BANK PAYS IN FULL

Depositors of the First Bank of Mullin, which has been closed several weeks, received every penny due on their checks on the Trent Bank of this city. The bank did not in fact fail, but into voluntary liquidation the withdrawal of some of its heaviest depositors caused the bank officials to determine the interests of the depositors would be jeopardized by continuing the business. The stockholders should be commended in this as they have sacrificed their interests and finances for the depositors. Had the bank been placed in the hands of a receiver and the heavy expenses of liquidation incurred, loss to the depositors would have resulted and the bank would have suffered a heavy loss in liquidation, aside from being a time when sacrifices have been necessary. All loss and embarrassment was obviated by the liberal action of the directors of the bank. The depositors and other members of the bank were not in their estimate of the loss and looked to the directors for their financial interests. The directors to the officers and stockholders of the Mullin Bank.

HIRES PROXY FOR JAIL

If Jack McLaughlin hadn't attempted to serve his bootlegging term by proxy he would have been out of jail in Los Angeles by now.

As it is McLaughlin is out $100 paid to John Saltes, who started the 40-day sentence for him and was discovered as the wrong man, and is in for 150 days because the judge raised it when he passed sentence the second time. After that time is served he is in for 90 more days, the term meted out when he pleaded guilty to a charge of false personation.

MERRY WIVES CLUB HONORED

Mesdames D. A. Trent and T. F. Toland entertained delightfully on Tuesday evening of this week with a bridge, honoring the Merry Wives and husbands at their mother's pretty home on North Fisher street. A gold and yellow color scheme was gained by the lavish use of clusters of feathery chrysanthemums arranged in baskets, vases and various receptacles about the rooms to charming advantage. Score cards were picturesque baskets overflowing with harvested fruits while the other accessories for the games featured "King Turkey" in strutting glory.

For success in bridge Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor received an attractive dog door prop. Golden wrapped packages were given as table trophies. These were cut by Mesdames Kelly Saylor, Frank Taylor, Chas. Frizzell, E. D. Stringer, Misses Adeline Little and Lucille Conro. Upon opening they were found to be novelty china dogs containing bath salts. A dainty sweet and salad course was served to the following: Messrs. and Mesdames Foster Brim, C. M. Burch, Earl Summy, Bob Steen, Walter Fairman, Kelly Saylor, Chas. Frizzell, Mark Fairman, E. D. Stringer, Frank Taylor, T. F. Toland, D. A. Trent, Misses Lucille Conro and Adeline Little.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL

To The Eagle:

In your last week's Eagle I asked you to direct those who wished to renew their membership with the Red Cross to see Mrs. Guy Rudd who held the Red Cross blanks. I should, however, have directed those who wished to renew to Mrs. Marvin Rudd, who will receive your membership dues and receipt you for them.

Most communities are making a drive to increase their membership, as Brownwood, for instance, proposes to increase its membership to 1000. Goldthwaite, I am told, set its goal at 100 which should be easily attained. I fear, however, unless some solicitation is done she will not reach her goal.

This is a most worthy cause and should be joined by every one who feels they can spare the dollar membership fee. Goldthwaite may sometime be sorely in need of Red Cross assistance. I am hoping not but in the event we should we will feel more deserving if we have contributed to its support.

See Mrs. Marvin Rudd and become a member.

FARM BOARD BARES SECRETS

Before the Senate Agricultural Committee in Washington, Chairman Stone of the Federal Farm Board disclosed the operating secrets of the board in its gigantic speculations which have already caused a loss of millions of dollars. Three hundred twenty-nine million bushels of wheat costing an average of 82 cents a bushel were purchased, and some of it is being sold for 54c a bushel. One million three hundred thousand bales of cotton cost an average of 16c a pound and are still being held. It will not be sold for two years unless the price goes to 22 1/2c a pound, Stone said.

Senator Wheeler, democrat of Montana, claimed that the board's purchases of wheat were made in the winter after the crop had left the farmers' hands and were discontinued in the spring before the new crop was made.

Other senators also criticized the board's operations on the ground of expense and failure to be of help to the farmer. Salaries paid board members and employees last year amounted to $298,352, and traveling expenses consumed $347,068. The money was provided by Congress.

BAPTIST CHURCH

While Jim Rudd and the sheriff were discussing what part they would sing and where they would locate themselves for the morning service, our superintendent took advantage of the opportunity and showed his authority. The pastor, thinking rapidly, thought it would be a good idea to commend Mr. Toland and give out the facts thru this week's notes. For a long time the superintendent has said that he was going to stop these women from discussing new hats while he was making his regular Sunday speech but for some reason we noticed when that time came his courage would always fail. But Sunday was an opportune time for him to let the ladies know that they must listen when he speaks. The only objectionable thing was, two of our best men were reprimanded for what others had been doing for a long time. Believe it or not, Tom Toland knows who to talk to, and you ladies discuss hats all you please. Our superintendent will not raise his voice against it.

The gentleman who represents Mills and Comanche counties at Austin about four times a year happened to the misfortune of running over a turkey down San Saba way the other day, but after explaining to the lady that he was representative, lawyer, orator and wrote life insurance he was allowed to come on with the fowl unmolested. Had this woman been on the job she could have raised the price of turkeys to fifty cents per pound.

The mayor of our little city, recently went on a hunting trip, was placed in a trail that is traveled only by large bucks. He was instructed to fire both barrels of his gun at first sight. He did as was commanded. The first struck the ground four feet away and the second trimmed the branches from the trees above the trail. The mayor seeing his predicament and thinking of that old hymn, raised his eyes to the Lord in the skies and said "O Lord if you can not help me, please don't help that buck." Since that time the mayor has not been 'round about town much. We hope that he will soon forget such an experience and take his regular place with the rest of us boys.

