West Germany agrees to take more refugees

By MANFRED HEES
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Thousands of East Germans who sought refuge in West German embassies in Czechoslovakia and Poland began emigrating to the West on Saturday under a remarkable accord between Soviet bloc and NATO nations.

The agreement covers nearly 3,500 East Germans who began packing the West German Embassy here several weeks ago and another 600 East Germans at the West German Embassy in Warsaw, Poland.

Officials in West Germany, East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland announced the accord and its details.

East Germany, a hard-line Communist nation that had harshly criticized Warsaw Pact ally Hungary for allowing a similar refugee exodus earlier this month, said it was granting the transfer as a "humanitarian act."

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher made an unexpected visit to Prague on Saturday and personally delivered the news to jubilant East Germans at the embassy here.

"I call you fellow citizens, and express a hearty welcome," Genscher, speaking from an embassy balcony, told the weary but ecstatic masses huddled in the muddy compound.

He told reporters the solution was agreed on early Saturday in consultations with the East Germans, Czechoslovaks and Poles, with the active participation of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Some refugees had spent weeks huddled in tents in the embassy compound amid increasingly bad conditions caused by growing crowding, spreading disease and worsening weather. Many broke out in tears of joy at the news, officials said.

The first train left Prague on Saturday night. An olive green East German locomotive left the city's northern rail terminal at 8:50 p.m. local time pulling nine passenger cars.

About 400 East Germans were on board — some cheering, others singing, still others appearing a little dazed by the sudden end to their ordeal.

"We are coming, we are coming," a group of young refugees yelled in unison from an open train window, as Czechoslovak uniformed police looked on impassively.

A young woman from Dresden said as she was about to board: "I can't believe it, tell me it's not a dream."

East Germany's official news agency ADN said trains would carry the Prague emigres back to East Germany from Czechoslovakia and on to West Germany. Czechoslovak state television said the East Germans would be issued exit papers while en route to West Germany.

The route was seen as a face-saving measure permitting East Germany to say that it had allowed the emigres to go to West Germany from its territory and not from Czechoslovakia, a Warsaw Pact ally that had vowed not to allow the transfer.

In Poland, the 600 East Germans assembled at the West Germany Embassy in Warsaw were told they would be leaving the city by train early Sunday.

The refugees, some of whom had been allowed to stay in nearby residential neighborhoods, reacted with cheering and weeping.

"I am happy, I am happy," one young man said through the bars of the compound gates.

In the announcement of the accord, there was no explicit mention of the policy toward future refugees, but ADN said East Germany hoped West Germany would follow "normal, international customs" at its embassies abroad after the transfer.

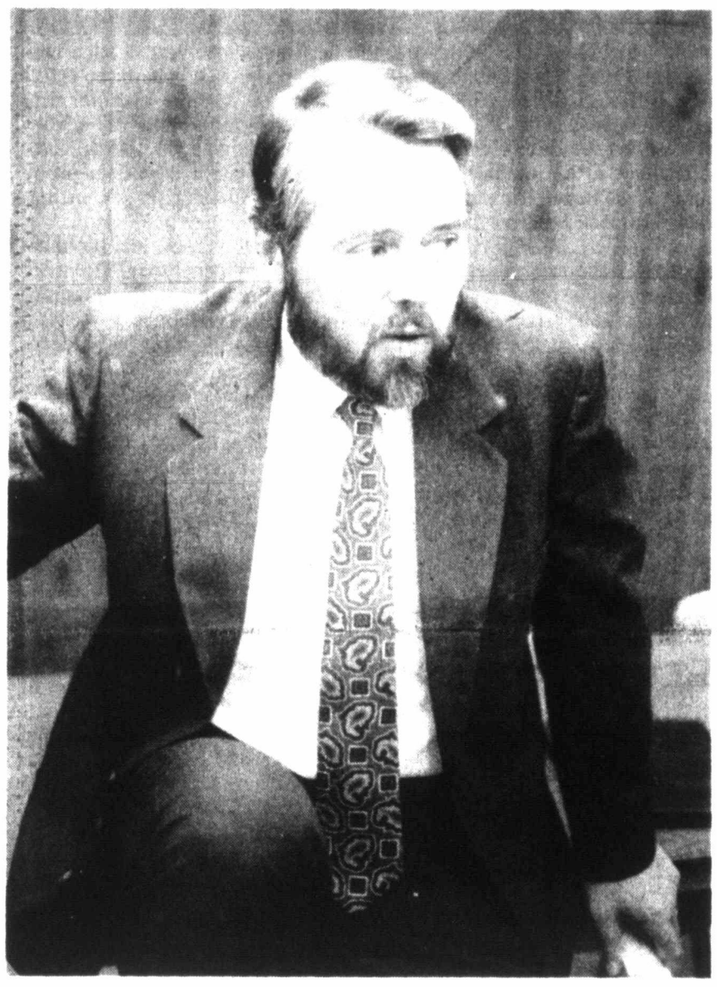

That appeared to indicate East Germany would oppose continuing emigration of its citizens to the West. West German officials in Bonn could not be reached for comment Saturday night.

More than 100,000 East Germans, disillusioned with political repression and economic stagnation, have fled to West Germany so far this year.

Of those, more than 23,000 emigrated over Hungary's western border since Sept. 10, when Budapest authorities authorized free passage to Austria of East Germans seeking a new life in the West.

Hundreds of like-minded East Germans, allowed unhindered travel into neighboring Czechoslovakia but without the necessary documents for Hungary, began crowding the West German Embassy in Prague weeks ago.

Others crossed illegally from Czechoslovakia into Hungary to be able to flee to the West from there.

Don Taylor discusses how to run a small town business that keeps dollars from going to Amarillo.

Small businesses told how to compete

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

BORGER — Small town businesses like those in Pampa and the surrounding area can compete with the malls of Amarillo if they are willing to work harder, look for unique angles and make sure their product is a good value.

That's the conclusion of Don Taylor, an official with the Texas Small Business Development Center, who was at Frank Phillips College on Friday as part of Northern Panhandle Resource Day.

The event was sponsored by Rep. Dick Waterfield and brought together 130 officials from cities, counties and chambers of commerce in the Top of Texas and representatives from several state agencies to discuss rural economic development.

'Say to yourself, "How can we get some of those bucks coming back ...?"'

"How can you stop the outflow of dollars from your community?" Taylor asked a group of Panhandle officials that included Wendell Akins, Lefors city councilman. "Remember that going to the malls (in Amarillo) is fun.

"Say to yourself, 'How can we get some of those bucks coming back into our community?' Think about what it would take to get 100,000 people to Spearman or Perryton or wherever."

An example of that kind of big thinking, Taylor said, was a small town he was familiar with in northern Missouri.

"All they had was a bunch of Amish folks and a dried up little town that was ready to blow away," Taylor told the audience. He raised his eyebrows and many of those in attendance nodded that they could relate to such a scenario.

"Two or three retailers got together and put on an antique sale," he continued. "A big one. Several dozen people came out from Kansas City and word started to spread. Now you can't hardly get through that town. All because some retailers realized that people in Kansas City like to drive 100 or so miles out of town on a weekend.

"Now that city is 100 percent occupied."

Taylor challenged city officials to organize merchants in organizations that are willing to come up with creative solutions to keeping business in town.

"Maybe your retailers need to think about being open from noon to 9 instead of 9 to 5," he suggested, adding that women do the most shopping and most women are also at work from 9 to 5. "Why be open only when these women are at work so the most they can shop your business is maybe one hour a day during their lunch hour?

"But retailers balk at the idea of being open noon to 9 because they've been doing it a certain way for the last 45 or 50 years. The world changes. Are we changing our ideas and the way we reach people?"

Taylor conceded that not all small towns would survive the current hard economic times. However, he said the only way any town will survive is by its businesses being creative and ultra-courteous.

"You need to find a unique angle," Taylor said. "If you choose to compete, you can. You can know your customers on a first name basis, give them good value and treat them well."

He emphasized that businesses in large cities are always looking for ways to improve their product or service and cannot afford to get complacent. He rebuffed the idea that small town residents owe it to businesses in those cities to shop there.

"You have to ask yourself, 'Are we giving good quality merchandise and good prices?' You have to work harder as a retailer," Taylor said. "It may mean working 70 hours a week instead of 40. That is happening to all of us. We can compete, but it takes a lot of work and looking for what makes your business or your town unique."

Waterfield said he organized the all-day event to give northern Panhandle businesses and cities the same access to sound marketing advice that larger cities have.

"There's been a very good reaction," Waterfield, R-Canadian, said. "If we'll tap these resources, we can make it. Nobody can say they didn't know about this program or that program or some opportunity."

'We can compete, but it takes a lot of hard work ...'

Also represented at the forum was former Pampan and current aide to Gov. Bill Clements, Margaret Spearman.

As a former Pampa High School teacher, Spearman said she is well aware of the challenges of rural development in the Panhandle.

"The governor applauds activities such as this to inform those working with economic development in rural Texas to know what's available," Spearman said.

Along with Taylor, officials from the Texas Department of Agriculture, Contract Procurement Center, Texas A&M and other state entities involved with bringing jobs and opportunities to Texans were present at the sessions.

Bourland leading research at Purdue's biomedical center

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles about former Pampa science fair winners and their careers and accomplishments since then. Elaine Ledbetter is a former science instructor at Pampa High School.

In the spring of 1960, Joe Bourland was a senior in Pampa High School who had won a trip to the National Science Fair in Indianapolis, where he was awarded a second place trophy.

Today, he is known as Dr. Joe D. Bourland, coordinator of biomedical engineering, Hillenbrand Biomedical Engineering Center, Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind.

He is the son of Mrs. A.R. Bourland and the late Mr. Bourland.

Following his graduation from high school, he attended Rice University, earning a BA degree in 1965 and the BSEE degree in 1966. He was a design engineer for the Acoustron Corporation in Houston for one year, and from 1968 until 1974 he was supervisor of electronic shops in the Department of Physiology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Bourland poses with the machine known as 'Joule II,' constructed this spring by his research group.

While serving in this position, Bourland was also doing graduate work there, and in 1974 he was awarded the Ph.D. in physiology.

Immediately after receiving his Ph.D., he joined his mentor, Dr. L.A. Geddes, and two other colleagues, Dr. W.A. Tacker and Dr. C.F. Babbs, to establish the Purdue Biomedical Engineering Center.

As stated in the charter of the center, its mission is "to advance the practice of medicine by the use of all the resources of engineering."

This means that the center is to conduct research that will result in improved medical practice, including human medicine, veterinary medicine and nursing. Research at the center has emphasized medical problems in cardiology, cancer therapy and surgery.

The secondary mission of the center is education, and the third is service.

Since its founding in 1974 with the four faculty members, the center has now expanded to an intimate group of eight with expertise in human medicine, veterinary medicine, physiology, electrical engineering, pharmacology and pathology. The official title of the center is now the Hillenbrand Biomedical Center in honor of William Hillenbrand, who provided seed money to establish the center. This was what made it possible for the original team to transfer from the Baylor College in Houston to Purdue.

Dr. Bourland said, "Our financial support comes almost exclusively from extramurally-raised funds. We are, in effect, a small research business within the academic environment."

He said his boss and colleague, Dr. Geddes, often reminds the team that they "have the luxury of selecting research topics of interest – and also the luxury of going broke!"

In the mid '70s, Bourland's research group developed a defibrillator to permit investigation of fundamental issues in cardiac defibrillation. The machine was affectionately dubbed "Joule" by the graduate students associated with the project.

The machine was the most powerful defibrillator in the world and enabled them to conduct research that led to the world's smallest defibrillator, which can be implanted within the human body.

The device they constructed to show the feasibility of automatic defibrillation was dubbed "erg" by one of the students. So, Dr. Bourland remarked, "We do have fun at the center along with our serious research."

Just this spring, Bourland's team constructed another machine known as "Joule II." Concerning this, he said, "It represents a milestone in our research in the interaction of magnetic fields with living tissue. It is a magnetic stimulator and recently permitted us to stimulate a heart by an externally-applied magnetic field."

To their knowledge, this was a feat that had never been accomplished previously. Because of this, the group submitted a paper describing their success to a British journal in early May. Their reason for submitting to a British journal was because the European medical community has been showing keen interest in magnetic stimulation.

The objective now is to develop an external cardiac pacemaker. According to Dr. Bourland, "The potential advantage of the magnetic field modality is that stimulation of the heart by externally-applied magnetic fields promises to be less painful than by passing current through electrodes applied to the chest."

Then he added, "Having personally experienced both stimulation modalities, I can support this thesis."

In 1975, Bourland was charged with the responsibility for the development of an automatic implantable defibrillator. That, in reality, is a "megapacemaker."

The device monitors cardiac activity continuously. When it detects the lethal arrhythmia, ventricular fibrillation, it automatically delivers a rather strong, life-saving electrical shock to the heart.

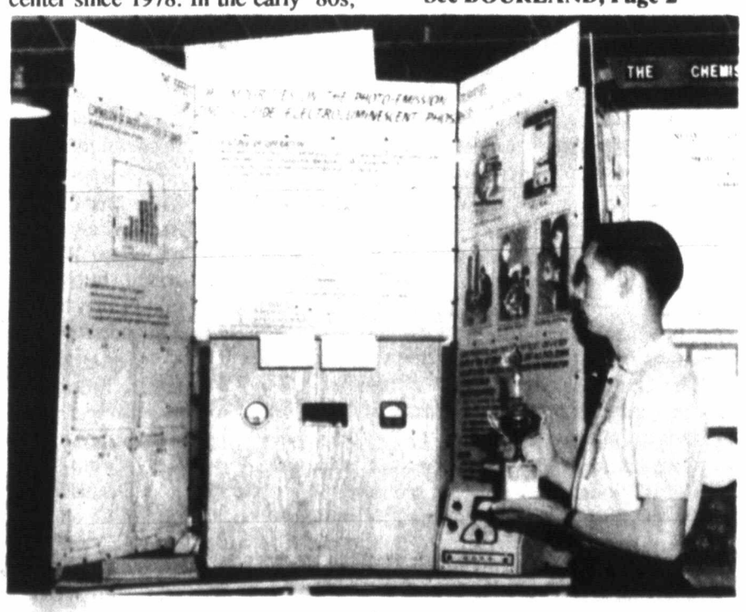

Bourland has had the responsibility of managing patents for the center since 1978. In the early '80s, they had developed an idea which they called "sequential pulse defibrillation." They were able to secure patent protection for this idea.

In 1986, they sold this patent for a sum that exceeded the cumulative income received by Purdue University for all intellectual property. That includes royalties for books published and for patents and technology that they license.

He said the intense negotiations of 1985-86 were particularly exhilarating because it is a standard policy of the university to license patent rights and not to sell them outright, as his group had proposed.

Dr. Bourland recalled, "The proposed sale of this patent was an agenda item at three successive quarterly meetings of the Purdue

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy James Walker, left, returns Michael Frank Greene to Gray County Jail from Beckham County, Okla., late Saturday on charges of violation of probation. The charges stem from the alleged kidnapping of his estranged wife and three children Thursday. Sgt. Terry Cox of the Sheriff's Department said a warrant charging Greene with kidnapping was issued Friday, but the man had not been arraigned on the charge by press time Saturday. Greene was once the prime suspect in the July slaying of Pampa businessman Pete Spurrier, but the charges were later dropped after another man was arrested in New Mexico and charged with the murder.

Bourland

Board of Trustees. We were finally permitted to sell our patent – which my group viewed as a real victory – and which, of course, was a source of great satisfaction to me personally!"

Then he continued, "Our sale of this particular patent increased the endowment of Purdue by approximately 2 percent. High stakes poker is fun when you win!"

To friends and teachers who knew Joe when he was in high school, these achievements come as no surprise, for innovative leadership and quality work have always been characteristic of him. He was active in band, including the all-regional stage band, and was drum major his senior year.

He also participated in Junior Red Cross, Key Club and Tri-Sci; was president of his class all three years; was voted runnerup for Best Citizen; made Who's Who in both science and English; and graduated as valedictorian of his class with an average of 97.32.

Bourland and his wife, Barbara, recently celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary. Barbara is a pediatric cardiologist. She grew up in the Washington, D.C., area, where she attended American University and received a BA in zoology from George Washington University. She graduated from Medical School at the University of Maryland and interned in Baltimore.

Barbara then went to Houston for her residency in pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine. That was where she and Joe met and married.

Following two years in the practice of pediatric cardiology at Texas Children's Hospital, she gave up her practice to accompany Joe when he went to Purdue to establish the Biomedical Center.

Because the population of that area is insufficient to support her sub-speciality, she founded a Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at Home Hospital in July, 1975, and has served as the medical director of that unit since then. She is also currently president of the medical staff of Home Hospital.

The Bourlands have two children. Their daughter, Stacey, is now in her sophomore year at Rice University in Houston, where she is following the science-engineering track. She graduated from a very competitive high school as salutatorian of her class and was sought by several prestigious colleges, including MIT.

Their son, Steven, is a senior in high school this year. He, like Stacey, is academically talented, having received both state and national recognition for his achievements.

When asked about what the future may hold, Dr. Bourland said, "Only time will tell. I'm not sure that 'Joule II' and the other devices we are working on will measure up to the excitement produced by 'Joule,' because some of our neat ideas now reside in the circular file at the corner of the room.

"But our discovering why, what seemed like a good idea when you first conceived it, isn't practical, is also fun. And the gratification of seeing former students make their way up the corporate or academic ladder gives me a great deal of pleasure. Having been at Purdue for 15 years, we do have some of these."

County Commission to view feasibility study for prison

Gray County commissioners are to receive the long-awaited feasibility study on a proposed county jail during their regular meeting beginning at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the county courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

An Austin firm, Maxey & Associates, specializing in jail architecture was hired by the county to conduct a feasibility study on the jail several weeks ago. Since that time, representatives of the firm have visited several proposed sites for the new jail and inspected buildings being considered for renovation as a jail.

The Commissioners' Court agenda has set 2 p.m. as the time the county officials will hear Maxey & Associates' presentation.

Commissioners will also consider joining the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission's 911 network at the meeting Monday. Pampa city commissioners recently agreed to participate in the district-wide emergency call program, but the county has so far taken no action on the matter.

Delinquent taxes will be the topic of two agenda items Monday. Commissioners plan to consider renewing the firm of Calame, Linebarger and Graham for delinquent tax collections and will look at an offer for delinquent tax property at 1010 S. Faulkner.

A request to attend the "Investigation of Violent Crimes & Coroners & Law Enforcement Role" seminar in Canyon Oct. 17 will also be considered. Justice of Peace Wayne Roberts asked for permission to attend the seminar at the Sept. 18 meeting, and was told at that time the item would be placed on the Oct. 2 agenda for consideration.

Also to be considered in the commission meeting are the following items:

- Budget transfers to cover overdrawn items;
- Submitting bid to ASCS for office space in the Gray County annex;
- Discussion of a new state law concerning regulation of on-site sewerage facilities; and
- Request to cross county roads with four pipelines.

Routine items on the agenda Monday include payment of salaries and bills and transfers as recommended by the county auditor and the county treasurer's report.

Lebanon leaders meet to end strife

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The speaker of Lebanon's splintered Parliament told the assembly Saturday that they have no choice but to find a way to end their nation's 14-year cycle of bloodshed.

