Magic's number

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The basketball team Magic Johnson helped lead to five championships retired his jersey on Sunday in an emotional tribute attended by longtime friends and rivals alike. Johnson, 32, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers in November after he was diagnosed with the AIDS virus, did nothing to quell speculation he might return to the National Basketball Association — despite the apparent finality of the ceremonies. "I'm looking forward to playing in the Olympics. I hope if I do decide to come back (to the NBA) you won't be upset if we do this all over again," Johnson said. The event, staged during halftime of a Lakers game with the Boston Celtics, featured warm words from Larry Bird, Johnson's longtime archrival.

Rural rampage

IRVINGTON, Ala. — Authorities on Sunday arrested a suspect who police say went on a shooting rampage in a rural community, killing a man who let him move in with him two weeks ago and three members of a neighbor family. The capture in Mississippi of Jason "Jay" Oric Williams, 24, ended a nearly 36-hour nationwide search. Williams apparently won't fight extradition and deputies were traveling to Mississippi to bring him back to Alabama. /5A

Less leisure time

WASHINGTON — The average American worker puts in about 140 more hours on the job every year than he did two decades ago, according to a study that also found paid days off have dwindled. It all adds up to a major crimp on leisure time, say two economists for the Washington-based Economic Policy Institute. /5A

Hunters on chase

PRIVAS, France — A group of environmentalists and ornithologists watching migratory birds in southern France were chased Sunday by about 2,500 bird hunters protesting attempts to ban their sport. A squadron of riot police, several dozen local gendarmes and other police units were deployed to keep the hunters from attacking the estimated 100 environmentalists and bird-watchers, Agence-France Press reported. The hunters and ecologists have been battling for several years over the hunting of thrush and wood pigeons in the Ardeche region. The environmentalists want it banned.

High-stakes state redistricting fight reaches frantic pace as vote nears

■ Investigation is under way in judge's Senate plan.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A high-stakes fight for the political future of Texas has all the makings of a good spy novel, with the final chapter still to be written.

The plot includes late-night telephone calls, controversial computer files, and lawyers running up and down the steps of courthouses from Texas to Washington, D.C.

The action has reached a frantic pace because Texans start early absentee voting Wednesday for the March 10 political party primaries.

The state, run by Democrats in the legislative and executive branches, wants to overturn a state Senate redistricting map ordered by a federal court panel composed of three judges appointed by former President Reagan, a Republican.

Redistricting experts say the court plan gives Republicans a chance to increase their numbers in the 31-member Texas Senate from the current nine to 15. That would put the GOP on the verge

Democrats take turns on themes

President vows to win primary; aides uncertain

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — President Bush concluded a weekend of anxious campaigning Sunday by saluting New Hampshire's track record as an early selector of presidents and predicting "I will carry this state substantially" in Tuesday's leadoff primary.

But his top aides suggested his win might not be all that substantial.

And Republican challenger Patrick Buchanan accused Bush of getting "semi-hysterical" during a two-day campaign trip and of needing actor Arnold Schwarzenegger to supply muscle to a limp campaign.

For his part, Bush had some sharp words of his own clearly directed at the TV commentator.

"I understand there are a lot of people out there a lot more charismatic than I am," he said at an "Ask George Bush" forum in Hollis, N.H. "But a lot of them don't have to make the tough decisions, either."

■ Debate showcases candidates' economic proposals.

Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Five Democratic presidential candidates met in courteous campaign debate Sunday night, replaying the themes of their New Hampshire primary campaigns, slapping at President Bush but seldom at each other.

Timing made it crucial — the polls were opening in little more than 30 hours for Tuesday's leadoff presidential primary — but the tone was low key, the exchanges generally cautious.

For Paul Tsongas, leading the public opinion polls in the final phase of the campaign, a debate standoff was a plus; he'd been prepared to face the challenges that typically confront the front-runner, but few came his way.

Nor did Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton encounter any new questions about the controversies over his draft status or personal life.

Sens. Tom Harkin of Iowa and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska did challenge Tsongas for advocating some use of nuclear power. "We're not trying to gang up on you, we're not saying that you're wrong all the time, but I think you are on this

Israeli air strike kills Shiite Muslim leader

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Israeli forces killed the leader of the pro-Iranian Party of God in Lebanon on Sunday, in a lightning strike by helicopter gunships that reportedly also left his wife, his son and at least four bodyguards dead.

The dramatic raid on a motorcade carrying the Shiite Muslim leader, Sheik Abbas Musawi, kept this part of the Middle East locked in a new cycle of violence that was likely to cast a pall on U.S.-brokered peace talks scheduled to resume in Washington next week.

Nevertheless, there was no sign that any of the parties were thinking about withdrawing from the talks.

LAREDO — Some places observe George Washington's birthday with a department store sale or by closing banks for the day.

In Laredo, things are different.

Far from the Potomac, this city on the Rio Grande honors the nation's first president with a 10-day fete of balls, pageants, concerts, barbecues, carnivals and a parade.

"Over the years, we've just been getting better and better," said Jodi Powell, the celebration's executive director. "We get inquiries from all over the world."

Billionaire Bass boys bet big bucks on downtown dream

By Mike Cochran

Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — Old Sundance and his bank-robbing buddy Butch wouldn't believe it.

And they sure as hell wouldn't like it.

But the billionaire Bass brothers are turning the outlaws' infamous stomping grounds into a glitzy multi-use sanctuary designed to revitalize downtown Fort Worth, transforming Hell's Half Acre into a Field of Dreams.

Instead of girls, gamblers and gunslingers, the Bass boys want artists, tourists, jazz buffs, diners, moviegoers, retailers and occupants for their toney apartment homes.

Not to mention gray flannel tenants for their twin glass skyscrapers.

Sundance Square and her flashy sister, Sundance West, may be the answer, and the low-profile, high-rolling Basses are spending tens of millions of dollars to find out.

"Perhaps we began this for sentimental reasons," says Ed Bass, most quixotic of the four Bass brothers. "But this project has come together for economic and marketing reasons."

Rhapsodizing editorially, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said: "The flame the Basses have lit and stoked is spreading and casting a bright glow on the future of downtown Fort Worth."

This could be a 21st Century showcase for downtown America. And then again . . .

A trifle bawdy perhaps, but Fort Worth does have a past. Certainly enough so to earn a footnote in frontier history.

The Chisholm Trail passed south to north beside the town and brought the lusty cowboys and their high-spirited longhorns on their way to the Kansas railheads.

Before the turn of the century, Fort Worth had a red-light district called Hell's Half Acre, a noisy mix of saloons, gambling houses and dance halls.

"These dens of vice and immorality are open night after night, and sworn officers wink at and permit them to go on, knowingly and willingly," grumped the old Fort Worth Democrat.

"It was the whoring, drinking and gambling capital of Texas," says Richard Selcer, Fort Worth historian and author of a new book, "Hell's Half Acre: The Life and Times of a Red Light District."

DOWNTOWN: Old Sundance wouldn't believe it

(From 1A)

While never as wicked or rowdy as Dodge City or Tombstone, Fort Worth did have its fatal attractions. Sam Bass shopped for bank robbing supplies here, and shady lady Belle Starr would drift over from Dallas.

Gambler Luke Short, a notorious gunslinger, gunned down a peace officer on the streets of Fort Worth.

And when things heated up in Wyoming, Butch Cassidy, the Sundance Kid and the Hole-in-the-Wall Gang fled to Fort Worth for the diversions of Fannie Porter's Place.

It was there they posed for the photograph that would later decorate "wanted" posters across the country.

It was in Fort Worth that Harry Longbough, the Sundance Kid, met the beautiful Etta Place, who was one of Fannie's girls and not the schoolmarm portrayed on screen.

Given the boldness of the venture, it is fitting that the Bass boys chose the name Sundance, although Hell's Half Acre II would have been kind of catchy

The lines tend to blur between the Sundance projects and the Basses' early downtown developments, which included a joint effort to build the Americana Hotel, now the Worthington.

A Mobil Four Star hotel, it is the city's finest.

But the Bass stamp was most visible in City Center Towers I and II, which contained more than 1.5 million square feet of office and commercial space when completed in 1984.

The hotel and the towers overlook Sundance Square and a spokesman says all were part of the Basses' master development plan.

Glass-enclosed skywalks connect the towers and 3,000-space parking garage and provide easy access to the City Club, a luxurious private facility with a state-of-the-art athletic complex.

The twin skyscrapers went up as the economy went down, which might have discouraged or bankrupted mere mortals.

Undaunted, the Basses moved ahead with Sundance Square, a restoration project encompassing the north end of downtown and embracing multiple blocks of restaurants, nightclubs, retail establishments and offices.

Not all survived, but the exotic Caravan of Dreams did, splashing about in red ink and gobbling up loose change from Ed Bass' vast personal fortune.

Caravan of Dreams is his hometown crown jewel.

The four-story entertainment complex contains a restaurant, jazz club, theater, dance and reception facilities and resembles something airlifted from San Francisco or a Hollywood movie set.

The rooftop garden bar features a neon-decorated geodesic desert dome that a spokesman says "houses more than 300 species of cacti and succulents from four desert regions of the globe."

Officially called the Caravan of Dreams Performing Arts Center, the complex opened in 1983 and routinely showcases the top names in jazz.

No one would confuse it with Cowtown's older, bigger and more famous entertainment center, Billy Bob's Texas, the world's largest honky-tonk and C&W venue.

But Ed Bass says Sundance and the Stockyards District complement one another.

"Fort Worth never had an entertainment district except for the stockyards," he said. "It's country-and-western type entertainment, very popular and very successful.

"But it leaves a lot of the market unsatisfied."

The Sundance area, he said, would be similar to the West End area of Dallas, which is an upscale version of Austin's Sixth Street and a dryland replica of San Antonio's River Walk.

That's a tough act for Fort Worth, riddled as it is by military and defense cutbacks and with a downtown sporting a reputation for somnolence.

Local legend says Fort Worth was once so dead that a panther was found snoozing on a downtown street corner, earning the city the quirky nickname of Panther City.

In 1990, a convention of hairdressers left town complaining about runaway inactivity.

So now comes Sundance West, a $40 million residential-retail-cinema complex which includes a newly opened 11-screen theater and features a 12-story apartment complex opening this spring.

The only people who currently call downtown Fort Worth home are the homeless, and the last downtown theaters, the Worth and Hollywood, closed some 20 years ago.

The four-level, 2,000-seat AMC theater system blends the newest techniques of sound and picture quality and viewer comfort with the architectural elegance of another era.

"We intended to bring the grand movie palaces of yesteryear back to downtown," Ed Bass said at the November opening. Taking a shot at the shopping mall theaters, he added:

"People were looking for something more than going to a movie in a parking lot."

The Sundance turn-of-the-century atmosphere is reflected also in the brick and limestone tower that houses the 59 exclusive apartment homes, all of them leased months ago.

The one, two and three-bedroom units, including nine penthouse apartments on the 11th and 12th floors, range from 700 to 3,000 square feet.

They command $700 to $3,200 a month.

A tour of a model apartment with marketing manager Jackie DeBolt revealed a spacious gourmet kitchen, solid wood cabinetry, plush carpeting, quarry tile foyers, ceramic tile baths and dressing areas, oversized closets, ultra-modern appliances, personal security systems and soundproof insulation.

Ms. DeBolt said features found in other units include fireplaces, wet bars, Jacuzzis, breakfast rooms and separate dining rooms.

A second residential phase opening next year will include 62 loft-style apartments in two historic department store buildings and 100 luxury condominiums in a new high-rise tower.

"When I was young, downtown was still the heart of Fort Worth," Ed Bass recalled once. "There was not a vacant square foot with all of the thriving businesses and department stores.

"And, of course, all the first-run movies were shown there in the finest cinemas."

Expanding on his theory, Bass said: "The key to the future of downtown is the introduction of a 24-hour environment, where people live, work and play."

Things change, Butch.

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 60s and northwest to west wind at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 41, Sunday's high reached 71 compared to the record high for that date of 82 set in 1977. The record low for that date is 11 set in 1936.

STATE

An upper level storm system approaching Texas from the west brought clouds and scattered showers to most of the state on Sunday.

Thunderstorms were reported in North and South Texas, while western parts of the state reported having partly to mostly sunny skies.

Temperatures were mostly in the 60s in the west and 70s in the south.

Some with heavy rain developed in the warm and moist air over South Texas late this afternoon. Most of the activity was located from near Del Rio eastward to near Victoria. South Texas reported patchy fog along the Coastal Plains.

Gusty winds from the southwest swept across West Texas at speeds reaching 35 mph, with areas of dust swirling around the south plains.

North Texas showers fell within an area bounded by Wichita Falls, Dallas and Fort Worth, Waco, Austin and Stephenville.

