Iraq 'hits, destroys' unidentified convoy

By The Associated Press

Iraq said its jetfighters and warships today attacked a convoy of ships in the Persian Gulf off Iran's coast, "hitting and destroying six of them."

An Iraqi military spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad state radio, said the six unidentified "navy vessels" were attacked near the Iranian bay of Khor Moussa at the north end of the gulf.

Iraq's official news agency described the action as "a violent and surprise attack." No further details were given about the identity of the vessels, and there was no independent confirmation of the report.

The reported attack came just hours before the U.N. Security Council was scheduled to begin an emergency meeting to consider action to discourage attacks on commercial ships in the gulf.

The attacks, staged by both Iran and Iraq as part of their 44-month-old war, have raised fears that other gulf countries and perhaps the United States might become involved in the conflict.

On Thursday, an Iranian warplane attacked a Liberian-registered tanker in the gulf in retaliation for attacks earlier in the day by Iraqi warplanes on two ships south of the Iranian oil port of Kharg Island, U.S. intelligence sources said.

The military spokesman in Baghdad said today's attacks "underline our determination to maintain and tighten" the four-month blockade imposed by Iraq on Iranian ports. The attacks came less than 48 hours after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein pledged to intensify the blockade.

Gulf shipping sources say 27 ships have been damaged during the blockade.

An Iranian F-4 attacked the tanker Chemical Venture on Thursday, U.S. State Department spokesman John Hughes said in Washington, quoting intelligence sources in the gulf region.

A spokesman for Japan Line Ltd., which chartered the ship, said the 31 crew members were rescued by a Saudi Arabian naval vessel. Shipping sources in Bahrain today said 10 of the crewmen were hospitalized with injuries and the ship, set ablaze by a single missile, was out of danger.

John Boven, a spokesman for International Transport Contractors in the Netherlands, said a company tug reported from the gulf that fire swept through all storage areas of the ship, but the abandoned Chemical Venture was not seriously damaged.

"The engine room is intact, so the damage, I would say, is not very serious," Boven said.

Hughes said Saudi planes chased the attacking plane, without making contact, but the Saudi Defense Ministry today denied its planes were involved.

The reported attack came about six hours after Iraq said its warplanes hit two "big" naval targets south of Kharg Island — the first air action since an Iraqi plane hit a Panamanian freighter last Friday.

Salvadoran aid decision delayed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Final congressional action on emergency military aid for El Salvador is being put off until next month, giving the White House time to try and overcome House rejection of aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

The Democrat-controlled House approved the administration-backed Salvadoran aid proposal by a vote of 267-154 on Thursday, but coupled it with a ban on any more spending in this fiscal year for the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration wanted both the $62 million in aid for El Salvador and the $21 million approved earlier by the Republican-controlled Senate for support of the anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua.

Faced with the impasse, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., announced that the Senate would take no action until after returning June 4 from its Memorial Day recess.

Speakes said the White House would "not accept any legislation" containing a clause terminating funds for the rebels, either immediately or over a wind-down period.

While the House bill would not terminate the program, it would bar the administration from seeking funds in a later supplemental appropriation for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

"From the White House's standpoint, it does tie their hands at this point," said a Senate Republican source.

The White House is expected to spend the recess lobbying both House and Senate members in an attempt to arrive at a compromise close to the Senate figure.

It will be an uphill battle in the House, where 24 Republicans joined 217 Democrats in voting against CIA funds for the Nicaraguan rebels, known in Spanish as contras. Voting against the spending ban were 132 Republicans and 45 Democrats.

Democratic members of the House Intelligence Committee led the attack on the undercover aid program, with Chairman Edward J. Boland, D-Mass., calling upon his House colleagues to "end this senseless war."

Committee member Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., told the House, "We are doing under the table what we are not brave enough to go to the American people and say that we, in concert with our allies if the threat is so great, want to do openly."

But the ranking Republican on the committee, Rep. J. Kenneth Robinson of Virginia, said, "There is no honor in abandoning friends in the heat of battle; there is no honor in leaving free people of Central America as fodder for the Sandinista machine."

Postal workers sorting piles of charred mail

The Associated Press

TEMPLE, Texas — U.S. Postal Service officials are sorting through mounds of charred and mutilated mail after a fiery car-truck collision killed two people and destroyed an estimated 28,000 outgoing letters and parcels.

Witnesses said the mail truck, enroute to Temple, veered into an oncoming lane of traffic early Wednesday evening and hit a car. Both vehicles burst into flames and outgoing mail from four cities was strewn across a farm-to-market road.

"This is the first time in almost 20 years that I've dealt with something like this, in the 765 (zip code) area," Temple Postmaster Sam Cater said Wednesday.

He said only about 5 percent of an estimated 30,000 letters and parcels in the truck were saved. The salvaged mail was taken to the Temple post office, where it should be sorted and readdressed by the end of this week.

But Cater warned that much of the remaining first-class, registered and insured items might be unmailable.

An unidentified 18-year-old man, the car's driver, and a 20-year-old passenger, were killed, a Bell County sheriff's spokesman said.

The driver and his passenger, David Bailey of Killeen, were pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Doyle Hardin of Killeen. The driver's name was being withheld.

The truck's driver, 48-year-old Henry Graves of Belton, remained in stable condition at Olin E. Teague Veterans' Hospital in Temple, said a spokesman.

The accident is under investigation by law enforcement officials and postal authorities, who say they don't know why the mail truck collided nearly head-on with the car on Farm-to-Market Road 439 west of this Central Texas city.

The truck was carrying mail that had been deposited in Lampasas, Kempner, Killeen and Copperas Cove before the accident at about 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Convention planner discusses overruns

The Associated Press

DALLAS — The man in charge of planning the Republican National Convention says he doesn't know if the GOP can help the city of Dallas pay for overruns in security funds.

Convention Manager Ron Walker said Thursday city officials have yet to request funds from the GOP, but "we'll address it when we come to it."

The GOP has received $6.06 million from the U.S. Treasury to stage the convention on Aug. 20-23. A local group is trying to raise an additional $4.4 million by Aug. 1. About $2 million of that amount would be used for security.

But Assistant City Manager Levi Davis said the city already is $500,000 over budget.

Walker, who has been in Dallas since May 1, has been working with the media, local, state and national party officials and the White house to get "as good a convention as this party has seen.

"We'll do everything we can to highlight the record of this professionally run, smart party project," Ron Walker told members of the Dallas GOP Men's Club on Thursday. "If we portray President and Mrs. Reagan and Vice President Bush and Mrs. Bush in the best light we can say we have done our jobs."

He said former President Gerald Ford will attend the convention, which will feature a podium design that will enable delegates to see the president at all times, said Walker, a former special assistant to President Nixon.

Walker presented a model of the design, which abandons the red, white and blue colors for earth-tone ones.

"It's a very exciting and new concept, a dramatic change from the past," he said.

White calls June 4 session on schools, roads

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White today called the Legislature into special session beginning June 4 to consider his $4.8 billion plan for raising taxes to fund school reforms and highway improvements.

White told the crowded news conference he made the decision after talks with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis, and many legislators.

"I am convinced the leadership of the House and Senate are ready to act now, and after talking with many legislators I am convinced they are ready to act now," White said.

He said there would be two main issues in his call for the special 30-day session:

— Education, along with some financial relief for poor school districts.

— Improvements in the state highway system.

"As necessary, and only with the approval of the lieutenant governor and speaker of the House, and my approval, there will be other issues, but only after there is substantial progress made on the education issue," White said.

Thursday, after talking with White, a group of supporters of state aid to poor school districts quoted White as saying the session would be "sometime between June 4 and 11."

"We asked him if there was going to be a special session and he said 'Yes,' that it will be sometime between June 4 and 11," said Sonia Hernandez, spokeswoman for the Industrial Areas Foundation Texas Network.

Her group, representing nine organizations in the network, spent almost an hour with White in his private office Thursday discussing relief for tax-poor school districts.

"The governor has once again indicated his commitment to a plan that tries to come up with the maximum amount of money feasible for equalization for the poor districts of the state," said San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who sat in on the closed-door session.

"He wants to deal with the reality of the poor districts and the fact that people on the lower rungs of the education ladder, as he put it, have 'tragically inadequate' education opportunities."

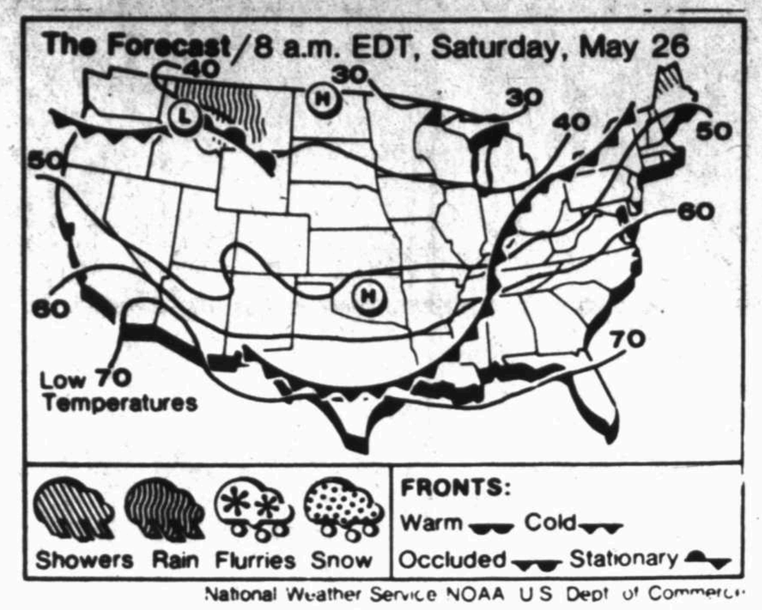
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA U S Dept of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts generally clear skies and warm weather for most of the nation Saturday.

Cloudy conditions likely on Memorial Day weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

This is Memorial Day weekend, and the skies above the Permian Basin will observe this somber occasion by remaining partly cloudy through Monday, though temperatures will be warm, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be partly cloudy, with a low in the mid 60s and a 20 percent chance of thundershowers. Winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph, shifting to a northeasterly direction later in the night. Saturday will again be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thundershowers. The high will be in the mid 80s, and winds will be from the northeast at 10-20 mph. It will be partly cloudy and warm for the rest of the weekend.

Thursday's high of 92 didn't approach the record of 102, set in 1964, and the overnight low of 66 was well above the record of 50, set in 1954.

STATE

Small amounts of precipitation were reported throughout West Texas early today from thunderstorms that moved through the region after forming Thursday evening in eastern New Mexico.

Midland recorded .25 of an inch during the early morning, while Lubbock received just under that amount.

Low clouds and light fog developed in the moist air along the coastal plains. The low clouds moved inland into portions of South Central texas. Skies were mostly fair across North Texas.

Tower charts Congress' changes

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — John Tower, reflecting on a lengthy Senate career that ends this year, says erosion of the seniority system has been the "most striking change" in the Congress since he arrived 23 years ago.

The change is "not necessarily for the best," Tower told the Texas Breakfast Club in a swan-song speech on Thursday.

Tower was named chairman of the Armed Services Committee when Republicans gained a majority in the Senate in 1981. He is not seeking re-election this year.

"I should like the (new) system better because I am now a committee chairman and it took me damn near 20 years to get to be one, but sometimes I long very much for the old days," Tower said.

"We got our business done with considerably more dispatch in those days," he said. "Now we get a record vote on everything. In those days, you didn't get a record vote on anything in the Senate unless the leadership of both parties determined that there should be a record vote."

Recorded votes now are taken on demand of a majority of members present.

Tower said there were about 75 recorded votes his first year, and now there are 300-400 per session.

The seniority system was upended after the 1974 elections when a huge crop of freshmen arrived on Capitol Hill.

The mavericks rebelled against a system that sometimes let long-time but ineffective members of Congress ascend to chairmanships by virtue of their time in office.

Tower said he arrived in Washington "with just about enough influence to be sure of my own vote."

When he was introduced to then-Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Tower said, "I wanted to kiss his ring, but he wasn't wearing one.

"We got a new breed of cat these days," he said.

Tower said he would leave Congress with the suggestion that it try to reclaim some of its power over domestic issues and leave foreign policy to the president.

"I would hope that future congresses would again resort to bipartisan support of the president, Democrat or Republican, on foreign policy and security matters and reclaim some of the authority it has delegated away to boards and commissions and executive branch agencies in the field of domestic affairs," Tower said.

He drew laughter when he added that the suggestion "is probably one that will be disregarded like s many of my suggestions over th years."

In answer to questions from th Texans in Washington who attende the breakfast, Tower declined t make any predictions about the elec tion that will fill his seat. Con gressman Phil Gramm won the Republican primary. Congressman Kent Hance and state Sen. Lloyd Doggett meet in a runoff June 2 to decide the Democratic nominee.

"Nobody but yankees and fools try to predict the weather in Texas — or elections," Tower said.

He also jokingly declined to give personal assessments of his colleagues, saying he was saving them for a book. It will be a "boring" book, he said, because "in this business, you can only speak ill of the dead."

"Most of them aren't dead yet," he said.

Iran-Iraq background examined

The Associated Press

THE COMBATANTS

Iran, a nation of 40 million people, has fielded up to 2 million fighters, including paramilitary forces, and Iraq, which has 14 million people, has armed forces totaling about half a million, the International Institute for Strategic Studies reports.

Economically, both countries traditionally have depended on the export of crude oil and oil products for more than 90 percent of their foreign earnings. The Iraqi war effort reportedly has been supported by tens of billions of dollars in aid from other Arab states.

THE WAR

The conflict started in September 1980, when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent an invasion force pouring across the border into Iran.

His goal appears to have been twofold: to take control of disputed border territories, including full control of the Shatt-al-Arab border estuary, and to bring down the Moslem fundamentalist regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in Iran.

The Iraqi invasion succeeded at first. Iraq's troops penetrated as far as 50 miles into Iran. They captured the port of Khorramshahr and besieged the city of Abadan.

Since January 1981, however, the Iranians have launched 17 major counter-offensives, relying heavily on "human wave" assaults, and have gradually retaken almost all the lost territory, including Khorramshahr.

CASUALTIES

Official Iranian and Iraqi reports of casualties have proved to be unreliable.

Even before Iran launched its latest ground offensives last February, official U.S. sources were quoted as saying at least 125,000 Iranians and 50,000 Iraqis had been killed in the war. An Iranian military doctor who fled to the West has told The Associated Press that probably 1 million Iranians have been killed or wounded.

DAMAGE

Along the border, some smaller Iranian towns have been destroyed. The cities of Basra in Iraq, and Khorramshahr, Abadan and Dezful in Iran have been severely damaged.

The war also has damaged or shut down oil-producing and shipping facilities in both countries. Iranian oil production dropped to about 1 million barrels a day from more than 3 million, but has since rebounded to more than 2 million. Iraq's production, once more than 3 million barrels, now stands at only 1 million.

In recent months, the conflict has affected merchant shipping in the Persian Gulf more directly. Since January, more than 20 vessels have been attacked by either Iran or Iraq.

No widespread opposition seen to missile sale, administration says

WASHINGTON (AP) — As warring Iraq and Iran escalated their aerial bombardment of non-combatant ships in the Persian Gulf, Reagan administration officials reported there was no widespread opposition in Congress to the urgent sale of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia to help defend against possible attacks.

Consultations with Congress were moving ahead as quickly as possible and an announcement was likely to be made by the end of the week, said officials who asked that they not be identified.

One issue still to be resolved was whether to give the Congress 30 days notice of the sale or for President Reagan to make use of his emergency powers and send the missiles immediately.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said on Thursday "we really have no preference, pending our discussions of the matter fully with the Congress." The administration intends to "actively and fully discuss this matter with the leadership on the Hill before we proceed in any fashion with the sale," he said.

"There is an urgency to the situation there and that is probably why this one item is in the forefront at the moment," Speakes said.

The New York Times said in Friday editions that Reagan administration officials have reportedly told members of Congress that some intelligence analysts believe Iran may be planning to attack Saudi Arabian oilfields and send suicide planes against oil tankers.

The Times said such reports were being cited as support for the tentative administration decision to provide Saudi Arabia with 1,200 portable Stinger antiaircraft missiles. The Times quoted congressional staff members as saying that 200 missiles would be provided immediately and 1,000 later. The Washington Post also reported that the Reagan administration is leaning toward the plan of dispatching 200 Stingers now under emergency powers and sending 1,000 later after going through the normal processes of congressional review.

The Stinger is a ground-to-air missile that is fired from a soldier's shoulder. It can be utilized on short notice, but its range is only three miles.

SHIPS

A spokesman for the Dutch salvage company Smit International said in Bahrain that three tugs left Manama to help the Chemical Venture. Manama-based shipping officials said they had no other reports of ships in distress in the gulf.

Shipping sources in Manama said the 28,622-ton Chemical Venture was hit by a single rocket 37 miles east of Saudi Arabia, off Jubail. It was the first attack on a ship related to Japan reported in the war.

Iraq has attacked ships in a declared war zone near Kharg Island in an attempt to halt Iranian oil shipments. Iran has been accused by the United States, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia of attacking ships outside the war zone in retaliation, but Iran has denied this.

Iran has said that if shipment of Iranian oil is blocked it would close the Persian Gulf to all shipping. President Reagan has said the United States would not allow the Strait of Hormuz to be closed.

Today's U.N. Security Council meeting was requested by the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council, which wants the U.N. council to approve a draft resolution denouncing Iran for attacks on Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian ships.

Dealer denies 12th century fresco forged

DALLAS (AP) — The Swiss art dealer who sold a 12th century ceiling fresco to the Kimbell Art Museum of Fort Worth denies that the work is a forgery, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Museum officials earlier this week said a two-year investigation had shown that the Romanesque work was a fate painted by a restorer about 50 years ago. The fresco was bought by the museum for $330,000 in 1970, and was displayed until 1982, when it was stored to accommodate a temporary exhibit.

"It is not possible, it is simply not possible," the art dealer, Roger Ferrero, said when contacted at his home in Geneva, the Times Herald said.

Ferrero said he saw the fresco himself on the wall of an abandoned chapel near Avignon, France. He asserted that the ceiling was removed and restored by distinguished Avignon art restorer Marcel Simon, rather than created in Simon's workshop as museum officials allege.

"This is very serious," Ferrero said. "That was not the only one. There are Simon restorations in museums all over the world. Switzerland, America — everywhere."

Kimbell officials said their investigation also challenged Simon-restored frescoes in at least a half dozen museums. In Rochester, N.Y., officials of another museum with Simon-restored frescoes confirmed it had sent specimens to a laboratory for chemical analysis.

Kimbell officials said Thursday that the opinions of Ferrero and London-based art consultant Walter Goetz, who helped the Kimbell purchase the work and who defended its authenticity to the Times Herald, did not lessen their doubts.

"Our suspicions are very strong," Kimbell director Edmund Pillsbury said.

Bridge collapses as flooding continues

The Associated Press

The runoff-swollen Humboldt River destroyed a bridge and forced the evacuation of several homes in Winnemucca, Nev., while a section of Interstate 70 remained closed today after the raging Colorado River washed over the roadway.

In Mississippi, officials sought federal disaster relief for nearly 700 people forced from their homes earlier when the Mississippi River went over its banks near Vicksburg.

Wendy Harmon, a dispatcher with the Winnemucca police department, said today that a bridge connecting the northern Nevada town with U.S. 95 collapsed late Thursday after being undermined by the still-rising Humboldt.

"It has flooded out of couple of houses right next to the river but the people got out all right and there were no injuries," Ms. Harmon said.

The river, fed by runoff from the record snowpack in the mountains of northern Nevada, rose above 19.6 feet Thursday — nearly 5 feet above the town's flood stage.

Ms. Harmon said the river was expected to crest at around 20 feet later today.

In Colorado, the westbound lanes of a four-mile stretch of Interstate 70 between Loma and Fruita west of Grand Junction remained closed early today after water from the Colorado River washed over a bridge.

Larry Tunnell, a hydrologist with the National Weather Service in Denver, said a flood watch for all Colorado rivers and streams west of the Continental Divide may be upgraded to flood warnings later today.

Heading into the Memorial Day weekend, the Colorado Division of Parks and Recreation on Thursday closed two campsites. A mudslide closed the access road to the Vega State Recreation Area east of Collbran, while high water from the Colorado River had flooded picnic facilities at Island Acres east of Grand Junction.

Ex-chemical salesman says truth will free him

HUNTSVILLE — A former chemical company salesman convicted in the slayings of four men over the sale of an ultralight aircraft still claims that he has a solid alibi and his death sentence will be struck down.

Lester Leroy Bower Jr. said the truth will free him from his Death Row cell, where he was sent last month for the shooting deaths of the Grayson County men at a private airplane hangar.

"I feel strongly that I will walk out of here (Huntsville)," Bower told the Sherman Democrat on Wednesday. "I feel there are people in control of the situation and that justice will be served."

But Bower, 36, declined to elaborate on the possible alibi that might show he did not kill Ronald Mayes, Bob Tate, Philip Good and Jerry Brown last October.

"Although I will take anything I can get right now, I would like them (a jury) to say, 'This man did not do it,'" Bower, of Arlington, said. "I would like to think I could walk down the streets of Sherman, Texas and shake hands with people and not have to look over my shoulder."

A six-man, six-woman jury returned a guilty verdict April 27 in less than two hours. During the five-day trial, investigators said they found parts of a missing ultralight craft belonging to Tate in Bower's garage before his arrest last January.

"A plane in the garage does not a murderer make," Bower said. "I think that was always our defense. I don't know that it wasn't a bad defense."

But Bower claimed the verdict after a five-day trial was not an impartial one.

"I have a little bit different feeling about a jury now," he said. "You're led to believe these are 12 impartial people who are going to make an impartial decision and weigh the evidence that is before them and come up with a verdict that is beyond a reasonable doubt. I just don't feel that happened.

"That (guilty verdict) hit me pretty hard," he said. "That it came so quick. I think their minds were already made up before they walked in (to deliberate). I think they got caught up in a very emotional situation."

Prosecutors said the ultralight "obsessed" Bower.

"If there was one statement that really irked me more than anything, it was that 'Flying was everything to him. It was the only way he could set himself free,'" said Bower, adding that he enjoyed many hobbies.

He said the most damaging evidence against him was the exotic, Italian-made ammunition that prosecutors said he used in a .22-caliber automatic pistol.

"I really think the bullets were the most damaging. I don't have an explanation for that. I've tried weird ammo before. I'm just one of those experimenters," he said. "I might go out to a (shooting) range and shoot 70 or 80 rounds a day, just to see what they do. I probably shot them up. I really don't know what I did with them."

Texans instrumental in unearthing tomb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas archeologists searching a tropical jungle in Guatemala unearthed a 1,500-year-old Mayan tomb which yielded the intact skeleton of a nobleman and artifacts.

Dr. Richard Adams, a University of Texas at San Antonio archeologist, who led the expedition, says that the find was "quite important." The site is being protected from looters by soldiers.

UTSA officials said the expedition was a joint effort between the Guatemalan government, the National Geographic Society and Adams, chairman of the department of behavioral and cultural sciences.

"It was a major tomb," Adams said at a news conference in Guatemala City on Wednesday. "Scientifically, it is quite important.

"We should be able to get a better understanding of the whole early classic Mayan world," he said.

He and other UTSA officials involved in the dig are expected to return to San Antonio late next week.

Scientists said the discovery May 15 in the dense jungle Peten region of northeastern Guatemala is considered significant because it is the first such tomb discovered in the region in more than 20 years which hasn't been disturbed by looters.

Searchers also discovered a ceramic jar with a lid that fastens in a manner similar to today's child-proof medicine bottles, the first such find in the New World, said a UTSA spokesman.

"There seem to have been a lot of wars at this time, competition among the Mayan states," Adams said evidence at the site showed. "This family seems to have been involved in those wars."

The early classic Mayan period dated to about 500 A.D., scientists said.

Assistant project directors Jack Eaton and Grant Hall, plus graduate students Stephen Black, Earl Conger and Anne Kerr, all of UTSA, participated in the dig.

Eaton is associate director of UTSA's Center for Archeological Research.

This week, Adams and several others in the UTSA contingent were in Guatemala to help protect the tomb from the approaching rainy season, university officials said.

Eaton said in San Antonio that a remarkable aspect of the discovery is that the tomb was very clean. Often, such tombs are filled with several feet of earth and rubble.

He said the tomb was part of a massive, city-like complex that included at least 28 major tombs, a pyramid-like temple more than 130 feet tall, several palaces and a sports court where a kind of ball game was played.

Eaton said the ancient city probably was inhabited by 4,000 Mayans.

He said the city site was discovered in 1962 by a Sun Oil engineer. But the laborious process of locating specific structures and sifting through layers of soil takes years.

Since the initial discovery, the complex has been plundered by treasure hunters. The Guatemalan government in 1980 sent troops to the site to repel looters, killing one in a shootout, Eaton said.

Lucas pleads guilty to murder of schoolteacher 14 years ago

KAUFMAN (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas says he tries but can't forget that 14 years ago he repeatedly stabbed to death a 26-year-old elementary school teacher because he wanted "mostly sex."

On Thursday, Lucas pleaded guilty to the murder of Linda Jane Phillips, and State District Judge Glen Ashworth sentenced the drifter to life in prison under a plea bargain arranged by prosecutors and Lucas' court-appointed attorney.

"He told me, 'There are just some things so terrible that you can't forget them.' He apparently has a phenomenal memory," said Kaufman County District Attorney William Conradt.

Lucas told The Dallas Morning News he killed Ms. Phillips after "passing her car several times, along the highway (I-20)," then forcing her vehicle off a Kaufman county road he followed her to.

Mondale wants debates; Rivals charge tricks, gimmickry

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

NATION

Walter F. Mondale is spoiling for more debates and accusing Gary Hart of being afraid to meet him one-on-one, while the Colorado senator says his Democratic rival is using "cheap political tricks" and the Rev. Jesse Jackson accuses him of campaign gimmickry.

Mondale stepped up his level of attack on the debate question Thursday, first calling on his opponents to debate him separately — one on one — and then accusing Hart of fearing such a confrontation because he has lost primaries in other states where they debated.

"I'll debate Gary Hart any time I can get my hands on him, under any circumstances," Mondale said in California.

The three contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination are already scheduled to debate June 3 in California, two days before conclusive primaries there and in New Jersey and three other states.

As the candidates debated from afar, Mondale picked up nine more delegates in Ohio and three more in Delaware with the selection of state party leaders for unpledged delegate slots.

In Idaho, where Hart won a nonbinding primary Tuesday, he was repeating his victory Thursday night in the contest that counted — first round caucuses where 18 convention delegates were at stake.

With Mondale pressing the idea of another debate in New Jersey, Hart and Jackson each said they were willing to debate but ruled out Mondale's call for one-on-one sessions with him.

"All his campaign has to do is call my office" to set up a debate, Hart said.

But Hart added, "I'm not going to debate debates or get involved in that kind of juvenile political conduct."

Jackson, campaigning in New Jersey, rejected the offer for individual debates and called it a "campaign gimmick." He noted that all three candidates agreed earlier that they would hold only joint debates.

"I can only assume he has read some polls ... and wants to give the impression of being anxious to talk, which in my judgment is not the case," Jackson said of Mondale.

Hart and Jackson have both said their respective campaign schedules prevent them from accepting the original invitation from New York television station WNET, which covers most of the New Jersey audience, for a weekend debate.

Instead, the station plans to have one-hour live telephone call-in shows with each of the candidates Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights.

But Mondale has been seeking to make a New Jersey debate a major issue in the remaining days before the June 5 round of Democratic presidential primaries.

On the opposite coast from New Jersey, Mondale pressed the issue: "What is it about New Jersey that makes Gary Hart reluctant to be in a debate in that state?"

Then answering his own question, Mondale said: "In the debates we've had, almost all of them, the results of those debates have led to my victory. I think that's what's bothering Gary Hart."

"All his campaign has to do is call my office" to set up a debate. However, I'm not going to debate debates or get involved in that kind of juvenile political conduct."

Hart plans ad blitz

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Despite campaign debts totaling $4.5 million, Sen. Gary Hart plans to spend between $600,000 and $1 million to broadcast ads before the June 5 Democratic presidential primaries in California and New Jersey.

The Colorado senator took time out from campaigning on Thursday in New Jersey to tape radio and television commercials for use in that state, and intends to do the same in California in the next few days.

He arranged to spend today doing more traditional campaigning in New Jersey and California, with a brief stop in Rapid City, S.D. in between.

The New Jersey commercials will be "positive," according to press secretary Kathy Bushkin, who said they will "focus on what New Jersey's future is all about."

Ms. Bushkin said the commercials will include scenes of Hart speaking with residents of the state in the Meadowlands, a reclaimed marsh area that now is the site of several sports facilities.