Christian and Moslem lawmakers, gathered in this mountain resort for their first meeting in more than a year, are divided over the presence of Syrian troops backing Moslem forces in Lebanon and Moslem demands for greater power.

Speaker Hassan Husseini, a Shiite Moslem, told the deputies that failure to resolve their differences would mean "a total loss of hope" in the devastated country, where fighting has been halted by a fragile truce.

"We have no choice but to succeed," he told the parliamentarians.

King Fahd, in an opening address read by Foreign Minister Prince Saud al Faisal in Taif's Conference Palace, called on the feuding Christian and Moslem parliamentarians to cooperate in finding a settlement to the conflict in which more than 150,000 people have been killed since 1975.

"Now that the situation has shifted from the arena of warriors to the negotiators' table, it is high time we moved from trading artillery shells and accusations to hasten the peacemaking," the king's message said.

The Saudi monarch said Lebanese must rule their own nation.

Most of Lebanon, except an 320-square mile Christian enclave north of Beirut, is under the control of Syria, which has 40,000 troops in Lebanon. Israel occupies a "security zone" of Lebanese territory along its border.

Fahd is a member of a three-nation committee mandated by the 22-member Arab League to bring peace and reconcile Lebanon's feuding factions.

Fahd, King Hassan II of Morocco and President Chadli Bendjedid of Algeria formulated a seven-point peace plan that calls for political reforms which the Lebanese parliamentarians will debate.

The Taif meeting, the first by Lebanon's Parliament outside the country, was designed to reduce sectarian pressures on the legislators that have been a major factor in the collapse of earlier initiatives.

Lebanese deputies who arrived in Taif Friday said the meeting would last from three to 10 days.

Before the deputies left Beirut Friday, Lebanon's Moslem government leader, Moslem Salim Hoss, said the Taif meeting "could be the last chance for peace in Lebanon."

Conference sources said 63 of Lebanon's 73 surviving legislators — 33 Christians and 30 Moslems — were in Taif in Saudi Arabia's western mountains.

Three Shiite Moslem and seven Christian deputies failed to show up.

Twenty-five of the deputies in the 99-seat parliament have been killed or died of natural causes since the last general election in 1972. The fighting has prevented elections since then.

A cease-fire in Lebanon took effect a week ago, halting six months of fierce artillery battles between the Syrian Army, which backs the Moslems, and Christian forces led by Gen. Michel Aoun.

More than 900 people were killed and nearly 3,000 wounded in the fighting that included some of the most ferocious bombardments of the war. Most of the casualties were civilians.

The cease-fire, and the lifting of blockades by both sides, was the first phase of the ambitious, seven-point Arab League peace plan.

It envisages political reforms that will give Lebanon's Moslem majority equal power with the Christians, led by Maronites, who, under an unwritten agreement, have dominated the government, parliament, judiciary and army since independence from France in 1943.

The plan also proposed increasing the number of seats in Lebanon's parliament to 128, divided equally among Christians and Moslems. Since independence, the Christians have had a 6-5 edge in the House.

United Way reaches 20 percent of its goal

Pampa United Way's second check-in netted approximately $13,000 above the total for this same time last year, campaign officials announced Thursday.

Campaign totals following the second check-in meeting Thursday came to $58,267.08, almost 20 percent of the 1989 United Way goal of $310,000. At this time last year, the campaign total had reached $44,784, said Brian Vining, 1989 fund drive chairman.

Public Division, headed by Jeane Roper, led the divisions in donations this week with a total of $10,063. The division was presented with a loaf of freshly baked bread made by Gloria Norris. A second loaf of bread was presented to Commercial Division members. Chairman Dan McGrath presented the loaf to Jack Skelly, explaining, "He's one of our hardest workers. He's really making it go."

Individuals Division, chaired by Evelyn Johnson, came in second with pledges totaling $3,797. Special Gifts, led by David Fatheree, turned in $3,290 in pledges. Commercial Division reported $1,650; Major Firms, $1,500, and Professional, $1,360. A number of the pledges were matched by other firms or foundations to make the $58,000-plus total, said Katrina Bigham, United Way executive director.

Al Chapa, loaned executive for Coronado Hospital, reported that the hospital's United Way drive has already reached 57 percent of its goal, and the drive had only begun one day before. More than $6,600 had been pledged already, he said, adding that the hospital's goal was $10,000.

Vining reported that United Way loaned executives were to make presentations for the first time to employees of Texaco, Pampa Concrete, Marcum Motors and Gray County Precincts 1, 2, 3 and 4.

"I think we're having a great campaign," Vining said. "We've got to keep plugging. We need to get in and see those employees."

Jack Gindorf, vice chairman, reminded Vining of their mud wrestling contest set for the Oct. 12 check-in meeting. "I should be in shape by then," Gindorf warned. Cost to see the muddy wrestling match will be either United Way pledge cards or $1, he added.

Refreshments for the second United Way check-in were prepared and served by representatives of Pampa Meals on Wheels and Pampa Family Services, two of the 15 area service agencies funded by the Pampa United Way.

Next check-in meeting is to be at 4 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 5, in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building. Special entertainment will be provided by the Pampa Middle School sixth grade girls chorus, directed by Jennifer Scoggin.

Town still recovering from bus accident

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ALTON (AP) — A blue ballpoint pen floats on the surface of a water-filled pit. Two canvas sneakers rest among remnants of notebook paper at the stagnant pool's edge.

More than a week after a school bus careened over the unguarded lip of the caliche pit, killing 21 students, the accident is still too horrible for some to believe.

Forty feet above, visitors stop throughout the day at the intersection of Bryan Road and Farm Road 676. Some just stare, others pray. Some light candles.

Ernestina Garcia brought 20 candles, each in a paper sack that glowed at the edge of the cliff.

"We usually do this at Christmas, and I thought it would be a nice thing to do for the kids," she said one evening last week.

Her friend Rose Mary Rios was back again the next morning, exactly a week after the Sept. 21 crash, happy to see the candles had burned all night.

Neither woman had children on the bus, but both knew victims in the small South Texas community of Alton that still is suffering.

"It's going to take some time," said Alton Mayor San Juanita Zamora. "It will take time."

Activities at Mission Junior High and Mission High School, where the victims and 59 survivors attended, were returning to normal by the end of the week. The school district canceled last weekend's activities in the wake of the disaster, but this week's football schedule went off as planned, beginning with the junior high's Thursday afternoon game.

But then Friday, the community was shaken again when 15-year-old Elizabeth Flores died at Mission Hospital. She had been in a coma and on life-support systems since the accident.

But Friday night's football games went on.

"It's a terrible thing it had to happen, but at least it happened during football season," said head football coach Sonny Detmer of Mission High School. "If it had happened any other time of the year it would have been depression until football season started again."

Keeping the students busy and moving ahead with life are the best remedies, the coach said, although he expects a gloom to hover over the school all year.

"You can't tell them to forget it, because there's no way they're ever going to forget it," Detmer said. "You just tell them to go on."

Area counselors mobilized and will continue to help the students, their teachers and families and others in the grieving community, officials said.

"We've had several teachers who I would say took it harder than the kids," said John Abbenante, junior high principal.

He started the week with an emotional talk over the school's public address system, while tearful teachers and counselors embraced shaken survivors and their friends.

More and more survivors came back to school, some by bus, as the week progressed, he said, but a few found it impossible to stay all day.

Juan V. Granados, 12, who escaped through a window in the bus, has started going to school in his father's car, and didn't know if he would become a bus rider again.

"Maybe," he said.

Some of the scores of rescuers also have had trouble coping with the sight of so many young people dying. A group counseling session with the Charter Palms Hospital of McAllen helped, said Shawn Snider, an emergency medical technician with the Alamo Fire Department who cannot remember any of the dead children's faces.

A dramatic Associated Press picture transmitted around the world showed a paramedic performing CPR on a student pulled from the murky waters that Thursday morning as Snider looked on from the back of a rescue boat. Snider said the boy died.

"When I looked over that cliff and saw all that yellow (the submerged bus), it was like somebody hit me with a two-by-four, and I started shaking," said Snider, who thought he was used to seeing trauma victims. "Everybody's dealing with it. Everybody's having a hard time."

Red Cross volunteer Anna Rubio said the organization would be around for a long time helping victims' families.

"Like this parent here who has not worked for a week and will need gas money," she said in a trailer the Red Cross is using at Alton Elementary.

Daniel Rodriguez, father of 16-year-old victim Ana Delia Rodriguez, said his main concern was obtaining a headstone for his daughter's grave.

Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co., owner of the truck that went through a stop sign and knocked the bus into the pit, offered to pay funeral and medical costs for victims and survivors.

At least one lawsuit has been filed against the company, with others in the works, according to lawyers.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice suspended two prison sentences for Cordell and ordered him placed on probation Friday.

Cordell, 40, was convicted April 26 on counts of making false entries in bank records and misapplication of bank funds. He was found innocent of a more serious charge of bank fraud.

American National Bank was taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on Nov. 10, 1988. It reopened as First National Bank of Winnsboro-Tyler.

Bakker says fund-raising a 'nightmare'

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker testified that his dream of a Christian retreat was a vision from God, but the demands of fund-raising turned it into a nightmare.

"In the middle of the night I woke up," Bakker said Friday in his first day on the witness stand for his fraud trial. "It was a vision or a dream, I don't know. God gave me the concept of the Heritage Grand Partner Center and I began to sketch it."

The PTL founder said his biggest burden was raising funds to build the Heritage USA retreat and theme park near Fort Mill, S.C., but he denied overselling partnerships in the project.

Prosecutor Deborah Smith asked Bakker why he told television viewers in 1984 that 50 percent of the 25,000 partnerships at the Heritage Grand Hotel were taken when computer records showed fewer than 4,000 had been bought.

"You were creating a false sense of urgency, weren't you, Mr. Bakker?" Ms. Smith asked.

Bakker said PTL's computers typically ran six months behind, adding: "If you believe the computer records of Heritage USA, I could sell you land under water in Florida."

Bakker is accused of fleecing followers of $158 million by overselling "lifetime partnerships" at the ministry. The $1,000 partnerships entitled bearers to three nights lodging annually in PTL facilities.

Defense attorneys have claimed that the partnerships were not sales transactions and that the money paid for them were gifts to the ministry.

Earlier in the trial, the prosecution presented several PTL partners who said they sometimes were turned away when they tried to use their lodging benefits. Prosecutors contend Bakker pocketed $3.7 million of proceeds to fund his lavish lifestyle.

On Friday, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter said Bakker lacked proof to back up his calculations that there was room for 211,062 lifetime partners. The judge refused to allow a chart displaying the calculations to be presented to the jury.

Bakker faces 120 years in prison and fines of more than $5 million if found guilty on all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

The evangelist often responded to prosecutors' questions by saying he could not recall, had not been informed or that he believed what he told television viewers.

When Bakker said he could not recall getting a $50,000 Christmas bonus in 1986, Smith said, "Had your lifestyle become so extravagant that you wouldn't have noticed a $50,000 bonus?"

"I did not look at my checkbook for several years," Bakker said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

How about some drug peace plan?

Cockeyed optimists that Americans are, when the president, in his earnest way, told drug dealers from the Oval Office that "The rules have changed: If you sell drugs, you will be caught. And when you are caught, you'll will be prosecuted. And once you're convicted, you will do time," Americans wanted to believe.

But Americans are also realists. We have heard these lines before, these earnest entreaties, these determined promises. A little more law enforcement, a few more prison cells, a little more treatment and prevention education (and even a little more of all that to be paid for with a little more taxes, of course, Democrats demanded) – the "first comprehensive strategy" to fight drugs in U.S. history, Bush said.

We want to believe, but we know better.

What is it about drugs that upsets most Americans? Fred Barnes of The New Republic says that polls show Americans consider drugs the biggest problem facing the country because the news media have spent months telling them that.

There's truth in that observation, but there are also the very real problems – violence in the streets, gang activity, record homicide rates in Washington, D.C., and other cities, the wasted lives of addicts. The irony is that most of the social costs of drug use are unambiguously the result not of particular drugs, but of efforts to prohibit drugs by making them illegal.

When was the last time you heard of liquor store owners or alcohol distributors fighting over turf with machine guns, sometimes killing innocent bystanders in the process? They did that during Prohibition, when government tried to outlaw beverage alcohol, but there's no need for such measures now.

Efforts to deal with drugs by getting tough run up against a nasty Catch-22 situation. An enforcement effort that nabs some dealers or traffickers gives a competitive advantage to those who are more adept at violence, concealment and corruption of officals. Stepping up enforcement is like erecting a protective tariff barrier on behalf of the most vicious and violent people in the trade.

If stopping the flow of drugs is a fantasy, what about curbing the demand? The problem is the sheer numbers. Perhaps 50 million Americans have tried some illicit drugs in recent years, and around 25 million use some illicit drug once a month or more.

Can we put all those users in jail? It costs $20,000 per year to house one prison inmate, in cells that costs $50,000 to $75,000 to build. A $1.2 billion increase in federal prison funds – which Bush proposed – would pay for 60,000 inmates a year, or build 24,000 new cells, or a combination of the two. To house just a million people, multiply that by at least 50.

At any given time, about 40 of the 50 states are under court order to reduce overcrowding, and many local jurisdictions face similar overcrowding. Authorities may talk bravely about building more prisons, but almost every proposed site faces citizen opposition and taxpayer resistance.

The best hope is an honest, long-term educational campaign, part of Bush's program. Such a campagin might gradually reduce drug use, as similar programs have reduced – though not eradicated – tobacco use, alcohol use and drunken driving.

The first prerequisite, however, is to stop talking about Drug War and start thinking about Drug Peace. Only when we declare a truce, and decide to deal with drug users as people with a problem rather than as criminals, will education and treatment stand a chance.

It's a burden they can't afford

Walter Williams

Let's say Williams has been wrong all these years and civil rights leaders have been right all along saying America is the seat of rampant, unyielding racism. Given this "fact," what strategies are appropriate for the black leadership community?

In most black neghborhoods, insecurity is a way of life where residents, often to no avail, must take extraordinary measures to protect their persons and belongings. Those who would clean, fix up and repair their physical surroundings see their efforts go for naught because of vandalism and wanton property destruction.

These transgressions are not perpetrated by the Ku Klux Klan, Skinheads or White Citizens Council; they are perpetrated by blacks, on blacks. In fact, if blacks only had to worry about white rape, murder, assault, robbery and arson, black communities would be the safest in the country. Given the civil rights assertion of rampant, unyielding racism and a hostile America, we ask: Can we blacks afford to allow other blacks to magnify our problems?

Civil rights leaders blame black low academic achievement on underfunding of education. Let's accept this as true and ask about strategy. Can blacks afford to have school property wantonly destroyed or vandalized?

Can we afford to permit a system to survive where it is possible for a few students to make academic excellence impossible for the many? I say it's a luxury we indulge but can't afford.

Let's look at the breakup of the black family. Actually breakup is an inappropriate word; most often the black family doesn't form in the first place. The high rate of illegitimacy, in some cities exceeding 80 percent, is not what you'd expect as a viable strategy for poor minorities in a racist, hostile society.

In fact, strategies that lead to growing dependency assume just the opposite – white people are going to always act nice and, through welfare, financially be husbands and fathers to black mothers and children.

If black leaders were really serious about their stated assessment of whites in America, they would have an entirely different agenda from their present one.

First, they would be entirely intolerant of antisocial and destructive behavior among blacks. Their reasoning would be that, since blacks have the lowest income, they can least afford to have their property stolen, vandalized or destroyed. They'd figure that, since blacks have a difficult time getting into business in the first place, we can least afford to have black businessmen run out of business by equal opportunity thugs.

If black leaders truly believed that whites were unyielding, hostile racists, they wouldn't always be showing up in Washington and corporate headquarters, hat in hand, begging for money; it'd be a waste of time. They'd push independency rather than dependency.

"Hey, Williams," you say, "you've got it all wrong: All this antisocial behavior among blacks is itself a result of racism; it can't be changed until we get rid of racism."

Such a position differs little from saying that blacks shall continue to suffer at the hands of blacks until white people behave themselves. That's like a father who brutalizes his kid, because his boss is mean, and you say, "We can't stop the brutality until the boss starts acting nice."

Nonsense! The first order of business is to stop the father's brutality, then worry about his boss. Similar reasoning applies to the devastating brutality and destructive behavior in the black community.

The burdens placed on the blacks of people least able to bear it must stop if progress is to be made – these people can't afford it.

There's a country song here

Lewis Grizzard

Rummaging through some old mail the other day, I came upon a newspaper clip a reader from Dallas, Texas, had sent along.

I'm not certain how I missed it the first time, and I'm sorry I did. Stories like this don't come along every day.

I'll give you the first paragraph of the clip, and I'm certain you'll agree with my assessment.

"Bragging between two women over which of them had the bigger bosom escalated into a fight involving a hammer and a tire tool at a truck stop, police said ..."

Priceless – and there's more:

"Both women suffered cuts and bruises in the scrap that erupted early Sunday in the parking lot of Truck Stops of America in Mesquite, a suburb of Dallas.

"Witnesses told police the two women had been arguing over citizens band radio at about 2 a.m. and agreed to meet at the truck stop to compare bosoms.

"Police said one woman grabbed a tire tool and struck the other woman five times. Her victim grabbed a hammer from her truck and began defending herself, police said.

"The woman with the tire tool was arrested for investigation of aggravated assault. The other woman was treated at Mesquite Community Hospital and released."

There was no date on the clip, so I called Truck Stops of America in Mesquite, Texas, to inquire.

"It was about a year ago," said the man who answered the phone at the truck stop. "It's all people talked about around here for weeks."

I also phoned the Mesquite police department and spoke with the officer who investigated the case.

"I don't think it ever came to court," he said. "But I do remember when I filled out the papers I nearly laughed my head off."

I asked the officer if he had any way of knowing which of the women did, in fact, have the largest bosom – the one with the hammer or the one with the tire tool – but he said something about being quite busy, and hung up on me.

But I did allow my imagination to take over, and I figured it all had to happen this way:

FIRST WOMAN: "Breaker 1-9, this is Chest-a-Plenty."

SECOND WOMAN: "Chest-a-Plenty, you've got Buxom Betty. So you think you got some big 'uns?"

FIRST WOMAN: "10-4 on that, Buxom Betty. Biggest in Texas."

SECOND WOMAN: "Oh, yeah?"

FIRST WOMAN: "Yeah. Meet me at the truck stop in Mesquite and I'll make yours look like two peach seeds."

SECOND WOMAN: "You got it, Chest-a-Plenty. Buxom Betty's about to make you wish you'd been born a boy."

So there's Chest-a-Plenty and Buxom Betty subsequently fighting it out at the truck stop after a disagreement as to who indeed had the largest bosom.

Regardless, somewhere in all this there's a country music song:

"One had a tire tool/The other had a hammer/One got a bloody head/ The other got the slammer."

Call it "The Ballad of the Texas Boob Brawl." Are you listening, Hank Jr.?

Congress stumbling to assist elderly

By VINCENT CARROLL

Like a party of drunks trying to straighten up the host's furniture before heading home, Congress is stumbling every which way in an effort to tidy up the damage of last year's worst piece of legislation.

