COTTON RELIEF TO BE DEMANDED

Eastern Editor Lauds Conditions On Plains

VISITOR IS GUEST
OF LUBBOCK AT
LUNCHEON MEETSAYS PLAINS IS FAR LESS HANDICAPPED THAN OTHER SECTIONS

"If I were asked upon my return to New York what one thing, in my opinion is most responsible for the wonderful progress of Texas I would unhesitatingly answer 'the people'."

That was the statement made today at noon by Elmer H. Youngman, for thirty years editor of the New York Bankers' magazine, who is making a survey of cotton conditions for his publication. Mr. Youngman's luncheon, attended by approximately 25 representative business men, several of whom gave opinions and statistics to the New York editor concerning this section of Texas and the cotton situation. President O. L. Slaton, of the Board of City Development, presided at the luncheon which was given by the Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Lubbock.

Says Nation Is Prosperous

"I am covering much territory and I am taking into consideration the present cotton situation when I say that the United States in passing through the greatest era of prosperity—national prosperity—in the history of the world," Mr. Youngman said. "In spite of the fact that we are facing what some choose to call a 'cotton crisis' I do not believe that any section of the South is in bad financial shape and I believe that you people, right here on the Plains of Texas, are less handicapped by the cotton situation than any other section of the cotton belt."

The visiting writer whose 30-year-old publication is one of the foremost financial journals in America has had the good fortune, he says, to visit extensively practically all of the states

Big Profit From
Two Turkey Hens

Diversification pays, and it pays big dividends, especially when a diversification program is extended to the raising of fowls on the farm, in the opinion of Mrs. C. E. Preston, of Lorenzo, who this fall has realized a tidy little sum from the offspring of two turkeys.

In the spring, Mrs. Preston had two turkey hens on her farm, which later hatched out 49 baby turkeys. Forty-four out of this flock of 49 which weighed 607 pounds, has recently been sold to a local produce house at 22 cents per pound, netting her $133.54, and she still has her breeding stock on hand to begin another year. Mrs. Preston says she sees no reason why practically every family cannot "live at home" in this manner.

MCCOMBS TRIAL
IS CALLED HEREMotion For Continuance And Plea Of Ill Health Are Overruled By Judge

The case of State of Texas vs. Don F. McCombs who is charged by indictment with transporting intoxicating liquor, was called by Judge Mailliard in district court at 2 o'clock this morning. It was found that the defendant was not in the court room, so a deputy sheriff armed with an alias writ went to the home of the defendant and brought him before the court.

McCombs, who is in delicate health, insisted that he was not physically able to attend court, and gave that as his excuse for his failure to be present.

Attorneys for the defendant made an effort to have the case continued until the January term, giving as a reason that one of their main witnesses was out of the city. The court overruled the motion, ordered the sheriff to bring in the witness, who resides in Post, and instructed attorneys to begin their work of selecting a jury.

McCombs is facing five indictments and it is thought the trial of the first case will not be completed before tomorrow afternoon.

TWO ARE SLAIN BY
MYSTERY GUNMAN

SCOTLAND, S. D., Nov. 16 (AP)—Two persons were shot to death and three others were wounded at the John Groez farm near here last night by a mysterious assassin, who fired through a window with a shot gun.

The dead are Robert Zwiefel, 18, and Mrs. John Groez, 50, wife of the owner of the farm.

The wounded are Clarence Zwiefel, 15, brother of Robert; Emanuel Groez, 25, and Mrs. Solomon Groez, 30. Several other occupants of the farm escaped the blast of bullets that swept through the window just as the party prepared to sit down to a game of cards.

According to information received here the player fired four or five charges from his shot gun without revealing himself to any of the victims. No motive was known for the attack. Fleeing from the murderous hail of lead that swept the room, Clarence Zwiefel and Emanuel Groez dashed from the building. Groez ran through a corn field with the assassin pursuing him for a quarter of a mile, firing as he ran, according to the account of affair received here.

Schutz Says Texas
Crops Above Normal

HOUSTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—H. L. Schultz, government statistician, in his November 1 crop report, said that combining the yields of all crops in proportion to their relative importance, the composite of yields per acre in Texas this season was 119.5. This means the report says, that crop yields were 19.5 per cent above the average of the last ten years. The composite of yields for the United States was 103.0. "However, any satisfaction which might have been felt over the good yields has been utterly marred by the resulting low prices," Mr. Schultz observed.

Mother Of Local Men Seriously Ill

MRS. C. E. WOLFFARTH, or "Granny" Wolffarth as she is better known here, is seriously ill at her home at Jacksboro and her two sons here, Eastin and George C., are planning to go to her this week. They expected to leave Sunday but received a message that their mother was better. Mrs. Wolffarth, who is 89 years of age, has visited her sons here many times since they came to Lubbock among the first settlers and she has many friends and relatives in this vicinity.

GALVESTON HOTEL
DAMAGED BY FIRE

GALVESTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Damage estimated at about $10,000 was caused by flames which broke out in a room on the third floor of the Palmer house, a hotel at Tremont and Mechanic streets here early today. The blaze was caused by the explosion of an instantaneous gas heater.

SAN ANGELO, Nov. 16 (AP)—R. L. Bancroft, and Herschell Tobay, were released at Big Lake Monday afternoon when an examining trial failed to connect them with the escape of W. L. When 51 Died in Mine

Six acres of ground sank into this morass when an underground lake burst through walls of the Baross-Hoeker iron mine at Ishpeming, Mich., a quarter of a mile distant, and drowned 51 men. Banks around the edge show how the earth collapsed.

Rutherford Wills, only survivor of the Ishpeming, Mich. mine tragedy, is pictured with his bride (both sitting above). Mrs. Wills lost her father in the disaster. Joe Manke, standing, tried to flee from the mine when he heard the roar of an oncoming torrent, but a flying piece of pipe knocked him from a ladder. His sweetheart, standing beside him, lost not only her fiancé but also her father, Captain William Tippet, and a brother, Walter Tippet. The picture was made at the Wills wedding, two months ago.

Mrs. Chitwood Has Age-Old Experience
When Maid Fails Her But School Goes
On As Hundreds Of Ladies Are Present

Mrs. Ida Chitwood had an experience today that most Lubbock housewives have at more or less regular intervals—her maid failed to show up.

The Afro-American maiden who aided the nationally famous culinary instructor of the Avondale-Journal's Third Annual Free Cooking School on its opening day, Monday, got stage fright and as a result two other maids were employed but at such a late hour that Mrs. Chitwood's original program of salads had to be dropped. However Mrs. Chitwood substituted just as interesting a course in frozen desserts and biscuits.

Crowd Is Increased

The basement of the Temple Ellis building was well filled today with nearly twice as many ladies as greeted Mrs. Chitwood Monday, several hundred making up the number present. The school is being held every afternoon through Friday of this week, from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Chitwood opened her series of lecture-demonstrations Monday afternoon before several hundred women with pastries as her subject. She made two luscious pies, giving her recipe to those in attendance and answering questions that the women asked about their cooking problems.

Cakes Come Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon she will have cakes for a subject and will demonstrate the making of several kinds. Mrs. Chitwood has promised to give recipes for a number of fruit cakes that will be useful during the approaching holiday season and these names.

15 PER CENT REFUND IS SEEN AS POSSIBLE BY
PLAN ADHERENTS

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—If congress approves the Coolidge-Mellon plan to allow credits on income tax payments next year, the treasury secretary now believes that 15 per cent, instead of 10 or 12½, as formerly suggested, can be lopped off the levies.

Mr. Mellon's new estimate is based on continued improvement in the treasury's surplus prospects, the figure having risen to $300,000,000.

When President Coolidge made his original suggestion, asking for a 10 per cent allowance, he based his calculations on an estimate that the treasury would have $200,000,000 on hand at the end of the current fiscal year. Seeing $70,000,000 more in prospect, the secretary shortly afterwards figured that a credit of 12½ per cent was possible, but since then, another $50,000,000 has come into view, bringing another 2½ per cent boost.

The latest estimate would mean that tax payers, making returns next year on this year's incomes, could be granted 20 per cent reductions on their first two quarterly installments. This change, however, carries with it no alteration in the opinion of treasury officials that legislation to make a permanent reduction in the tax rates at this time is not justified by visible long range prospects under the present law.

Solons Non-Committal

Measurably, sentiment in congressional circles discloses no sign of crystallizing for or against the administration's credit proposal, and it remains clear that the treasury officials would be overwhelmed with disappointment if it should fail to survive a clash of conflicting ideas already in evidence in the capitol office buildings. On that event, the treasury's original plan to apply the surplus to the public debt and thereby indirectly relieve all tax payers by cutting down the annual interest requirements, would be effected, although Secretary Mellon regards the $500,000,000 reduction already in prospect, regardless of the surplus, as being sufficient for this purpose.