NATION

Low pressure centered over Utah Sunday was bringing heavy snow to parts of the central Rocky Mountain region. More heavy snow blanketed the Sierra Nevada, and snow also continued in northern New England.

Strong winds accompanied a cold front trailing southward from a low pressure center over Utah.

Another storm was producing rain and snow in the Pacific Coast region. Rain and snow extended from western Oregon to central California, and heavy snow struck the Sierra Nevada.

The storm that brought heavy snow to parts of northern New England late Saturday and early Sunday was centered over Maine at midday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BUSH: President had sharp words for Buchanan

(From 1A)

"Heck, if that were the case, Phil Donohue might be president of the United States if you needed someone to be out there on television — or some of the other reporters we've got around here who are very good in their field, but I'm not sure we'd want them as president."

As Bush advisers tried to minimize the importance of Bush's expected margin in the first-in-the-nation primary, the president himself pumped up the importance of the race.

"I think you take these elections seriously, and New Hampshire has a record of being a pretty good predictor on who should be bearing the responsibilities for president," he told a pancake breakfast at a Pennichuck Junior High School.

Although few doubt that Bush will win the Republican primary, he has tumbled in the polls in recent weeks while Buchanan has gained support.

A USA Today-CNN-Gallup tracking poll on Sunday showed Bush at 60 percent, Buchanan at 33 percent and undecided at 7 percent.

Bush's state chairman, Gov. Judd Gregg, told reporters that Bush "couldn't have picked a poorer state" to begin his campaign because of New Hampshire's three-year-long recession and widespread voter discontent.

Bush's campaign chairman, Robert Teeter, said New Hampshire "always has been a tough state." He declined to predict a margin of victory for Bush, saying only that he expected Bush to win "comfortably."

"We've had a very difficult economic time in this country, particularly in this state, for the last year and a half. And when that happens, the president's approval ratings tend to go down. . . . But on the other hand, we're a good long way from this fall yet," Teeter said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

In an interview with Boston's WBZ-TV, Buchanan ridiculed "the president of the United States coming up here, bringing along the Terminator to help him out, Mr. Schwarzenegger."

And the conservative TV commentator reiterated his accusation that Bush had abandoned a $500-per-child increase in the personal tax exemption.

DEBATE: Candidates get low-key questions

particular issue," Kerrey said.

Tsongas told them all that he's no newcomer to energy policy. "I was doing this in the '70s, so don't come at me saying I'm not for conservation and renewables," he said.

At another point, Tsongas bristled that the others were characterizing his positions, and said he'd prefer to describe them himself.

"I would say pick Mr. Tsongas if you want the more conservative, business-oriented view," said former California Gov. Jerry Brown, talking about tax policy and later joining the critics on nuclear power.

As the evening wound up, Brown managed to work in his toll-free campaign fund-raising number, as he had in a previous debate. He said he's the only candidate out to change a stuck, stagnant political system. "May God bless our undertakings," he said.

When the candidates discussed big city problems, Harkin at one point mentioned New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who announced in December he wouldn't run but said Sunday he still wished he could have. A draft-Cuomo committee is staging a write-in campaign in New Hampshire.

When the candidates were asked to choose what each would do as president if there were $10 billion available for retraining U.S. workers or to help the states of the former Soviet Union, four said they would use the money at home.

"In a heartbeat, I'd spend the money on American workers," said Clinton.

Only Brown differed, saying there's enough money to do both. "It's not either-or," he said.

BASH: Laredo honors nation's first president

(From 1A)

ciation anticipates between 250,000 and 300,000 people will attend the 95th annual festival, which began Friday and runs through Feb. 23.

As usual, a highlight of the huge party is a black-tie pageant and ball where prominent Laredo citizens wear elaborate Colonial-era costumes to portray George and Martha Washington.

Earlier, at a Princess Pocahontas pageant and ball, young women don American Indian costumes they have researched and planned for months and years.

A parade on Feb. 22, George Washington's actual birthday, honors the founding father with entries from Texas and from Mexican cities such as Monterrey, Saltillo and Durango.

One might wonder what led to this George Washington bash on the border.

Odie Arambula, association president and Laredo Morning Times editor, said it started as an effort to "Americanize" the city and its Spanish-speaking residents of Mexican descent.

The Improved Order of the Red Men, a nationwide group that arose from the Boston Tea Party, decided in 1897 to organize a chapter in Laredo, which traditionally celebrated the Mexican holidays Cinco de Mayo and Dies y Seis de Septiembre, but not many traditional American holidays.

"We did very little with the Fourth of July," Arambula said. "So these guys said we need to do something that will give us a patriotic celebration."

Hence, the George Washington festival was born.

These days it blends the Mexican and American cultures.

"The celebration, in my opinion, brings together some of the finest qualities of the people you'll find in this community (and) its cultures," said Ms. Powell.

FIGHT: Investigation is under way of a majority in one of the two legislative chambers — a position it hasn't enjoyed in the 20th century.

(From 1A)

Senators are among the state's most powerful politicians, holding veto power over some 4,000 gubernatorial appointments to governing boards and commissions.

But Democrats and minority groups claim the court plan violates the federal Voting Rights Act by reducing the number of districts where a minority could get elected. Minorities are under-represented in proportion to their population as it is.

The Democrats also allege that the judge who drew the election map — U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin — did so not for fairness but to help Republicans get elected.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales says that what has become known as the Nowlin redistricting plan is under a "deathly pall" because of allegations that the judge secretly had state Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio, work on the map.

After analyzing computer files and telephone logs and taking sworn statements from legislative staff members and Pierce, the attorney general alleged that there was improper contact between Nowlin and Pierce over the redistricting plan.

Pierce, a good friend of Nowlin's, has acknowledged that the judge asked him to "fix" a few Bexar County precincts in the Senate district where Pierce now is running.

Pierce denies any wrongdoing. Nowlin has refused to comment on the allegations.

The state also alleges that hours after a phone call was placed from the office of another San Antonio lawmaker — Republican Rep. Alan Schoolcraft — to Nowlin's office, a second change was made on the Nowlin plan placing Schoolcraft's home in the senatorial district where he now is running.

Schoolcraft denies that he or anyone on his staff called Nowlin's court. He said his office was closed that day, but that the telephone from where the call was made is often used by other legislator's staffs.

STRIKE: Attack by Israeli forces kills Party of God leader

(From 1A)

Musawi's convoy, Syria and Lebanon announced in Damascus that they would go to Washington "to give peace a new chance."

Israel and a joint team of Jordanians and Palestinians are also planning to attend despite heightened tensions after a weekend of ample bloodshed.

It began late Friday night with Arab guerrillas slipping into an Israeli army camp and killing three soldiers with axes, knives and a pitchfork.

Senior Israeli officials said the attack was the work of the mainstream Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Early Sunday, Israel retaliated with air strikes on two Palestinian refugee camps at Ain Hilwe and Rashidiye in southern Lebanon that killed four people, including two children, and wounded nearly a dozen others.

Despite the closeness of the timing, the attack on Musawi, 16 hours after the attack on the Israeli soldiers, may not have been related to the other incidents.

By its very nature, it seemed to have required careful planning, making it unlikely, in the view of some military experts, that it would have been cobbled together in a hurry.

According to reports from Lebanon, two Israeli helicopters descended on a seven-vehicle convoy carrying the 39-year-old sheik and his family after they left a rally in the southern Lebanese town of Jibchit. Rockets blew apart the Mercedes-Benz carrying the sheik and two Range-Rovers carrying bodyguards.

A spokesman for the Party of God, or Hezbollah, said the sheik, his wife, Siham, and their 6-year-old son, Hussein, were burned to death in the car.

At the rally in Jibchit just before the attack, Musawi denounced the Arab-Israeli peace talks and accused the United States of being power mad, Reuters reported.

"America wants to control the fountains of water, exactly as it controlled the oil fountains," he said. "America wants to dominate everything."

In Jerusalem, Israeli army spokesmen confirmed only Musawi's death, but they did not dispute either reports that others had also been killed or accounts on Israeli television that the raiders had fired automatic weapons at survivors who ran from their vehicles in an effort to escape.

From Israel's vantage, the assassination of Musawi was a settlement of old scores for countless raids on its soldiers in Lebanon and in Israel by the Party of God, which is committed to waging a holy war against Israel and to attacking Western interests.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens denounced the party Sunday night as a "murderous, terrorist organization," and he said Sheik Musawi, elected secretary general of the pro-Iranian group in 1990, was "a man with lots of blood on his hands."

"We can assume the fact he was killed was not entirely coincidental," Arens said when asked if the ambush was aimed at assassinating Sheik Musawi.

Arens sought to connect the raid in Lebanon to the deaths of the three Israeli soldiers by saying: "It's a message to all terrorist organizations: Whoever opens an account with us will have the account closed by us."

"This is true for all the bands, all the terrorist organizations, all the leaders," he said.

INS keeps illegal immigrants seeking asylum at airport hotels

HOUSTON (AP) — Political asylum-seekers who fly to Houston without proper immigration papers could find themselves imprisoned by airlines for weeks or months at hotels near the Houston Intercontinental Airport.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Houston requires airlines to feed, house and provide private security guards for the refugees until a judge determines whether they should be granted asylum or deported.

Each month, one or two groups of asylum-seekers step off planes in Houston. Several airlines use the hotels to accommodate them, but the refugees can be held anywhere and any way the company sees fit.

Eight asylum-seekers from the Peoples Republic of China have spent their days at the Best Western Intercontinental, incarcerated by Air France since the first week of January. A guard in jeans and boots answers the door and orders their meals through room service. The refugees sit close to a television set to watch the American shows. They don't speak English.

"They are very, very bored," attorney Gordon Quan, who represents the two men and two women told the Houston Chronicle. A second group of four Chinese refugees arrived last Sunday, according to immigration officials.

The airlines don't like running these makeshift jails. Airline executives say they would much prefer flying these people back to where they got them. But under U.S. law, a foreigner who claims asylum here cannot be ordered out of the country until he gets a hearing before an immigration judge. And that can take months.

"These people's lives are in the hands of private security guards," says Stephanie Marks of the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights in New York. Ms. Marks formerly was an immigration judge in Houston. "There's no accountability."

Since 1986, the immigration service has collected $5 on each international ticket to pay for processing people as they arrive in this country. Detention costs for people who arrive with false papers come out of the fee.

Experts predict San Antonio will profit from drug summit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Economic experts predict a multi-million dollar coup for the city later this month when President Bush and six Latin American leaders meet in the Alamo City to discuss strategies in the drug war.

Calculating the full economic benefits of President Bush's meeting Feb. 26-27 is impossible, but some say the city will get a significant boost just from media exposure.

"The economic impact is all in the media value and that could be spectacular," said Bruce Walker, author of "MarketShare," a San Antonio publication tracking hotels and motels.

Walker said if exposure brings just one percent more visitors to San Antonio, that will mean an additional $27 million in tourist dollars.

Tourism pumps an estimated $2.7 billion into the local economy annually.

By Walker's measure, 1,500 media representatives and 800-1,000 delegation members will spend about $1.25 million during the two days.

"These are people with money to spend, but they're also scheduled for important meetings and might not have too much time for sightseeing," said Doug Beach, a theater owner and president of the Alamo Plaza Association.

Woman doing well after triple transplant surgery, doctor says

DALLAS (AP) — The 39-year-old woman who underwent a historic triple transplant at Methodist Medical Center last week has surprised doctors with her rapid improvement, a hospital spokesman said Sunday.

The Plano woman, whose identity was not released at the family's request, has diabetes. She received a heart, kidney and pancreas Thursday. Methodist surgeons say no previous triple transplant of those specific organs has been tried.

The transplant recipient was listed in critical but stable condition Sunday, said hospital spokesman Barry Pound.

"She has been removed from the ventilator, and is able to talk and move around a little bit," Pound said. "Yesterday, she was able to get up and walk with assistance around the unit."

Pound said doctors will watch closely for any complications over the next three to five days, when transplant recipients are most susceptiple to organ rejection.

He said that if the woman's body does not reject the organs, she could be released from the hospital within three weeks. "But we're certainly not going to push that," Pound said.

Pound said that the woman will no longer need insulin injections or time-consuming kidney dialysis.

Senate should end 'mischief'

Last Thursday the Senate plunged blindly into a showdown with journalists over leaks from its Judiciary and Ethics committees. Reporters have been subpoenaed for testimony they will not give to senators who don't need it.

It's almost too late to pull back from this senseless and dangerous incursion on First Amendment rights.

Timothy Phelps of Newsday was summoned to appear last week and Nina Totenberg of National Public Radio to appear this week before the Senate Rules Committee.

They're wanted for questioning about their reports last fall that Anita Hill had complained of sexual harassment by Clarence Thomas, the Supreme Court nominee. Their reports forced an embarrassed Judiciary Committee to reopen confirmation hearings.

