

Israeli planes bomb trails in Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli warplanes bombed Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon again today, hitting trails used to transport arms and guerrillas, the military command said. Lebanese provincial authorities reported 15 people killed or wounded.

A communique from the Tel Aviv command said the trails attacked were in the Kassmeh region along the Litani River and the Zahrani estuary. It said the pilots reported accurate hits and that all planes returned safely from the raid.

Lebanese provincial officials said the jets struck at a newly repaired section of the Kassmeh bridge on the Litani which was devastated in a lightning Israeli air strike last Thursday. They said the jets destroyed several moving cars, killing or wounding 15 occupants.

Israeli gunboats also shelled Palestinian guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon today, the Tel Aviv command said. It denied a Palestinian report of ground raids into southern Lebanon.

The command said northern Israeli settlements came under more Palestinian artillery attacks during the night, but there were no casualties. Israeli gunners returned the fire, the command said.

Meanwhile, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib held talks with Lebanese officials in Beirut then flew to Saudi Arabia to continue his search for a cease-fire between the Israelis and Palestinians.

In Cairo, Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak condemned what he called "reckless" Israeli attacks on Lebanon, saying that such action could sabotage the Egyptian-Israeli peace process.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin visited Israel's northern settlements today, paid a condolence call on the family of one of the five Israelis killed in guerrilla shelling, and pledged an end to the Palestinian barrages.

The Israeli government agreed Tuesday to indirect negotiations with Lebanese authorities — but not with the Palestinian guerrillas. Begin refused Habib's call for an immediate cease-fire, saying it would only give the guerrillas time to regroup and renew their attacks in a few weeks or months.

In Beirut, an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization said the guerrillas would stop shelling Israeli border towns only if Israel halted all military activity in Lebanon including reconnaissance flights.

Israel has said repeatedly that such flights are necessary to keep an eye on the guerrillas, and pre-emptive or punitive attacks are necessary to keep down the level of Palestinian attacks on Israel.

Five Israeli civilians and more than 400 Lebanese and Palestinians have been reported killed since hostilities escalated July 10. Most of the Arab casualties occurred in the Israeli air raid on Beirut last Friday, in which about 300 dead and about 800 wounded were reported.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori told Israel Radio that Israel was "ready for any negotiation with the Lebanese government to help it overcome and impose order in its country and on our border." But he said "from Israel's standpoint there never were — and there will not be — negotiations with the terrorists."

Terrorist convicted of shooting pope

ROME (AP) — Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca was convicted today of the attempted murder of Pope John Paul II and two American women and sentenced to life imprisonment, the maximum term under Italian law.

The court gave Agca an additional 10-year prison sentence, which will run concurrently with the life sentence, for illegal possession of arms, giving him a false passport and carrying a false passport.

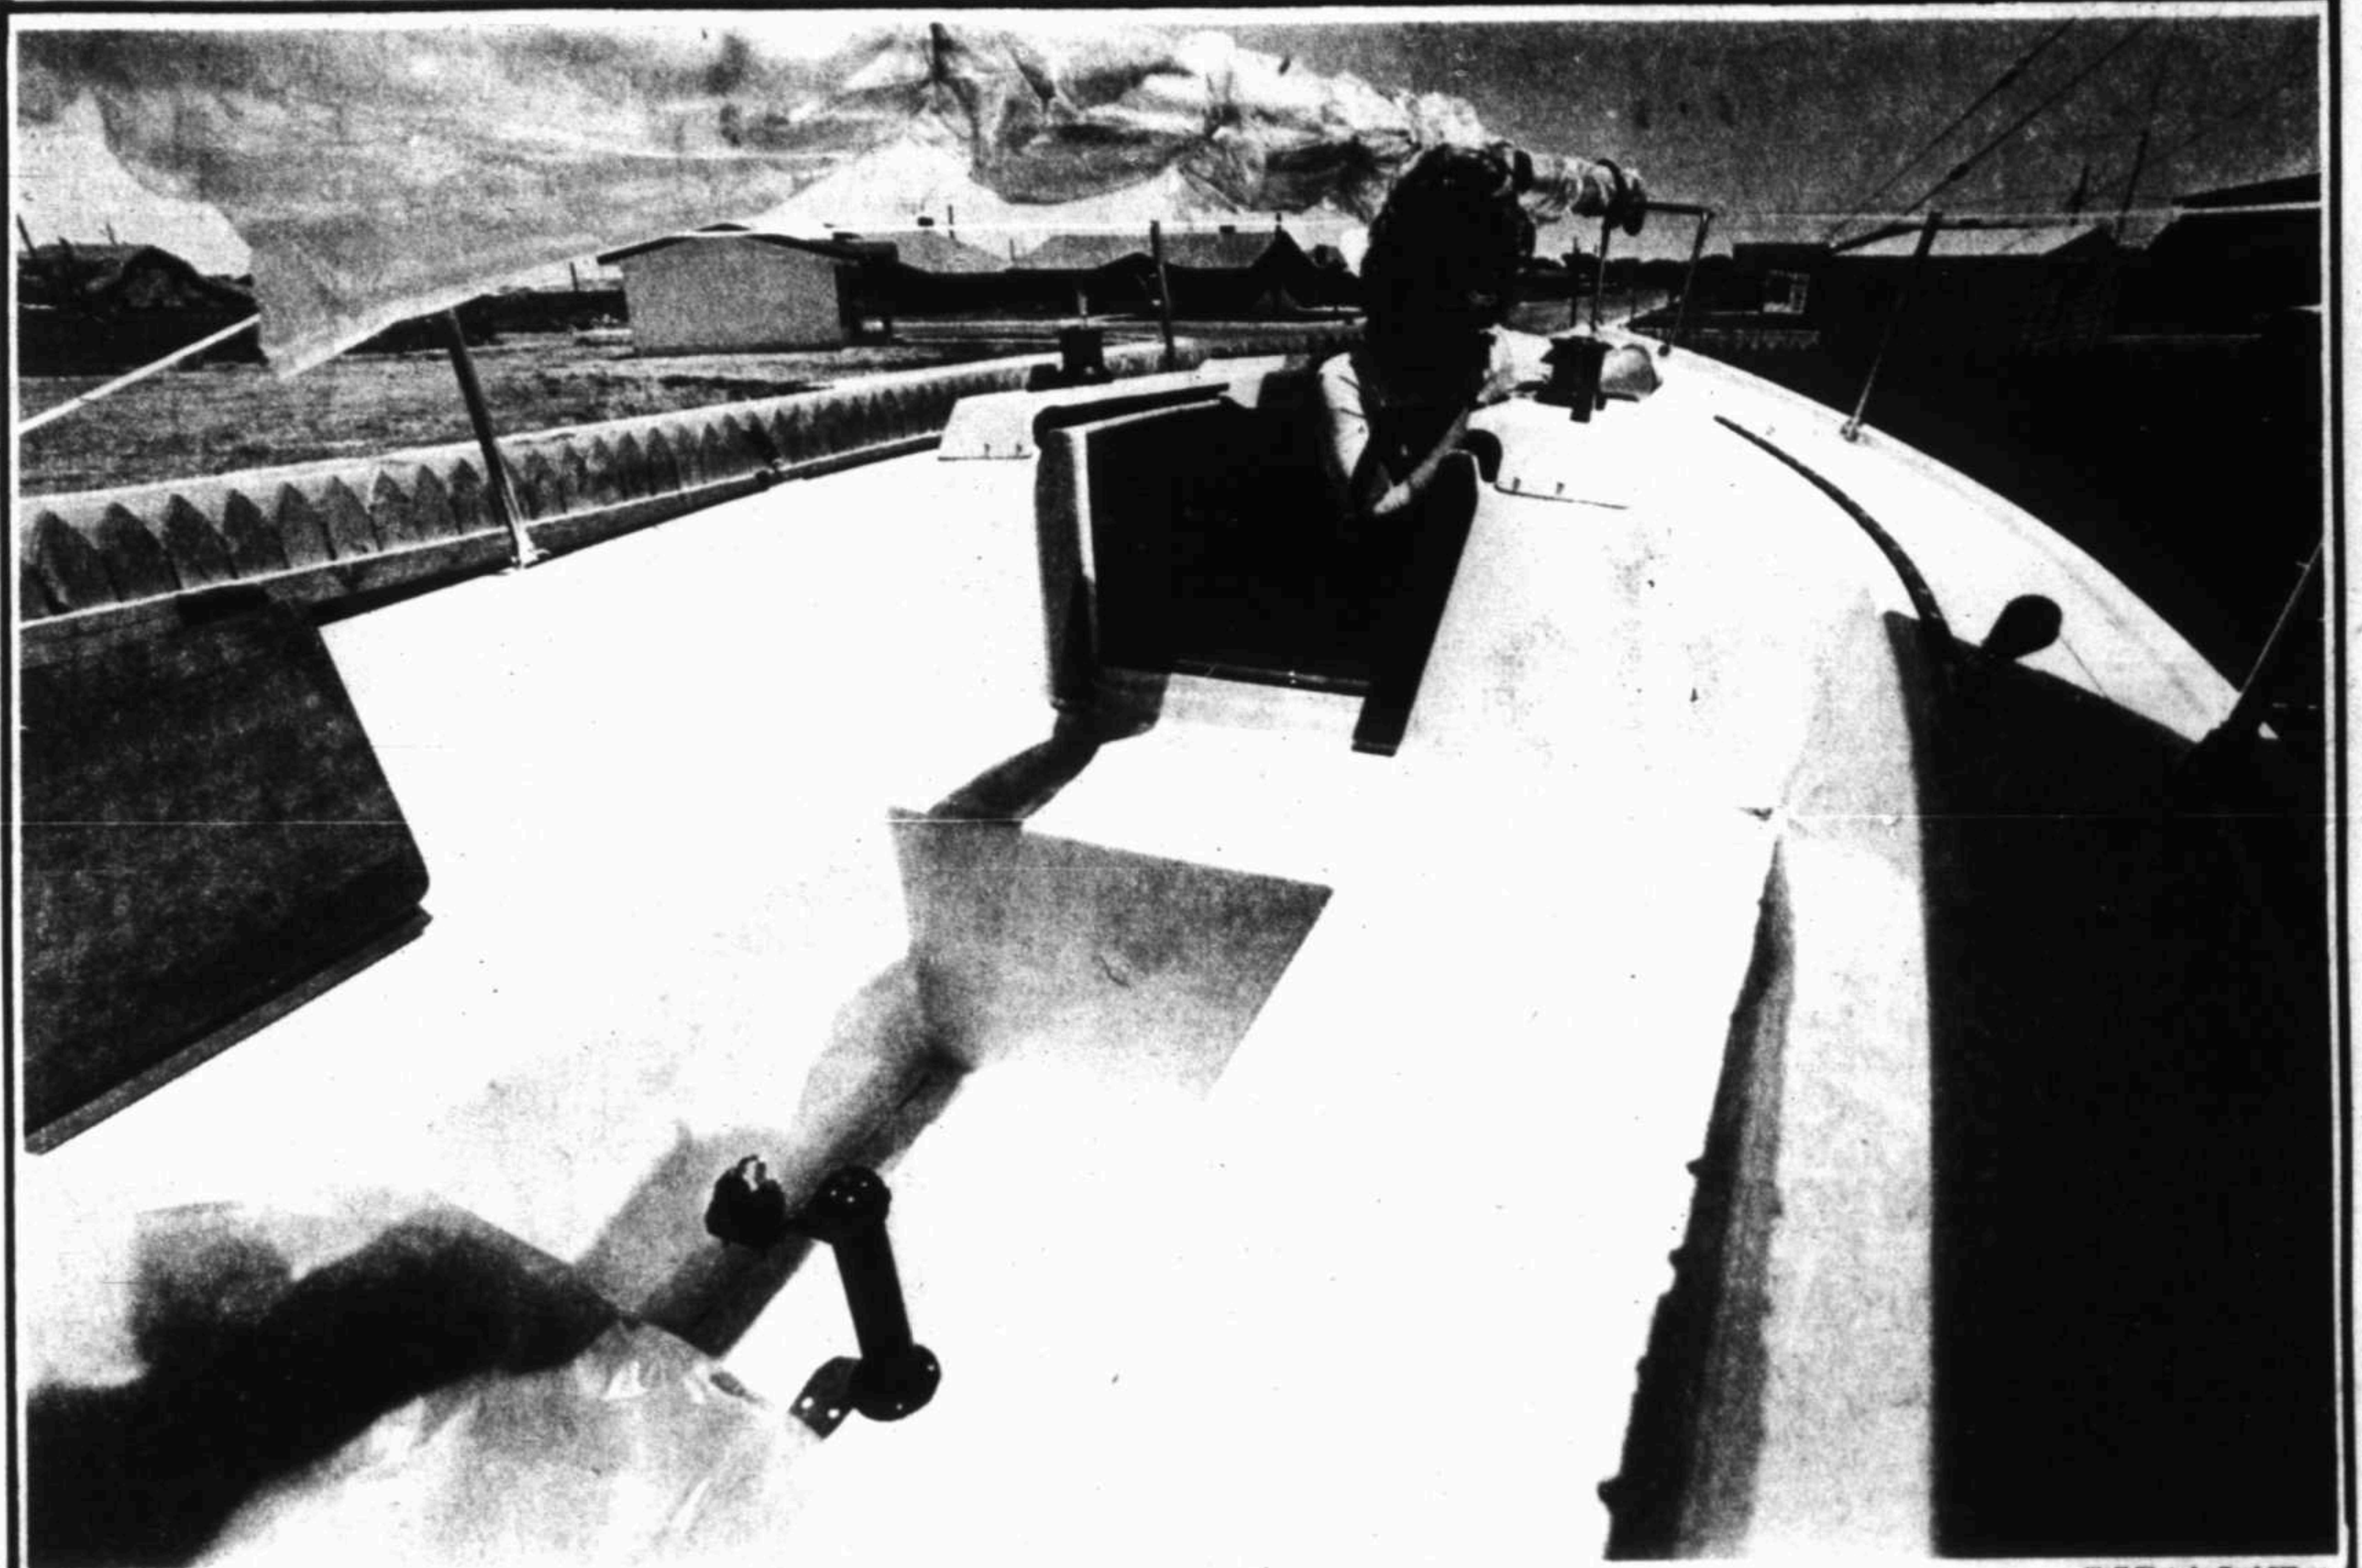

Agca, who admitted he shot the pope in St. Peter's Square May 13, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced. He boycotted the last two days of the proceedings as a protest against his trial in an Italian court instead of the Vatican.

The six-member jury and two judges deliberated for 6½ hours. Chief Judge Severino Santiapichi read the verdict and the sentence.

Agca's court-appointed lawyer, Pietro D'Ovidio, said he would meet with his 23-year-old client Thursday and ask whether he wanted to appeal the sentence.

D'Ovidio said Agca could technically apply for parole in 28 years but he said it was extremely unlikely a parole board would grant him liberty because "of the severity of the crime."

'Come on down!' emcee said And Midlander comes on home with prizes

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

"Janice Shockley, come on down!" bellowed emcee Johnny Olsen. And with that, Janice, better known as Donetta Shockley, started her game show career on "The Price Is Right." By the end of the May 6 taping, the value of her prizes would total $18,203.

The show, which is scheduled to be aired Sept. 8, was part of the 10th anniversary celebration of "The Price Is Right."

Although the winning was easy, the red tape Mrs. Shockley had to go through to even be in the audience was not.

The Midland resident wrote to the three major networks for tickets to television shows. She thought it would be a unique way to entertain visiting friends from Connecticut while she was visiting her in-laws in California. "We decided to do things that you couldn't usually do."

The tickets arrived; but her friends didn't. So, Mrs. Shockley had tickets to two shows that she would be able to work into her schedule — "The Price Is Right" and "The John Davidson Show."

"THEY SEND YOU a ticket for a certain date, and if you can't go, tough," Mrs. Shockley explained.

She asked several friends to join her, but "everybody was tied up and couldn't go."

Finally, she found a companion and set out for what she thought would be a relaxing, uneventful May afternoon at a television show. She soon found out she was wrong.

Mrs. Shockley's tickets suggested arriving at the studio four to six hours early. Once there, the audience, 400-strong, was ordered to get into a line with their tickets and an assigned number. "You feel like cattle," she recalled.

While in line, each individual was asked to show his or her driver's license and Social Security card. Mrs. Shockley thought her chances of seeing the show were gone when she realized "I didn't have my Social Security card with me." Luckily, she remembered her number and was able to move on through the screening process.

Then, the officials "line you up in lines of four and tell you not to talk."

One man from the show visited briefly with each of the 400. Mrs. Shockley described him as "sharp," and that he could remember information he had received several interviews before.

ALTHOUGH SHE CONCEDED this procedure might have been used to pick the eventual contestants, she said, "I have no idea how they chose (the players)."

The audience was allowed into the studio at 5:15 p.m. "That show started filming at 6:30 and I had been there since 1:30," Mrs. Shockley recalled.

While waiting for the show to start, Olsen "tried to entertain people for about an hour."

Just before filming started, the audience finally was given a few pointers by Olsen. "He did say to act yourself if you get chosen, speak loudly and be sure to kiss Bob Barker (the host)."

As the show began, Mrs. Shockley noticed the sets, which appear large and lavish to the viewer at home watching the game on television. "They're not pretty," she said. "They look like toys...and are really small."

Ready to sit back and enjoy the show, she soon found that this was not going to be a typical afternoon. "They started calling names and I was the third one they called," Mrs. Shockley remembered. She didn't respond immediately because the emcee called Janice (her legal first name) instead of Donetta (the name she uses).

The next step in her adventure relied on correctly pricing a product (See MIDLAND WOMAN, Page 2A)

Production figures questioned in oil sales scam trial

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — District Railroad Commissioner Archie P. Farr of Midland testified Tuesday that D.C. Wheeler — charged with attempted theft in an alleged oil scam deal — told him in his office a special chemical developed by a German scientist and injected into his wells would "increase production for nine months or so."

Wheeler and his pumper, John Thetford Sims, entered "not guilty" pleas in 118th District Court on charges of re-selling to Cosden the same tank of oil, on the heels of a reported increase in production which Farr testified that, in his opinion, the field could not sustain.

Under questioning by assistant district attorney Don Richard of Big Spring, Farr said Wheeler had reported producing 45 barrels of oil and 220 barrels of water per 24 hours on well No. 3, which Farr described as a "relatively high" ratio of oil "compared to nearby Continental wells."

Two Continental wells approximately 1,200 feet away produced two barrels of oil and 189 barrels of water, and one barrel of oil and 208 barrels of water per day, respectively, he said.

Farr testified that while Wheeler had named neither the scientist nor the chemical purported to be behind the increased production, Wheeler had indicated the chemical had been used successfully in South America and that he had acquired it after a meeting with the scientist in Houston.

"I'd never heard of such a chemical," said Farr. "In my mind it was so far-fetched I'd never put any credence to it."

On cross-examination by former District Attorney John Green of Odessa, who was making his first defense in a criminal case after 12 years as a prosecuting attorney, Farr was asked to read a copy of an undated letter to the Railroad Commission entered by the defendants.

