Bush rips Israeli lobby

President vows to veto loan guarantees

■ Bush accuses Israel's supporters of jeopardizing a Middle East peace conference.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Speaking in unusually vehement terms, President Bush demanded again on Thursday that Congress delay debate on Israel's request for $10 billion in loan guarantees and threatened to use his veto to block any early congressional action on the matter.

At a hurriedly scheduled news conference, the president clearly raised the likelihood of a bitter dispute with Israel and its supporters in this country by asserting that the request for loan guarantees to help build housing for Soviet immigrants should not be considered now because the world stood "on the brink of a historic breakthrough" that could lead to direct negotiations between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

Bush spoke in unusually forceful terms in taking on the formidable Israel lobby. He complained that he was battling "powerful political forces" as he tried to hold off the Israelis' request.

A "contentious debate" on Capitol Hill, he said, "would raise a host of controversial issues" that "could well destroy our ability to bring one or more of the parties to the peace table."

The president was upset that despite his previous request for a 120-day delay, most congressional leaders, urged on by Israel's experienced lobby, planned to proceed with the legislation on the loan guarantees. In return for the loan guarantees, the administration wants to obtain a pledge from Israel to bar further settlements in the West Bank, Golan Heights, and Gaza Strip, something Israel refuses to do.

"Something like a thousand lobbyists" were working against him, Bush said.

"I've worn out the telephone," Bush said, describing himself as "one lonely little guy down here" facing a

Gramm tests name's clout in Northeast

■ Texas Republican plumbs political waters far from home.

WASHINGTON — Lauren Kelley Parren, a Vermont homemaker, was responding to a barrage of questions early in August from a telephone pollster seeking her opinion of public officials in her state.

Gramm

What do you think of Gov. Richard Snelling? she was asked. Sen. Patrick Leahy? Sen. James Jeffords?

Parren had no trouble recognizing the names of leading politicians in her New England state. But she was taken aback when asked her opinion of Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas.

"I thought I heard wrong," Parren said in an interview this week. She said she wondered what the conservative Texas Republican, whose name she recognized from stories on National Public Radio, had to do with politics in Vermont.

DARE-ing parade

The Midland Independent School District's Drug Abuse Resistance Education program got off to a rousing start for its third year with a parade through downtown Midland on Thursday. Paraders, including Midland High flag twirler Susan Dellenbach, concluded their march at Centennial Plaza with a rally and speakers, including Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. Midland Police Department and Sheriff's Department officers both work with sixth graders, teaching the dangers of drug use and reinforcing a "Just Say No" message.

Hearing turns stormy; Dems press Thomas

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas, widely expected to enjoy smooth sailing through his confirmation process, ran into a squall Thursday in a pointed exchange with Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., on whether Thomas would apply controversial natural law theories to high court cases.

"That's the most unartful dodge I've heard," said an obviously dissatisfied Biden after Thomas answered that he could not say whether a single person

Realtors help search for missing teen

Searchers for Elizabeth Henry, missing since Aug. 19, are working on the possibility that the 17-year-old's body may be found in a vacant house or building in north Midland County.

The inspection of those properties is routine procedure that was decided by law enforcement agencies involved in the case, said District Attorney Al Schorre.

"It's another avenue to be pursued," said Schorre, who added that the investigation has been very thorough.

Sandy Scott, president of the Midland Association of Realtors, was asked Thursday to contact area real estate agents and ask them to check vacant commercial and residential properties.

Airport sets projects to ensure smooth landing for CAF

Grant might fund new terminal plan

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland International Airport officials have identified a $5 million federal grant that may be available for funding improvements there.

Among requirements for the new program, the federal government's Military Airport Grant, facilities must have been at one time an installation of the U.S. Armed Services. Midland International was developed from Midland Army Air Field, a bombardier training school.

"The city felt we met the requirements, and it would be worth our while to apply," said Ken Day, director of airports. "We have received word that they got our application, and we expect an answer by the end of the month."

Midland International Airport has a number of projects in the works to prepare for the Confederate Air Force, the airport's regional advisory board learned Thursday.

A painted water tower, parking area and loop road are among improvements to be made during the next year in connection with the relocation of the CAF's museum and headquarters to Midland.

"We're trying to ensure that everything operates according to plan, that they make an easy transition from Harlingen to here," said Ken Day, director of airports. He spoke to a group of community leaders from surrounding cities who make up the Permian Basin Airport Board, an advisory and informational group.

Day said the city plans to capitalize on the CAF's arrival, which community leaders say might increase Midland tourism dramatically.

A project to clear and mow about 70 acres around the museum building is hoped to accommodate the parking needs of crowds at special events, beginning with the air

Senate on abortion

WASHINGTON — The Senate approved legislation Thursday revoking a ban on abortion counseling by federally financed clinics, and allowing taxpayer-paid abortions for women who are victims of rape or incest. The measure, adopted 78-22, faced a veto threat from President Bush over both provisions. With his promised rejection of the bill, abortion foes did little to thwart passage of the legislation. They have resorted to that tactic frequently in recent months,in a Congress that increasingly favors abortion rights but still lacks the strength required to override a presidential veto. /8A

U.S. Cubans react

MIAMI — On the streets of Little Havana and over the airwaves of this city's Spanish-language radio stations, there was jubilation and more than a bit of gloating Thursday, as the news that the Soviet Union plans to withdraw its troops from Cuba was passed from mouth to mouth and analyzed on talk shows. "This is the best news that Cuban exiles have received in 32 years," said Tomas Regalado, news director at Radio Mambi, the top-rated Spanish-language station here. "There is a tremendous sense of euphoria. . . . People see this as the beginning of the end of the Castro regime."

Gorbachev asks for billions in massive food aid

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev of the Soviet Union sent urgent letters to the European Community and the head of the Group of 7 industrial democracies on Thursday seeking food aid on a scale dwarfing previous Western commitments.

In a letter to Jacques Delors, the president of the European Community, Gorbachev said the Soviet Union needed $6 billion to $7.3 billion worth of free food for the coming winter, said Ella Krucoff, a spokesman here for the community.

A spokesman for Prime Minister John Major of Great Britain said that he had received a similar letter but declined to discuss its contents. Major is the current chairman of the Group of 7, which also includes the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, and Canada.

The requests underlined increasing Soviet and Western concerns about the adequacy of Soviet food supplies this winter and the possibility that shortages could lead to a breakdown of civil order there.

In another indication of the Soviet Union's potential problems in feeding itself this winter, the Agriculture Department announced on Thursday that this year's Soviet grain harvest was likely to be about 20 percent smaller than last year's. The estimate was near the optimistic end of predictions by agriculture experts for a 20 to 30 percent drop.

Soviet officials have been estimating a drop of 23 to 28 percent, said Carol G. Brookins, a Washington agriculture consultant who was in Moscow last week.

Thursday's letters from Gorbachev were similar to a letter that Frans Andriessen, the European Community's commissioner for external relations and trade policy, received on Wednesday from Ivan S. Silayev, the head of Soviet economic planning.

Gorbachev's letter on Thursday asked the European Community for specific quantities of food in 17 categories. These included 5.5 million metric tons of grain, 900,000 metric tons of meat, 900,000 metric tons of sugar, 350,000 metric tons of butter, 300,000 metric tons of flour, and 300,000 metric tons of vegetable fat.

Ms. Krucoff said that the European Community had no immediate reaction to the request and that a senior Soviet official would visit Brussels on Sept. 18 and 19 to explain the reasons for it.

(Story may end here; additional material follows.)

Delors told the European Parliament on Wednesday that the European Community should send $2 billion worth of food to the Soviet Union immediately. In an appeal directed at Washington, Tokyo, and Ottawa, he also said that all of the Group of 7 countries should send food.

The European Community is shipping $300 million worth of free food and $600 million worth of food sold with subsidized loans. The community agreed in January to send this assistance and is now preparing another $1.4 billion program including both food and technical assistance.

American officials have said that the distribution of food is just as important as total supply, and the first of two high-level Agriculture Department delegations is in the Soviet Union now to study both problems. Last year's bumper harvest of 235 million metric tons of grain was not enough to avoid local shortages because of transportation problems, and a smaller harvest this year may worsen local shortages, Agriculture Secretary Edward R. Madigan said last week.

The United States shipped $1 billion of grain in the first half of this year under a program of federal guarantees for banks that lend money to the Soviet Union for purchases of American agricultural products. President Bush authorized another $1.5 billion worth of loan guarantees on June 11, of which the first $600 million has been committed and most of the food shipped.

U.N. council recommends Baltics

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A festive U.N. Security Council recommended U.N. admission for the newly freed Baltic republics on Thursday, hailing their return to the family of nations after 51 years of Soviet domination.

The General Assembly is expected to follow the recommendation of the 15-member council by admitting Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia by acclamation when it convenes Tuesday.

"This is an important and glorious day for the Baltics," said Stasys Lozoraitis of Lithuania, spokesman for the three nations and Lithuania's charge d'affaires in Washington.

"The support of all members for our admission is a very important basis to begin work, collaboration, for building something new, better and brighter in the future," Lozoraitis told reporters after the council vote.

The Baltics, which ended 51 years of Soviet domination this year, will be admitted along with North Korea, South Korea, the Marshall Islands and Micronesia. There are currently 159 members in the assembly.

The United States and most Western nations never recognized the Soviet Union's annexation of the Baltics in 1940, and the three states have maintained interest sections in Washington and New York.

The Baltic republics were independent nations between World War I and World War II, and were active in the U.N.'s predecessor, the League of Nations.

But in 1939, Hitler and Stalin secretly decided their future with a Nazi-Soviet pact that divided eastern Europe into spheres of influence. The Baltics were given to the Soviet Union and Poland was divided between the two countries.

Last year, the three republics began independence drives that were forcefully opposed by the Kremlin. But the backlash against Kremlin hard-liners in the wake of their failed Aug. 18-21 coup led to Soviet and international recognition for Baltic independence.

On Thursday, the Baltic nations' three envoys were seated as honored guests during the council session.

Kidnappers demand more releases as part of swap

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Muslim kidnappers said Thursday they back efforts to arrange a comprehensive hostage deal, but renewed demands that jailed comrades in Europe be freed as part of any swap.

Despite such obstacles, there was optimism that the hostage ordeal could end with a phased release of Arab prisoners held by Israel, Israeli POWs and the 11 Westerners missing in Lebanon.

In the latest sign of progress, Israel received the body of Sgt. Samir Assad, a soldier listed as missing in Lebanon since April 1983, and allowed a deported Palestinian, Ali Abu Hilal, to return home.

An unmarked Israeli Boeing 707 carrying the body and the Palestinian landed Friday at an air force base near Tel Aviv after a flight from Vienna, where the deal was negotiated.

An Israeli military statement said Hilal's return was "a gesture" by Israel, "conditioned upon his agreement not to break the law in the future." The Palestinian activist was expelled from the occupied West Bank in 1986.

In Abu Dis, Hilal's hometown on the outskirts of Jerusalem, the mood was jubilant. The family prepared banners saying "Welcome Home, O' Hero Ali Abu Hilal."

The trade was the second public step in an apparent multi-stage deal.

United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, in Tehran for talks with Iranian officials, said he believed there was momentum toward a resolution of the hostage issue.

Related Story/2D

"I am moving in that direction, as you know," said Perez de Cuellar, who has spearheaded diplomatic efforts to win the hostages' freedom. "I have already got good results, which I hope will be the beginning."

Others close to the hostage bargaining said behind-the-scenes talks continued.

"There is definitely a positive atmosphere about the issue and there are hush-hush, backstage efforts being exerted," said Abdulla al-Amin, a Shiite member of the Lebanese Cabinet.

In Washington, President Bush sidestepped a question on whether he believed the release of a Western hostage in Beirut may be imminent.

But he told reporters that Wednesday's release of 51 Arab prisoners by Israel "is bound to be viewed as very, very favorable."

In addition to the prisoner release, Israel also repatriated the bodies of nine Muslim guerrillas on Wednesday after receiving word on the death of one of its missing soldiers. The Jewish state has said it wants information on all its missing soldiers before releasing more Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners.

Thursday's statement came from the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad. It was accompanied by a picture of American Terry Anderson, whom it is beleieved to hold. An identical photo was released by the group last month.

Anderson, 43, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped March 16, 1985. He is the longest-held Western hostage.

In the statement, Islamic Jihad urged Perez de Cuellar to keep trying to arrange a deal. "We are fully prepared to extend the required support for him to reach the required comprehensive solution," it said.

Islamic Jihad welcomed the Israeli prisoner release as a "positive step," but said it was not enough.

"We ... consider it (the prisoner release) an incomplete one unless it culminates in freeing all our imprisoned brethren in the world, especially in Europe and the jails of the Zionist enemy," it said.

That apparently referred to Shiite prisoners including hijacker Hussein Hariri, held in Switzerland since July 1987, and brothers Mohammed Ali Hamadi and Abbas Hamadi, jailed in Germany since 1987.

Mohammed Ali Hamadi is serving a life sentence for the hijacking of the TWA jet to Lebanon in 1985, in which a U.S. Navy diver was killed. Abbas Hamadi was sentenced in 1988 to 13 years in prison for kidnapping.

The Hamadis have previously emerged as a stumbling block since they were convicted of crimes, unlike most of the Shiite prisoners held by Israel.

North Korea hardens policy toward rival

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A North Korean official was kicked and forced to stop talking with South Korean delegates at an international conference in the North, a report said Thursday.

The incident took place Wednesday at a reception for delegates at the Asian ministerial meeting of the Group of 77, which opened Tuesday in North Korea's capital of Pyongyang, the South Korean news agency Yonhap said.

Government officials in Seoul said that and other recent North Korean actions indicate the communist state is hardening its policy toward rival South Korea following the collapse of communism in the Soviet Union.

Last month, North Korea postponed until late October a scheduled meeting between the two Koreas' prime ministers, citing fears of an outbreak of cholera in South Korea.

South Korea had sent a six-member government delegation led by Vice Foreign Minister Yoo Chongha to the two-day Group of 77 meeting.

A guide in the reception hall interrupted a conversation between Yoo and a junior North Korean government official and kicked the North Korean away, Yonhap said in a dispatch from Pyongyang.

Yoo is the first South Korean Cabinet official who has attended an international meeting in North Korea since the peninsula was divided in 1945.

North Korean officials have avoided talking to Yoo and other South Korean delegates, Yonhap said.

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high between 85 and 90 and south winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Saturday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high around 90 and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

After an overnight low of 68, Thursday's high was 88 compared with the record high for that date of 101 set in 1930. The record low for today's date was set in 1959, when the mercury dipped to 49.

STATE

Texas remained mostly cloudy, warm and humid Thursday with scattered thunderstorms in the Southwest, along the Texas-New Mexico border and along the coastal plains. Far West Texas was mostly sunny.

Temperatures climbed into the 80s and 90s, although it was 77 degrees at Guadalupe Pass at 3 p.m.

Winds were mostly from the south and southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Forecasters expected North Texas would continue to be partly cloudy through Saturday with widely scattered thunderstorms in the west today. High temperatures were expected to range from 86 to 93 degrees with lows in the lower 70s.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered across the Plains, Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes region on Thursday.

At midday, rain was reported over northwest and central Texas, the Texas coast, southwest Louisiana, northern Arkansas, southern Florida, Ohio, Indiana, central and southeastern South Dakota, central Nevada, southern Colorado and northern New Mexico.

Residents of central and eastern Iowa, northwest and central Illinois and western Nebraska were warned of severe thunderstorms.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included an inch at Fort Wayne, Ind., and a half-inch at Beaumont-Port Arthur, Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

The loan guarantees have become a priority issue for Israel because it faces dire problems in finding housing for the 350,000 Soviet Jews who have arrived in the last few years and the 1 million more who may emigrate to Israel in the future. Israel intended to ask for the American help in March, but because the Persian Gulf war had just ended it agreed to put off the request until September.

The administration, involved in trying to get a peace conference started in October, has asked that Congress not debate the issue until the middle of next January to limit arguments about Jewish settlements in Israeli-occupied territories from which Palestinians hope to create a homeland.

No precise time or place for the peace conference has been set, but Secretary of State James A. Baker III is in Moscow this week to discuss that, among other issues. The Soviets are expected to co-sponsor the Arab-Israeli meeting. Baker will then go to the Middle East next week to try to make further progress on a conference.

A major unresolved issue is that of Palestinian representation. The Israelis have said they will not attend unless the proposed joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation contains no members of the Palestine Liberation Organization or East Jerusalem residents, but the PLO has not yet decided whether to waive representation.

Israel, arguing that the United States has a moral obligation to help with the resettlement of Soviet Jews, has asked for $10 billion in loan guarantees, spread out over five years. With government guarantees, which amount to a form of insurance against default, Israel can borrow money from banks at advantageous rates.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, an American Jewish group, complained that "the president's reference to 'powerful political forces' supporting the loan guarantees was an unfortunate portrayal of the American political process at work."

In a statement, the leadership of the Task Force on Loan Guarantees, an ad hoc group of American Jewish organizations now lobbying on Capitol Hill, said they were "exercising their right as citizens to meet with their congressmen and discuss with them Israel's request for loan guarantees to help the new immigrants become productive, self-supporting citizens of their new homeland."

"We do not seek a confrontation," they added. But the issue appears to be shaping up as the sharpest debate between the United States and Israel since the 1981 fight over President Reagan's successful effort to sell AWACS aircraft to Saudi Arabia.

"A 120-day delay is not too much for a president to ask for with so much in the balance," Bush declared. "We must give peace a chance. We must give peace every chance."

Israel and its supporters in the United States say the issues are not related. The money, they say, is simply humanitarian aid to resettle Soviet Jews, and therefore the request for American loan guarantees should have no influence on the peace process. The Israeli prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, has said that delaying approval of the guarantees might actually play into the hands of the Arabs and prompt them to ask the Bush administration to take other steps counter to Israel's interests.

Shoshana Cardin, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, an American group, said Soviet Jews should not be held hostage to political questions.

"We're talking about men, women, and children who have already suffered trauma," she said. "We must respond to their needs now, not in 120 days from now, not six months from now."

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., who heads the Senate Appropriations Committee subcommittee on foreign operations, and Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., who is his counterpart in the House, have both backed Bush. So has Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican leader.

THOMAS: High court nominee runs into squall enjoys the same rights as a married person under privacy guarantees of the Constitution.

Later, Thomas acknowledged that single persons do enjoy such rights, saying, "The court has so found and I agree with that."

Although Thomas's nomination chances are not considered significantly diminished, the tenor of the hearings on Thursday took a sharp turn.

On opening day Tuesday, Thomas scored points with his poignant account of growing up poor in Georgia. On Wednesday, he went through modest sparring with Democratic senators, saying he has been "consistent" in his controversial writings and speeches and has not changed his views to win confirmation.

On Thursday, Biden tried pinning Thomas down on statements that Thomas made in the two previous days that natural law has no role in cases decided before the Supreme Court.

Natural law is the idea that rights of citizens are God-given and do not derive solely from the text of the Constitution. Opponents of Thomas have said that as a believer in natural law, Thomas might apply it to cases and possibly use it to overturn Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

Saying, "I don't want to know anything about abortion. ... I don't want to know whether you think about it in your sleep," Biden questioned Thomas about a 1988 speech in which the nominee praised a dissent by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. Thomas said then that the dissent "indicates how again we might relate natural rights to democratic self-government."

The Scalia dissent came in a 1988 case called Morrison v. Olsen, in which the high court found that the existence of independent counsels such as Lawrence Walsh, the Iran-Contra prosecutor, do not violate the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers. Scalia, in his dissent, said they do.

Pointing out Thomas's previous statements saying natural law is nothing more than political theory and not a basis for constitutional adjudication, Biden said of Thomas's 1988 speech: "I don't know any other to read the passage than to conclude you believe natural law should help decide constitutional decisions."

Thomas responded that he made the speech while in a policymaking role as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. He was trying to interest other conservatives in natural law.

But Thomas insisted, "I have not in any speech said we should adjudicate cases on (the basis of) natural law."

"What was Scalia doing?" Biden fired back. "We can spend all day Friday discussing this. He was adjudicating. It seems to me like we're engaging in sophistry here."

Thomas responded that if he had delivered the speech as a sitting federal judge and did not draw a distinction between his viewpoint and his responsibility to decide cases impartially, "you'd have a valid point."

GRAMM: Texan tests name recognition in East

in Monkton, Vt., population 1,300, heard right.

Gramm, who makes no secret of his presidential aspirations, is interested in knowing what folks in Vermont and elsewhere think of him.

As head of the national committee hoping to get more Republicans elected to the Senate in 1992, Gramm is in charge of collecting political intelligence in races around the country. While he's at it, the Texan is gathering some information about what voters think of him.

As the National Republican Senatorial Committee conducts political surveys in various states in advance of next year's Senate elections, Gramm's name is sometimes added to questionnaires, said spokeswoman Wendy Burnley.

As in the Vermont case, potential voters are asked their opinion of Gramm on a scale from "strongly in favor" to "not in favor" or "no opinion."

The results are used to tabulate what is known as "favorable ratings," which indicate a candidate's potential political strength in an area.

Burnley said the information on Gramm is unrelated to any aspirations he may have, and is used by the committee to determine whether he should personally recruit GOP candidates in a state or send a surrogate.

Gramm's national stature and notoriety as author of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction law helps recruitment efforts in some states and hurts in others, she said.

"When he goes recruiting," Burnley said. "It becomes very high profile. The political writers in a state get very interested. Some people don't like it. They don't like this Washington person coming in.

"We try to determine which states we want Gramm to go into," she said. "Will it help us or hurt us?"

But some campaign veterans say they doubt that the information is pertinent to the committee's work.

John Sears, former campaign manager for Ronald Reagan, laughed when told of Burnley's explanation for gathering data on Gramm.

Sears, a Republican who has dealt with countless political polls in his career, said, "You don't need to know what the general public thinks of someone to do recruiting.

"The reason you do (a poll) is to find out how things might look for you potentially, if you are someone with aspirations for an office other than the one you have, whether it be president in '96, or, to see how you might fare as a vice presidential candidate in '92,"

Said Stephen Hess, a Brookings Institution political scientist: "It strikes me as poor form to use the committee for this. Phil Gramm can pay for his own polls."

Gramm has acknowledged an interest in the possibility of running for president in 1996, after, presumably, President Bush finishes a second term.

PROJECTS: Airport prepares for CAF's arrival

show set for Oct. 12 and 13.

"We anticipate about 100,000 people coming in per day," Day said. "And aircraft flying in, just to see the show, not including CAF planes, we're planning for 400 to 600 per day."

Midland Airpark will sponsor a fly-in and barbecue event during the air show weekend to encourage small planes to land there, Day said. Shuttle busses will operate continually between the airpark and airport, he said.

Clearing the area around the building will aid another associated project, the construction of a loop road.

A road is planned to originate from the intersection of Wright Drive and Spur 217, extending north to the museum building and turning west to end at FM 1788. State Department of Highways and Public Transportation funds of $734,000 have been allocated for the construction. It is expected to be completed during 1992.

A 250,000-gallon water tank at the airport will be repainted to honor the CAF. Day said the color, chosen recently after much discussion, will be dark gray with the Confederate Air Force logo in white.

Ken Jones, assistant director of utilities, said bids for the job will be taken starting Tuesday. He said he hopes a contractor can be chosen a week later, and the work can begin shortly thereafter.

Officials have said it is doubtful the tower could be complete for the October air show.

About 10 contractors have indicated interest in the project, which will require removal of the lead-based paint that originally was used on the water tower, Jones said.

GRANT: Funds might be available for airport

(From 1A)

$30.8 million terminal project, but other capital improvements are possible uses as well, Day said.

Among projects on the facility's five-year plan are runway extensions and reconstructions as well as a firefighter training facility.

For the terminal project, the city has identified three possible funding sources, including Federal Aviation Administration grants, existing bond revenues and a proposed $3 per person passenger-facility charge.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said Midland's chief competition for grant monies may come from the city of Austin, which plans to apply for the funds to develop Bergstrom Air Force Base.

"I'm optimistic," Day said. "I think we had a good argument, but of course, the competition for this is keen." He said several factors, including the time frame in which the grant money may be issued, would determine its use.

Members of the Permian Basin Airport Board endorsed the effort at their meeting Thursday.

Day said Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm and Rep. Lamar Smith have given their support to the airport grant application.

TEEN: Real estate agents to check vacant properties

(From 1A)

Loop 250 on the south, Midkiff Road on the east and Farm-to-Market Road 1788 on the west, she said.

"We hope to have all those properties checked out in 48 hours," Ms. Scott said early Wednesday evening.

About 375 Realtors were notified through a computer bulletin board system, Ms. Scott said. The majority of real estate agents in Midland belong to the association, she said.

The property check isn't the first thorough look at the area investigators have taken.

At the end of August, a heat-seeking airplane scanned north Midland County on the possibility that Elizabeth's body may be found. The aircraft was brought in from Washington, D.C., by the FBI.

The airplane was outfitted with a FLIR unit, which seeks heat, such as emitted from decomposing bodies.

The aerial search was also called routine by police.

Elizabeth, a Lee High School senior, was reported missing after her parents arrived home about 4 p.m. Aug. 19 to find their daughter gone and the house in disarray. Their daughter had also failed to show up at a school meeting at 2:30 p.m.

About 15 minutes before that meeting was to take place, police responded to the Henrys' empty home after the girl made an emergency 911 call for help. A transcript of that call has not been released by police.

The day after her disappearance, Elizabeth's 1987 Ford Bronco II was found in a parking lot at Midland International Airport. A youth, who saw the vehicle shortly after it was discovered, described the tires as muddied.

Since her disappearance, rumors have been rampant about what happened to Elizabeth, law enforcement officials said.

Midland police, the FBI, and the Texas Rangers are involved in the investigation.

Serbian guerrillas seize key bridge

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (NYT) — The fighting in Croatia took a dramatic turn on Thursday, after army-backed Serbian guerrillas in effect cut off access between Zagreb, the republic's capital, and its Dalmatian coast, once a popular tourist destination.