HAMILTON REFUSES
COURT POSITION

AUSTIN, Nov. 16 (AP)—Judge James R. Hamilton of the Travis criminal court today declined appointment to the commission of the court of criminal appeals. He was offered the place several days ago by Governor Ferguson.

Judge Hamilton said it would be an honor to be on the commission and that it would have meant an increase in his salary, but he felt he was duty bound as judge of the Travis county criminal district.

"The people of this district have elected me and expect me to fill out my term," he said. "There are some important cases on the docket, notably the J. Frank Norris case from Fort Worth. If Judge J. D. Moore, the district attorney, was appointed in my place, as announced, it would mean that he would be disqualified for all of the 100 cases on the docket."

Storm Warning On
Atlantic Is Issued

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—The weather bureau today issued the following storm warning:

"Advisory southeast storm warnings: 10 a. m. north of New York to East Port, Maine, and changed to northwest at twelve o'clock south of New York to Cape Hatteras. Secondary disturbances of marked intensity over middle Atlantic states moving northeastward with trough extending southward to Bahamas. Tropical disturbances have moved northeastward and apparently merged with the general disturbance."

Warehouse Burns In
$750,000 Conflagration

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 16 (AP)—Fire caused loss of $750,000 in the East warehouse of the Holly Sugar corporation at Swink, Colo., late last night, and one fireman was seriously injured.

The blaze was under control today but it was not expected to be extinguished before two or three days. Molten sugar was running in streams from the immense pile of 150,000 sacks which filled the warehouse.

Everett Wiswell, La Junta fireman, injured internally and his leg was broken while fighting the flames.

SESSION OPENS
IN ST. LOUIS TO DRAW UP PLANSGOVERNMENT IS ACCUSED OF FAVORITISM AGAINST
SOUTH'S FARMER

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 16.—The cotton growing south and the grain producing middle west got together today for a two day session through the medium of representatives of fourteen states, six of them southern, to formulate joint demands for congressional relief for agriculture.

It was the first time that the two great agricultural sections ever had reached the point of sitting together, and the move, sought for months by the grain producers, finally was influenced largely by the condition in which the south finds itself through a heavy over-production of cotton which has sent prices tumbling.

Cause Is Assigned

Governmental favoritism was termed the cause of the farmers' predicament in a speech prepared for delivery by Thaddeus Caraway, United States senator from Arkansas, one of the four speakers on today's program. The others were Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois; Dr. H. W. Kilgore of Raleigh, N. C., chairman of the board of the American cotton growers' exchange; and A. D. Waldauer of Memphis, Tenn., attorney for the Tennessee cotton growers' co-operative association.

"There is no farmer as to the cause of the present agricultural depression," said Senator Caraway. "Every one who thinks knows the cause. Had there been a collapse in industry, in transportation, in commerce and in agriculture from 1920 until today we might have thought it due to world conditions. If prosperity had come to agriculture as it came to industry, transportation and to commerce we would have ascribed it to world conditions."

Says Cause Is Known

"But, when prosperity came to commerce, to industry to transportation, and bankruptcy to agriculture, we likewise knew the cause. When prosperity comes to one section and remains in that section, and poverty reigns supreme in another section of the country, we also know the cause. 'We know it to be due to legislation—to governmental favoritism.'"

"There is no complaint against the prosperity of the industrial east, of transportation and commerce," he said. "We ask merely that agriculture shall be permitted to share in it, not to lessen it."

"An amazing spectacle, however, is presented to agriculture," said the senator. "Whenever it seeks to have extended to it the same opportunities and by the same means that prosperity brings to other callings and to other sections, it is met by the

Annual Red Cross
Drive Starts Today

With ten teams in the field carrying on the campaign the Lubbock chapter of the American Red Cross is staging its annual drive for funds today. Six thousand dollars is the goal set and the directors of the campaign, Mayor Pink L. Parrish, believes that this sum will have been raised when the accounting is made tonight.

Miss Mae Murfee, secretary of the bureau, reported to the Journal just before three o'clock that from all she was able to tell the drive was progressing nicely. No accounting had yet been made when Miss Murfee was interviewed. Mayor Parrish has promised that motorists will be kept off the streets and out of the business houses for the coming year if the city will raise the $6,000 fund.

A RACE OF MONKEYS AND PARROTS

Along comes another educator attacking the military discipline of the public schools! He takes exception to the fact that children have to march in ranks, stand so many inches apart in class, sit in stiff chairs in long straight rows, recite in turn, and all the rest of it.

He stresses the point that military discipline makes followers, not leaders. Soldiers and pupils alike learn to do unquestioningly the things that they are told. It puts no premium on initiative, he says, and the product of our public school system will turn up into a nation of parrots and monkeys, always waiting and watching and listening for someone to imitate.

Well, like all radical statements, it contains a grain of truth. One cannot but agree that any public system of training where millions of children are involved must foster the privilege of individualistic development, and turn out countless numbers of a pattern. We concede the point. And it is probably true also that where a blanket system of education is necessary, as it must be where countless numbers are concerned, children have more or less filled in them the idea of obedience rather than leadership.

But we need not agree when he goes on to state that the training they thus receive in public school has no preparatory quality for subsequent experiences in life—that they do not learn the independence that surmounts difficulties and develops character.

Instead, we might remind him that life is the sternest of military camps. If we do not observe absolutely the laws of life, physical laws, moral laws and ethical laws, the punishment is far more severe than that meted out in the school room. Self-discipline must come before self-aggrandizement, and character can never be great unless it recognizes and bows to law before it permits itself to govern.

The weak man who knows not the respect due to authority is likely to tyrannize once he is in a position of authority himself. The best officers are those who have in themselves the qualifications of self-control and obedience.

close of the dancing a splendid buffet luncheon was served.

Manager and Mrs. W. E. LaFon and the directors of the Lubbock Hotel operating company were in charge of the event which was preceded through out the day by an all day open house.

Menu For Today

BREAKFAST—Stewed flax with lemon, cereal, thin cream, rice griddle cakes, syrup, crisp whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Chicken and macaroni loaf is delicious and can be made of boned canned chicken in an emergency.

One and one-half cups macaroni broken in two-inch lengths, 1 cup chopped chicken, 2-3 cup blanched and shredded almonds, 1-2 cup grated cheese, 2 eggs, 1-4 cup cream, 1-4 teaspoon salt, one grating of nutmeg, dash mustard.

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender, about 20 minutes. Drain and blanch. Combine with chicken, almonds and cheese. Mix thoroughly and add eggs well beaten and combined with cream and seasonings. Mix thoroughly but lightly and turn into a well buttered, smooth mold. Fill mold about three-quarters full. Butter cover of mold and put in place. Steam for two hours. Remove and invert mold over dish in which loaf is to be served and let stand a few minutes before lifting the mold. Serve with tomato sauce poured around the loaf.

FUNERAL HELD FOR UNCLE JOE

Veteran Statesman Is Buried Near Scene Of Start On Colorful Career

(By the Associated Press)

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 16.—The tree lined Vermillion street which was Joseph G. Cannon's wonted path in life today was his way in death. Where half a century ago it had led to the nation's capitol and the beginning of a remarkable career in the halls of state, Vermillion street led today to Springhill cemetery and the end of the road for the veteran statesman.

Many Floral Tributes

At the First Methodist church across the street from the Cannon home there were draped flags, but on the casket, as it lay in the darkened house, there were only floral tributes to a great citizen.

It was the wish of the family that the services for the man whose fiery voice once ruled the house of representatives, and even the men of state who gathered came as friends and not as envoys of the government "Uncle Joe" so long served.

Vice President Charles G. Dawes alone formally represented the government of the United States, as the representative of President Coolidge.

Buried Beside Wife

From the brief church services set for 3 p. m. the way led directly to the cemetery and a modest stone beside the grave of the bride for whom the spacious old house was built.

Business and public life in Danville suspended for the funeral and in the throng of mourners were many school children.

Eight thousand of them, from kindergarten to high school, gave a penny each toward a floral tribute.

Will Leave Coal Rations To Family

MERTHYR TYDFIL, Wales, Nov. 16.—The six months coal dispute was a matter of much concern to Edmund Edwards, a merchant who died recently. Under his will just probated he bequeathed eight tons of coal and a ton of fire wood each year to his wife and five tons of coal and a half a ton of fire wood annually to each of his sisters.

Mrs. Chitwood says:

"I have been using Gebhardt's products in my cooking school for three years.

