City discloses tower term sheet amendment

Amendment confirms Energy Tower high-rise developers to carry out demolition

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Energy Tower developers will be the ones to demolish the building that stands at the 53-story skyscraper's site, as confirmed in a November document from the city of Midland.

On Nov. 6, the city of Midland and Energy Tower LLC agreed to an amendment to the Sept. 17 term sheet that outlined the premise for the upcoming developer's agreement. Other than putting the responsibility, including funding, of the city-owned former Midland County Courthouse demolition to the developer, the amendment agreement also includes wording that gives developer Energy Related Properties the option to do monthly due diligence extensions for up to three months for $100,000 per month and the right for ERP to install project signs around the construction site.

And as previously reported on Thursday, ERP submitted on Wednesday evening a proposed demolition agreement to the city after Mayor Jerry Morales requested that demolition and asbestos removal begin sooner than the Sept. 30 due diligence deadline. Morales previously said he contacted ERP to expedite the demolition because events, including the Star Spangled Salute and Tall City Blues Fest, take place at Centennial Plaza in July.

"Thinking of the big picture, there are two events downtown in the summer and we are working with those groups to ensure that, if we can move forward on the project quicker and satisfy the groups, then we can do so," Morales said on Thursday.

The demolition agreement, separate from the anticipated developer's agreement, solely deals with the demolition of the courthouse.

The agreement was not available for disclosure because the city will have to review the agreement and then subsequently put it through a City Council vote at an unspecified date. City Attorney Keith Stretcher said the demolition agreement will have to go through a City Council vote because the demolition requires an allocation of funds.

The demolition paragraph in the amendment document states that in the event that ERP decides not to move forward with the construction of Energy Tower but having already beared the cost of the demolition then the city shall reimburse the demolition cost to ERP.

The city has yet to work on its end of the developer's agreement, the document that firms the details listed in the term sheet and amendments. Morales previously said they are waiting for ERP to announce that they are moving forward with the project.

"If the asbestos can be removed, and the events that are going on can be safe, then we will move forward, if ERP is ready to move forward," Morales said Thursday.

BLOWOUT TURNS FATAL

According to the city public information officer, the driver was ejected from the vehicle and pronounced dead at the scene.

Wreck puts count at one fatal per week

A Crosbyton man was pronounced dead at the scene of a wreck on Interstate 20 on Thursday afternoon near the Horseshoe complex, bringing this year's average to one vehicle-related fatality per week on roads inside the county.

Robert Elvis Walters, 58, was driving east in an oilfield service truck at about 4:30 p.m. when a tire blew out, causing him to be ejected and the truck to roll over, according to a Midland Police Department officer on scene.

The commercial truck was still resting on its side two hours after the crash and MPD was still investigating the official cause, the officer said. As of 6:30 p.m., the south service road remained closed just west of the Cotton Flat Road exit.

Craddick to comptroller: Don't release funds to CAF museum

■ State rep calls for audit after Midland College board votes to release half of funding

By Rachael Gleason
rgleason@mrt.com

A letter to Texas Comptroller Susan Combs shows state Rep. Tom Craddick called for $335,000 allocated to the Commemorative Air Force's American Airpower Heritage Museum to remain in the state treasury.

The Midland College board of trustees which is required by law to disburse state money only to entities within its taxing jurisdiction, voted Tuesday in a 5-4 split decision to release the first half of about $710,000 in state funds.

Craddick

Craddick called for the state to keep the second half and perform an audit of the CAF, which voted last year to move its headquarters from Midland to a larger metropolitan area.

He also sent a letter to the Midland College board of trustees welcoming an independent audit of the state money.

MC President Steve Thomas said the college wants to support Craddick but first needs to determine whether it has the authority to perform an audit.

"If we do, we will," Thomas said. "We need to make sure we can do that."

Craddick warned the CAF last year that relocating could endanger state funding. He also warned Midland College that disbursing the money could call into question the legality of the appropriation, according to the letter.

CAF President and CEO Stephan Brown, who is also chief executive of the museum, made assurances to MC trustees Tuesday that the money would stay in Midland. He also said pulling funding would lead to the museum ceasing operations.

But Craddick isn't buying it.

"The CAF has not demonstrated that the state funding will be used solely in the junior college's taxing jurisdiction and solely at the museum for educational purposes per legislative intent and in compliance with state law," he states in the letter. "There is great responsibility that comes with receiving taxpayer dollars, and the CAF must demonstrate they are using state dollars in accordance with the law."

MPD officers cleared of shooting, return to duty

From staff reports

Two Midland Police Department officers are back on patrol after a ruling by a Midland County grand jury.

Officers Ciro Chairez and Anthony Corson returned to full duty Thursday after they were no-billed in connection with an officer-involved shooting incident that began on the Loop 250 north service road and ended near the Green Tree subdivision in the early morning of Feb. 17, said Sara Higgins, Midland's public information officer.

Police first encountered a maroon-colored Ford van, driven by 25-year-old Jamie Lee Perdue, traveling eastbound in the westbound lanes of the Loop 250 north service road near Midland Drive at about 2:13 a.m. Feb. 17. Officers conducted a traffic stop and ordered the driver to step out of the vehicle. Perdue did not comply and accelerated at a high rate of speed toward the officers, narrowly missing them. Officers Carson and Chairez fired rounds at the van as it drove at them before turning north onto Midland Drive.

Perdue failed to stop as officers pursued him in their squad cars, continuing on Midland Drive until the road reached a dead end. He drove the van through a barbed wire fence and attempted to hide from officers. When the officers, who had left their squad cars to pursue the driver on foot, located the vehicle, the suspect accelerated toward them again. Chairez fired shots as the van accelerated toward him before it continued west through a field. Officers found the vehicle abandoned in a field located north of the Green Tree subdivision and searched several hours for the unidentified suspect.

Perdue was located walking in an alley near Woodhollow and Oriole drives by an officer before 8 a.m. later that day. Perdue was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital for minor injuries and was released the same day. He was booked into Midland County Central Detention Center on two charges of aggravated assault against a public servant, one charge of evading arrest with a motor vehicle and one charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, according to police records.

The two officers were put on administrative leave immediately following the Feb. 17 incident, per MPD protocol. They were placed on administrative duty after they cleared by an internal MPD review board. A Texas Rangers investigation into the incident was also presented to the grand jury.

MPD: Man fires gun inside central Midland restaurant

From staff reports

An El Paso man is suspected of firing a pistol inside Charlas Restaurant and Bar near Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road on Tuesday night and then pointing it at a group of people inside the bar.

Ivan Macias, 30, was arrested after police arrived at the bar and found him sleeping and "snoring heavily," according to an arrest affidavit.

Macias

Several witnesses at the bar told a Midland Police Department officer that Macias had been cut off and asked to leave the bar. He reportedly came back about an hour later and pulled out a handgun and pointed it at another man, the affidavit said.

Macias then fired a shot at the ceiling, which scared the customers inside the bar. A group of patrons got up and moved to another side of the bar, the report said.

Macias then pointed the gun at the group, while laughing. The gun failed to fire another round, and another man was able to grab him from behind and begin choking him. Macias lost consciousness shortly after, the affidavit said.

Police arrested him on suspicion of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, a second-degree felony. The man has since been released from custody on an unknown bond amount, as of press time Thursday.

If convicted, Macias could face up to 20 years in prison.

Ousted top lawman admits taking bribe

Associated Press

McALLEN — A fired South Texas sheriff's commander whose indictment carried federal prosecutors a step closer to his boss pleaded guilty Thursday to accepting a bribe.

Former Hidalgo County sheriff's commander Jose Padilla entered the plea in federal court in McAllen after reaching a plea agreement with prosecutors. In return, drug trafficking and money laundering counts are being dropped, said Angela Dodge, spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's office in McAllen.

Padilla admitted taking cash from Tomas "El Gallo" Gonzalez, who has been accused of trafficking in drugs in 2011 and 2012. In return, he ran a variety of errands for Gonzalez and kept him informed of law enforcement activities.

Padilla can be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison and fined up to $250,000 or twice the amount he received. He remains free on bond pending sentencing July 17.

Padilla was second-in-command to longtime Hidalgo County Sheriff Lupe Trevino, who resigned March 28 and pleaded guilty to money laundering this week.

Padilla's plea is the latest in a series of arrests and convictions of law enforcement officers in Hidalgo County in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

In December 2012, one of Trevino's sons who was a police officer in Mission and two of Trevino's deputies were arrested in a federal drug sting. The three were part of a Hidalgo County and Mission Police Department joint drug task force.

Months after the arrests, they pleaded guilty to participating in a conspiracy to steal drug loads and resell them to another trafficker. Nine other lawmen, including Jonathan Trevino, the sheriff's son, have been convicted on drug charges in connection to that task force, known as the Panama Unit.

Abbott campaign accepting bitcoin contributions

Attorney General Greg Abbott's campaign for governor says it will accept contributions made with the bitcoin virtual currency.

Abbott on Thursday called bitcoins, a decentralized digital currency, symbolic of free-market principles.

The Republican's campaign said it would accept bitcoin as in-kind contributions. Like traditional contributions, bitcoin donors will be required to submit names, addresses, employer and occupation. All bitcoin contributions will be reported on campaign finance reports.

Bitcoins were created in 2009 by a mysterious figure or group known as Satoshi Nakamoto and are used for transactions across borders without third parties such as banks. They have also become an investment craze.

The Internal Revenue Service issued guidance last month concluding that bitcoins can only be taxed as property and are not legal tender.

Abortion doctors sue to recover admitting rights

Two doctors who perform abortions have sued a Dallas hospital alleging that their admitting privileges were illegally revoked after a court upheld strict new Texas abortion restrictions.

Dr. Lamar Robinson and Dr. Jasbir Ahluwalia perform abortions on their own time, away from the hospital.

A Texas law approved last summer requires doctors to have hospital admitting privileges within 30 miles of where they perform abortions.

University General Hospital in Dallas originally granted both doctors admitting privileges. But on March 27, a 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel found the rules constitutional.

The suit filed Thursday alleges the doctors had admitting privileges revoked four days later. They seek a court order restoring their admitting privileges but no monetary damages.

Texas seizes polygamist group's secluded ranch

Associated Press

ELDORADO — The secluded Texas ranch where followers of imprisoned polygamist Warren Jeffs lived in near isolation was seized by state agents on Thursday, nearly six years after FBI agents raided the property and removed hundreds of children amid child sex abuse allegations.

The Texas Department of Public Safety said its agents took possession of the Yearning For Zion Ranch near Eldorado. In a statement, DPS said only eight adults were still living on the West Texas property and agreed to leave after meeting with agents. DPS said authorities helped them vacate the ranch and take an inventory.

Jeffs is serving life in prison after he was convicted in 2011 of sexually assaulting two girls he took as child brides. The ranch was owned by his Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, a radical offshoot of mainstream Mormonism whose roughly 10,000 followers believe polygamy brings exaltation in heaven. They see Jeffs as God's spokesman on Earth.

The state asked a judge to allow the forfeiture, alleging that FLDS leaders financed a $1.1 million purchase of the land in 2003 through money laundering. It also cited sexual assaults committed on the property. Under Texas law, authorities can seize property that was used to commit or facilitate certain criminal conduct. A judge granted the state's request in January.

The FBI and police stormed the compound in April 2008, amid allegations that underage girls were being forced into bigamist marriages. In addition to temporarily taking the 439 children into protective custody, authorities seized mountains of documents, including Jeffs' personal journals. Images of church women in prairie dress and men in largely identical, long sleeve shirts flooded national TV airwaves.

All of the children were eventually returned. But about a dozen men, including Jeffs and other high-ranking FLDS lieutenants, were arrested on charges of sexual assault or bigamy and later convicted.

During Jeffs' trial, prosecutors used DNA evidence to show he fathered a child with a 15-year-old girl and played an audio recording of what they said was him sexually assaulting a 12-year-old girl. They also played tapes in which Jeffs was heard instructing young women on how to sexually please him and, thus, please God.