One aide, who asked not to be identified by name, said several of the people in the conversation discuss their feelings about Hart's rival, Walter F. Mondale.

This aide said Hart intends to spend between $300,000 and $400,000 on television and radio advertisements in New Jersey during the final week of the campaign.

That state elects 107 Democratic National Convention delegates on June 5, out of 486 delegates at stake in five state primaries.

In California, the largest state with 306 delegates at stake, Ms. Bushkin said the Colorado senator hopes to have between $300,000 and $700,000 to purchase advertising.

But, she added, "We haven't bought the time yet, and I don't know if the money is there."

The commercials for New Jersey will be produced by Ray Strother, who has handled Hart's media throughout the election campaign, Ms. Bushkin said.

But in California, Hart has turned to Bill Zimmerman to handle the commercials.

The ambitious spending plans come at a time when Hart has piled up substantial debts in his campaign. His latest financial disclosure form, filed with the Federal Elections Commission earlier this week, showed debts totaling $4.5 million, and Hart spends considerable time raising money by telephone.

Hart spent part of the day Thursday campaigning in Camden and Hoboken, N.J., stressing his view of the future and responding to Mondale's insistent challenge for a New Jersey campaign debate and rebutting his rival's charges on environmental issues.

On the debate, Hart said he would be glad to have a three-way debate with Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and said all Mondale needs to do is "call my office" to arrange it.

But Ms. Bushkin said it was "absurd" to consider a pair of two-way debates between Mondale and Hart and Mondale and Jackson — as the former vice president suggested.

On the environment, Mondale had charged on Monday that Hart "played hookey" when the environmental "superfund" bill was passed in 1980.

Hart retorted that he introduced legislation more than a year ago to expand the "superfund" and prohibit the dumping of toxic waste in the soil.

In addition, he said, "There's no public record whatsoever that the former vice president of the United States exerted any influence whatsoever in getting" the original "superfund" bill passed.

Suit against mayor dismissed

CHICAGO (AP) — An alderman said he would "research the issue" after a judge dismissed his lawsuit seeking to oust Mayor Harold Washington because his financial disclosure statement was late.

Cook County Circuit Judge James Murray on Thursday threw out the suit filed by Alderman Edward Burke, who contended that his political rival had forfeited the mayoral post by filing the statement three weeks after the April 30 deadline.

Murray ruled that Burke had no legal right to file the suit, but said the case could be reinstated if Burke could get the state attorney general's office to file suit in the matter.

Elderly woman strangles husband

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 71-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to strangling her ailing 92-year-old husband told a neighbor she wouldn't put him in a nursing home because the couple had promised to always care for each other, police said.

Dorothy Agnes Healy of La Jolla faces up to 11 years in prison and a $10,000 fine when she is sentenced June 19 after pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the March 20 death of Walter Healy.

The neighbor, Mrs. B.J. Armas, told police the couple was "very loving" and each had vowed not to send the other to a nursing home. Healy suffered from emphysema, arteriosclerosis and severe hearing loss, and his wife "put him out of his misery," Mrs. Armas said.

Lack of funds may close schools

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — A judge says public schools in Lynn can't close 19 days early, but the city's mayor says he doesn't know where he'll get the $2.6 million needed to keep them open until June 22.

Officials claimed the Lynn district, which has 1,000 employees and about 12,000 students, would have to close Friday for lack of money, but the state sued to keep schools open for the 180 days required each year.

After Essex Superior Court Judge Peter Brady on Thursday granted a preliminary injunction barring the closing, Lynn Mayor Antonio Marino said the district had already overspent its $24.2 million budget and that "I don't know what I'm going to do."

Homeowner fears underground fire

CENTRALIA, Pa. (AP) — One of the first four homeowners to accept a federal buyout of property plagued by a 22-year-old underground fire says she'll miss her garden but fears the blaze too much to stay.

Margaret Hause, 76, of Byrnesville was among the four residents who accepted sale offers last week from the Columbia County Redevelopment Authority, which is administering the $42 million buyout. Mrs. Hause will receive $22,000 for her two-story frame house.

The program will enable about 400 residents from Centralia and nearby Byrnesville to escape the sinkholes and poisonous gas caused by the fire, which was discovered in 1962 in an abandoned strip mine. Officials say it could cost $660 million to extinguish the blaze.

Teen-ager faces prison term

NEW YORK (AP) — A teen-ager faces up to a year in prison after a jury convicted him of reckless driving despite his lawyer's novel use of a computer-produced "cartoon" that tried to show the youth's fatal accident was caused by a missing manhole cover.

Michael McHugh, 18, had been charged with four counts of vehicular homicide, a more serious offense, in his March 1983 collision with a stone wall which killed four passengers. McHugh, who was convicted Thursday, will be sentenced in June.

Survivors will receive millions

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y (AP) — The survivors of two of the 26 people killed in the 1980 Stouffer's Inn fire will receive more than $5 million as part of a $48 million settlement of 39 wrongful death and personal injury lawsuits stemming from the blaze, attorneys say.

U.S. District Judge Abraham Sofaer on Thursday announced the settlement.

Ruling may force Democrats to count ad cost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Party officials predict a Federal Election Commission ruling will force their Democratic counterparts to count the cost of ads attacking President Reagan against party spending limits for the fall elections.

But Joseph A. Reiser Jr., a lawyer for the Democratic National Committee, said there are "some uncertainties and unclarities" in the FEC ruling that will take time to unravel.

The Republican National Committee, irked by Democratic ads accusing top Reagan officials of ethical breaches, asked the FEC last month for a ruling on whether running similar ads this summer against the Democrats would count against the party's $6.9 million spending ceiling for the fall presidential election.

The FEC, in a 4-2 ruling, said the spending ceiling would apply, even if the ads were run before the GOP formally nominates its candidate in August.

E. Mark Braden, the Republican National Committee's chief counsel, said the ruling "basically means those ads they've already run and paid for have to count against their coordinated expenditures limit."

Braden said he expected the Democrats to amend their spending reports to include the costs of the ads, which he speculated were at least $100,000. "If they don't amend the report, it would be a knowing and willful violation of criminal law," he said.

But Reiser, the DNC lawyer, said he was "neither pleased nor displeased" by the ruling, which "will take some time to study."

He noted that some of the FEC commissioners, in a lengthy discussion barely audible to the public at the meeting, had distinguished between a situation in which a candidate was assured his party's nomination and one in which the contest was still undecided.

The FEC ruling stated, "Where a candidate appears assured of a party's presidential nomination, the general election campaign, at least from the political party's perspective, may begin prior to the formal nomination."

Rep. Tony Coelho of California, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, and Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles T. Manatt unveiled the anti-Reagan ads in March. They have already aired in some places, but they were intended primarily for state Democratic parties to use later this year at their option and expense.

Lawyers for both the DNC and Coelho's group, which raises funds and provides strategical help to Democratic candidates, had written the FEC sharply criticizing a draft of the ruling and arguing that the spending limits should not apply before a party's nominating convention.

Coelho's committee also argued it should be free to run ads depicting Reagan as the symbol of the other party.

Commissioner Frank P. Reiche parted company with two fellow Republicans and joined three Democrats in voting for the ruling.

Reprieve given to post office

MOORESVILLE, Ala. (AP) — With some help from a cat and residents of this north Alabama village, the state's oldest post office will remain open.

The U.S. Postal Service had planned to end operations at the historic site, which was showing its age, but a real-estate inspector for the service said a restoration project had put the 142-year-old building in good shape.

The renovation was paid for by $7,500 contributed by townspeople after Regional Postmaster J.N. Lindstrom said in April that the Postal Service would not spend money on the building.

One complaint concerned rodent infestation, and the cat was enlisted to solve that.

Other problems, Lindstrom said, included a lack of indoor plumbing and other deficiencies in the 1842 building.

The inspector, Will Rogers, took a look at the renovations Wednesday and said the building is "in fine condition ... and it would appear to be ready for another 15 or 20 years' service."

Mooresville, listed in the National Register of Historic Places, has been served by a post office since Jan. 21, 1819, when Washington Keyes, a Revolutionary War veteran, was appointed to the job.

President, wife walk down stairs after power failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, had to walk down nine flights of darkened stairs after a power failure knocked out an elevator at the exclusive Watergate complex.

The Reagans were the guests of honor Thursday night at a dinner party given by Clare Booth Luce and were just finishing dessert in her ninth floor apartment when the lights went out in part of the hotel and apartment complex.

"Because of auxiliary power the hotel has, they still had some lights in the apartment," said C. Anson Franklin, an assistant press secretary. "They continued the conversation and, when they were ready to leave, they (the Reagans) just took the stairwell."

Franklin said the Reagans were escorted down the stairs by hotel employees and Secret Service.

De Lorean's attorney opening cross-examination of key witness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean's attorney opened his cross-examination of the government's star witness, James Timothy Hoffman, by detailing the confessed drug smuggler's checkered past before he turned informant to keep himself out of prison.

Hoffman, who said he enjoyed his new life as an informant, testified that while still an outlaw in 1980 he flew to 14 different countries on his way to promote drug deals.

"Did you talk to anyone in 1980 about heroin?" asked attorney Howard Weitzman.

"Yes," said Hoffman, telling of flights to Thailand to negotiate heroin trade.

Weitzman then asked the same question about cocaine, marijuana and Quaaludes, and Hoffman answered yes.

"Did I miss any drugs you were involved with?" asked Weitzman.

"No," said Hoffman.

Asked where he had traveled in his drug smuggling escapades, the 43-year-old Hoffman paused, then rattled off a list.

"I went to France, Belgium, Portugal, Angola, England, Ecuador, Colombia, Thailand, Malaysia, Borneo, Singapore, Burma, Japan and Hong Kong," he said. "I think that's it. That's all I can recall."

Weitzman said outside court that he was eliciting details of Hoffman's past to show jurors the witness is "a man of poor character and low credibility ... a habitual criminal and habitual liar."

Hoffman, who saved himself from prison by testifying against others including De Lorean, has spent five days on the stand offering blistering accusations against the automaker.

He testified that the automaker asked him in July 1982 to arrange a $50 million deal for "China-white heroin" to raise money for his failing car company in Northern Ireland.

De Lorean has denied this, claiming he was unwillingly sucked into a government-designed drug deal by Hoffman and others who set him up for arrest.

De Lorean, 59, a former General Motors executive, is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to raise the millions he needed for his firm. If convicted, he could face a 72-year prison sentence.

Weitzman elicited Hoffman's reluctant testimony Thursday that he had evaded taxes for at least 10 years, filing no returns when he was making millions in drug trafficking. He also conceded he had not paid thousands of dollars in rent for months at a time.

Asked how much income he paid taxes on in 1982, Hoffman said $253. His gross income that year, he said, was $65,000.

"And who helped you prepare your taxes for that year?" asked Weitzman.

"The representative of the Internal Revenue Service," Hoffman said.

Assistant U. S. Attorney James Walsh ended his direct examination of Hoffman with the witness's laudatory comments about life as an informant.

Hoffman indicated that he liked working with a better class of people — undercover government agents.

"I had grown to acquire great respect for the way they handled themselves," he said of the FBI and drug enforcement agents he worked with. "They were fair and honest in all respects.

"I felt that in some way they even had a small amount of respect for me and the way I handled my portion of the undercover investigation," he said.

"That was a marked change," he noted, "from the type of people I had previously been dealing with, where there wasn't much respect or honesty or morality."

AT&T phone rates decrease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers who rely on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to handle their interstate long-distance calls received one of the first tangible benefits of industry competition this morning — an across-the-board reduction in long-distance rates.

Effective at 12:01 a.m. today, AT&T cut its regular long-distance, WATS and international calling rates by a uniform 6.1 percent, complying with a May 10 order of the Federal Communications Commission.

That was the good news. On the minus side for some customers, that same FCC order allowed AT&T to begin charging a 50-cent fee for long-distance directory assistance calls after the first two such calls each month. And business customers with more than one phone line will have to start paying a monthly "access fee" to their local phone company.

All of the changes stem from a new rate structure the FCC gradually is introducing to reflect the fact that AT&T is now facing strong competition for long-distance traffic. While the company still handles slightly more than 90 percent of all interstate long-distance calls, competitors like MCI Communications and GTE-Sprint are growing rapidly at AT&T's expense.

The FCC says that competition, combined with the Jan. 1 breakup of the Bell System, is forcing it to scrap a decades-old system under which AT&T's long-distance customers paid extra to help hold down local phone rates. The commission says it believes local phone customers should bear the full cost of operating their local phone network.

The new monthly access fee to be paid by business customers starting today is one result of that new policy. Depending on what state the business is located in, the fee will range up to $6 per month per line and will be paid directly to the local phone company. Nationwide, those business access fees are expected to generate roughly $1 billion over the next year for local phone companies, reducing the pressure on long-distance rates.

The rate cuts were also made possible because the FCC is gradually forcing AT&T's competitors to pay the same fees as AT&T for local switching connections.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi leans over to speak to an injured man in the hospital in Thane, India, Monday. Authorities called in another army battalion Thursday to help police contain a new outbreak of Hindu-Moslem rioting. Soldiers were stationed at nine posts in Bombay, and 45 miles away in Bhiwandi, where the recent violence started May 17.

Death toll reaches 210 in Indian violence

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Two people were stabbed to death, a bomb exploded near a police station and about 20 huts were set afire early today in continuing Hindu-Moslem violence, authorities said. The nine-day death toll reached 210.

"The situation suddenly worsened around midnight, and several stabbing incidents were reported," Bombay Police Commissioner J.F. Ribeiro said.

A bomb exploded in the street under the police station in Bombay's Pydhoni section but no casualties were reported, and police said about 20 shacks in the Govandi section of northeast Bombay were set on fire.

Police spokesman P.M. Sawant said the official nine-day death toll reached 210 with the discovery of more decomposed bodies in the city of Bhiwandi, 35 miles northeast of Bombay. So far, he said, 104 people had died in Bhiwandi and the rest in Bombay itself and towns on its northern outskirts.

The rioting, which broke out May 17 in Bhiwandi and quickly engulfed other areas in the western Indian state of Maharashtra, was the first widespread religious violence ever in Bombay, a major commercial center and port with a population of 8.5 million.

The violence was believed triggered by alleged insults to Moslems by the Shiv Sena, a Bombay-based Hindu militant organization. Its leader purportedly made disparaging remarks against the prophet Mohammed and said Moslems would endanger Indian unity. Moslems make up 11 percent of India's estimated 750 million population.

AT LEAST 22 stabbing incidents occurred late Thursday and early today despite a night curfew in Bombay, Ribeiro said. Two people were killed and eight were listed in serious condition in local hospitals with multiple knife wounds.

Rioting crowds — armed with rocks, swords and knives — attacked rival community members, stores and vehicles, police said. Three grocery stores, two timber shops, four cars, one bus and several homes were reported torched in Bombay.

Police opened fire early today in three city districts to quell widespread rioting and arson. It was not immediately known whether there were any casualties.

State police said three more decomposed bodies were found in Bhiwandi on Thursday, raising to 38 the number of cut-up bodies found in the past three days in the Molem-dominated textile center.

Army troops were rushed to the towns of Shahapur, Bhayandar, Kashimira, Jawahar, Wade and Vikramagad on Thursday as Hindu-Moslem fighting spread to new areas. At least five people, including an unidentified priest, were reported killed in those towns and surrounding villages since Wednesday.

Additional army units also moved into six new Bombay districts, raising the number of soldiers deployed in the city to about 6,000, the Maharashtra government said.

INDIAN MOSLEM leaders met Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in New Delhi and urged her to bring all riot-hit areas under army control. The leaders, members of Parliament, said state police had been ineffective in halting the violence.

Meanwhile, businessmen, politicians and civic leaders agreed at a meeting in Bombay to raise the equivalent of $10 million for relief work in the violence-torn areas.

Seven police hurt in Cairo fight

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Seven policemen were injured in a fight with stone-throwing demonstrators after an opposition election rally in a Cairo neighborhood, government officials said today.

They said 23 demonstrators from the New Wafd Party, including a former member of Parliament, were detained for questioning following the brawl Thursday, but were later released on bail.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled for Sunday. Campaigning by the ruling National Democratic Party and four opposition groups, including the New Wafd, began about a month ago.

Government officials said one of the seven uinjured policemen was reported in serious condition with a concussion. There was no word on injuries among the protesters.

The officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the demonstration by about 250 members of the New Wafd began after opposition leader Fuad Serageddin addressed a party rally.

The New Wafd is a revival of an old party that dominated Egyptian politics until the monarchy was toppled in a 1952 military coup. Seraggedin was a interior minister under the monarchy.

Government regulations have banned street demonstrations during the campaign.

The officials said the New Wafd demonstrators, led by former Parliament member Elwi Hafez, shouted anti-government slogans "threatening national unity." Hafez was among the demonstrators who were detained.

Finding the kids

It's an icy fear that grips the parents of children, welling up from deep inside like uncontrollable panic.

They watch their children walk away to school or to the movies or to a friend's house and the fear engulfs them as they silently wave goodbye. Will that child they have given so much love and caring to simply disappear into thin air never to return? Will they ever see that child again?

A nightmare? Oh, yes, it's a nightmare. For the parents. And the children. And society in general. But, finally, the problem of missing children is a topic of discussion. It's past time.

At the urging of Congress, President Reagan issued a proclamation sometime back designating today as Missing Children Day and calling on government agencies and ordinary citizens "to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies, programs and activities. In a joint resolution adopted in March, the House and Senate noted that the issue of missing children has been "plagued by misinformation, and there is a need to increase public understanding and awareness of this problem."

Precise figures on the extent of that problem aren't easy to come by, but experts in the field believe that as many as two million children a year disappear from home. Without a doubt some run away to escape what they feel is an intolerable family situation, but others are abducted — often by a parent involved in a custody dispute with an estranged or former spouse. Many of them are never heard from again, the experts say.

Locally, no children are missing at this time, according to Midland Police Department officials, and the problem is not common here. Still, those officials urge Midland parents to follow standard safety practices such as teaching their children to not talk to strangers and never accept a ride with a stranger, and for school officials to never release children to anyone other than the parents or a designated individual.

"Finding missing children has become a national problem," said President Reagan in signing the document proclaiming today Missing Children Day. That may change with the enactment because it set up what amounts to a nationwide clearing-house on missing children by ordering law enforcement officials to enter into the FBI's National Crime Information Computer the names of children under age 17 who have been missing for 48 hours and who have no history of running away from home.

That's needed because missing children need to be found quickly — before the submerge into the mysterious underworld of disappeared children. Too often, officials say, missing children are forced into a life of prostitution or participation in pornographic films after leaving home.

A national effort is needed to combat this problem. Today's recognition of the problem is the start.

Another View:

Litigants prevail

In two recent cases involving the release of material from pretrial proceedings, unanimous U.S. Supreme Court decisions indicate that the court is more concerned with litigants' rights than with the unimpeded publication of information.

In one case, in which the leader of a religious sect sued two Washington state newspapers for libel, the high court upheld the trial judge's order barring the newspapers from disclosing information they got from the plaintiff in pretrial discovery proceedings.

In the other case — in which two gambling defendants challenged the admissibility of wiretap evidence — the high court upset the trial judge's order, granted at the prosecutor's request, closing a pretrial hearing at which the tapes were played.

Although the Supreme Court in the Washington state case upheld the order preventing The Seattle Times and the Walla Walla Union-Bulletin from publishing what they had learned in discovery proceedings about the plaintiff religious leader's financial affairs, Justice Powell noted that the newspapers would be free to publish the same information if they obtained it independently or if it was introduced as evidence at the trial.

James Goodale, a lawyer who wrote a friend of the court brief for news organizations in the case, commented after the decision that most newsworthy material came out at trial in any event — which, as he said, indicates that parties who ask that material be sealed "are just delaying the day of judgment."

Still, there is a hint of anti-free press bias (prior restraint) in a ruling that judges may order the press not to publish material it has lawfully obtained.

In the gambling case — although the press may benefit from the decision — the high court based its ruling on the Sixth Amendment's guarantee of defendants' right to a "a speedy and public trial," not on a First Amendment right of access for the media. Justice Powell, who also wrote the opinion in this case, said closure of the entire seven-day evidence suppression hearing, which involved only two hours of tape-playing, was unjustified. Although the decision properly recognized defendants' rights, it lets stand a dubious barrier against press access.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1935, Olympian Jesse Owens broke five world records and tied a sixth at the Big Ten Championships at Ann Arbor, Mich.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy asked the nation to work toward putting a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

In 1976, Ohio Congressman Wayne Hays admitted having had a "personal relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, a committee staff member who claimed she had been paid $14,000 a year to be Hays' mistress.

In 1981, Mario Andretti was named the winner of the Indianapolis 500 after race officials voided the declared victory of Bobby Unser. Ultimately, however, Unser was judged the winner.

Ten years ago: President Richard M. Nixon said in a nationwide radio address that despite inflation and unemployment, "the worst is behind us."

Five years ago: Convicted murderer John Spenkelink was executed in Florida's electric chair.

One year ago: U.S. Navy Lieutenant Commander Albert Schaufelberger was shot to death in El Salvador.

Today's birthdays: Actor Claude Akins is 66. Lyricist Hal David is 63. Jazz musician Miles Davis is 58. Opera singer Beverly Sills is 65. Singer-songwriter Tom T. Hall is 48. Actress-singer Leslie Uggams is 41. Actress Karen Valentine and country Singer Jessi Colter are 37.

Thought for today: "Music that is born complex is not inherently better or worse than music that is born simple." — Aaron Copland, composer.

Saudis urging support for Iraq

WASHINGTON — If the escalating Iran-Iraq war should close the Persian Gulf even temporarily, a classified Treasury Department study predicts that oil prices could jump to $39 a barrel. This would boost the cost of living for every American, disrupt the economic recovery and jeopardize President Reagan's re-election.

Jack Anderson

But higher oil prices would be a far worse disaster for nations with fragile economies such as Argentina and Brazil. Then, inevitably, these countries would come crying to the United States for financial support. The Treasury Department anticipates that U.S. banks would be asked to contribute $2 to $3 for every $1 that the World Bank would provide through emergency loans.

The danger of U.S. embroilment in the Persian Gulf, meanwhile, has been increased by the president's latest decisions. In the past, the United States has tried to avoid antagonizing either side in the Iran-Iraq struggle. This was thought to be the best way to avoid inflaming the Persian Gulf oil fields.

But Saudi Arabia, fearful of aggressions and subversions by Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, wanted him brought under the knout. The Saudi royal family has always been subject to radical insurgencies and transitory runnings amok. But the ayatollah, glaring from the center of a web of conspiracies, really scares the Saudis.

So they quietly encouraged the Reagan administration to support Iraq as a necessary step to defuse the ayatollah's radical fury. The administration has been persuaded to drop its "strict neutrality." A secret policy directive has now been issued ordering a "tilt" in Iraq's favor.

My associate Mike Binstein has learned that cables have already gone out pressuring allies to halt military shipments to Iran and to rush weapons to Iraq. The irascible Khomeini can be expected to strike back against the United States.

INSIDE NICARAGUA: For months, Eden Pastora's claim that his anti-Sandinista guerrillas are operating deep inside Nicaragua have been greeted with widespread skepticism. I can now confirm that the one-time "Commander Zero" of the Nicaraguan revolution has indeed penetrated into southeastern Nicaragua far beyond his headquarters on the Costa Rican border.

My associate Jon Lee Anderson was the first reporter to visit one of Pastora's "deep penetration" camps. The only way into the camp is by helicopter. Otherwise, it would take a month-long trek on foot through the jungle. Local peasants helped the guerrillas slash a clearing in the trees for a helipad.

The commander of the forward camp was a 34-year-old ex-Sandinista soldier who calls himself Leonel. He claimed 900 armed men under his command, spread out over a large area in fast-moving ambush units. Leonel's ultimate mission is to seize and hold the road that snakes through his territory from the Atlantic coast to western Nicaragua.

Leonel was actively recruiting and arming peasants who showed up at his camp. Most of them said they had fled Sandinista "abuses" in the northeast. In the day and night my reporter spent at Leonel's camp, it was clear that the guerrillas had solid support among the peasantry.

Leonel's forward camp is the only one that has a helicopter landing place. The rest must get their ammunition and provisions by parachute drops from Pastora's mini-squadron of red-and-white Maule single-engine propeller planes.

The daredevil pilots use sand bars in the San Juan River as airstrips. Risking Sandinista anti-aircraft fire, they fly deep into Nicaragua to make their air drops to isolated guerrilla units.

Pastora said most of his planes are inoperative due to a lack of spare parts. But he speaks optimistically of buying new planes and outfitting them with machine guns so he can have his own "air force."

Further evidence of Pastora's status as a serious, effective guerrilla leader is a reasonably sophisticated, one-channel radio system, which transmits messages in code between headquarters and the forward camps. The radio is in constant operation, passing along intelligence information, requests for supplies and arrangements for evacuating sick or wounded guerrillas.

While still not completely streamlined, Pastora's logistical pipeline is functioning and appears capable of handling several thousand fighters. His rear-echelon organization has made noticeable progress since my reporter's last visit 11 months ago.

McCarthyism charges not valid

WASHINGTON — Although he violated the House's collegiality while flailing Democrats May 8, Rep. Newt Gingrich was not guilty of the "McCarthyite" deception for which he has been widely indicted and convicted — an important fact in understanding a major congressional change.

Rowland Evans

According to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and other Democratic leaders, Gingrich played to the cable television audience with tricks worthy of Joe McCarthy by challenging Democratic members — not present in the empty chamber — to refute his charges. But transcripts, videotapes and first-hand recollections suggest the incident never happened.

Robert Novak

Claims of McCarthyism in the House, intentionally or not, cloud what Gingrich and other junior House Republicans are attempting: to convince voters back home that their Democratic representatives are not the moderates they claim to be but ideologues to the left of the American mainstream. The technique by Gingrich & Co., reading past quotes of the Democrats, sharply deviates from the bipartisan buddy system so long prevailing in the House.

Gingrich, 40, a former history professor serving his third term from Georgia, has been perfecting this technique for the past 18 months. But it did not truly get under Democratic skins until the release May 7 of a paper by Republican staffer Frank Gregorsky which assembled left-of-center quotes from Democratic congressmen stretching back for a decade. When Rep. Robert Walker of Pennsylvania and Gingrich began reading these quotes to the House May 8, Democrats were enraged.

That led to O'Neill's order two days later that TV cameras sweep the empty chambers when Walker was speaking. It also led to the speaker's description May 14 of what Gingrich was supposed to have done May 8: "Giving the thought and the idea that members of Congress were un-American, stepping aside, debating and pointing as if there were people on the floor, asking, 'Why don't you get up and answer them?' A more low thing I have never seen."

The accusation was refined by Rep. Tony Coelho, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, in an interview with us over Cable News Network. Citing an alleged challenge to Iowa's Rep. Tom Harkin as one of many, Coelho said: "He (Gingrich) pointed out like he was speaking to Mr. Harkin. 'If you care to challenge it go ahead.' And stopped and paused, very dramatic ... Nobody was in the chamber, including Mr. Harkin, of course, and then, of course, (said), 'You don't want to respond to it,' and then kept on going."

When we later found nothing in the record resembling such conduct, Coelho pointed us to a passage early in Gingrich's May 8 speech. Gingrich read a statement that there is no variety of communism other than Stalinism, then added: "The people making Democratic policy today, from veterans Kennedy, Pell, Cranston and Mondale to rookies Feighan, Boxer, Richardson and Martinez, implicitly reject that statement. Just ask a Democrat to tell you what's wrong with it" (this statement).

Whether Gingrich then paused for breath or dramatic effect, it was no McCarthyite challenge of absent congressmen to defend themselves. Indeed, Democratic aides now say Walker, more than Gingrich, over several speeches has "perfected" misleading gestures looking to the Democratic side of the House when nobody is there. But O'Neill, Coelho and other Democrats last week were specifically fingering Gingrich for a single incident.

The furor over empty chambers, panning cameras and neo-McCarthyism obscured a major development in House politics. Gingrich, Walker and their friends want to end passivity of the House Republican minority under floor leaders Gerald Ford, John Rhodes and now Bob Michel.

Michel is not happy with intensely-partisan attacks at a time the Reagan administration needs at least some Democratic votes in the House for Central American aid and the MX missile. But he is playing on a smaller field than the Gingrich-Walker group, which is thinking in terms of posing congressional elections along national and ideological lines.

The Republican back-benchers were not happy over Michel's reponse in a May 14 colloquy with O'Neill. After suggesting Gingrich had "pointed a finger at an empty chair and accused a man of being un-American," the speaker said to the minority leader: "I am sure you do not condone a thing like that." Without defending Gingrich, Michel replied: "I do not condone that."

