Clinton salutes soldiers

President visits Italy cemetery

■ Clinton to go to Britain today, then Normandy, to commemorate D-Day.

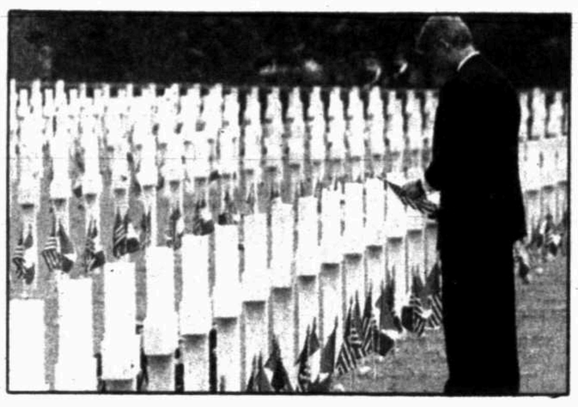

Associated Press

NETTUNO, Italy — Saluting valor on the battlefields of Italy, President Clinton stood Friday before the graves of Americans killed a half century ago and declared that "the sons and daughters of the world they saved" must now pursue their dreams of peace.

He spoke as the son of a soldier. The father Bill Clinton never knew served in Italy, and once wrote that he could not send home a leaf from an Italian tree, for "every one had been stripped by the fury of the battle."

The president walked among the white headstones of the Sicily-Rome American Cemetery at Nettuno, near the Anzio beachhead where U.S. and British forces came ashore in 1944.

Republicans file lawsuit against Gov. Richards

■ GOP claims governor blocks access to public records in her office.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state Republican Party filed a lawsuit Friday that alleged Gov. Ann Richards has illegally blocked access to public records in her office.

The lawsuit filed in Travis County asks that Richards be ordered to comply with the Texas Open Records Act. The GOP has also requested a temporary restraining order to prevent the destruction of public records.

A hearing in state district court has been set for June 14.

Richards' press secretary, Bill Cryer, denied the allegations. He accused the Republican Party of flooding the office with demands for records.

"We have been generous in our time and efforts in getting them the information they have requested," Cryer said.

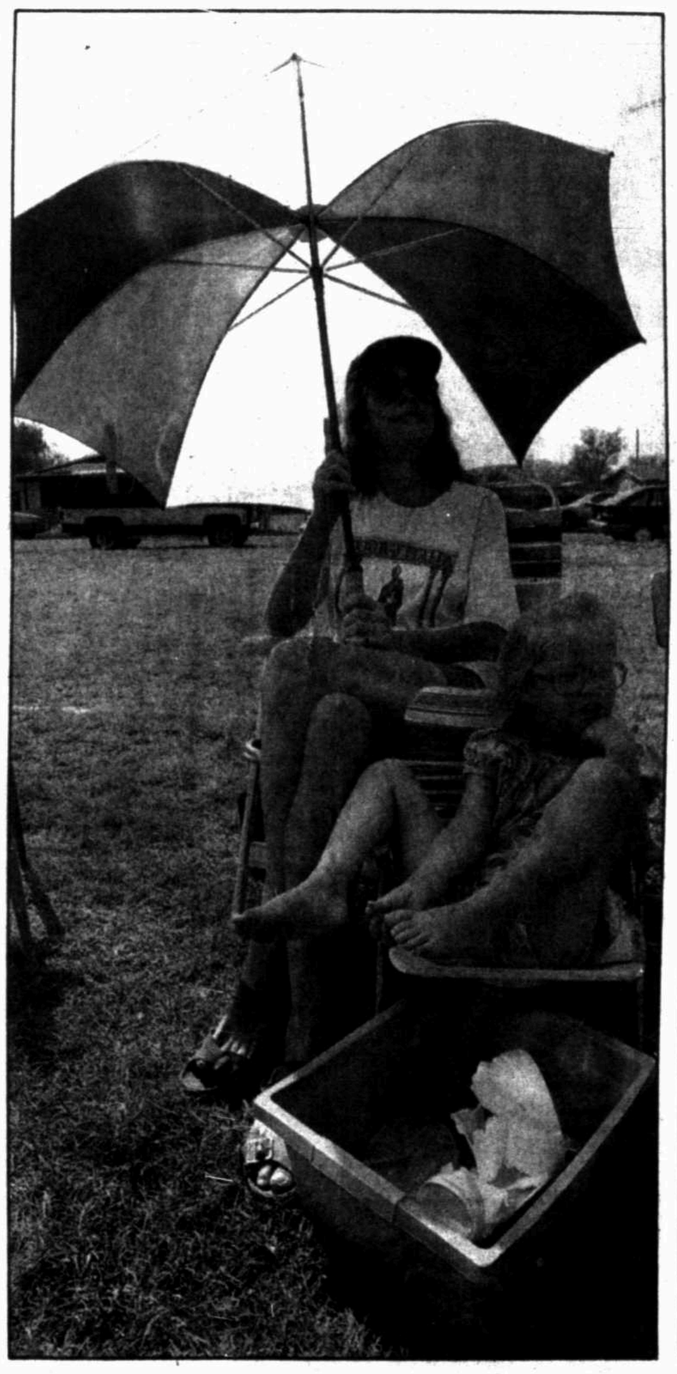

He added, "If the Republicans really want to cut back on wasteful government work they wouldn't file so many Open Records requests, which are essentially fishing expeditions to see what piece of paper they can find to use against Ann Richards."

Cryer said the GOP has filed 26 open records requests with the governor's office in the past year.

The Open Records Act says that information created, collected, assembled or maintained by governmental bodies is public except under certain circumstances.

At issue are open records requests for Richards' schedule, telephone records and information about "Capital for a

North Korea's nuclear program is probably in formative stages

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — There is no doubt North Korea has many key building blocks of a nuclear weapon, and the CIA says it probably has completed one or two. But the meaning of a "nuclear" North Korea is not as simple as it sounds.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the Korean nuclear puzzle.

Q. Could North Korea start a nuclear war now?

A. No one claims to know. If the CIA is right, the Koreans have stashed somewhere one or two nuclear "devices," meaning an assembly of nuclear material that, if properly detonated, could do enormous damage. But these are not nuclear weapons as we came to think of them from the U.S.-Soviet arms race. As far as the United States knows, North Korea is not yet capable of miniaturizing nuclear devices into warheads that

Series of scandalous events rock America's top ski resort

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

VAIL, Colo. — Things used to work so well in America's top-rated and most popular ski resort that the constant battle for parking was the talk of the town of 3,800. Now, the talk focuses on more serious matters:

■ Safety Manager Mary Lawrence being charged with vehicular homicide in the death of a 2-year-old girl run down in a stroller in September. Police believe Lawrence was stoned on cocaine. The victim's family has filed a $10 million lawsuit against the town.

■ Town Attorney Tom Moorhead's April 2 arrest on charges of driving under the influence and careless driving after he wrecked the $28,998 Saab assigned to him.

Israel moves tanks to Lebanese border

■ Armor, artillery columns to retaliate if Muslim Guerrillas in Lebanon renew rocket attacks on Jewish homeland. Lebanese villagers flee, northern Israel resorts empty.

Associated Press

METULLA, Israel — Columns of Israeli tanks and artillery parked along the northern border Friday, prepared to strike at Shiite Muslim guerrillas in Lebanon if they renewed rocket attacks on Israel.

Following a big Israeli air strike on a Hezbollah training camp Thursday and retaliation by guerrilla rockets, the confrontation threatened a 10-month partial truce as well as efforts to move Middle East peace talks along.

Hundreds of civilians fled north from villages in southern Lebanon and resorts in northern Israel emptied as fears spread about a surge of heavy fighting like a weeklong battle last July.

The exodus began after a night of Hezbollah guerrillas firing Katyusha rockets at northern Israel and Israeli troops shooting back with howitzers. The Israelis said the rockets caused no injuries or serious damage. No casualty reports were issued by Lebanese officials for the artillery shelling.

Israeli fighter jets screamed low across the hills of southern Lebanon throughout the day Friday, rattling the area with sonic booms but not making any attacks. No rocket attacks were reported.

The fighting began with Israel's deadliest raid in almost a year. Up to 50 people were reported killed and at least 30 wounded Thursday when Israeli jets and helicopter gunships attacked a base of the Iranian-supported Hezbollah in eastern Lebanon.

Uri Lubrani, Israel's top defense official for Lebanon, said the attack was a "signal that Hezbollah has no immunity when they place their bases in a Syrian-controlled area." With 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon, Syria is the main power broker in the country.

A long line of Israeli artillery, tanks and soldiers moved to the northern border. Some units crossed into the strip of southern Lebanon controlled by Israel.

"We reinforced artillery, armor and the air force on our northern boundary, and we are ready if they continue to attack," Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Mordechai, the northern commander, told reporters. "They will pay a high price for their activity."

Tanks and artillery pieces lined up next to the road near one crossing point. After loading ammunition and other gear, soldiers rested on their tanks, smoking in the sunshine.

Israel's emergency radio station told residents they could emerge from shelters and reinforced "security rooms" because no rockets fell during the day.

Vita Evelyn, a receptionist at the Snows of Lebanon Hotel in northern Israel, said guests left the hotel and the region in long convoys.

"Last night we were booked solid with 80 guests. Now we have 10, not counting the journalists, of course," she said.

Shops, banks, offices and schools shut down across Lebanon for a day of mourning ordered by the government. Victims of Thursday's air raid were buried after mass funeral processions in Beirut, Sidon, Tyre, Baalbek and other cities.

In Beirut's Bir al-Abed suburb, about 15,000 mourners marched behind seven coffins draped in Hezbollah's yellow flag inscribed in green with the word "Allah," Arabic for God.

Arafat recovers from throat infection at hospital in Tunis

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Yasser Arafat was recovering Friday from a throat infection that had caused concern about his health at a time when he is grappling with challenges to his authority.

Arafat fell ill Wednesday, and PLO officials and diplomats at first said doctors were contemplating flying him to Jordan for treatment.

But visitors said the 64-year-old PLO chairman chairman appeared to be getting better and resumed some of his duties Friday.

Among his appointments was a two-hour interview and lunch with anchorman Dan Rather of CBS News. The interview had been set for Wednesday, but was canceled when Arafat was taken to a Tunis hospital for a medical checkup after he reported feeling tired and achy.

"He looked good and energetic, but had a slight cough," Rather said after the interview.

Rather said Arafat's wife, Suha, attended the session and the PLO chief teased her about her English because of a remark she made Thursday saying he had "angina," which could mean a heart condition.

"He laughed at Suha's English over a statement she made to the press denying his illness, but saying he had angina when she meant 'angine,' which in French means sore throat," Rather said.

Mrs. Arafat, 31, is French-educated.

Tidal waves from quake bring death

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Twenty-foot tidal waves caused by a strong earthquake crashed ashore early Friday on sleeping coastal villages in Indonesia's main island of Java, killing at least 164 people.

More than 400 people were injured and another 42 missing in the aftermath of the deluge, said a meteorological official, Johannes Tasar. At least 413 houses and 245 fishing boats were swallowed by the raging waters, he said.

The predawn quake had a surface-wave magnitude of 7.2, according to the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo. Surface-wave magnitude is based on an analysis of seismic waves that travel along the earth's surface.

It was centered 18 miles beneath the Indian Ocean, 140 miles south of the eastern Java city of Malang and 577 miles southeast of the capital of Jakarta, Indonesian officials said.

Mexican prosecutor: Colosio's assassin may have acted alone

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A special prosecutor is retreating from claims that the assassination of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio was a conspiracy, but he says four men will remain imprisoned.

Special Prosecutor Miguel Montes Garcia announced Thursday night that more than two months of investigation have "not yielded new elements of proof" against three men who were suspected of aiding the confessed gunman.

"It strengthens the hypothesis that the murder was committed by a single man: Mario Aburto Martinez," Montes said.

Aburto, a 23-year-old factory worker, has made conflicting statements about the slaying, once referring to others involved but more generally insisting he acted alone. His motives remain unclear.

Montes' report, broadcast nationwide on television, followed growing criticism of the investigation and widespread popular suspicion of a cover-up in the March 23 murder of Colosio, candidate of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Mexico's most serious political assassination since 1928, the killing has combined with a rebellion by southern Indians, an economic slump and a wave of kidnappings to shake the nation's confidence heading into the Aug. 21 election.

Some recent polls have said Colosio's successor, Ernesto Zedillo, is running even with the opposition, opening the possibility that the PRI could lose the presidency for the first time since it was founded in 1929.

Montes said his office offered the court new evidence Thursday showing that Aburto acted with "premeditation and malice aforethought" in killing Colosio at an election rally in the border city of Tijuana.

Judges had earlier thrown out charges of premediation, saying prosecutors had offered insufficient proof to support that charge. Aburto claims he meant only to wound Colosio, not to kill him.

Montes' statement was another embarassing flip-flop.

Officials at first portrayed Aburto as a lone assassin, but then arrested several members of the security detail guarding Colosio.

On April 4, Montes announced that at least seven people appeared to have been involved, based largely on analysis of videotapes that seemed to show the men blocking Colosio's path or clearing a way for Aburto. At least five people were arrested, jailed and charged.

Yemeni cleric urges Muslims in north to rise against south

SAN'A, Yemen (AP) — The north's leading Islamic cleric issued a call to arms Friday for Muslims to fight secessionists from south Yemen.

The San'a leadership, meanwhile, accused the southern rebels of violating a U.N. cease-fire resolution by forming a competing government.

The call to arms by Sheik Mohammed Abdul Razak al-Rughayhi during a sermon at the Great Mosque in this northern capital reinforced fears that Wednesday's U.N. Security Council resolution will not halt the monthlong fighting.

"Every Muslim must be ready to join with his brothers, the sons of the armed forces," Rughayhi told hundreds of worshipers attending Muslim sabbath prayers.

"No one has an excuse but the old, invalid and female," he said in a sermon broadcast by San'a Radio.

The war began May 4 after the collapse of a four-year-old merger between the conservative, tribal north and the socialist south whose forces were Soviet-trained.

The union, once hailed as triumph for democracy in the Arab world, collapsed amid a power struggle between President Ali Abdullah Saleh and southern leader Ali Salem al-Beidh, his former vice president.

Beidh proclaimed the south's independence May 20. But the Democratic Republic of Yemen has yet to win any international recognition.

One mosque worshipper, Abdul Gadir al-Siraaj, a 28-year-old bookbinder, described the sheik as "a wise man. But we don't need him to tell us to go to Aden. We know what we must do."

Like many northern Muslims, Siraaj views the south, once a Marxist state with Soviet ties, as a godless place.

Despite the government's welcome of the U.N. resolution, Sheik Rughayhi rejected a U.N. role in what he called an "an internal problem which is only the concern of Yemenis."

Rughayhi's sermons have a major impact in this Muslim country, where religion pervades every aspect of daily life.

EDUCATE: Former drifter to attend Harvard

(From 1A)

As she and her mother moved among shelters and welfare hotels in three states, she turned to library books for solace.

This fall she'll be able to read in a room of her own — at Harvard University, which has extended a full scholarship to the 17-year-old Quincy High School senior.

Any chance Harvard is taking with Lauralee is overcome by the chance provided her.

"It's very rewarding to see Harvard pick up someone like Lauralee," says Charlie MacLaughlin, a Quincy High administrator. Harvard will "traditionally get the best of the best, but they tend to fit into that category of having the Harvard personality, and she is so different."

MacLaughlin is director of the high school's Heritage Program, which offers an alternative for dropouts, disciplinary problems and students such as Lauralee, who don't fit into a traditional school setting.

It's not that she's a rebellious or indifferent student. Lauralee ranks 15th in her 292-member class, which graduates Monday, and scored a top-notch 1460 on her SAT exams.

Not a naturally gifted athlete, she nonetheless runs distance races on the track team and, as Quincy's second female wrestler, won two matches against boys in the 112-pound weight class last winter.

She dyes her fair hair purple and wears a nose ring. She plays the violin — in the school's concert band because it has no orchestra, taking the parts written for oboe.

She tutors grade school children and does volunteer work for Amnesty International. She spent last summer in Florida with a church group, rebuilding homes for victims of Hurricane Andrew. She plans to study comparative religion at Harvard.

What's remarkable, considering such a resume, is that Lauralee spent most of her rootless childhood feeling alienated from classmates and bored by lessons she considered irrelevant. Yet she seems not in the least angry or arrogant.

In a one-on-one conversation, Lauralee is shy, ill-at-ease with praise, hesitant describing her stays in shelters.

It's in written words that she best finds her expression — in quotes from the Bible and from poet Emily Dickinson that hang in her room, or an essay she wrote for her college application:

"I learned that wealth is not what I have; rather it is who I am. Being poor, being homeless, having my startled eyes opened to blinding lights and long rows of metal cots from which so many strangers were arising, these were not disadvantages, but blessings, because they taught me more about myself."

Lauralee credits her mother and faith in God with motivating her to overcome a deprived, sometimes cruel childhood.

Elizabeth Summer was divorced, jobless and homeless in Santa Rosa, Calif., when Lauralee was born in November 1976. They went to Oregon to be near relatives, including Summer's four other children, and moved frequently as Summer, then 36, sought work as a nurse's aide.

Lauralee has sweet memories of sitting on her mother's lap listening to stories.

"She was about 20 months old when I began reading to her every single night," says Summer, who recalls a well-thumbed book of nursery rhymes. "I read the same book every night. That was the only book we had."

Lauralee's childhood also included homeless shelters in Phoenix and Santa Barbara, Calif.

At age 10, Lauralee tried fourth-grade classes in two Santa Barbara schools, then basically quit, opting to read to herself at the shelter.

"I hated school. I hated it because I didn't know anyone," she says. "I felt like school had no meaning for me, because it was like, 'Why do I want to learn about that when my life is so strange?'"

Back in Oregon where Summer found work, Lauralee still felt out of place with peers. She retreated again into books, sometimes borrowing so many from the library that her mother couldn't see her head above the wobbly stacks.

In her essay, Lauralee describes her mother as "a dreamer with many castles in the air, but few foundations beneath them." But the dreamer was looking out for the daughter.

Aware of Massachusetts' array of colleges, Summer came to believe her daughter would get a better education on the other side of the country. The two arrived by bus in October 1989.

First stop was a Boston homeless shelter, then a room in a welfare hotel. Lauralee spent three months in a foster home when Summer took a live-in job caring for a paraplegic.

Then, as part of a church program, the Summers had supper at the Quincy home of Marion Stout. In 1990, she invited them to move in. They still live there.

murder charges in the shooting of his wife, Mimi. (The couple earlier were charged with child abuse after leaving their 11-year-old daughter alone at home while they took a four-day business trip to Montana.) Mach was charged with first-degree murder Thursday and is being held without bail at Eagle County Jail in Eagle.

Even the privately owned ski area hasn't escaped trouble. One of its employees was killed in February after he jumped off the edge of a road while skiing, slamming into a British tourist and seriously injuring her.

"This has not been a very pleasant year for the town," town Manager Bob McLaurin said.

He has spent hours this week talking with members of the city's 205 full-time staff members "just to make sure everyone here is OK." Counseling was offered, though McLaurin said morale remained good.

"This is just an unrelated series of unfortunate events. We can't hide that. We're not trying to hide it. We're trying to deal with it. We'll come out of this even stronger," he said.

Art Kittay, an outspoken critic of the town government, cracked that the town fortunately is building a police building right next to the administration building: "They can move them from the administrative office right into jail."

He said it's a scandal that all three of these town officials remained on the payroll after being charged. All three had pleaded innocent to the charges and are awaiting trial.

