Shrimp Landings Take Sharp Rise

Landings of headless shrimp at Texas ports during October, 1963 amounted to 7,100,000 pounds, which was 1,800,000 pounds above the same month a year ago, and brought the ten months total since January, 1963, to 37,800,000 pounds.

This, according to U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service statistician Orman H. Farley, is 8,600,000 pounds above the corresponding period in 1962, and 2,600,000 pounds above the entire 1962 catch.

Current landings in October included 2,500,000 pounds of white shrimp, Farley said, of which 1,100,000 pounds were taken from Texas bays.

During August and September, 1963, Louisiana ports surpassed those in Texas in volume landings, and for the nine months from January through September, Louisiana landings exceeded those in Texas by 2,400,000. This, Farley said, marks the first year the Texas shrimp fishery has been closely challenged for its dominant position as the top shrimp producing state in the country—a title first obtained in 1954, when Texas landings became greater than those in Louisiana. In 1955 the title was lost again by 477,000 pounds, but regained in 1956, and held ever since.

Landings of headless shrimp in the various Texas ports and a comparison with other periods are as follows:

Port Arthur-Sabine Pass area, October, 1963, 676,900 pounds. In October, 1962, the same area produced 714,300 pounds. In the January through October, 1963, period, total catch by fishermen in that area has been 2,034,900 pounds.

Other area landings and comparisons, reported in the same order, are as follows:

Galveston - Seabrook, 968,000 pounds, 932,600 pounds, and 4,117,400 pounds; Freeport, 1,348,300 pounds, 878,400 pounds, and 8,761,300 pounds; Matagorda-Palacios, 150,000 pounds, 142,000 pounds, 733,000 pounds;

Port Lavaca-Port O'Connor-Seadrift, 244,000 pounds, 208,800 pounds, 1,157,100 pounds; Aransas Pass-Rockport-Corpus Christi, 1,271,900 pounds, 1,010,700 pounds, 9,030,000 pounds; Brownsville-Port Isabel, 2,429,900 pounds; 1,388,800 (continued on page 8)

SANDOLLAR CAFE IS BURGLARIZED FRIDAY

According to Chief Deputy Bob Hewes, the Sandollar Cafe was burglarized Friday night. As there were no signs of a break-in, and as the thief or thieves would have had to know how to plug in and operate the cash register, Hewes became convinced of the fact that some employee had taken the money, which amounted to slightly over $79.

After questioning present employees at the cafe, he obtained a list of others who had been employed there, and Humberto Garza, Sr., picked up in Corpus Christi where he lives, disclosed the fact that he had obtained a key while he worked at the cafe and had returned later to rob it.

Hewes returned with the man Wednesday morning from Corpus Christi.

Library Adds More Books To Shelves

Adult borrowing at Aransas County Library is up, according to Mrs. Val Jean Eaton, librarian, while juvenile reading is off with the advent of the winter season.

"Of course," she said, "the children that took books this summer are still coming in, but now they come to use the reference material, rather than to take books to read. We need more study room very badly, and I hope the new library will help us out on this. I'm sure it will, if we can arrange the reading room for study."

In October, Mrs. Eaton said, there were four adult cards issued and nine to juveniles.

Adult fiction checked out during the month totaled 223 volumes, even though in the winter season the library is only open Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Saturday morning.

One hundred and seventy-one volumes of adult non-fiction were circulated, Mrs. Eaton said.

Juvenile fiction circulated during the month totaled 269 volumes, she said, while 37 non-fiction juveniles were circulated.

The grand total, she said, was 700 books circulated.

In addition, Mrs. Eaton stated, 214 books had been added to the library shelves, making a total of 500 in the September and October combined. Most of these were donated to the library, and were adult books.

ARANSAS COUNTY BOND QUOTA FAR EXCEEDED

Aransas County sales of E and H Government Bonds have already far exceeded the $60,000 quota set for the county the first of this year, according to Fred Bracht, local chairman in charge of sales.

In October, Bracht said, $2,231 worth of the bonds were sold, and this brought the total for the first ten months of 1962 to $82,476. This amounts to 137.5% of the quota. Percentage-wise, Aransas County has far exceeded the other counties in District 7, headed by Allen Wood, of Corpus Christi.

Next is Kenedy County, which sold its quota of $20,000 for 100% participation. Money-wise, of course, Nueces County far outstrips the rest, with sales of $3,731,971, amounting to 97.0%.

Live Oak County sales have been $47,057, for 94.1%; in Bee County 90.6% of the quota of $150,000 has been sold; San Patricio County, percentage wise, has sold 54.1% of its quota of $470,000; sales in McMullen County, as usual, have been conspicuous by their absence; Kleberg County sales amount to 69.5%; in Jim Wells County 56.4% of the quota has been sold; and in Brooks County, 84.1% of the quota has been sold.

SUNDAY BOAT RACES CANCELLED BECAUSE OF PRESIDENT'S ASSASSINATION

The boat races scheduled for Little Bay last Sunday were cancelled by the Corpus Christi boating organization headed by Dr. William C. Triplett, because of the president's assassination.

Dr. Triplett, who called the Pilot Friday, said they would probably take place at some later date.

Car Accidents Up This Year

Aransas County was without a fatal traffic accident in October, although there were two wrecks in which people were injured and three others in which the property damage was fairly heavy. In all, property damage for the month amounted to $2,585, according to Lt. F. C. Carpenter, of the Corpus Christi Highway Patrol office.

Summarizing for ten months, Carpenter said Aransas County had 3 fatalities this year, compared to one last, while personal injury accidents during 1963 amounted to 25 as opposed to 12 in 1962. Property damage was sustained by 33 cars this year, compared to 31 in the same period a year ago.

Total wrecks of all sorts during the ten month's period from January through October, 1963, amounted to 61, compared to 44 last year.