The letter requested that the Wheeler lease oil allowable (the amount of oil the field is permitted to produce per day) be raised from 15 to 40 barrels, claiming that "extensive work" had been done on three pump jacks. The letter said all units had been re-balanced and re-timed and that the stroke on one had been increased from 29 inches to 45 inches.

Green then asked Farr if he had any written record of the purported conversation concerning the German scientist.

"Sure, I made a note," said Farr, producing a copy.

While the offense with which Wheeler and Sims are charged is alleged to have occurred on or about Jan. 5, 1981, most of defense attorney

Green's cross-examination sought to establish that Cosden and its pipeline official Sam Hunnicutt never reported any failure to receive purchased oil September through December.

Early in the proceedings, prosecuting attorney Richard asked 118th District Judge James Gregg of Big Spring to disallow such questioning, describing it as irrelevant since neither Wheeler nor Sims are charged with any wrongdoing at that time. Judge Gregg overruled the objection.

Nationwide postal strike averted

By WILLIAM J. EATON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service reached tentative agreement on a 3-year, $4.8-billion wage contract with two major postal unions Tuesday, averting a nationwide mail strike, then appealed anew for a 20-cent first class stamp.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger, who took a personal role in the endangered contract talks Tuesday, said he believed that the agreement would not drive up first-class postal rates beyond the 20-cent stamp that the Postal Service already has requested.

"We'll be able to hold it to 20 cents for several years if we get it soon," Bolger added.

The settlement was achieved after an all-night bargaining session at which talks nearly collapsed. It will provide 600,000 postal workers with at least $2,100 each in total pay increases over the 3-year period, plus adjustments to match the cost of living with no upper limit.

If inflation were to continue at an 8 percent annual rate for the next three years, the cost-of-living adjustments would raise the pay of each postal worker by an additional $3,000.

"It's a good contract," said Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, who along with Vincent R. Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, predicted its ratification by the unions' rank-and-file members within a month.

The National Rural Letter Carriers Association, representing about 60,000 workers, also settled with the Postal Service. The Mail Handlers' Union, with about 40,000 members, decided to submit unresolved pay and other issues to binding arbitration. The agreement with the two major unions was announced almost 16 hours after the old contract had expired at midnight Monday.

A strike was headed off at that point when Biller and Sombrotto agreed to extend the old contract hour-by-hour after the Postal Service sweetened its wage offer considerably.

About 5 a.m., the two unions announced that they had reached a tentative settlement. But they were to repudiate that settlement less than two hours later, claiming a "misunderstanding" of the pay provisions.

In announcing the Tuesday accord, a grinning federal mediator, Nicholas A. Fidandis, said: "This is the real thing."

The settlement provides for a pay raise of about 10 percent over three years. Union leaders were pleased that it retained a cost-of-living formula without any ceiling, or cap. That formula has produced a pay raise of $3,619 for each postal worker since the 1978 contract was approved.

The cost-of-living escalator clause is a principal reason the typical postal worker now makes $21,146 a year in wages alone, according to a union study. The Postal Service says that total compensation, including fringe benefits, amounts to $23,300.

The Postal Service, however, devised its pay offer to limit some of the side effects on overtime wages, shift premiums and holiday pay.

The agreement provides a $300-a-year increase in the basic wage in each of three years, plus a one-time bonus of $150 for ratifying the contract.

Three other payments of at least $350 each will be considered one-shot "productivity bonuses" and will not increase the basic wage or be included in calculating overtime, shift differentials, holiday pay or retirement benefits.

British officials visit IRA hunger strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two senior officials of the British government visited five of the eight Irish nationalist hunger strikers early today but failed to get them to end their fast, the government said.

The Northern Ireland Office said the officials made the visit to the Maze Prison outside Belfast at the suggestion of the family of one of the hunger strikers, who are demanding that guerrillas be treated as political prisoners instead of common criminals.

The officials, who were not identified, tried "to clarify previous government statements to the hunger strikers because an indication had been received, contrary to previous expressed views, that this would be helpful," the office said.

"They saw the relatives of two of the hunger strikers and they also saw the five hunger strikers in the prison hospital. However, the hunger strikers, when asked, did not wish to take up the offer," the statement said.

Two of the protesters are said to be very close to death. Kieran Doherty, 25, was in his 61st day without food today and Kevin Lynch, 25, started the 60th day of his fast. Six hunger strikers have died since the campaign began March 1.

The Northern Ireland Office said the hunger strikers refused to discuss the government's position unless Brendan McFarland, head of the guerrillas from the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing in the Maze, was present.

Government sources said the officials would not let McFarland participate because of his insistence on negotiating the prisoners' demands for political status. The British say they will not negotiate until the strikers end their fast.

Like most of the hunger strikers, Doherty is a member of the IRA, which is fighting a guerrilla war to drive the British out of Northern Ireland, where Protestants have a 2-to-1 majority, and unite the province with Ireland, which is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic. Lynch belongs to the Irish National Liberation Army, an IRA splinter group.

Doherty's death could trigger a political crisis in the neighboring Irish Republic. He was elected to the Dail, the lower house of the Irish Parliament, last month. If he dies, there will be a special election to fill the seat.

Officials of Sinn Fein, the outlawed IRA's political front, said that if Doherty dies, the other IRA prisoner in the Maze elected to the Dail, Paddy Agnew, will "seriously consider" resigning.

Party appeals to all Poles to help save motherland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish Communist Party's emergency congress has ended with an appeal to all Poles to unite behind the party's leadership and save "the motherland in need."

"The secure existence of the nation and the future of the state are threatened," the congress said in a statement adopted at its final session Monday. "Let us join efforts to avert the threat that hangs over Poland."

The appeal, which was published after the delegates adjourned, came in advance of threatened strikes Thursday by some 46,000 dock workers in four Baltic ports and Friday by employees of LOT, the national airline.

The dockers are seeking higher pay and improved working conditions, while the airline employees are demanding the right to name the director of the airline. Unconfirmed reports circulated in Warsaw that the airline conflict might be resolved, but there was no indication of an agreement between the dockers and the government.

During the seven-day party congress, party chief Stanislaw Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski warned that the country could afford no more strikes or wage hikes, that imports would drive its debt to the West up $3 billion more this year to $30 billion and that food prices should be raised 100 percent.

"The congress has ended: we must go back to work," Kania said in a final speech Monday. "Outside the door of this hall we shall meet hard reality."

"Today, the test of patriotism is action," said the final statement from the congress. "We must prove by action that the good of Poland is the most important thing for us. May no one who holds dear the future of the socialist motherland be absent among us at this moment of historical trial."

The statement also echoed assurances in Kania's speech that Poland would remain faithful to the Soviet bloc.

Pamela Joy Brown and Lois Hall, both of Midland, are among 51 Girl Scouts from all over the world chosen to participate in an archaeological opportunity hosted by the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council in West Texas.

They are the daughters of Tyrone and Lydia Brown and of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Hall, all of Midland.

This national event, from July 31 to Aug. 13, is called "Hot Diggity Dig." All the girls will have the experience of working on an archaeological dig under a professional archaeologist whose expertise is in the west Texas area.

Participants are attending from Mexico, South America and Europe, in addition to the United States.

The event will be centered on Hat-A-Ranch, a working sheep ranch since the end of the Civil War, which is now a Girl Scout Camp.

The ranch itself has many historical points of interest and the general location is rich in Indian artifacts and history. Near the house are the flint hills, the Indian grinding stones, rock mounds, the mesquite pits and fossil beds.

Several side trips have been planned for the visitors; these will include the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Mitre Peak and Indian rock art. Several surrounding communities are hosting various activities for the girls to include barbecues, Mexican dinners, a Western dance and a fish fry.

WANDA R. HOLLAND of Midland has been recommended to the institute's governing board of editors for biographical inclusion in the twelfth edition of "Personalities of the South."

This recommendation was brought forward by the Research Division.

Personalities of the South recognizes outstanding southerners in various fields of endeavor. Each year, a copy of the volume is placed in the Library of Congress and in all state libraries of the South.

Ms. Holland is the daughter of Mrs. Denny Holland of Midland.

HARRY CLARK, retired senior vice president of area development at First National Bank, has been honored by the American Association of University Women.

He was presented a plaque of appreciation by Tricia Boyd, chairman of Lunch With Santa. Clark served as Santa Claus at the Lunch With Santa events at the first lunch in 1976 through 1980.

PAUL ANDREW KOWERT and 83 other rising high school seniors from around the country are getting an early taste of collegiate life at Davidson College's July Experience this month.

Kowert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kowert, 3209 North I St., is studying at Davidson in an environment modeled as closely as possible to undergraduate college life.

Davidson is located in Davidson, N.C.

"Exposure to college life at this point gives participants insight into the best uses of time and energy during their final year of high school," said July Experience Director William B. Hight Jr.

Students take two classes daily from the curriculum of 10 courses offered. Subjects cover biology, English, economics, French, math, history, philosophy, physics and political science.

A MIDLAND COUPLE has been named as a first place winner in the March of Dimes hang glider contest.

Captain Bruce the Spruce Goose piloted a motorized hang glider throughout Eastern New Mexico and West Texas for the March of Dimes. Prizes were awarded for guessing total air flight time to all cities and for guessing air flight between cities.

Robert and Suzanne Palmer, Rt. 6, received a waterbed as their prize.

BERNADINE JOHNS AND ROBIN WRIGHT of Midland attended a week long gymnastic camp at East Central University in Ada, Okla.

The camp is geared for beginning through advanced gymnasts and is coordinated through the Division of Adult and Continuing Education's Public Service Program.

SEVERAL STUDENTS from Midland participated in the seventh annual Angelo State University Band Camp which attracts junior and senior school students and band directors from across the state.

Attending from Midland were Wade Frost, Stacy Swann and Joseph White.

More than 650 persons attended this year's camp which offered clinic sessions in conducting, theory, ensembles, drum majoring, twirling and others.

Big Brother volunteers needed

Although the Big Brother/Big Sister program currently has 50 participants, more volunteers are needed for 25 boys and girls who lack a shared experience with an older person.

According to Carol Layman, director, the program provides a trained and qualified adult volunteer to boys and girls from single parent families.

"This unique one-to-one relationship offers the child an opportunity to experience a special friendship with an adult outside the family who shares a few hours a week with the child," she said.

She explained that their time together is spent in many different ways, such as playing in the park, sharing a pizza, going to a Cub's baseball game, or just talking and sharing experiences with another person.

For July, the group attended a game at Cub Stadium where the children were presented little bats and wrist bands from the Midland Cub organization.

Though Mrs. Layman is pleased that so many are in the non-profit program now, she would like to see many more volunteers.

"At least three kids a week call me to see if I've found them a Big Brother yet," she said. "It's so hard for them to understand the long wait and some think it's because they aren't good enough."

She added that she had just seen the results of a national survey which found that 50 percent of the people who commit homicide were raised in single parent homes.

"We really believe our program offsets the serious impact of growing up without a father," she said. Only two of the children currently in the program are in motherless homes.

Persons who would like more information about the program can contact the Big Brothers/Big Sisters office at 683-4242.

LIVING TODAY

Self-reliance popular now

By SHARON HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

A "big" value change across the nation is underway—self-reliance, or "keeping down with the Jones", as some like to call it. It has lots of different characteristics, too: hand-work is increasing in prestige, the simple life is "in" and conservation is "the thing" to do. Why?

Inflation, nostalgia and a desire for a simpler, less-complicated lifestyle—along with disenchantment over quality of workmanship done by others and a larger chunk of leisure time—are some of the reasons.

How encompassing and different is the change from values and lifestyles of the past years?

Self-reliance seems to be sweeping the nation, and this rush to do things for one's self instead of paying someone else to do it reflects a substantial change in values.

Instead of ranking people by what they own, this emerging "prosumer" ethic (production for personal consumption) is placing a status value on people for what they can do. Hand-work is increasing in prestige—whether it's to build one's own home, mend a fence, cook a great meal, make one's own clothes or create a bountiful garden.

What might have started as a hobby is becoming "personal production" and it's likely to be economically significant as well as relevant to the molding of an individual's social character.

In fact, it appears likely that in the future human traits favorable by a large portion of society will include self-reliance: the ability to adapt and survive under difficult conditions and the ability to do things with one's own hands.

This "new" trend has an especially eager following in younger, more educated homeowners along with middle-income families—the two groups more prone to adapting the simplistic lifestyle, according to a California study.

Its findings report that such a lifestyle includes conservation through biking for transportation, self-sufficiency in services and goods, recycling of resources such as metal and glass, recycling of durable goods such as furniture and clothes, and living productively with nature.

Implications for the next few years—and decades—to come are many. Acceptance of voluntary simplicity—in addition to the changing values—could affect American society's consumption patterns, lifestyles and organization structure.

Some specific implications are these:

- More widely accepted conservation.
- An increased market for do-it-yourself products and recycled durable goods.
- More interest in self-help programs, and
- More control over individual quality of life with less concern for socio-economic status.

To say all this in just a few words: Simplicity is "in," and work, indeed, is respectable.

Dentist recommends preventive method

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

The best estimates indicate that in American mouths today there are 294 million unfilled cavities.

With such opportunities to enrich dentists through fillings, extractions, partial and full dentures plus an assortment of gum, jaw and other "mouth" procedures, why would many in the profession be pushing so hard for "preventive dentistry?"

Dr. Charles Amenta, founder of the International Society for Preventive Dentistry, tells why.

"First," he said in an interview, "our job is to help put or keep our patients in good health, and preventive dentistry, which starts at home, is the best route to achieve that aim."

"Second, dentists shouldn't be alarmed. There is a handsome living to be made in preventive dentistry, perhaps more than in the 'emergency' work that is so much a part of the profession today."

"Third, preventive dentistry is a challenge to any dentist's skill, and that should motivate him sufficiently."

As for the "handsome" living, Amenta is quite right. Figuring $20 per filling, plus other associated charges, just cleaning up those 294 million cavities adds up to a $6 billion dental bill. At that point, the preventive work can get moving in earnest.

"You cannot overestimate the importance of preventive work," Amenta said. "Just bear in mind that if you have an unhealthy mouth there is no way you can keep those (dental) bugs out of the bloodstream. Bad teeth can't help but affect your total health—with increased risks of diabetes, obesity (from the excess use of sugar that destroys teeth), cardiovascular diseases and many other ailments."

To avoid emergency trips to the dentist caused by pain, and these amount to about 6 million visits a year, Amenta stresses home care and some attention to dietary habits.

"You should clean your teeth at least twice a day," he said, "preferably after every intake of food. Sugar abstinence is also a good habit to form. Bacteria as it affects teeth is accelerated by excess use of refined sugar. It's bugs and sugar that are the villains and they contribute to deteriorating general health."

Amenta recommends annual or semiannual checkup trips to a dentist for everyone (hence the handsome living available for the dentists) and he is strong on use of fluorides.

Female voices filling air waves

Air Force Capt. Janis Skliar sits in the cockpit of a cargo plane at Norton Air Force Base in California. She is one of four women pilots in the Military Airlift Command.

By ROBERT C. TOTH
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

NORTON AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The two green-eyed blondes, both drama majors in college, chattered almost non-stop as their plane flew over Los Angeles. But it was not Hollywood film directors, gossip about boyfriends or the latest shade of lipstick they were discussing.

It was radio frequencies, directional vectors and aircraft traffic in the vicinity of the C-141 they were piloting.

Air Force Captains Kathy LaSauce-Arlington and Janis Skliar were on a "local" flight, practicing their hydraulically-assisted "feminine touch" on the four-jet engine, 145-ton cargo plane of the Military Airlift Command.

"Lots more women's voices up here these days," Skliar said with a smile from the co-pilot's seat after she overheard a radio transmission from a nearby airliner to Los Angeles International Airport for landing instructions in feminine tones.

LaSauce-Arlington, 32, and Skliar, 28, are two of the 63rd MCA's four women command pilots. There are 225 pilots, all told, assigned to the wing. The four women personify the change in sexes that has occurred over the last decade in the predominantly male "wide blue yonder." And, of course, it is not only in the Air Force that such things are changing.

When the draft ended in 1973, the Pentagon began looking to women to help fill the expected shortfall in volunteers. The women's liberation movement also brought pressure on the military to provide equal opportunities for women. The result was that, although there were only 45,000 women in the U.S. military in 1972 (or about 1.9 percent of the total), today there are 150,000 women in the service, or 8 percent of the total. By 1985, the proportion is expected to reach 12 percent.

The revolution is greatest in non-combat jobs, from drill sergeant to crew member in an intercontinental missile silo. By tradition, one of the most glamorous jobs is that of pilot, and all three services have women pilots by the score.

—The Navy, which began graduating women pilots in 1974, has 54 on active duty. They fly a variety of planes, from helicopters and anti-submarine patrol aircraft to older fighter planes (such as the A-4) and small cargo-carrying planes that land on carriers.

Under present regulations, women cannot be permanently stationed on warships, including carriers, so women pilots assigned to fighter planes are shore-based.

—The Army has 65 women pilots on active duty, mostly in helicopters but some in small observation planes as well. About 30 more are in the reserves.

—The Air Force has the most female fliers, including navigators. They serve in the Strategic Air Command as well as in the Military Airlift Command. Of 23,000 pilots, 77 are women, including 65 on active duty with the rest in reserve units. The Air Force also has 39 women navigators.

Pilots are about evenly divided between SAC, in which they fly KC-135 tankers, as well as electronic patrol and airborne command aircraft — but not bombers, because of rules against using women in combat roles — and MAC, in which they pilot C-9 hospital planes as well as the C-141 and other cargo carriers. Most of the navigators are in SAC.

"Their quality varies, much as it does among male pilots," one Air Force general said, "although the women tend to be more determined. But we've never had the kind of emergency that required immediate deployment of pilots. For some of the women it would mean leaving kids and so forth, which would hold their feet to the fire. So we don't really know how it would work in a crisis."

"Men are sometimes nervous with a woman pilot," LaSauce-Arlington said, "let alone when there happens to be two of us. But women passengers we sometimes carry think it's just great, particularly older women. I remember one getting off and giving me a big grin and a thumbs up sign."

The 63rd MAC Wing at Norton Air Force Base near San Bernardino, Calif., carries supplies and personnel, including families and other relatives of servicemen at times, to U.S. bases throughout the Pacific Ocean and deep into the Indian Ocean, where a U.S. buildup is under way on the island of Diego Garcia. Crews spend about half their time on duty away from here.

Women fliers in the military are certainly not new. "There were women flying balloons four months before the Wright brothers took off," LaSauce-Arlington said. "Women ferried aircraft during World War II. Some were even shot down."

But as a member of the first class of Air Force-trained women pilots in 1977, LaSauce-Arlington sees herself and the nine other graduates as pioneers who opened up the field, proving that women could fly all kinds of planes and do it as well as men.

Vitamin dispensers

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

The year is 2003, and the place is your favorite intergalactic condensed natural food emporium. Just sit down at your computer terminal and punch out your order. Your friendly waiter ("Hi, I'm R2D2") will deliver an immaculate meal untouched by human hands.

The menu, naturally, will come complete with a computer printout of the calories and nutrients, minerals and enzymes.

And well within reach will be a vitamin dispenser, the better to satisfy the minimal daily requirement.

Farfetched?

