From Pampa's past

This old-fashioned light fixture maintains a lonely vigil over the brick platform at the Santa Fe Railway depot. Could it possibly be awaiting the return of the throngs of people, which once arrived and departed on passenger trains which are now only a memory? Or could it be listening to the ghosts from Pampa's historic past?

Carter says willing to take veto political consequences

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — President Carter, delivering a campaign-style speech in sweltering heat, said Saturday his administration is determined to curb inflation, reduce red tape and rewrite regulations so ordinary people can understand them.

Carter vowed that he'll use the veto if necessary to hold down federal spending "even if it means I have to take the political consequences. ... Short-sighted selfishness can only lead to a spiral of inflation that nobody will be able to stop."

At least two women and one man were overcome in the 96-degree weather and had to be helped to the shade as Carter spoke at the dedication of a post office building here.

Carter returned to Washington on Saturday evening aboard Air Force One, arriving at Andrews Air Force Base at 7:06 p.m. EDT.

The president began his day in Houston, where he held a series of private meetings with business representatives, Hispanics, blacks and Texas campaign volunteers from the 1976 campaign.

From Houston, where Carter addressed a $500-a-plate fund-raising dinner on Friday night, the presidential party went to Beaumont, an oil refining town on the Gulf of Mexico.

Carter's last stop on the two-day trip was at Fort Hood, a large Army base, where he watched a demonstration of military firepower. The president stressed familiar themes, but did so with campaign-style rhetoric reminiscent of his 1976 oratory.

Carter has said before that he'll veto inflationary spending bills, but during his Texas visit, the president repeatedly emphasized that he would use the veto even if it means angering special interest groups.

Carter identified the groups as highway and defense contractors, home builders and dam builders, farmers, educators, veterans, and local and state government officials.

"I am prepared to use the full powers of my office — every resource at my command, including the veto — to hold the line on the federal budget," the president had said the night before at the fundraiser.

Aboard Air Force One, one presidential adviser, asking not to be named publicly, said Carter probably would veto even a politically popular tax cut if Congress includes in it "the regressive language" of an amendment offered by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis.

Apparently the adviser was referring to a major amendment that would cut the maximum rate of income tax on capital gains by almost half, from the present maximum of 49 percent to the Steiger proposed level of 25 percent. Capital gains profits earned on the sale of stock and other property.

Although presidential aides described the purpose of the Texas trip as only partly political, Carter spent much of his time Friday evening and Saturday in Houston where he met with political groups.

Carter huddled privately with groups of business executives, Hispanics, blacks and persons who had volunteered for his 1976 presidential campaign.

President's itinerary changed, Army spectacular cut in half

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

FT. HOOD, Texas (AP) — President Carter watched Army and Air Force units launch a mock attack on the Central Texas plains Saturday in an impressive array of firepower.

Temperatures hovered in the 90s under clear skies as the president, with rolled-up shirtsleeves, watched the staging at the largest U.S. Army installation.

An estimated 1,660 Army personnel of Gen. George Patton's old 2nd Armored Division and 120 Air Force personnel from Arizona turned the valley into a smoldering and dusty battlefield.

Following the show, Carter greeted troops at the installation 60 miles north of Austin.

The $1 million show came during Carter's four-stop, two-day visit to Texas. It followed the president's claim Friday in Houson that the U.S. would never let Russia "push us around."

Accompanying the president at Ft. Hood were Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Ft. Hd commander Lt. Gen. Marvin Fuller.

Before the president's arrival, Army officials denied that adverse publicity foced them to cut in half an originally scheduled one-hour, $2 million show.

"It wasn't a result of publicity," insisted Capt. Bill Wisenbaker of the Public Information Office. "There were changes in the president's itinerary."

Three factors — scheduling changes, maneuver duplications and constant cost concerns — went into the decision to cut back the air strikes and bombardments, Wisenbaker said.

When asked about the cost of the demonstration, Carter said it was "completely justified."

"If nothing else, it was worth the expenditure of funds just for my own education because I'm faced every day with a requirement to approve or disapprove expenditures of funds for these kinds of weapons or others that might replace them," Carter told reporters during a visit at a static display site.

"I need to know the level of operational capability of them (weapons). It gives me a chance to learn the special attitudes of the secretary of defense, secretary of the Army, generals and the others who command these forces."

Fuller sat next to Carter in a shaded reviewing stand some 200 feet above the mock battleground.

Each piece of equipment involved in different maneuvers was explained during the demonstration.

Tanks, armored personnel carriers, attack helicopters, antiaircraft guns and howitzers blasted targets from several hundred yards to seven miles on the dusty, rolling hillside.

In the mock attack phase of the show, a narrator explained that U.S. troops theoretically had just intercepted enemy radio transmissions. A Russian-sounding voice then boomed over the public address system and was quickly scrambled out by Army interference.

The 25-minute demonstration was meant to show America's readiness for any enemy forces, including Warsaw Pact nations, a narrator said.

Fishermen seek 'Jaws Three'

MONTAUK, N.Y. (AP) — Dozens of Long Island fishermen vied Saturday to catch a great white shark that escaped after a 14-hour battle the day before.

Among them were John Sweetman, 46, and his six-man shark-hunting crew aboard the 40-foot boat, Ebb Tide. They had reported harpooning a huge shark Friday morning, and then being dragged by the fish a few miles through the Atlantic Ocean off the eastern tip of Long Island.

The crew described the fish as 25 to 30 feet long and weighing as much as two tons. They said their boat had at times been pulled backwards at a speed of 3 mph.

But after 12 hours of work on Saturday, the Ebb Tide and its crew returned — sharkless — to its mooring.

The publicity from Friday's duel between shark and boat was good for business in the Montauk area.

Carl Darenberg, a spokesman for the Montauk Basin Marina where the Ebb Tide is moored, said that for the first time in several weeks, all charter boats from the marina were out fishing. He estimated that a total of 60 charter fishing boats in the Montauk area had gone out on Saturday's shark hunt.

Darenberg said one man, Edward Leaird of Saybrook, Conn., reported by radio that he had harpooned a large shark from his sport fishing boat about 40 miles south of Montauk Point. Darenberg said Leaird told him the harpoon was attached to a keg buoy, and that the shark pulled the keg about 150 feet below the ocean surface and disappeared, Leaird told Darenberg.

It was not known if this was the same shark that Sweetman fought Friday. Darenberg said Leaird, too, was giving up Saturday's hunt, although he might return to sea Sunday to look for the buoy and shark.

Also, the pilot of a plane owned by the Montauk marina reported spotting and taking photographs of what he said was a giant shark shortly before noon Saturday.

The shark affair gained quick and widespread media coverage, and some skeptics have questioned whether the fish was a great white hoax. But Mike Albronda, whose boat Montauk was next to the Ebb Tide on Friday, said the shark was the real thing.

"It's the biggest man-eater I've ever seen there," he said. "I've seen every kind of shark and I never thought there was one so big in the whole ocean."

Sweetman said that the fish had turned his boat around three times on Friday, "like a piece of soap in a bathtub .... We were nothing to the fish. He just played with us."

Finally, the fish broke the quarter-inch, 1,650-pound-test nylon line where it was connected to a steel cable, and slipped away.

Era ends at Cabot as last backhoe produced

An era at the Cabot Corp. machinery division has come to an end, according to Vic Raymond, vice president and division general manager.

Production of P&H backhoes for Harnishfeger Corp. of Milwaukee, Wis., has ceased. Cabot has manufactured the backhoes under a subcontract from the Wisconsin firm since 1964.

During the 14 years workmen at the local Cabot facility have produced 2,922 of the backhoes which have been utilized worldwide.

The machinery division has been gradually reducing the manufacturing of these large hydraulic backhoes during the past several years in order to make room for production of Cabot's own products, particularly the oilfield servicing workover and drilling equipment, Raymond said.

He noted that all employes who have been involved in this manufacture are now working solely on Cabot equipment.

"We sincerely regret ending our relationship with Harnischfeger Corp., which has helped us very much during those years when the division really needed the subcontract work to keep our employment level.

"The demand for Cabot oilfield equipment throughout the world has increased to the extent that we need to use our facilities here in Pampa for our own manufacturing."

Raymond reported that the backhoe phase-out, plus the $6 million expansion which is now underway, is allowing the plant to expand production by three to four times during a five-year period.

This has permitted increasing employment at the machinery division from 611 persons to 850, Raymond noted.

Briscoe wants some assurance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has let enthusiastic tax relief advocates know there will be no quickie call of a special session and none at all unless he is convinced it would be successful.

"I would not expect the studies going on will be complete until the latter part of the week," the governor told newsmen Friday night in Houston, after introducing President Carter at a Democratic dinner.

However, Briscoe did not rule out a special 30-day session, which only he can call for a specific purpose.

"I am giving serious consideration to various proposals," Briscoe said in his first official statement on the subject Friday. He added later, in Houston, that "the real advantage of a special session is that they permit pinpointing one or two specific issues and concentrating all the effort on those matters."

Briscoe has had Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in and out of his office almost every day of the past week. He said his staff was working with representatives of Hobby and Clayton to see if "meaningful tax relief could be provided the citizens of Texas and limits placed on future taxes and spending."

"I have made no decision," Briscoe repeated Friday night.

Child welfare board needs foster homes

The Gray County Child Welfare Board will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the County court room.

Bob Carmichael, chairman of the board, said one of the topics that will be discussed is the adoption of a public relations program. Carmichael said that the state has provided the board with information about the program and the information will be distributed at the meeting.

He added that the information will be used to help make the community aware of the need for foster homes and foster programs.

In other action, the board will appoint a temporary chairman for the month of July.

The old business will consist of a report from last month regarding the bills that were tentatively approved.

An execstive session will also be held for case reports.

Clements touring Panhandle

Bill Clements, Republican gubernatorial candidate, will visit Pampa Monday as part of a three-day visit to 15 Panhandle cities this week.

A dutch-treat luncheon for Clements will be held at noon Monday at the Pampa Club in the Coronado Inn.

Earlier Monday he will meet with news media representatives at 9 a.m. at the Amarillo International Airport before beginning the tour in a motor home.

The gubernatorial candidate will visit Panhandle American Agriculture's strike office at 10 a.m. and meet with White Deer residents at the Wheeler-Evans grain elevator at 11 a.m.

At 6:30 p.m. Monday a Hemphill County picnic for Clements will be held at the George Arrington ranch, located east of Canadian.

Garment firm not closing

The president and owner of Marie Foundations of Pampa, Jack Swallow, Friday denied allegations by employees that the womens' undergarments firm is soon to quit business.

Referring to a general information letter recently signed and circulated by employees that the company is on the verge of quitting production Swallow said, "We have no intentions of closing our Pampa plant."

Swallow, who said he was in town to reassure concerned employees, stated that in fact, "Our company is now laying the plans to expand production over the next five years."

He said that Marie Foundations is curently negotiating to begin producing womens' apparel other than strictly undergarments.

Swallow's company owns three other plants besides those located in Pampa and McLean. One is in McAllen, Texas, one in Renosa, Mexico and the other is located in El Salvadore, South America.

He said his company "expects no lays offs in the coming months." He said projected future expansion "will mean more jobs in Pampa."

Employment numbers have dropped from "about 500" five years ago to nearly 175 today. Employees of Marie Foundations, here and in McLean, expressed public concern "that cheap labor in foriegn countries is contributing to fewer jobs in the two Gray County factories.

Swallow said his company "is not planning the opening of any new plants in foriegn countries." He added that foriegn operations are a "high risk" enterprise despite lower operating expenses with cheaper labor.

He cited the possibility of "nationalization" by foriegn governments as the risks faced in operating out of U.S. boundaries.

Marie Foundations is the primary supplier of wholesale undergarments to Sears, Roebuck, Inc. Swallow said his company will continue to be Sear's major supplier and that no production cutbacks are planned in any of the five plants.

Of the new expansion plans, Swallow said he anticipates the Pampa plant "will be the center of productivity."

"There is no danger in loosing the Pampa plant. We will continue operation and will expand in the future. We are now experiencing some marketing problems, but when we get them all worked out, the plant here will be a nice, busy place by the end of this year," said Swallow.

He added that as president and owner of the company, "I have more to loose (financially) than do the employees. I simply can't afford to shut this plant down with all the capital I have invested in it."

Marie Foundations is headquartered in McAllen.

Few Words

Graduation time, and after that the livin' won't be easy.

You can set that line to music with a Down South theme.

For the oncoming generation, graduation time is emotionally wrenching. If you are a successful student, you find that ladder of psychic rewards — grades — has been snapped from beneath your feet, and there you are without the daily fare of tutorial approval.

