Richards hasn't ruled out debate

AUSTIN (AP) — Ann Richards' campaign says the Democratic gubernatorial candidate hasn't ruled out debating opponent Jim Mattox. But she hasn't agreed to attend any debates, either, press secretary Monte Williams acknowledges.

"We're not ducking any debates. We had other things on the schedule — rallies, events people have been invited to — that conflicted," Williams said.

Mattox on Tuesday accused Ms. Richards of using illegal drugs when she was "a 46-year-old elected official" and said that's one reason she is dodging debates before their April 10 runoff election.

"There is sufficient information to cause me to believe that she needs to come forward and discuss these issues in a public forum," Mattox told a news conference.

"She doesn't want to answer simple 'yes or no' questions about cocaine, marijuana and hallucinogens. She must answer what she used, how much, for how long, a[nd] who supplied them," Mattox sa[id] although he refused to provide any evidence of drug use.

Ms. Richards, 56, had little to say about Mattox's allegation during a campaign appearance in McAllen. Asked by The Associated Press if she wanted to respond to him, she replied, "No."

In debates and elsewhere, Ms. Richards has repeatedly refused to give a yes-or-no answer when asked if she ever used illegal drugs. A recovering alcoholic, Ms. Richards has said she hasn't used a "mood-altering chemical" in 10 years and that she never knowingly committed a felony.

"This campaign has taken on the predictable form that Jim Mattox campaigns always take," Ms. Richards said Tuesday. "Whatever trash he can throw to try to detract from his poor performance he will do that, and I expect it to continue until election day."

Mattox, the state attorney general, said Ms. Richards is refusing to debate him because she doesn't want to face the drug issue and questions about her financ[es].

He said she refused to participate in two televised debates proposed for Dallas and Houston. He challenged her to participate in those and two more "no-holds-barred" debates before the state Capitol press corps in Austin.

"I will appear anytime, anywhere," Mattox told news reporters. "Ann Richards is off on the run. She's hiding. That's what's happening right now. She's trying to stay out of y'all's way and my way."

In McAllen, Ms. Richards said she was willing to debate and blamed any failure to schedule one so far on her campaign staff.

"If we can work that (debates) into the schedule, that's great with me. Frankly, I don't know what's on that schedule. But there are some scheduled (campaign) events where people have bought tickets" and she must appear, she said.

Ms. Richards said she didn't fear a one-on-one format. "I spend most of my time answering his ridiculous questions anyway."

CAF isn't facing deadline

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland-Odessa delegation seeking to bring the Confederate Air Force to West Texas did not issue a March 30 ultimatum to the CAF board, despite rumors to the contrary.

"It's not true," said Ed Jones, a CAF colonel, Midland banker and spokesman for the group that has put together a $19 million package of inducements to lure the CAF to Midland.

Reports from San Antonio, which is competing with Midland to be the home base the CAF, suggested that Midland's financial incentives would "go elsewhere" if the CAF 11-member general staff did not decide on a new CAF headquarters by Friday.

Not so, said Jones.

Rather, Jones did dispatch a letter to the CAF's board of directors before the staff's March 24 meeting at which the staff narrowed the runoff from six contenders to Midland and San Antonio.

The Midland delegation provided an update on the city's proposal and a copy of a City Council resolution which detailed and sanctioned the offer and authorized the city to enter a 50-year-lease on a 52-acre site at Midland International Airport set aside for the CAF.

"We just said we hope they approve the (Midland) deal at their meeting," Jones said. "We went over some history in our original deal."

Instead, at that meeting, the staff considered the six offers, discarded four of them, and narrowed the choice sites to Midland and San Antonio, since those two "best fit the long-range objectives" of the CAF, noted Ralph Royce, CAF executive director.

The governing general staff, which is headed by Chief of Staff Joe Mabee of Midland, will tour the proposed site at Midland International Airport on April 6 and the proposed San Antonio site adjoining Kelly Air Force Base the next day. The staff had planned to visit a week earlier, but not all 11 board members were available for the tours then.

First lady praises Williams' apology

AUSTIN (AP) — Barbara Bush says an insensitive remark by Clayton Williams won't deter her and President Bush from campaigning on behalf of the Republican gubernatorial nominee.

Mrs. Bush, in Austin to be inducted into the Texas Women's Hall of Fame, said she is proud Williams has apologized for a remark he made over the weekend about rape.

At a cattle roundup Saturday in West Texas, Williams compared the cold, wet weather delaying the day's event to rape, saying, "If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it." Williams has apologized, saying the remark was "insensitive and had no place at the campfire or in any setting."

Lithuanian police won't give up guns

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuanian police today defied Kremlin orders to surrender shotguns and rifles turned in by citizens, but Soviet authorities warned that they will restore "law and order" in the Baltic republic.

In a continuing show of force, Soviet paratroopers today guarded the republic's Communist Party headquarters.

On Tuesday, Soviet troops seized the headquarters and apprehended deserters in raids on two hospitals in the first Soviet use of force of the confrontation that began when Lithuania declared itself independent 17 days ago.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis condemned the actions and again urged Western nations to speak out against Moscow. "Is the West willing to sell Lithuania to the Soviet Union again?" he said Tuesday.

In Washington, Bush administration officials refused to criticize the Soviet military's use of force on Tuesday. "We simply don't feel inflammatory language is helpful," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Vilnius was calm overnight, with no reports of violence or of Soviet soldiers taking over any more buildings.

The paratroopers guarding the party headquarters removed their riot gear today and no longer carried automatic rifles.

Lithuanians defied Soviet orders to turn over hunting rifles and shotguns. Lithuanian Interior Ministry spokesman Yaroslav Prokopovich said only about 1,000

New flood plain maps satisfy city, developer

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Mike Cook has waited 1½ years to find out whether his $2 million Saddle Club Lakes Estates project sits in a developmental death zone known as a flood way. Now he knows it doesn't.

Under the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers 100-year flood plain maps issued in September 1988, Cook's northwest Midland development was deemed uninhabitable.

"They basically condemned it the first time around," said Cook, president of Magnatex Corp. "The maps do not allow for any building to occur on those lots."

But after more than a year of haggling with the U.S. Army Corps over the maps, the city of Midland received its new maps Monday. Midland City Council reviewed them Tuesday.

Harvey Hansen, the city's director of engineering and traffic, said the maps show great reductions in the areas which fell in the flood ways and 100-year flood zones of the 1988 maps.

Flood ways generally fall in and near draws, creeks, streams, lakes and other geographical features which either carry or hold water. The 100-year flood plains are areas in which have a hundreth of a chance to flood on any day.

The new maps will allow area developers, who have had to put multimillion-dollar projects on hold, to forge ahead with their projects, Hansen said.

Cook said all that will be needed to develop his Saddle Club Lakes Estates lots, which fall within the 100-year flood zone on the new maps, is dirt to raise the foundation from six inches to a foot.

"The bad part has been that the process to get the new maps has

'Buffer' between homes, new school sought

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Initially concerned that a new junior high school would destroy their rural lifestyle, some northeast Midland residents seemed satisfied Tuesday that school officials will at least listen to their concerns.

"They (the trustees) were much more receptive than I thought they would be," said Paul Thorpe, 423 Carol Lane.

Thorpe and other neighbors asked Midland Independent School District trustees Tuesday for a "buffer zone" between their property and the new school. They also asked that their neighborhood streets not be extended to provide access to the school site.

Board members agreed to ask architect Terry Harden to design a site which includes a buffer zone and access from Loop 250 and Texas 349 rather than from the residential area.

The neighborhood, between Pine Needle Lane and Acorn Lane, is bounded by Solomon Lane on the north and Carol Lane on the south. Preliminary site plans released by MISD showed the school grounds bordering Carol Lane property. Plans also show Pine Needle and Acorn lanes, which are now dead-ends, extended to the campus.

Doug Manz, a five-year Carol Lane resident, said there are 25 to 30 houses in the neighborhood, which borders the northern edge of the proposed school site.

"Almost 100 percent of us are concerned," Manz said. "When we moved out there, we moved because of the neighborhood. It's like living in the country out there — it's very peaceful."

Manz said many area residents own horses and other livestock and allow their children to play in the street because traffic levels are so low.

"We think it's very disruptive and dangerous to use our neighborhood to bring this traffic through," Manz said.

"We think we need an area that goes 100 to 200 yards south of Carol Lane that is some sort of transition between that low-density usage and the school," he added.

Trustees said they thought a buffer zone could be included in the school site. A board committee will meet with several area residents on Friday to discuss a buffer plan.

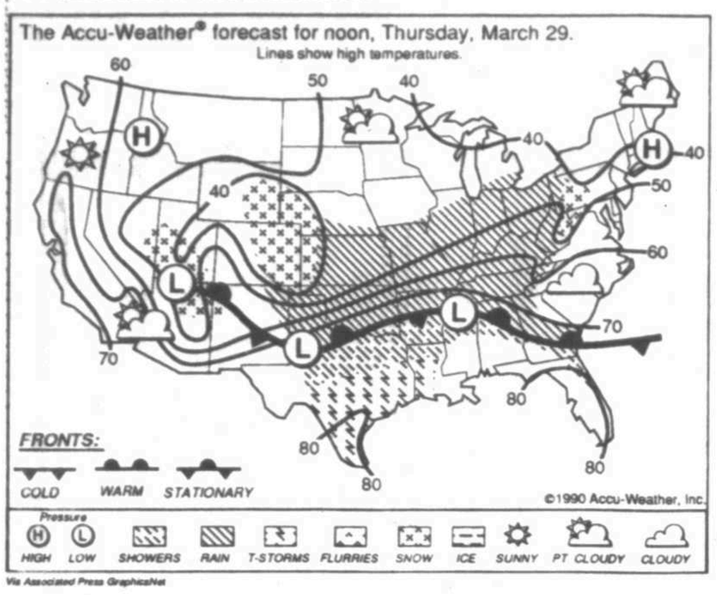

"I'll be glad to sit down with these folks and try to work out ... a site location that will benefit both the school district and the folks of Midland," said District 7 trustee Ken Marks, who represents that area. "I'd like to see it developed where you could keep Pine Needle dead-ended and Acorn Lane dead-ended."

Trustee George Staley said he thought an agreement between

Low in 40s, cloudiness likely

Staff Report

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms are forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low is expected in the upper 40s and winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Thursday is expected to be much the same with partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The high will be in the middle 70s and winds will shift to the southwest at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 54 was 41 degrees cooler than the record high of 95 set for that date in 1971. The overnight low of 48 was 29 degrees warmer than the record low of 19 set for this date in 1931.

Showers and thunderstorms, including some that may reach severe levels, are expected across most of Texas through Thursday.

CAF: Letter updates Midland offer

(From 1A)

On the staff are Mabee, a Midland rancher, oilman, aviator, airplane restorer, and philanthropist; Dr. Hal Fenner of Hobbs, N.M., Lloyd Nolen of Harlingen, Marvin "Lefty" Gardner of Austin, James Kaster of Austin, Sam Poss of Houston, Bob Austin of Harlingen, Dennis Devine of Little Rock, Ark., David Dawkins of Fountain Hills, Ariz., C.L. "Casey" Kay of Abilene, and Walter Braun of California. Nolen and Gardner are cofounders of the CAF, which is dedicated to restoring, maintaining and flying the vintage aircraft.

'It's the only 'real deal' on the table," Jones said of Midland's offer.

Last August, after 10 months of preparatory work, the Midland-Odessa group submitted an incentive proposal inviting the CAF to relocate in West Texas.

The CAF, currently headquartered at Rebel Field at Valley International Airport at Harlingen, was boxed in at South Texas airport, with no room to expand. In addition, the World War II-era "warbirds" were exposed to the corrosive action of salt air on the aging bombers, pursuit aircraft, transports and liaison aircraft in the CAF Ghost Squadron of more than 140 airplanes.

After Midland tendered its offer, other communities submitted competing bids to the CAF.

San Antonio is offering a $23-million package, which Jones said is, unlike Midland's offer, steeped in debt.

"The San Antonio offer is a 100 percent debt, which," said Jones, "to me is 100 percent risk. Our deal is no debt, no cost, no risk."

Dale Ullrich, senior vice president of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce which is coordinating that city's bid for the CAF, today said that the $23-million package is $3 million up-front money and then a $20 million offer to build CAF facilities.

"That's based on sitting down with the Confederate Air Force and laying out what they want — developing a plan with them and doing it, not to exceed $20-million," Ullrich said.

The funds would be generated through industrial revenue bonds but at "no liability to the Confederate Air Force," Ullrich said.

The money would come from admission fees to the CAF museum.

The CAF "doesn't have to sign any liens or put anything up as collateral on this deal," Ullrich said. The bonds would be backed by the city of San Antonio, he said.

"We've made them a deal similar to most financing packaging," he said.

"They would get some much cash money up front ($3 million) out of our revenue stream," he said.

And contrary to rumors in San Antonio and Midland, San Antonio would not lodge lawsuits against the CAF if it selects Midland.

"Those of us making this deal aren't going to sue," Ullrich said. "The city is not going to sue them. The Chamber of Commerce is not going to sue them. We've heard those rumors, too. We've heard if it comes to San Antonio, people (in Midland) are going to sue. In the age we live in, everyone thinks you can sue for any reason." However, Ullrich said, "I don't believe anybody can sue them over this thing."

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas today noted that the Midland-Odessa delegation had to seek renewal of grants, including $1 million from the Abell-Hanger Foundation and $1 million from the Mabee Foundation, to help lure the CAF to Midland.

"Some of these commitments were running out," Thomas said. "They have been renewed once. He (Jones) just wanted to call it their attention."

Carroll is positive about Midland's offer to win over the CAF.

"I've been in business long enough to know that you haven't got a deal until you've got them on the dotted line," Thomas said.

"I think it's a good challenge," Thomas said of the Midland-San Antonio competition. "Obviously, we have different pluses to offer than they do."

MISD: Group finds board 'receptive' the district and neighborhood residents could be reached.

"They're taxpayers just like we are and I think we should do everything we can to accommodate them," he said.

Harden, a Fort Worth architect retained by MISD to design the new school, said he can alter the site designs with residential concerns in mind.

"We are still in the developmental stage of buying this property," Harden said. "We think that...there are a lot of things you can do there. You don't have to make these through streets."

Jim Massie, a 10-year resident of the area, accused trustees of "selling out" their constituents by placing the new school at the northern site. But he was conciliatory after the meeting.

"I feel better about the situation with the school than when I came here this evening," Massie said. "I can't fault the school district for what they've done, because of the donation of the land. I certainly feel like now the board is willing to work with us."

The Abell-Hanger Foundation donated a 75 percent interest in the 100-acre tract at the Loop 250-Texas 349 intersection.

Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxilairy services, said the district will profit from the sale of land left over after the 30-acre school is built.

In other action Tuesday, trustees approved a plan to begin renovation of Washington, South and Sam Houston elementary schools in the 1990-91 school year.

BUSH: Support not threatened

(From 1A)

Mrs. Bush said Williams is "quite a person to speak up immediately and apologize and say he made a mistake. I'm proud of him and that's the last I'm going to say about it."

Mrs. Bush was inducted into the Texas Women's Hall of Fame during its sixth annual awards ceremony Tuesday night along with the founder of the Kilgore Rangerettes and six others. It is sponsored by the Governor's Commission for Women.

The commission advises the governor on the needs and concerns of Texas women and helps the governor select women for appointive office.

"I've always been proud to be a Texan and to be a woman, but never more so than I am tonight," Mrs. Bush told the crowd of about 400.

The first lady also received a special achievement award for community service in Texas and throughout the nation. From now on, that annual award will be known as the "Barbara Bush Award," it was announced.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements and his wife, Rita, were hosts.

Others inducted Tuesday night were Margaret Swan Forbes of San Antonio for athletics; Terese Tarlton Hershey of Houston and Jane A. Wetzel of Dallas for civic leadership; Dr. Judith Craven of Houston and Lucia Rede Madrid of Redford for education; and L. Ruth Guy of Dallas for professional leadership.

Gussie Nell Davis, 83, founded the first dance-drill team at Kilgore College in 1940, and directed the 65-member Rangerettes for 40 years. Ms. Davis, of Kilgore, is the 1989 inductee into the hall of fame in the arts category.

Mrs. Bush is scheduled to visit a child-care center and a literacy program in Dallas today.

Court rules on death sentence issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A state appeals court may uphold a murderer's death sentence even if the sentencing jury wrongly considered some adverse evidence, a deeply divided Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices ruled that state appeals courts are empowered to reweigh aggravating and mitigating evidence in capital punishment cases without sending them back for new jury determinations.

But the court stopped short of upholding the death sentence of Chandler Clemons.

Clemons was convicted of killing a delivery man after robbing him of $5 in cash and a few pizzas in Vicksburg, Miss.

been slow," Cook said. "We've lost lot sales because of that."

However, Hansen said the new maps, which are still being reviewed by the city, will not be good news for some property owners.

The maps still show more areas falling within flood plains and flood ways than the pre-1988 maps, he said. Property owners with federally backed mortgages will have to pay higher insurance rates, he said.

It probably will not be until the fall when the new rates go into effect, Hansen said.

Before the new maps are finalized, they must be reviewed by the city, he said. The city probably will not protest the maps as it did in 1988, he said.

"Our first opinion is that they're pretty much in line with what we calculated," Hansen said. "There's a tremendous difference from the first maps we received. The actual flow was reduced 60 percent."

For example, in the Midland Draw, which runs through Saddle Club Lakes Estates, the estimated flow rate was reduced from 10,000 cubic feet per second to 4,000 feet per second.

In addition, the figure for the "antecedent moisture condition," or the how much moisture exists in the soil, was also reduced. This means the soil has more ability to absorb water.

Estimated flow rates and moisture conditions also were reduced for other draws around the city. With the soil soaking up more water and the draws having less flow, the size of the flood plains and flood zones could be reduced, Hansen said.

After the city concludes its review, the maps will be sent to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which will study the maps and determine flood insurance rates. Rates will depend on depths within the flood plains, Hansen said.

The maps should come back for City Council to approve in the fall, Hansen said.

The only area the city may want reconsidered is a neighborhood south of Wadley Avenue and lying between Ward and I streets, Hansen said. The section lies in a shallow 100-year flood zone, he said.

The city will use a computer to more accurately calculate elevations in that area, he said.

In other action at Tuesday's meeting:

- Mayor Carroll Thomas presented a proclamation honoring the West Texas Aerobatic Club for its efforts to restore the Pliska airplane, which now hangs from a ceiling in Midland International Airport. The club spent 15 months restoring the aircraft. A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held for it Oct. 25, 1989.
- City Council approved submitting an application to the state for funds to continue the Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program.
- Councilmen authorized using $40,000 in Community Development Block Grant money for housing rehabilitation and demolition, trimming weedy lots and the Casa De Amigos meals program.

BALTIC: Soviets say they'll restore order weapons have been given to police, but the police were not turning them over to the Red Army.

Police Capt. Jonas Dervinis said: "Lithuania has its own constitution, and we are working to enforce the law of Lithuania."

He said he did not know if Interior Ministry officials from Moscow would attempt to enforce President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's order for confiscation of any weapons not turned in voluntarily in seven days.

In Moscow, the Defense Ministry issued a statement saying the orders issued by Gorbachev and the Soviet Parliament remain in effect. "No one should have any doubt have any doubt that law and order will be restored on Lithuanian territory."

The statement accused Lithuania's government of giving Lithuanian deserters from the Red Army separate passports and sheltering them from Soviet authorities as part of an anti-army propaganda campaign.

The nationalists "support illegal, anti-constitutional activities of the Lithuanian government focused on the republic's secession from the U.S.S.R.," said the military statement from Moscow, reported by newspapers today.

"The republic's Interior Ministry organs refuse to take steps to detain them and bring them back to their army units," it said.

"The deserters find shelter in Catholic churches, hospitals and within the grounds of state institutions," the statement said.

Landsbergis on Tuesday condemned the capture of the deserters, but said the republic will respond with "moral strength" rather than violence.

Officials may return to court to get Census figures adjusted

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials in Houston, New York and Chicago may go back to court later this week to force the Census Bureau to adjust this year's figures upward to make up for people census-takers might miss.

Plaintiffs in a lawsuit, who include minority groups and several states, said they are prepared to go back to court because the guidelines issued by the U.S. Commerce Department this year do not really change anything, and there is a danger that the figures will not be adjusted.

"We feel that the guidelines do not respond to the court stipulation from last summer," Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire said Monday.

Along with pressing forward on the lawsuit, Mrs. Whitmire is trying to meet with Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher to urge him to intervene in the case on behalf of his hometown.

"I'm going to try to use the fact that I do know Bob Mosbacher and he has been very helpful to us in the past," Mrs. Whitmire said. "This really predates him at the Commerce Department."

Under a court-ordered settlement last summer, the Commerce Department agreed to draw up guidelines that would be used to decide whether the final figures from the 1990 count should be adjusted. The Census Bureau is part of the Commerce Department.

Houston City Planner Peg Purser expects the 1990 Census to miss 6 percent of Houston's population, up from the nearly 5 percent missed in 1980.

That 6 percent undercount would cost more than $42 million a year in direct federal aid over the next decade, Purser said.

Texas was undercounted by at least half a million people in the 1980 Census, costing the state $50 million a year in federal aid and an additional seat in Congress, Mrs. Whitmire said.

Under the original settlement, the Census Bureau agreed to conduct a post-census survey aimed at measuring the expected undercount. Survey results would be reviewed by a panel of statisticians that would recommend to Mosbacher whether an adjustment is needed.

Williams blunder was hard lesson

Texas Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams has been justifiably criticized for a comment he made over the weekend that compared foul weather on a cattle roundup to the crime of rape. The uproar centered on his remark that if a situation cannot be changed "just relax and enjoy it."

Williams admitted the remark was improper and insensitive, and he apologized for making it, actions that certainly were in order. That he did so quickly and profusely says something, we believe, for Clayton Williams' character. He didn't attempt to wiggle away from it or to contend he was misquoted by the press, a device used so often by those in public life that it has almost come to be expected of them.