We talk about champion football teams and about champion pugilists, but Fred Martin, who sells ladies hats six days in a week and attends Sunday School and church on the other day, holds the championship for killing ducks. We have not been able to find out on what day Fred shoots ducks, but it matters little as long as he sells hats, goes to Sunday school and church and kills the white duck with no green on his head, for doctors, preachers and father-in-laws can not discern the difference, just so they are called ducks.

When you read these lines another Thanksgiving Day will have come and gone. How many of us thought to express our gratitude to our Heavenly Father and even our closest friends? By all means we should have. Thanksgiving Day is not a new day. Long before America was discovered the children of Israel celebrated such a day. This day was known as "Feast Day." This was a day that these people showed their gratitude for their deliverance from slavery under the Pharaohs of Egypt. The first celebration of this kind in America was in 1621 by the Pilgrim Fathers. The first official proclamation issued setting apart such a day was made in 1789 by George Washington, who was at that time president of these United States. Some have contended that Washington was not a Christian. If you will read his first proclamation you can readily see that he believed in God, and we doubt seriously if any man could write such a proclamation without being a Christian.

Everybody get in a good humor, come down to the Baptist

ANOTHER PUSH

Thirty-three citizens of Lake Merritt community signed a petition asking directors of Mills County Hunting and Fishing Club to close Sunday at said lake. All of the signers are parents except one. The petition says in part:

"Whereas, the measure of Sabbath observance in any community measures the strength of the people's civilization. In the language of Abraham Lincoln, 'If we lose respect for the Lord's Day, we lose the last, best hope by which we rise;' and Whereas, the continued desecration of the Sabbath has always rent the whole moral fabric of the people, without which they cannot dwell worthily and securely."

The head of the committee of directors, in discussing the petition, promised to call a directors meeting and recommend that the shooting at least, be prohibited on Sunday. Said petition was presented long before the hunting season opened and so far nothing has been done. We all know that it is not the easiest matter to decide at the wish of friends for the right when other friends are insisting on the wrong, but it doesn't harm any one to do right. The community around Lake Merritt feel very much imposed upon by the immoral use of Sunday at the lake. To the stockholders of the Club I would say this: Could we change places and any community present me with such a petition for the good of their families, I certainly could decide in less than a minute what I should do, even though I had no Sunday conscience for myself.

ENGLISH CHEERFUL BECAUSE OF CLOTHES

Bright clothes and new hats for women as one way to help bear cheerfully the burdens of hard times were urged by Miss Dorothy M. Gotch of the Free Church Women's Council, in a recent address in London, England. A generation ago, Miss Gotch said, most English people would have been sunk in continual despair by the weight of taxes, the continual decline of business and the many items of suffering which the present industrial depression has caused. This year, on the contrary, most of them are more cheerful than would be expected. The difference, Miss Gotch believes, may be traced to clothes. A generation ago Englishwomen wore long, heavy, uncomfortable skirts, usually black. Stockings also were black and dismal. Hats were made as dull and uninteresting as possible. Nowadays clothes are revealing, bright in color, and cheerful, brilliant hats are cheap and universal, stockings and shoes also are of bright colors. No doubt brothers and sweethearts are pleased, but a more important effect, Miss Gotch believes, is on the psychology of Englishwomen themselves. They are kept cheerful by their clothes and they keep everyone else cheerful. In another recent address in London, Sir E. Graham-Little, a distinguished physician and health authority, spoke of the remarkable fact that the disease called chlorosis, characterized by paleness, weakness and poor blood condition, in young girls has vanished entirely in England, although once it was common. This change, also, he attributes to the modern vogue of lighter, looser and more cheerful clothing.

JAPAN BUYS COTTON WAR SCARE HELPS

Japanese cotton firms are now staging a spectacular buying movement, taking as high as 90 of every 100 bales sold in Texas and Oklahoma spot markets in the past three weeks, one of the nation's leading cotton men estimated in Houston last week.

Japanese purchases so far this season are estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 bales in Texas and Oklahoma alone and from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bales from the entire South.

Cotton men advance two theories to explain this huge Japanese buying movement.

One is that Japan, preparing for a war in the Far East, is laying up stores of the staple, a basic ingredient of gun cotton, TNT, and most high explosives. Cotton men who hold this theory recalled a similar buying movement by Germany before the outbreak of the world war in 1914.

The other is that speculators in Japan, anticipating the abandonment of the gold standard by Japan early in 1932, are seeking to invest their cash in a basic commodity in the United States, a country that believes strongly in the gold standard. Whether or not the abandonment of the gold standard by Japan is a possibility, cotton men pointed out that cotton is now at rock-bottom—below the cost of production—and hence cotton is a good investment.

"The possibility of war in the Far East has nothing to do with it," President Mayer of the Dallas Cotton Exchange says. "The price is the thing that counts. Last year 3,448,000 bales of cotton were exported to Japan; of that amount, 1,704,000 Indian and 485,000 Chinese cotton.

"At present American cotton is much cheaper than the Indian and heavy floods damaged the Chinese crop to such an extent that both Japanese and Chinese buyers are turning to this country for their supply."

MILLIONS IN GOLD REACHED BY DIVERS

Near Prest, France, divers have reached the $5,000,000 in gold that lies in the hulk of the sunken liner Egypt. Heavy seas delayed the divers in efforts to bring any of the gold to the surface.

Months of salvage operations by the Italian steamer Artiglio II were near success when a diver entered the bullion room of the Egypt, which was rammed and sunk off the French coast by a cargo steamer in 1922.