Another reporter, Paul Rodriguez of The Washington Times, has been called to discuss leaks from the Ethics Committee's half-hearted "Keating Five" investigation of senators who did favors for a big campaign contributor.

These journalists won't talk, and the Senate knows it. They will honor their commitments of confidentiality to sources, a vital component of the press's ability in a democracy to ferret out information for the public. But to harass and haze them risks doing irreparable damage.

They've broken no law or rule, yet they are the only witnesses under subpoena and threat of contempt. No subpoena has been issued for any senator or staff member who might have broken some rule or leaked the information. The entire proceeding emanates from hypocritical rage over the kinds of leaks that occur a dozen times a day on Capitol Hill.

If the Senate can't see the danger to First Amendment values, it needs at least to recognize that this sort of inquiry will inhibit the flow of communications within Congress. Congress runs on leaks. To pursue these leaks, as the senators must realize, is not only futile but risks inhibiting contacts among legislators and with the public.

The Senate leadership needs the wisdom, and whatever courage it takes, to call off this mischief, quickly.

Washington cost colonial taxpayers plenty

WASHINGTON — George Washington's birthday will be celebrated today by people going to malls and scooping up discounted merchandise. But "discount" was a concept Washington never understood. During the eight-year Revolutionary War, Gen. Washington ran through an expense account roughly equivalent to $22.5 million today, all paid for by war-pinched colonial taxpayers.

Anderson

When Washington agreed to become commander-in-chief of the colonial armies in 1775, Congress offered him a salary of $500 a month. It was generous — $25,000 a month in today's terms — but Washington turned it down. "I will keep an exact account of my expences," he said. "These I doubt not (Congress) will discharge, and that is all I desire."

Fourteen years later, when Washington was elected president, he again offered to take no salary, but expenses only. Congress, having seen his expense accounts, respectfully declined. They awarded him a salary of $25,000 a year ($1.25 million today), and Washington later complained that it was simply not enough to live on.

We were led to this story by the General Accounting Office, which had some original ledger sheets signed by Washington. If the GAO had been around in Washington's day, his expenses would have been curtailed.

Washington was used to fine living, having married the wealthiest widow in Virginia, Martha Custis. And he wasn't about to settle for less just because there was a war on.

Estimates vary for the value of Continental dollars compared to today's currency. The ratios are anywhere from $20 to $100 today for every dollar in Washington's day. We've settled on $50 for purposes of estimating how much Washington spent in today's terms.

The National Archives obligingly let our associate Dale Van Atta examine Washington's original expense-account book. The brittle, yellowing document is kept in a vault there. From the beginning of the war, Washington betrayed his taste for the best. On the first day that he kept accounts, he spent $7,845 ($392,000 in today's terms) for five horses and a carriage.

Two things are evident from our research: There were plenty of frills that Washington considered to be "necessaries," and claimed for his personal property after the war.

In November 1781, a month after the British surrendered at Yorktown, Washington recorded the purchase of 20 pounds of tea for "public use." No doubt the troops deserved a cup after all that had been thrown overboard in Boston. But the price Washington paid was the equivalent of $1,170 a pound in 1992 money.

Washington's household expenses during the war came to $157,330 ($7.87 million today.) He savored fine food and gained 28 pounds during the war. He even charged the government for ice cream, a novelty in his day. Washington was not a big drinker, but was a generous host. Between Aug. 8, 1775, and March 19, 1776, he spent at least $6,160 ($308,018 in today's terms, or $38,500 a month) for liquor.

One or two barbers did well on his account. He listed nearly $500 (or $25,000) for barbers in the first year of the war. Today, a barbering bill of roughly $2,000 a month would demand a close look at the general's coiffure. But barbers often doubled as dentists, and Washington's notoriously bad teeth needed more attention than his hair.

One of the more intriguing household expense categories was "washing," on which he spent $1,141 (the equivalent of $57,031) in six years. Journals of the day make it clear that it was acceptable among gentlemen to pay the washer woman or her daughters for services other than laundry, with no scandal attached. But without benefit of supermarket tabloids to record the story, we have no way of knowing if that is why Washington's laundry bill was so high.

The general had to be mindful of Martha, who made several visits to the front with a full entourage. The last expenditure in his book is for $27,665 ($1.4 million in today's money) for "Mrs. Washington's travell Exps. in coming to and returning from my Winter Quarters per accts. rendered."

Washington knew this one would need some explanation. He apologized for dumping all of Martha's travel expenses into one final bill, and said he had his doubts about whether it was proper to bill the government at all.

CHARLEY REESE

American society lacks freedom of before

Most Americans born after World War II have no idea how free this country used to be or how unfree they are today.

Today, government is a constant intruder in our lives, from the delivery room to the graveyard and 24-hours-a-day in between. It sits like an spectral unwanted guest at the dinner table, at our workbench, even in our bedrooms. Virtually everything we do, see, touch, taste or smell is taxed and regulated.

Reese

No wonder the United States is in decline.

Freedom is the freedom to make decisions. Every law, and there are now thousands, and every rule or regulation, and there are now millions, represent a loss of our decision-making ability.

Government has become a racket. There are two main beneficiaries and perpetrators of the racket. One is that group that makes money off the government, either directly or indirectly. The other is that group (politicians and bureaucrats) who get what they lust for — power.

It's a protection racket. The government dupes people into putting up with it on the pretense that it protects them. Like the Mafia, it charges an excessive fee for this protection — billions of dollars as well as our liberty.

Thus government is in constant need of enemies both foreign and domestic. Enemies are necessary to maintain the con about protection. An enemy for con artist purposes can be something as simple as a person who knows how to make false teeth. The government declares it must protect the people against incompetent or dishonest false teeth makers. So it passes laws and regulations.

That is one of the principal products politicians sell — monopolies. Cable companies, utilities, lawyers, doctors, dentists, gravediggers — the list of groups using the power of government to limit their competition and thus raise their prices is almost endless. And it's always done in the name of protection.

This, of course, is baloney. Casual observation reveals that despite government's protection people still get ripped off, maimed or even killed by incompetent or unscrupulous members of these regulated groups. The partners in the scheme, of course, use that weakest of all excuses — well, it could be worse.

No, it could be free if the government would butt out of private affairs as our forefathers intended.

Postwar generations have become so accustomed to the omnipresence of government, having grown up with it, they don't even realize how alien it is to the American concept of freedom. Try this experiment. Engage a person under 40 in conversation. Mention a problem — pick any problem.

I'll betcha a beer against champagne that 9 out of 10 people 40 and under will immediately broach the subject of government intervention. Government is their automatic first answer to any problem whether it involves animals, vegetables or minerals. They don't need 20 questions. What can the government do is their first and last question.

In the 1850s, two Georgia legislators got into a quarrel and one of them attacked the other with a large knife. In the struggle, one man's hand was permanently maimed. Yet, they patched up their quarrel the next day. No one sued anyone (least of all the hotel where the fight occurred or the maker of the knife). No one was arrested. It was a private affair handled privately to the satisfaction of everyone involved. The state was not a third party intervenor.

That's a free society.

Today, a child's prank or a dog bite can entangle people in the nightmare of a Dickensian court system. That's an unfree society.

LETTER

State of Union talk was plain rhetoric

I'm writing about President Bush's "State of the Union" speech and his health care proposal.

I heard little about the "State of the Union" and a lot of the presidents's campaign rhetoric.

I heard nothing that would move us out of our recession (depression). The capital gains reduction will be rejected. It is for the rich and wouldn't help the bottom half of our citizens. Most of middle-lower part of our population have "no capital" to sell and no extra money to spend on IRA's!

The administration — both Reagan and Bush's — have NEVER proposed legislation that would help the middle and lower strata of our nation. Both of them are free and ready to aid the wealthy and rich!

His health care plan would have no cost control in it, as explained to me. That's what got medical costs to drastically rise! Bush is protecting the doctors from any restraint. Shame! Cutting Medicare to pay for it! Line item veto? Won't stand!

After the administrations of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, who openly stated that the government's business was "business," we went into what has been called THE BIG DEPRESSION!

Now after 11 years of republican nurturing business and ignoring "the general welfare of the citizens," we again find ourselves in what is a depression to those losing their jobs and a recession longer and deeper than anything since the 30's.

Those who elected Reagan-Bush brought on our present condition themselves (and unfortunately, the rest of us).

There are those who will attempt to blame Congress for it. Everybody knows who's been in charge for the last 11 years and it isn't Congress.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 17, the 48th day of 1992. There are 318 days left in the year. This is Presidents' Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 17, 1964, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its "one man, one vote" decision, ruling that congressional districts within each state must be roughly equal in population.

On this date:

In 1801, the U.S. House of Representatives broke an electoral tie between Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, electing Jefferson president. Burr became vice president.

In 1817, a street in Baltimore became the first to be lighted with gas from America's first gas company.

In 1865, Columbia, S.C., burned as the Confederates moved out and Union forces began moving in. (It's never been determined which side set the blaze.)

In 1897, the forerunner of the National PTA, the National Congress of Mothers, was founded in Washington.

In 1904, Giacomo Puccini's opera "Madama Butterfly" received a poor reception at its premiere at La Scala in Milan, Italy.

In 1947, the Voice of America began broadcasting to the Soviet Union.

In 1985, Murray P. Haydon, a retired autoworker, became the third person to receive a permanent artificial heart when doctors at Humana Hospital Audubon in Louisville, Ky., implanted the device. (Haydon lived 488 days with the heart.)

Toothpaste can pose problems for carpet

Have you ever tried to get toothpaste out of a carpet. No? Well, I have. Out of the carpet in my bathroom.

I suppose I should tell you how the toothpaste got on the carpet in my bathroom but it's a little embarrassing.

Grizzard

On the other hand, I've never been one to keep secrets. What happened was, I was in the midst of a rather spirited argument with someone else who was with me in my bathroom at the time.

The argument had to do with the fact I am insensitive, bull-headed, selfish and sometimes my feet don't smell so good.

I realized I was losing the argument, which frustrated me. When I get frustrated, sometimes I get angry.

I got angry, and I happened to be holding a canister of toothpaste in my hand. I was just about to brush my teeth when the argument broke out. It wasn't a tube of toothpaste. The modern shopper like myself now buys toothpaste in a canister with a button on top. You push the button and the toothpaste comes out, which has made it possible for me to avoid another argument I've been having with women all my life.

Beginning with my mother, every woman with whom I have shared a bathroom has complained that I don't squeeze a tube of toothpaste from the bottom, which is the way they are convinced it should be done.

I can never figure out what the big deal is. I squeeze from the top, the middle, three-quarters of the way down or from the bottom. There's still just so much toothpaste in there, and, one way or another, I'll get it all out.

Anyway, I was angry and I couldn't decide whether or not to ram my fist through the glass shower door or slam the canister of toothpaste down to the carpet.

I went for the toothpaste slam. We weren't arguing politics.

The toothpaste canister broke into many pieces, and toothpaste got all over the carpet. She said, "If you think I'm going to clean up that toothpaste, you're crazy."

"Did I ask you to clean up the toothpaste?" I shouted back at her. "I'll clean it up. Don't you worry one minute about it. I'll do it. I'll have this toothpaste up before you can bat an eye. It's my toothpaste. I paid for it. I threw it on the carpet, which is also mine, and I'll clean it up. Yes, siree. I'll clean up the damn toothpaste. When it comes to cleaning up toothpaste I'm a world champion.

"'If you think I'm going to clean up that toothpaste . . .'" I mocked her. "You don't have to do it, I'll do it."

First, I tried scrubbing it out with a brush. That didn't work. The toothpaste had caked in the carpet by this time. I tried scraping it out with a knife. That didn't work, either.

I tried a wet wash rag on it. Nope. I wet a mop and tried that. Do you know how much suds a little toothpaste on a carpet can produce when you put water on it? Tons of the stuff, which now was spreading to other parts of the carpet.

I tried to get my dog, Catfish, the black Lab, to lick the toothpaste off the carpet. He refused.

I tried everything I knew. Nothing worked.

So I said to myself, I'll probably sell this house one day, let the new owner get the toothpaste up.

She came home and saw the mess and called a carpet-cleaning service. It was my toothpaste, my carpet, and my carpet-cleaning bill.

But I got even. I put a Pat Buchanan bumper sticker on her car. She likes the wimp from California because he seems so sensitive.

Police arrest man wanted in killing rampage

IRVINGTON, Ala. (AP) — Authorities on Sunday arrested a suspect who police say went on a shooting rampage in a rural community, killing a man who let him move in with him two weeks ago and three members of a neighbor family.

The capture in Mississippi of Jason "Jay" Oric Williams, 24, ended a nearly 36-hour nationwide search.

Williams apparently won't fight extradition and deputies were traveling to Mississippi to bring him back to Alabama, where he'll be charged with four counts of capital murder, said Mobile County Sheriff's Department spokesman Gardner Wilcox.