Not to Earl Mindell, a pharmacist, nutritionist and lecturer who envisions the day when vitamin dispensers will be as common in restaurants as knives and forks. And, in the future, computers.

To Mindell's way of thinking, so long as we live in a polluted environment, smoke, drink alcohol, take contraceptives and endure stress, we need vitamin supplements. Even if we adhere to the perfect diet.

All of the above, he says, reduce the nutrients in our bodies.

Mindell speaks with a vested interest. He is co-founder of a national chain of vitamin stores (Great Earth). He also is a member of the International College of Applied Nutrition, the American Nutrition Society and the National Health Federation, and a charter member of the American Academy of the General Practice of Pharmacy.

Touring to promote his book, "The Vitamin Bible" ($2.95, Warner Books), Mindell admitted he is an inveterate pill-popper. Forty a day, morning, noon and night. Always with a meal — or at least a half-ounce of protein.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cut cost of making homemade ice cream

DEAR HELOISE:

On these hot, summer days, nothing tastes better than a freezer of homemade ice cream. With the electric models now available, it isn't the time-consuming chore it used to be, but it's still rather expensive.

I would like to pass on a money-saving tip which I have used for some time to stretch the ice I have to buy to make the ice cream.

After the ice cream is finished, to save the ice for next time, pour the water, ice and salt into a colander or into a plastic bag that has small holes in the bottom.

Drain the ice well for a little while (not on vegetation, because the salt water will kill grass or plants) and place it in a heavy grocery bag to catch any extra dripping. Place the bag in the freezer.

The next time you make ice cream, just add the small amount of ice needed and you're in business again without having to buy a lot of ice. — Helen Bonds

Great! Next time, if you have room in your freezer, you could freeze your own ice in milk cartons etc., to cut down the costs even more. Wouldn't a dish of that delicious delicacy taste good right now? U-m-m-m-m! — Heloise

SANDBOX FUN

Dear Heloise: Young (and no so young) children can have hours of enjoyment in a sandbox. Just buy a small molded plastic wading pool and poke the bottom with an ice pick to form drainage holes, or the sand will take forever to dry after a rain.

Fill it with a couple of bags of sand which are very inexpensive (they're available at lumber yards, etc.). My daughter loves hers! — Brenda Morski

You could even pull it under a patio or tree for extra cover. — Heloise

CURTAIN CALL

Dear Heloise: My cafe-type curtains kept sliding over the windows, blocking the breezes which were trying to get into the house.

I was trying to think of something to hold them back, yet which would look nice, when I noticed the little magnet note keepers on my refrigerator.

I put one on each end of the curtain rod and they held the curtains back beautifully. — Mabel Wood

SHOE RENEW

Dear Heloise: How can black scuff marks be removed from the upper part of white or light-colored vinyl shoes? I have tried everything I can think of but nothing works.

The shoes are new, but look so unsightly. — Mrs. Sarah Caputo Spray the marks with a laundry pre-wash spray, then rub vigorously with a soft cloth. Repeat the process until the marks are removed, but I can't promise that it will be easy in some cases.

Just don't give up — the marks will come off. The key to their removal is to rub vigorously and use plenty of spray. It does not harm the shoes. — Heloise

HOT BREAD

Dear Heloise: A quick and easy way to warm up dinner rolls in summertime is to place them in a plastic food storage bag and put them out in the sun on a lounge chair or hang them on the clothesline, about one-half hour before the meal.

Works for hamburger buns, too, (leave them in their wrapper) and you've saved a bit of energy as a bonus. — Eva Gilman

FLOWER FACT

Dear Heloise: If you put a few drops of liquid bleach in a vase full of water, it (the water) will stay rancid-free until the flowers are ready to be replaced. — Tammy Mertz

If you have a problem you need to solve or a hint you think is great, send it along to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because she gets a lot of mail, she can't answer letters individually but she will use the best in her column whenever possible.

Now is the time to plant fall gardens without fear

By TOM STEVENSON
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Jack Frost need not put an end to your supply of home-grown vegetables. In fact, the best may be yet to come. Some of the most popular vegetables can be started now and harvested right up to the early winter months. Cool autumn weather actually improves the flavor of some of them.

While not all late-summer or early-fall planted vegetables will fully mature, most are quite delicious when young. To increase the chance of their reaching maturity, select those having the shortest number of days to maturity. That information will be on the seed packet. Wherever you live, your County Extension Service can help with exact planting dates.

Remember, too, that cold frames can extend the productivity of your fall garden. With this protection loosehead lettuce such as Green Ice can provide crisp salad greens well into the cold months.

Important to the fall vegetable garden is a constant and uniform supply of water. The weather is often hot and dry. If you allow your garden soil to dry out, the vegetables will stop growing and this may affect flavors.

Give your summer planted crops the same good attention and cultural conditions as spring-grown ones. Prepare the soil well and work in a balanced garden fertilizer, such as 5-10-5, according to package directions. Sow seeds and later thin or transplant seedlings as instructed on seed packets. Cultivate occasionally to prevent weeds. Better yet, use a mulch. It not only smothers weeds but also promotes better growth and holds moisture in the soil.

Many people like a combination of turnip greens, mustard greens and kale. A mixture gives a good flavor to the greens by playing down the bitterness of mustard while enhancing the flavor of the turnips and kale.

Winter bloomdale spinach is so hardy it will live over the winter (from a late August sowing) and be ready to supply fresh, tasty greens next spring. This variety usually survives, even in severely cold areas, without any protection.

Kale and collards grown during the summer tend to be tougher and not as sweet as those grown during cooler seasons.

Beet greens are eaten by many people. It is possible to use both tops and roots but the tops of large beets usually are tough and often damaged by leaf spotting diseases and are seldom good for greens.

Parkview orientation held for newly-formed volunteer auxiliary

A nucleus of 11 future Parkview Hospital volunteers met for a general orientation conducted by Merrie Cox, RN, of the Parkview staff, and Joan Cramer, former co-councilwoman for the District II-B of the Texas Association of Hospital Auxiliaries.

Parkview Administrator Dick Liley welcomed the members saying, "I can not express enough appreciation to you for your willingness to be volunteers at Parkview. Volunteers really do help a hospital and we will do everything we can to make you feel welcome and certainly needed."

The new volunteers, wearing yellow uniforms, will initially work in five major areas, including the information desk, patient nourishment cart, hospital switchboard, gift shop and will serve as floor hostesses to patients and their families.

Other Midlanders, both men and women, interested in becoming charter members of the Parkview volunteer group should call Ms. Cox to schedule an interview and orientation. She may be reached at 683-5491, ext. 45.

All Citizens May Participate

Wyoming Oil Leases To Be Awarded in August

CARSON CITY, NV — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public auctions conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production. Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands. Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Public Lands Division, 607 E. Spear St., Carson City, Nevada 89701. Enclose $1 for postage and handling. Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.

DEAR ABBY

Photographer presses button

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: FUNNY NAVEI wrote to say that she was embarrassed to wear her bikini to the beach because she had a funny-looking navel. She said, "It's not round like a normal belly button; it's square, and I keep a dime stuck in it to keep it from popping out."

You told her to take the dime out of her navel and call a plastic surgeon. Shame on you, Abby, for suggesting that she change its natural shape!

I hope I'm not too late because I'd like to get in touch with this lady. I'm a singer/composer and writer with a special interest in navels, which I consider the most erotic part of the human anatomy.

Unique navels have always fascinated me. In fact I am writing a book on the subject, and have a collection of photographs of unusual navels from all over the world. I would like to photograph your correspondent's navel for my book. Will you please send me her name and address? — BELLY-BUTTON BUFF

DEAR BUFF: Alas, FUNNY NAVEI requested anonymity. However, you possess a rare kind of navel intelligence. Good luck with your book. I hope you get the no-belly prize.

DEAR ABBY: IN THE MIDDLE asked if she should decline invitations from her ex-husband's family to attend their family gatherings. It seems that her "ex" has remarried and his new wife is uncomfortable at family gatherings with Wife No. 1 present, so consequently Wife No. 2 stays away — and so does her husband.

Abby, you told the "ex" wife that if she was invited, it meant she was wanted, and she should go if she wished. If Wife No. 2 was "uncomfortable" and stayed away, that was her problem.

While your answer sounds reasonable, let's face it. Abby, that's not being fair to the new wife. I know.

My husband was married before, and I know how difficult it is to become accepted by John's family. They loved John's first wife. Marge was part of their family for 10 years, and the fact that John and Marge have children makes it even harder for me to compete.

The ex-wife should let go of those old family ties and give the new wife a chance to become part of her husband's family. If there is real affection between Wife No. 1 and her ex-husband's family, they can invite her on occasions other than family gatherings. Her "ex" and his NEW wife belong there — she doesn't. And if Wife No. 1 is invited, knowing if she accepts Wife No. 2 will stay away, she should

Perfectionists found to be not so perfect

NEW YORK — Contrary to what they would have everyone believe, people who are perfectionists try harder, but succeed less than nonperfectionists, according to a study.

The study, conducted by David Burns, M.D. of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, found that perfectionists live with self-doubt and the constant fear of failure, which sometimes causes them to postpone doing anything at all rather than take the risk.

Dr. Burns, who admits to being a perfectionist himself, said that when he first began his study he expected to find that a little perfectionism is a good thing. He was surprised to learn instead that perfectionism is detrimental. Among a group of successful insurance agents he studied, for example, the perfectionists' annual income averaged $15,000 less a year than the nonperfectionists'.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT OF THE ENVIRONMENT AND NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

Midland County
Midland, Texas 79702
P.O. Box 421
200 W. Wall
(915) 682-9481

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:
On or about August 10, 1981 the above-named County will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) for the following project activities:
SOUTHEAST MIDLAND "WINDOW PANE" NEIGHBORHOOD IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

Neighborhood Facilities
Day Care Center $225,000.00 estimated cost
Street Improvements $314,000.00 estimated cost
Water & Sewer Facilities $234,000.00 estimated cost Clearance Activities $27,000.00 estimated cost Relocation Payments & Assistance $108,000.00 estimated cost

The above referenced project activities will be carried out as part of a three year (1981-83) comprehensive Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program. The request for release of funds will cover all three years (1981, 1982 and 1983) of the proposed CDBG project. The project will be carried out in a Target Area in the southeast section of the City of Midland (Census Tract 14) known as a County "window pane" area. The day care center is proposed for construction on Taylor Park at the intersection of Griffin & Goode Streets in the City of Midland. A map delineating the Target Area and project locations is available for public inspection in the office of the Midland County Judge.

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly the above-named County has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:
SOUTHEAST MIDLAND "WINDOW PANE" NEIGHBORHOOD IMPROVEMENT PROJECT
Vacant, dilapidated structures will be demolished and cleared. Vacant, overgrown lots and accumulations of junk, debris, abandoned vehicles, etc., will be cleared. Occupants of dilapidated housing will be provided with an opportunity to receive relocation assistance and payments so they may obtain decent, safe and sanitary dwellings. Sanitary sewer lines will be installed to eliminate use of malfunctioning septic tanks, cess pools and pit privies. Water lines will be installed to connect residences to a dependable and sanitary public water supply and to provide effective fire protection to the entire Target Area. Streets will be paved, curbed and guttered to reduce dust pollution, facilitate drainage of storm waters, improve ingress and egress to the neighborhood and improve vehicular and pedestrian safety. A building will be constructed to house a day care center aimed at expanding economic opportunities for low/moderate income residents of Midland County.

Limited grading and clearing will be involved in project construction activities but no major changes in topographic features are anticipated. No major changes in land use, population density or demand for community facilities are expected as a result of project construction or use. Existing support systems and infrastructure will not be adversely affected by the project activities. Some short-term increases in air and noise pollution may occur in the project area during the construction phase of the project but once construction is concluded, no properties, offshoots, historic, archaeological, architectural or significant will be affected by the project activities and the activities and the environment of the Target Area will be improved by proposed housing and public facilities improvements.

An Environmental Review Board respecting the within project has been made by the above-named County which documents the environmental review of the project activities and more fully sets forth the reasons why such statement is not required. The Environmental Review Board is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request in the office of the County Judge between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

have the good sense to decline. — IN THE MIDDLE TOO

DEAR IN: You make a good point. But this sticky situation could be avoided if the FAMILY would refrain from inviting former members, unless they know for sure everyone will be comfortable.

DEAR ABBY: Please referee:

Situation: Man makes luncheon date with woman — a new acquaintance. Half an hour before meeting time, woman telephones man and cancels lunch date in haste, offering no explanation. She says she will call him later in the afternoon. Man goes to lunch. As man is walking toward cashier, in walks broken lunch date with man No. 2. Man No. 1 does not know man No. 2. Man No. 1 greets woman with, "Why, hello there" or something. Woman smiles and says, "Hello" or something. Man No. 1 pays cashier and leaves.

Later that afternoon woman calls man No. 1 and accuses him of being rude and inconsiderate for not stopping to chat a moment, at least long enough to be introduced to man No. 2. Man No. 1 says "Nuts!" Who's right? — JUST CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Man No. 1. The woman is clever. She knows that the best defense is a good offense.

The descriptive copy on the NBR 23317 Dual Control Gas Grill shown in page 3 of our July 12 Summer Sale advertising supplement to the Reporter-Telegram is incorrect. The correct description is "Twin controls for separate flame settings • match free ignition • 271 sq. miles cooking area with warming rack. Stainless steel burner." The NBR 71075 window Air Conditioner shown on page 5 of our Summer Sale Preprint is incorrectly described. It is not high efficiency and has a 2 speed fan instead of a 3 speed fan. The rest of the copy and the prices are correct.

Job-hopping not that frequent

CHICAGO — Job-hopping is not as frequent a practice at the upper-management level as one might think.

John P. Kotter, an associate professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Business, recently studied a diverse cross-section of top executives and found that 91 percent spent their careers in one industry, while 81 percent stayed with one company.

Kotter predicts that this trend will continue and suggests that only through long tenure can an executive develop the in-depth knowledge and the ever-important relationships that are needed to deal successfully with many of the complexities of businesses today.

'Perfect' vacation wardrobe fails test

By ERMA BOMBECK

The ad said if I bought an 11-piece coordinated vacation wardrobe, I could make 135 clothes combinations and exist for three weeks living out of one suitcase.

The coordinated ensemble included a basic dress, reversible skirt, slacks, blouse, jacket, shorts, T-shirt, vest, two scarfs and a cap with a bill.

I will not bore you with all 135 combinations... only the interesting ones.

Three days out, I outgrew my slacks.

Four days out, I ripped the breast pocket on the jacket and could wear it only when my arms were folded or if I used one of the scarfs as a sling and pretended I had a broken arm.

Five days out, the blouse did not dry and the scarf faded over it, forcing me to wear it with the darts facing backwards.

The T-shirt shrunk on the sixth day and I found by buying another cap with a bill and joining them with a scarf I had an interesting bra for playing tennis.

The skirt was getting on everyone's nerves and one night as it stood in the corner of my room, I noted it still had my body molded in it. The next day I turned it around, put my blouse on the outside and told everyone I was expecting in four months.

Mercifully on the 11th day, the hem dropped out of the dress, giving me a new look for evenings.

The ugly oil spot on the reversible skirt penetrated both sides on the 14th day, giving me a choice of wearing my handbag on my left side or my right.

The vest was the only clean thing in my suitcase by the 17th day, but I didn't know what to do with it. When my blouse was ordered off the sight-seeing bus by a vote of 43-0, I wore it sleeveless with pins holding it together. By the 20th day, nothing mattered anymore. I wore the scarf with the oil-stained skirt, the slacks with the broken zipper with the two caps with a bill, the dress with the torn jacket, the T-shirt with the shorts. On the last night, there was a masquerade party. I went as myself and won first prize.

When I arrived home, there was one scarf that had been soaked in perfume that leaked. The fashion coordinator had thought of everything.

All I had to do was to light a match, ignite it and in time... forget all 11 pieces.

Proper painting for doors and sash

By AL CARRELL

Maybe you've heard the old saying about not putting the cart before the horse. The sequence is very important to the success of many things. Maybe you never thought that the sequence in which you paint the parts of doors and windows would be important, but it is. If you've had good results doing it in a haphazard way, fine, but just think how much better your paint job would have been if you'd done it right.

The pros have a sequence, and the National Paint and Coatings Association revealed the secret to me. Remember before you paint a window, you should mask the panes of glass.

Now you're ready to paint. The first parts will be the small narrow pieces between panes of glass, if there are any. These are called muntins or mullions. Now paint the horizontal sashes. Next the vertical sashes followed by the vertical frames. The horizontal frame parts are next. Last is the sill and the apron.

If the window is double hung, after painting the muntins and mullions, you'll want to open both sashes so the lower sash is more than halfway up, and the upper is low enough so its bottom rail (called the meeting rail) is below the lower sash. This allows you to paint the meeting rail and part of the way up the vertical sash. Then by moving the sashes, you can get all of the horizontal and vertical members of both sashes.

The wooden tracks or channels need to be painted in most cases. Metal parts should not be painted. This requires moving the sashes. Wait until they are dry to the touch, move both sashes as far down as they can go, and paint the upper part of the tracks. Then wait for that to dry and move the sashes up to complete the lower part of the tracks.

If the tracks are not to be painted, be sure to move the sashes a slight bit before the paint sets up and seals the window closed. Movement breaks the paint seal.

(Al Carrell is the author of "Super Handyman's Do-It-Quick-But-Do-It-Right Home Repair Hints," published by Prentice-Hall, Inc.)

Environmentalists oppose transfer of 'pristine' island

By MARY BARRINEAU
Dallas Times Herald

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas — Environmentalists nearly always use the word "pristine" to describe this 41-mile strip of land off the Texas coast.

They tell you it is the last barrier island along the entire Gulf Coast to avoid the encroachment of civilization. They conjure up visions of paradise as they describe the wide sand beaches, lush green grasses and the wildlife — majestic whooping cranes, ducks, deer, jackrabbits.

They tell you they're worried that two developments on the mostly federally owned island — impending rocket launches and a threatened takeover by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department — will interfere with the untouched quality of the island accessible only by boat.

They forget to mention the cow dung.

Mosquitoes are so fierce on the island that at night, the cows come down to the beach to take advantage of the breezes. When they leave in the morning, the beige sand along Matagorda's gulf beaches is covered with the manure, detracting considerably from the "pristine" atmosphere.

Despite the bugs, which caused Spanish explorers to make a quick retreat as they hurled the epithet "purgatory" at the inhospitable place, and despite the cow dung, the island is the center of a fierce debate over who will win control of 19,000 acres abandoned by the Air Force in 1975.

THE AREA IS now managed as a federal wildlife refuge, but Texas Gov. William P. Clements Jr. has asked, as have former governors, that the island be given to the state for development as a recreation area.

Interior Secretary James Watt indicated in a May 29 letter to Clements that he would prefer transferring wildlife refuges to state management wherever possible. The land could be turned over to the state if such a transfer were consistent with federal policy and law, he said.

Environmentalists, however, are horrified at the prospect of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department taking over the wintering ground for the nation's rare whooping cranes.

"Any sort of development at all could be disastrous," said John Grandy, executive vice president of Defenders of Wildlife, in Washington. "Our nation has put millions into saving the whooping crane. We have brought it back from the brink of extinction to 78 birds."