The diver was lowered 400 feet from the deck of the Artiglio through a hole that had been cut into the treasure chamber. It was very dark there, but he was able to see a wood case in a corner and reported that the room seemed to be filled to within two feet of its ceiling.

If there was sufficient light in the deep, efforts to raise at least a few of the ingots would be made now, the divers said. But the stormy season was too far advanced to make recovery of all the gold this year seem likely.

Winds and waves interrupted the divers several times in recent months as they ripped a hole through the Egypt's deck and slowly cut their way to the fortune.

A tragedy ended efforts of the first Artiglio to reach the gold. It was blown to bits by an explosion of tons of gun cotton in another sunken hulk, the American freighter Florence H., which went down with a cargo of munitions during the world war. Twelve of the crew of 19 perished.

The former Artiglio, its efforts to salvage the Egypt's gold having been delayed by bad weather and erratic tides after more than a year at its task, was being used temporarily by the French government to remove dangerous wrecks of ships sunk during the war when the accident occurred.

The Artiglio II resumed work on the Egypt early this year.

WASHINGTON'S LOST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

Few Americans know that the first National Thanksgiving proclamation was issued by our first president, George Washington, in 1789; and still fewer people know of the interesting history of that priceless document. On October 3, 1789, George Washington issued his Presidential Proclamation calling for a national day of Thanksgiving on Thursday, November 26.

This proclamation went into effect and was soon forgotten. No one apparently attached much importance to the document itself. It was completely lost sight of. Most likely it was misplaced or attached to some private papers in the process of moving official records from New York to Philadelphia, or from Philadelphia to Washington. All we know is that the original document was "found" in 1921 by Dr. J. C. Fitzpatrick, at an auction sale being held in the American Art Galleries of New York City. Dr. Fitzpatrick, an expert on Washington, examined the document and found it to be authentic. It was written in long hand by Wm. Jackson, Secretary to President Washington at the time, and was signed in George Washington's bold hand. Dr. Fitzpatrick purchased the document for $300.00 for the library of Congress, where it is now kept as a treasure. And no amount of money could remove it.

CO-OP SALARIES ARE TO BE INVESTIGATED

Large salaries being paid officers of the National Grain Corporation and the American Cotton Co-operative Association will be brought under investigation if demands being made in Washington on Senate Agriculture Committee are carried out. The two organizations are the Farm Board's general sales agencies for the wheat and cotton cooperatives operating under the agricultural marketing act. It develops that some of the officials are drawing down more salary than any official of the United States Government with the exception of President Hoover, who receives $75,000 a year.

DEMOCRATS SPLIT ON FLOOR LEADER

Six friendly enemies—four Southerners and two Northerners—are combatting briskly for the Democratic floor leadership in the House. The victor will be decided at the Dec. 5 caucus.

United behind Representative Garner of Texas for speaker, the Democrats are divided North against South, on leadership. Northerners claim the leader should be from above the Mason Dixon line, since the speaker will come from the South if the Democrats gain control. Southerners contend that the fact of their having furnished the bulk of the opposition during 13 years of Republican dominance should be fully recognized.

Contestants from the South are Representative John McDuffie, Alabama; Joseph Byrns, Tennessee; Charles R. Crisp, Georgia, and John E. Rankin, Mississippi.

Representatives Henry T. Rainey, Illinois, and John J. O'Connor, New York, are the Northern contenders.

McDuffie and Rainey appear to have the lead between them.

PRELUDE TO TRAGEDY

It happened recently over in Minnesota. A car was going up a hill. Another, going in the same direction, was near the crest of the hill. The first car attempted to pass the second. A third was approaching the top of the hill from the opposite side. There was a crash in which all three cars were involved. A check-up of the results showed two persons dead, two injured and three automobiles badly smashed. And all this simply because one driver failed to obey a common rule of motoring safety. Just to save a few seconds of time, he tried to pass a car while his vision ahead was blocked. If he had waited until reaching the brow of the hill, a horrible accident would have been averted.—Sioux Fall Argus-Leader.

ADVERTISING GRAFTERS

Whenever hard times are upon us we are sure to find plenty of grafters who are out for whatever little money might be left in the pockets of a few. They are promoting everything imaginable from an ad on a toothpick holder to a prosperity day in the old town. Nearly all of these schemes are in some form of advertising. It is easy to convince people that they need some kind of advertising to increase their business—any one knows this—and these grafters charge more than four times the value of what they offer, and a stranger seems to be able to land those who scarcely ever advertise in the home paper, and there is no more effective or cheaper way to advertise than in the home paper known. Your local paper is read all the time by all the family, and your message reaches out and stays out to those you wish to reach. Not an item is missed. If you have what the reader wishes to buy, you get a customer and results are sure to follow. But if you place your ad with these grafters, the chances are that no one will ever read it, and you get no results from it, consequently you arrive at the conclusion that advertising does not pay. The next grafter that comes your way just tell him that you have decided to try the home paper and keep your money where it has a chance to come back to you, and will help you and help build up the town where you live.—O'Neil (Neb.) County Independent.

CALIFORNIA SOLON SCORES PRESIDENT

United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson said today President Hoover would have "the undying gratitude of the rank and file of the Republican party" if he followed the lead of Calvin Coolidge and decided not to become a candidate next year.

The California Senator, pausing in Chicago en route to Washington, was induced to make a brief statement, and, in the interests of accuracy, not only wrote it out in long hand, but signed it. Here it is:

"The decision of Mr. Coolidge not to become a candidate next year entitles him to the highest praise of the American people."

"If Mr. Hoover were to make a like decision he would have the undying gratitude of the rank and file of the Republican party."