Pity our lawmakers' dilemma. On the one hand, they face elderly constituents rightly outraged by a surtax for catastrophic health insurance that is available at less cost in the private market. A veritable army of old folks demands the program's repeal.

On the other hand, lawmakers confront their own oversized egos and a political ethic demanding that they never say never mind.

Repeal such an obvious monstrosity as the Medicare surtax? Not on your life. Congress must do something, of course, to placate pesky old voters, but it will probably try to salvage as much of the program as it can.

Reaction by members of the Senate Finance Committee typifies this mind-set. According to several published reports, panel members generally agree to reduce, but not repeal, the surtax on the elderly, while raising the amount they must kick in for doctor fees and prescription drugs.

A very bad program could become a very bad, cheaper program, in other words.

Predictably, the middle- and lower-middle classes would be hardest hit by the compromise. The elderly poor don't pay the Medicare surtax to begin with, while the wealthy won't miss the money anyway. But for the middle class – a retired woman, say, earning $22,000 from investments in addition to her Social Security – the surtax is a cruel burden that raises income-tax to an outrageous level.

For most of us, the top tax rate has dropped to 15 or 28 percent, depending on earnings. Not so for the elderly. Many of them still endure top rates 10 to 65 points higher – mainly because of the Medicare surtax and the complex way in which half of Social Security benefits are taxed.

Congress either doesn't understand the inequity or doesn't care. Or perhaps Congress believes the elderly deserve to be singled out.

After all, a great deal has been written in recent years about galloping greed among America's old folks – some of it, unfortunately, true. Yes, many retirees seem to believe they earned their full Social Security benefits, when most earned only a small fraction of what they'll eventually receive.

And yes, many seniors refuse to admit that present growth in Social Security is unsustainable without crippling tax hikes early in the next century.

In short, the elderly as a whole have become an aggresssive group of haves who prefer to pose as a helpless group of have-nots.

Nevertheless, imposing punitive taxes on retirees is extremely unwise. Once younger workers realize they face extortionate taxation when they retire, they'll stop saving for the future. The National Center for Policy Analysis, an economic think tank in Dallas, already argues that thrift makes little sense.

"The premise behind IRAs, employer pensions and other tax-deferred savings is that you will be in a lower tax bracket after you retire. That premise has become a cruel hoax for many elderly retirees who face higher tax rates now than when they were young," says Aldona Robbins, a former U.S. Treasury economist who co-authored a study for the Dallas institute.

Congress should repeal the Medicare surtax. It should revamp the tax on retirement benefits and slow growth in Social Security to ensure the system's health beyond 2010.

Instead, lawmakers will probably do what they do best: Nibble at the problem's edges and smugly declare their work is done.

Parents ask others to watch for DWI's

To the editor and citizens of Pampa:

We are the parents of Candice Jameson, the 8-year-old girl that was run over and pinned under the pickup of Ignacio Saldierna on Sept. 17, only half a block from her home.

The credibility of statements have us outraged. Tell me how the credibility of two intoxicated men, who by the way were passengers in the Saldierna vehicle, could possibly be more credible than any 6, 7, 8 or any other aged child (sober, for that matter, because their minds were not fogged by liquor).

If she had darted out in front of this man like the men say, it would have been her left leg pinned under the pickup; instead, it was her right leg. There are no center stripes on dirt roads, so you can drive down the middle of the road and hit our children and there are no charges for it.

Nowhere was it even mentioned that Saldierna had a prior DWI. Now, on his second offense, there was injury to a child. Will it take a third time and possibly a dead child to do anything to this man?

We're very fortunate to have our little girl. I just hope Saldierna has had as many sleepless nights as she has. It should be he who is suffering, not our daughter.

We realize that this case will next go before the District Attorney. We appeal to you, Mr. Comer, please make our streets a safer place for everyone.

If you happen to live on one of the dirt roads, I encourage you to step out, take that license number and call the police. We are the eyes of Pampa. It's time we took a stand for our children. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!!!

Tough enforcement needed for DWI's

To the editor:

I agree with Bear Mills that it was an outrage to allow someone who has needlessly and recklessly injured a girl to be charged with a minor infraction of the law, when it was obvious the driver of the vehicle was drunk.

Being "drunk" and "not knowing what he was doing" while driving a vehicle should be no defense and the culprit should be prosecuted to the extreme "letter of the law." Too often we have witnessed the driver of a vehicle receiving only minor "chastisement" by pleading he was "drunk" and, thus, it "was not his fault."

It is time the court system works to mete out the punishment prescribed by law. As long as the courts and the citizenry do not show some backbone regarding drunk driving, innocent people will continue to be killed and injured by these irresponsible DRUNK DRIVERS.

The citizens of the community need to become more involved and determine why the drunk drivers are not prosecuted. How does it happen that people are allowed to drive when they have multiple DWI offenses?

The courts need to help get the drunk drivers off the streets and highways!

Ruben should focus more on what he did

To the editor:

It appears that Ruben Garcia is sure working on trying to become popular through the editorial side. Quite frankly, it just makes me want to puke. Here he's trying to preach to the world just to try to put up a big show for the man. I see him as nothing but a fanatic making a big fool of himself.

Last week his address gets printed because he wants people to write to him to support his version of the war on drugs. Truth is, he just wants to get a long mailing list to get who he can to feel sorry for him, and to get money sent to him. And all the single ladies' addresses he gets, once he fades out on them, he'll sell them for a pack of cigarettes each to any one, any race. It's a big game down there.

Pampa is doing well on their war on drugs by getting DEALERS like Ruben off the streets and down there where they need to be, to think about their crime, and pay their debts to society.

So, Ruben, why don't you focus your attention on where you're at and why you're down there, and keep your "CON" games down there? Besides, society put you down there to get you out of their hair for awhile, SO HOW ABOUT IT?

A Pampa Father (Against Drugs)
and a Reformed Ex-Con

P.S. Being a father of two young (innocent), lovely, beautiful teen-age daughters and two pre-teens, I don't find you to be all that popular.

Praises landscaping effort by companies

To the editor:

It is a delightful sight to drive by the intersection of East Francis Avenue and Houston Street and see how beautifully the grounds are kept by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. around their communication tower.

And have you seen the very, very attractive groundwork and covering recently completed by Southwestern Public Service Co. at the corner of Havester Avenue and Bradley Drive around their transformer bank?

Thanks to these companies, who are certainly setting a good example for all of us to continue working for a cleaner and more beautiful Pampa.

Rules have changed in Pampa oil fields

To the editor:

Hi, this is Robin Hood again. Let me condense the coffee shop scuttlebutt for you. The consensus is that whoever Robin Hood is, he must be tired of being in the oil field around here.

Well ... He is certainly tired of some aspects of it.

Since we started in the vein of Sherwood Forest, let me introduce the rest of the cast. It is the Black Prince John who directs the activities of the wicked Sheriff of Nottingham and his other enforcers. If you recall the legend, hunting of deer on the king's land was forbidden except for the privileged nobles. Any of the commoners who were caught in this act were sentenced to the stocks and public ridicule. No one dared raise their voice for fear that the sheriff's goons would descend upon them with full might. Even looking too prosperous was flirting with peril. If a villager dared cross the sheriff's men and he could not be found to have broken a rule, why, a new rule was decreed to put the hapless fellow in his proper place.

But, what if it had not always been against the rules to hunt on the land? What if the sheriff's men had once allowed the harvesting of the venison and even invited the hungry folk to use their limited supply of arrows to bring down the game? Would fairness allow the sheriff's men to lock the unlucky archers in and take away their supplies? Not in fairy tale land, but that is what is happening here, today, in Pampa, Texas.

There's prejudice existing in Pampa

To the editor:

I am a citizen of Gray County. I've lived in this area over five years, and for that length of time I have tried intensely to find a job in this area. I have applied at all of the major corporations in this area and have not as yet had an interview, let along be employed.

No reason is ever given; therefore, I know I've been ignored. Minorities are ignored in corporate fields – educated or not, our employment agency gives out false information as to who has hired or is hiring. This agency represents Hoechst Celanese Co., Cabot Corp., Southwestern Public Service and many others. I'm sure this says, "Sure, you can buy my products constantly, but I'll never give you the opportunity to produce them. No matter what the equal opportunity law says."

Pampa is a small town on the map, but there is a lot of oppression and prejudice here. There are no blacks working in any bank even if qualified, yet black people deposit their money in them. Several grocery stores in town do not hire blacks, but black people shop there. Whether people care to know it or not, we do exist. Many of us have been right at the door of an enriched future only to be turned away by racism in high places. Nevertheless, I plan on taking higher steps if needed to see that we are treated fairly, and not judged by the color of our skin.

Time to watch out for the pumpkins

To the editor:

It's that time of year again.

It's autumn; mums blooming everywhere. Beautiful fall days – nearly pumpkin dodging time.

It is a real shame. Hundreds of people put hours of time, money and talent into making fall arrangements, scarecrows and jack-o-lanterns just to have them splattered on the street in front of their homes.

It may seem like something fun to do after dark, but if that is all our young people have to do, we have a serious problem. Parents should make their kids aware that this prank is against the law. Maybe it will take catching a few and pressing charges to get the point across.

Tired of the destruction,

Thankful for care he had in hospital

To the editor:

I would like to thank everyone for the care and concern shown me during my hospital stay.

I want to especially thank Dr. Bhatia, the emergency room personnel and the ICU nurses. The calls and visits from Calvary Baptist Church and others meant a lot to me and my family.

Teachers should be friends, too

To the editor:

Teachers of the class of 1989-1990:

This year, why not be different? Why not become every student's friend, then begin to teach?

Maybe the students would enjoy the class more if they knew the teacher was a friend and not just this person with all the authority to teach them and to convey that they must do as commanded.

Why not just teach and not command as much and maybe the students will learn more and enjoy the class more. EVERYONE MAY BENEFIT!

I know there are some teachers that are really great here and just good people and teachers. But there are a few who are always a butt in life. Teachers, don't be buttheads, be a friend!

He thinks cable TV can offer more here

To the editor:

I'm certain that I am not the only Pampan that feels the way I do about the Pampa cable TV service. For a city as big as Pampa is, it's lousy.

Here in the West Texas region, there are eighteen or so basic cable networks available. Pampa's cable service offers only five. Three out of these five most people don't even watch.

When I last hooked up on cable, I asked why they didn't have certain networks and was told that the service was going to update it soon. This has been over a year ago.

They used to have the Dallas/Fort Worth station and a local news, time, temperature and announcements/radio program. This too has been dropped. Seems to me that they're degrading more so than trying to upgrade their service.

What gives me the hives is having to pay the same amount here for poorest service what others pay in other cities getting three times more better service.

I wonder if Pampa cable were to be boycotted, if they'd try to get updated and give Pampans their money's worth?

Myself, I don't care to pay the ten dollars a month just to be able to receive two extra programs worth watching. My RABBIT EARS are doing just fine.

Salinas to visit Washington to improve Mexico, U.S. relations

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who has brought radical economic and political change to Mexico, begins his first official visit to Washington on Sunday with hopes for bringing "maturity" to a historically delicate relationship.

"Mexican nationalism no longer has to feed on anti-U.S. feelings," said an official close to the president. "Anti-Americanism is no longer a valid issue in the Mexican political debate."

Salinas and his wife will be guests of President and Mrs. Bush at Camp David before official visits to Washington and New York. He will receive an honorary degree from Brown University before returning to Mexico on Oct. 6.

"There is a relation of mutual respect that allows cordiality," Salinas said Thursday night about what is often perceived here as a personal friendship unmatched in the historical relationship between U.S. and Mexican presidents.

"Bush has a very important characteristic that appeals to Salinas. He is not an ideologue," said an official close to the Mexican president. "Bush has gone out of his way to show special consideration for Salinas."

Mexicans see the invitation to Camp David as a special honor; it will be only the third time a Mexican president has been there.

Ten months into his term, Salinas has become the symbol of a new image for Mexico: a country regaining self confidence after nearly eight years of economic crisis, a country eager to resume growth and assume an international role in commerce and foreign affairs.

The Salinas and Bush administrations worked closely last July to renegotiate a large part of Mexico's $107 billion foreign debt; the deal was closed after U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady lobbied commercial bankers in his office.

The Mexicans are hoping for a respite through debt and interest reductions that will make more money available for Salinas' development projects. Salinas also hopes to get improved trade agreements with the United States and to encourage foreign investment.

Salinas has kicked the stagnant Mexican economy in the tail, reducing government controls, selling government-owned companies, opening new fields to domestic and international investors and forcing inefficient Mexican manufacturers to compete with lower-cost foreign producers.

Salinas has been helped here and abroad by his dramatic blows against corruption, including the jailing of previously untouchable labor bosses, and by ordering the arrest of several top drug traffickers.

U.S. officials are pleased by Salinas' battle against drug trafficking, even though many agree with Mexican officials who maintain the real problem is U.S. demand.

Mexico has seized 22 metric tons of cocaine this year, "about one third of the U.S. consumption," Salinas said at a news conference Thursday, "and that means a lot of drugs are getting through."

In foreign affairs, Mexico has departed from the steadily anti-American policy of previous administrations, a policy that appealed to Mexican chauvinists who remember that the United States took over half of Mexico in the wake of the Mexican War in 1845.

The Mexican government "no longer feels inhibited from agreeing with the United States in some foreign policy matters," said a Salinas aide.

Salinas is betting that his campaign to modernize Mexico and collaboration against drugs will help him gain trade concessions he considers important to the Mexican economy.

"We want trade reciprocity," Salinas said, referring to the opening of Mexican markets to U.S. products from refrigerators to compact discs.

Salinas expects to come back with bilateral agreements on specific products such as textiles and steel, although U.S. officials have said they're not sure those agreements will be ready for signature.

Mexico is seeking more foreign investment in an effort to get its economy back on track, and Salinas will meet with investors and top industrial managers during his trip.

He has invited foreign and domestic investors to participate in companies previously run by the government, such as the telephone system, although many investors are still uneasy about Mexico's history of midstream course changes.

Salinas claimed his economic policies have encouraged the return of more than $2.5 billion held by Mexicans abroad and said his government has approved foreign investment projects worth $2 billion in new investments since March.

He said the economy is growing this year at a rate of 2.5 per cent — far better than the 1 percent projected — while inflation is expected to be no higher then 30 per cent, a drop from 51.7 percent last year.

Politically, Salinas is much stronger than he was at the beginning of his term, according to opinion polls in the capital, where Salinas' party lost by a wide margin.

Salinas, who took office last Dec. 1 after an election marred by charges of widespread fraud, still faces domestic pressure for electoral reform.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters - invaluable in many ways

Big Brothers/Big Sisters - a chance for single parent children to find a special friend, someone they can look up to.

Big Brothers was found in 1903 in Cincinnati, Ohio on the principle that regular personal contact between one man and one boy could help prevent juvenile delinquency and provide a better life for a fatherless boy.

Recently, Big Sisters was developed through a grant by the Lilly Endowment under the auspices of Big Brothers of America. The two programs were joined in 1977 to form Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America.

Now more than 480 agencies are located throughout the United States, including Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Pampa, a non-profit agency which relies on funding from the Pampa United Way.

Opened in November 1986, Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Pampa recruits, screens and guides adult volunteers from the community in being a friend to a single-parent child.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Pampa is directed by a 15-member board of directors comprised of local civic and business leaders.

Executive Director Charles Buzzard interviews prospective volunteers. Final selection is made after verification of references and approval by a screening committee.

The child and parent or guardian are interviewed to determine the child's need for service, the problem areas resulting from the lack of an adult relationship or missing parent, and the family's ability to make good use of the service. Applicants unsuited for Big Brothers/Big Sisters are referred to appropriate agencies.

Youngsters who have been deprived of the companionship and guidance of a parent make up the Little Brothers and Sisters. They may have lost a parent due to many reasons including physical or mental incapabilities, death, divorce, desertion or incarceration.

Experience has shown the program is most effective for children ages six through 16. There are an estimated 1,500 or more single-parent children in the Pampa area within that age group.

Volunteers are a group of well-adjusted adults of good character who are willing to voluntarily invest a few hours a week with a child. Sufficient time is set aside from family and business to permit regular contacts with the Little Brother or Sister.

Volunteers guide and direct, provide companionship and understanding, teach good work habits and sportsmanlike play and recreation habits. They're to be available for and willing to receive confidences. At the same time, volunteers realize that the children develop the relationship at their own pace.

Volunteers see the children about one a week, normally for a three to four hour period. But most importantly, the volunteers convey a sincere interest in their Little Sister or Brother.

Each Little Brother or Sister is matched with the "right" volunteer based on race, religion, personality, location and similar interests.

Activities can be anything both the volunteer and the child are interested in. This may be photography, tennis, woodshop, fishing, cooking or in the case of a local match - antique cars.

Staff members supervise this relationship on a regular basis while the friendship is forming and through the life of the match. Relationships continue as long as needed. Many Big Brothers/Big Sisters friendships last a lifetime. But agency supervision ends when the child reaches age 16.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters deals with each child as an individual and not as part of a group. It is the only social work agency that usesvolunteers so completely as a member of a help team.

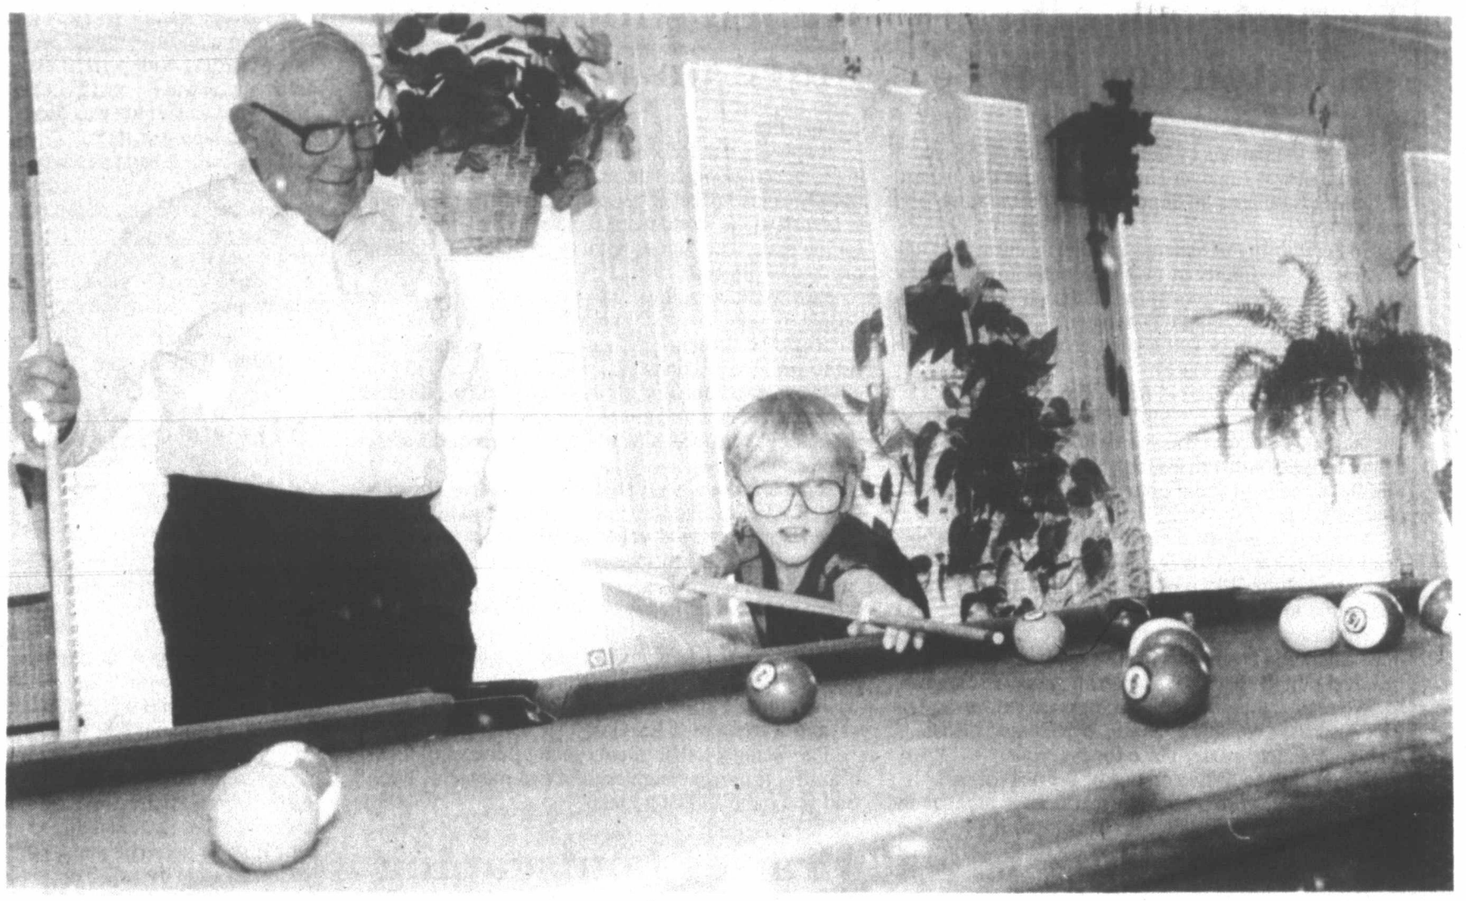

Through its unique "one adult to one child" method, Big Brothers/Big Sisters compliments without duplicating the work of other agencies.