The seizure of a key bridge by the Serbian guerrillas sealing off the region occurred as Croatian leaders refused to obey a federal government order to resume supplying crude oil to Serbia, and a helicopter bearing a European peacekeeping envoy was forced to land when it was shot at by Croatian forces.

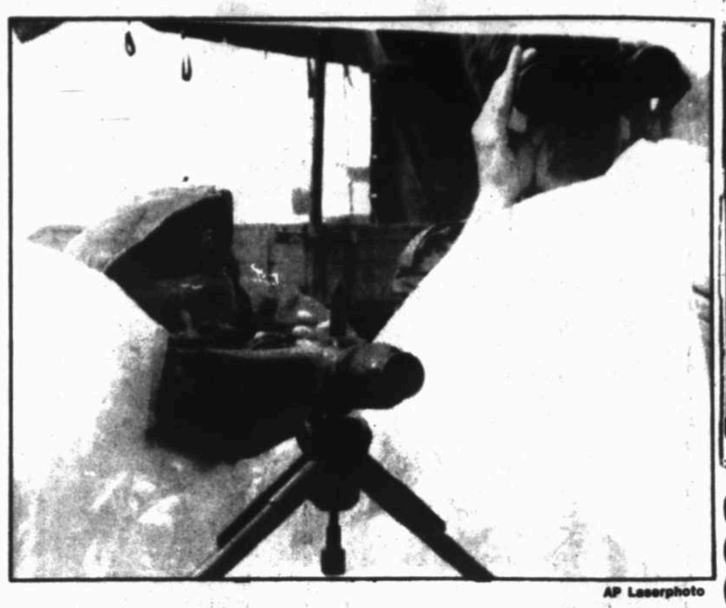

The envoy, Henry Wijnaendts — a Dutch diplomat who has been struggling to establish regional cease-fire arrangements between Croatian forces, Serb guerrillas, and the army units backing them — emerged from a Yugoslav army helicopter unhurt late Wednesday. The aircraft was hit three times, in the fuselage, the rotars, and a fuel tank, forcing it to land.

The incident cast further doubt on the prospects of a European cease-fire effort and a European-brokered Yugoslav peace conference that resumed discussions in the Hague on Thursday.

Wijnaendts was flying to the Croatian town of Okucani, where Croatian militia are deploying infantry and artillery to drive army-backed Serbian insurgents away from the rail lines and the main highway running from Zagreb to eastern Croatia and on to Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital. The rail and road links were cut by Serbian units last week, forcing Croatian convoys to use o narrow back roads through the northern stretches of the republic in their efforts to resupply the ethnically contested region of eastern Croatia.

Osijek, tghe capital of this strategic Slavonija area, was pounded in the last 24 hours by the heaviest bombardment it has taken since Serbian guerrillas began a campaign in June to force Croatia from lands where the republic's Serbian minority formed local majorities, unless Croatia gives up plans to leave the Yugoslav federation.

The Croatian efforts to dislodge Serbs from their control of road and rail at Okucani became even more crucial, after Serbian units with army assistance seized a highway bridge near Zadar on the Adriatic Sea cutting the coastal road that links Zagreb with the region of Dalmatia, a 225-mile strip of land that includes Split and Dubrovnik, cities at the heart of what had been the republic's lucrative tourist industry.

China agrees to Vietnamese meeting

BEIJING (AP) — China on Thursday announced plans to hold a high-level meeting later this year with Vietnamese leaders, part of efforts to repair relations between the estranged communist governments.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Wu Jianmin said agreement on the meeting was reached during Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Manh Cam's four-day visit to Beijing. Cam departed Thursday for Guilin, a tourist spot in southern China.

"The two sides exchanged views and reached agreement on a visit to China later this year by Vietnamese leaders," Wu told a weekly briefing, reading from a joint communique issued on Cam's visit.

The communique did not say who would be in the Vietnamese delegation. But Vietnam has said Communist Party chief Do Muoi plans a trip to Beijing later this year, when formal normalization of ties between the two countries is expected to take place.

While in Beijing, Cam held separate talks with Chinese Premier Li Peng and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen.

"The two sides agreed that a relationship of good-neighborliness and friendship should be restored between China and Vietnam," Wu said.

The Cambodian civil war has been at the center of the split between the Chinese and Vietnamese governments. China has backed the opposition factions trying to oust the Cambodian government, while Vietnam supported the government it installed in Phnom Penh.

Georgian protesters step up attack

BILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A broad range of Georgians stepped up their attacks on President Zviad Gamsakhurdia on Thursday, vowing not to let up until his government crumbles.

Gen. Tengiz Kitovani, commander of the maverick National Guard, said his troops would prevent bloodshed on either side. But he denounced what he called a dictatorial situation.

"The president will have to resign," he said in an interview. "It won't last long. We have information that the majority of the people support the opposition now because they do not trust Gamsakhurdia."

The criticism reflected the instability in the emerging Soviet republics, which have few democratic traditions, and could foreshadow similar problems elsewhere in the fragmenting nation.

Kitovani worried aloud about Gamsakhurdia's penchant for blaming criticism on external enemies.

"We are all agents of the Kremlin," he said sarcastically. Then he added, "The Kremlin doesn't even exist anymore."

Georgian intellectuals joined political parties in demanding that the 53-year-old president at least ensure democracy, real independence and an open economy.

Many insisted on outright resignation.

"I think the president is 100 percent dictator, not a diplomat, not a politician," said poet Jansug Charkviani at a round-the-clock vigil on the steps of Tbilisi University. "It is impossible to live like this."

Filmmaker Keti Dolidze, a friend of Gamsakhurdia's for 30 years, said she was saddened by what she called a sudden psychological change in a man who defended human rights.

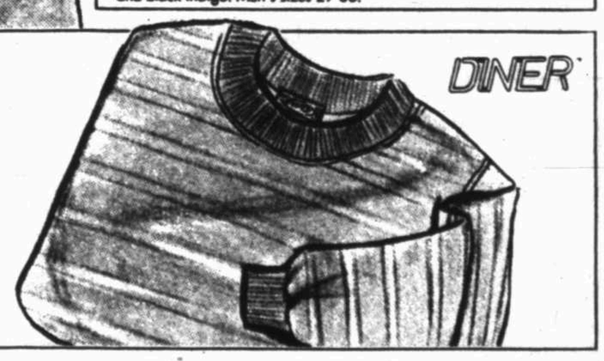

"The main tragedy is that he doesn't believe anyone. Leaders of the opposition would have died for him three years ago. If you lose so many smart loyal people so fast, you must know something is wrong inside."

Bush meets elderly 'Buffalo Soldiers'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 108-year-old man and two other elderly "Buffalo Soldiers," met Thursday with President Bush to focus attention on the accomplishments of black Army troops who earned their nickname during fighting in the Wild West.

"I had the pleasure of telling him we pray for him twice a day," William Harrington, 96, of Salina, Kan., said after the brief meeting with Bush in the White House.

"He just told me I looked like a man who was about 65 or 70."

Also meeting the president were Jones Morgan, 108, of Richmond, Va., and Elisha Kearse, 97, of Kansas City, Kan.

All three men served in the Army's 9th and 10th Cavalry, which were black regiments that Indians named "Buffalo Soldiers."

A monument is being built at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to commemorate the black soldiers and their roles in the settlement of the West and fighting in battles from the Spanish-American War to the Korean War.

The monument, which will include a large bronze statue of a horsemounted soldier, was the idea of Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff. It is to be dedicated in July 1992 and will mark the 126th anniversary of the formation of the 9th and 10th Cavalry.

Some of the troops were originally headquartered at the Kansas post.

"Americans have not fully appreciated or recognized the contribution of the Buffalo Soldiers to date. This monument is a start to correcting that void in history," said Navy Cmdr. Carlton Philpot, who is an instructor at a military college at Fort Leavenworth and serves as chairman of the monument committee.

Harrington said he joined the Army in 1913 and retired in 1943 as a sergeant major.

Morgan's military records have been destroyed, and he said he couldn't recall his years of service except that he joined the Army in the 1800s: "It's been so long. I've forgot some of it."

Senate OKs abortion legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved legislation Thursday revoking a ban on abortion counseling by federally financed clinics, and allowing taxpayer-paid abortions for women who are victims of rape or incest.

The measure, adopted 78-22, faced a veto threat from President Bush over both provisions.

With his promised rejection of the bill, abortion foes did little to thwart passage of the legislation. They have resorted to that tactic frequently in recent months,in a Congress that increasingly favors abortion rights but still lacks the strength required — a two-thirds majority in the House and Senate — to override a presidential veto.

"The president's regulations ... are not morally defensible," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, told reporters about the administration's abortion-counseling ban. "And that is why he has chosen not to defend them. Obviously, the White House strategy is not to have either a debate or a vote squarely on that issue. It is to obscure the issue."

The abortion provisions were part of a bill providing $204 billion for the departments of Health and Human Services, Education and Labor for fiscal 1992. The new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The legislation also contains nearly $5.8 billion for education programs for the handicapped, a nearly $200 million increase over 1991. And it has a $124 million increase in job-training programs to $4.2 billion.

The bill was approved by the House in July. The two chambers must write and approve a compromise measure before it can be sent to Bush for his signature — or his veto.

As the Senate neared completion of the bill, it approved an amendment offered by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., scuttling a sexual behavior survey planned by the government. After voting 66-34 in favor of Helms' proposal in a preliminary vote, the lawmakers gave final approval to his measure by voice vote.

Helms sought to switch the $10.1 million sought next year for a survey of adult sexual practices to another program that counsels youngsters to avoid premarital sex. He argued that the survey was designed to provide statistics "to legitimize homosexual lifestyles."

"It's a clear choice between support for sexual restraint among our young people or, on the other hand, support for homosexuality and sexual decadence," he said.

Opponents said the survey would provide useful information that could be used to prevent the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

"Pretending that controversial behavior does not exist, or lecturing people not to engage in risky behavior, does not work," said Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash.

A second planned survey of teen-age sexual behavior was canceled by Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan in July after conservatives objected to it.

The bill would also nullify the Supreme Court's decision last May upholding a three-year-old ban on federally financed family-planning clinics from giving abortion advice to clients. The House's version of the legislation also overturns the ban.

Bush's position on the counseling prohibition is unclear. He has repeatedly promised a veto over it, but he also has said he might be willing to compromise.

The Senate measure also allows federal funds to pay for abortions for women who have been raped or are victims of incest. The president has flatly promised to veto the legislation unless the provision is removed.

The Senate has approved identical language for the last several years, only to remove it after Bush has initially vetoed the bill. Since 1981, the government has only paid for abortions when the mother's life is in jeopardy.

The bill also:

■ Requires girls less than age 18 to notify their parents before receiving an abortion from a federally financed clinic or organization, unless a doctor or counselor decides such a step could be dangerous.

■ Makes it mandatory that doctors, dentists and other medical workers who may be exposed to body fluids wear masks, gloves, and take other precautions against the spread of AIDS and other diseases.

Brady, Greenspan plan Moscow trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan will make a hastily arranged trip to Moscow next week to meet with top Soviet officials about the country's economic problems.

A brief Treasury statement late Thursday said the two men would arrive in Moscow on Tuesday for discussions with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin and economic officials both from the Soviet central government and various republics.

"Discussions will focus on Soviet economic reform proposals, their external financial situation and acceleration of Soviet participation" in the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, the statement said.

The Soviets are seeking full membership in both the IMF and the World Bank in order to tap into the huge financial resources of both institutions. To do so, they would have to put up a large sum as a capital contribution.

The Bush administration so far has only supported a limited "associate status" for the Soviets that would provide them with technical expertise but no direct loans from either the IMF or World Bank.

However, the administration's position on aiding the Soviets has been undergoing changes in the aftermath of the failed August coup attempt.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, on his own fact-finding mission to Moscow, said Tuesday that the United States was prepared to respond with direct aid for the Soviets if a commitment is made to free-market economic reforms and democracy.

Baker said the United States was no longer insisting that the shift to a market economy be carried out first before such aid could begin to flow, the position that had been adopted in July following Gorbachev's appeal to the United States and its allies at the seven-nation economic summit in London.

Finance officials from the seven countries — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — will meet again in mid-October to discuss the Soviet situation as a prelude to the annual meetings of the IMF and the World Bank, being held this year in Bangkok, Thailand.

A Treasury official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that Brady favored having the Soviets present their latest plans for economic reform at a meeting of finance ministers and central bank presidents of the seven summit nations before the IMF sessions get under way.

Milwaukee officers defend actions

By James A. Carlson
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE — They were decorated officers honored for numerous arrests, even saving nine lives, but then they encountered Jeffrey L. Dahmer and their careers were tarnished.

Despite being fired for leaving a naked boy with Dahmer who was killed in May and enduring intense criticism, John A. Balcerzak, 34, and Joseph P. Gabrish, 28, say they still believe their actions were correct.

"At the time, with the information we had — to this day I think we did the appropriate thing, the best that we could," Balcerzak said in his first interview since the encounter came to light after Dahmer's arrest.

The two former patrolmen spoke Wednesday in an interview with WTMJ-TV in Milwaukee after appealing their dismissals to the civilian police and fire commission that oversees the police department.

Police Chief Philip Arreola fired the two officers Friday and placed a third on probation for leaving a naked, intoxicated Laotian boy with Dahmer on May 27 after investigating a report of a molested child.

Dahmer, 31, who has admitted killing 17 people since 1978, told police he killed 14-year-old Konerak Sinthasomphone as soon as the officers left his apartment.

He also has told police he killed four others between the time of the contact with the officers and his arrest July 22, when police returned to his apartment and discovered 11 mutilated bodies.

Arreola charged the officers botched their investigation because they didn't check the boy's identity, question Dahmer's background, thoroughly listen to witnesses or call their superiors for advice.

Police recordings indicate one officer laughed about needing to be "deloused" after leaving Dahmer's apartment and later dismissed a witness who called back and insisted six times police had left an endangered boy behind.

The officer told the witness that police were certain the incident was nothing more than a "boyfriend-boyfriend thing," the recording said.

Balcerzak and Gabrish said they had been convinced by Dahmer that the boy was actually an adult homosexual lover who simply drank too much and wandered naked onto the street.

"I wish there had been some other piece of evidence or information available to us," Gabrish said. "We handled the call the way we felt it should have been handled."

Balcerzak, who was credited for rescuing eight people from a burning building in 1988 and making 19 merit-worthy arrests during his six-year police career, described Dahmer as "calm and as collected as could be."

Gabrish said Dahmer's helpfulness contributed to their decision not to check his background. At the time, Dahmer was on probation for child molestation.

"We routinely don't check out complainants that come forward to help us out. He was very cooperative," said Gabrish, whose nine-year career included credit for 19 praise-worthy arrests and saving the life of a man who tried to dash into a burning building.

Gabrish said the officers did not talk to the witnesses at the scene who had summoned police because "we focused our attention to our assignment. They were asked very kindly to stand aside."

Asked about the joking on the police radio after they left Dahmer's apartment, Blacerzak said: "It is a type of transmission that is commonplace, that type of jocularity."

Balcerzak said he dismissed the subsequent call from resident Glenda Cleveland, who questioned the officers' decision to leave the boy behind, because he had been at the scene while Ms. Cleveland was relying on others' accounts.

"She wasn't actually there," he said. "I felt that my firsthand knowledge was more informative than what she had heard from someone else."

Both officers said their seven-week suspensions and subsequent firings have taken a toll personally. "Obviously, this is going to be something that stays with us forever," Gabrish said.

Award intends to capture spirit

There's no award quite like the Midland Community Spirit Award. It's, well, special because it denotes a community's willingness to respond to an extraordinary challenge with concerted effort to bring about a desired result. It takes a lot of hard work, a lot of dedication and, yes, a little magic to pull it off, but when it's all said and done, the results are well worth every back-breaking bit of effort.

But, then, extraordinary times demand extraordinary effort. That's how it was in October 1987 in Midland when little Jessica McClure tumbled more than 20 feet down the shaft of a water well and the 58-hour ordeal began.

As rescue workers arrived on the scene and the enormity of the task began to sink in, people from throughout Midland and the surrounding area began to show up at the scene on Tanner Drive to offer their assistance.

When some early rescue plans failed, others were suggested by a variety of helpful individuals. Tools requested by the rescue workers poured into the location. Experts were flown in to help plan the little girl's rescue.

During the final hours as the workers were nearing Jessica, they continued to work around the clock, some in a cool October drizzle in the home's backyard, others in the stifling confines of a rescue tunnel.

Those 58 hours will long be remembered by millions of people around the world. While a little girl was trapped in a well shaft, the world held its breath and uttered a unified prayer of hope, a prayer for mercy.

The prayers were answered when workers reached Jessica and brought her to the surface, to the loving embrace of millions of thankful people around the world.

The spirit in Midland that night was one unequaled by any recent event. It was that spirit of love and caring, of pulling together to reach a common goal, that led to the Midland Community Spirit Award. There may never again be a crisis that evokes the same level of community concern that the Jessica McClure rescue claimed, but it is that spirit of selfless devotion and community togetherness that the award is intended to recognize and honor.

That is a worthwhile goal.

Lesson is needed on state spending

State Comptroller John Sharp is looking into the expenditure of at least $700,000 since 1989 by the Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation for several things many Texans would consider inappropriate.

On Sharp's list of things to look at are management seminars, consultants and stationery.

As far as seminars go, registration fees for workers attending seminars on quality improvement amounted to $186,055 this year. Costs for travel, meals and lodging approach this total, the comptroller's office said.

Earlier this year, MHMR officials complained the agency was $894 million short of funding after receiving a $2.1 billion appropriation to serve the state's mentally disabled residents. MHMR, which runs 21 institutions, employs 30,000 workers, more than any other state agency.

MHMR Commissioner Dennis Jones defends the program, saying leaders need adequate training.

It seems that the lesson to be learned here is creation of a public policy that provides for adequate job training coupled with spending restraint. Business and industry have always subscribed to this principle and it has served them well. Government should find ways to do the same.

Costs of drug abuse temper 'victory' claim

The Bush administration undoubtedly regards it as unfortunate that a scathing report on the staggering cost of drug abuse in this country was made public the same day that the nation's drug czar was all but proclaiming victory in the war on drugs. But to the fighters down in the trenches, it must have been a relief to see the situation put into a more realistic perspective.

As Bob Martinez . . . was telling a luncheon group in Washington that the nation's drug policy is working and that "victory is withing our grasp," a Baylor University study showed that drug abuse may be costing American society as much as $125 billion a year and indicated that national anti-drug efforts are unlikely to ever be successful if they continue to be focused on punishment instead of prevention.

We wish we could be as optimistic about the drug situation as Martinez is, at least publicly, but the cold, hard figures in the Baylor report make that impossible. And we fear they won't change for the better until the government's drug-abuse policies change.

Government slaps down park rangers

WASHINGTON — Park rangers in Yosemite National Park got a slap in the face from James Watt last month when they opened their mail — bills for thousands of dollars in back rent for their housing in the park. Now they can either pay up voluntarily or have the money taken out of their government paychecks.

Anderson

The letters marked the end of a punishing legal battle that started nine years ago when Watt was Ronald Reagan's unpopular Interior secretary. He decided that National Park employees living in government-owned housing in the parks should be paying rent that matched the prices in the surrounding housing market. Up until that point, the rangers had paid below market rents.

The idea may have made sense to Watt, but to the rangers, it amounted to a pay cut. Like the military, the rangers had settled for lower salaries because they knew one of the perks of the job included breaks on housing.

Watt's decision to let the market be the guide hit especially hard in Yosemite, which is smack dab in the middle of some of the most expensive housing in central California.

The Yosemite rangers decided to fight back, and sued the Interior Department claiming the formula for the new rents was flawed. In nine years in and out of court, their argument has never been fully explained to a judge.

Their first suit was thrown out of court in 1985 by a judge who said the rangers had failed to bring their case forward quickly enough. During the time that the case was pending, the judge had restrained the government from imposing the rent increases, so the rangers had a three-year grace period.

Since the merits of their case had never been heard, the rangers sued again and began paying the higher rents. The government had offered a settlement — if the rangers would drop the legal battle: They would not be billed for the difference in their rent that was accumulating while the first case was in court. The rangers figured they had a strong case, so they went for broke and rejected the offer.

But the second suit didn't fare any better in court. The judge threw the case out, saying he didn't want to try a case that had already been through the court system once. Refusing to give up, the rangers took their case to a federal appeals court. They lost there too.

The federal government didn't accept victory gracefully. The Interior Department decided to collect the rent increase that was not paid during the three-year court battle when the judge had held the government landlords at bay.

So it was that after nine years and two failed lawsuits, about 300 rangers opened their mail last month to find a bill from Uncle Sam for rent he considers to be six years overdue. The rangers told our reporter Jan Moller that the bills went from $1,500 to $5,200, and the rangers were given 30 days to pay up or have the money taken out of their paychecks in monthly installments with interest. Many of them canceled vacations and borrowed money.

The fuss created at Yosemite may have prompted other parks around the country to modify their own rental formulas for rangers. As a final irony, a recent rent study comparing rents at Yosemite with those in the surrounding area found that the Interior Department was charging too much as the landlord.

Texans show stupidity with school plan

I'm from Texas, but please keep it quiet. My state is doing terrible things to public education. I'm embarrassed.

What we're doing specifically is conducting a stickup.

I know, I know, such stuff was supposed to have gone out with Sam Bass, but that was the illegal kind of stickup. This is the legal kind. The state of Texas has decided to reform education by robbing property-rich school districts and handing over the proceeds to property-poor ones.

Murchison

Can you hear it? I can: "Hey, driver, this is the governor talking. Rein up. Throw down that strong box. Don't try any funny stuff. I've got an itchy trigger finger."

Turmoil accompanies the effort — just as you'd expect.

School boards across the state have levied whopping tax increases. Local districts lacked time even to get ready for the new order, but I guess that's standard operating procedure with highway robberies.

I'm embarrassed to try to explain what my state government is up to. You won't hold it against me, my being from Texas?

We call the thing we're dealing with the Robin Hood school finance bill. Errol Flynn must be spinning in his grave. The whole thing is nuts.

The Texas Supreme Court struck down the system of financing public schools partly through local property taxes. Gee, it appeared that districts with property could raise more money than those with fewer resources. Formerly the state had attempted to close the gap with general revenues, but according to the high courts, this wasn't legal anymore.

So Gov. Ann Richards and the legislative leadership oiled their pistols, saddled their horses and went galloping in pursuit of those "rich" districts.

What's a rich district by the way? It's one with larger-than-usual property tax revenues. Do I mean one full of Jaguar owners? I mean nothing of the kind. I mean one with valuable commercial or industrial property, like a lignite deposit or a nuclear plant. Rich doesn't at all mean "full of rich people." It can equally mean "full of poor people."

Dallas, for instance, has a public school system that is more than 80 percent black and Hispanic. Guess what: Dallas got pistol-whipped by the legislature: $47 million was cut from its state aid. A hefty tax increase followed, coupled with teacher layoffs that so agitated the community they were withdrawn.

The Highland Park district, rated as one of the country's best, had to double its tax rate. Oddly enough, many "poor" districts had to raise their own taxes. Teacher salaries must be increased, new buildings built, new programs started.

And that's it? The last word about Robin Hood? Actually, no. The victims are to have their day in the state Supreme Court against the bandits, who are unable to cite any legal precedent for the compulsory transfer of property tax revenues from one local district to another. If the Supreme Court backs the bandits anyway, aggrieved taxpayers may pursue remedies in federal court under the 14th Amendment. Meanwhile, the strong box lies open; the bandits ogle its contents.

"Rich" districts, "poor" districts — what a bubble-headed way to talk about education. What a very political way.

It shows as much as anything else that the politicians need to deal themselves out of the educational game, which they play with signal incompetence.

CHARLEY REESE

Peoples' attitude, not Thomas, is real threat

I do not know if Clarence Thomas would make a good Supreme Court judge. I doubt anyone but Thomas and people close to him know that. Moreover, one man's "good" Supreme Court justice is another man's nightmare.

I define a good judge as one who gets as close to a literal interpretation of the Constitution, taken in the context in which it was written, as humanly possible.

Reese

Would Clarence Thomas take that approach? I don't know. I doubt it. He might stand closer in that direction than some others, but it's impossible to say from reading what I've read about him.

It's virtually impossible to predict human behavior, especially once a guy has a lifetime appointment and is virtually immune from any accountability.

Had he known how Earl Warren was going to turn out, Dwight Eisenhower probably would have had his heart attack much earlier. Eisenhower appointed Warren. Warren was a staunch Republican former governor and former attorney general of California who had gleefully helped lock up Japanese Americans during World War II. Once on the court he became what the right loves to call a flaming liberal.

I do not think it is possible to predict Thomas' future behavior. It is only reasonable to determine if he is intelligent, free of any corruption, and reasonably committed to upholding the Constitution. Beyond that, Thomas, like all political appointees, is a pig in a poke. If you're hung up on sure things, bet horses, not humans.

What we all can and should agree upon is that Clarence Thomas deserves a fair hearing. He deserves a decision by the Senate based on his own merits, not on partisan politics or on ideological campaigns conducted for or against him by outside groups.

The powerful campaign against Robert Bork was a terrible break with the past. It politicized and turned into a circus what had been, if not apolitical, at least political in a gentlemanly sense of the word. Bork's reputation was raped, his words distorted by groups outside the Senate.

Who gives a rat's toenail whether the AFL-CIO or the National Organization of Women or any other special interest group does or does not support Thomas? A Supreme Court confirmation process is not a political race. The Senate's duty is to inquire into Thomas' background and then either agree or disagree with the president's decision. Historically, in the absence of some obvious fault or vice, the Senate has generally deferred to the president.

In the Bork fiasco, Sen. Edward Kennedy actually met with outside groups to map strategy for a public campaign to sink the nomination. That is as dishonorable in my view as many of the other things this lesser Kennedy has done.

The campaign against Bork was successful as it frightened enough senators into voting against a man who intellectually was probably the most qualified nominee in several decades. Frightening the Senate, however, is akin to the United States whipping Panama. It's not such an accomplishment that anybody would wish to brag about it.