He was arrested without incident at a truck stop in McNeil, Miss., about a two-hour drive from Mobile, said Mississippi Highway Patrol spokesman Dan Tackett.

He had called the Mobile sheriff's office on a pay phone to say he would surrender, authorities said.

"He came out of the phone booth with his hands on top of his head and gave himself up," Tackett said.

Williams, 24, earlier had been seen driving a van that belonged to one of the victims. Police said he was armed and dangerous.

Nation in brief

■ Bank robberies surge in U.S. cities

CHICAGO — From Atlanta to Anchorage, from Seattle to St. Paul, bank robberies were epidemic last year. Authorities blame drugs, hard times, and a new breed of banks that are easy marks.

Though the nationwide total hasn't been tallied yet, it's expected to top the bank-robbery record of 7,837 set in 1990, FBI officials said.

Eight of the nation's 15 largest metropolitan areas reported a surge in bank heists. Several smaller cities also set records.

Some cities — New York, San Francisco and Boston, among them — saw a decline. But Los Angeles had 810 stick-ups, by far the highest total of any city in the country, breaking the record of 742 set in 1983. Hold-ups in Atlanta more than doubled, to 247 from 109 in 1990, and rose in Chicago from 59 to 95.

And for drug addicts, that money is a great temptation.

Three out of five arrested bank robbery suspects have tested positive for drug use, said Bob Long, FBI spokesman for the Chicago area.

Law enforcers and bankers also say they believe robberies may be increasing because more people are jobless and desperate.

■ Teams find bodies from helicopter crash

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Rescue teams late Saturday retrieved the bodies of two men who were passengers aboard a news helicopter that crashed in an ice-covered resevoir.

Diving teams earlier recovered wreckage of the helicopter to be examined for clues to the cause of the crash.

The helicopter crashed Wednesday in fog-shrouded Horsetooth Reservoir while flying from Denver to Fort Collins, 60 miles to the north. The craft, which was mostly intact, sank in water about 120 feet deep, said Norm Weinmeyer, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

Pilot Peter Peelgrane, 46, who was pulled from the reservoir 30 to 45 minutes after the crash, remained in critical condition Saturday at Poudre Valley Memorial Hospital.

■ Fire engulfs Los Angeles building

LOS ANGELES — Fire raged through two floors of a county office building Saturday, injuring three people and forcing 45 workers to flee. Flames and smoke billowed into the air.

The blaze on the 7th and 8th floors of the 12-story Los Angeles County Health Department building caused office windows to shatter and fall into the street. Heat could be felt a block away.

Fire Chief Donald Manning said one firefighter and one worker were treated for smoke inhalation, and a fire captain was cut by broken glass. None were injured seriously.

All of the 45 workers in the building were accounted for about two hours after the fire.

The fire caused at least $1 million damage, said Richard Dixon, the county's chief administrative officer. The damage will hurt long-range studies of the county trauma care system, health department officials said.

Officials said they didn't know how the fire started, but said a lack of sprinklers let the blaze get out of hand. The building was constructed before a city ordinance made sprinklers mandatory.

Study: Americans' work time rises, leisure drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average American worker puts in about 140 more hours on the job every year than he did two decades ago, according to a study that also found paid days off have dwindled.

It all adds up to a major crimp on leisure time, say two economists for the Washington-based Economic Policy Institute, a liberal research group that draws its funding from labor unions, foundations and corporations.

"Americans are starved for time," the study said. "Increasing numbers of people are finding themselves overworked, stressed out, and heavily taxed by the joint demands of work and family life."

The study was written by Juliet Schor of Harvard University and Laura Leete-Guy of Case Western Reserve University. Schor wrote "The Overworked American: The Unexpected Decline of Leisure."

The study found that full-time workers put in, on average, 138 hours more a year in 1989 than they did in 1969.

The economists then looked at commuting time, and found that people were spending more time getting back and forth to work. Figuring in the rise in work hours, commuting time and the decline in days off, the economists said Americans are spending 158 hours more each year on work — or an extra month.

"The Japanese statements about Americans being lazy and not wanting to work are not based in fact," Leete-Guy said.

Paid time off — vacations, holidays, sick leave and personal days — fell roughly 15 percent in the 1980s, the study said. Americans had an average of 16.1 days off a year in 1989, down from 19.8 days in 1981, according to the study. In most European countries, workers get paid vacations of at least five weeks, the study said.

The ongoing decline of real wages since 1973, coupled with the increased costs of health care and housing, are the major factors behind Americans' need to put in more hours, the institute said. Part of the rise was caused by women taking on a bigger work burden by working a greater fraction of the year.

Meanwhile, time spent on such chores as laundry and cleaning house didn't decrease enough to stem the loss in leisure time, the study said.

The recent trends in work and leisure are the direct reversal of the predictions that most experts made 30 years ago — that automation, productivity growth and consumer satiation would cause a crisis of excess leisure time.

U.S.-Haitians favor armed intervention

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Haitian-Americans, frustrated by the failure of diplomatic efforts to reinstate ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, now are calling for an armed invasion to knock out Haiti's repressive military.

But in the same breath, members of the 300,000-strong Haitian immigrant community in New York adamantly oppose sending U.S. troops because of memories of a humiliating American occupation early this century.

Philippe Wilson Desir, 52, Haiti's consul general in New York, thinks a force of Haitian exiles sponsored by friendly nations might be a solution.

Many Haitians don't believe the Bush administration backs Aristide, a radical priest who a year ago became Haiti's first freely elected leader. And they're outraged by the forced return of refugees.

"There is a tacit collaboration between the Haitian military and the State Department," Desir said. "The Americans will have the last word. And the Americans don't want Aristide's return."

The Bush administration, which recognizes Aristide as Haiti's legitimate leader, denies that charge.

Thumbsucking
Sucking action is a natural reflex for all babies and is their way of obtaining nourishment. Many babies find comfort in sucking a thumb or finger, especially during times which are stressful for them such as when teething or hungery.
If thumbsucking continues beyond infancy it begins to interfere with not only the alignment of the teeth, but also the normal development of the jaws. An orthodontic pacifier should be introduced to the infant as a substitute for the thumb, thereby avoiding its harmful effects. When a child reaches the age of two, the sucking urge usually decreases and the sucking of any object should be discourage altogether.
Parents should provide children with love and patience in trying to wean them from this harmful habit. If children persist in thumbsucking much past the age of four, the dentist's advise should be requested. With professional help some very simple methods can be implemented which are easy for the young patient to use. These methods usually produce immediate results in getting children to give up the thumbsucking habit.

Uzbek chief tells Baker he's pro-democracy; opponents say he isn't

SAMARKAND, Uzbekistan (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III got a lesson in the complexities of Central Asian politics Sunday when Uzbekistan's president told Baker that he was now a real democrat ready for relations with Washington, and opposition leaders told Baker that their president was a dictator.

Baker closed his tour of the Caucasus and Central Asia by meeting with President Islam Karimov and the opposition leaders in the Uzbek capital, Tashkent, before flying with Karimov in his personal jet to visit the ancient Silk Route city of Samarkand.

In Samarkand, Baker donned his cowboy hat and toured the mosaic-tiled 15th-century Muslim schools at Registan Square. Later, he flew off to Moscow for arms control talks today with the Russian president, Boris N. Yeltsin.

U.S. officials said Karimov, in his meeting with Baker, pulled a notebook out of his pocket and ticked off the American principles he was ready to embrace, as part of Washington's conditions for establishing diplomatic relations. These include commitments to free elections, respect for human rights and minorities and establishment of free markets.

As happened on Baker's stops in other republics, Karimov, a former Communist Party boss who originally expressed support for the August coup against the Soviet president, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, seemed to be taking a leaf of ideas from Baker's book. As Baker said, "The president in our meetings in effect recited those principles back to me today. I am well pleased by what I heard."

From the start of his tour to Moldova, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Turkmenistan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, Baker has acknowledged that while such declarations may be insincere, it is nevertheless useful to get public statements of allegiance to basic democratic principles, since it will establish a baseline against which to judge the leaders and determine the shape of U.S. relations with them.

The only problem with that argument, say some analysts, is that it ignores the fact that the United States may need and want relations with these countries for purely strategic reasons and should not get carried away with setting up human rights as the only yardstick, since it may soon have to be ignored.

Ten percent of Uzbekistan's population, and half that of Tashkent's, is made up of Russians, Ukrainians and other Europeans.

Serbs oust peace plan opponent

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The last key opponent of a U.N. plan to deploy thousands of peacekeepers to war-torn Croatia was ousted from power Sunday, news reports said.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said legislators in the ethnic Serb enclave of Krajina in western Croatia fired Krajina President Milan Babic in a special session. The assembly also dissolved the Krajina government, Tanjug said.

Babic could not be reached for comment.

But Lazar Macura, the region's self-styled information minister, said in a telephone interview that the action was "illegal."

"All this is a game manipulated from Belgrade (the Serbian republic's capital), which never wanted creation of Krajina in the first place," said Macura, a close Babic associate.

Tanjug said 74 deputies voted for his dismissal, eight were opposed and three abstained.

The removal of Babic from office would clear the last obstacle to the U.N. plan, which aims to enforce a truce in a civil war in which more than 8,000 people have been killed and hundreds of thousands uprooted from their homes.

Babic objects to the plan because it treats Krajina as part of Croatia and calls for the withdrawal of the Serb-dominated federal army and the disarming of thousands of Babic's irregular forces.

He has warned of bloodshed if peacekeepers are sent to his region.

Ex-Soviet nations meet in summit

TEHRAN, Iran (NYT) — Iran, Pakistan and Turkey on Sunday welcomed leaders of the six formerly Soviet republics of Central Asia at a regional economic summit meeting here. At the opening of the two-day gathering, the presidents of Iran and Turkey presented contrasting but equally ambitious guidelines for economic development and trade cooperation.

Three of the former Soviet republics — Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, and Azerbaijan — Sunday were formally recognized as full members of the long-dormant Economic Cooperation Organization, which was founded in 1963 by Iran, Turkey and Pakistan.

Officials of the other three republics — Tajikistan, Kyrgyzstan, and Kazakhstan — were present as observers, and membership for their republics is being considered.

Officials said Romania had also asked to join the organization, until now an exclusively Muslim regional group. Turkey also is seeking to have the organization admit the breakaway Turkish Cypriot state in north Cyprus, which is recognized only by Turkey.

"This is the meeting of a large Islamic family," the Iranian president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said in his address at the summit meeting Sunday.

Ana Baeza washes Pauli in a sink at Dog Gone Grooming.

Ester Rangel can tell you without hesitation what the first step to being a dog groomer is.

"You have to love dogs," she says. "You have to enjoy what you're doing. Loving pets is the most important thing."

Ms. Rangel is a dog groomer at Dog Gone Grooming, a pet salon in west Midland. She works there with Dianna Wells and Ana Baeza, two of her daughters, trimming, washing and grooming a wide assortment of dogs and the occasional cat.

For dogs, the first treatment at the salon is roughing out, in which the groomer brushes and clips out tangled and matted hair, cleans out the ears and clips the toenails. From there, the dog is given a bath, which includes a scrubbing with both shampoo and conditioner.

After that, the dog is given a more extensive trimming and grooming. Finally, the dog is given a splash of cologne and adorned with a bow. Polish can be applied to the pooch's paws, in the owner's choice of colors.

Wells, a part-owner of the business, estimated that about 90 percent of the animals brought to her are dogs; the rest are cats.

Prices are set according to the size of the pet and the thickness of its fur. "The longer the hair, the more expense you're going to get," Ms. Wells said while trimming a docile, long-haired Persian cat. "It all depends on how much hair the dog has and how much care you've given it at home."

Chows and sheepdogs present the biggest challenges, she said, and poodles

DEATHS

Leroy Fincher

Services for Leroy Fincher are set for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Chuck Chapman officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He died Saturday in a local hospital.

Pallbearers are to be Randall Lee Fincher, Chad Edward Fincher, Kevin Fincher, Kenneth Farrington, Nathan Greer and Cory Farrington.

Patricia Colston

LUBBOCK — Services for Patricia Jean Colston, 66, of Lubbock, sister of Don O. Bomar of Midland, are to be held 2:30 p.m. Tuesday are Lubbock's Resthaven Chapel. Burial will follow in Resthaven Cemetery.

She died Saturday at her daughter's home in Corpus Christi following an illness.

also involve a lot of work because they require a great deal of precise trimming.

That's a sentiment shared by Annetta Limbaugh, the owner of Clip Joint Northside, a second salon a few doors down from Dog Gone Grooming. To her, poodles present a constant challenge. "Shaving their feet is the hardest, going around all those bony little toes," she said.

Nevertheless, she enjoys grooming poodles because she can exercise a certain creativity with the trimming that she can't with other breeds. "There's a lot more things you can do with poodles — different patterns," she said.