In addition to providing an invaluable service, donations to Big Brothers/Big Sisters have proven to be cost effective for taxpayers.

Holding a child in a juvenile detention center costs taxpayers approximately $40 a day. Youth Authority institutions cost taxpayers an average of $15,000 a year per child.

Compare these figures with the $400 a year it costs for Big Brothers/Big Sisters to adequately supervise a child, helping the child remain in the home. The savings in dollars is obvious. The savings in human values cannot be measured.

Of young people referred to Big Brothers/Big Sisters by the court, fewer than seven percent ever make a repeat offense. Compare this with the fact that the repeat average of juvenile delinquency cases is as high as 43 percent in some cities.

Big Brother Gene Gates looks on as Little Brother Brock Lowrance sets his sights on a pool ball.

Trade school firm suspended for faulty refunds

HOUSTON (AP) — A firm that operates several trade schools in Texas has been suspended from the state's guaranteed student loan program after a review uncovered faulty loan refund practices, according to published reports.

Officials of the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp. said Grand Prairie-based Texas Education Corp. has been suspended, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

The company operates 12 trade schools in Houston, Dallas, Irving, Farmers Branch and in Texarkana, Ark.

During the emergency 30-day suspension, no loan applications will be processed for students at schools run by Texas Education Corp., the newspaper said.

Texas Education Corp. officials in Houston declined to speculate about the future of the schools.

"I have no knowledge of it (the suspension)," said Marilyn Doerter, acting director of a Houston school.

The corporation's president in Grand Prairie could not be reached by the Chronicle, the newspaper said.

Cathy Flautt, a spokesman for the state's student loan regulatory body, said the Texas Education Corp. may request a hearing to show why it should be allowed to rejoin the loan program.

A recent review of the corporation's loan program "found school refund checks that weren't being made in a timely manner," she said.

Flautt said she does not know how many are enrolled in the corporation's schools, but that the state organization has guaranteed $36.1 million in loans. The schools' default rate on student loans is 18.3 percent, she said.

Jurors convict Zsa Zsa of slapping California police officer

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor, convicted of battery for slapping a police officer and two other misdemeanor charges, said her fame and outspoken self-defense led to the verdict — which she called "ridiculous."

"I know it's Zsa Zsa Gabor — the diamonds. She loves to talk up, she's not a milquetoast," said the actress, whose courtroom outbursts and often outrageous out-of-court commentary on such topics as police brutality and lesbianism had attracted news media from around the world.

The jury returned guilty verdicts Friday against Miss Gabor on charges she slapped a motorcycle officer during a traffic stop and was driving without a valid driver's license and with an open container of alcohol in her car.

The Hungarian-born star of such movies as Queen of Outer Space and Picture Mommy Dead was acquitted on a fourth count of disobeying Beverly Hills police Officer Paul Kramer as she drove away while he was still checking her motor vehicle record on June 14.

"I can't believe in a country as great as ours that a 6-foot-4 policeman can beat up a lady of 5-foot-4, uses dirty language like you were a streetwalker. ... I think Russia can't be worse than this, or Communist Hungary either. I think it's ridiculous."

But juror Kevin Goodman, a 29-year-old Los Angeles attorney, said, "We felt a lot of weight as jurors in coming to the right decision. We weren't in a deal-striking mood. There was no compromise."

Municipal Court Judge Charles Rubin, who tried to limit publicity by imposing what Gabor called a "gagging order," commended the jury for its work and hailed the trial as a model of American justice.

The trial was scheduled for one week, but took three.

Gabor, who claims to be 66 years old, faces up to 18 months and five days in jail and a fine of $3,500. Sentencing was set for Oct. 17.

Rubin also fined Gabor $500 for violating his gag order by telling reporters that Kramer's fellow officer, Scott Thompson, had lied on the witness stand while testifying for the prosecution.

Thompson was called to buttress Kramer's account of the incident, which began after he pulled Gabor over for expired registration tags on her white Rolls-Royce Corniche. As he checked for other violations, she drove off.

Gabor admitted she slapped the officer after he stopped her a second time. She said she reacted in self-defense when he pulled her from her car, but he said the attack was unprovoked.

The actress dismissed the possibility Friday that she would be incarcerated.

Prosecutor Eldon Fox also said he would not recommend the actress be jailed. He said he would ask that Gabor be ordered to pay Los Angeles County for the cost of her trial, estimated at $30,000.

"I want the $30,000 restitution to the court for this media circus," he said.

The star often arrived for the trial in the $215,000 Rolls that had caused her so much trouble in the first place. On the first day, she brought her hairdresser with her.

At one point she told throngs of reporters her mother feared she might be sent to jail, adding, "Besides, they are all lesbians in jail. And I'm so scared of lesbians. Can you imagine being in jail with all those women?"

She later apologized for the remark.

Investors happy, but won't press luck

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Three-quarters of the way through 1989, many stock-market investors are feeling prosperous and happy — but reluctant to press their luck.

If the market can hang on over the next three months to the gains it has racked up so far, it will chalk up the eighth consecutive yearly gain for the Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index, the yardstick most Wall Street professionals use to measure their performance.

That's a long winning streak by any standard. And veteran stock traders have long since schooled themselves that no rally lasts forever.

Yet stirrings already are being heard in the financial world of optimistic talk about the outlook for 1990 and perhaps beyond.

After rising with only a few brief interruptions through the first eight months of the year, hitting a record high on Sept. 1, stocks have since backtracked a bit.

There were a few unsettling days in the market for "junk bond" takeover debt after it became evident that Campeau Corp. of Toronto was having trouble digesting the retailing empire it had amassed in the United States.

At the same time, analysts said, money managers at investing institutions were toting up the gains they had achieved since New Year's and looking for ways to protect those profits from any reversal in the market's course.

"It appears that many, many money managers have decided not to play for fear of messing up a great year," observed Jay Donnaruma, an analyst at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

"During this recent sideways movement volume has contracted considerably," noted William LeFevre, strategist at Advest Inc. "Much of current volume is program-related, usually done by and for the brokerage houses themselves. So one might conclude the public, institutional and individual, is just sitting there on the sidelines.

"What both the stock and bond markets await is some sort of trigger device to get things off dead center. That trigger device could be a resumption of interest rate cuts."

If interest rates are indeed headed lower, they ran into an obstacle this past week in the form of downward pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange.

But the stock market managed to post some modest gains. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed Friday at 2,692.82, up 11.21 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.24 to 193.97; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 5.21 to 473.28, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 7.38 at 388.76.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 151.48 million shares a day, against 139.09 million the week before.

Sarpalius supports Section 89 repeal

WASHINGTON — Small businesses throughout the 13th Congressional District scored a major victory last week, according to Rep. Bill Sarpalius, when he and 397 other congressman voted Wednesday to repeal Section 89 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Section 89 was originally intended to give employees of small companies the same opportunities for health care benefits as employees of larger companies.

But, Sarpalius said, "by the time the IRS got through promulgating regulations to enforce Section 89, it was likely Section 89 was going to cost workers health benefits."

He said some employers were even having to hire additional accounting personnel to handle Section 89 paperwork.

"This is one of the most important legislative victories for small business this year," Sarpalius said of the congressional repeal. "Section 89 has been strangling businesses throughout the 13th District with its cumbersome regulations and paperwork.

"One of my top priorities when I came to Washington was to see Section 89 repealed, and I am pleased to see repeal one step closer to reality."

"The result is that many employers were having to give serious consideration to dropping their health benefits entirely," Sarpalius said of Section 89's consequences.

"Most of us in the House agreed it would be best to repeal Section 89 to protect existing health care benefits and to remove this unnecessary burden on businesses in the 13th District."

Sarpalius said Section 89 repeal now goes to the Senate as part of the budget reconciliation legislation for fiscal year 1990. He added that prospects for Senate approval of the appeal are good.

"My sense is that the majority of our senators understand the need for Section 89 repeal and that repeal will soon be a reality," Sarpalius said.

Man's arrest uncovers credit card fraud

EDINBURG (AP) — With the arrest of a man nicknamed the "credit doctor," local and federal investigators say they uncovered one of the biggest credit card fraud schemes by one person in Texas history.

When the U.S. Secret Service arrested Juan Andres Guerra, 25, last week, they found in his Edinburg home about $200,000 in merchandise they say he bought illegally with 100 credit cards, the Edinburg Daily Review reported.

Another $100,000 in alleged illegal purchases was unaccounted for, the newspaper said.

Investigators also found a cabinet full of information about credit card companies and credit card holders in Guerra's home. They said he had computerized the scheme.

The confiscated items included fax machines, televisions, video cameras and recorders, phones, typewriters, stereos, computer printers and hundreds of video tapes.

The Secret Service charged Guerra with at least six counts of credit card fraud. Each count is punishable by 10 years in prison and fines. Guerra is being held without bond.

"It's the biggest credit card fraud case by a single person from south of Dallas that we've ever handled," said Secret Service agent Peter Rico.

Guerra's arrest followed a three-month investigation.

Jays overcome O's to win title

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays won the American League East, overcoming their own history of disapointment and the Orioles by stinging Baltimore 4-3 Saturday with a three-run rally in the eighth inning.

The Blue Jays ended their September duel with the Orioles, winning for the second straight day with an eighth-inning comeback. This time, Mookie Wilson and Fred McGriff tied the score with with run-scoring singles before George Bell hit a sacrifice fly.

Toronto won its second division championship in five seasons and will open the playoffs Tuesday night in Oakland. The Blue Jays went 5-7 against the Athletics this season.

The Orioles' hopes of becoming the first team to go from worst-to-first ended in the din of 49,553 screaming fans at the SkyDome.

Emergency starter Dave Johnson took a two-hitter and 3-1 lead into the eighth, but left after a leadoff walk to Nelson Liriano. Kevin Hickey walked Manny Lee and Mark Williamson, now 10-5, relieved. Lloyd Moseby sacrificed and then the Blue Jays' bats took over.

Frank Wills, 3-1, pitched four scoreless innings and Tom Henke got his 20th save with a perfect ninth.

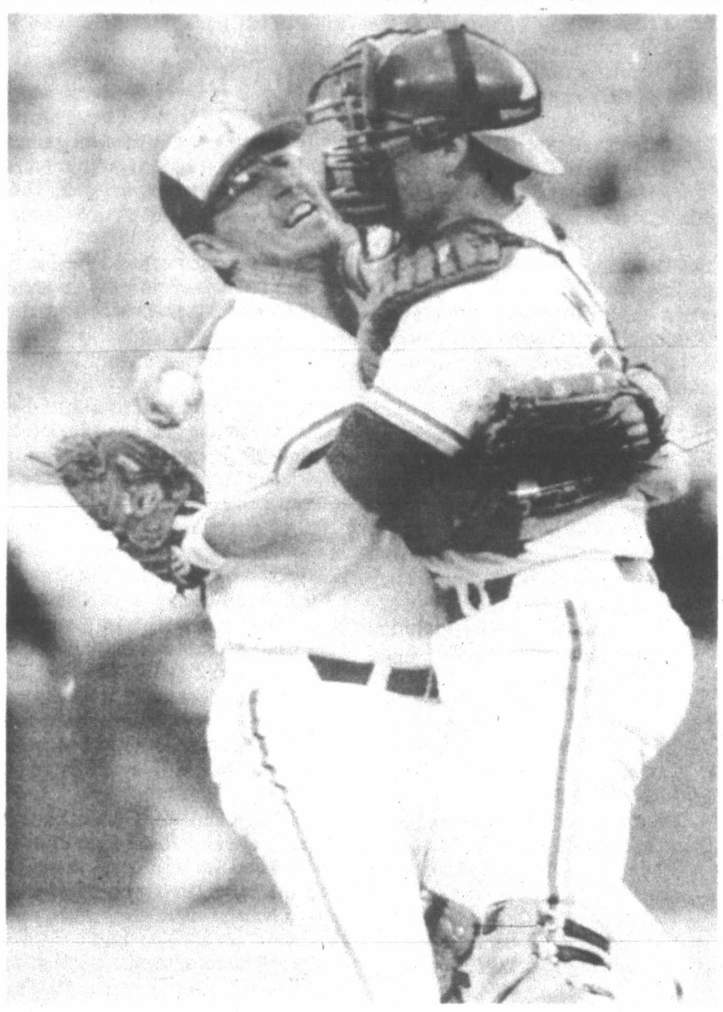

Two umpires' decisions helped Baltimore score twice in the second inning for a 2-1 lead and the Orioles got another run in the fourth on Phil Bradley's infield single. Manager Frank Robinson helped, too, causing a delay that might have thrown off starter Jimmy Key's rhythm and then successfully arguing a call.

That was enough for Johnson, who found out in the morning that he would pitch Baltimore's biggest game of the season after Pete Harnisch hurt himself while walking back to the team hotel Friday night.

Johnson started shakily with a leadoff walk to Moseby. Bell's two-out single gave him 14 RBIs in 12 games against Baltimore this season and got the sellout crowd screaming.

But after that, it was Johnson who pitched like a veteran while Key seemed like a rattled rookie. Johnson allowed only Kelly Gruber's one-out double and another walk before leaving after a four-pitch walk to Liriano that started the eighth.

With a 2-1 count on Moseby, Williamson relieved Hickey and Rob Ducey ran for Lee. After Moseby's sacrifice, Wilson and McGriff followed with singles to tie the score and Bell won it with a sacrifice fly to right field.

Estacado outruns Harvesters, 32-10

LUBBOCK — The fleet feet of Lubbock's Patrick Williams and Robert J. Johnson proved too much for the Harvesters as Estacado posted a 32-10 victory over Pampa Saturday afternoon.

Williams, a junior fullback, scored two touchdowns on runs of 80 and 2 yards to lead the Matadors to victory in District 1-4A football action at Lowrey Field. The 165-pounder logged 155 yards on nine carries, an average of 17.2 yards per take, to pace all rushers.

Teammate Johnson, also a junior, added one touchdown on the day's longest play from scrimmage, a 90-yard run. Between them, Williams and Johnson accounted for 292 of Estacado's net 365 yards rushing.

Pampa controlled the game for the first quarter, allowing the Matadors a total of six plays in the initial 12 minutes. The Harvesters got a big break early when Estacado fumbled on the second play of the game, but they had to settle for a 28-yard Shannon Cook field goal on fourth down at the 10.

The Mats lost no time once the second period began. With 11:22 to go in the half, Johnson broke free up the middle for a 90-yard jaunt that put Estacado in the lead for good.

"That's one of the things you really try to safeguard against," said Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier, whose Harvesters dropped to 1-1 in district, 2-2 overall. "Basically, we played a very solid football team, and except for a couple of plays, I thought we played well.

"But that's to Estacado's credit. Big plays are part of the game, too."

Five minutes later, Lubbock took over at the Pampa 33 after a short punt and an 11-yard return. The Mats marched to the Pampa one-yard line, where junior quarterback Calvin Thomas plunged across the goal line for the go-ahead touchdown.

The Harvesters seemed to experience a rebirth during intermission. They opened the second half with a 10-play, 75-yard march culminating in quarterback James Bybee's 20-yard strike to Wayne Cavanaugh. Cook's kick brought Pampa within four, 14-10.

On the day, Bybee connected on 14-of-33 attempts for 147 yards, 62 yards worth to wingback Wayne Cavanaugh. In contrast, Estacado gained only 24 net yards through the air — but the Matadors dominated on the ground to finish with 389 yards total offense.

Pampa held its own in the rushing department behind fullback Heath Parker, who paced the Harvesters with 25 attempts and 106 yards. Tailback Quincy Williams added 61 yards on 14 totes.

"Generally speaking, I think we did some very favorable things, especially on offense," Cavalier said. "We had an excellent ground game. We dropped some passes, but we caught quite a few, too."

Just as quickly as Pampa got back in the game, Estacado turned it around again. On the first play following the Harvesters' touchdown, Williams bolted 80 yards down the field to put Lubbock up by ten, 20-10.

Pampa made it all the way to the Matador 22 on its next possession before Bybee was dropped for a loss on fourth down. Five plays later, Williams struck again on a 2-yard TD dash.

A Harvester fumble gave Lubbock its next scoring opportunity early in the fouth quarter. Estacado took over on the Pampa 30, and Robert M. Johnson covered all 30 yards on one play to make it 32-10.

The win leaves Estacado at 2-0 in district, tied with Randall for first place. Overall, the Matadors are 3-1.

McLean stings Harrold Hornets, 48-6

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

McLEAN —Seventh-ranked McLean may have been favored going into Friday night's game against Harrold, but even Tigers' coach Jerry Miller didn't expect such a one-sided outcome.

"I was a little surprised. I figured there would be about a two-touchdown difference," said Miller after his Tigers posted an impressive 48-6 homecoming win. "Harrold is down this year, but traditionally they're a tough bunch."

The Tigers demonstrated brilliance, both offensively and defensively, while upping their record to 4-0.

Harrold dropped to 1-3.

McLean wasted little time in putting points on the board. On its first possession of the night, McLean used just five plays to score with Dennis Hill breaking tackles on a 34-yard TD run.

The Tigers' defense accounted for the next score when Donald Harris picked off a Hornets' pass and scampered 19 yards down the sideline. Tuffy Sanders' PAT gave McLean a 16-0 first-quarter lead.