Jeffs also once faced criminal charges in Arizona and was convicted of accessory to rape in Utah in 2007. The church's traditional headquarters is along the Utah-Arizona border, but it established the Texas compound in 2004.

Judge won't order GM cars to be parked

Associated Press

DETROIT — A Texas federal judge has denied an emergency motion that would have forced General Motors to tell owners of more than 2 million recalled cars to stop driving them until the ignition switches are replaced.

U.S. District Judge Nelva Gonzales Ramos issued her order Thursday in Corpus Christi. Attorney Robert Hilliard, who represents some owners, had argued that the GM cars could lose power at any moment and expose their occupants to serious injury or death.

The plaintiffs in the case, Charles and Grace Silvas, own a 2006 Chevrolet Cobalt, which began experiencing sudden power loss beginning in 2010. They claimed that the problem occurred even after the ignition switch was replaced.

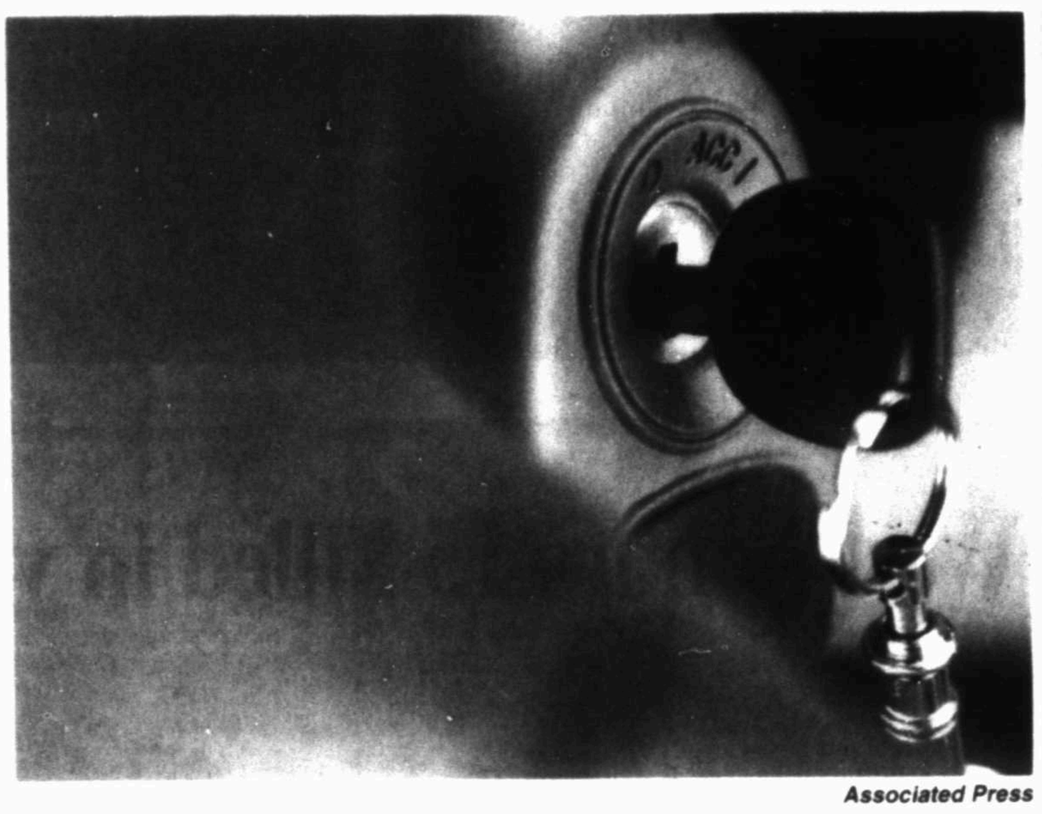
Ramos ruled that courts have deferred to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the government's auto safety watchdog, in cases like this. The agency, she wrote, is proceeding with the GM recall. The Silvases have the right to petition NHTSA for a "park it now" alert, but have not done so.

She also wrote that the Silvases' request should be granted only if necessary to preserve their rights before trial, and she was not convinced of that in this case.

So far GM has recalled 2.6 million older-model small cars worldwide because the ignition switches can unexpectedly slip out of the "run" position, shutting off the engine. If that happens, it knocks out power-assisted steering and brakes and disables the air bags. GM has said at least 13 people have died in crashes linked to the problem. It also has admitted knowing about the danger for more than a decade, but only began recalling the cars this February.

Hilliard, in a statement Thursday, said the judge's ruling put's people's lives at risk. "GM knows, as a fact, that by winning this hearing, people will die or be seriously injured in their defective vehicles," he said. The statement made no mention of an appeal.

GM had urged the court not to intervene and instead let the recall proceed. The carmaker said extensive testing had shown that if the recall instructions are followed, there is no risk that the ignition switch would fail.



Associated Press

This April 1 taken photo shows the ignition switch of a 2005 Chevrolet Cobalt in Alexandria, Va. A federal judge in Texas on Thursday denied an emergency motion that would have forced General Motors to tell owners of 2 million recalled cars to stop driving their vehicles until their ignition switches are repaired.

TODAY IN MIDLAND

Today is Good Friday

Good Friday occurs two days before Easter Sunday. It is the day when Christians commemorate Jesus Christ's crucifixion, which plays an important part in the Christian faith. It is not a federal holiday in the United States, although it is a state holiday in some states.

Good Friday is a day of mourning and quiet prayer for many Christians. The candles are often extinguished and statues, paintings and crosses may be draped in black, purple or gray cloth. Some Catholics treat Good Friday as a day of fasting, while others observe a partial fast involving the exclusion of meat.

Today in history

On April 18, 1934, the first laundromat (called a "Washateria") was opened by John F. Cantrell in Fort Worth; four electric washing machines were rented to members of the public on an hourly basis.

A statute with the prayer for firefighters sits in front of a cross outside the volunteer fire department Thursday in West that bears the names of some of those killed one year ago when a fertilizer plant exploded.

West honors 15 killed in year-ago explosion

Associated Press

WEST — As word spread of a spiraling fire at this Texas town's fertilizer plant, volunteers raced to protect families and elderly residents who lived nearby. Then came the deafening explosion.

Stores of ammonium nitrate exploded in a gigantic blast that registered as a small earthquake and sprayed debris miles away. Fifteen people were killed and more than 200 were injured by the blast, which caved in nearby homes and schools.

On Thursday, the one-year anniversary of the blast in West, hundreds of people crowded into a pavilion at the small town's fairgrounds. They held a moment of silence at 7:51 p.m., the exact time of the leveling blast at West Fertilizer Co., as photos of the 15 people killed were shown on a large screen.

"I turned around, and all I could see was a big column of smoke," Rev. Terry McElrath recalled. "And I thought, 'Somebody has died tonight.'"

A choir sang "Amazing Grace" on a stage filled with ferns and flickering candles that had been decorated by middle school students with messages on posters including "Rise Up, West" and "Pray for West."

Organizers said they wanted the ceremony to honor the past but also encourage looking to the future.

West was settled by Czech immigrants more than a century ago, and some of their grandchildren and great-grandchildren still call it home. Its Czech bakeries are well-known among drivers on Interstate 35 between Dallas and Austin. It's a place where even if residents "don't know you from Adam, you're welcome with a handshake and a hello," said Brian Uptmor, whose brother, Buck, was killed in the blast.

The signs of physical progress are obvious: Gone are the dozens of wrecked homes with tongue-in-cheek "For Sale!" messages spray-painted on their walls, and about 70 homes are finished or in the process of construction. Two new schools and a nursing home to replace those destroyed by the explosion will soon give displaced students and elderly residents a better sense of normalcy.

But residents are clear-eyed about the challenges ahead.

Payments from the city's long-term recovery fund, which received about $3.6 million in donations, have been delayed as organizers deal with unforeseen paperwork and federal regulations. The city's go-t- person for that sort of work, City Secretary Joey Pustejovsky, was a volunteer firefighter who died in the blast.

West Mayor Tommy Muska said he's closely watching the emotional toll the blast has taken on the city's 2,800 residents, especially victims who are still recovering.

Muska said Thursday afternoon that the town was considering rebuilding the plant, noting that West's economy revolved around the company — but he acknowledged it was a highly controversial idea. He also said he was negotiating with a flag manufacturer and a recycling company to set up operations in West.

Holly Harris lost her husband in the explosion, Dallas Fire-Rescue Capt. Kenneth Luckey Harris, who rushed to save other first responders when he saw smoke at the plant. She remains in their home outside West, where the fence now has a metal shield with her husband's initials above a fireman's hat.

She and others say they've chosen to push forward and not dwell on unanswered questions, such as what sparked the fire or what firefighters knew going in — or what could have been done to prevent it.

"It's just a choice that we've made that we're not going to be sad," she said before Thursday's ceremony. "I mean, we are sad at times, but we're going to try to make everything a happy situation and try to get on with our lives."

Michaels confirms breach of as many as 2.6M cards

Michaels Stores Inc. said Thursday that about 2.6 million cards, or about 7 percent of all debit and credit cards used at its namesake stores, may have been affected in a security breach.

The nation's largest arts and crafts chain said its subsidiary Aaron Brothers was also attacked, with about 400,000 cards potentially affected.

Irving-based Michaels said that it has contained the incident, which began last year. It has received "limited" reports of fraud from banks and the payment card brands that are potentially connected to the breach.

The compromised data includes customer information such as payment card numbers and expiration dates. But there's no evidence that other personal information such as names, addresses or PIN numbers were at risk, Michaels said.

Michaels' report comes as many shoppers worry about the safety of their personal data following a massive pre-Christmas security breach at Target Corp. that affected 40 million debit and credit cards.

The details come nearly three months after Michaels disclosed that it may have been a victim of a data breach and that it was working with law enforcement authorities, banks and payment processors.

The company said Thursday that both chains were attacked by criminals using highly sophisticated malware that had not been encountered previously by the two security firms that were conducting the investigation.

"Our customers are always number one priority and we are truly sorry for any inconvenience or concern Michaels may have caused," said Chuck Rubin, CEO of Michaels, in a statement.

The breach at Michaels stores occurred between May 8, 2013 and Jan. 27. The company confirmed that between June 26, 2013 and Feb. 27, 54 Aaron Brothers stores were affected by this malware.

Michaels said that it was offering free identity protection, credit monitoring and fraud assistance services to affected Michaels and Aaron Brothers customers in the U.S. for 12 months.

Lost radio program featuring Hank Williams found

NASHVILLE — Previously unreleased recordings of country music legend Hank Williams performing songs on a 1950 radio show will be released next month for download and on vinyl.

"The Garden Spot Programs, 1950" features 24 songs and jingles from a taped show that aired on early country radio stations, sponsored by a Texas plant nursery. Most of the tapes were lost, but only the copies from one station, KSIB-AM in Creston, Iowa, survived. The recordings were transferred, restored and mastered for release May 20 by Omnivore Records.

The singer's daughter, Jett Williams, said in a written statement that no one knew these recordings existed.

Williams' biographer, Colin Escott, wrote the liner notes for the album and said the recordings were used to augment live acts on local radio stations.

US: Forfeiture deal over Iran assets sets record

A federal judge has approved plans to sell a 36-story Manhattan office building and other properties owned by Iran nationwide in what will be the largest terrorism-related forfeiture ever, a prosecutor said Thursday.

U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara said Judge Katherine Forrest approved the deal between the U.S. government and 19 holders of more than $5 billion in terrorism-related judgments against the government of Iran, including claims brought by the estates of victims killed in the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

The deal calls for the Manhattan building and other forfeited assets to be sold by the U.S. Marshals Service, with the U.S. government receiving reimbursement for litigation expenses and any costs of the sales before the rest is distributed to victims of terrorist attacks. The agreement stems from a 2008 lawsuit by the government against the building's owners.

Bharara said the settlement is an important step toward "completing what will be the largest ever terrorism-related forfeiture and providing a substantial recovery for victims of terrorism."

"From the very beginning of this case," Bharara said in a release, "this office sought to dismantle Iran's slice of Manhattan — an office tower on Fifth Avenue — both to end Iran's illegal sanctions-violation and money-laundering schemes and to provide a means of compensating victims of Iranian-sponsored terrorism."