His campaign spokesman attempted to lessen the impact of the blunder by noting it was made in a setting in which such comments might be considered in character. But in character or not, the setting didn't diminish the offensiveness by which many regarded the comment.

Williams may not have realized a political candidate is nowadays under scrutiny at virtually every moment. If he didn't know it before, he certainly does now.

Remarks, even off-the-cuff ones, typically are considered on the record unless the candidate clarifies with reporters present before the comments are made that what he is saying will be off the record. In this case, a campaign aide said later the remark was off the record but reporters present obviously didn't think so.

While rape is not a joking matter, and never will be, we don't believe Williams' comment exemplifies his attitude on the subject. Not at all. On the contrary, he provided funding that helped a rape prevention program called Innovative Solutions get started in Midland in 1988.

That kind of support, as well as his overall reputation where family matters have been concerned, could not be expected from someone insensitive to the feelings of victims of crimes such as rape. But Clayton Williams has learned a valuable lesson that all who venture into the political arena must learn.

His task now is to put the matter behind him as best he can and return to those crucial issues that are affecting and will affect all Texans.

Nose gets nod

Legal questions have put a short leash on drug-sniffing dogs, and that's too bad.

A dog's ability to detect odors is so keen a trained animal can tell when cocaine is hidden under a truckload of onions. Drug dealers don't like to see those dogs show up, not one bit.

In a local case, a dog named Robbie indicated by barking and scratching that there were drugs in luggage. The owner of the luggage was removed from a departing flight and arrested. The luggage was opened without the owner's consent or a warrant, and marijuana was found.

Defense attorneys contended that the dog's alerting bark amounted to hearsay. Judge Carl Walker Jr. held that the marijuana could not be used as evidence.

There are legal niceties involved only higher courts can resolve on appeal. Even the U.S. Supreme Court had trouble with search and seizure rulings. That is all up to the lawyers. Frankly, though, the dog has our vote of confidence.

Bush should recall ban

When a truck caravan bearing 10 tons of broccoli pulls up to the White House, George Bush no doubt will be cowering in the Oval Office, pretending to ponder weighty affairs of state. But all the while that load of broccoli will be gnawing at the back of his mind.

He has no intention of gnawing any of that broccoli, despite growing pressure from California growers outraged by his refusal to set an example for America's children by eating a vegetable he detests. ...

Please, Mr. President, retract your anti-broccoli edict before the national diet deteriorates further, before angry nutritionists demonstrate at the White House gates, before Congress members from broccoli-producing states start blocking your legislative initiatives.

We're not asking you to actually eat the stuff. Just quietly push it to the side of your plate. Or slip it to the dog when Mrs. Bush isn't looking. But no more boasting about not having to eat what you don't want to eat.

For the sake of America's youngsters, it's not too much to ask.

— San Antonio Light

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 28, the 87th day of 1990. There are 278 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 28, 1979, America's worst commercial nuclear accident occurred inside the Unit 2 reactor at the Three Mile Island plant near Middletown, Pa., as a series of human and mechanical failures caused the cooling system to malfunction, damaging the reactor's core and leaking radioactivity.

On this date:

In 1797, Nathaniel Briggs of New Hampshire patented a washing machine.

In 1834, the U.S. Senate voted to censure President Jackson for the removal of federal deposits from the Bank of the United States.

In 1930, the names of the Turkish cities of Constantinople and Angora were changed to Istanbul and Ankara.

In 1939, the Spanish Civil War ended as Madrid fell to the forces of Francisco Franco.

In 1941, novelist and critic Virginia Woolf died in Lewes, England.

In 1943, composer Sergei Rachmaninoff died in Beverly Hills, Calif.

In 1953, athlete Jim Thorpe died in Lomita, Calif.

In 1969, the 34th president of the United States, Dwight D. Eisenhower, died in Washington at the age of 78.

In 1982, voters in El Salvador went to the polls for a constituent assembly election that would result in victory for the Christian Democrats, led by President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

In 1987, Maria von Trapp, whose life inspired the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The Sound of Music," died in Morrisville, Vt., at age 82.

Congressmen becoming nuisances

WASHINGTON — Three mouthy congressmen from Reagan country have wandered so far to the right that they're beginning to make nuisances of themselves on Capitol Hill.

Anderson

The mere mention of their names — William Dannemeyer, Robert Dornan and Dana Rohrabacher — causes eyes to roll and tongues to wag. All three are Southern California Republicans from the bastion of right-wing America, Orange County.

Their specialty is moral outrage and their issues are abortion, homosexuality and pornography.

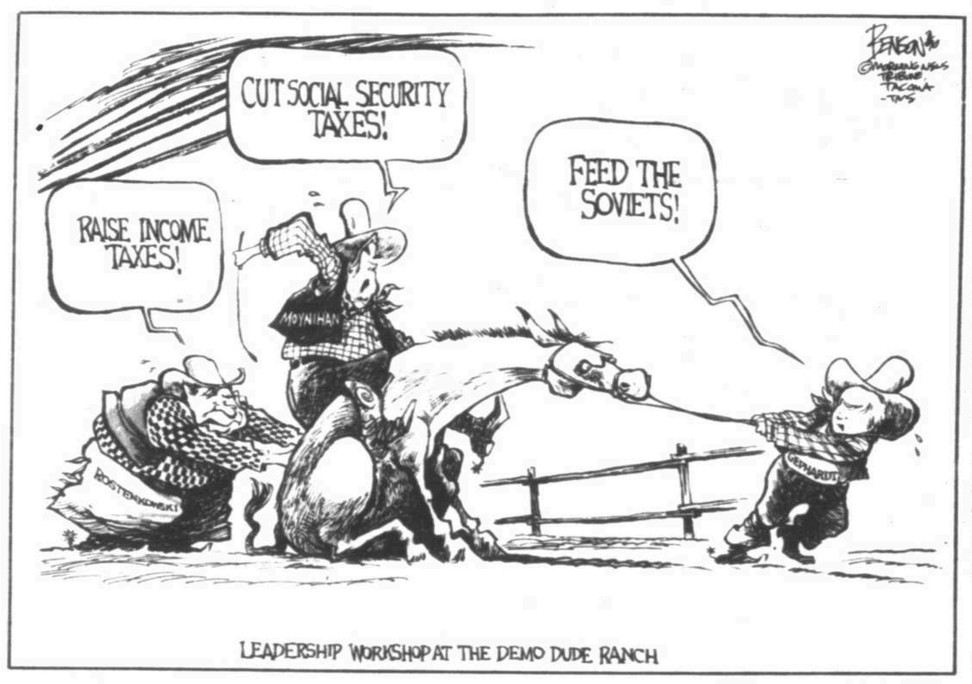

Follow them around long enough and this is what you will see:

■ Dannemeyer submitting to the Congressional Record explicit details of homoerotic acts involving vegetables and light bulbs.

■ Rohrabacher sending graphic letters to his colleagues describing a live sex show in New York that was indirectly supported by the National Endowment for the Arts.

■ Dornan flying off in an ideological rage about abortion.

They eclipse even the likes of Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., a conservative pit bull who has learned to use the system to become a power broker. Dannemeyer, Dornan and Rohrabacher don't have the most conservative voting records in Congress, but their pushy style robs them of the credibility it takes to wield power on Capitol Hill.

LEADERSHIP WORKSHOP AT THE DEMO DUDE RANCH

Of the three, Rohrabacher is still a novelty. A former Reagan speech writer, he barreled into office in 1988 with the endorsement of Oliver North, who campaigned for him. He says he emulates Ernest Hemingway — a man's man. He pals around with heavy-metal rocker Sammy Hagar and says John Wayne taught him how to drink tequila.

In February, Rohrabacher sent his colleagues in the House a letter complaining about federal funding for sexually explicit art. Not content to leave anything to the imagination, Rohrabacher described in vivid detail the sexual elements of a stage act subsidized by federal funding.

Rohrbacher says he is not on a morality crusade and should not be lumped in with Dornan and Dannemeyer. He merely wants to protect the taxpayers' money.

One Democratic congressman who works on a committee with Rohrabacher told us that he often blurts out irrelevant comments or questions. "We're playing poker and he's playing gin rummy," the Democrat said.

Yet lawmakers told our associates Scott Sleek and Jim Lynch that at least they can deal with Rohrabacher. Few say the same about Dornan and Dannemeyer, the dogmatic duo who have become synonymous with belligerence.

One House colleague described Dornan as an "unguided missile" because of his temper. Last year, in a debate over abortion, he compared his opponents in the House to the late Sen. Joe McCarthy. Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y., once had Dornan's microphone disconnected when Dornan got carried away in a floor speech on contra aid.

Dannemeyer has focused his outrage on homosexuals. He voted against a congressional study of "hate crimes" against minorities because it would have included a study of gay bashing. He once pushed for restrictions on people with AIDS because he said they emit "spores" that cause birth defects.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Comparing Baltics to U.S. false analogy

WASHINGTON — A Soviet diplomat buttonholed me to say he had read my book about Lincoln and wasn't there a remarkable similarity between the challenge of secession that Lincoln faced in and the challenge Mikhail Gorbachev faces from the Baltic secessionists today?

Safire

How could I square support of Lincoln's decision to preserve the Union with my incendiary column titled "Free the Baltics"?

I told him the parallel he was attempting to draw was ill-informed and dangerous.

Of the Southern American states seeking to secede, only one — Texas — had ever been an independent republic, and all had entered into union voluntarily.

But in the case of the three Baltic republics, each had been an independent nation until seized by the Soviet Union as a result of the infamous Molotov-von Ribbentrop pact.

Therefore, any Soviet "integrity of the Union" justification was based on a false analogy. Free people and states can bind themselves into an indissoluble union, but no such contract applies to states coerced, conquered and held captive.

That "Free the Baltics" fulmination ran only 10 months ago. In a subsequent visit to one of the Baltic nations I asked to see a leader of the popular front pressing for freedom.

His associates said he was busy working on a draft of a statement that would lead, after the March 1990 elections, to a declaration of independence.

That was a stopper; if this were 1776, would I have said, "Look, tell Mr. Jefferson to set aside that when-in-the-course-of-human-events stuff because a bigfoot pundit wants to see him"? Fortunately, that routine was unnecessary because the Latvian leader recognized the need for any support from America.

Loud, unwavering, insistent support for the rectification of a Stalin-Hitler wrong is central to the cause of freedom inside and adjacent to the Soviet Union.

Even after the freeing of other nations of Eastern and Central Europe, Baltic subjugation remains the most damning evidence of Stalinist expansionism. Latvia is the Baltic state most "Russianized" by immigration, and is accordingly moving most cautiously; Lithuania, however, remains 80 percent Lithuanian, and is in the vanguard of self-liberation.

Having last week declared its independence, Lithuania is now being subjected to a war of nerves by Gorbachev. Russian armored troop carriers rumble through the streets of Vilnius.

Moscow ordered that phone lines to the outside world be cut, and journalists and tourists denied entry. Shotguns have been ordered confiscated from hunters and farmers who have not even threatened to take up arms.

The Lithuanians are not knuckling under. When General Taurinskas, the commander of volunteer civil defense forces, began meekly to comply with the roundup of arms and to turn over 16,000 vehicles, Lithuanian deputies moved to replace him.

Nobody in Lithuania is threatening violence; that would be self-defeating. The only person getting into position for the use of force is Gorbachev: He proposes to rip the shotguns out of the hands of peaceful Lithuanians (thereby inviting the violence leading to crackdown) while telling the world he is merely disarming them to avert violence.

The Soviet leader last week gained the power to declare martial law and rule by decree. Will he use it? A curious version of this question was asked of Bush last week: "Does it seem to you that he has the political ability to let Lithuania go?" (The president's reply, based on deep CIA analysis: "I honestly don't know.")

I think Gorbachev now has both the power to crack down and to not crack down. If he were a strategic planner, a chess player, he might view Baltic independence as the prelude to a greater problem of disintegration in the Ukraine — and be tempted to provoke suppressible violence now, gambling on flaccid Western "understanding" on the false Lincoln analogy.

If he is a brilliant improviser, as I fervently hope, Gorbachev will find a way to get angry and throw the Lithuanians out of the Soviet Union. Latvia and Estonia would follow, and he would continue to enjoy bankable international popularity.

Provoking violence in the name of confiscating arms is a transparent trick. Forget it, Gorbachev; continued Baltic rule is pure Stalinist adventurism. Let Lithuania go.

Reagan's memory fails only on some topics

It used to be that this nation's heroes said things like, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country," or "We have just begun to fight," or "Give me liberty or give me death," or "Remember the Maine."

Buchwald

Nowadays all our heroes can come up with is, "I don't remember."

Here, purportedly, are the video outtakes of the recent deposition of Ronald Reagan, which were given for the Admiral Poindexter trial.

"Mr. President, could you please tell us exactly what you knew and when you knew it with regard to the Iran-Contra affair?"

"I — I — I don't remember knowing anything about the Iran-Contra thing — this is the first I've heard of it."

"Well, let me try your memory on something else. Do you recall working for Warner Brothers as an actor before you went into politics?"

"Of course. I came from Radio Station WHO in Des Moines, where I was a sportscaster, and I covered the Northwestern football games. Northwestern beat Michigan 24 to 12 when Myron Hoffsteder fumbled on the three-yard line. After that, I went to Southern California with the Chicago Cubs for spring training and did a screen test for Bill Meiklejohn at Warner Brothers. Luckily, I was hired because the cab fare came to $10.33."

"OK, Mr. President, can we get back to the illegal sale of arms to Iran and the laundering of money for the Nicaraguan rebels?"

"That was a long time ago. I wouldn't know anything about that. A president can't remember everything he did."

"But you do recall Knute Rockne."

"It was my favorite movie. I remember going to the commissary one day with Pat O'Brien. It was 1:20 p.m. and Pat had a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich on toasted rye and a glass of buttermilk, and I had a cream cheese and smoked salmon on pumpernickel, with a bag of potato chips and iced tea. We sat at this back table against the wall that had a picture of Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart. She was in a domino print dress and he wore a striped suit with no tie. Pat said to me, 'Don't you love the movie business?' "

"Mr. President, did you know that Lt. Col. North was going to lie to Congress?"

"How could I know that when I didn't know anything. North, South, East, West — when you've seen one National Security aide you've seen them all."

"Then you maintain that you don't know who Col. North was?"

"I can't recall the gentleman — I tried not to remember names when I was in the White House."

"Can you remember 'Bedtime for Bonzo?' "

"Who can forget 'Bedtime for Bonzo'? I didn't like the chimp very much because he used to bite me on the knuckles, and he tried to steal the picture from me. He smelled a lot and only ate green bananas which, in those days, cost 8 cents each. I used to buy them for him at the Fairfax Farmers Market — bananas were always in Row D, Aisle 6."

"You seem to have a good memory, Mr. President, except for the Iran-Contra affair."

"I'm wracking my brain to help you, but it's all a blank. I'm sure Iran had something to do with something, but I don't know what."

"Maybe you lost your memory when you were informed that you had violated the law."

"Right. That's why I'm calling my new book, 'Where Is the Rest of Me?' "

Clinic to stop false claims

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston-based diet clinic has agreed to a court order to stop false claims, the attorney general's office reported.

The agreement with American Medical Clinics Inc., doing business as Medical Clinics, and two officers of the company, James Norman Wells and Karin Norred, was reached Tuesday, the attorney general's office said.

The attorney general's office sued the company last month, alleging the company falsely claimed their diet program was medically supervised and would be covered by most insurance policies, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

"American Medical Clinic maintains no permanent staff of physicians. It is not a medical clinic. It simply is a private, for-profit corporation comprised entirely of laypersons," Mattox said.

Also, the suit alleged, the clinics prescribed the prescription drug Synthroid, claiming the drug would adjust an individual's metabolism in order to lose up to 1½ pounds per day.

Mattox said Synthroid is not specifically recommended by its manufacturer or the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for the treatment of obesity.

Mattox said the company operates nationwide with six clinics in three Texas cities — Houston, San Antonio and Austin.

Jail supervision ending

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas criminal justice officials told lawmakers the end of federal court supervision of the state prison system may be in sight.

Department of Criminal Justice director James Lynaugh said Tuesday that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's approval of disbanding the office of a court-appointed monitor earlier this month "is a big step toward winding down Ruiz."

The lawsuit against the state prison system filed by David Ruiz in the early 1970s led to court-ordered reforms by Justice of Tyler.

Lynaugh said much progress has been made since the "trench warfare on both sides" of the lawsuit, when in 1987, Justice threatened the state with $800,000 daily fines for not complying with court orders.

Lynaugh also told members of the Legislative Criminal Justice Board that with completion of two prison facilities later this year, the state will be able to cut in half the number of state prisoners awaiting transfer in county jails.

Bridge ceremony set

LAREDO (AP) — Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Texas Gov. Bill Clements will be among dignitaries attending a groundbreaking ceremony Thursday for a new international bridge across the Rio Grande.

The ceremony will be for the Colombia-Laredo International Bridge. Actual construction of the eight-lane bridge is not expected to begin until this summer.

The bridge, to be constructed about 15 miles northwest of Nuevo Laredo, is considered a key element in an ambitious project to develop Nuevo Leon state's northern area.

Others at the afternoon ceremony in addition to Salinas de Gortari and Clements will include John Dimitri Negroponte, U.S. Ambassador to Mexico, Gustavo Petricioli, the Mexican envoy to the U.S., Mexican Foreign Minister Fernando Solana and several cabinet secretaries.

T.S. Scibienski, owner of the land where the U.S. portion of the bridge will be built, is also scheduled to attend as are mayors of 14 small communities in the northern part of Nuevo Leon where development is expected to flourish.

Henry Kinsey took to the wet streets Tuesday to attract attention to his plight and that of other Vietnam-era veterans exposed to the defoliant Agent Orange.

Veteran protests lack of aid

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Undaunted by cold rain and irritated motorists, Henry "Sonny" Kinsey rolled his wheelchair down Midland Drive Tuesday afternoon, hoping to bring attention to the plight of veterans exposed to Agent Orange.

"I'm already dying," said Kinsey, who said he wasn't afraid of the traffic or the weather. "It doesn't make any difference how you're going to die."

Kinsey, whose cancerous left leg was amputated below the knee in December, said he wants the government to compensate him for his exposure to Agent Orange while he was a U.S. Navy Seabee in Japan in 1971.

The Midland veteran believes his cancer and his disability were caused by the defoliant.

And while the Department of Veterans Affairs does not recognize Kinsey's cancer as a service-related disability, Kinsey is upset because he says the military has now misplaced his medical records.

"Because they can't get my military records, they can't give me any sort of benefit," said Kinsey, who added that he has not been able to resume his job as a plumbing contractor since his leg was amputated.

Although the VA pays his medical expenses, Kinsey says that will not do his family any good when he dies.

"It's not the benefits for myself that I am seeking," Kinsey said. "Once they pay me for a service-related disability, after I'm dead they will continue to pay support to my wife and children."

Kinsey's wife, Jillian, said her church is paying the rent on her family's home and that she is unable to work because she has to stay at home and take care of her husband and three children.

"If we could get our medical records it would prove that he had been hospitalized after (working with) the chemicals," Ms. Kinsey said. "The VA has told us that if we do not get those files, we get nothing."

Rick DuCharme, regional public affairs director for the VA in Dallas, said lost records can be replaced.

"The individual veteran can come up with names of people who served with him ... and with statements from them, records can be reconstructed," he said.

DuCharme added that veterans' organizations can help Kinsey with his record search.

Meanwhile, he said, Vietnam-era veterans exposed to Agent Orange remain in limbo where compensation is concerned.

"There is no compensation granted to vets with Agent Orange exposure," DuCharme said, because "there is no specific scientific study which can connect exposure to Agent Orange to a specific malady."

Insurer will pay costs of Gideon trial

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

It is "within that scope of employment" that the coverage would have paid..."
— Attorney David Reagan

The city of Midland would have been liable for a percentage of the total award judgment had former Police Chief Wayne Gideon been found guilty of slander under its current self-insurance program.

As it is, however, a primary insurer used by the Texas Municipal League (TML) — of which Midland was a member — will foot the bill on legal expenses associated with the six-year-old case, according to city officials. TML, saying the issue was not a matter of public record, would not reveal the amount of the cost of Gideon's legal fees.

Gideon, who was cleared by a jury of any wrongdoing last week, was sued by former Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith of spreading wife beating rumors that Smith claimed led to his 1984 election defeat.

City Attorney David Reagan said if Gideon had been found guilty, it would have been determined by the insurer at the time whether or not the former police chief had made statements while doing his job as claimed in the suit.

It is "within that scope of employment" that the coverage would have paid out in full, according to Reagan.

However, the city is no longer covered through TML's Intergovernmental Risk Pool, but rather through a different arrangement.

"We're fully self-insured. Any dollar judgment that might be awarded (in future cases) would be paid (completely) out of our liability fund," said Personnel Director David Hunter.

In other words, had the same suit been filed today — and had Gideon been found guilty, the city would have been responsible for the total jury award.

Or would it?

"No, we wouldn't," responded Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, "In 1988 the Legislature capped anything we could lose up to $250,000."

McGregor said the city realized the risk it was taking when it went self-insured four years ago, but defended the decision, noting good business judgment was used at the time.

Midland decided on going self-insured only after the city learned that the cost of a $500,000 supplemental policy would run it about $440,000 in premiums per year.

Now the city is looking at full coverage again, but not because of the Gideon case, which according to Hunter was "fully-insured" at the time it was filed in 1984.

In fact, had the former police chief lost, the only cost would have been to Gideon, himself, who was issued a "reservation of right" letter offering total coverage for certain statements that the insurer viewed as part of his job.

For example, the insurer probably would have stood behind Gideon's statements made to former Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson as part of a November 1982 investigation of Smith and his former wife, Gail Mabee Commageres.