That, said the fiery Republican progressive, was the sum total of what he wanted to say at this time about national politics. When asked about his own aspirations for the presidential nomination, he said, "quit kidding me about the presidential nomination. When I'm a candidate you'll know about it." There were some things the Senator did not mind talking about, however, and one of them was the situation in Manchuria. There, he said, was a perfect illustration of the ineffectiveness of treaties and of the League of Nations.

importance of the land and the possibilities it offers for colonization that has drawn three great powers, the Russians, the Chinese and the Japanese, into their frequent deadlocks over its development.—Exchange.

CAVALRY REGIMENT GIVES UP HORSES

The army's oldest and most colorful cavalry regiment is to surrender before the onrush of armored cars and tanks its 100 years of glory in the saddle.

Known to old-timers as the Dandy First Regiment, it will be mechanized in the spring.

The stinging thunder of hoofs will give way to the roar and grind of machinery but the story of the regiment's romantic service against the Indians of the Old West, in the Mexican and Civil Wars, in Cuba, and the Philippines is an inefaceable part of army history. The young officer who was to become the President of the Confederacy—Lieut. Jefferson Davis—was its Adjutant when the regiment was organized back in 1834.

Other memorable figures in American history, including several of the Generals of the Civil War on both sides, served at some time in their career in the Dandy First.

In 1916 and 1917 the regiment helped patrol the Mexican border, but when the World War came, infantry, rather than cavalry, was the great need in France, the first time the old regiment was not called for active service on the front.

Stationed at various Western and Southwestern posts, the old regiment will move from Fort D. A. Russell, Marfa, Texas, to Camp Knox, Ky., between next May 1 and June 30, to put on wheels and tractor belts and change its designation to First Cavalry (mechanized.)

MAN LEAVES HOSPITAL WITH $15,000 NOSE

Omaha, Nov. 21.—Meet Mr. Huston of the $15,000 nose.

Huston is probably the only man who has ever carried $15,000 around town in his nose.

He went to a hospital for treatment for a nasal infection. Radium was used. The treatment was effective. Huston left.

Five minutes later and panic ruled the hospital. Someone had forgotten to remove the radium—$15,000 worth of it—from Huston's nose.

Eventually Huston reached home. The phone rang. No. Huston had not removed the cotton from his nose. A doctor came and removed the cotton—also the $15,000 worth of radium.

Peace descended on the hospital.

U. S. COLORADO RIVER SURVEY REQUESTED

A. J. Eilers, president of the Colorado River Improvement Association at Austin, has sent a petition to Congressman J. P. DEPRESSION-PROOF FARMS

An official of the Federal Land Bank of Houston told a meeting of the Dallas Agricultural Club in that city Monday that the bank never yet had been compelled to foreclose a loan on a farm whose owner carried out a program of livestock raising, living at home and soil conservation.

This is but one of the many statistical demonstrations of the truth that diversification is the soundest policy for farm management. Every farming community has its object lessons. The farmer who gets along better in times of adversity for the major crop is the same who profits most when the major crop is sailing high. He cuts his losses on the one hand and increases his profits on the other by taking care that his business takes care of himself and his family first.

Progress in diversification, or balanced production, or whatever else one wants to call it, has been slow but steady on Texas farms. When one farmer achieves prosperity through such policies his neighbors follow his example to greater or less degree, so that in time the whole community receives impetus. The special need at this time for developing other forms of production to allow for the necessary reduction in cotton acreage, should greatly accelerate the spread of diversification on Southern farms.

Diversification of production is common sense in farming. Protection of the soil against loss of fertility through erosion or through continual cropping is common sense farming. Together they spell, if not riches for the average farmer, at least protection against privation in the "down" years which regularly affect such crops as cotton and wheat.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

OIL: Petroleum Lubrication and the Machine Age

CHAPTER XVIII

PETROLEUM lubricants and greases have been indispensable to the mechanical development of the past three-quarters of a century. In the memory of men still living, the only available lubricants were those from animal fats and from various vegetable substances, and machinery was crude, cumbersome, and slow.

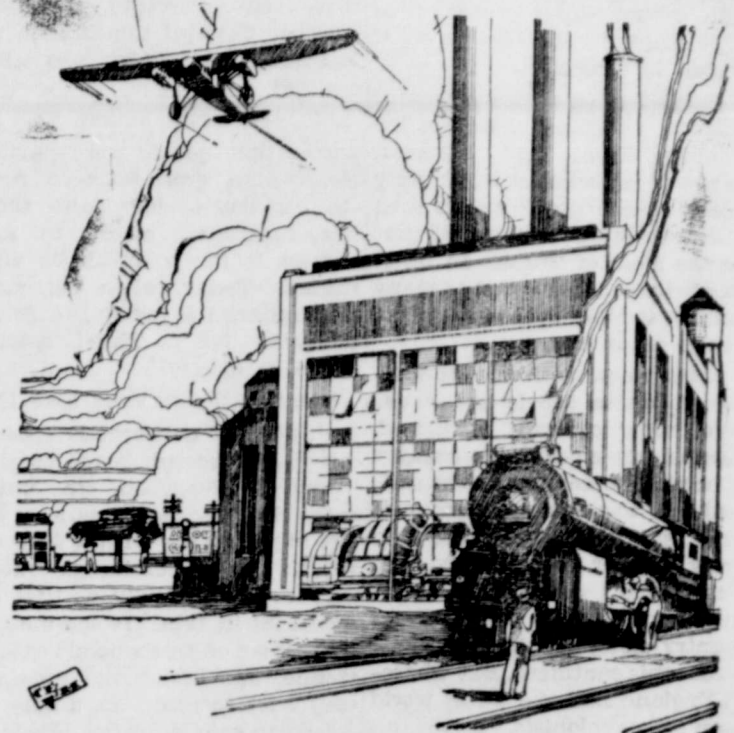

Foundation of Modern Lubrication
It is related that the foundation of modern lubrication was laid by the owner of a small petroleum refinery some little distance from the center of the Pennsylvania oil excitement in the 1860's. Hiram B. Everest endeavored to make from the residue of the petroleum refined in his little plant at Rochester, N. Y., an oil which could be substituted for animal, vegetable, and fish oils used in the currying of leather. He was successful, but found that someone had anticipated his discovery and had already protected the invention by patent.