"It would be singularly absurd to give away 19,000 acres and ruin a 30-year effort," said Grandy.

NED FRITZ, a Dallas lawyer who is chairman of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, said there are plenty of developed coastal areas for tourists to enjoy. The state needs to maintain at least one island as a prime example of a natural barrier island, he said.

The state's proposal for development of the island would turn it into a "Coney Island for hunters," said Fritz.

The 1975 plan called for a ferry system to the island, a mass transit system, parking for 350 cars, blinds and stands for hunters, game cleaning areas, game refrigeration units, overnight accommodations, concessions, 800 acres of cultivated plots for mourning doves, 400 acres of corn and wheat fields for deer, covered picnic tables, a 300-foot fishing pier and chemical toilets.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Director Dicky Travis said a new plan drawn up by his staff parallels the 1975 plan to a large extent.

"It's all very tentative," he said. "We don't even have the land yet and the plan could change 10 times."

ENVIRONMENTALISTS are also concerned about the launching of a privately owned rocket at the end of the month from the south end of the island owned by Dallas oilman Toddie Lee Wynne.

Although the whooping cranes and other migratory birds have gone north for the winter and aren't on the island now to be adversely affected by the first launch, there is worry that Space Services, the Houston-based firm that is sending up the first private rockets launched in the United States, will decide to use Matagorda as a permanent launching pad.

"I'm all for the space effort, but I can't in my wildest imagination see the whooping cranes sticking around if they're shooting off rockets," said Grandy. "They're very sensitive birds."

David Hannah, president of the company, says the island would be a perfect location, but so far Wynne, a Space Services investor, hasn't given permission for additional launches.

State officials say they believe they can do a better job of managing public land on the island than the federal government.

"The United States government cannot possibly manage all of the wildlife and natural areas in existence throughout the country from either a practical or fiscal standpoint," said Clements in his letter to Watt.

"Sole fee title of the property must be transferred to the State of Texas if the wildlife and vital ecosystem are to be adequately protected and preserved," said Clements.

BUT FRITZ POINTS to statements in the 1975 state management proposal that he believes don't bode well for wildlife under state control.

"Should the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service gain control of the federal property which is located in a prime waterfowl area of the Texas coast, it has already made it known that a portion of the island in the vicinity of Panther Point will be closed to the public during the time the whooping cranes are present, which includes the traditional waterfowl season," said the plan.

"The (Texas) Parks and Wildlife Department feels that protection of the whooping cranes and their use of the island should be given priority consideration, but should not preclude use of the island merely because of the 'potential' for conflict," it continued.

Clements thinks agreement near on transfer of island

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday he thinks there is "general agreement" between state and federal officials over the proposed transfer of federal land on Matagorda Island to the state.

Clements met Monday in Houston with Ray Arnett, assistant secretary for fish, wildlife and parks for the Department of Interior, and J.R. Spradley, solicitor for the department.

Arnett and Spradley visited Matagorda Island Sunday as guests of Dallas businessman T.L. Wynne, who owns more than 11,000 acres there. They also had visited with Perry Bass, chairman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

"I find our discussions Monday resulted in general agreement," Clements said in a statement. "I don't know of any basic disagreement between us; but, at the same time, the details of working out our concept will undoubtedly take several months."

Clements said he was convinced that "no damage whatever will come to the wildlife on Matagorda Island when our Texas Parks and Wildlife Department assumes management of the lands now held by the federal government. As a matter of fact, I believe all pertinent programs will be enhanced under Texas supervision."

The governor emphasized there will be "no Coney Island atmosphere" as a result of the proposed transfer of the old Air Force bombing range lands to state control.

He said access to any recreational lands on the northeast end of the island will be "very limited" and that no vehicles would be permitted. Access will be by a small ferry operated by the state.

Clements said present plans call for some picnicking facilities, beach area access, limited fishing and possible other recreational activities strictly confined to the northern tip of the island.

He said the rest of the island would remain in its natural state.

An unidentified black man joins robed Klansmen as they picket the Cedartown, Ga., plant of the Zartie Frozen Meats and Seafood Co., Tuesday.

Black workers join Klansmen on picket line in labor dispute

CEDARTOWN, Ga. (AP) — A handful of black workers joined robed Ku Klux Klansmen on a picket line outside a food-processing plant in a labor dispute over unionization and the hiring of Mexican workers.

The Klansmen, who recently formed a group called the American Workers Union, turned out to picket Zartie Frozen Meats and Seafoods Inc. Tuesday despite an injunction issued the day before by a federal judge temporarily barring Klan demonstrations at the plant. A hearing was set for next Monday.

As the three robed Klansmen marched, they motioned black workers to join their protest against Zartie. Eight blacks joined the picketing. "We're making the history books," said James Schaffin, exalted cyclops of the Cedartown Klan Den. "We're all union here. There's no difference between us. There's no color in this union."

During a hearing Monday before U.S. District Judge Harold Murphy, Dr. Edward Fields, a Marietta chiropractor representing the Klan, said the pickets were protesting Zartie's alleged hiring of illegal aliens from Mexico.

But Klan picketers Tuesday said they were trying to gain union recognition from Zartie and improve working conditions at the plant, which employs 120 workers — 25 of them Hispanic. About half the workforce stayed home Tuesday, company officials said.

When told that James "Bear" Wells, nighthawk of the local Klan, is president of the fledgling union, one unidentified black worker replied: "You're talking about one of those dudes up there in sheets? It don't matter to me. He's OK with me if he can help us get the union."

Zartie Vice President Gerald Clark said company attorneys might seek a contempt citation against Klan members for ignoring the judge's order. As to allegations that the company employed illegal aliens, Clark said he did not know how the firm's Hispanic employees entered the United States.

A company statement accused the Klan of using the union to exploit the workers.

The company said it believes "this terrorist organization is merely obscuring its demands that we terminate Mexican-American employees with other seemingly legal demands. We think the Klan is merely trying to cloak itself with an aura of respectability to hide its true purpose."

Frank Baulding, president of the Polk County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, met with Zartie officials Tuesday. Later he told picketing black workers they might lose their jobs if they didn't return to work. "It's really strange," Baulding said as he watched workers gathered beside a pickup truck on which Klansmen stood.

"You know they're trying to get rid of illegal aliens," he told some of the blacks, asking them to consider, "Who's going to be next?"

Senate panel approves proposed water fund

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has approved Speaker Bill Clayton's proposed water trust fund, despite one member's prediction that his colleagues were leading Texans toward a state income tax.

The committee voted 9-3 on Tuesday to send the measure to the Senate floor. Sens. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, and Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls voted against the plan.

"The end result is an income tax, in my opinion, in this state," Parker said. "Those people who vote for this water plan deserve credit for putting us on the road to an income tax in this state as sure as night follows day."

Clayton wants half of the state's revenue surplus to be used for water projects across the state. He also wants the state to pledge up to $500 million in credit to back local bond issues needed for water projects.

The speaker has denied accusations that the plan would lead to new taxes.

If approved by both the Senate, and signed by the governor, Texans would vote on a constitutional amendment that would set up the water fund.

Resolution restoring SS benefits passes in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats expected to lose when their majority leader, Rep. Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, put a resolution before the House of Representatives urging that Social Security minimum benefits be restored.

With Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., urging his colleagues to vote for the resolution, the proposal passed easily Tuesday by a vote of 405-13.

Michel, the minority leader, criticized Wright for introducing the legislation, saying it had no legal standing even if it passed and that Democrats were just trying to embarrass Republicans by forcing them to vote against Social Security benefits.

The resolution would have no legal standing, since the benefits were deleted by both the House and Senate budget bills, and conferees now reconciling the differences are forbidden to re-open areas where both agreed.

The measure required two-thirds approval for passage, but by voting down Wright's resolution, congressmen could be embarrassed by having to vote against restoration of Social Security benefits.

"You play out your hand with this resolution. As far as I'm concerned, every member on our side ought to vote in favor of this resolution," Michel added.

"Not to join in the hypocrisy of it all, but to demonstrate once and for all that you're going to have to get up a lot earlier in the morning to make us your political pawns," Michel said.

Wright's resolution said the elimination in minimum Social Security benefits will reduce aid for two million current recipients and urged "that the necessary steps be taken to insure that Social Security benefits are not reduced for those currently receiving them."

Michel said the resolution "will resolve nothing. It has no force of law. It is not binding. This resolution ... is meaningless."

Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, was one of only three Democrats who voted "nay," and his was the only negative vote among the Texas delegation, although Jim Mattox, D-Dallas, did not vote.

Gramm spoke against the resolution on the floor.

"I told them I wasn't trying to sway anybody's vote, but I thought it important to point out the paradox on this resolution," Gramm said.

"And that is, that it's not the needy and deserving that would get their benefits reinstated here — they won't lose a dime. The ones who would be kept on the rolls, if this roll actually did have teeth or meaning, are the non-needy retirees who average over $20,000 a year in outside benefits and who have paid an average of $355 total into Social Security in their lifetime."

The vote in the House came as elderly people met outside the capitol in a large rally to protest proposed cuts in Social Security announced earlier by President Reagan.

In urging his colleagues to support Wright's resolution, Michel said: "The only thing to be decided on the floor today is who will keep the advantage in the bidding war over the Social Security issue."

He added, "I am going to gamble that the working people of this country, whose backs are being broken by increased Social Security taxes, and even those receiving Social Security now, won't agree with the complete restoration of the minimum benefit when they learn the truth."

The truth, the minority leader added, "is that the minimum benefit is being abused, like food stamps, low income energy assistance or trade adjustment."

Russ Francis shocks NFL's Patriots by retiring

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

An All-Pro left the National Football League and an All-American joined it Tuesday in the most significant training camp developments.

Russ Francis, the star tight end for the New England Patriots and a three-time All-Pro in six NFL seasons, retired for "personal reasons" in a move that shocked the team.

"I've given it some thought over the last couple of months," said the 6-foot-6, 242-pound Francis. "Obviously a career change is something you do not do impulsively. It's for personal reasons and reasons I really can't go into at this point."

"I feel the best thing for Russ Francis at this point in my career is to retire, and that is what I've chosen to do," he added. "There are some problems I've had philosophically with the game of football, but it has been a lot of fun. It is a good game. There are conflicting thoughts, when I think about it, but I'm going to miss it."

Francis was scheduled to report to the Patriots' camp in Smithfield, R.I., on Friday.

A statement issued by the team said: "We are in complete shock with Russ' intentions, considering the fact training camp has just begun. The timing of this is inconsistent with Russ Francis' character in that he has always been very considerate of Patriots' management and his teammates."

While Francis was saying goodbye to the NFL, Mark

May was saying hello to the Washington Redskins. May, the Outland Trophy winner as the nation's top collegiate interior lineman last year, signed a series of four one-year contracts.

The offensive tackle from Pitt could collect $350,000 in salary, signing bonus and incentives during the first year of the pact, according to sources familiar with the contract.

"Right now, my goals are to go in and help contribute to the team and hopefully become a starter," said May, the Redskins' first-round draft pick who is expected to replace recently retired Terry Hermeling at tackle. "It's not going to be an easy task but nothing really is."

May had been actively pursued by the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, a team which signed the Pittsburgh Steelers' top draft pick, defensive tackle Keith Gary of Oklahoma, last week.

May's teammate at Pitt, defensive lineman Greg Meisner, signed three one-year contracts with the Los Angeles Rams. Meisner, who suffered head and back injuries when he was assaulted on June 13 at a private club in New Kensington, Pa., still has an inner ear problem and won't be able to work out for at least a few weeks.

St. Louis signed starting linebacker Steve Nells to a series of one-year contracts; Denver inked veteran wide receiver Jimmy Robinson, and San Francisco acquired running back Artie Owens from New Orleans for an undisclosed 1982 draft choice.

Houston cut five rookies and placed veteran offensive lineman Conway Hayman, who has a back problem, on the unable to perform list, while Philadelphia cut 15 rookie free agents.

Donovan ramrods strike talks with news blackout

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the negotiators in the major league baseball strike finally leave Washington, they undoubtedly will remember the face of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

For the better part of the last two days, Donovan has attended talks between the Major League Players Association and the Player Relations Committee, the club owners' bargaining arm.

He was due back today at 10 a.m. EDT, as the teams returned to the ninth floor of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service headquarters.

At Donovan's urging, a news blackout has been placed on the talks. So the parties refused to say after Tuesday's seven-hour session if progress had been made toward ending the strike, which has wiped out 490 games — 24 percent of the 2,106-game season.

"I really don't have anything to say. The government's involved," said Bob Boone, the Philadelphia Phillies' catcher and National League player representative.

"I hope you understand," Doug DeCinces, the Baltimore Orioles' third baseman and American League player rep, said as reporters approached.

MARVIN MILLER, executive director of the players' union, also refused to discuss the talks, but said the two sides probably would be meeting each day even if no progress was being made.

"We have a duty to bargain," he said. "And, I might say jocularly, 'Where else do I have to go?'"

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also was in Washington.

"The Commissioner feels it is important to be close to the scene," said Bob Wirtz, a spokesman for the commissioner's office. "He is not involved in the negotiations and how long he stays depends on what develops."

Miller added that, in theory, the blackout should help achieve a settlement on the free-agent compensation issue.

"If it works, my feeling will be that it's very good," said Miller, adding that the blackout's effect on the players' bargaining position "depends on how long it lasts."

Donovan, Kenneth Moffett, the federal mediator who has handled the baseball case for the last two years, and the PRC team headed by director Raymond Grebey were unavailable for comment.

TUESDAY'S SESSION started at 9:30 a.m. and lasted until 5:30 p.m., with the session interrupted for 1½ hours as Donovan left to address the Urban League convention at the Shoreham Hotel.

"The two sides met both separately and in joint session, and the secretary attended all sessions that the mediators sat in on," said Nancy Broff, the acting general counsel for the Mediation and Conciliation Service.

She refused to discuss the substance of the day's meetings.

The key issue in the strike is how teams losing free agents will be compensated. Until now, the only compensation has been an amateur draft choice from the signing team, but the owners want professional players as compensation when quality players change teams.

The owners propose direct compensation from the signing to the losing team. The players say they'll accept professional compensation but had been holding out for a talent pool arrangement rather than direct compensation. Another issue, raised last week in New York as talks broke down, is that of service credit. The players want full credit for time lost during the strike, but the owners have said they are unwilling to give credit for any time lost before last Thursday.

Service time is used to determine eligibility for such things as pensions, salary arbitration and the free-agent draft.

MILLER HAS stressed the unity of the players during the strike. But the first crack in that wall appeared Tuesday in Detroit.

Several members of the Tigers told the Grand Rapids Press that they were unhappy about how the strike was being conducted, and felt they had not been consulted enough by player rep Milt Wilcox.

"Maybe a few players are willing to give up everything they have. I'd have to file for bankruptcy and start over," said outfielder Steve Kemp. "I could lead a normal life, but I'd have to give up a lot of things."

Pitcher Dan Schatzeder said Wilcox was not in touch with his teammates.

"Milt hasn't called me," Schatzeder said. "We're not getting feedback, and if our player reps don't know how we feel then Marvin doesn't know."

Miller said the problem in Detroit could stem from wrong or outdated telephone numbers some players supplied to Wilcox.

"Since they know where Milt Wilcox is and where our office is, that problem can be easily rectified," he said.

SOME PLAYER representatives did not agree with Schatzeder.

"I've been in contact with our players in our area and I talked to the others earlier who are not here," said Tim Blackwell, the player rep of the Chicago Cubs. "We don't have anybody saying anything like what they are saying. As for Wilcox not calling anybody and informing them, why don't the players call Wilcox? It's a two-way street. It would be easy to check. The press has had no trouble at all in reaching the player reps."

Crack develops in Detroit

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Half of the major league baseball players would vote to end the strike because most "don't know what's going on," says Detroit Tigers outfielder Champ Summers.

Major league baseball owners are using "stall tactics" and "propaganda" while collecting insurance payments for lost games in an effort to break the strike, Summers told the Grand Rapids Press on Monday.

"The owners definitely want to break us down," Summers said. "I'm afraid that if a poll was taken, half the players would break down. That would show weakness. I don't believe three-fourths of them know what's going on."

Two of Summers' teammates also said they were unhappy with the team's player representative, pitcher Milt Wilcox.

Carter licks water habit by winning shot put title

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Shot-putter Michael Carter won the first gold medal for the United States at the World University Games, but felt he would have had a better winning performance if he weren't all dried out.

Carter, of Southern Methodist University, heaved the shot 66 feet, 3 inches (20.19 meters) Tuesday and beat silver medalist Detlef Mortag of East Germany and bronze medalist Dalibor Vasecek of Czechoslovakia.

Still, he was unhappy about what he described as one of his worst performances of the season.

"I've been told not to drink the water, so I feel dehydrated, and I haven't been eating right," said Carter. "I've been getting no nutrition."

The highlight of the day for local fans was two-time Olympic gymnastics champion Nadia Comaneci earning perfect scores of 10 in the vault and floor exercises, helping Romania to two gold medals and the lead in the World University Games standings.

After the second day of competition, the Romanians had collected four gold medals, all in gymnastics, the Soviet Union had three and the Americans and Chinese one each.

The Romanian women gymnasts beat the Soviets 118 points to 116.20 in the team competition and Comaneci won the individual all-around title with 39.40 points.

Chinese diver Li Yuhua won the women's springboard title with 500.82 points, ahead of American Megan Russ Francis of the New England Patriots, shown here after a 1978 semifinal playoff loss against Houston, told his team Tuesday that he is retiring after six seasons in the NFL.

Outfielder Steve Kemp, the team's alternate player representative, said he has not been contacted by Wilcox.

"I don't know why Milt hasn't called and why Phil Garner (the player representative for the Pittsburgh Pirates) knows exactly what's going on," said Kemp in a telephone interview from his Laguna Niguel, Calif., home.

"I just talked to Jason (Thompson) and he said Garner is polling all the (Pirates) players to see if they're willing to strike the whole season. Jason said Garner told him the situation is not good."

Pitcher Dan Schatzeder, contacted at his home in Aurora, Colo., said he felt that all of the 650 players have not had sufficient involvement in the negotiations.

"Every time something is said, they talk about how this affects the 'big boys,'" Schatzeder said. "Reggie (Jackson) has his Panasonics, but the majority (of the players) haven't had enough of a voice."

"Milt hasn't called me. We're not getting feedback and if our player reps don't know how we feel, then Marvin (Miller) doesn't know."

"I wish I could afford this, but I don't want anyone playing chess with my money," Summers said.

Summers, a 33-year-old outfielder who thinks both sides should "bend a little," said he would "not object to surrendering service time, one major obstacle in the negotiations between bargainers for baseball club owners and players."

"Service time does not hurt me," he told the newspaper. "I won't be a martyr and give up $200,000 so Steve Kemp can become a free agent."

Kemp said he had no bad feelings about Summers' sentiments.

"He wants to put food on his table, but it's too bad he thinks this deals with me because there are a lot of people concerned," said Kemp.

Drillers' Scott to spice Star tilt

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Who's on first? ... at shortstop? How about left field? ... or right?

The answer, with apologies to Abbott and Costello, is easy: That's the Tulsa Drillers' Marty Scott.

Scott will be playing all nine positions Wednesday when the Drillers host the Texas League All-Stars in Sutton Stadium.