President Bush was sly in his choice. If Clarence Thomas were the identical person he is — only white — he would be getting the savage treatment Bork got, but it is not politically correct to savage a black nominee even if he is, horror of horrors, a conservative. If they reject him, they will do it in a more pious manner.

I have no strong feelings one way or another, as Thomas or someone else will not make that much difference in the great scheme of things. I am much more worried about the thinking of the American people as a whole than I am about the Supreme Court.

I'm no longer sure the American people wish to remain free or exert the energy necessary to make a free republic function. If the people have given up on their liberty, then it doesn't matter who's in Washington or where in Washington they sit.

Man says he killed girl because he was bored

By Karren Mills
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — As a high school senior, he dressed as the Grim Reaper for a yearbook photo and wrote that he enjoyed "cruisin' fer babes and slorkin' food." Teachers remember him as an honor student with many friends.

But two years later, John Samuel Jolley was bored — and he told police that was reason enough to molest and kill an 8-year-old girl after abducting her from the Minneapolis discount store where he worked.

"He admitted that the thought of killing someone intrigued him intellectually," police Detective Richard Morrill wrote in a criminal complaint last week charging the 20-year-old Jolley with murder.

"The basic reason was boredom — the whole thing was based around anonymity. Basically it was a web waiting for a fly," Jolley told police.

Jolley was being held on a charge of first-degree murder. Bail was set at $1 million.

Jolley's attorney, Tim Ostroot, said no decision had been made about a defense. "Obviously, we're going to have to take a look at a mental illness defense," Ostroot said.

He said he expected the case to be presented to a grand jury, possibly next week.

According to police, Jolley devised his plot in the basement of the Discount 70 store where he worked as a furniture assembler.

For more than a month, he told police, he had been looking for someone to kill — preferably a young girl because she would be easier to conceal. Planning to lure a victim to the basement of the store, he stashed a rubber mallet there to knock her unconscious, authorities said.

■ More nation news/2D

His chance came Aug. 31, when 8-year-old Margaret Marques went to use the store's restroom.

The girl, a week away from starting second grade, had come to the store with her family. She asked a clerk for directions to a restroom, and was told to go to a fast-food outlet across the street. Instead, she found her way to the basement where Jolley waited, authorities said.

Jolley told officers he grabbed the girl as she left the basement bathroom, choked her until she lost consciousness, put her in a box and carried her to his car, authorities said.

Elizabeth Marques searched the basement for her daughter — apparently moments after Jolley carried Margaret away — and found nothing.

Jolley said he held his captive for 36 hours at his home and later at his brother's apartment before drowning her in a bathtub, according to police.

Investigators were tipped to Jolley by a store supervisor. Jolley's alibi collapsed under interrogation and authorities said he confessed and led police to the roadside where he dumped her body, wrapped in a trash bag.

"I did it, she's dead, I killed her," he told police. "I drowned her."

In the Marques family home, Margaret's clothes hung untouched in a closet, her school supplies on a bed. On a table rested some of the notes and cards she made for her mother, filled with an 8-year-old's misspellings, according to the Star Tribune of Minneapolis.

"Mom: you are a beach gril and you dress cool," one read. "I love you because you make me feel (good) everyday. Agin and agin and agin. The end."

"She was feisty and cheerful and smiled a lot," said Evy Sussman, a teacher at Margaret's school. "She was a little survivor. We thought she had survival skills. ... Even when things weren't wonderful, she'd have a smile."

The Jolley portrayed in his 1989 high school yearbook seemed like a smart kid who liked to have fun and didn't take himself too seriously.

Jolley enrolled as a Russian studies major at the University of Minnesota last fall, after graduating from an inner-city high school where he was a member of the National Honor Society and took advanced courses in Russian.

"All I can say is that he was a very good student," said Don Ryberg, who was Jolley's Russian language teacher. "He seemed to have quite a number of friends."

Jolley dropped out of the university to earn money for tuition, his mother said. He had worked at the Discount 70 store for 2½ months, first as a clerk and then as a furniture assembler.

Jolley's mother said the man who confessed to killing Margaret Marques is not the son she knew.

"Everybody is devastated. I am in complete sympathy with (the Marques) family. My heart goes out to every one of them and that poor child," Jane Spann said. "I just want people to understand that I lost somebody, too — a wonderful son."

Noriega trial jury selection begins

MIAMI (AP) — The wife of the man who runs shadowy, CIA-linked Southern Air Transport showed up in Manuel Noriega's jury pool Thursday, along with a former undercover drug informant and the ex-wife of a Mad magazine cartoonist.

Also among potential jurors questioned Thursday at Noriega's drug and racketeering trial were two nuclear plant guards and the father of two soldiers who took part in the invasion of Panama that resulted in Noriega's capture.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler has said he hopes to seat a jury of 12 and six alternates by today, but interviews of prospective jurors went slowly Thursday.

Mary Jean Bastian — whose husband, James, is Southern Air's chairman — complained during questioning about an unsuccessful libel suit by the company against a Miami television station that linked Southern Air with drug trafficking.

The airline, which belonged to the CIA until the early 1970s and has continued to fly secret missions for the U.S. government, also took part in the Nicaraguan Contra resupply operation run by Oliver North.

But despite those connections with U.S.-Latin American politics, she said serving on the jury would not be a problem.

"I feel like I'd be perfectly fair," Mrs. Bastian told the court.

Also questioned was Marta Leon, who said her ex-husband was once a newspaper cartoonist and draws the long-running Mad magazine comic strip "Spy vs. Spy."

She said she would have no trouble judging Noriega fairly.

Prospective juror Victor Sanchez was called to a bench conference after he told federal prosecutor Guy Lewis both his sons took part in the December 1989 U.S. invasion of Panama that resulted in Noriega's capture. But he was not bumped from the pool.

Jane Buhager, who runs a club, told a hushed courtroom that while in college in Dayton, Ohio, a decade ago, she went undercover at a local high school and made drug buys. She said she later testified against some of the defendants in the Dayton case, but insisted she could be an objective juror in the Noriega case.

Lewis also questioned two men who are night guards at the Turkey Point nuclear power plant south of Miami.

The two, Howard Rosen and William Holloway, said they knew each other slightly.

The defense has said that 60 percent of the questionnaires filled out by prospective jurors show highly negative attitudes toward Noriega, but the judge has sharply limited their questioning during the selection process.

Study outlines students' tobacco use

ATLANTA (AP) — The first comprehensive study of smoking among U.S. high school students found that more than a third had smoked or chewed tobacco in the previous month and nearly one in five seniors were frequent smokers.

Almost no black students were frequent smokers, the U.S. Centers for Disaes Control reported Thursday, citing data from a nationwide survey conducted last year.

Overall, 36 percent of students surveyed said they had used tobacco at least once in the previous month, the CDC said. Thirteen percent of students from ninth to 12th grades were decribed as frequent smokers.

Forty-one percent of 12th graders said they had smoked cigarettes or chewed tobacco in the previous month. Eighteen percent of 12th graders were described as frequent smokers, having smoked on more than 25 of the previous 30 days.

"If they're using cigarettes 26 days a month, they're well on the road to regular smoking," said Dr. Gary Giovino, a specialist with the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

The study found a wide racial disparity among high school smokers.

Forty-one percent of 12th graders said they had smoked cigarettes or chewed tobacco in the previous month. Eighteen percent of 12th graders were described as frequent smokers, having smoked on more than 25 of the previous 30 days.

Thirty-six percent of white students smoked, compared with 16 percent of black students, the CDC said. And while 16 percent of white students were described as frequent smokers, just 2 percent of black students were frequent smokers.

The racial disparity may have been caused by a higher awarenes of health and fitness among young blacks or a greater influence of church teachings, Giovino said.

"Or there may be economics going on," he said, pointing out that the average price of a pack of cigarettes has shot up from 60 cents in 1980 to more than $1.50 today.

"We find that as cigarettes become more expensive, the effect is more significant on adolescents than on adults," he said.

The survey, which questioned more than 11,000 students in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, had a margin for error of about 4 percentage points.

Among other findings:

■ Boys use some form of tobacco more often than girls — 40 percent to 32 percent. But the disparity is because boys chew tobacco and girls almost never do. Nineteen percent of boys use smokeless tobacco, compared with 1 percent of girls.

■ Cigarette use is, statistically speaking, the same for both sexes. Thirty-three percent of boys and 31 percent of girls smoke. An identical 13 percent of both sexes were frequent smokers.

■ Early experimentation with tobacco is common, while frequent smoking tends to develop later. Thirty percent of ninth-graders had smoked in the previous month, while 10 percent smoked frequently.

The government's health goals include having no more than 15 percent of the nation's 20-year-olds smoking by the year 2000.

Gorman, Swaggart await jurors' decision

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Marvin Gorman read "The Christian in Complete Armour, Vol. 1," and his rival evangelist, Jimmy Swaggart, read the newspaper Thursday as they waited for jurors to decide Gorman's $90 million lawsuit against Swaggart.

"I foolishly thought they wouldn't go long today, so I didn't bring anything," Swaggart said. "I should have."

Gorman underlined passages in the paperback, which the cover copy described as a Puritan classic. "It's about practical Christian living," he said. "I can't say it applies to today. It's for every day."

It was the third day of jury deliberations after a nine-week trial. At least nine of the 12 jurors must agree on every point covered in a seven-page verdict sheet.

They are considering Gorman's claim that Swaggart and his codefendants — his wife Frances Swaggart, the Rev. Tom Miller, and attorney William Treeby — brought down Gorman's budding television ministry in 1987 with false statements about his sex life.

Gorman claims that the allegations are almost all lies, and that even if they were true, the defendants had no right to spread the word.

Swaggart and other defendants say they told the truth. They produced two women as witnesses who said they had sex with Gorman — one a fellow minister's wife who had gone to him for counseling, the other a woman who said he pressured her into intercourse after accusing her of being a lesbian.

Three other women who testified said the minister fondled and kissed them.

Gorman acknowledged a single act of intercourse with one woman and heavy petting once with another before he resigned from First Assembly of God church in New Orleans.

Museum chronicles small town's role in Civil War

MADISON, Ga. (AP) — About six times a year, Holy Communion is served at the Presbyterian church with a silver pitcher stolen by embarrassed Union troops who were ordered to give it back.

The local museum displays a pink and white quilt that depicts a Civil War soldier's exploits. Another exhibit has a scrap of paper containing the hurried scribble of a man who sold a slave to settle a debt in 1822.

Such hands-on history is common in Madison, a tranquil town that's gained popularity with Americans' renewed interest in the Civil War.

Madison is known as the one place that Gen. William T. Sherman's troops didn't burn on their famous march to the sea. Legend has it that Madison was spared because of a grieving congressman's plea. Madison's 3,200 residents delight in the story.

"That's sort of our claim to fame," said Frankie Cartwright of the Madison-Morgan County Cultural Center.

Tours of mansions that survived the war are the biggest fund-raisers in town. Buses routinely make the 60-mile trek from Atlanta. October features a tour of haunted homes, including one where the ghost moves things around.

The cultural center, in a two-story building built in 1895 as a school, brings it all together.

The museum chronicles the history of the Georgia Piedmont, the flat plate of land where the transportation network that spawned Atlanta started in the early 1800s. Madison was the site where farmers drew lotteries for Piedmont land. A relic of that practice is on display — the wooden chip one such farmer drew in 1806.

Also enshrined in the museum are tidbits of local trivia, such as the fact from the 1820 census that slaves outnumbered whites in Burke County, 5,620 to 5,673.

Then there's the story of Eliza Fannin Walker, who literally fought a war of roses with her husband, John, a wealthy farmer and plantation owner.

Cartwright said Mrs. Walker loved flowers and whenever her husband was away on business she would plant roses everywhere. When Walker returned, he would dig up the flowers and plant crops, "because he wanted to cultivate all that he could." Then during his next trip Mrs. Walker would plant roses again and again her husband would return and dig them up.

The area's history was glued together by a trail of papers left by previous generations: bills of sale, labels, funeral invitations and Confederate money.

On one document is a transaction by Rueben Mann.

"This day rec'd three hundred and ninety-one dollars of Stephen Durden in full for a certain negro girl named Riney, which negro was this day sold ... 4 June 1822."

"Many people are impressed with what they find here," Cartwright said. "The documentation these people left is rather unique."

There's an 1835 bottle of Very Old Cognac, "bottled expressly for medicinal purposes" in Madison by C.B. Atkinson and Bro. There are receipts showing the many cotton sales of Isaac Thrasher, including four bales he sold to Joseph Vason in October 1871.

Also prominently displayed is a map of Sherman's route from Atlanta to the Atlantic Ocean. The path circumvents Madison.

It's said that Madison was spared because Rep. Joshua Hill met with Sherman while he was in Atlanta to pick up the body of his son, who was killed in battle.

"The story goes that he also asked that they spare Madison," Cartwright said. "They did burn some of the businesses, and of course they burned the crops, because they were trying to cripple the South. But they did not burn our houses."

There was some looting, she said. Troops set up camp in churches. In the Baptist church, a hole leads from the main floor to the basement, where Union troops kept their horses. The hole was cut to make getaways easier.

Two soldiers pilfered a Communion set, complete with goblets and serving tray, from the Madison Presbyterian Church. The act angered their commanding officer, Cartwright said.

"He got wind of what they did and made them return it," she said. "So they gave it back. We get all kinds of stories about how they shot at it."

Electricity changing rural Brazil

By John Wright

SANTANA, Brazil (AP) — The peaceful music of crickets and cicadas, the occasional bark of a dog, have been replaced by the shouting, moaning histrionics of nightly television soap operas.

Electricity, and with it the mesmerizing tube, has come to some of the villages around Virgem da Lapa, a remote town of about 10,000 people in central Brazil.

Millions of Brazilians still live without electricity, running water or telephones. The cost of hooking up to an electric line and buying a meter — about $125 — is more than two months' income in many rural households.

Since last year, there have been streetlights in villages like Santana, 15 miles from Virgem da Lapa.

Before that, Santana's 100 residents would pass their evenings chatting with friends around candles or kerosene lanterns, sharing homemade biscuits, sometimes sipping a fiery sugar-cane liquor called cachaca.

The tapestry of the night's gentle noises would be punctuated occasionally, but not disturbed, by the crackling of a battery-powered radio.

Not now.

People cluster silently, almost reverently, in front of TV sets to watch nightly serials called novelas, which networks beam from the Amazon to the Argentine border.

In the box, lovers argue and flail their arms, lovers coo, lovers find new lovers.

Anyone who doesn't have electricity or television visits a neighbor who does.

Old customs, like gathering around the table for dinner while the last glimmer of daylight slips through the window, are losing ground.

For Brazil's 45 million rural poor, nearly one-third of the population, life is a struggle that seems only to get harder.

Those around Virgem da Lapa are hurt indirectly when the economy is in recession, as it is now, and directly when gold panners dump toxic mercury into their water supply.

The arrival of electricity is changing life all over Brazil.

According to the census, 68 percent of Brazilian homes had electricity in 1980 and 87 percent last year. In rural areas, about 19 million people do without.

There still is no telephone service to villages near Virgem da Lapa. Rural people often must travel for hours through the dry hills to reach a phone.

Most of the land in the semi-arid region is devoted to grazing livestock. Bananas, mangos, coffee, oranges and peanuts are cultivated on small, hand-irrigated plots, and sugar cane grows along river banks.

Using electric pumps to irrigate the dry soil would make the land much more productive.

"I'd put in a pump and plant lettuce, tomatoes and coffee," said Deraldo Diamorin Bizerra, but the power line is half a mile away.

Movement to the crowded cities continues and probably will not be reversed.

Seventy percent of Brazilians lived in the country in 1950. Now 70 percent are in the cities, often in slums. Even in the slums, however, they earn more money than on the farm.

"Every day, the bus leaves full of people going to Sao Paulo to work in the factories," said Diogenes Timos Silva, who completed six years as mayor of Virgem da Lapa last year. South America's largest metropolis is 775 miles to the south, a 22-hour bus ride.

In this poor region, electricity is a health weapon as well as a convenience.

"Light scares off the insects" that carry the parasites of Chagas' disease, the deadliest affliction of rural Brazil, Silva said.

Sheriff vows to keep within staff allotment

■ Painter is concerned about not being consulted about manpower allocations.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Though Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter is hardly appreciative of the Commissioners' Court's rearranging his department's manpower without first consulting him, the sheriff pledged to work with what he's got and is given.

"We've got a job to do, and we are going to perform that job," Painter said Thursday. "Even though the budget and manpower have been cut, we are going to work."

Painter, sheriff since 1985, has yet to review the Sheriff's Department portion of the county's 1992 budget.

The sheriff's portion of the county's $18.7-million 1991 budget is about $4.8 million.

The budget will be filed in the County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry's Office Monday for public scrutiny.

"I don't appreciate the way the manpower was rearranged without consultation ... or regard to the workload," Painter said.

One of his primary concerns is the ramifications of the Commissioners' Court's cutting the sheriff's law-enforcement force by eight people, to 46 from 54, and then bolstering the jail force by six positions, to 103 from 97, in order to come into compliance with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The sheriff's current law-enforcement force is made up of the Operations Division, which includes criminal investigation, patrol, narcotics, Crime Stoppers, DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program, technical assistance, and youth services, and the Special Services Division, which now takes in records, crime prevention, and civil warrants.

Under the Court's reorganization, the Special Services Division is being wedded to the Operations Division.

Clayton McKinney, an ex-Texas Ranger who is Operations Division captain, will oversee both areas.

"The sheriff has told us that we will enforce the law if we have to ride stick-horses," said McKinney, "and buy the feed for them ourselves."

Tim Rogers, the current Special Services captain who is "too good of a man to let go," said Painter, will be "busted" to lieutenant and, in turn, a lieutenant will be made to sergeant to create space for Rogers. Richard Sexton will remain captain of the Detention Division.

Other than the sheriff, the reorganization, effective at beginning of the 1992 fiscal year on Oct. 1, includes one chief deputy (Jim Chancellor), two captains, five lieutenants, 20 sergeants, nine corporals, 74 deputies, six secretaries, 16 booking and bonding clerks, five records clerks, six cooks, six nurses and paramedics and the jail maintenance person.

Painter is concerned about the smaller Operations Division and, particularly, about a decrease in criminal investigators while the 18-officer patrol unit remains at its

Football book author returns to basin

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger autographed copies of his book, "Friday Night Lights," as the Thursday evening shadows deepened.

It was Bissinger's first visit to the Permian Basin since his controversial account of life and high school football in Odessa drew national attention to West Texas just about a year ago, and scores of people turned out at Hastings Records and Books in Midland where the author conducted a book signing and interviews.

"I have always wanted to come back because I have fond feelings for the town and those feelings won't fade," said Bissinger, whose publicist arranged the book signing at Hastings. Bissinger said no book stores in Odessa showed an interest in hosting a book signing.

Bissinger did stop by Odessa Permian High School before the signing to take a look at football practice. He said the reception was "a little chilly."

But Bissinger, an investigative reporter for the Chicago Tribune and a winner of the Pulitzer Prize, can live with "chilly." Had he followed through with plans to return to the basin last September, the reception might have been an icy blast.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Author H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger is promoting the paperback publication of his best-selling book about Permian High School football, "Friday Night Lights."

"Friday Night Lights" hit local book stores in late August last year, just weeks before the start of the high school football season. In the book Bissinger gives his account of the 1988 Permian football season, including stories of community-wide racism, wide-spread drinking by the players and the discarding of players once their usefulness to Mojo had been exhausted.

During the clamor that accompanied the book's debut, defending state champion Permian was barred from the playoffs for conducting illegal preseason workouts. While it was then-Odessa High head football coach Jerry Taylor who turned in his cross-town rival, many pointed to "Friday Night Lights" as a catalyst.

Midland and Odessa were crossed off Bissinger's list of cities for the book's original publicity tour after threats were aimed at local bookstores.

"Tensions in the town were enormously high, and then there were threats made," said Bissinger, whose current tour is in conjunction with publication of the paperback version of the book.

"They (threats) were not made to me directly. They were made to the bookstores where I was to have book signings. I thought, under the circumstances, it would not be wise to come."

Attendance doubles for Septemberfest

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

For Las Manos and Septemberfest, 1991 was a very good year.

"Including volunteers, 18,000 people walked through the gates," said Galen Haynes, Las Manos member and Septemberfest chairman for 1991. "Last year, there were 9,000, including volunteers.

"We doubled, and we keep trying to figure out what it is. The only answer I could come up with is publicity," Mrs. Haynes said.

Mrs. Haynes said she feels the turnout "really says a lot for the museum and for Midland."

Another contributing factor for an outdoor event is the weather. In 1990, Mother Nature was not as cooperative as she was this year.

"It rained at the very end of the evening on both days," last year, Mrs. Haynes said.

A major fund raiser for the Museum of the Southwest, Septemberfest is presented by the museum's auxiliary, Las Manos.

"The money goes to whatever the museum decides," Mrs. Haynes said. "Last year, a good portion of it went to new computers inside the museum. This year, I don't think the board of trustees has really decided yet."

Despite the fact twice as many people came to Septemberfest, Las Manos will not be giving twice as much money to the museum. Last year, Septemberfest netted $74,000. This year the event is expected to net close to $100,000.

Some of the difference can be found at the gate. In 1990, gate admissions totaled $34,000. In 1991, they totaled $38,000.

"I think we had a lot more children," Mrs. Haynes said. "Children get in for $1."

Las Manos is not the only nonprofit making money at the annual event. Those organizations operating food booths keep a good percentage of what they make. In 1990, food sales totaled $18,000. The concessionaires kept 80 percent. This year, food sales totaled $25,000.

"We only get 25 percent of the gross sales of food this year because 75 percent goes to those nonprofit organizations," Mrs. Haynes said. "Often, that's their only mon-

Permian Basin fair draws 4,000 on first day

Staff Report

Opening day found 3,953 people attending the 16th annual Permian Basin Fair & Exposition.

"That's not a record, but it's the second highest. I believe in 1987 we had about 1,000 more," said Beverly Wakefield, a 12-year member of the PBFE non-profit board of directors.

The fair is held inside and on the grounds of Odessa's Ector County Coliseum. The event, which opened Wednesday, includes a carnival featuring eight rides which are new to this area, live performances, business and civic displays, creative arts and livestock exhibits.

Today's activities include a rock 'n' roll music extravaganza, Ms. Wakefield said. Bands performing are Max Norm, Mister Bones and Street Child.

Hours are 10 a.m. to midnight today and Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $4 for adults, $2 for those 55 and older, $1 for children 3-12 and free to those under 3.

Also on the schedule for today is a single elimination, two-man team sand volleyball tournament with a $500 first prize.

Coming up Saturday will be motocross races, the Boy Scout Jamboree and more bands performing including Lariet and Mariah.

"We're having all the same things we have every day — the lumberjack show, the Wild West Show and the racing pigs," said Ms. Wakefield. "We have a fellow who does chain saw sculpture. We have clowns. We have a lot of livestock and lots of things in creative arts to see — all the things that a country fair would have."

Investigators remove flight recorders from wreckage

EAGLE LAKE (AP) — Federal investigators on Thursday removed the "black box" recorders from the wreckage of a twin-engine Continental Express plane that crashed in a corn field, killing all 14 aboard.

Continental Express released the names of 11 passengers and three crew members aboard Flight 2574, but the Harris County Medical Examiners officials continued work to identify positively the remains Thursday.

The dead included seven Mexican nationals, a crew of three from the Houston area, and people from Laredo, Texas; Sterling Heights, Mich.; Quito, Ecuador; and Phoenix, Ariz.

The Mexicans included three young couples from Monterrey heading to Canada together for a vacation, said a spokeswoman in the Mexican Consulate in Houston. The other Mexican was a prominent social activist from Ciudad Juarez.

The Brazilian-built Embraer 120 commuter plane was en route from Laredo to Houston's Intercontinental Airport, crashed about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, about 75 miles west of Houston, spewing wreckage over a four-mile stretch of southeast Texas farmland.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board and six other agencies found the voice recorder and the flight data recorder in the tail section of the shattered aircraft just before noon Thursday.

Though somewhat dented from the crash, the shoe-box-sized orange boxes "appear to be in fairly good condition," said NTSB Chairman James L. Kolstad. "We really can't tell the conditions of the recording until we get inside."

The voice recorder provides a taped record of cockpit conversations, while the flight data recorder records the aircraft's speed, altitude and other conditions. The two boxes were shipped to the NTSB laboratory in Washington for analysis, said NTSB spokesman Brent Bahler.

"We may have some preliminary information from black boxes Friday night," Bahler said.

A new federal regulation that goes into effect Oct. 11 requires that both boxes be in the tail of the aircraft, Bahler said.

"This aircraft was ahead of schedule," Kolstad said.

NTSB crews led investigators at the site from the FBI, Federal Aviation Administration, Continental Airlines and its wholly owned subsidiary, Continental Express; Empresa Brasileira de Aeronautica SA, the plane manufacturer; Pratt & Whitney Canada, the engine manufacturer; and the National Air Traffic Controller Association, Bahler said.

The agencies on Thursday split into nine investigative teams. He said one of the teams would be investigating the crew's activities 72 hours before the accident: "Where they went, what they ate, when they slept."

The investigation was expected to last about a week.

"This afternoon we are going to have the all terrain vehicles out here, combing the fields, looking for additional wreckage," he said Thursday. "We'll be documenting distances, what the wreckage is. This is a routine activity. They'll be assisted by a helicopter which will help locate wreckage around the field."

FAA inspections indicated the Embraer 120, one of 34 used by Continental Express, had 33 reports of problems since the carrier

DEATHS

Floyd Pace

Services for Floyd C. Pace, 78, are set for 4 p.m. Saturday at First Baptist Church with the Rev. James Denison officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pace

Pace died Wednesday at his Midland residence.

He was born Dec. 9, 1912, in Fort Stockton. He moved with his family to Midland in 1928 and was a 1931 graduate of Midland High School.

He married Mary Nelle Hobbs on Dec. 23, 1934.