It was Mrs. Commageres who contacted the chief when she was considering pressing assault charges against her ex-husband.

However, the insurer probably would have balked on payment for other statements that could have been construed as being made outside his normal duties, thus placing the burden of out-of-pocket expenses on Gideon.

Reagan said the point of the argument is moot anyway given the fact that the jury found the former chief innocent of all charges brought against him.

"It's a good policy," said Reagan. "How are you going to get people to perform risky functions like being a police officer unless you're willing to back them up when they perform?"

SSC funding, construction could depend on magnets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Full funding and construction of the super collider would hinge on proof that a key component of the project will work under legislation sponsored by the chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee.

Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., who introduced the bill Monday, also wants to cap spending on superconducting super collider south of Dallas at $7.5 billion, about a half-billion dollars short of what the Energy Department believes would be necessary to build the world's largest scientific instrument.

Roe's committee was scheduled to vote on the measure today without holding the customary hearing.

Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., meanwhile, said he planned to introduce an amendment that would bar all construction on the SSC until the Energy Department certifies the superconducting magnets — the key component — can be mass produced by industry.

"It doesn't make sense to me to start digging up earth for a 54-mile tunnel before we know if the equipment inside the tunnel is actually going to work," Boehlert said Tuesday.

Under Roe's bill, which also caps federal spending at $5 billion, funding for the SSC would be allowed in increments, with the decision on full construction depending on whether the superconducting magnets will work on site. Some construction would be allowed leading up to the certification.

Roe called his plan a "fiscally responsible" approach to building the SSC and called the project a "vital investment in America's future."

The SSC involves a 54-mile underground ring in which streams of protons, guided by the powerful magnets, would be hurled at almost the speed of light until they smash together and break into even smaller particles. Scientists say the SSC would recreate the physical state of the universe after the Big Bang.

Unlike Boehlert, Roe would allow eight miles of tunnel to be constructed to make sure the magnets will work before the rest of the ring is built and the bulk of the spending has occurred.

Under his plan, $220 million is authorized to get the project started — for such things as research and development of the magnets, initial construction of certain key buildings needed to test the magnets, and a portion of the tunnel.

Another $1.17 billion would be authorized when the key congressional committees receive documentation from the energy secretary indicating the project is organized and efficiently managed.

A summary of the bill cautions that those funds, however, are to be used only for activities to determine if the magnets will work on site.

According to the summary, "those activities that are not necessary for the test are not authorized until the secretary has certified that the technology will work ..."

If the magnets don't work, however, the project could potentially be killed, congressional aides said.

Should the magnets work, the SSC would still have to meet other requirements to receive the balance of its funding, including commitments from non-federal participants.

Under Roe's plan, the Energy Department would be required to secure commitments for contributions from foreign sources totaling 20 percent to 33⅓ percent of the total cost. Another $1 billion would come from Texas, and other non-federal contributions, such as from foundations, could also be accepted.

Firm's former president suing Avery

KERRVILLE (AP) — An ousted religious jewelry company president says he wants $12.3 million from artisan James Avery and his corporation plus $24,000 from a woman he claims had an extramarital relationship with Avery.

A lawyer for plaintiff Charles Wolfmueller finished presenting his case Tuesday as the trial entered its 13th day. Defense attorneys were expected to take three days to present their case.

On Monday, Wolfmueller took the witness stand for the third day and said he was seeking $24,000 from defendant Sylvia Flores, a company officer with Kerrville-based James Avery Craftsman Inc.

Wolfmueller, a former school board president, claims an "extramarital relationship" between Avery and Ms. Flores shaped Avery's business decisions at the religious jewelry company and led to Wolfmueller's ouster as president in November.

Wolfmueller filed a civil lawsuit alleging he was wrongfully fired and deprived of participation in a stock buyout plan.

The plaintiff says he wants $24,000 from Ms. Flores because that was how much she received last July as a bonus to make a final payment for approximately 5,000 shares of James Avery Craftsman stock.

Other officers did not receive their bonuses at the same time, and Wolfmueller contends Ms. Flores received preferential treatment because of the alleged

Two brothers' bodies found on bottom of pool

Staff Report

ODESSA — The bodies of two brothers were discovered at the bottom of an apartment complex swimming pool Tuesday night by an Odessa police officer who was conducting a search of the area.

Pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital shortly after midnight were Derick Dodd, 4, and Robert Dodd, 5, of 4320 Ridgedale Ave.

According to authorities, the two boys had wandered away from home after they had returned from shopping with their mother shortly after 7 p.m.

Mrs. Dodd summoned police when she was unable to find the children after putting some things away.

A department spokesman said two officers were dispatched to the area and a one-hour search began west of the Dodd home in the area of Grandview Avenue and 42nd Street.

At about 9:15 p.m., Patrolman Randy Phillips entered the Casa Permian Apartment complex where he found the bodies of the two boys at the bottom of one of two pools.

Phillips and another officer attempted to resuscitate the youngsters until emergency medical personnel arrived on the scene.

Those efforts continued at the hospital until 11:30 p.m. when the two were pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford.

Exxon to contribute to Forward Midland project

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Forward Midland officials, from left, Steve Davidson, Doug Henson and Clarence Scharbauer III were pleased to accept the first of four planned $10,000 annual donations from Robert Olsen, Exxon Co. USA's Southwest Production Division manager.

Staff Report

Exxon has announced it will contribute to the Midland Chamber of Commerce's $2.3 million Forward Midland economic diversification initiative.

A donation of $10,000 is planned for 1990, with similar amounts anticipated in each of of the years 1991-93.

Exxon's Southwestern Production Division Manager Robert Olsen commented, "We consider this project to be a significant undertaking for the benefit of all the citizens of Midland.

"Attaining a higher quality of life through more jobs, a more diverse economy, and enhanced public services will not only make a difference for the people of Midland, but also reaffirms Midland as a progressive city with a promising future."

Added Olsen, "We commend the chamber for its efforts on behalf of the city and people of Midland and look forward to becoming an active partner in this project."

The painting "The Destruction of the Mission of San Saba," seized last year by the U.S. Customs Service as it was being smuggled into the United States from Mexico, is on display at the Houston Museum of Fine Arts.

Painting that may be state's oldest loaned to museum

HOUSTON (AP) — A painting believed to be the oldest historical artwork in Texas went on display at a local museum under a unique arrangement with the U.S. Customs Service which seized it last year.

Customs agents seized the painting — "The Destruction of the Mission San Saba " — on Nov. 17, 1989, at the home of an Austin rare-book dealer, who had offered it for sale on consignment.

Customs officials contend it was taken from Mexico and brought into the United States without proper documentation.

"We have turned this occurrence into a positive cultural benefit for the city of Houston," said Tom Blanchard, assistant regional commissioner for the Customs Service.

The Houston Museum of Fine Arts was allowed to display the painting after agreeing to insure it, Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said.

The painting, made about 1763 by an unidentified artist, depicts the 1758 massacre by Comanches and other Indians of some 400 people at the mission about 100 miles northwest of Austin.

Based on an eyewitness account of the incident, the painting, appraised at $1 million, is the oldest work from the Spanish Colonial period in Texas.

"This is a wonderful addition to the collection," said Beth Schneider, education director for the museum. "I think everyone's going to be fascinated by this painting because it is a historical work that shows an event that we know about also from eyewitness accounts. And for all of us living in Texas, this is an event that is very meaningful."

"There is no other candidate for being an important picture in telling a story about the founding of missions in the then-province of Texas, the province of New Spain," said George Shackelford, museum curator of European painting and sculpture.

The last known owner of the painting, the Phoenix-based New Phoenix Sunrise Corp., has filed a claim to the painting, Assistant U.S. Attorney Sharon Pierce said.

According to the federal warrant used to seize the artwork, the Mexican government considers the painting a national monument that may not be sold or exported without its authorization.

The Mexican government, however, has not filed a formal claim to have the painting returned, Ms. Pierce said.

Lawsuit could cause college funding crisis

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A lawsuit seeking expansion of South Texas higher education offerings could force a crisis in university funding similar to the current legislative stalemate over public school finance, spokesmen for Texas Hispanic groups said Tuesday.

At a Capitol news conference, Al Kauffman, lead attorney in LULAC vs. Clements, said a Brownsville district judge approved a class action certification this past week that allows the plaintiffs to represent all Mexican Americans from Corpus Christi to El Paso as they seek more graduate and professional programs in border universities.

The plaintiffs are seeking $1 billion in higher education improvements over 10 years.

"The court has found that the people who live in this area share common interests but they have a lack of access to higher education opportunities in Texas," said Kauffman, an attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, which joined the League of United Latin American Citizens and other plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

The case was filed in December 1987 and is set for trial June 1, 1990 in state District Judge Gilberto Hinojosa's court in Brownsville.

The lawsuit alleges that the state has failed to provide sufficient resources to educate Hispanic college students in the border area and grossly underfunds graduate and professional programs.

The border area has two doctoral programs with a third doctoral program authorized in El Paso, but no state-funded professional schools, Kauffman noted, while the Dallas area has 300 doctoral programs out of 709 statewide.

"All the people in the border area are hurt by lack of access to masters and Ph.D. programs," Kauffman said. The lack of graduate programs also hurts the area's attempts to attract research programs, community development and service to the community, he said.

Kauffman was an attorney in the Edgewood vs. Kirby case, which resulted in the unanimous Supreme Court ruling that the public school finance system was illegal and resulted in the current special legislative session.

Man not indicted in shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury today declined to indict an Irving man in the shooting death of another man who had gunned down a woman in the parking lot of a shopping mall.

Todd Allan Broom, 25, could have faced a murder charge in the March 12 shooting death of Eddie Edwards, 41. Broom said he fired two shots at Edwards' car after watching Edwards shoot Demetria Yvonne Taylor, 28, in the back of the head.

"I don't consider myself any sort of vigilante. I don't consider myself any sort of hero," Broom said a few days after the shooting.

Broom testified for about 15 minutes before a Dallas County grand jury on Monday. He emerged visibly shaken and said he was frightened about what might happen to him.

Broom said after the shooting that he watched in shock as Edwards chased Ms. Taylor across the mall parking lot, shot her, then shot her again in the back of the head as she lay mortally wounded outside a mall.

Rescue workers suing Coca-Cola

EDINBURG (AP) — An attorney for police and fire officials suing a soft drink company for injuries they say they suffered working at the scene of the state's worst school bus accident says his clients have a right to seek compensation.

Eight rescue workers are suing Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Inc. of McAllen for physical and mental injuries they say they suffered because of the Sept. 21 wreck.

The rescue workers have joined with scores of other plaintiffs suing Valley Coca-Cola. The company owns the truck involved in the accident that killed 21 students in the South Texas city of Alton.

Guy Allison, a Corpus Christi attorney representing the rescue workers, said Tuesday there is "ample precedent in the state of Texas" in which such officials have sought damages.

"When a rescuer is injured because of the negligence of somebody like Coca-Cola, they are entitled to sue for damages," Allison said.

Rodolfo Reyes, who at the time was acting police chief of Alton, is among the rescuers suing, along with assistant Alton fire chief Raul Garcia Jr. and six volunteer firefighters from the city.

They all spent time in a water-filled caliche pit trying to rescue the junior and senior high students trapped inside the submerged bus, according to the pleadings filed in the state's 275th District Court in Edinburg.

Sixty students escaped from the bus.

relationship.

"The company could have paid off all of us at the same time," Wolfmueller testified. "She (Ms. Flores) was treated different than the rest of us."

Wolfmueller previously testified he wants $12.3 million from Avery. The plaintiff alleges he lost a $9.3 million stock buyout opportunity, $2.5 million in wages and $500,000 in benefits.

Wolfmueller also testified that he is alleging Avery and Ms. Flores had an "extramarital relationship," not a "sexual affair."

Avery contends he and Ms. Flores never had an affair and claims he never agreed to the stock proposal Wolfmueller cites.

Other testimony Monday included deposition statements from Carmen Avery, James Avery's third wife. Mrs. Avery said she learned in 1988 that there was another woman in her husband's life.

The Averys separated in July of that year, but since have reconciled. Ms. Flores also separated from her husband that summer and received a divorce.

DEATHS

Lila Robinson

TEMPLE — Funeral services for former Midland schoolteacher Lila Hartman Robinson, 80, are set for 10 a.m. Friday at the Harper-Talasek Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Jack Riley officiating. Burial will follow in the Roberts Cemetery in Troy.

Mrs. Robinson died Tuesday at a local nursing home.

Born in Troy, she attended the University of Texas, La Escuela de Verano in Saltillo, Mexico, and Monterrey Tech in Monterrey, Mexico before graduating from Mary Hardin Baylor College in Belton. She also worked as a counselor at Monterrey Tech.

A longtime Spanish teacher in the Midland and Katy school systems, Mrs. Robinson was a member of Who's Who in Texas Education, Delta Kappa Gamma, the American Association of University Women and the Good Neighbor Commission.

She also was active in the Betty Martin Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Temple Federated Club, the Review Club, the Retired Teachers of Texas and the Friendship Sunday School Class of First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include one son, Thomas R. Robinson of Princeton, N.J., and one sister, Leta Holt of Marble Falls.

Memorials should be directed to the American Cancer Society or the Friendship Class of First United Methodist Church of Temple.

Viola Britt

LAMESA — Funeral services for Viola Itasca "Tack" Britt, 77, are set for 4 p.m. today at First Baptist Church with the Rev. Milo Arbuckle of Midland officiating, assisted by the Rev. Derryle Dunks. Burial will follow at Lamesa Memorial Park under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

Mrs. Britt died Monday at a Lubbock hospital.

Born Oct. 12, 1912, in Vernon, she married Bill Britt on Aug. 4, 1930. He preceded her in death on Nov. 25, 1980. One brother, Morrell Roberts also preceded her in death.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church of Lamesa.

Lawyers to seek order shutting down schools

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lawyers representing the poor school districts that got the Texas Supreme Court to declare the state's school financing system unconstitutional have been told to seek a court order on May 1 to shut down the state's public schools.

Edgewood Superintendent James Vasquez said Tuesday that the plaintiffs are going to take the action because the Legislature is "playing games" in attempting to patch the school funding system with a bill that is not within monetary boundaries set by Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements has vowed to veto any bill that costs more than $300 million the first year. Vasquez, however, says that $800 million is needed unless the state formula is changed so that money going to the wealthier school districts is redistributed to the poorer districts.

"If anything comes out, it's going to be a watered-down bill that will be a patch and not take care of the problem," Vasquez told members of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

"I would hate to go to the Pearly Gates and have this state judged now," he said.

Edgewood is the lead plaintiff among 68 property-poor school districts in the state which successfully challenged the current funding system, the bulk, of which, is provided through local property taxes.

Funding plans by both the state House and Senate were rejected last week as being too expensive, dashing hopes that a new finance bill could be agreed to before the end to the 30-day session today.

Clements has ordered another special session to begin next Monday and vows to keep the Legislature in special session until the school funding issue and judicial reform is resolved.

Vasquez also said he is "totally pessimistic" that a new school finance bill can be agreed upon during the second special session as legislators race toward a May 1 deadline imposed by the Texas Supreme Court.

"On May the 1st, we have a 9 a.m. appointment with the court. We're going to that (Travis County district) court and say, 'Shut down the system. Shut it down.' If it can't be fair to all, then we shouldn't put money into it," Vasquez told the group.

Al Kauffman, attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund who represents the plaintiffs in the equalization lawsuit, was unavailable for comment Tuesday night, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

State Rep. Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, vice chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said Tuesday afternoon that lawmakers will not pass a plan in time to satisfy the plaintiffs.

"If we're to believe the governor, any plan over $300 million will be vetoed. A plan that I believe the governor would sign, the court would not accept," Luna told the newspaper.

Vasquez said he has been cautioned about the backlash from closing the classrooms to 3 million students in Texas, but he said, "I think we have no choice. We owe it to those kids at this point.

"Maybe 3 million kids going home and 3 million parents calling the governor will influence him."

Texas Supreme Court justices ruled 9-0 in October that the state's method of funding its school system is unconstitutional because it discriminates against children living in poor school districts.

"...We're going to that (Travis County district) court and say, 'Shut down the system. Shut it down.' If it can't be fair to all, then we shouldn't put money into it."

— Edgewood Superintendent James Vasquez

Ham is centerpiece for festive Easter menu

NEW YORK (AP) — If you don't want to spend hours in the kitchen preparing Easter dinner, try this quick-to-fix holiday menu.

Apricot-Glazed Easter Ham, Bounty of Spring Risotto, Minted Zucchini and Carrot Ribbons, and Fresh Fruit Sundae with Yogurt Cream and Caramel Sauce is an elegant menu, but is easy to prepare. The recipes are provided by Wilson Brands, makers of Wilson Extra Lean Ham.

APRICOT-GLAZED EASTER HAM

1 3- to 5- pound extra-lean ham
½ cup apricot preserves
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
2 teaspoons freshly grated gingerroot
Fresh apricots (optional)
Fresh watercress (optional)

In small bowl, combine apricot preserves, Dijon-style mustard and gingerroot. Stir until well blended. Decoratively score ham. Place ham in shallow baking pan; shield ends with foil. Insert meat thermometer. Brush ham with ¼ cup of glaze. Bake, uncovered, in a 325-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes per pound or until thermometer registers 130 to 140 degrees. Brush with remaining glaze every 15 minutes. Transfer ham to serving platter. Garnish with fresh apricots and watercress leaves. Makes 4-5 servings per pound.

Preparation time: 6 minutes.
Cooking time: 15 to 20 minutes per pound.

BOUNTY OF SPRING RISOTTO

1 cup frozen peas
½ cup dry white wine
½ ounce dried porcini mushrooms (about ½ cup), broken into small pieces or ¾ cup fresh mushrooms, cut into thin slices
3 cups chicken stock or canned chicken broth
⅛ teaspoon powdered saffron or 6 threads saffron, crushed
3 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup finely chopped yellow onion
1 large clove garlic, minced
1½ cups quick-cooking rice
1 cup water
¼ cup plus 1 tablespoon freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 medium tomato, unpeeled, seeded and chopped

Place peas in colander. Run under cool running water. Set aside. In small saucepan, bring wine to boil. Add porcini. Remove pan from heat. Let mushroom mixture stand.

In medium saucepan, bring broth to boil. Reduce heat to allow broth to simmer. Remove ½ cup of broth. Let rest of broth continue to simmer.

Add saffron to the ½ cup of broth, stirring to dissolve. Set saffron mixture aside.

In a 4-quart Dutch oven, heat olive oil over medium-high heat. Add onion and garlic. Add rice; cook and stir until grains are well coated, about 2 minutes.

Add 1 cup of remaining hot broth to rice, stirring continuously and scraping bottom and sides of pan until liquid has been absorbed. Add 1 additional cup hot stock, stirring until absorbed. Add saffron-flavored broth, stirring until absorbed. Add mushroom mixture, stirring until well combined. In ½ cup portions, add the remaining broth and 1 cup water, allowing each addition to be absorbed before adding another, until rice is tender and mixture has creamy consistency; about 20 minutes.

Stir in peas and ¼ cup of Parmesan cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Transfer risotto to shallow 2-quart serving bowl. Sprinkle chopped tomato down center. Sprinkle remaining 1 tablespoon cheese over tomato. Cover; keep warm until serving time. Makes 6 servings.

Preparation time: 8 minutes.

MINTED ZUCCHINI AND CARROT RIBBONS

6 small zucchini (about 1½ pounds)
3 large carrots (about 12 ounces)
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 medium cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons fresh mint, minced, or 2 teaspoons dried mint, crushed
Fresh mint sprigs

Trim ends off zucchini. Using swivel-bladed (standard) vegetable peeler, peel a few lengthwise strips from one side of each zucchini to create a flat surface. Place zucchini onto its flat side. Continue peeling thin strips until all four sides have been peeled. Discard inner core and seeds. Repeat with remaining zucchini and carrots. (Recipe may be prepared to this point up to 1 day ahead. Cover vegetables and store in refrigerator.)

In large skillet, heat olive oil over medium-high heat. Add garlic. Cook until tender but not brown. Add zucchini, carrots and mint. Cook and stir for 6 to 8 minutes or until vegetables reach desired tenderness. Transfer vegetables to shallow serving bowl. Garnish with fresh mint sprigs. Makes 6 servings.

Preparation time: 16 minutes.
Cooking time: 6 minutes.

FRESH FRUIT SUNDAE WITH YOGURT CREAM & CARAMEL SAUCE

1 pound fresh nectarines or peaches, cut into ¾-inch dice (about 3 medium)
1 pint fresh blueberries (2 cups)
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon honey
1 cup vanilla low-fat yogurt
½ cup frozen whipped dessert topping, thawed
¾ teaspoon almond extract
1 pint fresh raspberries (2 cups)
6 tablespoons commercially prepared caramel sauce
Lemon Peel Curls (optional)
Fresh mint sprigs (optional)

In medium bowl, stir together nectarines, blueberries, lemon juice and honey. Cover and chill. In small mixing bowl, combine yogurt, whipped topping and almond extract.

Cover; store in refrigerator until serving time. At serving time, gently stir raspberries into chilled berry mixture. Divide berry mixture between six chilled dessert dishes or glasses. Spoon 2 heaping tablespoons yogurt mixture on top of fruit in each dish. Drizzle 1 tablespoon of caramel sauce on top of each serving. Garnish with lemon peel curls and fresh mint sprigs, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 217 cal., 3 g fat, 2 mg chol., 4 g pro.

HERBED HAM SALAD

1 8-ounce carton plain low-fat yogurt
1 tablespoon skim milk
2 teaspoons horseradish mustard
1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
⅛ teaspoon onion powder
3 cups assorted cut-up fresh vegetables
1 pound extra-lean, fully cooked boneless ham
½ cup (2 ounces) shredded low-fat cheddar cheese

In bowl combine yogurt, milk, mustard, basil and onion powder. Add vegetables and toss to coat. Cover vegetable mixture and place in freezer while preparing remaining ingredients. Cut ham into ½-inch cubes. Add ham and cheese to vegetable mixture; toss to mix. Serve immediately or chill overnight. Makes 4 servings.