Gaye Steinke, manager of the Vail Athletic Club, said, "It's almost like their alleged crimes match their jobs. I mean the safety director . . ."

She sees it as just a coincidence "but it doesn't reflect well on Vail. I just hope they face up to the charges and don't try to hide behind their positions."

Said Police Chief Ken Hughey: "My gut feeling is now that the initial shock is over, people are getting on with their lives."

"I think that everyone is probably shaken by the number of tragedies we have had," Mayor Peggy Osterfoss said. "All of us live in an upbeat place where positive things go on and well, tragedy seems distant."

WEAPON: Program is still in formative stages

could be put atop missiles or bombs.

Q. What purpose do those few nuclear devices serve, then?

A. They could, theoretically, be smuggled across the southern border and detonated in Seoul, the capital where more than one-quarter of South Koreans live. But the North certainly knows that in such an event, U.S. and South Korean forces would still be able to launch devastating strikes deep into the North. In the estimation of many experts, the communist state would be crushed in a matter of weeks.

Q. Is that the worst-case scenario?

A. At the moment it is. The best case is that the North Koreans are being truthful in their claims that they have no nuclear weapons and have no plans to build any. Evidence from International Atomic Energy Agency inspections in 1992, however, tends to discount that possibility.

Walter Slocombe, a top Pentagon policy official, told Congress in late March that for North Korea to have as many as two nuclear devices today it would have had to remove and replace every one of the 8,000 fuel rods in its small nuclear reactor when it shut down the plant for about three months in 1989. The Koreans claim they removed and replaced a much smaller number, and that the tiny amount of plutonium from those rods has been seen and verified by inspectors.

Q. What does North Korea's nuclear program look like?

A. It is centered at Yongbyon, a city about 50 miles north of the capital, Pyongyang. It includes a 5-megawatt reactor, a larger reactor under construction, and a laboratory with facilities for separating plutonium from fuel taken out of the reactor. North Korea contends the reactor is used to produce electricity for civilian use, and that the laboratory is strictly for peaceful research. The reactor, by the way, was acquired from the former Soviet Union.

Q. How did the North Koreans get the plutonium?

A. Plutonium is present in small amounts in the fuel rods of all nuclear reactors, once the rods have been used up, or spent. It is produced when uranium-238 is irradiated in the reactor. When separated from the spent reactor fuel through a chemical process known as reprocessing, plutonium can be used for nuclear weapons. It also is suitable as reactor fuel. The issue with the North Koreans is not whether they possess plutonium — they acknowledge that — but how much they have and, more importantly, what they are doing with it.

Q. What makes the United States think the plutonium is being used for weapons?

A. Several things. U.N. inspectors in 1992 reported that samples of nuclear waste they took at Yongbyon did not match samples of nuclear fuel. That pointed to the likelihood that North Korea had produced more plutonium than it acknowledged. U.S. spy satellites also provided photographs of two concealed nuclear waste sites near Yongbyon.

SUE: GOP files lawsuit against Texas governor

(From 1A)

Day" and "Youth Summit" programs.

"It makes me both sad and deeply angry that I as a citizen of Texas have to go to court to force my elected officials to comply with the law," said State Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer.

"The governor's office has stalled, stonewalled, deliberately missed deadlines required by law, ignored whole portions of our requests, demanded large sums of money for copy costs and in every way possible attempted to keep public documents hidden from the public," Meyer said.

Also named in the lawsuit is the Texas Department of Public Safety, which has refused to release Richards' travel records. The DPS claims making that information public "would adversely impact the personal safety and protection of the governor."

The lawsuit also alleges that the state attorney general's office, which interprets and enforces the Open Records Act, has not acted in a timely manner on questions raised by the governor's office over whether certain records could be made public.

"After months of waiting . . . the office of attorney general has yet to issue a decision on the requests that were submitted by the office of the governor. Other, similar requests for information from the office of the governor have languished in the office of attorney general for half a year now," the lawsuit says.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, denies that the office has been dragging its feet.

He said open records questions are handled as quickly as possible. "It depends on how complicated the issues are, how voluminous the records are," he said.

The documents sought by the Republican Party include records about the review and destruction of phone records in the governor's office.

Earlier this year it was discovered that Richards' office had destroyed years of long-distance phone records a few weeks after Travis County prosecutors raided the state Treasury and seized records of Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

The Republican Party is being represented in the lawsuit by Jennifer Riggs, an Austin attorney.

HONOR: Clinton salutes those who served

(From 1A)

He reached down to right a toppled American flag at one grave marker.

The first Americans were buried at Nettuno two days after the Anzio landing, in what was then a vineyard. "Row upon row of white marble stretches now before us, 7,862 markers in all," Clinton said. Names of more than 3,000 missing Americans are inscribed on a chapel wall.

So began Clinton's commemoration of the turning-point battles of World War II, which ended before he was born. Clinton goes to Britain today, then across the English Channel to Normandy, to commemorate D-Day, June 6, 1944, history's greatest invasion.

He said the battle lessons and German troop diversions of the Italian front "helped to win the day at Normandy."

"We stand today in fields forever scarred by sacrifice," Clinton said. "Fifty years ago, when freedom was in peril, this field ran with the blood of those who fought to save the world."

Yet too many of today's Americans do not know what that generation did, Clinton said. He said the memory of valor cannot be left to a medal rummaged from an attic, or a black and white photograph of a young soldier.

"We are the sons and daughters of the world they saved," Clinton said. "Now our moment for common cause has come. It is up to us to ensure a world of peace and prosperity for yet another generation."

It was hot, sunny and hazy at Nettuno, 38 miles south of Rome, on a long-ago battlefield that Clinton said was "now a place of peace . . . lush with the pines and the cypresses."

U.S. and Italian honor platoons fired salutes. As a bugler sounded Taps, Clinton and Italian President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro stood, braced at attention, on the columned memorial before the lawn of graves.

Uniformed units, veterans in campaign caps, Italian and American officials, and an audience of several thousand watched and listened.

Among them were some veterans who haven't forgiven Clinton's avoidance of the Vietnam War draft. "He could have served but didn't," Regis Dinkel of Pittsburgh, a 71-year-old Anzio veteran, told reporters. Bill Mohr of Kokomo, Ind., said the consensus among his group of 170 veterans was that Clinton shouldn't be there, "but we got to respect the office."

The Anzio landings, inelegantly code-named "Shingle," led toward the liberation of Rome from the Germans on June 4, 1944.

Scalfaro remembered war and the liberation. "I cannot forget that in the tragic division of my own country there was suffering and bloodshed at the hands of other countrymen," he said.

In the first years of the war, Italy, under fascist Benito Mussolini, was allied with Adolph Hitler's Germany. Mussolini fell, and Italy surrendered on Sept. 8, 1943, as the American and British forces invaded.

Scalfaro recalled the triumphal entry of American forces, and the days when Italian partisans, who had fought fascist and German forces, "came out of hiding from the mountains after many, many months."

Clinton spoke his memories, too. His father, William Blythe II, was killed in an automobile accident six months after returning home in December 1945 from Army service in Italy. Clinton was born three months after his father died and later took his stepfather's surname.

Clinton said a niece once wrote Blythe in Caserta, Italy, to ask "for a single leaf from one of the glorious trees here to take to school. My father had only sad news to send back — there were no leaves; every one had been stripped by the fury of battle."

John Shirley, a decorated veteran of Anzio from Livermore, Calif., called that Italian campaign "one of the deadliest of the war" as he introduced Clinton.

Studies link hot dogs to childhood cancers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children who eat more than 12 hot dogs a month develop the risk of childhood leukemia nine times above normal, according to a study.

Other researchers warned, however, that such studies are hard to conduct and interpret because it is difficult for subjects to accurately recall what they have eaten, among other reasons.

"There are an enormous number of variables in a study like this," said Michael Pariza, a nutrition expert at the University of Wisconsin.

"You don't know whether they were undernourished, for example, or if they had adequate exercise. ... It would be extremely premature to draw any conclusion from this type of study."

The research was published in the journal Cancer Causes and Control, as were two others about hot dogs. Those two found children born to mothers who eat at least one hot dog per week during pregnancy have double the normal risk of developing brain tumors, as do children whose fathers ate hot dogs before conception.

The Los Angeles Times reported on the studies Friday, noting that critics attacked the studies because they appeared in a journal that fails to get outside experts to critique results before publishing them.

The researchers, led by University of Southern California epidemiologist John Peters, believe the findings may explain a two-decade rise in reported childhood leukemia and brain tumors. They suggest the trigger for the cancers could be nitrites used to preserve processed meats.

The investigators don't advise people to give up hot dogs, saying their studies are too preliminary to have established a cause-and-effect link. The research was based on relatively few cases: 621 cancer victims and an equally sized control group.

Work that could confirm the studies is under way: University of Minnesota researchers have modified their National Cancer Institute-sponsored study on childhood leukemia to explore the possible connection to hot dogs.

David Savitz, author of one of the studies on pregnant women, said the incidence of these childhood tumors is still low. There's nothing to show that eating hot dogs poses a hazard at the level of tobacco smoke or high-fat diets, he said.

"The rational response would be a small modification of your consumption," said Savitz, an epidemiologist at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Clark Heath, vice president for medical research of the American Cancer Society, said no definite link has been shown between hot dogs and the childhood cancers.

Africa Hut counters Western fast-food with traditional cuisine

By Donna Bryson
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Bouncy "township jive" blaring over the sound system is the first hint that Africa Hut is not just any fast-food restaurant.

The menu confirms it: pap served with malamagodu or morogo, samp and steak, and skop.

Most black South Africans already know such tastes and sounds. But they're exotic in downtown Johannesburg, which often seems like a bustling temple to Western culture, with American-style chicken and burger joints on every corner.

"We have been shy to eat our food in town. Now, with the new South Africa, we want to show we are Africans," said Boysea Thole, owner of an Africa Hut franchise that opened last month in a swank pedestrian mall in the city center.

He had little time to talk during the lunch rush Friday, dashing from kitchen to counter to replenish trays with towers of stiff corn porridge known as pap and peppery-salty mounds of malagodu (tripe), morogo (a leafy green vegetable) and samp, a mixture of hominy and beans.

Bright geometric designs of S. Africa's Ndebele tribe decorate 1-room restaurant with half dozen tables. Smocks, tall toques, or hats, echo tribal motif.

The skop — sheeps' heads — had a few more hours to boil before they could be split open and served.

"It's going like fat cakes," Thole said with a grin, referring to the greasy fried dough treats also featured on his menu.

Nursing students Hilda Rasebeka and Algie Masinga were among the satisfied customers, most of them black.

"We didn't have any menu like this one, except at home," Rasebeka said as she licked her fingers over a plate of pap and chicken stew. "We are proud of our tradition, that's why we come here."

Africa Hut's fare would likely appeal to American palates familiar with soul food. And it would certainly appeal to American pocketbooks.

A filling portion of pap with chicken stew and morogo costs about $1.60, half the price of the two-piece chicken dinner at a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet across the street.

"It's good stuff, really," Thole said. "Even if you're not used to eating it, you'll like it. It really does taste like home."

Gunfire in Rwanda halts U.N. evacuations

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — The United Nations resumed its evacuation of refugees and survivors of Rwanda's ethnic slaughter from Kigali on Friday, but quickly shut it down again after convoys twice came under fire.

No one was injured, but U.N. officials, who thought they had agreement from the government and rebels on getting the refugees out, protested vigorously to both sides. It was the first attempted evacuation in three days.

Outside the capital, rebels claimed to have captured the key town of Kabgayi and appeared to be closing in on Gitarama, the seat of the beleaguered interim government, a U.N. spokesman said.

Thousands of people — apparently including some government officials — have fled west from Gitarama toward Lake Kivu and the border with Zaire as the rebels approached.

More than 2 million people have fled their homes in Rwanda, where nearly two months of fighting and ethnic savagery have claimed an estimated 200,000 lives.

Tight security marks China's Tiananmen massacre anniversary

AP Laserphoto

Chinese soldiers of the Peoples Liberation Army drill just north of Beijing's Tiananmen Square friday, the eve of the fifth anniversary of the crackdown on student pro-democracy protesters. On the night of June 4, 1989, PLA troops shot their way through the streets of Beijing, killing hundreds. to retake the square from protesters.

■ Police ban nearly all events that might lead to crowds forming — including art exhibits, softball games, parties.

By Somnuk Fu Chin
Associated Press

BEIJING — The parents of a 17-year-old boy killed when the army quashed pro-democracy protests on Tiananmen Square five years ago fasted Friday to commemorate the hundreds who died in the crackdown.

But the couple's action was the only publicly declared protest marking the anniversary in Beijing, as pervasive police security dissuaded most people from even going to the square.

Ding Zilin and her husband, Jiang Peikun, both professors at People's University in Beijing, had appealed to authorities to lift a 24-hour police watch from their home so they could mourn in peace.

They began a two-day fast at home Thursday night because their appeals were ignored.

Police have targeted Ding because she compiles lists of people killed when troops and tanks rolled through Beijing in 1989, firing at random and seizing Tiananmen Square from student protesters. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, were killed.

The government has refused to release a death toll or a list of names, and most victims' families are too scared to speak out.

Ding said her son "was shot between 11:05 and 11:15 p.m. on June 3. . . . But I'm going to continue the fast until June 4 to commemorate the others who died."

She spoke to a Western journalist who convinced an operator to connect a call to her home. Other callers were told the line was down and Ding was unable to dial out.

The square itself, which five years ago was the noisy, bustling encampment for the student-led movement for democracy and cleaner government, had extra uniformed and plainclothes police, but fewer than for past anniversaries.

Children flew kites, tourists strolled and snapped photos. About 2,000 people, normal for this time of year, gathered to watch troops go through the daily ritual of furling the national flag at sunset.

Much of the square was cleared for part of the afternoon during an official reception for King Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia. He laid a wreath at the Monument to the People's Heroes, which stands in the heart of the square and was the headquarters for student leaders in 1989.

Chinese are forbidden from laying flowers or holding ceremonies at the monument.

Police barred nearly all events this week which could have led to crowds forming — including art exhibits, softball games, and parties. They ordered workplaces to keep their employees from the square, and said workers should go home early at night. Surveillance cameras on the square were serviced.

Many Chinese involved in the 1989 movement left Beijing to avoid police harassment. While there were no serious expectations of public protests or commemorations, police were still nervous.

Beginning Thursday, police ordered hotels to turn off the Cable News Network, apparently fearing they might broadcast shots of 1989. Residents in special apartment blocks for foreigners said they could still watch CNN, but the screen went black whenever it broadcast footage from China.

North Korean threats will not intimidate U.S., allies, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threats by North Korea will not intimidate the United States and its allies as they explore punitive economic sanctions against the Pyongyang government, a senior U.S. official said Friday.

North Korea has warned it would consider sanctions, which the Clinton administration is now aggressively seeking, an act of war. In heated talks with South Korea the North once threatened that Seoul would become "a sea of fire," though the threat later was retracted.

The United States began intensive consultations Friday with South Korea, Japan and Russia on how to retaliate for North Korea's removal of vital evidence about its nuclear weapons capability. The talks explored a range of options, from a full cutoff of trade to milder measures.

"We will not be intimidated by them," Assistant Secretary of State Robert L. Gallucci said. "We don't think the international community will be intimidated by them."

And yet, emphasizing the situation was serious, Gallucci also told reporters: "There are a lot of lives at stake if this situation gets out of hand."

He began the consultations with Kim Sam Hoon, South Korea's special nuclear envoy, who in an exchange with reporters seemed resolute.

Administration weighs English only work rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employers should be barred from requiring workers to speak only English on the job unless it's a business necessity, Clinton administration lawyers are telling the Supreme Court.

"Depriving persons of the opportunity to use the language in which they communicate most effectively cannot be characterized as a de minimus (minor) injury," Justice Department lawyers said in a brief filed this week.

The high court in March had asked for the government's views of a federal appeals court ruling that let a California company impose an English-only rule on Spanish-speaking employees.

Such rules are increasingly common nationwide. The federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has about 120 cases in which 67 different employers are accused of unfairly imposing English-only rules, the government's brief said.

"The court of appeals' decision is wrong" and makes it too difficult for ethnic minorities to challenge English-only rules that aren't justified by any business necessity, the government lawyers argued.

The court has not yet said whether it will review an appeal by two bilingual workers who said their employer illegally discriminated against them by imposing an English-only rule.

Now that the government's requested brief has been filed, word from the court could come within the next few weeks.

Priscilla Garcia and Marciela Buitrago, together with their labor union, sued the Spun Steak Co. in South San Francisco in 1991, alleging that its English-only rule violated a federal law barring on-the-job bias based on national origin.

Spun Steak runs a meat-processing plant where the two women worked on a production line. The company employs 33 people. Most of them, like Garcia and Buitrago, are Hispanic and bilingual.

Report: Economy loses steam despite improved job figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's unemployment rate showed its best one-month improvement in more than a decade in May, the government said Friday. The report nonetheless indicated the economy is losing steam.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate for May was 6 percent, down from 6.4 percent in April. It was the lowest level since November 1990 and the largest one-month decline since the rate fell from 9.2 percent in September 1983 to 8.8 percent in October.

Contrasting that news was a smaller-than-expected increase in the number of workers added to the nation's nonfarm payrolls. The government's survey showed an increase of 191,000 new workers; most economists had expected as many as 280,000.

Still, the White House hailed the report.

President Clinton, traveling in Italy, said it "clearly supports the wisdom of the economic strategy we have been following, a determined effort to bring the deficit down, to get investment in education and training and new technologies up, to expand trade."

Laura Tyson, Clinton's chief economic adviser, said during a White House briefing that the report was "good news for American workers, American businesses and American families."

She said it "indicates that the economic expansion continues on track."

Private economists were not so enthusiastic.

The economy is growing "a lot slower than we've been seeing," said economist Michael P. Niemira of Mitsubishi Bank in New York.

Stephen Roach, senior economist with New York-based Morgan Stanley & Co., said it "points to a moderation of economic activity from the strong gains of late last year and early this year."

There is no indication the economy "has suddenly turned sluggish," said Robert G. Dederick, chief economist with Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "But it has lost that vigorous course that it had earlier."

There was a positive reaction on Wall Street, which had feared a much higher number of new jobs that could have signaled higher inflation later.

The increase in the nonfarm payrolls was considerably smaller than the average of 260,000 for the first four months of the year. It was even less taking into account the 70,000 Teamsters union members who returned to work after a nationwide trucking strike.

As expected, the vast majority of the new jobs were in service-related industries, although the increase of 183,000 jobs in that sector was less than in prior months.

Employment in finance, insurance and real estate declined, which reflected in part "the impact of rising interest rates on refinancing and home purchases," said Katharine G. Abraham, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Economists say mortgage refinancing has nearly come to a standstill.

The number of retail jobs increased a modest 31,000 after rising 80,000 in April and 74,000 in March.

Trainer Bill Reeves holds Pat C. Rendezvous, the hottest star in greyhound racing. The 2-year-old sensation, known as Rhonda to her adoring fans, broke the American record and tied the world record with her 32nd consecutive win on Wednesday night at the Palm Beach Kennel Club. She may break the world record when she runs tonight.

Fans go wild over champion race dog that may break record

By John Pacenti
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — She loves riding in white stretch limousines, just adores the flash of the paparazzi and relishes gifts from her fans, whether they give her roses or candy — or dog bones.

Dog bones? Yes, the hottest star in greyhound racing is Pat C Rendezvous, and she could make history tonight by breaking the world record for consecutive victories.

The 2-year-old sensation, known as Rhonda to fans, broke the American record and tied the world record Wednesday night with her 32nd consecutive triumph.

