LOCAL GAME OFFICIAL WARNS HUNTERS NOT SHOOT FROM CARS

D. H. Snyder of Colorado, deputy game, fish and oyster commissioner for the State of Texas, working under direction of Commissioner T. E. Hubby of Austin, has issued official statement wherein he warns hunters, who wish to take advantage of the opening of the dove shooting season on Sept. 1, not to shoot doves or any kind of wild game from automobiles or any other vehicle, as this is a strict violation of the law. Snyder said Wednesday that the quail season would not open for some time, but that it had reported to him that hunters were shooting the young quail, and were killing game from automobiles, which he says will be heavily prosecuted. He also warns hunters not to go into pastures that are properly posted and to acquaint themselves with the laws before going out shooting.

Snyder further warned the public against doves that are likely to have eaten poison worms. It might cause serious injury, he says.

THE CITY AND COUNTY HEALTH OFFICERS ISSUE WARNING TO PUBLIC

Citizens Are Urged to Clean Up Premises and Kill Mosquitos and Flies

Dr. T. J. Ratliff, County Health Officer, and Dr. T. H. Barber, City health officer, have issued warning to the public that a few cases of the dread disease, typhoid fever, are prevalent in the city, and insist that the citizens make a concerted effort to destroy mosquitoes and flies by pouring kerosene on water in cisterns, barrels, etc., and garbage and tin cans be cleaned up and destroyed to eliminate flies.

Last week the Lions Club voted to put oil on the water in Lone Wolf Creek, and since the water in the river is salty, there is no danger of mosquitoes breeding there, hence heeding of the warning of the health officers will tend to eliminate the pests in the city. According to Dr. Ratliff, coal oil is not poisonous in the quantity to be gotten from drinking water on which the oil has been poured, therefore, there is no danger nor damage to the water.

The statement issued by the officers is as follows: "There is reported some cases of typhoid fever in this city, a very dread disease. Mosquitoes and flies spread disease.

"The Lions' Club is going to spray Lone Wolf Creek in the city limits with oil to kill mosquito wigglers. The water in the Colorado River is salty and will not breed mosquitoes. We, as city and county health officers, advise kerosene oil be poured on the water in cisterns, tanks and water barrels. Kerosene oil is not poisonous in the quantity we would get if we drink the water. We also suggest that all food cans when emptied have holes punched in the bottom before being thrown out, it does not take but a little still water to make a breeding place for mosquitoes. For your health's sake take heed."

I. Colichman, former business man of Colorado, who left Colorado about two years ago, died at his home in El Paso last Friday, according to information received here. Templeton carried Lorraine, his home box, Landers and Buford. Warren carried the other eight boxes in the county, which included Colorado, Warren's home box. FUTURE GOVERNOR OF TEXAS

HON. DAN MOODY. Democratic nominee for Governor who defeated Gov. Ferguson in a vote of more than two to one in Saturday's primary.

DAN MOODY DEFEATS MA BY VOTE OF TWO TO ONE IN SATURDAY PRIMARY

Hatcher and Pollard Lead In Other State Races By Good Majorities

With a total of 731,800 votes tabulated, being returns from 248 of the 252 counties in the state, including 138 counties complete, the Texas Election Bureau in its final report for Monday night showed that Dan Moody is retaining his majority of 2 to 1 over Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for the Democratic nomination for Governor in Saturday's run-off primary election.

There probably are not more than 50,000 votes yet to be tabulated and it is not considered possible that the completion of the returns can be changed by these additional votes. Monday night's tabulation showed that Claude Pollard of Houston retains a lead of 8,847 over James V. Allred of Wichita Falls for Attorney General and it seems assured that Mr. Pollard is the nominee.

The Monday night tabulation included returns from eighteen out of the nineteen counties and it developed that the unreported county—Borden—held no election. Only nine of the counties were complete, but it was estimated that less than 1,000 votes are unreported in the other nine counties.

The latest tabulation from the Texas Election Bureau Monday night showed:

For Governor:
Moody	476,735
Ferguson	255,065
For Attorney General:
Allred	338,361
Pollard	347,251
For State Treasurer:
Ball	261,431
Hatcher	391,716
For Court of Civil Appeals, Eleventh District:
Davenport	24,193

COLORADO MAN GETS CONTRACT FOR MIDLAND GARAGE

A. J. Nolen, local building contractor, was awarded contract for erection of a large garage building in Midland when bids were opened in Midland Saturday, according to W. W. Whipkey, local architect, who is handling the architectural work on the project. Whipkey stated Monday that a number of Colorado contractors had filed bids, but Nolen was low man with a bid of $12,456 net. The building is being erected by Nobles Motor company, Midland distributor for Chevrolet automobiles. Whipkey said, and is to be finished within sixty days from the date of beginning, which was September 1.

NOMINATIONS FOR QUEEN OF FESTIVAL BEING MADE NOW

Officials Report that Booths Being Taken Rapidly; Auto Booths Sold.

According to R. H. Ratliff, nominations for the Queen of the American Legion Fall Fair and Festival, which will be held in Colorado Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 23, 24, 25, are now being made and it is expected that several Colorado young ladies will be entered, as well as at least one young lady from both Westbrook and Lorraine. Miss Ruth Booher of Colorado was the first to be nominated, and Miss Ruth Boynton of Colorado also was nominated the first day. The Record has been unable to get in touch with Miss Boynton to know if she accepts the nomination, but Miss Booher has formally accepted and will be in the voting. Several other Colorado young ladies have been mentioned as probable nominees, but no further announcement could be secured before going to press.

Concessions for the festival are for sale by the Legion, and J. B. Pritchett, chairman of the concessions committee, reports several contracts made, with several more good concessions for sale. Practically all automobile space has already been sold, according to Pritchett, who says there will be something like $35,000 worth of automobiles displayed at the festival. "Our State Teachers' College at Alpine has asked for a booth at the fair and will be granted one of the choice spaces. The committee is trying to get some big entertainment features, some rides for the kiddies, etc., and will have something definite to announce next week, it is said.

Contract has been made with the West Texas Decorating Company of San Angelo to decorate the tabernacle and other parts of the festival grounds, as well as other decorations for the city during the big fair, and it is expected this will be the days of the year to be classified as really big holidays.

Judge C. C. Thompson, post commander of the American Legion Post, is working hard to put this entertainment program over big, and with the co-operation of the other members of the post, he will meet with success. The program outlined by the commander is a good one, one that other citizens of Colorado will be glad to help with. There will be no carnival, or other cheap, undesirable attractions, we are told, and as a whole the program will be educational and high class.

A big Rodeo and Indian fight will be staged the second day of the festival, which is expected to draw attendance from many adjoining counties. Coronation of the queen and the queen's ball Thursday night will also draw large crowds. The exhibits will be in the tabernacle during the three days.

To make the agricultural exhibit of the Legion Fair profitable as well as interesting the committee has decided to offer substantial prizes in that group.

H. L. Atkins, chairman of the committee, announces that three prizes will be offered on community exhibits: a first prize of $15; second prize of $12.50, and third prize of $10 will be given. A score card of the items to be shown has been worked out by Mr. Atkins, and interested clubs should obtain copies of the score from him or from Miss Ives Belle Jones.

Owing to limited facilities for taking care of livestock there will be no exhibits in that division, but first prizes of $1.50, and second prizes of $1 will be offered on pens in the following classes of poultry: Rhode Island Reds, Barred Plymouth Rock, White Plymouth Rock, Spotted Anconas, White Leghorns and Black Minorcas. A pen will consist of one male and two females. All pens of

SUNDAY SERVICES TO OPEN METHODIST REVIVAL

Revival Campaign Be Under Leadership of Rev. E. N. Parish.

In church circles considerable interest is being manifest in the coming revival campaign of the Methodist Church, which is to begin next Sunday with the morning hour services. Rev. E. N. Parish, evangelist of Cleburne, Texas, is to do the preaching, and a competent song leader will be in charge of the musical programs. The services will be conducted at the church, Rev. J. F. Lewis, pastor, has announced, and since the weather at nights is rather cool now, many have expressed the opinion that this arrangement is the better. The campaign will continue about three weeks, and is expected to attract large congregations for the services. The speaker is said to be a very capable man and one who can deliver his message in a very pleasing manner, which in itself, will be a great drawing card for the meeting.

COMPLETION OF PALACE RECALLS PROMOTION THE HOTEL COLORADO

With the completion and opening of the New Palace Theater, history of the promotion of Hotel Colorado, five-story hostelry now under construction, is called to memory, and this part played by E. E. Parkhurst of Dallas is vividly brought out. Being one of the first to realize the need of better hotel facilities in Colorado, Parkhurst came to Colorado last year and began talking the proposition, and the owners of the Colorado theaters seized upon the opportunity to secure site and construction of a modern new theater building and helped Parkhurst in the matter of promoting the structures. Inasmuch as the construction of the hotel was responsible for erection of the theater that is to open Monday, the early promotion talk of Parkhurst can be credited to the theater as much as the hotel proper. Contract for the theater, hotel and garage building was let on May 1 and actual construction began the last of May. J. M. Thomas, Ross Dixon and E. E. Parkhurst were signers on the contract. Site for the structures was donated by the citizens of Colorado.

Colorado Bargain House Buyer Back From Market

Mr. L. Landau, manager and buyer for the Colorado Bargain House, returned first of the week from the Northern and Eastern markets, where he spent more than a month buying new merchandise for their big store. Mr. Landau said Thursday morning that he had bought the largest and best stock of goods ever purchased by his concern, much of which has already arrived and been placed on display in the store here. Mr. Landau said more than $36,000 worth of new merchandise had been opened up and placed of the shelves of the Bargain House since last Friday, and that thousands of dollars worth of new goods were yet to arrive. He gave his reason for heavy purchases, the fact that the market indicates a good price for cotton this Fall and the outlook for a prosperous season in this county.

Poultry must be in place by 10 a. m. Sept. 23.

Interested parties should apply to either the county agent or the home demonstration agent for further information.

BAPTIST NOTES.

Regular services next Sunday at both hours. Evening services 7:45; Sunday school 9:45 a. m. Please be present. The Sunday school is taking on new life. Something new for Sunday. Bring your friends.

M. C. BISHOP.

PASTOR URGES PEOPLE SEEK KNOWLEDGE OF THE GREAT MESSIAH

Rev. J. E. Chase of the First Christian Church Delivers Fine Sermon Sunday

Rev. J. E. Chase, pastor of the First Christian church, delivered a very interesting address to his congregation last Sunday at the morning hour, and the Record takes pleasure in giving readers of the paper a short synopsis of the sermon. Awaiting completion of their beautiful new church building, the First Christian congregation is meeting in the District Court room at the Mitchell county court house.

Basing his sermon on a passage of scripture in Philippians 3:10, choosing the words "That I may know Him," Rev. Mr. Chase, among other things, said:

"Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, felt that religion was essentially progressive. All things reach perfection through growth. Seldom in nature do we find equality in size. When the 'mountains were brought forth,' they were unequal in size. 'One star differeth from another star in glory.' So is it in true Christianity. Size depends not on the new birth, but upon growth in grace and in knowledge. Paul's constant desire was, 'To know Him,' and this increased knowledge was a constant growth. Late in life he was still striving 'That I may know Him.'"

Many sincere, good men are afraid to learn more. They tremble in the presence of increased knowledge. They, like the priests of old, are fearful the Ark is going to be upset. Hence their dismal lamentations: "Faith is perishing from the earth."

It is perfectly safe to trust God to manage His own battles and to maintain His own cause. It seemed to be well nigh hopeless when Jesus went to the cross, because even His own did not know Him. But the cause was not lost. He was lost for the moment but thereby the world was saved.