Since Scott, 26, is a player-coach for the Class AA farm team of the Texas Rangers, he may have a one-position advantage over the handful of major leaguers who have filled all nine slots in a game.

"This is the ultimate for a utility player," said Scott.

Drillers manager Merrill Eckstein suggested the multiple roles to Scott as "something for the fans to enjoy" during the All-Star contest.

About 3,000 people are expected at 3-month-old Sutton Stadium Wednesday night for the All-Star game. It will be one of a few All-Star games played in the country this year. The major league version fell victim to the players' strike.

Scott, from Hurst, Texas, says his fifth season as a professional baseball player will be his last. Drillers spokesmen say the 6-foot, 190-pound all-purpose player "is being groomed" for a management position in the farm system.

"He's a really sharp kid," a spokesman said.

So what's such a bright guy doing trying to come at the All-Stars from every direction?

"I wouldn't have agreed to it if I didn't think I could do it without embarrassing myself," Scott said.

Scott, a product of Dallas Baptist, was selected as the utility infielder in All-Star balloting July 15. When the game was set against Tulsa, he was replaced on the All-Star roster.

His most accustomed position is third base, but he has played every position on the field.

Scott will start the first inning as catcher for former Yale hurler Ron Darling, a top Texas Rangers draft choice.

Football tickets to go on sale

Season football tickets for both Midland High and Midland Lee will go on sale to current option holders July 28 at the athletic office at Memorial Stadium. The office will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., including the lunch hour.

Option holders are persons having season tickets last year. Option holders will have through Friday, Aug. 14, to renew their options. Beginning Monday, Aug. 17, all remaining tickets will be sold to the general public on a first come basis. Season ticket sales will close Friday, Aug. 28.

The cost for Midland High season tickets this year will be $18 while Lee's season tickets will go for $12. MHS season tickets covers all six home games, including the MHS-Lee battle at the end of the year since MHS will be the home team this year. Lee's season tickets includes the Rebels' four home games, but does not include the MHS-Lee game. Lee fans will have to purchase tickets for the MHS game during the week of that game, which is Nov. 13.

Those not buying season tickets will have to purchase pre-game tickets the week of the game one wants to attend. Pre-game tickets will be sold each week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays and until 1 p.m. each Friday during the season.

There has been an increase in adult tickets this year. Adult tickets will go for $4 per ticket. Student pre-game tickets are still $1 and $2 at the gate.

Midland High opens the season Sept. 4 at Memorial Stadium against Amarillo Tascosa at 8 p.m. Lee travels to Killeen on the same date for a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Other designated home games for MHS are Odessa Permian, Oct. 2; Big Spring, Oct. 9; Odessa High, Oct. 30; Abilene Cooper, Nov. 6; and Lee, Nov. 13. The away games include Andrews, Sept. 11; Lubbock Monterey, Sept. 18; Abilene High, Oct. 16; and San Angelo, Oct. 23. All the games are set for 8 p.m. with the exception of the Monterey game which has been set for 7:30 p.m.

Lee's designated home contests are Snyder, Sept. 11; Plainview, Sept. 18; Abilene Cooper, Oct. 16; and Big Spring, Oct. 23. Lee's other away games are Odessa High, Oct. 2; San Angelo, Oct. 9; Odessa Permian, Oct. 30; Abilene High, Nov. 6; and MHS, Nov. 13. All of Lee's games are at 8 p.m. with the exception of the Killeen contest.

Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White goes back for a pass Tuesday during practice at Cowboys' training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif. White was an early arriver to camp. He reported to camp Monday instead of Tuesday when the Pokes veterans were required to be in pads.

Boyer blazes trail for Uncle Sam

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

You can wrap him up in red, white and blue because Jonathan Boyer is one Yankee doodle dandy.

For 67 years, the Tour de France, which is something like the World Series and Super Bowl of cycling, got along very well, thank you, without benefit of a single American contestant.

But last weekend, Boyer became the pioneer, a trailblazer for Uncle Sam, when he finished 32nd in the grueling 21-day, 2,500-mile test of skill and stamina which runs from Nice to Paris.

HAVING AN American in the Tour de France is like having a Frenchman playing second base for the New York Yankees — rather unusual, to say the very least. But for Boyer, it was the most natural thing in the world because he's been cycling so long.

"For me," he said, "any day I'm not riding feels odd. I'm always on a bike."

He will compete in 20 races next month on the European circuit, and a rider is good for 60 miles or so per day in every race he enters. The big one, though, is the Tour de France where it's routine to clock 150 miles a day through the French countryside or in the heart of a city, up one Alp and down another.

"The race was everything I expected it to be," said Boyer, who competed as part of the winning Renault-Gitane team, led by Bernard Hinault, who captured the Tour for the third time in the last four years. "It was just as hard as I thought it would be. It is a race you cannot underestimate."

Boyer's finish was remarkable when you consider that it was his first time in this race. "I was hoping to do better than 32nd, but it's up there," he said. "The most important thing is our team won and all of us finished in the top 50."

Cycling is an interesting combination of team and individual efforts. Each racer goes against the clock with cumulative times added up to determine his place at the finish. But each must also be concerned with the leader of his team — in Renault-Gitane's case, that was Hinault. "There are 10 members on a team and the job of the others is to minimize the efforts of the leader, block the wind for him," Boyer said.

SO BOYER had the satisfaction of Hinault's victory to go with his own finish. It was a formidable beginning for the slender 25-year-old who first started riding in Carmel, Calif., when he pedaled 10 miles a day to school. Boyer's cycling progress was swift and he was a candidate for the Tour de France as long as four years ago. But injury and illness interfered and the Tour had to get along without him until 1981.

When he got there, though, the French welcomed Boyer warmly. Jonathan became "Jacques," a natural evolution from his American nickname, "Jack."

"In France they call me 'Jacques,' in England, they call me 'Jack,' and in America, they call me 'John,'" he said. "I answer to almost anything."

Boyer was a favorite of the French crowds because, after all, here was an American in the big race at last, munching on his apples and sandwiches from the musette bag around his neck, and keeping up a 30-mile per hour pace, just like the great European riders.

"They found it... well, interesting, I guess," he said. "They were pretty surprised. I was quite an attraction for them."

Next year, American involvement in the Tour de France will be expanded by the inclusion of a United States professional cycling team in the race, sponsored by World Tour Cycling. Boyer, the pioneer, will be back, too.

Racing in this event, well, it's what I always wanted to do," he said. "It took a lot of determination and plugging for me, but I finally made it."

FIVE DAYS before his scheduled debut in the race four years ago, Boyer cracked up his bike in a collision with a granite wall and had to pull out. The next year, he contracted a mysterious infection after representing the United States in the world championships in Venezuela and was sidelined for the better part of two years.

Cycling, you see, can be dangerous. But then, so can other activities.

"One time," said Boyer, "I broke both wrists and three toes." "How did it happen?" "I fell out of a tree."

Bicycle Motocross action is hot and heavy every Thursday at the Midland-Odessa BMX track, located on Highway 80 one mile east of the airport. Race signups are at 6 p.m. the next two Thursday's and there is a class for all ages. Race fees are $6 for the NBA and Open classes and $5 for beginners.

Ferguson is ready to test NFL market

FREDONIA, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson, in the option year of the contract he signed in 1975, has declared he is ready to test free agency if a new deal cannot be worked out with the National Football League team.

"I've made up my mind," Ferguson said Tuesday. "If they don't want to get it settled, then they can get ready for me to go."

"I hope they (management) can get everything settled because we have everything going for us," he added. "It doesn't seem like there's been a great effort on their part."

Ferguson, 31, is one of the best-paid Bills. He said he has no complaints about his current $230,000-per-year contract, but wants his future financial relationship with the Bills settled "today, tomorrow — anytime quickly."

lines for a new contract were drawn up but I haven't heard anything from the Bills since then. I just want it settled."

"I'm shooting for five more seasons, and I want to be here," Ferguson said. "It's great because I'm in my prime and so is the team. I was worried three years ago. I was one of the guys who wanted to get out," said Ferguson.

"A couple of years ago Willie Parker and I started crossing out guys on the 1974 team photo (the last previous Bills playoff team) and 25 or 30 were gone. We let a lot of people go and got nothing in return."

"Now we have Jim Haslett and Fred Smerlas wanting new contracts, Joe Devlin and Mario Clark playing out their options, and myself. These are mainstays, five people with All-Pro potential. We just have to clear everything up."

Bullet may end young career

HOUSTON (AP) — Aspiring baseball player Marty Leet faces surgery on his pitching arm late this week for a bullet wound which may end his career before it starts. But the 19-year-old says he's just glad to be alive.

"I remember having this sort of dream, I guess, and telling myself over and over not to die," he said. "I know I'm darned lucky to be alive."

The former Louisville, Ky., schoolboy athlete was shot nine times July 14 when he was confronted by two masked men when he and his date stopped to wash his car about midnight. One of the bullets pierced his heart, doctors at Ben Taub Hospital said.

"I only had about $5 in my wallet," Leet said. "I threw it to the guy with the gun. He said something about it not being a play gun and I'd better think he was serious."

Leet said the men demanded the keys to his car and that he stepped in front of his date to shield her. The next thing he knew, he said, his body was full of bullets.

Leet has been moved to a private hospital, where he will undergo orthopedic surgery on his arm.

Although he played several sports in high school, Leet says his main interest is pitching baseball.

"I had a tryout with the Cincinnati Reds and was going to see the Houston Astros at some point," he said.

Former Cowboy says broker took $8 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboy Billy H. Howton, 51, testified Tuesday that a commodities dealer who was shot to death last year took $8 million from him and another Houston investment broker on trial for fraud and left them holding the bag.

Howton told a federal jury that he and Vining Tower Reynolds Jr., 39, officers of First Financial Group of Texas, gave Bob Kahn investments from numerous institutions because Kahn said he could make profits sky-rocket.

When the 29-year-old Kahn lost the money, he and Reynolds were unable to repay it, Howton testified.

Howton, Reynolds and Memphis, Tenn., securities salesman Larry T. Lee are charged with mail and wire fraud in an alleged 1979 scheme to sell non-existent guaranteed student loan packages to a university, a bank, two savings and loans and two insurance companies.

"I don't deny that we owe the money," Howton said.

Defense lawyer James Moore has argued the matter should be a civil proceeding, not a criminal trial.

Prosecutors say the defendants promised either to repay the money with interest or to turn over the student loan packages to the investors within 90 days.

Howton, Reynolds and Lee are also "primary suspects" in the unsolved murder of Kahn, whose body was pulled from the Brazos River at Richmond, Texas, just before he was to testify before a grand jury the week of April 1, 1980, Fort Bend District Attorney William A. Meitzen has said.

Kahn was shot once in the chest. No arrests have been made. Meitzen said.

Transition has been easy for Davis Cup captain

MIAMI (AP) — The transition from winning player to nonplaying captain of the U.S. Davis Cup Team has been an easy one, says Arthur Ashe, whose booming serve and backhand once won major titles on the tennis courts.

"I don't really miss playing," Ashe said Tuesday at the Doral Country Club, where he is the club professional.

"For me it's a natural progression to go from Junior Davis Cupper in 1960 to the Davis Cup team from 1963 through 1978. When your playing days are over and you're fortunate enough to become captain, then you become one."

Quadruple-bypass heart surgery ended the 1975 Wimbledon champion's playing career.

"I love being captain," Ashe said. "It's a challenge and I get just as nervous as the players. I know what they're going through."

Ashe said he believes the United States' 1981 Davis Cup team is its strongest in 35 years.

That strength was evident in a convincing quarterfinal victory over Czechoslovakia, the defending Davis Cup champion. The next test will be the semifinals in October, when the United States faces Australia in Portland, Ore.

Ashe has two Wimbledon champs — John McEnroe of 1981 and Jimmy Connors of 1974 — on his team, a luxury which few Davis Cup captains have had. He also has one of the world's best doubles tandems in Stan Smith and Bob Lutz.

Ashe, who was to play golf today with Connors at Doral, said he didn't ask Connors to play on the team. It was Connors who brought up the idea of returning to Davis Cup play in January, he said. Connors hadn't played for the United States since 1976.

Ashe said he doesn't have problems keeping the fiery McEnroe in line and even believes his behavior is improving.

"We have our differences and disagreements on the court. That's the way it is between a captain and a player. I don't mind the volatility just as long as he goes out and wins," said Ashe.

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — For Tony Dorsett, life in the National Football League remains disturbing.

Although he has exceeded 1,000 yards in ground gained annually — becoming the first in the NFL to do so in his first four years — the Dallas Cowboys running back still isn't a recognized All-Pro.

Most of the ball-carrying honors in his time have gone to others, including Earl Campbell, Walter Payton, Wilbert Montgomery and even Otis Anderson.

Dorsett knows why he has been shortchanged over the years.

"I've got to carry the ball 25 times a game to be effective," he said the other day. "In the pros, anybody would."

INSTEAD, HE averaged 17 runs a game last year, matching his career figure as a Cowboy. And at their Thousand Oaks training camp last week, the Dallas coaches were planning more of the same.

"Tony lacks the real size to carry it 25 or 30 times a game," Coach Tom Landry said of his 5-11, 190-pound back. "If we'd push him hard — let him carry as much as he can regardless of injuries — I doubt if he'd have the success he's had."

So the decision has been made. But is it the right one? Is he actually one of those tough little backs who can make it in a big way as a workhorse?

To consider those questions, a reporter called a few witnesses, including USC Coach John Robinson, Harvard Coach Joe Restic, Landry, Dorsett and Dallas vice president Gil Brandt.

They provided two things: some insight into the role of 1980s running backs and several votes for the club's position.

Robinson, whose Trojan tailbacks typically have been workhorses, said:

"You have to make a distinction between college and pro runners. A good college back of any size — Ricky Bell (215), O.J. Simpson (210) or Charles White (180) — gets stronger as the game goes along. We couldn't give White the ball often enough. But in pro ball, it's a fact that the most productive backs — those who get the ball all the time and go with it — have all been good-sized physical specimens: Campbell, O.J., Franco Harris, Jim Brown, even Payton. Payton (5-10) is shorter than Dorsett but he's a much bigger man (202)."

Restic, the offensive expert who serves Los Angeles Rams Coach Ray Malavasi as an adviser, said:

"I question whether any pro running back today can keep his health very long carrying the ball 25 times a week. The change to the 16-game schedule has been harder on running backs and the running game than any other phase of football. The longer schedule is the real reason you're seeing more passing today. The coaches just can't afford to subject their good running backs to all that pounding. When you build a game plan around a running back and he limps out in the second quarter, you've had it. The smarter pro coaches are all throwing."

RESTIC THINKS Landry's use of Dorsett is the wave of the future.

"The backs who last in the 1980s," he said, "will be the good receivers who get the ball in the open field — not the ones who pound away from scrimmage."

Brandt: "I'm a Dorsett fan. He is as tough as they come, any size. He's gained 1,000 yards every year of his life — four in college (Pittsburgh) and four with us — and a 190-pound running back could never do that unless he was as tough as the big ones. Or tougher. No back of any size ever averaged 1,000 yards for eight straight years. So I think Tony could carry the ball more often for us than he does ... but let me say this: It would be a gamble, an unnecessary gamble, considering the size and speed of the defensive people in this league. It's a lot more important for Dorsett, for Landry, for all of us, to be in the playoffs in January than go for records in October."

Robinson: "One reason they might decide to give Dorsett a few more carries sometimes is that he sees himself as a tough guy — as Charles White did — and you can depend on that kind to put out. The great backs I've known have all been of two types. The difference is psychological, not physical, oddly enough, and it comes down to what they think of themselves. They see themselves as either a tough back or an elusive back."

A pro team can use both kinds, Robinson said.

"On our team we coach them all to be tough, to be aggressive. Our approach is to sell them on the idea that the same play that gains two yards in the second quarter will gain seven in the fourth because we're wearing down the other guys. If they really buy that, they actually get stronger as the game goes along. I think Dorsett would get stronger and more productive in the second half, too, but in the pros there's a limit to how much you can wear down 250-pound defensive people with 190-pound backs. Those huge defensive guys are just about as quick as you are. That's what's different about pro ball."

Restic: "The basic physical problem today for a running back of any size is that the defenses are so specialized and sophisticated as well as so quick. The specialists in an 11-man run defense will just crush you if you keep running on running downs. You can surprise them and run on one in a while on a passing down, but not too often. Carrying the ball 25 times on a Sunday afternoon is taking your life in your hands."

LANDRY: "Wilbert Montgomery (the Philadelphia back who missed six games last season) was crippled and limping a lot (in many other games). That is the price you have to pay if you want a runner to gain a lot of yards. We don't want that. I want somebody I can depend on week in and out instead of somebody who gains 1,600 or 1,800 yards."

Brandt: "I happen to think it's a good thing for Tony Dorsett that his coach is in a secure and stable situation. Some coaches don't know if they'll be around next year. An insecure head coach, getting pressure from a talented running back to carry the ball, would probably say the hell with it, let's take a chance and give it to him. But Landry doesn't have to do that. He knows he'll be back next year. My prediction is that Landry and Dorsett will both be around for a long time."

Dorsett remains unimpressed with all the logic.

"I don't think I'm being unreasonable," he said, "when I ask for 25 (carries a game). I'm going to do everything I can to convince them."

"I'm at a stage now where it's time to get more serious about my job, my life," said Dorsett, who was married in the off season to a football fan from Oxnard, Calif., Julie Simon, whom he met at training camp last summer. "Marriage has added a lot of stability to my life."

The other big change in Dorsett is his new commitment to workouts and weight-lifting. Whereas he appeared in the Dallas weight room only a few times in previous off seasons, he was an almost daily regular there this spring.

Rogers rides golf high

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Bill Rogers was still riding an emotional career high from his British Open triumph when he teed off for a practice round Tuesday for the $300,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"It was the greatest thing that's happened to me in golf. I still haven't come down and, really, it hasn't hit me yet," said Rogers, who scored the first major triumph of his career Sunday on the Royal St. George's golf links in Sandwich, England.

He took an immobile stance, rock-still, his eyes wide and staring.

"Just like that," he said. "I'll be messing around or something, and all of a sudden it'll hit me just like that."

He hasn't even begun to tote up the rewards and

Rangers' Robinson has plan to end the season

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Ranger Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson has come up with a plan proposing the end of the regulation major league baseball season for Sept. 24th — if and when the strike is settled.

Robinson's plan would end the regulation season on Sept. 24 instead of Oct. 4 with the top four teams in each division eligible for the playoffs.

The proposal would have the first and fourth place teams and the second in third place teams in each division play a best two-out-of-three series, then the two survivors in each division would play a five-game series beginning Sept. 29 to determine the Division champions.

Robinson said the division winners would then play for the American and National League titles and a spot in the World Series.

potential rewards from a victory in the oldest of all the world's golf championships.

"Does this get me in the Tournament of Champions?" he asked while receiving congratulations from his fellow pros in the locker room of the Kingsmill Golf Club course, site of this week's PGA Tour event which begins Thursday.

"It does? And five years at the Masters? Well, hold on."

One other benefit already surfaced.

He received an immediate invitation to compete in the 16-man field for the World Match Play Championship outside of London this fall, an event he won two years ago.