The officer could not confirm whether Walters was wearing a seat belt but said the investigation should eventually draw that conclusion. There were no indications of impairment, the officer added.

The wreck Thursday marks the 15th vehicle-related fatality on roads inside the county this year, according to Reporter-Telegram records. Three fatalities have taken place this month. Four deaths, including the one Thursday, have occurred from crashes on I-20 (one fewer than 2013). There have been 58 fatalities on roads inside Midland County since the beginning of 2013.

On Monday, a 70-year-old man died after another vehicle struck him while he was operating an electric mobility scooter in the 2300 block of South Rankin Highway. The collision occurred Sunday.

President Barack Obama speaks about health care Thursday in the briefing room of the White House in Washington. The president said 8 million have signed up for health insurance under Affordable Care Act.

Obama: 8 million have signed up for health care

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Eight million people have signed up for health care through new insurance exchanges and the proportion of younger applicants has increased, President Barack Obama said Thursday. The enrollments exceeded expectations and offered new hope to Democrats who are defending the law ahead of the midterm elections.

An impromptu appearance in the White House briefing room offered the president an opportunity to trumpet the new figures, which beat initial projections by 1 million. With an eye toward November, Obama castigated Republicans for continuing to seek out every opportunity to thwart the Affordable Care Act.

"This thing is working," Obama said of his signature domestic achievement.

Touting modest progress on another front, Obama said 35 percent of enrollees are under 35 years old, suggesting that in the final weeks of enrollment, the administration managed to sign up higher numbers of younger, healthier people who are critical to the law's viability.

The most coveted age group comprises those between 18 and 34 years old. White House officials said that for the 36 states where the federal government is taking the lead, 28 percent are in that age group — a step in the right direction from March, when the administration said just 25 percent were 18 to 34.

In a sharp rebuke to his political opponents, Obama called out states that have refused to embrace an expansion of Medicaid under "Obamacare," arguing that their opposition was rooted in nothing more than sheer ideology and political spite.

"That's wrong. It should stop," he said. "Those folks should be able to get health insurance like everybody else."

Although the first year's open enrollment season for the exchanges closed on March 31, the administration is still tallying the number of total enrollees. States managing their own exchanges have been slower to report data, and some Americans who started applications before the deadline were given extra time to complete their enrollment.

The demographic figures also give Democrats an opportunity to blunt the pessimism of Republicans, some of whom have accused the White House of "cooking the books" by announcing large overall enrollment numbers that tell only part of the story.

"They still can't bring themselves to admit that the Affordable Care Act is working," Obama said. "The longer we see the law benefiting millions of people, the more we see accusations that the law is hurting people being completely debunked."

Democrats have been hoping that better-than-expected results could help their candidates reclaim the political high ground on "Obamacare" before Election Day. Seven months out, Democrats are seeking to turn the page on the law's disastrous debut in October, when HealthCare.gov was virtually unusable.

Citing the federal law, UnitedHealth says profit fell

The UnitedHealth Group, one of the nation's largest health insurers, reported lower earnings on Thursday, blaming its weak results in part on the federal health care law and the high costs of an expensive new drug to treat hepatitis C.

The first of the major for-profit health insurers to make public its financial results for the first three months of 2014, UnitedHealth is seen as an early indicator of how the insurers are faring under the Affordable Care Act, the law that radically changed their business.

For the first quarter of 2014, UnitedHealth said net earnings fell 7.8 percent, to $1.1 billion from $1.19 billion in the period a year earlier. Revenue was $31.71 billion, up 4.5 percent from $30.34 billion. The company pointed to the law's taxes and fees for insurers, but also said its results suffered from cutbacks to the Medicare Advantage program, where it operates private health plans. Federal budget cuts also reduced profits.

The company, which reported first-quarter earnings per share of $1.10, calculated the overall effect of the law and budget cuts to be 35 cents. The earnings did, however, beat Wall Street estimates by 1 cent.

UnitedHealth, which is headquartered in Minnetonka, Minn., also highlighted the cost of treating in both government and private plans, which it said was more than $100 million for the quarter, including the cost of an expensive new drug Gilead Sciences, the company that developed the drug, Sovaldi, has come under intense criticism for the drug's price of $1,000 a pill.

While UnitedHealth's experience is likely to be shared by other insurers, the company has held back in its pursuit of customers buying plans on the new insurance exchanges compared with competitors like WellPoint and Aetna. The company, which has a significant presence in the employer market as well as in the government Medicare and Medicaid programs, has also diversified heavily into other business.

Las Cruces physician accused of health care fraud

ALBUQUERQUE — A Las Cruces physician has been arrested for allegedly overprescribing pain medication that resulted in the deaths of two patients.

Prosecutors said a 61-year-old Pawan Kumar Jain was taken into custody Thursday.

A federal grand jury indicted Jain on 61 counts of unlawfully dispensing controlled substances and 50 counts of health care fraud.

According to the indictment, Jain allegedly committed the offenses between April 2009 and June 2010.

At the time, Jain was a licensed physician with a neurology subspecialty who operated a Las Cruces pain management medical practice.

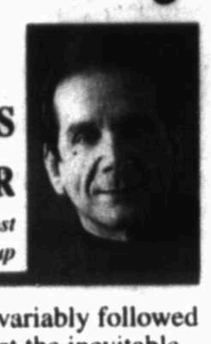
OPINION

Zealots deal blow to full records disclosure

■ Full campaign finance disclosure sounds like a perfect complement to unlimited donations. But not when those giving are harrassed



CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

The debate over campaign contributions is never-ending for a simple reason: Both sides of the argument have merit.

On the one hand, of course money is speech. For most citizens, contributing to politicians or causes is the most effective way to augment and amplify speech with which they agree. The most disdainful dismissers of this argument are editorialists and incumbent politicians who — surprise! — already enjoy access to vast audiences and don't particularly like their monopoly being invaded by the unwashed masses or the self-made plutocrat.

On the other hand, of course money is corrupting. The nation's jails are well stocked with mayors, legislators, judges and the occasional governor who have exchanged favors for cash. However, there are lesser — and legal — forms of influence-peddling short of the outright quid pro quo. Campaign contributions are carefully calibrated to approach that line without crossing it. But money distorts. There is no denying the unfairness of big contributors buying access unavailable to the everyday citizen.

Hence the endless law-writing to restrict political contributions, invariably followed by multiple fixes to correct the inevitable loopholes. The result is a baffling mass of legislation administered by one cadre of experts and dodged by another.

For a long time, a simple finesse offered a rather elegant solution: no limits on giving — but with full disclosure.

Open the floodgates, and let the monies, big and small, check and balance each other. And let transparency be the safeguard against corruption. As long as you know who is giving what to whom, you can look for, find and, if necessary, prosecute corrupt connections between donor and receiver.

This used to be my position. No longer. I had not foreseen how donor lists would be used not to ferret out corruption but to pursue and persecute citizens with contrary views. Which corrupts the very idea of full disclosure.

It is now an invitation to the creation of enemies lists. Containing, for example, Brendan Eich, forced to resign as Mozilla CEO when it was disclosed that six years earlier he'd given $1,000 to support a referendum banning gay marriage. He was hardly the first. Activists compiled blacklists of donors to Proposition 8 and went after them. Indeed, shortly after the referendum passed, both the artistic director of the California Musical Theatre in Sacramento and the president of the Los Angeles Film Festival were hounded out of office.

Referendums produce the purest example of transparency misused because corrupt favoritism is not an issue. There's no one to corrupt. Supporting a referendum is a pure expression of one's beliefs. Full disclosure in that context becomes a cudgel, an invitation to harassment.

Sometimes the state itself does the harassing. The IRS scandal left many members of political groups exposed to abuse, such as the unlawful release of confidential data. In another case, the Obama campaign website in 2012 published the names of eight big Romney donors, alleging them to have "less than reputable records." A glow-in-the-dark target having been painted on his back, Idaho businessman Frank VanderSloot (reported The Wall Street Journal's Kimberley Strassel) suddenly found himself subject to multiple audits, including two by the IRS.

In his lone dissent to the disclosure requirement in Citizens United, Justice Clarence Thomas argued that American citizens should not be subject to "to death threats, ruined careers, damaged or defaced property, or pre-emptive and threatening warning letters as the price for engaging in core political speech, the primary object of First Amendment protection." (Internal quote marks omitted.)

In fact, wariness of full disclosure goes back to 1958 when the Supreme Court ruled that the NAACP did not have to release its membership list to the state, understanding that such disclosure would surely subject its members to persecution. "This court has recognized the vital relationship between freedom to associate and privacy in one's associations ... particularly where a group espouses dissident beliefs."

A different era, a different set of dissidents. But the naming of names, the listing of lists, goes on. The enforcers are at it again, this time armed with sortable Internet donor lists.

The ultimate victim here is full disclosure itself. If revealing your views opens you to the politics of personal destruction, then transparency, however valuable, must give way to the ultimate core political good, free expression.

Our collective loss. Coupling unlimited donations and full disclosure was a reasonable way to reconcile the irreconcilables of campaign finance. Like so much else in our politics, however, it has been ruined by zealots. What a pity.

OUR VIEW

Library director Trischitti deserves kudos coming his way

■ For John Trischitti. The Texas Library Association selected Midland County's director of libraries as Librarian of the Year, and we can't think of a better choice.

Trischitti has opened our eyes to what a library system can be and helped make the Midland County libraries relevant and a place where Midlanders want to be.

We hope county officials and this community realize the gem that we have in Trischitti. Midland is a better place because of his hard work.

■ For the Trinity Upper School Choir. Robin Wilson's students put together a gold-rated performance to earn an invite to the hallowed halls of Carnegie Hall.

The Trinity students were named the most outstanding choir of the WorldStrides Heritage Performance's San Antonio Music Festival two weekends ago. The average score of 94 (out of 100) gave the choir a chance to perform next year in the National Youth Choir Festival.

■ Midland Community Theatre and Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale. The two groups are partnering to bring "Les Miserables" to the Permian Basin. The production will allow Midlanders a chance to see an all-local performance of a Broadway show with live music at the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center. MCT and MOSC have worked together before, but we look forward to their first collaboration at the Wagner Noel.

Lead roles for the show were cast nine months ago, and the actors and musicians have spent countless hours rehearsing.

"We have about 100 people producing this show who all live in the Permian Basin area," MCT director Tim Jebsen told the Reporter-Telegram. "I think that local connection has value here."

Three performances are planned for "Les Miserables" — Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Tickets can be purchased at wagnernoel.com.

■ For Carver Center's fifth-grade Destination Imagination team. The students advanced to the competition's Global Finals after winning first place in the technical challenge division at last weekend's statewide contest. The seven-member team is one of 100 from Texas that will compete in Global Finals, set for May in Knoxville, Tenn. Congratulations to Temitayo Awosemo, Blake Dalager, Faith Dolan, Sam Leverett, Davis Seybert, Karmen Smith and Kalee Tollefson, as well as their teacher, Sara Burleson, and we wish you well as you prepare for finals.

■ For Midland ISD's robotics teams. Several teams from the junior high schools and Carver Center participated in competitions last weekend. Among those that earned top spots was the Abell Junior High eighth-grade intermediate invention team of Alan Chavez and Preston Conlin. They won third place at the Texas Computer Education Association's state contest for their cellphone security device. Carver Center's fifth-grade teams received awards at the Get Excited About Robotics Competition. The team of Blayde Haynie, Logan Cralle and Marc Enriquez placed second overall out of 123 teams in the competition. The team of Connor Carriger, Hector Carrasco, Will Roemer and Jacob Flores won first in the essay category. We applaud these students for a job well done.

Hounding Condi Rice is stupid

■ What message is being sent, except intolerance?

RICH LOWRY
King Features Syndicate

If Condoleezza Rice were as self-pitying and politically crass as Attorney General Eric Holder, she would be wondering aloud what it is about her race and gender that accounts for the hostility to her.

Rice's speaking gigs on college campuses and her ascension to the board of the Internet company Dropbox have sparked protests calling for her to be disinvited, cashiered and generally isolated and shamed.