Now there are five truths that are revealed as we come more and more to know Him. Truths that some how are related to Him and become essential items of Christian faith and hope. These form the skeleton of true Christianity and as we grow in the knowledge of these truths we become stalwart, valiant, virile Christians.

1.—That the ultimate reality is Spirit. It is hard for a materialistic age, such as ours, to grasp the essential reality of things spiritual. "But the things that are seen are temporal the things not seen are eternal." The natural man does not perceive spiritual realities. "From everlasting to everlasting" was not spoken of material essences. Materialism is deadening. Spirit only is life.

2.—The Sense of the Unity of Life. Everything begins and ends in God. This makes a more friendly, meaningful and kindly universe in which to live. This explains as nothing else can the meaning of all perplexities and mysterious incidents in human life. Instead of religion being separate and apart from everyday living it becomes its helmsman. It pieces together the puzzle, and solves its riddles. Somehow religious men grasp the idea of human brotherhood because all life is one. That is the passion of the missionary idea. "God made of one blood, one life, all men to dwell on the earth."

3.—An inflexible justice at the heart of this universe.

It cannot be otherwise. When we see the ironlike and heartless inhumanities that have grown up around the world we would be in despair were our faith weaker in the conception of unfailing justice when all wrong shall be righted. "A just and an equal balance are the Lords." The thought that strict justice is at the heart of things is the basis of a world's hope. It is the pledge of the world's redemption. Justice is just as essential and divine as mercy.

4.—A passion for Freedom.
"If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." The passion for freedom is the expression of political, social and religious democracy. All too long we have tried to hang the chains of one age around the neck of another age. The passion for freedom to burst the age worn shells is not to be denied. But the passion for freedom in the soul of one individual or one nation or one race, corrected by the passion for the freedom of others will hold us in a straight and safe course. Security is therefore to be found in our collective life rather than in individualism. "No man liveth unto himself."

5.—The tremendous cost of religion.
Religion demands all and holds all. It means complete consecration to ideals, principles and a great cause. We are altogether too self complacent in matters religious. The tendency is to let George do it. Religion is worth all or it is worth nothing. Much misguided zeal is expended in religion. Too bad it is expended that way but it is not wholly lost. We are to know Him in the light and example of the cross. There we shall see some tangible evidence of the tremendous cost of righteousness.

Time was when the sacred books of a people or nation were their chief sources of education and learning. Her principal men were profound interpreters of the sacred writings. I am not so sure that our standards of learning have been heightened in turning from sacred books to material and physical sciences. TO KNOW HIM—that is and should be the grand design of all education. What is botany, astronomy, biology, philosophy? Are not they and kindred branches of learning but avenues through which we may study and come to know Him who made the flower, who hung out the stars, who in the genesis gave life in all its many forms, and who gave us the most rational and sensible philosophy when he said, "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them for this is the meaning of the law and the prophets." "He that aspires to greatness shall be servant of all."

And so my beloved brethren the supreme task confronting religious people today is not the struggle for denominational supremacy, neither is it the universal acceptance of creedalism written or implied. But it is in an effort to make Christ centric in our thinking, worship and practice. That we may know Him. KNOW Him!

In the reality of the Spirit recognize the essential unity of Life. Behold the inflexible justice at the heart of things. Have a passion for and manifest a struggle for freedom, while paying the tremendous cost of religion with our substance, self and service.

In Memory of Brother James Clayton Costin of Westbrook

WHEREAS, it was the will of Almighty God to remove from our midst, Brother James C. Costin to the Supreme Grand Lodge above, where labor is no more, where sorrow ceases and troubles are over.

Be It Resolved, that we acknowledge the wisdom and goodness of our Supreme Grand Master, and bow in humble submission to the inevitable edict from the East, yet we mourn the loss to us for a short time our brother, whom we shall never meet at the altar of Free Masonry on earth again and, we know the time is short when we shall meet him when we gain admission into the Celestial Lodge on high, where he has preceded us; and we deplore his loss to his bereaved family, to the fraternity and his friends.

He was a just and upright Mason, a useful citizen, a sincere friend, and an obliging neighbor, a man who endeavored always to perform every duty to his God, his country, his family, his neighbors and himself, faithfully and well.

RESOLVED that, in token of our sincere friendship and sympathy in this dark hour of this great affliction, and as a pledge of our fidelity to the memory of our deceased brother, we extend to the bereaved family the fraternal right hand of Free and Accepted Masons, and with the assurance that with the Great Light given of God to man, will guide us and them safely to that Spiritual Building, that House not made with hands Eternal in the Heavens, where the broken circle will be reunited, never again to be parted, and where we shall dwell together in Peace and Happiness forever and ever.

Resolved, that a copy of these Resolutions be furnished to the bereaved family, a copy spread upon the minutes of the Lodge and a copy furnished the newspaper for publication.

MOST VIGOROUS FIGHT IN HISTORY IS PLANNED.

CISCO, Aug. 31.—The Republicans of Texas plan to make the most vigorous campaign in history, according to F. A. Blankenbecker, Republican leader of this section of the State, who has begun plans for an "all West Texas" rally to be held in Cisco soon. Col. H. H. Haines, Republican nominee for Governor, will speak at the rally, which will probably mark his only appearance on a West Texas platform, Blankenbecker said.

JIM'S POLITICAL CAREER IN TEXAS TERMINATED DAN MOODY ASSERTS

Any Attempt to Bar Name From November Ballot Will Be a Failure

AUSTIN, Aug. 29.—Jim Ferguson's career in Texas politics has ended, Attorney General Dan Moody, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, declared Sunday.

But James E. Ferguson, former Governor, husband of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and a dominant figure in the Lone Star State politics since 1914, said:

"I don't wish to take from Moody any of the sweets of victory, but 12 years' experience in politics has taught me that when one is young, one is inclined to exaggerate the effects of an accomplishment. Understand, however, I am not seeking to minimize Moody's triumph."

Moody, whose meteoric rise from a county attorney to nominee of Governor in the span of six years has set a record in Texas politics, said his landslide has hurled Ferguson into political oblivion. Moody said he thought it was impossible to gauge the strength of the Texas Ku Klux Klan by the election results.

"The Klan was not an issue, and Ferguson found it impossible to make it one," said the man who, as district attorney of Williamson County, sent five alleged Klan leaders to the penitentiary.

Withholds Statement. Ferguson said he would have to have time to study the complete election returns before being able to issue a statement on how prominently the Klan had figured in Moody's nomination. Throughout the runoff campaign, Ferguson charged repeatedly that Moody was a Klan candidate and that his lead in the first primary was due to Klan support.

"Texas newspapers most certainly have no cause for rejoicing in Moody's victory, because of the scurrilous attacks," on him and his wife," the former Governor said.

He strongly intimated that court action would follow against a number of leading Texas newspapers. Moody predicted that if Ferguson contested placing his name on the general election ticket that he would do so before the special session of the Legislature meeting here Sept. 13, at the call of Governor Ferguson.

He anticipated no serious difficulty, he said. Ferguson sought shortly after the first primary to have the Democratic State Executive Committee bar Moody's name from the Aug. 28 ticket. He alleged Moody had violated election laws of the State by accepting campaign contributions from two candidates for the Legislature. Failing in this endeavor, Ferguson intimated court action would be taken to bar Moody's name from the general election ticket.

Contest Not Feared. The youngest gubernatorial nominee in Texas history said Ferguson would have no court case of merit, citing the opinion of the Texas Supreme Court that contested primary elections for State offices must be settled by the Legislature. He said any attempt to bar his name was doomed to failure.

Moody did not appear extraordinarily elated by his sweeping victory. He insisted it was no personal triumph as the people had determined to "put an end to Fergusonism."

The demand for Moody's candidacy became insistent after he had prosecuted the American Road Company and the Hoffman Construction Company in connection with awarded State highway contracts. He recovered a confessed judgment of $600,000 from the American Road Company and gained a jury verdict of probable fraud in the Hoffman Company contract, the court holding venue of the case belongs in Travis County, of which Austin is the county seat.

Trial on the merits of the Hoffman case is scheduled for October, the State seeking recovery of $421,000 alleged excess profits, and cancellation of contracts.

To Prosecute Cases. "This case will be prosecuted vigorously," Moody told the Associated Press. "I am going back to my office and try to catch up with the work. He also said a case against Sherman Youmans Construction Company of Houston would be prosecuted.

This case involved recovery of about $30,000. Moody said he could not see what the Fergusonians had hoped to accomplish by entering the second primary, but that he believed the Governor and her husband thought they had a chance to win. He appeared interested to know if the results of both primaries were great surprises to the Fergusonians.

No information of any sort that the contest would be continued was given by Ferguson.

Asked how Mrs. Ferguson was bearing her defeat, her husband replied:

"My wife is a good sport."

Jim Philosophical.

The man, whose career is without parallel in Texas, spoke philosophically of the reverse of his wife. Ferguson was elected Governor in 1914, reelected in 1916, impeached in 1917 for mishandling public funds, defeated for President in 1920 when he was a candidate of the American party, defeated for United States Senator in 1922, and in 1924 led the fight against the Ku Klux Klan which resulted in the election of Mrs. Ferguson.

As he talked, soft music of church hymns from the First Baptist Church just across the street, floated into the small office.

During the campaign Ferguson repeatedly denounced the Baptists and charged they, with the Klan, were instrumental in Moody's candidacy.

Asked whether he thought the vote against his wife meant the termination of Fergusonism in Texas, Ferguson laughingly indicated he would answer later.

IN MEMORIAM

James Clayton Costin was born in Bullock County, Alabama, Aug. 26, 1879, died Aug. 23, 1926. He died three days before he was 47 years old.

Brother Costin came to Texas from his native State when he was about five years of age. He lived a good moral life, but it was not until about five years ago that he gave his heart to Christ.

At Cuthbert, Texas, in 1921, under the preaching of his half brother, Rev. W. C. Hart, he was graciously converted and immediately joined the Methodist Church at Westbrook, where he has lived a consistent Christian life since.

He was a useful man. A man of few words, quiet, timid and reserved, but in his quiet non-assuming way he wielded an influence in his community that affected not a few lives for good. As a husband he was faithful, as a father he was kind. As a neighbor he was a typical good Samaritan. As a citizen he occupied a place in the community in which he lived that has been vacated by his going away and it is the consensus of opinion throughout the community that it is going to be most impossible to find a man that can take his place. He was a member of the school board, a steward of the Methodist Church and County Commissioner at the time of his death.

Jim Costin was one of the most patient men I ever knew. He never fretted, worried or complained. He bore his suffering with scarcely a murmur.

He had faith in his fellow man. He was never known to criticize anyone. He believed in his brethren, his church, his pastor and above all, he had faith in God. For he was a good man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith.

He was buried Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 24, from the First Methodist Church in Colorado, Texas. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. F. Lawis, and at the grave by the Masons. The church was filled to capacity by friends of the deceased from Westbrook, his home town, and from all over Mitchell County.

Brother Costin was married to Miss Leslie Allmond, daughter of Mrs. Allmond, now of Colorado, some 14 years ago. To this happy union three children, two boys and one girl, were born, to-wit: Warren, J. C. Jr. and Iris. These, together with his wife, several brothers and sisters and numerous other relatives are left to mourn his going.

A good man has gone, one who will be missed, but one who served his day and generation. May the wise judge who doth all things well comfort the hearts of the sorrowing friends and relatives.

"In the grave yard softly sleeping, where the flowers gently wave, Lies the one we love so dearly, in his lonely silent grave.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber, peaceful in the grave so low, Thou wilt no more join our number, thou no more our songs shall know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee, when the day of life is fled, Then in heaven with joy to greet thee, where no funeral tear is shed.

Some day, sometime, our eyes shall see the face we loved so well, Sometimes our hands shall press with his, to never say farewell." L. E. NORTHCUTT, pastor.

BAPTIST W. M. S.

