bill introduced Wednesday by a Texas congressman who said current laws encourage offenders to simply "try, try again."

Rep. Lamar Smith, a San Antonio Republican, said his bill is aimed at "illegal immigrants who come to this country for many reasons, but the primary reason is wealth... too many aliens break our laws to make money and get away with it."

Smith's measure would create a mandatory, minimum 10-day detention and a $1,000 fine for any alien detained while trying to cross a U.S. border illegally for the fifth time. And it would also compel resident aliens convicted of crimes, but released on parole, to register with federal authorities pending deportation proceedings.

Smith, a member of the House Judiciary Committee that oversees immigration law, said foreign-born inmates make up as much as a third of the U.S. federal prison population. While out on parole, many of these aliens go on to commit new crimes against U.S. citizens before deportation orders are processed, he said.

"We need to know how many criminal aliens we have in our country, and we need to know where they are so we can deport them once resources are available," Smith said at a news conference to outline his new bill.

Only a federal immigration court can order deportation of resident aliens convicted of felonies in the United States. Smith's bill would require convicted aliens to keep authorities abreast of their whereabouts during the period between prison release and deportation.

Failure to register would mean paroled aliens could be deported immediately and fined $1,000, said Smith, who conceded that most aliens would probably be unable to pay the fines.

Smith said there are at least 1 million illegal aliens living in the United States, citing figures from the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Smith said his measure also would help bottle up the porous U.S. border by imposing a "real deterrent" against aliens who repeatedly try to enter the United States illegally. Currently, aliens caught sneaking across the border are simply deported, only "to try again tomorrow," Smith said.

"When an alien breaks our laws by entering the country illegally today, he is usually just sent back across the border to try again tomorrow," Smith said. "In essence, we tell aliens, 'If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.'"

Smith said federal sanctions against U.S. employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens has "helped reduce the economic magnet... but it is not enough." He said the Democratic-controlled Congress has failed to provide the Border Patrol with enough money to do its job.

Duke Austin, an INS spokesman, hailed Smith's bill but acknowledged that without new funding, it would be unable to enforce either provision. Monitoring repeat attempts to penetrate the U.S. border, he added, would be particularly difficult since illegal aliens often use fake identification.

Abilene woman known as 'mom' to foreign students

ABILENE (AP) — The past two years at Abilene Christian University, Kim Stockdell officially was the administrative coordinator for international student affairs, a fancy title that she says meant "Mom."

Mrs. Stockdell has been nurturing the university's international students for almost a decade.

And despite a move this year to Abilene High to teach business communications and law, she continues to whip up huge feasts, provide sleeping space, nurse illnesses, provide rides, field midnight phone calls and plan camping excursions for the globe-trotting students.

"They may not understand a word I say when they first meet me, but they know I love them unconditionally without reservation," Mrs. Stockdell said. "When they walk in my front door, I think they're great. They have to lose that greatness in my eyes.

"... They call me 'Mom,' 'my dear mama,' and 'Mommie.' It's an endearing thing because they know if they need something, they can come here. They don't have to depend on me because I help integrate them into the system and give them the confidence to do things for themselves.

"What I do takes no brains. It just takes time, energy and lots of love."

Mrs. Stockdell's concern for the international students sprouted in 1982, when she began preparing Sunday supper for a few African and Thai students.

Those meals have snowballed into huge cookouts for as many as 200 people, regular dine-ins at her home for up to 50 students, sleepovers and hayrides, annual Christmas parties, and trips to about a dozen states and Mexico.

At various times, Mrs. Stockdell and her husband, Tom, put up students and their parents for days at a time in their home, which she dubbed "the international campus center."

"We wanted them to have an American home away from home and to feel loved," she said.

"... As a general rule, international students have a world perspective that makes them interesting. Americans are very surface — we don't get to know people well. International students may not know a lot of people, but the ones they do know, they know well. They're not so concerned about themselves that they mow right

Honorary pallbearers are to be Jay Watson, Mark Crossland, Jeff Crossland, Charlie Spirka and Henry Syler.

Richard Hughston

Services for Richard L. Hughston of Midland have been set for 9 a.m. today at First Presbyterian Church with the Revs. Dick Braun and Steve Shore officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. today at the Restland Cemetery in Dallas. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

He died Monday at his residence.

Pete Buntin

Services for Pete J. Buntin of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Charles D. Taylor of Westside Church of Christ officiating. Don Mitchell will assist. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Wednesday at his home following a lengthy illness.

Buntin was born Jan. 8, 1916, in Graham, where he was reared. He later lived in the Gorman area, where he attended school.

He married Betty Joyce Bushell on June 4, 1942. The couple moved to Fort Stockton and then to Midland in 1952. Buntin had been a district manager for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. He retired in 1986.

He was preceded in death by his parents, one brother and a sister.

Survivors include his wife; one son, John W. Buntin III of Midland; two daughters, Era Joyce Weigel Patterson of Midland and Shedella Gail Dale of Waco; two brothers, Guy Buntin of Arlington and Rupert Buntin of Gorman; one sister, Rita Capers of Fort Stockton; seven grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Mary L. Pannell

Services for Mary Louise Pannell of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral home Chapel. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Pannell was born May 17, 1913, in Odessa and was reared in Ector County. She attended schools in Odessa.

She met and married the late B.C. "Pap" Pannell in 1934 following graduation from Odessa High School. They lived in a number of places in West Texas, including Wink, Sundown, Seagraves and Odessa. They moved to Midland in 1946, where Pannell co-founded Pannell Brothers Concrete Company with his brother.

Mrs. Pannell had contined to live in Midland following her husband's death in 1978.

Survivors include two sons, Milton Lee Pannell of Lubbock and Carl Ray Pannell of Midland; one daughter, Shirley Louise Morgan of Dallas; two brothers, Angus Voss of Odessa and B.C. Voss of Arlington; eight grandchildren; five great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

over people."

Mrs. Stockdell, a former accountant, said she can afford the mounds of meat, pounds of veggies and loaves of bread she serves by shopping smartly. For instance, if chicken is on sale for 29 cents per pound, she will buy 100 pounds.

"The students ask 'How can we ever repay you?' I say, 'You probably can't. I'll probably never be in your country needing this kind of help. But someone will.' "

Mrs. Stockdell admits that the students' immersion into American culture can create comic situations.

Such was the case of an African who awoke one winter morning to find a strange, cold, white powdery substance on the Stockdells' lawn. He bagged up a handful of the stuff to send home, but later found nothing but water.

Other episodes are more sentimental. One Japanese girl who became fond of Mrs. Stockdell's generous hugs told her "foster mom" that she was nervous about returning home to a father she never had touched.

Many of the approximately 150 international students say Mrs. Stockdell, 32, succeeds in achieving her three goals of giving them a good experience with an American family, with Christians, and with ACU and Abilene.

"She looks after the welfare of students," Suan Moh, a junior from Singapore, said recently at International Night at ACU's student center. "She's more people-oriented than task-oriented. My first day here, she checked to see if I'd done all my necessities — like getting an ID and knowing how to open my mailbox."

Bahamian Brian Rolle added, "She really adapts us to the culture and gives us a family away from home. The first time I met her, I couldn't believe a tiny lady had that much energy."

Although this summer Mrs. Stockdell left ACU and the position she created under the direction of now university president Dr. Royce Money, she received the school's Serving Award in August.

Four people hurt in two-car accident

Staff Report

A two-car accident Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of Wall Street and Midkiff Road injured four people in a vehicle driven by 19-year-old Coral Baeza of Midland, police said.

Jesus Benavides, 27, of Odessa was cited for disregarding a traffic signal after he allegedly ran a red light at 3:29 p.m. while traveling west on Wall Street, police said.

Benavides, Baeza and Prisella Arovendarez, 26, another passenger in Baeza's vehicle, were not injured. Baeza was cited for having an expired registration, police said.

The names of the injured were not known at presstime.

STREET: Officials, developers agree to roadway expansion

(From 1B)

"It's conceivable that it could be extended further east if that area is developed," he said. McGregor said he expects Mockingbird Lane to become the city's next major east-west arterial street, similar to Wadley Avenue.

The second phase of the agreement with Bates and Brown, which is speculative at present, would include lots to the west and north of the first phase. The city has considered a plan to renovate Midland Drive north of Mockingbird as well, effectively extending it by about one mile.

"We haven't committed to that yet," McGregor said. Improvements to that street are about two years away, officials have said. City councilmen earlier said they would participate in phase II and III, which extends further north, if there is a need.

"If it all works out, picking up that part of Midland Drive would really be a help," Brown said.

Hansen said development further north in that area, beyond the tentative plans of Brown and Bates, would require installation of a major sewage line — a factor that might limit developers' plans.

"We've got the line to sufficiently meet the needs of these homes, but further development is going to require some major investment," he said.

To the west, Doug Henson, president of SBC Corp., is looking to the future of Grassland Estates, located west of Loop 250 south of Wadley Avenue. The city has plans to extend Wadley west past the loop to create better access to George Abell Junior High School, expected to be built there by September 1993.

After a recent expansion, Henson's development now totals about 170 lots which he says are filling up at a steady rate. He plans future expansion to the north and west.

"Ultimately, Wadley would be a second entrance to the development," he said. "We've got a master plan that would go from (State Highway) 191 to Wadley. But it could be three years, and it could be 15 years. It just depends on absorption."

He said Midland's growth rate appears to be strong.

"Our building permits have varied, of course," he said. "But in the last two or three years it has been around 250 to 270 (per year). That's a solid industry."

Bell seeks increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission will consider in mid-December a request by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to increase charges for telephone calling options including call waiting, call forwarding, three-way calling and speed dialing.

The company on Tuesday asked the PUC for the $20 million change, which is opposed by consumer lawyers.

tinues to grow because American consumers prefer foreign goods. The U.S. must ask 'can I make it by myself or should I increase my strength?' Canada joined because they shared that philosophy," said Farres. "Together we will all be able to increase our competitive edge."

"There is much optimism in all three capitals — Ottawa, Washington and Mexico City — that this will be a win-win-win situation," said Farres.

Farres does not believe the trade agreement would cause widespread layoffs in the United States.

"Even if (American) companies go to Mexico, a good part of the components will be made in the U.S. This would create more jobs," said Farres. "This is unlike Japan, where components cannot be made here due to transportation costs."

According to Farres, an estimated 500,000 new jobs have already been created in the United States as a result of negotiations.

Currently, Mexico trails only Canada and Japan as the United States' third largest trading partner, he added. In 1990, U.S.-Mexican trade reached $58.6 billion, twice the level of 1986. The United States accounts for two-thirds of Mexico's overall trade.

"We want businessmen from the U.S. and Mexico to develop strong business relationships. Don't let anyone else tell you differently," said Farres. "One of the biggest problems is ignorance of each other. We have similar values and situations. Geography has put us together and we need to make the most of it ... it is a marriage without a divorce."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Jewelry theft

Staff Reports

ODESSA — Three Odessa men have been arrested in connection with the theft of more than $28,000 worth of jewelry from an Odessa residence, officials said.

Travis Fisher, 31, co-owner of Fisher Jewelers in Odessa, was charged with second and third degree felony theft Tuesday and was released from Ector County Jail after posting the $12,500 bond, officials said.

Kerry Fisher, 35, was also released from Ector County Jail Tuesday after posting $1,500 bond for a second degree felony theft charge, Odessa Police reports said. He was also arrested on Tuesday.

On Sept. 23, Christopher De La Cruz, 20, was arrested and charged with burglary of a habitation. On Monday he was released from the Ector County Jail after posting the $15,000 bond, police reports said.

De La Cruz was arrested after Odessa Crimestoppers featured his alleged offense as the Sept. 17 Crime of the Week, officials said.

The other arrests were made after the Odessa Police Department detectives continued the investigation, officials said.

A fourth suspect has been identified and is being investigated, officials said.

Guilty plea

A 25-year-old Fort Worth man entered a guilty plea to drug-related charges in U.S. District Court on Wednesday, federal records stated.

Jimmy Sherman entered his plea in connection with his arrest in August. He was arrested with five other people for possession of about 15 ounces of crack cocaine.

Sherman faces five charges although the government plans to drop four of the charges at the time of sentencing, records stated.

Sentencing is scheduled for Nov. 20.

Drug charge

A Midland man was charged with possession of a controlled substance Monday morning after an officer stopped him for a traffic violation.

Jaime Galondo Guevara, 24, 4315 Neely, Apt. 1007, was pulled over for defective brake lights when he was observed allegedly attempting to hide a rolled dollar bill containing less than a 28th of a gram of cocaine in his pocket, police said.

Guevara was released from the Midland County jail after posting the $5,000 bond.

Bentsen prepares for 1994 election

By Jackie Koszczuk
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Though he turned 70 this year, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Wednesday he has no plans to retire any time soon and is in fact preparing to run for re-election in 1994.

Bentsen's future has been the source of speculation in Texas political circles over the past five months as it became increasingly clear he would stay out of next year's presidential race.

Given his age and his two decades in the Senate, some state Democrats had believed Bentsen would either invest his considerable political capital in a last campaign for the White House or serve out his fourth term and retire from Congress in 1994.

Then, Bentsen will be 73 years old, and would be in the position of deciding whether he wants to seek another six-year term.

At a breakfast meeting with reporters Wednesday, Bentsen scoffed at a suggestion that he may be ready to retire when his term is up.

"No, do I look like it?" said Bentsen, who often speaks with pride of the longevity in his family.

His father, Lloyd Bentsen Sr. of McAllen, died at age 95 in an 1989 automobile accident while driving his car.

Bentsen, who was the vice presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket in 1988, recently began restocking his renowned war chest. About $130,000 poured into his campaign fund during the first six months of this year, compared to only $15,000 in the previous six months, when the fund was barely active, according to Federal Election Commission reports.

He has scheduled two major political fund-raisers this fall, the first events to be held in preparation for the 1994 election. One is planned on Oct. 21 in Dallas and the second on Nov. 11 in Houston.

"The man is vibrant, active and has a long, impressive legislative agenda," said Ed Martin, executive director of the state Democratic Party. "I think he'd like to see the fruits of that agenda come to pass."