Although the White House staff might prefer Michel's conciliatory posture, the Gingrich group is not isolated. It is strongly supported by Minority Whip Trent Lott (who suggests the Republican dog is starting to "bite back after being kicked instead of whimpering") and conference chairman Jack Kemp.

Tony Coelho is incorrect in interpreting Gingrich's attack as an attempted coup against Michel by "right-wing crazies." Michel, 61, is not expected to seek re-election in 1986, when Lott, 42, almost surely will succeed him in a change of both political generations and floor leaders. Thus, the message of last week's passion in the House is not a reversion to past McCarthyism but a prospect of partisan, ideological debate that could profoundly affect the political balance of power nationally.

CHARLEY REESE

Fishbowl syndrome hides truth

Let's play a mind game. Insert the imagination disc into your biocomputer and run this program:

You are the same age, but you are in a cave. It is just before dawn, when your eyes snap open, your hand reaches for your weapon, and you lay there a moment, every sense straining for information, every muscle tense as you frantically try to identify what it was that wakened you. You are poised to fight or flee. Your body is drenched with adrenalin. Only when you realize it was pre-dawn singing of the birds do you relax.

Charley Reese

Your day is set. You will spend it in pursuit of animals to kill and fruit and nuts to gather. If there are a mate and cubs in your cave, you must kill and gather enough for them to eat. On any given day, there is a finite amount of animals to kill and fruit and nuts to gather and you must compete with every other hungry creature for them. You may have to fight them, in which case you will kill without a moment's hesitation. You have no choice. From the day of your birth to the day of your death on every day in between, you must feed the hunger in your belly, quench the thirst in your throat, and find a warm, dry place to sleep. The alternative is always the same: death.

Now, store your imagination and call up your logic program.

You and I and every other human being on this earth are today in the year 1984 C.E. living exactly the same way. Every day, from birth to death, we must feed our bellies, quench our thirst, find a warm, dry place to sleep. On any given day, there is a finite amount of resources available and we must compete with every other hungry and thirsty creature for them. As in the ancient days, the penalty for failure is death.

Thanks to the division of labor, most of us in America do not hunt, fish and gather every day. Someone else kills the animals, skins them, butchers them, and delivers them to supermarkets and restaurants. Someone else plants the fruit and vegetables, tends to them, harvests them, and delivers them to distribution points.

This division of labor allows two things: one, we can do what we do best rather than hunt, fish and gather; and two, we gain leisure — time not devoted to the pursuit of food and drink and shelter.

What we must remember is that our situation in the United States is abnormal. No other large nation on earth has the depth of prosperity that we enjoy. No other nation or empire in history ever had. For the vast majority of the world's population today, they face the dawn with no choice but to spend their entire store of available energy and time in pursuit of that day's food and that day's drink.

What we Ameicans must guard against is the goldfish syndrome. We must not allow ourselves to believe that our fishbowl, which is unique, is the world.

Living as most people do, within sight and smell of hunger and death, produces a different human being — a human being more rapacious, more ruthless, more brutal. They have no choice. The will to live produces an obsessive desire to obtain that which sustains life. This obsession determines priorities.

People who have lived in concentration camps or been prisoners of war or found themselves in harsh, primitive conditions know this, but few of us have ever experienced it.

But we must not forget that the man or woman who awakens with a hungry belly and an empty self does not have the time or inclination to concern himself or herself with social theories, political theories, discussions of ethics, philosophy, art, education, recreation, or even human rights. All of these require a basic level of prosperity and leisure.

Furthermore, the condition of primitive pursuit of survival will produce habits of rapacity even after that person attains some level of prosperity. We humans never escape our pasts.

Too often, Americans go to Asia, Africa and Latin America and judge the people by the standards of Westchester County in New York — the standards of a people who live at unprecedented levels of prosperity and leisure. We judge them immoral for taking bribes, for stealing, for brutalizing each other, for not being as concerned as we are about the niceties of human relationships.

That is goldfish thinking and hypocritical to boot. Our place in the sun was eked out by hard, rapacious people who killd and brutalized their competitors. We hold our esoteric discussions of human rights within a protective ring of guns, bayonets and nuclear weapons. Our own country has its share of corruption.

Nothing has changed except our illusions.

U.S. plays key role in nuns' case

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Help from FBI experts and pressure from the U.S. Embassy appear to have been instrumental in convicting five former national guardsmen of murdering four American churchwomen.

The convictions Thursday were among only a handful of guilty verdicts issued against members of El Salvador's powerful military and security forces in recent decades.

More than 43,000 civilians are among the 52,000 victims in the 4½-year-old war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-backed government. Human rights groups blame most of those deaths on security forces and rightist death squads said to be tied to the military.

With four of the defendants pleading innocent and the confession of the fifth not allowed as evidence, the nuns' murder case relied heavily on initial investigations by two U.S. Embassy officials and on the work FBI agents who quietly collected testimony and evidence.

The one ex-guardsmen who had confessed previously told reporters on the trial's opening day that unidentified Americans had offered him money and resettlement in the United States if he confessed.

His retraction was not included in the court record, but, under Salvadoran law, a confession or other testimony from a suspect in a homicide case cannot be used as evidence against fellow suspects.

Ballistics tests linking the five guardsmen to the crime were made first in Washington and then by Salvadoran security agents under the auspices of FBI advisers.

The security forces had no facilities for ballistics tests, so police fired the guardsmen's rifles into the swimming pool at the military academy and FBI officials dived in to retrieve the bullets, an American close to the case said.

Ricardo Cevallos, president of the five-member jury that convicted the ex-guardsmen, told reporters he found the ballistics tests to be the most convincing evidence.

One of the defendants' fingerprints on the van the women were driving when they were stopped by their murderers were not included in trial evidence because the prints were processed in Washington. When prosecutors went to take another set of prints, they found they had been washed away by rain.

Embassy officials had pressured the Salvadoran National Guard to begin its own investigation through a specially created commission.The prosecutor's office has no significant investigative capacity of its own.

Defendants and unofficial evidence were handed over to the court on Feb. 9, 1982.

The convictions came after setback in another Salvadoran case involving murdered Americans that U.S. officials are trying to move through the sluggish justice system.

Earlier this week, a San Salvador court dropped all charges against an army officer blamed in the 1981 murder of two American advisers on Salvadoran land reform.

According to testimony from two former national guard corporals who confessed to shooting the Americans and a Salvadoran agrarian reformist, the the army officer and a prominent Salvadoran businessman ordered the killings. Charges against the businessmen were dropped last year.

In the case of several murders of Salvadorans, no evidence has been brought to court, pointing up the unusual role evidence played in the convictions in the churchwomen's slayings.

One prominent case plagued by lack of evidence was the assassination of San Salvador's archbishop, Monsignor Oscar Arnulfo Romero, in 1980.

"In our legal system, confession is the queen of all evidence," said Special Prosecutor Reynaldo de Jesus Yanez. "In this situation of violence, no one will testify. Nobody ever sees anything here."

Salvadoran justice is often hampered by fears of retaliation. As the trial in the churchwoman's case began, observers wondered if enough jurors would report. Five of the 12 prospective jurors stayed home and faced a $10 fine.

The convictions Thursday could encourage U.S. officials pressing for justice in another Salvadoran case.

The penal court in Sonsonate is investigating charges the army massacred 18 peasants in February 1983. Although there are more than a dozen witnesses, the army captain they have implicated has not been arrested.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering has twice visited the courthouse and local army garrison to express his interest that justice be done.

A judge ordered the arrest of nine civil guards. Security forces responsible for making the arrests took no action for two months, then arrested only three of the nine.

Report cites official's possible role in coverup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran Defense Minister Eugenio Vides Casanova "quite possibly" acquiesced in an official coverup of National Guard personnel involvement in the 1980 slayings of four American churchwomen in El Salvador, according to an independent report.

The report, prepared for the State Department by retired U.S. District Judge Harold Tyler, says ranking National Guard officers maintained the coverup for five months but their effort was thwarted when the American Embassy identified the killers through its own investigation.

The study was completed last December but the State Department, concerned that its release might prejudice the judicial process, did not make it public until Thursday after a Salvadoran court convicted five former National Guardsmen for the murders.

During his visit here this week, Salvadoran President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte indicated he plans to reappoint Vides Casanova to the defense post because of his support for the democratic process in El Salvador.

He also expressed doubt that Vides Casanova was involved in any attempt to cover up the investigation into the slayings of the three nuns and one Catholic lay worker.

But the report says that Vides Casanova, then head of the National Guard, was "evasive" during interviews with Tyler and his colleagues and "professed a disturbing lack of knowledge" of the case.

Even though he apparently received reports of the investigation, "Vides Casanova attempted to distance himself as completely as possible from all investigations of the crime."

The report says that Vides Casanova appointed a National Guard major to investigate the case. "It seems unlikely," the study says, "that a mid-level officer would have undertaken the obstructive actions he did without the approval or encouragement from someone higher."

However, the five guardsmen were arrested on Vides Casanova's orders in April 1981 under U.S. pressure after American officials presented their names to Salvadoran officials, the report says.

The report hails the "courageous" effort of American government personnel in exposing the coverup and said it is doubtful the perpetrators ever would have been brought to justice without their intervention.

In the immediate aftermath of the killings, the report says, "the first reaction of Salvadoran authorities was, tragically, to conceal the perpetrators from justice" despite promises of a full and complete investigation.

The report says evidence available to the United States shows beyond question that one of the five guardsmen, Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman, confessed his involvement to ranking members of the National Guard within days of the murder.

But, it says, once the killers were identified, a "competent group" of Salvadoran officials carried out a thorough investigation. In particular, National Guard Major Jose Adolfo Medrano and Judge Bernardo Murcia Rauda "performed difficult work under the most dangerous of circumstances.

"They deserve the praise and gratitude of all those who have sought to see justice done in this case," it says.

Despite the 3½-year delay in bringing the case to trial, State Department spokesman John Hughes said the administration is "pleased that justice has been done."

"This case demonstrates that the civilian justice system can work in El Salvador," he said.

Man to be treated for schizophrenia

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Korean man who popped a toy cap pistol near Pope John Paul II during his visit here May 6 will be treated at a hospital for schizophrenia and will not be indicted, prosecutors said today.

They said an examination concluded that Lee Joon-kyu, 22, was suffering from a split personality and needed to be confined in a hospital.

As the pope's motorcade neared a downtown cathedral for a prayer service, Lee jumped from a crowded sidewalk snapping his toy gun and dashed toward the pope's vehicle. Lee was immediately subdued by security guards, and no one was injured.

'Youth exposed to pornography'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II says young moviegoers are being exposed to an increasing amount of pornography and other offensive material.

"Young people and even children are being subjected to the offensive conniving of models of life and behavior which are the polar opposites of the Christian concept of life," the pope told a Catholic motion picture group Thursday.

"The phenomenon of increasing pornography cannot but worry every human being who has in his heart the safeguarding of the dignity of the person and the moral formation of the young generations," he said.

The pontiff spoke to representatives of the Catholic Association of Movie Operators, the group responsible for showing films under the supervision of Italy's Catholic parishes.

Officials reject unions' demands

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist authorities have rejected new demands by government-sanctioned unions for a greater voice in wage and price policy.

Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, in a speech to union members, urged "self-sacrifice" in the face of projected 16 percent price rises this year and said even legitimate demands must be set aside, the state-run press reported.

Alfred Miodowicz, chairman of the Steelworkers Federation, responded: "The present unions will not allow themselves to be sacrificed.... We are united in this."

UNESCO nations call on U.S.

PARIS (AP) — Thirty-three of UNESCO's member nations have called on the United States to reconsider its decision to quit the U.N. organization and have formed a committee to improve operations.

The executive board, by a 33-6 vote Thursday, approved a resolution asking the United States to reconsider "as soon as possible" its decision to withdraw from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization by the end of 1984.

The Reagan administration says UNESCO has become too political, anti-Western and free-spending. The United States provides 25 percent of the budget, which is $374 million for the two years 1984-85.

The United States, West Germany, Japan, Belgium, Italy and Britain opposed the resolution.U.S. Ambassador Jean Gerard said it was "one-sided" and did not mention reforms advocated by United States as a condition for retaining its membership.

Union leaders to halt service

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the seamen's union are planning to halt ferry service for 48 hours starting Wednesday to protest government plans to sell its ferry line Sealink to private owners.

Jim Slater, general secretary of the 28,000-member National Union of Seamen, said Thursday that 7,000 men who work on the ferries have been ordered to walk out.

The seamen's union says ferry service will deteriorate under private ownership and fears that 2,500 of Sealink's 10,000 employees — 3,000 of whom are seamen's union members — will be laid off.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government has pledged to sell off some state-owned industries as part of a bid to cut public spending and reduce the national debt.

China will station troops in Hong Kong

PEKING (AP) — China will station troops in Hong Kong after regaining sovereignty over the British colony in 1997, the Foreign Ministry quoted top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping as saying today.

The remarks, which contradicted a Chinese official's earlier statement that Peking would not base troops in Hong Kong, had an immediate impact in the capitalist port city. Within an hour, the Hong Kong stock market index slumped 30 points, before rising slightly.

Deng, according to an official statement issued by the Foreign Ministry, said, "After restoring the exercise of sovereignty over Hong Kong, China will dispatch its troops to be stationed there."

Radio and television stations in Hong Kong quoted Deng as saying China plans to send between 3,000 and 5,000 troops to Hong Hong after Britain's lease of most of the territory expires.

His remarks contradicted a May 21 statement by Geng Viao, vice secretary-general of the National People's Congress, that Chinese troops would not be stationed in Hong Kong. Geng, a former defense minister, said local residents would have responsibility for defense.

The Foreign Ministry version of Deng's statement did not give any figures but went further than a report earlier today by the official Xinhua news agency.

Xinhua quoted Deng as saying Peking had the right to station troops in Hong Kong after resuming ownership.

Asked about the discrepancy, Foreign Ministry spokesmen said they could not elaborate.

At the British Embassy in Peking, officials said they would have no comment until they clarified the new statements.

Deng's comment was the first time he has spelled out China's military intentions in Hong Kong after 1997.

Previously, in talks with visitors and other hints, the Chinese had indicated Peking would control Hong Kong's defense and foreign affairs while granting the territory autonomy in other spheres.

The Xinhua version quoted Deng as telling political delegates from Hong Kong and Macau: "How can Hong Kong be described as Chinese territory if we don't have the right to station troops there?"

"This is a symbol of safeguarding the territory of the People's Republic of China, as well as a symbol of safeguarding our state sovereignty," Xinhua quoted Deng as saying.

Britain currently provide a 9,000-strong garrison defending Hong Kong, with the colony contributing 75 percent of the cost for the force.

In his annual report opening the current National People's Congress session on May 15, Premier Zhao Ziyang said Hong Kong's existing social and economic systems will remain unchanged for 50 years after 1997, and laws currently in force will remain basically unchanged.

The Xinhua report said Deng also spoke of ways to handle problems during the 13-year transition period before the Chinese takeover, but the agency gave no details.

Controversial bill adopted

PARIS (AP) — A controversial bill on private schools was automatically adopted by the National Assembly early today after opposition members failed in a bid to censure the Socialist government on the issue.

The bill provides for phasing out government subsidies within eight years to private schools where fewer than half the teachers are government-licensed. It is opposed by the Roman Catholic Church and affiliated organizations which together run more than 90 percent of France's private schools.

The opposition in the assembly was able to muster only 159 of the 289 votes needed to censure the government, which had declared the censure motion to be a vote of confidence.

Under French parliamentary rules, failure of the censure motion — which would have brought down the government had it passed — made a vote on the school bill unnecessary.

Excitement high after Lee's spring game

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee football fans left Memorial Stadium Thursday night wondering how to pass the next three months before the Rebels embark on September's Wild West Show.

All of the excitement was generated by Lee's annual Maroon-White game, the Rebs' first public appearance since playing for a Class 5A state title last December at Texas Stadium in Irving.

After what Lee fans saw Thursday, visions of another banner season popped into the heads. There was no talk of 1983. Bring on 1984.

WHAT CAUSED all the comotion? Well, take a look at a few facts. Halfback Walter Jones, who rushed for more than 1,100 yards in 16 games last fall — and winter — rolled out 205 yards on just 12 carries. His three touchdowns alone accounted for 145 yards. He romped the distance from 70, 44 and 31 yards, making secondary backs look like they were inserted in slow motion footage. Jones is back.

Then you can insert fullback Randy Ellis, who rushed for 140 yards on 16 carries for two touchdowns on runs of four and 68 yards. Fullback was a major concern for the Rebels after losing Isaac Garnett to graduation. Garnett gained 1,996 yards last year, which was a big portion of Lee's Wishbone attack. There was no talk of Garnett Thursday. How quickly the mind can deal with the future.

Returning halfback Tyrone Thurman gained only 27 yards on eight carries, but he also busted a 15-yard TD early in the game that ended Lee's spring training cycle for 1984.

In short, this was Wild West, shoot-from-the-hip, type of stuff. The offenses misfired a few times, but there was plenty of smoke coming from Lee's "New Tradition" laser gun.

NEW HEAD coach Jack Tayrien was more cautious than his fans, who were celebrating in the parking lot, but he couldn't hide the fact that he was pleased with the overall performance of his squad.

"We've got a long way to go, a long way," said Tayrien before adding, "We made a million mistakes, but I think we have something to build on. We saw some positive things."

Great backfield speed is something to build on and that's what Lee showed with its blazing offense.

"We do have a lot of speed," Tayrien admitted. "Of course, we knew about Jones and Thurman, but we have some others who are not as fast, but have great quickness. I thought the kids played hard and I think they had a lot of fun our there. I hope so."

Tayrien put his No. 1 offensive and No. 1 defensive unit in white jersies and the rest of the team on the Maroon team. He then gave the Maroon squad seven points per quarter and told the Whites to catch up.

The Maroon scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter and stopped Jones on a two-point conversion try in the fourth period to gain a 42-41 verdict.

"I think it was exciting. Twenty-eight points is hard to overcome regardless if you are playing junior high, high school, college or pro ball. The Maroon got in twice and they deserved the victory. Both squads played hard."

The White defense allowed the Maroon a mere 130 yards rushing and 50 more passing, but they did allow two touchdowns in the final period. Rodney Sims capped 60-yard drive with a three-yard run for the Maroon, but Craig Swearingin set up the score with a 26-yard scamper to the White three. That made the score 35-28 in favor of the Maroon.

JONES ANSWERED on the next play with a 70-yard burst as he romped past defenders as if he were invisible. But Maroon came back with a 34-yard drive which ended with Chris Alexander's one-yard plunge for a 42-35 margin.

Jones again answered the call with a 44-yard blast, but Maroon's Terry Young jammed up the middle to deny Jones a two-point conversion and allow the Maroon to win by the final one-point, 28-point handicap, margin.

The White, meanwhile, moved with awesome fireworks. As expected, it wasn't always smooth, but the White did generate 380 yards rushing and 26 more passing. And yep, Lee doesn't appear to be a passing team again. In all, quarterbacks (four in all) threw 14 passes, completing four for 76 yards. But when backs can outrun a pass, why throw? At least, that formula worked last year.

So now there is only the long summer wait left before Lubbock Coronado comes to town during the first week of September. Many Lee fans are now feeling that the wait is just too long after Thursday.

In the Lee sophomore scrimmage, Stacey Long's 25-yard TD run and a 45-yard run by Javier Falcon, led the White team to a 12-0 win over the Maroon.

Tigers match major league record; Cubs win two

By The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jack Morris overpowered the California Angels 5-1 with a four-hitter and 10 strikeouts Thursday night as the Detroit Tigers tied the major league record with their 17th straight road victory.

Detroit's ninth consecutive win gave it a 17-0 mark on the road this season, equalling the 1916 New York Giants' major league record. The Tigers, 35-5 and 8½ games ahead of second-place Toronto in the East, snapped the AL standard of 16, set by the 1912 Washington Senators.

Morris, 9-1, walked only one in going the route for the sixth time and allowed only a first-inning, unearned run.

Parrish's solo homer in the sixth, his seventh, gave the Tigers a 5-1 lead.

Rangers 4, Brewers 3

ARLINGTON — Dave Hostetler's fourth-inning solo homer backed Dave Stewart's six-hit pitching and the Texas Rangers earned a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Stewart raised his record to 3-6 with eight solid innings. Dave Schmidt pitched the ninth for his second save. Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, who lasted six innings and yielded 10 hits, fell to 4-4.

Hostetler hit the first pitch in the fourth into the left field stands for his second homer of the season, giving Texas a 4-2 lead. The Brewers' Roy Howell closed the gap to a run with a shot into the center field seats in the sixth inning.

American League

Yankees 2, Mariners 0

SEATTLE — New York knuckleballer Phil Niekro pitched seven shutout innings and Don Baylor drilled his third homer in as many games as the Yankees beat the Seattle Mariners 2-0.

Niekro, 7-2, lowered his league-leading earned run average to 1.20 as he struck out seven, walked one and scattered five hits. The 45-year-old right-hander picked up his 275th career victory.

Jay Howell worked the eighth and Dave Righetti came on after a lead-off single by Phil Bradley in the ninth. Righetti picked up his sixth save.

A's 3, Orioles 2

OAKLAND — Dave Kingman boosted his RBI total to 37 with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, leading the Oakland A's to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Bill Krueger, 2-1, scattered eight hits — four by John Shelby — in notching the victory. Bill Caudill recorded his eighth save of the year, coming on in the ninth inning with two men on base and one out.

CHICAGO — Ron Cey belted a three-run homer and Jody Davis added a solo shot to lead a 13-hit attack as the first-place Chicago Cubs defeated the Atlanta Braves 7-5 Thursday for their sixth straight victory and their first doubleheader sweep in nearly four years.

In the first game, Leon Durham belted a pair of three-run homers and Bob Dernier went 5-for-5 to key a 16-hit attack in the Cubs' 10-7 victory. It was the Cubs' first sweep of a doubleheader since Aug. 3, 1980.

Pirates 5, Reds 1

PITTSBURGH — Larry McWilliams scattered eight hits and Lee Mazzilli and Dale Berra each drove in two runs to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

McWilliams, 2-3, lost his bid for his second shutout in a row when right fielder Lee Lacy's two-base error in the sixth inning allowed the Reds to score their only run.

McWilliams struck out 10, including the first four Cincinnati batters, and walked two.

Giants 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Mike Krukow continued his mastery over New York with a four-hitter and Bob Brenly hit a tie-breaking home run in the sixth inning, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 3-2 victory over the Mets.

Krukow, 3-5, allowed only two hits after the third inning in defeating the Mets for the eighth consecutive time since June 25, 1980, and boosting his career mark against them to 13-3. The veteran right-hander struck out nine and walked two.

Al Oliver delivered RBI singles in the fourth and fifth innings as the Giants erased a 2-0 deficit.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 3

PHILADELPHIA — Len Matuszek's bases-loaded infield hit with two out in the ninth inning scored Juan Samuel and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Reliever Pat Zachry, 2-1, yielded Samuel's National League-leading seventh triple of the season with one out the the Dodgers intentionally walked Greg Gross and Mike Schmidt to load the bases.

Zachry struck out Sixto Lezcano but Matuszek ripped a 2-2 pitch toward center field that second baseman Steve Sax back-handed, but his toss to shortstop Bob Bailor was too late to get Schmidt as Samuel scored the run that gave the Phillies their 11th victory in their last 12 games.

At 200-plus, vision blurs

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — We were gliding along the back straightaway at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway when Mario Andretti decided to give a little demonstration of what speed does to a race driver's perspective.

"The faster you go, the narrower the track becomes, the sharper the turns seem," Andretti said. "You come down to the end of the straightaway and start working up to speed, that corner seems like a hairpin at the end. Here, I'll show you what I mean."

And with that, we took off.

The corner seemed so far away. Plenty of time to brace yourself for the turn, I thought. Then Andretti stepped on the gas, the engine roared in response, and suddenly we were really rolling.

No problem, you think. You've driven the Long Island Expressway and the San Diego Freeway. What can happen in the Pontiac Fiero pace car at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway?

Plenty, even at well below racing speeds.

First you realize that you're listing to the left, something like a rowboat that has sprung a leak, leaning at an awkward angle and unable to do very much about it. So this is what G force feels like. Hardly the right stuff. You wish now you had fastened your seat belt, the way Andretti did.

Look at that corner that seemed miles away a moment ago. Now it seems like the eye of a needle. The sides of the track have caved in on you and you feel as if you're going through a single-lane tunnel. A narrow single-lane tunnel.

THE SOUND of the engine is deafening. You peek over at Andretti and he seems totally at ease behind the wheel. He might as well be out for a Sunday spin in the family station wagon. He is concentrating — thankfully — but there is no tension in his face. He has, after all, been this route a few times before. Sunday's start will be his 20th in the 500-mile race.

The car slows and you're upright again. "That was 110 miles an hour," Andretti said rather matter-of-factly. "Sunday, we'll be going 100 miles faster than that."

Speed is not what makes the 500 so tough, though. It is the Speedway. And no amount of experience over the course can prepare you for it.

"This is the only one of a kind," he said. "No other track is like this one. Because of that, you have no other reference point. Everything you do with a car must pertain to this place. It's not really applicable to any other place."

Each turn in the track is different, too.

"To the layman, it's like four equal corners, radius-wise," Andretti said. "But they're not. Each corner has a personality of its own. No question about it. The way the wind blows. The radius. The bumps. Each corner is totally different.

"Every driver you talk to has one corner he likes better than the others. I like Turn Three. I always felt very comfortable in Turn Three, no matter how the car handles. It's just a matter of preference, whatever fits your style driving. That's what it comes down to."

1882 — Charles Foley of the Buffalo Bisons became the first player to hit for the cycle when he hit a grand slam homer, tripled, doubled and singled — in that order — against George Bradley of Cleveland. Buffalo won the game 20-1.

1935 — Babe Ruth played his final major league game — in a Boston Brave uniform — and hit three homers and a single. But the hometown Pirates won the game 11-7.

1937 — Hall of Famer Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers, the team's manager and also its catcher, was seriously beaned by Bump Hadley of the New York Yankees. Cochrane, who had homered in his previous at-bat, never played again.

1951 — Willie Mays, a highly-touted rookie center fielder, went 0-for-5 against the Philadelphia Phillies in his major league debut.

NCAA Central

AUSTIN (AP) — When Oklahoma fans asked coach Enos Semore about the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament, he said he told them there were certainly other places he would rather be.

"I said there were probably two or three others I would have picked if I really wanted to get to Omaha," the Oklahoma coach told a news conference Thursday.

Asked what regionals he had in mind, Semore declined to answer, saying, "The NCAA is close to perfect, but it can't get them all right."

Oklahoma, 42-13 and second in the Big Eight Conference, was matched in the tournament opener today against Nevada-Las Vegas, 42-24-1. Texas, 54-12 and the defending national champion, was paired against Lamar, 43-20, in the night game.

The winner of the double-elimination tournament will advance to the College World Series at Omaha, Neb., next week.

TEXAS, RANKED No. 2 in the nation, is top-seeded. The Longhorns are in the NCAA playoffs for the 30th time, which is a record, and their 23 trips to Omaha also is a record.

Texas won the College World Series in 1975 and last year, sweeping all five games in 1983.

Semore said he would start freshman Bobby Witt, 9-2, if a sore bicep was not bothering him. If Witt could not pitch, Semore said, the starter would be Keith Hamilton, 6-0.

Semore, in his 17th year as coach at Oklahoma, said Witt "has the best arm of anyone I've ever had on a pitching staff. He has the potential to be a great pitcher."

He said Witt's arm became sore and tender after throwing 75 pitches in five innings against Texas A&M on Sunday night.

Two sons of former New York Yankee pitching star Mel Stottlemyre have accounted for 22 of Las Vegas' 42 victories this season. Todd Stottlemyre is 10-3, and his older brother,, Mel Jr., is 12-6.

Semore and coaches Cliff Gustafson of Texas and Jim Gilligan of Lamar talked to reporters on Thursday. Las Vegas was late in arriving, and coach Fred Dallimore missed the session.

Asked if there was a tournament favorite, Semore responded, "I would have to say Texas — with their ranking, great coaching, and they're playing at home also. But I think there are four good ball clubs here. If any of the four plays consistently, they can win it."

GILLIGAN, WHOSE Cardinals have lost 20 of 23 to Texas over the years, has called the tournament the "Gutafson Invitational."

Gustafson said he would start Greg Swindell, 11-1, with an earned run average of 1.84. Gustafson has said the freshman left-hander "is the biggest single reason for our (successful) season this year."

Swindell's only loss was to Rice, 3-2, in 13 innings.

Gilligan will counter with Keith Silver, 12-1, a shortstop who converted to full-time pitcher this season. "He didn't become serious about pitching until miidway through our season," Gilligan said of the junior right-hander.