'Broccoli bashing' rebutted

By Diana E. Lundin
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Whoa, there. Was that really our kinder, gentler president giving a black eye to broccoli?

Hold on to your cheese sauce — it's true. George Bush has unceremoniously banned broccoli from meals served aboard Air Force One, the presidential plane.

This from a man who has publicly admitted a penchant for pork rinds, those pieces of pig skin fried to a crisp in a vat of oil.

But this time, Bush's tastes may have made some enemies among broccoli aficionados. Read their lips: They're steamed.

"There is no more-nutritional vegetable than broccoli," said Jan deLyser, executive vice president of the L.A.-based Fresh Produce Council, who admitted Bush's bashing of broccoli is bad press for the vegetable. "He's politically trying to work himself out of this."

Sure enough, Marlin Fitzwater, the president's press secretary, is already trying to put a spin on the broccoli brouhaha.

"We tell the broccoli growers the White House staff loves broccoli, and we think it's good for you.

"But," Fitzwater added, "what can you expect from a man who likes pork rinds?"

What, indeed.

BUSH'S BROCCOIL thing was revealed in a one-paragraph item in U.S. News and World Report's March 26 issue.

"As vice president, Bush often complained that he did not enjoy eating broccoli, that he never enjoyed eating broccoli and that he would never enjoy eating broccoli," said the magazine blurb.

Somehow, though, the president's chef never got wind of the boss's dislike.

"... a few months ago, when broccoli made still another airborne appearance, Bush could stomach it no longer. He then made it perfectly clear he would no longer tolerate broccoli on the presidential plate."

Thus was born the Bush Ban on Broccoli.

Last week, George S. Dunlop, president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, an industry lobby group, showed up at a White House ceremony wearing a stalk of broccoli on his suit lapel like a carnation boutonniere.

And California growers, producers of more than 90 percent of the nation's broccoli, shipped a thousand points of the leafy green veggie (make that 10 tons) to Washington, D.C., food banks after taking umbrage to the president's remarks.

But not everyone is boiling mad over it. Some just think he's out of the loop.

"We have a lot of fun with broccoli," said David Stidolph, director of the food service division for the country's largest broccoli grower, Mann Packing Co. in Salinas, Calif. "We're taking a happy attitude."

So happy is Stidolph, he's willing to sponsor Bush to be grand marshal of the 1990 Greenfield Broccoli Festival, in a community of 7,000 just south of Salinas. The seventh annual festival runs Sept. 1 and 2 this year.

"We'd like to have him come out here, and we'll give him some of our favorite recipes, like Broccoli Godfather. It's pretty nice. It's a recipe you can't refuse," he said of the dish he concocted 15 years ago.

BUT FITZWATER doubts Bush will be enticed.

"Unfortunately, the president simply hates broccoli and won't eat it," Fitzwater said.

The folks in Greenfield, the self-proclaimed Broccoli Capital of the World, aren't too upset either, if Jane Apparito is to be believed.

"I know around here they're taking it as a ha-ha," said Apparito, general manager of the Greenfield Chamber of Commerce who also works for a broccoli harvesting company.

"We like it here," said Apparito. "We've had an idea to send the president one of our cookbooks to see if we might be able to change his mind."

Perhaps one of the recipes might be for broccoli ice cream, one of the hot sellers during the two-day festival.

Jokes aside, broccoli is just about as perfect a vegetable as there is, according to Betty Nowlin, spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association. It's high in vitamins A and C and is a good source of dietary fiber while still very low in calories and sodium, she said.

"To me, broccoli is a super food," Nowlin said. "It's an excellent choice of vegetable."

It's certainly a much better nutritional choice than, say, the president's beloved pork rinds.

"There's no comparison," said Nowlin. "Pork rinds have no nutritive value."

BUT NOWLIN forgives Bush for his distaste for broccoli.

"He is the president, but he's still like everybody else. At least he's honest about his likes and dislikes."

Instead, maybe the president might substitute brussels sprouts or asparagus. But possibly not.

"They're all in the cabbage family, and they're strong-tasting vegetables. Probably a person who doesn't like broccoli isn't going to like any of those," she said.

Here is Stidolph's recipe:

BROCCOLI GODFATHER

1 (4-ounce) carton whipped cream cheese with chives
½ cup milk
1 (10-ounce) can of shrimp soup, undiluted
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 bunch (about 1 pound) fresh broccoli, cooked in 1 inch salted, boiling water and then drained
Toasted slivered almonds

In saucepan blend cream cheese and milk. Add shrimp soup; heat and stir until soup is smooth. Heat through. Add lemon juice. Pour over cooked broccoli and sprinkle with toasted almonds. Makes 4 servings.

Don't Drink The Water!

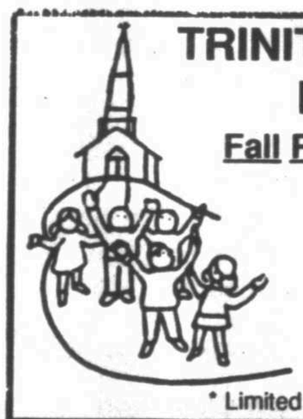

Long-term drinking of chlorinated water appears to increase a person's risk of developing bladder cancer as much as 80 percent, according to a major new study.

"Your water supply could be loaded with contaminant, including bacteria, pesticides, industrial runoff and lead. It is expensive to test for all the possible contaminant, so installing a basic Charcoal-Activated filter acts upon the most common ones.

Ralph Nader states that the approach has got to be Prevention at the Source. (Tap water in the home.)
This is why we urge you to try SWEETWATER'S BACTERIOSTATIC SYSTEM. A patented mineral media that is effective in filtering municipally treated & private well water. For a cost of less than 1¢ a gal.

Homemade sandwich makes low-fat lunch

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Many healthful eating plans go off the rails at lunchtime with fast but high-fat choices. Lighten up with this salmon and fresh vegetable pita sandwich, seasoned with low-calorie dressing.

For a brown-bag lunch, prepare as directed except divide the salmon mixture and vegetables among four airtight containers.

Chill overnight or up to 2 days. Just before packing lunch, spread a pita with cream cheese and wrap in a small plastic bag.

Carry the pita and a container of salmon mixture and vegetables in a insulated lunch box with an ice pack.

At lunchtime, just add the salmon mixture and vegetables to the pita.

SALMON-STUFFED PITA BREAD

1 6¾-ounce can skinless, boneless salmon, drained and flaked, or one 6½-ounce can tuna (water pack), drained and broken into chunks
½ cup loose-pack frozen peas, thawed
⅓ cup reduced-calorie clear Italian salad dressing
1 medium tomato
½ of a medium cucumber
2 large pita bread rounds, split crosswise
¼ cup soft-style cream cheese with chives and onion
½ cup alfalfa sprouts

In a mixing bowl toss salmon or tuna and peas with salad dressing.

Thinly slice tomato and cucumber. Spread insides of pita halves with cream cheese.

Divide salmon mixture, tomato, cucumber and alfalfa sprouts among the pita halves. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Tips help improve slow cooking process

By Anne Byrn
N.Y. Times News Service

Here are some tips on using a slow-cooking electric crock pot:

■ Don't worry about leaving the crock pot unattended. It cooks slowly so no steam escapes. If you follow the recipe, food will not burn.

■ Different settings on the crock pot offer flexibility. At a higher setting, foods may be ready in two to three hours, while on low these dishes may need twice the cooking time — a bonus if you'll be away all day.

■ For better color and flavor, brown meats and other ingredients in a frypan before you place them with liquid and seasonings into the crock pot.

■ Sauces may be thin, because steam hasn't escaped and they have not been allowed to reduce. To heighten flavor and improve appearance, boil sauces down on top of the range just before serving or thicken them with flour.

■ In adapting your favorite recipes to the slow-cooking method, add less liquid. All the liquid you place in the pot is likely to be there when you finish. Use three-quarters of the liquid normally required for soups.

■ Don't uncover the pot to stir contents; uncover only when you believe the dish is done.

■ Foods that are low-cooked may need more seasoning because they haven't been allowed to reduce.

■ A crock pot cooks more efficiently when it is half full.

Soup combines chicken, tortellini

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

When you crave the satisfying flavor of homemade chicken soup in minutes, make this hearty tortellini soup; it's ready in about 10 minutes. Be sure to use refrigerated or frozen tortellini; dried pasta requires longer cooking.

JAPANESE TORTELLINI SOUP

2 14½-ounce cans reduced-sodium chicken broth or regular chicken broth
1 10-ounce package frozen Japanese-style stir-fry vegetables with seasonings
1 cup refrigerated or frozen cheese-stuffed tortellini
Several dashes of bottled hot pepper sauce
1 9-ounce package (2 cups) frozen diced cooked chicken

In large kettle or Dutch oven mix chicken broth, seasoning packet from vegetables, tortellini and hot pepper sauce. Bring to boiling. Add vegetables. Return to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 5 minutes.

Add chicken and cook 5 to 7 minutes more or until tortellini is tender but still slightly firm and vegetables are tender. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Moms sink their teeth into breast-feeding debate

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 33 years old and have been reading your column for as long as I can remember. The letter from "Grossed-Out Grandma" prompts my first letter to you. Grandma was amazed and upset that her 3-year-old granddaughter was still breast-fed.

Van Buren

Abby, you are sure to get a lot of mail on this subject, so please pick the best ones and educate the public.

Breast milk is what nature intended for babies to drink. Women have breasts primarily to nourish their offspring. There is nothing gross about it. What I find distressing is the number of mothers who breast-feed for only a few weeks, or months — or not at all. Instead, they feed their babies man-made formulas that rank a distant second in their capacity to nourish. Not to mention the expense of formula and bottles, and the time it takes to sterilize them.

The convenience of breast milk can't be beat. It's always the right temperature, always available, no bottles to sterilize, and there's nothing to pack or carry on outings. I fail to understand why anyone can be "grossed out" at something that is so natural. Also, this notion that a child can become "too attached" to its mother baffles me. What else should a baby be attached to?

By the way, I have two children. The oldest is now 4, and nursed until he was 3 years old. The youngest is 2, and still nurses two to three times a day.

Incidentally, I am a registered nurse, working part time. Thanks for listening. I feel as though I am talking to an old friend. — PRO BREAST-FEEDING

DEAR ABBY: I don't care what the La Leche League says, I agree with "Grossed-Out Grandma" — nursing a 3-year-old child is absolutely disgusting!

I have two children. They were both weaned before their first birthday. I just can't stomach the idea of breast-feeding a preschooler. In my opinion, a child who has a full set of teeth and can walk, talk, count and ride a tricycle has no business still nursing its mother! — I'M NO COW IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: Count me as one reader who is "grossed out" at the attitude of "Grossed-Out Grandma."

Instead of being revolted by the sight of her daughter-in-law nursing her 3-year-old grandchild, she should acquaint herself with the benefits of long-term nursing, among which are natural immunities to a host of diseases and reduced chances of developing allergies. It promotes dental health and emotional security.

Breast feeding a child for three years takes time, patience and genuine unselfishness. It's much easier to shove a bottle in a child's mouth — especially when the child has a mouthful of teeth. (Ouch!) Believe me, I know. — HAPPILY NURSING IN KENTUCKY

DEAR ABBY: I am 62 years old, a widow, and financially well off with two married children — a daughter and a son. My daughter's mother-in-law, "Jane," is also a financially secure widow. We are good friends, have our own apartments and lead quite active social lives. Jane is 72 and retired.

Recently, my daughter and Jane's son bought a large home. Both Jane and I gave them a gift of $15,000. I also gave my son $15,000 because I don't play favorites. Whatever I do for one, I do for the other. My son didn't want to accept it, but I insisted.

Now for the problem: I have told my children that when I can no longer live alone, I don't want them to feel obligated to care for me, so I have already made arrangements to go to a senior citizens home or, if I am not well, to a nursing home. I mentioned this to Jane and suggested that she do the same. Well, she hit the ceiling. She said, "No way. I gave those kids $15,000, and they will repay me by taking care of me, no matter how bad off I am!"

Abby, should I speak to my daughter and son-in-law and tell them that I will give them $15,000 to return to Jane, and she can take it from there? I don't want Jane to know that I gave them the money. She can think whatever. Am I wrong? — NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: You can make decisions only for yourself — not for Jane. Arranging for your future care in the event that you are unable to live alone is both wise and considerate, but what Jane chooses to do is her affair. You are very generous to want to "buy back" the obligation Jane's son and your daughter may have incurred should Jane be unable to care for herself, but I urge you to let them handle it.

DEAR ABBY: Sad to say, several times a week, we read in the newspapers about families having lost all their possessions as the result of a fire and having no insurance.

This, of course, is most often true of people who rent their homes or apartments. Don't they realize that fire insurance for renters is available for a very nominal fee? Fire alone is a terrible tragedy to endure without financial hardship added to one's woes. Passing this on to your readers and urging them to insure their personal possessions could be a great service. Perhaps some people don't know that renter's insurance is available — or the thought of getting it never occurred to them.

Remember, things like that don't always happen to the "other guy." — TAKING NO CHANCES

DEAR TAKING: In my book, insurance is not a luxury — it's a necessity. To some, paying premiums month after month may seem like betting on a long shot, but when a dreaded calamity becomes a reality and you're covered — it's like winning a lottery!

We Believe

Her First Word Was Help.

With The Support of People Like You, It Won't Be Her Last.
Over two million children in America were the victims of child abuse and torture last year.
It's not just a problem the next town over. It's happening now — today —in your neighborhood. Maybe even next door.

Mary's Story
Mary was nine when she ran away. Her mom left when Mary was two. In the next six years, Mary was repeatedly abused by her father.
Things went from bad to worse.
First he would lock her in the closet for days on end. Then he taped the refrigerator door shut. He would leave only an orange or banana for her day's food. If she broke the tape to open the refrigerator, she was beaten and burned.
When the police found her, one third of Mary's body had multiple burns, on her thighs, buttocks and vaginal area. Her heels were severely burned from being dunked in boiling water. She had an 18 inch scar between her lip and nose, broken teeth and an untreated jaw injury.
Two fingers of her left hand were fused together, the result of burns from a hot poker as Mary tried to protect herself from another burning.
The Healing Process
Childhelp saved and rebuilt her life. When Mary entered the Village of Childhelp, her therapy team recorded many psychological problems: low self-esteem, depression, feelings of inadequacy, and feelings of guilt.
The first priority included plastic surgery to correct multiple scarring on Mary's hands and face. Her treatment plan included art, play and ranch therapy.
As Mary's scars began to fade, her self-esteem grew. She became an active member in the classroom, and her school work and social skills improved dramatically. Within three years, Mary was placed in a foster family. She is doing well now.
Mary was helpless, but you're not.
While Mary couldn't stop her beatings and the torture, you can.
Your gift the Childhelp U.S.A. today of $10; $25, $50 or more will help us prevent child abuse across the country.
Don't let other children suffer the pain and torture of child abuse. Contribute to Childhelp U.S.A. today. Childhelp is the largest non-profit organization in the country involved in research, treatment and prevention of child abuse.

Oil futures seesaw

Energy futures prices are moving up and down, with West Texas Intermediate falling 13 cents to $20.35 in mid-morning trading after closing at $20.50 on Tuesday. Crude oil and heating oil picked up modest gains Tuesday and unleaded gasoline declined.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the May contract for West Texas Intermediate, rose 2 cents to $20.48 a 42-gallon barrel. The contract gained 7 cents on Monday.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, No. 2 wholesale heating oil for April delivery was up 0.65 cent to 55.33 cents a gallon, after falling 0.78 cent Monday.

Market higher

The stock market staged a surprising late-afternoon rally sparked by computer-assisted futures trading and ended higher Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 29.28 points to finish at 2,736.94, after slipping below the 2,700-mark just after midday.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 131.61 million shares, up sharply from 116.11 million in the previous session.

Dollar strong

The dollar strengthened in calm, early European trading today, fueled by weakness in the West German mark and Japanese yen, currency dealers said. Gold prices rebounded.

Traders said investors were changing their minds about the dollar as initial euphoria over German unification fades and uncertainty about the economic costs for the mark emerge.

The dollar rose against the British pound, and was quoted at $1.6221, compared with $1.6255 late Tuesday.

Gold prices rose in nervous trading.

Lockheed's loss

A big institutional holder of Lockheed Corp. stock has decided to support Texas investor Harold Simmons in Simmons' bid to oust the board of directors of the aerospace giant.

Annual GNP increase lowest since 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy posted a 1.1 percent gain from October through December, the slimmest quarterly advance in three years, helping slow the increase of goods and services to just 3 percent in 1989, the government said today.

The Commerce Department's final revision of its fourth-quarter gross national product was up slightly from the 0.9 percent gain in its estimate last month. The department's initial estimate in January was 0.5 percent.

It followed increases of 3.7 percent in the first quarter, 2.5 percent in the second and 3 percent in the third.

The 3 percent gain for all of 1989 was the smallest since a 2.7 percent advance in 1986 and followed increases of 4.4 percent in 1988 and 3.7 percent in 1987.

A consensus of economists had indicated in advance of the latest report that fourth-quarter growth would remain at 0.9 percent.

Many analysts, however, believe that while the pace of economic growth rose further during the current quarter, partly because of weather-related factors, it will not bounce back in 1990 to the levels experienced during much of the 1980s.

In fact, the latest consensus of top economists projects a 1.7 percent growth forecast for this year. That would be the poorest performance since economic activity declined 2.5 percent in 1982 during the last recession.

The fourth quarter's 1.1 percent gain was the lowest since a 0.8 percent advance in the third quarter of 1986.

An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 4.5 percent last year, the Commerce Department said, the same as its estimate last month.

The various changes left the GNP expanding in the fourth quarter at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.17 trillion.

The department attributed the final revision to an increase in final sales, which offset a decrease in the amount of inventories.

The biggest drag on the economy in the fourth quarter was durable goods, which declined 14 percent.

Other areas of weakness included capital spending and housing construction.

Exports, on the other hand, jumped 9.4 percent in the fourth quarter, while imports rose just 2.2 percent.

In a companion report, the department said after-tax profits of U.S. corporations rose 2.8 percent in the fourth quarter.

Corporate profits fell during each of the other quarters of 1989 — 1.1 percent in the first, 7.2 percent in the second and 5.4 percent in the third.

Profits rose 1.4 percent in the final quarter of 1988.

The economy grew more than 3 percent during each of the years since the 1981-1982 recession except when it slowed to a 2.7 percent gain in 1986.

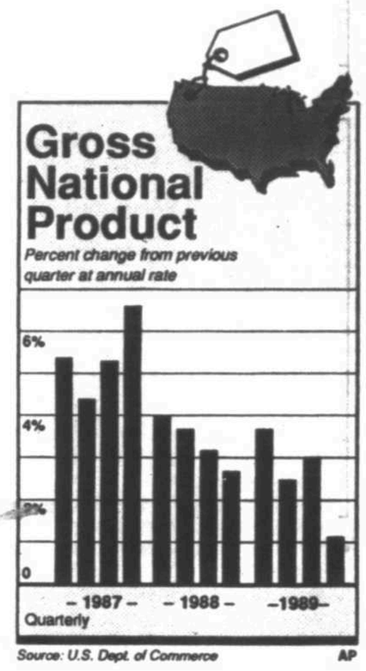

But even moderate growth relieves recessionary fears that some felt late in 1989 as the economy slowed as a result of high interest-rate policies of the Federal Reserve as it sought to stem inflation.

David Wyss, chief financial economist for DRI/McGraw-Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting organization, said he is looking for 1.5 percent growth during the current January-March period, "which still is pretty weak by normal standards, but it doesn't look like we're headed for a recession."

A recession usually is defined as two consecutive quarterly declines in the GNP. The last decline was a one-quarter, 1.8 percent drop in the second quarter of 1986, after which the economy resumed growth.

Kathleen Cooper, senior financial economist for Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said she expects first-quarter growth of about 2 percent.

Union tells Greyhound 'come back to table'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The union representing striking Greyhound bus drivers is urging the company to couple its offer of rewards for information about strike-related violence with a return to negotiations.

"Anything that brings criminals to justice is great, but it's no excuse to stay away from the bargaining table," union spokesman Jeffrey Nelson said Tuesday after Greyhound Lines Inc. said it would pay $100,000 for information leading to convictions for shootings at buses or terminals.

Since the strike started March 2, there have been shooting attacks on 21 Greyhound buses and two attacks on terminals, Greyhound vice president P. Anthony Lannie said in announcing the rewards.

Circle K losing ground

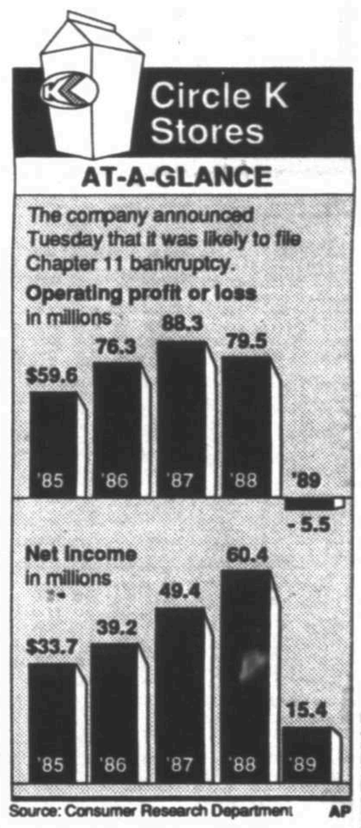

PHOENIX (AP) — Circle K Corp., owner of the nation's second-largest chain of convenience stores, said it was negotiating with creditors to restructure its $1.3 billion debt and may have to seek bankruptcy court protection if the talks fail.

Spokesman Ray Cox said Tuesday the company was optimistic it would be able to restructure its debt by April 30, the end of its fiscal year.