Though he seems to have given up hopes of waging a campaign against President Bush next year, Bentsen would be in an ideal position to press his proposals as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee if the Democrats can win back the White House in either 1992 or 1996, Martin said.

His ideas about improved health care, tax fairness for the middle-income earners and correcting the trade imbalance would no longer face the kind of obstacles they do in a Republican White House, Martin said.

Bentsen's plans are bound to disappoint a few prominent state Democrats who had hopes of running for the Senate but who wouldn't think of crossing Bentsen to do so.

Population growth outlined

Minorities expected to provide state's growth over next 20 years

■ Texas A&M economist says businesses must see to it that minorities receive education to keep the businesses going.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Texas work force in 20 years will consist largely of young minorities who could be under-educated and unskilled unless changes are made, Texas A&M University economists warned Wednesday.

Steven Murdock of the university's Texas Population Data Center said the state's minority population showed dramatic growth during the 1980s and is expected to provide nearly all of the growth in the next two decades.

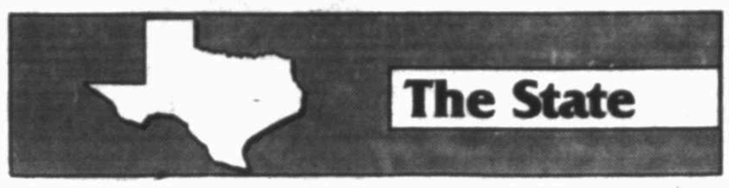
"The minority population is going to present either a tremendous opportunity or a tremendous problem," Murdock said.

"One out of every two people added in Texas (during the 1980s) was Hispanic. Overall, two out of three people in Texas and the United States were minorities," he said.

In the coming decades, he said Texas' population, like the nation, will be largely middle-aged and increasingly minorities.

"IF YOU think about it, we've got the next 20 years to get things fixed," Murdock said.

Murdock was one of four Texas A&M professors who presented the Economic Outlook 1992 for the university's Center for Business & Economic Analysis and the Texas Bankers Association. The seminar already has traveled to Dallas and San Antonio and will be presented in Austin today.



Murdock said demographics show roughly 40 percent of Hispanics are dropping out of high school. In 1980, the latest figures available, 51 percent of the state's Hispanics had less than an eighth grade education, compared to 25 percent of blacks and 18 percent of Anglos.

At the same time, the mean family income for Hispanics was $15,670 and $15,573 for blacks compared to the average $24,787 for Anglo Texas families. Roughly 28 percent of Hispanics and blacks were living below the poverty level, compared to 12 percent for Anglos.

"We have to ask ourselves: 'Can Texas really be a high-tech state if a large proportion of our work force ... has an eighth-grade education or less?' "

Murdock said it is up to the business community to see that minorities receive an education to keep the businesses developing and working. As the nation's population ages, he said revenues for federal and state programs will increasingly come from the minority population. And with an educated work force, Texas could offer the United States one of the youngest labor markets in 2025.

"THESE PEOPLE who are coming into our work force are the people who will be paying for it," Murdock said of programming. "One the other side, if we can provide skills for those minorities, we will have a relatively young work force.

"These kinds of changes we're talking about here and the implications of them are important... and very critical in determining your future as well as our future," Murdock said.

Jared E. Hazleton, an A&M economist, presented an overall bleak picture of the state's economic growth for the coming years, but he predicted the state would be well ahead of the nation in a recovery.

"Texas, at least during the recession, will benefit by the fact that it entered into the recovery in better shape than most places," Hazleton said. And while there is not expected to be much growth, there probably will not be many losses, he said.

Hazleton said growth in the energy and petrochemical industries will be minimal, defense cuts will be great and the U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Act could bring more job expansions for Mexico and a few expansions in the electronics industries in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"GENERALLY, THE economy in Texas is growing again, but very, very slowly," Hazleton said. He predicted only a 1¼ percent growth in Texas this year and about 2 percent next year.

The energy industry will continue to suffer from flat oil prices, decreasing natural gas prices, more expensive drilling costs and a static domestic market, Hazleton said.

The petrochemical industry that has sustained many of Texas' coastal communities in the last decade will top out and could provide specialty expertise and industrial standards, Hazleton said, but it was unlikely to provide more growth for Texas.

While the free trade agreement will help businesses ensure standardized shipments and product reliability for trade inside Mexico, Hazleton said not to expect it to create too many new jobs for Texans.

"There may be 60,000 to 70,000 more jobs, but they're all in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, interestingly enough. They're not in the Valley and South Texas. They'll all be in the electronics field," he said.

Many of those workers will come from those displaced by military reductions not only at bases, but also at high-tech firms like General Dynamics.

Mourners remember TV meteorologist

FORT WORTH (AP) — About 650 mourners Tuesday remembered television meteorologist Harold Taft's no-nonsense professionalism, his lengthy military service and his devotion to his faith.

The funeral service was broadcast live by KXAS-TV, Channel 5 and WBAP radio, the stations that Taft called home. He began broadcasting in 1949.

"Harold once told me, 'Before putting any forecast of weather on the air, I sit outside the studio, look into the sky, and talk with the Lord,' " said the Rev. Thomas McCrone, pastor of Grand Prairie's St. John Lutheran Church. Taft was a member of the congregation and the two were longtime friends.

McCrone told mourners at St. Stephen Presbyterian Church in Fort Worth that Taft was not one to shrink from hard-nosed scientific inquiry.

"We love you, Harold," McCrone said, his voice cracking with emotion. "We shall miss you."

He died Friday after a public, yearlong struggle with cancer. He was 69.

After the hourlong service, Taft's cremated remains were taken for burial in Shannon Rose Hill Memorial Park in east Fort Worth.

A graveside ceremony conducted with full military honors commemorated Taft's service in the Army Air Forces during World War II and the Korean War.

Big by-liners, editors wrote for Hearst

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Some of the world's most famous writers, editors, artists, and editorial cartoonists worked for us — gifted, colorful, intrepid, visionary men and women. And a few skunks.

They came from all parts of the United States and abroad. Dignified, disciplined, gentle, gracious people and prima donnas with poison personalities. Wild, wonderful characters and paranoid pens. All managed to stay within tolerable limits of human behavior, but sometimes needed a prayer or two to do so. All these stars shared one attribute: success through popular acceptance.

Winston Churchill and Jack London. Mark Twain, Charles Russell, and Arthur Brisbane. (My father carried Brisbane's column on the front page of our newspapers for about 40 years; to my knowledge, no publisher in the history of U.S. journalism has so featured a columnist over such a span of time.) James Creelman, Damon Runyon, Edmond Coblentz, Burris Jenkins Jr., Walter Winchell, Louella Parsons, Bugs Baer, Adela Rogers St. Johns, and Karl Von Wiegand. Walter Howey, Jack Lait, and Harry Romanoff. Westbrook Pegler and Bob Considine. Jimmy and Dorothy Kilgallen. Joseph Kingsbury-Smith, Frank Conniff, Inez Robb, and Phyllis Battelle. Barry Faris and Bill Corum. Jack Kennedy and Jack O'Brien. Richard Deems, Carmel Snow, John Mack Carter, Helen Gurley Brown, and others.

These were our big byliners and editors. I knew most of them, of course, but let no one believe I ever dared to choose one above another. I will leave that for anyone crazy enough to try it. But if I had to pick some of our most memorable men and women reporters and editors over the past six decades, these would be my choices:

■ JIMMY KILGALLEN and his daughter Dorothy. Jimmy, because he saw and covered so much of America and the world. Dorothy, because much of her career, and her life and death, were so dramatic.

Dorothy was good — very good for us. Her flashy gossip column had many buying our Journal-American. She mixed the aristocratic crowd, cafe society, and show biz into one big heady cocktail. It was a glamour stinger.

Suddenly, in 1965, it was all over. The biggest story in Dorothy's long career had dropped in her lap, but she would not cover it. Dorothy died under circumstances that shocked unshockable New Yorkers and many in the rest of the country. She was discovered dead in her bed. The New York medical examiner's office issued a certificate stating death was caused by "acute ethanol and barbiturate intoxication — circumstances undetermined." Simply put, she died as a result of too many pills and too much booze.

The inevitable question: Was it suicide? I don't believe the question was ever adequately answered. Her enemies suggested it was a deliberate overdose. Friends said Dorothy had simply made a mistake.

As hard as I tried, I could not dwell on Dorothy when she died. I thought of her father. My God, I prayed, take care of Jimmy. His lovely little girl had crashed in her race for it all. I put my head in my hands and my heart ached for a long time.

■ Walter Howey, Jack Lait, Harry Romanoff, and all the crowd at the old rip-roaring Chicago Herald-American. A wild, nutty bunch who not only were the characters in the famous newspaper play "The Front Page" but a breed apart in the legendary flamboyant world of earlier newspapering. I loved to go to Chicago and share their exploits.

■ BOB CONSIDINE, who was probably the most prolific reporter-writer of this century. As fine a gentleman as one would ever meet. Raconteur, humorist, and sage of Toots Shor's and other esteemed bistros. I still miss him, more than fifteen years after his passing.

I will always remember Bob with a typewriter on his knees writing a news story, column, magazine article, or his latest book — while waiting for a plane, train, or bus to take him to his next assignment. Bob also worked in radio, television, the movies, and was constantly in demand for speeches all over the country. He wore a half-dozen hats at all times — and a beat-up favorite of his own.

Considine covered the biggest stories in the world for INS and our papers for more than three decades. The extraordinary range of his work — especially under the incredible pressure of so many deadlines — demonstrated his greatness. From the Joe Louis-Max Schmelling fight to the World Series. From World War II and our atomic bomb blasts to presidents. From Korea to the Middle East and, as a member of the Hearst Task Force, interviews with Soviet leaders. From news stories to columns, from books to movies, from radio to television, he was everywhere. Bob's column "On the Line" was syndicated to hundreds of newspapers across the country.

This tall, broad-shouldered, smiling soul went home to God in 1975. I have thought of him often since he went away. I cannot go into a New York restaurant or saloon without seeing his big Irish kisser at the bar. He orders us both a drink and says, "Bill, excuse me a few minutes. I've got a column to finish."

■ Walter Winchell, undoubtedly the greatest gossip columnist since the English and others began telling old wives' tales. Our last chats perhaps made up for all our previous differences.

WINCHELL WAS a self-centered egomaniac who was small-time in my book. Pop allowed him too much power. When Walter went after a dame, he took her clothes off in print. And he cut the gizzards out of many a man. He was a mean-spirited SOB if you ever got in his way.

■ Westbrook Pegler, one of the most controversial political columnists in U.S. history. A man who knew the English language as well as anyone who ever cracked a Webster's dictionary. Yet I never understood Peg and still don't.

I never met anyone with Westbrook Pegler's command of words. Perhaps he learned some of that from his father, who had been a reporter and worked on our Chicago paper for years. Peg wrote for us over a tumultuous 18-year span, starting with King Features in 1944.

William Randolph Hearst Jr. married Austine on July 29, 1948 in Virginia.

Winchell was a self-centered egomaniac who was small-time in my book. Pop allowed him too much power. When Walter went after a dame, he took her clothes off in print. And he cut the gizzards out of many a man.

Some said that, after his wife died, Peg talked only to God. I am glad that God will judge him, not men of lesser talent like myself, or editors, or some of our readers. I believe that Peg loved and respected God, because he sure quieted down on his many visits to churches. But the old devil wanted his talent badly and fought hard for Peg. I don't know who won, but, in my heart, I am pulling for Peg. Forgiveness is a gallant virtue.

■ Joseph Kingsbury-Smith, who not only scored the greatest scoops on the Soviet Union in this century but was the essence of a diplomat in his long, worldwide reporting and management career. We still write and travel together on reporting trips.

JOE SHOOK the world when he obtained two written interviews with Soviet dictator Josef Stalin in 1949. Joe was to score many more scoops — exclusive interviews with many of France's postwar leaders, Germany's Adenauer, Yugoslavia's Tito, Egypt's Nasser, various Israeli leaders, and other major figures on the world scene. He always did it in a calm, self-effacing manner. Perhaps the secret of his greatness as a reporter was that so many statesmen recognized that Joe himself was a fine diplomat.

Today, after his more than 60 years with the company and our many trips around the world together, he is the last old friend at my side.

■ Frank Conniff, my closest pal, who not only had the gift of Irish eloquence but the smile and loyalty to go with it. I miss his laughter and wonderful stories. We covered the world together and I miss him as much today as when he died more than two decades ago.

■ Three great newswomen, whom I knew well, could easily be on the list instead of Dorothy Kilgallen. Louella Parsons was certainly more experienced and powerful in her field. Adela Rogers St. Johns, a truly fine reporter. And Inez Robb, a regal lady of impeccable manners who may well have been a better reporter and news analyst than any of the three. But Dorothy got a lot of breaks and made the most of them. Yet there could hardly be a greater contrast between the young Dorothy, student of the good nuns, and the beleaguered soul who died in anguish.

I would list a pinch hitter on this roster — my wife, Austine. She had been a columnist for the Washington Times-Herald and knew a lot about the newspaper business. For many years she was a helping hand in much of what I and others reported and wrote. Without her encouragement and sharp mind, some of us would have faltered along the way.

Austine knew all of these colleagues and accompanied us on many stories across the country and abroad. She never completely left the news business. Marrying Austine was the wisest and happiest decision I ever made. Austine died on June 23, 1991, and my life has been empty without her.

Intervention helps lawsuit, lawyer says

AUSTIN (AP) — A Sierra Club lawyer says the organization's federal lawsuit over the Edwards Aquifer was strengthened when the state and two area cities — San Marcos and New Braunfels — took its side on the matter.

Just before the deadline for intervention ended Monday, the state, several cities, other entities and businesses filed motions to join the Sierra Club lawsuit. The suit seeks to protect endangered species by setting a minimum flow at Comal Springs in New Braunfels.

"I think this clearly signals that a great majority of the people involved think that something has to be done about the Edwards Aquifer," said Stuart Henry of Austin, a lawyer for the Sierra Club.

The lawsuit charges the U.S. Department of the Interior with failure to protect the species, including a small fish called the fountain darter and the San Marcos salamander, under the federal Endangered Species Act.

The plaintiffs say the government should regulate water use from the Edwards Aquifer to keep flow in Comal Springs strong enough to sustain the species.