Undaunted, Everest continued to treat the residue in an attempt to develop a suitable substitute for the tallow and animal fats used for cylinder lubrication. His experiments met with success, and he was soon able to offer to the public mineral oil as a steam cylinder lubricant.

Opened Way for Machine Age
In the beginning, petroleum lubrication was offered merely to meet the needs of machinery then in existence. Inventors and designers of machinery soon discovered that it was not merely more convenient and more economical than lubrication with chunks of animal fat, but that it solved previously unanswerable problems of construction. They were not slow to take advantage of the new lubricant. Thus petroleum lubrication opened the way for a new era of mechanical development.

Machines capable of moving at higher speeds and of turning out greatly increased amounts of work were designed. Devices with smaller bearings and more economical means for utilizing power—taking advantage of the new ability to put lubricants where needed in small quantities—were put into operation.

The machine age had opened. To meet modern conditions, scores of different kinds of oils are necessary; and, to produce them, specialists in lubrication not only study the crude oils from which they are to be made, but must develop treatments and processes to bring out desired qualities and characteristics.

Oils made from petroleum lubricate the automobile, the airship, the Diesel engine, the steam turbine, the high speed spindle, and, in fact, practically every moving part of any machinery in operation today.

Lubrication Gets Into the Home

Most of us realize but little how dependent we are upon lubrication. Our clothes are woven and sewed by machine only because lubricants have made possible development of high speed machinery. We have running water in our homes only because means have been found to lubricate pumping machinery. Electricity is ours at the turn of the switch because lubricants are available for the high speed machinery necessary for its production, and because other petroleum products have made possible transmission of current over long distances.

The sealed refrigerator units gives us an example of highly developed petroleum lubrication. Without lubrication of a specialized nature, our automobiles would not be the smooth-running vehicles they are today. Had not suitable lubricants been devised for fast moving parts, railroads could not operate at anything comparable with their present high speeds. Without lubrication, safety devices for modern railroad travel would be inoperative.

Without modern petroleum lubrication, elevators could not run, electric signs could not flash their advertising messages, printing presses could not operate, linotype machines could no longer make type slugs. Practically the only kind of work that could be accomplished in any industry would be that performed by manual operation of the most simple devices.

PLAIN FACTS ABOUT JAPAN

Whether Japan will continue to fight in Manchuria or will be able to maintain her position there without further bloodshed, the fact remains that as far as the United States is concerned this country will be better off if Japan is successful.

Cooled up on the mountainous islands of Japan proper, not including Korea and Formosa, there is a population of sixty three million people in an area only a little more than half that of the state of Texas. In other words there are 20 times as many people to the square mile in Japan as in Texas.

Industrious, active, adaptable, the Japanese people are under tremendous pressure to expand, particularly since their country is rapidly becoming industrialized. It was the same pressure that sent English colonists into every quarter of the globe, the same force that pushed American pioneers from the strip of country along the Atlantic coast across this continent. But whereas England had the whole world open to her colonists, and America a great, rich continent, Japan has found most of the habitable globe either already thickly populated or barred to her race.

Manchuria is her one great opportunity. It has over 81 million acres available for agriculture, immense coal deposits, and huge oil shale fields that are already supplying the oil for the large Japanese navy. Although Japan has less than one per cent of the population of Manchuria, she has invested $750,000,000 there.

Sooner or later it was inevitable that Japan would take political control of Manchuria. Now a good excuse has been provided her in the attacks on Japanese residents and Japanese property by Chinese and native Manchurians.

Taking a leaf from the American book, she has announced that her armed troops were in Manchuria only for the protection of Japanese lives and property. With American marines still in Nicaragua for the same reason, and with our armed intervention in Mexico only a few years behind us, it little becomes this nation to order Japan to desist.

But even if we could prevent Japan from occupying Manchuria, it would only intensify her hatred of this country and make her all the more eager to seize our territory, either the Philippines or the Pacific Coast for her crowded colonists. Far better to let her have Manchuria which will keep her occupied for another generation at least.

As for China's rights in the matter, they are negligible. China has been in the throes of revolution for 20 years. Her rule of Manchuria is purely nominal. She has demonstrated repeatedly that she cannot keep the peace there nor enforce her edicts. On the other hand, Japan can and will make it a law-abiding, prosperous territory. It will indirectly make her a better customer of the United States, particularly for American cotton. And she will maintain a barrier against the eastward march of Soviet Russia.

Of course there is the danger of another war between Russia and Japan. But if there are any two nations on the face of the earth whose conflict would hurt our conscience less, they are the cocksure Japanese and the Bolshevik Russians. Each of them are spoiling for a fight. Nothing would more tend to assure peace elsewhere than for them to exhaust their military energy against each other. And let this country keep out of it.

SPECULATION IN MONEY

That the world is now engaged in speculation as unreasonable and as unreasoning as during the bull market of 1929 is the implication of an item on hoarding in the current bulletin of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Gold and currency, however, instead of commodities and shares in corporations, are the favorites of the present mania.