The women agree that learning to trim pets is a skill that must be cultivated with months of careful practice. "When you first do it, the clippers feel so heavy," Ms. Limbaugh said.

Ms. Rangel says she felt the same hesitation when she first started trimming pets. "You have to get over the fear of cutting the dog," she says.

The business can even present an occasional surprise. Ms. Limbaugh recalled a couple who sent their dog to and from the salon in a taxi.

Ms. Wells has had rabbits brought to the shop. Rabbits can be a challenge, she says, because they tend to be frightened of the cutters.

"They're real scared," she says. "(But) I'll do the best I can."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Woman treated for stab wound

Staff Report

A 38-year-old Midland woman was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center following a Saturday night stabbing at a local motel, according to police reports.

Mary Alice Jackson of the 1000 block of S. Mineola St, was stabbed in the right arm with a butcher knife. The incident occurred at 9:56 p.m. Saturday in room #155 of the Desert Inn motel, 3108 Bankhead Highway, according to reports.

No charges have been filed against the alleged assailant, a 42-year-old black male who is a friend of the victim, police said.

Midlander stabbed

A Midland man is in stable condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after being stabbed during a knife fight Saturday night, police reports said.

Twenty-nine-year-old Manuel Belloc, of the 1800 block of E. Oak St., was cut in the upper body area by a Hispanic male believed to be in his late 20s, according to police reports.

Another man, 24-year-old Felix Bermea, received minor injuries when he attempted to break up the fight, reports said.

Judgment dwarfs city budget

SUNNYVALE (AP) — Officials in this tiny Dallas County town say they have no way to pay a zoning ordinance judgment more than eight times the annual budget.

State District Judge Merrill Hartman last week ordered the town to pay $8.5 million to developers who said the ordinance harmed them. Hartman said the ordinance, which mandated minimum residential lot sizes of one acre, was unconstitutional.

"The town's annual budget is $1 million," said Sunnyvale Mayor Paul Cash, who added that the judgment amounts to $4,146.34 for each of the city's 2,050 residents. "I do not foresee any way the city can pay the judgment."

Cash said the city would appeal the decision and predicted it "won't have to pay one cent."

"Sunnyvale is not a town that intends to roll over and play dead," he said.

Hartman initially ruled in December that the zoning ordinance harmed developers Charles Mayhew Sr.; his son, Charles Mayhew Jr.; Sunnyvale Properties Ltd.; and Northrup Properties.

Cesar Chavez, right, president and founder of the United Farm Workers, walks along with an unidentified woman Sunday in San Juan during a protest march that drew more than 500 farm workers and protesters urging people to boycott grapes.

Farm workers union sees growth, labor leader says

SAN JUAN (AP) — Support for the United Farm Workers of America is growing again, fueled by its trademark boycotts and uncertainty about the economy, union leader Cesar Chavez said Sunday.

"We get a lot of pressure," Chavez said. "But we've been able to overcome all of that.

"Now we're going to start growing."

The growth has been spurred in part by union efforts, which have been helped by a new recession-drive awareness of the plight of workers, he said. "People are thinking more today about working people ... than they have in the last 20 years."

Chavez told more than 200 union members gathered for the UFW's biennial convocation that the organization was increasing its efforts and urged them to support boycotts.

The UFW claims to represent hundreds of thousands of farm workers nationwide. But it officially represents only 23,000, all in California, the only state to recognize with legislation the union as a bargaining representative.

"The boycott is your strength," he said. "They can't resist that force. That's our best form of winning," Chavez said.

The UFW, led by Chavez, a longtime labor leader and advocate of farmer workers' rights, has been boycotting the sale of grapes since 1985.

The effort centers on educating consumers about the use of dangerous pesticides on agricultural products. The union contends pesticide exposure is responsible for high cancer and birth defect rates among the children of farm workers.

"Birth defects after birth defects after birth defects. That is frightening," said UFW Secretary David Martinez.

"The parents, they feel bad because they believe they're bringing the poisons in with them from the fields," Martinez said.

The union maintains the growers benefit financially from the sale of these products, while consumers and farm workers are left to deal with the risks they represent.

Chavez said the union isn't trying to stop grape sales, but rather force stores to stop promoting what the union considers to be a potentially dangerous product.

Union officials said they have scored several victories during the course of their nearly seven-year-old boycott.

"This grape boycott has spread beyond the continent," Martinez said. "We've gotten word of a (boycott) committee in Taiwan."

"When they found they couldn't sell grapes in California, they tried to sell them in Mexico," he added. "Cesar let them know and they started dumping grapes. ... They're dumping grapes everywhere."

Cobblers stay in step with the times

By Lance Martin

Associated Press writer

GREENVILLE — Archie Darling says he likes going to church. He also says he likes his job. So it seems only fitting that at his job he saves soles and re(heels) boots.

Darling is one of two local men who still practice the art of shoe repair — a field that has shrunk over the years but has taken a step in the other direction here of late.

"It's picking up," says Clyde Hancock, who with his wife Barbara owns Clyde's Shoe Service. "It's not a dying art. We went through hard times when tennis shoes were so popular about ten years ago, but it's turning around."

Hancock says image has much to do with younger people beginning to wear boots again. When tennis shoes became more and more popular, the country music stars who were popular were the "outlaw" types and didn't have a good image.

"These country singers today, they're more presentable than they used to be," Hancock says. "Young people are wearing a lot of ropers and western-style boots.

"We're busier now than we've ever been."

Hancock and his wife have been in the business for about 30 years, in Greenville for 21 of them. Darling, who owns Greenville Shoe Repair, has been repairing shoes since 1983.

Darling agrees that there is no lack of business.

"You won't starve to death, but you won't get rich either," he said. "One person has to put in some hours."

'Most people think that because you're a shoe repairman, you can make boots, but it's not like that. It's just like mechanics can't make a car.'

— Clyde Hancock

Unlike most modern jobs, training for a career in shoe repair is not easily available. Most of those in the business have served as apprentices, including both Greenville shoe repairmen.

Hancock apprenticed for six to eight months before he was confident enough to go out on his own. Darling worked with James Renfro, who owned the shop he purchased, for about a year before he was comfortable with what he was doing.

Hancock said there are only two places for formal training in the U.S. that he's aware of — one in Oklahoma and one at Ball State University in Indiana.

He said he's surprised by the number of shoe repairmen left in America, according to a convention he recently attended. "There are only 20,000 in the United States," he said. "You think there'd be more than that."

Hancock is optimistic because there are more young people in the business than he has ever seen. He also has an apprentice of sorts at his own shop, Mike Cogburn, who repairs shoes and also does leather work, adding an extra-dimension to the business and Cogburn's own future.

"Every repairmen can do different things," Hancock said. "Just because one can do something, it doesn't mean another one can."

Darling is quick to say how much he likes shoe repair. "I enjoy it," he says. "It's kind of a challenge to an ex-television technical. For my part, I really like people."

Hancock also enjoys his work. "I've never been bored with it," he says. "Every pair of boots is a different personality, just like a person," Darling says.

Shoe repairmen are very much like doctors. They don't create; they fix.

"Most people think that because you're a shoe repairman, you can make boots, but it's not like that," Hancock says. "It's just like mechanics can't make a car."

Darling says even shoes in the worst possible condition can usually be saved. It all depends on how valuable they are to their owner.

Neither man promises a miracle, but both say their work can prolong the life of a shoe or boot indefinitely, as long as they're repaired in time before the base materials are allowed to deteriorate too much.

Hancock doesn't think the trade itself is worn out and in need of repair. "They keep telling us we're going to die," he says, "but we won't."

Piano students sound off about being forced to play

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A reader wrote: "Our daughter, Naomi, age 8, has been taking piano lessons for three years. She's lost interest and wants to quit. Should we let her quit, or force her to stick with it?"

Van Buren

You said you'd never had a letter from anyone who regretted getting a musical education — even though they sometimes practiced with tears in their eyes. Well, Abby, may I be the first?

I took piano lessons for six years. I had seven teachers. I quit four; three quit me. I was tone-deaf — just like my father. I am 56 years old, and all I can play is "Chopsticks." — TONE-DEAF IN OMAHA

DEAR TONE-DEAF: It may comfort you to know you are not alone. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Count me as a determined mother who made her son take piano lessons because I was "sure" he would thank me later on. When he was 12, he developed an ulcer, and his doctor advised me to lay off. I did, and the boy recovered. Years later, it was his idea to resume the lessons, so I felt somewhat vindicated. — MOUNT VERNON, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 8, I started taking piano lessons. After my third lesson, my teacher returned the fourth payment and told me to tell my mother to save her money. I am now a practicing attorney in Washington, D.C., who appreciates good music, but I am no musician. — A.G. McCARTHY III

DEAR ABBY: I absolutely disagree with your advice that a child should be forced, through tears if necessary, to continue taking piano lessons. Try a new teacher.

If Naomi still hates to practice, she should be allowed to quit for the time being.

When adults tell me that they now regret having quit taking music lessons as children, I tell them to start now!

Learning to play the piano is not an art limited to childhood. I taught piano and organ for many years, and the "late bloomers" who learned to play as adults were a pleasure to teach. — THE REV. WILLIAM K. YOUNG, WATSONVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I am deeply distressed that you would advise parents to force their children to practice. I have taught piano for 35 years, and accept only children who are self-motivated. Forcing a child to study music is child abuse! — JENNIFER MC KENSIE, BEND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter argued, fought and cried through three years of piano lessons. She begged to quit, so we finally let her. Years later, she asked why we let her quit. I told her, "Because you said you hated it, and refused to practice."

She replied, "What did I know? I was only a child. Why didn't you make me?"

So, I'm with you, Abby. Tell Naomi's mother to make her practice. — BEEN ON BOTH SIDES

TOMORROW: Letters from some winners who were glad they didn't quit.

'Dirty Dozen' presented at 'Hearts on Parade'

A hint of Valentine's Day was still in the air Saturday when the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (MHCC) Women's Department and the MHCC Educational and Development Foundation presented the 5th Annual "Hearts on Parade" All-Male Fashion Show and Charity Ball at Midland Center.

Quiroz

Red and white hearts filled the Center and set the stage for the evening's "Hearts on Parade," where hearts, as well as pocketbooks, were open wide to help raise funds for MHCC's scholarship fund.

Approximately 500 people were in attendance, according to Elvia Hernandez, president of MHCC, to see the 21 male models strut their stuff down the runway.

"We hope to make about $8,500 after expenses," Ms. Hernandez said. "We just want to thank the Midland Community for everything they have done for us."

The evening began at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres.

Felipa Lara, chair person of the Women's Department and co-chairperson for the event, and Ms. Hernandez welcomed guests and introduced several special guests in the crowd, including New York Yankee Randy Velarde, who served as a model for the fashion show, Miss Sandhills Rodeo Wendy Phillips, Senorita Hispana del Permian Basin Stacey Jacquez and several political candidates.

Around 7:45 p.m. the fashion show got under way. Business and civic leaders from the Tall City offered their services as models, as Ms. Hernandez and Matt Santiago of KNFM-Country Radio, served as masters of ceremonies.

Donning business attire from JCPenney menswear collection, about half of the male models showed the latest in suits, ties, sport coats, trousers and dress shirts. Bold ties marked the fashion trend for spring, but other new looks included the double-breasted suit and suspenders.

In sportswear from Oshman's, the remaining volunteer models sported the latest in fashions for tennis, golf, racquetball, biking, skiing and just working out. Sporting a fashionable red, black and white warm up suit, special guest Randy Lee Velarde made his first appearance of the evening.

The sportswear section of the show was introduced and closed with a dance routine by 11-year-old Brittany Daniels of Andrews.

For the final fashion scene, male models donned tuxedos from Janee's Evening Wear & Tuxedo. The first half of the models were escorted by ladies of the media and professional world wearing gowns from Janee's.

The evening wear presentation brought cheers and whistles as some of the male models were introduced as "The Dirty Dozen Plus One." On cue, the men began to remove their bow ties, coats and shirts to display muscle shirts sporting letters spelling out "The Dirty Dozen."

The remaining male models showed a more sedate array of black and gray tuxedos and tails. Following the formal presentation, each model was presented escorting an officer or member of the MHCC Women's Department.

A special presentation of roses was made to Adela Quiroz, "Hearts on Parade" chairperson, for her efforts in preparing this year's event.

The band, "Los Tejanós de San Angelo" featuring "El Charro Negro," began right on time at 9:30 p.m. playing a variety of Hispanic, country and western, and top 40 songs until around 1 a.m.

Models and their sponsors were Velarde, sponsored by Trendy T's; Dean F. Jarrett, Texas Commerce Bank; Mike Flores, Southwest Coca Cola Co.; Hank Wurtz, WEBCO Printing; Terry L. Martin, Isotrol Systems, Inc.; Frank Baldazo, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.; Jose "Bo" Zertuche, Maverick Horticulture; Chuck Swallow, Miller; Allen E. Howland, Midland Reporter-Telegram; Joe H. Brown Jr., Big 2 News Team; Keith Jobe, Jorge's; and Luis E. Romero Jr., Torres & Torres.