With his father, he owned Pace Trucking and after working with several lumber yards and construction companies, he founded Pace Construction in 1945. Beginning as a residential builder, the company had expanded into commercial and civic construction by Pace's retirement in 1979.

He was a member of First Baptist Church, where he served as a deacon, Sunday School teacher, and was a member of the Missions Committee, Men's Prayer Ministry, River Ministry and Baptist Men's group.

He was a member of the Southside Lions Club and the Association of General Contractors and served on the boards of Rudy Hernandez Evangelism International, Los Hermanos de la Fronteria and the Tape Lending Library and Visual Aids Newsmobile.

He was preceded in death by one sister, Lois Kelley and by a grandson, Andy Floyd Pace in September 1979.

Survivors include: his wife, Mary Nelle Hobbs Pace of Midland; one son, Gene Pace of Midland; two daughters, Atrelle Pace of Midland and Mary Pace Ausley of Keller; one brother, Earl Pace of Indiana; one sister, Willene Smyres of Midland; five grandchildren, two nieces and five nephews.

In lieu of flowers, memorials should be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702, or the River Ministry of First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana, Midland, 79701.

Pallbearers will be grandsons, John Pace, Paul Hill, James Ausley amd Craign Ausley and nephews, DeWayne Kelley and Gary Smyres. Honorary pallbearers will be granddaughter Raelena Pace Bradley and Ray Greene, Copper Daugherty, Reagan White, R.H. "Rusty" Gifford, Loyd Wimberley, L.C. Hobbs, Chilton Hobbs, E.V. Smyres, George Ausley, G.J. Hill, Earl Robinson, Carl Ward and Charles Stough.

William Beard

Services for William Beard of, 78, Midland are set for 2 p.m. Friday at St. Marks Methodist Church with the Rev. H.E. Stephens Jr., pastor, officiating.

Beard was born Aug. 9, 1913, in Sulphur Springs, where he graduated from high school in 1932. He attended Centennary College in Shreveport, La., before moving to West Texas in 1937.

He served with the aviation engineers in the European theater from 1942 to 1945.

After returning to the United States, he married Louise Campbell in Seminole on Nov. 22, 1945. They moved to Midland in May 1957, where he was a engineer with William Cameron & Co.

He retired from sales with the Baroid Division of NL Industries in 1982 and later returned to sales for Tri-Service Drilling Co. in 1984.

Survivors include: his wife, Louise Beard of Midland; one son, Bill Beard of Dallas; one daughter, Margaret Anderson of Plano; one sister, Margaret Franklin of Dallas; and two grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Tommy Gibson, Claude Mitchell, Morris Howell, Don Collier, Hyle Doss and Charlie Byrd. Honorary pallbearers are Gus Bealmear, Bert Burton and Ralph Crays.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice or the local chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Sherri Leonard

Services for Sherri Lynn Coots Leonard are set for 11 a.m. Saturday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Frank Johnson officiating.

Mrs. Leonard died Thursday in a Midland County traffic accident.

She was born Nov. 6, 1970, in Midland, where she grew up and attended school. She married Randy Leonard Aug. 27, 1988. The couple lived in Virginia Beach, Va., where he was stationed. She returned to Midland while her husband is overseas with U.S. Navy Seals.

She was a member of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Survivors include: her husband Rany Leonard, stationed in Panama; her daughter, Chandler Lynn Leonard of Midland; her parents, Joe and Judy Coots of Midland; one brother, Joe Coots Jr. of Midland; one sister, Shelley McCleskey of Fontana, Calif.; her grandparents, George and Dorothy Anderson of Midland and Nell Coots of McComb, Miss.; and her great-grandmothers, Sally Coots of Big SPring and Nora Smith of Midland.

Memorials should be directed to Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Leo Roberts

Services for Leo Roberts, 77, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday in the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He died Thursday at his Midland home following a brief illness.

Robertsa had been a Midland resident since 1952.

He was preceded in death by one brother and one sister.

Survivors include: his wife Sue Roberts of Midland; one son, James L. Roberts of Midland; and one sister, Gladys Adkins of Pampa.

Man attacked by killer bees goes home

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Africanized honeybees attacked and stung a South Texas man more than 300 times in the first major attack by the so-called "killer" bees in the United States, authorities said Thursday.

Adan Garza, 65, was released Thursday afternoon from Mission Hospital, where he was treated for the stings, officials said.

Garza was attacked Wednesday about 10 miles west of McAllen while clearing brush near an abandoned shack where the bees had built a hive, agriculture officials said.

Preliminary tests conducted by the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service confirmed the hive was contaminated by Africanized bees.

"This is the first severe incident," said Elba Quintero, manager for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Africanized honeybee project. "We have had three or four (small) incidents. But this is major."

A Brownsville man survived after being stung 18 times by the bees last May. The only fatal stinging recorded in the Rio Grande Valley was a dog killed by the bees in July.

The bees, often called killers because they attack in swarms and pursue prey for long distances, were first sighted in South Texas last October following a decades-long journey from Brazil.

They have been spreading through the Americas since 1957, when African queen bees escaped from an experiment in Brazil and began breeding with more docile European bees. The Africanized bees are their descendants.

APHIS trappers on Thursday combed the area where Garza was attacked, but it was apparently clear of Africanized bees, Ms. Quintero said.

However, the bees are expected to continue their spread throughout the region.

ey-maker."

Some figures are not in. In the case of Kinderfest, Mrs. Haynes has a good idea of what it will be since she was in charge of that part of Septemberfest last year.

"I'm anticipating $13,000 gross, but it could be more. Last year when I was Kinderfest chairman, I spent $4,000 and grossed almost $11,000.

"Also in Kinderfest, we split the profits with three other organizations — Indian Guides, Future Farmers of America and Casa de Amigos. And you're talking $2,500 worth of supplies, if not more. We had to go back and buy more Saturday night. Our cookies all ran out — 75 dozen cookies ran out Sunday at 1 o'clock.

"And the prizes ran out. Four hours after we opened the gates 200 dozen confetti eggs were gone."

Actually, the gross figures for 1990 and 1991 are not that different. In 1990, Septemberfest grossed $143,000. This year, the gross figure is $172,000.

Booth rentals this year for some 70 or so artists from across the country brought in $16,000, which is $4,000 more than in 1990. Neither Las Manos nor the Museum charges the artists any percentage of what they sell, Mrs. Haynes said.

And Las Manos is responsible for the grounds, an expense which runs around $13,000 and includes, Mrs. Haynes said, "the tables and chairs that we rent, security, electrical work for all the booths and the Dixie Dolls, who get paid $1,000 for cleaning up the whole weekend.

"They work themselves into the ground. They work so hard; and I never hear them complain. And the parents come out. There's one parent to each girl. A lot of the time you see the parents picking up trash.

"So this really is a community effort. And, even though Las Manos puts on Septemberfest we, as an organization, could not do it all by ourselves."

The expenses for staging Septemberfest are high, Mrs. Haynes said, and will run around $70,000 this year.

"Even though this is a fund raiser, you've got to pay the people," she said. "People have to make a living."

AUTHOR: Bissinger autographs books here

Minutes" showed up at Ratliff Stadium for the game between Permian and Odessa High.

"I think people have had a year to sort of absorb the book and get over their feelings about it," Bissinger said.

"My goal was to write a book that was accurate and objective, and I feel like that's what I accomplished."

Connie Pool of Big Spring attended the signing and agreed with Bissinger's assessment.

"There was a lot of truth in the book and I wanted to meet the man who had the nerve to write these things," Ms. Pool said. "I know a lot of people said they felt betrayed, but he didn't come here telling everybody he was selling real estate.

"He said he was here to write a book, and when someone tells you that, you can expect it to contain some things you might not like."

Bissinger said the controversial elements in "Friday Night Lights" fill only about 20 of the books 355 pages.

"I wrote this book with great affection for the kids and for the area," he said. "In the end you really want those kids to win, and all that has been dismissed because of those 20 pages.

"It's not a slam-job. It's a book I wrote with compassion. If I was filled with guilt I wouldn't be back. I don't like the fact that people feel betrayed or that I've lost some good friends because of it. But the kids I centered the book around liked it and that means a lot to me.

"Some adults were upset, but I think sometimes if you could get the adults out of sports we'd be better off."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Guilty plea

Staff Report

A 39-year old woman entered a guilty plea Thursday in U.S. District Court on a charge of bank theft in connection with the reported robbery of an Odessa bank on May 23, federal officials and documents stated.

Karen Lynn Lopez was originally arrested for robbing the Bank One Odessa branch of $3,000 after demanding the cash in a note, officials said.

Sentencing for Ms. Lopez is set for Oct. 29.

Woman dies

A Midland woman was thrown from her car as a result of an accident then accidently run over about 3:05 a.m. Thursday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Sherri Lynn Leonard, 20, was pronounced dead at the scene about 4:05 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, officials said.

Mrs. Leonard was driving a 1990 Toyota south on County Road 1135 South when she failed to stop at a stop the intersection with Texas Highway 158, officials said.

The Toyota was broadsided by a 1982 Mack truck trailer driven by E.J. Grisham of Brady, officials said. Ms. Leonard was ejected from her car.

About three minutes later, Grisham ran to check on the Ms. Leonard.

A third vehicle, a 1989 Dodge pickup driven by Robert Alan Rutherford of Midland was traveling east on Highway 158 and swerved to the right to avoid hitting the Toyota and Grisham, officials said. The pickup ran over Ms. Leonard who was lying on the pavement.

The accident was investigated by DPS troopers Nick Rose and Mike Glenn.

Man arrested

ODESSA — An Odessa man wanted on a Midland County warrant was arrested Wednesday, police said.

John Martin Fisher was arrested about noon on a warrant for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, police said.

Bond was set at $10,000 by Municipal Judge Otis Moore.

Gun fight

ODESSA — A Fort Worth man was arrested Wednesday after attempting to take a gun from a police officer during a struggle, police said.

Orval W. Crowell, 41, was jailed for the incident and bond set at $1,500 by Municipal Judge Otis Moore.

According to police, officers responded to a disturbance call at a motel in the 3000 block of Highway 80 about 7:20 p.m. Police were told a man involved in the disturbance went to a nearby motel.

After contacting Crowell at the motel, police asked him to remove his hands from his pocket. When police attempted to frisk Crowell, he said if he was touched, he would kill the officer.

A fight ensued when police attempted to arrest Crowell, who allegedly tried to take the officer's weapon.

Arson charge

ODESSA — A 20-year-old Odessa man was arrested Thursday afternoon and charged with arson in connection with a fire in a house at 1704 W. 18th St. on July 11, fire investigators said.

Scott Ray Harrison was arrested on a warrant issued by Judge Otis Moore on Sept. 11, officials said.

Harrison was believed to have set fire to the home, where he had been residing for approximately three months, officials said. Details of how the fire was set were not released.

Harrison remained in jail Thursday pending arraignment.

Boy, 13, shot

A 13-year-old boy who was accidentally shot in the face by his brother Wednesday night remained in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Thursday night, officials said.

The boy sustained a 12-gauge shotgun blast to the face about 7:43 p.m. Wednesday at his home in the 2500 block of Neely Avenue, police said.

The youth was accidentally shot by his 15-year-old brother, who was playing with the youngsters' father's gun.

Border expert dies in plane crash

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press writer

EL PASO — A Mexican college director known for her expertise on U.S.-Mexico border dynamics and her advocacy of workers' rights was among the victims of a Continental Express plane crash, school officials said Thursday.

Valdes

Guillermina Valdes de Villalba, 51, had served as director of the Colegio Frontera Norte de Ciudad Juarez since 1984 and was well known for her border research, particularly on women working in foreign-owned maquiladora manufacturing plants.

Ms. Valdes was aboard Flight 2574 flying from Laredo to Houston. The plane crashed Wednesday in a corn field killing all 14 people aboard.

"She'll be missed among others by the maquiladora workers and by border communities, working border communities. She was one of their best and most effective friends and advocates," said Primitivo Rodriguez, director of Mexico-U.S. Border Program for the Philadelphia-based American Friends Service Committee.

Juarez has more than 300 maquiladoras, which are mostly U.S.-owned, and many of the workers in them are women. Among Ms. Valdes' research is a documentary titled "The World Assembly Line," which dealt with women workers in Mexico and the Philippines, said Victor Munoz, El Paso representative of the AFL-CIO.

Colleagues say her death is devastating to both countries.

"She had the only organization that was doing studies on border issues on the Mexican side and she covered all the way from Tijuana, all the way to Matamoros. She had a great deal of expertise and knowledge of the dynamics of the border area as far as economics, as far as labor, as far as integration of people," Munoz said.

Rodriguez said American Friends Service often exchanged research with Ms. Valdes, who was committed to meticulously compiling research and data about the border so it could be used to affect policy.

"We consider that the border plans changed dramatically in positive terms thanks to the efforts of Guillermina," Rodriguez said.

"She was able to change prejudice into understanding, animosity into friendship and distrust into cooperation between peoples from both sides of the border."

Roberto Villareal, chairman of the University of Texas at El Paso political science department, said he often asked Ms. Valdes to speak to his students.

"In light of what is happening now in terms of free trade, Guillermina was ahead of her time," Villareal said, "not only being articulate in Spanish and English, but in trying to see the two communities come together culturally."

bought it in April 1988. Eight of the reports involved smoke coming through the plane's air conditioning ducts. It had logged 7,229 flying hours before the crash.

But Continental Express President Stephen Kolski said the aircraft had had no mechanical problems reported. It last had undergone a "heavy maintenance" check in November and was due for another one in March.

"We've gotten a lot of questions about the maintenance of this aircraft," Bahler said. "The maintenance records have been impounded. Beginning tomorrow morning, our investigators will be going over all the records from the date the aircraft was purchased to the time of the accident."

The Embraer 120-models have been involved in 70 accidents, ranging from minor to serious, since 1986, including 19 incidents with Continental Express planes, the FAA said.

In the wreckage, the plane's two wings are slammed together and on the right side of the aircraft. The left wing is under the right wing. The right engine remains on the right wing, while the left engine is about 100 yards away.

The horizontal stabilizer, which is the tall top part of the tail section, is upside down about a quarter-mile away.

But Bahler said it was too soon to begin speculating what caused the accident.

PAINTER: Budget causes concern

original strength.

County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer, the four commissioners and the sheriff all have expressed concern about maintaining adequate patrol strength to help protect the Midland County citizens from crime.

Under the reorganization, Painter said, "The patrol deputies will have to take on an investigative workload, and it increases the workload on the other investigators. Patrolmen are going to have to do investigations, which will take away from some of the other jobs that they have had."

The sheriff said also that he is concerned about a likely increase in overtime, which could be "atrocious" in taxing the sheriff's budget, and about much compensatory time.

"Losing the six people in operations," Painter said, "is going to cause, in my estimation, an excessive number of overtime hours that are going to have to be worked in an effort just to maintain the level we have had."

The restructuring of the Sheriff's Department was mandated, noted Judge Seltzer, who is into his first year in office, under a 1987 statute which says that, in a county of more than 75,000 people, "the county government shall classify all positions in its sheriff's department and shall specify the duties and prescribe the salary for each classification."

The sheriff, pledged to enforce the law, said he is willing to honor that 1987 statute, which was put into action this year by the Commissioners' Court.

Among other concerns, the Commissioners' Court is trying to exercise budgetary restraints and has, to various degrees, examined more than a score of sub-budgets in the county's various departments.

For more cost savings, the court is limiting the sheriff's vehicles to 40. Currently, 64 cars, vans and pickup trucks and a helicopter are in the sheriff's fleet. Maintenance of the helicopter is to be paid for with the sheriff-controlled Drug Forfeiture Fund, which, since 1985, has been enriched by about $1 million through seized drug money awarded to the sheriff by the courts. The sheriff already has spent more than half of those funds on equipment. None can be spent on law-enforcement salaries without approval by the Commissioners' Court.

Painter was distressed that he was not invited to help re-structure his Sheriff's Department.

"I was never asked to participate in any discussions involving the manpower nor was I asked to participate in budget study" after he had submitted his proposed 1992 budget to the Commissioners' Court about mid-year.

About two weeks ago, the sheriff submitted his manpower chart to the Commissioners' Court and, surmised the sheriff, the judge and the commissioners used that chart in restructuring his department.

AGRICULTURE

Community farms bring families closer

By Mary Macvean
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Sam and Elizabeth Smith seemed to have paradise on their small organic farm in the mountains, but it was a solitary paradise. So this season, they're sharing their farm with the community.

The Smiths' new partners invest money and their own sweat. In return, they share in the bounty of the land, 35 peaceful acres at the northern edge of the Berkshire Mountains.

Caretaker Farm is one of about 100 community-supported agriculture projects around the country helping small, mostly organic, farms survive and enabling families to connect more intimately with the land that feeds them.

"You have a stake and your children have a stake and your children's children in seeing this land be well cared for," Smith said. Now, he added, "the community sees they have a stake, too."

The Smiths once were teachers in New York City, but they found they escaped to the country every chance they got. So in 1969, they happily moved to their Williamstown farm, eventually working it full time.

So they wrestled for a couple of years with the decision to put aside their charming farmstand and seek a group of people willing to pay for food before it is grown.

Once decided, they were firm.

"THE NEED FOR community in our society and in the world is so desperate it would be the gravest dereliction of one's responsibility" not to take that chance, Smith said over breakfast at a long wooden table one sunny morning.

The Smiths offered 115 shares in their farm at $435 per share. Each share is expected to pay off with more than 400 pounds of vegetables over nine or 10 months, enough for one adult on a mostly vegetarian diet.

Ideally, the Smiths would like sharers to pay what they can and take what they need. But that, they say, will take time.

"We want to break down this idea that down to the last pea will be divided equally," Mrs. Smith said.

In 1986, there were only two community supported agriculture projects in this country. Now new ones begin every year.

"The main thing is they want pesticide-free food. They want clean food for themselves and their children," said Rod Shouldice of the Bio-Dynamic Farming and Gardening Association Inc. in Kimberton, Pa., an educational organization.

"Another thing is that people feel that what we do as individuals affects the whole earth. We know that now as a culture," he said. "It's a new feeling. People feel that they're responsible for the earth."

SHOULDICE, WHO HAS a share in a southeastern Pennsylvania farm, said he expects there will one day be thousands of CSA projects in this country, though they'll never amount to more than a few percent of farms.

"I don't think we should discount it, but I don't think we should view these developments as something that is going to bail out agriculture as a whole, in a big way," said Nelson Bills of Cornell University's agricultural districts program, designed to keep land in agriculture.

Robyn Van En started the first American CSA farm at Indian Line Farm in South Egremont, in the southwestern corner of Massachusetts. She took her cue from Europe and Japan, where CSAs have operated for more than 30 years.

In Japan, she notes, the name for CSA translates to "food with the farmer's face on it."

Gordon Ridgway has sold up to a third of his crops through a CSA in North Cornwall, Conn., for the last three years. He learned firsthand that community is a two-way street.

"Last summer, I had a bad accident, a tractor ran over me, and I was laid up for most of the summer," he said. His sharers, along with other friends and neighbors, pitched in with the weeding and harvesting.

CSA PROJECTS VARY. Some offer meat and produce, some require sharers to work at the farm. Some accept food stamps, and most have sliding payment scales. Others are organized by urbanites.

Dan Guenthner farms land in the Minneapolis suburb of Long Lake for 120 urban households. Vegetables and herbs are delivered weekly to seven drop sites on people's porches.

Eventually, he hopes to give these people a chance to own a farm, Guenthner said. "Urban people are feeling particularly disconnected from their food and the land," the farmers and what they produce.

For $275, a Common Harvest Community Farm sharer receives about 15 pounds of food a week for 20 weeks, he said. At a nearby farm, sharers pay what they can — from $50 to $550 for a share, Guenthner said.

With CSA, the farm is supported by the people who eat the food, not by government subsidy, and it's eaten near where it grows. A full quarter of the produce eaten in this country is imported, the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association estimates, and the Defense Department has estimated that the average molecule of food travels 1,300 miles from ground to table.

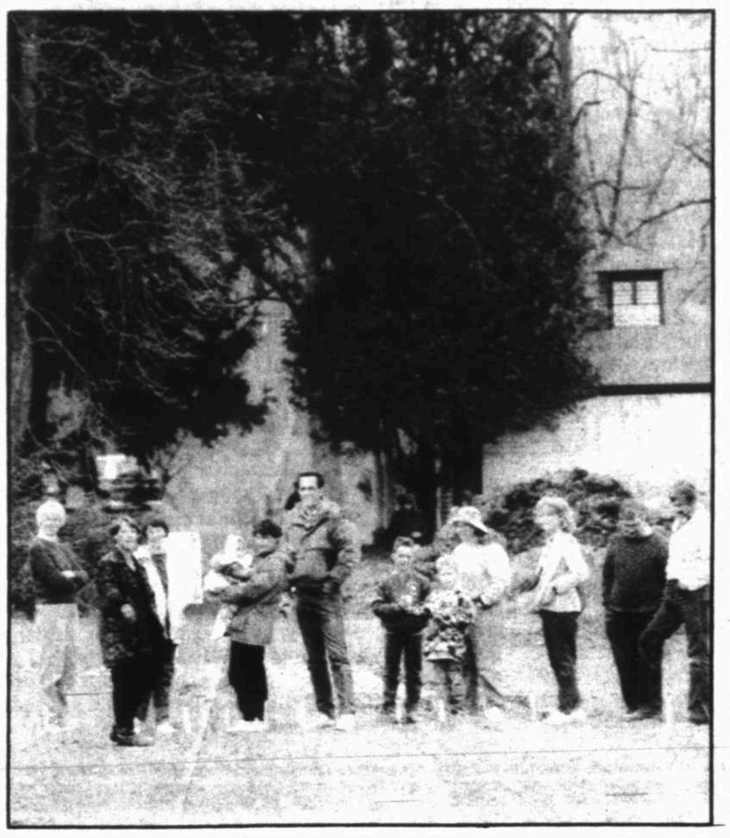

COMPARISONS TO SUPERMARKET prices vary, partly because most of the food from CSA farms is organic. But Van En noted that sharers pay the "real" costs of food, without brokers or markets taking cuts.

For a second year, Billie Smith, her husband and two children have joined for a CSA project at Manor Lake Farm in Kingston, N.Y.

"It is more expensive," she said. "But you're getting quality vegetables, and I wouldn't say it's a lot more expensive."

CSA provides farmers with guaranteed consumers and with capital that frees them to buy feed and equipment without borrowing.

"It makes a lot of sense for a farmer, because they're out trying to peddle their produce, out in the truck in the summer, when they should be on the farm. This way they market in the winter, in the down time," said Melody Newcombe, the farmer at Manor Lake, where her husband's family has lived for four generations.

Farm director Melody Newcombe, second from left, shows a group of potential shareholders around the Manor Lake Farm in Williamstown, Mass, in April.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," said Flame Simon of Woodstock, N.Y., who bought a share with a friend. "It's become more and more necessary for us to help take care of each other. Unfortunately, not a lot of people believe that."

NORMAN RAFALOWSKY OF Kingston, N.Y., long had avoided fresh produce, he said, because pesticides made him sick. He found the organic crops at Manor Lake Farm "an absolute blessing."

At Newcombe's farm, sharers drive up to a barn, where long tables are topped with wooden crates holding that week's harvest.

Crates are labeled, some with nutrition and cooking information. A list is posted, telling sharers how much to take from each crate. "Share" boxes enable people to trade what they don't like for what they do.

This year, the 200 sharers at Manor Lake each pay $340 to cover a $68,000 budget. Two apprentices pay $240 and 40 hours of work. Last year, Newcombe's farm grew 24,000 pounds of produce on 4.5 acres of land.

Other CSA farms range from 10 to 200 shares for $300 to $1,000 a share, Newcombe said.

Sharers at Manor Lake and at the Smiths' farm built themselves root cellars in barns to store winter vegetables such as potatoes, onions and carrots.

Newcombe organizes pot luck suppers, greenhouse workshops, cooking classes, "spud-days" to plant or harvest potatoes, storytelling parties and a newsletter, "The Harvest Times."

IT WAS JUST this way of living, people not only needing one another but celebrating their dependence, that the Smiths grew to covet.

Over the years, they had sold produce to restaurants and food cooperatives in Boston and New York City. They built their farmstand. Mrs. Smith baked bread, selling up to 90 loaves a day.

"We hit the big time — we were hustling vegetables all the time," Mrs. Smith said.

The big time was not what they had in mind.

From the back door to the Shaker green farmhouse, Mrs. Smith's bakery is on the left. Ahead there's a small yard, where a big lazy cat roams. Beyond a stone wall are the fields, with a pond on the left and then mountains.

A second pond hidden below serves as the family swimming hole.

Sheep, bee hives and a couple of roosters share the land with two greenhouses, a red barn and some newly planted fruit trees.

Life is good here. Smith thought long and hard about converting to a community-supported farm.

"We've got a successful small farm. Why fix it if it ain't broke?" he used to ask. "But Elizabeth persisted."

Now, he said, he's wholly convinced, although practical objections remain.

"CSA IS NOT going to be easy to swing. You need skilled farmers, you need organizational skills, you need a steering committee that can empathize with you and help educate the wider community," he said.

The 4-H Council recently elected officers for 1991-92.

Will Looney of Edinburg was elected president of the 29-member council following a five-day workshop in Trinedad. Coy Worley, son of Mike and Cydnie Worley of Midland, was selected as a member of the State Council.

The council is made up of the 4-H district president and 1st vice president from each of the 14 districts of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Members receive a week of extensive training in leadership and public speaking to better represent the more than 402,000 Texas 4-H Club members at county, district and state activities.

Members participate in local community activities, meetings and events. They also receive one or more assignments at major state activities such as 4-H Roundup and Texas 4-H Congress.

Council members also will be responsible for providing leadership training at county and district teen labs.