After the victory at the Palm Beach Kennel Club, she rode to the winner's circle in a limousine and was rewarded with two dozen roses, dog biscuits and her favorite treat, marshmallows.

"I was in the back of the limousine," trainer Bill Reeves said. "Rhonda took the limelight. It was like, 'Get out of my way, I got to get to the window. I got the fans out there yelling, and you're just in the way.' "

This 61-pound dog seems to live for the attention. She has her own souvenir T-shirt — autographed with a big black paw print — and a trading card.

Track spokesman Theresa Hume said attendance has doubled for Rhonda's last four races and is up more than 225,000 over last year. Some fans keep their betting tickets as souvenirs rather than cashing them in for an average payoff of only about 80 cents on a $2 bet.

Successful greyhound smiles at fans through windows of stretch limousine while riding to winner's circle, gets dog biscuits, roses.

"I've been here for 14 years and I've never seen the crowds we have for her," Hume said. "They've written poems about her. It's crazy."

One fan even crocheted a rug for Rhonda, Hume said.

"You can't believe this is an animal," said Joe Famiglietti, a fan. "She's a machine."

The streak began Dec. 29 at the Palm Beach Kennel Club. She has broken the 38-second barrier 22 times on the ⅜-mile course and holds the fastest time of the Kennel Club's season at 37.52 seconds. She broke the track record April 15 with her 22nd consecutive victory and won its $25,000 stakes race.

She has career earnings of $40,985 — $32,986 of it during the streak.

Now, she will try to smash the world record set by English greyhound Ballyregan Bob in 1986. It won't be easy. She's up against her nemesis, She Drops Bombs, who has finished second to Rhonda eight times during the streak.

On April 29, Rhonda fell way behind She Drops Bombs but doggedly rallied to win by a head for her 25th consecutive victory. The comment on the Rosnet Greyhound Report: "Refused to lose."

"That's when I knew this dog could do anything," Reeves said.

For Reeves, who has been in the business for 20 years, the streak has been nothing short of a dream.

"This is the ultimate," Reeves said. "I've won stakes races before, but I've never had a run like this."

Church agrees to stop stockpiling weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survivalist church agreed Friday to stop stockpiling weapons on its ranch near Yellowstone National Park in exchange for the restoration of its tax-exempt status.

The Church Universal and Triumphant notified U.S. District Court Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer it was withdrawing its 1992 lawsuit against the Internal Revenue Service, which had revoked the group's tax exemption starting on May 1, 1987.

In return, the IRS restored the group's exemption except for the two years between May 1, 1988 to April 30, 1990. In a statement, the church said it would pay no additional income taxes as a result of the settlement and that a separate dispute involving payroll taxes of its employees remained pending.

The government, in revoking the church's status and seeking as much as $2.6 million in back taxes and penalties, had accused the church of amassing a large stockpile of military-style weapons, including semiautomatic rifles, armored personnel carriers and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

After last year's fiery clash between federal agents and the Branch Davidian sect near Waco. Church leaders have vigorously denied any similarity between their religious community and the Davidians.

In Friday's agreement, the church agreed not to own or stockpile weapons and to dispose of any existing weapons within 90 days.

Also the owner of armored personnel carriers, which had been stored on church property, agreed to sell them. And the Rocky Mountain Sportsmen and Survival Club, a group formed by church members, agreed to sell its weapons.

The church also said it would to prohibit anyone convicted of a felony from having access to weapons on its property. That provision will effectively prevent church Vice President Edward Francis and church member Vernon Hamilton from any involvement with weapons. They pleaded guilty in 1989 to using false names in an attempt to acquire weapons and ammunition.

However, individual church members will be permitted to keep weapons in their homes and vehicles in accordance with federal and local laws. And they will be allowed to bring them to the church's fallout shelter "in the event of an actual nuclear war or similar emergency."

After Friday's settlement, church leaders issued a statement saying that all contributions to it would be fully tax-deductible. They planned a celebration picnic.

Aristide calls for swift action to reverse Haiti coup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deposed Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide tantalized a gathering here Friday by calling for "swift and determined" action to reverse Haiti's military coup, but he stopped short of a direct appeal for U.S. military intervention.

Aristide, still hoping to be reinstated after more than 2½ years in exile, said he does not seek a military occupation of Haiti. He added that the Haitian Constitution forbids him from requesting military intervention.

But, he said, "swift and determined action should be taken to remove the coup leaders" within the framework of the agreement he and the military chieftains signed last year to restore him to power.

The military reneged on that agreement, and the Clinton administration has been resorting to tightened economic pressure to force Haiti's top brass to surrender.

Aristide spoke to a Capitol Hill luncheon gathering sponsored by the TransAfrica lobbying group.

He was asked repeatedly by reporters what he meant by "swift and determined" action but refused to be more specific.

His appearance followed an account of a New York Times interview in which he said the United States should be "moving toward a surgical action" that could depose the military.

Police arrest 2 in deaths of 4 Texans in fire

HARVEY, La. (AP) — Two motel maids were arrested Friday in the deaths of four Texas tourists killed in a fire last weekend, Jefferson Parish authorities said.

Lillie T. Harvey, 18, and Ruby A. Washington, 20, both of New Orleans, each were booked with four counts of negligent homicide and one count of negligent injury, sheriff's detectives said.

Harvey had worked for the Peacock Plaza Inn for six months; Washington for one month. The motel is located in Metairie, a suburb of New Orleans.

During the investigation, authorities said the women gave conflicting accounts about a man who allegedly was seen going into a linen room just prior to the fire.

After further questioning, the women told detectives they were smoking in and near the room. Afraid that an approaching guest would report them, they threw their cigarettes into the room and left the area.

■ More state news/10C

The cigarettes ignited rags, which were soaked with cleaning chemicals, detectives said at a news conference. Within minutes, the two women said they saw flames shooting out of the room.

Sheriff's deputies had been searching for a man who, witnesses said, became upset when another housekeeper refused to give him a towel.

The women admitted that a man did inquire about towels, but he was not involved with the fire, detectives said.

The four men who died in the blaze were identified as: Douglas Hayes, 37, of Longview; Russell Saunders, 27, of Beckville; Glen Carruth, 24, of Kilgore; and Anthony Allen Halliburton, 18, of Longview.

All four worked at a landscaping company, Carruth Landscaping, owned by Carruth's father, and went to New Orleans for the Memorial Day weekend, Richard Halliburton said in a telephone interview from his home in Longview.

Two other guests of the motel and 11 firefighters were injured in the fire, which started around 1 p.m. Sunday in the motel's first-floor laundry room.

Jefferson Parish Fire Department spokesman George Rigamer said the fire was brought under control around 2 p.m.

Survey shows school choices are available

AUSTIN (AP) — Tens of thousands of Texas students have taken advantage of programs in their districts that give them some choice in which school they attend, according to a survey released Friday.

That's just a fraction of the approximately 3.5 million schoolchildren in the state, and advocates of using tax money for private schools say the programs that do exist don't go nearly far enough.

But Texas Association of School Boards spokeswoman Nancy Cotton says her group's survey shows that "there's really a surprising amount of locally initiated school choice that's going on in Texas under current state law."

The school board group sent the survey to the state's 93 largest school districts and 60 other districts of varying size, wealth and location in April and May.

Sixty-nine districts with close to 1.3 million students responded, out of 3.5 million children in more than 1,000 districts statewide.

Thirty-five of the districts responding said they offer an open enrollment or open transfer program between schools within their district boundaries. About 52,000 students participated in those programs in 1993-94.

State law also allows students to transfer from their home school district with approval of the receiving district and the parents. In the school districts that responded to the survey, 6,350 used such transfers.

One-third of the responding school districts said they offer magnet schools or programs, which provide special study in subjects such as math, science, fine arts or vocational education. Students from each district, or sometimes from other districts, generally apply for admission.

State law also allows school districts to contract with a public or private entity for educational services; 25 of those responding to the survey did so, affecting 2,800 students.

The Texas Association of School Boards also noted that under a 1991 state initiative, selected schools that want to revamp programs to improve student performance can get relief.

Principal of Catholic school faces charge of public lewdness

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Catholic high school principal faces trial later this month on a misdemeanor charge of public lewdness following an incident at a public park, police said.

The Rev. David Jerome Paul, president and principal of Nolan Catholic High School for the past two years, was arrested April 21 by Fort Worth police at Gateway Park, not far from the school.

Paul, 56, was not available for comment Friday.

Police said Paul made sexual advances toward a male undercover police officer, rubbing his hand against the officer's pants in the groin area.

A police report quotes Paul as telling the officer that he often visits the park because sexual activity occurs there.

"After a short conversation, this person grabbed him (the officer) over his genital area and, subsequently, he was arrested for public lewdness," said Fort Worth police Sgt. Floyd Hopper.

Paul faces a Class A misdemeanor charge, punishable by up to a year in jail and a $3,000 fine.

The Rev. Robert Wilson, chancellor of the Catholic Diocese of Fort Worth, said the diocese will issue a statement Friday.

A priest in the diocese, who asked not to be identified, credited Paul with building up enrollment at the school.

"It has been busting at the seams in enrollment," the priest said. "It has been administrated very well."

Knicks force 7th game

■ Former Dallas Maverick Derek Harper scores the go-ahead basket as New York evens its NBA Eastern Conference final series with Indiana 3-3.

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller's fourth-quarter mastery fell short Friday night as the New York Knicks held on in the final minutes to force a seventh game of the Eastern Conference finals against Indiana.

John Starks scored 26 points, Derek Harper made the go-ahead basket with 1:50 left and the Knicks held the Pacers scoreless over the last two minutes for a 98-91 victory and a 3-3 tie in the best-of-7 series.

New York, which scored just 11 points over the first 10 minutes of the fourth quarter, held the Pacers without a field goal in five attempts in the final five minutes. The Knicks scored the last seven points of the game after Miller, who scored 12 of his 27 points in the final period, tied the score with a free throw with 2:06 left.

Starks, an All-Star who averaged 19 points, has struggled in the Indiana series, making just 34.6 percent of his shots over the first five games while being overshadowed by Miller.

But he regained his form Friday night, making eight of 11 shots, including his first five 3-point attempts. He was also the reason Miller couldn't repeat his 25-point fourth quarter of Game 5 as he constantly fought through picks and kept him from getting open shots.

"It's going to be a big test. We just wanted to get it back to the Garden," Starks said. "We treated it like it was the seventh game of the championship. We came out good and maintained our defensive intensity."

The Pacers' three victories after starting the best-of-7 series with two losses in New York had them thinking upset for the third time in the playoffs.

Fifth-seeded Indiana eliminated fourth-seeded Orlando and top-seeded Atlanta in the previous two rounds of the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Knicks beat the Pacers in all four regular-season meetings and finished with the second-best record in the conference.

Capriati trouble

MIAMI — An attorney contended Friday that tennis star Jennifer Capriati bought drugs for his client and seduced him into becoming a drug user again after he had come clean.

Ellis Rubin, a well-known Miami attorney who is running for the U.S. Senate, said he would sue Capriati and her lawyer next week on behalf of Nathan Wilson, an 18-year-old who met Capriati through a mutual friend who had been at a drug treatment program with them.

"That's when Jennifer decided that Nathan would be a good person to supply her with cocaine," Rubin said at a news conference in his law offices.

Capriati "induced Nathan to forget about the drug rehab program he had just completed and was straight ... (and) seduced him into using," said Rubin.

UH no closer

HOUSTON — The University of Houston appears no closer to a new home once the Southwest Conference breaks up in the fall of 1996.

Both the Metro and Great Midwest conferences have again expressed their interest in adding the University of Houston as a member and say they expect to make quick progress toward a league for their football-playing members.

But UH officials say the ball is in the two conferences' court.

UH athletic director Bill Carr met with representives from the both conferences a month ago, the school said Friday.

French Open has All-Spanish final

■ Jim Courier's four-year string of French Open men's finals ends with Friday's loss to Spaniard Sergi Bruguera.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — For the first time in four years, Jim Courier won't be playing in the French Open final. For the first time in history, two Spaniards will.

On a windswept day at Roland Garros, defending champion Sergi Bruguera pummeled Courier 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 in a match between last year's finalists.

Alberto Berasategui, Bruguera's Davis Cup teammate and bar-hopping partner, used his ferocious forehand to bludgeon Magnus Larsson 6-3, 6-4, 6-1 in just 72 minutes to become the first unseeded player to make the final since Mikael Pernfors in 1986.

It will be the first Grand Slam final ever between two Spanish men — a feat celebrated Friday by a small group of Spanish fans waving flags in the upper section of the Center Court stadium.

"This is history for Spain," Bruguera said. "This is what everybody in Spain wants."

Berasategui, this year's new clay-court sensation, was overwhelmed to be part of the occasion. Ranked No. 23, he has reached the final without losing a set.

"Maybe someone has to come and wake me up," he said. "I never thought of making the finals. But I guess my dream came true."

Another Spaniard, Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, is in Saturday's women's final against Mary Pierce of France.

When Courier and Bruguera began their match shortly after noon, the stands were less than half full — apparently because the early starting time conflicted with the lunch hour and the dark, windy conditions suggested rain might be on the way.

Jim Courier congratulates Sergi Bruguera after their French Open semifinal match Friday in Paris.

"It wasn't a great day, let's face it," Courier said in a statement that aptly summed up both the weather and his game.

Bruguera needed five draining sets to beat Courier in last year's final, ending his two-year reign as champion. He said it was easier this time, in part because Courier no longer has an invincible attitude.

"I think he played the same, but maybe he doesn't have the confidence he had the years before," Bruguera said. "Maybe when he lost to me last year, he lost a little bit of that confidence."

In the past, Courier used to dictate the play on clay with his big serve and hammer forehand. But this time, Bruguera had Courier on a string, controlling the points with his forehand — a

Pyc's changeup stymies Halos

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

San Antonio left-handed pitcher David Pyc must have had his calendar circled for June 3.

The third-year reliever turned starter, rolled into Midland with a 1-3 record and a 4.45 earned run average. But against the Angels this season, Pyc has played Midland's batters like a fine instrument, going 1-0 with a 2.81 ERA and 15 strikeouts in 15 innings pitched.

Friday night Pyc found Midland a home away from home in San Antonio's 6-2 win at Christensen Stadium.

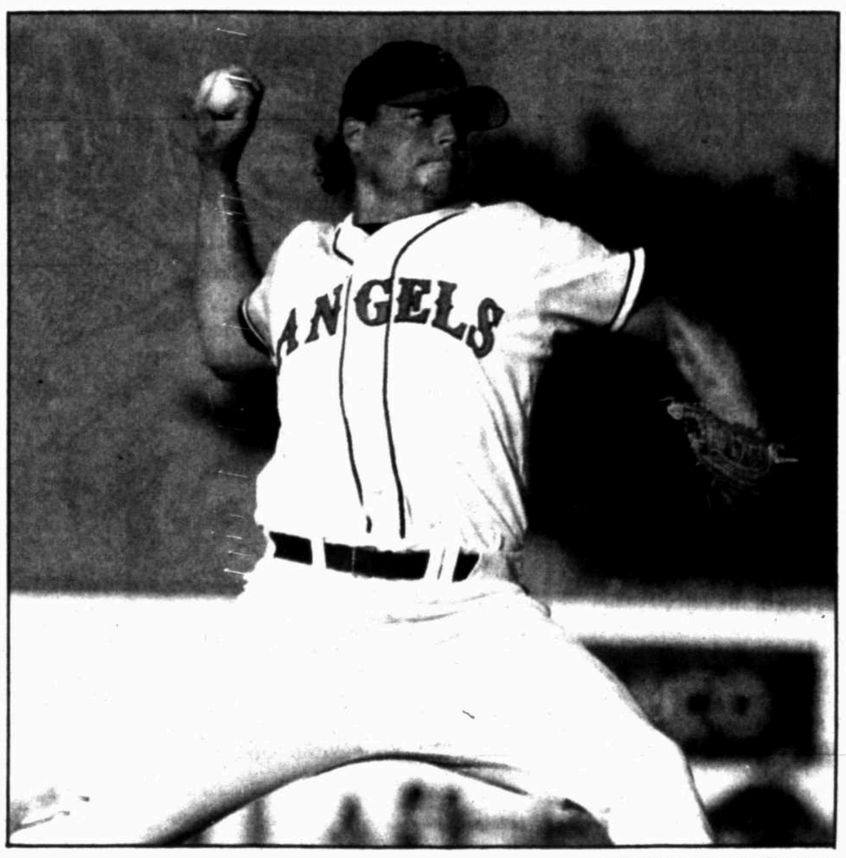

"(Catcher Noe) Munoz called a great game," said Pyc who, allowed five hits for the win. "(Pitching coach) Burt Hooten has been working with me in the bullpen and tonight in strikeout situations I would throw a changeup instead of a curveball.

"I was able to get my control back. Lately, I have been wild inside the strike zone and people have been getting hits off me. Midland is pretty much a fastball hitting team and I don't throw that many fastballs," said Pyc of his recent domination against Midland.

He has faced the Angels three times this season and has averaged eight innings per start. His last eight-inning performance prior to Friday was against Midland earlier this year.

Midland's offense could get little generated against Pyc. Back-to-back doubles in the fourth inning by Mark Sweeney and Chris Pritchett gave the Angels their first run of the game and cut the Missions lead to 4-1. In the eighth, third baseman Chris Smith hit a leadoff triple and later scored on a Marquis Riley sacrifice.

Not even the thought of former Angels leftfielder Luis Raven phased the confident Pyc.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Angel Dom Johnson delivers a pitch Friday in Midland's 6-2 loss to San Antonio at Christensen Stadium.

"He was 0-for-8 against me this season. Not to belittle the man, I mean he had 18 home runs and 57 RBI, but I thought he was an out. He would go after pitches outside the strike zone and he looked for the fastball. Now Emmitt Cohick is a tough out, I have a lot of respect for him."

San Antonio scored four runs in the first three innings to give Pyc all the support he would need.

Rightfielder Michael Moore went 3-for-4 with his third home run of the season and four RBI to lead the Mission offensive attack.

NCAA not ready for playoffs

■ College football will probably go another two years without a playoff system after decisions made by a special committee Friday.

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There will be no NCAA football playoff for at least two more seasons, and maybe never.

Citing "many complex issues" and a lack of understanding among administrators, a special committee decided Friday to abandon its hope of presenting a plan for schools at the NCAA convention next January.

For playoff advocates, this is a defeat. It means there could not be a playoff game until January 1997 at the earliest and seems to reconfirm widespread opposition among the NCAA's major programs.

"I think there was certainly a feeling that the members of the committee heard from their various constituent groups that we're not ready to move to a playoff," NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey said Friday at the conclu-

Win puts Astros in 1st

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Ken Caminiti had a pair of run-scoring singles, Jeff Bagwell homered and Brian Williams pitched seven strong innings Friday night, lifting the Houston Astros to a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

■ NL Roundup

The victory lifted the Astros into first place in the NL Central Division by a game over Cincinnati, which lost 4-3 to the New York Mets.

Williams (2-2) improved to 4-0 in his career against Philadelphia, allowing two runs on six hits while striking out six and walking one. John Hudek, the third Astros pitcher, worked the ninth for his seventh save.

Earlier Friday, troubled Astros reliever Mitch Williams cleared waivers, leaving him free to negotiate with any team.