Several of the ladies of the W. M. S. of the Baptist Church went out to Pleasant Valley Monday afternoon, rendered a missionary program and helped the ladies there to organize a society.

All officers were elected, Mrs. Gray Taylor was chosen as president. A course of study was decided upon, time and place of meeting also arranged.

The meeting was then turned into a round table discussion. Questions pertaining to W. M. U. work were asked and answered. Much interest and enthusiasm was manifested.

The meeting adjourned by prayer by Mrs. Taylor. During the social hour refreshments of cream and cake were served by the ladies of that good church.

We prophesy for these women a successful organization and are glad indeed to have them enlisted in this work.

Mr. Jim Dunnahoo of Hico, and daughter, Miss Alice of Fort Worth, are the guests of S. D. Dunnahoo and family.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

We are starting our Fall and Winter work Sunday. We hope to have as near a 100 per cent attendance as possible.

Begin to make your plans to that end. If you have gotten "out of the habit of coming to church," try to form the habit again, and begin next Sunday.

Sunday school at 9:45, J. M. Thomas, superintendent. We have good teachers and we are sure you will like them. Come Sunday and become a member of our Sunday school if you are not a member somewhere in town.

A Good Name

priceless and therefore jealously upheld

Dodge Brothers have kept the faith.

Year after year their motor car has continued to mature into a better and better product.

Beauty has been added to dependability, comfort and silence to beauty. Endless refinements have been made, and the basic sources of Dodge Brothers quality maintained in every detail.

As a consequence, the NAME Dodge Brothers is even more valuable than the great Dodge Brothers plant itself, and eminently worthy of the public confidence it everywhere inspires.

The public may rest assured that a Good Name so priceless will be safeguarded jealously by those who hold its destinies in their hands.

A FAMILY REUNION

Ballinger was chosen as a meeting place on account of being centrally located, for the twelve children, brothers and sisters of the Cason family; and plans were perfected for them to meet at Ballinger and go into camp on the Colorado river.

When the large crowd of brothers and sisters and their children and grand children met at Ballinger, they found the Colorado river on a rise and the best camping places under water.

The Chamber of Commerce very promptly tendered the use of the tourist park, located at the foot of Eighth street, near Fair Park, and the visitors pitched their tents at that place and spent three days there.

It was the first time the Cason children had been together in many years and they reported a good time.

Before breaking camp a statement was issued and signed by each head of the families, thanking the people of Ballinger and the Chamber of Commerce, thanking them for the courtesies shown the reunion.

There are twelve brothers and sisters in the Cason family and with the brother-in-laws and sister-in-laws and their families, ninety-nine persons were brought together for this family round-up.

Those attending were Billie Cason and family, Burkett; Bud Cason and family, Burkett; Charley Cason and family, Burkett; Jess Cason and family, Talpa; Neugent Cason and family, Pasche; Frank Cason and family, May; S. W. Saffert and family, Brownwood; S. N. Palmer and family, Colorado; Mrs. Lila Hindman and children, Cross Plains.

There were three of the Cason children that did not attend, John Cason of Kansas City; Mrs. Mary Brooks Ada Okla.; Mrs. Rena Gibson Tishomingo, Okla.

Only one member of the Cason family lived in Runnels county, Mr. Linsey Powers, Winters.

Loss of Barcus as Scout Executive Keanly Felt

W. S. Barcus, scout executive, Buffalo Trails council, who resigned on September 1st to accept position as secretary of the Board of City Development at Sweetwater, was in Colorado Saturday, and when asked about the filling of the place made vacant by his resignation said the committee composed of Will Scott, J. A. McCurdy and himself were considering applications and would select a man at an early date. Barcus came to this district, composed of Mitchell, Nolan, Fisher and Scurry counties, some two years ago as scout executive, taking charge of the council at its organization, and has had very satisfactory success, being highly praised for his work by Rev. W. M. Elliott of Colorado, president, and other officials of the council. The Sweetwater position was so much more lucrative as to financial remuneration that Barcus could not turn down the offer, and while the Buffalo Trails council Boy Scouts regret to lose Barcus, the officials express best wishes for him in his work with the Sweetwater body.

SMALLER COTTON CROP IS NOW INDICATED FOR WEST PART OF TEXAS

Pests Are Making Inroads in Eastern Part of Cotton Belt
Rains Do Not Help

The cotton crop of West Texas has deteriorated 300,000 bales in the past three weeks, according to a statement issued by B. M. Whitaker, agricultural manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, who just returned from a trip of 3,000 miles which carried him through the entire cotton section of West Texas, north of the T. & P. railway and southwest through the irrigated section of the Big Bend country. Whitaker made a careful survey of the cotton situation throughout his trip. He went into and examined the fields at regular intervals and studied the forms of insects that are infecting the crop throughout the area. Unfavorable weather conditions and insect damage were ascribed by him as cause for deterioration. From Hamlin westward to the New Mexico line he found dry weather causing great damage. The old cotton is suffering worse than the later planted crops, he found and cotton is sheathing badly where recent rainfalls brought relief to spots. Young cotton is standing up fairly well because the drier weather prevailing caused the plants to send down long tap roots. The old cotton due to so much wet weather in the early season, has grown a large stalk, but has meager root developments, causing it to suffer more from dry weather, he said. In many sections rainfall will bring little benefit because the lateness of the season precludes the cotton putting on a new crop after shedding.

In the eastern section of the territory, Whitaker found insect damage greater because of weather conditions. The boll weevil has done comparatively small damage. The boll worm has appeared in some sections and constitutes a threat while the cotton leaf worm is creating havoc with the crop in many sections. Some sections of central West Texas still have flattering prospects and the plants have matured heavy crops of bolls already. Only unusually heavy boll worm infections can cause heavy damage in these sections, but such sections are spotted. On some of the South Plains sections he found flattering prospects in spots, but very poor in others.

Whitaker stated that West Texas will have a fair crop this year, but nothing like the bumper crop that was promised a month ago.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce is becoming alarmed over the cotton leaf worm situation. A service letter has been sent by the organization to all chambers of commerce in its territory urging the local chamber to urge an active fight on the pest before its spread becomes too great. Shortage of arsenate has been reported in many places. However, the organization has found a surplus of the poison in other places. The facilities of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce have been extended to the cotton section making the West Texas Chamber a clearing house through which committees reporting a lack of cotton poison are put in touch with the centers reporting a surplus and during the past week a great amount of the surplus poison has been transferred from places where it was not needed to a point where a need was reported.

The West Texas Chamber is working in conjunction with the A. & M. College Extension Bureau in its efforts to combat the cotton pests and is giving widespread publicity to the assurance recommended by the college entomologists for control of the pests.

Homer D. Wade, manager of the organization, sees in the cotton deterioration a hope for better prices for the staple. In a letter addressed to affiliated chambers of commerce, he declared that West Texas, due to its great feed crop, will be in good

OIL DEVELOPMENT IN MITCHELL AND ADJOINING COUNTIES INCREASING

Activities in the Otis Chalk
Field Indicates Big Play
In Near Future.

Carey and Lockhart are now busy on three tests in the Chalk field, and in addition own the Carey and Lockhart Chalk No. 1, on section 114, which is rated at 90 barrels or better per day.

The drill is pounding away around 1000 feet in their test well on section 97, and they are about ready to spud in their test on section 95.

The well on section 86 which encountered salt water near the 1400 foot mark is to be drilled deeper.

Twenty five carloads of casing for the Marland Oil Company, for use in the Chalk oil field, has been unloaded at their pipe yards just east of the T. & P. passenger station in Big Spring, and thirty more carloads are enroute to Big Spring. This casing is being transported to the Chalk field by truck. Five carloads of casing have also been received at Coahoma for the Marland.

A large force of carpenters is now at work on the Marland lease in the Chalk field erecting bunk houses and other needed buildings. Two rotary drills have been moved to the lease within the past week; and the company expects to have five more rigs in operation within a very short time. It is stated that the Marland has designated locations for thirty test wells on the Chalk holdings.

Their Mary Chalk No. 1 is still holding up no the pump. Their second test, the Mary Chalk No. 2, is said to have struck a good oil and gas showing at 1230 feet the latter part of last week. This well has been condition even with a short cotton yield.

bailing oil but its production cannot be ascertained.

The next tests to be drilled by the Marland will be south of their Mary Foster No. 2.

Dixie Oil Company's No. 4, Hughes in Upton county, rated as the biggest West Texas well outside the Big Lake oil field, was reported Wednesday to be steadily drilling itself into a water well.

No. 4 Hughes blew in unexpectedly Monday at 2200 feet, coating a large area with oil and giving out immense quantities of gas. During the fight to get the gusher under control, gas overcame J. D. Leigh of San Angelo and asphyxiated him.

The well was reported as making 500 barrels of oil when it blew in. Later with the tools still in the hole production was decreased to 250 barrels per hour. Wednesday the flow had increased to some 5,000 barrels per day with 10 per cent water and 32 per cent basis sediment according to reports in Fort Worth.

Located 12 miles north of McCamey on the Orient Railroad and 115 miles west of San Angelo, this well was hailed as meaning great things for that section. It is 600 feet southeast of Dixie's No. 2 Hughes which has been making 200 barrels daily since it was drilled in July 4.

—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The Kay Co. Pipe Line Company operating a pipe line from the Chalk oil field to their landing rack east of Coahoma, established offices at Coahoma this week.

A derrick has been erected and machinery installed for a test for oil on the L. S. Bell ranch, ten miles southwest of Garden City. It is reported that the Republic Oil Co. is to make this test.

Drilling is now progressing below 700 feet in the Reeves & Apperman test on section 126, block 29, W. & N. W. survey. This test is about three miles southwest from the Chalk oil field.

If the land owners will give the required land it is certain that some test wells for oil will be drilled west and southwest of Big Spring.

Blocks for three tests are now being sought, so it is up to the land owners to encourage or discourage this development.

The Magnolia Petroleum Co. this week, spudded in an off-set well to their Foster 1, the discovery well of the Iatan field. The new test well is located west of the discovery well.

They are also to move a rig from the Abrams lease to start another test near the Magnolia Foster No. 1.

The task of underreaming at 980 feet to set ten inch casing in the Joe Edgar test on section 111, block 29, W. & N. W. survey is going forward at a fast clip.

There is considerable interest manifested in this test as the geologists claim it is especially favorably located. It is two miles west of the discovery well in the Chalk field.

The California Oil Company's Foster No. 1 on section 6, block 29, Tsp. 1S, is being tested to determine the production. From all accounts this is going to be a good producer. This test is two miles northwest of the Magnolia Oil Company's producing wells in the Iatan section.

The California Company is going forward with plans to drill an off-set, and an extensive drilling campaign in that section is forecast.

The Magnolia Petroleum Company having completed their pipe line to New Iatan are now in position to carry forward an extensive drilling campaign in the Chalk field.

Their first well on section 114 is easily good for 90 barrels per day. They are now drilling an off set to this test on the south. In addition to drilling other tests to the 1500 foot oil sand it is also reported that the Magnolia plans to drill a deep test.

Owen and Sloan who brought in the discovery well in the Chalk field have let the contract for their Chalk well No. 3. The Brown Drilling Co. of Colorado was awarded the contract. This test is located south of the Owen & Sloan Chalk No. 2.

The Chalk No. 2 is a good producer and is now on the pump. A derrick has been completed over the Chalk No. 1 and this well is to be drilled deeper in order to bring in a larger producer.

STARR COUNTY GOES WITH

ALL THE REST OF TEXAS Starr county is with the Texas "band wagon." At the July primary Moody received four votes and Mrs. Ferguson 848. Today the county completely reversed itself, casting three votes for Ferguson and 1,000 for Moody, according to reports from Brownsville.