In August, three members of the Midland County 4-H Trap and Skeet shoot team received high honors at he State 4-H Trap and Skeet Shoot. Bryan Anglin, son of Larry Anglin, is State Champion in the Sub-junior class in sporting clays. Frankie Keller, son of Frankie Keller, Chris Smith, son of Rick Smith, and Bryan Anglin placed sixth in the three-man team trap. These same three boys placed fifth in the three-man team skeet. Congratulations to these young men for representing Midland well.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Criticism forces gradual halt to import some species

TOKYO (AP) — A national penchant for things foreign and exotic, including odd pets, dulls Japan's concern for endangered species.

International criticism has forced a gradual halt to imports of some species and animal products banned by international treaties — most recently, two rare types of sea turtles.

But the search for status items like rare fish, reptiles and plants puts new pressures on dwindling wildlife, said Tom Milliken, director of TRAFFIC Japan, which analyzes trade in flora and fauna for the World Wildlife Fund.

After an auto company advertisement showing a frilled lizard running through a desert, frills afluff, people asked for the lizards at pet stores.

"It opened an appeal for the bizarre, weird, the icky," Milliken said.

Reptiles are popular. Young Japanese favor them because apartment leases generally have strict prohibitions on noisier, more demanding pets.

Papua New Guinea, home of frilled lizards, does not permit their export, but sales of green iguanas, pythons and turtles have boomed.

The reptile pet corner on the roof of Tokyo's Takashimaya department store sells about 200 reptiles and frogs a month.

It stocks all sizes of turtles, salamanders and lizards. Green iguanas stare impassively while baby water dragons bounce frantically off the glass walls of their cubicles.

Milliken said the types of snakes, lizards and fish living in Japanese apartments aren't on lists of the most endangered, but that some are vulnerable, especially in a growing market.

Wealthy Japanese also covet rare plants. The popular lady slipper orchid and many other tropical species have disappeared in the wild.

Officials at TRAFFIC say Japan has virtually no controls on trade in animals and plants.

Japan is one of 110 signatories of the Washington Convention on Trade in Endangered Species, but with reservations that allow trade in six species of whales and two of lizards.

In response to the threat of punitive U.S. trade sanctions, it agreed in May to gradually stop importing two types of emdamgered sea turtles.

FAMILY MATTERS

Reader adds advice about volunteers' work

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I don't completely agree with your advice to SURPRISED. She wrote about spending so much of her time doing everything for her husband and said that he was unhappy with her because she didn't have any time for him. You didn't address at all the points that what she was doing might be fulfilling for her and very important in the community.

May

If it weren't for volunteers doing all the things that they do through the (Junior) League, Midland wouldn't be the great place to live that it is. The volunteers work countless hours in placements in many non-profit organizations in Midland. It just makes me mad sometimes when men (especially husbands) act like all we are doing is just playing. We work hard and most of us feel very good about what we are doing to help others. We think that it is our Christian duty to help others less fortunate than ourselves and this gives us a way to do that.

I think that you should have told SURPRISED to tell her husband to "grow up" and stop being so selfish. He should be proud of her and the work that she is doing in the community, not critical. PROUD VOLUNTEER

DEAR PROUD: You bring up an important aspect of SURPRISED'S letter. I did not mean to suggest that her work in the community was not valued — it just apparently was not valued by her husband. I agree that the Junior League and other volunteer groups are vital to Midland. Without the volunteer spirit that exists here, Midland would be just another place on the map.

I should have expanded my suggestion to SURPRISED to include how valuable her volunteer work is to her, and her husband's perception of that work. Time spent in any activity by each spouse should be a part of the couple's "Family Plan," which is a map describing a balance that is agreeable to both, in terms of time spent in various activities of the family.

The important point is that the couple discuss how they feel about the distribution of time spent within the marriage. If either is unhappy, then he or she should immediately discuss the sources of unhappiness. Assumptions and ambiguity lead to more serious problems. Unstated problems cannot be solved.

Thank you for your letter. You point out another important dimension of marriage.

DEAR FAMILY: My mother called and told me that the doctor wanted to put my father on anti-depressants. I couldn't believe it. I have never thought that anyone in our family would be depressed because we have so much to be thankful for. My mother and father are well off financially and in relatively good health for their ages (late 60s). I always thought people who were depressed had something wrong with them or they had done something in their lives that they were ashamed to talk about.

I just don't believe in taking pills to feel better. I'm real concerned that he will become addicted and be a different person. My mother got all upset when I didn't agree with her right away. Now I don't know what to do. CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Scientists believe depression is usually caused by a combination of genetic, developmental and psychological factors. An estimated 10 percent of the population will experience a major depression sometime during their lives.

There should be no shameful aspect of depression. Statistics suggest that the percentage of people suffering from depression increase until the age 80. The elderly are very likely to experience a number of additional stressors such as retirement, deaths of friends and relatives, illness, and spousal conflict.

No single treatment is best for depression, but generally some combination of medication and psychotherapy is often very effective. The modern anti-depressants have no addictive features; instead they work to lift the depression rather than giving any "high." As with any medication, anti-depressants have side effects, but they are generally simply annoying and vary by medication. Your father should immediately report any problems to his physician.

I encourage you to support your parents in this effort. Your father may also with to seek counseling at some point. Your parents should not have to suffer when help is available.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

DEAR ABBY

Mom fears son's reaction to truth

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago, I became pregnant with "Joe's" baby. We were going to get married, but Joe got into a jam (armed robbery) and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. Joe is due to get out in two months. Now the problem.

Van Buren

When my baby (I'll call him Gary) was 8 months old, I fell in love with a man I'll call Tony. Tony and I were married, and Gary was raised to believe that Tony is his "real" father. My family and Tony's family know the truth about Gary's "real" father, but nobody ever talks about it. Joe's mother and sister also know the whole story.

My question: Should I tell Gary who his real father is? Tony says he will support my decision.

I'm afraid I will lose Gary's trust if I tell him I have lied to him all these years.

What do you think? — SILENT FOR 10 YEARS

DEAR SILENT: You had better tell Gary who his real father is before someone else does. It won't be easy, but it's far better that he hear it from you than from someone else, and when three people know a secret, it's no longer a secret.

DEAR ABBY: My beloved wife of 32 years just died of colon cancer, which had spread to her liver. She was 51 years old, healthy and beautiful. My two sons and I are in total shock. My wife had some colon cancer symptoms and was examined by a colon cancer specialist. The doctor proclaimed, "No problems." (She had cancer of the colon at the time of the examination.)

Eight months after the examination, the cancer had spread to her liver. It was finally discovered one year later! She lived with intense chemotherapy and pain for 14 months.

Abby, tell your readers that if they suspect that they have colon cancer, they should demand a complete colon examination, a blood test and A SECOND OPINION.

In my wife's case, the window of life was only eight months. America's dirty little secret is that there are about 1 million new cancer patients, and over half a million deaths from cancer every year.

Abby, please let the common people know. No one else will. — LOST IN ATLANTA

DEAR LOST: With your help, I just have, and I thank you for coming forward with the statistics, which have been verified by the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society.

DEAR ABBY: I think I'm in love with my husband's best friend. (I'll call him Rob.) I have known him almost as long as I've known my husband. Very often, the three of us will go to the movies, bowling, parties, etc. When Rob is with us, I always have a wonderful time. He keeps me laughing, and he's interesting company. When I go out with my husband alone, it's usually dull and boring. It's getting to the point where I'd rather go out with Rob than my husband.

When I know that Rob is out on a date, I get upset and jealous. Some weekends when I'm tired, Rob will come over and fix dinner for me and my husband. He does a lot of nice things for us that my husband will not do.

I think about Rob constantly. This man has never said or done anything to suggest that our friendship is more than friendship. Am I in love with Rob? Or just bored with my husband? — IN DOUBT IN TEXAS

DEAR IN DOUBT: Perhaps a little of both. However, if you value your marriage, it's time to break up the threesome. You and your husband should investigate outings for couples that offer a refresher course in how to rejuvenate a stagnant marriage. (Check with your church or a local college.)

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago my husband and I were browsing in an antique shop when we came across a white porcelain figurine. On the bottom was stamped "MADE IN USA" — and in even finer print were the letters "Japan."

Some people may deny that this occurred, but during World War II, I assure you it did.

Now we're sorry we didn't buy that white porcelain piece. We would have loved to take a picture of that lettering and send it to you, Abby. If we ever find another piece, we will. — G.M.A., PHOENIX

Devices can now outwit shoplifters

By Leonard Sloane
N.Y. Times News Service

Now you see them, now you don't. To protect their merchandise from shoplifters, retailers are using increasingly sophisticated security devices. Some are covert and designed to catch thieves; others are overt and designed to deter theft.

"One of the things that promotes shoplifting is the belief that it is not a consumer's problem," said Richard Feinberg, director of the Retail Institute at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind. "But part of the price you pay for a suit is the cost to the store in dealing with shoplifting."

According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, there were 1.2 million shoplifting incidents reported last year, up from 1.1 million in 1989. Shoplifting now accounts for 16 percent of all reported larcenies.

Shrinkage, the term used by retailers to refer primarily to both shoplifting and thefts by employees, is equal to about 2 percent of sales in the average department store, according to the National Retail Federation, a trade association in New York. A third of all shrinkage is due to shoplifting.

This week, the federation and three other organizations will release the results of a survey on store security at the International Security Conference in New York.

As might be expected, some store departments have a higher shrinkage rate than others. A loss-prevention survey by Ernst & Young, the accounting and consulting firm, shows that the highest rate, 7.6 percent, occurs in women's fashion accessories and costume jewelry, usually small items easily concealed and carried out of a store.

In contrast, the shrinkage rate for women's apparel is 2.4 percent; for men's apparel and shoes it is 1.8 percent.

In hard goods, the shrinkage rate for records, compact disks and videotapes is 4.1 percent; for radios, televisions and stereos, it is 3.4 percent.

Among the reasons cited for shoplifting these days are the growth in the number of drug abusers, who steal to support their habit; the reduction in uniformed and plainclothes security guards and the fact that expensive items are more frequently displayed openly, said Peter Berlin, who heads a retail consulting company bearing his name in Jericho, N.Y.

Paul Marcus, the chairman of Securus, an installer of security systems in Denver, mentioned another reason: the recession. "When times get tougher, people steal more," he said.

Although there are hundreds of devices that help stop shoplifting, like observation mirrors, three major categories of security devices are used: electronic article surveillance, closed-circuit television and cables attached to locks and chains.

While equipment in each category has long been in use, improvements and new inventions are continually added to retailers' security systems.

Electronic article surveillance refers to the security tags clamped to merchandise, typically clothing. If the tag is not removed by the cashier, it will make an alarm go off when the merchandise is carried past sensors at the store's exits. Versions of the tags emit a non-washable ink that spreads over the garment if the tag is improperly removed either in or out of the store.

One of the newest devices is a tag made by Sensormatic Electronics Corp.; it is called Tell Tag and it beeps when tampered with. The beeping activates an alarm, which may frighten off the shoplifter and also warns store employees that a shoplifter is at work.

Then there are weight-sensing devices that sound an alarm when merchandise is removed from or added to a shelf or rack.

For example, the Protron, made by Protex International, activates a recording that shoppers can hear — "Someone will be with you in a moment," or something similar — whenever an item weighing three ounces or more is added or removed from a display. The Protron also sends an electronic message to the nearest sales clerk that someone is at a particular display and should be watched.

Closed-circuit cameras — seen or unseen, black and white or color, with or without videotape — are also used by retailers. Most often, they hang from the ceiling in plastic spheres, but they also fit into track lighting and behind wall panels. Many cameras can tilt, zoom and pan, following a shopper — or shoplifter — when directed to do so.

Security experts disagree on the value of closed-circuit television in foiling shoplifting.

Roger A. Speyer, president of the PSA Security Network in Denver, said security "is pretty much a function of observation and the most effective way to do that is by closed-circuit television."

But Kurt Barnard, who publishes Barnard's Retail Marketing Report, a newsletter in New York, thinks these systems are useful only when "somebody watches what the cameras sees, and someone isn't always watching the monitor."

Probably the most unusual housing for a closed-circuit camera is a mannequin called Anne Droid. Not only does it contain a camera behind its glass eyes, but a microphone can be mounted behind its nose to eavesdrop on conversations nearby.

Cable systems, some mechanical and some electronic, lock up the merchandise to prevent its removal.

Music tested for health benefits

By David Bauder

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Before settling on a name, musicians in this group discarded such ideas as the Last Chance Band or the Grateful Alive.

Most of the members of the New Horizons Band have about 40 years of experience on the tie-dye clad youngsters at the Eastman School of Music teaching them how to play their instruments — little of it musical.

Along with having fun and fulfilling a few lifelong dreams, the band members are about to become test cases in studies to determine whether playing music has health benefits for an aging population.

"As far as I know, there is no time in which it is too late to play," said Frank Wilson, a California neurologist and author of "Tone Deaf and All Thumbs? An Invitation to Music-Making." Wilson organized a week-long conference on music and aging this summer around the exploits of the Rochester band.

The New Horizons Band is different from the hundreds of community and church bands spread across the country because its organizers were looking strictly for novices. Band members must be at least 50 years old.

When Roy Ernst, professor of music education at the Eastman School, placed a newspaper ad in January announcing the start of the band, he hoped for 30 replies. He got about 60.

HIS GROUP IS a mixture of people who have never picked up an instrument or have done nothing since high school band. A few musically proficient people were told they couldn't play the instrument they were used to. A piano teacher who joined had to play a wind instrument.

Playing largely classical compositions, members practice as both a large band and smaller incarnations. They've put on one informal performance so far, but are hoping for some public appearances this fall.

Ernst helped start the group with a grant from the National Association of Music Merchants, who sense a potential new market if the idea catches fire.

Band members practice twice a week, and Ernst reports "remarkable progress" among some of his charges.

'The camaraderie is just marvelous. Everyone is just smiling and having a good time.'

— Dorris Nash
member New Horizons Band

After several weeks of being unable to coax a sound from the clarinet, 77-year-old Whitelaw Roemer has progressed to the point where he even composed a musical accompaniment to the poem, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner."

"It's always been a secret desire of mine to play an instrument," said Roemer, who retired after working 40 years at Kodak headquarters.

Dorris Nash, 67, found little time for the saxophone she played in high school after growing up and raising two children. The retired medical librarian jumped at the chance to start again after being told about the band.

"The camaraderie is just marvelous," Nash said. "Everyone is just smiling and having a good time."

THAT'S THE MOST obvious benefit The band gives people who may be lonely a social activity, and people who are less isolated tend to be more healthy, Ernst said.

But the University of Rochester's medical school will be looking for more hidden benefits — such as whether learning to play an instrument lowers blood pressure or increases brain activity, said researcher Kenneth Swartz.

Band participants say that while learning to play instruments like tubas and drums may be physically more difficult than when they were teen-agers, they're better motivated. Members are learning to play because they want to, not because they need an extra credit to graduate from high school, Ernst said.

"You aren't really intimidated by a music teacher the way you might have been as a child," Roemer said. "Back then, if you had played a wrong note, you might have gotten slapped on the hands."

They're even doing extra work without worrying about impressing a teacher; Roemer is taking private lessons, while Nash and some friends meet periodically to play while the band is on hiatus for the summer.

Ernst and Wilson wince at stories they hear about bad childhood musical experiences, including one band member whose parents told him that he didn't have any music in him.

"I think we've just entirely missed the point about music," Wilson said.

THIS COUNTRY'S education system gives everyone a taste of music training in elementary schools. Gradually, as kids get older, the musically proficient are sifted out and average students drift away from music, he said. Prodigies are given special treatment.

That's a logical way to train brain surgeons — where you want only the best around at the end — but it doesn't make sense to teach music that way, he said.

"When we're talking about music, we're not simply talking about the private province of the music educators and the entertainment industry," he said. "Music is too important to be left to musicians."

Wilson said one of his patients began playing the organ at 88, after shopping for her instrument in a store where a clerk took her desire to learn seriously. She "traded up" for better organs several times before she couldn't physically play anymore at age 92, when she slipped into a deep depression, he said.

Wilson's conference brought together ethnomusicologists, neurologists, physical therapists and music teachers. Oliver Sacks, author of "Awakenings," showed films in which physically and mentally handicapped persons showed remarkable improvements in their conditions when singing or playing the piano. The neurologists showed charts of brain waves.

A MUSIC PROFESSOR lectured on the physical benefits of conducting for the elderly.

"Conductors, I think, as they grow older enjoy their work more and more," said Jonathan Sternberg of Chestnut Hill College in Philadelphia. "You seldom find a conductor who retires. They prefer to work to the very end."

Roemer echoed that thought. He's looking forward to practicing and performing with the band this fall, and he didn't hesitate when asked to offer advice to his peers.

"You're never too old," Roemer said. "Never. Don't ever sell yourself down the river."

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

On approaching the pearly gates, crotchety old ladies become sweet, gentle and loving; gruff old men become thoughtful and soft-spoken — agree with this traditional concept and you no doubt also believe that elephants can fly. Actually, as one grows older, one's personality, thoughts and behavior persist not only along established lines, but even more so. Research has disclosed that an individual's religious behavior follows a like pattern in the majority of cases albeit not all.

Page

Religion has been defined as "that body of beliefs through which a human being achieves a conception of his being, of himself, of his relation to the universe and to society, and the actions which spring from those beliefs."

The first National Conference on Aging, 40 years ago, listed assurance of God's continuous love as first in the needs of aging individuals.

That poses the question: Are our senior citizens receiving adequate support in this area? The prudent answer is, "yes and no." Organized churches offer a menu of numerous activities available to oldsters ranging from juvenile games to college level intellectual challenges. These efforts are geared to the individual's theistic leanings while encouraging social intercourse.

The all-important need for transportation to places of worship is frequently supplied by the churches themselves or by the residential homes where the potential worshippers reside. This constitutes a literal God-send! Parochial visits by church representatives provide the most intimate and effective support, but the supply of available clergy is limited. Easy approaches to the church building and easily reachable seating with a few hearing appliances can greatly reduce physical barriers to communication.

The drawback to all of the above is propensity for many oldsters to draw back. They are inadvertently elbowed out of the arena of activity to the back, where they sit silently and refrain from participation. They appear chary of transportation, shy with visitors and in many ways, dig their well of loneliness even deeper. An active, not dormant, faith can best be encouraged by an alert clergy, and reversed by persistent effort on everyone's part, along with the all important cooperation of the patient.

Obviously the lot of a priest, rabbi, pastor, imam or lama is not an easy one, but one reaping great rewards. What could be greater than to help a person gain the sense of belonging to the eternal universe and the Master of creation! For those who actively attempt to negate those expressions of love per religiosity, remember God's directive to Beelzebub: "Go to hell!"

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

'Thin skin' more than just expression

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The average person has a pretty thin skin, says the chief of dermatology at the University of Rochester.

It varies in width, depending upon what part of the body it covers, between one and four millimeters, so it's never much thicker than the cover of a hardbound book, says Dr. Lowell Goldsmith.

The skin's job is to package the human body, notes Goldsmith, or to "keep inside the body what should be kept in, and prevent from entering the body what should not enter."

Wildlife group blasts Baylor's live mascot

WACO (AP) — Baylor University's use of bears as live mascots has come under fire from a wildlife park director. But school spirit is hampering Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation's attempts to end the practice.

"I know that there's no plan to ship off the bears that we have," Mike Bishop, vice president of university communications, said Wednesday.

"I'm not precluding that over the horizon things couldn't be considered, but there's no intention to give up the bears that we have because the students love the bears and they don't mistreat the bears," he said.

Lynn Cuny, director of the San Antonio animal rescue group, disagrees with Baylor's use of live bears at school-related functions.

"I do not feel, in this day and age of environmental awareness, that a higher education institution can say, 'We're here to educate and to teach young people to be responsible, but we're still going to do this,' " said Ms. Cuny.

She recently agreed to care for Baylor's retired mascot Judge Scott Adams, after the bear became aggressive. Ms. Cuny now says Baylor should help the non-profit organization pay for Scott's care.

But Neal Knighton, co-sponsor of the student club that cares for the mascots on campus, said he believes the group was irresponsible to take the bear if they couldn't afford to care for it.

"I think it is inhumane for an organization to accept animals without having the money to take care of them," said Knighton.

He said Baylor gets a new bear every two years. Bears more than 2 years old are not used because they become too large to control.

The older animals are donated to a zoo or wildlife park in Texas, officials said.

"We don't just go and give it to any Joe Shmoe," Johnny Williams, the current student trainer, said. "We become emotionally attached to them. We want to make sure they're well taken care of."

Ms. Cuny said she was more concerned about giving Scott a good home than getting paid to care for him.

Southwest Conference schools with live mascots include the University of Houston, the University of Texas, Southern Methodist and Texas Tech, which uses a horse ridden by a masked matador.

Neighborhood resists home for retarded plan

DALLAS (AP) — A planned home for the mentally retarded is opposed by a neighborhood association which contends a county agency tried to deceive it about acquiring the site.

The choice of the McShann Road area rather than a white neighborhood in North Dallas was also racist, residents said.

"Why on this street?" Dallas County Commissioner Jim Jackson said Thursday. "This is a rather old and established neighborhood and a rather unique African-American neighborhood in my district."

Jackson said he would try to stop the county's Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center from opening the group home until the decision can be investigated.

The vacant lot on McShann Road, an area of affluent black professionals, is one of five sites that the county MHMR has targeted for home construction by February.

But the McShann Road Neighborhood Association said MHMR officials, who bought the lot in July, tried to keep the purchase a secret.

"They've been deceptive," said Robert Prince, whose house is located next door to the lot. "They didn't take the 'for sale' sign down until this morning."

Association members complained to Jackson after a meeting Tuesday with MHMR officials.

"The meeting was like a military briefing," said Prince.

Planners propose toll roads

DALLAS (AP) — Highway planners Thursday were considering toll lanes on existing routes as a possible answer to increasingly snarled freeways in North Texas.

Members of a regional transportation committee in Fort Worth were examining a study by the North Central Texas Council of Governments. The report identified 18 projects along new and existing corridors that could be financed through tolls.

"We need to evaluate the possibility of building freeway express lanes as toll facilities in all existing corridors where it is feasible if we are serious about improving mobility," Michael Morris, the council's director of transportation, said.

"We are talking about new construction projects only," he said. "Converting existing freeway lanes to toll facilities is against the law, and we are not considering that option at all."

Morris was in the regional transportation meeting Thursday and did not immediately return a call to The Associated Press.

"Toll roads are a good way to build roads when you want them, instead of when the highway department says you're going to get them," Tarrant County Judge Tom Vandergriff told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Morales sues mental health care firm

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales Thursday filed suit against a mental health care company, accusing it of illegally paying a "bounty hunter" to find crime victim patients the company could use to siphon state victim compensation funds.

After filing suit against Psychiatric Institutes of America Inc. and PIA of Fort Worth Inc., Morales said the action represented just "the tip of the iceberg" in a kickback scam that has affected thousands of Texans and tens of millions of state dollars.

Bales

Morales said an investigation was prompted by "an alarming rise" during the last year in payments made from the state's victim compensation fund. More than $23 million was paid from the fund in fiscal year 1991, officials said.

"The skyrocketing payments made to bogus therapies now threaten to drain the crime victims' fund, undermine its very existence, and prolong the profound pain the crime victims and their families carry with them day after day," Morales said.

The lawsuit was filed in state district court in Houston. Judge Scott Brister of Fort Worth signed a temporary restraining order preventing the companies from paying for patient referrals, Morales spokesman Gray McBride said.

In the lawsuit, Morales charged that a contract between PIA paid Recovery Line Inc. violated new state law which makes it illegal to pay — or receive payment — for mental patient referrals.

Morales also froze $3.1 million in unpaid PIA victim compensation claims and placed a moratorium on some $10 million in claims on the fund filed by other mental health care companies.

In the lawsuit, Morales charged that a contract between PIA paid Recovery Line Inc. violated new state law which makes it illegal to pay — or receive payment — for mental patient referrals.

PIA paid Recovery Line a "finder's fee" for each patient referred, and its $155,000 monthly overhead, Morales alleged.

Although Morales said he expected additional civil or criminal legal action against alleged medical kickback schemes in the near future, he said PIA was singled out because it is a major service provider and had the "clearest violations" of state law.

"We believe this is a massive concern," Morales said. "We fear that we may just be scratching the surface, and that is, I suppose, the most troublesome notion of all."

PIA is affiliated with 11 psychiatric hospitals around the state, including Colonial Hills Hospital in San Antonio.

Colonial Hills, the target of a separate investigation into allegedly detaining psychiatric patients against their will, announced Wednesday that it was adopting new detention measures.

Joanne Hopkins, an Austin attorney with the law firm Fulbright & Jaworski, said PIA officials "intend to cooperate in this investigation."

"Prior to learning of the lawsuit, which they just learned about in this press conference, they had made a decision to terminate the agreement with Recovery Line," Ms. Hopkins said.

David Brockett, an administrator with PIA Fort Worth, said, "I can't really answer any questions right now."

"The corporate office for PIA is preparing an announcement that will be released later this afternoon. Beyond that, I'm not really in a position to comment," Brockett said.

Tennis star, friend struggle for pact

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — A lawyer warned counsel for Martina Navratilova that she and former lover Judy Nelson would suffer "devastating" emotional stress if their palimony lawsuit was not settled out of court, according to testimony Thursday.

"If litigation is filed, the press here and abroad will have a field day," contended Jerry Loftin, an attorney for Nelson, in a letter sent four months ago to Mike McCurley, Navratilova's Dallas lawyer.

Nelson

"The emotional stress and strain on an ordinary individual would be devastating and seemingly catastrophic to an athlete attempting to perform," Loftin wrote last spring. "... Both sides will be the loser."

McCurley produced the letter and read excerpts into the record during cross-examination of a witness in a bizarre preliminary hearing in which Navratilova is attempting to have Loftin removed as Nelson's attorney.

Testimony in the pretrial issue began Monday, but has been overshadowed all week by on-again, off-again negotiations of a settlement. Those talks pparently broke off Thursday.

The tennis celebrity's lawyers maintained Loftin was negligent when representing her in previous legal matters, including a controversial document that lies at the heart of the current dispute.