In the other hand, if you have been an indifferent student, you may tend to ace the adult phase of your life with a sense of low achievement, perhaps, even of failure.

A few words from an Old Grad may help to set things in perspective.

First, your academic record whether good or bad has only an incidental bearing on the serious business of earning a livelihood. This is a whole new ball game. If it's a job you're looking for, the man wo hires you isn't interested in the past. What he wants to know is what you can do for him.

At best, his beginning impression is that you can't do much, but maybe you can learn. S he tries to determine whether you are of a type who will be around long enough to become useful. Essentially he looks at attitude. Do you like yourself? Do you treat yourself well? What is your appearance? Is your hair neat? Are your clothes presentable?

Next he tries to make a reasonable forecast of your behavior. How far do you live from the place of employment? Is transportation a problem? Will you show up on time regularly? Will you stick to business when you get there or do you gab tom much? Are you basically a problem solver or just another problem?

Now, when you understand the type of thoughts that arise naturally in the other man, you know pretty well what to do. Look at yourself in the mirror. Does what you see appeal to you? If not, what kind of improvements ought to be made? And remember as to your natural features, it pleased the Creator to make you as you are. If He is pleased, who dares to be displeased?

You can prepare for the transportation angle in advance. So you can say to the interviewer, "I live within walking distance," or "I can ride with a friend," or "I have my own car," or "I expect to ride the bus." The point is, you have the answer figured out ahead of time.

Likewise, you can anticipate the employer's concern about too much socializing on the job. Maybe he won't even bring the subject up. Even if he doesn't, you can snatch the words right out of his brain if you say, "I know that many young people waste time talking to one another on the job. I want you to know the difference between play and work. I am here to work." Even if the guy happens not to hire you, he'll remember you.

Looking for a job is the hardest work you'll will ever be called upon to do. Be optimistic, but don't expect too much from the first interview. Figure on making a mimimum of 24 application calls. If you don't connect, call back within two weeks. When you call back the third time, they'll know you are serious.

Good hunting. School is just an extension of the womb. College is a period of prolonged immaturity. Life begins with full-time employment or self-employment. Future flings open the door of achievement. Success is like a banana split that you can design yourself.

The unknown history

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

The true history of man is the history of the development of the human mind. Most of the histories that have been written have overlooked this factor or treated it with only passing interest. The written record has been, in the main, a chronological tale of economic development or military and political conquest.

The record left by each ethnic, racial or geographically identifiable group has largely been a record of bloodshed, interspersed with interludes of exploration, invention and discovery. The written pages of the homo sapien story are stained with the crimson of hemoglobin.

Pick up any book called a history. It will feature the names of kings, stars and presidents. It will locate the sites of ferocious military confrontations and frequently provide a corpse count. It will recite, sometimes with sardonic wit, the double - dealing, the throat slitting, the connivance and skulduggery which either went on behind the scenes among the movers and shakers or occurred overtly in the presence of assembled multitudes.

When was the wheel developed? We don't know. But we do know when Sargon I, at the head of his troops, thundered across the Assyrian plains in the horse-drawn chariots to rain clouds of arrows and lightening bolts of spears upon his foes.

When was the discovery that water runs downhill naturally, instead of being animated by some invisible deamon, either malignant or benevolent? As a result of this breakthrough engineers were able to construct the pyramids on level ground by building long treanches filled with water. Water that is held still will always be level. It cannot run at all when it is held in one place. But who found that out? And when?

We do not know. Newton finally stated something akin to it, but the law of gravity had been used long before his time. History informs us when Alexander the Great set out to conquer the world, where he fought his battles, and even the strategy and tactics he employed.

In the long struggle for survival man has distinguished himself by developing his mind. It is only in recent times that our minds have become capable of considering the development of the mind as a uniquely human achievement. It is the mark of the civilized mentality that it can deal with abstractions, concepts and ideas.

Early man, at the dawn of human history, had difficulty with abstractions. Savages and barbarians still do. This is why early manifestations of nature were frequently misunderstood. The primitive mentality, unable to cope with ideas, peopled the world with invisible entities, both helpful and harmful. Even the early Greeks, as advanced and cultivated as they were, developed a religion as crowded with gods and goddesses as the anteroom of the U.S. Congress is crowded with patronage seekers.

It is too hard to think of love as a concept, a body of thought. So the Greeks had a god who epitomized it. Beauty, another abstraction, had a goddess. The crops grew in the fields, not because of the abstraction of fertility, but because of the intercession of Ceres. And so it went.

Today we scoff at these pagan follies, forgetting that many in this age are identically distracted. The Greeks had their Oracle. If a person planned a business venture, marriage, a long journey, he approached the Oracle, made an offering of some kind, including some coins, and presently from the interior of the monument or cave came a message, usually misleading and often in poetic form.

The modern oracle is located in the District of Columbia. There, we see the magnificent temples of the early Greeks brought to new life. We have a temple to war and one to peace and one to agriculture and certainly one to postal service. We pay in our coins, sometimes under duress, and the oracle speaks to us, rarely in poetry anymore, but always with power. We are told what to do and what not to do and we kneel in awe and say: "It's pretty bad, but what would we do if we didn't have all these goods (politicians) to guide us and correct us and to make our paths straight?"

Modern man is still having difficulty with abstractions. And this is most noted whenever elections are held. We come to believe that the persons presently in power are "bad" and that the ones we hope to get in will be "good." We are nearly always disappointed, but the same phrases repeat, election year after election year.

The process will predictably continue until such time as we come to grips with the ideas of power and what it means. Our problem in this land is not bad men so much as it is a bad philosophy. A change in the cast of characters provides only modest adjustments if the drama remains the same.

Paul Harvey

It's you in the lockup

Something is wrong with this picture: You are locked up and criminals run loose.

You law-abiding Americans are barring your winows and bolting your doors and huddling, frightened, inside. Meanwhile, outside the sickies and the malicious and the vicious take over the street your taxes paid for.

There's something bad wrong with that!

Now there is a doorknob for your house which howls like a siren if somebody tries to break in.

That, as they say, is a Band-Aid on a cancer.

Have you heard what hotels and motels are having to do to keep their rooms safe from rapists and robbers?

The Americana Hotel in New York City tried a system in which you were given a key to the door and a code card for the TV set at the time of check—in.

When you opened your door you had to run to the TV set and insert that coded card—within 20 seconds—or else an alarm would go off and police would converge.

That system was abandoned after too many false alarms. But it indicates the frightful problem of trying to make public accomodations safe for private guests.

Keys never were good enough. One New York hotel has only 1,500 rooms — but loses 10,000 keys every year. Some are taken for souvenirs. Some are taken innocently by mistake. But how do we know? And how do you justify it to the insurance company when you have 15 keys for every room floating around out there somewhere?

And despite the best efforts by hotels to insure your safety and to shush up their failures — there was no way to hide it when singer Connie Francis was raped in her motel room. Or when a Brazilian businessman was murdered in his hotel room. Nobody has an accurate tally on how many of the some two million hotel and each day, but judging from soaring insurance rates the total exceeds a thousand a day.

The luxury Fontainbleau Hotel on Miami Beach employs a full - time security force of 36 guards, 6 detectives and 4 supervisors.

Burns Security Services reports its "hotel security business" increased 44 percent last year.

Guardsmark, Inc. — another security company — reports demand for investigators up 122 percent in nine months.

All of this security inevitably adds to the higher prices of hotel rooms.

Similarly, the now conspicuous and the additional inconspicuous guards stationed in most department stores add to the prices of everything we purchase.

Americans are trying to rescue themselves. There are now 2,000 crime prevention programs in operation across our nation helping to safeguard citizens against burglars and muggers.

Stanford University coeds are attending classes in which they are taught to "gouge, kick, crush and render senseless."

Though you girls may be sued if you do.

Our recent years' preoccupaton with the rights of wrongdoers has tended to put the law on the side of the lawless.

Just a kid in China

By TOM WICKER
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times
News Service

LOS ANGELES — If elected in 1980, Ronald Reagan, at age 70, would be the oldest president ever inaugurated. Put his proposition to him and you get a rueful grin together with proof positive that he's been pondering the matter — a practiced recital of how many U.S. senators are past 65, and a quip that in China he'd be considered just a kid.

True enough, as is a list compiled by his long - time political aide, Lynn Nofziger, of famous leaders who were not spring chickens - Churchill, Adenauer, etc. But the real reason why the Reagan staff - and perhaps Reagan himself - doesn't think the "age issue" fatal is that he neither looks nor acts anything like the usual idea of a man 67 years old. Vigorous physically and mentally, Reagan in a cowboy hat - still a splendid political prop - looks evey inch the Marlboro man; on the podium or before the camera, nobody in either party, save perhaps Edward Kennedy, can match his style and glamor.

If all the signs are to be believed, moreover, Reagan has given all but his final blessing to the following scenario:

— Immediately after the 1978 elections, a short period of intensive "testing the waters," alerting supporters and potential rivals, as well as preliminary staff work.

— By late March or April, 1979, a formal announcement of the third Reagan candidacy for president.

Reagan himself, while denying that a decision has been made, concedes that that's the way he'll do it if he does it at all. Important staff members, some of whom thought after his narrow loss to Gerald Ford in 1976 that he'd never run again, say they now expect him to do so; and he has disabused none of them of this idea.

The rationale for a spring announcement -aside from the example of Jimmy Carter three years ago - makes much sense. Reagan's strong showing in 1976, his hold on a fervent following, his standing as the pre-eminent Republican fund - raiser and campaigner and the apparent rightward swing of the voters - with California's Proposition 13, a lineal descendant of earlier Reagan proposals, the latest evidence - give him at least the possibility of "pre-empting the field" for 1980, preventing a host of potential candidates from entering the race and leaving perhaps only Ford as a serious rival.

Reagan learned in 1975, moreover, that it's hard to raise funds for a "maybe" candidate who might not finally make the race. Knowing well the temper of Republican conservatives, he and his men also believe that if he appears to be vacillating, men like Richard Viguerie, the right - wing fund raiser, will push forward some willing conservative candidate - say, Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois. That would cause party divisons and complications Reagan would like to avoid.

The Reagan brain trust doubts that possible candidates like Sens. Howard Baker and Robert Dole would want to take on Reagan in the primaries; they believe that neither of the Texas hopefuls, John Connally and George Busn, has the necessary party or public support; and they think Gov. James Thompson of Illinois would decide to wait rather than risk his career in a race against Ronald Reagan.

As for Gerald Ford, some Reagan staffers think he'll run, others that, like Hubert Humphrey in 1976, he'll only keep himself "available" in case a deadlocked party turns to an ex - president. Either way, in their view, Ford will find organizing and paying for a national campaign far more difficult for a private citizen than it was for an incumbent, with Air Force One, televised news conferences and White House favors and staff at his disposal.

One stratagem Reagan probably would not repeat, it's said, is his selection in 1976 of a more liberal running mate, Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania.

Reagan thinks today that move was a net plus for him; but in 1980, his age will make the possible succession more of a factor and aides think that would make it necessary for him to choose someone ideologically compatible. Reagan himself says he's always been fascinated with the idea of letting the convention choose the vice - presidential candidate from a list of persons "acceptable" to the presidential nominee.

As for Jimmy Carter, the general attitude around Reagan was expressed by an associate: "Is it possible that one man could make Richard Nixon and Gerry Ford look good?" In fact, Carter appears so vulnerable that some Reagan analysts are wondering if the likelier Democratic candidate may not be Edward Kennedy.

Ronald Reagan himself isn't yet acknowledging his own candidacy, let alone picking his opponent; but as one of his lieutenants put it, "If he'd let me make the moves in 1975 that he lets me make today, he'd be president right now."

Texas agency places July oil production at 100% of demand

AUSTIN, Texas — The Texas Railroad Commission set the state's July oil production allowable at 100 percent of market demand for the 17th consecutive month and decided to switch next year from monthly to quarterly allowable hearings.

Mack Wallace, chairman of the commission, said the hearings had become "formalities in most instances," lasting about five minutes. The quarterly hearings will save staff time, he said. Hearings will be held in January, April, July and October next year.

The July allowable is 3.6 million barrels daily with actual production estimates at 2.9 million barrels daily. Nominations for July production totaled 3,521,607 barrels, a decrease of 23,780 barrels from June.

A bill to raise inflation

Controversial measures to deal with major economic problems usually have such a long gestation period that by the time the baby arrives, it is often no longer needed or wanted. The Humphrey—Hawkins bill is a classic case in point.