While I have for years known their reputation for quality, yet, I did not fully appreciate how wonderfully good these products were until I began to use them in my daily work.

I use Gebhardt's Eagle Chili Powder in many ways not employed by the average housewife, many of whom only think of this splendid condiment for making of Chili con Carne.

It is splendid for the making of many salads and for salad decoration it cannot be excelled. I use it in soups, on vegetables...in fact there is never a meal, including breakfast, where there is not some place that this delightfully flavored, beautiful colored condiment cannot be used."

Mrs. Chitwood is demonstrating Gebhardt's Eagle Chili Powder at the Cooking School this week. Be sure to get a copy of our recipe booklet... "Mexican Cookery for American Homes"

Proof of the Cake Is in the Selling

FARM WIFE GAINS WIDE FAME IN OWN KITCHEN

By NEA Service

YORK, S. C., Nov. 16.—This is a story for the woman who can't make any money because she is "too tired down" at home.

It is a saga of the dairy and the barnyard and the kitchen range. And since every story must have a struggle, this one has a combat between a plucky farm wife and the ill luck which has dogged the steps of South Carolina farmers ever since the lean cotton years set in.

May Shannon is the heroine, a woman "tired down" by poverty, farm work, two children and a discouraged husband. She fought her fight with cakes as summation-rich devil's food, flaky angel cake, coconut drop cakes and bride confections.

By wielding the lightest wooden spoon in South Carolina, May Shannon has saved her home from mortgage, her family from starvation and herself from despair. Last year she sold 2200 pounds of toothsome delicacies, without leaving her own kitchen, except to go to market.

Orders came from every state in the union, the papers began to send reporters into the Carolina hills in search of this cake wizard, and Mrs. Shannon gave out her story along with hunk of fresh cake to every hungry journalist who came.

Bride cakes are her specialty, and many a society belle in Washington and New York has plunged her silver knife into a fruit cake which came from the bare little kitchen in Carolina.

Question of Quality

"It's just the old story of the man who made a better mouse trap, and brought the world to his door," says Mrs. Shannon. "My cakes ARE better, not necessarily because I am so smart, but because only the richest and best materials go into them."

"Any baker can make good cakes if he will buy the most expensive butter and baking powder and eggs. 'Store' cake is bad because somebody has tried to economize on material while pushing up the price."

In addition to baking a ton of cake

May Shannon

last year, Mrs. Shannon did all of her own house and dairy work, looked after her chickens and made her own clothing.

Good Exercise

"Things can't tie you down, if you won't let 'em," she says. "Many a time I worked till after midnight, cutting fruit and nuts and shredding coconut for next day's baking."

"Of course I had to get up early too. But it didn't hurt me. You can always do what you want to do. In fact it made me healthier. Look here!"

"She bares a right arm bulging with muscles of which an athlete might be proud. 'Cake beating did that! I worked up from beating a small bowl of batter to a great big dish pan of it. I'll challenge any man in the state to a cake beating endurance contest.'"

But the men of South Carolina are none too eager to take her on in such a contest. She has already succeeded in making a good income, where most of them have failed.

OHIO STATE IS ON PRINCETON'S NEW SCHEDULE

PRINCETON — HARVARD AGREE TO MEETING ON PEACE MOVEMENT

(By the Associated Press)
PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 16.—Ohio State is to have Harvard's place on Princeton's football schedule next year.

The announcement came at the same time as news that the Princeton student council had accepted Harvard's invitation to a conference to consider the difficulties between the two universities that resulted in suspension of athletic contact last week.

Announced At Bon Fire

When the news was given out Princeton students were dancing in a bonfire that sent flames hundreds of feet above the campus in celebration of conquest of Harvard and Yale.

Princeton suggested that the peace meeting take place in New Haven next Saturday on the occasion of the Harvard-Yale game. The Harvard club of New Haven has offered the use of its building for the meeting.

Meet Western Teams

Both Harvard and Princeton will have Western Conference opponents at football next fall. Indiana has been given a place on Harvard's schedule. No announcement has come from Harvard, however, in regard to a successor for the date left open by Princeton's break in relations.

The arrangement with Ohio is for one year only. There is a three year agreement with Cornell, which supplants Navy on Princeton's schedule.

Hitting Sports Highspots With James R. Dow

How about that special train to Amarillo Saturday? Every one connected with the Lubbock high school is interested in the matter and desires for the train to be put over—why not help the laid out and accompany them to the Sandles territory.

The S. M. U. Frog game will be the turkey day classic of the Southwestern conference. The Ponies have not lost a game for the season; while the Frogs have not lost a conference game but have two games to their credit in the standing.

Preparations have been made to care for 40,000 at the Texas-Agrie game. Thanksgiving. The Memorial stadium is the largest stadium in Texas. Some 22,000 tickets have been sold for the game already and a daily demand for tickets swamp the offices of the university department of athletics.

The Florida Whirlwinds and the Littlefield Wildcats took up Friday in Littlefield for the class B championship of the upper region of the South Plains high school conference. This game promises a brilliant offensive drive. Both the Florida and Littlefield clubs are stronger in the offense department than in the defensive.

Dana X. and his fighting Farmers are having some workouts now—they have much to worry over for it will be a gala affair in the political center. Austin is making preparations to care for some 40,000 fans.

The Aggie-Texas record of games shows Texas to have 20 victories to the Aggie's 3 and have three tie games. Texas has piled up a total of 402 points to the Aggie's 171. Turkey day games have been played with Farmers since 1914 every year—three years were skipped—from 1911 to 1915.

Notice where Grantland Rice is straining his eyes to pick out an all-American team. Stars of the gridiron are everywhere this year and the 1926 mythical team will create much argument through the country, as there will be plenty of different opinions.

Howard Payne will be here with a strong combination Thursday. The Yellow Jackets are leading the Texas conference with two victories in conference games.

On Eckhardt's Buffs will entertain the Wildcats of A. C. C. Thursday in canyon. Morrison are the favorites for the game.

Commission Denies Finnegan Is Champ

BOSTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Secretary Mitchell Hambro of the state boxing commission today denied that body had ever recognized the Sugar-Finnegan bout of last night as a championship battle. He said it was the policy of the commission not to designate champions, and that newspaper men and not the commission had named the mythical crown as the prize of the winner.

Dick (Honeyboy) Finnegan won the decision over Chick Sugar, New Bedford negro in the ten round bout for which the promoters declared the Massachusetts boxing commission had given authorization as a title bout for the crown relinquished by Louis (Kid) Kaplan.

Teams Selected For Play At Rose Show

Croydon, England, has placed a ban on Sunday movies.

Billy Evans Says

McGraw Castoffs

Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees apparently approves of the John McGraw school of baseball. Why? Well, his last three assistants were tutored in the fundamentals of the game by the justly famous John.

First Huggins had Lew Wilkie, who, as a southpaw, vied with Mathewson for availing honors when "Big Six" was in his prime. Then came Fred Merkle and now Art Fletcher.

Fletcher comes closest to being the McGraw type. He is smart, aggressive and colorful, sometimes too much so for the umpires.

It is said the National League umpires have wired the American League staff a message of condolence.

Zupke Is Smart

Coach Zupke did not think again proved what a resourceful coach he is in successfully stopping the hidden-ball attack of Pennsylvania.

What other coaches had failed to do, Zupke stopped. He had his team play a tight defensive game, coached them to change quickly, always mindful to close the inside hole that might offer the ball-carrier a chance to slip through.

The hidden-ball attack that had mystified other coaches seemed to lose much of its deception when pitted against the defense that Zupke had designed.

It never is a wise move to take too much for granted when playing Illinois. Bob Zupke has the tantalizing habit of upsetting expert opinion.

The Hidden Ball?

While Zupke did not win his argument relative to the unusual pads that Penn wore and didn't spring a white ball to circumvent the deception caused thereby, he won the football game.

It is very possible that Zupke raised the question of the legality of the pads merely for the psychological effect it would have on the Penn players and coaches. The argument that ensued might have destroyed the poise of the Quakers a trifle.

Glenn Warner, the first coach to try to mystify the opposition by the use of pads similar to a football, still bubbles over with strategy incidentally.

Recently in a game with Southern California his tactics helped provide one of the biggest upsets of the year. His Stanford eleven winning 13-12 after Southern California had got away to a lead of a dozen markers.

Foxy Glenn Warner

It was Warner who, as the coach of the Carlisle Indians, beat Harvard years ago by hiding the ball up the back of one of his players, that individual running the length of the field for a touchdown.

The next season the Indians invaded Harvard with pads that closely resembled footballs sewed on their chest. Harvard had the inside dope on Warner's stunt and, when the team came on the field, the Carlisle captain was offered his choice of a red, white or blue football or else they would have to remove the pads.