"He (Silver) tied the school record for wins at 12, and I just hope he breaks the record (at the tournament)," Gilligan said.

OSU crushes Grambling; Oklahoma City nips A&M

NCAA Midwest

STILLWATER, Okla (AP) — Pete Incaviglia and Gary Green each smacked two-run homers Thursday as Oklahoma State crushed Grambling, 21-5, and set the Cowboys up for a winner's bracket game against Oklahoma City in the NCAA Midwest baseball tournament.

Earlier, Oklahoma City edged Texas A&M, 2-1, after Kevin Burdick bunted to score Rod Bush.

The Cowboys racked up 18 hits against Grambling, whose Tigers were scoreless in the first six innings. Grambling's Eric Taylor hit a solo homer in the eight and Juan McWilliams paced the Tiger offense with two hits.

Gary Green collected five RBI as Oklahoma State improved to 55-12 and pitcher Gary Kanwisher, who pitched the six shut-out innings against Grambling, raised his record to 6-1.

Grambling fell to 29-16 and Tiger pitcher Martin Foley got the loss for an 8-3 mark.

In the earlier game, Oklahoma City, 34-28, got its first run in the second when Burdick doubled to center, advanced to third on a fly ball to right field by Dan Bonomo and then came in on a single to center by Todd Cash.

The winning run came after Rush beat out an infield single, stole second and went to third on a grounder by Rich Worley.

The only score by Texas A&M, 40-20, was a solo homer by Tony Metoyer in the second.

Grambling and Texas A&M play in the consolation round Friday at 1:30 p.m. and the two Oklahoma teams square off at 7:30 p.m.

JUST THEN, we wheeled into the main straightaway, approaching the start-finish line. This is not Andretti's favorite spot. Two years ago, he was knocked out of the race before it ever started in a chain-reaction accident involving Kevin Cogan and A.J. Foyt.

"I've had some mishaps here, but I don't dwell on that," Andretti said. "That many miles, thousands of miles here, but you never really feel like you've got it all. It's almost as if you're learning every time you're here with a different car. Things change dramatically. The race is different every year."

At 110 mph, the crowd is a blur. What do you see at 210 mph?

"You see enough to get the job done," Andretti said. "It's tough to pick a blonde out in the grandstand. But you can see a lot."

Now he pulled into the pits and the ride was over. Five laps, 12½ miles in 10 minutes that seemed like an hour.

The freeways and expressways will be a breeze after this.

UNM slips from third to eighth

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The University of New Mexico women's golf team slipped to eighth place in the team standings following the second round of competition at the NCAA Championships Thursday.

New Mexico started the second round in a tie for third place but fell 26 strokes behind team leader University of Miami. Miami has a team score of 603 after two rounds, compared to New Mexico's 629.

Furman is second at 607, followed by Arizona State, 609, Tulsa, 616, Southern Florida, 618, and Florida and Duke, both at 622.

New Mexico's Kristi Arrington, second after the opening round, skied to an 82 Thursday. She had opened the tournament with a solid round of 72. Arrington now is 24th in the individual standings.

Stueckler holding basketball school

Midland Lee basketball coach Paul Stueckler will be holding two sessions of his 1984 Basketball School this year, the first one running June 4-15 and the second, June 18-29, Mondays-Fridays only.

The school offers those from grades three through nine a chance to learn and improve basketball skills through games, movies, fundamentals, drills and tournaments.

The fee for the school is $20 per participant. To register, call Stueckler at 694-8379.

M-Cubs hold on to nip Travs, 7-6

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK — Newly reacquired pitcher Ken Pryce picked up his first victory of the year here Thursday night as the Midland Cubs downed the Arkansas Travelers 7-6, but it took Midland's John Huey to quell a ninth-inning uprising to salvage the victory.

Midland was ahead 7-2 going into the final inning of Thursday night's contest. But Arkansas loaded the bases when center fielder Gotay Mills walked, shortstop Mike Harris got on by an error and left fielder Mike Stryffeler walked.

Third baseman Tim Wallace doubled down the rightfield line to score Mills and Harris, and second baseman Curt Ford tripled home two more runs, narrowing Midland's lead to 7-6.

With the tying run on third and only one out, Huey came in to replace Jorge Carpio. He struck out Fred Guin and got Bob Helsom to ground out to second to end the game.

Pryce pitched five innings of shutout baseball before being touched for two runs in the Arkansas sixth. However, the Cubs had staked Pryce to a six-run lead heading into the sixth.

Cub shortstop Shawon Dunston had three hits, including two doubles, to drive in three runs. Pryce helped himself with two RBI without a hit and Jeff Jones drove in another run.

Still the Cubs needed its run in the top of the ninth to take the victory. Dunston's second double of the game was the key blow.

Walt Pierce, 3-3, was tagged with the loss as the Cubs roughed him up for six runs in the first six innings.

Midland is now 2-1 against the Travelers to start a 10-game road swing through Arkansas and Tulsa.

The Cubs lashed out six doubles against the Travs. However, Arkansas outhit the Cubs by an 11-7 margin.

The Cubs are now 13-28 on the season and 12 games out of first place. Midland picked up a full game on all the Western Division teams as the East prevailed in the other three outings.

Murphy seems to be out of slump

Memorial Tournament

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Tips from fellow television analyst Ken Venturi and Tom Watson may have Bob Murphy out of his long golf slump.

At least, the first round of the Memorial Tournament indicates that. Murphy matched 5-under-par 67s Thursday by Payne Stewart and Gil Morgan for a share of the lead going into today's second round.

Murphy picked up the same swing tips from Venturi and Watson after he had climbed from the CBS-TV tower at the Colonial Invitation in Fort Worth Saturday.

"They changed my backswing," Murphy said. "They have me taking the club back straighter from the ball. I have been taking the club inside too hard.

"It's relaxed me. Since then, I've been swinging better every today. Today I went out with a lot of confidence."

HIS SIX-BIRDIE, one-bogey performance was a big turnaround for the 41-year-old veteran, whose fourth and last Tour triumph came in 1975. He had missed the cut in four of his last five starts. He has won less than $8,000 in 1984, 141st on the current money list, after poor years in 1982 and 1983.

"I'd hate to have brought my game of the last five weeks here today. This course eliminates guys like that," Murphy said of Jack Nicklaus' 7,116-yard Muirfield Village layout.

With a little luck, Murphy would have been the sole leader. His four-iron tee shot on the 16th flew 204 yards into the hole, spun up the flag and pulled back 30 feet from the hole.

"It never hit the cup. It's very unusual to see a shot like that," said Murphy, who has 11 career holes-in-one.

STEWART, WHO lost a playoff to Peter Jacobsen in the Colonial last Sunday, broke the tournament record with a 6-under-par 30 on the front side. "Every putt I got over I thought was going in," he said.

Morgan, third in the Colonial, survived a double-bogey seven on the 11th hole. He offset it with seven birdies. "Sometimes I try a little harder after I make a mistake," he said.

Twelve players were within two shots, all in the 60s, a record number for the first round of this 9-year-old tournament. Ideal weather, soft fairways and soft, slower-than-usual greens led to the scoring assault.

At 68 were Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, U.S. Open titleholder Larry Nelson and Bruce Lietzke, seeking his second victory of 1984.

AMONG THE six golfers at 69 was Nicklaus. Jacobsen and former Memorial winner Roger Maltbie were at 70 and Tom Watson, this year's No. 1 money-winner, at 72 after finishing with a double-bogey at 18 and defending champion Hale Irwin had a 74.

Told that a dozen players had broken 70, Nicklaus said, "I'll have to call the superintendent and we'll have to grease the greens."

The previous first-round Memorial record was eight sub-70 scores in 1978 and 1980.

Hall leads by one shot

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Long-hitting Debbie Hall shot an eagle, three birdies and a bogey Thursday for a 68 and a one-stroke lead over Pat Meyers in the first round of the $150,000 LPGA Corning Classic.

Vicki Fergon, Sherri Turner and Mary Hafeman were two strokes out of the lead at 2-under-par as little-known players dominated the first round.

JoAnne Carner, Ayako Okamato of Japan, Pat Bradley, Jan Stephenson, Sharon Barrett, Lenore Muraoka and Jane Geddes were tied three strokes back after shooting opening-round 71s.

Defending champion Patty Sheehan, who took five weeks off to get ready for Corning, shot a 4-over-par 76 and had nothing to say to reporters afterward.

Long hitters did well on the slightly damp, 6,023-yard Corning Country Club course.

Hall, a 24-year-old from Dallas going into the clubhouse with a lead for the first time in her two years on the tour, said, "I was real patient with it today."

Hall made a 4-foot putt for eagle on the par-5 12th hole after blasting her second shot more than 180 yards onto the green. She bogeyed the par-4 18th hole.

A 1982 Southern Methodist University graduate, Hall earned just $6,040 in her 1983 rookie year and has never finished higher than 28th. She had a bad cough Thursday, but said, "The doctor says I'm healthy."

Pat Meyers, who joined the tour in 1976, said she loosened up her swing for distance and said, "Basically what I was doing today was just freewheeling it."

OSU golfers take NCAA lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Defending national champion Oklahoma State, with a pair of sub-par 69s by Tommy Moore and Jeff Maggert, fired an eight-under par team score of 280 Thursday to charge into the second round lead of the 87th NCAA Division I Golf Championships Thursday.

North Carolina's John Inman once again conquered the Bear Creek Golf World's par 72, 7,095 yard Masters Course with a five under par 67 to remain the individual leader with a 133 total among the early finishers.

Both Oklahoma State and Inman played early morning rounds then sat back and watched the rest of the field try to catch up.

None did.

Mike Swartz of Arkansas shot a three under par 69 for a 137 total and second place to Inman. Woody Austin of Miami and Fred Wadsworth of South Carolina were another shot back at 138.

Miami's Woody Austin, shot his second three under par 69 to move into second place at 138 in the individual race.

The Cowboys finished 36 holes with a 569 team score for a seven-under par total, one shot ahead of Oklahoma at 570.

Brigham Young, which started the day three under par, struggled home with a one over par 289 team score for the second round and a 574 total, good enough for third place at two under par for the tournament.

UCLA was in fourth place with a one under par 575 team total and the host Houston Cougars, who started the day in a tie for 19th place, had a second round four under par 282 for an even par 576.

Houston's charge was brunted on the final hole when Billy Ray Brown, who shot a two-under par 70, and Tray Tyner each double bogeyed the final hole.

Greg Turner spurred the Sooners with a five-under par 67, which equaled the best round of the early finishers.

All four of Oklahoma State's scorers finished below par. Andy Dillard and Scott Verplank each shot one under par 71s.

Cowboys, Cannon come to agreement

From Wire Reports

The Dallas Cowboys have agreed to terms with outside linebacker Billy Cannon Jr., their No. 1 pick in this year's NFL draft. Cannon, who attended Texas A&M, was expected to sign Friday morning, said Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd. Todd said he knew no terms of the pact, but Dallas' first-round picks usually sign three-year contracts.

Cannon is the son of Billy Cannon Sr., the Heisman Trophy winner from Louisiana State now serving a prison term for masterminding a counterfeiting scheme. Dallas already had signed its fourth-round pick, Steve DeOssie of Boston College...

Safety Don Rogers of UCLA signed a long-term contract with the NFL Cleveland Browns Rogers was Cleveland's first-round draft choice in the NFL draft. He was also sought by the Arizona Wranglers of the USFL, who acquired the right to bargain with Rogers from the San Antonio Gunslingers.

Terry Bradshaw's ailing right arm will get its first major test since late last season on Monday when the Pittsburgh Steelers open their annual mini-camp with 65 players on hand. A group of 32 veterans plus recent draft choices and free agent signees will attend a week's worth of practices, playbook study and evaluations.

Bradshaw played in just over a quarter's worth of one game in 1983, when now-departed quarterback Cliff Stoudt directed the Steelers to a 9-2 start before the team faltered and lost five of its last six games...

BASKETBALL — Ralph Sampson, who led the Houston Rockets in scoring, rebounding and blocked shots, was named unanimously Thursday as the NBA's Rookie of the Year. The 7-foot-4 Sampson drew all 76 votes cast by a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters after a season in which he justified his selection as the top pick in last year's NBA draft.

He led all NBA rookies with an average of 21 points a game, ranked fifth in the league with 11.1 rebounds and was third in blocked shots with 2.4 a game as the Rockets improved from 14 wins in 1982-83 to 29 wins this season...

BASKETBALL — Two top returning basketball starters of the North Texas State University team were dismissed Wednesday for academic and disciplinary problems by NTSU coach Tommy Newman.

Newman dismissed starting center Bill Nelson, a 6-8 junior, and 5-11 freshmen guard Lawrence Hudson. The players were released based on NTSU coaching staff's academic regulations, not NCAA regulations. Neither player will be able to play for NTSU next year...

FIGURE SKATING — Olympic gold medalist SScott Hamilton has signed a multi-year contract with Ice Capades and will join the tour as a skater in August, according to Ice Capades President Richard Palmer. Hamilton, winner of four straight world championships in men's skating, indicated after winning the gold medal in the 1984 Winter Olympics that he had decided to turn professional...

FOOTBALL — Atlanta running back William Andrews, a four-time NFL Pro Bowl choice, is listening to an offer from the Memphis Showboats of the rival USFL. Andrews' agent, George Kickliter, said the Showboats asked to discuss a contract with the 6-foot, 206-pound former third-round choice from Auburn, who is in his option year with the Falcons.

Kickliter said he asked for approximately $6 million guaranteed over four years for the 28-year-old Andrews, who has rushed for 6,772 yards in five seasons, including a career-high 1,567 yards last year. He also caught 59 passes for 609 yards, giving him more than 2,000 yards rushing and receiving for the second straight season...

NFL owners pick California for Super Bowls XXI, XXII

WASHINGTON (AP) — For National Football League club owners it's a case of California here we come again . . . and again . . . and again.

The league owners deliberated for more than seven hours Thursday before selecting the Rose Bowl in Pasadena as the site of Super Bowl XXI in January 1987 and choosing San Diego as the home of the 1988 Super Bowl.

San Diego Chargers owner Gene Klein, who spearheaded the effort to bring the game to San Diego for the first time, admitted he was "more than a little concerned about getting the game."

"I wasn't sure I could convince my fellow owners to bring the Super Bowl to Southern California two years in a row," he said.

The selections will place the Super Bowl, which will be played in Stanford Stadium in Palo Alto next January, in California three of the next four years. The Golden State monopoly will be broken only in 1986 when the game will be played in New Orleans.

For Pasadena, the 1987 game will mark the fourth time in 11 years the Super Bowl will be played there.

Although Pasadena officials spent some $20,000 in their winning effort to land the 1987 game, Rose Bowl director David Jacobs said the stadium speaks for itself. "The stadium sold the deal," Jacobs said. "It is an outstanding stadium, and with a seating capacity of 104,000 it is not only the largest stadium in the country, but holds 35,000 more than any other of those seeking to host the game."

AS PART of the deal to secure the game, Pasadena officials agreed to waive rental of the stadium, which is pegged at 10 percent of the gross gate receipts; waived the admissions ticket tax — which can amount to 60 cents per ticket; and waived any parking fees for spectators.

"We worked very hard for this game. I think having the Super Bowl here before and the owners seeing just what we could do helped push us over the top," Jacobs said.

Each of the selected cities can expect to receive a windfall. Tampa, which hosted the Super Bowl this past January and had hoped to host the 1988 game, saw more than $90 million pumped into the economy as a result of the game, according to the city officials.

"It's more than money," insisted Klein, his arm around San Diego Super Bowl Task Force Chairman Leon Parma. "It's pride. We all can walk tall. Dollars come and go."

Dollars or Pride, it was enough to lure representatives from 14 cities to the owners' spring meeting here in hopes of winning a future Super Bowl.

THE LIST of those coming up short included: Detroit, Jacksonville, Phoenix, Houston, New Orleans, San Francisco, Anaheim, Minneapolis, Seattle, Tampa and two cities who came within a handful of votes of landing a game, Miami and Philadelphia.

Philadelphia Eagles' owner Leonard Tose nearly pulled off the upset of the year, as he held together a coalition of supporters for 12 ballots before succumbing to the Pasadena.

Philadelphia's bid for the 1987 game, tied to the 200th anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution, faced an uphill battle from the outset with city officials hoping to stage the January game in an open-air stadium in the northeast for the first time.

But an intense lobbying effort by Tose, plus the city's promise of $2.8 million in inducements to the league, kept the city's bid alive. At one point, Philadelphia garnered 16 votes, just five short of the three quarters needed for approval. But after 12 ballots, league officials moved to force a decision by switching to a majority only needed for approval with Philadelphia and Pasadena the two alternatives. Pasadena carried the final vote 16-12.

The same simple majority procedure was used on the eighth and deciding ballot in the selection process for 1988 after San Diego and Miami had evolved as the favorites.

An exact count of the secret vote that put San Diego over the top was not immediately learned.

MEANWHILE, THE cumbersome Super Bowl selection process was evident on the face of NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who faced reporters late Thursday night.

"We will study a different format in the future but I doubt if we could agree on it," Rozelle said.

Miami officials had hoped to get the game and place it either in the Orange Bowl or the still-to-be-built Miami Dolphins Stadium.

"If we would've had a new stadium, the game would be played in Miami," said Joe Corollo, Miami's city commissioner. "The new stadium is what held us back. The owners really wanted to give us this game."

Moore takes over for fired A's skipper

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Steve Boros, who had said all along that he might be too mild mannered to succeed as a big league manager, is out and Jackie Moore is in with the Oakland A's.

"He's one of the best guys I ever met, and I have mixed emotions now. I'm so happy in one area and so sad in another," said Moore, the A's coach who replaced Boros on Thursday.

"Steve had ideas about the way he was going to be, and he wasn't going to let baseball change this." Moore said."These things happen in baseball. It's going to happen to me someday."

Carney Lansford, the A's third baseman, called the deposed Boros "such a nice guy," and he added, "I wish we could have won for him."

Boros, 47, left with the team standing 20-24 but not far from the lead in the American League's Western Division. Last season, his first as a major league manager, the A's finished fourth with a 74-88 record.

Moore, 45, will be managing his first big league game tonight when the New York Yankees visit the Oakland Coliseum. The American League club will have a new pitching coach, too, with Wes Stock replacing Ron Schueler.

Oakland manager Steve Boros argues with umpire Rich Garcia during Thursday's game with Baltimore. Not long after, Boros was out of a job.

Schueler was fired along with Boros about 45 minutes after the A's 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. Both were offered other jobs with the A's. Team officials said Boros indicated he would accept, with his initial duties to include instruction and scouting.

Stock, a former A's pitching coach, returned to the organization this year as a minor league pitching instructor. In another change announced Thursday, former A's infielder Dave McKay joined the coaching staff.

Boros was hired by the A's to fill the job left vacant by the firing of Billy Martin, who returned to the Yankees in 1983 for a fourth term as their manager, only to be fired again.

Boros', style and dugout deportment were the exact opposite of Martin's.

"I'm not going to say much to the umpires, I can tell you that," Boros said when he got the A's job. "I've found that you come out better in the long run that way."

Martin raised his voice to his players as well the umpires. Boros, the University of Michigan graduate, tried calm reasoning.

Moore said that Roy Eisenhardt, president of the A's, made it clear when offering him the job that the front office wanted someone who would "put a little fire under them (the players)."

Eisenhardt said he had detected "a lack of aggressivness in the way the team approached the game."

Wrangler-Express winner could win division or wild card berth

By The Associated Press

All coaches say all games are important, but Arizona Wranglers Coach George Allen sees his team's game with the Los Angeles Express as especially important.

The loser will be somewhat derailed from its drive toward a playoff spot in the United States Football League.

The Wranglers and Express are tied for second place in the Pacific Division standings with 6-7 records heading into Saturday night's game at Memorial Coliseum in Los Angeles. The Denver Gold, 7-6, is in first place, but they have lost five straight games.

"The winner of this game will either be the division champion or get the wild card," Allen said. "I think it's that important."

In the only other game Saturday night, Oklahoma hosts Oakland.

In games tonight, the Gold will try to end its losing streak with a game in San Antonio, Tampa Bay is at Memphis and Houston is at Jacksonville.

In Sunday games, it will be Birmingham at New Orleans, Washington at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia at Michigan. New Jersey plays at Chicago Monday night.

Allen said Saturday night's game with the Express will be pivotal for his team and a milestone for him.

It will be the 200th regular-season game of Allen's coaching career at the place where it all started for him — Memorial Coliseum.

"That's my favorite stadium," Allen said. "I love everything about it — the locker room, the showers, the field. Everything. There's a lot of memories there for me."

Allen, 62, was head coach of the National Football League's Los Angeles Rams from 1966-70 and compiled a 49-17-4 regular-season record with two playoff berths.

Arizona, fresh from a 41-6 thumping of the Gold last week, has yet to win successive games this season.

USFL Roundup

Los Angeles beat the defending USFL champion Michigan Panthers 24-17 last week for its third win in the last four games and fifth in the past six.

"Right now, LA is one of the better teams in the entire league," said Allen. "They're playing with a lot of confidence. Denver got a big break by playing them early before they were settled down. We got to play them twice now when they're on a roll."

The Wranglers close out the regular season June 23 against the Express.

Allen said the Express has "a wide open offense. They're running out of 61 different formations and a shotgun in long yardage passing situations. It'll be a wide open game, I'm sure."

Griffith has offer of $25 Million for Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Two Twin Cities real estate developers have offered club President Calvin Griffith $25 million for his family's controlling interest in the Minnesota Twins, according to a published report.

Marvin Wolfenson and Harvey Ratner, who own more than 3,000 apartment units and nine racquet clubs, made the offer Thursday at a meeting with Griffith, the Minneapolis Star and Tribune reported today in a copyright story.

Meanwhile, Minneapolis bank president Carl Pohlad said Thursday he'll also make an offer soon to buy Griffith's majority interest

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

It's wise to pay more attention to ounce of prevention rather than pound of cure

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother believes that a person can be kept in good health regardless of how he takes care of himself. I think I can do more for myself than any doctor can to stay healthy. May I have your opinion? — Stacey, Philadelphia

Dear Stacey: There is no denying that medical technology has made significant advances over the past several years; however, I believe that your brother is overemphasizing what medical technology can do, and underemphasizing what he himself can do to promote good health.

Much of what I do for my own patients is not so much a reflection of new medical developments, as it is an effort to reduce the risk factors for various diseases. For example, a well-balanced, nutritionally sound diet, exercise, and stopping smoking can reduce the risk of coronary heart disease. These lifestyle changes should not be ignored.

Your brother would do well to pay more attention to the ounce of prevention rather than to the pound of cure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember when hockey players did not wear helmet or masks, and when baseball players did not wear helmets when they came to bat. I even remember when football players did not wear face masks and some even played without helmets. Which brings me to soccer. I know of a youngster who had an eye injury while playing soccer, and I would like to know when soccer players will start wearing some protection the way other athletes now do. — Brent, Oakland, Calif.

Dear Brent: I can't give a specific response to your question, but I can support your observation that soccer players are at risk of eye injuries. Protective eyewear should reduce the incidence of these injuries, and I imagine it is simply a question of time before some form of protective eyewear is introduced among soccer players.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine gave birth by a cesarean delivery. She was told that it was necessary because otherwise it would have been a breech delivery. Is a cesarean delivery always necessary in such cases? I'm pretty sure I have heard of other women who had breech babies delivered the usual way. — Mrs. L.W., Akron, Ohio

Dear Mrs. W.: Not all breech presentations require cesarean section. In fact, the results of one study of more than 700 breech deliveries showed little difference in outcome regardless of the method of delivery. Both vaginal and cesarean deliveries were marked by excellent survival and a very low complication rate.

For Conrad, Great Neck, Long Island, New York: Chickenpox can be extremely serious in immunodepressed patients, such as children with leukemia. The good news is that a vaccine may soon be available. The results of tests in almost a thousand children indicate that a vaccine has been developed that is both safe and effective.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I work in a factory and some of the men have a habit of chewing on toothpicks while they work. I asked one of them about this, and he said it's better than eating candy or chewing tobacco all day long. I would agree that candy and tobacco are not the best things to use, but couldn't chewing on a toothpick be dangerous? — Terry, Boston, Mass.

Dear Terry: The answer to your question is a definite yes. Swallowing a toothpick can have very serious consequences, including death.

In most cases, a foreign body, including a toothpick, will pass through the gastrointestinal tract and will eventually be eliminated. However, it is also possible that a foreign body will perforate the intestine and result in the serious consequences I have mentioned.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a colomnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies, but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Canadian developing first film 'business mart'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

ENTERTAINMENT

Film executives will be able to wheel and deal in utter luxury, with gourmet dining and a "stress-reduction health spa" at their disposal. Screening rooms and post-production facilities will be state-of-the-art.

CULVER CITY, Calif. — At a time when many film companies are taking their projects out of Hollywood in favor of other cities, a Canadian businessman has launched construction of a $75 million entertainment complex here.

Bruce Mallen, a financier and former dean of the business school at Concordia University in Montreal, radiates confidence that Hollywood — the generic term for the film community — will continue to be the movie world's center.

Billed as the "first international business mart for the entertainment industries," the proposed Filmcorp Center will face Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio and will be the most imposing edifice in Culver City.

Mallen said in an interview there were several reasons why Culver City, a modest suburb famous only because of its studios, was chosen as the site for the entertainment complex, scheduled to open in 1985.

"Because we wanted to be near a big studio; because we wanted to be on the west side, where film people live," he said. "Also, the Culver City Redevelopment Agency has been active and cooperative. We didn't want to pay $300 per square feet for the land. The agency acquired the four acres through eminent domain, and we paid $50 a square foot — $7 million."

Mallen is not the only Canadian to penetrate the Hollywood scene. Jack Singer, a real estate millionaire from Calgary, has purchased Francis Ford Coppola's defunct Zoetrope Studio for $12.3 million and plans to renovate it as a modern film facility.

"In 1977 and 1978, new tax laws made it appear attractive for Canadian taxpayers to invest in movie production," Mallen said. "I was approached by a couple of producers to investigate the possibility of finding financing."

Mallen became a kind of marriage broker between producers and investment bankers during the upsurge in the Canadian film industry. He began researching the Hollywood-type of operation, and even began writing a book on the subject.

With overseas money, he formed Filmcorp Entertainment Finances to help back such films as "The High Country" with Timothy Bottoms, "Heartaches" with Margot Kidder and Robert Carradine, "Man in 5-A" with George Segal and "Odyssey of the Pacific" with Mickey Rooney.

Realizing that the Canadian movie bubble would some day burst, Mallen shifted his operations more and more to California. Then he conceived the idea of an entertainment complex.

The design for Filmcorp Center is dramatic. There are eight stair-step terraces with a 90-foot atrium in the middle. Film executives will be able to wheel and deal in utter luxury, with gourmet dining and a "stress-reduction health spa" at their disposal. Screening rooms and post-production facilities will be state-of-the-art.

Mallen also managed something Louis B. Mayer never could. For years Mayer tried unsuccessfully to buy the Salisbury Mortuary that stands at the entrance to MGM. Mallen was able to do it, and not through eminent domain.

New 'Wiz' isn't big on 'ahhs'

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK — Why "The Wiz" again?

The question comes to mind after viewing the overwrought, overamplified and overdone revival of the 1975 black musical about the Wizard of Oz that blew into Broadway's Lunt-Fontanne Theater on Thursday after an extended road tour.

The main reason for resurrecting "The Wiz" seems to be Stephanie Mills, who created the role of Dorothy on Broadway nine years ago and now, after a successful career as a pop singer, is back again to "Ease On Down The Road."

Miss Mills looks the same, but the shy, vulnerable Dorothy, searching to return to Kansas after a tornado carries her to the land of Oz, is gone. Instead, we get a slick, powerhouse performance more appropriate for discoland than Oz. This girl could get back to Auntie Em and Uncle Henry on her lungs alone.

The stridency may not be Miss Mills' fault. Director Geoffrey Holder pushes all the performers. The show's three witches — Ella Mitchell, Juanita Fleming and Ann Duquesnay — are the worst offenders. They mug, squeal and camp it up to the extreme. And Carl Hall, as the serpentine Wiz, substitutes shouting for sinuosity.

But then everybody in the cast seems determined to break the sound barrier. Loud does not necessarily mean clear. Charlie Smalls' lyrics — he also wrote the unmemorable, soul-tinged music — may not be very subtle but except for a few of the numbers like "What Would I Do If I Could Feel," or the duet "Be A Lion," not many of the words filter through the sound system.

William F. Brown's broad adaptation of the L. Frank Baum classic at least has a definite point of view. The characters have modern street smarts that can't be found on Baum's original Yellow Brick Road. They gently chide the original without being mean-spirited.