They also insist that Loftin's role in a previous agreement between Navratilova and another former companion, Nancy Lieberman-Cline, gave Loftin confidential knowledge of the player's affairs that should preclude his representing Nelson.

Nelson, 45, contends the 34-year-old Navratilova breached the so-called "non-marital cohabitation agreement" signed in 1986, a pact sources said could cost Navratilova as much as $4.5 million.

The couple's relationship ended earlier this year.

In his letter of last May 13, Loftin warned McCurley that a trial of a lawsuit would have not only personal but financial consequences.

"Aside from the emotional devastation that this lawsuit would have on both parties," he said, "is the effects that this litigation would have on the future earnings and income of both parties, including general revenues that would unquestionably be jeopardized for both by the public airing of their partnership."

At one point in the letter, Loftin said: "This is not a threat, Mike. But we either go forward in good faith ... or we go to court."

The letter was reviewed during questioning of Edwin Bell, a Fort Worth attorney who had been called by Loftin as an expert on legal ethics. Bell began his testimony Wednesday afternoon.

In separate action Thursday, attorney Gary DeShazo filed a motion that would make Loftin a party to the lawsuit and potentially liable for money Navratilova might lose.

State District Judge Harry Hopkins took the motion under advisement and was expected to rule on it Sept. 20.

Feds charge Colorado City S&L officers

DALLAS (AP) — A former executive and three other employees for a failed Colorado City thrift have plead guilty charges of bank fraud and conspiracy, federal officials said.

Neva C. Turner, the former chief executive officer of First Western Savings & Loan Association, was charged Wednesday in Dallas with participating in a conspiracy to steal more than $500,000 for investment in the stock market.

The indictment also names three former employees of the West Texas thrift. Katy Byrd, Roy Byrd and Marilyn Roberts were all charged with conspiracy.

The defendants have reached plea bargain agreements with federal prosecutors and all have pleaded guilty, according to FBI Agent Oliver B. Revell.

Turner and the others are accused of knowingly writing hot checks between March 1985 and July 1987, Revell said a prepared statement.

The personal checks, which Turner ordered First Western to pay, were used to buy stocks at a brokerage firm located in Amarillo. The accounts were later consolidated into one account under the name of Western Crest, Inc.

Last May, FBI agents seized more than $102,000 left in the account.

As part of the plea bargain, the defendants have agreed cooperate with federal authorities and pay restitution to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Thomas admits being Dallas fan

Associated Press

Clarence Thomas may be holding his cards close to the vest on his opinions about abortion and other important issues, but he's making no secret of which National Football League team he supports.

The Supreme Court nominee on Wednesday brought praise for his bravery when he told Washington lawmakers he's for America's Team.

"I've been a Dallas Cowboys fan for 25 years," Thomas announced to a capacity crowd at his confirmation hearing in the Senate Caucus Room.

Thomas told The Dallas Morning News later that he has been a fan since the Cowboys drafted Olympic sprinter "Bullet" Bob Hayes.

Senators in the Capitol Hill hearing, not far from Washington Redskins home, Robert F. Kennedy Stadium, thanked Thomas for his candor.

"To have you in this nest of Redskin fans to be a Dallas Cowboy fan certainly discloses a degree of independence which will serve you very well on the court," said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

Rockets court 'Microwave'

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets reportedly are courting former Detroit Pistons guard Vinnie "The Microwave" Johnson to bolster their bench scoring.

Mitch Frankel, Johnson's agent, conferred with Rockets general manager Steve Patterson on Wednesday, The Houston Post reported.

"We're interested," Patterson said. "Vinnie Johnson would represent a nice insurance policy for us. If one of our guards got hurt, having a guy like Vinnie — with all that championship experience — would be a big benefit to the club.

"We'll just have to see how this thing unfolds. Realistically, there probably are teams in a better position to make an offer for Vinnie from a salary-cap standpoint."

WLAF vote tabled

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The NFL deferred until its October ownership meeting a decision on the continued operation of the World League of American Football.

But Dan Rooney, chairman of the new league's board of directors, said "there was overwhelming support by the leagues's shareholders to go forward."

'Dogs set for home opener

■ After a season-opening loss at Lubbock Monterey, Midland High looks for its first win by hosting Class 4A Monahans.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

It will be Class 4A against Class 5A at 8 p.m. today in Memorial Stadium when the Monahans Loboes visit the Midland High Bulldogs, but if you have visions of big brother beating up on little sister, you will be attending the wrong game.

Monahans is figured to be in a four-way fight for two playoff berths in District 2-4A with Sweetwater, Big Spring and Andrews, one of the toughest 4A districts in the state.

And last year it took a last-ditch field goal for MHS to come out with a 17-14 victory.

"Monahans has more depth than any 4A team I've ever seen," Midland High coach Davis Corley said. "They are three deep at most positions. We feel that they are better than they were in 1989 when they went to the quarterfinals."

Monahans coach Bren Holland, however, thinks it is a big difference when you move up a class to play.

"It's always difficult when you move up in class," Holland said. "Especially in that district (4-5A). They have to fight every week there just to stay alive and the coaches are just super. It will be a challenge for us, but we want the challenge. We think it's going to help us down the road, win or lose. We just hope we can keep it in the same range as last year."

Key injuries to both teams could play an important role in tonight's contest. Midland High starting offensive right tackle William Merritt broke his wrist in practice this week, forcing Corley to move starting center Philip Warlick to tackle and sophomore Banaise Blake into his first starting assignment at center.

"We came out of the Monterey game with no big injuries and then have Merritt go down in practice," Corley said. "We're in fine shape other than revamping the whole right side of our offensive line."

But Holland, too, saw injuries deplete the depth of his Loboes in a 17-7 win

Rebels head for border

■ Looking for its second win of the year, Midland Lee travels to the banks of the Rio Grande to play Del Rio.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

DEL RIO — Just when it seemed that Midland Lee had overcome a string of bad-luck injuries early in the 1991 football season, the Rebels lost cornerback Mike Lambert indefinitely on the first play of the first game of the season.

Lambert, whose knee gave way while making a cut on the Memorial Stadium grass in Lee's 13-3 win over El Paso Andress last week, could have ligament damage and will probably need arthroscopic surgery.

It's enough to make Rebel fans wonder what might transpire tonight, as the 1-0 Rebs hit the road for an 8 p.m. game against the Del Rio Rams on one of the most superstitious days of the year — Friday the 13th.

Lee will be playing against an improved Ram team, picked by some to win District 29-5A, and though Rebel head coach Earl Miller may dismiss Friday the 13th, he doesn't overlook

Miami routs Cougars, 41-10

Associated Press

MIAMI — Miami sent Houston's space-age offense back to the stone age Thursday night and probably ruined the Heisman Trophy hopes of David Klingler.

The second-ranked Hurricanes shut down Houston's record-breaking quarterback and Gino Torretta threw four touchdown passes to humble the No. 10 Cougars 40-10 in an error-plagued game.

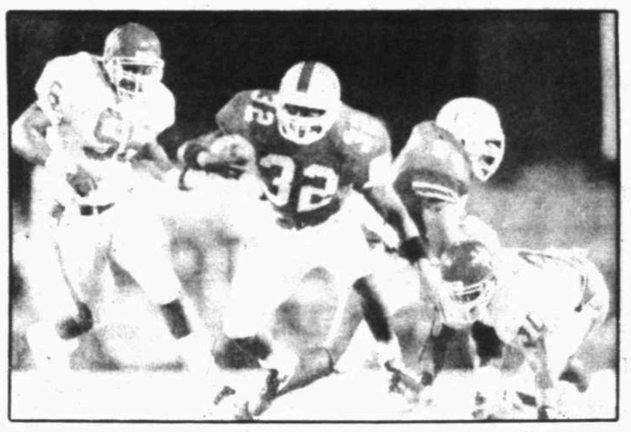

It was Miami's 39th straight victory at the Orange Bowl, tying Notre Dame for the second-longest home winning streak in NCAA history.

Klingler, who threw nine touchdown passes in Houston's season-opening 73-3 rout of Louisiana Tech and set an NCAA record with 54 TD tosses last season, didn't get one against Miami's dominating defense until the final 3 seconds.

He completed 32 of 59 passes for only 216 yards, 83 fewer than his lowest total last season, and was sacked five times before a stunned crowd of 71,842 and a national television audience.

Houston (1-1) had more penalties than points in the first half against Miami (2-0), whose defensive line was too quick and strong for the Cougars' inexperienced offensive front.

The Hurricanes led 30-3 at halftime and continued their domination in the second half, scoring on a 51-yard pass from Torretta to Kevin Williams and a 29-yard field goal by Carlos Huerta.

Miami fullback Martin Patton (32) breaks through the middle of the Houston defense.

Torretta, overshadowed by Klingler in the pregame publicity, outplayed his more famous counterpart. The junior quarterback completed 16 of 35 passes for 365 yards, including two TD tosses apiece to Williams and Lamar Thomas.

MHS, Lee still looking for offenses

It could be Midland's city anthem: "Where has all the offense gone, long time passing. Gone to graveyards every one."

At least, Midland High and Midland Lee seemed to put their offensive attacks in the bone yard in Week 1 of the 1991 football season.

Williamson

This was not an impressive opening week offensively for the locals. For instance, the leading rusher in Midland is Lee quarterback Jimmy Patton — with 35 yards. Midland High's leading rusher was fullback Eddie Redic with 26 yards. Those were the best from each school, not the worst.

Most years local running backs have those kind of numbers by just walking from the bedroom to the kitchen in the morning for breakfast.

Neither Midland High coach Davis Corley nor Midland Lee coach Earl Miller have a real explanation for the power outage.

"We still feel like we have a chance to be a pretty good offensive team, but we didn't show it Friday against Monterey," Corley said while scratching his head. "We just didn't play well. We had receivers open and didn't hit them and the running game didn't do much.

"We've got a long way to go and a short time to do it in. We think there is some potential here, but it hasn't shown itself as of yet. We have to pick it up a few notches and make something happen."

Miller says of his Rebels, "We lost our offense and haven't found it. We had two good scrimmages and then do nothing against Andress. You explain that to me."

Asked if Andress was that good on defense, Miller replied, "Actually, you won't believe this, but the Andress offense was better than their defense. We just had a great defensive game. Their backs ran hard, but we used a split-six defense that Andress had never seen and they never blocked our tackle. Matt Tryon had a game of a life time. I don't think he was ever touched."

In short, we aren't getting many answers. Maybe it was just a bad week. Maybe these teams will make a trek longer than from the bed to the kitchen this week and the world will seem sane again.

Here's how District 4-5A will fare this week after a 5-2 start last week in the picking game:

Monahans 17, Midland High 14: It seems strange that these two teams, separated by only 50 miles, have met only one time since 1951 and that was last year. This should be an even match-up, so go with those who remember last year the most.

Midland Lee 21, Del Rio 7: The Rams are favored to win their district and beat Victoria Stroman 34-0 last week. But the confidence level isn't here yet for the Rams, which means the Rebels should win even if they don't find its complete offense.

Killeen 25, Odessa High 14: Odessa High is 1-0 against the 'Roos, winning the only meeting last year, but Killeen knocked No. 8 ranked Longview out of the Top 10 last week. Enough said.

San Angelo 28, Lubbock Monterey 14: The two teams tied last year in their only meeting and both are said to be better than a year ago. This may be some news that Midland High doesn't want to hear.

Abilene Cooper 30, Richland 20: First win for new Cooper coach Randy Allen. Should have had it last week, but the Cougars failed to score twice from the one-yard line in a 23-22 loss to Class 4A Brownwood.

Sweetwater 21, Abilene High 6: Another Class 4A against Class 5A, but the 4A Mustangs have won five of the last nine meetings. Sweetwater can beat a lot of 5A teams.

Odessa Permian 24, Tyler John Tyler 14: Former Midland Lee player Allen Wilson, who now coaches John Tyler, tasted a victory over Permian in 1968. That's about as long as anyone can expect to own a winning streak against Mojo.

Aldine has to live up to reputation

Associated Press

Being ranked No. 1 in the nation was Aldine coach Bill Smith's pride last year and his problem now.

The Mustangs, who stomped their way to a 15-0 record and the 1990 Class 5A "small school" championship, started 1991 with a 32-6 victory over Houston Madison.

Aldine rushed for 284 yards, including touchdown runs of 66 and 16 yards by Billy Steptoe and 64 yards by Will Skinner, and the Mustangs' defense held Madison to 166 yards. But Smith said he's still battling last year's perfection.

"It is really hard for the kids to understand that that was last year and this is this year," he said. "The attention we're getting now is from what we did last year. We're fighting that a little right now."

The Mustangs also are fighting leg injuries to star quarterback Eric Gray. In a July 6 drive-by incident, Gray was shot eight times in the legs and buttocks. After a speedy initial recovery, he has struggled to regain his muscle strength.

Reginald Prudhomme started in Gray's place last week, but Gray returned to play about half the game, directing the Mustangs on four touchdown drives.

"I still don't believe he's 100 percent," Smith said. "It hasn't been all that long (since the shooting). It's remarkable that he's out there at all. He doesn't have his quickness yet, but we're confident that he'll get there."

In the only other game involving two ranked teams, No. 3 Dallas Carter plays host to No. 8 Marshall.

LEE: Two Ram linemen hurt

(From 1C)

the "Ram-ifications" of playing on the banks of the Rio Grande.

"The advantage is to them. Any time a West Texas team goes down there its an inspiration to them. They're going to play their very best game of the year against us. It will be like a playoff game for them.

"For us, it's just a long road trip, and as a head coach, I just hope we keep our minds on our business," Miller said.

Del Rio head coach Dave Evans, however, sings another tune.

"Lee is a tremendous challenge for us. I just think we need to try to survive. Lee looks great this year, and year-in, year-out they're an excellent ball club. I think they're better than last year," said Evans, whose Rams lost 31-12 to Lee last season in Midland.

"Last week against Andress they were pretty stingy defensively. Offensively, they had a lot of breakdowns with turnovers and fumbles (2). If they can do that against us, it would be greatly appreciated," Evans said.

And it's those facts exactly that have Miller worried.

"It's a strange deal. We had two scrimmages where the defense played better than it did against Andress (despite allowing just 54 total offensive yards against the Eagles), and we were well pleased with the offense.

"We just did some things wrong last week against Andress offensively, little things like missed blocks. It's important for everybody to do their assignments, or you're going to have four quarters of very inconsistent football. We worked hard on that this week," Miller said.

In Del Rio, the Rebels will face a team that racked up 415 offensive yards in its 34-0 season-opening win over Victoria Stroman. In that win, running back Jesse Limon rushed for 107 yards, while John Paul Bilano added 86. Ram quarterback Mario Martinez completed 4-of-7 passing for 86 yards to diversify the Del Rio attack.

However, the injury bug has bitten the Rams too, with defensive linemen Jesse Trevino and Robert Rocha lost for at least this game. Both were named all-district last year, and Trevino (6-2, 270) led the team with 65 tackles.

"We need some line people, and that's where we're going to have a problem," Evans bemoaned. "We can't let them just keep the ball the whole game or we're sunk."

Lee's leading rusher is quarterback Jimmy Patton, who gained a meager 35 yards on 20 carries in the Rebel wishbone. Miller looks for that to change tonight.

"It's a mystery to me (the offense against Andress). I don't really know how good we are offensively, but I feel like we have a good plan so the rest can take care of itself.

"We'll just turn on the lights again on Friday and see if we've improved any," Miller said.

MHS: Lobo QB injured

(From 1C)

against Snyder last week.

Starting senior quarterback Junior Fuentes was injured in the Snyder game and will be replaced with junior Rusty McDonald, who came in to help spark the win against Snyder.

"I couldn't tell any difference when McDonald came into the game when we were looking at the film," Corley notes.

But Holland said, "If Troy Aikman was out, it would hurt the Dallas Cowboys. Anyone who would want to lose their starting quarterback needs to be in a psycho ward somewhere. Still, we have a lot of faith in McDonald and he's our man now."

Monahans fullback Jason Bounds, a transfer from Wink who had over 1,000 yards rushing last year, will also miss tonight's game with a twisted ankle and will be replaced by Randy Ramsey.

Holland said he feels fortunate to have a victory over Snyder.

"Snyder gave us some big turnovers that made a big difference in the game. They're a pretty good team. We feel fortunate to have a win."

Midland High has yet to put any offensive points on the boards, losing to Lubbock Monterey, 27-0, in a road opener last week. The Bulldogs generated just 95 yards rushing and 45 yards passing against the Plainsmen. It is an area that concerns Corley.

"We just don't know where we stand with this team right now," Corley says. "We just didn't play very well against Monterey. We think we are a better team than what we showed Friday, but then again, maybe we aren't. We need some kids to come forward and take charge."

Holland said, "We know Midland is a good option running team and they have a large, sound defense. It's a real challenge for us."

This is a key period of time for the Bulldogs, who need to make something good happen. Next week they have another tough 4A opponent in Andrews, again at Memorial Stadium. Two victories here could vault the Bulldogs back on track as the district opener against Midland Lee looms only three weeks into the future.

Braves keep precarious lead

Associated Press

NL

ATLANTA — Ron Gant broke out of a 4-for-32 slump with a solo homer and RBI single and Charlie Leibrandt won his sixth straight decision as Atlanta held on to first place in the NL West with a 5-1 victory against San Diego on Thursday night.

Atlanta, 41-20 overall and 25-7 at home since the All-Star break, extended its winning streak to a season-high seven games. The Braves held a one-half game lead over Los Angeles entering the day, with the Dodgers coming to Atlanta Stadium to start a three-game series today.

Gant's 29th homer in the third inning broke a 1-1 tie off Bruce Hurst (15-7), who had won six of his last seven decisions.

Leibrandt (15-11), who became the third Braves' starter with at least 15 victories, allowed five hits, struck out four and walked three in seven innings. Mike Stanton pitched one inning and Jim Clancy finished.

Dodgers 6, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Los Angeles kept pace with first-place Atlanta as Darryl Strawberry and Kal Daniels hit homers in a four-run 10th inning for a victory over Houston.

The Dodgers head into a three-game series in Atlanta trailing the Braves by one-half game in the NL West.

With the score 2-2, Brett Butler walked with one out in the 10th off Al Osuna (7-6). Lenny Harris was then hit by a pitch before Strawberry hit his 23rd homer. One out later, Daniels hit his 15th home run.

Strawberry's homer was his sixth this year in the Astrodome, tying Dale Murphy's season record by an opponent.

Roger McDowell (8-8) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Cardinals 1, Pirates 0

ST. LOUIS — Ken Hill gave up two hits in 6 2-3 innings for his first victory in more than two months and Felix Jose drove in the only run with a bases-loaded walk from Doug Drabek as St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh in 94-degree weather.

The loss kept the Pirates' magic number for clinching the National League East at 14.

Reds 7, Giants 3

CINCINNATI — Mariano Duncan homered twice to rally the Cincinnati Reds to a victory over the San Francisco Giants.

It was the second two-homer game of the season for Duncan, both of them coming during a barrage of seven homers and 17 RBIs since he returned from the disabled list Aug. 23. He has three homers in his last three games.

The first five Cincinnati runs were off loser Paul McClellan (3-4), who gave up seven hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Mets 6, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Howard Johnson had three RBIs and scored the go-ahead run, lifting the New York Mets to a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Johnson's two-run double in the seventh broke open a close game, giving the victory to Anthony Young (2-1), who allowed two earned runs and just four hits in six innings.

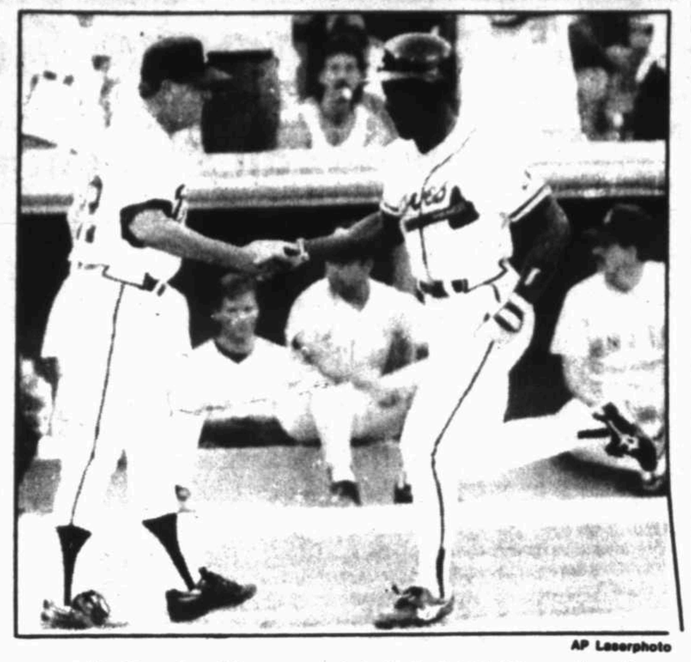

Johnson, whose three RBIs gave him 101 for the season, doubled off Les Lancaster, who relieved starter Mike Bielecki (13-9) after Keith Miller walked and Kevin Elster singled with two outs. Johnson hit a line drive past first baseman Mark Grace and into the right field corner, scoring both runners for a 6-3 lead.

Expos 6, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA — Larry Walker had three hits, including a homer, and drove in three runs as the Montreal Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies for their seventh victory in eight games.

Chris Nabholz (5-7) gave up seven hits, struck out four and walked three in 7 2-3 innings for the victory. It was also the 11th win in 13 games for the last-place Expos.

The Expos made it 4-0 in the second on Grissom's RBI grounder to chase Ruffin in one-plus innings.

Atlanta's Ron Gant is congratulated at third base by Jimy Williams after hitting a third-inning home run Thursday.

Braves-Dodgers series opens today

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Los Angeles Dodgers have had a few things to say about the upstart Atlanta Braves. But as the two teams prepare for a three-game weekend series that could help decide the NL West, the Braves are choosing a low-key approach.

"It's no big deal," said team leader Terry Pendleton, the third baseman who is having an MVP-type season. "We've got to go out and play baseball. I hope we can do that instead of worrying about all the hype."

The series has been sold out for weeks as the teams have stayed abreast of each other down the stretch. They will meet again next weekend in Los Angeles.

"I'm looking forward to it. The fan support has been great. This place will be rockin' and rollin' and the tomahawks will be flying," said Braves catcher Greg Olson. "This is what it's all about. It's not often you get a chance to play in a big series like this."

Manager Bobby Cox, however, said he wasn't going to make a big deal of the series.

"I'm not even thinking about it," he said. "Not one bit."

The Braves have said very little to fire up the rival Dodgers, who hold an 8-4 edge in their series this year. Some of the Dodgers, however, have tried to stir things up.

Darryl Strawberry started it by saying he was "not concerned" about the Braves.

Ryans earns 10th win of season

Associated Press

AL

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan became only the second pitcher to reach double figures in victories in 20 different seasons, leading the Texas Rangers over the Minnesota Twins 4-3 Thursday night.

Ryan (10-6) allowed one run and two hits in seven innings, struck out nine and walked one. It was the 312th victory of his career, moving him past Tom Seaver and into 14th place on the career list. Ryan needs two more victories to equal Gaylord Perry, who is 13th.

The only pitcher to reach double figures in victories more times than Ryan is Don Sutton, who did it 21 times. Ryan had been tied with Cy Young and Phil Niekro at 19.

Ryan, who retired the first nine batters in order, made his longest outing since coming off the disabled list Aug. 18. Wayne Rosenthal gave up a hit in the eighth and Jeff Russell finished for his 27th save, allowing a two-run homer to Chili Davis, his 28th.

Jack Morris (16-11) gave up four runs in the first inning. Brian Downing and Julio Franco singled and Rafael Palmeiro hit a sacrifice fly for the first run. Ruben Sierra singled and Kevin Reimer hit a three-run homer, his 17th.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — The Boston Red Sox closed within 3½ games of first-place Toronto in the AL East, beating the New York Yankees for their eighth victory in nine games.

Mike Greenwell drove in three runs, including two with a first-inning single, and Jack Clark hit a two-run single in the fifth for the Red Sox.

Kevin Morton (5-3) allowed both runs and five hits in 6 2-3 innings. Greg Harris got four outs and Tony Fossas finished the eight-hitter.

Pascual Perez (1-3) allowed four runs and five hits in 4 2-3 innings as the Yankees lost their seventh straight, their longest losing streak this season. Perez struck out five and walked three.

Brewers 7, Tigers 0

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff hit a bases-loaded triple that capped a six-run seventh inning as the Milwaukee Brewers beat Detroit and sent the Tigers to their 10th loss in 14 games.

Detroit, shut out four times in 14 games, dropped 5½ games behind AL East-leading Toronto and two behind second-place Boston. The Tigers managed just four hits off four Milwaukee pitchers.

The Brewers, who had just three runs in 41 innings entering the game, finally scored off Mark Leiter (8-4) in the sixth and broke it open in the seventh.

Chris Bosio (11-10) allowed four hits in six-plus innings. Julio Machado, Mark Lee and Doug Henry finished with hitless relief.

Indians 6, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Charles Nagy pitched eight strong innings and the Cleveland Indians took advantage of seven walks to beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Carlos Martinez and Reggie Jefferson each drove in two runs for the Indians. Orioles starter Jose Mesa (5-10) walked six in four-plus innings.

Cal Ripken hit his 28th homer, matching his career-high.

Andretti's title chances still alive

Staff Report

John Andretti, driving for the Midland based Pennzoil-Hall/VDS racing team, will be making a nostalgic return to Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course today through Sunday with hopes of keeping alive his chances for the CART PPG Cup Indy car points championship.

With four of 17 races remaining and a maximum of 88 points at stake before the champion is crowned, Andretti is pleased to be taking his next stand on the road course where he first co-drove with his cousin Michael in a major race in a Corvette GTP in 1987.

"I also drove at Mid-Ohio in my second Indy car race ever," Andretti recalls. "I have a good feeling about Mid-Ohio from the racing I have enjoyed there in the past and from the good testing I've had there with the Hall/VDS team this year."

Andretti has 98 points in the season driving championship race, 59 points behind leader Bobby Rahal. Currently sixth in points, with only eight drivers remaining with a mathematical chance to be champion, Andretti is one point out of fifth place.