There was one death in 1962, and have been five so far in 1963, while there were 14 injured in the first ten months of 1962 against 43 injured in the same period this year.

W. L. HIERHOLZER NEW HIGHWAY PATROLMAN IN SAN MARCOS AND HAYS CO.

San Marcos and Hays County had a new highway patrolman last week, according to an announcement by the Texas Department of Public Safety. He is W. L. (Buddy) Hierholzer, who rejoined the Department of Public Safety after a year spent here as Chief Deputy of the Aransas County Sheriff's Department.

A native of San Antonio, Hierholzer has been a law enforcement officer for eight years. He went through the same highway patrol school that the other Hays County patrolman, Chester Reeves, attended. He resigned from the Highway Patrol to become chief deputy of Aransas County under Sheriff Virginia Shivers, after she was elected last November, following the untimely death of her husband, the former Sheriff A. C. Shivers in October, 1962.

Hierholzer has moved Mrs. Hierholzer and their four children to San Marcos, where they will reside at 1117 Field Street.

PROTECTIVE COATING— Michele Jerich, 3, keeps out the cool breezes as she watches a good football game in Santa Cruze, Calif

In a short but moving ceremony that began at the same time as services in Washington were being conducted by Cardinal Cushing, Aransas County paid tribute Monday to our assassinated president.

Members of the Aransas County Ministerial Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the VFW Auxiliary, Boy and Girl Scouts, city, county and school officials, and members of the armed forces from the 813th AC&W Squadron at Rockport Air Force Base joined in a program of prayer and eulogy for John F. Kennedy, while the Aransas County High School Band furnished appropriate music for the occasion.

Most establishments in town closed, either for the entire day, or between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., and citizens turned out by the hundreds to pay a last tribute to the late president.

Chester Johnson, district commander of the VFW, acted as master of ceremonies, and those offering prayers or delivering eulogies during the course of the services included Rev. Ben Bohmfalk, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who gave the invocation; Rev. Cecil Lang, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church who pronounced the benediction; Rev. C. R. Simpson, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Fulton; Capt. Charles R. Dennis, commander of the 813th Squadron, who spoke for the Military; the Rt. Rev. William J. Hennel, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church; Rev. C. Wilson Brumley, pastor of the First Baptist Church; Mayor Herman Johnson; and Richard N. Weekley.

Monsignor Hennel said: "This hour today is one that our restless world knows but seldom. During the very brief time needed for the funeral rites of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, President of the United States, almost the entire universe is united in honoring his memory.

"In great cathedrals and country churches, in city squares and small town parks, in our United States and in other countries of the world, people are gathered as we are, attempting to give expression to feelings so personal that they cannot be put into words. Chiefs of governments and nobodies of all nations—all are as one in honoring the memory of a man who for more than two grueling years has borne a burden (continued on page 8)

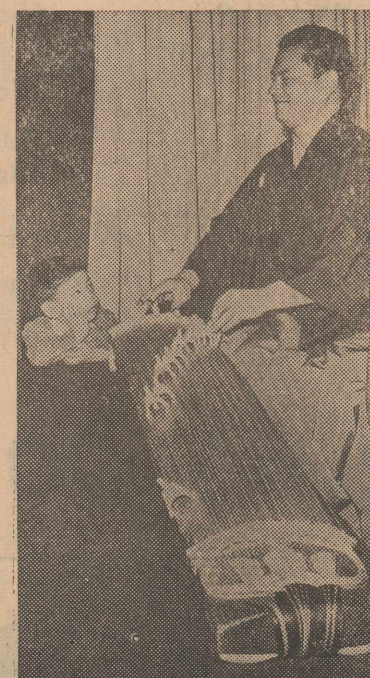

Reverend Brumley Speaks At Services For President

Rev. C. Wilson Brumley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Rockport, was one of those who spoke at the services held here Monday for President Kennedy. Reverend Brumley's remarks follow:

"We have met here today to memorialize our late President. To memorialize is to fix in the memory. The events of the past few days have burned in to our memories forever these tragic events. We will never forget these days nor should we. The causes and forces that have created the environment in which this thing could have happened should cause each one of us to search his own soul. It is tragic that the climate of our society is such that a man could think that he could take matters into his own hands and solve our problems by taking the life of our President.

"There are many things that are contributory to the state of mind in our nation that could cause this young man to believe that he was justified in destroying another human being. The racial bigotry, the hate that has been generated, the lawlessness of our citizenry, our moral decline are some of the factors that contribute to this tragic death. This young man is not alone guilty of the assassination of our President, but we ourselves must assume a part of the guilt and bear our part of the burden for standing by and allowing our nation to be deprived of its President in these critical times. We are partly responsible for the conditions that would allow this one man to disenfranchise all of us by his decision to murder the President of the United States and feel justified in doing so.

"Our hearts are heavy and our heads are bowed in shame that this could happen in our country. We can waste our sorrow and grief—it can be absorbed in vain regrets, if we do not each one of us dedicate ourselves to the correction of the strife, envy, hate, complacency, and moral decline that are contributory to this death. The memory of the past few days should burn forever in our mind, and in the history of our nation for all time to come, that our problems are not easily solved by an assassin's bullet. These problems can be solved only when we assume our portion of guilt and set ourselves to the things that our President was trying to do: the preservation of an honorable peace, the respect for human dignity in our own country, and the satisfaction of the desire for freedom for every human being on earth. It is only by this dedication that we can ever memorialize the death of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. It was for these he died. It is for these things we must live."

Oregon Returns From Venezuelan Exploratory Cruise

The exploratory fishing vessel Oregon returned to her home port of Pascagoula, Nov. 4, after a 48-day cruise devoted principally to a preliminary survey of resources of the continental shelf and slope of the Caribbean coast of Venezuela, according to Harvey R. Bullis, Jr., Base Director of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service Exploration and Gear Research.

Bullis said that the area surveyed on this trip filled in one of the largest gaps left in the Oregon's exploration of the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean Sea for possible new fishing grounds. During the trip, transects were run across the slope and shelf in 30 to 100 fathoms of water between the Gulf of Venezuela and Caracas, and from 5 to 700 fathoms between Caracas and Trinidad.

Additional drags were made in the Gulf of Paria, and port calls were made at Williamstead, Curacao; LaGuaira and Cumana, Venezuela; and Port Au Spain, Trinidad, for fueling and exchange of personnel.

The Oregon found rough bottom in most depths shallower than 100 fathoms between the Gulf of Venezuela and Caracas, but a few successful drags resulted in catches of both pink and brown shrimp in amounts less than 10 pounds per drag. From 10 to 25 pounds catches of small vermillion and Lane's snappers were also made, Bullis said.

One drag east of the Gulf of Venezuela resulted in a catch of 50 pounds of 5 to 8 pound scamp, and (continued on page 8)

Live Oak Peninsula Water Will Only Last Three to Five Years

At the present rate of population growth, Live Oak peninsula will be out of fresh water within 3 to five years, due to intrusion of salt water into the fresh water sands, engineers told commissioners of the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District, as they presented a preliminary survey on water resources of the county; Tuesday night in the Commissioners' Courtroom.

Lamar Peninsula, where the population is lighter, will be able to continue for some time longer, but the engineers could not pinpoint this as well because of lack of as much geological data from which to make their forecast.

Homer C. Innis, C. R. Marks, and James Barnett, of the firm of Lockwood, Andrews and Newnam, presented the present and future conditions of the local water supply by means of charts and maps, and, at the same time offered solutions for the problems, some of them quite expensive, others less so.

Fresh water beneath Live Oak peninsula exists in thin lenses overlying salt water lower in the same sands; and is renewed only by rainfall. When the withdrawal of this fresh water is too rapid, the salt water intrudes from below, and permeates the sands so that even though withdrawals cease and fresh water again enters the sands, it may be as much as 100 years before potable water can be drawn from them again. Marks told the commissioners and members of the Aransas County Area Planning and Development Board at the meeting.

Under the limited use of smaller populations in the past, Marks said, no such salt water intrusion could be expected, but within recent years, when withdrawals from the sands have increased, more and more wells have become unfit for use from salt water, and (continued on page 8)

Outdoors In Texas

By Vern Sanford

Keeping warm out on the deer stand, or in a duck blind, or fishing a lake or bay in the dead of winter, can be something of a real problem to the outdoorsman.

One reason some outdoorsmen feel cold so intensely is that they begin the day wearing too much clothing. I know it sounds ridiculous—getting cold because of too much clothing—so let me explain.

You start the morning off wearing enough apparel to keep you warm at the time. But actually you've got on too many clothes.

To begin with you feel the cold more because you've just come out of a warm house. In getting breakfast and dressing you've done relatively little physical exercise to generate body heat.

Now let's take a duck hunt as an example. In addition to woolen underwear, you're bundled up in a sweatshirt, a zip-up jacket and a heavy parka. You feel real comfortable at the time.

Exercise Warms the Body
Then the work begins. You trudge out to the blind lugging a gun, shells and sacks of decoys. Next you put out the decoys. You're doing a lot of physical exercise so pretty soon you've worked up a good sweat.

Then you step back into the blind for the hunt. There you're doing very little to generate body heat. So pretty soon you start feeling the cold because you're wet with perspiration.

You can avoid this cold by not wearing so many heavy clothes.

Don't wear the heavy coats when you're putting out the decoys. In omitting this heavy outer apparel you'll avoid working up a sweat. Put on the extra coats only when you actually need them.

Many outdoorsmen complain of cold feet. There's a way to avoid that, too. You can wear insulated socks inside your boots or waders. Or put on a pair of light weight dress socks and then some heavy wadded socks.

Wear Loose Boots

Be sure your foot doesn't fit too snug inside the boot. A tight fit results in cutting down blood circulation in your feet. And with poor circulation you'll feel the chill.

Waist-high waders of course offer more protection against water than hip boots. But waders can be mighty cold if you're not careful.

Personally I prefer boot-foot waders over the stocking-foot type.

With the stocking-foot type, you have to wear tennis shoes or wading shoes. To keep the waders from slipping inside the shoes, you must tie the laces rather tight. If you do a lot of walking in thick mud, has little occasion to stick his hands in water. Gloves should be loose fitting so the one on your trigger hand can be slipped off in a hurry.

Leather gloves are no good for duck hunting or fishing. They get wet easily and soak up a lot of water. Then when you dry them out, they'll shrink and get stiff.

For working around water get cotton gloves that have been rubberized. Again they should be large enough so you can slip them on and off easily.

If possible, skip shaving the day before you make that cold weather hunting or fishing trip. That stubble on your face offer some protection against cold and it will help prevent face chapping.

As an extra precaution, take along a change of clothes and leave them in the car. You never know when you'll get caught in a rain squall or perhaps an unexpected dunking.

Don't let the cold weather spoil your outdoors enjoyment. Dress right, and you'll hardly notice the cold.

HATFIELDS vs MCCOYS — TEXAS STYLE

'Tis not only the mountain boys who have their feuds. Texans have had their share too.

Between 1841 and 1844 there was a great loss of both life and property of warring factions around the town of Shelbyville, in Central East Texas near the Louisiana border.

End of this long and destructive unorganized feud, known as the Regulator-Moderator War, came when the President of the Republic of Texas, Sam Houston, sent Texas as forces under the command of General James Smith to restore order.

After such a long feud, it is surprising to note that General Smith ended the hostilities without ever having to fire a single shot.

COFFEE MILL CHURCH

Texas is well known for its German settlements. Of all the German settlements, the town of Fredericksburg in Central Texas perhaps has been the most frequented by tourists.

If you stumbled into Fredericksburg by accident it wouldn't take long for you to learn that you were in a German-styled, German populated township.

Sights along its long, wide main street are varied and many. Perhaps best known is the Cereins Kirche.

It is called the "Coffee Mill Church" because of its octagonal shape.

A trip to Fredericksburg often is referred to as "the poor man's answer to a trip abroad."

The Dominican Order was founded in 1215.

BRAZORIA WAS BIRTHPLACE

Brazoria County, located on the Gulf Coast in Central South Texas, is termed as "Birthplace of the Texas Republic."

It was here, in 1836, that the first Texas Capitol was constructed alongside some of the giant oak trees that abound in West Columbia. The first Texas Congress was held in this building.

Back of the capitol building was the home of Judge G. B. McKinstry. This was where Stephen F. Austin lived.

Austin died in 1836, the same year the capitol was built.

President Woodrow Wilson was football coach at Princeton in 1890.

Outdoors In Texas

By Vern Sanford

It may be too early to know what the waterfowl situation in the Central Flyway will be this year, but it is not too soon to learn about ducks.

Just issued by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is a 25 cent bulletin titled "Ducks at a Distance."

You can get this bulletin by sending a quarter to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, 25, D. C.

If your local club wants to buy them in lots of 100 or more, there is a 25 percent discount.

This is an exciting little booklet.

It's full of color and illustrated by noted wildlife artist Bob Hines. Furthermore, it carries illustrations of all the major species of ducks and geese.

Unlike other field guides which show mating colors, "Ducks at a Distance" offers invaluable identification clues for students, hunters and everyone who enjoys the study of birds, or just a walk along the shore.

Booklet contains 24 pages. It reveals the shapes, colors, voices flight patterns, rising views and flock formations of these fascinating fowl.

Because of an anticipated heavy demand, a delivery delay of at least six weeks is expected. So send your order as early as possible.

There is increasing necessity for such a book among hunters. Bag limitations on certain species now make it a requirement to know your ducks. For the average hunter, who gets out after waterfowl only two or three times a year, this identification is no easy job. Especially where the duck supply is limited!

Most men know a mallard at a glance. They'll recognize a spoon bill or a teal. But they have difficulty in identifying a canvasback, sprig or other species.

Same is true of geese. If you see them every day, or if you hunt a good many times each year, it soon becomes easy to know the species. But when the laws say you can't kill but certain species and perhaps only one or two, at that, then it becomes very important to every hunter to know the difference.

I have been told many times about hunters in the rice fields of south Texas finding dead birds stashed away in straw stacks where hunters have hidden them. Such a bird doesn't do anyone any good.

Some times we wonder at the manner in which biologists reach their conclusions about bag limits.

Most of them will tell you that legal gun pressure will not deplete the birds. Then they will put a limit on them that is so impractical it results not only in violation, but worse still, in loss of the game entirely.

Same can be applied to turkeys. In Texas we have an all-gobbler law. Yet in the field every year there are hundreds of hens killed and left in the woods. Occasionally one winds up in the pot, but most of them are wasted.

No sportsman will shoot a hen intentionally. In fact it is seldom that a hen is killed by sportsman accidentally.

Usually he knows the difference between a hen and a gobbler. And in hunting season the two seldom run together, unless it is a young tom not yet broken away from the mother hen.

Basically there is no reason for a hunter to kill a hen. But when one is killed, it is a shame that its meat has to spoil. Perhaps a longer look at the system might improve this. Other states have.

Lest We Forget

Monday President Kennedy was buried with all the pomp and dignity a mourning nation could command, and this was as it should be, for he was a good man, doing his best at a difficult job.

From the hearts of Americans everywhere, and from all the world, sympathy poured out for Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, Caroline and little John.

Two hours later, J. D. Tippit was buried in a far more modest funeral, attended by neighbors and friends, and he, too, left behind a mourning widow and a family, three children, Allen, 14, Brenda, 10, and another son Curtis, who was only 5.

Tippit was another good man, doing his best at a difficult job and, like the president, he gave his life on the altar of his duty.

He was a plain man who, as a police officer, was well-liked by practically everyone who knew him. He was off duty at the time he was killed, but that same duty that drove President Kennedy drove J. D. Tippit. His fellow officers were faced with long hours of duty and because he thought he could help, he returned to lend a hand.

He intercepted the cowardly assassin that had killed the president, only minutes before, and was gunned down by the same assassin. Had he not intercepted Oswald, there is no telling where the murderer would have been now.

The nation owes J. D. Tippit a debt of gratitude, and there is no better way to show it, inadequate through the gesture may be, than by seeing that his wife and children are cared for.

He was a simple man, striving after better things for his children. Like most Americans, there was never quite enough money to go around from one payday till the next. He and his family lived in a modest brick home that they were trying to pay for out of his salary which, as a police officer that risked his life every time he went on duty, was never more than $490 a month. He had no insurance and while he supplemented this by working at other things during his off hours, that income has stopped.

Nevertheless, there are house payments, food, clothes, and all the other things that a family needs. Mrs. Tippit depended upon her husband for everything. Even if she is capable of earning a living, certainly she couldn't do it immediately. To face the facts of life, that family needs money now and a steady income as soon as possible. It seems the least a nation can do that has shown such great grief over the death of the president is to make sure that the widow and children of the man responsible for his murderer's apprehension should not want.

Robert Kennedy, the president's brother has said that instead of sending money for a memorial for John F. Kennedy, the funds should be sent to Mrs. Tippit. Those people in this area who feel that they must do something can well spare some of their own plenty for the Tippit family. Send it to Mrs. J. D. Tippit, care of the Dallas Police Department, and it will reach her.

Goose Island
Park Ranks 9th
In Park System

Goose Island State Park was the ninth most popular of all those administered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, according to an announcement just received by Park Manager Albert Wofford.

"We had 15,155 campers last year," Wofford said, "and I think that's a lot for our little park, especially as far out of the way as it is for many people. Only bigger parks in the state outstripped us in the attendance."

For benefit of those who don't know where it is, Goose Island State Park is situated on Lamar Peninsula, not far from the Sea Gun Sports Inn, and its 152 acres, overlooking St. Charles and Aransas bays are the answer to the vacationer or weekendend who wants to get away from crowded streets and spend some leisure hours in the open.

Shaded by live oak, sweet bay, huisache and mesquite, the park's popularity continues to grow from year to year, Wofford said. It has 18 picnic areas shaded by wind-swept live oaks. Each of these has a table, furnace, and plenty of shade for families who want to eat out and enjoy the southeast trade winds as they blow in from neighboring bays.

There are 14 camp sites on Goose Island proper. At these there are roofed shelters, with concrete barbecue pits, tables, seats, running water and electric lights.

The charge for overnight picnicking in the shaded areas is $1 per night, but during the day they may be occupied free. The charge for use of the shelters is $2 for one car for overnight camping. If there is more than one car in the party, this drops to $1.50 per car.

These shelters are extremely popular. Visiting fishermen can rent one to lounge in the shade and eat as they wait for the fish to start biting. Families meet here for day-long picnics; and many families spend their entire vacation, from a week to a month, under one of these shelters while boating, bathing, swimming, fishing and sun bathing, 'till it's time to go home.

There are six skiffs at the park that can be rented, and fresh bait and ice can always be purchased. There is a concession where soft drinks, cigarettes, candy, gum, and packaged foods are sold, and the concession hall, big enough for sizable parties, can be rented for $5 a night.

Crab Fishery
Good In 1962

According to year end figures for 1962, the Texas blue crab fishery moved into third place in volume and fifth place in total value of products, Orman H. Farley, Fish and Wildlife Service for this area, says.

Total landings during the year were 4,500,000 pounds, valued at $290,000. This was 1,600,000 pounds above the 1961 landings, Farley stated, and record catch for this, the state's newest fishery.

In 1962 there were three plants processing crabs and a fourth constructed. The proximity of these plants to the producing areas, i.e., Aransas Pass, Port Lavaca, Palacios and Galveston afforded a ready market for crabs taken in shrimp trawls as well as crab traps, Farley said. However, during the year, over 9,000 crab traps accounted for 93% of the catch. Fishermen averaged 6½ cents a pound for crabs throughout the year, with only limited buying either above or below this price.

Farley said that although the crab fishery enjoyed a record harvest and good markets for the processed meat, certain difficulties were encountered. Landings increased steadily until August and then dropped suddenly and have shown little sign of recovery so far this year. According to experienced men in the fishery, he said, a rapid drop in the available population of crabs is not uncommon, nor is it considered anything to be alarmed about. It does put people out of work.

The oyster fishery ranked sixth in volume of landings and third in dockside value, Farley said. In 1962, the fishery produced 1,200,000 pounds of shucked meats, valued at $473,000. This was 115,000 pounds greater than for 1961, but 90% above the 1955-62 harvest average.

A total of 227,729 U. S. standard bushels of oysters in the shell, weighing 20,000,000 pounds, were harvested in 1962. The majority of shell oysters, Farley said, were sold to dockside processors in sacks or baskets weighing 82-86 pounds each. The Galveston Bay system produced about 750,000 pounds of meats, or 62% of the Texas production.

Espiritu Santo Bay was closed to commercial dredging until the first of December and San Antonio Bay was closed until Nov. 1, 1962, after a fair to good spring harvest in both bays. Other commercial areas were opened in September and November for the fall harvest.

Yield of meat per bushel of shell was very poor during the 1962 spring harvest, the statistician said. Major producing areas reported yields of 13.12 pounds of meat for 260 pounds of shell stock, or only about 1½ gallons per short Texas barrel. Southern areas reported slightly better yields, but still below the expected return for cleaned, picked oysters.

The fall harvest was good with a steady increase in yield of meats and a good supply of excellent quality oysters from major producing reefs. Fishermen received good prices for shell oysters during both spring and fall, with spring oysters bringing between $4.50-$6 in 260 pound lots, while fall oysters were slightly higher.

In 1962, 140 oyster dredge units produced 94 percent of the total landings in Texas. The majority of the vessels working in the oyster fishery are regular shrimp trawlers, Farley said, and depend on the public oyster reefs of the state for a substantial portion of their income, when shrimp trawling is not possible and/or profitable.

The full overskirt of bombazine was caught at the vantage points with soft bows. Its two lower tiers of lace formed a brush train.

Her head dress was a queen's crown fashioned of seed pearls and pearl flowers from which fell her veil of English silk illusion. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Yolanda Buenano was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Alfredo Pina, Miss Olivia Torres, Mrs. Pedro Esquivel, Mrs. Gilbert Hernandez, Miss Carolyn Chupe, Miss Olga Pena, Miss Rose Nava and Miss Linda Escamilla, Miss Maria Buenano.

The attendants were dressed in blue crocheted taffeta and carried white carnations.

ENGINEERS PERMITS

The Sinclair Oil and Gas Co. has requested a permit from the U. S. Engineers for operation in Copano Bay and Swan Lake, at a point approximately seven miles of Rockport.

The work at a well site would consist of placing a shell mat, if necessary, sinking a 40 by 170-foot barge, driving six 3-pile clusters and six single piles, erecting a drilling structure having a maximum top elevation of 165 feet above mean low tide and erecting a protective structure.

Officer, heater and separator platforms, connected by walkways, would be erected in an area approximately 35 x 260 feet. A pipeline would be installed from the separator platform a minimum of 150 feet of a flare riser.

Channels and basins, if necessary, would be dredged and pipelines installed within the area. Pipelines would be placed 1½ feet below the bed of the bay except through shell reefs or beds where they would be placed one foot below. Pipelines would be jetted, plowed, disced or placed by other similar methods whereby there would be a minimum displacement of the bed and no spoil deposit would remain.

Any spoil dredged from channels or basins would be placed in the bay in mounds with the points of discharge a minimum of 1,000 feet apart and would usually have a top elevation of six feet above mean low tide.

CARD OF THANKS

Our heartfelt thanks to all who attended comforting sympathy and help in our recent sorrow. For the beautiful service, floral offerings, and other kindnesses, we are deeply grateful.

WHO OWNS WOUNDED GAME?

Suppose you are hunting and shoot a deer or a duck, which falls mortally wounded. Before you can get to it, another hunter beats you there and claims the fallen game as his own. What are your rights?

Jim had been hunting all day without success, and had headed for home when he finally saw a deer. He took careful aim and hit the deer with his first shot. Although mortally wounded, the deer managed to run a short distance, with Jim in hot pursuit.

Roy was also deer hunting. He heard Jim's shot and saw a deer running toward him. However, before it reached the spot where he was standing, the deer fell to the ground.

Although it was obvious that the deer was about to die, Roy walked to within three feet of it, delivered the finishing shot, and quickly put his tag on it. When Jim ran up and claimed the deer, Roy said such deer were wild animals, and belonged to no one until killed. Since he was the one that killed the deer, Roy claimed that it belonged to him.

Which hunter has legal title to the deer?

In this case the deer belongs to Jim. Jim was the first to wound it, and did so before Roy appeared on the scene. He mortally wounded the deer, and had it in such a situation that its escape was improbable, if not impossible. The prevailing rule is that the instant a wild animal is brought under the control of a person so that actual possession is practically inevitable, a vested property interest in it accrues which cannot be divested by another's intervening and killing it, or reaching it first.

Jim had delivered the shot which so crippled the animal as to cause him to cease trying to escape, thus permitting Roy to walk up to the animal and deliver the finishing shot. Jim had effectually brought the deer under his control before Roy took a hand in the matter. The deer legally belonged to Jim, and he can enforce his claim in court.

almost too great to be carried by a mere human being.

"He knew very well what he sought when he sought the Presidency of the United States. He knew that in assuming it he was assuming responsibility for our country and the world; that he was taking on his shoulders the weight of decisions affecting every man, every woman, every child in America and on earth.

"He knew that his oath of office made him accountable before God for the welfare of every citizen in our United States. He knew that, no matter what he did, he would be the target of criticism and vilification. He knew that, great as would be his glory as the nation's chief executive, even greater would be the account he would have to render for his every action to his fellow citizens and to God. He knew full well the burden that the office of the President imposed on the man who held that office, yet strenuously he campaigned to be allowed to carry that burden.

"Why did he do this? Surely he had no need of it. It was not to prove himself even to himself; he had already done that by winning the respect, the esteem, even the admiration of the men who had served with him on his P.T. boat in the Pacific. It was not for personal enrichment; he was the son of a wealthy man and wealthy in his own right.

"It was not for personal fame; he was already a successful writer and publishers were asking him for other manuscripts. It was not for personal prestige; he already held an office which confers on its holder practically the highest honor our country can give, and he had attained that position at an almost unbelievable youthful age.

"It was not for personal power; With his family's fortune at his disposal, he could have made his influence felt directly without having to cajole a sometimes recalcitrant Congress into accepting his point of view. As a private citizen, he enjoyed a favorable position known to but few men in public life. Yet he made public life his way of living.

"Why did he do this? Why did he strenuously campaign and conscientiously fulfill the almost insupportably heavy duties of the Presidency? He himself gives the reason in that ceaselessly quoted sentence from his inaugural address:

"Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask, rather, what you can do for your country."

"He was President with enthusiasm despite the difficulties and the anxieties of that office, because as President he could do most for his country and ask it to do the least for him in return. Many, I, know, disagreed with his judgment and his decisions; but no one, as far as I know, seriously challenged his sincerity. Even those who were most insistent that he was wrong never dared to hint that he was not dedicated.

"This sense of personal dedication, it seems to me, is the bountifully rich inheritance which he leaves to the world at large and to us, his fellow citizens, in particular. The occasion of his funeral should be the occasion for our renewing our personal dedication to United States. Our honoring his memory should not be merely our gathering here this morning; it should be our making completely our own the guide to active participation in civic life that he so unselfishly followed: 'Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask, rather, what you can do for your country.'

"What can we do for our country? More than anything else, we can respect its laws and authority. Perhaps this is the thing of which we are in the greatest need today. We have seen governors of states actively take the lead in attempting to frustrate laws and hinder officials from carrying them out. Can we be surprised if lesser citizens feel disrespect for law and authority?

"We have seen individual prejudice officially encouraged in opposition to national policy. Can we be surprised if private citizens show little respect for official decisions? We have seen elected representatives of our people take the law in their own hands in defiance of our constitutional instruments of government. Can we be surprised if individuals attempt to do the same thing? We have seen legislatures try to enact local hatreds into a statute. Can we be surprised at anyone's finding excuses for perpetuating and acting on his own hatreds?

"Most likely we will never fully understand the reasons for the tragedy which brings us together this morning. The inexplicable events of the past 24 hours have almost certainly made an insoluble mystery of them. But are we wrong in suspecting that the atmosphere of open disrespect for law and latent hatred for persons which we find in so many places in our country in some manner made its contribution?