The suit is scheduled to be heard Dec. 23.

Nancy Lynch, chief of the Environmental Protection Division for the Texas Attorney General's Office, said the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Water Commission asked the attorney general's office to intervene.

"The lawsuit is geared toward endangered species — and the Parks and Wildlife Department has responsibility to protect fish and wildlife," Lynch said. "The Water Commission is very interested in the lawsuit because it is going to directly relate to how water resources in the state of Texas are used."

Gov. Ann Richards shows off her cast outside the State Capitol Wednesday. She will be wearing the fiberglass cast for approximately 30 days to help the ligaments in her left leg heal. She tore the ligaments about two weeks ago when she in a fell in a hole while walking in Santa Fe, N.M.

Richards sports cast on left leg

AUSTIN (NYT) — Gov. Ann Richards joked Wednesday about the footwear she'll have when she meets later this month with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari to discuss border and trade issues.

Richards arrived at the Capitol sporting a fiberglass cast and a blue overshoe on her left ankle, which she apparently sprained several weeks ago.

"The question was whether or not I wanted the one that had the teddy bears on the cast," Richards said. "I felt sure the president of Mexico would love the governor arriving on an economic development visit with a teddy bear cast."

Richards said she hurt the ankle when she stepped in pothole during a morning walk in Sante Fe, N.M., while attending a board meeting there for a foundation she helps direct.

"It was just one of those real simple things," she said. "I turned my ankle. It hurt and it swelled up, and I put ice on it and I did all that stuff."

Richards said she noticed the ankle was weak when she kept twisting it during a recent trip to California where she met with film moguls about the Texas movie industry.

The doctor told Richards she should wear the cast for 30 days and then a decision will be made whether she will need surgery to correct ligament damage.

The governor — who has long joked that "Ginger Rogers did everything Fred Astaire did, only backwards and in high heels" — said the cast wouldn't slow her down and it wouldn't have had any effect on Rogers, either.

Group calls for extending school year

AUSTIN (AP) — A major business group Wednesday urged the state to lengthen the time youths spend in classrooms as one of several recommendations for improving the performance of Texas schools.

In a report on improving education, the Texas Association of Business called for increased instruction time through year-round school schedules and keeping students in class more days.

"A plan for year-round schools should be developed for all districts in Texas to replace the traditional three-month summer vacation with shorter vacation periods regularly spaced throughout the academic year," said the report, entitled "Promise for Tomorrow."

"The historical rationale for an extended summer vacation no longer exists because we are not an agrarian society that requires children to be home during the summer to harvest crops," the report said.

Its proposals suggested six weeks of classroom instruction followed by two weeks of vacation — with the cycle repeating six times during the year. An alternative would be nine weeks of class and three weeks of vacation, repeated four times annually.

Such a schedule would allow more time for learning new material and require less time for reviewing the previous year's studies, the report said.

While a year-round schedule wouldn't necessarily require students to spend more total days in class, the report said more class time yields results.

The Legislature has ordered Texas schools to increase their 175 class days to 180. But the TAB report noted a 240-day school year is standard in Japan, where it said high school seniors test at about the same level as American college juniors.

"The Legislature should consider adding another 10 (school) days, phased in over five years, in recognition of the importance of time on task," the report said.

The study also recommended:

- Modifying current testing procedures to identify learning disabilities which contribute to poor academic performance.
- Increasing local control of schools within established standards.
- Boosting parental and community involvement in education.

Doctor gives advice to parents of twins, triplets, quadruplets

By Randi Hutter Epstein
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Twins or triplets may mean double or triple the blessings, but multiple births also can result in feelings of worry and depression.

"Parents often feel isolated, and health professionals don't understand the psychological and social repercussions," said Dr. Elizabeth Bryan, whose practice is restricted to twins, triplets, quadruplets and up.

The number of triplets and quadruplets has tripled in the last 30 years, particularly because of fertility drugs and in vitro fertilization. Twins occur in about one in 90 births, Bryan said.

Every three months, Bryan organizes luncheons for the children and parents of multiple births — whether they are her patients or not. She also gets calls from parents from various parts of the world who need advice or comfort.

"This is my eighth lunch," Christine Hewinson, 32, mother of triplet toddlers Rebecca, Emma and David, said at a recent lunch. "It's nice to know there's one place I can go and not feel like a sideshow. Here, I'm one of the majority."

Caring for one set of twins 18 years ago piqued Bryan's curiosity and led to a study of 100 sets of twins, which in turn blossomed into a lifelong pursuit.

She launched a self-help group for parents, which now has more than 200 chapters around the world, including the United States, Japan and Ethiopia.

And Bryan presents monthly slide shows for prospective parents of multiple births, full of trivia, advice, and biology.

She mentioned famous twins of literature from Tweedle-dee and Tweedle-dum to Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors." She talked about an African tribe that believes twins have innate mystical powers and worship them; and another tribe that believes twins are possessed by the devil and kill them.

The audience chuckled appreciatively as the doctor poured scorn on a couple who named their identical daughters, Krysty and Kyrsty, and dress them identically every day.

The message was clear: Treat twins as individuals and don't dress them alike.

She said it's crucial to talk to toddlers individually and make eye contact to promote language development, frequently delayed in twins and triplets.

Children of multiple births are also prone to premature birth and low birth weight.

At a recent international meeting in Paris about in vitro fertilization, infertility experts said the trend is to put no more than two or three embryos into the womb to stem the rise in multiple births. The rest are frozen and saved for later use.

Bryan also started the first and only Multiple Births Foundation for professionals, which educates doctors and social workers.

Its headquarters are in a yellow mobile home parked permanently at Bryan's hospital, London's Queen Charlotte's and Chelsea Hospital.

She says parents of twins, triplets and quadruplets suffer from stress and need special advice about raising more than one baby at a time.

A study of 12,712 mothers published May 27 in the British Medical Journal showed that mothers of twins are more likely to suffer from depression. Twins may not cause depression, but can push vulnerable women over the brink, she said.

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Caffeine may stop headache, study shows

By Jean Carper

Caffeine as pain-killer

A strong cup of coffee may cure an ordinary headache just as well as the common headache pill - acetaminophen.

Carper

That's because caffeine is a pain-killer in its own right, although it is often combined with acetaminophen and aspirin in over-the-counter analgesics, says Nicholas Ward, M.D., associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Washington.

The new finding that caffeine alone can zap pain comes from Ward's study of 53 men and women who suffered frequent, fairly severe headaches, but not migraines. When headache occurred, the subjects in a blind test took either a placebo, caffeine alone, acetaminophen alone or acetaminophen plus caffeine.

Two doses of caffeine (65 mg and 130 mg) both zapped the headache as well as two regular acetaminophen tablets. A strong cup of coffee contains between 80 and 120 mg of caffeine, notes Ward. Tablets of acetaminophen with caffeine were only slightly better.

If a cup of coffee doesn't work, says Ward, you may then want to take a Tylenol or aspirin. But you may not need both to get rid of the headache. Besides killing pain, caffeine also improves mood, the study noted.

New oat bran mystery

Why do studies on oat bran vs. cholesterol come up with such differing results? Some researchers find that oat bran lowers cholesterol by nearly 20 percent. Others find little or no cholesterol-lowering powers in oat bran.

Gene Spiller, Ph.D., a fiber expert and head of the Health Research and Studies Center in California, thinks he has an answer. He says not all oat brans have the same amount or type of fiber by any means. Supposedly, the magic cholesterol-lowering component of oat bran is beta glucans - a type of gummy soluble fiber. But commercial oat brans contain as little as 8 percent to as much as 28 percent total soluble fiber. And some oat brans have little or no beta glucans, he says.

When Spiller recently tested oat bran with a moderate 15 percent soluble fiber on men and women with high cholesterol, their bad-type LDL-cholesterol dropped about 6 percent. They ate nine-tenths of an ounce of oat bran three times a day with meals.

For the greatest cholesterol-lowering impact, choose oat bran with the most soluble fiber, advises Spiller. If it's not noted on the label — he thinks it should be — "buy plain old-fashioned oatmeal. You can be sure it has beta-glucans," he says.

The diabetes-fat debate

Should people with non-insulin-dependent diabetes (Type II) always eat a diet low in fat and high in complex carbohydrates? That's the current consensus.

But there's now scientific controversy over the issue, spurred by some who think it's OK to eat more fat if it's the right type. Mainly, if it's monounsaturated, the type found in olive oil. Adding support to that point of view is a new study by physicians from the University of Padova in Italy.

They had a group of 19 patients with diabetes test diets rich in carbohydrates or rich in monounsaturated fats. The carbo-diet got 60 percent of its calories from carbohydrates (mostly complex) and 25 percent from fat. The mono-fat diet got 40 percent of its calories from fat, mostly from monounsaturated fat and 45 percent from carbohydrates. Both diets were low in saturated animal-type fat.

The conclusion: The high-fat diet did not produce detrimental changes in blood sugar, insulin or cholesterol and triglycerides. Thus, the researchers argue that such diabetic patients should have a choice between a high-carbo diet and a high-monounsaturated-fat diet, as long as they still skimp on saturated animal-type fat.

Bush criticizes, vows to veto jobless benefits bill

NASHVILLE (NYT) — Vowing to veto a new bill extending jobless benefits, President Bush said Wednesday that he was "a little annoyed at the constant political pressure" about unemployment, civil rights and other issues and reminded everyone that he still had not formally announced for re-election.

As he left the White House Wednesday on a three-state day trip mixing political fund raising with official events intended to promote his domestic policies in preparation for the 1992 campaign, Bush seemed irritated that he was being increasingly treated as a candidate by the Democrats and in news reports, even though he has not declared himself in the race.

"We want to help the unemployed, put forward a sound crime package and all of a sudden, everyone says it's political," Bush said. "Now I assume that's just because we're getting close to 1992."

Bush later criticized the unemployment bill in a similar way, saying: "The Democratic leaders, I think they sense a political issue they can use next year against all of us. They were determined to pass and ram down my throat a budget-busting bill. Every taxpayer in the country will be burdened by their approach. I will veto the bill."

In recent weeks, Bush's domestic trips have increasingly taken on the air of a campaign. But his advisers say he remains reluctant to announce his candidacy and has even delayed forming the financial committee that he said he would put together in September, because he would prefer to avoid the disadvantages of being a candidate for as long as possible.

Once he declares, Bush will be under greater pressure to respond to the Democrats seeking their party's nomination and will be more subject to accusations of using presidential travel to campaign.

On Wednesday, he went to Pittsburgh for a fund-raising event for Dick Thornburgh, the former attorney general who is running for the Senate in Pennsylvania and then traveled to Louisville, Ky., for a conference of citizens who try to help the police catch criminals, known as Crime Watchers. He also attended a fund-raising event for Rep. Larry J. Hopkins's gubernatorial campaign before flying to Nashville for the annual awards of the Country Music Association.

Along the way, he blasted the Democrats on the debate over a civil rights bill that is pending before Congress. "I want to sign a civil rights bill, but I want to sign a good bill," he said, referring to his criticism of a Democratic civil rights bill as establishing employment quotas.

He also joined a chorus of Republicans who accused the Democrats in Congress of using the unemployment issue for political gain.

Evans accuses jail of mistreatment; refuses to give information

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The man who claims to have killed about 70 people has filed an affidavit accusing his jailers of mistreating him and says he will no longer help authorities locate the bodies of his victims.

"Sir, since I've been locked up in Harrison County Jail, I've been abused, neglected and intimidated for no reason that can be justified," Donald Leroy Evans said in a handwritten affidavit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Biloxi.

Evans, 34, was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for kidnapping a 10-year-old homeless girl. He had pleaded guilty Aug. 19 to the federal charge.

Evans, originally from Galveston, Texas, also is charged in state court with murdering the girl, Beatrice Louise Routh, whom he kidnapped Aug. 1 from a Gulfport beach. He could be sentenced to death if convicted.

More national news/3D

Saying he was "crushed emotionally due to all the murders I've committed," Evans accused Sheriff Joe Price and Capt. Rick Gaston of denying him a change of clothes for 15 days and of delaying his mail. Evans' charges also included being denied toilet tissue and not being allowed to see a dentist despite a severely abscessed tooth.

Neither Price nor Gaston returned phone calls left at their offices Wednesday. However, in an interview Tuesday with a The Sun Herald of Biloxi, Price said Evans was treated better than most of the other prisoners at the jail.

"Enough is enough!" Evans wrote. "Until I get treated human, society can blame the FBI, Sheriff Joe Price and Capt. Rick Gaston for compelling me to shut-up and refuse to solve more murders.

"Judge Roper, is it right that 69 murders go unrevealed only because abuse of myself by ignorant, childish and immature law enforcement persons?"

Evans said he only pretended to help searchers in Arizona and Texas look for victims' bodies because federal officials failed to live up to their promises.

ConAgra introduces 96 percent lean ground beef

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Hoping to lure Americans back to red meat, a food giant on Wednesday introduced a 96 percent fat-free ground beef product that uses a new fat substitute made of oat flour to keep burgers juicy.

Healthy Choice Extra Lean Ground Beef, which has been test-marketed in nine states since mid-August, should be available nationally by the end of the month, ConAgra Inc. said.

"Our hope and dream is that they eat it when they go out, when they come home, on the bus, on airlines, submarines and any other time that they feel like a great hamburger," said Chairman Charles Harper.

The product has a suggested retail price of $2.79 per pound. Harper said the price may sound high, but it is made from lean cuts of chuck, round and shank beef, which are expensive.

At a Hy-Vee Foods store in Omaha, the price of a pound of ground beef ranged Wednesday from $1.44 a pound for 70 percent lean to $2.49 a pound for 90 percent lean.

Healthy Choice, which is 89 percent beef, uses a modified oat-flour fat substitute called LEANesse and includes some beef stock for extra flavor, said Richard Monfort, president of ConAgra Red Meat Companies.

Phil Sokolof, the cholesterol crusader who has lobbied against fatty fast-food menus, gave the product rave reviews in full-page ads in several U.S. newspapers.

"It will bring people back to red meat ... but to good red meat," Sokolof said at a news conference to introduce the product.

Harper said ground beef accounts for nearly half of the total fat Americans eat each year.