Condi Rice is not a natural lightning rod. She's such a disreputable figure that she's on the board of the Kennedy Center and the Boys and Girls Clubs of America. She's such a lightweight that she's a Stanford University professor. She's such a yahoo that she once accompanied Yo-Yo Ma on the piano.

The mob nonetheless believes that her due punishment for serving the wrong administration in the wrong cause should be banishment.

When the University of Minnesota invited her to give a lecture as part of a series marking the 50th anniversary of the Civil Rights Act, the school's faculty roused itself. Roughly 200 of them demanded that the invitation be revoked, partly because she is unfit to be part of a civil-rights lecture series.

What would give anyone the idea that a woman who was the nation's first female African-American secretary of state, who experienced Jim Crow firsthand during her childhood in Alabama, who was friends with one of the girls killed in the Birmingham church bombing would have anything relevant to say about civil rights?

The Minnesota professors say that it is in a "spirit of free expression" that they ask for the reversal of Rice's invitation. Because nothing says free expression like shutting down someone's lecture.

They claim they would love to have Rice come to the school on some other occasion. Presumably to sit in the dock at a mock war-crimes trial.

The Rutgers faculty reacted in a similar vein to the selection of Rice as the school's commencement speaker. It called for undoing the decision, explaining that "a Commencement speaker, who is entrusted with speaking to graduating students about the direction of their future lives, should embody moral authority and exemplary leadership."

Does the Rutgers faculty really think Rice will urge graduating students to go out and start "wars of choice" and do "extraordinary renditions"? If the past is any guide, Rice will tell the Rutgers students about the importance of getting an education, of finding their passion, of being optimistic — you know, all the truly dark stuff that animates quasi-war criminals.

The protesters of Dropbox's decision to put Rice on its board said it called into question the company's "commitment to freedom, openness, and ethics." In their brief against her, they didn't raise any remotely plausible concern about how she would influence the policies of the company.

The hounding of Rice, naturally, all goes back to Bush national-security policy. If support for the Iraq War is a mark of odiousness, though, Hillary Clinton, Joe Biden and John Kerry should never be allowed to set foot on a campus or sit on a corporate board, since they all voted to authorize it.

As for interrogation, the most frequently cited act of "torture" is waterboarding. A total of three terrorists were subjected to it. The legality and wisdom of this Bush policy — and others — is certainly open to debate.

But Rice's critics aren't interested in argument. They are offended by Rice's very presence. As usual, her harassment is about narrowing the range of respectability so as to limit the parameters of political debate. This time, it is failing. The leaders of the University of Minnesota, Rutgers and Dropbox have refused to dump Rice.

Of course, if the typical rules applied, the fierce opposition to her would be attributed to racism, sexism and any other handy "-ism." Just imagine what Eric Holder would say if his opponents embarked on a concerted campaign to silence and shun him.

Obama disputes GOP version of immigration call

President Barack Obama says he's surprised that House Majority Leader Eric Cantor is accusing him of failing to work with Congress on immigration.

Cantor said after the two men spoke by phone Wednesday that Obama still hasn't learned how to work effectively with lawmakers.

Obama told reporters during a press conference Thursday that they actually had a "very pleasant conversation" and that he called the Virginia Republican to wish him a happy Passover. Obama says there was a mismatch between Cantor's stance in private and public.

Obama supports a bipartisan Senate bill that has stalled in the House, where Republicans prefer a piecemeal approach. Obama said in a statement before their call that Republicans are behind the times on immigration.

IRS audits less than 1 percent of big partnerships

The Internal Revenue Service audits fewer than 1 percent of large business partnerships, according to a government report released Tuesday.

That means some of Wall Street's largest hedge funds and private equity firms are largely escaping close scrutiny by the IRS, said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

The Government Accountability Office says the number of large businesses organized as partnerships has more than tripled since 2002, yet hardly any get audited. In 2012, only 0.8 percent were subjected to field exams in which agents do a thorough review of books and records.

Cruz makes his 2nd border visit as US senator

Associated Press

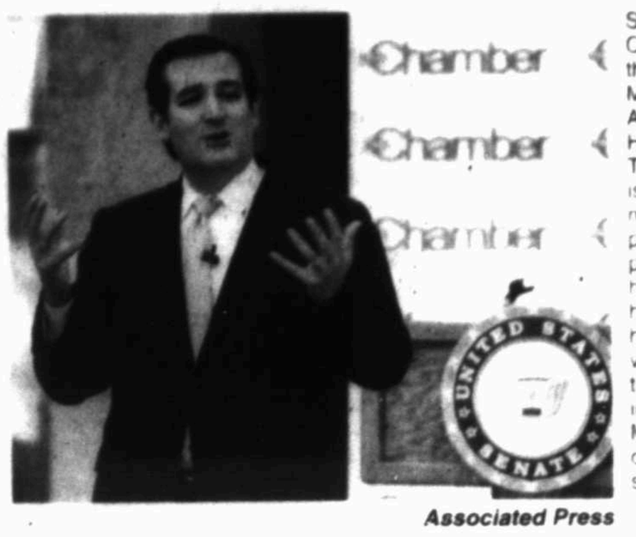
HARLINGEN — U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz on Thursday made his second visit to the U.S.-Mexico border since taking office, saying Texans in the area care mostly about the same issues as residents of any other part of the state.

Rather than call for increased border security or strongly denouncing illegal immigration — as many conservative politicians do when stumping in South Texas — Cruz gave his usual campaign-style speech. That meant decrying the White House's economic policies and the nation's new health care law before about 500 people at a Harlingen chamber of commerce-sponsored event in the mess hall of local military academy.

Cruz later headed up the border to Laredo.

Frequently mentioned as a potential 2016 White House contender, Cruz already has hit the early presidential voting circuit hard, with four trips to Iowa, three to South Carolina and a third visit to New Hampshire set for this month.

But along his home state's 1,200-mile border with Mexico, a fast-growing, largely Democratic enclave, he has hardly been seen in the nearly 16 months since taking office.



Senator Ted Cruz addresses the crowd at the Marine Military Academy in Harlingen on Thursday. Cruz is frequently mentioned as a possible 2016 presidential hopeful. Some have criticized him, though, for visiting Iowa four times while visiting the Texas-Mexico border once before as senator.

Budget office: Wage boost would cost firms $15 billion

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Senate Democratic bill gradually increasing the federal minimum wage to $10.10 hourly would require private businesses to spend $15 billion more in salaries when it takes full effect in 2017, the Congressional Budget Office estimated Thursday.

The nonpartisan budget office's estimate could be used as ammunition by Republicans, who largely oppose the measure because they say it would drive up business costs.

But it could also be beneficial to Democrats because the private sector spent $5.4 trillion on wages in 2012, according to the most recent data from the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics. That means the increased pay would boost employers' wage costs by just 0.003 percent, or about one-third of a penny for every dollar spent on salaries.

The Senate is expected to begin debating the election-year Democratic measure when lawmakers return from a spring recess in two weeks. Republicans seem likely to muster enough votes to block it, and there is no evidence yet that Democrats are willing to broker a compromise.

The minimum wage is currently $7.25 hourly. The bill by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, would increase the minimum in three steps, reaching $10.10 two-and-a-half years after the bill becomes law.

The budget office also estimated that the measure would force state and local governments to pay workers $1 billion more in 2017 than they would otherwise be required. Those governments paid $840 billion in salaries in 2012, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The federal government would incur just $2 million in added wage costs for the entire decade ending in 2024. That's because it has fewer than 4,000 workers earning less than $10.10 hourly, the budget office said.

The federal government spent $207 billion in wages in 2012, according to the labor statistics bureau.

But the Democratic bill would cost the government $5 billion in lost revenue over the coming decade. In an effort to win votes from moderate Democrats and perhaps Republicans, Harkin's measure would give bigger tax breaks to some smaller businesses that purchase equipment over the next three years.

In February, the budget office estimated that the Democratic bill would mean $31 billion in higher earnings for low-paid workers in 2016.

That figure was higher in part because it included workers not directly covered by the minimum wage law and others earning over $10.10 who analysts believed would get raises as employers adjust their pay scales upward.

The budget office has also estimated that the measure would raise earnings for about 16.5 million workers earning under $10.10, but cost about 500,000 others their jobs as employers adjust to higher costs.

Judge wants mayor to back bankruptcy plan

Looking years ahead, the judge overseeing Detroit's bankruptcy said Thursday he wants assurances from the mayor and other elected leaders that they'll follow a final plan that likely cuts pensions, sheds debt and plows millions into better services.

The bankruptcy case — the largest by a local government in U.S. history — is far from over. But Judge Steven Rhodes told city attorneys that he'd have a hard time approving an exit strategy without an endorsement from Mayor Mike Duggan and council members.

Emergency manager Kevyn Orr, appointed by the governor, took the city into bankruptcy last July, but his 18-month term ends by fall.

Rhodes said he doesn't want to "get to a place where a plan obligates the city to make certain payments, and Mr. Orr is no longer in office and whoever is running the city doesn't support the plan."

Detroit bankruptcy attorney Heather Lennox said Duggan and other officials are expected to testify this summer when Rhodes holds a trial on the plan.

Police: Man ate pot candy before shooting wife

A Denver man accused of killing his wife while she was on the phone with a 911 dispatcher ate marijuana-infused candy before the attack, according to search warrants released Thursday.

Kristine Kirk, 44, told dispatchers her husband bought and ate the candy and may have also taken prescription pain pills before he started hallucinating and frightening the couple's three children, the documents state.

She pleaded with dispatchers to hurry and send officers because her husband, Richard Kirk, 47, had asked her to get a gun and shoot him. She said she was "scared of what he might do."

Richard Kirk could be heard in the background of the 911 call talking about the candy he bought from a pot dispensary earlier that night, and surveillance footage from the shop captured the transaction, police said.

It was unclear whether the marijuana influenced his behavior. A detective who interviewed him after the killing noted that he appeared to be under the influence of controlled substances based on his speech and inability to focus, according to the warrants. Police said Richard Kirk was rambling and confessed to killing his wife.

Blood samples will be tested to see whether he was on any other drugs or medications.

Confused, chaotic scene described on sinking ferry

Associated Press

MOKPO, South Korea — There was chaos and confusion on the bridge of a sinking ferry, with the captain first trying to stabilize the listing vessel before ordering its evacuation, a crewman said Thursday.

By the time the order came, however, he said it had become impossible to help many of the passengers — although the captain and a dozen crew members survived.

The confirmed death toll from Wednesday's sinking of the Sawol off southern South Korea was 25, the coast guard said. But the number was expected to rise with about 270 people missing, many of them high school students on a class trip. Officials said there were 179 survivors.

Divers worked in shifts to try to get into the sunken vessel, but strong currents would not allow them to enter, said coast guard spokesman Kim Jae-in. The divers planned to pump oxygen into the ship to help any survivors, but first they had to get inside, he added.

The water temperature in the area was about 54 degrees, cold enough to cause signs of hypothermia after about 90 minutes of exposure.

Kim said three vessels with cranes are being brought in to help with the rescue and to salvage the ferry, which sank not far from the southern city of Mokpo and now sits with just part of its keel visible.

The captain of the Sawol, identified by broadcaster YTN and the Yonhap news agency as 68-year-old Lee Joon-seok, was questioned by the coast guard and made a brief, videotaped appearance, although his face was hidden by a gray hoodie.

"I am really sorry and deeply ashamed," Lee said. "I don't know what to say."

Kim Soo-hyun, a senior coast guard official, said officials were investigating whether the captain got on one of the first rescue boats.

Kim Han-sik, president of Chonghaejin Marine Co., the ship's owner, also apologized separately, bowing deeply and saying through his tears, "I committed a sin punishable by death. ... I am at a loss for words. I am sorry. I am sorry."

The 480-foot Sewol had left Incheon on the northwestern coast of South Korea on Tuesday for the overnight journey to the southern resort island of Jeju. There were 475 people aboard, including 325 students from Danwon High School in Ansan, which is near Seoul.

It was three hours from its destination Wednesday morning when it began to list for an unknown reason.