Still the performers don't offer definitive portraits. Miss Mills gets little support from Charles Valentino as the Scarecrow, Howard Porter's Tinman or the Cowardly Lion of Gregg Baker. They don't transform their individual turns into the showstoppers they should be, although Valentino gets off some nifty moves in "I Was Born On The Day Before Yesterday."

Holden, who designed the outlandish, colorful costumes for the original production, provides the same service for this revival, and the outfits remain as dazzling as ever.

George Faison's choreography rarely rises above the athletic except in the opening scene when a dancer, personifying the tornado, swirls long black strips of cloth across the stage. It's the evening's most striking image and one that remains in the mind after the show is over. Not much else is worth savoring though. This "Wiz" should be sent back to Oz quickly.

Other critics had the following comments:

Douglas Watt of the New York Daily News wrote: "'The Wiz' is back in town, opening last night at the Lunt-Fontanne, too late to win another Tony, but in time to give the tag end of a generally lackluster Broadway musical season a bit of a lift, even though it looks a bit road weary."

"'The Wiz' earns enough high marks to make it worth a visit, especially with the kids."

Professor Alan Nelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology adjusts the scanning electron microscope apertures on a new device that combines a CAT scanner with the electron microscope to allow scientists to produce the first three-dimensional pictures of living cells. In the past, electron microscopes have always been used on subjects that are dead, because the subjects had to be in a vacuum environment.

Microscope gives first 3-D view of living cells

BOSTON (AP) — Exquisitely detailed three-dimensional pictures of living cells are being taken with a new microscope that scientists hope will provide an important tool for glimpsing the innermost workings of life.

The invention is a computerized electron microscope. But unlike earlier generations of this device, the new one takes pictures of living things, not just lifeless ones.

Researchers who developed it at Massachusetts Institute of Technology say they hope it will help scientists in fields ranging from basic biology to semiconductors. Among its uses will be showing how cancer cells grow and embryos develop.

The new machine draws on the technology of a medical diagnostic machine called a CAT scanner, or computer-aided tomography. These machines rotate an X-ray beam around a patient and them reconstruct a series of X-ray shots into a single cross-sectional picture.

Professor Alan Nelson calls his new process microtomography, and he says it does something similar on the microscopic level.

He rotates a sample in front of a beam of electrons. Then a computer draws a three-dimensional picture of what it sees.

A key to his development is what he calls an "environmental chamber." It gets around a major drawback of electron microscopes — the need to kill an object to look at it.

Ordinarily, these microscopes work only when the sample being viewed is sealed in a vacuum. This is necessary so that air molecules won't scatter the electron beam. But since living things cannot survive in a vacuum, only dead specimens can be viewed with an electron microscope.

Nelson's environmental chamber allows the beam to remain in a vacuum until just before it strikes the sample. A tiny opening lets the beam to peek into the chamber, which contains just enough air pressure for the living sample to survive.

The researchers plan to use the environmental chamber to learn about how cells move, reproduce and grow. For the first time, they will be able to watch the microscopic effects that drugs have on living cells.

Twins sure bet for attendance

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Twelve years ago, Helmuth Hunger bet his twin sons, Jim and Tim, that they couldn't get through first-grade without missing a day. He wound up forking over $5 to each of them.

It was the beginning of a yearly wager that set Hunger back about $700 — and led the twins on Tuesday to become Grand Junction High School's first graduates with 12 years' perfect attendance.

"We were never really ill, and when we were, we went, anyway," said Tim. "After you go for six or eight years, it becomes a part of your life."

The twins, now 18, said they found their continuous attendance paid other benefits besides the financial ones.

"Teachers give better grades if you are there every day," said Tim.

"I'm sure we learned more," said Jim.

But after their steady attendance at Clifton and Chatfield elementary schools, Bookcliff and Orchard Mesa junior highs and Grand Junction High, neither plans to go to college. Instead, they will follow their father into the automotive machinery business.

"We've had enough of school," said Jim.

Kite artist hopes her business will fly

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Paula Hagar pieces together plump panda bears, beautiful butterflies and colorful California poppies — then she casts them to the winds.

She sometimes bills herself as a "fiber artist," but the Southlake woman is basically a kite artist, who creates, shows and sells all manner of kites and windsocks.

Ms. Hagar is one of the few kite artists in the United States; she could think of only two others in Texas. But she has never let conventions limit her career choices.

"I've done a million things — stained glass, teaching. I owned a health food store, I had chickens and sold eggs " she said. She joked that she read "Mother Earth News" at an impressionable age and got off on the wrong start, but her kite work has been successful from the start.

She began by buying half a dozen cheap plastic kites and using them as patterns. From there, she went to working from kite books and learned how to make patterns of her own.

In the two years she has been working seriously on kites, she has been to the top art shows in Texas, Colorado and New Mexico. She recently was invited to a show in Paris, France and the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth has asked her to work on a children's program.

Most people don't think of kites as art, Ms. Hagar admitted, but kites have had both practical and artistic purposes for centuries. Historians trace the origin of kites to China, where they were first used for military reconnaissance about 200 B.C.

Kites eventually became so much of an Eastern tradition that they were adopted into ceremonial festivals and used for amusement. The Chinese created beautiful elaborately decorated kites. Kite flying spread throughout the East and gradually worked its way across the South Pacific and to the Americas.

Kites have been used to collect weather data, carry men across water and, of course, to discover electricity. Technical knowledge gained through kite making contributed to the invention of the airplane.

Ms. Hagar said she is working to learn more about the technical side of kite making. So far, though, everything she has made will fly.

Ms. Hagar loves the appeal kites hold for children.

"I've had such neat experiences with children," she said. "I get letters from them after they've bought a kite. I give them kites and let them pay them out or work them out. I have a credit program for children — why not get them started early on the American way?"

City may soon acquire permit for new landfill

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The city of Midland could have a permit to open up a new landfill in 60 days if the request doesn't get tied up in bureaucratic red tape.

At the close of a one-hour public hearing Thursday morning in City Hall Council Chambers, Hearing Examiner John T. Richards with the Texas Department of Health in Austin said a brief would be released in 30 days. If Midland has no problems with the department's decision, then "we can expedite the bureaucratic procedures," he said.

Midland is asking to be allowed to use 412 acres of land southeast of the city for a new landfill — a site that should fill the city's needs for 45 years.

Public Works Director Fred Baker explained the city purchased that site in 1977 for a landfill. It is located about seven miles southeast of the intersection of Interstate 20 and State Highway 158 and 0.75 mile north of Highway 148.

No one showed up to oppose the permit; the only testimony came from hydrologists and city personnel in favor of it.

Hugh Rothbottom with Ed Reed and Associates, a local hydrology firm, described the surrounding area as open rangeland. The nearest residence is 1.2 miles north of the site and several water wells are located to the north, he said. The landfill's design will be dictated by the pipeline easements that cross the land.

Midland has been lining its landfills with asphalt. But Rothbottom said the city is asking for a variance to take the clay materials out of the site, compact them and then use it as a liner. Baker said this clay "has the ability to bind heavy metals so they won't get back into the enviroment."

Ed Reed, also a hydrologist, checked the ground water system under the land and said the closest it comes is 30 feet below the proposed site at one corner. Baker added that corner won't be utilized.

The liner, said Reed, should protect the ground water system. He noted that in Midland, and also in the Lubbock area, the ground water level has been rising in recent years. He attributed it to the importation of water from a well system 30 miles away rather than using a water source locally, as was done in the past.

"We do not expect the water level under this site will rise significantly over the next several years. We feel this is a secure site," said Reed.

The hearing examiner found this rising water level phenomenon unusual and asked Reed, "Could you say the city has more water than it needs?"

"It's not usable," Reed said.

Mike Butler, assistant director of public works, said the landfill site will be operated eight hours a day for 6½ days using seven employees, two scale-house employees and a foreman. It will be double-fenced. The outer perimeters will be fenced to keep out people and animals. And the section which is being used as the landfill will be surrounded by another fence to try and catch the papers when the wind blows, he said.

Baker pointed out the city has a problem at the current landfill with papers blowing out. "This other fencing, we hope, will reduce the possibility of blowing material at the site."

In asking the state to grant the permit soon, Baker said the current landfill can be used two more months, possibly three. "Beyond that, we're facing a real problem."

He pointed out a pit already exists on the new site and asked if there would be a problem if the city lined it and began using it before the permit was granted. Richards said the State Health Department has no jurisdiction over it until the site is used. "So, I guess I'm saying have at it. We have no jurisdiction until you start laying down the garbage."

According to a news release from the state agency, the department's "jurisdiction includes the collection, handling, and storage of solid waste and disposal by energy and material recovery, sanitary landfill, composting or other approved methods."

According to the law, each facility must be evaluated by the Health Department prior to receiving a permit. A public hearing is held to allow all interested persons to present testimony relating to the facility.

Midland brothers plead guilty in woman's death

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"Pete and I were scared we were going to get in a lot of trouble. I could hear her crying. We took off and we were talking about how we had left her there and that she might die.

"Alfredo didn't seem worried. He just acted like it never happened. We didn't offer her a ride, and we never went back to see if she was still there or not."

— Jesse Sosa, in confession

In a surprise, mid-trial move Thursday, two Midland brothers changed their pleas to guilty and were sentenced to 25 years in prison for last fall's kidnap-death of a southside woman.

Pete and Jesse Sosa, in their early 20s, originally pleaded innocent to the charge and their trial began Tuesday before a six-man, six-woman jury.

At noon Thursday, however, State District Judge Pat Baskin announced the defense and prosecution had agreed to a 25-year sentence in return for a guilty plea.

The switch came shortly after Baskin overruled defense motions and admitted into evidence confessions the pair had given sheriff's investigators.

The Sosas could have been sentenced to life imprisonment had the case gone to the jury, according to District Attorney Vern Martin.

In their confessions, the brothers admitted participating — along with their 16-year-old cousin Alfredo Sanchez — in the abduction, assault and abandonment of Mrs. Teresa Yharte, a 35-year-old dwarf who apparently was carried comatose out of the Ojinaga Bar on Lamesa Road the night of Nov. 29.

Sanchez has been certified as an adult in the case and is expected to stand trial at a later date.

A passing oilfield worker discovered Mrs. Yhartes' nude body lying face down in an isolated field near a small lake east of town on Dec. 2.

Her clothing was found hanging on some nearby high reeds, and the state contended she froze to death in sub-freezing temperatures after being unable to see or reach her clothes because of her 3-foot, 7-inch stature.

In his confession, Jesse Sosa said the trio had gone to the bar about dark and that he "saw this girl there who was real drunk."

After they got Mrs. Yharte into their car, Sanchez was in the back seat with her and "she was kissing on him. Alfredo kept saying she was hot and he wanted to take her somewhere."

When they arrived at the lake, according to the confession, she was pulled from the car and "Alfredo kept saying, 'Come on, man. Let's get her.' Alfredo was hitting the girl. He hit her in the face and told us to hold her hands, so we did."

Sanchez undressed Mrs. Yharte and "started having sex with her," the confession continued. "I (then) got on top of her, but she kept saying no, no, no. So I decided it was wrong and didn't rape her. Alfredo raped her again and he was punching her again.

"Pete and I were scared we were going to get in a lot of trouble. I could hear her crying. We took off and we were talking about how we had left her there and that she might die.

"Alfredo didn't seem worried. He just acted like it never happened. We didn't offer her a ride, and we never went back to see if she was still there or not."

In his statement, Pete Sosa — who is married and the father of two children — basically agreed with his brother's account of the incident and added:

"I didn't mean for her to die. I just want to take my punishment and get it over with so I can take care of my family."

In accepting the 25-year, plea-bargained sentence, the Sosas waived their right to appeal. Their eyes were downcast as they were led from the courtroom.

MISD security officers focus on deterrence, prevention

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Deterrence and prevention. Those are the two key words of Midland Independent School District security supervisor Craig "Kip" Kipena. And those policies have resulted in a decrease in drugs and other school problems in the 1½ years since he was hired, Kipena feels.

The first full-time security person for the district, Kipena's staff has grown to include two others. Officers patrol the high school campuses full time and freshmen campuses in the afternoons. They respond to other problems when needed and are on call 24 hours a day.

Their job is mainly one of deterrence, Kipena said, and visibility is one means of preventing trouble. But he has a personal campaign to keep drugs off campus.

"Although our primary purpose is to enforce the Texas Education Code and MISD policies, rules and regulations, I am personally committed to the eradication of drugs from our campuses to the utmost of my ability," Kipena said. Students who are found with drugs or alcohol on campus are taken to the principal, who contacts the police and takes disciplinary measures, he explained. Others are turned over to police.

"We have people who come on our campuses for no other reason than to corrupt students," he said. "We ask these trespassers to leave the campus and not to return. They usually leave. If they refuse we apprehend them for loitering on school property or criminal trespassing.

"If I hear about a drug problem I investigate it. Most of our problems are small and sometimes just rumors, but it is something you have to stay on top of all the time. Complacency in this area could be your worst enemy."

One recently-formed anti-drug group has complained that school policies concerning discipline of students found with drugs are not strict enough. Kipena disagrees.

"I'm not so sure stronger policies would deter. People who really want to bring them on campus are going to do it anyway.

"I think there has been some decrease (in drug-related incidents on campus) because we're a deterrent," he continued. "I believe kids will think twice before bringing them on campus."

Similar to a police officer, security personnel are not responsible for discipline — which is the domain of principals and assistant principals — but for prevention, detection and enforcement.

"We do not allow weapons or disorderly conduct such as fighting and abusive language on our campuses," Kipena said, adding the principal might call him in if he considered a problem to be serious. "We confiscate weapons and stop fights. Students involved are brought to the attention of the school principal who takes the appropriate disciplinary action."

Kipena has also improved and updated the district's record-keeping and reporting systems, implemented night patrols, upgraded the alarm and security systems and improved the communications system.

He said his future plans include increasing alarm networks even more.

Phil Gramm

Gramm adds new verse to campaign song

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Phil Gramm added a new verse to his campaign song during a press conference Thursday afternoon at Midland Regional Airport.

Strumming the Republican version of campaign rhetoric after winning that party's nomination in the U.S. Senate race, Gramm sang of the two Democratic opponents' faults. He described State Sen. Lloyd Doggett as a demagogue for wanting to raise taxes on the wealthy and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance as a proponent of tax hikes.

Hance and Doggett are facing each other in a June 2 runoff for the Democratic nomination.

Gramm also hummed the same verses he sang during the primary campaign, which focus on his ability to be the leading candidate for the Senate seat being vacated by Republican John Tower.

The number one issue in this country is the deficit, said Gramm, who then added the verses about Hance and Doggett.

Doggett, he said, "says the way we should deal with the deficit is to raise taxes on the rich folks and on corporations. It makes no sense. If you passed a 100 percent tax on people who make $75,000 or more, we would only get $18 billion more. That would operate the government for seven days."

And that type of tax, Gramm said, would only make these people stop working "and you'd get nothing."

Corporations are paying a chunk of the tax bill, said the former Texas A&M economics professor. This year, the government is collecting $66.6 billion out of the large companies; next year it should increase to $75 billion.

"If we doubled their tax, it would reduce the deficit by a third. But it would stop the economic recovery," Gramm contended.

Pointing to a campaign pamphlet prepared by Hance's staff in which the congressman from Lubbock is said to be against tax increases, Gramm said that philosophy applied only the first year Hance was in Congress. Instead, he has voted to raise taxes twice and against a bill to mandate spending cuts, Gramm asserted.

"He voted to cap the third year tax cut," said Gramm. "That would have hurt those couples making $35,000 or more and it would hurt small businesses.

"We're not going to deal with the deficit problem by raising taxes," he said, preferring to see the government cut its budget.

Hance and Gramm hit Congress as greenhorns the same year and both went as Democrats. Gramm showed a profile in which the Baron Report showed the two men getting a zero rating in 1981 for "liberal economic votes." In 1983, Gramm still had a zero and Hance gained a 57 rating.

Hance supported President Reagan only during the Republican president's first year in office. According to the Congressional Quarterly, Gramm and Hance had votes of 75 and 71, respectively, on issues supporting the president in 1981. In 1983, Gramm sustained a 73 rating and Hance fell to 41.

These point to Hance's turning away from Reagan and toward the Democratic leadership of House Speaker Tip O'Neill, according to Gramm.

ECISD ponders changes in students' school assignments

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The bus ride to school will likely pass along a different route and stop at different schools for 353 elementary-level Ector County Independent School District students next year.

Getting ready for the 1984-1985 school year, the ECISD board pondered and made no changes Thursday night to elementary-school boundary changes prepared by the administration.

If the board chooses to vote for the changes in next month's meeting, three of 25 elementary boundaries will be reshaped to adjust to the changes. These adjustments will transplant 218 Hispanics, 129 Anglos, four Asians and two blacks.

The boundary changes are made periodically by the ECISD to keep the schools' populations at accepted enrollment levels, in terms of numbers and ethnic make-up.

Each school has a set capacity based on space restrictions. In addition, the federal courts have ordered the district to move toward an ethnic breakdown of at least 40 percent minority (Anglo on the southside, Hispanic and black on the northside) at each of the schools.

In working toward these goals, 51 Anglo children who had ridden to Blanton Elementary — one of the newest of the district's schools located on the northside — will travel with nine Hispanic neighbors to Fannin Elementary, on the northwest side of Odessa.

The change is expected to drop Fannin's growing minority population to within the court-ordered limits. The school enrollment is currently made up of 64 percent minority and 36 percent Anglo children, according to the administration's report.

Because a large number of Austin Elementary students have been accepted in one of the district's eight 1984-85 magnet school programs, the report calls for 73 Anglos, 38 Hispanics, 4 Asians and one black student now in the highly Anglo Blanton school zone to be moved to Austin to bring the depleted enrollment back up.

The popularity of Blackshear Elementary, the ECISD's model magnet school, has left next year's projected enrollment of 150 students above what the southside school can accommodate, said the report.

So, 171 Hispanics, five Anglos and one black student who live on the southside and would have been attending the favorite school would be bused to the northside of town to Blanton.

All told, Blanton's Anglo population figures to drop 119, while the Hispanic enrollment grows by 124 — bringing the school closer to the court-ordered integration.

While the magnet-school program was chosen by the ECISD to accomplish desegregation voluntarily, these changes in the non-contiguous boundaries (a patchwork lay-out to set up zones for bused and walk-in students) have been used to further integrate the elementary schools and make the best use of building space.

Superintendent Bill Holm announced during the meeting that only one of next year's eight magnets remain under the breakdown ordered by the federal court.

Travis Elementary, one of five magnets to open in 1984-85, has yet to attract the required 40 percent minimum Anglo enrollment. This southside magnet, offering special emphasis on math and science, had 38 percent Anglo enrollment, said Holm.

The other seven magnets have attained the minimum called for by the court. Enrollment continues for the magnet programs, giving the district time to avoid the single violation at Travis.

Almost 7,000 of the ECISD's approximately 26,000 students are carried to school on 145 buses.

The Committee for Redress, Unity, Concern and Integrity at All Levels, a southside parents group opposing the ECISD's desegregation plan, has charged the district is not interested in exceeding the 40 percent minimums, but district officials have said they hope to improve on these minimums in future years.

Teen-agers held in death of police officer

HOUSTON (AP) — Three teenagers have been arrested in the robbery and beating of an off-duty Houston police officer who later died while attempting to cross a freeway, authorities said.

Mark Gonzales, 17, was arrested Wednesday night at an Austin motel, officers said. Gonzales was in the Austin city jail pending his return to Houston, police said.

Rudy Martinez, 18, and a 16-year-old boy also were arrested Wednesday night in Houston, police said. Martinez was being held in jail, while the juvenile was placed in the custody of the Harris County juvenile department.

Gonzales, Martinez and the juvenile are charged with robbery by threat in the robbery of Officer Michael T. Williams, who was found dead on the Katy Freeway on April 11.

Williams, 36, was found dead about 4:50 a.m. No identification was on the body. No investigating officers recognized the body and it was taken to the Houston morgue as a "John Doe" traffic fatality.

Lawyers to ask for delay in sanctuary trial

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys defending a refugee halfway house director charged with transporting illegal aliens plan to ask that the trial be postponed to allow them more time to prepare their case.

The trial of Jack Elder, 40, had orginally been scheduled for July 3, but attorneys were informed yesterday that U.S. Judge Filemon Vela had moved the trial date to early June.

Jury selection was reset for June 1 with the trial to begin the following Monday instead of in July.

Attorney George Powell of McAllen said the defense team could not be ready by then, and added that he will request a continuance at the pretrial hearing May 31. Powell said he felt confident the motion would be granted.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra said the date of trial was moved because of possible problems with the speedy trial provision of the law. He said prosecutors were ready for trial.

"We'll just put on our simple alien transport case as usual and see how much they can cloud the issue," said Guerra, referring to claims by Elder and others that the aliens are political refugees protected by the Refugee Act of 1980 and not illegal aliens as the government contends.

Workers in the nation's so-called sanctuary movement say Elder's arrest is part of a crackdown by federal authorities on people helping refugees and opposing U.S. policy in Central America.

But Guerra said, "this was not a case of border patrol agents sitting on the steps of the Casa Romero waiting for aliens to be transported."

"The basic facts are that border patrol agents saw three aliens getting out of a car at the Harligen bus terminal, stopped and questioned them and found out the man in the car was Mr. Elder," Guerra said.

Elder's arrest came within two months of the arrest of Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29, a volunteer at the Casa Romero. She was arrested by border patrol agents Feb. 17 with a nun and reporter and charged with conspiracy to transport undocumented Salvadorans.

Ms. Merkt was convicted May 14 and is to be sentenced June 27. She faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $9,000 fine.

The aliens she is accused of transporting face deportation proceedings next month.

Employees catch would-be shoplifter

From Staff Reports

A would-be shoplifter at the Furr's Super Market on Scharbauer Drive was jailed on aggravated robbery charges after he allegedly pulled a knife on two store employees and bit one of them on the arm.

According to police, the 22-year-old Corpus Christi man had left the store about 5:30 p.m. Thursday with $72 worth of beer, cigarettes and meat when he was confronted by the employees.

When they asked for a receipt, the suspect said he didn't have to produce one. He produced a knife instead and tried to flee. But the employees managed to wrest the knife away and subdue him.

One employee was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for bite injuries to his left arm.

Formal charges are expected to be filed today. The knife was taken as evidence.

Police responding to a burglar alarm at a southside loan company at 4:40 a.m. today found that a piece of concrete block had been thrown through a window of the CIC Finance & Furniture Co. at 905 S. Main. Missing was a $689 TV set. Damage to tne window was placed at $175. An investigation continues.

Midland police will fingerprint children at mall

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department will be fingerprinting children at the Midland Park Mall Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

No, it's not a roundup of juvenile delinquents — it's part of a program conducted by the Crime Prevention Program that enables police to identify missing children.

The copies of the fingerprints will be kept by the parents, not the police. If the child turns up missing, the parents can give the copy to the police, who can use it to identify the child.

This is the fifth fingerprinting program conducted in Midland in the past year, according to Sgt. Lalo Camarillo of the Midland Police Department. There's no charge for the fingerprinting, but all children must be at least one year old and accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

Brownwood insurance broker charged with defrauding elderly

BROWNWOOD (AP) — The owner of a Brownwood insurance company defrauded elderly people by taking their money for insurance policies without ever forwarding the premiums to the companies, authorities in three West Texas counties say.

Vic Dean Pierce, 35, owner of Farmers and Ranchers Group Insurance Service, was taken into custody Thursday on charges of felony theft in Gillespie County and for bond forfeiture in Brown and Coleman counties after failing to appear for pre-trial hearings.

"The only way somebody finds out they've been swindled is if they never receive a policy in the mail or if they file a claim and are notified they are not insured," Brown County sheriff's deputy Mike McCoy told the Abilene Reporter-News on Thursday.

Pierce spent the night in the Brown County Jail because of a policy prohibiting the posting of bonds after 5 p.m., officials said. He was arrested only minutes before 5 p.m.

Bond was set at $2,500 in Gillespie County, $2,000 in Brown County and $1,000 in Coleman County.

McCoy said Pierce was arrested following an investigation with the state insurance board.

The deputy said the board had been notified that an elderly Brown County woman filed a hospitalization claim on a policy she said she bought from Pierce, but was notified she was not covered by the company.

Earlier this week the House voted to raise the debt ceiling by another $30 billion and Gramm said he would prefer if Reagan used that as a weapon to knock out some spending programs.

The first year he was in Congress, Gramm recalled, the House voted to raise the debt ceiling. "I understand you have to pay your bills," Gramm said he told the rest of the House. "When I go out and spend money my wife may pay my bills, but we sit down and come to an understanding, and it stops." The government has never learned to quit spending; it just keeps signing those checks, he contended.

Instead, Gramm proposed raising the debt ceiling only when Congress had done something to reduce its spending, but the idea was never accepted.

"Had we lived within the spending figures of the budget, we would have a much smaller deficit today," he said.

Agency plans to shift treatment of mentally ill

AUSTIN (AP) — A state mental health official says the agency's plan to shift some patients from state hospitals to community-based care is part of a national trend to treat people near their homes.

"The whole country is moving toward trying to treat people who have mental illnesses as close to their homes as possible," said Dr. Jimmy Clemons, deputy commissioner of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Clemons on Thursday said the agency also plans expanded use of anti-psychotic medication.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday that one of its reporters sat, unnoticed, through a staff meeting of the Austin State Hospital.

The newspaper quoted Dr. Albert E. Gallo, clinical director of the hospital, as telling the meeting the state mental health agency wants doctors to "get more aggressive with the use of psychotropic medication."

Clemons, deputy commissioner for mental health, said expanded use of tranquilizer-like psychotropic drugs — which can change behavior in some patients — would be similar to treatments already being used by other doctors.

"The approach...is simply implementing more of the measures that are used in university settings and private practice settings right now. We're not going to be doing anything that's medically inappropriate. We're not going to be releasing a bunch of drugged people onto the streets," he said.

The department's plans seek to reduce the ratio of staff members to patients at the eight state mental hospitals. Clemons said the plan must be approved by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas and could take effect Sept. 1.

The mental health agency has told Sanders that by Aug. 31, 1985, it will have no more than five patients for each worker during the day and evening shifts, and 10 patients per worker on night shifts.

The ratios were agreed upon two weeks ago by the agency, the U.S. Justice Department, a court-appointed oversight panel assigned to review Texas mental hospitals, and plaintiffs in a 1974 lawsuit that claimed poor hospital conditions. The new agreement came after Sanders declared that a 1981 court order for improvements was not being met.

Clemons said the department has concluded that it would cost about $16.5 million to hire enough additional staff members to meet the ratio and not reduce the patient load at the hospitals.

"We can approach this two ways. You can increase staff or reduce the number of patients. Either way, or with a combination, you'll move toward the staff ratios," he said.

He said the department's proposal calls for moving about 1,280 of the 5,200 state hospital patients to community programs within a year. The costs, ultimately, will be about the same as hiring the additional staff, he said.

Clemons said community-based treatment frequently is preferred for a variety of reasons.

Kidney patient ordered to leave U.S. by Sept. 23

DALLAS (AP) — A kidney dialysis patient, ordered to leave the country after admitting she is an illegal alien, will die in her native Mexico because she can't afford the treatments she has received for free here for the last seven years, her attorney says.

Despite the pleas of attorney Edward Purcell, Immigration Court Judge Gary Burkholder ordered Fermina Vasquez to leave the country by Sept. 23 after she confessed during a deportaion hearing Wednesday that she was an illegal alien.

"She's going to die,nd there's going to be another child begging on the streets," Purcell said of the 30-year-old widow and mother of three. Two of Mrs. Vasquez's children are living with their father's relatives in Mexico, and the third lives with her here, he said.

Purcell said his client cannot afford the treatments in Mexico, where they are available in only three cities and each session costs $200. He said she also would face a 12-hour trip to the nearest dialysis center from Durango, which is 520 miles south of El Paso.

Mrs. Vasquez has been receiving free treatments for seven years at the Dallas Kidney Disease Center and sometimes at Parkland Memorial Hospital, with the aid of a friend's Social Security card. She recently received a valid Social Security card and is seeking part-time employment, the attorney said.

Purcell asked Ronald Chandler, Dallas district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, to defer the deportation order so Mrs. Vasquez can continue receiving treatments while she seeks a kidney donor.

Chandler and INS officials could grant the delay despite Burkholder's order, Purcell said.

"I have faith," Mrs. Vasquez said. "I believe in God. I am asking God to let me stay here. I am positive that nothing will happen that will make me go back to Mexico."

She said she wants her American-born son, Jose, to grow up in the United States because she believes he will have a better life here than in Mexico.