In 1989, the last year for which figures are available, Americans ate nearly 69 pounds of beef per person, down from more than 78 pounds per person in 1984, said Wendy Pinkerton, spokeswoman for the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Democrats hope to offer some relief to taxpayers

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Having put President Bush in a political hot spot on the issue of aiding jobless Americans, key Democrats in Congress plan to turn up the heat by offering relief to middle-class taxpayers.

This new Democratic package, which will be put to the vote in both the House and Senate in 1992, is aimed squarely at next year's presidential campaign. The idea is to paint Bush and the Republicans as patrons of privilege who have lost touch with the common man's needs.

"You watch this situation with the economy," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., said Wednesday at a breakfast with reporters. "If it remains as bad as it is, people are going to be watching their pocketbooks in deciding how to vote."

Bentsen said the Senate Finance Committee, which he chairs, will soon hold hearings on a bill to lower income taxes for families now earning between $20,000 and $50,000 a year. To keep the measure "revenue neutral" to the Treasury, levies on the richest Americans would go up by an unspecified amount.

Bentsen, who ran for vice president on the Democratic ticket in 1988, said he had been in touch with his House counterpart, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., to "coordinate" the tax-cutting drive.

With voters saying Bush spends too much time on foreign policy at the expense of domestic problems, Democrats plan to seize the initiative by sending the president a stream of bills on issues such as health care, abortion counseling and family and medical leave.

Bentsen said his finance panel would take up the problem of spiraling health costs and workers trapped in "job lock" for fear of losing their insurance coverage. One idea put out by Bentsen: to adopt nationally a Florida plan that allows smaller firms to pool their employees, increasing their ability to purchase health insurance on favorable terms.

The Democratic thrust also calls for more spending on domestic concerns such as health and education. So far, party leaders have avoided discussing how to find funds for these programs under the restrictive budget agreement negotiated last year with the Bush administration.

"Part of the problem we have as a country is that we're not making certain key investments in the economic future of the nation," House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said in an interview. "And those things have a more important relationship to the deficit than any immediate savings."

It is too early to tell whether the president will opt to buy into these Democratic plans or veto them, as he plans to veto a $6.4 billion unemployment package that cleared Congress on Tuesday.

Barger annoyed

MIAMI (AP) — Florida Marlins president Carl Barger says he is annoyed by criticism of the expansion team's failure to hire minorities.

National League president Bill White last week expressed disappointment at the lack of minorities joining the administration offices of the Marlins and Colorado Rockies. Both franchises were awarded this summer.

The Marlins have hired five front office executives. All are Anglo males.

Representatives for the Denver team, asked Wednesday about their minority hiring, did not immediately supply the information.

Baltimore Orioles assistant general manager Frank Robinson said he is also upset by the figures. Robinson and White are black.

"Frank Robinson ought to worry more about the Baltimore 'Orioles," Barger said Tuesday. "This annoys me. If we had a track record of ignoring minorities, I could understand it. But we only have a five-man staff in place. I don't want to use inflammatory words, so I'll just say it is awfully premature and awfully disappointing."

NFL honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Denver's Gaston Green, who ran for a career-best 158 yards last week, was named AFC offensive player of the week on Wednesday.

Nate Odomes of Buffalo won AFC defensive honors while quarterback Troy Aikman of Dallas and linebacker Rickey Jackson of New Orleans won NFC honors.

Green, who has replaced holdout Bobby Humphrey as the Broncos' featured back, carried 26 times and had two 12-yard runs to set up the only touchdown of the game in a 13-6 win over Minnesota.

Odomes, who had eight tackles, made three key plays in a goal-line stand in Buffalo's 35-20 win over over Chicago — two tackles and a batted-down pass. He is the fifth member of the Bills honored in five weeks this season.

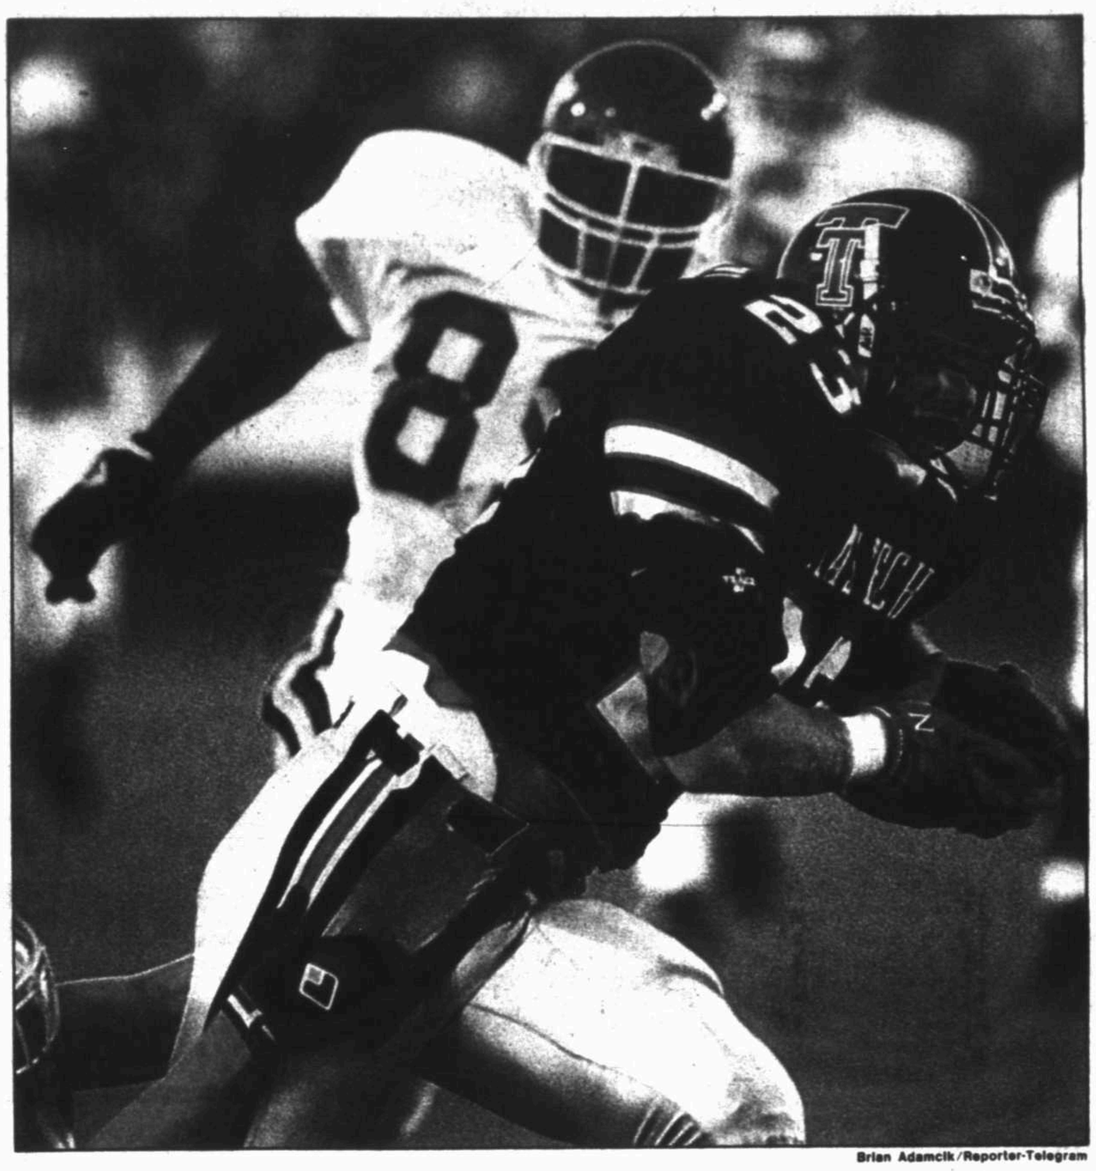
A&M seldom wins at Tech



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Texas Tech lost last week to TCU despite the efforts of safety Brian Dubiski, who caught this pass out of punt formation for a first down. The Raiders hope to rebound Saturday.

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is trying to get his team fired up to play Texas Tech in Lubbock on Saturday.

He knows the Red Raiders are gunning for his Aggies, which have had trouble winning at Jones Stadium in Lubbock for more than a decade.

"It's never been an emotional game for us," Slocum said. "It's never been a big rival game for us. I want it to be as big a game for us as it is for them."

The No. 23 Aggies (2-1) are coming off a 34-7 victory over hapless Southwestern Louisiana. The Red Raiders have lost three straight since beating Fullerton State on opening day.

But the Aggies haven't beaten Texas Tech in Lubbock since 1985. They lost 27-21 in 1987 and 27-24 in 1989.

The Red Raiders always play A&M tough at home. Tech has won four of the last six games between the two teams since 1979, and all six have been decided by less than a touchdown.

"It's obvious we've had a tough time playing out there," Slocum said Tuesday. "It's show-and-tell time for us."

"We just have to concentrate on what we're doing," said senior quarterback Bucky Richardson, who is still hobbled by a sprained arch but will start for the second straight week.

"We've let their crowd get to us in the past. We know what to expect now. We've played before a lot bigger crowds."

Slocum said a lack of motivation has played a key role in the Aggies' losses in Lubbock.

"In the past we just kind of show up, go out there and play," Slocum said. "Most of our players have never been to Lubbock. The only time our players even think about Texas Tech is once a year when we play them."

Tech is 1-3 and 0-1 in the SWC after falling 30-16 to Texas Christian at home last week.

"It's a win-win situation for them," said Slocum.

The Aggies not only are healing from injuries but are trying to cope with the death of kicker James Glenn, who collapsed at practice last week.

"I think we're back to normal," Slocum said. "But as a team, we're still feeling our way right now and that worries me."

Despite the foot injury, Richardson will start and fullback Doug Carter should return to action after spraining his ankle on the 12th play of their season opener Sept. 14 against LSU. Junior defensive end Kevin Tucker (shoulder) will not play and linebacker Marcus Buckley is questionable.

Timlin wins Jays' clincher

■ A former Midland High hurler chalks up the win as Toronto benefits from Kevin Flora's ninth-inning error to capture the AL East title.

Associated Press

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays won the AL East in style Wednesday night, rallying from a two-run deficit in the ninth inning and beating the California Angels 6-5 on Joe Carter's single off Bryan Harvey.

Former Midland High hurler Mike Timlin got the win in relief.

With Toronto trailing 5-4, Devon White led off with a single off Harvey (2-4), who leads the league with 45 saves and had succeeded in 22 of his previous 24 chances.

■ Braves stay alive as Glavine wins 20th/2C

Roberto Alomar grounded to 1991 Midland Angel second baseman Kevin Flora, who made a lunging stop but threw wildly past shortstop Dick Schofield while trying to start a double play. As the ball rolled into left field, White scored the tying run and Alomar went to second.

Alomar stole third on the first pitch to Carter, who grounded Harvey's next offering just past Schofield for the division-clinching hit.

Dave Winfield leadoff home run in the eighth off David Wells tied the score at 4. Winfield's 28th homer of the season was the 406th of his career, putting him one behind Duke Snider for 22nd on the career list. The RBI was Winfield's 1,600th.

Dave Gallagher then hit a go-ahead single in the ninth off Timlin (11-6).

Andrews head coach W.T. Stapler isn't saying Friday's District 3-4A opener at Fort Stockton is of the do-or-die variety. He merely suggests that the loser could find one foot in the grave.

"You lose the first one in this district and you're almost dead," said Stapler, whose 3-1 Mustangs collide with a 3-1 Fort Stockton team at 8 p.m. "Of course every coach (in 3-4A) is telling his kids the same thing.

"Right now everybody is 0-0, but there are so many good teams in this league that you've got to be ready every week."

District 9A also opens loop play Friday, and No. 1 Garden City (4-0) entertains Roscoe at 7:30 p.m. The Bearkats were ranked seventh a year ago when they rolled over Roscoe 68-7.

In other games involving area teams, Stanton plays host to McCamey in a battle of 6-2A teams at 8 p.m., Greenwood travels to Lamesa for a final pre-district tuneup for both teams at 8 p.m. and Midland Christian hits the road for a game with high-scoring Christoval in six-man action scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Big Spring and Rankin are open this week.

Mojo passing game not up to '89 snuff

With Odessa Permian's return to the good graces of the University Interscholastic League this football season, it was a natural for voters in the Associated Press' Class 5A poll to hold the Panthers in high regard.

Price

From Top 10 obscurity in the preseason poll to the No. 3 ranking it currently holds, Permian seems to be a team that might just "repeat" as state champions.

Now, I know Mojo was not allowed to work its playoff magic in the 1990 playoffs because of postseason banishment, thus nullifying any possibility of a real title defense.

However, if the Panthers pull off another state championship this year, it would be their second in as many years allowed to compete in the playoffs.

That brings up the inevitable comparison to the 1989 Permian team, which went 16-0 and won the school's fifth state title.

The team of two years ago had a powerful, dominating running back in Chris Comer and a speedster in Arvey Villa. This year's squad relies on the rushing efforts of 6-1, 190-pound Malcolm Hamilton and scatback Tim Ross.

Hamilton ripped Odessa High for 179 yards and three touchdowns last week, while Ross ran for 70 yards. Also, waiting in the wings is sophomore John Williams, who ran for 90 yards against the Bronchos.

Stoney Case played nearly mistake-free quarterback in the playoffs in 1989, and though he hasn't proven he can throw like his older brother, Stormy Case guides the 1991 Panthers.

Some Permian observers say this year's defensive unit may be even better than the one of the year before last, and the kicking game is definitely better with Shane Wells' strong-leg placekicking.

But, the one real difference for the 1991 Panthers is the passing game. There could only be one Lloyd Hill, who now plays at Texas Tech. And though nobody expects another Hill, no Panther receiver has emerged as the game-breaking threat Hill was.

Tony Daniels catches his share of possession passes, as does Will Wagner, but I get the feeling if forced into a passing game by a good defense, Permian may not be able to consistently complete the necessary aerials.

Until last week, when the Panthers tore apart a good OHS team 44-0, Permian's big wins over weak opponents made its record suspect, and considering Mojo plays Alamogordo, N.M. Saturday at Ratliff Stadium, it won't get a chance to prove itself for another eight days.