Associated Press

Relatives of a passenger aboard a sunken ferry weep Thursday as they wait for news on the rescue operation, at a port in Jindo, South Korea. Strong currents, rain and bad visibility hampered an increasingly anxious search Thursday for about 270 passengers still missing a day after their ferry flipped onto its side and sank in cold waters off the southern coast of South Korea.

Judge in gay marriage case asks pointed questions

Associated Press

DENVER — A judge in Colorado who will play a pivotal role deciding whether gays should be allowed to wed in the United States asked pointed questions Thursday about whether Oklahoma can legally ban the unions.

U.S. Circuit Judge Jerome Holmes is seen as the swing vote on the three-judge panel that heard the Oklahoma appeal and a similar case from Utah last week.

The two cases are the first to reach an appellate court since the U.S. Supreme Court last year struck down the federal Defense of Marriage Act. Since then, gay rights lawyers have successfully convinced eight federal judges that the ruling means courts must strike down laws against gay marriage because they deprive same-sex couples of a fundamental right.

During Thursday's hearing before the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel, Holmes suggested he interpreted the Supreme Court's ruling the same way.

"The state cannot define marriage in any way that would trample constitutional rights, right?" Holmes asked Jim Campbell, the attorney representing the defendant in the case, the Tulsa County clerk.

Campbell, however, contended the court must defer to the democratic process if there is a rational reason for the state to choose who can get married and who cannot.

"The natural, procreative potential of opposite-sex couples distinguishes that group from same-sex couples," Campbell said.

With one judge strongly hinting he supported the lower court rulings that struck down the Oklahoma and Utah bans, and another appearing skeptical of them, all eyes were on Holmes to see where the panel might come down. Holmes last week said that if the yardstick is whether the state has a rational reason to single out gay couples, the same-sex plaintiffs would lose. But if the standard was any higher, they would win.

The judges spent most of their time Thursday either questioning Campbell or debating whether the plaintiffs sued the correct person and had legal standing for the court to intervene. The case has taken 10 years to reach this point, partly because another 10th Circuit panel in 2009 ruled the plaintiffs incorrectly sued the governor and attorney general and directed them to name a different party.

The panel allowed the hearing to run 13 minutes over its 30-minute limit so it could further question Campbell on his arguments.

Oklahoma voters overwhelmingly approved that state's gay marriage ban in 2004. A federal judge in January ruled that the ban violated the constitutional rights of gays, triggering the appeal. That is almost identical to the Utah case, in which a federal judge struck down that state's 2004 voter-approved gay marriage ban in December.

Legal experts said the Oklahoma and Utah cases are almost identical, though Utah does not have the same standing issues as Oklahoma. The justices' decision likely will pivot on the level of deference they believe a court should give voters to deny a group of people the ability to marry.

It might be months before a written ruling is issued. Similar appeals are working their way through four other appellate court circuits, and it is unclear which case would next reach the Supreme Court, which likely will have the final word on the issue.

Two of the plaintiffs in the Oklahoma case, Sharon Baldwin and Mary Bishop, told reporters outside the courthouse that they wanted to marry but have made a point of trying to change the law in their home state rather than travel to one of the 17 states that permits gay marriage.

What's next in gay marriage's legal odyssey?

Thursday's hearing in Denver is the second of two hearings on gay marriage that are weighted with legal significance. The cases are the first time an appellate court has considered the ramifications of last year's U.S. Supreme Court ruling that struck down the federal Defense of Marriage Act. The 30-minute hearing on the legality of Oklahoma's gay marriage ban comes one week after a three-judge panel heard a similar case originating from Utah.

Gay rights activists have won eight lower court cases since the Supreme Court ruling, and expectations are high that the nation's highest court will eventually rule that gays can marry in every state. But there's a lot that can happen before then.

Q: What happened last week?

The three-judge panel of the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals heard arguments in Utah's appeal of a judge's ruling striking down its gay marriage ban. The judges seemed evenly split — one against the ban, one seemed willing to uphold it while a third asked sharp questions of both sides. The same judges Thursday are hearing Oklahoma's appeal of a similar ruling that invalidated its gay marriage ban. The judges will likely issue separate rulings, but they could come on the same day. The cases are similar in that both bans were passed by voters in 2004, and struck down by federal judges within a month of one another this winter. The legal arguments for and against are also alike.

Q: What's changed?

The Supreme Court last year found that the 1996 Defense of Marriage Act that forbade the federal government from recognizing same-sex marriage improperly deprived gay couples of due process. That ruling came as polls showed a majority of Americans now support gay marriage. Lower-court judges have repeatedly cited the Supreme Court ruling when striking down same-sex marriage bans. So far they have ruled against bans in Michigan, Oklahoma, Utah, Virginia and Texas and ordered Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee to recognize same-sex marriages from other states. Gay marriage is legal in 17 states and the District of Columbia.

Q: When does the issue return to the Supreme Court?

Many law professors say the Supreme Court will eventually take a gay marriage case after one or more appeals court rulings, but that won't happen until 2015 at the earliest. And the high court is under no obligation to take up the issue. The three-judge panel of the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver is only the first of five circuits hearing appeals of all those lower-court gay marriage rulings. It is not expected to issue its ruling for several months. In any of the appellate cases, the losing party can appeal directly to the Supreme Court, or first ask for the entire appellate court to review the ruling in what is called an en banc hearing. It's unclear which case would reach the high court first.

RELIGIONBRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

WASHINGTON

US decries anti-Semitic leaflets in Ukraine

The United States on Thursday condemned as "grotesque" the distribution of leaflets demanding that Jews in eastern Ukraine register with a self-proclaimed local authority or face consequences. U.S. officials also denounced other instances of religious intolerance that are inflaming tensions the crisis in Ukraine and said no such behavior could be tolerated.

Speaking in Geneva after top diplomats from the U.S., European Union, Russia and Ukraine reached agreement on steps to de-escalate the situation, Secretary of State John Kerry denounced the leaflets.

"In the year 2014, after all of the miles traveled and all of the journey of history, this is not just intolerable; it's grotesque," Kerry told reporters. "It is beyond unacceptable. And any of the people who engage in these kinds of activities, from whatever party or whatever ideology or whatever place they crawl out of, there is no place for that."

Kerry also denounced apparent threats to members of the Russian Orthodox Church from members of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church. He noted that the agreement signed on Thursday "strongly condemned and rejected all expressions of extremism, racism and religious intolerance, including anti-Semitism."

In Washington, U.S. officials said the anti-Semitic leaflets, which recall the days of czarist pogroms and Nazi-era persecution of Jews, have appeared recently in the eastern Ukrainian city of Donetsk. The State Department said it was looking into who is responsible but said it took the threat seriously no matter who was behind the leaflets.

The leaflets seen by U.S. officials purport to come from the Donetsk People's Republic, a self-styled, unrecognized breakaway authority that seeks to join Russia. The Donetsk Republic press office denied any involvement in the matter and said the leaflets are fake.

KENTUCKY

Court: Religious jobs exempt from some labor laws

LOUISVILLE — Religious institutions in Kentucky may hire and fire people from strictly ecclesiastical jobs as they see fit but could face legal action if an employment contract is involved, the Kentucky Supreme Court rules Thursday.

In two decisions, the justices reinstated lawsuits brought by two former staff members at the Lexington Theological Seminary. In both cases, Chief Justice John D. Minton concluded that the staff members had employment contracts with the school and should be able to pursue litigation over their dismissals, even though one of the men held a position that was primarily religious in nature.

Minton concluded that without the contracts, the seminary would be allowed to dismiss former professors Laurence H. Kant and Jimmy Kirby under what is known as the "ministerial exception" to labor laws. The exception allows religious institutions to make employment decisions based on the institutions beliefs and generally keeps a religious institution from being sued for employment discrimination.

The decisions clarify for the first time the ministerial exception and when it applies in Kentucky and brings the state in line with recent U.S. Supreme Court and federal court rulings on the issue and could impact everything from schools to churches.

"A religious institution may hold beliefs that are discriminatory under a particular anti-discrimination statute and the ministerial exception acts to protect the religious freedom of those institutions no matter how distasteful society may find it or how strong the society interest may be," Minton wrote.

Kirby's claims against the Seminary aren't religious in nature, they stem from contract law, and his case should be allowed to go forward, Minton concluded. In this case, the Seminary, by signing a contract with Kirby, voluntarily regulated its own conduct, Minton wrote. Minton did dismiss Kirby's discrimination complaint against the seminary as barred by the exemption.

ROME

Pope washes feet of elderly, disabled in rite

Pope Francis washed the feet of 12 disabled and elderly people Thursday — women and non-Catholics among them — in a pre-Easter ritual designed to show his willingness to serve others like a "slave."

Francis' decision in 2013 to perform the Holy Thursday ritual on women and Muslim inmates at a juvenile detention center helped define his rule-breaking papacy just two weeks after his election. It riled traditionalist Catholics, who pointed to the Vatican's own regulations that the ritual be performed only on men since Jesus' 12 apostles were men.

But as archbishop of Buenos Aires, Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio frequently performed the ritual on women — a practice that he seems intent on keeping up now that he is pope.

The 2014 edition brought Francis to a center for the disabled and elderly in Rome. Francis kneeled down, washed, dried and kissed the feet of a dozen people, some in wheelchairs, some with grossly swollen and disfigured feet.

The Vatican didn't release the exact breakdown of their religious backgrounds, but said they came from various religious confessions. Italian news reports said one was a Libyan Muslim and four were women.

Francis told the faithful that he was performing the ritual to remind himself how to serve others, as Jesus did when he washed the feet of his apostles.

"Jesus made a gesture, a job, the service of a slave, a servant," he said. "And he leaves this inheritance to us: We need to be servants to one another."

VIRGINIA

Richmond diocese works to reinvigorate church

RICHMOND — The Diocese of Richmond is reaching out to disaffected or lapsed parishioners as part of a push to reinvigorate the local church.

Bishop Francis X. DiLorenzo said there will be an increased focus on reaching parishioners who've left the church and those who don't believe.

Other efforts include bolstering Catholic schools, recruiting priests and raising donations.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch reported that church officials discussed these efforts Wednesday during a news conference.

The diocese has begun offering scholarships to address a decline in enrollment in Catholic schools. Chief education administrator Annette Parsons said a recent study found that students were leaving because their parents couldn't afford the education.

The Diocese of Richmond serves 116 of Virginia's 142 counties and cities.

SAN DIEGO

Roman Catholic bishop suffers stroke

Church officials say the bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of San Diego is being treated at a hospital after suffering a stroke.

A church statement said Bishop Cirilo Flores was stricken Wednesday while in his office at the Diocesan Pastoral Center.

Monsignor Steven F. Callahan said Thursday that Flores is "alert and in good spirits."