"We have a big point disadvantage to overcome," Andretti conceded, "and that means our place in the point standings depends as much on what happens to the leaders as it does on how the Pennzoil team fares.

"But we can't worry about the other guys. We can only concentrate on our own efforts."

Andretti might be even closer to the top of the standings if he hadn't fallen victim to bad luck in his last start at Vancouver.

Running fourth behind the drivers who finished 1-2-3 in the race, Andretti had already made his final pit stop and was hoping to gain one, two or all of those positions when the three front-runners pitted.

However, on lap 64 of the 100-lap race, Andretti was slowing for traffic in a tight corner when he was struck from behind and spun out. That cost him two laps and that's where he finished, two laps back.

The Hall/VDS team is co-owned by Midlanders Count Rudy van der Straten, Franz Weiz, Jim Hall and Jim Hall Jr.

Michigan has own 'Rocket'

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The film grinds steadily through the projector and Lou Holtz has to stop and rub his eyes. It's like he's seen a ghost on the screen.

The Notre Dame coach is watching film of Michigan, this week's opponent. And he can't take his eyes off No. 21 — split end Desmond Howard, who reminds Holtz of Rocket Ismail.

In Michigan's opening-game victory over Boston College last week, Howard scored four of the Wolverines' five touchdowns. He caught seven passes for 86 yards and three TDs, and he ran the second-half kickoff back 93 yards for another score.

A very Rocket-like performance.

"Desmond Howard may be the best receiver in the country," Holtz said. "He's a lot like Rocket in the things he does. He reminds me so much of Rocket."

The similarity isn't lost on Michigan coach Gary Moeller, either. His hope is that Howard, a redshirt junior, can continue to provide the Wolverines the kind of lift he gave them against Boston College.

The No. 3 Wolverines take on the No. 7 Irish at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in Michigan Stadium.

"Desmond played a great, great game," Moeller said. "He caught the first TD pass, even though he was interfered with. That's a good sign that he's learned from last year's Michigan State game."

In that game, Howard was bumped while trying to catch the two-point PAT effort that would have given the Wolverines the victory. But he failed to hold on and Michigan was defeated 28-27.

"I've told him that's his job," Moeller said. "Just catch the ball."

That's what made Ismail great. It's why the Toronto Argos backed the money truck up to his door and signed him away from the NFL.

Ismail's clutch play almost enabled him to steal the Heisman Trophy from BYU quarterback Ty Detmer last season. This season another quarterback, Houston's David Klingler, seems to have the inside track on the Heisman.

Desmond Howard could change all that. But it's not his top priority.

"Well, that's kind of a bad word around Michigan," Howard said. "It's against the Michigan policy of 'team.' Everything is done as a unit. But you know, if they're going to give it out, they don't give it to a team."

Seven Notre Dame players have won the Heisman Trophy. But Tom Harmon, in 1940, is the only Heisman winner from Michigan.

"Realistically, I don't see any way I'd ever get it," Howard said. "If Anthony Carter didn't win it, then you know it has to be out of reach for a Michigan wide receiver to get it. I mean, A.C. was the most awesome man to play here."

Howard's four TD's against Boston College made him the seventh player in Michigan history to score four or more in a game, and the first since Rob Lytle in 1975.

And the kickoff return made him only the second Wolverine to take more than one back for a TD. Howard returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown in that Michigan State game last year. He now has accumulated 892 yards on 31 kickoff returns in his career, an average of 28.8 yards per return.

Howard's three TD receptions against Boston College tied him with Ron Kramer and Greg McMurtry for Michigan's single-game record.

"I don't know what it is about me, but making the big play when we're behind is what really gets me going," Howard said. "I like doing the spectacular."

Is it any wonder Holtz feels a familiar tug.

Highsmith comes back on a 'mission'

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Dallas Cowboys fullback Alonzo Highsmith said his recovery from an injured left knee won't cloud his return to the active roster.

In fact, Highsmith said he's coming back "on a mission" after a 10-month layoff.

"I want back what I've lost," Highsmith told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Thursday's editions. "I want it bad. I've been up there before, but I slipped down. I've been so far down I feel like I've been under the mountain.

"This is the first step to slowly climbing back ... ," he said.

Highsmith, expected to play Sunday against Philadelphia, returned to the roster Wednesday.

"This is just stage one," said Highsmith, once considered one of the NFL's best fullbacks. "I have a personal plan I'm going to keep to myself. This is the first level.

"Right now, my main contribution will probably just be blocking," he said. "But I didn't keep on working to come back just to pick up a check or sit on the bench. I'd be lying if I said I didn't want to start; just right now, it's not my main concern."

Surgeons have twice operated on Highsmith's knee, and he wears a thigh-to-shin brace. But his performance during last week's practice impressed coaches and teammates.

"There's no comparison" to last year, Highsmith told the newspaper. "I'm so far ahead of that. I have both my legs under me, and I can actually hit people. Plus I've got my tenacity back. I feel like a soldier, ready to dish out punishment."

Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said there's hope for the player, who ended a holdout Aug. 25 by signing an injury override contract that will pay him $350,000 if he stays healthy or $140,000 if he goes on the injured reserve list.

"Alonzo can be a factor," said Johnson. "He's 100 percent better than a year ago. He's practicing with confidence, and that wasn't the case a year ago. He was pressing, but he wasn't healthy, and he couldn't make things happen.

"Now, he has a better opportunity."

Highsmith, acquired by Dallas a year ago in trades for second-and fifth-round picks, struggled to 48 yards on 19 carries in five starts. He asked to be placed on injured reserve Nov. 7.

"He's night and day from last year," running backs coach Joe Brodsky said. "He'll be a different player."

Cards to see red, as in 'Skins

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Eric Hill, the Cardinals' outstanding linebacker, is about the only one unmoved by Phoenix's 2-0 start — 6-0 counting exhibitions.

"It's not a surprise to us." Hill says. "It might be a shock to everybody else."

The Vegas guys know reality when they see it — the Cards go into RFK Stadium on Sunday as 9-point underdogs against the Washington Redskins.

One reason is that no one figures the Redskins will turn the ball over seven times, as the Rams did; or six times, as the Eagles did.

Another is that no matter how good the Phoenix defense is, it hasn't seen anything that resembles the Washington offense, which has put up 88 points in two games and can probably get a 60-yard field goal from Chip Lohmiller if it needs one.

OK, so this is homecoming week for Joe Bugel, the guy who built the Hogs.

REDSKINS, 30-7

Kansas City (plus 4) at Houston (Monday night)

Why only a 4-point spread, when:

—Albert Lewis, the Chiefs best cornerback may not play; Kevin Ross, their second best, is limping; and Jayice Pearson, the third best, is out.

—Last year, Warren Moon went to Kansas City and picked apart one of the NFL's best secondaries for 527 yards.

—The Oilers have outscored the Raiders and Bengals 77-24 the first two weeks.

Aw shucks ...

CHIEFS, 21-17.

Giants (minus 1½) at Chicago

A characteristic of the Ray Handley era (two regular-season games and four exhibitions): the Giants win one then lose one.

Another characteristic: They've beaten the Bills (exhibition) and 49ers (regular season); lost to the Browns and Patriots (exhibitions).

The Bears are an up team and this is an up week.

GIANTS, 13-6

Rams (plus 3) at New Orleans (Sunday night)

Only five times in 25 years have the Saints started 1-0. This is the only year they've been 2-0. Anyone for three?

SAINTS, 13-7

NFL Picks

San Francisco (minus 2½) at Minnesota

Herschel Walker will NOT run for 125 yards. Steve Young might.

49ERS, 24-17

Buffalo (minus 8½) at Jets

Repeating ...

Who can stop Buffalo? Who can Buffalo stop? The Bills average 44 points and allow 32.

BILLS 44-32

Philadelphia (plus 3½) at Dallas

This game just doesn't seem right without Buddy Ryan to heckle the JJs. Or without Randall Cunningham.

COWBOYS, 17-9

Seattle (plus 6) at Denver

Why does this game seem to be played about eight times a year? Why does Seattle always finish 9-7?

BRONCOS, 9-7.

Cincinnati (minus 3½) at Cleveland

Aren't the Browns the team that's supposed to have been outscored 75-21 in its first two games?

BROWNS 20-14

Miami (minus 1½) at Detroit

Statistical corner: Since 1984, the Dolphins are 2-1 indoors the week after they play Indianapolis. Win No. 300 for Don Shula.

DOLPHINS, 24-16

Indianapolis (plus 8) at Raiders

Statistical corner II: The Raiders have been outscored 47-17 indoors this season. But they play this one outdoors. Win No. 21 for Art Shell.

RAIDERS 27-13

Atlanta (plus 1½) at San Diego

Statistical corner III: The Falcons have lost 19 straight on the road. Question: Who does San Diego fire this week? Win No. 41 for Jerry Glanville.

FALCONS, 17-14

Tampa Bay (plus 4½) at Green Bay

The world eagerly awaits Vinny against Bryce Paup.

BUCS, 20-17

Pittsburgh (minus 14) at New England

Dick MacPherson's sideline dancing days are over.

Alamo City courts NFL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city will file an application Monday asking that San Antonio be awarded a National Football League franchise, Mayor Nelson Wolff said.

Wolff said the application does not mean he won't be a supporter of the San Antonio Riders, the World League of American Football franchise.

Fall Fashion Forecast:

DESIGNERS FLIP FOR SKIRTS THAT MOVE, BRILLIANT COLORS AND LOTS OF LEG WORK

Pleated, gored, flared, the wonderfully flirtatious, flippy short skirt is starting to be seen everywhere, in suits, in separates, and especially in dresses. It's a leg flatterer, and with hemlines above the knee, it's nice to know these skirts won't rise when you sit. City shorts continue strong - with a more relaxed leg for skirt-like femininity.

Jackets required...in a wide and varied spectrum of silhouettes, jackets continue to be the "must have" wardrobe stretchers of the season, especially when color-blocked, embellished or patched in longer single breasted styles, or when tailored in menswear fabrics. Tunics and vests substitute from time to time to add variety.

Red hot..red is the number one color of the season. Look for bright red along with other jewel tones and neon brights teamed with black and color-blocked, plaided, paisley printed in ultra modern as well as new interpretations of retro-romantic looks.

Check the details. From oversized zippers made to show, to leather and suede trims in unexpected places and fabulous buttons that act like fashion jewelry, details are hallmarks of fall '91. Add a touch of glitter by day with faux jewel embellished blouses and jackets or fake jewelry that's actually printed on necklines.

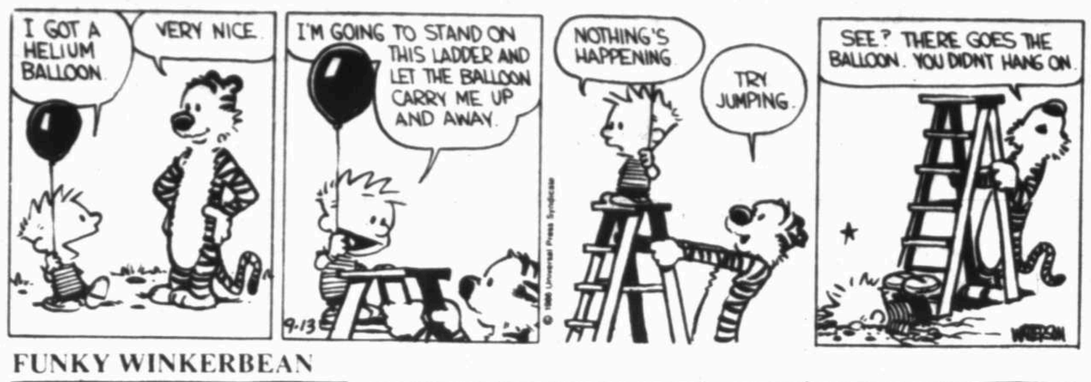

Leather and suede are better than ever, too, with all the style and color options that used to be reserved for fabric. Newest now, mixed media, metallics and patents, especially in outerwear, handbags and shoes.

On the accessory scene, the legs have it! No surprise - with rising hemlines, designers have created excitingly patterned and printed opaque hosiery, as well as tights and leggings to rival the on-going stirrup pant worn under big tops and tunics.

In fashion, at least, it looks like winter will be real hot!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You find yourself in the driver's seat where romance or a business deal is concerned. Strike while the iron is hot! You can expect the unexpected, beginning in October. Wedding plans will materialize during the Christmas holidays. Be careful not to neglect family life in January and February of 1992. Ending a disappointing alliance brings peace of mind in April. Celebrate a new partnership as next summer gets under way. August is the best time to visit the beach.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Jacqueline Bisset and Claudette Colbert, singers Mel Torme and Nell Carter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friends play a bigger part in your affairs now. Recognize that this could make certain relatives feel jealous. A new diet or lifestyle will change your self-image for the better. Have fun!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put your best foot forward. You receive a wonderful bonus or promotion for a job well-done. Traveling to Europe for business or pleasure is both exciting and profitable.

GEMINI (May-21-June 20): Turn a hobby into a paying proposition. Your personal relationships demand greater care. Curb a tendency to act on impulse or be indiscreet. Mate is more conventional than you think.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be flexible. Some readjustments are necessary when a spouse rejoins the work force. An inheritance will help you send a teen-ager to college. Your popularity soars to new heights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your partner's success could bring about a change of lifestyle that conflicts with your beliefs. A compromise may be necessary. A second honeymoon will help cement marital ties. Let mate set the pace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Trust your intuition in business; the experts are not always right. Challenge yourself instead of being so competitive with other people. Team efforts are favored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you are down in the dumps, treat yourself! Plan an exciting weekend with people who share your interests. A platonic relationship is gradually changing. Be on the lookout for new job opportunities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to be distracted from pursuing your cherished goals. Get right to the point in an argument. Having a heart-to-heart talk with a teen-ager could turn things around. Do more listening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Start looking to your defenses, especially if you have been riding someone too hard. Translate an idealistic plan into reality. Hard work will accomplish miracles!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Meddling in someone's affairs could bring you a sharp rebuff. Keep any radical notions under your hat. Entertaining at home helps you stretch your dollars. Keep the guest list short and select.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It will take great patience and ingenuity to cope with a key associate's dark mood or troubles. Keep your temper in check. You can do it if you really try!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go straight to the source. Make your wishes known to those who can give you what you want. Beating about the bush only causes delays. Lay your cards on the table.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intellectual, open-minded and thorough. They like to plan ahead and try not to leave anything to chance. Although highly competitive in school, these Virgos will become more relaxed with maturity. They prefer mental challenges to physical feats and tend to have "brainy" friends. Count on these Virgos to be practical even in romance. They know that a spouse who shares their intellectual interests will be supportive and not resent their preoccupation with work.

It was with considerable misgivings that Votmai Tinkinof, the Russian emigre noted for his rapid-fire, if inaccurate, play entered the club on Friday the 13th. After all, weren't the Little People involved in a conspiracy against him?

Votmai was soon declarer at a four-spade contract which was impeccable. After North made a limit raise of three spades, declarer did not have nearly enough to do more than bid game.

West led the queen of hearts. "Cover an honor," muttered the Russian, and the king was duly decapitated by the ace. West won the heart return and shifted to a club. This time the finesse of the queen lost. Declarer won the diamond return, drew trumps and took another club finesse—down one.

"I should have known," complained Votmai. "Three cards wrong!"

The only one who had cause for complaint was Votmai's partner. Declarer's hurry to play to the first trick had blown the contract.

Let's take a look to see what would have happened had declarer exhibited technique rather than a knowledge of bridge rubrics. We'll start by refusing to cover the queen of hearts at trick one.

If West perseveres with hearts, declarer will eventually draw trumps, strip diamonds with the help of a ruff and then take a club finesse. East can win, but is endplayed and forced to lead into the club tenace or yield a ruff-sluff.

Best defense is to shift to a club at trick two, but declarer has a neat counter. South shoots up with the ace of clubs, draws trumps, cashes the ace and king of diamonds and ruffs a diamond. Declarer then exits with the king of hearts to endplay East. No matter what East does, the defenders will get only one club trick. Try it.

Ex-'L.A. Law' star, 'Knots Landing' star tie the knot

CARMEL VALLEY, Calif. — Former "L.A. Law" star Harry Hamlin and "Knots Landing" actress Nicollette Sheridan were married in a poolside ceremony last weekend, the newlywed's publicist said Thursday.

The wedding at the Stone Pine Chateau was private, said spokesman Richard Grant who provided few details.

About 130 guests attended, including Blair Underwood of "L.A. Law," Dudley Moore and author Jackie Collins.

Hamlin, 39, wore a black tuxedo and Sheridan, wore a pearled-ivory wedding dress with five-foot train. The age of the British actress wasn't disclosed.

After her honeymoon, Sheridan was scheduled to be back next week on the "Knots Landing" set. Hamlin left "L.A. Law" at the end of last season.

MIDDLESBORO, Ky. — City Council members still want to honor a native-grown celebrity by naming a street Lee Majors Boulevard.

Naming a road for Majors has been a council issue since August and remains undecided.

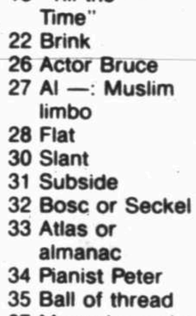

But if the 51-year-old actor has anything to say about it, Majors said he prefers they name a street for one of his first- or second-grade teachers.

"Any number of heroes of mine are more than deserving of such an honor," Majors wrote in a letter to the City Council published this week in The Daily News of Middlesboro.

Majors, born in Wyandotte, Mich., spent formative years in this city of 12,000 people in southeastern Kentucky. He played high school football so well, he's being inducted Saturday in the Middlesboro Sports Hall of Fame.

Majors starred in the 1970s TV series "The Six Million Dollar Man" and later "The Fall Guy."

OMAHA, Neb. — Vanna White, agile letter-turner on the "Wheel of Fortune" television game show, will do her thing as special guest at the opening of a shopping mall next month.

White will spin the "Oak View Mall game wheel" to select grand prize winners who will have lunch with her in a "Dine With Vanna" contest for the Oct. 17 event, mall officials said.

NEW YORK — The varied and coinciding careers of David Crosby, Stephen Stills and Graham Nash will get the boxed-set treatment in a 78-track, four CD retrospective.

The collection produced by Atlantic Records will feature recordings by Crosby, Stills and Nash together and with Neil Young; Crosby and Nash; Stills and Nash; Stills with his band, Manassas; and solo efforts by Crosby, Stills and Nash.

The album, expected in stores Oct. 15, will include 27 previously unreleased tracks — outtakes, live version, demos and never-before-heard material, the record company said.

LOS ANGELES — Sylvester Stallone, perpetual hero of the "Rocky" and "Rambo" films, is suing a Canadian tabloid for $25 million, claiming he was libeled in a story that said steroids left him impotent.

Stallone

"I am not just after the tabloid itself," Stallone, 45, said Thursday. "I'm after every individual involved in this malicious and fabricated gossip to be held accountable to the fullest extent provided by law."

Stallone's suit filed Wednesday in Superior Court said the News Extra of Montreal invaded Stallone's privacy with an Aug. 12 story reporting he bulked up with steroids for the "Rocky" boxing movies.

In a story headlined: "Impotent Stallone Had Secret Sex Surgery, Ravaged By Steroid Abuse, Pals Reveal," the paper also claimed Stallone underwent implant surgery to correct impotence "in order to save a relationship."

The News Extra article damaged Stallone's reputation and was "an outrageous exploitation," the lawsuit said.

News Extra editor Paul Azzaria declined to comment about the lawsuit.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A former newspaper editor says he would be flattered to be portrayed in a movie by actor Robert Redford.

A movie script is being written about Bill Kovach, who resigned in 1988 as editor of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

"I would obviously be flattered," said Kovach, now curator of the Nieman Foundation at Harvard University, which offers one-year fellowships to outstanding journalists.

Columnist Marilyn Beck reported Redford was in line for the role.

Kovach said in an interview with The Tennessean this week that he is not sure when the movie might be made.

CAMPBELL: Failing grade helped kinds of grades here.' From that day on I started working toward getting that college education," said Campbell, who was in Midland Thursday to speak about Panic disorder, a common anxiety disorder through which millions of Americans become depressed and physically disoriented.

Campbell, who earned a degree in speech communications at UT, speaks on a lot of subjects these days. He averages 150 speaking engagements a year, with topics ranging from football or hunting to education and even farming.

Campbell capped his freshman year at UT with a stint in summer school and the rest is history; Most people know what he did with his autumns.

A two-time All-America selection, Campbell finished his collegiate career with 4,443 rushing yards and the coveted Heisman Trophy in 1977. He was selected first in the National Football League draft by the Houston Oilers, and from 1978 to 1986 Campbell was a dominant force, earning All-Pro honors eight straight years.

Now a successful businessman with his own brand of meats and a highly sought-after motivational speaker, Campbell said it was academics, not athletics, that opened his doors to sucess after the glory days were spent.

"Making that F in English was a great thing for me because I might have just gone and played along," Campbell said. "But he (Royal) sent me back home to summer school.

"I won't lie. I don't think I would have been able to do so many things in America that I've been able to do if it had not been for athletics. But somewhere in all my wanting to be that great No. 20 (at UT) and that great No. 34 (with Houston) I was able to transfer my bottom line into getting an education," he said.

Currently the Special Assistant to the Vice President of Student Affairs at UT, the kid that failed freshman English is somewhat of an educator himself. He still loves a good battle on the gridiron, but the priorities, he says, belong in the classroom.

"Hey, there's nothing like going to a Friday night football game or a college game on Saturday to brag on your son. But I really think if we don't start putting more emphasis on the education part of it we're going to hurt a bunch of kids," Campbell said.

"I think parents, coaches, teachers, everybody should start pushing education. The more and more our young people are educated the better off they'll be."

Sherman principal finds no evidence of abuse

SHERMAN (AP) — Sherman High School Principal Phillip Garrett said Wednesday he found no evidence of abuse of three football players who were hospitalized for dehydration and heat exhaustion after running sprints.

Coach John Outlaw ordered players to run extra sprints after Monday's practice, officials said.

Two starters, defensive end Tim Cline and linebacker Ryan Woods, collapsed and were taken to a local hospital for treatment. They were released Wednesday.

Intel asks judge to close competitor

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Intel Corp. asked a federal judge Thursday to prevent upstart competitor Cyrix Corp. from selling its speedy math computer chips because they use some of Intel's patented technology.

The nation's leading maker of semiconductors asked U.S. District Judge Paul Brown to halt production of Cyrix math coprocessors until the legal battle is resolved.

Attorneys for both sides presented the judge with giant diagrams and used boxes, cards and even a ferris wheel-like contraption to explain what goes on inside the tiny chips.

"We contend there is direct literal infringement in this coprocessor," said Intel attorney Paul Janicke of Houston.

After listening to the arguments, many of which were presented in closed court because of their proprietary nature, Brown indicated he would rule later on Intel's request.

The patent infringement matter is one of several in a complex legal case between the two companies. But a temporary injunction would force Cyrix to stop shipping products, company chief executive and co-founder Jerry Rogers said.

"Every single day in this action is as important as any other day," Rogers said. "You win in increments."

In just two years, the Richardson-based company has taken more than 10 percent of the $300 million math coprocessor market on which Intel had virtual monopoly.

A coprocessor is a chip that is used to help a microprocessor, the computer's brain, with specific tasks. The chip Intel and Cyrix are fighting over boosts a computer's ability to calculate complex equations.

The biggest-selling and best-known products for Santa Clara, Calif.-based Intel have been microprocessors for IBM-compatible personal computers. But the math coprocessor was Intel's most profitable product, analysts have said.

Intel first approached Cyrix with questions about the new company's math chip in March 1990.

Unable to create a royalty scheme or settle their dispute, the two companies sued each other in December.

Cyrix said Intel engaged in antitrust behavior, intimidating distributors of its chips and spreading false information about their performance. Intel accused Cyrix of violating its patent rights.

In his argument before Brown, Janicke said Cyrix used a combination of patented elements that gave Intel's math chip an edge. They include the way it stores numeric information, decides when and how to round a calculation and how and when to signal the computer and its user that the equation has been rounded and, therefore, is less precise.

Janicke used a makeshift ferris wheel, created from bicycle sprockets, chains and plastic, to demonstrate how numbers are stored in the Intel chip's patented "stack of registers."

In closed court, Cyrix attorneys countered their chips do not use the patented technology.

Prices slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices eased slightly on Thursday in uneventful trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October settled at $21.53 per barrel, off 11 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices for refined products also registered slight declines.

Crude initially had rallied following the release of a government report that showed crude stocks declined in the most recent week. The report confirmed figures previously released by the American Petroleum Institute.

But as the session wore on, "the products markets began to give way and that had a bearish effect on the crude market, so it closed in the minus column," said Andrew Lebow, an analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Inc.

Trading was quiet, with prices moving in a relatively narrow range.

Natural gas prices fell, giving up gains they made Tuesday. Gas for delivery in October settled at $1.596 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.3 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell Thursday in another round of technical trading amid expectations that a new report showing moderate inflation will encourage the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates. Gold prices rose.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7335 from $1.7255 late Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing of 134.45 Japanese yen from 134.77 yen at Wednesday's close.

Other late New York dollar quotes, compared with Wednesday's prices, included: 1.6845 German marks, down from 1.6875 1.4765 Swiss francs, down from 1.4775; 5.7400 French francs, down from 5.7405; 1263.50 Italian lire, up from 1,263.00; and 1.13715 Canadian dollars, down from 1.13725.

Firms removed

TOKYO (AP) — The World Bank has removed two top Japanese securities firms from a billion-dollar bond underwriting group, and a newspaper reported they were penalized because of their ties to gangsters.

Both Nomura Securities Co., the world's largest brokerage, and Nikko Securities, said they would seek to be readmitted to the group.

The two companies, which have admitted dealing with a former underworld boss, were at the center of a scandal involving compensation of favored clients for stock market losses.

The case is one of a spate of recent financial scandals involving Japanese banks and securities firms.