THREE TEXAS AREAS HOLD THE OIL SPOTLIGHT

North and South Texas vied for the headlines in the oil news of the past week. In the North, the Panhandle field took new honors with a daily average production of about 118,000 barrels. In the South, the old Spindletop field—drilled to new sands—gave almost a gusher a day to the news columns, and within the month has added 16 to the list of monster wells.

In between these two fields, Nigger Creek—touted as one of the most promising of the deeper drilling areas—was practically defined in every direction by salt water in Transcontinental's Erskine well; and oil men generally agree that field has no threat of anything above its present production of around 13,000 barrels.

But far West Texas was not to be outdone in the week's news. Upton County reporting the biggest well yet drilled in that vast area outside the Big Lake field. This was Dixie Oil Company's Hughes No. 4 which blew in Monday, making 500 barrels of oil the first hour and so much gas that the gauger, W. A. Leigh of Tula, Tex., was asphyxiated when he climbed on top the tanks to switch the flow.

This well is far bigger than Dixie's No. 2 Hughes and marks the Upton field as a real oil pool which may easily attain the importance of Big Lake. Both the Dixie producers are in Sec. 4, William Teer survey, 12 miles north of McCamey.

Drilling areas farther south were not allowed to hold attention from North Texas. In the old Sunshine Hill pool of Wichita County, three and one-half miles northeast of Electra, R. R. Clark's No. 4 Ward-Todd subdivision, blew in Wednesday for a 650-barrel producer at 1,862 feet.

Brown County attracted much attention during the week with the completion of several good wells in the older fields. The Humble got a pipeline to the Bowers well on the Cason tract and that wildcat oil began flowing to market at the rate of some 250 barrels per day.

Locations for more than 100 new tests were announced in West Texas during the week, the Texon companies planning to add 23 operations to the 14 on which they are now engaged—all in Reagan County, Sec. 36, Block 9, University land. Directors of the Big Lake Oil Company declared a dividend of 25 per cent, which represents a distribution of another $1,000,000 to stockholders.

The Bulcher Field, 25 miles north-west of Gainesville, in Cooke County, uncovered another producer in the John Houser No. 2 Dennis, which came in for 100 barrels daily. The C. C. Lanier No. 1 Hyman, placed on the pump, made 75 barrels. Five locations were staked on the Hyman farm during the week.

The crude oil market at the close of the week was decidedly improved. Midcontinent gasoline was stronger and the few weak spots in the Texas gasoline situation were materially helped by recent sales.

Purchase of a half interest in the royalty on 6,000 acres of the Cockrell ranch in the eastern part of the Hutchinson County oil field for $400,000 by the Marland Employees' Royalty Company, announced during the week is the biggest oil trade of recent weeks in the Panhandle.

Indications of permanent relief for the congestion in the Panhandle field came late in the week when President W. F. Gates of the Prairie Pipe Line Company stated his company would begin at once the construction of an 8-inch line from King's Mill, Gray County, 207 miles to Ringling, Okla.

RESERVE BANK BULLETIN PREDICTS LARGEST FARM PRODUCTION IN YEARS

Local Banker Gives Out Statement Made By This Big Institution

T. W. Stonerod, Jr., active vice president of the City National Bank of Colorado, which bank is a member of the Federal Reserve system, gives out a statement taken from the monthly bulletin issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, wherein the institution predicts the largest production of agricultural products this season in the Eleventh Federal Reserve district, since 1919. According to Stonerod, the report indicated that this spirit of optimism is reflected in the increased volume of trade, bank debit to individual accounts, freight car loadings and the generally full employment of labor. Doubts to individual accounts, said the report, showed a further gain of "3 per cent over the previous month and were 9 per cent larger than in July last year. While department stores sales," continued the review, "reflected a seasonal decline of 26 per cent as compared to the previous month, they were 8 per cent higher than a year ago.

According to the statement the district's labor surplus has been almost entirely absorbed due to the upward trend in general industrial activities and the increased demand for farm labor. Substantial gains in employment were reported in many of the major industries, it said.

Farmers are assured of ample feed with which to make the 1927 crops, because of the substantial increase during July in the indicated production of that commodity in this district together with the large grain crops already harvested. This, says the review, will in turn release a large portion of the returns from the

PLAINS PEOPLE INDIGNANT
ABOUT FALSE ARTICLE

West Texans, particularly those who happen to live in the Panhandle section, have become convinced that Doak Rainey, Assistant Highway Engineer of Texas, knows very little about his own state, at least climatologically speaking. In the July number of the "Texas Highway Bulletin," this dignitary, writing under the caption "Highway Research as Developed by the State Highway Department," wrote in part:

"In the anhandle section the summers are very long and exceedingly hot; temperatures of 114 degrees in the shade are not uncommon. The winters, although short, are very severe. Temperatures as low as thirty degrees below zero occur almost every winter. It is not uncommon to have a temperature of 60-70 degrees on one day and below zero on the next."

This article was published with a picture of the assistant engineer occupying a full page in the official publication of the State Highway Department. It was first printed in the "American Highways" magazine and through that medium given national circulation.

Maury Hopkins, secretary of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce, has written a strong protest to Engineer Rainey and to members of the Highway Commission. He enclosed a report from the United States Weather Bureau showing that over a period of ten years the maximum summer temperature had been 102.6 degrees while the mean summer temperature was 72.9 degrees. The highest temperature ever known in the Panhandle was 108 degrees and that was reached only once in the history of the region. The lowest temperature recorded during the existence of the United States Weather Bureau was eight degrees below zero and that point was reached once during a twenty-year period. The temperature has never reached thirty degrees at any point in the Panhandle in the memory of man.

The West Texans declare that such unfair and hurtful publicity is inexcusable and displays marked ignorance of true conditions. The Panhandle cities have labored incessantly and have spent large sums of money in advertising the true conditions of their section. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has undertaken national advertising to counteract the old time school book teachings that West Texas is a barren desert. The attention of Homer D. Wade, manager of the regional organization, has been called to the unfair publicity given the section by a state official through a state supported magazine. He has joined the West Texas cities in their protest and has requested that steps be taken to correct the false impression. He intimated that if the assistant engineer knew no more about roads than he displayed that he knew about Texas climate, the people of Texas would be better served if a new assistant engineer were appointed.

The attention of State Highway Commissioner John Case, himself a West Texan, has been called to the article in question and protest lodged with him over a bureau of the state government officially giving sanction to so false an article and of a state official giving national advertising to the false information concerning a great section of the state.—Lubbock Avalanche.

POTASH IN TEXAS

Confidence in the future development of Texas mineral resources was expressed by Dr. E. H. Sellards, associate director of the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas, on his return from three months spent in studying methods of mineral production in Europe. Dr. Sellards visited mines of copper, lead, zinc, salt, lignite, oil and potash in Germany, France and other European countries. Dr. Sellards' study was made with the view of aiding in the exploration of potash deposits in West Texas on land belonging to the University.

With regard to the potash deposits, Dr. Sellards stated that conditions of occurrence in the extensive fields in Germany are in many respects similar to the occurrence of potash in Texas. In both regions the potash is associated with extensive salt deposits.

Development of Texas mineral resources, Dr. Sellards believes, should continue along the lines of additional studies of the minerals and geology of the deposits, distribution of information through publications, and through the economic development of these resources.

BUICK GETS FIRST PLACE AT AUTO SHOWS

For the ninth consecutive year the Buick Motor Company has won the most coveted honor in the automobile industry, first choice of display space at the National Automobile Shows for 1927 in New York and Chicago. This was made known through the announcement of Alfred B. Reeves, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The N. A. C. C. award goes annually to the member company which does the greatest volume of business in dollars and cents during the fiscal year preceding the annual automobile shows. Buick first won this honor in 1919, and has held first place every year since.

Every automobile company of size except the Ford Motor Company belongs to the N. A. C. C. Thus the winning of the annual award carries with it the leadership of the industry in volume of business done with the exception of this one company. Buick confines its manufacturing to a line of sixes with a price range between $1,000 and $2,000.

E. T. Strong, who has been general sales manager of the Buick Motor Company for ten years, and under whose administration the nine awards have been won, points out that in order to equal the Buick record, another company would have to win first place every year to 1936 inclusive.

The prize of the industry goes to Buick as a climax to the most successful selling period ever experienced by this company. According to a recent factory announcement, sales for the eleven months ending July 1 totaled more than 225,000 cars. This exceeds by many thousands the best previous twelve-month period in the history of the company. Recent plant developments have increased the production capacity to 1,200 cars a day. The recent purchase by the General Motors Corporation of the Flint Motor Company's plant in Flint, Mich., was for the purpose of providing facilities for the manufacture of Buick Fisher closed bodies in Flint, where the Buick plant is located.

A WORD OF CAUTION TO THE FARMER

What was forecast as a bumper cotton crop on Aug. 10 when the Government report placed the condition of the crop at 69 and that of Texas at 73, with a total indicated yield of 15,620,000 bales, may turn out to be no more than an average crop or a really short crop. Deterioration, particularly in Texas and Oklahoma, which produces half of the American cotton, has been so great that no reliable cotton authority can safely predict the outcome. Estimates run all the way from a total failure to the possibility of a bumper crop, through favorable weather conditions during the remainder of the season.

Whatever the yield may be, it is certain that the crop has suffered terrific deterioration since the last Government report and so great has his deterioration been and so short his period of it that it is doubtful that the cotton report due Monday morning will show its effect. However, reports from correspondents in every section of the cotton belt, expressions of cotton men themselves and private advices to them show that the estimated yield in nearly every cotton producing county in Texas has been greatly reduced within the past 10 days. Rains that have helped the cotton in one locality are reported to have damaged it seriously in another. The boll weevil, the boll worm and the cotton flea are at work. In addition to this is the evidence that the heavy rains during the early growing season produced a rank growth and a large talk, but little fruit and few bolls. The insect damage is reported from South Texas and North Texas and a large number of the counties in East Texas and in many parts of Oklahoma. The cotton growing region of Fort Worth's own territory—West Texas—is the only section in the State that apparently has not suffered greatly from the ravages of insects, and even in it there are some instances where they have made their appearance.

The Star-Telegram does not care to present a gloomy picture or to forecast a crop failure. But the situation is such that the farmers of Texas can take advantage of it and profit by it, if they will. It seems to us a situation in which they have much to gain and little if anything, to lose. Present prices are largely based upon the last Government report and upon expectations of a large crop. They are not based upon the rapid and widespread deterioration that has taken place in a short time and that is growing more widespread. Thus if the crop turns out much better than present deterioration indicates there is not much likelihood that prices later on will be any less than they are now. If, on the other hand, deterioration continues unchecked, there is certain to be an average or short crop and an equal certainty of higher prices than those now prevailing. The farmer, therefore, can afford to hold his cotton; not necessarily for a given price, but he can afford to hold it until the size of the crop or the probable size can be determined with more accuracy than is now possible. There are reliable cotton men who insist that cotton will bring 20 cents by November. Such prices may or may not be realized, but it is certain that the price of cotton will not be helped by rushing it to market when the price of that market is now governed by expectations of a greatly increased yield, but not a record-breaking crop. As soon as the present deterioration begins to have its effect and to show up in the Government report, the price should advance. A week or 10 days may tell an entirely different story and a few week's delay in the marketing of the cotton may mean an enormous difference in the money the farmer will obtain for his crop. Let the farmers of Texas, let the merchants of Texas and the bankers as well, who are interested in the cotton farmer and the marketing of his cotton, go slowly in the matter of selling. Let them hold it wherever it is possible and Texas should prosper as a result.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Dayton Stabilized BALLOONS

Which, without a doubt, represents the most sensational development in Pneumatic tire design and construction since DAYTON first built the original and Pioneer Low Air Pressure Tire five years ago. Sold at Hicks' Stores, Associated Stores, and Allied Dealers means that YOU BUY THEM AT LOW PRICES

One big object of the HICK'S MILLION DOLLAR sales campaign—aside from saving Texas motorists a fortune in tire prices—is to properly introduce in Texas a balloon tire that is being joyously welcomed and acclaimed all over the country. A new and revolutionary Balloon Tire. A balloon tire that is distinctly different and decidedly superior to all balloons of ordinary construction. A balloon tire that possesses in great measure every merit common to true balloons—that emphasizes the good features that make for balloon tire popularity—and that contains none of the bad features and objections common to ordinary balloons. A PERFECTED BALLOON TIRE.

DAYTON STABILIZED BALLOONS

You have the word of the Hicks Rubber Company that DAYTON STABILIZED BALLOONS, for small diameter wheels, combine the comfort of balloon design with:

5 Additional Advantages

- Smoothness of Motion
- Strength
- Safety
- Long Mileage
- Ease of Steering

of Stabilized construction. It is scientifically designed to distribute the shocks of the road evenly to all parts of the tire. It is built with an extra wide semi-flat tread that gives complete road contact at deflections as low as 5 per cent. The tread is tempered to unusual toughness by a special Dayton process. The non-skid is of quick grip design that does not sing nor cause rumbling.

Made by Dayton—bearing the Dayton name—means that the STABILIZED BALLOON is the final masterpiece of the makers of the original Low Air Pressure tire. Like the Dayton "Thorobred" Cord, the STABILIZED BALLOON is a THOROBRED.

Sold only in Texas at HICKS STORES, Associated Stores, and Hicks Allied Dealers, these remarkable new balloon tires, at the low prices asked for them, represent one of the great outstanding features of the HICKS MILLION DOLLAR SALES CAMPAIGN. By all means don't buy a balloon tire until you have seen and examined a DAYTON STABILIZED BALLOON. And, certainly, under no circumstances should you buy any kind of tires until you have seen what HICKS STORES have to offer you during the MILLION DOLLAR SALES CAMPAIGN.

Hicks policy, always, is to reduce cost to the consumer by CONCENTRATED BUYING—QUICK TURN-OVER—AND LOW SALES EXPENSE. Come in and see for yourself.

A Revolutionary Balloon Tire Development

A new principle of Design and Construction

5 features of Added Value

THREE years ago while motorists were being urged to keep more air in their tires, the Dayton low air pressure tire was announced—shattering the established belief that high air pressure was essential to long mileage.

Almost overnight there was a sweeping, nation-wide demand for comfort. Balloon tires were the result. Small wheels requiring balloon tires became standard equipment.

So Dayton engineers concentrated their efforts on the development of a more satisfactory tire for balloon wheels—a balloon that would have all the advantages of the Dayton Thorobred Cord.

And by applying proven methods of Dayton low air pressure tire building to a new principle of design and construction, Dayton has again developed a revolutionary tire—the Dayton Stabilized Balloon.

It is a tire that combines the comfort of balloon design with five additional advantages:

- smoothness of motion,
- strength,
- safety,
- long mileage,
- ease of steering of stabilized construction.

The Dayton Stabilized Balloon is scientifically designed to distribute the shocks of the road evenly to all parts of the tire. It is built with an extra-wide Semi-Flat Tread that gives complete road contact at deflections as low as five per cent. The tread is tempered to unusual toughness by a special Dayton process. The non-skid is of a quick-grip design that does not sing nor cause rumbling.

Go to the Dayton dealer today and ask him to show you this revolutionary tire.

RESERVE BANK BULLETIN
PREDICTS LARGE PRODUCTION.

cotton crop for the liquidation of indebtedness and for living expenses for the coming year. Although the cotton plant again made rapid growth disappointment was expressed over the progress of fruiting. Fear was expressed of the damage to cotton crops from insect infection.

Admitting that there has been a heavy demand for credit, the review explained that this was due to the lateness of the cotton crop and says that while liquidation was obtained from banks in the grain territory the Federal Reserve Bank loans to member banks rose approximately $7,000,000 during the past six weeks and on August 14 they stood at $19,184,000 or more than $9,000,000 above those on that date a year ago. It also said that although member banks' deposits usually decline at this season, there was a slight increase this year, as the rise in deposits resulting from the marketing of the grain crops more than offset the withdrawals.

"While the volume of building as measured by the valuation of permits issued at principal cities, receded further during the past month it was maintained at a level well above that for July, 1925," said the report. There was also a revival of activity at the district's lumber and cement mills, production and shipments for these mills reflecting a substantial increase over the previous month.

Regarding crop conditions the review stated that a "further improvement occurred during the past month due to the ample moisture provided by the July rains in most sections." The dry hot weather prevailing during the first two weeks in August was generally favorable to cotton and enabled the farmers to rid the fields of weeds and grass.

The corn crop is practically made, says the report, and indications are for a high yield. An indicated yield of 103,492,000 bushels is expected in this grain as against 29,809,000 bushels in 1925.

The threshing of small grains in this state is practically completed and the yield of the crops was heavy throughout the state.

Although admitting that in some sections conditions were not so favorable the report says that in most parts of the district the live stock continues to take on flesh and that ranges are green with surface tanks filled. The reports say that in some sections there seems to be a tendency to hold young stock for restocking purposes. The review says that the movement of livestock through the Fort Worth market shows a more restricted basis than in either the previous month or the same month last year. This held true for all kind of stock although the review did not attempt to explain this apparent decline in activity.

Explaining the smaller receipts and exports from Texas ports of cotton the review said this was attributable to the smaller production in 1925 a considerable portion of which was of low grade. Receipts, it is said, at all United States ports were in excess of half-million larger than for the season just closed than the previous season but exports were slightly smaller.

Cotton seed products, according to the review, shipped from 48 reporting cottonseed oil mills in this district during July was small due to the inactive season of the year. There was an increased average price for this product shipped during June, the review pointed out, however.

Textile milling showed a decline of 10.3 per cent as compared to the previous month was 42.2 above that for the corresponding month a year ago. The erratic cotton market is causing buyers to exercise extreme caution in buying although reports indicate that orders are beginning to come in a larger volume.

Due to the general optimism over crop conditions the wholesale trade was indicating a general expansion, buying during the month was on a larger scale than in either the previous month or in the same month last year. Merchants are nevertheless keeping a close watch on purchases to such an extent as to keep inventories in balance with actual consumer demand. There has been an increased demand for farm implements. The review pointed out that fall buying is largely dependent on the cotton crop.

The retail trade showed a characteristic summer dullness during the past month although as a whole that trade, while showing a decline from the previous month was nevertheless larger than during the corresponding month last year.

Bank debits to individual accounts at fifteen principal cities in the district reflected a further gain of 3.3 per cent as compared to the previous month and were 8.8 per cent larger than in July a year ago.

The review said that the number of failures in the district, contrary to the usual trend, reflected a sharp upturn. This referred to commercial failures. Firms defaulting during the month, it said, numbered 72, as compared with 39 in June and 33 in July 1925.

For the fourth consecutive month, the production of crude oil in the Eleventh Federal Reserve district showed an increase over the previous month and a new high mark for the year was reached during July. The yield for the month amounted to 14,292,770 barrels. Drilling operations were carried on at a rapid rate, it said. The daily average output of oil of the various fields in Texas amounted to 401,818 barrels, with the exception of a slight loss in the central West Texas district, the report said, all Texas fields shared in the increase.

Increased activity was discernible in the lumber industry, orders and shipments reflecting increases over the previous month.

A substantial recession in the volume of building construction occurred in July, yet it was still above that of July, 1925, said the review. The valuation of permits in twelve principal cities was lower than that in June, but exceeded that for July last year.

Cement production reflected a sharper increase over the previous month.

Gigantic Road Program
Still Ahead of U. S.

With the 1926 motor touring season in full swing, it is possible for even the casual observer to note the vast changes which have taken place in communities, sections, attitudes, personalities and a score of other phases since the national good roads campaign has been bearing ripe and juicy fruit.

In no other year since the automobile was in the experimental stage has all this been so pronounced because, never before have America's roads been in the condition which the motor tourist now finds them.

These changes, some of them clearly and definitely seen, some of them felt as a surging under-current and some of them barely hinted, now stand out in the greatest relief; and the importance of it all comes home as never before.

As Rome felt at the time when its roads were most perfect and most comprehensive, and when that state had reason to believe the future would hold much more in the way of straddling highways, so America now has the right to feel thousands of miles of perfect roads reach firm and slender arms through prosperous towns, through busy villages, through rolling prairies, through mountain wilderness and through trackless deserts—and the end is not yet.

The end is not yet—not by many more miles of highway, the last more perfect than its predecessor—not by tens of thousands of miles of gleaming roads which will, in the not distant future, pierce hamlets now sleeping beside dust laden, rut-ridden lanes, will push through mountain passes now somnolent and echoing only the tumble of stream or the hoot of owl, will connect fertile lands with prosperous markets, will tie the whole of the nation in one strong and indissoluble chain of transportation facilities.

What this 1926 touring season brings forth so graphically is that while American roads are now at their highest point of perfection, that while they are being utilized at this time to a far more important degree than ever previously, that the future, and the relatively near future, will far eclipse that which at this moment is considered so astonishing, so marvelous, so significant.

The United States really is just beginning to swing into its yard building stride. A start of magnificent proportions has been made, a grand network of highways has been cast out over the country, and from this point forward perfection of detail will come; detail which bids fair to rival in importance the work already accomplished.

Looking out over the nation from a point of vantage at Washington, the hub and heart of so much good roads interest, the careful observer can note indications of the significance of what is to come and can, in no uncertain manner, feel the pulse beat of the great body of achievement which lies immediately beyond this turn, can visualize the truly thrilling sweep of the movement which is to be the next era in the development of America's highways.

Idealists fear that the coming of good roads into the most remote sections of the nation will mean destruction of its quaint, charming, beautiful and undefiled spots where primal nature now holds full sway. There is some feeling that putting good roads in every corner and crevice of the country—a thing which eventually will come about—presages more complete industrialization, perhaps, more of the hard, cold and solid factors of life, removing forever the rural outposts, or stripping them of that which always has made them singularly attractive.

Such fears, it seems, find no basis in fact. America never will lack its hidden spots of beauty, never the call of birds nor the fragrance of climbing wild roses, never the tucked away and individual corners which beckon so alluringly. Good roads cannot, will not, desire not, to kill the charm of quiet villages, the picturesqueness of ancient and weather-beaten houses, the many things, redolent of the past, which even a hurried twentieth century takes time to revel in.

Good roads make it possible for a greater number to bask in the shadows of the past, in nature, in the lore of hamlets and countryside, while at the same time they insure the economic progress of the nation as a whole.

A hurried glance at a detailed road map of the United States well might give the impression that the country soon must reach an impasse in highway construction; that there are no more points to be connected, but few counties to be cured for, only isolated and unimportant spots in need of links.

But a more careful study will reveal that while a tremendous amount of work has been done, a vast amount still is in abeyance. Those who know roads and road conditions are aware that every state still has some stretches in dire need of improvement; that whole states are rather notorious for their relative lack of modern and comprehensive highways; and that in every part of the country highway engineers have their work cut out for them over a considerable period.

The greatest and most favorable factor in the whole situation is that while America has, in the past, contributed millions toward the construction of highways and while it is now viewing with pride a work well done, it is not content to rest on its laurels, but desires above all else to go forward with the program it has set down.

America has had an ideal in road building and it is commendable that that ideal is ever before it. And still more commendable is the fact that America has not been content with an ideal alone—it has demanded actualities based on its ideal—is demanding actualities—surely will continue to do so.

It has been said that ambition is laudable, but still more laudable is the will and the power to translate ambition into constructive action.

If the 1926 touring season, with its hundreds of thousands of motorists from every division of the land swarming back and forth over and from east to west, pushing over main highways and into little traveled passages, in the back country and along the seaboard, does nothing else it will demonstrate to all who care to see, the encompassing potentialities of the road building program, the changes which already have been wrought and will give a striking indication of that which the years hold in store.

TEACHERS STILL IN MIND

Calls for teachers of certain subjects are still being received in large numbers by the Teachers' Appointment Committee of the University of Texas, stated Miss Miriam Dozier, executive secretary. Requests for college teachers combining French and Spanish, with masters degrees and good preparation are especially numerous, she said. Teachers to direct cafeteria work in schools as well as teach home economics are also much in demand. Men with college degrees, capable of teaching mathematics and sciences as well as coaching the athletic teams are likewise in demand at present. English and history teachers seem to be most plentiful, Miss Dozier said.

Plan Meeting in Kansas
Aid Southern Stock Man

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 29.—Cattlemen from practically every State in the West are expected to gather Thursday at Emporia Kan., "to consider the present very unsatisfactory cattle market, and if possible devise means to relieve the situation," E. B. Spiller, secretary-manager of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, was advised through a letter from J. H. Mercer, secretary of the Kansas Live Stock Association, whose organization is issuing the call for the meeting.

Secretary of Agriculture, W. M. Jardine, executives of the country's four largest packing companies, officials of live stock producers' organizations, and representative cattlemen, have been invited to the meeting. Mr. Spiller will attend, and a circular letter is being mailed from here to all members of the executive committee of the cattle raisers' association, inviting their attendance.

Although cattle prices have risen somewhat since the demoralization of the live stock market in 1920, cattle raisers are still laboring against heavy odds, it is said on the local market. Many of the experienced cattle feeders in the prairie country of Western Tarrant, Eastern Parker and Hood Counties this year have lost some $10 to $30 a head on steers fed through the winter and spring, they report.

Pains

"SEVERAL years ago I was badly run-down," says Mrs. John Bunch, R. F. D. 3, Columbia, S. C. "I could not do any of my work. I was so weak I could not wash a dish. My back and sides hurt me at times dreadfully. I dragged around until I finally got down in bed."

Then, explains Mrs. Bunch, she happened to read about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and decided to give it a thorough trial, the results of which she describes below: "It seemed to reach the cause of my trouble at once. I did not take it long before my appetite began to improve. I gained in weight from 114 pounds until now I weigh 125 pounds. I soon was able to be up around the house. I took up my household duties and was delighted with my returning strength."

"I now do all my own work. The pains in my sides and back have disappeared and I feel like a different person."

Cardui has been helping suffering women for nearly 60 years. Sold by all druggists.

The Last Chance for this Year

Have you seen the Ford coupe with the new Pyralis paint job at A. J. Herrington's the Ford man?

THE NEW ESSEX

In many parts of the country Hudson-Essex dealers are demonstrating in interesting and spectacular ways the unusual strength of the Essex all-steel coach. In one city more than three tons of wooden and steel beams were placed on the roof of the body without in any way affecting it. After this demonstration was over, in fact, the body was remounted on a chassis and is being used as a demonstrator by the distributor.

In another city—located in the cotton belt—a dealer piled two bales of cotton on the roof of the car and drove around the streets. Inasmuch as all Southerners know that a bale of cotton weighs more than 500 pounds, the sight attracted a great deal of attention.

The test of the wooden and steel beams was tried by Walter Zimmerman of Columbus, Hudson-Essex distributor in the mid-Ohio district. After wooden beams and a platform had been placed on the roof of the car, a set of steel beams was obtained from a nearby sky scraper under construction. These were piled atop the coach body and the total burden on it was 6850 pounds.

It was shown as an exhibit in the main salesroom. As a part of the proof of strength, salesmen opened and closed the doors of the car, showing that there was no strain or distortion on the body.

"Such tests as these," according to Price Bros., Hudson-Essex distributors here, "are evidences of the Hudson-Essex claim that there is no automobile body made, at any price whatever, which is more solid, rigid and strain-proof than the all-steel Hudson and Essex coaches. Not only are they built exceptionally strong and rigid, but also they are so united with the chassis that the whole structure is virtually one unit."

"The whole conception and construction of the bodies is original with Hudson-Essex, and we believe that the results are entirely unique in the automobile field. There has naturally been a strong demand for Essex coaches—so strong that although the year built in the world's largest single body plant, we shall be hard pushed to meet the public demand."

A casual glance around the political horizon would lead one to suspect that political machines were giving way to a battalion of one-man tanks.

Easy going people would be all right, maybe, if it wasn't so easy for them to kill the engine when a little more gas is needed.

Ignorance is Bliss

Now comes one Doak Rainey, assistant state highway engineer, an employee of the state and doubtless an appointee of the Ferguson administration, to malign the Panhandle country.

In an article appearing in the American Highways Magazine, a journal of national circulation, and which was reprinted in the Texas Highway Bulletin, Mr. Rainey makes statements about the Panhandle weather conditions which he must know are vicious falsehoods. Else he is too misinformed to be an assistant state official.

"The climate of Texas is almost as diverse as that of Maine and California. The southern portion of the state is almost tropical. It never freezes and very high temperatures are common in the summer," says Mr. Rainey.

"The Eastern portion of the state has upwards of 50 inches of rainfall, whereas some parts of the western portion of the state it practically never rains."

Now for the Panhandle! "In the Panhandle section the summers are very long and exceedingly hot; temperatures of 114 in the shade are not uncommon."

Let's see about that. The highest temperature in Amarillo in 20 years was 106 in 1924. The mercury does not reach 100 degrees once a year. The average for July, past, was 73. On yesterday morning it was 62, and at one time had risen to 82. And yet the "summers are long and exceedingly hot."

Continues Mr. Rainey, a state official: "The winters, although short, are very severe. Temperatures as low as 30 degrees below zero occur almost every winter. It is not uncommon to have a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees one day and below zero on the next."

Nothing but a willful intent to misrepresent the Panhandle could have prompted such statements. If Rainey so much as glanced at the records.

The temperature has never been 30 degrees below zero. The coldest weather here in 20 years was 11 below zero. That was 10 years ago. Amarillo does not have zero weather once a year.

Many "smart alecks" and those too ignorant to know the facts, or who purposely do not want to admit the truth about Panhandle weather, have for years found the subject highly amusing. They've had a lot of fun about the Panhandle's climate. The majority of their statements are not worthy of an answer.

But, for a state official to write an article for a national magazine, containing the statements as made by Mr. Rainey, is carrying it too far. The News does not intend for his statements to go unchallenged. It hopes every chamber of commerce in West Texas will let the gentleman know how flagrantly unfair he is.—Amarillo News-Globe.

HUNTERS WARNED AGAINST EATING DOVES KILLED.

Warnings are being sent out over the State urging hunters to be very careful about eating doves killed close to or in the neighborhood of cotton fields that have been poisoned for leaf worms. It is said these birds eat the worms, and since poison does not affect fowls of this nature, they can safely do so, but the poison absorbed by their bodies makes it dangerous for persons to eat the meat, it is said, and therefore, hunters who have been awaiting the opening of the dove season on Sept. 1, had better be a little careful about this matter. It might be that no harm would come from eating doves killed in Mitchell County, but it is rather a risky business, if the rumor is true that the fowl will absorb the poison from poisoned worms, and hunters should keep this in mind when bringing in birds.

Dixons to Operate Three Theatres in Colorado With Programs and Prices to Please Every Theatre Goer Thousands of Dollars Invested

Opening of the New Palace Theatre on next Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock will mark the greatest advancement in the history of the theatre entertainment business in Colorado, and the realization of the fondest dreams of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Ross D. Dixon. Their operation of the Mission and the Ritz, formerly the Palace, have led these popular theatre managers to dream of the opening of a magnificent theatre in Colorado, a theatre that would be one of the best in the country and one that would be the most modern in every respect, with ample seating capacity to take care of the ever increasing patronage of the Colorado theatres, and the formal opening of the New Palace is a consummation of this dream.

The Palace Theatre building is a magnificent structure 40 by 140 feet, fronting on Walnut street adjoining site of Hotel Colorado. The building is of fire proof construction, with beautiful buff color stucco finish on the exterior. On the interior, a concrete fire proof booth to house the projection machines is erected in the center of the building directly back of the entrance and lobby. On either side and extending out several feet in front of this booth, is the mezzanine or balcony floor, entrance to which is from the main entrance doors off the lobby. Anyone entering the theatre from the lobby can go to the balcony or main floor at will. The main entrance doors are the popular French sash with beautiful curtain effect. On either side of the entrance doors, and facing out on the lobby are unique and beautifully constructed alcoves, one of which is the box office, the other a confectionery compartment. These are so arranged to allow a maximum of space in the lobby, as well as be convenient to the public.

The interior of the building is finished in the most beautiful color effects, and is roomy, cool and inviting. The ceiling is unusually high, the floor scientifically slanted to allow a maximum of comfort and the seating appearances are of the most modern and are arranged with ample aisles and spaces for comfort and pleasure of patrons. Including the balcony, the theatre will seat 800 patrons very comfortably. Screen and stage are in the rear of the building, thus patrons entering from the front of the theatre will not interfere with the program already on the screen, since the entrance is behind the seated audience. A very large stage of the most modern type of construction, with appropriate dressing rooms in connection, and which will be beautifully decorated, is in the rear of the building.

The stage curtain will be of dark blue velvet with gold fringe. The initials "P. T." on either side over main proscenium. The valance and screen curtains are to be of rose satin, supported by hand painted garden scenes on either side. The King Scenic Company of Dallas is doing the finishing.

All side wall lights and fans, of which there are to be many, will nestle in an attractive panel effect. Shades are to be hand painted in stippled effect. All interior wood work will be finished in artistic cafnale, with walls in a delicate shade of lavender and ivory. Stencil finish will be used on the walls.

As to attending to those details of comfort, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon have provided the best. In addition to the several electric fans to be installed in the building, two large "Blizzards" are to be built in the rear of the building. These give assurance of a cool breeze in the theatre at all times. In winter the building will be kept at desired temperature by the modern steam heating plant being installed. NOTED SCREEN STAR WRITES DRESS STORY FOR THEATRE SECTION

Miss Gilda Gray Tells Readers of the Record About Her Experiences.

Miss Gilda Gray, who is to be seen in the famous Paramount picture, "Aloma of the South Seas" at the New Palace Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 8 and 9th, has sent the Record editor an interesting item on "Personality and Clothes" which will be of special interest to all women of this section.

Through her interpretative dances the public has come to associate Gilda Gray with a lack of clothes. In reality, Gilda is one of the best dressed women in America and recently returned with a Parisian wardrobe valued at $14,000. But Gilda cheerfully admits that in her earlier days buying a dress was a momentous occasion in her life—that it was a case of "seek and find". As a performer, she has always had to appear prosperous, even when the duces weren't rolling in so fast. She had to scrimp and save and make the dollar as elastic as ten.

Miss Gray is therefore well qualified to give advice to the young working girl on the subject of dressing on a limited salary. Also to the woman whose income is broader, based on her own observations as she has mounted the ladder of affluence. The following article, written by Gilda personally, gives you an idea of how she managed in her early cabaret days. And it carries you right through her steady rise to stardom.

Miss Gray's communication is as follows:

"Dress according to your means, girls, but make your dollar stretch to look like ten. Eight years ago I was earning ten dollars a week as a performer and performing means clothes. Even in those days I studied myself—knew the colors best suited to bring out the glints in my hair, the blue of my eyes. Knew that drab browns, violent reds, yellows and harsh blues were to be avoided like measles. You see I am the silver blonde type with blue eyes. If you are a brunette with clear skin the colors I mention might suit you perfectly. After color, the next thing to be decided upon is line. The five-foot two girl, with the boyish figure may indulge in a full skirted, basque type of dress—known in France as the robe de style, whereas the girl of the same height who goes in for curves must perish the thought.