Humhrey—Hawkins was conceived four years ago, in a world where many believed unemployment to be the major public problem, with inflation subsidiary. Today, inflation is clearly the major problem and the jobless rate is falling of its own accord.

Nevertheless, this last gasp of New Deal economics is already through the House and awaiting delivery in the Senate, where it is known as S.50.

What's wrong with S.50? Simply this: It commits the federal government to do whatever is necessary to drastically lower the unemployment rate, including providing public jobs for those who can't find employment elsewhere.

If you don't have to worry about inflation, the way to increase employment in the private sector is for the feds to pump more money into the economy. If you do have to worry about inflation, that kind of policy amounts to pouring gasoline on the fire.

Humphrey—Hawkins would be inflationary in three ways:

First, because the type of economic stimulation envisioned above would itself contribute to inflation under current conditions.

Second, because the anticipated 1.7 million public service jobs to be created under the bill would cost a whopping $17 billion a year. That sum — added to the "normal" federal deficit — would also show up as printing—press money.

And third, because the availability of government jobs at unrealistically high rates of pay would force private employers to compete by raising their pay scales. That, in turn, would cause higher prices.

Put it all together, and Humphrey — Hawkins would likely add more than five percent to inflation by its target date of 1983, at which time unemployment is supposed to be 3 percent for adults and 4 percent overall.

The trend of inflation is already in the wrong direction. For 1977, the rate was 6.5 percent. For the fist quarter of this year, it was running at an annual rate of 9.3 percent. For the three months ending in April, it was over 10 percent.

Inflation well into the double digits would produce tight money, high interest rates, a slump in the housing industry, and a general recession. And a general recession would produce — you guessed it — higher levels of unemployment. We calculate the overall loss of jobs at 1.5 million by 1983, if this bill passes and its objectives are vigorously pursued. Humphrey — Hawkins, therefore, would become a cause of the very problem it is supposed to solve.

The final irony is that this bill is being pushed by some as a memorial to the late Senator Humphrey, who had a reputation as a friend to the downtrodden. But inflation is the cruelest enemy of these people today. It hits harder at those with fixed incomes and little left after paying for life's necessities. Ther are better ways to honor Senator Humphrey.

Test your skills to cope with basic household tasks

By Science Research Associates

It's no secret that families in the 1970s are quite different from families of 20 or 30 years ago. Today, it is not uncommon for all adults in the household to work outside the home. There may be fewer children—sometimes none. Household tasks may be determined by one's desires and skills, rather than by one's sex.

Also, as in many other areas of life, technology has brought to household management rapid, more efficient ways of cooking, cleaning, and decorating. Yet, decisions must still be made about what is best suited for one's own budget and needs.

The skills for running a household often are taken for granted, although this area of knowledge is so basic that it can greatly affect other aspects of one's life.

Finding, furnishing, and maintaining a place to live, and taking care of oneself as an adult, require special skills and a good bit of specialized information. Often, the success a person has in doing all this adds comfort, joy, and zest to the rest of one's life.

Another area of concern is nutrition. A number of authorities have speculated that Americans eat not only too much but unwisely, which often results in numerous physical and psychological problems.

The questions included in this section of the SRA Coping Skills Test are designed to assess your knowledge of basic household tasks and nutrition, including maintenance, cooking, cleaning, minor repairs, and some shopping tasks.

Mark the answers you think are correct, then turn to page 00 to see how you score in managing your household.

Texas population climbs slightly, census shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dramatic rises in the median family income of blacks and hispanics propeled Texas to a slight statewide increase, according to a Bureau of the Census report.

The median incomes for Texas families increased by $214 — 10 times more than the national norm — from 1970-75. The median family income for Texans was $12,672 in 1975, up 1.6 percent from 1970.

Black families in Texas experienced an $882 annual increase, bringing their 1975 median family incomes up 11.1 percent to $8,791.

Hispanics realized a seven percent increase — $619 — to $9,363. Whites had a $58 — or 0.4 percent — increase to $13,299.

Southern families averaged a $588 increase during the period, bringing their annual median incomes to $12,443, a 4.9 percent rise. The median family income for the country showed a $21 increase to $14,094. All comparative figures in the report were based on 1975 dollars and adjusted for inflation.

Louisiana paced the South's rise with a 13.8 percent increase to $12,576. The only area in the South to show a decline was the District of Columbia, which fell 0.4 percent to $14,001.

Maryland registered the highest median family income at $17,556, an increase of 8.1 percent. Mississippi remained the lowest at $9,999 although the state's figure rose by 12.2 percent.

The Bureau of the Census defines the South as Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas and Virginias, Kentucky, Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Whites in the South had a median family income of $13,350 in 1975, an increase of 3.2 percent since 1970. The region's blacks experienced a 12.5 percent increase to $8,177 and families of "Spanish origin" had a 1.5 percent rise to $10,009.

Reports released previously have shown that the Northeast has the highest median family income as of 1975 at $15,085, a $255 decrease from 1970. The North-Central section of the country also reported a drop in median family incomes from $14,846 in 1970 to $14,813 in 1975.

Figures for the West for 1975 are expected to be released next month but a Census Bureau spokesman said Thursday that those figures are expected to "be around $14,000 with perhaps a very slight increase."

Former police chief pleads innocent

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Houston police chief has pleaded innocent to a five-count federal indictment alleging perjury, obstruction of justice and extortion.

Carrol Lynn, who headed the Houston Police Department in 1974-75, was indicted June 12 for allegedly extorting $25,000 from an oil company sales manager in exchange for his intercession with federal officials to terminate a securities violations investigation.

Conviction on the charges could mean up to 40 years in prison for the 23-year police veteran who is the highest ranking Houston police officer ever to be named on criminal charges.

Hard to find Republican openly running for President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald Ford makes speeches and public appearances and works with an organization called the American Enterprise Institute as he doesn't run for president.

Ronald Reagan makes speeches and public apperances and works with an organization called Citizens for the Republic as he doesn't run for president.

Bob Dole makes speeches and public appearances and works with an organization called Campaign America as he doesn't run for president.

It is hard to find a Republican who will admit running, but just the hope of making Jimmy Carter a one-term president has lots of them tripping over one another trying to campaign by not campaigning.

The presidential primaries are nearly two years away. Nobody has announced a candidacy yet; it would be unseemly. But there is no shortage of candidates to be candidates: "We must have 20 of them out there," says one Republican strategist.

The list is long and luminous, including senators, congressmen and governors.

There is Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, who got a national image as ranking Republican of the Watergate committee; former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who turned Republican after heading Democrats for Nixon; and George Bush, who has done most everything else for the GOP, as former envoy to China, CIA director, U.N. ambassador and party chairman.

Newer names include Reps. Philip Crane of Illinois, Jack Kemp of New York and John Anderson of Illinois.

Reagan's near miss against Ford in the battle for the 1976 Republican nomination and Ford's against Carter in the election have kept their partisans dreaming of what might have been. Recent polls showing either leading Carter in hypothetical rematches rekindled the flame.

Party insiders believe Ford still commands the loyalty of the traditionalists; that no new mainstreamer has a serious claim to the mantle.

Reagan keeps himself in the forefront of candidate talk through Citizens for the Republic, which he formed from the remains of his 1976 organization. It supports one of the busiest speaking schedules in politics. Reagan also writes a newspaper column and has a radio show.

Ford has benefit of the staff provided all former presidents, but he leans even more on his position as "distinguished fellow" of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank based in Washington.

Ford spends a lot of time speaking on behalf of the institute, largely to college audiences, but he also is busy maintaining party fences at rallies and fundraisers across the country.

In a recent speech, Ford listed the people he thinks are the Republican contenders. He included his own name. But when pressed on his intentions, he says only that he is keeping his options open.

Dole, who commands a lot of party loyalty for his 1976 campaigning, has formed Campaign America, a committee to support his political activity. He has been to at least 35 states this year, making him and Bush the most active prospects.

When Ford passed over Baker for the No. 2 spot on the 1976 ticket, Baker let it be known that No. 2 would not be enough the next time around. As Senate minority leader he has a large staff and shares with House GOP leader John Rhodes a "Leadership Fund" that supports their party activities.

Baker now spends most of his off-duty time in Tennessee running for re-election. A big victory would raise his prestige for 1980.

Kemp is a rising star, an early tax revolter said to be developing into the GOP's hottest platform personality.

He was among the first to tap the rising taxpayers' rebellion and is sponsoring proposals in Congress to cut income tax rates by 30 percent. A former professional football star, he also appeals to youth.

There is talk about some young GOP governors, people like James Thompson of Illinois, Robert Ray of Iowa, William Milliken of Michigan and Pierre S. DuPont of Delaware.

Thompson is running for a second term, and like Baker needs a big victory to boost his national prospects. He won popularity in the party by winning in a 1976 election that otherwise was dismal for Republicans.

Ray, who seems sure to win a fifth term in Iowa this fall, is popular government has the image for reelection in Michigan.

The most invited speaker in the party. He formed the John Connally Citizens Forum to support his travels.

Dance lessons were expensive for widow

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A San Antonio dance studio bilked a near-invalid, 79-year-old widow out of more than $700,000 for dance lessons, trips and club memberships, the Texas attorney general's office has alleged in a deceptive trade practices suit.

The suit, filed here Thursday in state district court, seeks to enjoin Dance Center Inc.; its president, Jack Klein of Houston and 13 other persons from continuing their alleged deceptive trade practices.

Klein was indicted Wednesday by a Bexar County grand jury on stock fraude charges. He remained at large Thursday night, said District Attorney Bill White.

The suit alleged the studio used advertisements "designed to attract lonely people, who were often middle aged or older, searching for new friends and companionship after the death of a spouse."

Customers would be given a "test," the alleged main purpose of which was to establish a close personal relationship with the instructor. By establishing such a relationship, the suit alleged, the defendants were able to discover the net worth of the customers.

The defendants would then "flatter, cajole and pressure" the prospective students into signing repeated long-term contracts for dance lessons, according to the suit.

Cash was preferred, the suit said, the financing plans were offered.

In addition to dance lessons, memberships in social clubs were sold that required persons to purchase advanced levels of instruction.

The suit listed six unidentified persons, including the elderly widow, who were allegedly sold dance lessons, escorted trips and club memberships totalling $789,000 over a four-year period from 1972 to 1977.

The elderly woman, who had suffered a stroke and could not walk unassisted, paid more than $700,000 of that total in cash and jewelry for dance lessons, memberships and trips, according to the suit.

"At the time the defendants abruptly closed their dance studio, 'Mrs. A' was a patient in a nursing home, confined to a wheelchair," the suit said of the widow.

Attorney General John Hill asked in the suit that each defendant be required to pay a civil penalty of $2,000 per violation and asked that court also order the defendants to compensate those who purchased lessons.

Houston job market to expand

HOUSTON (AP) — The job market in the nation's fifth largest city is expected to continue expanding, but many of those who are looking for work have no marketable skills, according to a report by the Texas Employment Commission.

The report also indicates that although average unemployment in the metropolitan area is expected to drop from a projected 4.2 percent in 1978 to 4 percent in 1979, unemployment among blacks will remain significantly higher.

According to the 1970 census, about 24 percent of the city's 1.7 million inhabitants are black while the Hispanic-surnamed population is estimated at around 20 percent.

Job opportunities in Houston, says the TEC, are "overbalanced" towards those who have specific training, skills or experience. And trainee positions, once the avenue of the unskilled into the job market, are less common as firms tend to promote more within the organization.

The report says white collar workers will continue to hold the bulk of the jobs in Houston, followed by those in professional, technical and related fields.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Texas weather stuck with a familiar script Saturday as residents broiled under mostly fair skies.

Temperatures were in the 90s and crept toward the century mark by mid-afternoon.

Forecasters said the only chance of showers for the state would be in extreme South Texas.

45TH BIRTHDAY

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Museum of Science and Industry celebrated its 45th birthday in 1978.

The museum, founded by philanthropist Julius Rosenwald, opened in 1933, and it still occupies the reconstructed Palace of Fine Arts from the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition.

The museum was visited by some 300,000 people its first year and currently draws about four million visitors a year.

Are You Going To Tell My Age?

This was Goldie Poole Hash's inquiry when this photograph with her husband, Byron, was taken. Mrs. Hash, a native of the Panhandle, recently celebrated her birthday. (Pampa News Photo by Pam Turek)

Search for pickup, killer of family is continuing

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — A ground and air search continued Saturday for the pickup truck and camper that carried three members of a San Antonio, Texas family who were shot to death Thursday.