"There are no guarantees, and there are some difficulties to overcome, but we are optimistic about getting it completed," Cox said.

Circle K joins market leader Southland Corp., owner of the 7-Eleven chain, in struggling to refinance its huge debt. The company expanded rapidly in the mid-to-late 1980s, financing its growth

American Express ups Shearson bid

NEW YORK (AP) — American Express Co. on Tuesday sweetened its buyout of Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. as analysts projected a record $700 million first-quarter charge against earnings for the struggling Wall Street firm.

The pretax charge for Shearson estimated by a top credit rating agency would be the largest in securities industry history, exceeding a $470 million charge by Merrill Lynch & Co. in the fourth quarter of last year.

American Express also said that as a result of its improved buyout offer for Shearson shares it doesn't already own, attorneys had agreed to drop about 20 class-action lawsuits filed by shareholders challenging the merger.

The deal was a reversal for American Express, which had intended to reduce its majority stake in the Wall Street firm. Shearson has been strained by 1980s overexpansion and a recession in the securities industry.

If completed, American Express will own about 92 percent of Shearson, with the rest held by Nippon Life Insurance Co. of Japan.

Under the deal, American Ex-

KFC, Sears talk chicken

CHICAGO (AP) — A Texas food service company said Tuesday it is negotiating to test market the sale of Kentucky Fried Chicken in Sears Roebuck and Co. stores.

Cattleguard Inc. of Houston, owner and operator of Sears Bakery, Deli & Cafes, hopes to open chicken outlets in two Sears stores sometime in May, Andrew Buttacavoli, president of Cattleguard, said.

The company sells sandwiches, pastry, yogurt and other food at concessions in 38 of the retailer's 850 stores. The two where chicken restaurants would be added are in St. Louis and Dallas, Buttacavoli said.

Cattleguard said the deal is still awaiting approval by Kentucky Fried Chicken and Sears.

CIRCLE K: Convenience chain may see bankruptcy partly by issuing junk bonds through Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

(From 1C)

In a statement released late Monday, Circle K said it lost more than $42 million from operations during the three months ended Jan. 31. A $14 million tax carryback reduced the company's net loss for the period to $28.1 million.

"If the company does not achieve a financial restructuring, it will not have adequate liquidity," the statement said.

Circle K blamed its red ink on a sales slump and acknowledged it had overpriced its wares. The company said it would begin cutting prices in an effort to win back customers.

The company said it was negotiating with the assistance of its advisor, Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. It cautioned that any debt renegotiation would involve various deadlines and demands by parties to the talks.

"Some of the deadlines and demands will be difficult to meet and will require extension or modification. If any deadline is not met or extended or any unsatisfied demand is not satisfactorily altered, an impasse could result which might prevent completion of the negotiated restructuring," Circle K said.

The company spent at least $850 million to expand from about 1,000 stores in the United States in 1984 to 4,685 last November.

Then it announced a retrenchment, including a planned debt renegotiation and the sale of at least 10 percent of its stores. Circle K has agreed to sell 350 stores in the Pacific Northwest and 25 in Hawaii, but those sales have not closed.

GNP: Up only 3 percent

(From 1C)

"This quarter turned out to be a good deal stronger than we anticipated," she said.

"But it may well be that the first quarter will be the strongest of the year," she added, saying 1990 growth would register between 1.5 percent and 2 percent.

On the other hand, Michael K. Evans, head of Evans Economics Inc. here, is forecasting a "surprisingly robust" second-quarter growth of between 3 percent and 4 percent.

Both Ms. Cooper and Evans said the relatively stronger numbers means it is unlikely the Federal Reserve will ease its tight-credit policies. The Bush administration and many economists have urged the Fed to permit interest rates to fall to stimulate the economy.

The Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's monetary-policy setting arm, met behind closed doors on Tuesday to decide on its policies for the next six weeks. As usual, it will not announce its decision until next month.

BUS: Reward offered in bus violence incidents

(From 1C)

"The terrorism must stop," Lannie said. "It's inevitable that somebody is going to get hurt."

No one has been seriously injured in any of the shootings. On the second day of the walkout, a striking driver in Redding, Calif., was crushed to death by a bus driven by a replacement driver. No one was charged.

"Certainly, we condemn the violence, but we don't have a hand in it," Nelson said.

Meanwhile Tuesday in West Hartford, Conn., the case against a striking driver accused of shooting at a bus two weeks ago was moved to Hartford Superior Court so officials there can determine whether more serious charges are warranted.

Roger Cawthra, 44, is accused of firing the shot that hit the luggage compartment of a Greyhound bus carrying 19 passengers. No one was injured.

Cawthra, the only person who has been arrested in any of the shootings, was charged with first-degree criminal mischief, a felony, and three misdemeanors — first-degree reckless endangerment, unlawful discharge of a firearm and unlawful discharge of a firearm on a public highway.

The union said it is willing to resume negotiations at any time. Lannie said the company would not resume talks, which broke down 10 days ago in Tucson, Ariz., until management had "hard assurances" from the union that the violence would stop.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor's plan to sell home will help income

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife and I are in our 70s and retired. Our home, worth about $150,000 is paid for. We considered a reverse mortgage to increase our income, but I have an alternative. Our house is too big for the two of us. Also, health problems prevent us from cutting the grass and doing other maintenance.

Here is my plan.

Sell the house for $150,000 and have $140,000 left after paying realtor's commission, lawyer's fees, etc. Take the $125,000 tax exclusion on the sale, meaning only $15,000 is taxable.

Invest $140,000 at 8 percent to bring in $11,200 per year. Rent a nice apartment or condominium for $800 per month, as can be done in this area. Also, we would save the $4,000 per year we now pay in real estate taxes and about $2,500 per year on maintenance, heat, insurance, etc.

Does this make sense?

A. Very much so. Reverse mortgages are great for senior citizens who need a steady flow of additional money and who wish to keep living in their homes. However, you obviously are ready — even anxious — to move into smaller and more suitable living space.

Doyle

Your plan will work out even better than you outline, because it is most unlikely any tax will be due on the sale. When you sell, your profit will be the difference between the proceeds from the sale — $140,000, by your estimate — and your tax cost basis.

Your basis is the price at which you bought the house plus the cost of all additions and improvements. If your basis is at least $15,000, as clearly should be the case, you won't owe the Internal Revenue Service one cent.

Because you are past your 55th birthdays and have used the house as your principal residence for at least three of the five years before the sale, you are entitled to the once-in-a-lifetime exclusion from tax on up to $125,000 of the capital gain on the sale.

The difference between $140,000 and your basis certainly will figure out as lower than $125,000. Voila! No tax!

Q. Your advice to an elderly couple to get a reverse mortgage really stinks. Don't you realize that might result in the loss of their home? I am really hot under the collar about this and would love to aim my size 12s at your rear end.

A. It's hard to tell whether your letter was brought on by a full moon or an empty jug. The column about which you gripe explains the dire consequence you dream up can't happen.

In that column, I wrote, "... that (reverse mortgage) loan does not have to be paid off until you die, sell the house or move out of it." Further on, I added, "The reverse mortgage will come due and have to be paid off only after you both join the choir silent or sell the house."

Use your size 12s head toward a bucket of water, in which to soak your head.

BID: American sweetens the pot in Shearson deal

(From 1C)

press will exchange about $360 million of its own stock, or about 13.4 million shares, for the 28 million remaining publicly held Shearson shares, about 30 percent of those outstanding.

The Shearson stock would be converted into 0.48 of a share of American Express stock. That would be a 12.7 percent increase from the 0.426 a share announced March 4.

American Express also said a previously announced $750 million capital infusion had been made available to Shearson. American Express will have pumped about $1.36 billion into Shearson in recent months once the recapitalization plan is completed.

After an initial recapitalization plan to breathe life into Shearson fell though late last year, American Express decided to take control of its securities unit in an attempt to avoid a credit rating reduction.

The giant credit card and financial services firm installed one of its executives to run Shearson and announced a major cost-cutting effort that has included about 2,000 layoffs this month and 50 branch office closings. Shearson hopes the reorganization will save $400 million a year.

Big pension fund backs Simmons bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investor Harold Simmons won a powerful ally Tuesday in his contest to unseat the board of Lockheed Corp.: California's $5.6 billion Public Employees' Retirement System, which owns 500,000 Lockheed shares.

The pension fund, known as Calpers, said it would back Simmons rather than Lockheed Chairman Daniel Tellep after Simmons agreed to urge his slate of directors to set up a shareholders committee to advise the board. Calpers advocates such panels as a way to exert more control over companies in which it invests.

"We met with both Mr. Tellep and Mr. Simmons," said Kayla Gillan, Calpers' assistant general counsel. "Mr. Simmons provided us a written commitment that if elected he would recommend to his slate the creation of a shareholder advisory committee."

In waging a proxy election campaign to get his slate elected to the Lockheed board, Simmons has tried to put Tellep on the defensive with proposals to give Lockheed shareholders more input. He says that if his faction is put in charge, he could manage the company so as to increase the price of Lockheed's stock, which has plunged nearly $20 per share in recent months.

Lockheed closed up $1.12½ at $37 a share Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Tellep, who contends Simmons has no idea how to run a big defense company, countered on Tuesday with his own attempt to woo the big institutional shareholders who hold 60 percent of Lockheed's stock.

He promised them a seat on the board after Lockheed's annual meeting Thursday, when the company will announce whether Tellep and the other directors have been ousted in Simmons' proxy battle.

"We will work with our institutional shareholders to develop a list of potential directors from within or outside their ranks who could provide additional perspective to our directors," Tellep said in a statement.

"We believe that selection of at least one director from that list could provide important input to the future of the company."

Calpers holds less than 1 percent of Lockheed's stock, although its influence is greater than the stake might suggest.

For example, Calpers has persuaded Occidental Petroleum Corp. to allow Calpers officials access to Occidental directors twice a year. Occidental agreed to the meetings as a compromise after Calpers demanded a shareholders advisory committee similar to the one promised by Simmons.

Simmons' chief lieutenant, J. Landis Martin, said in a telephone interview that Calpers is one of many institutional shareholders leaning toward Simmons.

Japan offers America advice on how to cut deficit

TOKYO — Japan has a few ideas how President Bush can move quickly to tighten up the American economy.

To start with, he should strictly limit every American to just a couple of credit cards.

Then he should build a network of bullet trains across America, impose a stiff gasoline tax and get rid of low-interest car loans, all to get gas-guzzlers off the road.

And he should ban the tax write-off for many types of home mortgages because it subsidizes consumption, not savings.

That is a sampling of 80 very concrete ideas the Japanese government presented the Bush administration several weeks ago, part of the broad critiques Japan and the United States are making of each other's economies.

The list was leaked to Japanese newspapers over the weekend and confirmed by officials on both sides Monday.

"Is this a recipe for political suicide?" a senior Japanese official said after he was asked whether Japan actually expected the president — or other American politicians — to embrace reforms that would likely cost most American voters thousands of dollars.

"Maybe it is. But you should see America's ideas for Japan."

There are 240 of those — the Japanese press termed them demands when they leaked late last week — including a suggestion the leaders of Japan's biggest and most secretive business conglomerates make public the minutes of their monthly meetings.

The Japanese business community has scarcely rushed to voice its support of the idea.

For months, both countries have broadly criticized each other's economies.

But the two recently exchanged lists make up the most specific plans either side has ever put together to close Japan's trade surpluses and open the country's markets, or to end America's budget deficits and restore U.S. industrial competitiveness.

From the start, both sides say, the plan was to put together the best suggestions they could come up with, paying no heed to political realities on either side.

"We don't expect every suggestion to be adopted," said a senior official of the American Embassy in Tokyo, "and neither do they."

The result is what Makoto Kuroda, a former high official of Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, calls "a bunch of very crazy ideas."

"But as long as you gave us your crazy ideas," Kuroda told an American Monday night, "we thought we would give you a few of ours."

Some Japanese suggestions are familiar to anyone who has followed the often-repetitive trade dialogue of the countries.

For example, the Japanese said American companies should report earnings, and pay dividends, only twice a year, rather than quarterly.

That is the system Japan uses, and the proposal grows from the ritual argument in Japan that American companies are too shortsighted.

Some American ideas are also familiar.

A draft of the U.S. proposals calls for raising Japan's public spending to about 10 percent of gross national product from the current 6 percent.

It wants to "abolish the distinction between areas for urban development" and areas where such development is regulated, like farmlands.

It calls for a repeal of the law that makes it difficult to establish large department stores, American or Japanese, anywhere it might hurt small shops.

It is Japan's ideas, however, that have attracted much of the curiosity.

Videotex predicted for future

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The newspaper industry's reluctance to embrace videotex threatens to create a vacuum that telephone companies and others eventually will fill, a top newspaper executive said Monday.

"We ought to be asking ourselves if we are not in the local information business" instead of the newspaper business, said Phillip J. Meek, president of the publishing division of Capital Cities-ABC Inc., and former publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, Meek chided the industry for failing to pursue videotex — computer-delivered information.

He also said the failure could leave open a market that telephone companies and other possible competitors eventually could capture.

The newspaper industry has fought efforts by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and some regional phone companies to provide information over existing lines, but Meek said he is "frustrated and alarmed that nothing is happening" within the industry to fill the void.

Although currently restricted, "sooner or later, if newspapers don't do something, the phone companies ought to come in," Meek said.

Some large newspaper chains have offered videotex services with little success, and some experts doubt videotex will develop a following among the general public.

Meek said those past failures have scared off other newspaper ventures.

"It's a narrow audience, but it's a decent business," said Meek, who oversaw the creation of StarText, a videotex service of the Fort Worth newspaper.

Meek said StarText, begun in 1982, currently has about 4,200 subscribers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, more than Prodigy, a similar venture of IBM and Sears Roebuck and Co.

Newspapers must also be aware of attempts to slice up their traditional markets, he said, pointing to the proliferation of free publications that advertise homes, jobs, cars and other items that normally make up a newspapers' classified ad section.

Suggesting the newspaper industry provide some of those publications, he said, "If it makes sense, it's going to happen."

Meek also called on the executives to fight proposed changes in U.S. Postal Service regulations that would reduce the mailing costs of "saturation" publications while raising fees for newspapers by $20 per thousand.

"It's an unfair break to one segment of direct mail that just puts pressures on newspapers," Meek said.

The proposed regulations would lower mailing costs for publications that reach about 90 percent of the households in a given area, he said, while newspapers penetration rates are at about 60 percent.

Separately, Meek urged the newspaper executives to study newspapers with higher penetration rates. He said those papers generally stress local news, including the local impact of international events.

"We have to do a better job of providing the news and entertainment that our readers want rather than what we think they want," he said.

In addition to the Star-Telegram, Capital Cities-ABC publishes seven other daily newspapers. The company also owns the ABC television network, eight television stations, six radio networks and 21 radio stations.

Race still issue, coach says

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — A certain perception about black coaches is still prevalent, says Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson, the second black to take a team to the NCAA tournament's Final Four.

"When I win a basketball game or John Thompson does, it's because we've got talented players," Richardson said. "When a white coach wins, it's because he's smart."

Thompson was the first black coach to reach the Final Four, eight years ago at New Orleans. His Georgetown team lost to North Carolina in the final, then won the championship two years later at Seattle.

Thompson was offended when asked how it felt to be the first black coach with a team in the Final Four. Richardson said he understands Thompson's anger, though they came from different worlds.

"I came from the South, John is from back East," he said. "There's a lot of feelings in the way we were brought up. I came from a city that I call the 'colorless city,' and it's in Texas — El Paso. The reason it's colorless is 60 percent is Mexican-American, and that's minority to begin with."

But even in El Paso, he said, he was subject to discrimination. "I couldn't go to the movies when I was a college player. ... I couldn't go to the restaurant and ride on the bus, and even if I did, I rode in the back."

On campus, "I never, ever was called a name. And I was the only one on the campus who was black. I was never called a name. I was never treated disrespectfully on the campus."

That doesn't mean he doesn't have strong feelings on the subject. He sees himself and Thompson and Minnesota's Clem Haskins as pioneers, breaking new ground in a largely white world.

"What else could we be?" Richardson said. "Every move we make is an important step. Every move that is positive is an important step."

There were no black coaches in El Paso when he started his high school coaching career there, he said. "Then you leave and there's three or four come in and get a good job."

In years past, he said, blacks broke into coaching as assistants, hired mostly to recruit black players and to deal with them once they were on the roster.

"We'd go out and attract all the black kids," he said. "We'd work with the black problems. I used to see this. But that was the only way we could get jobs."

When he took a coaching post at Western Texas Junior College in Snyder, he recalled, "there's maybe only 10 black families. And I left and they hired a black coach two years later."

He served a similar purpose in Oklahoma, he said, as coach at Tulsa.

"Oklahoma State would have never hired Leonard Hamilton if I wasn't over there knocking them out recruiting," Richardson said. "They said, 'Oh, man. We got to do something about this.'

"That was part of why I came to Arkansas, to open up the South," he said. "Open it up. Let me see if I can do the same kind of job I did in junior college."

One change he sees is in the attitudes of fans. The primary problem today, he said, is the belief that "we cannot be placed in positions where we have to make decisions. I don't think it has anything to do with the fans today. I think maybe years ago it did, but the fans today just want to win."

But watch out if you don't.

"That's the main thing. It's amazing. You can be at an all-white school with black players and as long as you win you never hear racial things," Richardson said. "You only hear racial things when you're losing."

Texas pitcher Charlie Hough, right, jokes around with pitching legend Nolan Ryan at the Rangers' training facility.

Hough keeps jokes flowing

Associated Press

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — When Charlie Hough suffered a sore shoulder last season, he didn't panic for fear his career was over at age 41.

He just remembered 1969 and relaxed.

"My arm was much worse in 1969 so I didn't think last year meant I couldn't throw anymore," Hough said.

"If you saw me in 1969, it was 10 times worse than last year. I couldn't reach home plate."

Hough's major league career almost ended before it could begin that year.

Instead of returning home to Florida, Hough learned the throw the knuckleball and became one of the most consistent winners in the league.

Hough's sore shoulder forced him onto the disabled list last year but he returned in time to finish strong.

"It just kept hanging on," Hough said. "We're not talking tremendous pain. I could throw the ball as hard but I couldn't throw it right. If you can't throw the knuckleball right, you won't be able to compete."

Hough is back this year, joking about his abilities and planning to continue pitching "until they fire me."

He saw his son Aaron pitch in Little League before reporting to spring training and said he saw both good and bad in the performance.

"He winds up just like Nolan Ryan but he throws about as hard as I do," Hough said.

Asked how the Rangers, who led the major leagues in walks last season could cut down on the bases on balls, Hough said: "Well, they could cut me."

American League hitters don't fall for Hough's standup routine.

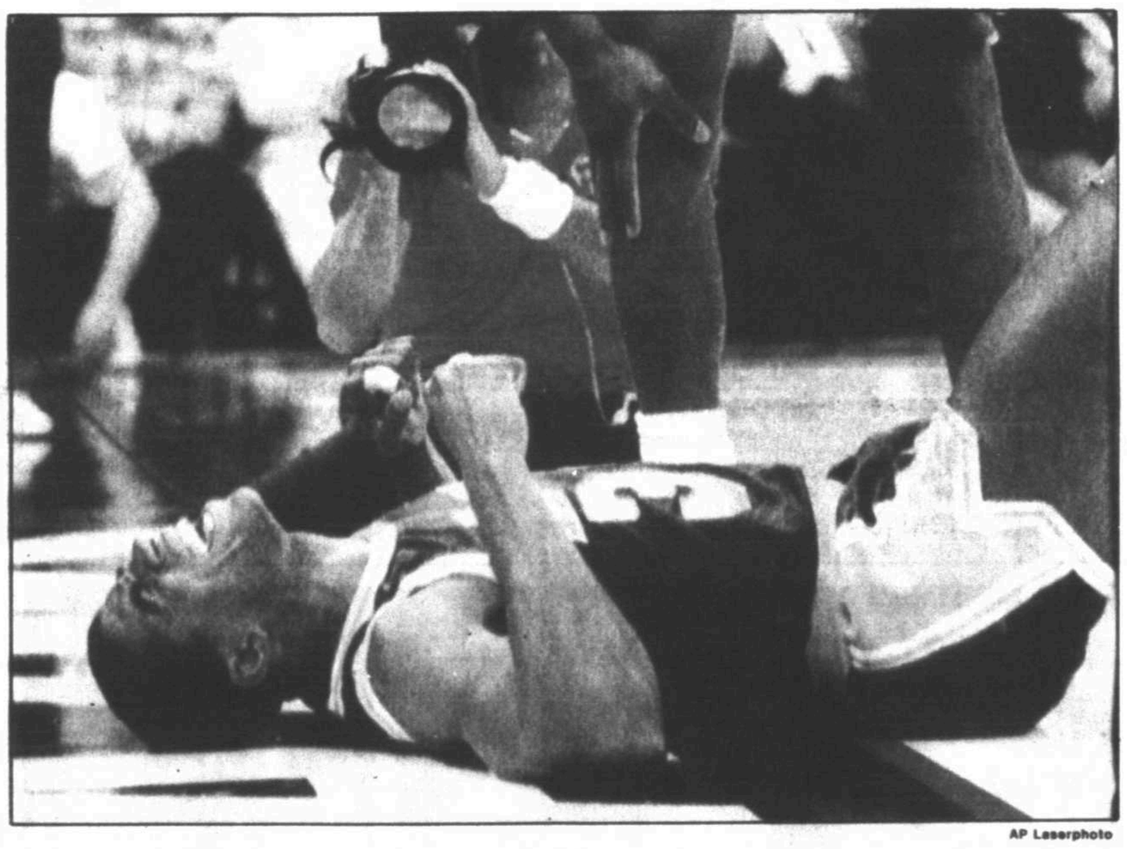

Despite spending so much time on the disabled list last season, Hough has been one of the most durable and consistent pitchers in the league in recent years.

He finished last season with 10 victories that gave him 121 over the last eight years, the second highest total in the major leagues for that span.