The pads came off and the game proceeded with the regular style football.

Made New Rule

Those two bits of strategy by Warner resulted in the framing of the following rule to eliminate the trick-stuff.

"There shall be no unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of the players or anyone connected with either team.

"Concealing the ball beneath the clothing or substituting any article for the ball or hiding along the sidelines shall be deemed unsportsmanlike conduct, punishable by a loss of 15 yards or both loss and disqualification."

If my memory is correct, Warner first used the hidden player on the sidelines.

Foreign Athletes Banned By A. A. U.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16 (AP)—The amateur athletic union at the closing session of its annual convention here today rejected all proposals for the invasion of this country by foreign athletes as well as trips abroad by American stars during the coming year.

This bars a prospective return visit by Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish runner. Murray Hulbert of New York was unanimously re-elected president of the A. A. U. for a third term.

Avery Brundage of Chicago, was elected first vice president.

The record discus throw 153 feet 1 1/2 inches, made by Bud Houser of the University of Southern California at Palo Alto, last April 3, was added to the list of standards accepted by the A. A. U. It beats the present accepted world's mark of 157 feet, 1 1/2 inches made in 1925 by Glenn Hertz, former Stanford star.

Machine Guns, Shot Guns And Pistols Play Part In Street Fight; One Killed And Seven Injured Near New Orleans

(By the Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16.—One man was killed and seven others injured in a fight with machine guns, shot guns and pistols at Gentilly Bayou, de la Croix island today. The fight marked a renewal of the trapper war which had been waged anxiously through several trapping seasons.

Sam Gouland, deputy sheriff, formerly a justice of peace of St. Bernard parish, was killed. Injuries of the others were not believed serious.

Versions of the shooting were at variance. The fight occurred as ten deputy sheriffs and guards protecting leased trapping lands passed a group of trappers and their sympathizers on the levee. The officers asserted that as they reached a point near de la Croix island, the crowd of trappers opened fire upon them with machine guns, shot guns and other weapons.

The trappers declared the guards fired upon them first after they had pledged for an interview to bring to an amicable settlement misunderstandings between the trappers, the land owners and guards.

Officers' Boat Sinks

After a score of shots had been fired, a bullet struck the officers' boat carrying the officers and the boat sank after the engine had been put out of commission. The guards swam ashore in the face of the trappers' fire, reports said, and fought their way through the crowd grouped about the top of the levee.

Sheriff Merozian, of St. Bernard parish, with all available deputies hurried to the scene in automobiles, arriving after the battle had ended.

Captain J. H. Asher, of Dallas, Texas, in charge of the corps of guards, and slightly wounded in the affray, said that he and his men had been forced to sign statements to the effect that they had fired upon the trappers before being allowed to leave.

Five of Party Hurt

Four of the party on the launch and Captain Asher were numbered among the injured. Two trappers were hurt on the other side.

Albert Gonzales, a trapper, contradicted the claims of the officers. He asserted that the deputies had fired upon the trappers from the launch with a machine gun and other weapons after the group on the levee had hoisted a white flag signifying that they desired to have a friendly talk.

Captain Asher said that the guards had not been given the slightest warning.

All feeling which has existed among trappers and land owners for several years had been increased this season by the importation of armed guards from Texas. The war grows out of a disagreement over leases of the trapping rights.

Indian Communists Establish Arms Base

BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 16 (AP)—East Indian communists who carried out last Friday night at various places in western Java, during which a number of persons were killed or wounded, have established a base at Singapore for arms and ammunition destined for the East Indies.

New Cabinet Asked To Stop Communism

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 16 (AP)—To check communism's advance in Chile, war minister Carlos Y. Baez, who is considered the power behind the government has recommended the formation of a new cabinet.

Talking to the newspaper men the war minister said the military men of Chile were dissatisfied with existing conditions, communist propaganda distributed among the troops, with "certain effect."

Rather than "receive communism with open arms," he believed, it would be better to form a new and more energetic cabinet, and he had advised the ministry to that effect.

Radicals Active In America, Is Charge

DALLAS, Nov. 16 (AP)—Radicals in America are engaged in an active campaign of propaganda in the nation's schools and colleges to undermine the fundamentals to which this government rests was the consensus of opinion among speakers at today's session of the American Plan Open Shop conference holding its national session here.

The result is that money paid by the tax payers to build an educational system is frequently used for destructive rather than constructive work speakers declared.

Leahy Jury Lacks Four Of Completion

GEORGEWEST, Texas, Nov. 16 (AP)—The jury which will decide the fate of Harry J. Leahy, charged with the slaying of Dr. J. A. Ramsey at Mathis last May, at the noon recess of court today lacked only four of completion with the interrogation of the morning yielding two more jurors.

The last two jurors to be chosen are J. A. Benham and Willie Freddie Oakville. Judge Cox overruled the motion of the defense that the former be disqualified because he was opinionated, and the defense accepted him rather than use of their remaining two peremptory challenges.

GEORGEWEST, Nov. 16 (AP)—Attorneys were confident today they could begin examining witnesses some time Wednesday in the trial of Harry J. Leahy in connection with the murder of J. A. Ramsey, aged Mathis physician, last May, as they resumed the task of examining witnesses Tuesday.

With six jurors in the box and the competency challenge of the defense reduced to three, hope was expressed that the box could be filled by night.

Grain Market

CHICAGO TRADING

CHICAGO, Nov. 16 (AP)—Reports of heavy rains over Northern Argentina, where harvesting is in progress, tend to rally wheat values from an early decline here today. Initial weakness here was in sympathy with an expected downturn of wheat quotations at Liverpool. Opening 4 to 1 1/4c off, Chicago wheat prices quickly recovered to above yesterday's finish.

Corn showed strength, starting unchanged to 1-5c higher and subsequently seeing all around gains. Oats held about steady. Provisions went lower.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—Advancing price tendencies were well maintained at the opening of today's stock market although the early trading was rather colorless. Kennecott Copper reached a net high and Standard Oil of New Jersey was strengthened by yesterday's favorable dividend developments. Fractional gains were recorded by a number of rail shares, including Atchafalaya, Chesapeake and Ohio, Union Pacific and Frisco.

Encouraged by heavy buying of U. S. Steel, which crossed 152 to the highest level in about six weeks, constructive interests engaged in active bidding for other shares, lifting several speculative favorites to new high marks for the year. Recapitalization rumors stimulated the demand for Commercial Solvents II which rallied four points, while early advances of 1 to 2 points were established by such issues as Baldwin, Pullman, East Iron Pipe, Beech Nut Packing, Atlantic Refining and Otis Elevator. The market was active; western steers $15.50; short fed yearlings $9.00; Penn-ham beef cows $5.00; vealers $7.00; hogs: 700 lower; bulk $11.15; up-sows $9.50; stockers $10.75; 11.50.

traditional "soft" on the good news broke out in Standard Oil of New Jersey common but the preferred stock advanced a point in response to plans for its retirement. A jump of three fourths of a cent in Norwegian kroner to a new high at 23.70 cents featured the irregular opening of the foreign exchange market. Sterling was unchanged at $4.84-5 for demand bills.

Mexico Minister To Have Coolidge Okey

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—When Ambassador Sheffield resumes his duties in Mexico City he will have the full support of President Coolidge in the continuation of more or less delicate negotiations between the United States and Mexico.

It was said today at the White House that the most recent exchanges between Washington and Mexico City in regard to the alien land and petroleum laws may be published within a few days. The president does not care at this time to comment on the nature of these exchanges, although he personally has read and approved the replies Secretary Kellogg has made in answering the communications from Mexico.

NOTHING WRONG IN A KISS WOMAN SAYS ON STAND

TELLS OF SEEING SISTER AND PASTOR IN A FERVENT SMACK

(By the Associated Press.)

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 16.—That she saw her sister, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, kiss the Rev. Edward W. Hall in 1918, but was assured by Mrs. Mills that relations between them were "quite proper," was the testimony of Mrs. Marie M. Lee of Patterson, N. J., in the Hall-Mills trial here today. Mrs. Mills' insistence that there was "nothing wrong" was repeated in 1921, Mrs. Lee said, but added that in April of the following year, her sister told her in the presence of James Mills, her husband, that she was going away with Mr. Hall.

Witnesses Act In Home

The incident of the kiss was described by Mrs. Lee as taking place while she was making her home with her sister in New Brunswick. Entering the house quietly, she saw the couple kiss as Mrs. Mills sat on the minister's knee, she said.

Mrs. Lee also declared that James Mills was assured by his wife that she would not do anything to disgrace his name, but that when she was ready to go away with the minister she would tell him.