Authorities hoped the pickup and camper would give them some clue about the identity of the killer or killers of the family.

A report Saturday of an armed man in a house near here turned out to be false, officials said. The man was a hunter.

The bodies of Air Force Tech. Sgt. Melvin G. Lorenz, 38, and his wife, Air Force Staff Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31, were found just off Interstate 35 south of this central Oklahoma town Thursday.

The body of Lorenz's son, 12-year-old Richard J. Lorenz, was discovered Friday in tall weeds just off the shoulder of the interstate, about one-half mile from the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz, authorities said.

Authorities said the youth was identified by description, including scars from open heart surgery.

The woman had been shot three times and her husband and step-son had been sho twice.

Panhandle pioneer's birthday

By PAM TUREK
Pampa News Staff

Tuesday was Goldie Poole Hash's birthday. She was not telling specifically which birthday. Although she did tell where she celebrated her first one born in Silverton.

Silverton was a stop on the way to Mrs. Hash's father's ranch. Jason "Jase" Poole ranched along the Canadian River.

The Poole's are not strangers to Pampa. There were six sisters and two brothers who grew up on the family ranch. Mrs. Hash's brother, Jim, owned Poole's Steakhouse. Now Jim's Steakhouse.

Three sisters helped Goldie Hash celebrate her birthday. Twins, Jodie and Jackie, and Garnet. Garnet helped run her brother's steakhouse until about 1965. The twins taught school in the Panhandle as did Mrs. Hash.

Goldie Hash's first teaching assignement after graduating from West Texas Normal School (West Texas State in Canyon) was at Adobe Walls.

Her classroom was typical of the times, one room with several grades. "...everybody was for himself...when I taught down there (at Adobe Walls) I had 15 most of the time."

"...we used Texas books...when they finished one book they went on to the book for the next grade."

The last place Goldie Poole Hash taught in her 20 years service was at Keptlinger in Gray County. Her class presented her with a quilt with each student's signature embroidered on it.

Mrs. Hash is very proud of the quilt," it's wearing a little now, but some of the boys (who signed the quilt) still come by to visit and they have grandkids of their own."

During her teaching years, Mrs. Hash's father sold the ranch on the Canadian River and retired to Pampa. Their home was where Ideal No. 2 is on Brown Street. The home was later moved to 321 E. Tuke where sisters, Garnet, Jackie and Jodie now live.

It was in that same house that Mrs. Hash first met Mr. Hash.

"I was home that day," recalls Mrs. Hash, "it was a Saturday, I believe mother and I were quilting." It was the day Mrs. Hash's future husband, W. Byron, came to rent a room.

Byron Hash was working for the drilling department of Gulf Oil. Until his retirement he did mostly trouble shooting for Gulf.

"...my that man has a funny last name" young Miss Poole commented to her mother. They were married May 17, 1938. Their only daughter, Mrs. Bennie Schackleford of Walter, Oklahoma was born in Breckenridge (one of the various Gulf transfer sites).

Sitting in her pleasant home Tuesday surrounded by family, Mrs. Hash reminisced about the "old times" growing up on the river.

She told of the family travelling to Pampa four times a year for supplies. "...we would buy 100 pounds of potatoes, a hundred pounds of flour and sugar, and coffee the same way," she said. "...we cooked for the cowboys and those provisions went fast."

The Pooles lived in their home south of the river when they were working cattle and moved to the north house when farming was the priority in their lives.

"Wherever the most work was is where we lived...the work told us where we would be living," explained Mrs. Hash.

Working long hours and being far out in the country made "doing for yourself" a necessity. Mrs. Hash recalls breaking her arm. "...the worse scolding I ever got was for falling off a horse and breaking my arm...my parents set my arm, there were no doctors around." That was a way of life.

What does Goldie Poole Hash do now after living the life of a Panhandle pioneer and raising a family?

"I'm busy all day...I do a little bit of cooking...a little bit of sewing...a little bit of baking...a little bit of housecleaning..." said the vivacious lady with a twinkle in her eye.

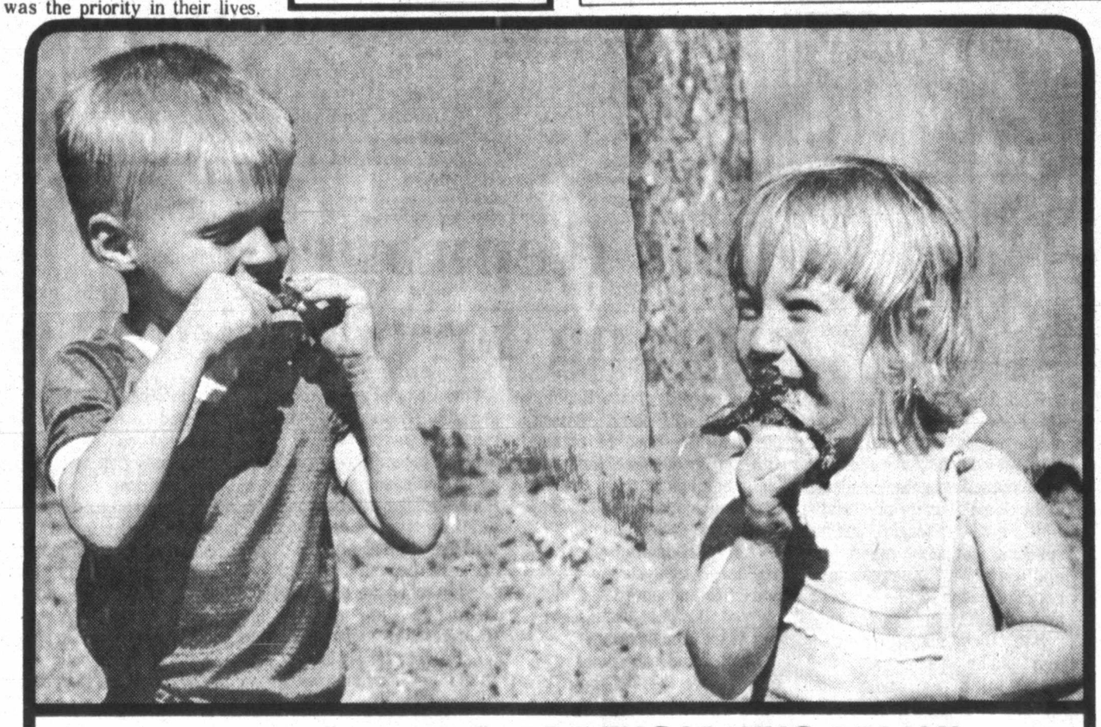

She does a lot of living.

Senate could block labor bill filibuster

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd predicted Saturday that there will be enough support to stop a new filibuster on labor law changes when a revised bill comes to the Senate floor.

He rejected suggestions that the bill may die in committee.

"I think it's premature to write the obituary for labor law legislation in this session," he told reporters at a weekly news conference.

After 19 days of debate and six unsuccessful attempts to end a filibuster, the Senate agreed Thursday to return the labor law bill to committee for redrafting.

The Senate Human Resources Committee has announced that it will hold new hearings on the bill Wednesday and Thursday.

One of the labor movement's top legislative priorities, the proposal would remove some of the obstacles to union organizing. The changes are intended to halt employer efforts to block unionizing through extended litigation, harassment of employees and disregard of existing labor laws.

Byrd blamed the intense lobbying of both business and labor for the failure of supporters to shut off the filibuster.

Byrd proposed a substitute to the bill which was being filibustered to answer some of the concerns expressed by opponents. But it was never considered by the Senate because of the filibuster. The committee will consider it during the hearings.

Mosquito control around the home

The recent rainy period has brought a mosquito problem to many communities of the Texas Panhandle. Hordes of mosquitoes have been reported biting residents, especially in eastern Panhandle communities.

"Mosquitoes can develop wherever standing water is available," Layton Barton, Gray County Extension Agent, said. "Old tires, tin cans, birdbaths or roadside ditches all can hold enough water to provide breeding sites for mosquitoes."

If mosquitoes are a problem where you live, the county agent said, the first thing to do is to eliminate their breeding sites. Empty out old tires and place them where they cannot collect additional water. Flatten and discard tin cans so they will no longer catch and hold water. Change the water in birdbaths each week. Drain any standing water.

"If there is standing water that serves as a breeding site but cannot be eliminated, treatment with a larvicide will be necessary," Barton said. "One of the most effective larvicides is No.2 diesel oil with a biogradable spreader, applied at a rate of 20 gallons per surface acre of water."

"Abate, malathion or Dursban applied to standing water at labeled rates also are effective larvicides," Barton said. But he cautioned that labels should be read carefully to determine the hazards these insecticides pose to applicators, fish and animals that may use water.

Control of adult mosquitoes offers the most immediate relief. Inside the home, aerosol bombs containing pyrethrins offer quick knockdown of adult mosquitoes, the Extension agent said. The killing effect of pyrethrins is very short-lived, so frequent application will be necessary to control adult mosquitoes inside the house. The "pest strip" offers effectice indoor control for long periods. "One pest strip for each average size room is necessary to control mosquitoes," Barton said.

"Perons who are active where mosquitoes are a problem should use repellents," the Extension agent advised. "These repellents will protect you from biting mosquitoes from one to three hours, depending upon your activity."

Adult mosquitoes around the home can best be controlled by space or residual treatments of insecticides such as malathion, Dibrom, methoxychlor, or Dursban, he suggested. Space treatments generally fogs, have very little residual activity and require repeating at frequent intervals. Space treatment should be done during the cool hours of the night or early morning and when wind velocity is less than five mile an hours.

Residual treatment applied as mists or sprays to the resting sites ofadult mosquitoes gives longer-lasting control than space treatments, Barton noted. These should be applied to vegetation, eaves of roofs, under porches and similar shaded areas where adult mosquitoes rest day by day.

"The hot, dry summer weather that is normal for the Texas Panhandle should not dry out temporary pools of water and give people some eventual relief from these biting mosquitoes," Barton said.

The Chamber of Commerce's 1978-1979 budget included promotional programs for Panhandle, according to Chamber President Mrs. Mogie McCray's statement released at the meeting.

Its board of directors are Mrs. Mogie McCray, president; Les McNeill, vice president; Mrs. Tresa Goodman, secretary; Mrs. Beth Hodges, Jim Austin, Gary Beddingfeld, Mike Roberts and Toby Cunningman, directors; Howard Lane, past president; J.C. School leaders complete handicapped program plans

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State public school leaders completed work Saturday on policies and procedures that would give every handicapped child in Texas a maximum opportunity to finish high school.

The third and final reading of the "Texas State Planning Design for Education for Handicapped Children" came before the State Board of Education in a special called meeting.

The plan was approved tentatively in February and May board meetings. Twenty regional workshops have been held throughout the state to gather public and professional comment plus five formal public hearings.

"This is our attempt to develop the very best document possible so our public schools can begin serving our handicapped children," said Don Weston, director of special education for the Texas Education Agency.

Don Patridge, TEA associate commissioner, said the new policies pinpoint four major changes in public schooling of handicapped childred:

—The education of the handicapped child is basically the responsibility of the local school district.

—The full range of educational services for handicapped children is consolidated within a single program for the first time.

—The program of instruction for handicapped children must be part of the regular general education program whenever possible.

—The new policy defines state responsibility for special education, at the same time blending federal requirements into the state and local program.

"Within this framework, every handicapped child will be given maximum opportunity to graduate from high school," Patridge said.

Th policy and procedures document calls for state appropriations of $237.9 million in the 1978-79 school year. A separate program for the deaf will get $12.2 million and another $2.9 million gees to the visually handicapped.

Texas will receive about $30 million in federal funds to help support special education furing the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1978.

In approving the policy document, the board considered a "purpose" provision saying that: "Public education is the responsibllity of the state for the purpose of providing all students regardless of abilities the opportunity to develope to their fullest individual potentials." On the motion of board member James M. Binion of Abilene the words "regardless of abilities" were removed.

"That would just get us into a can of worms with some people who have a different idea than we do," he said.

Library to mark middle of program

The Lovett Memorial Library will have a "Half-Way Party," marking the first half of the summer reading program, at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

First through sixth graders, who have read five books or more; preschoolers, who are in the program; and special education classes can participate in the fun - a puppet show, "Hubert (the caterpillar) Who Thought He Was A Mustache," and refreshments.

The reading program, "Pum to Chimera," ends Aug. 1 with another party at which 25 hand drawn posters by a Pampa youth, Frank Quarles, and 25 books will be given to the people who have read the most books.