"I jumped all over that invitation," Rogers said. "I love that tournament. It's really fun."

But it added to an already-crowded schedule for Rogers, who has a habit of playing his best when abroad. He's taken only two titles on the American tour, but he's won four times in big-money foreign events.

"I've got five more foreign trips this year," Rogers said, and ticked them off: two trips to Japan, the Match Play Championship, another return to England for the Ryder Cup matches and, probably, a trip to Australia.

He heads a field of 156 who will be playing the Kingsmill course in competition for the first time. And Ben Crenshaw is in the peculiar position of being a defending champion on a course he's never seen.

Crenshaw won this title last year when the tournament was played in Napa, Calif., before moving to its new, permanent site in the Virginia Tidewater country.

The course, 6,822 yards long and playing to a par of 71, is rolling country wrapped around five lakes and ponds and overlooking the broad expanse of the James River.

Shoemaker may retire

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bill Shoemaker, far and away the winningest jockey in the history of thoroughbred horse racing, admits that he will retire as a rider in the not too distant future.

"My days as a rider are numbered," Shoemaker told the San Diego Tribune while preparing for today's opening of Del Mar's 42nd summer thoroughbred racing season. "The time for me to retire is not far off. I can't say it will be tomorrow or the day after, but the time is drawing near."

Shoemaker, who turns 50 next month, won the 8,028th race of his career at Hollywood Park Monday, capturing the $226,050 Sunset Handicap aboard Galaxy Libra. It was the 12th time he had been aboard the Sunset winner.

Shoemaker, who has been a jockey since the late 1940s, said he would probably become a trainer after retiring from riding.

Judge sustains charges in strangler case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — District Attorney John Van De Kamp says he may call in a special prosecutor to try Angelo Buono on 10 "Hillside Strangler" murder charges now that a judge has refused to dismiss the case.

But first, Van De Kamp said Tuesday, he might submit more information in an effort to persuade the judge to change his mind.

"We tend to think there is additional information that could help (Superior Court) Judge (Ronald) George should he decide

General honored

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has proclaimed Thursday as Gen. Sidney S. Sherman Day in Texas in memory of the officer who is credited with raising the battle cry, "Remember the Alamo."

to keep his ruling open," Van De Kamp said.

Van De Kamp's office recommended dismissal of the case against Buono, who was charged in a string of slayings of young women whose bodies were dumped on hillsides in 1977 and 1978. Prosecutors said a key witness in the case, Kenneth Bianchi, Buono's cousin and confessed strangler, gave conflicting accounts of the killings.

But on Tuesday, George shocked prosecutors and defense attorneys by rejecting the dismissal request.

George, saying he would not be a "rubber stamp" for the prosecution, insisted a jury should decide Buono's fate. He set another pre-trial hearing for July 28 and left the scheduled trial date of Sept. 15 for the murder charges.

Buono, 46, also faces a separate trial on 11 non-murder sex-related counts including pimping, pandering and sodomy.

"There are no reasons founded on prosecutorial ethics that would preclude the district attorney from continuing the prosecution of this case," the judge said.

"It's very unusual to be in a position where both sides are asking you to do something and you don't do it," George said later. "The natural inclination is if both sides want you to do it you go along and don't make waves."

Deputy District Attorney Roger Kelly had argued that Bianchi, who has confessed in the killings, had told so many conflicting stories in recent weeks he could not give credible testimony against his cousin, Buono.

George, who heard Bianchi give conflicting testimony in the case two weeks ago, noted that in spite of memory lapses and recantations, Bianchi has remained consistent on one point — Buono's alleged involvement in the slayings.

In his ruling, the judge criticized prosecutors for publicly disparaging their own witness' credibility.

"The court fully expects the district attorney's office to vigorously and effectively resume its prosecution of the murder charges," said George, adding if such action is not taken he would refer the matter to the state attorney general for prosecution.

Van De Kamp, however, said he already planned to consult with Attorney General George Deukmejian about possible appointment of a special prosecutor.

Bianchi, 30, who pleaded guilty to five of the Hillside Strangler killings here and two similar murders in Bellingham, Wash., has been sentenced to life in prison in both states. He agreed to testify against his cousin in a plea bargain to avoid the death penalty.

Angelo Buono sits with one of his attorneys, Katherine Mader, as they listen Tuesday, as Superior Court Judge Ronald George refused to dismiss 10 Hillside Strangler murder charges against Buono. Judge George made the decision saying he believes Buono's guilt or innocence should be decided by a jury.

Sheriff will continue investigation

RIPLEY, Tenn. (AP) — Lauderdale County authorities say they aren't ready to close the book on the bizarre story of a local minister who disappeared for six days only to turn up in Texas in a casket.

"It's hard to make a case if you don't have a crime to start off with," Sheriff Joe B. O'Steen said Tuesday. "But I think the people around here deserve some sort of explanation."

The Rev. John C. Hartman disappeared July 15 when he went to the Hatchie River to check on his fishing boat. On Monday, he walked into a police station in Houston, not knowing his name, his home or how he wound up in Texas.

Police were able to identify Hartman after he recited a list of churches in Tennessee. They reached a minister at one of the churches, in Germantown, Tenn., who identified Hartman from an initialed belt Hartman was wearing.

After a brief news conference in Houston, Hartman, his wife and his physician returned to Memphis late Monday night aboard a commercial flight and drove to Ripley.

Hartman, 46, pastor of the United Methodist Church in Ripley, was at home in bed under a doctor's care Tuesday and was not granting interviews.

"The doctor has recommended that he get as much rest as possible until he can remember all the things that happened to him during this ordeal," Mrs. Hartman said.

But O'Steen said his men would not rest until he learned all the answers in the mysterious disappearance.

"The disappearance of Reverend Hartman brought out the greatest rescue effort in the history of this county and maybe the largest ever in rural West Tennessee," O'Steen said. "We had rescue squads from 18 different counties. Many of these people came here at their own expense — leaving their jobs and families — and they worked their butts off."

"I think they deserve an explanation of exactly what happened and I intend to see that they get it."

A Lauderdale County rescue squad spokesman said 3,300 man hours were spent searching for Hartman. Searchers Monday used 100 sticks of dynamite in an effort to dislodge the minister's body.

But O'Steen said he was convinced on the afternoon of July 15, the day Hartman vanished, that the pastor had not drowned.

O'Steen, who talked with Hartman by telephone from Houston on Monday, said the minister told him the last thing he remembered was being shot at shortly before he hit the water.

"We have twenty-one .22-caliber shells that were found a very short distance from where the bootprints were leading from the river bank," the sheriff said.

O'Steen said deputies also had located a truck that was seen speeding from the area the day Hartman disappeared. He said the owner of the truck had been questioned by authorities in neighboring Tipton County, but declined to discuss the investigation.

Black judge to preside at trial

ATLANTA (AP) — A black Superior Court judge who has been in office less than a year has been selected to preside over the trial of Wayne B. Williams, the free-lance photographer charged with two of a string of 28 slayings of young blacks.

Judge Clarence Cooper, 47, was chosen by computer Tuesday night to handle the Williams' case, said District Attorney Lewis Slaton.

Slaton said Cooper will be out of town until the end of July, and Williams will not be arraigned until then on charges of suffocating Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21.

Officials have said the trial could begin as early as October.

Cooper is one of two black Superior Court judges in Fulton County, which includes Atlanta. He was elected last year to a Superior Court judgeship after serving on the Municipal Court and took office in January.

Meanwhile, a veterinarian consulted by a special police task force investigating the two-year string of murders says dog hairs found on the bodies of some victims probably came from an Alaskan malamute.

But the veterinarian, Dr. Michael Lorenz of the University of Georgia, said in an interview Tuesday he could not rule out the possibility the dog hairs came from a German shepherd, such as the one owned by Williams' family.

Williams, 23, was indicted last week on two counts of murder in the deaths of Cater and Payne, the 26th and 28th victims.

At a preliminary hearing on the Cater murder charge, a state crime lab analyst testified "three or four" animal hairs found on Cater's body were "microscopically similar" to hairs taken from Williams' dog. But the analyst, Larry Peterson, said he could not determine what type of dog produced the hairs found on Cater.

Peterson said Tuesday the crime lab is continuing tests on the dog hairs and other fibrous material found on the bodies of about 20 of the victims. He refused to name the victims or discuss the types of test being conducted.

Lorenz, however, said he was asked by the task force several months ago — before Cater or Payne was killed — to analyze dog hairs that had been found on several of the victims.

Another expert said Tuesday even if it was determined the dog hairs found on the victims came from a German shepherd, it would be virtually impossible to pinpoint the dog.

Change in Hyatt Walkway Supports

Design changes led to collapse

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two design changes and a missing washer combined to help cause the fatal collapse of two "skywalks" at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, The Kansas City Times reported today.

Although no single factor was to blame, a series of design, construction and inspection problems contributed to the accident that killed 111 people and injured 188 others, a structural engineer, hired by the newspaper to look into the disaster, was quoted as saying in a copyright story.

Various theories on the cause of the skywalk collapse began to surface Tuesday. Two other structural engineers said there simply was too much weight for the suspended walkways to bear, and they gave way, crashing into the lobby and crushing people.

The two engineers, hired by a law firm that has filed a damage suit stemming from the accident, disagreed Tuesday with a theory, presented in a Kansas City Star story Tuesday, that said a design error was to blame.

"It's just overstress — too much load," said Lee Lowery, an engineering professor at Texas A&M University.

He and Rex Paulsen, a Denver engineer, said there was a failure at the point where suspension rods on the sides of the fourth-floor skywalk were joined to steel support beams.

In another development, The Times reported in a copyright story today that the criminal division of the Internal Revenue Service is investigating allegations that gratuities were given to building inspectors and others during construction of the hotel. The newspaper quoted an unidentified source who said the IRS may be looking at whether any city inspectors had received gratuities and failed to report them as income.

IRS spokesman George Warmuth refused to confirm or deny the report.

And Mayor Richard Berkley Tuesday asked the City Council for authorization to name a citizens committee to review the disaster.

The Times — basing its report on the observations of Bogdan O. Kuzmanovic, a structural engineer hired by the newspaper — said the problems were:

— A missing washer in a support rod, a critical link connecting the fourth-floor skywalk to the ceiling of the lobby.

However, Richard W. Miller, an attorney for the Havens Steel Co., which assembled the steel beams for the walkway, said he was confident the washer was put in place during construction. He acknowledged, however, that a washer is missing from a support rod examined after the disaster. The nut on the rod is still in place.

— A design change was made in the method of securing skywalks to the walls of the hotel — a change the consulting engineer who designed the support systems, Jack Gillum, said he knew nothing about.

Herbert E. Duncan Jr., one of the lead architects on the hotel, confirmed a design change took place at the wall connections but wouldn't discuss the change in detail.

— A second design change, reported by The Star, was made in the support rods themselves. One expert said the change placed more stress on the skywalks' support system.

"In a major catastrophe, you always have several factors working together," said Kuzmanovic.

Rollin Hammer, a private inspector hired for the Hyatt construction project, said reinforced steel weld plates intended to anchor the skywalks to the hotel's walls weren't in place after concrete for the walls was poured. He said six anchor bolts — three-quarters of an inch thick and seven inches long — took the place of each weld plate.

Survivor of walkway collapse 'had to admit we might die'

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I don't want to die," 11-year-old Dalton Grant whimpered as he and his mother lay buried under tons of twisted steel and crushed concrete in the lobby of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"I don't want to die either," answered his mother, Constance Downing.

"Are we going to?" came a weak reply.

"I don't think so," she answered, giving his hand a squeeze.

"What do you mean 'I don't think so'?" he said, begging for motherly assurance.

"Because we can talk to each other; we can breathe," she said.

Mrs. Downing, 40, recounted Tuesday how she was trapped for seven horror-filled hours after two skywalks collapsed on hundreds of people mingling at a dance in the posh hotel lobby Friday night.

She and Dalton, a son by a previous marriage, were among 10 survivors pulled from holes cut through the rubble early Saturday.

A total of 111 people died, and 188 others were injured.

"I didn't hear a noise or see anything," Mrs. Downing recalled from her hospital bed, where she is being treated for a broken foot, a broken ankle and a broken nose. "It was just like a huge truck or mountain fell on you."

Dalton, who had a broken foot and a pelvic injury, asked what happened.

"I think the roof fell in," she responded.

"Is this for real?" he asked.

She said she paused to make sure she wasn't dreaming, then answered, "Yes, I think it is."

She and her husband, Don Downing, 52, had decided to stop by the popular tea dance and let their children look over the $50 million hotel that had opened a year earlier.

As they stood watching the dancers, the couple's teen-agers, Kathy and Tim, left to take a look at the rooftop restaurant. The couple and Dalton had been watching for a matter of minutes when the skywalks cracked.

Downing was rescued in a matter of minutes and is being treated at another hospital for internal injuries.

But for Dalton and his mother, hours of painful waiting followed.

"I finally had to admit to myself that yes, we might die. Dalton was scared that we would die. I told him that if we died, we would go to heaven, and that was OK. I said if not, we would be rescued, and that would be OK, too. I told him we'd take it a minute at a time. He would be OK until someone would cry out 'Get us out of here!' and that would awaken his fears," Mrs. Downing said.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Manic-depressive disorder severe

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

Manic-depressive disorder is a severe mental health problem which strikes less than 1 percent of the general population. The disorder is severe enough that it always requires treatment because the person affected loses touch with reality. Without treatment, the affected person may bring financial ruin to himself or his family or he may be a high risk for a suicide attempt or severe physical deterioration.

In recent years this mental health problem has been diagnosed more frequently. It is doubtful, however, if it is actually occurring more frequently. Its incidence of occurrence is relatively rare when compared to other severe mental health problems, such as schizophrenia.

The disorder generally occurs in a cyclical pattern. The person usually has a period of very adequate functioning. He may be a quite successful person in his career and community. Quite frequently, in fact, he may have a number of accomplishments to his credit. When symptoms occur, the pattern of these symptoms may vary. One person may experience a period of deep depression and then recover to resume normal functioning. Another person may experience an episode of mania and then return to normal functioning. Others may have alternating episodes of both depression and mania.

Depressive symptoms include deep sadness and loneliness. The person has difficulty seeing any joy or hope in life. His thought processes and behavior become extremely slow and lethargic. He is listless, talks little, has a blunted emotional tone, and experiences sleep and appetite disturbances. He may have delusions of excessive guilt over imagined wrongdoings or delusions of physical diseases afflicting him.

The majority of these severely depressed persons have thoughts of suicide, and it is estimated that 10-15 percent actually make suicide attempts. Without treatment, the depressive phase may last up to a year or more; and of course there is the ever-present risk of a suicide attempt and physical deterioration. Treatment may occur either in the hospital or on an outpatient basis, depending on the depth and severity of the symptoms. Anti-depressant medications and, in some resistant cases, electro-convulsive therapy are the principle means of treating these severe depressions. Counseling and psychotherapy may be employed once the depression has begun to lift.

Symptoms of the manic phase are excessive feelings of elation, rapid flight of ideas, a high level of movement, loudness, boisterousness, grandiose ideas of his own importance or influence, excessive spending of money on foolish items or schemes, boundless energy, sleep loss, inability to concentrate, impaired judgement, and sexual promiscuity.

Without treatment, the person may dispose of all of his money and assets on frivolous, grandiose schemes, thereby bringing financial ruin to himself and his family. He also may become quite physically ill due to lowered resistance resulting from poor nutrition and lack of sleep. Treatment consists of use of the drug lithium carbonate, as well as some of the major tranquilizers in order to introduce some sedation when the person is acutely manic. Again, psychotherapy may be employed once the person begins to improve.

Manic-depressive illness tends to occur in several generations of the same family. There is almost certainly a genetic, bio-chemical component which leads to the illness and which is controlled by the various forms of drug therapy. Because symptoms of other problems may resemble manic depressive illness, the diagnosis of this problem should not be assumed by family members or friends. However, severe depressive episodes or manic-like symptoms should not be ignored. Prompt diagnosis and treatment are required to prevent tragedies.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has told me about a diet he is following that he says you recommend for people who want to stop smoking and lose weight at the same time. Without going into the specifics of the diet, can you give me a general idea of what is involved? — Margie

Dear Margie: Your friend undoubtedly is referring to the diet I discuss in my latest book, "Stop Smoking — Lose Weight," published by G.P. Putnam's Sons. The diet provides nutritional, well-balanced meals totaling between 1,300 and 1,400 calories a day. It emphasizes high-alkaline foods such as fruits, vegetables, milk and nuts such as almonds, chestnuts and coconut, among others.

I should add that the approach outlined in the book is not merely dietary in nature, important as this is. Exercise and behavior modification techniques also play a part. If you are interested in the details, I suggest you refer to a copy of the book.

'World News Tonight' wins race for ratings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It took 4½ months, but ABC's "World News Tonight" has finally overcome the legacy that Walter Cronkite left to CBS and moved into the top spot in the network news ratings race for the first time ever.

"It's very nice to be No. 1," said Jeff Gralnick, executive producer of "World News Tonight."

"We've been able to taste it for a month. It was just a question of when it was going to happen. When Walter retired, it freed up a large piece of the audience," Gralnick said.

Before the new A.C. Nielsen ratings were released Tuesday, CBS had held 24 percent of the homes actually watching television at that hour were watching "World News Tonight."

CBS had a 10.3 rating, a 23 share and was seen in 8.23 million homes. NBC had a 9.4 rating, a 21 share and was seen in 7.51 million homes.

The ABC victory in the news division did not dampen CBS' overall performance, as CBS reruns won the overall ratings for the ninth week in a row.

Since Roone Arledge was named president of ABC News in 1977, ABC has been making steady news audience gains at the expense of both CBS and NBC. Arledge created the three-anchor concept of Reynolds in Washington, Robinson in Chicago and Jennings in London. He raided the other two networks for personnel and also jazzed up ABC's presentation with more film and graphics.

"No one else was ever able to create a clear ABC News identity, something that made ABC News stand out in the minds of millions of viewers," said Ted Koppel, the anchor of the late-night news program "Nightline," an Arledge creation. Koppel is substituting for the vacationing Robinson on "World News Tonight" this week.

"The image is like the old joke about the mule," said Koppel. "First you hit him over the head with a 2-by-4 to get his attention, and Roone Arledge used a variety of 2-by-4s to get the public's attention."

Officials at both ABC and CBS stress the race is extremely tight and has been since Rather replaced Cronkite on the "Evening News" March 9.

"If the slippage persists, then we'll take it seriously," Ramona Dunn, a spokeswoman for CBS News, said Tuesday. Dunn said CBS officials expected to lose some ratings strength with Cronkite's departure.

Spanish monarchs to boycott wedding

MADRID, Spain (AP) — King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia have decided to boycott the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana to continue a protest dating to 1704.

The Spanish government announced Tuesday the king and queen declined the invitation to next week's wedding because the royal couple plan to go to Gibraltar to board the royal yacht Britannia for a honeymoon cruise.

Gibraltar, located on the Spanish mainland, has been a British colony since a joint Dutch-British force seized it from Spain in 1704. Spain has been pressing for years to get it back.

"We have been notified the Spanish king and queen will not be attending the wedding," said a Buckingham Palace spokesman who declined to be identified.