Smiles At Testimony

Jim Mills sat forward in his chair during the early part of his sister-in-law's testimony and smiled as she said that her sister in telling of her affection for the minister, said Mr. Hall was "her intellectual equal." The witness was questioned as to a possible inference that Mills was not the intellectual equal of his wife, but she said this feature was not brought out.

The court day was started fifty minutes late, special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson being engaged, it was unofficially stated, in interviewing possible new witnesses.

The defendants were in their seats a few minutes before the scheduled hour of opening and had a long wait. The trio, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, seemed in better spirits than usual.

Accused Mexican Is Held In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 16 (AP)—Miguel Valdez, arrested on charges of embezzlement of $500,000 from the Republic of Mexico in which government he is said once to have held a high office, was being held by federal authorities here today pending advice from Washington.

Standard Oil Co. Embarks Upon New Financing Plan

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Standard Oil company, of New Jersey, world's largest oil corporation, has embarked upon a $200,000,000 financing plan primarily to get off its books high priced seven per cent preferred stock, issued just after the war.

Simultaneously with announcement of the financial plan, the board of directors declared an extra dividend of 1 1/2 cents in addition to its regular dividend of 25 cents on common stock.

The plan calls for redemption of approximately $200,000,000 of preferred stock by March 16, 1927, at $115 a share. To provide funds for this, $120,000,000 in 20 year 5 per cent debentures and 3,449,317 shares of new common with a $25 par value will be issued.

The new common will be offered at par to common stock holders in the proportion of one new share to each six shares outstanding. J. P. Morgan will offer the debentures, giving preferred stock holders preference. Bankers regard over subscription as assured. The sale price has not yet been decided upon.

There are 36,000 preferred stock holders on the books and more than 20,000,000 shares of common stock outstanding. Subscription rights giving first call to the new common stock are estimated on Wall Street to be worth $2.50 a share on the outstanding stock.

The plan is the largest ever undertaken by an industrial corporation and is matched only by 1921 financing of the Hill Railroads which involved a $230,000,000 bond issue.

So rapidly is the use of crude oil taking the place of coal in Italy that the amount of the liquid fuel imported today is twice that of the same period three years ago.

Rotarians To Have Ladies Night Soon

Rotarians and their ladies will frolic Thursday night at Lubbock's new hotel and the program committee is busy planning for the event, President Hubert L. Allen said today. The entertainment will be preceded by a dinner which begins promptly at 7:30 o'clock, and members who are planning to attend are urged to phone Walter Royalty or Guy McAfee by four o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

STIFF FINE ASSESSED

A fine of $10 and costs, making a total of $21, was assessed one man in corporation court yesterday as the result of an automobile accident Sunday night, officers said today. They are searching for the companion of the man fined and he will also draw a punishment if found. Police allege the men were under the influence of intoxicants at the time of the accident, which resulted in the injury of two persons.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JUDITH MARTIN, young teacher in Pendleton University, is admired by ERIC WATERS, rebel senior, and DR. PETER DORN, astronomy professor. DEAN TIMOTHY BROWN is enraged when she chooses student friends, and openly defends Eric against a suspicion of bootlegging poison liquor. MYRA ALDRICH, a spoiled daughter of wealth, living in Judith's boarding house, is in love with Eric and jealous of Judith.

"KITTY" SHEA, town bootlegger, overhears the story of Mrs. Timothy Brown's secret love affair, when Mrs. Brown discusses it in a restaurant booth with Judith. Judith befriends her, believing the dean a heartless tyrant.

Shea tries to blackmail Mrs. Brown. Staying alone in Myra's sorority house during the Christmas holidays, Judith is terrified when Shea tries to force an entrance.

She shoots from upper window, and he goes away. Next day she examines the sidewalk.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

The paving was covered with a light crust of powdery ice from last night's storm, and Judith examined it inch by inch, from the porch steps to the outer sidewalk.

She crossed the sidewalk by the road, stooping over to look at the cement. When she reached the parking, she stood up, with relief in her eyes. There were no stains on the walk.

A milkman, jogging along, seated in the door of his wagon, looked at her curiously. She turned hurriedly back toward the house. The negro houseman still sat slumped in his chair, snoring. But the cook had left her post. Judith found her in the kitchen, preparing grapefruit for breakfast. The woman laid down the little curved knife at Judith's entrance. "Merry Christmas, Miss Martin," she said, smiling.

"Good morning, Mandy," said Judith. "When will breakfast be ready?"

"Right away, right away," said Mandy. "Perhaps we might as well drop the matter of the salary," Judith said. "Nothing can be done about it now. I send for a glazier tomorrow, to replace the broken pane."

The cook seized the corner of her apron and wiped her eyes with it. "Bless you, child," she said. "I'd a shakin' to lose this job."

Judith ate in the warm dining room, with Myra's fruit basket for a table centerpiece, and the Christmas sun pouring in through the windows.

While she was eating, the telephone rang. The houseman went to answer it and returned to summon Judith.

"Merry Christmas, Judith," said the voice of Mrs. Timothy Brown. Judith returned the greeting.

"It's going to be a merry Christmas here," said Mrs. Brown, speaking more softly. "The dean's been called out town." She laughed. "That's why I'm free to ask you to dinner."

Judith thought a moment. "Won't he learn that I've been there, and be angry with you?" she queried.

The dean's wife laughed defiantly. "Perhaps so, my dear. But times have changed. I'm not afraid of him."

"Very well, then," replied Judith. "I'll come."

A box of long-stemmed roses with Eric's card came just as she was preparing to leave the house that afternoon. She carried it into the kitchen in search of a vase. The houseman was rubbing silver polish on the Gamma Delta service.

"What did you all shoot at last night?" he asked.

"At the top of the oak tree," she answered, looking up.

"Uh-huh," said the man. "Too bad you didn't hit youah."

Judith took the vase of roses into the living room and set it on the piano. Eric's card was in her pocket, and she read it at again as she went upstairs to get her coat and hat.

"Back next Sunday. Merry Christmas," The words were written on the back of the card. Judith pinned two of the roses against her coat before she left.

The dean's house floated lovely wreaths in every window, and a little curl of smoke from the chimney over the living room wing suggested festive cheer indoors.

Mrs. Brown herself admitted her. She was wearing a green apron and smiling broadly. Judith looked at her curiously. It was the first time she had seen the dean's wife wholeheartedly.

"Will you take off your wraps in my bedroom, at the end of the stairs?" said Mrs. Brown. "I must run back to my room. My coat isn't entirely equal to the emergency."

Judith ran up the stairs. The house was full of savory smells, and there were vases of bright red roses on the tables in the hall. The bedroom in which she took off her coat and hat was almost cloistered in its severity. But on the little bedside stand Judith's scarlet poinsettias blazed the cold pallor of the room.

She ran downstairs again, to find Mrs. Brown waiting in the hall. The apron had been removed. Judith held her mouth to speak, but the dean's wife grasped her hand and led her toward the living room.

When they stepped into the room, a tall man rose from behind the blazing fire, and Judith recognized Dr. Dorn. He was looking most uncomfortable. In the white armchair sat Dean Angela Snow, smiling cordially.

"How do you do, my dear?" she said, stretching a hand to Judith. "So you passed the night safely? I don't know why it was that I had such a queer feeling of discomfort about you."

"It was a malevolent night," said Dr. Dorn soberly. Judith glanced at Mrs. Brown. She was leaning against the fireplace, her hands fidgeting with its scarf, and her face white.

"Come," said the dean's wife. "Let's sit down before the fire and shut out the wind and the rain."

Judith laughed. "It isn't raining now. Mrs. Brown," the woman looked at the windows, as though bewildered.

"It is," said Dr. Dorn. "Have you had a pleasant Christmas?" he asked formally.

Judith tilted her head. "Rather a lovely one," she said. "I know the rest of the day will be pleasant."

She reached a hand toward Mrs. Brown's and Mrs. Brown took it. The dean's wife smiled and would not let it go. The talk ran on small affairs of the university and the dean. Mrs. Brown listened eagerly and spoke with animation and then. Her eyes were sparkling and she had moved her hair more elaborately than usual so that it framed her face in a glistening curve.

Dr. Dorn pursued the subject of the dean's campaign. He can clean up this university as the dean plans, we are models for other colleges, the country over."

Dean Snow looked at him, quizzically. "Do you suppose it may clear up?"

Dr. Dorn gave her a quick glance. "Perhaps not. But good will be done. If this man Shea, for one thing."

Mrs. Brown jumped to her feet, interrupting him. "I go to the kitchen," she said.