Wheat loan rate may go up 10 cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's loan rate for 1978-crop wheat is expected to be raised early next week to $2.35 a bushel, up 10 cents from what it is now, informed sources say.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland is expected to announce the increase Monday in Kansas City where he is scheduled to speak at a meeting of the American Seed Trade Association, the sources, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday.

The loan rate is what farmers can borrow from the government by using their crop as collateral. They have the option of paying off the loan if market prices are higher or letting the government take over the commodity if market prices are below the loan.

The loan rate also is a factor in determining the amount of direct government payments that may be due farmers when market prices fall below target levels.

It also plays an important part in determining how high wheat prices have to go up before farmers can begin selling grain stored under long-term contracts with the government.

Under the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, Bergland has discretionary authority to keep the present loan of $2.25 a bushel or raising it.

The expeced boost to $2.35 a bushel will have the affect of locking in tighter a large reserve of wheat now being stored by farmers for up to three years. But if market prices go up to a certain level before the three years are up the grain can be released for sale.

As it is now, wheat in the three-year reserve, about 350 million bushels — cannot be withdrawn by farmers until prices go up to 140 percent of the loan rate. Since the loan now is $2.25 a bushel, the release price on the market would have to be $3.15 a bushel.

But by raising the loan rate to $2.35 a bushel, the new trigger price would go up to $3.29 a bushel. Wheat market prices at the farm in May averaged $2.80 a bushel.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that hog producers plan to increase production only 4 percent this summer and fall, well below what some experts had been expecting.

If their plans are carried out, it will mean that the consumer pork supply will not expand as much next winter and in the early months of 1979 as had been thought earlier. In turn, he smaller pork output will help keep prices of live hogs and cattle up through the next six months or so.

As of June 1, the nation's inventory of hogs and pigs was 54.9 million head, up 1 percent from a year ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

"The inventory increase was limited by death losses which were about one-fifth more than a year ago due to effects of prolonged cold weather and disease problems," the report said.

Looking at the pig crop in the six months of June through November, the report said that farmers intend to have about 6.25 million sows farrow, an increase of 4 percent from the same period of last year.

Department officials until now had held out the possibility that the June-November pig crop may be up 7 percent to 8 percent, or more.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

June 26, 1978

Interesting, glamorous opportunities could present themselves to you this coming year, adding zest and excitement. Just remember: Real promise and rewards lie with things that can stand the test of time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take a little extra cash with you today. Unexpected expenses are apt to pop up. You could be caught embarrassingly short. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you change your mind about a course of action you know is right in order to pacify another, you'll wind up serving neither of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's possible you'll be the one to let the cat out of the bag regarding something you wanted kept secret, by talking without thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unusually high expenses relating to an outside activity could put a considerable dent in your wallet today. Live within your income.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) You're not normally a quitter but today because of something emotional you won't be as persistent as necessary to achieve your aims.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Impatience could cause you to repeat a tactic that's proven unsuccessful. Profit from experience. Give yourself time to work things out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A friend's offer of aid may be suddenly withdrawn today. Before passing judgment and getting upset, find out why he backed off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) More time is required to work out an arrangement involving another. Nothing will come off as you hoped if you plan impetuously.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Projects you're working on today will not have the full attention they need. Don't expect good results for half effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone you meet socially today could initially make a strong impression, but the image will fade just as quickly under closer scrutiny.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Family-related issues must be watched very closely today so that they don't get out of hand emotionally. Supress your impatience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could have difficulty working something out today because you didn't listen closely enough to instructions.

South African blacks smoldering

By Brandt Ayers
(Third of a Series)

JOHANNESBURG (NEA) - She is from Soweto, the poor, black twin of rich, white Johannesburg. Before dinner her conversation was charming, learned and amusing, but when table-talk turned to politics she became a different person.

She was a woman of metal and fire; her words were like cold steel and her eyes singed the soul. She argued for an end to American investment in her country with logic that burned like dry ice:

"Yes, blacks will lose their jobs. We will suffer, but the black man knows how to suffer. The white man doesn't. We want to see the white man suffer."

Her toughness was mirrored in the words of one of the Soweto student leaders who saw 176 of his neighbors, friends and classmates shot to death by police in the June 16, 1976 Soweto riots.

"We are going to suffer most, but that means nothing," he said evenly. "On June 16 we suffered so the mechanism of exploitation would be abolished. We will continue to suffer for the right cause so, in the long run, we shall achieve what we want."

These are some voices from Soweto. There are others, probably most, who are silent, uninvolved because they fear losing their jobs or going to jail or both. But these are the voices of the leaders followed by even the moderates with whom I talked.

It is from those people in that place that many Americans, with more wishful thinking than realistic evidence, hope that a rebellion will spring to take the Nationalist government by the shoulders and shake it until it comes to its senses.

The rebellion will be a long time coming. Even peaceful protest requires money and organization. It is virtually impossible to organize an American-style civil rights protest there today.

A large-scale passive disobedience campaign nationwide occurred for the last time in 1960 and provoked a massacre in another black township in the same state of Transvaal near the white town of Sharpeville.

The organized campaign was called to protest the Pass Laws, an internal passport system for blacks used to control their movement within the country. Nervous, poorly trained police fired 700 shots into the crowd at the township of Vereeninging, killing 69.

What followed was a massive series of detentions, jailing without trial, and bannings, the outlawing of organizations and sentencing of individuals to house-arrest without even being charged with any crime.

And then, the Nationalist-dominated Parliament went to work forging a chain of legislation through the 1960s restricting black movement, association, place of residence and ability to organize politically. In 1966, for instance, one year after the passage of the Voting Rights Act in the United States, The Political Interference Act made it illegal for blacks to join an open (integrated) political organization.

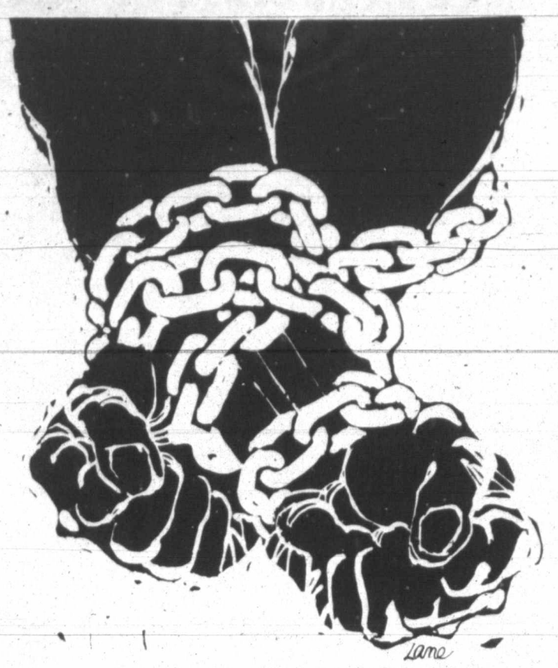

The government waited for over a year after Soweto had inspired similar disturbances in other townships and black universities. But on Oct. 19, 1977, there was another massive wave of detentions and bannings.

Soweto's natural and, by American standards, moderate leadership, the Committee of Ten, was detained without charge or trial and they are still in jail. Among many others jailed was the black editor, Percy Quoboza, whose newspaper, The World, was banned.

The actions were directed by BOSS (the Bureau of State Security) which must be one of the world's most efficient enforcement agencies. It was built by the current Prime Minister John Vorster when he was Minister of Justice in the 1960s.

Vorster knows the methodology of underground organization by instinct from his experience as a leader of a subversive organization during World War II, which, to be fair, was more anti-British than pro-Nazi.

BOSS agents and informers are everywhere. Leaders of the Soweto Student League told me they can't have a meeting with more than three-to-five at a time.

"When you have a larger meeting, you will see someone there taking notes," one of the students said.

With this chain of choking legislation and security police, how did the Soweto riots happen? Was it a spontaneous combustion of repressed fury or was it Communist-inspired?

Student leaders glibly talk a Marxist-Socialist line, but question them closely and their utter innocence is discovered. They haven't studied any form of government that closely and know nothing about either capitalism or communism.

For them, Marxist language is nothing more than symbolic speech — at least for now — a black-power salute shaken in the face of a (capitalist) government which represses and humiliates them.

Still, Soweto doesn't look that bad to Americans who carry pictures in their mind of the American ghetto — miles of dirty concrete under the menacing ugliness of huge tenements.

I was driven the 12 miles from Johannesburg to Soweto my first day in South Africa. On a cool, cloudless summer day in late January, I was surprised to see little houses floating on the swells of gentle green hills covered by a mist that gave the scene a fairyland appearance.

The mist turned out to be choking clouds of coal smoke. It was supper-time and only 10 per cent of the homes have electricity. There may be as many as 20 people in the three-room houses which they can't own, anyway. They have no means of protest because they can't even elect their own city council. It is appointed.

They have never seen an American ghetto and they can only compare their lives with that of Johannesburg with its clean streets, expensive shops and tall, air-conditioned buildings. They are twins in total population (approximately 1.5 million apiece) but that is all.

What is its future? Probably more spontaneous eruptions, more deaths and more bannings and detentions. Yet, everyone with whom I talked is still willing to talk, to negotiate — even though they say so with deep pessimism.

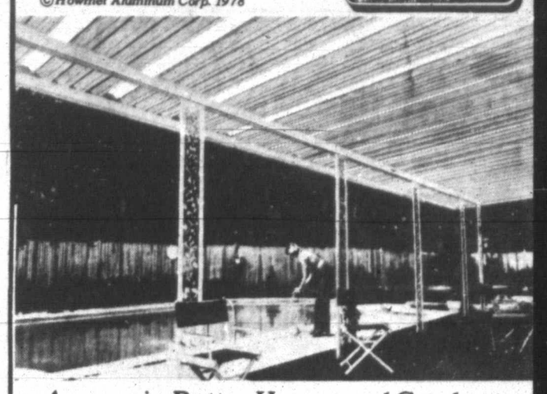

One composed and eloquent student leader told me with a weary smile, "It is said that one cannot foretell his future. In Soweto, we know what our future will be."

I hope he is wrong.

Brandt Ayers, editor and publisher of The Anniston, Ala., Star, recently visited South Africa on a lecture-study tour under the auspices of the U.S. Information Agency.

Around the world, an estimated 1.5 million persons die each year from mosquito-borne malaria and millions more are stricken. Mosquitoes also spread yellow fever and encephalitis.

Sky high

Mark Case of Cree Companies leaps high in the air to snag the ball on a play to second during 13-15 Babe Ruth tournament action Friday. Pampa Hardware's Lane Howard sucessfully stole the base as the throw from catcher Mike Snider was high. Cree stole the show, however, putting together a big inning to beat Hardware 13-7.

Historic match up

Holland vs. Argentina in World Cup finals

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Holland's disciplined goal-making machine pits itself against the Latin rhythm of Argentina on Sunday in a historic finale to the 1978 World Cup soccer tournament.

Neither team has ever won the championship, an event which draws hundreds of millions to their television sets around the world.

In U.S. sports terms, the World Cup combines all the excitement of the World Series and the Super Bowl rolled into one.

Although soccer still is just catching on in the United States, it is estimated that up to one billion people around the globe may be watching Sunday's final match.

It will be a traditional contest between the the two strains which dominate world soccer — the virtuoso and effervescent South American style, and the well-oiled, slick passing and tackling of the European school.

No European team ever has won the World Cup in South America, and 77,000 wildly cheering spectators at River Plate Stadium never will let their opponents forget that.

Thousands are ready to pour into the streets as soon as the game ends, waving blue and white flags and chanting victory songs to paralyze Buenos Aires with celebrations, as they heve done twice earlier this month.

Holland is in the final for the second straight time. The Dutch lost 2-1 to West Germany in the 1974 final at Munich.

Most of that great Dutch team still are playing — except for the legendary Johann Cruyff, who has retired.

Argentina, less polished but riding the crest of nationalistic frenzy, also fell short of a world title in 1930. It crossed the La Plata River and was beaten by neighbor Uruguay 4-2.

The orange-shirted Dutch, who have scored more goals than any other team in the World Cup, enjoy the nickname "clockwork orange."

They make a specialty of a midfield whirlpool - spinning passes among each other that have dizzied opponents, then they dart into defensive gaps to convert.

Virtually no Dutchman plays in a fixed position. Fullbacks like Ernie Brandts guard their goal with tackles so fierce that they sometimes score against themselves. But they come back with great long-range shots from as far as 40 yards to win games.