A British Foreign Office spokesman said there were "exchanges" with Spain on the subject, "but the nature of these exchanges is confidential."

The British officials said they pointed out to the Spanish the royal couple's stay on Gibraltar would be a brief one and would not be a state visit, but the Spanish were not mollified.

The king is a distant cousin of Prince Charles.

HONOLULU (AP) — During a recent trip to New York, Kathryn Murray bought a pair of bedroom slippers for her husband, retired dancing instructor Arthur Murray.

She had the slippers mailed to Honolulu, but when Murray opened the box, he discovered slippers for two right feet.

"It could have been worse," he said. "They could have thought I had two left feet."

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan is visiting England for only a week, but she'll be squeezing in five luncheons, five dinner parties, two receptions, a fireworks display and a royal wedding.

Mrs. Reagan leaves for London Thursday. In addition to the July 29 wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana, her schedule includes one of the prince's polo matches, a luncheon hosted by Princess Margaret at Kensington Palace and a late-night reception given by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace.

The first lady's traveling party includes her hairdresser. Her press secretary, Sheila Patton Tate, said any costs incurred by him will be paid by the Reagans.

Also traveling with Mrs. Reagan aboard the government aircraft that occasionally serves as Air Force One will be longtime friends of the Reagans, Alfred and Betsy Bloomingdale, who also are paying their own way, Mrs. Tate said.

Mrs. Tate refused to give details in advance, but the first lady will attend the wedding wearing a new ensemble that includes a hat and gloves, both of which are part of the required dress.

As a wedding gift on behalf of the nation, Mrs. Reagan has selected a Steuben glass bowl, engraved with a king and nobles.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and White House press secretary James Brady swapped congratulations by phone as the president was returning from the economic summit meeting held near Ottawa.

Reagan called Brady, who is recuperating in the hospital from a gunshot wound, to wish him and his wife a happy eighth wedding anniversary Tuesday.

Reagan spoke with Brady for two to three minutes and with Brady's wife, Sarah, for about two minutes from Air Force One, said White House spokesman David Prosper.

Brady, 40, suffered a gunshot wound in the head in a March 30 assassination attempt on Reagan's life outside a Washington hotel. Prosper said Brady congratulated Reagan on his success at the summit and told him the press accounts of it looked very good.

CBS ranks first for 9th week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the ninth consecutive week, CBS topped ABC and NBC in overall viewership, according to the A.C. Nielsen ratings of network performance.

CBS had four of the five top-rated shows for the week ending last Sunday, Nielsen announced Tuesday. "The Jeffersons," in sixth place the previous week, moved to the top of the list with a 22.8 rating.

The networks say that means 18.2 million households — 22.8 percent of the nation's 79.9 million television-equipped homes — saw at least part of the sitcom.

"Trapper John M.D." moved up to second place from third with a 21.1 rating, while "Alice" hopped to third from 13th with a 20.5 rating and "60 Minutes" climbed to fourth from ninth at 20.2.

ABC's "Hart to Hart" rounded out the top five with a 20.2 rating. Although "Hart to Hart" and "60 Minutes" had the same rating, "60 Minutes" was ranked higher because it had a larger share of the television audience, meaning that the 16.1 million households tuned to the newsmagazine represented a larger proportion of the number of sets in use at the time.

Last week's top-rated show, CBS' "M-A-S-H," dropped to the No. 9 slot with a 17.6 rating.

Bill Murray again shows his 'Stripes'

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

"STRIPES" pits an out-of-shape, perpetually wise-alecky New York cab driver played by Bill Murray against today's Army, and guess who comes out on top.

Murray abandons his cab, sees his car stolen and loses his girl in the first 10 minutes of the film, then decides enlistment is the perfect solution to his problems and talks a mild-mannered friend, played appealingly by co-screenplay writer Harold Ramis, into joining him.

From then on the film is a sort of male companion to "Private Benjamin," with Murray and Ramis talking, scheming and lucking their way through basic training and an overseas assignment much the way Goldie Hawn's suburban princess did, but with more sight gags.

Warren Oates is perfect as the obligatory tough drill sergeant, although the humor in his clashes with Murray and company is blunted because the sergeant is fair-minded and savvy, not a tyrannical buffoon.

By now, Murray has come bravado down to a science and fans of "Meatballs," another, hugely popular collaboration with producer-director Ivan Reitman, will doubtless charm their many fans and others who haven't yet had their fill of Army jokes. Rated R, at least in part because of a funny scene involving nude female mud wrestlers.

Polish workers call off strikes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish dock workers and airline employees have called off threatened strikes this week, promising the hard-pressed Communist government another temporary respite from labor unrest.

The Solidarity dockers' union cancelled a strike Thursday by 46,000 longshoremen in four Baltic ports after negotiations produced a compromise agreement early today.

Hours earlier, Solidarity leaders in Warsaw agreed to suspend their call for a walkout Friday at the Polish national airline LOT.

"I'm not satisfied, but we made big concessions," said Henryk Tarsiewicz, a spokesman for the dockers. He said details could not be disclosed immediately because a communiqué was being prepared.

The dock workers were demanding bigger pensions and bonuses, longer vacations with travel benefits and improved working conditions.

The LOT employees were threatening to ground the national airline because the government refused to accept their nominee to head the line. A union leader said suspension of the strike call was agreed to after a letter from Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski indicated the government was willing to continue negotiations.

Both strikes had been brewing for two weeks, but Solidarity postponed them until after the special congress of the Polish Communist Party which ended Monday. The congress concluded with an urgent appeal to all Poles to unite behind the party's efforts to meet the acute economic crisis threatening the nation.

"Countrymen, the motherland is in need," the congress said. "The secure existence of the nation and the future of the state are threatened. Let us join efforts to avert the threat that hangs over Poland."

In the first official Soviet statement about the party congress, President Leonid I. Brezhnev expressed his faith in the party in a telegram Tuesday to party leaders.

The telegram, also signed by Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov, said the Polish party "is undoubtedly capable of rallying all the working people and stirring them to a resolute rebuff to anarchy and counter-revolution."

Brezhnev omitted this expression of confidence from an earlier telegram to party chief Stanislaw Kania congratulating him on his re-election by the congress.

Ludmila Zhivkova dies

OFIA, Bulgari (AP) — Ludmila Zhivkova, 38-year-old daughter of Bulgaria's Communist Party chief and president, died of a brain hemorrhage, followed by an irreversible disorder of the respiratory and circulatory systems, a medical bulletin said today.

It said her health deteriorated recently as a result of overwork. "Measures taken for the recovery of her health" led to an improvement but her condition worsened Monday and she died Tuesday at 2 p.m., the bulletin said.

Her funeral was scheduled for Thursday, the official BTA news agency said.

BTA reported the death Tuesday but at that time said only that she died after a "short illness."

U.S. considering Polish request for tons of food

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, anxious to ensure the survival of Poland's reformist government, is nearing approval of a Polish request for 400,000 tons of food, U.S. officials say.

The National Security Council planned to take up the matter today. One official, who asked not to be identified, said the administration is giving the issue "urgent priority" because of Poland's serious economic situation.

Aside from its eagerness to give Poland's experiment in limited democracy a chance to survive, the administration also sees Poland as a logical market for surplus U.S. corn.

Poland's request for food aid was made several weeks ago in a letter from Polish Ambassador Romuald Spasowski to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block. Without the corn shipments, officials said, Poland's chicken industry faces collapse.

For months, the prospect of a Soviet invasion of Poland had been a major concern of the administration. But that possibility now has been supplanted by Poland's economic crisis.

Officials say the threat of Soviet military intervention is more remote now than at any time since Poland's independent trade union was formed almost a year ago.

The Polish issue was touched on only briefly at the economic summit in Ottawa, a reflection of the diminished allied concern over Soviet intentions.

The officials said the outcome of the Polish Communist Party Congress last weekend was probably more favorable to the Soviets than Moscow had anticipated because of the defeat of many of the party's most militant liberals in the elections for leadership posts.

One official, asked whether this was in any way linked to Polish fears of a Soviet intervention, said: "There is no doubt that this was a part of the equation. There was a real danger in provoking Moscow too far."

In addition to the Soviets, the officials said the Reagan administration could take heart from the outcome as well. They noted that many pro-Moscow hardliners were defeated and that, for the first time in any Eastern European country, democratic procedures were used to lect party leaders.

Now that the party congress has ended, Poland must come to grips with what Polish officials admit is a disastrous economic situation.

In an attempt to restore economic stability, Polish officials have announced that wages will be frozen and price increases averaging 110 per cent will be imposed. Production is down, leading to increasing shortages of consumer goods.

Poland's foreign debt, estimated at some $27 billion, is expected to reach $30 billion.

In the past, U.S. food aid to Poland has been supplied through the U.S. Commodity Credit Corp. But because it is unlikely that Poland will be able to meet the corporation's repayment terms, officials said the administration is looking for an alternative method for approving Poland's food aid request.

Small town has big heart for Buffaloe pilot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As airborne errors go, the mistake made two years ago by pilot Lowell Ferguson was a far cry from the bad turn of Wrong Way Corrigan, the pioneer aviator who left New York for San Diego, only to end up in Ireland.

Ferguson merely landed 24 miles out of the way, bringing his Western Airlines jet down in Buffalo, Wyo., thinking it was Sheridan, Wyo., his intended destination.

But just as Corrigan got to star in a movie about his life, Ferguson is getting his moment of glory, returning to Buffalo on Saturday and Sunday as honored guest of the town's second annual "Lowell Ferguson Days" festival. Under pressure from the airline, Ferguson refused to attend last year's gala.

The event features a parade, two-day tennis tournament, a buffalo meat barbecue and breakfast at the Buffalo Airport.

Buffalo, a ranch town of 4,700 people at the foot of the Big Horn Mountains not far from the state's northern border, is hoping the tie-in to the unexpected visit July 31, 1979, will attract a few more tourists to its 100th anniversary celebration, said Barbara DeWalt of the Chamber of Commerce. Town officials have said they are grateful to Ferguson for calling national attention to their community.

Ferguson sees the festival as a chance for a rural holiday away from his home in the Los Angeles suburb of Woodland Hills. He plans to take part in the pie-throwing contest, dunking booth and fishing contest.

He also will be treated to a hot-air balloon ride. "Someone told me that you can't control where a balloon lands," he said. "I don't know what made them mention that."

Western Airlines would just as soon not see the incident rehearsed.

"We feel it was a serious incident with serious safety implication," said Glenn Bozarth, a Western spokesman. "We can't condone it or make light of it." But, he added, "We wish the people of Buffalo all the best."

Ferguson was piloting a night flight from Denver to Sheridan when he landed at the Buffalo airport, which has no control tower and no scheduled commercial service. Ferguson said it was the first time he had flown to Sheridan and that he had been misled by faulty distance-measuring equipment. He said the landing was made under visual flight rules and was not being directed by a control tower.

He said it was easy to confuse Sheridan and Buffalo — "they line up almost identically" — and said many private pilots have made the same error.

He said the passengers were not endangered even though the runway at Buffalo is only 4,500 feet long, 1,000 feet shorter than at the Sheridan airport. "The plane is certified for landing on that length runway," he said.

Ferguson was demoted to first officer for two months and was required to take additional training. He said the demotion cost him about $4,000 in pay, but he has no complaints with the airline.

"I think they handled me properly," he said.

He is less happy with the Federal Aviation Administration, which, he says, is seeking further sanctions. Ferguson has been fighting this through the Air Line Pilots Association and with his own lawyers.

Ferguson also has had to cope with professional embarrassment and says he is called "Buffalo" by some colleagues.

But he says he has learned to live with the kidding.

"When I work with a new crew," he said, "I tell them, 'If there's anything you don't know, ask. Don't try to Buffalo me.'"

Jury-selection begins in trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge planned to exclude the public when lawyers question potential jurors in the trial of ex-Peoples Temple cultist Larry Layton, charged in the 1978 shooting death of U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan at a jungle airstrip.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham began the lengthy jury selection process Tuesday by convening two batches of about 130 prospective jurors each at the San Francisco Federal Building. As reporters watched, about two-thirds of them said they weren't available to serve for various reasons and were excused.

Peckham planned to screen another 260 prospective jurors today.

Peckham said he would not allow members of the public or journalists to attend individual questioning of potential jurors, which is to begin Thursday. During the closed-door session, prospective panelists will be weeded out by attorneys from both sides.

The judge scheduled a special session for today to give at least two newspapers and The Associated Press a chance to argue against closing the proceedings Thursday.

Peckham predicted the trial could last as long as three months. Testimony is expected to begin Aug. 17.

Layton, 35, is charged with conspiracy and aiding and abetting in the Nov. 18, 1978, ambush at Port Kaituma airstrip in Guyana, where the California Democrat, three journalists and a temple defector died.

16 wildcat tests scheduled in Permian Basin counties

Area operators have announced plans to drill 16 wildcats and a discovery announced in Runnels County.

MITCHELL COUNTY

Cabana Oil Corp., Abilene, will drill the No. 1 Walker, a 5,000-foot wildcat in Mitchell County, two miles east of Colorado City.

Location is 1,500 feet from the south and 1,450 feet from the west line of section 37, block 26 of the TPRR survey.

Drill site is four miles south-southwest of Belco No. 1 Barkley, abandoned Aug. 26, 1974 at 5,000 feet.

CRANE COUNTY

Gulf Oil Corp., Odessa, has scheduled a 3,900-foot wildcat re-entry in Crane County, 15 miles southwest of Crane.

The No. 36 J.B. Tubb "A" is located 660 feet from the south and west lines of section 21, block B-27 of the PSL survey.

The original completion was October 1979 but due to uneconomic production in the Tubb formation an attempt will be made to recompleting in the San Angelo formation.

LOVING COUNTY

Exxon Corp., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Ludeman Unit, a scheduled 20,400-foot wildcat in Loving County, 20 miles west-northwest of Kermit.

Location is 1,867 feet from the north and west lines of section 13, block C-25 of the PSL survey.

It is 3/4 miles northwest of the 21,130-foot Strawn discovery, Exxon Lineburg Gas Unit No. 1, abandoned July 24, 1977.

REEVES COUNTY

Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico, Inc., Houston, will drill the No. 1 Hermosa Prewitt Unit, a 14,500-foot wildcat, in Reeves County, 10 miles southwest of Pecos.

Location is 660 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the west line of section 23, block C-9 of the Public School Lands survey and is approximately three miles northeast of the Gulf No. 1 Todd, abandoned Jan. 23, 1958 at 13,160 feet.

PECOS COUNTY

Sioux Natural Gas Corp., Houston, has scheduled three wildcats in Pecos County.

The No. 1 L.E. Fay "38" is located 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 38, block C-4 of the GC&SF RR survey, 22 miles northwest of Sheffield.

The site is 1/2 mile northwest of C&K Petroleum No. 1 Hunt State, abandoned at 10,685 feet March 26, 1978.

The No. 1 W. Augustine "74" is located 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 74, block 2 of the CCSD&RGNG survey, 20 miles west of Sheffield.

The location shows to be at the site of the Henshaw No. 1 Augustine, an abandoned site, total depth 2,509 feet and is one mile north of a 12,432-foot failure.

The No. 2 H.Q. Lyles, 3/4 mile northeast the same failure, is located 1,320 feet from the north and east lines of section 71, block 2 of the CCSD&RGNG survey and is 20 miles west of Sheffield.

The 12,432-foot failure is Union Texas No. 1 Ligon abandoned Nov. 18, 1976.

GAINES COUNTY

Shell Oil Co. of Houston will drill the No. 1 Wakefield as a 13,580-foot wildcat test in the Maxey (Silurian) field of Gaines County, four miles south of Seagraves.

The site is 2,650 feet from the south and 890 feet from the west lines of section 88, block G of the WTRR survey.

It is an in-field wildcat, about 1 3/4 miles west-southwest of the 13,495-foot Forest No. 1 Maxey, abandoned March 12, 1980.

GARZA COUNTY

L.R. French Jr. of Midland will drill two 8,000-foot wildcats to test the Ellenburger formation in Garza County approximately 2 1/2 miles northeast of Justiceburg in section 9, block 6 of the H&GN survey.

The No. 1-A Double Mountain is located 1,980 feet from the north and 2,080 feet from the east lines of the section and is one mile south-southeast of the O'Neal No. 1 Young abandoned July 7, 1953 at 3,001 feet.

The No. 2-A Double Mountain is located 560 feet from the north and 1,980 feet from the west lines of the section and is 3/4 mile south-southeast of the No. 1 Young.

KING COUNTY

Sun Oil Co., Midland will drill the No. 1-E Oliver King, a 6,300-foot wildcat in King County, 14 miles southeast of Guthrie.

The site is 2,600 feet from the north-east line and 2,500 feet from the north-west line of section 111, block 13 of the H&TC survey, abstract 157.

Drill site is 3 1/4 miles south of Texas Pacific and Medders Oil No. 1 Moorhouse, abandoned July 8, 1978, 6,050 feet.

YOAKUM COUNTY

Hrubetz Oil Co., Dallas will drill the No. 1-135 Lost Draw, 12,300-foot wildcat, in Yoakum County, 15 miles north of Plains.

Location is 660 feet from the south and west lines of section 135, block D of the John H. Gibson survey.

It is one location northeast of Western Drilling Co. No. 1 Marshall abandoned Dec. 18, 1954 at 5,510 feet.

RUNNELS COUNTY

Bob Black Operating, Ballinger, No. 1 B.L. Mayo, Runnels County

lower Gardner sand discovery, has been finalized to flow 60 barrels of 45 gravity oil, no water, with gas to oil ratio of 15,166 to 1.

Production was through a 14-64 inch choke and perforations at 4,827 to 4,830 feet.

It was drilled to 5,050 feet where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,667 feet from the south and 72 feet from the west lines of the A.B. Hutchinson No. 18 1/2 survey.

IRION COUNTY

Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico Inc. has filed application to deepen to 9,000 feet and test also as a wildcat at its No. 1 Munson Ranch, scheduled 5/8 mile southeast outpost to the Spraberry Trend Area and 4 1/2 miles northeast of Barnhart.

The project originally was scheduled to 6,000 feet and earlier amended to 8,200 feet.

Location is 660 feet from the north and 1,980 feet from the east lines of section 31 of the Washington County Railroad.

STONEWALL COUNTY

Centex Oil & Gas, Dallas, will drill the No. 1 Gholson, a 7,000-foot wildcat in Stonewall County, nine miles north-northeast of Aspermont.

Location is 1,321 feet from the north and 1,358 feet from the east lines of section 79, block D of the H&TC survey, abstract 310.

NOLAN COUNTY

NRG Resources Inc., Houston, has scheduled the No. 1 D.W. Bird, a 6,500-foot wildcat in Nolan County, 10 miles northeast of Blackwell.

Location is 467 feet from the north and east lines of section 190, block 64 of the H&TC survey.

NEW VOID NOT SIGNIFICANT, OFFICIALS SAY

HOUSTON (AP) — A void found in the latest major concrete pour at the South Texas Nuclear Project was termed "not significant" by a team of officials of two companies involved in building the plant, a federal licensing board has been told.