Steve Green, head coach of the Midland College men's basketball team, was scheduled to model, but due to a conflict of recruiting schedules for the Chaparrals was unable to attend.

Fashion show coordinator was Carol McCarter, assisted by Janee Hargrove and Bertha Pena.

Officers for MHCC Women's Department are Ms. Lara, chairperson; Martha Martinez, co-chairperson; Sally Urias, secretary; Christina Ochoa, treasurer; Velma Morales, parliamentarian; Diana Valadez, historian; Ms. Hernandez, special advisor, and Julia Castro, immediate past chairperson.

"Hearts on Parade" committee members were Ms. Quiroz, chairperson, Ms. Lara, co-chairperson; Ms. Hernandez, arrangements; Lydia Massey and Ms. Castro, models; Martha Martinez and Ms. Ochoa, wardrobe; Grace Gonzales, decorations; Ms. Quiroz, program; Catarina Medrano, advertisements; and Ms. Urias, registration.

Lecture focuses on effective living

Staff Report

Dorie Hanson of the Inner Peace Movement will present free orientation lectures 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Hampton Inn, 3904 W. Wall in Midland. She also will present the lectures in Odessa 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. at the Days Inn, 3075 E. Hwy. 80.

Hanson

The Inner Peace Movement (IPM) is an educational, non-religious, non-profit organization incorporated in Washington, D.C., since its founding in 1964. It teaches personal development and leadership programs with tools for effective living.

The orientation lecture is a 90-minute presentation designed to help a person better understand his experiences in life and discover new dimensions of his own inner potential. Ms. Hanson will explore man's relationship to himself and the universe; the difference between the conscious and unconscious mind; the four spiritual gifts of prophecy, vision, intuition and feeling; and the past, present and future dimensions of existence.

Following each orientation lecture, a more in-depth lecture is offered for $3.

"I try to give a bigger picture of what life is all about," Ms. Hanson said in a telephone interview. "I also will be trying to start a local group (of IPM) where I will be the liaison to provide the training for those who are interested."

Local IPM groups are referred to as Discovery Groups. They are composed of people in the community who are interested in unfolding a more successful way of living. A brochure published by IPM states, "The principal goal is to learn how to become a master of yourself and a more effective leader.

Ms. Hanson is a member of the board of directors of IPM, a consultant and professor with the American Leadership College, and she has traveled and lectured extensively throughout North America, Australia, New Zealand, Great Britain and Ireland for 17 years.

"I'm doing this to help people, to help them learn to help themselves," Ms. Hanson said.

Prices drop

NEW YORK — Oil prices settled lower in choppy trading Friday after OPEC members failed to reach an agreement to cut production.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March, which jumped 41 cents a barrel on Thursday, fell 22 cents to settle at $19.46 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices fell, with contracts for delivery in March settling at $1.079 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.6 cents.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar closed higher Friday after first falling on two negative economic reports and then recovering as the market gave more weight to upbeat retail sales figures issued Thursday.

The dollar rose to 1.6265 marks in New York from 1.6240 late Thursday.

The greenback also advanced against the Japanese yen, rising to 127.80 yen in New York from 127.65 yen.

The British pound fell against the dollar, slipping to $1.7715 in New York from $1.7725.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday's prices, included: 1.4650 Swiss francs, up from 1.4600; 5.5370 French francs, up from 5.5310; 1,221.25 Italian lire, up from 1,220.50; 1.18665 Canadian dollars, up from 1.18625.

Market drifts

NEW YORK — Auto stocks rolled up strong gains Friday, but the rest of the market drifted aimlessly in the grip of interest-rate worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .68 to 3,245.97, finishing the week with a net gain of 20.57 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Big Three car manufacturers' stocks rose for the second straight session following Thursday's news of stronger-than-expected sales of domestic models for the first 10 days of February.

Free-trade talks move to Dallas

Hopes run high that negotiators can end differences on thorny issues

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of negotiators will meet behind closed doors this week in Dallas to grapple with the tough issues standing in the way of a North American Free Trade Agreement.

Expectations are high that U.S., Mexican and Canadian negotiators will be able to substantially resolve — or at least lessen — differences on thorny issues affecting the agricultural, automotive, energy, financial and textile sectors.

"The pressure is really on to produce in Dallas, otherwise I think it will be logistically impossible to have a free trade agreement this year," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-New Mexico.

But government officials, while expressing optimism about the pace of the talks, are downplaying the results they hope to achieve from the week-long sessions.

Negotiators hope to refine the rough draft produced last month by reaching common ground on many "bracketed" areas of disagreement. The differing positions staked out by each country are included in brackets in the draft.

At this point, "practically everything that's major" remains in brackets, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

The U.S. Trade Representative's Office won't reveal how many areas remain in brackets, although Trade Representative Carla Hills has conceded "there are many."

"Our hope is to try to remove a substantial number of brackets," said Timothy O'Leary, a Hills spokesman.

"Realistically, will we be able to remove them all? It would be nice if that happens, but probably unrealistic to expect it that way."

A senior U.S. trade representative concurred.

"In Dallas, we have a lot of hard work to do and the hope and expectation is that we can make a lot of progress," he said on condition of anonymity.

"I expect we will end up the week with some hard political issues not resolved and the ministers will have to grapple with those."

Bentsen, whose committee oversees trade issues, said the Dallas talks probably won't provide the breakthrough needed to write a final text.

"How fast they can take those brackets off, I wouldn't hazard an estimate of time, but it's going to take some," said Bentsen, D-Texas. "It's not one of those things that's going be resolved this month, I don't think."

Hills regularly insists politics plays no role in when she will submit an agreement to Congress, although many political observers say she must produce a final text by April if lawmakers are to consider it this year.

But an administration official said the White House is carefully monitoring the mood on Capitol Hill, gauging whether rising protectionist sentiment and the upcoming elections may torpedo passage of a trade pact.

"This president isn't going to submit a North American Free Trade Agreement he knows beforehand Congress isn't going to approve," the official said on condition of anonymity.

Bank mergers don't always reduce costs, studies show

By Michael Quint
N.Y. Times News Service

Although bankers and investors expect great savings from recently announced bank mergers, two new studies confirm earlier findings that bank combinations do not tend to lower costs or raise profits.

Economists at the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta concluded in a study published last week that "we have not found any evidence that mergers significantly lower expenses."

The Atlanta economists found in their study of all mergers from 1982 through 1986 of banks with assets of $100 million or more that the acquiring banks were more efficient than banks in general before the mergers. They also concluded, however, that in the years after the mergers, costs rose more rapidly for the combined banks than for the rest of the industry.

Professors at the Harvard Business School studied mergers among New England banks from 1982 through 1987 and concluded that merged banks had reduced costs compared with other banks but the lower costs "were more than offset by the loss of business and revenue to competitors."

Both the Atlanta and Harvard studies noted that federal banking regulators have encouraged bank mergers. While the studies did not support the possible benefits of mergers, each included caveats in which the authors stopped short of predicting that recently proposed mergers would not benefit the banks involved.

The Atlanta Fed study noted that it did not include mergers comparable in size to the recently approved combination of Chemical Banking Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp., both of New York, or the proposed merger of BankAmerica Corp. of San Francisco and Security Pacific Corp. of Los Angeles.

The study warned that although the mergers the Atlanta Fed reviewed might have been intended to reduce costs, the findings "should add a healthy dose of skepticism" to the claims about savings.

American eyes smaller airline for savings tips

Associated Press

DALLAS — American Airlines, the nation's largest airline, is studying smaller Southwest Airlines for money-making ideas.

American chairman Robert Crandall has hinted several times in recent months that the carrier might borrow Southwest's strategy of low costs and fewer frills on a few of its short routes.

"In short-haul markets, we have to listen to our customers," Crandall recently told employees in a taped message. "In short-haul markets, customers clearly said a simpler product at a lower price is better.

"I think one of the options we have to consider is becoming a bit more like Southwest in short-haul markets, simplifying our product, not imposing on ourselves or on our customers the costs of product features that they don't want."

Dallas-based Southwest has no assigned seating, on-board meals or connections with other airlines. The no-frills style, coupled with its high-frequency, short-haul route system, has allowed Southwest to offer lower fares and earn a profit each of the past 19 years.

Like the rest of the nation's airlines, the recession and higher fuel costs during the Persian Gulf War sent American's finances into the red during the past two years.

The company has cut planned capital expenditures, slowed administrative hiring and laid off about 1,000 of its nearly 100,000 workers to cope with the economic slowdown.

Crandall told reporters last week the company is perched for an economic rebound. But he also repeated that American is looking at trimming some frills on shorter routes.

Crandall said he doesn't know exactly which changes will be made, but he said "We must learn to compete."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Handling of IRA request draws complaint

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have been asking a brokerage firm to close two individual retirement accounts for more than a year. I wish to deposit the value of those accounts in another active IRA I have elsewhere.

The brokerage does not even acknowledge my requests. What action can be taken to get this done?

Doyle

A. The easy way should be through a trustee-to-trustee transfer. Using that method, you deal only with the outfit where you have your other IRA, be it a brokerage, bank, savings and loan association, insurance company or whatever.

That IRA trustee will give you forms to sign, instructing that negligent brokerage to send along the money in the two accounts.

The "net worth" entries in the statements you enclosed in your letter show there is $3.9 in one account and $125.49 in the other — both in money market mutual funds. So, the transfer should be accomplished in short order — certainly no more than a week or two.

If it's not, file a complaint. The brokerage, one of the nation's largest, is a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Your gripe should be directed to the Exchange; the address is 11 Wall Street, New York, NY, 10005.

Q. My IRA, which has a current value of $21,033.15, is with a large brokerage firm. A bank in Boston had been the IRA trustee. I received a letter, dated December 13, informing me that a "successor trustee" has been named — a bank in Denver.

That bank's fees are much higher than the fees I previously paid. Based on the value of my account, the annual administration fee would be $141.14.

The letter also lists a partial withdrawal fee of 1 percent, with a minimum of $10 and a maximum of $100. It says this fee will not apply to "distributions in the event of death, disability, retirement on or after age 591/2 or for annuitized payments." Big deal!

Besides that, there is a 1 percent termination fee, with a $100 minimum and $300 maximum.

The fees, which went into effect January 1, seem extremely excessive. It appears the bank is the only one profiting. Can I reduce these fees? If so, how?

A. You get no argument from me. The entire fee schedule, which you sent along, is outrageous. You can lower your costs by transferring your IRA.

Each retirement plan sponsor and trustee sets its own fees. Those charges vary widely. My blue-eyed-finance officer and I pay $10 annual fees on each of our IRA and Keogh retirement plans.

At this point, you will probably be stuck with those higher 1992 fees. However, you can argue that you did not receive the letter informing you of the higher charges until too late to move your retirement nest egg before the end of 1991.

Q. I need to know the rules covering taking money out of my IRA after I reach 591/2. What restrictions apply?

A. None whatsoever, as far as taxes are concerned. Once you turn 591/2, you can take any amount you please out of your IRA — in a lump sum or in installments as you see fit.

You will, of course, have to pay regular income tax. If you took tax deductions for the annual contributions you made to the IRA, every dollar, dime and penny you withdraw will be subject to income tax. If you made nondedutible contributions, the withdrawals coming from that source will be nontaxable. But the earnings on nondeductible contributions will be taxable, just like deductible contributions.

After you pass age 701/2, you will be required to make IRA withdrawals, based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your beneficiary.

If your IRA is in certificates of deposit and you take money out before a CD reaches its maturity date, the bank might or might not levy a penalty. That's separate from taxes.

A bombout, burnout day

AP Laserphoto

Driver Brian Shimer, front, and brakeman Herschel Walker start their final run in the two-man bobsled event on the way to a seventh place finish.

■ The United States' Winter Olympic woes continued Sunday, but the U.S. hockey team still carries a glow.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

ALBERTVILLE, France — Neither Herschel Walker's bombout on the bobsled nor Eric Flaim's burnout in speedskating Sunday could dull the glow of the U.S. team's surprise showing midway through the Winter Games.

On a day when bird-like teen Toni Nieminen of Finland soared above everyone, the Americans kept chugging along toward perhaps their best overall performance in the Winter Olympics.

The biggest complaint, "atrocious" meals for the athletes that made Flaim sick, may shock the sensibilities of the food-conscious French, but it still couldn't spoil the U.S. team's happiness.

More than a medal bonanza — the United States already has matched its total of six in 1988 and still hopes to surpass its record of 12 — the Americans are showing strength in a wide range of supposedly un-American sports and doing the grunt work for 1994.