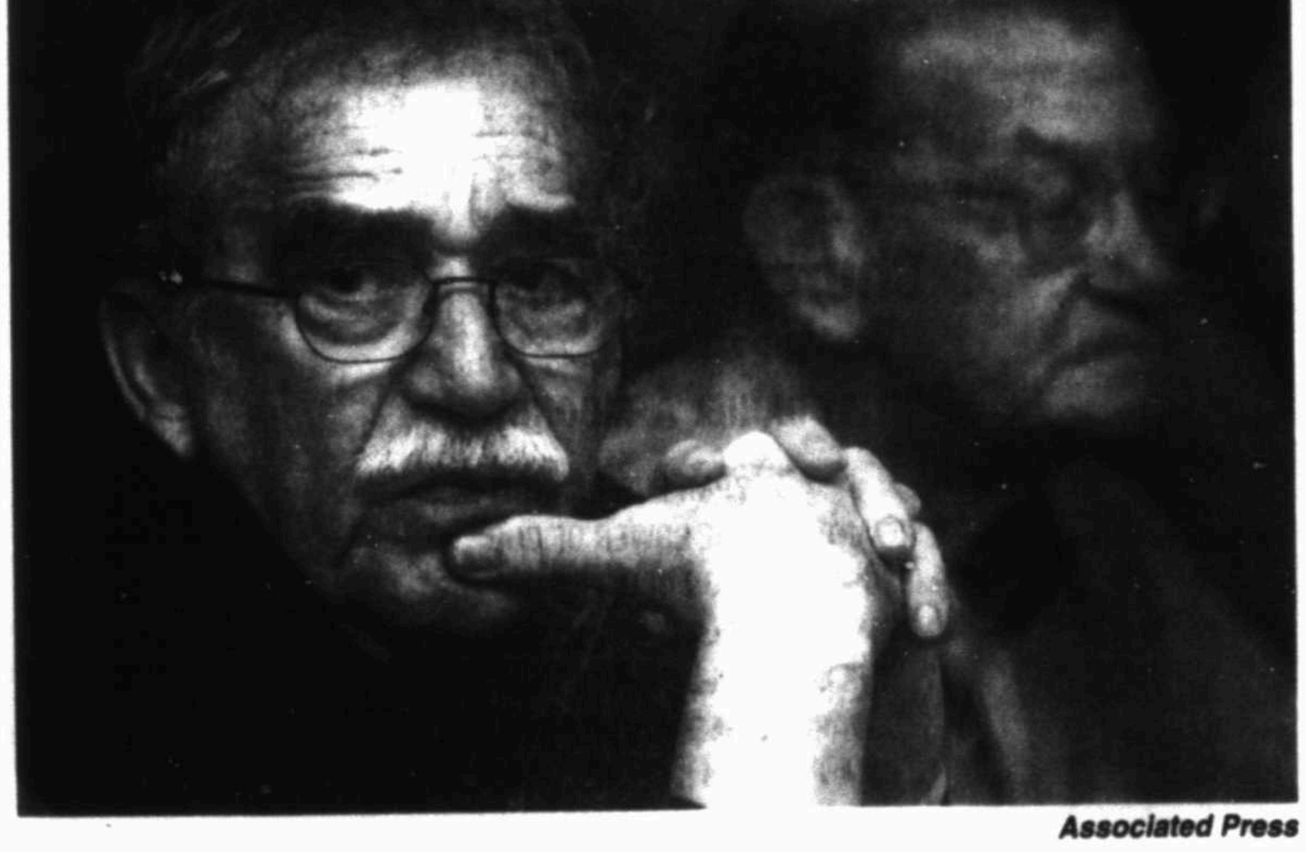
Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Nobel laureate, dies

Associated Press



Associated Press

In this 2003 photo released by the Fundación Nuevo Periodismo Iberoamericano (FNPI), Colombian Nobel laureate Gabriel Garcia Marquez, left, is seen in Monterrey, Mexico. Behind is Colombian journalist Jose Salgar. Garcia Marquez died Thursday at his home in Mexico City. The author's magical realist novels and short stories exposed tens of millions of readers to Latin America's passion, superstition, violence and inequality. The FNPI was founded by Garcia Marquez.

MEXICO CITY — Nobel laureate Gabriel Garcia Marquez crafted intoxicating fiction from the fatalism, fantasy, cruelty and heroics of the world that set his mind churning as a child growing up on Colombia's Caribbean coast.

One of the most revered and influential writers of his generation, he brought Latin America's charm and maddening contradictions to life in the minds of millions and became the best-known practitioner of "magical realism," a blending of fantastic elements into portrayals of daily life that made the extraordinary seem almost routine.

In his works, clouds of yellow butterflies precede a forbidden lover's arrival. A heroic liberator of nations dies alone, destitute and far from home. "A Very Old Man With Enormous Wings," as one of his short stories is called, is spotted in a muddy courtyard.

Garcia Marquez's own epic story ended Thursday, at age 87, with his death at his home in southern Mexico City, according to two people close to the family who spoke on condition of anonymity out of respect for the family's privacy.

Known to millions simply as "Gabo," Garcia Marquez was widely seen as the Spanish language's most popular writer since Miguel de Cervantes in the 17th century. His extraordinary literary celebrity spawned comparisons with Mark Twain and Charles Dickens.

His flamboyant and melancholy works — among them "Chronicle of a Death Foretold," "Love in the Time of Cholera" and "Autumn of the Patriarch" — outsold everything published in Spanish except the Bible. The epic 1967 novel "One Hundred Years of Solitude" sold more than 50 million copies in more than 25 languages.

"A thousand years of solitude and sadness because of the death of the greatest Colombian of all time!" Colombian President Juan Manuel Santos said on Twitter. "Such giants never die."

With writers including Norman Mailer and Tom Wolfe, Garcia Marquez was also an early practitioner of the literary nonfiction that would become known as New Journalism. He became an elder statesman of Latin American journalism, with magisterial works of narrative nonfiction that included the "Story of A Shipwrecked Sailor," the tale of a seaman lost on a life raft for 10 days. He was also a scion of the region's left.

Shorter pieces dealt with subjects including Venezuela's larger-than-life president, Hugo Chavez, while the book "News of a Kidnapping" vividly portrayed how cocaine traffickers led by Pablo Escobar had shred the social and moral fabric of his native Colombia, kidnapping members of its elite. In 1994, Garcia Marquez founded the Iberoamerican Foundation for New Journalism, which offers training and competitions to raise the standard of narrative and investigative journalism across Latin America.

But for so many inside and outside the region, it was his novels that became synonymous with Latin America itself.

"The world has lost one of its greatest visionary writers — and one of my favorites from the time I was young," President Barack Obama said.

When he accepted the Nobel prize in 1982, Garcia Marquez described the region as a "source of insatiable creativity, full of sorrow and beauty, of which this roving and nostalgic Colombian is but one cipher more, singled out by fortune. Poets and beggars, musicians and prophets, warriors and scoundrels, all creatures of that unbridled reality, we have had to ask but little of imagination, for our crucial problem has been a lack of conventional means to render our lives believable."

Gerald Martin, Garcia Marquez's semi-official biographer, told The Associated Press that "One Hundred Years of Solitude" was "the first novel in which Latin Americans recognized themselves, that defined them, celebrated their passion, their intensity, their spirituality and superstition, their grand propensity for failure."

The Spanish Royal Academy, the arbiter of the language, celebrated the novel's 40th anniversary with a special edition. It had only done so for just one other book, Cervantes' "Don Quijote."

however, is its connection to nearly 30 community organizations in Midland that cater specifically to children and families.

Agencies such as Casa de Amigos, Big Brothers Big Sisters, Matthews Martial Arts, Family Promise, Hospice of Midland and many others will be at the event, handing out pamphlets and information at booths around the park.

Paula Brooks, associate minister for children and adults at First Christian Church, said the partnership with various agencies was added three years ago to help families who may need assistance and families who are looking for volunteering or social opportunities.

"I think it helps to connect families to the different organizations that they might not even know about," Brooks said.

Last year, the celebration drew about 1,500 people. This year, there will be four separate egg hunts: toddlers up to age 3 at 10:45 a.m.; ages 4 and 5 and kindergarteners at 11:15 a.m.; first-, second- and third-graders at 11:45 a.m.; and fourth-graders and older at 12:15 p.m.

The youth at Christ Church Anglican participated in a Christ-centered Passover Seder on April 13 at the church. The event introduced students to the traditional way the Jewish people remember and celebrate their delivery from slavery in Egypt. It also showed students how the various elements of this celebration point to Jesus Christ. out food to raise money. For several years they've participated in the 30 Hour Fast event to support World Vision. Because of the international evangelical organization's recently announced — and immediately rescinded — recognition of its employees' gay marriages, Christ Church chose to distance itself from the nonprofit. This year, funds from the youth group's Fast for Friends event will support people of the Zuni Pueblo in New Mexico, a Native American reservation the youth group supports through mission work. The youth group will make its fourth trip to the reservation this summer.

The Zuni people suffer from poverty and high rates of alcoholism. Most of the population practices traditional Native American religions and between 1 percent and 2 percent of them are Christians.

"The Zuni kids who have made commitments to Jesus Christ, they get beaten up at school," Talbot said.

Members of the Christ Church youth group who travel to the Zuni Pueblo are exposed to problems and living conditions they don't often see in Midland, Talbot said.

"We're encouraging our kids to build relationships with teenagers who are damaged," he said. "It rocks our kids' worlds."

Having relationships with the Zuni teens has made this year's fast more personal for many in the youth group.

"It's tough not to raise money for World Vision, but at the same time it's really neat that we're going to raise money for people that we're going to see over the summer and we're going to see how our funds are directly impacting the society," said Ross Whitten, 20, youth ministry intern and sophomore at UTPB. "I know that a lot of our funds are going to go to helping them buy food for their families. Hopefully it will help families that we've gotten a chance to get to know, so some of the students that we've been teaching will have a chance to eat and have firewood because of the money we raise."

Midland High sophomore Chase Van Cleave, 16, has been on two mission trips to the Zuni Pueblo and is participating in the fast this weekend.

"I'm doing it because I've made quite a few friends over in Zuni," he said. "It's pretty cool knowing the people that we're helping ... and have a relationship with."

The youth will begin their fast after lunch today and break it with a Holy Communion service at 6 p.m. Saturday. After the service, Talbot takes the group to an all-you-can-eat buffet such as Mr. Gatti's Pizza.

Students are encouraged to stay hydrated and drink plenty of water, juices and Gatorade during the fast. Saltine crackers are available for those who have physical or medical issues that prevent them from going without food.

Students will spend tonight at the church learning about hunger and the struggles of the Zuni people. Saturday they will volunteer their time scraping and painting a house for a Christmas in Action project. This gives them exposure to the needs of others in their own community.

"We also get to have a direct impact on somebody in our little Midland bubble," Whitten said. "It's cool to not only be able to raise the funds to send elsewhere but also to make someone's day in Midland."

Talbot said the fast gives his youth group insight and appreciation into the struggles other people face, in their own community and beyond.

"I'm hoping that the effects will be even more pronounced this year because our students know that, either directly or indirectly, their sacrifice will benefit some of the people they know on the Zuni Reservation," he said. "When you can put a face on a need, it isn't easy to forget it."

No immigration fix planned, Obama tells faith leaders

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama has told religious leaders that he has no plans to make unilateral changes to the nation's immigration laws.

That's according to the Rev. Luis Cortes, president of the Hispanic faith-based organization Esperanza. He was among six religious leaders who met with Obama in the Oval Office Tuesday. Wesleyan, Baptist and Mormon leaders also were there.

Cortes said Obama told them that "he would not be doing anything to change the law as it currently exists." The president's comments come as advocates press the White House to take executive actions to halt some deportations given that immigration reform efforts on Capitol Hill are stalled.

The White House said Obama told the religious leaders that while his administration can take steps to administer immigration laws, only Congress can permanently fix the broken system.

Greenwood's Pate qualifies for state tournament

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — Ryan Pate decided on Thursday to just relax and have fun because she didn't think she was in contention for a state tournament berth at the Region I-3A Girls Golf Championships.

It seems feeling relaxed was what Pate needed because the Greenwood sophomore fired a 5-under 67, the low round of the day at the tournament, and finished in second place overall to earn a coveted Class 3A State Tournament berth.

Pate had to win a one-hole playoff for second, sinking a birdie putt on the first hole to beat Burkburnett's Sarah Moore. Pate, who shot an even par 144 for the two days, becomes the first Greenwood girls golfer in more than 30 years to earn a berth at the state tournament.

The Class 3A State Tournament is scheduled for April 28-29 at Lost Pines Resort in Cedar Creek east of Austin.

"It feels very good, and I'm so glad to make it to state for the first time," Pate said on Thursday. "After missing the cut at regionals last year, I was definitely glad I made it this year. It's a blessing to be able to go."

Pate shot a 77 on Wednesday at Shadow Hills Golf Course and was tied for ninth spot, and she thought her tournament was over and was a long shot for that state berth.

But after a pair of birdies on the first two holes, Pate started rolling and didn't stop. Pate ended the day with six birdies and one bogey, and missed out on an eagle putt by a few inches.

"I was much more calm than I was (Wednesday)," Pate said. "I felt like I didn't have a whole lot riding on my score (Thursday) because after that 77 I thought I was out of the tournament. I told myself to enjoy today because it might be my last round of the season, and to play my best and just relax."