Pointing out that bank deposits have decreased about nine percent since summer against a normal seasonal tendency to increase; and that Federal Reserve notes have been increased to the astonishing percentage of 38, against a normal of about three, the Institute questions whether the full significance of hoarding has been popularly realized.

In 1929, when money was so scarce that people were paying eight, nine, even fourteen percent for day-to-day loans, they were competing madly to exchange it for commodities and shares. Today, when currency is abundant the public is eagerly competing for it. This is speculation in money.

What is the motive? asks the Institute. If deliberately speculative, the recent boom in the prices of wheat, oil, etc., indicates that the hoarders may be left high and dry with a form of wealth whose exchange value may drop as rapidly as that of securities in 1929. If the motive is the fear of an economic catastrophe, one had better own an empty lot to camp on, a bale of cotton to spin, a bushel of wheat to grind. Money hoarding is not only unreasonable but unreasoning speculation.

WEST TEXAS BODY SEEKS TAX RELIEF

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce, which in the past has been one of the most active agencies for promoting bond issues and increasing expenditures of public money, has seen the light of a new day. The body has executed a neat about-face and is now actively promoting a reduced public expenditure campaign.

This is the program as it was submitted last week to the legislative tax survey created by the 42nd legislature, by Houston Hart, president of the West Texas chamber of commerce, and D. A. Bandeen, manager.

(1) That, in so far as the state is affected its budget be balanced by curtailing expenditures rather than by imposing new and additional taxes.

(2) That property valuation for state revenue purposes be made equal and uniform.

The officials, in offering these two major recommendations, contended that state costs are now far beyond their proper level, and beyond the increase in wealth and population of the state; that taxpayers are failing to pay the present costs of government, with the multiplicity of tax-taking sources; and that private business in Texas, and in some cases local governments, have set the pattern by curtailing their own expenditures. Elimination of non-productive governmental activities; reorganization and consolidation wherever possible, and improved business methods in public affairs—these also are aims of the WTCC and its committees, it is announced.

NEW RADIUM DEPOSITS

Gilbert LaBine and Shirley Cragg, mining engineers, while prospecting in the Great Bear Lake Region of Northern Canada, discovered veins containing thousands of tons of pitchblende, a high grade radium ore now valued at $7,000 a ton. It is a heavy black mineral and has a dull luster. Radium from this source will greatly cheapen the treatment of cancer victims and will break the Belgian world monopoly based on deposits in the Congo, which have been the world's richest and most plentiful source.

MR. ROSE PASSED AWAY

Mr. A. M. Rose died at his home in this city Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, after a long illness, altho he had not been confined to his bed but a few days. His funeral was held Monday afternoon and burial was made in the Pleasant Grove cemetery. The large attendance at the funeral was evidence of the high esteem in which the deceased was held by those who knew him and the sympathy felt for his bereaved family.

Mr. Rose was an old resident of this county, having made his home in Pleasant Grove community for many years. He was born in Wayne county, Tenn. March 6, 1850, and came to Texas in early life and was married to Miss Sarah Curtis in 1883. His wife and six children, two sons and four daughters, survive him. He moved to this city a year or more ago, but still owned a fine farm in the Pleasant Grove community and was one of the substantial citizens of the county. He united with the Presbyterian church at the age of 18 years, and was universally recognized as a good and upright man.

HIGH OFFICIALS ARE DEFRAUDED

John F. Beale, arrested Saturday in Wilmington, Del., is one of six men accused by federal indictment with participation in an alleged $1,000,000 mail fraud scheme.

Postal authorities claimed the defendants collected about $1,000,000—$100,000 from Houston, an additional $200,000 in Texas, $500,000 more in the United States and the remainder in foreign countries—Germany, Mexico, Canada and Italy.

Among those who in Texas alleged to have been defrauded who complained to postal authorities were three judges of high courts, a United States attorney from a district other than the Houston district and numerous other prominent persons.

Although the six were indicted by a federal grand jury in Houston on Feb. 15, 1930, the information was ordered suppressed by a federal judge for the time.

It was alleged in the indictment, which contained eight counts, that the defendants did unlawfully use the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud certain persons, namely: B. W. Deul, A. J. Studde, John Brander and others, by building, selling and distributing a machine, named and called by them the Hydro Power Unit, which was represented as being capable of manufacturing hydrogen gas and for the purpose of erecting and operating a factory for the production thereof.

The company was known as the Hydro Production Corporation of Dover, Del., and was incorporated Oct. 26, 1926.

The indictment charged the defendants represented a machine they had on foot would project water to such a high electrical frequency as to crack the oxygen atom and produce power 174 times greater than the power it required to crack it.

FARM SUCCESS

STARTS WITH HOME

In illustrating why any general plan for adjusting farming to meet the present situation must begin at the farm house, it is pointed out in a Texas A. and M. College bulletin that "the half-million farm families in Texas, if properly fed, will eat up each year the entire gross proceeds from a 5,000,000-bale cotton crop at 10 cents a pound."

"The farmer's own back door represents a steady market for $610 worth of food a year, of which, it is estimated, $547 worth can be produced easily on the farm from two cows, 60 hens, a quarter-acre garden, a half-acre fruit plot and a few meat animals. Here is a fully protected market in which price fluctuations make not a iota of difference and which takes the produce of 20 acres to supply.

"Likewise, the enormous market offered by the farm home for things of comfort and beauty may be partly supplied at small cost of using labor and ingenuity in improving yards and rooms and kitchens. The end of farming is comfortable, cultured, happy living and securing it is just as much a part of living at home as raising food."