There's no chance they'll catch the Winter Games powerhouses — Germany leads with 18 medals, Austria has 16 and the Russian-led Unified Team has 14 — but the Americans see medal opportunies this week in hockey, speedskating, skiing and, most definitely, women's figure skating.

The Americans have the only unbeaten, untied hockey team following Canada's first loss, 5-4, against the Unified Team.

"Across the board in the contemporary Games since 1956, these are probably our best finishes," U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman Mike Moran said. "We're very happy with this and thrilled for the athletes and sports governing bodies. Everybody, since Calgary, stepped it up a couple of notches."

Walker, the Minnesota Vikings tailback who thought he could barge into the Games and run away with a medal, finished seventh in the two-man bobsled with driver Brian Shimer. But their time was respectable — .69 seconds behind Switzerland's gold medal duo of Gustav Weder and Donat Acklin and their placement was the best for a U.S. team since a fifth place in 1980.

"It's disappointing, but we're not going to give up," said Walker, who gets another crack at a medal next weekend in the four-man bobsled. "Brian and I, for the time that we've done things, we've gotten better and better. There's no doubt I was expecting more. I think Brian was expecting more."

Team leader James Hickey, a member of the U.S. four-man teams in 1968 and '72, acknowledged that the coaching staff might have expected too much from Walker in his Olympic debut.

"We kind of thought he would be the hero we were looking for," Hickey said. "The U.S. hasn't won a medal since 1956, and I think we still have one coming in the four-man."

Walker concurred, saying "There's no doubt I think I can win. If I didn't, I'd be going home."

Flaim came here looking for a gold to complement the silver he won in the men's 1,500 speedskating. But a sudden sickness caused by food poisoning left him 24th, far behind Norway's gold medalist, Johann Olav Koss.

Koss, a 23-year-old medical student, had to overcome his own medical problem, virtually climbing out of a hospital bed to win the race. He spent 36 hours in a hospital last week with a painful case of pancreatitis and thought he might have to miss the Games.

But he looked healthy and fast when it came time to race, finishing in 1 minute, 54.81 seconds — four-hundredths of a second ahead of longshot countryman Adne Sondral — to cap a four-medal day for Norway. The Norwegians also won gold and bronze in the men's super giant slalom.

Flaim became violently ill after eating a fish lunch Saturday and almost didn't

New leader

CHICAGO (AP) — Martina Navratilova became tennis' all-time singles titles leader Sunday the hard way.
Navratilova narrowly beat Jana Novotna 7-6 (7-4), 4-6, 7-5 in the finals of the Virginia Slims of Chicago tennis tournament.
Navratilova won her 158th career singles championship and 12th Chicago Slims crown. She and Chris Evert, who retired in 1989, had been tied with 157 singles titles. Jimmy Connors is the men's all-time leader with 109 singles championships.
"I was preparing my loser's speech during the match," Navratilova said. "I had to tell myself I could come back. I said, 'If I can't break the record in Chicago, where can I break it?"
Navratilova, who doesn't plan to retire soon, said she expects her record to stand for a long time because of the tour is now more of a grind than it was she started playing.
"Physically and mentally, it's tougher," she said. "You can't just go out and play tennis."
But Navratilova was thinking about winning the match, not history against Novotna.
"The moment took over the history part. I was just trying to win the match and I had to start hitting winners," said Navratilova.

Chaps entertain dangerous Howard

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The first time Midland College and Howard College met this season, there was the serious business of winning a spot in the Region V tournament to be taken care of by both teams.

It was a Thursday night in Big Spring. Ex-Howard coach Steve Green returned to the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum with his band of Chaps. Green was given a homecoming mum and treated well. The Chaps then returned the hospitality by winning the game, 90-83, in the process handing Howard its fourth loss in six conference games.

Since that night, the Hawks have lost an additional three Western Junior College Athletic Conference games, and stand on the brink of mathematical elimination for qualifying for the regional tourney.

There will be no mums for Green this time, but he and his Chaps will likely find a Hawk team that will be playing with intensity, albeit while standing on its last leg.

Howard will be out of the regional picture tonight, win or lose, if Odessa carries out the nearly inevitable task of beating 1-10 Frank Phillips in Borger.

"When we played Howard earlier this season, it was still a conference race as far as they were concerned," Green said. "This game is every bit as important for us. I don't know what motivation they are using other than pride. You know, 'Let's go beat the conference leader.'

"It's been a peculiar year for them. They played pretty good against the teams recognized as being in the upper echelon, and they don't appear to show up against the teams that aren't. And we're definitely in the upper echelon. So you've got to think they'd come over here ready to play."

A week after losing to Midland in the first go-round, Howard defeated South Plains, 99-85 in Big Spring. The Hawks, though, have lost to two of the league's bottom

MC owns three Rolex net crowns

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — The Midland College tennis team won three of four titles here Sunday in the National Rolex Junior College Indoor meet.

By any standard, banners should be waving, but the Chaparrals have been rather greedy in this event in the past. Losing in one finals match, MC's two-year reign of total sweep domination ended.

David Draper lost in the men's singles final to Alexander Lindholm of Anderson, S.C. in a hard fought match, 7-6, 2-6, 6-3, and that was MC's only loss in the four finals.

Lucie Ludvigova won the women's finals, but the Chaps had a lock on that title since Ludvigova beat teammate Boba Tzvetkova, 6-1, 6-4. The MC women were also guaranteed a doubles crown since Adriana Isasa and Tzvetkova beat the other MC doubles unit of Ludvigova and Caroline Reynolds, 6-4, 6-2.

Draper got some revenge by teaming with Toby Curtis to win the men's doubles with a 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 win over Valdimir Kristic and Alberto Canzian. Curtis repeated as a titlest in this event since he won last year with a different partner.

The MC women have swept this event three years running and one a singles title the year before that.

The Chaps' Fadel Berthe and Berhe Serekebrhan failed to make the men's doubles finals after a semifinal loss to Draper and Curtis, 7-5, 6-7, 6-3.

The MC women's doubles teams, Isasa-Tzvetkova and Ludvigova-Reynolds, both won in semifinal action in straight sets over teams from Cooke County.

Davey Allison wins Daytona 500

■ Bobby Allison watches son take the crown in a race that featured a 14-car crash.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Bobby Allison used to lead his son Davey around stock car tracks. On Sunday, Davey led his dad to the press box to celebrate his first Daytona 500 victory.

"This has been a goal of mine as long as I can remember," Davey said as his father sat beside him beaming.

"I watched my dad win this race a couple of times and I followed him across the finish line a few years ago," he added, referring to the 1988 race when Bobby earned his third 500 victory.

NASCAR's Richard Petty ...making Daytona farewell

"That day is such a special day I don't think anything could replace it," Davey said, glancing warmly at his father. "But this is the best race I've ever won."

Bobby, still third on the all-time winner's list with 84, has not driven a race car since he nearly lost his life in a terrible crash in July 1988 at Long Pond, Pa.

On hand Sunday as the owner of a car driven by Hut Stricklin, Allison was a proud papa, saying, "I feel like I'm sitting here next to the best youngster there is out there, and he's the son of Bobby and Judy Allison."

A 14-car wreck midway through Sunday's race eliminated most of the top challengers for Allison, who entered the race at Daytona International Speedway as one of the favorites. Also claimed in the crash was Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr., who was involved in two wrecks this week at Daytona. Hillin was not injured.

"Once the wreck happened and those guys were out of contention, I felt the place to be was out front," Allison said.

He led 127 of the last 145 laps in three teams (89-79 to New Mexico Military, and 69-68 against Clarendon).

With a 6-7 conference record, the Hawks are coming off a win over FPC. Last Monday, though, Howard's spirit may have been broken when OC's Robert Shannon nailed a shot at the buzzer to hand the Hawks a 70-69 loss.

MC, meanwhile, keeps rolling up the wins, destined for a March 6 appearance at regionals in Waco. The Chaps last Thursday completed a regular-season sweep of South Plains with a 70-66 win over the Texans in Levelland.

The importance of tonight's game for MC, as Green expressed, comes down to positioning in the WJCAC standings at the Region V tournament. With four games remaining in conference play, Green feels only a 3-1 finish would assure the Chaps of a first place finish. A 2-2 finish would bring on the possibility of a first-place tie or even a second-place finish. A first-place finish assures the Chaps of a meeting with the fourth place team from the Northeast JC conference in the first regional round.

Duke solves N.C. State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Hurley's foot injury is forcing top-ranked Duke to take things one step at a time.

The Blue Devils ended a five-year losing streak at North Carolina State as Grant Hill continued to shine in place of Hurley, leading Duke to a 71-63 victory Sunday. Hill, who has played three straight 40-minute games, was tired and sore afterwards.

"Bobby, when are you coming back?" Hill asked. "It's something that is fun and a challenge and hopefully I'll be in better shape after this is over."

Hurley, sidelined with a broken foot bone after Duke's loss to North Carolina less than two weeks ago, may not return until the UCLA game on March 1.

"For me, it will be very conservative," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said of Hurley's return. "If they say he's ready for a game, I may not even put him in that game."

So Hill will have to tough it out for the next three Atlantic Coast Conference games. Against the Wolfpack, he bruised a shoulder bruise in the first half and told Krzyzewski that he wanted to come out of the game. Krzyzewski kept him in, anyway.

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Los Angeles Lakers rallied after a stirring halftime tribute to Magic Johnson, but they couldn't make up for a poor first half, losing 114-107 to the Boston Celtics on Sunday.

After trailing by as many as 22 points in the second quarter and beginning the second half down 63-47, the Lakers closed to 104-103 with three minutes remaining in the game.

But they went cold — as they had been in the first half — in the closing minutes and the Celtics pulled away.

Robert Parish had 21 points, 18 in the first half, and 11 rebounds for Boston, which ended a three-game losing skid. Kevin McHale and Reggie Lewis added 19 points each for Boston.

Spurs 112, Kings 106

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Antoine Carr made his last 10 shots and scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half, lifting the San Antonio over Sacramento.

Carr, acquired from the Kings by the Spurs in a trade for center Dwayne Schintzius in September, was 10-for-11 from the field before fouling out with 7:33 to play.

Sean Elliott scored 23 points for San Antonio, which had to play most of the game with center David Robinson on the bench with foul trouble. Robinson had nine points and nine rebounds.

The Kings were led by Mitch Richmond and Wayman Tisdale with 24 points each.

NBA Roundup

Pistons 90, 76ers 83

PHILADELPHIA — Orlando Woolridge scored a season-high 34 points and Dennis Rodman grabbed 26 rebounds as Detroit beat Philadelphia.

Woolridge hit 16 of 21 shots and scored 24 points in the second half when the Pistons pulled away for their first victory at Philadelphia in nearly three years. They had lost three straight at the Spectrum.

Charles Barkley, with 24 points and 17 rebounds, led the Sixers, who lost their third straight.

In the final period, the 76ers cut an eight-point deficit to four on a follow-up shot by Barkley that made it 78-74 with 4:18 to play.

But Isiah Thomas scored on a drive. After Jayson Williams made a free throw for Philadelphia, Woolridge hit a jumper, making it 82-75 with 3:30 to go. The Sixers never threatened after that.

Hornets 126, Heat 109

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charlotte never trailed in a game interrupted by two fights and two ejections, getting 28 points and 13 rebounds from Larry Johnson while beating Miami.

The Hornets jumped ahead 14-1 and held the Heat without a field goal for the game's first four minutes. Glen Rice's layup with 7:45 left in the first quarter broke the Heat's drought and made the score 14-3.

Charlotte led 40-18 after one quarter and 62-43 at halftime behind 15 points from Johnson. Miami got no closer than 14 in the second half.

Johnny Newman scored 20 and Dell Curry 19 as Charlotte had seven players in double figures in winning for the fourth time in five games.

Miami, which also had seven players in double figures, was led by Bimbo Coles with 16 points and Rice with 15.

The game was stopped the first time by a fight with 8:39 left in the third quarter and Charlotte leading 70-46.

Clippers 107, Trail Blazers 106

PORTLAND, Ore. — James Edwards' baseline jumper with 5.7 seconds left and Danny Manning's season-high 31 points gave the Los Angeles Clippers a victory over Portland.

The win gave the Clippers a 3-0 record since Larry Brown took over as coach at the All-Star break and snapped a 13-game home winning streak for the Trail Blazers, who played without All-Star guard Clyde Drexler because of a sprained toe.

Magic 118, Bucks 104

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jerry Reynolds scored 21 points and led a 10-2 fourth-quarter spurt that helped Orlando hold off Milwaukee for the expansion team's first victory in 10 games against the Bucks.

The victory also snapped a three-game losing streak for Orlando, which led 55-42 at halftime and opened the third period with a 9-2 run.

Janzen takes first PGA win

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Janzen sneaked a peak at the leaderboard Sunday when he stood on the 16th green at the Tucson National Golf Club.