Harrold launched its only scoring drive early in the second quarter. Michael Hopkins hooked up with Les McNeal on a 15-yard scoring pass at the end of a 10-play, 45-yard march.

"We had a little letdown — a mental letdown I guess you could call it — in the second quarter, but it didn't last long," Miller said.

Miller was right. With 1:50 left in the half, the Tigers struck again as Sanders capped off a 10-play, 50-yard drive with a one-yard TD plunge.

McLean, which rolled up 352 yards total offense, finished off the third quarter with 14 points.

Miller praised his defensive squad, which held Harrold to 185 yards, but added that it was a total team effort that produced the win.

"We had quite a few penalties (75 yards worth), but when you play aggressive, you're going to get penalized. It was outstanding play by everybody. It's like I've been saying all along, it's not one or two people, it's everybody playing together that gets a victory," Miller emphasized.

Harrold's offense was slowed when star tailback Scott Lambert left the game with a knee injury in the second quarter. Lambert scored all the Hornets' TDs in a 22-0 win over McLean last season.

"That had to hurt them when he went out. He's probably their best ballcarrier," Miller said.

Tres Hess was McLean's top rusher with 114 yards on 15 tries. His only TD, a 26-yard run midway through the third quarter, gave McLean a commanding 30-6 bulge.

Hill added 96 yards on seven carries to go with his two tallies and was one the leaders of McLean's hard-lick defense, which held Harrold to just one first down the second half.

Sanders also made a big contribution on both sides of the ball. He booted a 26-yard field goal and four extra points, besides his one-yard scoring run, and had a 34-yard TD scamper nullified due to a clipping penalty. Sanders stopped a Harrold scoring opportunity in the second quarter, recovering a Hopkins fumble in McLean's end zone after the Hornets had driven for a first down on the Tiger four. Bo Green also recovered a fumble for the Tigers.

Harrold did have some passing success, gaining 101 yards through the air. Hopkins completed four of five attempts for 63 yards while McNeal hit four passes for 81 yards. Hopkins was also the Hornets' top rusher with 13 carries for 31 yards.

McLean hosts Valley at 7:30 next Friday night.

Irish still unbeaten

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Anthony Johnson rushed for two touchdowns and Tony Rice passed for a career-high 270 yards, leading top-ranked Notre Dame to a 40-7 victory over Purdue on Saturday.

The Irish (4-0) met little resistance in building a 34-0 halftime lead behind runs of 6 and 2 yards by Johnson, a senior fullback. Rice's running and passing carried the Irish to scores on four of the five first-half possessions he directed. The other ended on a fumble.

Purdue had eight turnovers in dropping to 1-2. Notre Dame rolled up 530 yards total offense to just 219 for the Boilermakers.

Rice, a senior, threw for 12 completions in 15 attempts and carried 12 times for 67 yards, including a 4-yard run around left end for a first-quarter touchdown.

Baylor halts Texas Tech's win streak

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

WACO (AP) — Baylor wanted retribution for a 1988 humiliation by the Texas Tech Red Raiders. They got it on Saturday with junior quarterback Brad Goebel's career performance.

Goebel winged touchdown passes of 75 and 65 yards and totaled 347 yards passing as Baylor got revenge for a 36-6 whipping by Tech last year with a 29-15 victory.

"Five hundred and twenty-four yards was a surprise against that defense," Teaff said. "Brad did a great job. He was very poised and stayed in the pocket and made some very accurate throws. We came into the game wanting to test them deep."

Teaff had said the game was for the league "championship" and didn't back away from it.

"This game was for the championship," he reiterated. "If you lose a game in this league this early you are backed up to the wall all year."

"We thought coming into the game that we could throw on Tech," Goebel said. "Everything clicked for us in the passing game. My receivers were great. This makes up for what Tech did to us last year."

Tech coach Spike Dykes said the Red Raiders were "manhandled" by Baylor, which totaled 524 yards offense.

"Baylor played a physical football game and crammed it down our throat and then Goebel passed well," he said. "We had a our chances but couldn't take advantage of them."

Baylor intercepted three passes and recovered two fumbles. The Bears held the Raiders' ace running back James Gray to 78 yards on 15 carries in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

"You can't shoot yourself in the foot and beat a good football team," Dykes said. "We lost the ball too many times."

Baylor improved its overall record to 2-2 as it gained revenge for a 36-6 whipping by the Red Raiders last year. Tech is now 3-1.

Goebel's passing and the slashing runs of Eldwin Raphel, who had 105 yards rushing, put the Bears over 500 yards in offense.

Baylor drove 94 yards in 15 plays for a first period touchdown after linebacker James Francis recovered Anthony Lynn's fumble at the Bears' six-yard line.

The fumble happened on the first play after Tech's David McFarland returned an intercepted pass 38 yards.

Raphel scored on a 12-yard run to give the Bears a 7-0 lead. He had 52 yards on the drive as the Bears ran from a double tight end formation for the first time this season.

Tech came right back with a 55-yard Jamie Gill to Rodney Blackshear pass setting up a six-yard scoring run by James Gray.

Goebel struck quickly, hitting Greg Anderson with a 75-yard touchdown pass early in the second period.

Then Jeff Ireland made field goals of 24, 27, and 21 yards to give the Bears a 23-7 halftime lead before 37,785 fans.

The first field goal came when Yerritt Long intercepted a Gill pass at the Tech 10.

The second climaxed a 70 yards drive in which an interference penalty called in the end zone against Sammy Walker positioned Ireland for the field goal.

A 38-yard Goebel to David Frost pass setup the Bears for Ireland's third field goal.

Goebel's 65-yard scoring pass to Steve Stutsman put the game away for Baylor in the third period although Jason Rattan scored on a one-yard run for the Red Raiders.

Parcells has been there too, Jimmy

IRVING (AP) — Bill Parcells understands the hell a rookie coach in the NFL encounters. He can sympathize with Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson.

"Every coach in this division (NFC East) right now has required a period of adjustment," said Parcells. "Joe Gibbs, Buddy Ryan, and Gene Stallings and myself, we've all been there. It's just something you have to survive.

"It takes time to get your philosophy in place. If he has the time he will probably do it and be successful. Jimmy has been successful every place else."

Parcells had a 3-12-1 campaign in his 1983 rookie season with the New York Giants but turned it around to 9-7 in his second season. The Giants were 17-2 in 1986 and won the Super Bowl.

Parcells has become the second-winningest coach in franchise history, and the Giants are off to their best start (3-0) since 1968. Allie Sherman started that year 4-0, but the Giants tumbled to a 7-7 record.

The winless Cowboys host the Giants at 3 p.m. CDT on Sunday in Texas Stadium. The Giants are rated seven-point favorites. New York won 12-10 last year, but has never won two games in a row in Texas Stadium, where Parcells is 2-4.

He said he didn't think the Giants would be too chesty against the weak Cowboys.

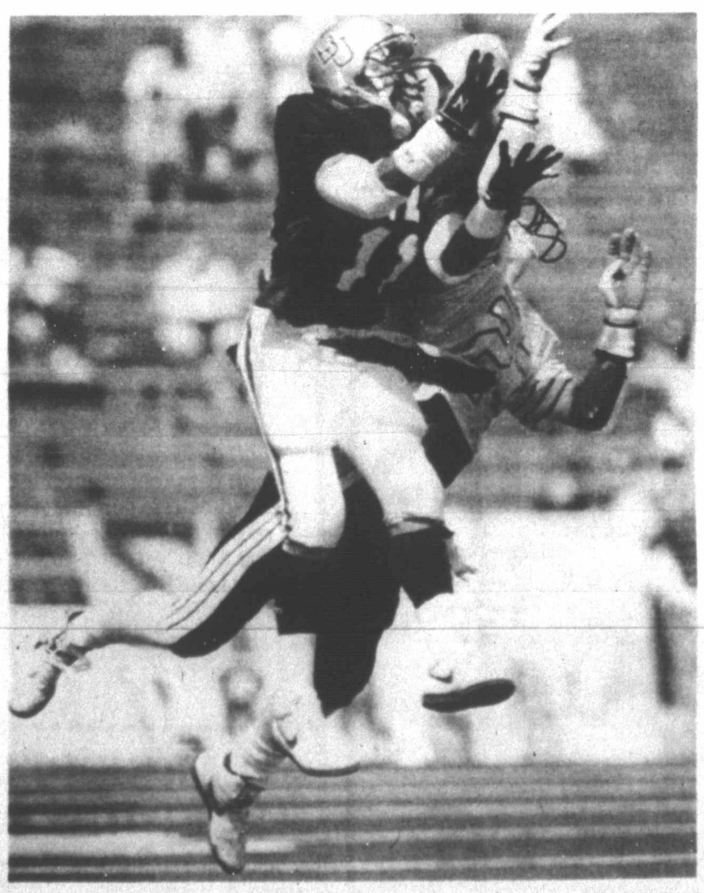

"It is a division game on the road," Parcells said. "We haven't had that much luck in Dallas (4-12 in Texas Stadium) and I've never done all that well against Dallas. I don't think overconfidence will be a problem."

Dallas and the Detroit Lions are the only two NFL teams without a victory.

It hasn't set well with Johnson.

"It's not a good feeling," he said. Johnson won five games and a national title in five years at the University of Miami before replacing fired coach Tom Landry in a change of ownership. "We have to bring our performance level up. We just can't accept these kind of performances."

The Cowboys have lost 28-0 to New Orleans, 27-21 to Atlanta, and 30-7 to Washington, while the Giants have defeated Washington 27-24, Detroit 24-14, and Phoenix 35-7.

Rice.....17
Wake Forest.....17

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wilson Hoyle kicked a 27-yard field goal on third down as time ran out on Saturday, giving winless Wake Forest a 17-17 tie with Rice.

The Demon Deacons (0-3-1) were put in a catch-up situation in the fourth quarter when Sammy Hartman's 33-yard field goal with 11:14 left broke a 7-7 tie left over from the first quarter.

Wake Forest took the ensuing kickoff and drove 72 yards in 15 plays and consumed almost seven minutes, scoring on Phil Barnhill's 13-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Proehl with 4:26 left to play.

Rice (1-2-1) took nearly three minutes to regain the lead, using Trevor Cobb's 30-yard kickoff return to set up their drive near midfield. Quarterback Donald Hollas kept the drive alive with a 10-yard run on a third-and-8 from the Wake Forest 11. Hollas capped the drive with a second-down dive over the defense for a 17-14 lead for the Owls (1-3)

Miami 26
Michigan State.....20

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Second-ranked Miami survived the loss of its starting quarterback when Carlos Huerta kicked two of his four field goals in the fourth quarter, and the Hurricanes beat Michigan State 26-20 Saturday.

Miami (4-0) struggled against a rugged Michigan State defense after starting quarterback Craig Erickson was injured in the second quarter. Erickson broke a knuckle on his throwing hand and will be in a cast for four weeks.

Huerta kicked his third field goal after Michigan State safety Harlon Barnett intercepted a pass by Erickson's backup, Gino Torretta, and returned it 35 yards for a touchdown to tie the score 20-20.

Huerta added a 52-yarder late in the game.

Defensive end Greg Mark sacked Michigan State quarterback Dan Enos to snuff one Spartan attempt to recover, and Enos fumbled in Michigan State's last effort.

Michigan State now is 1-2.

Tennessee.....21
Auburn.....14

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Reggie Cobb ran for 225 yards, including 79 yards for a touchdown, and 12th-ranked Tennessee also got two safeties on high center snaps as the Vols upset No. 4 Auburn 21-14 in a rainy Southeastern Conference game Saturday.

Tennesee improved to 4-0 and Auburn dropped to 2-1. It was the SEC opener for both teams.

Cobb got his 225 yards on 22 carries. His 79-yard touchdown came less than three minutes into the second quarter when he bolted through a hole in the middle and then hit the right sideline.

Tennessee got its winning score in the final period on an 8-yard run by Chuck Webb, five plays after Shazzon Bradley intercepted a Reggie Slack pass at the Auburn 42.

Carrillo, Hamby pace Pampa harriers

AMARILLO — Sophomore Alberto Carrillo finished 23rd overall to pace the Pampa High School cross country teams Saturday at the Amarillo Invitational Meet.

Carrillo, competing against a field of 100 runners in the three-mile race at Thompson Park, picked up Pampa's only medal of the day.

"Alberto definitely improved himself considerably," said Pampa coach Mark Elms. "He improved his time and stayed with the leaders for the first mile before they started pulling away."

In the girls division, Pampa's Brooke Hamby finished 28th among a field of 115 in the two-mile event and missed medaling by three places.

"We didn't come up place-wise like I wanted," Elms said, "but they ran well against a lot of tough competition.

"I can't tell how we did against teams in our district, since Hereford and Levelland weren't there. They ran in a meet at Seminole."

Other Pampa runners included Steve Hawkins, who finished 54th, followed by Matt Hawkins, Todd McCavit and Aaron Lopez. Susie Perez was the second Lady Harvester to cross the finish line, ahead of teammates Holly Snider, Ginger Elms and Teresa Organ.

Pampa travels to Spearman next Saturday morning. The girls varsity race begins at 10:40, followed by boys varsity at 11.

The PHS team then competes at Dumas and Dalhart before journeying to Lubbock's Mae Simmons Park for the District Meet.

"We're going to have to be fighters if we're going to make it past district," Elms said. "I've got a funny bunch of kids — they'll just kind of sit back, but then they'll explode on you."

Volleyball

HEREFORD — The Pampa Lady Harvesters split two games with the Hereford Lady Whitefaces before losing the tiebreaker in District 1-4A volleyball action Saturday.

Pampa opened with a 15-2 victory, then fell to Hereford by an identical score in game two. But the Lady Whitefaces clinched the overall win with a 15-2 victory in game three.

Hereford improved to 6-0 in district, 18-3 on the season to maintain its first-place spot, while the Lady Harvesters fell to 3-3, 7-12 overall, to keep a share of third place.

"In the first game, we pretty well knew what Hereford was going to do, and we were ready for them," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez. "The score was tied, 12-12, and we came out of the deadlock to beat them. We were finally able to get the serve and run it on out."

Leslie Bailey produced a good defensive game at the net to help shut down Hereford's attack in game one.

"We blocked well," said Lopez. "As a result, Hereford began to dink the ball and we took away most of their offensive firepower. I felt they had to change their game plan, and that hurt them considerably."

Hereford raced to a 13-3 lead in the second game before Pampa roared to life with nine consecutive points to move within one.

"We took a timeout and had to have a heart-to-heart talk," Lopez said. "We'd worked too hard in the first game to let it go down the drain that easily.

"We rallied back behind the serving of Kelly Winborne, Bridgett Mathis and Dori Kidwell and made it 13-12. Then we had a misserve and that stopped our momentum."

Pampa never challenged in the third game, managing only two points.

"We were mentally fatigued," Lopez said. "Losing that second game hurt us — it was a heartbreaker.

"I felt the girls never gave up, especially in the second game when we were behind 13-3 and fought back. That shows character. My hat's off to the girls."

Pampa travels to fifth-place Lubbock Estacado on Tuesday, with matches scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. The Lady Harvesters host Levelland Saturday at 2 p.m.in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Tennis

LEVELLAND — The Pampa High School tennis team notched a 14-4 victory over Levelland in District 1-4A play Saturday, running its record to 3-1 in conference play and 6-1 overall.

The boys dropped only one of nine matches to post an 8-1 victory, while the girls won six and lost three. The boys' only loss came early in the day during doubles play.

"When we got here, we came out a little flat because of the long bus ride," said Pampa coach Jay Barrett. "I guess it was just a case of bus lag. We started off a little slow, but we picked up our level of intensity after doubles and won the last six matches straight."

To date, two Pampa players remain undefeated this season in singles. No. 5 Andrew Ramirez and No. 6 Darren Jones are both 7-0 on the season, and as a doubles team, they have lost only one match.

"The kid gave really great performances, especially the boys in singles," Barrett said. "The heat was pretty bad here (Levelland), but we've been running hard to get ready for regionals. We know it's going to be about 10 degrees warmer down here, even in November."

Pampa entertains Randall next Saturday at 1 p.m. on the PHS courts. The Harvesters' toughest obstacle should come the following week when they travel to Lubbock to take on Estacado, which defeated Levelland 12-6 earlier this season.

"Estacado is about the only team that could give us trouble," Barrett said. "We're not overlooking them, but at the same time we're trying to get ready for regionals."

See today's Scoreboard on Page 11 for Saturday's results.

Golf

AMARILLO — The Pampa High boys' golf team opened the fall season Saturday in a triangular-dual meet at the Amarillo Public Course.

The Harvesters won the first triangular with a score of 306, followed by Plainview with 309 and Amarillo High with 314.

Urbanczyk helps White Deer to 18-7 victory over Spearman

SPEARMAN – Steve Urbanczyk rushed for 110 yards and scored twice while teammate Troy Cummins returned a kickoff for a touchdown as White Deer downed Spearman 18-7 Friday night.

"We scored the first two times we had the ball and we also scored the third time, but it was called back on a penalty, so we were moving the ball pretty good," said Bucks' coach Dennis Carpenter. "Our offensive line is really coming along and learning our system."

The Bucks evened their record at 2-2 while Spearman dropped to 1-3.

White Deer jumped out to a 12-0 lead in the first quarter on touchdown runs of 35 and two yards by the 160-pound Urbanczyk.

Thomas, who rushed for 99 yards on 10 totes, opened the second half by returning the kickoff 87 yards for the score.

Spearman got on the board in the fourth quarter on Tino Garcia's 12-yard run.

Scotty Wilkerson led the Lynx in rushing with 163 yards on 18 carries.

White Deer hosts Stratford at 7:30 p.m. next Friday night.

Quanah.....20
Wheeler.....17

QUANAH – Wheeler lost one of those heartbreakers Friday night when Anthony Williams caught a 54-yard touchdown pass from Michael Jackson on the game's last play to give Quanah a 20-17 win.

Quanah was facing a fourth-down situation with 11 seconds to go when Williams and Jackson combined for the game-winner.

Wheeler is now 3-2 on the season while Quanah is 3-1.

"I told the players after the game not to get down on themselves," said Wheeler coach Ronnie Karcher. "They need to learn from their mistakes and also realize this wasn't a district game or playoff game. They've got time to correct those mistakes."

Quanah held a 14-3 halftime lead with the Mustangs scoring their points on Arthur Altamirano's 15-yard field goal.

Wheeler pulled within 14-9 in the third quarter on Shawn Bradstreet's 25-yard scoring pass to Kelly Aderholt.

Wheeler took the lead in the fourth quarter on a one-yard plunge by Bradstreet and Ike Finsterwald's conversion run. The TD was set up on an interception by Brandon Chick, who returned the ball to Quanah's seven.

Finsterwald rushed for 86 yards on 14 tries to lead Wheeler's ground game while Chick snared six passes for 64 yards.

Wheeler has an open date next week before meeting Gruver on Oct. 13 to begin District 1-1A play.

Lefors 43
Follett 42

LEFORS – Lefors sneaked by Follett 43-42 in a six-man homecoming thriller Friday night.

With winless Follett (0-3) leading 34-31 at intermission, the second half turned into a defensive struggle.

The Pirates scored the only touchdown of the third quarter on Dusty Roberson's one-yard plunge, giving his team a 37-34 advantage.