Los Angeles' Magic Johnson writhes in pain after sprainging an ankle Tuesday night.

Portland still blazing hot

Associated Press

The Portland Trail Blazers took aim at the Pacific Division-leading Los Angeles Lakers and hit nothing but net.

"Some shots went in that shocked me," said Kevin Duckworth, who scored 22 points in Portland's 130-111 thrashing of the Lakers Tuesday night. "The way we were playing, I don't care if they had Wilt Chamberlain, we still would have beaten them."

The Lakers didn't have Chamberlain, who retired in 1973. Nor did they have Magic Johnson after the second period, when he sprained his right ankle.

But, by then, the Trail Blazers already had a 51-39 lead.

"No excuses," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We were flat and they weren't. If we come with the same attitude that we had tonight in our next game, we could have a similar result. It was obvious from the get-go. They looked us right in the eye."

The victory pulled Portland within two games of the Lakers in the Pacific Division. It was the most one-sided loss for Los Angeles this season and Portland's biggest victory margin against the Lakers since December 1983.

The Blazers, who are 2-1 against the Lakers this season, will play Los Angeles again Friday night. And Portland guard Terry Porter believes the Blazers still have a good chance of winning the division crown.

"They play the Clippers tomorrow night and they might be without Magic," Porter said. "If the

A&M expects to name coach

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Idaho's Kermit Davis Jr. will be named today as the new head basketball coach at Texas A&M, according to broadcast and published reports.

KRIV-TV of Houston reported Tuesday that Texas A&M Athletic Director John David Crow had contacted Davis by telephone at his in-law's home in Helena, Ark., and offered him the job.

Davis, 31, met with Crow Tuesday night and could be named coach today, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported today.

"There's still a thing or two that's got to be done," Crow told the local newspaper after a 30-minute meeting with Davis at the Memorial Student Center. "We don't have a coach yet. If things work out, we'll have a press conference (today).

Can't sleep? Forget sheep, count freshmen

The University Interscholastic League released some interesting Class 5A enrollment figures this week that will have a direct bearing on the state football playoffs next fall.

Williamson

It was previously thought that Midland Lee and Midland High would have the two lowest enrollments in District 4-5A, but both Abilene Cooper and Abilene High had an lower number of students under figures just released.

Under the new 5A playoff plan, each district will be given three playoff berths. The two schools among the three finishers with the highest enrollment will go into the 64-team "Big School Football Championship." The third school with the smallest enrollment will go into the 32-team "Conference 5A Football Championship."

Enrollment figures were based on the number of students in the top four grades. For instance, both MHS and Lee do not have freshmen on campus, but the students at Lee and Midland freshman schools will be included to determine overall enrollment.

The new figures give Lee and MHS a somewhat better chance at playing in the big school championship, but traditional playoff powers Odessa Permian and San Angelo are still much larger than our local schools.

For instance, should Lee finish first, MHS second and Abilene High or Cooper third, both Lee and MHS would advance to the big school playoff. You can switch any of the final places around, but it wouldn't change what playoff the schools would enter.

If San Angelo or Permian are one or two of the three playoff teams, the Bobcats and Panthers will automatically be in the big school playoff because of the two highest enrollment figures in the district.

San Angelo ranks first in the district and 15th in the state with 3,237 students in the top four grades. Permian ranks second in the district and 23rd in the state with 3,020.

Odessa High ranks third in the district and 28th in the state with 2,892 students.

Then comes the drop. Lee ranks fourth in district and 61st in the state with 2,563 students. Midland High follows with a 91st state ranking with 2,330. Cooper ranks 103rd in the state at 2,276 while Abilene High is a step back at 104 with 2,275. Abilene High, despite being one student short, will always be in the small school division, regardless of who else in the district makes the football playoffs.

Plano, as expected, is regarded as the largest high school in the state with 5,170 students in the top four grades. Plano is followed by Pharr-San Juan-Alamo, 4,652; Harlingen, 4,048; Dallas Skyline, 3,973; Edinburg, 3,930; Plano East, 3,810; Converse Judson, 3,733; Alief Elsik, 3,725; Alief Hastings, 3,696; and Brownsville, 3,524.

Plano has two of the top six schools and the Alief school district owns two of the top 10.

Of the 238 5A schools, Houston Milby has the smallest four-grade enrollment with 701.74. The bottom 16 schools in 5A have enrollments at the 4A level, but elected to play 5A competition.

Two of the schools in the bottom 20 are Amarillo Palo Duro and Plainview, both of which seem to make regular state playoff appearances.

Regardless of whether you like the new playoff format or not, it is going to get at least a one-year test run. So, if you didn't have enough to worry about, start counting victories — and keep a sharp eye on enrollments.

However, in an effort to keep looking for the positive side in all things, maybe football fans will never have to count sheep again to go to sleep. You can always count the heads of ninth graders.

Dodds, Penders hold contract session today

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas basketball coach Tom Penders plans to meet with Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds today in an attempt to reach agreement on a new contract before Penders leaves Thursday for the Final Four and coaches convention in Denver.

Penders, who has been at Texas two seasons, guided the Longhorns to a 24-9 mark and a berth in the NCAA Midwest Regional final, said Tuesday he hopes to get the matter resolved today in his first meeting with Dodds since Texas' season ended Saturday in an 88-85 loss to Arkansas.

Penders was ill Monday and Dodds was out Tuesday with the flu.

"I don't think a totally new contract will be signed until it's been thoroughly read over," Penders said, "but certainly we can get a handshake."

Penders has three years remaining on a five-year contract. His base salary is $92,650, but his total financial package, including benefits (shoe contract, radio and television shows, summer camp) is believed to be in the $300,000 range.

Penders wants raises for his top two assistants, Jamie Ciampaglio and Eddie Oran, whose base salary is $43,110 apiece.

The Austin American-Statesman reported a source said last week that a prominent alumnus is creating a $1 million endowment, from which the interest can be used to supplement the assistants' salaries and make improvements Penders wants in the basketball offices and dressing rooms.

"Even before the season, we (Dodds and Penders) talked about improving the salary situation, not for myself but for my assistants," Penders said. "They've talked about moving us all up into the top 10 percent in the country.

"Money's always been a secondary thing. But what's happened, and will continue to happen, is people will come in here and say, 'Hell, we'll pay you twice as much as what they're paying you at Texas.'"

Penders, 49-18 in two seasons at Texas after taking Rhode Island to the round of 16 of the NCAA tournament in 1988, is a hot commodity. He became even hotter after guiding Texas to within a game of the Final Four.

A television report last week said North Carolina State has contacted Penders about replacing Jim Valvano. Penders declined to comment on the report.

The University of Florida has expressed interest in Penders, and he said he had a 30-minute telephone conversation about two weeks ago with Florida Athletic Director Bill Arnsparger.

In a Florida newspaper, Penders was quoted as saying the Florida job was the only one in which he might have any interest.

"I understood he (Arnsparger) was going to call me back," Penders told The Florida Times-Union. "I'm not out looking for other jobs, but I had a good conversation with him. I certainly was impressed with some of the things I heard. It seemed like their interest was genuine, and it was mutual."

Penders said he has not talked to Florida officials since returning from Dallas on Sunday.

Contacted at home, Dodds said, "Everything's fine. We're working on it and we're talking about it. We're going to talk tomorrow (Wednesday)."

Penders said, "I feel DeLoss wants me to stay and wants to have a situation at Texas that is one of the best in the country for his coaches. I know our president feels the same way, so I feel good about our situation here."

AGGIES: Crow decides on new coach midnight.

"We have decided on who we would like to be our new head coach," Crow said Tuesday. "We're just not ready to name him yet. I need to notify some people of some things."

Davis posted a 39-20 record in two seasons at Idaho, where five members of this year's team played their high school or junior college basketball in Texas.

The Vandals won the Big Sky Conference this season and wound up 25-6 after losing to Louisville in the first round of the NCAA West Regional.

Earlier Tuesday Alabama-Birmingham basketball coach Gene Bartow denied reports that he was the front-runner for the post. He said he had not been offered the job.

Bartow, 58, who recently completed his 12th season at UAB, said he had visited with Crow, "and I wish him the best in his search for head basketball coach."

Bartow, who has coached for 28 years, has a 536-279 career record and finished the 1990 season with a 22-9 mark before losing to UCLA in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Crow met last Friday in Oakland, Calif., with Loyola Marymount Coach Paul Westhead, who is not believed to be seriously interested in the job coaching the Aggies.

Other reported candidates have included Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs, Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins, Xavier's Pete Gillen and Tim Floyd of New Orleans.

Angels, Trappers tie

Staff Report

MESA, Ariz. — The Midland Angels and Edmonton Trappers played to a 1-1 tie Tuesday in minor league exhibition play.

Midland outhit Edmonton 7-4 and two Angels had a pair of hits each: Jeff Gay was 2-for-4 with two singles and Terence Carr closed at 2-for-3 with a double. Carr also scored the only run for Midland.

Midland is now 4-4-1 on the exhibition season.

Millard enters not guilty plea

EDINA, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings defensive tackle Keith Millard has entered a not guilty plea to charges of speeding and drunken driving.

Millard's attorney Jeff Mohr entered the plea Tuesday in Hennepin County District Court on the charges stemming from Millard's arrest two months ago in Bloomington. Millard did not appear in court.

Baseball's spring season as weird as ever

Associated Press

Pasqual Perez is in camp, the umpires are coming back, there's an outbreak of chicken pox in Arizona and the San Francisco Giants are still trying to beat the Oakland Athletics.

All this on Day 2 of the spring training that almost wasn't.

Perez, delayed by visa problems and a lawsuit, arrived Tuesday night at the New York Yankees' camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He threw for 10 minutes, pronounced himself fit and predicted he would prove New York's three-year, $5.7 million investment was a good one.

"I'll be ready for the season," said the 32-year-old right-hander, projected as the Yankees' opening-day pitcher.

"I've already told my wife I'm going to win 18 games," he said.

Because of a 1984 drug arrest, Perez needed a waiver to enter the United States. He got it, then was delayed Friday by a child-support suit in the Dominican Republic.

"This kind of thing happens to Pascual every year," Adam Katz, an assistant to Perez's agent, said of the pitcher's late arrival.

Perez didn't discuss specifics of his late arrival, but said no one should expect to see a change in his colorful style.

"I have a lot of energy and I show it," Perez said. "I've pitched my whole career like this and I'm not going to change now."

Perez denies fathering a child born to a woman he claims to know only casually.

There's a player in the Oakland minor-league camp that no one wants tpo face. His name is Marteese Robinson, and he has the chicken pox.

"I have no idea where it came from," he said from his hotel room in Scottsdale, where he is quarantined. "I just can't believe it's me."

And he's not alone. The Cleveland Indians have three chicken pox cases in their minor-league camp at Tucson, about 120 miles away.

Robinson was diagnosed Saturday, and exhibition games with other minor league teams were canceled.

Robinson may be working out again by the weekend.

The major-league A's had no problems at all on Tuesday.

"Everything we do against them is wrong and everything they do is right," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said after the A's routed the Giants 16-3 at Phoenix. "It's a carryover from last year."

Mets 11, Yankees 0

Dwight Gooden, sidelined nearly half of 1989, was impressive in his spring debut for the Mets. Gooden, who had a shoulder muscle problem last season, allowed two hits, and struck out three in two innings.

Keith Hughes had a three-run homer, Keith Miller two singles and two RBIs and Darryl Strawberry drove in two runs. Loser Greg Cadaret allowed four earned runs on three hits and a walk.

Red Sox (ss) 3, Astros 1

Boston's Roger Clemens pitched three scoreless innings and rookie Tim Naehring hit a solo homer.

Clemens combined with Dennis Lamp, Rob Murphy, rookie Jose Manzanillo and Jeff Reardon on a three-hitter.

Twins 3, Astros 2

Kirby Puckett homered and drove in all three Minnesota runs, and Rick Aguilera struck out five in two innings.

Winner Rich Yett, returning to the Twins five years after a trade to Cleveland, allowed two hits and one unearned run in two innings. Larry Andersen took the loss.

Rangers 5, Pirates 1

Scott Coolbaugh tripled in two runs in a five-run eighth-inning for Texas, which broke open the game against reliever Vicente Palacios.

Winner Charlie Hough allowed one hit in four innings. Loser Ted Power pitched one inning, allowing one run and two hits.

Boycotting umps return Friday

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There's hardly ever a chance to reverse one of them on the field, but major league umpires have agreed to let an arbitrator decide their dispute with baseball over the post-lockout rescheduling of games.

Under a compromise worked out in U.S. District Court, the umpires will report to work Friday, ending a one-week boycott of spring training games. And retired Philadelphia Common Pleas Court Judge Stanley Greenberg will arbitrate their grievances against baseball.

Greenberg scheduled his first hearing today.

"We're delighted to see the umpires go back to work," union head Richie Phillips said after the agreement was announced Tuesday. "They need some work, particularly behind the plate, to get ready for the openers April 9."

Minor league umpires are working the exhibition games in the interim. The boycotting umpires had said they would have reported for regular season games.

HOUGH: No spring chicken anymore

tories, eighth among active major league pitchers.

Over the same eight-year span, Hough leads the majors in percentage of games won by his team when he pitches.

He's tied for the league lead with 274 starts and second with 1,946 innings pitched over the same eight-year period.

Hough went on the injury list July 20 and when he returned on Aug. 4, he was once again ready to pitch.

He finished out the season 5-2 with a 3.06 earned run average. He was 10-13 for the year.

"My arm feels real good," Hough said. "I changed my routine. I actually did less, weight-wise, but I did more repetitions."

Hough, 42, was thankful surgery wasn't required.

"I wouldn't have time for that," he said. "At my age, I can't go in and say fix this arm so I can pitch in three years."

Pitching coach Tom House took no chances with Hough.

"He could have thrown on through the season but we played it conservatively," House said. "We've gotten so much more sophisticated in monitoring our winter program and we feel Charlie's fine."

Hough likes to throw as many innings as possible in spring training to get the proper feel of his knuckleball.

"It's more difficult for a guy who doesn't have a great arm to get ready for the season," Hough said. "A hard-thrower has less to get ready.

"Guys with two or three kinds of breaking balls or a knuckleball need more time to get the touch just right."

Eat Right

with tips for living it up with good food choices that follow American Cancer Society (ACS) guidelines on how to help reduce your risk of cancer.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY®

TIPS. Cut down on amounts you eat rather than shop the newest daredevil diets. They never work for long, and they're dangerous because you think mainly of weight loss, not good health. Choose: popcorn (2 cups, 108 cal.) over peanuts (½ cup, 420 cal.); muffin (120 cal.) over doughnut (235 cal.); or gingersnaps and graham crackers over chocolate chips. Ask your doctor if a nearby hospital or clinic has a weight control program. Binge-eating is out; balance is in!

TIPS. Buy lean meats; eat more chicken (skin it before cooking) and fish. Choose cinnamon applesauce or red pepper puree instead of homemade gravy for roast meat. When you deserve a sweet treat make easy chocolate sauce that has .3 grams of fat per tablespoon: Use 1 cup cocoa, ¾ cup granulated sugar, ¾ cup water, ½ cup corn syrup, 1 tsp. vanilla. Watch out for cheese: cheddar has 9.2 grams of fat per ounce; go for part skim ricotta at 2.2, part skim mozzarella at 4.8, or cottage 2% fat at .3.

TIPS. Look for labels saying 4 grams of fiber per ounce in breakfast cereals. Good source: bran muffins. Typical smart breakfast: whole wheat toast topped with low-fat cottage cheese and freshly grated nutmeg, fresh blueberries or other fruit. Dinner winners: cup of broccoli or ½ cup spinach, boiled large potato with skin or sweet potato.

TIPS. Dishes high in vitamin C: melon and bean salad, chicken and leek chowder, most fish chowders, broccoli and sweet pepper stir fry, baked tomatoes and spinach. Get your vitamin A from vegetable pizza, baked zucchini, red lentil soup, apricot stuffed lamb, oranged sweet potatoes, cantaloupe, pasta plus fresh tomatoes and basil. There's more to A than carrots!

TIPS. Vegetable stews, vegetarian chili dishes help you mix broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, brussels sprouts. Dress a vegetable side dish like kale with low-fat white sauce, adding dill or mustard, favorite herbs: Stir cornstarch or flour slowly into cup of cold skim milk until thickened, then heat before adding herbs or spices.

TIPS. Alcohol has lots of calories, little nutritional value, and you double your cancer risk if you smoke too. Cut down. Try seltzer with lime or lemon, add dash of bitters; dilute wines as in spritzers; add soda to fruit juices.

TIPS. Keep items like bacon, ham, bologna, sausage and smoked cheeses for special occasions only. They're high in salt and fat too. Check the labels.

These tips and recipes are from the American Cancer Society Cookbbok. Call us for more information and let us know if you would like to come to a program on diet and cancer risk.

St. Louis, Vanderbilt meet in NIT final

Associated Press

Tip-Off: 8 p.m., ESPN

NEW YORK — Twice this season, Eddie Fogler went to recruit a prospect for Vanderbilt, only to find Dean Smith had been there before him.

"Needless to say, we didn't get them," said the man whose Commodores play St. Louis tonight in the finals of the National Invitation Tournament.

Both Fogler and Coach Rich Grawer of St. Louis concede that they'd rather be somewhere else — like the NCAA tournament. But they're happy for the exposure they can get from the NIT.

"I won't stand here and pretend that I wouldn't have preferred to go to the NCAA," Grawer said Monday. "It's an indictment of our system because of the money involved. It's become the be-all and end-all.

"But the key here is the 'National' Invitation Tournament. It's got teams from the East and the West that we wouldn't play otherwise. It gets us exposure and it helps us attract students who see us play on televison. We had a radio station in St. Louis call this morning and say they were getting calls from all over the country asking what a Billiken is."

For the record, a Billiken is an Eskimo good luck charm that was made the team mascot nearly a century ago because its portly shape resembled the school's football coach. Vanderbilt got its Commodores nickname from the man whose family founded the school, the only private institution in the Southeastern Conference.

And that's the recruiting problem for Fogler, who played for Smith at North Carolina and spent 15 years as an assistant there before heading on to Wichita State and then Vanderbilt.

"I saw one study that said we're the 24th-rated school in the country academically," he said. "That means our pool of potential recruits is more limited than some of our opponents. And we're recruiting against schools like Duke and North Carolina, which are established basketball powers, plus Stanford and other highly rated academic schools."

Still, it's been enough to get four NIT victories for a team that tied for eighth in the SEC and has improved to 20-14. It has been done primarily with outside shooting, defense and precision play. In Monday's 75-62 semifinal victory over Penn State, most of the Commodores' points came on 3-pointers or layups.

"A perfect shot chart," Fogler said.

Twenty of the points and five of the eight 3-pointers came from Scott Draud. The bench chipped in with 29 points, something that worries Grawer, who got nary a point from his subs in an 89-73 victory over New Mexico that got the Billikens, last year's final-round loser to St. John's, into the championship game again.

Dorsett to ink retirement, seek ESPN job

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett says he plans to finalize his NFL retirement papers this week and will devote his time to sports broadcasting and child-rearing.

Dorsett, an almost certain pick for the National Football League Hall of Fame and the No. 2 rusher in league history, said Tuesday he signed his retirement papers last week, two days after auditioning with ESPN for a job as a television sports broadcaster.

An injury last year forced Dorsett, who was playing for the Denver Broncos at the time, to end his 13-year pro football career.

Earlier this year, Dorsett became a full-time father, responsible for his 16-year-old son, Anthony, who until recently had lived with his mother, Karen Casterlow, in Aliquippa, Pa.

"My mom did all the raising, basically," said Anthony, a junior at J.J. Pearce High School in suburban Richardson, Texas. "But now, my dad is going to try and be mom."

Dorsett, the Cowboys' all-time rushing leader, was traded to the Denver Broncos in 1988. He says he is excited about life after football but would have preferred to end his career under different circumstances.

"I would have liked to have ended my career on the field," he said. "But they (the retirement papers) will be sent this week — they're signed."

Copies of the documents will be sent to Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, to Broncos management and to the NFL commissioner's office, he said.

Dorsett, who had 12,739 career rushing yards, hurt his knee in August while running a pass pattern. The injury forced him to sit out the entire season, but Dorsett said it was not the determining factor in his decision to retire.

"I've been playing this game for a long time," he said, "and I have pretty much had enough. I am somewhat burned out.

"I did not think I would play this game until 40, so this is a good time to retire."

Dorsett said he was excited by the prospect of landing a job with ESPN.

"They told me it went well and that they were impressed with my studio appearance. I was happy and delighted," Dorsett said. "I thought I would be even more nervous than I was.

Although he was traded, Dorsett says Dallas remains his adopted home and favorite city.

He said people will remember him not as a Bronco but as a Cowboy.

"There is more to life for Tony Dorsett than just professional football," he told The Dallas Morning News.

Anderson shrugs off flashy style

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Flashy moves for the sake of flashy moves don't mean a thing to Kenny Anderson, the touted New York City freshman who bore a big burden when he launched his college career at Georgia Tech.

"Flash," Anderson said Tuesday. "That's the playground type of game."

It's a game that holds no particular interest to Anderson, who can match between-the-leg dribbles and behind-the-back passes with the best of them.

"I worked on my shot," he said. "That helped me to get out of the playground style."

Carrying the label as the best guard to come out of New York caused Tech coach Bobby Cremins to fear that Anderson might not be able to live up to expectations.

"Kenny's a little bit of a loner," Cremins said. "He's learned to be more outgoing. Kenny's never been around a team where there were people he looked up to. He was always the one people looked up to."

Cremins said Anderson looks up to Dennis Scott, Tech's scoring leader at 27.7 points a game, a long-range scorer who often launches shots from behind the NBA 3-point line.

He also looks up to Brian Oliver, a senior who has averaged 21.2 points despite playing with a stress fracture of the left ankle.