That's when the annual Midland Lee-Permian war takes place, also at Ratliff. The Rebels will provide an ample test for the Panther offense, considering that Lee has the ninth-ranked defense in the state, allowing an average of 125 yards a game.

Of course, it could also be argued that Lee has built that impressive figure against inferior foes. But then again, that's why they play these games.

Local fans will get to see for themselves if this Permian team is as good as 1989's a week from Friday in the Lee game. The 1989 Panthers were the only Permian team in the last five years to pull off a win over the Rebs, so a Mojo win might be a fair indicator.

Atlanta heads home with a chance

Glavine becomes 20-game winner as Braves drop Reds 6-3

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Tom Glavine, given a six-run lead in the first inning, became this season's first 20-game winner and the Atlanta Braves headed home with a chance to win the NL West.

NL

Glavine scattered five hits over eight innings and the Braves turned the tables on Cincinnati, beating the Reds 6-3.

Atlanta, which has won six straight, entered the game trailing Los Angeles by one game. For the fourth straight night, the Dodgers needed a victory to keep sole possession of first place.

The Braves are off Thursday before ending the season with three games at home against last-place Houston.

It was a near-replay of the second game of the series, when the Reds scored six first-inning runs only to watch the Braves rally for a 7-6 win. But Glavine (20-11) made Cincinnati's comeback come up short.

The left-hander occasionally struggled in his third try for No. 20, walking three. But the Braves turned four double plays behind him to scuttle two scoring threats. Alejandro Pena got the last three outs for his 14th save.

Mets 9, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH — Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer in the 11th inning to give New York a victory over Pittsburgh.

Bob Patterson (4-3) opened the inning by walking Kevin Elster. Howard Johnson singled and McReynolds, after fouling off a bunt attempt for a second strike, drove a pitch into the left-field seats for his 15th homer.

Astros 7, Giants 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Craig Biggio and Andujar Cedeno each drove in two runs as Houston beat San Francisco.

The last-place Astros won the series 2-1, evening the season series at 9-9.

Kenny Lofton opened the game and was safe on Robby Thompson's throwing error. Lofton stole second and Steve Finley walked. Singles by Biggio and Luis Gonzalez gave the Astros a 2-0 lead against Paul McClellan (3-6).

Cardinals 6, Expos 4

ST. LOUIS — Felix Jose had a three-run homer and Lee Smith extended his National League record for saves as St. Louis beat Montreal.

Rookie Rheal Cormier (4-5) allowed four runs on seven hits in six innings and had a run-scoring hit as the Cardinals won their third straight game.

Lee Smith worked the ninth for his 47th save. On Tuesday night, he broke the NL record of Bruce Sutter.

Cubs 1, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Greg Maddux pitched a three-hitter and drove in the only run with a single as Chicago beat Philadelphia.

Maddux (14-11) outpitched Jose DeJesus, who held the Cubs hitless until Chicago reached him for three straight singles and the go-ahead run with two out in the seventh inning.

The Cubs scored when Luis Salazar looped a single to short left field, moved to third on Ray Sanchez' single and came home when Maddox beat out a slow hopper to third.

Hawks trade to get Cheeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Four-time All-Star Maurice Cheeks was traded by the New York Knicks to the Atlanta Hawks for Tim McCormick on Wednesday in an NBA deal that filled both teams' need for backup players.

Cheeks, a 13-year veteran who is the NBA career leader in steals and is fifth in assists, became expendable when the Knicks drafted Greg Anthony No. 1 and coach Pat Riley said Mark Jackson would be the starting point guard.

Cheeks, 35, is expected to back up Rumeal Robinson for Atlanta, which traded Doc Rivers to the Los Angeles Clippers in the offseason.

The Knicks needed McCormick as a backup center.

EAST: Blue Jays vs. Twins for pennant on Minnesota Twins in the AL playoffs, which begin Tuesday at the Metrodome. It will be the first time two teams playing in domed stadiums will meet in the postseason.

The clinching came in Toronto's SkyDome finale before a crowd of 50,324, which raised Toronto's season total to 4,001,526. The Blue Jays are the first team in sports history to reach the 4 million milestone.

Toronto has won two division titles in three years.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 3

BOSTON — It was another disappointing ending for the Red Sox and their fans as Toronto clinched the AL East and made Boston's victory over Detroit moot. By the time the last out was made at Fenway Park it really didn't matter.

The Red Sox mounted a comeback in August and early September, but fell short of winning the division for the second straight season.

Joe Hesketh (12-4) scattered five hits and walked four in 7⅓ innings for the victory.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3

ARLINGTON — The Seattle Mariners clinched the first .500 record in franchise history, defeating Texas behind Dave Valle's two-run double in the seventh inning

Seattle is 81-78 with three games remaining at home against the Chicago White Sox. The Mariners previously hadn't won more than 78 games since the franchise started in 1977.

Valle's extra-base hit made a winner of reliever Scott Bankhead (3-6), while handing Texas starter Jose Guzman (13-7) just his second setback in eight outings.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

NEW YORK — Steve Sax homered off the left-field foul pole in the eighth inning, giving New York a victory over Baltimore.

Baltimore had tied the game in the top of the inning on Leo Gomez's sacrifice fly off Greg Cadaret (8-6). Sax then hit his 10th home run off Mike Flanagan (2-7).

Steve Farr got three outs for his 22nd save.

Sam Horn's 23rd home run gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead in the second, but Hensley Meulens hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the inning off Arthur Rhodes, the sixth home run for Meulens and his first since July 26.

Brewers 11, Indians 4

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians set a team record with their 103rd loss, blowing an early three-run lead as Milwaukee scored four runs in the seventh and five in the eighth.

The Indians, who have baseball's worst record, lost 102 in 1914, 1971 and 1985.

Doug Jones (4-8) lost for the first time in four starts, after 271 career relief appearances.

The Indians led 3-0 and were ahead 4-2 until the seventh, when Bill Spiers hit an RBI triple, Willie Randolph singled and Greg Vaughn hit a go-ahead double. Darryl Hamilton's run-scoring single made it 6-4.

Milwaukee broke it open in the eighth on RBI singles by George Canale and Paul Molitor, a two-run single by B.J. Surhoff and a wild pitch by Jeff Shaw.

Elite field gathers at MC for Rolex

Staff Report

A regional college tennis tournament unfolds on the Midland College courts Friday and Saturday with an elite field of players, as MC hosts the Rolex Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association's Small College Regional Tournament.

Winners will head to the Rolex ITCA Small College Tennis Super Bowl next month in Corpus Christi.

"There are two tournaments being held in Texas this weekend, one here in Midland and one in Tyler, with winners from those and several others qualifying for the national small college tournament in Corpus Christi," said Joe Williams, MC tennis coach.

The Corpus Christi event includes winners of four other tournaments which have NAIA and NCAA Division II and III participants. In the men's draw will be players from Midland College, Odessa College, New Mexico Military Institute, and Collin County Community College.

The women's field includes players from Midland College, Odessa College, Cooke County, and Collin County.

MC sophomore David Draper, who won the Tri-State Open in Amarillo and last week's Wal-Mart Intercollegiate in Abilene, will be the men's singles top seed. MC freshman Lucie Ludvigova, who won the women's singles title at the Wal-Mart Invitational, will be top-seeded for the women.

Play starts at 8:30 a.m. on all 18 of the Midland College courts. Finals are scheduled for Saturday afternoon. There will be consolation play for first-round singles losers.

Both singles winners receive expense-paid trips to the Rolex Small College Super Bowl in Corpus Christi Nov. 1-3. Singles winners from that tournament advance to the main draw of the Rolex National Intercollegiate Indoor Tournament at Minneapolis in February.

Doubles teams may advance to Corpus Christi but their expenses are not paid. Midland College women have won the Rolex Small College titles the past two years — Janneke Garos in 1990 when she was a freshman and Myriam Berthe in 1991 when she was a freshman.

Berthe has been gone the past week, playing a match for her native Senegal. She isn't expected to be back in time to play in the singles events this weekend, but may arrive in time to play doubles.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look for employment opportunities to open up in travel, public relations, foreign affairs and communications. A former boss or client offers assistance in late fall. A financial venture will be successful by Christmas. Join professional organizations in January and February of 1992. Forgo making a major change next May. Late summer of 1992 is the best time to buy a new car or home.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Gore Vidal, outfielder Dave Winfield, astronaut Kathy Sullivan, actor Jack Wagner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If legal issues arise, seek the best counsel available. Luck will come through friends who are either powerful or wealthy. Self-restraint is vital. Be careful not to overindulge in food or drink.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New creative challenges inspire you. Maintain a winning attitude in love. Physical activity tones your mind as well as your body. Practice your tennis or golf stroke. Romance begins to heat up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can find new ways to achieve your goals now. Acting self-righteous could alienate a loved one. Be tolerant and stay in contact with old friends. Give yourself credit for a job well done.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Important choices must be made on the home front. An informal chat with your loved ones could lead to something big. The answer to a recurring question will come in the night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make good use of an effective communications system. Attend group events if possible. The people you reach can help raise funds or boost your social standing. Be wary of love on the rebound.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Organizing a social function boosts your popularity. Share your ideas to establish meaningful rapport with higher-ups. Stay calm when under fire. Fancy footwork puts you in the driver's seat!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Snap decisions could box you into a corner; take your time when asked to make a choice. Correspondence linked to rules or the law should be carefully assessed. Spend more time on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not be afraid to take chances! A problem can be solved if you face it squarely. Keep better tabs on your spending. A teen-ager needs tender loving care; be more supportive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A sense of humor will help you roll with the punches. Tackle a persistent problem from another angle. A fresh approach works wonders! Do not refuse an offer of help. Teamwork is favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Have more confidence in your speaking or writing ability. A health problem could be aggravated by worry. Check with trusted advisers before signing papers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be on the lookout for interesting financial opportunities. New work duties could lead you to the winner's circle. Make home repairs before they get more extensive. A last-minute plan pays off.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful what you say or write today; your words could return to haunt you. Look at the world from a loved one's eyes before passing judgment. Great tolerance is needed at home.

Opening lead: Five of ♡

For a simple squeeze to operate, declarer needs to be only one trick short of his goal and be unable to afford to lose any more tricks. If declarer still has a loser to spare, the defenders will have a safe discard and can't be squeezed.

We don't understand South's insistence on a no trump contract. Had South supported North's diamonds instead, an odds-on contract of six diamonds would surely have been reached.

After careful inspection of the combined assets, declarer saw that, barring a miracle in clubs, there were only 11 tricks to be had even with the king of clubs onside. Since there was no hurry to take the finesse, declarer won the opening lead and immediately led a spade to the king and West's ace. A heart return was taken in dummy, and declarer cashed the queen of spades before running six diamond tricks.

That proved to be too much for East, who could afford to discard one card from each of the black suits and no more. East had to keep a spade to stop dummy's nine of spades from being promoted to a trick, so the defender was forced down a doubleton king of clubs. As a result, declarer was able to land the slam by scoring three club tricks with the help of a finesse.

Look at the difference if West doesn't "correct the count" for declarer by winning the ace of spades at trick two. When declarer runs diamonds, East can discard two hearts and a card from each black suit. When declarer then cashes the second heart, East can let go of another spade. No matter what declarer does, the defenders now will either come to a club and the ace of spades or a heart and the ace of spades. Try it.

Former surgeon general plugs autobiography, rips Medicaid

GREENWICH, Conn. — Former U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop says Medicaid is a "fraud" that covers less than half the number of poor people it should.

Koop

Koop stopped in Greenwich on Tuesday to promote his autobiography. He said lack of affordable health care is the nation's largest health problem, with insurance costing more and covering less.

"Only when the middle class in America has had enough will something be done," Koop said. "Poor people are disenfranchised with the political system. When people with political clout do something, it will have repercussions for everybody."

Koop, the nation's top doctor for eight years under President Reagan, often angered the president and other conservative Republicans by openly opposing the party line.

SEATTLE — Baseball's Reggie Jackson and singer Dionne Warwick are joining some other celebrities to help young cancer victims from the Chernobyl nuclear reactor fire.

They have joined the board of the Olga Korbut Foundation and Warwick is planning a fund-raiser in the Soviet Union next spring, the foundation said Tuesday.

The foundation was founded in April at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center to help youngsters affected by the 1986 disaster. An estimated 37,000 children in Byelorussia need bone marrow transplants.

Korbut, winner of four gold and two silver medals at the 1972 and 1976 Olympics, lived in Minsk, 180 miles from Chernobyl, when the disaster occurred. Neither she nor her family have shown signs of radition-caused illness, a Hutchinson doctor has said.

Also on the foundation's board are Bill Russell, a member of the National Basketball Association's Hall of Fame, Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., and Dr. E. Donnall Thomas, a 1990 Nobel Prize winner for medicine.

NEW YORK — Model Kim Alley says that if she had it to do over, she wouldn't socialize with Donald Trump.

Alley, who said she went on a date with Trump after he broke up with fiance Marla Maples, expressed her regret in an interview taped for today's "Geraldo" television show.

Alley said she had switched from the Wilhelmina modeling agency to Elite. But she said because of the publicity about Trump, Elite changed its mind about her.

"I'm totally stressed out," she said.

Alley said Trump has "tons of charisma" but she was "very sorry" she went out with him.

Trump phoned in during the taping. He denied Alley's report that they had kissed, and said: "I met this woman for virtually a few minutes."

"I didn't like what she did, because we had essentially simple conversation and then to go all over the world broadcasting it is just ridiculous," said Trump.

"I made a big mistake Donald, you're right," Alley shot back.

NEW YORK — Ron Reagan Jr., the former president's son, may soon become a former television talk show host.

Reagan

"The Ron Reagan Show" will go on "hiatus" this month because of low ratings. That doesn't mean the show's been axed, a spokeswoman said Wednesday.

"It's been planned all along that the show would have a 13-week run, and eight weeks of reruns, and would go on hiatus after mid-October," said the show's spokeswoman in Los Angeles, Rosemary Amendola.

Although a report in New York Newsday said Reagan's syndicated series had been canceled, Amendola said no decision has been made on whether it will end or continue. That decision probably will be made next month, she said.