Purcell also is asking INS officials to delay the deportation order because Mrs. Vasquez's four-year probationary term from a 1983 conviction for possession of marijuana requires her to remain in Dallas County.

Potassium citrate pill can prevent kidney stones, doctor says

DALLAS (AP) — A pill packing the same potassium citrate punch as three daily glasses of orange juice can prevent the formation of painful kidney stones, a Texas doctor said.

Dr. Charles Y.C. Pak announced Thursday he has found that a daily dose of potassium citrate can provide relief to at least one-quarter of the 660,000 Americans who have some form of kidney stones.

Tests on patients suffering from hypocitraturia, a common cause of kidney stone disease, have shown that the drug stopped formation of stones in 74 percent and retarded formation of stones in 96 percent, Pak said.

Pak said that after three years of research he concluded that the drug would work as a cure for kidney stones with existing treatments of surgical removal and ultrasonic destruction.

"With the combined application of improved techniques for the removal of stones...the control of renal stone disease may well be in hand," Pak said.

Food and Drug Administration approval is expected this summer and the drug should be on the market in the fall, Pak said.

About 96 percent of the patients showed a reduced rate of stones formed, said Pak, professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas.

Pak said his test group of 78 patients formed an average 5.18 stones per year before the treatment, and .73 stones per year during treatment.

Dr. Charles Rodgers, director of the urology program at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., said Pak's results are "really significant."

"I think that the main thing it (potassium citrate) does is that it's a prevention in recurrance, which is a big problem in people who develop stones," said Rodgers.

"His (Pak's) data are pretty dramatic in those terms," Rodgers said.

Citrate, a substance normally found in urine, is an "inhibitor" of kidney stone formation, Pak said. Patients with hypocitraturia, lacking citrate, are prone to forming calcium stones. In those people, potassium citrate increases urinary citrate and thus reduces stone formation, he said.

Ship's owner 'tormenting' kin, attorney says

HOUSTON (AP) — The owner of a sunken drilling ship will be tormenting relatives of slain crew members by sending their bodies home for burial before a coroner reveals how each was identified, an attorney says.

Fred Hagans said Thursday Global Marine Inc. notified attorneys for the families that coroners reports will not be released for two or three weeks. The company's officials had said previously that the reports, compiled in Hong Kong, would be issued Wednesday, Hagans said.

But Hagans, liaison attorney for families suing the Houston-based owner of the vessel, said the company apparently has not changed plans to ship home at least seven bodies this weekend. The men were killed in the sinking of the Glomar Java Sea Oct. 25.

Hagans said he has wired a letter to the coroner asking when he expects to release his medical papers. The attorney said information from the company "has varied appreciably from time to time."

Dick Vermeer, vice president of Global Marine, said the company has decided not to discuss developments in the case because of pending litigation.

Hagans said the shipment of bodies as planned will only cause more anguish.

"It's a terrible situation for the families," he said. "They're asking 'How was that particular body identified?' and we can't tell them."

He said the company's actions are causing relatives to "go through an extended period of torture."

The ship, which was drilling for oil in the South China Sea, sank during Typhoon Lex. It carried a crew of 81, but divers found only 34 bodies on the wreck and recovered only 31 of those.

Vermeer said last week the coroner has determined the identities of only 28 of the bodies. Hagans said as far as he knows, three of the workers are still unidentified.

Forty-seven crewmembers remain unaccounted for.

Student's hair won't keep him from graduation

HOUSTON (AP) — School officials have agreed to let a student go through graduation exercises rather than take him to court over his "unconventional" hairstyle — a black streak dyed across the back of his blond head.

Officials of the Aldine Independent School District relented Thursday, the day before they were scheduled to argue in court for the right to bar 18-year-old Dean Bradley from walking across a stage to receive a high school diploma.

A hearing in the case had been set for Friday morning before state District Judge Lynn Hughes. Hughes attended the pretrial conference.

"My lawyer said the judge made it clear if we were going to do it tomorrow (Friday), he was going to go my way," said Bradley, a pupil at Nimitz High School.

Bradley, a member of the National Honor Society who won an award as the school's physics student of the year, was suing for attorneys fees and the right to participate in the ceremony.

He said principal Jack Welch told him Monday his hairstyle was "unconventional" and would have to change if he wanted to be a part of the cap-and-gown exercise.

"I'm really happy about it," Bradley said of his victory. "It's not a punk style. It's just the way I like my hair. I feel it's my right to have my hair the way I want it."

Bradley said he dyed the stripe from ear to ear for the prom in late April.

Environmentalists nix new benzene controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, using a complicated analysis, has decided that new controls on benzene are worth the expense for two industrial sources of the leukemia-causing chemical but not for three other sources.

The EPA based its decision on the first major application of the mathematics of risk analysis, outlined in preliminary form last December and made final Thursday. Environmenalists oppose the analysis, saying it fails to protect the public as required by Congress.

"There are issues of principle about cost-benefit analysis and risk assessment that come up here. We cannot let this go by," said David Doniger, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council who said he would probably sue over Thursday's decisions.

Doniger once said the risk assessment techniques meant that "your protection depends on how many neighbors you have," since a decision to impose controls may depend on how many deaths are avoided. For example, more deaths would be avoided in a populated area than in a rural area with the same pollution source, and thus the same source might be regulated differently depending on its location.

Here is what EPA did:

—Made final a requirement for equipment to control benzene emissions from "fugitive sources," generally leaks at 229 refineries and chemical plants.

—Formally proposed similar controls at 42 coke oven by-product recovery plants.

—Dropped pending proposals for controls on benzene at plants making ethylbenzene and styrene, at plants making maleic anhydride and on benzene storage tanks.

The agency estimated the new controls would reduce leukemia caused by leaks from one case every other year to one case every seven years and would reduce leukemia cases caused by coke plants from 2.6 per year to one every seven years.

The standards being dropped would have covered only 3.3 percent of non-automobile related benzene emissions and would have reduced emissions from one case every 13 years to one case every 30 years.

Some 55,000 tons of benzene are produced every year as raw material for insecticides and plastics and as a component of gasoline.

Gasoline use accounts for about half of all exposure to benzene fumes, and EPA is separately considering whether to require measures to reduce the breathing of gasoline vapors, which are a mixture of hundreds of chemicals.

Texas American avoids takeover

Lubbock oil firm seeks control

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland oil and gas exploration company is engaged in a fierce fight to avoid an unfriendly takeover.

After electing a board of directors at their annual meeting Wednesday, the shareholders of Texas American Energy Corp. adjourned until June 12, when they will vote on two anti-takeover amendments to the company's certificate of incorporation.

The board proposed the amendments in order to resist a possible unfriendly takeover attempt by Cavalcade Oil Corp. of Lubbock, which owns about 6.1 percent of Texas American's stock.

Cavalcade President Michael J. Levenson has made an informal offer to refinance part of Texas American's debt in return for control of the company, but the Texas American board has rejected that offer.

The board has proposed that board elections be staggered, so that the entire board cannot be replaced at one stockholders meeting, and that unanimous written consent be required for any action taken by the stockholders without a meeting.

The board is making these proposals "for the protection of the stockholders," said Texas American spokesman George Olsen. "The board has not said it is opposed to a takeover. But it wants to be able to evaluate it."

The board voted unanimously to propose the amendments to the stockholders, but since that vote, directors Coyn Mateer and John L. Harlan have changed their minds and now oppose the amendments. Harlan's retirement from the board became effective Wednesday, but Mateer, along with Billy R. Delp, William F. Judd and James D. Ryan, was re-elected.

In a May 15 letter to Texas American stockholders, Levenson urged them to reject the board's amendments.

"It doesn't make any sense to pass anti-takeover proposals that may have the effect of decreasing the attractiveness of Texas American Energy as a takeover candidate," Levenson told the stockholders. "I believe that these measures will only entrench present management."

Levenson said that if board elections are staggered, "it would take at least two years to elect a majority of the board — despite the sentiments of a majority of the stockholders voting at the meeting."

"The second anti-takeover amendment would remove the ability of stockholders who own more than a majority of all shares to take corporate action without the calling of a stockholder meeting by management," said Levenson. This amendment "would serve to insulate management."

But Olsen denied that the amendments were part of a "golden parachute" ploy by management. "We're not opposed to being approached," he said. "The board did not think (Levenson's) was a reasonable offer."

On May 15, Cavalcade filed suit in Delaware, where Texas American is incorporated, to postpone the annual meeting until a full disclosure of all facts had been made to all stockholders. On Tuesday, the Delaware Chancery Court decided that the meeting could take place as scheduled, but that further disclosures must be made before the amendments could become effective.

Texas American then went ahead with its meeting Wednesday at the Petroleum Club, but postponed the vote on the amendments to comply with the court's request, Olsen said.

Rumors cause bank stock drop

Economy, bank troubles blamed

NEW YORK (AP) — A new crop of rumors about the health of the nation's financial system cropped up on Wall Street, causing bank stocks to fall, but the banks said the rumors were unfounded.

The stocks of a dozen banks hit 52-week lows Thursday as investors, nervous from the problems besetting Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust, sold off their shares.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York, the nation's fourth-largest bank, was hardest hit by the rumors as its stock plunged $3.37½ a share to close at $27.62½. Some of the rumors specifically mentioned Manufacturers, but the company denied it had any financial difficulties.

Other banks also said they were not suffering problems.

Among the banks hit by the market slump were Bank of Boston, off $2 to $31.62½; Bankers Trust, off $1.37½ to $38; Security Pacific, off $1.25 to $41.25; Chase Manhattan, off $1 to $40.75; Citicorp, off 87½ cents to $29.75; and Continental Illinois, off 37½ cents to $8.

Continental Illinois had to be bailed out last week by a multibillion-dollar credit package put together by the federal government and other banks after rumors about its health triggered an outflow of deposits. Both the bank and federal banking authorities had said there was no basis for the rumors.

Analysts said it was unclear where Thursday's rumors originated, but some possibly started in Europe.

"When rumors get started, rumors can often be more powerful than fact," said Eldon Grimm, senior vice president at the securities firm Birr, Wilson & Co. Inc.

The latest spate of rumors came a day after Continental Illinois executives reported their bank's situation was stablizing, with the amount of withdrawals slowing.

Continental has been hurt by nonperforming loans and big losses in energy-related loans after the collapse of Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City in 1982.

Workers sound taps for town's steel mill

DUQUESNE, Pa. (AP) — Wearing black arm bands, humming "Taps" and fighting back tears, grizzled steelworkers toiled their final shift at Dorothy Six, an award-winning blast furnace whose fires fell victim to the industry's hard times.

"I saw Dorothy being built when I was a kid. She was special to us. She was our bread and butter. It's something you hate to see die. She was part of the family," said Joe Procacina, 43, a steelworker for 17 years.

"There were a lot of guys with tears in their eyes. It's a dead, empty feeling. It's sad. The place is like a graveyard," said Procacina, a maintenance man with a wife and three children but no job.

U.S. Steel Corp., which lost $1.2 billion last year, shut down Dorothy Six on Thursday as part of a nationwide retrenchment announced Dec. 27. The closing and other cutbacks mean the loss of 1,150 jobs at the Duquense Works in the ailing Monongahela River Valley east of Pittsburgh.

Until today, Dorothy Six was the biggest and most productive furnace in the valley, boasting a 29-foot hearth. For 21 years, its caldron brewed ore, coke and limestone to cook liquid iron processed into mighty steel.

Just last year, the furnace won a U.S. Steel "Ironmaster Award" by beating pre-set production goals. Workers were rewarded with jackets, patches, citations — after receiving their pink slips.

"This arm band symbolizes the death of a blast furnace, the death of the plant, the death of my job. It's a shame," said Bob Macey, 35. On his final shift, the 16-year veteran played "Taps" over the plant's public address system as his colleagues hummed along.

"My great-grandfather, my grandfather and my father worked in there. That's four generations. It's like losing everything, like losing your family tree," said Macey, the contents of his work locker packed into two paper bags he carried home to McKeesport. "I cried a little bit. I didn't think I would. It's just a hunk of steel."

The furnace got its name from Dorothy Worthington, the wife of a former U.S. Steel chairman. In earlier and less enlightened times, steelworkers gave female names to blast furnaces because they were thought to be unpredictable and temperamental.

Up to the end, Dorothy remained a sentimental benefactress to maintenance man Paul Budai, whose wife gave birth to a son the day the furnace went cold.

"If it was a girl, we were going to name it Dorothy after the furnace," said Budai, who invested 17 of his 35 years in the mill. "It's going to be rough. This is the first time in my life I've ever been laid off."

After being flushed of a final load of iron and slag, Dorothy was filled with gravel to keep a brick lining from falling out. The furnace's unneeded tenders then quietly cleaned out their lockers.

Muscled men filed past the time clock for the last time and shook hands with cohorts they may never see again. Many planned to attend a wake today at a local bar, where a cake shaped like a blast furnace will feature this epitaph in icing: "Goodbye Dorothy, We'll Miss You."

Duquesne will still employ 800 workers at a bar mill and at smaller electrical furnaces processing steel made at another U.S. Steel plant across the river. At its World War II production peak, the mill had 32 open hearths and employed 9,000 workers.

Midlander attends financial meeting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gene W. Johnson, manager of the BarclaysAmerican Financial office in Midland, attended the company's 1984 planning session and training seminar held in Denver recently. Over 80 managers from the western region of BarclaysAmerican Financial were present at the meeting to discuss management strategies and future plans of the company.

BarclaysAmerican Financial operates more than 300 branch offices in 30 states, and offers a complete range of consumer and dealer services, including retail sales finance, direct installment lending, home equity lending and vehicle leasing. It is a subsidiary of BarclaysAmerican Corp., a diversified financial services company, which is a subsidiary of Barclays Bank International, Ltd.

Support asked for Fair Trade in Steel Act

WASHINGTON — Citing record-high imports of steel in the first quarter of this year, David M. Roderick, chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute and chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., has asked President Reagan to support the Fair Trade in Steel Act, now before the Congress. The bill would limit imports to 15 percent of the U.S. market, compared with over 25 percent so far this year.

Toastmasters announce contest winners

Toastmasters International is proud to announce the Winners of its 1984 International Speech Contest and Tall Tales Competition.

The best speaker in the contest for the motivational or informative category is Chris Dikmen, a 28 year old private businessman with Dikmen and Associates (an Amway Distribution company). The subject of Dikmen's speech ws "Success."

The winner of the Tall Tales Competition was Paul Hiebert, a local CPA with his own private practice. Hiebert's speech was "In Search of a Texas Hero."

Magazine's advertising pages increased

NEW YORK — Country Living's advertising pages for 1984's first five months are up 33.3 percent — from 233.43 pages to 311.24 pages, reports Ron Galotti, the magazine's publisher.

Revenue from the same period increased 78.04 percent — from $3,301,457 to $5,877,947.

Muse Air offering special promotional fares

DALLAS — Muse Air celebrates the official opening of the Louisiana World's Fair with special promotional fares from Dallas, Houston and two Los Angeles area airports, effective through June 30, it has been announced by John Mumaugh, vice president-sales and advertising.

A $49 one-way fare is available on all seats on all 11 flights between Dallas and New Orleans, including four non-stop flights. A $39 one-way fare on all seats on all eight, daily non-stop Houston-New Orleans flights. All flights from Los Angeles International Airport and Ontario International Airport offer the reduced fare of $129 one way.

Dollar pushes lower; Gold up

LONDON (AP) — Jitters over the U.S. banking system pushed the dollar lower in Europe early today. Gold bullion edged above $380 an ounce.

Although the dollar had recovered at the opening from sharp falls in New York late Thursday, it was trading lower across the board from Thursday's levels in Europe.

Currency traders in Frankfurt, West Germany said uncertainty over U.S. banks eclipsed other factors which normally influence the market.

One trader said there was growing concern in European financial circles of a chain reaction if any major U.S. banks were to have real troubles since Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago required a federally directed rescue package last week.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with late Thursday included:

–2.7262 West German marks, down from 2.7610.

–2.26275 Swiss francs, down from 2.2771.

–8.39375 French francs, down from 8.4955.

Crockett wildcat extends Strawn production

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

A 9,572 ft. wildcat test in Crockett County has extended Strawn (detrital) production by 2 miles in the University 31 multi-pay field.

The well is the No.1 Henderson, drilled by Dallas operator J. Cleo Thompson. It tested for 2.5 Mmcfd CAOF through an unreported choke size. Originally slated as a 10,500 ft. test, the well was drilled to 9,572 ft., plugged back to 9,170 ft. and completed through perforations at 8,988 ft. to 9,134 ft. following a 10,000 gal. acid treatment.

The well is located 990 ft. from south and east lines of Section 22, Block ST, TCRR survey.

Three confirmation wells

Tucker Drilling Co., San Angelo, has drilled its No.3 Hardeman as a confirmation well in the Geneva (multipay) field, 11 miles west of Eldorado. The well finaled for 2.9 Mmcfd with a GOR of 83,270:l. It is located 660 ft. from south and 2,640 ft. from east lines of Section 27, Block A, GC&SF survey.

TXO Production Corp., Midland, has drilled its No.4R Badgett 'A' as a Canyon oil confirmer to the Ozona Northwest field, three miles north of Ozona.

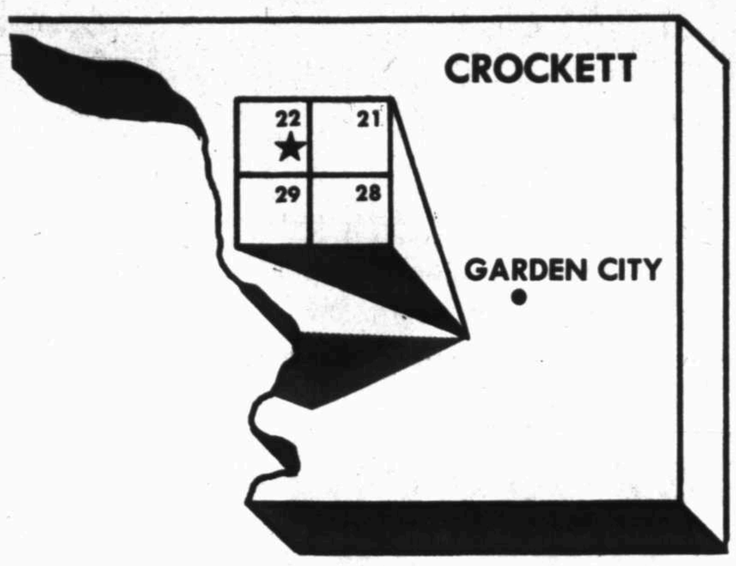
The well produced 25 bopd of 39 API and 18 bwpd. It is located 24 ft. from south and 1,562 ft. from east line of Section 19, Block OP, GC&SF survey. It was drilled as a replacement well for the No.4 Badgett 'A'.

TXO Production Corp., Fort Worth, has drilled its third producer in the Zappe (Gardner lime) field in Runnels County. It produced 44 bopd of 45.2 API and 20 bwpd. It is the No.1 Gottschalk located 1,000 ft. from north and 3,000 ft. from west lines of Section 168, Block ETRR, Abstract 792.

Three wildcats staked for Andrews, Mitchell

H.L. Brown, Jr., Midland, will drill a 7,700 ft. prospector in Andrews County. The well is the No.1 Carter Foundation located 1,697 ft. from south and 2,062 from east line of Section 16, Block A-31, PSL survey, 12 miles northwest of Frankel City. It will be a wildcat above 7,700.

Barron Kidd, Dallas, has proposed a 3,500 ft. test in the Coleman Ranch field 6 miles north of Westbrook. It will be wildcatting above 3,000. The well is the No.6 Simpson B located 990 ft. from north and west lines of Section 60, Block 97, H&TC survey.



The No.l Henderson tested for 2.5 Mmcfd to extend detrital production of University 31 field.

Lario Oil & Gas Co., Odessa, plans a 6,000 ft. prospector in Mitchell County. It is the No.2 Strain located 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 8, Block 26, H&TC survey.

Trico to acquire product lines from Kobe

GARDENIA, Calif. — Trico Industries, Inc. has announced that it has signed a letter of intent with Baker Oil Tools, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Baker International Corp., to acquire the hydraulic and jet pump product lines from Kobe, Inc. for approximately $30 million cash. The acquisition is subject to execution of a definitive agreement, approval of the directors of both companies and receipt of governmental and other approvals.

W.T. Box, Trico President, said that "...Kobe, established in 1934, is a leading producer of downhole hydraulic pumps and jet pumps for oil wells. Hydraulic pumps are preferred to Trico's sucker rod pumps for producing oil from deep wells, wells offshore and wells located in remote and hostile environmnts. Jet pumps are used for artificial lift in large volume wells. This acquisition is a significant part of Trico's program to become a major supplier of artificial lift equipment for the producers of oil."

Texas oil, gas production rises

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 461,217,535 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in February, up 6.66 percent from February 1983. In January 1984, gas production totaled 527,645,987 Mcf.

So far this year, Texas has produced 988,863,522 Mcf of gas.

Marketed gas production in February totaled 376,583,296 Mcf and reflected a 5.53 percent increase from the February 1983 volume. In January, the state produced 443,834,136 Mcf of gas in this category.

Marketed production is the gas left after liquid hydrocarbons have been separated on the lease from the "wet" gas that is usually produced at the wellhad. It also does not include gas that is reinjected into the producing reservoir to maintain gas pressure, gas that is used to fuel production-related equipment on the lease site, or gas that is otherwise not marketed.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in February totaled 177,945,911 Mcf, and reflected a 16.4 percent increase over February of 1983. January exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 210,056,590 Mcf.

Texas gas production in February came from 239,965 oil and gas wells.

Snyder Gas Plant to be modified

DALLAS — Sun Exploration and Production Co., as operator of the Snyder Gas Plant, has let a contract of Pro-Quip Corp. of Tulsa for design, engineering and construction of a new cryogenic processing system at the West Texas facility. Total cost of the contract and other modifications to the plant wil be $7 million.

The new energy-efficient system will process gas at -190 degrees farenheit and will increase product recovery. Construction is scheduled to begin in September with start-up in February 1985. The Snyder Plant will have a capacity of 50 million cubic feet per day, down from the 150 million cubic feet produced daily during the 1970s. Declining gas volumes from the SACROC Unit in Scurry County hae prompted the plant modification. The current production is about 60 million cubic feet a day, about the same volume as when the plant was built 30 years ago.

Mesa announces cash tender offer

AMARILLO — T. Boone Pickens, Jr., president and chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., has announced that Mesa has commenced through a wholly owned subsidiary its previously announced cash tender offer at $35 per unit for any and all of the 16,295,151 units of beneficial interest in the Mesa Royalty Trust. The offer is not conditioned upon any minimum number of units being tendered.

The offer will expire at 12:00 midnight, New York City time, on Friday, June 15, 1984, unless extended. Withdrawal rights will expire at 12:00 midnight, New york City time, on Friday, June 8, 1984.

The Carter Organization, Inc. is acting as information agent in connection with the offer.

IPAA chief warns Congress 'to quit playing games'

CASPER, Wyo. — The chairman of the Public Lands Committee of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) warned Congress "to quit playing games" with public lands legislation.

Committee chairman Robert O. Byron said, "At a time when oil shipments from the middle east are threatened, and during a time when we should be maximizing our domestic oil supplies, we are playing games with legislation that could prevent putting America on the road to energy self-sufficiency."

Byron specifically is referring to the Wyoming Wilderness Bill, a national blue print for other wilderness bills pending before Congress.

"We are dead against the proposed compromise to the Wyoming bill," he said. "Of specific concern to us is the fact that we are tying up more than 650,000 acres of land designated wrongfully as wilderness. Much of this land holds considerable promise for future oil and gas resources," Byron continued.

Not only is entirely too much land designated wilderness — thus preventing it from being used for multiple purposes — but the compromise language releasing some portions for possible multiple purpose use is not permanent. "Unless this language is made permanent we are jeopardizing our domestic energy security," Byron said.

The IPAA committee chairman emphasized he was not being anti-environmental, and that he supports the designation of much of Wyoming's land as wilderness. "But we have to be practical," he said. "We want to and must preserve the pristine lands of our state, but it would be absolutely foolhardy not to develop the lands which hold the most promise for new energy resources.

We can't afford to take the chance of not developing these vital resources. Our future depends on it."

OILTEX reaches agreement to buy all shares of New Zealand firm

OILTEX International Ltd. of Toronto (formerly Quartet Energy Resources Ltd.) announced that the company and its subsidiaries have reached an agreement in principle to purchase 100 percent of the shares of Cape Foulwind Petroleum Ltd., a New Zealand corporation. The purchase agreement is subject to the necessary approvals of New Zealand's Overseas Investment Commission and other regulatory agencies. The purchase gives OILTEX the rights to prospect on a major new exploration license in the Taranaki Basin off the northwest coast of New Zealand's South Island. Cape Foulwind Petroleum was awarded the exploration license last December. The new permit, PPL 38093, covers 5,281 square kilometers (approximately 1.24 million acres) immediately south of PPL 38058, a 1.8-million acre block. OILTEX has a 5.175 percent carried interest in the drilling and testing of the initial test well in PPL 38058, which is expected to begin drilling during the first two weeks of June of this year. OILTEX expects to sell some of the shares of Cape Foulwind Petroleum to held finance the first year's work program required by the New Zealand Ministry of Energy.

PPL 38093 covers the southern extension of the Cape Foulwind fault zone, the same fault trend that giver rise to numerous large structures within neighboring PPL 38058. The giant Maui Gas Condensate Field occurs immediately west of the northern extension of the same fault trend.

SOUTHLAND ROYALTY CO.

Southland Royalty Co. announced increased net income and earnings pr share in the first quarter of 1984. Net income for the quarter ended March 31 increased 11 prcent to $9,675,000 or $.22 per share compared with $8,741,000 or $.20 pr share in the first quarter of 1983. Total revenues in the first quarter of 1984 were $82,872,000, up slightly from $82,428,000 in the first quarter of 1983.

Oil revenues were $44,285,000, down from $47,843,000 in the first quarter of 1983. Oil production was 16,970 barrels per day compred to 17,530 barrels per day in 1983 as increased production from other areas could not entirely offset production from the properties which were sold in late 1983. Production these properties averaged 945 barrels oil per day in the first quarter of 1983. During the first quarter oil prices averaged $26.20 per barrel from $25.96 per barrel in the first quarter of last year.

Gas revenues for the first quater increased by 11 prcent to $37,713,000 from $33,833,000 in the first quarter of 1983 due to increased production and higher prices. Gas production averaged 147,000 Mcf per day, an 8 percent increase production resulted from improved demand for gas due to a colder winter

KRM PETROLEUM CORP.

KRM Petroleum Corp. incurred a net loss of $40,000 on oil and gas sales of $1,027,000 in the first quarter of 1984, compared with net earnings of $13,000 on oil and gas sales of $1,095,000 during the prior year period. The per share loss amount to $.02 per share durin the quarter compared with a profit of $.01 per share during 1983. The company's cash flow from operations declined to $307,000 in 1984 from $415,000 the previous year. The loss is primarily due to a decline in production precipitated by severe weather conditions in Kansas. In addition, the newly discovered Smitherman and Wait leases in Kansas were shut-in approximately six weeks of the first quarter of 1984 pending installation of a gas reinjection system.

and a rebounding U.S. economy. Gas prices averaged $2.81 per Mcf compred wih $2.75 pr Mcf in the first quarter of 1983.

ENERGAS COMPANY

For the three months ended March 31, 1984, Energas Co. earned $2.1 million, or $1.10 per share on revenues of $102.0 million.

A second quarter dividend of 40 cents per share, payable June 14, 1984, to shareholders of record May 31, was declared by Energas Company directors.

For the period from Oct. 19, 1983, when Energas began independent operations, through marcy 31, 1984, the company erned $4.0 million, or $2.14 per share. Revenues for that period amounted to $169.4 million.

Energas, which has its headquarters in Amarillo, distributes natural gas to over 2800,000 customers in 90 cities, towns, unincorporated communities and rural areas across a 46-county region of West Texas.

PAULEY PETROLEUM INC.

Pauley Petroleun Inc. recorded net income of $81,000 or three cents per share for the six months ended February 1984. This compares with a net loss of $3,129,000 or $1.06 per share in the first half of the last fiscal year. In the second quarter the company recorded a net loss of $788,000 or 27 cents per share compared with a net loss of $3,256,000 or $1.13 per share in the same period last year. There was a reduction in sales and operating revenue in the second quarter at the company's refining subsidiary compared to the second quarter last year. Additionally, the refinery's reserve for bad debts was increased by $500,000 which is reflected in general and administrative expenses recorded during the quarter.

Auto sales make best showing

By The Associated Press

From Detroit, there is more indication that the auto industry is on the rebound. U.S. automakers said their mid-May auto sales were up 21.8 percent from a year ago for the best showing for the period in six years.