Ralph Hernandez, a supervising engineer for Houston Lighting and Power Co., said Tuesday that a group of top officials from that utility and Brown & Root termed the void insignificant after inspecting the pour, which was made June 26.

The new void occurred even though

This high petrochemical vessel 174 feet long and weighing 360 tons made its way down Houston streets to the Houston Ship Channel for a barge ride to Port Arthur. Overhead phone and electrical wires had to be raised at some 32 locations. The vessel is heading for the Texaco refinery.

House committee approves tax relief for oil industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, ending more than two months of work on a huge tax-cut bill, saved the trickiest issue until the end. Two hours past midnight, the panel today voted tax relief for the oil industry.

The Democratic-controlled committee, claiming it was forced by the Republican-dominated Senate Finance Committee into a bidding war for votes of oil-state lawmakers, approved a package worth $6.4 billion to oil producers and owners of oil lands over the next five years.

That is about $300 million more than the Finance Committee approved but considerably less than the $20 billion now advocated by Republicans on the Senate floor.

The amendment was added to the committee's plan for reducing individual and business taxes by $640 billion over the next five years.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of a Ways and Means task force that wrote the committee's plan for helping the oil industry, apologized for raising the issue on the tax-cut bill. But, he added, the Democrats' hand was forced when the Finance Committee made the first move.

Since President Reagan won a big budget victory in April with the help of a handful of conservative Southern Democrats, the Southerners have been courted ardently by leaders of both parties. Their votes could determine whether the president's tax-cut plan or the version backed by Democratic leaders will become law.

Many of those Southerners are from oil states. And that means they are against the "windfall profits" tax imposed last year at the insistence of the Carter administration on revenues derived from decontrol of oil prices.

The plan advocated by the Ways and Means Committee would allow all oil producers, big and small, to exempt from the windfall tax the first 500 barrels of newly discovered oil pumped each day. Oil from old wells could be exempt at the rate of 100 barrels daily in 1982-84, rising to 350 barrels in 1986. But the total daily exemption for any type of oil could not exceed 500 barrels.

Royalty-owners — those who own oil-producing land — would get a $2,500 tax credit this year and then a daily exemption of one barrel in 1982, two barrels in 1985 and 3.5 barrels in 1986. That would be worth $10,000 to $20,000 for an average royalty-owner, congressional aides estimated.

The foreign tax credit as it applies to oil producers would be liberalized by exempting from any U.S. income tax income from oil produced abroad.

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., demanded to know "what are we doing at this hour of the night trying to rearrange the oil industry?"

Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., a champion of the oil industry, called the Democrats' plan excessive and said, "I wonder who's calling and raising who."

Oil-state members tried to fatten the industry's tax break even more but were defeated.

Rep. Frank Guarini, R-N.J., picked up on the theme sounded by Democratic senators as they battled a GOP amendment on the Senate floor that would gradually repeal the windfall tax on all oil discovered after 1978.

Radioactive gas vented from Texas A&M reactor

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Minute amounts of radioactive gas were vented into the atmosphere about three hours after a leak forced shutdown of a reactor and evacuation of workers in the Nuclear Science Center at Texas A&M University, said center director John Randall.

Scientist shutdown the reactor at 9:55 a.m. Tuesday when leaking radioactive gas triggered automatic emergency procedures that sounded an alarm and shut off the ventilation system, said Randall.

"We never want to see any radiation escape, but privately I'm glad to see this minor incident happen because we were able to test our emergency procedures under actual condition and found they work very well," he said.

About 20 to 25 people working inside the center left the building when the alarm sounded, but none of the workers were exposed to radiation, said Randall.

He said the reactor building was reopened about 1 p.m. Tuesday.

During the cleanup procedure, Randall said scientists elected to vent about seven micro-curries of gas rather than force workers to breathe the contaminated air.

"That is about the amount of radiation in a wristwatch," said Randall.

He said the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was advised of the leak although the incident was not significant enough to require a report to the NRC.

The gas escaped into the reactor when scientists opened a container that had been irradiated in the reactor. The inside of the container apparently had been contaminated with a small amount of uranium and exposure to radiation inside the reactor caused a fission reaction, said Randall.

He said the gas was a byproduct of the fission reaction.

The gas had a very short half-life and Randall said scientists waited three hours for the material to decay. He said at the end of that time scientist vented the small amount of gas.

Randall said the center, which handles about 10,000 samples a year, had a similar leak about two years ago.

The one megawatt reactor was built in 1960 and is located on the university property in an isolated area about three miles from the main campus. A standard nuclear power reactor is about 3,000 megawatts.

Conoco opposes Mobil deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Warning that competition would be reduced if Mobil Corp. wins a takeover bid, Conoco Inc. vowed to go to court to fight Mobil's $7.74 billion offer.

Conoco Chairman Ralph Bailey, announcing the decision Monday night, said a Mobil takeover would violate federal antitrust guidelines and could lead to "a major restructuring" of the U.S. energy industry with many competitors disappearing.

"It would be irresponsible to permit such a restructuring to proceed without a stringent test of its legality under the antitrust laws and ample time for debating the public policy issues," Bailey said. He said a suit will be filed, but did not give details.

The Conoco move indicated the oil-gas-coal concern is sticking by its earlier decision to back a merger with Du Pont Co., even though Du Pont is offering about $7.3 billion, or more than $400 million less than Mobil in cash and stock.

"Given the obvious uncertainties surrounding the Mobil offer, it was clear to our board that continued strong support of the Du Pont transaction is in the best interests of Conoco shareholders," Bailey said.

Late Monday, Mobil Vice President Herbert Schmertz said, "Mobil continues to believe the Mobil-Conoco merger contains no antitrust problems and that, in any event, a decision on antitrust will be made by the U.S. government."

Schmertz said the final decision on which offer to accept "will be made by Conoco shareholders not by its board."

Du Pont Chairman Edward G. Jefferson, meanwhile, said he was pleased with the Conoco board's action to stand by its firm's offer.

Moynihan warns Casey could be forced to resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee says a "crisis" is building that could force the resignation of CIA Director William J. Casey.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, the panel's vice chairman, said he telephoned Attorney General William French Smith on Monday evening to deliver the warning.

Moynihan accused the White House and the Justice Department of failing to cooperate in the committee's inquiry into Casey's financial dealings before he was appointed head of the CIA.

"If they are going to cover up," he said, "they are going to lose themselves their director of the CIA ... fast."

In an interview Tuesday, Moynihan said he called Smith the previous evening to caution him that "you have a crisis building up here. You doubtless don't know what is happening, but that isn't to say it won't."

And he told the committee: "If they're not going to help us establish that the director should not resign, then the result will be that he will resign."

However, Sen. Barry Goldwater, the committee chairman, reiterated to reporters Tuesday that he believed Casey "will remain unless we find further allegations against him in the course of the investigation."

Moynihan said he decided to call Smith after committee staffers seeking information about Casey's financial affairs complained that the White House and Justice Department were giving them the run-around.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Smith had left his office at the time Moynihan called but returned the call the first thing Tuesday morning and reached Moynihan early in the afternoon.

Moynihan said the attorney general promised to cooperate in the investigation but "did not concede" that committee staff members were having trouble getting information from the department.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Karna Small said officials were returning the committee's calls as soon as possible.

The committee's inquiry stems from a finding by a federal judge in New York that during the mid-1970s Casey and other directors of a now-defunct firm, Multiponics Inc., misled potential investors.

The court ruling came to light after Max Hugel, Casey's hand-picked deputy, resigned as chief of CIA clandestine operations after two former business associates alleged that he engaged in illegal or improper stock trading practices. Hugel denied the allegations.

The committee is seeking financial information from the background investigation that the FBI conducted on Casey before his nomination as CIA director.

Moynihan said the committee sent a formal request for the material to the Justice Department on Tuesday after telephone requests proved unsuccessful. DeCair said the request had been received but the Privacy Act would have to be studied to determine how much of the material could be turned over to the committee.

Before talking to Smith, Moynihan told the committee: "I don't know if the attorney general is afraid to talk to me, doesn't know who I am or doesn't think what we're doing is important."

Interviewed after their conversation, he said their talk was "very friendly."

He said it was the first time, as far as he could recall, that he had ever spoken with Smith.

Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau, gesturing, calls an end to the official photo session for leaders attending the Economic Summit Conference in Ottawa, Tuesday. Allies endorse Reagan's policies on anti-inflation

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — Overcoming European protests about high U.S. interest rates, President Reagan has an endorsement from America's major allies for his anti-inflation policies and favorable reviews for his debut in summit diplomacy.

Leaders of the seven richest democracies submerged their major differences on economic policy and returned home from a three-day summit Tuesday after acknowledging that high interest rates "have to play their part" in reducing inflation.

colleagues from West Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Canada to include language warning Europe to guard against becoming too dependent on trade with the Soviet bloc.

On balance, though, American officials appeared more than pleased with the results.

"All in all, I'd say the results of the summit and what is in that communique hit on all fours with the president's approach," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters.

Predictably, Regan and other administration officials credited the president's personal performance for the harmonious tone and general support for Reagan's policies that emerged from the communique.

The summit participants also reaffirmed their common commitment to fighting inflation, reviving economic growth and lowering unemployment as their top priorities. Yet they offered no new approaches for solving those problems and indicated they would continue on their own divergent paths for dealing with their economic woes at home.

That view was shared by some foreign leaders and observers as well.

"Ronald Reagan had a very good summit conference — excellent," declared British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, whose own economic policies most resemble Reagan's among the summit participants.

A joint statement issued at the end of the conference reflected the line Reagan had been trying to sell since he arrived here Sunday for his first economic summit: Tight-credit policies are "essential to reducing inflation," even if they result in high interest rates.

Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini said Reagan "has a deep conviction in what he says" and has a "farmer-like wisdom" that reminded the Italian leader of the late Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

But the joint communique also contained an American acknowledgment of the negative influences U.S. economic policy has on other countries.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt "admires the simplicity of the way President Reagan expressed his ideas," said a Schmidt aide.

In another accommodation, Reagan joined his six fellow heads of state in agreeing to launch "global negotiations" aimed at distributing more resources from the rich nations to the poor ones. Initially inclined against the idea, Reagan came to the summit prepared to endorse it because of keen interest by the other nations, particularly host Canada.

In Tokyo, the national daily newspaper Mainichi Shimbun praised Reagan for displaying himself as "a skilled salesman who ... was generally successful in convincing the others that the United States does not have an economic policy of high interest rates."

Reagan also failed to persuade his

White House counselor Edwin Meese III, who was at Reagan's side throughout the summit, said the conference gave the Europeans an opportunity to gang up against U.S. economic policy.

Leaders still face same problems

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — The leaders of the big seven Western nations ended their seventh annual economic summit grappling with many of the same problems and fighting many of the same fights that first brought them to the roundtable in 1975.

teau Montebello summit on Tuesday was to produce a ragged communique that cobbled together contrary economic precepts, special causes and half-measures in a way that offers no single course of action for economic recovery.

AP Analysis

policy instruments is required," is the way the communique expressed it.

The series of summits has had one noteworthy success — on energy. The determination expressed at past summits to conserve oil and develop alternative energy sources has been followed by a drop in oil imports by the West.

But a $1.5-billion U.S.-West German-Japanese synthetic fuel plant that was given a boost by the 1979 Tokyo summit was scrapped in June.

The first few summits also promoted worldwide negotiations to lower trade tariffs, eventually resulting in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

But new protectionist sentiment is emerging in several countries, and other methods of trade restriction are taking root — such as Japan's agreement with Reagan to limit automobile exports to the United States.

In the trade area, the 1975 summit focused in part on limiting government subsidies of exports — credits and similar devices that put businesses in other countries at a disadvantage. The complaint persists, and this week's summit once again dealt with the issue but did not resolve it.

As for Japan, the West Europeans continue to seek trade concessions and export restraint from the Tokyo government.

The longest-running dispute is over the world currency system.

France's then-President Valery Giscard d'Estaing convened the Rambouillet summit primarily to try to bring stability to the monetary system. The French have long favored controls to keep currency exchanges steady, rather than allow the franc, for example, to fluctuate wildly in value against the dollar because of outside influences.

The French renewed the complaint with vigor this week, pegging it to a related problem, high and volatile U.S. interest rates. The high rates have indirectly helped weaken the franc and other currencies against the dollar.

The French said they would like the Americans to agree to some kind of controls on the soaring dollar in the coming weeks.

In the area of Third World relations, both the original and the most recent summit rededicated the rich industrial nations to an exploration of ways to help improve the situation of the poorest countries. The "North-South" talks that followed Rambouillet failed.

In the latest communique, the Western powers take a small first step toward a new process of negotiations over aid and economic cooperation with less-developed countries.

Many of the economic ills and complaints that linger six years after the summit series began can be cured only with long-term medicine. Others might never be solved to the satisfaction of all seven summit countries.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, ending the summit Tuesday, said it was "time of rapid change" in the world.

"The members of the summit meeting have also been victims of these changes and whatever we have attempted to do in the course of the last years was not necessarily carried out," he said.

Trudeau indicated, however, that he believes a central value of the summit is that it cements the personal relationship among the leaders.

"These contacts have promoted mutual trust and confidence in facing the crises ... which challenge us," he said.

California says war against medfly being won

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — California officials say the Mediterranean fruit fly's days are numbered, and they're asking the U.S. Supreme Court to lift stringent restrictions imposed on California produce by five Southern states.

"The general feeling, on the project and off, is that eradication is virtually inevitable," Jerry Scribner, director of the medfly eradication project, said Tuesday.

His comments came as California Attorney General George Deukmejian asked the U.S. Supreme Court to end restrictions imposed on California fruits and vegetables by Texas, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama.

A lower-court judge in Dallas has temporarily blocked Texas' embargo and scheduled a hearing Saturday. Mike Wallace, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, growers' cooperative, said Tuesday state farmers will visit California this month before deciding whether to sue that state over its "ineffective" measures to fight the flies.

The Southern restrictions are unnecessary to protect public health and safety and have an "unduly burdensome impact upon California's economy," Deukmejian said.

A court spokeswoman said the five states and the Justice Department had been asked to file briefs by Friday.

Scribner warned that "foreign shippers are saying, 'With all this squabbling, maybe we should quarantine the whole country.' That's what they'll do. They don't just quarantine this state."

Trucks bearing California produce were stopped and searched at the boundaries of four of the Southern states again Tuesday, and some were turned away. Even though it can't turn any more trucks back, Texas is keeping its road crews at the borders.

The federal government has imposed a quarantine on a 2,082-square-mile, three-county area south and east of San Francisco.

Pesticide producer defends spraying program

WAYNE, N.J. (AP) — An official of the only American company manufacturing the pesticide being used against California's fruit flies insists the controversy over the spraying program is based on poor information.

Richard Lombardi, marketing manager of technical chemicals for American Cyanamid Co., said Tuesday recent statements defending the spraying of malathion may even help sales of the pesticide.

"I've referred to it before as general pesticide hysteria," Lombardi said of opposition to malathion spraying. After infestations of Mediterranean fruit flies were discovered in farms south of San Francisco several weeks ago, California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said he feared that spraying malathion would threaten human health.

But Brown ordered aerial spraying two weeks ago after U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block threatened a statewide quarantine and insisted there was no indication the insecticide would imperil humans.

Lombardi said malathion poses little danger to humans, who have an enzyme — carboxylesterase — in their bodies that helps combat the effects of the chemical. He added the pesticide is being used in California in low concentrations of 2.4 fluid ounces per acre of land, diluted in a soybean base that attracts the flies.

American Cyanamid, which sold more than $900 million worth of chemical products worldwide last year, manufactures malathion at a plant in Linden. Lombardi declined to reveal how much is manufactured or how much the company makes from malathion sales.

"We don't anticipate it hurting our business," he said in a telephone interview from the company's corporate headquarters in Wayne. He said in the past week, "factual information has come out, and most comments have been positive."

American Cyanamid, whose scientists developed and patented malathion in the late 1940s, faces competition for sales of the pesticide only from companies in France and Denmark, he said.

Malathion can be used against "well over 100" insect pests, Lombardi said, with the dosage and rate of application varying according to the target. Aerial spraying against mosquitoes would require a solution with 2.6 to 3 fluid ounces of malathion per acre, grasshoppers would be sprayed with 8 fluid ounces per acre and 12 to 16 fluid ounces per acre would be used for boll weevil control.

California is spraying 227 square miles of land in three south San Francisco Bay counties in the battle against the medfly. The insect infests 200 types of fruits and vegetables, including peppers, tomatoes and peaches.

Texas growers may sue California

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Texas citrus growers will visit California this month before deciding whether to sue that state over its "ineffective" measures to fight the Mediterranean fruit fly, says one industry spokesman.

Mike Wallace, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, said Tuesday that California produce growers also should be suing their state and the U.S. Agriculture Department for waiting so long to spray pesticides from helicopters against the insect.

"The agricultural industry here is likely to also bring suit against the state of California and its governor, to charge them with negligence. They're totally incompetent," Wallace said.

Texas officials are worried the destructive pest could migrate and infest crops. The Rio Grande Valley wiped out a medfly invasion in 1967 with aerial spraying.

Texas tried to impose a quarantine against California produce but a federal district judge ordered the roadblocks cleared Monday.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham of Dallas issued a temporary restraining order against roadblocks set up along the Texas-New Mexico border. He set a Saturday hearing on a request for a preliminary injunction.

Wallace and another industry official predicted the state of Texas would sue both the state of California and the USDA over handling of the medfly outbreak in a three-county area near San Jose.

"I think we've run our rope's end," said Bill Weeks of the Texas Citrus and Vegetables Growers and Shippers Association. "There's a strong possibility that many of the states that had tried to impose quarantines will be filing suit against the USDA to expand the federal quarantine from the three counties to the entire state of California."

The medfly lays eggs in host fruit and vegetables. Larvae can remain dormant underground and reappear the next season unless killed off by frost or pesticide.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Tuesday the state quarantine against 53 different fruit and vegetables had been lifted but that road crews would remain on the border until after the Saturday hearing.

Texas, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama imposed quarantines after California officials said the medfly situation was "out of control."

California Gov. Jerry Brown ordered aerial spraying of the insecticide Malathion over protests of some residents in the infested, suburban area. Brown acted after U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block said the federal government would ban interstate shipment of all unfumigated California produce that had not been certified free of medflies.

Wallace and other Texas officials have urged California to begin aerial spraying since the outbreak began, more than a year ago. California officials combatted the pest with ground spraying, stripping of tree fruit and a 630-square mile quarantine around Santa Clara County.

Texas ranks third behind Florida and California in citrus production. Eighty-five percent of Texas oranges and grapefruit are grown in Hidalgo County, in the semi-tropical Rio Grande Valley.

Weeks said Los Angeles is the top market for Texas citrus. Infested California shipments could carry medflies here, since truckers often unload California produce locally and reload with Texas goods, he said.

Wallace said Higginbotham had to rely on the law that allows the USDA to overrule state-imposed quarantines.

"The medfly, however, doesn't realize there's a restraining order on," Wallace said.

He also criticized U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block for his descriptions of the California situation.

"To have Secretary Block go on national television this morning and say there are relatively few medflies when there are tens of thousands of larvae," Wallace said. "That's an absolutely incredible statement for a secretary of agriculture to make. It only takes one fly."