It showed him in a tie with Bill Britton for the lead in the Northern Telecom Open.

"I knew what I had to do," Janzen said.

And he did it, confidently rapping in a 12-foot putt for the go-ahead birdie, then nursing the lead home for the first victory of his three-season career.

"I was so focused on playing one shot at a time I never really thought what was at stake," Janzen said after his bogey-free, 7-under-par 65 provided him with a one-stroke victory.

Janzen, 27, who spent a couple of years on the mini-tours before gaining his playing rights on the PGA Tour in 1990, won with a 270 total, 18 under par.

The victory was worth $198,000 from the total purse of $1.1 million and increased his earnings for the season to $235,578, more than he won in either of his first two full years.

But that was the last thing on Janzen's mind.

"One of the hardest things I had to learn when I came out was not think about what a shot was worth," he said.

Cambridge hits 30 for 'Horns

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Dexter Cambridge scored a game-high 30 points and B.J. Tyler added 24 Sunday, powering Texas to a 98-93 victory over Georgia.

Cambridge, who also grabbed 12 rebounds, connected on 13 of 21 shots from the floor for the Longhorns, 16-9 overall. Tyler scored Texas' final 12 points of the game.

Terrence Rencher added 18 points for Texas and Benford Williams had 15.

Litteral Green's 23 points and 10 assists led Georgia (11-10). Dathon Brown came off the bench to add 18 and Bernard Davis scored 13.

Cambridge scored the Longhorns' final three buckets of the first half to give Texas a 49-42 advantage at the half.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reliability and a positive attitude are the keys to winning a higher-up's trust. Work with zeal and that long-desired promotion or assignment could be yours by the end of next month. A supportive family is a tremendous asset. Let loved ones know how much you appreciate their help. Seeking experts' financial advice next October could save you a lot of money. A winter vacation or second honeymoon does not have to be as expensive as you think.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Alan Bates and Jim Brown, author Margaret Truman, basketball great Michael Jordan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis today is on making shrewd decisions. Surround yourself with positive thinkers. Keeping your cool will help you hang on to all your options.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New sources of income present themselves. Be careful if embarking on a new romance. A wolf may be concealing himself in sheep's clothing. Put away your credit cards until your bills are paid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A meeting or project may not go as smoothly as you hoped. Short-sighted words or actions could cause long-term damage. You need to take financial precautions. Put romance on the back burner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Certain friends or colleagues may have you chasing rainbows. Follow your heart instead. Your ingenious ideas will take hold with someone influential. Fact-hunting pays off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A surge of energy helps you accomplish even more than you expected. Reach out to people who share your views and goals. Play a more active role in a club or professional organization.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain new social acceptance and make important friends this week. A valuable secret alliance may develop. Attending an event with your co-workers is a good idea.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A debt or joint account could pose problems; you must not waver from your practical stance. Keep things under wraps today to avoid angering a longtime associate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Interest yourself in your children's activities. Are you pleased with the kind of company they keep? A steady income is essential. Let employers know that your independence is a plus.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good intentions alone may not be enough to bring about what you want. Obtain friendly backing or professional advice when necessary. Taking a financial gamble now would be a mistake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a knack for making even strangers feel at ease. Roll out the red carpet for visiting dignitaries. Do not let a misunderstanding regarding money management strain an important relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone may try to soft-soap you into sharing inside information. Reveal nothing and nothing will be held against you. This is not a good day to sign contracts or make a major purchase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By refusing to be diverted from your purpose, you will extract a full measure of success. Showcase your special skills to attract the attention of a prospective client or employer.

TODAY'S CHILDREN forge friendships easily and are experts at winning public support for their ideas. Excellent judges of character, these Aquarians have a special knack for picking the right person for the right job.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ7 ♡95 ◇K1063 ♣AQ72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dbl	Rdbl	Pass
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—There are those who claim that North's pass of one heart doubled is acceptance of that contract. Not so. It simply means that North had no clear-cut action on the hand. Therefore, take out to two clubs.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠95432 ♡86 ◇Q93 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	Rdbl	?

What action do you take?
A.—If you pass to tell partner you have nothing, partner might run to a minor suit. Since you have a clear preference for spades, bid one spade. Partner won't play you for anything in the way of high cards—the auction has announced that you are broke.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J1076432 ♡Void ◇KJ6 ♣K108
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Chances of North having a mild spade fit are rapidly receding, but you do have a seven-card suit, albeit not a very good one. Nevertheless, a rebid of two spades could not be faulted by even the severest critic.

Q.4—Both, vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♡874 ◇QJ76 ♣QJ83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ♠	?

What action do you take?
A.—Had East passed, you would have raised to two hearts, but we don't think you should take that action freely without so much as a king in your hand and almost half your strength in the enemy suit. Pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♡AJ105 ◇63 ♣A8762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♡	Dbl	3 ◇
Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A —Yes, we think we can probably defeat three diamonds a trick, possibly two. No, we are not inclined to double—the risk-reward factor is heavily against us. We don't like the idea of passing, but we are convinced it's the intelligent thing to do here.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1076 ♡QJ9542 ◇A76 ♣5
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—A jump to three hearts shows one of two types of hands: Either you are offering partner a choice of games (three no trump or four hearts), or you intend hinting at slam interest by continuing to four hearts over three no trump. Here, you want to play game in hearts, period, so bid it.

U.S. actress Whoopi denies buying South African property

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — American actress Whoopi Goldberg, an outspoken critic of apartheid, has denied reports that she bought property in South Africa, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Goldberg's attorney, David Dison, wrote a letter to real estate agent Chris Vorster, asking him to retract statements that he sold land to Goldberg, the Sunday Times said.

On Feb. 13, The Star newspaper quoted Vorster as saying he had sold a 105-acre plot to Goldberg for about $180,000.

Vorster has now denied making the statement, the Times reported.

Last month, Goldberg finished filming in South Africa for "Sarafina," an anti-apartheid movie set in the black township of Soweto during the 1976 student uprising.

RADNOR, Pa. — Grammy nominees Natalie Cole and Garth Brooks have unusually forthright opinions about what the awards mean.

Cole

"Bottom line, of all the award shows, the Grammys mean money," Cole said. "It can increase your album sales. If you are a performer who goes out on the road, it can increase your fee. It really does turn into dollars."

Brooks told TV Guide for its Feb. 22 issue that award shows "are highly overrated."

"I don't want to bite the hand that feeds me, but I don't have too much feeling for these awards," he said. "Winning may tend to make you look better than you are."

Cole received four nominations, including one for album of the year for "Unforgettable," a tribute to her father, the late Nat "King" Cole.

Brooks was nominated for best country male vocalist for "Ropin' the Wind," and for the video for "The Thunder Rolls."

The Grammys will be broadcast Feb. 25 on CBS.

TOKYO — Mick Jagger was refused entry into Japan on Sunday because of a past drug record, immigration officials said.

Jagger, lead vocalist for the Rolling Stones, was confined to a hotel at Tokyo's Narita airport Sunday night so he could appeal the immigration decision on Monday, said Kenji Ishiyama of the airport's immigration office.

Jagger, 48, was allowed to enter Japan for solo performances in March 1988 and for concerts with the Rolling Stones in February 1990 after the immigration office consulted with the Foreign Ministry, Kyodo News Service reported.

Jagger and his then-girlfriend, Marianne Faithfull, were arrested at their London home on May 28, 1969, and charged with possession of marijuana. Jagger was found guilty and fined $480. Faithfull was acquitted.

Kyodo said Jagger was refused entry into Japan in 1973 because of that offense.

The news service said Jagger went to Japan to promote a movie. It did not identify the movie.

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Racism, fanaticism and anti-Semitism is on the rise in many nations, Holocaust survivor and Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel says.

"It is to me a source of anguish," Wiesel, 63, told reporters Saturday between sessions of a Peace Prize Forum at Augustana College.

Wiesel, who survived the Auschwitz and Buchenwald concentration camps, said he cannot conceive that someone like David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader who has espoused Nazi beliefs, could get voter support. Duke won 39 percent of the vote for governor of Louisiana last year.

"Never would I believe in my lifetime I would have to fight these battles again," said Wiesel, an author and humanities professor at Boston University who won the Nobel Prize in 1986 for his human-rights efforts.

Still, he said he's optimistic about progress in eliminating ethnic hatred, citing the rapid collapse of the communist empire as one reason.

"It is not we who defeated Russia," Wiesel said. "Communism was wrong, and therefore it was self-defeated."

LOS ANGELES — Baseball superstar George Brett was married in a private ceremony shortly before the start of spring training, his secretary said.

Brett, 38, married Leslie Davenport, 27, at a relative's house Saturday in a ceremony attended only by the families, said Joannie Frey, Brett's personal secretary in Kansas City, Mo.

The couple have no plans for a honeymoon, Frey said. The marriage is the first for both Davenport and Brett, who met about 16 months ago at a party in Kansas City.

Frey said the couple planned to return to Wichita this week to visit Davenport's family. Brett, a designated hitter for the Kansas City Royals, will then head to Florida for spring training.

Lady Mustangs state bound

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Christian Lady Mustangs won the TAPPS region championship here over the weekend with a 55-26 win over Hilltop of Austin in the semifinals and 62-41 win over Brentwood of Austin in the finals.

The MC girls, now 21-5 for the year, head for Waco Thursday and a state TAPPS semifinal matchup against Lexington Academy of Dallas at 11 a.m. If MC wins that contest, the Lady Mustangs will face the winner of the Houston Greenville-Irving Christian in the state finals on Saturday.

Tracy Burgess led MC with 14 points while Holly Hutton and Angela Hagins each had 10 points in the victory over Hilltop. Hilltop was held scoreless in the third quarter.

Tammy Hull had 17 points in the win over Brentwood while Karen Nash had 12, Burgess 10 and Jeannette Morales 10, showing a balanced attack from one game to the next.

The Midland Christian boys won in the semifinals, but lost in the finals. No details of those games were available.

Birdie wins for Colbert

Suncoast Golf

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Jim Colbert sank a 3-foot birdie putt on the fourth playoff hole to defeat George Archer and win the $450,000 Suncoast Classic on Sunday.

Colbert, who started the day two strokes behind Archer and three behind Kermit Zarley, shot a 7-under-par 64 Sunday. Colbert and Archer both shot 13-under-par 200s for 54 holes, shattering the tournament record by seven shots.

The victory was Colbert's fourth in 11 months on the Senior PGA Tour and earned him $67,500.

Archer shot a final-round 66 to earn $39,000.

Colbert, who finished with 66-70-64, and Archer, who had 66-68-66, each parred the first three playoff holes before Colbert won on the 197-yard par 3 17th hole at the Tournament Players Club of Tampa Bay.

"I knew I had to play well and think clearly," Colbert said. "I've been playing for so long that sometimes I don't appreciate what a privilege it is to play out here. When you get older, you never know how many more chances you will get to win."

Zarley began Sunday with a 1-stroke lead over playing partners Archer and Bobby Nichols, and the three battled for the lead through the front nine.

Colbert, playing one group ahead, birdied the 12th, 13th, and 14th holes to lead by one stroke over Nichols.

At the 16th hole, Colbert salvaged par with a 20-foot putt. He then missed a downhill 12-foot birdie putt at the 18th hole for the outright win.

Archer birdied the 17th with a 30-foot putt, then hit his approach to the par-4 18th in the water and had to make a 7-foot bogey putt to force the playoff.

Nichols fell out of contention at 18 after his approach shot landed in a greenside bunker and he missed a 10-foot par putt that would have put him in the playoff.

Nichols' 201 was good for third place and $32,500. Zarley was fourth at 203 and earned $27,000.

Defending champion Bob Charles finished tied for fifth with Gary Player, Lee Trevino and 1990 champion Mike Hill.

"I usually don't play well in Florida, so this is a good finish for me," said Archer, who was trying to win his ninth tournament in four seasons on the Senior Tour. "It's just nice to be in the hunt."

320 Sales Help Wanted

Sales Reps

Get hard facts about one of the best sales careers in Midland/Odessa Area.

Pitney Bowes is a Fortune 500 company entering a growth phase unprecedented in its history.

We're very selective about the people we choose to represent us. Our sales representatives are not "order takers." We need an aggressive, strongly self-motivated sales professional who either already has, or who can quickly acquire, an in-depth knowledge of business customer needs . . . and how our products can anticipate and meet those needs.

We're a company that's sales-oriented. Our 130 Branch and District Managers came out of sales. We're a company that invests heavily in training and supporting its sales teams. A company in which a person with drive has ample opportunity to reach a management-level position.

Have a sales record you're proud of? Have the ability to sell high technology products and systems in a highly competitive marketplace? We'd like to give you hard facts about your growth and earning potential with Pitney Bowes.

Please send confidential resume and/ or letter outlining background and earnings history to:
