Slain Boy's Mother Last To Testify In Murder Trial

By FRANK PATRICK

WICHITA FALLS — Testimony in the Philip Carey Brasfield capital murder trial closed on an emotional note here Thursday as Mrs. Johnny Turner Sr. rocked with grief after telling of the disappearance of her dead son.

The state rested its case against Brasfield immediately thereafter, and the defense presented no evidence.

The case is scheduled to go to the jury today after final arguments from attorneys.

Instead, they are relying on witness accounts which place the defendant with the Turner child in Lubbock shortly after the boy disappeared from home and on other accounts placing him near the area where the body eventually wasdiscovered.

Two witnesses who knew the slain child Thursday made positive identifications of Brasfield as the man they saw with the victim about 5:30 p.m. last Oct. 26.

Two other witnesses said they believed Brasfield is the white man they saw in the company of a small black child, but said they were not positive.

Also Thursday, two of Brasfield's friends testified they encountered the defendant driving on Horseshoe Bend Road between 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. that date. The road winds toward Slaton from the Yellowhouse Canyon area where the body was found.

Beer Session Recalled

Those witnesses — Armando Rameriz and Jerry Wayne Robinson — said they drank beer with the defendant at his Slaton home the night Brasfield allegedly abducted and killed the Turner child.

The capital murder indictment against the bearded, 28-year-old defendant alleges he murdered the victim during the course of a kidnapping.

The victim disappeared from his 1028 E. 29th St. Lubbock residence Oct. 26, and his partially-nude body was found in a Yellowhouse Canyon ravine eight days later.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue.

Mrs. Turner, wearing a light blue dress with a matching blouse and sweater, had to pause several times as she recounted routine events during the last day she ever saw her son.

She said she had picked the child up at school about 3 p.m. and taken him to a barber shop before letting him go outside to play shortly before 5 p.m.

Mrs. Turner said she had checked outside a few minutes later and saw her son playing with some other children.

Last Mother Sees Of Boy

"Have you ever seen your boy again since you observed him playing with those other children?" Lubbock Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin asked.

"No, I haven't," Mrs. Turner said after a pause of several seconds, her voice breaking.

Griffin asked how the victim was attired, and then gripped a small pair of tennis shoes which had earlier been introduced into evidence.

"Can you tell me if these are the shoes Johnny was wearing?" the prosecutor asked.

The grieving mother identified the shoes. She then buried her face in her hands, sobbing.

Rameriz and Robinson said they were working at a job site near Posey, about midway between Slaton and Lubbock when they first saw Brasfield, about 3:30 p.m. Oct. 26.

They indicated the defendant told them he was going to Lubbock.

The witnesses said that after getting off work they bought some beer. They said they were sitting in a car on a dirt road adjacent to Horseshoe Bend Road when they saw Brasfield a second time that day.

Talk With Brasfield

According to the testimony, Brasfield was driving a pickup truck south toward Slaton and away from the canyon area. Rameriz and Robinson indicated that Brasfield stopped and talked with them a few minutes, and indicated arrangements were made for the trio to get together later that night at Brasfield's house.

Cecille Joyce Hunter and Teddy Robinson testified Brasfield was the man they saw with the victim in Lubbock about 5:30 p.m.

The 13-year-old Robinson said he saw Brasfield with the victim, whom he knew, travelling on Southeast Drive about two blocks from the apartment complex where the Turners lived.

Mrs. Hunter identified Brasfield as the man she saw with the victim about 5:30

Italy Opens 'War' On Kidnappers

ROME (AP) — In one of Europe's boldest terror strikes, a dozen armed extremists Thursday kidnapped five-time former Premier Aldo Moro, Italy's probable next president, killing his five bodyguards in a meticulously planned street ambush.

The government reacted swiftly with a manhunt of unprecedented scope that turned Rome into a besieged city. "We are at war," declared Italy's chief prosecutor, Giovanni de Matteo.

Red Brigades Blamed

Telephone calls to the news media said the radical leftist Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang, seized the 61-year-old Moro as "an attack to the heart of the state." Moro, leader of the dominant Christian Democrat Party, is considered Italy's most influential politician.

(Related Stories, Page 12, Sec. B)

The government threw 50,000 troops and police, aided by helicopter andtrackers dogs, into the search for Moro and his captors — 11 men and one woman.

Italy's major unions called a one-day work stoppage and massed hundreds of thousands of workers in city squares throughout the nation to protest the attack.

Italians Stay Home

Shops were shuttered, offices emptied as Italians stayed home watching the latest developments on television. Solemn music was played between news broadcasts.

Condemnations of the attack were issued by many Western governments. President Carter called it an "outrage" that "deeply affects all of us." Pope Paul VI, in a message to Moro's wife, Eleanora, said he was praying that the "authors of this tragic attempt return your dear husband unharmed."

The Soviet news agency Tass described the attack as a "new dangerous provocation" by "the forces of reaction," an ap-

Sheats Challenges Hance To Debate

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MORRIS Sheats has become a prophet.

The Democratic Congressional candidate Thursday challenged his opponent, state Sen. Kent Hance, to a debate and said he would debate Hance "anytime, any place he agrees to."

However, the Trinity Church pastor predicted Hance would not accept the challenge.

He was right.

"It has been an American tradition that the candidate who finds himself way behind in the race will challenge the leading candidate to a debate," Hance said Thursday.

A debate would "gain the trailing candidate increased exposure with the leading candidate," he said.

Tags Sheats "Worried"

"I am truly gratified Rev. Morris Sheats knows about this custom — it tells us he is truly worried about his progress in the campaign.

"No, I will not debate him," Hance said.

The state senator noted the public is "still upset about Ford and Carter tying up TV time" for the presidential debates. "I sure don't need them mad at me," he said.

Hance said he had appeared at forums with Sheats where the "issues have been discussed," and would continue to do so as his schedule permits.

The Lubbock attorney said he had appeared at every forum to which he'd been invited, and said Sheats had missed some of those.

Asked if he felt any pressure to debate Sheats, Hance said "goodness no," and said the debate challenge "makes me feel good."

Sheats had proposed a televised debate between the two Democratic opponents sponsored by a non-partisan organization such as the League of Women Voters.

However, league president Carolyn Lanier said the organization would not sponsor a debate, but was contemplating a televised forum involving both Republican and Democratic Congressional candidates.

If that forum is held, candidates would have the opportunity to speak and then would be questioned by league members.

In the same session with Avalanche-Journal editorial staff members which produced the debate challenge, Sheats promised he would "conduct a sample survey of 400 registered voters (in the district) to get their feedback on issues" every four months.

He also repeated his primary campaign promise of returning to "every county

President Hails 'PromisingStep'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved the first of two Panama Canal treaties Thursday with one vote to spare, delivering to President Carter a victory he had said was vital to his credibility as an international leader.

The 68-to-32 vote came on a treaty that provides for permanent neutrality of the 64-year-old waterway and for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense after the year 2000.

Still to be considered is the second treaty which provides for the gradual transfer of the canal to Panama over the next 22 years. In addition, both houses of Congress must approve a huge package of legislation to implement the turnover.

Carter Hails "Promising Step"

Shortly after the vote, Carter read a brief statement to reporters, saying "approval of the treaty marks a new and promising step" in relations with all of Latin America.

The Carter administration had repeatedly stressed that an adverse decision on the pact could undermine U.S. efforts to improve its image in Latin America.

Approval came only after the Senate passed an amendment that would permit U.S. military forces to intervene to keep the canal open after control is transferred.

The amendment by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., would allow intervention even if canal operations were threatened by labor strikes or other internal Panamanian problems.

Insure Accessibility

However, Carter said in his statement that the treaty will insure neutrality and accessibility of the canal but will not include a "right of intervention" in the internal affairs of Panama.

Sources familiar with Panamanian thinking on the issue indicated the government of Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos might reject the DeConcini amendment.

(Vote Breakdown, Page 3, Sec. A)

DeConcini acknowledged the State Department had asked him to soften the wording of his amendment because it could cause problems with Panama. But he contended the language had to be specific so there could be no misunderstandings about U.S. rights to intervene.

New Talks Rejected

Before voting approval of ratification, the Senate turned down 67-33 a motion by Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., to send the pact back to Carter for renegotiation.

Earlier, a White House spokesman, Rex Granum, acknowledged that Carter had spent 15 to 20 minutes talking by telephone to Torrijos Wednesday. Granum said the call was prompted by reports of Panamanian "concerns and questions" about treaty amendments.

Panama's ambassador to the United Nations, Jorge Illeuca, said Torrijos himself would have to evaluate the effect of the DeConcini amendment on the treaties as a whole.

The ambassador said Carter told Torrijos "to be patient and wait" for the final version to emerge from the Senate. Illeuca said Torrijos replied: "You've got to take a parachute of dignity and make certain you land in a field of peace" — an apparent reminder that Panama wants to maintain its dignity and that there is a possibility of violence in Panama.

The canal was built by the United

U.S. Urges Israeli Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States demanded Thursday that Israel withdraw from southern Lebanon, possibly to be replaced by a United Nations peacekeeping force to promote stability in the area.

"We expect Israel to withdraw and we have made our views in this respect known to the Israeli government," said the U.S. statement, issued at President Carter's direction by the State Department.

The statement said "the only real solution" to Israel's security problem and Mideast violence generally is a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"We don't intend to be distracted from efforts to resolve these basic problems," said the statement read by spokesman Hodding Carter.

He said the United States was exploring, in "urgent discussions" at the United Nations and elsewhere, arrangements for southern Lebanon's future and that it would support Security Council consideration of placing a peacekeeping force in the area.

The statement appeared calculated to respond to Arab demands for Israeli withdrawal and Israel's concern that terrorists not use southern Lebanon as a staging ground for future forays.

However, the U.S. stand left open the question of whether all sides in the Middle East conflict and the Soviet Union could reach agreement on a formula to maintain the U.S. objectives of "stability and security."

It was not clear whether the U.S. position diverges from the Israeli government's view that its troops should remain in southern Lebanon until arrangements are completed for preventing Palestinian terrorists from staging raids from the area.

Spokesman Carter, although declining extensive elaboration, said there has to be "a linkage" between the U.S.-de-

Farmers Stage Sit-In

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government decided not to arrest a group of angry farmers who refused the vacate an Agriculture Department meeting room by a Thursday evening deadline.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland recommended that federal officers allow the the group to stay at the USDA all night if they chose.

The farmers remained in the room hours later arguing whether to leave voluntarily or wait until morning.

Federal officers had told the group that they had to quit the premises by 5:30 p.m. CST or be arrested for unlawful entry.

The sit-in began after more than 50 of about 2,000 marching farmers of American Agriculture forced their way into the department's adminstration building in a scuffle with security guards.

After riot police restored order, about 15 of the farmers were admitted to meet with department officials on a promise that they would leave after work and cause no further trouble.

They were joined in the meeting by as many as 30 others who managed to remain behind or who were in the building before the break-in.

At the meeting, officials told farmers that Bergland planned to meet with some of them today. They demanded to see him or President Carter immediately and were turned down.

Bergland was in the building at the time of the break-in shortly after 9 a.m. CST and was about to convene a meeting of the department's Commodity Credit Corp.

The meeting was hastily adjourned and Bergland was escorted out a side door by security agents. Several of his top aides also were told to leave.

"I don't know what the problem is," Bergland told a reporter as he left the building. "I was told by my security people to leave."

The forcible entry occurred after about 2,000 chanting farmers representing American Agriculture marched to the department from Capitol Hill. Attempts by security officials to halt them and to talk it over were ignored.

Backed by others, the march leaders crushed against the door, breaking it, and flowed into the patio. At one point, firecrackers were touched off, causing bystanders to think they were gunshots.

One farmer, not identified, was taken into custody, but Smith said that "we probably won't charge him, he's just a hothead."

Walter Evanoff, deputy chief of the Federal Protective Service, said that the farmer would probably be released because "we made a deal to keep them

Hospital's First Month Labeled Success

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE HEALTH Sciences Center Hospital's first month in business was clearly a success — drawing more patients, especially paying patients, than the Lubbock County Hospital District had ever imagined.

And Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its $23 million medical facility, says initial statistics for March suggest that trend will continue.

"It is gratifying to me that many people must view the Health Sciences Center Hospital as their hospital — a community hospital — rather than the stereotyped 'county hospital,'" Bosworth said Thursday.

As evidence, he cited the "remarkable achievements" since the 245-bed facility, primary teaching hospital for the adjoining Texas Tech University School of Medicine, opened Feb. 1.

Since opening day, the hospital has had available only 105 beds (including infant beds in the facility's exclusive neonatal intensive care unit) and 28 bassinets, Bosworth said.

But average daily occupancy has been running about 25 on the bassinets and 80 to 85 on the other accommodations, he said. Thus, on a typical day, 80-85 percent of the hospital's available beds and bassinets are occupied.

Bosworth called the occupancy levels "very encouraging." He said the occupancy percentage is "most reasonable" from a financial standpoint and "as good or better as many hospitals I know of."

Still, on busy days, the Health Sciences Center Hospital has had as many as 129 of its beds and bassinets filled. On Wednesday, for instance, patient census hit 126.

At times, Bosworth said, the number of patients in one department has overflowed into another. "We're pressing the limit" in certain areas, he said.

So Bosworth said he hopes to open in June a 36-bed wing on the west side of the facility's third floor for surgical patients. Presently such patients are accommodated in a combined medical-surgical wing, he said.

Opening another wing, he said, will give the hospital one 36-bed unit just for medical patients and another for surgical patients.

Bosworth also said he is "shooting for May to open about four beds in the pediatric intensive care unit" of the new facility.

Bosworth said the hospital has adequate staffing, including 155 registered nurses and licensed vocational nurses, for the currently available beds. Opening another 36-bed wing will require about 20 more nurses, and activating the pediatric intensive care unit will necessitate about four nurses, he said.

He hopes to be able to recruit such personnel as the nation's nursing schools' graduate students in June.

"It's really gratifying to see the use made of the beds that are opened," Bosworth said. Hospital officials had not expected to achieve such a high patient census until the end of the first year's operation.

Bosworth attributed the surprising

Industry Output Up Despite Weather

WASHINGTON (AP) — Handicapped by bad weather, the homebuilding industry struggled through another weak month in February, but an increase in building permits pointed to an improved performance ahead, government figures showed Thursday.

The Commerce Department said housing starts during February were at an annual rate of 1,580,000, up 2 percent from January's total of 1,547,000, but 10 percent below the homebuilding pace a year earlier.

Meanwhile, the nation's industry shook off the effects of bad weather and the coal strike to register a solid 0.5 percent increase in output during February, reversing most of an 0.8 percent decline a month earlier, the Federal Reserve Board said.

The board said that if the weather and the coal strike had not intervened, production of the nation's mines, factories and utilities probably would have been as much as 0.2 percent higher and probably would have increased another 0.2 percent in February.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that some 22,900 fcre ..... uers and some 20,000 transportation workers were laid off during the week ended March 11 because of shortages of coal or electricity.

The estimate, by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, showed a reduction of factory unemployment blamed on the coal strike from the 25,500 reported layoffs the previous week. But the actual total number of layoffs may be substantially higher than those reported.

An increase in production by the nation's automakers was a major contributor to industrial gains in February. Auto assemblies were up 3.8 percent to an annual rate of 8.2 million unitsn the board said.

The homebuilding industry had a very good year in 1977, when new housing starts were just under two million.

While adverse weather is responsible for much of the slowdown so far in 1978, increased interest rates and a slowdown in investment funds also contributed, according to Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders.

He said about two-thirds of the slowdown in building can be blamed on the weather, noting that much of the slowdown in housing starts has occurred in the northeast United States.

He said he expects the industry to recover some momentum as spring approaches, and that total starts for the year should be about 1,750,000, which he said should be considered a good rate of growth.

The Commerce Department said single-family housing starts in February were at a rate of 1,091,000 units, down from the January rate of 1,155,000. Units in apartment buildings, however, were up significantly to a rate of 403,000, compared with January's 292,000.

The board said its industrial production index for February stood at 139.2 percent of the 1967 average of 100, about the same level as in the final quarter of 1977 and 4.5 percent higher than in February of last year.

The Federal Reserve Board said production of consumer durable goods such as autos, appliances and furniture increased 2.7 percent during February, although it was still below the December level. It said production of business equipment increased 0.9 percent in February and was 6 percent above the pre-recession peak in the third quarter of 1974.

Production of energy materials was down during the month by 1.8 percent, chiefly because of coal-induced electrical power shortages.

Industrial production had declined by an alarming 0.8 percent in January, with the weather largely blamed. That was one of the sharpest drops since the recession.

In another report Thursday, the Commerce Department said manufacturing and trade inventories increased $2.2 billion in January, reversing a small December decline, largely because of a dropoff in total business sales of 2.9 percent during the month.

It said inventories increased $749 million at the manufacturing level, $676 million at wholesale and $743 million at retail. Total inventories at the end of January were at a seasonally adjusted $229.5 billion.

House Okays Humphrey-Hawkins Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed on Thursday the Humphrey-Hawkins bill designed to steer the nation toward a full employment economy.

The final vote was 257 to 152. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Earlier, the House rejected, 276 to 137, a Republican substitute that would have put a 3 percent target on inflation along with the bill's goal of lowering unemployment to 4 percent by 1983. The substitute also would have created a presidential task force to study youth unemployment.

The bill culminates a four-year effort by its prime sponsors, Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., and the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and a coalition of groups concerned with labor, women, civil rights, church and community activists.

In addition to the five-year target of reducing unemployment to 4 percent, the bill provides mechanisms for the first time for coordinating federal economic policies. This would mean the Congress, the administration and the quasi-independent Federal Reserve would coordinate policies toward the full employment goal.

The bill does not specify what tools the president can use to push unemployment down — it currently is at 6.1 percent — but he would be required to specify his plans in an annual message to Congress.

As the final votes were being cast, Sen. Muriel Humphrey, who succeeded her husband in office, entered the House chamber for a rare visit. She was greeted with applause and talked briefly with Hawkins and Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill before leaving.

Numerous amendments were added to the bill during four days of House deliberations.

At mid-day members had rejected, 310-106, a move by Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., to kill the bill.

But the exchange between Wiggins and Majority Leader Jim Wright dramatized the election-year pressures that both propelled the bill forward and loaded it with amendments.

Wiggins said the bill had begun as a modest measure.

"Since then it has grown into an absolutely unworkable monster and the beat goes on," Wiggins said.

The goals now are expanded to express concern about inflation, a balanced budget, foreign trade imbalances, veterans, the elderly, the handicapped and parity for farmers, Wiggins said.

"And just a moment ago we gleefully added capital formation as one of the things that will be given consideration," Wiggins said.

"Is it not clear that this seedling has grown into an unmanageable Christmas tree? We should chop it down right now," Wiggins said.

Wright said the amendments have not sabotaged the bill but have strengthened it in most cases.

"We set a goal of fighting inflation. What's inharmonious about that with the full employment goal of the bill? Balancing the budget — what's wrong with that? Only when we get full employment will we get a balanced budget," Wright said.

One of Thursday's additions calls for studying ways to trim red tape that undercuts many federal programs, Wright said. He called it a clearly laudable goal.

Most of the amendments were first offered by Republicans in thinly veiled attempts to kill the bill or at least amend it to death. In most cases, Democrats offered watered-down substitutes that were accepted instead.

Earlier, the House narrowly rejected by a 204-199 vote an amendment by Democratic Rep. Otis Pike of New York that would have changed the way unemployment is calculated.

"We shouldn't trigger this massive program by counting those who don't want to work or who are between jobs or who quit their last job," Pike said. He also would have exempted strikers from the definition of unemployed persons in efforts to reach the 4 percent jobless goal.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., said Pike's definition would have the effect of raising the unemployment target from 4 percent to 8 percent.

"We would be saying that in 1977 when we had more than 7 percent unemployment, that we really had no unemployment," Hawkins said.

Family, Friends Attend Party For Mrs. Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Pat Nixon tuned 66 Thursday, and a staff member said, "She is having dinner this evening with family and friends to celebrate her birthday."

Julie Nixon Eisenhower and her husband David, who are expecting a baby, planned to join Mrs. Nixon and former president Richard M. Nixon for the party. But the Nixons' other daughter, Tricia Cox, and her husband Edward, who live in New York, were not scheduled to attend.

There was no comment from the Nixon staff on the health of the former first lady. Mrs. Nixon suffered a partially paralyzing stroke in July 1976. Her doctor, John C. Lungren, said he could not release any information on the progress of her recovery.

As winds Thursday blew generally from the north, afternoon temperatures across the state ranged from the mid 50s to lower 70s. The afternoon extremes varied from 54 at Amarillo to 72 at Corpus Christi.

Fair skies also are predicted to remain over much of the rest of the nation today with some rain expected in Washington and western Montana and snow from New England into the Appalachians, reaching into Ohio.

Heavy snows and thunderstorms prevailed over most of the eastern states Thursday, along with unseasonably cold temperatures, while the western half generally enjoyed fair skies and warm temperatures.

French Minister Plane Missing

FREIBURG, West Germany (AP) — A small plane carrying a former French cabinet minister was reported missing Thursday. Police said they combed this Black Forest region for three hours but failed to locate it.

The search was called off at nightfall and was to resume at dawn Friday.

Missing were Andre Bulloche, now a member of parliament and deputy mayor of the Vosges town of Montbeliard, and the pilot, who was not identified.

The search began after the twin-engine Piper Apache failed to arrive on time at its destination 22 miles southwest of Freiburg.

Air controllers said they lost radar contact with the plane and speculated it may have crashed in the thickly wooded, mountainous Black Forest region south of here.

Texas Senators Split Over Treaty Provisos

WASHINGTON (AP) — As expected, Texas' senators split their vote on the Panama Canal Nuetrality Treaty Thursday with Democrat Lloyd Bentsen backing the treaty and Republican John Tower opposing it.

As a standing-room-only crowd watched, the Senate dramatically ratified the controversial treaty by a 68-32 margin, one vote more than needed.

The treaty ratified Thursday spells out the rights of the United States to defend and use the canal once it is turned over to Panama. The second treaty — which makes the canal Panamanian property — will be considered later.

Thursday's vote was seen as a crucial test for the Carter Administration.

Bentsen called the vote a "win for the President, but not a major win...it would have been a major loss. He was expected to win it."

Bentsen noted that the attatchment of two amendments to the treaties had assured his "yea" vote.

Bentsen said the two amendments makes it possible for the U.S. "to intervene unilaterally, militarily forever, to protect the neutrality of the canal and that our ships will be allowed to go to the head of the line in case of an emergency. Those two admendments have been attached to the treaties and without them, I would not have voted for it."

"It's an ambiguous and weak document," countered Tower. "It'll be extremely difficlut, if not impossible, for the United States to act should the nuetrality pact be violated in the future. This agreement fails to recognize that the most serious threat to the canal's security cold well be instability within the country of Panama itself.

"Far stronger assurances of U.S. intervention rights are necessarry. There is no guarantee that the U.S. will be able to maintain any military presence in Panama after the year 2000," Tower continued.

"I think the majority of my collegues have overlooked the fact that with the absence of continued U.S. military presence in the canal zone there will be an insufficient deterrent to instability in Panama which could easily disrupt the future opertion of the canal."

Responding to reports that the speaker of the Texas House, Bill Clayton, had said ratification of the treaties will cost Texans jobs, Bentsen said: "I talked to people in Panama and had them develop for me figures as to how much trade went to Texas ports (via the canal) but the key to it is seeing that the canal is accessable. That's what we all want. I believe if the treaties are defeated, we'll have problems insofar as passage. I think you'll see riots and you'll see problems with passage through the canal. I think one of the surest ways to have access to that canal for Texas industry and Texas agricluture is to have the Panamanians have an interest in it.

"Then who's hurt the most if the traffic is stopped? It'll be the Panamanians because they'll be losing revenue that is critical to them. I think passage of the treaties helps insure access to the canal... then we have a 22-year transition period to train the Panamanians before we pass the authority on to them."

Tower said that while the Presdent has won round one, the fight is far from finished.

"I do not believe the vote today will be necessarily be repeated when the roll is called on the second round," Tower said. "So while I'm disappointed in the action of the senate here today, I'm not totally convinced the same vote will occur when we conclude our deliberations on the Panama Canal treaty itself."

When asked if the White House lobbying had been lacking on the canal issue, Bentsen replied: "I don't think so. They've done everything they could. It's a tough, controversial, emotional issue and I think senators are going to make up their own minds...it would be a rare situation where the White House will be able to seriously influence a vote."

Bentsen added that despite "all the rumors I've heard, I don't know of any deals being offered and I assue you no deal has been offered me and I requested no deal. I can't imagine anything they could offer me that would influence a vote of such magnitude."

Senate Roll Call Cloaked In Drama

WASHINGTON (AP) — The senator who cast the deciding vote on the first of the Panama Canal treaties Thursday didn't even know history had called his name.

"I didn't hear my name," said Sen. Gaylord Nelson. "I didn't even know I was the 67th vote."

As for his footnote in history, Nelson said "it's all right with me. I've been for the treaties all along. It's the first definitive vote I've cast in my life."

The Senate galleries were filled when the clerk began calling the roll for the vote on the treaty which would guarantee the neutrality of the canal once it is turned over to Panama. Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz, the U.S. negotiators, looked down on the chamber from different sections of the gallery.

In the usual manner, the clerk called the 100 names in alphabetical order. But in a manner most unusual, every senator was in the chamber when his name was called.

Only three failed to respond.

Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd was standing in an aisle keeping track of the vote as the names were called. He ignored the call of his own name.

The next senator who failed to respond was Nelson.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, Byrd's senior Democratic colleague from West Virginia, sat uncomfortably as the tally moved down the alphabet toward his name. Randolph is up for re-election and faces a tough Republican opponent. He had refused to say how he would vote.

When his name was called, Randolph said nothing.

And then the clerk reached the final names. The count was 66 to 31. Three more votes to be cast.

"Aye."

The 67th vote and approval of the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of the Panama Canal was assured.

"Mr. Byrd of West Virginia."

"Mr. Randolph of West Virginia."

"No."

The tally was complete.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale rapped the ivory gavel and announced the total, 68 to 32, and declared "the resolution of ratification is agreed to."

Through the calling of the roll, the chamber and the galleries had been silent except for the clerk's voice and the responses.

When the roll call was completed the silence was broken by a stirring that filled the domed chamber as spectators moved to the gallery exits and senators left their seats to congratulate Byrd, who had masterminded the strategy for treaty supporters, and Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., who had worked with him.

It was Jimmy Carter's biggest victory on Capitol Hill. But before he and his Senate allies could rest, there was work to be done.

When order was restored in the chamber, Byrd took the floor and moved "to proceed to consideration of calendar order number two, the Panama Canal Treaty."

AN EDITORIAL:

School Tiff--Time To Cool It

IN THE WAKE of the preliminary hearing on Lubbock's school integration plan, it must occur to some that much ado is being made over the wrong thing.

While we feel the Board of Trustees could have handled the Amarillo conference with Judge Hal Woodward and the Justice Department people more openly with those they represent, in the final analysis that is not the most important thing involved here.

THE KEY point to remember is that the board has come up with a proposal, still subject to change, which on the surface seems to be fair and workable, and equally vital, satisfactory to a majority of the citizens.

Criticism has been directed at the trustees for "misleading" parents and various groups for allegedly inviting input after the board "already had its mind made up."

As various members of the board have emphasized, the Amarillo session, as we understand it, was to see if the trustees were headed in the right direction.

After all, had they not been, then whatever plan or proposal they tentatively had in mind, with or without input, would have gone down the drain anyway.

WE FEEL THAT it should be obvious to those making the most of the issue that the board indeed did take into consideration what parents thought.

And it should be noted that the board listened to and responded to the wishes of black parents, particularly, in not closing Ella Isles Elementary School.

And instead of closing it, in making it a magnet school, it now appears that it will do exactly what its backers hope—attract others from outside its normal attendance zone.

WE WILL AGREE that the board should have just come out and said it planned to check along the way to see if the "powers that be" agreed it was on the right track.

There is no substitute for openess in public affairs. And in this instance, we seriously doubt it would have made any difference. After all, knowledge of such a meeting was certain to come out sooner or later.

But, having said that, and hoping the trustees have learned a minor lesson, we also hope that those who would use the matter as a springboard to seek further changes, or perhaps even spark rejection of the tentative plan, would cease and desist.

After all, formal approval of a plan for Lubbock, particularly by the Justice Department and higher courts, could be a long way off. And the truth is that what we have may turn out to look like the end of the rainbow a few months hence.

AN EDITORIAL:

Un-Natural Is Just As Good

PROMOTERS AND manufacturers talk fast and loose about the goodness of so-called natural foods, emphasizing and re-emphasizing their claims that natural foods are better foods.

But nutritionists, the folks who ought to know, report that there is no scientific basis for claims that organically grown health foods are "nutritionally superior" to food grown under standard agricultural conditions.

Foods such as vegetables, fish and cheese available from any reliable grocery store are of equal nutritional value to the more exotic fare in health food shops, according to information published by Dr. Sarah Short, professor of nutrition at Syracuse University.

"MANY HEALTH foods have been tested by food technologists and found to have even more evidence of pesticides remaining than ordinary foods purchased in supermarkets," Dr. Short says.

Many folks claim that food tastes better if it is grown with natural fertilizer. However, while Dr. Short admits garden-fresh foods usually taste better than those that have been shipped and stored, she argues it is the freshness, not the choice of fertilizer, that is responsible.

Some health-oriented problems can be traced to health food stores themselves. "It may be very quaint for a store to invite customers to dip into open bins of seeds or grain," Dr. Short says, "but who knows what dirty hands, insects or rodents have been there as well?"

IRONICALLY, the nutritionist says, health-food disciples may have diets actually lacking in certain vitamins and proteins.

Furthermore, vitamin deficiencies brought about by poorly balanced diets can be critical for adolescents and adults. But critical becomes "perilous" for infants and children.

With the prices of organic foods ranging from 30 to 100 per cent more than other foods, consumers have some big decisions to make on how to spend their dollars.

And just because someone affixes the word "natural," "organic" or "health food" to his door, it's no guarantee that his products are superior to others in any way.

M. STANTON EVANS:

U.S. Has Covered Nicely For KGB, Says Evidence

WASHINGTON—It becomes increasingly obvious that Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of President John F. Kennedy, was connected to the Soviet KGB.

The latest revelations to this effect are presented by researcher-writer Edward Jay Epstein in his newly published study, "Legend: The Secret World of Lee Harvey Oswald."

This volume, currently being serialized in Reader's Digest, makes it clear that Oswald had important linkages to the Soviets, which they were at considerable pains to cover up.

In a painstaking research effort, Epstein traces some of Oswald's early history that is usually neglected in discussions of the Kennedy assassination:

His early conversion to Marxism, his bitterness toward the United States in general and toward the Marine Corps in particular, and his carefully laid plans to defect to the Soviet Union in 1959.

IN ADDITION, Epstein shows that Oswald had access to secrets of our radar operation in Japan and was a member of the radar team that tracked our super-secret spy plane, the U-2.

Gaining knowledge of this plane was a major object of Soviet intelligence, and Epstein's discussion raises the intriguing possibility that it was through the data supplied by Oswald that the Soviets were able to shoot down Francis Gary Powers in 1960.

Epstein also notes a number of mysterious Oswald contacts while he was in Japan, including reported associations with Japanese Communists, apparent access to money beyond his Marine Corps salary and dealings with someone who helped to teach him the Russian language preparatory to his defection.

EVEN MORE instructive is the fact that Oswald, once inside the Soviet Union, lived a life of comparable ease and luxury, an infallible sign of high official favor.

All of this fits with the growing pattern of evidence connecting Oswald with the global Communist enterprise, both overseas and in the United States.

As previously noted by such researchers as Albert Newman and Michael Eddowes, Oswald had multiple contacts with the Soviets, the Communist Cubans, the Communist Party of the United States, the Socialist Workers Party and various other Marxist and pro-Communist outfits after he returned to the United States.

Of special significance was the fact that Oswald, two months before the Kennedy murder, traveled to Mexico where he made contact with both the Cuban and Soviet embassies.

WHY WASN'T ALL this brought out in the Warren Commission report? Why was evidence of Oswald's Marxist orientation downplayed, and data pointing to his specific KGB connections ignored entirely?

One of Epstein's major efforts is to address himself to this continuing mystery, and the story he spins is one of Byzantine deception by the Soviets and an almost incredible coverup by high officials in the United States.

Epstein reveals that in the wake of the Kennedy assassination, a curious "defector" from the Soviet Union popped up in the West.

His principal mission seemed to be to spread the story that Oswald had nothing to do with the KGB, that he was strictly a loner and an oddball and was never trusted or used by the Soviets.

MORE OR LESS by default, this story was adopted by American official agencies, including the Warren Commission, and became the accepted version of Oswald's history.

The "legend" that Oswald was a lone crackpot, launched by a mysterious emissary from the KGB, became enshrined as fact in the official American record.

The reasons for this acceptance, as Epstein tells it, were complex: The embarrassment of the FBI at having let Oswald slip through its fingers, the hurry-up pressures to get a report on the street before the '64 elections and so on. These theories need much more examination and discussion.

Suffice it to say that we have rapidly mounting evidence that the U.S. government, for whatever reason, has covered nicely for the KGB.

Jest For Fun

After watching our teen down two giant hamburgers in record time, we now know how "fast food" restaurants got their name.

Overheard: "His high school teacher said Junior's reading ability is at fifth-grade level. But we felt better when she added that he's the top pupil in his class."

'That's Strange—It Seems To Be Empty'

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Down In Carolina

NOVAK

RALEIGH, N.C.—When a distressed Gov. Jim Hunt of North Carolina visited the White House Feb. 28, he warned Jimmy Carter how low the President's stock had fallen here—an appraisal with origins and implications going well beyond the borders of North Carolina.

Hunt's polite warning only suggests the blunt assessment here. "If Carter were running against Jerry Ford right today," one veteran Democratic politician told us, "there is no way he could carry North Carolina."

More immediate is widespread Democratic fear that the Carter connection could reelect conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and unseat three Democratic Congressmen in 1978.

Specific reasons are the federal government's unrelated drives to curb tobacco smoking and force further—and highly questionable—racial integration at the respected University of North Carolina. Thus has the Carter administration joined together two disparate lobbies in this state: tobacco and the university.

BEHIND THIS LIES President Carter's failure to remember one campaign pledge and his too-faithful fulfillment of another.

The remembered pledge promised cabinet government without White House interference. The anti-smoking campaign and, to a lesser extent, the university integration push are creatures of Sec. Joseph Califano, who runs the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) without much presidential supervision.

But in giving Califano his head, the President has acquiesced in more federal interference in the affairs of local government and individuals—not less, as promised.

That is the sad conclusion of Hunt who, unlike many Southern governors, likes and admires Carter. An early Carter-for-President backer, Hunt told us the President has talked to him of the terrible burden of foreign affairs.

"With all that on his mind," Hunt said, "I think the President has gotten away from some of the things he started with."

Hunt has tried dealing directly with Califano—cornering him for 15 minutes at a fund-raising dinner at Atlanta plus several telephone conversations. Super-bureaucrat Califano cooed his understanding of the governor's problems.

But nothing changed. Matters had to be taken up with the President.

So Hunt (in Washington for the winter governors' conference) and Sen. Robert Morgan visited the President Feb. 28. Carter was sympathetic to the tobacco-university problem, and the governor returned here voicing optimism; the rhetoric from Washington would soon change, he promised.

IN TRUTH, MOST everybody else involved is pessimistic that anything will change. Nobody at the White House has been able to control Califano, who is perceived there as a grandstander.

But Vice President Walter Mondale—Califano's friend, ex-neighbor and political patron for the cabinet—interjected to say he would handle the unpleasant task.

Relying on the Vice President to curb a cabinet member running counter to the President's stated philosophy suggests the administration is malfunctioning.

If that continues, Democrats will try to salvage the 1978 North Carolina election by pinning big brotherism on Califano while isolating Carter. Democratic leaders here take malicious delight in mispronouncing the secretary's name while attacking him.

But isolating the President from his own administration is difficult. At one cabinet meeting, Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps (a North Carolinian and longtime Duke University official) protested HEW activities in her old state.

Califano responded with customary vigor. That much is certain. What Carter then said is in dispute, but one version widely circulated here was the President backing Califano. True or not, the story has taken on a life of its own.

The President will be at Winston-Salem, N.C., today for a hastily arranged speech (on defense matters only and scheduled without consulting Hunt or other North Carolinians).

But what will really determine his political future here are the tobacco and integration campaigns. Without any change, Democratic candidates here will treat Carter like a plague this year. More important, fresh doubt will spring up whether he yet firmly grips the reins of government.

ANDREW TULLY:

It's Good For U.S.?

WASHINGTON—"Treaties?" asked the first Queen Elizabeth, "What is this talk about treaties? Our first concern is always with England's self-interest."

I commend her words to opponents of the two treaties which would turn over to Panama in the year 2000 control of the Panama Canal. They remind us that treaties are mere pieces of paper subject to unilateral abrogation in a time of national peril.

Thus it is unreal to hear sensible men like Alabama's Sen. James Allen propose that we should continue to station troops in Panama after the takeover, and that the U.S. should have the right to prevent any hostile ship from using the canal during wartime.

EVERYBODY EXCEPT the career hair-splitters knows that in wartime the United States would use whatever force was necessary to defend the canal. Jimmy Carter doesn't go around saying so; that's not how high-level diplomacy operates.

But it is preposterous to suggest that any President would stand idly by while an enemy power destroyed or occupied a canal only a relatively few miles from our coastline.

Indeed, in an all-out war the canal probably couldn't be defended. A long-range missile could reduce it to rubble, no matter how many Americans were on the scene.

Anyway, how strategically important would Panama be in a nuclear war? The President might do what he could to defend the canal, but our forces would be terribly busy elsewhere, and protection of our mainland cities would get first priority.

THEN THERE IS the nonsense of crying that we're turning the canal over to a bum—Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos, who is either a Communist or a Fascist depending on the protester's politics.

Torrijos is a bum, all right, but we are not turning the canal over to Torrijos but to the people of Panama.

The year 2000 is 22 years in the future. Torrijos probably will be dead by then, and we can at least hope that he will have been succeeded by a more sanitary strong man or even a democratic regime.

In any case, ownership of the canal will be a national asset, deserving of unceasing and vigilant safekeeping. I don't blame the conservatives for bellowing that we're knuckling under to a two-bit dictator.

BUT IT ALL boils down to one question: Is ratification to America's advantage? The answer has to be yes. Torrijos may be a rascal, but diplomacy requires doing business with rascals as well as saints.

We have not scorned the Soviet Union or Red China because their rulers fall short of the Jeffersonian model.

And, more pragmatically, not to ratify probably would produce a campaign of sabotage and guerrilla warfare that would tie up God knows how many American troops at an unreasonable cost in money and lives.

Actor John Wayne, who has never been mistaken for the late Hubert Humphrey, put Queen Elizabeth's words in cowboy Americanese when he endorsed the treaties.

"Hell," he said, "all that matters is whether they're a good deal for us."

JAY HARRIS:

The Guv Speaks...

FOR WHATEVER it is worth, Gov. Dolph Briscoe isn't conceding anything in his reelection campaign.

Not to chief challenger State Atty. Gen. John Hill, former Gov. Preston Smith, nor to those in the downstate media who have sniped at him from the day he took office.

As a matter of fact, the Governor and wife Janey are waging a before-dawn to near-midnight trek across Texas these days, exuding confidence in "the record," but running as though nothing is "sewed up."

And, of course, it isn't. Gov. Briscoe faces a major challenge and knows it. How well he meets the test may depend on how aggressive he becomes in the last six weeks of the campaign.

A MAN GIVEN more to the "soft" answer, rather than bombast and argument, the Governor may have to take off the kid gloves down the stretch.

If he does as well in that area as he did during his visit to Lubbock the other day, then he shouldn't have much to worry about.

To put it briefly, the Governor didn't duck a single "hot potato" we tossed in a half hour session with him. In fact, he tossed in a couple of his own.

This applied to everything from his disenchantment with President Carter to his branding challenger Hill as an out-and-out Liberal. On the former issue, we asked the Governor: "In view of what has happened, how do you feel about playing a key role in helping get President Carter elected?"

"Well, when a man tells you he will do one thing and does the exact opposite, there are a lot of words you could use to describe it," Briscoe shot back.

ASKED IF HE felt most Texans perceive Hill as a Liberal," the Governor said: "No, but I intend to tell them..."

It's the sort of language Texans understand and the kind that could blunt Hill's own aggressive tactics.

The Governor makes no bones about his disappointment over President Carter's performance thus far, especially in the energy field and foreign policy.

After pointing out that Texas oil and gas men felt they had been double-crossed by Candidate Carter with his pledge that he would support deregulation of natural gas prices, Gov. Briscoe noted that he himself had got a letter from the Georgian making the same promise.

The now famous, or is it infamous, letter is just one of the items which obviously rankles the Governor. He also makes it clear he disagrees with the administration on the Panama Canal Treaties, failure to do something about the weakness of the dollar and other aspects of its foreign policy.

"TODAY," THE Governor says candidly, "The President would be in deep trouble in Texas if he were running for office..."

He left no doubt but that he shares the disenchantment.

On the energy issue, the Governor expressed the hope the President might yet support deregulation, and "place more emphasis on alternate sources of energy, especially nuclear power..."

"We have got to do something about our heavy reliance on foreign oil," he continued, "the sliding dollar and the balance of payments deficit."

The Governor says he feels most Texans are optimistic about the state's economy and view the future with confidence.

"We want to keep it that way," he adds. "We feel our record as governor has had something to do with it. We have a good business climate. We have been able to avoid any new taxes, and yet our spending for needed items has increased..." Briscoe says he will veto any state income tax proposal.

QUITE FRANKLY, we have never found Gov. Briscoe "hard to contact or to talk to," as some in the media claim.

Nor have we found him to be evasive. This visit was no exception.

As the record shows, we also on occasion have taken issue with some of his actions. We disagreed most strongly with his approval of the so-called free breakfast program. And, although he has now "seen the light," we said at the time his backing of Carter was a mistake.

Too, there is some validity to the claim by Gov. Smith that some major adjustment in taxes is past due in view of inflation and higher prices in effect creating new taxes. Gov. Briscoe says he, too, thinks the tax structure needs an overhaul, but not an increase.

THE GOVERNOR is due back in Lubbock next week, and perhaps a third time before the May 6 primary.

He is one of a parade of candidates, seeking just about every office in the state, who are making a pitch to Lubbock and West Texas voters these days.

And that is good. Time was when the sparsely settled plains was given a hit and a miss and maybe a prayer. No longer. With a potential for more than 100,000 votes in Lubbock alone, and many times that in West Texas, the area can help decide any race.

Before Texas voters, both Democrats and Republicans, trek to the polls in May, Lubbock and area voters will name city and school board officials.

In case you haven't started paying attention to who is running, what they say they stand for, talking to your friends—and the candidates—and reading up on the issues, then it's high time you did.

Then, come election time, go vote! If you don't, then you have no one but yourself to blame for what happens to you, your city, schools, state and nation. As a matter of fact, that is part of the problem now.

Limerick Ancient Verse Form

By ED DENNEHY
Associated Press Writer

St. Patrick enjoyed limericks, but not the kind that Hamilton Jordan, President Carter's assistant, allegedly wrote to a woman in a Washington singles bar.

The missionary bishop who spread Christianity throughout pagan Ireland back in the 5th Century is pictured by his biographers as deeply spiritual yet full of humor, enthusiasm and love of life.

When he traveled around Ireland, he must have heard on many an evening the Gaelic forerunners of the modern-day limerick. Clean five-liners, not the unprintable such as "There was a young lady of Worcester ..."

Researchers have found that the limerick is an ancient verse form written in the Irish language. In those 5th Century days the people depended on itinerant poets, singers, storytellers and musicians for news. These artists composed verse and sagas about Irish leaders and major events of the day.

You can picture St. Patrick, the bishop of all Ireland, resting from his missionary journeys at a fireside in a house near, say, the shores of Galway Bay. He would hear romantic stories, satirical verse or the playing of a harp. Bards would extol a king's bravery in battle against a neighboring king. But the bard wouldn't overdo the praise. The losing king might be his next prospective host. There were a lot of local Irish kings in those times. If you hear an American proclaim, "My ancestors were kings of Ireland," he's probably right.

This short verse form may have been called "limerick" after Limerick, the picturesque port city where the River Shannon flows, but this is a matter of controversy. Edward Lear is the king of modern-day limerick writers. An Englishman, he lived in the 1800s — and had Irish ancestors. Some of this output was light satire that lampooned politicians and other contemporary figures.

If the ancient bards were around today, they probably would be gently kidding personalities of the 1970s. Here is what they might write:

ALL IN THE FAMILY

Now there is our prexy, Jimmy Carter,
Does he feel like a long-suffering martyr
As he thinks of Billy
Peddling his beer willy-nilly.
So which Carter is the smarter?

WHAT'S WRONG NOW?

Who is a flaming crusader
As he hurls his hot lance
At anything askance.
He's a relentless upbraider.

To hark Paddy's Day,

Foes Hit Senate Candidacy of Workman

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State Senate candidate Don Workman may be illegally serving on three state boards, two of his opponents suggested Tuesday night at a forum for Texas Senate hopefuls on the Texas Tech University campus.

Although Workman wasn't present, he was clearly on the minds of the members of the Residence Halls Association which sponsored the meeting.

One student said he doubted whether the Texas Tech regent actually had a scheduled conflict and was unable to attend, and Democratic opponent E.L. Short of Tahoka noted he had appeared on campus three times and Workman had appeared none.

Workman recently has been the object of student criticism after the regents voted 7-to-1 against liquor on campus.

The candidates were asked what they thought of Workman's continuing to serve on the board of regents while campaigning for state office. Many students say they feel the combination amounts to a conflict of interest.

Jesse George said he felt it was morally and ethically wrong for Workman to continue to serve as a regent, and former Lubbock mayor Morris Turner labeled it a "case of mistaken judgment."

However, Delwin Jones said it is "illegal to serve in more than one position of honor with remuneration unless with prior approval of the institutions."

Workman serves on the Texas Youth Council and the Criminal Justice Advisory Council, as well as on the board of regents.

Turner agreed the constitution forbids anyone to serve on the board of regents and on another state board, but said Atty. Gen. John Hill had ruled "serving on the board of regents didn't count." However, Turner said that ruling has never been tested in court.

When asked about the situation Thursday, Workman said, "I raised the question when I was appointed and Gov. Briscoe's appointment secretary researched it and said there was no problem."

Workman said he had never gotten formal permission from the boards to serve in his other capacities, but said he would be glad to do so.

The former Lubbock banker said he received travel expenses and money to cover meals while attending meetings of those boards.

"I did not ask to be reappointed to the youth council; in fact I asked not to be reappointed and I did not ask to be appointed to the board of regents," Workman said.

However Workman said he "intends to either be a state senator or a board of regents member" following the election.

Also at Wednesday night's session the candidates were asked their opinion on placing a student on the board of regents.

Republican candidate Joe Robbins said there were problems in appointing a student because a regent appointment lasts for six years while most students are not in school that long.

He suggested specific legislation which would "make the student body president a member by office rather than by name."

Robbins said a better course of action would be for the regents to change their rules and admit the student body president to sit on the board as a voting member.

However, Short said "there is no possible way under existing law for a student to be a voting member.

"The law has to be changed and redefined," Short said adding he supported changes in the law to allow a student member.

Turner pointed out "student representation within the establishment is not new" and pointed out he named a member of the Student Association as an ex officio member of the city council when Turner was mayor in 1972.

Turner said he would prefer placing the outgoing Student Association president on the board and, if elected, would introduce legislation for an ex officio student member on the board of regents.

Jones said he thought a student member would be a good addition to the board and "give a viewpoint that is needed."

Writers' Conference Scheduled

A 1978 Writers' Conference, sponsored by the South Plains Writers' Association, will be conducted Saturday at the Garden and Arts Center.

Two members of the SPWA who have had their work published in national magazines, including Readers Digest and Good Housekeeping in addition to writing books, will conduct the one-day workshop.

The two lecturers will be Mrs. Wanda Evans and Mrs. Etta Lynch, both of Lubbock.

The two writers will discuss various facets of writing, both for articles in various type publications, and for short stories and novels and biographies.

Mrs. Lynch is the author of four nonfiction books, including "Tender Tyrant, The Legend of Pete Cawthon," and Mrs. Evans is author of a soon-to-be published book on the life and career of U.S. Rep. George Mahon, entitled "One Honest Man."

Fee for the one-day workshop is $25, the sponsoring South Plains writers' group has announced. Registration will be at the Garden and Arts Center at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Oil, Gas Officials' Optimism Unshaken For '78

AUSTIN (AP) — Several oil and gas executives told the Texas Railroad Commission Thursday they are optimistic about 1978 despite an "avalanche" of federal regulations.

Some warned, however, that the present oversupply of crude oil is temporary and predicted possible shortages by the mid-1980s.

The executives predicted that petroleum demand would increase 3 percent to 4 percent this year over 1977, with oil production increases of up to 6.7 percent due to crude pouring in from Alaska.

"All in all, we see a good year for oil consumers," said executive vice president Robert Chitwood of Cities Service Oil Co. "Barring some unforeseen international crisis, ample products will be available to meet the demand completely."

Before the presentations, the commission routinely set the statewide oil allowable for April at 100 percent. Texas oil wells have been operating wide-open or nearly so for six years.

"There is some optimism," said J.C. Burton, Standard Oil Co. supply manager. "Alaskan production is rapidly building, the North Sea impact is being felt, and potential large reserves in Mexico are being rumored."

"Things are looking better," said president Avery Rush Jr. of Diamond Shamrock Oil and Gas Co., noting that domestic crude output had increased 77,000 barrels per day in 1977, the first such increase in five years.

But, he said, "Our situation is perilous, our nation is in grave danger" — partly due to the lack of an energy policy "that reflects the national interest."

"I am afraid that the increase in production and the leveling of imports, coupled with foreign oversupply of crude oil, could lull certain wishful thinkers in the United States into a false sense of security as to the availability of supply over the long run," said executive vice president C.S. Nicandros of Continental Oil Co.

"Lest anyone get the impression we have turned the corner on imports with this temporary blip from the North Slope, he should recognize that in 1978 the U.S. will be producing almost 10 percent less oil than in 1970, while importing 250 percent more," he said.

The "avalanche" of federal regulations cost the average American family of four $1,200 in 1976, said vice president L.W. Calahan of Texaco Inc. "Legislation breeds legislation and the problems caused by regulations breed more regulations. Inevitably, regulatory solutions seen for today too often become tomorrow's problems."

Thomas Jenkins, president of Occidental Oil and Gas Co. and Permian Corp., accused the new federal Department of Energy of "trying for total control over our business."

Getty Oil Co. president Harold Berg called the energy agency a "bureaucratic baby" costing nearly $23 billion over the next two years. And he added, "this baby appears to be declaring war on the oil industry."

He said energy problems "could be easily solved if the government would simply get out of the way and permit our industry to function in its historically efficient manner without being hamstrung by many ill-advised and ambiguous regulations."

"It seems," said Burton, "that the federal government does not trust industry to operate in the public interest — industry does not trust government to regulate wisely — and the poor consumer, the guy we're all trying to please, doesn't trust any of us."

Pipeline Holds Auction

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — They crowded into dimly lit warehouses to poke through rows and rows of crates and pallets bulging with unused equipment purchased for use in construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Buyers from around the nation were there Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, looking, appraising, bidding.

Auctioned off were tons of unused parts for heavy equipment and light vehicles, pumps, tools and a host of other items. Some were still in their factory cartons. Others showed the effects of outside storage. Prices ran about 25 percent over advance estimates.

The three-day sale was another chapter in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.'s efforts to sell millions of dollars of surplus equipment since the 800-mile pipeline was completed last summer.

Edward A. Johnson, sales manager for the surplus, estimated that the auction would dispose of equipment with an original book value of $800 million — about 10 percent of the overall cost of the $7.7 billion project.

Pipeline leftovers include entire construction camps, equipment such as bulldozers and graders, and light vehicles of every description.

"Every time we kick over a clump of snow we find more surplus," said Howard Hall of Johnson's staff.

The camps will be offered in private sales, but most of the other surplus is to be sold at auction here and at an Alyeska yard at Moses Lake, Wash.

Bernard Dworkin, who was in charge of this week's sale for Parks-Davis Auctioneers of Richardson, Texas, said every lot offered at the auction was custom-assembled.

"We put the lots together so that the guy who can write a $100,000 check will find it worth his while to come up here," Dworkin said. "The lots are large enough so that he can load up a truck."

Dworkin said most of the buyers this week have been heavy-equipment dealers looking to beef up their parts inventory.

"The main attraction is the volume of unused parts, a volume that isn't available anywhere else, even from the factory," he said.

"These guys deal with the big, big construction companies, and when one of the big outfits needs parts, it needs them in volume.

"If the dealers can serve those volume customers with parts, there's an added bonus. It's a draw for sales of new equipment as well."

Miami Decline Prompts Shift In Air Flights

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines has shifted 20 percent of its fleet from its headquarters here to Atlanta over the last two years because of a decline in Miami area tourism, according to company president Frank Borman.

Borman, in an informal session with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington Wednesday, explained the shift was necessitated also by a market growth outside South Florida.

He said the airline's best market gains have come from Florida's "green belt" —including such places as Orlando and Fort Myers.

Borman said the total Miami-Fort Lauderdale market has fallen off by 7.1 per cent in the past two years.

"Miami has lost its attractiveness as a vacation spot, quite frankly. This is not only of concern to Eastern, National and Delta, but it ought to be of concern to Miami," he said.

Borman did not give specifics on how many aircraft or personnel have been moved to Atlanta.

He also explained that Atlanta was a convenient location for the line's service to the southern part of the United States.

Eastern's financial status has improved over the last three years, said Borman, who became the air carrier's president in 1975, but he pointed out that the situation would be better if it had a new and more efficient fleet of jets.

As an example, he said Eastern is obligated by contract to take delivery in 1978 of five new Lockheed L-1011s which it neither wants or needs.

Musician Prefers Playing On Beach

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Strollers on the beach are partial to "Hello, Dolly." Romantic couples like "Love Makes the World Go 'Round" and the seagulls go for "Yellow Bird."

They're among the admirers each day when John Barney stages his beachfront trumpet concert, belting out songs to the accompaniment of a crashing surf.

Barney, a professional musician for 50 years, says he practices at the beach because he likes the acoustics.

"In a room, you're going to hit four walls," says Barney. "When I'm playing at the beach, they can hear me at least a mile away."

Alaskans Fear Sabotage Of Vulnerable Pipeline

By TOM TIEDE

FOX, Alaska -(NEA) — For all of its 800 mile length, the trans-Alaska oil pipeline intersects infrequently with clustered populations. But where it does, such as near this suburb of Fairbanks, this suburb of Fairbanks exposed portions of the gleaming metal tube often run roughshod through the fears and apprehensions of the people.

The worry is whether the line is as safe as it should be. The pipeline here, for example, is built beside a grade school and through a valley of middle-class homes, yet it is withoug security., "If anything happened to the pipe," says Fox resident Sue Fison, "half the people in the valley might be wiped out."

What could happen.? Residents fear sabotage the most. Last month someone blew a small hole in a piece of pipe north of Fox and three-quarters of a million. gallons of oil were let loose. The force of the spill was so savage that the oil leaked at 100 mph -and drilled a 14-foot tunnel into the frozen earth.

That sabotage occured in a remote place, so the damage was contained. If it had happened in Fox, however, residents believe lives would have been threatened. Miss Fison says she is haunted by the thought: "The real problem would be if a leak caught fire -how could anyone escape if the oil was burning?"

Concerns of this kind are not locally confined. The February sabotage detonated the faith of residents throughout Alaska. The pipe had been constructed on a solemn promise that it would be secure; now that it's been so easily violated, however, even the pipeline authorities admit that the structure is vulnerable.

The Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. says it does its best to secure the tube. Yet a company report indicates there can be no such thing as absolute security. The report says it would take 42,000 guards, standing every 100 yards, to safeguard the pipe, and they would cost a prohibitive $3.3 billion a year.

As it is, Alyeska employs from 100 to 300 sentries, thus the saboteur's task would seem alarming simple. Half the Alaska pipeline is above ground, and most of it is accessible by care of foot. Here in Fox, the quarter-mile section of tubing has become a favorite place for kids to play, and for tourists to leave graffiti.

A policeman who lives in Fox says the pipeline could be severed by a few sticks of dynamite. "In fact, sabotage is one of the games the kids play here. They divide into bad guys and good, and some of them try to sneak past the others to blow up the pipe. The rule is if you touch it, you've won the game."

A serious saboteur, though, would probably not bother with the pipe in Fox. The better place, says Fairbanks journalist Tom Snapp would be at one of the 13 bridges which ferry the line across Alaska's streams and rivers. If cut at a bridge, Snapp says the energy tube could conceivably be ruptured indefinitely.

Snapp, a frequent critic of pipeline safety, says the tube is most fragile at the Yukon River bridge. That 2,300-foot Arctic span was constructed with considerable difficulty as a truck pass and pipe platform. Snapp speculates that if the bridge were blown, the damage would reach well beyond the cost of reconstruction.

Snapp's opinion is predicated on the Alaska pipeline's primary weakness: the tube's in-pipe capacity of 9 million barrels of oil. In case of an emergency such as sabotage, Snapp says only part of this capacity could be drained off. "There are not enough oil tankers or storage tanks to take all of it."

Hence, Snapp says, if the Yukon River bridge were detonated, it would likely take weeks to fix. Meanwhile millions of gallons of crude in the pipe would stop, cool, and then freeze. Snapp believes that under certain circumstances this dead oil in the pipeline would solidfy into an enormous, 800 mile long plug.

Texaco To Cut Outlets In Seven States

CHICAGO (AP) — Texaco Inc. says it is phasing out all its service stations in Minnesota and North Dakota and in parts of five other states in an economy move.

Included in the closings, which will be completed in two years, are outlets in some counties in South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa and the northwestern section of Wisconsin.

The company said the closings are starting immediately and 450 retail outlets will be phased out in the program.

"In the last five years, Texaco's share of the market in these areas has been reduced 22 per cent," a spokesman said. "With only a 4½ per cent share of this market, we are no longer competitively viable."

He said Texaco will continue to honor its contractural and legal obligations with respect to locting new supplies for its customers.

"We are continually re-evaluating all of Texaco's market area," he said, adding that the company has 30,000 outlets in the United States and, as of last year, 7.5 per cent of the total business.

The company said that in the phase-out areas, Texaco supplied 6.1 million barrels of gasoline annually out of the total 139 million gallons sold. The company also supplied 3 million gallons annually out of the total of 67 million gallons of middle distilates sold. The bulk of this was in diesel and heating fuels.

Cosmonauts End Record Flight At 96 Days, 10 Hours In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — The world's longest manned space flight ended Thursday when Soviet cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko landed in central Asia after 96 days and 10 hours in space.

The cosmonauts, who had been exercising their legs for the past week to prepare them for the return to gravity, stepped out of their Soyuz 27 capsule on the plains of Soviet Kazakhstan and were pronounced in good condition, the Tass news agency reported.

Mission commander Romanenko, 33, and engineer Grechko, 46, had blasted off Dec. 10 for a linkup with the orbiting Salyut 6 space station, where they conducted scientific experiments, photography projects and an 88-minute space walk.

On March 4 they broke the 84-day record for continuous time in space set four years ago by U.S. astronauts Gerald Carr, Edward Gibson and William Pogue aboard Skylab 4.

The Soviets say Russian cosmonauts will be accompanied into space by an East German and a Pole before the end of the year, and that cosmonauts from the remaining East bloc countries, Cuba and Mongolia will take space rides by 1983.

The last American manned space flight was the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz joint mission with the Soviet Union. Regular flights in the U.S. space shuttle are scheduled to begin in 1980.

The first man in space who is not American or Russian joined Romanenko and Grechko aboard Salyut 6 for a week earlier this month. Vladimir Remek, a 29-year-old air force captain from Czechoslovakia, was orbited along with Soviet flight commander Alexei Gubarev aboard the Soyuz 28 spacecraft.

They followed two other Soviet cosmonauts, Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Oleg Makarov, who spent five days aboard Salyut 6 in early January, their linkup on Jan. 11 marked the first time three spacecraft had joined in space, forming an elongated "space sausage" of Salyut 6, Soyuz 26 and Soyuz 27.

The Romanenko-Grechko mission included another space first when the Progress 1 robot supply ship carried out a resupply and refuelling mission from Jan. 20 to Feb. 8 that permitted the cosmonauts to prolong their stay in space.

On Dec. 20 Grechko took an 88-minute space walk, checking docking facilities for the multiple linkup with Dzhanibekov and Makarov.

Scientific experiments during the flight included earth photography for analysis of natural resources, the production of new materials by smelting and combining various compounds in weightless conditions, microbiology experiments and studies of the cosmonauts' own adaptation to weightlessness.

When the spacecraft touched down in Kazakhstan, mission control technicians burst into applause. As recovery crews hurried to the landing site, veteran cosmonaut Vladimir Shatalov told the cosmonauts by radio: "Do not rush to get out of the spacecraft. You are being met and you will be helped."

Doctors apparently were concerned that the cosmonauts readjust themselves carefully to gravity after more than three months of weightlessness.

Earphones Settle Factory Arguments

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Headphones are the rule these days at the Knapp Shoe Co., but not for safety reasons.

They keep the peace among workers.

When many workers brought their own portable radios to the job, arguments often erupted over which station to listen to.

"Somebody would want to listen to one station and somebody else would be listening to another. They were drowning one and another out," said personnel manager Robert Robichaud.

Portable radios were then prohibited by management, but workers discovered battery operated radio headphones.

"From a safety standpoint, they make a lot of sense," Robichaud said. "A lot of workers around the noisy machines don't like wearing earphones because they get sort of a muffled sound and some workers have to wear something anyway. So if you have music piped in, it's really a good idea."

Texas Couple Agrees To IRS Audit, Leaves Jail

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — John and Billie Zimmerman Thursday departed on a second honeymoon in celebration of their release from a five-month jail confinement imposed on them for refusing to cooperate with an Internal Revenue Service audit.

C.W. Steinbrecher, a family friend who has acted as the Zimmermans' spokesman during their incarceration, said the couple "decided to go off somewhere" and did not know when they would return. It was not known where the couple was vacationing.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears Wednesday ordered the couple freed after they agreed to a written order to cooperate in the IRS audit of their 1974 income tax return. Steinbrecher said it was a victory for the Zimmermans because it amounted to the same oral agreement the couple made last September in the same court.

They had been jailed for contempt of court since last October, except for a Dec. 24 to Jan. 3 furlough Spears granted on condition they not discuss their case with the news media.

The couple was jailed while acting as their own attorneys in the case, but were freed after they agreed to accept the counsel of recently named attorney Jerry Tucker. The case revolved around the Zimmermans' contention that being forced to cooperate in the audit amounted to testifying against themselves.

The couple was brought to court after they revealed all their financial records were missing and refused to talk to IRS agents.

"They don't have any of their records. I know what happened to them, but they don't," Steinbrecher said. "They're lost."

Zimmerman, 45, a house builder, and his wife, 41, both contended that going to jail had been worthwhile.

"About this month 142 years ago the Alamo fell, but Texas achieved its independence anyway," Zimmerman said as his attorney and a nurse rushed the couple to a waiting auto outside the federal courthouse.

In an ironic twist, Steinbrecher told UPI once the audit is completed, the IRS may wind up owing the Zimmermans' money, instead of vice versa.

"As a matter of fact, when they get through with the audit, the IRS is going to owe them money. I know so," Steinbrecher laughed. "They paid the tax and they paid too much as a matter of fact. He (Zimmerman) had taken a loss of about $14,000 that year that he'd completely forgotten about. He had some stock options that cost about $14,000 that weren't on there (income tax return).

"He later discovered it, but let the darn thing ride. So what's going to happen is the IRS is going to owe them money."

During their jail stay, the Zimmermans received nationwide support from such tax protest groups as the Caucus Club and Constitutional Taxpayers organizations.

"Actually, they didn't capitulate," Steinbrecher said. "Actually they got what they settled on last September in the courtroom, what they had agreed to do."

NASA Announces Crews For Space Shuttles

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut John W. Young, one of 12 men who have walked on the moon, and Robert L. Crippen, a space rookie, were named Thursday by National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) officials to pilot the first orbital flight of the space shuttle program.

The space agency also announced three other two-man crews to pilot subsequent orbital flights of this country's next space venture.

Other crews are Cmdr. Joe H. Engle, 45 and Richard H. Truly, 40; Cmdr. Fred W. Haise, 45, and Jack R. Lousma, 42 and Cmdr. Vance D. Brand, 46 and Charles G. Fullerton, 41.

The first orbital test flight, scheduled for the spring of 1979, will be one of six increasingly complex flights designed to test the country's first reuseable orbiter space craft.

The orbital craft eventually will be used to ferry astronauts and scientific experiments into space. Mission and payload specialists will not participate in any of the test flights but will be included on future flights.

NASA officials said Engle and Truly, who were test pilots for the Altitude and Landing Test (ALT) conducted on the orbiter Enterprise last year, will serve as the backup crew.

The first four test flights will return to earth and glide to landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Police Note Incidents Of Indecent Exposure

Police Thursday were investigating a variety of criminal reports, including the third reported indecent exposure incident in two days, the theft of $2,800 from a woman's purse and an assault on a police officer that occurred during a routine arrest.

A 20-year-old Lubbock optician told police she had left her apartment Thursday, gone to the parking lot to get in her car and was unlocking the doors when a man walked from behind another car.

The stunned woman said the man walked around to the passenger side of her car as she jumped in her vehicle and locked the doors.

The victim said the grinning man was wearing only one thing: his skin.

Later, the woman told police the man had short hair and bushy eyebrows.

Meanwhile, a 51-year-old hairdresser told police a booth mate at a local bar Wednesday began going through her purse as though searching for a cigarette lighter, but later the woman said she realized the man may have stolen $2,800 from her clutch.

Officer Jim Bob Griffin of the police juvenile division said he was called as a back-up for two officers who were attempting to make a routine arrest at a city residence Thursday morning.

In his report, Griffin said he and a burglary detective had been given permission to search the residence for a youngster suspected of burglary.

Detective Roland Ralston reportedly found the 16-year-old hiding beneath a bed moments later, and the youth was told he'd need to come to police headquarters for questioning.

The youngster, Griffin said, backed against a wall in a defensive position and indicated he would not accompany the officers. As the men approached him to make the arrest, Griffin said the teenager threw his fists up as if he would strike.

He did—Griffin said. The youngster was arrested on suspicion of having struck Griffin two times and having used abusive language towards the officers.

Ironically, the young man's older brother had been arrested hours earlier on suspicion of stealing hubcaps.

An off-duty Lubbock policeman said he was working at the John Knox Village early Thursday when he saw a suspicious vehicle, occupied by a young, Mexican-American driver and a black passenger.

The car reportedly approached the area through a non-public driveway, arousing the officer's suspicion.

The officer noted that the car's occupants were much too young to be in the area, since the complex is occupied primarily by retirees.

After notifying a Lubbock policeman, the off-duty officer assisted an on-duty corporal in stopping the car.

The youngsters reportedly were in possession of a stack of allegedly stolen hubcaps. Both youths were arrested.

The story didn't turn out so well for three other Lubbockites, however, as Laura Pearcy of 4305 17th St., Lydia Valdez of 2605 E. Colgate St. and M. G. Kelly of 6218 36th St., all reported stolen hubcaps Thursday.

Someone apparently broke a lock on a rear garage door at Bill Winner's 2220 22nd St. address Tuesday or Wednesday, then rolled his $4,000 Harley-Davidson motorcycle away.

George E. Cire of 2324 9th St. also lost a cycle this week. His $130 bike was taken sometime Wednesday or Thursday.

Charles Burke of Midland said someone stole his tool box and its contents, valued at $300, from his pickup truck while it was parked in a motel lot at 6011 Ave. H Thursday.

An 18-year-old Texas Tech University co-ed said someone broke into her car recently while it was parked in a lot in the 2400-block of 16th Street. Taken was a CB radio and a .38-caliber pistol, she said, property worth about $300.

Frank C. Fuentes of 1801 E. 2nd St. said enterprising burglars pried the bars on his bathroom window Wednesday and made off with $1,025 worth of property, including $300 cash, firearms, a stereo and television.

Lovie Lou Sanders of 2223 Colgate St. said whoever kicked open a back door at that residence Wednesday afternoon made off with $900 worth of goods, including $300 cash, $100 worth of groceries, clothing, jewelry and a television.

Gwen Timmons of 2121 54th St. told officers someone snatched her purse containing about $9 and assorted credit cards from a shopping cart at a 50th Street market Wednesday.

American Mars Probes Scheduled To Shutdown

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Spacecraft on Mars, although still producing, will be shut down next February, the director of planetary programs at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Washington, said Thursday.

R. Thomas Young said two spacecraft in orbit at the planet also will be put out of business at that time.

He said the reason is the same as the one given last year when working instruments on the moon were cut off--limited funds and the money can be better spent in other areas.

"There comes a point when it becomes a matter of prorities," said Young, who is attending the Ninth Lunar and Planetary Science Conference at the Johnson Space Center.

"It becomes a matter of whether we can effectively use these funds for other science."

He said the two orbiters will be nearly out of the gas that is used to control them at the time picked to turn them off.

The landers, powered by small nuclear generators, have been at work on Mars since the summer of 1976.

The landers are still operating meteorological stations which record temperature, pressure and wind velocity.

One of two seismometers is still working, photographs are still being taken and the soil sampler still works.

Young said lunar scientists who have been plugging for a lunar polar orbiter spacecraft to completely map the moon are going to have to wait at least 10 years. He said NASA sees no immediacy about this program.

He said among programs which have top priority is one to send a spacecraft to Venus to make radar pictures of the surface. He said consideration also is begin given to sending spacecraft to Saturn. The project would include one spacecraft to orbit the ringed planet and another to probe its central body.

Another project under consideration, he said, is continued exploration of Mars. He said three plans are being studied, an orbiter to completely map the planet, the sending of a roving spacecraft to its surface and a spacecraft that would pick up a sample of Martian soil and return it to earth.

Speaking of the Viking Landers, Young said something happens to Mars' "rocks" that the lander picks up.

"The arm reaches out and grabs them up," he said. "Then it comes back, turns over and empties the scoop. . .but we don't get any rocks."

Young said ground controllers can see what appear to be small rocks in the Viking photos that are well within reach of the spacecraft's retractable arm.

He said scientist don't know what the rock-looking things in the photos are but he speculates they probably are lightly compacted balls of Martian soil which breaks up when they are dumped from the arm scoop into the analyzer.

Hunting Club Stresses Conservation

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

Near Dickens along the Caprock, the horizon is accented with buttes and mesas, rolling hills and draws. It's some of the richest wildfowl country in the Southwest. In fact, it may be the best natural bird hunting country anywhere.

Jim Barron guided his pickup over some of that country as hundreds of sandhill crane went about their business of feeding in a distant field of grain stubble. A pair of bob white quail ran ahead of our vehicle for a few seconds before they disappeared in some scrub cover near the dirt road.

The Duck Creek Hunting Club strives for the proliferation of wild birds and mainly uses the pen-raised birds to supplement during a low hatch season. Habitat control is a prime consideration at the ranch. It is emphasized that good habitat will help birds to naturally increase in number. The club's personnel also believe a wild bird will raise a healthier bird, and that in turn makes for better hunting.

Ahead of us some hunters were getting out of a vehicle. We pulled up beside the club members; introductions were made and I was told the day's hunt would be for quail, ring-necked pheasant and turkey.

The shotguns were still not loaded when Belle, a bird dog, ran over to some brush and pointed. A moment later a covey of quail burst from the brush and headed for several different directions. The immediate action emphasized Barron's statement about the finest quail country in the United States.

Discovery

"This is some of the finest quail country in the United States," said Barron, manager of the Spur Ranch and the new Duck Creek Hunting Club. "It's easy to kick up four or five covey of quail while walking half a mile in any draw around here."

The architect of the club (it may be the largest of its kind anywhere) is a conscientious hunter-sportsman and he quickly added, "If the quail get too wild in a particular draw because of hunting pressure, we'll close the area. Then we'll restock it and give the birds an opportunity to reproduce."

A little over a century ago the area's natural springs and abundant forage sustained large herds of buffalo. It was here that Mexican hunting expeditions and wagon trains crossed paths, and cattlemen soon began ranging. Atop the hill it was easy to see that the land is definitely Texas cattle country.

"Back in the late 1800s," explained Barron, "this land was owned by a firm in London, England, called the Espuela Land and Cattle Company. Espuela in Spanish is spur. When some of my ancestors bought this land in 1908, it became known as the Spur Headquarters Ranch."

In one direction from the high ground a large field was being plowed in preparation for maize and sunflowers as a natural larder for birds. In another direction a small white house that serves as an operations center for managing birds could be seen. Around the structure are holding pens, feeding pens, and various raising facilities for birds.

Barron turned the pickup around to keep an appointment with a group of hunters. "Raising the birds is an art all to itself. There's a procedure we go through to condition them to the outside; then we turn them loose so they'll reproduce out in the wild."

In addition to habitat management, employees of the club are available to carry and clean birds for the members. The employees are also available to assist with a hunting service for non-residents. Barron told of how a hunting party flew in for a one day package hunt from Indiana. A coordinator for the hunt met the visitors' airplane, furnished guides and dogs, carried and cleaned the birds, and packed the game in ice for the return trip. It added up to a memorable and successful day for the Indiana hunters.

Just ahead of us a ring-necked pheasant became a sudden blur of feathers as it exploded straight up from some cover. The bird leveled off to fly for some distant but a well placed shot dropped the bird. A minute later another pheasant trailing long tail feathers was bagged.

After several of the pheasant were taken, it was decided to try for turkeys, so we loaded up the vehicles and headed for some different country. Varied habitat is easy to find on the club's 11,000 acres with year-around waterwater sources.

Later in the day Barron showed me a good size lake with water that appeared clean enough to drink. "This is the duck huntingest place you ever saw," he said. "They kind of circle right down this neck coming to the water. And when they get disturbed they'll fly off a ways to the north and then come right back again." Barron smiled as he recalled the last waterfowl season, "This is the only place I've hunted where the geese are low enough so you can easily reach them."

All migrating birds are hunted according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department state laws. Because the club operates under Shooting Preserve, Shooting Resort, and Private Bird Shooting Area licenses, it regulates the hunting seasons and bag limits for other birds accordingly.

When the birds are breeding or rearing their young, most areas are closed to hunting. During these brief periods, some small selected areas remain open for the training of bird dogs. Pigeons are released in the same areas for club members taking part in what is called a Continental Hunt.

Club projects include a soon to be finished rifle range, a skeet and trap range and a combat pistol course. Construction will begin this summer on a club house.

Members are encouraged to enjoy camping, hiking, rock hounding, bird watching, nature photography, fishing and picnicking as a family activity on the ranch.

"Many of our members are excited about this being an actual working cattle ranch," noted Barron. "Parents really get a kick out of bringing their children out here to see a cattle roundup and the branding activities."

We arrived at the turkey area, where a creek meandered through the rolling countryside. Barron said he expected approximately 300 to 400 turkeys to be harvested during the upcoming spring season.

The hunters walked along the creek, and in a short period of time they had bagged three large turkeys. "We hunt turkey just before Thanksgiving, again before Christmas, and then we have a spring turkey season," explained the club manager.

Chukar partridge also are hunted during three separate periods to augment the seasons. The Duck Creek Hunting Club is also breeding a few exotic birds such as Hungarian partridges and some of the more colorful pheasants.

It had been the most successful day of bird hunting I had ever seen. A good number of quail, pheasant and turkey had been bagged in one afternnoon. That kind of hunting is impressive — even for Texans.

As we headed for the main gate, the club's manager talked about his commitment to the land. "This is great country, but we don't want to find ourselves with too many hunters for the land. We don't want to ever over hunt any area. Consequently, we have set a limit on membership to 500 individuals. When we reach that number, we'll stop and carefully study the size of our membership in relation to the land and the wildlife."

Jim Barron paused beside a tree-lined stream, "We're interested in the type of people that will appreciate this kind of country and will take care of it. This land is a very special resource; if we take care of it, it will benefit many people for years and years."

Israelis Entrench On Lebanon Strip

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli jets struck Palestinian artillery positions Thursday. Ground forces fought artillery duels and hit-and-run battles with guerrillas. Israeli troops dug in for what could be a long stay in a six-mile-wide strip of southern Lebanon.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who condemned the Palestinian terrorist attack into Israel last weekend that prompted the invasion, also condemned the Israeli assault but said he would continue seeking peace in the Middle East.

Israeli government sources said Prime Minister Menachem Begin hoped to negotiate with Lebanon and the Syrian peacekeeping forces for an agreement that would prevent the guerrillas from returning to southern Lebanon.

Bulk Of Force

The Syrians make up the bulk of the 30,000-man Arab League force that has been in the country since quelling the 19-month Lebanese civil war in November, 1976.

Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat declared he would never accept the guerrilla-free zone sought by Israel.

Associated Press correspondent Michael J. Duffy said Syrian troops were staying at least 15 miles north of the fighting area. "There is no question they were on alert," Duffy said after visiting Syrian positions.

Western correspondents reported rejoicing among Christian villagers the Israeli zone. A busload of reporters in the Christian village of Marjayoun was greet by shouts of "Shalom," the Hebrew word for greeting and peace.

Reception Sullen

Israeli soldiers said their reception in the Moslem villages was sullen.

Palestinian artillery fire thudded into the hills around the southeast Lebanese villages of Kleia and Marjayoun, an apparent effort to harass the Israeli entrenchment operation.

Guerrilla sources said the heaviest ground fighting was in south-central Lebanon near the guerrilla-held town of Tibnine. The sources said Israeli infantrymen and tanks launched pincer assaults against one of the few remaining guerrilla pockets in the border area.

Two Associated Press photographers saw U.S.-built Israeli Phantom and Skyhawk jets bomb two Palestinan refugee camps on the outskirts of the guerrilla-held port city of Tyre. Smoke and flames spiraled into the sky as the jets made about a dozen bomb runs over the camps, the witnessess said. Air raids also were reported at numerous other points along the border.

Patrol Discussed

Begin, who said Israeli troops will remain in Lebanon until an agreement can be reached to halt Palestinian attacks from the area, met in Jerusalem with U.S. Embassy official Richard Viets. Neither side would elaborate on the talks. Observers said they discussed creation of a police force of some type to patrol the border.

Israel's ambassador in Washington, Simcha Dinitz, met with State Department officials Wednesday and said Israel was seeking American help as a mediator in arranging a guerrilla-free border zone.

In Beirut, Lebanese President Elias Sarkis met U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker. Neither man would comment on the talks.

Arafat said he would go to the south from PLO headquarters in Beirut to lead the guerrilla fight against a buffer zone. "I may die," the stocky guerrilla chieftain said.

In condemning the the operation launched early Wednesday in which Israel grabbed the six-mile-deep swath of Lebanese territory along the entire 62-mile border, Sadat said more bloodshed "will not create security and solving the Palestinian problem is the correct approach for establishment of peace in our area."

Sadat told visiting African parliamentary leaders in Cairo he will convene his national security council to decide the next step, but said he would continue to search for a peaceful solution.

"We thought we had reached the point when we were about to solve the whole problem peacefully and (then) Israel resorts to the use of force again," he said in his first public comment on the raid.

In a speech to Moslem leaders in Beirut, Arafat said of the proposed guerrilla-free zone, "We shall never allow such agreements and shall never submit to them." He accused the United States of plotting with Israel to create a separate state in southern Lebanon to be ruled by a right-wing Christian government.

The PLO chief said Israeli military action was "part of this plot" which he said was hatched by President Carter and Begin.

"This plot is a link in the chain of an even wider American-Israeli conspiracy aimed at liquidating the Palestinians to impose a Middle East peace settlement in Israel's favor," Arafat said.

A spokesman for the Christian rightist National Liberal Party said, "We are victims of the invasion, too." The Israelis "are not doing us a favor ... We still have to deal with the Palestinians."

Christian militiamen, aided by Israel, have been fighting guerrillas and their leftist Moslem allies in the south for the past two years. Syrian forces stayed out of the area after Israel said their presence would be viewed as an act of war.

The Israeli military command listed 11 soldiers killed and 57 wounded. Israeli military sources claimed 150 to 200 guerrillas were killed and hundreds more wounded. The PLO casualty report issued in Beirut said 79 of its fighters were killed or wounded and claimed Israel lost 350 killed or wounded.

Reporters who visited the south were unable to determine the extent of civilian casualties.

The PLO also said its forces shot down two Israeli jets and knocked out 70 to 80 Israeli tanks and other military vehicles.

Italy Broadens Hunt In Moro Kidnapping

parent reference to right-wing extremists in Italy.

The Italian Communist Party, which has long condemned the Red Brigade terrorists, denounced the kidnapping as a "barbarous act." The French Communists also condemned the attack.

The Red Brigades had vowed to launch terror attacks to disrupt the current trial of 15 of their leaders in Turin.

Police said the terrorists struck at 9:15 a.m. as Moro was being driven from his home in Trionfale, a section of northwest Rome on Monte Mario, four miles from the Colosseum.

A white Fiat 128 with diplomatic plates suddenly slammed on its brakes and Moro's car smashed into its rear. Two masked men jumped out and opened fire with pistols, instantly killing Moro's police driver and a bodyguard.

At the same time four or five masked men carrying submachine guns and dressed in military band uniforms ran out from behind a hedge and raked a police escort car with at least 40 rounds. Two officers died on the spot and the third was fatally wounded, cut down as he attempted to get off a shot.

The gunmen dragged Moro out of his car and into another Fiat parked nearby. This car was later found abandoned a few miles from the scene of the kidnapping.

Police said it was clear the terrorists had followed Moro's movements closely. First reporters on the scene found telephone lines cut in an apparent move to give the kidnappers getaway time, and police found a time bomb rigged to a nearby parked car, apparently set to explode in the midst of investigators who rushed to the site.

Authors Compromise

Moro, a 5-foot-11 law professor noted for his dour look, immense patience and hours-long speeches, is architect of the new five-party agreement whereby the Communist Party will be part of the Christian Democrat-led parliamentary majority but will have no representatives in the cabinet. The compromise ended a two-month political crisis.

Moro had been on his way to parliament to hear Premier Giulio Andreotti outline the new government's program.

In a demonstration of political unity, shocked politicians scheduled an immediate Chamber of Deputies vote of confidence in the government and the Andreotti cabinet received overwhelming support. The vote formally installed the Communists as part of the parliamentary majority for the first time in 31 years.

Leading Candidate

Red Brigades terrorism has succeeded twice in delaying the trial of the group's leader, Renato Curcio, and 14 of his lieutenants.

The avowed aim of the Red Brigades, mostly middle class university students, is a war of sabotage, especially directed at the long-ruling Christian Democrats, to disrupt the state and bring about a Marxist revolution. The Red Brigades and other leftist extremists claim the Communist party has renounced revolutionary aims by cooperating with the Christian Democrats.

The government says the group has no more than several hundred members, 150 of them in jail. The group has claimed responsibility for 44 assassinations and 30 kidnappings.

seat twice a year on a pre-announced basis to listen to the people one-on-one."

On the subject of agriculture Sheats said, "I am not for guaranteeing everything by law to the farmer. But they ultimately must have a place to sell their products," he said.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture must start moving commodities around the world and create markets for (the farmers)," Sheats said.

"Saying 'keep the government out of farming' is fine for a political speech, but it just doesn't work that way.

"The farmer cannot pass on cost increases," he noted.

Sheats said he felt the U.S. should use food as a diplomatic tool and as leverage against other nations instead of arms.

The minister said he had been recruiting workers in the 17 counties of the Congressional district and emphasized his organization had a "widespread, broad-based group of people" working for it.

No Funds Borrowed

Sheats said his campaign expenses for the May 6 primary election would reach $160,000, but added, "we have not borrowed money and will not. I don't believe in it.

"A campaign should finance itself," he said.

The 27-year-old father of two noted his advertising in the form of a supplement to local newspapers "did us a lot of good," despite criticism about a picture of U.S. Rep. George Mahon which appeared in the tabloid.

With a slap at Hance, Sheats commented that he supervises a staff of 40 full-time employees and 30 part-time employees at Trinity Church —"which is more than any attorney has."

from tearing the building down."

The department began tighter security measures this week, including restricted access to its building to keep large groups from entering during American Agriculture's scheduled three days of protest here this week.

However, individual visitors and small groups of half-a-dozen or so are being admitted on condition that they have business to conduct or want to set up appointments.

At the time of the marchers' break-in, dozens of farmers wearing the familiar visored caps of American Agriculture were in USDA attending meetings, drinking coffee in the cafeteria or strolling peacefully through the hallways.

About 4,000 protestors, under the banner of American Agriculture, had rallied outside the Capitol on Wednesday.

They released about 75 goats, uncounted numbers of chickens, a guinea hen and at least one donkey onto the Capitol grounds for police and humane society workers to corral and eventually take to local animal shelters.

Slain Boy's Mother Ends Testimony

p.m. at a service station at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue.

The one attempt to link Brasfield with the murder through physical evidence came during testimony by police Det. Sgt. Doyle Nelson, who said apparent tire tracks were found at the edge of a dirt road some 86 feet from the point where the body was discovered.

Nelson said he had seen tire prints from the pickup truck reportedly belonging to Brasfield and said the prints appeared similar to those found on the dirt road.

Court-appointed defense attorney Dennis McGill brought out on cross-examination that no measurements were made of any tire tracks nor of the tires on Brasfield's pickup truck.

The dirt road is on private property, and Nelson testified investigators did not check vehicles of the property owner to determine if they could have left the prints.

Dr. Jose A. Diaz-Esquivel testified that about 10 stab wounds were found on the victim's body, clustered in the stomach area and on the right side of the chest.

He said the chest punctures were not deep enough to have caused death.

Diaz, who performed the autopsy, indicated that the deeper stomach wounds might have been made after the boy was already dead.

"The stomach wounds were deep, but there was no bleeding inside," Diaz testified.

The pathologist said that in his opinion the victim had been asphyxiated. He said he thought the child had been smothered, rather than strangled.

Diaz said he had taken smears to test for the possible presence of sperm. He said he found no such evidence, but indicated the testing was hampered by the fact that maggots had disposed of some portions of the body.

"The tip of the tongue and most of the lips were eaten away," the pathologist testified.

Diaz said a deep purple discoloration of the lungs caused him to feel the victim had been asphyxiated.

"These lungs did not receive air before death," he said.

The pathologist said he felt his opinion possibly was confirmed by the bruise found on the side of the child's face.

"This is consistent with trauma applied to the side of the face either to quiet down the victim if he were screaming or made as part of the smothering process," he testified.

On cross-examination, McGill asked if the trauma had been severe enough to render the victim unconscious.

"I will have to hedge. In an adult, I would say no. In a child, maybe.

"But, I would say it is unlikely," Diaz said.

He declined to say what other alternatives the administration might consider apart from a U.N. peacekeeping unit.

Asked whether the administration was considering the use of U.S. troops in an international force, the spokesman said, "not at this point."

Over the long haul, he said, the United States favors "the extension of the authority of Lebanon down to the border."

The area from which Palestinian terrorists launched their attacks — and which is now controlled by Israel — has been a no-man's land beyond the control of either the Lebanese army or the mostly Syrian Arab League contingent that effectively polices the rest of the country.

The two main objectives of the Carter administration, he said, were security for Israel and others in the area and stability in Lebanon.

Senate Adopts First Of Two Canal Pacts

States after the province of Panama — aided by the presence of U.S. warships off the coast — broke away from Colombia. The U.S. Canal Zone, which divides Panama, is viewed in some Latin American countries as a symbol of American colonialism.

Most public surveys showed the American people generally opposed the treaties. The White House claimed this sentiment was steadily shifting in favor of the pacts, but the issue remained an emotional and politically explosive one, especially for senators seeking re-election.

Treaty opponents quickly began laying plans to blitz politically vulnerable treaty supporters during the Easter recess in hopes of turning votes away from the second pact.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a leading opponent of the treaty, said "This is only the first round. We expect to win the main event."

The final vote needed to ratify the treaty materialized when Sen. Paul Hatfield, D-Mont., announced he would support the pact. Only three senators — Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., and Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va. — did not publicly declare their position before the vote.

All three voted against the pact, and Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., previously a treaty opponent, voted for it as part of an agreement to "provide a cushion" allowing Randolph, who faces a tough re-election campaign, to vote no.

The provision to which Panama reportedly objects came into being after Carter agreed not to oppose the provision in return for DeConcini's vote.

Sources close to DeConcini said Carter reaffirmed to DeConcini Thursday that he would "stand behind the language" of the proposal.

If the Panamanians accepted the U.S. instrument of ratification without specific objections, Senate experts have said, it would become binding on them.

But State Department legal experts said objections by Panama to DeConcini's reservation or any other language would raise questions in "a very arcane area of international law."

They conceded that the entire treaty would be nullified if Torrijos, as a result of his objections, refused to take part in the formal exchange of instruments of ratification.

If Panama added a reservation of its own that contradicted the U.S. version, "it is very unclear what impact it would have," a department legal officer said.

The 50-mile Panama Canal was built by the United States in 1904-1914 after a French company had started the project. It cost $352 million and 5,609 lives.

An estimated 230 million cubic yards of earth were excavated in addition to the 30 million cubic yards excavated by the French, and 61 million pounds of dynamite exploded in construction.

The waterway connects the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans across the Isthmus of Panama. It takes seven to eight hours for a ship to traverse it and some 33 ships daily use the waterway, paying an average toll of $10,000 per ship.

The canal is operated by the Panama Canal Co., a corporation owned by the U.S. government. About 35,000 Americans — including 9,000 U.S. servicemen at 14 military bases — live in the canal zone, two strips of land some five miles wide which flank the waterway. Panama receives $2.3 million each year from revenues from the canal.

Hospital Off To Good Start

build-up in census to the "very significant support from community physicians." More than 50 local doctors have applied for and received staff privileges to practice at the hospital, he said.

During the month of February, Bosworth said, 634 patients were admitted and 127 surgical procedures performed. He said 172 babies were born in the hospital last month — an average of six per day. So far in March, births have been running at an average of about eight per day, Bosworth said.

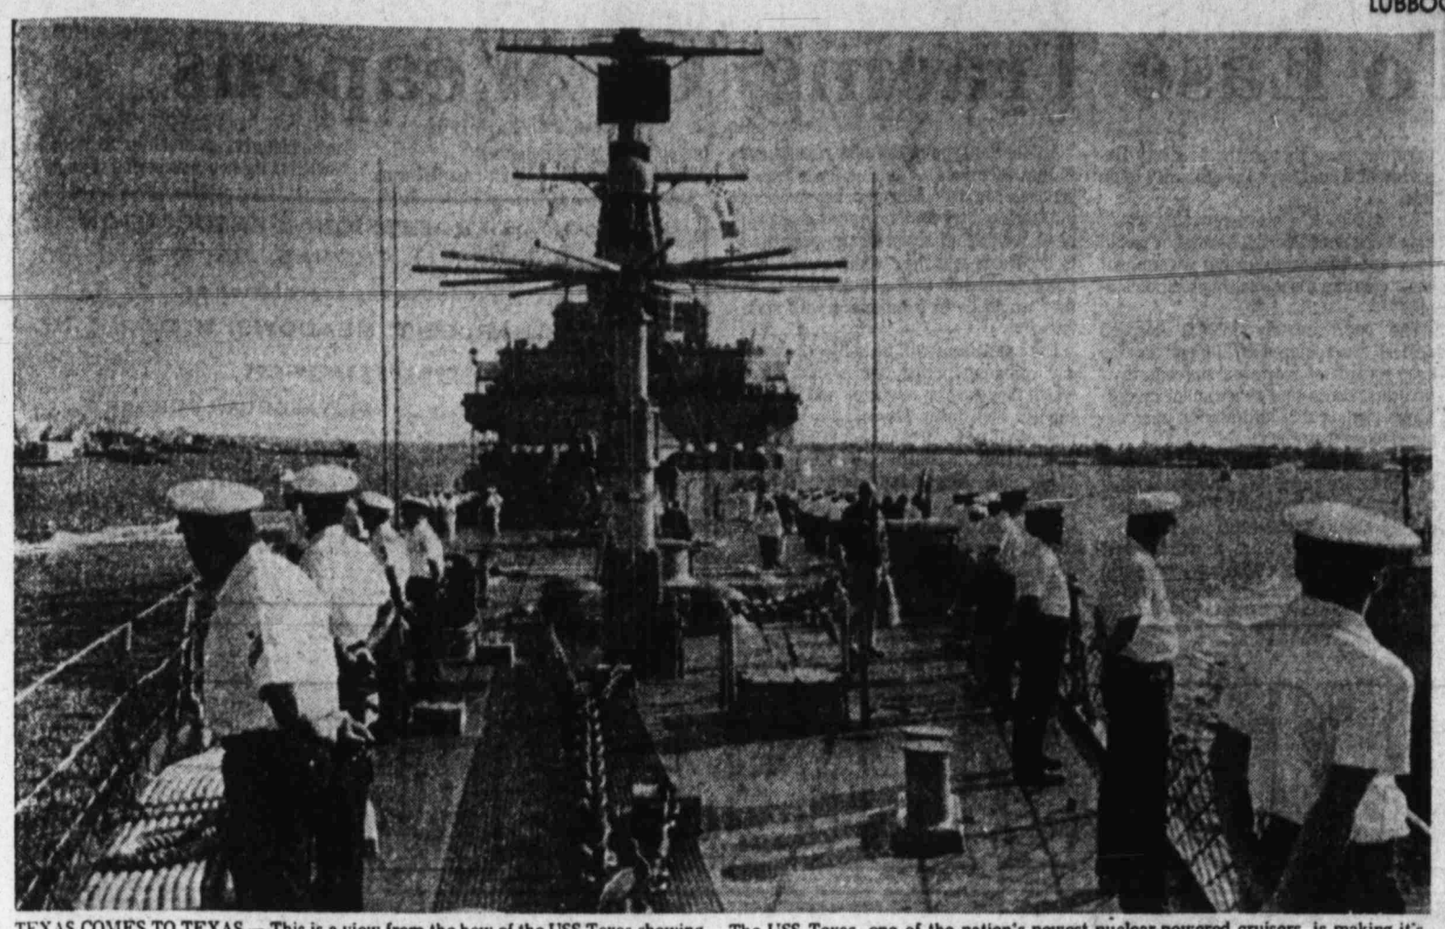
The hospital's emergency room handled about 20 visits a day in February. That daily average of visits has climbed to about 23 for March, Bosworth said.

Most of the hospital's patients are the kind that will pay their own way. Hospital district officials had feared earlier they might get a preponderance of indigents.

Of the patients admitted during February, Bosworth said, only one percent qualified for taxpayer-financed care under the district's medical indigency program. Five percent were covered by Medicare, one percent by Medicaid, six percent by Blue Cross-Blue Shield, 56 percent by other private insurance, and 31 percent were "private pay" patients — without insurance but deemed able to pay from their own pockets.

"Ten to 11 percent may well shift from the categories of private pay and private insurance into the medical indigency category," Bosworth said. Even so, the percentage of indigent cases would "still be reasonable."

He noted that prior to the hospital opening, the district had projected 20 percent indigents.



TEXAS COMES TO TEXAS — This is a view from the bow of the USS Texas showing sailors standing in position as they enter the port of Galveston Thursday morning . Namesake Cruiser Visits Texas

By ROB WOOD

GALVESTON (AP) — Jim Parrish, from the Panhandle of Texas, where a stock tank is considered a big body of water, came into his native state Thursday aboard the USS Texas, one of the nation's newest nuclear powered cruisers, and said, "It's good to be home at last."

Parrish, an operations specialist first class, is from the ranch country of Canadian, but has been in the Navy for 18 years. He said he only had two years until retirement and, "I volunteered to serve on the Texas because I could figure no better way to end my naval career than aboard a ship named after my native state."

Parrish, 39, is one of 36 Texans among the 495-member crew that sailed the vessel into the Port of Galveston on its first visit to the state.

The cruiser, commissioned in September 1977, has been on checkout maneuvers in the Caribbean for the past 32 days. It is the fifth vessel to carry the name USS Texas and by far the most sophisticated. Its firepower is designed to handle attacks by aircraft, other surface vessels and submarines.

At first look it is not an impressive ship, much smaller that the cruisers of World War II and with no large guns mounted on each side.

The firepower comes from missiles and two five-inch guns that are fired by a computer system.

Frank L. Lopez, 20, of San Antonio, said, "This is my first sea duty in three years with the Navy and thank God it was aboard a ship like the USS Texas. This vessel can do about anything that anybody could expect."

Galveston City Council members greeted the arrival along with other dignitaries and were taken on a tour of the ship.

The big shindig is planned for this afternoon, when Gov. Dolph Briscoe and his wife, Janey, who christened the ship at Newport News, Va., will be honored guests.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, recently promoted to chief boatswain's mate, will be on board Saturday afternoon.

On the weekend the public is invited to tour the ship, take a look at its firepower capability and visit with any of the crewmen. The public visiting hours are from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. today, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Monday.

As the vessel came down the Galveston ship channel, it was escorted by a score or more of horn-blowing pleasure craft, most of them flying a United States flag.

Capt. Peter Fielder, commanding officer, said the trip from the Virgin Islands had been uneventful, "except for some 100 miles of fog we had to travel through Wednesday."

The first USS Texas was a war sloop commissioned in 1840, manned by Texas Rangers. It eventually broke up on a sand bar.

Then there was the USS Texas, originally a Confederate ironclad ram which never rammed anything. It was captured by the Yankees and sold for scrap in 1867.

The third, the Navy's first battleship, docked at this island port in 1898, on the very day the USS Maine exploded, triggering the Spanish-American War.

The most famous USS Texas was a battleship that served in both World War I and World War II, with its 14-inch guns bombarding the beaches of Normandy on D-Day, June 6, 1944, and later aiding the U.S. Marine landings at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

This battleship was given to the state and has become a permanent shrine, anchored at the San Jacinto Battleground 25 miles from Houston and only 35 miles from where the new Texas is moored.

The latest USS Texas was constructed by the Newport News Shipbuilding Co., a subsidiary of the Houston-based Tenneco Co.

While in the Caribbean, the Texas underwent extensive testing of its weaponry, scoring almost 100 percent. The only breakdown was when a surface-to-air missle misfired. And it was on dead center for its target when it exploded.

Zaire To Execute Accused Plotters

BRUSSELS (AP) — A military court Thursday sentenced to death 14 of the 91 civilians and military men standing trial in Kinshasa for plotting to overthrow President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire, the Zaire news agency reported.

The report was quoted by the Belgian radio.

The military prosecutor Monday demanded that the five-man court hand down 28 death sentences, usually carried out by hanging or firing squad.

The trial opened last Wednesday. Most of the accused are soldiers, including Maj. Kalumehamba and Maj. Panbule Kakengele, named by the prosecutor as ringleaders.

The arrests came after last month's reports of rebellions in vast areas in northwestern Zaire and massacres in reprisal by the Zaire army.

Reports at the time said many officers and soldiers had deserted their units to join the rebels, mostly poor farmers affected by the growing economic trouble in the country.

Six Cases Approved By Zoning Board

The Zoning Board of Adjustment Thursday approved the six cases on the agenda with little discussion and no dissension.

Two churches, Westminister Presbyterian at 3301 33rd St. and Bethany Baptist at 4407 39th St., received permission to expand parking lots on church property.

A request by Pentecostal Church at 1701 Vanda Ave. also was approved. The church had requested permission to replace the current structure with a new one in the two-family residential (R-2) zone.

Gary Beaty's request for a variance in the square footage requirement for a duplex lot at 2317 15th St. was approved. The ordinance requires a minimum lot size of 6,000-square-feet. Beaty proposes to build a duplex on a slightly smaller lot.

The zoning board approved Lowell Bowman's request for a rear yard setback variance for a duplex on the southwest corner of 74th Street and 75th Drive. The ordinance requires a 15-foot setback, and Bowman asked for a five-foot setback to keep the duplex in line with others nearby. The other structures were built before the setback requirement was changed.

Jimmy Land won approval for a similar rear yard setback variance for duplexes at 4417 and 4427 75th Drive.

Rule Proposed To Ease Tracing Of Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department proposed new regulations Thursday to make it easier to trace weapons used in crimes.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Richard J. Davis said the regulations are not intended to substitute for proposed legislation to ban sales of so-called Saturday night special handguns. He said a decision on whether to propose the handgun ban to Congress "still is in the works."

METEOR SHOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A little bit of outer space falls to earth every day, says National Geographic. About a thousand tons of space dust, space particles and micrometeoroids reach the earth's surface daily, they report.

The proposed regulations announced by Davis at a news conference would require the following:

—A new serial number system for firearms manufacturers.

—Twenty-four-hour reports to the government's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of all thefts and losses of firearms by maufacturers, importers and dealers.

—Quarterly reports on all sales or other dispositions of firearms between manufacturers, importers and dealers.

Davis said the improved record-keeping by the government will enable it "to trace firearms used in crimes in a much more efficient and effective manner."

However, he said a decision was made not to require centralized record-keeping by the federal government of names and addresses of individual purchasers of firearms, even though the Treasury Department would have the authority to do this.

He said such a move probably would have been controversial because it would raise questions whether the government was "creating a national registration system."

The approximately 155,000 licensed dealers are required by federal law to keep records of individual purchasers of firearms. Davis said government investigators can get that information upon demand when they need it.

But he noted that most firearms used in crimes are stolen. He said the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms conducted about 62,000 separate investigations on weapons used in crimes last year, and that about 40,000 weapons are stolen each year from licensed dealers.

Another change in the new regulations is that members of the nation's armed services could no longer bring weapons into the country on a no-questions-asked basis, which they are presently permitted to do. Davis said they would have to request permission in the future and show they would be in compliance with state laws.

The regulations will be subject to a 60-day comment period, Davis said, after which they may be rewritten and then issued in final form. He said the earliest they could take effect probably would be in early 1979.

The new system for serial numbers would require that a separate number be stamped on each weapon, which would replace the present system where the same number sometimes appears on more than one weapon while many weapons contain several numbers.

Davis estimated it might cost firearms manufacturers as much as $5 million to switch to the new numbering system.

Officials Plan Delinquent Tax Drive

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees Thursday voted to give delinquent taxpayers one more warning before filing lawsuits as fast as computers can print them and Lubbock County personnel can serve them.

"If this works like we think it's going to work, it will make the community a whole lot happier about paying taxes," board president Charles Waters said of the delinquent tax drive to be mounted by the city-school tax office.

He said the planned improvement in collection procedures for back taxes will be one of the "major accomplishments" — along with school integration — of the district's current board of trustees.

"We'll move mountains if we do this," Waters said.

Several months ago, school trustee Monte Hasie — noting the school district's delinquent tax roll of $6 million — suggested that a collection agency be retained to push for payment. The city-school tax department proposed an alternative: an in-house collection system, similar to the City of Austin's, using computers to automatically print suits against property owners as their accounts go delinquent.

"Under this plan, there will be continuity in tax billings, particularly on automobiles," Supt. Ed Irons told the board today. He said the computer-driven system would update the delinquent tax roll each year and regularly notify delinquent taxpayers of past-due bills — something some taxpayers claim has not been done.

Automobiles and personal property account for 77 percent of the district's delinquent tax roll. Tax officials attribute this to the five-year statute of limitations on personal property collections and the fact that many car owners are short-term residents — such as university students.

Waters said that by being more aggressive in pursuing delinquent taxpayers, the city-school tax office will improve its standing with the "vast majority of people who pay their taxes on time."

The school board today agreed to designate one month this spring or early summer to send out delinquent tax billings. Then, about July, the tax office's computers will be ready to start cranking out suits.

Irons said start-up cost of the new system will be about $58,000, to be shared by the city and school system.

The computer system will solve the paperwork problem in preparing suits. The other bottleneck will be in getting the county sheriff's department beefed up to serve such a large volume of suits — eventually perhaps as many as 20,000 to 30,000 a year.

Waters said the city and school district will work with the county on staffing arrangements.

Also Thursday, the Rev. Charles Dunnam, president of the Lubbock Ministers association, told the board of his group's "deep disappointment" that the district did not consult with the ministers before releasing its proposed integration plan, now in the hands of federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

"Although the Lubbock Ministers Association remains willing to offer suggestions and leadership in a peaceful and orderly implementation of whatever plan is finally ordered by the courts, let it be clearly understood that such willingness does not constitute approval of the board's manner of designing the plan nor does such willingness constitute approval of the plan," Dunnam said.

"We don't mind your criticizing the manner in which we put together a plan," Waters said. He thanked the association for its offer of help. "If there's any group in town whose support we really covet, it's the ministers," Waters said.

And also Thursday, the school board adopted textbooks for next year and approved rehiring of teachers.

Enrollment Increase Forecast For Tech

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Enrollment at Texas Tech University will increase by 6.5 percent during the decade, 1977 to 1987, the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System predicts.

Statewide, enrollments are predicted to increase by 15.36 per cent, going from 273,218 to 323,514 in the fall of 1977 to 1987.

City Reaps Reward From Sales Taxes

The City of Lubbock's March rebate of the one percent municipal sales tax totaled $1.26 million, about $143,000 more than was received for the same period last year.

This month's check brings 1978's total rebates to $1.9 million, which is an 11 percent increase over 1977 payments to date.

The city sales tax is collected by retail merchants along with the state sales tax and is rebated to the municipalities monthly by the state comptroller's office.

March's total rebates are 17.4 percent more than those for the same period last year. They raise the year-to-date total to $101.5 million, up from $89.4 million for the first quarter of 1977.

The City of Houston received the heftiest check this month—$13.5 million. Dallas claims second place with $7.9 million. Other top rebates include San Antonio, $4.1 million, Fort Worth, $3 million and Austin, $2.4 million.

South Plains municipalities that will receive rebates include Abernathy, $6,987; Andrews, $50,831; Aspermont, $3,866; Big Spring, $156,979; Bovina, $3,002; Brown field, $52,752; Childress, $27,436; Coahoma, $4,019; Colorado City, $24,396; Crosbyton, $7,292, and Dickens, $1,934.

Also, Dimmitt, $17,351; Earth, $4,081; Floydada, $12,695; Friona, $10,839; Hale Center, $4,375; Hart, $2,540; Hereford, $59,281; Idalou, $4,652; Lamesa, $61,658; Levelland, $64,420; Littlefield, $29,459; Lockney, $5,487, and Lorenzo, $2,928.

Derogatory Sign Leads To Lawsuit

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A dispute with an insurance company prompted Thomas Todd to put up a sign near his home expressing his sentiments over the problem. Now he has double trouble. The insurance company has brought suit against him.

The insurance company has sued Todd, demanding the sign be taken down and that compensation be made for any financial losses it may have caused.

"This whole thing is all over $79 he (Todd) wants," said Al Frigola, the insurance company attorney.

Lubbock Man Eagerly Awaits St. Patrick's Day Fetes

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"What Irish blood I have in me is thin, but I think that people with any Irish blood at all are proud of it."

MEREDITH

In spite of his "thin Irish blood," Marty Meredith, a Lubbock real estate consultant and something of a "professional Irishman," is preparing to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

Meredith, like thousands of Lubbockites with no better claim to Irish ancestry, ranks the occasion "just behind Christmas and ahead of Thanksgiving."

His apartment is filled with the same Irish enthusiasm as the brogue he sometimes lapses into; small framed pictures depict the beauty of Ireland, the Clancy brothers sing out Irish tunes from the stereo and four-leaf clovers decorate the walls.

On the far wall are bright green signs saying "God Bless the Irish." "Luck of the Irish," "Top of the Morning" and "Erin Go Bragh!"

Marty's a real Irish believer: after all, it's not his fault he's mostly Welsh, and besides, "I'm not sure that my parents weren't lying to me," he said.

He became an Irish fanatic for a variety of reasons ranging from the viewpoint of a closet romanticist to the viewpoint of a John Wayne fan.

"I would have been a Welsh fanatic, but after you get past the Welsh guards there's nothing," he said.

"With Ireland you have the fairies, the leprechauns, the banshees, the IRA — more than the Welsh guards.

"If you're a closet romanticist, then Ireland is your country," he said. "There's the plays, the poetry, the literature — it's the land of cynics who are blessed."

One of the bookshelves in the apartment is lined with green-covered books, among them "Irish Cooking," "The Oxford Book of Irish Poetry" and "Ireland Beautiful."

Another selling point for the Emerald Isle, Meredith said, is that it is not a land "restricted to logic." He was referring, of course, to the Irish legends.

In Ireland, he said, people can still be found who have seen leprechauns; more people can be found who believe in them.

But the existence of the "little people" is rather immaterial to Meredith. What matters is the Irish legends, the feeling of imagination and childlike wonder which is associated with Ireland. Once the infection enters the imagination, it spreads until it becomes dominant.

"It's all around you," he said. "Once you get hooked up a little, it's easy to get hooked up a lot."

Irish influences are all around, he said, and have been for years. One of his favorites was the movie, "The Quiet Man" — "if John Wayne can be proud of being Irish, anyone can."

Never having been to Ireland has not dimmed his enthusiasm. "It's just a neat country," he said, and he's such a fanatic because "everybody" has to belong to something."

Family News

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We wish you would devote a portion of your column to the subject of sweets for small children. I don't mean candy or rich desserts. How soon can a small child be fed a plain cookie, or a small piece of cake as a dessert after his meal? Are there any benefits from withholding all these small treats? –Mrs. B.B.

Dessert is a legitimate course that doesn't have to be discarded in our concern over obesity. The problem is that, as your letter implies, there is a tendency to equate dessert with richness and heavy sweetness.

As far as small children are concerned, the goal is not to eliminate all sweet foods, but to put them into perspective with the entire meal. As soon as the child is big enough to join in the social atmosphere of the family mealtime, he should be allowed to participate to the fullest, including the dessert. Many youngsters develop the habit of sitting down with the object of reaching the dessert course by the shortest possible and least complicated route. This usually means waiting over an untouched plate of protein, minerals, etc., for arrival of the carbohydrate-rich sweets he knows always comes at the end.

This must be discouraged. The lesson learned will be that the "good stuff" is not a reward for eating the "not-so-good stuff," but that the whole package is what good nutrition is all about. No reason dessert cannot occasionally consist of fruit, even cheese.

There is another good reason for not withholding all goodies entirely from youngsters. It is that once they get on their own, their appetite for the denied substances will usually be even greater, leading to lifelong bad nutrition.

So the rule is "let 'em eat cake," but keep it in perspective. Also, avoid letting dessert time stretch out into between-meals hours with continuous snacking on sweets. Brush teeth after a sweet dessert.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me about septicemia, how one gets it, and what the damaging effects of it are? –L.D.B.

It will be more familiar to you as "blood poisoning," the common term for it. It is also known as "bacteremia."

Whatever term is used, it means some organism has invaded the blood stream, where it doesn't belong. The severity of poisoning depends on the type of "bug" involved. The staph or strep germ can be quite troublesome.

Milder types can occur with other infections, tonsillitis or pneumonia, for examples. This transient type can also occur with a tooth extraction, the lancing of a boil, or from childbirth.

In serious cases, infection can spread to valves of the heart or to the kidneys. Or it may spread throughout the body and cause multiple abscesses.

The milder kinds of infection usually correct themselves without treatment. There may, in fact, be no dramatic signs. Fever, red streaks in the arms or legs, or multiple abscesses are signs of serious poisoning that requires treatment. The doctor identifies the organism by blood culture (sometimes several are needed). Appropriate antibiotics are then used, often for prolonged periods. To assure maximum effect, the treatment is usually continued for a time after symptoms subside.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My 9-year-old son has had his tonsils removed. He also had to have surgery on his ears because he had fluid behind his eardrum. Now he is always making faces and rubbing his nose. I want to know why he is always at his nose, picking and rubbing. I took him to the doctor and he said it's just a nervous habit. Do you think this is what it is? –B.H.

It might well be, but I doubt it. From your letter, this sounds like the classic allergy or asthma "salute." The face grimaces are usually a way of twitching the nose in response to an allergic itch. I suggest you see an allergist, who can verify this at firsthand and suggest steps to take.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to him at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Spring will be here in a few days and I have to start cleaning my window screens.

I pack them away in the winter so we can have a clear, clean view of the woods and mountains. In the spring, I try to spray them with the garden hose, but it barely makes a dent, they're so full of dust, lint, even dog and cat hairs.

It makes me wonder if putting up with all the insects isn't better than looking through dingy screens.

Any help you can give me would be so much appreciated — Mary Wheeler

Now, Mary, don't you fret about those dirty screens. I recommend that first you take the screens outdoors and "de-fuzz" them by using a dry sponge and whisk it over the screens. It will clean all the lint and animal hairs off in just a few minutes.

Now just prop each screen at a tiny angle against something such as a tree, fence or clothesline pole.

Mix a cup of sudsy amonia with a gallon of water and pour some of this solution across the top of each screen.

When it starts to dribble down toward the bottom, use a scrub brush and brush from side to side. As soon as you reach the bottom, work your brush up and down. Next, turn the screen over and do the same thing on the other side.

Then put your garden hose on five spray and start at the top again, and wash all the bubbles away.

After rinsing well, let your screens dry in the sun and you'll have the cleanest screens in town.

The ammonia removes the carbon, and once the carbon is dissolved by the sudsy ammonia water, the dust will float away in your rinse water.

Now for folks who live in an apartment: Just take your screens to a do-it-yourself car wash — the kind that has a wand to wash the car.

They will come out like new.

Now save that precious energy for other tasks and try my method. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a hint your other readers might enjoy.

Those big boxes of cereal can be quite awkward if you have small cupboards, lengthwise I mean, and to buy the smaller boxes isn't worth the price when you have a big family. Well, I solved my problem. When I use some of the cereal, I cut off the top of the box until it fits nicely in the cupboard.

Don't worry about the cereal going stale. The bag, when folded, keeps it fresh. — Kit

If you decide to bid a four-card heart suit rather than a four-card spade suit in response to your partner's minor-suit opening, you add a simple corollary. If you respond one spade and then bid hearts you guarantee five spades.

The bidding of today's hand becomes quite easy when this bidding convention is employed. Not that many players wouldn't reach that same four-spade contract, but rather when this North bid three spades he knew that his partner held five of that suit. Hence, he gave the preference with two honors in spades and three hearts instead of bidding four hearts or three notrump.

South had a slight problem in the play. He won the first diamond in dummy and led the king of trumps. West took his ace and played two more diamonds. This gave South a chance to ruff in dummy and discard his potential losing heart. But South ruffed in his own hand, led a spade to the queen, back to his hand with a heart and then he ran off the rest of the tricks.

It was a matter of simple squeeze against East. On the last trump East had to chuck a heart or a club.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

With all due respect to the long-range weather forecasters, I'm always interested in what the naturalists predict in regard to the weather.

This year, they all hit it right on the button. They knew back in early December that this winter was going to be wet and rotten because: The elk and deer came down early from the high country.

Mud-dauber wasps were building their nests higher.

Woolly bear caterpillars had heavy coats.

Bears were fat.

Squirrels had ravenous appetites in the fall.

They should have asked housewives. They also have an inside track on how the winter is going to compare with previous ones. I knew it was going to be a bruiser because:

This is the year eight pairs of boots in our house didn't match one pair of feet. This phenomenon occurs only once in every 72 years and can only mean that blizzard conditions are on the way.

This is the year we cleaned out the freezer — leaving only three snowballs from 1971, five packages of squash which everyone hates, and 12 packages of chicken innards to be thrown away on garbage day...someday.

This is the year we got the puppy, rationalizing that we could watch him when he started to twirl around in a circle, grab him and put him outside.

This is the year we didn't buy firewood, because we figured it was too expensive and besides, we rarely used the fireplace as it smoked up the bricks.

This is the year we put the sleds up in the attic — on the far side where there is no floor and you have to crawl through the insulation and put the rope in your teeth and slide it carefully along the beam before you fall through the floor.

Yep, no doubt about it. When our 72-year-old milkman got new teeth and began to look more like Robert Redford every day, we knew it was going to be a cold winter.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am getting pretty fed up on all the knocks from people of your generation who seem to think our music is crazy. My grandparents are just about your age. They gave me some record albums they thought were terrific in their day.

Talk about nutty, the lyrics made no sense at all. If you can tell me what a "Flat-Foot Floogie with a Floy Floy" is, I'd be very grateful. Then there was one about "Three Little Fishies in an Iddy-Biddy Pool." The craziest one was "Beat Me Daddy, I Ate the Bar."

How about translating some of this gobbledegook? Or don't you know what I'm talking about? — Born In 1963

Dear Born: I know exactly what you're talking about — but the name of that last number is "Beat M Daddy, Eight to the Bar." Don't ask me what it means. It didn't make a whole lot of sense then and it makes even less sense now. I agree some of those lyrics of the '40s were wiggy, but every generation has its lunatic fringe. We had ours and you have yours.

• • •

Dear Readers: This is a mess. Please bear with me.

A brief essay entitled "Success," first appeared in this column in 1966. The reader who sent it attributed same to Ralph Waldo Emerson. I was promptly inundated by letters from people who said, "I wrote it," or "my daughter" or "my nephew" wrote it, etc.

The one person who supplied valid evidence of the true authorship was Judge Arthur J. Stanley, Jr. of Leavenworth, Kansas. His mother, Bessie Anderson Stanley, of Lincoln, Kansas, not only wrote the essay but received an award of $250 from the George Livingston Richards Company of Boston. The research and documentation was provided by Forrest R. Blackburn of the Kansas State Historical Society.

Judge Stanley also informed me that the poem, as it appeared, was "garbled" — so, at a later date, I shall print the poem as it was written by Bessie Anderson Stanley, and you can be sure it will be properly credited.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been going with Mr. H. for three years. He borrowed $2,000 from me after our sixth date and promised to pay it back when the inheritance from his aunts came through. He got the money last week, said he was sorry, but he had other debts that were more pressing and I'd have to wait a while for my money.

Yesterday, Mr. H. asked me to loan him another $1,000. I said I was sorry but his credit wasn't all that good with me and he'd have to look elsewhere. He became very upset, said I was "no friend" and now that he sees my "true colors" he is sure I wouldn't make a very good wife. So it was "Goodbye — I'll see you around."

Did I make a mistake? Should I have taken a chance and loaned him the $1,000? I am self-supporting and not rich. — Solvent But Not Loaded

Dear Solvent: No, I don't think you made a mistake. This way you are only out $2,000 instead of $3,000 or maybe more.

Mr. H. has shown his true colors. If he would break off with you because you refused to loan him any more money, a bargain he wasn't.

Child Safety Featured As Theme Of Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

"Child Safety" is the theme of four new stamps with surcharge issued by the Netherlands as its annual Child Welfare series. Each of the four stamps depicts a potentially dangerous situation for a youngster.

The 40-cent plus 20 shows a child playing at the waterfront. The illustration emphasizes the risk of drowning at the beach, pool or even in a bathtub. The 45-cent plus 20 shows a child with access to a cabinet with dangerous contents, thus alerting all to the risk of poisoning.

The 55-cent plus 20 features the danger of traffic as a child runs after a ball in the street. The 75-cent plus 25 depicts a child playing with matches, thus reflecting the risk of fire.

The additional values on each stamp go directly to child welfare agencies in the Netherlands, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

These new stamps — as well as all stamps mentioned in this column — are available at your local dealer or stamp department.

The most unusual of all Christmas stamps issued this past Yule season come from Great Britain, with the theme being the Christmas carol, "The Twelve Days of Christmas." There are six stamps in the set with each adhesive featuring two gifts. At the bottom is the inscription "The Twelve Days of Christmas." The Queen Elizabeth vignette appears at the top right.

Shown on the stamps are: 12 lords a-leaping, 11 ladies dancing, 10 pipers piping, 9 drummers drumming, 8 maids a-milking, 7 swans a-swimming, 6 geese a-laying, 5 gold rings, 4 colly birds, 3 French hens, 2 turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree.

Austria's 1978 stamp schedule includes items commemorating the following occasions: to mark the opening of the first section of Vienna's "U-Bahn" (subways system), hailing the 1978 Biathlon World Championship, to honor Vienna Ethnological Museum, to pay tribute to the Congress of International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, to highlight 25 years of tourism and 700 years of the city of Gmunden plus another for the 700th anniversary of the battle of Marchfeld. Also on the list is a stamp to honor the 850th anniversary of the city of Graz, one for the 150th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the usual Christmas special.

Singapore has issued three new stamps to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. The stamps depict various aspects of cooperation among the nations in the group.

The 10-cent shows the flags of the five nations of the association — Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, Philippines and Thailand. The 35-cent illustrates agricultural cooperation in the form of wheat, rubber and cattle. The 75-cent depicts industrial development highlighted by steel production, chemical and medical industries.

DID YOU KNOW THAT ... Benjamin Franklin, whose portrait appears on the first U.S. postage stamp, was praised by the French statesman, Turgot, who said: "He snatched the lightning from the skies and the scepter from tyrants" ... when a U.S. stamp is referred to as a "freak" it means a stamp which shows conspicuous deviations from the normal caused by shifted perforations, heavy inking, color shifts or similar accidents in printing. But they are not considered to be errors ... The United States has never issued a semi-postal stamp ... the most widely seen first-day ceremony in the history of philately occurred when astronaut David Scott stood on the surface of the moon and canceled the twin stamps issued to mark a decade of space achievements.

Antique Know-How Can Aid Shoppers

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

You can be giant steps ahead of those mobs at spring tag sales if you bone up on antiques and near-antiques that are likely to show up at such events.

Knowing how to go about acquiring such knowledge is important so you don't waste your time. And a good beginning is to decide what fascinates you about antiques and other collectibles. Do you want to collect? Are you a browser looking for bargains? Are you trying to furnish a home with inexpensive quality objects, old or not?

If you can narrow your interests to glass, Victorian furniture, or a collection of turtles, you have a better chance to become knowledgeable in a short time. Trying to know too much, too soon, about everything can be a frustrating experience. With hundreds of different kinds of objects at tag sales that might vary from French porcelain stoves to whale oil lamps, it might be confusing.

Let's say you decide to collect hobnail "vaseline glass." With your newly acquired knowledge, you just glance over the items exhibited and if there is "vaseline glass," you inspect it. If it looks like the real thing — and your trained eye should set you straight on that — you can decide whether the price is right, whether it is a piece you will enjoy and so on. There is confusion about "vaseline glass" — much of it is not old and years ago these reproductions were sold in variety stores for a few cents. The real thing is made with uranium, so it is scarce.

A class on the subject at your local museum, the town historical society, or adult education center can be your start to becoming an expert.

Some people collect glass patterns, some collect a particular color — such as cranberry or amethyst. Ruby glass was made with gold and there are the expensive glass items, some signed.

When you decide to study the thing you decide to collect, first investigate whether there is a class on the subject in your town.

Furniture is a large category, so if you want to collect something for your own use, it is best to limit your study to your main area of interest. Spreading out the period, designer or wood might broaden the study so that it would be too time-consuming.

Books are great aids in learning about the category of your choice but you should begin by trying to see some pieces that have a relationship that puts the entire study into perspective. The color of the wood, the prints, the measurements should be observed. Old pieces may shrink or show signs of wear that look favorable to the piece; good old wood develops a patina that can be far more beautiful than a refinished piece.

To see the furniture in which you are interested you can visit antique stores, thrift shops, previews of antique and museum shows — this provides the opportunity to inspect the piece closely. Catalogs from the shows and museums can be informative and they are a great help. Some people subscribe to gallery catalogs of forthcoming sales and they can decide whether they want to go to that particular exhibit.

For example, if you want to study 18th-century furniture it might be a waste of time right now to go to sales of Islamic jewelry.

Some lectures and courses given by town societies are very worthwhile. The lecturers are usually expert on a subject — Federal mirrors, Georgian silver or some other specialty — and the fees are a good investment.

Once you have learned all you want to know about one collectible, you can go on to something else that interests you.

Floor Color May Affect One's Mood

By ANDY LANG
Associted Press Writer

Q. — You recently wrote about the effect of roof colors on the apparent size and shape of a house. Can you do the same thing for me on resilient floor tiles, which I expect to install on two floors of our house in the near future? I haven't quite made up my mind which type of tiles to get, but what I am interested in is getting the right colors. One of the rooms to be tiled is a kitchen, one a bedroom.

A. — No matter what you read here or anywhere else, your own individual taste should play a part in the selection of colors. It is true that tests have shown that the colors of floor materials can have a bearing on the moods of people, but even in these tests, there have been exceptions to the general findings. Having given you that preliminary information, here is what is generally believed about floor colors: Dark colors absorb light, making things look smaller and heavier, but they can be depressing when used extensively. Light colors reflect more light and so make things seem larger than they are. They also make things appear farther away. The so-called warm colors are reds, pinks, oranges, corals, golds, yellows and yellow-greens. The cold colors are blues, blue-greens, blue-grays and violets. When making a choice, remember that the color you select will seem stronger when applied to a large surface. In a kitchen, try to use a tile that will make the room cheerful. In a bedroom, choose something that will enhance and blend with the decor of the room. Avoid garishness, but don't avoid it so much that you wind up with drabness.

Q. — We are moving into a new house shortly. It has wide overhangs, but no gutters and downspouts. I notice that many of the other custom-built houses in the same neighborhood have gutters and downspouts. Our builder said they aren't necessary when the overhangs are wide. Is this true?

A. — Wide overhangs help to drop the water from the roof a bit away from the foundation, but there is more to good drainage than that. Some of the factors controlling the flow of water away from the house and the prevention of water inside the house are land that slopes away from the foundation, the water table in your area, the installation of drainage tiles at the bottom of the foundation where required and the type of foundation.

Salado Slates Art Fair For Aug. 5-6

SALADO (Special) — The annual Salado Art Fair has been scheduled for the first weekend in August for the 1978 fair, according to Mrs. Ruth Ann Larsen, general chairman. Aug. 5-6 is the date for the 12th annual fair in the historically famous village of Salado on IH-35 about half way between Waco and Austin.

Mrs. Larsen, a well known artist specializing in decoupage, said "as usual the Salado Chamber of Commerce will stage the art fair along Salado Creek in Pace Park. We will have some exhibitors who have participated in every one of our fairs, some who are first-timers and some who come off and on."

Artists in every media and style may enter the judged fair. Reservations will be limited to about 175. Those interest may write Mrs. Ruth Ann Larsen, care of the Salado Chamber of Commerce, Salado, 76571.

The fair, held last year in late September, has always been sponsored by the chamber of commerce of the unincorporated village. Staging the art fair involves most of the residents of the community in more than a dozen committees ranging from setting up exhibits booths to policing the area and staffing foods concession stands.

Needlework Bouquet Displays Special Thought For Mother

Actually, meshing different sorts of needlework is an exciting way to broaden your decorating horizons. This is a lovely technique for picking up some of the floral highlights in your design. Simply embroider over the neatly aligned points of your canvas, keeping to the repetition of one small flower shape throughout.

For best results, you should give some thought as to how the crewel will be worked into your canvas. And give special attention to where you will place your stitches.

Colonial American seamstresses more than likely learned their colors from the Indians. The earliest crewel was sewn onto bleached white linen in indigo shadings of blue. Saffron yellows, walnut husk browns, and pokeweed berry violets soon after joined a garden palette of favorite yarn dyes.

Sharing in the colors used by our earliest American women is yet another way in which you can make this project as full-blooming as springtime, and a bright thought for mother, to count for an even happier looking home.

A Good Mother is available in a kit containing a 14-mesh printed canvas, cotton floss, and Persian wool yarns. The finished size is 9" x 12", and the solid oak frame shown here is also available.

Order A Good Mother No. 14574 for $9.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling. Order Kt and Frame No 14575 got $16.98 plus $1.75 postage and handling.

Album Contains Many Pictures From Holmes' World Journeys

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Today, in a space-age world of automatic photography and jet plane travel, it's hard to comprehend the enormous difficulties endured and overcome by pioneers in travel photography at the turn of the century.

Do you remember the American legend in travel photography who brought pictures of peoples and sights from around the globe to the nation's hamlets and cities for more than 50 years?

In the past two decades since his death in 1958, the name and fame of Burton Holmes has become gradually obscure but now, at last, a magnificent album of his photographs and experiences has been published.

"The Man Who Photographed The World — Burton Holmes: Travelogues 1892-1938," selected and edited by Genoa Caldwell, is an impressive art book by Harry N. Abrams, New York ($25). It includes a perceptive introduction by Irving Wallace and is illustrated by 340 photographs of which 40 are full-page color plates.

In 1883, at age 13, Holmes bought his first camera. He became a full-fledged amateur fan, which meant doing his own darkroom work. Photography became his lifelong involvement for 75 years until his death at age 88.

Another early passion was the desire to travel — it didn't much matter where. He wanted to see and photograph the fascinating sights and interesting people in the next county, a neighboring state, another country or a different continent.

At 16, Holmes quit school to accompany his grandmother on his first trip to Europe, camera in hand. In 1890, another trip abroad became the basis for his first travel-slide talk presentation. It was impressive enough to be done as a public show and earned $350 for his Chicago Camera Club. Two years later, he made a five-month photo tour of Japan during which some of his slides were exquisitely hand-colored by Japanese artists.

The depression of 1893 made him face the necessity of earning money. Rather than "go to work," he put together a slide show on Japan, hired a hall, and sold tickets for two public shows. They were his first "professional" appearances. They were sellouts, and his career as "The Travelogue Man" was successfully launched.

What followed is best summed up by Irving Wallace in the introduction, reprinted from an article he wrote in 1947 and which remains the definitive summation:

"Burton Holmes, a brisk, immaculate, chunky man with gray Vandyke beard, erect bearing, and precise speech, is one of the seven wonders of the entertainment world. As Everyman's tourist, Holmes has crossed the Atlantic Ocean 30 times, the Pacific Ocean 20 times, and has gone completely around the world six times. He has spent 55 summers abroad and recorded a half-million feet of film of those summers. He was the first person to take motion picture cameras into Russia and Japan. He witnessed the regular decennial performance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau im 1890, attended the first modern Olympics at Athens in 1896. He rode the first Trans-Siberian train across Russia and photographed the world's first airplane meet at Rheims.

"As the fruit of these travels," Wallace said, "Burton Holmes has delivered approximately 8,000 illustrated lectures that have grossed, according to Variety magazine, $5 million in 53 winters.

"His travelogues have won him such popularity that he holds the record for playing in the longest one-man run in American show business. In five-and-a-half decades past, Burton Holmes has successively met the hectic competition of big-time vaudeville, stage, silent pictures, radio and talking pictures, and has survived them all."

Burton insisted he was a performer, not a lecturer, with his travelogues. It's a word he coined and defined: "Travelogue — the gist of a journey, ground fine by discrimination, leavened with information, seasoned with humor, fashioned in literary form and embellished with pictures that delight the eye, while the spoken story charms the ear."

In a typical season, Holmes made 187 appearances, starting in San Francisco in September 1945 and winding up in New York in April 1946. People paid up to $1.50 each to attend his shows at a time when the best Hollywood movies could be seen for a dime. He averaged six travelogues a week, spoke for two hours at each. In his entire career, Holmes missed only two college dates due to severe laryngitis. Even when an auto accident in Finland left him with broken bones, he appeared in a wheelchair to fulfill his 1939 schedule of 129 engagements.

When motion pictures and Hollywood's rising popularity loomed as a competitive threat, he didn't fight — he joined forces. Holmes contracted to make 52 travel shorts per year from 1915 and 1921. Later, his travelogues were released in four languages. In 1933 he made his radio debut and in 1944 made his first appearance on television.

Reports On Korean Released

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence reported in the late 1960s that Tongsun Park "was under the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency's control but was not an agent as such," House investigators said Thursday.

That summary of U.S. intelligence reports was released by Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., chairman of the House international relations subcommittee, at its hearings on alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress.

The U.S. intelligence reports appear to buttress Park's contention that though he had relationships with South Korean intelligence chiefs and gave more than 24 congressmen a total of $750,000, it was not as an agent trying to buy influence for Seoul.

The question of whether there was wrongdoing by any of the congressmen hinges on whether they knowingly allowed a foreign agent to influence their votes and official actions.

A former U.S. official testified that Seoul was warned in 1971 that Park's reported offers of $1,000 to Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., and other congressmen "sooner or later are bound to get him and the Republic of Korea government into serious trouble."

Donald Ranard, former State Department Korea desk chief, said the CIA reported in 1970 that Kim Kwang, an aide to former Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D-N.J., "was working under the control of the KCIA."

Ranard said a U.S. intelligence report indicated South Korean intelligence headquarters in Seoul ordered its Washington agents "to lean on Kim Kwang to carry on a certain activity on the Hill."

Ranard said it is his recollection that the KCIA wanted Kim Kwang to arrange to make some congressional hearing "come out with certain results favorable to South Korea."

The Fraser subcommittee released a memorandum showing the State Department was concerned because Gallagher was about to become chairman of the House Asian affairs subcommittee and Kim Kwang might become chief adviser.

The subcommittee released a State Department cable Wednesday urging the U.S. ambassador in Seoul to have Korea recall Park from Washington in 1971 because his actions were bound to bring trouble.

Ranard said Thursday the cable was sent after Broomfield told the embassy in Seoul he had turned down a $1,000 contribution from Park in 1970 and knew Park had made the same offer to other congressmen.

Broomfield now says he does not remember getting such an offer or reporting that to the U.S. embassy but says he cannot dispute a cable saying he made such a report.

Broomfield says Park later sent his reelection campaign an unsolicited $1,000 check in 1972 and aides returned the check without telling Broomfield it had been sent.

Meanwhile, the secretary to the National Security Council told a Senate subcommittee that the minutes of NSC meetings from 1969 through 1976 indicate the council never discussed any effort to buy influence in the United States.

The testimony came from Christine Dodson in response to questions by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn. Weicker alleges the Nixon administration knew of the South Korean efforts and did nothing to stop them.

Ms. Dodson said she spent most of two days reading the minutes of the 129 NSC meetings and found no reference to any such discussion.

Doctors Say Flynt Alert, Comfortable

ATLANTA (UPI) — Doctors said Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt was "alert and comfortable" Tuesday but still in critical condition from two bullet wounds suffered in an ambush attack March 6.

A spokesman at Emory Universty Hospital, where Flynt is on a respirator, said he "remained stable through the day with a very slight improvement in his general condition. He is alert and comfortable but he is still on the critical list."

Flynt and his lawyer, Gene Reeves, were shot in Lawrenceville, about 30 miles northeast of Atlanta, as they returned to a courtroom where Flynt was being tried on a charge of distributing obscene material.

Chlorine Gas Leak Hurts 15 At Plant

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — Fifteen workers were taken to a hospital Thursday after they inhaled toxic chlorine gas resulting from a leak at the Millstone nuclear power complex.

Authorities said none of the workers — 13 men and two women — was injured seriously. Residents in the area did not have to be evacuated.

"The incident in no way involves anything nuclear," said Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission. He said the leak could happen in any city that has chlorine in its water treatment system.

Chlorine gas can be fatal when inhaled. Last month, a railroad tank car derailed and ruptured and escaping gas killed eight persons.

Thursday's leak occurred at midmorning as work was being done on piping in the water treatment system of the Millstone II plant. Liquid chlorine escaped when a valve apparently failed, said Northeast Utilities spokesman Emmanual Forde.

He said the leak was stopped and an investigation was continuing to determine the cause.

John Opeka, a company spokesman, said about 100 cubic feet of chlorine escaped. It's believed the leak occurred when a worker doing maintenance mishandled the valves, Opeka added.

Douglas Peabody, Waterford's fire marshal, said the leak was "so small there was no concentration. It dissipated so rapidly I would say that at the edge of the plant there was no concentration at all."

Arvid Anderson, a spokesman for Lawrence and Memorial Hospital in New London, said the injured were treated in a special area set up next to the emergency room.

He said five were admitted for overnight observation and the rest were released. He said all were in good condition. They were examined by pulmonary specialists, had their chests X-rayed and received blood tests.

Pigeons Reprieve Short-Lived

GALENA, Ill. (AP) — The mayor created such a flap when he announced plans to poison 700 pigeons that he hired a professional to get them out of town alive. But the reprieve will be short-lived: Their new owner plans to kill them and sell them for research.

Mayor Frank Einsweiller was worried that the pigeons would disrupt the tourist trade in this northwest Illinois town, which kept the Union army supplied with lead for bullets during the Civil War and also was home to nine generals, including Ulysses S. Grant. More than 400,000 tourists a year visit Galena, pop. 4,000.

The birds perched on rooftops and messed up Main Street, but worst of all they picked the 120-year-old, four-story Coatsworth Building as roosting headquarters. The structure, now vacant, was where Grant worked in his father's leather shop.

"Kill the damn birds!" Einsweiller, 72, exploded earlier this winter after the health department labeled them disease carriers.

"Bait them for several weeks with corn on top of the buildings and then slip them corn laced with strychnine," the mayor proposed.

But while Einsweiller was waiting for the snow to clear so the corn could be spread, he began receiving letters.

"I had no complaints of consequence from the townspeople about poisoning the birds, but I got letters from 26 states, Canada and one letter from Yugoslavia. Most of them were against me," he said. "Pigeon lovers have a one-track mind. They can't see the dangers of disease that can spread from pigeon droppings."

Some persons wrote that they never would visit Galena again.

"I hate you for what you are going to do," wrote Joyce Brooks of Chicago. "I hope you are not re-elected. You crumb."

So Einsweiller called in Dan Boyle, 26, of West Dundee whose profession is ridding towns of pigeons by trapping them.

For $1,400 — the amount that had been earmarked for the poisoned corn — Boyle spent a month catching the birds in wire-mesh traps with one-way doors baited with edible corn. He finished early this month.

"I caught 716, that's about all there were," he said.

Boyle said he's keeping the pigeons in a huge old corn bin near his home and plans to sell them — dead — for 30 cents each to Northwestern University. A researcher there said a protein found only in pigeon muscles would be used in experiments.

Dick McGinty Honored At Plains Fete

By DEAN GLAZE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAINS — About 140 persons were on hand in the high school cafeteria here Thursday night for the annual Plains Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Included in the evening's activities was an address by guest speaker Joe Hubenick, chairman of the state house agricultural committee, and recognition of the city's outstanding citizen. New chamber directors and officers were also recognized.

A.E. "Dick" McGinty was selected as the outstanding citizen of Plains.

McGinty has served in nearly every office of civic nature in Plains. He has been especially active in the Lions Club and chamber of commerce.

Loan Rate Ceiling Defended By Solon

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, said Thursday an accusation he was playing politics in pushing a referendum on small loan rates merely showed loan companies don't like it.

The referendum, asking if voters favor an increase in interest rates on loans under $5,000, will be on the Democratic primary ballot.

Randy Pendleton, consultant for the Texas Consumer Finance Association, said earlier this week the referendum was a "Patman political tactic" and could not posssibly deal with all the issues arising from a ceiling on interest.

House Panel Hits Planned Security Cutbacks By FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Planned personnel and funding cutbacks for the FBI's domestic security and anti-terrorism efforts were criticized Thursday by members of a House appropriations subcommittee.

FBI Director William H. Webster outlined the agency's proposed budget for fiscal 1979, including a 30 percent reduction for investigations into terrorism and domestic security.

The cuts included 124 fewer positions and a reduction of $3.6 million.

Rep. Joseph Early, D-Mass., asked if Webster thought the agency could do an adequate job of dealing with terrorists with the proposed reductions.

"There is a very serious question about that," he replied. "We are frankly at rock bottom."

Rep. Elford Cederberg, R-Mich., said that as the subcommittee on State, Justice and Commerce had gone through the Justice Department budget he had noticed personnel increases for almost every agency except the FBI.

Early said he felt the reductions for terorrism investigations were the most serious.

"I for one won't support the reduction in that area. I don't see where it's wise. I don't think it's a savings," he said.

The Office of Management and Budget, an executive branch agency, supervises preparation of the national budget which the president submits to Congress.

The FBI is asking for $556.8 million during fiscal 1979, only one half of one per cent more than for this fiscal year.

Webster also told the subcommittee the FBI was requesting 202 fewer positions and $5.2 million less for investigations of bank robberies and related crimes, and 320 fewer positions and $9.4 million less for fugitive investigations.

Those reductions mean that state and local law enforcement authorities would have to assume a larger role in solving bank robberies and other crimes where there is shared jurisdiction.

Webster outlined the agency's priorities as the subcommittee continued a detailed examination of the Justice Department's budget, which it has responsibility for approving.

He said the FBI will give priority to white collar and organized crime investigations along with foreign counterintelligence investigations.

He also talked about his commitment to bringing more women and minorities into the FBI as agents. Rep. Yvonne Burke, D-Calif., said that of 7,795 agents, 346 are minorities, including 11 women.

"The women are coming. We were held up in the last year or two by budgetary restrictions on new recruits," he said.

"I am not satisfied that we have done all that we can do to bring about a greater minority representation among the special agents," he added.

Webster said the FBI was reviewing its recruitment and screening practices to make sure no practices which would discourage minority employment have been built into the system.

Prosecutors Alter Charge In Spy Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has obtained a revised, seven-count indictment in its spy case against Ronald Louis Humphrey and David Truong, the United States Information Agency employee and anti-war activist accused of funneling secret documents to Vietnam.

The new indictment, returned by a grand jury in Norfolk, Va., on Wednesday, retains most of the charges brought by a separate panel in a seven-count indictment last Jan. 3, including one that carries a maximum life sentence.

Department officials characterized the new indictment as a refinement in the government's case, involving several changes that are primarily technical in nature.

The original, however, had two counts of conspiracy to transmit national security information to a foreign power, the most severe charge facing the men.

The new indictment, in effect, retained one of those counts but replaced the second with a lesser charge accusing the pair of conspiring over "classified" documents rather than "national defense" material. The reduced count carries a penalty of five years instead of life.

One department official acknowledged that the change on the second count offered the government some leeway in prosecuting the case, since it is easier to prove that a document was classified than whether it was essential to the national defense.

He acknowledged that the first, more severe count in the revised indictment places "a very heavy burden of proof" on the government, though he vowed that the department would go forward on that charge.

Hawkins Panel To Consider Punishment Phase

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Proceedings in the marathon Samuel Christopher Hawkins III capital murder trial are to pick up again at 9 a.m. today after halting abruptly Thursday when proscutors realized they lacked key evidence for the convicted slayer's punishment hearing.

A four-woman, eight-man jury must decide what punishment Hawkins will receive for the May 3, 1977, stabbing murder of a six-months-pregnant Borger housewife.

The panel Wednesday convicted him of the slaying and now must answer questions that will determine whether he goes to prison for life or faces the death penalty — the only punishment options in a capital murder case.

Thursday morning, prosecutors began entering evidence of Hawkins' past criminal record before the jury.

A policeman from Midwest City, Okla., testified Hawkins was convicted of attempted burglary there June 1, 1971, and was sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary.

After lunch, the state planned to present evidence on Colorado sex crime convictions in Hawkins' past.

However, chargrined prosecutors discovered that necessary penitentiary papers from Colorado were missing.

Judge Richard N. Countiss — presiding over the case moved here on a change of venue from Hutchinson County — gave the state until 9 a.m. today to get the papers to court.

If the deadline comes and goes without the documents, the trial will proceed anyway, Countiss said.

Hutchinson County Dist. Atty. Stephen Cross sent one of his investigators by plane to Colorado to obtain the crucial documents.

Besides the Oklahoma conviction, the prosecution Thursday also presented testimony from two Amarillo policemen who said the 34-year-old defendant's reputation in that city as a peaceable or law-abiding citizen is "bad."

However, on cross-examination, the two officers admitted that some of Hawkins' neighbors had given contrary opinions.

And Det. Bill Eaton hinted enigmatically that he thinks the defendant has mental problems.

Court-appointed defense lawyer Gene Storrs of Amarillo, who has known Eaton a number of years, asked him: "Did you ever make a statement to me or anyone else that you thought Mr. Hawkins was two different people?"

"That thought has passed through my mind," Eaton replied.

Hawkins, an Amarillo meat company employee, had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to the charged he stabbed Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, to death during an attempted aggravated rape.

The pretty brunette's body was found in the blood-soaked bedroom of her Borger home, tied hand and foot with napkins from her own dining table. She had been stabbed 10 times.

In deciding Hawkins' fate, the jury must answer two questions.

Basically, they are: Did Hawkins act deliberately when he stabbed the 19-year-old victim to death? Is he likely to commit future acts of violence?

A yes answer to both questions makes it mandatory for the judge to impose the death penalty. A no answer to either or both questions makes life imprisonment mandatory.

Hawkins also stands indicted with two other South Plains-Panhandle crimes which authorities feel were committed by a suspect they had dubbed the "traveling rapist." In Potter and Carson Counties, he is indicted with capital murder in connection with the death of a 12-year-old Amarillo girl. In Deaf Smith County, he is indicted with aggravated rape in connection with an assault on a Hereford woman who was stabbed 17 times.

It has been marked with problems throughout, with the volatile Hawkins continuously differing with his attorneys over how he wanted his case handled.

First Offshore Fleet Arrives In Choppers

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The first wave of offshore oilmen, the helicopter pilots, have hit the beach here.

Petroleum Helicopters Inc., whose chopper fleets serve offshore oil rigs from Texas to Saudi Arabia, has set up shop at Bader Field here in preparation for exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon.

"We'll be strictly furnishing the transportation from Atlantic City to the rigs for the oil companies," East Coast general manager Lynn Voyles said Thursday. "If Exxon wants us to go the Philadelphia to pick up some parts, we'll go to Philadelphia. We're at their service."

Thirteen employes, including six pilots, brought three yellow helicopters here from Louisiana this week to service the firm's first two clients in the Atlantic. The aircraft range from a four-passenger utility helicopter to an 18-passenger French turbine helicopter for crew changes.

Voyles said his firm will work initially for the U.S. Geological Survey, which oversees offshore drilling, and Exxon, which hopes to drill the first well this month. He said the firm could have six helicopters here this summer as other oil firms begin exploratory drilling.

Joseph C. Kettles, lead pilot here, said the firm already has planned procedures to avoid annoying summer bathers on nearby beaches with helicopters shuttling back and forth overhead.

"Here we'll keep all our operations out over the marshes and the bays and our altitudes will be such that we'll just be a speck up there. It's in our interest—it cuts out the phone calls."

Kettles said helicopter operations off New Jersey will be harder than in the Gulf of Mexico because of the unpredictable Atlantic weather and the 65-mile to 100-mile distances to the rigs. All helicopters here will have two engines.

"In the Gulf, you're never more than a minute or two from a rig that you can set down on if there's trouble. Everyone is perfectly capable of putting you up for the night," Kettles said.

"Here it's a longer distance and you need two engines so you can make sure you can get where you're going," he said.

Kettles said petroleum helicopters have about 50 aircraft in the Gulf of Mexico that skip from platform to platform and rarely return to shore. Kettles said he expected his helicopters to make the hops from shore to drilling rigs in the Atlantic in about 45 minutes.

Voyles said his firm will hire a few local workers as secretaries and mechanics' assistants. He said it was also likely that some oil support companies will follow his firm here knowing that they can quickly move their supplies offshore.

"We'll be here year-round," Voyles said. "The tourist trade is just here for the summer."

Foes Target Canal Votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Conservative Union said Thursday it would launch a $250,000 last ditch effort to change the votes of specific senators when they vote on the second Panama Canal treaty after the Easter recess.

ACU chairman Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., said he believed the second treaty — the one actually turning the canal over to Panama —could be defeated "and then the whole thing goes down the drain."

"We still have a chance to defeat the second treaty, it's just a question of changing one, or two, or three votes," he told a news conference opening the three-day joint Conservative Political Action Conference — a meeting of nearly every major conservative group in the nation.

Among those speaking at the conference are Ronald Reagan, Gov. Meldrim Thomson, R-N.H., Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., conservative fundraiser Richard Viguerie and Phyllis Schlafly, head of the Stop ERA drive.

A major part of the meeting will be devoted to developing a strategy for reversing the votes of key senators when the second treaty comes to the Senate floor next month.

"We're going to target those senators who might be moved if there were more pressure from back home," Crane said.

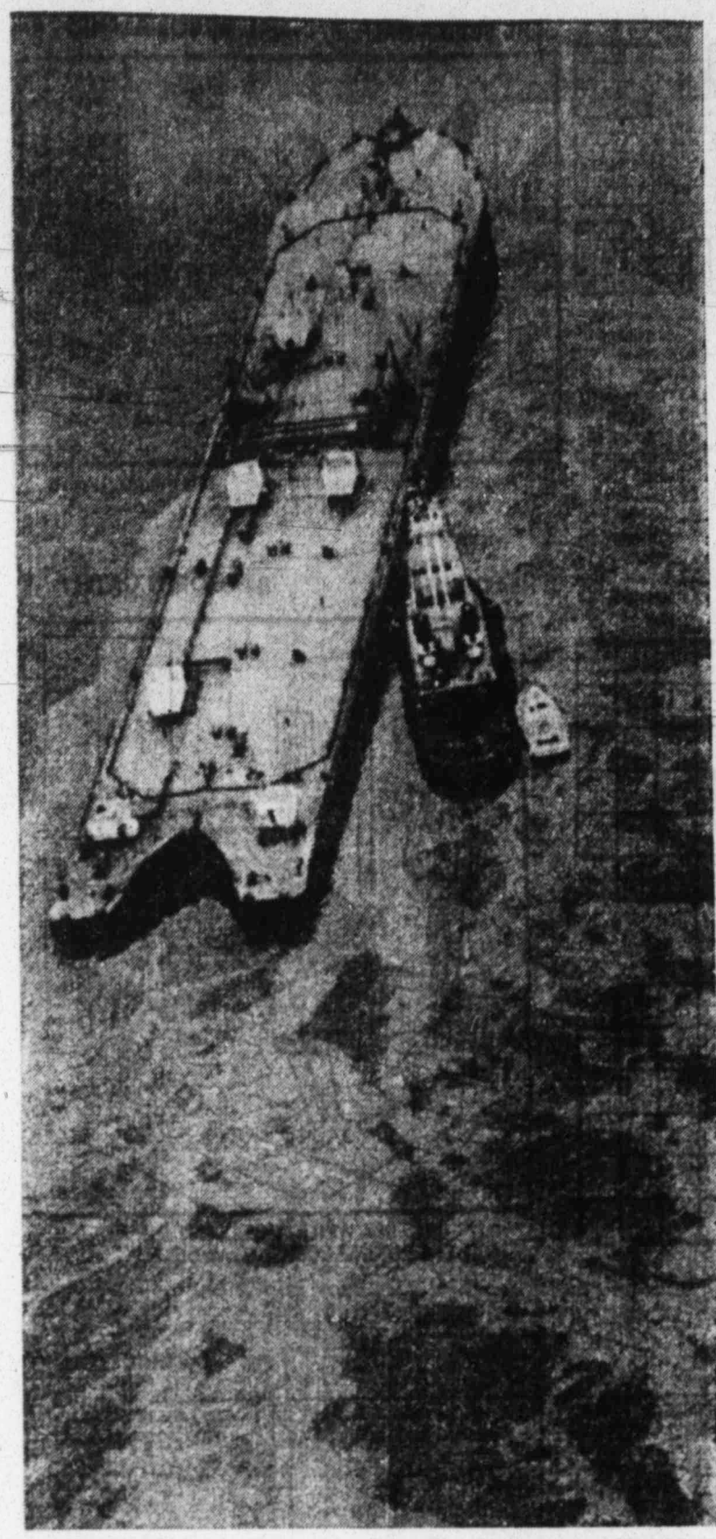
Gasoline Barge Runs Aground



GASOLINE SPILL — The 546-foot barge Ocean 250 spills gasoline into Block Island Sound after running aground early Thursday morning about 300 yards off Watch Hill, R.I. The Coast Guard estimated about 10,000 gallons had leaked from four tanks that were ruptured on the vessel. The Ocean 250 was carrying 10,5 million gallons of gasoline. (AP Laserphoto)

WATCH HILL, R.I. (AP) — A barge carrying 10½ million gallons of gasoline ran aground in a passage into Long Island Sound on Thursday, spilling more than 20,000 gallons of fuel and forcing closure of a 150-square-mile stretch of water.

Tugs and Coast Guard boats were struggling to free the vessel, which moved slightly at about 1 p.m., but even after high tide had come and gone the barge, Ocean 250, was hard aground about 300 yards off Watch Hill Coast Guard station.

The Coast Guard said the amount of gasoline spilling "increased dramatically" in the afternoon to an estimated 2,110 gallons per hour, up from 500 per hour earlier in the day, and the spill reached Fisher's Island, N.Y., Thursday evening.

A University of Rhode Island specialist said environmental damage on the shore would be minimal.

Lightering barges had offloaded 1.25 million gallons of gasoline from the leaking vessel by 4 p.m. despite heavy snow. A storm with winds of 25 knots to 40 knots was expected.

Four out of 10 storage compartments of the grounded barge had taken water. There were no reports of injuries to the 10 persons aboard.

The grounding forced the Coast Guard to close a 150-square-mile stretch of Block Island and Long Island Sounds, from the western end of Fishers Island, N.Y., to Point Judith, R.I., and south for five miles over the water.

State Police and Civil Defense officials were at the scene to determine if mass evacuations would be necessary. The light house here, manned by a Coast Guard family, was evacuated as a precaution, and the Coast Guard advised people to stay away from area beaches.

Mud Dauber Day Fete Set In Luckenbach

LUCKENBACH (UPI) — Otherwise mature men and women will dress as mud daubers and take part in a hoppity horse race Sunday during the next population explosion in this old Hill Country town, normal population 3.

The occasion is the second annual Mud Daubers Come Back to Luckenbach Day, which coincides with the return of the swallows to Capistrano and affords another reason for a big beer party in Luckenbach.

One of the highlights of the daylong celebration, according to Luckenbach's first lady Kathy Morgan, is a Mud Dauber Person Costume Contest, in which participants come dressed as mud daubers. The winner will receive a catered barbecue dinner for ten on the banks of Grape Creek, which runs along the edge of Luckenbach.

In the afternoon, there qill be the first running of the Official Monthly Moon Hoppity Horse Race sponsored by Susie Wood Hurmon, editor of the town's new monthly newspaper. A field of 27 jockeys will ride influted horses in their quest for the first prize — consisting of the entire stable of three hoppity horses.

Kent Finlay, who lost last year's song contest and was sent to Buffalo, N.Y., in the middle of the winter as his prize, will perform his losing rendition of "When the Mud Daubers Come Back to Luckenbach" for the crowd.

Mormon Will Trial Told Of Donations

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tom Bell, a former attorney for Howard Hughes, has testified that he helped distribute nearly $1 million of Hughes' money to Nevada politicians.

After the testimony, attorney Harold Rhoden, who is seeking to prove the "Mormon will" attributed to Hughes is genuine, rested his case.

Bell was ordered Wednesday to answer the questions about the so-called "Silver Slipper Fund." He had declined at first, citing the attorney-client privilege, but was ordered to do so by District Court Judge Keith Hayes.

Bell said that he personally withdrew between $385,000 and $400,000 in cash and an addtional $50,000 in checks from the fund, which totaled $998,020, in 1968. It was named for one of the casinos Hughes operated on the Las Vegas Strip.

Hughes, who died in April 1976, lived in Las Vegas for four years.

Miners Stay Home, Await Copies Of Contract

By The Associated Press

Striking coal miners stayed away from the mines Thursday as they awaited copies of a tentative contract settlement, narrowly approved by their union's bargaining committee, on which they vote next week.

There was little picketing — and less mining.

In Washington, the government issued statistics that indicate layoffs caused by the 101-day United Mine Workers strike had not increased — and may have slackened — during last week.

The Labor Department reported some 22,900 factory workers and some 20,000 transportation workers were laid off during the week ended March 11. That appeared to be a reduction from an estimate of 25,500 factory layoffs reported for the previous week. However, those were only estimates.

The figures represent a survey of some 900 of the largest industrial plants in 11 Midwestern and Mid-Atlantic states. The impacts appeared concentrated in Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, and western Pennsylvania, where coal supplies at utilities have been low.

The proposed contract was agreed to by negotiators in Washington Tuesday, a day after a Taft-Hartley back-to-work court order obtained by President Carter took full effect at most union locals.

Nearly to a man, however, the 160,000 miners are ignoring the order, and virtually all UMW mines have remained idle this week.

After meeting at their locals this weekend and next week to consider the pact, the miners vote on it next Friday.

The contract proposal sweetens health and pension benefit provisions to which the miners had objected in a previous contract they turned down. It also drops a controversial provision that would have allowed coal companies to discipline leaders of wildcat strikes.

The earlier contract would have boosted hourly pay rates from $7.80 an hour to $9.60; the new one would boost them to $10.20. However, in the previous contract proposal, pay was not at the center of miners' discontent.

The discontent focused on the health, pension and wildcat strike issues — which miners saw as steps backward from previous contracts.

Reaction to the new contract proposal was difficult to measure. Some local union leaders said it was a big improvement and would be passed. Others said it still was not enough — and would be rejected.

The UMW bargaining council on Wednesday had surprised many people by its narrow approval — a 22-17 vote.

There were also these developments:

—In Alabama, state troopers watched railroad tracks by helicopter. On Wednesday, somebody threw a switch, derailing two engines on a train bound for a Georgia Power Co. plant. Nobody was hurt.

—A cargo plane brought 3,000 pounds of canned goods, donated by the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union, to Birmingham, Ala., to be given to striking coal miners.

Administration To Ask Court Extend Back-To-Work Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration will ask a federal judge to extend a temporary back-to-work order to striking miners until after next week's vote on a new contract offer, a Justice Department spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said the government will go to court Friday to seek an extension that would continue the order, which has been widely ignored by the rebellious miners.

The temporary order, issued a week ago under the Taft-Hartley Act, expires Friday, when a hearing was scheduled on a government request for an injunction against the United Mine Workers' 101-day walkout.

"Obviously, we hope the union will ratify the contract and there will be no need to seek a Taft-Hartley injunction," said spokesman Mark Sheehan.

Another government official said, "my guess is that nobody's going to push too hard for fear of it boomeranging."

Sheehan said government lawyers would seek an extension of the order until March 28 instead of the injunction to avoid further antagonizing miners who will vote on the new contract March 24.

Most of the 160,000 striking miners have ignored the back-to-work order, which was issued after the union rank-and-file soundly rejected a previous contract proposal from the soft coal industry nearly two weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported Thursday that about 22,900 factory workers and 20,000 transportation workers were laid off for some part of last week because of coal or electricity shortages caused by the coal strike.

The administration invoked Taft-Hartley, arguing that the strike's continuation would trigger widespread layoffs and power cutbacks.

UMW officials, who argued against the original back-to-work order, indicated Thursday that they would not oppose an extension. "Under the circumstances we probably would not object," said Harrison Combs, the union's general counsel.

However, representatives from several union districts including District 6 in Ohio and District 17 in Charleston, W.Va., are expected to argue against an extension of the order at Friday's hearing before U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson.

In addition, the American Civil Liberties Union will argue against an extension "on the ground that it violates the First Amendment (because) to strike is free speech," said ACLU attorney Joseph L. Rauh.

Attorneys for the government, UMW and coal operators met Thursday with the judge, and the government asked for an immediate hearing on its request for an extension. But the judge retained the Friday date, saying some union locals were not present Thursday, according to a court spokesman.

Bargainers for the union and coal industry agreed to new contract terms on Tuesday and the proposed accord was approved by the UMW's bargaining counsel Wednesday on a 22-17 vote.

The contract contains new industry concessions concerning health care and anti-wildcat strike provisions, but its chances of passage by the rank and file are uncertain.

Job Layoffs Traced To Power Shortages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department reported Thursday that some 22,900 factory workers and some 20,000 transportation workers were laid off during the week ended March 11 because of shortages of coal or electricity.

The estimate, by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, showed a reduction of factory unemployment blamed on the coal strike from the 25,500 reported layoffs the previous week.

The actual total number of layoffs, however, may be substantially higher than those reported.

The bureau's figures represented a survey of some 900 of the largest industrial plants in 11 Midwestern and Mid-Atlantic states — those employing more than 1,000 people — and did not include layoffs of employees by smaller plants.

The bureau said the reported layoffs were only a small fraction of the 7.8 million factory workers in the 11 states with coal-supply problems: Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Missouri.

The impacts, however, were more concentrated in the five most critical states: Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and West Virginia, with the Pittsburgh, Pa., area included.

In that "5.2-state" area were found some 14,800 of the reported 22,900 factory layoffs.

While the bureau did not explain the reduction of layoffs from the previous week, it appeared to reflect the improvement in coal supplies which has shown up in recent weeks as deliveries increased from mines not affected by the three-month-old strike of the United Mine Workers, and as conservation efforts slowed coal consumption.

Those improvements have allowed factories and electric utilities to avoid more serious curtailments of industrial operations and electric service that would have been necessary if the supply and consumption trends of January and early February had continued.

Forecast Says Inflation Will Slow

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Inflation will slow and the nation's Gross National Product will decline somewhat in 1978 while world economic growth remains moderate, according to a forecast released Thursday by the Bank of America.

Consumer prices around the world are expected to rise 10 percent in 1978, compared to 12 percent in 1977, said the report, released by the world's largest bank. Domestic inflation will fall somewhat, it predicted, from 6.5 percent in 1977 to 5.9 percent in 1978.

"Many key countries are moving to stimulate their economies with carefully planned programs which indicate a shift toward more expansionary policies," the report said.

But that expansion won't be inflationary, it predicted, because of a slack in utilization of most countrys' resources.

The report said global production would rise 4.3 percent in 1978, the same as 1977's rate.

Domestic production is expected to increase 4.5 percent, compared to 4.9 percent in 1977. The report predicted production would be higher early in 1978 and decline throughout the year.

Production in Asia and Japan will decline while the GNP of Latin America is expected to grow 5.5 percent, it said. Western European counties will probably experience only modest growth as they attempt to juggle problems with currency values and large increases in energy and labor costs, the report said.

Italy Shows Widespread Signs Of Collapse

ROME (AP) — Bullets, bombs, Byzantine politics and a battered economy are bringing Italy ever closer to collapse.

Even in a nation with a historic genius for surviving declines and falls, the multiplying signs of a widespread breakdown have reached alarming proportions.

More than five times a day, according to official figures, right-wing or left-wing extremists plant dynamite sticks or firebombs at an "enemy" target, usually a political party or a government office. In the past six months, gunfire from terrorists has mowed down more than a dozen journalists, political figures, judges or business executives.

"A bombing no longer makes news," Professor Sebino Acquaviva, a Padua University sociologist, told a recent conference on terrorism. "So we can expect an escalation."

The latest step in the spiraling violence occurred Thursday when a 12-member gang kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro.

The kidnapping took place against a political background which baffles most foreign observers. Unlike France, Germany and England, Italy has none of the trappings of a two-party or left-right political division. It has a kaleidoscopic array of parties from extreme right neo-fascists to extreme left Communists, unable to enter into any durable majority alliance.

At each extreme, there is an underground which wishes to go even further. On the left, there is the Red Brigades, which believes in armed struggle to destroy the state and which claimed responsbility for Moro's kidnapping. On the right is the "black order" or vigilante groups that promise to strike back at leftists bombing for bombing, kidnap for kidnap.

Italy has been trying frantically for the past 56 days to vote into office its 37th government in 33 years. The latest agreement opens the door a bit wider to Communist influence from a previous position of active opposition to tacit support of the Christian Democrats, who have ruled since the war. The Communist Party now will be involved in day to day government in Parliament.

But the agreement is doomed to die at the end of the year, when Parliament must elect a new president and the parties will go back to political maneuvering. Moro was favored to become Italy's next president after he convinced the most red-baiting members of his party to accept Communist backing for the government.

Analysis

A master of the arcane political phrase, Moro encouraged his colleagues to remain as obtuse as possible in discussing hot issues. Communist Party leader Enrico Berlinguer told workers in Turin recently: "We must be both conservatives and revolutionaries."

The reason for the ambiguity, according to both Christian Democrat and Communist thinking, is that any confrontation between the two parties, each of which controls more than one-third of a vote, would lead to a battle which could quickly escalate into civil war.

Francesco Alberone, one of Italy's leading sociologists, believes the social roots for the new wave of violence lie in the Italian middle class and lower middle class where young people have become disaffected with what they view as the "bourgeois society" of their elders. But he says conditions exist for a revolutionary base among the growing ranks of unemployed — 7 percent of the working population. To this must be added large numbers of precariously employed young people and students with few job opportunities.

For more than three decades, enterprising Italians have managed to make ends meet despite a lack of raw materials and a frequent lack of government. They even fashioned an "economic miracle" in the 1960s, turning Italy into the world's eighth largest industrial power.

Legal cases often take more than three years to come to trial. Prisons are so clogged that only an amnesty for small offenders could relieve the overcrowding. A bloated state bureaucracy, much of it packed with political appointees, is the major culprit in bringing the state budget deficit to over $25 billion.

Red Brigades Lead Wave Of Terroism In Italy

ROME (UPI) — The Red Brigades, leaders of a wave of political terrorism in Italy that averages an attack every four hours, have become Europe's most vicious guerrillas with the kidnapping of former Premier Aldo Moro Thursday.

Police believe the estimated 22 active Red Brigade members and 400 supporters are responsible for the vast majority of political terrorist attacks in Italy, which hit a record of 2,080 in 1977.

In the most serious of those attacks, 25 judges, lawyers, policemen and a journalist were assassinated and scores of businessmen, leading citizens and reporters were shot in the kneecaps.

Even by Italian standards, the Red Brigades have written one of the bloodiest chapters in the history of political terrorism.

With the suicide of the leaders of West Germany's notorious Baader-Meinhof gang last year, The Red Brigades appear to have become the most fearsome terrorists in Europe.

The extreme left group was founded in 1969 but did not leap into prominence until April, 1974, when it kidnapped Genoa magistrate Mario Sossi and threatened to kill him unless eight comrades were freed from jail.

Genoa District Attorney Francesco Coco ordered the eight released, the Red Brigades freed Sossi and a Rome court promptly cancelled Coco's release order.

Coco took on two police bodyguards, but all three were slain by two Red Brigades gunmen in mid-1976.

The group justifies its terrorism by saying it wants to spark a Fascist coup that in turn will force the Italian Communists, who they consider to have "sold out," to return to a revolutionary role and spark a civil war.

Administration Proposes Changes In Drug Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration Thursday proposed overhauling prescription drug laws to encourage the sale of less expensive generic drugs and to give patients more information about the medicines they take.

The measure also would speed federal approval of new, possibly lifesaving drugs resulting from scientific breakthroughs that might take years to reach the market under the government's present regulatory system.

Two provisions that could quickly affect consumers' pocketbooks would require pharmacists to post the prices they charge for the most commonly prescribed drugs and would require publication of a new drug compendium for physicians.

The first provision would permit customers to seek out drugstores with the lowest prices.

C/ NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday March 17, 1978

The compendium, HEW officials said, will contain more information than existing references available to doctors, with a description of all approved drugs listed by generic class.

It would make it easier for physicians to select and prescribe generic drugs regardless of brand name.

Many states now require pharmacists to substitute the cheapest generic drug available unless the physician insists on a specific brand name. But there is no universal agreement on which drugs are therapeutically equivalent and which ones may contain slight differences in composition or effectiveness.

Other features of the 276-page measure outlined at a news conference by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. include:

— Permission for the Food and Drug Administration to order drugs off the market when evidence during widespread use shows they present an unacceptably high risk.

— A provision requiring drug companies to make public their scientific data on the safety and effectiveness of new products, information previously protected as trade secrets.

— The inclusion in drug packages of leaflets that give consumers — in nonmedical language — information on the drug they are taking.

— Creation of a National Center for Critical Pharmacology to advance scientific knowledge about drug therapy.

— Prohibitions against drug manufacturers giving free samples to physicians except in emergencies and a clause making it illegal for drug salesmen to give doctors or their families gifts worth more than $5, including the many office supplies now provided free.

— Restrictions on the distribution of some drugs that may be valuable for treating certain disorders but would be dangerous if widely prescribed or taken.

— Allowing drug manufacturers to produce and export products that aren't approved for sale in the United States but which may benefit other nations, particularly in the third world.

Another section of the bill would restructure and simplify the present approval process for all new drugs. As part of that process, manufacturers wishing to produce a drug in competition with one already on the market would no longer have to duplicate the scientific testing done by the pioneer company.

They simply could wait five years until the pioneer's exclusive license to market the product in the United States expired, then apply for a license to sell the same drug.

That provision is designed to give a firm five years to profit from its investment in research and development, then open the field to anyone who can produce the generic equivalent at a competitive price.

Although Califano said the bill would benefit the drug industry by "cutting out the incredible underbrush" of unnecessary federal regulation, industry representatives have been fighting it behind the scenes for weeks.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, which represents the nation's largest drug companies, says the administration proposal would accomplish just the opposite of what its authors intend by stifling innovation and encouraging companies to abandon the U.S. market in favor of overseas development and sales.

Califano credited the Senate and House health subcommittees headed by Sen. Edward D. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Paul D. Rogers, D-Fla., "more than anyone in this department" for the years of work that went into developing the legislation.

Kennedy and Rogers joined the secretary at the news conference, along with several other members of Congress, and will be among the bill's sponsors.

Livestock At Large In Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty of the 82 goats let loose by protesting farmers at the Capitol were still at large Thursday and 10 others had died or were critically ill, Humane Society officials said.

Healthy goats recaptured Wednesday were taken to nearby farms, said Linda Tyrrell, a Humane Society spokeswoman.

Capitol police and animal-shelter workers were able to corral 60 of the goats and only three of the dozens of chickens released near the end of a march by about 4,000 protesting farmers.

The demonstration was sponsored by the Colorado-based American Agriculture group to protest low farm prices.

Farmers told the society that the goats were bought last Friday from a slaughterhouse lot while the protesters were en route to the three days of demonstrations in support of guaranteed higher farm prices.

"All of them were dehydrated, thin from hunger and very scared" after being chased around the grounds and, in a few cases, into buildings, she said.

One goat was struck by an automobile but the driver took it away, she said.

Others were still running through residential areas near the Capitol, she said, with one rescued Wednesday night from a yard where it had been shackled to a fence and abandoned.

A veterinarian ordered that goat destroyed along with four others that suffered from a pneumonia-like lung virus called "shipping fever" that results from poor transportation conditions, Mrs. Tyrrell said.

The Humane Society shelter was treating four goats with the virus, "hoping they'll be able to make it but they're in bad shape," she said.

The animal shelter workers and police were caught off guard by the release of the animals Wednesday but prepared for similar threatened protests later this week involving Brahma bulls and greased pigs.

"Police have been alerted to shoot and drop (the bulls) right away" if animal-shelter workers were not available and if the animals threatened tourists and children visiting Capitol Hill, said Mrs. Tyrrell. Tranquilizer guns would be used, she said.

Mrs. Tyrrell said the animal shelter has received many calls from friends and farmers offering homes for the captured animals.

But she added that the capture-and-care operations "are going to be a great expense for us.... These people (the protesters) don't understand that we don't get any government money for this."

U.S. Beer Sales Top 150 Million Barrels Mark

(EDITOR'S NOTE — In barrooms, on the beach, at ballgames and barbecues, it's "Beer, beer, beer that makes you want to cheer . .." More than 150 million barrels of beer a year are drunk in the United States. But Europeans turn up their nose at the stuff we bend our elbow for. Here's a look at light, lager, ale, port and stout.)

ST. LOUIS (AP) — You can't convince Bill Leimkuehler that today's beer, golden bright and light of taste, compares with the sweeter, heavier brew of his youth. It doesn't draw flies.

And you can't tell Harry Obert, whose grandfather once owned a flourishing brewery in this old river city hard by the Mississippi, that his rugged German ancestors would have approved of the modern beer barons. The mere thought of the heresy is verboten.

"If the old brewmasters could come out of their graves and taste today's beer, they'd go right back in," Obert says. "What's good is dead and gone."

Leimkuheler and Obert, both in their late 70s, remember when American beer was more full bodied, when the snap of the barley hung on a mustache like a trace of morning shaving cream, and when a father wouldn't think twice about sending his youngest son to the corner tavern, carrying the family beer pails on a broom handle.

How tastes and times have changed since both men came of age. Who, for example, would dream of using Leimkuehler's unscientific fly test as an index of drinkability?

Fails 'Fly Test'

Leimkuehler, a baldish man with a ring of white hair, says that in the old days, the flies would hover around a glass of beer on a warm summer's eve. No more. "The flies don't come near the stuff, and I'll tell you something, maybe they've got more sense than we do."

Leimkuehler and Obert represent beer past. What of beer present?

Statistics from the U.S. Brewers Association indicate that Americans are quaffing increasing quantities of beer. Consumption in 1976 was a record 150.8 million barrels, or about 22 gallons for every man, woman, and child. Philip Katz, an association research executive, says consumption should rise another 3 or 4 percent when the 1977 figures are in.

The country, it seems, is in the midst of a beer boom; Katz says sales have increased steadily for a generation.

Light Beer Success

Experts say part of the recent popularity of beer is due to the success of the new light beers, aimed mostly at women wary of bulging midriffs and young adults wary of anything unsweetened.

"The soda-pop generation has grown up, but when they tried beer, they found it too bitter for their tastes," says Andrew Steinhubl, a brewing executive for Anheuser-Busch Inc., the nation's largest brewery. "Consequently, they've switched to the new light beers in large numbers."

No one would dispute that European beer is sterner stuff. Steinhubl says a scale that measures "bitter units" shows that several Bavarian brands, not to mention those in the rest of Germany, are three times more bitter than their American counterparts.

American Beer 'Useless'

Apparently it's a matter of national taste. For example, one Dublin housewife who recently visited Iowa, said bluntly of American beer: "It's useless."

Most American beers are lagers, meaning ready to store. They are generally mild, light, relatively low in calories, Steinhubl says. But they're not the last word on the beer bandwagon.

There also is ale, porter and stout. Ale, a bit racier than lager, is much more bitter; porter is a sweeter variety of ale, so dark it's almost black; Irish stout is just that, stout and very dry.

So different are tastes, in fact, that if a bottle of American lager comes within reach of an Englishman, he's likely to mix a bit of lime juice or cider with it and drink it like soda.

Falstaff Prominently Displayed

Not so in St. Louis, where residents prefer their beer straight and where the cult of drinking it is approached with an almost religious reverence. That statue of Falstaff, Shakespeare's tippling hero, is prominently displayed in Tower Grove Park for a reason.

The city's beer tradition dates to the early 19th century. It had two things going for it: Good water and caves for cool storage. After the Civil War, 53 breweries were rolling out the barrel. Most were built near the river's cobbled levees, and a number of them, fortress-like structures heavy of brick and Gothic gargoyle, are still standing, monuments to forgotten foam.

In recent years, St. Louis has lost a lot of its stein-brimming status in the brewing industry. Anheuser-Busch's Victorian-era brewery — one of 10 nationwide — is the only plant still in operation. But when you say Busch in St. Louis, you mean 4,300 jobs, an $85 million payroll, and 10.5 million barrels of beer a year.

But even with only one brewery, the city remains an industry heavyweight. Only Milwaukee and Golden, Colo., have a larger volume, according to the U.S. Brewer's Association. Milwaukee's three major breweries — Miller's, Pabst, and Schlitz — pump out almost 20 million barrels a year, making it the undisputed beer capital of the country. Golden, thanks to Adolph Coors, produces 13 million barrels and is ranked second.

Workers Drank Their Fill

William Berblinger, who spent most of his 87 years working in St. Louis breweries of old, remembers what it was like: The candles and the boot lamps the men carried in the aging cellars and the regular "beer hours" when they could drink their fill on company time.

He remembers those dark, damp cellars best. "The older men couldn't stand the cold down there, and the escaping carbon dioxide gas from the beer tanks could give you a terrific headache," he said.

Those were the days, before prohibition, when a brewery that turned out a bad batch was called an "essig fabrik," or vinegar factory, by the city's heavy German population. A 16-ounce schooner went for a nickel then, and the greedy coated their tin pails with lard to hold down the foaming head.

Armed Guards Escorted Trucks

Prohibition hit the breweries hard, and when the Volstead Act was repealed in 1933, beer came back in a torrent, so much so that the first truckloads to leave one newly reopened brewery were escorted by armed guards.

"When my dad used to open up in the mornings, there'd already be a line outside," said Bob Medich, a second generation bar and restaurant owner on the city's near southside. "Most of them were Bohemians who needed their morning shot of beer to get started."

The area has changed considerably since then, Medich says. Most of the Germans, Croatians, Romanians, Serbians, Poles, and Russians blended in the American scene and moved to the suburbs. A few are still around, however. Medich, whose bar is in in the shadow of the old Falstaff brewery, mentions an old German minister who stops by for his daily glass of "bier."

Dimly Lit Taverns Remain

The dimly lit neighborhood tavern with its tinted green windows remains as much a part of St. Louis as brownbrick architecture and the muddy Mississippi.

"The local bars give the city much of its old-time character," says Brendon Patrick Michael Carmody, a 6-foot-4, 400-pound block of a man whose tavern is distinctly Irish in atmosphere, even down to the balladeer and the mural of James Joyce's death mask.

"It's a lot like Ireland in that respect. But really, there's no such thing as an Irish pub. The pubs are the people. And you get that same feeling in St. Louis."

And how the people love to put it away. Some of the regulars who ease up to the rail at Thurmer's bar admit they down five cases a week. Owner Norb Thurmer says 500 cases is only a 10-day supply.

It's much the same story at Humphrey's, near St. Louis University on the central west end. Bartender Randy Dana says his customers have a one-track mind when they work up a thirst.

"I'll tell you, people drink beer like crazy in this city," he says. "One night we had a special on vodka. People drank beer. Then the next night we had a special on Scotch. And they still drank beer. God help us if we ever run out of the stuff."

School Bond Projects Drafted At Childress

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS—After several months of study by a committee of citizens, and recommendations of an arhitectural firm and a financial consultant, the Childress Independent School District board of trustees has agreed on two building proposals to be offered the voters of Childress.

Proposal number one is $2,250,000 bond issue which would fund the construction of a new educational facility for kindergarten through eighth grade. The unit would be built near the present junior high school. Also included in the proposal is a plan to construct a cover for the open courtyard area in the center of Childress High School in order to utilize the space for needed facilities.

The second proposal would need $3 million in funding, and would be the same as the first plan except that an auditorium near the high school would be rebuilt.

Voters will have options of voting for either proposal, both of them or voting against them.

Herbert Clift was named election judge with Mrs. Linda Esty as clerk for absentee balloting. Alternate judge will be Mrs. W.I. Lambert. There will be one voting box, to be located at the junior high school. Hours of the election will be from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

The board estimates that the proposals will cost about $300,000 more than the bond issues. That amount is to be derived from the recent sale of Wilson Elementary School property to the U.S. Postal Service and other available school funds.

Post office spokesman said a new post office is to be built on the Wilson School Property. The purchase did not include the school building itself, but rather approximately two-thirds of the block where the school is located on Highway 287 in the heart of the city. Price of the property was $75,000.

Democrats Delay Rules Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Party Chairman John White delayed a showdown Thursday on controversial rules changes which would help President Carter withstand a nomination challenge in 1980.

The party's executive committee had been scheduled to take up the report completed in January by a special rules commission headed by Morley Winograd, Michigan state chairman.

But White announced at the start of the meeting that Winograd would present his report and take questions without any votes being cast on its provisions.

"Early votes would be precipitous and not give us full time to voice all of the questions or views that we may have about the report," White said.

He said he would call the executive committee back for a decision before the next meeting of the full Democratic National Committee to which it must report.

At the same time, White announced the next DNC meeting will not be until June 9. It had been set for April 21.

The executive committee's decision on the troublesome rules will come in a special session here May 9-10 with a day for debates and a day for voting on the proposed revisions item by item.

The delay came after stiff opposition began to arise to some of the changes pushed through the Winograd Commission by White House staffers who also were commission members.

Among them are several reversals of earlier party "reforms" which would make it more difficult for challengers to attack the party establishment candidate — which in the case of 1980 is expected to be Carter, although as an outsider in 1976 he used the very rules being erased now to win the nomination.

Dagmar Vidal, national committeewoman from Iowa, presented the executive committtee with petitions which she said had hundreds of signatures opposing some of the changes.

But of particular concern in Iowa, she said, was a proposal which would limit all presidential primaries, caucuses and conventions to a 13-week period, prohibiting the state from holding the nation's first caucuses as it did in 1976.

State reaction to the possible loss of the distinction is snowballing into a political issue which threatens Democratic candidates there, she said.

In addition to the curtailed priamary season, the Iowa petitions also objected to proposals which would increase the size of the next national convention by 10 percent and give automatic seats to Democratic politicians.

They protested a loophole which would allow states to get around the ban on winner-take-all primaries by running delegate candidates in individual districts, one which would raise the share of a state's votes a presidential candidate would have to get to get a share of its delegates, and another which would require presidential contenders to enter primaries at least 55 days before the election.

White said whatever rules the party finally comes up with, he hopes they will have "enough truth in them, and they will be simple enough and they will have enough principle in them that they would last.

Exxon Plugs Third Alaskan Well

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Exxon USA has plugged and abandoned its third wildcat well in the Gulf of Alaska, a spokesman announced Thursday.

Rod Boane, Alaska district manager for Exxon, said no commercial quantities of oil or gas were found.

The well was drilled to nearly 10,000 feet, about 120 miles west of Yakutat.

Boane said Exxon has spent more than $45 million on the three wells, all of which have been dry holes. Other companies have drilled an additional seven unsuccessful wells in the Gulf of Alaska sale area.

The industry paid $560 million for leases in the area. Boane said, "The lack of success in the Gulf so far illustrates the high-cost, high-risk nature of oil and gas exploration. It also shows the need for government policies which encourage rather than discourage exploration activities."

But Exxon isn't giving up yet. Boane said the Alaskan Star semi-submersible rig will be moved to a site 18 miles west of Icy Bay to drill a fourth well.

Exxon spokesman Bleu Bethard said the company may discontinue its search for oil in the Gulf if the fourth well also is unsuccessful.

Campaign Spending Bill 'In Trouble'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Thursday that a campaign spending bill is in "big trouble" as it nears vote next week, after a tentative compromise fell apart.

Republicans oppose the legislation because it would reduce contributions by party fund-raising committees. O'Neill said public financing of House elections, to be added later by amendment, is also drawing opposition.

Under a public financing proposal endorsed by the Democratic leadership, candidates in general election races for the House would be eligible for up to $50,000 in federal money to match private contributions.

With some exceptions, recipients would have to accept a campaign spending ceiling of $150,000.

Republicans are angry because the measure would also reduce by 70 percent — from $50,000 to $15,000 — the amount a political party's fund-raising committee could contribute to a House candidate.

Because the GOP has more money available for congressional candidates, Republicans feel the committee contribution limits favor Democrats.

Federal Election Commission figures show that Republicans have $8 million available for congressional elections in 1978, compared to $868,000 in Democratic committee coffers.

Under the failed compromise, Democrats offered to raise the maximum committee contribution to $40,000 in 1979, after this year's elections.

O'Neill said the compromise stemmed from negotiations requested by House Minority Leader John Rhodes. However, the compromise was not popular with Rhodes' GOP colleagues.

Many observers believe that once the bill reaches the House floor, the Democratic leadership will accede to Republican demands on contribution limits to gain GOP support for public financing of House elections.

Details of the proposed public financing amendment were revealed Thursday by Rep. Thomas S. Foley of Washington, chairman of the Democratic caucus, and Rep. Barber Conable Jr., a New York Republican who favors public financing.

Their proposal would prohibit candidates from spending more than $25,000 of their own money, and would allow up to five payments of $10,000 each to match private contributions.

A candidate would have to raise $10,000 in individual contributions of $100 or less to qualify for each $10,000.

Some 80 per cent of the contributions used to obtain matching funds would have to come from the residents of the state where the candidate campaigned.

The overall $150,000 spending ceiling and the $50,000 limit on federal campaign money would be lifted for any candidate whose opponent bypassed the public financing system and spent a substantial amount of his own money or private contributions on the race. The spending limit also would be waived for a candidate if independent groups not directly linked to his opponent spent $33,000 against his campaign.

Candidates who ran without opposition would not be eligible for the matching fund payments.

Debt Limit Freeze Voted By Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee voted Thursday to freeze the limit on the national debt at $752 billion through July 31.

Unless Congress acts on the debt limit, it will drop from $752 billion to $400 billion on March 31, leaving the government without legal authority to borrow to pay its bills.

As of Tuesday, the public debt stood at $732 billion.

The House Ways and Means Committee also has recommended extension of the present limit for another four months. Reflecting election-year jitters about federal spending, the House last week rejected a recommendation that the ceiling be raised to $824 billion through March 31, 1979.

Police Maintaining Expensive Vigil Over Anarchists

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Riot-equipped police blockaded a rat-infested house Thursday in an effort to starve out a band of more than 20 armed anarchists holed up since last spring when they taunted police with automatic rifles.

About 300 policemen, some toting shotguns and wearing flak jackets, threw up sawhorses at intersections within a block of the rundown, three-story dwelling, then withdrew in wet snow to rooftops and second-floor windows across the street.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of several MOVE members on weapons and explosives charges, but police have been unable to serve them. Officers have kept the house under 24-hour surveillance for 10 months at a cost in overtime of more than $1 million.

As the day wore on, it appeared the police and the radicals were in a standoff. MOVE members have said they have enough food to last a year, and the police have indicated they don't plan to storm the house unless fired upon first.

The police acted after the state Supreme Court on Wednesday denied a petition from a neighborhood group that would have prevented the blockade, first ordered last month by Mayor Frank Rizzo.

The building is located in an old integrated neighborhood that includes many college students among its residents.

City Solicitor Sheldon Albert said there are at least 20 adult male MOVE members inside, four women and eight children. He said 18 of them are named in arrest warrants, many of the charges stemming from the confrontation last spring.

He said the group is armed with a minimum of 14 weapons, four capable of automatic fire, as well as explosives.

MOVE is a back-to-nature enclave that shuns modern technology, soap, and garbage disposal.

Two years ago a female MOVE member warned police that her comrades would destroy their children before turning them over to authorities, and the city has taken a cautious stance in its dealings with the group. Recently, however, another MOVE member said it had all been a ploy to keep the police at bay.

"We will only shoot if they come in here and try to hurt our babies," an unidentified female MOVE member screamed at police Thursday. "The cops, the Rizzo administration, has once again proven our point — that they are insane. If they come in here we will fight them with everything we have."

Shortly after the wooden horses were erected, six people, described by police as "MOVE symphathizers," were arrested on contempt charges. The charges were later dropped, however, because the six hadn't been properly informed of the blockade order.

A short time later an elderly woman marched past a barricade and handed a package to a MOVE member.

MOVE began forming in the early 1970s, following the teachings of a man they call John Africa. Many have taken his last name.

Last spring's run-in with police followed efforts by building inspectors to enter the house, which is surrounded by garbage and excrement. When police were called members of the group erected barricades and brandished weapons.

A member of the group, Delbert Orr, handed police a hand-written letter that said in part:

Top Crosby Citizens Honored At Banquet

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CROSBYTON — The Crosbyton Chamber of Commerce, along with more than 300 persons in the community, honored their "best" at Thursday night's annual banquet in the Pioneer Memorial Building here.

The J.W. Jacksons, who operate a family farm, were cited as the Agricultural Family of the Year. Jackson is a lifelong resident of the county.

Longtime Crosbyton civic worker Tillman Reeves was recognized as Citizen Through the Years for "being involved in virtually every part of the community."

Reeves began in business here in 1925, and now owns and operates a service station. A farmer-rancher, he is a former chamber president, chairman of the Pioneer Memorial Museum Board, a charter member of the Lions Club and has served as director and president of the West Texas Pioneers and Old Settlers.

He helped organize the Crosbyton Rodeo Association and was a co-chairman of the Crosbyton Golden Jubilee Celebration in 1958.

Sandra Witt was recognized as Woman of the Year for her numerous church and civic duties. The local artist has worked on the Blanco Canyon amphitheater-park project, on the facelift of the city park and with the Girl Scouts here.

Rancher George McNeill, who has been "extremely active" with the Boy Scouts here, was honored as Man of the Year. McNeill, a school board member, has also been active in church and rodeo association activities.

Mrs. Jean Burchett of Childress was the guest speaker and the night's entertainment was provided by the Crosbyton High School stage band and the Melody Misses.

Carter To Visit Site Of Opposed Breeder Reactor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter tentatively accepted an invitation Thursday to visit Oak Ridge, Tenn., and the nearby site of the Clinch River breeder reactor he has opposed.

After a bipartisan congressional delegation from the state met with Carter, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker told reporters he expects the president to "come to Oak Ridge and talk to us about it (the breeder project), to see the situation first hand."

Baker and others said Carter likely will spend a full day in the area "sometime later in the spring."

Gas Pricing Proposal Due Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — After considering a proposed Senate natural gas pricing compromise for more than a week, House negotiators tentatively agreed Thursday to modify the plan with their own counterproposal.

The move clouded prospects for a prompt settlement of the long congressional impasse on President Carter's energy plan.

Senate energy conferees have said that any major changes in the proposed Senate compromise could torpedo efforts to reach agreement on natural gas pricing.

Although details of the new House proposal were not disclosed, sources said it called for deregulation of gas prices over a somewhat longer period than the seven years under the Senate measure.

The new proposal also would make smaller quantities of gas available for deregulation than would the Senate measure.

And, although it might result in similar price increases to consumers, it would result in smaller profits for gas producers than under the Senate plan, sources said.

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, a top House negotiator, said that rather than being a totally new concept, the House counterproposal is built upon the basic principle of the Senate plan — a phased lifting of price controls from newly discovered natural gas.

"We haven't finalized it yet," he told reporters. He said that would be done on Monday in a meeting of all House conferees.

A full meeting of the House-Senate conference committee — which has not met publicly since before Christmas — may be held Tuesday to formally present the counterproposal to senators, Ashley said.

Ashley said he did not think the decision of House conferees not to accept the Senate proposal as written would kill chances for breaking the impasse on gas pricing.

"Our proposal will be responsive to the Senate proposal," he said.

House negotiators informally approved the measure after rejecting a proposal by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., to offer the Senate an even more drastic counterproposal that would more closely resemble the original House-passed Carter administration plan for continued price controls.

Carter's energy plan has been stalled since early December when the House-Senate conference committee working on a compromise energy bill got hung up on the natural gas pricing issue.

Carter proposed keeping price controls on natural gas, but at somewhat higher levels, while extending regulation into now-uncontrolled markets within producing states. But the Senate turned around and voted to deregulate gas after two years.

Sources said the House counterproposal would make it easier for the president or Congress to reimpose price controls.

Gadfly Fights For Stockholders

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Lewis Gilbert is a professional stockholder who has spent the past four decades going from annual meeting to annual meeting fighting for what he calls "corporate democracy."

He is a 69-year-old, brown-haired thorn in the side of many corporate executives. He stands at the microphone at meetings, pats his pockets looking for notes jotted on several pieces of paper, pushes his glasses down his nose, points his finger at an executive and asks sometimes embarassing questions about how company officers use company money.

"We often lose the battles, but we win the wars," Gilbert said while attending the annual meeting in Syracuse of Carrier Corp., the world's largest manufacturer of air conditioning equipment. He owns 200 Carrier shares.

Gilbert — who with Evelyn Y. Davis and Wilma Soss comprise the best known of the corporate "gadflies" — was on his feet several times during the session, peppering Carrier Chairman Melvin Holm with questions about who uses the company's two airplanes, the expense accounts of Carrier's top executives and the company's plan to switch to the metric system.

"These are the kinds of questions that have to be asked. Otherwise, you get into all kinds of abuses," Gilbert said in an interview.

His appearance was one of 150 annual meetings he expects to attend this year to make sure companies are doing all they can to return bigger dividends to their stockholders.

Carrier officials were prepared for Gilbert. They gave him a reserved seat with a nameplate. All the other nameplates were for Carrier's ranking executives.

Gilbert impatiently rose from his chair to direct his questions at Holm, frequently without waiting for formal recognition or the microphone to be brought to him. Holm responded at length on Gilbert's numerous inquiries. Gilbert said afterward it was a good session, "This is the way these meetings should be run."

Gilbert's questions are not always warmly received by executives, who find their salaries, their expense accounts and their business decisions challenged.

"I am not here for a popularity contest," Gilbert said. "If they are courteous, I am courteous. If they are fresh, I can be fresh too."

Gilbert has made a career out of campaigning against executives who take pay raises when earnings are down; against directors who do not own stock in their own companies, who meet infrequently, and especially against directors who fail to show up at the annual meeting to face him.

He opposes company presidents who double as chairmen. And he is angered by firms that hold annual meetings in out-of-the-way places.

Gilbert also does not like companies he has invested in to make political contributions.

"Why should a company give money to an assemblyman or senator when the company is owned by Democrats and Republicans? That's what the dividends are for. Let the stockholders give to whomever they want," he said.

What Gilbert favors is higher dividends. He believes the government should give companies a tax break on their dividend payments to encourage firms to increase their dividends and attract more individual investors to the stock market.

"I think we've made progress. We're making the annual meetings more accessible to the stockholders. When I first started, Exxon met in a little gas station in New Jersey with three people," he said.

"The more management meets the stockholders the better. After all, the annual meeting by law is to allow the stockholders to meet and question their management. And, it shows the management they are our employees, not the other way around."

After appearing at thousands of annual meetings over the past 40 years, Gilbert says he can tell a lot about a company from its meetings.

"Generally, if a company runs a good stockholder meeting, its day-to-day relationship with its employees and the public is good," he said.

Although Gilbert's motions are usually buried in the voting, he says he frequently wins his argument with management anyway. Executives of major companies have given up some of their titles after listening to his criticism at the annual meeting, Gilbert said.

Gilbert says he has a good relationship with the Carrier hierarchy and approves of the way the company is operated, but that doesn't mean he gets his way at the annual meeting.

Gilbert sponsored a resolution to give existing stockholders the first chance to buy any new stock issued by Carrier. The proposal was aimed at letting stockholders keep their proportionate ownership of the company.

Carrier's board of directors opposed the motion and Gilbert lost by a vote of 18.2 million shares of stock to 1.4 million.

Gilbert shrugged off the defeat, comparing his loss to a political campaign. He insisted he was pleased with his percentage of the vote and promised he would return next year with the proposal.

Gilbert and his brother, John, live in Manhattan where they run Corporate Democracy Inc., to promote stockholders' rights. The Gilberts attend annual meetings around the country to monitor the companies in which their family owns stock.

Gilbert said he got into the business years ago as a newspaper reporter, when he asked a question at a meeting and wasn't satisfied with the answer.

The family owns stock in a multitude of major companies across the country.

He reportedly lives off their dividends, but declined to reveal specifics of his finances.

"We've always had money, but we've made more over the years," Gilbert said. "But I am not a multi-millionaire or anything like that. I do this because I enjoy it or I wouldn't do it."

HEARTLINE: I have been drawing my Social Security benefits for approximately three years now. I usually receive my Social Security check on the 3rd of each month but some months I did not receive my check until the 5th or 6th because of weekend. Does Social Security have any plans to improve this in the future? M.T.

A. Yes. More timely delivery of Social Security checks and SSI checks will be assured when the usual delivery date for these checks falls on a weekend or a legal holiday. When this occurs, checks will be mailed earlier, even if this requires the mailing to take place in the preceding month. Any overpayment that occurs as a direct result of the earlier delivery would be waived and would not be subject to recovery.

HEARTLINE: I have been looking for a health insurance policy for myself. The main thing that I want covered is hospital benefits if I should need them. I am not that interested in getting a policy for medical bills. Is it possible to get a policy that covers only hospital costs? T.N.

Yes, many health insurance policies (including most Medicare supplements) do pay only hospital charges. The policy may pay all or a percentage of your hospital charges directly to the hospital, or the policy may pay so many dollars per day to you while you are hospitalized.

For people who have problems understanding their health insurance, Heartline has developed a book to help them. "Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance" covers the major questions you will have concerning the purchase of health insurance. This book covers Medicare supplements, disability income policies and regular health insurance policies. There is also a policy checklist in this book which will help you in questioning insurance agents. To order, send $1.50 to "Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance," P.O. Box 11934, Chicago 60611. This book is completely guaranteed. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 67 years old and I draw my Social Security benefits. I am going to start working part time this year. How much money will I be able to earn and still draw my full Social Security benefit? C.L.

The annual exempt amount ($3000 in 1977) would be increased for beneficiaries age 65 and over to $4000 in 1978, $4500 in 1979, $5000 in 1980, $5500 1981, and $6000 in 1982. After 1982, the $6000 level would be increased automatically as wage levels rise. The annual exempt amounts in those years for beneficiaries under age 65 would be determined under present law — that is, they would be increased automatically as wage levels rise. (The exempt amount would be $3,240 in 1978 and is expected to be $3480 in 1979, $3720 in 1980, $3960 in 1981, and $4200 in 1982).

In addition to this, a Social Security beneficiary can earn any amount they wish at the age of 70, lowered from the age of 72. Ths provision becomes effective for taxable years ending after 1981.

Mrs. Meir Given Tests, Feels Fine

TEL AVIV (AP) — Former Premier Golda Meir entered a hospital this week for routine tests, but "feels fine," a hospital official said Thursday.

Mrs. Meir, who is two months shy of her 80th birthday, was admitted to Beilinson Hospital Tuesday and will be released soon, the official said. Tests were not yet complete.

Mrs. Meir frequently undergoes examinations. During her five years in office she suffered from a variety of minor illnesses, from shingles to cataracts.

Mrs. Meir, who left government in 1974, still leads an active life. She sees visiting foreign politicians, consults with leaders of her Labor party and speaks to Jewish fund raisers from abroad.

FCC Would Clarify Candidates' Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted Thursday to take action aimed at defining which candidates for federal office are entitled to reasonable access to radio and television air time and what reasonable access is.

The commission said it will ask for comments on whether it should adopt guidelines or rules for broadcasters to follow in complying with the law.

The FCC can revoke a station's license for willful or repeated failure to allow reasonable access or for failure to permit purchase of reasonable amounts of air time to legally qualified candidates for federal office.

Although the commission has developed some guidelines that broadcasters can use in determining whether a candidate can demand air time, questions remain.

For instance, the agency has decided that federal candidates are entitled to prime time, except when there is a large number of candidates.

It also has indicated that a station has the option of offering either free or paid time, or a combination of the two, and that reasonable access applies to noncommercial as well as commercial stations.

However, the commission has declined to recognize a candidate's right to a particular length of program time or to a specific air time.

The result has been that the commission generally defers to the good faith judgment of stations in determining what constitutes reasonable access.

The commission also voted to propose changing the definition of a legally qualified candidate. It said write-in candidates and candidates seeking nomination by means other than a primary or special election were not covered fully under the existing definition.

To remedy this, the FCC proposed requiring such candidates to make a substantial showing of bona fide candidacy, such as press releases, distribution of leaflets, addresses to political meetings and maintenence of a campaign committee.

The agency said it would accept comments on the proposals for 30 days. It said this would allow it to make decisions in time for the elections next fall.

First Lady Airs PBS Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter will deliver a taped message in support of public television, which will be fed to the nation's public TV stations at 10 p.m. EST Sunday, the Public Broadcasting Service said Thursday.

The message is part of a 30-hour fund-raising marathon lasting from 7 p.m. EST Saturday to midnight Sunday. This will end 16 days of special proramming scheduled for Festival '78, public TV's major fund-raising and awareness campaign this year.

The text of Mrs.Carter's broadcast was released by PBS.

"Jimmy and I both believe very strongly that public television is an important part of American life. It belongs to all of us in a very real and personal way — becase millions of Americans help make it possible, and because public television reflects the best we have within us."

Matthew 13:9-28, The Living Bible

9 If you have ears, listen!"
10 His disciples came and asked Him, "Why do you always use these hard-to-understand illustrations?"
11 Then He explained to them that only they were permitted to understand about the Kingdom of Heaven, and others were not.
12,13 "For to him who has will more be given," He told them, "and he will have great plenty; but from him who has not, even the little he has will be taken away. That is why I use these illustrations, so people will hear and see but not understand.
14 This fulfills the prophecy of Isaiah, 'They hear, but don't understand; they look, but don't see!
15 For their hearts are fat and heavy, and their ears are dull, and they have closed their eyes in sleep,
16 So they won't see and hear and understand and turn to God again, and let Me heal them.' But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.
17 Many a prophet and godly man has longed to see what you have seen, and hear what you have heard, but couldn't.
18 Now here is the explanation of the story I told about the farmer planting grain:
19 The hard path where some of the seeds fell represents the heart of a person who hears about the Kingdom and doesn't understand it; then Satan comes and snatches away the seeds from his heart.
20 The shallow, rocky soil represents the heart of a man who hears the message and receives it with real joy,
21 But he doesn't have much depth in his life, and the seeds don't root very deeply, and after a while when trouble comes, or persecution begins because of his beliefs, his enthusiasm fades, and he drops out.
22 The ground covered with thistles represents a man who hears the message, but the cares of this life and his longing for money choke out God's Word, and he does less and less for God.
23 The good ground represents the heart of a man who listens to the message and understands it and goes out and brings 30, 60, or even 100 others into the Kingdom."
25 But one night as he slept, his enemy came and sowed thistles among the wheat.
26 When the crop began to grow, the thistles grew too.
27 The farmer's men came and told him, 'Sir, the field where you planted that choice seed is full of thistles!'
28 'An enemy has done it,' he explained, 'Shall we pull out the thistles?' they asked.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. — I recently read an article saying that interest on government bonds is wiped out by inflation and that, to make matters worse, you have to pay income taxes on that interest. What then, is your opinion of U.S. bonds and, secondly, what would be a good, safe investment. Could I put a small sum monthly into tax-exempt bonds?

A. -To reply to your last question first - Yes. There are mutual funds which invest in tax-exempt bonds and you may buy their shares on a periodic payment basis.

As to inflation and interest on bonds - U.S. government or others:

It's clear that if inflation runs at the rate of 8 percent a year, the income from a bond yielding 8 percent fails to keep you "even." The $80 annual interest on a $1,000 bond is wiped out at the supermarket by the 8 percent rise in food costs, and your annual budget is also reduced by whatever tax you must pay on that $80 of income.

So -what else is new?

This same problem exists with all fixed income -from any source, whether Treasury bond, corporation bond, preferred stock, savings account, annuity. There is no reason for limiting that argument to only U.S. bonds.

Nor should one kid one's self by thinking that inflation damages only the annual interest income. It wipes out part of the capital every year, too. Example: If you had put $3,000 into the bank or into any bond ten years ago, mentally earmarking that as a fund to be used in purchasing a car, you would find that the account today would most likely not cover the cost of the same type of automobile you could have bought for $3,000 ten years ago -especially if you have taken money out of the account annually to pay income taxes on the interest.

A man who bought life insurance 18 years ago to safeguard his newborn child's college education had better stay alive and go on working to finance that education because it's a cinch the policy he then relied on to cover four years of college education will barely pay one year of college bills today.

If, ten years ago you put aside $20,000 in Dow Jones industrial average shares with the thought this money would cover the cost of a comfortable retirement home in 1978, you'd find yourself pretty much restricted to shopping for marginal dwellings today.

Inflation respects no person, no specific investment. Even gold -the traditional, time-honored hedge against inflation - lost almost half its value in the first two years if was made legal for purchase by U.S. citizens.

What it all boils down to is: There's no hiding place down here. There is no safe haven, no safe course except one: A hard-line determination to force our government to reduce its spending beyond its income and to halt the resultant piling up of government debt -which is the prime ingredient of inflation. If you don't turn down the flame of government spending, you can't contain the inflationary steam built up in the kettle. That's simple financial law.

Q. -I've recently received a considerable wage increase and can now invest about $500 a month. For various reasons I'd rather not invest in stocks, but would like some short-term (one to three years) investments offering high yield with a tax shelter.

A. -You can't get the higher yields on short-term loans. So you'll have to modify your yield goals. Secondly, tax-exempt investing points to municipal bonds which yield less. Since you are stationed overseas the question of tax-sheltered oil, cattle, leasing deals is a difficult one to answer, although any big U.S. brokerage firm in your area would have some ideas.) Make sure, of course, that the program meets your liquidity needs.

• • •

Q. -We have sold our home for cash and have been told that if we want to wipe out the balance of the mortgage we must pay a penalty. How can this be?

A. -It can very easily be if the penalty clause was included in the original mortgage contract.

Workman Views Youth Problems

Drawing on his experience on the Texas Youth Council, state senate candidate Don Workman Thursday advocated "reworking" the entire youth system in the state.

Speeking during an open house at his campaign headquarters, Workman noted "over 50 percent of crimes are committed by those 18 and under."

The Democratic candidate said he supported regional detention centers for truants and children in need of supervision.

However, Workman said, serious and repeat offenders should continue to be sent to state training schools.

The Texas Tech University regent also said regional treatment in the area of preventing delinquency needed to be developed.

Also on the subject of law and order, Workman advocated a "much tougher parole system, especially for the habitual offender."

If a person is convicted of a serious crime and picked up again for a like crime, he should be denied bond, Workman said.

"The benefit of the doubt should go to society, not the offender," he said.

Workman predicted the toughest task awaiting the new state senator would be the problem of school finance.

"I think it's time to look at it early in the session and find some kind of a permanent solution," Workman said, noting in the past education has received whatever money and time which remained at the end of a legislative session.

"I'd like to see earmarked funds go to education before they go through the legislative process" so there would be no state strings attached, he said.

He labeled more and more state funds to education a "bad trend leading to more and more governmental control."

Workman said his number one short-term goal as state senator would be revising and updating teachers salaries and benefits to compensate for inflation.

His primary long range goal, he said, would be to speed up the feasibility study of water importation from other states and then to form a committee to promote the acceptance of a plan in Texas and in other states affected by the importation.

Citizens' Group Moves To Get 'Expert' View On School Plan

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools today will seek to file a brief urging federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward to solicit testimony from independent experts before he rules on the Lubbock Independent School District's proposed integration plan.

Several members of the alliance hope such testimony will discredit the plan presented Monday to Woodward by the district's board of trustees.

Alliance members fear that unless criticism of the plan is put into the official record of the case, there will be little hope of changing the board's integration proposal even if the U.S. Justice Department appeals the case to a higher court.

At a meeting of about 30 members Thursday night, the alliance voted to ask Woodward's permission to become a "friend of the court" in the desegregation case.

That idea was presented to the group by Dr. Robert Davidow, a Texas Tech law professor. Members authorized Davidow to file such an application — and, if it is approved by the judge, an accompanying brief.

Davidow said he intends to file those documents today.

A draft of the application prepared by Davidow states, "Members of CASS are citizens of Lubbock, taxpayers and, with very few exceptions, parents of students in the Lubbock Independent School District who will be directly affected by any plan of school desegregation."

If Woodward grants "friend of the court" status, the alliance then will file a brief questioning parts of the school board's integration plan and urging Woodward to seek outside opinions about the board's proposal.

A draft of that brief, as written by Davidow and approved by alliance members Thursday, says:

"CASS believes that several aspects of the school board's plan are of doubtful feasibility. These include the 'magnet' concept as applied to Dunbar High School, the requirement that majority (white) elementary school children be transported to minority schools for only one-half of a school year, and the exemption of grades kindergarten through second from the transportation requirement."

On Monday, in presenting its plan to Woodward, the school board had Superintendent Ed Irons, Tech education dean Dr. Robert Anderson and Tech education professor Dr. Barbara Simmons testify about the integration proposal.

But CASS says the issues it has questioned "have been dealt with insufficiently or not at all" by those witnesses.

"An expert or experts should be called on by the court to testify regarding these matters," the draft of the proposed brief said.

"Since the court has ordered the school board to 'use any tool, device or plan that will reasonably accomplish the desired integration,' it is imperative that the court be provided with expert testimony regarding the question whether major portions of the school board's proposed plan are likely to work."

Davidow said he will list in the brief about a dozen possible expert witnesses, mostly sociology and political science professors from Texas Tech and other universities.

Woodward ordered the school district Jan. 27 to come up with a plan to integrate Dunbar High, Struggs Junior High and Iles, Wheatley, Sanders, Guadalupe, Posey, Martin and Mahon elementary schools.

The district's plan calls for:

—Closing Struggs as a junior high and using that facility as part of Dunbar for a magnet high school, offering courses the board hopes will voluntarily draw white students from throughout the city.

—Closing Sanders and zoning that area into Guadalupe.

—Turning Iles into a magnet elementary school with special programs and an extended school day to voluntarily attract white students.

—Assigning each student from the cited minority elementaries to a predominantly white school for half of his intermediate-grade years. Every student in predominantly white elementaries would be assigned one semester at a minority school.

The citizens' alliance, like the Justice Department, advocates systemwide integration for the district. In contrast, the board's plan would leave several schools, including 11 elementaries, predominantly minority.

The Justice Department may appeal Woodward's Jan. 27 finding that only nine schools are "constitutional violations" here. But the department has not indicated if it will protest the district's plan for those schools or if expert witnesses will be presented to criticize the plan.

That's why the alliance wants to step in.

"All we're asking for here is for the court to fully develop the facts," Davidow said. "If you don't get it in the record now, you're never going to get it in the record ... Nothing in the record right now says this program (the board's plan) won't work."

BRISCOE OKAYS PURCHASE

AUSTIN (AP) — A $473,970 proposal to acquire 10 acres and develop two parks in Plano has been approved, Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Thursday. The sites will be adjacent to the Chisholm Trail Linkage Park. The city and the federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation each will pay half the cost of the project.

Texans To Honor Irishmen Of Alamo

By United Presss International

The folks in Dublin are congregating for an armadillo race and Irish Stew cookoff. In Shamrock they're growing beards and tuning up for a country hoedown. In San Antonio an Irish-American society will honor the Irishmen who fell at the Alamo.

All across Texas, Irishmen and their friends are celebratig St. Patrick's Day with a Southwestern twist.

Dublin, a central Texas agricultural town of 3,000, is trying to revive a traditional celebration that lost momentum several years ago, said Dublin Mayor Lesley Billingsley, owner of a local feedstore.

"This is only the second year for the big celebration," Billingsley said. "We have had some young people who have moved into our town and they're trying to revive St. Patrick's Day."

The celebration officially opened Wednesday with a community religious service in the city fair grounds, but the main attractions are all planned for Friday. A parade with Dallas Cowboy punter and backup quarterback Danny White as grand marshall will lead into a senior citizens' olympics, an Irish Stew cookoff, armadillo races, and an appearence by the countrywestern band of world champion cowboy Larry Mahan.

If the reponse is enthusiastic enough, the city plans to invite a world champion-ship rodeo to town for next year's festival.

Youths Complain 'Boxing Therapy' Plan Too Rough

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A "boxing therapy" program designed to vent the hostilities of juvenile convicts has been suspended by state officials because youths complained it got too rough.

Since August, five teen-age boys enrolled in the Vindicate Society program have complained that they got black eyes or sore hands or were made to box when they didn't feel well, said Judith Farrell, assistant regional administrator for the state Division of Youth and Family Services.

Division spokeswoman Donna Amick said Thursday, "There were no broken bones or anything like that," but she added that the program was suspended for three weeks after the latest complaint and an investigation is under way.

"If we have any kind of question about a program like this it is usually suspended," she said.

Benjamin Amos 3d, executive director of the program, said Thursday that the youths who take part wear headgear and 16-ounce gloves, which are more cumbersome and therefore less dangerous than the lighter gloves used by professional boxers.

"Since we began having boxing therapy in 1972, we have had no serious injuries," he said.

Amos said the results of boxing therapy "have been astounding. It's a very effective way of dealing with hard-core delinquents. We have kids who have gone back to the community and have jobs. I think it works."

Boxing is used when a youth does not respond to group therapy sessions in which personal problems are hashed out, he said. In addition, youths who come to the center "high" on drugs or alcohol are told to strap on the gloves for three one-minute rounds with a peer.

"After he finishes those three rounds, he's not high anymore," said Amos. "The purpose of boxing therapy is to tire him out so we can talk to him. It's a treatment, not a punishment."

Boxing is also imposed for breaking curfew rules and other infractions, Amos said, and many of the youths want to box. He said all those currently in the program have boxed.

Boys can be assigned to the program by juvenile court judges as an alternative to imprisonment. The 45 youths currently in the program include convicted murderers, rapists and armed robbers, aged 15 to 18. Most have been given suspended sentences and told if they fail in Vindicate, they go to jail, Amos said.

The youths eat and sleep in facilities at the YMCA here, attend city schools and are permitted to visit parents, relatives and friends. They are supervised by a staff of four administrators and 10 counselors on a $300,000 annual budget based on state funding.

Former Priest Weds Rich Duchess

MADRID (AP) — The Duchess of Alba, one of Spain's richest women, has married Jesus Aguirre, a former Catholic priest now the government's director of music.

The duchess, 52, is a relative of an earlier Duchess of Alba made famous in the painting "The Naked Maja" by Spanish master Francisco de Goya in the early part of the 19th century.

Aguirre, 44, is a philosopher and theologian who was a Catholic priest until four years ago.

The duchess — Maria del Rosario Cayetana Fitz-James Stuart Silva y Falcon — holds 47 titles of nobility. She was widowed in 1972 when her husband, Luis Martinez de Irujo, died of cancer.

Jim Croce Heirs To Get $675,000

DALLAS (AP) — The heirs of singer Jim Croce will receive $675,000 in an out-of-court settlement with Roberts Airways and Mustang Aviation of Dallas, according to Tom Davis, lawyer for the Croce heirs.

Croce and four members of his musical group were killed in a plane crash in Natchitoches, La., in September 1973.

In addition, a jury decided that heirs of Kenneth Cortese, also killed in the crash, should receive $300,000.

Damages in the Croce settlement were not announced until completion of the civil trial in federal court here. Damage amounts previously determined in out-of-court settlements were $175,000 for the heirs of George Stevens III, $45,000 for heirs of Dennis Rast and $45,000 for heirs of Maurice Muehleisen.

Reynolds' Star Placed In Walk

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds, currently starring in "Semi-Tough," is the 1,695th entertainer to have a star dedicated to him on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Reynolds' star was placed Wednesday between those dedicated to actress Jan Sterling and band leader Pee Wee Hunt.

Writer Of Unusual Songs Looks Ahead

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Paul Craft is a singer, songwriter and satirical comedian who remembers arriving in Nashville three years ago to pursue a career in music.

"I remember circling Music Row like an Indian and waiting for someone to open a window and say, 'Here's where the big deals are being cut,'" he said.

He's getting in on some "big deals" through some unusual songs he writes and sings.

In 1976, he wrote "Drop Kick Me, Jesus (Through the Goalpost of Life)," a country music novelty tune that was recorded by Bobby Bare and earned Craft a Grammy nomination.

Among his other unusual songs are, "There Will Be No Energy Crisis in the Sky," a gospel music put-on referring to the Deity; "Lean on Jesus Before He Leans on You," in the same vein; and one with an obscene word in the title.

With songs like these to go with more traditional tunes like Linda Ronstadt's "Heart Like a Wheel" and the Eagles' "Midnight Flyer," Craft has emerged as something of a cross between Tom T. Hall, Steve Martin and Lenny Bruce.

"Tom T. Hall and I write the same kind of stuff with strange titles," Craft said in an interview over breakfast. "But I don't really try to write like him.

"I guess you could say my humor is off-center — a little dry. It's something I do to make the audience comfortable. I want to make them go away saying they've seen something."

His "Drop Kick Me, Jesus (Through the Goalpost of Life)" was criticized by some as sacrilegious.

"I knew some people would call it sacrilegious," he said. "But some people thought it was funny. I don't find it distasteful and it was not meant to be serious. It was not meant to be sacrilegious, either."

Craft, who moved to Nashville from Memphis in 1975, has been writing for 13 years.

"When I first started writing, I was so excited because I was rhyming and so forth. I finally realized there's more to it. It's important to keep the bad stuff out. You can write a great melody and put in a bad thing that ruins it all.

"I guess one of the worst things in the world is listening to a beginning songwriter."

He's amassed 28 pages of phrases to use in his writing.

"The soap operas are a good place to get songs. I've been watching 'The Secret Storm' since 1967. The trick is to get something to trigger something in you. Pretty soon you are eight steps away from the phrase you've heard, but they got you going.

"You can't rest on what you've done. The guy with three songs on the charts now is still looking ahead.

"The fun in life is striving for goals and the payoff is when Merle Haggard or somebody comes up to you and says, 'You're the guy who wrote that song.'"

Italy's Fees For Opera Stars Criticized

MILAN, Italy (AP) — International opera stars are demanding top dollar for appearing on the Italian stage, stirring criticism over taxpayers' support of high-priced foreign talent.

But opera officials say the fees are small compared with what pop singers get and represent only a fraction of the expenses of Italy's state-subsidized opera houses, most of them deep in debt.

American mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne raised eyebrows recently when she got a reported $55,000 for seven performances in Rome.

Carlo Maria Badini, superintendent of La Scala of Milan, showplace of Italian opera, rejected charges in the press that Miss Horne's fee was scandalous. He noted American pop singer Donna Summer received $27,500 for a single performance in Italy.

"If the Rome theater wanted an excellent singer for Tancredi they couldn't have chosen a better soprano than Marilyn Horne," Badini said. "Organizers of pop concerts cover expenses with high-priced tickets. Italian opera houses can't do that because of the different cultural purpose and the need to keep tickets cheap."

Other singers such as Placido Domingo of Spain and New Orleans-born Shirley Verrett, as well as some conductors, get from $5,000 to $7,000 a performance. But Badini said these fees are not much higher than in the past.

In comparison, the best Italian opera singers get from $3,000 to $4,000 a performance. He cited Enrico Caruso and Mario del Monaco as the most costly performers of the past.

"Caruso got up to $3,000 when U.S. currency had a much different value. In 1964, del Monaco got about $3,000 for singing Otello in Bologna. Considering inflation and the changed value of currencies, we cannot say today's opera singers earn much more," Badini said.

Performers' fees represent only a 3 percent share of the yearly budgets of Italian theaters, a fraction of the total expenses ranging from $11 million to $24 million for each opera house. The state allots a total of $77 million a year for the 13 Italian opera houses.

For this reason, opera houses are making efforts to economize, staging joint performances and using the same scenery and costumes for various operas.

Theaters also are going in for live telecasts of operas and concerts, with rich rights paid by TV companies. La Scala has already allowed the international telecast of two operas in the current season and plans six more works by the end of the year.

But some critics complain opera houses will never turn a profit until they reduce the costs of non-artistic personnel.

"It is useless to talk of costly singers, conductors and staging when everybody knows that fixed costs are the real burden of theaters," said Nini Castiglioni, Miss Verrett's agent.

Operatic Twin Bill Well Received

LONDON (UPI) — Opera double features would be more frequent — and more profitable at the box office — if more of the shorter operas were as compatible as the famous twins, Cav and Pag, or more formally, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

The English National Opera has now teamed two other works in a double bill which worked reasonably well, although at first glance Bela Bartok's somber "Bluebeard's Castle" and Puccini's comic "Gianni Schicchi," would appear to have little in common except that both were first performed in 1918.

The pairing divided the critics, whose reaction ranged from The Times' verdict that it was a "well contrasted" selection to the Evening Standard's verdict that it was a marriage of convenience whose ultimate fate would probably be divorce.

What everybody did agree on was that both were well acted and well sung and the transiations — the English National Opera performs all operas in English — were polished and professional.

There are obvious benefits to a double feature. Some operas simply are not long enough to carry an evening on their own. And some opera goers — especially those who have not yet completely succumbed — prefer the stimulation of two musicals with scores by two different composers.

In 1911 Puccini wrote a friend that he was looking for a grotesque novel or story as "I have a desire to laugh and make people laugh." It was several years before he decided that what he was looking for was the folk take of Gianni Schicchi, a Florentine peasant famous for his mimicry who used this power to dictate a will favoring a friend in the voice of a recently deceased wealthy man.

Dante mentions Schicchi as one of the inhabitants of his Inferno. But producer Colin Graham moved the action up from the Renaissance to the 19th century which, said the Daily Telegraph, somewhat negated the springlike freshness of Puccini's musicial evocation of 500 years ago.

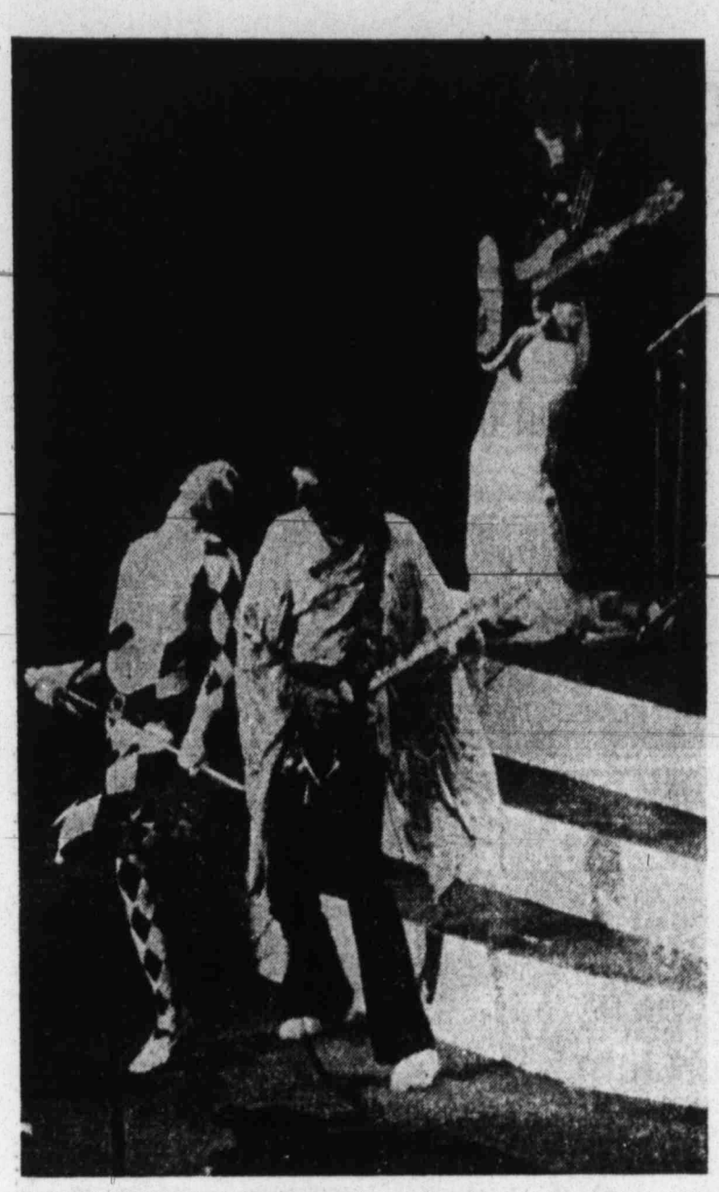
Harold Blackburn, Joy Roberts and Henry Howell musically adorned the tale of greed and avarice.

Bartok worked for six months on "Bluebeard's Castle" to a rhymed libretto by the poet Bela Balazs. The role of Bluebeard, who brings a new wife to a castle with seven forbidden doors, behind each of which is an insight into his character, is sung by Gwynne Howell with Elizabeth Connell as his eighth wife.

Bartok died in New York in 1945 teeming with ideas. To his doctor he said:

"I only regret I have to depart with my luggage full."

Group Returns To Rock Roots



HARMONY IN QUEEN — Lead singer Freddie Mercury, left, sidles up to guitarist Brian May while bassist John Deacon plays in the background during a recent Queen concert in New York. The band achieved widespread popularity through use of four-part harmony on hard rock songs, but Mercury says the group is tired of the approach. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Queen's famous rock operetta and elaborate four-part harmonies elevated the group to the top of the music world, but lead singer Freddie Mercury says the band's recent rejection of that style hasn't diminished its status.

"Most people are calling our current album the very best we've ever done," said Mercury, noting that thanks to the chart-topping single, "We Are The Champions," it's also the most successful.

"We've gone back and done some new songs like the old, but I honestly was fed up with the multitracked harmonies. We've done it to death. After 'A Night At The Opera' and 'A Day At The Races,' I had had enough of that."

The current album, "News Of The World," the band's sixth, shows Queen's hard rock roots remain healthy. The song "Sheer Heart Attack," also the title of a previous album, features Queen besting the punk rockers on their own primitive, high-energy turf. "We Will Rock You" a thundering, hand-clapping album opener, conjures visions of a Nazi rally.

There is little of the harmony featured on the band's distinctive 1976 hit, "Bohemian Rhapsody," that helped the band attract middle-age fans and become one of the last British groups to hit it big here.

That six-minute song featured an operatic middle section in which the four Queen voices were double-tracked, making them sound like a demented Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

"Before we went into the studio we talked and decided to try something different and what we came up with was great, a lot fresher stuff," Mercury, 33, said in a telephone interview. "A lot of people compared it to the first album because we kept things simpler.

"We spent a whole month on 'Bohemian Rhapsody.' This whole album took only two months to finish."

While Mercury handles lead vocals on the new hard rockers, he says he prefers to waltz about stage, champagne glass in hand, and sing his more mellow contributions like "My Melancholy Blues" and "We Are The Champions."

"It's kind of my hold on the band," Mercury said. "When I come up with these sorts of things they say, 'What?' I say, 'Let's try it' and I win them over. 'Bohemian Rhapsody' had the same kind of response. They said, 'You've got to be kidding. We're not going to sing opera.'"

He downplays the possibility of a rift caused by his penchant for waltzing about the stage in a harlequin ballet outfit, singing schmaltzy love songs, and the rest of the band's love of blistering hard rock.

"We're doing so well we'd be kind of foolish to break up right now," Mercury said. "Maybe in a couple of years, or whatever, who knows, but we have a lot more to offer."

Woody Allen Film Garners Awards

Allen was named best director and Miss Keaton best actress for their work in "Annie Hall."

The Allen film also won the best screenplay and best film editing awards, voted by British film and television professionals who belong to BAFTA.

The awards were presented by Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II and president of BAFTA. The star-studded ceremony at Wembley Conference Center in northwest London was televised in Britain.

The best actor award went posthumously to British star Peter Finch for his performance in "Network."

"A Bridge Too Far" captured two other awards for the best cinematography and best soundtrack, while Federico Fellini's "Casanova" won awards for best costume design and best art direction.

The Academy's special Fellowship Award was given to American film director Fred Zinneman, whose recent work includes "Julia." Previous winners of the award include Charlie Chaplin and Laurence Olivier.

Instruments Of Middle Ages Fascinate Family

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Want a two-manual French-style harpsichord? It'll cost you about $8,000. Few people have them, but then few people make them. For one family that does, they consider it a labor of love.)

DUXBURY, Vt. (AP) — Jack Tourin and his family have traveled backward in time from the computer age to the Middle Ages.

Their workshop, a converted 19th century sawmill in this northern Vermont town, is one of the few places in the United States where one can find a viola da gamba, a member of the viol family. It is held between the knees and is comparable in range to the cello.

Tourin Musica makes music as well as musical instruments. Tourin's wife Jeanne, a pianist and harpsichordist; son Peter, accomplished on strings; and daughter-in-law Tina, a harpist, perform in ensemble for schools and cultural groups. Jack Tourin tags along, lecturing on the history of musical instruments.

The Tourins also teach music appreciation to 500 youngsters a week in area elementary schools. Peter plays the viola da gamba with the University of Vermont baroque ensemble and plays country fiddle with a footstomping bluegrass group called Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys, which tours New England.

Until Jack Tourin moved his family from Bethesda, Md., to Vermont, making music and musical instruments was alien to him. He had worked for the U.S. government in Washington for 30 years. Before his retirement in 1972 he was a program analyst officer in the Department of Defense, spending much of his time rounding up Army supplies for the Vietnam War.

"My background is business administration, management, budget, financial management," said Tourin, 'a goateed man of 60. "What I learned about music, I learned from my son."

Chance Intervenes

It was a series of chance events centering around Peter, 32, that led the Tourins to Vermont and their present trade.

Peter, who learned music from his mother at an early age, took a year off from undergraduate studies at the University of Michigan to study mathematics and psychology at the University of Munich.

"I went to somebody's house to buy a pair of used skis. They had a rehearsal in progress. There were people sitting around playing viols. And the instruments intrigued me. And the more I got to know them, the more I got interested in that style of music, small performances, much smaller than orchestra, more like chamber music, a type of performance where very often people would get together after the evening meal and play, a type of performance where composers were very often performers of their own pieces."

When he returned to Michigan, he joined the collegium musicam. Then he ran into a harpsichordist who was giving a workshop. Tourin told him he didn't want to go to graduate school right away, and he suggested that he help Frank Hubbard build harpsichords in Boston.

"Through Mr. Hubbard, I met a man named Don Warnock, who was a viol builder." Through him, Peter got his second apprenticeship. While apprenticing in Boston, he began going to Vermont to build a geodetic dome structure with a friend.

"And he got interested in Vermont," says Jack Tourin. "He's a skier so he asked if we would help him find a place up here to share with friends. When that didn't work, he asked if we'd be interested in coming up and I said, 'Yes, sometime in the distant future, maybe as a retirement place.'"

Allergies Change Lifestyle

"It came quicker than I thought," Tourin said of his chance to retire. "But also, we're up here for health reasons. Both my wife and Peter are allergic to hydrocarbons, to gas and oil fumes. So between their allergies and Pete's experience up here with a friend and my opportunity to retire, it just seemed to happen."

The Tourins wanted to build a hydroelectric system, so they found an old mill beside a waterfall.

"At one time in history it was called a chair mill because they used to take lumber and make what they called chair stock and send it to the furniture factories in the Boston area," says Jack Tourin.

They converted part of the mill into the Tourins' retirement residence. Peter and his wife live in a duplex apartment built within the workshops.

Because of all of the remodeling, they didn't start making instruments until 1974. Since then they have made 16.

"They're essentially string instruments like the viola da gamba, but we're making other instruments that were germane to the particular period. For example, we just finished an instrument called the mandora, which is a 13th century instrument. It's the predecessor of the mandolin.

"We have made a number of harpsichords which are now in various parts of the country. One is at the University of Vermont. Another one is at Yale. They are usually made for professional musicians or music schools or very serious students of music because they are expensive.

"The reason they are expensive is that we make replicas of early instruments as closely as possible as they were when they were first made. And all our work is done on a custom basis and it takes a lot of research in order to arrive at the result."

To make the replicas, they use photographs, read books and examine instruments in museums in the United States and Europe.

"We work from pictures we take of the instruments," says Jack Tourin. "We work from measurements we take. For example, Peter was on a honeymoon trip through Europe last summer, and it turned out to be more of a work trip in the sense that he went to museums in England, France, Austria and Germany and he took pictures and made measurements of instruments.

"We use machine techniques for the non-artistic and the non-detailed operations. For example, you can spend two days gouging out part of an intrument. And you can use a drill press to help you gouge it out. So where it's not germane to the artistry of the instrument, we will use machine tools. Where it's critical, either artistically or acoustically, we will use hand tools."

The cost depends on what you want.

"If you wanted a two-manual French style harpsichord, we might charge you $8,000. If you wanted a seven-string French instrument we would charge you about $2,500. There are others that are less expensive. A single manual harpsichord might cost $4,000 or $5,000. A treble viola da gamba, which is a smaller one equivalent to a violin, might cost you $1,800."

Tourin says it would take about 800 man hours to make a double-manual harpsichord.

That's $10 an hour.

"It isn't very much," says Jack Tourin. "That's why nobody will ever get rich making custom musical instruments. We do it because we like what we're doing. We do it because we're not anxious to make large amounts of money. We get other rewards out of our work."

Senior Citizens School Needs Sponsors

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Insisting "learning never grows old," Douglas Warner has struggled with federal and academic bureaucracies in an effort to make his dream come true.

He calls it the School for All Seasons.

"We've got the teachers, but no sponsor," Warner shrugged the other day, after learning the University of Massachusetts summer session decided against paying his teachers and granting credit for his courses.

If it ever gets off the ground, the School for All Seasons will have one prerequisite for teachers — old age.

But the senior citizens' students could be anyone interested in learning something about subjects ranging from Bach to beekeeping.

Warner, 24, said he got the idea for the school while driving for a "meals on wheels" program for older people.

"The idea is to bring the elderly into the mainstream of American education and society by providing a forum for the energies of old people who have something to offer," he said.

"The teachers in the school can be role models for other old people, and inspire them," he added. "We want to fight the stereotype of an old person."

The school would have credit and non-credit courses. Credit courses would be taught mostly by professors who have retired from schools like the University of Massachusetts or Smith College.