Sony's Data Discman debuts

NEW YORK (AP) — Sony Corp. on Thursday introduced its Data Discman to the U.S. market, a portable device that plays "electronic books" stored on cartridges that resemble miniature compact discs.

The Data Discman, about the size of a thick paperback, has been available in a slightly different version in Japan for about a year.

The Japanese electronics maker said the 2-pound device will be in U.S. stores starting in early November at a list price of $549.95. It will come bundled with three discs containing an electronic encyclopedia, a health reference guide and a translation guide aimed at travelers.

The Data Discman is based on the laser technology used in CD music players, but is designed primarily for text and graphics, displayed on a small, flip-up screen.

The Data Discman also can play minimusic discs, which hold only a few songs, through a set of headphones.

But sound cannot be mixed with the text. That means the discs cannot provide the capabilities of the new "multimedia" computer discs, in which snippets of speeches by famous people are provided along with encyclopedia articles, for example.

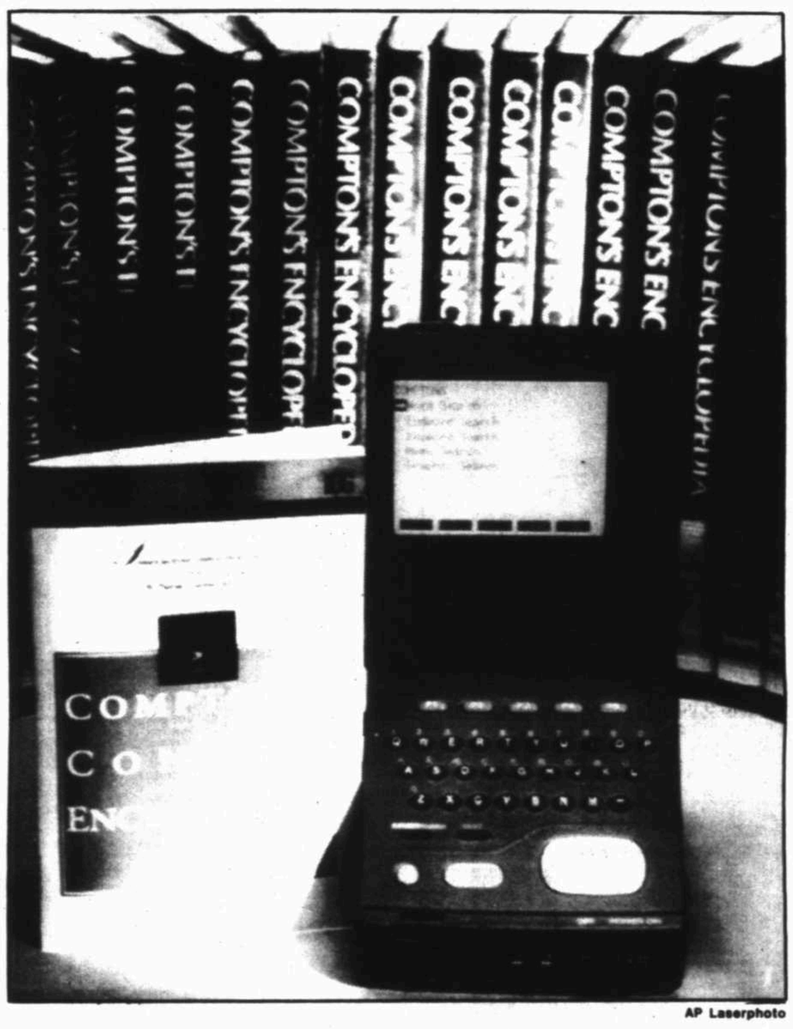

In addition, the graphics are crude compared to those on personal computers. A major reason is the Data Discman's liquid-crystal screen, which displays only black-and-white images in low resolution.

But Sony officials said the Data Discman is easier to use than a PC, is cheaper and is portable, so it should be attractive to many more users than computer-based devices.

Sony also says its device is more useful than the single-purpose handheld electronic gizmos that have been introduced in recent years, such as electronic Bibles and pocket translators.

Linda Helgerson, editor of CD Data Report, a newsletter that covers the CD industry, said Sony has yet to come up with compelling disc titles that would justify the high price of the Data Discman.

She also said she believes Sony eliminated much of the potential market by using a 3-inch minidisc instead of the standard 5-inch disc used in computers and CD music players. A 5-inch disc would have allowed computer users to take their data discs with them on the road.

AP Laserphoto

Sony's new Data Discman, for text and graphics only, is able to access the entire 26-volume set of Compton's Concise Encyclopedia, published by Britannica Software, on a single 8-centimeter optical disc.

The Data Discman is powered by either six AA batteries, a rechargable battery pack or a wall-outlet plug. A car cigarette lighter adapter will be an extra-cost option.

The device contains a tiny keyboard that allows users to search for a particular word or topic.

The Data Discman can be attached to a TV with a cord, provided to display the text and graphics in a much easier-to-view fashion.

The discs are housed in a protective case that resembles the one used for computer diskettes. The discs can hold up to 100,000 pages of text, or 32,000 graphic images.

Sony says 20 other discs will be available in November offering reference, travel and entertainment topics. They will be priced from $29.95 to $69.95.

Material for the discs is coming from book publishers such as Houghton Mifflin and reference book providers such as Official Airline Guides.

American air cutback may signal trend

NEW YORK (AP) — After American Airlines, the nation's largest carrier, announced plans to slow its rapid expansion, industry analysts were speculating Thursday whether the other giant airlines also would apply the brakes.

Several said they doubt it.

Robert L. Crandall, chairman of American's parent, AMR Corp., said the industry's financial woes had prompted him to cut capital spending plans by more than $500 million over five years. Less spending on planes will be a big part of the move, Crandall told securities analysts on Wednesday.

Airline stocks moved higher amid perceptions it was a prudent decision by the industry's leader, while stock in aircraft manufacturers went down on fears they would suffer a business decline.

"I think reaction to the announcement was a bit overdone," said Geoffrey Dann, airline analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

Dann said American's announcement amounted to only a 3.3 percent cutback in planned expenditures. "That's basically immaterial in my mind," Dann said, considering American's capacity is expected to grow by 16 percent next year.

That assessment was echoed by George James, chairman of Airline Economics Inc., a Washington-based aviation consulting firm.

"What Crandall, I think, is doing is he's adjusting his investment plans to the current realities of the financial situation in the airline industry, which is very bad," James said. "American has not suffered anywhere near what a TWA or a Pan Am or an Eastern, America West and so forth have suffered. It's certainly nothing fatal as it is for most of the others."

Eastern Airlines stopped flying this year when it ran out of cash. Pan American World Airways has been virtually carved up in bankruptcy court.

Other analysts held a different view, saying the widespread troubles may have finally filtered up to the top of the heap in commercial aviation, forcing American to change its plans.

In the early stages of the industry's crisis, brought on by the Persian Gulf War and the recession, the big airlines were able to capitalize by snapping up assets from the weaklings.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Verify dividends before switching funds

By Bill Doyle

Q. The mutual fund in which we have owned 3,536 shares for the past five years, which I shall call "Fund A," has an investment portfolio of U.S. government and other securities. Our purchase price was $8.48 per share. The present net asset value is $7.30 per share.

Doyle

Our broker is of the opinion a different mutual fund run by a different management organization, which I shall call "Fund B," would be better for us. He informs us Fund B invests almost exclusively in government issues.

Both funds pay monthly dividends. Fund A's dividend has declined and now is $190.94. The broker estimates we would get a $216 dividend from Fund B. Would you advise us to go along with the switch worked up by our broker?

A. Yes, assuming income is your investment aim and you verify those dividend figures. It's awfully strange for a mutual fund virtually fully invested in U.S. Treasury and federal agency securities to pay higher dividends than a mutual fund with a large investment in other securities.

Surely, you are aware that higher quality securities pay lower interest than lower quality securities. U.S. Treasury securities are counted as the highest quality of all securities. Federal agency securities are next on the quality scale. Ratings go down from there.

A mutual fund collects interest and dividends from securities it holds and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes the rest of the money along to fund shareholders as dividends.

It stands to reason that a fund loaded up with Treasury and federal agency securities collects less interest — and consequently distributes lower dividends — than a fund holding lower quality securities.

Check the dividend numbers carefully. A suspicious mind might come up with the thought your broker is promoting the fund switch so that he can pocket another commission on your purchase of Fund B shares. If he put you into Fund A, he got a commission there and you have had miserable investment results — a $4,173 loss.

Q. I need more interest on my money, now that certificate of deposit interest rates are down. I'm getting interested in two no-load mutual funds. One holds U.S. Treasury and Government National Mortgage Association securities. The other holds high-quality corporate bonds.

Investing in those funds looks like the least risk. What do you think?

A. That you are on the right path, as long as you know there would be some risk involved. There's no doubt about the Treasury and GNMA securities meeting their interest payments and being redeemed at face value when they mature. And there's little doubt along the same lines about most high-quality corporate bonds, although defaults occasionally do happen.

However, market prices of all bonds can fluctuate between the time they are issued and their maturity dates. That takes the share values of mutual funds holding bonds up and down.

It goes without saying that you are wise to narrow your choices to no-load funds, thereby avoiding commission charges.

Q. Our individual retirement accounts were moved from annuities because of declining interest rates. Our broker then put the IRAs into a mutual fund. At first, we did not realize it is a mutual fund. We are chagrined he did not discuss it with us before making the transaction.

Can you look at the enclosed monthly statements and let us know if we are paying any hidden fees?

A. Your mutual fund has both a 12b-1 fee and a contingent deferred sales charge. The former constantly extracts money from the fund and your investment value. The latter, also known as a rear-end load, will hit you if you redeem your fund shares within six years.

Neither of those charges are "hidden." Along with other costs, they are spelled out on Pages 2 and 3 in the prospectus of every mutual fund with such charges. There are many true no-load funds, without such costs.

If your broker didn't give you a copy of the fund's prospectus, he broke the rules. And, unless you gave him discretionary power over your account, he had no authority to put you into the fund without consulting you.

Bill Doyle is a syndicated columnist for King Features. He welcomes written questions, but is able to provide answers only through the column.

Address your question to Investor's Guide, King Features Syndicate, c/o Midland Reporter-Telegram, Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Drop in food costs helps offset energy price jump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices edged up a tiny 0.2 percent in August as a third straight drop in food costs helped to offset the biggest jump in energy prices since October, the government said Thursday.

The Labor Department said higher prices for new cars and tobacco products also played a role in pushing the Producer Price Index up for the first time since May, when it posted a 0.4 percent gain.

But the slight August increase, which was well within expectations, did nothing to jar economists' view that inflation is well under control.

Inflation at the consumer level, which the government will report on Friday, was expected to show a similarly small gain. Many analysts said that the two inflation reports should be enough to give the Federal Reserve the green light to cut interest rates further to boost economic demand.

"Three years of a weak economy, a recession and now a sluggish recovery are getting inflation well under control," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "The backdrop of a very weak economy and an impressive performance on inflation gives the Fed the leeway to ease further."

Sinai predicted that the Fed's next rate cut would include reductions in both the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other for overnight loans, and the discount rate, the rate the Fed charges for direct loans to banks.

He said those moves would be enough to push banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark for many business and consumer loans, down from 8.5 percent to 8 percent.

The good inflation news also cheered financial markets with both stocks and bonds posting gains as investors expressed a similar belief that a Fed rate cut was imminent. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 20.80 points to close at 3,007.83.

While many economists believe the 1990-91 recession ended sometime in the spring, there is a widespread concern that the recovery is so weak that the country could topple into another recession without further boosts in demand.

A second report Thursday showed that new claims for unemployment benefits barely budged in the final week in August, dropping by just 1,000 to 420,000.

That level of unemployment claims indicates continued layoffs with little rehiring being done, analysts said.

"We are in a fragile recovery that is struggling to take hold," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "There is an uncomfortable feeling that it might stall out."

President Bush on Thursday said "we are beginning to see this economy move," but his administration, worried about the strength of the rebound as an election year approaches, has kept up pressure on the Fed to do more to slash interest rates.

The 0.2 percent August increase in wholesale prices followed declines of 0.3 percent in June and 0.2 percent in July.

AT&T INTRODUCES A NEW CALLING PLAN: THE AT&T AREA CODE PLAN

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T") is pleased to announce a new family of services, AT&T's SMALL BUSINESS℠ Options. The first service offered in Texas as a part of this new family is the AT&T Area Code Plan (to be filed as AT&T Plan Q in AT&T's Custom Network Service Tariff). This service has been designed to be attractive to the small business user with a majority of calls to one area code. It provides customers a 10% discount on all undiscounted direct dialed monthly usage, including AT&T calling card charges and surcharges, billed to the single area code with the highest monthly dollar usage (whether interstate or intrastate). The AT&T Area Code Plan is offered only in conjunction with AT&T's interstate version of the plan.

The AT&T Area Code Plan offers customers discounted outward calling and consolidated billing for interstate and intrastate usage, giving customers better control over their usage while receiving discounts on calls placed to the most frequently called area code.

Key features of this plan are:

* A 10% discount on usage billed to the area code with the highest monthly dollar usage.
* Subminute timing on direct dialed in-state calls. After a 30-second minimum, billing is rounded to the next 6-second increment.
* Customers will receive a $5.00 credit when total interstate and intrastate monthly usage is greater than or equal to $20.00.
* Two rate periods for direct dialed calls; Day and Offpeak. Offpeak hours equate to the AT&T standard Evening and Night/Weekend long distance rate periods.

For more information about the AT&T Area Code Plan, please call your AT&T Account Executive or AT&T's business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400.

AT&T plans to file its tariff offering this service with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on September 24, 1991 with an effective date of October 24, 1991. This service will be available to customers in territories served by Southwestern Bell and GTE on the effective date of the tariff. For individuals in territories served by Centel, Alltel, Contel and United, availability dates will vary; however, the service should be available by no later than the 4th quarter of 1992. Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may contact the Public Utility Commission Public Information Division on or after September 24, 1991 at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Specialists harvest explosives

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — Ed Pinson has been digging up the Middlesex County College, one cupful at a time. He has reason to be careful.

Beneath the school, an industrial park and adjacent areas, Pinson and his colleagues are finding a veritable cornucopia of ordnance — thousands of World War I-vintage explosives, TNT, anti-aircraft shells and nerve and mustard gas.

Once, these 3,200 acres of suburbia comprised the Raritan Arsenal, a weapons warehouse and distribution post during the World Wars. Now, it is a scary place to sink a shovel. More than 50,000 explosives have been unearthed.

"It gets down to an archaeological dig," said Pinson, who served 20 years as an Army explosives specialist and sports a Bomb Squad tattoo on his bicep. "It's like opening a surprise package every time you scratch the surface."

Raritan is the first military arsenal to be cleaned up, said Pete Shugert, spokesman for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in New York. Work has been under way for four months; the estimated cost is in the millions.

That pales next to similar cleanups that are being planned. The Army estimates it will take $580 million to clean up the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland, and more than $2 billion to rid Colorado's Rocky Mountain Arsenal of nerve gas, pesticides and toxic solvents. All together, the decontamination of non-nuclear military sites is expected to cost $30 billion.

STILL, RARITAN has offered a rule of thumb for future base cleaning — there's more to be found than you expect.

"There's always more waste than you think there is," said Jim Werner, an environmental engineer for the Natural Resources Defense Council in Washington.

Assemblywoman Marlene Lynch Ford, who chaired hearings into hazardous dumps at military sites in New Jersey, agrees: "We'd get a hint something was bad, we'd look into it, and it'd be 10 times worse."

Pinson and two other workers from EOD Technology of Oak Ridge, Tenn., have been digging behind an office building in the middle of campus, uncovering booster adaptors — 9-inch cylinders used for detonating bigger explosives. They're buried in the middle of what was once officers' housing.

They loosen the soil with a backhoe until magnetometers begin squealing at the presence of metal. Then they use small gardening tools to sift the soil to exhume the boosters, much as if they were picking potatoes.

The workers harvest slowly, sifting the soil almost cup by cup. After six weeks, they've excavated an area the size of half a tennis court.

Most of the weaponry disposed of by the arsenal was simply dumped in holes and covered over. "Back then, that was an acceptable method, to bury them in the ground or sea dump them," said Wayne Galloway, an explosives expert with the Corps of Engineers.

LITTLE OR no record-keeping was the norm back then. "Records?" asked Galloway. "Ha!" Cleanup crews rely on magnetometers to find the bombs.

But there is some sense of the magnitude of the task ahead:

- The Army Corps has yet to start digging in area 5, where mustard gas, potassium cyanide and red fuming nitric acid were buried in 5-foot trenches.
- The Corps plans to remove bulk TNT from a 25-acre site known as area 4, which sits in the middle of the Raritan Center industrial park.
- Lead, mercury, benzene and a host of other hazardous chemicals also have been detected. A two-year study is under way to determine how much is there and how they should be removed, and removal is expected to begin in 1994.
- An undeveloped 200-acre site, area 16, has yielded more than 30,000 37mm anti-aircraft projectiles. A backhoe lifts buckets of wet clay from the marshy ground and dumps them in a sifting screen — a sort of big flour sifter.

The shells, along with explosives from other sites, are detonated along the Raritan River in area 16. Earlier in the summer, nearby residents complained about the constant noise and efforts were made to muffle the sound.

THE PROXIMITY of those homes — and of the many people who work and study on the site — has complicated matters at Raritan. Unlike the bases that now are closing, Raritan already has been remade by developers.

Nestle, Michelin and Macy's are among the companies that have offices or warehouses in the sprawling Raritan Center industrial park. Middlesex County is one of the largest community colleges in the state, with 11,300 students.

It appears that none of the buildings is constructed directly over explosives. But some are built in areas where no building should have taken place.

The Corps of Engineers started studying the site in the 1980s; a 1989 engineering report listed 16 areas of contamination, but none on the campus.

An exhibition hall hosts meetings and trade shows. A park named for localite Thomas Edison and a regional headquarters for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency also are situated on arsenal land.

Black bears invade town

HAPPY CAMP, Calif. (AP) — Black bears deprived of their wild berry diet by a prolonged drought are raiding gardens, cabins and the town dump, but residents say they don't mind the new Happy Campers.

"I had one at my place last night," resident Nell Sakota said. "He left chew marks on my porch. But it doesn't bother me. I'd rather have a bear in my yard than a human."

Local wildlife authorities spend most of their time protecting the hungry invaders against poachers.

"These are trophy-size bears," state Department of Fish and Game warden Jake Bushey said as he watched 19 bears foraging through the dump. Most were males weighing about 700 pounds, he said.

"We don't have much crime in this area," he said of the town of 1,110 just south of the Oregon line. "I guess if the worst you have is a bear breaking down your fruit trees, we can live with that."

Cicippio's six sibblings gather for ceremony

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Joseph Cicippio's family marked the beginning of his sixth year in captivity in a solemn ceremony Thursday brightened by news that his kidnappers expressed hopes for a "happy ending" to the hostage ordeal.

"Never, never did I dream that Joseph would be held for such a long time," Cicippio's brother Tom said.

The 10-minute ceremony with Carmella LaSpada, founder of the support group No Greater Love, marked the first time all six surviving Cicippio siblings have appeared together in public since their brother's kidnapping Sept. 12, 1986.

Their sister, Helen Fazio, who is growing weak from cancer, sat at a table while her five brothers one by one set up small placards bearing the names of all Western hostages.

Tom Cicippio, 67, and Mrs. Fazio, 71, then held hands as they lit a candle and watched it burn against the breeze. One of Joseph's children, David, read a prayer.

Ms. LaSpada read a message to Mrs. Fazio from Cardinal Anthony Bevilacqua telling her that he was "praying that you will soon see your brother, Joe."

The ceremony ended with a guitarist playing "Let There Be Peace On Earth."

Family members had expected a quiet occasion to observe the fifth anniversary of Cicippio's kidnapping. But news from Beirut changed that.

Early Thursday, the groups holding Cicippio, former British pilot Jack Mann and American hostage Terry Anderson released photos of Mann and Anderson.

"It's good news because it's the same people holding Joseph," said Tom Cicippio. "We thought Joseph was left by himself once (Edward) Tracy was released, because Tracy was held with Joseph all that time."

Tracy, an American, was released Aug. 11.

Knowing Joseph Cicippio may not be alone, his brother said, "gives us a very nice feeling."

Cicippio, the acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut, became the fourth American hostage when he was kidnapped on the campus. He turns 61 on Friday.

The last communication about him was a photograph authenticating an Aug. 10 statement by his Shiite Muslim kidnappers, the Revolutionary Justice Organization. The statement promised the release of an American hostage.

But the man who walked to freedom was Tracy.

Tracy remained Thursday at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Boston, where he is undergoing psychological and medical examinations.

Thursday's developments came one day after Israel released 51 prisoners from a jail in south Lebanon and repatriated the remains of nine Shiite Muslim guerrillas. Israel made the moves after receiving definite word that one of its missing servicemen was dead.

The Cicippios expressed optimism that events were moving toward an end of the hostage ordeal.

"At least it's in the right direction," said Anthony, 73.

The other Ciccipio brothers are Alexander, 75; Dominic, 70; and Nicholas, 62. Two sisters have died.

Cicippio recalled by former student

By Richard L. Papiernik
Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Before Joseph James Cicippio started working at the American University in Beirut, and long before Sept. 12, 1986, when he was kidnapped by a group calling itself The Revolutionary Justice Organization, he was a mentor to me.

It was back in the 1950s, just a few short years after he graduated from the old Eisenhower High School in Norristown, Pa.

The relationship I had with Joe Cicippio was one dimensional. I knew him only as an instructor at the drum and bugle corps sponsored by the Hattal-Taylor Veterans of Foreign Wars post in my old home town of Philadelphia.

We were a small unit of 10-to-14-year-olds, learning how to synchronize our marching left, right, and to-the-rear movements with the thundering cadence of drums and blare of our bugles.

Joe was one of the big guys from nearby Norristown's Nuss-O'Hara Todd VFW Post, a spit, polish and concert-ready corps of dedicated marchers who already had won top state and regional honors.

We had a standing joke: I don't think there was a drill that went by when one of us wasn't asking him: "Hey, Joe Cicippio, how is Mississippi-O?"

Joe had a big round-faced smile and the disposition of a saint. When the teasing got to him, he'd come back with something like: " 'She's fine, thank you, and how is Mrs. Papiernik's little boy doing with his drills tonight?"

Joe and his horn blowers and drummers could do things with marching music that would have equaled the wildest expectations of John Philip Sousa.

These were not trumpets; they were the old, much more limited, single-valve bugles. Joe was a master concertmaster in this arena.

"Joe, listen to this quartet of ours," I remember telling him one night. And we launched into what we thought was a pretty good four-part harmony and rhythm rendition of Blue Moon.

(Give me a break will you? This was in the 1950s when Bobby Rydell was still a young kid banging around on drums, Frankie Avalon was singing "Hound Dog" and playing trumpet and I was finding out how to play an E flat major seventh on an accordion.)

Joe raised one eyebrow and broke into a wide smile. He said something like, "Look, Blue Moon just won't cut it for a bugle corps competition."

We had to practice a lot.

We progressed from khaki uniforms to red and white ones with white capes and tall red hats and our music improved to the point where we could march in Thanksgiving parades and in professional sports stadiums in Philadelphia and in some of the big parades in New York City, Wildwood, N.J., and Atlantic City.

But Joe Cicippio and that thundering machine from Norristown were the untouchables.

I never knew much more about Joe Cicippio.

I didn't know until much later that he became a bank branch manager in East Norriston, a suburb of Philadelphia. And that after he went to work in Saudi Arabia and London and then in Beirut, where he was the acting comptroller at American University.

I learned that he was taken hostage from the news wire at the newspaper where I worked in Miami.

A few days ago, I talked to Joe's brother Tommy, and Tommy's wife, Fran.

They were trying to get things ready for a welcome just in case Joe would finally make it out this time, after six years in captivity.

Tommy told me they knew that Joe once had a lot of trophies and pictures from his days of playing in the drum and bugle corps but that somehow they had all disappeared. He asked if I knew anyone who might have a picture of Joe in his old corps uniform.

The only one I have of those days is the one that exists in the memory.

On Sept. 13, Joe Cicippio will be 61 years old. It sure would be a happy birthday if he was able to get back to Norristown for the celebration.

Pamela Smart got fair trial, judge says

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A woman convicted of coaxing her teen-age lover to kill her husband got a fair trial despite "extensive publicity," for which she partly was to blame, a judge ruled Thursday.

The denial of a new trial clears the way for Pamela Smart to proceed with an appeal to the state Supreme Court filed in June, said defense lawyer J. Albert Johnson.

"Pam Smart is very disappointed in the judge's denial of her motions but she continues to have faith that the system which convicted her unjustly will rescue her from her fate," Johnson said.

Smart, 24, was convicted in March of persuading her lover, William Flynn, now 17, and two of his friends to kill her husband. Gregory Smart, 24, was shot in the head May 1, 1990, in the couple's condominium south of Manchester.

Flynn and his friends pleaded guilty to reduced charges and testified against Smart. They said she wanted her husband killed because she feared losing her house, furniture and dog in a divorce. The three are awaiting sentencing and face up to 18 years in prison.

Smart, former media coordinator for a southern New Hampshire school district, is serving a life sentence at the state women's prison.

Johnson had cited extensive news coverage in a bid for a new trial.

But Superior Court Judge Douglas Gray suggested Smart herself sought out media attention, as prosecutors have charged.

"The court recognizes that this case was surrounded by extensive publicity, the genesis of which may be traced to the defendant herself," Gray wrote in the ruling.

Johnson called Gray's comment "ludicrous."

"Of course the judge knows that the pervasive negative press attention was created by the facts and the interest of the media and not by Pam Smart," he said.

But Gray said jurors knew "surprisingly little about the case."

"No juror was seated who expressed any preconceptions of guilt or innocence, and no juror was seated over the objection of defense counsel or the defendant," he wrote. "Any allegations of a 'circus-like' atmosphere in the courtroom are simply not true."

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