"He's not everything that everybody thinks he is, but he can be," Cremins said of Anderson. "He is a remarkable player."

The 6-foot-2, 166-pound Anderson was voted Most Valuable Player in the NCAA tournament's Southeast Regional at New Orleans last weekend, hitting a disputed buzzer-beating 19-footer to force an overtime with Michigan State in the semifinal game which Tech eventually won 81-80.

He came back with 30 points in Tech's 93-91 victory over Minnesota in the region final on Sunday, an effort that lifted Anderson's scoring average to 20.7 points a game.

Minnesota's Melvin Newbern said the Tech freshman was an outstanding player.

"They get the ball to him, he drives, he penetrates, he pulls up and takes the shot," Newbern said. "They do all sorts of things to get him open one-on-one. We played him well defensively. We pressured him, but he overcame it. He played like a true veteran guard."

"I think people were expecting him to be really selfish, wouldn't give the ball up," Cremins said.

Anderson has been anything but selfish, evidenced by a team-leading 8.1 assists per game.

Anderson was voted rookie of the year in the Atlantic Coast Conference, earned a berth on the All-ACC first team and was a third team All-American.

"I think he's becoming a smarter player," Cremins said. "Once he becomes a smarter player, then he'll be the best."

MAGIC: No tricks in LA bag Tuesday

(From 1D)

Clippers win and we take care of business Thursday (against Atlanta), we'd be tied if we beat them down there."

"It was a game we had to have if we are going to stay close to them and put some pressure on them," Portland coach Rick Adelman said.

Johnson was injured with 6:20 to play in the second period. Lakers trainer Gary Vitti said Johnson would undergo X-rays today, although it appeared the injury was not serious.

"Basically I came down on somebody's foot," Johnson said. "The thing about this is, it can be with me for a day or a week. The next day is always the real test for ankle sprains."

Spurs 115, SuperSonics 103

Terry Cummings scored 31 points and Willie Anderson and David Robinson 22 each as San Antonio clinched a playoff berth.

"Our confidence is getting a lot better," Robinson said. "This is the stretch drive."

Cummings scored eight points during a 12-3 spurt to give the Spurs a 90-86 lead with 7:20 to play. Leading 107-101 with 1:14 left, San Antonio clinched the victory with eight consecutive free throws.

Pacers 101, Celtics 96

Vern Fleming sparked a 13-2 Indiana spurt to start the fourth quarter, then scored the game's final four points as the Pacers defeated Boston, snapping the Celtics' five-game winning streak.

Reggie Miller scored 22 points to lead a balanced Indiana attack that had six players in double figures. Fleming finished with 17.

Kevin McHale led Boston with 32 points, but missed six of 14 free throws, including four in the fourth quarter.

Knicks 119, Bullets 100

Patrick Ewing scored 41 points, including the first 3-pointer of his career, as New York snapped a six-game losing streak. Ewing extended his club-record streak of games with 20 or more points to 28.

Gerald Wilkins added 19 points for the Knicks, who had lost four straight and seven of their last nine at home after starting the season 22-2 at Madison Square Garden.

Bucks 133, Suns 127

Ricky Pierce scored 20 of his 30 points in the second half and Jay Humphries had 26 in Milwaukee's victory over Phoenix. The defeat halted the Suns' bid to clinch a Western Conference playoff berth.

Kevin Johnson had a career-high 44 points for Phoenix.

Mavericks 118, Warriors 108

Sam Perkins scored 11 points in a four-minute span of the fourth quarter to break up a tight game and give Dallas its fifth straight victory.

After Golden State closed to 82-78, Perkins scored 11 of the Mavs' next 15 points to give Dallas a 97-86 lead with six minutes left.

Rolando Blackman led Dallas with 25 points, while Mitch Richmond had 32 for the Warriors.

THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Pour your creative talents into your career. Work changes and travel are featured in the summer. A relationship you thought "all set" could give cause for concern. Put things on hold. Enrolling in night or weekend classes in the fall will boost your earning potential. If single, start "networking." You will meet someone special in November. A major decision you make in December will bring you peace of mind. A move to another city or town is possible in early 1991.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Pearl Bailey, football's Earl Campbell, comic Eric Idle, President John Tyler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A surprise telephone message will delight you. Travel is a real possibility. Although a family crisis could deplete your financial reserves, an unexpected check will arrive in the nick of time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An office shakeup could send you on a job search. A change of personnel will improve your work environment. Browse through antique and second-hand shops — you could find some real treasures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be more daring and success will come easier. You can learn a lot by observing other people's mistakes. Your intuition is right on target where loved one is concerned. Be a good listener.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Jump at a challenge. Joining groups will help you make new friends and business contacts. A letter brings welcome financial news. Share the glad tidings with partner. A small celebration is in order.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show more faith in yourself. An unusual agreement will help you make certain concessions. Family members rally around. A new business partnership enjoys highly favorable influences. Romance is magical.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spend more time with those in your field. You will benefit from swapping information and experiences. Be certain you receive all the money you are entitled to from a business deal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Steer clear of a co-worker who likes to gossip. Romantic partner respects your high standards. Luck is on your side when you fight for what is right. New financial rewards are featured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new venture begins to pay off handsomely. Making a clean break with the past puts you on the road to romantic happiness. A rejection could work in your favor. Proceed slowly!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Making intelligent concessions will help you turn a difficult situation around. A relative aids your career. Show your gratitude. You will be richly rewarded for granting a favor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trust your intuition. An intense relationship could be somewhat tricky today; go slow. Admit a mistake and then forget it. Dwelling on old errors wastes valuable time and energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to be bulldozed into making a hasty decision. Stand up for your rights. A period of meditation provides you with answers. Follow an older person's advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You obtain more power and money now. Your priorities begin to change. Consider the alternatives to a current business arrangement. Loved one is pleased by your dedication and affection.

The bidding:

4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

When your contract is not a thing of beauty, you must take care to manage your assets to yield the maximum return. The last thing you can afford is to squander a key entry or seemingly unimportant court card.

North-South reached a four-spade contract that was, to say the least, precarious. We are not enthralled with South's game invitation of three spades. That action normally promises a five-card trump holding, and South should have deducted a point from the count because of the square shape and lack of intermediates. Thus, game is unlikely in view of North's single raise.

West led the top of the diamond sequence and declarer did not fancy his prospects. Even with a 3-2 trump split, there was a sure loser in each major suit, so South could not afford to lose more than one diamond. In addition, he would have to find the ace of hearts with West, as well as entries to hand, to lead hearts twice toward dummy.

After a routine duck of the opening lead, declarer won the diamond continuation and then finessed the jack of clubs. When that held, declarer took his two high clubs, discarding the table's remaining diamond. West elected not to ruff, instead discarding a diamond.

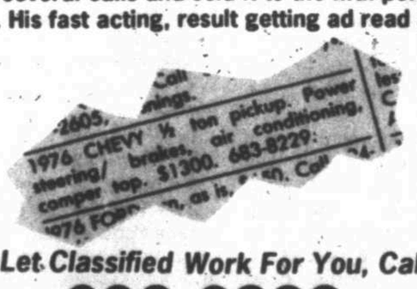

A low heart was led toward the board's honors. West played low and the king won. Now, ace and king of trumps put declarer in hand to lead a second heart toward dummy. The best West could do was to rise with the ace and extract a third round of trumps, but declarer was home with three trump tricks, two hearts, a diamond, three clubs and a diamond ruff.

Memorial service to honor designer who died from AIDS-related cancer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After learning that he had AIDS, fashion designer Halston moved back home to California, where he spent some of his final days touring the majestic coast around Big Sur in his new, jet-black Rolls-Royce.

Halston

The designer, who transformed fashion in the 1970s, died Monday night. His brother said Tuesday that Halston had asked that the $300,000 Rolls be auctioned off, with the funds going to AIDS research.

Robert Frowick described his brother as intensely private, but said the family wanted to hold a memorial service that would accommodate Halston's many fans and friends. It will be held Friday at San Francisco's Calvary Presbyterian Church.

The 57-year-old designer died at Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center, where he had been hospitalized with Kaposi's sarcoma since December.

"We are all deeply saddened by Halston's death," said Ronald Perelman, board chairman of Revlon Group Inc. in New York. "He was an American leader of design and style who helped to define his entire era. He will be sorely missed."

Mr. Blackwell, the acerbic fashion designer known for his annual worst-dressed celebrity list, lamented Halston's loss.

"Halston in the last several years has been conspicuously absent from the scene. His death is a tragedy," Blackwell said from his home in Los Angeles.

Halston's first client was Fran Allison of "Kukla, Fran and Ollie." Within months he was creating hats for Kim Novak, Hedda Hopper, Deborah Kerr and Shirley Booth.

Known for his signature black and red attire, the Ultrasuede shirtdress and the pillbox-style hat worn by Jacqueline Kennedy at the 1961 presidential inauguration, Halston also designed clothes for Lauren Bacall, Liza Minnelli, Carol Channing and Bianca Jagger. He opened his own couture house in 1968.

Through his work he collected a star-studded circle of friends, including artist Andy Warhol.

Born Roy Halston Frowick, the son of an accountant and a housewife, he took to fashion early on. At age 13, he made a red hat and veil for his mother to wear on Easter. His brother, Robert, said Halston always had an innate taste for clothes.

He began working in Chicago, where he sold hats at the Ambassador Hotel before moving to New York to work for Bergdorf Goodman in 1957.

Halston quickly rose to fashion fame and fortune in the Big Apple, earning two prestigious Coty awards for fashion.

But Halston's position at the pinnacle of the fashion industry began to slip in 1973, when he signed a $16 million deal with Norton Simon Inc. for his ready-to-wear line, his couture operation and the Halston trademark.

The agreement let Norton Simon use the Halston name for products he didn't design.

Revlon bought use of the Halston name in December 1986, although the designer retained the right to also use it. Revlon used it on a popular fragrance line.

Diagnosed about a year ago as infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, Halston returned to Northern California to be reunited with family living in Santa Rosa.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A cable TV movie on 1920s singer Josephine Baker starring Diana Ross will be shown on the Turner Television network next year.

Ross

Miss Ross and TV mogul Ted Turner announced plans for the program on Tuesday.

Rival cable network Home Box Office announced its own plans for a biography earlier this month, starring Lynn Whitfield. The HBO production begins filming in Budapest next month and is to be broadcast by year's end.

Turner

Miss Baker's career spanned several decades, but she was best known as an exotic chanteuse in Paris during the '20s.

Tired of racism in the United States, she moved to Europe, where she starred in several films, was decorated by the government for driving an ambulance during World War II and adopted 12 children from all over the world. She died at 68 in 1975.

LONDON (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Glenda Jackson says she will give up acting if she wins a seat in Parliament as a member of the Labor Party.

"You can't be a part-time MP (member of Parliament) and you certainly can't be a part-time actor," said Miss Jackson, 53, after she was chosen Tuesday by Labor locals in the Hampstead and Highgate areas of north London.

Britain's general elections must be held before mid-1992 but can be called at any time by the government.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — William Shatner, Capt. James T. Kirk of "Star Trek," has won an earthly court battle over breeding rights to a stallion.

A judge ruled Tuesday that Shatner hadn't reached a lifetime agreement with Lexington horsewoman Linda Johnson to let her breed two mares a year to one of Shatner's stallions.

"I feel justice has been served," Shatner said. "I know I've said that many times in fiction. It's a pleasure to say it in reality."

Shatner is host of "Rescue 911," a CBS series that re-enacts heroic real-life rescues.

U.S. missionary killed in South Lebanon

RASHAYA FOUKHAR, Lebanon (AP) — Two Lebanese extremist groups today claimed responsibility for the assassination of an American missionary who was gunned down by masked men in his home during a prayer service.

Robinson

Villagers had accused William Robinson of trying to establish an Israeli settlement in Rashaya Foukhar in southern Lebanon.

However, acquaintances said he only wanted to expand his 7-year-old orphanage, located in Israel's self-declared security zone.

Israeli denied that any such settlement was planned.

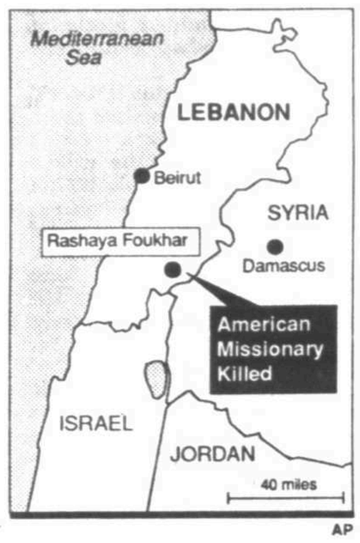

U.S. officials said Robinson had been repeatedly warned of danger.

Three masked assailants broke into Robinson's house Tuesday night while he was singing bedtime prayers with his wife, four sons and 26 other children from his orphanage, Lebanese security sources told U.N. investigators.

The assailants then tied up Robinson's wife and sent the children into another room before shooting Robinson three times in the neck and chest, the sources said. The masked men also took $4,000 and some jewelry before fleeing. In Beirut, the Communist Party and the pro-Syrian Lebanese National Resistance Front claimed responsibility for the killing.

"One of our units Tuesday night carried out the death sentence against William Robinson, who was seeking to establish an Israeli settlement on Lebanese territory," a statement from the front said. The front has carried out several guerrilla raids on Israeli targets in the area.

The Communist Party said in its statement that the slaying "brought an end to schemes to plant Jewish settlers in south Lebanon." The party and its militia have carried out numerous raids on Israeli targets, including an abortive suicide truck bombing in southern Lebanon on April 21, 1985.

AP

U.S. Embassy officials in Tel Aviv, Israel, said Robinson had been repeatedly advised of U.S. government policy barring Americans from visiting Lebanon. They gave no hometown, citing restrictions on privacy.

Rashaya Foukhar is inside Israel's "security zone" in south Lebanon, about eight miles northeast of Israel's border. The six-to-10-mile-deep zone was set up to serve as a buffer against raids by guerrillas and is policed by the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army.

William F. Wolford, administrator of the International Christian Embassy in Jerusalem, said Robinson was a former U.S. Marine from just outside Chicago who "had a love for the children of Lebanon and went there to help."

Iraqis held for smuggling nuclear devices

LONDON (AP) — Customs investigators working with American authorities today arrested two Iraqis allegedly involved in an attempt to smuggle nuclear detonating devices to Iraq, government sources said.

The sources, insisting on anonymity, said the arrests at London's Heathrow Airport followed a U.S.-British surveillance operation involving an attempt to smuggle "nuclear initiators," devices to trigger a nuclear weapon.

The Iraqis were arrested with a third person of British citizenship, and about four other people were arrested near London, the sources said. One of the three at Heathrow was about to board a flight to Baghdad, they said.

Dennis Shimkoski, a spokesman for the U.S. Customs Service, said U.S. officials had been working with British colleagues on the case for about 18 months.

He said he knew of five arrests in Britain, and that "electronic devices" were seized. He declined to give further details, saying the case was under sealed indictment in the United States.

The U.S. case had been presented to a district court in Southern California, Shimkoski said in a telephone interview from Washington.

The British government said one Iraqi was being deported because of attempted breaches of laws restricting the export of high technology. A second was to have been expelled, but turned out to have British citizenship, it said.

The Foreign Office would not link the deportations to the disclosure of the smuggling operation, and no government agency would officially confirm that such an operation had been attempted.

One of those arrested at Heathrow was a woman, the sources said.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, said it understood that U.S. undercover customs officers discovered the alleged smuggling operation early last year.

They watched the alleged plotters and alerted their British counterparts when it became clear that the devices were being routed through this country, Press Association said.

It said arrests were made after documentation was completed that freed the nuclear triggers from a Heathrow warehouse to be loaded on an Iraqi flight.

It was not known whether Iraq has nuclear weapons capability, but it has been developing a long-range missile judged by some military analysts to be capable of delivering a nuclear warhead.

In 1981 the Israeli air force bombed and destroyed a nuclear reactor in Iraq which was nearing completion. Israel claimed the reactor would give Iraq nuclear weapons capability. Iraq insisted the installation was for peaceful use.

Sandinistas agree to give up control of army

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinistas have agreed to cede control of the army and police in a preliminary agreement with advisers to President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro on transferring power.

The agreement, reached late Tuesday, stresses that the demobilization of the Contra rebels is crucial if a civilian government led by Mrs. Chamorro is to take over from the Sandinistas on April 25 as scheduled.

Dismantling of the rebel force that once had strong U.S. backing "constitutes an essential element for creating the climate of peace, stability and tranquility in which the transfer of government should take place," the agreement says.

The heads of the transition teams signed the preliminary agreement after a month of negotiations. Mrs. Chamorro defeated President Daniel Ortega in free elections on Feb. 25.

Control of the security forces is a key issue in the transition from a decade-old leftist revolutionary government to the conservative United National Opposition, or UNO.

Under the agreement, the Sandinista army and police will become non-partisan organizations under the control of Mrs. Chamorro and only these institutions should have combat weapons.

The accord also says that the size of Nicaragua's armed forces, which Soviet aid built into the largest in Central America, will be determined by the "economic capacity and social necessity of the nation."

Mrs. Chamorro campaigned on a promise to end the draft and drastically cut the size of the military, which consumes half the national budget in this impoverished country.

The Sandinistas, openly reluctant to relinquish their armed forces and police while the Contras remain intact, have been handing out thousands of weapons since their stunning election loss and urging people to defend the "conquests of the revolution."

Those "conquests" include thousands of houses and farms confiscated by the Sandinistas. The accord says the new government will respect the rights of people who were given confiscated property before election day.

The transition document was signed by Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, head of the Sandinista transition team and the president's brother, and Antonio Lacayo, head of the UNO team and a son-in-law of Mrs. Chamorro.

Lacayo said the agreement foresees the demobilization of the Contras by April 25.

Gen. Ortega said it was necessary to "isolate, neutralize and put in their right place those who aren't on the path of peace and democracy that is opening in Nicaragua."

He said he was confident that the Contras would be dismantled "once and for all" whether they want to be or not.

The Contras and UNO signed an agreement Friday calling for the rebels in Honduran base camps to disband by April 20. The accord says fighters in Nicaragua are to move into security zones under the supervision of the U.N. force and Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo.

Most of the 12,000-man rebel army is believed to have returned to Nicaragua in recent months and Contra leaders have been vague on when the fighters on Nicaraguan soil would disarm.

U.S. missionary, wife killed in east Liberia

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Villagers today found the bodies of a missionary couple slain in Liberia's eastern Nimba county, where government troops battling rebels have killed hundreds of civilians, diplomatic sources said.

The bodies of the Rev. Tom Jackson, an American, and his British wife, June, were found in the village where they lived at Bahn, the sources said. They spoke from Monrovia, the Liberian capital, and Abidjan, capital of neighboring Ivory Coast, on condition of anonymity.

The U.S. and British embassies in Monrovia advised their citizens working as missionaries and on an iron ore mine in Nimba to leave the region immediately.

About 6,000 Americans, most of them missionaries, live in Liberia, which was founded by freed U.S. slaves in 1847. It is not known how many Americans live in Nimba.

The slain couple in Liberia belonged to the U.S.-based United Liberian Inland Church and had lived in Liberia for 40 years, translating the Bible into the local Gio and Mano languages.

Paper criticizes flight ban

MOSCOW (AP) — A prestigious Soviet newspaper today criticized Hungary's state airline for suspending flights of Soviet Jews to Israel last week, calling the decision capitulation to international terrorism.

"I see it as my duty to decisively condemn such an action," political commentator Igor Belyayev said in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta.

It was the first known Soviet condemnation of the decision by the carrier, Malev, to suspend service to Tel Aviv after a threat from Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, an Arab extremist group.

The article did not, however, mention the position taken by the Soviet national airline Aeroflot, which has stopped selling tickets for Soviet Jewish emigres traveling to Hungary.

Arab U.N. worker killed

JERUSALEM (AP) — Masked Palestinians armed with axes and knives killed a 32-year-old Arab U.N. worker and wounded six of his relatives in a West Bank refugee camp, the army and Arab reports said today.

Arab reports said the slain man, identified as Yasser Kazmous, had been accused of collaboration with Israel in slogans painted on walls in the Nur Shams refugee camp, where he lived.

They said more than 50 masked men participated in the raid and that they used a blowtorch to break into the family home Tuesday night.

It was one of the bloodiest attacks involving a suspected collaborator in the 27-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule.

Argentina abuses probed

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today urged Argentina to investigate allegations of torture, disappearances and killings of members of an opposition group that attacked an army barracks last year.

The group's report made some of the broadest charges of human rights abuses since a civilian government replaced a military dictatorship.

White storks of folklore facing extinction

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Ornithologists say the European white stork, a fabled carrier of good fortune and babies for centuries, is in danger of becoming extinct.

Bird watchers are waiting to see how many storks return from their annual migration. Last spring, only 15 came back to Denmark, their northernmost meeting point in Europe.

That compares with an estimated 4,000 breeding pairs a century ago. Similar reductions in the number of white storks, once common as far south as the Balkans, have been reported elsewhere in Europe.

Hans Skov of the Ornithological Society said the number of storks in Denmark had declined by half in only a decade, and "at this rate will disappear altogether by the year 2000."

He and aides are putting wagon wheels dressed with straw on farmhouse roofs, telephone poles and chimneys as convenient nesting places for the storks when they complete the 7,500-mile journey from southern Africa.

White storks are considered good omens, particularly of fertility, and traditionally have been encouraged to build their nests on housetops.

Wagon wheels were a form of encouragement to storks in the Middle Ages, when it was believed a stork on the roof brought good luck to the house, Skov said in an interview.

Bird lovers should be careful to provide favorable nesting conditions because modern tile roofs are slippery, a poor foothold for the birds, he said.

Most of Denmark's remaining storks live in the Jutland peninsula in the North Sea. Ornithologists say about nine of 10 storks return from their annual migration to a spot within less than 350 feet of their old nests.

White storks, which have wingspans of 6½ feet and weigh about nine pounds, are on the retreat all along their migration route, Skov said.