The professor continued. "If this man Shea could be out of business, it would mean a vast improvement. He is practically all of the liquor drunk in the university."

Dean Snow shook her head. "Somebody would take his place," she said.

Dinner was an affair of turkey and oyster dressing and cranberry jelly and a flaming plum pudding. The dean would not approve of the brandy on the pudding. He chuckled Mrs. Brown. "He keeps it for sickness. But a flaming pudding is pretty, and I know you don't mind." But as she spoke, she looked uneasily at Dr. Dorn.

She was attacking the pudding with relish. They went back to the living room, and the dean's wife shaded and turned on the lamps. Dr. Dorn asked to play, and she rambled through a long list of old when she turned away from the piano, Dr. Dorn was sitting at her with a strange mixture of admiration and sympathy. The dean's wife sat staring at the fire, her face into a somber line.

Dean Snow stood up. "I'm sorry," she said. "But I must go to pick up Miss Lucy."

Judith rose also. Dean Snow smiled at her. "Will you wait for me?" she asked.

Dr. Dorn interrupted. "I will take Miss Martin home, if you don't mind."

Mrs. Brown went upstairs with the two women, and Dr. Dorn followed her in the hall. "You're doing beautifully," she said.

cooks will be such that the woman of moderate means can make them, she explained.

Common vegetables can be prepared in such a way that even the most unpopular will be palatable. Mrs. Chitwood has said and she expects to demonstrate the preparation and decoration of vegetables on Thursday. Mrs. Chitwood stresses the decoration of foods, saying that the more pleasing they are to the eye, the more palatable they are.

Her subject for Friday afternoon is meats and with the broiled steak that is tender and retains all its juices and food values, she will prepare biscuit in her inimitable manner. This will close her week's program.

Many Hear Expert

Many women who had attended the other two evening cooking schools conducted here by Mrs. Chitwood were in attendance Monday afternoon planning to be present each afternoon this week at 2 o'clock to hear her. The food expert is urging that the women try out her recipes during the week and report to her about their success. In order that she may advise with them and help them with their problems. She invites questions during the sessions and gives freely of her advice and help to those who have had less experience than she in cooking, which she says is the biggest profession in the world and she urges that more girls be prepared for their most important profession, that of homemaking.

The program for each afternoon is varied. Promptly at 2 o'clock the lecture begins and lasts until near 4 o'clock when prizes are awarded in the form of groceries. Mrs. Chitwood was presented with a basket of leavening yeast, cranberries, Monday afternoon by the Avalanche-Journal publication.

Lubbock Men Speak

Don L. Jones, superintendent of the state's agricultural experiment farm, Henry Blocker, cotton buyer, Arthur P. Duggan, of Littlefield, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and O. L. Slaton, banker, all made informal talks in addition to the remarks made by Mr. Youngman who declined to say much because as he said he "came to listen and learn rather than to talk."

He praised the work and character of A. R. Davis, manager of Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, who, he said, had more enthusiasm for his community than any other Chamber of Commerce executive he had ever seen. Following the luncheon, which was held in a private dining room of the hotel, Dean A. H. Leitch, of Texas Tech's school of agriculture, and Dean William Miller, of the department of textile engineering, and Henry T. Kimbro, cotton and grain man, conferred with Mr. Youngman further regarding the possibilities of his territory. Mr. Youngman was induced to include Lubbock in his itinerary through the efforts of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

Officials To Ignore General Wood's Order

MANILA, Nov. 16 (AP)—Manuel Quezon, president of the senate, and Speaker Rotas of the house of representatives, ex-officio members of the insular board of control, which was abolished last week by an executive order by Governor General Wood, today notified the chief executive they would ignore his order.

The legislators announced they would continue to act as members of the board until the law under which it was created is repealed by the legislature annulled by congress or voided by the courts.

A test of the controversy probably will come Saturday when there will be a meeting of the National Coal company. The board of control has authority over the director of this company and other government corporations.

WOMEN RAP GIRLS' SMOKING HABIT

FORT WORTH, Nov. 16 (AP)—Class smoking among high school girls is one of the phases of scholastic life deserving an official frown from the Texas Congress of Mothers and parent teachers associations, in the opinion of Mrs. Ella Carruthers Porter, Dallas, founder of the organization, whose four day convention is under way here.

"There is a law against selling tobacco to minors in Texas and it is the duty of Texas mothers congress not only to insist that the law is observed but to foster a wave of public sentiment against cigaret smoking among high school girls," she declared.

Asked if she thought enough Texas school girls smoke to justify a remedial campaign, Mrs. Porter said: "I know that a great many Dallas high school girls are smoking and I am assuming that a similar condition exists in other cities in the state."

SAINT AND SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

"Dad," Faith followed her father to the front porch the next morning, as he was leaving for his work.

"Are you and—Bob Hathaway getting along all right?"

Jim Lane's near-sighted brown eyes peered at her with intent, searching kindness. "About as usual," he answered slowly. "He's getting pretty restless about the job, —them bungalows I'm buildin' for him. That spell of rain we had last week played hob with the cement work, like I told you, and the roof of the finished house sprung three bad leaks. But he's a mighty white chap—none whiter. Ain't seen him around here much lately. Must be two-three weeks now, hasn't it? You haven't had a quarrel, have you daughter?"

Faith swallowed the lump in her throat and kissed him on the cheek. "Not exactly, Dad. But I suppose he's got lots of other friends who take up his time. Junior said he had Selma Pruitt with him yesterday, looking at his bungalows."

"Yes, so he did," Jim Lane answered with careful casualness. "Nice girl, Selma. But she can't hold a candle to you honey, and I'll bet Bob Hathaway's smart enough to know it."

"You—you really think he's trustworthy, honorable?" she persisted in spite of her desire to hide her wounds from her father's loving eyes.

"None straighter," Jim Lane answered emphatically. "Well, I got to hurry, honey. Don't let that many-headed female work you too hard today," he concluded, referring to "Madame Denise," who was just than parking her smart coupé before the Lane house.

Faith watched her father's stooped figure move slowly and rheumatically down the walk, and waited for "Madame Denise" to join her on the porch.

"I'm sorry," she began, after a moment. "That I won't be able to help you and Mrs. Hogan this morning. I have business in town. I was wondering if Mrs. Hogan could put the finishing touches on that black satin coat of mine, while I'm doing the housework. I'd like to wear it if she could."

"I'll see that she does," "Madame Denise" looked at her with sudden interest. "You didn't sleep much last night and you're as nervous as a cat this morning. Say, dearie, bring me that black satin hat you wore when you and I'll give it a twist and a stitch and a new feather fancy make it as slick as new."

At eleven o'clock Faith was ready to get out on her call to Bob Hathaway's offices. Cherry had departed on another shopping orgy, and knew nothing of Faith's plans.

"Well, dearie," Nora Dennis gave a weak to Faith's hat and stood off to survey the girl with fond, critical eyes. "If it's a man you're going to—Lordy, how the child can blush!"

"I say you ought to knock his eyes out. That black satin coat with the monkey fur is the last word in chic. That little close-fitting black satin cloche is just what you need to make you look like a Paris mannequin. Say, you're stunning!"

Perhaps, it was the psychological effect of knowing that she had never looked better in her life that gave Faith the courage to open the outer door of Bob Hathaway's suite of offices in the Masonic Building when she arrived at half past eleven.

There was no one in the reception room and the door marked "Mr. Bob Hathaway, private" was closed. Faith stood uncertainly for a moment in the middle of the small but well furnished room, guessing from the condition of the stenographer's desk in the corner that the girl had just left the room to renew her make-up. A sheet of paper half filled with typing, was in the typewriter and an open notebook with a pencil across it lay on the drawn-out left of the desk.

Hardly of her own volition Faith moved toward the desk, her cheeks burning at the thought that she was turning spy—and that the person to be spied upon was the man she loved.

Fearing detection every moment, she bent and swiftly opened first the top and then the second drawer of the desk, noting as she did so that the machine was an Underwood. Score one for Cherry's deductions! In the second drawer she found what she was looking for—blank white envelopes and white typewriting paper, commercial letter size, the sort of paper which had borne the black-mailing letters which Cherry had received. Her fingers trembled violently as she opened her large black patent leather hand bag and inserted a hastily folded sheet of the paper and an envelope. The purple edge of a piece of carbon paper showed between two sheets of the white paper, and without definite purpose she drew it out and studied it.