Reagan's weeknight series, seen on more than 100 stations and taped at public TV station KCET-TV in Los Angeles, premiered Aug. 12.

Intended for late-night viewing, it has tackled such issues as homelessness, gays, religion, AIDS, drug abuse, and why television, as Reagan joked in an interview before the show began, is "so relentlessly stupid."

GREAT FALLS, Mont. — Country-western star Hank Williams Jr. is singing the blues in Montana's mountains, where he's been denied a license to hunt elk.

In a letter to state lawmakers and officials, Williams complains he's spent more than $8 million on his Montana property and done free commercials to promote the state. So why, he asks, won't the state let him buy a hunting license?

"I'm not a Californian that just moved in and bought five acres," Williams wrote. "I think it is absolutely ridiculous that I am not allowed a non-resident hunting license."

Orangemen can make it a Sunshine State sweep vs. Seminoles

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Syracuse, which beat Florida two weeks ago, will go for a Sunshine State sweep Saturday against top-ranked Florida State.

The Orangemen are off to an impressive start, outscoring their first four opponents 130-48 and rising to No. 10 in the AP poll. On Sept. 21, they defeated No. 13 Florida 38-21 at the Carrier Dome.

"Syracuse is a good team — they proved that against Florida," said Florida State fullback Edgar Bennett. "We will have to be ready to play."

So will Syracuse.

Florida State has looked invincible in its first four games, including last week's 51-31 victory over No. 7 Michigan. The Seminoles have won 10 straight games overall and 13 in a row at home.

"We're on a mission," said offensive tackle Kevin Mancini. "We know what it takes to win it all."

The game pits Florida State's high-powered offense against Syracuse's stingy defense. The Seminoles are second nationally in scoring (48 points per game) and fifth in total offense (507 yards). The Orangemen are fourth in rushing defense (63 yards per game) and 11th in scoring defense (12 points).

The other units aren't too shabby, either. FSU's defense is giving up only 67 yards per game on the ground and Syracuse's offense is averaging 33 points per contest.

The last time they played, in 1989, Florida State ended Syracuse's 16-game home winning streak with a 41-10 victory at the Carrier Dome. The Orangemen, 17-point underdogs, would love to turn the tables Saturday and snap the Seminoles' streak at Doak Campbell Stadium. ...

AREA: Bearkats average over 43 points an outing handed the Mustangs their first loss of 1991, 6-3.

(From 1C)

"What we ran into last week in Levelland was a very good football team," Stapler said. "In the second half they just totally dominated us.

"Levelland is big up front, and teams with big defensive fronts are the ones that have given us problems this year. Fort Stockton's got some big ones up there. We'll have to make the necessary adjustments or get beat," he said.

Roscoe may need more than adjustments as Garden City has done nothing in its pre-distict campaign to tempt pollsters to alter the Bearkats' top ranking.

Garden City has averaged just over 43 points a game thus far, and Bearkat opponents have combined to score just 33 total points — and that includes the 20-point output of seventh-ranked Rankin.

Both Stanton and McCamey will be looking for their first win in 6-2A play when they meet on the Buffaloes' home field. Stanton is 0-4, 0-1 in district after last week's 42-6 defeat at the hands of Wall. The Badgers, coming off a 7-0 loss to Eldorado, take a 1-3, 0-1 mark into the fray.

The Greenwood Rangers are 2-2 following a 28-14 loss last week at Alpine. They take on a Lamesa team that is undefeated at 2-0-2. Lamesa's Tornadoes played to a scoreless tie at Crane two weeks ago, them came from behind to tie Brownfield 14-14 last week. Both teams go into district play a week from Friday.

The Midland Christian Mustangs put their perfect 4-0 record on the line against a Christoval team that scored a 68-24 win over Zephyr last week. Christoval, 2-2 overall, returns 14 lettermen from its state runnerup team of a year ago. But the Mustangs will be looking for revenge against the Cougars, who scored in double digits in four straight quarters en route to an 88-39 victory over MCS last year.

Vikings' Wilson, two other starters ousted

Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — In his biggest shakeup in six years as coach of the Minnesota Vikings, Jerry Burns on Wednesday replaced three starters, including quarterback Wade Wilson.

Rich Gannon will be given a chance to revive the Vikings' sluggish offense, which has scored just 49 points in five games and hasn't scored a touchdown in its last 10 quarters.

"We thought we needed to make a change," Burns said. "Our point production hasn't been what it has to be if we're going to be successful."

But Burns emphasized that he's not putting all the blame on Wilson for the poor offensive play of the Vikings, who have scored fewer points than any NFL team except Indianapolis and are ranked 24th in passing. And he has no plans to abandon the team's one-back offense, which features Herschel Walker.

"I know the general perception of the public is going to be that Wade is responsible for the situation, but that's entirely wrong," Burns said. "We have had dropped passes. We've had illegal procedure penalties. We've had missed assignments."

To emphasize his point that the Vikings' 2-3 start has been a team effort, Burns demoted two other starters.

Brian Habib will replace Todd Kalis at guard and John Randle will replace Al Noga at defensive end.

"There are no sacred cows," Burns said. "If any of them don't do there jobs, there'll be a change, and that applies to everyone on the club."

Although the Vikings are 8-13 over the past two seasons, most of the personnel changes Burns has made have been because of injuries.

A quarterback controversy is nothing new for Wilson, who has spent most of his 11-year career fighting for the starting job — with Tommy Kramer in the 1980s and with Gannon in recent years.

"I'll continue to work and be ready, and if I get a chance to play again I'll try to take advantage of it," Wilson said.

Burns said he began considering starting Gannon against Detroit immediately after Sunday night's 13-6 loss to Denver.

Gannon replaced Wilson with 7:20 to play and led the Vikings to Denver's 13 on a final drive that ended when Hassan Jones dropped a fourth-down pass. Gannon completed four of seven passes for 29 yards and ran twice for 13 yards on the drive.

Gannon started 12 games in place of an injured Wilson last season. He had a decent season, completing 52 percent of his passes with 16 touchdowns and 16 interceptions. But the Vikings were 5-7 in those games and he wasn't given much of a chance to win the starting job this season.

"I'll be ready Sunday," Gannon said. "I've been paying attention. I've been watching Wade, watching what's going on in practice, preparing the best I can.

"I just want to go out and play smart football and not turn the football over and just let the other guys make the plays."

Wilson admits he has struggled this season. He has completed 59 percent of his passes, but he has thrown only three touchdowns. Meanwhile, he has thrown 10 interceptions, three against Denver.

"If you lose your job, you're going to be disappointed," Wilson said. "But I can certainly understand where they're coming from."

Hadnot likely to miss Rice game with sprained ankle

AUSTIN (AP) — Butch Hadnot, the most potent cog in the University of Texas offense, probably will miss the Rice game Saturday because of a sprained ankle, Longhorns head coach David McWilliams said Wednesday.

"We're to the point where I can about rule him out," McWilliams said. "He still is very tender. He could possibly play, but at this point I would think he would be very limited."

Hadnot sprained his ankle Sept. 21 in the second quarter of the Auburn game and hasn't practiced since.

Texas' other starting running back, Adrian Walker, also didn't practice Wednesday. Walker has a sore muscle in his lower back.

"That's been a chronic problem, and it appears it isn't any better," said McWilliams, who suddenly faces a shortage of running backs.

McWilliams has Phil Brown, Patrick Wilson and freshman Shane Childers as backs who have played. He may also look at sophomore quadman Gerald Crawford and quarterback Jimmy Saxton at running back. Saxton is battling Peter Gardere for the starting quarterback job.

"We would use Jimmy (at running back) only in an emergency," McWilliams said. "But he looked good there last spring and is very capable of playing the position."

One advantage of playing Saxton, McWilliams joked, is "when (the media) ask me which quarterback will start, I could say both of them."

Prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose Wednesday, after a wave of buying based on technical market influences erased morning losses.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.33 per barrel, up 11 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil and refined products opened lower as traders responded to an American Petroleum Institute report showing the nation's supplies of crude oil, gasoline and home heating oil had risen last week. Crude for November delivery had fallen as much as 17 cents a barrel in early trading.

The buying spree began on a vague rumor from Europe that the Soviet Union was experiencing delays of seven to 10 days in exporting shipments of gas oil, the European equivalent of home heating oil.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.894 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.3 cents.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar declined in quiet dealings on world currency markets Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.07 yen to a closing 133.11 Japanese yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7519 from $1.7485 late Tuesday.

TAB meeting

Mary Miksa, government affairs manager with the Texas Association of Business will be the guest speaker at today's meeting of the Midland chapter of the TAB at the Plaza Club, Texas National Bank building, from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

She will discuss environmentalissues, both a legislative evaluation and regulatory forecast.

Cost is $15 per person.

Home sales surge

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home sales surged 6.7 percent in August to their highest level in a year, according to a government report that showed the housing recovery remained on track after a brief retreat.

Sales of new single-family homes totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 540,000, up from a sharply revised 506,000 rate a month earlier, the Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development said Wednesday.

All regions registered increased sales except for the West, where home-buying activity was flat. Sales in the Midwest, which had plunged in July, rebounded strongly and more than made up the loss.

IBM, Apple disclose pact's details

Personal computer makers to cooperate in 5 areas of technology

■ Agreements to provide chips, software for next-generation desktop models.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Apple and IBM disclosed details Wednesday of their historic technology-sharing alliance, designed to create a new standard for desktop computers and let software be interchanged between the two leading brands.

The accord startled the computer industry when first announced three months ago, because Apple Computer Inc. and International Business Machines Corp. have competed bitterly in the increasingly cutthroat personal computer industry.

But on Wednesday, executives of the two companies patted each other's backs and joked at a San Francisco news conference, broadcast to New York and other cities via satellite.

Under the agreements signed Wednesday, the two largest personal computer makers will cooperate in five areas of computer technology.

The agreements are aimed at letting Apple's popular Macintosh computers be more easily connected to IBM models, and providing computer chips and software for next-generation desktop computers.

The agreements "will launch a renaissance in technical innovation," said John Sculley, Apple's chairman and chief executive officer. "The (personal computer) heydays of the early 1980s will seem tame by comparison."

"With this alliance we believe we have the elements of truly a new era," said IBM President Jack Kuehler.

Industry analysts agreed the alliance was a milestone, but some questioned whether the two companies would be able to execute all their plans. The industry has a history of grand alliances that haven't always worked.

"Business school texts will be written about it. Succeed or fail, it's a historic agreement," said Richard Shaffer, editor and publisher of the industry newsletter ComputerLetter.

Apple and IBM will establish two joint-venture companies they will own equally.

One, called Taligent, will write new operating system software, which controls a computer's internal functions. The software will be based on a new technology called "object orientation," which makes programming computers easier by allowing programmers to reuse chunks of software code from one program to the next.

The other joint venture, called Kaleida, will develop technologies for multimedia computers, which mix text, sound and animation.

Panel backs 'pay as you go' bailout

■ Amendment would provide cleanup agency with on a quarter of what it says it needs.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House panel began the unpleasant task of replenishing the savings and loan bailout on Wednesday by adopting a "pay as you go" amendment that could make it politically impossible to sustain the program.

The amendment, sponsored by Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, D-Mass., would provide the cleanup agency, the Resolution Trust Corp., with $20 billion — only a quarter of what it says it needs.

The remaining $60 billion would go to the agency only if Congress and President Bush could agree on tax increases, spending cuts or some other way of raising the money without adding to the burgeoning federal deficit.

The RTC will have spent $80 billion in taxpayer money by the end of the month, and the Bush administration says it needs another $80 billion.

"There should be no more deficit funding of this bailout. We should end the destructive practice of passing our bills along to our children and grandchildren," Kennedy said.

The provision would save taxpayers $145 billion in interest costs, he said.

Opponents argued that Congress and the president almost certainly would be unable to agree on any "spend as you go" program, so the practical result of the Kennedy amendment would be to shut down the cleanup.

"When regulators close an institution they will be forced to put a sign in the window reading something like this: 'Attention depositors. There's no money because Congress failed to live up to its commitment,'" said Rep. Al McCandless, R-Calif.

After lengthy debate, the amendment cleared the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions, by an 18-17 vote. Only one Republican voted for it. Four Democrats voted against it.

The administration says $80 billion is needed to finish the S&L cleanup over the next two years, doubling the cost of the program.

Panel urges oil, gas industry safety shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Petrochemicals industry leaders and contractors objected Wednesday to a Texas study's suggestion that responsibility for the safety and health of their workers be shifted to the plants.

Under federal regulations, contractors currently are responsible for the safety, health and training of their workers.

A subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations heard testimony Wednesday on a study done by the John Gray Institute of the Lamar University System in Beaumont, Texas.

The study, released in July, was prompted by the 1989 plant explosion at the Phillips 66 Houston Chemical Complex in Pasadena, Texas, that killed 23 and injured 232.

Also Wednesday, the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration announced it would open a Houston office with eight field inspectors who will inspect petrochemicals operations in the heavily-industrialized area.

The institute study found that some of the most dangerous work in the petrochemicals industry is assigned to inexperienced and uneducated contract workers. They are hired by engineering and construction companies under contract to petrochemical plants.

The contract workers performed an average of one-third of the work in the nine industries surveyed in the study, commissioned by OSHA.

The workers receive less safety training than their counterparts who work directly for the petrochemical plants, the study said. They also said safety training and responsibility for contract workers should rest with the contractors, not the industry.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Ginnie Mae' is relatively safe investment

By Bill Doyle

Q. My husband and I have $20,000 in individual retirement accounts at our local teachers' credit union, where our money is drawing 7 percent interest and is insured by the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund. A stock broker suggests we roll over our IRAs into Ginnie Mae mortgage securities at about 8.75 percent.

Doyle

Would this be a wise and safe change? Would our money be insured by the government in Ginnie Maes, as it now is at the CU?

A. It would be wise as far as getting higher interest is concerned. You would give up some safety only if you sell a Ginnie Mae before it matures.

Ginnie Mae is the nickname for Government National Mortgage Association — GNMA by acronym — a division of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Each Ginnie Mae "pass-through" mortgage security is backed by a pool of Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration mortgages. As home owners make payments on the mortgages, that money — both interest and principal — is passed along to holders of the Ginnie Mae securities.