Attackers like Robbie Rensenbrink usually line up as midfielders, but combine remarkable dribbling and formidable shooting. Rensenbrink is the scoring star of the team, having tallied a total of five goals during the month-long tournament, more than any other player in the Cup.

On their way to the finals, the Dutch beat lackluster Iran 3-0, tied 0-0 wih Peru and were defeated once by Scotland 3-2. But they put their goalscoring magic ino gear in the second round of the Cup, giving Austria a 5-1 trouncing, tying 2-2 with defending champion West Germany, and defeating Italy, the surprise team of the Cup, 2-1.

Italy was the only tam which was able to stop Argentina, winning 1-0

The Argentines edged traditional soccer power Hungary and France by similar 2-1 scores. In the second round, they blanked Poland 2-0, drew 0-0 with three-time world champion and archrival Brazil, and crushed Peru 6-0 to storm into the finals.

The Latins have shed their image as the ad boys of international soccer under the direction of their chain-smoking coach, Luis Cesar Menotti.

A decade ago, Argentine national teams were feared as rough tacklers and often expelled from games. In the 1966 World Cup, English Manager Alf Ramsey called them "animals" after they lost a game with poor sportsmanship at Wembley Stadium.

Now, in a change of roles, Argentina's Menotti is voicing fears that the finals might turn "into a punchup" if the Dutch players use as much body contact as they did against Italy earlier this week.

The two key marksmen to watch on the Argentine side are Mario Kempes, a 23-year-old striker who plays in Spain, and Leopoldo Luque, a lanky, long-haired hometown idol, from the River Plate club.

Both have scored four goals so far in the tournament and are the spearheads of the Argentine attack.

Keystone tied, Lopez eight back

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Pat Bradley fired a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to scramble into a tie with veteran Jane Blalock after 36 holes of play in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Eight strokes back was rookie senation Nancy Lopez, who was faltering in her bid to become the first professional woman golfer ever to win six straight Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments.

Lopez, still dogged by writers and photographers, turned in a 38-36-74 to put her 3 strokes over par after two days of play. She fired a 1-over-par 73 Friday on the 6,398-yard course.

"I'm not giving up. I have tomorrow," she said after turning in her scorecard. "I may be out of it now, but I could come close tomorrow.

"I'm not playing as well as I was a couple of weeks ago, but I'm not going to let it bother me because I know the reason — I'm tired."

Bradley, looking for her first win in 1978, and the third of her career, picked up birdies on 9, 14 and 15.

Blalock, who fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67 Friday, shot a par 34-38-72 Saturday for a two-day total of 139.

Trailing the leaders by three strokes was Jane Renner with a 70-72—142 total, while Betsy King and Gerilyn Britz ended the day with scores of 145 each.

Peggy Conley, who fired a 3-under-par 69 Friday for second place, shot an 80 Saturday, leaving her well back in the pack.

Bradley turned pro in 1974 and won her first tournament in 1976, finishing second six times and capturing "Most Improved Player" honors. She won the Bankers Trust Classic in 1977.

The pig-tailed Blalock, who last year became only the fourth woman ever to win more than $100,000 in a single season, is looking for her 20th win since turning pro 10 years ago.

Lopez, the 1975 Mexican amateur champion who in her first event as a professional was runner-up in the U.S. Open, is the tour's leading money winner in 1978. Her $130,198 in earnings this year is more than double the $57,493 collected by tour runner-up JoAnne Carner.

In fact, all Lopez has to do here to extend another record is finish in the money — which is anywhere in the top 50. The $153,336 she has won so far as a pro is the most ever for a rookie.

Every time she sweetens the pot, she builds on the $153,102 Jerry Pate won on the men's tour as a rookie in 1976.

The 5-foot-7, 140-pound Curtis Cup player won her fifth straight tournament last weekend in Rochester, N.Y. The previous LPGA mark of four is shared by Kathy Whitworth, Shirley Englehorn and Mickey Wright, who did it twice. On the men's circuit, Byron Nelson won 11 in a row in 1945.

Lopez is going for her eighth victory of the year.

The 21-year-old darling of women's golf faltered on the front nine Saturday, picking up bogies on 3, 4 and 9 after a birdie on the 540-yard, par-5 No. 2 hole. She parred the back nine.

Jill Endicott, a pro for three years, was disqualified Saturday after she told officials she had signed an incorrect scorecard Friday. She had mistakenly recorded a 3 instead of a 4 on the fifth hole of the opening round.

At the completion of 36 holes of play Saturday, the field of 68 pros and five amateurs was cut to the top 60 players, plus ties.

The press corps here totals about 120 — almost twice the number of golfers. The Japanese Press Service is here, as is the Sunday Times of London.

Pampa ladies take golf lead

Pampa members of the Panhandle Ladies Golf Association placed first at the Playday at Phillips Country Club recently.

Phillips, Huber, Ross Rogers, Tascosa and Hereford, along with Pampa, make up the Panhandle Ladies Golf Association.

Pampa took 27 players to the tournament, and, combining the four lowest scores, came up with the low total on the day.

Ladies making the team for Pampa were Joyce Barrett (58), who had the low net on the day, Sherrill Grady (64), Monica Leonard (66) and Lennie Schneider (65). Marlene Brandt had the low gross of the entire field with a score of 78.

Pampa, after the Phillips tournament, now leads the Association by 18 strokes.

Mishap at Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — Tragedy struck with terrifying swiftness in the stretch run at Belmont Race Track Saturday, and Flying Water, the champion race horse in Europe last year, was destroyed.

The 5-year-old mare, ridden by jockey Jean Cruguet in the second division of the $111,950 split New York Handicap, hit the rail in the midstretch while rallying from last place.

The mishap occurred just as it appeared Cruguet would take the lead.

While Late Bloomer rallied on the outside to win the race, Flying Water lay on the ground without moving. Cruguet, who was thrown to the track, got up immediately and escaped with minor injuries, though badly shaken.

Track officials said later the mare, whose shoulder was shattered, was humanely destroyed.

Owned by Daniel Wildenstein, the French-bred mare was running in only her second American race. Her career earnings totaled $245,195.

Lietzke takes lead at Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke's pitch-in for an eagle 3 on the final hole finished off a 67 and gave him a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Lietzke, who started the warm, sunny day 3 shots off the pace, finished 54 holes with a 210 total, 3 under par on the difficult, 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"That's a very good way to end the round," Lietzke said of his 45-yard shot with a sand wedge that found the cup on the 18th hole. "It makes up for a couple of shots I threw away."

Lietzke, winner of two tournaments last year but in a slump most of this season, was trailed by John Schroeder, skinny Jeff Hewes and rookie Pat McGowan at 212, the only other men under par after three trips over this course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent home for the Canadian National Championship.

McGowan also eagled the final hole for a 72. Hewes, who shared the second round lead with McGowan, also shot 72. Schroeder, who held a 3-shot lead at the turn, played his back nine in 39 and finished with a par 71.

Australian Bob Shearer, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw were 3 shots back at par 213. Crenshaw birdied three holes in a row at one stretch and also birdied the par 5 18th hole, where he made that horrendous "9" in Friday's round.

Defending champion Lee Trevino had a solid 69 and was tied with Mike Sullivan at 214. Sullivan shot a 68.

"I'm good position," Trevino said. "I wish I could have got it in at 67 or 68, but I'm in good position. Four shots back isn't too much on this kind of a golf course. You're not gonna see anybody moving much. I mean it's not the kind of course that a guy can shoot real low numbers, and he can shoot pretty high, so at one over par I've still got a good chance."

Nicklaus had a 72 and was at 217. Masters champ Gary Player shot 73-218. Arnold Palmer had six birdies in an erratic round of 73 and was at 219. U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 72-221.

Lietzke's cross-handed putting was the key to his round. He had nine one-putts, one no-putt and holed five times from the 10-15 foot range.

Bruce, whose best finish this year has been a runner-up position at Tallahassee, one-putted 6 times on the front side and made the turn 2 under par with a 15-foot birdie putt on the fourth and a six-footer on the next hole.

He had to scramble on the 10th and 11th, scored from 15 feet on the 12th, then reached the par 5 13th in 2 and promply 3-putted for par.

With the other leaders backing up, Lietzke held the lead alone until he bogeyed the 16th hole.

He got his second shot over the green on a mound and "from where I was I was very happy to make 5. It could have been a double bogey very easily," he said.

He pitched across the green to the front fringe, chipped back and made a two-footer for bogey. That dropped him back into a tie for the lead.

Hiller stayed on

DETROIT (AP) — John Hiller figured he'd last about five years in major league baseball and drop out after his salary peaked at perhaps $30,000 a year.

Sunday at Tiger Stadium the 35-year-old ace relief pitcher, whose salary is in the $100,000 range, will have a recognition day in honor of his 10 years in the majors — all with Detroit.

Hiller, who likely will be remembered by baseball historians for his courageous and successful comeback after a heart attack, never thought things would work out so well.

"I think my wife and I used to talk about five years," he said, when asked how long he thought he'd be pitching in the big leagues. "The minimum salary then was $7,000. We talked about maybe getting up to $30,000. It shows how things have changed."

Little did the Tigers, or Hiller, realize during his rookie year in 1967 that the slender Canadian left-hander would command such a large salary and a status as one of the game's top relief specialists.

He sat out all of 1971 and half of 1972 because of the heart attack. He had a coronary bypass operation and started his comeback in 1972.

In 1973 he set major league records with 38 saves and 48 Firemen Trophy points (38 saves, 10 victories), and a club record with 60 games finished. His ERA was an incredible 1.44.

That established him as a bullpen ace and he has been outstanding most of the time since.

On the free agent market Hiller could have made a mint.

However, "I'm satisfied," he said following one of this weekend's games against New York. "If I wasn't I probably would have made some noise along the way. Considering the years I've had, maybe I'm not making as much as some ... but I'm making much more money than I ever thought I'd make in this game."

Tiger manager Ralph Houk calls Hiller "one of the best short (relief) men I have ever managed. I've had (Sparky) Lyle and Luis Arroyo and I'd rate John right up there. On top of it, he's a great guy."

Hiller's 6-3 record and seven saves are best on the staff and he has a 2.45 ERA.

U.S. collegiates drop Japan opener

TOKYO (AP) — Seisuki Toyoda and Hidetake Horiba each went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs apiece Saturday, leading Japan to a 7-3 victory over the United States in the opening game of the seventh annual U.S.-Japan collegiate baseball "World Series."

It was the second time the American collegian all-stars dropped the series opener to their Japanese counterparts since the first series was held in Japan in 1972.

Prince Hiro, the eldest son of Crown Prince Akihito, threw out the ceremonial first ball at Tokyo's Meiji Jingu ballpark before 12,000 spectators.

The U.S. took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on consecutive singles by Pat Proulx of La Verne University and Marty Barrett of Mesa Community College and a sacrifice fly by Larry Reynolds of Stanford.

The Japanese went ahead with three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning on four consecutive singles off Bill Bordley of Southern California and a squeeze bunt.

The Americans cut the lead to 3-2 in the fifth on a solo homer by Barrett, but Japan added three runs in the bottom of the inning off relief pitcher Billy Blum of Houston on three singles and a double.

The Americans got their final run in the seventh on a run-scoring pinch double by Bob Skube of Southern Cal.

Greg Norris of the University of North Carlonia surrendered the final Japanese run in the seventh inning.

Brazil finds goal for third in Cup

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Undefeated Brazil came from behind in the second half Saturday to defeat Italy 21 and win third place in the World Cup soccer tournament.

The three-time world champions, edged out for the finals of the championship on goal average by Argentina, came alive in the second half with two perfect long shots by midfielders Nelinho and Dirceu.

Italy had hopes of victory after the 38th minute when mustachioed forward Franco Causio took a pass from striker Paulo Rossi and headed the ball softly into Brazil's net.

But the Brazilians had not lost in their six games at the World Cup and wanted to prove they were worthy of the finals. Furthermore, they wanted to erase the bitter memory of a defeat for third place by Poland in the 1974 World Cup in Germany.

The Brazilians put on the pressure after Causio scored his goal, and kept on the attack until halftime.

Finally, at he 63rd minute, Nelinho tied the score on a shot from about 30 yards. Seven minutes later, the scrappy 2-year-old Dirceu, the spark of the team, sent Brazil ahead.

Nelinho, a specialist in free kicks an distance shots, scored one of the most impressive goals from the right wing seen so far in the World Cup.

Without losing a stride on a Brazilian counterattack, Nelinho raced in, and from about 30 yards delivered a cannonball that was deflected by Italian forward Roberto Bettega into the Italian net. The slight ricochet on the ball fooled goalie Dino Zoff.