The non-credit courses would be taught by people like Neil Cochran, a 79-year-old amateur beekeeper from Belchertown, Mass., who passed along his skill in an eight-week trial course offered last year by the School for All Seasons.

"His age wasn't a disadvantage at all," said Warner. "It's funny, but people forget very quickly that's a 79-year-old man up there teaching."

Other non-credit courses would be offered on playing mandolin, guitar and banjo. A course entitled "Loss Does not Mean Losing" would deal with the psychology of lost hopes and goals.

Warner said he hopes Elwood Babbit, a medium from Wendell, Mass., will teach a course in parapsychology.

But, the school will remain a dream — unless Warner can find someone to sponsor the first session.

The university pulled out, said summer session director Alan Ashton, because the school wanted to retain control over its curriculum. "He (Warner) had selected the faculty, and that's up to the academic departments," said Ashton.

He said he hopes for a shift in university policy, and he's looking for federal grants to support the school.

The university's decision left Warner "very disappointed."

Researchers Probing Coastline Of California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Muche and his research crew have discovered three ancient Indian villages that he's sure won't ever be covered by parking lots or ground asunder by dune buggies.

Muche and his struggling research firm, Fathom 8, prowl the bottom of the cold, murky Pacific Ocean. Their purpose: a quest for scientific treasures.

TREASURE HUNTER — Jim Muche, who heads an underwater research firm known as Fathom 8, looks out over the Pacific off Southern California in a quest for new spots for underwater treasure seeking. Muche's method involves random criss-crossing of the ocean floor. His most dramatic find has been the discovery of three ancient Indian villages in 33 feet of water off the coastline near Malibu. (AP Laserphoto)

Diving from a converted lobster boat, the crew has come up with such dramatic finds as the wreck of a 16th century Spanish galleon and a Civil War-era pistol submerged for a hundred years.

Underwater archeology, which for Fathom 8 often involves random criss-crossing of the bottom, is common in the Greek islands and in the Caribbean. But scientists say the colder, murkier Pacific is largely untapped as a source of treasure.

The three Indian villages Fathom 8 has lucked into are buried in no more than 33 feet of water, a few hundred yards or so offshore from Los Angeles' exclusive Malibu coastline.

The villages, once on the shoreline, were submerged by continental drift. The coastline is gradually receding, geologists have observed.

"When you think about it," Muche says, extolling the virtues of underwater exploration, "everything from dune buggies to backpackers have made it very, very difficult to find an untouched site on land.

"In the water we should get a relatively untouched picture of the material, and hopefully get a better idea of the lifestyle of these people," says Muche.

Once discovered, the treasures from the silent deep are susceptible like their terrestrial counterparts to vandalism and other hazards. The location of the villages and the wreck have been kept secret to curtail souvenir-hunting divers from pillaging the sites.

Muche is seeking government protection for the Indian sites and the galleon so organized research can begin without interference.

The sites, ranging from 3,500 to 12,000 years old, have yielded a variety of scientific treasures, including a knife blade, spearpoint, and shellfish hooks. A fire pit, a circle of charred stones, was found under a rocky overhang which once was on the surface.

The 27-year-old marine archeologist and his six helpers aren't renowned scientists working on a big budget. But that may be an advantage in this risky line of work.

"I don't think you're going to get a highly paid professional to go up and down the coast on a hit or miss basis," says Dr. Charles Rozaire, curator of archeology at the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History. "The well-financed professional would probably more profitably spend his time on an operation that had already been discovered."

And besides, says Rozaire, "One of the most important things is being able to survive underwater. Myself I just have to wait for somebody to bring me things."

Muche and assistant Lani Low, 26, are the only full-time employees of Fathom 8. The four part-time officers and helpers with the non-profit corporation include a typewriter repairman and a stereo salesman.

Muche, who works out of his east Los Angeles home, has only a bachelor's degree but spent several years in the student professional program at the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History.

The self-employed researcher says financing during Fathom 8's nearly four-year history has been "nine-tenths out of our own pockets, from our savings." He says he's fortunate to have friends and relatives to support his financially unrewarding business.

The organization publishes a quarterly journal, "Search," which is sent to libraries and research institutions. Some of them, Muche says, smiling, have even paid the $18 institutional subscription rate. Some money trickles in, he says, from research diving jobs for colleges.

As a serious investigator, Muche says, "For each day underwater, you spend a month topside doing research and writing reports." But he prefers to talk about those days spent in insulated rubber wet sults sucking air out of scuba tanks.

Diving at the treacherous 200-foot level near Catalina Island three years ago, Muche says, "The first indication was the cannon. Second were unnatural mounds and depressions in the bottom which when probed produced a large amount of iron oxide remains."

The ship was the San Pedro, a Spanish galleon which sank June 4, 1598, en route from Manila, the Philippines, to Acapulco, Mexico.

Through research, Muche's crew had a general idea of where the ship sank. But finding the exact location, he says, took more than 100 hours of hit-and-miss looking.

Levelland Voters To Decide Fate Of Bonds April 1

LEVELLAND (Special) — Voters here will decide a $2.03 million bond election calling for water, sewer and park improvements in conjunction with the city's municipal election April 1.

The issue is divided into three propositions, and each will be voted on separately.

The first proposition calls for the issuance of $1,100,000 in bonds to construct a new wastewater treatment plant, southeast of the city.

The second proposition calls for $440,000 in bonds to finance several water supply, storage and distribution improvements. This would include the drilling of five new wells and the construction of a new booster station and water storage facility at the airport.

The third proposition is for the issuance of $490,000 in bonds to develop a park with playgrounds, tennis courts and a nine-hole golf course, southeast of the city.

City Secretary Judy Stephens explained that the park proposal would meet the need for more recreational facilities.

She said that the only practical method of disposing of the treated water from the new sewer lant is land disposal — by irrigating or spreading the water over the land.

If all three propositions are okayed by voters, the tax rate would increase from 90 cents to approximately $1.14 per $100 of assessed valuation, the city secretary said.

WRITER TURNS DIRECTOR — Paul Schrader, writer for several controversial films, is shown here as he oversees filming of his latest effort, titled "Hardcore." He made the change, he said, "because I wanted to be in charge." The film stars George C. Scott as a religious midwesterner looking for his missing daughter in the nether world of porno filmmaking. Young Carradine May Be Best HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert Carradine, youngest of the famed Carradine acting clan which includes father John and brothers David and Keith, may emerge as the best actor of the bunch.

Young Robert, probably best known for his role with John Wayne in "The Cowboys" and in "Mean Streets," is actually the youngest of character actor John Carradine's five sons.

He is a full brother of Chris, an architect, and Keith, the actor-singer-composer who won an Oscar for best song ("I'm easy") in 1976. His halfbrothers are David, the actor, and Bruce, a builder and actor.

Bobby, as he is called by everyone except his father — who calls him Robert, is filled with admiration for his family but not overwhelmed by it.

"I think I act well enough to hold my own in this family," he said. Then hastily added, "I feel that may be disrespectful. I don't want to compare myself with my father or brothers. We all love each other a lot."

The youngest Carradine, thoughtful and serious minded, began acting when he was a student at Hollywood High School. He made appearances on "Bonanza" and with brother David in "Kung Fu."

He was never encouraged to become an actor. His mother, in fact, did everything she could to dissuade him.

"I didn't know my father was an actor until I was 10," Bobby said. "Nobody told me and I never asked. Mother used to say, 'Whatever you do, don't be an actor.'

"She lived with an actor. How could she want her kid to be an actor, too?

"I was reared by my stepmother, Doris Grimshaw. I was 14 before I knew she wasn't my real mother. One Christmas Keith and I went to visit our grandmother. We were introduced to a lot of people that day.

"One of the ladies was introduced as Sonia Sorel. I said, 'How do you do.' Keith took me aside and said, 'That's our real mother.' I didn't know what he was talking about. But he finally convinced me.

"It turned out my stepmother took over when I was about a year old. But I was unaware she wasn't my natural mother. Nobody bothered to tell me any different. When I learned the truth, it was a far-out trip. But I didn't flip out."

While Bobby is on close terms with all his brothers, he sees more of David than the others. They are the nucleus of a musical quartet that plays small clubs in California, the Palomino and Troubador in Los Angeles and the Boarding House in San Francisco.

He has a third major interest in life, racing automobiles. Last year he entered 17 races driving formula cars. His team finished eighth in the Daytona Beach 24-hour classic this year.

"Being a race car driver was my earliest ambition," the young man said. "I'm good at it. But there will come a time when acting and racing will conflict with one another and I guess I'll have to stick to acting."

Bobby is an individualist who doesn't resemble his brothers physically. But there is little doubt he's been influenced by brother David with whom he lived for three years when his older brother was sharing hi home with actress Barbara Hershey who then called herself Barbara Seagull.

David and Barbara had a son out of wedlock. He was named Free and is now 5.

Bobby lives with a young woman who bore him a daughter named Ever Dawn. She is 3 1/2. Although Bobby and the mother of his child continue to live together, they lead independent lives.

"I have nothing against marriage," Bobby said. "But I do have something against divorce. I will marry only when I'm convinced I want to get married.

"Perhaps I justify my relationships by telling myself the greater sin is getting married in a house of God and then forgetting my commitment a few years on the road.

"To me that is a far worse sin than living with someone out of wedlock, which I don't think is the ideal situation either."

Pollution Plagues Huge Russian Lake

NEZNEANGARSK, Siberia, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Even Lake Baikal, in the heart of Siberia, can't escape the nagging problems of modern city life.

With the coming of the new Baikal-Amur railroad, the world's biggest fresh water lake suddenly finds itself in the middle of a booming industrial region.

For six months a year, Baikal's five-foot-thick ice serves as a frozen highway for trucks rolling north the entire 375 mile length of the lake.

Three years ago, Nezneangarsk didn't exist, but now it's a bustling railroad workers town of 2,500. Daily flights criss-cross the lake, linking the town with Ulan-Ude, capital of the Buryat autonomous republic.

It holds 20 percent of all the fresh water in the world — five times more than all of Europe, scientists estimate.

The lake has long been an attraction for fishermen and seal hunters, but the opening of the Siberian oil fields and the laying of the new railroad along its northern shores has spawned intense conservation efforts.

In a rare display of reaction to public criticism, the planned cellulose and paper mills built on the lake in the late 1960s were redesigned to include improved water purification equipment.

"All measures have been taken to purify the waste from both cities and industry," said Marks Vasilyevich, chairman of the Buryat branch of the Siberian Academy of Science.

Since 1971, more than $191 million have been spent to clean up the lake, he said.

Cities surrounding the lake no longer dump raw sewage into its waters, he said. Railroad designers rerouted tracks further inland to avoid potential pollution problems.

Government orders now prohibit the floating of timber in the lake or its tributaries. All lumber is now carried by rail.

Vasilyevich said Mongolia has agreed to clean up waste water dumped into its rivers which feed the lake.

"The task is not to make the water that flows into it distilled water, but like natural water," he said.

"You can swim and fish in it. This is the best criteria of its purity."

One of the best signs that the lake has cleaned up serious pollution was the lifting of a ban in 1977 on fishing for omul, a salmon-like whitefish indigenous to the lake.

In addition to pollution, omul stocks were sharply reduced by improved fishing techniques and a severe overfishing during World War II.

Fishing boats and transport ships are also operating under rigorous new guidelines. They are no longer allowed to discharge oil or waste water into the lake. It must all be disposed ashore.

The development of new settlements and the coming of the railroad is also expected to boost recreation activity on the lake.

Crime 'Erupted' At Parole Board Member's Door

AUSTIN (AP) — The newest member of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles grew up in the Roseland Homes project in Dallas, and crime sometimes erupted at her front door.

Connie Jackson's early life in an all-black housing project and her nine years as a probation officer equipped her to take her new job three months ago with no illusions.

Miss Jackson was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Selma Wells, who also was black.

While attuned to the special problems of the ghetto, Miss Jackson voices middle class values, such as respect for others, in trying to help ex-convicts return to the community and stay there.

"We are too quick to ignore the lessons of the past. We've tried everything else until we've almost eradicated ourselves," the 39-year-old board member said in an interview. "The community is crying for swift and sure justice. It's tired of models that haven't produced any success."

She remembers growing up with two sisters under a father who "always knew where we were, what we did and where we would go."

Her father preached respect for the rights and property of others and a motivation to succeed, she said.

She said those attitudes carried over to her work, first in helping ex-convicts stay out of trouble and now to help inmates plan how they will re-enter society.

"We as counselors take on the parental role. And I believe that if you expose a person to accepted values, if he goes astray, he will have that to fall back on," she said in her paneled, seventh-floor office in a state building.

"I got into criminal justice services because I heard of many allegations of injustice by blacks and minorities. I entered to get a first hand view and understand our system," said Ms. Jackson, who has a bachelor's degree in sociology from Wiley College in Marshall.

Among her concerns as a new board member are being sure the Texas Department of Corrections educates and trains inmates for jobs on the outside.

"These are the tools for an inmate," she said, adding that in the past the need for such programs went unrecognized.

Another concern is that the pardon board tell inmates how to improve their chances for parole, if they are turned down.

The board reviews an inmate's case each year he or she is eligible for parole.

"Parole is a testing ground for the rehabilitation efforts of our penal system. In the past, the board might not have given enough feedback on what a person could do to make parole," she said.

Communication with inmates has improved since 1975 with the addition of six commissioners, who visit each inmate up for parole and sit on case review boards, she said.

Reports of in-fighting between the three board members and six commissioners over procedure has been distorted, she said.

"There's an ongoing effort to keep open a direct line of communication. As a foreigner, I think I would be the first to note a problem and I didn't," she said.

Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE), a prison lobby, says the board is not considering as many parole cases as the Legislature intended when it boosted the number of parole officers last year.

CURE says the board should be paroling 1,950 inmates per month, while board figures show totals for the last six months of 1977 ranged from 312 in December to 852 in July.

"There has been a lag in cases and I haven't ascertained all the reasons for it. I've heard people say this isn't a working board, but I don't see how you can be on the board and not work.

"I don't think the board will ever lower its standard in considering cases just to comply with a figure. I don't think we should attempt to meet some quota," she said.

Some criticisms of the board are an effort to discredit the parole system. A lot of times you can go under the umbrella as an advocate for the inmate," she said.

There will always be criticism, Miss Jackson said.

"Every man on the street has his idea of how the parole board should be run. And we're not going to be able to satisfy everyone," she said.

Falsely Jailed Man Despairs Of Search For Compensation

By TOM TIEDE

EVERETT, Wash. (NEA) — David Webb's ordeal began in the spring of last year. Two women had been raped, and the 29-year-old part-time bartender matched the given description of the perpetrator. He was arrested and jailed on a cloudy 29th of April.

He was not guilty; three members of his family insisted that he was home in bed at the time of the crimes. Nonetheless, the evidence was against him.

Shortly after arraignment, Webb was placed in a police lineup and the rape victims, night clerks in convenience stores, swore that he was the one.

The miscarriage of justice was swift. Webb already had served time in prison for other crimes. Besides this, he flunked a polygraph test regarding the rapes. A tough jury found him guilty after four days of trial and he was sentenced to serve up to 50 years in prison.

Webb was removed to the Walla Walla penitentiary (it's double bad, inmates say), and put with three other men in a 10 foot square cell. One of the first things he did was buy a Bible; "I am in Walla Walla state prison," he wrote on one page, "and am facing a life sentence for crimes I didn't commit."

Webb believes his scribblings to God were read on high. Whatever the case, a miracle of sorts did occur. By chance he befriended an inmate from another prison. That inmate, also by chance, knew a third convict who turned out to be responsible for the rapes that had relegated the luckless Webb to the lockup.

The third man eventually confessed to authorities. On Feb. 3, after 302 days of incarceration, Webb was released.

Webb says he is not particularly bitter about the experience. Even though he bears almost no resemblence to the actual rapist (the confessed man is 10 years older and bald), and though one of the rape victims now says she was in error, Webb believes his conviction and imprisonment were honest mistakes.

Yet there is one thing that haunts him: the financial loss of the 10-month affair. He says he spent everything he had on the trial, $2,700. Besides this, his mother contributed an additional $5,000 to his defense and several hundred dollars more for his needs while in prison.

Then there was the potential income that Webb lost. He was earning $100 a week as a bartender, and expected to double it last summer as an orchard worker. "When you add it all up," he says, "It's $8,000 for the trial and at least $5,000 in lost wages. That's grand total of $13,000."

Actually, the real total is higher. No figure can be placed on the costs to Webb's reputation, for instance. A judge says Webb will always be paying for the crimes he didn't commit: "He had a record, remember. And people now know his name. I'd be surprised if he found a job very soon."

Webb says he wants compensation for the entire burden. But it may not be easy to come by. Although overturned convictions are not uncommon in the American judicial system, and untold thousands of people have been in Webb's predicament, neigher federal nor state governments give restitution freely.

In Washington state, for example, there is no appeal process for compensation. There is a system that compensates victims of crime, but not victims of circumstances. Webb's lawyer, Dick Swanson, says the judicial apparatus is structured to admit mistakes, when necessary, but not to pay for them.

Webb can't even sue the prosecuting attorney. Not with any hope of success, anyway. A spokesman for the American Bar Association says that as long as prosecutors stay within the bounds of their sworn duties, they are genearlly immune from any liability for mistakes, oversights, or excessive pursuit.

Webb does have one chance. The state legislature. Attorney Swanson says he will try to persuade the lawmakers to enact a private bill for the relief of his client. Five years ago Washington legislators granted $100,000 compensation for a pair of wrongly convicted men; Swanson says they should do it again, now.

Meanwhile, although free, David Webb is not yet clear. He is broke, supported by his mother, and without prospects. The judge has restricted his movement and contacts. Some police detectives still believe he's guilty, and at least one neighbor says she would not like to be caught alone with "that person."

Webb says he hopes for the best, but worries just the same. Even if the state does grant compensation, he knows, it quite obviously will not be able to give him back everything.

Non-Tillage Lauded As Conservation Aid

BUSHLAND (SPECIAL) — Farmers would profit by taking a hard look at no-or limited-tillage farmin methods, research at the U. S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) research center here shows.

Reduced tillage is the "greatest breakthrough in soil and moisture conservation since the sweep plow," says Dr. A. F. Wiese.

"Limited tillage not only conserves soil but cuts production costs and increases yields," the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station scientist at Bushland said.

Chemical fallow studies were started on dryland at Bushland in 1958. Atrazine and 2,4-D did a "good job" of controlling weeds in the fallow between wheat harvest and sorghum planting. Soil moisture storage and sorghum yields were not increased over sweep tillage.

"The system was not practical because herbicides cost more than sweep tillage," Wiese said.

Limited tillage research proved fruitful in 1968 when Dr. Paul Unger, USDA soil scientist, controlled weeds in irrigated wheat stubble with Atrazine and 2,4-D during a 10-month fallow. He compared this with disk tillage, sweep tillage and a combination of sweep tillage and chemical weed control.

There were about 10,000 pounds per acre of wheat stubble on the soil surface. Previous dryland experiments had less than 4,000 pounds per acre of crop residue.

After the 10-month fallow, no-till plots still had 4,100 pounds per acre of straw. Disk areas had little or no stubble left.

Soil moisture storage on the disked area was 2.8 inches or 20 percent of the precipitation. No-tillage stored 5.6 inches or 39 percent of the rainfall.

"This experiment proved to be the magical Pandora's Box of conservation research in the Southern Great Plains," Wiese said.

Unger had unlocked the secret of improving soil moisture storage in the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles. It took more mulch than could be produced on dryland, he added.

Unger continued his research in 1970 by planting wheat after irrigated corn. He planted some wheat without tillage, some with rototilling and some on clean ground.

After wheat harvest, he again adjusted crop residue level from nothing to more than 10,000 pounds per acre with various amounts of tillage or controlling weeds with herbicides.

Soil moisture storage from July 1971 to May 1972 varied from two to 8.2 inches. This was 11 to 45 percent of precipitation.

In May 1972, grain sorghum was planted dryland without tillage and weeded with herbicides to save crop residue. Yields improved with increased surface residue and varied from 1,750 to 5,360 pounds per acre.

"Yields were almost doubled and herbicide cost during fallow was the same as tillage," Wiese pointed out.

After these initial successes, Jack Musick and Ron Allen, USDA agricultural engineers, conducted irrigation experiments with limited tillage. Limited tillage was compared with disk tillage in a wheat-sorghum-fallow cropping sequence on furrow irrigated land.

Weed control from wheat harvest to sorghum planting was done with Atrazine and 2,4-D. With disk tillage, beds were destroyed and rebuilt before planting.

Yields were 4,550 and 3,640 pounds per acre with two irrigations after no-tillage and disk tillage. With 4 seasonal irrigations, yields were 5,760 and 5,320 pounds of sorghum grain per acre.

No-tillage was the winner again, said Wiese.

After sorghum harvest, limited tillage consisted of disk bedding to rebuild beds, one sweep plowing to loosen beds and rodweeding to control weeds as necessary. Limited tillage increased wheat yield 3 bushels per acre, compared with disk tillage when two summer irrigations were applied.

Other cropping systems with fallow periods have proven practical. Irrigated wheat planted immediately after sorghum harvest increased soil mulch level so that a following dryland crop of no-tillage sorghum yielded 1,000 pounds per acre more than where stubble was destroyed by disking.

No-tillage, limited tillage and disk tillage were evaluated in continuous irrigated wheat. Paraquat or Roundup was used to control volunteer and weeds between crops for no-tillage.

Limited tillage was one 2,4-D application, disk bedding and rodweeding. Yields were increased four bushels per acre with no-tillage.

Herbicide cost destroyed the advantage. Limited tillage yielded the same as disking and was most profitable because of reduced cost.

No-tillage of continuous irrigated sorghum was not practical because herbicides could not control volunteers that emerged after planting. Yields of forage were increased with no-tillage, but grain yield was less than with disking.

Volunteer sorghum competed with the planted crop.

Double cropping sorghum after irrigated wheat proved practical and yields were increased 500 pounds per acre with no-tillage in a five-year experiment. Sorghum was dry planted in wheat stubble and watered up.

Weeds and volunteer wheat were controlled with Atrazine. Planting hybrid sudan after grazed out wheat was equally successful according to the weed researcher.

Wiese pointed out that similar research in Kansas and Nebraska had proved the value of no-tillage under irrigation in Western parts of the states. Limited tillage also has proven profitable in central Kansas where dryland wheat produced enough straw to increase soil moisture storage.

'Phenomenal' Growth In Ag Exports Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of grain and other commodities to Communist countries have shown a phenomenal growth since 1970 and are likely to continue, an Agriculture Department trade analyst says.

"The thrust of this trade is directed toward satisfying a growing consumer demand, and to fill this void the Communist nations have turned their focus westward on suppliers and markets such as the United States," Roger Neetz of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a report.

From 1970 to 1976, U.S. farm exports to the Soviet Union, China and the Communist nations of Eastern Europe rose from $210 million to $3 billion, an "unusually high yearly growth rate" of 55 percent, he said.

Exports dropped to $2.2 billion in the 1977 calendar year but Neetz said the upward trend is expected to resume this year in view of the large purchases of grain by the Soviet Union and soybeans and cotton by China.

"Indeed, at the recent rate of growth, the Communist countries together could become a $5 billion market for U.S. farm products by 1980 and eventually approach the $6 billion level held by the European Community in 1976," Neetz said.

The report was included in a weekly issue of "Foreign Agriculture" published by Neetz's agency.

Although optimistic, Neetz said that future export growth faces a number of obstacles related to U.S. trade with Communist nations:

— Balance of payments deficits that have recently plagued Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, including large deficits in trade with the United States.

— Lack of most-favored-nation treatment and government credits by the United Staes for all Communist nations except Poland, Yugoslavia and Romania.

Neetz said that so far the main farm exports to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe have been wheat, feed grains and soybeans and soybean meal.

"In the future, U.S. exports of soybeans and soybean meal could become even more important, since most Communist countries have little hope of achieving self-sufficiency in oilseed production but will need increasing amounts of high-protein feeds (for livestock)," he said.

Neetz said that China is a "tremendous potential" market for American farmers but has had "an erratic import record so far."

China bought about $625 million worth of U.S. farm commodities a year in 1973 and 1974 but then "ceased to be a significant U.S. market" in the following two years, he said.

However, in 1977 following reduced crops of its own, China again turned to the United States for some of its needs and bought about $66 million worth of products, mainly soybeans, soybean oil and cotton.

Reagan Brown Hits U.S. Policies On Meat Importation

AUSTIN (UPI) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday the present U.S. meat import policy is unrealistic and chaotic to the cattle industry, and urged approval of legislation he said would create more dependable market conditions.

Brown said bills sponsored by Sen. Henry Bellmon, D-Okla., and Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, are sensible alternatives to present meat regulations. Those bills would base imports on domestic price rations rather than on volume production, Brown said.

He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture has predicted meat imports this year will reach 737,000 metric tons, compared with 685,000 metric tons in 1977.

"If these increases are permitted, they could depress our cattle prices just when they are beginning to show some strength," Brown said.

"Cattlemen in America have reduced their herds in response to market conditions. But these domestic cutbacks open the gate to higher imports under the present yo-yo effect of current meat import policies. World meat production is expected to rise in 1978, and it is our cattlemen who are going to take it on the chin."

Brown said legislation also is needed to provide that live cattle imported into the United States be included in the meat import figures. He said in the past, only frozen carcasses have been considered meat imports.

"Last year, imports of slaughter cattle and processed meats from Mexico totaled over $108 million, $71 million for slaughter cattle and $37 million for processed meat. Weights of these items were not included in the total calculations which determine whether quotas would be imposed or not," the commissioner said.

"The present method really doesn't account for all meat imported. If they are going to count any, let's count it all."

PCG Director Voting Slated In Lynn County

TAHOKA (Special) — Lynn County farmers and agribusinessmen will elect a businessman director to the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG) here Monday at 6 p.m. at the Lyntagar Electric Cooperative.

Joe D. Unfred of New Home is producer director and Dwain Lusk of Tahoka is businessman director. Each of the counties in the PCG territory is has two directors — a cotton producer and a businessman.

They are elected on alternate years to serve two-year terms. Each is eligible for re-election every second year.

American villages and cities had an estimated 77 million elm trees in 1930, says the Forest Service. By 1977, widespread Dutch elm disease had destroyed all but 34 million of them.

Texas Scientists Look To Crops In Energy Crisis

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Methane gas-producing livestock manure and energy plant crops — called petroculture crops — could be partial solutions to the United States' energy crisis, agriculture scientists said this week.

Dr. E.L. Fulton of Tarleton State University told a Texas House subcommittee looking into alternate sources of energy for agriculture that he is constructing an electrical generating unit designed to use chicken droppings as its power source.

Taking a normal-sized 50,000 bird operation, Fulton explained, about 4.2 million cubic feet of methane gas could be produced in a year. At five cents per kilowatt, more than $15,000 worth of energy could be produced annually.

"There is no question that producing energy is possible," said Fulton. "We just have to work out a few technical difficulties. I feel this operation is feasible in Texas within a very short time. We will be producing our own energy at the test facility in Tarleton by the end of May."

The same type of methane process can be used for most animal wastes, he said. Pipeline quality gas is produced, as well as a by-product of high-protein liquid fertilizer that can be stored and pumped to crops.

Petroculture crops, which can be grown on semi-arid lands with little or no irrigation, can produce oil, rubber or lubricant substitutes, Texas A&M researcher Dr. Dan Bragg told the subcomittee.

"It is becoming apparent that innovative approaches in using renewable resources are essential if we are to insure the continued economic vitality of Texas' food and fibers industry," Bragg said.

Bragg said agriculture scientists are studying guayule, Jojoba and euphorbia as possible energy-producing crops. All are drought resistant and can grow in the desert regions of most southwestern states, including Texas, he added.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COUNTY AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION and Conservation Service offices are following a new formula in figuring "established" yields to be used on individual farms in the 1978 federal cotton program.

The results will affect potential producer benefits under the program. Officials of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., say this in turn may have some effect on producer planting decisions.

Price support deficiency payments, if any, and disaster program payments will be based on each farm's established yield.

Disaster payments will be made to program cooperators at the rate of 17.3 cents per pound times the established yield when crops are destroyed or production is severely reduced by drought, hail or other factors beyond producer control.

PRICE DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS, which will be due only if the national average price paid to farmers in 1978 falls below the 52-cent target price, will equal the amount of the short-fall times the established yield.

In essence, as reported earlier, the new ASCS instructions call for basing established yields on the average actual yields for the past three years. However, the average yield for the top four of the last five years will be taken, and if this average is above the lowest of the yields of the last three years, the four-year average will be substituted for that low year.

The three-year average calculated in this manner will be a farm's established yield, except that no farm's 1978 established yield will be lowered more than 10 percent from the established yield of 1977.

IN FORMING AN EXAMPLE OF THE new yield-computing formula, the PCG used 1973 through 1977 average actual yields for the 25-county area. The area's actual averages were 498.1 pounds per acre in 1973, 263.5 pounds in 1974, 278.8 in 1975, 365.5 in 1976, and an estimated 445 in 1977.

Thus the average of the best four of these five, leaving out 1974, is 396.8 pounds per acre. This figure substitutes for the low 278.8-pound yield of 1975, giving an adjusted 1975 through 1977 three-year average of 402.4 pounds per acre.

This would be the 25-county average established yield, if the 10 percent reduction limit didn't come into play.

Colorado Scabies Outbreak Severe

DENVER (UPI) — The outbreak of cattle scabies in eastern Colorado is the worst in 20 years and already has cost the livestock industry $4 million, state Agriculture Commissioner Evan Goulding said this week.

The state has quarantined all cattle shipped into Colorado, requiring that they be treated with pesticides to kill the mite that causes scabies. All cattle sold in the state also must be treated before they can be shipped.

Scabies is caused by a mite which burrows into the skin of cattle, causing scabs to form. Goulding said meat quality is not affected, but the infections torment the animal.

He said 72 cases of scabies have been reported since October in feedlots and on ranches in 19 eastern Colorado counties.

The regulations adopted by the state Agriculture Commission to stop the spread of scabies were approved on an emergency basis and took effect March 1 for 90 days. The commission is expected to adopt permanent controls.

Several cattlemen fear the dipping requirements may have side effects.

Duane Flack, general manager of the Monfort of Colorado feedlot operation, said cows may reject calves which have been treated with pesticides. He said the cow "bonds" with its offspring through the sense of smell, which would be changed by the scent of the pesticide.

"Unless they're awfully good handlers, ranchers are going to have some orphan cattle on their hands," Flack said.

Flack said feedlots don't have to worry about the problem among calves, because they only receive older cattle. He said Monfort feedlots have had a policy for some time of treating all cattle brought into their lots and there has been no scabies at the lots since the 1950s.

The Denver Stockman's Market recently installed a new vat, at a cost of $17,000, to dip cattle. The market owners, Charles Alexander and Howard Brown, said they would charge buyers and sellers $1.25 to dip animals.

Crop Planting Status Near Year-Ago Mark

AUSTIN (AP) — Planting of three major cash crops — sorghum, cotton and corn — is running about even with last year, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Thursday.

But planting of the three crops is well behind the average for the past three years, the service also said.

The federal-state reporting service did not mention the American Agriculture Movement, some of whose participants threaten not to plant their crops this year.

The sorghum crop is nine percent planted, compared with eight percent last year and a three-year average pace of 18 percent; the cotton crop is one percent planted, equal to last year but behind the three-year average of two percent; and the corn crop is running even with 1977 at four percent, but less than the 14 percent three-year average.

"Rain delayed land preparation from the Cross Timbers eastward. Land preparations and fertilizer application were active in the Panhandle," the service said.

Live Cattle Futures In Sharp Dip

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed 45 to 150 points lower Thursday led by the two nearby months with limit declines on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Volume rose to an estimated 28,625 contracts.

Profit-taking and other selling followed Wednesday's advance to highest levels since 1974 after an early upturn of 20 points lacked follow-through.

The premium of futures to cash and escalating beef prices made for the sharp technical correction, analysts said.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half cent at 75 1/2 to 76 1/2 cents per pound, highest since December 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the top at $51 per hundredweight.

The six markets expect 4,400 head to arrive today. Slaughter was estimated at 145,000 head.

Hog futures skidded 137 to 150 points on sales of 7,936 cars to close with most contracts down the limit after early gains of as many as seven points lacked follow-through.

Selling carried over from Wednesday and also spilled over from other meat futures. Traders cited sizeable kills and weakness in cash hams and loins at noon for the soft tone.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off three-fourths of a cent at 73 to 79 cents per pound asked, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to off 25 with the top at $49.75 per hundredweight.

Pork belly (bacon) futures plummeted the daily limit of 200 points across the board with selling over at the final bell. Sales were held to 3,897 turnovers with many unsold offers at the limit.

Prices fell to their lowest points in a week, off 4.7 cents per pound from recent highs on profit-taking and other selling.

Limit losses in hog and cattle futures were factors in the bellies, along with technical considerations. Some higher cash bellies were ignored.

Wholesale bacon was up one cent to off three-fourths at 73 to 77 1/2 cents per pound f.o.b. river.

Snails, spiders, frogs and fish have been known to survive after being enclosed for weeks in ice crystals and near-solid masses of frozen ice or soil.

Smoke Detector Lack Blamed In Fire Casualties

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A report commissioned by the city attributes the 20 deaths and destruction in the Coates House fire Jan. 23 to a lack of smoke detectors in the hotel and apathy on the part of the guests.

The evaluation, given Thursday at a special meeting of the city council, counters in effect a conclusion reached by state Fire Marshal James Helbig, who blamed the city's new fire protection program.

Helbig said he found inadequate manpower on pumper and ladder trucks, unfamiliarity of firemen with their fire districts, their equipment and their fellow firemen, and poor maintenance.

Shippers Of Hazardous Matter Cite Safety Quest

By HOWARD BENEDICT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every day tons of chemicals that can burn, explode, suffocate or poison are transported about the United States. That tank car or truck only a few feet away might be loaded with a dangerous substance.

There are strict regulations aimed at safe packing and shipping of these materials. But two recent train derailments are reminders that such chemicals can get loose, with deadly results.

The chemicals are too vital to the economy to eliminate shipments. But efforts are continually underway to improve safety conditions, especially in rail and ship transport.

There are nearly 2,000 materials identified as hazardous in the nation's transportation pipeline — such as liquefied petroleum gas for home heating; chlorine for water purification and other uses; anhydrous ammonia for fertilizer; sodium hydroxide, used in hundreds of products, and gasoline.

Most are inert and are very safe until exposed to the air, mixed with other chemicals or have the integrity of their container destroyed by mishap.

Items:

—On Feb. 24, more than 20 cars of a freight train derailed near Waverly, Tenn. A car carrying 20,000 gallons of propane exploded, killing 12 persons, injuring 40 and inflicting heavy damage on buildings.

—Two days later, 40 cars of a freight derailed near Youngstown, Fla. A ghostly yellow cloud of chlorine gas, the "poison gas" of World War I, floated over a nearby highway, killing eight people and injuring nearly 100.

—A delivery of sodium hydrosulfide mistakenly was pumped into a tank of acid at a Chicago tannery on Feb. 14. The mixture spewed poisonous hydrogen sulfide vapor which killed eight persons.

—A gasoline truck raced uncontrolled down a steep incline in Beattyville, Ky., crashed into buildings and exploded on Sept. 24, 1976. Seven died and seven vehicles and 17 buildings were damaged.

—On May 11, 1976, a tank truck carrying ammonia overturned on a Houston freeway. The driver was killed and six persons died and 178 were injured when they inhaled fumes from a cloud of ammonia that rose from the broken truck tank.

The Federal Railroad Administration reported there were 10,220 railroad accidents in 1977, including 7,858 derailments. About 500 involved cars carrying hazardous substances.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams and others cited the deteriorating condition of the nation's railroad tracks. Adams called for more federal rail inspectors. The National Transportation Safety Board scheduled hearings for April on the transportation of dangerous materials.

The truck and rail industries cite what they call excellent safety records. The American Trucking Association reports that regulated trucks in 1977 recorded 1.2 reportable accidents per one million miles driven. That compares with a passenger car record of 10.4 accidents per million miles. The American Railroad Association said there were 1,531 rail accident fatalities last year, the lowest on record.

Ships also carry hazardous substances. The worst accident in U.S. history involving a chemical shipment occurred April 6, 1947, when a freighter berthed at Texas City, Tex., blew up, killing 561 persons. The ship was loaded with ammonium nitrate, used in production of fertilizers and other products.

Some dangerous materials also are shipped by air, but not as much as a few years ago, when they were permitted in the cargo holds of passenger planes.

The Air Line Pilots Association put an end to that after the Nov. 3, 1973, crash of a Pan American World Airways cargo plane at Boston. The three-man crew was killed.

Investigators said the probable cause of the accident was an improperly packaged shipment of nitric acid. The acid leaked into sawdust packed around it and there was spontaneous combustion, they concluded. Smoke from the fire filled the cockpit.

The pilots organization launched a campaign against carrying hazardous cargo on passenger flights and set rigid rules for safeguarding substances hauled on all-cargo flights. The association embargo went into effect Feb. 1, 1975.

The pilots did agree to carry small amounts of hazardous materials that are needed for medical purposes — such as radioactive material. Flammable liquid will be accepted when used as a preservative for organ transplants and arterial grafts.

The Defense Department also moves much hazardous material, including explosives, around the country by plane, truck and train. Pentagon officials say stringent safeguards have been established for such movements, many under convoy.

The Army, for example, announced in January it would begin shipping 1,700 obsolete chemical warfare training kits from 14 bases to the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Colorado for destruction. The kits contain 16 types of war gases and chemical agents.

The kits were shipped under heavy guard in steel containers or in wooden boxes sealed in vapor barrier bags. Planes carrying them arrived in Denver before dawn to avoid the jam of commercial air traffic.

Poised Pigs Outlast UCLA 74-70

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Sharpshooters Marvin Delph and Sidney Moncreif sparked fifth-ranked Arkansas to a 16-point lead during the first half Thursday night, then the Razorbacks held off a furious second-half charge by second-ranked UCLA to grab a 74-70 victory in semifinal action of the NCAA Far West regional basketball tourney.

Eleventh-ranked San Francisco was to take on unranked Cal State-Fullerton in Thursday night's other semifinal contest. The Razorbacks, now 30-3, will tangle with the winner of that game in Saturday's regional final. UCLA ends the season at 25-3.

Delph, a 6-foot-4 senior forward, pumped in nine of 11 shots in the first half, and Moncreif hit on six of nine as the Razorbacks canned 18 of their first 36 attempts from the floor to grab a 41-25 lead.

Arkansas settled for a 13-point advantage at the half, 49-29, and seemed in complete control of the Bruins.

However, UCLA went to its fullcourt press in the second half and forced nine Arkansas turnovers in the first 10 minutes of the period. With quick-handed Roy Hamilton keying the press, the Bruins blasted back to tie the game at 58-58 on a driving layup by Hamilton.