"The girl who is handy with the needle has a great advantage over her less fortunate sister. For she may select a smart model from one of the better class style publications, watch the papers for bargains in materials and trimmings and produce a dress that will look many times the amount of its cost. In my case, I was too busy singing each night—seven nights a week—to sew in the few leisure moments I had. But I had a shrewd mother to guide me in my purchases. My first evening dress cost $4.

"A simple little dark georgette or lace dress, of the semi-formal type, will answer the purpose of afternoon and party dress for the girl who earns her living in an office, or keeps house.

"The budget plan is the only thing for the working girl. If you find you can lay aside a stipulated amount toward clothes each week—when sale days come around you will have the ready cash, and your dollar will go twice as far. But it is never wise to neglect the savings account either, for one never knows when there will be a doctor's bill or other incidentals to worry about.

"It was in the Spring of 1919, that I made my bow to Broadway in the "Gaities of 1919." The dress I wore that opening night was of white velvet, with an ostrich trimming. I think that dress helped me "to get across" as much as my "shimmy." Things were a little rosier now for there was more money in the Saturday night pay envelope. And New York is full of fascinating shops, on the side streets—where gowns have a habit of looking like Paris to the inexperienced shopper.

"Because my stage work called for typical stage costumes, my personal wardrobe now consisted mostly of sports dresses and dark silks and velvets. I still maintained a budget system—and every time I saved $5 or $10 on the purchase of a gown, into the fund it went. That fund went toward the purchase of my first fur coat, a practical seal wrap.

"In the summer of 1924 I made my first trip to Europe. Naturally, I bought a number of dresses while in Paris—but not knowing the ropes—I went to some of the big dressmaking establishments after the openings expecting to make immediate selections. But none of the Parisian couturiers carry stock on hand like our stores do. A model displays the various gowns (which have been made to fit her) and if you like such and such a number, you have it made to your order. Since I had planned to visit most of the European cities in a short seven weeks, you can see that remaining in Paris for too long a time was out of the question.

"Last year, while I made my coast to coast dancing tour, I was kept too busy to think of buying new clothes. But I set aside my weekly budget—now grown much larger—for a Parisian shopping spree when the time came. And what a shopping orgy it was!

"In speaking of Paris, please don't imagine that I am against home production and home consumption. With me, it is a case of necessity. I have to be well groomed and have very little time for shopping. Thus, when I go abroad for a yearly vacation—it is simple to make selections that will cover me for most of the year. If the hands of time were put backward, and I were to find myself again a wage-earner on a limited income, I would be as happy choosing my American-made dresses as I was in the old days.

"But in my selection of dresses—

FILM STAR WRITES TEN COMMANDMENTS CAMPING FOR RECORD

Ernest Torrence to be Seen at the Palace this Week Other Good Bills

Ernest Torrence, who will appear at the Palace Theatre on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 10 and 11, by special request has furnished the Record with a short communication for the special Theatre section of the paper for this week. Torrence wrote of camping and vacation trips, giving only a list of ten commandments of the modern camper. The picture, "Mantrap" in which Torrence appears this week at the Palace, is a camping and vacationist picture, and we judge this the reason of Torrence's subject. The commandments by Torrence are as follows:

1. Pick your companions carefully.
2. See that the equipment is adequate, easily handled, and not too bulky. Be fully informed as to the nature of the country.
3. Don't take anything unless it's absolutely needed.
4. It's essential that everyone in the party do his or her share of the work.

from the "lay of my $4 evening gown to my latest Lelong model—I have been careful to avoid those of doubtful coloring, line, and fit. I study myself before a mirror and dress to emphasize my good points—rather than to launch a new fashion, no matter how popular it may later prove. Remember, the best dressed woman in any group is the one who breathes smartness rather than the one who shouts it aloud."

CANADIAN WOODS STORY AT PALACE FRIDAY-SAT.

Story by a Famous Author Filmed in Great Woods of Canada.

An unusual North woods picture is to be seen at the New Palace Theatre Friday and Saturday, when the famous story by Sinclair Lewis is to be shown under the film title of "Mantrap." This is distinctly a new kind of Canadian woods story. For one thing, it has no Northwest Mounted Police. Secondly, it deals with the woods in mid summer, when they are the paradise of campers and vacationers, and not with three feet of snow. A distinctly novel type story is presented, with Clara Bow as the girl, and Ernest Torrence and

5. Don't be bossy and try to run the camp. Experienced campers often make life very unpleasant for "tenderfeet." The "expert" who makes life miserable for others, is vividly pictured in "Mantrap."
6. Extinguish all fires. Douse them with water before leaving. Be careful of sparks from cigarettes, pipes or cigars.
7. Make it a point to know the district's game laws before doing any promiscuous shooting.
8. Pick the camping site carefully. Select a spot near a stream but be sure it's not inviting to insects. Mosquito netting should be a part of your outfit.
9. Take pains with all drinking water. Avoid typhoid by boiling it. And finally—
10. Do the things you want, when you want,—then let the other fellow do the same.

Commercial Lighting—

Are You a Merchant or a Storekeeper?

A number of leading merchants were asked the question, "What has better lighting done for you," and here are their answers reduced to the simplest form.

Better lighting adds attractiveness and value to even the best merchandise.

Better lighting shows the true value of merchandise thus reducing the returned goods problem.

Better lighting creates an atmosphere of cheerfulness which affects customers and clerks alike.

Better lighting overcomes competition by attracting trade from poorly lighted stores.

Better lighting makes it possible to use every foot of floor space and eliminate dingy corners.

ALLAN DWAN'S "PADLOCKED" COMING TO PALACE SEPT. 15

To those of the older generation, who view with alarm the terrifying manners and morals of the younger generation, we heartily recommend a visit to the Palace Sept 15 and 16, when Allan Dwan's new Paramount drama, "Padlocked," makes its local showing.

For this honest portrayal of a modern American family reveals the fact that lack of sympathy and understanding on the part of parents is driving the youth of our country to the jazz life. "Padlocked" is a picturization of the widely read Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Rex Beach. It was adapted by Becky Gardiner and James Shelley Hamilton, and features an imposing cast, headed by Lois Moran, Louise Dresser and Noah Beery. Florence Turner, Helen Jerome Eddy, Allan Simpson, Charles Lane and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. are among the important supporting players.

The central character in the story is a lovely, high-spirited girl, who rebels against her father's narrow-minded attitude and efforts to stifle her natural ambitions, and runs away from home to seek a career on Broadway. As a cabaret dancer, she attracts the attention of the millionaire society set and becomes involved in a love triangle. An unexpected crisis develops when her father demands that she return home, and the subsequent vents are charged with suspense and emotional appeal.

The entire production has been lavishly set, brightly and fittingly costumed, and under Mr. Dwan's direction very colorfully and smoothly produced.

First Bale 1926 Cotton Ginned Thursday P. M.

The first bale of the new cotton crop was brought to Colorado Thursday afternoon of last week by Luther Long who grew the cotton on the R. N. Gary farm, eight miles south of Colorado. The bale, which weighed 452 pounds was ginned by the Farmers Gin company, and classed strict middling, and was bought by J. M. Thomas, active vice president of the Colorado National bank, for 20 cents per pound. The business men of Colorado gave Mr. Long, the grower, a premium of about $100.

REAL SUCCESS STORY BE SHOWN 8 AND 9 From Dancer to Movie Star Path Taken by Former Follies Headliner

Gilda Gray, the latest stage luminary to be attracted to the Kleig lights, and whose first Paramount starring vehicle, "Aloma of the South Seas," comes to the New Palace Wed. and Thurs. Sept. 8 and 9, has lead a life which reads like a tale Horatio Alger might have concocted.

Born in Poland, Miss Gray came to this country at the tender age of seven. A cabin with silver and gold trimmings? No—and again—No! Gilda made her first ocean trip in the steerage.

She began her career dancing in a Milwaukee cabaret. Later she went to Chicago and from there to New York. That was in 1919. Strange as it may seem, Gilda almost starved. One day, dancing at a demobilization camp, Sophie Tucker saw her.

Through Miss Tucker's intervention, Miss Gray appeared at a Sunday night Winter Garden concert. She made such a hit that the Shuberts engaged her for the "Gaities of 1919." That was the time of the actors' strike. So once more, Gilda was jobless.

During this enforced idleness, Gil Boag contracted her to dance in his restaurants. Later, as a star in the "Follies," she introduced the shimmy to the American public.

The rest is history. In a recent tour of the country's leading theatres, Gilda Gray broke twenty consecutive records. That's going some. As the crowning glory in a series of triumphs, Miss Gray was created a motion star by Paramount. Warner Baxter, Percy Marmont, Julianne Johnston and William Powell are featured along with her in "Aloma of the South Seas."

Story in Brief

Aloma, most beautiful of the native girls who dance at the Blue Pearl Inn on Paradise Island, delights in tormenting her native lover, Nuitane. To get rid of men who look at Aloma too ardently, Nuitane takes them for a sail and then places all responsibility for their loss on the sharks which "prefer white meat to brown."

Bob Holden, an American staying at the Inn, has been taking to drink because his girl, whom he had left behind on going to war, had married his best pal. When Red Mallory, a dishonest trader, annoys Aloma and hurts her old grandfather, Bob defends her. She swears allegiance to the first white man who has actually fought for her.

Andrew Taylor, uncle of Sylvia, the girl who forgot Bob, learns that she and her husband are on their way to the island. He sends Bob to his plantation. Aloma insists on going, even though Nuitane objects.

Under her careful treatment, Bob soon recovers his normal health. Red Mallory insinuates that she should be married to Holden. The girl, never having given it a thought, now sets out to lure him. After much hesitation, not being able to resist her, he agrees to take the girl to the mission next morning. Wearing his ring she leaves the hut.

Aloma proudly displays the ring at the Inn. Andy brings his niece and Van Templeton to the same place. Van, a sullen flirt, is attracted to Aloma and at the very first chance, takes her ring along with a kiss. She is very enraged and shouts something about "Bob Holden." It is then that Sylvia realizes Van has tricked her into marriage, by saying Bob had died.

The natives start their marriage ceremonies. Nuitane, enraged, tries to get Bob into his canoe, but Bob is called back to see Sylvia, who has arrived at the cottage. After explanations have been made, they realize they still love each other. Van comes, and makes feeble signs of friendship. Then, Aloma and the wedding party enter. She recognizes Sylvia and glows over her. Crushed with grief, Sylvia leaves, but Bob tries to catch her.

Van says he is tired of Sylvia and would now like Aloma. In a moment of drunken boastfulness, he tells Bob how he tricked Sylvia into marrying him. Bob furiously drags him to beg his wife's forgiveness.

Aloma realizes Bob has fallen into Nuitane's trap, when she sees the three start across the lagoon in the midst of a terrific storm. Nuitane allows the water to enter his boat. In repentance, Van tells Nuitane Bob is in love with Sylvia and not Aloma. The boat capsizes and the sharks rush for the white men.

Aloma rushes through the rain to tell Sylvia her husband and Bob have drowned. The two women are drawn together in a common bond of sympathy. Suddenly Bob appears and announces that Nuitane allowed Van to drown in saving him.

Nuitane is well pleased with his strategy. Bob and Sylvia return to the States while Aloma resumes her child-like teasing of Nuitane.

AUTOMOBILE RACING AT THE WEST TEXAS FAIR

The West Texas Fair is offering a big Automobile Racing Program during the week of the Fair, September 20 to 25, 1926. The track is recognized as one of the best dirt tracks in America. The race meet held at this track July 5th fully demonstrated the value of the extensive improvements made during the early part of the year. Drivers from all parts of the country were loud in their praise of the high banked turns and the firm, dustless condition of the track. Frank Lockhart lowered his own record for two laps around the oval to 65 seconds.