Brazil increased the pressure by throwing in as a substitute Roberto Rivelino, at 32 the only survivor from the legendary Brazilian team that took the World Cup in 1970.

At the 70th minute he was instrumental in setting up Brazil's winning goal by lobbing a precise pass to Mendonca, who stood at the edge of the penalty area, his back to the goal. Mendonca chested the ball to Dirceu, who took a sizzling shot at waist level to beat Zoff.

Italy tried desperately to tie the score and nearly succeeded one minute before the end when header artist Bettega sent a ball just against the crossbar of the Brazilian goal.

TV Star Scene

Lorne Green has spun a long way from the Ponderosa for his newest TV role as space ship commander in the ABC movie, "Battle Star Galactica." the ex-Pappy Cartwright, by the way, isn't the only one with fingers crossed that this will evolve into a weekly series.

In attempting the biggest space spectacular ever for the small screen, the price tag is reported to have reached $10 million ... a record high for a television special. It'll be worth it to both the network and Universal (where "...Galactica" was produced) if the ratings prove the public wants more. And only if.

It's been three years since actor Emilio Delgado exulted that his luck had changed ... and that the strong nose he declined to have bobbed, was suddenly an asset. "Ethnic is in," is how he put it. Suddenly, there were jobs looking for an actor with a Chicano look. "I'm part Indian, too," he added. And lo and behold, that's paying off this season. Emilio has been cast as White Bull in the new NBC miniseries "Indians," in which a prerequisite for playing an Indian is to be one.

If the old cartoon hero Popeye does make the grade with a new series, you'll see a mighty changed fellah. The spinach-eating ploy is still OK, but Popeye's quick-fisted way of polishing off the bad guys is a no-no with the new anti-violence code. What to do? Maybe he can take a clue from Robert Conrad, who, unarmed, had to survive gun-toting villains in "Assignment: Vienna." There was only one way to do it, said Bob, "Run a lot."

Tony Randall has often moaned that none of his earlier series – from "Mr. Peppers" to "The Odd Couple" – found real popularity until they went into re-runs. But with the recent cancellation of his series as the widower-judge, the articulate Mr. R. is doing more than groaning this time. He's mad as heck, shall we say, that CBS didn't give his show another year to find its public. He doubts if he will ever do another series. And, of course, he doesn't need one, which makes things nice. Right now he's out in Kansas City for the premiere of a lavish new producton starring him as "The Music Man," which is set for a 14-city tour this summer.

Word has filtered back from Bel Air about a mortgage-burning party that gladdened a bunch of celebrants in Hollywood's most chic suburb. And, if that phrase "mortgage-burning," evokes the solemn ceremonies in small towns when the local church paid up its financiers, well, think again. The party-giver was comedienne Joan Rivers; her movie "Rabbit Test" has already brought enough dough to Joan and her producer-husband, Edgar Rosenberg, to pay off what they owed on their classy hacienda.

The Craig Stevenses – she, of course is Alexis Smith – have fresh reasons to congratulate themselves for investing in a Manhattan pied-a-terre when it looked as if he might be tied up for a time on Broadway. That show never jelled, but she has just signed to star in a forthcoming musical, "Platinum."

There's more than a touch of irony to the casting of Alexis, incidentally. Win or lose as a Broadway show, "Platinum," is a sure bet to become a movie. And, in Alexis's first round of fame as a movie star, stately heroines were all the moguls offered her. As hubby Craig once said, "She always kept up her classes and practicing, but until she was cast in 'Follies' (for which she won a best-musical-actress Tony Award) nobody but me knew she could dance."

Elton John is expected to be the starring voice when his "Mr. Fantastic" tune evolves into an animated film with London as the production locale.

Who wants a vacation? Not Dina Merrill. While others are fleeing the heat and humidity of New York in June for the nearest beach or mountain, she's doing her diligent best as the star of Herbert Breghof's showcase production, "The Smile of the Cardboard Man."

Missing Your Paper–Call 669-2525

TV Dial-ogue

LONG GONE — It seems to me that I read some years ago that Richard Long had passed away. Is this true? I see him frequently in "The Big Valley," which of course are reruns from the 60s. – Sarita Pierce, Palm Springs, Calif.

Long passed away from a heart ailment on Dec. 21, 1974. He was 47 at the time.

C&W KIDS — I read that John Ritter of "Three's Company" is the son of Tex Ritter. Does that make him Shirley Boone's brother. – B.K.C., Palm Springs, Calif.

Huh? I think you have your country western stars crossed. John is indeed the son of Tex, who has one other son, Thomas. Shirley Boone is the daughter of Red Foley.

PLAY BALL — As retirees, our TV set is our "friend" and form of entertainment. Being avid sports fans, we wonder why "America's favorite sport," baseball, is shortchanged — only one game on weekends and now, none on Monday nights. This is a clean sport. Can you help us get more games on TV? Help us get rid of Howard Cossell, too. -- Mrs. R.F. Smith, Hawthorne, Fla.

I would if I could, but I can't so I'll offer a suggestion instead. First off, "Monday Night Baseball" is still broadcast by ABC. If it is not reaching your area perhaps it's because your local affiliate has chosen not to carry it. If that is the case, write to them with your complaint, and try to get your friends (other than the TV set) to write also. Each station is licensed by the FCC and is therefore responsible to viewers. If enough viewers complain, they may change their policy. As for Howard, you can't have your baseball and hit it too, or something like that. Whither goes "MNB" goes Howard Cossell.

ALIAS SMITH? — Could you please tell me if Jaclyn Smith is using her real name, or is it a stage name? If so, what is her real name? – J.C.B., Aptos, Calif.

In this case Smith is no alias. That's her real name.

WESTERN LORE — In the movie "Shane," with Alan Ladd, who played the boy Joey? And is he still acting? Also, back when "Cheyenne," and "Sugarfoot," with Clint Walker and Will Hutchinson, were on I seem to remember a third cowboy who was on with them sometimes. Could you tell me if I'm right? – Linda Howell Gilmer, Tex.

Brandon De Wilde was the disarmingly gifted little boy in "Shane." He started acting at the age of 7 in the stage version of "Member of the Wedding," and repeated the role in the film version some years later. After "Shane" he dropped out of acting till 1959 when he did "Blue Jeans." You might recall him in "Hud," "Those Calloways," "In Harm's Way" and other films in which he played assorted adolescent-type roles. Tragically, De Wilde was killed in a highway accident in 1972. He was only 30 years old.

You're right about the third cowboy, though a bit fuzzy on some other facts. First, it was Will Hutchins in "Sugarfoot." The title characters of "Sugarfoot" and "Cheyenne" didn't appear together, but the two shows did alternate for a while. Later on, Ty Hardin rode into the scene when "Bronco" was introduced as part of "Cheyenne." This was a studio scheme to get Clint Walker to walk the straight and narrow. When he rejoined the Warner Bros. fold, "Bronco" was given a slot of its own for a while.

FAILED MISSION — In reference to the question on "Mission Impossible" a few weeks ago: I saw the first "Mission" several years ago, and it seems to me that Willy's last name was Armitage, although perhaps I'm destined for self-destruction also! – L.E. Leidecker, Warren, Penn.

The truth will save you. I need all the readers I can get, especially the savvy ones). Armitage, it was. You, and a small army of other "MI" agents have shamed me into turning in my operative's card. I am returning to basic training.

U.S., Soviets cooperate on energy

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — American and Soviet scientists have been successfully carrying out joint experiments just outside Moscow on a revolutionary process that could result in the cheaper and more efficient production of electricity, according to U.S. officials.

Dr. William Jackson of the U.S. Department of Energy said the cooperative research effort was helping both countries push ahead with development of th process called magneohydrodynamics — MHD — as a practical, safe, less expensive and highly efficient method for using fossil fuels, especially coal.

At the same time, he noted, the joint approach was expected to yield sizeable tax dollar savings for Americans, by minimizing the need for the U.S. to duplicate best facilities already existing in the Soviet Union.

In the MHD process, hydrocarbon fuel such as coal or natural gas is burned at extremely high temperatures, up to about 5,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The resulting ionized gas is forced at the speed of a bullet down a channel through an intense magnetic field, thereby producing electricity.

After passing through the magnetic field, the hot gas may then be used for heating water to produce steam for regular turbine generators. This two-step process enables MHD plants to burn fuels much more efficiently than conventional power stations.

Proponents of the process say the method could benefit consumers by producing electricity more cheaply and efficiently from coal, which is in abundant supply in the United States and the Soviet Union.

Sick parrots from South America are thought to have been responsible for exposing California poultry to Newcastle disease in 1971. In the two-year program to stamp out the disease, more than 11 million birds were destroyed at a cost of $50 million.

'Monstrous' implications in court order

FRIENDSWOOD, Texas (AP) — A federal court order requiring a Galveston County school district to provide an education for an emotionally handicapped child has "monstrous" financial implications, according to the district superintendent.

Citing the Handicapped Children's Act of 1975, which guarantees "free and appropriate" education to all handicapped children between 3 and 21, U.S. District Court Judge Finis Cowan granted a preliminary injunction Wednesday against the Friendswood Independent School District which expelled a 16-year-old youth for disciplinary problems in 1977.

Cowan told the district to set up a program for the youth and also said the FISD was liable for the $2,200 monthly tuition for the youth who is now at a private institution in Austin.

The parents of the youth, identified only as Douglas S. in the suit, claim their son was expelled from school because of behavior problems brough about by his handicap. Authorities at the Brow School threatened to discharge the youth when his parents could no longer meet tuition payments.

Ted Thomas, who was not superintenent when Douglas left school, said the youth was not expelled but taken out by his mother.

"This ruling makes it sound like we tried to boot him out of school. As a matter of fact, while the parents were suing us to try and get us to take him back, we were writing letters saying 'would you please bring him back,'" Thomas said. "But they said they couldn't put him back in the same program. We felt tha program was fair and adequate from him."

Cowan has ordered the district to draw up a program for Douglas which would provide him with as much contact as possible with his non-handicapped peers. He said the FISD 'could either educate Douglas or pay someone else to do it. The district was also ordered to pay the youth's tuition back to January 1977 when his parents claim he was expelled.

Patrick Wiseman, Douglas' attorney, said the youth suffers from minimal brain damage that makes it difficult for him to pay attention and follow directions.

Thomas said the FISD has offered Douglas a program but he refused it.

"The problem with this ruling is the residential placement," Thomas said. "We offered almost everything the Brown school offers. But as we understand this, we are required to place him in a residential setting because we can't keep him in school, because he wouldn't take advantage of what we were offering him."

FISD has a $4.4 million budget, Thomas said, of which 3.4 percent is spent on special education. He said of 3,000 students in the district some 242 receive special education. Only 92 are fulltime participants int he special education program.

Thomas said the district spends an average of $1,600 annually per special education student while the court now requires that $2,200 be spent per month on one youngster.

Hatch wins round one against labor

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once Orrin Hatch was a card-carrying union member — Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union — to be exact.

Now he doesn't seem to have much in common with the AFL-CIO.

Hatch, an intense, fast-talking Republican conservative from Utah, was the point man in a long filibuster against organized labor's cherished proposed labor law revisions.

He won a very big round on Thursday, when the Senate voted to send the hotly contested measure back to its Human Resources Committee for redrafting.

The move came after backers of the bill conceded they could not crack the tenacious five-week filibuster that Hatch and a group of other, mostly freshmen Republicans threw up against the measure.

The legislaton would stiffen penalties labor law violators must pay while also giving unions added leverage in organizing workers.

It would speed up the timetable for union representation elections, expand the National Labor Relations Board and allow unions to send recruiters onto company premises under tightly controlled circumstances.

After the vote, Hatch stood in a small room off the Senate floor accepting congratulations from friends.

"I hope at least we've won some respect," he said.

It was an interesting comment from a relatively new senator who took on what appeared to many to be a hopeless task, a senator who confided to others that he sometimes feels he does not fit into the clubby atmosphere of the Senate.

Asked to describe how his boss approaches his work, aide Bill Hendrix said: "Total commitment, almost consecration. He is just very intense on everything. Driven."

It was Hatch who spent long hours on the Senate floor during the filibuster that began May 16, reading speeches, citing studies, parrying opposing senators.

He sought ceaselessly to portray himself as the underdog, telling reporters more than once, "I'm just a freshman senator" battling against the giants of the Senate.

"They've got all the power, immense power," he often said of the Carter administration and the Democratic leadership working for the bill.