The plan emphasizes 8 points for consideration in farm operation, as follows:

Selling to the farm home market first. (It was twice the size of the cotton market in 1931.)

Producing a small surplus of food to sell in town. (While producing the home living it is easy to raise a little extra.)

Using care before planting new cash crops. (Some may prove profitable, but plunging is dangerous.)

Planting feed crops to sell through livestock. (Demonstrations point the way, landlord-tenant leases may help.)

Cutting cost of production to the limit. (Yields above average and costs below average bring profits.)

Raising prices by producing quality goods. (High quality strict grading, alert marketing bring premiums.)

Preserving the land by terracing and wise utilization. (Present and future profits depend on building up the soil.)

No two farms are alike. (Visit farm and home demonstrations or the farm and home demonstration agents.)

HUDSON BROS. DRUGGISTS

NOT SO SIMPLE AS THAT

Liberty is now a McFadden publication and the editorial offices are in New York City. From the heights of that eminence Liberty has a solution for the problem of unemployed. Liberty proposes to send all the unemployed people of New York to the country. It is a problem, says Liberty, to do something about it this winter. On the farm the unemployed "can raise vegetables, corn and practically everything they need to eat." Then "they quickly become self-supporting."

Liberty says something about its being big enough to put all unemployed in the Nation on the farms, with a mule, seed and a grand chance at independence. It is positively cruel to puncture such a pastoral dream. But it would be still more cruel to encourage it to the point of getting people to act upon it.

The idea of a bushelman of New York's ghetto installed on a wornout farm with the first mule he ever dealt with in his life, with no gas, no city water, no electric lights, no sewerage and no coal for the first time in his life—it is preposterous, even from the bushelman's own standpoint. Then the bushelman is supposed to raise his food during the winter, mind you—probably bananas and charlotte russe, so far as the McFadden editorialists see—with his mule, his bare hands and his intimate knowledge of agriculture gained from a garment sweatshop. Small items like plows, axes, bedsteads, cookstoves, wagons and so on aren't figured in.

The idea that farming is a fool's job that anybody can master is prevalent in large cities. But the scarcity of prosperous farmers proves that it is not so. Liberty hopefully quotes Secretary Doak as saying that a million dollars would settle unemployment in the South by the mule-and-farm plan. If one-fifth of the unemployed are in the South, Mr. Doak's plan would endow each farm laborer with the munificent sum of one dollar. Mules at a dollar a head are inefficient farm animals. Liberty had better think up another plan.—Dallas News.

WHEN THE COLORADO RIVER RISES

Tucked-Away-in-Texas, your account of the Red River inspired me to write about "my" river, the Colorado river of Texas.

I have seen this river on a fifty-foot rise (October, 1930), and believe me, it was a sight. It was at least a mile and a half wide, in some places. This river doesn't come down on a head rise very often, although it has been known to do so. I will try to describe a rise.

A rise on the Colorado river is an awe inspiring sight. I took a position on rising ground overlooking the expanse of water, and watched the rolling surging, red-brown flood, as it swept majestically upon its course.

Gradually the water crept higher and higher, washing the lighter driftwood and debris from the inundated area. On the west of the flood was borne heavier driftwood and even large timbers, and curiously enough, these timbers indicated that the current was in an opposite position to that usually followed. Here and there were whirlpools, most of them small, but some large enough to swerve a boat about.

As I watched, portions of fences, uprooted trees, parts of bridges, and parts of outbuildings were borne along by the waves.

This awe-inspiring sight forced me to consider how lightly man's toil is swept aside by the elements. Not only were these portions of his hard work borne along, almost as chaff before the wind, but the crops that he had patiently labored to plant were now inundated and destroyed.

The one redeeming factor of the flood is the good season left in the overflowed land.—Gay Caballero in Farm and Ranch.

NEGROES SEE MIRACLE

Scores of devout negroes in Dallas, Texas, have been coming to the home of "Sister" Hattie Henderson to see what they believe is a miraculous image of the Crucifixion on the window shade. The image appears every afternoon against the shade of a window facing westward. Police, first called to the house when the crowd led to rumors of a riot, insisted that defective glass in the panes of the window caused the images. "Sister" Hattie and her friends said they could see the Crucifixion, an empty chair, an open Bible, and four heavily armed soldiers outlined in bright sunlight against the shade.

was appointed pastor of the Comanche Methodist Church and Rev. E. M. Daily was returned as pastor of the Comanche Methodist Circuit at the conclusion of the annual session of the Central Texas Conference at Fort Worth.

AGENTS TRAIN TO AID FARMERS SUPPLY OWN MEAT

Modern meat cutting methods are being introduced on Texas farms this winter by county farm and home demonstration agents who are leading the way in the most determined drive ever staged in the State for bountiful supplies of farm produced meat for farm homes. It is estimated that at least three out of five farms will can and cure one year's meat requirements this season. In the top picture Roy W. Snyder, meat specialist in the Extension Service of Texas A. and M. College, is coaching a group of Texas agents recently assembled for their annual district meeting in Amarillo in the fine points of meat cutting. Below, the county agents are busy practicing cutting meat to give economical and tasty cuts which make farm meat canning and curing easy. Where 122,394 farm families in 112 Texas counties provided their own meat supply in 1930, there are 196,056 families doing so this season, a recent survey shows.

STUDENT DIRECTORY HAS PLENTY OF COLOR

Most every color of the rainbow, two seasons, two cars and several vocations are represented in the names of the students in Texas Christian University. There are Browns, Whites, Grays, Blacks, Greens and Lavenders. There are two Summers and one Winter, a Ford and a Packard, to say nothing of a Fox, a Parrott, a Crow and a Stag.