Among the Big Three automakers, sales in the middle 10 days of May were up 27.6 percent over last year at General Motors Corp., 20 percent at Ford Motor Co. and 10.1 percent at Chrysler Corp.

American Motors Corp.'s sales were down 23.3 percent and Volkswagen of America Inc.'s sales declined 22.4 percent.

"What's happening here is that the lower-income car buyer is coming back to the new-car market now that the economic recovery has reached an advanced stage," said Scott Merlis, an automotive industry analyst at Shearson-American Express in New York.

"The sales of some of the compacts and subcompacts have been picking up strongly," Merlis said, an indication that average buyers have been joining their more affluent neighbors at the showroom.

Sales of bigger, more expensive cars have been strong since last year.

In all, 226,797 new cars were delivered to dealers in the period, up 21.8 percent from 209,513 in the comparable period a year ago.

The sales worked out to 28,350 cars a day, the best showing for mid-May since 36,609 cars were sold daily in the period during the boom year of 1978.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate was 8.1 million cars. At that pace, auto sales for 1984 would eclipse those of all years going back to 1979.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 254 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT(R) of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $1.6 billion to $169.5 billion for week ended May 23, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 9.51% from 9.58%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 9.45% from 9.42%. The taxable funds' average maturity lengthened one day to 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Assets of the taxable money funds increased nearly $5 billion during the first three weeks of May. The decrease in the 7-day average yield from 9.58% to 9.51% was due to lower yields in government securities. General purpose funds' 7-day average yield continued to rise." Air Force agency wants to drop TRW contracts

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A key Air Force agency has recommended that the service consider suspending certain contract payments to TRW Corp. as a result of dissatisfaction with the company's system for controlling costs and schedules on defense contracts, it was learned Tuesday.

The recommendation, which was made late last month by the Air Force Systems Command, a research and procurement agency, would apply to TRW's Electronics & Defense Sector in nearby Redondo Beach.

Validation for TRW's cost-control system was withdrawn on May 11 in an action that required the approval of the chiefs of the Air Force, Army and Navy — an unusually high level of authority for a decision applying to a single contractor.

That action was a blow to TRW's prestige and could affect the company's competitive position in future contract awards if the validation is not restored, a high-level Department of Defense official said. The suspension of contract payments would represent an even sharper penalty.

The recommendation applies to so-called progress payments, which are reimbursements a company receives for building hardware and performing services leading up to final delivery.

Air Force officials said they could not estimate the potential financial impact of a suspension of such progress payments.

The recommendation, however, applies only to the "problem area," which would affect only payments to TRW for administering the cost control and scheduling system, according to Col. Dennis Madl, director of cost analysis at the Air Force Systems Command.

"I intend to be relatively hard-nosed in getting the message to contractors that we are paying them to manage their contracts well, and we intend to get our money's worth," Madl said.

TRW denied that a formal recommendation for suspension was made. The Air Force only "recommended" that suspension of payments be "considered," which is less than a full-blown recommendation, said Julian Levine, TRW vice president for communications.

The company also said any payment suspension would have a minor impact. "It is not a material issue to the company in the broadest SEC (Securities and Exchange Commission) terms," Levine said. (As a publicly held company, TRW would have to report a substantial financial impact to the SEC.)

TRW's Electronics & Defense Sector had 1983 revenues of about $3 billion. The unit, which employs 16,000 in Redondo Beach, builds reconnaissance and communications satellites and conducts engineering for the nation's land-based nuclear missile systems.

The validation, which is known as the Cost Schedule Control System Criteria (CSCSC), was established in 1967 as one of the most important methods of monitoring the health of major defense programs.

The military has revoked CSCSC validation about six times since the criteria were created, Air Force officials said. A previous withdrawal also involved TRW, they said.

"It tends to cast a cloud on the contractor," Madl said. "We are not trying to do that, but we are saying there are deficiencies and we would like them fixed."

The latest withdrawal involved a review that began last October of TRW's cost- and schedule-control system on the Fleet Satellite Communications System, an 8-year-old program.

Madl said the key problem with TRW's system was in its ability to make "estimates of completion," which are detailed projections of the final cost and timing of major programs under way.

TRW said the Fleet Communications Satellite program is operating at cost and on schedule, suggesting that nothing is wrong with its ability to manage the program. But the CSCSC applies to all defense programs at the TRW unit, not just the one under review, Air Force officials say.

Grand jury probes TMI

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury is investigating actions by supervisors at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island nuclear power plant to determine if criminal laws were violated, sources say.

Joanne Doroshow, an attorney for Three Mile Island Alert, a group based in Harrisburg, Pa., said Wednesday the Harrisburg grand jury is investigating reports of "material false statements" to the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission by supervisors at the plant, where the nation's worst commercial nuclear power accident occurred in 1979.

Author: Exercise program starts in cradle

Copley News Service

For Suzy Prudden, turning 40 was being born again. Born free. An emotional rebirth permitting her to sever the umbilical cord of guilt and other people's expectations and demands.

"It's the greatest thing that ever happened to me," she tells you, exuding enlightenment. "I don't have to prove anything anymore. I am what I am.

"The great thing about it is that I can just be. In our 20s, we're trying to prove something. In our 30s, we're saying we did. And in our 40s, we find out we don't need to do it anyway."

In the midst of such emotional renewal — a breakthrough that led her to sell her exercise salon in Manhattan and decide to enroll in acting school — Prudden seems especially well equipped to relate to the newborn.

Which is what she has done with her latest of four books on fitness: "Suzy Prudden's Exercise Program For Young Children" (Workman Publishing, $6.95), a guide for stronger and happier children from 4 weeks to 4 years of age.

YES, SHE insists, fitness starts in the cradle — with massages that stimulate the infant's circulation. Then it progresses to simple exercises — all designed to cement the bond between child and parent and, ultimately, improve the species.

"We as beings can be much, much better," said Prudden in an interview. "I believe in starting a child out early in exercise because our bodies remember more than our brain. The bodies store knowledge. If you create in a child flexibility, strength and coordination, it can be a reward for life.

"You're establishing an early pattern of success that continues. If you look at the high schools today, you'll find the same kids who are on the athletic teams are the ones who are class presidents and leaders. And they're in the upper quarter of their classes academically. They're more able to function with anybody and do anything."

Prudden became convinced of this, she said, when she opened up Suzy Prudden Studios 20 years ago in New York. Her objective: to teach children sound exercise habits and help remedy a national fitness deficiency among the youth of America.

"I started with my son, Robby, when he was 2," she said. "Some friends brought in their kids and when I got 15 kids, I rented a studio. The New York Times did a story on it, and within three days, the school was born. Before I knew it, I had 600 clients.

"When these kids reached school age, their teachers would tell me, 'Your kids are stronger; they learn faster; they're not afraid of challenges.'"

PRUDDEN CAME by her passion for fitness genetically. Her mother, Bonnie — whose supple figure adorned the early pages of Sports Illustrated as a regular fitness feature before exercise became universally fashionable — was instrumental in the formation of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

"She devised a minimum-fitness test for 6-year-olds," said Prudden. "Fifty-eight percent of the American kids and 22 percent of the Europeans who took it failed. And the failure rate has gone up through the years. Now, 98 percent of American children can't pass one of more of the six specific tests (which measure flexibility, strength and agility)."

Prudden makes it clear that a parent can't force a child to exercise. "If he enjoys it, he'll do it. When he's bored, he'll walk away. We were working with a baby on a television show and he cried. He'd had enough.

"INFANTS, IN A way, are smarter than adults. They know so much; they just can't tell us. Adults will exercise till it hurts; they'll go for the burn. A child will go only so far as is comfortable. They'll feel a slight glow.

"You're talking to a baby's body, and it's like a sponge. And the baby also is taking it in mentally. When we sit, we build tensions. When we move, information and knowledge flow more freely.

"When you exercise you often use both sides of the brain — the left, or logical part, and the right, or creative part. Exercise is creative and as we get into a pattern it is logical, too. What a wonderful way to learn French and history — while you're moving!

"I didn't realize before what incredible implications this has in educating our children."

If Prudden sounds enthusiastic, it's because that born-again fervor is irrepressible. It's similiar to the fervor that led her, as a high school student, to join the wrestling team. The all-male wrestling team. ("It was one way to grapple with somebody you had a crush on.")

She is convinced that early exercise creates confidence in young children, that it plays an important role in alleviating fear and that it can stretch muscles that were contracted in the fetal position.

"Babies have to master their bodies during the first days of their lives," he writes in the forward of Prudden's book, "and the possibilities for enjoyment as we are learning are substantial.

"I have written elsewhere that from the time they begin to crawl about on their own, which usually is around 7 months, babies have three key interests. One is the satisfaction of curiosity. The second is the person around whom their day revolves. The third is mastering their own bodies."

Exercise program for infants, toddlers outlined

Copley News Service

From infants to toddlers to children of 3 and 4, Suzy Prudden has a formula for fitness. No force-feeding. Just small doses that can start the cradle rocking to the beat of a lifetime program.

Yes, says the author of "Suzy Prudden's Exercise Program For Young Children," you can start as early as 4 weeks. Not with the push-ups, sit-ups or chin-ups, mind you, but with a massage program.

Place your baby on a quilt on the floor. Take a small amount of oil in your hands. Rub your hands together to warm the oil to body temperature and, as you talk to your child, begin to massage — for about 20 minutes.

Gentle, firm stroking of the torso and limbs helps release tension and relaxes children if they are upset, says Prudden.

Prudden's program starts with the chest and tummy ("When you slowly and gently stroke your baby's chest and tummy your child's circulation will be stimulated and muscles will relax.") and progresses to the shoulders and arms, chest and back, arms and hands, hips and bottom, legs, feet, back and shoulders ("Babies sleep better when these muscles are relaxed.") and rib cage.

PRUDDEN ALSO suggests practicing a thumb grip with your infant for strengthening his hands.

"Place your baby on his back and have him clasp your thumbs in his hands," she says. "Place your fingers over his hands to secure his grip. As your baby's exercise program progresses, you will find that his grip on your thumbs becomes tighter and more sure as his hands become stronger. Your grip can relax somewhat. Eventually, he will hold your thumbs without your holding on to his hands at all."

In the 4-week to 3-month age period, Prudden introduces what she calls "the early sit-up, in which the mother holds the baby with a thumb grip and gently pulls him into a sitting position. She also introduces arm raises, knee bends (supine, of course) foot flexes, chest lifts, leg lifts and frog kicks during this state.

HER EXERCISES for toddlers (12 to 22 months) range from arm crossovers to balance beam walking to such maneuvers as the monkey walk, frog hop and rabbit hop. ("This exercise strengthens leg muscles and encourages coordination. Vocal cords will get a workout, too, if you quack while you waddle.")

"Some days, 40 minutes of exercise isn't long enough," says Prudden. "On other days, 15 minutes is too long. And there are days when your child just won't feel like doing a thing. Don't force him into experiences he doesn't want or isn't ready for. He needs time to digest all the things he's already learned."

For children from 3 to 4, Prudden incorporates such equipment as Frisbees, hoops, a ladder and a ramp into the regimen.

"You've built a healthy foundation, now is the time to elaborate," she says. "Be creative. Take each exercise and play with it. Let each movement flow into another."

And emulate animals. There's the cat back, for example, to enhance lower-back flexibility; the donkey kick for the upper thigh, buttock and back, and pigeon and duck walks for general leg strength and foot flexibility.

"Its up to us as parents," says Prudden, "to make the difference between a strong, vital child and a weak, unhappy one."

Play therapy helps ease stress for hospitalized children

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — This playroom is special. To the children, in their pajamas and hospital gowns, it is their "safe place," the only place in the Schneider Children's Hospital here where no treatment is ever given.

To the child life specialist who observes them, it is the place in which her trained eye and ear will pick up clues to their feelings. She is the new star in the hospital community; it is her role to take some of the stress out of the children's hospital stay.

In one corner, the children play happily with blocks; in another, they bang the pots angrily or iron their dolls' clothes; in still another, they don masks and "punish" their dolls with needleless hypodermic syringes.

And all the while, in this carefully planned setting, the child life professional monitors, guides, encourages their role-playing and imitation of life. While the children play, they are telling her how they feel about where they are.

At the Schneider Children's Hospital of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, Joan Chan works with hospitalized children and their families in a therapeutic play program.

In the playrooms, Ms. Chan and her staff of professionals, assisted by trained volunteers, help children who are separated by illness from what is familiar and "normal" to them to "play out" their feelings.

"Play is a child's language," Ms. Chan explains. "The hospitalized child often uses play to communicate feelings he might otherwise suppress. Once expressed, instead of buried, these feelings can be dealt with helpfully.

"In this way," she adds, "the hospital experience, sometimes so traumatic for children and adolescents and even parents, may be prevented from inflicting the deep emotional scars once considered inevitable."

The child life professional and her special playroom come logically hand in hand with a new concern for hospitalized children, Ms. Chan points out. Parent-visiting rules have been greatly relaxed and extended. Parents are even encouraged to stay overnight with young children.

Play therapy is found in many pediatric departments, Ms. Chan notes, but the child life playroom, like the specialist herself, brings new emphasis to what a child feels when he is moved from home to hospital and treated by strangers.

"Today's hospital administrators understand that if a child feels warmth and support in a hospital, and is carefully prepared through play, he will cooperate in his treatment," says Dr. Philip Lanskowsky, chief of staff of the Schneider Children's Hospital.

"This program, rooted in the understanding of children and their needs, is long overdue," he says.

Most poster children grow up in mainstream life

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Hair combed, clothes neatly pressed, they smile brightly from a thousand posters and newspaper ads. They look like typical youngsters until you notice that they are sitting in wheelchairs, or propped on crutches or braces or walkers.

They are the poster children, disabled boys and girls whose appealing faces each year keynote the fund drives of some of America's major charity organizations and help pull in millions of dollars.

Many of them get to meet presidents and members of Congress as they crisscross the country to launch campaigns in dozens of cities. "The poster child is our major ambassador to the public," says Deirdre Schroder, who directs publicity for the March of Dimes' national telethon. "He or she exposes a lot of people to a child with disabilities."

The March of Dimes, which switched to raising money to combat birth defects after the Salk vaccine conquered polio, first used the picture of an afflicted child to spearhead its fund-raising efforts in 1946. The idea was so successful, other major voluntary health agencies, such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Easter Seal Society, soon followed suit.

WAHT HAPPENS to these youngsters when they grow up? Do they slip into the mainstream of society? Or are they frustrated by a world designed for the able-bodied?

In a random telephone survey, a reporter found that most are leading normal lives. Only a few complained that as disabled adults they ran into problems in employment, housing and transportation. But those who did encounter difficulties said that if their experiences were not typical, it is because most poster children are only moderately disabled and therefore not representative of all handicapped people.

One who found a satisfying life was Nancy Drury Conley of Louisville, Ky., the 1947 March of Dimes poster girl. Mrs. Conley, 41, who contracted polio shortly after birth, is the mother of two daughters and the owner of a picture-framing store. She has recovered so well that she walks with a limp only when she is tired.

As a poster child, Mrs. Conley has fond memories of meeting Eleanor Roosevelt, Francis Cardinal Spellman, Jimmy Stewart and Tom Mix. She thinks she raised the public's consciousness about the problems of polio, then a widespread, devastating disease. "It (the poster child) makes people aware of what needs to be done," she said. "It's one of the best ideas as far as fund raising."

MARTIN ALAN Mim Mack, who was born without arms and with a hip defect and was the 1970-71 March of Dimes poster child, is a senior at the University of Santa Clara in California. He uses a prothesis to do the work of his arms and fingers and gets around campus on a tricycle.

Mim Mack, 23, met President Nixon, Neil Armstrong and Pearl Bailey and made a movie short with Arnold Palmer. He feels the most valuable part of his years as a poster child were the experiences he had on the road. "As a representative of the March of Dimes, people look at you as a meaningful individual," said Mim Mack. "That makes you feel good about yourself. When you go back to your community, it helps you have a positive self-image. You can say, 'Yes, I can do this.' You can put your cards on the table and not be afraid."

Pamela Henry, who contracted polio when she was 14 months old and was chosen as the 1959 March of Dimes poster girl, is an assignment editor for a television newsroom in Oklahoma City. She walks with the aid of Canadian crutches (the kind that fit around the lower part of the arms). But she says she has not encountered negative attitudes in the workaday world.

"People who don't know me are nervous at first," said Henry, who drives a car and has worked on the streets as a TV news reporter. "But they get used to me soon and forget I have crutches."

THE FUND-RAISING organizations, by and large, choose poster boys and girls the same way. Each gets nominations from state and local affiliates. Most children are between the ages of 5 and 8, although some have been as old as 12. An Easter Seal spokesman says its selection is based, in part, on services the children received from the society during their rehabilitation and progress they have made.

Officials of the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the March of Dimes say they look for a youngster who is articulate and can represent the association in the best possible light. "We want someone who is outgoing," said Craig Wood, the public relations director for the muscular dystrophy group. "They are going to be junior goodwill ambassadors. Intelligence is a factor. Looks are only superficial."

Some disagree. Holly Schmidt Maurice of Clawson, Mich., the 1968-69 muscular dystrophy child, says that, with notable exceptions, poster children are not chosen from the ranks of the more profoundly handicapped. An exception was John Kemp, the 1960 Easter Seal child, who was born without limbs. Using artificial arms and legs, he works today as an executive at the society's national headquarters in Chicago.

"But," said Maurice, "most of the children they (the associations) are showing don't look like there is anything wrong with them if they weren't in a wheelchair. That is not the case of a lot of people with muscular dystrophy or cerebral palsy or a multiple disability. What the public does not see is that a lot of these children, when they get older, may get twisted."

AS A RESULT, she says, poster children don't expose the public to the afflictions of vast numbers of severely handicapped people. For example, there are many who, because they cannot overcome their rebellious bodies, have poor coordination or muscle control. That may prevent people from becoming familiar with — and eventually feeling at ease in the presence of — disabled people who seem to walk oddly or have trouble holding a fork or making themselves understood.

Schroder of the March of Dimes and Wood of the Muscular Dystrophy Association say their organizations have not picked children with profound handicaps for medical reasons. They cite the extensive travel requirements. Asked if the association feels that such children might produce a negative public reaction, Schroder said, "That is also a consideration."

"If you are trying to get public acceptance," Schroder said, "initially you have to first open them up to something they can handle. Then, we are able to get corporate sponsors and vice presidents visiting nurseries where they see severely handicapped children."

ONE POINT that most will agree on is that employment of the handicapped is still an issue. Jeffrey Reil, the 1959 March of Dimes poster child, who was born with spina bifada (open spine), does not have a job at age 35. Reil, who is wheelchair-bound, lives with his parents on Staten Island. Twice a week a pickup van takes him to a center for the disabled for physical therapy and group therapy.

"We talk about our problems and the way society treats us," Reil said. He declined to give details, but he said that as a child, he had home instruction for the most part and regrets not being able to mingle with other children. "It is a non-disabled world and I felt I should be able to mix more freely with the non-disabled."

Reil went to Long Island University for two years, then dropped out. Today, after five operations, he still talks about becoming independent. "I want a place of my own and a good job. But, for a disabled person, getting to a job is hard."

Some former poster children, like Maurice, the 1968-69 muscular dystrophy poster girl, have mixed recollections of their days in the limelight. "When I traveled for the association," she said, "I had to keep my hem on my dresses short and my hair short because they wanted a sweet face and they wanted my braces visible, too."

MAURICE, WHO was 11 when she became a poster child, remembers how her selection changed the attitude of her school friends. Before she was named, she said other children accepted her. "But as soon as I was chosen, I was treated a lot differently. My disability was pointed out and kids became more aware. They noticed I was different. My mother said it was all in my head. But it was just a wonderful relief to go to college where no one knew me. ... If I had a child, I would not let them be the national poster child."

LAT Photos

Maurice, 28, got married last year and does volunteer work in a local hospital. Because she gets around in a wheelchair, she says, finding a job has also been difficult. The telethon does not help, she says, especially when Jerry Lewis tells the audience that some children they are viewing may not get older.

"I went for a job in a bank after graduating from high school," she said. "The woman asked, 'What is your life expectancy? We don't want to hire you if you are not going to be here in a year.' ... People look at the telethon and say, 'Oh, those poor little kids.' But they don't realize that those poor little kids grow up to be adults."

THE JOB MARKET was not an easy one to crack for Patricia Robins of Levittown, N.Y. Robins, the 1961 poster girl for United Cerebral Palsy of Nassau, says after graduating from high school, it took her five years to get hired. Now 27, she works in the business office of Nassau County Medical Center.

"The first thing they saw at a job interview was the wheelchair, not the person," she said. "And that was true wherever I went. When I was out with my twin sister, as soon as someone saw the chair, instead of addressing a question to me, they would address it to my sister." Nevertheless, even though she recently underwent her seventh operation, Robins is now able to live independently. She has her own apartment on the grounds of the medical center.

So Robins, like most of the poster children, has been able to surmont her handicaps. A few more capsule biographies illustrate the point:

— Mary Kosloski Garrett of Troy, N.Y., the 1955 March of Dimes national poster girl, contracted polio shortly after birth. She went on to earn a doctorate from the University of Alabama. Today, Garrett is an assisant professor of special education at Russell Sage College in Troy. She is also married and the mother of two.

— Larry Jim Gross of Marietta, Ga., got polio as an infant and was the 1952 March of Dimes poster child. He received a master's degree in business administration from Georgia State University. Today, married and the father of two children, he is a manager at Polaroid's Regional Marketing Center in Marietta.

— John Carter of Massapequa, N.Y., a paraplegic from a congenital spinal defect, was a poster boy for the Nassau March of Dimes from 1955 to 1957. He graduated from Hofstra in 1972, and got a master's degree in business administration from St. John's University. He is now a commercial loan officer with Anchor Savings Bank in Huntington, N.Y.

EVEN THOUGH he is now an executive, Carter, too, had entry-level trouble when employers saw his wheelchair. "The basic problem is to overcome the attitudinal barriers of the able-bodied population," he said. "Because a person might be disabled, it does not mean they are incapable of making decisions and functioning in the day-to-day world.

Some groups oppose use of poster children

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Despite the millions of dollars that voluntary health agencies raise for medical research and services, some organizations of disabled people are firmly opposed to the use of poster children to keynote their charity fund drives.

Last year, the March of Dimes raised $80 million, the Muscular Dystrophy Association $74 million and the National Easter Seal Society $68 million.

Even so, Phyllis Rubenfeld, president of the American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities, thinks the way these organizations appeal for funds hurts the disabled in their effort to overcome longstanding stereotypes that carry over into adult life.

"The poster child and the telethon campaign give the same message," said Rubenfeld. "It is: 'Pity this child. Feel sorry for this child. Give money so it will never happen again.'

"They are appealing to your guilt. You say, 'Thank God I don't have a child like that.' But then how can you see me, an adult with a disability, in a positive light? Why would you want to hire me? Why would you want me as a friend?"

Deirdre Schroder of the March of Dimes says there are practical marketing reasons for using poster children. "You want the money to help these children. And there is an emotional appeal with a child with crutches and braces. That's going to bring the money in. There is no other way of going about it. That's the bottom line."

Some are not convinced. "You don't evoke pity to get people to give to black organizations or women's programs," said Cass Irvin, a paraplegic who is publisher of Disability Rag, a national monthly newspaper on issues involving the handicapped. "Even spouse-abuse centers don't evoke pity. They try to make you understand it is a problem."

Irvin says her point is that poster children reflect on the whole disabled population. "Every day, I have to fight that poster-child image. I go into a meeting and people are shocked that I can speak. Their image of disabled people is that of children. ... We are not only fighting for our rights, and to have treatment and cures, but for our own proper image in society."

"The day after the telethon," said Rubenfeld, "if I went for a job I wouldn't get one. I guarantee I would be seen as a child who is dependent, who is incapable of being productive. The poster child and the telethon are not helping us. They are liabilities."

The approach her organization has taken is to try to bring about legislation that will assure the equal rights of the disabled.

"If we are going to cope with the special problems of the disabled," said Harold Hahn of the University of Southern California, who had polio as a child, "we need to change laws and policies. People with disabilities are tired of being objects of sympathy, tired of being inspirational models. We simply want to be accepted as equals, as people who would be participating members of society if the environment would let us."

DEAR ABBY

Boyfriend, his buddies package deal in bed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For the last six months I have been going with a most loving and wonderful man. I am 20.

He keeps telling me he loves me, but the last few weeks he has been asking me to go to various places with some of his friends — such as to bed. He assures me that he loves me, but when I refuse to go to bed with his friends he says he doesn't understand me.

I told him that the only man I want to go to bed with is him, and I can't understand why he wants to share me with his friends. He said a former girlfriend told him that that was the way to tell if a girl really loved him.

Please help me, Abby. I love him more than anything in the world and I don't want to lose him. — IN LOVE IN SEATTLE

DEAR IN LOVE: Any man who asks you to go to bed with his friends does not love you, regardless of what he says. He's using you. Don't buy his story that a "former girlfriend" told him that that was a way a girl proved her love.

I hate to be the bearer of bad news, but the man is very bad news, and the sooner you dump him, the better.

DEAR ABBY: My stepdaughter (I'll call her Betty) was recently married in a lovely church wedding. Her mother was escorted to the wedding by a relative.

Betty and I have never been what you would call "close," but there has never been a harsh word between us. I have been married to her father for over a year, and Betty seemed genuinely happy that her daddy found happiness with me because she knew that her parents had lived in a hopelessly bad marriage for years.

After the ceremony, Betty asked the photographer to take some pictures, summoning her mother, father and younger brother to pose with her and her bridegroom. She also rounded up her new in-laws to pose with her and her new husband.

I stood on the sidelines, but was not asked to be in even one picture! Betty must have noticed how hurt I was because she smiled at me and said, "These are family pictures."

Abby, am I not "family?" I am her father's wife. Am I wrong to feel hurt? — HURT

DEAR HURT: Feelings are neither "wrong" nor "right" — they are the honest emotional responses to what happens to us.

In Betty's mind, only blood relatives were "family." It was no reflection on you. She was very insensitive for failing to include you in at least one picture, but she was probably more thoughtless than intentionally cruel.

DEAR ABBY: I just came home from a visit to my new doctor. (My old doctor retired and now I have a young one.) He is the age of my youngest child, yet he called me "Kathy."

When will doctors realize that not all older women appreciate this presumptuous "friendliness"? If I were to correct him, it would put a strain on our relationship, so I keep quiet. The office nurse also calls me "Kathy," which irritates me.

Please print this, Abby. It may get the message across. — CALL ME MRS.

DEAR MRS.: I suggest that you tell the doctor and his nurse that you prefer to be called "Mrs." Why worry about straining a relationship that's already been strained? It might improve it.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Homemakers need business cards to succeed

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's a reason why homemaking has never been taken seriously as a profession.

It has nothing to do with pride, performance, goals or respect. We never made it big because we don't have business cards. We may be the last of the professionals who don't.

I've answered doors where Willy Loman was standing there in the hot sun in a 30-year-old three-piece suit selling vegetable slicers, talcum powder, firewood and storm doors from a pick-up truck and the moment he reached in his pocket and said, "Here's my card," he turned into Lee Iacocca.

Somehow the business card gave him a snoutful of respectability.

I've been given a lot of business cards in my time. They are pressed into my hand at parties, tucked inside programs, and left in my message box at hotels. They all have something in common. They are always edited. The formal name is crossed out and "Bubba" or "Giggles" is written in. The business address is always wrong and has the change inked in over it and the phone number is different. Also, there are instructions as to the time of day it is best to call and another number is listed on the back. Sometimes, there is a high school graduation picture that bears no resemblance to the owner of the card.

The problem, the way I understand it, is that business cards are like oversexed coat hangers and rubber bands stored on doorknobs. Left in a drawer or a suit pocket, business cards multiply faster than the name cards left over from graduation announcements. Everyone is too cheap to throw them away.

A housewife in Wichita, Kans., got sick of everybody else flipping out those little suckers with an authoritative air and instructions to "call if you need something," so she had her own cards printed up. At the top of it was her slogan, "Every Mother Is a Working Mother," and underneath she listed herself as Lynn Groner, Homemaker, Licensed. In the lower lefthand corner were her address and phone number and in the right hand her promise, "Years of experience turning out quality products."

She said the reason a lot of housewives don't have business cards is a small card 3½ by 2 inches isn't room enough to list all of our services.

Lynn may be right. On the other hand, I like to think we're a group too exclusive to go public and too smart to advertise for more work.

If you want something pressed, flushed, cooked, waxed, warmed over, bleached, delivered, hemmed, or picked up, you know where to find me. Sweetie. I'm in the book!

AT WORK

Career goals should be honest but ambitious

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Being 40 ~~and~~ never having really succeeded can make any one of us feel crazy, even desperate.