All the color drained out of her cheeks as she saw that it contained the final bit of evidence necessary to prove that the letter had been written in Bob Hathaway's office. Only two letters had been written with that particular piece of carbon—one evidently a business letter, the other, farther down the sheet and blocked in the center of the sheet, a letter which contained the words "Chris Wiley" and "Cherry." The words inverted as they were, were still plainly readable on the glossy purple surface of the carbon paper. She did not dare take time to read the tell-tale message, preserved on the face of the carbon, with the aid of her hand-bag mirror, but folded it and stuffed it into her hand-bag, feeling like a criminal, and as if the world had turned upside down.

She was seated and waiting, with apparent composure, when the stenographer came singing into the room.

"Oh, Valencia, in my dreams, it always seems—oh hello! I didn't know anyone was here. Did you want to see Mr. Hathaway?" She ran a highly manicured hand over the sleek cap of her mannishly bobbed hair and looked at Faith with shoe-black, Oriental eyes, heavily beaded with mascara.

"Yes," Faith answered. "Is he in?"

"I'm Miss Lane—Miss Faith Lane."

The girl's eyes opened wide in startled surprise, almost terror, then narrowed to mere slits as she answered.

BALE AN HOUR IS COTTON SLOGAN

Farmers Use Slides Instead Of Picking Or Pulling To Cut Down Expenses

"A bale an hour" is the slogan of South Plains farmers who have discontinued picking and are now "sliding" their cotton in. Picking is slow—mighty slow, pulling is not much better, but when you hook a team of mules, to a slide quick results may be expected. So on the South Plains the slide is the rule rather than the exception.

Of course while the slide is picking up the cotton, it gets most of the green bolls, the dead leaves and some of the stalks. But what's the difference, farmers ask. Just seven cents a pound regardless of color, staple or grade. A man can pick 300 pounds a day, pull 600 pounds or slide in a few bales. So they are sliding.

Slide cotton is almost as good as pulled cotton, though ginner find it more difficult to gin. One Lubbock farmer brought in two bales of slid cotton Saturday and it took the gin-

Football Tactics Get Gotham Bandit

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—Rudolph Beck, "innocent-by-stander" employed football tactics during a robbery today and "got his man", with a flying tackle that thrilled a Times Square crowd.

Beck's man was one of three who attempted a daring daylight holdup of Henry Silberfeld's jewelry store on Broadway and Thirty-Ninth street. That same robber shot a policeman and a jewelry salesman before a second policeman laid him low with a bullet under the heart.

ODESSA, Nov. 16.—Airplanes, artillery, cavalry and motor equipment were used in South Russia's recent war on locusts which threatened to destroy the crops for hundreds of square miles. Airplanes were used in locating the insects, and the troops built great rings of fire nightly around the sleeping pests.

RELIGION, MOVIES AND THE PRESS

Modern life gloomhounds find the state of the church today a juicy bone to sniff.

"What is the church coming to?"
they ask. "Young people do not attend. Look at the church's life when we were young. Church socials, church box parties, missionary suppers, all our life in the church."

If it were not so funny, it would be pathetic that the gloomhounds don't see that they are putting their finger right on the very reason why the church has changed.

The church that is gone was not a religious church so much as a social club. We do not need a social church in an age of automobiles, radios, photographs, magazines, movies, and all the myriad modern forms of recreation.

There is probably exactly as much real religion in the church today as ever.

The same gloomhounds dissect the modern minister—hark back to the good old days when the minister visited the sick and friendless and was not so busy digging up flowery phrases for his sleek Sunday congregation.

A current magazine with its article on the minister hits the nail on the head when it says:

"The minister has had a time-honored, twofold function. He was pastor and religious teacher. Covered with the dust of many miles of travel, he rode into the great farmyard and was greeted by the stork, if rough chores of welcome. He quaffed the stirrup cup of good home-brew and leaped from his place between the saddlebags to grip the farmer's hand and chuck the milkmaid under the ruddy chin."

"He was welcome, but if he flattered himself that the welcome was because of his spiritual ministrations he was mistaken. It was because he filled the place of the newspapers to the elders, and that of the movies to the youngsters."

How much of your weekly pay envelope, Mr. Man and Mrs. Woman, is spent before you receive it?

How much just automatically goes each week for those necessities and luxuries which you are buying "on time"—the piano, the radio, the diamond ring, the automobile, the furniture, the washing machine, the vacuum cleaner, the phonograph?

Last year, according to some recent statistics, practically five billion dollars' worth of goods was bought on time in America.

More than half of this amount was for automobiles only.

There are conflicting views on this buying "on time" subject, among both economists who study the subject as experts and laymen who know what they want when they want it.
There's no end of argument.

It is hard to believe, however, that a nation composed of men and women workers who are happy and contended because they can enjoy life
as they pay along at the daily job, knowing that at night there is the radio, the auto, the piano, the family atmosphere cheerful because of the
"on time" vacuum cleaner or electric washer, can be anything but a better and richer nation than one composed of sullen, restless, unhappy, self-denied souls.

STEALING FROM HOTELS
Hotels purposely buy homey pictures, we are told, in an attempt to cut the high cost of stealing.

Practically everything at all portable disappears from our nation's hotels, and the only reason the pictures stay on the wall is because they're so ugly nobody wants them.

Hotel proprietors say that all honest human beings are paying from a quarter to a dollar more a day on hotel bills to make up for theft by the dishonest ones.

There's this consolation, of course
—the dishonest ones are similarly taxed, unless they "beat" their bills.

LINES FROM THE Old Masters

O say what is that thing called
Light
Which I must never enjoy?
What are the blessings of the sight
O tell your poor blind boy!

You talk of wondrous things you see.
You say the sun shines bright:
I feel him warm, but how can he
Or make it day or night?

My day or night myself I make When'er I sleep or play.
And could I ever keep awake
With me I were always day.

With heavy sighs I often hear
You mourn my hapless woe.
But sure with patience I can bear
A loss I never can know.

Then let not what I cannot have Cheer me of mind destroy.
Whilst thus I sing, I am a king.
Although a poor blind boy.
—V. CHIBBER: The Blind Boy.

IN NEW YORK
SEE-SAVING
and
BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—No section of Manhattan is spared the inroads of the skyscraper and the lavish, glittering gesture.

Take the East Side, long immunized from the plague of steel and concrete that spreads feverishly
along the gaunt body of this island.

For generations this vast area of tenement, small shops and street merchants was content to hulk to itself a humble and colorful—though soiled and disheveled—environment.

True, the shadow of uptown styles
was cast upon the windows of East Side shops, and the daughters of Israel, Hungary, Italy, Greece, Rumania appeared in fur coats and close imitations of Fifth Avenue.

True, too, Second Avenue blossomed into a sort of East Side Broadway with movies and shooting gal-eries, but it retained an architectural flavor of its own and its cafes were essentially native.

Not so many months ago a great hotel began to tower over the tattered tenements and cheap rooming houses. Some philanthropists had giving the East Side a two million dollar hostelry. It had looked plattered after Madison Avenue and its appointments matched those of any of the high priced inns of other sections. It was an incongruous monument in an amazing forest where humans sprout like grass and where once poverty and struggle hovered hawk-like.

It was an admission of passing times, of prosperity creeping in.

And now, I note, the little Yiddish theaters that have struggled for many a year in out-of-the-way corners are copying their big Broadway brothers.

On one corner of Second Avenue rises the Yiddish Art Playhouse, built at an estimated cost of a million dollar, bigger and better scale. And under the name of Maurice Schwartz, who year on end has struggled to reproduce the native dramas in the old tenement, often in playhouses that were little larger than packing cases.

A couple of blocks away rises another million-dollar playhouse, to be opened in February.

Limousines drive up to the doors and the Yiddish actors are eagerly grabbed for Broadway dialect shows.

From the Bronx to Brooklyn to Second Avenue the playhouses flourish.

Variety, the theatrical newspaper, tells us that one grosses $12,000 a week and a smaller one, $6,000 a week—figures that make the eager financed Broadway managers stop and ponder.

Prosperity, it seems, is overtaking
the East Side—and with it the Americanization of architecture and peoples alike, the lavish, glittering gesture is to be observed.

Who knows? This may be a chronicle of the beginning of the end
GILBERT SWAN.

WASHINGTON
LETTERFOUR NEW FACES TO APPEAR
NEXT MONTH IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Four new faces will be seen in the United States Senate when it convenes in December.

Senators Cummins of Iowa and Fernald of Maine died during recess.
David W. Stewart succeeds the former.

The latter's successor, has not yet been chosen, but he will have been picked by the opening of the session.

Senator Butler of Massachusetts and Williams of Missouri do not come back like the other "lame ducks" but dropped out immediately upon being beaten at the polls, never having been elected senators but only appointees to fill vacancies.

Senator David I. Walsh replaces Butler and Representative Harry R.
Hawes, Williams.