Organized labor? "Labor has the most massive influence in Washington, D.C., today," he said shortly after the Senate shipped the bill back to committee.

His speech, like that of many politicians, is rapid-fire. And it can lean to the sarcastic. He referred often during debate and in interviews to the labor measure as "that itty-bitty bill that won't help nobody and won't hurt nobody."

At times, he also seemed humorless. "I said small business would be crushed by this bill, I didn't say totally crushed," he said.

His tenaciousness and rhetoric and willingness to read long speeches on the floor helped earn him the nickname of "Borin' Orrin," a handle he said Thursday he does not mind.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Operators of a local cable television company were uncertain whether anyone was watching the early morning movies.

So, at 2:30 one morning, they halted a film and ran the weather signal along with a sign to the effect that viewers should telephone if they wanted to see the film to its conclusion.

Immediately, the switchboard lit up with calls. Since then, the company has been satisfied it has early morning viewers.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read that there is a growing problem of male impotence in America, and no one seems to have the answer. I'm a male, and a fellow I work with may have put his finger on the reason. He says he is turned off by women in slacks, boots and mannish haircuts.

I agree with him. Nothing turns me on like a woman with long, soft, fragrant hair and a frilly, feminine dress.

Clothes make the woman, too. If more men are becoming impotent, it just might be that the mannish look of some women is the cause.

LOVES LAVENDER AND LACE

DEAR LOVES: If male impotence seems to be on the rise, it could be because (a) it has never before been as thoroughly recorded, or (b) male sexuality suffers from the revved up pace and intensified pressures of modern life.

Plenty of men are panting over women in long pants and short haircuts.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, single and have been dating the same man for two years. Neither of us has dated anyone else since we met.

About a year ago, friends and relatives (especially aunts) began asking us (separately, of course), "When are you two going to get married?"

I must admit that when the questions first started I felt as if I had to come up with some kind of answer in order to satisfy people's curiosity. I think we'll eventually marry, but I want to live on my own awhile and not go directly from my parents' home to living with another person. My boyfriend feels the same way, and we're both happy with things as they are, but we can't seem to get this across to some people.

Some friends of mine recently broke up because of repeated questioning from her parents. He wasn't ready for marriage, and she started to pressure him to set a date.

I wish well-meaning friends would leave the decision and timing up to the people involved. Thanks for letting me air my gripe. Is there anything I can say to stop these questions and still be polite?

NOT YET

DEAR NOT: You can't stop insensitive and nosy people from asking questions that are none of their business unless you put it just that way. An appropriate reply would be, "When we decide, we'll let you know."

DEAR ABBY: Through a very reliable source, we found out that our son has been peeping into various neighbors' windows. He is an average teen-age boy, brought up in a respectable home. We have no idea why he does this.

Because of the humiliation that would be brought upon the family, we do not wish to consult a doctor. Can you help us?

VERY SMALL TOWN

DEAR VERY: Yes. I can "help" you by assuring you that you would suffer no "humiliation" whatsoever by consulting a doctor.

If you son had a "kink" in his back, you'd seek medical advice in order to correct it, wouldn't you? So why, when he has an obvious "kink" in his thinking, do you choose to ignore it?

Window peeping is usually a symptom of a deeper emotional problem and should be neither hushed up nor ignored. You owe it to your son (and to society) to get him to a doctor.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband had surgery for kidney and bladder stones 10 months ago. Now he has formed another stone which is in the bladder and the doctors are planning to crush it and try to remove it.

He eliminated all dairy products with the exception of six ounces of milk in bran cereal. He drinks plenty of water and juices. Now I'm starting to get suspicious of the minerals in the water. He also takes hydrochlorothiazide. Out of a family of eight children, four have had this problem. Is there anything else that can be done to eliminate the formation of stones?

DEAR READER — There is a great deal which can be done to control most problems of kidney stones. It is important to know what kind of stone is present before one decides what treatment should be used, but the growth of most stones can be controlled and the formation of new stones can be prevented.

If your husband has calcium oxalate stones, which is a common form of stones, then limiting calcium may not really be the answer. It may be more important to limit the oxalate which is found in fruit juices and tea. Many people erroneously think that if you have kidney stones you have to eliminate milk or other sources of calcium intake and that's not always the case.

The one universal rule that applies to all the different types of stones is to drink enough water to cause the person to eliminate at least three quarts (three liters) of urine each 24-hour period. The fluid intake, which should be mostly water, should be taken day and night so that the kidneys are keeping the urine diluted through the entire 24-hour period and not just during the daytime.

Beyond that there are many technicalities on whether the urine should be kept acid or alkaline and whether or not oxalate or calcium or both should be restricted and what type of medicine should be used.

The family history that you gave is interesting and raises the question of whether there might not be a familial problem called primary hyperoxaluria, which means that these individuals would be prone to having excess amounts of oxalate and oxalate stones.

Because this subject is somewhat complex due to the many different kinds of stones people can have, I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-2 on Renal Stones which reviews these aspects of stone formation and management. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

I would like to add that if a person has a kidney infection or the stone formation is related to infectious processes then it may be necessary to limit the calcium intake. These are called struvite calculi and are the type that are more commonly found in women. Women are prone to these because they are more apt to have urinary tract infections than are men. The calcium oxalate type stones are more commonly seen in men.

DEAR POLLY — I had mildew between the tiles around my tub and nothing seemed to take it off until I tried straight bleach applied with an old toothbrush. Now after each shower I rub down the walls to keep the mildew from forming again or so soon. I do suggest that one keep the window open for air as the bleach can make you breathless.

My kitchen sink is 37 years old and stains easily in the bottom and on the sides. I find that sifting some powdered household cleaner all around and then letting it stay all night before lightly scrubbing in the morning removes all the stains easily. — MRS. B.C.T.

Giving children a chance

The statistics: There are nearly nine million one-parent families now; there will be some 110,000 youthful offenders in 1980 (if recent trends continue).

With the number of broken homes increasing and juvenile delinquency on the rise, it's heartening to know of an organization that is working to help young people become happy, useful citizens.

One such organization is The Salvation Army which, as part of its Christian ministry, helps in a variety of ways.

Children of working mothers can get excellent care in day care centers. Youngsters who need something to do can find a wide choice of activities at Army community centers, camps and day camps. They can participate in athletic league and teen activities, join service clubs, enjoy special publications. Also, educational and vocational instruction and counseling are available to them—with or without their families.

The now washbasket

By Steffne Miller

Ask the mother of a newborn baby to name her number one laundry problem and she'll probably say, "How do I wash all these diapers?" Here are some helpful hints:

1. Soak diapers as soon as they're soiled, in warm water. If your baby has had a bowel movement, shake or scrape off the feces and rinse the diapers in clean water before putting them in the diaper pail. For optimum soil and stain removal, dissolve 1/2 cup of a borax-based laundry additive in the water. Diapers should be soaked overnight, but adjust the soaking time to suit your daily schedule.

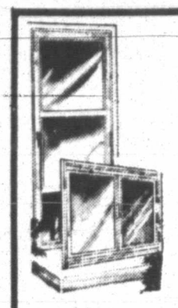

2. To wash, first pour out the diaper pail water and spin dry the diapers in the washing machine or wring them out by hand. Wash diapers alone — never more than 24 per washload. Diapers need plenty of room to agitate during washing to loosen and remove soil.

3. Now, add the recommended amount of detergent and 1 cup of the laundry additive. Many mothers say Borateem Plus is a good additive to use because it contains stain removers and whiteners. Also, it doesn't weaken diaper fabric like chlorine bleach. Use the hottest water possible, allow 10-12 minutes agitation time, then rinse. Use two rinses if you prefer.

4. After washing, dry diapers on the clothesline or in the dryer. Avoid overdrying them and never iron them — it reduces their absorbency.

The bodice of the gown was complimented with a cameo insert of lace and seed pearls. A wide flounce of taffeta and lace enhanced the hemline, and the full back of the gown ended in a sweeping chapel length train. Her veil of imported illusion, with a border of matching lace, fell from a coif of lace and seed pearls.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall, with Traci Butler, Kim Haydon, and Jean Haydon serving.

The couple was also honored at a bridal luncheon in the home of the brides parents. Hostess for the luncheon were Mrs. Eddie Haydon, aunt of the bride, and Ronald Cleavinger, Earth.

The bride is a graduate of Pampa High School, and has attended Lubbock Christian College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Andrews High School, El Paso. He also attended Lubbock Christian college.

After a honeymoon trip to Ruidosa, the couple will make their home at 125 Vaquero, apartment number 57, El Paso.

Strawberry honey

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's never been a better berry than the strawberry to use for preserves. We say this after a batch of Strawberry Honey was made in our test kitchen. With five half-pint jars of this preserve in the freezer, a cook can feel secure: used as a topping for bread or rice pudding or custard, it makes these desserts irresistible. It also makes a fine filling for fine layer cakes.

This Strawberry Honey is made in an electric blender in one batch. The blender will be extremely full, but don't worry. Covered tightly and whirled as directed in the recipe, everything works out well.

STRAWBERRY HONEY

- 1 quart (about) fully ripe strawberries
- 4 cups sugar
- ¼ cup domestic kirsch (clear cherry brandy), 96 proof
- ¾ cup water
- 1 1¾-ounce package fruit pectin

Rinse strawberries; hull. Put just enough of the berries in an electric blender to cover the blades; cover blender and turn control from off to low several times until the fruit is thoroughly crushed but not pureed. Remove from blender to a measure and continue crushing all the berries this way. Measure 2 cups and return to the blender. With a long narrow rubber spatula, gradually stir the sugar into the fruit; cover blender and turn on control until thoroughly blended. Add the kirsch; stir with the spatula and let stand for 10 minutes.

In a small saucepan stir together the water and pectin; stirring constantly, bring to a boil and boil 1 minute. With the spatula, gradually stir the pectin mixture into the fruit mixture; cover blender and turn on control just until mixed — about 30 seconds. At once pour into sterilized wide-mouth ½-pint jars; cover with caps and screw bands. (Do not use jars larger than this size.) Let stand at room temperature until set — usually 24 hours. Label and store in the freezer. If a jar is to be used in a couple of weeks, it may be stored in the refrigerator.

Makes five ½-pint jars plus about ½ cup.

EGGS AND CORN

Use canned corn or that cut from leftover cooked cobs.

- 6 large eggs
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ¾ cup cooked corn kernels
- 2 tablespoons butter

Beat the eggs with the salt and pepper just enough to blend the yolks and whites. Add the corn. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

WEEKEND CAR TRIPS

If your family dreams of traveling cross-country, but doesn't have weeks-long vacation time, consider taking weekend car trips to scenic points in your state.

Packing light and right is important on short trips; these suggestions may help put you on the road to a happy mini-vacation:

- Pack coordinates that can be interchanged for several looks and take along accessories that can be used to dress up or dress down your outfits. Be sure to include an umbrella, extra sweaters for unexpected cool weather, and one pair of everyone's comfortable walking shoes.
- Be prepared! Don't let accidental spots and spills on clothes spoil your trip. Pack a tube or can of K2r® Spot-lifter to remove unexpected stains from dry-cleanable items; apply spot-lifter to the dirty spots, let dry to a fine white powder, then brush the powder—and soil—away. Also, take along some mild detergent for washing hand-washables.
- Pack a special travel-basket for the entire family. Include simple snacks, a small toy or game for each child, tissues, aspirins and pre-moistened paper washcloths. Also, be sure to pack a flashlight with some extra batteries and a good state map.

North Carolina Chess pie recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

How it's made, at its best, in North Carolina.

2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon waterground or regular white cornmeal
4 large eggs
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup butter, melted
¼ cup milk
Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell with edge turned under and crimped

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the sugar, flour and cornmeal. Add the eggs; beat until thick and ivory color. Add the lemon rind, lemon juice and butter; beat just enough to mix. Pour into pastry shell. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven on rack just below the center until the top is very brown and a knife inserted halfway between center and rim comes out clean — 50 to 60 minutes. Serve warm or cold.

CARD OF THANKS

BETTY LEE JONES

We wish to express our sincere appreciation and deep gratitude to our many friends, especially Brother Jerry Bryan, and Brother Pete Roberts and membership of the Central Baptist Church for their words of comfort and deeds of kindness at the loss of our darling Betty Lee Jones. May God's richest blessing rest upon you. She would not want the tones she loves to Grieve for her today. We must not say that she is dead, For she is just away. Away on a journey. To a land that's bright and fair, and though we all miss her here We know she's happy there. And memories of her will bring New comfort every day. As we recall, she is not dead.