Roberson, who rushed for 184 yards on the night, pushed the Pirates further ahead with an eight-yard TD run in the fourth quarter.

Quarterback J.J. Neptune, who had three touchdown passes, led a Panthers' rally in the closing minutes. He threw an 11-yard TD pass to Trent Lauban and then kicked the two-point conversion to draw within one.

Roberson, however, came through in the clutch for the Pirates. With 22 seconds remaining and the Pirates facing a fourth and nine situation, Roberson ran for the first down and made it by the length of a football. The Pirates ran out the clock to raise their record to 3-1.

The Pirates' defense was sparked by Jarrod Slatten and Mickey Nunn. Slatten picked off two Panther passes and Nunn went 55 yards for a touchdown when he swiped the ball from Follett back Michael Howard on an end sweep.

Canadian.....38
Boys Ranch 0

BOYS RANCH – With Canadian's stingy defense not allowing a first down and only five yards total offense, the unbeaten Wildcats blanked Boys Ranch 38-0 Friday night.

Quarterback Shane Lloyd completed six of 14 passes for 101 yards and a touchdown and running back Paige Ford scored twice as the Wildcats' offense chalked up 323 yards in total offense.

Canadian went scoreless the first quarter, causing coach Paul Wilson some concern.

"It took us a long time to get untracked, but we finally wore them down in the second half," Wilson said. "Our defense was our savior, no question about it. Our front eight people were just tremendous."

Ty Hardin led Canadian's rushing attack with 85 yards in 15 carries, including a one-yard TD run.

In the receiving department, Brad Harris pulled down four passes for 55 yards. Larry Dunnam caught only one pass, but it went for a 56-yard touchdown which gave Canadian its first score in the second quarter.

Canadian is now 4-0 for the season while Boys Ranch fell to 0-4.

Lazbuddie 54
Groom 8

LAZBUDDIE – Lazbuddie's quickness helped forge a 54-8 win over Groom Friday night in six-man action.

Eddie Zamora scored three touchdowns and rushed for 186 yards to lead Lazbuddie.

"Their team quickness was just super," said Groom coach Jerry Branch. "We did move the ball (233 yards total offense), but we just couldn't do it with any consistency."

Groom's only touchdown came in the second quarter on Brian Baker's five-yard run.

The Tigers lost tailback Robert Miller early in the second quarter when he suffered a broken bone in his foot.

Branch said Miller would be sidelined from three to six weeks.

Groom, 1-3, has an open date next week.

Valley.....30
Miami.....24

MIAMI – Valley utilized Miami's failure to convert four point-after attempts to claim a 30-24 win Friday night in a six-man clash.

The loss evened the Warriors' record at 2-2. Valley, also 2-2, was successful on three of four point-after tries , which proved to be the difference in the game.

Scoring for Miami were Brock Thompson (41-yard run), Jason Ott (35-yard run), Clay Mercer (15-yard run) and Robert Allemand (10-yard interception).

"We had over 500 yards total offense, but we just couldn't convert any extra points," said Miami coach Robert Loy. "One thing I can say for our ballclub is that it was the best team effort of any team I've ever coached."

Valley led at halftime 16-12.

Allemand and Rodney Gunner were the defensive leaders for Miami with five and four solo tackles respectively.

Miami is open next week.

Ditka-Ryan feud resumes

Eagles seek revenge after fog-filled disaster of '88

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

The last time Randall Cunningham and Buddy Ryan went to Chicago a lot of bad things happened to them.

Their only consolation was that nobody could see it — at least in the second half.

That was last January in the Eagles' first playoff game since 1981. The Eagles dropped passes in the end zone, had TDs called back by penalties and then disappeared into the fog that rolled in off Lake Michigan just before halftime.

Philadelphia returns to Chicago on Monday night, not only for a taste of revenge, but to try to get Ryan his first coaching victory in three starts against Mike Ditka, his ex-employer and long-time adversary. The oddsmakers are laying 31/2 points that he won't get it.

The Cunningham miracles ended temporarily last Sunday when the quarterback of the '90s was taught a lesson by the quarterback of the '80s, Joe Montana. Actually, it was the Philadelphia defense that learned the lesson — no matter how much you pressure the quarterback, you've got to cover people, particularly in the fourth quarter.

Mike Tomczak isn't exactly Montana. But they'll be at home, fired up by the Ditka-Ryan feud and ready to contain Cunningham.

BEARS, 27-23

Los Angeles Rams (+5) at San Francisco

The Rams were probably thinking about this one after they went up 24 points at halftime over the Packers and almost blew it. But after San Francisco's three games on the road, Candlestick looks sweet...

49ERS, 31-22

Denver (+5) at Cleveland

The Broncos and Browns are both surprises, primarily because of defenses turned hostile by Wade Phillips and Bud Carson. The Dawgs in the Cleveland Stadium end zone are hostile too and Denver is due ... to lose.

BROWNS, 24-20

Tampa Bay (+8) at Minnesota

At some point, the Vikings will explode. But the Bucs are legitimately improved and there's a lot of bickering about money in Minneapolis.

VIKINGS, 20-14

Washington (-1) at New Orleans

Do the Saints have any quarterbacks left? Do the Redskins have running backs? Will Jim Finks get elected commissioner just in time to escape disaster in Who Dat land?

REDSKINS, 24-17

Atlanta (+7) at Green Bay

Chris Miller is out for the Falcons, so they simply change one letter — Hugh MilleN is now the starter. One letter won't do it...

PACKERS, 24-14

New York Giants (-71/2) at Dallas

This SHOULD be more pain for JJ, JJ and Stroy Walshman. Funny things usually happen to the Giants here, but given the state of the Cowboys, they won't be funny enough ...

GIANTS, 27-7

Seattle (+2) at Los Angeles Raiders

Even this early, the loser's in trouble. If it's the Raiders, so is Mike Shanahan. Mike hangs in ...

RAIDERS, 30-24

Cincinnati (-51/2) at Kansas City

Apply a simple rule here: home field or not, the better team wins, even without Boomer Esiason.

Report shows Oklahoma thrifts end quarter with deficit

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Savings and loans in the state ended the second quarter with a $22.7 million deficit in tangible capital after improvement in 1988 and the first quarter of 1989, according to a nationwide survey.

The report released by Sheshunoff Information Services of Austin, Texas shows the combined deficit among the 39 thrifts in Oklahoma as of June 30 was created by a lack of capital at 12 associations,

Four of the 12, Cross Roads Savings & Loan of Chocotah, Duncan Savings and Loan Association, Continental Federal Savings and Loan Association and First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Seminole, are being operated by conservators appointed by the Resolution Trust Corp.

The Sheshunoff report is compiled using unaudited figures reported by the savings institutions to the Office of Thrift Supervision. In some cases the figures may have been adjusted in a subsequent audit, changing the condition of the state's industry.

When listed among other states, Oklahoma savings and loans ranked No. 41 in tangible capital and No. 37 in asset size.

According to audited reports, Sooner Federal Savings and Loan Association of Tulsa became the 13th technically insolvent institution in the state, with a negative net worth of $79 million at June 30.

Sooner announced last week it has entered a consent agreement with federal regulators, who could put the institution in conservatorship and negotiate a plan for merging it with another institution for consolidation or reorganization.

Sooner, Oklahoma's largest thrift with nearly $2 billion in assets, would become the fifth Oklahoma institution to be managed by a conservator.

The 39 institutions reported a net loss of $123,000 through June 30, with 20 reporting losses and 19 with a net gain. The return on average assets for all 39 institutions was negative 2.26 percent.

Heartland Federal Savings and Loan Association of Ponca City reported the largest profit, $4.4 million, but the institution has a tangible capital deficit of $40 million.

Okmulgee Savings and Loan Association, the association with the largest percentage of tangible capital relative to assets, made $20,000 in the second quarter. Okmulgee Savings has an asset portfolio primarily consisting of securities investments.

The soundest associations, those with more than 6 percent tangible capital-to-assets, include Okmulgee, Fidelity Federal Savings & Loan Association of Claremore; First Commercial Savings Bank of Lawton; Home Federal Savings & Loan Association and First Western Federal Savings & Loan Association, both of Oklahoma City; Osage Federal Savings & Loan Association and Home Federal Savings & Loan Association of Ada.

In addition, nine associations had tangible capital of 3 percent or more, and three thrifts had tangible capital to assets ratios of 1.5 percent or greater.

The 1.5 percent tangible capital-to-assets ratio is required of all thrifts this year. By 1991, they will be required by legislation passed in August to have tangible capital of 3 percent.

Of the four savings associations that were created in August 1988 by the government when 14 associations were merged, Red River of Lawton and Chisholm of Kingfisher are still solvent, but they do not meet the 1.5 percent tangible capital-to-assets requirement.

Cimarron Federal in Muskogee has a negative tangible capital of $15 million and Heartland had negative tangible capital of $40 million.

Busch buys Sea World

By RANDOLPH PICHT
AP Business Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Spuds MacKenzie, fun-loving party dog from Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc., meet your new partner: Shamu, that well-known killer whale.

Anheuser-Busch announced it agreed to pay $1.1 billion for the four Sea World parks around the country plus two other theme parks from Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc.

"We have considered Sea World as the ideal acquisition for some period of time," said W. Randolph Baker, vice president and group executive for Anheuser Busch.

The deal will make the brewer the second largest theme park operator in America behind Walt Disney Co., and will help Harcourt pay off the huge debt the publishing and insurance company accumulated in thwarting a hostile takeover two years ago.

But Wall Street apparently was displeased with the deal. Harcourt stock had plunged $3.871/2 a share to $12.371/2 in early trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stock analysts who follow Anheuser-Busch applauded the acquisition but said it will have little impact on the company's profits or makeup.

"This is a real drop in the beer barrel, but it's a diversification move that's going to work and that's better than one that doesn't work," said Julie Neiman, a St. Louis-based analyst for Stifel Nicolaus & Co., Inc.

Anheuser-Busch, the world's leading beer maker, has four core businessess: beer, food, container manufacturing and family entertainment. However, 90 percent of the company's sales come from beer and beer-related ventures.

"The Sea World acquisition will give us a broad base for future expansion," said Baker. He said the purchase should be completed in November.

Anheuser-Busch already operates Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla., one of the biggest zoos in the country; a 17th century European-style park in Williamsburg, Va.; a water park in Tampa and a futuristic children's park near Philadelphia.

The company also is planning a major theme park and resort in Spain along the Mediterranean coast just south of Barcelona, according to Baker. It's scheduled to open in 1992 or 1993.

The popular Sea World parks, which feature performing killer whales, trained dolphins and other talented creatures from the sea, are located in San Diego; Orlando, Fla.; San Antonio, Texas, and Aurora, Ohio.

The other parks involved in the deal are Boardwalk and Baseball in Orlando and Cypress Gardens in Winter Haven, Fla. The purchase also includes land adjacent to the three Florida parks, Sea World of Texas and the Orlando airport.

Overall attendance at the parks was 14.5 million last year.

Analysts say Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, a leading book publisher, is selling the parks in an effort to pay off a nearly $2.9 billion debt that accumulated when the Orlando-based company fended off a 1987 hostile takeover attempt by British communications mogul Robert Maxwell.

"They (Harcourt Brace) didn't have a whole lot of choice," said Robert Dunlap Jr., analyst for Brown Brothers Harriman in New York.

But in giving up the theme park business, Harcourt Brace also is relieving itself of the chronic management problems and falling attendance at the six parks.

In 1988, sales at the parks were $435 million and pre-tax earnings were $62 million. This year pre-tax earnings were projected to rise to $90 million, analysts said.

Only two bidders for the park actually went public with their plans. One was a group of former Harcourt Brace and Sea World executives led by Sea World founder George Millay. The other was from Florida Leisure Acquisition Corp., which owns the Silver Springs attraction in Ocala.

National 4-H Week
October 1 - 7

Angie Underwood shows her pig during the Top O' Texas Stock Show and Sale. .

Angie Downs works on her 4-H sewing project.

The 4-H program began in Texas in 1908 in Jack County with the Boy's Corn Club organized to teach corn production practices to adults by teaching children. The 4-H heritage continued with Tomato Clubs for girls organized in Milam County in 1912, and the first Beef Calf Club organized in Coleman County in 1910. These rural clubs for boys and girls were the forerunner of 4-H in Texas.

Today's 4-H program, a youth development program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, is both rural and urban and emphasizes using projects and learning experiences to teach boys and girls not only subject-matter knowledge and skills, but also important lessons in relationships, leadership and citizenship.

Any youth can become a member of 4-H when he or she reaches nine years of age or has entered the third grade. A youth's last year in 4-H is the calendar year he or she reaches their 19th birthday.

Adult volunteers are the cornerstone of the 4-H program. They organize and conduct educational experiences in community and family settings. There are approximately 77 adult and team leaders currently serving Gray County.

Youth in 1989 have a wider variety of projects to choose from than ever before. Besides the basic animal projects - beef, swine, sheep and horse and the fashion and cooking projects, 4-H members may choose to study aerospace and rocketry; bicycles; citizenship; consumer decision making; entomology; field crops; vegetable or landscape horticulture; leadership; photography; poultry; public speaking; rabbits; range science; shooting sports; wildlife; and woodworking.

Joe Vann is the County Extension Assistant Agricultural Agent and 75% of his responsibility is coordinating the 4-H Clubs and their projects.

During National 4-H Week Gray County 4-H Clubs will be involved in a number of special activities. Each 4-H Club has a window display promoting 4-H. The winning club will receive a $50 cash prize for first place and $10 for second place.

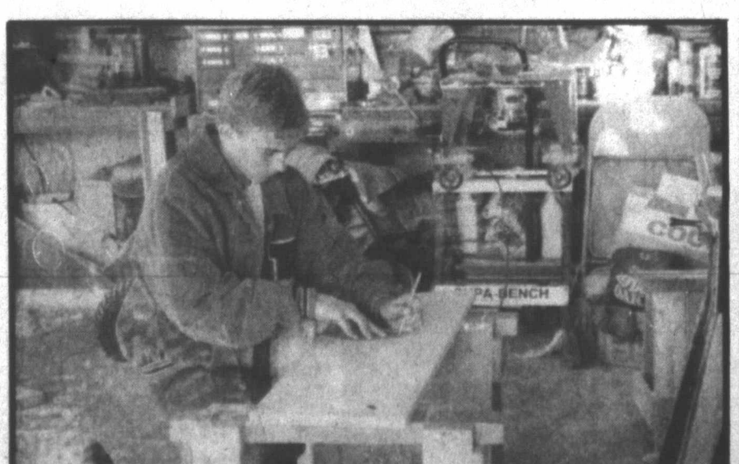

Each club made locker tags to display at their respective schools during the week and cookies for the teachers' lounge. Coffee mugs are being presented to the Gray County Commissioners Court in honor of National 4-H Week.

For more information on becoming a 4-H Club member or volunteer, contact the Extension Office at 669-8033.

Husband wants wife to play hooker, but she tires of game

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for eight years. We are both 32 years old. For most of our married years, we have had one recurring argument.

Bill (not his real name) wants me to dress a certain way when we go out. He likes to see me in tight-fitting miniskirts, tops with no bra, and no underwear.

I feel very uncomfortable dressed this way in public because I look like a hooker. Bill says it turns him on. He doesn't have me dress that way around our friends, only when we go out, but I'm always worried that we'll run into someone we know.

He says that if I loved him, I would do it just to please him. I wouldn't mind dressing that way at home, but that's not what he wants.

Bill keeps trying to mold me into his Playboy image, and I keep resisting. This problem is causing a lot of resentment between us. Is there any way we can resolve this problem besides counseling?

NO PLAYBOY GIRL

DEAR NO PLAYBOY GIRL: You took the words right out of my typewriter. The solution to your problem is counseling. Your husband needs to find out why seeing you dressed like a hooker in public turns him on. He also must learn that he has no right to ask you to do something you find repugnant. ("If you love me, you will do it just to please me.") Tell him, "If you love me, you wouldn't ask me to do anything I don't really want to do."

Stick to your guns and insist that your husband get counseling, because therein lies the solution to your problem.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: While my husband and I were having dinner in a Hollywood restaurant recently, I recognized a rather famous movie actress dining with four or five other people.

I wanted to go over and tell her I was a fan of hers and how much I enjoyed her work. My husband discouraged me, saying celebrities do not want to be bothered by people coming up to them in a restaurant.

As a celebrity, you must be recognized in public places. How do you feel about people who come over to you to say hello?

MADELINE FROM MODESTO

DEAR MADELINE: I am pleased when someone comes over to say hello, but some celebrities prefer to be left alone.

I am reminded of Fred Allen's witty line: "A celebrity is a person who works a lifetime to become well-known, then wears dark glasses to avoid being recognized."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I love to attend the theater, ball games and musical events, but he always has to be the first one back to the car afterward. We watch the last few minutes standing in the back, or listening, as we dash for the parking lot. There is no reason for the rush, and I am sick of missing the last song, the last inning or the last act. And never mind that we miss the encore or the chance to applaud. What can I do?

MISSING OUT IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR MISSING OUT: Tell "Speedy Gonzales" that leaving ahead of the crowd may save a little time, but the time saved isn't worth missing the end of the performance.

It's been my experience that the last song, the last inning or the last act is often better than the first, and well worth waiting for. (And, like the last laugh, it's often the best.)

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I saw a picture of a beautiful bride in the Sunday Indianapolis Star. She had been married the previous Sunday in an Episcopal church.

In the last line, describing the wedding ceremony, was the following: "The bride's pet dog, a toy Pomeranian, served as one of her attendants."

How about that?

HORRIFIED HOOSIER

DEAR HORRIFIED: It's a wise girl who knows who her best friend is.

Care labels give instructions for textile goods

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

In July 1972, the Federal Trade Commission adopted its Care Labeling Rule concerning textile clothing and certain piece goods. The Rule made it easier for the consumer, professional launderer and drycleaner to determine proper clothing care.

In January 1984, the Rule was amended to include specific changes, such as allowing the manufacturer or importer to list only one method of safe care for the garment.

A care label is a tag giving care instructions. The label must be attached to most clothing so that it will not become separated from the product, and it must remain legible during the useful life of the produce. You should be able to see the care label or find it easily.

When a garment has two or more parts that are sold as a unit, only one care label is required. However, if each piece is designated to be sold separately or if each piece requires different care procedures, then each part of the article must have its own label.

Symbols may also appear on a care label. However, written instructions must appear on all garments sold in the United States. Symbols are used only to supplement these written instructions.

One part of the Care Labeling Rule includes a glossary of terms. The glossary helps explain different cleaning processes in order to avoid misunderstandings. The following are some example of those definitions:

(1) Drycleaning - Uses normal drycleaning fluid found in any commercial or coin-operated drycleaning establishment. The process may include moisture added to the fluid, hot tumble drying (to 160 degrees), and pressing by steam press or steam air-form finishing.

(2) Professionally Dryclean - Restricts the drycleaning process to methods possible only in commercial drycleaning establishments. "Professionally Dryclean" cannot appear on the label by itself, but must be accompanied by further information, such as "use reduced moisture", "low heat", or "no finishing."

(3) Machine Wash - Indicates use of either a commercial or a homewashing machine. Other information may be added giving specific washing temperatures, size of the load, or drying procedures. The maximum ranges are: Hot - use up to 150 degrees F., or the hottest water available from you hot water heater. Warm - Use 90 degrees to 110 degrees F., or hand comfortable. Cold - Use 85 degrees F., or initial water from a cold tap.