"Not even you and I are entirely free of the subtle influence of the environment in which we live. Have environmental influences to which you and I have perhaps contributed reached their logical, inevitable climax in the tragedy which occasions what we are commemorating this morning? We can only guess, of course; we shall never know for certain.

"One thing we can know for certain, however. It is that each one of us can and must do his part to minimize and eventually to eliminate those influences which resulted in the tragic occurrences of the past few days.

"Ourselves and our endeavors, our actions and our prayers, we can dedicate anew to the principles of government and law and order for which President Kennedy as an individual and office holder stood. We can make the guiding principle of our life what seemed to be the guiding principle of his: 'Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask, rather, what you can do for your country.'

"How well he fulfilled this principle is no longer ours to this condition will, he said, become progressively worse.

Water Problems—

A fundamental problem to be considered, Homer Innis said, is the spectacular growth in Aransas County, with many developments just starting, and others on the planning board, for all of which water must be obtained elsewhere if the county is to continue its expansion.

He quoted from a speaker at the Texas Water Conservation meeting held on Nov. 13, who said that 80% of all outdoor recreation is based on water, and that the number of people who take advantage of this will quadruple in the next decade.

Governor Connally has pointed out that in the ten years between the 1950 and 1960 censuses, Texas has risen from the sixth highest state in point of population to the fourth highest and by 1970 only New York and California will have more people than this state.

Innis pointed out that the population at that time, and even sooner, will need much more water than is available, and said that water from the Bureau of Reclamation canal recently proposed could not reasonably be expected in less than ten to fifteen years at the outside, and that such relief might be even longer than that.

Another hope, that of the desalination of sea water, was also a false one he said. To desalt sea water was now costing $1.25 per thousand gallons, and even if that cost were halved, it would still be too high for economical use.

One of the first problems in preparing the report, Innis said, had been to estimate the water needs of the two peninsulas. Permanent urban population on Live Oak Peninsula, he said, was placed at 6,000 with a seasonal addition during the summer months of 60 per cent, bringing peak totals to about 9,600 or 10,000 people.

By 1967, if the growth continues, the engineer said, there will be some 20,000 people here, and by the year 2000 the permanent population will be between 48,000 and 80,000, if sufficient water can be found to supply their needs. These people will need between 7,500,000 and 15,800,000 million gallons a day, if comparison with Freeport and Cameron county areas are valid.

Eight probable sources for water were investigated, nearly all of which depend upon purchase from, or cooperation with, other counties or water authorities.

Surface water from the Guadalupe, above its confluence with the San Antonio, would have to be brought a distance of 35.5 miles. It would be purchased from the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority, at a probable cost of 4 cents per thousand gallons of raw water, and the initial pipe lines, water treatment plant, storage of raw water, etc., would cost $3,002,000. Water from this source would cost delivered to the municipal distribution lines, approximately 34 cents per thousand gallons.

Water from the San Antonio River, obtained above its confluence with the Guadalupe River, would have to be piped 31.5 miles, and could be bought from the San Antonio River Authority, which controls the stream, at a probable cost of around two cents per 1,000 gallons. However, because at present it is water emanating from sewage effluents of San Antonio at some seasons of the year, the engineer did not regard this source with favor until the Goliad Dam has been completed, which will probably be many years within the future. This water, delivered, would cost about 30.5 cents.

Water from the Mission River would probably entail joint development with Refugio County, or purchase from that county, of water from a reservoir on Blanco Creek, above its junction with Medio Creek. This source could probably furnish water for around 4.5 cents per 1,000 gallons, which would cost 80 cents per thousand delivered.

Cost of the San Antonio River installation would be around $2,840,000 and from Mission River, in the neighborhood of $3,496,000. From the Aransas River, where again cooperation with other counties would be entailed, would run about $4,596,000, and water could be laid down here at about 37.5 cents per 1,000 gallons. Because it is of poor quality, treatment costs would be higher.

To buy water from the San Antonio Municipal Water District, now constructing a pipeline to carry raw water from the Nueces to Ingleside and towns in the area, would entail expenditure of slightly in excess of $2,000,000 by the time water reached Lamar Peninsula, and could probably be purchased for around 13 cents per thousand gallons, and sold in this area for around 33 cents. This seemed, at first glance to be the most feasible from the standpoint of initial cost of the project, but there are some drawbacks, the judge. We can but imitate the example he gave us and leave his judgment to a merciful God before whom he appeared so unexpectedly. We can but pray that his care-filled days and often distress-filled nights of the past two years may have won for John Fitzgerald Kennedy the peace and repose known only by those who rest in the Lord.

"Eternal rest unto him, O Lord,

And let perpetual light shine upon him.

May he rest in peace. Amen

May his soul and the souls of all the faithful departed through the mercy of God rest in peace. Amen!"

major one being that Corpus Christi has first call on the water, and in times of drought this might work to the disadvantage of Aransas County, unless an iron-clad agreement could be drawn protecting this community in such an eventuality.

Surface water from the Nueces River offers another possibility, but this would entail construction of a pipeline from around Calallen. Costs on obtaining water from this source would run around 4.25 cents per 1,000 gallons, with delivered costs around 36 cents. This water would be bought from the Lower Nueces Water Supply and Conservation District, and any contract would have to have the approval of the City of Corpus Christi.

Four sources of ground water were considered. De-salinization of brackish water from wells in the north end of Aransas County would require an initial investment of $4,022,000; the water would cost about 6.5 cents per 1,000 gallons and could be delivered at the end of the pipeline to this area for around 44.5 cents per 1,000 gallons. This would entail purchase of well sites, drilling and maintenance of the wells from which the slightly salty water would be obtained for de-salting, and then a pipeline, treatment plant, reservoir and all the normal equipment required in handling water from any of the other sources, plus the equipment needed to remove the salt from the water.