Motivated Lee rolls past Odessa Permian

Lady Rebels	6
Lady Panthers	1

ODESSA — There was plenty of motivation for the Lee softball team on Thursday.

Sure, the Lady Rebels were fighting for a playoff spot against rival Odessa Permian, but also they didn't want to have to practice on Saturday in preparation for a potential fourth-place game, especially pitcher Kylee Olivas.

It seemed that extra motivation worked because Olivas scattered five hits over seven innings and had seven strikeouts, while Rosie Marquez's three-run home run in the fourth inning gave Lee all the momentum it needed in a 6-1 victory at the Ratliff Softball Complex.

"She had plans for the weekend, and if we would've lost we would've played on Monday and I already called a Saturday morning practice," Lee coach Wes Overton said. "She was not happy, and she took it out on them today."

Lee will now get the weekend off and then begin preparing for next week's Class 5A bi-district round of the playoffs against El Paso Franklin. Lee (18-10, 11-5 in District 2-5A) also won a coin flip with Odessa High Thursday night for the No. 3 seed out of the district.

"We were all very motivated to have the weekend off to have a good Easter," said Olivas, who was also 1-for-3 at the plate with triple. "We played pretty good because of that."

The two teams traded runs in the first inning and it stayed tied at 1 until the fourth.

It was in that inning that the Lady Rebels figured out Permian left-handed starter Elizabeth Craig. Ciara Sheppard, who was 3-for-4 on the day, lead off with a double to right-center field and Cid Martin followed with a high bloop single to left that no Permian player got under to catch.

And then Marquez smacked the first pitch she saw from Craig over the left-center field fence for the second home run of her career at Lee. That one swing

Weissenbach

Without a doubt, Weissenbach and the Lady Chaparrals have had their share of tough moments this season with injuries and some sloppy fielding at times contributing to some tough losses.

But even with those bumps this season, the Lady Chaps (25-18 overall) find themselves in third place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with a 12-8 record and are playing some good softball, thanks to a seven-game winning streak, heading into this weekend's series against Howard College (36-10, 17-3).

"At the beginning, we had some trouble," Weissenbach said, "but now that we're starting to get together as a team and play for each other, I think we're doing good."

Injuries hit the Lady Chaps hard at several key defensive positions, especially the outfield as sophomores Kelcey Gomez and Gaby Muniz both had to sit out. That forced Weissenbach, normally a pitcher, to play some outfield against Odessa College even though she had never played that position before.

"I just took it as a fun experience," said Weissenbach, the sophomore from Moreno Valley, Calif. "If I made a mistake, I tried not to get down because I

It's been four seasons since officials with the ASCO Midland Football Madness have been able to draw a pair of Class 5A schools from the Metroplex or other metropolitan areas in Texas.

This coming August, though, both Lee and Midland High will begin their inaugural Class 6A seasons with a school from the Metroplex and one from the San Antonio area at Grande Communications Stadium.

Lee will take on Metroplex squad Keller at 4:30 p.m. Aug. 28 in what is quite possibly the first Class 6A game in the state of Texas, and then a day later gave Lee a 4-1 lead, and it never lost it the rest of the game.

LEE

"In the bat I didn't feel it, but I knew it was a great hit," Marquez said. "I was just running so hard I knew I had to get safe on the base, but when I looked up everybody was up and I saw the ball go over. I was like, 'I did my job.'"

That home run changed the momentum of the game for both teams.

Lee found the offensive spark they've been wanting for the last few weeks, energizing the squad, meanwhile, Permian (17-10, 9-7) was struggling to find the energy and figure out Olivas.

"These girls have been through a lot and they've struggled there lately at the plate," Overton said. "They earned this and deserved this."

Lee tacked on single runs in the fifth when Sheppard hit a solo, opposite field home run to right-center, and then Cid Martin scored Kylee Olivas, who led off the inning with a triple, on a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Sheppard was a triple short of hitting for the cycle on Thursday night.

Meanwhile, after that first inning, Olivas didn't give the Lady Panthers a chance to put anything together. Olivas didn't allow her first walk until the sixth inning and for five of the seven innings faced three or four batters.

She was helped with some nifty defense as Gaby Hernandez snagged a pair of hard-hit line drives that would've been hits, including one on Miranda Martinez that ended the sixth inning with a runner on base.

"I didn't think we would beat Permian this bad over here," Olivas said. "It's always tough over here at Ratliff, it's always a really good game. We are very happy."

RockHounds	1

From staff reports

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midland's Billy Burns is tagged out at second base by San Antonio's B.J. Guinn on Thursday at Security Bank Ballpark.

Two home runs by the San Antonio Missions proved to be the difference in a 4-1 victory over the Midland RockHounds on Thursday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

The loss by the RockHounds (8-5) snaps a four-game winning streak.

The first run by the Missions (7-6) came courtesy of an error as an errant throw by third baseman Miles Head allowed Travis Jankowski to score in the top of the third.

Midland tied it up in the bottom of the third when Dusty Coleman singled and later scored on a Colin Walsh single.

San Antonio then took the lead for good in the top of the fourth when Jason Hagerty led off the inning with a solo home run to right field off Midland starter Tanner Peters (0-3).

The Missions made it 4-1 in the fifth when Bridger Hunt connected for a two-run blast of his own to right field.

The RockHounds had eight hits in the game but left 11 on base.

Devin Jones (2-1) got the win for the Missions, while Johnny Barbato picked up his fifth save of the season by pitching a perfect ninth.

The two teams will play the second game of a four-game series at 7 p.m. today at Security Bank Ballpark.

BURNS WINS AWARD: Midland outfielder Billy Burns won the MiLB.com Play of the Week for April 3-13 with 48 percent of the votes when he scored from second base on a sacrifice fly by D'Arby Myers against Northwest Arkansas on April 8.

LEE

gave Lee a 4-1 lead, and it never lost it the rest of the game.

"In the bat I didn't feel it, but I knew it was a great hit," Marquez said. "I was just running so hard I knew I had to get safe on the base, but when I looked up everybody was up and I saw the ball go over. I was like, 'I did my job.'"

That home run changed the momentum of the game for both teams.

Lee found the offensive spark they've been wanting for the last few weeks, energizing the squad, meanwhile, Permian (17-10, 9-7) was struggling to find the energy and figure out Olivas.

"These girls have been through a lot and they've struggled there lately at the plate," Overton said. "They earned this and deserved this."

Lee tacked on single runs in the fifth when Sheppard hit a solo, opposite field home run to right-center, and then Cid Martin scored Kylee Olivas, who led off the inning with a triple, on a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Sheppard was a triple short of hitting for the cycle on Thursday night.

Meanwhile, after that first inning, Olivas didn't give the Lady Panthers a chance to put anything together. Olivas didn't allow her first walk until the sixth inning and for five of the seven innings faced three or four batters.

She was helped with some nifty defense as Gaby Hernandez snagged a pair of hard-hit line drives that would've been hits, including one on Miranda Martinez that ended the sixth inning with a runner on base.

"I didn't think we would beat Permian this bad over here," Olivas said. "It's always tough over here at Ratliff, it's always a really good game. We are very happy."

Missions' 2 HRs upend RockHounds

Missions	4
RockHounds	1

From staff reports

Two home runs by the San Antonio Missions proved to be the difference in a 4-1 victory over the Midland RockHounds on Thursday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

The loss by the RockHounds (8-5) snaps a four-game winning streak.

The first run by the Missions (7-6) came courtesy of an error as an errant throw by third baseman Miles Head allowed Travis Jankowski to score in the top of the third.

Midland tied it up in the bottom of the third when Dusty Coleman singled and later scored on a Colin Walsh single.

San Antonio then took the lead for good in the top of the fourth when Jason Hagerty led off the inning with a solo home run to right field off Midland starter Tanner Peters (0-3).

The Missions made it 4-1 in the fifth when Bridger Hunt connected for a two-run blast of his own to right field.

The RockHounds had eight hits in the game but left 11 on base.

Devin Jones (2-1) got the win for the Missions, while Johnny Barbato picked up his fifth save of the season by pitching a perfect ninth.

The two teams will play the second game of a four-game series at 7 p.m. today at Security Bank Ballpark.

BURNS WINS AWARD: Midland outfielder Billy Burns won the MiLB.com Play of the Week for April 3-13 with 48 percent of the votes when he scored from second base on a sacrifice fly by D'Arby Myers against Northwest Arkansas on April 8.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

was there to mostly fill a spot. I just tried my best to be more of a motivation than anything else."

The same could be said for fellow sophomore Taylor Daniels, who was taken out of her comfort zone at third base to play shortstop. Daniels admits that even though shortstop is her secondary position, she was pressing.

"I felt (coach Tommy Ramos) needed me there because of injuries, and pressing too much is not a good thing," said Daniels, a sophomore from Norco, Calif. "Even with however many errors we've had, we've beaten teams, which is amazing. In the last four games, I think we had like three errors total. I think we finally got over the hump."

Ramos said the team has gotten some players back practicing this week such as Gomez, Muniz and sophomore infield Naomi Posada, even though they are less than 100 percent according to the coach.

"These girls are really tough and they want to play through these injuries," Ramos said. "It's hard for them sometimes to sit back and sit out because they don't realize that if they're not 100 percent they don't help us out as much as they could. I tell them it's OK, let somebody else step up, make them better and give them the opportunity, and try to get healthy going into the regional tournament."

Both Weissenbach and Daniels said they admire the way some players stepped up in place of those injured.

"We had a lot of our outfielders gone, which hurt, but I know that the girls who stepped in played to their potential," Weissenbach said. "Even though it hurt to have some of our big hitters gone, we got through it."

Said Daniels, "With the players that we had to put in, we got the job done. It didn't hurt us as bad as we thought it was going to, but it's definitely great to have (some of the injured players) back."

While the Howard series is a big one for both teams in the WJCAC standings, Ramos said his team's main focus is to work on its chemistry and improve.

"Don't get me wrong, we need to win, we want to win," Ramos said. "We also need to focus on putting the effort and the energy into these games as focusing more on the positives of playing. If you do the small things right you give yourself a good chance of winning some games."

After what these Lady Chaps have gone through this season, playing a talented team such as Howard won't be as daunting as it would have been a few weeks ago.

"I think we're ready for it," Daniels said. "I'm actually happy that we have them later in our season than earlier because we won't be as nervous. I think as a team we're a little more hungry."

When/where: Doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. today, Foundation Field, Big Spring; doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, Midland College softball field

Records: Midland College 25-18, 12-8 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference; Howard College 36-10, 17-3

Notes & quotes: This a big series for both teams with only eight games remaining on the WJCAC schedule. Midland College sits in third place, five games behind second-place Howard and three games ahead of Frank Phillips College. MC coach Tommy Ramos said his team is close to securing a berth in next month's six-team Region V West Tournament in Lubbock. Depending how his team does over the last two weeks, Ramos said MC could finish anywhere from third to sixth place. "We just need to take it one game at a time," Ramos said. "We need to go (to Howard) with some positive energy and give more effort than normal. We expect a good series. I know Howard is playing well, they have some talented kids, they hit the ball well and I think their pitching is definitely some of the best in our conference. They also come in with a lot of confidence. Like us they want to go into the regional tournament with a little bit of momentum." ...The Lady Chaparrals have gotten a few players back practicing with the team, although several are still not 100 percent in outfielders Kelcey Gomez, Gaby Muniz and INF Naomi Posada. Ramos said C Amy Anderson (shoulder), OF Melissa Zuniga (knee) INF Pililani Smith-Keopuhiwa (hand) are still dealing with injuries. ...Howard comes in batting .369 as a team and has nine players batting .330 or better. Freshman INF Corrina Liscano leads the team with a .553 average to go with 11 home runs and 56 RBI. Freshman INF Samantha Ohmie is hitting .331 with a team-high 16 home runs and 57 RBI. ...Saturday's home doubleheader for MC will be "Sophomore Day" as the Lady Chaps will honor their sophomore players.

Can Spurs survive the tough West?

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

To get another shot at LeBron James, the San Antonio Spurs may have to go through Dirk Nowitzki, then Dwight Howard and James Harden, and finally Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook.