There are Knights and a King to represent royalty, as well as a Male and a Mann. A Beaver and a Bass are to be encountered around Brooks.

There are the Millers, Bakers, Porters, Weavers, Gardeners, Carpenters, Farmers and a Cook. The latter might bring home the Bacon, or he might raise Cain, Cotton or Coffee. The household side was not neglected when such names were issued as Wall, Kitchen, Floor, Glass, Hall and Chambers.

When Mussolini went to Naples he was guarded by 25,000 of his troops, and aeroplanes flew over the tops of all buildings along his route of march. These slight precautions were effective and the Italian premier returned to Rome in safety.

WEST VS. EAST

Why is the east so often favored at the expense of the west? The writer believes the answer is simple, and quite human.

Washington City, the national capital, is located in the extreme eastern part of the country. The president, government departments, and bureaus, are in daily contact with eastern bankers, and manufacturers, and industries of every kind, all plugging for themselves and for the east—and to heck with the west.

The east is more densely populated than the west, and this predominating influence is being constantly exerted in the form of individual and collective pressure upon government officials, in order that the government attitude may be favorable to the eastern viewpoint.

The west is more sparsely settled, because it is newer country. It has fewer of the greater cities, its vast plains are dotted with immense ranches and enormous wheat farms, and its factories are limited in comparison with the east.

The east has many small states, each with the same representation in the senate as the great commonwealths of the west.

In the house of representatives the east has more representatives because of its predominance in population.

The few senators and congressmen from the west must battle continuously with this horde of lawmakers from the east or go down in disaster in the enactment of national laws. And the south is in the same predicament as the west.

Presidents and government officials are only human, after all, and it is not surprising that this constant wave of eastern pressure should have its effect, especially when the west is far, far away from the seat of government.

The time is approaching when the national capital should be moved from the east to a more centrally located city, where it would be easily accessible for all sections of the country, and where the public ear would be more easily reached, and various needs and requirements of the different sections could be more readily understood because of closer and more frequent contact.

The east, of course, would howl itself into a spasm over such a revolutionary suggestion, but it must come sooner or later.

The west and the south cannot forever submit to domination by a selfish eastern oligarchy.—Exchange.

FEDERAL TAXES

DUE TO GO UP
Leading Republicans in Washington now believe that it is a practical certainty that the individual taxpayer must dig deeper next year for his contribution to the upkeep of government.

Just which section of the population shall bear the brunt of the increase, in what form it shall be raised and how much it will total have become the commanding questions in Capitol Hill.

The administration is going to ask congress to raise more revenue. Reluctantly the Republican leaders on the hill have resigned themselves to the unpleasant task of boosting levies on the eve of a presidential campaign. The Democrats, uncommitted as yet, are expected to sanction some form of new revenue.

With another billion dollars of deficit to balance off, Secretary Mellon has nearly finished drafting the plan President Hoover will send to congress in his annual budget message. New taxes will be combined in this program with plans for further borrowing and an insistence on drastic government economy.

Higher rates on the big money incomes and on the large inheritances appear certain.

Considerable favor is evident in congress also for the imposition of some excise levies, applying on luxuries. The treasury has been considering this recommendation in the form of selective sales taxes. There is no chance for a general sales tax.

Some consideration is being given to dropping down the exemptions to include more income earners.

Because the gigantic public debt of $16,000,000,000 has been reduced faster than the original program called for, by applying surpluses in the years of plenty, the administration is prepared to resort again this year to borrowing in an attempt to tide over part of the deficit.

Positive Proof of FORD ECONOMY

City of Detroit purchases 137 new Ford cars
Hundreds now in use prove low cost of operation

THESE 137 new Ford cars represent one of the largest deliveries ever made to a municipality at one time.

21 radio-equipped Ford scout cars were traded in on this purchase. They had been operated day and night for two years in heavy traffic and all kinds of weather.

Their individual records ranged from 78,434 miles to 143,723 miles with a grand total of 2,283,097 miles. The operating cost of the 21 cars was 2.284 cents a mile—less than 2 1/3 cents. This cost included all fuel, oil, tires, repairs and every other item except depreciation and insurance.

Of 577 Ford cars in Detroit City service, the 300 in the Police Department traveled a total of 6,591,937 miles during the past fiscal year, at an average cost of 2.9 cents a mile.

Many claims have been made on operating costs, but here in the carefully kept motor car records of the City of Detroit is positive proof of Ford economy.

In the paragraphs above, it is seen that 21 Ford scout cars averaged less than 2 1/3 cents a mile and 300 Ford cars in all branches of Detroit police work averaged 2.9 cents a mile!

Day and night, twenty-four hours a day, these Ford cars are in operation. Few branches of transportation demand such grueling service. The records show that low fuel and oil consumption is but one of the Ford's many economies. Ford materials, simplicity of design and accuracy in manufacturing provide unusual strength, stamina and freedom from replacements and repairs.

The individual car buyer as well as the purchasing department of a city or a business cannot afford to ignore the proved economy of the Ford car.

STEAK FROM PINE LOG IS SCIENTIST'S GOAL

Transformation of a pine log into the equivalent of a juicy filet mignon may not be such an absurd idea as it sounds if the efforts of Dr. Friedrich Bergius, winner of the Nobel Chemistry Award and famous for his experiments in synthetic food manufacture, are successful.

"The material reward of the Nobel Prize will enable me to carry on my work, which has been most costly," Dr. Bergius said in revealing his work to convert wood into an edible food.

During the war the German scientist succeeded in transforming indigestible cellulose into carbohydrates, getting cattle feed, and he believes that one of the infinite possibilities of wood is a product which might be called synthetic meat.