Such a source would be usable, if there were no other, because the removal of the comparatively small amount of salt obtained in such water would be much less expensive than removal of salt from sea water. However, it is the most expensive of the eight sources investigated, and presents many problems that the fresh water sources do not.

Water from wells in surrounding counties appear to offer the best source over a long period of time, for it is believed that such water could be obtained at around 4 or 5 cents per 1,000 gallons and could be delivered for around 21.5 or 22 cents per 1,000 gallons. However, here again, the sources would have to be developed in cooperation with the other counties, and they may prefer to keep this water for themselves, fearing possible shortages in the future. Developments of this kind would cost, in one instance, $2,565,000, while in a second, initial development costs would be approximately the same.

The eighth source considered, that of wells in Aransas County itself, can furnish only temporary relief, and is not expected to last longer than will be required to bring in water from elsewhere.

Members of the Conservation and Reclamation Board, after hearing the report, decided to table it for further study, and to call a second meeting to consult with the district's financial adviser.

SHRIMP LANDINGS—

pounds; 11,986,000 pounds. Shrimp trawlers from Texas ports worked adjacent waters through most of October, Farley said. During the first three weeks of the month, weather conditions were very favorable for prolonged trips and offshore vessels averaged about 450 pounds of large brown shrimp for 12 hours' effort.

During the last week, weather was bad, and vessels made only short, broken trips. Trawlers working the white shrimp fishery made good to excellent catches of white shrimp from northeast of Aransas Pass to Cameron, La., with catches averaging about 500 pounds per 12 hours daylight period.

Crab landings during the month totaled an estimated 80,000 pounds, practically unchanged from the previous month's low for this fishery since it first reached prominence as a segment of the Texas fishing industry in the late 1950's.

Finfish landings totaled an estimated 250,000 pounds, Farley said, which was well above any previous month since February, 1963.

The oyster fishery began operating in October on reefs in the southern bay system and to a limited extent in Galveston Bay, which has been, for some years, the major oyster producing area in the state. An estimated two thousand gallons of meats were caught in October. However, the hot, dry weather prevailing since early spring makes any estimate of potential production pure speculation, Farley said, until temperature and salinity factors attain seasonal levels this month.

The shell dredging dispute was settled temporarily, by the Parks and Wildlife Department ruling that dredges could operate on reefs or more from producing live reefs.

This ruling was immediately contested by commercial oyster producers, sports clubs, and some state lawmakers.

OREGON RETURNS—

Bullis said fishing for snapper with roller rigged fish trawls might prove more productive than results from shrimp trawling would indicate in this area.

The Oregon found extensive grounds suitable for trawling in the 200 to 100 fathom range along the eastern edge of Pena Paraguna and from Punta Zamuro to Golfo de Triste. Royal red shrimp, newest delicacy of the sea, were taken in small numbers from 200 to 400 fathoms, with the best catches of 20 to 25 pounds per 3-hour drag occurring between 220 and 240 fathoms, where the water averaged 50 degrees in temperature.

Small finger coral made use of mud rollers obligatory, but gear damage was slight, Bullis stated.

Pink speckled shrimp were also present in depths of 180 to 230 fathoms, with most of them occurring between 200 and 225 fathoms. One drag at 225 fathoms took 150 pounds (heads on) of these shrimp. Also present in the deeper drags, but in smaller numbers, were scarlet prawns, striped shrimp, and two other species belonging to the same group of sea animals.

Fish catches in deep water were lower than catches in comparable depths and temperatures in the Gulf of Mexico or off the east coast of the United States, Bullis stated.

Trawling east of Carcas was not especially successful, and trawling lines and a careful bridge watch for surface schooling tunas, maintained while the Oregon was underway, disclosed few schools. One unsuccessful attempt was made to sample a school of blackfin tuna in Mid-Caribbean, Bullis said.

JOSEPHINE WARD CIRCLE MET TUESDAY

The Josephine Ward Circle of the First Baptist Church met at the church Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Lillie Calvert, circle chairman, called the meeting to order and gave the call for the missionaries. Mrs. R. F. McKnight led in prayer.

Reports of the committee chairmen were given.

Mrs. C. O. Lutz, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Mabel Thompson for the Royal Service program. She prayed a prayer of Thanksgiving and praise.

Mrs. R. F. McKnight, gave the story of William Wallace, a missionary, who died in a Communist prison camp in 1951. Mrs. Thompson gave the history of China.

Mrs. Roy Mullinax dismissed with prayer.

The members present were: Mrs. Lillie Calvert, Mrs. Mabel Thompson, Mrs. R. F. McKnight, Mrs. C. O. Lutz, Mrs. Lillian Craig, Mrs. Vaughn, Mrs. B. A. Bartoo, Mrs. Ed Whitfill, Mrs. Ava Brumley, Mrs. Roy Mullinax, Mrs. Reid Simmons, Mrs. Marie Kykandall and Mrs. Johnnie Dunbar.

Dr. and Mrs. C. D. Griffin and children of Corpus Christi will spend the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Slocum.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A man often is said to be only as good as his name.

This probably came from the practice of men verbally binding themselves in agreements with others on the strength of their "good name."

Texas history records at least one man who proved himself to be even better than his name. For this man changed his name.

He changed his name from Otfried Hans Freiherr Von Meusebach so that he could become a citizen of Texas under the name of John O. Meusebach.

Even in light of the history of innumerable broken treaties between the Indians and the white settlers, the treaty of peace between twenty Comanche Chiefs and Meusebach, representing the German Colonists, was never breached.

This 1847 Treaty is memorialized by a marker on U.S. Highway 190 about 15 miles west of the Central Texas town of San Saba.