Mr. C. J. Jones, Secretary of the West Texas Fair, has had many requests for entry blanks from prominent drivers and confidently believes that the list of entries for the two days, September 22nd and 24th, will be the best ever assembled in West Texas. A purse of $6,900 is being offered for six events each day. The program is so arranged that rebuilt stock cars will be allowed to compete with the high-powered, special built thoroughbreds of the automobile racing world. Racing for the love of the game and for whatever of fame and fortune that may come their way, these daring, reckless drivers of converted stock cars furnish real thrills and from their ranks come the stars of tomorrow.

Active preparations are under way at the grounds of the West Texas Fair and the visitor this year will be greeted with many surprising changes and a class of entertainment far surpassing former Fairs. Exhibit space will be crowded and the numerous entries already received bespeak the unusually prosperous condition of West Texas.

Just look at her now—if ever a

In attractive Spanish architecture, to the dressing rooms behind stage, every feature of this theatre will represent the best obtainable in beauty as expressed through the artist's touch. Specially manufactured draperies, curtains, etching and other details which are to enter into the complete interior scheme will form a happy combination of beauty.

The program for the opening Monday evening is under direction of Mrs. Dixon, with the cooperation of several friends. The main feature of the program is the famous United Artists picture, "The Black Pirate," with Douglas Fairbanks playing the leading role. This picture is said to be one of the most beautiful and sensational pictures ever filmed, since the entire picture is reproduced in natural colors. It is said Douglas Fairbanks, the noted screen star, worked for three years on the production of this film, which was only recently released through United Artists. Other stars to be seen in the picture are Tempe Pigott, Sam De Grasse, Chas. Belcher, Miss Billie Dove, Donald Crisp, Anders Randolph, and Charles Stevens. According to Mrs. Dixon, the picture was one of the most difficult to film, and the expense in filming the picture, although held down to the minimum by the producer, amounted to enormous sums. In filming "The Black Pirate," it was necessary to build, all told, eleven ships or parts of ships, not counting fifteen 'tween decks interiors, and a fleet of twelve small boats. Fourteen picked sail riggers were engaged by Mr. Fairbanks' agents in various seaports of the world and brought to Hollywood. Most of them were Norwegians descended from the hardy Norse mariners. Since the color scheme registers differently in sunlight and under artificial light, it was necessary to have two complete sets of costumes for "The Black Pirate," one for interiors and one for exteriors. Among the properties for which Mr. Fairbanks' purchasing agents combed the seaport cities was an entire carload of anchors, windlasses, masts, rigging, sextants, and other accessories of 17th Century seafaring. In color photography, make-up is such an important matter that it was necessary for two experts from Boston to remain in Hollywood from the first to the last scene of "The Black Pirate." One of the ships used in the picture is the famous old Cape Horn clipper, The Llewelyn J. Morse. It is interesting to note that with hundreds of men in the picture,

LEE BROS. TRAINED ANIMAL SHOW TO BE HERE SEPT. 7TH

The remarkable and complete collection of trained wild animal actors, comprising the most important specimens of zoology, assembled in the wild beasts' performance of Lee Bros. Wild Animal Show, which will exhibit in Colorado on Tuesday, Sept. 7, has never been equaled in the history of the world. No corner of the globe has been considered too remote to make this collection the most unique on earth.

Chief among these wonderful creatures is a hybrid lion-tiger, a magnificent animal of feline grace and terrible power, with all the peculiarities of both lion and tiger, but wearing the tiger's stripes upon the lion's skin. One of the most important groups is composed of two lions, three Bengal tigers, two India leopards, two panthers, two enormous Polar bears, and the singular hybrid lion-tiger. Here, too, we are confronted with the incredible spectacle of six different species and the afore-mentioned remarkable inter-mixture of two of them, each naturally the instinctive, implacable foe of the others, and some of them hitherto considered by the best masters of zoology as wholly untamable, performing together in a colossal steel-girt arena, which absolutely insures the safety of the public, their bearing toward their trainer and one another being as amiable and considerate as characterizes the intercourse of an assemblage of human beings at a social function.

Imperceptibly directed by a single trainer and of seemingly happy accord and eager unity, these formerly dreaded kings and queens of the seething jungle, the howling wilderness and the remote, inaccessible frozen wilds of the poles build their sky scraping pyramids, balance with a skill rivaling that of the human acrobat upon barrels, play rollicking games of see-saw, with courteous consideration for the luxurious comforts of their masters form soft living couches of themselves and invite his confidence by opening their terrible red-blood mouths for the temporary insertion of his trusting head.

It would require pages to tell in advance all the startling novelties introduced in Lee Bros. Wild Animal Show, which, besides the many trained wild animal features, has domestic animals, vastly superior to any organization now traveling.

Percy Marmont the men. This is a Paramount picture and is one of their latest and most expensive pictures. In order to give Record readers more detailed information on the picture we give the facts on the making of the picture, as follows:

Director

Victor Fleming. Very little need be said about Victor Fleming. Remember such big pictures as "Adventure," "The Devil's Cargo," "Lord Jim," and above all—that magnificent production, "The Blind Goddess." Fleming films never lag or drag. "Mantrap" is his best yet.

Featured Players

Ernest Torrence. What can be written about this fine actor that has not already been said? His popularity throughout the country is immense. Torrence has won a solid place in the hearts of American citizens. After playing in "The Covered Wagon," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Pony Express," and "The Wanderer," (to list just a few) Mr. Torrence is of the opinion that with the possible exception of "Bill Jackson," he has never had a better role than that of the backwoods trapper in "Mantrap."

Clara Bow, personification of the flapper. Always intriguing, Clara has to her credit some of the past year's most interesting characterizations. She took "Dancing Mothers" and "The Runaway" by storm. Here is a real actress—not merely a pretty girl. True, she is beautiful—but above all—hers is the magnetism and appeal that gets over like a million dollars on the screen.

Percy Marmont's appeal is unique. There is nothing of the conventional leading man about him. His performances are always distinctive. Women are fascinated. Men like him. Marmont has a charm of manner in his acting and outlook on life that makes him refreshing. "Aloma of the South Seas" was his last picture.

Author

Sinclair Lewis, the most publicized writer of the decade, wrote "Mantrap" as a successor to "Main Street," "Babbalanza," and "Arrowsmith." Possessed of a wonderful sense of humor and gentle satire, he is above all a student of human nature and a creator of something different in powerful drama. "Mantrap" was serialized in Collier's Weekly and made a big sensation.

Scenario

Hildegarde Hellbron prepared the scenarios on "So Big" and "The Dreammaker From Paris," in addition to "Mantrap."

Cameraman

James Howe, photographer of "The King on Main Street" and a score of other perfectly photographed pictures, "shot" the latest Fleming production.

Locale

The Canadian woods and lakes.

"Mantrap" is a drama of two men and a woman. All come from different environments and stations in life, but are thrown together into a strange relationship in the depths of the Canadian woods. The picture abounds in thrill—a spectacular forest fire providing a big punch. Its humor is brilliant, keen and trenchant, done as only Sinclair Lewis knows how.

Synopsis

Ralph Prescott, a young New York bachelor lawyer, hates women because he has listened to their empty stories when they seek a divorce. He doesn't believe there is such a thing as love, and loathes the sight of rouged lips, powdered nose and silken hair.

To escape them, Ralph agrees to go on a camping trip with Mr. E. Wesson, Woodbury, sales manager of the Twinkle-Toe Stocking Company. They plan to make their headquarters at Mantap Landing in the Canadian woods where men are men, and women—squaws. Prescott is a tenderfoot and Woodbury, the know-it-all camper, soon becomes disgusted with his pampered companion. At the same time, Ralph is thoroughly bored. They have a fight and are separated by Joe Easter, a veteran woodsman. The two antagonists agree to go their own ways. Easter takes Prescott to his trading post at Mantap.

There, Ralph meets Joe's wife Alverna. She is a pretty, provocative young girl, formerly a manicurist, whom Easter met on a trip to Minneapolis. She immediately sets her charms to work. At first he disregards the flirtation.

While the friendship with Easter increases, Ralph's resistance against Alverna weakens. Joe trustfully leaves his wife in Prescott's care, hoping he can cure her of the flirting habit.

Ralph finally decides that the only thing to do is—leave Mantap. Starting off in his canoe, Alverna pleads with him, asking to be taken back to civilization. When he refuses, she threatens to walk. Prescott tells her to jump in. Their boat is seen by an Indian.

It is not long before the girl has herself in Ralph's arms. He swears that he will ask Easter to divorce her. Next morning it is found that the Indian guide has stolen the canoe. Rescue comes from the sky in the form of a hydroplane taking workers to a forest fire. The aviator leaves food and a folding boat. Alverna flirts with him and Ralph scolds her for it. They quarrel—just as Joe arrives on the scene. She promptly tells him of their plans, and Prescott is forced to say he has agreed to take her to New York.

Easter asserts his responsibility by saying he will send her to Minneapolis. The girl makes her own decision by getting into the boat, and telling them they can both "jump in the lake."

The young lawyer starts for New York with the knowledge that women, at times, can be quite interesting.

Later, friends are consoling Joe on his "good riddance of bad rubbish" when Alverna bursts in, promising everlasting faithfulness. The husband is delighted until he sees her smiling over his shoulder at a handsome uniformed man. He realizes that she will always be the same—a problem and a coquette.

Mission Presents Good

Picture Sept. 13 and 14

An old, old story, always new. A story that never loses its interest is the story of "The Cave Man," production of "The Cave Man," starring Marie Prevost and Matt Moore, Sept. 13 and 14 at the Mission Theatre.

Its basic situation has existed ever since there were civilizations growing effete and decadent, and primitive barbarians longing to overwhelm the soft children of luxury and take their refinements for their own enjoyment. So we find Myra Gaylord (enacted by Marie Prevost) the scion of a blue blooded first family of great means, surfeited with luxury and longing for a thrill which the men of her set who surround her cannot give her.

She sees that the people passing in the street below her luxurious apartment seem to be getting a joy from life which she lacks. In a spirit of adventure, she tears a fifty-dollar bill in half, and attaching a note promising the other half to the finder when he delivers it (provided he is a man), throws it into the street. Here it escapes attention until Mike Smagg (played by Matt Moore) delivers a load of coal and finds it.

His uncouth, grimy brawny person delights her, and so she buys him the fittings of a gentleman, has him cleaned up, teaches him some manners, and then introduces him to her dilettante friends as a socialist from London. They are greatly taken with his "eccentricities," all except Brewster Bradford (played by John Patrick) who sees in him a menace to his own plans. After some hesitancy, Hedda Homer, as Mrs. Van Drem, the leader of Myra's set, accepts Smagg. Her daughter Dolly, portrayed by Phyllis Haver, takes a great fancy to him.

Myra will not admit to herself that she is falling in love with her toy, and so petulantly advises him to marry Dolly. He answers her with a declaration of love and a kiss, which precipitates a quarrel. Declaring that he will marry Dolly to spite her, Mike receives the reply that Dolly would not consider him if she knew him to be a coal heaver, and so he wagers she will. He loses the wager.

Jeers and contempt greet him upon his return to his former surroundings. Several stiff drinks convince him that he can lick the world, and so he proceeds to do so, ending up with Bradford and spanking Dolly at Myra's apartment. Then he breaks in upon Myra in her boudoir, and when she refuses to marry him in compensation for all the misery and unhappiness she has caused him, he carries her off to the nearest church. A caveman to the finish—and she enjoys it.

"The Cave Man," based on the Gilette Burgess story, was adapted to the screen by Darryl Francis Zanuck. Lewis Milestone directed the production.