Seconds later, reserve center Kiki Vandeweghe stuffed the ball to give the Bruins a 60-58 advantage, their first lead since David Greenwood hit the game's opening bucket.

But Arkansas rallied for six straight points on a pair of free throws by Ron Brewer and buckets by Delph and center Steve Schall. The Razorbacks would never trail again in the contest.

Delph, who scored 18 first-half points, finished 11 of 14 from the floor for 23 points to pace the Razorbacks, while Moncreif was seven of 13 from floor for 21. Brewer came on in the second half to score 12 pointu and chip in 18 for the game.

UCLA was led by Hamilton's 19 points and Greenwood's 17.

"I thought the first half we played as well as we have all season," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, who is in his fourth season as the basketball boss of the Razorbacks.

But Sutton said the UCLA press in the second half "certainly hurt us. It wasn't what we expected them to run."

He said that after UCLA had taken the 60-58 lead on Vandeweghe's bucket, he told his kids during a time out, "play smart, play hard and we'll be okay."

And Sutton added, "Our kids showed a lot of poise. A lot of teams would have folded when UCLA came back and took the lead, but we didn't."

The hot shooting by Delph and Moncreif in the first half paced the Razorbacks to a 19 of 30 showing from the floor for 63.3 percent. With the Bruin press forcing 11 second-half turnovers and upsetting the Razorbacks' tempo, Arkansas hit on only 9 of 20 in the second period.

The smaller Razorbacks, however, were super on the boards and outrebounded the tall Bruins 36-30, which Sutton said he never believed would have happened.

CHECKING ON TRADE—Vida Blue, in the Oakland A's club house at Mesa, Arizona, checks for news on his trade to the San Francisco Giants in exchange for seven players. Blue says he won't be in a Giant uniform until he signs a contract with the club. (AP Laserphoto)

San Francisco Obtains Oakland A's Vida Blue

PHOENIX (AP) — San Francisco Giants Manager Joe Altobelli woke up Thursday morning, shook the sleep from his eyes and then asked himself: "Did it really happen? Is Blue really here?"

Altobelli and Giants General Manager Spec Richardson had been up late Wednesday, consummating a trade that brought pitcher Vida Blue to San Francisco and sent seven players, including one to be named later, to tge Oakland A's.

"Anytime you get a premier pitcher, you've gotta feel good," said Altobelli. "He certainly is going to make a difference on this ballclub."

Blue, z 28-year-old left-hander who has won 20 games three times in his career, was scheduled to report to the Giants camp Thursday. But he had not appeared by midday and the switchboard operator at his hotel in Mesa, Ariz., said he told her he was checking out and going to Oakland.

The A's received outfielder Gary Thomasson, catcher Gary Alexander, pitchers Dave Heaverlo, Alan Wirth, John Johnson and minor leaguer Phil Huffman, plus an undisclosed amount of money, in the exchange.

"We gave away some good players and some good prospects," said Altobelli. "But you don't ever get anything for nothing.

"Blue was worth $1.5 million when they tried to sell him to the Yankees two years ago, then $1.75 million (and minor leaguer Dave Revering) when they tried to sell him to Cincinnati recently," said Altobelli. "That says something about the man's worth."

Blue was the 1971 Cy Young Award winner and Most Valuable Player in the American League.

Twice, A's owner Charlie Finley had attempted to sell Blue, but twice baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn blocked the transactions, claiming they were not in the best interests of baseball.

The trade was completed just five minutes prior to the trading deadline Wednesday night, and most of the players involved received early morning phone calls.

"I called Vida about 7 a.m., woke him up," said Richardson. "He thanked me and seemed pleased."

Kuhn gave apparent approval Thursday to this deal.

"We are reviewing the details of the deal," Kuhn said in a statement released by his office. "However, it appears to be in order, and I'm delighted to see Vida Blue given the opportunity to play for another club."

SF Giants To Play In Oakland

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants received the city's permission Thursday to play 40 games per season in Oakland, making it virtually certain the American League's Oakland A's will be moving to Denver.

"It's possible we could play our first game in Oakland as soon as April 8," said Bob Lurie, co-owner of the Giants, after the San Francisco Park and Recreation Commission adopted a resolution freeing the National League team from its commitment to play all home games at Candlestick Park.

"I think it's fair," Lurie said of the resolution, although adding he had questions over exactly how much it would cost the Giants each season under financial provisions set down by the commission.

Lurie was to meet later Thursday with representatives of the Oakland Coliseum. He said league meetings will be held next week, when the altering of major league baseball's map should become official.

"This is tremendous news for me, happiness for me and a great event for baseball, for all of baseball," A's owner Charles O. Finley said in Chicago after receiving news of the San Francisco decision.

Unless there are last-minute complications killing the deal, Finley will sell the team he's owned since 1960 to Marvin Davis, a Denver oilman reportedly ready to pay $12.5 million for the franchise.

"I don't know what the details are in regard to such a move. I don't know what the prerequisites are to be met before packing up the old moving van," Finley said and added, "I just hope Mr. Davis is still interested in the purchase of the A's."

Lurie, in a news conference held outside the Park-Rec Commission's meeting place in Golden Gate Park, estimated the indemnification costs involved in becoming a two-city team would be about $250,000 per year.

Under Thursday's decision in San Francisco, the Giants would legally remain "the San Francisco Giants," as promised when they moved to the West Coast from New York 20 years ago, but would be allowed to call themselves simply "the Giants" when playing in Oakland.

WHEN TIME AND space run short... The Raiders' signing quarterback Randy Page out of Oklahoma City Southeast High could be paying dividends already. Now, the school, which went to the state basketball finals, has a guard (6-3 Matt Clark) many scouts consider the top prospect in the state. The two are close friends and Clark was quoted in Oklahoma City over the weekend as saying Tech was No. 1 on his college list... UTA's Bud Elliot is crowing about one of his football recruits, Slaton runningback John Johson. Elliott calls the 185-pounder one of the best backs in the state, and "one the finest offensive backs we've ever recruited."..

Many fans have joined a few coaches in downgrading the Southwest Conference's basketball officials. But, three of them have qualified for this weekend's NCAA regional tournaments, Paul Galvan, Allen Winters and Denny Bishop. Refs are then graded by game, the better in each contest then advances—just like the competing teams—on up to the national finals... If you can't beat 'em, join 'em—no, hire 'em. Ed Messbarger, while coaching at St. Mary's in San Antonio, beat Phil George's Angelo State teams in 18 of their 23 meetings. So, when George retired from coaching to be fulltime AD at the school, guess where he went to find a coach?...

A FEW YEARS ago, SMU fired Hayden Fry, and one of the whispered reasons was that some moneyed folks downtown felt he wasn't the man for the job. This week, Dick Davis resigned as the school's AD, and already the rumors are floating that the same class of folks were involved in the Davis case... Freshman Michael Watley picked a good time to quit the Arkansas cage squad, the week of the NCA regionals. The 6-4 guard supposedly walked out because he felt he wasn't getting enough playing time. As it was, he was the Razorbacks' seventh or eighth man, and Arkansas has had to go with its starters most of the time. Watley's leaving could jeopardize any chances Arkansas had at his ex-FW Dunbar teammate, 6-10 James Griffin, who is considered one of the state's top prospects...

Confidence abounds. Harley Redin, the former Wayland Queens basketball coach, started work on lining up participants in a charter flight to California for next week's national women's collegiate finals—and even before the Queens qualified for this week's elimination tournament which starts tonight at North Texas. Redin wants 15 persons to get the charter off the ground (so to speak)...

City Net Tourney Under Way

Tennis racquets will be the weapons of the day, and more than 550 high schoolers will starting swinging away at each other beginning at 8:30 this morning. It's the annual Lubbock Invitational Tennis Tournament, and competition will continue through Saturday.

Players from 44 schools will be in attendance here today, in four divisions (A, B, C, and junior high), but the dominant school is expected to be Midland High, the defending champion. The school's tennis team is considered the best in the state, and its players have been seeded No. 1 in three of the four Division A brackets and two of the four Division B categories.

The city meet has drawn teams from as far east as Wichita Falls, as far north as Borger, as far south as Midland and as far west as Kermit.

Play will be held on 60 courts throughout the city in the early rounds. The A division action, however, will be held at the Lubbock Tennis Center, at 66th and Indiana.

Team championships will be awarded in each divisions.

NCAA Files Suit

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association filed an antitrust suit in U.S. District Court on Thursday, charging the Amateur Athletic Union with "abuse of monopoly power."

According to the NCAA brief, the AAU has attached "untenable conditions" to participation by an all-star NCAA wrestling team in proposed competition with a Mexican team next month.

TPC Sees Early Seven-Way Tie

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, again capitalizing on the wedge that has worked such magic in recent weeks, birdied the final hole and moved into a seven-way tie for the lead Thursday with a 2-under-par 70 in the first round of the $342,000 Tournament Players Golf Championship.

"Under these conditions, 70 is not at all a bad score. It wasn't all that easy out there. Actually, I'm surprised there are this many good scores," Nicklaus said after his round in blustery wind and drizzle over the 7,174 yards of reclaimed marsh that make up the Sawgrass course.

Sharing the top spot with Nicklaus in the event billed as the annual championship of the touring pros were Ben Crenshaw, John Schroeder, Gary Groh, Victor Regalado, Gibby Gilbert and Bobby Wadkins, the younger brother of PGA champ Lanny Wadkins.

Of the leaders, only Gilbert and Wadkins played in the afternoon, when the winds were at their worst.

"You have to be very patient," Wadkins said. "Make one mistake and you can come up with a triple (bogey) real easy."

He avoided any mistakes of that magnitude, but had the lead alone until he made "my first bad tee shot of the day" on the 18th hole and bogeyed to drop back into the tie.

A single shot off the pace were former National Open champion Lou Graham, Joe Inman and Artie McNickle, tied at 71.

Most of the game's leading performers had their difficulties. Tom Weiskopf, a winner over Nicklaus last week, and defending title-holder Mark Hayes were at 73.

Gary Player and Arnold Palmer shot 74. Lee Trevino and Hale Irwin were at 75. Tom Watson, a two-time winner already this season, U.S. Open champ Hubert Green and Jerry Pate took 76s. Ray Floyd was at 77.

Nicklaus, who has finished second, first and second in his last three starts, had 5 birdies and 3 bogeys.

"Actually, I played pretty well," he said. "There were three mistakes, two bad chips and a 3-putt."

WBC Raps Spinks, Cites 'Bad Faith'

NEW YORK (AP) — Jose Sulaiman, president of the World Boxing Council, said Thursday he felt that Leon Spinks has dealt in bad faith with the WBC, and title recognition of the new champion could be withdrawn Saturday.

Sulaiman, talking to The Associated Press by telephone from Mexico City, said the WBC's executive committee has voted 15-2, with one abstention, to withdraw title recognition if Spinks does not agree by Friday midnight to accept open bidding for a title match against No. 1-ranked Ken Norton.

However, Sulaiman said no WBC action would be announced until at least Monday or Tuesday.

The rival World Boxing Association has given its blessing to an Ali-Spinks rematch although it also ranks Norton No. 1.

"My legal advisors believe the Spinks' letter was given to the council in bad faith in Madrid and the World Boxing Council was not informed until Feb. 17 (two days after Spinks won the title from Muhammad Ali) that there was a contract with CBS, Top Rank, Inc., and Spinks. This was never told to the council. They had no intention of living up to the agreement because they already had a contract signed."

At its convention in Madrid last November, the WBC ruled that in order for it to sanction the Ali-Spinks fight, both fighters had to agree the winner would fight Norton. The edict stated the winner would sign with a promoter of his choice by March 17 or, failing that, would accept the highest sealed purse offer to be opened April 7 for a fight by July 7.

The WBC said both Ali and Spinks agreed in writing to the edict.

A legal memo prepared for Top Rank, Inc., whose president is Bob Arum, stated: "To the extent the WBC does claim authority, that authority can only be asserted and exercised within the consitution and rules prescribed by the membership of the WBC. The current decree is in violation of that Constitution and therefore constitutes an illegitimate and arbitratry assertion of power by Mr. Sulawan and his Executive Committee (if, in fact, the executive committee did vote to confrim that decree)."

Sulaiman said the only two members of the world-wide exuctive committee to vote against posssible withdrawal of recognition Saturday were Robert Turley of Sacramento, Calif., chairman of the ratings committee, and James E. Deskin, a vice president from Las Vegas. They both said the dealine should be April 7, Sulaimain said, adding that Robert R. Busse of Hoston, president of the North American Boxing Federation, abstained on the grounds the edict reached in Spain should be clarified.

Arum, who has promotional rights to Spinks's next three fights, with an option for three more after that, said it is up to Spinks who he will fight next. However, Spinks has said publicly he wants Ali for his first defense, a defense Arum says could bring each fighter $5 million.

Top Rank has an agreement with CBS to televise Spinks first defense against anybody but Ali, a fight in which Spinks would get $1,050,000 and his opponent $200,000. Norton's manager, Bob Biron, admitting it hurt to do it, has accepted an Arum offer for that $200,000, an agreement he says is binding. Arum disagrees.

Arum said it is up to Spinks, not anyone else, to decide who he will sign to fight. "He has an eminent counsel in Judge (Ed) Bell," he said.

When it was pointed out that Arum and Bell had met here Thursday, Arum replied, "That doesnt mean we see eye to eye on everything."

"Ali told me he would challenge the winner," said Sulaiman, noting Spinks was bound also to fight the winner under the Madrid edict.

Odessa High Topples LHS Westerners 2-1

MONAHANS (Special) — Odessa High scored the winning run on a controversial play in the bottom of the seventh inning to defeat Lubbock High 2-1 Thursday in the Monahans Invitational tournament.

Odessa, now 4-3-1, faces Pecos, 4-3, in a winner's bracket semifinal today at 5 p.m. Lubbock, 7-2, meets Seminole (4-3) in the loser's bracket today at 12:30 p.m. Seminole fell to Pecos 6-4 in a first-round game.

With the bases loaded and no outs, Odessa's Barney Marquez scored the winning run from third when designated hitter Daryle Greene flew to center field. LHS center fielder Ernest Day made the catch and threw to shortstop Andy Vasquez for double play. Vasquez covered second base and tossed to third base as LHS appealed that Marquez had left the third-base bag before the catch. Umpires rejected the appeal, however.

Each team had scored once in the fourth inning. Lubbock scored first as Terry Brady singled and pinch-runner Larry Walker swiped second base and advanced to third on Roy Morin's single. Walker stole home for the run.

"It's the best we've played all year with the exception of our hitting," said LHS coach Vince Buffamonte. "We didn't compete very well with the bat, though."

Hereford Nabs JV Golf Title

HEREFORD (Special)— Host Hereford's junior varsity went out on the first day of the Deaf Smith County Golf Tournament and won a division. And the varsity is one of the favorites for the upper-division championship.

Whereas the JVs played only 18 holes in picking a champion, the varsity units will play 18-hole rounds today and Saturday.

The Herd is the favorite, along with Monterey, for the varsity team title. Familiarity with the course will be one of the factors in the Whitefaces' favor.x However, Monterey outshot Hereford in last weekend's District 4-AAAA match after the situation had been reversed in Lubbock ten days ago in the opening district match.

Today's field will include Amarillo, Coronado, Lubbock High, Plainview, Pampa, Tascosa, and Palo Duro.

Teams will begin teeing off at 9 a.m. today.

Hereford JV shot a 327 in winning its division Thursday. Plainview was a stroke back, and Monterey JV was fifth at 357. Coronado followed at 358, and Lubbock High JV was tenth at 392. Thirteen schools had teams in the JV division.

Alex Gurula led Coronado with an 87, Barry Robinson shot 81 for Monterey, and Tim King had a 91 for pace the LHS junior varsity.

Coaches Dropped At Borden County

GAIL (Special) — Borden County's school board voted earlier this week against renewal of contracts for three coaches at Borden County High School.

MONTEREY JV WINS

BROWNFIELD (Special)—Monterey's junior varsity smashed Snyder 17-1 in the Brownfield Tournament Thursday. Ricky Pinkerton was the winning pitcher, and Kent Potts was 3-4 for the Plainsmen. Monterey is 4-0 for the season.

113 Squads Enter 'Heart' Net Tourney

A number of prominent local teams are included among the 113 teams entered in this weekend's second annual Heart Open Doubles tournament at the Lubbock Racquet Club.

Matches begin today in the Racquet Club at 4 p.m. A few first-round matches also may be held at Lubbock Country Club. The tournament will be divided into men's and women's Open, A, B and C Divisions. Final matches tonight are scheduled to begin at 8:30 but the tourney runs through Sunday night.

Director of the tournament, Burns Hamilton, said a reception Saturday night would be held for Gay and Ralna from Lawrence Welk's television program. The singing sweethearts will also participate in the tournament.

The tourney is co-sponsored by the Lubbock area association of Life Underwriters and proceeds will go to the American Heart Association.

Texans Grab Track Crown

ODESSA (Special)—South Plains College's men dominated the mile and three-mile runs Thursday and took a narrow victory in the Odessa College Invitational Track Meet.

The Texans finished 1-2-3-4-5 in the three-mile and 1-2-3-6 in the mile. They captured 30 of a possible 31 points in the former event and 25 of a possible 31 in the mile. That gave them 55 points from just two events.

Larry Sims was the victor in each event, taking the mile in 4:15.6 and the three-mile in 14:57.8.

TOURNAMENT NEEDED

DIMMITT (Special) — Coach Jimmy Hoyle is having trouble locating a third tournament for his Dimmitt girls to participate in during the 1978-79 season. Hoyle, who can be reached at 647-3105, would like a tournament either Nov. 30-Dec. 2 or Dec. 14-16.

Raider Nine Opens Three-Game Series At TCU

FORT WORTH (Special)—Riding a four-game winning streak and possessors of a surprising 9-9 season mark, Texas Tech will open a three-game Southwest Conference baseball series today with a single game against TCU, beginning at 3 p.m.

The Raiders, who surprised Baylor with a doubleheader sweep last Saturday and then upped their winning streak with a pair of victories over Hardin-Simmons Tuesday, will battle TCU in a twin bill Saturday, starting at 1 p.m.

Tech coach Kal Segrist is aware that this series is a very important one for his team, which is 3-3 in conference action.

"We need badly to win big the next two weekends," he said. "We need definitely to win both series (the second is versus SMU in Dallas) and, hopefully, sweep them. If we can be 8-4 or 9-3 in conference play going into the final stretch, it would be a big help and would really improve our chances of getting into the (post-season) tournament."

Following the SMU series March 24-25, the Raiders will play four nonconference games before beginning the toughest part of their schedule, a four-week span in which they will play three-game SWC sets with Arkansas, Houston, Texas A&M and Texas. Those are four of the league's top five title contenders.

"Those last four weeks will be tough," Segrist admitted.

Segrist's very young team has gotten by thus far on what has usually been a reasonably good defense and a surprisingly adequate pitching staff. Recently, the Raiders have gotten some clutch hits, also.

These were absent throughout most of the early season.

Freshmen Larry Womble, Rick Hall and Gary Moyer have earned-run averages of 2.20, 2.31 and 2.33, respectively, and David Bolton's is 2.73. Last season, no Tech pitcher—save for Mike Bewley, who hurled just one inning—had an ERA below 3.00.

Hall shut out strong-hitting Baylor on four hits last Saturday, and Womble threw a five-hitter at Hardin-Simmons last Tuesday in a 5-4 win.

"That was Womble's first opportunity to pitch much," Segrist said, "but he'll get more. How well he does the rest of the way could make a lot of difference for us. He could really give us some depth, either as a starter or long reliever."

TCU is 6-7 for the season and 2-1 in SWC play after taking two of three games from SMU last weekend. Like several SWC teams, the Horned Frogs have been hampered in the early going by poor weather, which has limited their workout time.

Senior Reuben Tomlin (2-1) will pitch today's game for TCU. Hall (2-2) is expected to be Tech's starter.

Saturday, lefthander Robert Bryant (1-3) will pitch the first game for Tech, and the Raiders' second-game hurler has not yet been selected. TCU will counter Saturday with Dale Arnold (1-1) and either Glen Pierce (1-1) or Cameron Young (1-2).

Chaparrals Sweep ACU In Twin Bill

ABILENE (Special)—Lubbock Christian broke a 4-4 tie with a six-run 12th inning to defeat Abilene Christian 10-4 in the first game of a doubleheader Thursday, and the Chaps came back to win the second game 13-3. The second game was called at the end of four innings because of darkness, and it was declared an unofficial game.

Charles Casiano scored what proved to be the winning run when he led off the 12th with a single, moved to third when the Wildcats muffed two sacrifice-bunt attempts and scored when Tommy Inman drilled a singled through ACU's drawn-in infield.

Darius Copley also scored on Inman's single. Karl Mahan also slapped a two-run double in the frame.

In the first game, ACU grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but the winners tied it in the sixth on an RBI-single by Tim Leslie. Richard Bowles then gave the Chaps the lead with a seventh-inning, two-run homer.

However, ACU tied it in the bottom of the seventh on a two-run single by Mark Cowan.

Both teams scored runs in the 11th inning.

In the second game, LCC jumped ACU starter Joe Delgado for four first-inning runs, three in the second and six in the third.

Three Tie For Crosby Early Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Penny Pulz, Amy Alcott and Silvia Bertolaccini all carded 1-under-par 71s Thursday to tie for the first round lead in the $165,000 Kathryn Crosby Golf Classic.

Nine of the 121 players in the 72-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament were still on the course when play was suspended because of darkness. They will conclude their rounds this morning prior to the second round of play at the Rancho Bernado golf course.

Rounds for the threesomes were slowed to more than five hours Thursday by a steady Santa Ana wind of 30 miles per hour most of the day.

There was some good to the wind. It was drying out the 6,212-yard Rancho Bernardo course, which had been hard-hit by rain last weekend and left with several muddy holes when play began.

Top Sprinter Leaves Squad

Preston, a senior from Dallas, is the American collegiate record holder in the 100-meter dash with a time of 10.05. That is also the sixth fastest time in the world. He also has run the sixth fastest time in the world in the 200-meter dash, a 20.14 clocking.

Preston was an alternate on the U.S. Olympic relay team in 1976.

Volunteers Name DeVoe

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — University of Wyoming basketball Coach Don DeVoe accepted Thursday the head coaching job at the University of Tennessee.

DeVoe said he would take the job as the Volunteers coach shortly after Wyoming trustees agreed to release him from his contract.

DeVoe delayed revealing whether he would accept a five-year contract offer to coach the Vols until he learned later in the day of the trustees' decision.

Spartans, 'Cats Roll Past Foes

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Mike Phillips scored 24 points to lead Kentucky to a 91-69 victory Thursday over Miami of Ohio and into the final game of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament.

The top-ranked Wildcats will meet 4th-ranked Michigan State, which coasted past Western Kentucky 90-69 in the first game here Thursday.

Phillips scored five of Kentucky's first seven baskets of the second half when he hit 14 points. The Wildcats—showing no signs of the first-half doldrums which plagued them against Florida State in the first round of the tournament, immediately touched Miami for runs of eight and 11 points in the first half.

Nineteenth-ranked Miami could not turn the trick that led them past defending NCAA Champion Marquette last Saturday.

At one time, against Marquette, Miami was down by 13, but came back in overtime. The Wildcats only increased their second half lead of more than 20 points and had all their starters out of the game with about five minutes left.

The Redskins' career leading scorer hit the second basket of the game but did not score again until eight minutes were gone in the second half. Randy Ayers scored 18 points to lead Miami which finished its season at 19-9.

In the first game, Gregory Kelser and Robert Chapman scored 23 points each to help Michigan State coast to victory over Western Kentucky.

Kelser and Chapman accounted for 46 of Michigan State's 86 points by the time they left with about a minute remaining in the game and the Spartans pulled ever farther ahead.

Michigan State, now 25-4, was never behind in the game and hit 59 percent of their shots from the field to open up a 39-29 halftime lead.

Western Kentucky closed to within seven points midway through the final period before the Spartans upped the lead to 16 points using three baskets by Ronald Charles.

vantage of 28 trips to the charity stripe to tally 18 points, while UCLA was only 2 of 8 from the line.

It marked the second consecutive year UCLA has fallen in the semifinals of the Far West regionals. Last year it was Idaho State that upset the Bruins.

UCLA shot well in the contest, but could not match the 56 percent effort Arkansas had. The Bruins hit on 34 of 67 shots for a 50.7 percentage.

"We were running our offense pretty well," said UCLA All-America forward David Greenwood.

But he added that "a lot of shots that have been falling all year just didn't fall."

Arkansas foward Jim Counce scored only two points in the contest, but Sutton said his "great job" on Greenwood was a "key in the ballgame." Counce held Greenwood to 17 points and four rebounds.

Counce admitted after the game the big thing for he and his teammates was overcoming the intimidation factor of playing UCLA.

"You've got to remember from the time I was 7 until I was 17, they were national champs every year except one," said Counce. "It's hard not to be a little in awe of them.

"We came out and went after them in the first minute of the ballgame, and we said, 'Hey, we can play with these guys.'"

Thomasson Sparks Giants 19-0

By The Associated Press

Gary Thomasson doesn't waste much time.

No sooner had the outfielder learned of his shift from the San Francisco Giants to the Oakland A's in the Vida Blue trade, than he went out and hit two home runs — in the same inning — to lead his new team to a 19-0 whitewashing of the San Diego Padres.

Thomasson stepped to the plate with the bases loaded in the eighth inning and slammed a long home run, then came up with one man on later in the inning and drilled another shot over the fence. The A's scored 11 times in the eighth.

Dave Revering had two doubles and three runs batted in for the A's, while Jim Tyrone was three-for-four with two RBI.

Matt Keough, Joe Coleman and Alan Wirth combined on a three-hit shutout for Oakland. Wirth also was one of the seven players to Giants gave up to get Blue.

In other exhibition action Thursday, Andy Messermsith's comeback attempt with the New York Yankees came to an abrupt end when the right-hander tripped over first base and separated his pitching shoulder. It is expected that Messersmith, who was recovering from elbow surgery, will be lost for the season.

The Yankees pushed across an unearned run in the 10th inning to defeat the Chicago White Sox 3-2. Lou Piniella homered for the Yankees.

Larry Bowa and Garry Maddox drove in two runs apiece as the Phillies exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning and defeated the Cincinnati Reds 14-4 in a game called after seven innings because of rain.

John Stearns and Ed Kranepool hammered home runs and three New York pitchers limited Toronto to five hits, leading the Mets to a 6-2 victory over the Blue Jays. The triumph was the fifth straight for the Mets. Phil Niekro, Craig Skok and Tommy Boggs limited Baltimore to four singles and the Atlanta Braves downed the Orioles 4-2.

Jim Dwyer singled in a run and stole home as the St. Louis Cardinals came from behind with a four-run eighth inning to beat the Detroit Tigers 6-3. The Cardinals put together singles by Garry Templeton, Keith Hernandez, Dwyer, Dane Iorg and Mike Phillips off Milt Wilcox in the decisive inning.

Jim Rice's two-run homer and George Scott's solo shot paced the Boston Red Sox to a 6-4 victory over the Houston Astros. Bob Stanley picked up the win with four scoreless relief innings. Don Aase and Ken Brett combined on a six-hitter as the California Angels blanked the Seattle Mariners 4-0 for their seventh win in nine spring games.

Rookie shortstop Gary Soderholm cracked a three-run homer in the eighth inning to give the Minnesota Twins a 6-3 decision over the Montreal Expos. Gary Carter homered for the Expos.

A run-scoring triple by Vic Harris highlighted a six-run eighth inning that powered the San Francisco Giants to an 8-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Bob Knepper allowed just one hit in a four-inning stint. The Giants have won six in a row.

Willie Wilson and U.L. Washington drove in two runs each to lead the Kansas City Royals to a 8-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Pittsburgh has yet to win in seven games.

Mick Kelleher and Mike Sember each knocked in two runs in a six-run eighth inning that carried the Chicago Cubs to an 8-7 win over the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland had jumped to a 5-0, but Joe Wallis started the Cubs' comeback with a two-run homer off Pat Dobson in the sixth inning.

Monterey, Coronado Seek Winning Touch

Monterey (3-3) hosts Abilene Cooper (5-1) today in Lowrey Field while Coronado (2-6) plays at Big Spring (7-2). Each of the single games begin at 4 p.m. Then Monterey and Big Spring collide in a Saturday doubleheader in Big Spring at 1 p.m.

MHS coach Bobby Moegle plans to start senior righthander Ron Reeves (2-0) against the Cougars who have won four straight games. Gene Segrest (0-2) draws the CHS mound nod today from Mustang coach John Dudley. In Saturday's twin bill, Moegle figures to start Derek Hatfield (1-1) in one game but remains uncertain about the other starter.

Neither of Moegle's third and fourth starters could pitch well enough for victories last weekend in the Midland tournament of champions. After Reeves and Hatfield pitched the team to 5-0 victories over Midland Lee and El Paso Burges, MHS dropped an 8-5 verdict to Midland High and a 9-6 setback to Duncanville. One might think Moegle would search for pitching depth.

"We played real well down there," he said. "We ran out of pitching after the first day but our defense made only two errors in four games and we hit the ball real well.

Dudley also was pleased with his team's hitting. The Mustangs led Midland High 6-3 until the Bulldogs erupted with 7 runs in the bottom of the sixth to win the game.

"We've just got to be able to hold somebody down with our pitching. We swing the bat pretty well and then we can't hold our lead," the CHS coach said.

NFL Tackles Officiating

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The National Football League tackled one of its stickiest public relations problems — officiating — Thursday with the likelihood that instant replays to back up or overrule the men on the field will again be ignored.

Alternative methods of breaking ties in the standings at the end of the season, roster sizes and cutdown dates dealing with the new 16-game regular season also were to be considered by the league's 28 club owners at their winter meetings.

The instant replay has become the bane of the field officials' existence the past few seasons, exposing occasional situations in which whistles were blown too soon or too late, fumbles were called that shouldn't have been or missed what should have been seen.

Partly as a result, eight of the 1977 season's 90 officials won't be back next year. Some are retiring, others are being dropped.

Among the three returning in 1978, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle pointed out, are Vince Jacob, Fred Silva and Ed Marion, officials who were, in effect, victimized by instant replays that showed what a lot of fans felt were improper calls — judgment calls in each case — that altered the outcome of key games.

Jacob blew an out-of-bounds call that cost Houston a chance at victory and ultimately a better shot at the playoffs, a mistake that Rozelle eventually apologized for.

Silva whistled a play dead to wipe out an apparent Bert Jones fumble that let Baltimore retain possession and score a touchdown that beat New England and altered the playoff picture.

Marion took the heat for missing a fumble by Denver's Rob Lytle in the Broncos' American Conference championship victory over Oakland.

"We're not letting someone go because he made what we felt was a bad call," Rozelle said, a clear reference to the trio of officials. "But if we find a pattern either where his mechanics are poor or his judgment is poor and we think we can get better, we don't renew his contract."

Later, Rozelle turned to a so-called public relations problem — the heat the league has taken to use instant replay.

"If we hadn't had the two fumble plays I don't think we'd have that much emphasis on it this year," he said. "Everyone forgets that those two were caused by player errors ... Everyone's going to make mistakes. Players make them, officials make them and commissioners make them."

Busy Cinder Schedule On Tap

After looking at the weekend slate of high school track meets across the South Plains, there can be little doubt in anyone's mind that spring has arrived.

A full agenda of cinder action gets under way today as no less than five are on tap.

Meets are set for Spur, Floydada, Midland, Gail and Sundown.

The Bulldogs Relays at Spur kicks off at 9 a.m. with the field events, 8:30 p.m. with running prelims and 1:30 with the finals. There is a division for both girls and boys, with 18 teams comprising each category.

The Floydada event, the Whirlwind Relays, is also divided into two categories. However, the girls won't be in this one. There is one division for the Class AA teams, another for Class A squads and JV teams.

Ten Class AAAA teams will compete for the team honors at the Tall City Relays in Midland. The meet will wrap up with the finals starting at 7 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

One of larger meets is at Gail were only Class B teams will vie for the Borden County Relays crown. Both boys and girls teams are set to compete.

Although not quite the magnitude of the Borden County event, Sundown will also host a meet for the smaller schools. Seven teams will compete in boys and girls categories.

Six Monterey Fems Chosen All-District

All six starters from Monterey's girls team received mention on the District 4-AAAA basketball team selected by the league's coaches.

A most valuable player was selected on both offense and defense with three other players chosen from each end of the court. Monterey's Marilyn Beckner was picked offensive MVP while teammate Janet Mears was honored on defense.

Monterey's Margaret Grennell, Coronado's Kathy Wyett and Lubbock High's Paula Patterson were selected to the first team offense while Coronado defenders Laura Wade and Carolyn Pasewark joined Monterey's Jana Field on defense.

Three other players were named as honorable mention selections — Rhonda Dunn and Sherri Davis of Monterey and Shirley Sumner of Lubbock High.

Mart Stages Late Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, shrugging off a generally negative news background, staged a late rally Thursday to post a moderate gain.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.24 to 762.82, reaching its highest level in more than a month.

After taking an 89-point battering in January and February, the average has recovered more than 20 points so far in March.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than an 8-5 margin in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE's composite index picked up .23 to 49.88.

As the day began the market was faced with some adverse news. The dollar slumped again in foreign exchange, equalling its previous low against the Japanese yen.

Investors also appeared to be cautiously watching the situation in southern Lebanon, where Israel seized a strip of territory in a retaliatory attack on Wednesday.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Western Texas Cagers Advance In Tournament

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (Special)—Western Texas led from its opening field goal, but it wasn't all that easy in an 84-67 win over Faulkner State of Alabama in the national junior college tournament.

Today, the Texans play Baltimore Community College at noon, with the winner advancing to Saturday's consolation championship round.

WTC built leads of up to 17 points in the first half and was in charge 47-31 at intermission. By hitting 6 straight points to open the second half, the Westerners opened a 53-31 gap with 18:42 remaining. It went to 59-42 with 14:48, but at that point, the Texans hit a scoreless stretch.

WTC went 5½ minutes without a point, and the Alabamans closed the gap to 59-57 with 9:34 remaining.

It was time for Adam Beadle to take over, however, and the 6-6 freshman hit 16 of his game-high 26 points in that remaining time. Beadle's outside shooting and WTC's four-corners offense allowed the Westerners to pull back to a more comfortable lead and walk away.

WTC 84, FAULKNER 67

WTC—Gallardo 5-1-11, Moorehead 2-2-6, Beadle 12-2-26, Worthington 10-0-20, Brown 4-0-8, Reid 4-0-8, Mendoza 0-1-1, Patridge 2-0-4, totals 39-6-84.

FAULKNER—Collins 6-2-14, Mickles 1-2-4, M. Myers 6-1-13, Naves 3-5-11, W. Myers 7-4-18, Harris 3-0-6, Kaltengell 0-1-1, totals 26-15-67.

Faulkner was led by 18 points by Walter Myers, with Johnny Collins scoring 14 and Michael Myers 13.

Davis Cup Players Shun Politics

NASHVILLE (AP)—The Davis Cup, which started 78 years ago as a sort of world series of tennis, has diminished as a global sporting event and grown into a role as a political pawn.

Play is scheduled to begin today at Vanderbilt University in a Davis Cup meeting between the United States and South Africa. The players from both countries steadfastly maintain that their appearances have nothing whatever to do with politics.

"The first rock that gets thrown and I'm on the first plane out of there," said American team member Vitas Gerulaitis.

But no matter what the players' intent, their appearance here carries strong political tones as civil rights, church and other groups amass for demonstrations against the South African presence. A coalition of those groups, which include the National Association for the Advancement for Colored People and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, promise peaceful but massive demonstrations.

Protest leaders say the demonstrations will be the largest since those of the 1960s and the civil rights movement. Their aim: to focus attention on South Africa and its apartheid racial policy.

The pressure on the South African players became evident in this country a few weeks ago when Ray Moore withdrew from the South African team.

"I neither embrace nor endorse the policy of apartheid," Moore said. "However, I do resent the interference of politics in the Davis Cup."

"He's entitled to his own opinion," said Bob Hewitt, who with Frew McMillan will play doubles for South Africa.

Hewitt has said he and his partner don't condone apartheid either, "But we love the country and we believe in the country. But like every country they all make mistakes."

Englishman Mark Cox, who used to play Davis Cup for his country, explained South African sentiment this way:

"South Africans are a very sports-conscious country. I've been there many times. In a way sports are the life blood of the country. This (the Moore withdrawal) is rather like another nail in the coffin."

The attitude of the American tennis establishment seems to be, however tentatively, that the matches play no part in South African racial destiny.

"We don't think that the match condones apartheid," says W.E. "Slew" Hester, president of the U.S. Tennis Association. "On the other hand, cancellation of the matches wouldn't help a single black South African."

The current flap and the anticipated demonstrations are nothing new to tennis, one of a very few sports in which South African players are still widely accepted.

In the U.S.-South African meeting last year in Newport Beach, Calif., two black protestors ran on court between sets of a match and spilled motor oil on the playing surface. They were chased by an angry team captain, Tony Trabert, who flailed at them with a racket.

The Soviet Union, Canada, Venezuela, Mexico and others have boycotted the Davis Cup to protest South African inclusion.

South Africa was banned from the Davis Cup in 1970 but was reinstated two years later. It used to play in the European zone of the year-long series, but because of the defections of Eastern European countries from the competition had to move into the North American zone.

The South African players this year include Byron Bertram and Bernie Mitton, each playing singles, and McMillan and Hewitt in doubles. Their alternates, which under Davis Cup rules could not be substituted for a regular player after the start of this week, included Peter Lamb, a South African junior player studying at Vanderbilt.

Lamb is colored — that is of mixed blood in the South African racial spectrum. Officials from his country insisted he had been named because he is a promising player, not as a token.

Gerulaitis, Solomon Set For Opening Matches

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States was drawn against 23-year Bernie Mitton of South Africa in the opening match of the Davis Cup North American Zone tennis final scheduled at Vanderbilt University tonight.

The best-of-five match series will start at 6 p.m. CST under threats of mass demonstrations called by groups protesting South Africa's apartheid policies. Promoters have invoked strict security measures for both the teams and the fans.

The third match in the series, the doubles, will be played Saturday at 2 p.m. CST, with South Africa's world No.1-ranked team of Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan facing the top American duo of Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair.

The final two singles will be played Sunday at 2 p.m. CST, with the opening singles matches reversed. Mitton and Solomon play the first match on the final day with Gerulaitis facing Bertram in the finale.

Russian Chain Bout Highlights Wrestling

J.J. Dillon and The Lawman will hook up tonight in a Russian chain match, the highlight bout on the weekly wrestling card at Fair Park Coliseum.

The program will begin at 8 p.m.

Each wrestler will be cuffed to the end of an 8-foot chain. The match will continue until one wrestler can drag the other completely around the ring.

In preliminary bouts, Jonathan Boyd will wrestle Larry Lane, Hans Schroeder will take on Johnny Starr, Ricky Romero will meet Rip Hawk, and Tonga will go against Mr. Onomi.