The newcomers, then will be Stewart, Walsh, Hawes and the as yet unknown from Maine.

The "lame duck" delegation—senators beaten for re-election or re-election is an unusual, late one, including Senator Wadsworth of New York, Walter of Maryland, Fernald
of Kentucky, Harold of Oklahoma, Cameron of Arizona, McKinney of Illinois, Means of Colorado, Pepper of Pennsylvania, Lenroot of Wisconsin and Stanford of Oregon.

It will also be the last session for Senator Underwood of Alabama, though he spent his last year, having prudently announced that he wasn't a candidate.

The current guess is that appointment federal jobs will be found for most of the "lame duck" contingent.
There are rumors of coming vacancies in the cabinet. If so they'll be convenient to put retiring senators into. Perhaps a few diplomatic posts will be available.

The new Progressives will not take office in the Senate until 1927, but when they do their group, including those already in harness, will be the largest in the history of Progressivism.

Of the really dependable Progressives there will be Senators Norris, LaFollette, Frazier and Nye, John J.
Blaine and Smith of Brookhart.
Senator Shipstead belongs to all interests and purposes, in the same alignment, though his party label is that of the Farmer-Laborites.

The bloc is stronger, by two, than even in the time of the late Senator LaFollette, the elder.

There are also several more or less "regular" Republican senators who flock with the Progressives part of the time—"in the twilight zone," as Senator Shipstead expresses it.

Senators Borah, Howell and Johnson are notably of this type, and to some extent, Senators Capper, Comstock, McMaster and Norbeck should be included.

Several Democrats work remarkably well as teammates of the Progressive Republicans. Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, who will be back next year, always was very much in harmony with them. So are Senators Walsh and Wheeler of Montana.

In the Democratic "twilight zone,"
may be named Senators Cawley, Dill, King, McKellar, Neely and Reed
of Missouri.

To sum up, Senate Progressivism will be somewhere from 10 to 25
strong in the next Congress.

This is inclusive of elements from all parties and all degrees of Pro-gressivism, but even the minimum figure, by so closely balanced a Senate, will give the bloc more power than it has possessed at any past session of Congress.

Eat the Act

A couple of actors had what is called in the vernacular of their profession a "dumb act." They owned a flock of educated ducks. Theirs was a good act, but bookings were few and far between. Finally there came a period of dullness when the two artists could not secure an engagement at all.

They were laid off for the summer and took refuge in a little house loaned them by a sympathetic friend and did their own house keeping, such as it was. When the fall season opened up their agent wired them:

"Damages?" said Mrs. Bots. "What Ah! want, will damages? Gawd knows Ah got too much damages now. What Ah wants is repairs.—Everybody's

QUEER
QUIRKS OF NATURE

THIS PET FITS IN A WATER GLASS

Marmoset Monkey

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President American Nature Ass'n

How would you like to have a pet that just fits in a water glass? The marmoset monkey will. He is a very likeable fellow and "snort" for his size, as some folks say of children.

In Brazil the woods are full of them. If you ever have the chance to take the famous railroad ride to the coffee plantations near Sao Paulo, you will have great fun watching the marmosets in the jungles along the way. The manner in which they scamper from limb to limb in the jungle and the chatter they keep up is astonishing.

The marmoset cannot stand the cold. As a rule this queer quirk of nature will have a body about six inches long while the tail will be eight and a half inches long. This makes the marmoset a gymnast of great ability.

Some people call the marmoset the squirrel monkey, and it is a good name. He has very large ears, and you can find them if you look in the old fan-like tufts of hair on the side of the head. The hair is silky, not quite an inch long and of a grayish tinge. Spread it back and it appears to be streaked black and reddish brown.

Helpful Health Hints

MANY FACTORS ENTER INTO EFFECT OF LIQUOR ON MAN

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene,
the Health Magazine

Scientists continue to try to find out just how much alcohol is necessary to produce drunkenness.

Apparently the quantity varies according to the physical state of the persons, the age, the sex, the constitution, the temperament, the hereditary, the state of health of various organs and mode of living, the nature of the beverage taken, including its composition, and the proportion of alcohol.

In certain diseases, such as diabetes, hypertension or delirium tremens, much larger quantities of alcohol can be consumed than in normal states.

If a person is moderately tired,
working in the open air, or exercising vigorously, the alcohol does not seem to have the same effect as it would on one who was sitting quietly in a chair.

Quart of Rum
A case was reported of the death of a man who drank a quart of rum, and the majority of authorities are agreed that for a man weighing 150 pounds, 400 grams may be a fatal dose. Nations differ as to the amounts of alcohol consumed.

One estimate indicates that persons in Finland average a quart and a half per person per year, in Italy, 10

quarts per person per year, and in France 22 quarts per person per year.

The habits of the various nations also differ. Italy, France, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, the Argentine and Japan prefer wine; Germany and England prefer beer, while Sweden, Norway, Finland, Rumania, Austria-Hungary and Russia seem to prefer their liquors.

The British, Irish and American tendency to whiskey is well recognized. Those who have studied the effects of alcohol on the human body find that it first excites and then depresses the nervous and muscular systems.

By assuming a feeling of fatigue
it seems to favor the onset of over-strain. The person does not realize that he is overworking until the effects of the alcohol wear off.

By Occupations
Investigations made among men as to the occupations in which alcoholism was most frequently found, indicated
the following order: sellers of alcohol beverages, hotel keepers, peddlers, day laborers, transportation workers, cabinets, bakers, cooks, butchers, waiters, bookbinders, chauffeurs, mechanics,
domestic servants, packers, printers,
pointers, shop men, shoemakers, policemen, accountants and tailors.

Among women the trades in which alcoholism was found to be prevalent were in order: hotel servants, waitresses, domestic servants, cooks, hairdressers, women without an occupation, seamstresses, milliners, artists, models and hospital nurses.

With Our Contemporaries

THEY'RE COMING WEST

Our Chamber of Commerce is the greatest factor in building our city.
Letters of inquiry are arriving daily.
They are coming from everywhere.
They are asking for information of the oil prospects and conditions in general. The better class are asking about the suitability of Miami as a place to make a home and rear a family. They are making inquiry about our schools, our churches, the citizenship, etc.—Miami Chief.

Folks are still coming west. It has always been so, and it is more. People have moved constantly westward
since the establishment of the thirteen colonies on the Atlantic coast. A town's Chamber of Commerce is a great aid toward helping the new people get satisfactorily located and in making of the town a better place in which to live after the folks are settled there. In fact, there's hardly any limit to what a good Chamber of Commerce organization can do for a town. It deserves the backing of all the citizens.—Slaton Stationer.

ENCOURAGING CROOKS
The public pays the bill for losses
on insured property that is destroyed by fire. The payment is made the less real, because it is indirect and made in the form of insurance premiums.
Where there is criminal responsibility in fire losses, the public has a double interest. It is concerned with both the economic and legal aspects of the case.
But difficulties exist in punishing arson. Evidence of guilt is usually covered; witnesses are hard to find;

some, when found, are reluctant to tell what they know. It is often a case of a neighbor or friend against an insurance company.

LEGION ENJOYS PROGRAM GIVEN BY NEWSPAPERS

SPIRIT PROMPTING MOVE DRAWS COMMENT OF RESERVE MEN

The local post of the American Legion, in regular session here Monday night, was entertained by the Avalanche-Journal, and approximately 100 ex-servicemen gathered for the occasion, enjoyed one of the best programs in the history of the post even though every phase of the program was improvised. The legionnaires were loud in their praise of the entertainment offered by the newspapers, and Chas. Whitaker and Homer L. Pharr expressed the confidence of all present when they each spoke a few words of gratification.

Lead Spirit of Occasion
Their remarks centered around the spirit that prompted entertainment, which, in the words of the speakers, is far more important and means much more than the mere fact that such a program was offered. Mr. Pharr, who has been a member of the post for several years, recalled a bit of history of the post, telling of the struggle for existence several years ago, and drew a comparison of the spirit of the occasion last night and the one that predominated when he with others was laboring to keep life into the organization some time back.

Other speakers included Amos Howard, newly elected county clerk, Dr. J. V. Clark and Hubert L. Allen, all of whom touched upon the necessity for cooperation and concerted effort in the promulgation of any ideal, and the reaching of any objective.

Reserve Group Explained
Lieut. A. H. Waite, of the Tech college, told briefly of the aims and objects of the Reserve Officers' association, a unit of which was organized last August day. The movement is national in scope, he said, and has for its primary purpose the fostering of any movement that is for a better national defense program.

It was announced that through the chemical department of the college, Dr. W. T. Read will in the near future give an illustrated lecture for the Legion on chemical warfare research.