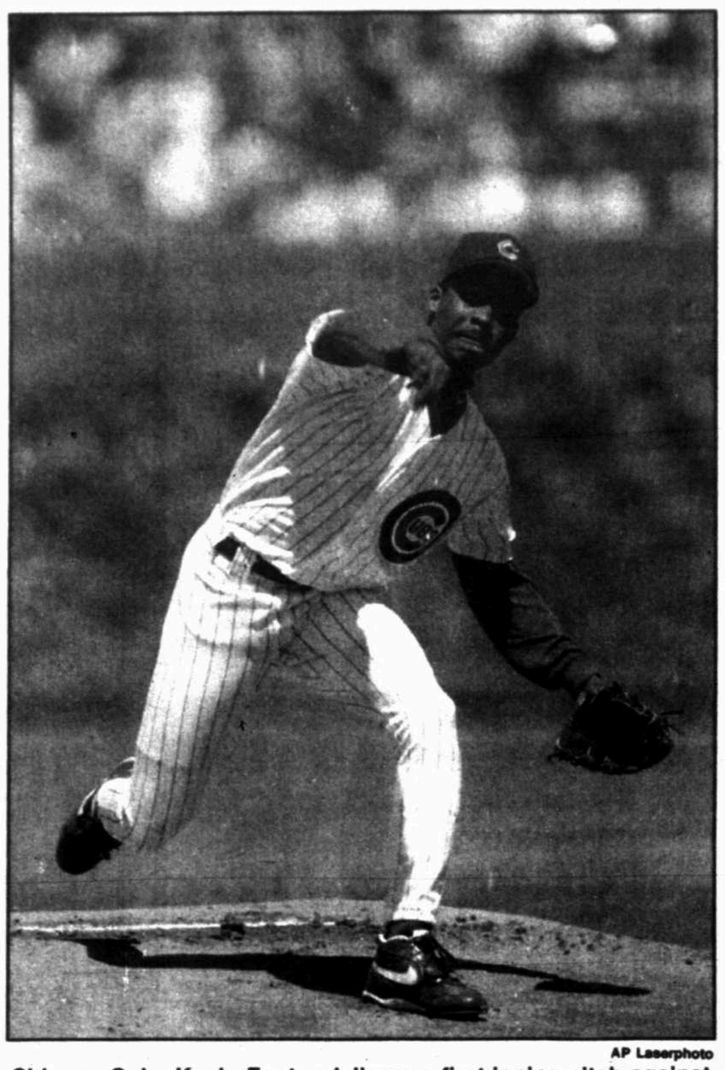

David West (1-5) lasted five innings for the Phillies, giving up three runs on only three hits. He struck out eight and walked two.

Houston broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth. Craig Biggio reached on a throwing error by shortstop Kevin Stocker, stole second and third and scored on Caminiti's single.

Caminiti came through again in the sixth.

Bagwell, whose 13th homer had given the Astros a 2-1 lead in the first, doubled leading off the sixth and scored on Caminiti's second single.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead in the first. Lenny Dykstra led off with a double, took third on Mariano Duncan's single and scored on John Kruk's sacrifice fly.

Cardinals 3, Giants 1

ST. LOUIS — Ozzie Smith homered and had two RBIs and Allen Watson worked 6 1-3 strong innings to win for the first time since April 19 as St. Louis beat San Francisco.

It was the Giants' fourth loss in a row and 11th in 15 games.

Smith went 3-for-4, including a run-scoring single in the third and his third home run in the seventh off Bryan Hickerson (2-5). The Giants' starter allowed three runs on 10 hits in losing his third consecutive start.

Watson (3-3), who had been threatened with a demotion to the bullpen, allowed only four hits, struck out four and walked one. Mike Perez, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, got the final two outs for his 11th save.

Braves 8, Dodgers 5

ATLANTA — Rookie Ryan Klesko broke out of a 3-for-29 slump with a three-run, first-inning homer as Atlanta beat Los Angeles.

Klesko's eighth home run and first in three weeks came off Pedro Astacio (3-5), who fell to 0-5 lifetime against the Braves. It was Atlanta's fourth straight victory.

The Braves added five runs in the third inning for an 8-1 lead, capped by Roberto Kelly's two-run double. Terry Pendleton, Mark Lemke and starter Tom Glavine also had RBI hits in the inning as the Braves ran their record to 16-1 against the National League West.

Mets 4, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Bret Saberhagen showed he has recovered from back spasms by pitching eight strong innings Friday night and leading New York to a victory over reeling Cincinnati.

Saberhagen also doubled and scored the winning run on Jose Vizcaino's seventh-inning single to break the Mets' three-game losing streak. Cincinnati has lost 10 of 13, including four straight to the Mets.

Marlins 5, Padres 1

MIAMI — Pat Rapp allowed only five hits in 8 1-3 innings and Jeff Conine drove in three runs, leading Florida to a victory against San Diego.

The loss snapped San Diego's winning streak at a season-high six games.

Expos 3, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Randy Milligan's two-run homer in the eighth inning Friday gave Montreal a victory over Chicago.

Kevin Foster, acquired in April in a trade that sent Shawn Boskie to Philadelphia, pitched seven shutout innings of three-hit ball.

Rockies 6, Pirates 4

DENVER — Dante Bichette had a two-run homer and a pair of doubles and Marvin Freeman pitched seven shutout innings as Colorado beat Pittsburgh for its fourth straight victory.

The loss was the fifth in a row for the Pirates.

Triple leads FSU over LSU

Associated Press

■ College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Steve Nedeau's leadoff triple ignited a six-run sixth inning Friday night that led Florida State to a 6-3 victory over defending champion Lousiana State in the first round of the College World Series.

The triple was only the second hit of the game off Tigers starter Scott Schultz, who retired the first 13 hitters he faced until Randy Hodges doubled in the fifth.

The wheels then came off for Schultz (12-2) in the sixth as sixth-seeded Florida State (53-20) advanced to Sunday's winners' bracket game against No. 2 seed Georgia Tech (48-16), which beat No. 7 Fullerton State 2-0 Friday.

LSU (46-19) carries its No. 3 seed to Sunday's elimination round against Fullerton State (45-15).

Florida State starter Paul Wilson (13-5), selected No. 1 overall by the New York Mets in Thursday's major league draft, settled down after a bumpy start. He scattered seven hits, struck out seven and walked one in pitching the complete game.

LSU took the early lead when 1993 tournament MVP Todd Walker hit his 18th homer of the season to lead off the fourth. Russ Johnson then singled and scored two outs later on Brad Wilson's double.

After Nedeau tripled in the sixth, Jack Niles followed with an opposite-field single to put the Seminoles on the scoreboard. Doug Mientkiewicz singled one out later and Mike Martin Jr. drove in Niles with another single.

One out later, Hodges' grounder between third and short was fielded by LSU third baseman Jason Williams but he slipped when making the throw to first and another run scored on the error.

Link Jarrett doubled in another run and Scott Zech's single brought in the final two.

LSU's final run came in the seventh on a bases-loaded sacrifice fly by Walker.

Georgia Tech 2, Fullerton St. 0

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Brad Rigby threw a three-hitter and struck out 10 to lead second-seeded Georgia Tech to a 2-0 victory over No. 7 Fullerton State Friday in the Yellow Jackets' first College World Series game.

Georgia Tech (48-16) advances to Sunday's second round against the winner of Friday night's Louisiana State-Florida State game. Fullerton State (45-15) will play the loser Sunday in an elimination game.

Rigby (14-4) allowed only three balls out of the infield before Mark Kotsay doubled to lead off the eighth. Kotsay was out in a rundown when Jeff Ferguson grounded back to the mound, and Rigby worked out of the inning.

Bret Hemphill's single in the first and Jeremy Giambi's infield single to lead off the seventh were the only other hits off Rigby, who recorded his fourth complete game of the season.

Georgia Tech picked up its first run off Mike Parisi (11-4) in the fifth when Brandon Hensley and Michael Smith singled.

Rangers pepper Green Monster

Associated Press

BOSTON — Jose Canseco hit a pair of two-run homers and Bruce Hurst made a victorious return to Fenway Park on Friday night as the Texas Rangers defeated the Boston Red Sox 13-2.

Canseco was in a 1-for-17 slump when he barely cleared the left-field wall in the fifth to give the Rangers a 5-2 lead. In the seventh, he hit his 13th homer way over the screen above the Green Monster.

Canseco added a run-scoring double off the left-field wall in the ninth as the Rangers scored six runs, including Dean Palmer's fourth career grand slam.

Will Clark also had a run-scoring single in the inning.

Hurst, who won 88 games for the Red Sox from 1980-88, made his first appearance in Boston since leaving as a free agent. He allowed two runs in five-plus innings, leaving to a standing ovation from many fans.

Hurst (1-1) got his first major-league win since Sept. 2, 1992, when he was with the San Diego Padres. The left-hander, limited to just five starts in an injury-plagued 1993 season, had lost his previous five decisions.

White Sox 4, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Frank Thomas and Robin Ventura both homered in the fourth inning to send Jason Bere to his fifth straight win and the Chicago White Sox to a victory.

Bere (7-1) scattered five hits in seven innings for Chicago's 10th victory in 13 games. He walked four and struck out four. Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Bere is 14-1 with a 2.60 ERA in his last 18 starts.

Thomas' homer, which broke a 1-1 tie, was his 21st this season and his 13th in 27 games. He is second in the AL in home runs, behind Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr., who entered Friday's game with 22.

Both homers came off Sid Fernandez (3-3), who pitched his first complete game in the AL, allowing seven hits.

Brady Anderson hit his sixth homer for the Orioles, who have lost four of five.

■ AL Roundup

Royals 7, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Gary Gaetti hit a two-run homer to break an eighth-inning tie, lifting Kansas City to a victory.

Gaetti hit his eighth homer on a 1-1 pitch off Paul Gibson (1-1) after pinch-hitter Dave Henderson's two-out single.

Billy Brewer (3-0) relieved Royals starter Bob Milacki in the seventh and retired Don Mattingly on a line drive to first with two runners on.

The Royals added two runs in the ninth against three Yankees relievers, on Wally Joyner's RBI fielder's choice and a throwing error by first baseman Don Mattingly.

Stan Belinda allowed two hits in the ninth before Jeff Montgomery came on for his eighth save.

Mike Gallego had four hits for New York, which has lost four of its last five but still has the majors best record at 33-17.

Paul O'Neill snapped an 0-for-14 slump with an eighth-inning single, but went 1-for-4 to drop his major league-leading average to .420.

Tigers 9, Twins 8, 13 innings

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder's second homer of the game Friday night lifted Detroit to a victory in 13 innings.

With one out in the 13th, Fielder blasted the first pitch from Dave Stevens (0-1) into the second deck in the center field for his 14th homer.

Fielder's homer ended the four hour, 32-minute game and made a winner of Joe Boever (3-0), who pitched four scoreless innings.

Boever was the Tigers' fifth pitcher. The Twins used seven.

Shane Mack's two-run homer capped a three-run eighth as the Twins took an 8-7 lead. Alex Cole, who homered in the third, scored the first Twins run in the eighth on Dave Winfield's double-play grounder.

But Junior Felix tied it 8-8 with his sixth homer, leading off the bottom of the inning.

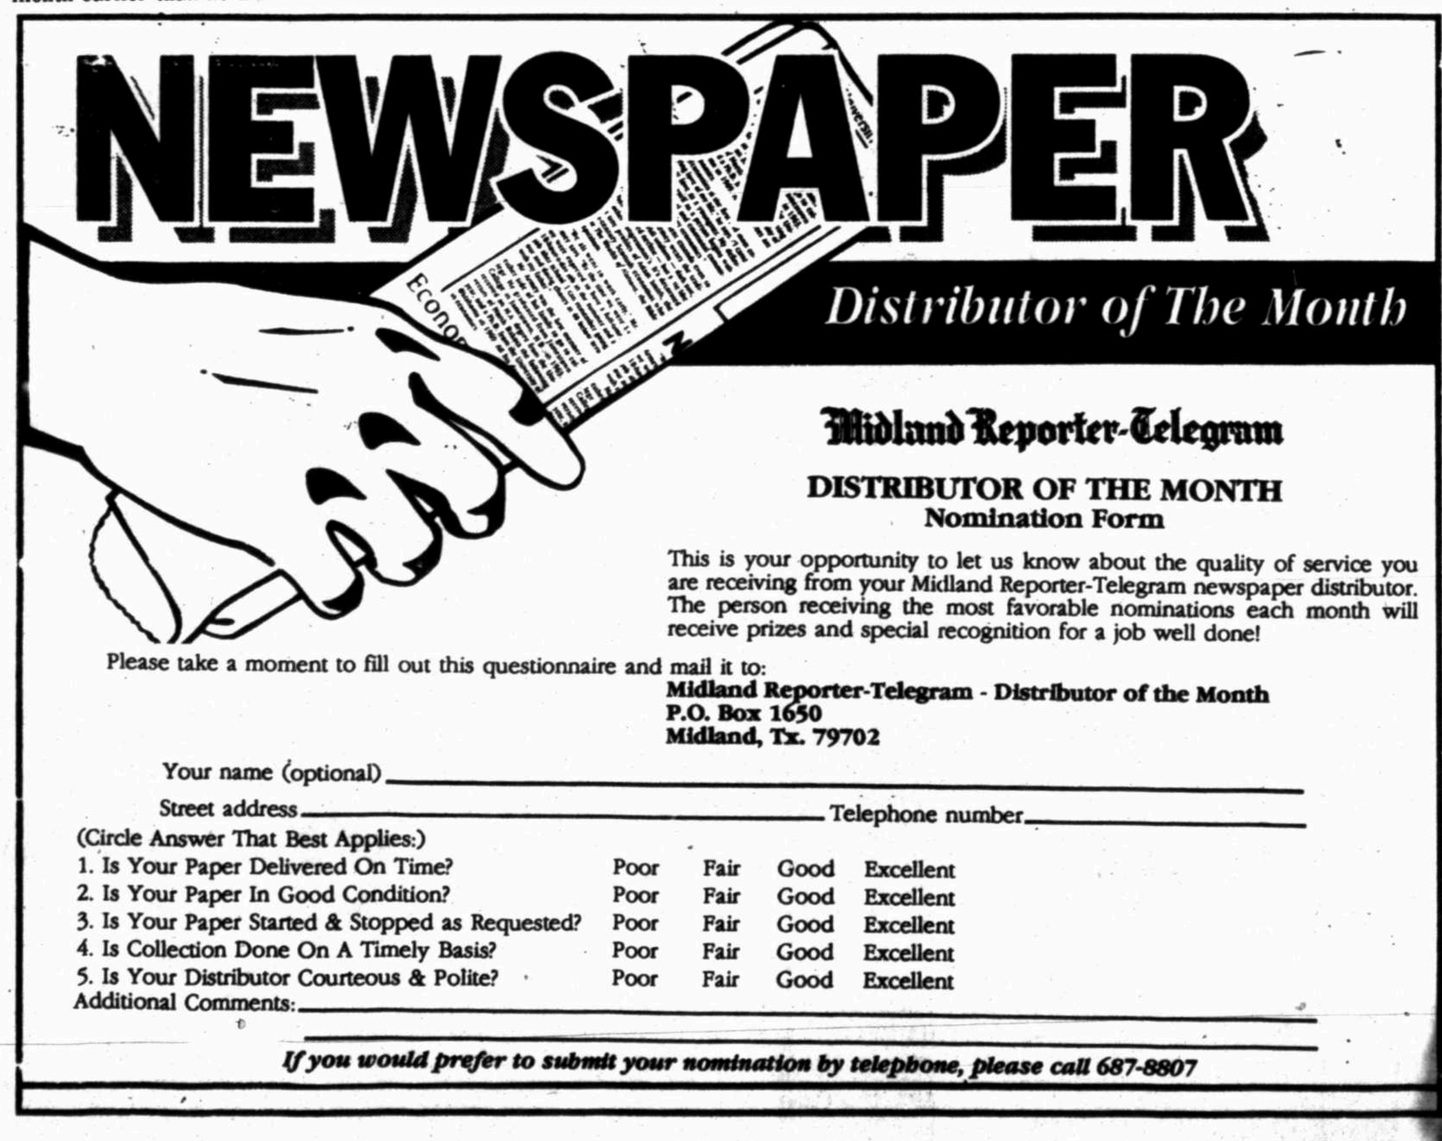

Travis Fryman and Tony Phillips also homered for Detroit.

Brewers 4, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — B.J. Surhoff and John Jaha homered in the third inning, enabling Milwaukee to end an eight-game road losing streak with a victory over California.

The Angels have lost five in a row.

Ricky Bones (5-4) allowed three runs and six hits in six innings. He recorded his fifth win exactly a month earlier than he did in 1993.

Big Spring shuts out F.W. Brewer

ABILENE — Frankie Martinez struck out nine and hit an RBI triple to lead Big Spring to a 5-0 shutout of Fort Worth Brewer in the first game of a best-of-three Class 4A Region I baseball series at Scott Field on the Abilene Christian Campus here Friday.

The Steers, who improved to 25-7, can eliminate Brewer (21-9) with a win today at 1 p.m. in the second game of the series, also at Scott field. The third game, if necessary, will begin 30 minutes after the end of the second game. The winner of the series will advance to the State Baseball Championships at Disch-Falk Field in Austin June 9 and 10.

Martinez scattered four hits over seven innings as the Steers took advantage of Brewer errors accounting for two unearned runs in the first and second.

That's when the Steer bats came alive with back-to-back triples for a three-run third inning. Brandon Rodgers hit a one-out single and John Oliva reached on a walk with two outs to set up Trey Terrazas, who drove in both with a triple. Then Martinez' triple drove in Terrazas to put Big Spring up for good, 5-0.

Brewer's only threat came in the sixth inning with one out when the Bears loaded the bases on two walks and an error. But Martinez got out of the jam with a strikeout and a groundout to strand the runners. J.C. Conyiers was the loser on the mound for Brewer.

PBRA dissolves corporation

The Permian Basin Racing Association announced Friday that it will dissolve its corporation and will no longer be the governing body of rules and regulations at Twin Cities Speedway.

This decision by the PBRA has come in response to the growing, changing nature of auto racing at that facility. The racetrack itself, led by John Foster and John David, will be responsible for the maintenance of rules and regulations.

"The PBRA began as a voluntary organization," said Jay Guthrie, PBRA president. "There has been an evolutionary process over the years, for both the track and the role of the association. Twin Cities is now a stronger, more viable entity, and is now in a position to administer its own races. PBRA has now finished the job it was supposed to do."

Foster and David said the track is ready to assume the role the PBRA has performed.

"They have done a great job over the years, promoting and building auto racing in the Permian Basin," said Foster and David. "Twin Cities would like to thank the officers and members of the association for their hard work over the years. They have been a big part of the reason Twin Cities has become known as the fastest and nicest ⅛-mile asphalt track in Texas."

Foster and David said officials have already been hired by the track to monitor and enforce compliance with current and new rules. They said the attendance so far this season on their Friday night races has averaged 2,300 and they expect it to increase as more racing teams are attracted to the track. They expect an increase because only PBRA member teams were able to race at Twin Cities in the past.

There will also be more special events in addition to the weekly, Friday-night races, Foster and David said. Twin Cities will host the return of the TIDA Super Late Models for the Lone Star Chevy 100 on Saturday, June 18.

Mansell is still angry over Indy 500 accident

■ Miller 200

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Nigel Mansell is finding it hard to put the accident that took him out of the Indianapolis 500 behind him as he prepares for Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 200.

The defending IndyCar PPG World Series champion was quick in Friday's practice sessions on the Milwaukee Mile, turning a lap of 157.544 mph, but he remained frustrated and angry over last week's incident in which he narrowly escaped serious injury.

"It's not behind me yet," said a serious-faced Mansell, holding his 9-year-old son Leo on his lap. "I'm totally amazed and disgusted and disappointed by what happened."