African drought and human expansion into bird habitats took a toll in the 1980s, he said, and the birds are hunted in Lebanon.

Use of chemical fertilizers and the draining of fields for farming have destroyed European wetlands where storks fed on toads, snakes and insects, but the largest single cause of adult stork deaths may be high-tension power lines.

Electrocution kills about half the adult storks that die in Denmark and about 70 percent in West Germany, Skov said.

Troops try to halt South African fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rival Zulu factions armed with guns and knives waged bloody battles and set homes ablaze in Natal province today, while hundreds of soldiers and police moved in to halt their "full-scale war."

Terrified residents in black townships near the southeastern city of Pietermaritzburg abandoned their homes and fled into the countryside, residents said.

"It almost looks as though the whole area is burning," police Maj. Piet Kitching said.

Army units were deployed around Edendale near Pietermaritzburg after 2,000 Zulus supporting the Inkatha party attacked supporters of the rival United Democratic Front. Police said patrols used shotguns and tear gas to disperse mobs attacking and burning houses.

Police reported widespread clashes in the area since Tuesday, with at least two people dead and about 25 wounded in the fighting. But local reporters, who did not want to be named, said up to 14 people had been killed and scores of houses set on fire in townships around Edendale, in Natal province.

Tens of thousands of people were unable to go to work, when the bus service shut down because of attacks, and the milling crowds added to the tension.

"Things are completely out of control. It looks terrible. There were 2,000 people fighting it out with guns and other weapons," said a journalist reached by phone.

"It's a bloody war out there," a medical worker said.

Peter Kerchhoff, of a Pietermaritzburg peace group, said dirt roads leading to townships were blockaded with tree trunks, boulders, and burning tires; people were fleeing with pieces of furniture, and houses were burning in several townships.

As abortion law awaits OK, Idaho splits over spuds

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Two of the leading abortion rights groups are split over whether an economic boycott against Idaho will effectively persuade the governor to veto the country's most restrictive state abortion law.

Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Tuesday the threat of a boycott on Idaho potatoes and other products could be counterproductive in the campaign to block Gov. Cecil Andrus' signature on the bill.

"I understand the frustration that has led to the idea," Michelman said. "But I think that threats like that aren't always the best method. ... It's just something that complicates things."

Andrus, a Democrat who opposes abortion under most circumstances, was deliberating on the bill, which prohibits abortion as a means of birth control. The bill won final legislative approval last Thursday.

Hundreds of telephone calls, letters and messages from both camps flooded the Democratic chief executive's office Tuesday. Andrus wants to consult outside experts before making his final decision.

On Tuesday, Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, said if the bill becomes law she would recommend a nationwide boycott of all Idaho goods at the organization's national conference in June.

It would be similar to the boycott NOW conducted against states refusing to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment in the 1970s.

Groups and individuals in states throughout the nation have made similar threats, prompting state Commerce Director James Hawkins to say: "We're becoming concerned."

But anti-abortion activists, led by the National Right to Life Committee, have countered with pledges to increase their purchases of Idaho products.

The legislation bans abortion except in cases of non-statutory rape reported within seven days, incest if the victim is younger than 18, severe fetal deformity and a threat to the life or physical health of the mother.

The governor has until next Monday morning to act unless the Legislature adjourns before then. If that happens, as is expected, Andrus has 10 days from the time lawmakers leave.

If signed, the bill would take effect July 1.

Bayou State's chief will veto anti-abortion bill

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Gov. Buddy Roemer says he will veto any abortion bill that doesn't allow abortions in cases of rape, incest or when the woman's life is endangered.

Abortion will be one of the tough issues of the Legislature, which convenes April 16, Roemer said Tuesday at an impromptu news conference.

The governor said he met several weeks ago with Roman Catholic bishops and "they talked of introducing a bill that would allow no abortions in the state. I said I would not sign the bill, that I would veto that bill."

Roemer added that "while I am a right-to-lifer and believe in the sanctity of that life, the life of the mother is precious as well. And conditions that relate to the safety and health of the mother, that relate to rape and incest must be in a bill that I can support."

He said that many of the bishops unofficially came to the same conclusion in terms of political realiity.

"One or two bishops said they could pass their bill with or without my support. I said maybe so, but my job is as last resort to either veto or sign," said Roemer.

The governor said he has met with half of the 144 legislators so far "and I raised the issue because they're in close touch with the people back home. They have mixed feelings.

Cuba threatens retaliatory measures in response to TV Marti broadcasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba is expected to take additional measures against the United States in retaliation for U.S.-sponsored television programming to the island, producing further setbacks to the already strained relationship.

After Cuban authorities jammed the initial broadcasts of TV Marti on Tuesday, the State Department expressed regret but said transmissions will continue.

Broadcasting resumed this morning at 3:45 a.m. EST, but Cuban authorities jammed the signal within three minutes, a Voice of America official said. The programming went off the air at 6:45 a.m.

The emphasis was on entertainment as testing began Tuesday, but a primary goal of the station is to provide objective news to a country that the administration says has received none in 31 years.

The station is a pet project of conservative elements of the Cuban exile community in Florida, and Cuban officials have told U.S. diplomats that exiles may be a target of Cuban retaliation.

Possible measures include a suspension of air and telephone links between the United States and Cuba — services that exiles heavily depend on.

TV Marti is modeled after Radio Marti, which some employees fear will be the next target of Cuban jamming. The station has been broadcasting relatively free of interference since going on the air in 1985.

There also is the possibility that Cuba may try to interfere with domestic U.S. stations. Last Friday, Cuba broadcast a radio speech by President Fidel Castro that disrupted stations along the Florida coast and as far away as Nashville, Tenn.

Ariel Ricardo, spokesman at the Cuban diplomatic mission in Washington, left little doubt that additional measures are planned beyond jamming.

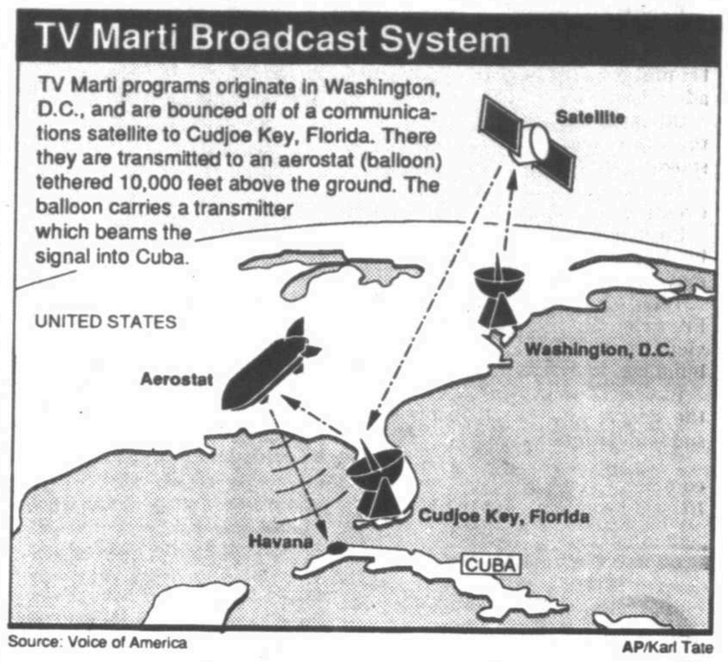

"You never use up all your bullets in the first assault," he said, charging that the station violates international law.

Gillian Gunn, a Cuba specialist at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said, "The administration should not be lulled into believing that Cuba won't retaliate more vigorously."

U.S.-Cuban relations have generally deteriorated in recent months and the introduction of TV Marti leaves prospects for improvement even bleaker.

Castro has been warning his countrymen that, with the U.S. military ouster of Panama's Gen. Manuel Noriega, Cuba may be next on President Bush's agenda. He has said that any invading force will spill "rivers of blood."

In Panama, the commander of U.S. military forces in Latin America, Gen. Marc Cisneros, said, "We don't have the slightest intention of invading Castro right now. There is no need to. His own people are going to do to him what ... (Panamanians) did to Noriega."

Source: Voice of America AP/Karl Tate

Defending the selection of programs for the testing debut, U.S. Information Agency and Voice of America officials said the goal was to determine technical feasibility and not to influence Cuban public opinion.

After a test pattern, there was a tape from the 1971 Baltimore-Pittsburgh World Series, an old "Kate and Allie" sitcom, MTV videos and a travelogue about New Mexico.

"The programs stink," said Frank Calzon, a Cuban exile who is a TV Marti supporter and Washington director of a pro-democracy group called Freedom House. He said the premiere should have featured tape on the opening of the Berlin Wall and on the Chilean and Nicaraguan elections.

The Cuban government issued a statement through the official news agency Prensa Latina saying that TV Marti constitutes an aggressive action and violates Cuban sovereignty.

Central America-aid plan clears hurdle

House committee slashes $80 million from White House's initial $500 million request

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's request for $800 million to help new democracies in Panama and Nicaragua is over its first congressional hurdle, but inflated to $2.4 billion by the addition of an array of domestic spending.

The House Appropriations Committee gave voice vote approval to the money bill late Tuesday after cutting $80 million from the White House's $500 million request for Panama and leaving the $300 million Nicaragua package intact.

Battles still lie ahead for the bill, however, and prospects dimmed that it could win final passage by Bush's April 5 deadline. The measure is expected to go to the full House next week, then must win Senate approval.

One of the most potentially divisive issues — whether to add restrictions on U.S. aid to El Salvador — was not addressed by the appropriations panel.

That disagreement was being fought in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which was working on a separate bill needed to implement the Panama and Nicaragua aid.

Bush is seeking $800 million for the new governments of President Guillermo Endara in Panama and President-elect Violeta Chamorro in Nicaragua to help both countries' damaged economies and to offer a visible demonstration of the benefits of democracy.

The administration argues that the need is particularly acute in Nicaragua, where the economy is in ruins after a decade of civil war and where supplies are needed for the planting season that begins in a few weeks.

While the panel approved Bush's full $300 million Nicaragua request, it cut the Panama package to $420 million, freeing $80 million for other areas where the president had not sought money.

Those included $25 million to help feed refugees, primarily in Africa; $5 million to help settle Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel; $15 million in economic aid to eastern Caribbean countries; $5 million to repair damage in the same region from Hurricane Hugo; $10 million for the newly independent African country of Namibia; $10 million to promote democracy in South Africa; $2.5 million for Zambia; $2.5 million for Mozambique, and $5 million in African development aid not earmarked for a specific country.

The bill also contains $70 million Bush asked to bolster the fund for U.S. resettlement of refugees to handle an increase of 27,000 in the number coming to the United States this year. Most of those are Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union.

And the measure would offer $400 million in housing loan guarantees to Israel to help settle Soviet Jews there. In separate action on Tuesday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee approved provisions giving Israel a cut rate on loan origination fees for the package, saving that country $3 million along with the lower interest rate it would enjoy on the 30-year loan.

But as it approved those elements of Bush's request, the committee added $1.6 billion for a host of politically favored domestic programs.

These included $111 million for storm and flood disaster relief in the Southeast, $50 million for additional low-income energy assistance for the Northeast, $190 million for veterans' pensions and $50 million for veterans' medical care.

Also included in the bill were $29 million for judicial salaries, $510 million to make up an expected shortfall in the food stamp program and $96 million to be shifted to states from the unemployment trust fund to cover unexpected administrative costs due to higher jobless rates.

The committee also adopted an amendment offered by Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., to add $442 million for U.S. Forest Service firefighting costs.

The package is to be financed through cuts totaling $1.8 billion in the Pentagon budget for this year, taken largely from operation and maintenance accounts, weapons procurement and research and development.

That left the overall package still nearly $600 million in the red, which would require a waiver of Gramm-Rudman budget reduction strictures when the measure is brought before the full House. The Gramm-Rudman law requires that any new spending be fully offset by reductions in other areas of the budget, resulting in no net increase in the deficit.

NATION IN BRIEF

Supreme Court examines FCC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, which dealt a major setback to affirmative action last year, now is examining federal policies that favor minority groups and women seeking broadcast licenses.

The court was hearing arguments today in cases from Florida and Connecticut that have caused a split among federal agencies.

The Federal Communications Commission is defending preferential treatment for minorities and women. The Justice Department has raised the specter of unconstitutional reverse discrimination, arguing the FCC programs lack justification.

A broad range of federal affirmative action programs could be at stake in the high court's rulings, expected by July.

Defense rests case

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter's lawyers say Iran-Contra prosecutors failed to prove their case, despite testimony that Poindexter destroyed a presidential document and sent Oliver North to a meeting where he lied.

The defense rested Tuesday after calling character witnesses who praised Poindexter as a brilliant career Navy officer of absolute integrity and total honesty.

Final arguments are scheduled for Friday in the former national security adviser's coverup trial. The retired rear admiral is accused of conspiracy, obstructing Congress and making false statements in connection with a shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran and North's military assistance to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

FAA has new policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal aviation authorities will no longer fine airlines for safety violations if the carriers find the problem themselves, quickly correct it and report it to the government.

Federal Aviation Administration chief James B. Busey announced the new policy Tuesday at a luncheon with airline officials. An industry spokesman applauded the policy change, but a pilots' group cautioned against a lapse in FAA enforcement.

Busey acknowledged that his agency, which monitors safety at airports used by U.S. carriers throughout the world, doesn't have enough manpower to catch every violation. He said airlines have the responsibility to audit their own safety.

The program could require airlines to designate safety auditors or set up separate safety departments, Busey said.

Working out bugs

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A thimbleful of bugs is delaying preparation of the mammoth, $1.5 billion telescope that will allow scientists to look deeper into the infinities of space than ever before, NASA says.

The gnat-like insects, called midges, were found in a room where the Hubble Space Telescope was being readied for installation in space shuttle Discovery. They forced NASA to delay loading the telescope until at least Thursday.

The delay in loading the Hubble will not affect Discovery's scheduled April 12 liftoff, Diller said.

Cruising limited

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — The city that inspired the film "American Graffiti" moved to shed its reputation as the Cruising Capital with a pair of ordinances trying to put the brakes on the pastime.

The City Council unanimously approved the two rules Tuesday night after listening to testimony that ran nearly 3-1 against the proposals.

Supporters of the rules contend that the pastime popularized in the 1950s is no longer good-natured when influenced by 1990s' problems: such as vandalism and drugs.

'Backhauling' food, garbage finds few advocates on Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Truckers would be banned from hauling loads of food and garbage back to back, under legislation the House passed overwhelmingly over Bush administration opposition.

The bill, approved 410-15 on Tuesday, directs the Department of Transportation to issue regulations banning refrigerated trucks, tank trucks and rail cars from alternating loads of food with shipments of "unacceptable non-food products" such as solid waste or chemicals.

"Backhauling is dangerous, disgusting and legal," Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., one of the measure's prime sponsors, said before the vote. "We have not eliminated this practice by publicity, which makes it terribly important that we pass this bill."

The administration opposed the ban largely because of a provision that the Transportation Department assume enforcement responsibility.

The practice is known as backhauling because it often occurs after trucks haul food loads to the East. Rather than return to the Midwest empty, they carry garbage. A trucker testified last August that he liked hauling garbage because it could not be harmed en route.

Concern about food-garbage hauls arose after the Centre Daily Times of State College, Pa., reported a year ago that refrigerated food-hauling trucks were being loaded with municipal solid waste.

The report led Congress to investigate a related practice last year: alternating hauls of chemicals with shipments of juice or edible oils.

Cincinnati museum seeks ruling on obscenity issue

CINCINNATI (AP) — A museum planning to exhibit sexually explicit photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe has taken the unusual step of asking a court to decide whether they violate local obscenity laws.

The private Contemporary Arts Center hopes to forestall the sheriff's threat to file obscenity charges against the museum when it opens the six-week exhibit April 6.

Sheriff Simon Leis, a veteran anti-smut campaigner, has called some of the pictures "criminally obscene" and said he will take action against the exhibit if police do not.

Nine of the photographs in the show depict homosexual activity and sadomasochistic sex acts. The pictures led Congress last year to limit federal support for the arts after Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., labeled them obscene.

The museum Tuesday filed a petition for a jury trial in Municipal Court. A trial date was not immediately set. Museum officials said they expected a ruling before the exhibit opens.

"It may be unorthodox for the person displaying the material to initiate this action, but in this case it is the common-sense thing to do," said Marc Mezibov, a lawyer for the museum.

The show is an attempt to broaden artistic horizons in a city that has closed every adult bookstore and prosecuted publisher Larry Flynt for distributing Hustler magazine, museum officials said.

"I think there are people in the community who are a little embarrassed about the community's tendency to cave in to censorship," said Jack Sawyer, curator at the center.

Hard line on broccoli belies Bush's usual stance

By Tom Raum

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush won plaudits for decisiveness in the U.S. invasion of Panama in December, but that was an exception to the extreme caution that normally marks his administration.

Other than expressing a clear distaste for broccoli, there are few issues on which the president has spoken out forcefully so far this year.

The White House ambivalence in reacting to events in Lithuania is evidence of this caution.

Bush suggested last Friday that any use of force by Moscow to block the secessionist Baltic state's move toward independence would backfire.

Then, on Monday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater cited a "pattern of intimidation" after Soviet army troops occupied several Communist Party buildings in the Lithuanian capital.

But when there was actual bloodshed — during the seizure of army deserters — the White House suddenly backed off.

Fitzwater said his "intimidation" quote and other comments came across too strongly when reported. He said he did not want to further inflame a complicated situation by adding to those words.

Actually, these days mark a lull in the Bush presidency.

There's little on the front burner domestically. And there's no direct role the United States can effectively play in the ongoing drama in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. The U.S. involvement with Central America has dramatically declined with the only remaining issue centering on how much Congress will give to Panama and Nicaragua — and when.

The U.S. stake in helping mediate a Middle East peace settlement appears in limbo with the turmoil of government changes in Israel. And there do not appear to be any imminent breakthroughs on freeing the U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

Even Bush the globetrotter has not done much traveling during the past two months — a situation that will change once he hits the road in April to campaign for Republican candidates.

The president makes public statements exhorting Congress to move more quickly on aid to Nicaragua, on his proposal to cut the capital gains tax and other parts of his languishing domestic agenda.

But he seems generally content to let lawmakers sort things out on their own — the same approach he is taking on sensitive world situations.

On Lithuania, the administration is doing an intricate juggling act between voicing support for Lithuanian independence-seekers and avoiding actions that would undermine Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

While denouncing escalating violence in the secessionist Baltic state in general terms, the president and his lieutenants have been urging Moscow and Lithuanian leaders to settle things on their own.

"I'd say let them sort it out ... They can figure that out without fine-tuning from the United States," Bush said.

During the same recent news conference, the president was asked whether Gorbachev had the "political ability to let Lithuania go?"

Bush replied: "Well, he has asserted that whatever changes take place will be peaceful. I guess I'd have to say I honestly don't know the answer to your question."

Bush has adopted the same tack on Polish demands that both Germanys — before reunification talks begin — sign a treaty to agree to respect the current Polish borders.

Asked after a meeting with Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki if the United States supported that demand, the president said he and Mazowiecki "have a nuance of difference" on the subject. "But that's a matter for the Polish prime minister to discuss with the leaders of Germany."

On the Middle East, Bush was asked about the prospects for peace talks in light of recent disputes over occupied settlements and changes in the Israeli government. "These are highly complex, internal matters in the state of Israel... That is their — who emerges, the Likud or Labor — is their problem," he replied.

Bush summed up his cautiousness when asked what he would do if the Soviet Union moved in Lithuania with clear-cut force.

"Stop right there. I am not going to make an answer to a hypothetical question of that nature," he said. "I mean, I could inadvertently cause something bad to happen."

Notice is hereby given by the Texas Department of Health that it has granted an amendment to the following radioactive material license:

Radioactive Material License No. LO3879, issued to R/A Services, Inc. located tat 9407 County Road 128 West, Odessa, Texas in County (mailing address: R/A Services, Inc., P.O. Box 13327, Odessa, Texas 79768).

The amendment to this license authorizes the receipt from other person, processing, storage for decay, and transfer to authorized disposal sites radioactive waste, as defined by TEXAS REGULATIONS FOR CONTROL OF RADIATION (TRCR) 44.2, consisting of any radioactive material with atomic number less than 84.

The Division of Licensing, Registration and Standards has determined that: a) the licensee is qualified by reason of graining and experience to use the material in question for the purpose requested in accordance with these regulations is such a manner as to minimize danger to public health and safety, or property; by the licensee's equipment, facilities and procedures are adequate to minimize danger to public health and safety, or property; c) the issuance of the license amendment will not be inimical to the health and safety of the public; and d) the licensee satisfies and applicable special requirements of the TRCR.

This notice affords the opportunity for a public hearing upon written request within thirty days of the date of publication of this notice by a person affected as required by Section 11B(b), Article 4590f, as amended, Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes, and as set out in TRCR 13.6. A "person affected" is defined as a person who is a resident of a county, or a county adjacent to a county, in which the radioactive materials are or will be located, including any person who is doing business or who has a legal interest in land in the county or adjacent county, and any local government in the county; and who can demonstrate that he has suffered or will suffer actual injury or economic damage. A person affected may request a hearing by writing Mr. David K. Lacker, Chief, Bureau of Radiation Control (Director, Radiation Control Program), 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756. Any request for a hearing must contain the name and address of the person who considers himself affected by Agency action, identify the subject license, specify the reasons why the person considers himself affected, and state the relief sought. If the person is represented by an agent, the name and address of the agent must be stated. Should no request for a public hearing be timely filed, the amendment will remain in effect.

A copy of all material submitted is available for public inspection at the Bureau of Radiation Control, 1212 East Anderson Lane, Austin, Texas. Information relative to the amendment of this specific radioactive material license may be obtained by contacting Mr. David K. Lacker, Chief, Bureau of Radiation Control (Director, Radiation Control Program), 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756. For further information, please call (512) 835-7000.