A manufacturer or importer is only required to list one method of safe care for the garment, no matter how many other sage methods also could be used.

Also, the manufacturer or importer is not required to warn about other care procedure that may not be safe.

Use of a care method not specified on a care level may be risky. Clothing labeled "washable" may or may not be drycleanable or vice versa. Many drycleaners have facilities for properly washing and finishing washable garments, but if you request a method of cleaning not listed on the care label, a drycleaner may ask that you sign a consent form. The signed form shows that the drycleaner has discussed with you the potential risks of cleaning the garmen. With or without the consent form, whenever drycleaners accept garments for cleaning, they obligate themselves to clean garments in a professional manner, to the best of their ability, and using their expertise.

If you or the cleaner follow the manufacturer's instructions and the garment is damaged, you should return the garment to the store and explain what happened. If the store will not resolve the problem, ask for the manufacturer's name and address and write to the company. In your letter, provide a full description of the garment and state all the information that is given on the labels and on the tags.

Estimate how many times the garment has been washed or drycleaned and provide the full name and address of the store where it was purchased. Also, send a copy of your complaint letter to the Federal Trade Commission.

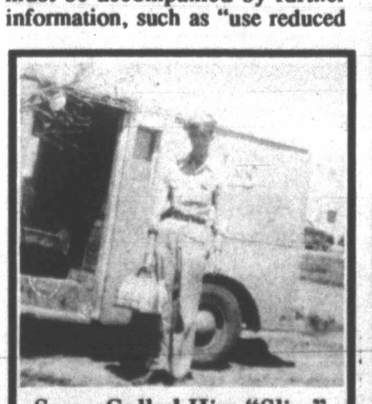

Although the Federal Trade Commission cannot resolve your individual problem, the information you supply may reveal a pattern or practice requiring action by the Commission. Also, if you have purchased clothing that has no care label attached, contact the F.T.C., giving the name and address of the store and the manufacturer as noted above. In either case, write:

Correspondence Branch
Federal Trade Commission
Washington, D.C. 20580

Welcome to Pampa's new teachers

Peeking at Pampa

By Katie

A two-pronged approach of the arrival of fall with its welcome crisp air, the thoughts of a visit on paper with friends and neighbors, several of them new Pampans, brings us to square one. Read on!

Let me tell you about more of the new teachers in the P.I.S.D. They are an enthusiastic, keen group of people who are already Chamber-of-Commerce-ee about Pampa and its schools.

Tonia James, a recent WT graduate, teaches fourth grade at Stephen F. Austin. It's a new class room.

Susan Miller, a recent grad of the University of Texas at Austin, is a fourth grade teacher at Woodrow Wilson. Another new position.

Shannon Loter is a resource teacher in Special Education at PHS. Special praise goes to Shannon for choosing her field through her great love and understanding of her brother, Trent. (P.S. To know Trent is to love him.)

John Middlebrooks came from Columbus, Tex. to be a PHS counselor for students of the 9th - 11th grades whose last names begin with H to O. John enjoys summer camping and back packing, photography and lots of reading.

He was a biology and chemistry teacher for five years and a counselor for 15. He is quick to praise PHS as one on the move, not satisfied with the status quo, an exciting place to be! He has the same feelings about Pampa, too.

Murray and Gari Lord are June newlyweds from Kerrville. Murray is a coach/English teacher and Gari a math teacher at PHS. Gari was impressed when she taught under Dr. Harry Griffith at Ingram, probably a big factor in bringing the couple to Pampa.

Kevin and Ann Wade and sons, Jonathan and Hayden, came from Quanah. Kevin is a speech therapist and Ann is an aide at Woodrow Wilson. They prefer family oriented activities such as arts and crafts, outings with the boys. Ann says Kevin is an excellent cook and is a part time cook at Coronado Inn.

Brenda Lingenfelter, resource person at Woodrow Wilson, commutes between Panhandle and Pampa.

Nancy Riley, a traditional first grade teacher, also commutes from Panhandle. Her position is a newly created one.

Paul and Deboraha Williams and boys, Lee - 10 and Warren - 2 months, came from Dickenson, on the other side of Houston. Paul has been named athletic trainer for PHS. As a family they enjoy traveling to historic sites. Lee is a soccer player.

Paul enjoys playing golf. With her interest in woodworking, Deboraha is used to the funny looks she thinks she gets on her first trip to the lumber yards in a new city. She also enjoys sewing. They are Baptists.

Tad and Kelley Smith moved from Panhandle. Tad is a PHS coach/biology teacher and Kelley is a substitute teacher.

Kay Holdridge is an elementary counselor at Baker and Horace Mann Schools. She is from Sonora.

Baker has three new teachers. Denise Donnell, a fourth grade teacher, her husband, Steve and daughter came from Spearman this summer. Steve is youth director of the First United Mthodist Church. Randy Stewart, a fifth grade teacher, came from Newkirk, Okla. Ruth Richards commutes from Mobeetie to teach fifth grade. Her husband is superintendent of Mobeetie Schools.

Martha and Chuck Steele came here from Boys' Ranch. Chuck is superintendent at Grandview-Hopkins and Martha is the educational diagnostician at Carver Center. Chuck and Martha are parents of five grown and married children with two in Perryton, one each in Gruver, Canyon and College Station, and grandparents of nine.

With the experience of having five children in seven years, taking six ranging in age from ten, seven, six and three under three, to a football game last week was a piece of cake. Chuck is a hunter and Martha a violinist. They are members of First Baptist Church.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to these new teachers!!!

Look for thumbnail sketches of other new teachers next week. Lynda Queen, public relations director of PISD, attended a board meeting of the Texas State Public Relations Association in San Antonio Friday. Lynda is the Northwest Texas Regional vice-president of the association.

Chris Didway, son of Curtis and Glenda, as well as a former Harvester football player and now a student at WT, saw the Harvesters win their football game last Friday night. Yea, Harvesters!!!!

Congratulations to Mark McVay, CPA, for being named business manager of PISD.

Apologies to Charlene Morriss for giving her the new name of Carlene Morris in last week's column. Remember the surprise birthday party she gave for Roy?!!!!

Congratulations to J.R. and Princess Baggett on the birth of a baby boy, George Lowry, named for his maternal grandfather. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. James Baggett. His big little sisters, Jennifer and Jessie, are also members of the welcoming committee.

Linda and Roger Crawford, Jim and Marietta Baird, enjoyed a foliage tour centering in South Fork, Colo.

Best wishes to Wayne and Diane Klosterman, employees of Schlumberger, and their two children, Rusty and Lacey, who will be making their home in Duncan, Okla. Wayne and Diane have been deeply involved in activities at the First Presbyterian Church. Wayne is an elder there and Diane writes the church newsletter for only two of their activities. While they will be missed, they do leave with the best wishes of their many friends.

The family of Orban S. Epperson celebrated with a family reunion in Wichita Falls recently with 48 out of a possible 56 attending. Some played golf, some went boating and others did the usual shopping on Saturday. On Sunday there was a devotion followed by a picnic in the park filled with fun and games.

A special event was a surprise 25th wedding anniversary party for Gary and Vickie Epperson. Vickie's parents and brother and family - Floyd and Lee Crow, Pampa, and Rod Crow and family from Henrietta attended.

April, Gregg and Chad Epperson, children, were there, too. Attending from Pampa were Orban Epperson, 86 (!) and Jewel, W.C. and Betty Epperson, Buddy and Joyce Epperson, Mickey and Zindi Richardson, Shalie and Jodie, plus relatives from Odessa, Amarillo, Lubbock, Lindale, Smithville. Family reunions are such fun.

Next weekend holds much in store including homecoming at PHS.

Bobbie and Scott Nisbet spent a week recently at the Bar NI Ranch in Colorado with Jo and Roland Darce of St. Louis, Ray and Shirley Wooldridge of Lake Kiowa, Charles and Billie Walsh of Denver, all former Pampans!

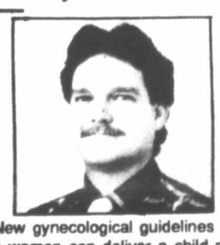

See you next week! Katie.

Crime Prevention Tip

Take a good look at your doors. Do you keep them locked? Can a shove or quick twist of a crowbar pop the door open? Make it tough to jimmy your lock or pry open the door and you reduce the opportunity for crime. If doors and locks delay a burglar for several minutes, chances are he'll get discouraged and leave.

The topic of Brown's speech will be "Who's Watering the Elephants?"

According to Faye Watson, secretary, Club members need to make their dinner reservations at Dunlaps in Coronado Center by Oct. 7. Dinner will be served beginning at 7 p.m.

Coronado Hospital celebrates 2nd anniversary

Coronado Hospital is celebrating its second anniversary this week as part of the largest employee-owned company in the country, HealthTrust, Inc. The hospital is hosting a series of events during October as part of its anniversary and National Employee Ownership Week.

Events for employees include a birthday party Oct. 3 and a free luncheon Oct. 5. In addition the hospital will host a Chamber of Commerce breakfast Oct. 26 to celebrate the event. To thank the community for their support, the hospital this week is launching a cholesterol treatment program called Eater's Choice, and beginning a new service called OccuMed, which is a benefit program for employers.

Hospital officials report they are pleased with the hospital's performance since it was sold to its 240 employees in September 1987. Since that time the hospital has added many services, including ValuCare, a birthing room, an in-house CT scanner, a heart catheterization lab, and an Extended Care Unit.

"We're taking ownership to heart at Coronado Hospital," said Norman Knox, administrator of the facility. "As owners, we know that our success depends on offering the highest-quality medical care to this community. As your neighbors, we want to provide the kind of personal attention that you deserve when you come to our hospital."

Coronado Hospital became part of the largest employee-owned company in the country in September 1987 when HealthTrust, Inc. was created. The $2.4 billion company has more than 20,000 employee-owners at 94 hospitals around the country. "

"The anniversary gives us an opportunity to thank our employees and this community for their support. Without the backing of the people of Pampa, our hospital can not succeed in the long-term," said Knox. "Last year, a record number of hospitals closed around the country, with many of them in smaller, rural areas.

"Some healthcare experts predict that by the year 2000 - just ten years from now - almost 40% of this country's hospitals will be closed or used for other purposes," said Knox. "And unfortunately it's the smaller communities that will be hardest hit. We want to work with the people of Pampa to make sure that they always have access to high-quality medical care."

Playing jazz just a family thing for Branford Marsalis

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Two of the Marsalis brothers are holding down two of the top spots on Cashbox magazine's traditional jazz chart.

As August ended, trumpeter Wynton Marsalis' The Majesty of the Blues was No. 2 and saxophonist Branford Marsalis' Trio Jeepy was No. 4. As September began, Trio Jeepy was No. 3 and Majesty was No. 4. Columbia Records was happy either way; both brothers record for Columbia.

Trombonist Delfeayo Marsalis, third performing son of pianist Ellis Marsalis, has produced all four of Branford's records and the sound track for Do the Right Thing. Delfeayo has just graduated from the Berklee College of Music, so he isn't, as yet, giving his brothers competition on the best-selling charts. Neither is 11-year-old Jason, who plays drums.

The family seldom performs together, Branford says. He, Wynton and their father were on one side of Fathers and Sons, playing their father's post-bop style. Chico and Von Freeman played on the other side of the Columbia record.

Often, Wynton and Branford go in and out of an airport on the same day, missing each other by a few hours or minutes. His father opened some shows for Branford this summer. Was that fun?

"I much prefer to open for him," says Branford. "I feel weird having my Dad open for me. After the gig is fun. It is good to be around him and talk to him. I love him. He talks music. I don't like to. I try to talk about sports and parenting. We wind up talking about music."

'I feel weird having my Dad open for me. After the gig is fun. It is good to be around him and talk to him.'

Branford says he doesn't follow the sales figures of his albums now, though he did when he started recording. "When I accepted the challenge of playing jazz, I made a conscious decision to play a music that wasn't going to sell a lot of records. I decided to practice what I preach."

Branford Marsalis

As a teen-ager in New Orleans, he was in a band that covered hits. "I was considering pop music up until I was 19. I had been playing rhythm 'n' blues and soul hits. When I moved to Boston, I played in that kind of band. I was at the Berklee School one and a half years. Then I played a thing with Art Blakey when he came to Boston and that was it. I was hooked on jazz."

'I was considering pop music up until I was 19 ... Then I played a thing with Art Blakely ... I was hooked on jazz.'

He and Wynton haven't felt like rivals, he says. "We never had that. He was doing what he was doing, and I was doing what I was doing."

Trio Jeepy was recorded in January 1988, without piano. "The piano got in the way. Most piano players have a tendency toward a harmonic and rhythmic style which is very constrained. If they don't lock you in harmonically, forcing you to play the chords they're playing, they almost certainly lock you in rhythmically. When you have two guys playing rhythm at once, it tends to clash."

Asked whether he'll tour without a pianist, Branford laughs, "That comes later." Then he says about pianist Kenny Kirkland, the only holdover from his old band in his new band, "I have the best piano player in the world right now."

Branford once did a tour in Sting's band and may play on some tracks in Genesis' next album. He plays on Fight the Power by Public Enemy, which is on the rhythm 'n' blues best-selling singles chart. "I play behind pop people according to what I like," he says.

As for performing in movies, which he has done in Here Comes the Night, School Daze and Throw Mama from the Train, he says: "It's a great diversion, but it gets away from what I want to do. When I'm sick of music, I might want to try it more. I have no movies upcoming."

He's composing more. "I didn't do as much in the early years because I wanted to learn how to play. Writing songs helps me develop a new way of playing. I play melodies on my songs I would not have played in just a solo."

He still lives in Brooklyn with his wife and 3-year-old son, a baseball fan. "I'm real lenient with him. A strong parent to me is a human parent. I rebelled completely against that authoritarian stuff.

"If it was up to him, he'd eat cookies all day. I tell him what he'll eat but when he says he's finished, he's finished. He knows better than me when he's not hungry."

'If you close the door, you open a door to outside influences. Why should a kid listen to you if you won't listen to him? And I definitely believe in letting them know you love them.'

Branford says he also believes in dialogues between parents and children. "If you close the door, you open a door to outside influences. Why should a kid listen to you if you won't listen to him? And I definitely believe in letting them know you love them.

"My parents created an independent attitude inside me and a knowledge of right and wrong. I didn't appreciate a lot of things that happened to me as a child, but I didn't feel like I wasn't loved."

Bruce Willis trades his smirks for an angst-ridden character

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Smirks, wisecracks, lazy charm. Bruce Willis calls them his tools, what carried him through four seasons of Moonlighting and last year's hit action film, Die Hard.

But the 34-year-old actor is tired of just playing for laughs. Now, thinking about how future audiences will remember him, Willis balances his admiration for the Three Stooges with a desire to portray enduring dramatic characters.

So he welcomed the chance to start from scratch with Warner Bros. In Country, playing the troubled Vietnam War veteran, Emmett.

"I was pretty scared, and I didn't really know if I could do it," Willis said in a recent interview.

"Look, if I had done 4 1/2 years of a guy who was angst-ridden and was carrying around a lot of weight, I would have waltzed through this thing. But on each step I had to make sure I was taking the right step."

The boyish grin and urbane looks that Willis had as David Addison in Moonlighting has disappeared for In Country. Instead, there's a "Fu Manchu" mustache, long, slicked-back hair and a dull, pained expression in his eyes. Fans may be shocked, but Willis sees it as part of his job.

Can Bruce Willis change his wisecracks and songs for some serious acting?

"That's what actors are supposed to be doing. If you're not taking risks, you might as well work in TV. TV doesn't require you to take any risk, that's why I went after this film," he said.

"I had just done 4 1/2 years of playing the same guy, the same character. I wasn't taking any risk at all. I wanted to do something I wasn't sure I could do."

Television is a bad memory for Willis, who insists only his contract kept him from leaving Moonlighting after the second season. He worried that the public would know him only for one role, that his abilities would be eaten up from the demands of producing new material each week.

"Glenn (Gordon Caron, executive producer) said after the first year we'd come to a point where there's nothing left to say. He knew even then. It was bound to happen. It's a very cyclical thing," Willis said.

"You're just pouring yourself into this thing. I was concerned I was going to use all my stuff on this show, that we were going to exhaust ourselves."

Emmett was like an old friend for Willis, who met several Vietnam vets while bartending in his native New Jersey. Like Sam (Emily Lloyd), Emmett's teen-age niece in In Country who begs her uncle to talk about the war, Willis wanted to learn what happened in Vietnam.

"I've been researching this character for a long time," he said. "I have always been fascinated with the war itself, the effect it had on American guys. I know what makes most of us what we are, but I saw there was something different, that they saw something there that freaked them out.

"I found things I had no idea I was ever going to find. I found out things about myself, things about the Vietnam War."

What's new in books ...

BILLY BUCK HIGHTRAIL'S MYSTERIOUS MAGICAL GARDEN. Roy Doty. (American Institute for Cancer).

By BRENT LAYMON
Associated Press Writer

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — After writing and illustrating 140 books for children, Roy Doty knew that a young audience probably couldn't be scared into giving up french fries, hamburgers and other fatty foods to help prevent cancer later in life.

So, when the American Institute for Cancer Research asked him to do a children's book on the importance of good nutrition in the battle against the disease, he turned to his stock in trade: humor.

The fruit of his labor, Billy Buck Hightrail's Mysterious Magical Garden, is now available from the Washington-based institute. The book represents the institute's first attempt to reach youngsters before they fall into the bad eating habits that some scientists say are a significant cause of cancer among adults, according to Christine Murray, the institute's vice president.

Cancer is not mentioned anywhere in the book, which tells the story of a very old but very robust world adventurer, and two children, Debbie and Danny Dee, who follow him around town trying to learn the source of his boundless energy.

"There's no reason to mention it," said Doty, whose humorous illustrations have appeared in scores of publications, including Newsweek and Popular Science. His best-known children's book is probably Tales of a Fourth Grade Nothing, which he wrote and illustrated.

"We're just talking about good health, so you can walk like Billy Buck Hightrail, so you don't get pooped; you feel good, you live a long time, get to be as old as he is."

Hightrail reveals his secret when he takes the children to his mystery garden, where exotic trees bear all kinds of fruits, vegetables and high-fiber snacks like popcorn, and ooze oatmeal and other whole-grain cereals instead of maple syrup.

A couple of less-wholesome trees sprout treats like chocolate cake and greasy french fries just to remind Hightrail of things it's best to stay away from.

Hightrail gives the children a series of word games to emphasize the importance of eating things like carrots and spinach, along with a quiz to assess how well their kitchens at home are stocked.

Why a book about cancer directed at third- and fourth-graders?

"Because of their eating habits as they get older," said Doty, who is himself rather rotund.

"Have you seen teen-agers at the fast-food places?" he said. "That's where they eat. They eat breakfast at the fast-food place, they eat lunch at the fast-food place, they eat dinner at the fast-food place."

Murray said the non-profit organization has so far aimed its nutrition education programs at adults, but decided to go after children because childhood is when eating habits are established.

"Children are healthy and they are not at the point where they are worried about being sick," she said. "We're just trying to help them establish good habits that will help them later in life."