When all the mortgages are paid off, the Ginnie Mae security matures and investors have received all their money back — with interest. Timely payment is guaranteed by the U.S. Treasury, even if some or all of the mortgages go into default. There's no worry on that score.

There is some risk between the time the Ginnie Mae security is issued and when it matures. During that span, the security's market value can rise or fall. That shouldn't bother you, assuming you hold Ginnie Maes until maturity.

Q. I would like to invest in a Ginnie Mae. Every so often, you mention "no loads," meaning securities on which there is no commission charge. Can I deal directly with the government in buying a Ginnie Mae, as I do with the Federal Reserve Bank in buying U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds?

A. No. Ginnie Mae pass-through securities are not sold directly by our government. Instead, a pool of mortgages is packaged by a lender and the securities are sold by brokerage firms and, sometimes, banks.

Technically, there is no commission on Ginnie Maes. However, there is a markup — the difference between the price at which the brokerages buy the securities and the higher price at which the securities are sold to investors.

The same thing applies to Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae mortgage pass-through securities.

Q. What makes Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae pass-through securities different than Ginnie Maes?

A. A big difference is that neither Freddie Mac, short for Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., nor Fannie Mae, for Federal National Mortgage Association, securities have the same unconditional government guarantee as Ginnie Maes. Nonetheless, they are counted as very high quality investments.

Like Ginnie Maes, Freddie Macs and Fannie Maes are backed by pools of mortgages and pass along mortgage payments. But the mortgages behind Freddie Macs and Fannie Maes consist of conventional mortgages, not FHA and VA mortgages. Freddie Macs are "participation certificates." Fannie Maes are mortgage-backed securities.

The mortgages in the Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae pools are covered by private mortgage insurance. In the unlikely event losses exceed the insurance coverage, it is covered by Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae.

Q. What is the minimum I can invest in a Ginnie Mae, Freddie Mac or Fannie Mae?

A. It's $25,000 in the case of a newly issued security. However, such securities backed by partly paid-up mortgages can be purchased for less.

And shares of mutual funds holding mortgage-backed securities as investments are available in amounts as low as $1,000.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9938.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market zigzagged uncertainly today in an atmosphere of wariness over the outlook for the economy and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.70 points to 3,025.04 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

But losers slightly outnumbered gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 706 up, 748 down and 565 unchanged.

Hopes persist on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve Board will soon take further steps to ease credit conditions.

The Fed is believed to have maneuvering room to do so, given subdued inflationary pressures and continued signs that the economy is recovering only sluggishly from the recession.

However, a good many analysts suggest that the central bank is holding off on a decision until policymakers get a look at Friday's monthly report on employment.

If estimates by private economists are right, the Labor Department figures will show a modest increase in nonfarm payroll employment for September.

Among the blue chips, General Electric rose ¾ to 70⅝; Philip Morris gained ¼ to 73⅞; Pepsico added ⅜ to 29⅜, and International Business Machines was down ⅝ at 102.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .25 to 214.26. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .71 at 375.66.

Volume on the Big Board came to 114.59 million shares with two hours to go.

American Express plans overhaul

By Kurt Eichenwald
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — American Express Co., faced with mounting problems in credit-card operations, said Wednesday that it was setting aside $265 million for expected losses and to pay for a reorganization of its flagship business involving the loss of 1,700 jobs.

The reserves principally reflect major problems with the company's four-year-old Optima credit-card program that has encountered larger-than-expected delinquencies from its wealthy card holders.

Unlike the company's charge cards, which must be paid monthly, the Optima card, like Visa and Master Card, extends credit in exchange for a finance charge.

The huge reserves will yield the first loss ever for the company's Travel Related Services division, which has long been the money machine for the entire company.

American Express estimated that the division would post an annual loss of $50 million to $75 million, but made no estimate on the company's overall earnings.

The pressures on American Express, long a dominant force in the financial services industry, stem from a tide of consumer defaults on personal credit lines and underscores the harsh impact the recession has had on the white-collar workers who make up the backbone of the company's credit-card business.

The troubles also reflect, company officials said, the frustration of dealing in the credit business in an era when racking up unpayable debts has become increasingly common.

"Societal factors are now making bankruptcy more acceptable, with some raising bankrutpcy to a fine art," said Harvey Golub, vice chairman.

But American Express officials also conceded that their strategy for the credit-card business was flawed. "We haven't very successfully run a revolving-credit business," said James D. Robinson III, chairman and chief executive.

Indeed, the problems represent a failure stemming from expanding too far beyond its core business, analysts said.

"This has been a very well-run company, but the entropy has finally caught up with them," said John Keefe, an analyst with Lipper Analytical Securities. "The company got to be too big to avoid economic cycles and now they are in the soup with the rest of us."

Even with the waves of defaults, Optima, which was introduced in 1987, has been a relatively good business. "Their costs of operation were relatively low," Keefe of Lipper said of Optima. "This has actually been a fairly economical investment for them."

American Express hoped to make money from the Optima card from the combination of fees and monthly interest rates charged for credit balances. But the plan became too much of a good thing, as the balances grew and delinquencies rose, eroding profits.

The ailments in the Optima card operation have not spread to the company's charge card lines like its green American Express card or its Gold or Platinum cards. Banks have also reported steadily rising delinquencies with Visa and Mastercard holders.

One reason why Optima may be having a harder time is that its card holders are concentrated on the East and West Coasts, where the recession has hit particularly hard.

As a result of the company's reorganization, about 1,700 of American Express' employees, or 3 percent of the work force, will lose their jobs, with about 1,500 of those jobs in the New York area. The employees will include managers as well as lower-level staff members.

A $110 million charge for the reorganization will be used to pay for the costs of closing some operations, as well as severance pay and other costs associated with the dismissals.

American Express will also take a new reserve of $155 million to cover expected losses from Optima and other credit lines.

Included in the added reserves is $24 million of write-offs related to defaults by customers that were not properly reported by American Express for three quarters because of accounting problems, company officials said.

Analysts: Unocal-Shell deal may raise prices, clean air

By Gregory J. Wilcox
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Drivers can expect higher gasoline prices and a cleaner environment from Unocal Corp.'s decision to buy a portion of Shell Oil Co.'s suburban Carson refinery, according to analysts.

The deal, announced Monday, could eventually reduce the West's daily gasoline production of 1.2 million barrels from between 2.5 percent to 6 percent, since Unocal plans to shut its own Los Angeles crude processing facility.

It also will enable Unocal to produce cleaner, cheaper gasoline and save the company millions of dollars, analysts said Wednesday.

"In the grand scheme of things, over the next few months you will see prices rise," said John Vautrain, manager of the Los Angeles office of Purvin & Gertz Inc., an oil industry consulting firm.

Paul Miotok, an analyst with Morgan Stanley in New York, agreed.

"The direction is clear," he said. "With less supply available, the markets will be a little bit tighter and gasoline prices are likely to go up. It will likely be a moderate increase."

Vautrain said the increase could range from 1 to 3 cents, depending on conditions.

But Doug Elments, a spokesman for Los Angeles-based Atlantic Richfield Co., which has the biggest share of the California market, thinks intense local competition will keep prices low.

Gasoline demand in Southern California was down 2 percent through September from the like period a year ago, and the wholesale price to dealers is 5 cents less than in the states bordering the Gulf of Mexico, the nation's other major refining region, Vautrain said.

PACT: Giants unveil accord

(From 7C)

Neither company would disclose their investments in the two ventures. Each will employ several hundred people and be based in California, Apple's home state.

In addition, Apple and IBM, together with Motorola Inc., will miniaturize IBM's microprocessor used in its computer workstations, which are powerful desktop machines that resemble personal computers.

This microprocessor, based on an advanced technology called reduced instruction set computing, or RISC, would be used in future Apple and IBM models. Microprocessors serve as the "brains" of desktop computers.

IBM and Apple also will produce new operating system software that will work on both companies' workstations.

Also as part of the agreements, Apple and IBM have licensed various technologies to each other.

Analysts say Apple and IBM entered the alliance partly because of plunging profit margins in the PC market, flooded by low-cost "clone" models and hurt by the recession.

For IBM, the agreement should lessen its reliance on computer software giant Microsoft Corp., which makes the operating system software used on almost all IBM PCs. IBM and Microsoft had a falling out earlier this year after the two disagreed on the replacement for this operating system, called DOS.

For Apple, the pact should boost its sales to major corporations, which have been reluctant to buy machines that can't easily be linked to IBM-type computers.

PANEL: Worker safety discussed

(From 7C)

"In Amoco's view, the responsibility for training contract employees should rest with the contract employer, who is in the best position to facilitate and evaluate training needs for contract employees," said William Lowrie, president of Amoco Oil Co.

Larry Pope, president of Brown & Root Industrial Services Inc., a contractor, also rejected placing the burden of responsibility on the petrochemicals industry.

"We are in the best position to train our employees to meet those tasks on a site-specific, job-specific basis, and most importantly, during the execution of work, to ensure safe practices through trained and experienced supervision," Pope testified.

WAR Against Homelessness

The United Way has made a big difference in the way Midlanders take care of Midlanders. Our United Way is a campaign for the hearts, minds and lives of our community. By giving to the United Way we can fight the war against the situations that hurt our citizens, situations like homelessness.

The United Way's 17 agencies fight these battles every day by helping our citizens find a roof over their head and then by helping them get back on their feet and become self-sufficient.

Agencies involved in this battle include American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, Casa de Amigos and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Victories come in all sizes, shapes and colors. With your help, talent and resources, we're going to win this war the Midland way -- The United Way.

For visual impact, mood matters most

By Holly Hanson
N.Y. Times News Service

You click the remote control and a commercial comes into view.

Carly Simon is singing "The Stuff that Dreams Are Made Of" while a large, happy family gambols playfully across the screen. It's such a cheerful scene that you almost miss the fact that it's a commercial for the Gitano clothing company.

Click.

The screen is filled with striking black-and-white shots of a big city. Jazz is playing in the background. People whirl by. The effect is moody, provocative. It's a commercial for The Gap.

Click.

Now you see a terrified bride, her eyes large and round. An off-screen voice explains that under her gown, the woman is wearing a stretch velvet bodysuit and rubberized black leggings. She's stashed her leather motorcycle jacket in the church, too, just in case.

It's puzzling, sure. It's an ad for casual clothes by A LINE Anne Klein.

Click.

You probably remember these ads, all of them recently created for major clothing companies. But do you remember any of the clothes they promote? It's unlikely, for the clothes are not really the point.

THE POINT is image. And clothing companies across the country are scrapping the classic pretty-model-in-new-dress approach in favor of offbeat, attention-getting ads that show everything but clothes.

Consider this news-release description of the ad campaign that will be used to launch A/X: Armani Exchange, Giorgio Armani's new line of casual wear.

"No models. No copy. Instead, a nut and bolt. Side by side. In a stark, black-and-white photograph. The image is clear..."

Get it? The nut and bolt are meant to symbolize basics, for that is what the A/X line will be. Will it pique your interest? Will you remember the name? Armani sure hopes so.

That was the rationale, too, behind the striking A LINE commercials. The TV ads were almost bizarre. In addition to the above-mentioned bride, one spot featured a photo of a dog, with voice-over copy that described what the dog had worn in a previous human life.

Is it any wonder the first ad premiered on the last episode of "Twin Peaks?"

There was, however, a method to the seeming madness.

"The TV commercials are thought-provoking, to generate an interest in what A LINE is all about," said Connie Francis, vice president of advertising for Anne Klein Companies. "In print, we use very precise, clean photography, with (a garment) on a model as a beautiful still life. That will be our statement."

NOT EVERY fashion company chooses to be so literal, however. Calvin Klein has used his ads to send a sexy message for more than a decade. He got the ball rolling 10 years ago, when he dressed slender young models in his brand new jeans and photographed them lolling around in front of the camera.

"Nothing comes between me and my Calvins," cooed Brooke Shields, who was 15 then.

The ads were considered outrageous, but at least the models were fully dressed. All that has changed, however.

Klein's newest jeans ad shows a well-muscled man standing in a shower, rivers of water coursing over his sculpted shoulders. His face isn't visible, but most of the rest of his body is. In fact, he's saved from total nudity only by a button-trimmed strip of denim, which he clutches at crotch level, fig-leaf style.

The careful reader will figure out that the denim strip is a pair of jeans, but what the jeans look like isn't the point. The point is image: sex appeal.

Nor is the look of the jeans a crucial selling point for Guess?, whose black-and-white ads feature exotic locations and gorgeous models but no descriptive copy and rarely a pair of jeans. The ads are the brainchild of Guess? advertising director Paul Marciano, one of four brothers who own the Los Angeles-based company.

"Paul has favorite old movies and books from the '20s through the '50s, and he likes to capture them in his ads," said Leah Levy Soltas, associate director of public relations for Guess?. "This all conveys an image of mystery and sensuality that's been felt through every campaign: Who is that woman and what is she doing there?"

One campaign featuring model Claudia Schiffer looked behind the scenes of a movie set in Greece; a current one, starring models Karen Mulder and Shana Zedrick, takes them to Las Vegas, with Mulder dressed in a spangly showgirl outfit. ("Which we don't make," Soltas helpfully pointed out.)

THOUGH GUESS? has begun to experiment with color in its ads, there are no plans to scrap the arty photos in favor of straightforward shots of jeans.

"The Guess? image is going to stay," Soltas said. "For us to deviate from our image could be very confusing for the customer."

For one advertising expert, however, the image ads are already confusing for the customer.

"Good advertising should make the product the star as well as what the product stands for," said Stanley Tannenbaum, associate professor and chairman of the integrated marketing communications department at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. "It all should start with the product."

The best fashion ads — and Tannenbaum likes Ralph Lauren's photos of golden-haired preppies in their perfect plaids and khakis — mix product with mood.

"You can create an identity for a line of clothes that coincides with the customer's lifestyle or dreams of a lifestyle," he said. "Lauren does it brilliantly. And obviously, it's what people want."

'We'll always have to take our ads to another level to keep things interesting. But we'll always keep the base of it. This image we've built is so strong; we've got to keep it and take it some place from there.'