Survive all that, and maybe they can avenge that NBA Finals heartbreak.

The Spurs host Dallas in their first playoff game Sunday, right before James and the Heat begin what they hope is a run to a third straight championship. Miami's path seems much easier, but James' team also appears more vulnerable than the one that was an overwhelming favorite in last year's playoffs.

The NBA postseason begins Saturday with four games: Top-seeded Indiana hosts Atlanta, and Brooklyn visits Toronto in the Eastern Conference, while the West series openers include Golden State at the Clippers, and Oklahoma City against Memphis.

ASCO

From 1C

Midland High will take on perennial playoff team Smithson Valley at 7:30 p.m.

The Bulldogs and Rebels have played schools from El Paso and the Panhandle since 2010, but this year officials were able to work out deals for Keller and Smithson Valley to come for two consecutive years.

"We talk about this all the time, but scheduling is almost impossible," Midland High coach Craig Yenzer said. "You try to schedule the El Paso schools, the Lubbock schools, the Amarillo schools, but you want to branch out a little bit. They present them with a little more incentive, some travel money. They really take care of them, and the way they are treated makes them want to come back. It helps with scheduling and getting a quality opponent is big."

Schedule

2014 ASCO Midland Football Madness

Saturday, Aug. 30
5 p.m. — Sands vs. Rotan
8 p.m. — Trinity vs. Loraine

2013 ASCS Midland Football Madness Scholarship winners
Bryson Murry, Lee

Michael Porras, Canutillo
Trinity Marshall Ragsdale

Leonard Crawford III, El Paso Coronado

Smithson Valley finished 10-1 in 2013, losing its opening-round playoff game to San Antonio Johnson.

Keller finished at 5-5 in 2013, and Lee coach James Morton said the move to Thursday was to help accommodate the Indians so they wouldn't have to spend the night and could get back home at a decent time after a long day.

"They were good enough to work with us, and it's the first game of the year and you've got all that built up," Morton said. "You can adjust on the front end easier than on the back end."

This year's schedule will feature two less games as Wolfforth Frenship is not returning after two years of playing a team from the El Paso area, and Coahoma and Forsan could not work out the scheduling to play their game again at Grande.

Greenwood will take on Seminole at 8 p.m. on Thursday, and Saturday's Six-Man games will feature Sands and Rotan at 5 p.m., and Trinity and Loraine at 8 p.m.

The National Weather Service reports most areas will see 0.25-0.50 of an inch of rain. Some storms could produce hail and wind gusts of 45 mph.

Weather Whys

Q: Does the sky look green during a tornado?

It can, said Brent McRoberts of Texas A&M University, but not always. "Often the sky appears almost black during a tornado, but sometimes there are greenish-looking tints to the clouds," he added. "Many tornadoes have hail right around them. What we do know for sure is that green skies do exist, but they are fairly rare. They may or may not contain a tornado, and they may or may not contain hail. We do know that they are almost always an indicator of severe weather, so if you see a thunderstorm approaching and the sky appears to look green, you should take cover immediately."

Weather Whys is a service of the Department of Atmospheric Sciences at Texas A&M.

Assistant's gruff attitude needs to be smoothed out

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: How do I deal with an assistant who keeps calling me a "brown-noser"? She did it again yesterday at a staff meeting in front of my boss and another assistant. It was the third time she has said it. She is gruff and rude, and several people have complained to me about her attitude.

Should I address her comments during her next employee evaluation, or would it be better to speak to her privately? — THE BOSS IN LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR BOSS: Talk to her privately and tell her what she said is insulting, not funny and you don't want it to be repeated. Then, put a note about her disrespectful attitude and poor judgment in her personnel file. And by all means revisit the subject at her next evaluation. She should also be made aware that people have complained about her rudeness.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to ask your readers — especially women — what is the one thing they feel is "make or break" in a relationship. A few months ago I divorced a man who was so disrespectful I don't think anyone in the world can match him.

As it turns out, I did myself a huge favor. Everything else — trust, compromise and honesty — is important in a relationship, but if there is no respect, it falls apart. That is what happened to me.

Abby, am I correct about respect being the most important aspect of a partnership? — DESERVING IN SALT LAKE CITY

DEAR DESERVING: I think so, and I'm sure most readers will agree. When people respect each other, it follows that there will be honesty, trust and a willingness to compromise. Without these components, relationships usually don't last — or they shouldn't.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I spent a lot of money flying to our grandnephew's bar mitzvah. We stayed in a hotel and spent the weekend celebrating with the family.

During the last event, a Sunday brunch, my wife was approached by her penny-pinching sister — the grandmother — who asked her to co-sponsor the brunch. My wife, who is naive regarding financial matters, agreed without consulting me.

A few days later, we received an email with an amount that is far more than I want to pay. Had I known in advance, we would have skipped the brunch. How should we proceed? — ON THE HOOK IN AUSTIN

DEAR ON THE HOOK: Your sister-in-law is a walking definition of the word "chutzpah." Your wife was wrong to obligate you without first making sure you agreed. That said, you have two choices: Refuse to share the cost of the brunch, which will embarrass your wife and cause hard feelings in the family, or grit your teeth, write a check and hope your wife has learned an expensive lesson.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You will need to organize an event or project at the last minute. There might be a snafu that could take more time than you would like to give. Know that you likely won't have a choice. Others might be noticing your inner glow. Tonight: Plan on running late.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1	1♠	2	3♠*
4	4♠	5	Pass
6	Pass	6	Pass
Pass	Pass

*Pre-emptive, four or more trumps, 4-7 points

Opening lead: Three of ♣

The poor diamond split would have doomed the contract had the opening lead been a club, but West cannot be seriously faulted for leading partner's suit.

South had plenty of problems anyway. Should he draw trumps, he would need the queen of diamonds to fall or the defense could cash a spade or two. The spirited bidding made a singleton diamond quite likely, and South felt that West, the pre-emptor, was the most likely to be short. What could he do if that were the case?

South ruffed the opening lead in dummy and led a diamond toward his hand, inserting his six when East played low! West was shocked to win his seven, but the contract was now unbeatable. South could win any return, draw the trumps, and run the diamonds. What a play!

It is easy to see that East could have defeated the slam by playing his 10 of diamonds at trick two, but how could he imagine that declarer would play dummy's six? In all fairness, it is hard to be too tough on East for this play. He would have needed X-ray vision to see what was about to happen.

Let's give full credit to South for his imaginative play. Had West's singleton been the queen or the 10, the defense would have been helpless.

Chipotle plans to hike prices

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chipotle is feeling confident that customers are willing to pay more for its burritos, bowls and tacos.

The Mexican food chain said Thursday that it would raise prices for the first time in three years as its popularity continues to soar. Menu boards with the new prices should start rolling out in coming weeks and be in place at all restaurants by this summer.

Executives have said in the past they were considering a hike of about 3 percent to 5 percent. That translates to an extra 24 cents to 40 cents for an $8 burrito bowl.

Jack Hartung, Chipotle's chief financial officer, said during a conference call with analysts that price is not the main reason customers visit its restaurants anyway.

Hartung also noted that the company had earned "permission" from customers to raise prices because of that experience. And if needed, he said Chipotle still had the leeway to further raise prices without scaring off customers.

The decision comes as higher costs for beef, avocados and cheese have pressured profit margins for the chain, with net income for the first quarter coming in below Wall Street expectations. Still, Chipotle said sales at established locations rose 13.4 percent during the period and it raised its outlook for the year. It now expects the sales figure to grow in the high-single digits, before factoring in the price hikes.

The Denver-based chain's popularity has surged in recent years because people like that they watch as they tell workers what toppings to put on their orders. The chain has also invested in marketing to build up its reputation as higher-quality alternative to places like Burger King and Wendy's.

Those traditional fast-food chains have struggled to grow sales as customers increasingly flock to foods they feel are fresh or higher in quality. In contrast to Chipotle, for instance, McDonald's has said it needs to focus on underscoring the value it offers.

McDonald's CEO Don Thompson has also noted that there is a bit of "bifurcation" in the fast-food industry, with better-off customers heading to the new breed of chains that charge more.

For the three months ended March 31, Chipotle Mexican Grill Inc. said net income rose 8 percent to $83.1 million, or $2.64 per share. That's up from $76.6 million, or $2.45 per share, a year ago. Analysts expected $2.86 per share, according to FactSet.

Revenue climbed a stronger-than-expected 24 percent to $904.2 million.

Chipotle has also been expanding rapidly. It opened 44 restaurants during the quarter and plans to open 180 to 195 restaurants during all of 2014. It already has more than 1,600 locations.

Its shares fell $32.79, or 5.9 percent, to $519.61, its biggest one-day drop since December 2010. Its shares are up almost 70 percent since a year ago.

Target hackers may take years to find

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secret Service investigators say they are close to gaining a full understanding of the methods hackers used to breach Target's computer systems last December.

But the agency said it could take years to identify the criminals who stole some 40 million debit and credit card numbers of Target shoppers and other personal information from as many as 70 million people in the pre-Christmas breach.

And it may take even longer to bring the offenders to justice. The federal investigation is complicated by the international nature of high-profile digital heists. The perpetrators are likely located overseas, which makes extradition and prosecution difficult.

As a result, the Secret Service is focused on monitoring the online activities of its suspects, in hopes that they'll be able to arrest them at an opportune moment, said Ari Baranoff, an assistant special agent in charge with the Secret Service's criminal investigative division.

"We take a lot of pride in having a lot of patience," Baranoff said during a rare sit-down interview with the Associated Press at the agency's headquarters in Washington. "There are individuals we've apprehended that we've known about for 10 years and we're very comfortable indicting these individuals, sitting back and waiting patiently until the opportunity arrives that we can apprehend them."

Target says it can't yet estimate what the breach will cost the company, but some analysts put it at close to half a billion dollars. The total cost of the breach —which also would include losses incurred by banks, consumers and others— could easily reach into the billions of dollars.

Target, which is in the midst of its own investigation, has said very little about how the breach happened, except that it believes the thieves gained entry to its systems by infiltrating computers owned by one of its vendors, thought to be a Pittsburgh-area heating and refrigeration business.

Baranoff couldn't speak specifically about the federal investigation into the Target breach, since the case is ongoing, but he talked candidly about the growing threat of large-scale, financially motivated cybercrimes and the Secret Service's efforts to stop them.

Behind every major breach, there's usually a team of highly specialized cybercriminals who mainly know each other through online nicknames and reputations. Most aren't motivated by politics, just greed, Baranoff said.

Coffee surges on renewed concern about crop

The price of coffee surged on Thursday on renewed concerns about the outlook for Brazil's crop.

Coffee for July delivery jumped 15.25 cents, or 8.1 percent, to $2.04 per pound.

The price of coffee beans has risen about 85 percent this year on concerns that dry weather in Brazil will damage the harvest there. Brazil is the world's largest coffee producer, accounting for about a third of global production, according to the International Coffee Organization.

The catalyst for the move higher on Thursday was a crop inspection report from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based coffee importer, Wolthers Douque. The report predicted that 35 percent of the coffee crop would be lost in the South Minas region of Brazil due to unfavorable weather.

Wheat for July rose 3.8 cents, or 0.5 percent, to $6.99 a bushel. Corn for the same month fell 3 cents, or 0.6 percent, to $5 a bushel and soybeans fell 6.5 cents, or 0.4 percent, to $15.02 a bushel.

Gold for June fell $9.60, or 0.7 percent, to $1,293.90 an ounce. Silver for May dropped 3.8 cents, or 0.2 percent, to $19.60 an ounce. July platinum dropped $9.10, or 0.6 percent, to $1,428.70 an ounce.

Copper for May rose 2 cents, or 0.6 percent, to $3.05 a pound. Palladium for June climbed $4.80, or 0.6 percent, to $807.10 an ounce.

In energy trading, May crude rose 54 cents to $104.30 a barrel.

The price of natural gas surged after the Energy Department reported that U.S. storage levels rose less than analysts had expected. Natural gas for May delivery rose 21.1 cents to $4.74 per 1,000 cubic feet.