One study by a team of British researchers estimated that 35 percent of all cancer deaths in the United States could be blamed on the high-fat, low-fiber diet popular among Americans.

The National Academy of Sciences recently recommended that Americans reduce the fat content of their diets, from the current 40 percent to 30 percent, and increase the consumption of fruits, vegetables and whole-grain cereals.

(Two copies of the book can be obtained free of charge by writing the American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, DC 20069. Each additional copy costs 25 cents.)

Subsidy cut could aid corn farmers

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study by the Agriculture Department suggests that a phase-out of worldwide farm subsidies and trade barriers could put American corn farmers in an even stronger position to dominate international trade in coarse grains.

Nearly three-fourths of the world's coarse grains — corn, barley, sorghum, oats and rye — are grown in the United States, Soviet Union, European Economic Community, China and Eastern Europe.

The United States alone produces about 30 percent of the total, mostly as corn, which as a livestock "feed grain" is the main ingredient for producing meat, poultry and dairy products for American consumers.

One of the U.S. goals in the current Uruguay Round of negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is to eventually eliminate agricultural trade barriers, including subsidies that would impair free trade.

The report, one of a series by the department's Economic Research Service, is in the October issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine.

"While there are adjustment costs involved in moving away from protectionism, both theory and research results suggest that the benefits of free trade outweigh the costs," the report said. "But because there never has been free trade in agriculture, the findings in these articles are, of necessity, speculative."

If the move toward free trade is successful, it "would push up the volume of world coarse grain trade and increase grain prices," the report said.

"U.S. exports likely would increase in response to rising demand," the report said. "In turn, market receipts for U.S. producers would go up as world prices rose."

However, it added, total returns to farmers would decline, including losses in government payments — unless some kind of "decoupled" income support was provided.

Coarse grain production in the United States would probably increase as much of the land idled under annual federal acreage programs returned to production, the report said. And U.S. livestock producers would likely boost output to help fill a rising world demand for meat.

"World meat consumption would go up as the EEC and Japan removed trade barriers, which would lower their domestic consumer meat prices," the report said. "More U.S. livestock production would boost the demand for U.S. coarse grains."

As a result of a move away from protectionism, world coarse grain production "would shift away from inefficient producers to more efficient ones," the report said. That would occur within individual countries as well as around the world.

"The U.S., Argentina and Thailand, all efficient producers, probably would increase output," the report said. "However, production likely would decline in the EEC, Japan and Taiwan."

Over the long haul, coarse grain production probably would increase because of the rise in world livestock prices. The report assumed that the rise in meat demand and prices would be triggered by a growing population and rising incomes, particularly in the Third World.

"Because of lower domestic coarse grain prices, EEC farmers probably would reduce production," the report said. "But the size of the adjustment would depend on how relative prices changed and how much land went out of production."

Livestock producers in the EEC would increase their feed demands, which could force the 12-nation trading bloc into becoming a net importer of coarse grains once again.

China, the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe — the other major producers of coarse grains — probably will not participate in this round of GATT trade reform, the report said.

As it is now, the United States, EEC, Argentina, Canada, China, Australia, Thailand and South Africa account for more than 90 percent of the world's coarse grain exports. The U.S. share was 55 percent in the 1985-87 period.

Some of the major exporters also are importers, and there have been shifts. For example, the report said, since 1985 the EEC and China have changed from being net importers to net exporters.

The biggest coarse grain importers include Japan, EEC, Soviet Union, Saudi Arabia, South Korea, Taiwan, Eastern Europe and Mexico. These account for nearly three-fourths of the world total coarse grain imports.

PHEASANT HUNTS

Most of us realize the economic climate in our area needs boosting. I have been approached on what the possibilities are for some organized pheasant hunts in our greater Pampa area.

For anything like this to get started, it requires willing landowners who have plenty of pheasants. There are several different approaches to take on pheasant hunts, such as community organizations to individual landowners being the lessee and receiving the direct income from the hunters.

The economic fallout from having a town-full of weekend hunters is what I was approached about – something that could help bring tourist or "hunter" dollars to our areas.

Like I said earlier, the first requirement is interested landowners or operators with plenty of pheasants. If you would be interested in discussing such an endeavor as this, please give me a call – 669-8033 or 665-6236 at home.

Calling me would certainly not mean any obligation on your part but a willingness to brainstorm about this type of activity.

FROST AND PRUSSIC ACID POISONING

Mother Nature almost played a mean trick on us last Sunday. There was light to medium frost scattered over a wide area. This sent cold shills through a lot of farmers, as we have a lot of late sorghum in the area that is still a long ways from being ready to harvest.

Most of the sorghum I have seen still has around half or more of the leaf area still green. In these situations, I believe the sorghum will go ahead and mature fairly well if we don't get another freeze soon.

Cattlemen that may be interested in grazing plants of the sorghum group (grain sorghum, sudan, hybrid sudan and Johnson grass) have a potential for producing toxic levels of prussic (hydrocyanic) acid. Cyanide-producing compounds occurring in living plant cells are converted to prussic acid when cells are ruptured due to frost, mechanical damage, etc.

Prussic acid is one of the most potent toxins in nature. As ruminants consume plant materials containing cyanide-producing compounds, prussic acid is liberated in the rumen, absorbed into the bloodstream and carried to body tissues, where it interferes with oxygen utilization.

If toxin is absorbed rapidly enough, the animal soon dies from respiratory paralysis. When lethal amounts are consumed, dead animals may be found without visible symptoms of poisoning. Symptoms from smaller amounts include labored breathing, irregular pulse, frothing at the mouth and staggering.

The risk from potentially dangerous forages may be reduced by following certain management practices in the fall:

1. Do not graze for two weeks after a non-killing frost.
2. Do not graze after a killing frost until plant material is dry (the toxin is usually dissipated within 48 hours).
3. Do not graze at night when frost is likely.

Animals affected by prussic acid can be treated with some degree of success if they are detected soon after poisoning. The dosage and method of administration are critical and best conducted by a veterinarian.

WHEAT SITUATION

A lot of wheat has been planted now. As this wheat comes up, farmers need to be making fairly frequent checks on it.

If you notice any decline in its general appearance, then close inspection for various insect pests should be made immediately. From previous reports, we could be having problems with greenbugs, Russian aphids, armyworms and possibly flea beetles.

Call me if you suspect any of these problem insects.

Study says rural bridges in poor shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and others who travel rural America for business and pleasure stand a good chance of confronting bridges that are defective or outmoded, according to an Agriculture Department study.

The department's Office of Transportation said its analysis was derived from the national bridge inventory by the Department of Transportation. As of last Dec. 31, there were 578,094 highway bridges, with 81 percent classified as rural.

According to the USDA report, of the 468,095 rural bridges, 26 percent were classified as "structurally deficient" and 20 percent as functionally obsolete.

The remaining 54 percent were listed as "neither structurally deficient nor functionally obsolete."

For the most part, the rural bridges are the responsibility of counties and other local units of government, the report said.

Wesley R. Kriebel, deputy administrator of the USDA agency, said the classification of bridges as structurally deficient or functionally obsolete "does not necessarily mean the bridges are unsafe."

Kriebel said bridges classified as structurally deficient by the Federal Highway Administration are "either closed or restricted to lighter vehicles only because of deteriorated structural components."

Kriebel added that functionally obsolete refers "to the age of the bridge, and that, too, doesn't necessarily mean the bridge is unsafe."

The report showed that Missouri has the most structurally deficient rural bridges, and Texas has the most that are functionally obsolete. Arizona "appears to have the most adequate rural bridges," the report said.

On the average, the age of all U.S. bridges was found to be 35.5 years, including 36.6 years for rural bridges and 30.9 years for urban.

"Half of all rural bridges are less than 50 feet in length, while half of urban bridges are less than 123 feet," the report said.

In a further breakdown, the report said bridges in "agricultural significant counties, have more structural and functional inadequacies than in the other rural counties." They are also older, averaging 37.2 years, it said.

The report said counties and other local governments are responsible for 56 percent of all rural bridges but are responsible for only 38 percent of the city bridges.

Nationwide, 59 percent of the 468,095 rural bridges are located off the federal highway system. A third are in six states: Iowa, Ohio, Kansas, Texas, Illinois and Oklahoma.

In contrast, only 23 percent of all urban bridges are located off the federally subsidized road system.

The report said the remaining 41 percent of the rural bridges located on federal highway systems carry nearly 90 percent of the average daily traffic, or ADT.

"It is important to note, however, that ADT in and of itself does not measure the economic value of a bridge," the report said. "A third of all rural on-system (federal) bridges are in seven states — Texas, Kansas, Ohio, Illinois, California, Missouri and Mississippi."

Martin "Buzz" Fitzpatrick Jr., administrator of USDA's Office of Transportation, said in a statement that although responsibility varies, most responsibility for the below-standard bridges lies with local governments.

"Various and complex bridge funding and management arrangements exist throughout the United States," he said. "This means that future improvements will require continued intergovernmental support, along with policies that acknowledge the importance of rural bridges to the nation's economy."

Copies of the report, Rural Bridges: An Assessment Based Upon the National Bridge Inventory, are available from: USDA-OT, P.O. Box 96575, Washington, D.C. 20090-6575. Or telephone 202 653-6305.

States to get forest share payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says preliminary payments totaling $248 million are going out to states as their share of national forest sales receipts collected this fiscal year.

F. Dale Robertson, chief of the Forest Service, said total state shares for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 are expected to be more than $331 million, up from $318 million last year.

By law, 25 percent of the revenues collected by the USDA agency for the sale of timber and other use of national forest resources must be returned to the states where the forests are located. The states are required to use the money for schools and roads.

The 10 largest preliminary payments will go to Oregon, $118 million; California, $39 million; Washington, $33 million; Idaho, $7 million; Arkansas, $6.2 million; Montana, $5.4 million; Arizona, $5.3 million; Alaska, $3.2 million; Pennsylvania, $2.8 million; and Mississippi, $2.6 million.

Entomology society marks 100th birthday

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a caricature, the entomologist is often portrayed as a wispy, bespectacled man wearing tropical shorts and pith helmet chasing exotic butterflies with a long-handled net.

Sure, some of them do things like that. But many others perform painstaking work that non-entomologists would see as sheer drudgery — the meticulous slow work of scientists.

"They save us a lot of grief," says Henry Becker III, an information specialist in the Agriculture Department's main science agency, the Agricultural Research Service. "They certainly make life easier for us by studying these insects, the good ones as well as the bad ones."

Becker, in a recent telephone interview from his Beltsville, Md., office, is one of those who attended a two-day conference in Washington last Tuesday and Wednesday to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Entomological Society of America.

Entomologists are intense about their experiments, he said. For example, when they observe a parasite lay eggs in a destructive beetle, for example, "it's like they're watching their kids do a virtuoso concert ... they really get excited."

But some entomological research "is so plodding, such as categorizing and cataloging insects," Becker said. "But, yet, they're very, very interested in what they're doing."

Today's society dates from the founding in 1889 of the American Association of Economic Entomologists, and the 1906 beginning of the Entomological Society of America. The two were merged, adopting the latter's name, in 1953.

The society, a non-profit educational group, says it is the largest international association of entomologists, with more than 8,700 members.

Becker, who claims his only experience with entomology is "swatting flies and spraying cockroaches," said the society had an attendance of around 350 at its centennial symposium last week. Some members from Britain, Canada and Australia attended the sessions held at the Smithsonian Institution.

Julius J. Menn, associate deputy area director for the Plant Sciences Institute at USDA's research center in Beltsville, said the symposium is unique in that it was directed at an intended audience of "decision makers who are not familiar with entomology."

Menn said the sessions were geared to legislators, federal and state officials, industrial representatives, news media and other non-entomological persons.

Allen L. Steinhauer, head of the University of Maryland's department of entomology, College Park, said more than 15 authorities "on all aspects of insect-related research worldwide" were on the program.

In the first session, Carroll M. Williams of Harvard University talked about "unraveling the secrets of insect life." Williams is a pioneer researcher of insect development biology.

"He developed several novel techniques for performing surgery on insects," the society said. "One, which uses carbon dioxide anesthesia, was adopted the world over."

Thomas Eisner, Cornell University, is the world's leading authority on insect defenses and communication. His topic was the insect as a chemist, describing the ingenious ways insects use odors, poisons, plants and disguises to repel or injure a predator.

SWCD board election set

An election for a director to serve in Zone 5 on the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation Board is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 12.

The election will be held at the Gray County Courthouse Annex on East Frederic in Pampa, announced Tony Smitherman, board chairman.

State law decrees that to be eligible to vote in a soil and water conservation district director's election, a person must own agricultural land within the district where the election is being held. The person also must live a county all or any part of which is in the district, and the voter must be at least 18 years old, Smitherman said.

Legal qualifications state that a candidate for the office must own land in the zone he represents, be at least 18 years of age and be actively engaged in farming or ranching. He must also live in a county all or part of which is in the district.

Soil and water conservation directors serve four-year terms of office.

Zone 5 of the district includes an area from a line beginning on the north county line in the west line of Section 222 and taking in the following area: generally the northwest quarter of Gray County. For more details on exact boundaries, come by the SCS Office at the Gray County Courthouse Annex.

Current members of the board of directors of the Gray County SWCD are Tony Smitherman of McLean, chairman, representing Zone 3; Troy Ritter of Grandview, vice chairman, representing Zone 1; Earl Smith of Pampa, secretary, representing Zone 5; David Bowers of Pampa, member, representing Zone 4; and Jim Shaw of Alanreed, member, representing Zone 2.

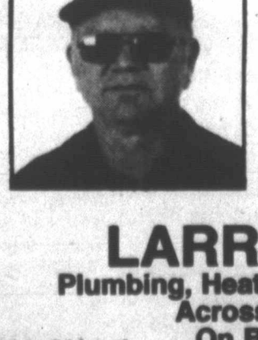

The purpose of the Gray County SWCD, with headquarters in Pampa, is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on farm and ranch lands within the district as a voice for farmers and ranchers on conservation matters.

The district board of directors coordinates the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations and has authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental agencies and private concerns to carry out its purposes.

All conservation programs managed by the district are of a voluntary nature to the landowner or operator.

El Paso Electric making changes to avoid losses

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — A little less than two years ago, the key word at El Paso Electric Co. was "diversify" as the utility, flush with $91 million in cash left over from the sale of its interest in a nuclear plant, looked to plug into profits from other industries.

But the rules changed and profits from thrifts and various manufacturing companies didn't materialize, changing El Paso Electric from a cash-rich buyer to a money-losing seller.

"We're taking our losses this year, so when we go again next year, we can begin to report better earnings and a better financial picture for our customers," said David Wiggs, elevated to chairman this year.

The utility took a $24.42 million writedown earlier this year because of losses in its investment subsidiary. Dividend payments have been suspended, possibly through 1991.

El Paso Electric, which serves about 236,000 customers in El Paso, the Rio Grande Valley in West Texas and southern New Mexico, reported a net loss for the 12 months ending June 30 of $59.03 million on revenues of $404.32 million.

Critics are concerned ratepayers will be hurt by the investments gone bad because El Paso had planned to use profits from the investments to pay $11 million of the $66 million annual lease payment on Unit 2 of Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station.

Without those profits, the utility must find another way to pay that bill, but Wiggs promises shareholders, not ratepayers, will bear the cost.

El Paso Electric already had made some non-utility investments before it got about $120 million for Unit 2 at the three-unit nuclear station near Phoenix in 1987.

After paying off some debt, officials were left with about $91 million.

With that money, El Paso bought stock in two savings and loans, lured a New Jersey lamp manufacturer to the border city and bought a Houston oil drilling supplies company, a California furniture manufacturer and a local steel manufacturer.

Returning to the utility-only business began in February, when the utility began shopping two downtown buildings it had bought and renovated through its Franklin Land and Resources subsidiary.

The purchases were supposed to help revitalize downtown, but the company took a $36 million loss this year on its $70 million investment, saying 1986 tax law changes severely reduced the amount of losses the company could apply against taxes.

Also up for sale:

— Westwood Lighting Group Inc., a Patterson, N.J. lamp manufacturer that moved to El Paso when the utility bought half ownership.

— EnerServ Products Inc., a Houston oil drilling supplies manufacturer.

— B.P. John, a Santa Ana, Calif. furniture manufacturer that was supposed to move to Las Cruces, N.M., but didn't because of the cost.

The utility also is selling its stock in Commercial Federal Savings of Omaha, Neb. at a $28 million loss. In June 1988, the utility reported losses of $20 million in insurance annuities bought from a company with no licenses.

El Paso Electric, which won't reveal the asking prices, said it hopes to be able to recover its investment, but analysts expect the company to lose money on the deals.

The only holding the utility has retained is Border Steel Mills Inc. in nearby Vinton, which it bought in 1987.

"Financially, they're on shaky ground right now," said Nathan Partain, analyst for Duff & Phelps Inc. of Chicago. "There're a lot of things on their plate that they've got to do something with."

The investments were supposed to help build El Paso Electric's rate base and lower rates to customers, he said. "But when you have start up businesses, businesses in their infancy or relocation, you need seed money to get them going and (El Paso Electric) doesn't have the funds available to make the investment work out in the longer term," Partain said.

Norman Gordon, who represents the city in rate cases before the state Public Utility Commission, said sour investments likely will mean higher rates for customers.

"The utility isn't making any dividend payments. The question is, where is the money going to come from?" Gordon said.

Wiggs said the company hopes to get some return on the sale of the investments, but acknowledges the sales won't cover the entire lease payment costs.

"After we get through with all this exit plan, (the least payment) will be an ongoing expense that is not covered in rates," Wiggs said.

"We hope we can make some money ... and reduce some debt and offset some of that, but that is an ongoing expense that ratepayers will not pay for and it will be a company expense," he said.

El Paso Electric spent $1.5 billion helping build its 15.8 percent share of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station. The Public Utility Commission allowed the company to charge Texas customers for Units 1 and 2 and agreed last month that the utility's sale and lease-back of 40 percent of its ownership of Unit 3 is in the public interest. The city is appealing that decision.

"The city considered those transactions not to be in the best interest of ratepayers because the cost of the transaction would ultimately be higher then if they hadn't done the sale lease-back," Gordon said.

Wiggs said the utility's future financial health depends on how much of the cost of building Unit 3 the PUC allows the utility to pass on to ratepayers.

El Paso Electric will file the third in a series of four rate hike requests related to the building costs of Unit 1 and 2 next month. The Unit 3 case should be filed in the spring.

Police clear Plano coach of indecency

PLANO (AP) — Police in this Dallas suburb have declined to file a criminal complaint against a high school coach after a 16-year-old girl claimed to have been fondled by him, officials said.

Plano East Senior High basketball coach Gary Moseley had been placed on administrative leave on Sept. 20 following allegations from the girl that Moseley had touched her breast when the two were alone in a school office on Aug. 22.

The girl, who is a student at Plano East, said she had been talking to Moseley during cheerleading practice when the alleged incident occurred.

Police Lt. H.W. Bryan said Friday investigators determined, based on statements from the girl, that the offense of indecency with a child was not committed.

But police said the case could be pursued by filing a Class C misdemeanor assault charge through municipal court. The student told The Dallas Morning News that her parents plan to do that.

Moseley, a teacher for 18 years in the Plano Independent School District, could not be reached for comment.