Mansell was working hard to make up a lost lap early in the 500-mile race when a crash brought out the caution flag. With debris strewn across the Indy oval, the pace car was leading the slowed field through the warmup lane that leads onto pit road when rookie Dennis Vitolo made a serious mistake.

Vitolo, running too fast, overtook the slowed cars, ran up over the rear wheel of John Andretti's car, flew over two other entries and landed atop Mansell's car, barely missing the Englishman's head.

Mansell still was fuming over the fact that Vitolo was not penalized or even admonished by the race stewards for causing the accident, and because Mansell's Newman-Haas team was fined $1,000 because the driver left the infield hospital before his mandatory examination had been completed.

"If you have a racing accident, you can accept it," Mansell said. "But this was just a disgraceful incident. ... The way (the U.S. Auto Club) handled that and various other things was a disgrace."

Among the other things the Englishman was angry about was a stop-and-go penalty he was assessed earlier in the race for passing Raul Boesel on pit road moments after Boesel left his pit box.

"I don't know what you are supposed to do if a car is going 5 miles an hour and you are doing 100. What are you supposed to do, get on the brakes with three cars behind you? Then, the black flag came 37 minutes after the infringement.

"It (Indy) is the big show and everyone's frightened about being outspoken. But I'm not," added Mansell, who said letters protesting the situation will be sent to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and USAC.

Boesel was second-fastest on Friday at 157.531, followed by rookie Jacques Villeneuve at 156.988, Robby Gordon 155.440 and Emerson Fittipaldi 155.399.

Penske Racing teammates Al Unser Jr., the Indianapolis champion, and Fittipaldi, who crashed while leading with 15 laps remaining, were back in their Ilmor-powered Penske cars after dominating Indy with the superpowered Mercedes-Benz engines.

USAC, which sanctions only Indianapolis, allows the stock-type, push-rod Mercedes engines, while Championship Auto Racing Teams, which sanctions the rest of the series, does not.

"I'm missing a lot of horses," Fittipaldi said with a grin. "We

Craven loves Goodwrench 200, gets pole

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Ricky Craven, overcoming some bad practice laps he said gave him more incentive, took the pole for Saturday's Goodwrench 200 by edging Rodney Combs in qualifying Friday at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Craven drove his Chevrolet around the one-mile high-banked oval at an average speed of 146.425 mph. Combs, driving a Pontiac, averaged 146.377 to take the outside front row position for the $231,486 Busch Grand National race.

"During practice they had us as the 18th-fastest," said Craven, of Newbergh, Maine "I thought we were better than that."

They were, and he proved it.

"I love this race track," he said. "The one thing you have to do is go out and attack it. That's what I did."

He accomplished it without peril, although he gave himself a scare.

"So, I said to myself, 'Self, don't overdrive turn one.' So, what I do? I went out and overdrove turn one. But we were fast, and I knew we had a shot."

Craven said the work of his team was outstanding Friday. It continued a pattern he has noticed as the NASCAR season has progressed.

"This is exactly what I hoped this new team would be," Craven said.

The pole was the sixth of his career, and marked the 10th different pole winner in 13 events this year.

Qualifying third was Winston Cup regular Derrike Cope, who put his Ford on the inside of the second row. Beside him in a Chevrolet was another Winston Cup campaigner, Dale Jarrett.

Rounding out the top five was Bobby Dotter in a Chevrolet.

Larry Pearson and Grissom were next in Chevrolets.

Irvan takes pole position with record

■ Budweiser 500

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Ernie Irvan, hoping to add to his Winston Cup points lead with a victory in the Budweiser 500, broke his own track qualfying record Friday to take the pole for Sunday's race.

Irvan, driving a Ford Thunderbird, toured the one-mile Dover Downs International Speedway at 151.956 mph. That was enough to edge fellow Ford driver Geoff Bodine, whose 151.745 gave him the outside of the front row for the running of the $931,186 event.

"When you go out to qualify at a place like this that is so fast and edgy ... you don't know if your car is going to be loose or if it's going to push and you've seen a couple of guys spin," said Irvan, whose fourth pole this year is the most on NASCAR's top circuit. "You go out there and when you get into turn three before you get the green, that's when you know how good your car is going to be."

So, Irvan, looking to break a tie with six-time and defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt with his fourth victory this season, went at it hard as he reached the high-banked turn after his qualifying lap began.

"My car stuck real good there and that's when I knew what I could do with the car," Irvan said. "I always try to run the car to its fullest and try to get as much out of it without knocking the fence down."

He did just that, erasing Bodine's record just seconds after Bodine had broken Irvan's from last year.

Bodine, running on Hoosier tires as its battle with Goodyear continues, was satisfied with the rubber on his car.

"All the hard work we've done testing with Hoosier is paying off," he said. "Qualifying's just qualifying. But this tire is going to race good."

Irvan, running on Goodyears, said his tires were fine. But he said the work of his crew was the main reason he took the pole.

"We had to do a lot of work on this car to get it real close," he said. "When we unload we're usually real close.

"This time when we unloaded we were not one of the better cars. That gives me real confidence, being 15th- or 20th-best in practice ... then work on the car and get it better and better and then knock off some of the best laps and then back it up again in qualifying."

A surprising third on the grid was Joe Nemechek in a Chevrolet, followed by Bobby Labonte in a Pontiac. The Fords of Bill Elliott, Rusty Wallace and Ted Musgrave were next. Pontiac driver Bobby Hamilton was eighth, with the Fords of Morgan Shepherd and Jimmy Hensley rounding out the top 10.

The qualifying session set the first 20 positions for Sunday's race. Positions 21 through 40 were to be set with a second session on Saturday.

Among those who failed to qualify was Jeff Gordon, the 22-year-old sensation who rose to prominence with his first Winston Cup victory last Sunday in the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte. He hit the wall in turn two, slowing his lap to 108.219.

"I drove down the front straightaway and it felt pretty good going into the first turn," said the 1993 rookie of the year. "It stuck good, and all of a sudden it got in the middle of the corner and it started pushing on me."

Hancock Bowl checks sponsors

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kellogg, Subway, and Bausch & Lomb are all under consideration as potential future sponsors for what is now known as the John Hancock Bowl, the El Paso Times reported Friday.

Game officials, who asked not to be identified, have confirmed the three companies are all possible candidates to take over commercial sponsorship of the game, which up until this year had been fully sponsored by John Hancock Financial Services, according to the newspaper.

Kellogg, the nation's leading maker of ready-to-eat cereal, would be interested in sponsoring the game this year, the unidentified officials were quoted as saying.

NBA: Starks hot again

(From 1B)

Now, however, the Pacers' hopes for a first trip to the NBA Finals where the Houston Rockets are waiting rest on winning Sunday at New York, where the Knicks are 8-1 in the postseason after losing to Indiana on Wednesday. The Pacers are 6-1 at home in the playoffs.

History is on the Knicks' side as the home team has won the last 18 Game 7s, a streak that dates to 1982.

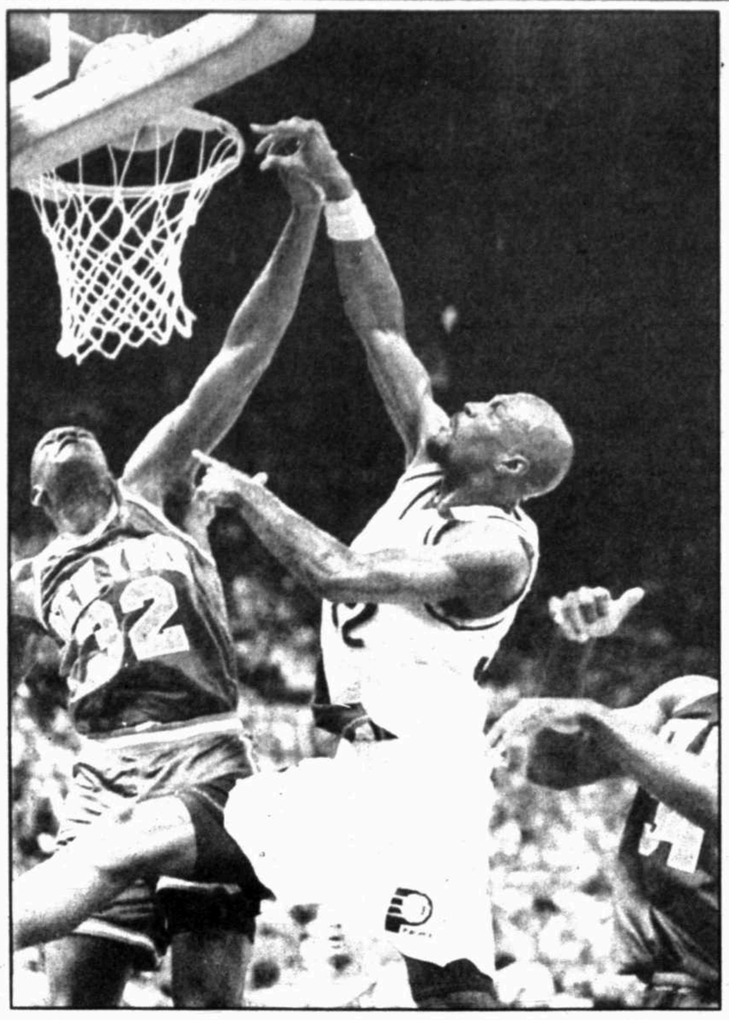

Rik Smits scored 18 points for Indiana and Patrick Ewing 17 for New York, which dodged another bitter playoff defeat.

The Knicks believed the path to the Finals was open when they beat Chicago, which eliminated New York the previous three years. The Knicks lost to the Bulls in last year's conference finals with two wins followed by four consecutive losses, a fate that was avoided with Friday's outcome.

Miller's 3-pointer in the first minute of the second half pulled the Pacers, who trailed by 13 in the third quarter, within 80-72 and had the boisterous crowd screaming for a repeat of his Game 5 fourth quarter.

But he couldn't sustain the effort this time, although it wasn't for lack of trying. His jumper with 5:55 left closed the Pacers to 88-86, his two free throws made it 91-90 with 3:03 to go and he tied it with another free throw with 2:06 remaining.

But Indiana never scored again as Harper's foul line jumper put the Knicks ahead to stay. Starks followed with a steal and free throw.

Long rest could hurt Rockets' momentum

GALVESTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets are getting a much needed break before the start of the NBA Finals. However, too much rest and relaxation could dim some of the emotional fire that got them this far.

The Rockets earned a week's break from the playoffs after wrapping up the Western Conference championship on Tuesday in Game 5 against the Utah Jazz.

They came to the beach to rest and heal their wounds, and to find a way to keep the competitive edge they gained in beating Portland, Phoenix and Utah to reach the championship series.

"Our bodies will be fresh," forward Otis Thorpe said. "But mentally, it's a fight right now. You have to condition your mind even when you're not playing."

The Rockets have been on a roll since losing the first two home games of their series against Phoenix. They rallied to beat the Suns in seven games, then beat the Jazz in five.

"You're talking about an opportunity that doesn't come along too often," Thorpe said. "All we can do is keep our intensity and be ready for the next series.

"That first game is going to be so important. You don't want to start out in a hole."

Coach Rudy Tomjanovich knows the dangers of a long layoff between series.

"The mental aspect is something we're really going to talk about," Tomjanovich said. "We were really playing good basketball. This coaching staff is going to do its best to make sure the guys keep focused."

It's a happy problem for Thorpe, a 10-year veteran who's more accustomed to watching than playing at this point in the playoffs.

"It's been a long 10 years," Thorpe said. "In nine of those 10 years, I'm already at home looking at this thing on television. Now I'm the one on the tube everybody will be watching.

"In past years, by this time of year I'd have gone on four or five golf outings and my summer tan would have kicked in by now. But I'm happy. We're going to the finals."

At least the Rockets are near the beach. They've returned to Texas A&M University at Galveston, the site of their preseason training camp, to prepare for their third trip to the NBA finals. The Rockets' 1981 and 1986 finalists lost in six games to Boston.

"It's good to get away from all the attention," Tomjanovich said.

Rookie Sam Cassell isn't worried about momentum. Team confidence is high and he thinks that will do the job.

"The key to our success is the five guys on the floor and our guys on the bench," Cassell said. "We're going to have to fight with everything that we have. I think that will be enough."

Tomjanovich is trying to create a training camp atmosphere.

"We really have to fight to keep from losing the edge," he said. "To take this long off and stay sharp is not easy. It's basically got to be like a training camp. ... We've got to push ourselves."

The Rockets are trying to get forward Carl Herrera ready for the playoffs. He's been recovering from a shoulder separation, which occurred May 17 against Phoenix.

"I'll have to see the way he performs before he gets in a game," Tomjanovich said. "He couldn't go today."

NCAA: Officials still on hold with playoff

sion of the committee's second full meeting. "There are too many issues to be resolved before we move in that direction."

"There has not been enough time to address these issues satisfactorily," said UCLA chancellor Charles Young, the committee chairman. "In view of that lack of time, the climate does not appear to favor the submission of legislation to establish a championship at this time."

Young and Dempsey will request that a task force continue the study this summer and fall with an eye toward possible legislation at the 1996 convention.

"I wouldn't say it's inevitable this question will come to a convention vote someday, but I'd say it's highly likely," Young said. He added that issues to be resolved are impact on players, impact on bowls, revenue distribution and format.

Two football players invited to join the committee, Derrick Brooks of Florida State and Rob Zatechka of Nebraska, were active participants.

"What we saw was a great sensitivity to the student-athlete," Dempsey said. "Their participation was welcome. The issues they raised were of concern to the committee. Some of those concerns have to be resolved before we move further."

Zatechka said in interviews prior to the meeting he would urge some sort of player compensation.

"Trying to balance the financial gains of a playoff versus the impact upon the student-athlete is a difficult chore," Dempsey said. "Even though the committee had a voluminous amount of material ... it did not have that kind of material that had to be addressed."

Young indicated many college chiefs had not reviewed the research material that covered several hundred pages and was to be distributed in May.

"I haven't done any polling on the matter, but I think the attitudes have remained essentially as they were before, which were negative. One of the concerns we have is that the material which we believe is important for people to understand in order to reach a reasonable conclusion has not been distributed and made available," Young said.

The Southeastern Conference voted 12-0 against a playoff on the eve of the committee's meeting. Other conferences, including the Big Eight, had indicated their general opposition as well. A competing plan by the bowl coalition to set up a No. 1-No. 2 matchup through the bowls is being floated by several major conferences.

"One reason we decided to put this off is it became clear that a much greater effort would have to be made in informing people generally in order to prepare the climate for serious consideration," Young said. "I wouldn't call it lobbying. I really think it's looking carefully at the data."

Administrators, Young said, "need to really understand what the possibilities are both positive and negative associated with this rather, than making decisions based on inadequate information or preconceived ideas."

Pierce is filling the holes left by Graf, Seles

PARIS (AP) — For the first time since 1986, the French Open women's final will be played without Steffi Graf and Monica Seles.

However, it will have Mary Pierce, who enters Saturday's championship match against Aranxta Sanchez Vicario on a record pace.

Pierce has lost only 10 games in six matches, including a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Graf in Thursday's semifinal. With a powerful forehand that drew gasps from the crowd watching her, Pierce has been impressive.

"I couldn't believe my eyes, I have never seen a woman hit the ball like that. It the first time I've seen Graf dominated that way for a whole match," said former French Open champion Virginia Ruzici.

Pierce's domination perhaps could create new interest in women's tennis.

"It definitely has been very healthy, it is definitely exciting for the spectators here, also for television," Graf said of Pierce's surge. "I think it is a good thing."

"This will be good for the future of women's tennis," said Pam Shriver, who herself was once considered the future of women's tennis when she lost to Evert in the final of the 1976 U.S. Open as a 16-year-old. "We need new blood and spectacular players and I think Mary has an important role to play in the years to come."

OPEN: 64 Courier errors

wrenching, open-stance stroke which imparts tremendous topspin on the ball.

"I controlled the match better this year," Bruguera said. "I felt that I had more power than him, that I could move him around and that he couldn't attack as well as last year."

Courier committed an unusual amount of unforced errors, 64, more than twice the number by Bruguera (29).

"At times, he pressed me, but more often than not, I just made kind of loose mistakes," Courier said "What I lacked in the defining moments of the match was aggression."

The swirling wind often played havoc, kicking up the red clay and turning an ordinary shot into an adventure.

"I'm from Florida and used to playing in wind," Courier said. "I just didn't adjust well enough today."

Courier fell behind early when he double-faulted twice in the third game to go down a break. Both players held serve easily until Bruguera broke again in the ninth game to win the set, whipping a forehand passing shot down the line that Courier could only stab at.

Courier lost his temper in the fourth game of the second set, shouting an obscenity at a judge who called him for a foot fault. Australian chair umpire Wayne McKewen cited him for verbal abuse.

The warning seemed to unsettle Courier as he followed with four straight errors to lose serve. Bruguera moved out to a 5-2 lead before Courier began exerting more pressure and surged back, winning five straight games to take the first set off the Spaniard in the tournament.

"I just changed the game up a little bit," Courier said. "I started mixing it up more and playing a little bit more aggressive which is what I needed to do the whole match."

After Bruguera took a 5-2 lead in the third set, Courier hit a forehand that ticked the top of the net and dropped over for a winner. Bruguera walked up to the net and shook his finger in jest at Courier, who smiled and patted him on the back with his racket.

But Courier then wasted a break point with a forehand error, and Bruguera served out the set. The Spaniard broke twice for a 4-1 lead in the fourth set before losing serve for 4-2. Three games later, Courier served his eighth double fault and missed a forehand and a backhand to lose the match.

While Bruguera won in 3 hours, 12 minutes, Berasategui took less than half that time, winning the sets in 23, 25 and 23 minutes. Larsson was broken five times while Berasategui never lost serve.

Once again, Berasategui's main weapon was his forehand — which he hits with such an extreme Western grip that he strikes the ball with the same face of the racket as his backhand. The shot accounted for 16 winners, including on match point.

4 bogeys, but Brooks in lead

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Mark Brooks hit the ball well all day in the second round of the Kemper Open. The problem was he occasionally had the wrong club in his hands.

Brooks had four bogeys over the final seven holes Friday, finishing with a 68 for a 9-under-par 133 total and a two-stroke lead over Bobby Wadkins. Mark O'Meara was at 137, and four golfers reached the halfway point at 138.

Phil Mickelson used a 6-iron for a hole-in-one on the 177-yard 11th and finished with a 69 for a 139, tied with four others. It was the first ace on the PGA Tour for the 23-year-old left-hander.

Brooks had three birdies and an eagle on the front nine before making an 8-foot birdie putt on No. 10 for a six-stroke lead.

That's when his troubles began.

Brooks pulled out a 6-iron on the 11th tee and put his shot on the edge of the bunker. That led to his first bogey of the tournament.

"I should have used a 7-iron," he said.

On the next hole, Brooks again pulled the wrong club out of his bag. His 5-iron came up shorter than desired and led to another bogey.

He didn't have enough club off the tee on 17 and ended up in the water. His frustration carried over to 18, where he closed out the round with his second straight bogey.

"I just played a horrible back nine," Brooks said. "I hit the wrong club two or three times and it was costly as far as momentum was concerned.

Bruno's PGA Senior

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Jim Albus shot a season-best 8-under-par 64 for a two-stroke lead over Bob Charles and Jim Dent after the first round of the Bruno's Memorial Classic.

Albus, who had eight birdies on the Greystone Golf Club course, has one Senior PGA Tour win this year — the Vantage, which he led from start to finish.

"I played good, I putted good, I scored good. It doesn't always work that way, but it did today," said Albus, who made a 30-foot putt from off the green for birdie on the 178-yard 10th. "You get going good and it seems like you have a lot of chances."

Albus stayed out of trouble all day except for on the par-4, 402-yard 9th. His approach shot went in the sand, but Albus saved par by blasting out and making a 4-foot putt.

To avoid more trouble, he took it easy on the long holes.

"I played the par-5s in 1-over-par during the pro-ams. Today I tried to play them conservatively," Albus said. "As a result, I played them better. I laid up and chipped on most of them."

Charles also got in trouble just once, on No. 4. Rather than playing it safe and aiming to the right side of the green on the 155-yard par-3, Charles went for the pin, about 20 feet from the edge of a pond.

"The bogey was the result of being a little overconfident," he said. "I was shooting for the flag and I put it in the water."

LPGA Oldsmobile

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Beth Daniel bogeyed her final hole and still shot a tournament-record 9-under-par 63 Friday to take a four-stroke lead after two rounds of the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic.

The round was the lowest on the LPGA Tour this year and matched Daniel's career-low. The previous Olds Classic record was a 64 by Deb Richard in 1992's second round.

The 63 at Walnut Hills Country Club also helped Daniel finish with a 36-hole total of 14-under 130 — also a tournament record — four strokes ahead of Meg Mallon. The two-round tournament record was 136, set by three different players.

Daniel has only two players within six strokes. Amy Benz finished Friday's second round at nine under, while Nancy Ramsbottom is another stroke back. First-round co-leader Ellie Gibson is two over.

Despite her record round, Daniel was somewhat dissatisfied in not recording a career-low round.

"I never got a feel today that this was going to be my day or that I was in a zone," said Daniel, who is currently second to Laura Davies on the LPGA money list. "I just kept grinding and things were happening. In this game, you can never get content and think, 'This is my day,' because as soon as you think that, disaster strikes."

Daniel's round featured 10 birdies and the one bogey, a three-putt on her final hole.

Leonard cards 63 to take first

■ NCAA Golf

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Justin Leonard of Texas took advantage of ideal scoring conditions and hometown support to shoot a career-best 63 Friday and take a one-shot lead in the NCAA golf championships.

Leonard has a 54-hole total of 202. Oklahoma State's Alan Bratton is second at 203 after shooting a 66 Friday.

Mikko Rantanen of Georgia Tech is at 205, while teammate Stewart Cink and three others are two strokes further back. Also at 207 is Stanford's Notah Begay III, defending champion Todd Demsey of Arizona State and Clemson's Mark Swygert. Demsey and Swygert shot 65s Friday under almost calm conditions.

Begay, who shared the second-round lead with Rantanen after Begay shot an NCAA record 10-under 62, struggled with his putter and faded to 73 Friday.

The team title is also very much in doubt, with six teams within six strokes of the lead.

Stanford and Georgia Tech enter Saturday's final round over the par-72 Stonebridge Country Club course north of Dallas tied at 847, two shots better than Arkansas, top-seeded Oklahoma State and defending champion Florida.

Texas is also in contention at 853, paced by Leonard, who fired a blistering 29 on the front nine with birdies on the opening five holes and seven of the first nine.

The Dallas native then birdied the 10th and 12th holes and for a moment allowed himself to think about matching or breaking Begay's torrid 62. The possibility of a sub-60 round even briefly entered his mind.

"I just wanted to stay aggressive," said Leonard, who's battled allergies all week. "I wasn't going to be conservative or try to protect it."

Those hopes ended with a bogie-five on No. 13. Leonard settled for pars on the next four holes before finishing the round with a flourish, draining a six-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

Leonard's impressive resume includes the 1992 U.S. Amateur title, the Southern and Western Amateur crowns and a record four straight Southwest Conference championships.

But the NCAA title has always eluded his grasp, with a tie for fourth in 1992 his best previous finish.

Now he has an opportunity for a movie-script finish a few exits up Central Expressway from his home in the Lake Highlands section of Dallas.

"It would mean a great deal," Leonard said. "I've got so many family and friends here. I'm familiar with the course. It would be a great way to go out."

Oklahoma State got a 65 from Trip Kuehne and the 66 from Bratton — his third straight under-par round — to keep the Cowboys within two shots of the lead.

Kuehne, a Dallas native playing on his home course, shot a pair of 75s the first two days and was pressing.

Coach Mike Holder met with Kuehne after Thursday's round and told him to relax.

Monk goes to N.Y. Jets

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Art Monk, the NFL's career receiving leader, agreed to contract terms with the New York Jets on Friday, ending his association with the Washington Redskins after 14 seasons.

Monk, a White Plains, N.Y. native, has caught 888 passes, at least one in each of his last 164 games. The streak leaves him just 13 games shy of Steve Largent's NFL record.

"We're real excited to have Art join us," Jets coach Pete Carroll said. "He's a proven player who understands what it takes to play in the big games, and we think that he'll be a real positive influence on our younger guys."

New York drafted wide receiver Ryan Yarborough of Wyoming in the second round of the 1994 draft and picked another wideout, Orlando Parker of Troy State, two rounds later.

Monk, 36, ranks among the career leaders in virtually every receiving category. He's played in 205 games, starting 177, and ranks fourth in yards with 12,026, trailing only James Lofton (14,004), Largent (13,089) and Charlie Joiner (12,146).

Once again: Heeere's Johnny!

Four-part video series chocked with laughs

AP Laserphoto
Johnny Carson and a fowl friend.

By Douglas J. Rowe
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Once when he was asked what he wanted his epitaph to be, Johnny Carson replied: "I'll be right back."

Well, he's baaaack!

And Ed McMahon again can be heard announcing: "Heeeere's Johnny."

Carson collaborated with his longtime producer, Jeff Sotzing, to select highlights from his three decades as the king of late night for a four-videotape set titled "Johnny Carson: His Favorite Moments From The Tonight Show." The first three tapes are available individually ($14.99 each, Buena Vista Home Video); the fourth tape, Carson's last show, can be purchased only as part of the set ($59.99).

Loads of laughs are packed into this compendium.

Less than five minutes into the first volume comes one of show's most uproarious moments, the 1964 tomahawk demonstration by Ed Ames, then starring as Mingo in "Daniel Boone."

Gales and gasps of laughter sweep the studio once the target, an outline of a Western sheriff, is hit in the crotch.

"Welcome to 'Frontier Bris,'" Carson wisecracks before the laughs ebb.

The first tape opens with a joke from one of his early monologues, which frequently touched on news events.

"Let's see. What was in the paper today?" Carson says. "Ethel Kennedy is expecting again. ... Sen. and Mrs. Kennedy are expecting their 10th child. I understand Ethel Kennedy is demanding a civilian review board."

A quarter-century later, he set his sights on Oliver North and Bill Clinton.

Besides the monologue, there's a sampling of just about everything that distinguished Carson's reign — kibitzing with McMahon and bandleader Doc Severinsen; the Mighty Carson Art Players; the Carson characters that included oily Art Fern, host of the "Tea Time Movie," Carnac the Magnificent, and Aunt Blabby; the jokes about his numerous marriages, divorces and alimony; and the visits from the San Diego Zoo's Joan Embery and her animals.

For Embery, who appeared at least 75 times between 1970 and 1992, the single funniest moment came when a marmoset perched on Carson's head and left a liquid reminder of its visit.

She said that instance encapsulated "Johnny's wonderful natural abilities."

"Johnny's at his best when he's not following cue cards or

A confusing 'Renaissance'

■ Danny DeVito teams with Penny Marshall in "Renaissance Man," which offers up too many convoluted lapses.

By Janet Maslin
N.Y. Times News Service

If you're looking for a learning experience, "Renaissance Man" is ready to teach you what the words simile, metaphor, oxymoron and formula mean.

The last, in this case, refers to the story of a down-on-his-luck individual who gets a shot at redemption by teaching nice, somehow-disadvantaged innocents who can benefit from his wisdom.

Maybe he's a coach ("The Air Up There," "Cool Runnings," "The Mighty Ducks") or maybe he's a failed ad copywriter (this film). Probably he's a white male, unless he's Whoopi Goldberg teaching nuns about rock-and-roll.

■ "Renaissance Man" is playing at the North Park Cinema.

Inherently condescending, and finally awash in warm-bath sentimentality, this setup never goes out of style.

It has certainly worked for Disney, whose "Dead Poets Society" is a landmark within this realm, and for Penny Marshall, whose "Awakenings" and "League of Their Own" flirted with the same motif.

This time, Ms. Marshall directs the story of Bill Rago (Danny DeVito), whose advertising career is in ruins when he takes a temporary job educating Army recruits. The recruits are supposed to need remedial teaching, but they're

No way, Cowboy

■ Woody Harrelson may think crass is cute, but in the vernacular of the movie "The Cowboy Way," it ain't.

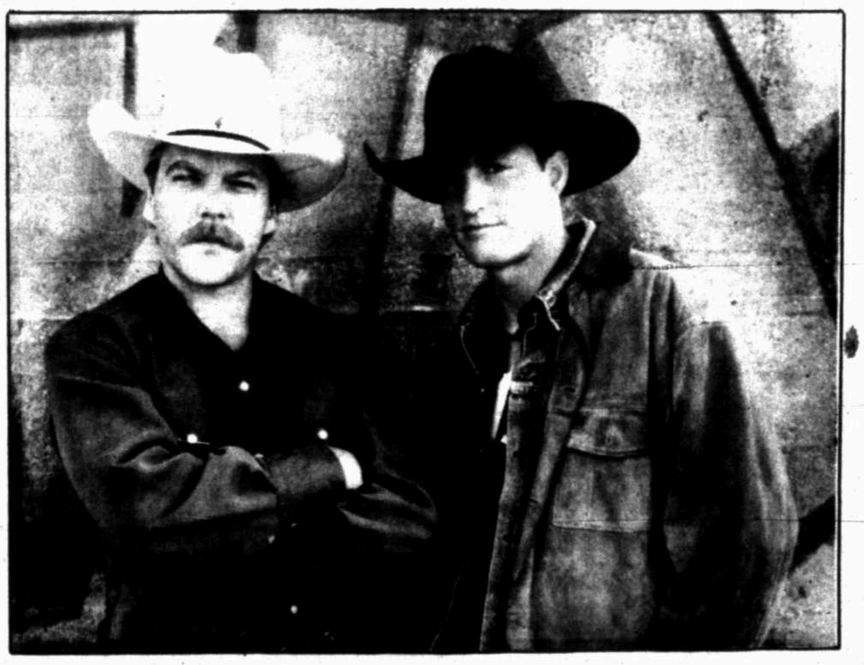

By Caryn James
N.Y. Times News Service

All you need to know about "The Cowboy Way" is obvious when Woody Harrelson spits tobacco juice on the shoes of a rodeo rider who's getting on his nerves.

As a champion rider called Pepper, Harrelson lives in the land of the crass-is-cute macho hero. And though the appeal of raucous tobacco-spitters is purely a matter of taste, it's hard to imagine who the audience might be for a film whose action is so predictable and humor so dispirited.

■ "The Cowboy Way" is currently showing at the North Park Cinema.

Pepper is the hot-tempered part of the film's buddy team. Kiefer Sutherland plays his former partner, Sonny, the responsible one.

Gilligan: A sailor who just won't die

By Lynette Rice
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — It's high time to resolve any unanswered questions that have festered in the minds of many viewers lo these many years.

"Gilligan's Island," after all, has a way of puzzling even its most devoted fans.

Like, why would a millionaire and his wife share a chartered boat with members of the — gulp — proletariat? (Their own yacht was in the shop.)

And how did Mary Ann concoct those coconut cream pies? (The professor was quite the genius helper in the makeshift kitchen.)

And why didn't Ginger ever pair off with Gilligan or the skipper? (Oh, please.)

Want more? "Gilligan's Island" creator Sherwood Schwartz, who also masterminded "The Brady Bunch," promises just that. His new book, "Inside Gilligan's Island," features all-sorts of provocative tidbits about the seven castaways who were marooned on an uncharted desert isle after their tour boat was caught in a storm.

The book was written in 1988 as a textbook for college film classes, but St. Martin's Press thought the greater public would appreciate some intimate details of the CBS prime-time series — such as that the blue oxford shirt worn by the professor (Russell Johnson) withstood 886 washings without so much as losing a button.

The book was re-released in paperback, and included additions gladly provided by Schwartz, who, at 77, still is making a rather lucrative living off a show that once was fair game for critics.

And the show that aired from 1964-67 always provided plenty of fodder, such as the off-the-wall episode in which the professor tried to save the castaways by making a huge balloon out of raincoats after discovering helium on the island.

Although critics said the premise was ridiculous, Schwartz said he was vindicated in September 1983, upon hearing reports that a Czechoslovakian family sewed together their raincoats and

Fox debuts new network, a Stay-at-Home Channel

By Scott Williams
AP Television Writer

■ The 'fX Channel' can be found for Dimension Cable basic subscribers on Channel 34.

NEW YORK — Talk about a deluxe studio apartment!

A brand-new basic cable channel called fX lights up today, originating from a studio in Manhattan's Flatiron district designed to look like an apartment.

"The kitchen really works, the ovens ... plumbing, garbage disposal, everything," said Anne Sweeney, house-proud chairman and CEO of fX, surveying the flurry of last-minute construction.

Sweeney stands in the huge, sunny "living room" overlooking green Madison Square Park, where fX will originate its "Breakfast Time" lifestyle show at 6:30 Eastern each weekday morning.

Adjoining the kitchen-living room area is a big, comfy bedroom — with a mantle mirror that slides away so the TV cameras can peer in.

"There are any number of segments you can do in a bedroom," Sweeney said. "It can be a fashion segment. Have back problems? This is the way to get out of bed in the morning. Or a home decoration segment."

Across the hallway is the library, or study, where TV newswoman Jane Wallace, formerly of CBS' "Morning News" and "West 57th Street," will originate her own, topic-driven talk show.

Next door is a full bathroom with separate tub and shower stall.

Back across the hall is the recreation room, and beyond that is the one non-apartment touch — a spacious ballroom, its walls artfully distressed, its tall windows looking out onto the bustle of Broadway.

"It's such an exciting idea for television that we could build this kind of space, work out of this kind of space, and have it all be live television," Sweeney said.

Ah ... live TV. That's the thing about fX. When they turn it on, the channel will reach a potential audience of 18 million homes with seven hours of live programming, more than any other basic cable service.

"This is a multimillion-dollar project," Sweeney acknowledged, "but the building has so many uses for us that when you average it out, per show, it becomes quite cost-effective."

Besides the 180 minutes of "Breakfast Time," the studio's other, daily lifestyle programs will include the one-hour "Personal fX: The Collectibles Show" at 11 a.m. CDT and hour-long "Sound fX", music video program at 10 p.m.

Then, there are the half-hour shows "Pet Department," the topical "Under Scrutiny with Jane Wallace," and the late-night "Back Chat."

"We go from 5:30 in the morning until midnight," Sweeney said.

The rest of fX's 24-hour schedule is filled with "television classics" from the Fox Television library, a sister subsidiary of Rupert Murdoch's News Corp.

Those include "Dynasty," "Fantasy Island," "Eight Is Enough," "Hart to Hart" and "Batman."

The idea for fX's "apartment" look came from Peter Faiman, an Australian TV producer who hit it big as the director of the box office hit "Crocodile Dundee."

Faiman's inspiration for homestyle TV was borne out by fX's market research, Sweeney said.

"We went out and did focus groups across the country," she said. "Time after time after time, people came up with the same lines: 'I'm disconnected, I'm flipping through the channels and I don't have any place that's home.' Then we started talking about this notion of home."

"It wasn't so much a physical place as it was getting connected once again, to personalities they cared about, and to the idea of live television ... as part of their daily lives."

CARSON: Great musical moments kept to minimum

directions or a predetermined format," Embery said in a telephone interview, pointing out that none of the creatures she brought on were trained. "I learned to trust him and his timing and abilites.

"We had animals who were potentially dangerous ... (and) there were times when he had every reason to respect them. But I knew no matter what, Johnny could always carry it."

Embery said Carson "had a sensitivity. And he always gave you the opportunity to say something," particularly someone like her, who took the "serious role."

Among the things missing, though, are the people who played that serious role, especially the anthropologists, politicians and writers who often filled the last 15 minutes of the show when it ran 90 minutes. (Those people now can only be seen on a show such as "Charlie Rose." In the so-called Late-Night Wars between Leno and Letterman, heavy topics or deep thinking are excluded from the weaponry.)

Great musical moments are kept to a minimum, too. It's clear a conscious decision was made to focus on comedy.

Many comedians enjoyed career breakthroughs by getting a "Tonight" show spot, and the best are seen throughout the first three tapes — a young George Carlin (with hair, dark at that) and his "Hippy-Dippy Weatherman"; Leno and Letterman with 1970s' big hair; and the then Roseanne Barr in her cynical housewife persona.

In retrospect, some of Carson's own humor might come across as old-fashioned or sophomoric, especially when he talks about an old flame, "Gina Statutory," from Lincoln High School in Nebraska. He says she was voted Miss Lincoln "because every guy in school took a shot at her in the balcony."

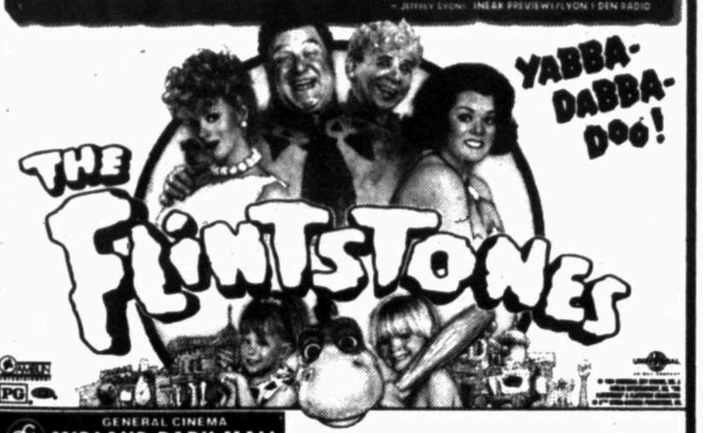

Another time Carnac divines the answer, "Yahoo Serious," and the question is: "What are the two stages of sex?"

OK, so anyone who finds this funny might also be caught saying "schwing" a la Wayne of "Wayne's World." Admittedly, some of the material is sniggering or silly. But these tapes can't be judged through the eyes of today's P.C. goose-steppers.

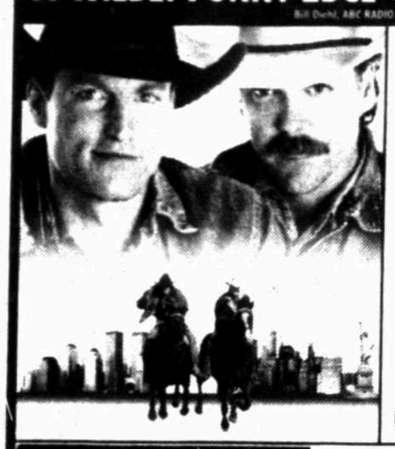

Buena Vista is expecting positive judgments, since it has shipped 1.7 million units already. Company officials are maintaining that this will be the only best-of set they'll ever do.

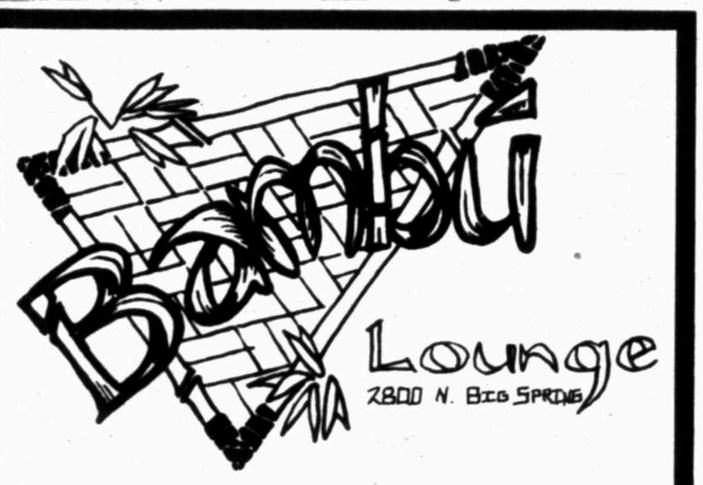

That's too bad, especially if your favorite moment is missing; moreover, there's still lots to choose from (though about 10 years' worth of shows is missing).

Despite the disclaimer about future tapes, don't be surprised if Carson "will be right back" with more.

DEVITO: Film's first half-hour wry funny, sensitive and eager to learn. When they stand up and read Bill their first creative writing exercises, their stories put the average screenwriter to shame.

"Renaissance Man," from a semi-autobiographical screenplay by Jim Burnstein, spends a lot of time watching Bill explain "Hamlet" to his charges. It enjoys its share of wisecracks, and beyond that means to be a cry for literacy and learning.

But as a one-book movie, it's part of the problem rather than part of the solution. "Hamlet" is desperately overused, whether in bad jokes ("That's about a little bitty pig, right?") or impromptu musical exercises (the class recites "this above all, to thine own self be true" while practicing percussion). The strain is most evident in a scene that shows the class performing a supposedly spontaneous hip-hop "Hamlet" riff, while DeVito beams in frozen admiration.

The film's first half-hour is directed in such a wry, breezy style that its subsequent pedantic streak comes as a big letdown.

As always, Ms. Marshall's rueful humor can be natural and disarming, provided it isn't working overtime to make the world a better place. Early scenes of DeVito in cranky combat with an unemployment-office worker, or reacting with horror to 4:30 a.m. reveille at the Army post, have an easy give-and-take. That relaxed tone is badly missed once the story takes its earnest turn.

So is the film's initially quick pacing: "Renaissance Man" runs longer than two hours, and would have been funnier with some of its padding removed.

Yet even at its present length, the film has some confusing lapses, like the sight of a kitchen that Bill is told he will share with a next-door neighbor at the Army post. ("I've died and gone to Gomer Pyle's house," he complains.)

No neighbor appears, and the house isn't seen again. Later on, a brief, implausible scene giving Bill a girlfriend seems shoehorned in just to advance a plot point. But the girlfriend may have played a larger role, since she makes a token appearance at the feel-good finale.

"Renaissance Man" does succeed in assembling a highly likable band of recruits. Their antics give the film some fizz, even when its Shakespearean pretensions threaten to flatten all else. The actors are appealing enough to override the fact that each of them has a one-sentence, fairly heartbreaking problem that will be addressed by story's end.

Outstanding among these performers are Kadeem Hardison as the group cut-up and Lillo Brancato Jr., still doing the De Niro imitation he perfected as the son in "A Bronx Tale." Mark (Marky Mark) Wahlberg, playing a tough Southern soldier who finds ample reasons to take his shirt off, oozes gritty confidence and makes a strong, swaggering impression on the big screen.

Also in "Renaissance Man," and used to much less successful effect, are James Remar as an improbably nice officer and Gregory Hines as an improbably harsh one. Hines must do the thankless job of looking stunned when one of Bill's students recites the "We few, we happy few, we band of brothers" speech from "Henry V," once the class finally begins learning a second play.

As a drill sergeant, Hines's character has sneered at the idea that Shakespearean education can make for a better fighting force, but this scene is supposed to change all that. At such moments, the score by Hans Zimmer can be counted on to deliver the obligatory crescendo, the musical equivalent of a self-congratulatory pat on the back.

N.Y. Times News Service

(Condensed movie reviews by Los Angeles Daily News film critics. The rating system for the film list is: ★★★★ — Don't miss it; ★★★ — worth your while; ★★ — Has it moments; ★ — If you must)

BEVERLY HILLS COP III: The heat is gone from this third go 'round for Eddie Murphy's maverick cop. This time he's after a criminal who also heads the security force for a Southern California theme park. Director John Landis ("The Blues Brothers") has a lot of fun shooting up attractions, and Murphy is comfortable in the undemanding role. But this thing is so detached and repetitious, it's like watching a tape loop of the first "Beverly Hills Cop." R. Rating: ★★

THE CROW: This dark, visceral rendering of James O'Barr's comic books is also a haunting tribute to the late Brandon Lee, whose graceful performance will doubtless establish him as a cult figure on a par with his father Bruce Lee. Rookie director Alex Proyas has made one of the most visually striking violent movies in recent memory — and don't forget the killer alternative rock score. All in all, an impressive package. R. Rating: ★★★

EVEN COWGIRLS GET THE BLUES: Gus Van Sant ("Drugstore Cowboy") directs Tom Robbins' overwritten, counterculture novel into the ground. Uma Thurman stars as the large-thumbed goddess of hitchhiking who gets involved with a lesbian feminist insurrection at a western beauty ranch. Horrid dialogue, smug attitudes and incomprehensible storytelling lose the day. R. Rating: ★½

THE FLINTSTONES: The live-action version of the Hanna-Barbera cartoon looks super, delivers dozens of Stone Age sight gags and paleolithic puns, and boasts the incomparable John Goodman as bumbling Fred Flinstone. But with only the flimsiest of stories to tie it all together, the film gradually becomes a yabba-dabba-yawner. PG. Rating: ★★

MAVERICK: Lightweight fun in the Wild West. Mel Gibson pours on the charm as the conniving gambler, Jodie Foster is almost as slick as the woman who loves and robs him, and original TV Maverick James Garner lends his solid presence to the role of a questionable lawman. "Lethal Weapon" purveyor Richard Donner emphasizes thrills and laughs; William Goldman's script is his cleverest since "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." PG. Rating: ★★★

WHEN A MAN LOVES A WOMAN: An upscale San Francisco family's struggles with the twin evils of alcoholism and co-dependency are meticulously detailed, but the tale is never particularly affecting. Meg Ryan and Andy Garcia are solid as the unhappy couple, and their story is certainly instructive; but as directed by Luis Mandoki ("White Palace"), the screenplay by Ronald Bass ("Rain Man") and Al Franken ("Saturday Night Live") gives us no particular reason to care about these people and their problems. R. Rating: ★★½

Jurassic's sharks prepare for blitz

By Phil Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Remember back when the military hawks used to talk about wanting to bomb our enemies back to the Stone Age?

Guess where we're stuck these days.

This time, the bombing is being done by MCA/Universal and Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment. They have just released "The Flintstones" — the story of a modern Stone Age family, whatever that means — to much fanfare, long lines and tepid reviews. And they have another assault planned for July, just as their Bedrock blitz is dying down.

That's when they're going start hyping the heck out of another dinosaur drama, a little film called "Jurassic Park." Came out last year. Maybe you've heard of it. Made about $900 million or so.

It's coming out on home video October 4.

Now, to the untrained observer, the fact that "Jurassic Park" is the top-grossing film of all time would indicate the public was interested in it.

This, apparently, is naive.

MCA/Universal Home Video's current media plan calls for the what the admen describe as 8.3 billion impressions. That figure is derived from the number of people exposed to advertisements and other promotions for the "Jurassic Park" video multiplied by the number of exposures to the big sales push. That is a lot of pushing.

Rather than tell one soul about the "Jurassic Park" video 8.3 billion times, according to MCA/Universal, the blitz should reach 98 percent of the U.S. adult population 25.2 times.

Which doesn't count reading this column.

GILLIGAN: Creator vindicated by show's success filled them with helium in an attempt to escape Russian persecution.

(From 1C)

And he feels vindicated, too, by the continued success of the show. "Gilligan's Island" airs in syndication nationwide.

"'I Love Lucy' had 400 episodes and turns over once a year. 'Gilligan's Island' only has 99 episodes and turns over three times a year," he said. "It must be in its 120th run."

As if the reruns weren't enough, there was more money to be made from the show — namely, three film specials and two animated series (the specials were made before the deaths of Jim Backus, who played millionaire Thurston Howell III; Natalie Schafer, his wife, Lovey; and Alan Hale Jr., the skipper).

There also was a "Gilligan" pilot that aired on an educational channel and a stage musical, written by — who else? — Schwartz and his son, Lloyd.

The musical made its West Coast debut last month in San Diego to tepid reviews. ("Too much of the time, 'Gilligan's Island: The Musical' is content to ride along on our love for the series itself, which is a love that must be charitably described as 'conditional,'" the San Diego Union-Tribune said.)

Still, Schwartz is pressing on, and it's not just the castaways who are keeping him busy.

Work is scheduled to begin in July on a big-screen version of "The Brady Bunch," a Paramount Pictures project that Schwartz will co-produce.

The TV show about a brood of six kids, their parents and the maid first aired on ABC from 1969-74 and also spawned a stage play (not written by Schwartz but endorsed, nonetheless).

Schwartz also is hard at work on "Gilligan's Island: The Movie," with an anticipated release date of this winter.

And casting? This is where Schwartz really has fun speculating. He adores the thought of Geena Davis playing Ginger, Winona Ryder as Mary Ann, Steve Martin as Thurston Howell and Martin Short as Gilligan.

Lovey's Maiden Name and Other Trivia

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Sherwood Schwartz offers answers to frequently asked questions about "Gilligan's Island" and shares behind-the-scenes anecdotes in his new book:

Did Gilligan and the Skipper ever get hurt when the coconuts hit them on the head?

"No because we used rubber coconuts."

Where did the Howells get all those clothes:

"The endless wardrobe (initially for a three-hour tour that lasted three seasons) was symbolic comment. It was my way of saying rich people manage somehow to have the best of everything, no matter what the circumstances."

What was Lovey's maiden name?

After being stumped by a caller seeking the answer to a radio trivia contest question, Schwartz was determined solve this puzzle. "There was an episode in which the castaways heard on the radio that the minister who married Mr. and Mrs. Howell didn't have the proper credentials in the state where the wedding took place. ... I was sure (her real name) was in that episode. ... I checked the volume containing that script and there it was! Wentworth! Lovey was Miss Eunice Wentworth."

What almost became Gilligan's pet?

Seeking for a big finish to the pilot in which Gilligan discovers the shipwrecked boat on the other side of the island, CBS West Coast executive Hunt Stromberg offered this alternative — much to the dismay of Schwartz:

"A dinosaur," Stromberg said. "Gilligan is leading him on a leash. ... Just picture it! Gilligan and his pet dinosaur. It's our answer to Mr. Ed."

"You mean a talking dinosaur," Schwartz asked.

"Don't be ridiculous! Whoever heard of a talking dinosaur?"

COWBOY: Film ultimate test of stars' appeal mysteries.) Nacho (Joaguin Martinez) has vanished in New York, where he has traveled to find his grown daughter, who has been illegally brought in from Cuba for a price.

The minute Sonny and Pepper hit the city, they behave like rubes. "That looks like a motel, right there," Pepper says, pointing at the Waldorf-Astoria. They dine there with their hats on, as if they're never seen a fancy restaurant on television. And though they can't even navigate a menu, strangely enough they drive their old red pickup through Manhattan without ever taking a wrong turn or getting flummoxed by one-way streets.

As they search for the sweatshop where Nacho's daughter is being held prisoner, they are helped by Ernie Hudson as a mounted policeman named Sam. He's apparently a renegade, too. When Sonny is in trouble and Pepper has to find him, Sam yells "Hop on," and they gallop across Fifth Avenue.

A film in which Sonny and Pepper outwit the bad guys and midtown traffic by charging down Lexington Avenue on horseback ought to be a lot more fun than it is. Even the big climax, in which the heroes chase an elevated train across the Manhattan Bridge, seems lifeless. (A hint to non-New Yorkers: if you're ever chasing a subway from the Upper East Side to Brooklyn, do not follow the cowboys' directions. That major detour they took past the Statue of Liberty would really have cost them some time.)

Though Harrelson and Sutherland have made better movies, "The Cowboy Way" may be the ultimate test of their appeal. Together they make this mess watchable, a much harder trick than roping or riding.

Yamaha unveils new piano that's silent

NEW YORK (AP) — Does your boogie-woogie fever give your neighbors the blues? The solution is now at your fingertips: The silent — sssshhhh! — piano is here.

The latest in keyboard technology was unveiled Wednesday by Yamaha, which has created a piano that only the player can hear. The instrument is a hybrid of a traditional piano and a digital piano.

So what does that mean, other than no complaints from the rough audience in the next apartment? The piano has a system that can be turned on to prevent the hammers from hitting the strings.

The player listens to the music through headphones plugged into the piano.

With the system off, the "Silent Series" piano performs like a normal instrument.

Crime intrudes on one of world's greatest natural wonders

By Michael McCabe
N.Y. Times News Service

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Three park ranger police cars converged quietly on the crowded campground in the Yosemite Valley over the Memorial Day weekend, looking for the occupants of a blue Toyota pickup. A 9-year-old girl with sharp eyes was waiting to assist them.

"You're looking for two white males, one with red hair, the other with brown hair and no shirt on," she said to the first ranger out of the car. "The red-haired one went that way on a bike, and the other one ran over that way."

Within minutes the rangers, each wearing bulletproof vests, had two men in handcuffs, a bag of marijuana and a collection of little spoons they suspected may be connected to cocaine use. Their witness, the little girl, stood by taking pictures with her disposable camera.

It was another beautiful day in Yosemite National Park: Half Dome looking down benevolently from on high, dogwood trees in full blossom, laughing families in rubber rafts drifting down the high Merced River — while other tourists cranked up for an evening of drinking and brawling, some of them hell-bent on crime.

On the eve of another summertime deluge of visitors to Yosemite National Park, officials say crime and related urban problems are increasingly intruding into one of the world's great natural wonders, a place that is supposed to be a refuge from all that.

With park attendance already up 14 percent over last year at this time, park officials expect another record year, with more than 4 million visitors. Yet the ranger force is stretched thinner than ever, with just eight law enforcement rangers on duty in the valley at any one time to serve a highly diverse, not always tranquil, population of as many as 50,000 on a busy weekend day.

Twenty years ago, Yosemite had 220 men and women performing resource or visitor protection work for the entire park, which covers nearly 1,200 square miles. Last year that figure dropped to 112 and this year it is down to about 100.

"Twenty years ago we had up to 28 rangers on a night shift, a time when we had 1.5 million fewer visitors," said park superintendent Mike Finley, who will take over as superintendent of Yellowstone National Park this fall. "We used to have rangers walk through campgrounds, which kept the noise level down. We don't have people to do that anymore. That personal relationship between our law enforcement rangers and the public is being lost. The bad guys may be gaining the upper hand."

While the rangers see their budget cut to the bone, they also are seeing the nature of their jobs changing dramatically, from that of a naturalist with the friendly Smokey Bear hat talking about wildflowers and birds to that of a fully armed, flak-jacketed police officer talking to suspects about their right to remain silent.

Increasingly they are concerned not only with drugs and alcohol, but also gangs, graffiti, racial strife, rape, even child sexual abuse.

Last week, a park rest room was trashed and graffiti scribbled on virtually every available surface; rangers suspect it was gang-related. Last summer, 350 Russian Americans were escorted out of the park after the group had a near-violent confrontation with another group of campers who traced their roots to a Baltic country. Also last summer, rangers broke up a tense standoff between a group of Latino campers from Los Angeles and a group of blacks from Oakland.

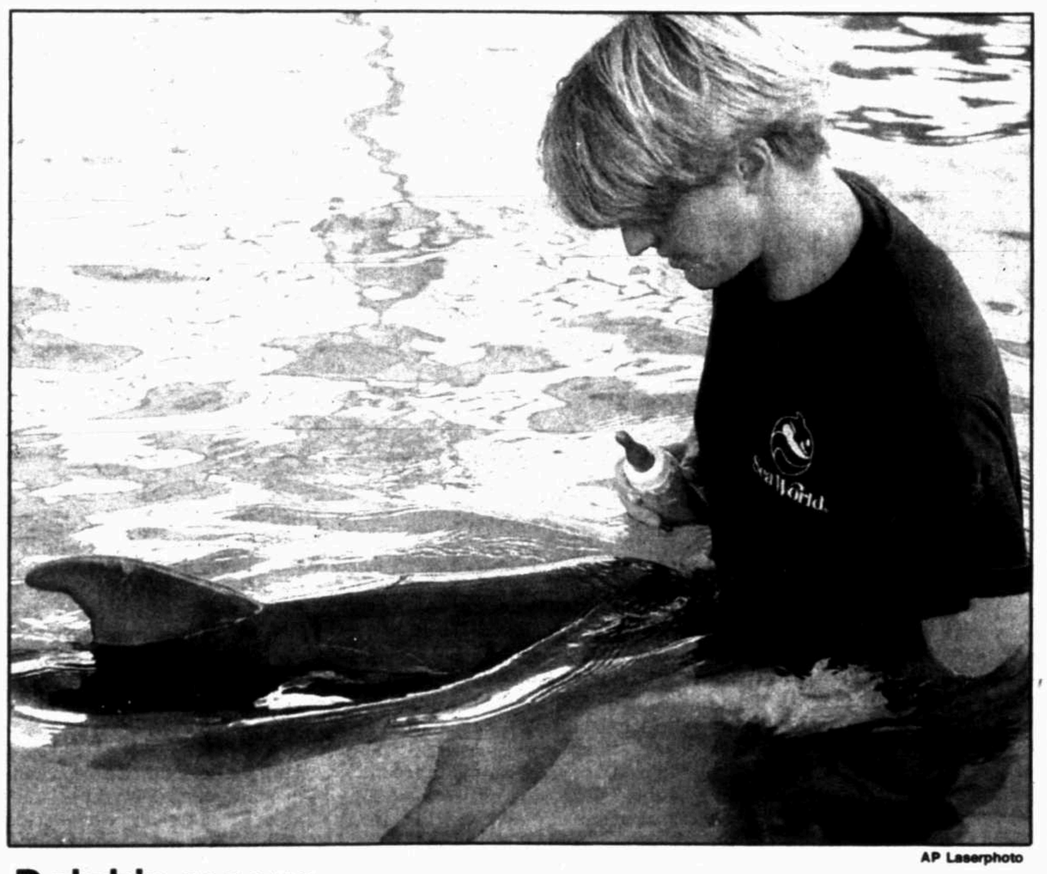

Most visitors are aware of the hiking trails, the campgrounds, the shops, the restaurants and bars in the park, but few are aware of the rest: a fire department, a medical clinic, a federal court, a jail (there were 715 arrests last year, nearly twice as many as 1989), even a morgue (there were 21 deaths in 1993, compared with 13 in 1989).

Surprisingly, one of the biggest headaches for rangers turns out to be the park's employees, specifically employees of the concessions. For years, the Yosemite Park & Curry Co. operated the concessions, but last year they were taken over by Yosemite Concession Services Corp., which has 2,100 employees during the summer.

Concession employees, who live three to a tent in rundown residential areas in Yosemite Valley that some consider little better than slums, account for 40 percent of the ranger arrests. Investigators are still questioning a suspect involved in a reported date rape that was said to have occurred in one of the concession employees' camps last weekend.

The concession company has recently started doing background checks and drug testing on prospective employees, but rangers say the workers are often on the job for a week or two before the results of the investigation catches up with them. By that time, they may well have already gotten into trouble with the law.