— Patti Cohen
fashion and public relations director
Donna Karan New York

Donna Karan, too, has tried to create an enviable lifestyle in the print ads for her 6-year-old clothing company, Donna Karan New York. Karan always has used her own wardrobe needs as a basis for her collection, so it's not surprising that the ads also mirror Karan's life.

THE ADS HAVE run the gamut from a black-and-white photo of the New York skyline, done in the early days of the company when that was all Karan could afford, to elaborate set-ups showing model Rosemary McGrotha riding in a limo, getting dressed to go out or working at her desk with a baby nearby.

The clothes and accessories are Karan's designs, of course, but there's no attempt to showcase or describe them. "Donna Karan New York" is the only copy.

"The ads are about a lifestyle, a feeling," said Patti Cohen, Karan's fashion and public relations director. "It's not about the clothes so much as it is a backdrop for the woman: 'Doesn't she look great? I want to be like her.' That's the feeling we've always tried for."

The same approach has been carried through to Karan's new menswear line, which will debut next year. The first ad shows a man dressed in a black overcoat, standing on a New York corner.

"We'll always have to take our ads to another level to keep things interesting," Cohen said. "But we'll always keep the base of it. This image we've built is so strong; we've got to keep it and take it some place from there."

A wholly different image is the focal point of a new ad campaign for Esprit de Corp, the San Francisco sportswear company. After a recent period of turmoil in which the company's ownership changed hands, Esprit has re-emerged with a splashy campaign that features young women talking about how they'd change the world.

The catalyst for the ads was Susie Tompkins, who last year became sole owner of the company she founded 20 years ago with her husband, Doug.

"SUSIE WAS interested in getting involved, in using the energy of a big corporation to do things both for the environment and the country," said Rebecca Shafer, image and public relations consultant for Esprit. "She feels very strongly about supporting the youth of America, and she wanted to give them a platform."

A year ago, Tompkins printed a brochure asking customers, "What would you change?" Thousands of responses came back, Shafer said. The best of them became ads.

One ad stars Rachel Hirsch of Massachusetts, who says, "Keep a woman's right to choose unless George Bush is free to baby-sit." In another, Shannon Going of California says, "I'd teach everybody that nobody is a nobody."

The Esprit name is low-key; most of the young women wear their own clothes. But the reaction from retailers is said to be positive, and one advertising authority believes Esprit has latched onto an important youth trend.

"The environment clearly is a major topic for teens and young adults," said William C. Moncrief, associate profession and chairman of the marketing department at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. "So if it's being discussed in an ad, it would help (a company) get attention."

Moncrief firmly believes this sort of image advertising can work well.

"To be associated with a product, you don't need to show the attributes of the product," he said. "The whole thing is image, that's all clothing companies are doing. What they're trying to do is say it's cool."

AS ESPRIT sees it, the new ads are more than cool; they're honest.

"This is a campaign about kids that kids are reading," Shafer said. "We relate better to youth. We're showing them we understand where they're at."

And the payoff, she said, is this: "We think kids are going to say, 'I'm really proud of that company, and if I've got to buy clothes, I'll buy theirs.'"

DEAR ABBY

'Any lie' doesn't nullify license

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I married at the age of 14. My husband was 18. We both lied about our ages, swearing that I was 18 and he was 21. Our marriage lasted 14 years, during which time we had three lovely children, and then a very messy divorce!

Van Buren

Two years later, I married a truly wonderful man. We have been married 24 years.

Now I find that my first marriage wasn't legal because I didn't know that any lie on a marriage license makes it null and void.

Also, Arkansas law states that no one under the age of 16 can get married, even with parental consent. (Check with a lawyer.)

Please, Abby, let people know about these laws. It's not only Arkansas that has this law, it's almost every state. Maybe we can save some other poor soul from going through what I did 26 years ago. The hurt never goes away, even if you do find out 26 years later. I wish someone would have let me know of those laws! — ENLIGHTENED IN MYRTLE CREEK, ORE.

DEAR ENLIGHTENED: According to the offices of the County Clerk and the County Attorney in Little Rock, Ark., couples under the age of 17 may marry, but only with parental consent. And if they are 15 and under, they may marry only if they are expecting a child — or are already the parents of a baby. In either case, parental consent is needed, and if they already have had their baby, they must also provide the birth certificate.

Also — it is NOT TRUE that "any lie" on a marriage certificate makes it null and void! It is understood that any fact used by consenting persons at the time a standard marriage license is issued (even if incorrect) does not automatically void the marriage license.

DEAR ABBY: My father died when I was 4, and my mother remarried.

When I was 13, my mother died, leaving my brother and me to live with our alcoholic stepfather. This is a man for whom I have no love or respect — only sympathy. He abused me mentally and also physically, so I moved out when I was 18.

Now I am making out my wedding invitation list. Do I have to invite him? I don't want to hurt his feelings, but I am afraid of how he will act and what he may say to other guests. My stepfather and I haven't spoken in years. He makes no effort, and the farther I stay away from him, the happier I am.

Please help me out. I want to do the right thing, but I don't want him to spoil my wedding day. — WHAT TO DO

DEAR WHAT TO DO: You answered your own question when you wrote: "The farther I stay away from him, the happier I am," and signed off with, "I don't want him to spoil my wedding day."

Now, give yourself a wedding gift and don't risk inviting anyone who may spoil your wedding day.

Problems? Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT WIT'S END

Good 'whine' gets better with age

By Erma Bombeck

Have you ever noticed that the older we get, the poorer we were as kids, the more we struggled to stay alive and the longer the walk was to school?

Bombeck

I notice it with my own mother. I used to sit bug-eyed as she told stories about how as a kid she tucked her long underwear into her high-top shoes because she didn't own a pair of socks. Later, she graduated to lard sandwiches in her lunch tin, which she shared with her best friend — a cockroach.

Mom made poverty sound so adventurous that I was sick to have missed the Depression.

To impress my own children, I too began to regale them with tales of my childhood. I told them that we were so poor, I poured coffee over two slices of bread in the morning for breakfast and pretended it was coffee cake. I related how my sister and I carried cold pork chop sandwiches (with the bone left in) for our lunches. They looked at me with the admiration usually reserved for a scientist who had just discovered a cure for polio.

Throughout the years I have noticed that the hours I spent in labor with them have increased from seven or eight to three days and nights of unspeakable agony.

The sacrifices I have made on their behalf have also magnified. A few weeks ago, I told them I actually painted my varicose veins with black crayon to simulate textured stockings so they could have money for a shirt with an alligator on the pocket.

All of this makes me wonder. Did Dolly Parton's mother really send her to church in a coat of many colors she made out of sewing scraps, or did it start out as a hand-me-down from Saks and the story got better with years of telling?

What prompted all of this was that the other day my daughter was telling a friend about her school days in Ohio. She said the school was five miles away, and sometimes when the chill factor was 20 below zero, she didn't want to go to school, but we made her go and said, "The fresh air is good for you."

The school was five miles away. That part is true. What she left out was that the school bus stopped for her at the end of our driveway.

So what! Probably the Rockefeller kids tell their children they had it tough. They ate Caviar Helper and had to clean their own pools. It's all relative.

Deadbeat dad pleads guilty to dodging payments

PHOENIX (AP) — A man who topped a national list of deadbeat dads pleaded guilty Wednesday dodging child support payments for a decade.

Gregory Morey, 35, admitted guilt as part of an agreement in which prosecutors dropped one of three felony charges that he failed to pay $600-a-month in support since September 1982.

The state attorney's office said Morey owed $74,000 in back payments and $34,000 in interest.

Assistant Attorney General Marian Yim said Morey agreed to pay $66,600 in restitution plus interest and other judgments to be set Oct. 30, when Morey is sentenced.

He faces up to 1½ years in prison and three years' probation on each count.

"I'd like to see him get some jail time out of this," said Morey's ex-wife, Susan Aldrich, who was on welfare for three years while trying to raise their children.

"It's a shame the system works like it does and we have had to struggle for this long. It's 10 years of torture on his children that can't be paid back."

Morey, of Scottsdale was living in Wyoming when the couple divorced in 1981. Now remarried with a 1-year-old daughter, Morey has lived in six Western states since his divorce.

Mrs. Aldrich, 33, remarried six years ago and lives in suburban Phoenix. She has custody of the children she had during her marriage to Morey — a 15-year-old boy and two girls, ages 12 and 16.

"When we broke up, Greg said, 'You got the kids, you got the responsibility,'" Mrs. Aldrich said.

Morey told Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Robert Gottsfield he never made the court-ordered payments because he doubts two of the three children are his.

'It's a shame the system works like it does and we have had to struggle for this long. It's 10 years of torture on his children that can't be paid back.'

— Susan Aldrich

"It's a cheap shot at his children," Mrs. Aldrich said. "He says the girls don't look like him but the son does."

Morey and his attorney declined comment outside court.

He surrendered in July after his name appeared atop a list of fathers delinquent in support payments compiled by the National Council of Child Support Enforcement Administrators, a professional organization.

Morey said he was fired as a Salt Lake City restaurant manager when his boss learned of the report that came out in May.

Morey asked the judge to be allowed to move to Carlsbad, N.M., to manage a restaurant. Morey should post a $10,000 bond he is allowed to travel out of state, Ms. Yim said. Gottsfield said he would rule on that request Friday.

Cartel staff pilot testifies

MIAMI (AP) — A one-time pilot for the chief of Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel took the stand for the prosecution Wednesday in Manuel Noriega's trial, but had little to say about the former Panamanian leader.

The testimony by David Ortiz, 35, appeared intended to shore up star witness Floyd Carlton's account of drug flights from Colombia to Panama.

Ortiz spent eight years as a Colombian air force trainer and pilot before retiring in 1982 and agreeing to fly for Medellin cartel leader Pablo Escobar.

He said his first flights were legal, but in November 1982 he was asked to accompany Carlton on a cocaine flight to a remote airstrip in Panama. Carlton has testified he paid Noriega $100,000 to protect that flight.

Ortiz said the cartel's chief pilot, Ignacio "Nacho" Castrillon, told him his co-pilot was well connected.

"Several times Nacho told me Floyd Carlton had a very good relationship with Manuel Noriega," Ortiz testified. But he said the pilot made no other mention of Noriega, and wasn't present at meetings between Carlton and Escobar when the Panamanian leader was discussed.

Ortiz said he accompanied Carlton on two flights from Medellin to Panama in late 1982. He then tried to take in one load on his own in the summer of 1983, but the delivery was aborted when Panama's health minister coincidentally arrived for vacation at the airstrip and security men arrested the cartel's ground crew.

On cross-examination, Ortiz said he was arrested flying drugs into the French Caribbean island of Guadaloupe in 1987, and sentenced to 14 years and fined $90 million.

Ortiz is one of Noriega's co-defendants on drug-trafficking charges. But under a plea bargain he in effect receives no U.S. sentence, and prosecutors agree to advise French authorities of his cooperation.

Wayward whales beach on Cape Cod; more die

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) — A group of wayward pilot whales beached themselves Wednesday for the fourth time this week and the whale thought to be their leader died.

Four other ailing whales were euthanized and would-be rescuers were grim about chances of saving the remaining seven tired, battered whales.

"They might have done all right had they gone out to sea, but this pattern of coming back to shore doesn't show any sign of breaking," said Vikki Corliss, a spokeswoman for the New England Aquarium in Boston.

The dozen whales that beached near Barnstable on Cape Cod were survivors of a larger group that began going ashore Sunday. They returned to deep water at high tide after the first episode, but one died and four were put to death Monday after beaching again.

The pod beached near Barnstable on Tuesday, but were able to swim out of danger, led by a police boat.

Judge moves up rape trial

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A judge Wednesday moved up William Kennedy Smith's rape trial by more than two months.

The trial had been set to start Jan. 13, but Smith's lead attorney is scheduled to defend a client in another trial starting a week earlier. Prosecutor Moira Lasch argued that letting that date stand could force Smith's trial to be delayed until next summer.

Circuit Judge Mary Lupo then ordered that jury selection begin Oct. 30. She scheduled opening statements to begin Dec. 2 and said the six jurors — who might be sequestered — wouldn't be sworn in before then.

Attorneys in the case have estimated jury selection could last three weeks or more. Ms. Lupo said in her order that the two sides expect trial testimony to last two to three weeks, and she wrote that the trial will end "on or before Dec. 20."

Trial will be held on weekdays, but also on weekends if necessary to meet the deadline.

"The court cannot tolerate the possibility that trial ... could be delayed to May or June 1992," Ms. Lupo said.

EXHIBIT I

Notice of Intent by Glasscock Commissioners Court to Reapportion County Commissioners Precincts

The Federal Voting Rights Act requires County Commissioner Courts to meet certain requirements and in order to be in compliance with the Federal statue. Glasscock County Commissioners Court has determined that new commissioner precinct lines need to be established.

The County plans to provide opportunity for all persons in the community to participate in the process by which the final boundary lines will be drawn. Comments, suggestions, and proposed plans are welcome. A public hearing on reapportioning commissioner precincts will be held on October 8th at 10:00 a.m.

Maps showing the boundaries preliminarily proposed by the County are available for no charge. These maps may be obtained from or examined at the Judge's office at Courthouse.

Any persons or group that wishes to submit a proposed redistricting plan for the commissioners court's consideration should submit the plan to the county clerk on or before October 7th, so that the plan may be inspected prior to the public hearing to be held on October 8th. The following criteria will be used by the commissioners court in assessing plans for adoption.

1. Any plan should not operate to dilute the voting strength of racial or language minority citizens.

2. Any plan should not fragment minority communities or pack them into districts in concentrations greater than needed to elect minority representation.

3. Any plan should be drawn to conform with geographic boundaries utilized by the Bureau of the Census in the 1990 census to the extent possible unless other reliable sources are used.

4. Any plan should be based on 1990 census data unless it can be shown that other more reliable sources were used.

5. Any districts should be composed of territory that is contiguous and reasonably compact.

6. Any plan, to the extent possible, should preserve historical boundaries, and should recognize clearly identifiable economic or community interests.

These criteria should be followed in any redistricting plans submitted for the County's consideration.

If anyone or groups would like to submit a plan or make comments or suggestions, the County is very much interested in receiving them for consideration during the redistricting process. Please feel free to call W.E. Bednar at 354-2382 if you have questions about the redistricting process.