Myra, at 40, had beaten obesity through Overeaters Anonymous. Encouraged to get a job, she then trained to sell a national cleaning product. While she loved the involvement of the program, she felt terrible not being able to sell even one of the products. She started her family's genealogy, but never finished; she wondered if there were a business in it.

She joined a speakers' group and worked up enough courage to stand in front of others to give a five-minute speech without shaking. No small achievement, yet can she be hired to give speeches?

What could she do to earn a living? Her husband was now on medical disability and the need for income gnawed at her. What to say in a resume and how to present herself on an interview were questions that yielded answers she hated. They spelled failure. So she took to lying.

At first it was just a small exaggeration, alluding to sales and presentation experience. Then it grew to a resume that didn't represent her at all. In her desperation to be "somebody," she dressed herself in the language of "utilization" and "potential" and "management challenge."

In a final agony, she decided to go back to school to add an MBA to her resume, but she couldn't understand and pass the course material. What next?

Here we are in a society whose great expectations have been advertised on billboards and, alas, exceed some of our very abilities. Not everyone can have an MBA. Not everyone can run a successful business. Not everyone can be the director or the manager or the president. Does that mean we have to stop hoping to be more?

A century ago, the poet Robert Browning wrote, "Man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" Some of us have taken that to be ambition's gospel — hope for more and it's yours. Ask and you'll receive. But it turns out that heaven may have many levels, determined by the difference between "grasp" and "reach." And each level may be attainable only by what our real achievement is, but not by what our wishes are.

So we have to start someplace, dig in and make something work. Taking pride in the step-by-step, we can give up the falacious thinking that it's the height of the ladder and not the rungs that count. To pretend we are someone else with someone else's talents and skills may be just like leaning our ladder against someone else's wall. It's our own wall, our own ladder, and our own climb after all.

All of us Myras then must rethink where to aim. How does her desire, her ability to perform before a group, her understanding of and beating addiction, her love of involvement versus her inability to close a sales deal or pass a graduate exam, her age and inexperience add up?

She should try starting as an assistant in a place where people come for some kind of help or products — any kind, from health care to burial care where sympathy and work are wedded to fine service.

Study of 66 sexually exploited children completed

Hearst Feature Service

The first study of children sexually exploited by sex rings or pornographers has provided a revealing — and disturbing — view of how the experiences affected them as they grew up.

Based on a sample of 66 young people who had been involved in a total of 11 sex rings between 1978 and 1981, the researchers' findings, as reported in the May issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry, aren't encouraging.

Researcher Carol R. Hartman, an associate professor at Boston College and coordinator of its graduate psychiatric mental health nursing program, said that these sex rings — most commonly consisting of one adult who is sexually involved with small groups of children, or several adults who are organized to recruit children, deliver their sexual services and distribute pornography — were "little microcosms of sadistic and exploitive behavior."

The Boston College researchers hope the study will focus attention on prevention efforts and alert therapists to the importance of considering sex ring or pornographic involvement as a cause for various adolescent behavior disorders.

The study, titled "Response Patterns in Children and Adolescents Exploited Through Sex Rings and Pornography," looked at 49 boys and 17 girls ranging in age from 6 to 16.

Most of the exploiters were "respected" individuals in the community, such as a teacher, coach, school bus driver, scout leader or grandfather, Hartman said.

The children were involved in the sex rings anywhere from a few months to four years. The study found that children involved in the rings less than a year had about a 50 percent chance of overcoming the experience, while children involved in the rings more than a year had only a 1-in-3 chance.

The children are introduced into the world of a sex ring and then maintained there, the study says, through "distortion of a belief system that convinces the child the activities are 'normal' and strongly discourages any challenges to the behavior."

The study found that children who had been involved in the rings for more than a year and had been subjected to being involved in pornographic activity as well as sexual abuse, responded to the stress of the experience in various ways that could be categorized into four response patterns:

— Integration of the event: In which the child has mastered the anxiety of the exploitation and believes the adult was not only wrong, but also responsible for initiating the behavior.

— Avoidance of the event: In which the child denies the exploitation took place, refuses to discuss it and still fears the abuser.

— Repetition of symptoms: In which the child manifests much more anxiety over being powerless and is unable to control anxiety.

These children, the study shows, often blamed themselves for the event, more often dropped out of school, continued "sexually explicit" behavior or became repeat victims.

New toys being introduced

Hearst Feature Service

Get ready, Mom and Dad. Gizmo, Maxx Steele, He-Man and freckle-faced Miss Rainbow Brite are coming after your children.

The hottest toys for 1984 — space age macho men and robots and squeez-able dolls that perch on their own potties — will be marching across your television and theater screens this summer and fall as animated stars of their own shows and full-length movies.

This year, as never before, children's toy choices will be manipulated by toy manufacturers via magazines, television and film.

"The toy industry is getting smarter and smarter now," explains Dave Perry, a manufacturer's representative. The trend, Perry says, is to tie toy lines whenever possible to television shows and movies.

Take Gizmo, a toy Perry sells for Aviva Hasbro. Gizmo is destined for stardom this summer in "The Gremlins," a new Steven Spielberg movie.

Spielberg and associates are "very, very touchy" about pirated copies coming out before the movie hits this summer, says Perry, "because it's money in their pocket." Consequently, stuffed Gizmo, gumball-machine Gizmo and plastic Gizmo are still under wraps. Perry adds that only six samples of stuffed Gizmos exist, and they are only for certain buyers' eyes.

You might as well plan on having a robot around the house. Maxx Steele, a $400, 34-pound, 30-inch, walking, talking personal robot, is at the top of the line. Toy-maker Ideal promises programmable Maxx will play games, serve drinks and speak 145 words. Maxx commands his own Robo Force of smaller robots, each with movable crusher arms and gripper base. You can see them in their own television special this fall, subscribe to their quarterly magazine and bury your psyche in Ideal's $8.4-million advertising budget for 1984.

Can He-Man, the current king of good guys, be eclipsed? Not without a fight, says manufacturer Mattel. This year, He-Man's chief foe, Skeletor, will battle from new $40 Snake Mountain. Snake Mountain rumbles with the sound of canned thunder and an evil voice, child-produced through microphone and echo chamber.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 26, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Astronaut Sally Ride, actress Genie Francis, free agent slugger Darrell Evans, actor James Arness, singer Peggy Lee, tennis' Cliff Drysdale and sportscaster Brent Musburger celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Al Jolson, John Wayne and actress Norma Talmadge. Good luck is yours in the months ahead. A financial promise is fulfilled. A child tells you things others have neglected to mention. Pay attention. Compromises cost less than you think. Meet partner halfway and romance will soar to new heights. Several new ventures claim your attention. Complete projects already underway before taking on a special challenge or cause.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Part-time work turns out to be even more lucrative than you hoped. Set more time aside for both romance and a child's special needs. A family problem is finally solved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Zero in on goals that will benefit the entire family. A parent-child relationship improves. Lay all your cards on the table and encourage loved ones to do the same.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could discover that mate's values are very different from your own. A clean break may be best. Give yourself a chance to broaden your social horizons. Call an old friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get exciting news. Do not jump to conclusions about a romantic development. Learn to accept responsibility for your decisions. Act confident when handling financial matters for your family.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb your tongue lest an emotional outburst spoil the whole weekend. Share a special moment with a child. An old flame suddenly reappears. Go out of your way to meet new people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your desire for perfection may be hindering romance. Step back and look at things in a more realistic light. A weekend class could be just what you need to sharpen your skills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be willing to make new arrangements, even on short notice. Your spontaneity impresses an attractive member of the opposite sex. A delightful surprise is part of the picture. Go over your bills.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An excellent day for dealing with property matters. Bargains increase your domestic comfort. A loving friend comes up with a great idea. A mystery will soon be solved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy working at home. Mate pitches in. Although the two of you have slightly different values, you can usually reach an agreement. A child learns an important lesson.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A Leo brightens your day! An unexpected check leads to a small celebration. Your friends and relatives bring you good luck. Group activities hold special appeal. Dress casually but with style.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A get-together with friends from your neighborhood gives you new insights. Do-it-yourself projects enjoy favorable influence. Tackle those home repairs you have been postponing. A newcomer offers assistance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved ones begin to see things your way. Do not gloat. Investigate any financial tips that come your way. A windfall is possible!

TV movie wants it both ways

NEW YORK (AP) — "No Man's Land," NBC's Sunday night movie about a female sheriff in the bad, old West, tries to have it both ways. It takes a feminist position, although a superficial one, by putting Stella Stevens in the role of authority, then panders by dipping her neckline lower than her badge.

In most westerns, the women are stuck on the homestead or end up in need of rescue. At least Nellie Wilder (Miss Stevens) isn't a helpless damsel in distress.

But it becomes abundantly clear that the role-reversal story is a mere gimmick. The film really is as feminist in substance as "Charlie's Angels" and as clever in its humor as Saturday morning cartoons.

Since there are so few westerns around anymore, the thought was that this film might conjure some nostalgia and light-hearted whimsy. But "No Man's Land" is not even an interesting failure.

The theme song says, "It takes a woman's touch in no man's land," and Nellie does prefer gentle persuasion over gunslinging to bring to justice the bank-robbing killer Clay Allison (Mark Alaimo). But one of her biggest concerns is that her corset is too tight.

For the filmmakers, that seems to be an important special effect because it accentuates Miss Stevens' chest for two hours. Now Miss Stevens, a Barbara Eden lookalike, certainly is in good shape, but, for most viewers, a movie needs something more.

Nellie has inherited her sheriff's badge from her late husband. She's not having any success keeping the peace, not for lack of trying, but because she's totally outmanned. Her male deputy (Frank Bonner) is a cowardly chowderhead who isn't too proud to hide behind her skirts when danger arrives.

Town leader Will Blackfield (Robert Webber) is concerned about Nellie's welfare but doesn't do anything to help her. He wants her to quit her career and marry him.

"I am sheriff," she says determinedly. You can almost hear Helen Reddy singing "I Am Woman" in the background.

The pursuit of Allison is the main action line, punctuated by a lot of off-target gunplay. It's all cap-gun violence: many rounds are spent, but only one bad hombre gets grazed.

There's also a laughable plot twist that has John Rhys-Davies playing footsie with the outlaw in order to raise money to build a submarine in support of Irish revolutionaries in Britain.

Westerns used to be America's favorite action-adventure series, but the horse just can't keep pace with today's speedier, noisier and flashier cop car. So, for a western to succeed, it requires clever writing.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

At a suit contract, count your losers. That usually tells you whether or not you can afford to draw trumps. Consider this hand.

The auction was straightforward. Since North's two no trump response did not deny a four-card heart suit, South introduced his second suit. North took preference, confirming three-card support, and South chose the spade game because of his unbalanced hand.

West led a top-of-nothing club, and when the queen was covered by the king, declarer was in danger of losing a trump, a club and three hearts. Declarer had the spots for a double finesse in hearts to avoid one loser, and another would be prevented if the suit broke 3-3. However, the odds favored a 4-2 division, so declarer might have to ruff a heart in dummy.

Declarer won the first trick with the ace, then led a low heart to the ten, which lost to the jack. East cashed the jack of clubs and continued the suit for declarer to ruff.

Now declarer cashed the king and ace of trumps, then led the queen of hearts. West ducked, the queen won and declarer continued with a heart to the ace. East showed out but it made no difference whether he could ruff the trick or not. The rest was easy. Declarer crossed back to hand with the king of diamonds and ruffed his fourth heart with dummy's last trump. West still had the master trump, but that is only the third trick for the defense — one trump, one heart and one club.

Note declarer's play in the heart suit. The two finesses will hold the losers in the suit to one whenever West holds one of the two missing honors — a 3-to-1 chance — compared to the even money bet of leading a heart to the queen.

Dudley Moore testifies in drunken driving trial

Moore

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Dudley Moore, who starred as the tipsy title character in "Arthur," took the witness stand for the prosecution in the manslaughter trial of a man accused of drunken driving.

Moore described Thursday how his own car was rear-ended July 19 on the Santa Monica Freeway in a wreck that claimed the life of 21-year-old David Reuther, who was a passenger in the other car.

Reuther's friend, Steven Elliot Sanders, 21, is charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, causing injuries to another person, driving with more than 0.10 percent blood alcohol and vehicular manslaughter, all felonies, said Deputy District Attorney Debra Starr.

"The man lost his best friend," Moore said after testifying. "It's really sad that he has to go through this on top of that."

Although Moore suffered a slight neck strain in the accident, he said he will not sue Sanders.

The defense contends that Reuther, not Sanders, was at the wheel at the time of the accident.

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Stanley Hooker, a leading aircraft engine designer, died Thursday. He was 76.

Hooker worked for Britain's Rolls-Royce Motors Ltd for 38 years. He was part of the team that produced the Merlin engine for the Spitfire fighter plane used in World War II. He also oversaw the development and design of the Pegasus engine for the Harrier fighter used in the Falkland Islands war against Argentina.

Cronkite

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Walter Cronkite, perhaps television journalism's best known college dropout, says he "found formal education particularly ungratifying" and that "watching my children has convinced me that not much has changed over the years."

Cronkite's comments Thursday came as he received an honorary degree during a two-day celebration of the 200th anniversary of the University of the State of New York, an umbrella organization which oversees the state's private and public colleges, elementary and secondary schools.

A college dropout "with a long string of failed courses behind me," Cronkite said part of the problem with the American education system was a lack of inspiring teachers. He said that was due, in large part, to low salaries.

Among the other recipients of honorary degrees were historian Henry Steele Commager and former U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits.

Third-graders cheer Marines first cheered by their cards

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

SARDINIA, Ohio — "One, two, three. Woof, yes sir," the third-graders cheered military style, welcoming five U.S. sevicemen who drove overnight from North Carolina to thank the students for the "really nice" Christmas cards they sent during the Lebanon crisis.

The servicemen, who said the cards lifted their spirits during the long days in Beirut, made the long trip by truck to visit the class at Sardinia Elementary School.

The students cheered and saluted as the four Marines and one Navy corpsman, weary from their drive from Camp Lejeune, N.C., arrived Thursday.

The 18 third-graders, accompanied by teacher Sondra Stratton, lined up next to a small tree adorned with yellow ribbons on the school's front lawn.

Miss Stratton, who helped arrange the soldiers' visit and is boarding them at her home during their weekend visit, beamed as her students gave a Marine cheer: "One, two, three. Woof, yes sir!"

The servicemen planned a weekend of activities with the students, including a visit today to the Cincinnati Zoo and a reception tonight for the servicemen, the youngsters and their parents at the school in this rural, southwest Ohio town.

The men planned to stay in town for Monday's Memorial Day parade.

"It's not a very big parade. It doesn't amount to much," Miss Stratton said. "But this year, it'll be bigger."

The visitors were Navy Corpsman Ivey Deal of Atlanta; Marine Lance Cpl. Gregory Covington, of Alton, Ill.; and Marine Cpls. David Johnson of Ulster, Pa.; Rick Richter of Orlando, Fla.; and Dave Eldridge of Shelton, Conn.

Deal said the soldiers wrote back to the class after receiving the package of Christmas cards. The correspondence has continued, with the students sending little gifts and the Marines responding by mailing photographs of themselves and bumper stickers which read, "Have you hugged a Beirut vet today?"

"We went crazy, getting the packages," Deal told reporters. "All the cards were really nice. It was a bad day, and the cards got there at the right time."

The relationship between the servicemen and the youngsters began last fall after Miss Stratton told her class why the Marines had been sent to Lebanon and Grenada. When she told them the Marines might not be home to see their families for Christmas, the students sent cards.

Miss Stratton said that when the Marines' response letters arrived in mid-December, her class was excited and she was touched.

"They were very excited," she said. "It took me a long while to read the letters to them, several hours, because when I got them I just went down the hall and cried."

Botanist fears loss of species

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — The rapid clearing of the world's tropical forests could cause the extinction of 750,000 species — about one-sixth of all the forms of plants and creatures on Earth — during the next generation, a botanist predicts.

Since many of these living things have never been cataloged or even named, said Peter H. Raven, "we're losing them without even knowing they exist."

Raven, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis, offered his projections Thursday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The projections are based, in part, on a United Nations study three years ago that found that 1.1 percent of the world's tropical forests are being cleared each year.

Most of these rain forests are cut or burned to make room for farming. After a few years of agriculture, the soil is worn out, so the land is abandoned and more forest is cut. Other tropical woodlands are razed for their timber or to open land for cattle ranching.

Scientists estimate that there are 4 million to 5 million separate species of plants, animals and insects throughout the world, Raven said. About 3 million of these live in the tropical forests, where they are highly vulnerable to changes in their surroundings.

"Many tropical organisms are very narrow in their geographical ranges, highly specific in their ecological requirements, seek out unusual foods, conceal themselves in unique situations or mate only at highly specific times in particular places," he said.

More than half the tropical inhabitants live only in lowland forests, said Raven, and in most areas these forests will be substantially changed or completely gone within about the next 20 years.

Only the forests of the Congo basin and the western Brazilian Amazon are likely to escape widespread clearing over the next generation. These places are home to about half of all the tropical species.

Raven projects that about half of the remaining species that live elsewhere in the tropical forests will be wiped out forever.

"All of the species in the tropics are in danger of extinction," he said. "About a quarter are in danger of extinction in the next 20 to 30 years. That's half of those not in the Congo or Amazon forest, which are not being developed as fast.

"It's reasonable to assume that half of those not protected will become extinct," he added. "They simply can't last under those conditions."

Even though land cleared for farming grows over again after it's abandoned, Raven said, it is continually recut for firewood and probably never returns to its former depth and diversity.

Madison bikers are 'big wheels'

By MIKE NADEL
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. — To be a big wheel in this town you have to have two of them, and the right frame to go along with them.

"We have about 150,000 bicycles in Madison," says Sabine Lobitz, the pedestrian-bicycle safety coordinator in the city of 170,000.

"The city has a strong commitment to bicycling," she said of the state capital and home to the University of Wisconsin.

"Of course, some people own more than one," Ms. Lobitz said. But still bicycles outnumber cars 3-2 and have become a favorite mode of transportation, particularly in the overcrowded downtown and UW campus areas.

"I like to point to Madison when people ask, 'Where's a good city for bicycling in the United States?' " says Bill Wilkinson, deputy director of the Bicycle Federation in Washington.

"For years people have said Davis, Calif., is the place, but it's awfully warm there. And Davis is a town. Madison is a northern-tiered city where it can get mighty cold. The number of bicycle miles traveled — even in the winter — in Madison is unbelievable," he said,

Why has the city that calls itself "Mad-town" gone bonkers over bikes?

"We have a university with over 40,000 students and we are the state capital," Ms. Lobitz says. "Our business district and campus are on an isthmus in the center of downtown where most people work. It's a very small area.

"If everybody had cars, we couldn't fit them all. Many people have found it more convenient to bike to work and school.

"And Madison has health- and environment-conscious people. Exercise comes into play with the high number of hospitals, doctors and medical people we have here."

The city also spends $125,000 a year on improving and adding to its current 96 miles of bike routes and paths, Ms. Lobitz says, not to mention the corps of bike monitors who have the power to issue citations. Last year, $31,000 worth of bicycle violation citations were issued, much to the chagrin of the violators.

Police Chief David Couper also happens to be Ms. Lobitz's husband.

"We talk bicycling a lot," Ms. Lobitz says. "We solve some bicycling problems right under the roof of our own home."

Kennedy may have tried to hide marks of needles in groin

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Apparent needle marks found on the body of David Kennedy, who died of a lethal drug mixture, indicate that he "probably tried to cover his tracks" by injecting drugs into his groin area, a medical examiner says.

Kennedy, 28, died of "combined drug intoxication" after taking a tranquilizer, a powerful painkiller and cocaine, said an autopsy report released Thursday on a judge's order.

The report also said the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy died accidentally.

No needle or puncture wounds were found in the body's "upper extremities," the report said, but two "very small purple puncta" were found in the inguinal area, at the juncture of the leg and torso. Puncta are described in a medical dictionary as the plural of punctum, "an extremely small spot, or point...an extremely small area, or point of projection."

"Those are apparently needle puncture wounds, and as there is no history of previous medical care, it adds some credence to the injection of drugs," said Dr. Ronald Wright, the Broward County medical examiner. "Him not being a diabetic, it rather excludes ordinary medicine."

Dr. Charles Wetli, deputy chief medical examiner for Dade County, said the autopsy showed Kennedy might have been trying to conceal possible drug use.

"He probably tried to, no pun intended, cover his tracks," Wetli said. "That's really unusual. Most people don't go to that kind of trouble (except) people who are high-profile individuals, or in the military, or public figures."

Wright and Wetli were not involved in the Kennedy investigation, but were asked to interpret the autopsy report by The Miami Herald. Attempts by The Associated Press to reach Palm Beach Medical Examiner James Benz early today were unsuccessful. He has an unlisted home number, and a message left at his office was not returned.

Two former bellhops at the Brazilian Court Hotel, where Kennedy's body was found April 25, have been charged with selling him cocaine and conspiring to sell it.

One of them, Daniel Linwood Dorr, 30, of West Yarmouth, Mass., arrived here Thursday night with his attorney, Joseph Balliro, who said Dorr planned to surrender to Palm Beach authorities.

The other bellhop, Peter Andrew Marchant, 24, of Warwick, R.I., was arrested at his home May 15 and flown to West Palm Beach the next day. He is free on a $35,000 personal surety bond.

Authorities say they do not know whether the cocaine allegedly supplied by Dorr and Marchant was the same as that which contributed to Kennedy's death.

CONSTRUCTION BID NOTICE:

The Board of Education of Coahoma Independent School District will receive bids in the School Administration Office, located at High School Drive and Main Street, PO Box 110, Coahoma, Texas 79511 on the individual phases of construction---mechanical, electrical, plumbing, concrete, steel, air conditioning and masonry for a new High School Library facility. Specification books can be obtained from Tom Packard, Coahoma ISD Construction Manager, The Packard Company, 423 Crockett, Box 492, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Bids will be received until 12:00 noon June 8, 1984, and will be publicly opened by the school officials at 1:00 PM, June 8, 1984. All bids recieved after 12:00 noon on the specified date will be returned to the bidder unopened. All bids will be considered by the Coahoma School Board Members during a Special Board Meeting at 7:30 PM, June 14, 1984.

The Coahoma Board of Education reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, and to waive any technicalities or formalities.

All bids must show the full name of the company, and must be manually signed. The person signing the bids must show title or authority to bind his firm in a contract. The bid must be sealed in a company envelope and properly marked---Library Construction: Opening Date - June 8, 1984.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing of materials and labor and construction of 3360 S.Y. of 6" thick concrete drain, 52 S.Y. 5" concrete riprap and installing 90 L.F. 24" diameter spiral welded steel pipe (.3125" wall thickness) by boring and jacking will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas until 2:30 p.m. on the 5th day of June, 1984, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 233".

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit of FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, with such plans and specifications immediately after the examination of same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby gurantee-ing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contact and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

Legal Notice

RESOLUTION NO. 84-151

RESOLUTION DECLARING CERTAIN STRUCTURES WITHIN THE CITY TO BE DANGEROUS, DILAPIDATED AND PUBLIC NUISANCES; ORDERING THEIR DESTRUCTION OR REMOVAL; AND AUTHORIZING THE ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS FOR SUCH WORK

WHEREAS, the Department of Planning and Development has determined that the improvements described in Section Two hereof are unsafe buildings and dangerous structures and must be abated by repair or demolition and removal from the premises; and

WHEREAS, the Director of Planning and Development or his designee has given notice of the defects to the owners of each of said buildings as required by Section 4-8-3 of the City Code of Midland, Texas; and

WHEREAS, on April 9, 1984, after having failed, neglected or refused to correct the defects, the said owners were notified, by letter or publication, that a public hearing before the City Council would determine whether certain improvements are each dangerous stuerctures and a public nuisance; and

WHEREAS, a notice of such hearing was also published on April 12, 1984, in a newspaper of general circulation in the City and County; and

WHEREAS, on this 24th day of April, 1984, at the time and place prescribed by said notice, the Council held said public hearing for said purpose; and

WHEREAS, the Council finds that all notices required by the City Code of Midland, Texas, have been complied with and that notice of said hearing has been duly given; and

WHEREAS, the Council has heard the evidence and arguments presented by all persons who appeared before it; and

WHEREAS, the Council finds that the notice of the Director of Planning and Development or his designee to make the structures safe, either by repair or demolition and removal, has not been complied with;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS:

SECTION ONE. That the Council hereby finds and determines that each of the improvements, buildings and structures described in Section Two hereof is a dangerous structure, is structurally unsafe, constitutes a fire hazard and is dangerous to human life, and their continued use will constitute a hazard to the safety, health and public welfare, and each is hereby declared to be a public nuisance.

SECTION TWO. That the owner, agent or occupant of each dangerous structure described in this Section is hereby ordered to take down and remove the same from the premises within ten (10) days from the date of notice as set out in Section 4-8-3 and Section 4-8-4 of the City Code of Midland, Texas. The structures heretofore declared public nuisances, including number of structures, types of structures and street addresses, legal descriptions, and owners' name and addresses, are as follows:

Number of Structures	Type of Building and Street Address	Legal Description	Last Known Owner & Address
1	Wood Frame 804 N. Dallas	Lot 9, Block 5 Homestead Add.	Felipe Maldonado 810 N. Dallas Midland, TX 79701
1	Stucco-Wood 806 N. Dallas	Lot 10, Block 5 Homestead Add.	Manuela Munoz Rt. 4, Box 9-D Midland, TX 79702
1	Wood Frame 1610 E. Illinois	Lot 1, Block 1 Eastover Add., 2nd Section	Herman L. Harris 1415 E. Chestnut Midland, TX 79705
1	Wood Frame 712 N. Jackson	Lot 5, Block 2 Nueva LaJolla Add.	Jose Flores P. O. Box 503 Eden, TX 76837

SECTION THREE. That in the event any of the said owners, occupants or agents of said dangerous structures shall fail to comply with the order of the Council, then the Director of Planning and Development is hereby authorized and directed to prepare plans and specifications to carry out the order of the Council.

SECTION FOUR. That the City Manager is hereby authorized and directed, pursuant to Title III, Section 26(c) of the Midland City Charter, to approve said specifications and advertise for bids for said work pursuant to law. However, any contract or contracts for said work shall be executed only by order of the Council.

On motion of Council man Godfrey, seconded by Councilman Sloan, the above and foregoing resolution was adopted by the City Council of the City of Midland at a regular meeting on the 24th day of April, A.D., 1984, by the following vote:

GENERAL MOTORS PARTS DIVISION

Practicality makes perfect.

Practically speaking, the new Honda Civic DX Hatchback is a perfectionist's dream. Because its modest price is perfectly balanced by loads of helpful features.

Its rear seats not only fold down to expand the rear cargo space, but do so independently of each other. The steering column adjusts obligingly. There's also a 5-speed manual transmission, power-assisted ventilated front disc brakes, remote hatch release, rear wiper/washer and remote-control outside rearview mirror. And automatic transmission with lock-up torque converter is available.

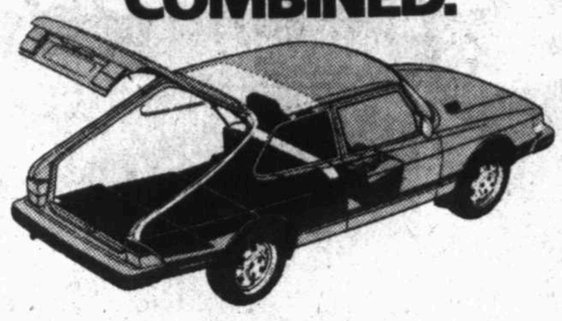
GM QUALITY SERVICE PARTS GM
GENERAL MOTORS PARTS DIVISION

KEEP THAT GREAT GM FEELING WITH GENUINE GM PARTS.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.



Four of Europe's most desirable sports sedans have the following amounts of cargo space: Saab 3-door, 56.5 cubic feet; Audi 5000, 16.0 cubic feet; Volvo GLT Turbo, 13.9 cubic feet; BMW 733i, 22.5 cubic feet.

As you can see, Saab has more cargo space than all three of the others. As you can imagine, Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat, load up sporting gear for a long weekend, or make an impulsive purchase at a tag sale.

Of course, only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down, so the others may claim that it has an unfair advantage.

That's right. It does have.

SAAB The most intelligent car ever built.

Europe's "Car of the Year." Your car for the future.

Audi 5000S Sedan

Audi 5000S

When Audi created the new 5000S, they did more than design the most aerodynamically efficient sedan ever. They did it with style. Elegant, luxurious style.

That's why 53 journalists from 16 countries voted the Audi 5000S Europe's "Car of the Year." Drive it. You'll call it #1, too.