Contrary to pleasant notions that the great outdoors, like music, soothes the savage breast, for many it has the opposite effect, due to "the middle-of-nowhere syndrome," said Paul Berkowitz, senior special agent for the National Park Service in Washington, and formerly a ranger at Yosemite National Park.

Dolphin rescue

Kim Jones, an animal care specialist at Sea World of Texas in San Antonio, prepares to bottle feed Gilly, a two-to-three-month-old bottlenose dolphin Friday. The dolphin was found stranded on South Padre Island on May 10. It had been under the care of the Texas Marine Mammal Stranding Network before its transfer to Sea World.

Board works to decide what can, can't be called organic

By Robert Greene
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — And you thought organic farming just meant spreading manure instead of commercial fertilizer, using a natural bug killer instead of a factory made concoction.

Hardly.

Deciding what can be called organic is so complex that the National Organic Standard Board has been working on suggested standards off and on for two years.

The board's 14 volunteer members hope to be nearly finished in early June, following a six-day marathon session in Santa Fe, N.M. They'll be able to give the Agriculture Department material to draft regulations on what qualifies food to be sold as organic.

"We're really having to go crop by crop," said James Michael Sligh of Greenville, S.C., chairman of the board and head of a nonprofit group that advocates sustainable agriculture.

"In order to be useful, these recommendations have to be as specific as they possibly can."

The environmentalists, farmers, processors, consumer advocates and scientists are also trying to define organically produced livestock — which include everything from cows to honeybees.

And they are working on standards for labels, canning, certification of farmers, biotechnology and accreditation of agencies that will give the "organic" designation.

More than 30 state, regional or private organizations certify products as organic. The national guidelines, required in the 1990 Farm Bill, will assure everyone is using the same basic rules.

USDA officials hope to propose rules in November and have them in place next February.

Organic farming generally means rotating crops and using biological pest controls and proper tilling to protect and nourish the soil while growing crops free of synthetic fertilizers and pesticides.

It also means raising livestock without using steroids or regular low-level doses of antibiotics and without regularly cooping them up.

Some issues are simple. The law says farms will have to use organic practices for three years before being certified. They will have to keep records of such things as fertilizer application and livestock sources for five years.

Timetables will be tricky. Organic farmers may not use seeds that are treated to prevent them from rotting in the ground. But untreated seeds are hard to come by, so their use will have to be gradually eliminated.

"We recognize currently there is not enough of untreated organic seed of every variety necessary to say this is required tomorrow," Sligh said. "At the same time, we don't want to discourage companies from making this type of progress."

Labeling for processed foods could be contentious. The law says a product can be labeled as organic if 5 percent of its weight is non-organic. But does that 5 percent allow for hard-to-find ingredients, or does it mean a box of cereal from organic grain but with non-organic raisins can be labeled as organic?

"The committee recommendation is kind of open-ended now," said Merrill Clark, a farmer from Cassopolis, Mich., a consumer representative on the board.

Clark also chairs the livestock committee, which is breaking new ground because organic livestock raising has a relatively short history compared to crops.

It's one of the more complicated issues, because farmers will have to keep track of each animal, what it ate, and what medicine it received. The 1990 law already resolves one dilemma, though: Farmers will lose their organic certification if they let a sick animal die or suffer by denying it lifesaving antibiotics.

But once saved, the animal no longer is considered organic.

An even more grueling task will come in the fall, when the board comes up with a list of synthetic and natural ingredients that may or may not be used in organic farming.

What, for example, will be done about pyrethrum, a plant-based pesticide, and its synthetic forms? Does adding emulsifiers that extend the life and potency turn pyrethrum into something unnatural? And does the "natural" status of pyrethrum and other botanicals or their synthetic cousins make them any less threatening to birds and other life?

Then, there's biotechnology. The board has so far agreed that genetic engineering isn't natural, so any product will have to be considered for the national list of approved and prohibited substances.

Detective Hotline is 900-number 'dial-it' service for Dick Tracy set

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — You're trying to track down a deadbeat dad. Or maybe there's something "different" about your new nanny. Or there's a guy offering a business deal that's too good to be true.

Where do you turn? Try the dialing Dick Tracys at the Detective Hotline, a 900-number service that provides callers with do-it-yourself investigative advice — at $3.99 a minute.

"We were focusing on a niche in the market that we didn't think anyone was covering — small businesses and individuals," explained Frank Dillon, the retired head of the Air Force Office of Special Investigations and co-founder of the business.

Translation: Anybody with big bucks can hire a detective. But anyone with $3.99 a minute and a worried mind can get similar results if pointed in the right direction.

Those uneasy about doing their own detecting can pay extra — $30 to $40 — to have a telephone detective do it for them.

So it's not Bogey in "The Maltese Falcon" — these private eyes don't get any further from their desks than a telephone cord allows. This is detective work for the information age — staking out databases, tracking down driver's license records.

Dillon, 54, has assembled a team of 40 "highly trained and experienced investigators" from federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, the company's brochure boasts.

His partner, veteran political and corporate prober Charles Pinck, said people are amazed by the speed of the service: "I mean, literally, a few minutes sometimes" to provide easy to follow instructions.

It took a little longer for Alan Smith, but he was still equally impressed.

Smith, of Dallas, was considering a $10,000 business investment. He saw a television ad for the hotline, and decided it was worth checking on his new potential partners.

He dialed. They checked. "They found out that several years back, the main guy was involved with a securities fraud suit," Smith recounted. "I found out within a couple of days."

Smith let the Hotline do his investigating, but the key to the service is that most information is available to the public: motor vehicle records, court documents, bankruptcy filings, disciplinary charges. Most folks just don't know where to look.

Dillon and Pinck have other tales from the Annandale, Va.-based company's first two months of operation.

There's the woman from New Jersey who found out her daughter's nanny was a drunken driver.

SATURDAY, JUNE 4, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Get in step with certain influential and bright people and you will quickly scale new career heights. Teamwork enables you to expand your field of operations. Put money management in the hands of experts you trust. Going off half-cocked about a clever idea or product would be a mistake. Wait for a trend to develop before committing yourself. The more flexibility you have, the better your chances of landing a promotion or new job.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: journalist Bettina Gregory, tennis player Andrea Jaeger, basketball player Xavier McDaniel, actor Parker Stevenson.

ARIES (Match 21-April 19): Do not make a companion uneasy by discussing personal problems in public. Put any worries aside for a while and join in the fun! New rapport is possible with a relative.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Routine matters will take up much of your time today. You will get a feeling of serenity from spending time outdoors, even if you only putter around in your backyard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the most of your leisure time. A change of scenery will put loved one in a cheerful mood. Volunteering your services to the community is great if you do not neglect family responsibilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Loved ones require more support than ever. Your Rock of Gibraltar stability is a great source of comfort. A period of quiet meditation will help you find the right answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A talented friend or relative urges you to break out of a rut and try new things. Choose a project or hobby that will really hold your interest. A second income is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Group activities can be fun but a special effort should be made to keep spending down. A rambunctious child could interfere with romance. Plan a romantic night on the town for two!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try to catch up on your rest. The evening is likely to be more eventful than expected. A former love may be uppermost in your thoughts. Turn your attention to the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance enjoys highly favorable influences this weekend. Finish a home construction job without further delay, then consider a redecorating scheme for your living room.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Business or romantic complications test your maturity. Will you rise to the occasion? An upbeat attitude will improve your chances for success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Success will come when you display your talents to best advantage. Be systematic when tackling a multi-step task. Communing with nature gives you a new slant on recent developments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your popularity rests partly on your gentle manner and good taste. It may be time to buy some new clothes. Be patient with an older relative who feels under the weather.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creativity and initiative will help you complete bothersome tasks in record time. Developing a serene disposition will help you deal with cranky relatives more effectively.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are "idea people," constantly on the lookout for fresh concepts and novel ways of doing things. As youngsters, they will show a strong entrepreneurial spirit — eager to run a lemonade stand or sell their old toys. All too often, these Gemini will lose interest in a project before it is finished, denying themselves the sweet fruits of success.

Laryngitis sidelines Close from seven performances

LOS ANGELES — Fans who want to see Glenn Close's final West Coast performances in "Sunset Boulevard" may already be too late.

Close isn't set to leave the show until June 26, but laryngitis has sidelined her for seven performances in the past week and her prognosis is "day to day," publicist Catherine Olim said.

"Obviously, she'd like to be up and singing as soon as possible," Olim said.

Theater officials have offered ticket exchanges, but say it's been difficult to find good seats for the remaining performances. Close is slated to open the Broadway version of the musical in November.

Understudy Karen Mason said she doesn't even listen anymore to the announcement that she's stepping in for Close.

"I don't like to hear the groaning," she said.

CANBERRA, Australia — Eartha Kitt got cut.

The veteran entertainer was supposed to deliver a luncheon speech Friday to the National Press Club, but the group canceled her appearance because she'd given too many interviews beforehand.

Group cancels Eartha Kitt's appearance for giving too many interviews.

Reporters don't want to write the same story twice, explained club manager Frank Crews.

Ms. Kitt, who is touring Australia, said she was surprised and disappointed the show didn't go on.

"Psychologically, there was a feeling of rejection," she said.

LOS ANGELES — It couldn't have happened to a nicer fella. Oscar-winning cowboy actor Ben Johnson finally received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, more than 50 years after he arrived in town.

"I don't know why in the hell you all waited so long to give me the star," the 74-year-old Johnson said Thursday. "You waited till I got so old I couldn't hardly enjoy it."

The ceremony was attended by fellow Western stars Gene Autry, Harry Carey Jr. and Monty Montana.

Johnson, a champion rodeo performer, came to Hollywood in 1940 to deliver horses to Howard Hughes. He found work first as a stunt double, then became a star in his own right, appearing in "Shane," "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and "Wagonmaster."

He won the best supporting actor Oscar for 1971's "The Last Picture Show," in which he uttered the line, "It couldn't have happened to a nicer fella."

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. — Grace Slick, the former lead singer for Jefferson Airplane, is waiting to hear where she'll be grounded.

Grace Slick, 54, pleaded guilty Tuesday to brandishing a weapon at police.

Slick, 54, pleaded guilty Tuesday to one count of brandishing a weapon at police.

She faces six to 12 months in a court-authorized rehabilitation program or at the county Honor Farm, a minimum- and medium-security jail. Sentencing is scheduled for June 6. Until then, she's free on $7,000 bond.

Slick was accused of pointed an unloaded shotgun at three police officers who came to her home March 5. The officers were responding to a 911 call about a drunken woman firing a gun.

Slick's attorney said the singer had been under stress.

LOS ANGELES — Forget the cowboy way. Woody Harrelson would rather ride the surf than a horse.

"I'm a cowboy of the waves," said Harrelson, who stars as a brash rodeo star alongside Kiefer Sutherland in "The Cowboy Way."

Harrelson was born in Texas and said he enjoyed the horseback riding and roping he got to do in the movie, but he's clearly a dude you won't find at a dude ranch.

He said his Ohio upbringing didn't give him much contact with cowboy culture.

"I was more of a suburbanite," he said. "But I came from the right state."

State jobless rate rises .4 percent

DALLAS (AP) — The state's unemployment rate rose .4 percent to 6.7 percent in May, while the national rate dropped, the Labor Department said Friday.

There were 627,000 Texans looking for work in May, up from 593,000 in April, meaning some 34,000 more Texans were out of jobs.

The state's unemployment rate climbed in the first three months of the year from 6 percent in January to 7.4 percent in March. The rate fell in April for the first time this year and "has fallen back into the mid-six percent range during the last two months," said Bob Gaddie, the bureau's Southwest Regional Commissioner.

Compared to May 1993, last month's unemployment rate was unchanged at 6.7 percent.

The state's quarterly unemployment rate, considered a less volatile reading, dropped from 6.9 percent to 6.8 percent with the May reading.

Nationally, the June unemployment rate declined to 6 percent from April's 6.4 percent mark.

Fisher can attract voters, Dem party boss says

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Democratic Party's national chairman gave a wholehearted endorsement to U.S. Senate candidate Richard Fisher on Friday, saying the former Ross Perot adviser can attract independent and Republican voters come November.

Party boss David Wilhelm said Fisher's nomination by Texas Democrats elevates his race against Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison to one of the nation's premiere political battles.

"He is exactly the kind of candidate who can bring in independent-minded voters to this party. And if he can bring in people who may have voted for Ross Perot in 1992, more power to him," Wilhelm said.

Fisher, who was to speak to the state Democratic convention Friday night, was a top adviser to billionaire Perot's 1992 independent presidential bid.

As he seeks to convince the party faithful of his loyalty, the Dallas financier says he's always been a Democrat and cites his experience in President Jimmy Carter's administration and his help in forming the moderate Democratic Leadership Council.

Wilhelm said he believes Texas Democrats harbor no reservations about Fisher, who defeated former attorney general Jim Mattox and U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews to win the nomination.

"There is excitement about Richard Fisher's candidacy. There is excitement about his message of economic growth. And there is excitement that we have a candidate who can bring in independents, who has a message that matters to business people across this state. This is a man who can broaden the base of the party," Wilhelm said.

Nationally, as Democrats battle to retain control of Congress, he said the party looks at Texas as an opportunity to unseat a Republican incumbent despite the fact that Mrs. Hutchison won 67 percent of the special election vote a year ago in defeating appointed Democrat Bob Krueger.

"This is a race that is very much on the radar screen and its viewed as one of the key marginal races in the country," Wilhelm said.

Echoing state Democratic officials, the national chairman also took shots at Texas Republicans. The GOP holds its convention in Fort Worth next week — a session that is expecting a tough, three-way battle.

U.S. may let Turkey take Iraqi oil out of pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States may yield to Turkey's request that it be allowed to flush oil from an Iraqi pipeline and use the oil for its own purposes, a Turkish official said Friday.

Ozdem Sanberk, undersecretary of the Turkish foreign ministry, who has spent two days talking with U.S. officials, said he would spend two more days next week trying to work out the project with the U.N. Security Council, which is enforcing sanctions against Iraq, including an oil embargo.

The pipeline, which carried oil from Iraqi deposits across Turkey to the Mediterranean, was closed by the embargo. It contains about 12 million barrels of oil.

Turkey has been trying to gain an exemption from the embargo to flush the oil out of the pipeline and refill it twice, in what Sanberk called a "rescue operation" to keep the line in operating condition.

Turkey also argues that the move would give it financial relief from the oil transit revenues lost because of the embargo.

"Turkey should not be penalized as a result of the embargo," Sanberk said. "The embargo is on Iraq, not Turkey."

The United States, while praising Turkey's cooperation with the Gulf War allies and acknowledging its economic sacrifice, has been resisting releasing oil from the pipeline, on the grounds that it would weaken the embargo.

U.S. State Department officials were unavailable to comment on the talks with Sanberk.

Sanberk said complicated problems remain to be worked out with the Security Council, including the question of payment for the 24 million barrels of oil, which would be worth about $400 million on the open market. More than two-thirds of the oil belongs to Iraq, and the rest to Turkey.

Sanberk said that the oil would not be sold, but would be used by Turkey. He said that after the pipeline was flushed and refilled twice it would be closed again.

He said the Turkish government does not link the oil release with Turkey's permission for the allies to use Turkish facilities to help protect Iraqi Kurds, but some members of the Turkish parliament do.

Mysterious explosion kills three in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mysterious explosion ripped through an old building in the city's Tenderloin district, leaving three men dead under the rubble and parts of a four-block area in shambles on Friday.

"At this time we have not ruled out anything," police Sgt. Barbara Davis said.

The mostly vacant three-story building erupted without warning late Thursday.

"There was an instant fire and inferno," said neighbor Michael Voorhees. "We thought it was an earthquake. ... There were flames that seemed to be stretching out across the street, and people were running around with their pets, screaming and crying."

The blast tore through a dry cleaner's across the street and smashed windows for half a block, leaving 12 buildings damaged and the streets strewn with glass, clothing and pieces of brick and metal.

The building site itself was reduced to little more than a gaping hole, with a bathtub hanging off one of only two standing walls.

Residents in apartments on all sides were evacuated, with 40 of them taking up lodging for the night in the posh St. Francis Hotel, which has a tradition of providing shelter dating to the 1906 earthquake.

The building at the edge of San Francisco's seedy Tenderloin district had only one occupant, owner Margarita Delpeck, who was staying at her other home in neighboring Pacifica.

Authorities also speculate that the explosion may have been caused by a secret methamphetamine drug lab operating in the building.

The three male victims apparently were standing or walking on the sidewalk when the building exploded and were buried under the collapsing brick, Davis said. Their identities were not immediately released

Charge accuses FBI agent of trying to sell stolen heroin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An FBI special agent assigned to a squad that arrested drug dealers was charged Friday with stealing about 100 pounds of heroin from his bureau's evidence room and trying to sell it.

Kenneth R. Withers, 33, a seven-year veteran, was arrested at his office and sent to federal prison without bail Friday, authorities said.

"It's very difficult for us to arrest one of our own agents," said Bob Reutter, special agent in charge for the FBI's Philadelphia office. "It's very painful for me and the FBI family."

Withers, of Medford, N.J., was arrested after a two-month investigation into a mysterious supplier named "Salvatore." The supplier contacted dealers through the mail and offered to front them large quantities of heroin in return for money to be mailed to postal boxes.

Withers turned out to be the supplier, and the drugs for sale were stolen from the bureau, authorities said. Withers asked dealers for $75,000 per kilogram, or 2.2 pounds, the FBI said.

Experts identified Withers' handwriting on application forms for the post office boxes and found his fingerprints on FBI documents relating to its investigation.

Withers stole the heroin, confiscated more than a year ago, between January and March, and replaced the missing evidence with sodium bicarbonate, Reutter said.

Withers' letters to dealers even contained one-ounce free samples of one batch seized from a Pakistani dealer, authorities said.

The agency intercepted one mailed shipment and discovered it matched the drug confiscated from the Pakistani dealer, the FBI said.

Chemical companies release worst-case scenario reports

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A ruptured storage tank sends more than 250,000 pounds of a deadly chemical down a narrow river valley, leaving hundreds, maybe thousands, dead or disfigured.

Such a nightmarish scenario occurred in December 1984 in Bhopal, India, when a methyl isocyanate leak at a Union Carbide Corp. plant killed 3,500 people.

The U.S. chemical industry, in the hopes that a Bhopal-type accident can be avoided, released the first reports Friday detailing their worst-possible disasters. The report are required under a new federal law by 1998.

"They've shown they've been willing to put their cards on the table," said Steve Arendt, whose Knoxville, Tenn.-based, company, JBF Associates, reviewed the study results for accuracy.

The scenarios released by 10 chemical plants Friday examined the distance that high concentrations of dangerous chemicals would travel before dissipating.

The reports would help emergency planners know where to target their response, including assistance to the elderly and disabled people, Nitro Fire Chief Stephen Hardman said.

The current manufacturer of methyl isocyanate, Rhone-Poulenc Ag. Co., said a rupture of the chemical's 253,600-pound underground storage tank in Institute would kill everyone exposed up to nine miles away within an hour or more.

Serious health problems would occur for a distance of up to 28 miles, Rhone-Poulenc said. Charleston, the state's largest city with 60,000 people, is 12 miles east of Institute.

Worst-case scenarios for chemicals such as ammonia and chlorine projected "hazard zones" of up to 25 miles. In half of the cases, the distance was six miles for less drastic accidents.

Industry officials and analysts believe the worst-case scenarios are for a "one in a million year" occurrence, but they hope the drastic visions help communities plan for smaller leaks.

More than 140,000 chemical plants nationwide are required to make their worst-case scenarios public under provisions of the Clean Air Act adopted in 1990.
